City declared disaster area

By Phil Ringman
Staff Writer

The death toll from Tuesday's tornado rose to 44 today as President Carter declared the city a major disaster area.

The 44th body was found this morning on McNiel in the ruined Faith Village addition about an hour after the White House issued Carter's declaration which will make funds available to aid disaster victims as well as funds for debris removal and the repair of damaged public facilities.

"We've been trying to get it since yesterday morning," U.S. Rep. Jack Hightower of Vernon said today in a telephone interview.

Hightower said aid efforts could not begin in earnest until the president signed the declaration.

"We're attempting to get back on our feet through grants and loans, both federal and state," Mayor Kenneth Hill said today.

"There's not much else we can do. It will take us years to get back to 100 percent," Hill said.

Vernon, which was also hard hit by a tornado, and portions of Southern Oklahoma also were declared disaster areas by Carter.

Meanwhile, Wichitans continued to pick up the pieces of their shattered lives today after heavy winds and a dust storm hampered recovery operations Wednesday.

Life slowly began to return to normal as more and more stores opened for business. But for an estimated 5,000 that were left homeless, the job of starting over had barely begun.

"I'm thinking about taking the insurance money and paying off the mortgage and moving back to Oklahoma," said Mark Franks, whose home at 5131 Jamaica, except for three bedroom walls, was demolished.

But Franks was lucky.

He said he and his wife moved to Wichita Falls about a month ago from Oklahoma City and were staying with friends on George Street until they could move into their home.

Franks said they had already paid the closing costs and signed the final papers and were only waiting for the current occupant to move out next week.

"Our furniture, in fact, is still in Oklahoma City," Frank's wife Glenda said.

"Glenda doesn't want to move," Franks said. "I'd just as soon go back to where it's easier to start over."

The half-mile wide tornado touched down west of Memorial Stadium and during its 15-minute trip across eight miles of the heavily populated southside destroyed an estimated 2,000 homes and 300 businesses and caused damage variously estimated between $75 million and $300 million.

The storm severed seven major power lines that connected the city with Texas Electric Service Company's power grid, District Manager Tom Locke said.

"The possibility of seven lines going down at once is so slim. The storm was such a freak thing," Locke said.

Power, though, was gradually being restored Wednesday night and today, as was water and telephone service.

Aid efforts for disaster victims began Tuesday night shortly after the storm struck with temporary Red Cross shelters set up at numerous churches and Midwestern State University's D.L. Ligon Coliseum.

An estimated 200 spent Wednesday night at the coliseum and another 50 to 100 at First Baptist Church.

Early today, though, only one family remained eating breakfast at First Baptist Church. Most of the people had gone out to clean up their homes or help others but were expected to return for lunch, one worker said.

"A lot of people were afraid of looters and just came in, ate, and then went back home," Sandra Dudley, a volunteer at MSU, said.

Aid efforts were apparently hampered somewhat Wednesday by a breakdown in communications between the various hospitals and agencies rendering help.

One nurse said she went to Wichita Falls State Hospital, which is equipped with a full-scale

Wichita Falls shall overcome

Wichita Falls lives.

Wichita Falls has endured a catastrophe that can only be compared to wartime devastation. With prompt action of our elected officials and the famous Wichita Falls spirit of cooperation, Wichita Falls will recover, although the process will require months and years.

The true mettle of our citizenry is being put to the test. With about 10 percent of the homes in Wichita Falls demolished or severely damaged, there is hardly a person in this city without a relative or friend who suffered great loss. It is no hyperbole to say that this adversity has affected everyone of us.

Perhaps once in a lifetime, comes a time to show our neighbors and the world what kind of stuff we are made of. This is that time. This is the time to help those who have suffered loss, and a time to cooperate with declarations of emergency procedure.

Evidence of such positive spirit was apparent within hours after the disaster. With the tremendous cooperation of the Dallas Times Herald, the Times was able to publish Wednesday afternoon an edition packed with information concerning the storm and the resulting cleanup.

At a time of crisis, the list of heroes is long, too long to be enumerated here. But the gratitude of the community should go to radio station KTRN, the only broadcast medium with auxiliary power which enabled it to broadcast continuously throughout the hours after the disaster.

Our neighbors from hundreds of miles are offering their help in our time of trial. Of that, we are truly appreciative. Match that spirit of neighbor helping neighbor and Wichita Falls will, in time, overcome this natural disaster, just as it has overcome lesser disasters in past years.

Yes, Wichita Falls lives.

Emergency crews on the job

By Jim Miller
Staff Writer

The city that faith built is drawing heavily on that resource as well as around-the-clock efforts by emergency relief agencies and thousands of volunteers in the wake of the worst disaster ever to hit Wichita Falls.

Maj. David Mikles, disaster coordinator with the Salvation Army, said Salvation Army canteens have been operating in the stricken areas on a 24-hour basis since Tuesday.

"We've served about 15,000 hot meals from our canteens," Mikles said, in addition to hundreds of people that have been fed at the Seymour Road and downtown facilities.

Also at the Seymour Road center, the Salvation Army has housed about 100 homeless victims in the past two nights, Mikles said.

Clothing collected by the Salvation Army was being taken to the old Harrold School building on the Seymour Road this morning, and Mikles said he hoped to be able to begin distribution of that clothing by this afternoon.

The Red Cross also set up six emergency shelter locations in the city, and Red Cross officials continue to urge victims who have not done so to go to one of the shelter locations and register.

"I don't have any kind of count at all," Gayle Backstrum, director of communications for the Red Cross, said concerning the number of persons who have sought shelter.

Ms. Backstrum, who was injured Tuesday when the devastating tornado struck the city, was typical of others working in the relief effort. Asked if she had been officially released by her doctor to return to work, Ms. Backstrum grinned and answered, "I didn't ask."

Dorcas Chapman, a volunteer worker at the emergency shelter set up at the First Baptist Church, said she had no idea how many victims that center had fed and given a place to sleep.

"When they come through we take care of them," Mrs. Chapman said. "I don't think we slept that many here last night."

The situation seemed about the same at the five other Red Cross shelters. Those centers are at D.L. Ligon Coliseum, Notre Dame High School, Floral Heights Methodist Church, Western Hills Baptist Church and Sunnyside Baptist Church.

Additionally, virtually every church in the city and their members have opened their doors and manned kitchens to care for those who lost homes.

Of immediate concern, of course, was medical care of the injured. Officials at the City-County Health Unit said medical facilities in the area were able to handle the demand.

"I think we're in pretty good shape," one health unit spokesman said. The unit had set up to handle first aid treatment, however, the spokesman added that demand for treatment there had not been great.

Throughout the emergency which began Tuesday evening, the Red Cross has had no trouble finding blood donors, officials said.

"We're in good shape" concerning blood, Max Williams with the Red Cross said. He reported that the blood center had drawn some 340 units Wednesday, and people continue to come forward to donate.

Williams said, "There hasn't been a call (for blood) from hospitals outside the city since the storm hit. They know we've been hit."

The Wichita Falls blood center serves a large portion of North Texas and Southern Oklahoma, but Williams said doctors in the area are not accepting any elective surgeries and continue to hold treatment to essential services only.

In announcing that President Jimmy Carter had declared a state of emergency here, thus making disaster vicitims eligible for federal disaster relief funds, Mayor Kenneth Hill said disaster relief offices should be in operation by Friday afternoon or evening.

Asked about heavy equipment to aid in the massive clean-up efforts, Hill said, "We have all of the heavy equipment that we need. We're turning down offers for equipment right now."

medical hospital, to offer her services but was told she wasn't needed.

She said she then went to Wichita General Hospital where she was told again she wasn't needed. The same thing happened at Bethania Hospital, she said.

The nurse said she was then so frustrated that she stopped a Department of Public Safety officer and asked him to call around on his radio to see if anyone needed the services of a nurse.

She said the officer told her he couldn't call on his radio but that she should go to the police station where officials could tell her where she was most needed.

She said an officer there began making telephone calls to various locations when she asked another officer what she should do.

That officer told her to go to the Red Cross center on Fifth Street where she said she was "welcomed with open arms."

She said none of the radio broadcasts she heard Tuesday night after the storm and early Wednesday said where qualified medical personnel should go to give help.

The Wichita Falls Board of Aldermen, meeting in emergency session Wednesday, ordered two curfews for the city — one allowing no unauthorized persons in portions of the city struck by the tornado from 8 p.m. until 6:30 a.m. and another for the rest of the city from 9 p.m. until 6:30 a.m.

The curfews are to remain in effect until rescinded by the city council.

Prior to the curfew, National Guard spokesman Col. Bobby Myers said scattered incidents of looting had been reported.

"The looting has not been terribly intense, but widespread and well-planned," Myers said. "People are looting in areas that weren't even damaged because they know the police are working elsewhere."

Eight persons had been arrested for looting by early today, according to Wichita Falls police.

National Guardsmen do not have arrest powers but are authorized to detain looting suspects until they can be arrested by city police or DPS officers.

The aldermen also passed an emergency ordinance establishing price ceilings on numerous essential items to prevent price gouging by merchants.

At least one incident of price gouging was reported Wednesday.

Bob Draper, regional traffic safety director, said he had been charged $1 per gallon for gasoline for a Red Cross vehicle and had receipts for the purchases.

There were some reports of gas stations selling water for $1 a gallon but water was being given away free Wednesday at several locations around the city.

The price ceilings were to end in 15 days unless continued by the city council.

City Manager Gerald Fox said two offices will be established in the city by the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration to provide information concerning available loans and grants.

Robert Estrada, director of U.S. Sen. John Tower's Dallas office, said grants for temporary housing for up to a year will be available.

The temporary housing grants will be available to any displaced person or family losing their home in the tornado.

The Small Business Administration offers long-term, low-interest loans for persons to rebuild their homes and businesses, Estrada said.

"The terms are flexible and can be fitted into almost anybody's budget," he said.

Persons unable to pay for loans are eligible for grants from the Texas Department of Human Resources, Estrada said.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements toured the ravaged area Wednesday and was tentatively scheduled to make a second inspection trip later.

World Book publishers offer to replace books

The publishers of World Book Encyclopedia and Childcraft books will replace free of charge any of their sets of books lost in the tornado if the books were purchased less than six years ago.

Jim Bales, World Book division manager, said affected persons can call 800-621-8202 toll free with their loss information. Bales said customers should know their account number or date of purchase, if possible, but that such information can be obtained through company records if the customer no longer has it.

Customers also may call Cathy Buxton, district manager, at 691-2782 or Nancy Poling at 723-0057 for claims.

Insurance advice offered

By MARTY SABOTA
Staff Writer

As Wichitans began regrouping after what may have been Texas' worst tornado in 26 years, insurance industry representatives offered advice to victims who sustained insured losses.

After seeing that their families are safe, owners of insured property damaged by the storm should notify their insurance agent or broker as soon as it is possible and practicable, advised James C. Stewart, regional representative of Insurance Information Institute.

Insured property owners should take the following steps:

— Be prepared to give your agent a description of your damage. The agent will report the loss immediately to your insurance company or to a qualified adjuster who will call on you as soon as possible to inspect the damage. Be sure to give your agent a telephone number where the adjuster can contact you.

— Protect your home from further damage. Make whatever temporary repairs you can. Cover broken windows and holes in your roof or walls. Your insurance company will reimburse you for reasonable expenses in making temporary repairs to property damaged.

— Do what you can to salvage and protect damaged building equipment.

— If you feel it is necessary, secure a detailed estimate for permanent repairs from a reliable contractor and give it to the adjuster when he arrives. The estimate should contain: detailed specifications of the proposed repairs; detailed repair cost prices and replacement prices.

— Take photos of the damages areas. These will help you with the presentation of your claim and will assist the adjuster in his investigation of your claim.

— Prepare a detailed inventory of all damaged or destroyed personal property for the adjuster. Be sure to keep a copy. Your list should be as complete as you can make it and include: description of the item (and number, if more than one); date of purchase or approximate age; cost at time of purchase; estimated replacement cost today.

— Collect cancelled checks, invoices, receipts or other papers that will assist the adjuster in obtaining the value of destroyed property.

— Obtain repair estimates for furniture or other personal property that can be repaired economically.

— If you must leave your home, be sure that it is secured and protected from further damage. Leave a note in a conspicuous place advising where you can be reached.

Serious losses will be given priority, Stewart said. Even with many additional adjusters, it will take time to process the thousands upon thousands of damage claims being filed.

If your home has been destroyed, or yours is a serious case, tell your insurance agent that you need help. He will do all he can to assure that your loss is given priority.

Since all the facts and figures are not in regarding the killer storm, Stewart said a ballpark estimate of total property losses is not immediately available. He hoped to have an estimate by Friday morning.

Death count now 44

Another body found today on McNiel Street

By MARTY SABOTA
Staff Writer

Another body was found amidst the rubble on McNiel about 10 a.m. today, bringing the death count to 44 in Wichita County since Tuesday.

Mayor Kenneth Hill said the body of Arden Turner Jr. was discovered in an area that had previously been searched.

"The reason the body was not discovered during the first search was because we were going over the area quickly then, looking for injuries," Hill said. "We have completed about two-thirds of a thorough search and rescue and should complete the rest by today."

Hill added that he believed very few people were still unaccounted for due to the relatively few calls the police were receiving in reference to missing persons.

"I think not getting many calls is a good sign," the mayor said.

Hill said that an unaccounted for person will not be determined missing by Wichita Falls Police Department until 48 hours after his disappearance.

The death toll has risen to 44 and 660 persons have been treated at area hospitals, Hill said.

While conducting search and rescue operations, Hill said people also are hard at work trying to restore Wichita Falls to a somewhat normal standard of living.

"We are already working toward recovering," Hill said. "Relying upon the strength of agencies and volunteers, I think we'll come back stronger than ever."

However, he was reluctant to say how long — only that it would be "years before we get back to 100 percent."

The electrical situation has improved, Hill said, and most of the city excluding the damaged area had electricity by 8 a.m. today. He expected the rest of the undamaged area to have full power by this weekend.

Search teams with dogs combed fields in the stricken area for more bodies Thursday.

Water with limited pressure was available for bathing and drinking purposes in most parts of the city as of 8 p.m. Wednesday but Hill warned that Wichitans still have to be conservative.

"We have water but we're not ready for fire," Hill said. "With the added problem of high winds, a big fire right now would be a big tragedy."

Another pressing problem is the telephoneservice, which is presently at about 50 percent efficiency. Hill hoped the problem would be rectified soon.

The citizens of Wichita Falls who were not victimized by the destructive tornado rallied quickly to help the injured and homeless, and Hill said he believes everyone is receiving care.

However, he added some people are not leaving homes that are unsafe and advised them to do so.

Disaster relief offices should be set up by Friday eveining, Hill said, although nothing is definite.

Security measures continue to be stringent and Hill said he thinks "we are doing fine" in this area.

"We are receiving help from numerous law enforcement agencies," Hill said. "One area we plan to enforce completely is price gouging. People have suffered enough."

A second curfew from 9 p.m. to 6:30 a.m. will be in effect, Hill said, except for persons recovering salvageable, damaged property.

Wichita Falls Police Chief Curtis Harrelson added that last night's curfew was "very effective" and that there was "very little traffic" during the night.

Detectives said they had arrested eight persons on looting charges since Tuesday and three on charges of violating the special curfew.

"About 200 people from SAFB will be working at 15 traffic control points," the police chief said. "Their purpose will be to keep the sight-seers out."

The entire police department is working 12 hour shifts and will continue to do so until "we get stabilized and citizens are able to get property secured as much as they can," he said.

Wichita Falls Fire Department is working 24 on and 24 off hour shifts, according to Fire Chief Hurshel Johnson.

"Right now, the main goal is just getting back on our feet," Hill said.

Blood donors rallied

By LOUISE GREGG
Special Writer

While hundreds of people milled about aimlessly — in a daze, in shock — moments after a devastating tornado struck Wichita Falls, others gathered their wits about them and rushed to Wichita General Hospital to donate blood for critically injured victims.

"For blocks and blocks people stood in the rain to give blood," said Rosemary Chamberlain. "They came to the doors but were told they must report to the Red Cross."

Mrs. Chamberlain, blood collector at Wichita General, volunteered her services and worked from 7 p.m. Tuesday, the evening the tornado hit, until 8 a.m. Wednesday.

"I had to do something," the pretty 26-year-old phlebotomist said. "My house is still standing. Craig (her husband), Chris (her 4-year-old son) and I are still alive. I don't know how many times I've prayed during the night."

Mrs. Chamberlain's job is to draw blood from patients to type and cross match for transfusions from donors.

"We could only make two kinds of tests without electricity — hemoglobin and typing," she said. "Sugar tests and heart enzymes could be done by hand."

"I saw so many . . . so hurt . . . so much pain," said Mrs. Chamberlain. One young man had a gaping wound in his chest and side "as big as your hand," she said, stretching her fingers wide to show the expanse of the big hole.

"You could see his heart beating . . . thump, thump," she said.

Most injuries Mrs. Chamberlain saw were to the head and eyes. She said the man with the chest wound likely will make it. "A man's normal hemoglobin is 14 to 16," she said. "When I got him it was 3.5 But we got it up to 13."

Procedure for victims was to come first to the emergency room, Mrs. Chamberlain said. Then they were tagged and after doctors saw them they were sent to various areas for testing and treatment.

"Doctors dropped everything and rushed to the hospital," Mrs. Chamberlain said. Several doctors "had lost their homes themselves. Some didn't know about their families. But they came immediately."

One doctor had only two walls of his house left standing. "He was relieved to find his family OK," she said, "and to find his little Dachsund puppy alive in a corner. The puppy was shaking and scared, but uninjured."

Mrs. Chamberlain praised many for unselfish service. "All we had to do was pick up the phone and call the Red Cross," she said. "They brought blood."

Chaplain Robert Brown of Wichita Falls "was fantastic," Mrs. Chamberlain said. "He was 10 places at once. He was available for anything a patient might want or need — even just an ear" in which patients could pour out their woes.

The worst thing, Mrs. Chamberlain said, was "identifying the dead. Most bodies are cleaned up first before relatives see them. Last night they weren't."

One man especially saddened Mrs. Chamberlain. "He was looking for his little 15-year-old daughter. All he knew was that she had on a brown sweater and wore braces. He said his other daughter had died when she was 8 . . . he didn't think his wife could take it if this one was gone."

The man found the girl in the brown sweater and braces. She was in the morgue.

"I had a job to do," summed up Mrs. Chamberlain. "You get the blood . . . then go home and get sick and cry."

Three injured in small town

EAGLETOWN, Okla. (AP) — The storm system that spawned the killer tornadoes that raked Oklahoma and Texas communities on Tuesday dipped a twister into this McCurtain County area Wednesday, injuring three persons.

Damage was estimated at about $110,000.

Sybil Pettit, 57, who apparently was babysitting with two small children in the trailer home of Don Morphew, a relative, was admitted in satisfactory condition to DeQueen General Hospital in DeQueen, Ark.

The two children, aged 4 and 6, were treated for minor injuries and released.

The twister hit two chicken houses at the farm of Clarmon Bailey while he, his wife and young son were in their home about 100 feet away.

Dislocated subscribers asked to call

Home subscribers of the Wichita Falls Times and Record News who have been dislocated by the tornado which hit Wichita Falls Tuesday are asked to contact the newspapers' circulation department at 767-8346.

"We will make every effort to deliver a paper to all of our subscribers wherever they are located," Don Brown, circulation manager, said.

Brown said Thursday that distribution of the newspapers to areas not hit by the storm was almost completely restored, but that anyone not receiving home delivery should contact the circulation department.

"We want to express our appreciation to our independent carriers and agents who have worked very hard to deliver our papers during this most trying time," Brown said.

IRS aids victims

By PHIL RINGMAN

Paying federal taxes is the last thing on most Wichitans' minds and an Internal Revenue Service official said today IRS is attempting to make the job easier for tornado ravaged taxpayers.

"This is just one worry that people don't need to have," IRS official Marlene Gaysek said today in a telephone interviewfrom Dallas.

People who have filed their taxes this year but suffered a loss in the tornado can claim it on this year's taxes by filing a Form 1040X to amend their original tax return, she said.

A casualty loss form — Form 4684 — should also be filed, she explained.

Persons who suffered a loss and haven't filed should file a Form 2688 that generally grants a 60-day filing extension.

Other Wichitans who were not directly affected by the tornado also may get a 60-day extension by filing Form 4868, Ms. Gaysek said.

Some 30 percent of the people have not filed tax returns, she said.

The IRS office in the Triad Building at Kemp and Kell will be open today and Friday and telephone lines will be open Saturday to provide information and assistance, she said.

IRS telephone number is 723-6702.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock today also ordered tax relief measures for tornado victims in Wichita Falls and Vernon.

"Residents in that tornado ravaged area are too busy putting their lives together to have to worry about meeting state tax deadlines," Bullock said in a written statement.

"Many businesses simply do not have records because they were destroyed in the devastation that hit on Tuesday and they need all the help and assistance we can give."

Bullock said he intends to waive any penalty or interest payment on late tax returns from businesses and individuals affected by the tornado.

He also said in the coming weeks his office resources will be made available to those merchants who want to reconstruct business and tax records from data on file in Austin.

Bullock also advised Wichita Falls and Vernon residents to disregard computer generated tax delinquency notices until recovery is made in the area.

"The last thing those who lost a home or loved one needs now is a dun notice from the tax collector. These folks deserve the biggest break they can get and I'm going to give it to them," he said.

A special tax task force was activated in the comptroller's office to provide continuing help to tornado victims on tax-related problems and that representatives of the comptroller's office would be in the tornado damaged area in the coming weeks.

A preliminary survey by the comptroller's office showed that more than 300 businesses were destroyed or severly damaged in Wichita Falls — some 60 in one shopping center alone.

Power returned to most

By JODY COX
Staff Writer

For utility officials and their customers, the effects of the tornado will linger on like a terrible hangover for some time to come.

But for the hundreds of utility workers who are working around the clock to repair and clean up the damaged power, gas and telephone systems, the storm provides both a monumental challenge and fat paychecks from working as much as 18 hours at a stretch.

"It's almost like a period of excitement," said George Hedrick of Texas Electric Co. "You have a challenge to do the best you can and you want to help your fellow man. We'll just keep after this until we're finished."

TESCO company manager Tom Locke reported this morning that power appears to have been restored to 90 percent of Wichita Falls. Of more than 37,000 customers in the city, as many as 4,000 still may be without electricity. All vital services, such as hospitals and water works, now have power.

TESCO services crews, assisted by crews from many other utilities and private contractors — totaling more than 400 workers in all — will continue restoring service as fast as possible, Locke said.

Locke re-emphasized the company's warning that people should not touch any wires or lines that are still on the ground. Many, he said, still could be dangerous.

A major transmission line, one of seven that feeds power in Wichita Falls which were cut by the tornado, was repaired Wednesday afternoon, allowing the beginning of service restoration in the city. Shortly before 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, almost exactly 24 hours after the tornado hit, a substantial amount of power had been turned on in the city, and crews continued working through the night.

Southwestern Bell spokesman Mac McGee said his company has at least double its usual number of workers repairing damaged equipment and lines. "Even with somewhere in the neighborhood of 450-500 people working on the damage, it's going to take a long time," he said.

The company has begun construction work in the southeast part of the city and will begin in the southwestern part shortly. McGee could give no estimate on completion of the construction, though.

He reported that long-distance capacity was approaching 80 percent of mechanical capability this morning. "The demand is still in the 800-900 percent range of normal usuage, but customers can get through if they keep trying," McGee said.

More than a million long-distance calls have been placed or attempted either going out of or coming in to the city during the last 40-48 hours, McGee said, a load the system has had quite a hard time handling.

The company still requests that only long-distance calls of an emergency nature be made. McGee reported that approximately 7,400 customers still are without service.

Lone Star Gas Co. has about 110 workers on the job. "Our first job was to stop all gas leaks which occurred when the meters were blown off," said company spokesman David Lyles. "Our crews made four sweeps through the affected areas in the first 12 hours.

"We're now in the process of going back and capping all of the individual service lines below ground level," he said. The Lone Star office will be closed Friday, but the service center will be staffed fully and repair crews will be on the job.

Utility crews are being housed wherever possible, in motels and on company property. Food is being brought in from surrounding towns.

"They work until they're tired," Hedrick said, "then rest and resume working. They don't have any particular hours."

Workers only can go so long without rest and not lose efficiency or safety, but all utility officials said their crews were putting out a monumental effort.

Electrical power repair crews especially have a difficult task. The tornado ripped out more than 70 structures, both wood and steel, on TESCO transmission lines. The distribution lines and system in the affected areas also were almost completely ruined.

Classes expected to begin Tuesday

By PAT ZAJAC

Although Midwestern State University may have sustained damage in the hundreds of thousands of dollars, regular classes will probably resume next Tuesday, Dr. John G. Barker, university president, said today.

"At this point we're planning to continue with our regular schedule on Tuesday," he said.

