A chip off the old block?

"Piggy-back" is not an idle term, as Ken Pruitt demonstrates with a day-old, 2½-pound Duroc piglet "riding" a 600-pound boar at his hog farm just east of Midland. Offspring of Pruitt's prize hogs will be among the swines vying for ribbons and the grand championship at the Midland County Livestock Show Sunday through Tuesday at the Midland County Exhibit Building off U.S. Highway 80 East. U.S. wins anti-Soviet vote, but won't get Iran sanctions

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States was successful in its drive to arraign the Soviet Union before the General Assembly for its military intervention in Afghanistan, but the Russians announced that they would veto any resolution in the Security Council calling for sanctions against Iran.

With Security Council action on Afghanistan blocked by the Soviet veto, the council adopted a resolution Wednesday night asking for an emergency session of the 152-nation assembly to deal with the situation in the Central Asian nation.

Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim announced that the assembly, which ended its regular 1979 session on Monday, would meet at 3 p.m. EST today.

The emergency session is expected to last several days, and the debate is expected to be a replay of the debate in the Security Council last weekend, with most of the members attacking the Soviet action in Afghanistan and the Soviet Union and its communist allies defending it.

The United States and its allies were reported confident that they could muster the two-thirds majority necessary for adoption of the resolution vetoed by the Soviet Union in the Security Council. The big-power veto does not apply in the assembly, but adoption of the resolution will have only moral and propaganda value since the assembly has no power to order punitive action.

The resolution deplored the armed intervention in Afghanistan and called for the withdrawal of all foreign forces.

The opponents of the Soviet action took their case to the General Assembly under a procedure established in 1950 to deal with situations in which a veto prevented the Security Council from taking action to preserve or restore peace.

The resolution asking for the assembly session was submittted by the Philippines and Mexico, and the vote in the 15-nation council was 12-2, with the Soviet Union and East Germany voting no and Zambia abstaining.

The council vote Monday on the resolution calling for withdrawal of the Soviet troops had been 13-2, with Zambia voting with the majority. But that was an issue of substance on which the negative Soviet vote counted as a veto, while the resolution to go to the General Assembly was a procedural matter exempt from the veto of the five permanent council members — the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain, France and China.

Meanwhile, Tass, the official Soviet news agency, announced that U.S. plans to get the Security Council to vote sanctions against Iran were doomed to defeat.

"As regards the USSR, it will not tolerate any interference from the outside in the internal affairs of Iran, and will not allow the United States to impose a decision to apply economic sanctions against it," said Tass.

A senior American official in Washington said if the Soviets vetoed the sanctions resolution, the United States would try to get its European allies and others to join it in a program of sanctions outside the U.N.

The Soviet Union abstained when the Security Council adopted a resolution on Dec. 31 calling for the release of the hostages and committing the council to consider measures against Iran if they were not freed by Jan. 7. The Americans at the time expected the Russians to abstain again when the sanctions resolution came to a vote, but that was before the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and the hostile American reaction to it.

The United States wants an embargo applied to all Iranian imports except food and medicine and all Iranian exports except oil, the country's chief source of income. President Carter earlier this week called on the Security Council to vote sanctions "without delay," but so far the U.S. delegation has given first priority to the crisis in Afghanistan.

Soviet bigwigs may not have been involved in Afghanistan decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev and Prime Minister Alexei Kosygin, both ill and aging, may not have had a hand in the Kremlin's decision to send thousands of troops into Afghanistan, according to a senior U.S. official.

Acknowledging that intelligence information is sketchy, the official told reporters at the State Department it was not clear whether there would have been an intervention under the firm rule of Brezhnev, who also has been known for efforts at detente with the United States.

Russia's decision to intervene in Afghanistan, according to some European reports, was taken by Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, Defense Minister Dmitri Ustinov, potential Brezhnev successor Andrei Kirilenko and a handful of others.

The intervention, which President Carter calls the greatest threat to peace since World War II, has plunged U.S.-Soviet relations into sharp decline. Carter has ordered economic and diplomatic reprisals and halted Senate consideration of the SALT II treaty to limit strategic nuclear weapons.

Brezhnev, 73 and in failing health for sometime, had trouble hearing and stumbled in public last June at the Vienna, Austria, summit meeting with Carter. Seldom seen by outsiders over the last several months, Brezhnev was reported officially in December to have a cold.

Kosygin, at 75 one of Brezhnev's closest colleagues, was also said to be ill, possibly having suffered a stroke.

Under Brezhnev, the Soviet Union has pursued a policy of detente with the United States, reaching agreements in a number of areas even amid tensions in others.

Asked about the Afghan intervention, the U.S. official, who asked not to be named, said, "I don't think any of us can say whether this results from a change in the leadership."

But he added, "It is quite clear, insofar as the leadership is concerned, that both President Brezhnev and Kosygin are not playing the part that they played in the past."

Meanwhile, on Wednesday, Carter suspended all licenses to export high technology to the Soviet Union, and froze all further shipments.

Jody Powell, the White House press secretary, said this went beyond an initial suspension of about 500 applications for licenses valued at some $155 million. The new order will affect millions of dollars worth of American-made goods.

Reporters at the State Department briefing were told Australia, Canada and Argentina all would not make up the loss to the Soviet Union of a cutoff of 17 million metric tons of American grain.

"It is going to have a real bite," the official said of the U.S. sanctions.

At the same time, he said it was unrealistic to expect an immediate reversal of the slump in U.S.-Soviet relations or a prompt Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan.

"I see this as not something that's happened and I expect to end shortly," he said. "I see this as a protracted process."

On a related front, the Soviets also vowed to block the U.S. drive for international economic sanctions against Iran.

A Tass dispatch, received here, said that while the Soviets favor peacefully settling the dispute over the 50 American hostages in Iran, "Washington prefers other means, pressing for an economic blockade of Iran and exercising military and political pressure on it."

The Soviet news agency account said that "as regards the USSR, it will not tolerate any interference from the outside in the internal affairs of Iran, and will not allow the United States to impose a decision to apply economic sanctions against it."

The senior U.S. official said that a Soviet veto of sanctions in the U.N. Security Council would not stop the administration. In the event of a veto, he said, U.S. allies and other countries would be asked to join in an informal boycott of Iran.

In this regard, he left open the possibility that the United States might try to impose a naval blockade to interfere with shipments to the country.

"I am not ruling out anything at this point," the official said.

If the Soviets veto sanctions in the Security Council, the issue could be taken to the General Assembly. However, that would have virtually no practical effect since the assembly cannot impose sanctions.

