White House ends border fence project

Homeland Security Secretary Napolitano: There is no 'one-size-fits-all' solution

By Stewart M. Powell
Houston Chronicle

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration on Friday canceled the long-troubled, high tech invisible fence project along the U.S.-Mexico border, ending a five-year pilot program that President George W. Bush once envisioned stretching along most of the nation's 1,969-mile southern border.

Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano said technology gleaned from the 53-mile project in Arizona would be used to continue developing a flexible high tech border security network that relies on agents from the U.S. Border Patrol, some 700 miles of pedestrian and vehicle fencing and aerial surveillance by unmanned drones.

"There is no 'one-size-fits-all' solution to meet our border technology needs, and this new strategy is tailored to the unique needs of each border region, providing faster deployment of technology, better coverage, and a more effective balance between cost and capability," Napolitano said.

Napolitano briefed key members of Congress on the decision, which she telegraphed months ago by ordering a year-long review of the project and by shifting the nearly $1 billion effort to a month-to-month contract.

The Bush administration had once expected to extend the Boeing Co.'s pilot project along much of the U.S.-Mexico border, using remote cameras, ground sensors and overhead surveillance to help U.S. Border Patrol agents intercept undocumented immigrants, drug smugglers and potential terrorists trying to sneak across the border.

Rep. Peter King, R-N.Y., chairman of the House Committee on Homeland Security, said he understood the Obama administration's decision to curtail a project that had suffered delays, technical problems and cost overruns. But King complained that it had taken too long for Napolitano to make a final decision.

"I continue to have very serious concerns about the Obama administration's lack of urgency to secure the border," said King.

FIRE DESTROYS HOME

Roger Primera/Special to the Reporter-Telegram

A family of at least five is displaced after their Midland County mobile home was destroyed in a fire late Friday afternoon.The fire started around 4 p.m. at the home in the 4700 block of South County Road 1180. Fire crews said about half of the home was burned while the other half suffered severe smoke damage. No one was home when the fire began, but Midland County Fire Marshal Dale Little said he believes it was started by an electrical short from an extension cord connected to a freezer on the back porch. The estimated 30-foot-by-40-foot trailer caught fire on the outside when the flames went up to the top of the roof. Neighbors called the home-owners to report the fire. Little said there are other homes on the same property and the family will stay with relatives. The Red Cross was on the scene to help, authorities said.

UTPB course to address energy issues

■ Students will learn how to develop, market plan for the use of alternative energy.

By Tony Waggoner
Staff Writer

ODESSA — In effort to address one of the nation's fastest-growing professional fields, the University of Texas of the Permian Basin is offering an energy management course this semester.

This is the second time the course has been offered. Because of the popularity of the first class in 2008, Anshu Saran, assistant professor and marketing coordinator, said the university is bringing back the class this semester.

With oil prices peaking in 2008, Saran said there was a perceived shortage of energy and a need for people in the field who could manage and help find alternative energy sources. The university developed a variety of energy-related courses as a response.

The inaugural class proved to be quite successful, with around 35 students enrolled, Saran said.

More than 40 students are enrolled this semester to learn about marketing non-traditional and traditional energy sources. Saran, who is teaching the course, said topics would range from nuclear energy and

Justin Lynn Brewster

Justin Lynn Brewster, age 30, born on April 2, 1980 in Hobbs, New Mexico, died January 10, 2011 in Midland County.

Justin moved to Midland with his family when he was 8 years old and was a 1999 graduate of Midland High School. He worked for Enertech Industries of Odessa, was a Bulldog and Texas Tech fan and past volunteer with Midland Citizens Fire Academy Alumni Association, a passion he enjoyed sharing with his mother and step dad. Justin was a member of Valley View Baptist Church and also attended Stonegate Fellowship.

Justin and Alisa Brewster were married October 16, 2010 in Midland.

Anyone that knew Justin knew he was always the first person anyone called when they needed help. Justin accepted a challenge few fathers can or will, being a single father to Faith and Bryce. They were his pride and joy and he took his parenting seriously. He could braid a ponytail better than most mothers. He had enough love as a father to extend equal love to his stepchildren: Kambri, Kaleb and Haley. Justin was a wonderful son, grandson, brother, father and husband and his family takes comfort in knowing he is walking by His side and is dancing for His Jesus.

Justin is survived by his wife, Alisa Brewster; his children, Faith and Bryce Brewster and stepchildren, Kambri, Kaleb and Haley; mother, Debby Sifuentes (Ruben) of Midland; brother, Darrell Brewster (Erika) of Odessa; "sister", Mollie Shelton of Hico; grandmother, Juanita West of Midland; aunt, Pamala Stricker of Oklahoma; and numerous nieces, nephews, and cousins. Justin was preceded in death by his father, Larry Brewster; grandparents, Roy West, Warren Winslett, Margie and Marvin Brewster; and uncle, Ken Dutton.

Funeral services will be held today, January 15th at 3:00 p.m. at Lewallen-Garcia-Pipkin Funeral Home. Services will be conducted by Bro. Robert Frazier, pastor of Valley View Baptist Church and Justin's cousin, Bro. Burl Stricker of Hobart, Oklahoma. Internment will be at Resthaven North.

Justin lost his father when he was 20 years old and he honored his father by designing and drawing the art that graces his father's headstone and will be buried next to his father. Pallbearers will be Johny Robertson, Kevin Shelton, Bogar Benavidides, Bill Horne, Trevis Jones and Carrol Dority.

Charitable donations may be made to Midland Citizens Fire Academy Alumni Association, 1500 W. Wall, Midland, TX 79701 or to a favorite charity.

Come to me all you who are weary and burdened and I will give you rest. Matthew 11:28.

Texans pay thousands for license plates at auction

By Jamie Stengle
Associated Press

Associated Press

HOT PLATES Auctioneer Matt Blevins calls for bids as Dallas Cowboys Cheerleader Jordan Chanley, right, holds the "Cowboys" license plate being auctioned at Cowboys Stadium Thursday in Arlington. The winning bid for the vanity plate was $11,500 by Nina Humrichouse, of Dallas.

ARLINGTON — Adam Richey hadn't really thought about getting a license plate reading RANGERS until seeing an ad about two weeks ago for an auction for 33 personalized plates.

The idea grew on the Dallas man, and the Texas Rangers season ticketholder was able to buy it for $10,000 at a Thursday night auction held at Cowboys Stadium.

The auction marked the first time Texans could get a personalized plate with a full seven-character personalization. The buyers earn the right to the words on the plates for 25 years — a first in the state — after which they can pay to renew that right.

A custom Texas license plate bearing the word FERRARI drew the biggest bid at $15,000. The other big winners carried nods to sports teams. COWBOYS sold for $11,500 and GO HORNS went for $10,500.

Proceeds from the auction held by My Plates, an Austin-based company Texas has chosen to market and sell some specialty plates, will be shared by the state and the company, with the percentage of the split depending on the price of the plate. The state's cut of the auction plates ranged from 50 to 65 percent.

Kicking off the event, auctioneer Matt Blevins, clad in jeans, boots and a cowboy hat, told the crowd of several hundred, "We encourage you tonight to do this event big and do it Texas-style."

Darryl Roberts, 49, of Weatherford, snagged the GO HORNS plate, saying afterward, "My wife's going to shoot me."

He said he'd thought the tag would go for around $5,000, but he continued to bid when the price crept up: "My buddies kept egging me on," said Roberts, a lifelong fan of the University of Texas Longhorns.

2 county officials indicted in nursing case

Associated Press

KERMIT — Two county officials involved in the unsuccessful prosecution of two whistle-blowing nurses have been indicted.

Winkler County Sheriff Robert Roberts and County Attorney Scott Tidwell were indicted Thursday on charges of misuse of official information, retaliation and official oppression. Misuse of official information and retaliation are third-degree felonies and carry prison terms of between two and eight years.

The charges stem from the prosecution of nurses Anne Mitchell and Vicki-lyn Galle. They were charged with misuse of information after they complained to state regulators about a physician. Mitchell was acquitted. The charges against Galle were dropped.

The indictments allege that Roberts and Tidwell obtained the non-public complaints through deception and subjected the nurses to retaliation and unlawful detention and arrest.

Constable enters guilty plea; case dismissed

■ 'Choc' Harris to retire, permanently surrender peace officer's license.

By Kathleen Thurber
Staff Writer

A senior district judge on Friday signed a motion to dismiss a case against Constable Charles "Choc" Harris in exchange for a misdemeanor guilty plea and the surrender of Harris' peace officer's license.

Harris pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of interference with the public duties of a peace officer. He will serve a deferred adjudication term of six months probation and pay a fine and court fees totaling $472, said Brazos County District Attorney Bill Turner, who was appointed to handle the case.

Senior District Judge Jay Gibson, of Odessa, signed the order in Midland's 142nd District Court on Friday afternoon.

As part of the deal that allowed felony charges against Harris to be dropped, the Midland County Precinct 2 constable agreed to permanently relinquish his peace officer's license by today.

After deciding to enter the plea during a pre-trial hearing in December, Harris submitted a resignation letter to the county indicating he will retire from his post effective Jan. 31. He has served as a constable since 1999.

Harris was indicted by a grand jury in July on felony charges of tampering with government records and falsifying documents. The charges stemmed from an investigation by the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Officer Standards & Education into Harris' appointment of Mat McClure and Paul Paget as reserve deputy constables.

McClure and Paget both had had a break in service between their previous duties as peace officers and their appointment by Harris, Turner said.

That being the case, they were required to pass drug screenings, weapons qualifications tests and psychological exams before allowed to work again, Turner said.

In his submission of documents to TCLOSE, Harris certified that all three requirements had been met by McClure and Paget when Paget hadn't met any of the parameters and McClure hadn't finished his weapons qualification test, Turner said.

"The allegation was the way he conducted himself interfered with the (TCLOSE) executive director's ability to assure quality control of his deputy constables," Turner said.

Harris previously said he simply failed to file the proper paperwork and he wasn't intentionally trying to break the law.

Turner said in the plea deal, the state was looking at the overall impact to Harris. Because Harris had to give up his career when he surrendered his peace officer's license, Turner said they felt the misdemeanor plea still had a significant impact on Harris' life.

Through his deferred adjudication, if Harris completes his probation, the charges will be dropped.

Turner was appointed to the case by Judge Robin Malone Darr after Midland County District Attorney Teresa Clingman recused herself citing her long acquaintance with Harris.

Midland County commissioners terminated the reserve deputy constable program in May.

County Judge Mike Bradford had said the investigation was between Harris and the state. The county didn't bring any action against Harris and had not asked him to resign, Bradford said.

WHERE IN THE WORLD?

Lizabelle Russell answers questions on geography Friday as she and other Midland Classical Academy students compete in the preliminary level of the 2011 National Geographic Bee. The winner was fourth-grader Philip Cimpean. On Monday night he is scheduled to take the National Geographic exam to determine if he qualifies for the state competition, which is April 1 in Dallas. The top 100 scorers on the exam advance to the state contest. State winners will compete in the national bee, which is in May in Washington, D.C. It is hosted by Alex Trebek from "Jeopardy."

legal aspects of the industry to energy production and how the use of technology affects energy production.

About 50 percent of a student's grade would be based upon a marketing project. Students will learn how to develop and market a plan for the use of an alternative source of energy, such as solar energy, Saran said.

He expects many of the students who enroll already are working in the field and are looking to continue their education. They possibly might receive a certificate of completion of the courses, he said.

Saran isn't surprised industry personnel are interested in the class.

"The world is looking for renewable sources of energy, apart from oil and gas, and we in the Permian Basin are at the epicenter of the energy business in the country," Saran said.

For those students not already in the field, Saran said the class should provide a gateway to knowing and possibly working in the industry, as more and more jobs become available.

"There is a lot of demand for energy," he said. "We see a lot of jobs for energy personnel, and it needs to be managed with the limited supply growth we have."

Given UTPB is located right in the middle of what Saran called the epicenter of the energy business, more classes soon are to be offered. While the university does not offer a degree related to the energy business, it does offer courses such as energy accounting, energy finance and energy law. Six different UTPB professors teach the courses, Saran said.

Energy management is offered 7:05 p.m.-8:20 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday from at UTPB.

Late registration for the spring semester at UTPB ends Wednesday.

Man arrested for throwing woman out of car

From staff reports

A 41-year-old man was arrested early Friday morning after police issued an arrest warrant for allegedly pushing a disabled woman and her wheelchair out of his car on Thursday.

William Rhynes was found in a stolen car in El Paso. He is suspected to have pushed Stacye Cerda, 32, and her wheelchair out of the moving vehicle around 11 a.m. Thursday when the two got into an argument in the 800 block of North Fairgrounds Road, according to a release from the Midland Police Department.

Upon investigation, Midland police found Rhynes also is a convicted sex offender from Florida and Mississippi. While in Midland, police said he's been working as a tree trimmer and is suspected to have taken money for landscaping jobs without ever performing the work.

After being pushed from the car, Cerda was transported to Midland Memorial Hospital where she was treated for minor injuries and released, according to the release.

The warrant for Thursday's incident is for a third-degree felony charge of injury to a disabled person, the release says. Rhynes is being held on a $10,000 bond in El Paso.

He also is charged with unauthorized use of a motor vehicle for which a $30,000 bond has been set.

BOYFRIEND

the teen Dec. 27. According to police, Dunn said Adkins told her Hailey said she was walking to her father's home nearby and then to a friend's house where she was spending the night. The middle school cheerleader did not arrive at either location.

Colorado City's city manager, Pete Kampfer, said Friday that Adkins still is among several people of interest in the investigation but declined to offer details about any others. No one has been arrested in the case.

Kampfer, who is serving as Colorado City's police spokesman on the case, said several law enforcement agencies are actively searching for the teen, including police, the Texas Rangers and FBI.

"They assure me they check out every lead," Billie Dunn told the AP on Friday. "They're not just looking at him (Adkins). Anything could have happened.

"But I don't feel like they're getting anywhere with anything," she said. "It's been 18 days."

Dunn has denied any involvement in her daughter's disappearance. She said she asked Adkins to move out of their home Jan. 5.

"When I asked him to leave the house, he was just crying a lot, saying 'You know me. You know I love you and David,'" Hailey's 16-year-old brother, Dunn said. "'You know that I would never hurt you.'"

Dunn said Friday she had not exchanged text messages with Adkins in a few days.

Adkins told the AP he loves Hailey and that his life has been "flipped upside down" since her disappearance.

"I struggle so hard just to make it through the day," he said. "I can't begin to imagine what Hailey's family, especially her parents and brother are going through."

Adkins said police have misquoted him in affidavits.

In one, police said Adkins at first was "very positive" about Hailey, but that as time went on he indicated she was promiscuous and used drugs. Adkins denied that Friday. He said he had told police Billie and Hailey Dunn had discussed birth control and that he had told investigators the teen was "boy crazy."

Her father, Clint Dunn, has said Hailey is popular, isn't into boys or drugs and "she's just a good ol' American girl."

Another affidavit said police disputed Adkins' assertion that he went straight to visit his mother in Big Spring, some 40 miles west of Colorado City, after he left work at 6:10 a.m. on Dec. 27. Police said cell phone records indicated he had been in Colorado City between 6:35 a.m. and 6:56 a.m.

On Friday he again said he had gone straight to his mother's house that day.

More than 100 billboards featuring Hailey's picture, information about the case and a law enforcement phone number have been set up along interstates in West Texas and elsewhere. The girl is described as white, 5-foot-1, 120 pounds, with hazel eyes and brown hair with blondish streaks.

Dunn said it's been a difficult time.

