Trade bill floundering; veto threatened

STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Trade Representative said today President Reagan will veto a massive trade bill passed by the Senate and called on congressional Democrats to revive it "very quickly" without a controversial plant-closings provision.

"We need a trade bill this year," Clayton K. Yeutner said on NBC-TV's "Today" program.

"There are a lot of good things in that legislation, so if a couple of necessary corrections are made and the bill comes back, I'm really quite confident the president would sign it," he said.

A major argument involving the measure deals with the issue of a sixty-day prior notice for any plant that plans to close — and it may

The plant-closing provision is "like swimming the English channel and you get about a mile out and someone hands you a 500-pound barbell and says: 'Here, carry this.'" — Sen. John C. Danforth prove to be the undoing of the bill's success at the president's desk.

One local manufacturer has some opinions on the subject, "having seen both sides of the coin," according to Charles Neefe, who operates Neefe Technical, Inc., an optical technology firm at 811 Scurry St.

His Big Spring firm employed more than 50 employees at one time — although it's changed considerably in recent years and is now reduced to a few employees selling technology, as opposed to a manufacturer.

He said the staff reduction he experienced is a good example of what manufacturers must deal with in a changing economy.

Neefe said, when contacted by the Herald, that any reduction is difficult to deal with, when it involves employees who have been loyal for many years.

The other side of the coin, Neefe said, involves a small percentage of employees who take such a reduction personally — and plant equipment suffers at their hands.

"A few people can cause all sorts of problems," he said, explaining that machinery can and has been damaged, even when people decide to leave "for their own, personal reasons."

His experience has taught him that if a 60-day notice was given, "there would be no production; without it, you can't fill your orders."

The result for his firm, in once instance, was the destruction of "a couple hundred pairs of contact lenses" when some individuals responded to the news of lost jobs.

Those lenses had to be replaced, he said, but all were late: "the doctors were mad, the patients were mad — it inconvenienced things," Neefe said, besides the additional cost.

"Just one is all it takes," he said, to cause so much damage.

If given such lengthy notice, he said, you could expect "no production," and if 90 percent of the employees remain loyal, 10 percent can do considerable damage.

Maintaining any loyalty "for executives is difficult — for an hourly employee, it's impossible," Neefe concluded.

The bill had cleared the House last week with more than enough votes to override a veto. But after Democrats fell short in the Senate, Reagan made his veto intentions clear.

Asked what he planned to do with the measure, he replied: "Just what I promised."

Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., a GOP sponsor, said the chief problem in the Senate was the provision to require all but the smallest employers to give 60-day notice of plant closings and large-scale layoffs.

Adding the provision, he said, "was like swimming the English

City election spurs local early voting

HERALD STAFF REPORT

If the absentee ballot boxes are an accurate barometer, the Big Spring City Council race is generating considerable interest, while early Howard County school election enthusiasm is limited.

The nine-candidate city council election is prompting lots of early voting, a city spokeswoman said today.

School board elections in Howard County are not proving to be a big draw for absentee voters, according to school officials.

In the ten days since absentee voting for the council race began, 55 local residents have voted, according to Mita Waltrip, assistant city secretary.

"That's a lot larger than normal — and that's not even counting mail-outs," Waltrip said of the voting. "We're real proud of the turnout so far." Five ballots have been mailed to residents as of this morning, she added.

Nine candidates are competing for three at-large spots on the council. Each term will be for three years.

The candidates are: Bob Smith, 4048 Vicky St.; Sidney Clark, 2707 Coronado Ave.; Ron Booth, 511 Edwards Blvd.; Jerry Roach, 1108 E. Fifth St.; Melvin Daratt, 500 E. 23rd St.; Gail Earls, 4016 Parkway Road; Chuck Condray, 4016 Vicky St.; and Dorothy and James Leffler, 1209 Douglas St.

An at-large election open to all city voters and less restrictions on absentee voting were the main reasons Waltrip gave for the turnout.

Persons can vote absentee at the City Secretary's office in City Hall until the close of business Tuesday, she added.

Chief deputy county clerk Donna Morris said today that elections in the Big Spring Independent School District have drawn 50 absentee ballots through Wednesday.

"In district two we've had four in the office," Morris said. "I mailed out three and haven't gotten any of them back. In district four we've had nine in the office, I mailed out nine more and we've had three of

Uneasy duty

Sailor expressed reluctance

WILLIS (AP) — The family of Robert Bordelon Jr. had looked forward to a November reunion, but instead they were making funeral plans for the career Navy man killed during an explosion aboard the USS Bonfish submarine.

The body of Bordelon, 39, and two other crewmen who had been missing since the Sunday explosion in the 30-year-old submarine's battery compartment were found early Wednesday inside the vessel.

A Navy lieutenant's 6 a.m. visit to the home of Bordelon's mother east of Willis confirmed relatives' worst fears.

"The door bell rings at 6 o'clock in the morning, and you know. In our minds, we probably knew he was dead. But, in our hearts, we were still hoping," said Richard Etie, the fiancé of Bordelon's mother, Adell Burger.

In telephone conversations with relatives before boarding the submarine in mid-April, Bordelon expressed concern over mechanical problems on the Bonfish.

On Wednesday, relatives were trying to cope with the realization that Bordelon would not be coming home.

After almost 20 years of military service, the petty officer 1st class had planned to retire in November and settle in his hometown of Willis, a town of about 2,500 people, located 40 miles north of Houston, nestled among the Sam Houston National Forest.

Relatives said he wanted to remarry and raise a family and possibly manage restaurants, the Houston Chronicle reported.

His son, Robert John "B.J." Bordelon, 14, lives with Bordelon's ex-wife.

"My feeling is if a man has put 19 years and so many months into the service and is fixing to retire, you don't send him out on a training mission. I'm sure he was training other people — but I don't think like the government, I guess," said Etie.

David Bordelon, 37, said the Navy indicated it would be two to three days before his brother's body is returned to Texas. The family plans a military funeral at Conroe's Metcalf funeral home with burial at Willis Cemetery.

"We're going up to clear the plot today," said the brother, who lives in Houston. "We were all praying and hoping that he could still be alive. It's really rough."

He said he's sure his brother died while saving others during the submarine's mass evacuation.

"That was his job — getting people out. That was his responsibility, and Bobby is the kind who would help anybody."

Navy officials have said Bordelon and the others who had been missing were last seen in the vessel's control room and might have died while saving their comrades.

Bordelon's relatives said Navy officials did not tell them where his body was found in the submarine.

"There's a lot of information we're still waiting on," said his brother. "I hope we know some of the details soon."

Relatives said they found it strange that Bordelon called all his relatives before boarding the submarine.

"It was like he knew something was wrong," said another brother, Larry Roach, 32, of Trinity. "He didn't want to go."

His stepfather, L.C. Roach of Willis, said he could better cope with the tragedy had his son been in an attack situation, "not just a routine training deal."

"He told me 'Dad, I just don't want to go,'" he recalled of their last telephone conversation. "I think if the circumstances were different with his death, I'd cope better with it."

Saturday fiddlin'

HERALD STAFF REPORT

The top fiddlers in the area are expected to converge on Big Spring Saturday when the second annual Crossroads Fiddler's Contest begins at noon in Highland Mall.

"We expect some of the best fiddlers in the country," Mike Henderson of the Crossroads Fiddler's Association said, and will be competing for $1,500 in prize money, he added.

Registration for the event — sponsored by Highland Mall merchants — is scheduled to begin at 11:30 a.m., and competition will be split in four categories, Henderson said.

The first group — age 65 or over — will begin the contest at noon, to be followed by fiddlers 26-64 and 0-25 age groups. Prize money offered in these groups range from $125 for first place to $25 for fifth, he said.

There also will be an accompanist's competition for guitar players, with no age limit and prizes of $90 for first place and $60 for second being offered.

At the end of regular competition, the top two finishers from each fiddler age bracket will compete in the Grand Prize category, with the winner earning $125 and the runner-up $100, Henderson said.

The contest is approved by the Texas Old-Time Fiddlers' Association and admission is free to the public. In addition to the fiddlers, Mike Payne and his band will perform.

Outlook uncertain for oil tax break

By BOB MITCHELL
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The budget deficit and controversy over the trade bill spell uncertainty for oil and gas industry tax breaks, White House and congressional spokesmen have said.

Appearing at the annual meeting of the National Ocean Industries Association, an offshore energy trade group, April 11, Reagan administration and congressional officials offered a guarded assessment for industry tax breaks in the next several years because of the deficit and controversy over the trade bill.

At the same time, the picture is further clouded by the change in administrations that will follow the 1988 elections, they said.

The trade bill pending in Congress contains legislation that would repeal the so-called windfall profits tax, but administration officials have indicated several times that President Reagan is likely to veto the measure because he believes it is protectionist.

Established when oil prices were decontrolled in the 1970s, the windfall profit tax has not generated revenue for the federal government for several years because of the decline in oil prices. But the industry contends that the tax is a barrier to oil and gas exploration and drilling.

Despite support for repealing the windfall profits tax, the trade bill's chances of passage appear "problematic" because of White House opposition to other parts of the measure, said Robert Dawson, associate director of the Office of Management and Budget.

But if the trade bill is defeated, the administration would support finding another way of repealing the windfall tax, said Assistant Treasury Secretary Don Chapoton. "We are committed to getting that tax repealed," he said.

