Baker holds talks with Kuwaiti ruler

■ After meeting with the emir in Saudi Arabia, Baker flies to Kuwait for talks with the crown prince.

Associated Press

KUWAIT CITY — Flying low over the charred remains of tanks and trucks, and over burning oil fields, Secretary of State James A. Baker III made a triumphant visit Saturday to liberated Kuwait, whose rulers offered hope of a democratic future for the Persian Gulf emirate.

The wreckage and the stubborn fires, made more dramatic by miles of pitch-black sand and a stubborn thick haze, bore witness to the Iraqi conquest of Kuwait and the subsequent allied assault to evict Saddam Hussein's troops.

Even as Baker marked the victory with his visit, he confirmed that the United States had warned Iraq not to use chemical weapons to try to stifle dissent among Muslim Shiites in the south and Kurds in the north.

"We had reason to believe they might be planning such an activity," Baker said in Taif, Saudi Arabia, "and we thought it was important that we let them know how we would view that."

The warning was relayed by Thomas Pickering, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, to the Iraqi delegation in New York.

Baker did not say what specifically prompted the warning or whether the weapons were being used. But U.S. officials reminded reporters that reconnaissance flights over Iraq are continuing.

This suggested the United States intercepted communications that the Iraqis were planning to use chemical weapons against rebels.

Senior administration officials said air strikes against Iraqi military targets, rather than a renewed ground assault, would be a possible reaction to the use of chemical weapons, the New York Times reported in its Sunday editions.

"The ground option is definitely precluded," according to one unnamed official quoted by the Times. "That leads into the destruction of Iraq, and we've

Oryx move costs city 120 jobs

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

Oryx Energy Co. will merge its regional production office in Midland with its Oklahoma City production office, resulting in the loss of 120 jobs here.

Oryx employees in Midland were informed of the planned move late Friday, and told that the move would begin sometime this summer.

About 85 Midland families are expected to make the move to Oklahoma City. But the overall consolidation could result in the reduction of as many as 30 employees.

Oryx, the world's largest independent energy producer, said the consolidation will give its production division two regions of relatively equal size in Houston and Oklahoma City.

NEWS WATCH

OPEC meeting

GENEVA — OPEC oil ministers will hold their first meeting Monday since the Gulf War, under enormous pressure to check runaway production and prevent a price collapse.

Analysts predict the 13-nation organization, which has flooded the market since Iraq's invasion of fellow member Kuwait, will agree to curtail output.

OPEC President Sadek Boussena of Algeria, upon arrival in Geneva Saturday, said the cartel should cut output enough to get prices up to its target of $21 a barrel. Prices have slumped almost $5 below that.

Analysts doubt Saudi Arabia and other producers will try to force prices sharply higher, however, since the United States and other oil-consuming nations led the way in the war.

At the end of February, the average price of benchmark OPEC crude oil fell to $16.39 a barrel.

Lion surgery

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — A lion cub was recovering in a hospital for humans Saturday after surgeons removed a suspected brain tumor. The operation was performed Friday after Simba the cub's face became partially paraiyzed, the South African Broadcast Corp. said. Doctors at Universitas Hospital in the city of Bloemfontein did not find a tumor but a burst water blister.

Evert expecting

BOCA RATON, Fla. — When Chris Evert retired from tennis two years ago she said she wanted to give up rackets and balls for diapers and baby formula. In a few months the transition should be complete. On Friday, she and her husband, Andy Mill, announced they are expecting their first child in October.

Evert

"Andy and I are thrilled," Evert said in a statement. Evert, 36, and Mill, 38, who live in Boca Raton, married in 1988. Evert retired from the professional circuit the next year. Mill, a former Olympic skier, said he "felt higher than a mountain" when Evert told him the news.

Tanks roll into capital of Yugoslavia

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The federal government sent dozens of tanks into Belgrade on Saturday after police clashed violently with 100,000 protesters rallying against Communist rule in the republic of Serbia.

A police officer and a demonstrator were killed in fierce street battles and 76 people were injured, in the most serious riots in four decades of Marxist rule in the republic, which is Yugoslavia's largest.

To quell the violence, the federal presidency deployed tanks Saturday night in front of the state television building and at other points around the city. The battles arose after an opposition rally that began as a protest against biased Communist media reports. Demonstrators,

MRT staffers win 7 awards

SAN ANTONIO — Six Midland Reporter-Telegram staff members captured a total of seven awards Saturday, including two firsts, during the annual Texas Associated Press Managing Editors Convention here.

Taking first place awards were Chris Van Wagenen, staff writer, for "The Party's Over," a five-part series on the changing attitudes about driving while intoxicated and smoking in public; and Elizabeth Edwin, lifestyle editor, for her Sunday feature page design, "Face Value," illustrating feature stories on cosmetic dentistry and the value of smiling.

Receiving honorable mention awards were Myra Lee Salcedo, staff writer, for "The Long Goodbye," a series on the challenges facing Alzheimer's disease patients and their families, in both the feature story and feature series categories; and David Morris, staff writer, for his feature on a first-time Odessa author and her novel.

Other honorable mention awards went to Terry Williamson, sports editor, in the general column writing category for his recollections of the Vietnam War which appeared as part of "Beyond the Black Wall," a five-part series looking back at that conflict 15 years later; and Anntoinette Moore, associate city editor, for an entry of three headlines, including "Loose lips sync Milli Vanilli's ship."

The Reporter-Telegram competes in category AAA with newspapers having circulation of up to 100,000. The division includes all of the larger Texas daily newspapers with the exception of those in Houston, San Antonio, Austin and Dallas-Fort Worth, the state's four major metropolitan areas.

Williams examines his first foray into politics

EDITOR'S NOTE: Clayton Williams came from nowhere to almost make Texas political history in one of the state's rowdiest and most expensive gubernatorial campaigns. In his first extensive interview since the November defeat, Williams looks back at what went right, what went wrong and what lies ahead.

By Mike Cochran and Chip Brown
Associated Press

Conceding he made serious blunders, Clayton Williams insists the Texas governor's race was more colorful than dirty and says he may run again.

"I'm not ruling it out but I'm not ruling it in," the Midland oilman-rancher said. "Fate will determine that."

While gracious in defeat, the feisty, shoot-from-the-hip Republican had a zinger or two for Democratic opponent Ann Richards, the media and the state's trial lawyers.

Williams said he emerged from the governor's race much wiser, less wealthy, more humble and not even remotely bitter.

"I don't hold grudges," he smiled. "Life's too short."

He said it was his sense of humor that carried him through the tumultuous campaign. And he admitted it was his crude attempt at humor — a joke comparing the weather to rape — that contributed to his downfall.

"This is my recommendation to anyone running for governor: For crying out loud, never, ever talk about the weather."

MAKING HIS first political race at age 57, Williams insisted from the outset he was not a politician, and his cowboy charm, candor and openness were refreshing and endearing to many Texans.

But he admits now it was that same candor and quick wit, often too quick, that got him in trouble and eventually doomed his candidacy.

"Instead of being political, I was pretty up-front," he said. "In the field of politics, any attempts at levity can get you cut off at your knees ...

"I didn't know I was such a bad fella until I ran for governor."

Granting his first interview since the November election, Williams met two reporters at his Midland office, an airy, plush suite in his ClayDesta National Bank.

It is decorated with photographs, paintings, bronzes and other mementoes reflecting his hunting, fishing, ranching and oil activities. Included are spectacular wild-game trophies.

With little urging, he recounted the 1990 blitz of a Republican primary field that included former congressman Kent Hance, Secretary of State Jack Rains and Dallas attorney Tom Luce. In the general election, polls indicated Williams led Richards by as much as 17 percentage points at one time.

21 former POWs arrive home in good spirits

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Twenty-one former American prisoners of war, "every one a hero," journeyed home Saturday in good spirits despite memories of beatings, solitary confinement and bread-and-water rations.

All carried bouquets of flowers given to them by Bahraini officials, and one — Army Spc. Melissa Rathbun-Nealy — celebrated her 21st birthday with a surprise party thrown by her fellow former POWs and medical officials.

"I feel real good," Rathbun-Nealy, of Newaygo, Mich., told reporters before boarding a VIP plane that carried 20 of the Americans home. She declined to comment when asked about her treatment by Iraqi captors.

She said her thoughts were of returning to her parents' home and her fiance.

A C-141 medical evacuation plane carried the 21st former POW on the 21-hour flight. Both planes, which left at 11 p.m. (3 p.m. EST), were headed to Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington.

Waiting to welcome the 19 men and two women and give thanks from a grateful nation were Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney and Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The POWs were expected to be invited to the White House later today or Monday to receive the thanks of President Bush.

Amid the euphoria was the sobering thought that nine U.S. servicemen are still missing in action, all airmen who went down in Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps planes. The Pentagon said it was pressing Iraq for information on the MIAs.

Most of the former POWs said they felt great to be heading home, including Air Force Capt. William F. Andrews, 32, of Syracuse, N.Y., who walked to the plane on crutches.

Asked what he would do when he arrived home, he replied: "Give my wife a hug."

Perhaps the most seriously injured was Army Maj. Rhonda L. Cornum, 36, of East Aurora, N.Y., who had a brush with death trying to save a comrade last weekend.

Her helicopter crashed in southern Iraq on a search-and-rescue mission for another downed pilot. Five crewmen in the helicopter were killed. Cornum and two other survivors were taken prisoner. She suffered two broken arms, a broken hand, and facial and knee injuries.

Asked if she was treated all right during her captivity, she replied: "Most of the time, yes. The first day wasn't great." She didn't elaborate.

The POWs were initially treated aboard the U.S. hospital ship Mercy off Bahrain after their release in two groups in Baghdad last Monday and Wednesday.

Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, the commander of U.S. forces in Operation Desert Storm, hailed them as "every one a hero."

The Mercy's chief medical officer said some of the POWs were struck by their captors and had periods when they were given only bread or water. But the POWs praised Iraqi medical officials, said the official, Navy Capt. Dick Osborne.

"The kinds of abuse that they endured varied extremely," he said. Some were not touched by the captors but others were "struck a lot during interrogations."

"Luckily there were no lasting effects. It was not intended to maim or kill," Osborne said.

Osborne said the prisoners were treated better by army units than by Iraqi "civilian organizations," apparently secret police, who limited some of the prisoners to bread-and-water diets.

"The main problems," Osborne said, "were deprivation of company and food. They were almost all of them in solitary at some point. And most of them were in solitary almost the whole time they were there."

Osborne said the POWs were very impressed with Iraqi doctors and nurses "who were trying hard and apologized at times for not having the right equipment or medicine to treat them."

The Americans on Saturday appeared cheerful and in good health.

The other POWs returning home are:

Air Force — Maj. Thomas E. Griffith, 34, Goldsboro, N.C.; Col. David W. Eberly, 43, Brazil, Ind.; Lt. Col. Jeffrey D. Fox, 39, Fall River, Mass.; Capt. Harry M. Roberts, 30, Savannah, Ga.; Capt. Richard D. Storr, 29, Spokane, Wash.; First Lt. Robert J. Sweet, 24, Philadelphia; Maj. Jeffrey S. Tice, 35, Sellersville, Pa.

Navy — Lt. Jeffrey N. Zaun, 28, of Cherry Hill, N.J; Lt. Robert Wetzel, 30, Virginia Beach, Va.; Lt. Randolph Slade, 26, of Virginia Beach, Va.

Army — Staff Sgt. Daniel J. Stamaris Jr., 31, of Boise, Idaho; Spc. Troy L. Dunlap, 20, of Massac, Ill., and Spc. David Lockett, 23, Fort Bliss, Texas.

Marines — Lt. Col. Clifford M. Acree, 39, Seattle; Capt. Michael C. Berryman, 28, Cleveland, Okla.; Chief Warrant Officer Guy L. Hunter, Jr., 46, Moultrie, Ga.; Capt. Russell A.C. Sanborn, 27, DeLand, Fla.; Maj. Joseph J. Small III, 39, Racine, Wis.

Vietnam vet astounded by troops' homecoming

By Robert Dvorchak

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Mike Marshall was grateful for the hero's homecoming given his paratrooper son. The unabashed outpouring of adulation was something he was denied when he came home from Vietnam a generation ago.

"I just wanted a pat on the back and a thank you. And we didn't get that," Marshall told the Fayetteville Observer-Times.

"All we had was people throwing oranges and tomatoes and stuff at us," said Marshall, who traveled from Blanchard, Okla., to greet returning soldiers of the Army's 82nd Airborne Division. "I'll never forget that as long as I live."

What was thrown for his son, Spec. 4 Ronnie Marshall, 22, and other returning paratroopers was a patriotic party. The community around their home base of Fort Bragg was a sea of U.S. flags, yellow ribbons and 3,000 yelping, placard-waving people welcoming home soldiers from the Persian Gulf on Friday.

One giant banner read simply "Welcome Home — Job Well Done." On a tarmac of Pope Air Force Base, families cried, laughed and embraced during emotional reunions in the afternoon chill.

Marshall's son served with the 4th Battalion of the 325th Parachute Infantry Regiment, the first ground troops sent to Saudi Arabia seven months ago and the first U.S. unit to enter Iraq during the ground war.

"I think this reception will be something that he'll remember all his life. And it'll be something I'll always remember," said Marshall, a 1968 veteran of two tours in Vietnam.

"I don't think I've ever seen anything like it. I think this will put in their minds that America is behind them. If I had something like this, I wouldn't have the sour taste in my mouth that I do today," he said.

"I expected everybody to just give me a big hug and say thank you. I thought you'd come back and work in society, and people would kind of look up to you," Marshall said.

"I didn't have a town parade or anything. You just kind of drifted back into society," he said. "I never really did get a greeting or a handshake or anything like that. I think the American people just wanted to forget it."

All the hoopla was a bit bewildering for triumphant troops. From the moment they left Saudi Arabia, they were cheered by flight attendants wearing yellow ribbons and miniature flags on their uniforms.

Now they'll be honored at parades and ceremonies, such as the reception one planeload of paratroopers got when they stopped in New York City for refueling en route home.

"I wish the Vietnam vets would have gotten a reception like this," said Pfc. Todd Meyer, 21, of Huntington Beach, Calif. Meyer's father served in the Air Force in the Vietnam War.

Meanwhile, Sgt. Maj. Charles Terrian, 39, also a Vietnam veteran, cherished the welcoming parties that he never got.

"The American people are making up for it now," said Terrian of Fayetteville. "To me, it's healed a lot of wounds. Let's bury Vietnam forever."

Services held for Texans killed in gulf

HOUSTON (AP) — Army Staff Sgt. Christopher Stephens, one of four brothers serving in the Persian Gulf War, was remembered Saturday as an honest and brave solider who gave his life for his country.

Stephens, a member of the 3rd Armored Division, died when his Bradley fighting vehicle was hit Feb. 26 by Iraqi fire in Kuwait and exploded. The 27-year-old solider died 24 hours before President Bush announced the end of the fighting.

His brothers, Army Sgt. Tim Stephens, Staff Sgt. Edmund Stephens and Staff Sgt. Willard Stephens, returned from Saudi Arabia to attend their 27-year-old brother's funeral.

Services also were held Saturday in Conroe north of Houston for Army Spc. 4 James Murray Jr., 20, one of the last Americans killed before the cease fire.

Murray was killed by a direct hit on the Bradley fighting vehicle he was driving during action in Iraq. He died two days before his wife, Katherine, gave birth to their first child, Larissa Christine Murray.

A memorial service for Murray was held at Cashner Funeral Home, and he was buried at Conroe Memorial Cemetery. Mrs. Murray and the couple's newborn baby girl both attended.

During an emotional service for Stephens at the Greater Jerusalem Baptist Church in northeast Houston, friends and family members cried openly and one even screamed when his casket was closed. Another woman fainted and had to be carried out of the church.

"He was so faithful and honest and just," said the Rev. G.T. Hutchinson, pastor of the Starlight Baptist Church that Stephens had attended. "He was a wonderful young man."

The Stephens brothers, all dressed in uniform, solemnly filed by his casket with other family members before the service started. The casket was draped with an American flag and more than a dozen standing flower arrangements lined the altar.

Stephens' is survived by his wife, Jennie, and five children: Alesio, 10, Christopher Jr. 9; Demetrick, 8; Rodrell, 6; and Dominique, 2. His parents are Emma Stephens-Bell, a former Houston resident now living in Aptis, Calif., and the Rev. Willie Stephens of Houston.

He was buried at Houston National Cemetery.

Stephens and his three brothers were last together Dec. 8 at an early birthday party for Willard and a going-away bash for the four men before they left for Saudi Arabia.

Edmund, who saw Christopher shortly before the ground war began, was only 10 miles from his brother's unit the day he died.

Jennie Stephens said she thought everything was fine because she had first heard about the cease-fire. But a knock on her door late March 1 brought the terrible news, carried by military officials, her pastor and her father-in-law.

"I didn't expect it at all," said Mrs. Stephens, 27. "We had plans — we had plans to do other things."

Chief among those was raising their four sons and moving to California, where her husband was to be stationed after the war.

During an emotional service for Stephens...friends and family members cried openly and one even screamed when his casket was closed.

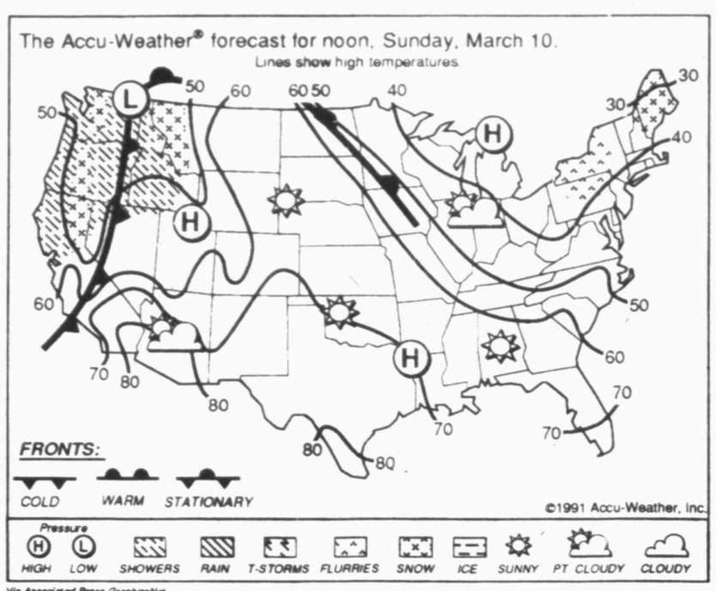
WEATHER SUMMARY



Via Associated Press GraphicsNet

Temperature to hit 70

Staff Report

The National Weather Service forecast for today calls for sunny skies, with a high in the mid 70s. Winds will be from the south to southwest, gusty, and increasing to 20 to 30 mph by afternoon. It will be partly cloudy tonight, with a low around 50.

Monday is expected to be windy with possible blowing dust and a high between 75 and 80.

After an overnight low of 29, Saturday's high was 66, compared to the record for March 9 of 85 set in 1955. The record low for today's date is 14 degrees, set in 1948.

STATE

More high pressure moving southward into Texas made Saturday a sunny day statewide.

Temperatures were near seasonal normals with afternoon highs mostly in the 60s and 70s. Extremes ranged from 53 degrees at Guadalupe Pass to 77 degrees at McAllen.

An upper-level ridge of high pressure was building over North Texas and winds were expected to return to the south Sunday and continue into Monday, resulting in warmer temperatures for the area. Winds were expected to be breezy east of the West Texas mountains and in the Panhandle.

Gusty southwest winds of 25 mph, humidities in the teens and temperatures in the 70s were expected to produce extreme fire danger Sunday across the Texas Panhandle.

The Panhandle has gone without much rain for the past 54 days. The last rain measured in Amarillo was Jan. 14 when .09 of an inch was recorded.

An upper-level storm system now digging into the Pacific Northwest was expected to continue moving eastward across the central portions of the nation and bring a chance for thunderstorms Monday.

NATION

Late winter snow fell over the northern half of the nation Saturday and rain fell in the South and West. Record-setting high temperatures were reported in Florida.

Show fell in parts of Maine, New York state, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan.

Rain was scattered over parts of Florida, Washington state, Oregon and in Hawaii, where flood advisories were posted.

Heavier snowfall for the period ending at 2 p.m. EST included 2 inches at Alpena, Mich., and 1 inch at Houlton, Maine; Oscoda, Mich., and Pellston, Mich.

Heavier rainfall for the same period included almost 2 inches at Vero Beach, Fla., and 1 inch at Tampa, Fla.

The Associated Press also contributed to this report.

KUWAIT: Baker tours wreckage

said that won't happen. It would mean a longer ground war with the risk of backlash and casualties. An air strike was the most likely option."

No final decision had been made on whether an air attack would be ordered, the newspaper said.

The Bush administration is seizing on Iraq's defeat and the liberation of Kuwait to pursue a four-point program to enhance stability in the Middle East and the Persian Gulf.

Baker, in a 10-day fact-finding mission to seven countries, is trying to encourage formation of a permanent security force dominated by Egyptian and Syrian troops, an economic recovery program, a slowdown in weapons proliferation and an Arab-Israeli dialogue.

But he gave over Saturday to celebrating Kuwait's liberation and to hear its rulers promise democratization. While Kuwait is one of the most liberal of the Arab states, it has been under the rule of the Sabah family since 1756 and only men whose families have been residents since 1921 can vote.

The national assembly and press freedoms were suspended in 1986.

Edward W. Gnehm, the U.S. ambassador to Kuwait who was sworn in during the six-week war, stoutly defended the regime to reporters. "It has had a very open dialogue system that goes back into its history," he said.

He said the emir, Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah, "remains an extremely popular figure" and that reports of assassination attempts against opposition figures were "just stories."

The emir, during talks with Baker in Taif, gave assurances that he planned to democratize Kuwait.

"Absolutely, we agreed on that," he said. "According to the Constitution, we will walk that path."

In fact, the emir said, while women do not have a constitutional right to vote "there is always a possibility to think about that in the future,"

He said he would return to Kuwait within a week. From the meeting in Taif, the Saudi summer palace and haven to the Kuwaiti ruler since Iraq's occupation last August, Baker flew to Kuwait City.

U.S. Secretary of State James Baker III smiles as he listens to Kuwaiti Crown Prince Sheik Saad al-Sabah during a meeting in Kuwait City Saturday.

The pilot took the U.S. Air Force jet low over the burning oil fields that flared all around the capital. Blackened bomb craters contributed to the scene of desolation. Cars, jeeps and station wagons, apparently rocketed by U.S. bombs, were piled up in bizarre heaps.

Baker met with the crown prince, Sheik Saad al-Abdullah al-Sabah, in an opulent private residence that had escaped war damage.

Like the emir, the crown prince gave assurances Kuwait would become more democratic. He said elections would be held "very soon" and he offered to accept Israel if it withdrew from former Arab lands and participated in a Mideast peace conference.

The war with Iraq was not far from his mind, however.

"As long as Saddam is in power the whole region will not witness any sense of security and stability," he said.

Afterward, Baker returned to Riyadh, the Saudi capital, to resume his talks with Prince Saud, the Saudi foreign minister.

Soldiers' families encouraged to join parade

Staff Report

Organizers of a March 23 victory parade to honor returning Persian Gulf War veterans are asking members of the community to take part.

Gayle Dodson, a member of the parade committee, said families who had loved ones in the war are encouraged to join the parade and carry picture posters of them.

In addition, businesses along the Wall Avenue parade route are being asked to tie yellow ribbons on their buildings, Ms. Dodson said.

"If they could also fly a flag that day, it would mean even more," she said. "We also want everyone who attends the parade to carry a flag. We want to create a sea of flags and encourage every person to take some kind of American flag to the parade to wave."

Joanne Dinsmoor, another parade organizer, said the event will be a patriotic victory celebration as well as a tribute to troops that served in the Persian Gulf War.

She said the parade will be a gala of bands, drill teams, floats and a fly-over by Confederate Air Force aircraft.

The event will go on even if something happens to rekindle the fighting, she said.

The effort to organize the parade already has received stamps of approval from local governmental entities.

The Midland City Council approved allowing the parade route along Wall Avenue, while Midland Independent School District trustees voted to permit junior high and high school drill teams and bands to take part.

George H. O'Brien Jr., a Midlander who won the Medal of Honor for his efforts in the Korean War, will serve as grand marshal.

The parade will start about 11 a.m. in Dennis the Menace Park off Andrews Highway and then turn east on Wall Avenue and proceed to the Midland County Courthouse and Centennial Plaza.

A ceremony honoring the troops will follow the parade.

Mrs. Dinsmoor said she has been overwhelmed by callers interested in taking part in the parade.

A member of a marching bagpipe band has said his group would participate. Other entrants include a horseback riding team and two antique fire trucks, one donated by the Permian Basin Petroleum museum and the other from the Midland Fire Department, she said.

She said veterans of World War II, Korea and Vietnam also are being asked to join the parade and businesses are encouraged to enter floats, she said.

ORYX: Firm consolidating two offices

(From 1A)

"It was a tough business decision the company had to make," said Warren Bryan, Oryx regional manger in Midland, "and a very close call. It could have gone either way."

Bryan said he and the regional manager in Oklahoma City worked on a consolidation plan, but the final call was made in Dallas.

The Dallas Morning News reported Saturday there will be some reorganization at corporate headquarters in Dallas and perhaps the loss of 12 jobs there.

Bryan noted that the decision to reorganize was not the result of any single event, but was primarily the result of a number of recent acquisitions and divestitures.

In recent months Oryx has made substantial international purchases from BP and has been selling U.S. producing properties to pay down debt.

In February, Oryx completed the sale of its Midway-Sunset oil field in California to Arco for $642 million and announced it would use the proceeds to pay down its debt. In another California transaction, Oryx sold its offshore platforms to Unocal.

In the Permian Basin, the company recently completed the sale of its Levelland properties to Shell Oil Co. And in Oklahoma, Amerada Hess, Amoco and Arco have exercised an option held by Geodyne Resources to purchase approximately $30 million in Oryx producing properties.

Bryan noted that divestitures had brought company production to a level where it could be more efficiently managed with only two production offices in Houston and Oklahoma City.

The northern region office, to be based in Oklahoma City, will deal with most of Oryx's active wells and long-life reserves. The Gulf Coast region office, based in Houston, is the focus of the company's production strategy.

"We looked at alternative configurations so that we can best manage the impact of Oryx Energy's recent divestments and planned sales on our division's productivity, while minimizing the impact on our people," said Jim Roberts, vice president of the Oryx production division.

The move will not affect Oryx's field offices. Bryan said about 250 people are employed at seven field offices in West Texas and Eastern New Mexico and none of those employees are expected to be moved or cut.

None of the 120 employees will remain at the Oryx Tower in ClayDesta Plaza.

About 115 people work at the Oryx office in Oklahoma City, which is responsible for field offices in seven other states that employ 225.

Journalists drive to freedom

Associated Press

Saturday was a good day for some of the journalists who covered the Persian Gulf War and the civil unrest that followed in Iraq. After about a week's captivity in Iraq, 40 correspondents, including 11 Americans, and two men identified as U.S. servicemen drove to freedom in Jordan.

As Iraq released its last known American captives, anti-government unrest in Iraq, first reported more than a week ago, continued to spread and intensify, according to opposition sources and travelers.

"It's a real massacre," one person who left Iraq said of the fighting in the southern city of Basra, Iraq's second largest. "The deaths are in thousands. The houses have been leveled."

In an effort to help the rebellious forces, some of the American soldiers stationed in occupied Iraq are providing the insurgents with guns and ammunition, U.S. military intelligence officers said Saturday.

The officers told The Associated Press that although U.S. policy forbids it, some GIs are handing the materiel to the rebels while others are leaving it behind for them. The officers said the practice was not widespread.

At military bases across the United States, meanwhile, American citizens continued to extend the warm welcome to returning GIs that the soldiers of the unpopular Vietnam War looked for and never received.

In all, 4,000 American soldiers headed home Friday to bases in Texas, California, Maine, North Carolina, Georgia, Kentucky, Oklahoma and Louisiana.

More homecomings occurred Saturday in California, Florida, Hawaii, Kentucky, Louisiana, Michigan and Texas.

In Detroit, Air Force Capt. Steve Tate, the first American to shoot down an Iraqi plane in the war, received a hero's welcome. "Any of us who went over were willing to give our lives for that beautiful flag right there," Tate told 1,000 cheering supporters at the Michigan State Fairgrounds.

Forty foreign journalists who were captured trying to enter the strife-torn Iraqi city of Basra reached freedom in Amman, Jordan, on Saturday. Although they were tired and hungry, they appeared happy to be free.

The journalists were bused from Baghdad to the Jordanian border post of Ruweished, then on to Amman. The reporters were captured near Basra last weekend after venturing beyond areas controlled by the U.S. military.

"We went after the story and the story got us," said John Giordano of New York City who works for SABA photo agency.

The journalists were turned over to the International Red Cross Friday in Baghdad, along with two American soldiers who had been arrested in Basra.

Meanwhile, the anti-Saddam rioting the reporters had tried to cover was increasing, despite a ruthless government crackdown, opposition sources and people leaving Iraq told The Associated Press on Saturday.

The sources and travelers say that thousands of people have been killed as Republican Guard units that survived the war suppress the uprising.

In northern Kurdistan, large numbers of government troops have defected to the rebels, who have taken control of helicopter gunships, an ammunition depot and a missile installation, the opposition Patriotic Union of Kurdistan said.

TANKS: Crowd protests Communist rule

demanding that Communist leaders resign, began to throw rocks at police, who fired live ammunition, tear gas, water cannons and rubber bullets to push back the crowds.

The injured included Dragoljub Micunovic, a leader of the opposition Democratic Party, the state news agency Tanjug reported.

Opposition leaders, led by nationalist firebrand Vuk Draskovic, then marched to the Serbian parliament half a mile away and held talks with Serbian Premier Dragutin Zelenovic. The demonstrators demanded the resignation of five state TV editors and said Interior Minister Radmilo Bogdanovic must be held responsible for the police attack.

Zelenovic promised that "everybody's responsibility will be determined, but we cannot accuse anyone without proof," Tanjug reported.

After four or five hours of talks, government authorities arrested Draskovic, said Jovan Marjanovic, vice president of Draskovic's Serbian Renewal Movement.

Around the time of the arrest, Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, the pro-Communist hard-liner, asserted on television that "the forces of chaos and madness must be confronted by all legal means."

Facing opposition in Serbia from anti-Communist forces, Milosevic is also embroiled in conflict with the leaders of pro-Western republics who seek to shape the country into a loose confederation of six sovereign states. Serbia and the leadership of one other republic, Montenegro, seek to maintain a strong federal system.

After Draskovic's arrest, other opposition members refused to leave the parliament building, and some declared a hunger strike, Marjanovic said.

The day's clashes began shortly before noon, when an estimated 30,000 demonstrators muscled through a police cordon around Belgrade's central square. Police retreated, and then about 1,000 officers charged the crowd, firing tear gas and beating people with batons.

Protesters, some chanting "Sloba out!" — a reference to Milosevic — demanded the resignation of the republic's leadership and threw stones and broken glass at police.

Several people, including policemen, were seen lying motionless on the street.

Draskovic, a charismatic Serbian nationalist, addressed the crowd from a balcony off the square.

"Serbia will be free as of tonight," Draskovic said.

Kuwaitis vainly use cajolery, bribery to protect oil fields

By Mark Fritz

AHMADI, Kuwait (AP) — They made friends with the Iraqis, plying them with cash, food and television sets so the invaders would not destroy the well-oiled machine that made Kuwait fabulously rich.

When Iraqi soldiers rolled into the emirate, the people who ran the oil industry say they tried to protect the nation's wealth by cajoling, fooling, bribing and pretending to go along with their conquerors.

In terms of lives saved, they believe the approach worked. In terms of protecting the industry, it failed.

Days before the allies launched their land assault, Iraqi soldiers began detonating explosive charges that had been laid at the wells back in August. About 800 of the nation's 1,000 wells were damaged and hundreds still burn out of control, destroying 3 to 4 million barrels of crude a day.

"We tried to organize the resistance in a civil manner," said Ali al-Qabandi, budget chief for the Kuwaiti Oil Co., adding that the oil infrastructure is 85 percent destroyed. "We had hoped the destruction would not be as much.

"We feel angry. We feel sorry. We did our best. The magnitude of the destruction is disastrous."

Pillars of fire burst from the sand like giant blowtorches just a few hundred yards from Ahmadi, headquarters of the national oil company nestled in the vast Burgan oil field.

It is home to thousands of workers, members of a pampered, self-contained subculture devoted to Kuwaiti oil. Hundreds of Americans and other Westerners were among its residents.

"This was like living in Oklahoma," said drilling supervisor Paul King, an American from Purcel, Okla., who has lived here for nine years.

"We had schools, stores, everything you could ask for," he said. "You never had to lock your doors around here. I got three children, and two of them think they're Kuwaiti."

King, who coincidentally took his family on vacation just 12 hours before the Aug. 2 invasion, was among a handful of Westerners who began returning to their ransacked homes last week as Kuwaiti Oil began the process of putting the nation's livelihood back together.

For the people who stayed, mostly Kuwaitis, putting out the fires and repairing the damage is the second chapter of the nightmare that began Aug. 2.

Immediately after the invasion, oil officials activated an emergency plan designed to keep minimum production to supply the country with petroleum and the natural gas that is its main utility.

"The Iraqis came in and they found us managing the company," al-Qabandi said. "We stayed, but we tried to be a hindrance to them.

"In the first days when the Iraqis came in, I went to speak to them. I said 'Look guys, this is a work camp. We are not armed. Do not harm them.' "

He said Iraq's Republican Guards almost immediately began planting mines and explosives at the well fields, and stole much of the equipment and records.

Oil production plunged from 1.5 million barrels daily to about 100,000, he said, although the Iraqis tried to increase it at one point and even brought in some of their own people to work the fields, he said.

Although there was little direct resistance, one oil official who asked not to be named said he and others would drive into Kuwait City about 40 miles to the north to run down lone Iraqi soldiers with their cars.