"I don't know whether she's safe, I don't know whether she's hurt," Dunn said. "I don't know if she's somewhere wondering, 'Why hasn't my mom found me?' That's the hardest.

She said she also wanted people to know her daughter is more than "the cheerleader," noting Hailey also plays volleyball, basketball and softball and is a first chair saxophone player in the school band.

FENCE

From 1A

Rep. Bennie Thompson, D-Miss., the former chairman of the House panel and a leading critic of the Bush administration's plan for a "virtual fence," called the project "a grave and expensive disappointment since its inception."

Sen. Joe Lieberman, I-Conn., outgoing chairman of the Senate's Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee, said the invisible fence "spent far too much of the taxpayers' money for the results it delivered."

Napolitano said revamped border security would use "existing, proven technology tailored to the distinct terrain and population density of each border region" as well as "already existing elements of the former program that have proven successful."

The administration sought to underscore that the end of the project did not signal an end to enhanced border security. It issued a statement that recounted "historic levels of personnel, technology and resources to the Southwest border," including 20,500 U.S. Border Patrol personnel — twice the number in 2004.

Immigration and Customs Enforcement has increased the number of federal agents with one quarter of its personnel currently in the region. And President Obama has deployed 1,200 National Guard troops at federal expense to the Southwest border to contribute to assist law enforcement agencies.

Midland man sentenced to federal prison

Odessa American

A Midland man arrested last spring in West Richland, Wash., was sentenced Thursday to a year and a half in federal prison for failing to register as a sex offender after he traveled between states.

U.S. District Judge Rob Junell also sentenced Jared Anthony Morrison to 16 years of supervised release.

Morrison pleaded guilty in May 2004 to sexual assault of a child. He was placed on nine years probation and was required to register as a sex offender.

Morrison

He was extradited to Midland along with his twin brother, Jason Heath Morrison, after they were caught sleeping in a van in West Richland in front of a house facing foreclosure, according to court documents.

Jason Morrison is expected to plead guilty Friday before U.S. Magistrate Judge David Counts, according to court documents, to attempted conspiracy to commit mail fraud in connection with an alleged real-estate scheme, as well as failure to register as a sex offender.

Company had wrong ID on Dallas City Hall photo

Associated Press

DALLAS — A photography studio is taking the blame for a misidentified mayoral picture hanging at Dallas City Hall.

A December visitor to city hall said the photo, in honor of former Mayor Woodall Rodgers, wasn't him.

Rodgers served as mayor from 1939 to 1947. He died in 1961.

Relatives of construction company magnate Henry C. Beck Jr. on Wednesday confirmed he was the person in the mislabeled photo.

The Dallas Morning News reported Friday, that Gittings photography provided the picture in about 1992 with a label indicating the person was Rodgers.

Gittings manager Barry Benton says the company, which does corporate photos as part of its business, is working to replace the incorrect image.

Obama to ease Cuba travel restrictions

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — President Barack Obama plans to loosen Cuban travel policy to allow students and church groups to go to the communist country, the administration announced Friday.

Students seeking academic credit and churches traveling for religious purposes will be able to go to Cuba. The plan also will let any American send as much as $500 every three months to Cuban citizens who are not part of the Castro administration and are not members of the Communist Party.

Also, more airports will be allowed to offer charter service. Right now, only three airports — in Miami, Los Angeles and New York City — can offer authorized charters to Cuba. That will be expanded to any international airport with proper customs and immigration facilities as long as licensed travel agencies ask to run charters from the airport.

On Friday, one Florida airport already was taking steps to offer service to Cuba.

"This is great news from an international air service development standpoint," Tampa International Airport CEO Joe Lopano said in a news release. "We will begin meeting with air charter companies and working with the Federal Authorities to make sure we meet all requirements for these Cuba flights."

Ophiuchus? Horoscopes may never be the same

By Stephanie Lee
Albany Times Union

Just yesterday, you were energetic and impulsive. Today, you may merely be dependable and loyal.

Horoscope readers who considered themselves sensitive Pisces found out they may actually be inventive Aquarians when an astronomer announced this week that the 12-sign zodiac chart, ranging from Capricorn to Sagittarius, is off-kilter.

The ancient Babylonians based zodiac signs on the constellation the sun was "in" — or aligned with — on a person's day of birth. Since then, the moon's gravitational pull has caused the Earth to "wobble" around its axis, ultimately forging a roughly one-month bump in the stars' alignment.

As a result, "when (astrologers) say that the sun is in Pisces, it's really not in Pisces," Parke Kunkle, a board member of the Minnesota Planetarium Society, told the Minnesota Star-Tribune on Sunday. Kunkle, who called attention to the situation, teaches astronomy at Minneapolis Community and Technical College.

A story in the Star-Tribune sparked an Internet frenzy of discussion, even though a cursory web search revealed those in certain circles have been aware of it for years.

Based on where the stars are currently aligned, the revised chart makes room for a thirteenth sign — Ophiuchus, which spans birthdays from Nov. 29 to Dec. 17.

No one knows quite what this rogue new character has in mind for those born under its influence, who have been uprooted and shuffled without their consent, like marbles.

Whatever its personality traits are, and however you pronounce it — one stargazer's guide offers "OFF-ee-YOO-kuss" — New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo, born Dec. 6, 1957, is one of them. It remains to be seen how the Ophiuchus alignment will affect New York's destiny.

In a former life — that is, three days ago — Sean Maguire, who turned 33 on Dec. 12, was a Sagittarius, a sign described as being stubborn.

"Now that I'm not stubborn anymore," said the reluctant Ophiuchus, who works for New York's Department of State, "I've got to figure out what I really am."

For astrologers who pride themselves on their ability to pry meaning from the constellations, the new zodiac chart would seem to present potentially devastating implications.

How can a reading for, say, a Taurus hold true if the Taurus is now — or has been all along — an Aries?

But Rob Brezsny, an astrologer, says that modern Western astrologers perfectly understand the Minnesota Planetarium Society's point. It's simply irrelevant to their work.

"The information upon which they base their hypotheses does not involve a study of distant stars or constellations," he said in an e-mail. Rather, astrologers focus on the movements of the planets in the immediate solar system — and so, Brezsny says, the conventional 12-sign chart remains valid.

Jacqueline Bigar, who writes a daily horoscope column that is syndicated in the Albany Times Union, says astrologers around the globe are "probably laughing their fanny off" at the announcement.

And Arlene DeAngelus, an astrologer who has seen an estimated 5,000 clients over three decades, says she isn't convinced by the 13-sign chart. "I would need to see some very good examples of them being accurate before I change mine," she said.

In the evening sky, Ophiuchus consists of a vaguely house-shaped cluster of stars attached to a protruding line of other stars, according to a website about constellations compiled by Arnold Lesikar, a professor emeritus at St. Cloud State University in Minnesota.

This formation, Lesikar writes, apparently represents Asclepius, known in Greek mythology as the "serpent bearer" or the god of healing, since the shedding of his snake skin symbolizes rebirth.

Astrology has never made much sense to Heidi Newberg, a professor of physics and astronomy at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute (and a Sagittarius-turned-Scorpio).

"I don't know of any reason that the positions of the stars themselves would make any difference to someone's life path," said Newberg, who turned 45 on Nov. 23. She added, "I think that most horoscopes are good advice no matter which month you're born in."

Perhaps, as some have pointed out, the most unfortunate victims of this star-crossed change are those with zodiac tattoos inked into their skin.

At Lark Tattoo in Albany, N.Y., cashier Carly Robinson said no customers have requested to conceal their birth-inspired body art — yet.

"Up until now, it's definitely something that you never would think you'd have to change. It's not like a name of a boyfriend or a girlfriend, it's definitely something you can be pretty secure in," she said. "Now, not so much."

Gun fair organizer acquitted in boy's Uzi death

SPRINGFIELD — A gun fair organizer was acquitted of manslaughter and other charges Friday in the 2008 death of an 8-year-old boy who accidentally shot himself in the head with an Uzi at a machine gun expo.

A Hampden Superior Court jury found former Pelham, Mass., Police Chief Edward Fleury not guilty of involuntary manslaughter and three counts of furnishing machine guns to minors in the death of Christopher Bizili, of Ashford, Conn. The charges carry up to 50 years in prison.

Fleury's firearms training company co-sponsored the annual Machine Gun Shoot and Firearms Expo at the Westfield Sportsman's Club, about 10 miles west of Springfield. Christopher was shooting a 9 mm micro Uzi at pumpkins on Oct. 26, 2008, when the gun kicked back and shot him in the head. The jury was shown a graphic video of the accident, taken by the boy's father, that led to a collective gasp in the courtroom.

Man used Facebook to hack women's e-mails

SACRAMENTO — In a cautionary tale for users of social-networking sites, a California man has admitted using personal information he gleaned from Facebook to hack into women's e-mail accounts, then send nude pictures of them to everyone in their address book.

The California attorney general's office said Friday that George Bronk, 23, commandeered the e-mail accounts of dozens of women in the U.S. and England. He then scanned the women's "sent" folders for nude and seminude photos and videos and forwarded any he found to all the women's contacts, prosecuters said.

Bronk coerced one woman into sending him more explicit photographs by threatening to distribute the pictures he already had. One victim told authorities the intrusion felt like "virtual rape."

Bronk pleaded guilty Thursday to seven felonies in Sacramento County Superior Court.

New RNC head Priebus a driven, lifelong Republican

By Todd Richmond
Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. — It's hard to be much more Republican than Reince Priebus.

A member of the College Republicans at the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater, he rose through the state party ranks through a combination of smarts and sheer willpower. And his first date with his future wife was a Lincoln Day dinner.

The party devotion paid off Friday when the national GOP picked the tenacious 38-year-old Kenosha native as its chairman.

"I'm not surprised to be sitting here in 2011 with him just getting elected chairman," said Brian Schimming, the state GOP's first vice-chairman who has known Priebus for nearly 20 years. "When Reince decides to do something, he's all in. And he was all in on this."

Born and raised in Kenosha, Priebus graduated from the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater in 1994 and worked as a legislative clerk for the state Assembly's Education Committee.

He earned a law degree from the University of Miami, graduating with honors in 1998. He joined the firm Michael, Best & Friedrich in Milwaukee, where he specializes in corporate litigation. The Milwaukee Business Journal in 2008 named him one of Milwaukee's 40 Under 40, an honor the publication bestows on up-and-coming community leaders.

Priebus married his high school sweetheart, Sally, in 1999, according to a Miami alumni update. They still live in Kenosha with their son and daughter.

Priebus served as chair of the Kenosha County GOP and ran for state Senate in 2004, eventually losing to incumbent Democrat Bob Wirch.

In 2007 he was elected state GOP chairman while still in his early 30s.

Most of his tenure was spent trying to rebuild the party's morale after Republicans lost control of the state Senate in 2006 and the Assembly in 2008, giving state government over to Democrats after Gov. Jim Doyle won re-election.

Other Republicans say Priebus kept the party from fracturing, traveling statewide to recruit candidates, raise money and sometimes just be a cheerleader.

"Four years ago, there wasn't a lot of hope around for Republicans," Schimming said. "Part of that leadership (was) going out, county to county, community to community, encouraging the troops, raising money and giving people hope. He is not a stranger to 18-hour days."

Priebus continued to work the state hard ahead of the 2010 election, visiting nearly every GOP campaign headquarters in Wisconsin, said state GOP Executive Director Mark Jefferson.

"He could be found in any one of those offices, giving pep talks to volunteers, telling people to keep their chin up and keep pushing toward the goal," Jefferson said.

It paid off. Republicans won the governor's office in November, along with majorities in both the state Assembly and Senate.

U.S. Sen. Ron Johnson credited Priebus with helping him knock off Sen. Russ Feingold, Wisconsin's heavyweight Democratic incumbent who'd been seen as a strong favorite early in the campaign season.

"With no previous political experience, I had to have a trusted confidant to rely upon and a strong state party organization that enabled my campaign to reach deeply into the grass roots," Johnson wrote in a Thursday letter endorsing Priebus for the RNC position. "Reince provided both."

Darrin Schmitz, a consultant to Priebus' RNC campaign, said Priebus "is very well known for being able to pull people together from different factions and coalitions and make sure they're rowing in the same direction."

Even state Democratic Party Chairman Mike Tate said he respected Priebus, high praise in an era of bitter political rhetoric.

"I've spent a lot of time with him in green rooms and before debates," Tate said. "I really like Reince. We have a very cordial relationship."

The newest challenges facing Priebus are formidable. The national party is $22 million in debt, tea party followers are trying to pull the GOP further to the right and he must figure out how to beat President Barack Obama in 2012.

Schimming said Priebus can do it.

"He's as driven as he is sharp," Schimming said. "You get people who ... drive the effort just by the force of their will. And that's Reince."

Federal judge mourned as fair jurist, family man

By Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. — The federal judge killed in the Arizona shooting rampage was known for an immigration ruling that got him death threats, but on Friday he was remembered as a man devoted to his family, his basset hounds and his Irish-Catholic heritage.

U.S. District Judge John Roll had stopped by a supermarket meet-and-greet for Rep. Gabrielle Giffords on Saturday when he was killed, along with five others. Giffords, recovering from a gunshot wound to the head, was still in critical condition, but progressing.

Documents released Friday showed that shooting suspect, Jared Loughner, 22, bought bullets at a Walmart, posted "Goodbye friends" on the Internet and took photographs of himself partially clothed and holding a gun.

Roll's funeral Friday came amid tight security, as police officers and SWAT team members patrolled the neighborhood around St. Elizabeth Ann Seton church. About a dozen coach buses brought judges who knew Roll over the years.

The speakers focused less on Judge Roll and more on John Roll, tender and at times goofy, and largely hidden from those he served.

It made it very personal," said Caryl Bahill, 61, whose husband knew Roll from his undergraduate and law school days at the University of Arizona. "You do feel like you knew something about him personally."

The news media were barred from the event at the request of Roll's family and for security reasons. The Associated Press interviewed mourners, such as Bahill, as they left the service and got an account of the funeral.

Roll's older brother, Ed, told mourners that his family moved to Arizona from Pittsburgh when Roll was a child because their mother's health was failing and doctors thought the weather might help.

When Roll's mother eventually died, of a heart condition, the future judge was just 15.

Her death deeply affected him and he changed his middle name from Paul to his mother's maiden name of McCarthy "to keep that part of the family alive," Bahill said.

His brother said he stepped in as Roll's de facto parent, driving him to school and chaperoning him on some dances.

Bahill said she appreciated gaining more insight into the private life and personality of Roll. His funeral comes a day after the youngest victim, Christina Taylor Green, was eulogized, also at the same church.

Many members of Roll's family, including his sons and five grandchildren, participated in the funeral Mass and speakers also included a childhood friend, his chief clerk and a colleague on the federal bench.

Pope John Paul II moves a step closer to sainthood

Associated Press

VATICAN CITY — During Pope John Paul II's 2005 funeral, crowds at the Vatican shouted for him to be made a saint immediately. "Santo subito!" they chanted for one of the most important and beloved pontiffs in history.

His successor heard their call. On Friday, in the fastest process on record, Pope Benedict XVI set May 1 as the date for John Paul's beatification — a key step toward Catholicism's highest honor and a major morale boost for a church reeling from the clerical sex abuse scandal.

He set the date after declaring that a French nun's recovery from Parkinson's disease was the miracle needed for John Paul to be beatified. A second miracle is needed to be canonized a saint.

Benedict himself will preside at the May 1 ceremony, which is expected to draw hundreds of thousands of pilgrims to Rome for a precedent-setting Mass. Never before has a pope beatified his immediate predecessor.