In the future, continued pressure to reduce the federal budget deficit will complicate efforts to provide the oil and gas industry with tax breaks, experts said. But if Congress raises tax rates for the industry, it is likely to compensate by providing oil and gas companies with tax relief in some areas, they said.

The outlook for energy-industry tax breaks also depends on the outcome of the 1988 presidential elections, said Gould and Michael Telson, an energy analyst for the House Budget Committee.

Any effort to provide tax breaks to the oil and gas industries in the next several years will run up against pressure to reduce the federal deficit that will keep lawmakers from giving up tax revenues, they said.

"I don't think anyone can possibly predict what the prospects are for tax increases next year," Gould said. "There will have to be some procedures for coming to grips with the budget (deficit)."

The Congressional Budget Office estimates that the federal budget deficit in 1989 will exceed the target.

channel and you get about a mile out and someone hands you a 500-pound barbell and says: 'Here, carry this.'"

Business groups opposed the measure and Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., called it "an intrusion by the federal government" into private industry.

Supporters said workers deserve some warning from companies about to throw them out of work.

"Nearly 2 million people have lost their jobs each year," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. "Yet the administration does not want workers to know their jobs are in danger and to have time to plan for new ways to provide for their families."

The bill also would increase the power of the U.S. trade representative to act against other countries that use unfair trade practices, make it easier to curb imports, repeal the windfall profits tax on oil companies, and increase agricultural subsidies.

The governments of Japan and Korea today urged Reagan to veto the measure. There was also a warning from the European Economic Community of retaliatory action if Reagan doesn't kill it.

Japan's chief government spokesman, Keizo Obuchi, said the bill which imposes sanctions against Toshiba Corp. may hinder world economic development.

"The government of Japan strongly hopes that such a bill will not finally be enacted," said Obuchi.

South Korea Foreign Ministry spokesman Kim Hwang-kyung said the bill would hinder international trade and the government hopes the Reagan administration "will take appropriate actions in line with its much publicized stand on the bill."

Willy de Clercq, EEC commissioner for external trade, said the EEC "will react" to measures in the bill it considers protectionist and harmful to European interests if Reagan does not veto it.

The Senate approved the bill 63-36 Wednesday. That left Democrats at least three votes short of the two-thirds majority needed to enact their version over Reagan's objections.

The bill would get Reagan's signature, said Yeutler, if it were not for the provision, strongly backed by Democrats and labor, requiring companies to give workers 60 days notice of intended plant closings.

"It is good in many, many respects," Yeutler said today of the bill on "CBS This Morning." "We hope that a responsible and constructive bill will come back through the process very quickly, and if so the president will sign it."

Democrats had fought for 14 Republican votes to assure them of a total of 66.

Say you see two women at a party. You don't know that one is 23 years old, the other 25. But can you readily guess their ages? If you're a woman, you probably can. If you're a man, you probably can't. So says a male psychologist. He says he does not know why women can see the subtle differences between 23 and 25 while men can't.

Trustees call special meeting

HERALD STAFF REPORT

The Big Spring Independent School District Board of Trustees called a special meeting for noon today in the Goliad Cafeteria.

Items on the agenda included a career ladder update, a request to waive judgement on property, an appointment of an asbestos designee and a resolution honoring Jimmy Anderson, who is leaving the school board following this election, according to superintendent Bill McQueary.

"We feel like we should recognize Jimmy for his service to the community, so we have a resolution that we'll offer to the board on that," he said today.

A presentation by administrator Ron Logback is also scheduled, McQueary said. "I don't know all the details involved, but it will be a presentation on what we need to do to comply with the new HERA law."

The law is a federal regulation requiring the removal of hazardous materials such as asbestos from public school buildings.

The board will then hear an information-only item proposing a change in the requirements for substitute teachers from a minimum educational limit of a high school diploma to upgrade that requirement to two years of college, McQueary said.

The school board races pit Donnie Baker, 2303 Cindy Lane, against Doug Morris, 2502 Cindy Lane, for the district four three-year term; Ford Farris, 900 Highland Drive, is running unopposed in the district two race for a three-year term, and the at-large candidates vying for a one-year term are John Webb, 4017 Vicky St., against Al Valdes, 626 Caylor Drive.

No absentee votes have yet been cast in the Forsan school board elections, according to Nancy Graves, executive secretary for the district, as of this morning. Two incumbents, Terry Wooten and Fred Holguin, are running unopposed for their current places on the board.

In Coahoma, executive secretary for Coahoma Independent School District Judy Parks said this morning, "I can only describe it as very light."

"We have had four votes in all and mailed out one ballot. It has not come back yet."

"Our three incumbents are Marvin Keenan, Stanley Phillips and Ronnie Wood, and the at-large candidate is Daryle Coates. Those races are not contested."

Senate considering AIDS funds

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bipartisan spending measure to combat AIDS is attracting amendments ranging from restrictions on federally funded AIDS education materials to a ban on federal money for clean needles for drug addicts.

The Senate on Wednesday rejected the ban on spending for the clean needles, which some experimental programs are distributing to drug addicts in an attempt to curb the wildfire spread of AIDS through sharing of contaminated needles.

But Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said he would reintroduce the amendment today in a form that meets the objections of senators who said it was so vague it would have denied hospitals and researchers the use of hypodermics and syringes.

Helms and others had prepared a plethora of amendments to the fiscal 1989 AIDS research and information bill sponsored by Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Orrin Hatch, R-Utah.

The bill authorizes $665 million for state and federal information and education campaigns, home health care for AIDS patients, new hiring at the National Institutes of Health, and special projects targeted to drug abusers and minorities. It also authorizes opened research spending, expected to bring the total to about $1 billion.

AIDS testing, confidentiality and discrimination are addressed in a separate bill that has not reached the House or Senate floor. But they were among the issues senators planned to raise with their amendments.

One of the most controversial proposals was a Helms attempt to renew a ban on federal money for education or information materials that promote, encourage or condone homosexual activities. A similar Helms provision adopted last year on a 94-2 vote is due to expire Sept. 30.

Denouncing an educational AIDS videotape aimed at gay men, Helms said Wednesday, "I will strongly oppose the use of taxpayers' money to advocate or condone sexual activity outside of monogamous marriage."

"At least one senator who supported the Helms amendment last year said he was leading a crusade against it this year."

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said he is convinced the amendment is having fatal consequences because AIDS service organizations have not received new money since last November. He said the federal Centers for Disease Control had asked them not to apply for funds until the situation is clarified.

"We must oppose every attempt to censor vital lifesaving information about AIDS," he said.

Despite those urgings, the Senate agreed by voice vote Wednesday to Helms' first amendment, to overturn the District of Columbia's ban on AIDS testing for insurance applicants.

Helms said diabetics and many other groups of people are unable to get health insurance because of their conditions. His amendment prevailed on a quick voice vote despite arguments by others that Congress should not override a law passed by the D.C. City Council.

The vote against the Helms clean-needle amendment was 66-18.

Several senators said the amendment was written so broadly it would have denied hospices, hospitals, nursing homes and researchers the use of hypodermics and syringes.

Louisiana considers repeal of AIDS law

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A law requiring people getting married in Louisiana to undergo tests for exposure to the AIDS virus has been an expensive flop, legislators said Wednesday as a House committee voted unanimously for repeal.

The law has chased hundreds of young couples to Arkansas, Mississippi and Texas to be married, said Rep. Alphonse Jackson, chairman of the House Committee on Health and Welfare. He said some physicians and laboratories were charging as much as $200 for the tests.

The committee approved a bill to repeal the 1987 law. Just a day earlier, the Illinois House Human Services Committee voted to repeal a similar law that also went into effect Jan. 1.

While the Illinois repeal faces continued opposition from legislators who say it is premature, Louisiana committee members predicted easy passage through the House and Senate.

The Louisiana repeal is backed by physicians, hospitals and the author of the testing law, Rep. Wilford Carter.

"Doctors are telling us that these people forced to take a test aren't in the high-risk groups," said Rep. Diana Bajoc. She also said she knows of several cases in which tests came back positive, but were shown to be "false positives" by follow-up tests.

Committee members said they had no idea how many positive cases were discovered because Louisiana's confidentiality laws prohibit disclosure of such information.

In Illinois, repeal supporters said that premarital testing uncovered one case of acquired immune deficiency syndrome for every 4,000 people tested.

Dr. Louise McFarland, a physician with the Louisiana Department of Health and Hospitals, acknowledged that the test is not foolproof.

"A negative means they've not had a chance to build up antibodies but it doesn't mean the virus is not there," she said.

A direct test for the virus, which attacks the body's immune system and leaves it susceptible to fatal cancers and viruses, is being developed but will be expensive, McFarland said.

McFarland also said that those getting married aren't in the high-risk groups, which include homosexual men and drug abusers who share needles.

"This modern day plague is behavioral-driven," said Jackson. "We need to acquire as much federal funding as possible for education, starting at an early level so as to modify sex behavior in the individual."

This unique approach to Musical Comedy is designed to be enjoyed equally by deaf and hearing audiences. The Robber Bridegroom is a tall yarn about the folk of Roanoke, Mississippi, about 150 hundred years ago or so. The musical involves song, dance and two youngsters getting together in a mighty confounding way.

The production is supported by the College of Arts, Sciences, and the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce.