Iranian students still seek Laingen

TEHRAN (AP) — A delegation of the students holding American hostages at the U.S. Embassy traveled to Qom today for a meeting with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, and there was speculation they might discuss their demand that U.S. Charge d'Affaires L. Bruce Laingen be turned over to them for questioning.

Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh has asked Khomeini to rule on the students' demand for custody of Laingen and two U.S. aides who have been held under virtual house arrest at the Foreign Ministry since Nov. 4, the day the embassy and the estimated 50 hostages were seized.

The students have said they will accept Khomeini's ruling, but Iran's revolutionary and Shiite Moslem leader has not yet announced a decision and has declared he will not receive visitors for 15 days beginning Saturday.

An American Indian activist visiting Tehran says he hoped to visit the embassy hostages in the next few days.

John Thomas, 35, vice president of the International Indian Treaty Council, was invited to Tehran by the militants who seized the embassy and ever since have been demanding the return of the shah.

"This will probably make me the most hated man in America," Thomas told a news conference Wednesday as he denounced U.S. policy at home and abroad and blamed the American government for precipitating the taking of the hostages.

If Thomas does see the Americans, he will be the first outsider to do so since a group of clergymen paid them a Christmas visit.

In the troubled northwestern city of Tabriz, meanwhile, shops and schools were closed today in a general strike against Khomeini's militia, the revolutionary guard, a spokesman for the anti-Khomeini Moslem People's Republican Party said.

The strike call came a day after street clashes in Tabriz, central city of the Azerbaijan region, that left between three and 10 persons reported dead and 60 to 100 wounded.

Western journalists returning to Tehran after witnessing Wednesday's violence said revolutionary guardsmen had fired into an approaching crowd of supporters of Ayatollah Mohammed Kazem Shariat-Madari. It was one of a series of street battles between Khomeini supporters and followers of Shariat-Madari, the religious leader of the 10 million ethnic Azerbaijanis and the country's No. 2 ayatollah.

The spokesman for the Moslem People's Republican Party, which seeks greater autonomy for Azerbaijan, told a reporter the Tabriz general strike would continue until the revolutionary guards leave Tabriz.

"We can control our own security," he said. "We don't need anybody else's interference."

A revolutionary guard spokesman in Tabriz confirmed that many shops had been closed but said testily, "Even one is open, then you can't say that all have been closed."

Tabriz hospitals reported six dead and 41 wounded, the national news agency Pars said the toll was three dead and 100 wounded, and two independent Tehran newspapers said 10 people were killed and 60 wounded.

There also were conflicting reports of the fighting.

An American TV crew that watched from a nearby rooftop reported about 20,000 anti-Khomeini demonstrators marched toward Tabriz University, where a similar number of Khomeini supporters were holding a rally. Revolutionary guardsmen arrested the first few marchers, who appeared to be unarmed, then fired tear gas into the crowd, the Americans said.

"The air was thick with tear gas, but the wind blew it back into the guards," said a cameraman.

Nugent criticizes eastern states

Incumbent commissioner announces for re-election

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Criticizing the East Coast states for their reluctance to drill for oil, James E. "Jim" Nugent announced Wednesday he will seek a full term on the Texas Railroad Commission.

Nugent made his announcement during a news conference at Chaparral Aviation. The Midland-Odessa stop was part of a four-day campaign swing through the state which will end Friday.

An 18-year veteran of the Texas Legislature, Nugent was appointed in 1978 by then-Gov. Dolph Briscoe to fill an RRC vacancy left by the resignation of Jon Newton.

Reading from a prepared release, Nugent said he "favors production of Texas petroleum at the maximum rate and expediting development of alternative energy sources and research in less conventional fuels such as solar, gasohol, geothermal and coal gasification.

"We cannot conserve our way out of energy dependence, and we can't produce our way out of it," Nugent said. "We must do both."

To accomplish that, Texas must come first in the eyes of the Railroad Commission, he said.

"Now that energy sources are no longer sufficient to meet the needs of the entire country, other areas should share some of those costs and risks," Nugent stated.

He explained those "other areas" mean sections like the East Coast.

"Not a new refinery has been built on the East Coast in 10 to 15 years," he charged. "And it took years to get a permit for drilling. They said it would hurt their fishing rights and their banks.

"We've drilled (in Texas) for years and it hasn't hurt our fishing or coasts. It's time they (Northeast) did something to help themselves" and to stop "robbing us (Texas) for their benefit," he added.

Instead of seeking its own sources of energy, the Northeast "would rather fix the game so they can get our energy at bargain basement prices," the railroad commissioner charged.

Dressed in cowboy boots and a navy pin-striped suit, Nugent denied any knowledge of the Waste Isolation Pilot Project proposed for Carlsbad, N.M.

When questioned about the safety of transporting nuclear wastes by rail through Midland and Odessa, Nugent replied he sees nothing wrong with it "as long as it is being done in a proper manner that is safe."

Nugent prefers a free market for energy instead of government regulating the oil industry. And the windfall profits tax should be used for additional exploration and development, he said.

The decline of natural gas production in the state has stopped, and production is increasing, he noted.

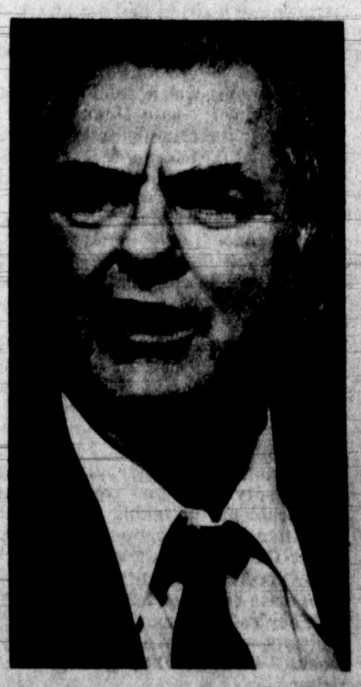

If elected to the RRC post, Nugent claimed he would work to hold utility bills to a minimum by cutting utility company profits to the lowest level that can be sustained.

"In 1976 the commission gave gas utilities 69 percent of the revenue increases they requested," he cited. "In 1978 the figure was 50 percent. During my tenure, we have allowed them just 35 percent."

Under the regulated transporation industry, Nugent pointed out the commission has been responsible for removing thousands of overweight trucks from the highways.