Although the numbers may not reach the 3 million who flocked here for John Paul's funeral, religious tour operators in his native Poland were already preparing to bus and fly in the faithful to celebrate a man many considered a saint while he was alive.

"We have waited a long time and this is a great day for us," said Mayor Ewa Filipiak of John Paul's hometown of Wadowice, where the faithful lit candles Friday and prayed at a chapel in the town church dedicated to John Paul.

The Rev. Pawel Danek, who runs a museum in John Paul's family home, said Benedict had listened to the prayers.

"The Holy Father has confirmed what we all felt somehow," he said. "For us, John Paul II's holiness is obvious."

Benedict put John Paul on the fast-track to possible sainthood just weeks after he died, waiving the typical five-year waiting period before the process could begin. But he insisted that the investigation into John Paul's life be thorough to avoid any doubts about his virtues.

The beatification will nevertheless be the fastest on record, coming a little more than six years after his death and beating out Mother Teresa's then-record beatification in 2003 by a few days.

It is not without controversy, however. While John Paul himself was never accused of impropriеties, he has long been accused of responding slowly when the sex abuse scandal erupted in the United States in 2002. Many of the thousands of cases that emerged last year involved crimes and cover-ups during his 26-year papacy.

Critics have faulted John Paul's overriding concern with preserving the rights of accused priests, often at the expense of victims — a concern formed in part by his experiences in communist-controlled Poland, where priests were often accused of trumped-up charges.

The most damaging case linked to John Paul concerned the Rev. Marciel Maciel, the founder of the Legionaries of Christ, a conservative order beloved by the late pope because of its orthodoxy, fundraising prowess and ability to attract priestly vocations.

Allegations that Maciel had raped young seminarians were brought by the victims to the Vatican in the 1990s, but under apparent orders from John Paul's No. 2, a canonical trial was shelved.

Only after Benedict became pope was Maciel sanctioned in 2006; Maciel died two years later.

Despite the Maciel case, Vatican officials have said there was nothing in John Paul's record that put his beatification into question. Vatican watchers noted on Friday that beatification isn't a "score card" on how John Paul administered the church but rather a recognition that he led a saintly life.

LONDON

Russian state-owned oil firm takes stake in BP

In a major deal that cements energy ties between Russia and Britain, oil company BP announced Friday night that Russia's state-owned oil firm Rosneft will take 5 percent of BP's ordinary voting shares in a major stock swap.

In exchange, Rosneft will give BP about 9.5 percent of its shares, BP said. Rosneft chairman and Russian deputy prime minister Igor Sechin said the deal was worth about $8 billion.

The companies plan to explore for oil and gas off the Russian Arctic continental shelf. The announcement sparked a backlash in Washington with some politicians expressing regrets about the tight alliance forming between Russia and Britain.

The agreement follows the disastrous spill off the coast of the U.S. last year. The company has been selling off many of its assets to raise costs to pay for billions of dollars of liability stemming from the spill, the worst environmental disaster in U.S. history.

Tunisians drive leader from power in mass uprising

TUNIS — After 23 years of iron-fisted rule, the president of Tunisia was driven from power Friday by violent protests over soaring unemployment and corruption. Virtually unprecedented in modern Arab history, the populist uprising sent an ominous message to authoritarian governments that dominate the region.

The office of Saudi King Abdullah confirmed early today ousted President Zine El Abidine Ben Ali and his family had landed in Saudi Arabia, after hours of mystery over his whereabouts. "As a result of the Saudi kingdom's respect for the exceptional circumstances the Tunisian people are going through, and with its wish for peace and security to return to the people of Tunisia, we have welcomed" him, the statement said.

Review: Generic 'Green Hornet' has no sting

By Christy Lemire
Associated Press

Someday — someday soon, hopefully — 3-D will be exposed for the sham that it is.

We will all realize that, for the vast majority of films, shooting in or converting to 3-D offers absolutely nothing from a narrative standpoint and very little visually; all this gimmick really adds is money at the box office through higher ticket prices. And, perhaps, the sanctity of the art form might be restored once more.

This is probably just wishful thinking, of course. But until that blessed day comes, we will continue to be bombarded with mediocre action pictures like "The Green Hornet."

It didn't have to be this way. There was reason for hope.

"The Green Hornet" comes from director Michel Gondry, who's known for telling imaginative stories with inspired visuals. Gondry's previous films include "Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind" and "The Science of Sleep," and — like so many feature filmmakers these days — he made his name with striking music videos. (His work with The White Stripes alone is legendary.)

Hearing his name attached to a big, studio superhero movie — starring Seth Rogen, of all people — may have sounded incongruent, but at least it was intriguing, and it held the promise of ingenuity and artistry. We might have been in for something fresh and daring. Instead, Gondry has come up with a surprisingly generic, bombastic action movie. Except for a few sequences that carry a bit of his flair, this could have been made by anyone.

That the script came from Rogen and Evan Goldberg — who also co-wrote the raunchy-but-sweet "Superbad," inspired by their longtime friendship — also suggested a different kind of superhero. And indeed, the first half seems as if it were intended to play like a Judd Apatow-style bromance, only with elaborate gadgetry. But as the film wears on, it devolves into a numbing onslaught of automatic weapon fire, shattered glass and explosions. Just as it should be reaching an engrossing climax, it grows more repellant.

Based on the 1930s radio show, "The Green Hornet" stars Rogen as Britt Reid, playboy heir to the Los Angeles publishing empire built by his father (Tom Wilkinson, relegated to a one-note role in just a couple of scenes). But when his father dies suddenly, Britt realizes he has a chance to use his fortune for good and makes the impetuous decision to become a vigilante crime fighter by night. With the help of his father's mechanic, the soft-spoken but ever-resourceful Kato (Taiwanese pop star Jay Chou), Britt devises a persona, costumes, a whole secret, adventurous life.

Truthfully, Kato comes up with all this stuff, although Britt repeatedly claims he's the star of the operation and dismisses Kato as merely the sidekick. The dynamic between the two should be giddily infectious, or at least endearing; we should be itching to go along for the ride in one of their many tricked-out cars. Instead, a slimmed-down Rogen is just playing a version of the good-natured, wisecracking slacker he plays in every thing, which never feels like a comfortable fit alongside the coolly efficient Chou. Having an actor with some depth and range — like, say, Robert Downey Jr. in the "Iron Man" movies — can elevate this kind of playful material. Rogen simply doesn't have it, which further highlights the flimsiness of the script.

Cameron Diaz once again plays a seemingly ditzy blonde who turns out to have a brain as Britt's secretary, Lenore Case. And Christoph Waltz, an Oscar winner for his chilling supporting performance in "Inglourious Basterds," has a few amusing moments as a villain suffering through a mid-life crisis; he actually gets to take part in the film's best scene, which occurs right at the top and features a cameo from an old Rogen friend. But the majority of the bumbling goings-on here seem beneath him.

As for those 3-D effects, which were shot in 2-D and then converted? All the usual stuff: glass shards and bullet casings and flames flying at the screen, but nothing that ever pierces the heart or mind.

"The Green Hornet," a Columbia Pictures release, is rated PG-13 for sequences of violent action, language, sensuality and drug content. Running time: 118 minutes. One and a half stars out of four.

Doctors amputate Zsa Zsa Gabor's right leg

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Zsa Zsa Gabor's right leg was amputated Friday in an operation that doctors said was necessary to save her life.

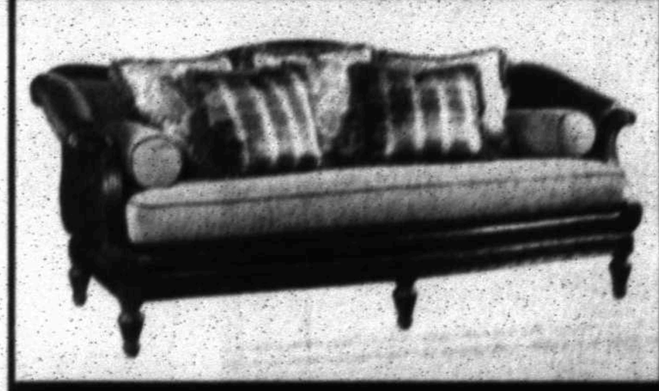

Gabor, who turns 94 on Feb. 6, was being watched carefully, but there were no complications, doctors at the Ronald Reagan UCLA Medical Center said.

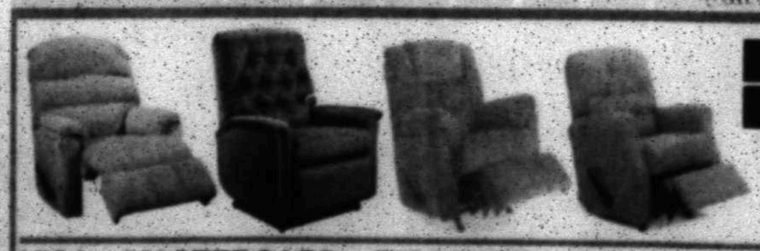

"The surgery today went well, however, she is in frail health so we will continue to monitor her closely," said Dr. David Rigberg, associate professor of vascular surgery.

Gabor, who had an infection in her leg for several months, was hospitalized on Jan. 2 after efforts to save her leg with antibiotics failed.

Spurs hand Mavs 4th straight loss

By Paul J. Weber
Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Everything is on track for the San Antonio Spurs. They're staying healthy and coasting toward the home-court advantage they prize in the playoffs.

The Dallas Mavericks, meanwhile, are still banged-up and sliding.

Tony Parker scored 18 points, DeJuan Blair had 18 points and 13 rebounds, and the Spurs won their fifth in a row while handing the reeling Mavericks their fourth straight loss, 101-89 on Friday night.

Spurs	101
Mavericks	89

Dirk Nowitzki missed his ninth straight game because of an ailing right knee and the once-mighty Mavs lost for the seventh time since the All-Star forward went out. Dallas coach Rick Carlisle said after the game Nowitzki could be back as early as Saturday against Memphis.

"They didn't have Dirk and we took advantage of it, but it doesn't mean nothing because they're not the same team without him," Parker said.

The Spurs (34-6) beat Dallas for a second time with Nowitzki sidelined. The injury has prevented a full-strength showdown between the NBA-best Spurs and Mavs, who have slipped seven games behind their Texas rivals in the Southwest Division.

Shawn Marion had 14 points as Dallas matched its worst loss of the season. This one could've easily taken the top spot before the Mavs' bench shaved down a 24-point deficit with both sides sitting most of their starters in the fourth.

"We're taking our hits right now and it's no fun," Carlisle said. "I'm a believer. I like all these guys."

Nowitzki didn't speak to reporters after the game, but he told ESPN during the broadcast he hopes to return as early as Saturday. Carlisle also said it's a possibility.

"Then again, maybe not," the coach said. "We can't mess with that."

Nowitzki's return can't happen soon enough for Dallas. The Mavs trailed the Spurs by only 3 1/2 games when they last met Dec. 30, three days after Nowitzki sprained his knee in a win at Oklahoma City.

That deficit has doubled since, a

WINNING THE WAR

Cooper succeeds in slowing game down, but MHS still triumphs

By Shawn Shroyer
Sports Writer

Abilene Cooper didn't want to get into a track meet with Midland High. That was clear from the onset. However, the Cougars took their strategy to the extreme in the third quarter.

Cooper, which had been running a 2-3 zone from the start allowed Midland High to hold the ball on one possession for roughly four minutes. The Cougars won the battle with the tactic, shutting out the Bulldogs in the period, but they lost the war as Midland High pulled out a 40-35 victory at Chaparral Center on Friday.

With the victory, Midland High (13-9, 4-0) remained unbeaten in District 3-5A play while Cooper (8-15, 2-3) dropped back below the .500 mark in the district.

"We were just passing the ball around until they came out of it," Midland High guard T.J. Brown said. "We were like, 'What are they doing?' So we just kept passing it around until coach told us to go."

Midland High coach Justin Hardin estimated the Bulldogs held the ball on offense for at least six minutes in the third quarter as Cooper appeared more than willing to allow the Bulldogs to eat away at the clock.

The risk paid off as Midland High was outscored 7-0 in the Lady Dawgs keep up dominant play, rout Cooper

By Jonathan Hull
Sports Writer

Midland High has lived up to its preseason hype, dominating District 3-5A at every turn.

And just because the Lady Bulldogs were hosting struggling Abilene Cooper didn't mean they were going to look past 3-5A's last place team and casually coast to a victory.

Instead, the Lady Dawgs kept good pressure on Cooper throughout the game in an 85-32 victory at Chaparral Center on Friday.

But getting the win isn't enough for Midland High. The Lady Dawgs are held to a higher standard with a nightly defensive goal of holding their opponents to less than 35 points.

"Coach gave us a little motivation," senior point guard Paris Webb said.

NCAA grants sixth year for injured QB Keenum

By Chris Duncan
Associated Press

HOUSTON — The NCAA has granted a sixth year of eligibility to Houston quarterback Case Keenum, who missed the final nine games of the 2010 season with a torn knee ligament.

The NCAA's decision was first reported by KRIV-TV. The school announced it on Friday.

Keenum was nearing several NCAA career records when he tore the anterior cruciate ligament in his right knee while attempting a tackle in a 31-13 loss at UCLA on Sept. 18. That came a week after a mild concussion in a win over UTEP.

The school announced in mid-October that it would ask the NCAA to grant Keenum another year. Houston lost six of nine games after Keenum went out and finished 5-7.

"I've been on pins and needles, but it's definitely paid off," Keenum said. "I'm super-excited. It's going to be a great year."

The NCAA grants a sixth year of eligibility only if a player has missed two seasons because of an injury or circumstances beyond the player's control. Keenum was granted a medical redshirt in 2006 because of a separated shoulder sustained late in his senior season in high school.

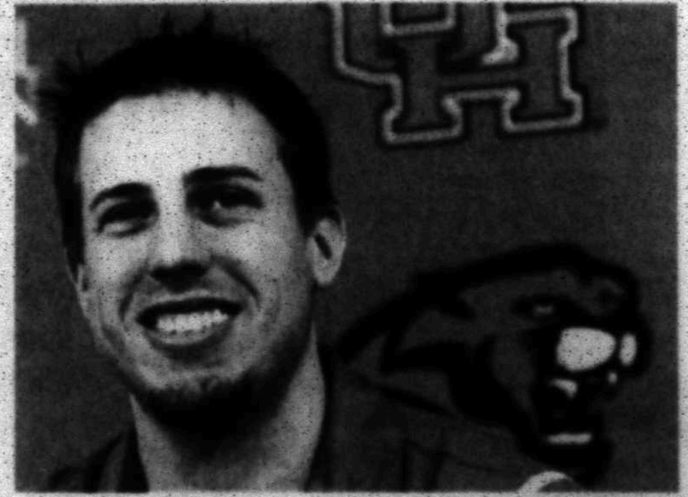

Keenum doubted he would earn the extra year and was laying out a plan to prepare for the NFL draft. Houston coach Kevin Sumlin called him on Friday to tell him that the NCAA was giving him another season in college.

"Honestly, I assumed that I wasn't going to get it and I just hoped for the best," Keenum said. "I kind of planned for not getting it, so I wouldn't get my hopes too high. But I'm just excited and really thankful."

Sumlin said he hasn't yet mapped out a workout plan to get Keenum ready for next season. The team has a meeting on Monday night and spring practices begin in March. The Cougars' spring game is April 9.

"We'll have plenty of time to fig-

Salazar scores 20 in Rebels win over Eagles

From staff reports

ABILENE — A 20-point outburst from Jordan Salazar helped Lee to a 52-30 victory at Abilene High on Friday.

