Police team says shooting 'proper'

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A Midland police detective acted properly when he shot and critically wounded a 51-year-old Midland man near a Highway 80 nightclub, a police shooting team has concluded.

In the report, which has been relayed to Police Chief Richard Czech, the eight-man team concluded unanimously that Det. Brian Bogart, 31, "acted in a logical and professional manner" when he shot Howard Mitchell.

"He was in compliance with state laws, and the general orders of this department regarding the use of deadly force," Special Operations Lt. Jerry Morris said.

Bogart fired his nine-millimeter pistol twice after Mitchell displayed a fully-loaded, chrome .38-caliber revolver, Morris said. At the time of the confrontation, Mitchell was in his pickup truck in the parking lot of the Bojangles Club, 3709 W. Wall Ave., Morris said.

Bogart, who was at the club working on a burglary investigation, was just a few feet from Mitchell standing near the driver's side of the truck, Morris said.

Mitchell remained hospitalized in critical condition this morning at Odessa Medical Center, a nursing supervisor said today.

Morris said investigators are still unsure what prompted Mitchell to reach for the weapon. Just before the shooting, Bogart had arrested a man for public intoxication outside the club, but Morris said there was "no connection" between Mitchell and the man who was arrested.

"His (Mitchell's) behavior was so irrational at this point, we don't have any reason for it," Morris said.

Investigators are not sure why Mitchell was carrying a loaded weapon on his lap, and do not know who owns the weapon, Morris said.

Czech, who was out of town when the incident occurred about 12:30 a.m. Saturday, commented on the shooting for the first time in public this morning.

"From what I can tell, and the evidence I have on hand, it was a justifiable shooting," Czech said. "It looks to me like everything is fine," regarding Bogart's action, he added.

Tom Morgan, a Midland attorney who was hired by the Mitchell family the morning of the shooting, said today he "totally disagreed" with the finding. Morgan last week had said the shooting was "unjustified."

The Midland attorney has been subpoenaed by District Attorney Al Schorre to appear before a grand jury scheduled to hear evidence on the shooting Wednesday.

County renews day care's $1 annual lease

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Efforts to save financially troubled Taylor Park Child Care Center got a shot in the arm Monday from county commissioners, who agreed to re-sign its $1 annual lease with a new board of directors.

"We're behind you 100 percent," County Judge Bill Ahders told a group representing the day care center and Texas Department of Human Services seeking the keep the indebted facility afloat.

The Taylor Park center cares for about 100 children — mostly from low-income homes.

Before Monday, the Taylor Park center's board members had refrained from discussing the nature of the non-profit corporation's financial difficulties, saying only that they are seeking private contributions to keep the center afloat.

"It looks like they owe more money than they thought they did," said DHS Area Administrator Ann Bradford, referring to the center's debt, which has yet to be determined.

DHS clients are believed to be the primary beneficiaries from local efforts to save the center, 1321 S. Goode St., which is licensed by the state to care for 140 children, ages 0-13.

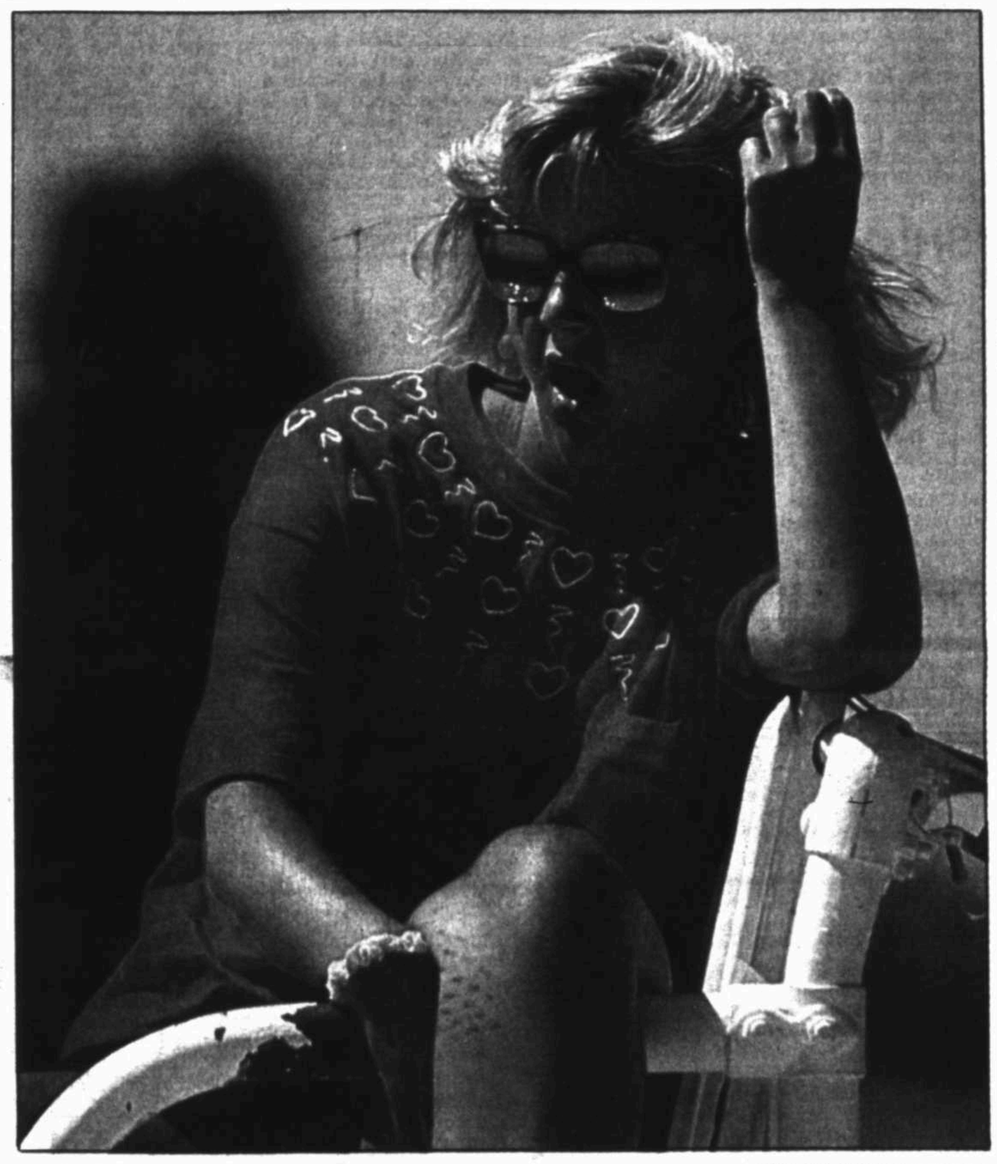

"If it were to closed we would have to find immediate child care for these children," Mrs. Bradford said, adding that 17 staff members jobs also would be affected.

DHS contributes $243,000 of the center's $300,000 annual operating budget. The center's contract with DHS provides child care services to 79 children, many of whom come from low-income and single-parent families, according to Mrs. Bradford.

The center also provides care to another 15 children, whose parents participate in Midland County's Project Self-Sufficiency, the program's executive director Tom Burns acknowledged.

Commissioners responded to requests from Mrs. Bradford and Donna Repman, one of the center's three remaining board members, by agreeing to re-sign its $1 per year lease to a new board, which has yet to be named.

Oil price surge weakens today

From Staff and Wire Reports

The latest surge in oil prices attributed to the imminent cease-fire between Iran and Iraq began showing signs of weakness by this morning.

By midmorning, futures contracts were off 16 cents, trading at $15.71 on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The contract for September delivery of West Texas Intermediate crude advanced 61 cents Monday to close at $15.87 a barrel.

Prices of refined oil products traded on theexchange also soared. Wholesale heating oil for September delivery jumped 1.46 cents a gallon to finish at 44.50 cents, while wholesale unleaded gasoline for September rose 1.42 cents to 46.65 cents.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar announced that Iran and Iraq would begin a cease-fire in their Persian Gulf war on Aug. 20. The news followed several days of intense diplomacy that ended a deadlock in nearly two weeks of U.N.-mediated truce talks.

"The notice of a cease-fire was the primary positive," said Fred Demler, an economist for Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

Many oil traders believe the cease-fire will lead to more cohesion within the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, of which Iran and Iraq are members. That could lead to a reduction of overproduction by they and other OPEC members.

But other traders are more skeptical. They warn that Iran and Iraq will badly need oil revenues after the war to rebuild their ravaged economies, and will be tempted to continue to exceed their official OPEC production quotas.

Demler said Monday's advance in futures prices also was fueled by technical market factors.

Unscathed Shultz praises efforts of Bolivian leaders

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz, unscathed by a bomb attack blamed on cocaine traffickers, later praised Bolivian efforts he said have put drug lords on the run in this cradle of coca cultivation.

The U.S. envoy, whose visit intended in part to express U.S. support for Bolivia's stepped up anti-drug efforts, told reporters he was not "intimidated by the tactic of using violence to try to scare government officials."

A remote-controlled bomb damaged three cars in Shultz' 11-vehicle motorcade as he drove to La Paz from the airport Monday morning.

The blast ruptured a tire and blew out three windows, including one next to Shultz's wife Helena, who was not riding with her husband. Another bomb went off at dawn Monday at the U.S. Embassy commissary in La Paz.

No injuries were reported in either blast.

Police said the roadway bomb, believed to be several sticks of dynamite, was set off by someone on a hill overlooking the road seconds after Shultz' car passed. The blast tore up pavement and threw rocks across the road.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility, but Foreign Minister Guillermo Bedregal said both bombings were the work of cocaine traffickers.

On VP, son says Bush 'keeping it tight'

AUSTIN (AP) — With the Republican National Convention less than a week away, George Bush is keeping his vice presidential thoughts to himself, his eldest son says.

"I can't get a read off him. I've been...trying to get a head fake or a wink, I can't even get that," George W. Bush, who left Midland last to work on his father's campaign, said Monday.

Despite the secrecy, the younger Bush said the vice presidential selection has been a hot topic of conversation in the Bush household.

"Last night (Sunday) at the dinner table, we had five kids, five wives, a very active wife, bombarding him with all sorts of suggestions. And he absorbed them and said, 'Thank you very much,' " Bush reported.

"I have no earthly idea. It's going to be an interesting choice. I really believe he's going to try to keep it — as we say in the oil business — tight. Just to see if it can be done, for starters. And he will announce, probably, Wednesday.... I will be anxiously waiting to see what the decision is."

Next week's Republican National Convention will have a distinct Texas accent, said Sen. Phil Gramm, the man who will nominate the elder Bush for president.

"It is clear in this convention that I'm doing the nominating and another Texan's doing the accepting, and that's pretty much what conventions are about. So it's a Texas show from that point of view," said Gramm, R-Texas.

However, Gramm said, those watching the GOP convention will hear something quite different from last month's Democratic convention, where Texas state Treasurer Ann Richards set the tone with several wisecracks about Bush during her keynote speech.

"You're going to see a stark contrast between my speech and the speeches you heard at the Democratic convention," Gramm said.

Gramm will 'talk about issues'

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Republican George Bush can't beat Democrat Michael Dukakis if the 1988 presidential campaign "turns out to be a popularity contest," Sen. Phil Gramm said Monday.

Gramm, who will nominate Vice President Bush to be the GOP standard bearer at the Republican National Convention next week in New Orleans, said Bush must stress the issues and how his stands differ from Dukakis' if he wants to win the election.

"The Democrats know they cannot win this race on the issues and we know we cannot win this race any other way," Gramm said at a Capitol news conference. "So I'm going to talk about the issues."

Two Big Spring teen-agers killed Monday when van strikes go-cart

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — Two Big Spring youths were killed late Monday after the go-cart in which they were riding was struck by a van near Interstate 20, the Department of Public Safety reported.

Clinton Monroe Robbins, 16, and a 15-year-old youth whose name was not released, suffered fatal injuries in the crash that occurred at 9:40 p.m. three miles east of Big Spring on the south service road, DPS reported.

The two youths were riding in the go-cart — which was not equipped with lights — southbound on a paved road that crosses under I-20 between the north and south service roads.

Lubbock church anticipates feast-day messages

By WENDY E. LANE

LUBBOCK (AP) — A Catholic church where parishioners have reported receiving messages from the Virgin Mary is mobilizing in preparation for a traditional feast day celebration that is expected to draw thousands.

In the reported messages, which three parishioners claim they receive during Monday night recitations of the rosary, have come predictions that 20,000 people will flock on Aug. 15 to St. John Neumann Church, where Mary will perform healings and miracles.

Almost 1,200 people attended Monday night's service, where the "messages" read aloud following the rosary service told worshipers to prepare for the Feast of the Assumption of Mary next Monday.

"Open your hearts to the many blessing that will be given during this next week," read Mike Slate, a retired Air Force officer who has reported receiving the messages since February.

"My son is sending many pilgrims who are searching for truth, searching for the light."

Slate, along with Mary Constancio and Theresa Werner, kneel each Monday night at the altar, scribbling notes on yellow pads as worshipers recite the rosary.

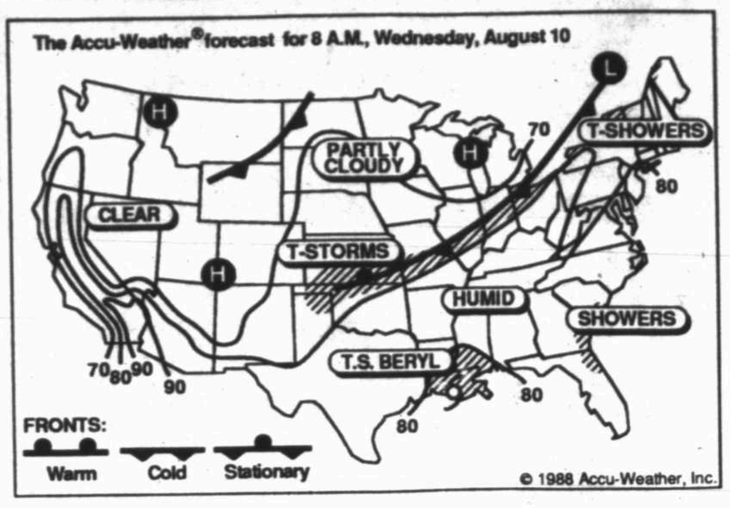

Crowds at the service, which lasts for more than four hours, have grown from a handful into hundreds since February. For the past two weeks, the service has been shown on closed circuit television to viewers who sit in the church's courtyard, unable to fit in the 850-seat sanctuary.

Lubbock Bishop Michael Sheehan has expressed reservations about the message reports, reminding worshipers that until the events at St. John Neumann can be investigated by church officials, they do not have the approval of the Catholic Church. Sheehan, who had planned to preside at the church's celebration next Monday, has said he will not attend.

Meanwhile, plans by St. John Neumann pastor Monsignor Joseph James to celebrate the feast day simply with the Monday night rosary service have grown into a full weekend of worship at the church.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Partly cloudy skies continue

From Staff and Wire Reports

Partly cloudy skies and a 20 percent chance of mostly evening thundershowers are in the forecast for tonight according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be near 70 and winds will be out of the south 5-10 m.p.h.

Wednesday's forecast will be much the same with partly cloudy skies and less than a 20 percent chance of afternoon thundershowers. The high will be in the upper 90s and winds will continue out of the south 10-15 m.p.h.

Monday's high of 97 was seven degrees cooler than the record high of 104 set for that date in 1952. The overnight low of 66 was four degrees warmer than the record low of 62 set for this date in 1976.

STATE

High heat was expected to continue across Texas through Wednesday and possibly longer, forecasters say.

The only hope for any immediate relief was that Tropical Storm Beryl might move closer to the Texas coast and move some cooling showers into the state. But that would not be possible for at least 24 hours or more, forecasters said.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were possible across West Texas and Southeast Texas through tonight.

Lows tonight will be in the 60s in the mountains of West Texas and in the 70s over the rest of the state.

Highs tomorrow will remain hot, mostly in the 90s, ranging to above 100 degrees.

Thunderstorms were reported at dawn today in northern sections of the Panhandle and in extreme West Texas near El Paso. The rest of the state had clear to partly cloudy skies and warm temperatures.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 70s and 80s except in the mountains of West Texas where the mercury dipped into the 60s. Extremes ranged from 64 at Marfa to 87 at Fort Worth.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 69 at Amarillo, 81 at Waco, 81 at Waco, 79 at Austin, 78 at Houston, 76 at Corpus Christi, 78 at Brownsville, 71 at San Angelo and 68 at Lubbock, Midland and El Paso.

NATION

Fierce thunderstorms ranged from Michigan to Kansas today after much of the central United States was belted by storms bringing large hail, drenching rains and winds that blew out windows and leveled trees and power poles.

Strong storms ripped through northeast Kansas and northern Missouri early today but the intensity of many storms began to fade in early morning.

In southern Wisconsin, high winds toppled trees across Highway 24 at Muskego, while in Vernon, winds gusted to 60 mph.

Strong thunderstorm winds also scattered trees at Roscoe and Rockton, Ill., as well as in Plainview, Donahue and Walcott, Iowa. Power poles fell in high winds at West Liberty, Iowa.

In Kansas City, Mo., strong winds brought down trees and blew out windows.

Guns over gulf to cease fire August 20

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — As dawn breaks over the Persian Gulf on Aug. 20, Iran and Iraq's guns are to fall silent after eight years of war that have claimed the lives of up to 1 million people.

Peace talks to end the deadly conflict will begin five days later in Geneva.

"The restoration of peace will bring to the peoples of both countries victories far greater than those of war," Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said Monday in announcing the truce.

The Security Council meets today to authorize a 350-man unarmed U.N. peacekeeping force to monitor a cease-fire and troop withdrawals.

"I have been assured by the two parties to the conflict that they will observe this cease-fire in the context of the full implementation of Resolution 598," the Security Council's comprehensive peace plan, said Perez de Cuellar.

"The governments of the Islamic Republic of Iran and the Republic of Iraq have also agreed to the deployment of United Nations observers as of the time and date of the cease-fire."

Perez de Cuellar did not announce dates for a troop withdrawal, prisoner exchange or other elements of the year-old U.N. peace plan.

The populations and economies of both Iran and Iraq have been exhausted by a war fought with modern weapons but with tactics that harked back to the most brutal campaigns of World War I: set-piece battles, trench warfare, mustard gas attacks, human wave assaults.

Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati of Iran told reporters on Monday: "I wish to declare my government is prepared to accept the demand of the secretary-general and that of the entire world community to refrain from any military action on land, sea and air, starting today....

"Let me express my sincere hope that today's historic announcement will be the first step in the implementation of all provisions of Resolution 598, and the achievement of a just, comprehensive and honorable setttlement, returning peace and stability to all the region," he added.

Ambassador Ismat Kittani of Iraq told reporters: "Now we begin the arduous but happy march that begins from here. I am sure it will not be a smooth road, but it will be much more pleasant than fighting and bloodshed."

The cease-fire agreement was announced after a weekend of feverish negotiations in which Iraq gave up its demand for face-to-face talks with Iran as a precondition to a truce.

On July 18, Iran abandoned its longstanding insistence that Iraq be branded the aggressor in the war as a first step toward peace, ending a year-long stalemate in peace efforts.

One provision of Resolution 598 will establish an impartial commission to judge responsibility for the conflict, and Velayati made it clear Iran hopes this commission will blame Iraq for starting it.

War broke out in September 1980 when Iraq invaded Iran after a series of clashes along the Shatt-al-Arab waterway that separates them. The waterway is Iraq's only outlet to the gulf.

On Monday, the secretary-general's office released a report saying the gulf peacekeeping mission may include a small naval patrol for the waterway, the first time the United Nations has planned to commission a fleet.

The report estimates the cost of the unarmed peacekeeping force at $74 million for the first six months, of which $47 million would be start-up costs. The United Nations will assess its 159 members for the cost of the mission.

"I am not a good name-caller. People don't care what I think about Michael Dukakis in terms of some cutesy-poo thing I might call him. Whether I like Michael Dukakis or whether I don't like him, he's the Democratic nominee for president of the United States. I'm not going to demean the office by trying to think up some cute name that I can call him that somebody might laugh at," Gramm said.

Texas Democratic Party officials jokingly have referred to last month's Democratic National Convention in Atlanta as their state convention due to the prominent role played by Texans.

Among them were Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, the vice presidential nominee; Ms. Richards, the keynoter; U.S. House Speaker Jim Wright of Fort Worth, convention chairman; former U.S. Rep. Barbara Jordan, who seconded Bentsen's nomination; Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, who gave a prime-time speech, and state Rep. Lena Guerrero, D-Austin, who helped present the party platform to delegates.

Gramm said he plans to use his speech to highlight the differences between the vice president and Dukakis on issues ranging from sentencing drug pushers to the budget.

"The campaign in Texas is going to be a hotly contested campaign," Gramm said. "We've got to put before the people of Texas those two records. If we don't win in Texas given Michael Dukakis' record, we don't deserve to win."

Responding, Dukakis' Texas' campaign chairman, Railroad Commissioner John Sharp, said he was anxious for an issues-oriented campaign.

"When the Texas oil and gas industry started falling apart, the Texas banking industry began failing and families were being forced off their farms, where was George Bush?" Sharp asked. "We haven't heard from the vice president on these issues which are of utmost importance to Texans in seven and a half years."

SHULTZ

In Washington, the State Department said a team of U.S. agents would fly to Bolivia today to help officials investigate the bombing.

After giving a talk entitled "Winning The War Against Narcotics" at a La Paz hotel on Monday evening, Shultz left through a back exit under extremely tight security and was driven to the airport for a flight to Costa Rica.

This time, the airport road was cordoned off.

The 67-year-old Shultz has been secretary of state since 1982. He has traveled widely during that time but has never before been attacked.

In his talk to government officials and business leaders, Shultz praised Bolivia's cooperation with the United States in recent anti-drug efforts.

He said Congress "has looked at your law and your performance with great interest, and I trust that your steady commitment will convince the members of our legislative body of your serious intentions. To sum up, the drug traffickers are in trouble in Bolivia."

Last month, Bolivia passed a law that declares 90 percent of coca plantations in the country illegal and imposes stiff penalties on coca producers and traffickers.

It also captured cocaine kingpin Roberto Suarez Gomez, who the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration called one of the world's leading cocaine traffickers. Suarez Gomez is now serving a 15-year prison sentence.

U.S. economic aid topped the agenda in meetings with Shultz, said Planning Minister Gonzalo Sanchez de Lozada. He said Shultz had promised to speed up disbursements of funds Congress has alread approved.

The United States has allocated $75 million in aid to Bolivia for fiscal 1988. Of that amount, $15 million is earmarked for narcotics interdiction and crop substitution efforts.

The go-cart failed to stop at a stop sign and was struck broadside by a westbound vehicle, a 1978 Chevrolet van driven by Mary McMullin Paul of Big Spring, DPS reports said.

The two occupants were thrown out of the vehicle, which was not equipped with any type of safety belts, the reporting trooper noted. Robbins was pronounced dead at the scene by Howard County Justice of the Peace China Long. The other youth died later at Scenic Mountain Medical Center, according to the DPS.

The report also noted that the investigation into the accident is continuing.

The identity of the second youth is being withheld until his father, who was out of town at the time of the accident, is notified, a DPS report said.

Survey shows teens know about AIDS, but not STDs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teenagers understand how AIDS is caught but don't know how to avoid getting other sexually transmitted diseases. Many drink to excess, use drugs, eat badly, neglect to wear seat belts and ride with drinking drivers. A substantial number have seriously considered suicide.

Those are the results of a survey, sponsored by health education groups and the Health and Human Services Department, which showed that teens often make wrong decisions about their health and safety even when they know better.

Dr. Robert E. Windom, assistant health secretary and head of the U.S. Public Health Service, called the results "somewhat dismaying."

"The results give us fresh insight concerning what our nation's teen-agers know and how they act concerning health and sex-related issues — but they also show that too many young people, even when they know better, don't always make the right health decisions," Windom said.

A margin of error for the survey was not immediately available, said spokeswoman Lisa Clough, but about 11,000 eighth- and 10-graders from a nationally representative sample of more than 200 public and private schools were surveyed.

The survey, conducted in the fall of 1987, showed that alcohol and drug use continue to be problems among the nation's young people.

Twenty-six percent of the eighth-graders and 38 percent of the 10th-graders said they had had five or more drinks on one occasion during the two weeks preceding the survey.

About one in 10 adolescents said they had smoked marijuana during the past month, and one in 15 said they had used cocaine during that period.

Most teens understand that acquired immune deficiency syndrome is transmitted by sexual intercourse and drug needles. They know that condoms are effective in helping avoid AIDS and believe they should be used.

But 47 percent mistakenly believe that there is an increased risk of getting AIDS when donating blood, and about half of the students are unsure or mistakenly believe that washing after sex reduces the chances of being infected.

The survey noted that 2.5 million teen-agers are infected with sexually transmitted disease each year.

GRAMM

Gramm also said he would shy away from slinging personal wisecracks toward Dukakis despite the one-liners Democrats such as Ann Richards and Jim Hightower zinged at Bush during the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta.

"I'm not a good name caller," he said. "People don't care what I think about Michael Dukakis in terms of some cutesy-pooh kind of thing I might call him."

Gramm said his speech would contrast Bush's and Dukakis' positions on issues such as national defense, taxing and spending, crime and social issues.

"If it turns out to be a popularity contest, if it turns out to simply be a choice between two people who don't appear to be very different, ...we would not win," Gramm said. "If we can clearly define the issues, if we can make it clear what Michael Dukakis is likely to do if he's elected based on what he's done in Massachusetts, based on the positions he's taken all his life, if we can compare and contrast that with what George Bush has done in a lifetime of service to America, I think we'll win the election."

George W. Bush, a Midland businessman and the vice president's oldest son, said Dukakis' choice of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas for a running mate "raised the stakes" for the battle over Texas this fall. Having Gramm nominate his father, Bush said, "signals again how important Texas is."

"We're going to use every single talent, every single weapon at our disposal to whip Michael Dukakis," he said.

Gramm predicted a "hotly contested campaign" for Texas' 29 electoral votes. He said the Republicans will win the state by following Ronald Reagan's and Bill Clements' records of capturing the vote in rural Texas.

"We are going to fight it out," he said. "We don't suffer any delusions that we are (not) challenged."

CARE

"We believe that the most viable option is for the old corporation to fold and for a new board to be appointed," Mrs. Bradford told commissioners. "The new board members wouldn't be responsible for past liabilities."

County Commissioners and city council members had high hopes for the day care center when it opened in April 1983.

However, Mrs. Repman and City Council member Robert Rendall, who stepped down from the center's 15-member board two years ago, acknowledged that the Taylor Park facility has been plagued with financial difficulties from the beginning.

While serving on the board, Rendall and fellow directors raised enough money to pay employee withholding taxes due the Internal Revenue Service, he said.

The $28,000 tax bill wasn't paid because of a mix-up in IRS identification numbers, said Mrs. Repman, emphasizing that the center's books are presently "in good shape."

However, "We just can't seem to overcome the past," she said.