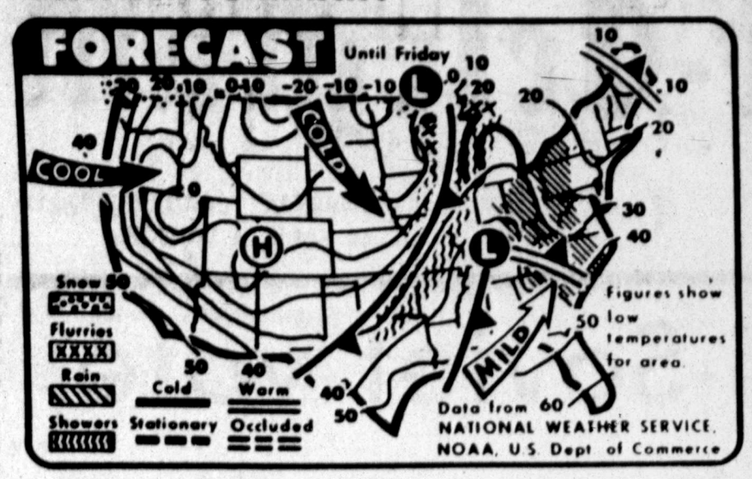

Jim Hightower — also a candidate for the Railroad Commission — was criticized by Nugent for getting campaign money from the Northeast instead of Texas.

In concluding his announcement, Nugent pointed out that "energy and transportation are like the blood and breath of the good life: They are so basic that we happily ignore them until they began to run out or break down."

The Northeast "would rather fix the game so they can get our energy at bargain basement prices." — Railroad Commissioner Jim Nugent

Prices plunge on grain exchange

CHICAGO (AP) — Traders were trying again to do business at Midwest grain exchanges today after worries over the effects of a partial grain embargo against the Soviets sent wheat and corn prices plummeting in frantic selling.

But veteran traders said they see no quick change in the pattern that emerged Wednesday when the government lifted a two-day trading freeze imposed to allow the market to react to President Carter's embargo of 17 million metric tons of grain.

"It will be limit down Thursday," predicted one veteran Chicago Board of Trade dealer, who did not want to be named. Said another, "I don't think corn will trade until Monday. Wheat may trade, I say may trade, on Friday."

Less than a half minute after trading opened Wednesday, wheat, corn and soybeans dropped by the daily limit permitted by the exchanges in Chicago, Minneapolis and Kansas City, Mo.

Reaching the limit effectively ended the day's action, although the price of soybeans later rose fractionally on the Chicago Board of Trade, the largest grain futures exchange in the world.

The limit in Chicago allows daily prices to fluctuate up or down to a maximum of 20 cents a bushel for wheat, 10 cents for corn and 30 cents for soybeans and March wheat closed at $4.25½ a bushel, corn at $2.74¼ and soybeans at $6.13.

President Carter on Tuesday tried to minimize the impact of his action on grain prices by raising federal price supports. But the sharp drop in prices indicated that traders didn't believe that was sufficient, according to Chicago Board of Trade President Robert K. Wilmouth.

The decline may hurt many farmers who have held crops off the market, hoping to get more for their grain. They also face higher grain storage costs because larger supplies will strain facilities.

It is unclear how consumers will be affected. Mills and other grain processors usually buy under long-term contracts, and will not immediately benefit from cheaper prices. Beef producers may save on the corn fed to cattle, but it will be months before any impact might be felt at the retail level.

In other developments Wednesday:

—In New York, the International Longshoremen's Association declared its 116,000 members on the East and Gulf coasts and the Great Lakes would not handle Russian ships or cargo, possibly including grain that Carter had decided to send to the Soviets.

—Maurice J. William, the executive director of the United Nations World Food Council said in Rome that Russians may pay more for their food and the embargo could "adversely affect the quality of their diet but is is not likely to cause hunger in the Soviet Union.

—The Agriculture Department said in Washington the cancellation of orders to the Soviet Union will mean a 9.5 percent drop in U.S. grain exports from earlier predictions, but will still leave the exports at a record level of 98.8 million metric tons of wheat and feed grains, mainly corn.

—Howard W. Hjort, the USDA's chief economist and policy analyst, said no windfall profits will be allowed to exporting companies whose orders were canceled by Carter's action.

Funny-face is odd pig

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Funny-face, the pig with the goat's face and a calf's hooves, won't be winning any ribbons next week at the Midland County Livestock Show.

"He's pretty sorry," said Ken Pruitt, keeper of the six-month-old swine. "He wouldn't even scratch" in a show.

Fact is, this odd pig has a better chance of winning prizes as the best whole-hog sausage or prime pork chops than he does as a blue-ribbon, snorting barrow. He's a cross-Hampshire feeder pig who's bound for the slaughterhouse and will not pass by the livestock show, which will be Sunday, Monday and Tuesday at the Midland County Exhibit Building off U.S. Highway 80 East.

However, some of Pruitt's swine and those pigs which his prime and prized hogs have sired for other pig farmers and for 4-H Club and Future Farmers of America youngsters will make a showing.

Funny-face with the odd "feet" won't.

The Hampshire, if not a mutation, certainly is a conversation piece.

He's got wattles, similar to that of billy goat and rooster, dropping from his pig face.

If that's not strange enough, old pig-face has three solid hooves. One, the left rear, is a cleft hoof — just like a hog's.

Pruitt calls his skittish pig "old sleuth foot."

Pigs, unlike cattle and other bovines with solid hooves, are born with split hooves and, unlike solid-hooved creatures, are deemed "unclean" animals, unfit for human consumption according to the Old Testament laws.

They're not kosher.

And Funny-face is an odd one indeed.

"I never have heard of it before on a pig," Pruitt said of the wattles and solid hooves. "That's unusual." His wife Betty and children Danny, 21, LaVonda, 19, and Mike, 15, have helped him raise thousands of feeder and show pigs in the 15 years he has been into hog producing as an avocation.

Harry "Cob" Coleman, another Midland County hog farmer, viewed old Funny-face "sleuth foot" as a "Jewish Pig" due to his solid hooves "because Jews won't eat anything with a split hoof," noted Pruitt.

"I've talked to a lot of people, and nobody can tell me anything about him," Pruitt said of his odd pig. "He's just freakish, I guess, as far as hogs are concerned."

There's no doubt that Funny-face sleuth foot is an aberration.

Dr. T.D. Tanksley, a swine specialist at the agriculture-oriented Texas A&M University, owns up to that.

"This is very uncommon," the swine professor said of the pig's characteristics. "A lot of range, wild (feral) hogs had" both wattles and solid hooves, he said, but the peculiarities have been bred out.