Opinion

Views of other Texas papers

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from around the state:

Opposes extension of INS amnesty

The case for extending the amnesty provisions of the Immigration Reform Act has not been made, but that did not deter the U.S. House from voting an extension anyway. ... The original amnesty provision, while too generous, was a necessary element in passage of the urgently needed immigration reform in 1986. But this extension is unnecessary, counterproductive and an insult to the millions who have gone through the lengthy legal process of obtaining residence in this country.

The Victoria Advocate

Rules tough — but only for others

Think of it! Congress would pass an ethics bill with the revolutionary thesis that those who make the rules should obey the same rules! The existing ban on lobbying by former executive branch employees would be matched by a similar ban on former members of Congress lobbying! Wouldn't that be a great way to show that members of Congress believe in equality under the law?

Don't bet on it. Sure, the current law makes it a federal crime for former executive branch officials to come back the week after they resign and lobby their old agency buddies. ... But on sober, mature deliberation, the Senate decided not to do anything crazy like pass an ethics law that would actually require the honorable members to play by tough rules they set for the rest of the country.

So the radical idea was put aside. Of course some window-dressing was done: A substitute provision forbids ex-lawmakers fresh out of Congress from immediately lobbying at the very top of the government tree, although they may still lobby anywhere else.

The Senate approved this powder puff to send the voters a message. The message: See? We do believe in equality under law and one rule for all. See?

The voters see, all right.

The Dallas Morning News

Take best shot at 'Dial-A-Porn'

The Texas Public Utility Commission and the U.S. House have voted for different methods of putting pornographic telephone services out of business. While the PUC's stand will have less popular support, the agency offers a sounder method of controlling telephone smut than what was approved in the House.

The House approved a total ban on pornographic telephone services. ... The PUC took a different tack and authorized telephone companies to restrict service to dial-a-porn services that use the 976 toll exchange. The PUC rejected a proposal that all 976 telephone services be discontinued.

While legislation approved by the House confronts the problem directly, any law attempting to ban dial-a-porn messages is certain to be challenged as a violation of free speech of adults. While cases drag through the legal system, pornographic telephone services will continue to operate. ...

Dial-a-porn is a sleazy, depraved business, and the fact that children have easy access to such filth is sickening. Pornographic telephone services should be put out of business, but lawmakers and utility regulators should take an approach that will stand up in the courts.

Retaliation against Iran justified

President Reagan made a difficult but correct decision when he ordered U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf to retaliate against Iran for laying the mine which struck a Navy frigate last week, injuring 10 sailors.

No one wants the United States to get involved in a Mideast war, but we must respond in kind to each instance of armed aggression from Iran — or any other country — unless we want to encourage more of the same behavior.

If a country such as Iran only understands force, then we must use force to get across our message that terrorism and violations of international law simply will not be tolerated.

And if hair-splitters in this country or abroad maintain that we cannot be 100 percent certain that Iran laid the mines that struck the USS Samuel B. Roberts, their point would be technically correct ... and irrelevant. Terrorists do not leave calling cards. They are cowards who do their deeds under cover of darkness.

If the United States or any other victim of terrorism waited until it was completely certain of the identity or chronology of every terrorist outrage before it retaliated, it would almost never be able to mete out the justice they deserve.

Port Arthur News

Jail-crowding now a major culprit

The slaying of four San Antonio teen-agers by a knife-wielding assailant was a horrifying explosion of violence — and it was made all the more chilling last week when it was learned that jail overcrowding in Bexar County had kept authorities there from jailing the suspect on an earlier complaint. ...

Like nothing in recent memory, this appalling story illustrates the human cost that can be exacted when a state fails to provide sufficient corrections facilities to hold convicted offenders.

Overcrowding at the Bexar County Jail and dozens of others around the state is, after all, the result of the Texas Department of Corrections' routinely turning away individuals who have been convicted of felony crimes and who should by rights be serving time in state facilities. ...

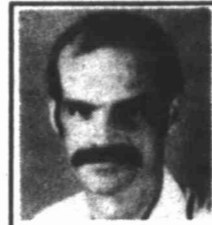

The Legislature simply must come up with the funds needed to ease the pressure on county jails — through emergency grants to the counties and through appropriations for more TDC facilities. It would not be extreme at all to suggest that a special legislative session is in order.

Christie's legacy: protect the children

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

It just didn't seem fair, somehow. The weather was beautiful Tuesday. There wasn't a cloud in the brilliant, blue sky, and for once, the West Texas wind merely cooled faces instead of sand-blasting them.

Beyond the realm

Here, one was being buried. Like I said, it didn't seem fair. Another thing that came to mind as the large crowd gathered for the burial was that somewhere, some breathing pile of human garbage that had killed this little girl was walking around a free man. And that definitely didn't seem fair, either.

But, who ever said life is fair? An unfortunate part of our existence is that injustices occur — sometimes at an alarming rate. Fires burn homes as well as families' dreams, wars snuff the life out of favorite sons and — perhaps worst of all — evil men sometimes lurk on street corners to snatch little girls who are in the wrong place at the wrong time.

Welcome to life — the faint of heart need not apply. How do we go about rectifying the situation, given the sometime-sorry state of human affairs? What can we do to ensure that the lives of other children are not prematurely ended?

Fortunately, thanks to her and other children who have suffered her fate, we are more aware of the dangers and terrors that exist in this strange world.

Perhaps because of what happened to Christie we now watch our children a little more closely. Perhaps we can better teach them to avoid the horrors that wait for unsuspecting children.

I am not so naive to suggest these steps will eliminate child abduction entirely, but it's a beginning. If one child can be saved by future efforts, the Christie Proctor legacy will be a lasting one, indeed.

The book on her life, however, can't be closed just yet.