The university's outdoor recreation building was levelled in the tornado, major damage was done to the president's home, the tennis court fencing was destroyed and there was some damage to the dome of D.L. Ligon Coliseum.

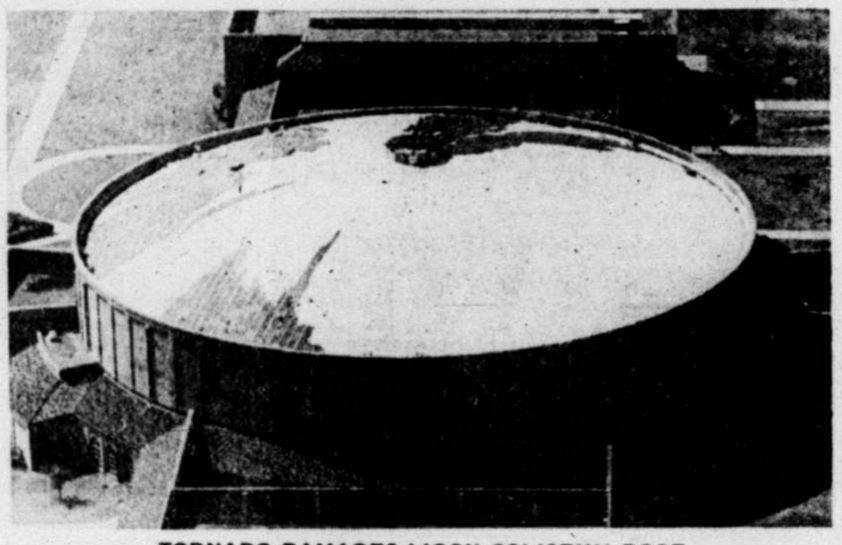

Barker estimated damage at $200'300,000.University personnel will be making a more accurate assessment of the damage today or Friday, he said.

Water was restored at the university Wednesday night and electricity was expected to be restored by noon today.

About 8-10 faculty members and administrators had homes destroyed in the tornado, Barker said.

The coliseum is being used to house tornado victims and the National Guard, Barker said.

"We're simply trying to patch things together and concentrating on trying to provide relief to people where we can off campus," Barker said.

Damaged schools' pupils to report late

By PAT ZAJAC
Staff Writer

Students who attend Rider High School, McNiel Junior High and Milam and Cunningham elementaries will not report to school until Tuesday, Dr. Lee Williamson, superintendent of schools, said today.

All other students in the Wichita Falls system will report to school Monday at their regular times.

Williamson met with school principals and assistant administrators today to discuss problems the school system faces because of Tuesday's tornado.

McNiel Junior High and Milam Elementary were destroyed in the storm. Several other schools sustained severe damage.

"We have no idea how many of our teachers lost their homes or how many were on spring vacation and will come back to find their homes and all their clothes gone. know how many teachers just have the clothes on their backs or how many have been injured," Williamson said.

Milam students will attend Cunningham Elementary and McNiel students will attend Rider for the remainder of this year.

Rider students will attend school from 7 a.m. until noon. McNiel students will attend from noon until 5:30 p.m. Rider's cafeteria was severely damaged in the storm, so meals will not be served at the school. Students will need to eat before or after their attend school, or bring food. Vending machines also will be available.

The science wing, new gym and agriculture building also were damaged at Rider. Phyical education classes will not be held. Class periods will be shortened from 55 minutes to 45.

Cunningham students will attend school from 7 a.m. until noon. Milam students will attend from 12:30 until 5:30 p.m. Lunch and snacks will be served at Cunningham. Cunningham students may need to stay a little longer and Milam students come somewhat earlier to eat lunch.

Milam teachers should report to Cunningham at 11:30 a.m.

Some recreational programs may be set up at Cunningham to accommodate students whose parents work. Families displaced by the storm who are temporarily living in another part of town may transfer their children to a closer school. Parents should enroll their children at the new schools. Principals will notify each other of the transfers.

"It may mean there is some overcrowding for the rest of the year," Williamson said. "I think everyone understands the problems. We might have to transfer some teachers," he added.

Faculty and cafeteria staffs of Rider, McNiel, Cunningham and Milam are to report to Rider and Cunningham Monday at their regular times to work out problems resulting from the consolidations of their schools.

Mrs. Wales' afternoon kindergarten class at Milam will attend Fowler Elementary. Students will leave the school parkling lot at 12:15 p.m. and return at 3:30 p.m. Mrs. Shores' morning kindergarten class will attend Jefferson Elementary. Students will leave Milam at 8:15 a.m. and return at 11:30 a.m. Mrs. Shores' afternoon kindergarten class will attend Crockett. They will leave at 12:15 p.m. and return at 3:30 p.m.

Volunteers who would like to help clean up Rider, Cunningham, McGaha and Jefferson schools may meet at the schools from 6 a.m. until 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday or call Harold Reed, assistant supervisor of custodians and maintenance, at 322-7994.

Volunteers who can do repair work will be needed at some of the schools Friday and Saturday. Persons who can bring their hand tools with them are asked to do so. Call Jim Cates at 322-1133.

Principals are asked to check their schools on Friday to see if they are ready to receive students for Monday.

"Substitute teachers may anticipate being called earlier in the morning due to the changes in some of the schedules. The calling system will still be the same. We hope as many as possible will be available," Perry Goolsby, assistant superintendent, said.

All bus drivers are asked to report on Monday even though Milam, Rider, McNiel and Cunningham bus routes will not be running.

The technical centers will run on their regular Monday schedules.

All teachers are asked to call their principals or call into the school administration office at 723-4177.

Representatives from the Texas Commission of Education will work with school officials to obtain federal and emergency relief for the schools, Williamson said.

"We have probably lost one-third of our tax base," he said.

Citizens are asked to leave the school administrative telephone lines open as much as possible so officials can conduct emergency business.

Twister destroys 75 homes in Clay County

By BRENDA SIMMONS
Regional Staff Writer

About 75 homes in Clay County were destroyed in the wake of Tuesday's tornado which moved from Wichita Falls into the adjacent county and then on to the Red River.

Only four injuries were reported in Clay County but Deputy Sheriff Paul Smith said there "still is a lot of rubble to go through."

Smith said he knew of no missing person in the area though.

The county was hardest hit on Homestead Lane and Kincaid Road about ¼ mile south of Dean in which Smith said maybe from 40 to 50 homes weredestroyed. About 15 to 20 homes reportedly were destroyed on Tammen Road and eight or 10 homes ruined on FM 2393 Dean-Jolly Road.

The sheriff's department official said he estimated the damage at several million dollars.

Smith said the tornado came into Clay County on Homestad and Kincaid after hitting Sunnyside Addition in Wichita Falls.

"I think there were two twisters, and one path went up (Texas) 79 to Petrolia then on across to the Red River," Smith said.

He said the other went straight across to FM 2393 north to Jolly.

"If it was the same tornado that covered that area, it was the widest one (twister) I'd ever heard of or seen," the Clay County official said.

He said only structural damage was done about ½ mile south of Petrolia and also east of Byers on FM 171.

Volunteer fire departments from Henrietta, Dean, Petrolia and Byers are assisting Clay County employees in the clean-up operations.

Paula Patterson, a Dean resident, said the Dean First Baptist Church has been set up as a relief station to aid area victims.

Despite legal violation

Clements stands by Roloff

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said today he realizes Lester Roloff is violating state law by operating homes for youth without a license, but that something should be done to allow Roloff to continue his "useful services."

"There is a service being performed, a very useful service," Clements told a news conference following a visit Tuesday to the evangelist's Rebekah Home for Girls.

"We going to talk about alternatives, if there are any, and we're going to find a solution and quit this nitpicking," the governor said of an overall answer to church-run day care centers that resist state licensing regulation.

Roloff is having second thoughts about not reporting to police the stabbing of one girl by four other residents, Clements said. The evangelist paddled the girls and put them in solitary confinement.

"I am confident that Brother Roloff is having second thoughts about the decision. He talked to me and Attorney General Mark White," Clements said. "I'm not going to second-guess him."

People generally misunderstand that girls and boys are sent to Roloff's homes by judges all over the country, the governor added.

"What we're really talking about is that most youngsters have been mandated to the home from judges around the country, not just in Texas," he said. "It's a question of whether they are going to go into a penal institution or a Roloff home. I don't think there is much choice."

In other matters, Clements said:

— He will make a decision Monday on whether to support an increase of 10 percent to 12 percent in home mortage interest rates.

— He accepts the concept of an indirect initiative and referendum proposal, where a citizen petition to change a law would go to the Legislature before being voted on at the polls.

— He probably will return to Wichita Falls to inspect damage from Tuesday's tornado.

— He is still talking to legislators and party officials about holding a 1980 presidential primary separate from May party primaries.

AP in error

The Associated Press story on Page 14D with the headline "Talmadge admits violating rules" is in error, according to an AP bulletin.

Sen. Talmadge's lawyer was incorrectly quoted in the story as saying the senator has admitted violations of Senate rules. The attorney has denied making the statement.

The original story was included in a section of the Times which was printed early due to publication difficulties and could not be removed from the newspaper.

United States inks import duty agreements

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The United States, the nine-member European Comman Market and 11 other nations today signed most of the Tokyo Round agreements for cutting import duties by an average 33 percent and setting new rules to stem protectionism.

President Carter praised the accord despite lack of agreement in some key areas, including grain and aircraft sales. Industrialized nations balked at exposing their industries to competition from cheaper imports by lowering tariffs.

If ratified, the agreements will go into effect at the start of next year and form the heart of trade reforms starting with the industrialized nations who inspired it.

At the White House, Carter said in a statement that the agreement "will bring a new order to the world trading system."

He called the negotiations "the most comprehensive and far reaching" since the General Agreements on Tariffs and Trade were reached in 1947.

"The agreements, when approved by Congress, will establish new trading rules that will increase the opportunities of all nations, rich and poor, to exchange their goods under equitable conditions," the president said.

"The agreements steer us away from destructive protectionism and into a path of greater export opportunities with the prospects of new jobs, improved productivity, and increased industrial and agricultural production," he said.

U.S. negotiator Alonzo McDonald said: "We have produced the biggest result ever in a trade negotiation at a time when the world needs it intensely for economic and political reasons."

He said that for the United States the treaty would act as "a bulwark for continuing growth of American employment." He said Carter will submit legislation for changes of U.S. laws required by the agreements early next month.

The parties failed to agree on issues of grain trade or on the problem of tariffs on imports that compete with domestic industries.

The Common Market, formally known as the European Economic Community, insisted that nations should be able to limit such cheap imports if they come from a particular country — a change of existing trade rules that allow import restrictions only on condition they are not discriminating.

South Africa ejects diplomats

World

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Prime Minister Pieter W. Botha announced Thursday night that a spying plot by the United States has been uncovered here and that several U.S. diplomats have been given a week to leave the country.

The prime minister charged that the personal plane of U.S. Ambassador William B. Edmondson has been converted into a "spy plane" and that it has been used to take aerial photographs of South African territory including "very sensitive areas."

Gunmen hit Americans

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Masked gunmen firing from a speeding automobile killed one American serviceman and critically wounded another Thursday in a suburb of Izmir, on the Aegean coast, local sources reported.

The sources, who asked to remain anonymous, identified the slain serviceman as Staff Sgt. Clay Pool, attached to the TUSLOG (Turkish-U.S. Logistics) wing of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization headquarters in Izmir.

The other American soldier was identified as Jeffrey Vail, also assigned to the NATO facility.

Ireland takes control of oil

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — The Irish government today took control of the country's dwindling oil stocks and means of distribution in what one government source, who asked not to be quoted by name, called "an all-out war on the oil companies."

Under a 1971 law, the government can order the companies to supply oil to key areas. The companies would face heavy fines if they refuse to comply.

The decision followed a Wednesday meeting, described by a source as "stormy," between Irish industry and commerce minister Desmond O'Malley and oil company executives, at which the companies refused to give information about how much oil is now available in Ireland.

Some observers have claimed the oil companies have been holding up supplies until they get the go-ahead for price rises, but the companies have denied this.

Court cameras get approval

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — In a unanimous ruling, the Florida Supreme Court today authorized the use of cameras and recording equipment in Florida courtrooms on a permanent basis, effective May 1.

Meanwhile, the Ohio Supreme Court today announced in Columbus that it has amended the state's code of judicial conduct to allow broadcasting and photographing of courtroom proceedings.

University issues denial

CHICAGO (AP) — The University of Chicago has denied that psychiatric patients who underwent cancer surgery in 1951 were used as "guinea pigs."

"In each case the surgery was performed with the best medical intent of curing and helping the patient," the university said Wednesday in a prepared statement.

The university said the adrenal glands of six psychiatric patients were removed in 1951 by Dr. Charles B. Huggins, co-winner in 1966 of a Nobel Prize for medicine.

Patrick T. Murphy, the acting Cook County Public Guardian, filed suit in Circuit Court on Monday charging that mentally ill persons from the Manteno Mental Health Center were operated on as "guinea pigs" without their consent.

State rejects nuclear waste

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Radioactive wastes from the Three Mile Island nuclear plant near Harrisburg, Pa., being trucked to a nuclear waste burial site near Barnwell, S.C., have been turned away by South Carolina authorities.

Heyward Shealy, director of the state Department of Health and Environmental Control's Bureau of Radiological Health, said he had ordered on Tuesday that the trucks not enter the state.

Shealy said last week he would permit no wastes from the damaged reactor to enter the state because of the "high probability" that they would be "long-lived wastes such as plutonium."

Nigh expects federal disaster area declaration

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Gov. George Nigh and state Civil Defense officials said today they expect a federal disaster area designation by Friday for the five southern Oklahoma counties which were ravaged by tornadoes Tuesday night.

Nigh said the letter seeking a disaster designation will be sent by telegram to federal officials later today.

State Civil Defense Director Hayden Haynes, at a meeting with Nigh and other state officials, estimated the property damage in the five county area at $10 million, with $9 million of that in Lawton.

He said representatives of the federal, state and local governments will be available at that time to handle all requests for assistance.

Designation of Comanche, Jefferson, Tillman, Stephens and Carter counties as federal disaster areas would make residents who suffered financial losses as a result of the storm eligible for various types of federal assistance.

The types of aid that would be available include emergency food stamps, low interest loans, temporary housing allowances and outright grants up to $5,000.

Finnell aids the arts

State Rep. Charles Finnell of Holliday was instrumental in persuading the House Appropriations Committee to give Texas arts a major boost the other day. The committee, after prodding by Finnell, finally recommended $3 million for sending art, dance and music programs throughout the state in the next two years.

Finnell argued that appropriating money for the arts is a good investment, describing such spending as "enlightened self-interest." He said that money for the arts is good for tourism and that community arts aid from the Arts and Humanities Commission helps smaller cities develop or play host to cultural Earlier, the House Business and Industry Committee had recommended $8 million for the arts commission, but that amount has little chance of legislative approval.

Most of the increase in the appropriation would go to the community arts program. Last December, 46 organizations in the state were awarded a total of $153,550 in grants and underwriting by the Texas Commission on the Arts and Humanities. Included was $6,000 granted the Wichita Falls Ballet Theatre to support the Southwestern Regional Ballet Festival here last weekend.

Increasing the budget for the arts commission would enable more Texas cities to present public programs in dance, theatre, music, literature, architecture, public media, visual arts, community development and education.

Focusing public attention on Texas arts would make Texans more aware of the variety and quality of our state's cultural activities and the positive effects such activity has on the economy and lifestyle of every citizen.

Finnell's proposal deserves to win complete approval from both houses of the Texas Legislature and Governor Clements.

Model police work

A small item in the news a few days ago described an event that had the potential for headline-making tragedy:

Three gunmen had surrendered to police after holding 40 persons hostage for three hours in a Brooklyn supermarket. No shots were fired; the only injuries were scalp lacerations on a young man who apparently was struck by the robbers.

The police went about their work with quiet efficiency, and the holdup men, who had threatened to start killing hostages if demands for weapons and a getaway car were not met, eventually succumbed to the low-keyed persuasion of the detectives of the city's hostage-negotiating team.

In a world with its attention focused on the nuclear emergency in Pennsylvania and the hostile reaction of Arab countries to the Middle East peace treaty, the events in Brooklyn were nothing to get excited about.

Yet the very fact that the incident attracted so little attention is testimony to the growing professionalism of law enforcement authorities in dealing with such situations. Not long ago, presented with a similar crime, police might well have attempted to rescue the hostages by force — perhaps after the ritualistic command over the bullhorn to "come out with your hands up."

Thoughtful police officials have been able to demonstrate that lives can be saved by patience, reasonableness and talk.

There is no higher law enforcement objective than the preservation of innocent life. New York's finest provided a model on how to do it.

Carter's naive decontrol plan

WASHINGTON—The politics of energy may be the most difficult politics of our time, as President Carter's latest approach is certain to demonstrate all over again.

Remember Richard Nixon's solution after the Arab oil embargo of 1973? He proposed to make us "energy sufficient" within a decade. But his plan never got beyond the paper it was written on. Gerald Ford's efforts were almost as futile in Congress, but that was because, they said, he was a Republican and the lawmakers were Democrats.

Then Carter came along in 1977 with an energy policy that was to be the moral equivalent of war. But the Democratic Congress didn't enlist in his crusade either and, in the end, a Democratic president had to settle for an emasculated bill almost 180 degrees away from what he had proposed.

So here we go again, and once again, the odds for success are not in Carter's corner. What is it that makes energy politics so intractable?

The key reason is that almost every constituency in America gets hurt with an energy program that simultaneously proposes cutbacks and higher prices. The ordinary motorist feels the pinch, but so does the automobile maker. The farmer and the food store will pay more for fuel and products made from petroleum essential to their businesses.

Lowering thermostats in winter and raising them in summer means less fuel sales for public utilities which, in turn, will make up the loss with higher prices for consumers. Reducing auto travel will save fuel, but also hurt tourism in the states that count on it. Even the federal employees are angry at Carter for proposing to take away their cut-rate parking and pushing them onto buses or into car pools.

About the only constituency that ought to be happy is the petroleum industry, freed at last from price controls on domestic crude oil. Estimates are that the oil companies will reap billions of "windfall" profits as a result of the president's decontrol decision. And they can be counted on to fight fiercely to prevent Congress from recapturing those profits through Carter's proposed "energy security tax."

Why shouldn't oil executives be happy? After all, Congress has refused three times in the past to enact a tax on excess profits since 1973. And the industry has a lot of staunch champions in the Senate, topped by Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the finance committee that handles tax legislation.

But, more than that, the petroleum companies ought to be happy for the amateurish way Carter has brought about decontrol of oil prices. He has given it to them on a platter, in effect, taking the blame himself for the higher prices consumers will pay for fuel and petroleum-based products. And all he has going for his decision, at best, is a hope that since he has been so noble, the industry and Congress will come to his rescue with his windfall-profits tax.

The naivete of the assumption boggles the mind, for Carter could have done the deed much differently—and perhaps much more successfully—if he had only applied a bit of presidential politics to his decision. Lyndon Johnson never would have done it Carter's way. Nor Nixon or even Ford. Especially not today.

Previous attempts at enacting a profits tax failed because previous presidents lacked the bargaining authority that the 95th Congress gave Carter. Under the law, the president could grant control, if he wished, any time before June of 1982—when it would become automatic. Mr. Carter chose to grant it now as a means of pushing up oil prices so as to reduce consumption and spur domestic production. But he made it a gift, extracting nothing in return from the petroleum barons.

If LBJ were still around, the scene in the Oval Office might have gone like this:

All right, you fellows, I know you want decontrol--and I can give it to you. But I have to have something in return for my early decision or else you'll just have to wait until 1982. If you want decontrol a couple of years early, you're going to have to agree to a tax on excess profits—but it'll be a tax which will be plowed back into energy research.

"So you think it over for a day and let me know. Because if I announce decontrol to the American people, I want to announce simultaneously that the oil companies have agreed that part of their profits will go into a tax fund for energy development. And I want you to tell your friends in Congress that that's the way it's going to be. Have we got a deal?"

Would LBJ's tactics have worked? I don't know. Maybe the oil companies would have turned it down, which would have been a good clue that a continuation of controls until 1982 wouldn't hurt them too badly. But if they had bought the deal—decontrol now in exchange for a windfall-profits tax—Carter would be home free on Capitol Hill and could even be said to have scored a very respectable coup. Some might even say he looked presidential.

The sad part is he didn't even try to get a deal before decontrolling. And now that the oil industry has its gift for free, why should it be willing to let Congress tax it away?

Clean air deadline approaches

By JULIA ROSE
Congressional Quarterly

WASHINGTON — Some states facing stiff penalties for missing federal clean air deadlines are looking to Congress for a reprieve.

By law, all states must have federally approved pollution control plans by July 1.

"The situation is really impossible. EPA (the Environmental Protection Agency) knows it and they refuse to admit it," said James W. Cooper, Alabama Air Pollution Control Commission director.

"It's not getting it (the plan) in . . . it's getting the mish-mash accepted," said Cooper, questioning whether EPA could handle by July the glut of plans that will come in as the deadline nears.

EPA disagrees. It maintains that the deadlines are reasonable, that it can handle the workload and is optimistic that all the states will have their plans in on time.

"We think the deadline and the act shouldn't be changed," said David G. Hawkins, EPA administrator for air and waste management.

In 1977 amendments to the Clean Air Act, Congress set a 1982 deadline for cleanup of the nation's air, with a possible extension to 1987 for cities with heavy auto exhaust problems. On Jan. 1, the day the cleanup plans were due, only six states and the District of Columbia had complied.

For states that don't meet the July deadline, the law mandates a cutoff of EPA construction permits for new pollution sources, which could create a virtual freeze on new industry. In addition, EPA has the option of cutting off millions in federal sewer and highway construction funds in those states.

Some tardy states are backing a bill introduced by Rep. Wes Watkins, D-Okla., that would offer a simple one-year extension of the due date. The bill has 105 cosponsors.

A survey by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce showed that 19 states support a congressional extension.

The chances that Congress will take up the bill soon are slim, but supporters of the clean air law are worried nevertheless. They fear the Watkins' bill could become a legislative vehicle for attempts to rewrite other provisions of the 1977 law.

Increasingly, clean air regulations are being questioned for their cost and inflationary impact. Businesses and labor unions have launched a broadside against some of them, citing the rules as unnecessarily strict and costly.

And White House inflation-fighters have suggested alternatives to some clean air rules with an eye toward trimming costs.

In addition, the Energy Department has proposed suspending some air pollution controls to take advantage of existing supplies of fuels like coal, which are highly polluting.

But defenders of the clean air law — like its chief architect Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, and several environmental groups — argue that the act requires that public health be the primary consideration and that the law should not be weakened.

But many states complain that the federal government has changed the requirements since they began drawing up plans, which has caused delays in submission.

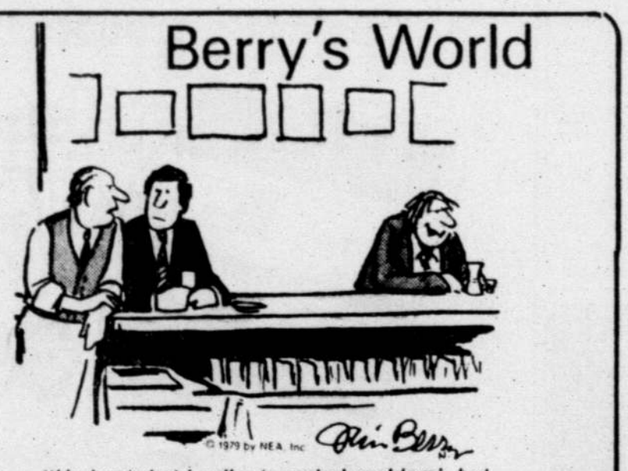

EPA administrator Douglas M. Costle announced Jan. 26, for example, that he was relaxing by 50 percent the air pollution standard for smog — a pollutant caused primarily by the reaction of auto exhausts with sunlight. Few of the nation's major urban areas can meet the new standard.

The mounting criticism may not, however, be translated into congressional action. Many business and union officials suggest the time may not be right for another revision of the clean air laws.

"All the smart money says Congress can't be persuaded to look at the Clean Air Act for another two to three years, based on the soul wrenching experience it had last time," said Jim Sheets, research director of the Laborers' International Union of North America, AFL-CIO.

Congressional clean air leaders confirm the bet.

Profits are what keep economy going

Maybe it's time for somebody to sit down with President Carter and explain to him why "profits" is not a dirty word. Not even in a campaign year.

This goes double when you think of its antonym which, as any third-grader could tell you, is "loss" and which too much of in any business leads to bankruptcy, which is not good for anybody.

That, of course, is taking the long view of the profit picture. Too long, maybe, in view of the record-breaking gains reported recently by Big Business (another bad word to a lot of voters).

The figure that caught everybody's attention was that 26-percent surge in the fourth quarter last year, which boosted profits to an all-time high of $225 billion.

But that was before taxes.

What the corporations actually cleared was more like $118 billion, or 15.8 percent higher than the year before. And if you remember that the last inflation figure was 15 percent, where's the gain?