Al-Qabandi said he personally bribed, befriended and misled Iraqis to protect the oil operation and its employees and to gather intelligence that was sent to the allies.

"We gave them large amounts of money, videos, PCs (personal computers), food. They loved electronics," he said. "We identified so many targets for the allies."

He said the resistance in Ahmadi kept Westerners and Kuwaitis hidden, smuggled some out of the country and set up a system to distribute food and other essentials to people in hiding.

Although there was little direct resistance (by the Kuwaitis), one oil official who asked not to be named said he and others would drive into Kuwait City about 40 miles to the north to run down lone Iraqi soldiers with their cars.

CAMPAIGN: Ex-candidate admits his mistakes

lion, he lost by 100,000 votes.

A post-mortem indicated there was no single turning point in the campaign, Williams said. But he said his "worst mistake" was the weather joke. That was when he suggested that bad weather is like rape; if it's inevitable, just "relax and enjoy it."

When an aide told him his comment had created a problem, Williams disagreed.

"Oh, no," he recalled saying at the time. "I was just joking."

He labeled as "serious mistakes" his refusal to shake hands with Richards when their paths crossed late in the campaign, and then calling her a liar.

"She accused me of laundering drug money and I just had to call her hand on it," he said. "I'm sure there are people more dedicated to fighting drugs than I am, but not a lot. Looking back, I shouldn't have let that get to me ... I called her hand and it cost me for doing it."

Williams had been angered by Richards' reference to a newspaper report which said federal agents were investigating allegations a Houston loan broker, who also had done business with Williams' bank, was laundering drug money.

WILLIAMS SAID another probable mistake was his refusal to debate Richards, a decision apparently made by advisors afraid he might misspeak under pressure.

"I have a good sense of humor and an instantaneous wit and ... a debate's one thing we probably would have done better than people expected."

In something of a paradox, Williams said being a front-runner for over a year probably worked against him at the end because of a peculiar American trait. Said he:

"It's very American to shoot at whoever's ahead, and I was ahead for a long time."

Perhaps more likely, two events in the critical latter stages of the campaign may have been, if not devastating, at least the proverbial final straw.

One involved a constitutional amendment he said he didn't understand. But more injurious, Williams volunteered almost casually that he paid no taxes in 1986, a time, he said, when he was almost broke.

It was a concession of no wrongdoing, but vigorously reported and widely misunderstood.

ACCORDING TO Williams, Cinny Kennard of WFAA-TV in Dallas reported the story in such a way as to make it appear he dodged his tax payment — "like I'd done an illegal act."

That was not the truth, he said.

"I paid all the taxes I ever owed. I didn't pay any taxes in '86 because I didn't make any money."

Worse yet, he said, CNN picked up the early WFAA account and repeated it throughout the weekend, a "barrage" never corrected and never retracted.

In Dallas, John Miller, news director of WFAA, said:

"We were simply reporting what every other television station and newspaper in the state was reporting that day, that Williams had admitted he paid no income tax in 1986."

Later that night, Miller said, WFAA changed the wording slightly to clarify the fact that Williams owed no taxes in 1986. The second newscast ended with further explanation of the issue and pointed out that Williams paid other taxes he owed.

"It's possible that CNN took the early version," Miller said, although he was unaware that the network picked up either report.

While professing to be no "political expert," Williams said he was told that voters often tune out the campaign until the final stages, and events then take on special significance.

"MOST PEOPLE don't give a darn, so they start paying attention the last couple of weeks before the election. And all the rest of the battles are really minor compared to that."

It was earlier in this same critical period, Williams maintained, that the Houston Chronicle published "front page headlines" alleging "wrongdoing" at his Midland bank.

Later, he said, when the newspaper had to "back it down and say, well, it didn't happen," the story was buried on the "back pages."

He said his campaign suffered from "active bias" and the Chronicle and WFAA stories "are two examples that I don't mind putting right on top of the table."

Chronicle Managing Editor Tony Pederson said the newspaper stands behind the facts of the story, none of which ever were shown to be inaccurate.

There was no retraction or clarification on the "back pages" or elsewhere, he said.

Williams also said he made "strong enemies" when he attacked the state's trial lawyers, whom he said had made Texas the most litigious state in the nation.

"It's poisoning the business climate," he charged.

FURTHERMORE, HE said, he alienated the teachers' union and numerous state workers "because I believed in cutting back state government." His stance on such issues hurt him politically but those were "positions that I thought were right."

Williams acknowledged that the Richards camp probably succeeded in goading him into making damaging statements. And he said he probably would have been more at ease running against a male opponent such as Attorney General Jim Mattox.

"It would have been a different campaign," he said of Mattox, whom Richards defeated in the primary. "Of course, I don't know the outcome."

Williams pointed out that he has spent most of his life in a "total male environment," one that included Texas A&M, a military school. And then he went on to make his fortune in the oil and ranching business.

"Ann didn't really make me feel uncomfortable," he recalled. "I just think that a male-on-male is one battle and a male and female is another."

Aside from the handshake-liar episode, and Richards' "liberalism," Williams had scant criticism of his former opponent.

"We fought a hard campaign with totally different philosophies," he said. "She is a liberal. Her appointments bear that out. I am a conservative. My rhetoric bears that out."

AND THE campaign was not the dirty, mudslinging affair characterized by the media and others, he maintained.

"It was colorful. It wasn't nearly as muddy as some other races. It just made for good writing. This was a colorful man-woman, conservative-liberal race where both candidates have distinct personalities.

"It wasn't that dirty ... It was hard fought."

What's more, he said, he supports Richards and hopes she can provide the leadership to guide Texas through difficult times.

But he would have done things differently.

"If I had been governor, my approach would have been battling to decrease the size of state government rather than increasing taxes. ... Taxes are going up and our income is level. That can mean only one thing to any economist, even an Aggie. Your standard of living is going down as you increase taxes.

"And I am on the other side from that."

He was disappointed that legislators rejected the lottery referendum supported by Richards.

"THE PEOPLE of Texas should have the right to vote for what they want or don't want," he said. "A referendum makes an end run around the politicians in Austin and returns the power to the people.

"I like that."

Looking tan, trimmed and at ease, Williams said he has been "coasting a little bit" since the election, working on what he called "issue-oriented movements" that will keep him "involved."

"I believe even more deeply in the issues and principles that I outlined in the campaign," he said. "...I will be following up on some of those. I think it's a little premature, but I will stay involved."

He said he also has been busy drilling horizontal oil wells, hunting, fishing, ranching and spending time with his family.

"I've spent ... more time with my family than I ever have," he said. "My oldest boy has needed me because he has been in trouble with drugs."

Clayton Wade Williams, 20, was sentenced on a drug charge late last month. Repeating one of his own campaign slogans, the elder Williams said his son would "be going to learn the joy of bustin' rocks."

He recalled that he entered the governor's race because of his son's drug problems and that he wanted to wage war on drugs and drug dealers.

"WE HAVE not made enough strides," he said, "so there is a place for me to help in that arena, whether it's lobbying for money to fight drugs" or whatever.

Williams said he also was spending considerable time with his wife Modesta, whom he says took the election extremely hard.

"I held up very well," he said, but Modesta "had more trouble dealing with the loss than I did ... I'm a wildcatter, and wildcatters deal with failure all the time. One out of 10 or 15 wells is a discovery and the rest are dry holes."

While his own philosophy is to "give it all you've got and then go on," his wife had become "dedicated to things she thought she could do as first lady, and she had a real disappointment."

He said everyone grew very close during the campaign, and it was tough on everyone to lose such a close election. Afterward, they held what he described as an Irish wake.

"We talked and we cried and we kind of purged it," he said, then gathered for a post-mortem a week later.

"It kinda let everybody get everything off their chests. ... The healing starts with getting it behind you. We weren't there to fuss at one another. ... We made enough mistakes to go around."

WHILE JOKING that he's "now out of a job," Williams said the cattle business has never been better and his other business ventures are good if not great.

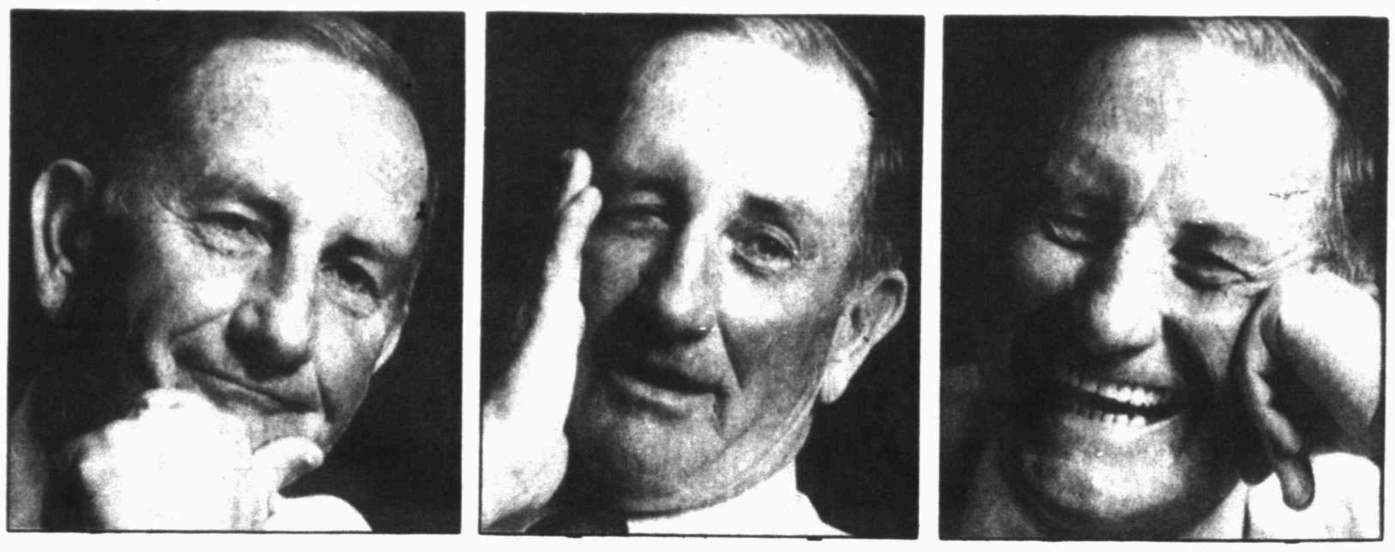
Asked if he's raised enough money for the next election, Williams laughed and recalled talking with former Gov. Bill Clements about campaign costs.

"It'll take you $3 million," Clements told him. "I put in three. I had to put in three more, but when I won, I got that back."

Based on that conversation, Williams said he put up $4 million out of his own pocket, "but I was not prepared to double it." He did in fact spend $8 million of his own money.

He said the highlights of the election year were meeting three times in Texas with President Bush and campaigning across the state with various ethnic groups.

"I probably didn't enjoy it $8 million worth," he laughed, "but I enjoyed it."



'All kinds of events will lie out in front, and all kinds of things will happen. Life goes on, fortunately, and we'll just have to cross that bridge. But I'm not going to say no...I'm not going to say I'm about to do it, for sure ...'

— Clayton Williams, on his future political plans

Williams doesn't rule out future race

By Mike Cochran and Chip Brown
Associated Press

Will he or won't he?

Waltzing around that question, a smiling Clayton Williams sounded a bit like a potential candidate recently discussing his political plans for the future.

On the rebound from a narrow loss last November to Democrat Ann Richards, the Midland rancher-oilman said he won't dismiss the possibility of another governor's race in 1994.

"I'm not ruling it out but I'm not ruling it in," he said.

"One thing I finally learned is that the most dangerous thing on earth outside of a barracuda is a smiling reporter," he told a pair of reporters.

He made it clear he enjoyed the hard-hitting campaign, one in which he spent more than $20 million seeking election, including $8 million of his own money.

"I probably didn't enjoy it $8 million worth," he laughed.

But he went on to compare the experience to drilling for oil, at which he has been spectacularly successful.

"You know, when you drill a dry hole, many times the information you gain from that dry hole lets you go somewhere else and discover an oil field. ...

"I've made a lot mistakes — anyone who has achieved the things I have has made a lot of mistakes — as well as done some things right."

He said he tries to learn from those mistakes and use that knowledge as he moves toward the next project.

"My fear for Texas is a further drift to the left," he said. "And my philosophy is that that will bode ill for most of the men and women in Texas, particularly whose who meet a payroll or go to work from 8 'til 5."

When responding to questions about another campaign, Williams said:

"All kinds of events will lie out in front, and all kinds of things will happen. Life goes on, fortunately, and we'll just have to cross that bridge. But I'm not going to say no."

He paused hardly a second before adding with a chuckle: "I'm not going to say I'm about to do it, for sure ...

"There's some things I believe I owe to the people that supported me. There were 200,000 team players, and there were $12.5 million in contributions ... I am going to stay involved."

Williams warmed up visibly to the topic when he talked of the "tremendous fountain of goodwill" that sprung from the race.

"When I go to the Dallas airport, Houston or anywhere, I can't eat at the restaurants without people coming up and wishing me well. I can't walk down the hallway at the airports. This is basically good people asking me to run again."

And what does he tell them?

"I have already done that."

George Shipley, an Austin political consultant and pollster who works for Democrats, said, "I think Clayton would be a tough and formidable competitor to the extent that he learned from his defeat."

Fred Meyer of Dallas, the Republican state chairman, would not comment specifically on another Williams campaign but he said, "Things are going to develop and change ... You just never know what's going to happen in the political process."

Bill Cryer, Richards' press secretary, said if Williams "wants to try again, I guess we'll be ready." But, he said, "I thought we had as much fun with that to last a lifetime."

U.S. sends warning to Saddam

■ American officials tell Iraqi leader he had better not use chemical weapons on his own people.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. officials Saturday warned Saddam Hussein not to use chemical weapons on his own people, but cast doubt on an opposition leader's contention that Iraqi troops already have used mustard gas to quell anti-government movements.

Pentagon officials said they were skeptical about a report from Shiite Iraqi opposition leader Jawad al-Maliki that mustard gas had been used to kill hundreds of rebels, primarily in the southern part of the country.

"I would raise an eyebrow about that," said one official, speaking on condition of anonymity. "You have to consider the source."

Mustard gas, first used in World War I, is the least severe of the chemical agents Iraq is thought to possess. It can be fatal if inhaled in large doses and it lingers in the environment.

Iraq did use chemical weapons against Kurdish rebels in 1988, but another official said Saturday the United States likely would have made a loud public protest if it had reason to suspect Saddam is again using chemicals to quell unrest.

While U.S. officials doubt Saddam has actually used chemicals since the Persian Gulf War ended, Secretary of State James A. Baker III said the United States "had reason to believe" he was considering it.

"We think it is important to warn them," Baker said in Saudi Arabia.

However, Baker didn't elaborate on how the United States might retaliate against Iraq for using chemicals.

Diplomatic sources traveling with Baker said the warning was delivered to Iraqi diplomats at the United Nations in New York by the U.S. ambassador to the UN, Thomas R. Pickering.

The New York Times reported that allied intelligence agencies intercepted communications from Iraq's military command in Baghdad authorizing the use of chemical weapons against rebels in the cities of Najaf and Karbala, Shiite shrine cities southwest of Baghdad. They have been the scene of reported fighting.

Pentagon officials said they were skeptical about a report ... that mustard gas had been used to kill hundreds of rebels...

Travelers and opposition sources say rioting against Saddam has spread inside Iraq, despite a brutal crackdown by his loyal Republican Guard in which thousands have been killed. Basra, the southern port city and Shiite stronghold, has been the scene of intense fighting, according to reports that have not been independently verified.

Jawad al-Maliki of the ad-Dawa party said mustard gas had been used against rebels in al-Haleh, al-Kifil, Najaf and some areas of the southern port of Basra. He provided no further details.

Kurdish opposition sources said in the northern part of the country government troops have defected to the rebels.

U.S. and allied forces worried about Iraq's chemical weapons capability during Operation Desert Storm, but the weapons weren't used.

Saddam last week appointed as his new interior minister Hassan al-Majid, who has been accused by human rights organizations of directing the use of chemical weapons against Kurdish rebels.

The United States said Iraq promised after those attacks never to use chemical weapons on its own people again.

Recall fever hits communities in South Texas

STATE

DONNA (AP) — It's not quite an epidemic yet, but recall fever has spread to several South Texas communities where disgruntled voters are seeking the removal of officeholders they feel have betrayed their trust.

In Donna, the United Citizens for Donna have collected 1,564 signatures asking for a recall election of Mayor Hector Casiano.

In Brownsville, a campaign to collect the 10,000 signatures needed for the recall election of city commissioners, William Garza, Butch Barbosa, and Pete Benavides — known around City Hall as "the three amigos" — has begun.

And just last weekend, Beeville held a recall election that saw Ward 1 Councilwoman Pat Watkins Kopecky keep her job by only 22 votes.

Kopecky incurred the wrath of the city's Southern Baptists after she backed a plan to allow local taverns to remain open until 2 a.m.

Jose Hinojosa, a political science professor at the University of Texas-Pan American, says power is the common thread that binds every recall effort.

"It's about who is in power and who wants it back," Hinojosa said. "If you study most of the recall elections, you'll find that those in power want to change things around, while those who had power and lost it want things to remain the same."

While the Texas Election Code allows local governments to include a recall provision in their city charters, very few have ever been successful.

"It's a very difficult process and one that requires a lot of time and energy by the electorate," said Katie Davis of the Texas Secretary of State's office.

It has been 21 years since the last successful recall election in the state was held and that happened in the Rio Grande Valley.

Mission voters removed Mayor Clarke Spikes, Sr., from office in 1970, along with city aldermen Al Ady and Clarence Ashley in a bitterly contested election that today still rankles many who remember it.

The mechanism that triggers the lengthy process of removing an elected official begins with a signature on a petition.

Figures may vary as required by the city charter, but reaching a certain percentage of registered voters who participated in a previous election is a crucial factor in seeking a recall.

In Brownsville, for example, a recall election can be called after 25 percent of registered voters who participated in the last city election sign a petition. In Donna, the needed voter signature level to trigger a recall election is 10 percent.

Once signatures are collected, they are turned over to the city secretary, who has 20 days to verify all the names that appear on the lists.

If the petition is satisfactory, the target of the recall has five days to resign his or her post.

A recall election must be set between 30 to 60 days by the city council if the elected official refuses to step down.

Hinojosa says that while most recall elections in the state fail, they do succeed in polarizing their communities.

"It's usually former candidates defeated in the last election, or disgruntled taxpayers who feel that there's already enough money going to pay for city services that rally behind recall efforts in a big way," he said. "But what usually happens is that the recall election fails with the incumbent becoming stronger and more hardened to the reality of local politics."

Hinojosa says that instead of spending money and time on a recall effort, the voting public should plan ahead to the next election to defeat the incumbents and place their candidates in power.

Pat Ahumada, the Brownsville businessman who is spearheading the drive to remove the three city commissioners says he can't wait for the next election.

"When they (three commissioners) were sworn in 15 months ago,I supported them, " Ahumada said. "In fact, (commissioner) Pete Benavides and I knew each other since childhood."

But today, he says, Benavides has forgotten the people who supported him and put him in office.

"He (Benavides) and his cronies on the City Commission have voted on projects without giving us, the general public, a chance to voice our opinions," he said.

The three commissioners in Brownsville voted for the construction of a $23 million convention center to be partially financed by the privatization of the garbage collection service.

That move alone, Ahumada said, is reason enough to seek the ouster of Benavides, Garza and Barbosa.

"This is not a personal thing between personalities or political factions, but a response by citizens to express their dissatisfaction with the way City Hall is being run," he said.

Benavides said he and his colleagues on the City Commission are concerned "but not worried" about the Valley's latest recall effort.

"We are elected officials trying to move Brownsville forward while they are not," he said. "I don't really think this will amount to anything."

Meanwhile, in Donna, emotions have always run high for the removal of Mayor Casiano.

UCD supporters have been very vocal about their displeasure with the mayor, sparring with him at every opportunity during City Commission meetings.

Yeltsin urges formation of powerful political party

MOSCOW (AP) — A week before a referendum on national unity, Russian President Boris Yeltsin on Saturday plunged deeper into his conflict with Kremlin leaders by calling on citizens to reject the central party's rule.

"We do not need the (Kremlin) in its current form," Yeltsin, President Mikhail Gorbachev's main rival, said in a speech to anti-Communists in Moscow.

Yeltsin urged the creation of a powerful political party based on the radical "Democratic Russia" movement, according to the independent Interfax news service.

Anatoly Lukyanov, the national parliament speaker and a Gorbachev ally, accused Yeltsin of trying to topple the national government.

"This is a direct appeal to declare a war on the leadership of the country," Lukyanov said on the official national news program, Vremya. He said lawmakers would consider some kind of protest against Yeltsin, a parliament member, on Monday.

Tensions among rebellious republics and Moscow have heightened as the March 17 date draws near for a Kremlin-ordered referendum on preserving the union.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda quoted another lawmaker as warning that breaking up the country would create 50 mini-nations with nuclear weapons, and bring "an atomic cauldron to a boil."

Before the month of March is over, Yeltsin was quoted by Interfax as saying, "democracy will either be strangled, or we'll be able to win." In addition to the March 17 referendum, Russian lawmakers will hold a special session March 28 for a vote of confidence in Yeltsin.

Pro-Yeltsin rallies were planned in Moscow and other Russian cities on Sunday, as anti-Communist reformers hoped to turn the March 17 vote into a referendum on the six years of Gorbachev's leadership.

The referendum will ask voters "Do you consider it necessary to preserve the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics as a renewed federation of equal, sovereign republics in which human rights and freedoms of any nationality (people of all ethnic groups) will be fully guaranteed?" Voters can answer only "yes" or "no."

Six of the country's 15 republics — Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia, Moldavia, Armenia and Georgia — have refused to participate, although their leadership has agreed not to block Kremlin loyalists from organizing votes.

Three republics — Azerbaijan, Turkmenia, and Tadzhikistan — will hold the vote. Four, including Russia, will modify the question or add a pro-independence question of their own. Two were undecided whether to hold the vote.

Newspapers on Saturday published a draft of the Union Treaty, which Gorbachev has proposed to unify the nation. Eight of the 15 republics already have tentatively approved it.

Yeltsin, in his speech, accused Kremlin officials of forging Russia's signature on the document after the meeting. He said the draft fell far short of his republic's demands for a new Union Treaty.

Yeltsin has said the treaty should give greater control of the economy to the republics, leaving the national government in charge of only defense, railways and energy.

Bus crash in Himalayans kills 30

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A bus plunged into a ravine in the Himalayan mountains Saturday, killing at least 30 people, news reports said.

The state-owned bus carrying about 80 passengers skidded off a mountain road near Simla, the capital of the northern state of Himachal Pradesh, United News of India said.

United News said 50 people were killed, but Press Trust of India, another national news agency, put the toll at 30 dead. It said 25 bodies had been found so far.

Some of the passengers were sitting on the roof when the bus hurtled 70 feet into a gorge, Press Trust said.

The agencies did not report the cause of the accident. But accidents involving crowded buses are common on remote mountain roads in bad weather. Heavy snowfall has blanketed the Simla region in the past week.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Faction fighting kills 7, hurts 28

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Rival blacks fought with guns, knives and sticks Saturday in a Johannesburg township, leaving 10 people dead and 34 injured. Six more people died in violence in eastern Natal Province.

Chronic black faction fighting has continued throughout South Africa despite peace meetings and pleas from black leaders.

In the Alexandra township, soldiers and police in armored vehicles patrolled the dusty streets after fighting erupted overnight between supporters of the African National Congress and the rival Inkatha Freedom Party.

Police recovered 10 bodies, most of them hacked and stabbed. One man died from the grisly "necklacing" method of having a burning tire placed around his neck, a police spokesman said. He said 34 people were injured.

At one point, gunfire erupted in the direction of police and journalists, drawing return fire from security forces. An Inkatha supporter was wounded in the crossfire.

"Why are the whites shooting at us?" asked a black man wearing the distinctive red headband of Inkatha. "This is between us blacks."

Albanians seek refuge

BRINDISI, Italy (AP) — Thousands of Albanian refugees wandered the streets of this port city in search of food Saturday after spending the night sleeping in plastic bags on the docks or on classroom floors. Rain added to their misery.

In Albania, authorities tried to stem the flow of people fleeing their country. A journalist with the official media said Albanian police and military forces stormed a ship in the port of Durres and forced hundreds of would-be-refugees off the boat and out of the harbor.

The police and military fired their weapons to force about 2,000 people off the Albanian ship Partizani, and up to 10 people were wounded, said a journalist who spoke by phone from Tirana, the Albanian capital.

As people left the ship they reportedly had to pass through two lines of police, who beat them with clubs, said Genc Pollo, a spokesman for the opposition Democratic Party.

A 2-year-old child reportedly choked to death from tear gas fumes, Pollo said, and there were unconfirmed reports two people died in a Durres hospital.

The Italian government, which has been criticized for its slow response to the influx of Albanians, said Saturday it would begin dispersing some of the 20,000 Albanians to refugee camps around the country. Some of the refugees have asked to return home.

Quake hits mining town

PERTH, Australia (AP) — A moderate earthquake hit the west Australian gold mining town of Kalgoorlie on Saturday, causing minor damage but no injuries.

The quake, registering 4.5 on the Richter scale of ground motion, struck at 9:36 a.m. and lasted about three seconds, authorities said.

"The shaking broke a few plate glass windows, brought down a few jars of chutney and jam in the shops, things like that, but nothing major," said Kalgoorlie police Sgt. Michael Foley.

A spokesman for the Australian Seismological Center in Canberra said the epicenter of the quake was 18 miles from the town.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 4.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 3.5.An earthquake of 4 on the Richter scale can cause moderate damage in a populated area.

Arabs injured in camp

JERUSALEM (AP) — At least 42 Arabs were wounded in a clash with Israeli troops at a Gaza Strip refugee camp Saturday after Palestinians attacked and stoned soldiers arresting suspected rioters, Arab reports said.

The violence erupted two days before the scheduled arrival in Israel of Secretary of State James A. Baker III.

Palestinian sources said PLO leaders have already approved a meeting between Baker and Palestinian notables from the occupied territories, an issue that has been debated by the PLO's Executive Committee.

Shopkeepers clean up after riot

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Shopkeepers in trendy Westwood swept up broken glass, boarded up windows and calculated looting damage Saturday left by hundreds of rioters who went on a rampage after a movie theater oversold tickets for the film "New Jack City."

Police estimated up to 1,500 people joined the 2½-hour melee Friday in the bustling movie, dining and shopping district fronting the University of California, Los Angeles campus, Lt. Douglas Pilot said.

"It was out of control for awhile," Pilot said. "Looters were seen battering people, knocking them down as they went."

Nine people were booked for investigation of looting, throwing a rock at a passing police cruiser, and other charges, he said, adding that three were juveniles.

At least 21 stores were vandalized in the disturbance that erupted when hundreds of angry moviegoers were turned away from the Mann Westwood Theater about 10 p.m.

"Basically, we had a theater playing a new movie ... and it oversold the theater," Sgt. Nick Barbara said.

Rioters jumped on cars, knocked down passersby, scattered garbage, smashed storefront windows and stole merchandise in the pricey business district about 10 miles west of downtown Los Angeles.

Despite the damage, most merchants were open Saturday.

"Clothes were thrown all over the store, glass was all over," said Randi Posner, manager of the Guess? clothing store near the theater.

"We lost three big picture windows," said Chip Avery, manager of the Wherehouse music store around the corner from the theater. "They took a couple hundred CDs." He estimated the store lost $3,000 in merchandise.

"It was just grab and run. They weren't looking at what they were taking," he said. "The beginning part of the alphabet is what it was, because it was closest to the windows."

Butcher holds Iditarod lead

GRAYLING, Alaska (AP) — Defending champion Susan Butcher took the lead Saturday in the Iditarod Trail Sled Dog race as mushers moved up the frozen Yukon River.

Butcher was the first musher out of Grayling, at 3:20 p.m. She was followed at 4:11 by veteran mushers DeeDee Jonrowe and Joe Garnie. More than a dozen other mushers had arrived in the Yukon River village by late afternoon.

Butcher took the lead earlier in the day at Anvik, where she spent just 22 minutes before heading upriver at 6:37 a.m. She was followed one minute later by Jonrowe and Lavon Barve, both top-five finishers for the past two years.

The mushers racing through Anvik passed Jeff King, who had arrived there first, at 2:23 a.m., to claim a $3,500 cash prize and a seven-course feast, courtesy of a race sponsor.

After dining on shrimp, lamb medallions, black raspberry sorbet, fruit and other delicacies at a table set with white linen and china by the Clarion Hotel in Anchorage, King shoved off from Anvik in 10th place, at 9:29 a.m.

He said that after two days of windblown trails and deep snow, the Yukon River stretch might winnow out slower teams from the lead group.

Joe Runyan, who arrived in Grayling at 10:41 in fourth place, said Butcher's team was the one to watch.

Parents deal with testimony at murder trial

EXETER, N.H. (AP) — William Smart sat in a silent rage as he listened to Patrick Randall describe how he slammed Smart's son against a wall, forced him to his knees and held a butcher knife against his throat so William Flynn could shoot him.

Randall

"It was all I could do to stop myself from going across the courtroom, grabbing this boy and beating him," Smart said. "I couldn't stand it."

Just before Randall's chilling account, Smart's wife, Judith, began crying and ran from the courtroom. Smart followed her, and a recess was ordered.

So went the start of testimony in the murder conspiracy trial last week in which the defendant is the Smarts' own daughter-in-law.

Prosecutors say Pamela Smart, a 23-year-old schoolteacher, persuaded Flynn, her 16-year-old student and alleged lover, to murder her husband of less than a year. Flynn in turn enlisted the help of his two best friends, Randall, 17, and Vance Lattime, 18.

Gregory Smart, 24, was found dead, a single gunshot wound to his head, on May 1. Prosecutors say Mrs. Smart told the teens to make the murder look like a botched burglary, and encouraged them to take jewelry and stereo equipment from the condominium.

According to police affidavits, Mrs. Smart wanted out of her marriage but was afraid she would lose everything in a divorce.

William Smart said the trial, and the detailed media coverage of it, are an emotional trauma for his family. He said he and his wife are taking anti-depressant drugs and seeing psychiatrists.

"We're having a terrible time with this, and it's getting worse," he said in a telephone interview. "We've tried. We may look like we're strong but we're getting weaker by the day."

The three teens have admitted to the crime, and agreed to a plea bargain that will have them spend 18 to 28 years in jail, more if they misbehave. Randall and Lattime already have testified against Mrs. Smart, and Flynn is expected to take the stand this week.

The Smarts' emotional torment contrasts with the lack of emotion the two have displayed while talking about the murder.

While on the stand, Randall matter-of-factly described how Gregory Smart begged for his life as Randall forced him to his knees and demanded his wedding ring.

"He told me he wouldn't give it to me because his wife would kill him," Randall said.

Lattime, who drove the getaway car, testified that as the three left the murder scene, they sang and Flynn laughed.

NATION IN BRIEF

Civics lesson turns dramatic

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A civics lesson turned into criminal court drama when a raging defendant had to be bound and gagged in front of a courtroom full of high school students, leaving some of the teen-agers in tears.

"I don't want to go to trial!" Wayne Burton, 21, yelled. He swiveled in his chair, dived beneath the defense table and grappled with a half-dozen sheriff's deputies.

Guards strapped him to a chair and taped his mouth and jaws shut, but Burton began banging his head on a mahogany railing that divides the courtroom from the spectators' section.

He was then taken to a holding cell just outside the courtroom.

Warren Easton High School social studies teacher Alexin Fortier said most of her students were crying. "It was a young man near their age and it upset them," she said. "Most of them have never seen a trial before."

Ninth- and 10th-graders from Warren Easton and Sarah Reed high schools had filled Judge Miriam Waltzer's courtroom on Friday to watch her try Burton on a cocaine selling charge.

Waltzer was hearing the case without a jury, but a dozen students were chosen to sit in the jury box, deliberate and reach a "verdict."

Before rushing off to catch the bus for lunch, the students said they thought Burton was innocent. A short time later, however, Waltzer found Burton guilty.

Tsongas weighs big race

BOSTON (AP) — Paul Tsongas has already identified his three greatest weaknesses in running for president and he isn't even in the race yet: Nobody can beat George Bush; Tsongas is another Greek from Massachusetts; and "the last time people heard about me I was going home to die."

The former Massachusetts senator who dropped out of politics in 1984 after being stricken with cancer recently called his family together.

"That always means trouble," he said. "So they were concerned I was sick again. I said 'No, it's worse than that — I'm thinking of running for president.'"

Seven years of treatment for lymphoma, including chemotherapy and a bone marrow transplant, have eradicated the cancer and left the 50-year-old lawyer more physically fit than most men his age, said his physician, Dr. Tak Takvorian.

Longer than that, the self-avowed liberal has endured 11 years of Republican rule that have pushed him to the cliff's edge. And he's serious about leaping.

"The only way you can be a player in this system is to run," Tsongas said last week. Two other options, publishing a book and persuading someone who shares his idea to run, failed miserably, he said.

Abortion law may change

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The sponsor of the state's strict anti-abortion law said Saturday he'll correct a provision of the law that would allow prosecutors to bring murder charges against women who terminate their pregnancies.

"It isn't as serious as it appears," said Republican state Sen. LeRay McAllister. "It was an oversight that was not corrected. But we fully intend to do that, and we will do that in a special session or next year."

McAllister said prosecuting women who have abortions on murder charges "will never be done" because Gov. Norm Bangerter has suspended enforcement of the act pending resolution of promised lengthy court challenges against it.

The new law is considered the nation's toughest. It bans abortions except in cases of rape or incest, providing the operation is performed no later than 20 weeks into the pregnancy; in cases of grave danger to the mother's medical health, or if the fetus suffers grave defects.

While the act provides criminal penalties for doctors performing illegal abortions — a $5,000 fine and up to five years in prison — McAllister said it wasn't meant to include women seeking abortions.