Neither team scored for nearly three minutes to start the game, but the Rebels scored the first seven points of the game and never trailed. The Eagles did cut Lee's lead to 15-14 on a Antonio Estrada 3 with 1:18 left in the first half, but Salazar came back with a 3 of his own to make it 18-14.

"I take my hat off to the way they guarded us," Lee coach Mark Coffman said. "They guarded us really well. We just got some shots to go the second half. We kind of got on a little run and the momentum wore them out that fourth quarter."

Eagles	30

Lee (10-11, 3-2 in District 3-5A) then held Abilene High (2-20, 0-4) without a field goal until the 6:12 mark in the fourth quarter and led by as much as 13 in the third quarter. The Rebels then pulled away with a 17-2 run to finish the game.

"I was glad to see us finally finish a game the way we're supposed to," Coffman said. "We've had a little hard luck the last couple of games."

Lady Rebels lose tough district game to AHS

From staff reports

ABILENE — A 20-point outburst from Jordan Salazar helped Lee to a 52-30 victory at Abilene High on Friday.

Neither team scored for nearly three minutes to start the game, but the Rebels scored the first seven points of the game and never trailed. The Eagles cut Lee's lead to 15-14 on a Antonio Estrada 3 with 1:18 left in the first half, but Salazar came back with a 3 of his own to make it 18-14.

"I take my hat off to the way they guarded us," Lee coach Mark Coffman said. "They guarded us really well. We just got some shots to go the second half. We kind of got on a little run and the momentum wore them out that fourth quarter."

Lee (10-11, 3-2 in District 3-5A) then held Abilene High (2-20, 0-4) without a field goal until the 6:12 mark in the fourth quarter and led by as much as 13 in the third quarter. The Rebels then pulled away with a 17-2 run to finish the game.

"I was glad to see us finally finish a game the way we're supposed to," Coffman said. "We've had a little hard luck the last couple of games."

Lee returns home to play Odessa High at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Chaparral Center.

Lady Dawgs

From 1B

"In district play, we have to keep our opponents to less than 35 points scoring. That gives us motivation to D up and not slack off."

And Midland High did this while playing its second consecutive game without head coach T.C. Willis on the sidelines. Willis' wife gave birth to a baby boy on Monday and the coach has been attending his wife and child in the hospital since. He's expected to return to the team for Midland High's next game at Odessa Permian at 6 p.m. Tuesday.

"It's unusual. We're used to seeing his face and hearing his voice on the sidelines," Webb said. "We're praying for his family, but we know we still have to take care of business on the floor."

There was little resistance from Cooper from the start. The Lady Dawgs opened the game on a 15-0 run and led 19-6 by the end of the first quarter. The second quarter played out basically the same way with MHS scoring the first 17 points and grabbing a 42-12 advantage by halftime.

"We keep our girls motivated in practice. We just play hard no matter what," Midland High assistant coach Terri Aston said. "It doesn't matter if things are going our way or not going our way, we're going to play hard."

Dreamika Merchant and Webb each posted double-doubles on the night. Merchant scored 19 points and pulled down 11 rebounds, while Webb also had 19 points with 10 assists. Kelsey Hoppel scored 14, while Krystal Valdez added 11.

Those four starters put up those type of numbers despite basically only playing half the game. The Lady Dawgs cleared the bench midway through every single period, giving valuable playing time to their backups. Skeesha Bowers was the top producer off the bench with six points and six rebounds.

"This gave us a great opportunity to get our subs some experience," Aston said. "Something like this actually helps us unite as a team. Everybody gets a feel of what Midland High girls basketball really is."

Bulldogs

quarter, but Cooper was fortunate to make up as much ground as it did in the period. Trailing 23-12 at the half, the Cougars were still down 23-16 with 1:13 to go in the quarter. But Michael Dickey was fouled on a put-back attempt and converted the 3-point play.

The fourth quarter, though, belonged to Mercedes Lane and Brown's for Midland High as Cooper finally switched to man-to-man.

"We're a fast-paced team, so we didn't like playing that zone," Hardin said. "Mercedes stepped up and hit some shots. We were patient. We made the next pass instead of trying to hit the home run. We executed about 98 percent of our offense."

Lane, who led Midland High with 18 points, but hadn't scored since the first quarter, put the Bulldogs on the board for the first time in the second half with a bucket a minute into the fourth. He then converted three of four free throw attempts in the final two minutes, scoring five of the Bulldogs' 17 points in the quarter.

His free throws were critical as his first broke a 32-32 tie, his second gave Midland High a two-point lead and his third came on a technical free throw and put the Bulldogs ahead, 37-32. He was noticeably aggressive once Cooper went to its man defense.

"I was in my comfort zone and I knew they were going to get into man at some point," Lane said. "I knew I could take my man since I'm quick off the dribble, so I was happy about that."

Brown picked up the Bulldog offense midway through the fourth, scoring seven straight points and again between Lane's free throws as Midland High went on a 12-3 run, which started with Cooper leading 29-27.

"Defensively, the Bulldogs managed to hold Cougars' sharp-shooter Michael Brady to six points on 2 of 6 shooting.

"The goal was to stop Brady," Hardin said. "Either you stop him or you lose."

West leads Hornets past Rockets

By Chris Duncan
Associated Press

HOUSTON — David West scored 29 points, Jarrett Jack added 23 points and seven assists and the New Orleans Hornets rallied from 16 points down in the third quarter to beat the Houston Rockets 110-105 in overtime Friday night.

Emeka Okafor had 17 points and 15 rebounds for the Hornets, who have won five straight over Houston. Chris Paul had a quiet night, with 11 points, eight assists and five turnovers.

Kyle Lowry matched his season high with 28 points and Kevin Martin added 26 for the Rockets, who've lost seven of their last eight games and four consecutive home games.

The Hornets have won six of their last eight.

Lowry's free throws with 59.9 seconds left in regulation broke a 91-all tie, but West drove past Jared Jeffries for a one-handed dunk to silence the crowd and tie it again.

Martin swished a jumper, West hit two free throws and Lowry missed an off-balance jumper in the final 26 seconds of regulation to force overtime.

Former Rocket Trevor Ariza swished a 3-pointer from the corner two minutes into overtime to put the Hornets ahead 100-99. Shane Battier hit an answering 3, but Paul scored on a drive and then hit a jumper over Martin to give New Orleans the lead for good.

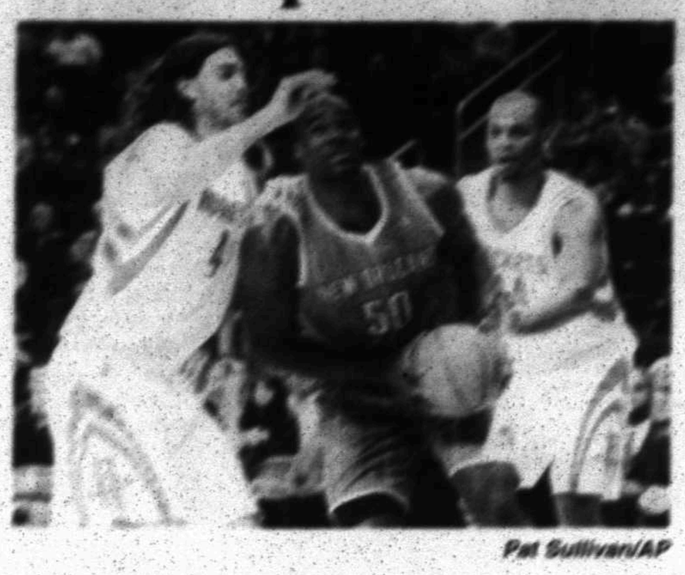

Scola missed a layup on a set play, and Ariza hit two free throws for a 106-102 lead. Lowry sank his second 3-pointer, but Jack hit two free throws with 3.7 seconds left and Paul stole the inbound pass and laid it in.

The Hornets went 28 for 31 from the free-throw line and outrebounded the Rockets 48-41.

Houston built an early lead by shooting 57 percent in the first quarter.

Martin, back after missing two games with a sore right wrist, sank a 3-pointer and Lowry scored twice in the lane to help Houston build a seven-point lead. The Rockets then went six minutes without a field goal in the second quarter, and the Hornets pulled even at 37-all.

Jack assisted on Ariza's fast-break dunk, then swished a 3-pointer from the corner to put New Orleans in front and the Hornets led 56-47 at the break.

HS SOCCER ROUNDUP

Boys

PLANO 3, MIDLAND HIGH 2

COPPELL — The Midland High boys soccer team fell to Plano on the second day of the Coppell Tournament on Friday.

MHS (0-2) got an early goal by Wes Blue in the second minute off an assist by Robert Gonzalez. Then after three scores by Plano, Gonzalez scored an unassisted goal in the 80th minute.

"We're playing some of the best teams in the state of Texas and we still have to progress more, but we're getting better and that's what we came here to do," MHS coach Warren Cottle said.

MHS next plays Colleyville Heritage at 10 a.m. today.

LEE 3, SAN MARCOS HIGH 0

SMITHSON VALLEY 1, LEE 0, SO

NEW BRAUNFELS — Lee didn't give up a goal in regulation in its first two games of the season, but still only managed to earn a split, opening with a 1-1 record at the Comal Cup.

On Thursday, Lee got first half goals from Dustin Beal, Ben Bradbury and Keagan Davis to earn a 3-0 shutout victory against San Marcos High in the Rebels' opening game of the tournament.

Lee kept Smithson Valley scoreless after 40 minutes of play on Friday as well, but didn't manage any goals, either. Smithson Valley then outdueled the Rebels in a shootout, 2-1, to advance to tournament title game.

"I thought we played well in the two games so far," Lee coach Scott Hicks said. "We possessed the ball well and had opportunities to score more goals than we did. But we played well. I can't have too many complaints at this point."

Lee plays in the third-place game at 1 p.m. today against the tourney's host New Braunfels Canyon.

Girls

MIDLAND HIGH 2, FORT WORTH NOLAN 1

FORT WORTH — Laramie Hollfield scored two goals for Midland High to help the Lady Bulldogs defeat No. 25 Fort Worth Nolan during the Fort Worth Nolan Showcase.

MHS bounced back from a 2-0 loss to Austin St. Stephen's the night before.

Shannon Byrd and Madison Scribner each had an assist on Hollfield's goals.

"We were disappointed in the loss (on Thursday) because we felt we controlled the play for the most part against Austin St. Stephen's but they are already in the middle of their season because of them being a private school, while we're just getting started," MHS coach Kent Rivera said. "We settled down against Nolan. Nolan always has a good team and always plays for a state championship in TAPPS."

MHS (1-1) next plays Byron Nelson High School at 10 a.m. today and then No. 2 Coppell at 4 p.m.

"We'll see where we're at against Coppell today," Rivera said.

LEE 5, ARLINGTON LAMAR 0

ARLINGTON — The Lee girls soccer team played to another scoreless tie at the Emily Hunter Tournament on Friday.

Lee coach Brian Pollard said his team out-shot Lamar 9-1 but just couldn't find the back of the net.

"It was back and forth and a pretty competitive game," Pollard said. "It was a solid defensive effort and we definitely created chances, we just didn't finish."

Lee next plays Keller Fossil Ridge at 12:30 p.m. today.

Dunn helps Jackalopes beat Colorado

From staff reports

LOVELAND, COLO. — Alex Dunn scored the eventual game-winning goal 4:02 into the third period to help the Odessa Jackalopes to a 4-3 victory over Colorado at the Budweiser Events Center on Friday night.

Odessa's first three goals were either on power plays or shorthanded as the Jacks built a 3-1 lead after two periods. Todd Robinson scored two of those goals, while Kenny Corupe added the other. Sebastien Thinel also had an assist in each of those goals while Dominic Leveille added two assists.

Jackalopes	4

Colorado scored on a power play early in the third period to pull to within 3-2, before Dunn scored the game-winner 35 seconds later.

Goaltender Michel Rejmonen saved 38 of 41 shots for the Jackalopes.

NBA grants disabled player exception for Yao

HOUSTON (AP) — The NBA has granted a disabled player salary exception to the Houston Rockets in the wake of Yao Ming's latest season-ending injury.

Yao underwent surgery on Jan. 6 to repair a stress fracture in his left ankle. The disabled player exception allows the Rockets to acquire a free agent, or trade for a player without having to match salaries, up to the value of the midlevel exception (about $5.765 million).

KRIV-TV first reported that the Rockets had been granted the exception. Houston must use it by Jan. 31 or it will expire.

The Rockets were granted the same exception after Yao missed last season following reconstructive foot surgery. Houston used that money (about $5.7 million) to sign swingman Trevor Ariza. Houston traded Ariza to New Orleans after one season as part of a four-team deal that brought Courtney Lee to the Rockets.

FRIDAY'S NBA ROUNDUP

CELTICS 99, BOBCATS 94: At Boston, Shaquille O'Neal had 23 points, five rebounds and five blocks in a season-high 35 minutes for the short-handed Boston Celtics as they held off Charlotte and ended the Bobcats' four-game winning streak.

O'Neal went 10 for 12 from the field as he huffed and puffed up and down the court all night and even made all three of his foul shots. Boston was missing Kevin Garnett for the ninth straight game and played without Paul Pierce much of Friday because of foot trouble. Pierce still finished with 19 points.

Rajon Rondo added 18 points and 13 assists and Ray Allen scored eight of his 19 in the fourth quarter, leading Boston on a 10-2 run that broke open the game.

KINGS 93, KNICKS 83: At New York, Beno Udrih scored 29 points on 11-of-14 shooting and Sacramento snapped a three-game losing streak with a victory over the lethargic New York Knicks.

Rookie center DeMarcus Cousins added 16 points and 10 rebounds, and reserve Carl Landry had 15 points for the Kings, now 1-3 on their six-game road trip. They have won four in a row at Madison Square Garden.

Tyreke Evans managed just nine points on 4-of-15 shooting in his return to the lineup after missing three games with a sprained left ankle, but the Kings didn't need much from their star guard on a night when the Knicks couldn't do anything offensively.

BULLS 99, PACERS 86: At Indianapolis, Derrick Rose had 29 points and a season-high 10 rebounds to help Chicago beat Indiana.

Rose, who scored 20 points in the second half, also had five assists. Luol Deng had 17 points and five assists, Carlos Boozer scored 14 points and Kurt Thomas had a season-high 18 rebounds.

Danny Granger scored 22 points for the Pacers, but he shot 4 for 17 in the first three quarters when the game was in doubt. Indiana failed to notch its first three-game winning streak of the season.

76ERS 95, BUCKS 94: At Philadelphia, Lou Williams hit the go-ahead 3-pointer with 43 seconds left and scored 25 points to lead Philadelphia past Milwaukee.

The Sixers blew a 15-point lead and were on the brink of losing their third straight game as they make a push for the eighth seed in the Eastern Conference.

Williams delivered with a clutch basket at the end of a quarter as he has throughout the season. He buried a 3 over a lunging John Salmons for a 95-94 lead.

PISTONS 101, RAPTORS 95: At Toronto, Tracy McGrady scored 22 points and Rodney Stuckey had 19 in Detroit's victory over Toronto.

Charlie Villanueva had 16 points and eight rebounds while rookie Greg Monroe scored 12 for the Pistons, who had lost five of six. Chris Wilcox had 12 rebounds and four points.

Andrea Bargnani scored 31 points and DeMar DeRozan had 15 for the Raptors, who have lost eight of 10 at home and nine of 12 overall. Jose Calderon added 13 assists.