But Mr. Carter, who is married to the 7.5 percent guideline, is all bent out of shape by such flaunting of prosperity.

"Unnecessarily high" is the grumble in the White House. And the brazen proof that business is not going along with the president's belt-tightening pep talks. How is he going to explain that to voters who feel that it's the prices they're paying that make corporations rich?

It won't be easy, but he could start by pointing out one fairly obvious fact: Profits are what keep the economy going. When business is good, almost everybody makes money.

Profits may be setting records, but so are workers' incomes, which, with any luck, might even manage to keep a penny or two ahead of inflation this year.

And it's not totally realistic, in our capitalistic system, to complain that our hard work is what keeps Mr. Chairman of the Board in yachts and private jets. The fact is that when bad times force Mr. COB to give up his yacht, they make it tough for the rest of us to keep up the payments on less exotic goodies.

That may not be fair, but that's the way it works. The Boss always lives in the big house on the hill. And if that's so bad, why are we scrambling to get as close to his neighborhood as mortgage rates will allow?

This is what economists are talking about when they fling around words like "incentives to produce." And doesn't Mr. Carter keep scolding us for our "lagging productivity" that reduces jobs and lowers our chances for the good life?

Businessmen don't keep profits ("obscene" or otherwise) lying around in just any old desk drawer. They put them to work in banks and savings-and-loan institutions that make money by loaning them out, thereby spreading the good life around a little. Even to us peasants who borrow it to finance new automobiles, homes, college educations and hamburger.

Corporate profits also filter down as dividends to shareholders, who admit they're nice to have. And they pay for pension funds, Social Security contributions and individual retirement plans. Businesses that don't make money don't make those "golden years" very shiny.

Profits aren't restricted to biggies like General Motors, Sperry-Rand and U.S. Steel, either. Middle-size businesses, even the small Mom-and-Pop shops, are out to make a profit, too.

When they don't, it's bad news for everybody. Walk down Main Street today and count the boarded-up windows, the "going-out-of-business" signs. If they don't make you worry a little, they should.

For that matter, you might fret a bit over corporate profits, too. Some businessmen say their big earnings may look good on paper, but they have to pay the tax collector, shareholders and suppliers with cash.

And cash is what they're short of right now. The truth is that, while the bottom line looks like boom times, at least one-third of that big bonanza melts away when you figure in inflation and out-of-date accounting methods.

Back in the mid-1960s, for instance, the average manufacturer earned 6.6 cents out of every $1 in sales. Last year that shrank to 5.4 cents per $1, which boils down to a 5.5 percent return on assets, compared to 7.6 percent 10 years ago.

That's the kind of trend that could, for some businesses, lead to a crisis called non-profit. And that IS a dirty word.

Auto Mechanic

Consider how workman paid

By JOHN MEYER
NEA Writer

(Second of 13 columns)

How is your mechanic paid? That's an important consideration in selecting the person to work on your car.

Garages pay mechanics in several ways, the two most common being the standard hourly wage and the percentage of labor. The former is preferable. But the farther away you live from a large metropolitan area, the more likely you are to come into contact with garages using the percentage system.

The person working for a percentage is called a flat-rate mechanic. That term derives from the flat-rate manual, which shops use to determine their estimates and, usually, their final bills.

The manuals list average times for standard auto-repair operations; for example, a manual might specify 1.6 hours as the average time for removing and replacing a water pump. The shop then multiplies its hourly rate by the number of hours allotted for the job.

The flat rate does not always apply. That's especially true with electrical problems, where diagnosis and testing to find the troublesome part often make up the bulk of the bill.

Other factors are also taken into account, such as excessive rust or a broken bolt.

It is incumbent upon flat-rate mechanics to beat the time prescribed by the flat-rate manual. The faster they go, the more they will be paid proportionally.

Of course, they cannot do such poor work that the car will be returned to the shop; then they will have to work on it again free. But flat-rate mechanics are strongly tempted to cut corners, charge for related work they did not perform, leave out parts or charge the maximum provided in the estimate.

There is one important way consumers can protect themselves against such practices: Always ask for all parts that have been replaced. Make this request before the work is begun so the parts will not be discarded unintentionally. Do not authorize a repair until this request has been noted in writing.

If mechanics know they will have to produce old parts, they are less likely to chance omitting new parts. Most of the parts flat-rate mechanics are tempted to eliminate are minor, such as gaskets, PCV valves and ignition condensers. All are items they consider unessential to getting the car out the door.

Most competent service departments are happy to let customers have old parts. Should you decide later that you were victimized by the garage or service station, the parts will serve as evidence and increase your chances of winning court action.

Always test drive your car after repairs are made. If you are dissatisfied, return immediately. Don't come back next week.

Service managers are most likely to believe a complaint that is made the same day. Later, they may figure that a new problem arose or that someone tampered with the work done at the garage.

Remember, the flat-rate mechanic most tempted to do shoddy work is the one working for an unconcerned employer. You can assume a mechanic whose percentage is less than 40 percent of the flat-rate hour is under pressure to make ends meet.

One way of checking employer-employee relationships is simply to observe the working area. A clean, well-lighted, well-equipped shop is likely to indicate an establishment that looks positively upon its employees and customers.

If you consider yourself a poor judge of conditions, ask the mechanics for their opinions. They will probably tell you.

UPS bound by state

If we have free enterprise, why is it that UPS (United Parcel Service) cannot pick up parcels within the state of Texas and deliver within the state of Texas?

Texas' Motor Carriers Act prohibits UPS from delivering within the state of Texas except in the Metroplex (certain portions of Dallas-Fort Worth) because it doesn't have a regular route and schedule. UPS applied for permission to serve many cities and towns in Texas, but this was denied by Texas Railroad Commission, which said it didn't have jurisdiction. The matter now rests with the Texas Legislature, which may or may not rule that RRC has jurisdiction. UPS can deliver into and out of Texas under present authority, but has only limited authority within the state.

Some tickets reserved

Recently I tried to get tickets for a concert at Memorial Auditorium. Although I was at a ticket outlet the first day tickets went on sale, I was told the seats I wanted were not available. Why?

When a promoter brings a show to Wichita Falls, the promoter often reserves a number of seats for his own use, according to Don Burkman, auditorium manager. The number of tickets held back for the promoter depends on the promoter and may vary from a few to a hundred or more. Consequently, there usually are a number of seats that are never sold.

Removing old stickers

What's the best way to remove bumper stickers?

I don't know what the best way is, but here is one method: Apply moderate heat to the bumper sticker with a blow-type hair dryer and lift a corner with a knife blade or fingernail and peel carefully. This method is supposed to work for just about any type of self adhesive product on just about any surface.

Another method calls for boiling motor oil on the stove and pouring it over the bumper sticker. The bumper sticker is supposed to come right off.

Problems are nothing to joke about

By Dr. KAREN BLAKER
NEA Writer

DEAR DR. BLAKER — I loved your joke about the 93-year-old couple who stayed unhappily married until their children's deaths, only then feeling free to consult a lawyer about a divorce.

Here's another one I thought you would enjoy: The couple next door talked about getting a divorce but decided to stay together for the sake of their marriage counselor!

DEAR READER — I appreciate the humor, but it's important to remember why we find these jokes so funny. That's because a truth painful to confront is exaggerated until it makes us laugh.

There are unhappy couples who stay together primarily for their children. And evidently there are couples who do not divorce primarily because of the influence of their marriage counselors.

Both situations are sad. The latter, however, is particularly deplorable because professional mental-health counselors are involved.

What are marriage counselors saying (or not saying) that keeps unhappy couples married? Why would we joke about it if it wasn't happening?

Are these counselors selling marriage on moral grounds? Or are they indirectly suggesting it would hurt their business and-or pride if couples parted even after the benefit of their services?

Whatever the answers, the practice must be stopped. After all, can you imagine divorce counselors losing face if clients decided to stay married? Or, even worse, death therapists expressing disappointment if their patients recovered?

One practical hint: If you are selecting a marriage counselor, find out his or her attitudes about the institution of marriage.

Portfolio

DEAR DR. BLAKER — I want to take issue with one comment in your newsletter "Taming the TV Beast." You mentioned that television does not give an accurate view of the realities of life. As an example, you say that women are still being cast as passive and dumb.

I must disagree with that statement. Charlie's Angels are anything but!

DEAR READER — Charlie's Angels aside, the U.S. Civil Rights Commission recently charged that minorities and women continue to be cast on television in stereotyped ways.

The commission also found that those groups are underemployed in the television industry. The commission pointed out, for example, that women comprise only 27.7 percent of prime-time dramatic characters.

I'll stand by my original statement.

Visually impaired to profit from new teaching machine

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Students in a program for the visually impaired at DeVeaux School are learning to use a machine that lets them read virtually everything a sighted person can read.

The system is based on type ordinarily used and is not related to Braille — a system of raised dots that translate to letters and words.

The machine uses a tiny camera-like device that activates a small bed of rods as it scans printed material. The students read by feeling the rods vibrate. For practice reading purposes the machine projects the letters and words onto a visual screen for the teacher.

The machine, called Optacon, is provided by the U.S. Office of Education for teachers who attend a workshop on its use. The machine is also supplied to visually handicapped persons who learn to use it.

To the untrained "reader," the machine makes a buzz which causes a tingling in the fingertip. But to a blind or partially sighted person with a keen sense of touch it opens a new world by allowing him to read printed material through patterns made by the vibrating rods.

DeVeaux, a school at the University of Toledo, has two machines because two teachers attended a workshop on its use last summer.

The teachers, Judy Mascho and Martha Klingelhafer, say a student should be able to read Braille before starting to learn to use the machine. They said that although the letters were different, the learning techniques would be the same for each approach.

In the case of a totally blind person, they said mastery of the system required that the standard alphabet be learned first.

Mrs. Mascho said the machine could operate at up to 80 words a minute or as slowly as six words a minute.

"But if they get to 20 to 30 they'll be doing well," Mrs. Mascho said.

Two students started learning to use the equipment as soon as it was delivered in late October. The teachers say it may take a year of study before they qualify for their own machines, which are valued at about $3,000 apiece.

The two teachers say the Optacon equipment will not replace the Braille system of reading, since it would require carrying the machinery around. It is also believed that not all persons can learn the system. Mrs. Mascho said the system could be used as a supplement where Braille is not readily available.

She also said it helped teachers present certain kinds of material, such as mathematical charts and tables that are difficult to use with blind children.

What's up in shopping?

What happens when Mom turns over the marketing to Dad, Junior or Sis?

Brand switching, that's what. In a majority of cases, they select a brand different from the one normally chosen by the woman of the house.

These are the products experiencing the most changes of brand when other family members do the shopping, according to a new survey by the Cadwell Davis Savage advertising agency:

Beer
Frozen main dishes
Frozen pizzas
Bar soaps
Toothbrushes
Shampoo
Mouthwash
Hand lotion
Frozen vegetables
Soft drinks

At the very bottom of the list was disposable diapers. Apparently that is one area where Mom's opinion is still not challenged.

Polarized plugs for purpose, cautions U.L.

Underwriters Laboratories Inc. (UL) advises consumers not to tamper or modify a recently introduced electric safety plug called a polarized plug, which is appearing on a number of new appliances.

Polarized plugs are presently required on televisions and radios, and implementation of a similar plug requirement for portable electric lamps will become effective Jan. 1, 1980.

Polarized plugs have been introduced as a safety feature which enhances protection from electric shock. A new plug blade arrangement, where one blade is wider than the other, creates this protection by making it impossible to insert the plug the wrong way in the wall outlet.

Altering the wider blade, or replacing the plug to facilitate insertion in a non-polarized receptacle, will defeat the safety concept of polarization and reduce electrical protection.

If a polarized plug does not fit fully into a receptacle or power outlet, UL urges consumers to reverse the plug. If the plug should continue to fail to fit into the outlet, an electrician should be contacted to replace the obsolete outlet. While not apparent to the untrained eye, wall receptacles in most homes built in the 1920s, or later, will have slots to properly accept the new polarized plugs with different blade widths.

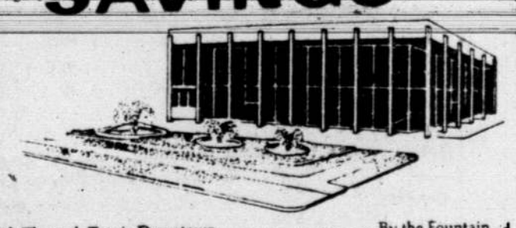

Commission points to alcohol's deceptions

LOS ANGELES (AP) — At first glance, the bottles look like those of famous brands of alcoholic beverages, and the couple behind them appears to be posing for a liquor ad.

But when one carefully reads the labels that say, "Brain Damage Wine," "Ulcers 69," "Convulsions Cold Duck" and "Cirrhosis Blended Scotch Whisky," it becomes clear that the couple is not promoting alcoholic beverages.

"In advertising, the liquor industry has glamorized alcoholic beverages," says Patricia Tate, executive director of the California Black Commission on Alcoholism.

Teamster officials angry at comments on contract

WASHINGTON (AP) — Angry Teamsters officials say President Carter's inflation adviser is encouraging a rank-and-file contract rejection by hailing the union's tentative agreement with the trucking industry as a victory for the president's elastic wage guidelines.

"This idiot out there is trying to shoot down our contract with his idiotic statements," union spokesman Bernard Henderson charged Wednesday after inflation adviser Alfred Kahn declared that the settlement meets Carter's 7 percent pay raise standard even though the union and industry estimated wage and benefit increases totaled more than 9 percent a year.

Kahn also said the increase in wages and fringe benefits in the new contract is "substantially less" on a percentage basis than in the last contract negotiated by the union.

That comment in particular threw Teamsters President Frank Fitzsimmons into a rage, said union spokesman Henderson.

It is understood that other administration officials also were alarmed by Kahn's statements, fearing a rank-and-file backlash that would send negotiators to the bargaining table once more in search of a settlement that, the next time around, would break the guidelines.

"It's as if he (Kahn) is deliberately trying to sabotage ratification," said Henderson, who called Kahn's comparisons between the new and old contracts "absolutely, totally incorrect."

A Kahn aide later acknowledged the new contract might provide more new money than the old pact.

Henderson said it will take about four to six weeks to complete a ratification vote.

Meanwhile, the union and major trucking firms prepared to resume normal operations today for the first time since April 1, when the two sides became locked in a nationwide work stoppage over the contract dispute.

The two sides agreed to end an industry lockout of striking Teamsters after reaching tentative agreement on a new three-year contract late Tuesday, but did not complete details of a back-to-work agreement until Wednesday. About 500 major trucking companies and 235,000 Teamsters were affected by the dispute.

The 11-day shutdown, the longest in U.S. trucking history, had little impact on the economy except for the auto industry, forced to cut production and furlough nearly 100,000 workers due to shortages of parts normally delivered by truck.

Auto industry officials said they did not expect to be back to normal production until next week.

The administration, which has made the Teamsters negotiations a key test of Carter's wage increase guidelines, hailed the settlement Wednesday even as it admitted it had once again loosened the standard to accommodate the giant union, but hadn't told anybody.

The latest change, the administration disclosed, exempts contract increases that improve union retirees' pensions.

Both the Teamsters and the industry estimated that increases in wages, cost-of-living adjustments and fringe benefits under the new pact total about 30 percent over three years — or slightly more than 9 percent a year plus compounding.

But the administration, using a lower projected inflation rate to estimate future cost-of-living adjustments, says it calculates total increases at 27 percent — 8.3 percent a year.

After deducting 4.5 percent worth of contract costs that are exempt from the guidelines — such as increased payments to maintain the value of pension and health insurance benefits — the contract increases total 22.5 percent, or 7 percent a year, the administration explained.

Administration officials said they were anxious to declare the Teamsters contract within the guidelines to send a message to rubber, electrical and auto workers, whose contracts also expire this year. The Teamsters traditionally set a wage pattern for those unions.

Privately, an administration official acknowledged the Teamsters pact is "inflationary." But what the union accepted is still "a hell of a lot better than 10, 11, 12 percent," said the official, who asked not to be named.

Under the new pact, a worker would get $1.50 an hour in wage increases over three years, fringe benefit improvements costing employers an additional $1.03 an hour and cost-of-living raises totaling between 85 cents and $1.16 an hour, depending on the projected inflation rate.

A typical Teamster made $9.75 an hour under the old pact and received fringe benefits worth another $2.90 an hour.

Kerr-McGee lawyers pressed for admission promise unkept

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A lawyer for the Karen Silkwood estate is attempting to get defense witnesses to acknowledge that the Kerr-McGee Corp. ignored a promise to medically evaluate nuclear plant workers asked to wear safety respirators.

Silkwood lawyer Gerry Spence asked several questions Wednesday about Kerr-McGee's apparent agreement to follow standards requiring medical evaluation of employees asked to work in full-face respirators.

On cross-examination, Kerr-McGee's third defense witness in the $11.5 million federal court civil case, Al Valentine, 39, of Los Alamos, N.M., refused to go along with Spence's assertion that Kerr-McGee broke the respirator promise, contained in its license application for a nuclear fuel processing plant.

Valentine, who helped design the plant, acknowledged that wearing respirators causes fatigue, stress and can have varying effects on different individuals.

"But to my knowledge, our respirator program met the requirements of our license," he said.

The suit by Miss Silkwood's survivors claims Kerr-McGee was negligent in connection with the contamination of Miss Silkwood and her apartment with poisonous, radioactive plutonium. She was a plant lab technician at the time of her death in a 1974 car crash. The company claims she contaminated herself, possibly while spiking urine specimens with plutonium to dramatize claims about unsafe working conditions.

The questions Spence asked about respirators drew a number of objections from Kerr-McGee attorneys. Finally, U.S. District Judge Frank G. Theis instructed Valentine to answer a question about employees working in a radioactive contamination situation.

"Would you have permitted these men to work eight to 10 hours a day, sometimes 10 days in a row in production in full-face respirators?" Spence asked.

"I would, uh ... given the facts that you have given, I would say no," Valentine said.

The Los Alamos Scientific Lab staffer said one of the reasons he left his job at Kerr-McGee was because he couldn't set up its health physics organization the way he wanted.

Hospital projects to be considered

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — State health planners agreed Wednesday to consider a pair of Tulsa hospital projects later this month, in spite of a moratorium still in effect on Tulsa hospital expansion plans.

The three-member Oklahoma Health Planning Commission agreed to retain on its April 25 agenda construction plans from Oklahoma Osteopathic Hospital and Doctors' Hospital.

An Oklahoma City judge ordered in February that the commission consider pending projects of Hillcrest and St. Francis hospitals in Tulsa.

The order was handed down after the commission put a moratorium into effect in January intended to maintain the status quo of Tulsa's health systems.

Oral Roberts University officials had asked for the moratorium until the conclusion of lawsuits surrounding construction of ORU's City of Faith Hospital here.

Tulsa hospitals are fighting the City of Faith, in part because officials maintain it will aggravate an overbedding situation in Tulsa.

The commission later agreed to consider any project that does not include addition of beds.

Health facilities must obtain approval from the state agency before most projects can begin under state and federal law.

Prosecutor files suit on prison releases

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahoma County District Attorney Andy Coats filed suit Wednesday against the state Department of Corrections and state Pardon and Parole Board attempting to bar a wholesale release of inmates from the McAlester and Granite prisons.

A hearing is scheduled at 10 a.m. Friday in the court of Oklahoma County District Judge Joe Cannon.

Gov. George Nigh has said he is planning to give Easter commutations to about 200 inmates.

Coats said that although the state is under a federal order to reduce populations at the two prisons, it has not been ordered to release prisoners.

Coats said if a wholsale release of prisoners takes place, it will present a "clear and present danger" to Oklahoma County and the state of Oklahoma.

He said he is requesting the court to order the Department of Corrections and the pardon and parole board to explore all other alternatives of housing before releasing inmates.

The district attorney said the suit was prompted by reports of an impending release of a large number of inmates.

More Black Fox hearings considered

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Attorney General Jan Eric Cartwright says he is considering asking for new hearings before the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to try to block construction of the Black Fox nuclear power generating plant near Tulsa.

Cartwright said Wednesday the recent failure at the Three Mile Island nuclear facility in Pennsylvania "is of concern to all of us, but we were looking into this case before that happened. That gives us even more reason to look at it."

The attorney general said he is considering asking the NRC to conduct new hearings, but also is "examining other alternatives."

He declined to elaborate. When asked if he might be considering a federal court suit, he said, "I'd rather not comment at this time."

"The main thing is that we need to be certain something like the Three Mile incident can't happen here," Cartwright said, adding that he will take "whatever course of action we determine is best to protect the interests of our state's citizens."

He said the project must be thoroughly examined to make certain it is safe and its costs won't be prohibitive.

The Black Fox plant, which has a preliminary price tag of $1.75 billion, is being built by Public Service Co. of Oklahoma about 30 miles east of Tulsa near the small town of Inola.

PSO officials have said the cost estimate will have to be increased because of inflation and delays in construction because of problems in getting the project approved.

More than $100 million already has been spent just on preparing the site for construction.

Railroad levied fine for unsafe conditions

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — For what is believed to be the first time in state history, the Oklahoma Corporation Commisssion Wednesday held a railroad company in contempt, levied a fine and ordered dangerous railroad conditions corrected.

Commisssioners Hamp Baker, Bill Dawson and Norma Eagleton upheld commission staff findings that conditions along Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railroad Co.'s Tulsa train yard are hazardous to workers,.

MK&T was fined an immediate $500 for contempt of a commission order and failure to appear at Wednesday's hearing as ordered.

The railroad was ordered to eliminate the safety hazards within 60 days or pay $500 a day for each day the safety violations continue.

Billy denies peanut loan cash went to brother's campaign

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Carter has declared that "not a dime" of loan money from the National Bank of Georgia to the Carter family peanut business went to his brother's presidential campaign, the New York Times reported in today's editions.

The president's brother insisted the family business was not behind in its loan payments in 1975 and 1976, even though there might have been slight delays in notifying the National Bank of Georgia about the movements of collateral, the newspaper said.

He said President Carter had no direct involvement in the loans or administering the warehouse operation during 1975 and 1976 although he did help design plans for a peanut sheller and later, accidentally, met with an official of a company involved in the financing, according to the Times.

BILLY CARTER

Billy Carter said neither the president nor any campaign staff member asked for campaign money and he did not make any payments that might have indirectly entered the campaign, the newspaper said.

The grand jury has been looking into the warehouse loans and the Department of Justice last month appointed a special counsel, Paul J. Curran of New York, in the inquiry.

Billy Carter countered news reports that suggested he had conspired with a warehouse employee to send false and misleading reports to the National Bank of Georgia which lent the Carter business nearly $7 million from 1975 to 1977.

He told the Times he negotiated the lines of credit through Bert Lance, then its chief executive, but it was clear from the beginning that the bank had little expertise in administering a commodity loan and that bank records of the transaction might well be confused.

He asserted, though, that he never asked a bank official to hold his checks to avoid overdrafts or to alter bank records.

"If I've done anything illegal, I definitely don't know about it. I guess they all say this, but if I went to prison you'd know I was innocent," Carter said during an interview while in the alcohol treatment program at the Naval Hospital in Long Beach, Calif.

The newspaper noted that President Carter owns 66 percent of the Carter family business which, according to Charles H. Kirbo, trustee of his personal finances, has not done well since 1977. The business is up for sale, according to the Times.

Rhodesians hit Zambia

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — A night bombing attack on a refugee camp near Solwezi by Rhodesian jets killed 136 persons and injured 200 others, a Zambian government spokesman said today.

The spokesman gave no further details of Wednesday night's raid, but condemned what he called wanton attacks on innocent and helpless people.

The Rhodesian military command acknowledged the raid, saying its planes swooped 350 miles into Zambia to attack a "complex" of guerrilla bases, but did not say if there were casualties. It denied claims that the planes hit refugees in a nearby camp.

Western states trucking firms remain shut down

BURLINGAME, Calif. (AP) — Despite tentative settlement of the Teamsters union strike, trucking firms in 11 states from the Rocky Mountains west remained shut down today after negotiations with the 7,000-member mechanics' union broke down, an industry official said.

Spokesmen for the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, AFL-CIO, which represents the mechanics who walked out April 1, said its request for 8½ percent pay hikes is patterned after the Teamsters settlement.

"Basically its shutting down the industry west of Denver," said Willard Johnson, a member of the Western Trucking Employers Inc. panel which failed Wednesday night to reach agreement with union negotiators at a hotel here.

No new nogotiations are scheduled, Johnson said.

"Our talks broke down," said Stanley Jensen, a vice president of the union. "The employers refused to consider our last five issues on the table." He said seven issues have been settled and the remaining subjects cover subcontracting work and workweek hours.

There was no immediate indication from machinist union officials on whether Teamster drivers were honoring picket lines set up by mechanics.

The mechanics' three-year contract expired March 31, union officials said, and employees of nationwide trucking firms began a walkout the following day.

Jensen said the union is seeking a three-year contract which would provide hourly wage increases of 88 cents in the first year, 39 cents in the second year and 41 cents in the third year.