And "old sleuth foot" apparently is from the "wild" past, is doomed to the sausage grinder and chopping block, and will make a "no show" at the livestock show.

High winds expected

Midlanders may be bracing themselves and property not tied down for stiff winds, which weathermen say will be gusting up to 40 mph this afternoon and tonight.

The southwesterly winds will precede a northern cold front which will drop temperatures, which have been fairly mild lately, into the mid-30s, said a weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

In advance of the front, temperatures were expected to peak into the upper 60s today. The front's winds were to fluctuate between 20 and 30 mph today, with gusts up to 40 mph. Winds will be decreasing to 15 to 25 mph tonight.

The weather service has issued wind warnings on area lakes this afternoon and tonight.

Wednesday's high reading was a comfortable 67 degrees, which was somewhat cooler than the record high of 79 degrees for a Jan. 9 in 1948. The overnight low was 44, and the record low for the date was 5 degrees in 1962.

Sunset today will fall at 6:03 p.m., and sunrise Friday will come at 7:50 a.m.

Oil production at normal levels

HOUSTON (AP) — Oil refinery officials described Gulf Coast operations as calm and quiet, with production at normal levels, despite a walkout by the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union that sparked a rock-throwing confrontation its first day.

Spokesmen for Houston area petrochemical plants said Wednesday afternoon the walkout had not affected production levels in the Texas coast refineries, which employ about 25,000 of the union' 60,000 workers.

"Everything was normal last night (Wednesday)," said Dean Baxter, spokesman for Atlantic Richfield and Arco Pipeline companies. "Things are pretty calm, pretty quiet and pretty normal everywhere."

Baxter said the Arco refinery, now being manned by supervisory personnel, was "at full capacity. We don't foresee any interruptions at all to refinery production or delivery service."

Baxter's sentiments were echoed by Bill Gibson, spokesman for a Shell Oil refinery east of Houston, who praised union employees for their cooperation in turning over plant operations.

Spokesman for other plants said supervisory personnel were having few problems in taking over plant operations from union personnel.

But OCAW spokesman Jerry Archule predicted that problems would soon arise because of the walkout.

"They're (the supevisors) sleeping on cots and working seven-day weeks," he said. "That gets awfully tiring."

"When they're tired, that can mean they can start making mistakes," he said.

Larry Bingaman, Texaco public affairs coordinator for Jefferson County in South Texas, said the situation had eased Wednesday and "plant operations are essentially at normal levels."

Bingaman's comments came in the wake of a minor disturbance Tuesday night at the Texaco refinery in Port Arthur. A group of rock-throwing strikers attempted to stop 17 catering trucks as they entered the plant.

Bingaman said the incident was a "misunderstanding" and that the vans were carrying food for supervisory personnel. No injuries were reported, although there were several other incidents during the night.

Police remained at the plant throughout the evening, "as a precaution for public safety," Bingaman said. No arrests were made.

The strike, which began at 4 p.m. Tuesday, came after talks between the OACW union and Gulf Oil.

The main issue in the strike is health care benefits for union members. The industry has offered to donate only a portion of the health care costs each month. Union leaders and company officials huddled Wednesday, but were unable to reach an agreement.

Both sides agree the walkout will not deplete energy reserves or cause gasoline shortages.

"There are no talks scheduled at a high level," said Archuleta Wednesday. "The president (Robert Goss) ... was unable to make any kind of settlement and the strike is on."

Hearing set on oil spill lawsuits

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge has ordered a May 15 hearing to start untangling the snarl of damage suits from the Mexican oil spill. U.S. District Judge Robert O'Conor said he will hear arguments concerning his jurisdiction in the matter.

The oil spill, from a runaway well in the southern Gulf of Mexico, stained 140 miles of Texas resort beaches in August and September. It brought damage claims from the State of Texas, the U.S. government, South Texas fishermen and area businessmen.

Most of the suits claim damages from Dallas-based SEDCO, which leased equipment to drill the well, and Pemex, the Mexican national oil monopoly.

In reply, SEDCO has filed a two-pronged suit claiming it should be declared free from liability, and that its liability should be limited under maritime law.

The suit claims the drilling rig it leased to Pemex was a seagoing vessel because it floated on a pontoon-supported platform.

O'Conor said he will write a lengthy opinion on his jurisdiction in the suit, including the question of his jurisdiction over Pemex and it's drilling subsidiary, Permargo, after the May arguments.

Pemex owns the Ixtoc I well, and SEDCO leased the rig to Permargo.

SEDCO, founded by Gov. Bill Clements and run by his son, Gil, denies responsibility for the spill.

Justice Douglas still seriously ill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retired Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas remained in very serious condition today, according to officials at Walter Reed Army Medical Center.

Douglas, 81, admitted to the hospital on Christmas Eve with pneumonia, is suffering progressive lung and kidney failure, court spokesman Barrett McGurn reports.

Douglas was forced by a crippling stroke to retire in 1975, after a record 36½ years on the nation's highest court.

NBC closes 'Files' on James Garner

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jim Rockford, the laid-back private eye, undoubtedly will be dragged into one last fray tonight as "The Rockford Files" are closed after a nearly six-year run on NBC.

The illness of star James Garner forced the abrupt cancellation of the series. Its production ended in late November when Garner, 52, was unable to report for work at Universal Studios.

Garner already had said this season would be his last.

The popular Rockford character hated guns and violence but was always being forced into a case when he would have rather gone fishing. He was a little seedy, cut corners, always in trouble with the law, was always getting his car banged up and was a winner only when it came to solving his cases.

"The Rockford Files" was a consistently popular show, although it was seldom in the Top 10 in the ratings. It aired on Friday nights on NBC since September 1974 — although it was once aired briefly on Saturday — and closes out with its first and only Thursday appearance.

NBC had decided some time ago to move the show to Thursday. But beginning next week its time slot will be filled by a new series, "Skag," starring Karl Malden.

Meta Rosenberg, executive producer of "The Rockford Files," said Garner is suffering from a stomach virus, ulcers and sinusitis.

"He had a virus for about two months," she said. "A severe stomach virus. And he worked all the time. He never quit and it debilitated him completely. He got a bad ulcer and sinusitis and he was really sick, just generaliy sick, and the doctor said he had to stop."

After Garner failed to report for work, rumors began to circulate that he was terminally ill.

But a source close to the actor said, "He isn't terminally ill, which is what a lot of people were sort of believing. He is sick. He'll recover, but it'll take some time."

Mrs. Rosenberg said the rumors probably started because Garner had visited the Scripps Medical Center in La Jolla. She said Garner was now resting at his home.

