Election Tuesday

14 amendments on ballot; polls open 7 a.m.-7 p.m.

Scurry County citizens are encouraged to take the time to vote in Tuesday's constitutional amendments election.

Polls will open at four locations at 7 a.m. and remain open until 7 p.m.

There are 14 amendments on the ballot, including several bond issues, a number of tax exemptions and a proposal to abolish the state Treasury and merge that agency into the state comptroller's office.

Only 214 of the county's 9,734 registered voters cast ballots during the early voting period, which ended Friday. Voters should check their voter registration card to find their box number, then vote at the appropriate location.

County sick leave policy is revamped

Changes in Scurry County's sick leave policy as they relate to long-term illness were unanimously approved by the commissioners court this morning.

Precinct 3 Commissioner C.D. Gray Jr. authored the changes which will now allow employees to transfer accumulated sick leave time to another employee.

"We're dealing with catastrophic illnesses," said Gray. "Not only will this plan allow fellow employees to help out others, it also encourages county employees to 'be sick' before they use sick leave."

An employee must have accumulated 200 hours before receiving or transferring sick leave.

Employees can accumulate 96 hours yearly and accumulate a maximum of 600 hours during their employment.

Other guidelines include: an employee can only receive transferred sick leave after his or her sick leave is totally exhausted; an employee cannot receive transferred sick leave from another employee unless 200 hours of one's own sick leave time has been used for one illness; and an employee can receive a maximum of 300 hours of transferred time.

Also, an employee can transfer a maximum of 10 percent of accumulated leave, as long as he maintains the 200-hour minimum.

In discussing the new plan, County Judge Ricky Fritz told the court that "the county can not be everything to everybody."

He added that he felt the plan was a liberal one and urged all employees to accumulate their base of 200 hours.

In other business, the county selected three accounting firms to make a presentation to conduct the annual audit of the county.

Mason, Warner & Co. of Lubbock, Carol McDonald and Co. of Fort Worth and Condley and Co. of Abilene, are expected to make their proposals next Monday.

The court also agreed to take bids on all scrap metal inside the former Dunn Gin, and other scrap metal on the property, and sell it for one combined bid.

Three line-item transfers were approved, including $65 in the non-department budget, which is being transferred from maintenance repairs to EMS repairs; and $300 transferred in the budget of building maintenance, with the money moved from auto expense to grounds supplies.

The court also agreed to transfer $250 in supplies and $250 in office rent in the budget of the extension office to $500 for telephone expense.

Fritz presided this morning. Commissioners present were Gray, Roy Idom, Ralph Trevey and Jerry Gannaway.

Varied agenda faces city council tonight

Business pertaining to the industrial park, landfill, water treatment plant and more crowd a lengthy agenda for Snyder City Council today.

The council is convene at 6:30 p.m. at City Hall.

The council will consider approving a resolution calling for the issuance of certificates of obligation for the construction of the city's new water treatment plant and for improvements to the sewer system.

Also, the council will consider approving a resolution authorizing the issuance of bonds by the Development Corporation of Snyder for the development of the infrastructure of SnTx Park I. The resolution entails a sales tax remittance agreement for the levy of a three-eights of one percent sales tax for economic development and the approval of the by-laws of the DCOS.

Two items relating to the landfill will also be considered by the council. Engineers from Freese & Nichols will give an update on the modifications planned for the landfill and a contract between the city and WesTex Waste will be considered.

At this time, WesTex estimates depositing 2,100 tons of waste annually in the local landfill.

Other items of new business to be considered by the council include a request for a four-way stop sign to be placed at the intersection of 35th Street and Austin Avenue, an ordinance making appropriations available for the operation of the city for the coming fiscal year and numerous line-item transfers for the fiscal year 1994-95.

Council members will also consider a resolution supporting the area's drug task force by pledging the city's pro rata share of costs to Taylor County, which administers the program.

Also, the local chapter of the VFW will ask the council for an after-hours permit to sell alcoholic beverages for an extra hour during Friday night dances. Approval by the council would still be subject to the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission.

Bids for new police vehicles are expected to be awarded and the council will have an executive session to consider the acquisition of real estate.

Four items of old business will be considered, including the Book contains all manner of Texas trivia

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's that time of year again when the government's bean counters attempt with numbers, percentages and tables to put a face on U.S. society.

The newly released "Statistical Abstract of the United States 1995" isn't likely to pop up on any best-seller lists or find its way onto most Americans' bookshelves.

Nonetheless, the Census Bureau volume offers a fascinating compilation of arcane — sometimes thought-provoking, sometimes unusual — nuggets of information about the United States and its residents.

Where else could you learn that more than 24 million Americans took to the golf links at least once during the year? Or that annual snowmobile sales were expected to hit $530 million? Or that the domestic fishing industry snagged 162 million pounds of squid in one year?

Unfortunately, all of the data isn't broken down in state-by-state summaries. But there are enough interesting kernels about Texas in the 1,045-page book to make for some interesting reading.

Among the Texas tidbits in the 1995 edition:

—Eight percent of Texas households don't have access to an automobile. Fifty-six percent of all Texas households have two or more vehicles.

—Texas has 2,824 of the nation's 40,368 shopping centers; and 35,370 of the United States' 453,308 car dealers.

—Slightly less than 64 percent of Texans are believed to be Christian adherents, significantly higher than the U.S. average of 52.7 percent.

—Texans recorded higher death rates from accidents, diabetes and suicide than the national average; but a lower mortality rate from heart disease, cancer and pneumonia.

—In 1993, 185,600 Texans got hitched, while 98,700 dissolved their marriages.

—Eighteen percent of Texans read a daily newspaper, a dip from the national rate of 23 percent.

—Texas' population is slightly younger than the national average, with 10.2 percent of Texans 65 or older, compared to the 12.7 percent U.S. rate.

—Texans accounted for $20 billion of the $323 billion spent by Americans on domestic travel at least 100 miles from home.

—The state is home to the third-largest illegal alien population, behind California and New York. The undocumented alien population nationwide was estimated last year between 3.5 million and 4 million, of which 300,000 to 427,000 were suspected in Texas. California's total dwarfed Texas, with a range of 1.3 million to nearly 1.8 million undocumented immigrants.

—Texas recorded a far lower abortion rate than the nation as a whole. For every 1,000 live births in Texas in 1992, there were 297 abortions — compared to a national average of 379.

—The state's 18.3 million people live in 6.5 million households, with an average household size of 2.75 people. Nationally, the average household size is 2.64 people.

—85,000 Texas homes — or 1.2 out of every 100 homes — lack complete plumbing. Eight percent of Texas households don't have a telephone.

—Of the nearly 393,500 Texans living in group quarters last year, 101,000 were in nursing homes, nearly 92,000 in college dormitories.

The government has published a statistical abstract every year since 1878. This year's offering, which the Government Printing Office sells for $37, tips the scales at nearly 2½ pounds.

GOP hopefuls overwhelm Florida delegates

OCALA, Fla. (AP) — To John Weiss, it is silly and exhilarating, all at once. As one of the chosen 3,300, his mailbox is full just about every day now. Not to mention calls from "the next president of the United States."

If only he could decide who that ought to be.

He has until Nov. 18, when he casts a ballot in Florida's Republican presidential straw poll, a contest that is being hotly contested even though it has nothing to do with how the state's 1996 GOP national convention delegates are divvied up.

"I would avoid any description of this as life or death," says Jeb Bush, the former president's son and organizer of the event. "But it has taken on major significance."

As former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander tells delegates to the last big GOP event in 1995: "You will begin the process of selecting the Republican nominee to be the first president of the next century."

Like Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, Alexander has ignored most of the straw polls conducted this year, including a Maine event Saturday won by Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, who has competed in, and won, most such events.

In the Maine straw poll of about 1,500 Republican activists, Gramm got 42 percent of the ballots cast. Sen. Dick Lugar of Indiana was second with 21 percent and Dole, whose partisans insisted they had done little organizing in advance, finished third with 10 percent.

Given that, and Gramm's vow to crush rivals in the South, Dole strategist Warren Tompkins insists, "Phil Gramm has the most to lose in Florida."

But the intensity, and free spending, of the Dole effort here suggests otherwise. After being stunned by a tie with Gramm in Iowa's August straw poll, Dole dubbed the Florida event, "the most important political event of the year for us."

Florida Secretary of State Sandra Mortham, Gramm's campaign chairwoman, says of Dole: "He has to win in order to stay as the frontrunner and frankly I think he needs to win to stay in the race."