Equipment problems scotch Soviet space link-up

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union's Intercosmos program suffered its first failure today when equipment trouble prevented a Soviet-Bulgarian team of cosmonauts from docking their Soyuz spacecraft to the orbiting Salyut 6 space station, the Soviet news agency Tass reported.

The two unsuccessful spacemen aboard Soyuz 33, flight commander Nikolai Rukavishnikov, 46, of the Soviet Union, and engineer Georgi Ivanov, 38, Bulgaria's first cosmonaut, began preparations to return to Earth, Tass said.

The failure was particularly disappointing for the Soviet government because it occurred on Cosmonautics Day, the 18th anniversary of history's first manned space flight by the Russian Yuri Gagarin.

A Tass announcement said the linkup was cancelled because of "deviations from the regular mode of operation of the approach-correction power unit" aboard Soyuz 33 during the approach to the orbiting space station.

It was believed the rockets in the power unit did not function properly and the ship was unable to get close enough to Salyut 6 to perform the docking maneuver.

The flight was marred at the start by what Tass said was the shakiest blastoff in Soviet space history. Forty-mile winds buffeted the spacecraft during the liftoff Tuesday night from the Baikonur space center in Kazakhstan, and Soviet TV said the launch was nearly postponed.

Tass reported Wednesday that Rukavishnikov, who was on his third space flight, and the Bulgarian switched off their engines during their fourth and fifth orbits, putting the Soyuz on course for the approach to Salyut 6. It said ground control was making preparations for the linkup with the space lab, on which Soviet cosmonauts Vladimir Lyakhov and Valeri Ryumin were waiting for them. They have been in space since Feb. 25.

Mondale gets assurances on U.S. Iceland air base

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — Vice President Walter Mondale walked by a few protesters today to meet with Icelandic leaders who, he said, gave him assurances of support for the U.S.-staffed NATO airbase at Keflavik, a thorny issue for the center-left government.

"There are no serious basic bilateral contentious issues of any type whatsoever," Mondale told reporters at a brief news conference after the two-hour session.

Mondale, making the first stop of a six-nation Eastertime tour of the Nordic countries and the Netherlands, was greeted outside the government guest house by about three dozen protesters.

They waved placards and chanted "Iceland out of NATO," and "military out of Iceland."

The vice president briefed Foreign Minister Benedikt Grondal and Prime Minister Olafur Johannesson on strategic arms talks with the Soviet Union, U.S. Relations with China, Mideast peace and NATO developments, a Mondale aide said.

Also discussed was the possibility of allowing Icelandic Airlines to land at more cities in the United States and allowing it to fly to American cities directly from Europe, the aide said. He asked not to be identified.

President takes Easter vacation

SAPELO ISLAND, Ga. (AP) — President Carter flew to this secluded Georgia coastal island today for a long Easter holiday stay an aide described as "99 percent vacation."

Carter, his wife Rosalynn and daughter Amy flew to the island by helicopter from Brunswick, Ga., after a flight from Washington aboard Air Force One.

Hamilton Jordan, the president's principal assistant, provided reporters with the characterization of his boss' visit. But Jordan added that a few items, such as continuing negotiations on a strategic arms limitation treaty, would occupy part of Carter's time.

Deputy press secretary Rex Granum said the president was here "mainly for rest and recreation" and did not plan to leave island except for deep-sea fishing trips.

Granum said the only possible visitor was Atlanta attorney Charles Kirbo, who is trustee to Carter's property while in office.

This will be the first time the Carters have spent a vacation at the island, 30 miles north of Brunswick.

In the past, they have vacationed on St. Simons Island, which is across a causeway from Brunswick.

But the recent indictment of their St. Simons landlord, Smith W. Bagley, on federal fraud charges apparently prompted the Carters to try out a new vacation site. Bagley has pleaded innocent to the charges.

The Carters, who will stay on the island until April 20, are renting a home which belongs to the Marine Institute of the University of Georgia.

Mrs. Carter will interrupt her vacation to make a quick trip to Raleigh, N.C., next Wednesday to open a two-day conference on mental health.

Youth caging trial ends in declaration of mistrial

ATOKA, Okla. (AP) — A judge declared a mistrial late Wednesday after a jury reported it was deadlocked on a kidnapping charge filed against an Atoka welder accused of keeping a teen-ager caged with three bobcats for two days in October.

But jurors returned a guilty verdict on a related assault charge filed against John W. Williams and recommended he serve six months in the county jail.

Williams was convicted of firing shots at the cage where he had allegedly imprisoned Jerry Lewis Atkinson.

District Judge Lavern Fishel set formal sentencing for Williams, 32, for April 24.

Jurors reported they were deadlocked 6-6 on the kidnapping charge.

Williams testified Wednesday he put Atkinson in the cage with his three pet bobcats in an effort to recover $5,000 worth of items he said Atkinson had taken from his home.

Atkinson, 17, and Ricky E. Moore, 18, testified Tuesday they had burglarized Williams' home about a month before Atkinson was put in the cage.

Prosecutors contended Williams did not report the burglary and instead opted to take the law into his own hands.

Williams said he was reluctant to report the burglary to the Atoka County sheriff's office. "The county doesn't seem to solve much crime," he said.

Williams said he located Atkinson in an Atoka service station Oct. 1.

"I grabbed his shirt, pushed him up against my van and told him to ... come up with my goodies," Williams said.

The defendant testified Atkinson and Moore accompanied him to his welding shop where they scuffled. Williams said he later bound Atkinson hand and foot and put him in the cage.

Atkinson stayed in the cage for two days before a trucker notified authorities. Atkinson was unharmed, although he said he awoke on one occasion to find a bobcat "gnawing on a toe."

Accused police officer fired

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston police officer Phillip Emerson, accused of forcing two women to submit to sexual advances, has been fired by Police Chief Harry Caldwell.

The firing will be appealed to the Civil Service Commission as soon as possible, Emerson's attorney, David Berg, said Wednesday.

Emerson was arrested Sunday and charged with the misdemeanors of official misconduct and official oppression after he was picked out of a lineup by two women who accused him of forcing them to submit to his sexual advances.

Caldwell had no comment on the specifics of the case.

Emerson, who is black, has said his problems stem from his being married to a white woman.

Coast Guard seeks missing windjammer

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — The Coast Guard has been unable to find the missing Pride of Baltimore, a 129-foot sailing ship two days overdue with 12 persons aboard on a trip from Wilmington, N.C., to Norfolk, Va.

Two C130 Coast Guard planes Wednesday searched an area about 300 miles from Cape Henry to Wilmington and about 30 miles wide for the ship, said Fred Maldonado, a Coast Guard spokesman.

The Coast Guard resumed the aerial search today.

Maldonado noted that Baltimore officials didn't seem concerned that the vessel, the city's goodwill ambassador built for the Bicentennial, was overdue, but he said the search and efforts to raise the Pride by radio would continue.

Sen. Byrd likely to oppose SALT treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker says he's leaning against supporting the still-unfinished strategic arms limitation treaty, and former top U.S. military officers are complaining the agreement would "lock the United States into inferiority" with the Soviet Union.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin discussed the remaining unresolved issues in the treaty Wednesday night but gave no indication when a settlement was likely.

Earlier Wednesday, Baker said he was "more inclined to be against it than for it" unless the Carter administration makes significant changes.

Support from Baker, who is expected to become a formal candidate for the 1980 Republican presidential nomination, is considered essential for gaining the two-thirds majority needed for Senate approval of a treaty.

He said he is concerned about possible problems in verifying Soviet compliance with the pact, especially in view of the the loss of U.S. monitoring stations in Iran.

Elsewhere in Washington Wednesday, former military leaders attacked the proposed treaty on grounds ranging from the potential for Soviet cheating to their belief that the world would see the agreement as a sign of weakness by the United States.

Retired Adm. Thomas Moorer, a former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said world leaders would see the treaty as giving the Soviets a strategic advantage, and he said that could lead some American allies to align themselves with the Soviet Union.

The officers spoke at a meeting sponsored by the American Security Council and the Coalition for Peace through Strength, two Washington-based groups fighting the proposed treaty.

After Vance and Dobrynin discussed the treaty Wednesday night, the Soviet ambassador said, "We always make progress when we meet."

Wherever he went... tornadoes went too

By LOUISE GREGG
Special Writer

That nature is both beautiful and orderly and cruel and chaotic can't be denied — especially by Donnie Rine, Quanah, Texas resident who passed through Vernon and Harrold just as tornadoes had struck and then found himself in the midst of Wichita Falls' killer tornado a short time later.

"I never doubted the power of nature...of God..." said the big, rugged Texan who is warehouse foreman for Georgia Pacific in Quanah. "But strange as it sounds" (here he pauses, searching for words) there was a kind of awesome beauty in the tornado" as it moved "in slow motion" in the vicinity of Sikes Senter.

Rine said when he left Quanah Tuesday afternoon that community had experienced heavy rain and hail. When he reached Vernon, a twister had touched down moments before and claimed the lives of 11 people and injured as many as 70.

"They told me to move on" he said of officials stationed at the edge of Vernon on Highway 287. All along the highway cars were parked under underpasses.

Rine moved on. When he came to Harrold another tornado had hit. Rine seemed to be riding the crest of luck, barely missing hellish tornadic action along the road.

But in Wichita Falls, after he had gone down Kemp he began to feel uneasy. "It felt strange," he said. "Too warm."

Driving down Kemp he was enormously aware of the black cloud in the southwest.

He obeyed those who were directing traffic at Call Field and Midwestern Parkway. "I was forced to turn left," he said, which turned out to be in the crazy path of the tornado.

"Son, you're luck has run out," he said to himself as the tornado descended. "The car kind of growled...I can't describe the sound and the windows had a sucking noise. I turned off the air-conditioner and knew I was going to die. The car kind of floated. I cut off the engine so maybe it (his car) wouldn't kill anybody else."

Before his eyes he "saw Burger King go. I saw light poles twisted and tied like ribbons. Then I saw the top of Ethan Allen furniture store lifted up as easily as picking up a chair. Then it was slammed down."

He also saw Sikes Senter struck like a bomb from the sky. He saw cars lifted up and turned topsy turvy in the parking lot as if by the hands of a giant.

Rine hesitated to describe "the beautiful colors in the tornado." But he was so affected by the simultaneous beauty and destruction that he felt compelled to continue.

"There were several shades of gray and a beautiful bright blue along with the black," he said, and then shook his head. "I don't understand it.

"I don't think I'll ever live through such a thing again."

Lawton seeks disaster aid

LAWTON, Okla. (AP) — In the wake of the Tuesday's killer tornado that left three persons dead, injured 68 and caused an estimated $10 million in damages, Gov. George Nigh said he will ask that Lawton be declared a disaster area.

The request announcement came after Nigh conducted an air and ground tour of the devastation Wednesday.

Nigh said the request will be made to help an estimated 648 families and 12 businesses recover from the destruction from two funnels that ripped a mile-long section of the city's south side, knocking out electrical power, gas lines and telephone service.

The three dead were identified as Beatrice Kading, 69, Garland Newsom, 47, and Stephanie Miller, 2, all of Lawton.

Three Lawton hospitals reported that 17 persons remained hospitalized Wednesday night, four of them in critical condition.

Scores of Oklahoma National Guardsmen, Lawton police and Oklahoma Highway Patrol officers cordoned off a 17-block area of south Lawton.

They were searching through the rubble for persons possibly trapped.

Police Chief Robert Gillian said he could not be certain, but "as far as we can determine, we don't have any missing persons."

The tornado was believed to be the same one that hit Vernon, Texas, 70 miles to the south before roaring through Lawton at about 5 p.m. Tuesday.

The storm continued 22 miles northeast to the Sterling area where it dropped papers from Lawton and Vernon that it had picked up.

A Sterling woman found checks bearing the names of Lawton and Vernon residents.

Tornado born at Lake Wichita

By LARRY GRAUERHOLZ
Staff Writer

The tornado that gouged an eight-mile furrow across the newest part of Wichita Falls at supper time Tuesday was born in the wooded area at the headwaters of Lake Wichita. The three funnels that converged and formed the most lethal storm in the history of North Texas dropped out of the boiling skies about 4 miles southwest of Memorial Stadium.

With my daughter, I stood at the interestection of FM 1954 and Sisk Road and watched the storm develop about two miles away. The skies to the northwest had been filled with churning masses of blue-black clouds.

All within a few seconds, three dancing funnels descended and were joined. Then the mass majestically began to proceed northeasterly on its path of death and destruction.

This was not the typical tornado so often shown in wire service pictures: a funnel hanging from a cumulus cloud with a twisting rope reaching to the ground. Tuesday evening in Wichita Falls, the funnel itself was on the ground.

As we and some neighbors took shelter, I noticed that there were only a few drops of rain, driven by wind gusts.

The storm passed in minutes and the air was calm. The first homes to receive damage were those near the Wichita-Archer county line on Sisk Road (FM 2650).

My portable weather radio went dead while we were in the shelter. Supper was late.

Divorce

A paper by MSU senior Elizabeth Grauerholz explores the problem of preparing children for the time when a wife and husband part.

By LOUISE GREGG
Special Writer

Where are our children?

Many of today's children aren't out playing — enjoying that brief happy time known as childhood — in carefree existence. Some are victims of child abuse, while others are indirect victims of sundry woes and problems that beset parents. Many children are becoming old before their time as a result of having to deal with adult problems.

Elizabeth Grauerholz, a Midwestern State University senior, is a young woman deeply concerned with the changing status of the family in modern society. She believes that, of all other social issues, divorce predominates as the problem of parents that so traumatically affects children.

Yet little has been written on the subject of divorce telling youngsters how to adjust to parental separation and adults how to prepare their children for entrance into a new way of life.

For a classroom paper, "For the Kids' Sake: An Ethnography of the Ways Parents Prepare Their Children for Divorce," Miss Grauerholz had no books to research — there aren't any "how to" books on this particularly important angle.

Instead, the attractive, serious sociology student conducted "ethnographic interviews" in which she "sat down and talked" with parents and children who were either divorced or in the process.

With the children involved, she says, "I faced a lot of resistance." No wonder. "The parents are very insecure themselves."

The major problem in a house divided is that "parents don't want to talk to their children. They don't want to upset the child."

Another reason parents don't take steps to inform children of impending divorce is that "they thought the children already were prepared." Having "fought openly ... separated" parents assume children know what is brewing. This is the primary reason parents don't take steps to prepare the child for divorce, she says. "They rely on these" obvious indicators that all is not right on the homefront.

"For the Kids' Sake" turned out to be more than a college classroom paper. Dr. Robert Clark, MSU sociology professor, was so impressed with the depth and insight of Miss Grauerholz' work he encouraged her to present the paper in recent competition before the Southwest Sociological Association in Fort Worth. Miss Grauerholz won the undergraduate competition.

The paper is being considered for publication in a journal — and the young author just might consider expanding the lengthy paper into a book.

Miss Grauerholz ponders many pieces that fit together in the puzzle of divorce and into the larger picture of the sociological impact of divorce. She says she, like a large majority of people, "grew up on fairy tales." In a protected environment, youngsters become adults only to find what they thought were "simple problems" can be "major" amongst certain married folks. How to survive a marriage, she believes, is something that needs to be taught.

On the other hand, "Maybe two people can't live together the rest of their lives." She points out that it is very hard for a man and woman bonded in matrimony at an early age to continue to be compatible for years without end.

"Attitudes are changing in society (about divorce)," says Miss Grauerholz. Until a few years ago, "most tried to push it away." Churches, however, "are not changing attitudes" about the reality of divorce as rapidly as other institutions. "They try to avoid it ... pretend it's not happening."

Although divorced parents share the common bond of displaced children, Miss Grauerholz realizes "each parent is very individualistic with a unique set of problems." Nonetheless, "Parents should communicate with their children" — prepare them for divorce no matter how stressful and traumatic the event may be.

Another fallacy abroad, declares Miss Grauerholz, is that "children are flexible." Not so, she says. They don't bounce back from divorce without scars. "Parents let children fend for themselves," thinking they are preoccupied with play and school.

"This is not true. They are (deeply) affected by things." She believes parents need to do more than "hope children will make it."

Divorced parents also undergo great stress. "They feel guilty." Many have pain but make a valiant effort to not show it.

As a result of this remarkable study, Miss Grauerholz believes she would be more confident in considering marriage and parenthood. "I am aware of problems that people confront."

It's time, she's convinced, that society dispenses with the fairy tale of always living happily ever after and face up to the reality of divorce.

Copelin's Corner

It was an accident — honest

It almost hurts to talk about it.

Consider, if you will, the story about the California field worker who got bit by a black widow spider while making a noon stopover at a portable toilet.

Or what about the jailed drunk who tripped on his shoe tongues and knocked out a gold tooth on a toilet seat.

Or the story about the sun bather who burned his chest on the hot exhaust system of a garbage truck which had just run over him on the beach.

And how can you forget about the poor old seamstress who felt the presence of a darning needle she had sat on years earlier.

If you think these tales are strange, think what the claim representatives for Aetna Life & Casualty must have gone through when they reviewed these cases.

Traditionally, Aetna records the best of the millions of claims they process and shares them with newspapers. Here are some of the best for last year:

Like the New England constables who thought they had caught a band of thieves red-handed loading the contents of a home into a van.

One of the thieves convinced the officers he actually was the homeowner and was, unhappily, claiming what was his after a bitter divorce. The embarrassed lawmen made their exit, but not before offering to assist the burglars. The homeowner's dog was also reported missing.

Then there was the lovesick male pooch who smashed through the front door of a home which contained a female of the species. The two canines never rendezvoused. The homeowner stopped the excited intruder in front of the door to the garage, where the female was chained, before that door was destroyed too.

FIDO AND THE COPS BOTH COOPERATED
...so the burglars could make a clean get-away

A New Jersey policyholder filed a claim after an appropriately-named throw rug slipped out from underneath a house guest. The claimant said the guest "spilled" blood all over her nice wallpaper. How's that for a different twist?

In the early days of the automobile, it was always being challenged by the horse. Last year, a New York nag won the contest. A car traveling along a bridle path startled the horse and its rider. The horse reared; its master tumbled onto the manure-covered path. As the angry rider started making obscene remarks, the horse reared again, this time leaving his calling card, in the form of hoofprints, on the side of the car.

The "I Thought It Was a Brilliant Idea" award should go to a Jerseyite who tried to defy winter by placing an electric blanket over his VW engine. On rising one morning, he found his car engulfed in flames, probably from a short circuit.

Talking about startled people, you might feel some sympathy for the woman who was mugged by a cat right in the front seat of her car. The feline made tracks on the woman's neck after being rudely awakened from a sleep in the back seat. The sudden rush by the cat resulted in the driver being propelled forward. Some of her front dental work was rearranged after hitting the steering wheel.

And for the finale, there is the dog who ate fiberglass bumpers. According to the policyholder, a pooch took after the claimant's customized van and after forcing it to stop, ripped apart the special flared bumper. A dog ain't necessarily a van's best friend.

Dyn-O-Mite's fuse doing a fizzle

By EARL WILSON
Field Syndicate

NEW YORK — Claiming that emotiona stress has made him violently ill for a week, Jimmy (J.J.) Walker, the Dyn-O-Mite man of TV, is trying to pull out of his contract to play the lead in a black version of "I Love My Wife" starting April 24.

His manager, Jerry Kushnick, said that J.J. could not go on with the show because he's been confined to his room at the Hotel Drake with vomiting since last Thursday.

"He's just come off of six years with the 'Good Times' program, which was very confining, and came into the same kind of confining situation here," Kushnick said.

"I'd say it was much too much for him emotionally and physically. Doing this stage show, he would have no more freedom than he had on television. As his friend, I could not let him go on and hurt himself more."

However, Dyn-O-Mite faced a possible legal squabble with producers Terry Allen Kramer and Harry Rigby, who were studying their contract.

"He pulled out, that he did!" Mrs. Kramer said, irately.

"She's trying to make a World War III out of this," Kushnick said. "Jimmy did about six rehearsals but couldn't do any more. It got too heavy for him. Had this been a year from now he could probably have done it. We'll try to help find the a replacement."

This was to have been J.J.'s Broadway stage debut, but that'll have to come later now. While the producers worried and Kushnick explained, Dyn-O-Mite was sleeping.

"He's going somewhere on a long vacation," his manager said.

Big excitement's expected at the opening of "Faith Healer." Besides some first-nighters like Leonard Bernstein nd Beverly Sills, there'll be the James Masons' housekeeper flown-in from Switzerland and Mrs. Mason's father, Austin Knipe, flown in from Australia. Mason and his wife, Clarissa Kaye, his co-star, must have plenty of confidence in their show.

Everything's special about the CORNING WARE® 6½" Menu-ette Skillet Special

No. P-83-8

The CORNING WARE 6½" Menu-ette Skillet is the ideal size and shape for individual servings, reheating leftovers, or making gravies and sauces.

It's so versatile that you can freeze, cook, serve and store in the same dish.

And because it's made from glass-ceramic, you can use it on the rangetop, in microwave as well as conventional ovens—then pop it right into the dishwasher for quick and easy cleaning.

Only CORNING WARE gives you all of these fabulous features in one fantastic little skillet.

Tornado's horror fully realized during first-hand experience

By SUE BABB
Woman's Editor

Thousands of words have been written describing the horrors and devastation of a tornado. Until you've sat through its fury, trembling and crouched, praying for your life, do you know the terrifying impact of it all.

A tornado has no friends, it has no sympathy for frailties, no respect for sentimental family treasures.

I know, I was one of the thousands of Wichitans who ran for cover when the roar of a tornado came almost without warning Tuesday evening.

The five of us were getting ready to eat supper, listening to the radio when it came. We were laughing and talking, thinking that "tornados" happen only to someone else. But when the roar sounded like a jet plane outside the house, we grabbed pillows and crowded into the bathtub. We pulled pillows over our heads, huddled together, holding each other's hands, constantly repeating out loud, 'Please don't let us be killed."

The walls shook, debris began falling on our heads. The tiles crumbled when the medicine cabinet came loose from the wall. We dared not look up but I couldn't help it. I lifted my head once and the roof was gone. Stray boards with protruding nails fell on our heads.

But as quickly as that wind came through—it ceased. Miraculously it was over.

I knew we were safe. We could see each other. . .my husband sitting on the floor, covered by a slab of sheetrock; my son and daughter-in-law beside me holding fast to each other and my young daughter by me. . .we looked each other over and were o.k.

We opened the bathroom door—and saw it all then.

The walls were caved in, our treasures buried and scattered, no telling where.

We tramped over the split boards, the dirt and the tree limbs which had blown through the house. . .we cried, we screamed, we thanked God we were alive. We kept saying, "It's all right, we're alive."

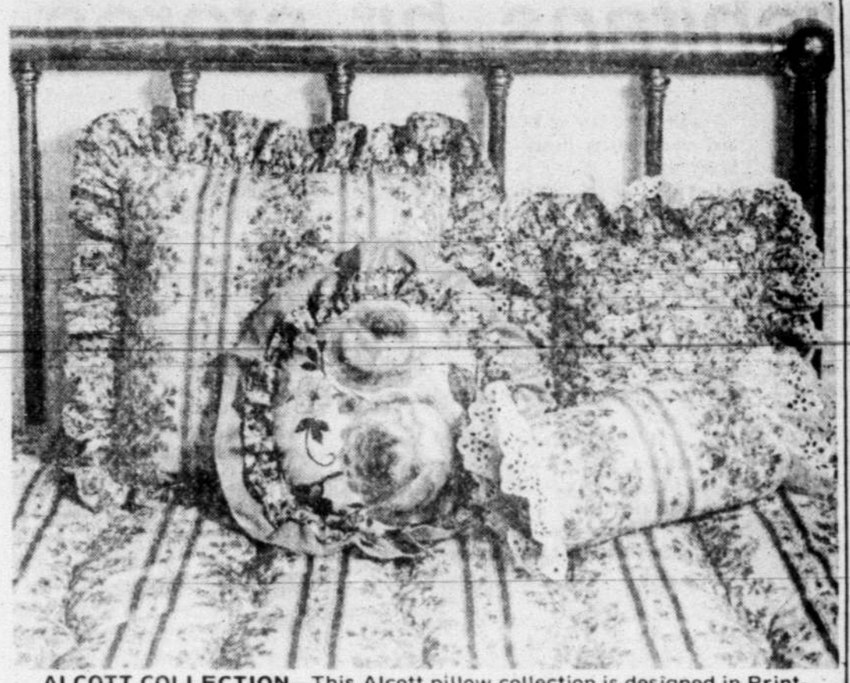

Outside, the people were gathering, looking at the flattened houses, checking on the neighbors, accounting for everyone. Our cars were wrecked, our pickup truck had been blown a block down the street—but still in running condition. Cars were crushed and strewn around the yards. Half of houses were still standing.

We saw smatters of a lamp, the beautiful plants I had, bits of my stained glass, my china broken in half lying on the ground.