American Civil Liberties Union attorneys, researching a planned constitutional challenge to the law, found the murder prosecution provision.

Local newspaper-recycling drive stalls

■ While newspapers are out for recyclers, cardboard is in.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Recycling newspapers has become a pressing issue for Midlanders concerned about the environment.

Although the national newsprint market is looking up, Midland recycling business owners fear the trend is shortlived.

"Some Japanese buyers have been purchasing newspaper on the West Coast," said Charlie Butts, of Butts Recycling, a Midland recycling center based in San Angelo.

"We shipped 100 tons of newspaper to California from our San Angelo plant recently," Butts said. "However, it was newspaper we had stored since last Earth Day," April 22, 1990.

Butts said recycling cardboard has become a lucrative market.

Rhonda Shelton, manager of Butts Recycling in Midland, agreed. "Cardboard is supporting our plant," she said. "We are taking in about 300,000 pounds monthly. We don't have to package it or bundle it. We just load it up on boxcars, so a minimum of labor is required to handle it."

The local recycling plant also accepts aluminum cans, plastic bottles, computer paper, white paper and glass on a donation basis only.

"We had hoped to be able to take newspapers since the market picked up," Ms. Shelton said. "But we are waiting for stability in the market. We have a source to take it, but they won't pay enough to cover

Groups prepare for cleanup

Staff Report

Spring is in the air and Keep Midland Beautiful says that means spring cleaning. It specifically means it's time for a citywide large item pickup and Midland's Glad Bag-A-Thon.

Midlanders are encouraged to clean out their alleys, garages and yards and have their accumulation of litter hauled away free of charge.

Washing machines, refrigerators, couches, yard debris, tree branches and even vehicles will be picked up for disposal.

To make an appointment to have large items picked up, call the Midland Association of Realtors at 682-0253 during business hours Monday through March 22.

Pickup will be provided free to all residents of Midland and pickups will be scheduled April 1-12.

Keep Midland Beautiful will host its annual Glad Bag-A-Thon 9 a.m.-12:30 p.m. April 6 along the railroad right of way.

Participants will pick up trash along Highway 80 and will recieve a Glad Bag-A-Thon painter's cap.

For more information call 688-0253.

AIDS safe house born out of need

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

There is life after an AIDS diagnosis — even for the homeless.

"When you first find you are HIV positive, you are not going to die the next day. People still need to go on with their lives," said Sherrie Wilson, case manager for the Permian Basin AIDS Coalition in Odessa.

HIV — the human immunodeficiency virus — is the virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS).

Aware that life must go on, a group of concerned citizens got together a couple of years ago and formed a safe house in Midland for HIV-infected people who are unable to sustain their own house or apartment.

Santa Rita Safe House is the only such shelter between El Paso and Dallas.

"Most of the people we get in this house are guys whose parents or family don't want to have anything to do with them. That's the people who need help," said Victor Brenon, chairman of the board that oversees the house.

So far, the home, which can house up to four people at a time, has accommodated eight people in the last year and a half. Currently, the house has one resident.

Funding to maintain the house is solely through donations to the non-profit organization, which recently obtained tax-exempt status, Brenon said.

The property is leased to the organization at a charitable $1 a year on a 20-year lease by a local citizen.

The idea that developed into the Santa Rita project was spearheaded by the Rev. Frank Colacicco of St. Joseph's Church in Stanton.

"There was a need," said Colacicco, widely known as "Father Frank" and recognized for his work with the homeless. "Works of mercy count before anything else," he said.

Working with area residents, Colacicco was able to get the idea off the ground and turned the project over to the area residents who now make up the board.

Colacicco said the house was needed in light of fears of AIDS that still exist.

"There are people who still don't understand the disease and throw people who are HIV positive out," he said. "There is no place for them to go."

In addition to rejection spurred by fear, other factors necessitate the need for a safe house.

Despite seeing much less business than in the early '80s, Midland Air Park fills a necessary role for local aviators.

Air Park

Still vital after all these years

■ Business is improving overall at the city-owned Midland Air Park, officials say.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Midland Air Park, emerging from almost $1 million in renovations, still serves as an aeronautical workhorse for the community, city airport officials said last week.

As a poor economic climate continues to ground plans to build a new air park, officials said Midland Air Park will play a vital role in the aviation picture for years to come.

The city last week concluded a $899,000 project to resurface two Air Park runways and replace runway lights. A Federal Aviation Administration grant paid 90 percent, while the city picked up the rest.

Despite a dramatic drop in business at the 50-year-old airport since the early 1980s, repairs were sorely needed, said Marcy Blauvelt, spokeswoman for Midland airports.

"The runway was cracking and water was getting into the subsurfaces," Ms. Blauvelt said. "They did a rejuvenation of the pavement."

The city recently submitted an application for $319,500 in FAA funding for a $355,000 project to seal joints and repair ramps at Air Park. The city would foot $35,500, or 10 percent, of the bill.

She said the FAA should review the grant by October, with construction scheduled for later in the fall.

Ms. Blauvelt said renovations at Air Park, parts of which have not been upgraded since the 1940s, only are meant to serve as an aviation Band-Aid until a new facility is opened.

But the question is when, and if, that airport will ever exist.

A master plan for Executive Air Park, located on 2,665 acres of land off State Highway 349 near the border between Midland and Martin counties, has been collecting dust since 1985.

Study links crime rate to level of deterrence

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Crime in Texas is on the rise because punishment is on the decline, according to a study released last week by a conservative research institute.

The National Center for Policy Analysis in Dallas commissioned the study, which says the rate of serious crime in Texas has risen 29 percent since 1980 because the expectation of punishment has dropped 43 percent.

"The disincentives to commit crime fell," said Morgan O. Reynolds, the Texas A&M economics professor who conducted the study. "The cost of crime actually declined, so there's more of it.

"This is the law of demand: Decrease the cost of an activity, and you get more of it."

Local officials subscribed to Reynolds' theory.

"I definitely believe that," said Ralph Petty, a prosecutor for the Midland County District Attorney's Office. "There is no risk now attached to criminal activity. If there ain't no punishment there to be

Nature Conservancy dreams big on a small scale

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

FORT STOCKTON — The Nature Conservancy is seeking the elusive rainbow.

"Our mission is to save all life on Earth," said David Braun, state director of the conservation organization. "People are taken aback by that. That sounds pretty high-falutin'. We think all forms of wildlife are important."

In 40 years, the national organization has protected 5.5 million acres of land — from swamplands to deserts.

And a mere morsel of that protected land is the 1,502-acre Diamond Y Springs, which harbors both rare and common wildlife — from the Leon Springs pupfish, snails and the puzzle sunflower to hawks, coyotes and wildflowers.

The group's ideal of universal protection can only happen bit by bit, sometimes an acre at a time.

"We realized a long time ago that you only do that by making the little decisions," Braun said, in places like Diamond Y Springs.

"We'll save four or five species and ensure that they'll be there for the future. It's only by adding up all of those little decisions that we make our impact."

Last year, the Texas chapter of the Nature Conservancy acquired Diamond Y Springs from rancher M.R. Gonzalez with the help of its members and contributions by petroleum companies, including Mobil, Exxon USA and Enron.

Diamond Y Springs rest amid an oil field which, noted Braun, "points out the conservancy's philosophy that you don't have to have a pristine wilderness to have valuable wildlife preserves."

The Mobil Foundation Inc. contributed $25,000 toward the Diamond Y Springs Preserve.

Mobil's support "represents the environmental awareness and responsibility we have to not only perform our work in a sound and environmentally safe manner but also to help protect the future," said Daniel Zivney, Pegasus Area producing manager for Mobil Exploration & Producing U.S. Inc. in Midland.

Preserving the Diamond Y Springs acreage, which bears oilfield pumping units and production plants and which supports grazing cattle, "represents an opportunity to preserve a unique chapter in our environmental history," said Zivney.

Braun said scientists have yet to discern the real significance of the endangered puzzle sunflower, the Leon Springs pupfish, the Pecos gambusia and two species of snails.

"I don't know what good the Leon Springs pupfish is," he said.

Yet another set of findings from which to divorce myself

I don't know why it always surprises me when I read about this latest trend, but it does.

What the newspaper article said was:

"The divorce rate was down another two percent last year, continuing a downward movement that began in the mid-to-late 1980s. Marriage, government studies have concluded, is making a dramatic return to respectability."

Ott

What is going on here?

Marriage becoming popular? Divorce on the way out?

This can't be. What will become of me, for crying out loud? For the past 15 years I have been part of the 'in" crowd — a happily divorced man who made delightfully tacky jokes about his ex-wife, perfectly content in the knowledge that anybody who is anybody has been divorced at least once, and preferrably more often.

Now this.

Suddenly, my finely tuned lifestyle is no longer fashionable. Divorce is out and marriage is in. All my diligent research and late-night training on the subject has been for naught.

What's a man to do?

Panic, that's what.

But before we flip out completely, let's step back and analyze the situation more thoroughly. Maybe there's more to this than meets the eye. Maybe the survey is flawed. I mean, it wouldn't be the first time a government agency conducted a study and came up with ridiculously erroneous results. Remember the one about bacon being bad for you? I rest my case. Anyone who says bad things about greasy bacon can't possibly know anything about marriage.

Don't believe me?

Fine. Let me give you even more proof. In addition to determining that the divorce rate is on the decline, this particular study also revealed that "middle-aged men without wives are twice as likely to die as men with wives."

Say what?

But, hold on, there's more. It also stated, "Married people develop cancer less often than singles do."

And, we're supposed to take this study seriously?

I think not.

It's all a giant conspiracy, anyway — probably initiated by the far right wing of the Republican Party — to convince the American people that there is something inherently wrong with being divorced, like, maybe, we're all closet liberals or something. After all, we're not married. This, of course, is absurd.

Divorced people are where it's at; always have been, always will be. We laugh more, for example. We have to. Anyone who has stood before a judge and listened to him list off everything you now owe simply must have a sense of humor. That attribute, in turn, makes divorced people more generous than their married counterparts. When the three-digit dinner tab arrives at the table, who do you think will grab it? That's right, a divorced person. Why not? We'll just put it on MasterCard and add it to the list of items we already owe. Easy come, easy go.

But, let's go back to that government study, especially the part about divorced people being more apt to get cancer than a married person.

No way. We can shoot down that foolish theory right now.

What's the No. 1 cause of cancer?

Of course. Smoking.

What drives a person to smoke?

Exactly. A nagging spouse, or, worse, a spouse who walks in the house and merrily announces, "Guess what? I just bought us a new car. Isn't that great?"

Oh, yeah, terrific. Toss me those cigarettes, will you? Sounds like we've got us two-pack night working here.

Divorced people don't have to deal with things like that. If we can't afford a new car, we don't buy it. That way we can spend our money on more important things ... like three-digit dinner tabs.

So, relax, divorced people. We are not going out of style. Indeed, we are just as "cool" as before. The government may attempt to make us feel like we are losing numbers, but we're not. We're just as strong as ever.

Still, don't believe me?

Then try this one on for size. The next time you see a man crying in his beer, ask him how his wife is doing. If he says, "She just doesn't understand me," you'll know that I am right.

DEATHS

Edwin L. Davis

Graveside services for Edwin L. Davis, 46, are set for 11 a.m. Monday at Fairview Cemetery with the Rev. Bob Porterfield of the West Kentucky Street Baptist Church officiating. Services are under the direction of Thomas Funeral Home.

Davis

He died Friday at a local hospital following a lengthy illness.

He was born May 14, 1944, in Lueders. He had been a Midland resident for the past two years.

Survivors include: one daughter, Jeanetta Elaine Davis of Midland; one stepson, James Jay Joyner of Midland; three brothers, William Kenneth Davis, Ronald Davis and Dale Davis, all of Odessa; and one sister, Gyneth Ward of Odessa.

Hugh McCullough

Services for Hugh Davenport McCullough of Midland were Saturday at St. Luke's United Methodist Church. Burial followed at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Wednesday at a local hospital.

Pallbearers were Barney McCasland Jr., John Younger, Howard Ford, Dave Widner, Floyd Miller, H.C. Avery and Julian Simpson.

Honorary pallbearers were Vaughn Maley, Porter Bristol, John Ed Cooper, Bob Billhimer, W.E. Fowler, Ray Burns, Joe Canon, Jack Hickman, Curt Inman, Don Varnell, Dr. Gregory Bartha, Wayne Gideon, Robert M. Leibrock, David Widner, John E. Reid and members of the men's bible class at St. Luke's United Methodist Church.

Memorials should be directed to St. Luke's United Methodist Church memorial fund or Hospice of Midland.

Pearl Perryman

A memorial service for Pearl Perryman, 74, a former Midlander, is scheduled for 11 a.m. Monday at the Seventh-day Adventist Church with Lloyd Summers officiating. Private graveside services will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

She died March 3, in a Gresham, Ore., nursing home.

Honorary pallbearers are Herman Dunn, Lloyd Dunn, A.B. Taylor, Robert Taylor, Marion Taylor, Jack Taylor, Tom Canton, Eddie Owen, John Flynn, Dual Cox, J.W. Richman and Richard Dunn.

Mary McHenry

Funeral services for Mary McHenry, 74, of Midland are set for 3 p.m. Tuesday at the Antioch Baptist Church with the Rev. John Mitchell, pastor of Mount Carmel Baptist Church, officiating.

Burial will be at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Thomas Funeral Home.

She died Thursday at a local hospital following a sudden illness.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Charlie McHenry, in 1987.

VITAL: FAA is reviewing $335,000 repair proposal

The plan calls for a $27 million facility with two 5,000-foot runways and a 6,000-foot runway.

However, the city since 1967 has unsuccessfully asked the FAA four times for financial assistance in building a new air park. The latest was a request for $18 million in 1989.

"We never got a definite answer on that," Ms. Blauvelt said of the last request.

In April 1986, voters approved more than $27 million in bonds to fund Executive Air Park development.

"But the city decided during the oil crunch not to build the airport and give back the money," Ms. Blauvelt said.

Ed Vogler, chairman of Midland Airport Planning and Development Board, said plummeting property values during the 1980s contributed to the temporary scrapping of the new air park.

The city planned to sell the Midland Air Park property and use the money to help build Executive Air Park, Vogler said.

"The intent was to build it without the expenditure of tax dollars," he said.

But the value of the 600-acre Air Park property has declined substantially since 1985, said Ron Stegall, chief appraiser for the Midland County Appraisal District.

Stegall said the property today is worth between an estimated $6 million and $7.2 million — probably about half its 1985 value.

In addition, Vogler said Executive Air Park would have to be operational before Midland Air Park is closed.

The FAA requires the city to have a reliever airport for Midland International Airport.

Business at Air Park, meanwhile, has suffered since its peak in the early 1980s, when hundreds of aircraft vied for hangar space.

Basin Aviation leases all the buildings, which in turn are subleased to other renters.

Vogler said a lack of hangar space during the early 1980s resulted in more than 100 aircraft sitting outdoors at Air Park.

"We now have vacant hangars at Midland International and Air Park because of the drop in private plane ownership," he said.

Ms. Blauvelt said about 250 aircraft operated out of Air Park in 1983, compared with 80 today. Air Park has gained 10 aircraft in the past two months months, she said.

"Overall, business is getting better out at Air Park," she said. " I think everybody knows the economy took a pretty big hit during the bust. It's starting to come back and it shows."

Fuel sales crashed during the 1980s, falling from 763,153 gallons sold in 1981 to 182,230 gallons in 1989, a 76 percent plunge. Sales climbed to 257,626 gallons last year, a 41.4 percent increase.

Safety also has been questioned at Air Park, where there have been three crashes, one of them fatal, in the past decade.

Much of the safety problem, however, has been unrelated to flying.

The airport has been plagued by people using it as a recreational facility. Beer cans, golf balls and trash have been found on runways and taxiways. Motorists have staged races on the grounds at night, while sharpshooters have picked off runway lights.

The city last year requested a $200,000 FAA grant to bolster Air Park security.

If the funding is approved, the city plans to erect a 6-foot Cyclone chain-link fence around the airport. The fence would be topped by three strands of barbed wire.

The only legal entrance after that would be an automatic gate, which would open only when a code is punched.

Ms. Blauvelt acknowledged that pilots must use extra caution when using Air Park because it has no control tower.

"I think with any uncontrolled field without a tower you're going to have some problems," she said. "But there are set standards and rules pilots must abide by when using an uncontrolled facility.

"Pilots always have to be very vigilant in watching out for other aircraft."

Vogler said that despite its problems, Air Park still is important to the area aviation industry.

"It takes a lot of the load off Midland International Airport," he said. "That's why we're been able to receive FAA funding to renovate it. It's still a vital facility."

NATURE: It's the little things that matter in conservation

(From 1B)

"Hardly anyone knows anything about it at all. We haven't studied it (thoroughly). We don't know what its value is.

"But what we do know is that all species ... have their place in the ecosystem," Braun said.

The Nature Conservancy operates 1,200 preserves from "tiny one-acre bogs in the forests of Connecticut to projects as big as a whole mountain range in southwestern New Mexico."

For several years, the Texas Nature Conservancy had sought to buy Gonzalez' springs or to swap land for it to save the endangered Leon Springs pupfish from extinction.

The rancher was reluctant to sell.

"When I bought that land 20 years ago," Gonzalez said, "if somebody offered me a milljon dollars, I wouldn't sell it. I like the place a lot. It has a nice little draw and the springs there."

Though the Conservancy did not "pressure" him, Gonzalez said he agreed to sell the land in a trade. He was convinced that the conservancy's stewardship was best for the land.

Ed Todd/Reporter-Telegram

Hoven Riley, right, West Texas stewardship manager for the Texas Nature Conservancy, talks to Mobil's Daniel Zivney of Midland about the Diamond Y Springs Preserve.

And Gonzalez's stewardship is evident in his awareness not to overgraze the land, which "hurts the land more than anything else"

"All ranchers are having a losing battle with their land," Gonzalez said.

The "biggest enemy" to the land came in the 1800s with the advent of fencing, which intensified overgrazing because cattle were confined to closed pastures.

In the early 1900s, with the introduction of crop farming and the intense irrigation from underground sources, the springs, particularly the prolific Comanche Springs, started drying up at midcentury.

Recently, Gonzalez noted, the springs started flowing again only because irrigation had subsided.

Besides ensuring the survival of the endangered species, the Texas Nature Conservancy is interested in preserving a vestige of the old West Texas desert springs.

Hoven Riley, the West Texas stewardship manager for the conservancy said "People really appreciate what we are doing, coming in here and preserving a little piece of the natural history of the area."

Diamond Y Springs not only serves as a wildlife refuge and as a site for scientific investigation but as an outdoor classroom for students and other visitors. The site is home or a stopover for javelinas, deer, coyotes, foxes, bobcats, ringtailed cats, hawks, coyotes, swallows and migratory birds.

"It's pretty predictable as far as what adults ask me," Riley said. But students are a different story, he said. "Those guys will hammer you with questions coming out from nowhere.

"The kids are great. I really love them, and they probably are the most enthusiastic crowd I have."

the house on behalf of the Permian Basin AIDS Coalition, views such facilities as another component that makes up a comprehensive health care system.

The growing incidence of AIDS, will steadily increase the need for such shelters, she said.

As treatments for AIDS and the opportunistic infections that accompany it are developed, costs — a major factor in many illnesses — are soaring.

"This illness gets terribly expensive and can drain finances," Ms. Wilson said. In addition, AIDS/HIV patients are often unable to hold down full-time jobs.

Overall, the house was created to fulfill a need, Brenon said.

That need is giving someone a home, said Louise Wiles, a member of the board.

"We've tried to provide a home atmosphere for them, not an institution," said Ms. Wiles, whose son, Bruce, died of AIDS about five years ago.

"Someone told me Bruce was very lucky to have a home, some who have AIDS don't," she said.

"Up until that point I never considered people would not take care of their children," Ms. Wiles said.

"I would like people to realize they do not have to be afraid. I wish there wasn't a stigma attached to it," Ms. Wiles said.

Helping those who are HIV-positive and homeless has had its ups and downs.

There have been some problems with drug use and residents not getting along at times, Brenon said.

Currently the house maintains a strict no-drug-use policy as a requirement for residency. Residents are also subject to random drug testing.

The Permian Basin AIDS Coalition acts as a liaison for potential residents. Among other requirements, residents must be able to care for themselves, Ms. Wilson said.

For information on the house, the Permian Basin AIDS Coalition can be reached in Odessa at 362-3301.

Midlander assaulted

Staff Report

A Midland man was in stable condition at Midland Memorial Hospital following an aggravated assault in a parking lot on North Lee Street Saturday night, hospital and police reports show.

Dexter Eugene Peterson, 29, suffered lacerations to his nose when he was knifed in the parking lot of the Pink Panther Club, 208 N. Lee Street, around 7:50 p.m. Saturday, police officers at the scene said.

Peterson reportedly told investigators he was attempting to break up a fight between two men when one of the men cut him with a knife.

No arrests have been in connection with the incident, which remained under investigation Saturday night.

STUDY: 'Disincentives to crime fell'

afraid of, there ain't no deterrent."

Judge John H. Hyde, who presides over Midland's 238th District Court, said early parole — the result of penitentiary overcrowding — has taken the sting out of prison sentences.

"We have no idea how long they're going to be in the penitentiary," he said. "It's merely a function of how many beds they have available for them."

According to Reynolds' study, a murderer statistically can expect to spend 24 months in prison, a rapist 5.3 months and a robber two months.

"The reason it seems so small is that the probability of actually going to prison is very low," Reynolds said in a phone interview from College Station last week.

Reynolds used a statistical formula to figure the likelihood that someone who commits murder, rape, robbery or assault will go to prison and how long they can expect to stay there. The formula takes into account the probability of arrest, prosecution, conviction and imprisonment, so criminals who are never caught are reflected in the study's results.

The formula doesn't take into account the possibility that one person may have committed several crimes, which makes the punishment appear less probable than it actually is.

The average expected time in prison for all felony categories — including theft, motor vehicle theft, burglary, aggravated assault, robbery, rape and murder — is 7.4 days, according to the study. That compares with 24.1 days in 1960.

For those who actually end up in prison, the median time now served is 10 months, the study shows.

If caught and convicted, murderers actually serve an average of 66 months and rapists 51 months in state prison, Texas Department of Criminal Justice figures for fiscal year 1990 show. The average time served for all Texas prisoners released in FY 1990 was 1.9 years, while sentences handed down averaged 9.4 years, the department reported.

"Time served in prison has shortened substantially," Reynolds said. "In 1974, prisoners had served 50 percent of their sentences. And now it's 20 percent."

The average sentence served has shrunk by 56 percent since 1980, the study shows.

Meanwhile, offenses have increased from 1.2 crimes per 100 population in 1960 to 8 crimes per 100 of population in 1989. Between 1982 and 1986, the study says, serious crime in Texas increased from 12 percent above the national average to 35 percent above the national average. During the same period, the expected number of days in prison rose 26 percent nationally but dropped 36 percent in Texas.

Hyde said the decline in punishment is not the only factor behind the crime increase.

"I think there's no question that the high crime rate is not solely a function of low penitentiary sentences," he said. "I suspect that even if a person sentenced to 10 years in the penitentiary would

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Judds' Farewell comes tonight

By H.A. Tuck

Tuck

Classes resume tomorrow after being halted for a week by spring break. But there are activities even today on the campus.

There'll be an absolutely full house at 7 p.m. this evening for The Judds' Farewell Tour at Chaparral Center. The show sold out faster than any event which has ever been staged at Chap Center.

You still can purchase tickets for a perennial favorite which is coming to Chap Center on Wednesday. The Harlem Globetrotters will be performing at 7:30 p.m. in an entertainment event which is always delightful. Tickets are on sale at Chap Center or Endless Horizons, either Midland or Odessa, for $10.50. There's a $2 discount for either children or senior citizens.

Christian Christensen, an Adult Basic Education student at the college's Adult Learning Center, was honored recently by the Texas Association of Community and Adult Education as one of nine statewide scholarship winners. She was selected for her high overall total on the G.E.D. tests. Her instructor, Caroline Brown, accepted the award on her behalf.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director at Midland College.

RECYCLE: Newspapers 'stack up real quick'

shipping and handling."

Butts said a paper mill in Snowflake, Ariz., is now accepting newspapers.

"We are really committed to office paper and computer paper," Ms. Shelton said. She also noted that area recyclers are afraid that if they accept newspapers they will immediately be inundated with more newspapers than they can safely store.

"So many people want to recycle newspapers and keep them out of the waste stream," she said. "They stack up real quick."

Some Midlanders are so anxious to have their newspapers recycled that they bundle them up and dump them in front of a post which used to have a sign saying "Paper collections for Boy Scouts only."

Boy Scouts haven't collected newspapers for more than two years, according to spokesperson Felis Subia.

The sign was located near M-System on Midland Drive.

Although property owners recently removed the sign, Midlanders keep leaving newspapers which must be thrown into the trash.

"It's very frustrating," said Sharla Hotchkiss, executive director of Keep Midland Beautiful. "People want to recycle their newspapers. And the irony is that the newspapers left in the M-System parking lot blow across the lot until somebody throws them out."

Butts said his shipment of newspapers to California was "the first time that I have been able to move newspapers to anywhere in who knows when."

Bill Dimler, manager of the Time Machine Recycling Center of Odessa said they are not accepting newspapers, magazines or books.

However, Dimler said the Time Machine is working on a project with the Odessa American newspaper to bale and ship newspapers to the Snowflake paper mill.

"The project is still in the works," Dimler said. "We plan to put a trailer or some sort of receptacle out here at the Time Machine, which is city owned. A dumpster won't do since it would probably fill up several times a day."

The recycling manager said that the newspaper will arrange to pick up the used newsprint and deliver it to Snowflake.

"The trailer will have to be big enough that it will only need to be emptied once a week," Dimler said. "It should hold about 10-15,000 pounds. "When we accepted newspapers in May and June we were collecting about 50,000 a month."

A circulation spokesperson for the Odessa American confirmed the project, but said it was still in the planning stages.

"Any time we can bale newspaper and keep it out of the waste stream, it's good for the community," Dimler said.

STUDY: Emphasize punishment, judges say

spend the full 10 years, we would still have crime."

Among other things, he said, the drug epidemic, high dropout rates and family disintegration have contributed to the crime problem.

"The family deterioration in this country is appalling," Hyde said. "I can't help but note that the majority of offenders who come through the court have not finished high school and ... come from broken homes.

"Those are matters that the legal system can do little about."

Which is why a new emphasis should be placed on punishment, Reynolds argued.

"It's not the only factor, but it is the main variable that the public sector controls," he said.

Jamboree

Joan Lewellen griddles flapjacks Saturday during the Downtown Lions Club's 35th annual Pancake Jamboree at Dellwood Mall. About 10,000 people were expected to attend the event, proceeds from which will go to Lion-sponsored charities.

Filmed beating outraged viewers

Thousands of telephone calls from throughout the nation poured into Los Angeles last week as concerned people vented their outrage over the beating of an Altadena, Calif. man by Los Angeles police officers. The brutal beating was captured on videotape by a nearby resident who recorded the incident on film and released it to network television.

The videotape showed Rodney King, an unarmed black motorist who had attempted to elude officers in his vehicle, being beaten repeatedly by three or four police officers with police batons as he begged them to stop. The officers also used an electric stun gun on King, who later was in the county jail with a broken leg and battered face. King, a parolee on a 1989 robbery conviction, was being held for allegedly violating his parole.

The enormous rage that the videotape generated among viewers is an expression of the fear that the normal citizen experiences at the possibility of being abused by officials of government. A news article reported that some police officers in Los Angeles have had the reputation of using excessive force in making arrests, but that had only been a rumor until King's beating was videotaped.

Rodney King obviously has a history of brushes with the law. His robbery conviction and the fact that he was running from police on the day of the beating indicate that he probably is a troublemaker for the Los Angeles police. But that doesn't give the police there the authority to assume the roles of judge, jury and executioner. The policeman's responsibility ceases when he apprehends the criminal.

In this country, even a convicted felon still has a right to protection against the abuses dispensed by those in positions of power. An alleged criminal is still presumed innocent until proven guilty.

Those who telephoned the Los Angeles Police Department and mayor's office last week to complain about the beating included some police officers from departments elsewhere in the nation. That shows that abuse at the hands of corrupt officials is abhorrent to good people from all walks of life.

The King beating is not an indication that all police officers are violent or corrupt, of course, but is indicative of the fact that some bad apples still do exist in police departments.

It's essential to get rid of those officers who hide behind their badges to dish out punishment to citizens who do not deserve it. They give law enforcement overall an undeserved black eye.

Stormin' Norman doing it right!

Chances are you didn't have any idea who Norman Schwarzkopf was prior to about Jan. 15 — and you probably could have cared less. But today Norman Schwarzkopf is almost a household name.

"Stormin' Norman" has been a "hot" commodity in New York's Wall Street boardrooms since he directed Desert Storm's incisive assault against the Iraqi army — all the while showing deep compassion and concern for the American troops.

Gen. Schwarzkopf showed wise restraint and propriety when accepting the Iraqi surrender, neither humiliating nor denigrating the vanquished foe. He was a symbol of the justice the Iraqis will find from the conquering force.

He cut an impressive figure as the military commander of Operation Desert Storm. His command performance impressed many Americans and others around the world.

According to Ron Walker, managing director of the Washington office of Korn/Ferry Inc., an executive search firm, "His stock is so high right now that he could name whatever he wanted. You don't find commodities like Norman very often. They become hot commodities very quickly."

Were Gen. Schwarkopf to elect to retire from the military and seek work in the private sector, he probably would have his choice of jobs — and salaries! Walker noted that offers from the private sector could range from $300,000 to $1 million a year.

Ross Perot, chairman of Perot Systems Corp. and another advocate of direct action, told The Wall Street Journal, "Norman Schwarzkopf could go anywhere he wants to in industry."

The raves being heard from the nation's business community about the general's leadership of Desert Storm are merely the affirmation that business likes the military's method of getting a job done: Defining the goal and carrying out an active program to reach that goal in the quickest, safest manner possible.

And through it all, Schwarzkopf did not forget the foot soldiers — the guys and girls in the trenches who really are responsible for a military campaign's success.

"Stormin' Norman" deserves all the accolades he's receiving. He is the true "American hero" that our society has almost decided no longer exists. Oh, that individual still exists; he's just waiting for the right moment to appear on the horizon and show us the right way to get the job done.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, March 10, the 69th day of 1991. There are 296 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 10, 1876, Alexander Graham Bell made what was, in effect, the first telephone call. His assistant, located in an adjoining room in Boston, heard Bell's voice over the experimental device say to him, "Mr. Watson, come here. I want you."

On this date:

In 1496, Christopher Columbus concluded his second visit to the New World as he left Hispaniola for Spain.

In 1629, England's King Charles I dissolved Parliament. He would not call it back for 11 years.

In 1785, Thomas Jefferson was appointed minister to France, succeeding Benjamin Franklin.

In 1848, the Senate ratified the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, ending the war with Mexico.

In 1864, Ulysses S. Grant became commander of the Union armies in the Civil War.

In 1880, the Salvation Army arrived in the United States from England.

In 1948, the anti-Communist foreign minister of Czechoslovakia, Jan Masaryk, plunged to his death in Prague.

In 1949, Mildred E. Gillars, who had made wartime broadcasts for the Nazis under the name "Axis Sally," was convicted of treason in Washington. (She ended up serving 12 years in prison.)

Mubarak, Bush see the same future

CAIRO, Egypt — Egypt's President Hosni Mubarak is the closest partner George Bush has in planning a post-war blitzkrieg, with the two of them aiming to win the peace as decisively as the allies won the war.

Anderson

Sources in this ancient Arab capital say that Mubarak and Bush share a vision, and have become much closer personally and diplomatically than Bush and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir. Bush has decided Shamir is stubborn, combative and inflexible.

But Mubarak is a different story. He comes from a country with a knack for diplomacy. He is secure in his job and confident enough to take on the task of achieving a stable peace in the Middle East. As the area's largest Arab country, Egypt has a mandate to do it too.

Knowledgeable sources told us that these are the post-war points on which Bush and Mubarak agree:

— The bulk of U.S. forces must be out of the region within six months with most of the ground forces leaving much sooner than that. All along, Bush has promised Mubarak and Saudi King Fahd and Syrian President Hafez al Assad that U.S. troops would not loiter in the desert.

A swift pullout would put the United States in the role of "good guy" — willing to butt in when its allies have a problem, and then willing to butt out when the problem is solved.

— A regional security force will be set up in Kuwait and Saudi Arabia, maybe under a United Nations banner. The Saudis will have to develop a significant armed force to provide the bulk of the troops, but Egypt will provide its military as filler.

— No borders would be redrawn in the Middle East. Mubarak is adamant about that. It has been exactly 70 years since the British carved up the post-Ottoman borders and while there may have been some inequity then, Mubarak thinks it's time to live with the existing lines.

— The three key Arab nations developing the post-war stability and planning would be Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Syria. They stuck together during the war and they will likely agree on many aspects of the post-war plan.

The only thing that will split the triumverate will be plans by the United States to "rehabilitate" Jordan's King Hussein. Mubarak and Assad agree with Bush that King Hussein — despite his offensive anti-American and pro-Iraq rhetoric during the war — is still a pivotal player. He is a stable leader with a deep-seated belief in the need for peace.

— An economic arrangement will have to be forged between the Arab "haves" and "have nots." Egypt and Jordan are among the "have nots" because what they have not is oil. Mubarak knows that greater cooperation must exist between the rich oil producers and the starving populations in the other Arab nations.

— About the Palestinians. Mubarak and Bush have privately committed themselves to trying to solve that problem together. They agree that Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasir Arafat is a "soiled commodity." Because of Arafat's support for Saddam Hussein, he will not be welcome at any post-war peace table where the United States and Egypt sit. Mubarak's job will be to hunt up a successor to Arafat, but Mubarak won't hatchet Arafat in public because he knows that would only cause the Palestinians to close ranks around Arafat.