Alexander, too, has much to prove. Florida's March primary is critical to his strategy, but he needs first to prove he will be in the race that long. Lagging in the polls, and banking on a string of year-end fundraising events to replenish his coffers, Alexander tells delegates: "You don't have to accept the conventional wisdom — you can create the conventional wisdom."

Interviews with delegates, campaign aides and state party officials suggest Dole, Gramm and Alexander are the major competitors, overwhelming the 3,300 delegates with letters, videotapes and personal phone calls.

Every delegate, for example, is getting a letter from someone in Alexander's hometown, tiny Maryville, Tenn. Dole's frequent mailings included one from his daughter, Robin. Another targeted Christian Coalition members who are delegates. Just this weekend, Elizabeth Dole had seven events in the state, and Gramm was back campaigning Sunday.

In the rush to keep pace in the letter war, Gramm's campaign was a bit red-faced after sending a letter addressing delegates as "Mr. Samplename" because of a printing error. Rivals also have poked fun at Dole for showering delegates at a recent GOP meeting with gift chocolates and toiletries.

Several delegates reported calls from supporters of Colin Powell, who is mulling a GOP presidential run. A Powell spokeswoman said he had not authorized calls, and had no plans to attend; organizers will add his name to the ballot if he declares his candidacy by Nov. 18.

With a debate scheduled the night before the voting, Rich de Rosa said he might wait to the very end before choosing between Dole and Alexander. "I want to see who can stand in the ring and take the hits," de Rosa said. Besides, "I may never get this much attention ever again."

Ohio UWSA dissidents against third party

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dissidents in Ross Perot's Ohio United We Stand America chapter are trying to block Perot from using their state's money and other assets to support creation of a new political party.

After qualifying his Reform Party for the California ballot next year, Perot has shifted the effort to Ohio and Maine, the two other states with 1995 deadlines for 1996 ballot access.

He is expected to succeed in Ohio, but is getting a fight from longtime United We Stand members who have become disillusioned with his leadership and vehemently oppose using the organization as a springboard to a new party.

In a letter to the Federal Election Commission on Friday, the Ohio dissidents asked for a ruling on whether Perot can use United We Stand America funds and other assets, such as computers, telephones and mailing lists, to help qualify the new party for the ballot.

Perot, after consulting his attorneys, has said he believes there are no limits on what he can spend to qualify the new party for the ballot because party-building efforts are given broad latitude under campaign finance laws.

The Ohio dissidents disagree, asserting in their letter to the FEC that since their state UWSA chapter is "incorporated in Ohio as an educational, non-partisan, non-profit organization, a majority of the elected board of UWSA-Ohio has taken the position that the organization may not legally contribute its assets to Ross Perot's new party's petition effort."

Perot's Dallas headquarters no longer recognizes the dissidents as the state United We Stand leadership, but they assert in their letter that they are "the duly elected board of UWSA-OH" and ask the FEC for a swift opinion.

What's in a name? Everything, apparently, if you're running for president.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole was asked about the television ads critical of him being run by publishing magnate Malcolm S. Forbes Jr., who calls himself Steve.

"I think Malcolm Forbes — some call him Steve, I know him as Malcolm — is trying to find some traction out there," said Dole.

"Maybe if you spend enough money, you can buy some traction," said Dole.

Forbes, who succeeded his late father as head of the publishing empire that includes Forbes magazine, has said he may spend up to $25 million of his own money for the race.

Colin Powell was scheduled to speak Tuesday at a small Missouri college but canceled to free up time to decide whether to run for president. But he is taking time that same day for a trip to Philadelphia, to deliver a paid speech to a travel industry convention.

In a letter to Missouri Western State College last week, Powell said it was "with the greatest distress" that he reached his decision to cancel, saying students were "the kind of audience I enjoy the most."

Powell said he had to cancel the appearance, which included a speech, reception and dinner, because he needed time to "make the most momentous decision of my life...I found that I had to free up more time on my schedule for the week of 6 November."

He's finding time, however, for the appearance in Philadelphia, which is being paid for by American Express. Powell's agent won't disclose his speaking fees, but they are said to run as high as $50,000.

Perot has a message for Powell should he decide to enter the presidential race: Expect the worse.

'Get Shorty' still top movie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For the third consecutive weekend, "Get Shorty" remained the No. 1 box-office draw in the nation, pulling down $10 million in ticket sales, industry sources estimated.

"Powder" stayed in second place in its second weekend with $6.5 million, while "Copycat" moved up a notch to No. 3 with $5.8 million and "Vampire in Brooklyn" stumbled to fifth place with $4.1 million, the sources said Sunday.

"Fair Game," starring William Baldwin as a cop protecting an attorney, Cindy Crawford, opened in fourth place with $5.1 million.

The debut of the family Thanksgiving story "Home for the Holidays," starring Holly Hunter and directed by Jodie Foster, was only good for sixth with $3.86 million.

Another opener, "Gold Diggers: The Secret of Bear Mountain," squeaked in at No. 9. with $2.5 million. The movie stars Christina Ricci and Anna Chlumsky as girls from different backgrounds searching for treasure.

Final Friday-through-Sunday figures are due out today. The Top 10 according to preliminary estimates:

1. "Get Shorty," $10 million.
2. "Powder," $6.5 million.
3. "Copycat," $5.8 million.
4. "Fair Game," $5.1 million.
5. "Vampire in Brooklyn," $4.1 million.
6. "Home for the Holidays," $3.86 million.
7. "Now and Then," $3.8 million.
8. "Seven," $3.75 million.
9. "Gold Diggers: The Secret of Bear Mountain," $2.5 million.
10. "Three Wishes," $1.7 million.

Dole won't dig up dirt on Powell

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole says he won't run a negative campaign against Colin Powell if the retired general enters the Republican presidential race.

"I think we'd take a look at strategy, what happens if General Powell runs," Dole said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press." "But I don't — I don't go for that and I don't know why somebody would be saying, 'Well, this is what we're doing.'"

The Los Angeles Times reported last week that some candidates for the GOP nomination were gathering information on Powell's career and private life, in hopes of finding something to attack him on if he runs. The story quoted an unidentified aide to Dole.

"I hope that's not our campaign," Dole, the frontrunner said, adding, "We have a lot of people (who) claim they're aides."

Dole said he has no plans to run a negative campaign against anyone.

"I've never said a word about President Clinton that involves his personal life, personal problems; I haven't talked about Whitewater. My view is that well, that's not going to be said by Senator Bob Dole," the Kansas Republican said.

Powell is expected to announce his decision about a presidential run before Thanksgiving. Dole said he doesn't know if Powell will run.

"I have mixed feelings," Dole said. "Some days I think probably he will."

Meanwhile, former Bush administration chief of staff James A. Baker III, who worked with Powell during the Persian Gulf War, said the retired general "would be a good president."

Asked if he thought Powell were too liberal to run as a Republican, Baker said on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley:" "We ought to be inclusive, not exclusive, in our politics."

Several conservative Republicans last week predicted Powell could not win the GOP nomination because of statements he has made on abortion, affirmative action and the Republicans' "Contract with America."

Dear Abby

Memories of Grade-School Harassment Still Cause Pain

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1995 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: Recently I ran a letter signed "Worried Mom in Virginia," who sought help for her son, a sixth-grader who was being harassed by his schoolmates. I asked readers to share their solutions to this painful problem. A deluge of letters offering encouragement and a wealth of experience poured in from parents and educators, as well as from adults who had suffered as children:

DEAR ABBY: My heart goes out to "Mike," the son of "Worried Mom in Virginia." I have walked in his shoes. Starting in the fourth grade at a private school in Atlanta, I was taunted and teased by many of my peers for reasons I was unable to understand. I was neither ugly nor pretty, fat nor thin, rich nor poor, but nonetheless, I was called names too mean-spirited to repeat.

I transferred to a "better" private school, but since some of the same kids were there who knew me from my former school, the ostracism followed me. These kids were so vicious, they even picked on a very nice, soft-spoken Italian boy in my class because his English was poor. (His father owned Fiat and his mother was a countess.) They singled us out because we were "different."

Then a miracle happened. Because my grades were poor, my mother no longer wanted to spend all that money for a private school where I was miserable, so she sent me to a public school where I knew no one, and no one knew me.

My grades went up; I had boyfriends and girlfriends. I had not changed, but my environment had.

I agree. Get the kid into counseling. Listen to him and help him appreciate his worth. Love him well and praise him often. And above all, put him in a new school where he can have a fresh start and leave all those miserable slobs behind.