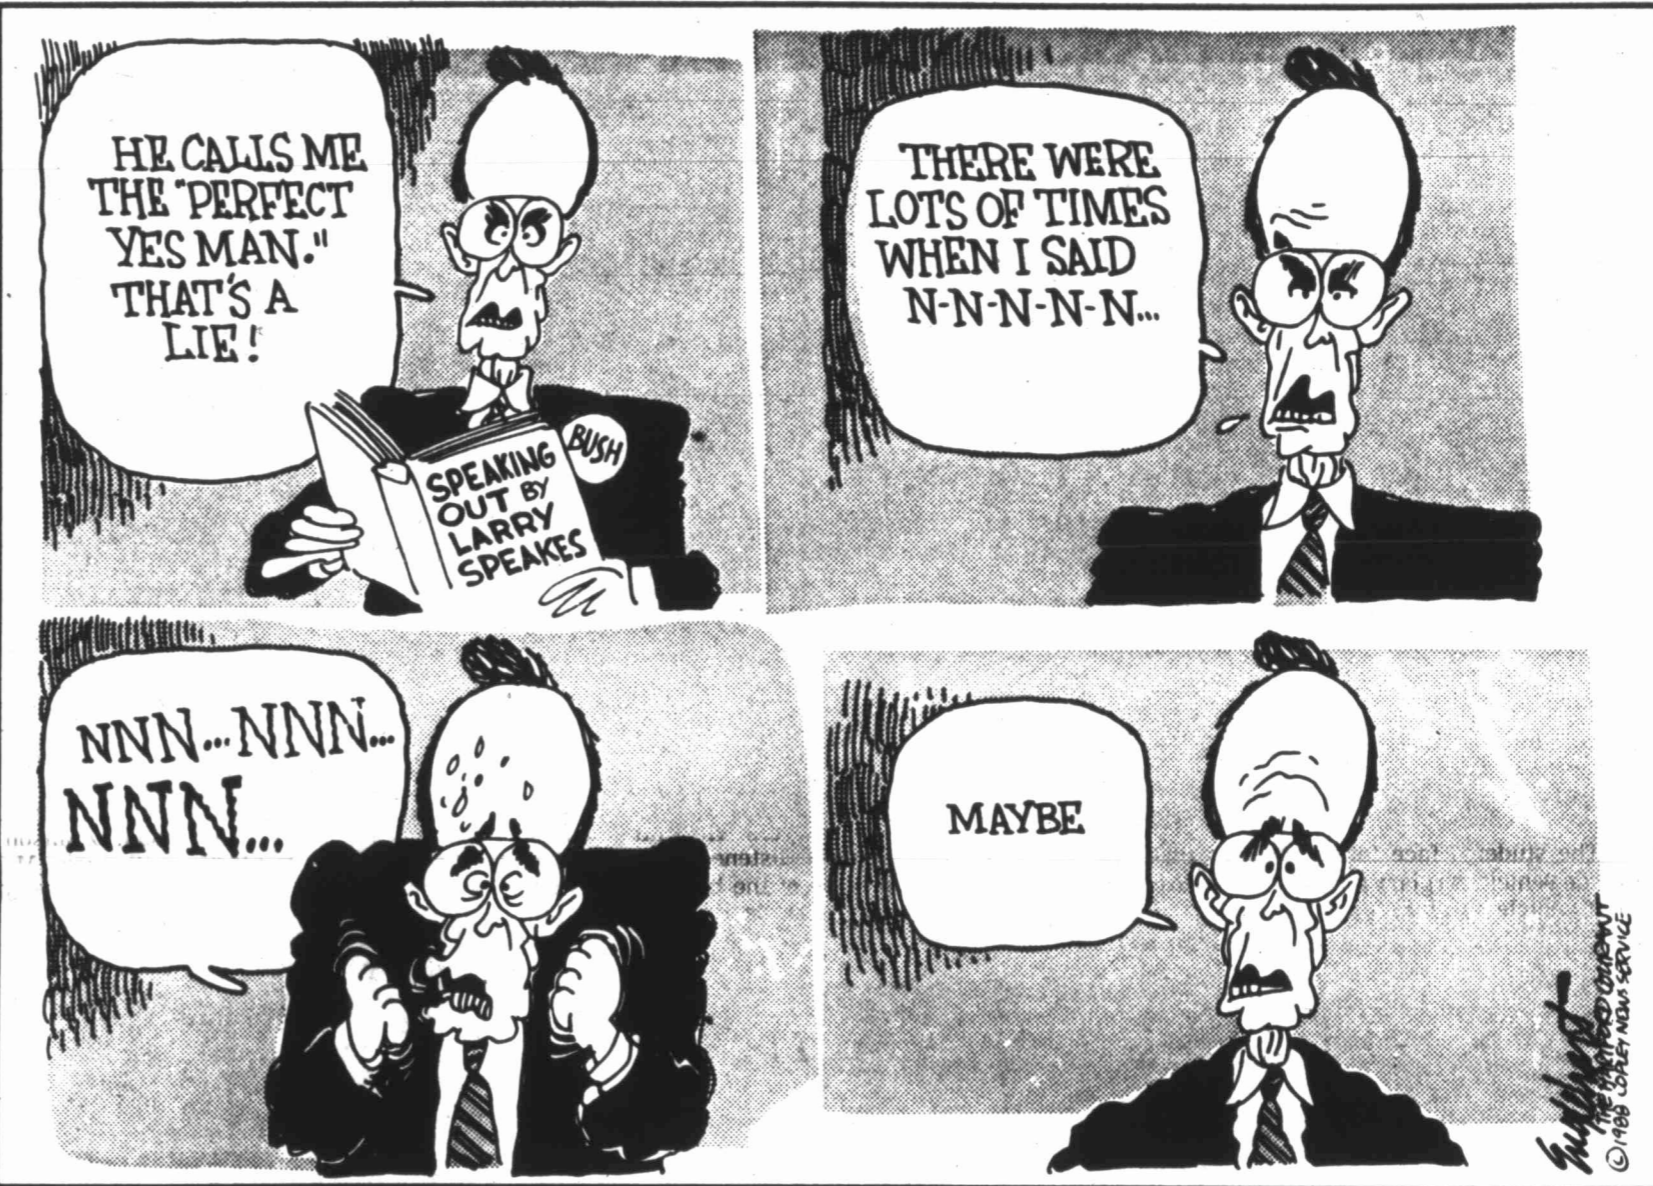

The person who committed this despicable act must be pursued with a vigilance that makes the hounds of hell blush with envy. We owe that much to Christie — and others who have suffered such a fate.

If, by some quirk of fate, the person escapes human justice, there is consolation in the fact that God likely has a special corner in hell reserved just for him.

And for Christie, you may ask? There at least is a bit of a happy ending. For whatever terror she might have experienced in the last few hours of her life, it is long since past.

She's in a far better place — one of peace; free from pain, suffering and evil men waiting for children who are in the wrong place at the wrong time. And that's fair.

One short sleep past, we wake eternally./ And Death shall be no more:/ Death, thou shalt die! — John Donne (1572-1631).

Jesse Let's talk about Hymietown

By WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY JR.

It's probably true, to borrow from Mark Twain on Wagner, that Jesse Jackson is not as bad as he sounds, but the question arises whether one really wants someone who sounds that bad nominated for president.

They say — the Jackson people say — that one should not hold against him what he has said and done in the past. But it would be easier to plead for absolution if there were a sign of contrition.

There hasn't been, save for Mr. Jackson's manicured distancing himself from Louis Farrakhan (he has not denounced Farrakhan's heady anti-Semitism; he has simply denounced anti-Semitism, which is a great deal easier, and begs the point).

Nor has there been any sign that Jesse Jackson is disposed to take a fresh look at the planks of his foreign policy (the Soviet Union, according to Jackson, isn't a threat, it is a "threat") or of his domestic policy (for Jackson, the economy is the creature of the Pentagon and of the very rich).

There is a certain evolution as to form, which tends to be true of everyone. But the same intellect that framed Jackson's tributes to Castro, Guevara and Assad frames his thoughts on related matters. In the last debate he had with the other contenders in the New York race, the subject of terrorism came up and Jackson turned to Michael Dukakis and said: You claim to be against terrorism. Well, if you are, do you oppose dealing with the South African government? Isn't that a terrorist regime?

Poor Dukakis. He isn't allowed, in politics, to use analytical grinders. If he had done so, one supposes, he'd have been accused of racism, or of being soft on South Africa. He mumbled something about South Africa being "akin" to a terrorist country — and was bailed out when the time ran out.

Jackson should have been told that terrorism is not the national policy of South Africa, any more than it was the national policy of the Jim Crow South (the Ku Klux Klan was never an arm of government). Dukakis might have added that Jackson has no problem in praising the terrorist government of Syria, or of the PLO, or — worse — the totalitarian governments behind the Iron Curtain, against none of which has Mr. Jackson ever proposed sanctions.

When Gov. Mario Cuomo weighed in on the race with his tribute to Jackson, one wondered whether the political virus is lethal to the mind and the conscience. ("Jackson) addresses ideas intelligently and substantively," said Cuomo.

It is very difficult to understand how such an evaluation can be made by anyone capable of rigorous thought. Jesse Jackson's analytical mode goes in for denunciations of national policy, described as "merging" the corporations to effect a "purging" of the workers to effect the "submerging" of the economy. That is the language of kindergarten teachers. Mr. Cuomo's deep thinker has proclaimed Yasser Arafat "a true hero" whose "commitment to justice is an absolute one." Mr. Cuomo's intelligent and substantive candidate has said of Fidel Castro, one of the truly finished totalitarians of the century, "Your struggle is our struggle."

Mr. Cuomo tells us that "Jesse Jackson has (an) unrivaled capacity to summon passion from people who listen to him." Perhaps that was what he was doing — summoning passion — when he led the march last month at Stanford University protesting a course in Western culture, chanting, "Hey, hey, ho, ho, Western culture's got to go."

If it were not for Western culture, we would be living in America as they live in Africa, and we are not referring to South Africa. Governor Cuomo concluded that Mr. Jackson "is making a unique contribution." Let us hope it proves to be unique, like George Wallace's and the candidacies of the Ham and Eggs party, and the Know-Nothings.

It surprises that the principal Democratic figure in America (Mr. Cuomo is generally thought to be that) should associate himself so sycophantically with positions and analytical superficialities that either he scorns privately or else should disqualify him from being taken seriously.

And poor Sen. Albert Gore! He needs to spend most of his time explaining his antecedent positions. He made a pithy remark about Jackson ("We need a leader, not a preacher") that was shallow and invidious (there isn't anything wrong with preachers per se) and spent a while straightening that out.

He was accused by properly indignant New York Jews of "pandering" to the Jewish vote by his near-sacramental obsequies to whatever Tel Aviv's policy was five minutes ago. And all he could think to say to insiders was: But in Iowa you praise the farmers. Don't you, in New York, praise the Jews?

Murray Kempton wrote four years ago that whereas Jesse Jackson classified New York City as "Hymietown," it took Walter Mondale and Gary Hart in the primary campaign to treat it as such.

Ford reports earnings

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. today reported a record first-quarter earnings of $1.6 billion, 9 percent over the same period of 1987, and attributed the increase to the company's efforts to improve quality and efficiency.

First-quarter worldwide earnings amounted to $3.30 per share, compared with $1.5 billion, or $2.87 per share, in the January-March period of last year.

Ford's U.S. first-quarter income was $1 billion, down $119 million from the same period last year, while foreign quarterly earnings were a record $580 million, up $250 million from the corresponding period last year, Ford said in a written statement.

"Our first-quarter earnings reflect the good balance of the overall Ford team effort," Chairman Donald E. Petersen and Vice Chairman Harold A. Poling said in a statement.

Offers to adopt child

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — More than a dozen people have offered to adopt a toddler who was found wandering in traffic a month ago, but state officials are continuing their search for his relatives.

Despite a flood of calls to state social workers since a judge allowed the 18-month-old boy's picture to be published last week, investigators say they still have few hard leads.

"It is so sad," said Gwen McKenzie, a child abuse and neglect investigator with the state's Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services. "This isn't something that happens every day."

"If there were relatives out there, they would have called," she said. "Either someone knows this boy and is not coming forward or he is not from this area."

The only clue authorities have is a confusing account by a man who says he's "Little Kenny's" uncle and that the boy's father left a Skid Row bar last month bound for Washington state on a borrowed motorcycle.

Thefts linked to teens

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Police and school officials can't explain what triggered a three-month spree of car thefts now linked to 10 teen-agers who are accused of using tools made in a high school shop class.

"Normally, you don't find that kind of operation in a small town like ours," Metamora Police Chief Mike Walters said Wednesday.

Walters said most of the 2,500 residents of Metamora, about 15 miles northeast of Peoria, were stunned by the allegations against the teens, who were arrested Tuesday at rural Metamora High School.

"They're surprised at the number of kids involved and the amount of property taken," he said.

The students face felony charges that include vehicle burglary and conspiracy to commit vehicle burglary, police said.