Dear Diary: There's a fellow named Wolf...

Wartime vacation diary:

Feb. 9: Usual sleepless night in a sleeper, waking at 4:30 a.m., rising at 6, already exhausted. Sunny Florida cool. Drive from Sanford 9 a.m.; arrive Sanibel 3 p.m. Buy ready-made dinner. Wake twice in the night alarmed about being in strange bedroom: that old childish terror of alien places far from home.

Baker

Feb. 11: Reading John Cheever's journal in New Yorker. Portrait of a hopeless alcoholic. Or is it? How can a hopeless alcoholic, desperate to have his first drink at 10 a.m., write so beautifully? Nobody writes well drunk. Theory: Cheever, a novelist living a stunningly dull suburban life, must have been desperate for material. No job to take him out of the house, into the city, into contact with other humanity. So he had to turn himself into fictional material. Hence the elegantly written passages about alcoholism, homosexuality, rejections by wife. His wife exists here only as an outsider. What she's really like, the reader can't guess. It never occurs to him that a husband who is amorous only when drunk might be a bit tiresome to a woman. Well, only a theory ...

Feb. 13: Ash Wednesday. Reports of 500 civilians killed in Baghdad bombing. I cringe, but why? Bombing usually kills people, and we've all been applauding it since Jan. 16, and admiring TV films of same. War's method is killing. I dislike the war for distracting us from everything we ought to be dealing with at home. Of course Bush wasn't going to deal with these things anyhow, Congress either. J. says T. told him during the '88 campaign they couldn't keep Bush interested in any domestic problem for 10 minutes.

Feb. 15: Started "Rabbit At Rest." Rabbit's a commonplace guy, car salesman who never got beyond high school, and the point of view is very interior; that is, we're inside Rabbit much of the time looking out. The view from in there is highly literate, witty, ironic. Lost to M. at Scrabble.

Feb. 17: Alarming how the mind shuts down the instant it doesn't have to write journalism. Even writing this dull record is leaden toil. Like moving your lips when you think. War running nonstop on CNN, totally stage-managed by Pentagon news producers so there's little sense of what it's like.

Feb. 19: Finish "Rabbit." Updike has really pulled it off, I think, though I'm agreeably uncertain about what "it" is. Is Rabbit a human representation of America from Eisenhower to Bush?

Feb. 21: National Examiner headline at grocery this morning tells of woman "Raped and Tortured by Saddam Hussein." And he is on the radio just now with the usual bombast: martyrdom, mother of battles, etc.

Feb. 23: Bush's ultimatum expires in 10 minutes, after which — mother-of-battles time! Getting deep into the Middle East gives me goose bumps. Three thousand years of hatreds galore.

Feb. 24: The ground war in Arabia began at 4 a.m. their time. Schwarzkopf on at 8.30 a.m. reporting early successes. Our casualties "remarkably" light. Television is a farrago of undiscriminating film and disconnected reports from whoever is available to report from Jordan, Baghdad, Israel, London, Turkey, U.N., White House, Pentagon. Even saw somebody interviewing the Iraqi Ambassador to Japan. Watched video of "Cinema Paradiso" mixed in with the war last night. Phone check-ups on children revealed nothing alarming or wonderful. Just like life most of the time.

Feb. 26: The Iraqi Army seems to have been in full disarray since the first assault Sunday, and mother of battles may already be over. Some mother. Bush's approval rating at about 101 percent of course. War is great when it works, and this is our kind of war.

Feb. 27: War obviously over. National Examiner headline at grocery this morning says, "Saddam Tortures and Kills Pet Cats, Dogs." Idea for adapting "Casablanca" to modern times: Bogart saying to Bergman, "We'll always have Wolf Blitzer."

America has a one-and-a-half party system

WASHINGTON — We are less than 12 months from the New Hampshire primary and less than certain that we can still say America has a two-party system. For now, we seem to have a one-and-a-half party system, with party competition stopping short of the presidential level.

Will

Electing a president has been difficult enough for Democrats since 1952. They have been in a 10-election slump, during which they have played .300 ball, a winning percentage .101 points below that of last year's Atlanta Braves. (A shift of a few votes in 1960 and 1976 would have made the Democrats one-for-10 from 1952 though 1988.)

Desert Storm was the most clear-cut foreign policy victory in 29 years, since the Cuban Missile Crisis (which was not really as clear-cut as it initially seemed).

Since America's two-party competition — the world's oldest — coalesced in 1856, the two parties' presidential candidates have generated 1,208,665,869 votes. Republicans have received 51.8 percent, Democrats 48.2 percent. But since 1952 Republicans have received 53.3 percent, Democrats 46.7. And since 1968 the split is Republicans 55.1 percent, Democrats 44.9.

The modern era of presidential politics began in 1952 when Truman retired, breaking the Democratic Party's organic link with FDR and pre-war politics. Beginning with 1952, Democrats have lost seven of 10 elections, and five of the last six. Since 1952 Republicans have won 69 percent of the electoral votes. Since 1968 they have won 79 percent.

In the 10 elections since 1952, 32 states that today have 322 electoral votes (52 more than the 270 needed to win) have gone Republican seven or more times. Twenty-seven states with 261 votes have gone Republican eight or more times.

An even clearer era of Republican ascendancy began in 1968. Since then, Democrats have won only one election, and that by a whisker, in 1976, barely beating an accidental president and a Watergate-weakened party.

Since 1968, 40 states with 430 electoral votes have voted Republican in four or more of the six elections; 33 states with 333 votes have voted Republican five of six times; 20 states with 188 votes have voted Republican all six times.

In the six elections 1968-88, there were 306 distinct contests (50 states and the District of Columbia, six times). The score: Republicans 241, Democrats 60.

Republicans are overwhelmingly favored to carry 147 Southern and Sun Belt electoral votes. If Republicans also carry California's new total of 54 (20 percent of 270), then Democrats must carry 80 percent of the remainder, a virtually insuperable challenge.

In 1992 Democrats will be in the 38th consecutive year of control of the House. No Republican now serving there has ever been in the majority. And the GOP lost House seats in four of the last five elections.

In 1990 two-thirds of congressional incumbents won with reduced percentages. But Republicans will get no help from re-districting. Democrats control 30 state legislatures (up from 29 last year), Republicans control just five (down from nine). So it is probable that the year 2002 will be the 48th consecutive year of Democratic control of the House.

The Democrats' 56-44 control of the Senate is more vulnerable. Of the 34 seats to be contested in 1992, 20 are held by Democrats. Eleven of the 20 Democrats are freshmen and nine of the 11 won in 1986 (during the mid-term sag of Reagan's second term) with less than 53 percent of the vote.

Regarding the presidency, even the Census Bureau has bad news for Democrats. Today population is moving West faster than ever. Of the ten fastest growing cities in the 1990s, seven were in California, two in Texas, one in Arizona.

If Democrats need any other depressing numbers, here are some. Since 1968, Texas has voted Republican five of six times, California voted Republican all six times and monomaniacal Arizona has voted Republican in every election since 1948.

Parental choice will improve our schools

When the several National Merit finalists from Midland were announced the other day, Midland Independent School District's (MISD) superintendent said he was "pleased that our curriculum and faculty are able to generate students with this kind of success."

Now that MISD has taken credit for "generating" that smart kid going to CalTech, let's talk about who gets the blame for the hundreds of students who dropped out this year, or the hundreds more who will graduate this spring with minimal skills. The sad fact is that in terms of both test scores and dropout rates, Midland public schools are very average. It's now common knowledge that public schools across the state and the nation are failing, and ours are right in the middle of the pack (their slick brochures about "excellence" to the contrary notwithstanding).

Only one thing can change that, and it's not a bond issue or higher taxes. Only market reforms — parental choice — will dislodge the educationalists from their bloated bureaucratic empires. If you ever find a school board candidate who says that, vote for that person.

Ector County school programs will suffer

I do not believe Ector County Independent School District (ECISD) has really realized what Jerry Taylor's move from Odessa will cost the student body of Odessa. We have not only turned a fine coaching staff upside down but many other areas.

These are just a few of the programs that will suffer from this change.

1. The young men who have worked so diligently for three years in a track program now face their senior year with a new track coach.

2. The classroom standards that the entire coaching staff has brought to Odessa High School.

3. The coaching staff's educational expertise and warm rapport they share with the student body.

4. Their strong leadership in FCA (Fellowship of Christian Athletes).

These men will be hard to replace.

The loss will not only be felt in the coaching staff but also in the classroom where some of their wives work in special areas with our children. They work in Chapter One, AAP Math, science, educational aids, and the first private instructor of dyslexic students whose needs cannot be met in public school.

We sacrificed a successful athletic program, the educational expertise, and the contribution this staff has brought to our community and churches because of an incompetent athletic director and his attitude toward Jerry Taylor. As a citizen of Odessa I feel like that price was too great to pay. I hope we have learned from our mistakes and we will not have to pay this price again.

As for West Odessa I hope this will not be a time to fold and give up, for our biggest challenge is ahead. I hope this will be a time for us as citizens and local media to rally behind a new staff, thus assuring the families leaving that the last five years of their lives were worth the sacrifice that was made.

Our loss is sure to be Breckenridge's good fortune. Best of luck!

Jimmy Patterson angers booster

Jimmy Patterson has finally pushed the wrong button. As an active member of the Midland College Athletic Booster Club, it's time to evaluate Patterson's performance in covering the Chaparral basketball season.

In recent weeks, and more specifically in a recent Sunday edition, readers were informed of a multitude of problems, both with our coach and the program in general. Readers really benefitted by the assistant sports editors' "rendering a guess" that Coach Franklin would not be around next year, and that a decision had already been made. Most puzzling is his comment that MC's basketball problems go deeper than the teams' performance on the court.

I question how much this guy knows about junior college athletics, our players, and I know how much he knows about the Chaparral Booster Club. Very little. It may not be Patterson's job to build up the basketball program, but it appears he feels it is his job to tear it down.

Instead of hearing about declining performance and attendance, player defections, and lack of postgame comments from the coach, it would be great to inform readers about things such as the Adopt-A-Chap program, increasing talent level in the WJCAA, the "adjustment" required on behalf of the athlete when entering the college ranks. We had two sophomores who improved dramatically from their freshman season. Since there's no hope of your mentioning them, I will. They are Eric Walker and Eugene Witherspoon, both of whom are ready for Division I ball.

Has Mr. Patterson ever been to a booster club meeting or function to learn what role we play? I think the only contact Jimmy has with boosters is when he eats a few cookies and drinks a coke from our Hospitality Room. In-depth coverage of Chaparral basketball would include some of these things. It involves work instead of speculation.

I'll be the first to admit that there are some concerns to be addressed prior to next season. Dr. Parrish and Coach Poss will act in the best interest of Midland College at the appropriate time. Booster Club members in general will support faculty decisions whether it involves a coaching change or not. Should you choose to comment on the decision, please spare us any "speculation."

City council ignored opinions of citizens

On Tuesday, Feb. 26, I attended my first Midland City Council meeting. I went to the meeting to support opposition to the approval of a city ordinance restricting residential outdoor lighting. It appeared to those of us attending that the opposition to the ordinance was strong in number as well as opinion.

Evidence was provided to the council consisting of approximately 250 signatures on a petition, a telephone tape recording of over 150 voices opposing, four in favor and three people speaking out at the meeting. When the elected city council voted on the ordinance, it passed 2 to 5!

Is this the way elected officials voice the opinions of their constituency? Why bother to have the meeting open to the public? It appears to me that they intend to vote as they choose, not as we want! A second reading is required for passage of this ordinance. I urge citizens of Midland to attend the March 12 meeting and let our elected officials know we intend to be represented not ignored!

What a fine job our sober soldiers did!

There's more to Texas than Austin

It is time Austin shared the state tax revenues with other regions of the state.

With the advancement of communication and transportation technology it is no longer vital that all state agencies be headquartered in Austin.

Many agencies could be relocated to provide a more equitable distribution of state taxes improving efficiency at reduced cost to the taxpayer.

Some suggested relocations are: Texas Dept. of Agriculture, Lubbock; Texas Dept. of Commerce, Dallas; Texas Dept. of Justice, Waco; Texas Dept. of Education, Brownwood; Texas Employment Commission, Brownsville; Texas General Land Office, Pecos; Texas Railroad Commission, Midland; Texas Water Commission, Mentone; Texas Dept. of Hwys and Pub. Transportation, Abilene.

The ecologist and environmentalist will support these relocations because it would lessen congestion and free up pressures on land use by non-taxpaying entities. This would provide more land that could be set aside for the preservation of fire ants and spiders.

Good piece of work; something omitted

Congratulations, John Paul Pitts, for a good piece of work Sunday, March 3 (PBPA learns how not to do the "right thing").

Apparently Bush, the English major from Yale, inadvertently omitted part of a sentence. His statement should have said that the war in the Middle East was about "Doing what was right for the overblown, overrated, self-righteous and self-indulgent northeastern corner of the country, and its cynical and sinister Establishment and its divine right to cheap oil."

Whatever the cost.

Proposed lighting ordinance unwise

There are many times when we must concede and consider that our city fathers, the members of our city council, are wise, sincere, and most understanding. Sometimes, sadly, the very opposite seems to be the case. If I do not miss my guess, this "light situation" which is raging would appear to be one of the latter.

Ordinarily we note that these astute brethren think in terms of saving the taxpayers and themselves, as well as our city, unnecessary expenses. In regard to this tentative "light ordinance," however, it seems that they have forsaken completely their usual wisdom, understanding, and insight. In fact, we might say that instead of approaching the subject from a rational perspective they are approaching it instead from an emotional perspective.

Two of our upstanding citizens have literally come to verbal blows over who is right and who is wrong with respect to how much light is too much light. For some years this battle has raged, though it really is little more than a "personality clash." We might say that it has been in a sense "a Vietnam" no-win war rather than "a Persian Gulf" win-war. The one was a persistent headache whereas the latter appears to be moving us toward peace.

Now that our council brethren have tentatively decided to enact a special ordinance for the control of residential lights, it seems that they have chosen an almost endless no-win war. Instead of looking out for the interests of the taxpayers, their proposed ordinance will be the cause of endless conflicts and very costly suits between the citizens of Midland and between Midland citizens and the city.

Or it could become a ploy to benefit their fellow attorneys!

And, again, unless I miss my guess, a new ordinance effected by a personality clash between two neighbors who have decided not to get along, will eventually and needlessly be costing upstanding and patriotic Midland residents thousands on top of thousands of dollars. Instead of such an ordinance bringing peace between neighbors, it will simply provide an unholy opportunity for some to wreck "personal vengeance" on others.

How very sad! They will have "bitten noses to spite faces!"

Dream ticket shows pretty face, alluring smile

The Dream Ticket, that perennial fantasy of American politics, is again showing a pretty face and an alluring smile.

This time the dream has President Bush paired with Gen. Colin Powell, the black chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, as his running mate in 1992.

Now that Powell has directed the military to its runaway victory in the Persian Gulf war, this Dream Ticket is even more attractive than when first proposed in 1988. The general was then only Ronald Reagan's national security adviser.

Wicker

Before that, the last real Dream Ticket was conjured up in 1968 — Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York paired with Gov. Ronald Reagan of California, left and right, East and West, the two biggest states, victory guaranteed.

There were only two problems — the two governors, neither of whom wanted any part of the other or second place on the ticket.

The Bush-Powell entry would not have such problems, since the two principals obviously admire each other and Bush is already president. As is usually the case with Dream Tickets, however, this one may look better in the airy precincts of imagination than in real political life.

Powell is certainly an attractive figure, an able and popular man. His presence at Bush's side would emphasize Republican claims to greater reliability on national security issues. He probably would lure a number of black voters away from their strong allegiance to the Democrats; but his military background would reassure Republicans who might be wary of supporting a conventional black politician.

For one thing, Bush — from the evidence of the polls — needs neither another man's popularity nor a general's backing.

George Bush himself was commander in chief during the gulf war, and his conduct of it has left him with exceptionally high political standing, to which Powell can add little.

One reason Dan Quayle was chosen for the Bush ticket in 1988, moreover, is reported to have been that Bush was tired of being second banana in the Reagan administration and did not want a running mate of equal or greater stature.

If recent history is a guide, Bush's second-term vice president may well be the party's presidential nominee in 1996.

Bush saw to it, moreover, that Quayle was pictured constantly with the inner circle that ran the gulf war; and in recent decades the visibility and standing of the vice presidency itself has been greatly enhanced. For all these reasons, dropping Quayle might be too costly to be offset by anything that even Colin Powell could add to a Bush ticket.

Difficult task of winning peace now faces Bush

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — Having won one of the greatest military victories in our history, having made us the dominant power in the Middle East and having created a new era of U.S. global leadership, President Bush now faces the far more difficult task of winning the peace.

Hearst

He will need the same kind of intense personal initiative, resolute firmness and persuasive diplomatic skill that he used to secure United Nations Security Council support for the world's most modernistic war, fought by a U.S.-led coalition, to force the withdrawal of Saddam Hussein's barbaric troops from a raped and ruined Kuwait.

The president's aim is to settle by compromise the deadly dispute between Israel and the Palestinians and create stability and security in the Middle East, a region that has had a violent Arab history for nearly half a century, including numerous wars that did not involve Israel.

If President Bush achieves this miracle, it will be a foundation stone of the new world order of peace and deterrence of aggression that he hopes will be the legacy of his presidency. Historians would probably record it as the Bush Doctrine.

The president's compromise plan for bringing about a peaceful settlement of the Israel-Arab problem dating back to the U.S.-British establishment of the Jewish nation at the end of World War II is basically the following:

—Israel would give up most, if not all, of the Arab territory occupied following its defeat of the Arabs in their 1967 war. Israel also would agree to establishment of an independent Palestine state on its northeastern border.

—In return, the Palestinians, including the terrorist Palestine Liberation Organization, and all the Arab states would recognize the permanent existence of the Jewish nation.

I believe President Bush should also insist on the following:

—A demilitarized zone covering the frontiers of both Israel and the Palestine state.

—A security system to deter, and if necessary, stop aggression by either the Arabs or the Israelis against each other.

To persuade the present hard-line Israeli government to, as President Bush put it, give territory for peace, I believe the United States will have to participate, preferably with Britain and other Western countries and the Arab coalition states.

In fact, if there is to be lasting stability and security in the Middle East, the United States will have to be the last-resort backbone of the security system.

Eight Arab nations, including Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Syria, have proposed an Arab peacekeeping force to replace U.S. and Western forces in the Persian Gulf area. That is a step in the right direction, but I do not believe we can rely indefinitely on Arab unity to stop aggression in the Middle East.

President Bush has already said we will maintain a strong naval presence in the Gulf. U.S. military equipment also is being stockpiled there. The president expects the Arab allies to bear the bulk of responsibility for regional security, but he also said we should create "shared security arrangements in the region."

Since it was American leadership and U.S. forces that were primarily responsible for winning the war against Iraq, we should certainly have a veto in the Arab peacekeeping plans and actions. That is why I strongly favor a Middle East NATO-type organization. The North Atlantic Treaty Organization has kept the peace in Europe for more than 40 years. A similar Middle East defense system, which included the United States, Britain, France and other Western nations, could be just as successful, particularly in helping to control the sale to any Middle East nation of materials of any kind that could be used to develop weapons of mass destruction, including chemical, biological and nuclear.

Testifying before Congress Feb. 6, Secretary of State James Baker, who is now in the Middle East, declared the United States should achieve as part of a Middle East peace settlement "effective arms control and prevent proliferation of conventional and weapons of mass destruction."

It was disappointing to me to learn that, according to the New York Times, the Bush administration is now abandoning hope for conventional arms control because the allied Arab nations who will form the front line of defense against aggression will need those weapons. There should still be a control system in which we and our Western allies have a voice in determining the amount and nature of conventional arms purchased by the Arab nations.

Now I would like you to know that there has been some Senate and other support for my suggestion in last Sunday's column that Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf should receive a fifth star for his brilliant direction of the U.S. and allied forces that won the war against Saddam Hussein in 100 days with very few allied casualties. Sen. Bob Kasten, R-Wis., introduced a bill recommending the fifth star for General Schwarzkopf and Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Gen. Colin Powell. Sens. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y.; Richard Shelby, D-Ala, and John McCain, R-Ariz., supported it.

Kasten said the two generals "deserve this honor because they have led our country's forces in one of the most successful and brilliant military campaigns in our history."

City cautions drivers

Staff Report

The city of Midland is asking for the public's patience while crews synchronize traffic signals along Andrews Highway.

The city will be changing out controllers and cabinets along the street, resulting in irregular signalization, said Terry Dearing of the traffic maintenance department.

Dearing warned motorists that they will not be able to anticipate when a light will change. He advised them to use caution when approaching a signalized intersection.

Andrews Highway should be fully synchronized in about two weeks, Dearing said.

Permian wins relays

■ Permian boys, Abilene High girls defend their Class 5A titles at the 47th annual West Texas Relays; Midland High's girls finish third.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

ODESSA — Some of the glitter was missing Saturday from the 47th annual West Texas Relays with Odessa High sprinter Dallas Cowan nursing a pulled hamstring and both Midland Lee track teams taking a spring break, but those flaws were overcome in grand style with competitive action.

Odessa High nearly pulled off an upset in the 5A team race against defending champion Odessa Permian, falling just shy 125-118. In fact, had Cowan been burning his usual rubber, it probably would have happened.

Still, OHS won the sprints without Cowan, including a meet record setting 200 meters by Brad Givens with a 21.54. OHS also swept both relays. Permian, on the other hand, swept the hurdles with Robert John while scoring almost at will in most events.

The Abilene High girls, as expected, defended their title, romping to a 137-92 margin over Permian as the Lady Eagles won six events, including a record 47.34 by Barbara Pyle in the 300 hurdles. Midland High was third with 44 points.

One of AHS' victories came in the 100 meters at the expense of Midland High's Stephanie Spencer, who was just edged at the wire by LaRhonda Kendrick.

"Everytime we run head-to-head, it's the same thing," said Spencer. "I think I win and they give it to (Kendrick.) I just need to get a little stronger."

The MHS girls also got a second place in the sprint relay to Abilene High.

"We beat Abilene in San Angelo last week," said MHS girls coach Monty Stumbaugh. "We had a bad handoff on the final leg and it cost us about four steps and that was the difference. Still, we had a better time than last week. We're coming along."

Lubbock Estacado easily won the 4A division by a 131-87 margin over Lubbock Dunbar. Dunbar was the defending champion, but Estacado has won five of the last six WT 4A titles.

Rebels improve playoff chances

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

Matt Perkins did the right thing in the right place at the right time — and as a result, the Midland Lee Rebels are one step closer to the playoffs.

Perkins played the ball off the hands of Odessa High goalkeeper Scotty Morgan for the deciding goal in the 100th minute of a 2-1 Lee win Saturday at the Lee field.

The Rebels, 6-2-2, need a win in only one of their two remaining matches to clinch a tie for second place.

Elsewhere in the district, Midland High wallowed to a 1-1 tie with Odessa Permian to damage its playoff hopes, while league-leading San Angelo crushed Abilene High 6-3. The Bobcats need only a win or tie in either of their remaining games to clinch their first undisputed district championship.

Perkins got his chance to be a hero after goalkeeper Freddy Silva used a tailwind to boom the ball 75 yards with seconds remaining in the second overtime period. Forward Mark Steward dribbled the ball a couple of times and fired a shot. The ball bounced off Morgan's hands to the keeper's left — directly to Perkins, who needed less than a five-yard kick into what had become an open net to score his third goal of the season.

The junior was modest about his winning shot.

"If anybody else had been there, they would have scored, too," Perkins said.

The Rebels utterly dominated play against an Odessa High team that has not won a match all season. Lee outshot the visitors 31-2, and had a whopping 17 corner kicks to only one for OHS.

Morgan was under siege all afternoon, while Lee keepers Burr Vogel, Jason Smith and Freddy Silva touched the ball a handful of times.

NCAA's Day of Invitations here

■ Arkansas and Texas have the records to gain entry into the NCAA tourney, and after SWC semifinal victories Saturday, they meet again this afternoon in the rubber match of their three-game series.

Associated Press

DALLAS (AP) — It was a typical runaway victory for Arkansas. Only the cast of heroes changed.

Roosevelt Wallace and Arlyn Bowers, not known as scoring stars, provided the offensive firepower as fifth-ranked Arkansas routed Rice 109-80 Saturday night to reach the final of the Southwest Conference tournament.

Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson praised his team's performance.

"In the first half we put on a clinic of how to play defense, a clinic on how to get to the boards and a clinic on how to shoot the ball," Richardson said. "Rice did the best job it could but didn't have a chance the way we went after them."

Wallace, averaging only eight points per game, scored 18 and Bowers, averaging 11 points per game, made 17 as the Hogs ran Rice ragged.

Rice's Marvin Moore scored a bucket off the opening tip then the Razorbacks made a typical first half charge that saw them build the lead to 55-33 on Ernie Murry's 3-pointer at the buzzer.

Arkansas, as usual, used its press to get its offense going, scoring 12 points off 12 Rice turnovers.

The Owls hit only one of their first 10 shots as the Hogs quickly pulled away. Bowers hit two 3-pointers and scored 12 points while Wallace came off the bench and contributed nine.

Duke and North Carolina are about to play it again.

The old intrastate rivals will meet for the third time this season on Sunday, this time for the championship of the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament.

Christian Laettner scored 20 points as sixth-ranked Duke beat North Carolina State 93-72 Saturday, while No. 7 North Carolina recovered after blowing a 16-point lead to down Virginia 76-71 in the other semifinal.

Duke is 2-0 against North Carolina this season, including a victory last week that gave the Blue Devils the regular-season title.

"Duke's having a great year. They're playing by far their best basketball at this point," North Carolina coach Dean Smith said. "But I think we've played some of our best basketball lately."

WJCAC elite arrive in Waco for Region V

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

WACO — Like a band of outlaws overrunning an unsuspecting small country town back in Wild West days, the four representatives of the Western Junior College Athletic Conference have arrived in Waco. And it's a safe bet they've already made their presence known.

The Howard College Hawks, South Plains Texans, Odessa College Wranglers and New Mexico Junior College T-Birds, the top four finishers in the WJCAC 1990-91 race, face the top four teams from the Northeast Texas Junior College Athletic Conference.

Howard, No. 1 in the WJCAC, meets Ranger, No. 4 in the NETJCAC at 1 p.m. today; South Plains (WJCAC No. 3) faces Hill Junior College (NETJCAC No. 3) at 3 p.m.; NMJC (WJCAC No. 4) faces Temple (NETJCAC No. 1) at 6 p.m., and Odessa (WJCAC No. 3) meets McLennan (NETJCAC No. 2).

Semifinal games are Monday at 6 and 8 p.m.; the Region V championship is Tuesday at 6 p.m.

Wednesday at 8 p.m., the Region V champion will meet the Region 14 titlist in the bi-region play-in. The winner of that game will advance to the National Junior College Athletic Association tournament in Hutchinson, Kan., Mar. 19-23.

Howard, the No. 1 junior college team in the country, meets Ranger for the third time this season. Having opened the Rangers' season by giving them a 137-104 defeat, Howard hopes it can now bring to a close their season.

According to Hawks' head coach Steve Green, Ranger has one of the premiere inside players in the state in 6-9 Randy Davis. It is their guards, too, that the Hawks will have to be leery of.

"The thing that scares you about them (Ranger's perimeter shooters) is that they usually play without conscience," Green said. "Almost anything goes, and if some of those bombs (three-pointers) start dropping in, it can be like a SCUD attack."

The second time the two teams met this season, Howard won 117-94. Handily, but mot as decisively as outing No. 1.

Green said he doesn't view the Hawks' No. 1 national ranking and 29-1 record as something that will have an affect on the outcome.

"I think as soon as you tip it up, people forget about it (the ranking)," Green said. "If a team pays too much attention to it, it can work to your advantage. I hope our opponents concentrate, because a lot of winning comes from expectations."

All games will be broadcast on KCRS (550-AM). Wednesday's bi-region championship is set to be carried live on HSE (Cable Channel 20).

SWC: UA win over Rice typical of many others

(From 1C)

Rice's Chase Maag hit four 3-pointers in the second half as the Owls cut the deficit to 12 points at 60-48 but the Hogs quickly regained control behind Wallace who scored six of Arkansas' next 13 points.

Maag was high for Rice with 24 points.

It was Arkansas' 14th consecutive victory over the Owls and will be the ninth SWC tournament championship appearance for the Hogs.

Arkansas was the SWC regular season champion with a 15-1 record.

Texas 82, SMU 74

Joey Wright scored 25 points to lift the No. 23 Texas Longhorns into the SWC tournament championship game with a victory over SMU.

Texas will play the No. 5 Arkansas Razorbacks (30-3) at 3 p.m. Sunday in the championship game for the automatic NCAA bid. Arkansas downed Rice 109-80 in the other semifinal as Roosevelt Wallace scored 18 points and Arlyn Bowers had 17.

Locksley Collie had 19 points and Dexter Cambridge added 17 points for the Longhorns, who increased their record to 22-7. SMU dropped to 13-17 for the season.

Texas built a 16-point lead at 48-32 with 14:34 in the second half as Collie made four of his team's first six buckets of the half.

SMU cut the deficit to six points at 72-66 with 1:40 to go but Wright hit six free throws to put the 'Horns out of danger.

Tim Mason and Mike Wilson were high for the Mustangs with 18 points each. Greg Kinzer had 14.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Sha Hopson came off the bench to score 18 points on Saturday to carry No. 8-Arkansas to a 60-51 victory over the Texas Tech Lady Red Raiders and their first Southwest Conference tournament championship.

Arkansas, 27-3, earned an automatic bid to the NCAA playoffs with the victory over Texas Tech (23-7).

Amber Nicholas and Sally Moore each scored 11 points for Arkansas and Delmonica DeHorney added 10 points.

Tech narrowed a 16-point halftime deficit to 5 points with a 16-5 rally to start the second period, but that's as close as the Lady Raiders came.

Hopson, who averages 10 points per game, hit three 3-pointers and scored 11 points as the Lady Razorbacks built a 33-17 edge. Blair Savage contributed eight points during the big Arkansas first half.

Teresa McMillan led the Lady Raiders with 15 points.

Arkansas coach John Sutherland said it wasn't pretty but he loved it.

"Both teams played great defense," Sutherland said. "Our defense at the beginning of the game and the way Hopson came off the bench was the difference.

"We got a big lead and Tech really made it difficult for us at the start of the second half. We missed a lot of free throws that hurt."

Sutherland added: "We did a lot of little things to win. We're not a team that dominates other teams but when we play well as a team we are pretty darn good."

ACC final, with North Carolina holding a 4-1 edge. They last met for the tournament title in 1989, with the Tar Heels winning 77-74 in Atlanta.

Last-seeded Tennessee continued its string of upsets at the Southeastern Conference tournament with an 85-65 semifinal victory over Georgia. The Volunteers' opponent in the championship game will be 24th-ranked Alabama, which defeated Auburn 77-59 in the other semifinal.

The Big East final will pit No. 21 Seton Hall against Georgetown. Seton Hall edged Villanova 74-72 on Oliver Taylor's jumper with 1.1 seconds remaining, while Georgetown seemingly clinched an NCAA tournament berth by beating Providence 71-55.

Nebraska will play Missouri in the Big Eight final. The 13th-ranked Cornhuskers clipped No. 12 Kansas 87-83 on Saturday, while Missouri topped No. 14 Oklahoma State 94-92 in double overtime.

Northeastern and Xavier of Ohio gained NCAA berths by winning their conference tournaments. Northeastern defeated Maine 57-46 in the North Atlantic Coast Conference and Xavier downed St. Louis 81-68 in the Midwestern Collegiate Conference.

In regular-season action, No. 9 Arizona won its fourth straight Pac-10 title by clobbering Oregon 107-65 and Northwestern became the first Big Ten team to go 0-18 in conference play when it lost to Purdue 77-48.

ACC

In Charlotte, N.C., Duke opened a big lead over N.C. State with a 19-7 run in the second half.

After the Blue Devils made it 66-46 on Antonio Lang's basket, N.C. State (19-10) rallied to pull to 72-62 with 6:24 left. But Chris Corchiani fouled Duke's Bobby Hurley on a 3-point attempt, Hurley made all three free throws and the Blue Devils (26-6) reached the championship game for the 17th time.

Duke held Rodney Monroe to 19 points, one more than his season-low, which came against the Blue Devils on Feb. 20.

A 3-pointer by Rick Fox keyed a late run that lifted North Carolina (24-5) over Virginia.

King Rice's 3-pointer gave North Carolina a 72-63 lead with 43 seconds left, but Virginia cut the lead to three points and got the ball back with nine seconds left. But Rice stole the ball from John Crotty at midcourt and Fox scored at the buzzer for North Carolina.

Fox and Pete Chilcutt each scored 13 points for North Carolina, while Crotty led Virginia (21-11) with 23.

BIG EAST

In New York, Taylor hit a game-winning shot for the second straight day as Seton Hall (21-8) reached the championship game for the first time.

A basket by Villanova's Marc Dowdell tied it at 72 with 27 seconds left. Taylor, whose driving layup with one second left beat Pittsburgh on Friday, then dribbled as the clock ran down until launching his winning shot from the key.

The loss ended the longshot hopes of Villanova (16-14), which upset top-seeded Syracuse on Friday.

The inside combination of Alonzo Mourning and Dikembe Mutombo led Georgetown (18-11) to its seventh Big East title game. Mourning had 17 points and eight rebounds, while Mutombo had 13 points and 10 rebounds.

Despite the loss, Providence (17-12) is given a good chance to make the 64-team NCAA field.

SOUTHEASTERN

In Nashville, Tenn., Melvin Cheatum and Gary Waites sparked an 11-0 second-half run as Alabama reached the SEC tournament final for the eighth time in 10 years.

The Tide (20-9) widened its lead down the stretch by hitting 14 of 16 free throws. Freshman James Robinson and Latrell Sprewell led Alabama with 17 points each. Ronnie Battle scored 19 points for Auburn (13-16), which lost its ninth straight to Alabama.