JAZZ 121, CAVALIERS 99: At Salt Lake City, Deron Williams scored 26 points, reserve C.J. Miles added 20 and the Utah Jazz cruised to a 121-99 victory Friday night over the hapless Cleveland Cavaliers.

The win was the third straight for Utah, while the Cavaliers (8-31) have lost 12 in a row, 26 of their last 29 and 18 straight on the road.

Antawn Jamison scored 26 points for the injury-riddled Cavs, who used only eight players. They were coming off the worst loss in franchise history, a 112-57 humiliation in Los Angeles against the Lakers.

FRIDAY'S NHL ROUNDUP

CANUCKS 4, CAPITALS 2: At Washington, Roberto Luongo made 25 saves to stretch his regulation unbeaten streak to a career-high 12 games, and Christian Ehrhoff broke a second-period tie with a power-play goal in the Vancouver Canucks' 4-2 victory over the Washington Capitals on Friday night.

Daniel Sedin scored his 29th and 27th goals of the season and Ehrhoff and Alexander Edler each had a goal and an assist. NHL-leading Vancouver was coming off a 1-0 road loss to the New York Rangers on Thursday night, its first loss in regulation since Dec. 5 at home against St. Louis.

AVALANCHE 4, WILD 1: At St. Paul, Craig Anderson made 32 saves to help Colorado beat Minnesota, a victory tempered by the loss of center Ryan O'Reilly after he crashed headfirst into the boards.

Colorado led 2-0 early in the second period when O'Reilly was taken off the ice on a stretcher after losing his balance and slamming into the boards. A team official said O'Reilly had movement in his arms and legs and was taken to Regions Hospital. The injury delayed the game for about 10 minutes.

FLYERS 5, THRASHERS 2: At Atlanta, Danny Briere and Claude Giroux scored third-period goals, and Sergei Bobrovsky made 27 saves for Philadelphia.

Philadelphia has won five of six to open a four-point lead over second-place Tampa Bay in the Eastern Conference. The Thrashers have just one regulation win in their last 11 games.

BLUE JACKETS 3, RED WINGS 2, SO: At Columbus, Ohio, Antoine Vermette had the only goal in a shootout and Steve Mason stopped all four shots he faced in the tiebreaker in Columbus's victory over Detroit.

Vermette, shooting fourth, slid a backhander between the leg pads of third-string goalie Joey MacDonald, who came in in the first period after Jimmy Howard was sidelined by a bruised knee.

DEVILS 5, LIGHTNING 2: At Tampa, Fla., Brian Rolston and Travis Zajac each had a goal and an assist during a four-goal first period, and Ilya Kovalchuk scored twice for New Jersey.

Patrik Elias also scored to help the Devils snap an 11-game road losing skid. The slide by the team with the NHL's worst record (12-29-2) was just one off the franchise record of 12, set from Oct. 19 to Dec. 1, 1983.

FLAMES 3, SENATORS 2: At Ottawa, David Moss scored goals 2:23 apart in the second and Calgary held on to snap a four-game losing streak with a victory over Ottawa.

Alex Kotalik scored a power-play goal late in the second for Calgary, which was on a 0-2-2 skid. Anton Babchuk assisted on both of Moss' goals. Henrik Karlsson made 32 saves for Calgary, losing his shutout bid on Nick Foligno's goal midway through the third.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL ROUNDUP

AGGIES' FULLER SET TO RETURN FOR SENIOR SEASON: At College Station, two of Texas A&M coach Mike Sherman's best recruiting jobs have been with players already on campus.

On Friday night, receiver Jeff Fuller announced he intended to return for his senior season, and bypass declaring early for the NFL draft.

Fuller, 6 foot 4 and 215 pounds, owns the school record in touchdown catches with 29 and is considered the school's top all-time receiver.

AUBURN'S NICK FAIRLEY ENTERING NFL DRAFT: At Mobile, Ala., Lombardi Award winner Nick Fairley is skipping his senior season at Auburn to enter the NFL draft.

The potential No. 1 overall pick announced his decision Friday at his old high school, saying he didn't make up his mind until that morning.

He and quarterback Cam Newton — who is also turning pro — led the Tigers to a 14-0 season and their first national title since 1957.

PASQUALONI INTRODUCED AS UCONN HEAD FB COACH: At Storrs, Conn., new UConn football coach Paul Pasqualoni described his position Friday as "absolutely the right fit."

Pasqualoni, a Connecticut native and former Syracuse coach, said at a news conference that he has significant ties in the region and will recruit around the Northeast.

The 61-year-old coach grew up in Cheshire, Conn., and was head coach and athletic director at Western Connecticut from 1982-86. He coached at Syracuse for 14 years before moving to the NFL, working most recently as the Dallas Cowboys defensive coordinator.

Pasqualoni replaces Randy Edsall, who took the head coaching job at Maryland after leading UConn to an 8-5 season and a berth in the Fiesta Bowl. The Huskies lost to Oklahoma 48-20.

TULSA HIRES BILL BLANKENSHIP AS FOOTBALL COACH: At Tulsa, Okla., Tulsa has promoted assistant Bill Blankenship to become its head football coach.

Athletic director Bubba Cunningham made the announcement Friday, saying the 54-year-old Blankenship is "a leader and a proven winner." Blankenship is replacing his former boss, Todd Graham, who now is Pittsburgh's coach.

Blankenship played at Tulsa under F.A. Dry and John Cooper before starting a long career as an Oklahoma prep coach.

Graham hired Blankenship as an assistant in January 2007. Tulsa has won 10 or more games three times since then, including this season, when the Golden Hurricane finished 10-3 and was ranked No. 24.

POLK WILL RETURN TO WASHINGTON FOR JUNIOR YEAR: At Seattle, Washington running back Chris Polk will return to the Huskies for his junior season.

In a statement released by the school on Friday afternoon, Polk says he thinks it will be better for him to stay at Washington for another season. Polk just finished his redshirt sophomore year with the Huskies, meaning he could have declared early for the NFL draft.

Polk is coming off the second-best season in Washington history, running for 1,415 yards. He capped his season with a career-high 284 yards — second most in school history — in the Apple Cup against Washington State, then ran for 177 yards in the Huskies' Holiday Bowl upset of Nebraska.

Polk rushed for 1,146 yards as a freshman, becoming the first Washington freshman to top 1,000 yards.

CC'S DOLAN NAMED NAIA DEFENSIVE PLAYER OF THE YEAR: At Helena, Mont., Carroll College linebacker Thomas Dolan has been named the NAIA defensive player of the year in a vote of NAIA coaches and Victory Sports Network broadcasters.

Dolan, a senior from Billings, had 79 tackles this season in helping Carroll win its sixth NAIA national championship in nine seasons. Dolan also tallied two interceptions, two forced fumbles and five pass deflections.

Two more Carroll seniors — center Andy Fieseth of Dillon and tight end Bubba Bartlett of Rathdrum, Idaho — also received first team honors.

Second-team honors went to Carroll running back John Camino of Buffalo, Wyo., and Montana State-Northern defensive lineman Will Andrews of Sandpoint, Idaho.

Saints' assistant coach and offensive coordinator Nick Howlett was named this year's NAIA assistant coach of the year.

Spurs

tailspin that was accelerated when Caron Butler sustained what was likely a season-ending injury on New Year's Day.

Even before Friday's game, Spurs coach Gregg Popovich mentioned how the Mavericks might have been the NBA's best team before losing their two biggest stars.

"If you're going to pick somebody, I still think the Lakers are the best team, once it's all said and done," Popovich said. "Before Dirk got hurt, I thought they were real close to them."

For all the talk of San Antonio's quicker offensive tempo this season, the plainspoken Popovich boils having the NBA's best record down to staying healthy. The Spurs have avoided injuries to their Big Three for the first time in three seasons.

The payoff has been the league's top record and a clear path to home-court advantage — an edge they were reminded of last season while stumbling to the No. 7 seed.

"We want to have that top seed, that home-court advantage, all that stuff," said Spurs forward Tim Duncan, who had 16 points and 12 rebounds. "Every advantage you get, you want to take."

Manu Ginobili had 11 points on an off night, going just 4 of 11 from the field.

Tyson Chandler had eight points in 16 minutes for Dallas despite skipping shootaround because he was feeling ill. Jose Barea and Dominique Jones scored 13 apiece and were the only other Mavs in double figures.

WOMEN'S TOP 25 COLLEGE BASKETBALL ROUNDUP

NO. 3 DUKE 87, NO. 21 FLORIDA STATE 70: At Tallahassee, Fla., Jasmine Thomas scored 22 points to lead third-ranked Duke to an 87-70 victory at No. 21 Florida State on Friday night.

The Blue Devils (16-0, 2-0 Atlantic Coast Conference) got 15 points each from freshmen Haley Peters and Tricia Liston, while Chelsea Gray added 13.

Courtney Ward scored a game-high 25 points and Alexa Deluzio added 17 for Florida State, which closed within three points with 12:28 left only to see Duke quickly regain command.

NO. 11 NORTH CAROLINA 83, N.C. STATE 76: At Chapel Hill, N.C., Italee Lucas scored 19 points as No. 11 North Carolina blew nearly all of a 24-point lead in the second half before holding on.

Chay Shegog scored 13 points for the Tar Heels (16-1, 2-1 Atlantic Coast Conference), who pushed ahead by double figures late in the first half and held on the rest of the way. North Carolina led by 16 at halftime and increased that margin to 62-38 early in the second half.

The scrappy Wolfpack (9-8, 1-2) kept fighting and nearly came all the way back behind Marissa Kastanek. The sophomore scored a career-high 30 points and hit six 3-pointers, the last of which pulled N.C. State within five points with 17 seconds left.

NO. 22 MIAMI 77, CLEMSON 48: At Coral Gables, Fla., Riquna Williams scored a season-high 29 points to help No. 22 Miami win its first game as a ranked team this season.

Shenise Johnson added 18 points for the Hurricanes (17-1, 3-0 Atlantic Coast Conference), who won their 16th straight game — tied with undefeated No. 3 Duke for the longest streak in the nation.

Williams made 11 of 15 shots, including 6 of 8 from 3-point range, and also had five assists and six steals in only 22 minutes as Miami improved to 14-0 at home this season.

ure out where he is and what we're doing," Sumlin said. "There's been no timetable set. Our conversations were more personal in nature than about his career and whatever is going to go on this semester and next semester."

Keenum led the nation in total offense (5,829 yards) and yards passing (5,671) in 2009. He made three starts in 2010 before his injury and ranks fifth in passing in Division I-A history. He needs 3,487 yards to surpass Tim Chang's career mark (17,072) and is 28 TD passes shy of Graham Harrell's career record (134).

"I feel like this is my life here in Houston and being a Cougar," Keenum said. "To be able to give that back and kind of get a shot at finishing some unfinished business. The goals I set out to do, I wanted to finish. To be able to do that, it's incredible."

The Cougars led the nation in total offense (563.4 yards per game) and scoring (42.1 points per game) and finished 10-4. Houston went 26-14 with Keenum taking most of the snaps between 2007-09.

Appleby takes the lead in Honolulu

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

HONOLULU — The Sony Open took a while to get started. So did Stuart Appleby.

Appleby was humming along Friday on rain-soaked Waialae Country Club, no bogeys on his card but not many birdies, either. That changed when he holed a 163-yard shot from the fairway and a 35-foot putt on the next green to finish with a 6-under 64.

That gave him a one-shot lead over nine players from Matt Kuchar and Justin Rose to a pair of rookies in Nate Smith and Ben Martin. In soft conditions and only a light breeze, 65 players in the 144-man field broke par.

Appleby shot 30 on the back nine, including a chip-in from the front of the 12th green. Then came a strong finish, with a 5-iron that he holed out for eagle on the 16th and the long birdie putt on the 17th.

"Less than two hours, really went from a pretty plain round to a good round," Appleby said.

No one could catch him in the afternoon. Shigeki Maruyama, a popular figure in these parts, was at 5 under through 12 holes until he dropped a few shots on the back and had to birdie the 18th for a 65.

Martin, who just graduated from Clemson last year, wasn't sure what to expect. It wasn't the ideal preparation for his first regular PGA Tour event, although it was out of his hands. He had to do a commercial shoot on Tuesday, then couldn't practice Wednesday because the range was closed and didn't play Thursday when rain washed out the opening round.

"I hadn't hit a golf shot in three days," he said.

He hit most of them quite well in the opening round. Five of his birdies were from inside 8 feet, and two others came on the par 5s that he reached in two. It helped to have some experience on the bag. Martin sent his caddie to California to study the four courses used in the Bob Hope Classic, and he used Frank Williams, the longtime caddie for Stewart Cink, who was coming to Hawaii on vacation.

Martin hadn't never seen Waialae until this week, so the soft conditions didn't feel different.

That wasn't the case for the veterans.

"I have never seen the course like this," Steve Stricker said after rallying for a 69. The fairways were too wet to mow, and grass clippings that had been floating in water created yellow patches of debris.

Appleby said the course was "heavy," but he had no complaints. Players were allowed to lift, clean and place their golf balls through the fairway, although some players felt by the end of the day it wasn't necessary.

"Much better than I expected," said Kuchar, who made a long eagle putt on the ninth and made only one bogey.

Appleby was among those who started his season last week on Maui, and it was a struggle. The Sony Open offers a completely different test, minus the mountainous terrain and the severe slope on the greens with a strong grain.

He felt more relaxed here, and the finish helped.

Appleby chipped in for birdie from in front of the 12th green — "sort of freshened up that par, par, par I had the first couple hours on the front nine," he said — added a birdie on the 13th and then finished with a flourish. With a slight breeze off the Pacific, from a 163-yards away on the 16th, he hit an easy 5-iron right of the flag and was surprised to hear the cheer when it went in for an eagle.

FRIDAY'S GOLF ROUNDUP

European/Sunshine

JOBURG OPEN: At Johannesburg, defending champion Oliver Schwartzel shot a 10-under 61 for a share of the second-round lead in the Joburg Open with South Africa countryman Garth Mulroy and England's Jamie Elson.

Schwartzel had 10 birdies on the West Course at Royal Johannesburg and Kensington Golf Club to match Elson and Mulroy at 13 under. Elson and Mulroy had 64s on the longer East Course — the site of the first two rounds in the event sanctioned by the European and Sunshine tours.

Rain-delayed play and 27 players were unable to complete the round because of darkness.

Yanks reach deal with reliever Soriano

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

Tony Gutierrez/AP

THE NEW YANKEE: Relief pitcher Rafael Soriano delivers the ball during Game 3 of the American League Division Series on Oct. 9 in Arlington. The New York Yankees have reached a three-year agreement with Soriano, last years AL saves leader.

NEW YORK — Exactly who starts in the New York Yankees' rotation this season, that's still uncertain. No such worries about having enough arms for the late innings.

The Yankees bolstered an already strong bullpen by reaching agreement with AL saves leader Rafael Soriano on a three-year contract that could be worth $35 million, a person familiar with the negotiations told The Associated Press.

The person spoke on condition of anonymity Thursday because the deal has not been finalized. Soriano must pass a physical to complete the contract.

For now, the 31-year-old righty is likely to become the primary setup man for 41-year-old closer Mariano Rivera, who recently signed a two-year deal for $30 million.

The deal allows Soriano to opt out after his first or second season with the Yankees. In time, though, the team hopes Soriano might be the answer to who could become Rivera's successor.

Soriano was successful on 45 of 48 save chances last season in helping Tampa Bay edge out the wild-card Yankees for the AL East title. He was 3-2 with a 1.73 ERA in his only year with the Rays and was a member of the AL All-Star team.

The deal would mark the first major free-agent addition for the Yankees this offseason after they missed out on ace Cliff Lee.