Extradition

Approved on charges of murder

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal judge Wednesday approved the extradition to Argentina of a general charged with mass murders of civilians during the former military government's "dirty war" against suspected leftists.

U.S. District Judge D. Lowell Jensen ruled that Carlos Suarez Mason, 64, could be tried in Argentina on charges of 39 murders allegedly committed by soldiers under his command. The maximum sentence is life in prison.

He rejected Suarez Mason's claim that the actions were political and therefore exempt from extradition, saying the exception for political offenses does not apply to "deaths that occurred to disarmed prisoners."

The crimes took place during "a time in the history of a nation where the rule of law was abandoned," Jensen said. Suarez Mason's office was responsible for choosing the targets of raids whose victims were often kidnapped and killed, the ruling said.

On one occasion, according to witnesses quoted by the Argentine government, Suarez Mason criticized a police official for not telling him the body of a prominent person had surfaced in the river, Jensen said. The official was said to have replied, "Why are you reproaching me when they have thrown 8,000 people into the river in my jurisdiction?"

Jensen rejected four other murder charges sought by Argentina, ruling that identification of the victims was inadequate. He allowed extradition on an additional charge of forging a passport renewal but ordered dismissal of 24 kidnapping charges, saying the five-year legal deadline for filing those charges expired in 1984.

Under extradition law, Suarez Mason can be tried only on charges for which extradition is approved. The final decision on extradition is up to the secretary of state.

Jensen refused to block extradition while the ruling is appealed, but lawyers for Suarez Mason said they expected to get an immediate stay from the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. An appeal could take as long as a year.

"This is merely a temporary setback," said J.T. Prada, one of Suarez Mason's lawyers. He said Suarez Mason, who listened to a Spanish translation of the hearing on a headphone, was "a little bit upset; you can't blame him."

SAN FRANCISCO — Carlos Suarez Mason, 64, is escorted into a van at the San Francisco Federal Building Wednesday after a federal judge approved the extradition of the former general back to Argentina on charges of mass murder of civilians in Argentina.

"Justice has been done," declared Horacio Martinez-Baca, a former Argentine lawyer who earlier this week was awarded $2 million by another federal judge in his civil suit over four years of detention and torture in Suarez Mason's prisons.

Two other civil suits by former Argentinians are pending against Suarez Mason, who says he has no money.

Suarez Mason was Argentina's most-wanted fugitive during his three years of freedom before his arrest in January 1987, and is the highest-ranking former military officer currently facing trial by the civilian government. He was not covered by the amnesty granted by the government to lower-ranking military officials.

Suarez Mason commanded the First Army Corps and oversaw military prisons in the Buenos Aires district from 1976 to 1979, at the height of the military regime's so-called "dirty war" against its domestic opponents.

A government commission reported that at least 10,000 people "disappeared" from the streets of Argentina during the period and never returned, half of them in Suarez Mason's district.

Suarez Mason later headed Argentina's joint chiefs of staff and presided over the state-run oil monopoly.

Fire destroys homes

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A fire described as the city's biggest since World War II swept through a crowded shantytown near an oil storage area today and destroyed more than 1,000 homes, the fire chief said.

At least four people were reported injured and thousands were believed to be homeless. No deaths were reported.

Firefighters concentrated on preventing the flames from reaching the oil tanks rather than on saving houses, and angry residents responded by pelting the trucks with stones. They piled their belongings in the street and began fighting the blaze themselves with buckets of water.

The flames spread to within 24 feet of the state-owned petroleum company compound, said Col. Oscar Pascual, deputy fire chief. Fire Chief Brig. Gen. Ernesto Madriaga said a shift in the winds prevented the fire from reaching it. Madriaga estimated that more than 1,000 dwellings, mostly squatter shanties, were razed before the fire was brought under control after 4½ hours.

Warplanes bomb camp

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Government warplanes bombed a food relief station in drought-stricken northern Ethiopia and killed at least 50 people after the area fell into rebel hands, two Western sources said.

But the sources disputed a claim by the rebel Tigre People's Liberation Front that the government used napalm in the April 8 attack near Wukro in Tigre province.

The guerrilla group said 31 people, mostly children, were killed or wounded in the bombing, which hit a kindergarten.

But the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity Wednesday night, said at least 50 people were killed and many more wounded in the attack, which occurred at a food distribution center run by the Geneva-based International Committee of the Red Cross.

A Red Cross representative was at Wukro the day of the attack, but left before the attack, the sources said. They said the warplanes struck about 30 minutes after monthly food allotments had been distributed to 5,000 to 8,000 peasants, and that thousands of drought victims were milling about.

Parents donate money

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The parents of an American killed by Contra rebels a year ago presented the government Wednesday with $250,000 in donations to continue the development project on which their son had worked.

Benjamin Linder, an electrical engineer from Portland, Ore., was killed along with six Nicaraguans on April 28, 1987, when rebels attacked the small town of El Cua in northern Jinotega province.

Linder had been helping in the construction of a small hydroelectric plant.

The check for $250,000 was delivered by his parents, David and Elizabeth Linder, to Edwin Zablah, director of the Cesar Augusto Sandino Foundation, a government agency which handles financing of rural projects.

World chess match scheduled

SEATTLE (AP) — A world quarterfinal chess match will be held here in January between former champion Anatoly Karpov of the Soviet Union and Iceland's Johann Hjartason, sports promoter Bob Walsh says.

The match is part of the Candidates' Tournament, an elimination process among eight chess stars that will produce a sole challenger to the world champion, Garri Kasparov.

Karpov is firmly committed to play, Walsh said Wednesday night. Walsh is president of the organizing committee for the 1990 Goodwill Games in the Seattle area featuring Soviet and American athletes.

Walsh said he worked out arrangements with Vjaschlav

Gavrilit, deputy minister of sports in the Soviet Union, and closed the deal with Filipino Florencio Champomanes, president of FIDE, a French acronym for World Chess Federation.

The Goodwill Games organizing committee is collaborating with the U.S. Chess Federation to host the quarterfinals.

Bush to emphasize party unity

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush, with the Republican nomination in hand, will use the summer months before the GOP convention to broaden his appeal to the Democrats who put Ronald Reagan in office and refine his message beyond loyalty to the president.

Reflecting advice given by people outside the campaign, Bush will "make a full-fledged effort to make sure the party is united," Lee Atwater, his top campaign aide, said in an interview.

Bush, the day after clinching the 1,139 convention delegates needed to win the nomination, said in television interviews he was anxious to take on likely Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis.

But in the next several weeks, Bush will be "fine-tuning his message" during appearances in states with remaining primaries and caucuses, Atwater said. He would not, however, discuss specific strategy.

Several Republicans said in interviews they believe Bush ran away with the nomination by exploiting longstanding commitments from GOP officials and officeholders. But they also said the time has come for Bush to spell out his views more clearly.

"The biggest mistake the Republican Party and its can-

Republican Party has stood for protecting family values, Fahrenkopf said, "that doesn't mean that the Republican Party and George Bush are not going to have to take a look at things like child care."

Bush, in a television interview on Cable News Network, said he will debate his opponent during the general election campaign.

"I think any candidate, any nominee of his party, should have the right to negotiate for when the debates should be, who should sponsor them, and all of that, but I will have debates and I look forward to it," he said.

Bush is going to have to win over suspicious conservatives while working to attract such traditionally Democratic and independent voters as blue-collar workers and ethnics who voted for Reagan, some analysts said.

"I think he has a problem," said GOP consultant John Deardourff. "In a certain sense he is not the master of his own destiny. A captive candidate. He cannot run away from any aspect of the Reagan-Bush record. He may be very uncomfortable bearing that burden." "He's not in a position to say, 'I think the president was wrong to keep offering (Attorney General) Ed Meese little shades of comfort here and there,'" Deardourff said.

"Even if that weren't the case, he is about to be the nominee of a bunch of delegates who are very conservative people. There's little room for leeway there."

Fahrenkopf, however, said he does not worry about Bush's flexibility being limited by a party platform drafted at least in part by hard-core conservatives.

"I don't look for any battles on the platform," he said, noting that Bush supported the 1980 platform. "I think there will be strong support among conservatives for the vice president."

Mitchell Daniels, a former Reagan political adviser, said that Bush succeeded in winning the nomination by using an "error-free, risk-free strategy, which I think was a very wise approach for a vice president."

didates can do is to go out and say, "Look what we've done these past eight years," said party Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf. "Voters appropriately have short memories. He must not only build on the record of the past eight years, but talk about the future."

Fahrenkopf also said he hopes that Bush will talk about "some of the issues that have not gotten as much attention" as foreign policy, defense and economics.

He suggested that Bush should work to broaden his appeal to women voters. While the Commission dispenses $2 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Election Commission on Wednesday dispensed $2 million in matching funds to current and former presidential candidates, some of it to help retire debts of those who have dropped out of the race.

Former television evangelist Pat Robertson, who acknowledged some time ago that his campaign was going nowhere in the face of Vice President George Bush's march to the Republican nomination, has received the most matching funds overall — $8.6 million, including $140,400 he received on Wednesday.

Robertson technically remains a candidate.

Bush has received $8 million in matching funds, including $280,797 he got Wednesday.

Both major Democratic candidates still in the race got money Wednesday also — Jesse Jackson, $335,154, and Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, $33,964.

To be eligible for money from the matching fund, a candidate must raise $100,000 across 20 states in contributions of $250 or less, with at least $5,000 from each state.