Our pine trees were stripped of their needles—and stood like sticks out of the ground. The 25-year-old magnolia was uprooted. . .the fence was twisted, the dryer, the range, the washing machine ripped apart. . .the living room couch was twisted into a spiral in the back yard.

It began to get cold. We could see clothes still in our closet, so we gathered them up, hardly noticing the wrinkles and piled them into the truck.

It's true. Words cannot describe the devastation a tornado creates.

Seniors to be feted

By LOIS LUECKE
Staff Writer

Six years ago 10 bright-eyed Camp Fire Girls took a fabulous trip to the historical sites in Texas with money they earned. They literally collected tons of paper, umpteen cans and sold more than 2,000 boxes of Camp Fire candy.

Unknown to them, there was a spinoff bonus for all their efforts.

They had some money left over and their leader, Mrs. David Combs, has saved it for them all this time — letting it earn interest — so she could surprise the girls with a luncheon at the end of their senior year in high school.

The party party originally was scheduled Wednesday at the Wichita Club but had to be postponed until a later date due to the tornado.

Mrs. Combs said the party for the 10 girls, all now 18 years of age, probably will be rescheduled.

At the luncheon, the former Camp Fire girls are due to browse through 50 pages of a scrap book that was started 11 years ago.

There were the campouts at Harrell Park in Wichita Falls. Letoli at Saint Jo and Platt National Park near Sulphur, Okla. There were the times they made Christmas wreaths, first aid ditty bags, tied knots, learned how to use a knife and an axe, took flashlight "hikes," as well as said hikes (and only once, bird Mrs. Combs, did a said snake go between the leaders' feet!)

They will reminisce about an International Tea for other Camp Fire groups to introduce a Foreign Friend; and about the congratulation notes they made up for new American citizens at naturalization ceremonies at the post office.

They'll remember the formal dinner they planned for and served their parents.

They'll also remember the big pot of chili they cooked up — enough to feed 40 parents and friends.

There were reminders of the books they studied on good manners and how to be a gracious hostess.

At Christmas...caroling at the rest homes. Helping the Easter SEal Fund drive by stuffing envelopes. Learning how to administer artificial respiration.

The year they were in the sixth grade at Ben Fraklin, by this time, one member had come from Gaha School and two from Crockett) the group achieved the highest sales for Camp Fire candy in the North Central Texas Area Council.

They will remember the hundreds of people who saved paper so they could make the money for the trip — and now for the graduation luncheon.

"The group broke up at the end of their Ben Franklin school days because some girls went to Barwise Junior High School and some went to Zundelowitz Junior High School," Mrs. Combs said. "Some are graduating from Wichita Falls HIgh School; others from Rider."

"But in their hearts," she said, "they are still the Ben Franklin Group."

Favors (Camp Fire candy, of course) will be distributed to each of the senior girls, which include Sarah Combs, Gay Cupit, Debbie Crossnoe, Vickie Graham, Karen Kalski, Christine Larson, Nanette Karrenbrock, Louanne Smith, Dee Dee Whitehead and Susan Wilson.

"SHIRTING THE ISSUE" — Vera Maxwell revives a classic look . . . the button-down oxford shirt . . . but for the looser look of today widens its proportions, and tucks it into a skirt of crisp blue and white cotton stripe. The waistline is deftly defined with an elastic belt, bandana sashed, repeating the small pocket detail.

It's a fact

Good eating habits necessity

It's a nutritional fact that good eating habits are essential for good health.

Members of the American Dietetic Association are emphasizing good diet and good health practices with the theme, "Set the pace! Take the food way to good nutrition." It's a motto that more Americans should follow to avoid high medical bills, they say.

The benefits of good nutrition and physical fitness are quite evident. Good posture, firm muscles and abundant vitality can result from a well-balanced diet and exercise over a period of time. Yet many people don't follow this preventive advice. They cut down on their exercise, and allow their bodies to store excess fat.

Excess weight becomes a health risk when it leads to inefficient functioning of the heart.

Some suggestions for a preventive regime would be:

(1) Take some form of exercise daily. Jogging, walking, running or participating in some form of sports will benefit you physically as well as mentally.

(2) Diet at the same time to trim the figure. Registered dietitians say that carefully selecting the lower carlorie foods from the Four Food Groups will meet your Recommended Dietary Allowances (RDA) established by the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Academy of Sciences. This diet, of not less than 1200 calories from the milk, meat, vegetable-fruit and bread-cereal groups, will help you lose as much as two pounds a week, which is the most sensible approach to weight loss.

(3) Finally, visit your doctor regularly for a physical examination.

Passengers wanted

Jo Wilson is looking for more passengers for the Gadabout Tour to Florida which leaves Wichita Falls Saturday. Because of several cancellations, there are spaces available for those who would like to take the 13-day tour of Florida and Vicksburg.

She said that prospective passengers may contact her as late as Thursday.

Y Wives meet for business, bridge

Y Wives met at the YWCA Tuesday for business and to play bridge. Mrs. Bea Godfrey presided and announced a bridge benefit luncheon will be held April 24 and guests will be invited.

Guests were Mmes. Elizabeth Fair of Longmont, Colo, Opal Nichols, Ann McMonagle and Bess Grisham.

Mrs. Alta Ritchie won high in bridge and Mrs.Grisham was second high.

Don't overcook

Cabbage does not develop a strong flavor if it is not overcooked. It's mild and sweet in flavor when shredded and cooked quickly and briefly with a little butter and a few tablespoons of water in a covered skillet. Watch the heat and cook only until the vegetable is tender-crisp.

Consider cost per serving

The smartest way to buy beef is to condiser cost per serving rather than cost per pound. Some higher priced cuts may actually be a better buy for they contain less bone and fat and will yield more servings per pound.

Dry Wichitans hit stores

By BETTY CLINES
Staff Writer

On Wednesday morning, following the tornado, some grocery stores were open for business as usual checking groceries with hand calculators or manually operating cash registers.

"People are buying all kinds of juices and other non-perishable liquids. We are sending our distilled water to the disaster center," Troy Daniel, district manager of JRB Stores from Brownwood, Texas, said. "People are very understanding and make no complaints about the lack of water."

Daniel said he brought water from Brownwood but not nearly enough and was expecting another load today.

JRB had a truck with diesel compressor which was helping to keep perishables.

People were buying batteries, candles and mostly snack items— lunch meats, bread, etc.

Leroy Daniel, owner of Luby's Cafeteria, said they were cooking up all the fresh meat in stock.

"We are sending it to the Red Cross disaster centers to be served to those in need. These are located at First Baptist Church, Fowler School, Westside Baptist Church, Notre Dame School and MidwesternState University Coliseum." They were getting water from Lake Side City to cook with.

Cooks at Luby's were plagued with low gas pressure.

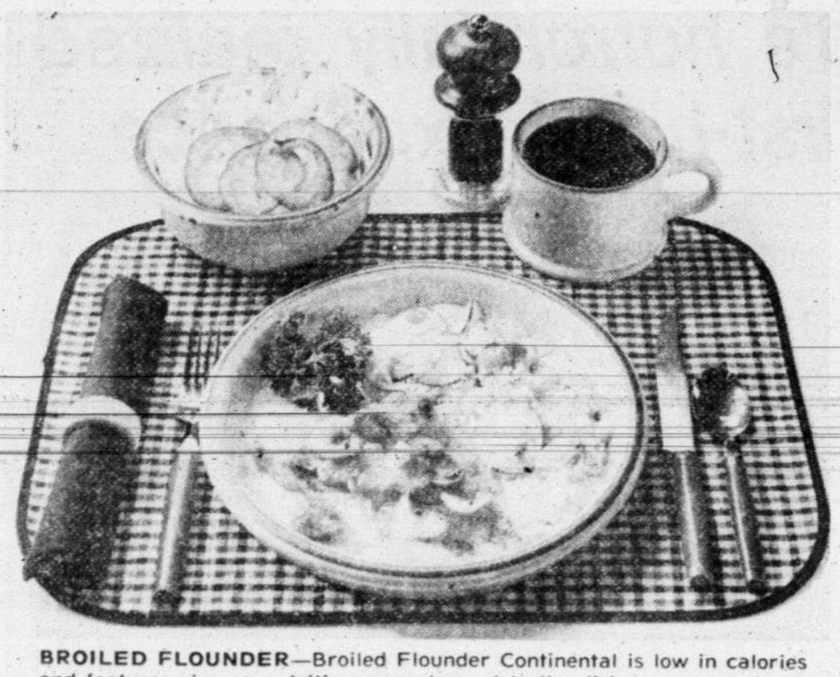

Billy Anastopoulas, assistant manager at a Safeway Store, was relieving the manager who was on vacation. They were operating cash registers with hand cranks. They were getting low on candles and batteries, but had a good supply of food and juices.

Anastopoulas said they were selling ice to people for drinking water; their supply was low.

Some people were carrying their flash lights and radios to be "fitted" for batteries.

Melvin Bradley at First Baptist Church said they were feeding a lot of people. They are being assisted by church staff, members and volunteers. They were doing some cooking with water donated by a car wash owner who still had a limited supply.

Grocery store managers had no complaints about their customers and were amazed at how nice they could be about shortages.

BROILED FLOUNDER—Broiled Flounder Continental is low in calories and features rice—a nutritious complement to the dish.

Sausage, kraut great!

Sausage and sauerkraut, always a popular dinner duo, are teamed up in especially delicious fashion in Sausage Choucroute. This classic European entree is a meal-in-a-pot, says the National Live Stock and Meat Board. It calls for the choucroute (or sauerkraut) to be cooked with potatoes and onions in white wine. Later, apple wedges are added along with a triple sausage treat of frankfurters, bratwurst and smoked pork sausage links.

SAUSAGE CHOUCROUTE
6 frankfurters
6 fresh bratwurst links
6 small smoked pork sausage links
1 can (27 ounces) sausage links
1 can (27 ounces) sauerkraut
2 cups chopped onions
6 medium-sized red potatoes, pared and halved
1½ cups white wine
2 medium-sized tart red apples, cut in wedges

Drain sauerkraut and combine with onion and potatoes in Dutch oven or large pot. Add wine, cover and cook in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 1 hour. Place apple wedges on top of kraut. Arrange frankfurters, bratwurst and smoked sausage links on top. Return to oven, uncovered, for 30 minutes. 6 servings.

Grease pan

Always grease both the bottom and sides of a loaf pan in which you are baking bread so the loaf can be turned out easily.

Dear Abby

Mom doubts willpower

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Chicago Tribune

DEAR ABBY: I have a daughter who will be 20 soon. Her boyfriend, with whom she has grown up, is in the Air Force and is stationed in Florida. He's asked her to marry him in June of 1980, but he wants her to come to Florida and share a two-bedroom apartment with him for two months.

Our daughter was taught that premarital sex was wrong. She says she honestly thinks she can live with this guy for two months without having sex with him. She insists she would never give in to him, and says she's made that clear to him.

I still maintain that when two people are in love, plan to marry and are thrown into a situation of that kind, they will find it impossible to resist the temptation of sex.

We've always been a churchgoing family and I can't understand her reasoning. She wants my blessing, but says if I don't give it to her, she'll go anyway and I can't stop her.

Am I old-fashioned? Or do you honestly believe they can live together for two months and not have sex? — DOUBTING MOTHER

DEAR DOUBTING: If they exercise the strictest kind of self-discipline, it's possible. A person who's opposed to premarital sex should not go in for premarital living together.

DEAR ABBY: A lady I knew (not well) passed away, leaving a husband and two children. I want to express my sympathy to the husband and let him know that I'm available to do whatever I can to help him through his time of sorrow.

I know him only to say "hi" to. He is very well fixed financially. Attractive, too, so I'm sure there will be a lot of women after him.

I'm a divorcee, new in town, and I don't want to appear too forward or he might get the wrong idea.

I would like to write him a sympathy note that wil; be out of the ordinary. Something witty or eloquent. Any suggestions along that line? — VIRGO LADY

DEAR VIRGO: If you didn't know the lady well, and know her husband only to say "hi" to, write a brief condolence note. Don't try for wit or eloquence. And please restrain your eagerness to help him through his time of sorrow, or it won't be the "wrong" idea but the right one that might cause him to think you're after him, too.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married 46 years. We live modestly and have never been big spenders. We have a comfortable income and bank account and my husband is an honest and decent man, but here is my problem:

He hides money all over the house. I find it when housecleaning.

Last month I found a surprising amount in the cellar. I asked him why. He never answered. I tried to get him to put that money in the bank because the bills were getting moldy, but he wouldn't do it. He just took it to hide somewhere else.

Today I found some more money under the sofa cushions, and I am feeling very depressed.

Please don't write me a personal letter as my husband gets the mail first since he is now retired. Thank you. — WORRIED SICK

WORRIED SICK: Get your husband to a doctor for a "routine" checkup as soon as possible. And be sure to tell the doctor (quietly in advance) what you have told me. Your husband needs help.

Are you the lonely face in the crowd? Friends make you a winner, and Abby tells you how to win them in her booklet, "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Low calorie recipes don't have to be drab

Fish fillets are one of the foods you need to include more often in diet meals. Their low fat content as well as low calorie count make them perfect if you are trying to lose weight. But one flat white fillet, even with a wedge of lemon, isn't what's usually thought of as "appetizing." Place that beside plain white rice (also reasonable in calories at 82 per half-cup serving). The result is an unimaginative meal.

The solution: Add a few mushrooms and shrimp to a dilled sauce to go over the fish and stir into the rice some sauteed cucumber slices and diced onions with a few bright bits of pimiento. There are only a few extra calories here, and they add so much appetite appeal that they are well worth being included.

Rice is an important part of good diet meals. Its calories are not excessive; it's vitamins and minerals add to the nutrition of the meal, and its carbohydrate balances the meal, extends tasty flavors and adds to the satisfaction.

BROILED FLOUNDER CONTINENTAL
1-½ pounds flounder fillets or other white fish fillets
Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons cornstarch
¼ teaspoon dill weed
½ teaspoon garlic powder
1-½ cups chicken broth
1 can (4 oz.) sliced mushrooms, drained
4 ounces peeled, deveined cooked shrimp, sliced in half lengthwise
½ of a large cucumber, sliced paper thin
½ cup chopped onions
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
3 cups cooked rice
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento

Arrange fillets in a lightly buttered pan. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Broil 10 minutes. Combine cornstarch, seasonings and broth. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until thickened. Stir in mushrooms and shrimp. Pour over fillets and broil 5 minutes longer. Saute cucumber and onions in butter until tender crisp. Add rice and pimiento. Heat thoroughly. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Serve with broiled fillets. Makes 6 servings. Each serving provides: 236 calories, 3 meat exchanges, 1 bread exchange, ½ fat exchange, ½ vegetable exchange.

Buying power best inflation weapon

By LOUISE COOK
AP Writer

Want to fight inflation? Your best weapon is your own buying power.

Government and industry spokesmen agree that the way consumers spend their money will have a lot to do with what happens to prices.

"I believe the American people will have to change some of their patterns of living," said Esther Peterson, special assistant to the president for consumer affairs.

The spotlight now is on food and fuel, but you can save money on everything from medical care to credit if you shop carefully.

Mrs. Peterson said there is a limit to what government can do. "It's more than the government," she said. "It's got to be a whole national effort."

Each month, Mrs. Peterson said, the Office of Consumer Affairs will issue a White House consumer food report, explaining what items are going up in price and why and offering alternatives. After that, she said, it's up to the individual to put the suggestions into practice.

Among the specific ideas: switch to chicken instead of beef once a week; substitute cheese for meat as a source of protein; buy margarine instead of butter when prices go up.

"People really can get good value if they shop intelligently," said Midge Shubow, an aide to Mrs. Peterson. "Go back to basics ... Take advantage of unit pricing ... You have a responsibility and the store has a responsibility and one doesn't work without the other."

Mrs. Peterson added: "We know that supermarkets are arranged for attractive impulse buying. It's a real test for us to go through there and have a list and hold it tight ... Let's have educated consumers and let's watch the advertising ... The best way to get rid of a product (that is a poor value) is to leave it on the shelf."

The administration is urging people to keep a close watch on price increases at the local level. But it is hard to tell, just by looking, whether a boost falls within the voluntary guidelines proposed by President Carter. Those guidelines call for companies to limit 1979 price increases to half a percent below the average price increases for the last two years.

The Office of Consumer Affairs puts out "A Consumer's Shopping List of Inflation Fighting Ideas," available, at no charge, from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 625G, Pueblo, Colo., 81009. Many of the suggestions are familiar, but they work nonetheless. Here are some of the tips:

—Check the newspaper for sales before you shop. Compare advertised prices with regular ones; not all advertised items are actually on sale. There are usually fewer specials at the beginning of the month; change your shopping patterns to take advantage of lower prices.

—Use coupons wisely. You won't save money if you use a coupon to buy something you would otherwise skip. Check prices of house brands or "no frills" items with those of national brands. Even with a coupon, the national brand may be more expensive.

—Find out if your home needs insulation. You could save 20 percent to 30 percent on utility bills. Remember: Insulation helps keep you cool in summer as well as warm in winter. If you can't afford insulation, consider caulking and weatherstripping windows and doors. You can do the job yourself, inexpensively, and cut energy consumption by up to 10 percent.

—Obey the speed limit. Most automobiles get about 20 percent better mileage on the highway at 55 mph than they do at 70 mph. With gasoline nearing $1 a gallon, you'll save money by slowing down.

—Prepaid group medical practics and Health Maintenance Organizations may cut your doctors' bills. You pay a set monthly fee and get treatment when you need it. Ask questions. If your doctor recommends surgery and the procedure isn't an essential one, get a second opinion.

Lyle comes through in Ranger debut...

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Sparky Lyle, as usual, didn't have it in spring training.

And Wednesday night he couldn't even get the ball to curve in the bullpen.

But he made his Texas Ranger debut a memorable one when he took the mound.

With a tiring Steve Comer departing after seven innings of one-hit pitching, the former New York Yankee forced six Cleveland batters to ground out meekly to clinch a 4-0 victory.

The Rangers, who got a combined seven-hitter out of Doyle Alexander and Jim Kern Tuesday night in a 5-0 victory, have now gone 23 consecutive innings without allowing a run.

"I wasn't digging spring training too much," said Lyle, who was blasted almost every outing.

"He was terrible," said Ranger Manager Pat Corrales. "But he always is."

Lyle said, "I hadn't been in a game since we broke spring training April 3. I pitched a lot on the sidelines. But it's funny. I couldn't do a thing in the bullpen tonight. Something happened, though, between the bullpen and the mound."

Comer baffled Cleveland with his changeup but tired, asking Corrales for help as early as the fifth inning. The only Cleveland hit of the game was a sharp single to centerfield by Ted Cox in the third inning.

The Rangers chased starter Eric Wilkins in the fifth inning with Al Oliver's run-scoring double the big blow. Wilkins was making his major league debut.

Cleveland's Bobby Bond, hitless in four trips, praised both Comer and Lyle.

"They had their best pitches working, and Texas played strong defense," said Bonds. "I look back and think about just how good the Rangers would have been last year if they had made an effort to get genuine relief pitchers like Lyle and (Jim) Kern."

Cleveland Manager Jeff Torberg said he wouldn't mind working a trade with the Rangers for some pitching.

"I'd like to work out a deal with 'em right now for some pitching," said Torberg. "We're hurting on the mound, and we have to get some help.

"I'm not worried about our hitting. We'll get some hot bats from Toby Harrah, Bobby Bonds, Rick Manning and some of our other guys soon."

In the series finale tonight, Fergie Jenkins (1-0) of the Rangers will meet Rick Waits (1-0).

...Forsch goes route as Astros destroy LA

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Ken Forsch had little time to worry about becoming only the second major league pitcher ever to throw two consecutive no-hitters.

"I wasn't thinking at all about another no-hitter," said Forsch, who lost his bid for his second gem of the young season on the third pitch of the Astros' 10-3 victory over Los Angeles Wednesday night.

"I was just thinking about trying to keep the lead off runner off base," Forsch added. "I had just as good stuff tonight as I did in the no-hitter, but I gave up 10 hits. I can't explain it."

Forsch, 2-0, surrendered a lead off single to Davey Lopes in the first inning. The veteran right hander went the distance as Houston roled up its fifth victory in six starts, the club's best start since 1968.

Cesar Cedeno's three-run homer broke a fifth inning tie against losing pitcher Don Sutton, 1-1, and helped Houston to its most productive offensive performance of the year.

Los Angeles took a 2-0 second inning lead on rbi singles by Sutton and Bill Russell, but Houston came back to tie the score in the bottom of the inning on run-producing base hits by Enos Cabell and Bob Watson.

Cabell's throwing error following Dusty Baker's single allowed Steve Garvey to score from third on the same play in the third inning as the Dodgers went ahead 3-2.

Watson's sacrifice fly tied the score again in the fourth before Cedeno put the Astros ahead to stay with his first home run of the season one inning later.

A two-run single by Alan Ashby highlighted a four-run Astros outburst ina the eighth inning against reliever Charlie Hough, as Houston sent nine men to the plate in its biggest inning of the season.

"You can't get too excited about winning like this or get too down in the dumps about losing early in the season," Houston Manager Bill Virdon said. "But if we can continue playing like this, it could turn out to be one of those years."

WF Panthers nip Fort Worth team

FORT WORTH, Texas — Manuel Garcia knocked home Johnny Chavez with the winning run in the top of the ninth inning here Sunday to lift the Wichita Falls Panthers to a 7-6 win over the Fort Worth Pericos in a Mex-Tex Baseball League game.

The Panthers, 2-0, led throughout the game before the Pericos rallied for three runs in the bottom of the eighth to tie the count at 6-all.

Reno Villastrigo picked up the victory on the mound for Wichita Falls, which next sees action on Sunday, April 22 in a 1 p.m. contest against the Fort Worth Alacranes at Spudder Park.

MEMORIAL STADIUM SCULPTURE SURVIVED STORM, BUT PRESS BOX AND LIGHTS DIDN'T ...Wichita Falls' hopes of hosting Pioneer Bowl seem unhurt despite damage (Photo by Mark Peel)

Pioneer chances still good

Wichita Falls' chances of hosting the Pioneer Bowl in 1979 remain good, in spite of damages inflicted to Memorial Stadium by Tuesday's tornado, PB committee member Del Lee said Wednesday.

But final decision on the site of the NCAA's Division I-AA championship probably will not be reached until Wednesday.

Lee joined other committee members Harold Story, Joe White, John Kidwell, Terry Hart and Ronnie Awtry in Phoenix City, Ala., Tuesday to begin presentations to the National Collegiate Athletic Association in hopes of returning the title game to Wichita Falls.

Last year, Memorial Stadium was the site of Division I-AA's first championship game.

But the tornado which ripped the city Tuesday destroyed part of the stadium press box and ticket office, clouding the city's prospects for a return engagement. It also forced Lee and White to return home.

"The NCAA people knew the reason Joe and I had to come back, but it didn't seem to bother them," Lee said. "I still feel very optimistic about our chances of bring the Pioneer Bowl back to the city.

"It all depends on whether they can rebuild the press box by Dec. 23, and there's a good chance that can be done."

Lee said the Wichitans would present their bid to an NCAA committee today and await the committee's decision, which probably will be announced Friday.

Lee said Wichita Falls was one of three cities bidding for the game. Orlando Fla. and Syracuse, New York are also to make presentations today.

"Syracuse is supposed to have a covered stadium by then," Lee said. "But, they will probably be too new to be seriously considered."

To letters of intent

SWC schools ink cagers

By The Associated Press

Texas Tech lured a Mississippi all-stater, Texas signed a 7-footer and Southern Methodist outdueled several schools for a Kansas all-stater as Southwest Conference basketball coaches inked players Wednesday to national letters of intent.

Texas Tech's prize was 6-6 forward Joe Washington of Tupelo, Miss., who averaged 18.5 points and 11 rebounds per game. Washington, a three-time all-stater, was courted by Mississippi, Mississippi State and Alcorn A&M and led his team to a 31-3 record.

Texas Coach Abe Lemons, who desperately needed a large, dominating center this past season in tying Arkansas for the SWC championship, landed 7-foot, 1-inch Steve Frederick of Pasadena Dobie.

Frederick, a two-time all-district player, averaged 17 points and 10 rebounds a game his senior year and had a game high of 40 points.

SMU hauled in a big catch in 6-2 guard Dave Piehler of Newton, Kan., who was pursued hotly by Oklahoma, Arkansas and Kansas. Piehler averaged 28.5 points for a team that won the Kansas state title with a 20-4 ledger. Piehler was the most valuable player in the state tournament, scoring the winning basket in the title game.

Although losing Piehler, Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton signed 6-6 forward LeRoy Sutton of South Bend, Ind., to a national letter. The Razorbacks also won the services of 6-2 guard Keith Hillard of Northeastern Oklahoma and 6-8 center Scott Horrell of Marmaduke, Ark., High School.

Robert Williams, a two-time all-state guard from Houston Milby, signed a national letter with the University of Houston. The Cougars also signed 6-10 David Bunce, an all-district performer from Conroe who averaged 17 points last season.