Soriano becomes the latest prominent player to leave the cost-cutting Rays, who have won two of the past three AL East titles. Speedy outfielder Carl Crawford and first baseman Carlos Pena departed as free agents this offseason, in addition to relievers Joaquin Benoit, Dan Wheeler and Randy Choate. Starting pitcher Matt Garza and shortstop Jason Bartlett were traded.

AL East rival Boston has been especially busy this winter, signing Crawford and trading for All-Star first baseman Adrian Gonzalez.

Soriano is awarded $11.5 million, even if he decides to leave the Yankees after the first year. He's guaranteed $22.5 million for staying at least two seasons.

Soriano is likely to replace Kerry Wood as the Yankees' top eighth-inning reliever. Wood, acquired by the Yankees from Cleveland at last year's trade deadline, became a free agent this offseason and went back to the Chicago Cubs, signing a $1.5 million, one-year contract.

Soriano, however, would give the Yankees extra insurance on days when they might want to rest Rivera. And with New York's rotation somewhat unsettled — Andy Pettitte isn't sure if he'll return for another season, Javier Vazquez signed with Florida — Soriano would help add length and depth to a bullpen that might need to pitch extra innings for shaky starters.

Earlier this winter, New York signed left-handed specialist Pedro Feliciano to an $8 million, two-year deal.

FTC considering action on helmet safety

By Frederic J. Frommer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The chairman of the Federal Trade Commission said his agency is looking into marketing claims that some football helmets can help reduce concussions, responding to a senator who wants the FTC to investigate what he called "misleading safety claims and deceptive practices" in the sale of new helmets and reconditioning of used ones.

"We agree that these are serious concerns, and will determine what action by this agency may be appropriate," FTC Chairman Jon Leibowitz wrote to Sen. Tom Udall, D-N.Mex.

"Given the dangers that concussions pose for young athletes engaged in contact sports, it is essential that advertising for products claiming to reduce the risk of this injury be truthful and substantiated," he added.

In the letter, obtained Friday by The Associated Press, Leibowitz said that issues involving serious health concerns — especially those for children and young adults — are a "high priority for the commission." He said the commission would look at several factors "in determining whether to take enforcement or other action."

Leibowitz was responding to a Jan. 4 letter from Udall, who said he was "troubled by misleading marketing claims by Riddell, a leading helmet maker that supplies the official helmet to the National Football League."

He quoted Riddell's website as saying that "research shows a 31 percent reduction in the risk of concussion in players wearing a Riddell Revolution football helmet when compared to traditional helmets."

"Yet there is actually very little scientific evidence to support the claim," Udall said, adding that the voluntary industry standard for football helmets doesn't specifically address concussion prevention or reduction. The senator also mentioned another helmet manufacturer, Schutt Sports.

Riddell, which has called Udall's allegations "unfounded and unfair," said in a statement Friday that it welcomed "any scrutiny and review. For the public's benefit, we hope that the FTC will provide greater scrutiny of all helmet manufacturers."

Phelps beats Lochte in 100 butterfly in Austin

By Jim Vertuno
Associated Press

AUSTIN — Michael Phelps knew rival Ryan Lochte wasn't in the pool, so all he had to swim for was a good final time and a $10,000 gift card.

He got the time he wanted and a cousin or nephew will get the gift card he gets for winning the "B" final of the 200 freestyle Friday night in the first races of Austin Grand Prix.

When Phelps and Lochte finally squared off in the same race, Phelps beat Lochte in the 100 butterfly in the night's only head-to-head matchup between them.

Phelps got another gift card for winning that one, too.

"You can fill up your iPad with those," Phelps said. "So that's cool."

Phelps and Lochte are the biggest draws of the three-day event. Lochte is the world's most dominant swimmer in 2010 and with are starting to eye the 2012 Olympics in London.

They were scheduled to race against each other five times over the weekend, but that matchup in the 200 freestyle didn't happen because Phelps, who is struggling to regain his dominant form of the 2008 Olympics, was up there in qualifying that he was the last swimmer to make the "B" final.

Phelps, who is sporting a beard and shaggy hair that flows out of the back of his swimming cap, said he was shocked by his qualifying time of 1:55.04. Winning the final in 1:49.90 felt much better.

"The stroke doesn't feel as good as it should," Phelps said. "There's a ton to work on right now. So come here and be able to race these guys, gives me a little more fire. That's what I wanted for the rest of the year."

Lochte was far from his top form as well. He nearly dropped into the race with Phelps when he barely qualified with one of the top eight times for the "A" final. Both had to swim on the edge of the pool in lane eight to win their finals.

Minutes after Phelps' win, Lochte won his race in 1:49.25.

"Our morning swims were very shaky," Lochte said. "We always love racing each other. If we were together in the same time it would have been a really good race."

An hour later, they were. Phelps cruised to win in the 100 butterfly in 52.53 seconds. Lochte, who does not normally swim the event on top races, was second at 53.65.

Federal judges consider high school sports case

By Michael Tarm
Associated Press

CHICAGO — A Wisconsin case that could have nationwide implications for how reporters cover and how parents watch high school sports is making its way through the courts, with crucial constitutional arguments taking place Friday in federal court in Chicago.

The case pits community newspapers against the association that oversees high school sports in Wisconsin. Fans in many states rely on community newspapers for news about high school teams, and the newspapers say they need easy, unencumbered access to sporting events to provide that coverage. But the association says it can't survive if it can't raise money by signing exclusive contracts with a single video production company for streaming its tournaments.

The newspapers argued Friday before the 7th Circuit Court of Appeals that the First Amendment's guarantee of freedom of press should enable them to put such publicly funded events online as they see fit, free of charge.

The case began in 2008, when the Wisconsin Interscholastic Athletic Association sued The Post-Crescent of Appleton after it streamed live coverage of high school football playoff games. After a U.S. District judge sided with the association last year, saying its exclusive deal with a video production company didn't impinge on freedom of the press, the newspaper's owner, Gannett Co., and the Wisconsin Newspaper Association appealed.

Media lawyer Robert Dreps argued Friday that the newspaper's streaming of the game was the equivalent of reporting on the event, but Judge Diane Wood said she was "troubled by that."

The athletic association's attorney, John Skilton, argued that its deal with the video production company didn't prevent newspapers from reporting on the game. Reporters can still attend games, write critical comments about them and even display short clips of video they deem newsworthy, he said — they just can't stream entire games.

"The heart of this issue is the question: Is there any part of these rules that stifle speech?" he said. "The answer is — there isn't that type of censorship in these rules."

Judge David Hamilton asked Skilton whether, given that line of thinking, a U.S. president-elect could cut a deal giving one company exclusive right to broadcast his inauguration.

"That's core speech," Skilton said, referring to political speech, which receives the greatest First Amendment protection. "So my answer might be different than for this case."

New York Jets vs. New England Patriots

Associated Press

TALKING CONFIDENCE New York Jets head coach Rex Ryan gestures as he answers a question after practice Friday in Florham Park, N.J. The Jets play the New England Patriots in the AFC Divisional playoff game Sunday.

PLAYING WITHOUT FEAR

Rex: Game for Jets second only to 1969 Super Bowl

By Dennis Waszak Jr.
Associated Press

FLORHAM PARK, N.J. —

As if this thing needed more hype. Rex Ryan said this about the New England Patriots during his final news conference before Sunday's AFC divisional playoff:

■ The Jets respected them but didn't fear them;

■ The game ranks right behind the Broadway Joe Super Bowl win in 1969;

■ And, yes, the Jets would win.

No expletives.

"I think it'll be huge," the coach said Friday. "This one will probably be the second-biggest in the history of the franchise."

Following a ho-hum week of name-calling, accusations and challenges, New York is looking to get past the Patriots and reach the AFC championship game for the second straight season. But Bill Belichick and Tom Brady might have something to say about all of that. On the field, that is.

> "Certainly the stakes are much higher than they were last time (we played)."
> Tom Brady, New England Patriots quarterback

"Certainly the stakes are much higher than they were the last time (we played)," Brady said, referring to the Patriots' 45-3 rout last month. "Each can execute, certainly, at a very high level against great competition and that's going to be part of the reason why there is going to be millions of people tuned in for the game on Sunday."

That these teams clearly don't like each other — at all — would be another.

"One thing I can tell you right now," Ryan said, "we have plenty of respect for them up there, but we don't fear them. I can promise you that. We do not fear them. We respect them and we're going to win the game. That's our message. It's our message every week."

There have been plenty of other messages sent to and from New York and Boston during the last few days, making for an interesting week.

Ryan kicked things off by praising Indianapolis quarterback Peyton Manning, saying no one studies the game quite so hard, even though Brady thinks he does. Then, Ryan said the game was "personal" between him and Belichick.

Jets cornerback Antonio Cromartie took things to another level of nastiness when he called Brady a dirty word, while he and his coach accused the Patriots quarterback of showboating and pointing at their sideline after a late touchdown.

Jets wide receiver Jerricho Cotchery said the Patriots spread their arms out like

Baltimore Ravens vs. Pittsubrgh Steelers

Ravens-Steelers rivalry as real as it gets

By Alan Robinson
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH —

Looks like another winter classic in Pittsburgh. Some NFL rivalries are manufactured. Some ebb and flow depending on the teams' records. Then there's Ravens vs. Steelers, one that is as real as it gets. The games usually are meaningful, with an intensity that isn't faked and a physicality that caused Pittsburgh wide receiver Hines Ward to label it the Black and Blue Bowl.

The eighth meeting in three seasons between AFC North rivals that are alike in makeup and personality will leave the winner one victory short of the Super Bowl. The survivor of today's AFC divisional game meets the winner of Sunday's Jets-Patriots game in the AFC championship game on Jan. 23.

Yes, another big Ravens-Steelers game, only a month and 10 days since the last. Yet many in Baltimore and Pittsburgh couldn't wait for it.

"Both sides know when the whistle blows, you're going to get what we got and we're going to get what they got," said Ravens linebacker Ray Lewis, whose renowned nastiness fits perfectly into a rivalry where emotions run high and scores run low. "So, once again — I love to use this — here we go again."

The Ravens and Steelers tied with 12-4 regular-season records, but Pittsburgh earned a first-round bye based on its

Green Bay Packers vs. Atlanta Falcons

Falcons glad game vs. Packers isn't a history lesson

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

ATLANTA —

Bart Starr. Lambeau Field. Ray Nitschke. Titletown USA. Reggie White. Heck, they even named the Super Bowl trophy after Green Bay's most famous coach.

Yep, the Packers are just oozing with tradition.

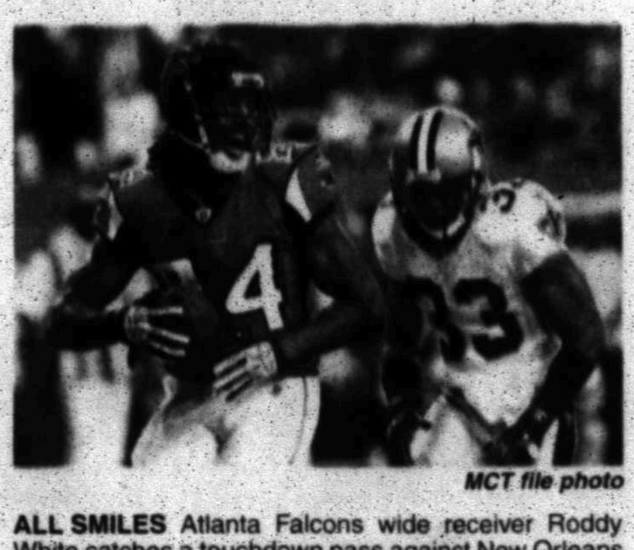

The Atlanta Falcons? Not so much.

"We're fairly new on the block," said Roddy White, the Falcons' Pro Bowl receiver. "We're still trying to prove ourselves. You've got to go out there and win playoff games. That's what this league is all about."

The Falcons (13-3) are the top seed in the NFC playoffs heading into tonight's divisional game against Green Bay (11-6). Atlanta merely needs to win two more games — both at the Georgia Dome, where the team is 20-4 over the last three seasons — to reach the Super Bowl for only the second time in franchise history.

Up first, Atlanta will have to get by a franchise with a much more impressive resume over the long haul.

The Packers have won a record 12 NFL titles, three more than any other franchise, a bounty that includes three Super Bowls victories. Compare that with the Falcons, who have managed just four division titles in 45 years and lost their lone Super Bowl appearance in 1999. In fact, Atlanta had never put together back-to-back winning seasons until its current run of three in a row.

When it comes to star power, Green Bay is about as good as it gets. The franchise boasts 21 members of the Pro Football Hall of Fame and surely has at least one more on the way with Brett Favre, who actually began his career with the Falcons but was planes — the touchdown celebration some New York players use — after an interception in the last meeting.

"When you have a rivalry like this, things are going to come out," Cotchery said. "People shouldn't be surprised by any of this. This is a contact sport, though, and it's going to be settled out there on the field in the end."

Hall of Fame slugger Reggie Jackson, known to spout off at times during his playing career, said during a radio interview that Ryan's guys should stop yapping and focus on playing.

"That's his opinion," Ryan said. "We're always going to be who we are. Reggie Jackson is always who he was. We could use Reggie's bat this week."

To their credit, the Patriots stayed mostly quiet — under orders from Belichick, of course, who rarely gets into verbal confrontations with other teams through the media.

But after Patriots owner Robert Kraft told the Associated Press he won't judge the Jets and prefers his team does its talking with its play, wide receiver Wes Welker made several references to feet in his news conference Thursday. It was apparently a dig at recent foot-fetish reports involving Ryan.

"I think this is a huge rivalry-type game and anything goes," Ryan said, brushing it off. "I can take it. I'm not going to discuss it, but I can take it."

But, were Welker's comments out of line?

"I'm not getting into that," he said.

"It's clever," Cotchery said. "I don't know if he intended it or not, but it was clever."

traded away in one of the game's great personnel blunders. The Packers' list of greats includes coach Vince Lombardi, whose influence on the game was so profound the NFL put his name on its championship trophy shortly after his death in 1970.

No one has considered naming a trophy after any one from the Falcons. Heck, the team has yet to send even one player to Canton; the best it can do is Eric Dickerson and Tommy McDonald, two Hall of Famers who played briefly for Atlanta late in their careers. And when it comes to coaches, the team with the odd-looking bird logo can't come close to Lombardi or Curly Lambeau, who guided the Packers to their first six NFL titles in the 1930s and '40s.