The spiteful kids I went to school with may have won a battle or two, but I won the war! Tell Mike that one day, he, too, will stand tall and say, "I know who I am, and I know my worth. There is life beyond grade school."

PATRICIA PALMER,
JUNEAU, ALASKA

DEAR PATRICIA: Thanks for a wonderful letter. I heard from literally hundreds of readers who recalled the agony of being taunted by cruel classmates. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Victims of constant teasing should get counseling. I was one of those boys. Never one of the crowd and not a good athlete, I was tormented on a daily basis.

Even though I made good grades, I had (and have) no self-esteem. A loving wife and recent counseling have begun to make a change in how I feel about myself. I am 58 and somewhat successful in my career. I would have been even more successful if I'd had more self-esteem.

My son had the same problem, and I failed to recognize it. He was miserable in school and tried to make up for it by being the class clown. I feel this is the reason he has refused to see or speak to his mother and me for the last five years. He needs help. He's bright, good-looking and has everything going for him — except self-esteem. Like me, he has trouble making friends.

Parental love is not enough. A qualified therapist is the only answer. You need to hear from an outsider that you're worthwhile.

BEEN THERE IN DALLAS

DEAR ABBY: If "Worried Mom's" son is teased and ostracized, it's a safe bet he's being physically abused. Parents often avoid dealing with this situation by mouthing inane platitudes such as, "You must have done something to cause it"; "Ignore them and they'll go away"; "If someone hits you, don't hit him back." My parents used these lines when I had this problem. After 30 years, I still haven't forgotten them.

The solution is simple: Teach the boy to defend himself. Lessons in self-defense and regular practice on the punching bag and the wrestling mat will work wonders for the boy's self-esteem. No one picks on someone who stands up for him- or herself.

Make sure he understands he's being taught to defend himself — not to be a bully.

With shuttle Columbia back, it's time to build the station

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — After practicing station-style science aboard Columbia for 16 days, NASA is ready to try its hand at space station assembly.

Columbia returned safely to Earth on Sunday, clearing the way for Atlantis to blast off Saturday on the second shuttle docking mission with the Russian space station Mir.

There will be no crew swap this time. Rather, Atlantis will take up a docking tunnel, food, water and other supplies for the cosmonauts. The Atlantis crew will attach the tunnel to Mir for future shuttle dockings.

It will be the first time a space shuttle has ever performed station-building tasks.

Columbia commander Kenneth Bowersox said it's important — and logical — for NASA to learn how to conduct station-type science while learning how to build a station. Construction of the international space station is just two years away.

"That way, the facility is going to be ready to be used, and will be used [illegible]tional," Bowersox said after returning to Earth. "It's the most efficient way to operate."

Columbia's mission was, at 16 days, the second-longest flight in shuttle history, just one-half day short of the record. The seven astronauts had been hoping for bad landing weather, but a cold front passed through quicker than expected and the wind subsided.

"Probably more than anybody, I was really hoping that we would get the duration record. I wanted to stay up a day or two, however long we could, longer," said pilot Kent Rominger. "But I tell you what, now that we're back on Earth, it sure is nice to be here."

Bowersox guided Columbia across the United States into the Kennedy Space Center just after sunrise. "Great ending," he said.

Soon afterward, the astronauts enjoyed hot showers and pizza — what they had missed most in orbit, aside from their families.

Columbia carried 14 pieces of major laboratory equipment to grow crystals, test fluids, cultivate potatoes and ignite fuels, among other things. The experiments are precursors to what will be performed on the international space station by the United States, Russia and other countries.

Seek a diagnosis for excess gas, acid

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am 22 and have trouble burping, which may continue for hours and often is associated with heartburn. I now find myself belching loudly all the time and, as you can imagine, this is socially unacceptable. My boyfriend thinks it's "disgusting." Please help me.

DEAR READER: You need to see your doctor and, probably, have X-rays of your stomach and upper intestine. You may have an ulcer or hiatal hernia (a weakness where the stomach joins the esophagus), both of which can easily be treated with modern drugs, such as Tagamet, Zantac and others, many of which are now available without a prescription.

In the meantime, you may wish to modify your diet and avoid foods (such as salads, onions, pepper, spices, coffee, and alcohol) that seem to worsen your symptoms. Also, you might try using liquid antacids, such as Gelusil or Maalox, that may control your acid condition and excess gas.

Don't delay. Get to your doctor. Your boyfriend may find you more socially acceptable once you get treatment.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Hiatal Hernia." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: They said my son had an ulcer, but after testing him with X-rays, they diagnosed viral gastroenteritis. What is this disease?

DEAR READER: We have all experienced the occasional sudden attack of fever, nausea, vomiting, and diarrhea. With dietary restrictions (clear fluids only) for 24 hours, the symptoms usually disappear and we return to normal in a day or two.

Because these violent episodes are so short-lived, doctors believe that they are caused by a virus infection. In cases where symptoms persist — or are associated with abdominal pain or intestinal bleeding — other disorders, such as peptic ulcer or colitis, must be considered.

The crucial aspects of viral gastroenteritis are: sudden onset, prompt response to a fluids-only diet, and no continuing problems after 24 to 48 hours.

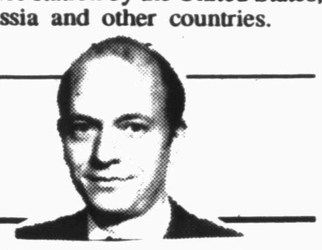

As I mentioned, the treatment consists of ample clear fluids (water, ginger ale, beef broth or tea), coupled with non-prescription anti-diarrhea drugs, such as Immodium AD.

Ignoring the symptoms (a difficult challenge) and continuing to eat solid food simply keeps the viruses active and can prolong the affliction, leading to dehydration. When symptoms persist, medical attention is appropriate.

Bridge

By Phillip Alder

By Phillip Alder

George D. Prentice, the 19th-century American poet and journalist, wrote, "Some people use one half their ingenuity to get into debt, and the other half to avoid paying it."

At the bridge table, some players use at best half their ingenuity, in particular when they don't bother to count. Others cannot avoid making potentially fatal plays — as in today's deal.

How would you plan the play in three no-trump after West leads the spade king?

First, count your top tricks. Here, there are eight: one spade, two hearts, two diamonds and three clubs. A ninth is possible from hearts, if the suit breaks 3-3. But the diamond suit is more promising. However, if a trick must be lost, there is a danger that the defenders will run the spade suit.

The naive declarer rushed into debt — and paid for it. He started well, ducking the first two spade tricks and winning the third. So far, so good. But now he played a diamond to dummy's ace and a diamond to his jack. West ingenuously won with the queen and took two more spade tricks: one down.

If the spades were breaking 4-4, there was no danger. But if they were 5-3, South had to fight to keep West off the lead. If this can be accomplished, it is done by starting with the diamond king and leading a low diamond toward the dummy. If West plays low twice, declarer finesses dummy's nine. But here, when West plays the queen, declarer wins with dummy's ace and claims an overtrick.

Watch for an avoidance play to avoid getting into bridge debt.

Phillip Alder's book, "Get Smarter at Bridge," is available, autographed upon request, for $14.95 from P.O. Box 169, Roslyn Hts., NY 11577-0169.

Search for missing Louisiana pilot halted

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Civil Air Patrol called off its search for a lost Gretna pilot after three ground teams and nine aircraft combed his presumed flight plan for eight days.

Although the search was officially suspended with no sign of pilot John C. Yarbrough or his plane, any person with information that might help locate either can contact the nearest sheriff's office or Civil Air Patrol.

Yarbrough, 25, took off Oct. 27 from a small private airstrip south of New Orleans to visit friends in San Antonio. He was flying a small, two-seat Cessna 150 airplane.

Yarbrough did not file a flight plan with the FAA, but had given his parents a copy of his own computer-generated plan. It showed a route westward along the Louisiana gulf coast to Galveston, where he planned to refuel before continuing to San Antonio. He did not arrive at either destination.

Lady Tigers move one step closer

HUGE GAME—Edwina Brooks (spiking) had the match of her life Saturday as the Snyder Lady Tigers eliminated Sherman from the 4A volleyball playoffs. Snyder won 15-3, 15-10 to advance to the regional semi-finals against Hereford at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Box at Lubbock Monterey High School. Brooks had nine service aces, six in a row at one point, 11 service points, eight blocks and three kills. Backing up Brooks (L to R) are Lindsey Griffin, Tiffany Garza and Sterling Cave. CISCO—The Lady Tigers just keep going and going and going...