Construction of the 12,000-square-foot metal-brick-and-mortar building, in the southwest corner of Taylor Park at Goode Street and Griffin Avenue, was a project of Midland County's $1.6 million federal rehabilitation program for an economically-depressed "windowpane" area on the city's south side.

The city of Midland, which contributed $40,000 of its federal Community Development funds toward purchasing equipment and supplies for the center, leased the site to Midland County for $1 per year.

The center is operated by the non-profit Midland County Child Care Corp. and is funded through private donations and sliding scale fees, meaning children from low-income families pay what they can for the day care service.

In other action Monday, commissioners:

- Approved a depository contract with NCNB Texas National Bank subject to review by legal counsel.
- Opened bids for the construction of the Midland County Adult Probationers' Rehabilitation Center. The court agreed to study the four bids prior to awarding a contract.
- Authorized the county auditor to advertise for bids on asphalt, emulsion and aggregate and petroleum products.
- Renewed a $19,000 contract with Midland College to administer the county alcohol breath testing.
- Signed a resolution in support of Proposition 1, the Good Roads Amendment.

SHOOTING

"I think the facts will speak for themselves," Morgan said today, declining to elaborate on any evidence he might have. "I'd be happy to tell the grand jury everything that I know."

Morgan said the condition of his client was worsening.

"He is in bad shape," the attorney said.

Said Czech of Morgan's contentions: "I have no idea what he is trying to do. His actions are not consistent with the actions of most of the attorneys I have dealt with.

"I don't think anyone should make those kind of judgments before the facts are known," the police chief said.

Schorre said he has not talked with Morgan since the shooting.

The investigation just completed is one of three conducted by the department.

A separate internal affairs probe remains in progress, as is a a criminal investigation into Mitchell's alleged assault on Bogart.

Charges of aggravated assault of a peace officer and unlawfully carrying a weapon are pending against Mitchell, who is under police guard at the hospital, according to police spokesman Cpl. Jim White.

The shooting team began work at the scene just after the incident, Morris said, adding that the manner of investigation is skewed against the officer.

"We were looking for something that was wrong," Morris said. "We had to look as if he was guilty and see if we could prove him innocent."

Morris also criticized Morgan for so quickly faulting Bogart, who joined the department April 16, 1982.

"I think Morgan needs to try his case in court, and not in the press," the officer said.

The results of the shooting team investigation will be turned over to the grand jury, and team members might be asked to testify, Schorre said.

Bush: Dukakis 'stealth' candidate

Associated Press

Democrat Michael Dukakis says voters are getting fed up with "a daily diet" of attacks by George Bush, but the Republican vice president says he is just pointing out differences with the Massachusetts governor.

Bush set the tone Monday for next week's Republican National Convention, making a rare appearance for a nominee at platform hearings and lighting into the Democratic candidate.

"He's the stealth candidate," Bush said. "While he can't decide about the stealth bomber, he favors instead stealth policies — they can be neither seen nor heard."

Dukakis supports research and development for the supersecret bomber but has not vowed to support deployment.

As Bush got off one of his better lines, Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas said he wouldn't stoop to using "some cutesy-poo" name to attack Dukakis during his nominating speech for Bush.

"I'm not going to demean the office by trying to think up some cute name that I can call him that somebody might laugh at," Gramm said, referring to wisecracking speeches that Texans Ann Richards and Jim Hightower made at the Democratic National Convention.

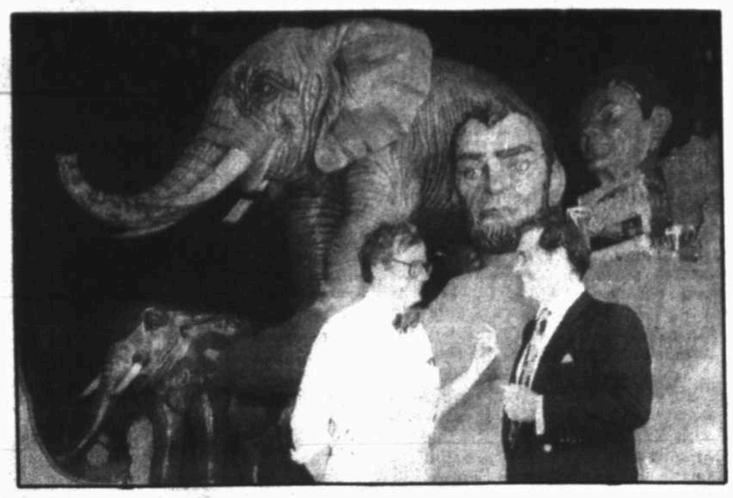

The vice president, in the convention city for only a few hours Monday, scheduled a speech today to a police group in Erie, Pa., emphasizing criminal justice issues — another area where Republicans think Dukakis is vulnerable.

Dukakis headed for what he hopes is his last meeting of the National Governors' Association as the Massachusetts chief executive. After the closing session in Cincinnati, Dukakis planned a speech on housing.

The governors heard a farewell speech from President Reagan on Monday, with the GOP incumbent staying away from the campaign specifics but boasting of the accomplishments of his administration.

"Our states, like our citizens, have known the blessings of the longest peacetime economic expansion on record," Reagan said.

In the convention city, politics took a back seat to the weather as tropical storm Beryl pounded away on the region. The storm stalled off the coast, with strong winds blowing heavy rain through the city.

Dukakis was weary of the constant pounding from Bush, whom he leads by double-digit margins in the national polls on the fall election, and he said the public is getting tired of it as well.

"I don't think they're interested in a daily diet of this kind of thing and it's one of the reasons, at least at this point, the Republican campaign seems to be in trouble," Dukakis said in Boston.

At first, the Massachusetts governor said he would not respond to Bush.

"I think the way I'm going to win the presidency is not by responding every day to what some speechwriter has put in front of Mr. Bush," Dukakis said.

"George Bush has some of the highest negatives ever recorded in the history of American politics, and I think one of the reasons for it is people have seen his campaign as an essentially negative campaign," Dukakis said.

Bush, touring the Superdome where the party will bestow its nomination next week, denied that he was engaging in negative campaigning.

"No, no...very positive," Bush said as he visited with teen-agers painting signs for the convention. "We've got to get these differences in focus."

He also called for a party platform that will stand up well in comparison with what he called the Democrats' "document of deceit." With the convention his, and no serious arguments within the party, Bush was certain to get the platform he wants — although the party subcommittees took testimony into the night from more than 200 witnesses.

"We need to make this campaign a plan for the future, a statement of solutions, not an exercise in evasion," Bush said.

The one mystery about the four days of Republican meeting — Bush's choice of a vice president — stayed a mystery.

"Still working on it" was Bush's comment Monday, sticking with his promise to announce his decision on the last day of the convention.

Members of the party's Committee on Contests tried to resolve challenges to as many as 39 of the 48 delegates from Georgia. Bush won the primary there, but supporters of television evangelist Pat Robertson made a run at taking over the party machinery.

Drought relief bill awaits final congressional OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Senate passage of the $3.9 billion drought relief bill, the only suspense remaining about the measure's final congressional approval is when it will happen.

The Senate gave its assent Monday on a 92-0 vote. Just a few minutes earlier, the House cleared the way for expedited consideration of the measure, which could come as early as today.

"There's no question about passage," Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said Monday. "It's just by how many votes."

The measure — the biggest federal emergency relief bill ever passed for farmers — is aimed at the hundreds of thousands of farmers and ranchers who have been buffeted by one of the worst droughts in the nation's history. Growers in the Eastern cornbelt and the Northern plains have been hit particularly hard.

According to the Department of Agriculture, 43 percent of the country was suffering from severe or extreme drought in mid-July, the fourth worst percentage since the government began keeping the statistics in 1895. The highest measurement was made in 1934, when 61 percent of the nation's area was similarly parched.

The government estimated last month that the country's corn crop will be down from a normal year by 29 percent, barley production down 42 percent, oats down 43 percent and spring wheat down 51 percent.

The Agriculture Department has estimated that the government's regular farm payments would be about $7 billion lower than expected this year — not including the cost of this bill — because of the drought. Supporters of the legislation say those savings will more than pay for the costs of the assistance.

President Reagan is expected to sign the bill quickly. Department of Agriculture officials say they believe it will take about two months for the assistance to reach the farmers.

Governors from farm states, meeting at the National Governor's Association conference in Cincinnati, unanimously approved a resolution Monday praising Congress for the quick action.

"The legislation that Congress is set to pass is excellent, far-reaching legislation that provides assistance to livestock and crop producers," the resolution by the governors' Committee on Agriculture and Rural Development said.

The legislation would let growers who lose up to 35 percent of their crops because of the drought keep the "deficiency payments" they have already received in advance. Normally, they have to repay the government if crop prices rise, as they have because of the drought.

Farmers losing more than 35 percent of their crop would be entitled to an emergency payment of 65 percent of their expected federal subsidy or of the anticipated market price of the crop, up to $100,000. Those farmers, however, would have to repay their advance deficiency payments.

Farmers would receive aid covering 90 percent of their drought-caused damage for all losses they suffer beyond three-fourths of their crop.

Farmers who raise food animals, such as livestock and poultry, would get federal help in paying for up to half the costs of replacement feed bought during the drought if they normally grow their own. The dry weather has driven up the prices of grain that farmers must feed their herds.

The measure would not provide assistance to food animal producers who normally buy their feed, rather than raising their own.

The government would be allowed to sell its own low-cost feed to farmers, donate feed to producers unable to buy it and reimburse farmers for up to half of some of their feed transportation costs and their expenses for deepening their wells.

Dairy price-support levels would be raised in April through June 1989 by 50 cents, to $11.10, for each 100 pounds of milk. A 50-cent reduction in the price support, planned for Jan. 1, would be abandoned.

The secretary of agriculture would be empowered to begin a program for aiding producers of ethanol, a fuel additive, by permitting them to buy cheaper, government-owned corn. The Agriculture Department would be allowed to make 12 million bushels of corn available for the program.

To help the government recoup the costs of future farm problems, the bill would require farmers to buy federal crop insurance for 1989 if their losses this year exceed 65 percent of their normal crops.

The bill also has provisions encouraging soil and water conservation, and providing aid to farmers harmed by recent hail storms and hurricanes.

New zoo doesn't have lions, tigers

NEW YORK (AP) — Looking for lions and tigers and other big animals? Not in the new Central Park Zoo.

The zoo, which officially opened amid much fanfare Monday, instead has a more eclectic offering: the Golfodulcean Dart poison frog, the tufted puffin, the plumbeous water redstart (that's a bird, folks).

"It doesn't seem like a zoo to me. It doesn't have any elephants or any giraffes," complained Daniella Alonzo, 10.

There are 450 animals from more than 100 species. Unlike the old zoo, the new zoo has no large animals because of space.

"This is a mini-zoo, to show things likely to arouse people's interest and a sense of caring," said Dr. William G. Conway, general director of the New York Zoological Society, which runs the zoo for the city Parks Department.

The new attractions, housed in three different "habitats," drew 13,701 first-day visitors.

Monkeys, bats, fish and frogs were featured there; the Polar Circle is home to polar bears, penguins and arctic foxes; the Temperate Territory is home to otters, red pandas, turtles and sea lions.

Mayor Edward I. Koch cut the ribbon to officially open the new zoo before playing straight man to a frisky sea lion named Finn.

Finn, circling in the newly renovated sea lion tank in the middle of the park, waved to Koch, waved to the visitors, caught fish tossed by the mayor and barked on request.

The renovation was supposed to cost $28 million, but came in at about $30 million, partly because work took several months longer than anticipated, Parks Commissioner Henry Stern said. Construction began in April 1985.

The commissioner was enthusiastic over the results. "The other zoo was like a Sing-Sing for animals," said Stern, referring to the zoo that was shut down in the winter of 1983. "So we've built a humane zoo, a zoo for the 1990s."

There was one other new feature: visitors, who once toured for free, now pay $1; senior citizens pay 50 cents, while kids come through for a quarter.

Sierra Club says smog worse

WASHINGTON (AP) — An environmental organization says smog got worse this year in cities and counties from Maine to Louisiana, and that while the hot, muggy summer is partly to blame, ozone-producing pollutants are the root cause.

"Obviously, the weather is part of the problem," Dan Weiss, Washington representative of the Sierra Club, said Monday in an interview. "But it's not the source. Blaming the weather for high levels of pollution is like blaming the ground for a plane crash...

"The smoggy summer of '88 is an unpleasant preview of a dirty, unhealthy future unless Congress strengthens the Clean Air Act by restricting emissions from motor vehicles and industrial polluters," he said.

A Sierra Club survey found that through Aug. 3, 41 of 47 cities and counties had peak ozone readings at least 25 percent greater than the safe federal health standard, compared with 36 in this category for all of 1987.

The federal health standard for ozone is 0.12 parts per million. Ozone, which causes respiratory problems, is formed when nitrogen oxides and hydrocarbons combine in the presence of sunlight.

The Sierra Club said the worst reading was 0.24 ppm in Providence, R.I. New York City had a 0.21 ppm reading in 1988, but this was well below its worst 1987 reading of 0.29 ppm, according to the survey.

Nineteen areas exceeded the standard by 50 percent at least once so far in 1988, up from 14 in 1987, while nine had at least one reading 75 percent higher than the standard, up from four last year, according to the survey.

The only western state surveyed, Texas, actually had better readings than it had in 1987. The four Texas cities surveyed — Beaumont, Dallas, El Paso and Houston — showed improvements over the previous air-quality readings.

Audit finds contractor overcharging common

NEW YORK (AP) — Excessive charges by military contractors are common, according to a confidential Defense Department audit that found overcharges totaling hundreds of millions of dollars, The New York Times reported today.

The large-scale audit of military contracts began in July 1984. The report, prepared by the department's inspector general's office, covered $53.4 billion worth of contracts for a variety of products held by 460 divisions of 95 contractors.

"Of the 774 pricing actions audited, 365 (47.2 percent) were overpriced by $788.9 million," the report said. The overpricing amounted to approximately 1.5 percent of the total value of the contracts audited.

By law, the Pentagon can recover money overcharged by contractors, with interest. The government's claims can be contested by the contractors and the disputes resolved through negotiations.

The report said one of the main reasons for the overpricing was failure by the contractors to comply with the Truth in Negotiations Act, which requires them to provide the government with information about labor costs and other expenses when negotiating for certain military contracts.

It recommended the Pentagon "provide the funding and resources needed to substantially increase the level of defective price audit coverage provided," and noted that, historically, the audit agency recovers about $19 in excess costs for every dollar spent on price audits.

However, Assistant Secretary of Defense Robert W. Helm wrote in a memorandum commenting on the report that its findings did not justify the expense of hiring more auditors.

He and other Pentagon officials said the auditors should concentrate on helping contractors devise more accurate methods of estimating costs during negotiations.

Four people allegedly die from inhaling laughing gas

CEDAR CITY, Utah (AP) — Four young adults whose bodies were found huddled in a tiny dental storage room died apparently from asphyxiation after the inhaled laughing gas, authorities said.

The bodies were found Monday near an open, empty tank of laughing gas, authorities said.

The bodies were taken to the State Medical Examiner's Office for autopsy, but Iron County Attorney Scott Burns said preliminary investigation showed they were asphyxiated after apparently inhaling the colorless anesthetic, nitrous oxide.

"It's just a tragic accident and our hearts go out to the families," he said. "We've never had injuries or deaths due to nitrous oxide."

But he said, "It's common throughout the United States for people to try to gain access to that (nitrous oxide) to try to get high."

He identified the victims as Owen Marc Gregerson, 18 and Shawn Williams, 19, both of Cedar City; Christine Cherie Miller, 20, Fillmore; and Margaret J. Probert, 20, Scipio.

The 6-by-6-foot storage room was adjacent to Gregerson's father's dental clinic.

Burns and Police Chief Pete Hansen said there was no sign of forced entry, and a key was found in a jacket outside the storeroom.

It appeared they let themselves into the storage area late Sunday or early Monday and turned on the gas, which was in a large tank, similar to a welding tank, the officials said.

There is no suspicion of suicide or foul play, Hansen said.

The bodies were found by an employee who had gone to the storeroom to get a cannister of gas and described "a tangle of bodies — a gruesome scene," Hansen said.

Authorities described the victims as clean-cut youths with no history of illegal activity or drug use.

NATION IN BRIEF

Stores may have wrongly charged tax on burritos

TORRANCE, Calif. (AP) — It may not add up to a hill of beans, but some 7-Eleven store clerks have been wrongly charging state sales tax on cold burritos.

The case is causing heartburn for 7-Eleven bosses and state tax authorities, who say they may have to consider a refund of excess taxes.

The state's tax agency, the Board of Equalization, is trying to work out just how much tax may have been mistakenly charged on burritos over the last three years at the 1,500 7-Eleven franchises in California, said Paul Hand, a board supervisor.

Fast food prepared by a store worker is taxed 6½ percent in Los Angeles County and 6 percent in most other counties. But food that isn't prepared by employees isn't taxed. Further complicating things is the fact 7-Elevens are equipped with microwave ovens. If clerks cook the burrito in the microwave, it's taxable; if the customer cooks his own, it's considered a grocery item and not taxable.

Three years ago, Tom McFarland noticed the tax, got hot under the collar, and complained to the company. Norman Corlett, a spokesman for Dallas-based Southland Corp., which owns 7-Eleven, said clerks were notified to sell the burritos without tax.

But McFarland, 39, an unemployed electrical engineer from Torrance, noticed recently the tax was still being charged, and he spilled the beans to the Board of Equalization.

Shuttle test rescheduled

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A new countdown begins tonight for a 22-second firing of space shuttle Discovery's three main engines, a vital test that has been postponed five times because of malfunctions.

If this test succeeds, NASA officials will set a date for the first space flight since the Challenger burst into flames on liftoff in January 1986. The Discovery launch date is not likely to be before October because of all the test delays.

The flight readiness firing is an overall workout of the main engines, computer software, ground support equipment, communications lines and the launch teams.

The "call to stations" that begins the countdown was scheduled for 6:10 p.m. with the test set for 7:30 a.m. Wednesday. Without further problems, fueling of the shuttle's huge tank begins a half hour before midnight.

The shuttle's No. 2 engine is fitted with a new "hydrogen bleed valve" and sensor to replace units that caused a scheduled test to be scrapped last Thursday in the split second before the start of ignition.

Abortion law upheld

WASHINGTON (NYT) — In an important test of state laws restricting minors' access to abortion, a federal appeals court in St. Paul has upheld a Minnesota law that requires women under the age of 18 who want abortions to notify both parents or get special approval from a state judge. The judges ruled 7 to 3.

If appealed to the Supreme Court, the case could determine whether the Senate's confirmation of Justice Anthony M. Kennedy in February has produced a majority receptive to legal restrictions on abortion. The Supreme Court divided 4-4 in December in a somewhat similar case from Illinois.

But a lawyer for the plaintiffs who challenged the Minnesota law said Monday that they were unsure about the wisdom of appealing the ruling because of concerns that Kennedy, who has never ruled on an abortion case, might provide the crucial fifth vote to restrict abortion rights for minors, or even for adult women.

Contra aid plan faltering

WASHINGTON (AP) — Efforts to reach a bipartisan agreement on new U.S. aid to Nicaragua's Contra rebels are faltering after suspicious Republican senators branded a Democratic proposal as unduly restrictive.

Some Democratic senators say there is no further room for compromise with Republican senators on the issue because to do so would destroy the consensus that had been reached in their party.

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas, speaking Monday after a private meeting in which many Republicans objected to the Democratic plan, said he would take "one more shot" at negotiating a bipartisan aid package.

Senate Majority leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., also said he hoped some compromise could be reached.

But Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., said compromise was unlikely because the debate over aid to the rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government "has been so long, so emotional, so partisan, that there's little trust."

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., who took part in talks with Republicans on the compromise legislation last week, said flatly, "The negotiations are over. I don't think there is any more room. We've gone as far as we can go."

Erratic weather hasn't destroyed all cotton crops

By JOEL WILLIAMS

RAYMONDVILLE (AP) — Snow-white clumps dot the roadsides in South Texas, as they do each August when balls of lint escape from trucks hauling their fluffy loads during the cotton harvest.

This year, uncooperative weather has hurt the industry in South Texas, where the nation's cotton harvest begins each year.

First, the drought-plagued spring and summer reduced yields and quality.

Then thundershowers damaged vulnerable defoliated cotton in fields, some of which made it through the drought without severe problems.

"The rains that we got when we didn't need them and the rains we didn't get when we needed them have hurt us," said Charlie Wofford, executive director of Cotton and Grain Producers of the Lower Rio Grande Valley, based in Raymondville the seat of Willacy County.

Willacy is the top producing county for the early South Texas cotton crop, according to the Texas Department of Agriculture. It was the 10th in production statewide in 1987, producing 127,700 bales, followed by its lower Rio Grande Valley neighbors, Cameron and Hidalgo counties.

An average bale is 480 pounds.

The state's top nine cotton-producing counties, according to the TDA, are in the High Plains area around the Panhandle, where the crop is harvested in the fall, usually after the first frost helps defoliate the plants.

The total value of the state's cotton crop was $1.5 billion in 1987, with the lint selling for an average of 60.2 cents per pound, according to the TDA.

Wofford said despite this year's drought, growers in Willacy, Cameron and parts of Hidalgo counties had yields only slightly less than last year, especially in irrigated areas.

"Unfortunately, we got an awful lot of rain on some cotton that had been defoliated," Wofford said of scattered showers as heavy as 4½ inches during the past two weeks.

Growers in South Texas use chemicals to take the leaves off the plants before mechanical harvesting.

"Any time you get rain on the cotton when it's defoliated, you lose quality and quantity," Wofford said.

The hard-driving rains made the lint dirty and changed its color, lowering its value, he said, but did not know by how much.

Non-irrigated cotton fields in Zapata, Starr and northwestern Hidalgo counties, however were burned up in the drought and are "from non-existent to poor," Wofford said. "The drought caused almost total loss of the crop in dryland (non-irrigated) Starr County and western Hidalgo."

Production in much of the Valley has dropped from two to 2¼ bales per acre in 1987, to 1½ to 1¾ bales per acre this year. Production for the entire Valley area is expected to average about a bale per acre.

Anticipated overproduction also has hurt prices since last fall.

The basic price in the fall was 68 cents, dropped to 50 cents in the winter and came back up to 65 cents in June, before dropping to the current 52-cent level, said Fred Traylor, a cotton merchant with Traylor Idris Cotton Co. in Harlingen.

Farther north, in the Coastal Bend area, yields are down from 1½ bales per acre for the past few years, to about a bale per acre this year, due to the drought, said Woody Peebles, with the U.S. Department of Agriculture Cotton Classing Office in Corpus Christi.

"It's not real good, but it's better than nothing," Peebles said of his 10-county area stretching from Wharton to Kleberg counties.

"We depend on subsoil moisture down here a lot," Peebles said. "We had a dry winter and a dry spring and no subsoil moisture."

Staple length, or the length of the cotton fiber, has been spotty, Peebles said, with drier fields yielding shorter, less valuable lint.

He said some fields, however, have maintained a high grade.

A few ginning operations also will feel the effects of the drought, Peebles said.

"Their cotton to gin is going to be down and some people are going to suffer," he added.

At the Lyford Gin and Grain Association in Willacy County, however, business has been healthy lately, said Charlie Bishop, assistant manager.

"We've been ginning for three weeks now, 24 hours a day," Bishop said. "The yields are down some from last year, but there was a lot planted."

In the Valley, planted cotton acreage this year was increased from 325,000 acres in 1987, to more than 400,000 this year.

Futures trading fueled by the drought in the Midwest has artificially driven up the price of cotton seed, despite its low oil content, said Hollis Sullivan, president and general manager of Valley Co-Op Oil Mill in Harlingen.

The mill on Monday was paying gins $115 per ton for seed he described as high in meal and low in oil. The seed price a year ago was $85 per ton.

"It's been one of the craziest years I've seen for predicting the value of a crop," Sullivan said.

With the cotton ready for harvest, producers have begun a race against the constant threat of rain, said Wofford, who on Monday nervously watched news reports of a tropical storm off the coast of Louisiana.

"Once our cotton starts opening, man, we really sweat the weather," Wofford said. "Everybody's getting it picked as fast as they can."

Archaeologists going to Panama in search of Columbus' ships

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — A group of archaeologists from Texas A&M University are heading to Panama in hopes of finding the remains of any ship that may have been commanded nearly 500 years ago by Christopher Columbus.

Scholars know of at least 100 reported New World sinkings of either caravels — small, fast sailing ships — or naos — another type of exploratory craft. But despite efforts by the Texas A&M-based Institute of Nautical Archaeology and other universities, no remains of any caravel, including those of Columbus, have been found and studied.

"Experts in the evolution of sailing ships know surprisingly little about these remarkable vessels," said Denise Lakey, an archival researcher at the institute. "The art of building ships from plans had not yet developed. The craft existed only in the head and hands of the master shipwright.

"Only the physical remains of such an exploratory vessel can answer our questions."

In a brief preliminary visit last year, researchers from the institute used electronic equipment to map and survey an area along a western stretch of Panama.

It was there in 1503 that Indians forced a Spanish garrison to abandon the Gallega, one of four caravel-class exploration vessels led by Columbus on his ill-fated final voyage.

"Of all of the sites of known caravel sinkings, this is the best chance," Don Keith, the project director, said Monday.

The Gallega was left in the mouth of Rio Belen when Columbus and his party fled to Jamaica, there to wait almost a year for rescue. The hulk of the Gallega was seen still protruding from the river seven years later.

Researchers are preparing to take core samples that would help reconstruct the shape of the river when the Gallega was deserted.

Texas A&M research assistants Ric Hajovsky and Joe Simmons III will lead early efforts at collecting core samples and using sonar on areas where the Gallega's hull might be now.

The Panama expedition, scheduled to depart Aug. 20, is the latest effort in the institute's goal to reconstruct the picture of early New World exploration, Keith said.

Sites known to contain wreckage of other Columbus caravels have been studied, as have two 1500s shipwrecks in the Bahamas area that are the oldest and most intact of any exploration vessel yet found.

Wallace submits resignation

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Supreme Court Justice James Wallace has turned in his resignation, complete with complaints about the lack of money the state spends on judges and justice.

Wallace said in his Monday letter to Gov. Bill Clements that the state's judiciary, which gets less than one-third of 1 percent of the state budget, "simply cannot attract and retain the personnel and acquire the technology necessary to provide the excellent judicial system which Texans expect and deserve."

Wallace had previously announced he was quitting because the Supreme Court job does not pay enough. Supreme Court justices earn almost $79,000 a year.

"I can no longer justify to my family my continued service to the state in view of the currently prevailing economic circumstances," Wallace told Clements in the resignation letter.

"Living expenses are up significantly. We have received no salary increase in three years, and effective salary has been reduced each year through inflation. Also, investment income has been converted to investment expense by the Texas economy," he said.