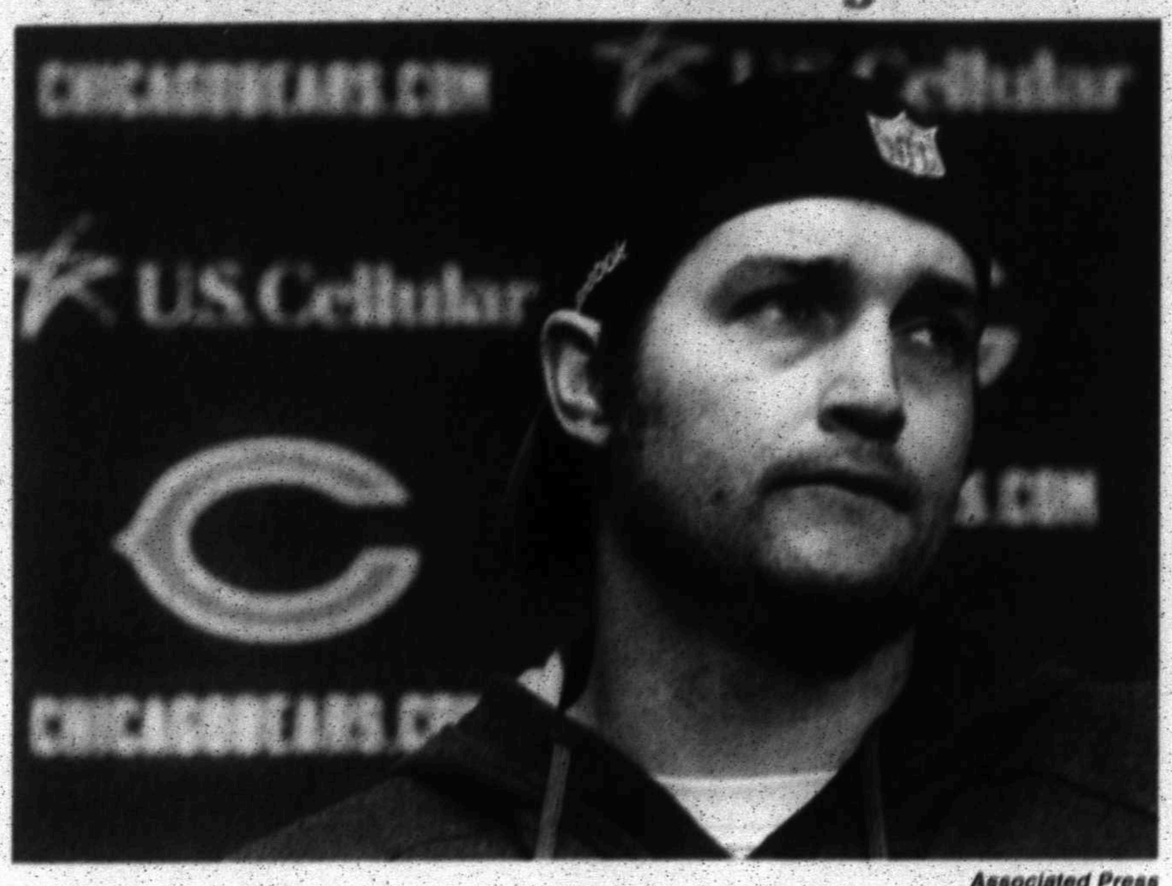

OK, the Falcons did hire one of Lombardi's assistants, Norb Hecker, as their first head coach in 1966. But his record was a very un-Vince-like 4-26-1, which pretty much sums up the divide between these two franchises.

"That organization over there, they've been doing it for a long time," Roddy White said. "They've pretty much got the Super Bowl trophy named after their squad and their coach. So, they've got a lot of good tradition. They've done a lot of good things in this league."

The Packers insist they're looking forward, but there's no doubt they've got an eye on their legacy. Green Bay hasn't won a Super Bowl since the 1996 season. Longtime Packers such as receiver Donald Driver figure that's long enough.

"We all know exactly what sits in front of us," Driver said. "We want that trophy. It's named after us. We need to get it back home, where it belongs."

Seattle Seahawks vs. Chicago Bears

Associated Press

TAKING QUESTIONS Chicago Bears quarterback Jay Cutler listens to questions at a news conference during NFL practice at Halas Hall on Wednesday in Lake Forest, Ill. The Chicago Bears host the Seattle Seahawks in a second round playoff game on Sunday.

TIME TO SHINE

Cutler gets first postseason shot with Bears

By Andrew Seligman
Associated Press

LAKE FOREST, Ill. —

If Jay Cutler is nervous heading into his first playoff game, it was hard to tell this week. It actually was hard to tell anything about the strong-armed quarterback's mindset heading into the postseason.

This time, Cutler avoided the deep route.

"Guys are business as usual," he said.

The Chicago Bears will make their first playoff appearance in four years when they host the Seattle Seahawks in a divisional game on Sunday, and Cutler will get his first taste of the postseason. So, it wasn't exactly business as usual around Halas Hall on Friday.

Not since the 2006 team made the Super Bowl have the Bears (11-5) been working this late, but they're here thanks to a dramatic turnaround that led to the NFC North championship and a first-round bye. Cutler, meanwhile, is leading a winner for the first time since his senior year in high school.

Now, the Bears are staring at a team that slipped into the playoffs with a 7-9 record and knocked off defending Super Bowl champion New Orleans last week behind a memorable touchdown run by Marshawn Lynch and a superb effort by Matt Hasselbeck.

The three-time Pro Bowl quarterback threw for four touchdowns as the Seahawks stunned the Saints 41-36 at Qwest Field. Now, he'll be making his club-record 11th postseason start.

"As a player, it's the stage that you love to play on," Hasselbeck said. "It's so much fun. It's a blast. I've been fortunate to get the opportunity to play in a bunch of playoff games, and you never forget them."

He remembers feeling "no anxiety" when he made his first playoff start in 2003.

The Seahawks were playing his former team Green Bay for the second time that season and Hasselbeck learned a lot about playing in the postseason. He wound up with 305 yards, but Green Bay won 33-27 in overtime when Al Harris returned an interception 52 yards for a touchdown.

That game is most remembered for Hasselbeck's bold prediction after Seattle won the overtime coin flip. "We want the ball and we're going to score!" he declared, moments before Harris picked off his pass and took it back to end Seattle's season.

"I was playing all my friends from Green Bay, all my guys that I was boys with in Green Bay," he said. "I was probably better friends with them than I was with my current teammates at the time. It was just one of those things where I said 'The heck with it, I'm just going to have fun. Just play loose.' And I played so much better that way, just not uptight and naive. I had no idea the attention that playoff games get, the hype that playoff games get. Every good or bad thing you do can kind of linger, but it's awesome."

That was the feeling for Hasselbeck last Saturday against New Orleans. It was a sharp contrast to his previous start at home against Atlanta when he got booed off the field and was replaced by Charlie Whitehurst.

But that's how Hasselbeck's first season under coach Pete Carroll has gone. There have been ups and downs, and with an expiring contract, his future is uncertain.

Carroll has said he wants him back. Hasselbeck has said he wants to play for a winner, whether it's Seattle or elsewhere.

There are no questions about Cutler's future in Chicago. There are plenty of doubts, though, about his decisions, his mechanics and his attitude.

Offensive coordinator Mike Martz questioned his demeanor when he was working as an NFL Network analyst last year, but it's been nothing but sweet talk between them this season, even when Cutler was getting knocked around early on.

He got sacked six times in a 23-20 loss to Seattle at Soldier Field after sitting out the previous game with a concussion. The Bears were in the middle of a 1-3 slide back then that nearly ruined their season, but they're a different team these days.

They settled on their starting offensive line, committed to the run and cut back on the deep drops by Cutler. It all added up to seven wins in eight games before a loss at Green Bay in the regular-season finale and less wear-and-tear on their quarterback.

superior division record — one made possible by its improbable 13-10 win in Baltimore on Dec. 5. The Ravens were within a couple of first downs of securing a 10-6 win, but Pro Bowl safety Troy Polamalu caused a Joe Flacco fumble that led to Ben Roethlisberger's winning 9-yard touchdown pass with 2:51 remaining.

Just like that, a season flipped. But Steelers coach Mike Tomlin cautions the Ravens are capable of "flipping the script" in a series that's so close, each of the last four games was decided by three points. The combined score since 2003 is Ravens 302, Steelers 302.

Still, the Ravens are 0-2 in the postseason in Heinz Field, where new sod was put down amid a series of snowy days that followed the NHL's Winter Classic between the Capitals and Penguins on Jan. 1. That was hockey in the rain. This will be football with snow flurries, temperatures in the 20s and emotions that will be super heated.

Former Steelers linebacker Joey Porter proved that when he tried to climb aboard the Ravens' bus and fight Lewis in 2003. So did Plaxico Burress and James Trapp when they fought on the field in 2002. So did the Ravens, who stood mocking an oft-sacked Ben Roethlisberger in 2006. Perhaps that wasn't a good idea: Roethlisberger is 6-0 against them since then.

The numerous injuries illustrate the physical nature of the rivalry. Porter's dangerous hit on an unprotected Todd Heap in 2004 still infuriates the Ravens. Lewis ended running back Rashard Mendenhall's rookie season by breaking his shoulder in 2008. Ravens linebacker Jameel McClain's helmet hit on Heath Miller last month caused a concussion and led to a $40,000 fine. In the same game, Haloti Ngata smacked Roethlisberger in the face, breaking the quarterback's nose with a hit that cost him a $15,000 fine.

"We're similar styles, we're physical and we try to impose our will on each other," Steelers nose tackle Casey Hampton said. "I think both teams try to see themselves as bullies."

For the Ravens, perhaps there's a tinge of envy that the Steelers always seem to gain the upper hand when it matters; they are 2-8 against Roethlisberger. Ravens quarterback Joe Flacco, who threw two touchdown passes in a 30-7 wild-card dismantling of Kansas City last weekend, is 0-5 when he starts against Roethlisberger.

While Baltimore is 7-3 in road playoff games, Pittsburgh is 8-0 — zero losses in 40 years — when it meets a division rival in the postseason.

"Some stats you keep up with, some you don't care about," Lewis said. "I don't care. We can't pack a bag with 40 years on it and say, 'Hey guys, look what we haven't done in 40 years.' Forget it."

PLAYOFFS NOTEBOOK

Today

WHEN: 3:30 p.m.
TV: CBS (Greg Gumbel, Dan Dierdorf)
RADIO: ESPN (Dave Sims, James Lofton, Steve Tasker)
WEATHER: Snowy, 10-plus-mph winds, temps in the mid-20s
2010 REGULAR SEASON: Baltimore 12-4, Pittsburgh 12-4.
HEAD-TO-HEAD: Pittsburgh is 20-12 against the Ravens, including playoff wins following the 2001 and 2008 seasons. Split their two meetings this year.
POINT SPREAD/OVER-UNDER: Pittsburgh -3. Total is 37.
FUN PROP LINE: The odds of the first score of the game being a safety is 100-1.
ABOUT THE RAVENS: Quarterback Joe Flacco is making his seventh career postseason start. All have been on the road. Flacco, Dan Marino and Bernie Kosar are the only quarterbacks to appear in the playoffs each of their first three seasons ... A defense that was showing signs of vulnerability earlier in the year is playing its best ball and has allowed just 24 points over the last three games ... Both teams have a remarkable streak of 14 postseason games without allowing a 100-yard rusher.
ABOUT THE STEELERS: Quarterback Ben Roethlisberger overcame an early broken nose in the December game to lead Pittsburgh to a 13-10 win ... The Steelers led the NFL in rushing defense. In the two games earlier this season, Baltimore had 70 and 43 yards ... Since 2006, linebacker LaMarr Woodley has an NFL-best eight postseason sacks. Ravens counterpart Terrell Suggs is second with seven.
PICK: Ravens, 17-16.

GREEN BAY PACKERS AT ATLANTA FALCONS

WHEN: 7 p.m.
TV: FOX (Joe Buck, Troy Aikman, Chris Myers, Pam Oliver)
RADIO: ESPN (Ian Eagle, Tony Boselli, Scott Kaplan)
WEATHER: Dome. Weather better not be a factor.
2010 REGULAR SEASON: Green Bay 10-6, Atlanta 13-3.
HEAD-TO-HEAD: Series is tied, 13-13. The teams split a pair of postseason meetings (Packers won in 1995, Atlanta won in 2002). Atlanta beat visiting Green Bay in Week 12 with a field goal in the waning seconds.
POINT SPREAD/OVER-UNDER: Atlanta -2.5. Total is 44.
FUN PROP LINE: Green Bay quarterback Aaron Rodgers is 20-1 to score the game's first touchdown.
ABOUT THE PACKERS: Quarterback Aaron Rodgers picked up the first postseason win of his career last week, but it's rookie running back James Starks who opened the Falcons' eyes. "He came out of nowhere," said Atlanta linebacker Curtis Lofton. "I'd never heard of Starks. I'd never seen him on film until the past two weeks. But he's a talented back." ... Linebacker Clay Matthews had 13.5 sacks in the regular season to become the first Packer with double-digit sacks in consecutive seasons.
ABOUT THE FALCONS: Quarterback Matt Ryan is 20-2 at the Georgia Dome ... Only the Patriots (eight) had more players selected to the Pro Bowl than the seven Falcons ... Roddy White led the NFC with 1,389 receiving yards and led the NFL with 115 catches.
PICK: Packers, 23-21.

Sunday

SEATTLE SEAHAWKS AT CHICAGO BEARS

WHEN: Noon
TV: FOX (Kenny Albert, Daryl Johnston, Tony Siragusa)
RADIO: ESPN (Kevin Kugler, Mark Malone, Hub Arkush)
WEATHER: Dry, light wind, temperatures in the teens.
2010 REGULAR SEASON: Seattle 7-9, Chicago 11-5.
HEAD-TO-HEAD: Seattle holds a 9-5 edge, but the Bears won the only postseason meeting (2006). The Seahawks won at Chicago, 23-20, in Week 6.
POINT SPREAD/OVER-UNDER: Chicago -10. Total is 41.
FUN PROP LINE: A $100 bet on Seattle to win the game will net $375.
ABOUT THE SEAHAWKS: The postseason started with many questioning a system that would allow a 7-9 team into the playoffs. Naturally, the 7-9 Seahawks ousted the defending champion Saints ... Had the 28th-ranked offense and the 27th-ranked defense ... Special-teams plays could be interesting. Seattle's Leon Washington is one of the league's best kick returners and Chicago's Devin Hester is the best punt returner.
ABOUT THE BEARS: Quarterback Jay Cutler threw 16 interceptions and lost six fumbles. He also had 3,274 passing yards to become the first Chicago QB ever with 3,000 yards in consecutive seasons. The franchise has been around since 1920 ... Running back Matt Forte had at least 90 rushing yards in the last three games. In the earlier meeting with Seattle, he had eight carries for 11 yards.
PICK: Bears, 24-20.

NEW YORK JETS AT NEW ENGLAND PATRIOTS

WHEN: Sunday, 4:30 p.m.
TV: CBS (Jim Nantz, Phil Simms)
RADIO: ESPN (Kevin Harlan, Randy Cross, Kevin Kiley)
WEATHER: Dry, light breeze, temperatures in the upper 20s.
2010 REGULAR SEASON: Jets 11-5, New England 14-2.
HEAD-TO-HEAD: Series is tied, 51-51-1. New England has won both postseason meetings (1985, 2006). Split their two meetings this year.
POINT SPREAD/OVER-UNDER: New England -8.5. Total is 45.
FUN PROP LINE: The odds of the first score of the game being a Jets touchdown is about 3:1.
ABOUT THE JETS: Lost three of their last five regular-season games, starting with a 45-3 drubbing at New England, which nearly cost them a playoff spot ... Bombastic coach Rex Ryan has stated that this is a personal clash between him and Pats coach Bill Belichick. He said the same thing last week about Colts QB Peyton Manning ... Average a shade under 150 rushing yards in the four postseason games Ryan has been the head coach. The Pats were 16th against the run during the regular season and gave up 136 and 152 yards in their two games against New York.
ABOUT THE PATRIOTS: Quarterback Tom Brady threw 36 touchdowns and a ridiculous four interceptions. Brady has thrown an NFL-record 335 passes without a pick. Trivia geeks may note that Baltimore safety Ken Hamlin, on Oct. 17, was the last to intercept a Brady pass ... Have scored at least 30 points in each of their last eight games, tying an NFL record held by the 2007 Patriots and the 2000 Rams. Neither of those teams reached the Super Bowl.
PICK: Patriots, 28-17.