Thereafter, the federal Treasury matches each contribution of $250 or less that a candidate collects from private sources.

Candidates who drop out are still eligible to receive matching funds to help pay off their debts and wind down their campaigns.

The matching fund is supported by the $1 voluntary checkoff on individual income tax forms.

The amounts received Wednesday by candidates, including some no longer in the running, followed by their cumulative matching fund totals are:

Bush, $280,797, $8 million.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., $140,888, $7.2 million.

Dukakis, $33,964, $6.8 million.

Former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont, $49,976, $2.5 million.

Jackson, $335,154, $2.7 million.

Lifestyle

Country boy makes his mark

ANGLETON, Texas (AP) — Face it carnivores, calorie counting's got to go when it comes to Cowboy's Bar-B-Que.

It's tough when long before the little blue wagon on the corner of Highway 227 and Wilkins Street is in sight the hickory smoke aroma tickles your nostrils.

And you're history if Jack Bevers Jr., the 40-year-old bear of a man who owns the custom barbecue business, catches you twitching your nose or wetting your lips because he'll shout something like, "Hey, you look hungry. Wanna a bite of brisket? Sure looks good today ... mmmm..."

Most dieters need a lot less coaxing than that to forget about watching their weight and order up some succulent vittles.

"I'll take a barbecue chicken sandwich and some sausage, please ..." is just what Bevers is waiting to hear. Underneath his black, wooly beard a big smile emerges, revealing near-perfect white teeth.

"All's you have to do is taste it. That'll tell you all you need to know that it's good food. I'm not afraid to say it," he says.

Bevers is a Sweeny native who has lived in Angleton with his wife, Betty, and two children for the past nine years.

After having done contract construction work for many years, Bevers began parking his mobile kitchen on the busy corner in Angleton 10 months ago.

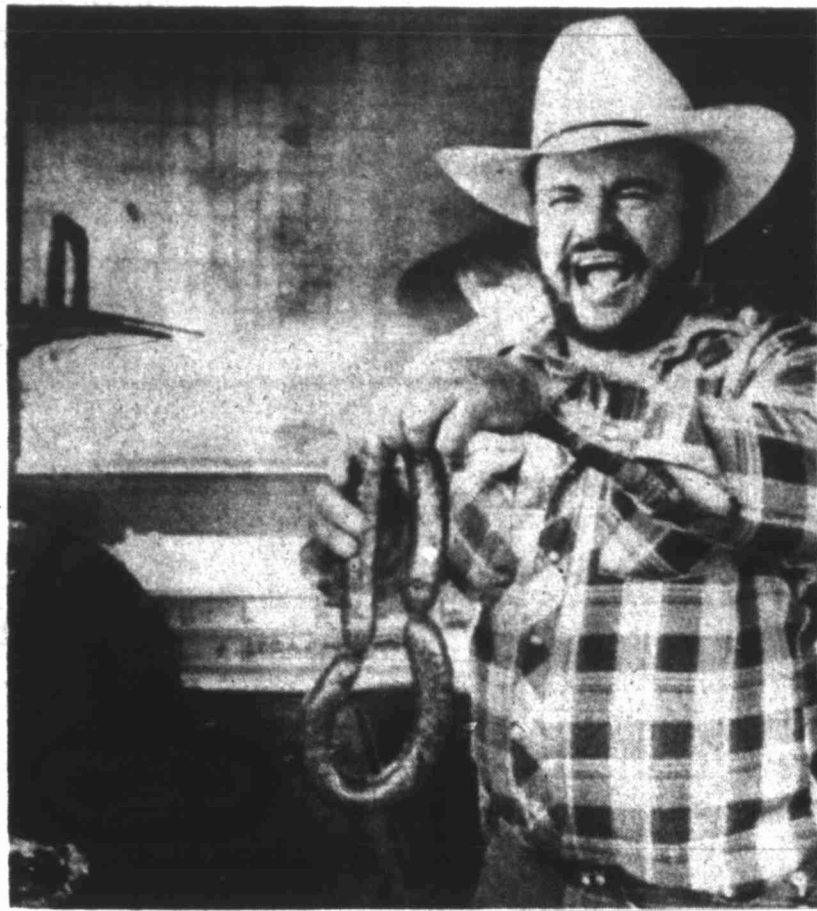

Already he has a healthy supply of regulars who munch his food for lunch and dinner between 10:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

Around noon a steady stream of customers drive into the gravel parking lot and step up to the window to place their orders.

No problem getting lost on this menu since it features nothing but the basics like brisket either by the pound or by the sandwich. Whole or half chickens are a favorite and juicy sausage has a way of disappearing quickly.

"Just barbecue, chips and Cokes. There aren't any frills here. People don't want that from me," Bevers says, lifting the lid of his pit and sending cloud of smoke billowing through the spotless wagon.

He pokes at the brisket with a fork and turns a chicken which have been sizzling for 13 and six hours respectively.

What's the secret to his delicious food?

"People want to know what I do. I tell them two things you can't rush it, slow cooking's the only way and I season the meat before I put it on the grill. That's all," Bevers says.

Another trick to making his chicken tasty is the sauce he dips it in throughout cooking.

But, like all good cooks, Bevers isn't telling the contents of the mixture. "Thirteen spices" is all he'll say.

Bevers has a competitive streak and finds time to enter area chili, bean and brisket cook-offs and he's won several trophies.

Someday his goal is to go to West Texas to compete where he says the competition is fierce.

Business is hopping now that the weather is nice and families stop on their way out of town on picnics and requests for catering his food have increased, he says.

Along with having scrumptious barbecue, it's Bevers' friendly nature that keeps folks coming back.

He catches horn honks from pals and waves from passing truckers who frequently hold up fingers to tell him how many sandwiches they want on their way back through town. Bevers waves back, acknowledging their orders, and usually has them ready for the hungry drivers to devour while back on the road.

"The most interesting trucker I've had through here was supposedly a rodeo cowboy and real good driver," he says, adding with a wink, "I guess I liked him because he told me my barbecue was better than any he'd had in Houston."

'Robber' is serendipitous

By SARAH LUMAN
Staff Writer

You could call "The Robber Bridegroom" an unexpected entertainment: one-half its dual cast is composed of students from SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf — and it's a musical comedy.

The play mixes elements of the classic tales from Cinderella to Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors for both its hearing and signing audiences.

The story includes a wicked stepmother, played to raucous perfection by voice actress Tracie Wilkerson and with understated menace by sign actress Regina Thomas.

And an inept brigand lugs around his older brother's disconnected head — literally the brains of the outfit — in a trunk wherever his gang strikes. The sign bandit, Mike McCarthy, is more effective in most situations than the voice bandit, Stacey Leonard.

The play takes slightly more than two hours to unfold. Directors Bill Doll, who works with the voice cast, and Liz Wolter, who works with the sign cast, have melded the two groups into an effective Siamese-twin final product.

Set in a backwoods Mississippi town called Rodney in approximately 1795, the tale centers around an accidental romance between a rich plantation owner's daughter and a handsome young robber — whose alter ego is a gentleman.

Complicating the plot are the stepmother's machinations aimed at removing the daughter — played well by the combination of voice actress Chawndra Freeman and Sherry Pederson, a lively scene-stealer of a sign actress — and the disembodied bandit's brother and compatriots.

Jamie Lockhart is the bandit, a handsome scoundrel who saves Rosamund's father from the Harp gang in an overcrowded inn one night, earning the planter's undying gratitude and an invitation to come out to the plantation and meet fair Rosamund.

Played by voice actor Matt Warren and sign actor Gerry Charles, Lockhart paints his face with berry stains to become the Robber of the Woods. Thus disguised, this rogue deprives Rosamund of her dress — and more, later — though he doesn't know who the girl he finds alone in the woods really is.

Meanwhile Rosamund falls head over heels for her despoiler — and doesn't recognize him in the polished gentleman caller her father introduces at dinner next day.

And when a talking raven stolen from the bandit by the Robber Bridegroom is returned and attacks its erstwhile master, Noe Saenz as the sign bird almost flattens McCarthy while Leonard easily disposes of Loryne Russell.

Here and there a scene is a half-beat off coordination; Steve McLaughlin and sign actor Joe Decardona as the filthy-rich plantation owner Clemment Musgrove bring their character off independently and well while appearing to ignore one another.

McLaughlin may overdo a bit; his bereavement at the loss of daughter Rosamund is so forced as to seem mocking in one scene, but other members of both casts are impressive.

To find out whether the wicked stepmother and her village-idiot henchman get their just desserts or whether true love will triumph over law and order in the end, plan to see "The Robber Bridegroom," Friday or Saturday in the Amphitheatre of Comanche Trail Park.

Ticket prices are $4 for adults, $3 for students and senior citizens. The outdoor performance is a lively evening's diversion for a mature audience.

Program released

The United States Army Field Band has a full program scheduled for Saturday's 7:30 p.m. concert at the Big Spring Municipal Auditorium. Included in the band's repertoire are "Sabre and Spurs" by Sousa; "Elsa's Procession to the Cathedral" by Wagner, from "Lohengrin"; "Entertainment Tonight" arranged by band members; and a special section on Jerome Kern including The Soldier's Chorus. The concert will end with "Stars and Stripes Forever" by Sousa. Tickets are free and may be obtained at the Herald or Chamber of Commerce office.