Wallace set Sept. 1 as his resignation date. Jay Rosser, Clements' press secretary, said the governor would consider Wallace's resignation request when he returns Wednesday from the National Governors Association meeting in Cincinnati.

If Wallace, a Democrat, leaves the bench Sept. 1, each political party would select a nominee to be placed on the November ballot. The winner of the election would complete Wallace's term, which ends in 1992.

Justice Franklin Spears has said he would announce next Monday whether he also will quit the Supreme Court. That seat also could wind up on the November ballot, which, with Wallace's resignation, now includes six races.

Chief Justice John Hill quit early this year, as did Justice Robert Campbell.

Ex-VFW commander trying to get Medal of Honor for WWI hero

EL PASO (AP) — A veteran is lobbying Congress and the Army to award the United States' highest military award to a World War I hero who joined the U.S. Army as a young Mexican national looking for a job.

By age 22, Marcelino Serna had been credited with killing 32 German soldiers and capturing 32 others. He was awarded France's and Italy's highest military medals, and was honored with the United States' second-highest military award — the Distinguished Service Cross.

But Manuel Villanueva thinks Serna deserves the Medal of Honor, the United States' highest award for military courage.

"If the criteria for being awarded the Medal of Honor are that a person distinguish himself conspicuously by gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty, then Serna has been cheated out of his due," Villanueva said.

Villanueva, a past commander of an El Paso Veterans of Foreign Wars post, has spent the last year petitioning members of Congress and the Army to grant Serna the high honor.

"Serna was told in 1919 that he could not get the Medal of Honor because he was only a buck private and he couldn't speak English well enough to get promoted," Villanueva said.

"Well, they accepted him as a fighting machine even though he wasn't a U.S. citizen and he couldn't speak English well. He could've been killed and they wouldn't have cared that he wasn't a citizen."

Serna fought in Belgium and France for Company B, 355th Infantry Regiment, 89th Division, in campaigns such as Lucey Sector, St. Mihiel, Evenzine Sector and Meuse-Argonne.

Two incidents speak volumes of Serna's courage, Villanueva said.

Early one morning in Belgium, Serna's patrol was pinned down by a German machine gun. About 12 of his comrades were killed. Serna, alone, advanced in 10-yard bursts toward the machine gun, then threw four grenades into the emplacement. Six Germans died and eight came out with their hands up.

Another time, Serna was on a scouting expedition at Meuse-Argonne in France. He wounded a German and followed a trail of blood to a trench where the injured man's comrades were waiting in ambush.

For 45 minutes, Serna kept moving and firing to confuse the Germans. He then got close enough to lob some grenades into the trench. He killed 16 Germans and captured 24 singlehandedly.

Serna, who became a U.S. citizen in 1924, lives in El Paso with his wife, Simona, 81, and daughters Gloria, 62, and Margarita, 45.

UN force needed to save Cambodia

Normally, the end of a war is considered good news. Talks taking place in Bogor, Indonesia, are designed to find a formula under which Vietnam can withdraw the troops it sent into Cambodia in 1978 and permit the Southeast Asia nation to return to an independent status after years of civil war.

But in the case of Cambodia, the end of a decade of Vietnamese occupation could turn out to be extremely bad news if the Khmer Rouge returns to power.

Led by Pol Pot, the communist Khmer Rouge controlled Cambodia between 1975 and 1978. During that time Khmer Rouge thugs slaughtered at least a million Cambodians in one of the worst examples of genocide the world has known. The Vietnamese launched their 1978 invasion as a result of the bloody rule of Pol Pot, and drove him and his guerrillas into the jungle where many believe they are planning to resume their bloodbath.

U.S. policy has been focused on getting the Vietnamese out of Cambodia, and the current talks are designed to bring this about by early 1990 when Hanoi says it would like its troops to come home.

Any such withdrawal could clear the way for the Khmer Rouge to return to power unless there is an agreement among those participating in the Indonesia talks to prohibit a Pol Pot takeover.

The Khmer Rouge has representatives at the talks, with the representative so far playing kind of an obstructionist role.

As much as we would love to see the Vietnamese return to their own country, any agreement providing for that must provide a strong framework within which a strong coalition can be created to govern Cambodia. That coalition must not include the Khmer Rouge, which would immediately sabotage a coalition government and eventually recapture power through the use of brute force.

If there is anyplace where a wide-based United Nations peacekeeping force is needed, it could well be Cambodia in the post-Vietnam era. A force made up of troops from many nations would keep that nation free until a homegrown government could become strong enough to defeat any attacks by the Khmer Rouge.

Marcos' latest 'offer'

It is typical of former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos that he should offer a bribe to return to the country from which he was ousted. From a man who lived in palatial splendor while his people lived in crippling poverty, an attempt to buy his way home should hardly be surprising.

Marcos reportedly offered to give $5 billion to the Philippines and support the government of President Corazon Aquino if he is permitted to return from his exile in Hawaii and be exempted from criminal prosecution, according to those familiar with the negotiations. One source close to the talks said Marcos "doesn't want anyone to think he's buying his freedom," adding: "It's his love for the Philippines, his desire to go home. He wants to help restore the Philippine economy, and if his personal resources can do that, he wants to do that."

Fine. If Marcos wants to help the country he betrayed, let him pony up the $5 billion, plus whatever else he may have stolen from the people he was supposed to have served. Then, after making restitution and satisfying the claims of the law, if he wants to return home, let him contritely seek permission. But the reported offer is attempted bribery, and it's not surprising that Philippine diplomats are appalled at Marcos' arrogance.

A Marcos spokesman denies any deal involving money, but is the denial plausible? Marcos, remember, is the man who ridiculed suggestions that he stashed away a fortune in overseas investments before he fled his country. His alleged use of Philippine government funds to buy art and American real estate while concealing their ownership forms the basis of recommendations by U.S. prosecutors that he be indicted for fraud and conspiracy. If Marcos is able to come up with $5 billion, it will be difficult for him to claim he didn't loot his country's treasury.

U.S. officials have more than a prosecutor's interest in Marcos. This country annually pays nearly $500 million to the Phillipines in return for the use of two major military bases there. Rebel groups have made sporadic attacks on U.S. citizens assigned to those bases. A stable government and a viable economy in the Philippines are therefore matters of direct concern to the United States.

But Marcos' personal problems are his own business. If the corrupt ex-ruler has billions available for the purposes of bribery, then authorities in the United States and Philippines ought to learn the amount and its whereabouts, and try to determine how much of it was stolen. Only when Ferdinand Marcos pays what he owes will he deserve a seat in a Manila-bound airliner. Until then, he will be what he is now and has been: a political pariah.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Aug. 9, the 222nd day of 1988. There are 144 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 9, 1945, the United States dropped a second atomic bomb on Japan, destroying part of the city of Nagasaki. An estimated 74,000 people died from the blast or its after-effects. (Nagasaki was not the original target; heavy clouds prevented the bombing of Kokura in northern Kyushu.)

On this date:

In 1842, a border dispute between the United States and Canada was resolved with the signing of the Webster-Ashburton Treaty.

In 1848, the Free-Soil Party nominated Martin Van Buren for president at its convention in Buffalo, N.Y.

In 1854, Henry David Thoreau published "Walden," in which he described his experiences while living in a small cabin near Walden Pond in Massachusetts.

In 1902, Edward VII was crowned King of England following the death of his mother, Queen Victoria.

In 1930, a forerunner of the cartoon character Betty Boop made her debut in Max Fleischer's animated short "Dizzy Dishes."

In 1936, Jesse Owens won his fourth gold medal at the Berlin Olympics as the United States took first place in the 400-meter relay.

In 1942, Britain arrested Indian nationalist Mohandas K. Gandhi; he would not be released until 1944.

In 1969, actress Sharon Tate and four other people were found murdered in a Bel Air, Calif., home. Four people, including Charles Manson, were later convicted of the crime.

In 1974, President Richard M. Nixon's resignation took effect. Vice President Gerald R. Ford became the nation's 38th chief executive.

In 1982, a federal judge in Washington ordered John W. Hinckley Jr., who was acquitted of shooting President Reagan and three others by reason of insanity, committed to a mental hospital.

Ten years ago: The body of Pope Paul VI, who had died Aug. 6 at age 80, was carried from the papal residence at Castel Gandolfo to Vatican City for burial rites.

Thought for today: "A definite purpose, like blinders on a horse, inevitably narrows its possessor's point of view." — Robert Frost, American poet (1874-1963).

New procurement study isn't needed

WASHINGTON — With the depressing evidence pointing to massive bribery in the Pentagon, an almighty cry has gone up from the Washington rooftops for an inquest into the military procurement system.

Jack Anderson

The dreary fact is that the inquest was conducted, the findings trumpeted and an overhaul proposed five years ago. The Grace Commission, a White House commission to investigate waste in government, reviewed the Pentagon's operations and found serious flaws in its procurement process.

The commission sketched for Congress what was wrong with the Pentagon's methods and how to improve them. In elaborate detail, the commission outlined how to increase competition and scrutinize contract awards more efficiently. It called for centralizing control of the procurement process.

Pentagon people find it tempting to succumb to the mystique of big business omni-competence. The commission dispelled this mystique by exposing the flaws in the procurement and production of 25 major weapons systems. It found that under-bidding by contractors, for example, had produced cost overruns of 223 percent.

It revealed that, in small purchases as well as large, the Pentagon had paid $437 for a $7 hammer, $91 for a 3-cent screw, $511 for a $60 lamp, etc. The commission called for reforms that would have saved $120 billion over the next three years.

If members of Congress had studied the commission's findings with a tad of humility and a hint of intelligence, they not only could have saved billions, but also could have made the system more tamper-resistant. Perhaps this might have prevented the current bribery scandal.

But, unhappily, Congress is part of the problem it now presumes to solve. The average congressman is affronted by the spectacle of the Pentagon bullion train passing through his sphere unmolested. It seems fair to him that his constituents should get some of the booty.

Thus, the bribery scandal is a reflection not only on the capriciousness of Capitol Hill politics, but also on the failure of Congress to tend to its knitting, or even to acknowledge that there is knitting to be done.

So, congressmen are now calling for a repetition of the studies that were completed five years ago. The urgent need is not to supplement the findings but to implement them. Here are just a few recommendations that the Grace Commission offered in 1983:

■ It found that single sources for equipment and short-term contracts prevented long-term planning and inhibited competition. It recommended multi-year contracting and competitive bidding.

■ It discovered that contracts were awarded with little consideration for the contractor's past performance. It called for a data base on contractor performance to avoid repeat business with unsatisfactory manufacturers.

■ It found that new programs were funded without setting priorities. Once a weapons system is started, it develops a constituency of its own — the military services that want it, the contractors who make the parts, the workers who put it together and the congressmen whose districts reap the benefits. The commission proposed prioritizing weapons systems while they are still in the development stage.

There are more proposals, each backed by reams of evidence, that Congress could adopt immediately if it were not paralyzed.

Footnote: The Grace Commission has displayed success in other areas. The Office of Management and Budget issued figures showing the commission has saved the taxpayers $110 million. Jack Anderson is co-chairman of the commission with industrialist J. Peter Grace.

RETREAT SLOWS — As fast as the Soviets can withdraw their troops from Afghanistan, Afghan rebels are moving in. That has slowed the Soviet retreat, primarily because Moscow is worried about leaving Afghanistan in the hands of Islamic fundamentalists, who are on the rise. The Kabul government, without Soviet troops standing behind it, will fall to fundamentalists. The Soviets, are afraid that fundamentalist influence will spread into their own Moslem republics across the border. The Soviets have not changed their mind about leaving Afghanistan, but they are lingering to organize the three major minorities in Afghanistan — the Uzbeks, Tajiks and Turkmens. The apparent strategy is to organize a Soviet-supported underground to counter any future Islamic state.

Perverted liberalism ruined charity system

I still remember the incident vividly. I was a young reporter covering county government. A man appeared before the county commissioners to complain about his treatment at a charity hospital operated by the government.

Charley Reese

His surgery, which would have cost about $15,000, had been provided without charge. It was successful. His complaints were about the food, about what he alleged was the lack of attention by nurses.

I can still see his stupid, malignant face, hear the hostile whine to his voice.

Granted, there's only Celtic blood in my veins. Compassion and forebearance are the virtues I have to work most hard to cultivate, but I thought at the time, the ungrateful dog deserved to be beat within an inch of his life and thrown out the window like a sack of garbage.

Here, a system of government set up and financed by far better people than this animated dung heap, had saved his worthless life for no other reason than pure charitable compassion and he didn't have the decency to mumble a mild thanks. Instead, as arrogant as any king, he paraded his complaints and demands with nothing but malice in his heart.

Nevertheless he provided empirical evidence that a sorry human cannot be reformed by kindness. On the contrary, they interpret kindness as weakness and the more you do for them, the more they will attempt to exploit you.

Fortunately for these lazy creatures, the masochistic liberal loves to be exploited — especially so if he can finance his liberalism with somebody else's money. The more ungrateful and more demanding the exploiter is, the more the masochistic liberal gushes out his compassion.

The exploiter can spit in his face and he gushes, "Oh, how wonderful that he isn't beaten down by his poverty and still has pride and independence."

Frankly, such perverted liberalism has created a lower class of bums. At least in a laissez-faire system, a bum had to have some ingenuity and on occasion courage to exploit people and win for himself unjust rewards. I knew an old gambler once who complained that during the Depression he had had to knock five people in the head in one town before he found a pair of shoes that fit him properly.

Today's bum has nothing to do but simply present himself. He is then smothered by an army of masochistic liberals who are keenly concerned with finding him food, shelter, clothing, medical care, and if he demands it, a TV set and a car. Some of the bums are so lazy they can hardly find the energy to voice their complaints about the things people give them.

It's no wonder that obesity is a major health problem among today's so-called poor.

The present system, of course, is unjust. If you take advantage of the free public education system, postpone your sexual gratification, train yourself and work hard, you will get no help at all from the government beyond the public school system — which, to be sure, is a great gift deserving of gratitude.

On the other hand, if you turn your back on school, turn your back on vocational and technical training, don't postpone your sexual gratification, don't train yourself, and don't work — then, you become eligible for all sorts of help from housing to food stamps to medical care to day care to $50,000 a year lobbyists and millionaire politicians all pleading for more benefits.

Sick. To tax those who have earned a helping hand to provide for those who have not is sick. It's another variation of that liberal perversity which somehow finds the killer a more fitting subject for compassion than his victims.

I seem to recall from distant childhood that someone with a better record of compassion than I have said, "No work, no eat." What's wrong with that for dealing with able-bodied welfare cases?

"Dead. Two weeks ago. They said he had heart trouble, but I know what the real reason was."

"What was it?" inquired Aunt Hattie.

"His liver was eat up. You know how the Swints drank."

"One of them Swint boys used to court me back in '26," said Aunt Hattie.

"Which one?"

"Farley, the tall one. He come to pick me up with a pint of liquor in both back pockets."

"What'd you do?"

"After I finished my pint, anything he wanted to do," snickered Aunt Hattie.

The two ladies couldn't think of anybody else recently passed on, so the conversation turned to the horrid drought of '88.

"It's been dry as a bone," added Granny Jones.

"I talked to Elroy Thorpe. Said he was going to lose half his corn and all his soybeans if he didn't get some rain soon."

"Was Elroy the one who was in the Army?"

"Until he shot his foot off."

"Shot his foot off?"

"They tried to sew it back on, but Elroy wouldn't let them."

"Why not?"

"Said he'd marched his last mile."

"Where'd you see Elroy?"

"At the square dance."

"Sure need rain," Granny Jones said again.

"Need it bad."

"I know why it won't rain."

"Why's that?"

"It's them satellites," said Granny Jones. "The weather ain't been the same since they started shootin' them satellites off."

"I believe you're right, Granny."

"Of course I'm right. I told Mr. Jones before he died it was going to happen. I said, 'You wait and see if this don't change the weather.'"

"And what did he say?"

"Nothing. The old coot couldn't hear it thunder."

"You really think it's them satellites?" asked Aunt Hattie.

"It's clear as that mole on your nose. You start messing around with the atmosphere and the weather will never be the same."

"Reckon the moonshot had anything to do with it?"

"Nobody really went to the moon," said Granny Jones. "That was all just a fake. They went out to Utah someplace and took all them pictures."

"I didn't know that."

"They couldn't fool me," said Granny Jones, adding, "and it's been nice talking to you, but I got to go inside."

"Too hot, Granny Jones?"

"It's time for my favorite TV program."

"'Wheel of Fortune'?"

"No," said Granny Jones, "rasslin'."

Human jukebox plays music over telephone

EDITOR'S NOTE: She's a human jukebox, an anonymous disc jockey spinning ancient records and piping the music to a handful of Pittsburgh bars via an antiquated telephone system her father invented 60 years ago. Helen Reutzel is one of the other folks, a woman who enjoys neither fortune nor fame, but she loves what she's doing for sentimental reasons.

By TARA BRADLEY-STECK

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Drop two bits into an old-fashioned, mahogany jukebox in a Pittsburgh tavern, and Helen Reutzel will spin a memory in the form of a song.

It's a jukebox with a twist — a human jukebox with a collection of more than 100,000 records dating back to the 1920s and an assortment of customers who would never plunk a quarter into cheap, mechanical imitations.

"If you want to hear 'Squaws Along The Yukon' or head-banging music, you can. Helen has everything," says Dan Casagrande, 39, owner of Brandy's Restaurant, which has had Mrs. Reutzel's "telephone music" for 10 years.

"You can come in here depressed, and you hear these songs and all of a sudden it really does boost you up," says Nancy Delaney, 54, of Pittsburgh, as she stirs a drink at Brandy's bar. "I hope this woman is a millionaire because she deserves to be. If she only realized the pleasure she brings to people."

Pick up a black phone on top of the jukebox, and a raspy voice at a studio across town cheerily asks your preference.

Not sure of the title? No problem. Hum a few bars and chances are Mrs. Reutzel knows it.

Afraid the song is a little dated or obscure? For an extra $1, she'll head to the attic and blow the dust off the less-popular tunes.

Want to personalize the song? An additional 50 cents buys a dedication.

"ATTENTION, YOUR attention, please," Mrs. Reutzel broadcasts into one of the five bars she services. "This next song is a special dedication to Scott from Arizona. We hope you get lucky tonight, Scott."

How it all works is not quite clear to Mrs. Reutzel. Her father devised the system about 60 years ago by using old radio tubes and copper telephone lines. When he died 12 years ago, the secret of telephone music went with him, and his daughter claims no one has been able to duplicate it.

Songs are played over telephone lines from a studio on the city's North Side to speakers in the bars around the city.

"Studio," though, may be too grand a word. It's actually a second-floor walk-up hidden — because of the extensive record collection — in a boarded-up brick building approached from a dimly lit courtyard off a back alley.

The linoleum is worn, the walls need a fresh coat of paint, and any unusable space is covered with papers, ashtrays or coffee cups. Row after row of records line the perimeter of the small room, and opposite a switchboard are three tiers of turntables.

"Everybody has a wild fantasy of what the place looks like. It can be anything they want," says Mrs. Reutzel, a salty woman who calls everyone "babe" or "honey." "They imagine me as a 27-year-old blonde or whatever. They think we're beautiful and sexy."

Although Mrs. Reutzel won't give her age, she was slightly miffed when a local columnist said her "salad days are wilted."

Upon hearing a shrill "ping-ping" sound, which signals two quarters being deposited in a jukebox, Mrs. Reutzel plugs a wire into the switchboard and picks up her handset.

"TELEPHONE MUSIC. What do you want to hear, hon?"

No one answers.

"Number please. This is your jukebox talking. I can hear you laughing-...What were you doing?...You lost a quarter under the machine," she says, chuckling. "Don't do that, if you move it and it don't play, I'll be on your you-know-what. Go ahead, honey, I'll give it to you. Don't worry about it. We'll leave it for the sweeper."

The caller requests "Teach Me Tonight" by the DeCastro sisters, one of several irreplaceable records held together by duct tape. Other records, especially the old 78s, are so warped coins have to be placed on the arm of the turntable so the needle doesn't skip.

Although the quality of the recordings isn't first-rate, a corps of regular telephone music customers would rather have a scratchy song than none at all.

"On most of the cracked records we have 'Watch, sticks,' so we can monitor it and catch it," Mrs. Reutzel says with a throaty laugh. "But sometimes if you're real busy and don't pay attention and it's going, 'clunk, clunk, clunk,' the bartenders will call up and say, 'You're playing our song again.'"

Decades ago — Mrs. Reutzel isn't sure how many — her father owned several studios and had 120 jukeboxes distributed in bars around the country. But telephone music waned with the popularity of radio and home stereo systems and, little by little, the slick, handmade jukeboxes were put into storage.

When her father died, Mrs. Reutzel took over the business for sentimental more than monetary reasons. Bar owners get 40 percent of each quarter dropped into their jukebox and Mrs. Reutzel gets 60 percent. With only five jukeboxes out, the trickle of quarters isn't enough to pay the volunteers who help her on weekends.

"I inherited it from my father and I didn't know what to do," she says. "It was his baby, his dream," she says.

"You can come in here depressed, and you hear these songs and all of a sudden it really does boost you up. I hope this woman (Helen Reutzel) is a millionaire because she deserves to be. If she only realized the pleasure she brings to people."

— Nancy Delaney

DREAM ANALYSIS is her true love, and she'd rather devote more time giving classes than spinning records. But she says she keeps hanging on "like a rat terrier," even though there have been times she's been unable to pay her bills.

"It's a love thing with the people on the jukebox," she says. "People will call up that haven't been in town for years and tell me what they're doing. One guy came on and said, 'Do you remember me?' He said, 'There isn't a day that goes by I don't think of you and this jukebox and what all it meant to me.'"

"I would hate to see it go, plain and simple," says Casagrande, who has a group of customers who conduct impromptu sing-alongs with the help of the jukebox every Friday night.

"It's not the money. We make more on a couple of drinks than on the jukebox," he says. "It's just the fact that it's part of the entertainment. People come here with that in mind, to hang around the jukebox."

Mrs. Reutzel is also more than a source of music. Her contagious laughter and easygoing banter can shake the blues for many a lonely customer, like the time she dedicated the song "Looking For Love In All The Wrong Places" to a downhearted patron who lost his girlfriend to another man and wanted to hear "Your Cheating Heart" a dozen times.

"We're psychiatrists, psychologists, girlfriends. It's not just a record. It's that one-on-one conversation," she says.

"Most people in bars are lonely. They're sitting there and nobody's talking to them. So they go up and they put a buck in the jukebox and turn around and say, 'What do you want to hear?' Everybody looks and says, 'Hey, baby, I'll take this.' It's a way of making friends because music is a common denominator."

MUSIC IS also a way to reminisce through that special song that tugs at romantics' hearts or makes an old man tap his toes.

"How many people can be instantly gratified for whatever moment they want?" Mrs. Reutzel asks. "When you have over 100,000 selections, you can reach everyone."

Mrs. Reutzel doesn't profess to having favorites, but there is one tune that breathes life into the distant past. When the requests slow down and she's feeling nostalgic, she plays a song her father recorded decades ago as a member of the Steel City Four, a barbershop quartet.

It's a special song for many reasons. Mrs. Reutzel was raised by her mother but always longed to be closer to her father, and hearing his voice among the thousands of records he collected over the years helps keep the bonds alive.

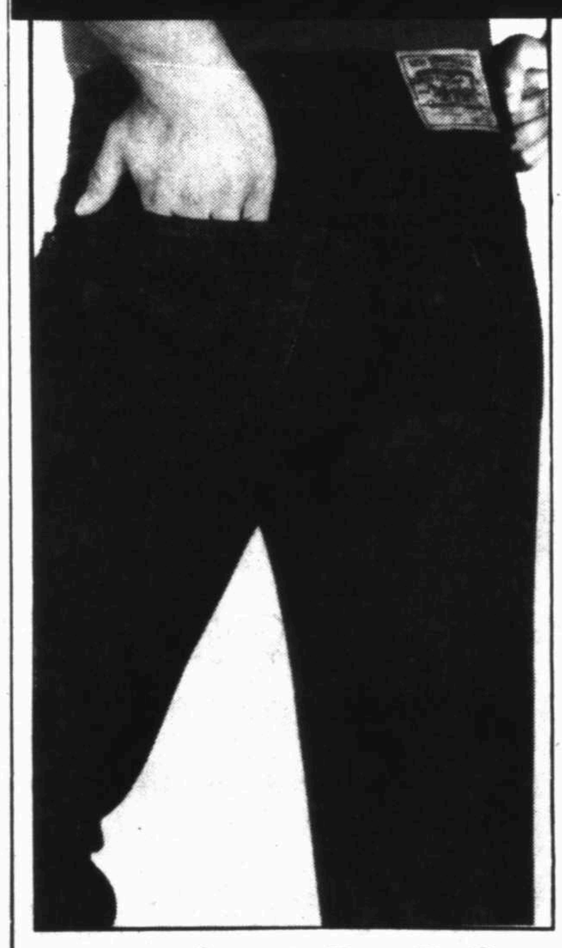

Helen Reutzel takes a request for one of the many records she plays back by telephone from her Pittsbutgh studio into jukeboxes in five bars around the city.

Midland honors English woman

Bone marrow donor honored for her 'gift'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The spirit of life-giving blood symbolically flowed across the ocean Monday in linking a teen-age Midland girl and a mother in England.

Midland's "beloved" Heather Preas and the English woman who shared a portion of her life-sustaining bone marrow "so that Heather might live" were honored Monday when Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas bestowed honorary Midland citizenship on the English woman, Joan Aldcroft of Cheshire, England.

Heather, a 16-year-old Midland High School junior who suffers from the leukemia-like aplastic anemia — in which the bone marrow shuts down its production of blood — was administered a marrow transplant on June 10 in the Baylor University Medical Center in Dallas.

"The citizens of Midland are very fond of Heather," Thomas said in a brief ceremony in front of oil-field pump jacks at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum. "They love her dearly. And we are very fond of Joan, now, who has given her bone marrow to Heather."

Mrs. Aldcroft's honorary Midland citizenship certificate noted that Midland is a major petroleum center.

Prior to the transplant, Heather had been kept alive through blood transfusions and medication since she was hospitalized in mid-January. Those treatments continue today, as the newly infused marrow builds up Heather's system.

The Midland girl was hospitalized after she had experienced severe fatigue, was prone to hemorrhage, and the rare illness was diagnosed.

The city of Midland made Mrs. Aldcroft an honorary citizen "as an expression of our love and appreciation to Joan Aldcroft," the mayor said.

A search of blood-tissue banks in American and Great Britain finally revealed a close match of Heather's and Mrs. Aldcroft's marrow through the British Anthony Nolan Bone-Marrow Appeal and the Anthony Nolan Research Trust in London.

The match is necessary to reduce the chances of rejection of another's marrow being infused into Heather's blood stream.

"We love her and appreciate her," Thomas said of the English woman.

In a letter to Judy Farris, a close friend of the Preas family, Mrs. Aldcroft wrote of the then-proposed Midland citizenship that she was "totally astounded that you should wish to honour my bone-marrow donation to Heather in such a way.