Teen mom hides full story from infuriated mom

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old mother. I am afraid to tell my mom that I have been speaking to my son's father, "Jeremy," who is also 17. She doesn't like him because when she found out I was pregnant, my best friend told her about the abuse I suffered from Jeremy.

Mom is scared he will abuse my son, and, being a teen, he will up and leave me when he finds the right person to be with. He has missed a year of the baby's life and so has his family.

Jeremy's parents want to meet their grandson. It's difficult to talk to Mom because of the way she feels about the family. She thinks they haven't tried to see my son, but in reality they're leaving it up to me to set up. How can I get my mom to be less angry about the situation? — TEEN MOM IN GRAND RAPIDS

DEAR TEEN MOM: You may be only 17, but because you are now a mother you are going to have to grow up — fast. Your mother has your best interests at heart, and also her grandchild's. You didn't say whether Jeremy was physically or emotionally abusive, but both are bad. And those are habits he may have learned from his parents. If he dropped out of your life for an entire year, the odds are high that he'll disappear again. So don't count on him for anything.

I am urging you to be completely honest with your mother. Sneaking around is childish. TELL her that the reason Jeremy's parents haven't seen the baby is they left it up to you to arrange, and you were afraid to tell her. It's honest and better than letting them take the rap for your unwillingness to speak up. It may make her less angry about the situation and more willing to compromise.

DEAR ABBY: I recently became engaged to a man I have been with for six years. We're planning a wedding this year.

I lost my dad six years ago. My stepmom has been in my life since I was 3. (I am now 33.) When I asked her if she would be willing to contribute to the wedding in place of Dad, she refused! According to her, Dad did not discuss this with her prior to his death.

What is proper protocol here? Was I out of line to ask if she'd be willing to contribute? I feel like the odd child out because my dad and stepmom contributed to my sister's wedding. Considering how long she has been in my life, this was a shock to me. What do you think, Abby? — FEELING ABANDONED IN MONTANA

DEAR FEELING ABANDONED: Many people have the mistaken impression that a bride's parents are required to pay for or contribute to her wedding. It's not true. A wedding is a gift, and while it would have been nice of your stepmother to have agreed to give you money for yours, no rule of protocol dictates that she had to.

At 33, you and your fiance should be able to finance your own wedding — and that's what you should do, without feeling abandoned. Many couples these days do exactly that.

DEAR ABBY: My former boss told me that my numerous suggestions, voluminous descriptions for systems improvements, suggestions for work outside the office, extra reports and documentation, large number of phone calls and multitudinous e-mails came across as intractable, intolerant and superfluous. Could he have been right? — T.K. IN RALEIGH, N.C.

DEAR T.K.: In a word: yes.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Jan. 15, 2011:

This year, you move in a new direction because you feel more innovative. You also will want to spend more money on yourself, and you probably need to. Don't avoid the doctor or certain necessities that make you feel better. Often, misunderstandings start out of nowhere. Be willing to confirm what you hear, as well as meetings. If you are single, you meet people when you least anticipate it. Summer 2011 looks unusually productive. If you are attached, the two of you could see a lifetime goal realized this year. GEMINI offers different talents but can work well with you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ Finally, you experience a day without obligations. Why not go out? Visit with a neighbor or a missed friend. You find out how sorely missed you were, too. Take off for a movie, flea market or whatever makes you happy. Tonight: Dinner and visiting with friends.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★ You might notice that you are tired and on a slow downhill slump. You do for everyone else, why not do for you? Schedule a massage, take a snooze or just become a couch potato. The theme is "indulge yourself." News from a distance causes reflection. Tonight: Continue the take-care-of-me theme.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ You see many people and situations differently. Your ability to flex and empathize helps you walk in another person's shoes. You could feel slightly ill at ease with another person. Don't worry, as you will figure this issue out soon enough. Tonight: All grins.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★ Step back out of the limelight for a while. Much-needed personal time might be necessary. A partner could be extremely difficult and touchy. You know what needs to be done, but you want to be in agreement with this person. Give the situation space. Tonight: Not to be found.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ You are like coffee percolating. You have lots of energy, but your direction might be unclear. Make plans to join friends for racquetball or some other favorite pastime. Take advantage of the weekend and more free time for people in general. Tonight: You are the party.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★ Check in with an older friend or relative. You can be sure someone needs an extra push. You are more in tune with the possibilities, especially as you have an excess of energy. Use it well, understanding you, too, have limits. Tonight: A force to be dealt with.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ Reach out for a loved one at a distance. You could be tired and exhausted, more than you are aware. Detach, and you might recharge. You know best what form of relaxation works for you. Tonight: Let your mind roam. Go for something different.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ Deal with others on a one-on-one level. Make time for a special person; nothing replaces your attention. Be willing to change plans at the drop of a hat. Make yourself available. Tonight: Chat over a cozy dinner.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ Listen to what is being shared. You might learn a lot. Don't respond immediately. Give yourself time to mull over what you hear. Your sense of humor saves the day in a heavy conversation. Tonight: Avoid overindulging.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★ Finally, you have some time. Invite a loved one along, only if you want to. Question a need to drop some cold water on another person. You want this person to be realistic. This might or might not work. Tonight: Slow down, if you are tired.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ Mars, the planet of energy, enters your sign. Get ready, world, as you become a ball of fire. You could become a terror if you are frustrated. The damages might not be reversible. Use care. Tonight: Be naughty, as only you can be.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★ Imagine what it is like to spend an easy day without pressure. Do you like the idea? Then make it so. You alone can create this type of happening. Whatever you decide, choose your company with care. Tonight: Play it low-key.

Ask the Guys

Dear Classified Guys,
Before we bought our house two years ago, the previous owner told us the asphalt roof shingles would last another ten years. The newly formed puddle in my daughter's bedroom begs to differ with him. I've gotten three quotes from roofers who advertise in the classifieds, each varying by $3000 in cost. I need to know what to look for in an estimate. If I simply go for the cheapest, will I end up with a cheap roof to match?

Cash: It sounds like your daughter should wear a swimsuit to bed instead of pajamas.

Carry: It's a rather unfortunate circumstance. But considering your daughter needs an umbrella for bedtime, you may want to act quickly. A typical roofing job would consist of removing the old shingles and disposing of them, replacing any weak or rotted sheathing, possibly over your daughter's bedroom, and installing the new roof.

Cash: It's likely the estimates are varying because the roofers are quoting a different quality of supplies or different amounts of work. Some may be simply adding new shingles over the old ones. Other contractors may be removing the old shingles first.

Carry: Have each contractor give you a summary of the work they plan on doing. Did they quote on replacing rotted sheathing or are they giving you an estimate based on only covering the roof with the new shingles?

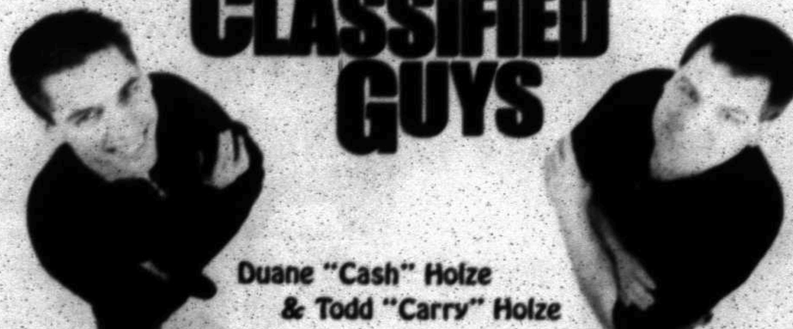

Cash: Also have the contractor break down the estimate into material and labor costs. You'll find that labor cost is considerably more than the material, but that's typical.

Carry: The material costs could vary depending on the quality of shingle your contractor is using. Look for the longest warranty shingle you can afford. Since labor is the largest part of the cost, you don't want to be replacing your roof again anytime soon.

Cash: Each company can vary dramatically on labor costs based on their overhead and estimated time for the job.

Carry: Verify that each company carries liability insurance and call their references. Then select the one who gives you quality materials and a complete job for the best price.

Cash: And in the meantime, you can always get your daughter one of those canopy beds to keep her dry during a rainstorm!

Got a question, funny story, or just want to give us your opinion? Email us at: comments@classifiedguys.com.

Fast Facts

Falling Rock

If you've ever cleaned out your gutters, you'd find the bottom is covered with small stone pebbles. They didn't just fall from the sky. They come from a process known as granule loss. Over time the fiberglass matt of asphalt shingles break down when exposed to ultraviolet light. This causes the small granular stones to become dislodged during rain, snow or windstorms. These pebbles then wash down into your gutters.

Moo-ving Up

Tired of the cost and hassle of replacing your roof? Maybe you'd like to mow it every week instead. Sod was the main type of roofing in the plains of the mid-west in the early 18th century and is still used today. It acts as a great insulator, but doesn't necessarily keep out all the rain. The common complaint of a sod roof was the amount of leaks. While many towns and insurance companies don't consider it an acceptable roofing material, some people who build energy-efficient homes still may use this type of material. But it makes you ask, how do they get the lawnmower on the roof?

Reader Humor

Up on the Roof

I own a roofing company and work with a crew of four guys. Every summer I hire a young college kid to help with the clean-up while we're on the roof. My last employee was great. He usually cleaned up the grounds before the guys were even done with the job.

One day while we were on the roof, I yelled down to him, "If you clean up all the tools, you can go home early." The kid went straight to work and 10 minutes later I saw his car go down the driveway.

That's when one of my guys came over the roof peak and said, "The kid did a great job. There's just one problem."

"What's that?" I asked.

He smirked back, " He put away all the ladders!"

Chevrolet Corvette ZR1 pumps up 638 hp and races to 205 mph

By Bob Plunkett
New Car News

BRASELTON, Ga. -- Put on the helmet, slip into a big-bolstered bucket and get a firm grip on the leather-bound steering wheel because we're taking the ZR1 -- quickest production Corvette ever -- on a triple-digit speed run at Road Atlanta, the 2.5-mile closed-circuit raceway cast across the hills of Georgia. Varoom, goes the deep-throat sound spewing from ZR1's quadruple chromed pipes at the tail.

Stomping the pedal at our launch pad in Pit Row, we lurch forward in a vehicle that zips to 60 mph in less than 3.4 seconds, then climb into the hills as the speedo needle ticks to triple-digit territory with Vette's rigid aluminum chassis riding low to the asphalt in a rock-solid stance. In swift sequence dipping through the Esses, this awesome racer claws asphalt through zig-zag-zig-zag maneuvers like a slot car locked in the groove of a serpentine track. We note that our machine, wearing new Inferno Orange paint, runs through twisties with the poise of a Formula racer.

Rip, clip, whip -- it charges down a straight to Turn 6, then deftly handles the hard kink at 7 and zips to hold-your-breath-scary speed in the run through 8 and 9, and down to the -- brake-brake-brake -- valley chicane of 10A and 10B. Then it's over the big hump while passing beneath the Suzuki Bridge and we're surely flying on the down-slope into Turn 12 for a speed-blurred prance along the front straightaway. Fun on four Michelin Pilot Sport PS2 tires won't feel any better than this, and neither will a Corvette, as the ZR1 -- a limited-production high-performance version packing a supercharged 6.2-liter V8 engine -- represents the pinnacle for this series.

The ZR1 designation in Corvette history begins with an optional performance package for the C3 'Vette available from 1970 to 1972 with a 370-hp LT1 engine. Then the 1990 "King of the Hill" ZR1 Corvette rolled out with a 5.7-liter V8 engine worth more than 400 hp. The 2011 ZR1 traces to 2009 issues based on a C6 Corvette aluminum chassis but with unique carbon-fiber body panels and the supercharged LS9 V8 high-performance engine aboard.

The vehicle's wide front fenders, see-through hood and roof are all made from carbon fiber, along with the front splitter, rear spoiler and side rocker extensions. Lightweight and super-strong, the carbon fiber material pares pounds from the vehicle's curb weight, and also boosts the weight distribution front-to-rear so the ZR1 -- split 51/49 percent front/rear -- turns and swerves and dances through a curvy set of road wiggles like a true exotic racer.

A long 105.7-inch wheelbase for the C6 platform enhances the smooth-ride traits for ZR1 while also adding space to the two-seat cockpit. Essential components of the remarkable chassis center on unique hydroformed rails extending from tip to tail and united by aluminum cross members to forge that incredibly firm foundation for a sports car.

Those unusual side rails -- each a single piece of steel stretched from tip to tail -- curve downward at mid-section to make room for the enlarged cockpit. Due to inherent strength and stiffness of the rails, designers were able to make significant organizational changes inside the rails, revamping the space more efficiently. A closed driveline tunnel also enhances cockpit space, particularly since the transmission is positioned in the rear, thus helping balance the weight fore to aft.

The independent suspension front and rear consists of a short/long-arm (SLA) double wishbone with cast aluminum upper and lower control arms, transverse-mounted composite lead springs and monotube shocks. And a chassis control system employs GM's Magnetic Selective Ride Control (MSRC) device with electronically controlled variable damping to switch automatically from super-firm to comfortable touring mode.

The Brembo-brand brakes for ZR1 are awesome and made with heat-resistant carbon-ceramic material. Cross-drilled rotors measure 15.5 inches up front and 15.0 inches in back with six-piston front and four-piston rear calipers painted bright blue. The Michelin Pilot Sport 2 ZP run-flat tires -- 285/30ZR19 front and 335/25ZR20 rear -- mount on 20-spoke aluminum rims painted Sterling Silver. They're 19 x 10 inches in front and 20 x 12 inches in back.

Then there's that LS9 V8 churning massive torque to twirl the rear wheels. The 6.2-liter plant hitches to an intercooled Eaton R2300 supercharger with four-lobe twisted rotors. It develops 638 hp at 6500 rpm -- that's 102.9 hp per liter of displacement -- with torque of 604 lb-ft at only 3800 rpm for a car package that tips the scales at only 3,324 pounds.

FAST FACTS

2011 CHEVROLET CORVETTE ZR1 SUPERCAR

Description:	2-seat performance sportscar
Model Options:	Corvette ZR1 Coupe
Wheelbase:	105.7 inches
Overall Length:	176.2 inches
Engine size:	OHV 6.2-L V8/SC/LS9
Transmissions/ speeds:	Manual/6/TR6060
Rear/front drive:	Rear
Steering:	Power rack and pinion
Braking:	Power 4-disc ABS/TCS
Air bags:	2 (front) 2 (side)
EPA mileage est. city/hwy:	14/20 mpg
MSRP	$109,800

The LS9 V8 links strictly with a Tremec TR6060 six-speed manual gearbox through a dual-disc clutch in conjunction with a limited-slip differential. It incorporates Performance Traction Management (PTM) technology as part of ZR1's Launch Control feature to optimize traction for greater and more consistent performance on a track. The PTM system holds a predetermined engine speed while the driver puts the throttle on the floor. Then the driver quickly releases the clutch and the system modulates engine torque 100 times a second to maximize tire traction.

Passive safety gear includes dual multi-stage frontal air bags plus seat-mounted side air bags, three-point seat belts with pretensioners. ZR1's cockpit fits tight like Spandex but it's luxurious with the pair of bolstered bucket seats flanking the center spine clad in fine leather hides. Standard content includes power-adjustable heated seats; a Bose premium audio system, navigation system, ZR1-specific badging on sill plates and headrests, plus the gauge cluster adding a ZR1 logo on the tachometer and a 220-mph readout on the speedometer.

Also, there's a boost gauge in the instrument cluster as well as a through-the-windshield head-up display (HUD) which adds a special track mode and g-force meter. The estimated top speed for a ZR1 -- if you dare -- runs to 205 mph.