Allan Houston scored 26 points and Tennessee shot 60 percent from the field in its win over Georgia.

Georgia was the third straight team to lose to Tennessee in the tournament after beating the Volunteers twice during the regular season. The Volunteers (12-21) downed Mississippi on Thursday and upset top-seeded Mississippi State on Friday.

BIG EIGHT

In Kansas City, Mo., Doug Smith's two foul shots with 2.8 seconds left in the second overtime lifted Missouri over Oklahoma State.

Missouri (19-10), which squandered a 16-point lead in the second half, is on probation and can't play in the NCAA tournament even if it wins the Big Eight title.

Oklahoma State (22-7) was trying to reach the Big Eight final for the first time since 1983.

Tony Farmer had 17 points and 13 rebounds as Nebraska used its height advantage to beat Kansas and advance to its first Big Eight championship game.

Clifford Scales and Carl Hayes also scored 17 points as the Cornhuskers (26-6) beat Kansas (22-7) for the second time in a week.

MIDWESTERN COLLEGIATE

In Dayton, Ohio, Jamie Gladden scored 18 of his 24 points in the first half as Xavier of Ohio (21-9) won its fourth league title in five years.

St. Louis (19-14), runner-up in the NIT last year, was playing its last game as an MCC member. The Billikens are moving to the new Great Midwest Conference next season.

METRO

In Roanoke, Va., Florida State rallied from a 20-point deficit in the final 17 minutes to beat Louisville in the Metro title game.

Charlie Ward's 3-pointer with 23 seconds left was the winning basket for Florida State, which is leaving the Metro after 15 years to join the Atlantic Coast Conference next season.

The Seminoles (20-10) won their seventh straight game and advanced to the NCAA tournament for the third time in four years.

NORTH ATLANTIC

In Boston, tournament MVP Ron Lacey scored 18 points to lead Northeastern to the conference title.

Maine (13-16) took a 22-16 lead in the first half, but Northeastern (22-10) went on a 16-0 run to pull ahead 32-22.

BIG SKY

In Missoula, Mont., Kevin Kearney scored 20 points as Montana beat Idaho to win its first Big Sky tournament championship in six tries.

Midland Special Olympics Salutes...

CAROL GUM

This week Midland Special Olympics honors a special person who has been instrumental in creating our great program. Carol moved to Midland eleven years ago and jumped right in as a volunteer. She hasn't slowed down yet. Carol has been our head swimming coach for four years in addition to coaching the softball and basketball individual skills athletes, and helping out wherever there is a need. She is also a member of the Midland Special Olympics Steering Committee and has been an official at Texas Special Olympics Summer Games. But most importantly, Carol's positive attitude and cheerful disposition have made even the most trying times enjoyable. Carol will be moving from Midland this week. She will be sadly missed by her athletes and fellow coaches.

Ostertag leads Duncanville to 5A title

Associated Press

AUSTIN — In a game featuring three college recruits, 7-foot-1-inch Greg Ostertag slammed in 35 points as Duncanville rolled over San Antonio Jay 65-38 Saturday night for the Class 5A boys state basketball championship.

The game was such a rout that Duncanville coaches couldn't suppress their laughter as Ostertag — about a foot taller than his defender — scored for a 38-19 lead with 5:01 still to play in the third quarter.

Duncanville (37-2), winning a title in its first tournament trip, was never threatened after breaking an 8-8 tie with 4:13 left in the first quarter.

Jay (34-4) lost any chance to be competitive by making only six of 31 field goal attempts in the first half as Duncanville led 32-17.

Ostertag, a Kansas recruit, scored repeatedly by taking soft passes, turning around and either cramming the ball in the basket or tossing in a flat-footed shot from two or three feet.

Class 4A

Port Arthur Lincoln 77
San Antonio Alamo Heights 68

Port Arthur Lincoln, the team of the 1980s at the schoolboy basketball tournament, won its first title in the 1990s by racing past San Antonio Alamo Heights.

Lincoln (34-3), a five-time champion in the 1980s, scored in lightning spurts, led by Michael Scott with 16 points, Kelvin McKyer with 15, Vincent Shelvin with 13 and Lee Harmason and Xavier Henton, each with 12.

Class 3A

Hardin-Jefferson 75
Clarksville 68

Hardin-Jefferson ran off 10 straight points at the start of the fourth quarter, opening up a 14-point edge, and the Hawks held off Clarksville.

Gene Isabell, who scored 29 points in Hardin-Jefferson's 97-52 semifinal victory over Stafford, sat out 13 minutes of the title game and finished with just 7 points.

But Shannon Holmes scored 19 points and Jeff Burke 16 points for Hardin-Jefferson (37-1), which won its second state championship, but

Abernathy 55, Troup 46

Cody Forbes tossed in a 3-point shot to break a 46-46 tie, triggering a run of 9 straight points as pressure-proof Abernathy defeated Troup.

It was Abernathy's second state title in a week. The school won the girls' Class 2A title last weekend.

Abernathy (37-1) committed no turnovers in the first half en route to a 28-18 lead and scored the first four points of the third quarter for a 32-18 advantage before Troup began closing the gap.

Troup (33-3) went ahead for the first time, 44-43, on Edward Jasper's turnaround jumper with 2:20 to play. Justin Prather's 3-pointer put Abernathy back ahead, 46-44.

Class 1A

Moulton 53, Bronte 44

Moulton took advantage of turnovers, going on a 7-0 run over the final 2:52 to beat Bronte, 53-44, on Saturday for the Class A state high school basketball championship.

Patrick Henke scored 18 points and Bobby Fishbeck 17 for the winners.

Carlsbad wins own tourney

Staff Report

CARLSBAD, N.M. — The championship game at the Carlsbad Invitational Baseball Tournament went to the host team as Carlsbad defeated Fort Stockton 8-1 for the title Saturday.

Midland High, which fell 12-7 in nine innings to El Paso Bel Air, finished up in fourth place at the tourney.

Midland Lee took sixth place, dropping the consolation final 1-0 to Plainview, which got a two-hitter from Rudy Ramos.

RELAYS: MHS' Acrey third in hurdles

(From 1C)

Andrews placed third with 70 points with Deon Yandell winning the 3200 and Oscar Bueno taking the 800.

Abilene Wylie defended its 3A crown with a 114-101 margin over Canyon, winning five events.

It was in the 3A division where one of the most interesting races took place when Canyon's Corbin Reeves beat Stanton's Jeremy Stallings as both beat the old division record.

Reeves is the defending 3A 800 state champion while Stallings placed third in the 2A state 800 last year as a freshman. Reeves ripped off a 1:55.24, beating the old record by two seconds while Stallings had a 1:56.64. The loss didn't matter to Stallings at all.

"I never dreamed I could run that kind of time this early in the year," said the Stanton sophomore. "I had never run against Reeves. I never got to run in a big meet like this last year and this is going to help me a lot."

Stallings came back to win the 1600 later in the day while Reeves anchored Canyon's winning 1600 relay team.

Two other records fell during the day. San Angelo Lakeview's Kevin Dumas set the triple jump mark at 44-5¼ while Sweetwater's Kiley Anglin set the 4A 400 standard at 48.04.

The Midland High boys scored only 11 points in the meet. It's sprint relay team had problems and didn't get the baton around. However, Thomas Acrey shows a lot of promise in the high hurdles, placing third.

MHS pole vaulter Jack Kelso, a Region I qualifier last year, didn't compete in the meet after getting sick Friday night.

MC netters rout Tyler JC

Staff Report

TYLER — The Midland College mens' tennis team downed Tyler 7-2, while the MC women swept both singles flights and took the doubles title in the finals of the Tyler Invitational Saturday.

All three womens' finals were all-Lady Chaparral affairs. MC's Myriam Berthe downed teammate Seiko Ichioka in the first flight singles final, and Adriana Isaza of MC beat fellow Chap Caroline Reynolds in the second flight finale to complete the sweep.

Additionally, Isaza teamed with Boba Tzvetkova to defeat Berthe and Janneke Garos for the doubles title.

The MC men remained undefeated with their eighth victory of the season, knocking off previously No. 1 ranked Tyler.

A window decal and a photographic wall plaque identifys your business as a Chamber member.

• Membership directory listing
Each company is listed in an alphabetic section and in the classified buyer's guide. A new section — Who's Who — allows up to ten representatives from each company to be listed alphabetically, by the representative's last name. A directory is distributed each year free to each Chamber member.

• Citylife* magazine
A colorful, glossy publication featuring the good life in Midland, and offering a quarterly forum for news and advertising about your business.

Free tickets
Members are mailed at least 10 free tickets to local entertainment events such as Angels baseball, Twin Cities Speedway and Midland College Chaparral basketball.

BE UNCOMPROMISING FOR $299 A MONTH.

Or, perhaps, $399 a month, depending on how grandly uncompromising you wish to be.

Because those are the prices until March 31st for a 1991 Saab 900 or Saab 9000 with only a 20% down payment!

In either case, you won't compromise on the performance of Saab's larger, more fuel-efficient engines, or on the utility of up to 56.5 cubic feet of cargo space.

Nor will you compromise on safety. All Saabs include anti-lock braking systems, driver's-side air bags and steel "safety cage" construction as standard equipment. Standard, too, is Saab's 6-year/80,000-mile warranty, one of the longest-lasting in the industry.

See a participating Saab dealer by March 31, while it's less expensive to be more demanding.

BUY A SAAB 900 FOR ONLY $299 PER MONTH* FOR 48 MONTHS.

SAAB
WE DON'T MAKE COMPROMISES. WE MAKE SAABS.

*20% down payment. Financing to qualified and approved retail buyers through March 31, 1991, through Saab Scania Financial Services Corp. Subject to availability. $299.00 per month for Saab 900, 3-door, 5-speed for 48 months totaling $14,352.00, based on APR of 2.15%. $399.00 per month for Saab 9000, 5-door, 5-speed for 48 months totaling $19,152.00, based on APR of 4.35%. MSRP $18,712.00 for Saab 900 and $21,412.00 for Saab 9000, each including destination charge; excluding taxes, license, registration and other dealer charges. HOMES & CLASSIFIED

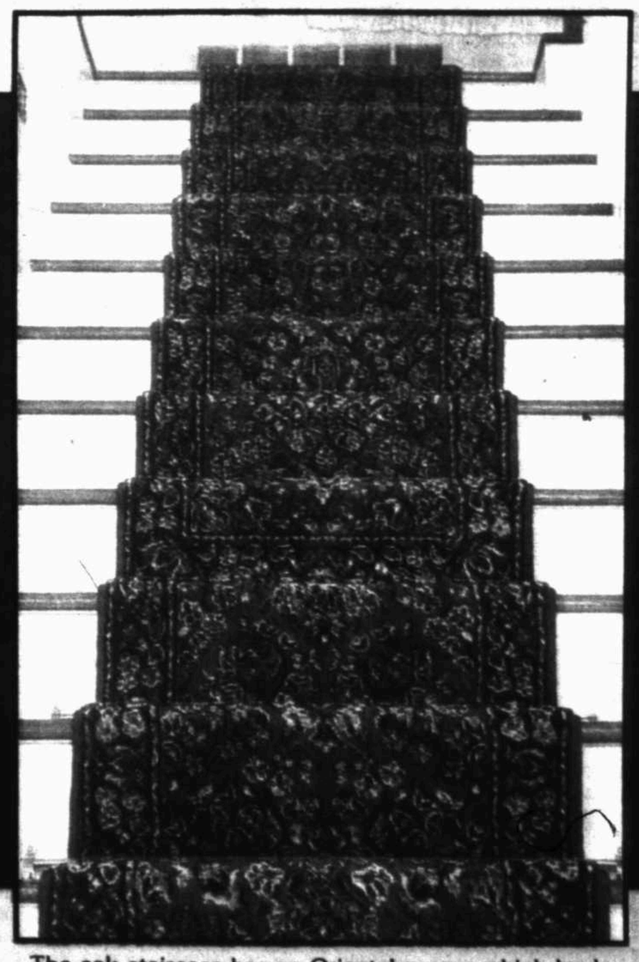
White oil woodwork and ash paneling highlight the living room, above. The formal living room, left, opens to foyer, the marble fireplace and opens into the garden room. The master bedroom, below, has a wall of windows which view the back yard.

A STYLISH CHARACTER



The oak staircase has an Oriental runner which leads to three bedrooms upstairs.

MAR 10 91

STYLE: Home has elegant interior, great view of lake

(From 1D)

Two plantation shuttered windows in the formal dining room view the front yard. A border is placed below the crown moulding, adding a contrast to the wheat colored walls. A brass chandelier which was imported from Europe is placed above the dining table. A door leads into the kitchen.

The foyer extends to the right of the staircase into the formal living room. Due to the tile flooring, this spacious room is perfect for displaying area rugs. An Italian marble fireplace is situated in the center of one wall and a set of French doors are placed on each side, providing access into the garden room. Two shuttered windows also frame the front of the home.

White wash aspen lines the walls and ceiling of one of the most inviting areas in this home. A tile fireplace, with a leaf motif, will help to warm the garden room on a cold day. The walls are lined with windows and transoms. A door opens onto a side patio.

A hallway extends past the living room to the master suite. A floral paper featuring a black background adorns the walls of the sequestered master bedroom. A burgundy carpeting adds an elegant touch to the decor. This spacious room also has an Italian marble fireplace, as well as a sitting area in front of a large window. This room has two glass doors — one leads to a patio in the back yard and the other leads to the patio outside of the garden room. A walk-in closet is situated next to the entrance to the bedroom.

An Italian marble floor is only one highlight of the master bath. It also features a coordinating wallpaper, two separate tile vanities, an over-sized shower and another walk-in closet. The best feature of all, however, is a soaking tub which is over 3 feet deep and is perfect for relaxing sore muscles after 18 holes of golf or just as a way to unwind after a busy day.

A guest bath is situated in the hallway between the kitchen and master bedroom. It is nestled under the staircase, therefore it has an unusual design. The amenities include a pedestal sink and a mauve, blue and teal wallcovering and border.

In many homes which have been built during the last few years, the walls have been removed between the kitchen, breakfast area and family room. These rooms are still serving as the hearth of the home and the design in this home is a wonderful representation of how these room can flow into one another. An angled cabinet in the kitchen divides the three rooms. The sink is situated in the center on one side and a breakfast bar lines the other side. A beam on either side of the sink ascends into the ceiling. The two walls in the kitchen are lined with ask cabinets and General Electric appliances. One section of the cabinets feature a seedy glass which provides a glimpse inside of the cabinet, but it doesn't have to be cleaned as often as glass. The appliances include a range with a self-cleaning oven and microwave, and a dishwasher. A desk is built-in next to the refrigerator.

The breakfast room is situated to the right of the kitchen. Two of the walls have windows which provide a great view of the back yard and lake. A light jade paper lines the walls of the breakfast room and kitchen.

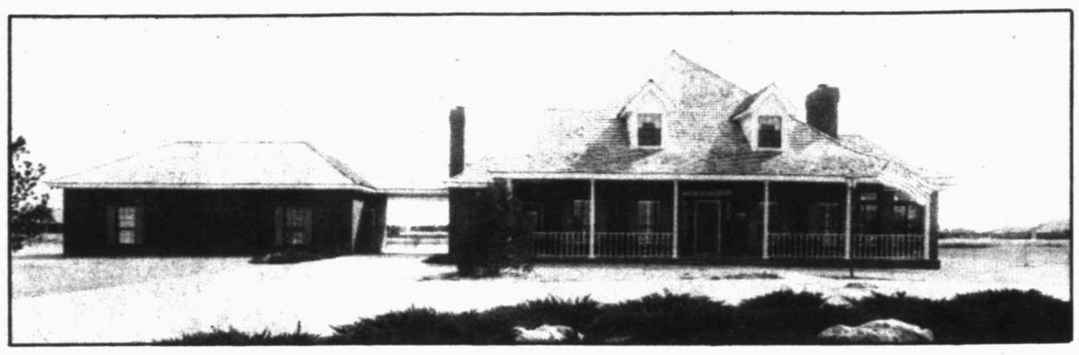
Picture frame paneling, a brick fireplace and built-in cabinets are the amenities of the family room. One door in this room leads to the front porch and another door opens onto a back patio.

Three bedrooms are situated upstairs and each have a personalized decor. One has pale pink walls and the other has taupe colored walls. Both of these rooms have windows in an alcove which overlook the front lawn, spacious closets and burgundy carpeting. The pink room has a private bath. The second bedroom opens onto a full bath which features a two-sink vanity and a bathtub with glass doors.

A wall of windows in the third bedroom provide a great view of the lake on the Green Tree Country Club golf course. This room has a parquet flooring and a spacious closet.

This classic home has more than 3,400 square feet and other amenities include ceiling fans, recessed lighting, custom crown moulding and baseboards, gold bath fixtures, an automatic sprinkler and bubbler system, gas lighting in the back yard. The home is situated on a spacious acre lot and has exquisite landscaping which includes a rose garden.

Dene Kelly Inc., Realtors is offering this home for $282,500.



One cabinet in the kitchen, above, divides this area from the family and breakfast rooms. This design is perfect for gatherings of family and friends. This four bedroom home, left, is situated next to a lake in the Green Tree North subdivision.

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Don Harvey, Realtors adds new marketing tools to better serve clients

"February, despite being the shortest month of the year, proved to be even more active and productive than January," stated Kim Young, director of relocation and business development for Don Harvey, Realtors. "If these two months are any indication of the activity level we should expect for real estate this year, then 1991 should be a great year."

Kim Young

According to Young, our market has been moving toward a much improved balance between supply and demand over the last three years. The total number of homes on the market is now at the lowest level we have seen since the high activity months experienced during the last boom. At the same time, buyer activity has remained strong.

Many first-time buyers have decided the time is right for making the transition from renters to homeowners. Homeowners in Midland decline rather steadily from 1982 through 1987. Then in 1988, our market began to see them firming up. By the end of 1990, the average sales price of homes had increased 4.5 percent over the past three year period. So, with values starting to rise again and interest rates available in the 9 percent range, many felt it was the perfect time to make a commitment.

"Our second major category of buyers has remained our corporate transferees. These are primarily employees in the oil industry being moved to Midland, Unlike the large exodus of employees leaving Midland once the boom had ended, over the last three years, we have seen more transfers into Midland than out," added Young.

The third major category of buyers has been upgrade buyers. Young stated that these are the individuals and families that have decided to sell the home they are in and buy that larger, nicer home they have been wanting. These buyers were very scarce from 1982 until 1987 or 1988. Concerns over job security and the economy, in general, kept most potential upgrade buyers from taking on any additional or larger mortgage commitments.

"With our changing market," said Young, "the picture is certainly improving for our sellers. This is especially true for those who just bought their home within the last two to three years. While a high percentage of the sellers are outbound transferees, the upgrade and discretionary sellers are definitely growing in numbers."

In order to increase our services for our sellers, we have recently added several new marketing tools. In conjunction with Trower Realtors in Odessa, we created the Midland/Odessa home show which aired for the first time yesterday at 11:30 a.m. This is a 30 minute television show during which our agents will feature and showcase homes that are listed with Don Harvey, Realtors. We expect this to be a very effective marketing format for years to come.

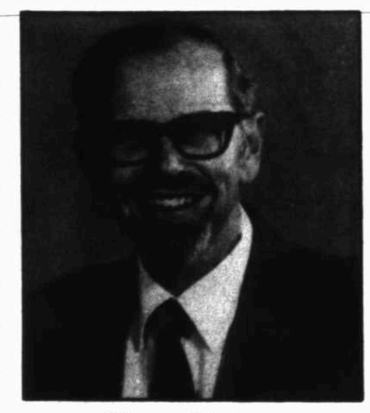
"We also feature our listings in our Relocation Guide, which we provide at no cost to incoming transferees and to company and relocation companies assisting incoming transferees. This book is a comprehensive source book of information and demographics of Midland. But more important for individual sellers, we also include pictures and information on their homes which will then reach prospective buyers all over the country, and some even out of the country. Buyers who have never been to Midland, have a chance to preview actual homes and begin their shopping even before they arrive," explained Young.

Even before the innovation of their latest marketing programs, Don Harvey, Realtors has strongly dominated the real estate market in Midland for about the past 20 years. "Through this last February, for instance, Don Harvey, Realtors had approximately 60 percent more listings sold and closed than their next competitor.

Now, with the new programs just getting underway, we expect those results, for our buyers and sellers, to continue to improve at an even faster rate than we have already known," concluded Young.

Dene Kelly, Realtors awards associate

Harvey Fischer of Dene Kelly Inc., Realtors was named the salesperson of the month for January. Fischer is an "almost" native of Midland. He moved his family, his wife and three children, to Midland in 1965 when he was employed with an oil exploration company as a geophysicist. He later also worked with two independent oil companies until his early retirement in 1985. Due to the fact that the economy was not too inviting for exploration geophysicists and because he was too young to quit working, Fisher decided to begin a second profession.



Harvey Fischer

"I liked Midland and I decided to become a licensed Realtor in a town that I knew very well," stated Fisher. "There have been a few ups and downs over the years, but I'm optimistic about the growth of Midland. I have enjoyed helping people solve their real estate needs, be it buying or selling. I believe availability of housing has decreased, but there is still a good selection to choose from. I'll be only too glad to help find what one may need."

"Dene Kelly Realtors has professionals on staff — we are a full-service realty company with 'short notice' accessibility including weekends and holidays. We hope that if Midlanders have realty needs, that they contact us by calling 687-0595," concluded Fischer.

"Professional service" is what Dene Kelly Inc., Realtors is all about. Call their associates with any questions about the field of real estate.

Langston Realtors talk about...

Selling your home with the 'Advantage'

Langston

Planning to sell your home? If you answered "yes" or "possibly" — or "sometime" — then this column is for you. It's all about what we like to think of as the Langston "ADVANTAGE", that extra marketing edge that puts the "sold" sign in front of your house instead of one down the street.

The most obvious advantage, and probably the most important, is inherent in the size of our firm; Langston Realtors has 83 percent more Realtors than any other company in the city! Therefore, when you list your home with Langstons, you have already gained an important edge: the commitment of Midland's largest sales team. Forty-four Langston Realtors will be working extra hard to sell your property because of company pride, because of enhanced knowledge of the home gained through in-office exposure, and because of the extra financial bonuses Langston agents earn on the sale of our own listings. Plus your home has the cooperative assistance of the other agents in the Multiple Listing Service. Please call me if you would like specific details.

Langston ADVANTAGE #2 is our implementation of extremely creative marketing strategies aimed not only to potential buyers, but to the other MLS sales associates. For instance: featuring your property as the home of the day on MRT's Cityline; scheduling special Open House Sundays and Realtor's Preview Luncheons; enrollment in our innovative Big 5 program that gives a selling agent a one-in-five chance to win $1,000; being a part of in-office contests that send winners to New York, San Francisco, or even London; and receiving the marketing benefits of extra creative advertising, descriptive flyers and direct mail. It is important to understand that the company itselfis equally comitted to the sale of your home and that your listing agent has Langston Realtors' extensive backing, support and assistance all the way from the listing contract to the closing table!

Langston ADVANTAGE #3 is our company's wide ranging relocation contacts, enabling us to reach a large number of incoming transferees. Pictures and details of your home are sent to potential buyers, interesting them in your property even before they make their first home-finding trip to Midland!

Langston ADVANTAGE #4 is simply the prestige of being among the many fine Langston listings! Buyers will immediately recognize that your home is professionally represented by an agent who will encourage the best pricing, presentation, marketing and negotiations to effect a sale. Also, buyers will know that the reputation, creditability and integrity of the city's oldest (25 years!) real estate company stands behind the successful sale of that property.

If you are going to market your home, do call one of our professionals and get the Langston Advantage!

Real estate market shows improvement

Recently released Midland Multiple Listing Service statistics again show continued improvement for the Midland residential real estate market, according to Sandy Scott, president of the Midland Association of Realtors.

"Total residential sales for February 1991 increased by 12 percent over February of 1990, with 106 residential sales reported for February 1991 and 94 residential sales for the same period in 1990. This increase over the previous years figures. New home sales for February 1991 remained the same as February 1990 with eight sales reported during each period, but the average sales price increased from $164,345 in 1990 to $206,950 in 1991."

MIDLAND ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS, INC.
Sales and Listing Statistics

Total Residential Sales	106	94
Existing home sales	98	86
New homes sales	8	8
Residential Listings	829	1,049
Two or less bedrooms	107	136
Three bedrooms	491	637
Four bedrooms	200	243
Five bedrooms	31	33

Note: This representation is based in whole or in part on data supplied by the Midland Association of Realtors, Inc. or its Multiple Listing Service. Neither the Board nor its MLS guarantees or is any way responsible for its accuracy. Any market data maintained by the Board or its MLS necessarily does not include information on listings not published at the request of the seller, listings of brokers who are not members of the Board or MLS, unlisted properties, rental properties, etc.

Listing activity also continued to show improvement with total active residential listings decreasing from 1,049 in February 1990 to 829 in February 1991, a 21 percent decrease. This month three bedroom homes showed the most improvement with active three bedroom listings decreasing by 22 percent.

"These statistics indicate a continued strengthening in our local residential real estate market, a trend we expect to continue with current low interest rates and increased activity through the spring and summer," stated Scott.

Dr. Seuss and Shielah Baggett comfort Jason Waller II during his stay at Kids Klinic at Midland Memorial Hospital.

"I'm especially overwhelmed, quietly and privately. I have minimal understanding of why a child is here. I don't get maudlin and don't get overwhelmed, but I try to be more tuned into what a child is saying and doing."

THE LADY IN PINK

Text by Tina Stewart Photos by Curt Wilcott

Shielah Baggett remembers a time when just her touch made a difference to a child. Looking through the small monitoring window outside the door of the intensive care unit room on the third floor at Midland Memorial Hospital (MMH), she remembers a 3-year-old patient, restless and lonely. The parents were unable to sit with the child because of work obligations.

Normally, Mrs. Baggett's responsibilities as a pink lady volunteer at the hospital exclude the ICU patients, but this was a time when she was needed. In this case, she was allowed to sit with the child, massaging the parts of the little body that weren't bandaged. Since the child suffered from a loss of sight, it was the touching and relaxing voice of Mrs. Baggett that seemed to calm the baby.

"It seemed to be a big help, just to sit with her and massage her body. Human contact for children is so important sometimes," she said.

Although the case was unusual for Mrs. Baggett, the contact and the human warmth she shared was typical. Her service, as referred to by Kim Modisett, director of volunteers at MMH is appropriately titled "care service."

Clad in her pink uniform, she talks about her volunteer work at the hospital. She talks about her various duties when not busy with the children on the third floor and the time she spends at the hospital. She talks about the wonderful people she works with and the enjoyment she experiences from volunteering her time — it's something she's always wanted to do.

And then she talks about the cancer — briefly — the reason she was initially exposed to the pink lady program.

Mrs. Baggett was first diagnosed with cancer in December 1989. She's been in remission for a year now. "When you first find out you have cancer, you're determined to override it, pretend it doesn't exist. But it dominates you for a while," she said. "I feel like I have a personal attachment to the hospital."

At first glance, the third floor pediatric wing doesn't look much different from any other floor at MMH. Despite the physical similarities, however, this wing has its subtle differences. Nintendo games and chocolate milk are high in

HAVE YOU HEARD?

'Spring Fling' coming in April

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Mark your calendars now, ladies, for April 4. That's the date set for the Midland Woman's Club "Spring Fling" fund-raiser, including a style show by Julian Gold and a luncheon.

McKnight-Harrison

Models will include club members, "in clothes you would like to wear," according to the ways and means chairman, Jane (Mrs. Robert) Ward. The event will begin at 11:30 a.m.

If you would like further information or tickets, you are asked to call Mrs. Ward at 683-2266 or Wanda (Mrs. Tom) Scott at 694-8254.

ONE COULD HARDLY think of a better reason for a neighborhood dinner party than the one hosted by Nancy and Paul Rea a recent Sunday at their home.

As noted evangelist Bishop Michael Marshall was scheduled to speak that evening at a Preaching Mission hosted by the First United Methodist Church and sponsored by the Episcopal Churches of the Permian Basin, the Reas invited their neighbors of those two denominations to dine with them before the first of the three evening sessions.

They were joined by their daughter, Lisa Rea; Mary (Mrs. Kingdon) Hughes, Aida Dunlap, Rachel and Oley Hedrick, Laura and Tom Scott and Rosemary and Max Wright and children, Kathleen and Ryan.

The guest speaker, at the age of 37, was the youngest Bishop in the Church of England since the Reformation. He now is Episcopal director of The Anglican Institute in St. Louis, Mo. He is well-known throughout the United States, and worldwide, for his dynamic presentation of the Gospel.

WELL-KNOWN DALLISITE Kim Dawson was the guest speaker for the Green Tree Country Club Ladies Association's February luncheon meeting.

Ms. Dawson is fashion director of the Dallas Apparel Mart and president of Kim Dawson Agency Inc.

The luncheon menu featured Chicken Crepes with Seasoned Rice, Broccoli Spears, Fruit Muffins and Strawberry Shortcake. Wanda (Mrs. Mike) Halverson was hostess for the social hour, which preceded lunch.

Centerpieces of brightly adorned decorator decanters were later awarded as door prizes.

Among the 75 members and guests attending were president Eunice (Mrs. John) Dersch, JoAnn (Mrs. Jack) Jouette, Jan (Mrs. Howard) Tomor, Alma (Mrs. Jack) Conner, Margaret (Mrs. Ron) Sanders, Billie Merle (Mrs. Chester) Farmer and Evelyn (Mrs. Chuck) Davis.

AFTER HONEYMOONING in Cancun, Mexico, Kevin Renfro and his bride, the former Michele Pruett are now at home in Midland. They were married the evening of March 2 in the First Baptist Church and were spirited away to the reception at the Plaza Club by Fred Newman in his Model A Ford.

The reception was hosted by the bride's parents, Sharri and Jim Ketcham.

Pre-nuptial festivities began with a miscellaneous shower at the home of Chris (Mrs. Fred) Newman. Co-hostesses were Freddie Lou (Mrs. William) Brice, Shirley (Mrs. Ronald) Eidson and Holly Newman.

Michele was honored with a luncheon at the home of Dottie (Mrs. Norman) Barker, with Thelma (Mrs. Bill) Bolch as cohostess.

The rehearsal dinner at Golden China Restaurant was hosted by the groom's parents, Wilma and Edward C. Renfro of Cape Girardeau, Mo. It was followed by a lingerie shower given by Rita (Mrs. George) Degenfelder and her daughter, Diane, at their home.

The bride is a sixth grade teacher at Crockett Elementary School and the groom is an engineer with ARCO.

demand and occasionally a red wagon transports patients to and from the only toy room in the building.

The wing basically serves children, teens and young adults and also features Kids Klinic, a place where employees of MMH can bring their children if they are too ill to attend their day care or school. Mrs. Baggett refers to the children on the wing as her "little patients" and refers to the area as "a place little kids come to recover."

She started her volunteer work in January 1990 and to date has logged in 156 volunteer hours. Her position is unique in that she is the only pink lady to work on the pediatric wing. "I came in and asked Kim (Modisett) if there was a position like child care that involved a little T.L.C.," Mrs. Baggett explained. "She said there wasn't and asked if I wanted to create one. I explained what I thought there was a possible need for. I told her that I was patient with children, and crying and fretting didn't bother me at all. I described the position as an extra pair of hands to assist the nurses."

Since she created the position, she has delivered exactly what she's promised to her job.

Joyce Clark, unit coordinator for pediatrics, has worked with Mrs. Baggett since she first started volunteering on the floor. "It's such a relief when she's here. It's such a relief not having to run after kids. She reads to them and gets them juice. She spends time with them when the nurses don't have time," Ms. Clark said. "We sure do miss her when she's not here."

Mrs. Baggett's job description tends to include a variety of catch all duties. One minute she might be reading story books, the next minute she will be retrieving juice and magazines — she rarely knows what she will face on any given day.

Generally upon first entering the patient's room, she will introduce herself and let the child know that she has no needles or medicine. Once that fact is established, then she administers what she knows best — tender loving care.

"I haven't really got a job description, but I facilitate the younger patients in their recovery. I also assist the parent minimally. I offer a cup of coffee, or sit in the room while the parent stretches their legs," she said.

Aside from the physical part of her job, such as searching for the traveling rocking chair or hunting down a special stuffed animal, listening is essential. "In our training as Pink Ladies, we agree to be a listener, not a counselor."

Working from what she calls the "morning census" she is given the name, age and sex of the child, room number and admittance date. "Sometimes it's obvious what a child is in for, but it's not critically important for me to know why a child is in the hospital," she explains. "I really do fly blind. I use generic conversation until a parent or the patient lets me know what they want to talk about. There are obvious advantages to listening to these little people," she said.

Ironically, sometimes the hardest part of her job comes from her quiet listening. She said she feels worse when she suspects the child's injuries were intentional. "I'm especially overwhelmed, quietly and privately. I have minimal understanding of why a child is here. I don't get maudlin and don't get overwhelmed, but I try to be more tuned in to what a child is saying and doing. I try to be tuned in to their behavior."

Although abuse cases tend to haunt Mrs. Baggett longer than others, she said the number of these cases doesn't seem to be critical at MMH.

"In major metropolitan cities, so many newborns or young children are lacking a nurturing caregiver. A lot of big hospitals have trained adult caregivers for the newborn, but Midland doesn't have a large number of infants who are without nurturing parents. This hospital doesn't have that situation," she said pausing. "And I guess we're lucky. It says something about our town, that our town doesn't have to have a group of volunteers trained to help out in this function."

Although she has no children of her own, Mrs. Baggett's enthusiasm for children is overwhelming. "All the children are very courageous and cooperative, especially for being in a strange adult place. They are willing, and if they're not willing they're acting out of fear," she said. "I was in the hospital only for three days — but some little kids have a life sentence. They're admirable little people."