Mrs. Rosenberg said Garner had a contract with NBC for a new series and probably would take a year off before returning in September 1981 with a new show.

1979's food prices worst in five years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices for food and other goods apparently rose more than 12 percent in 1979, the harshest inflation at the wholesale level in five years, sources in and out of government say.

The Producer Price Index, being released today by the Labor Department, was expected to show an increase for December that boosted its growth for the year to the highest level since the 18.3 percent rise in 1974 following the Arab oil embargo.

Prices at the wholesale level rose 9.2 percent in 1978.

Georgia State University, which each month predicts price changes, said its data showed wholesale prices up 0.7 percent in December. Food was unchanged, but non-food items were up 1 percent, it said.

Wholesale prices had risen 1.3 percent in November, Labor Department figures showed.

The Producer Price Index is watched closely because price increases at the wholesale level often show up in a month or two in higher prices at groceries, drug stores and other retail outlets.

Consumer prices have been rising slightly faster than wholesale prices and could show a 1979 increase in excess of 13 percent, or the worst inflation rate since World War II price controls were lifted in 1946.

Conditions in 1974 and 1979 were not dissimilar. An embargo by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, followed by price increases, greatly affected the price of energy products in the United States in 1974. Last year, OPEC members doubled their charges for crude oil, again sending price shocks through the U.S. economy.

The full impact was not passed on to consumers in the mid-1970s because of then-President Richard M. Nixon's price control system. Consumer prices in 1974 rose 12.2 percent.

The Carter administration had hoped to slow the rise in both wholesale and consumer prices with a series of measures that included monetary and budget restraints and voluntary wage and price guidelines.

The guidelines, however, do not cover the components that have pushed prices up the most: food, fuel and housing costs.

Meantime, the housing market began to show the effects of the Federal Reserve's decision Oct. 6 to fight inflation by tightening credit.

Sales of newly constructed single-family homes plunged 13.5 percent in November to an annual rate of 604,000 units, according to a report released Wednesday by the Commerce Department.

It was the sharpest one-month drop since February 1970, when the economy was in a recession, and pushed sales to 25 percent below the level of November 1978, the report showed.

The report also indicated that sales prices were falling.

Eight jurors seated in Ford Pinto trial

WINAMAC, Ind. (AP) — Three more jurors have been selected, bringing to eight the number seated so far in the trial to determine if Ford Motor Co. is criminally liable for a fatal Pinto automobile crash.

Selection of the 12-member panel and three alternates was expected to be completed today, said Pulaski Circuit Court Judge Harold R. Staffelt, who is hearing the case.

Five persons were dismissed Wednesday because they thought the automaker was innocent of the reckless homicide charges stemming from the fiery rear-end collision on a northern Indiana highway in August 1978.

Several other prospective jurors were dismissed because of physical disabilities and previous dealings with attorneys in the case.

Prosecutor Michael A. Cosentino said he was surprised at the number of prospective jurors who said they could not serve. "We hadn't anticipated this at all," he said.

The charges against the No. 2 automaker stem from the deaths of three young women who were fatally burned when their 1973 Pinto sedan exploded in flames after it was rammed by a van. The prosecution contends Ford knew the Pinto fuel tanks were unsafe but failed to protect the public.

The trial was moved to this rural community of 2,400 in April after a judge decided widespread publicity would make it impossible for Ford to receive a fair trial in Elkhart, near the accident scene.

Lions hear music program

A delightful musical program featuring well-known personalities of Midland Community Theatre, Inc., was enjoyed by members of the Downtown Lions Club at their Wednesday noon meeting in the Midland Hilton.

Presenting excerpts from the Broadway musical, "I Do, I Do," were vocalists Sheila Thompson and Pat Baskin, with Shirley Hansen at the piano.

The special program, introduced by Lion Jim Chapman, was arranged by Marty Conine.

Carter will delay 1980 campaigning

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — President Carter might forego personal campaigning until well into the 1980 presidential primary season — even beyond Illinois' March 18 primary — as long as crises continue in Iran and Afghanistan, his national campaign manager says.

Tim Kraft said Wednesday he thinks Democratic voters perceive Carter as working hard to solve the problems — Americans held hostage in Iran and the hardening of U.S.-Soviet relations since Russian troops moved into Afghanistan last month.

The first test of feelings about Carter's recent performance will be in Iowa on Jan. 21, Kraft said, when Democrats hold caucuses to select delegates to the national nominating convention next August.

"My assessment is (Iowa) is a horserace" between Carter and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, Kraft said. "It's too close to call."

Kraft filed Carter's slate of 152 delegates for the Illinois primary with the state Board of Elections on Wednesday. A handful of Kennedy delegates, from areas outside Chicago, also filed, a board spokesman said.

He said many Republican delegate candidates filed during the first day of the filing period, which ends next Wednesday. A new "blind primary" law, allows GOP delegates to keep from disclosing which presidential candidate they support.

Kraft said Carter considers Illinois "a critical state. It's the first major industrial state outside the candidates' home turf."

He said Carter might forego personal campaign trips to early primary states and instead stay near the White House until the Iranians release their captives and the Soviets leave Afghanistan.

"You run a definite political risk in not campaigning personally in those states," Kraft said. "That is an unfortunate possibility."

Despite Carter's failure to so far stump for re-election, Kraft said he doesn't think Iran's religious ruler, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini "has pinned the president in the White House."

Home prices drop; Rise forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans seeking a new home may find some relative bargains right now, as house prices decline in many parts of the nation. But that trend is not expected to last beyond the summer, says the National Association of Realtors.

The median price of an existing, single-family home fell from $56,300 in October to $55,600 in November, the association reports.

The median price of a new house was $63,800 in November, up slightly from October but down from $66,100 in September, the Commerce Department said Wednesday.

Since 1968, the price of a single-family house has risen by 185 percent, the realtors' association says.

"Tight money, declining sales, and sales of smaller homes are directly responsible for the modest decline in prices," said Jack Carlson, executive vice president of the association.

Michael Sumichrast, chief economist for the National Association of Home Builders, said another cause for the price decline could be that during times of tight money, homebuyers turn to loan programs insured by the Federal Housing Administration or guaranteed by the Veterans Administration. Both programs have ceilings on mortgages.

Carlson predicted, "Further modest declines may be recorded during the next few months before housing prices begin to escalate by summer. This means that homebuyers can find bargains both in lower price and more selection during the next six months."