It took 38 minutes here Saturday afternoon for the Snyder High School Lady Tiger volleyball team to dispose of the Lady Bearcats from Sherman and advance to the regional semi-finals.

Snyder came away with a 15-3, 15-10 victory and will move on to play Hereford Tuesday at 8 p.m. at Lubbock Monterey High School in the Box.

The Lady Whitefaces defeated El Paso Parkland Friday, 15-3, 15-5.

It was Edwina Brooks' day for the Lady Tigers as she stunned the Lady Bearcats right off the bat with six service aces in a row. She finished the afternoon with 11 points, nine being aces.

Sherman jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first game, but after Brooks' six aces, Snyder took a 6-2 lead. Sherman came back to make it 6-3 before the Lady Tigers rolled off nine consecutive points to take the first game, 15-3.

Snyder took a 3-1 lead in the second game only to see Sherman come back with four service aces of its own and take a 5-3 lead. The Lady Tigers came back to tie the game at 6-6, before going on to win, 15-10.

It was only fitting that Brooks served an ace at match point to vault the Lady Tigers on in the playoffs.

"Our girls did a really great job," said Coach Patty Grimmett. "Unlike the Brownwood match, our girls were not nervous at all. We played good offense and defense."

In addition to Brooks, Sterling Cave had seven service points as did Kelly Clay. Tiffany Garza had three and Lindsey Griffin contributed two. Cave and Clay each had an ace.

Garza led in kills with five, Brooks added three while Clay, Griffin and Raechele Wemken had two each. Brooks also had eight blocks, Griffin contributed five blocks.

Despite travel distance to Cisco, the Lady Tigers had an excellent crowd, outnumbering Sherman two to one. "We can't ask for a better following," Grimmett said. But if you ask her, she would probably say she would like to see a standing room only crowd, decked out in black and gold at the Box Tuesday night.

Snyder is now one of 16 teams in the state still playing volleyball in Class 4A.

The other Region 1-4A semi-final match pits Dumas against Cleburne. Dumas knocked out Andrews, 15-11, 15-4 and Cleburne eliminated Denison, 15-4, 15-6.

Of the four teams remaining in the region, Hereford has the best record at 26-3, Snyder is 23-6, Cleburne 24-9 and Dumas 18-9.

Lady Westerners finish third in SPC tournament

LEVELLAND—For the third game in a row, it came down to the wire for the Western Texas College Lady Westerners as they waited until the last second to defeat Tyler Junior College in the third place game of the Lady Texan Tournament held here over the weekend.

Shanna Gathwright, 5-8 sophomore from Harlingen, went to the foul line with the game tied at 74-74 and calmly sank two free throws to give the Lady Westerners third place with a 76-74 win.

"I'm too young for this," said Coach Brenda Nichols Monday. "We proved that we are a pressure team. We can handle the pressure."

Stacy Hinson, the hero from the opening round game against McLennan, and Katrina Turner were named to the all-tournament team for the Lady Westerners.

Hinson had a game high 22 points to lead the Lady Westerners in scoring. She was a perfect five of five from the free throw line and one of two from the three-point line.

Also in double figures were Turner with 18 and Jo "Toot" Smith with four. Gathright ended the game with nine as did Emily Schaffer. Angelica Brooks had four and Shawna Davis added a field goal.

WTC came away with 42 rebounds, 26 defensive and 16 offensive. They also had 10 steals.

Next action for WTC will be a week from Tuesday, Nov 14, when they travel to Big Spring to play Howard College in the first conference game. "Our girls are down about Howard," added Nichols. "After watching them win the tournament over South Plains, they know they should have beaten them and they are hungry to play them again."

Howard defeated WTC in overtime, 76-70, in the second round of the tournament.

Oilers turn back Browns

CLEVELAND (AP) — Let's see. You had the team from Houston that's headed for Nashville playing the team from Cleveland that's headed for Baltimore.

For the moment, Nashville seems to be getting the better deal.

Chris Chandler passed for two touchdowns and ran for another Sunday as the Oilers beat the Browns 37-10 before a somber Cleveland Stadium crowd that was bracing for worse news today — possible confirmation that the Browns will move to Baltimore.

There were sporadic angry chants directed at Art Modell, who stayed away from a home game for the first time in his 35 years as owner, while the Browns themselves felt like visitors in their own home. There were an uncharacteristic 7,868 no-shows.

The Oilers empathized.

"The same type of thing happened to us with the Nashville rumor," Chandler said. "You look around toward the end of the game and you see signs like 'Keep the Browns here' or 'Art this' or 'Art that.' The fans were probably more hostile toward the situation than toward us."

Houston (4-5) capitalized on the unusual circumstance, scoring on seven consecutive possessions from the time Al Del Greco kicked a 44-yard field goal late in the first quarter to Blaine Bishop's 62-yard interception return early in the fourth.

The Oilers worked with excellent field position all afternoon, set up by a missed field goal, three interceptions and two fumbles; the Browns never punted.

Chandler finished off a 60-yard drive with a 2-yard scramble midway through the second quarter, then hit Haywood Jeffires with a 23-yard scoring pass a minute before the half.

Cowboys, Eagles meet tonight

IRVING (AP) — Teams know how to beat the Dallas Cowboys. But stopping Emmitt Smith is something few teams can accomplish.

It's the Philadelphia Eagles' recipe for success in tonight's NFC East divisional game against the Cowboys.

The only problem is Smith, a three-time NFL rushing champion, is off to his best start in his six-year career with the Cowboys.

"You can talk about stopping him but doing it is one of the toughest challenges for any team playing the Cowboys," said Philadelphia coach Ray Rhodes, a former coordinator for the San Francisco 49ers.

First, the statistics: The Cowboys are 56-6 in games where Smith carries the ball 20 times or more. They are 39-3 when he rushes for more than 100 yards.

Smith opened the season with four 100-yard rushing games for the first time in his career. He has six 100-yard rushing games for the season.

Before the game with the Eagles, Smith led the NFL in touchdowns with 14 and had 979 yards rushing.

Asked if this was his best year running the ball, Smith laughed and said, "I've been running like this since I was little. It has been a good start but there are eight more games to go."

Smith's best year was 1,713 yards in 1992. He's got a good chance for 2,000 if he can pick up his pace a little.

"Sure I'd be blessed to get 2,000 yards but it won't mean much if we don't get to the Super Bowl," Smith said.

Smith said the Eagles' defense worries him. Under Rhodes, the Eagles have become the second best defense in the NFL and sixth against the rush.

"It doesn't look like a cakewalk to me," Smith said. "What it second half, but they would not score again. Chandler responded with a 15-yard TD pass to Malcolm Seabron, and Cleveland rookie Eric Zeier was then intercepted on each of the Browns' next three series, putting Houston in position for two more field goals by Del Greco before Bishop's return ended all doubt.

"They had to play catch-up, and that played into our hands," Bishop said. "We put a lot of pressure on them, and then we were fortunate enough to break on the ball and make some big plays."

Zeier was 28 of 54 for 273 yards with one touchdown — a 4-yard pass to Andre Rison on Cleveland's first possession — and three interceptions. He was sacked three times.

Rison's touchdown was the 500th reception of his career.

"I'll take the blame for this loss," said Zeier, who beat Cincinnati a week earlier in his first start in place of demoted Vinny Testaverde. "As an offense, we got put into some situations that we didn't want to be in, and that's when you have to force things a little bit."

Zeier said all the talk about the pending move to Baltimore had little effect on the team, although he suggested the lack of enthusiasm from the normally rowdy crowd made a difference.

Off-election year offering very few proposition choices

By Arlene Levinson
AP National Writer

Political correctness in California. Secession in Kentucky. Affirmative action — by ZIP code, not race — in Minnesota. Not your usual ballot issues, they spice the thin stew of proposals that voters will decide Tuesday.

In the four-year election cycle, the November before a presidential contest for most voters means a break from the annual hurly-burly of picking officeholders.

With few statewide races, it also means fewer citizen initiatives, or referendums, since most of the 24 states that let voters enact laws by putting measures on the ballot limit them to general elections.

But constitutional amendments and local measures may be proposed any time. In at least 21 states, those will be most of the questions of public policy put to voters, as well as the usual bond issues, such as Maine's four issues totaling $91.9 million to pay for roads, railways, water and airports, and bridges.

And the more local, the quirkier.

Marin County, Calif., voters, whose $28,381 per capita income topped the 1990 census, will decide if they want a $40 million showcase designed by I.M. Pei to house researchers looking for ways to make old age more enjoyable.

People in the farming community of Tollesboro, Ky., furious since the county closed two schools, want to secede and join the county next door.