"Although I feel that the only 'reward' I need is for Heather to fully recover her health, I would be pleased and proud to accept the honorary citizenship of Midland," Mrs. Aldcroft wrote of "this marvelous honour."

"My part in the bone-marrow transplant really was the easy part, whereas Heather has made the hardest part now whilst fighting for her life," said Mrs. Aldcroft, who has two teenager daughters the same ages as Heather, who is 16, and her sister, Holly, 13. "A day never passes without my family and myself thinking about and praying for her recovery."

Mrs. Aldcroft said that she hopes the outcome of Heather's transplant will "mean a long and happy association between the town of Midland and myself."

Heather's father, Cecil Preas, said that Mrs. Aldcroft is "aware of how grateful parents are when their child is healthy" and also is "aware of how grateful we are for her act of kindness in donating her bone marrow to Heather."

Preas noted that while many Americans interested in genealogy go to "great lengths to trace their blood lines back to England," Heather's "tracing would be a lot more direct."

Preas said that Heather and Mrs. Aldcroft's 16-year-old daughter, Jacqueline, have discovered common interests through their exchange of letters. Both like some of the same rock music groups and both like cats, Preas said.

In the two months since the transplant, Heather is "making some progress," the father said.

"She is having some side-effects for some of the drugs that they gave her to ready her for the transplant."

Preas said that the "kindness and generosity" of the people in the Permian Basin and especially in Midland in supporting Heather have been "outstanding."

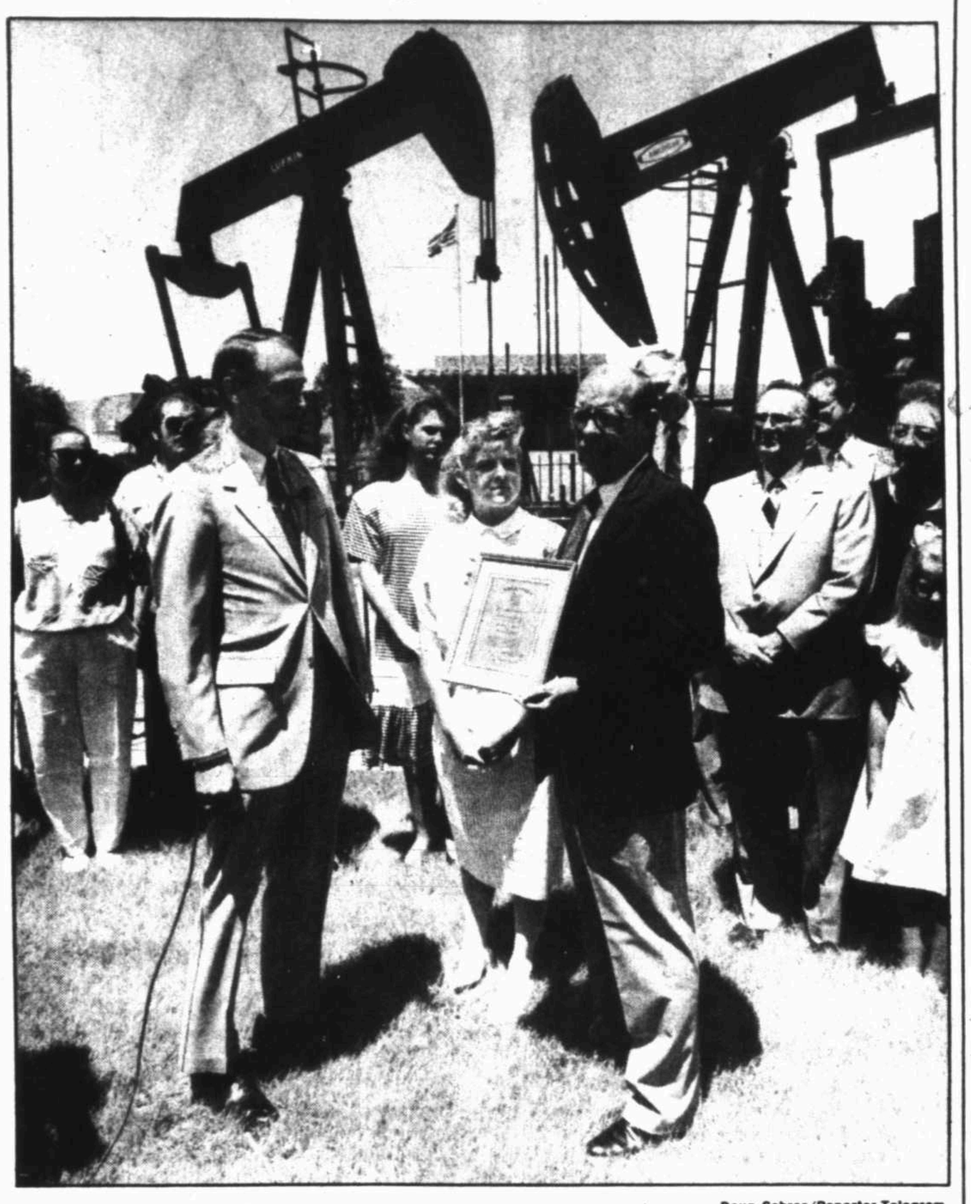

His wife, Cindi, is with their daughter in the Dallas hospital, Preas said.

Herb Wales, one of the friends giving moral support to the Preas family, said that "this support has been the wellspring of this community — particularly in light of the fact that help seems to have come from so far away.

"Our heart goes out to the lady in England and her family for the wonderful role that they have played in this," Wales said.

Wales said that "everybody in this community knew that a donor would be found. We just didn't know when and where. That's the way we believe."

Heather's sister, Holly, said that she wants to "thank" Mrs. Aldcroft for "giving my sister a second chance at life. Heather has tons of courage."

Doug Sehres/Reporter-Telegram

Cecil Preas, right, expresses gratitude that an English woman gave bone marrow to help sustain the life of his ill teenage daughter, Heather, 16. The donor, Joan Aldcroft of Cheshire, England, was made an honorary Midland citizen by Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas, left. At center is Holly, Heather's 13-year-old sister.

Suit against OSA expected to be dropped

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — An agreement expected to be signed today could result in the withdrawal of a lawsuit against Odessa Savings Association filed by a former director-stockholder and his daughter, one of Louis Rochester's Dallas attorneys said late Monday.

"I believe we have reached an agreement," said James A. Moseley, with the Dallas firm of Lock Purnell Rain Harrell.

"Based on that belief, we anticipate that we won't have any further need to prosecute this lawsuit. We think we have reached something that will protect our rights," he stated.

Monday morning, 70th District Court Judge signed an order granting extension of a temporary restraining order, which had prevented a planned Aug. 2 foreclosure sale by Odessa Savings of joint venture properties involving the banking institution, Rochester, his daughter, Joy, and son, Paul.

Ater also extended the date for a hearing on a temporary injunction from Aug. 15 to Aug. 29 at 9:30 a.m. However, at mid-afternoon, the judge said he would not set a date for depositions and discovery, adding that it was up to attorneys to do so.

On the basis of the anticipated agreement, Moseley said, "We don't have any need to pursue litigation at the moment."

He stopped short of saying that, under terms of the agreement expected to be signed today, Odessa Savings would agree to abide by all terms of existing joint venture agreements. The agreement would only prevent the foreclosure and sale, he said.

The purpose of the suit filed Aug. 1 on behalf of Rochester and his daughter by Moseley and Michael P. Petersilia was to force Odessa Savings and Bill J. Brown — substitute trustee, with the Midland law firm Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe & Dawson — to honor seven joint venture contractual agreements.

Under the agreements, the institution agreed to be "responsible for producing and obtaining financing necessary to carry on the affairs of the joint ventures," according to the petition.

Contacted in Dallas Friday, Moseley said there is no direct correlation between the state court lawsuit against Odessa Savings and the 25-count federal grand jury criminal indictment against Rochester unsealed July 14, beyond the fact that the allegations involve Odessa Savings and most of the joint ventures cited in the civil lawsuit.

The multi-count federal indictment against Rochester alleges he committed bank fraud and was involved in racketeering in connection with real estate development loans over a 14-year period during which he was an Odessa Savings board member and stockholder.

During a July 14 news conference, Rochester maintained his innocence andsaid he expected to be exhonorated. The federal charges involve "violating technical regulations," but he said he was unaware he had broken any laws.

In his 70th District Court petition, Rochester stated that joint venture agreements, in which he, his daughter and son were jointly involved with Odessa Savings, earned the institution "in excess of $8 million in profit distribution from the joint ventures in question" and "in excess of $6 million" in interest payments on its loans to the joint ventures.

Late last Thursday afternoon, Steve Barron, with the Odessa firm of Todd, Barron, Bridges & McKeel, filed a motion drawn by Moseley, seeking an extension of the temporary restraining order and asked for a resetting of the Aug. 15 temporary injunction hearing date to Aug. 29.

The motion also asked court "leave to take depositions prior to answer date, and for expedited discovery, and for production of documents."

Moseley said they needed to "initiate discovery immediately in order to prepare themselves" for the temporary injunction hearing, adding that he planned to depose A.R. (Happy) Dyer, David C. Baum, Ken Griffin, and a corporate representative of Odessa Savings.

"In addition," he said, "plaintiffs need to inspect and copy certain documents to prepare for said hearing."

The documents Moseley said will be sought concern:

"— Execution of the joint venture agreements creating the (listed) joint ventures. (OSLA, Cielo Vista, Permian Plaza, University Gardens, Permian, Stoneyridge and Devonian Two)

— All decisions to make, renew, or decline to make loans to any and all of the joint ventures.

— All decisions concerning the management of any and all of the joint ventures...specifically including all decisions concerning the financial matters involved in carrying on the business of said joint ventures.

— All actions, or decisions not to act, to notify and/or seek federal and/or state regulatory guidance and/or approval, for any activities or decisions concerning the formation or operation of any and all of the joint ventures...excluding any matters pertaianing to the percentage of stock owned by Louis Rochester in Odessa Savings Association, and/or any parent, predecessor, or affiliate organization (excepting the joint ventures...)."

District Judge Gene Ater delayed action on the motion until Monday because he left town Friday to attend a judicial confenence.

MCH board votes to end contract with management firm

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A joint meeting Monday to consider Medical Center Hospital's $52 million 1988-89 budget, which includes a request for $1.8 million in Ector County tax funds, wound up with a vote to end the long-standing management contract between the county and Hospital Corporation of America.

The vote to terminate the contract by a majority of the MCH Board of Managers would mean the top three MCH administrative positions, including that of longtime Administrator Sam Glenney, would be eliminated.

Glenney and his top two administrative officers are HCA employees, whose salaries are paid by the management firm.

Longtime MCH board member Narita Holmes said that, in actuality, the majority of the board recommended to Commissioners Court members that the MCH 1988-89 budget be approved without funds for the HCA contract. Funding for the contract in the current fiscal year ends Sept. 30.

John Stinson, an HCA regional vice president, questioned whether the board of managers and the Commissioners Court could legally vote to end the contract that is not due to expire until 1990.

Ms. Holmes said, however, her understanding and that of the majority of board members is that funding of the HCA contract is on a year-to-year basis because counties are only permitted to approve budgets and contracts on that basis, unless a sinking fund is created to cover the cost of the contract. The court has created no such fund, she stated.

Asked why a majority of MCH board members decided not to continue funding of the HCA contract, Ms. Holmes said, "I believe there's a growing sentiment in the community, among the medical staff, on the board — pretty widespread — that we need a situation in our hospital at this time that we have a consultant that helps us on a variety of different things that HCA has been doing.

"But we want the (entire) staff to work for Medical Center Hospital rather than for a management firm," she stated.

A majority of the board believes, she said, that people directly employed by Ector County would be more immediately responsive to the needs and desires of the governing board. A couple of the board members do not share this philosophy, however, Ms. Holmes stated.

The action is the result of a study board members began a month or so ago with an eye toward restructuring the county-owned hospital "to make it more efficient and make it more responsive."

"There are other issues related to that restructuring that we've been trying to deal with," she said.

It appears that the decision to move toward a different management concept came out of discussions "concerning what we needed to do to resolve restructuring problems," she said.

Ms. Holmes said she expects board members will discuss the direction the hospital should take, from a management standpoint, in a special session that is expected to immediately follow this afternoon's regular monthly meeting of the board of manager.

Jordan thankful to those who saved her life

AUSTIN (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. Barbara Jordan, leaving Brackenridge Hospital nine days after she nearly drowned in her backyard swimming pool, said she felt lucky and thanked those who helped save her.

"I feel that I am extraordinarily blessed and fortunate to be going home after experiencing an accident from which many thought I would not emerge," said Ms. Jordan, 52, in a statement Monday.

The staunch Democrat expressed gratitude to emergency medical volunteers, Shock Trauma Air Rescue Flight personnel and nurses, hugging them and shaking their hands in the hospital corridor.

"Thank you for my life," she said.

As she was being lifted into a van to leave the hospital, Ms. Jordan smiled and gave a double thumbs-up. The van is equipped to accommodate wheelchair-bound passengers such as Ms. Jordan, who has a form of multiple sclerosis.

Ms. Jordan was taken to the hospital July 30 by the STAR Flight emergency helicopter after being found floating face-down in her pool, in which she exercises.

Dr. William Deaton, Ms. Jordan's pulmonary specialist, said her condition is "excellent" and she should "return to her normal lifestyle within a couple of weeks."

Doctors are not sure what caused Ms. Jordan to lose consciousness in her pool, Deaton said. He said it likely was a heart rhythm disturbance, rather than a heart attack or stroke.

Additional tests are planned, Deaton said. As a precaution, Ms. Jordan is taking medication to prevent heart-rhythm disturbance.

A pool is "a great place for exercise," Deaton added. But he said he advised Ms. Jordan not to be alone while in the pool.

"You sure look a lot better than you did last time I saw you," Silas Powell told Ms. Jordan as she left the hospital.

Powell, a Manchaca emergency medical services volunteer and supervisor in Brackenridge's engineering department, helped pull Ms. Jordan out of the pool.

Pro-life activists say they'll never again back Sharp

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas' anti-abortion activists this morning announced that they would never again support Railroad Commissioner John Sharp because of Sharp's backing of "the avowed enemy of unborn children."

Sharp, who carried the Texas Coalition for Life's main pro-life bill as a state senator during the 1985 legislative session, is chairman of Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis' Texas campaign. Coalition director Bill Price this morning called Dukakis "the most pro-abortion candidate ever to run for the U.S. presidency.

"His record, both as a state legislator and as governor of Massachusetts, clearly shows him to be as rabid a supporter of legalized and tax-funded abortions as ever held office anywhere in the United States," Price said.

The coalition and other anti-abortion groups backed Sharp's 1986 race for the Railroad Commission because of his "pro-family, pro-life" positions, he said. "We have given him a certain amount of credibility within our constituency," Price said.

"We feel as if we've been terribly used," said Margaret Hotze, political director of the Houston-based Life Advocates.

Sharp, who is eyeing a 1990 race for state comptroller, said he is abandoning neither his anti-abortion positions nor his support for Dukakis.

"I never expect all my friends to like all my friends," he said. "I never expect one issue to decide my support for any candidate."

For pro-lifers, Price said, abortion is "the single issue." "This is not just one issue any more than it was just one issue that Hitler was killing the Jews," he said. "He got the trains running on time, too."

Pointing to certain-Republican-candidate George Bush's weak pro-life record, Sharp called Price's allegations "a bit presumptuous." As a congressman from Houston in the late 1960s, Sharp said, Bush sponsored population control and family planning bills.

"That's the only ones he ever sponsored, period," he said. "I'd suggest that they check their own candidate's record."

Price said his group has not endorsed Bush, adding that it has some concerns with the vice president's position on abortion. "But he is not the public avowed enemy of the unborn children that Michael Dukakis is," he said.

Global peace conference held at SMU

DALLAS (AP) — The role of women in promoting peace is at issue this week as about 1,000 women from around the world gather for the "Global Peace-....From Vision to Reality" conference at Southern Methodist University.

"The feminine spirit is just as necessary to the development and maintenance of civilization as the masculine spirit," SMU theology instructor Ruth Tiffany Barnhouse told more than 200 delegates to the convention Monday.

Ms. Barnhouse, who has written five books, said that in every culture, women place more emphasis on human relations than men.

"Women are fundamentally concerned with nourishing human relations and maintaining it," she said.

The convention will feature several other notable speakers, including, Lily Golden, professor of black studies at the University of Moscow in the Soviet Union.

Ector sheriff gets approval to hire 4 jailers

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County Commissioners Monday voted to authorize Sheriff Bob Brookshire to hire four of the 12 jailers he needs to bring the county jail into compliance with recommendations of the Texas Commission on Jail Standards.

Brookshire said the four positions could be filled immediately, but wasconcerned that he would still be eight short of the number Joe Slator, TCJS inspector, told him he must have following a recent inspection.

Failure to comply with the recommendations could lead to loss of certification of the jail, which would mean the county would have to pay to house prisoners in a certified facility, he said.

However, Brookshire suggested the county could save about $100,000 a year if commissioners would allow him to hire reserve deputies on a part time, contract labor, basis. He noted that the full complement of jailers is not needed on a continuing basis, that the number of deputies required in the jail fluctuates with the number of prisoners incarcerated.

Jimmie Pyle

Services for Jimmie "Jim" Pyle of Midland will be Wednesday at 3 p.m. in the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Bill Gunter of the Midland Baptist Temple officiating.

Burial will follow in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He died at a Midland hospital Monday morning following a lengthy illness.

Pyle was born Dec. 3, 1945, in Midland, where he was reared. He graduated from Midland High School in 1963. He was employed with Globe Geophysics.

He lived in Phoenix, Ariz., for a short time where he met Judi Gilbert.

They were married June 8, 1971, in Winterhaven, Calif. They moved to Denver and then returned to Midland in 1981. He operated his own body shop for a while before joining the staff of Berg Motor Co. He was a manager of the body shop.

He was a member of the Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife, Judi Pyle of Midland; one son, Shane J. Pyle of Midland; one daughter, Jaymee Crystal Pyle of Midland; his mother, Mrs. Flora Pyle of Midland; one brother, Billy J. Pyle of Odessa; two nieces, one great nephew and several aunts and uncles.

The family requests memorials be directed to the Midland Baptist Temple or Hospice of Midland.

Charlie Compton Sr.

KERMIT — Funeral services for Charlie L. Compton Sr., 67, of Kerrville, father of Randy Compton of Midland, will be at 10 a.m. Wednesday at the Love Fellowship Church with the Rev. Pat Spinks officiating. Burial will be in the Kermit Cemetery under the direction of Cooper Funeral Chapel.

Compton died Sunday at a local hospital.

He was born July 23, 1921 in Oak Grove, La. He was a retired driller, a member of the Love Fellowship Church and a veteran of World War II. He had lived in Kermit for 36 years. He married Juanita Speck on June 13, 1966, in Kermit.

Other survivors include his wife of Kermit; two sons, Sonny Compton of Cedar Hill, and Charlie L. Compton Jr. of Kermit; three daughters, Kathy Rushing of Natchitoches, La., Donna Lynn Compton of Shreveport, La., and Teresa Casteel of Kermit; five brothers, George W. Compton of Eudora, Ark., Clarence L. "Cat" Compton and J.E. Compton, both of Goodwill, La., and R.H. "Tim" Compton and J.O. "Junior," both of Kermit; three sisters, Laura Ella Costello and Dollie Louise Hammer, both of Longview; and Nora Katherine Layton of Kilbourne, La.; a step-son, Darryl Cameron of Portales, N.M.; six step-daughters, Mrs. Gayle Chesney of Midland, Mrs. Bryant Jolly of Kermit, Mrs. Melvin Milner of Palestine, Mrs. Wayne Hardin, Mrs. Jackie Griffis and Mrs. Bill Aguirri, all of Portales; and seven grandchildren.

The savings would result from the fact that the county would not have to provide the usual benefit package for part-time personnel.

With 70 reserve deputies, Brookshire said, he anticipated he would have no difficulty hiring qualified personnel on an "as needed" basis. All he'd have to do is pay them an hourly wage equivalent to what his regular deputies normally earn on an hourly basis.

Brookshire said he planned to meet with Tom Pace, county fiscal operations director, to discuss the proposition and determine its viability.

Bill would delay use of turtle protection

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House approved legislation Monday to temporarily bar the Reagan administration from carrying out a plan to require shrimp fishermen to use devices to protect endangered and threatened sea turtles.

The bill, sent to the Senate by voice vote, would prohibit making the devices mandatory before Sept. 30, a month after such regulations are slated to take effect.

The delay is to allow House and Senate negotiators time to work out differences in their versions of legislation to reauthorize the Endangered Species Act.

Lawmen investigating burglaries

From Staff Reports

Midland County Sheriff's officers are investigating two residential burglaries, including one which netted burglars items valued at almost $3,000.

According to reports, a pump shotgun valued at $750, a videocassette recorder valued at $500, a 13-inch color television valued at $500, a 12-gauge shotgun valued at $400, a .22-caliber rifle valued at $300, a scope valued at $300, and a .25-caliber automatic pistol valued at $150 were stolen from a residence on FM 1788 a mile south of County Road 210.

The burglary occurred between 11:30 p.m. Sunday and 7:45 p.m. Monday, reports said.

In other reports, a womens wedding band valued at $400 and a turquoise ring in the shape of a horseshoe valued at $75 were stolen from a residence at Workmans Mobile Home Park, on CR 120 East near Cottonflat Road.

The burglary occurred Sunday sometime between 9:30 a.m. and 1 p.m., the sheriff's office reported.

Officer, car lot manager wounded

DALLAS (AP) — An off-duty Dallas police officer and a car lot manager were wounded by flying glass and shotgun pellets Monday when a man fired shots into the manager's office, police and witnesses said.

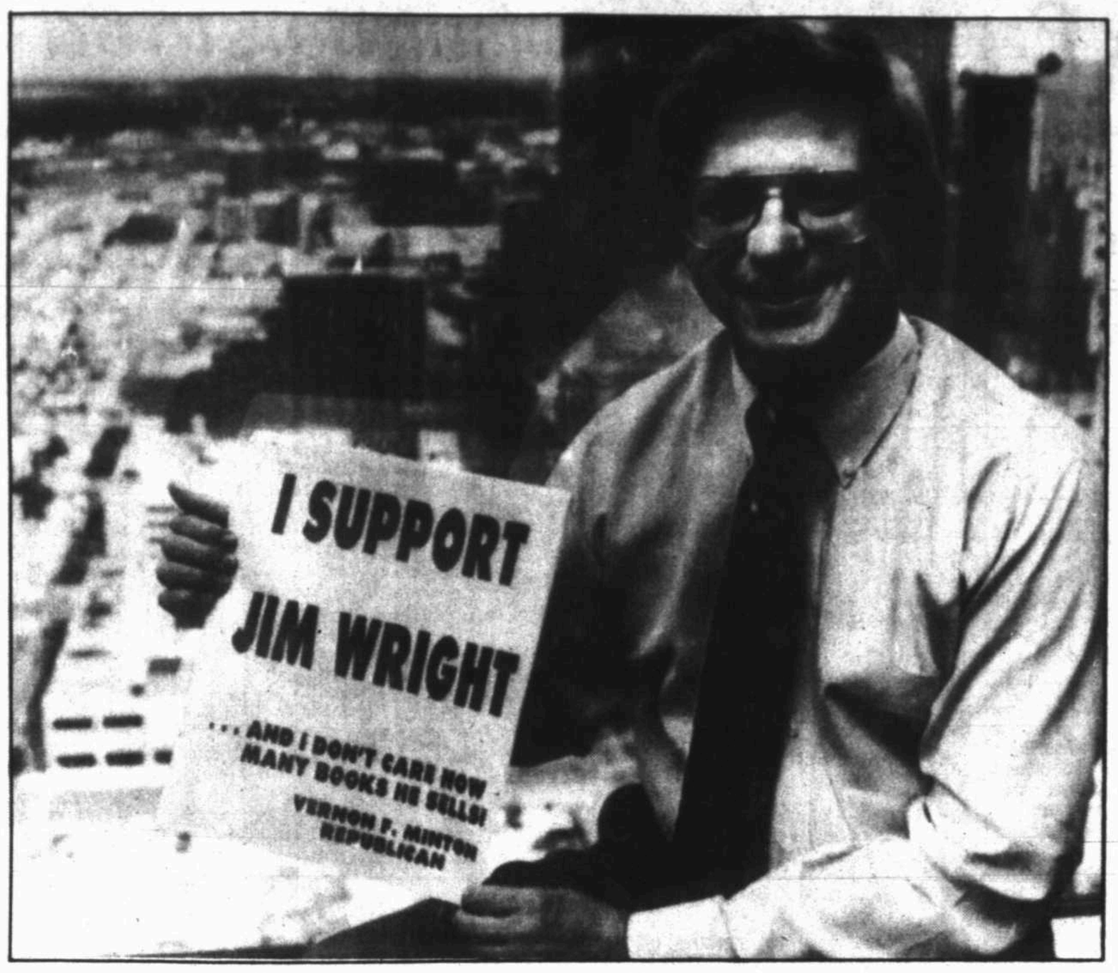

At 6:45 p.m., the officer and the manager were sitting in the S&S Auto Sales office when a man in a wrecker pulled up, got out of the vehicle and fired a shotgun at least four times through the office window, Lt. J.S. Muncy said at the scene. The man then fled in his vehicle.

The officer, whose name was not released by police, was wounded in the left shoulder blade, police said. He was taken to Southeastern Methodist Hospital, where he was listed in stable condition, hospital officials said.

The incident still was under investigation Monday evening, and the identity and condition of the dealership's manager were not being released by police.

The officer and the manager were both armed and returned fire, police said. Police said they did not know whether the gunman was hit.

The wounded officer was making a personal visit to the dealership when the shooting occurred, Muncy said.

Area 'dumping ground' for dead bodies

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An area in southwest Bexar County is becoming known as a human "dumping ground" after authorities discovered the eighth murder victim in the area in the past eight years.

The area is along a 2½-mile stretch of Loope 1604 where the eighth murder victim was found over the weekend. Six of the bodies have been found in the area during the last two years, authorities say.

Only three of the slayings have been solved, officials say.

Although six of the bodies have been found in the past two years, authorities discount any possibility of a serial killer.

"It's pretty damn bad," said Maurice Rose, chief of the Bexar County sheriff's department's criminal investigations division. "We are afraid these people are going to keep dumping their victims out there. But no way we have a serial killer out there. It's just a well-known place to criminals."

"We are afraid these people are going to keep dumping their victims out there. But no way we have a serial killer out there. It's just a well-known place to criminals."
— Maurice Rose, Bexar County sheriff's office

The area has become a dumping ground because of its remoteness and low traffic, authorities say.

"The criminals know that it is an infrequently traveled roadway that is very dark at night," said sheriff's Sgt. Dalton Baker.

Sheriff's Lt. Bill White added, "It is an area well known by car thieves as a place to park and strip stolen vehicles and for murderers to kill or dump their victims."