Williams, scheduled to play for the Texas All-Stars Thursday night in the second annual Roundball Classic here, led city scorers with a 26.3 average last season and paced Milby to a 24-6 record. UH won a recruiting duel with San Francisco for Williams' services.

Baylor's Jim Haller signed 6-5 James Bailey of Waco Richfield, who averaged 23 points and 14 rebounds.

Texas A&M Coach Shelby Metcalf said it would be several days before the Aggies would announce any signings because of the schoolboy all-star games being played.

Sooners sign Indiana stars

By The Associated Press

A pair of Indiana standouts were signed by Oklahoma but the Sooners missed a Kansas star Wednesday as high school basketball players began signing national letters of intent.

New Oklahoma State Coach Paul Hansen reported no signees. At Tuesday's press conference, he said it might take a week or so before he and assistant Wayne Ballard would land any prospects.

The Sooners signed 6-4 guard Chuck Barnett of Indianapolis and 6-6 forward Rick Moorehead of Shelbyville, Ind.

The Masters:

Low scores predicted by Player

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Defending champion Gary Player was pleased with his preparation entering today's opening round of the 43rd Masters Golf Championship, but he also is realistic.

"I've been playing well in practice rounds," the diminutive South African said Wednesday. "But shadow boxing is not the answer here."

Player, only foreigner ever to win this prestigious invitational event, is well down the list of favorites, with oddsmakers establishing 1977 Masters champion and this year's leading money-winner, Tom Watson, as the golfer to beat.

"Watson is playing well, and deserves to be the favorite," Player said. "But predictions are not the thing that matters. It's the score. There are too many good players to predict that I will win. All I can do is my best."

The 5-foot-7, 150-pounder has played in only three tournaments in the last five months, spending most of his time on his 4,000-acre thoroughbred horse farm in South Africa. He failed to make the cut at the Tournament of Champions and the Heritage Classic, but stormed to a second-place finish in the Greater Greensboro Open last week.

Player predicted low scores this week over the picturesque 7,040-yard, par 72 Augusta National Golf Club course, but only if the weather is ideal, and the early forecast called for a 60 percent chance of showers today.

The 29-year-old Watson used his Masters triumph two years ago as a springboard to the top of this game, claiming 10 of his 12 tour titles in the last two seasons, both times ranking No. 1 on the money list. He won the Heritage two weeks ago by 5 shots in a tuneup for the Masters, which has an international field of 72 players.

Jack Nicklaus, who holds a record five Masters titles among his 16 major championships, finds himself in a strange situation — that of not being favored.

"I've been favored here ever since I turned pro," Nicklaus said. "It's kind of interesting not to be the favorite and I really don't think, with the way I'm playing, I deserve to be the favorite."

The man regarded by many as the best to ever play the game has had his problems this year, finishing no better than 11th in the five tournaments he has entered, prompting numerous articles that he might be at the end of his career.

"I've been reading the obituaries," Nicklaus said. "I assure you I'm not ready to drop dead yet. I expect you to write that, but I don't like to read it. If I'm interested in not reading it, I better play better. But I'm not ready to put the clubs up yet."

The incentive is still there, he says, to win more major tournaments.

"I have an awfully hard time getting excited on a week-to-week basis any more, but I've never had any problems getting ready to play the Big Four," Nicklaus said.

The tournament was scheduled for a 9 a.m. EST start, with veteran Gene Littler and Leonard Thompson forming the first of 36 twosomes.

Invitation wasn't sent to everyone

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

The Masters is an invitational golf tournament, and for five years Jack Whitaker wasn't invited.

"As far as I can figure out, I said something Mr. Roberts didn't like, so he told my bosses I wasn't wanted at the Masters anymore," said Whitaker, whose bright, sophisticated commentaries for CBS have earned him the label of "the Eric Sevareid of sports."

Clifford Roberts was the tournament chairman who ruled the Masters with an iron hand until he committed suicide in 1977. He was the one man who could never be accused of kowtowing to television.

Whitaker recalled that the 1966 Masters wound up in a three-way playoff between Tommy Jacobs, Gay Brewer and Jack Nicklaus. Housewives, not golfers, are normally home on Monday afternoons, which was just one of the problems of covering the playoff.

"The threesome was playing particularly slowly, and we knew we had to be off at 7 p.m. sharp for Walter Cronkite," Whitaker said. "I was doing the 18th hole, and as the players and the galleries were coming up the fairway, I said, 'Here comes the mob.'

"It looked to me like a mob of people scurrying toward the green, but Mr. Roberts took offense. He said the gallery at the Masters was not a mob. And that was that."

Whitaker said he also neglected to mention that the traditional green coat award ceremony would be held on the practice green following the conclusion of the tournament.

"There just wasn't time and we couldn't have shown the ceremony anyway," Whitaker said. "Just as the word "bye" was halfway out of my mouth, Walter Cronkite came on the screen. It was that tight."

So Whitaker, an avid golfer and golf watcher, was a persona non grata at the Masters, sitting idly by while the network of Edward R. Murrow and "60 Minutes" meekly surrendered to Roberts.

"I didn't feel too good about it," Whitaker said.

In 1972, an executive at CBS asked Whitaker if he wanted to go down to Augusta, Ga. and just enjoy the Masters as a golf fan.

"I jumped at the chance because one of the charms of the Masters is that it is a reunion and I could be there with no worries," he said. But his holiday was interrupted when the late British broadcaster Henry Longhurst became ill and had to be hospitalized.

A meeting was arranged with Roberts, who told Whitaker: "Young man, we're delighted you'll be able to work with us."

"I don't think he even remembered the previous incident," Whitaker said. "The whole thing smacked of a "B" movie."

Many of Roberts' edicts were good, Whitaker says, particularly limiting the number of TV commercials and moving concession stands and all the CBS equipment out of sight. He even made sure the CBS towers were painted Masters green.

"He just said that commercialism wasn't going to clutter up his tournament," Whitaker said.

CBS will be covering the Masters this weekend for the 24th year. It is a prestige event, the only one of the four Grand Slam tournaments not owned by ABC. Whitaker has been part of the Masters team, despite the rude interruption, for 11 years. In the last few years he has been providing incisive capsule commentaries at the beginning and end of the Masters and other major CBS telecasts.

Roger Staubach hits Drew Pearson...Touchdown...The Cowboys win...Bang...OK Jack, tell us what it all means?

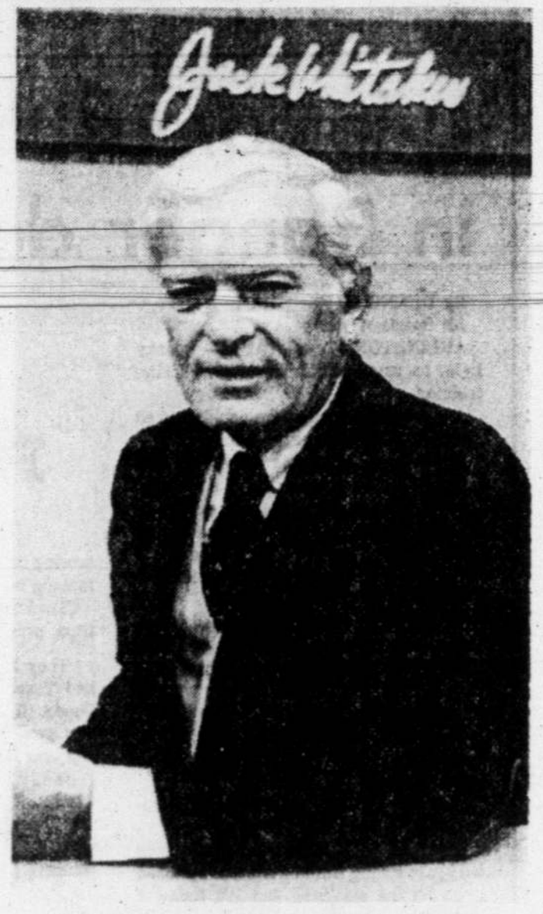

"I have some idea after the event what I'm going to say," Whitaker said. "But while the game's in progress, I'm anticipating: I find myself rooting for the team that fits my piece. But if it goes the other way, I just have to ad-lib."

In this era of canned entertainment and commentary, Whitaker disdains teleprompters, those electronic cue cards. He memorizes his pre-game commentaries, often pulling scraps of paper out of his pockets just before air time.

"It's a little spooky and sometimes my grammar might be wrong," he said. "But I prefer it this way because of the spontaneity."

He said "murky writing" got him into trouble last year when some viewers misunderstood his commentary and thought he was calling Jack Nicklaus "washed up." He remains sensitive about the piece.

"I'm pulling for Nicklaus," Whitaker said. "I have a bet with (co-broadcaster) Pat Summerall that Nicklaus will finish ahead of Tom Watson."

Bigtime golf at crucial crossroads

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — They teed off today in the 43rd Masters Golf Tournament with many people wondering if the game is ready to produce another star figure.

One is needed desperately.

Television ratings are plummeting — down 25 percent in some instances. The winter tour, which whets the appetite for the long summer pursuit of the sun, has spawned a collection of John Doe winners, many of whom wouldn't be recognized in their own neighborhoods.

Whatever happened to Jack Nicklaus? He hasn't won a tournament all year and is 79th in the money standings. And Tom Watson, the freckled Huckleberry Finn out of Kansas City — he's back on top of the money list but not setting the grass on fire. He has one tournament victory in 1979.

Arnold Palmer — remember Arnie's Army? — will be 50 in September. He hasn't won a tour event since 1973. South African Gary Player, leather-tough, is 43 and rated no better than a 12-1 shot in the tournament he won so sensationally a year ago.

San Francisco's Johnny Miller, who used to pull birdies out of a hat like a magician and who once loomed as golf's "Golden Boy," has lost his groove. He hasn't been higher than 26th in a tournament this year.

Remember Lee Trevino, old Super Mex, the feisty Latin with the hustler's heart and a carnival barker's tongue? He's still battling to overcome his encounters with a lightning bolt in 1975, and it's all uphill.

Bigtime golf appears at a crucial crossroads.

Is the game, after two glamorous and prosperous decades dominated first by Palmer and then Nicklaus, headed for an inevitable period of blandness?

Many observers think so. History dictates as much. Such things run in cycles. The TV ratings are a depressing barometer. Even the most dedicated of fairway buffs are finding the tour one gigantic yawn.

Such a slump followed the glorious era of Bob Jones and Walter Hagen in the 1920s and 1930s. Ben Hogan, Byron Nelson and Sam Snead revived interest in the sport after World War II only to see another lull until Palmer and his Army went on the rampage in the late 1950s. Nicklaus picked up the cudgel in the early 1960s and proceeded to sweep to 15 major professional championships — a mark that appears beyond mortal reach.

Golf, as other professional sports, needs to ride the tail of a meteor — a superstar.

Muhammad Ali brought boxing from the edge of the grave. Pro football has soared on the magic arms of Johnny Unitas, Joe Namath and Terry Bradshaw. Women's golf was in the doldrums until Nancy Lopez came along. Billie Jean King and later Chris Evert turned women's tennis into a gold mine.

Golf has been on a celestial voyage since Palmer started squinting into the sun and sinking putts from here to eternity in the mid-1950s and Nicklaus began his phenomenal pro career in 1962.

Watson, 29, emerged as a possible heir apparent when he beat Nicklaus in those great birdie duels in 1977, but he has failed to grab the game by the throat and dominate it.

Meanwhile, Jack, at age 39, insists — in the vein of Mark Twain — that reports of his golfing demise have been grossly exaggerated.

"I still feel like I'm a kid," says the Golden Bear. "I assure you I am not ready to drop dead yet. I love the game. I intend to play as long as I feel I can be competitive — and that's a few years yet.

"I know somebody some day will break my number of major records, but I want that number to be a little higher."

Will Leafs, Flames slug it out again?

By The Associated Press

There was no talk of animosity among the Toronto Maple Leafs and Atlanta Flames going into Game Two tonight of their first-round National Hockey League playoff series. But their first-game rumble was on each coach's mind.

Nine players were ejected and a record game-total 219 penalty minutes were assessed after a second-period brawl in Tuesday's game. The Leafs, playing with only three defensemen in the third period, won 2-1.

Atlanta Coach Fred Creighton was taking a conservative approach, saying his team should be wary of the penalty box.

"With our backs to the wall, we may not be able to be as aggressive Thursday night. You don't have much choice when you can be out of business in 60 minutes," he said.

Toronto Coach Roger Neilson took the philosophic approach. "When you play it tough, sometimes these things break out."

NHL playoffs

Action also resumes tonight in the other best-of-three series.

The Canucks, who won 3-2 Tuesday night in Philadelphia, host the Flyers in Vancouver; the New York Rangers, who pounded the Los Angeles Kings 7-1, go to the West Coast, and the Pittsburgh Penguins, 4-3 winners over Buffalo in Game One, host the Sabres.

Awaiting the winners of the four series are the New York Islanders, Chicago Black Hawks, Boston Bruins and defending NHL champion Montreal Canadiens, all division winners who earned byes into the quarter-finals.

NBA roundup

Rockets, Nets one down

By The Associated Press

The Houston Rockets can't stand too much of a good thing — namely winning.

The Rockets, who had won their last seven regular-season games to get the home-court advantage in the opening game of their best-of-three series with Atlanta, lost to the Hawks 109-106 Wednesday night in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

"We don't live with prosperity very well," said Houston guard Mike Newlin. "It's only when we are presented with a futile situation that we seem to come out and play our best."

New Jersey Nets Coach Kevin Loughery often feels his situation is futile, where refereeing is concerned.

The Nets lost to the Philadelphia 76ers 122-114 after their coach was ejected from the game. The volatile Loughery, who was assessed 42 technical fouls during the regular season, got two more Wednesday night and was ousted with 7:32 left in the third period.

"It's a league rule that you can't talk about officiating," he complained later. "But I think we should be able to talk about officiating."

With Wednesday's games, all four NBA divisions had played their first games. Action resumes Friday with the Rockets and Hawks moving to Atlanta and the Sixers and Nets going to Piscataway, N.J.

Teams that did battle Tuesday also resume first-round play Friday, with the Phoenix Suns joining the Trail Blazers in Portland and the Denver Nuggets visiting the Los Angeles Lakers.

Phoenix beat Portland 107-103 Tuesday, while Denver downed Los Angeles 110-105 that night.

The Hawks would seem to have a big advantage at home in the Omni, where they have won 34 games this season — 18 in a row — and lost just seven.

But, said Atlanta Coach Hubie Brown, "We don't think this is a one-game series because we won. They could come to our place Friday and do a great job."

Houston, which has lost four of five games to the Hawks this season, seemed ready to reverse the tide when they took a 57-50 halftime lead.

But Atlanta started the third quarter with a 16-6 scoring spurt and they gave up the lead, as Dan Roundfield scored 23 points and got 18 rebounds before fouling out with 2:07 left. Atlanta's usual high scorer, John Drew, hit only four of 24 shots and finished with 15 points.

"If you'd told me that Drew would go four for 24 and we'd still win, I'd have bet $5,000 against it," Brown said. "We had a lot of unsung heroes going for us tonight."

Moses Malone led the Rockets with 28 points and 17 rebounds while Newlin added 16.

In Philadelphia, Julius Erving scored 28 points and the 76ers never fell behind, even though the Nets' John Williamson poured on 38 points before his ejection on a second technical with 1:29 remaining.

The 76ers led twice in the first period by margins of 10 points. Erving's fast break made it 33-22 at the end of the period.

Williamson kept the Nets in the contest, hitting 12 of his 15 first-half points during the second period. A 15-foot jumper by Henry Bibby made it 55-45 at the half.

"The second period was the key," said Loughery. "We came up within four points with 3½ minutes left to play, and Bibby scored a field goal at the buzzer, which should not have been allowed. He was walking. We had no layups, no easy jump shots and no foul shots in the first period. And so we could not control the game."

The Nets closed within four with 9:38 left in the third quarter on a jumper by Williamson. But Philadelphia widened its lead to 12 points as Erving converted the fatal technical on Loughery, who was trying to call a timeout.

The Nets got no closer than eight points the rest of the period, after which the Sixers led 85-73.

Again in the final stanza, the Nets could get no closer than eight points.

The winner of the Atlanta-Houston first-round series goes against the Washington Bullets, the best team in the league, in the second round. The New Jersey-Philadelphia winner meets San Antonio. The Phoenix-Portland victor plays Kansas City, and the Denver-Los Angeles winner must face Seattle.

Superdome officials awed by Jazz move

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Somebody forgot to tell the people who run the Superdome that the New Orleans Jazz intends to shift its National Basketball Association franchise to Salt Lake City.

"No one in any capacity at the Superdome has had any contact from anyone in any capacity with the Jazz informing us of their intention to move," said Bill Curl, a spokesman for Hyatt Management Corp., which operates the $163 million Superdome for the State of Louisiana.

"We have just completed the fourth year of a 10-year contract," said Curl. "We are looking forward to next season."

That may be, but Jazz officials were to be in New York for a meeting with NBA Commissioner Lawrence F. O'Brien that O'Brien's office said was arranged two weeks ago by New Orleans' owners.

A statement issued by O'Brien's office Wednesday said NBA headquarters had received no request for a shift of the New Orleans franchise — that a Jazz delegation would update the league on its problems with scheduling and the Superdome.

"The shift of the Buffalo franchise to San Diego last summer was the only move by an NBA franchise out of its territory in the last seven years," noted O'Brien's statement.

CBS brings Americans a taste of higher-quality literature

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — You might think that after 40 years, sales for "The Dain Curse" and "You Can't Go Home Again" would be slow, though perhaps steady.

Bob Markell, who produced both novels in classic style for CBS, is convinced well-done TV films — he calls them "good shows" — will attract plenty of new readers to Dashiell Hammett and Thomas Wolfe, as well as other American writers.

"I like to whet the reader's appetite," says Markell, who recently completed a two-hour film based on Wolfe's best-seller, "You Can't Go Home Again."

"It will stand by itself," says Markell of the film that CBS will air the evening of April 25 at 8 CST. "It's a piece of entertainment, and I believe a good one, but it's not the book."

Vintage Books reissued "The Dain Curse" in paperback last year, with a new cover tied to the CBS production, and Harper & Row will distribute an edition of Wolfe's classic, with CBS' "You Can't Go Home Again" logo on the cover.

Asked about sales for "The Dain Curse" in the wake of the CBS miniseries, a Vintage spokeswoman said there was indeed a marked surge.

Markell has a number of programs in various stages of production, including a handful of rather literary American novels like the two completed so far that he'd like to eventually adapt for television.

"I went to a number of writers and asked them what they would like to do for television," he says. "One wanted to do Dorothy Parker, another suggested Robert Penn Warren. Ian Hunter said he'd love to do Thomas Wolfe."

CBS OK'd the Wolfe project, and since then, Markell has asked the writers for preliminary adaptations of several other novels. On his list are James Gould Cozzens' "The Just and the Unjust," Warren's "World Enough and Time," Edmund Wilson's "The American Earthquake" and John Dos Passos' "U.S.A." trilogy.

He prefers not to call the books "classics," rather "novels by Americans that have a lasting quality."

And, he says, "I'd like to think this is something we're going to continue." That, of course, is up to CBS.

If there's a common feature to the books on Markell's list, it's a complexity of plot and style that would make each one difficult to dramatize.

"I think a writer sitting down to adapt a literary experience for television has a job to do," says Markell, "if he's going to make a show of it."

The writer, he says, should be "enormously faithful to the essence of the book," even if it means changing parts of the story, say the order of events.

"If you look at 'You Can't Go Home Again,'" he says, "how staggering it must have been to Ian."

"You Can't Go Home Again" stars Chris Sarandon as George Webber, Lee Grant as Esther Jack and Hurd Hatfield as Foxhall Edwards. It's the story of a struggling young writer romantically involved with a younger woman, set in the 1920s and early '30s as the world endures financial collapse and prepares for war.

Markell, recently named vice president for creative services for CBS, is a four-time Emmy winner, twice for "The Defenders." He was an early producer of CBS' "You are There" series, and later of "N.Y.P.D."

His television career began as a set designer, and his expertise is evident in "You Can't Go Home Again," as it was in "The Dain Curse."

"Tender, loving care is what it's all about," he says. "We never let go, we care so much about making these things work."

Profiles...sniffing out the 10 best noses

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Having a nose for the news doesn't always mean a sniffing out a big story. Only one reporter was among 20 men and women whose noses made news on the "Ten Best Noses" list compiled by a cosmetic surgeon.

DR. BRENT JOSEPH'S list of "Ten Best Noses," among the women, included Princess Grace of Monaco, actresses Jane Fonda, Candice Bergen, Catherine Deneuve, Cheryl Tiegs and Cheryl Ladd, singers Olivia Newton-John, Leslie Uggams and Nancy Wilson and television reporter Sandy Hill, who co-anchors ABC's "Good Morning, America" show.

The men on Joseph's list were actors Warren Beatty, Dirk Benedict, Kris Kristofferson, Michael Landon, Ryan O'Neal, Jan-Michael Vincent and Billy Dee Williams, baseball star Steve Garvey, Olympic decathalon winner Bruce Jenner and Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill.

"Size had absolutely nothing to do with the ratings," said Joseph, a head and neck surgeon specializing in facial cosmetic surgery. He emphasized he judged noses on the basis of which were proportionate to the faces they were attached to, and not on the basis of beauty.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sounding more like a foreign diplomat than a singer, PEARL BAILEY says not one American in 10 understands what is happening in the Middle East.

"They don't know that you can stand on the bank of the Jordan River and look up into the mouths of Israeli guns ... The American people are in trouble if they don't know about the world and try to do something about it," the 61-year-old goodwill ambassador said at a Washington Press Club luncheon Wednesday.

"We are 49,000 years behind the times. How can we build a peace bridge if we still can't get all children into school? There is a nervous laughter all over the world; people are listening, but they aren't hearing. The American people are so confused — they don't know whom to believe."

CHICAGO (AP) — Actor HENRY FONDA, hospitalized for an arthritic hip condition Sunday, may be discharged in a few days, hospital officials say.

A spokeswoman at Michael Reese Hospital said Wednesday that Fonda, 74, was resting comfortably. The actor's physician, Dr. Edward Newman, described his condition as "markedly improved."

Performances of "First Monday in October" that Fonda was appearing in were canceled for the remainder of the week.

DETROIT (AP) — A coalition of Polish-American leaders in the Detroit area is trying to raise at least $5,000 to help the widow of executed Army Pvt. EDDIE SLOVIK with medical bills and living expenses until Congress approves benefits for her from her husband's insurance.

Slovik was the only American GI shot for desertion in World War II.

Antoinette Slovik, who was recently released from a hospital after undergoing treatment for a series of crippling ailments, is "at the end of her resources," said Roman Ulman, head of the coalition.

"A country that is great enough to be the arsenal of democracy... to come to the aid of countries that were our enemies during the war, should be a nation just enough to help one of the victims of that war," Ulman said.

Slovik, from Detroit, died in front of a firing squad Jan. 31, 1945, in France. In 1977, the Army Board for the Correction of Military Records upheld the execution's legality, thereby denying Mrs. Slovik's request for the face value of her husband's $10,000 GI life insurance policy plus interest amounting to nearly $70,000.

President Carter has asked Congress to give Mrs. Slovik the money, and a bill to give her $76,000 in GI insurance is now before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

CINCINNATI (AP) — To anyone who was ever trapped in an smoke-shrouded elevator with a cigar smoker, the nation's leading cigar manufacturer says — relax. The age of the sweet smellin' stogie is upon us.

The Consolidated Cigar Co. unveiled the "aromaless" cigar Wednesday and expects to market it nationwide within the year. It's available now only in Ohio.

Cigar sales have plummeted in recent years, from 8 billion in 1973 to 4½ billion last year, a company official said. The industry conducted a survey to find out why.

"People said it's the aroma," said Consolidated President Alexander Brainard. "Women don't like it on the drapes, and men are becoming more responsive" to non-smokers' complaints.

Brainard said the non-smelly cigar, called "Flite," has a built-in filter that "captures chemicals that impart aroma." The cigar still produces a perfumed scent, but not the objectional "cigar smell."

"I don't expect a typical cigar smoker to find it (the new cigar) as enjoyable as his present cigar," he said, "because it's milder in taste."

CHESTERHILL, Ohio (AP) — If you can't drill on it, play on it.

That seems to be the thinking of an Islamic group, which is trying to turn a depleted oil field in southeast Ohio into a summer camp.

The Federation of Islamic Associations in The United States and Canada collected small oil royalties in the late 1960s from a few low-volume "stripper" wells on the 138-acre tract in southern Morgan County.

"There were some old oil wells there when we bought the property," in 1967, said Frank E. Rushten, federation treasurer, who lives in Logan, W.Va.

"And I understand there is some coal there. But we didn't buy it for that. We hope to develop the site for a camp for the children, and in fact (for) all young Moslems in this country."

Rushten said the federation envisions developing a summer camp on the site. "You know, a lake and trees and some buildings. But that takes a lot of money and so far we don't have it."