San Franciscans will answer the question: Should Cesar Chavez Street, named just this year for the late founder of the United Farm Workers Union, revert to its name since 1850: Army Street.

A measure on the St. Paul, Minn., ballot would require businesses getting at least $25,000 in government aid to favor city residents in hiring, plus pay those workers a "living wage" of $7.21

Texas Jews show unity after Rabin's assassination

By The Associated Press

Jewish leaders across Texas set aside their differences Sunday and pledged unity in the wake of the assassination of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

A former war hero who led his nation toward peace with the Arabs, Rabin was shot to death Saturday night at a peace rally in Tel Aviv, Israel.

Israeli police said a 25-year-old law student with links to the Jewish extremist fringe confessed, saying he acted on God's orders and didn't regret the deed.

In Dallas, rabbis and leaders of community groups from across the religious spectrum gathered Sunday morning to plan their next move.

"Basically, they discussed what they are going to do and agreed to have a community-wide memorial service Monday evening," said Yael Etzkin of the Shearith Israel Religious Office.

She said the time and place had not been set.

In Houston, community leaders called a memorial service Sunday night to mourn the fallen leader and to show unity in the face of the divisions among Jews that led to his death.

Israeli peace process still has long way to go

AP analysis

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The clear and heartfelt grief of Yasser Arafat symbolizes how far he and Yitzhak Rabin had moved toward peace. The act of a Jewish extremist who cut down Rabin and the celebrations by Arab opponents of conciliation demonstrate how far the process still must go.

President Clinton is attending today's funeral for the man he called "my partner and my friend." The president was on the edge of tears when he stood in the Rose Garden and said, "Goodbye, friend."

Former presidents Bush and Carter were also in the large U.S. delegation to the funeral for the warrior turned peacemaker. It was a tribute to the man as well as a signal of U.S. determination to keep the peace process moving forward.

How has Rabin's murder changed the prospects for peace?

"Peace must be and peace will be Prime Minister Rabin's lasting legacy," said Clinton.

Americans involved in the peace process over the years expressed hope that the assassination would strengthen Israeli support for reaching agreements with their Arab neighbors.

"This death must be a spur to action, to prevent the opponents of peace from destroying the process," Martin Indyk, U.S. ambassador to Israel, told CBS' "Face the Nation" on Sunday.

"I don't think there's any doubt that a majority of Israelis do want peace with the Palestinians," said Carter.

"I hope that nothing out of this tragic incident of terrorism will set back the process, set back Israel's desire to talk peace," said Bush. "I don't think it will. It shouldn't."

James A. Baker III, who was Bush's secretary of state, said part of the blame for the killing lies with the "verbal violence" that is so much a part of Israeli politics. "The rhetoric has to be cooled," he told ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley."

Arafat, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization, will not attend Rabin's funeral, a decision Itamar Rabinovich, the Israeli ambassador to the United States, called "a sensible decision. I know that personally he would have liked to come. The situation may be such that emotions run so high...antagonism to him personally still runs high in Israel."

Israel and the PLO have moved steadily, if slowly, toward peace. Negotiations between Israel and Syria are another matter. They remain deadlocked with no movement likely in the near future.

The day before Rabin was killed, Syria's Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa said Israel was not ready to push forward on peace talks with Syria until the spring of 1996.

Syria's state-run media reported Rabin's assassination but did not immediately comment on it. However, Syrian soldiers stationed in Beirut joined Lebanese in spontaneous celebration, with some shooting their guns in the air and chanting "Hafez! Hafez!" a reference to Syrian leader, Hafez Assad.

The assassination of Rabin by an Israeli extremist inevitably recalls the violent death of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, who was gunned down in 1981 by Islamic extremists opposed to the peace agreement reached by Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

Peace survived the death of Sadat. One of the mourners at Rabin's funeral will be Sadat's successor, Hosni Mubarak.

Today's hope is that the far broader peace initiative now under way will survive the loss of a leader.

Arafat looked visibly shaken when he expressed the hope that "the Israelis and the Palestinians have the ability to overcome this tragedy against the peace process and the whole situation in the Middle East."

Rabin and Arafat were blood enemies through the years that the Israeli served his country as a military leader and Arafat worked for Israel's destruction.

They met for the first time at the White House in September 1993 when they signed the peace agreement between Israel and the PLO. With Clinton looking on, Arafat held out his hand. Rabin hesitated, almost recoiled, but then reached out. The world saw their handshake and knew that something significant was happening.

Their handshake didn't end the terror — Arabs against Jews, Jews against Arabs.

Yet the talks went on and Rabin emerged as a staunch defender of his old enemy Arafat. When the PLO cracked down on extremists, the Israeli prime minister was quick to acknowledge it and to say, "We appreciate the efforts of the Palestinians."

"Terror is the main obstacle," Rabin said. "I have to explain to the people of Israel why instead of the peace I promise them, there is terror."

Now the people of Israel are asking themselves why Rabin fell victim to an act of terror by an Israeli.

Rabinovich described the mood in Israel as "an immense sense of anger. But there is a quest for healing and leadership. This will be the test not just for Mr. (Shimon) Peres, as the next prime minister, but for the whole country."

'America's' mayor coasts toward an election

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The barrel-bodied man in the dark gray suit stood on a subway platform for more than 30 minutes one morning last week and grabbed the hands of as many commuters as he could.

Mayor Edward G. Rendell never once had to introduce himself.

"It's the man, it's the mayor, he's gonna be president some day," one man shouted after Rendell reminded him to vote Tuesday.

Rendell's reminder became even more impassioned when one man assured him the election was "in the bag" and two women congratulated him.

But these things will happen to a man who leads his Republican challenger by a 7-to-1 margin, who has become a national media darling with the moniker of "America's Mayor" for pulling the city from the brink of financial ruin four years ago.

None of this is keeping the 51-year-old former district attorney from campaigning as if he were 20 points behind in the polls.

"You never take anything for granted," said Rendell, who is running for his second term.

Two other incumbents — Bob Lanier in Houston and Kurt Schmoke of Baltimore — see their large leads as an opportunity to conduct low-key campaigns.

Lanier, running for his third and final four years under a new term-limiting law, touts a steep reduction in crime during his tenure, an increase in the size of the police department and construction of more than 600 miles of sidewalks and 23,000 street lights.

He has two challengers in the nonpartisan race: David Wilson, a sign company owner opposing the mayor's affirmative action policies, and Elizabeth Spates, a former school trustee who has lost a half dozen other campaigns for public office.

Schmoke's challenge came during the primary, when he spent $2 million to defeat City Council President Mary Pat Clarke for a chance at a third term. He faces Republican Victor Clark, a 50-year-old accountant and car salesman.

"All Kurt Schmoke has to do is maintain an internal body temperature of 98.6 and he will win on Tuesday," said Herbert Smith, a pollster and political science professor at Western Maryland College.

Rendell's verve for campaigning stems naturally from his love of bustle, backslapping and schmoozing.

The pace of Rendell the candidate is virtually indistinguishable from the pace of Rendell the mayor, who often makes a half dozen public appearances on a weekday and 20 events on a Saturday.

"Basically it's the same, it's the same 18- or 19-hour day ... the same 4½ hours of sleep a night," Rendell said.

Rendell is challenged by former state Sen. Joseph Rocks, a Republican, Lance Haver of the Consumer Party and Deborah Liatos of the Socialist Workers' Party.

Rocks, 48, the son of a Philadelphia fireman, promises voters a different persona if he is elected mayor.

"I don't intend to be a mayor who runs around every day jumping into swimming pools," Rocks said earlier this week, taking a swipe at a Rendell campaign advertisement that shows him wading with children.

Voters won't see Rocks in any television ads before the election. He can't afford them.

Campaign finance reports released Oct. 27 showed that Rocks had just $55,000. Rendell, who has not organized a fund-raiser since spring, figures on spending more than nine times that amount in television advertisements alone.

Rocks insists that under the right conditions, he could pull off what would be the biggest upset in Philadelphia's history.

The conservative but fiercely pro-labor Republican said he's counting on the support of the city's 190,000 registered Republicans, people who feel their neighborhoods have been neglected and thousands of city employees who have lost holidays and wages under Rendell's cost-cutting efforts.

"We have a pretty bona fide coalition that Rendell has helped to create through his own arrogance," Rocks said. "It's arrogance to say you want a referendum on what you've done and that unless you get 55 percent of the vote you'll consider that a loss."

Rendell admits he's shooting for at least 55 percent of the vote. But he says he'll take a win any way he can get it.