The Pink Ladies and Gents volunteer program is called the Midland Memorial Hospital Auxiliary. The Auxiliary is open to males and females who would like to volunteer their time at the hospital. A junior volunteer program also is open to teens 14 to 18 years old. For more information regarding the auxiliary program call 685-1542. Donations of stuffed animals or toys for the third floor pediatric wing are always appreciated.

Man makes 1.4 billion crayons in work boots

By Jenny Vogt
N.Y. Times News Service

In his last official act as top Crayola crayonmaker, Emerson Moser recently dropped off his old crayon-spattered work boots to his bosses at Binney & Smith Co.

"They said they wanted 'em, so I put 'em in a bag and took them in to them," said Moser, 62, who removed his boots on the last day of his 37-year career with the Easton, Pa., crayonmaker. "Usually," he added with a laugh, "when my work boots get to the point that they were wore out on the soles and the tops were breaking, I consign them to the trash."

The ankle-high boots — his 19th pair as a crayonmaker — will go the way of eight crayons with names such as maize and raw umber: immortalization in the Crayola Hall of Fame. The outmoded crayons were retired from active service in August, replaced by crayons with newfangled names, including wild strawberry and dandelion.

"Some of those colors that retired came into being the same time as I started molding. It was sort of prophetic in nature," Moser said. "They were leaving and so was I."

Moser has made a record 1.4 billion crayons over the years, despite being slightly color blind, an impairment discovered during a physical conducted when he was hired Oct. 12, 1953. The Korean War veteran said he never poured the wrong color in crayon molds because he double checked with co-workers if he had any doubts he had lined up the right color.

"He probably made the crayons I used and you used," said Mark O'Brien, a Binney & Smith spokesman. "He's a really nice guy. We'll miss him."

Although Moser was never able to stay in the lines when he colored as a child, he said he may try again during retirement if he gets tired of traveling and leisure.

"It's just possible that when the weather gets nasty outside, and it's unfit to go out and there's nothing on TV I care to see, that I might just sit down with crayons and see what I can do with a coloring book," he said.

After all, you might say crayons run in his blood — and make that fuchsia blood and not just plain red or scarlet blood. His son has worked in the company mailroom for 14 years; his father-in-law was a watchman for the company many years before he started.

"I describe my job as colorful," said Moser, whose nickname is Moe. "I always knew when I went to work what I was going to be doing as far as molding colors, but I never knew what color I was going to do. Every day was something different in the way of color."

In his 37 years with Binney & Smith, Moser has seen a lot of changes. He saw the crayonmaking process go from hand molding to automated molding. He saw the number of crayons go from 48 to 72. He saw the colors go from plain green to screaming green.

"Sometimes I said 'Gee, I wonder where they got these names,' especially the fluorescent colors," he says. "I guess I stick with the eight primary colors since those are the ones I molded for when I started. Blue and green would be favorites to me."

On his last day on the job, Moser was presented with a set of 72 gold crayons and a 5-foot blue crayon. A photo of him was also unveiled for the Crayola Hall of Fame, a hallway leading from the company's tour area.

Moser will keep the gold crayons as treasured keepsakes — along with a set of the newly retired crayons — and the giant crayon already has a place of honor in his living room, between his and his wife's chairs and facing a television set.

"I think it'll be there a while — until my wife says put it down in the rec room."

DTP vaccine risks studied

N.Y. Times News Service

The findings of a large study linking a common childhood vaccine to permanent brain damage in children have been refuted by Washington state researchers.

The new findings are a reevaluation of the largest published study of children receiving the diphtheria-tetanus-pertussis vaccine.

That report, the 1981 British National Childhood Encephalopathy Study, found that about one in 330,000 children who received the vaccine developed permanent brain damage.

Researchers at the University of Washington School of Medicine, Seattle, found that while the risk of temporary brain illness from the vaccine was between one per 100,000 and one per million, there was no increased risk of permanent brain damage.

The vaccine is intended to protect children from three common childhood diseases: diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis, or whooping cough.

Some children may suffer mild seizures and convulsions, loss of consciousness, and temporary inflammation or swelling of the brain, reported Drs. Kim R. Wentz and Edgar K. Marcuse.

The findings are published in the March issue of the journal Pediatrics.

Concerns over the safety of the vaccine have centered on the pertussis portion, which causes high fever, leading to the other complications, said Dr. George Peter, a chairman with the American Academy of Pediatrics, Elk Grove, Ill.

Two vaccines with a safer pertussis component are now in development, Peter said.

Alarm over possible permanent brain damage in children receiving the vaccine led to numerous studies and reports on its safety.

These concerns prompted the government to establish the National Childhood Vaccine Injury Compensation Fund.

Since 1986, the fund has awarded $82.5 million for 129 injuries or deaths associated with the vaccine, as well as with vaccines against mumps, measles, rubella and polio.

Pertussis is a respiratory infection that can lead to pneumonia or brain damage if untreated, Peter said. Diphtheria, which also affects the lungs, can lead to heart problems. Tetanus, a blood infection commonly caused by cuts, may produce spasms and rigidity.

For son, disabled parents are just 'mommy and daddy'

By Torri Minton
N.Y. Times News Service

OAKLAND, Calif. — Ever so slowly, Neil Jacobson loosens his tie, humming a strip-tease, about to reveal the creation that made his mornings safe.

It's not that he doesn't trust his wife, Denise, loving mother of their son, but would you want her coming at your neck with a hook at 5:30 a.m.? "It's my neck," he says.

Problem was, when he started spending the night at her place in the early dating days, neither could button his tight top shirt button so he could tie on a tie for work. She tried a buttonhook, but her not-so-steady hands made that too dangerous.

So — Jacobson undoes his banker's button-up shirt, a gleam in his eyes — voila. His invention. A zipper under fake buttons.

"I got scared," he says, "and when you get scared, you get creative."

The Jacobsons have been getting creative for years. Both quadriplegic from cerebral palsy, which makes it difficult to control their muscles and speech, they are among the first significantly disabled couples in the San Francisco Bay Area to adopt a child.

Knee-high skid marks flit across the walls of their home, some deftly camouflaged with carpet squares, some not — wheelchair evidence.

A LITTLE BOY named David, 4, rides his trike up and down the ramp to the back door, doing wheelies. There is a sound of crashing and strangling. Denise watches from her motorized wheelchair in the backyard, calm.

David is not disabled. Not that it matters.

"He thinks that when he grows up and becomes a daddy, he'll get a wheelchair, too."

The Jacobsons adopted David at 3 months despite the skeptics.

Their former doctor would not recommend adoption, saying their disabilities could make for a "potentially hazardous situation."

The doctor said, "What if the kid starts talking like you? What if he gets made fun of?" Denise says in her "33⅓ r.p.m." speech.

She was wary, too.

Adopting a disabled child was something Neil, 38, had wanted for years, as he brazenly told her over dinner on their first date. Denise, 40, wasn't so sure, even as the adoption drew close.

She, after all, would be the one caring for him all day while Neil — a bank vice president, one of the lead designers of its electronic banking system, now its main architect, overseeing additions and changes

'He thinks that when he grows up and becomes a daddy, he'll get a wheelchair, too.'

— Denise Jacobson
disabled mother of a non-disabled child

— went off to San Francisco to work.

It's hard enough for her to lift a cup of coffee without spilling. How would she change a diaper?

How would she rescue the child if he got stuck in a tree? Could she stand to see a child go through all the special treatments and the loneliness she faced growing up disabled?

How would it affect her writing career? She was just starting to get published in magazines nobody had ever heard of.

"I thought it was more than I could handle," she says, her voice getting quieter, watching for David.

DENISE IS turning what happened, from growing up disabled to adopting a child they thought was disabled, into a book, "The Question of David."

More than 100 pages into it, and looking for a publisher, she already has signed a contract giving a Hollywood producer first crack at making it into a movie.

It is almost 3 p.m. Time to pick up David. Denise, a vision in a turquoise turtleneck and sea-green pants, hums out the door and rolls down the ramp and across the sidewalk, into the broad lawn-lined street, through the gutter, up the sidewalk, and through two parking lots, clocking a healthy five miles per hour.

Neil drives, but she doesn't. Too impatient, she says, nearly rolling over someone's foot.

She stops at the bottom of some steps. She doesn't walk up, but she could, with help. She stands up, wobbly and not exactly straight, to take off her coat.

David and his teacher emerge. "I have strong arms," he says. "How did he get so dirty?" Denise says.

He climbs in her lap. They roll and bump away home.

A Honda backs onto the sidewalk. "Yikes!" says David, eating M&Ms, his blond hair flying.

"I see a rock," she says. "I see a tree," he says.

David has adapted in surprising ways.

By the time he was 7 months old, when he wanted to be picked up he would crawl over to Denise's wheelchair, grab the frame and pull himself up to almost standing between her legs so she could grab under his arms. If he hurt himself, he'd crawl over instead of waiting for her to come to him.

They put tabs on his sleeper-zippers so they could be pulled more easily.

As for safety pins on diapers, "Are you kidding?" Denise says with a laugh. They used disposable ones.

EVEN THEN, the procedure could take up to 40 minutes. By the time it was over, they both needed a nap.

Now David wears elastic-waist pants. His shoes have Velcro fasteners, and his coats have zippers or snaps.

The Jacobsons meant to adopt a disabled child. The doctors thought David had cerebral palsy. His muscle tone was stiff when he was born and tests showed part of his brain was slightly swollen.

The Jacobsons found out differently when David started crawling. Doctors have noted only a "slight awkwardness" that could come from his young mother's pregnancy trauma. She fell, they were told, and hemorrhaged at eight months. She gave up the baby four months later because she wasn't ready to be a mother.

"I was scared," says Neil, his arm draped over the armrest of Denise's wheelchair. "My whole life I thought about when I would bring up a disabled kid. All of a sudden here is this 4-year-old running around the house."

He wondered how he'd introduce his son to sports. "I didn't know anything about sports."

What Neil worries about now is how David is going to handle curiosity about his "very normal, abnormal" parents.

"I think about how he's going to feel when the kids make fun of his mommy and daddy."

At the same time, "We live in a middle-class house, we own a car, we belong to a synagogue — we're boring."

Author outlines courting methods

By D.L. Stewart
N.Y. Times News Service

If your days are dreary, your nights are lonely and the only thing sitting on the couch next to you every weekend is your channel changer, Paul Hartunian knows why.

"It's fear," Hartunian says. "The leading problem with people unhappily single is fear. Fear of approaching the other person. Fear of going over and saying 'Hello.' Fear of asking for a date."

For fearful singles everywhere, Hartunian prescribes his book, "How to Be Outrageously Successful With the Opposite Sex" (Ultimate Secrets; Montclair, N.J.). For $20, plus $4 for priority shipping and handling, it promises to "solve every problem you've ever had . . . meeting, dating or marrying the man or woman of your dreams."

In a phone interview from his home in Cedar Grove, N.J., Hartunian is as modest as his book's title and written blurb.

"I know I could take anybody on the face of the Earth and make them outrageously successful with the opposite sex," he declares.

Hartunian, who is 41 and describes himself as "ecstatically single," put together his no-risk guide to unmarried happiness through personal experience and interviews with other persons who have outrageously successful social lives.

"The key to this book was to present ways to meet people where you don't have to have any courage," he says. "I was able to find people who were incredibly successful in getting around the fear problem.

"We've all seen these guys who are as unattractive as a rock walking around with gorgeous women. When I asked them how they did it, most of them said, 'I asked her.' But once in a while I would get people who had ingenious methods. And they were just innundated with dates."

One ingenious method, Hartunian says, was offered by a New Jersey woman in her 30s.

"She was a fantastic cook who also wanted to make some money and meet men. So she combined all three by offering a course called 'Cooking for the Single Male.' She put a two-line ad in a local paper and charged $55 for five classes.

"She was innundated with responses from guys who were willing to pay to be with her. She made money, she did what she liked doing and she was surrounded by single men."

Hartunian says he interviewed "hundreds" of people with similarly outrageous success stories.

"There was a guy from the Midwest in his 20s. He had a thousand flyers printed up for $30. At the top, he put in huge black letters, 'Free Dating Service.' Underneath that he wrote, 'If you'll fill out these questions and send us a photograph, we'll do the best we can to find someone who is compatible.'

"He put them up on bulletin boards around his area and he was innundated with replies.

"Who was the free dating service? He was. He took the responses from men and gave them to his female friends. He kept the responses from women he wanted and gave the rest to his male friends. No money changed hands and everybody was happy."

Hartunian also advocates the creative use of personal ads as a way of ensuring ego damage control.

"I think personal ads are phenomenal. The problem is that 99 percent of people don't know how to use them. Your ad has to stand out, somehow.

"I'll give you some examples. I happen to love red-haired women. So I put in an ad that started, 'Redheads really turn me on.' In four days I had 31 redheads to choose from. Another time I wrote, 'I want a partner, not just a date.' I had 99 women to choose from."

For those who prefer to personally inspect the merchandise rather than shop by mail, Hartunian's book lists "76 great places to meet your next date."

For men, great place No. 1 is community theater, which is where Hartunian met his current girlfriend, "the lovely Lori."

For women, Hartunian recommends the free seminars frequently advertised for information on real estate, small business or investment.

Gain success with opposite sex

N.Y. Times News Service

If you're too busy to read Paul Hartunian entire book, here are a few of his tips on how to be outrageously successful with the opposite sex:

The single person's greatest enemy is fear — of approaching someone or trying another method.

The best pick up line: Say anything as long as it's not offensive. What time is it? Nice dress. Which way is 18th Street? There are millions of single people out there saying "I'm afraid to take the first step. But if you do, I'll keep the conversation going."

The easiest way to ruin a relationship in the first four minutes is to start talking about the string of losers you've been dating.

Be imaginative on a first date. Instead of movies and/or dinner, suggest something like the ballet or baseball. If your date doesn't like any of the things you like, it's a good idea to find that out right away.

Men should not go overboard on the first date with a limo, roses, champagne, etc. Go underboard. You might risk looking cheap, but if she's putting a dollar sign on the first date, why would you want to be involved with her?

Don't be too open too soon. Don't be secretive, either, but let things out slowly. People are very impressed if they find things out about you that you didn't tell them . . . naturally.

Orange juice loses nutrition with flavor

Copley News Service

USDA researchers say if orange juice tastes flat, it's probably flat in nutrition since it loses its vitamin C as it loses flavor. Maximum holding time for orange juice is three weeks after fresh squeezing, four to six weeks in plastic bottles, two months in waxed cardboard cartons, six months in soft cartons and one year in frozen concentrated form. Once opened, OJ stays fresh for about one week.

Chilled lobsters tend to flip less

ORONO, Maine (AP) — A University of Maine researcher steamed some lobsters on racks, put others in warm water brought slowly to a boil, and hypnotized others before tossing them in boiling water to find out what makes them wriggle the least.

His conclusion: Chill them on ice before dropping them in boiling water.

And graduate student Michael B. Loughlin says those who get the creeps watching lobsters do their death dance can rest assured the lobsters don't have enough of a brain to feel pain.

Loughlin's experiment was prompted by inquiries from supermarket chains about how to cook lobsters humanely, said Professor Robert C. Bayer, Loughlin's adviser in the university's animal, veterinary and aquatic sciences department.

In his research, Loughlin turned his attention to keeping lobster flipping to a minimum so guilt-ridden cooks can feel better.

With clipboard, pen, stopwatch and video camera, Loughlin volunteered his services as chef to anyone on campus who was preparing a lobster dinner.

He observed 200 lobsters being cooked. Lobsters kept on ice for 15 minutes and then dropped into boiling water tended to wriggle for no more than 30 seconds, and some didn't flip at all, Loughlin said.

DEAR ABBY

Mother receives birthday gift in her honor

By Abigail Van Buren

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: May I tell you about my wonderful birthday gift? Several years ago, I told my children that their father and I no longer wanted them to give us birthday, anniversary or Christmas gifts. Instead, they should do something in our honor for charity, the community, their church, etc. We explained that we already have everything we need or want.

Our daughter, who is a single working parent, and her daughters — Kelly, age 10, and Jenny, age 7 — decided to give me a concert at their home in honor of my 72nd birthday.

They made tickets that were collected at the door. They even made programs for the evening's entertainment.

First, Kelly opened with "Happy Birthday" on the trumpet. Then she played the theme from "Top Gun" on the piano. Next, Jenny sang "Memories" from "Cats," and for the big finish, our daughter played "Rhapsody in Blue" on the piano, and believe me, it sounded as good as Oscar Levant with the Paul Whiteman Orchestra.

In these times when you hear only negative things about children, I thought you might enjoy something happy and uplifting. — EDNA M. PAULSON, WICHITA

DEAR EDNA: Thanks for the upper. You taught your daughter proper values — and she in turn passed that valuable gift along to her daughters. Congratulations on your birthday, Edna, and may you celebrate many more.

DEAR ABBY: Someone told me he had recently read in your column that if a man or woman has lost a family member in the war, that person is automatically exempt from active duty if a war should break out.

Please clarify this in your column. I need this information immediately in writing. — BALTIMORE MOM

DEAR BALTIMORE MOM: I published the information in November 1990. But for anyone who might have missed it who now needs it:

According to the Public Affairs Office of the Department of the Army, if a member of the armed services has lost an immediate family member (father, mother, brother, sister or child) in a DESIGNATED hostile-fire or imminent-danger area (the loss may be due to death, missing in action, or from a 100 percent physical or mental disability), the service member can apply for exemption. It is not "automatic."

The service member initiates action by contacting his/her company commander. For an immediate family member to make application, a request must be made in writing to: HQDA, DAPC-EPO-C, Alexandria, Va. 22331-0400. And the service member may waive a request initiated by an immediate family member and still serve in the hostile-fire area.

DEAR ABBY: I am an 88-year-old woman, and although I have read your column for years, this is my first time to write you a letter, but now I must.

On a cold Friday evening before Christmas, I went grocery shopping. I took a pie out of the freezer, then I carried it to the cashier and asked her how much it was because it wasn't marked and it was the only one of its kind in the freezer. After I learned the price, I put the pie back in the freezer because I thought I should not be eating too many sweets.

As I turned and started up the aisle, a tall, elderly gentleman approached me and handed me a folded $20 bill. He smiled and said, "Now, please go back and get that pie." Then he walked down the aisle and out the door!

I was so shocked, I couldn't utter a word. He must have been near the checkout stand and heard me ask how much the pie was, and when he saw me put it back in the freezer he thought I couldn't afford to buy it.

Abby, that's one of the nicest things that has ever happened to me. — A LITTLE OLD LADY IN LITTLE ROCK

DEAR LADY: And yours is one of the nicest letters I've ever received. Today, when we hear so much about man's inhumanity to man, learning about an anonymous kindness does the heart good. Thank you for sharing it with me so that I may share it with others.

NOT VERY CONFIDENTIAL: From The Wall Street Journal: The "daffynition" of biodegradable is "safe sacks."

Most teen-agers do not know the facts about drugs, AIDS and how to prevent unwanted pregnancy. It's all in Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

AT WIT'S END

Vacationing requires some risk taking

By Erma Bombeck

Bombeck

First lady Barbara Bush flew a commercial airline to Indianapolis a few weeks ago. Her courage made headlines. While the war has made some people apprehensive about travel, to others it represents a challenge.

Vacationers fall into two categories: those who go to relax and have a good time and those with a need to suffer.

I have three basic needs on a vacation: safe drinking water that runs out of a tap in my room, the right current for my hair dryer, and someone who speaks Liz Claiborne fluently.

My husband is the one who seeks adventure. His philosophy is that if you want clean sheets, hot food and good health, stay home.

He contends there are no guarantees that things on a vacation are going to be perfect.

How could we possibly have known that when our plane landed on a small island in the South Pacific, the volcano was at Stage II and road crews were building exit roads as we arrived?

California was supposed to be a fun vacation. Who would have guessed that the earth would have more tremors than our rental car?

As for Saddam Hussein marching into Kuwait when we were in Istanbul, it probably was nothing personal. Just bad timing.

I have seen brochures on my husband's desk that caused me to hyperventilate. One offered the ultimate in adventure ... a rhino reconnaissance safari for 16 days in Zimbabwe where you walk on foot among cheetahs, leopards, elephants and zebras. (It didn't say how long.)

Another pamphlet promised white-water rafting directly UNDER the spectacular Victoria Falls, with a side trip in a small aircraft that flew over a great gorge to photograph the rainbows shining in the mist.

I saw a clipping on his desk the other day (I swear this on my mother's tears) for Chernobyl: The Dead City.

For 25 rubles (about $45 a person per day), you can visit the site of the world's worst nuclear accident. The fee includes a thorough radiological scan before and after the visit. If the dosimeter doesn't like what it finds, the price also includes a trip to the local treatment center. It doesn't say anything about a box lunch.

I shall continue to fly and be ever aware of danger: eating airline food, checking luggage through to my destination, and getting knocked senseless by an accordion restroom door.

But a holiday at a radioactive burial site just doesn't do it for me. Somehow, I don't see Joe Montana running off the football field and someone yelling, "Hey, Joe, what are you gonna do now?" and having him say, "I'm going to Chernobyl!"

Erma Bombeck's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Researchers seek cause of plant disease

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Some soybean varieties bred to fight root rot are more vulnerable to a mysterious, lethal disease: sudden death syndrome, researchers say.

But little is understood about the link between the gene for resistance to phytophthora root rot and susceptibility to SDS, said Paul Gibson, a plant and soil scientist at Southern Illinois University.

"We came upon it entirely by accident, but the link just stood out," said Gibson, one of a group of scientists studying the disease.

"It is a very elusive disease. It comes and goes, and it is not always where you expect it to be," said Keith Smith, director of research for the American Soybean Association in St. Louis.

SDS, thought to be triggered by a fungus, attacks healthy soybean plants through their roots as beans are beginning to mature in the pods. There is no known cure.

Gibson was testing an old Williams variety of soybean against the newer Williams 82 with resistance to phytophthora root rot to compare disease damage.

His team found other varieties with root-rot resistance also were more likely to be affected by SDS. The problem likely is not the gene for resistance but "what else you're dragging in with it," said Gibson.

The next challenge will be to determine what genetic material is responsible for the increased susceptibility to SDS. The task then will be to find a way to transfer only the phytophthora resistance gene to new soybean varieties.

Smith said there are no reliable national figures on the amount of damage done by sudden death syndrome. Gibson estimated that up to 100,000 acres of Illinois' 9 million-acre soybean crop might be stricken, with a yield loss of up to 60 percent.

The American Soybean Association says soybeans are the third most valuable U.S. crop, behind corn and hay, worth $10.6 billion according to 1989 U.S. Department of Agriculture figures.

FUR RESTYLE SHOWING

Irma L. Gros completes a silk painting.

Judith R. Shamp wears one of her silk-screened jackets.

Midland artist Irma L. Gros works in an old medium that is becoming new again.

Mrs. Gros is a silk painter. "Silk painting goes back to ancient times with the Chinese," she said. "They used natural dyes. What I'm doing ... was popularized by the French in the last 30 years, and has been (further) revived in the last 10 years."

Although her art is called silk painting, it isn't really done with paints, Mrs. Gros said. "What I'm doing is directly dying the silk. I use a brush, but you can use just about anything. I'm directly dying the fabric with my own hand — not dipping it or anything like that — and using silk for a canvas."

With silk as her canvas and dyes as her paints, Mrs. Gros creates designs that are graceful, colorful and even whimsical — and that can either be worn or hung on the wall.

"I've had people use them as tablecloths, had them framed, they wear them, use them as banners — any way you can use a fabric," you can use her creations, she said. "I'm also trying to get into clothing (making) —

Silken treasures

Most people think of paintings as art that is displayed on walls or in museums — and most of the time they are right.

But Judith R. Shamp's art isn't made to hang on walls. Her designs are painted on silk and made into fashions to be worn.

"I start with a piece of white silk, and end up with a garment," she said.

Ms. Shamp, who moved to Midland nine months ago from Indianapolis, has been a designer in silk painting for seven years, but she has been working with fabric for many years. In fact, working with fabric seems to run in her family. "My mother always sewed," she said. "My aunts did beautiful quilting, and my grandmother did beautiful handwork.

"I've been sewing since I was 10 years old," when she joined 4-H. When she got older, "I taught sewing to little girls in my late years of 4-H."

Studying fabrics in college seemed only natural. Ms. Shamp earned a bachelor of arts degree in clothing and textiles, with a minor in art, from San Jose State University. While living in Indianapolis, she took silk screening courses at the Art League and worked with a mentor who "had a cottage industry doing hand-painted silk," Ms. Shamp said.

Through the years, Ms. Shamp has maintained her interest in working with fabric — "It's sort of my life," she said — but her favorite medium is silk.

"I've always had a love affair with silk," she said. "I knew a family who lived in the Orient when I was a child. They would send raw silk to my mother. They sent a kimono to me that I cherish still.

"I always equate silk with the Orient. Silk is the king of fabrics," she said, adding that synthetic fabrics can't provide the elegance of drape and color that silk does.

"It's (silk's) luxuriousness appeals to me," Ms. Shamp said. "Silk brings a little glamour to life."

Her hand-painted silk designs involve a process of mostly jackets, kimonos, things that would flow, a one-size-fits-all kind of thing — something wearable. People might spend $100 on a jacket before they would spend $100 on a painting."

Some of her designs have been inspired by the drawings of her young children, including one ballerina banner that her daughter helped her create, but most of Mrs. Gros' designs are from "ideas out of my head ... I don't plan anything. My work is so spontaneous, usually I just start in one corner and go."

And even when she makes a mistake in her design, it isn't really a mistake. "If I make a mistake, I can incorporate it into the design," she said. "If I do make a mistake, it's not a mistake anymore because I can fix it. I'm always learning from my mistakes."

Mrs. Gros is an artist, both by natural ability and by education. She attended the University of Texas at Austin, where she majored in interior design. Her classes included painting and architecture, and while participating in the school's work-study program she was in charge of taking care of the school's supply of fabrics. "I've always loved fabrics," she said. "I remember sitting in this tiny room just stuffed with fabrics and fabric books, and just dreaming."

MRS. GROS said she has been involved in several crafts for many years, including painting T-shirts and making evening purses, but she didn't discover the art of silk painting until about four years ago. "My husband is from Germany," she said, " and we go there about every year. (Four years ago) I was over there for a few months with my daughter, and it was a few days before we were scheduled to go home, and I had taken a walk. I walked in front of this gallery, and there was this painting hanging in the window — it was a red flower, a poppy."

Mrs. Gros said this first view of modern silk painting stunned her with its beauty. "I'd never seen silk painting before except in books or museums — never a modern piece."

She decided she wanted to learn how to paint on silk. Her sister-in-law's aunt was learning the process, so Mrs. Gros received her first lessons from her. "She brought out some silk and four bottles of paint and some cotton balls," she said. "It's stretched-out silk, you have to stretch it tight or it sags. All I did was dab some color on there and ... it (the lesson) took maybe half an hour.

"I was hooked," she said.

Since that first lesson in silk painting, Mrs. Gros has developed and perfected her technique, and made it her own. "When I first started out, I used to buy a bolt of silk and then cut it and hand roll the hem. That handrolling the hem took a long time. Once I found suppliers, I was able to buy finished pieces."

BUT SILK painting is still a very long process, she said. First, the silk must be washed before it is painted, to get the sizing out. Then it must be stretched very tightly and painted. Then, Mrs. Gros said, "I let it dry, normally overnight, before I steam set (the dye into the silk). Steam setting bonds the dye to the fabric. I steam it for 90 minutes, and it's colorfast. Then I do a wash-out to wash out the excess dye. There's a lot of preparation, both before and after."

But for Mrs. Gros, the hard work is worth the result. "I do men's silk ties and silk jewelry and clay jewelry too," she said. "I do lots of stuff, but my passion is painting on silk."

Besides being her passion, silk painting also is versatile, she said. "I can go into a gallery and sell my work as paintings, or I can go into Skibell's and sell it as clothing."

Her works have been shown at Gallery 1114; Celebration of the Arts; Twelve by Twelve, a Christmas gallery staffed by 12 local artists; trunk shows at local department stores; Christmas bazaars; and Asbury United Methodist Church's annual Fall Festival. "Last year I did a Brown Bag Luncheon at the Museum (of the Southwest)," she said. This year, "I'm hoping to get into Septemberfest," the annual event sponsored by the museum. A display of her works will be shown at this year's Celebration of the Arts.

These shows and sales are allowing Mrs. Gros to create her art and have a business at the same time. "It's not a business that I work at every day," she said, but it is a necessary part of her life. "I have my family, and a family is work — I mean, I could spend the whole day cleaning house but I don't get any reward from that. I have to make time for my work because if I don't, I get real frustrated."

EVEN ENJOYABLE work has parts that are tedious. "There's a lot of preparation involved" in silk painting, Mrs. Gros said. "To me, success will be if I can have somebody do all the other stuff, and I can just paint."I

But, she said, being able to work as an artist is its own reward. "As long as I can paint," she said, "whether its a jacket or on somebody's wall, I'm just happy I can paint."

Petroleum jelly helps dry skin problems

NEW YORK (AP) — You don't need fancy lotions to keep dry skin at bay.

The best moisturizer is petroleum jelly, says Dr. Guy F. Webster, assistant professor of dermatology at Thomas Jefferson University in Philadelphia. And it isn't too greasy — if you use just a dab. Not as good but less greasy, he says, is moisturizing cream.

In winter, a combination of factors contribute to dry skin. The air is drier because of low humidity, and there is less natural moisture because you don't sweat as much.

"Skin is the barrier which keeps water inside the body," says Webster. "The natural oils and fats enable the skin to effectively retain moisture. Many people believe thorough and repeated hand washing is the cure for dry skin, but that is completely wrong. When you wash your hands a lot, you wash much of the natural oils away, and you are left with dry skin."

These oils can be replaced simply by putting more on. The best time to moisturize the skin is after showering and drying off. That is when the skin has absorbed the most water, and adding oils will trap the water in.

Webster does not recommend bath oil because you end up wiping most of it away when you dry off. "It also leads to a slippery bathtub, which can be very dangerous. I've seen people break hips and crack skulls from slipping in an oily tub."

Famous model shares fashion, beauty tips

By Karol Stonger
Associated Press

She works out at least three times a week and has her skin deep-cleansed on a regular basis.

She says she likes short hair, "but it's not me," and prefers neutrals in clothes because "color takes confidence."

Cindy Crawford, the darling of fashion photographers and designers as mega-model of the '90s, Revlon's leading lady, JH Collectibles' consultant, works as hard as anyone to look her best.

It's just that, unlike most, her best is beautiful. "I can get ready for any function in seven minutes — black tie or anything," Cindy says, referring to how long it takes to do her makeup.

The 24-year-old model from De Kalb, Ill., has been strutting the runways and gracing magazine covers worldwide since she was 17. Long enough to learn a thing or two about enhancing the female facade, an art all are expected to master but few are taught.

Take makeup, for example. The most important element, she says, is foundation. But most of it is too pink and tends to end at the chin. "Women don't take the time to tip their head back and blend it into the neck. And they use too much white under the eye."

She says that while the '60s look is hyped as hot for fashion this spring, it will be modified for the face, falling short of "false eyelashes and heavy eyeliner, at least for day."

One '60s look that's right, though, is filled-in eyebrows. "We're paying more attention to the eyebrows, to tweezing and shaping them. You can either fill them in with an eyebrow pencil or with shadow, using a short-haired, stiff brush."

Crawford, with long brown hair and dark brown eyes, likes eyeshadow to match. "Browns are easy to blend," she says.

She also likes brown in her wardrobe, though on this day she wears a classic navy wool jacket and pants, Hermes silk print blouse and brown suede loafers. It is a day set aside to promote Revlon's Unforgettable fragrance and a line of sheer cosmetics for spring.

"I love loafers." She also likes ballet slippers and fabric shoes. "I'll wear a black turtleneck with jeans, then fabric shoes for accent."

Cowboy boots are another favorite, combined with jeans, tee-shirt and "a beautiful belt" to personalize a pervasive look. Another personal touch? "Add a nice cashmere cardigan and a beautiful Hermes scarf, and they instantly make it chic."

She has dumped the boyfriend look — Armani men's jackets — for more feminine fashions. "I like the softer silhouette of women's jackets, with a little more fit at the waist."

What did she pick up on while modeling the spring ready-to-wear collections? Calvin Klein's neutrals, and "you know who else? Ralph Lauren's collection. I loved it. I thought it was beautiful."

Though hemlines were nearly micro on the runway, Cindy says length depends on style. "I don't like the jacket longer than the skirt. From the back it looks like you don't have a skirt on."

She says hair length is sort of like hemlines: whatever works.

JUDITH: Unique designs created

taking a white piece of silk, painting it, then constructing a garment from the painted piece.

"I start with white silk," she said, "and hang it on two sawhorses. I use shinsi sticks to make the material taut, and I paint on the silk. Sometimes it gets a little tricky because it (silk) can start moving."

The paints she uses have to be mixed and activated, and have a limited number of hours of use. The fabric itself has to undergo numerous washings, both before and after it is painted, and after painting it goes through a heat-setting process.

Industry growth has resulted in such innovations as biodegradable dye, which makes her work even more personally rewarding.

Because she processes each piece of silk individually, the garments she makes are one-of-a-kind. But then, she said, so are her clients.

"I still enjoy working one-on-one with clients," she said. "I like to be able to combine design and custom sewing."

If a client brings her a specific pattern to use, "I often suggest innovative changes to make the garment more individualized. I try to inject some of the wearer's personality into the garment — and some of mine since I'm doing the creating."

Designing and hand-painting silks for clothing is not Ms. Shamp's only field of expertise. She also works with silk screen, stamping, mono-print, applique, stitchery embellishment, piecework and quilting.

"I also do wall hangings. They are usually hand-painted on linen or heavy cotton," Ms. Shamp said.

She works out of her own studio, and with her skills she has been able to combine business with pleasure.

"I don't have any long-term goals," she said. "I know in business you are supposed to be goal-oriented, but at this point I'm not goal-oriented. I have an 'empty nest' (because her children are grown and on their own), and I have all this free time and it's like I'm loose in a candy store."