NIGHTCLUBS

Thinlads facing tough road

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

The Big Spring Steers will have a hard road to hoe if they want to repeat last year's second place performance at the Region I-4A Track Meet.

Last year coach Randy Britton's Steers scored 54 points to finish behind Lubbock Estacado, who won the region title with 67 points.

This year the Steers appeared to be in pretty good shape to challenge for a region title until this week. Big Spring won its second District 2-4A title, thus qualifying 10 individuals and the 1600 meter relay, making them one of the favorites for Friday and Saturday's competition.

But bad news came Monday when it was learned that junior distance runner Ben Gonzales had failed an English class this past six weeks, preventing him from competing in the region meet.

Gonzales ran a 4:25.2 in the 1600 meters last year at state to finish third. He also ran a 9:54.50 in the 3200 meters to finish sixth. This season Gonzales had qualified for regional in the 1600, 3200 and 1600 relay. His loss will surely hurt the Steers.

"We'll probably lose 16-20 points without Ben, but we can't replace him," said Britton.

Without Gonzales, Britton has done some changing of his own. He has pulled Charles White out of the 200 meters and will run him in Gonzales' place on the 1600 relay. White will team with Brian Mayfield, Dennis Hartfield and Sean Jackson. This an entirely different relay team that the Steers started out with at the first of the season.

Last year Big Spring qualified for state by running a school-record 3:19.73. Mayfield is the only returning relay member. This year Big Spring has a best of 3:21.20. Estacado has run in the 3:17's and Dunbar has broken the 3:20 mark.

"I think it will take at least a 3:19 to make it to state," said Britton. "The thing is the kids have all got to go out and run their best times at once. This is not a very experienced relay team."

Another change Britton has made is taking Jackson out of the 800 and running him only in the 400. Jackson has a best open 400 time of 50.09, but has run a 48.8 split on the 1600 relay. The best time in the region belongs to Jamie Perez of Joshua, who has run a 48.6. There are at least three others who have run in the low 49's.

White has a chance in the 100 with his season-best 10.43. The favorite will be Monahans' Charles Thompson, who owns the state's second fastest time in the 100 (10.11). Britton said on a still day, a 10.5 might be good enough to go to Austin.

Rounding out the running events is Mayfield in the 300 intermediate hurdles. Nursing an injured foot most of the year, Mayfield exploded to a 38.89 to win district. Britton says this a good year for hurdlers, and it might take a time in the high 37's or low 38's to win.

Mayfield will compete in the high jump and long jump in the field events. Last year the senior jumper finished sixth at state with a jump of 6-8. This year, his jump of 6-8 will be contested by several people. Mayfield's 21-7 long jump puts him more than a foot behind Graham's Brian Hetrick.

Sophomore discus thrower Pete Buske will get his first taste of regional competition. Buske has a best of 154-10. The heavy favorite is Andrews' Joe Don Finley, who has thrown over 180 feet.

But Britton remains optimistic. "With all that has happened, it really doesn't take us out (challenging for the region title). But we've got to win every event and hope somebody else drops the stick in the relays. We've got to have some help.

Local bowler has sights set on Olympic Games

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

Local bowler Joycee Davis just keeps getting better and better.

Davis, one of the top amateur bowlers anywhere, is proving just that, since she's leading the Open Class all events at the national tournament by more than 100 pins.

Bowling at Reno and Carson City, Nev., Davis has an 1835 score to lead the pack. She bowled a 701 series, which is also high series of the tourney. She missed the high game by three pins with her 265.

The tourney will last until July 4. There are 62,949 entries and more than $1.5 million dollars in prize money will be awarded.

Davis got some more good news earlier this week when she was invited to the Texas Roll-Off in Austin June 11-12. That event is the first step to gaining a bid on the Olympic team. If she finishes in the top 10, she'll qualify for Roll-Off Team USA — rather like the Olympic trials of bowling.

Two weeks ago the Big Spring Sidewinders Gymnastics girls hosted the West Texas Gymnastics Championship here. Coach Russ McEwen's girls strutted their stuff, winning the Class IV, Class III Compulsory and Optionals Divisions.

In the Class IV eight-years-old and under division, Jennifer Perez won first place. Bethany Thornton was fourth, Farrah Schooler fifth and Jody Lelek sixth.

In the 9-11 group, Cathy Smith was the first place winner. Sterling Cave finished third and Tara Crabtree was fourth.

In Class II Compulsory competition, Teresa Lee and Amanda Reep finished second and third. Claire Miller finished fourth.

Amy Miller won the 12-14 age division. Bobby Jo Elliott was fourth, and Becky Tedesco was fifth.

Karen Neighbors was the first place winner in the 9-11 optionals. Kendra Carey finished second.

In the 15 and over category, Tracy Carpenter and Sara McCarter finished one-two.

The Sidewinders' next competition will be the YMCA state meet in Midland May 6-8.

Former Big Spring High School football coach, Jack Dorsett will now be on the other side of the football.

Dorsett, who was varsity football coach at Big Spring, has assumed duties of defensive coordinator at Snyder High School, a Big Spring 2-4A foe.

Dorsett was hired by new Snyder coach David Baugh, who happens to be Slingin' Sammy Baugh's son. Dorsett is teaching economics, government and history.

Local boxers fared well in the recent USA-American Boxing Federation Junior Olympics Box-offs in Fort Stockton.

Gold medal winners from the Howard County Boxing Academy were Juan Garza in the 90-pound division and Angel Villa in the 139-pound division.

Gold medal winners from the Big Spring Boxing Club were 75-pounder Randy Morales and 95-pounder Ricky Urias.

Silver medal winners from the Big Spring Boxing Club were 119-pounder Jesse Maggallines, and 112-pounder Mike Jimines.

In other boxing news: Big Spring Boxing Club President, Jose V. Martinez, was elected Region VIII Coordinator/President.

Martinez's wife, Helen, was named secretary/treasurer and registration chairperson.

Now for the Comanche Trail Ladies Golf Association roundup.

In couple play on the back nine, Jim and Annie Ward and Marc and Dana Wilkinson won with a four-under-par 31. The next two couples tied for second with 33's.

Monday in nine-hole three lady scramble play, Georgie Newsom, Ramona Harris and Betty Ray Coffee shot a 34 for first place.

In couples play last Thursday, Gerald and Ramona Harris teamed with Eric Lusk and Glennadine Williams to shoot a five-under-par 31, good for first place. Two teams tied for second with 33's.

Linkster locals did well in Odessa at the Permian Basin Women's Golf Association tourney last week.

In the Championship Flight, local linksters Mary Ruth Robertson and Katie Peace tied for first in low putt competition with scores of 30.

In Second Flight low net play, Carolyn Freeman won with a 62.

The Juan Baldwin Golden Gloves Fund has been established at the First National Bank in Big Spring to collect donations to send Baldwin to the National Golden Gloves Tournament in Omaha, Neb. on May 16.

Baldwin and his father and trainer, Jamie Baldwin Sr., will travel to Houston early in May to allow Juan to train with seasoned boxers.

About $1,200 to $1,500 is needed to cover expenses. Anyone wishing to make a donation to the Juan Baldwin Golden Gloves Fund may send it to Box 1391, Big Spring, Tx. 79721, or make that donation directly to the First National Bank in Big Spring.

In District 6-2A junior high action, the Forsan eighth grade doubles team of Josh Wooten and Joey Conaway won first place. They beat a team from Iraan 6-0, 6-1 for the title.

In eighth grade girls singles play, Lee Patterson was fourth. The team of Erin Stewart and Kim Godfrey finished fourth. Cassie Cook was fourth in seventh grade girls singles.

Buff girls hold on to second place

The Stanton Lady Buffaloes showed concern with the last of the linksters coming in to record their score in Regional I-2A Tournament. Two strokes was enough to preserve the second place finish and give the Stanton girls the trip to Austin they well deserved.

The Memphis Lady Cyclones captured first place with a two-day team total 757 and the right to represent the Region as champions. Quannah took third, a mere two shots from the Lady Buffs second place finish.

"We played good on both front and back nine, and that was good enough to place runner-up. "And we're going to state," screamed Kelli Glaspie.

Medalists in the tournament included Jennifer White, hailing from Quannah with a first place two day total of 161. Best West of Memphis shot a 169, and Christine Ragsdale from San Saba recorded a 179.

Good shot

Stanton golfer Kelli Glaspie, after a bad first shot from the second tee, makes a near-perfect second shot to the green during final round play of the Region I-2A Golf Tournament at the Comanche Trail Golf Course Wednesday afternoon. Glaspie helped the Stanton girls win second place, earning a trip to the state tournament. The Stanton boys will also be going to state as the runner-ups.

Orioles losing streak alive at 20

By The Associated Press
 After 20 straight losses, there's plenty of blame to go around the Baltimore clubhouse. Manager Frank Robinson took responsibility for the latest defeat.
 "I didn't do a good managing job in the eighth inning," Robinson said. "I just didn't put the right people out there at the right time. I'll take the blame tonight."

American League

The winless Orioles tied an American League record Wednesday night with their 20th straight loss, falling 7-6 to the Minnesota Twins at the Metrodome.
 With the score tied 4-4 in the eighth inning and one out, Larry Sheets singled.
 With Keith Hughes at the plate and the count 2-2, Robinson put on an apparent hit-and-run. Sheets was thrown out by 10 feet at second base and Hughes struck out — end of rally.
 Sheets has three stolen bases in six attempts in his 288-game major-league career. On the bench at the time was Ken Gerhart, who has 128 stolen bases in the last five seasons of minor-league ball.