He expects that, in many ways, a second term could pose even more challenges than the first. The city continues to lose good-paying jobs, and Rendell fears federal budget cuts could cost Philadelphia $100 million by 1997.

G. Terry Madonna, a political scientist at Millersville University, said voters recognize Philadelphia still has many problems.

"But voters generally believe Rendell is doing as much as humanly possible," Madonna said. "He's simply the man at the moment."

Loud-praying women return to area church

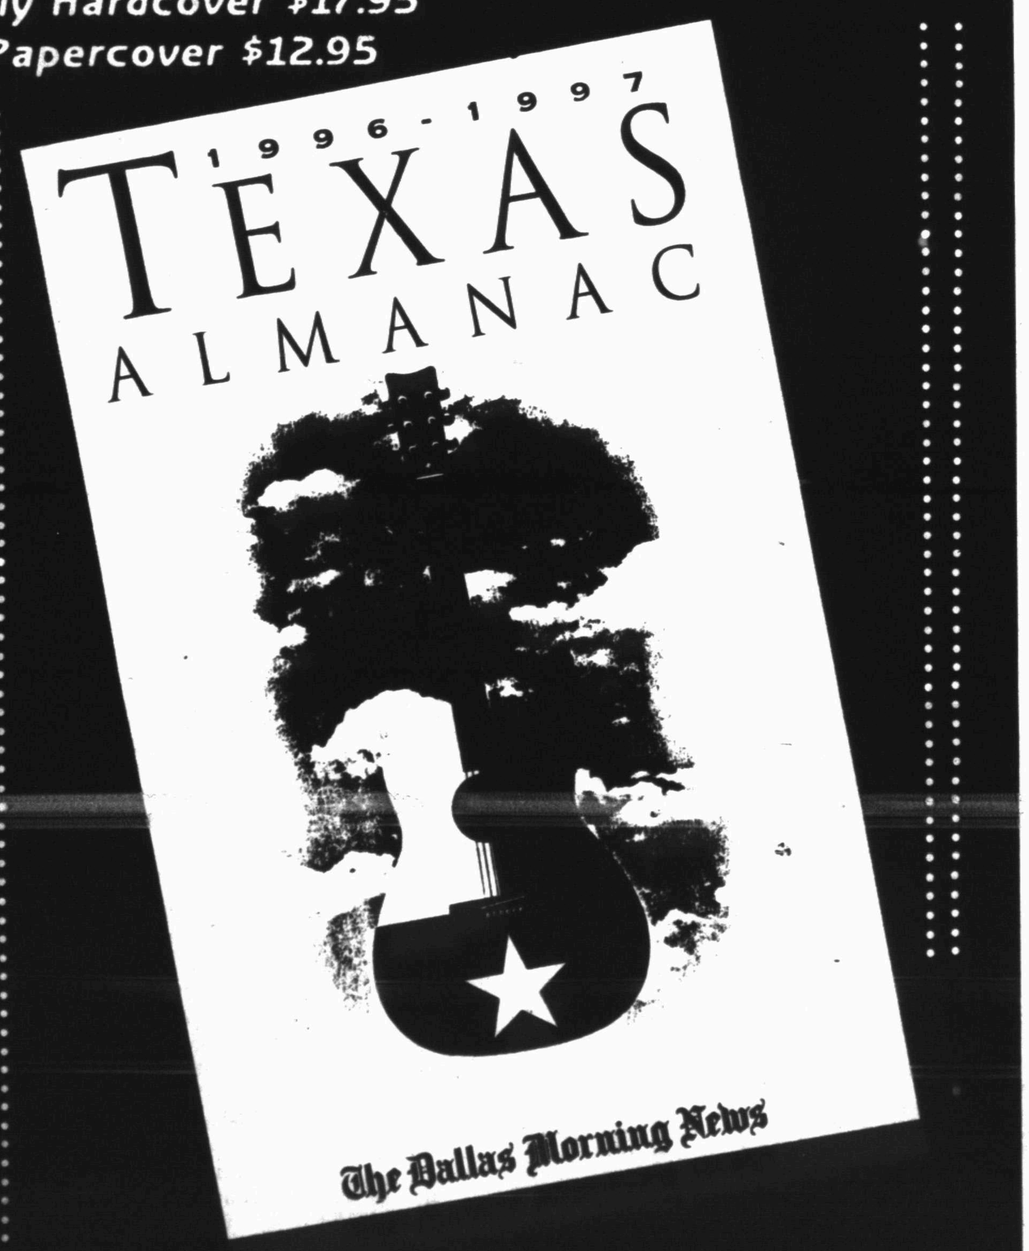

CORAOPOLIS, Pa. (AP) — The so-called rosary ladies, barred from two Roman Catholic churches earlier this year for praying too loudly, have taken their high-decibel devotion to another church.

On Saturday, their shouted prayers forced about 25 other worshipers out of the main sanctuary of St. Margaret Mary Church in Moon Township, 10 miles west of Pittsburgh.

"It's very disruptive," parishioner Elizabeth Weaver said. "We've been doing the rosary here for 30 years."

Suspect freed after 11 years, doubts remain

CHICAGO (AP) — It was an end, but not a resolution.

A judge's acquittal Friday of Rolando Cruz in the abduction, rape and murder of 10-year-old Jeanine Nicarico brought to a close more than 11 years of prosecutors' efforts to send Cruz to the death chamber.

The victim's parents, Thomas and Patricia Nicarico, listened in stunned silence and left without commenting.

"Right now, I just feel Cruz has gotten away with murder," Thomas Nicarico said Saturday from their home in suburban Naperville. "I don't know what else to say right now.

"This verdict is not closure for us. ... We know that the victim, Jeanine, is not No. 1 in the courtroom. The defendant is," he said.

The legal battle has taken a toll on the Nicaricos, who have sat through a total of five trials between Cruz and co-defendant Alejandro Hernandez.

Hernandez and Cruz both were convicted and sentenced to death twice, only to have their convictions overturned by the Illinois Supreme Court.

State's attorney Anthony Peccarelli said the decision by Circuit Judge Ronald Mehling would not stop prosecutors from retrying Hernandez, despite the discovery of perjured testimony Friday. The next court date in that case is Nov. 20.

Phone messages left for Cruz's lawyers were not immediately returned Saturday. On Friday, Cruz told the Chicago Tribune that on his first full day of freedom he planned to visit the grave of his father, Robert Cruz, who died while Cruz was in prison.

He also told ABC-TV, "I'm just happy right now. ... Maybe later I'll be angry, but not now." And on Saturday, he told WGN-TV that he understands Jeanine's father's reaction. "He has a right to be bitter. ... You got to be sad for them. ... They lost a daughter."

Attorney Frank Wesolowski defended Hernandez during the first trial in 1984 and always felt the defendants were innocent. "I feel vindicated. ... It's about time," he said.

Jeanine was home sick on Feb. 25, 1983, when the door to her family's home was kicked in. Her body was found two days later near a nature trail.

Cruz and Hernandez were convicted in a joint trial and sentenced to death in 1984. That jury deadlocked on a third man, Stephen Buckley. Charges against Buckley later were dropped, and the convictions were overturned on procedural grounds.

Cruz was convicted again in 1990 and sentenced to death. After one trial ended in a hung jury, Hernandez was convicted again and sentenced to 80 years in prison in 1991. Those convictions also were overturned.

Investigators at the Nicarico home found little physical evidence — a tire track outside, a small footprint near a window and a larger footprint on the kicked-in door.

Crime lab reports failed to match a door shoeprint to the defendants and determined the smaller print was made by a woman's shoe. But when prosecutors brought in outside witnesses to testify that unscientific appraisals of the prints implicated the defendants, investigators from two crime labs changed their stories, Wesolowski said.

"That's the closest evidence they had to back up a theory that there was more than one person involved," Wesolowski said.

The most incriminating evidence offered against Cruz was a statement investigators say he made after the murder. That statement was not videotaped and not logged in police records. Supporters say he never made it.

On Friday, county sheriff's Lt. James Montesano admitted lying about the statement. Montesano told the judge he was on vacation in May 1983, at the time he previously said a detective told him Cruz knew details of the murder that only the killer could know. Montesano's testimony directly contradicted statements he made at an earlier hearing.

Another facet to the complex case came when Brian Dugan, who is serving two life sentences for the murders of a 7-year-old girl and a 27-year-old woman, said he alone killed Jeanine.

But Dugan has refused to repeat his story in court unless prosecutors promise not to seek the death penalty. Prosecutors have refused, saying they didn't believe Dugan because of inconsistencies in his account.