He said the price declines occurred in every region of the country, with the fall-off steepest in the West. Prices there slipped an average of $1,000, followed by a $700 decline in the North Central region, a $300 drop in the Northeast and a $100 decline in the South.

Sales have dropped significantly since October, when the Federal Reserve Board took sweeping action to fight inflation.

In November, the Commerce Department reported, sales of newly built single-family homes plunged 13.5 percent, the sharpest one-month drop in almost a decade. The realtors group said sales of existing homes were off 10.8 percent in November.

The Federal Reserve's tight money policies led to sharply rising mortgage rates, which shut off many people, particularly young adults, from the housing market.

Interest rates have reached 13 percent to 14 percent in many parts of the nation, with mortgage commitments in early December averaging just under 13 percent, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported.

The high mortgage rates deter many people from taking advantage of the unusual lull in house prices.

Still, many experts advise people to buy if they can afford the high rates.

That's because house prices are expected to rise significantly once mortgage rates begin to fall in late 1980, according to many forecasts.

Hines' conviction upheld

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The U.S. 10th Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver, Colo., convicted a Madill motorcycle club leader of federal charges he operated an interstate prostitution ring, an Oklahoma City newspaper reported.

The Thursday edition of the Daily Oklahoman reported that the court issued the opinion upholding the May 1978 conviction of Carl Eugene "Gino" Hines and John Ahern.

Hines, the leader of the "Death Barons" motorcycle club, is in the Carter County Jail in Ardmore. He will stand trial on Feb. 14 on felony assault charges for allegedly attacking Roger S. Taylor, 21, Madill, at the Madill City Hall on July 3, 1979.

The alleged assault on Taylor was cited as an argument to revoke bond during a hearing for Hines in Muskogee last August.

He was denied an appeal bond after he was declared a threat to the community.

Besides the attack, witnesses testified Hines threatened the whole community with arson.

In revoking his $50,000 appeals bond, U.S. District Judge Fred Daugherty said Hines "poses a threat to the community."

Ahern, who is free in lieu of bond pending the outcome of the appeal, is believed to be living in the Dallas, Texas, area.

Southwest, union try to avert strike

DALLAS (AP) — Southwest Airline and union negotiators will try to avert a threatened walkout Sunday by mechanics, cleaners and stock clerks when they meet today in another attempt to reach agreement on a new contract.

However, airline officials said if the negotiations fail there is a strong possibility the workers will strike at 12:01 a.m. Sunday.

The airline is negotiating with the International Association of Machinist and Aerospace Workers, which represents 106 airline employees. The Airline employs about 1,600 persons.

Airline officials hinted any decision to continue limited operations if a strike is called could depend on how many non-IAM workers honor the picket lines.

Southwest President Howard Putnam, in a Jan. 5 letter to employees, said the airline has a contingency plan calling for the operation of "at least 12 planes, all of them 737s."

He said if the plan was implemented nonstriking employees reporting to their normal shifts would be guaranteed their salaries through Feb. 1.

"What happens after that will depend on our loads, the success of our operation and the ability to maintain our aircraft with our smaller staff of management and maintenance people," Putnam said.

He said if the airline was forced to shutdown "nearly all employees will go off the payroll within 48 to 72 hours."

The airline and the union have been negotiating since July to replace the three-year pact that expired Aug. 16.

The negotiations were suspended in mid-December by a federal mediator and a 30-day cooling period went into effect.

Airline officials said they would not try to block the strike in the courts because under provisions of the National Railway Labor Act the union becomes eligible for a work stoppage on Sunday.

Union negotiators have rejected three offers by the company. Southwest's final offer called for hikes in the base pay scales of the three job classifications as additional compensation and benefits. Putnam said the package was worth nearly $1.6 million over three years.

Mr. Blackwell, the designer, released his annual list of the ten worst dressed women, Wednesday. Topping his infamous list was Bo Derek, left, the star of the movie "10." "The love child of the 80s gets a minus 10 for fashion," Blackwell said. Others making the top designer dishonor list were from left: actresses Jill Clayburgh and Loni Anderson; heiress Christina Onassis; and the rock group Blondie's lead singer Deborah Harry. Blackwell says actress Bo Derek should top '10' worst dressed list

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Bo Derek may rate a "10" for her looks but designer Mr. Blackwell says she's a minus figure in fashion — the worst-dressed woman of 1979.

In announcing his annual list of the worst in world fashion Wednesday, Blackwell was asked whether some wouldn't consider Ms. Derek, star of the motion picture "10," beautiful with or without clothes. He replied: "That's true. Then let's take it all off."

He described one of her outfits as "looking like everything had been washed the night before and not ironed."

Blackwell's list also included actress Jill Clayburgh in the No. 2 spot and a variety of entertainment and political figures including San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein, Christina Onassis, rock singer Deborah Harry of Blondie and Princess Margaret.

The list of the 10 worst in order were: Ms. Derek; Ms. Clayburgh; TV star Loni Anderson; Miss Onassis, of whom Blackwell said "she's dressed to check her oil tankers;" Ms. Harry of Blondie, whose attire he called "ten cents a dance with a nickle change;" Dolly Parton; Mayor Feinstein; Princess Margaret; actress Valerie Perrine and actress-model Margaux Hemingway.

Mrs. Feinstein said she was "flattered" to be on the list with such women as Bo Derek and Princess Margaret. She said she dresses to be "practical" and that she wears clothing "that will get me through the day."

Blackwell, whose first name is Richard but who prefers simply "Mr. Blackwell," also noted that in the 20 years since the list was first issued, it has become chic in Hollywood to be named worst-dressed.

"I can't tell you how many women have sent their press agents to us trying to make the list," he said. "If that happens, we take the name off the list."

Mrs. Gandhi returns to Indian Parliament

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Indira Gandhi returned in triumph to the Indian Parliament today and appealed for national reconciliation in a speech to her wildly cheering and applauding supporters.

"We are not small people, we are not petty people," the prime minister-designate said after a landslide election victory that returned her to power as dramatically as she left it 34 months ago.

"We do not think in terms of vendetta and personal vindictiveness," said Mrs. Gandhi, who ordered thousands of her political opponents jailed during the 19 months of emergency rule that capped her previous 11 years in office and led to her ouster in a 1977 election. She has accused her successors of waging a vendetta against her in the form of still pending court cases alleging misconduct in office.

In her speech, Mrs. Gandhi claimed former Prime Minister Morarji Desai's government had shattered India's economy. "We have to pick up the pieces that have all been shattered and broken, and start the battle against injustice and poverty," she said.