The latest victim was a still-unidentified young woman who was found early Sunday by a sheriff's patrolman looking to chase away early morning lovers parked in the area.

An autopsy revealed she was beaten to death and then butchered by 14 stab wounds.

A still-unidentified man, whose body was found in November 1979 was shot in the head four times. The case still is unsolved.

On Aug.18, 1985, the body of 24-year-old Kathy Lynn Wilson was found in the dumping ground. She was shot to death.

Authorites said Robert Arthur Ogier shot her at point-blank range in the head after he and the victim's husband, James Dean Wilson, fought over who was going to get to pull the trigger as she pleaded for her life.

Ogier is serving a 99-year prison term while Wilson is serving a 60-year sentence.

The clubbed and stabbed body of Rogelio Ruiz, 32, was found Nov.15, 1986. Investigators later found two knives believed to have been used to slit his throat.

Roger C. Olivarri, a parolee charged with the murder, was sentenced by a jury to 45 years in prison.

On Aug.31, 1986, the body of 35-year-old Robert C. Alva was found on the banks of Polecat Creek. His head was bludgeoned, his body stabbed and set afire.

Because of the Ruiz murder and the murders of Antonio Garibay, 29, and Felix Martin, 15, whose bodies were found in the dumping ground July 30, 1987, investigators believe the area is well-known as a place to get rid of bodies by criminals in need.

Another body, that of a still-unidentified woman, was found in the dumping ground Nov. 9, 1987. She was sexually assaulted and beaten to death, investigators said.

"I just wish it would stop," Rose sighed. "The area is regularly patrolled by our people, but we just don't have the manpower to be out there all the time."

Retirees' gardener grows giant vegetables

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — It is a good thing Gregorio Reyna does not mind doing dirty work.

Otherwise, senior citizens living in Sunshine Plaza would have to till their own soil, fertilize their own squash and harvest their own tomatoes.

Reyna, 77, is the resident gardener at the Northwest Side retirement community operated by the San Antonio Housing Authority. He tends vegetables growing on a 10-by-5-foot stretch of land located on the grounds of the 100-unit housing facility. The residents share the crops.

"I get up every morning at 5 o'clock," Reyna said. "I open my door at 6:30 (a.m.) and I'm in my garden by 7 o'clock. My wife says I work too hard."

This year he is hoping his friends and neighbors in the public housing complex have hearty appetites because his tomatoes, squash and peppers prove everything is big in Texas. By mid-July, he had picked a 16-pound squash and had a larger one growing on the vine. His unripe cherry tomatoes already were the size of regular tomatoes.

"I water them and use fertilizer and that's all," Reyna said. "But, you can't put the fertilizer too close to the roots. If you do it's no good."

Reyna, who was born in Eagle Pass, spent much of his life as a migrant farm worker in Indiana apple orchards. After his daughter and two sons were grown, he decided to settle in San Antonio.

Being used to living off the land, he said he was delighted last year when housing authority officials told Sunshine Plaza residents they could plant a garden if they wanted to raise their own vegetables. Several people showed an interest.

But when it came down to digging in the dirt, some of Reyna's neighbors were physically unable to do the work. So, he came to the rescue of his friends and their vegetables.

When the authorities learned Reyna had a green thumb, they also placed him in charge of caring for the roses in the complex courtyard. He said he is convinced his garden grows well because he takes the time and exerts the energy to keep the land clear of weeds — even when it is not growing season.

Ms. Jordan, who was given a button that said, "I Flew on STAR Flight," told flight parademic Tricia Franklin, "You are my hero."

The STAR Flight button was pinned on Ms. Jordan's robe, below her right shoulder. She already sported a button on the left saying, "Where was George?" — a jab at Republican presidential candidate George Bush.

Ms. Jordan got national attention during the 1974 Watergate impeachment hearings. In 1966, she became the first black state senator in Texas.

In 1972, Ms. Jordan was the first Southern black elected to Congress since Reconstruction. In 1978, she left politics to teach at the University of Texas Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs.

Zoologist: Prairie dogs misunderstood

By TENA HARALDSON

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (AP) — Ranchers say prairie dogs don't live up to that cute-sounding name. Prairie rodents is more like it, they grumble of the furry animals that chomp grass and booby-trap pastures with their burrows.

Zoologist John Hoogland admits the critters cause problems but says they're basically misunderstood. Much of what he says flies in the face of lore.

"Prairie dogs will expand unless they are controlled, said Verne Brakke, director of regulatory services for the state Agriculture Department.

Not so, said Hoogland. In fact, in a behavior pattern observed in fewer than a dozen other species, prairie dog mothers leave their own pups unguarded to enter the burrows of female relatives where they kill and eat the babies.

"The implications of this are enormous," he said. "There seems to be a system in which the prairie dogs are controlling themselves."

Hoogland, of the University of Maryland, has been watching prairie dogs in one colony in Wind Cave National Park since 1975, and the population has stayed around 150. "That colony has not expanded 1 inch," he said.

The killings at first went unnoticed because they occurred in burrows, then Hoogland noticed that females visiting other burrows would emerge with blood on their fur. The evidence was uncovered when a burrow was excavated.

"Fifty-one percent of all litters are killed by infanticide," he said, adding that the common perpetrator is a female relative, though in a few cases the mother turns on her own litter. Litters average tw to three pups.

"The leading candidate is that they are doing it for food," he said. "I have never seen them eat any other meat.

"Maybe in other colonies there are certain things we could do to make the prairie dogs control themselves."

Ranchers won't shed tears over the deaths of prairie dog pups. Since the 1800s, when pioneers and their cattle moved west, it's been war.

"Back in the early 1900s at one point the U.S. government hired 125,000 people whose only job was to eradicate prairie dogs," Hoogland said.

Those efforts continue today in states like South Dakota, Wyoming, Montana, Nebraska and Colorado, said Brakke. Most states have animal damage offices, but anti-prairie dog efforts are not coordinated from state to state.

South Dakota had 800,000 acres of prairie dog towns in 1980. Today that is down to 250,000 to 300,000, Brakke said. No figures are available on the amount of land infested nationwide, but millions of acres are involved, he said.

"They are a rodent. We give them kind of a cute and furry little attribute, so we call them prairie dogs. If we called them prairie rats or prairie rodents there wouldn't be that connotation," he said.

"I grew up with a dislike, a distaste and an aboslute hate for prairie dogs," said state Agriculture Secretary Marvis Hogen. "The bread of life in South Dakota is grass, and those little buggers eat grass, and the second thing is they make holes that your horse can step in and break his leg."

Hoogland said it's hard to find examples of that, and added, "Everybody hates prairie dogs but almost nothing was known about them. Ranchers say, 'Look what they've done to my land,' but there's a lot of evidence that prairie dogs move into areas that have already been overgrazed.

"I'm not saying there's no competition (with livestock) but I'm saying all the evidence isn't in yet. Two hundred years ago there were jillions of prairie dogs and jillions of buffalo, so they could coexist."

Zoologist John Hoogland has studied the same praire dog town in South Dakota's Wind Cave National Park since 1975 and he says his findings contradict some commonly held beliefs about the creatures.

Isopods may lead scientists to fertile land

By DAN IZENBERG

JERUSALEM (AP) — Tiny crustaceans that don't behave like your average desert dwellers may help identify potentially fertile farmland in arid regions.

On the barren waste near Moshe Shakah's office in the Negev desert, pine, carob and pistachio trees grow without irrigation in an area that averages only 3⅞ inches of rain a year. The reason, Shahak says, is a grayish, segmented, armor-plated relative of the wood louse known as an isopod.

The species Shahak is studying — Helilepistus realuluri — has a name longer than its .7-inch-long body.

"The isopod has two qualities you'd never expect to find in the desert," says Shahak, a Ben Gurion University desert ecology specialist who has studied the isopods since 1972. "Its rate of water loss is very high and it has an inflexible life routine."

To survive, isopod families stick together and work cooperatively, Shahak says. "They formed the first kibbutzim in the Negev."

In order to survive the summer, when temperatures soar over 104 degrees, the isopods must find soil with a moisture content of 6 percent to 10 percent. The family — an adult male and female and up to 90 offspring — digs a tunnel up to 27 inches deep, knowing intuitively where the moisture content of the soil will be high enough to sustain them, Shahak says.

As they burrow, the isopods leave a tell-tale mound of chewed-up soil above ground, indicating their presence and thus the presence of life-sustaining soil under the hard desert surface, he says.

Shahak took soil readings to determine the relative density of isopod habitation and found a direct correlation between the number of isopods and the presence of moisture in the soil.

Aharon Yair, a Hebrew University geomorphologist, did hydrolic examinations of the soil that verified Shahak's research and contradicted current belief on where to find moisture in the desert.

Desert specialists had believed that the soil with the highest water content was found at the bottom of desert valley beds. Yair's readings showed that isopods dig their boles halfway down the slopes of the desert hills, at the point where the rock ends and the soil begins, Shahak says.

Five years ago, he planted five species of trees based on those readings; so far, they are flourishing, he said.

Dr. Eliyahu Ravitz, an expert on desert research at Hebrew University's Faculty of Agriculture, says that while the findings are interesting, moisture was not the only element that contributed to soil's fertility, and that most trees need soil with at least 20 percent water content, far more than the 6 percent to 10 percent needed by the isopods.

Shahak said there appeared to be enough nitrogen, phosphorus and other elements necessary to sustain the growth of trees in addition to water. He said he increased the moisture in the areas pinpointed by the isopods by digging holes to trap rainwater not normally absorbed by the baked earth.

Shahak believes his findings could help solve the severe food shortages caused by extended periods of drought in Ethiopia and other African nations.

"If it works here, it will work in Africa too," he said.

Horse business grows out of thriving produce market

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Jessica Bollinger decided at an early age that she wanted to make her living from the land.

She has, but not the way she had imagined.

For seven years, Ms. Bollinger has operated Jessica's Fruits and Vegetables on Nicholasville Road, a thriving produce market that has attracted a loyal following.

The success of Jessica's has enabled its owner to pursue her longtime goal of going into the horse business.

Ms. Bollinger's Carriage Station Farm on Old Frankfort Pike went commercial this spring, opening to thoroughbred boarders. She hopes to fill the 22 stalls with "lay-ups" — horses on break from the race track — recuperating equines, sales yearlings and, one day, brood mares.

She has already welcomed six boarders to her new, roomy barn.

Despite the recession in the horse business and escalating feed prices caused by the drought, Ms. Bollinger said she could succeed.

"They really scare you when you're in school about the economics of farming," said Ms. Bollinger, who has a degree in agricultural economics from the University of Kentucky.

But the same principles she has applied to her produce market — gross sales have quadrupled in eight years — will work for the 75-acre farm, she said.

"Quality service is really our motto," she said. "I really feel like if you follow that creed in anything you do, everything's going to be a success.

"And being a small-scale operation, we can provide more intimate care for the horses," she added.

To manage the farm's daily operations, Ms. Bollinger hired Tara Hopkins, who has worked on central Kentucky horse farms for more than a decade.

"It's a very, very competitive business and it's tough to break into," said Ms. Hopkins, 29, the daughter of U.S. Rep. Larry Hopkins.

"It's going to be a very slow building process, but it's going to happen."

An estimated $8,000 was spent to prepare the farm for clients; the recent $3,000 bill for straw and hay took both women by surprise.

"It's frightening," Ms. Bollinger said of the drought. "I see it from both aspects, the fruit market and the farm."

Saint Laurent back in top form

By BERNADINE MORRIS
New York Times News Service

PARIS — Yves Saint Laurent, looking racy in a green linen jacket, white pants and a red plaid tie, strode confidently down the long runway at the Hotel Inter-Continental.

He carried a bouquet of white lilies, which he presented to the model wearing the wedding dress.

Saint Laurent's fall and winter couture collection of 134 pieces was designed with authority and conviction.

It was divided into three major segments, each complementing the others. Together they showed a mature designer in complete control of his craft.

After a few shaky seasons, Saint Laurent is again in the driver's seat.

It was clear from the beginning of the show that his reputation as a colorist is not inflated.

No one else can mix such unlikely combinations as green, blue, rose and yellow without making them look garish.

On the other hand, he can make black spring to life with a simple turquoise belt.

Tailored suits with prominent gold buttons at the wrists and pocket flaps, as well as for closure, were an unmistakable hommage to Chanel, one of his acknowledged masters.

Saint Laurent proved that he, too, is a master of the Chanel genre.

The hemlines stopped a few inches above the knee.

His special sensitivity to color was expressed in these tailored styles.

With a mustard-colored suit, he showed spruce green gloves and shoes and a bright blue hat.

The colors had the glow of an Impressionist painting.

A second major theme was expressed in the unrelieved black clothes, plus a few in navy, that the French call "le smoking": men's dinner clothes adapted for women.

Conventionally, they consist of a severely cut wool jacket and trousers, often with black braid for verisimilitude.

Saint Laurent showed the jackets mainly with skirts that grazed the knees or fell gently to the floor; they were worn with white blouses. But along with the suits, he showed smoking dresses with wide-open necklines or seductive side drapery.

In this category of fashion, neatness counts.

While jewelry consisting of gobs of colored stones was prominent in the rest of the collection, it was used sparingly in the smoking group of 21 styles. Maltese crosses and double bracelets, one barrel-shaped and one wide and flat, were the designer's favorites.

The third group was fancy and flamboyant.

Beaded jackets in Impressionist colors were further embellished with jeweled appliques of bunches of grapes and leaf shapes.

Slender satin skirts in such colors as lime green, cerise and clear red were worn with the jackets.

With designs like these, fashion approaches the fine arts, and this has been one of Saint Laurent's long-time goals.

The head of his own couture house for 25 years — he apprenticed with Christian Dior and took over as chief designer in 1957 when Dior died — Saint Laurent has been responsible for many worldwide trends.

Twenty years ago, he made the fashion world safe for women wearing pants.

This season, with most couturiers focusing again on trousers for day and night, he played down pants.

One outfit he did show consisted of tobacco-colored pants and an ochre sweater, accompanied by a silk tobacco raincoat lined in chestnut silk.

The outfit exemplifies one of the designer's basic fashion tenets: that all a woman needs to be well dressed are a sweater, a raincoat and a good pair of pants.

Nonetheless, skirts dominated the collection; one of the prettiest shapes fitted the body fluidly, rippling slightly just above the knees.

The collection covered a lot of ground and was brilliantly executed.

Even in the couture, where professionalism is taken for granted, it was outstanding, both for its technique and imagination.

Saint Laurent is back in top form.

Casadei creates sexy, dramatic clothing

By DIANE DORRANS SAEKS
Copley News Service

CNS Graphic

With so much fashion being bland and basic, with Anne Klein II look-alike jackets and "sensible" silk blouses flooding the marketplace, thank goodness for Eletra Casadei. The Los Angeles designer's 8-year-old company makes sportswear and special-occasion dresses that are sexy, dramatic and original — and not nearly as expensive as they look.

Casadei, 34, who grew up in Hayward, Calif., and started modeling for I. Magnin when she was still in school, loves spotlight-grabbing fashion. Her $40 million company's three current lines feature identifiable over-the-top styles. While cautious designers cling to "less is more" theories, Casadei always goes for maximum effect — with one extra taffeta ruffle, puckered Spandex, more hand-beading, sequins, just-for-effect zippers and texture-on-texture fabrics.

"I never studied design. Never," she says. "So I didn't get caught up in the so-called artistry of it all. Instead, I became obsessed with textiles. I've designed with everything from plisse to leather. I've even revived fabrics that hadn't been made since the '20s and '30s."

Casadei started her textile education when she saw that all the fabrics she loved were too expensive for her first line, TD4 (To Die For). So she developed her own rich-looking laces and opulent, silklike taffetas in lower-priced synthetics.

Her collections always start with fabrics she creates in Europe and Japan.

"Most people think that fashion design means sitting down and sketching clothes," Casadei says. "My ideas come when I see new fabrics, trims and laces. I never design without the fabrics in my hands."

Casadei's fabrics include sequined stretch cotton, taffeta of silklike synthetics, wool gabardine, crinkled linen, lame rayon knits, "sanded" silk, crushed rayon-cotton knit, beaded chiffon and a new, rubber-printed, leatherlike fabric that she developed in Switzerland.

The TD4 line of glittering gowns — for dress-up events from senior prom to New Year's Eve — is designed for the younger customer who has enough sophistication to carry off the Lacroix-style froufrou skirts, jewel colors, dramatic fabrics and European lace trims.

The second line, Casadei, features special-occasion dresses in opulent-looking taffetas and chiffons.

In January, Casadei introduced her sport collection. Sand-washed silks in subtle colors and relaxed shapes are perfect for summer parties. Full-bodied crushed linens and a crinkled rayon-cotton knit in lacy and geometric Jacquard patterns are very Los Angeles — available in white only.

And now Casadei is starting her own lower-priced line, Dovizia — knocking herself off before anyone else can.

Benefit style show to be presented

Chi Omega will present its eighth annual benefit style show and luncheon 11 a.m. Saturday at the Petroleum Club of Midland.

Themed "Garden Party," this year's event will benefit the Children's Clinic of the Community Children's Ministry. The clinic provides medical treatment for children up to 14 years old who are members of low-income families. Since the clinic's founding five years ago, it has served about 15,000 patients.

Fashions featured will be provided by G. Bradford, The Canopy, J.E. Boren, Pappagallo, The Gazebo and Visions. Jewelry will be from Cristiani's.

Tickets are $20. Reserved tables are available. No money will be accepted at the door. For reservations call 683-6523.

Hemlines, prices ripping fashion industry's profits

Copley News Service

Higher hemlines and inflated prices have put a rip in the fashion industry's pocketbook.

Ohio consultant Carl Steidtmann says it's the worst fashion recession since 1974, and the main reasons are inflated prices, the decreasing value of the dollar and import quota restrictions.

But fashion consultant Carol Farmer says the biggest reason for this year's slump is the need of the industry to hype miniskirts. She says women sense they are being manipulated. At the same time they find that the higher hemlines and flowery designs are unflattering. Put two and two together and you get a big, fat slump.

Givenchy highlights Paris show

By BERNADINE MORRIS
New York Times News Service

PARIS — Hubert de Givenchy, one of the grand couturiers for more than 30 years, shaved a couple of decades from his clothes for the fall and winter openings in Paris.

He showed a sprightly collection based on strong color combinations like mauve with green or orange with purple, which should be magnets for young women with a sense of tradition.

The prevalence of satin intensified the glow of his colors.

Aided by slender, draped shapes, knee-baring hemlines and necklines that plunged to the waist, he produced a zesty collection demonstrating that luxury need not be stodgy.

Like Marc Bohan at Christian Dior, Philippe Venet and Yves Saint Laurent, he proved that technique and experience cannot be underestimated when it comes to designing distinguished clothes.

Along with Givenchy, all three have had a revival this season.

The designer, who does not always make an appearance, came out in his white laboratory technician's coat. Six feet 6 inches tall, he bowed his head modestly to the acclaim.

His company has signed an agreement to be acquired by Moet Hennessy Louis Vuitton, the conglomerate that has Financiere Agache as its most powerful shareholder.

Financiere Agache owns Christian Lacroix and Christian Dior, and with the acquisition of Givenchy, the conglomerate will becomes a major force in French fashion.

Arrangements are expected to be completed in the fall.

From the first style on the runway, a short draped jersey dress worn with a sable-edged platter hat, it was clear that this was not going to be a staid collection.

It was followed by fur coats and trimmings in colors never seen in nature.

Dior French fashion house designer Marc Bohan was awarded the 1988/89 Golden Thimble Award for his designs.

Two fox skins in wine and lavender, complete with heads and tails, were slung around the shoulders of bright checked or plaid wool suits.

It was a lively updating of a 1930s style.

Givenchy also used leather in a snappy manner, adding three rows of fringe to the body of a royal blue suede coat, and fringed tiers to the sleeves a green suede style.

Most coats were seven-eighths length and chunky.

Whether in fur, wool plaid or leather, they showed just a sliver of the slender draped dress or fitted suit worn under them.

There were some pants suits, obligatory this season, also in vibrant shades.

A jacket mingling blue-green, purple and rose squares had a red scarf tied at the neck and was accompanied by purple trousers.

Cocktail and dinner clothes emphasized short shift dresses in colors like bright blue or cerise satin, sometimes embellished with feathers and beads.

Occasionally the decoration got out of hand, with too much glitter and too many lace ruffles, but usually the designer kept things under control.

A blue satin shift with a capelike velvet collar was a beautiful example of restrained glamour.

There were a few calf-length styles sandwiched between the short, snappy styles and the regal floor-length dresses.

Matching fox rimmed the decolletage and circled the wrists of a long ruby-colored dress that was strong on grandeur.

The bridal dress, which traditionally ends each couture collection, typified the young look of the Givenchy clothes with its heart-shaped satin bodice edged in ruffled net.

Per Spook's best styles this season are his very fluid dresses in suede, which look as thin as parchment, and his short embroidered tweed jackets worn over silk vests and trousers.

The Norwegian-born designer, who usually presents the most casual styles in the couture, was in an uncharacteristically formal mood this season.

He tried to relax his evening dresses by making them with divided skirts.

But he lined each leg with ruffles and made them so full the result was dressy.

The Golden Thimble Award was presented to Marc Bohan of Christian Dior for the most creative and most beautiful clothes of the season.

The award, sponsored by Helena Rubinstein, is decided by a jury of 27 international fashion journalists. It has been presented twice a year since 1976. Bohan was also honored in 1983.

Patrick Kelly, the American in Paris whose company is owned by Warnaco, gave a party for 300 people in the garden adjoining his workrooms and boutique in the newly fashionable Third Arrondissement.

DEAR ABBY

Core of big apple name varies

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Every now and then someone asks, "Why is New York City called the Big Apple?" I asked my readers. Here's a sample of the responses:

DEAR ABBY: The Bible tells us that the apple was forbidden fruit. (Remember, the serpent in the Garden of Eden dared Adam to eat the apple?) Well, from that time on, the apple signified temptation. And since New York City is the most tempting city in the world, the traveling men named New York City the Big Apple.

My grandfather was a traveling salesman and told me this. — NORMAN IN NEWARK

DEAR ABBY: I once read a story written by a man who used to travel with a circus. He said that when they referred to the town they would be playing next, they called it the "apple." All entertainers hoped that one day they would play New York — the choice spot, the "big one," or "the big apple," and that is how New York City came to be known as the Big Apple. — CORNELL THOMPSON, HOUSTON

DEAR ABBY: I have researched the Big Apple appellation given to New York City. I offer the following:

Sir Isaac Newton, who discovered the universe's gravitation force, was sitting under an apple tree in New York, when an apple fell from the tree and struck him in the head. He picked it up and said "Wow, that was a big apple!"

Due to his fame as a scientist, New York City was called the Big Apple. — THOMAS E. PENDERGAST

DEAR ABBY: "The Big Apple" was the name of a song which inspired a dance wherein a small group made a circle, held hands and danced to a lively beat. A gossip columnist named Walter Winchell made it popular in 1930. It took New York City by storm — that is why they call New York City the Big Apple. — A. NOLAN, ATLANTA

DEAR ABBY: New York City was named the Big Apple because during the Depression of 1929-1930, all the banks closed and many people were suddenly unemployed so they stood on the street corners and sold apples for a nickel apiece. There were so many apple stands in New York City, they called it the Big Apple. — MRS. LEONARD COOKSON, PARADISE VALLEY, ARIZ.

DEAR ABBY: As a former resident of New York, I believe it came to be known as the Big Apple because New York grows the most varied apples of any state in the union. For example: Delicious, Rome, MacIntosh, Baldwins, Golden Delicious, Spy Greivies, Jonathon, etc. Hence the name, the Big Apple. — N. WHITMAN, LAUDERDALE LAKES, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: I saw a letter in your column from a reader asking why New York City is known the world over as the Big Apple.

Back in the 1920s and '30s, people in the entertainment world — particularly jazz musicians — talked about making it to the top of the tree. To "play" New York City was to make the big time, or the "big apple," which was a jazz term.

Today, New York City remains the No. 1 visitor destination in the world, thanks to both the New York City Convention and Visitors' Bureau's efforts and the state's own "I Love New York" statewide tourism campaign. Last year, we welcomed 17.8 million visitors to the Big Apple — over 3 million of them from overseas.

So, we welcome the world — and especially you and your readers.

Come and enjoy all of New York state's beauty, history, culture and unlimited recreation, from Buffalo to the Big Apple! — MARIO M. CUOMO, GOVERNOR

AT WIT'S END

Returning phone calls waste of time

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

You have all probably read the same story. The one that tallied up how many years you spend wasting time. A group of people with stopwatches in hand studied hundreds of people throughout the nation for more than a year. (Sounds like a job right up there with measuring potholes in the spring.)

Anyway, they found out people spend a whole year of time looking for misplaced objects, eight months opening junk mail, and four years doing housework.

The statistic that really grabbed me was the one that said callers spend a total of two years trying to return telephone calls to people who never seem to be in.

It didn't use to take that long. You'd call someone and let the phone ring 10 times and hang up. You didn't have to be too bright to figure out that if they were home, they'd have answered it. Not today. I have to sit through Van Halen screeching "Runnin' With the Devil" for God knows how long before I hear the sound of the beep to leave a message for a son who is pushing buttons from his bed.

He's not the only one. Everyone who owns a phone answering machine now has a case of the terminally clever. Each one tries to outdo the other one in cuteness. It's the AT&T Comedy Store.

I wish they had done a study on the time it takes for people to write, produce and record messages for their answering machines. They could record an album in the time it takes to lay a track of background music and amaze and stun the caller with their own voice in 30 seconds.

It's stupid when you think about it. I can't tell you how much time I waste sitting through voices that tell me an office is closed but if I will call back during business hours they will be happy to serve me. If they didn't answer their phone on the 10th ring, I'd know all that anyway. Not to mention the money I spend calling my kids long-distance to talk to their machines.

Well, I have been born again. I am no longer going to waste my time talking to people who aren't there. In fact, I'm taking a long, hard look at my life, and I could cut corners in a lot of places. I'm going to stop talking to animals. Every time I see one, I say, "Hey, buddy, how's it goin?" like they know and are going to answer.

I waste a lot of time carrying on conversations with babies. I bounce them on my knee for hours and have a one-sided conversation with myself. "Is he a good baby? Are we sleepy? Are we ready to have our pants changed?" (If he's in his right mind, is he going to admit to any of that?)

And I'm going to stop talking to myself. If I can't take the time to sit down and drop myself a note, then it couldn't have been important in the first place.

Old store gets new look, logo

By WOODY HOCHSWENDER
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Could Bonwit Teller be the sleeper of the retail world?

It's hard to imagine the store with the prim violet-bouquet logo as hot. But some designers see it as the only store willing to take chances in a wait-and-see retail environment.

Under new management since its acquisition last summer by the Hooker Corp. of Australia, the chain of 12 specialty stores is pursuing a careful expansion program as well as developing a strong fashion point of view.