Dugan's attorney, Thomas McCulloch, said the impact of the Cruz verdict on his client was unclear.

Ed Cisowski, a former state police commander who oversaw an investigation of Dugan's confession in 1985, said authorities disregarded his report that Dugan was Jeanine's killer.

Cisowski met Cruz for the first time Friday, at a celebration in honor of Cruz's release. Cisowski said Cruz thanked him.

"It was a good feeling to see him out, where he belongs," Cisowski said Saturday. "I only hope the Nicaricos gain closure from this. I hope they can understand that Brian Dugan is the perpetrator."

Fashion week preview of spring designs ends

NEW YORK (AP) — Brace yourself for next spring, when styles take their cue from four daringly bare models who led the DKNY runway in nothing but slinky stretch skirts. Oh, and rubbery sandals.

What will today's well-dressed woman have in common with these mannequins forced to fold their arms across their chests for a modicum of modesty?

Plenty, but don't despair. The point - after you add a trendy midriff-baring top - is fuss-free dressing. Minimalistic style. Pared-down shapes. Bare legs. Few, if any, accessories. Body-clinging synthetic fabrics.

The fashion previews wrapped up on Friday, and New York designers agree that relaxed chic, as the industry dubs it, has landed.

The theme is clothing that is spare and back-to-basics. If bells and whistles are your thing, better sit this season out. The nostalgic restraint that's dressing everyone this fall in Jacqueline Kennedy's crisp and clean sleeveless sheaths isn't leaving anytime soon.

Apropos Jackie, proper and polished are the operative words. Spring's updated suit is an ensemble consisting of a sleek sleeveless sheath under boxy dressmaker jacket, sculpted blazer or swingy coat. Social-set designers Bill Blass and Oscar de la Renta naturally excel at the image. Ditto Carolina Herrera, who adds little structured handbags, fleshtone sheer hose and fishnet gloves. But so does Isaac Mizrahi, who offers a peach lace sheath with matching satin coat and peach lace pumps. (Give yourself an extra point if your top-handle handbag also comes in the same fabric as your dress).

Not that a dress is required. Look to Todd Oldham, who designs '70s-style flared suede jeans with matching coats. Pants are covering lots of legs, and they're slim, flared and low-slung to showcase the season's much-exposed midriff. Retro-styled chain belts sit low on the hips.

Betsey Johnson revives beatnik-style capri pants of the '50s, and Anna Sui strolls down memory lane with madras clamdiggers.

On top, sexy, slim knit camisoles from Ellen Tracy look trendy, as do stretchy scuba tops in pulsing colors from Ralph Lauren.

Spring's palette is drenched in frosted pastels and acid brights. Green stages a major comeback, sprouting at Nicole Miller in everything from avocado to pale grape and pistachio. On a blue note, Calvin Klein offers aqua suede pants, sky blue matte jersey tunics and cornflower dresses.

Tutti-frutti brights burst onto sunny clothes, most notably Ralph Lauren's lineup of super-sleek gowns in a rainbow of eye-popping pinks, oranges, purples and reds. Geoffrey Beene comes up with flying colors, with a dark orange wool zip-up jacket with yellow satin zipper and pockets and bright orange cuffs.

Summery patterns crop up in the guise of unmellow-yellow shirtwaist dresses printed with giant lemons at Cynthia Rowley, red and yellow sunflower-printed trench coats at Cynthia Steffe, and tulip-embroidered gowns at Carolina Herrera. Norma Kamali offers poppy-printed capri pants.

The high-voltage colors call for electrifying shine, which shows up as laminated linen at Ellen Tracy, pearlized leathers at DKNY, and shimmery fake leather just about everywhere. Richard Tyler takes a shine to gold metallic cheongsams.

But there's more. Navy and white are a perennial classic for spring, and you can count on Bill Blass, Ralph Lauren and Oscar de la Renta to stock their racks with a bevy of suits, pantsuits and A-line sheaths plus coats in the season's favored fabrics - nubby silk shantung, lightweight double-faced wool and matte jersey.

Top off with a trendy hair extension or wig. Fake ponytails were big at Donna Karan; Cynthia Rowley went for long, thick braids; and Carolina Herrera coiffed her models in blonde bobs. So faux, and, as they say, fabulous.

Magician, fiancee juggle careers

NEW YORK (AP) — David Copperfield says that being a magician and illusionist isn't enough to maintain his relationship with fiancee Claudia Schiffer — he has to be a juggler, too.

"We juggle careers by having three schedules: I have my schedule, she's got her schedule, we've got our schedule," he said in an interview published in Sunday's Daily News. "We have a 'two-week' rule. We're never away from each other for more than two weeks. Actually, my most fascinating trick is paying the phone bill."

So far, there's still no wedding date.

"We're just taking our time with it and enjoying our engagement," he said.

Nolan Electric: experience, quality work

Located at 1010 25th Street for 16 years, Nolan Electric has an accumulation of several years of experience. They have been here through the good times and the low times when the oil economy took a big drop.

Bobby Nolan takes great pride in doing a professional job, and the men that work for him believe in this same pride. They are licensed electricians and apprentices. An ethical code is there that prevents them from doing anything that would be against the National Electrical Code. This code is there for the safety of everyone. Many people don't realize that there are several years of experience needed before a person can become a qualified licensed electrician. First of all, an apprentice (one who is learning) must be under the teaching of a journeyman electrician for a period of four years. At that time he can take a test and if he passes, he'll become a journeyman electrician. A journeyman electrician must then work for four years and at the end of that time he may take a test to become a master electrician. Only a master electrician can operate his own business. Bobby Nolan has been a master electrician for about 30 years, although he has only been in business for eighteen years.

At this time, Nolan Electric has two master electricians (Bobby Nolan and Bobby Jones) and one journeyman electrician (James Swigert), and two apprentice electricians (Joe Collier and Rodney Mann). James has been with Nolan Electric for about three years now and although he is not a master electrician he has several more than the four years experience needed to become a master. Bobby Jones just recently joined Nolan Electric after an absence of about three years. He had worked for them before and also was a partner in another electrical business for several years before then. There are a lot of total years experience with this group of men.

Nolan Electric has a variety of work that they specialize in. Some of these things include: new residential and new commercial wiring; remodels of homes or businesses; trouble-shooting electrical problems; wiring and lighting on signs (including roadway signs — they have two bucket trucks that can meet these needs; electrical hot water heater repairs; and repair of all types of lamps. Also they have a large variety of electrical supplies for those that like to do their own home wiring. They work on all types of lighting — florescent, incandescent, metal-halide, high-pressure sodium, and quartz. As a result they carry a large supply of these lamps and ballasts. Kim Nolan will be there in the office to help you with the purchase of any of these supplies. If they don't have it, they can usually order it and receive it within 24-48 hours. Sometimes special items may take several days if the suppliers are out of stock. Kim takes care of the office and answers the phone during normal office hours: Monday-Friday 8 a.m.-noon and 1-5 p.m. She also repairs a variety of lamps and keeps a supply of lamp parts.

All of those at Nolan Electric wish to express their thanks to all of their customers. There have been some times when they couldn't get to all the work that needed to be done. With an added electrician, they are better able to meet your electrical needs without you having to wait a long time for them to get to your work. They appreciate the patience of those customers who chose to wait for them during the time that work was overflowing. Please call us for all of your electrical needs: 1-915-573-5117. Once again, they want to thank you so much for your support.

Barbieri reportedly sells LA condominium

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson's former girlfriend Paula Barbieri reportedly has sold her Los Angeles condominium.

The model's 1,400-square-foot condo on Wilshire Boulevard sold for close to the $220,000 asking price, the Los Angeles Times said Sunday, citing unidentified sources.

The unit, which Barbieri owned for four years, was put on the market in April. At the time, her attorney said Barbieri, 26, intended to make her Florida home her primary residence.

Another figure from the Simpson case also has taken up a new residence.

Defense attorney Robert Shapiro and wife, Linell, have leased a Beverly Hills house owned by actress Doris Day while their home has earthquake damage repaired, unidentified sources told the newspaper. The Shapiros are paying just under the $10,000-a-month asking price.

Rabin buried today in Israel

Impassioned pleas for peace made at funeral

JERUSALEM (AP) — Yitzhak Rabin was laid to rest today at a remarkable gathering of world leaders who saluted the slain prime minister's unwavering courage in war and peace. His tearful granddaughter, in a moving eulogy, spoke of the pain of losing her "private hero."