The last time the 62-year-old stateswoman appeared in Parliament was December 1978, when she went to the lower house to answer contempt charges involving harassment of officials during the 19-month emergency. After that last appearance she spent a week in jail.

She returned victoriously today, with a two-thirds parliamentary majority, to take command of the Congress Party delegation and receive the formal invitation of President Neelam Sanjiva Reddy to form a new government.

With races for all but one of the 525 parliament seats decided, Mrs. Gandhi's party held 351 votes. Parties loyal to her won another 22 seats, giving her a working total of 372 votes.

India's two communist parties and other leftist groups won 52 seats and several went to minor parties and independents. Another 17 seats in the house will be filled later. Polling in two snowbound counties was put off until the summer and voting was suspended in 15 districts in Assam and Meghalaya states because of violence in which two candidates died.

Guerrilla hundreds stay hidden

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Hundreds of guerrillas remained hidden in mountains, caves and forests today despite warnings they can be shot as outlaws under the Rhodesian cease-fire, British military sources reported.

Rhodesian military commanders said if they spot the guerrillas out of authorized assembly camps they will call on them to give up and join their comrades. "If they don't agree we can zap them," said one commander.

"The combination of a mailed fist and a velvet glove has had quite remarkable success in bringing some very nasty incidents to a happy conclusion," a British source said.

However, most of the 20,000 guerrillas were believed gathered at 16 assembly camps monitored by a five-nation British Commonwealth force, the sources said.

The guerrillas had until midnight Friday to gather at the camps under the cease-fire. The truce, worked out in London, aims to end seven years of war and establish black-majority rule in the British colony.

After the Friday deadline, the holdout guerrillas were deemed outlaws by the British governor, Lord Soames, who is in charge of the cease-fire and will organize elections leading to black-majority rule next month.

A cease-fire commission set up by Soames and comprising British, Rhodesian and guerrilla military chiefs is to rule on truce violations but has has yet to produce a report.

U.S., Turkey initial defense pact

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Turkey and the United States initialed a new defense cooperation agreement today covering U.S. military assistance to Turkey and American operation of five key defense installations for at least five years.

U.S. Ambassador Ronald Spiers and Turkish defense ministry official Faruk Sahinbas initialed the pact and called it "another milestone in Turkish-American relations."

Certain technical details, particularly the status of the bases and the privileges of the American personnel working there, are still to be worked out in a series of agreements the negotiators hope to reach within the next six weeks.

Spiers said he did not foresee any problems hampering conclusion of the remaining agreements. The amount of aid to be given Turkey was not revealed, but Spiers predicted there would be an increase in economic and defense assistance to Turkey above the $450 million granted this year. He said the United States would try to provide "the maximum that we can."

The agreement provides for continued U.S. operation of the air base at Incirlik from which fighter-bombers with nuclear weapons can strike targets in the Soviet Union.

Carter swore change: Khadafy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy says he'll ease up on his anti-American policies this year because President Carter has promised to make "radical" changes in America's policy toward the Middle East, according to a published interview.

Khadafy didn't say how he got the information but said he referred to "almost precise promises" and "not just general statements," according to an interview in today's editions of The Washington Post.

"As I understand, I believe President Carter promised to radically change American policy in the Middle East," Khadafy said.

However, an unnamed high White House official was quoted as saying Carter made "no commitments direct or implied about a radical change in American policy." The official said Carter simply expressed "an interest in improved relations."

The United States and Libya are sharply divided on Mideast policy. Carter helped bring about the Camp David peace accords between Egypt and Israel, which Khadafy opposed. Libya is a leading supporter of the Palestine Liberation Organization and wants Palestinians to take back Israeli occupied territories.

El Salvador junta enlists civilians

SAN SALVADOR, El Salador (AP) — The two colonels heading El Salvador's government enlisted three civilians for their junta and began forming a new Cabinet after eight days of political crisis.

A military spokesman said Hector Dada Hirezi, an engineer, Jose Antonio Morales Ehrlich, a lawyer, and Dr. Jose Ramon Avalos Navarrete were sworn in Wednesday. Dada Hirezi, the foreign minister in the previous Cabinet, and Morales Ehrlich are Christian Democratic Party politicians.

They replaced three civilian junta members — Guillermo Manuel Ungo, Roman Mayorga and Mario Antonio Andino — who quit in protest last week, claiming the government was giving in to "rightist tendencies." Their resignations followed an earlier mass walkout by the Cabinet and several other high-ranking officials.

A government spokesman said a new Cabinet would be formed in 48 hours.

Psychics think ruins may be Cleopatra's palace

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — American psychics believe they have found remains of Cleopatra's palace at the bottom of Alexandria harbor, and their leader, Stephan Schwarz, reports on the discovery at an underseas archeology conference in Albuquerque, N.M., today.

The group, in interviews and press statements in Cairo, said that in the silt at the bottom of the harbor they had found a pillar and the remains of a large house believed to be the palace where Cleopatra won Mark Antony's heart 2,000 years ago.

The psychics said historical documents suggested Alexandria harbor was the site of the palace, and that they worked with the Mobius Group, a research and film outfit from Los Angeles, and four archeologists — three Egyptians and a Pole.

They said they made the find in October after diving in Alexandria's eastern harbor for several months.

Schwarz, in a recent interview, said the group relied on parapsychology techniques to find what apparently were the ruins of the palace complexes of Cleopatra and Mark Antony, plus something related to the Pharos Lighthouse, one of the seven wonders of the ancient world.

He said the psychics studied questionnaires submitted by researchers and then were asked to locate specific sites. Some of the psychics drove around the harbor in cars and boats trying to pinpoint ruins or artifacts, and the group used divers and sonar scanning equipment.

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market exploded in a near-record first hour buying rush Wednesday, but then settled back to digest a mixture of economic news and ended the day with a small loss.

New York Stock Exchange volume rose to 65.26 million shares from 53.39 million Tuesday in the third-busiest day in Big Board history. Opening-hour volume of 20.22 million shares was just below the record of 20.73 million set last Oct. 10.

Although advances held a 2-1 edge over declines on the NYSE, heavy losses among several blue chips pulled the Dow Jones average down by 1.62 points to 850.09. The average had been ahead by more than 7 points earlier in the day.

IBM, up by more than 4 Tuesday, slipped 1⅝ to 65¾, and Texas Instruments lost 1¾ to 94. LTV led the NYSE most-actives and was off ⅛ at 11½, while U.S. Steel fell 1⅜ to 19⅞.