Detective paid to reopen Michael Rockefeller search

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — A Sydney private detective claims he has been paid $15,000 by a New York lawyer to reopen the search for Michael Rockefeller, son of the late Nelson A. Rockefeller, who disappeared in New Guinea in 1961.

"I can't name my principals, except to say it is an American lawyer," said Frank Monte, a licensed investigator and former policeman, in an interview with The Associated Press.

Monte said the lawyer commissioned him to place advertisements, compile a report on responses, and investigate the costs and practicality of mounting an expedition to Irian Jaya, the Indonesian half of New Guinea.

He said he did not know who was financing the lawyer. He said he believed it was oil company money, but did not know if the Rockefeller family was involved, or the reasons for the renewed interest.

Monte placed advertisements in several Australian newspapers and one paper in Papua New Guinea, asking for information about young Rockefeller, who disappeared while on an anthropological expedition in what was then Dutch New Guinea.

The advertisement said: "Reward: $10,000 or part thereof is offered for information which will result in locating the remains of Michael Rockefeller, missing in Papua New Guinea in 1961. Persons with genuine information only need call."

Monte said he had had 39 answers to the advertisement.

"Seventeen walked out at the mention of a lie detector test," he said.

Monte said it would be a "wild goose chase" to expect that Michael Rockefeller was alive.

Above Rates Are for Consecutive Insertions. Advertising placed for non-consecutive insertions takes the one-time insertion rate of ad for each insertion.

Classified advertisements originate in the morning Record News, then appear in the evening Times of the same day. Advertising appearing in the Sunday Times counts as one full insertion. Proportionate reductions for 1-3-7-8 and 9 insertions.
BOX SERVICE CHARGE $2.00 & $2.50.
Classified Display and Space Rates $6.50 per column inch. Special discounts for volume.
Write or call Classified Advertising Department for details.
Classified Ads after being ordered can not be changed or cancelled until published one day.
The newspaper reserves the right to edit, reject and properly classify all ads.

EMPLOYMENT

27—Help Wanted Male-Female

EXCELLENT OPPORTUNITY

We are looking for an individual to supervise the sales, service and collections of our newspaper.

WE OFFER THESE BENEFITS:

1. We pay for using your car on the job
2. Family hospitalization Plan
3. Paid Vacation
4. Paid life insurance
5. Retirement program
6. Stock Purchasing plan

Here is the type person we are looking for — if you qualify, come in to see us.

1. Good driving record.
2. A mind for detail and thoroughness.
3. A sincere interest in creating good customer relations.
4. An interest in training boys to be successful.
5. Determination to complete projects that you start.

You don't need to bring us a world of experience — if you bring the right attitude, we will train you in the right methods to be successful.

DUTIES INCLUDE:

1. Working with Times and Record News carrier boys.
2. After a training period, you would be assigned to a specific geographical area.
3. Be responsible for the good service, proper collections, sales calls on non-readers and good customer relations in your assigned area.
4. Regular contact with parents of your carrier boys.

We want only honest, reliable people to work with our carrier boys. We carefully check your background.

Please apply in person Monday through Friday, 8 to 5 p.m. Times Publishing Company, 1301 Lamar, Personnel Department.

MAY WE HELP YOU!

Increase you knowledge of nursing. RN's, LVN's and experienced Nurses Aides.

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is expected in the forecast period, Thursday until Friday morning, for most of the East. Rain is also forecast for Minnesota and the eastern Dakotas. Cold weather is forecast for the northern Plains but most of the nation will be mild. (AP Map)

Tornadoes, wintry storms plague nation

By The Associated Press

Winter weather lingered over the central and northern plains today, while to the south, tornadoes and thunderstorms that produced death, injuries and property damage earlier in the week swirled through in several states.

A winter storm warning was in effect today in southeastern Montana. Travelers advisories were posted for most of the Dakotas, eastern Wyoming, northeastern Colorado, northwestern Kansas and the higher mountain passes of far west Texas.

Thunderstorms spread from central Mississippi, across western Kentucky to northern Lake Michigan.

Rain or snow fell across portions of Nebraska, Iowa and a large section of the Dakotas. A few widely scattered snowshowers dampened the western mountains in Utah and western Montana and along the Oregon coast.

Tornadoes have raked the lower and middle Mississippi Valley since Tuesday. Tornadoes were reported in northeastern Texas, Oklahoma, Alabama, Arkansas and Missouri.

A tornado watch was in effect for western and middle Tennessee, portions of central and eastern Mississippi and portions of northern and west central Alabama.

Flash flood watches were posted for a large portion of the Mississippi Valley, for northern and central Mississippi and portions of central Illinois, and for southwestern and west-central Wisconsin.

Temperatures were below freezing over much of the western portions of the central and northern Plains. Readings in the 70s were common along the Gulf Coast and Florida.

Early morning temperatures ranged from 22 in Denver, Colo., to 78 in Fort Lauderdale and Key West, Fla.

Could last imprisoned Nazi bigwig really be impostor?

LONDON (AP) — A British surgeon claims medical records and other research prove the man held in Berlin's Spandau Prison as Hitler's deputy Rudolf Hess is an impostor. Hess' wife and son deny it.

The claim is made in a book to be published next month by Hugh Thomas, who in 1973 was the British member of the four-nation medical team looking after the Spandau prisoner.

"Who the prisoner is, I don't know," Thomas said. "What I do know is that he cannot be Hess."

In West Germany, Hess' wife, Ilse, said today Thomas "is completely crazy."

She said she had written several letters urging him "to stop this nonsense." She said she has visited Hess several times in the past few years and never had the slightest doubt about his identity.

A spokesman for Hess' son Wolf Ruediger Hess said the younger Hess "has no doubt about the identity of his father." In Munich, a spokesman for Alfred Seidl, the lawyer who has represented Hess since just after World War II, called Thomas' claim "a joke."

One British historian dismissed it as "rubbish," another said it was valid, and a member of Parliament asked the four wartime Allied powers who administer Spandau to confirm the prisoner is Hess.

RUDOLF HESS?

Thomas, 43, is now senior surgeon at the Prince Charles Hospital in Merthyr Tydfil in Wales. His book, "The Murder of Rudolf Hess," is to be serialized in the The Sunday Telegraph starting Sunday.

He says after examining the prisoner he found that some of his physical characteristics did not match up with past medical records of Hess, and that five more years of research proved it was not Hess.

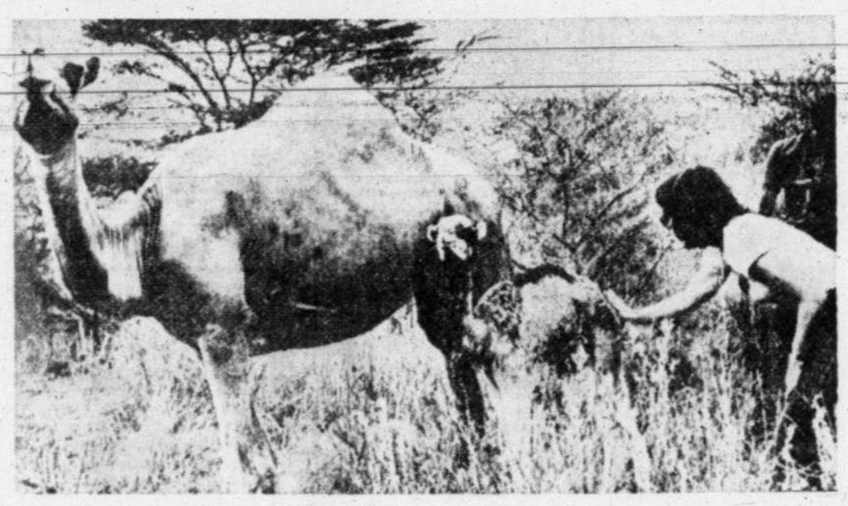

The research, he says, involved studying official records on the prisoner during and after the war and interviewing Ilse Hess and other people who knew him before 1941.

The official version of the story is that Hess parachuted into Scotland on May 10, 1941, seeking talks with the British in a bid to halt the war between the two countries.

He was captured, the British refused to negotiate with him, and after the victory of the allies over Germany in 1945 he was sentenced in 1947 at the Nuremberg war trials.

He was sent as a war criminal to Spandau prison, which is jointly administered by Britain, France, the United States and the Soviet Union, and now at the age of 85 remains the sole prisoner there.

Despite numerous pleas from the West that he should be released on humanitarian grounds, the Soviets insist he remains in Spandau until he dies.

Food stamp cuts considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal food stamp program, pushed near its legal spending limit by rising food prices and a flood of new recipients, will have to cut or even stop benefits unless Congress votes more money soon, an Agriculture Department official says.

If the $6.16 billion annual spending ceiling is still in effect July 1, "I am going to have to cut benefits to all recipients by one-third or issue no stamps at all in September," the last month in the fiscal year, Assistant Agriculture Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman said Wednesday.

She told the Senate Special Committee on Aging that when Congress revamped the food-stamp program in 1977 food price increases were estimated at 4 percent per year. But since then, food prices have risen more than 26 percent and are still going up, she said.

In addition, she said, more than 1.8 million low-income persons have entered the program so far this year, increasing the total number of recipients to about 5.6 million families.

No action has been taken so far on bills to raise the spending ceiling.

Moscow Jews mark Passover

MOSCOW (AP) — Nearly 1,000 Jews, the largest crowd in recent years, packed into Moscow's Central Synagogue for an officially sanctioned religious service at the start of the Passover holiday.

Jewish sources said that this year, many of the younger and more activist leaders of the community chose to attend the service, and the crowd consisted young families as well as old men.

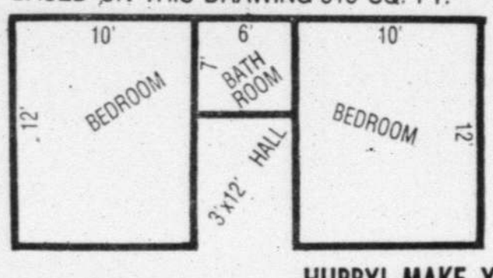

"We are showing our solidarity," one Jew said Wednesday evening.

There were no reports of any incidents outside the temple.

More than a dozen American tourists joined the Moscow Jews inside the synagogue, where only 500 gathered in 1978.

The sources said more Passover dinners, or seders, were planned in apartments than ever before. At least one was dedicated to Anatoly Shcharansky, the Jewish activist sentenced to 13 years imprisonment last summer on charges of treason and spying.

'Like a hydrogen bomb'

By TOM SELTZER
Staff Writer

"When it hit, it looked like a hydrogen bomb had been dropped on the mall. I saw it blowing Sikes Senter to bits."

Greg Joubert was about to close his furniture store on Call Field Road, cattycorner from the mall, when the tornado struck.

"I heard the sirens and looked out my window and saw it coming. I saw some girls running across the street and yelled at them to come into the store. I had about fifteen persons in the store under mattresses."

The funnel cloud passed by his store, tearing a huge sign off the front of the building but leaving the structure intact.

"I ran outside to see it tearing into those buildings over there. Parts of the roofs were flying off. When I saw what was happening, I left the store with some guy I didn't even know and went to look for my wife."

Joubert found his wife uninjured in front of their levelled Faith Village home. But others weren't so lucky.

In the mall, the tornado left terror and death in its wake. Rescue teams began arriving moments after the disaster, but they weren't equipped to care for the scores of injured persons in need of medical attention. Bodies were loaded into ambulances as quickly as arrived.

On the south side of Sikes Senter, the hardest hit by the twister, mutilated cars lay on their hoods in the parking lot. Others lay in pieces in a nearby field while gas flowed freely through the street creating an additional hazard.

Charles Gifford, who had been assisting in treatment of the injured, said people "were running around like a bunch of ants" since the tornado hit. "They were hysterical. No one knew exactly what had happened."

Gifford, who had come in that afternoon from his home in Bowie, was sitting in his car on the south parking lot when he saw the funnel cloud forming.

"It was coming directly at me...a huge cloud about a mile wide and extending all the way to the ground. I heard it hitting houses and buildings. When it got to the mall, cars started flipping through the air. People were screaming and running for cover.

"I helped pull one woman from a car. There was blood spurting out, she was bleeding to death. We tried to get an ambulance over there but they were busy. I don't think she was going to live."

Other injured persons, covered with blood, were being helped from automobiles. The body of a dead man, almost covered with mud, lay unnoticed in the field next to a car motor.

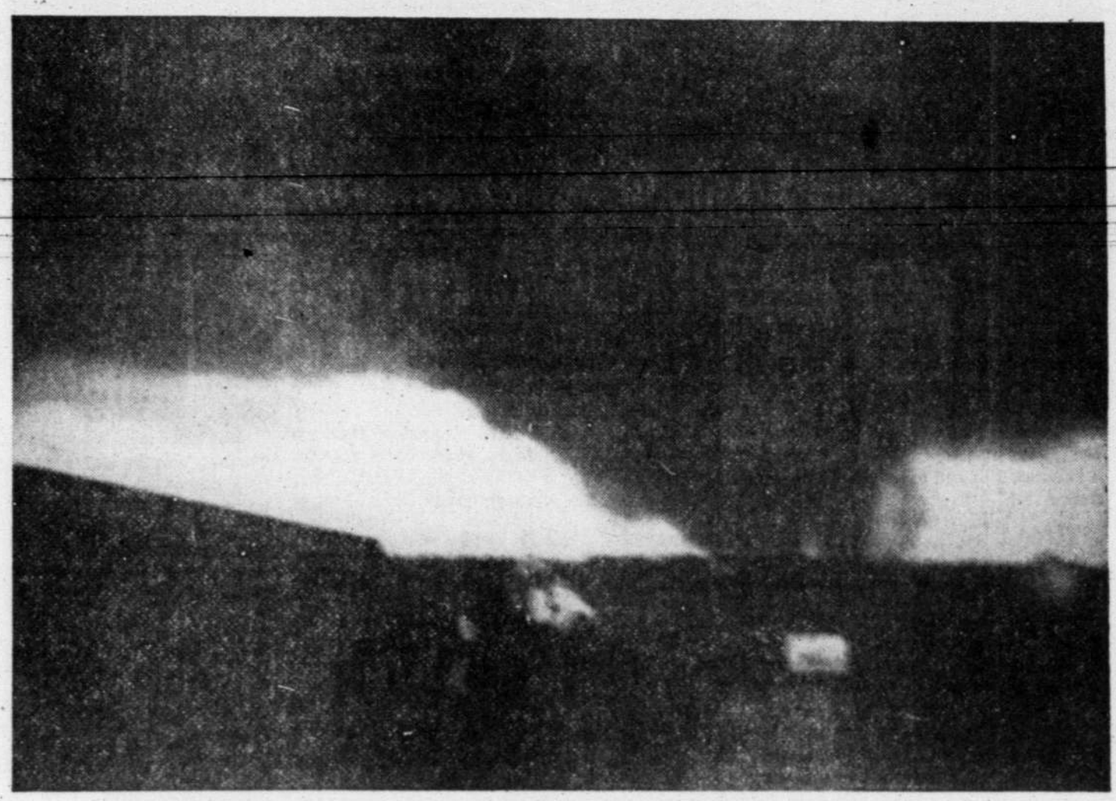

"We'd better try and find out who he is," Gifford said as he looked down at the man's body and torn clothing stained by dried blood. A physician bent over the man, whose neck appeared to be broken.

"Where's the ambulance. Where's an ambulance?" asked one man to no one in particular.

Melinda George said she was in Perkins shopping when she heard an incredible roaring sound and then saw flying glass. "I just prayed," she said, through tears. "I hope my family's OK."

By nightfall, the mall had begun to empty. A short distance away, a small crowd gathered around the remains of a church, discussing whether to begin searching for bodies in the rubble.

"Let's wait until tomorrow morning," someone finally decided. "We'll decide what to do tomorrow."

Funeral home's garage turned into blood-spattered morgue

By GREG THOMPSON
AP Writer

Jerry Van Lohs' voice cracked with emotion and weariness as he surveyed what had once been the garage of his funeral home. It was now a blood-spattered morgue, lined with shrouded bodies.

"We had no other place to put them. I never thought the garage would be used for this. I hope it won't be again," said the owner of Owens-Brumley Funeral Home, one of two local funeral homes where the dozens of victims of Tuesday's deadly tornado were taken.

He cast another look at the 17 bodies on the concrete floor, some swaddled in blood-specked sheets, others zipped up in plastic body bags. The floor was marred by blood stains where other bodies had been.

"It's so overwhelming. These are just people. People like you and me. People you meet on the streets every day. When they died, especially those in the shopping centers, they were doing the things we do every day."

His voice choked. "All of a sudden ... they can't, they aren't allowed to do them any more," he said as his voice trailed off. He hadn't slept for 38 hours.

The first victim arrived at 7 p.m. Tuesday, a mere 45 minutes after the twister cut through the heavily populated southern section of this North Texas city of 96,000.

Twenty-four others arrived, and Van Loh and his staff worked on the embalming tables for the next 20 hours. Electricity and water had been knocked out by the torndo, so their lights were powered by the generator from a borrowed camper and their water came from a borrowed tank truck.

"We would go for a long time. We were working, just like always. But then we would get to thinking about all those people. All of a sudden, the realization hit and there was no way to keep from crying about this."

Some of his staff members, Van Loh said, were embalming friends and neighbors.

On Wednesday, he watched numb families come to his garage throughout the day, visiting there as a last resort in their search for missing relatives.

"I can't imagine what it would be like to search through a city for someone you love. That's something none of us should have to go through. They came here only as a last resort. They didn't want to, but they came," he said.

The staff at the Hampton-Vaughn Funeral Home only a block away helped run the ambulances that transported the hundreds of people injured by the tornado. They then turned to the job of preparing the victims brought to them, leaving almost 24 hours later. Those victims were placed in that funeral home's garage.

Somehow, in the midst of the stunned, crippled city, the Hampton-Vaughn staff conducted two routine funerals Wednesday. The dozens of others start Friday.

City twister's damage called 5th worst ever

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — A tornado specialist at the University of Kansas says the twister which hit Wichita Falls this week is the fifth worst on record in terms of damage.

"From what I've heard so far, this ranks behind the tornadoes that hit Topeka in 1966, Lubbock in 1970, Omaha in 1975 and Xenia, Ohio, in 1975," said Joe R. Eagleman, a professor of meteorology.

"It's only the fifth tornado to cause more than $100 million in damage in history," Eagleman said Wednesday night, in an interview with the Kansas City Times.

He said he and his staff had expected tornadic activity in the Wichita Falls area two days before it struck.

Larry Wilson, a meteorologist with the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, said Wichita Falls residents had ample warning.

"We issued the tornado warning for Wichita Falls at 1:55 p.m., four hours before the tornado hit," Wilson said.

10 years to recover?

By JODY COX
Staff Writer

Devastation left in the wake of Tuesday's tornado seemed nothing less than overwhelming Wednesday.

"We might get it back together in 10 years," said Mayor Kenneth Hill after he surveyed the damage.

But Sen. John Tower and Rep. Jack Hightower assured Wichita Falls officials that extensive federal aid would be forthcoming under disaster assistance programs.

Wichita Falls would become eligible for such relief when President Carter declares the devastated city a disaster area, an announcement expected Wednesday evening by Tower, Hightower, Hill and other officials.

Grants for temporary housing lasting as long as a year will be made through Federal Disaster Assistance Administration, said Robert Estrada, director of Sen. John Tower's Dallas constituents' office. These could include rental money for either houses or apartments or mobile home housing.

Disaster assistance centers will be set up in Wichita Falls and Vernon in the immediate future, Hightower said.

The temporary housing grants apply to any displaced person or family losing their home because of the tornado. FDAA personnel from the Dallas regional office already had begun evaluation operations in Wichita Falls Wednesday.

Small Business Administration offers low-interest, long-term loans for all identified losses above and beyond insured and salvage value for both businesses and individuals.

Estrada said almost anyone can qualify for the loans, which cover losses to homes, furnishings and personal property that may have been underinsured. The only stipulation involves the borrower's ability to repay the loan, which comes with an interest rate usually well below the nione percent standard and up to 30 years to repay.

"The terms are flexible and can be fitted into almost anybody's budget," said Estrada.

For those who can't fit even a $10 or $15 monthly payment into their budget, such as the elderly on fixed incomes or those on welfare, grants of up to $5,000 are available, adminstered through Texas Department of Human Resources. Estrada said all that's required to qualify is reasonable proof of loss, along with documentation of inability to pay.

"All of this works pretty quickly," Estrada said, "and it's flexible enough so you don't have to go through a lot of red tape."

Local governments, school systems and non-profit organizations may receive outright federal grants to help cover losses such as road, building or facilities repair and replacement. That process won't start for a week or ten days, Estrada said, when officials begin meeting with FDAA personnel to determine losses and damages.

Meanwhile, private insurance company adjusters have set up field operations near the tornado's path. Officials expect others to move into the area as the cleanup continues.

Witness recalls everyone knew tornado was coming

By BRUCE FISHER
Staff Writer

"Everybody knew when it was coming," said one eyewitness to the killer tornado that struck Wichita Falls about 6 p.m. Tuesday. All of a sudden, she said, everyone got off the streets.

Almost instantly there was no one in sight — no children, no adults, no dogs, cats or any other living thing.

Janelle Harmon, who lives on Lavell in the Faith Village residential area, said she and her two daughters were in her home when the tornado struck. Faith Village was one of the most heavily damaged areas; almost all the homes there were destroyed.

Mrs. Harmon said she, her daughters and their children huddled in a hallway under a mattress as advised by a newscaster in his last warning before the radio station stopped transmitting.

She said the last warning was, "If you haven't opened your windows and doors yet, it is too late; take cover now."

Nancy Harmon said she thought her mother was overreacting when she dragged the mattress from the bedroom and told everyone to get under it. It saved their lives. The house was literally destroyed around them.

"We were trapped under the wreckage of the house," said Mrs. Harmon. "That man across the street in the green coveralls came over and heard us yelling, and he started getting the debris off of us."

The men in the neighborhood started going from house to house, or rather from foundation to foundation, as soon as the tornado had gone, checking for people trapped in the rubble, said Mrs. Harmon.

She said the destruction lasted only a few minutes, maybe four to 10 minutes at the most, but it seemed like an hour. She said her son-in-law, Ron Compton, stood guard over the remains of her house through the night armed with a shotgun.

"It just makes us sick. I just can't believe people can be so cold like that. There were looters everywhere," Mrs. Harmon said.

Although her neighborhood was destroyed by the twister, Mrs. Harmon said she had talked with most of her neighbors Wednesday morning and none reported any deaths there.

Guard armory blown away around soldiers

By NICK GHOLSON

While Sgt. Thomas DePriest and 15 other members of the Wichita Falls National Guard unit prepared to depart for Vernon to aid tornado victims Tuesday afternoon, a deadly twister was right on their front doorstep.

The devastating tornado, which wielded a destruction derby across Wichita Falls, leveled the National Guard Armory, but DePriest and his companions found safety in two arms vaults.

The vaults, used to store weapons, were converted into life-saving compartments and protected them from one of Mother Nature's most deadly weapons.

"There were five people across the street from us trying to get to the armory for protection," said DePriest. "I shouted at them to hurry up and get inside, but they couldn't hear me for the force of the wind. All of them got in, but they couldn't make it into the vaults. Some were injured as they took refuge in the hall, but none was killed.

"One woman was found at the front entrance seriously injured. She just didn't have time to get inside. But she was a tough old gal. Her forehead was cut badly and a bone was sticking out of her leg, but she didn't holler."

DePriest was reared in Tennessee, but has spent 25 years in Wichita Falls. He also has been dispatched to help in several disaster situations, but he has seen none worse than this.

"The slabs this building was on actually vibrated. It actually vibrated. It sure did, it actually moved."

He said the Guardsmen would try to retrieve all the property they could and then "get a bulldozer and clear it out."

Envoy and wife reported alive

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — A United Nations official and his wife reported killed during the Tanzanian capture of Kampala are alive and safe, a U.N. official in Nairobi said today.

The official said he had just heard from Gert Kallwas, a West German who is acting head of the U.N. Development Program in the Ugandan capital.

Drilled helped prepare Bethania for real disaster

By VEDA McGINNIS
Staff Writer

Only six days after a tornado drill, Bethania Hospital personnel were forced to deal with the real thing, and the precautionary measure may have saved lives when a devastating tornado struck Wichita Falls Tuesday.

"It was magnificent. Everyone was well organized and quietly went to work. The surgeons just kind of floated in, got into their scrub suits and went to work," said Dr. John A. Webb, who was at the hospital all Tuesday night and into Wednesday morning.

In that time, 186 persons received emergency treatment at Bethania. Many more were to be treated before the torrent of patients was reduced to a trickle.

Joyce Warren, public relations director at Bethania, said at mid-morning Wednesday that there had been only one death. Richard Flores, one of the surgical orderlies who worked his regular day shift Tuesday and was called back in Tuesday night, said the disaster drill was a factor in everyone knowing what to do with no questions asked.