 "This is a game of ups and downs and it always will be," said shortstop Cal Ripken, who had two hits and two runs batted in.
 Baltimore players stood in stunned silence in the eighth inning when Kent Hrbek and Tim Lander broke a 4-4 tie with leadoff homers against reliever Bill Scherrer, 0-1. A walk, balk and throwing error by reliever Doug Sisk added another run.
 "If your performance is graded A to F, I'm sure mine was a G," said Scherrer, who was close to tears. "But I can't say it was the worst game of my life. We had an opportunity to win when it was 4-4, you have 24 guys on the team, but I think the pitcher always feels the worst. My pride is hurt, but I'll survive."
 Elsewhere in the AL, it was Cleveland 6, Seattle 4; California 4, Detroit 3; Oakland 5, Toronto 3; Kansas City 3, New York 1 in 11 innings; and Milwaukee 4, Texas 3. A doubleheader between Boston and Chicago was rained out.

 The Orioles, who grabbed a 3-0 lead in the first inning, didn't quit Wednesday night, as they managed two runs off Juan Berenguer, 3-2, in the ninth.
 Indians 6, Mariners 4
 Willie Upshaw hit a three-run homer and Greg Swindell won his fifth straight game as streaking Cleveland beat visiting Seattle.
 The victory tied Swindell with Oakland's Dave Stewart for the AL lead in victories, and his 5-0 start hasn't been equaled by a Cleveland starter since Jim "Mudcat" Grant won five to start the 1961 season.
 Royals 3, Yankees 1
 Kevin Seitzer singled in Kurt Stillwell with the tie-breaking run with one out in the 11th inning as Kansas City beat New York for the Royals' first victory in Yankee Stadium since 1986.
 Stillwell led off the 11th with a walk, moved to second on Willie Wilson's sacrifice, and scored on Seitzer's single to center. Reliever Charles Hudson also allowed an RBI double by Frank White in the 11th, scoring Seitzer.
 Athletics 5, Blue Jays 3
 Don Baylor's run-scoring single snapped a sixth-inning tie as visiting Oakland defeated Toronto.

 With the score 2-2, Dave Henderson doubled down the right-field line with two outs against starter Mike Flanagan and Baylor singled to left to put the Athletics ahead.
 Henderson's two-out homer in the eighth gave Oakland a 4-2 lead.
 Angels 4, Tigers 3
 Jack Howell drove in two runs with a triple and double as California beat Detroit at Tiger Stadium to snap a four-game losing streak.
 Willie Fraser, 3-0, allowed three hits, and walked two batters in each of the first three innings. But he settled down and pitched 7 1/3 innings, allowing five hits overall.
 Brewers 4, Rangers 3
 Rob Deer broke a fifth-inning tie with a single as Milwaukee snapped a three-game losing streak at Arlington.
 With the score tied 2-2, Robin Yount hit a one-out double in the fifth and scored one out later on Deer's single. In the sixth, Joey Meyer hit his second home run of the season to make it 4-2.
 Juan Nieves allowed seven hits in 7 1/3 innings and Dale Sveum added a two-run homer for the Brewers.

Ryan flirts with no-hitter; gets no-decision

By The Associated Press
 Nolan Ryan hasn't pitched a complete game in two years but that doesn't mean he can't pitch another no-hitter.
 The amazing 41-year-old fireballer came within two outs of what would have been the sixth no-hitter of his record-breaking career, then dejectedly settled for a no-decision as the Astros beat the Philadelphia Phillies 3-2 Wednesday night.

Ryan, who struck out nine, lost his no-hit bid when Mike Schmidt singled with one out in the ninth. With two out, Lance Parrish doubled home two unearned runs to tie the score. Ryan left for a pinch hitter in the bottom of the ninth.
 In other National League games, it was St. Louis 2, San Diego 1; San Francisco 6, Pittsburgh 4; Montreal 1, Cincinnati 0; Los Angeles 4, Chicago 0, and New York 5, Atlanta 2.
 In the Houston 10th, Glenn Davis singled with one out off reliever Kent Tekulve and went to third on Kevin Bass' hit-and-run single. Alan Ashby was intentionally walked to load the bases and Craig Reynolds batted for Chuck Jackson. He hit a grounder near second base which shortstop Steve Jeltz ran down but Davis easily beat his off-balance throw to the plate.
 Cardinals 2, Padres 1
 Tom Brunansky hit his first National League home run and rookie Luis Alcega had a run-scoring single as St. Louis snapped San Diego's four-game winning streak.

 Giants 6, Pirates 4
 Kevin Mitchell drove in three runs and Dave Dravecky scattered nine hits over eight innings as San Francisco ended a four-game losing streak and cooled off the Pirates, who had won four straight games and 12 of their last 14.
 A throwing error by loser Doug Drabek on Brett Butler's third-inning bunt helped the Giants score the run that broke a 2-2 tie. Butler reached third and scored when Mitchell grounded out.
 Expos 1, Reds 0
 Pascual Perez pitched a two-hitter with 10 strikeouts for his first shutout since July 6, 1984. The only Cincinnati hits were a second-inning bloop single by Bo Diaz and Chris Sabo's smash with two out in the ninth which third baseman Tim Wallach knocked down.

 Montreal scored off Mario Soto in the third inning when Tim Raines tripled and Hubie Brooks singled.
 Dodgers 4, Cubs 0
 Don Sutton earned his 322nd career victory, with six scoreless innings and drove in a run with a suicide squeeze bunt. Sutton, in his 23rd major-league season, allowed four singles, struck out three and walked three.
 Sutton's run-scoring bunt capped a two-run third inning that padded the Dodgers' lead to 3-0 against Jamie Moyer.
 Mets 5, Braves 2
 Keith Hernandez tied the game with a two-run homer, Lenny Dykstra walked with the bases loaded and Mookie Wilson added a two-run single in a five-run ninth inning.
 The Braves led 2-0 as Zane Smith scattered four hits over seven innings and Bruce Sutter pitched a hitless eighth. But Sutter left for a pinch hitter and Paul Assemacher walked leadoff batter Tim Teufel in the ninth.

National League

"I'm disappointed," Ryan said. "It would have been my first complete game and shutout in quite a while. I don't even remember when my last one was (his last complete game was April 25, 1986).
 "If I'd just lost a no-hitter and won the game I wouldn't have been disappointed. I let the lead get away, and I was one out away from winning the ballgame — a complete ballgame."

Bliss going to UNM?

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist basketball coach Dave Bliss is a leading candidate for the head coaching job at the University of New Mexico, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.
 New Mexico is searching for a head coach to replace Gary Colson, who resigned Tuesday.
 The newspaper quoted sources close to the Lobos basketball program as saying Bliss and Purdue coach Gene Keady are the leading candidates.

 The source told the newspaper that Keady was contacted about 30 days ago. The source also mentioned Jerry Pimm of California-Santa Barbara as other possibilities.

 Kevin Gwen, who was knocked from the game in the first inning, took the loss for the Panthers.
 Martinez was top hitter for the Rebels, going three-for-four at the plate. Jose Pesina, Joshua Preston, Manuel Marquez and Sifuentes got two hits each.
 Paul McKinney and Charles Angel went two-for-three for the Panthers.
 The Panthers fall to 1-2 for the season.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

 The Astros fall to 0-3 for the season.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

 Robert Lopez picked up the win for the Lions. He was relieved by Ryan Williams.
 The Lions led 2-0 after the first inning as Brian Burchett and Brant Farris scored. In the third inning, Chris Spivey scored on Jeremy Loy's triple. Loy scored the fourth Lion run.

 The Lions put the game out of reach by scoring six times in fourth, thanks to Loy's double and a triple by Robert Lopez.

Top marathoner drops out

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Joan Benoit Samuelson, who won the 1984 Olympic gold medal in the women's marathon, has withdrawn from Sunday's U.S. Olympic Women's Marathon Trials because of injuries, she said today.
 Samuelson, the American record holder with a time of two hours, 21 minutes, 21 seconds, has been suffering from back and hip injuries.
 Three weeks ago, her coach, Bob Sevens, had virtually ruled Samuelson out of the Trials, saying there was a 99 percent chance she would not be ready.
 "I won't be running," Samuelson said today by telephone from her Freeport, Maine, home. "I've wrestled with the decision long and hard...

 "If I had a few more weeks to get ready, then I'd probably be out there."
 "But I haven't done the necessary homework. I have been training hard, but I don't have the backlog of work I need."
 "It's a big disappointment," Samuelson won the 1984 Olympic trials only 17 days after undergoing arthroscopic knee surgery.
 "But in 1984 I was in the best shape of my life before the surgery," she said.
 This year, following the back injury, suffered near the end of January, she was unable to train for about two months.
 When she resumed training, she ran 30 miles the first week, 50 the second and 100 each of the past two weeks.

 "That's not the way to do it," she said.
 Samuelson said her goal now is to try and break 2:20 in the marathon, a time which no woman has yet reached. The world best is 2:21:06, by Ingrid Kristiansen of Norway.
 Samuelson said she would consider running a fall marathon, possibly in New York or Chicago, and "I might even try a marathon in a month or so. I don't know which one."
 Another possibility is trying to make the U.S. team in the 10,000 meters. The trials will be held at Indianapolis in July.