Exxon was off ½ at 19⅞, but Getty rose 1 to 76½. Eastman Kodak fell 1⅛ to 47⅛ after boosting film prices, and Du Pont dropped 1⅛ to 40½. Among aerospace issues Boeing was off 1½ at 56½ and Lockheed was down 2⅜ at 40⅞.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials was up .06 at 122.30; the S&P 500-stock composite index rose .10 to 109.05. The NYSE's composite common-stock index rose .13 to 62.72 and the American Stock Exchange's market value index added .87 to 251.75.

The NASDAQ composite index of the over-the-counter market rose .92 to 151.60.

Market forces seers to explain

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Busines Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Another eruption of stock prices rocked Wall Street this week, forcing analysts and commentators to go fishing in their grab-bag of reasons why. Never be at a loss for words is their motto.

Among the explanations they chose were these:

It was a reaction to an almost certain rise in defense spending; it was the new year rally a bit delayed; it resulted from a Commerce Department report that the recession had not yet arrived.

The favorite catchall also was called into service. The rally, it was explained, was one of those periodic occurrences of mass insight in which "the public" somehow decided that stocks were undervalued.

And why did the public so decide? Well, said an analyst-promoter, that old stock market just couldn't be floored by $600-an-ounce gold or $34-a-barrel oil or 13 percent inflation or 15 percent interest rates. And when the public saw how rugged and determined it was they just knew they had a real battler out there and they threw in their support.

That's what "the public" did? Really? Why you cannot even get "the public" defined on Wall Street. It is, you might say, as fuzzy a concept as "Wall Street," which can stand for sellers or buyers or speculators or stock exchanges or bankers or the power structure.

Wall Street likes to think it represents Main Street. It loves to refer to the "buying public," which in turn suggests a cross-section of America, of individual buyers, sellers and decision-makers. "The public" is something the public thinks it understands.

The public that people think they understand, however, may have less to do with stock prices than many in the brokerge community like to admit. Individual ownership is down in the past decade; institutional ownership is up.

That switch probably explains more about this week's market than the attitudes of middle America or the threat of war or the perception of stocks as undervalued. Institutions must invest or get buried in cash.

Cash, of course, isn't healthy today for a very good reason: So long as inflation persists — and the forecasts are that it will — the value of cash authomatically falls. That is, unless it earns an extrordinary rate of interest. The temptation is always there to invest in stocks.

It is especially true for pension funds, which have the enormous burden of wisely investing the millions and billions of dollars that pour in on them. Pension funds are huge and constantly growing.

All institutions — pension funds, mutual funds, bank-administered trusts, and insurance companies — are set up to invest big blocks of stocks, and they do so almost as a matter of course. The big decision is not so much whether to invest as when to invest. It is a decision of timing.

Since they invest large amounts at a time, and since they must demonstrate to regulators that they are prudent investors, their list of possibilities is reduced. Reduced to a select number of companies — some say 50, others 100, and some 200 — that are large enough to absorb their purchases and solid enough to justify the choice.

There is another characteristic of institutions: They have a tendency to roam in packs. They stick together. They look over each other's shoulder. When one acts the other is likely to do so rather than be left in the lurch. And that can happen; institutional-size blocks of stock can often move prices higher or lower in short order.

White says Ector judge can't quit juvenile post

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Attorney General Mark White has issued an opinion that the judge of the Ector County Court at Law may not resign his position as judge of the county juvenile court.

White ruled that a 1959 statute establishes the Ector County Court at Law judge as the juvenile judge. He also ruled that a 1973 statute allowing the county commissioners to designate one or more juvenile courts does not replace the earlier statute.

"The Ector County Court at Law continues to constitute at least one of the juvenile courts of the county and, as a result, the judge of that court may not resign his position as judge of the juvenile court," White said in his opinion.

Entire coast may be hit

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Mexican crews have seven weeks to stop the runaway Ixtoc I well before it may be too late to avoid a repeat of last summer's oil spill along Texas beaches, say U.S. Coast Guard officials and scientists.

And if the oil starts washing ashore this summer, it could plague the entire Texas coast through mid-September, experts said Wednesday.

"If we get beyond March 1 and the well is not capped, there's a reasonable possibility of oil," Dr. John Robinsoh of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration told a news conference.

"By May or June (with the well uncapped) it's alsmost certain to return," he said.

Robinson and other members of an interagency team met to discuss strategy and compare notes on when to expect more oil from the cantankerous well in the Bay of Campeche.

Since the well blew out June 3, at least 100 million gallons of thick crude oil have poured into the Gulf of Mexico. Some 140 miles of Texas beaches between Brownsville and Corpus Christi caught were stained by oil in August and September.

U.S. Coast Guard Capt. Gerald Hinson, head of the anti-spill team, said he is planning for the worst.

"We're re-establishing a command post in Corpus Christi, beefing up staff, preparing to enlist contractors for clean up work and will be staging Navy equipment used last summer against the spill at four locations," Hinson said.

Lack of information from Mexico on well site operations makes it difficult to pinpoint when to expect a return of tarballs, thick sludge and light oil to the coast, the team said.

Attempts at capping the well with a giant steel cone, plugging it with metal balls or killing it with relief wells have failed.

Hinson said he hoped Texas Gov. Bill Clements is right in saying the well should be shut off within two or threw weeks. But the Coast Guard official said he had no way of knowing if that was true.

"We haven't been able to determine the rate of flow but whatever it is, the quantity surfacing is significant," he said.

Pemex, Mexico's national oil monopoly, claims to have reduced the spill to 2,000 barrels a day. But U.S. observers say the figure could be as high as 50,000 barrels daily.

There is no oil threatening Texas waters now. Offshore currents in the Gulf of Mexico have helped push any unwanted petroleum away from Texas this winter.

But Robinson said those currents gradually will reverse this spring and by April could start drawing oil back to land.

Scientists do not know extent of possible harm to wildlife from the oil. But early reports show little oil seeped into the Laguna Madre, in inland bay used as breeding ground and home for many fish, birds and other animals.

215 oil, gas tests announced last week in Basin counties

Two hundred and fifteen oil and gas projects were staked last week in the Permian Basin of West Texas and southeast New Mexico.

Seventy-four of the locations were spotted in wildcat areas, while the other 141 were staked in proven field areas.

Forty-one of the wildcats were staked in District 7C of the Railroad Commission of Texas. The San Angelo headquarters for the district said 11 of the wildcats were spotted in Runnels County, with eight going to Reagan. Schleicher County gaines seven wildcats. The other District 7C explorers were staked in Coke, 5; Irion and McCulloch, four each, and Tom Green 2.