David Dworkin, president of Bonwit's since March, has struggled with the realities of today's apparel market without discarding the carriage-trade charm that dates back to 1898, when Paul Bonwit and Emmanuel Teller founded the store.

"What had been quite a wonderful store had deteriorated in the last 10 years," said Dworkin, referring to the late 70s, when the flagship store on Fifth Avenue at 56th Street here was torn down to make way for Trump Tower, and branches in Beverly Hills and Palm Desert, Calif., were closed.

Dworkin sought "a highly edited, service-oriented fashion speciality store." He moved Bonwit's away from moderately priced clothing and out of children's wear and home furnishings. New branches are to open in Boston, Cincinnati and Columbia, S.C., this fall.

"They have made sweeping, positive changes," said Marie Holman, president of Perry Ellis Sportwear. "They're important to our business because of their commitment to support better resources."

Bonwit's supports young designers like Patrick Kelly, Charlotte Neuville, Marian Clayden, Capriccio, David Josef and Fonda. Neuville estimated that it sold about $100,000 worth of her clothes last spring.

"We are going after the customer who is on the leading edge of fashion but not the cutting edge," said Missy LoMonaco, a vice president and director of fashion merchandising. "She wants quality and uniqueness in the mainstream of fashion."

Fans once were such a fashionable French luxury item that legislation was passed to govern the business of fan-making.

Some 150 fan makers were registered in Paris in 1753, each having undergone a four-year apprenticeship and created a fan that satisfied his colleagues.

U.S. has shortage of merchant ships, seamen

EDITOR'S NOTE: For a nation with its illustrious seagoing past, the United States has let its merchant marine nearly sink out of sight. Only one in four graduates of the seven merchant marine academies find a berth on an American vessel these days. That seems a waste of hard training, some say, and raises another question: What if another big war or other emergency should suddenly require Uncle Sam to find his sea legs again?

Midshipmen are encouraged to work up an appetite by doing push-ups en route to the mess hall at the United States Merchant Marine Academy in Kings Point, N.Y.

If, without donning scuba gear, you would find out how deep the U.S. merchant marine has sunk into oblivion, consider this:

The actual love boat on TV's "Love Boat" is Norwegian.

Why, then, are one federal and six state maritime academies in the United States still in business when the nation's merchant ships are barely afloat? Are these young sailors training to man a Titanic?

Good question, difficult answer.

In business the schools are, albeit with trimmed sails. They turn out some 725 graduates a year, only a minority of whom will actually fill a berth at sea. The rest, like their recent predecessors, will find places with port authorities, shipping and stevedoring firms, the Navy, tugboats, ship designers, marinas, yacht yards, an admiralty law office or two. One is relief captain of the Mississippi excursion stern-wheeler Delta Queen. A few are weathermen.

"The last stand of the U.S. merchant marine is in these academies," says Frank Braynard, museum curator of the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point on New York's Long Island.

A last stand George Custer could commiserate with.

In 1986, goods worth $320.5 billion entered or left the United States by sea. Only 4 percent of it was in American bottoms. While 90-plus percent of the Earth's trade moves by sea in some 25,000 ships, the U.S. merchant fleet numbered just 371 active oceangoing vessels, 11th worldwide. (Panama was first with 3,278 ships, Russia second with 2,453.)

The last ocean merchant ship built in a U.S. yard, 76 of which have closed since 1980, was launched last year. None is currently building. None is on order.

A PRESIDENTIAL commission on the merchant marine and defense headed by former U.S. Sen. Jeremiah Denton of Alabama predicted last December that unless actions are taken the number of ships and seamen will drop by one-half by the year 2000. Rear Adm. Kenneth M. Curtis, president of the Maine Maritime Academy in Castine, cites a Navy estimate of a shortage of 8,100 trained seamen in the military Sea Lift Command alone.

To keep that shortfall from getting worse is one reason the academies survive. The United States has about 100 ships mothballed that could be commissioned in five to 10 days in a national emergency. But you can't mothball crews to man them.

But should there be World War III and should it be fought as the first two, some see the maritime weakness of the United States as the possible Achilles heel.

"Our merchant fleet bears the heavy onus of being the first of our heavy industries exported overseas," says Rear Adm. Paul L. Krinsky, superintendent of Kings Point. "But we're not static. Buggy whip manufacturers went broke because they thought they were in the buggy whip business instead of transportation."

Americans are once again pioneering, this time in "intermodalism," the fine art of combining and coordinating road, rail and air freight for sea transport or vice versa.

Thirty years ago, half of America's seamen came up "the hawsepipe." The only requirement for promotion was to pass successive Coast Guard exams at minimum three-year intervals on the ladder from seaman to mate to captain or chief engineer. Today, 17 percent of licensed officers are graduates of Kings Point alone.

The first academy for commercial mariners dates back a century. The progenitor was Adm. Stephen B. Luce, a graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis where merchant sailors have been mildly deprecated as "the black shoe navy." Luce proposed that coastal cities set up facilities to train sailors.

IN 1874, New York City acquired the old sloop-of-war St. Mary for use as a floating school. She was succeeded by the armed frigate Newport which was towed around the harbor with faculty and students to wherever the cheapest berth could be found.

In the 1930s, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, eyed Fort Schuyler at the Bronx entrance to the East River as a site for a permanent land school. The fort, which had never fired a shot and whose only scar was a bar sawed out by a prisoner escaping from the brig, was also eyed by New York's road-park-bridge visionary, Robert Moses.

"It would make a fine park," said Moses.

"A fine school," said the president. So the New York Maritime Academy moved in among the cannons and abides, now a part of the State University of New York and named SUNY Maritime College.

Meanwhile, Roosevelt saw the need for a federal counterpart, a complement to Annapolis, West Point and the Coast Guard Academy. The U.S. merchant marine had been embarrassed in 1934 by the burning of the Morro Castle off the New Jersey coast, which took 125 lives. Some officers abandoned ship before the passengers. Fire hoses didn't fit. Professionalism was needed. And there was war in the air. To Roosevelt, the merchant marine was the fourth arm of the military.

The Merchant Marine Act of 1936 thereupon created a national maritime academy. Two years later the first corps assembled. Coast Guard bases and even Fort Schuyler were used until a permanent home was found in Walter Chrysler's former summer home at Kings Point on Long Island, across the Sound from Fort Schuyler.

In 1948, Kings Point went to a four-year bachelor of science program. Today students take courses to be deck officers or engineers with additional training in management, logistics, some humanities — and swimming, a requirement. They are appointed by congressmen, as at other service academies. In exchange for a free education they must maintain a mariner's license for 10 years, serve in the Naval Reserve for eight and work in the maritime industry ashore or at sea.

OF THIS June's 213 graduates (17 of whom were women, eight of those engineers), 28 entered the military, about the recent average. Thirty percent of the class of '87 found slots at sea, 45 percent jobs ashore, 20 percent joined the military and 5 percent went on to graduate school. All students receive a year's training aboard a U.S. flag merchantman.

SUNY Maritime College, on the other hand, sends its 750 students out for two months every summer aboard the Empire State, the former passenger liner President Jackson. They do everything from navigating to running the engines to chipping paint.

"The advantage of our system over Kings Point is that our students run the ship under supervision. They are at the mercy of whatever captain they serve under as to how much they are taught," says Dr. William Porter, the academy's vice president.

SUNY grads must also be able to tie 21 knots, which most put off learning until the last minute, unaware that a horney-handed bos'n will time them with a stopwatch. They have to swim, too.

"Our kids have more flexibility than Kings Point," says Bob Hogg, SUNY director for community affairs. "Kings Pointers have their service commitment. Ours in dry times can go to places like Consolidated Edison if they are engineers. A marine architect can go into an architectural firm. We can also take older students, foreigners and those who can't pass the Kings Point physical."

With the prevalence of union requirements, it is a rare tar these days who becomes an officer up the hawsepipe. "And probably only a foolhardy one even tries," says Porter.

"FEW SEEK out the academies because of the romance of the sea," says Krinsky. Quickly loaded containers have done away with languorous or lascivious days in port. Students come for technical training or because friends or family had.

"They are middle-class, achievement-oriented kids who have been encouraged by parents and teachers," Krinsky says. "Their SATs aren't Harvard-Yale, but their achievement is comparable after graduation." Kings Point alumni are a who's who of leaders in the maritime world.

"Kings Point's focus is more narrow than ours," says Hogg, whose school offers so many courses that students, uniformed as are those at Kings Point and other academies, can't march to class. "They are training future officers. Ours get that training, plus."

Twenty-five years out, just over half of the Kings Point grads are still in the maritime field, a slightly better record than the other service academies. Sixty percent of the Fort Schuyler graduates go into the maritime business and the rest into allied occupations. One, Gary Jobson, was tactician on an America's Cup defender. Fort Schuyler has benefited handsomely by being official sponsor of several Cup yachts which it gets to sell when the races are over.

Besides the school in Maine, there are maritime academies in Massachusetts, Texas, California and Michigan, all state-run. "And all of them," says Porter, "are concerned with dwindling enrollments."

A forthright commencement speaker at any of the academies would warn that the sea, American-style, is not an encouraging field. There are billets for only 4,116 deck and engineering officers on U.S. flag vessels.

"IN 1980, 80 percent of the graduates of maritime academies found shipboard positions," says Eugene Rose, president of Seatrain Lines. "This number was reduced to about 25 percent last year."

To share the work available, unions rotate jobs so that some mariners are at sea only four months a year.

For years, neglect, vacillating policies, greed and crime have beset the U.S. merchant fleet. Dockside theft was so bad in New York one shoe company sent the lefts in one shipment and the rights in another to frustrate two-legged looters.

The unions, once a favorite whipping boy to blame for the high costs of U.S. shipping, "are ready for an agreement with anyone," says Braynard. "It's very hard to say they are to blame. When they were riding high, they rode high. But they were no more lousy when they had power than the shipowners when they did. It's a human nature situation."

Human nature, however, has not launched ships since Helen of Troy. Economics does. And military need. Here again it's an Alice in Wonderland world. The United States does have a respectable container fleet. But you can't fit a tank in a box. Container ships need dockside cranes. You don't find those on invasion beaches.

To qualify for the $250 million in operating subsidies Uncle Sam pays American shipping a year, the ships must be built in American yards. But, as the Denton commission noted, American yards are a highly endangered species, even for military vessels. A South Korean yard can build a ship for a third of what an American yard would charge. Several years ago Congress recognized this by "opening a window" to let U.S. companies build overseas. Then it closed the window. At the same time, U.S. carriers are required to replace their fleets periodically in order to qualify for subsidies.

In such logical whirlpools the American merchant marine spins rudderless, to some observers.

"I don't think we can be totally dependent on the rest of the world," says Krinsky. "Who would ever say, let foreign airlines on our domestic routes? Or foreign railroads? But shipping..?"

In step with Reaganomics, Kings Point has cut back enrollment 25 percent over the last five years. If the merchant marine were simply a commercial industry, this might be a resigned acknowledgement of the practicalities. If, on the other hand, the merchant marine is indeed an arm of the military, shouldn't this be as alarming as the scuttling of every fourth aircraft carrier? To the staffs of the maritime academies, it is.

Nation has turned its back on seagoing past

By SID MOODY
Associated Press

The decline of the U.S. merchant marine seems all the more notable in a nation with an illustrious seagoing past.

In its birth and infancy, America was basically an island. You had to take a boat to get there. Ships were the highways of the Colonies.

Seamen, still boys, "came up the hawsepipe" to learn before the mast. Nathaniel Bowditch, the great navigator, got his start selling pulleys and marlin spikes as a young ship chandler until he learned enough ropes to go to sea. Young lads from Nantucket and New Bedford shipped out on whalers across the globe, came home after years and signed on again as mates.

Whalers lit the lamps of a young nation. Slavers in their vile trade populated the cotton fields. Ship-borne immigrants populated the whole country. Fast American-designed clippers from Baltimore and New England out-sped the world around the Horn in the China trade.

John Fitch drove the first practicable steamboat on the Delaware River in 1789, 20 years before Robert Fulton. (Fitch also demonstrated he was ahead of his time by dying of a morphine overdose.)

In 1806 Frederic Tudor displayed Yankee maritime ingenuity by eschewing Harvard as "a place for loafers like all colleges" and exporting around the world what wintry New England had plenty of: ice.

The tide began turning in the 1840s when Britain subsidized the new Cunard Line on the North Atlantic run. In 1847 Congress followed suit by subsidizing building ships for the Bremen Line, jointly owned by Americans and the city-state of Bremen. Carrying the flag became national policy and pride. In America, shippers were thus over the years alternately lulled and starved by congressional and presidential whim with the purse strings.

The real deep-six was epitomized by the man Frank Braynard, curator of the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, N.Y., calls "that wretch, Horace Greeley," when he advised America's young men to go West. They did, ironically in prairie schooners. A nation turned its back on its ocean heritage.

"The seaman changed from the town hero to the local drifter," says Braynard, a steam-fired advocate of a return to maritime greatness. "The need for labor in the United States was so great any loose men were drawn to jobs in the heartland." Never again would an increasingly rich America be able to match the low wages, often heavily subsidized, of foreign merchantmen. The glory days were largely done.

In the century after the Civil War, the United States built only 10 liners for the lucrative North Atlantic passenger business.

Not that know-how didn't exist. In World War II, the United States built 6,000 ships, a third of the world's merchant fleet, to defeat Germany and Japan. Using assembly line techniques, a California yard built a 10,000-ton Liberty Ship in just over three days. But at the end of the war the United States, which by then had almost half of the world's tonnage, gave away much of its fleet to its stricken allies, a nice thing to do, particularly for some wily Greeks with names like Onassis and Niarchos.

The Yanks did not lose their ingenuity. Malcolm McLean started the container ship revolution with the bright idea of putting truck trailers on the unused deck space of a coastal tanker. Americans invented the ship that loads and unloads itself with its own lighters.

"Then the whole world zapped us with our own ideas," says Braynard, his exasperation at full speed ahead.

Angels survive late bobble

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

He went 3-for-3, knocked in two runs and had the game's only two extra base hits, yet Dan Grunhard barely escaped being the goat of the game as the Midland Angels survived a "three-run" dropped fly ball to beat El Paso, 5-3, in the Texas League Monday night.

The Angels not only squared the series at 2-2 going into tonight's 7 p.m. rubber game against El Paso, but the win kept Midland's pennant hopes alive, although the Angels are only 23-24 in the second half.

"I think anybody that can play .500 ball this second half has a chance to win it all," said pitching coach Tim Kelly. "That's the kind of race this is."

WITH two out and two on in the top of the seventh, the Angels led 4-0 and the only question seem to be whether Tim Burcham could chalk up Midland's second shutout of the year. Then the Angels stared disaster in the face.

Roy Anderson beat out a grounder to short and Fred Williams bounced a tweener single up the middle to bring up Rob DeWolf.

"I was playing in and had to go back," left fielder Grunhard recalled. "It was a well hit ball, but I should have had it." Racing toward the fence, Grunhard reached up and got his glove on the ball, but it bounced out for an error. A run scored and runners were on second and third.

When Burcham, 7-6, walked Todd Brown, lefthander Marty Reed came out of the bullpen, walked Mario Monico to force in another run and wild pitched another run home before settling down to close out the game in hitless style for his second save.

"MARTY tries to get a little too careful," Kelly said. "We've talked about it before and that's what happened when he first came in."

Although Burcham didn't allow an earned run, Kelly said, "No, it wasn't his best game. Tim has had a lot of good games on the road. He won 17 last year at Palm Springs and it takes time to adjust in a different league."

Eights dominate in 'Crazy' race

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

In a normal road race on a normal day, Brad Hawkins would have earned himself a trophy. After all, he won the race.

But the former Odessa Permian distance standout wasn't racing on a normal day Monday. Instead, it was Crazy Eights Day in the Green Tree section of Midland.

Hawkins won the first (and probably only) Crazy Eights Race with a time of 28:37 over the eight-kilometer course that made a figure-eight through the northwest Midland subdivision around Green Tree Country Club on 8-8-88.

Awards were given to runners that finished eighth, 18th, 28th, 38th, 48th, 58th, 68th, 78th, 88th, 98th and 108th — not first.

That was okay with Hawkins, who was more interested in a good workout on the eve of his freshman cross-country season at Odessa College than in receiving a mounted numeral "eight."

"I wanted to break 28 (minutes), but Mike (Garza) had a little inconvenience and dropped back, so I backed off," Hawkins said.

Garza ran stride-for-stride with Hawkins for the first two miles, before leaving the race with a stomach cramp "that hurt like it's never hurt before." The former Midland Lee standout did finally finish the race, however.

Garza's misfortune left 41-year-old Joe Tighe as Hawkins' main competition. And Hawkins said he was very aware of Tighe's presence — but not in the usual way.

"Joe was back there hollering at me all the time," Garza said. "He was saying 'C'mon Brad, go Brad.'

"I didn't know if he would catch me, and didn't know if he could, but it wasn't until the last mile that I thought I had it."

Tighe finished just seconds behind a runner young enough to be his son, however.

Hawkins placed third in the Tall Town 10-kilometer race earlier this summer, before placing fourth in the 3,000-meter race in the Texas Amateur Athletic Federation finals at College Station.

With 153 finishers, the run exceeded expectations for race director Cyndi Simpson.

"It was lots of fun, just a fun, crazy time," Simpson said.

Nine runners acted out the craziness by running linked together in the manner of a nonipede for the entire five miles.

RACE NOTES: Of the 100-odd preregistered runners, 76 called Midland home and 13 more were from Odessa. There were also a handful of runners from Andrews, Big Spring and San Angelo.

Doss Rogers, left, and Clifford Childers vie for eighth place at the halfway point of the Crazy Eights run Monday at Green Tree Country Club. Rogers 'won' the eighth-place prize in the eight-kilometer race that began at 8 p.m. Prizes were given to finishers placing in a number ending in 8.

Gretzky en route to Kings?

Gretzky

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The owner of the Los Angeles Kings expects to learn today whether there's a chance his team could pry hockey superstar Wayne Gretzky away from the Stanley Cup champion Edmonton Oilers.

In an interview with the Los Angeles Herald Examiner, Kings owner Bruce McNall said that reports a deal had already been made were "very premature and I'm amazed to hear them." McNall said, however, that the subject has been broached with Oilers owner Peter Pocklington, and that more talks were scheduled today.

"Pocklington is not very anxious to trade Wayne Gretzky, but I should know a lot more (today)," McNall said. "I've got to do something radical to sell hockey in L.A., and there's no name in hockey like Wayne Gretzky."

The newspaper, quoting what it termed was an unnamed source in the Oilers organization, reported that Gretzky would most likely be traded before the expiration of his contract, which has four years remaining. He would become a free agent without compensation should he play out his option in 1991-92.

McNall said he hasn't discussed a Gretzky trade in a week because Pocklington has been on a fishing trip. But McNall said the owners had discussed swapping the eight-time NHL most valuable player for a sizable amount of money, draft choices and Kings players Jimmy Carson, Luc Robitaille, Bernie Nicholls and Jay Wells.

Four U.S. records fall in Trials

Swimming

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. Olympic swimmers signaled the world that the Americans are coming with four U.S. records on the first day of the Olympic trials.

"I'm ecstatic about the meet — we had four American records," Olympic swim coach Richard Quick said Monday night.

"The thing that excited me was in the women's 100-meter freestyle and the men's 200 freestyle — the depth of the field, particularly the top four (finishers), because it puts us in terrifc relay position for the Olympic games," Quick said.

"It's a great first day for us, and I think we're strong in every position."

Angel Myers of Americus, Ga., became the first American woman to swim 100 meters in under 55 seconds as she was timed in 54.95, the fastest in the world since 1986.

Myers' time in the final was her second American record of the day. In the preliminaries, Myers was timed in 55.15, which was .15 faster than the previous mark by Dara Torres.

The world record, set in 1986, is 54.73 by East Germany's Kristin Otto, who was timed in 55.33 in last month's East German Olympic trials.

Olympic coach out; trio takes over

Gymnastics

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A bitter power play has led to the resignation of U.S. Olympic women's gymnastics coach Don Peters, who will be replaced by a trio of coaches who will share the spotlight at Seoul.

"There had been too much controversy, too much said, and I can't effectively coach this team," Peters said Monday afternoon at a news conference at his SCATS gymnastics center. "We have a great chance to win some medals over there and we can't blow this chance. For me to stay on would hurt that chance.

"It is my hope that by stepping down now that all the controversy will end and that unified effort will become a reality."

The controversy Peters was referring to was the dissatisfaction of Bela Karolyi, the personal coach of three of the U.S. Olympic team's six members and its two alternates. Karolyi, who guided Nadia Comaneci to Olympic perfection in 1980, had to watch his gold medalist, Mary Lou Retton, from the sidelines during the 1984 Olympics.

Campbell in sick bay

HOUSTON (AP) — Former Houston Oilers running back and Heisman Trophy winner Earl Campbell remained hospitalized today after being admitted for severe chest pains.

Doctors at St. Luke's Hospital at the Texas Medical Center have run a battery of tests, but detected no heart problems. Doctors say the former standout from the University of Texas may be suffering from exhaustion or anxiety attacks.

Night game at Wrigley washed out in 4th inning

CHICAGO (AP) — Although rain eventually washed away the first night game ever at Wrigley Field, Rick Sutcliffe of the Chicago Cubs says he'll never forget that first pitch.

"I didn't know where the pitch went, I never saw it," Sutcliffe said. "It seemed like 40,000 flash bulbs went off and the whole stadium lit up. I'll never forget it."

The fans were ready with their cameras to record history, the first pitch of the first night game at the last bastion of daytime-only baseball in the major leagues.

Sutcliffe won't forget the fourth pitch either. Philadelphia's Phil Bradley hit it out of the park for the first hit, first run, and homer in the first night game at the cozy ballpark on the near northside. But it won't count.

With the Cubs holding a 3-1 lead, the rains came and they never stopped. The umpires called the game after waiting two hours, 10 minutes.

"There was a sadness," Sutcliffe said. "Wrigley Field has always been know for sunshine and day baseball. It was like the good Lord said 'I'm going to show you.' The Good Lord had the final say."

It will not count as the first night game at Wrigley Field, but as far as Cubs manager Don Zimmer was concerned "I'll always look back at it as the first night game. It was beautiful with the fans waving all those white hats. If we had won, it would have been more beautiful. The lights were great. This was THE first night game in Wrigley Field."

Bradley knows better.

"It's always disappointing to get hits washed out, especially home runs" he said. "It would have been nice to say it happened even though it didn't really happen. I guess now someone else is going to be able to say he got the first official hit, even though I did."

Zimmer said he had heard reports all day that it might rain.

"I thought about it and I said 'Please, don't let it rain.'"

Zimmer was at the park early Monday and obliged wave after wave of reporters asking pregame questions.

"I'm not going to go through it again tomorrow," Zimmer said, alluding to the Cubs' meeting tonight with the New York Mets. The Cubs also announced there would be no pregame ceremonies.

With 556 members of the media present and a crowd of 39,008 packing the stands for the historic event, a circus-like atmosphere prevailed Monday night. Outside the park, revolving floodlights gave it a Hollywood touch. A high-rise on the outer drive had a sign blinking "Go Cubs."

At 6:09 p.m. CDT, Harry Grossman, 91, and a Cub fan for 83 years, flipped on the lights after telling the crowd to shout "Let there be lights."

At 6:52, former Cubs Ernie Banks and Billy Williams, both members of the Hall of Fame, threw out the ceremonial first pitches.

At 7:01, Sutcliffe threw the first pitch as the flash bulbs went off throughout the park.

Wrigley Field glows under the lights Monday night. The Chicago Cubs and Philadelphia Phillies played the first night game in the 74-year old history of Wrigley — 52 years after the first night game in major league history. The historical event was marred by rain in the fourth inning, however.

Twins use triple play to win

The Minnesota Twins' best offense has been a good defense.

The Twins have committed the fewest errors in baseball this season and turned a triple play in the fourth inning against Cleveland to lead them past the Indians 7-2 Monday night.

"They were threatening. It took momentum from their side and brought it into our dugout," said left fielder Dan Gladden, whose spectacular catch of a liner hit by Joe Carter started the triple play.

The Twins came back with three runs in the bottom of the fourth.

"Baseball is a game played with a lot of emotion and momentum," Gladden said. "They had a rally going and it pretty much killed it."

Alan Anderson, 10-7, gave up singles to Ron Washington and Willie Upshaw, bringing up Carter, the Indians' RBI leader with 75. Carter hit a drive to left with Washington and Upshaw running at the crack of the bat.

Gladden leaped against the wall to make the catch and threw back to second baseman Steve Lombardozzi. Lombardozzi tagged Washington as he raced back to second and with Upshaw frozen at second, Lombardozzi threw back to first baseman Gene Larkin to complete the triple play.

"You're looking at first and second and nobody out with Joe Carter at the plate and Ron Kittle on deck," Anderson said. "That's one of the biggest plays I've ever had made behind me."

Elsewhere in the American League, it was Toronto 5, Kansas City 1; Detroit 3, Texas 2; Seattle 4, California 3, and Oakland 9, Chicago 5.

Indians manager Doc Edwards was angry at his team's sloppy baserunning.

"The play is in front of the runners and it's their job to react," Edwards said. "It's the guy in front that watches the ball, and he sucked the other guy in behind him."

Blue Jays 5, Royals 1

Jeff Musselman allowed three hits in seven innings and Ernie Whitt and Tony Fernandez combined for five RBI as Toronto beat Kansas City's Bret Saberhagen for the third straight time this season.

Musselman, 4-1, struck out five, walked four and lowered his earned run average to 1.80. Tom Henke worked two hitless innings to earn his 21st save.

Saberhagen, 12-10, allowed 12 hits and all five runs. His ERA against Toronto this season is 7.10.

The Blue Jays scored two runs on five singles in the bottom of the second inning. Whitt hit his sixth homer in the fifth and Fernandez had a two-run single in the eighth.

Tigers 3, Rangers 2

Frank Tanana improved to 4-0 against Texas this season and Jim Walewander scored the go-ahead run when reliever Ed Vande Berg balked in the seventh inning.

Detroit has won five of six and leads New York and Boston by 3½ games in the American League .

Mariners 4, Angels 3

Jay Buhner singled to snap an eighth-inning tie and Mark Langston allowed four hits in eight innings to lead Seattle.

Alvin Davis and Steve Balboni drew walks against California's Kirk McCaskill, 8-6, before Buhner lined to center to score pinch-runner Darnell Coles.

Athletics 9, White Sox 5

Mark McGwire hit his 20th home run and Dave Henderson had four of Oakland's 14 hits.

Glenn Hubbard hit a homer, his second of the season and also his second in as many days.

Fans like light show at Wrigley

CHICAGO (AP) — Rain spoiled Wrigley Field's first night game, but fans who showed up for the historic occasion still thought they got a good show for their money.

In an atmosphere closer to a Broadway opening or a World Series game, the sellout crowd of 39,000 Monday night was treated to a raft of celebrities, the Goodyear blimp, a Chicago Symphony Orchestra concert, an unscheduled water show on the infield tarp, a surprised appearance by kissing bandit Morganna, and more.