And creating wearable art is what she prefers to spend much of her time doing.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Protect fruit trees from freezing

By Deborah A. Benge

Benge

As fruit trees reach their most beautiful, full bloom, they also are at their most vulnerable state to freezing temperatures. The fruit bud in full bloom is easily killed by freezing temperatures, and in the Permian Basin, this is a very real possibility. Although it is impossible to control the weather, with a few modifications, a backyeard fruit crop can be saved.

Almond, apricot and peach buds are especially susceptible to late spring freezes, but with proper variety selection, you could delay bloom time slightly. For the Permian Basin, you would want to choose fruit varieties that have a 900-1000 hours of chilling requirement. A low chill fruit (600 hours) will bloom as soon as its chilling requirements have been met, making it a sure candidate for fruit kill. A variety with higher than 1000 chilling hours requirement will not have its chilling requirement met and will not be healthy and will die an early death.

Planting sites can have some bearing on whether or not the tree bears fruit. Planting on a slope will allow cold air to draft to lower areas. The same is true in a backyard. It is best not to plant next to a fence or wall where cold air is attracted. Planting next to a dark masonry wall facing south or west can absorb heat during the day and release that heat at night to keep flower buds from freezing. Planting on the north side of a structure where the tree stays cool and shaded longer can help delay bloom until late spring freezes have past.

Dwarf and semi-dwarf trees can be covered when a freeze is expected. A tarp, blanket or plastic will help protect the tree from cold. Hanging a light bulb or string of Christmas lights in the tree along with the blanket can keep trees warm enough to protect it from freezing weather.

Black plastic used temporarily as a mulch beneath trees will absorb solar heat during the day and release that heat at night. Black plastic tubs filled with water and placed under the trees can absorb heat from the sun and release it at night. Also, the soil under and surrounding the tree can be watered to absorb heat in the day and release it at night. These techniques will help, but covering during the evening can guarantee your fruit will escape freezes.

When a freeze is expected, trees can be sprinkled with water as temperatures approach freezing to protect flower buds. Ice forming on the flower buds releases heat as water changes from a liquid to a solid. This can protect the buds from freezing. But, with this method, the sprinkling must continue until the ice has melted from the flower bud. A method like this is for the short duration freeze and the dedicated gardener.

Freezing temperatures aren't bad for all fruit trees. Apples and pears tend to bloom over a long period setting big fruit crops. A late spring freeze can easily be followed by more fruit blooms. This will actually thin the crop, saving you from having to.

These are small things that you can do that will help your crop if it is in full bloom when the freeze comes. They don't always work, but they can make just a few degrees difference and that few degrees can make or break your fruit crop.

Don't miss the Permian Basin Landscape School, 7-9:30 p.m. March 12-14. There will be a $15 per household fee and you need to pre-register by Monday by contacting the Ector County Extension Service at 1010 E. 8th Street, Odessa 79761 or calling 687-1351 or (915) 335-3071 for more information.

Many designers' lines for spring blossom with colorful dresses

By Trish Donnally
N.Y. Times News Service

Spring fashions are pretty, polished and energized with color and pattern. The dress returns in all its glory. Hemlines stay shockingly short, and many styles are daringly bare.

The miles of legs revealed for spring are balanced with demure details such as broad-brimmed hats, white or colored gloves, and a plethora of pearls. These ladylike touches take us back to the heydays of Audrey Hepburn, Babe Paley and Jackie O. The strong '60s spirit so prevalent in spring fashions can be interpreted another way, too. Think about Andre Courreges and his clean-lined designs, or Emilio Pucci and his explosive prints.

The athletic look is also a strong force in spring fashions. This influence surfaced in fall clothing as designers showed expensive clothes inspired by fishing, hiking, biking and climbing. This spring, watch for wetsuit-style jackets and swimsuit-detailed dresses. Jasper Conran builds his collection around the crisscross straps found on swimsuits, which he uses on the backs of dresses.

As for dresses, they're the hottest items of the year. Beneath a jacket, they work in the office. Solo, they make elegant dinner attire. You'll find figure-forgiving silhouettes — shifts, A-lines, the trapeze, the chemise plus the shirtwaist. And, you'll find a slew of shoulder-baring styles, strapless or spaghetti-strap styles. These naturally look best on very young women.

COLOR IS CRUCIAL for looking current. As Kay Thompson, playing the fashion editor Miss Prescott in "Funny Face," says, "Banish the black, burn the blue and bury the beige. From now on girls, think pink."

Pink is this season's leading color. You'll find fashions in fuchsia, geranium, cyclamen, strawberry, peach and pearl pink. But if pink isn't a shade that flatters your complexion, don't worry. The spring palette ranges from high voltage brights to pale pastels. And black worn with white or white worn alone are also prevalent.

In fact, the large selection of white evening wear available should help in your search for something to wear to the upcoming Black and White Ball.

Almost any color is safe this season. Just forget about wearing head-to-toe desert sand shades like we did last spring. We see enough of those in the news.

Even spring shoes come in beautiful colors such as lemon, lime, cherry, tangerine and turquoise. Many are covered in exciting floral, gingham or striped patterns to match your ensemble. Delicate T-strap shoes look newest. In his Anne Klein collection, Louis Dell'Olio shows red, white and black T-straps with a matching, color-blocked dress and jacket ensemble.

Mondrian color-blocking, fresh pastel gingham checks, bold hot house florals, polka dots from penny-size to pancakes, Op Art, psychedelic and Pucci prints are among the many patterns you'll find. This is the most print-happy season we've seen in years.

IF COPYING IS considered a compliment, Pucci must be ecstatic these days. Wild, Pucci-esque prints are popping up everywhere. Units has Pucci-inspired shirts and skirts; Victor Costa makes mad, multicolor purses with a Pucci punch; Julie Duroche adds shine to a bolero with sequins in a Pucci pattern; Bonnie August swirls a Pucci-style print on leotards; and even Liberty adds Pucci-like psychedelic designs to umbrellas.

When legs are the focal point, the look is lean. Bike shorts, leggings and pencil-slim pants prevail.

Watch for suit jackets to be adorned with big, chunky jeweled buttons. Karl Lagerfeld shows graduated jeweled buttons down the front of one jacket that span from large near the collar to much smaller toward the waist. Franco Moschino decorates a face-powder pink jacket with three plastic blossom buttons down the front and four on the pockets of the jacket. He also uses cloudy cream floral buttons on a cream organza blouse.

Sometimes, these large buttons are a mere front for a zipper beneath. Zip-front jackets are prevalent for spring.

The zip-front scuba jacket, for example, is one of the trendiest looks of the season. Lagerfeld, who calls his look "city surfer," shows sequin scuba jackets in the Chanel collection in red, royal, yellow or white banded in black and worn with bicycle shorts. Donna Karan's double-faced wool and Geoffrey Beene's jersey scuba jackets, both paired with short snug skirts, are more suited for day.

En Amie Study Club to meet

Staff Report

En Amie Study Club will have a luncheon meeting 11:30 a.m. Wednesday at Midland Woman's Club.

Marilyn Bassinger, guest speaker, will reveiw Irving Stone's novel, "The Depths of Glory," based on the life of artist Emile Pisarro.

Mrs. Bassinger is director of The Art Institute for the Permian Basin in Odessa, and was previously education and public programs director for the Museum of the Southwest.

Accessories, trim update fashions

By Carrie Donovan
N.Y. Times News Service

Details do make the difference. One look and you can tell whether a jacket is this season's, or a leftover that is perfectly nice but not as snappy.

The updating is in the trimmings like buttons, pipings, pockets, collars and lapels. The point is to mix strong colors. If it's this spring's stock, the banding down the front closing, on the jacket hem and cuffs or around the buttonholes will definitely be a contrasting color. The collar, pockets or cuffs probably will be, too.

The buttons themselves will seem to pop. First they'll be bigger than any you've seen before. Many of them look like giant earrings studded with fake gemstones while others, usually made of brilliant-tone plastic, are shaped like flowers. When a jacket with such telling details is teamed with a short skirt of yet another vibrant color, the suit is very right now.

The necklaces, bracelets, handbags or shoes also make the difference. For instance, if a jacket has a jewel neckline, try fastening a big bright silk flower to the side of your pearl choker.

Bluebonnet Festival scheduled for April

Staff Report

The 30th annual Bluebonnet Festival will be April 6-7 and 13-14. The Bluebonnet Trail is a self-guided arts and crafts trail that winds through seven Hill Country communities during the first weeks of April.

Arts and crafts shows will be at Georgetown, Marble Falls, Llano, Burnet, Lampasas, Kingsland and Buchanan Dam. Wildflower shows will be at Buchanan Dam and Marble Falls. All shows are free of charge and feature paintings in all media. More than 500 artists will be represented.

A free brochure on the Bluebonnet Trail is available by calling the Highland Lakes Tourist Association at (512) 793-6666 or writing Highland Lakes Tourist Association, P.O. Box 294, Buchanan Dam, Texas, 78609.

Also to help travelers see the best wildfloweres during the blooming season, the Association has set up a Wildflower Hotline from mid-March through May available by contacting the Association.

BUSINESS DIGEST

Manpower survey

The springtime job picture promises to be a bright one for the Midland area. According to Manpower, Inc.'s employment outlook survey results for the second quarter of 1991, 40 percent of area firms interviewed responded with intentions to increase their staffs while only seven percent reported planned personnel reduction.

The spring projections for the April/May/June period also indicate 50 percent planned to stay at current workforce levels. The remaining three percent were not sure of their staffing needs.

Free audio disks

(NYT) — Coca-Cola Co. and Sony Corp. announced last week that they planned to give away 5.6 million miniature compact audio disks with 6-packs and 12-packs of Coca-Cola beverages.

Coke declined to say how large an advertising and promotion budget it had set for this year's promotion, scheduled to begin in May, but it is expected to total in the tens of millions of dollars.

Sony, which is providing the music for the disks, has a leading music subsidiary with the Columbia and Epic labels.

Coke and Sony also plan to give away nearly 100 million certificates for tape cassettes. Each certificate is redeemable with $1 for postage and handling.

Fast printer

(NYT) — SAN FRANCISCO — Hewlett-Packard Co. has introduced its fastest laser printer for desktop computing. The HP LaserJet IIISi prints 17 pages a minute and has 300 dot-per-inch resolution. It has a list price of $5,495 in the United States.

The HP LaserJet IIISi is designed for sharing among multiple users and can be connected directly to a local area network using an optional network-printer interface card. The printer is designed to produce up to 50,000 pages a month.

Electric car

(NYT) — General Motors Corp. will build its first mass-produced electric car in Lansing, Mich., the automaker said, dashing another possibility for reviving GM's assembly plant in the Los Angeles suburb of Van Nuys.

The 44-year-old California facility was a candidate to make the Impact electric car, once Van Nuys production of Pontiac Firebirds and Chevrolet Camaros is discontinued in 1992 and moved to Ste. Therese, Quebec.

The plant, which employs about 3,200 workers, does not have a new line to replace the two cars.

New laws to assist disabled

■ New rules will forbid employers to discriminate against disabled workers.

N.Y. Times News Service

The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission this week issued rules that require businesses with 25 or more workers to modify their buildings and operations to offer "reasonable accommodation" to disabled employees.

Starting in July, employers will be prohibited from discriminating against the disabled in hiring, firing, promotion and training. They also must make "reasonable accommodations" for disabled workers, including raising desks or providing special software so that they can do their jobs.

The EEOC rules, published Thursday in the Federal Register, come on the heels of regulations put forward last week by the Department of Justice on how businesses should treat disabled customers.

Both sets of rules implement the Americans with Disabilities Act, passed last May, which prohibits discrimination against an estimated 43 million Americans with some degree of disability, including AIDS, cancer, epilepsy and heart disease.

Some business leaders assailed the new regulations as dangerously vague. "Businesses will face court battles and heavy legal fees unless the U.S. Justice Department revises (the) new regulations," said John Sloan, president of the National Federation of Independent Business, a Washington group representing 500,000 companies.

But disability rights advocates hailed the changes as long overdue. "The rules are absolutely, urgently necessary," said Marilyn Golden, a policy analyst for Berkeley's Disability Rights Education and Defense Fund.

California is expected to be one of the states least affected by the new rules. Beginning in 1971, California revised building codes to require new and remodeled buildings to provide access to the disabled, including wheelchair-wide doors and rest rooms equipped with special toilets and safety rails. The state's Fair Housing and Employment Act also was amended in 1973 to add safeguards for the disabled.

However, in one key change under the new Justice Department rules, older buildings — those that are neither new nor remodeled — will be subject to disability access requirements, unless the cost of making alterations would pose an undue burden. Previously, "all the thousands of restaurants, retail stores and hotels that already exist were under no requirements, unless they remodelled," Golden said.

The heaviest up-front costs likely will be for "anyone who has not already ramped, increased or widened their doors, or put in automatic doors," said Wendy Lechner, an NFIB analyst.

In another key change, the EEOC rules extend civil rights to the mentally impaired, preventing employers from discriminating against those with such problems as dyslexia, schizophrenia or learning disabilities. That may boost hiring of the disabled, as well as protection for those who need therapy or have undergone mental illness and want to get back to work.

Other changes would be primarily service-oriented.

Midland family cooks up new food business

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

The road to success is paved with tales of homegrown ventures that started part time in the garage and grew — like Apple Computers — into corporate giants. Texas Pecan Products of 707 S. Midkiff in Midland is looking to become one of those paving stones.

When Chuck Haynie retired from the Midland Fire Department, he had intended to devote his new found hours to his favorite hobbies of bird hunting and cooking, but somewhere along the way his cooking hobby turned to work and it now threatens to be a successful food company with national sales. As Haynie puts it, the hobby has now become fulltime fun. "This is really a fun business."

Today the former fire captain spends his days developing new products, shipping orders to all points of the U.S., attending food shows, purchasing materials, ingredients and packaging, designing labels, making deals with distributers and marketing firms and all the things that look like big business. It is a far cry from the day Haynie and his wife Sharon bottled a few jars of pecan honey butter and took them around to local art and craft shows to sell.

"When we went to an arts and crafts show in Arizona and sold $1,500 worth of Pecan Honey Butter, we thought we had arrived. We never expected to top that again. But you can't stop progress. At our last show we took over $10,000 in orders."

Haynie says he is looking for his small company to top $500,000 in annual sales in the next five years. "I am told by the marketing experts that we will top that amount a lot sooner than we expect," he said.

He says the business at this point is strictly a family business, that the entire family, along with some hired help, pitches in to fill orders during the busy Christmas season.

Presently the main products of Texas Pecan Products are flavored pecans, gift baskets, honey butter and pecan fudge. Honey butters, especially the pecan honey butter, are the big sellers. "But we also make a real mean fudge," he said.

Exploration gets vote of confidence

■ A capital corporation has favored Permian Basin exploration and a Midland company with a $35 million investment.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

At a time when wildcatting has been all but written off in the Permian Basin and it seemed the only drilling dollars to be found were for development wells, the announcement last week of a new exploration venture devoted mostly to exploratory wells comes as welcome news.

When Prudential Capital Corp. announced that it would invest up to $35 million in exploratory drilling prospects with Collins & Ware, Inc., it not only greased the exploration wheels of the Midland oil firm but sent a signal of confidence in the Permian Basin.

Under terms of the agreement Prudential Capital Corp. will become a sole limited partner with Collins & Ware and could participate in the drilling of as many as 20 wells for the year.

Not only will most of the wells be exploratory, but Ted Collins, president of Collins & Ware says that, to his knowledge, it is the first time Prudential has bought into such a sizable exploration project in the Permian Basin.

"Prudential saw what we were chasing and liked it and decided to join us as a partner," said Collins. He applauded Prudential for its willingness to invest in exploration in the Permian Basin. "There are lots of programs around that will invest in development and close-in drilling, but few that have confidence in exploration."

Collins said he was honored that Prudential Capital had confidence in Collins & Ware and also that the company had confidence in the Permian Basin.

"Prudential is a very astute oil and gas investor with an energy investment portfolio in most oil and gas regions. They have firms that they explore with in the Gulf Coast, Rocky Mountains and other oil producing regions and normally they only select one company per region."

He said Prudential called them because they had earlier had a positive experience with a geologist working for Collins & Ware. "We were totally surprised and pleasantly surprised," said Collins. He noted that the investment meant the company would not have to go out and sell each drilling deal individually, but would be able to concentrate on developing more prospects.

He said the agreement with Prudential was a joint venture in which both Collins & Ware and Prudential would contribute a share of the exploration funds. Other details of the arrangement, however, were not revealed.

Collins said most of the wells to be drilled in the agreement would be 7-15,000 ft. Strawn, Atoka and Morrow wells in southeast New Mexico. Prudential will become a sole limited partner in the wells.

He said Prudential had already signed on to participate in six prospects and could participate in up to 20 for the year. Two of the six are already drilling.

Prudential Capital Corp., a subsidiary of The Prudential insurance company, is headquartered in Newark, N.J. and has regional offices in Dallas, Houston and nine other U.S. cities. The company has a team of geologists that review prospects on an individual basis.

Job assistance available for returning veterans

■ As troops return home from the Persian Gulf, the Texas Employment Commission stands ready to help veterans and reservists and National Guard members return to civilian jobs.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

American troops have begun heading home from the Persian Gulf, home to family and friends and, for the thousands of reservists and National Guard members who were sent over there, home to their regular jobs.

Early in this nation's history, Congress realized the value of strong National Guard and reserve units and provided for the protection of members' civilian jobs and their families.

Jerry Mills, veteran employment representative in the Midland office of the Texas Employment Commission reports that he has had no problems with local businesses taking back their reservist employees. "In fact, I had one just recently who returned from duty with the Air Force who reapplied for his old job and got it."

According to Mills, the Midland office has a roll of 300 active veterans all the time.

He added that "I think everyone is more attuned to the problems veterans have due to the Iraqi war. I think right now employers and the average citizen are both more informed on what's taking place with veterans."

Under the Veterans' Reemployment Rights law, a person leaving a civilian law for active duty with the armed forces, either voluntarily or involuntarily, is entitled to return to that job or one with the same rank, pay and seniority after discharge or release from active duty upon meeting five basic eligibility criteria.

■ The veteran must hold an "other than temporary" civilian job that need not be permanent.

■ He or she must leave the civilian job to go on active duty.

■ He or she can't remain on active duty longer than four years, unless additional time — up to an additional year — is at the request of and for the convenience of the federal government.

■ He or she must be discharged or released from active duty "under honorable conditions."

■ He or she must apply for the former job within 90 days after discharge or release from active duty.

Not only is the returning reservist entitled to his former job, but the Supreme Court has ruled that he is entitled to any promotions and raises he would have normally received had he not been called to active duty, according to Mills. Called the "Escalator Principle," it was later ratified by Congress. Of course, Mills points out, if the employer can show the reservist would have been downgraded or terminated under normal circumstances, the reservist may be entitled to the lower job or to severance pay.

The reservist cannot be fired without good cause for six months after turning to work, and if the reservist returns disabled and unable to perform his regular job, he must be offered one he can perform as close as possible to prior pay, rank and seniority.

China may lose opportunity to become major oil supplier

BEIJING (AP) — Nearly four decades ago, a man saw a strange liquid bubbling from the sand of the remote Taklamakan Desert. He carried some of it to the nearest village and learned he had found oil.

His story has become part of the folklore in a frontier region once regarded as a wasteland. Since then, oil has been seeping from the ground in many places in the Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region of northwestern China, but little of it has been tapped.

Geological studies offer the alluring prospect that the Tarim Basin in Xinjiang may hold some of the world's largest unexplored oil reserves. The prospect is especially attractive because of the threat to supplies of Middle Eastern oil.

So far, however, only test wells have been drilled at Tarim and poor transportation has kept all but a trickle of oil from reaching refineries.

The promise of bountiful supplies is offset by political indecision over whether to accelerate development of new fields or try to get more oil from aging wells whose production has declined.

"China is in a position to be a net gainer because of the Iraq situation, but they're not really gaining right now," a Western diplomat said, on condition of anonymity. "The whole industry seems stymied by bureaucratic paralysis."

China now is fifth in world oil production, but may become a net importer by the end of the decade unless it develops the western fields and taps more offshore reserves. It produced nearly 1 billion barrels of oil in 1990.

Officials say 70 percent to 80 percent of current supplies comes from eastern fields that began producing in the 1960s and are running low.

"It's very serious for the Chinese oil industry to find new reserves," said Wu Xunduo, director of the state-controlled China National Offshore Oil Corp., speaking in English. "We cannot work very slow."

Richard Conroy, a U.N. official who oversees oil projects, said competing interests within China make it difficult to respond quickly to developments that affect oil markets or to ensure steady domestic supplies.

"Since you don't make money from exploration, that becomes a poor cousin to refinery projects that bring in cash," said Conroy, assistant resident representative for the U.N. Development Program in China.

"You need to put the money in development, but it's difficult to make that happen when you have these rigid hierarchies of politicians and ministries under tremendous pressure in a state-controlled economy."

Officials disagree on whether to allow participation by foreign companies, which would provide badly needed capital and technology but demand a share of the oil. Many conservative officials oppose letting foreigners share China's natural wealth.

International companies eagerly pursued offshore exploration when China opened a few areas to foreign participation, and some predicted major discoveries in the South China Sea. Only a few found deposits large enough for commercial production.

On land, foreigners are allowed to drill only in 10 provinces and one autonomous region of southern China. None are believed to have large oil reserves.

Foreign companies are limited to equipment sales and technical assistance in the Tarim Basin and East China Sea, the most promising areas.

"We don't know what's really there because the government only tells us what it wants us to know," a representative of a U.S. oil company said, on condition of anonymity.

The Tarim Basin, 1,750 miles west of Beijing, is an arid region of more than 200,000 square miles. Sand dunes rise to 2,000 feet and temperatures can surpass 120 degrees Fahrenheit.

Chinese officials estimate the Tarim Basin contains more than 120 billion barrels of oil, about one-seventh of the country's reserves. A Western oil company representative in Beijing said only part of it might be recoverable.

According to foreign experts, a 2,200-mile pipeline costing up to $8 billion would have to be built to bring oil out in commercial quantities.

Oil beneath the East China Sea is more accessible, but territorial disputes with Japan and Taiwan pose obstacles to development. Chinese officials refuse to reveal their estimates of deposits in the East China Sea.

Conroy said he sees problems if China decides to exclude foreign companies.

"They did it at Daqing and we hear a lot about that when the Chinese talk about self-reliance," he said, referring to China's top-producing oil field in the northeast. China opened Daqing in the isolationist 1960s and used it as a model of what the country could accomplish on its own.

Diamond Shamrock plans 270-mile crude pipeline

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Diamond Shamrock will construct a 270-mile crude oil pipeline from Wichita Falls to its refinery north of Dumas, company officials said.

At Wichita Falls, the pipeline will have the capability to access both the Arco and Texaco pipelines, which bring crude oil from the Texas Gulf Coast into the Mid-Continent region.

It also will be able to receive crude oil from the Basin Pipeline, which transports crude oil from major West Texas oil fields.

"The new pipeline is part of Diamond Shamrock's long-term strategy to provide the McKee refinery with a crude oil supply well into the next century," company senior vice president Bob Mehall said Thursday.

New Mexico yields big completion

Staff Report

HOUSTON — Santa Fe Energy Partners, L.P. and Harvey E. Yates Co. announced a significant Wolfcamp completion in Lea County, New Mexico. The Kachina "8" Federal No. 1 is producing 440 barrels of oil and 550 thousand cubic feet of gas per day from Wolfcamp perforations between 11,308 to 11,348 feet. The well is located in section 8, T18S, R33E. Flow rates during production testing of the zone reached 768 barrels of oil and 680 thousand cubic feet of gas per day through a 16/64 inch choke. Two additional wolfcamp zones at at least one shallower zone in the Bone Spring formation also appear to be oil bearing.

Santa Fe Energy Partners of Houston, and Harvey E. Yates Co. of Roswell, New Mexico each hold a 50 percent working interest in the well and the 920 acres in the prospect area for which Santa Fe Energy Partners is the operator. Further drilling on the prospect is anticipated during 1991.

Santa Fe Energy Partners, L.P. is a publicly traded limited partnership affiliated with Santa Fe Energy Resources, Inc., a large Houston-based independent oil and gas company. The partnership units are traded on the New York Stock Exchange under the symbol SFP.

Post war spending expected

N.Y. Times News Service

With the end of the Middle East war in sight, once-pessimistic agency executives are almost giddy, anticipating a healthy surge in advertising spending.

"This gives us a big psychological boost," said Edward Meyer, the chairman and president of Grey Advertising.

The prospect of a long war had brought gloom to Madison Avenue. Leading advertisers like General Motors, Chrysler and some airlines had delayed or stopped spending, and many agency executives predicted flat spending for the year, at best.

Agency executives had feared that several hundred million dollars' worth of advertising would be lost. But many said Wednesday that they now expect the end of the conflict to set off a significant increase in advertising.

"Spending should quickly bounce back to the levels we had originally anticipated for this year," said Robert Coen, a senior vice president and the director of forecasting at McCann-Erickson. Coen had forecast before the war that ad spending would increase by almost 5 percent in 1991.

Coen said local retail advertising should increase almost immediately. National advertising will come back more slowly, he said, but should reach normal levels by the second quarter. Coen said the categories that should rebound the fastest were the oil industry, travel and tourism.

Trans World Airlines, which had suspended all advertising, is now revising its plans. "As soon as we know where we're going to be flying, I would like to step up the advertising," said Sheldon J. Kravitz, vice president for advertising and leisure marketing at TWA. The airline has curtailed many of its flights to Europe and the Middle East.

Of course, the euphoria on Madison Avenue will be tempered by the poor economy. Jack Connors, the president and chief executive of Hill, Holiday, Connors, Cosmopulos, said he was only cautiously optimistic. "The economy was in bad shape before the war," he said.

RESERVES: Rules protect

(From 1G)

The employer is not obligated to pay the reservist who is on active duty because the military pays according to rank. However, a recent survey indicates a number of companies have continued pay, coordinating it with military pay.

Nor is the employer required to continue insurance on the reservist, though he is required to restore those benefits when the reservist returns to work.

The employer most hold a reservist's job for four years after call-up and must take him back as soon as he wants to return. If the company is sold or placed in bankruptcy, the reservist must still be taken back.

For their part, reservists are still obligated to pay their debts, though interest rates on credit cards, car payments, mortgage payments and certain other loans can be reduced to 6 percent under a 1940 Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act, and some companies will negotiate debt extensions. Any halt or reduction in child support payments will have to be negotiated on a case-by-case basis.

Mills said any returning veteran having problems with his employer should contact him first.

Returning veterans with questions can call Mills at 682-9421. In addition, the Labor Department has established a toll-free hotline. The number is 1-800-442-2VET. It is staffed between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. and has a 24-hour message recording capability.

FOOD: Midland family tastes success

(From 1G)

The company sells to gourmet and gift stores throughout the U.S. under its own label, but also does private label manufacturing for some firms in the east.

A sixth generation Texan, Haynie says there is a built-in loyalty to Texas products in the Southwest, but in the East there is not much motivation to buy Texas products. He notes that he has always loved to cook, and says he learned many of the Texas-style recipes from his grandmother. He uses three giant fudge kettles to prepare both the fudge and the honey butters. The honey butters call for honey, butter and flavorings. "You have to bring the flavor up very slowly," said Haynie as he sampled a new peach-flavored honey butter.

SCOTT BURNS

'Desert Storm' has wrought sea of changes in world

By Scott Burns

Now that the war is over it is safe to go back to bickering.

Burns

We can argue over the existence, depth, and duration of recessions. We can debate the size of the federal deficit. We can speculate on the cost of cleaning up our financial system. We can ruminate on when people will start spending and whether they are saving enough or borrowing too much.

What will we conclude? Not much. But it doesn't matter. More important: the context in which this debate occurs has changed dramatically. Desert Storm has changed the world.

The changes, psychological and material, have created new possibilities for America and for the world.

Hyperbole?

Not hardly.

Here are some of the changes:

A NEW AMERICAN PRIDE. Some commentators have said that this war has erased the cloud of doubt that has hung over the American psyche since Vietnam. It is a lot more than that. At age 50, I can recall no event that has evoked such caring, determination, and unity in our entire society. Whatever our very well publicized problems, the last six months have restored our sense of pride, purpose and legitimacy. This is priceless.

A RENEWED DOLLAR. Maybe not "almighty," but the best currency to have when push comes to shove. The Deutsche mark may be strong, the Japanese yen may be ubiquitous, and either currency may be good for a trade now and then, but when something important is at stake — like your life — the only currency backed by well kept promises is the U.S. dollar. Dollars we have sent abroad for consumer products will be coming back to build domestic factories, buy American products, and tour a magnificent country.

A MORE CONSERVATIVE CONGRESS. On January 11, when Congress voted on authorizing the use of force against Iraq, 47 senators and 189 representatives voted against the use of force. What is distressing about the vote is that our elected representatives, faced with such a decision, voted on party lines. All but 3 (!) of the 234 votes against the use of force were cast by Democrats.

While we should be proud to live in a country where dissent and discussion are relentless, you can bet that lots of people are going to question the judgment of the legislators who voted against what the broad public supported and wanted: the use of force against Saddam Hussein.

THE MORTGAGING OF WORLD OIL RESERVES. The cost of the war — for Kuwait, for Saudia Arabia, for Iraq — has virtually guaranteed that we are now facing a relatively long term future of low energy prices. While Saudia Arabia and Kuwait have reserves for nearly a hundred years, the interest of both nations is closer now to the interest of other OPEC nations in maximizing current production and income. Add the financial condition of the Soviet Union, its reserves, and its need to increase production for both domestic needs and exports and the case for low long term energy pricing gets even stronger.

CONCENTRATION ON VALUE ADDED, NOT SPECULATION. If the destruction of the Iraqi war machine required the mortgaging of Middle East oil reserves, it also means an end to long period of commodity speculation that has distracted producers around the world from their true task: creating value through imagination, effort, and skill.

A NEW PERSPECTIVE ON DOMESTIC PROBLEMS. Throughout the buildup for the war we were regaled with stories about its potential expense. The highest estimate was some $77 billion. This amount was to be offset by pledges from coalition partners totalling about $49 billion.

The worst case cost of the war was about $28 billion. No small sum, to be sure, but only HALF the sum recently requested by the Resolution Trust Corp and about the same as what was requested to back up the FDIC. While the actual net cost of the war remains a speculation, we can be sure that the cost pales against the pressure of rising domestic spending. The real "Mother of All Battles," a meaningful budget, remains to be fought.

SHORT TERM DOWNWARD PRESSURE ON INTEREST RATES. While there is much debate about long term financing for the Middle East, the immediate fact is that the working capital involved in holding world oil inventories is dropping with oil prices, freeing billions in financial capital. This is temporary, to be sure, but it will add to pressure for lower domestic rates.

That, in turn, might work to end the terrifying plunge in residential real estate values that is turning homeowners into prisoners and causing a kind of national gridlock. Turn THAT corner and we've got a whole new ballgame.

MEETINGS

Means San Andres Unit topic for SPE group

Stiles

Loren Stiles of Exxon Co. U.S.A. will be the guest speaker at Thursday's meeting of the Reservoir Study Group of the Permian Basin section, Society of Petroleum Engineers. The meeting will be at the American Legion Hall beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Stiles will speak on "Reservoir Management Aspects of the Means San Andres Unit." He is a senior technical advisor with Exxon's southwestern division. A graduate of Texas A&M University, he has been involved in the waterflooding of many major fields in the Permian Basin and Rocky Mountains since the early 1960s. The past few years, he has been active in enhanced oil recovery, mostly CO2-miscible projects.

Cost of the luncheon is $7 per person.

Desk & Derrick members to hear about careers

The Midland Desk and Derrick Club will meet Thursday at the Petroleum Club beginning at 6 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Paula Bledsoe, owner of Preferred Personnel, a recruiting and career development company. Her topic will be "Mapping Your Career" and will explain the career opportunities in the petroleum industry.

TSPE president-elect to discuss professionalism

The Permian Basin section, Society of Petroleum Engineers will meet March 19 at Ranchland Hills Country Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Guest speaker will be Dave Dorchester, president-elect of the Texas Society of Professional Engineers, who will speak on "Engineering Professionalism in the Oil Industry." He will discuss the need for registration in the industry and how to achieve it as well as the ethical side to engineering professionalism as it relates to today's world.

Reservations should be made by Friday by calling 686-7329.

Basin Landmen to hold 'Executive Night'

The Permian Basin Landmen's Association will hold "Executive Night" Tuesday at Greentree Country Club beginning with social hour at 6 p.m. and dinner at 7 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Steve Cassiani, vice president with Exxon Corp.

Reservations can be made by calling 684-5411.

Trans-Pecos SPE plans Wednesday meeting

Alan D. Peters with The Penetrators will be the guest speaker at Wednesday's meeting of the Trans-Pecos section, Society of Petroleum Engineers. The meeting will be at The Club at Mission Dorado beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Peters will speak on "The Lance Formation Penetration Tool."

Cost of the luncheon is $12 per person.

GRI assistant director vists local gas producers

The March meeting of the Natural Gas Society of the Permian Basin will be Tuesday at the Midland Country Club beginning at 11:45 a.m.

Guest speaker will be Kent F. Perry, assistant director of gas supply with the Gas Research Institute, Chicago. His topic will be "GRI's Natural Gas Supply Research and Development Program."

Reservations can be made by calling 683-5561.

Tax software topic for micro computer users

The Midland Micro Computer Users Association will meet Tuesday at the Midland Room on the second floor of First City Texas, Tower Two from 7:30 to 9 p.m.

The topic will be "Tax Accounting Software for PC Computers" and demonstrations of the most popular programs will be given.

Information is available by calling 686-9691.