Rabin, who led Israel to triumphs on the battlefield, then stretched out a hand of peace to his Arab neighbors, was buried with full military honors in a pine glade atop a hill overlooking the volatile city where he was born 73 years ago.

His funeral brought to Israel not only leaders of the West with close ties to the Jewish state, but also heads of state from the Arab world, testimony that Rabin's three years of peacemaking have changed the Middle East.

follow.

"I see our Arab neighbors and I want to tell them that peace is attainable both here and with you," he said.

It was a remarkable sight to see the Jordanian king, in a white-and-red checkered Arab headdress, and President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt speaking in Jerusalem in praise of an Israeli leader.

"You lived as a soldier, you died as a soldier for peace," Jordan's King Hussein told the 4,000 mourners at the Mount Herzl cemetery, under a bright Jerusalem sun. "I believe it is time for all of us to come out openly and speak about peace."

The most poignant words came from Rabin's 17-year-old granddaughter, Noa Ben Artzi, who said she wanted to speak of the man, not the peacemaker.

"You are our hero, lone wolf," the red-haired, freckled young woman said, weeping as she spoke of the laconic, intensely private man.

Serbian leaders irritated by pressure to give concessions

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — With pressure mounting on Slobodan Milosevic to make key concessions, the Serbian leader was said to be indignant toward U.S. organizers of the Bosnia peace talks, claiming they had misled him about the contents of a draft agreement.

The conference, which brought together Bosnia's three warring parties for the first time in two years, opened Wednesday at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base.

It is expected to last at least two more weeks, according to an official involved in the talks, who spoke on condition that he not be identified because of the news blackout clamped on the talks.

Mediators reportedly are zeroing in on Milosevic, demanding he sack Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic and military commander Gen. Ratko Mladic, formally recognize Bosnia and Croatia, and assure human rights for ethnic minorities in Serbia.

Milosevic claims that Richard Holbrooke, the chief U.S. negotiator, did not mention such demands during his trips to the region. Holbrooke's shuttle diplomacy laid the groundwork for the current conference by getting Muslims, Croats and Serbs to agree on a set of constitutional principles that would establish Bosnia as a union of two ethnic entities.

"Milosevic is upset because he thinks the Americans brought him to Dayton on false pretenses," said another official familiar with the Serbian leader's reaction. "They want him to make concessions that were not mentioned during Holbrooke's talks with him" in Serbia.

Busy weekend for area officers

Seven people were arrested over the weekend, including two early this morning. Area law officers also investigated several reports of residential burglaries and worked three traffic accidents.

Thirty-four-year-old Jose Guadalupe Torres, Jr., 1010 26th St., was taken into custody at 12:49 a.m. today in the 500 block of 28th Street for felony driving while intoxicated and evading arrest. Also taken into custody was a 33-year-old female. She was originally arrested for public intoxication. Criminal mischief charges were added after she allegedly damaged the dashboard of a patrol vehicle.

At 6:45 p.m. Saturday, officers arrested a 76-year-old male in the 1700 block of 9th Street for misdemeanor driving while intoxicated.

DPS troopers arrested a 33-year-old male at 2:24 a.m. Sunday for misdemeanor driving while intoxicated. He was arrested three miles east of Hermleigh on U.S. Highway 84.

Two people were arrested by sheriff's deputies at 10:17 p.m. Sunday on County Road 4125. Taken into custody were a 31-year-old male and a 61-year-old male. Both were arrested for public intoxication.

At 11:54 p.m. Sunday, officers arrested a 17-year-old female on outstanding city warrants for expired motor vehicle registration, disregarding a stop sign and violating a promise to appear.

Two juveniles were taken into custody at 2:34 a.m. today. One was issued a citation for no driver's license. Both were later released to their parents.

In other activity over the weekend, an offense report for someone running over a mailbox was submitted at 1:06 p.m. Saturday on Route 1.

An officer was requested at Rip Griffin's at 9:10 p.m. Saturday in reference to two juvenile females trying to hitch rides with truckers. The two girls were taken into custody as runaways.

At 12:42 a.m. Sunday, an officer was requested at 2709 Ave. O in reference to a burglary of a habitation.

An officer was requested at Cogdell Hospital at 6:14 a.m. Sunday in reference to a patient having a knife. The knife was taken away from the patient. No charges were filed.

A woman came to the Law Enforcement Office at 10:12 a.m. Sunday in reference to damage being done to an office window. A report for Class B criminal mischief was filed.

A two-vehicle accident was investigated at 2:16 p.m. Sunday at the intersection of 30th Street and College Avenue. Involved were a 1989 Chevrolet driven by Judy Morris Davis of 2903 Ave. T and a 1980 Ford driven by Francisco Morales Ramirez of 1706 N. Ave. Q. Ramirez, 32, was treated for minor injuries at Cogdell Hospital and released.

Cogdell Hospital treated three other individuals Sunday for minor injuries. 12-year-old Justin Cline of 309 34th St. and 9-year-old Jason Bates of Lubbock were taken to Cogdell following an apparent motorcycle accident around 2 p.m. on Sunday. Thirty-three-year-old Donnie Moore of Ira was treated for minor injuries in a one-vehicle accident about 6:30 p.m. Sunday. All three were released after treatment.

An offense report for burglary was submitted at 2:44 p.m. Sunday in reference to a burglary at a residence in the 2100 block of KSNY Drive.

A minor accident was reported at 7:33 p.m. Sunday at G&G Grocery. Involved was a 1995 Ford Crown Victoria police vehicle driven by Jerry Dale Cowin of 3902 Eastridge. The vehicle sideswiped a wooden pole at the convenience store.

An offense report for family violence was submitted at 9:29 p.m. Sunday.

An offense report for a burglary of a residence was submitted at 9:47 p.m. Sunday from 1913 Coleman, Apt. 3.

Officers investigated a minor accident at 6:20 p.m. Friday in the 4000 block of College Avenue. Involved were a 1978 Cadillac driven by Bennie Hellums of 2204 38th St. and a 1985 Chevrolet driven by Jason Michael Crunk of 6009 Mountain View.

Clinton, Carter, Bush lead U.S. delegation to Israel for funeral

JERUSALEM (AP) — President Clinton and a U.S. delegation of about 100 mourners — including former Presidents Carter and Bush — made a pilgrimage today to remember slain Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and to help keep his dream of peace alive.

"All of us are feeling an enormous sense of loss," Clinton said at a press briefing aboard Air Force One, with Bush and Carter sitting beside him.

A host of Cabinet officers, Congress members and civic leaders also were aboard the somber flight that left Andrews Air Force Base Sunday evening, bound for Rabin's funeral today in Jerusalem.

At times during the 10-hour flight, Clinton and the two former presidents spoke privately, sharing personal memories of Rabin, a White House spokesman said.

Carter said the bipartisan showing from the United States would be important to Israeli leaders trying to preserve the fragile peace process after Rabin's assassination.

"In a time of sorrow and grief, it's very important that every Israeli know that the United States stands behind them with full support," Carter said. "We're not only supportive of Israel, but also of the peace process."

While in Israel, Clinton planned to offer private condolences to Rabin's widow, Leah, and to meet with his successor, Shimon Peres, as well as the leadership of the opposition Likud party, the administration official said.

Bush said he hoped the assassination would not interfere with attempts to make peace between the Arab and Jewish states.

Propositions vary in states an hour.

The words "homosexual" and "sexual orientation" do not appear in an anti-gay rights measure in Maine, but the most controversial item on the ballot would bar civil rights protections for homosexuals anywhere in the state by forbidding any new categories of protection to be added to existing law.

Mississippi is expected to become the 22nd state to limit terms for lawmakers in the state's first use of its citizen initiative.

A New Jersey proposal would compel legislators to provide enactment money for any law imposed on local governments or school districts.

Texans could shut down their treasurer's office and give the job to the comptroller, a cost-cutter even the Democratic incumbent endorses. In fact, Martha Whitehead won election last year promising to plug for abolition of her 119-year-old agency. Estimated savings: $22 million and 160 jobs.

Just three years after Jefferson City, Mo., voters approved riverboat gambling they're being asked to reconsider. A second measure would ban riverboat gambling and bar city employees from taking gifts or money from gambling operators.

More gambling could be on the way in Washington state where a ballot proposal would open American Indian-run casinos around the clock and allow slot machines and video poker — and promise all registered voters part of the action with an annual payout estimated at $100 a head.

Voters in Springfield and Chicopee, Mass., cast ballots in non-binding referendums on permitting casinos. The Indiana counties of Clark and Floyd decide if they want riverboat gambling. And seven California communities vote on whether to permit gambling in card rooms.