"I'm sorry they didn't get to play but I'm not sorry I came," Mike Wagener, 28, said after umpires announced the Cubs-Phillies game, halted for more than two hours in the fourth inning, was a washout.

Fans can turn in their ticket stubs for seats to another game this season, the Cubs announced.

"We're crying now because of the rain, but we're still happy we came," said JoAnn Hoppe, 29.

"It was a good night. The best part was when the players came out and did belly slides on the wet tarp," said Mary Shula, 28, of the four Cubs who imitated several young fans in diving on the infield tarp during the rain delay.

The youths got ejected from the park while the players returned to the dugout undisturbed.

"There was some cool sliding," said Margaret Slusarczyk, 27.

"My favorite part was when Sandberg got excited by Morganna and hit a home run," said Wagener of the kissing bandit's antics in the first inning when she ran onto the field and headed Chicago batter Ryne Sandberg.

Morganna was stopped by security guards before she could reach Sandberg. The Cubs second baseman homered on the next pitch.

Slusarczyk had gathered autographs of talk show host Geraldo Rivera, Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson, and actors Dabney Coleman and Mark Harmon during the delay as they emerged from television interviews. However, she missed comedian Bill Murray, columnist George Will and Chicago Mayor Eugene Sawyer, who also attended the contest.

Shula and her friend Wagener said they really didn't care about the rainout.

"We got tickets for tomorrow night," they said.

The Cubs play the New York Mets in another sold out night game at Wrigley Field.

Pirates maintain Monday dominance

Associated Press

Monday, Monday, can't top that day.

For the Pittsburgh Pirates, Monday is the only day to play the New York Mets. The Pirates have won just four games against New York this season. All four, including a 1-0 victory to close out their four-game series in Pittsburgh, have been on Mondays.

"It was a big game for us, because it meant we're six out instead of eight out," Manager Jim Leyland said. "I don't think you can start draping a flag on our coffin just yet."

The Mets won the first three games of a series in New York last weekend before the Pirates took the closer 7-2. The NL East leaders did the same thing in Pittsburgh, failing to get the sweep when rookie Rick Reed and reliever Jim Gott blanked them on three hits. That effort was slightly better than Bobby Ojeda's for the Mets, who lead Pittsburgh by six games and Montreal by 6½.

"When you win the first three games, you want the sweep, but we just didn't do it," Keith Hernandez said. "But I'll still take three out of four. Bobby pitched a great game but we just didn't give him any support."

The victory ended Pittsburgh's five-game slide.

"We could win four in a row and the Mets could lose three out of four and suddenly, we're a couple of games back and everybody says we're back in the race," Leyland said. "I'm not saying it's going to happen, but it could.

"I'm frustrated and disappointed about what happened (the last two weekends), but at the same time they were great series and I feel good about the way we played. We were about four hits away from being 4-4 or 5-3 instead of 2-6. We were in all of the games — just look at the scores, 1-0, 2-1, 3-2, every game was close — but the tough part is we didn't win enough of them."

Elsewhere in the National League, it was Houston 10, Los Angeles 0; San Francisco 5, Atlanta 2; and St. Louis 4, Montreal 2.

The first night game at Wrigley Field was rained out with Chicago leading Philadelphia 3-1 in the fourth inning.

Reed went eight innings in his major-league debut, using offspeed pitches to keep the Mets off balance. He got the only run he needed in the fourth inning when Jose Lind got an infield single, stole second, moved to third when catcher Gary Carter's throw sailed into center field and scored on Bobby Bonilla's groundout.

"I've dreamed my whole life of just getting the chance to pitch to the Mets, because they're such a great team, and I shut them out for eight innings?" said Reed, who struck out four and walked one. "It can't be real."

It was. After all, it was a Monday.

National

Astros 10, Dodgers 0

Houston, which trailed first-place Los Angeles by eight games two weeks ago, has crept within 1½ games in the West. The Astros won five of seven games with the Dodgers in that span.

Mike Scott pitched an eight-hit shutout, struck out six and walked one for his fourth shutout this year and sixth complete game. Scott has won six of his last seven decisions.

"I've thrown better with worse results," Scott said. "It's important any time you beat the team ahead of you."

The Astros got four runs in the first inning and six in the eighth.

Los Angeles starter Shawn Hillegas, 3-4, faced only four batters, walking two and giving up two run-scoring hits.

Cardinals 4, Expos 2

Bob Forsch, in what he feels might be an audition, allowed eight hits in 6 2-3 innings and drove in the go-ahead run as the Cardinals snapped the Expos' five-game winning streak.

By winning, St. Louis averted a four-game series sweep and knocked the Expos into third place in the East behind New York and Pittsburgh. The Cardinals have won only three of 14 games against the Expos this season.

Forsch, 6-3, gave up six hits, struck out two and walked one in his longest stint of the season. Ken Dayley replaced Forsch, then Todd Worrell got his 21st save with 1 2-3 innings of relief.

"If I pitch well enough, somebody might want me," said Forsch, 38. "I like it here, it's just reality, one of those things."

Montreal's Pascual Perez, 8-6, who entered the game with the best earned run average in the major leagues at 2.19, allowed seven hits, struck out three and walked none in six innings.

Giants 5, Braves 2

At Atlanta, the Giants got a two-run double in a five-run third inning from Kevin Mitchell, who now has 34 RBI in his last 34 games. Four pitchers combined on a four-hitter.

The Giants used three hits and five walks for their five runs in the third inning. All the runs and hits and four of the walks came off Atlanta starter John Smoltz, 1-3.

Brett Butler led off with the first of his two walks in the inning. He took second on Robby Thompson's fly to deep center and Will Clark walked. Both runners scored on the double by Mitchell.

At 7:03, Bradley took all the anticipation and anxiety from a number of firsts when he hit Sutcliffe's fourth pitch into the left field bleachers to take care of the first hit, first run, first home run and first run batted in. It would have been his sixth homer, but it won't count.

Mitch Webster led off the bottom of the first with a single and with Ryne Sandberg coming to bat, Morganna Roberts, "The Kissing Bandit," made her appearance on the field.

The object of her affection was Sandberg, but she never reached him as the ushers caught up to her and escorted her off the field. The crowd jeered. Sandberg responded with a home run into the left field bleachers.

"Actually, I think when she was caught it helped my at-bat," Sandberg said. "It took the pressure off me."

Sandberg walked to lead off the Chicago third, stole second, went to third on a sacrifice by Mark Grace and scored on a single by Rafael Palmeiro. It would have extended his hitting streak to 18 games. But it didn't count.

At 7:55, the lights took full effect as darkness shrouded the ballpark.

At 8:14, lightning and thunder struck.

At 8:15, the rains came. A minute later the ground crew had the field covered.

At 8:23, the first fan broke loose on the field and did a bellyflop with an usher on top of him. Others followed later, including two women. An usher was injured and had to be taken off the field on a stretcher.

At 9:29, fours Cubs — Jody Davis, Al Nipper, Greg Maddux and Les Lancaster — ran on the field and did their version of bellyflops on the tarp. They were unmolested and left after a few turns. The crowd cheered.

"I thought it stunk," Zimmer said. "I've got one guy with a stiff foot (Davis), one guy with a bad elbow (Nipper), one guy with appendicitis (Lancaster) and the best pitcher (Maddux) in the league."

Does he plan any action against them?

"I'll take care of it," Zimmer said. "It was a fun night."

But the tradition of day baseball only in Wrigley Field is gone.

"It's always tough to see a long-standing tradition go by the wayside," said Philadelphia Manager Lee Elia, who played for and managed the Cubs in the past.

"I wish we could have finished the game," he said. "Things in this ballpark are never over. The lights seem to be good. The field was well lit but the rain came. It was a great night. The Chicago fans were energetic as ever."

The Cubs will lose a hefty gate. Fans can get cash refunds or exchange their rain checks for tickets available for future dates. The game against the Mets tonight already is a sellout so fans with tickets Monday night will not be able to exchange them.

Those who paid outrageous prices to scalpers, however, will be able to redeem the tickets at face value only.

"The fastest time we had at the Olympic trials in '84 was 56-low, and I don't think — I know they weren't there — but I don't think" the East Germans "really were worried about us," Torres said. "But now, with the times we did, they might be a little worried."

Torres, who finished third in the 100 in 55.74 and will swim on the 400 freestyle relay, said, "Many people didn't think we could beat them, but now we'll be able to give them a good fight."

Joining Myers on the Olympic team in the 100 freestyle will be Mitzi Kremer of Titusville, Fla., who was second in the finals in 55.40.

Myers, Kremer and Torres, of Beverly Hills, Calif., will be joined on the relay team by Mary Wayte of Mercer Island, Wash., fourth in 55.76.

That gives the United States a relay team with four members faster than the gold-medal time in the 1984 Olympics.

In other Olympic qualifying Monday night, Janet Evans of Placentia, Calif., also set an American record in qualifying for the 400 individual medley in 4 minutes 38.58 seconds.

"Not great, although in these kinds of deals things can change quickly."

Grunhard gave Reed a cushion to work on when he homered to right with two out in the eighth off lefthander Ed Puig.

"I thought they were going to lift me for a pinch hitter," confessed the lefthanded hitting Grunhard. However, in the pregame strategy, it had been pointed out that Puig sometimes has more trouble with lefties than righthanded hitters.

Grunhard singled home Midland's first run in the second and then walked to start the three-run rally in the fifth as C.L. Penigar, Ruben Amaro and Jim McCollom supplied run scoring singles.

In the sixth, Grunhard doubled with two out.

Burcham fanned eight and walked just one while loser Bill Mooneyham fanned six, but got in trouble when he walked Grunhard and Tom Alfredson to open the fifth.

HALO HOOPSA— Vinicio Cedeno, 1-2, will get his first start after 36 relief appearances in tonight's game due to an injury to Todd Eggertsen. Alan Sadler, 2-2, will pitch for El Paso....El Paso catcher Roy Anderson gunned down three Midland base runners attempting to steal.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 10, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Start new projects and plan for the future. Changes at work will accelerate your career. Treat your close relationships more seriously. Realize that good health depends largely on how well you take care of yourself. A young person could pave the way for a new success. You learn a valuable lesson about cooperation.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Rosanna Arquette, President Herbert Hoover, actor Jimmy Dean, actress Rhonda Fleming, singer Eddie Fisher, comic actor Jack Haley Sr., actress Martha Hyer, basketball's Red Holtzman, actress Norma Shearer, country comedian Junior Samples.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A relationship's future depends on your willingness to make some concessions. Keep your business and financial plans rooted in reality. Beware of shortcuts. Your leadership qualities shine through all day.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The innovative ideas that are your trademark could start putting extra cash in your pocket. Go the limit with a project you believe in. Mate's love is a many-splendored thing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do not give excuses. You will have to perform in order to keep a job. You have the ability but need to muster up the desire. Get help if you need it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Others may ask you for help at work. Be cooperative, no matter who asks. Criticizing higher-ups will not go over well even if you have the right answers.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Work you can do alone will produce the best results today. Travel should prove exhilarating. You will attract members of the opposite sex in droves this evening. Be very selective in romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Unexpected good news arrives in the morning, making this a red-letter day. Domestic affairs also proceed in a constructive way, creating new understanding. Romance looks splendid.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You find yourself turning over a new leaf. Curb an urge to socialize extravagantly. Heed mate's instincts about new people and situations. A telephone call is enlightening. You know what to do.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Differences of opinion concerning employment, academics or a health matter could fuel a dispute. Seek experts' advice or compromise. A platonic relationship deepens. You feel more at ease.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Avoid letting your feelings rule your head. Study the facts and figures very carefully before making a report. Attention to detail will save you both embarrassment and money.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Early morning changes in your work may be annoying at first. Do not be swayed by an enthusiastic know-it-all. Good financial news arrives from overseas. Host a small celebration this evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A good day to ask for a special favor or raise. Learn from past mistakes. Put specialized knowledge to good use. Contacts at a distance prove lucky now.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You know how to talk money, as a salesperson or bargain-hunter! A lasting work relationship requires a subtle approach. Use your powers of suggestion to plant the seeds for a raise.

Bridge is a logical game. If you can draw the right conclusion from a particular play, it will usually point you in the winning direction.

South judged his hand well. His partner's bidding virtually blueprinted the fact that North held a singleton heart. Therefore, South's honor cards in his partner's suits greatly increased the value of his hand, so he elected to gamble out a small slam in spades.

West also realized that dummy was going to be short in hearts, so he led a trump to cut down the enemy ruffing power. The table's queen won the first trick, and declarer continued by running the ten. West grabbed the king and shot back another trump, and declarer found he had only 11 tricks. He tried the diamond finesse—to no avail.

Had declarer assumed that West was unlikely to have led a singleton trump, he could have guaranteed the contract as soon as East followed to the second trick. The location of the king was unimportant. Declarer should have risen with the ace and, leaving the king outstanding, started on the clubs. As long as that suit is no worse than 4–2, the contract is safe. On the third club declarer discards a diamond, and he is in control. West can score his master trump whenever he pleases, but thanks to a heart ruff in dummy declarer will score 10 tricks in the black suits and the two red aces.

Lights force change in lyrics

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Turning the lights on for the first night game at Chicago's Wrigley Field is forcing country music's Statlers quartet to change the lyrics of their 7-year-old song "Don't Wait On Me."

The lyrics of the 1981 song contain the phrase, "When the lights go on at Wrigley Field, I'll be coming home to you."

Although the recording, from the album "Years Ago," can't be changed, the group will substitute the line with, "When they put a dome on Wrigley Field, I'll be coming home to you" in performances.

"That ought to keep us ahead of them for a few years," The Statlers' Don Reid said from his home in Staunton, Va.

"It never crossed our minds that one day they would put lights in Wrigley Field," said Reid, a baseball buff who wrote the song with his brother and fellow group member, Harold Reid.

VENICE, Italy (AP) — Indiana Jones has switched from runaway trains to gondolas.

Director Steven Spielberg was in Venice on Monday with his cast to shoot parts of the third film about the adventurer, tentatively titled "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade."

The movie will have scenes set in Venice of the 1930s.

"There are some films you would be irresponsible not to continue," said Spielberg. "Indiana Jones is one of these. It is not a testimony of the times, but it has all the characteristics of an exotic entertainment that aims to excite, to scare and to strike the spectator with a sense of wonder."

Also on the set were Sean Connery, who plays Jones' father, and Irish actress Alison Doody, Jones' latest love interest.

The film, also being shot on location in Spain, Jordan and Colorado, is expected to be in theaters in 1989.

• • •

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "L.A. Law" star Jill Eikenberry was treated for breast cancer during early filming of the hit series and plans to help produce a documentary about breast cancer survivors.

The documentary, "Destined to Survive: 100 Roads to Recovery," is to be shown Oct. 12, she said Monday at a news conference.

It will profile 100 survivors of breast cancer, some famous, such as first lady Nancy Reagan, and others not. The aim is to encourage women to carefully examine themselves for signs of the disease.

On tour

American rock star Michael Jackson belts out a song during a concert in Madrid. Jackson is currently on a world tour, singing to about 60,000 people per appearance.

"I was one of the lucky ones. I didn't have to lose a breast," said Eikenberry, describing her cancer discovered two years ago. "I had to undergo radiation therapy during the first six episodes of 'L.A. Law.' It was not an easy time."

Eikenberry plays attorney Ann Kelsey. She and co-star Michael Tucker are married in real life as well as on the series.

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — Heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson skipped a news conference but pop star Madonna managed to keep flashbulbs popping.

Officials of "The Race Against Time," a global charity run that Madonna and Tyson are supporting, said the boxer didn't show up Monday because his wife, Robin Givens, is ill.

Madonna, who is leaving the cast of Broadway's "Speed-the-Plow," read a brief statement encouraging people to participate in the Sept. 11 run, which will raise money for sick, hungry and homeless children.

"All you need to help is a pair of running shoes," she said.

Sponsors of "The Race Against Time" estimate that 50 million people from more than 100 countries will participate in the event, which will feature simultaneous 5-kilometer runs throughout the world.

A similar event in 1986 raised $36 million for famine relief in Africa.

DUBUQUE, Iowa (AP) — Kevin Costner and James Earl Jones say they're being treated like down-home folks during the filming of "Shoeless Joe," a story about a baseball diamond in a corn field.

"You live in Los Angeles long enough and you forget how people can behave," said Jones, who won a Tony Award winner for Best Actor in "The Great White Hope" and plays a reclusive author, Terence Mann, in "Shoeless Joe."

Costner, star of the movie "Bull Durham," said Monday, "It's very difficult to distinguish borders, but Iowa is the best America has to offer."

Costner plays Iowa farmer Ray Kinsella in "Shoeless Joe." In the movie he hears a voice telling him his long dead hero, Shoeless Joe Jackson, star of the 1919 Chicago White Sox, will come back to life if a baseball field is built in his cornfield.

Writer-director Phil Alden Robinson said shooting should be completed in about 1½ weeks and he hopes the movie will premiere in Dubuque next spring. The movie also stars Burt Lancaster, Amy Madigan and Ray Liotta.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The housekeeper for Liberace sobbed as she recounted how a doctor told her the entertainer was dying of complications from AIDS, then repeated the news in front of him.

Dorothy McMahon said she had not known the source of the pianist's months-long illness until Liberace's physician, Ronald Daniels, told her.

"He said by law he had to tell me what Liberace had, and he had to tell me in front of Liberace," she testified in state court Monday.

Ms. McMahon, Liberace's housekeeper for 16 years; Liberace's sister, Angie Liberace; and three others have filed suit in state court seeking to have attorney Joel Strote removed as executor of the will and head of the Liberace Foundation for the Performing Arts, which provides scholarships to nearly 30 colleges and universities.

Ms. McMahon wept loudly as she told of the doctor checking a sore on her hand and ordering her to wear gloves when treating the entertainer. District Judge Michael Wendell ordered a break while she regained her composure and the subject was dropped when testimony continued.

Ms. McMahon said she was informed of the cause of his fatal illness Jan. 22, 1987, the day Liberace signed a new will making Strote the executor of his estate.

Hispanic chamber gets permanent home

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce member Ciro Sanchez has donated an office building to the chamber for use as their permanent home, MHCC officials announced.

"I donated the building because Midland, and especially the east side, have been very good to me," says Sanchez. "I made my living here for 29 years, and my wife Bertha and I thought this was a good way to repay the community."

Located at 1100 Parker, the 1200 sq. ft., 10-room building will be used as permanent office space for the chamber, according to MHCC executive director Elvia Hernandez. It will be named the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce Ciro Sanchez building.

Hernandez added that plans also are to lease to several small businesses, forming a small business incubator. "This will be a way for us to be self-sufficient and to help small businesses at the same time. The businesses will get office space, and we'll get help with utilities and taxes." Hernandez said plans are to move into the building by the chamber's fourth anniversary in October.

Sanchez, a Realtor who recently retired after 29 years in the business, praised the MHCC for the impact it has had on Midland's east side. "The Hispanic chamber has had an impact on the east side, even the fact that the city has been enforcing the codes better. You don't see as much trash or abandoned cars and so on as you did," he stated.

He also complimented the City Council for their efforts, saying that by helping the east side, the entire city benefited.

Fed raises discount rate to 6.5 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board announced today it is boosting its key bank lending rate from 6 percent to 6.5 percent, effective immediately.

It was the first change in the central bank's discount rate since Sept. 7 and put the rate at its highest in more than two years.

The boost is expected to send higher a variety of other interest rates, including those on credit cards and mortgages.

The increase put the discount rate, which is the fee the Fed charges to make loans to U.S. financial institutions, at its highest level since March 7, 1986, when it was 7 percent.

The Fed, in a statement, said its decision "reflects the intent of the Federal Reserve to reduce inflationary pressures" and "was taken in light of the growing spread of market interest rates over the discount rate."

Analysts had expected the Fed to tighten its reins on the money supply this week, but few were expecting an increase in the discount rate, which is the most dramatic move the Fed can take.

Most were expecting the Fed to push up the federal funds rate, the interest banks charge each other for overnight loans, by an eighth or a quarter of a percentage point from its current 7.75 percent.

Today's discount rate increase marked the second under the reign of Alan Greenspan, who took over as Fed chairman a year ago. In September, the central bank boosted the rate from 5.5 percent to 6 percent, the first increase in three years.

After the crash, the Fed pumped liquidity into the banking system. It loosened money supplies again in mid-winter, when rising business inventories raised concern that the economy was softening.

Since then, however, government statistics have portrayed a strong economy and concern has shifted from recession to inflation.

Dollar takes breather from runup

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was holding steady in calm European trading late this morning, and traders said they generally expect the market to take a one-day breather before pushing the U.S. currency higher.

Gold prices fell.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.7050, compared with $1.7022 Monday.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Monday:

— 1.8968 West German marks, down from 1.9000

— 1.5850 Swiss francs, down from 1.5857

— 6.3975 French francs, up from 6.3950

— 2.1403 Dutch guilders, down from 2.1435

— 1,399.40 Italian lire, down from 1,399.50

— 1.2105 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2097

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 0.39 yen to a closing 133.58 yen. Later, in London it was quoted higher at 133.70 yen.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $430.80 a troy ounce, down from late Monday's $432.25. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $428.25.

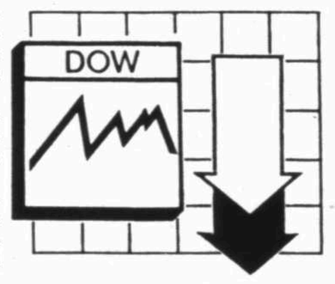

In Zurich, the bid price was $428.20, down from $432.00 late Monday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $3.39 to close at a bid $430.61.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $6.69 a troy ounce, down from Monday's $6.78.

Stocks drop 11 points in third loss

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market posted its third straight loss Monday, still mired in uncertainty about the outlook for inflation and interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 14.94 points last Thursday and Friday, fell another 11.73 to 2,107.40.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks. with 585 up, 781 down and 578 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 148.80 million shares, up from 113.40 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 168.99 million shares.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $8.95 billion, or 0.33 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks slumped .57 to 152.52.

Standard & Poor's industrial index fell 1.28 to 310.93, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 1.17 at 269.98.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market slipped .05 to 387.66. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 304.23, down .72.

Improving Midland economy indicated

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

Midland's economic indicators sustained steady improvements during June with the exception of residential real estate activity.

Home sales continued to lose ground compared to last year's pace during June, according to Midland Board of Realtor figures.

Last month, Midland real estate agents sold 139 homes at an average price of $78,008 for a total of $10.8 million. That compares to June 1987, when more than $14.2 million was tallied on 178 sales averaging $80,152.

Year-to-date figures show that the number of sales is down 15 percent at 723 through mid-year, while sales value is off slightly more, down 16.6 percent.

Residential and commercial construction activity at the end of June was ahead of 1987's slow pace, with total permit values more than 13 percent higher than year-earlier levels.

This year's 117 new home permits is three less than last year, but the value of that construction is nearly 10 percent higher.

An average of one commercial construction permit per month has been issued by the city through June, with a total value of $1.15 million, about two-thirds ahead of 1987.

Western plan to reorganize draws fire

From Staff Reports

The Western Co. of North America submitted an extensive plan of reorganization Monday that quickly drew criticism from the equity committee appointed by the court to represent stockholders in bankruptcy proceedings, according to news reports.

The reorganization plan pledges cash, real estate and new securities to secure previously unsecured debt, but Western shareholders said the plan unfairly dilutes the common shares of stockholders in favor of management and the previously unsecured banks. This unsecured debt accounts for about 75 percent of Western's total debt and much of it was lent by banks finance Western's expansion in the 1980s.

The plan must now be approved by stockholders, creditors and the U.S. Bankruptcy Court of the Northern District of Texas in Fort Worth.

Detroit newspapers celebrate JOA

DETROIT (AP) — The owners of The Detroit News and Detroit Free Press praised the attorney general's decision to allow a partial merger of the newspapers, while employees toasted their reprieve from "death row."

Attorney General Edwin Meese III on Monday granted the newspapers' application to combine their business, production and circulation departments. He said without a partial merger, the Free Press, the nation's 10th-largest newspaper in terms of circulation, could not stem the losses that had brought it to the brink of failure.

"Keen competition aimed at market domination and future profitability — competition waged energetically but both responsibly and properly — has moved both newspapers into intractable loss positions from which only one, the News, now appears to have any reasonable prospect of emerging," said Meese, who is scheduled to leave office in mid-August.

Directors of Knight-Ridder Inc., owner of the Free Press, had threatened to close the newspaper unless

Texas Air posts $255.9 million quarterly loss

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Air Corp., the parent company of Continental Airlines and Eastern Airlines, posted a second quarter loss of $255.9 million, which officials blamed on government investigations of alleged safety problems in its subsidiaries.

The loss for the three months ending June 30 amounts to $6.67 per share, compared with a $27 million loss, or 83 cents per share, posted by Texas Air during the same period a year ago.

Texas Air revenues in the second quarter were $2.13 billion, down slightly from $2.16 billion a year ago.

The figures brought Texas Air's losses for the first six months of 1988 to $380.1 million, or $10.05 per share, compared with $127.7 million, or $3.86 cents per share, for the first half of 1987.

Houston-based Texas Air, the nation's largest airline holding company, said Continental Airlines posted a $19.9 million loss before a $131 million adjustment associated with a re-estimation of its air traffic liability. The adjustment, primarily related to re-accommodation and ticketing activity during 1987, was announced earlier and had no impact on the airline's cash position, Texas Air said.

Including the adjustment, Houston-based Continental lost $150.9 million on revenues of $1.1 billion. In the same period a year ago, Continental lost $71.1 million on revenues of $1 billion.

At Eastern Airlines, losses totaled $89.9 million before a $14.2 million charge for dividends to preferred stockholders. In the same quarter in 1987, Eastern made $27.1 million before a $14.6 million charge for preferred dividends.

Eastern's revenues in the most recent quarter were $1 billion, down from $1.2 billion in the second quarter of 1987.

"Second-quarter results for both Continental and Eastern reflect several large non-recurring and out-of-period items," Texas Air said in a statement released Monday. "Additionally, both subsidiaries suffered significant losses as a result of the widely publicized DOT-FAA investigations which began in mid-April and continued for most of the second quarter reporting period."

The unprecedented investigation by the Department of Transportation and the Federal Aviation Administration determined both airlines were being run safely.

CBS spends $59 million for independent station

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS Inc., flush with cash from sale of non-broadcasting assets, says it plans to look for more prospects after agreeing to buy an independent television station in Miami for $59 million.

CBS said Monday its agreement to acquire WCIX-TV from TVX Broadcast Group Inc. of Norfolk, Va., also calls for it to assume some program obligations, which a network spokesman said were valued at about $13 million.

In announcing the deal, CBS President Laurence A. Tisch said, "We are continuing to evaluate other potential properties with an eye toward further acquisitions."

Analysts said the deal seemed good for CBS and Tisch, who had been faulted for failing to buy more stations with the $3 billion amassed by selling assets such as its records and magazine businesses.