SPE group to discuss 'MWD' and 'LWD' uses

The Drilling Study Group of the Permian Basin section, Society of Petroleum Engineers will meet Wednesday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Presentations will be made by Dwight Dickerson of Teleco Oilfield Services and Jeff Wilson of Geoservices concerning the latest technology in "MWD" and "LWD" uses in mud, foam and air. A panel discussion will follow.

Cost of the meeting is $10, which includes lunch, and reservations can be made by calling 686-7329.

WTGS hosts University of Michigan professor

Dr. Kyger C. Lohmann, professor of geology at the University of Michigan, will be the guest speaker at Tuesday's meeting of the West Texas Geological Society. The meeting will be at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Dr. Lohmann will speak on "Permian Stratigraphy and Petroleum Secrets of the Wylie and Apache Mountains, West Texas."

Cost of the luncheon is $7 per person and reservations should be made by calling the WTGS office at 683-1573 by Monday.

Success long road for trailer king

By Duncan Mansfield

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Jim Clayton spent part of his boyhood days plowing cotton on the washed-away land of "the poorest farm, I'm sure, in the state of Tennessee." When work was done, he'd retire to the family cabin, which for years had no plumbing or electricity.

Through those tough times in rural Finger, Tenn., Clayton recalled one consistent wish: "God, please. I want the Grand Ole Opry. I want to be a star." After all, country music singer Eddy Arnold came from his hometown.

Clayton never made it to the Nashville stage. But he became a hit on the trailer park circuit — and eventually on Wall Street — as chairman and majority owner of Clayton Homes Inc., one of the country's largest mobile home companies.

Clayton Homes builds and sells mobile homes, provides financing for customers and manages trailer parks.

Business has been brisk. Corporate profits totaled $19.8 million on $260 million in revenue in 1990, up 22 percent from $16.2 million in earnings and revenue of $241.8 million the previous year.

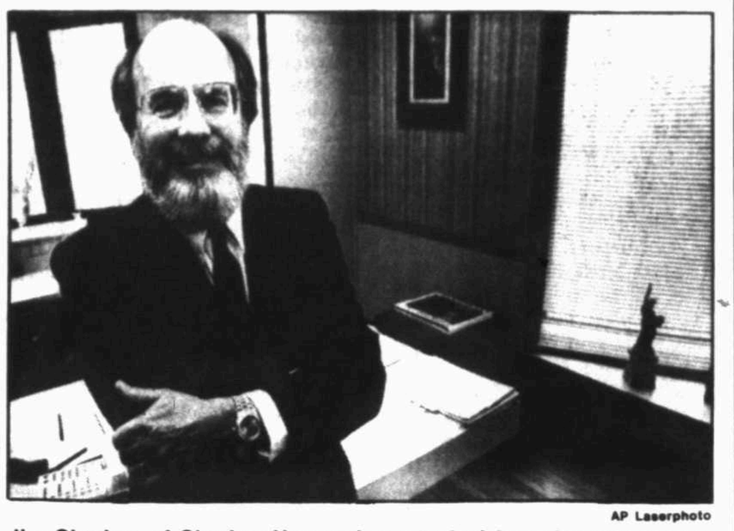
Such growth has made Clayton Homes a darling on Wall Street. The company's stock value grew 96 percent last year, ranking it as the seventh-best performing share on the New York Stock Exchange.

For Clayton, that has meant the airplanes, motor homes and other trappings of wealth he once prayed for as a child now are his.

"I was really lucky in so many ways," the bearded 56-year-old Clayton said of his journey from rural America to corporate America.

His road to success was long and winding, filled with lots of jobs, career shifts and time spent in school. It started after he turned 18 and left home to seek his fortunes in Memphis.

"The day I got to Memphis, I was offered through the unemployment office two jobs. One was welding that paid a little more. The other was in the radio department of Memphis Light, Gas and Water Division," he recalled.



AP Laserphoto

Jim Clayton of Clayton Homes Inc. started from humble beginnings and tried many careers before finding success as a mobile home magnate.

Clayton said he took the job in the radio department because he wanted to use his experience from a $5-a-month radio repair correspondence course he'd taken while still at home.

His father thought the course, which had been advertised in a Superman comic book, was a waste. But Clayton said he was fascinated by electronics and microphones and all the other equipment related to his love of "pickin' and singin'."

The job at the power company wasn't much. It amounted to cleaning up old communications-type radios.

"(But) you do one little something and it leads to something else," Clayton said.

In fact, the power company had a cooperative program that let Clayton work and go to college. He obtained a first-class radio license in 14 months and completed several classes at Memphis State University.

Memphis Light offered to send Clayton to Knoxville to work toward an engineering degree at the University of Tennessee. He accepted, but never returned to Memphis.

Within a week of getting to Knoxville, Clayton found an on-air job at a local radio station. He also went on to get an engineering degree in 1957. (He got a law degree in 1964 from the University of Tennessee, but has never practiced law.)

Then Clayton switched courses again by starting a used car lot.

By 1966, after years of financial ups and downs, Clayton expanded into mobile homes.

"It was like cars. You sell them from a lot and you finance them. And you are dealing with a lot of the same people," he said.

As the number of mobile home dealerships expanded, Clayton branched into manufacturing. "It was tough. We didn't make any money on manufacturing for five years," he recalled.

Feds crack down on open oil tanks

VICTORIA, Texas (AP) — Open oil tanks and pits are a fatal attraction for migratory birds crossing South Texas and are coming under a federal task force's scrutiny.

A dead bird found by authorities in an open oil tank is virtually an automatic conviction, said Tom Healey, special agent for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The federal Migratory Bird Treaty Act does not require open pits and tanks to be covered, but it makes lease holders responsible for the deaths of most birds and other wildlife falling into the reservoirs.

Federal agents had inspected 264 sites by Tuesday night. Of those, 76 were not covered. Four dead birds were found in Victoria County tanks and one bird carcass was found in a Wharton County tank.

Authorities say more than 500,000 birds migrating across the oil fields of Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Kansas die each year when they mistake an open oil tank or pit for a pond of refreshing water.

As soon as their wing tips brush the oily surface, they are doomed. They cannot escape the oil, which destroys the insulating effect of their feathers. They may struggle, but soon will drown in the tank's oil, brine or caustic solution.

"All it takes is a cover or a simple net," Healey told the Victoria Advocate. "We're not here to just write tickets, we're here to solve a problem."

Healey is directing a task force of 12 federal agents, nine state game wardens and an airplane pilot. The group has inspected open oil tanks and pits in Victoria, Wharton, DeWitt, Jackson, Gonzales and Caldwell counties.

Five agents from the Texas Railroad Commission are joining the task force as it extends its inspection to include Calhoun County and possibly Goliad and Lavaca counties.

Bird carcasses netted this week will be sent to a forensic specialist who will identify the species. Each bird listed under the Migratory Bird Treaty Act may result in fines of up to $5,000 for individuals and up to $10,000 for corporations.

Inventors finds need for skimmer

SMACKOVER, Ark. (AP) — When a Lion Oil pipeline in Smackover developed a leak in January, Lion officials looked for a quick, safe and efficient way to clean it up.

They didn't have to look farther than Spearsville, La., where Calvin Hollis was ready with his Hollis Oil Skimmer, a device he and a colleague invented when Hollis found previous equipment didn't do the job fast enough or efficiently enough.

In a recent interview, Hollis said the idea to build the machine came three years ago after he and other workers chased oil on the Red River for three months and 10 miles. He said he concluded after that experience that "there had to be a better way."

Hollis is owner of Hollis Manufacturing Co., which services the oil field industry. He said the machine wasn't designed to resemble any other device, but was based on discovering a need and building to meet the need.

After much trial and error, Hollis and co-inventor Leon Taylor registered the design with the U.S. Patent Office. Currently, the skimmer is under evaluation by the U.S. Office of Energy-Related Inventions and has passed the initial stage of qualifying as an energy-related device.

Since its completion, the skimmer has been in the testing process. Hollis said four or five companies have used the skimmer in cleanup efforts and he has worked 25 jobs with it.

The skimmer works by using a mechanical lift system that brings the oil and water onto the skimmer itself. An oil separation bar separates the oil from the water, and the oil runs into a collection pan. The oil and water are not mixed together and neither are debris or trash. A filter screen traps the debris while the oil and water move on.

Eight to 10 barrels of oil are collected in the holding tank and then a vacuum truck takes the oil from the tank into the truck.

The water runs back out through a wire filter.

According to Hollis, the skimmer can load about 500 barrels of oil an hour, while a vacuum truck by itself can load only 240 barrels in an hour.

He said that, with the skimmer, companies can retain 80 to 85 percent of the oil while vacuum trucks usually pick up 15 percent oil and 85 percent water.

According to Hollis, the skimmer is easily transported to the job site and takes about an hour to set up. Outrigger legs stabilize the machine in the water, and it floats.

The machine itself is not difficult to use. Taylor said workers with an oil company could be trained to use the machine in 10 to 15 minutes.

Hollis said he's not sure whether he wants to manufacture the skimmer himself or sell the rights to a manufacturing company. He plans to test the market with the product to determine its value.

Now, he said, he's working on a new machine that could handle 1,500 barrels of oil per hour.

The project "is far enough along for anyone to look at the skimmer and see what it can do," Hollis said.

VCR Plus+™

VCR INSTANT PROGRAMMER

The VCR concept whose time has come!

- Now taping TV programs is as easy as dialing a phone number
- Breakthrough technology: foolproof simplicity
- Affordable price
- Consumer-tested

What Is VCR Plus+?

THE PRODUCT.

VCR Plus+ is VCR Instant Programming. A patent-pending technological breakthrough that combines code numbers printed in TV listings with a device that lets you record all TV programs (broadcast and cable) in ONE STEP, as easy as dialing a phone.

You don't have to deal with the VCR. You don't even have to deal with the cable box, if you have one. VCR Plus+ does it all for you.

- No more complicated, difficult-to-learn programming for VCR owners.
- No more 8-16 steps, or more, to program a single TV show.
- No more mistakes that cause owners to do the process over and over — or worse, wind up not taping the show they want.

What's more, VCR Plus+ offers features not available to VCR owners today:

- Cable programming ability. VCR Plus+ controls both the cable box and the VCR. Now, if you're away from home, you can tape shows on different cable channels. VCR Plus+ changes the channel for you. You just enter one number for each show.
- Additional programming capacity. VCR Plus+ stores up to 14 programs, 2-3 times the capacity of today's VCRs.
- One-step Weekly and Daily recording, for all our regular tapers.
- Calculates the amount of tape you need for the next 24 hours. With one quick glance at VCR Plus+ you can check how much tape you need.

THE TECHNOLOGY.

Here's how it works:

1. Every show (broadcast or cable) will have a code number printed in the TV listing. You punch into the VCR Plus+ unit the PlusCode™ for the show or shows you want taped.
2. Choose how often you want the show recorded:
   a. ONCE Tapes at the scheduled time.
   b. WEEKLY Tapes every week at the scheduled time until cancelled.
   c. DAILY Tapes Monday-Friday at the same time until cancelled.
   (Great for Soap-Opera Buffs or News Hounds who don't want to miss anything while they're away).
3. Leave the VCR Plus+ on top or near your VCR (and cable box) and it will do the rest.

The display shows you how much tape is needed for the next 24 hours-just don't forget to insert the blank tape.

VCR Plus+. VCR Instant Programmer. Sophisticated engineering that makes taping ultimately simple.

Role is a challenge

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Contrary to the adage, Karl Walter discovered experience is what you get when you get what you want. A supervisor at ARCO Oil and Gas who has his own business, Walter auditioned for Midland Community Theatre's production of "I'm Not Rappaport" with no expectation of securing the role he desired.

He was wrong.

"This is my theatrical debut," Walter said. "I've never done anything like this before, and I didn't realize the time commitment when I auditioned for it. I didn't anticipate getting the role, as a matter of fact."

The audition left him feeling he would not be chosen for the part.

"She (the director) just said, 'Read this passage,' and I read it. That's why I didn't really anticipate getting the role. I didn't know how to read the passage or anything."

When the part of Midge was offered to him, he didn't feel he could turn down the role. Walter plays one of the two leads in Herb Gardner's comedy about two elderly men whose friendship unfolds from a bench in Central Park.

The feisty octogenarian Nat, played by Dr. James Huddleston, is a Jewish Gompers-bred socialist who saw action in the workers barricades in New York City during the 1930s. Midge, played by Walter, is an ailing, black apartment-house supervisor who works so well within the system that he is still employed at 81.

"I felt it was an honor, and I didn't want to turn it down," Walter said in an interview four days before opening night. "I ddidn't realize the time commitment, and I said 'yes,' and here we are days before our opening, and I'm saying, 'Am, I really doing this?' It's been fun though, I have to admit."

The production opened Friday in Theatre Midland's Mabee Theatre Two, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Others in the cast include David Limdemood, Alyson Aldridge, Ronnie Williams, Stephen Madrid and Elizabeth Ott. Stage manager is Barbara Fritz, who is assisted by Tammy Carhart. Directing the production, which runs through March 23, is Rene Brister Chambers, MCT's educational director.

Walter's theatrical background is brief.

"I had a one-line script for me in high school and that was less than 15 seconds," Walter said. "And from then on nothing. I've made presentations before the managers here at ARCO, but that was just a one-time deal and you could get really prepared for it. But here you have three hours, and you have to know it all."

Walter calls himself a novice when it comes to theater. His naivete led him to imagine the theater would provide all the services of professional houses on Broadway.

"I have to learn makeup and make myself 81 years old and, that's almost twice as old as I am," Walter said, confiding that prior to this role the only thing he had put on his face was aftershave. "But Rene had been wonderful as a director, very patient with me, I think."

Walter has found the entire cast and crew to be enthusiastic, optimistic and patient.

"The people I'm working with have been very supportive because I am the only novice. Everyone else has theater experience. They've been very patient. I've enjoyed working with them."

Others in the cast feel the same way about Walter.

"I've found Karl very pleasant to work with," Huddleston said. "There really has not been any problems related to experience or anything else. We've just done what we had to do, and I've really enjoyed working with Karl. He's a very funny person in his own right."

Huddleston, who is the staff psychiatrist at the Permian Basin Center for Mental Health and Mental Retardation, auditioned for the role of Nat because he found the play intriguing.

"I had read about this play several years ago when it was playing, and I had been really impressed with the reviews that it

Nothing satisfies like art

California artist judges MAA show

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Jurying an art show is stressful business. "You're afraid to make a wrong decision," said artist Ted Goerschner.

The California-based artist served as the juror for Midland Arts Association's Spring Show and conducted a week-long workshop at the Museum of the Southwest before leaving for El Paso and another workshop this coming week.

He judges art the way he paints.

"I go through a stack of paintings to pick out the ones I think should have awards, then walk away from them for a half hour or so and go look at some other types of paintings or crafts, then come back and look at the paintings again," he said.

"I paint the same way in my studio. I get away from my work for a little while, and then come back and look at it."

He compares the process to buying a house.

"The first time you walk into a house to buy it, you don't see anything. The second time, you see everything. It's the same way with paintings."

When Goerschner walked into the Museum of the Southwest's Stables Gallery, he found, he said, "nice stuff.

"I think it's going to be a very nice show. It was hard to judge, like most amateur and professional shows, but I think we got the best out of it."

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Artist Ted Goerschner, the juror in the Midland Arts Association's Spring Show, stands behind his choice for first place in the show's oils category. The painting, titled "Sun Flowers," is by Greg Price. The exhibit opens March 14 and runs through April 21 at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

When separate categories don't exist for amateur and professional work, Goerschner said, "There's always a big span of contrast."

He didn't choose a best of show.

"I always feel that it's hard to pick a good medium over another medium. Best of show is a tough prize to give at best. It's almost impossible," he said.

MAA's show includes four categories — oils, watercolors, graphics and three-dimensional.

Winners in the oil category were Greg Price, first, "Sun Flowers"; Doris Spires, second, "Nambe Snow Thaw;" Mary Rasmussen, third, "Patriotic Salute;" and honorable mentions went to Katie Walne, "Countryside in Holland," James Campbell, "Oaxaca," Charles Pruitt, "Hondo Valley, N.M.," and Jim Flippo, "Mozella."

"Many, many judges give their kind of painting all the awards," said Goerschner, who is an impressionist.

"I try to be open as far as subject matter and technique. If it's a good example of its type in its category, then it deserves a prize."

He cites as an example the first place winner in the MAA watercolor category.

"I awarded a realistic painting first in watercolor. I'm not a realistic painter. This painting is almost photographic, but it's a good example of it. I did similar things in other categories," he said.

Winners in the watercolor category were Mary Rasmussen, first, "White Glory;" Cynthia Wolfe, second, "Dancing Teacups;" Herb Cooper, third, "Beginning a Collection;" and honorable mentions went to Jean Motherhead, untitled, Ann Elisa McCoy, "Ripening," and Dorothy Baird, "Hollyhocks."

"Paintings are by far the hardest to judge," Goerschner said.

In the graphics and photography division, winners were

Chestnutt wants to be 'a big star'

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Mark Chesnutt is working harder than ever and enjoying it more. This 27-year-old singer from Beaumont barely has time to know what town he's in, much less what day it is.

"I really enjoy all of it," Chesnutt said. "It's so rewarding to be able to do what I'm doing. There's so many people that just play in beer joints, and they work real hard and try to get to where I'm at right now.

"I guess that's what I enjoy the most — just being successful. I love every bit of it. I love the fans, I love traveling, the road's great. I'm not married or anything, so I really like traveling. Just making music, getting paid for it."

He wouldn't have made it without his dad, Bob Chesnutt, who died Dec. 1, 1990.

"If it hadn't been for him, I'd still be singing in some beer joint in Beaumont for the door," Chesnutt said. "He really fired me up a lot of times. He got me out of a lot of trouble and saved a lot of money and spent it on me.

"So he was really the main one. He did it. I didn't even want to cut 'Too Cold at Home.' I had the song for about five years. I just didn't think I was going to go anywhere with it. I demoed the song in Nashville and didn't do nothing. The guy I was working with didn't get me a record deal like I thought.

MAA: Goerschner judges art works the way he paints

(From 1H)

Jack Stanley, first, "Indian Lodge;" Cris Peters, second, "Allison I;" Elizabeth Yeager, "Grandmother;" and honorable mentions went to Joseph Thimes, "Sand Dunes at Sundown," and Michael Banschbach, "Sarah with Umbrella."

Winners in the three-dimensional category were Mary Hartman, first, untitled-glass; Mary Griffith, second, "Study 1;" Edward C. Rowland, third, untitled; and honorable mentions went to Steve Shumate, "Indian Shield," and John van Auken, "Spadefish."

"The crafts were probably the easiest, I think, because there was such a contrast between professional and amateur," Goerschner said, adding that the yardstick is shorter in crafts. "Craftsmanship is craftsmanship. It has to be there."

Goerschner, who first began painting when he was 13, spent "the better part of an afternoon" judging the MAA show. He narrowed about 120 pieces down to between 70 and 80 for the actual show, which will hang Thursday through April 21.

"There are some really nice pieces here in all categories," he said of the show overall. "It's a nice variety, too — different kinds of contemporary watercolors, oils, impressionistic, realistic — all the "-isms" are here."

The grandson of a sculptor, painter and woodcarver, Goerschner gravitated toward art when he was still young.

"I tried other things, and nothing gave me the satisfaction of art. While I was doing all these other things, I never quit painting."

He has been teaching art and painting full time since 1964.

"I was a lobster fisherman in New England for a few years while I was running a studio and painting. That was just a side job to get me away from the studio, but I gained quite a bit of material for painting. You're just a product of what you've seen and what you've experienced."

MCT: Play 'I'm Not Rappaport' deals with contemporary issues got and with the things that were said about it, particularly in regard to the content.

"Although I'd never had an opportunity to see the show, I felt like it was a really good show and one that deals with, in a fairly lighthearted way, some issues that are rather contemporary; namely the problems of aging, loneliness and nursing homes and the frailties of the human condition, especially as related to aging.

"My character is an 81-year-old man who likes to spin yarns. He likes to indulge in fantasies a lot and tries to act out his fantasies, and it gets him and Midge into a great deal of trouble."

Playing an older character entails certain challenges. For Huddleston and Walter, convincing makeup is part of that challenge.

"It's probably less of a stretch for me than it is for Karl," Huddleston said. He laughed, then added, "The makeup's going to be interesting."

For Huddleston, who has performed in several opera productions, "I'm Not Rappaport" represents his second role in a non-musical production.

"It's very different doing a straight dramatic role rather than a musical," Huddleston said. "You don't have the music to fall back on. My only hope is that we can do this script justice because it's a really good script."

Regardless of the type of production, learning lines is a time-consuming chore faced by all actors.

"The only time I've had to study the lines is during rehearsals and my daughter (Maya) has started reading the lines for me, and she's only 8, because my wife's schedule is as hectic as mine," Walter said.

Walter's schedule has become so bad, he said, "My kids don't recognize me, and my dogs bark at me."

When asked how his wife, Sandra Walter, an accountant at ARCO, reacted to the news that he had accepted the part, Walter said, "You can't print it."

He laughed, then added, "She's proud that I've done it, but she thinks my timing was a little poor. I have a bookkeeping and tax service. This is probably one of my most revenue-generating times of the year."

The advantages have so far outweighed the disadvantages, Walter said. Meeting people is a priority item for the Walters, who moved to Midland a little over a year ago. Still, they aren't strangers to the area, since both grew up in Midland. When they married 18 years ago, they moved away.

"We've had one casting party, and I have met a lot of people from all different walks of life. I hadn't thought about community theater being people from the community. I thought of these people as being actors in the community. But these people do things other than that. I just hope I can measure up to their standards."

Would Walter do it again? Would he audition for a part at MCT? His answer is quick and brief.

"A different time of the year? Yes."

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

'Much Ado' to be staged

ODESSA — "Much Ado About Nothing" comes to The Globe Theatre stage Friday and March 18.

The National Shakespeare Company's production will be presented at 10 a.m. Friday and 8 p.m. March 18.

Often referred to as one of Shakespeare's "golden comedies," "Much Ado" is a humorous exploration of the love relationship in two different sets of lovers.

Director Rick Corley has set "Much Ado" in the Sicily of 1861, the year of Garibaldi's successful revolution for nationhood.

The New York-based National Shakespeare Company is currently in its 28th year of touring.

For ticket information call 1-332-1586.

Bert and Ernie coming

"Sesame Street Live," featuring Bert, Ernie, Prairie Dawn, the Count, Grover, Big Bird, Cookie Monster and Oscar the Grouch, will be coming to Midland College's Chaparral Center April 2 and 3 for three performances.

Tickets go on sale Monday. Ticket prices are $9.50 with a $1.50 discount courtesy of JC Penny. All seats are $6.50 on opening night, courtesy of the Midland Reporter-Telegram and KMID-TV. Wednesday, April 3, at 4 p.m., is the Milk and Cookies Matinee and all seats are $7, courtesy of Magic 102. The performance April 3 at 7:30 p.m. is KPEJ Watch Night.

Bailey to perform

Razzy Bailey performs Friday at the Holiday Inn Country Villa, 4300 W. Wall Ave.

His performance is a fund raiser for the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commissioned Officers Association. Showtime is 7 p.m.

Tickets, priced at $12.50, are available at the door the night of the show.

Six Flags season starts

ARLINGTON — A million dollar addition to Six Flags Over Texas' children's section, a Hollywood stunt show and a new lineup of stage musicals highlight the theme park's 30th anniversary season.

The Arlington entertainment complex began its season Saturday.

Bob Bennett, park president, said major changes have been made in the Looney Tunes Land area to address guests' requests for more children's rides which can be shared by parents.

Bennett said the former dolphin show area, now called the Tower Arena, will be the venue for a Hollywood stunt show.

"The show is full of action with stunts ranging from high falls to a slide-for-life from the 75 foot level of the Oil Derrick observation tower to the arena," Bennett said.

The show is expected to open this month.

Six Flags will be open weekends only until May 25.

NYAC winners to perform

Staff Report

The 1990 winners of the National Young Artist Competition will be featured in a classical concert presented by the Midland-Odessa Symphony Friday in Midland and Saturday in Odessa.

The three performing winners are pianist Mira Armij Gill, pianist Lu Ning and tenor Joseph Hu.

'Resurrection' to be sung

SAN ANGELO — Mahler's Symphony No. 2, "Resurrection," will be performed by the San Angelo Symphony and Chorale at 8 p.m. Saturday in City Auditorium.

Debrah Ehrhardt, instructor of voice at Angelo State University, is the soprano soloist, and Cheryl Allen, a teaching fellow in voice at the University of North Texas where she is working on her doctoral of musical arts degree, is the contralto soloist.

Tickets are $8.50 for adults and $4 for students. For more information call 1-658-5877.

Musicians to play

Trombonist Dan Barrett, tenor saxophonist Ken Peplowski, pianist Ray Sherman, drummer Jake Hanna and bassist Frank Tate perform 8 p.m. April 19 at the Midland Petroleum Club.

The event is sponsored by the West Texas Jazz Society. Ticket price will be $15 for non-members and an additional $10 for reserved seating.

In addition, Barrett and his groups will conduct back-to-back workshops at Midland High School Auditorium April 19 for the entire Midland Independent School District fifth grade. Prior to the workshops, students will have had the opportunity to study jazz history and the biographies of the musicians playing.

Peter Pan to skate into town

Staff Report

"Second star to the right and straight on 'til morning" is the traditional route to Never-Never Land.

But now, with a sprinkling of Pixie Dust, families can make their own magical journey to Never-Never Land when Walt Disney's World on Ice brings seven performances to Ector County Coliseum beginning Thursday.

With a clap of his hands, Kenneth Feld, the show's producer, brings to life the Disney version of James Barrie's tale of the boy who never grew up. Peter Pan, Tinker Bell, the Darling children, Tiger Lily, Captain Hook and his bumbling partner Smeeper form their classic adventure along with Disney characters Mickey Mouse, Minnie, Donald Duck, Daisy, Rescue Rangers, Chip'n'Dale, all live and in person.

"Talented skaters, lavish costumes and ingenious special effects make this exciting spectacular a real delight for young and old," said a release from the show's producers.

Tickets may be purchased at Blockbuster Video locations in Midland and Odessa. For more information call 1-366-3541.

CHESTNUTT: Singer's father helped career

(From 1H)

"Daddy saved up a lot of money and told me, 'Let's go to Houston and cut it and see what happens.' And he did that so many times with me. I just didn't really want to try anymore but he helped me. He built a fire under me and got me going. So he's really responsible for it all."

"Too Cold at Home" attracted Nashville executives to Beaumont to hear Chesnutt sing and paved the way for his record contract with MCA. His first album now has three releases from it — "Too Cold at Home," "Brother Jukebox" and "Blame it on Texas." His New South Band of Texas players has been backing him since 1986.

Chesnutt's life as a singer actually began when he was a child singing at his father's knee.

"I used to sing in our attic. My daddy was a singer. And he used to get up there with his guitar and start singing and people would come over, and I would sit up there and sing with him. That was the first time I ever sang in front of people."

His first public performance was to come when he was a student at Beaumont's MacArthur Junior High School. He had long dreamed of becoming a performer, but it wasn't until he heard people responding to his singing that his decision was made.

"I sang 'It Was Almost Like a Song.' There was probably, maybe 150 people there. It was a big thrill for me. They all started clapping. I guess I was doing something pretty good. Right then, it really hit me. I've stayed with it ever since."

Through the years, his mother, Norma, encouraged the men in her world to pursue their dreams.

"She was behind us all the way. She stayed in there and cooked us supper," he said, laughing. "She never fought us. She didn't quite understand what was going on but she knew that it was something that we both wanted so she was real good about it."

With the death of his father, Chesnutt finds he has become even closer to his mother, including installing a telephone in his bus so he can call her every night. "Now, we're closer than we ever were before 'cause I have to take care of her and all."

Chesnutt's first paying job came in 1980 at Beaumont's Doc Holliday's. He worked there for Dan Wentworth, who later would hire him to headline at Cutter's, a springboard for country talent.

An outdoor concert performance in Kountze during the mid-80s attracted the attention of Bob Chesnutt's long-time friend, George Jones, and soon the younger Chesnutt was featured at Jones Country and opening for such acts as Jones, Merle Haggard, Hank Williams Jr., George Strait, K.T. Oslin, Reba McIntire and Willie Nelson.

Chesnutt and The New South Band appreciate a Texas crowd.

"Seems like the biggest and the best audiences we've played have been in Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma," Chesnutt said. "They are always real responsive to us. They treat us real good, and they're the loudest people I've ever seen — especially Texas people.

"I don't know why. Some of them are just real rowdy, and we enjoy that. That's what I'm used to 'cause I'm from Texas. Where we're from there's a lot of Cajuns, so when you mix Cajuns and country people you get a real tough mixture. It gets real crazy sometimes. So, I just like to tell the people in Texas (that) they are our best audience."

Recently, Chesnutt dabbled in songwriting.

"I co-wrote a song a few weeks ago. I didn't know about it, but I found out later that I did co-write a song. I came up with an idea one night when I was in Nashville with some friends of mine, and it turned into a song," he said. "I don't know if it was any good or not. I haven't heard it, yet.

"I want to start writing real soon. I want to get into that part, and I think I could write pretty good if I set my mind to it."

Chesnutt knows what he wants.

"I want to be a big star. I want to drive up with five or six buses, a bunch of semis (trucks). I just want to be a big star and play the biggest places and make the best records I can make, and that's all I've ever wanted to do."

In addition to his family and friends, Chesnutt knows who to thank for his success.

"There's so many new artists out there now, and there's some great music, and I just want to thank everybody for taking me in and listening to my songs and buying my tapes and CDs and coming to our shows, 'cause I know they don't have to. That's what it all boils down to, the fans."

Don't flog a dead horse. If one line won't produce the number of tricks you need, cast around for another.

The popular theory is that, with an eight-card major fit, the suit contract is preferable to no trump. That is not always true when both hands are balanced. As the cards lie here, nine tricks could always be taken at no trump, while four spades required careful play with a dash of luck thrown in.

West got the defense off to a good start with a diamond lead. Declarer tried the nine from dummy, East contributed the ten and declarer took the ace. After drawing trumps, declarer tried the heart finesse. The jack lost to the king and the defenders took two diamond tricks to complete the defensive book. Although declarer was able to discard a club on the queen of hearts, South still had to concede a club for down one.

Even had the heart king been onside, declarer would have had to concede two tricks in each minor as long as West covered the jack of hearts. Instead of taking a no-win line, declarer should have put the jack of hearts to better use.

The only chance for the contract was to find East with the king of hearts guarded no more than twice. Declarer should draw only two rounds of trumps, ending in dummy, and then lead a heart toward the jack. If East rises with the king of hearts and forces out one of dummy's black aces, declarer cashes the jack of hearts, crosses back to the table with the remaining black ace and takes two club discards on the high hearts.

It does not avail East to duck the king of hearts. Declarer's jack wins, the ace of hearts is cashed and declarer ruffs a heart, felling the king. Declarer can get a minor-suit discard on the queen of hearts, and loses only three tricks in the minor suits.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your career suddenly accelerates. A long-sought goal moves within reach by June. Although you are subject to self-doubt, your conscientious habits lead you to persevere when the going gets tough next September. Your persistence will pay off handsomely in both romance and business! The insights you gain on a trip could influence an important career choice. Be very cautious about lending money or possessions next February.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Pamela Mason, playwright David Rabe, pitcher Steve Howe, Britain's Prince Edward.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Have fun with your friends and neighbors today. A casual discussion could lead to thoughts of a missed opportunity. Learn from past mistakes but avoid dwelling on them! Renew an old friendship.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Attending religious services brings a sense of peace. Good luck is your secret ally where romance is concerned. Pour on the charm when old friends introduce you to strangers.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The advantages of socializing are obvious today. Dressing up for a meeting will boost your spirits. You feel more confident when you know that you look your best! Heed mate's suggestions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Some happy moments are at hand. Reaching out to others makes you feel good about yourself. You gain a deeper understanding of a close relationship. Friends extend a special invitation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be prepared to deal with family problems. A friend's opinion can be a source of new strength. Let other people know that your generosity is not a sign of weakness. Set limits.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Travel and money are popular topics of conversation today. Welcome suggestions but postpone making a final decision. Be enthusiastic about your mate's surprising announcement!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Loved one applauds your efforts to straighten out your finances. An old debt will be repaid with interest. Keep in touch with someone who has been absent from the social scene recently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Domestic matters require your attention during the early part of the day. A social event may have to be postponed. A visitor gives you delightful new insights. Mediate a family squabble.

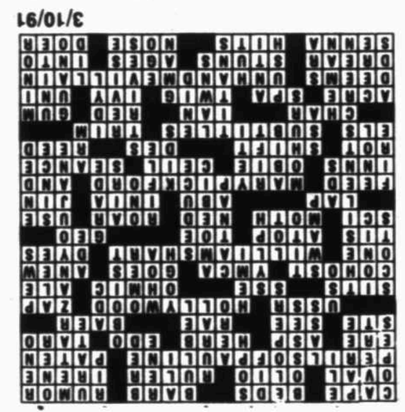
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): New housekeeping patterns will result in greater peace of mind. Ask your mate that special question. Discuss travel and hobbies with children. Stay cool if someone is critical tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Make every moment count today! Limit the amount of time you spend on routine tasks. A close friend would be delighted by a last-minute invitation. A family member makes a startling revelation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your relationship with an older person could cause some interesting comments. A good sense of humor is your strongest asset. New acquaintances are impressed by your willingness to learn.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A close relative turns to you for moral support. Be a good listener! The evening is ideal for socializing. Dress to impress and you will make a big splash on the social scene.

PUZZLE ANSWER



Jazz musician to be honored

Milt Hinton has been selected as the 1991 American Federation of Jazz Societies' Benny Carter Award recipient.

Hinton, nicknamed Judge, is well-known to West Texas audiences for his performance in annual jazz parties in the area. This award recognizes Hinton's tremendous contribution to jazz during his 61-year career.

The presentation will be made during "Jazz...A National Treasure," the AFJS 6th Annual Convention, April 4-7 in Sarasota, Fla.