Randy Esparza, another surgical orderly, said, "Everybody was on his own and knew what to do."

The two said the hospital's lobby had been prepared for the injured, who came to the hospital in private cars and emergency vehicles. The hospital's six operating and emergency rooms "were all going," they said. The recovery room was "full continuously."

"There was no confusion, no hysteria, no panic," Dr. Webb said. "Our biggest problem was lack of water."

The biggest response to the water shortage, however, was from Park Tank Truck Service in Iowa Park. "They had as many as five of their semi-trucks here at one time," said Richard McQuiston, director of

When the hospital's water shortage became known, conplant operations at the hospital. "Those boys have worked all night long."

Two Notre Dame High School students, Chris Honkomp and Tim Wyrick, both enrolled in the hospital's senior volunteer program, offered their services.

Honkomp was at Sikes Senter when the tornado struck.

"I was working near Dillard's Court and we all ran to it and laid down," he said. "Stuff was strewn from other stores, lights were broken and plants were uprooted, but I didn't see any serious injuries where I was."

Three die in restaurant

By JODY COX
Staff Writer

Three persons, two young girls and an elderly woman, died under the collapsing walls of a restaurant just east of the Faith Village area as the killer tornado slammed across the southwest portion of the city Tuesday evening.

More of the restaurant's 40-odd customers might have been killed had not the manager yelled for everyone to move into the rear of the building when he saw the twister coming from the west.

"I know now how people must have felt in the war," manager C.E. Holly said. "There wasn't any time to think; we just had time to pray."

Holly said the tornado lifted the roof from the building and then slammed it back down, crumbling some of the exterior walls.

The restaurant's patrons survived by cowering against interior walls.

"You just had to grab the wall and pray," said Angela Gaskins, a restaurant employee. "The Lord's the only thing that saved us; that's the reason we're alive."

Holly said it took more than two hours to dig everyone out of the rubble. Help was a long time in coming and a crane eventually was called in to dig out the dead.

One dies when storm strikes Harrold

By JOE BROWN
Regional Staff Writer

HARROLD, Texas — A single tornado-related fatality in Harrold occured when a couple from New Mexico traveling across Texas attempted to hide from the storm under a semi-trailer that stopped just ahead of them on U.S. 287.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Collins of Albuqerque, N.M., forced themselves against the dual wheels of the tractor, but the wind of the tornado rolled it onto the body of the 50-year-old woman.

Doug Yelverton, 42, driver of the 18 wheeler from Vancouver, Wash., said it was the most terrifing experience in his life.

"I was headed north from Dallas and began watching the twister develop. The couple was behind me and we stopped once and it appeared to change directions so we started up again.

"But we went only a short distance before stopping again and we all got under the tractor. I was trying to hang onto the driveshaft while rocks, wire, dirt, even a bucket just pounded us," Yelverton said.

The driver added that the wind became so fierce it rolled the big rig backward even with the air brakes locked, and the dual wheels rolled over the woman's body.

"We had to get the truck off of her, so I crawled out on the driver's side, but the wind was blowing so hard I couldn't get the door open. Then her husband came through on the other side and together we were able to open my door.

"I got the truck in gear and pulled forward off her, but she was crushed. It was terrible."

The only other damage at the site on U.S. 287, four miles west of Harrold, was a few utility poles snapped off and some lines down.

Save 70¢ on delicious Mountain Grown Folger's

HAPPY EASTER SHOPPING!

Make your Easter feast even more enjoyable—with the rich taste of Folger's! Each coupon saves you 35¢ on one can of Folger's Coffee or Folger's Flaked Coffee.

Folger's Coffee comes in 3 grinds—regular, electric perc and drip. Folger's is mountain grown—that's the richest, most aromatic kind of coffee. The cool mountain air and gentle sunshine let coffee ripen slowly, so it builds up richer flavor.

Folger's Flaked Coffee is specially designed for automatic drip coffeemakers. It's the same delicious Mountain Grown Folger's, but it's flaked to release more rich flavor, so you use less and save money. If you normally use 5 measures per pot, you only need 4 of Folger's Flaked Coffee.

TORNADO RIPPED THROUGH APARTMENT COMPLEXES DOING UNDETERMINED DAMAGE
...hundreds of residents homeless following disaster

Ex-Wichitan in first house hit

As a Wichta Falls resident for several years, Don Taubert, an American history teacher at Lufkin High School, knew tornados in the spring here are about as common as dogwood in Lufkin.

Even though Taubert said he had seen several twisters from afar, he never met one face-to-face, until Tuesday evening, that is.

Taubert and his family were visiting the David Kolp family here when the twister struck the southern part of the city from the west. The first house it hit was the Kolps', located at 5102 Belinda.

"We had been in the house, listening to the TV about all the tornados down around Vernon when we heard there was one near Iowa Park," Taubert recalled. "I went outside, looked around and didn't see anything. A few minutes later, David's son William (a 6th grader at McNiel Junior High School) came running in and said the wind was blowing in both directions.

"David and I went outside and saw the winds swirling in the air," Taubert continued. "We stood there and watched it for a while and a couple of small funnels formed, dropping out of the clouds and then going back up. Then it became real big and started moving faster. At that time, we told the kids to get in the house, crouch down in the hallway under mattresses.

"David and I stayed outside watching it while it kept getting bigger and bigger. When I saw it coming toward us, we grabbed another mattress out of the garage and joined the rest of them in the hall, making nine of us in all. As we passed the living room window, I could see it was getting very close. I looked out from under the mattress and saw that it was solid black all around us with this large roaring noise.

"I always thought those things pass over in just a second, but it was there for what seemed like an eternity," said Taubert. "When I felt the walls start to shake, I thought, 'Well, I guess this is it.' My wife and kids were praying really loud, and I guess I was, too.

"I started to look out, but they told me to wait, it might not be over yet when I started to hear something hitting the roof. I later realized it was hail, but at the time, I was thinking it might be the roof about to cave in.

"Finally, I couldn't stand it any more and I went outside and didn't see my car anywhere. I ran back inside and told my wife our car was gone and then went back out. Then I finally saw all the other houses. One had a wall blown down and another didn't have a roof and the house we were in only had one window broken and part of the roof blown away. I found the car about a block away, in the bedroom of another house and its lights were on.

Because of the southerly position of the Kolps' house, it was the first of thousands to be hit Tuesday. "It was sort of strange hearing it being described on TV as approaching when we were right in the middle of it."

It was Taubert's first time to get caught in a tornado and, although he says he won't stay away from Wichita Falls because of it, he hopes it will be his last.

Power restored in three towns

Electric power was restored in three area towns Wednesday evening, and that in turn relieved critical water shortages in Iowa Park and Burkburnett that were brought on by the twister that struck Wichita Falls Tuesday.

Power was restored at 6:39 p.m. Wednesday in Iowa Park and about the same time in Burkburnett and Petrolia. This was just over 24 hours after power had been lost because of the tornado.

In Burkburnett, officials had ordered residents to use only a limited amount of water for drinking.

It was the same story in Iowa Park when the power went off with the twister's attack.

Iowa Park shut off its water supply when pressure problems developed and ordered that it only be used for drinking purposes. However, Mayor Johnny Crawford said the city would crank up the water system after the power was restored Wednesday.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're willing to work hard today, not only for yourself but also for those toward whom you feel an obligation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Any promises you may have made to friends you'll uphold to the letter today, no matter how difficult they are to fulfill. You're reliable.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Although you normally are the first one to be out where the fun activities are, today you are more interested in doing something constructive.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Conditions are right for you to have that serious discussion you've been wanting to have with a friend. Go ahead and say what needs to be said.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You may finally be able to take care of a long-overdue obligation today. You'll feel a weight has been lifted off your shoulders.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A serious matter you've had on your mind for quite some time can be resolved today. Think it through carefully. You'll find the right answers.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Assistance from an older person will be forthcoming. It will get you out of a bind that seemed impossible to resolve.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) This should be a very pleasant day. You'll have a reunion with some old friends you haven't seen for awhile. It'll be nice to be together again.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You can get further ahead today if you keep your objectives to yourself. The fewer people who know about them, the better.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Several interesting avenues for bringing about something you've wanted may be presented to you today. Anyone you choose should work out.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your leadership today will be unassuming, but forceful. Without your cohorts being aware of it, you'll lead all the way.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Look to past experience to guide you when an issue comes up today that forces you to make an important decision. You already know the answer.

Khomeini's firing squads execute more former royalists

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's firing squads executed eight more of the shah's men in the provinces today, raising the confirmed total to 109 in two months of Islamic power.

Tehran's Kayhan newspaper reported that revolutionary gunmen rounded up 141 persons in Tehran and elsewhere over the past three days, including an ex-deputy prime minister, two senators, university professors and a Moslem clergyman.

More than 4,000 persons are believed held in a central Tehran prison on various charges leveled by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary government, but the exact number here and in other jails around the country is not known.

The state radio said Mahmoud Moini, former chief of the SAVAK secret police in the holy city of Qom, was executed at 1 a.m. on charges of "corruption to the core, fighting against clergymen and warring with God and his emissaries."

The radio said a new revolutionary court in the northwestern city of Zanjan found army officer Abbas Kamali, 53, guilty at 4:28 a.m. of being "corrupt to the core" and had him executed immediately.

In the southwestern oil center of Ahwaz, four others were executed at 4:25 a.m. on the same charge, the radio said. They were the former mayor of the city of Boostan, Shaey Mazrae; Mazrae's brother, Hamid; Ali Reza Shojai, not further identified; and Hossein Rahimi, a military officer involved in energy work.

In the northwestern city of Ardebil, two police corporals were executed for killing anti-shah demonstrators, it was announced.

Eleven other men were executed in Tehran Wednesday, the busiest day for the firing squads since Khomeini's forces swept to power Feb. 12 after a year-long revolution that drove Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi from Iran. Three former policemen also went on trial Wednesday on charges of torture and murder. The trial began in Tehran's Qasr Prison but was shifted to a secret site because of too many spectators and witnesses, the state radio said.

The broadcast said 17 persons also were arrested and held for questioning at Qasr Prison for association with the shah's regime. They were said to include an army general, a former military school classmate of the shah and several army and police colonels.

The Iranian public generally appeared to approve the death sentences handed down so far.

The leftist Fedayeen guerrilla organization called the execution Saturday of former Prime Minister Amir Abbas Hoveida a "service to humanity," the state radio said Wednesday.

And Khomeini, the 78-year-old Shiite Moslem leader of the revolution, said the Islamic regime is "respected by all those who have concern for humanity and human rights."

But U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, Amnesty International and a number of foreign governments have called for an end to the executions and secret trialsin Iran.

The West German government added its voice Wednesday, appealing to Iran's revolutionary leaders to respect the rights of those on trial for supporting the shah.

Scholar heads Ugandan provisional government

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The provisional government set up by Ugandan exiles to replace President Idi Amin's bloodstained regime is headed by a quiet scholar with political experience but no known political ambitions.

Yussufu Lule, 67-year-old former head of Kampala's Makerere University, is considered one of Africa's foremost educators. He also has the respect of Uganda's diverse and often fractious tribal groups, a vital asset as he tries to bind the wounds of Amin's eight-year rule.

Lule, who was named provisional president, defense minister and armed forces chief, is considered a transitional leader who would not seek the presidency in an election.

He was picked as a compromise head of the Uganda National Liberation Front, a coalition of exile groups set up at a conference in Tanzania last month while Tanzanian troops and exile forces were marching toward Kampala. Lule announced the makeup of the provisional government on Wednesday after the invaders occupied Amin's capital.

A member of the Baganda tribe, Lule is married and the father of seven children. He has headed the ministries of rural development, social services and education at various times in his career before Amin forced him into exile.

But he always regarded himself primarily an educator. "So far as I know I have no political aspirations. I think I have a job to do in life and that is to teach," he said in an interview in 1968.

Lule's academic credentials include study in Kampala, at South Africa's all-black Fort Hare University and at the universities of Bristol and Edinburgh in Britain.

He said the UNLF's 11-man executive council will serve as the provisional government's supreme policy-making body. Most members of the council were also named to Cabinet posts. Observers said the Cabinet lineup of educators, politicians and professionals could rank as one of the most impressive governments in Africa.

Among the standouts are Martin Aliker, a 51-year-old U.S.-trained dentist who is likely to make a major bid for the presidency when elections are held. Lule, in a broadcast speech Wednesday, promised that free elections, last held in 1962, would be held "as soon as conditions permit."

Others in the government include Mathias Ngobi, 54, an agricultural expert appointed minister of regional administration; Daniel Nadubere, 47, a British-trained lawyer who will be minister of justice, and Atema Alimadi, a former U.N. ambassador who will be foreign minister.

Lule will share control of the military with Col. Tito Okello who served in the army before Amin came to power. Lt. Col. Oite Ojok, another former army commander, would head the police.

The exiles' conference at Moshi, which set up the united front, left former Ugandan President Milton Obote out in the cold.

The socialist Obote has been living in exile in Tanzania since his ouster by Amin in 1971.

Final reactor shutdown possible by the weekend

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Final shutdown of the crippled Three Mile Island nuclear reactor may begin by the weekend after technicians have determined whether gas levels have been reduced in the reactor's cooling water, says the top federal official on the site.

Haroid Denton, operations chief for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, said Wednesday that an analysis of the reactor could be ready Friday and shutdown measures then could be taken immediately.

Efforts to cool the simmering reactor core are complicated by the presence of dissolved gas in the water that serves to carry off heat. The water is pressurized to prevent boiling. Denton said recent efforts to remove the gas have been successful.

In related developments:

—President Carter formed an 11-member commission to investigate the Three Mile Island accident. The panel was given six months to compile a report at a projected cost to the government of $1 million.

—Nearly 150 area residents had undergone voluntary NRC examinations for radiation by late Wednesday. No one showed abnormal radiation levels, the NRC said. Hundreds of others have made appointments for the tests which will continue until next week.

—For the first time since the March 28 accident, a survey plane did not detect any radioactive xenon 133 in vapor rising from the plant's cooling towers.

"No doubt there's still some (xenon 133) being released. The monitors inside the building indicate very low levels are going out," Denton said, adding that a filtering system has almost eliminated the discharge of radioactive iodine into the air.

The cool-down plan calls for lowering the reactor core's water pressure so dissolved gas form bubbles and can be vented out of the system.

The system would then be repressurized and a sample of the coolant water would be extracted to see if enough gas had been eliminated. If gas levels are low, the system can be finally cooled by shutting down the reactors' pumps.

NRC issues nuclear safety directives

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission, spurred by the lessons of the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant accident, is issuing new safety directives to similar plants throughout the nation.

The NRC said Wednesday that the directives were expected today. But it did not say what they would entail or how many plants would be directly affected.

Under new scrutiny, it was known, are nearly half the nation's nuclear plants, as well as some that were given new orders earlier.

The NRC did say it "is not contemplating recommending any new reactor shutdown at this time."

Shortly after last month's Pennsylvania accident, directives were sent to operators of eight "pressurized water reactors" similar to the stricken Three Mile Island plant and built by the same firm, Babcock & Wilcox.

On Wednesday, NRC staff members met with representatives of Westinghouse Corp. and Combustion Engineering Corp., designers of the 34 other pressurized water reactors in the United States, to discuss the significance of the accident for their plants.

The NRC staff, in a "preliminary notification" to the five-member commission, said the talks were held "so that further appropriate short-term corrective actions can be developed and implemented."

The notification said the staff was still reviewing these issues, but "it has been concluded that further actions should be considered on a priority basis for all light water power reactor facilities."

That phrase seemed to forecast new safety action for all but one of the nation's 72 licensed nuclear power plants.

But NRC spokesman Frank Ingram said later that the statement was meant to refer to only the 43 pressurized water reactors.

The 28 other "light water facilities" are boiling water reactors, which do not have the high-pressure cooling system in use at Three Mile Island.

One commercially licensed nuclear power plant, the Fort Saint Vrain plant at Platteville, Colo., is cooled by gas, not water.

The NRC notification pointed out that some Westinghouse plants have instruments that could, in some circumstances, fail to start an emergency cooling system automatically as they should, or could mislead plant operators into taking the wrong actions, as may have happened at Three Mile Island.

The NRC noted that Westinghouse itself advised operators of its plants not to rely on the automatic operation of these instruments and to start the emergency cooling system manually if pressure in the main cooling system drops too low.

John Taylor, Westinghouse vice president for the water reactor division, said in an interview that the instructions have been standard operating procedure for a long time.

But he added that Westinghouse was calling the operators' attention to the instructions because of the Three Mile Island accident.

Taylor said he did not know how many plants had the instrument arrangement, but he believed the warning applied to all, or almost all, the Westinghouse-designed pressurized water reactors.

A plant operator, watching the pressure indicator, should have about 20 minutes to realize a problem might be developing and to start the emergency cooling system manually to prevent damage to the reactor core, he said.

When the Three Mile Island Unit 2 suffered equipment failures March 28, the reactor shut itself down and the emergency cooling system came on automatically.

But, after only a few minutes, the plant operators shut off the emergency cooling system manually, the NRC says. That allowed the reactor core to start overheating and possibly contributed to the fuel-rod damage that made the reactor even harder to control afterward, the commission says.

Without adequate cooling, a nuclear reactor core can overheat and even melt. If that happens, large amounts of radioactivity could be released into the atmosphere.

Carter picks commission to study reactor accident

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, noting that the world will be watching its work, has appointed an 11-member commission to study the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear reactor.

Appointing members who include a resident of Middletown, Pa. — site of the stricken nuclear power plant — a college president, an environmentalist and several scientists, Carter said Wednesday:

"It is essential that we learn the causes of this accident and make sure that the safety of our citizens is never again endangered in this way.

"The eyes of the nation, and indeed of the entire world, will be on this commission."

The panel's work is expected to cost the government $1 million, according to Jack Watson, Carter's assistant who headed an administration task force on the accident, considered the worst in the history of commercial nuclear energy. Radiation — apparently in small amounts — was leaked over a period of several days, and officials feared more would be released before the reactor was cooled down.

Carter instructed the new commission to "find out what happened at Three Mile Island ... assess how the accident could have been prevented ... review how the government and others responded and ... make recommendations to enable us to prevent any future nuclear accidents."

John G. Kemeny, president of Dartmouth College and a mathematician who worked on the nation's first atomic bomb, was named chairman.

Another member is Ann Trunk, a Middletown woman who stayed home with her six children during the problems at Three Mile Island.

She said she felt she was picked for the panel because "they thought I could represent Middletown and people's feelings."

"I want to hear the facts; I'm going there to learn," she said. "I'll make up my mind later on."

The commission was given six months to investigate the accident.

Under the president's instructions, the panel will study the role played by Metropolitan Edison Co., which operates the plant; assess emergency preparations of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and other federal, state and local authorities and evaluate the NRC's licensing and inspection procedures.

Named to the panel, in addition to Kemeny and Mrs. Trunk, were: Gov. Bruce E. Babbit of Arizona; Patrick E. Haggerty, retired president of Texas Instruments Inc.; Paul A. Marks, a Columbia University biochemist and physician; Cora B. Marrett, a University of Wisconsin sociology professor and Lloyd McBride, president of the United Steelworkers union.

INFLATION FIGHTING ideas

11 "Bag It"

Brown bagging isn't just for school kids any more. Office workers, blue collar workers, even business executives have caught on to the many advantages of packing their own lunches. Brown bag lunches provide greater flexibility in scheduling lunch hours; menus can be much more elective; and, of course, as the U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs intimates, there is a sizeable economy value in bringing lunches from home instead of paying for restaurant meals.

Safeway has everything for the Brown Bagger: breads, spreads, luncheon meats, soups, cakes, as well as lunch bags, lunch boxes, thermos bottles. Get into the brown bagging routine and strike another blow in the fight against inflation!

SEN. TALMADGE

Talmadge admits violating rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Herman Talmadge has admitted several violations of Senate rules in an agreement worked out with the Senate ethics committee, but he will continue to fight major allegations of financial misconduct "still hotly in dispute," his attorney says.

James Hamilton, Talmadge's lawyer, revealed the agreement — though no details — Wednesday, 12 days before the Georgia Democrat is to face a committee "trial" on allegations of breaking Senate rules governing financial dealings.

Hamilton did not say which of the five committee accusations Talmadge was admitting, but The Atlanta Constitution, quoting unnamed committee sources, listed these three:

—That false claims were made about campaign expenditures and receipts.

—That taxes on gifts of stock to Talmadge's former wife Betty were not reported.

—That gifts and property were not reported to the secretary of the Senate.

No agreement was reached on allegations that campaign contributions were converted to Talmadge's own use and that expense vouchers were submitted to the Senate for money not actually spent by Talmadge, the newspaper said.

The accusations concern possible violations of Senate rules, not federal laws.

Sen. Adlai Stevenson, the committee chairman, said he hoped for a vote in about a week on two Talmadge motions which could have a big impact on the way the committee conducts its hearing.

One motion seeks to exclude evidence taken by Talmadge's chief accuser, former administrative assistant Daniel Minchew.

White House backs off from oil profit use curbs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is backing away from President Carter's threat of federal curbs on the use of new oil profits, and officials concede they have no clear idea how such restrictions would even be fashioned.

No legislative proposals or regulatory actions are in the works, say officials at the White House and the Energy and Treasury departments. Some concede it would be difficult to come up with workable ideas.

Carter, in a nationally televised speech last week, pledged to "demand that they (the oil companies) use their new income to develop energy for America, and not to buy such things as department stores and hotels, as some have done in the past."

But that line, a White House official, requesting anonymity, said, was inserted without fully exploring how Carter could enforce investment curbs.

Then, at Tuesday's news conference, the president added circuses and timber lands to the list of oil company investments of which he disapproves.

"I would favor," he added, "any constraints placed on the oil companies by the Congress or administratively within my own sphere of influence to encourage that use of increased revenues for oil and gas production."

Carter said oil companies will net $6 billion over the next three years from his decision to lift oil price controls, even if Congress enacts his proposed "windfall profits tax" on the new income.

But White House press secretary Jody Powell Wednesday backed away from the threat of government investment curbs.

"Our hope and our belief is that such action will not be necessary, that these companies will in fact act in a responsible manner," he said.

Powell refused to discuss how restraints on oil company profits would work. "Thought has been given to that," he said. "There are various ways ... I'm not going to get into that now. ... I don't consider it to be productive."

But other officials said little attention had been given to the idea of profit curbs. Energy Department spokesman Jim Bishop said "nothing solid" was in the works.

A White House official, asking not to be named, said "the administration hasn't fully explored" the idea. "We killed ourselves to get the program out on time."

The reference to demands that profits be plowed back had been added almost as an afterthought, he said.

Powell suggested cryptically that tax legislation might be drafted to encourage plowing back profits. "The history of taxation in this country is ... very much a history of structuring taxes to encourage or discourage certain types of spending and behavior," he told a reporter.

But a Treasury Department official, who is drafting Carter's windfall profits tax proposal, was astounded at the suggestion.

"You've got me," he said. "I'm not aware of any plans to do it through the tax system."

The official, who asked not to be identified, said the only way he could think of accomplishing investment curbs through taxation would be to tax away every cent of the profits from decontrolled domestic oil, then give back some of the money in tax credits for specifically approved investments. Such an approach is far from the 50 percent tax Carter proposes.

Meanwhile, oil industry officials said that some of Carter's investment criticism was off the mark.

The president's reference to circus purchases was aimed at Gulf Oil Co., which says it held only a single discussion in early 1974 about buying Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey for its Florida land holdings. Gulf, which at that time had heavily invested in real estate, has since sold its land in favor of energy investments.

Clerics renew celibacy vows

VATICAN CITY (AP) — More than 2,500 priests, bishops and cardinals renewed their vows of celibacy with Pope John Paul II today as he opened four days of Easter celebrations in the largest concelebrated Mass in Vatican history.

A crowd of 10,000 watched as the pontiff, 22 cardinals, 40 bishops and 2,500 priests — half of Rome's diocesan clerics — celebrated Mass and renewed their vows before the huge main alter of Saint Peter's Basilica.

The concelebration, a Mass celebrated in unison by a group of priests, came three days after John Paul II upheld mandatory celibacy for Roman Catholic priests in one of the strongest pronouncements in his six-month old pontificate.

In Monday's document, the pope called Holy Thursday, the day on which Jesus instituted the Eucharist in the Last Supper, as "the annual feast of our priesthood" to renew the vow of celibacy as "our giving of ourselves to the exclusive service of Christ in the Church."

This evening the 58-year-old pontiff will drive to the Basilica of St. John the Lateran for another solemn Mass during which he will re-enact Jesus's washing the feet of the 12 Apostles during Last Supper.

On the pope's instructions, the Vatican has chosen 12 mentally retarded Italians, aged between 50 and 60, from a Rome religious institute housing mental patients. The pontiff will wash and kiss their feet in an ancient rite revived by Pope John XXIII 20 years ago.

On Good Friday, marking the death of Jesus on the cross, the pope will attend a service in St. Peter's Basilica in the late afternoon. Good Friday is the only day of the year when no Mass is said.