On Wall Street, CBS stock slipped 12½ cents a share Monday to $162.87½ on the New York Stock Exchange.

The purchase, which is subject to federal regulatory approval, would allow CBS to maintain its presence in the fast-growing Miami television market at only a fraction of the price a network affiliate likely would have commanded. Miami is the nation's 16th largest TV market.

CBS was outbid last year in an effort to buy its Miami affiliate, WTVJ, by NBC, which offered $270 million. WTVJ still carries CBS programs under an affiliation agreement that ends in January, when it is expected to become an NBC affiliate.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

NCNB Texas National shortens name

HOUSTON (AP) — NCNB Texas National Bank, the successor to the failed First RepublicBank, will shorten its name to NCNB Texas in ads and promotions to avoid confusion with institutions that have names similar to the longer title, officials say.

NCNB Texas National Bank will remain the bank's legal identity, said company spokesman Joe Bowles.

Independent banks using Texas National Bank in their names had objected to the use of NCNB Texas National Bank, saying it was confusing to their customers.

Two banks had filed complaints, prompting judges in Victoria and El Paso to issue temporary restraining orders blocking NCNB from using the name in those communities.

Hunt lawyer denies role in silver scheme

NEW YORK (AP) — A defense lawyer for Nelson Bunker Hunt has denied the Texas oil tycoon and his two brothers were part of a conspiracy to corner the world silver market, and pointed to their billion-dollar loss as proof of their innocence.

Hunt and his two younger brothers are being sued for $150 million by Minpeco SA, a South American silver concern that claims the Hunts manipulated the world silver market between 1979 and 1980.

Paul J. Curran noted in closing arguments to a federal jury Monday the Hunts lost more than $1 billion when the silver market collapsed in 1980.

Drought relief for seasonal workers funded

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor Secretary Ann McLaughlin announced a $14.8 million plan to meet the emergency survival needs of thousands of migrant and seasonal farm workers left without money or jobs because of the drought.

Mrs. McLaughlin said Monday she has authorized migrant worker programs operating under Labor Department grants to use up to 15 percent of their current funding for services such as health care, transportation and temporary shelter. The agency said that could mean up to $9.5 million may be spent.

She said another $5 million has been set aside from a reserve account to be used for migrant workers hurt by the drought.

CBS buys independent Miami TV station

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS Inc., which owns fewer television stations than either of its two main broadcast competitors, said it has agreed to buy an independent television station in Miami for $59 million.

CBS said Monday the agreement to acquire WCIX-TV from TVX Broadcasting Group Inc. also calls for it to assume certain program obligations, which a CBS spokesman said were valued at about $13 million.

The deal would give CBS five stations, while the parents of the NBC network own seven and the ABC network own eight.

Texas Air losses widen; TWA profits up

Associated Press

The nation's biggest airline company, Texas Air Corp., has reported its second-quarter net loss widened sharply, while Trans World Airlines Inc. said its profit after taxes nearly doubled.

Texas Air said Monday its net loss widened to $255.9 million from a loss of $27 million in the second quarter of 1987. The company blamed a significant part of the loss on government investigations of alleged safety problems at its two main subsidiaries, Continental Airlines and Eastern Airlines.

TWA said its profit almost doubled from a year earlier, largely due to a cash payment it received from a lawsuit against the estate of its former owner, the late Howard Hughes.

Tenneco reports 232 barrel find

From Staff Reports

TENNECO OIL CO. has completed an undesignated — but probable Cherry Canyon — discovery in Ward County, surrounded by production in the Beall field.

On potential test, the No. 2 G.T. Hall "31" flowed 232 barrels of 42 gravity crude, 774 Mcfd and 302 barrels of water on a 16/64 inch choke from perforations 6,002 to 6,268 ft. Flowing tubing pressure was 900 psi, and the producing interval was treated with 61,450 gallons of gel and 185,570 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Permitted as an 11,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 10,981 ft. and plugged back to 7,035 ft. with 8-5/8 inch casing set at 7,185 ft.

The well topped the Delaware at 4,578 ft. and Cherry Canyon at 5,692 ft. on ground elevation of 2,570 ft. Pay was topped at 6,002 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from north and 579 ft. from southeast lines of L.F. Freeman survey 31, 4.5 miles south of Pyote.

Martin wildcat pumps three barrels crude

A plugback project in Martin County has yielded a Grayburg discovery for SABINE CORP., Midland.

Sabine reentered the No. 1 Brown-Reeder, a Spraberry (Trend Area) producer, completing it to pump three barrels of 39 gravity crude adn 120 barrels of water from perforations 3,970 to 4,045 ft. The interval was acidized with 6,000 gallons of acid and fractured with 4,000 gallons of gel.

Originally drilled to 9,118 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 4,085 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,840.2 ft., include the Grayburg at 3,970, Upper Spraberry at 7,470, Lower Spraberry at 8,010, and Dean at 8,850 ft. Pay was topped at 3,970 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and west lines of Section 21, Block 36, T-2-N, T&P survey, three miles northeast of Lenorah.

Salt Creek field yields 527 barrel producer

MOBIL PRODUCING TX & NM, INC., Midland, has added a very strong producer to the Salt Creek field of Kent County.

Mobil finaled the No. 571-C Salt Creek Field Unit to pump 527 barrels of 39.5 gravity crude and 921 barrels of water from perforations 6,234 to 6,390 ft. Gas-oil ratio is 570:1.

The well was drilled to 6,700 ft., where 7 inch casing was set.

PAPERS

Meese approved the joint operating agreement. Gannett Co. Inc.'s News, the nation's eighth-largest newspaper, had a daily circulation lead of about 40,000 in March.

"This decision reaffirms the will of the Congress that two independent editorial voices should be preserved wherever possible in the cities of America," said Alvah H. Chapman Jr., Knight-Ridder chairman.

Gannett Chairman Allen Neuharth and Gannett President John J. Curley said they, too, were gratified.

"We said all along that the JOA was the only way to preserve two independent news and editorial voices," they said in a statement from Gannett headquarters in Arlington, Va.

However, The Newspaper Guild Local 22, the last of the newspapers' unions to drop its opposition to the JOA, was critical of Meese's decision.

"This is a travesty of the Newspaper Preservation Act," said Lou Mleczko, a reporter at the News and president of the union.

"I feel it would have been an extraordinary tragedy if this paper died," said David Lawrence Jr., publisher of the 157-year-old Free Press.

ECONOMY

The city's savings and loan deposits continued to show strength during the month, picking up about $27 million from the previous month. Total city-wide bank deposits slipped by a like amount to stand at $1.408 billion, down about 8 percent from 1987.

Thrift deposits are up about 8 percent compared to a year ago.

Boardings at Midland International Airport reflected the beginning of the summer vacation travel season, jumping more than 4,500 during June, and are up nearly 1.5 percent for the year.

Residential services continue ahead of last year's totals, with both water and gas connections up more than 1 percent. However, both totals are down slightly from May figures. In excess of 100 more telephone connections were established during the month, to stand at 60,456, up about 0.7 percent from 1987.

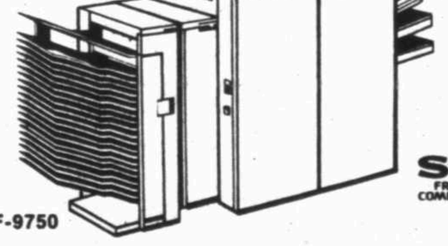

Total employment jumped by 1,500 during the month, to stand at 48,200, nearly 6 percent more than last June. The jobless rate in the city, 6.2 percent, is more than 40 percent lower than in June 1987, while the available labor force has grown by 400 workers.

Receipts at city post offices are up even more than the 13 percent postage increase which went into effect earlier in the year. Postal receipts of nearly $6 million in the first half of 1988 are more than 14.4 percent more than in 1987.

Alison Wardley, 20, who will serve as "Nanny" to the new Princess of York, awaits the royal baby's arrival home with mongrels Ruff and Bobbie.

Will eights bring luck for baby?

By BILL CORMIER

England "celebreighted" the birth of a royal baby at 8:18 p.m. on the eighth day of the eighth month of 1988, tourists "migreighted" to the Kentucky town of Eighty Eight, and even mathematicians "appreciеighted" the chubby numeral.

Buckingham Palace announced Monday that the Duchess of York, wife of Prince Andrew, gave birth to a 6 lb. 12 oz. daughter, their first child, who is fifth in line to the British throne. Mother and child are well, the palace said.

A Palace statement said Andrew, the Duke of York and second son of Queen Elizabeth II, was with his wife, the former Sarah Ferguson, when she was "safely delivered of a daughter at 8:18 p.m. (19:18 GMT) today."

In Hackensack, N.J., Kelli-Lee O'Brien came into the world at 8:08 a.m. EDT Monday weighing 8 pounds, 8½ ounces. Her mother's doctor, making his eighth delivery in his 2-week-old private practice, has eight children.

"Everybody thought they were joking with all the eights coming up," said Jean Werner, head nurse in the delivery unit at Hackensack Medical Center.

The magic of 8-8-88 wasn't lost on the Chinese, whose word for eight, "baat," rhymes with "faat," the Cantonese word for prosperity. They threw lavish parties.

Merchants in Hong Kong used the date to promote everything from Kentucky Fried Chicken to real estate, while Hong Kong gamblers tested their luck in a special lottery with a sweetened jackpot.

Michigan gamblers bought more than 10,520 state Lottery tickets with the 8888 combination, and officials said Connecticut's state lottery sold out its 8888 tickets when sales hit a predetermined limit: $8 million.

Tascosa National Bank in Amarillo, Texas, offered 88-day personal certificates of deposit at 8⅛ percent interest (with a minimum deposit of $8,888).

Numerologists said Monday, 8-8-88, was especially lucky for marriage, and thousands of Israeli couples had registered to marry on the date. Reception halls around the country were booked solid, the daily Jerusalem Post reported.

In Eighty Eight, Ky., about 500 well-wishers cheered Tom Accardo and Deborah Muhlbeier, who got married at 8:08 p.m. CDT. The bride carried eight white roses. Their 8 foot, 8 inch-long wedding cake was topped with an "88."

"Our marriage is magical. It's just the icing on the cake and I'm telling you it's thick icing," said Mrs. Accardo, 34. "The biggest part of it is the people of Eighty Eight. The town has been incredible."

The couple had not set a date yet when they learned of the festivities planned in the small farm community of 150 residents, from a television news report in their distant state of Wyoming.

"Deb just looked at me and said, 'Wouldn't that be fun to go in there and get married on 8-8-88 in Eighty Eight, Kentucky?'" recalled Accardo, 29, a salesman.

In attendance at Eighty Eight was Pearl Russie, who drove up to the Eighty Eight Market in her Oldsmobile Delta 88. Her license plate: "ANY 88." As Ms. Russie, 45, explained: "I'm an 88 freak."

Eighty Eight's post office handled 25,000 pieces of mail for people wanting the EIGHTY-EIGHT 8-8-88 cancellation, said Fred Van Fleet, the U.S. Postal Service's area manager.

The day also began the centennial anniversary of the American Mathematical Society based in Providence, R.I.

"Eight is, from a standpoint of pure arithmetic, the second cube, the sixth Fibonacci number, and the sum of the first three digits of pi," wrote former Scientific American magazine columnist Martin Gardern in a news release.

Prince Andrew greets wife, baby with roses

WORLD

LONDON (AP) — Prince Andrew arrived at a London hospital today with a bouquet of red roses to visit his wife, Sarah, and their newborn daughter as delighted Britons celebrated the princess' birth on an especially lucky day.

Champagne corks popped, bells rang and cameras flashed outside Portland Hospital in central London with the announcement Monday night of the birth of a 6-pound, 12-ounce girl to Andrew, the Duke of York, and his red-haired duchess, the former Sarah Ferguson.

The Princess of York, who has not yet been named, is their first child and the fifth grandchild of Queen Elizabeth II.

Jane Makim, the duchess' elder sister who lives in Australia, told British reporters that her mother, Susan Barrantes, who was at the hospital for the birth, had telephoned to say the baby was very alert, didn't have much hair and had "a petite little face...just fit for a princess."

Andrew, sporting a yellow rose in the lapel of his dark blue suit, smiled and waved to a large crowd of journalists and several dozen well-wishers before going inside the American-owned Portland Hospital.

Only 24 hours earlier, he had looked somber and anxious as he drove his 28-year-old wife to the hospital from the country home west of London which they are renting from King Hussein of Jordan.

Dr. Anthony Kenney, the duchess' obstetrician, was also at the hospital today. He led a team of four doctors in the delivery room.

Hundreds of people on their way to work this morning stopped off at Buckingham Palace to see the brief notice posted on the gates announcing the baby's birth.

Polish student Arek Ilnicki went straight there after arriving in London. "I think the English are a bit mad about the baby. But it's good."

Andrew, the 28-year-old second son of the monarch and a Royal Navy lieutenant, flew to London on Sunday from Singapore where he is on sea duty on HMS Edinburgh. News of the birth was announced to the ship's crew and the prince's fellow officers immediately toasted to the health of the baby and parents.

The Buckingham Palace statement announcing the birth said the Duchess of York was "safely delivered of a daughter at 8:18 p.m.."

The statement said the delivery was "a normal birth" and 'there were no complications." Neither the palace nor the doctors would say whether the birth had been induced, as newspapers had speculated.

Andrew was present at his daughter's birth, the palace said. British press reports said the prince, an accomplished amateur photographer, took the first photos of his daughter.

There was much speculation over the baby's name, with Elizabeth and Victoria as favorites. Early in his wife's pregnancy Andrew had been quoted as saying the baby would be called Annabel.

Whatever the choice, the baby will be Her Royal Highness, Princess (name) of York. She is fifth in line to the throne behind Andrew's older brother, Prince Charles, Charles' two children Prince William and Prince Harry, and Andrew himself. The queen's two other grandchildren, Peter and Zara Phillips, are the children of her only daughter, Anne.

The baby's birth at 18 minutes past 8 on the eighth day of the eighth month of the century's 88th year is being taken by well-wishers as a sign of great good fortune. The day is considered highly auspicious by Cantonese-speaking Chinese, whose word for eight is similar to that for prosperity.

Hamadi admits hijacking, denies shooting American

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Mohammed Ali Hamadi admitted in court today to being one of four men who hijacked a TWA jetliner to Beirut in 1985, but denied shooting to death a U.S. Navy diver during the ordeal.

"I took part in the hijacking," the Lebanese Shiite Moslem said, reading from a statement in the heavily guarded courtroom.

"If this act which I committed is against the law, then it is a result of illegal conduct on the part of Israel," Hamadi, speaking in Arabic, said through an interpreter.

Thirty-nine Americans were held captive for 17 days after TWA Flight 847 was hijacked on an Athens-to-Rome flight. During the ordeal, Navy diver Robert Stethem was killed and his body thrown onto a Beirut airport runway.

Hamadi, on trial for air piracy and murder, said he hijacked a U.S. aircraft "because the United States is the greatest ally and supporter of Israel."

Clean-shave and waring an open-neck cream-colored shirt, Hamadi read calmly and clearly from the statement.

He said the goal of the June 1985 hijacking was to gain freedom for Shiite Moslems imprisoned in Israel.

"The decision to hijack the plane came after everything else failed," Hamadi said in 45-minute presentation. "There was no other way to free the prisoners other than the means chosen."

Shortly after the June 1985 hijacking ended, Israel released approximately 700 Shiites.

The trial, which started in July, was to have adjourned after today until Sept. 6, when members of the crew of the TWA plane were to begin testifying.

Until today, the only testimony that Hamadi was involved in the hijacking came from two witnesses who testified that Hamadi's older brother Abbas had told them as much.

Hamadi told the court that one of the three alleged hijackers still at large, Hassan Iz-al-Din, was in charge of the hijacking and had shot Stethem.

"The pistol was in his (alleged hijacker Hassan Iz-al-Din's) hand," Hamadi said. "I didn't use it. Our orders were not to harm anyone, but I couldn't convince him not to shoot."

Stethem's parents, Richard and Patricia Stethem of Waldorf, Md., were sitting in the courtroom as Hamadi spoke.

When Hamadi finished, Chief Judge Heiner Mueckenberger said the testimony "was surprising for everybody. It marks a certain turn in the trial.

"It was an intelligent presentation of your point of view," he added, saying the court would have to reconsider the future course of the trial.

Hamadi was arrested at Frankfurt airport on Jan. 13, 1987 when customs officials found liquid explosives in his luggage.

The United States sought his extradition, but West Germany turned down the request after two West German businessmen were abducted in Beirut.

Abbas Hamadi was sentenced to 13 years in prison after he was convicted by a West German court in April of masterminding the kidnappings in an attempt to force West Germany to free Mohammed.

One of the abducted men, Alfred Schmidt, was released in September 1987. The other, Rudolf Cordes, remains a hostage and is believed held by Hezbollah, a radical pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem group in Lebanon.

A third Hamadi brother, Abdul-Hadi, is Hezbollah's security chief in Beirut. Mohammed Hamadi has denied being a member of Hezbollah.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Burmese schools closed in protest

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Burmese authorities today closed schools indefinitely after anti-government protests across the country in which state-owned Radio Rangoon said eight people were killed and more than 800 arrested.

The radio said the arrests occurred and four people were injured in Rangoon, the capital, early today as demonstrators burned vehicles and destroyed traffic lights.

Diplomats reported shooting in the capital today and a number of foreign missions, including the U.S. Embassy, closed their doors. Burmese consulates in Bangkok and Hong Kong stopped issuing entry visas to tourists.

On Monday, tens of thousands of people surged into the streets of Rangoon and 14 other Burmese towns and cities to protest the new government of President Sein Lwin, a hard-line retired army general.

It was the largest anti-government protest since democracy was overthrown in this Southeast Asian nation 26 years ago.

Uprising in ninth month

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinians in the occupied lands today began the ninth month of their uprising with a general strike, and hospital officials said Israeli troops shot and wounded eight Arabs, one of them seriously.

The army confirmed two of the wounded and said it was checking the reports of further casualties.

The strike paralyzed commercial life in east Jerusalem and at least eight cities in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

PLO radio station hit

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes today blasted a PLO-run radio station near this southern port city, knocking it off the air. The initial police casualty report said three guards were wounded.

An Israeli army spokesman in Jerusalem said six Israeli jets fired 24 missiles in 12 passes over the Voice of Palestine Radio building and a nearby guerrilla base southeast of Sidon.

A Lebanese police spokesman said most of the missiles fired in the 70-minute raid hit the ground floor of the radio building.

The Israeli said the station was used to broadcast instructions to Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied territories.

IRA marks anniversary

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Gunmen fired on security forces before dawn today as gangs of IRA supporters took to the streets to mark 17 years since authorities began jailing guerrilla suspects without trial.

Security forces fired plastic bullets to break up gangs of rioters, including a 200-strong crowd throwing gasoline bombs at police outside a bus station.

The violence followed the deaths of two Roman Catholics in Belfast Monday in a suspected revenge slaying by Protestants for a new spate of Irish Republican Army attacks.

A press officer at Belfast police headquarters said the violence began in Catholic areas of the city and included the hijacking of cars erecting of barricades across streets and dozens of bonfires.

WWII bomb unearthed

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — Discovery of a buried World War II bomb by construction crews caused massive traffic jams in Hamburg and forced the temporary evacuation of 250 people, police said.

The 500-pound bomb was found Monday evening in a residential area near the center of the city, and cars and trucks were rerouted by police as a precaution, snarling traffic.

The bomb was safely disarmed about an hour after it was found, police said.

Crash claims two more

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Two more people have died of injuries suffered in the crash of a Bulgarian airliner last week, bringing the death toll to 27, the state news agency BTA reported Monday.

The Soviet-designed Yak-40 jetliner, with 33 passengers and four crew members on board, crashed into a river bed Tuesday after failing to take off from Sofia airport. The cause of the accident has not been determined.

Gary Futrell Refrigeration installs York, other improvements

Gary Futrell, owner of Gary Futrell Refrigeration, has the experience and inventory it takes to keep you cool this summer. For a free estimate, call Gary at 687-2234.

If the summer heat has you sizzling, now is the time to seek some cool relief with a York high efficiency air conditioner from Gary Futrell Refrigeration.

York, in business for more than a century, is a leader in the development of energy and cost efficient air conditioning systems. The York Stellar 2000 series offers cool, quiet comfort in every room, an affordable purchase price with optional 100% bank financing, dependable operation and distinctive styling.

Gary has been trained by York not only to maintain its products, but to help you select a Stellar 2000 comfort conditioning system that's right for your home and your budget. He is an Energy Techniques Specialist, armed with an advanced computer analysis system.

Combining this program and his expertise, Gary can recommend the cooling system you need to make your home comfortable, at the right price. For your free estimate, call 687-2234.

Gary Futrell Refrigeration opened in May 1982. Also, a full-service sheet metal shop is at your disposal. Gary can service all makes and is an authorized sales and service dealer on many brands of equipment.

Gary is bonded and insured, and licensed by the State of Texas to work on all types of heating and cooling systems.

You'll find that Gary Futrell Refrigeration can also handle a variety of your other air comfort needs. In Midland's dry climate, the popularity of home humidification has grown in recent years. Aprilaire humidifiers are designed to improve the environment in your home, and Gary Futrell Refigeration will install this form of comfort at your fingertips.

Allergy sufferers will appreciate the Dust Free 94 electro-static air cleaner, sold and serviced by Gary Futrell Refrigeration. Clean air protects your most valuable investment--your health.

Benefits include improved indoor air quality, no harmful ozone, doctor recommended, low purchase price easy cleaning and installation. The Dust Free uses self-charging electrostatic materials to keep you and your family from inhaling harmful dust, pollen and other irritants.

Gary Futrell Refrigeration also makes life easier at home or the office by installing and servicing commercial and under the counter ice machines.

Gary Futrell Refrigeration has three radio dispatched trucks, and because of an extensive air conditioning equipment inventory, same day service is offered on most jobs.

For more information and a free estimate for your comfort needs, call Gary Futrell Refrigeration at 687-2234. You'll be glad you did!

Look to Shayna Water Systems for your home, office needs

If you are tired of drinking poor tasting tap water, or if dragging bottles to the store for refills of bottled water is inconvenient to you, consider the alternative–a Shayna Water Systems home or office reverse osmosis unit.

It seems that more and more people are finding their tap water unacceptable, either because of the bad taste or concern over potential health hazards.

Shayna Water Systems provides the immediate answer to pure water needs with the most current state-of-the-art reverse osmosis process. Delicious and healthful drinking water is supplied at your fingertips from a private spigot on your sink–fresh as you use it. Best of all, Shayna Water's delicious and healthful purified drinking water is 95% contaminant and sodium free.

Shayna Water Systems was introduced to West Texans more than a year ago by Odessa businessman Roy Howell. "For health, convenience, cost and taste, Shayna Water is the answer to West Texans' drinking water needs," Howell explained. "It's the people's choice, and the wave of water across West Texas, serving Midland, Odessa, Andrews, Big Spring, Lamesa, Lubbock, San Angelo and Houston."

Reverse osmosis is the non-electric mechanical process of separating pure water molecules from tap water, which most often contains dissolved salts, chemicals and organics. This separation occurs through a microscopically porous membrane made of a cellulose triacetate material similar to cellophane kitchen wrap.

Under normal water pressure, water molecules penetrate the membrane, enter the purified water side of the system and leave the impurities to be flushed down the drain. The reverse osmosis membrane allows Shayna Water Systems a 95% drinking water purity level.

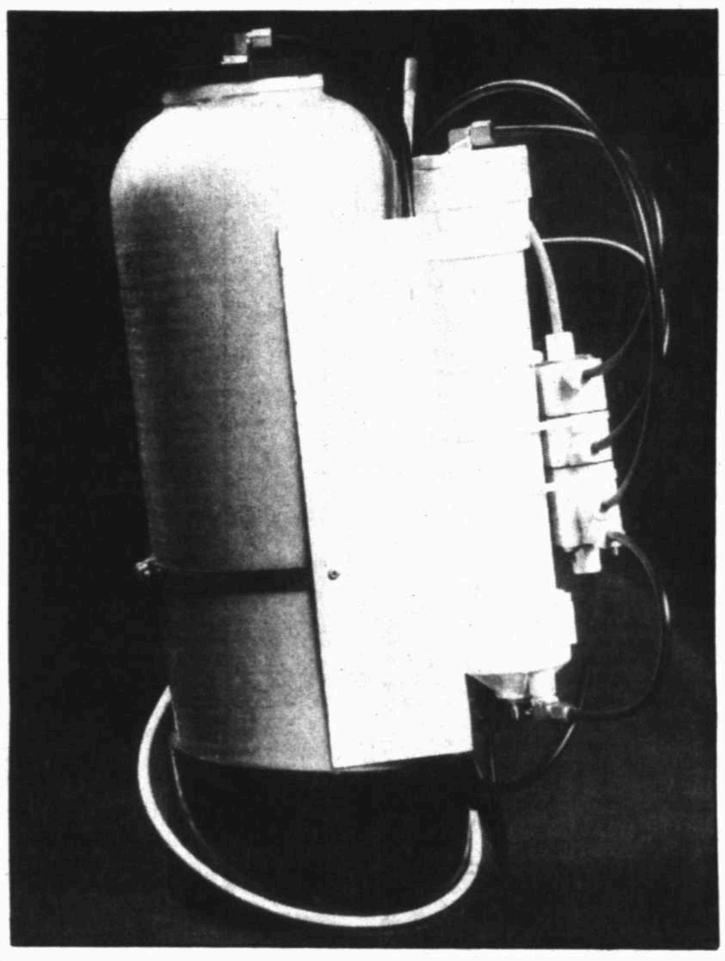

Unlike distilled water, the reverse osmosis process does not remove oxygen; rather, it enhances the oxygen content because of the lighter molecular size. With the oxygen to enrich the taste and five percent minerals still remaining, Shayna Water Systems delicious and healthful purified drinking water is without a doubt the most efficient and cost effective way to combat potentially harmful and poor tasting tap water.

Have you ever stopped to think about bottled water and how clean the bottles are? Have you ever noticed a plastic taste or smell with bottled water? A Shayna Water Systems unit in your home or office sink can eliminates these possiblitites.

If you are interested in something better, Shayna Water Systems offers delicious and healthful purified drinking water, available at your fingertips. Consider the advantages:

- No heavy bottles to lift or store
- No unsightly dispenser
- Water available from private spigot on your sink
- Compact 12"x19" unit fits neatly under sink
- Supplies up to 7 gallons of purified drinking water a day
- May be connected to ice maker
- Easily installed and moved
- Units available for home and officae, monthly rental ($12.95) and sales

When you are ready to enjoy the low cost and convenience of delicious and healthful purified water, call Shayna Water Systems at 563-9011.

This reverse osmosis Shayna Water Systems unit will fit conveniently under your home or office sink. Save time and effort with delicious, healthful Shayna Water.

Rainbow Press owners Larry and Brenda Sorrells have built their business into one of the finest professional printing plants in the Permian Basin.
