Under Cowley's leadership Iowa

Park schools have developed curriculum guides according to State mandated criteria with reference to House Bill 72 and House Bill 246, has established one of the strongest vocational offerings for a school of its enrollment, has maintained a financial management and accounting program modeled by other schools, and has been recognized as one of the premier school districts in the State for its academic standards.

Mr. Cowley will assume his duties as superintendent of the Talco-Bogata Schools on July 1.

Nichols Worth

By: Nanalee Nichols

Perhaps one of the nicest endowments left to East Texans is that of the daffodils. Just about the time that human-kind begins to think winter will last forever, tiny yellow blooms show up to assure the heart that spring will...indeed...make its appearance.

Yellow? No, they are not merely yellow, no golden piece of jewelry ever glowed more richly than the jonquils, narcissus and daffodils of spring!

They line long-vanished walkways, and outline the ghosts of houses so many years gone that even the oldest citizen doesn't remember them.

They splash roadsides and well sites and carpet pastures that once knew civilization.

Where did they come from? Generally they are simply accepted as being there, and no thought is given to where they traveled from.

But they weren't always here, and they aren't a native wildflower. They came in the covered wagons, in saddle bags, tucked in among those other precious articles that the women of pioneers brought with them from their more civilized worlds.

The tiny bulbs were carefully transported across the slow miles from Tennessee, Georgia, Kentucky, then lovingly set in their new homes.

And the little yellow flowers evidently adopted to their new world rather well, because they have spent the past hundred or so years joyfully multiplying, spreading, being given from neighbor to neighbor, friend to friend.

Now, when there are dozens of different varieties to choose from, with huge blooms and exotic colors, the tiny yellow flowers still lodge in many people's hearts as a favorite.

They are picked by children as bouquets for moms, picked by passing motorists, and yet they flourish.

They herald spring...and something more...they herald the tenacious pioneer spirit common not just to them, but to almost all who settled and live in this part of the world!

Editor's Quote Book

Great men are they who see that spiritual is stronger than any material force; that thoughts rule the world.

The Bean Poles

By Wm. C. Barnard

Swain and Rose Lawler lived down the road from us. That spring, come gardening time, Rose and my Mother each planted pole or climbing beans in their gardens.

They didn't think that bush beans were fit to eat, they had to have the climbing kind. Bean poles were not easy to come by on the prairie, and the two men, because of crop pressure, had not taken time to go to the woods for them.

The beans began to run so the two women decided to go get the poles. Rose knew where there was an ash thicket, a couple of miles away, on Brushy Creek. There should be plenty of poles there.

One Saturday after dinner, while Dad and Swain had gone to town, Rose and Mother got Marion and I to hitch the mules to the wagon, then loaded all the kids and two axes and headed for the creek. We found plenty of good straight slender poles.

Everyone was so busy cutting and loading poles that no one saw a black cloud building up in the west. When it began to thunder, we realized that a rain storm was approaching.

We immediately loaded up and started home. Before we had gone very far, big drops of rain began to splat down on us and we could see the storm coming up fast. Marion, Rose's oldest son, put the mules into a fast trot. We could see the rain streaking down across the prairie behind us as the lightning flashed and the thunder boomed. That just increased our speed.

We got home when the storm hit. We unhooked the team and turned them into the lot with the harness on, and ran to the house. By the time we got inside, the hail was coming down on the sheet iron roof with a deafening roar. When it was over, the ground was covered with balls of ice.

The runnign beans were beat into the ground, but we had plenty of poles for next year.

Straight Answers to Your Questions

Q: Who is responsible for electrical safety?

A: Your safety is your responsibility and ours! Our responsibility is to meet all legal standards when installing and maintaining powerlines—which we do.

However, protecting yourself and your family from all harm is something that no one can do for you. It is something you must do for yourself.

When it comes to the safety in your home, you and your family must practice safety precautions to avoid accidents—especially with electricity.

Make sure that you avoid the use of water around electrical outlets or appliances. Water conducts electricity, so keep all electrical wiring away from water, especially around bathtubs or sinks. Child proof your electrical outlets with Child Safety Plugs too.

Teach your children about powerline safety. No one should ever touch a powerline with anything including antennas, tree pruning tools, ladders, kite strings, sailboat masts, construction equipment booms, etc. If you or a member of your family sees a fallen powerline do not get close to it but report it to either our office or the local law enforcement officials.

You can use and enjoy the benefits of your electric service safely in your home, but you have to make sure that it is not used carelessly.

GIRL SCOUTS
ANNIVERSARY

The date was March 12, 1912; the place was Savannah, Georgia; the woman was Juliette Gordon Low; the "something for the girls" was Girl Scouting. A vision — now an accomplished reality. That's Girl Scouts of the U.S.A., this year celebrating its 73rd Anniversary. We join all in our community in salutation of Girl Scouts Week, March 10th through 16th, and congratulate all members of our local and national Girl Scouts!

FACTS FROM MEDICAL DOCTORS, MEMBERS OF THE EASTERN ORTHOPAEDIC ASSOCIATION

EXERCISE FOR OLDER ADULTS

Older adults who exercise regularly in an appropriate fitness program can increase their strength, flexibility, mobility and endurance, and offer themselves an extended lease on life. But remember: There is risk in sudden, unregulated use of exercise. Older persons should have a medical evaluation before beginning an extensive exercise program.

TYPES OF EXERCISE
Exercising gives you more energy, helps you cope with stress and tension, aids in relaxation, tones muscles and improves your self-image. Some exercises can be done standing or sitting, depending on your comfort and ability.

• STRETCHING AND STRENGTHENING exercises are designed to increase flexibility and strength of muscles, joints and bones. Head and neck rolls, arm circles, trunk twists, leg lifts and other stretching routines will keep your bones and joints limber.

• AEROBIC exercises strengthen the heart and cardiovascular system. Brisk walking, dancing, swimming, jogging, water exercise and biking all increase your heart and breathing rates and improve the circulatory system.

• WALKING is one of the best and safest exercises for older adults. Brisk walking strengthens the heart and lungs and improves endurance.

EFFECTS OF EXERCISE

NORMAL responses to exercise will be rapid breathing and an increased heart rate; moderate sweating; and mild muscle aches and tenderness during the first week of exercise.

ABNORMAL reactions to exercise may indicate you are overexerting yourself incorrectly or have physical limitations that need to be discussed with a physician. Examples are severe shortness of breath; difficulty in breathing; chest pain, pressure or tightness; dizziness or fainting; cramps, severe pain or muscle aches; nausea; and severe, prolonged exhaustion after exercise.

An orthopedic surgeon can help determine your limitations and prescribe a fitness program that is best for you. By recognizing any existing problems, and designing a program for your abilities and comforts, you can exercise towards a longer, healthier life.

FREE BROCHURE
For further information on exercise, write for a free brochure to: Eastern Orthopaedic Association, Suite 3F, 301 South 8th Street, Philadelphia, PA 19106.

U.S. Savings Bonds. Now paying 10.94%.

U.S. Savings Bonds now pay like money market accounts! At the current rate—10.94%—you could double your money in less than seven years. Just hold Bonds for five years and you get the new higher variable rates. Plus, you get a guaranteed return. That's the kind of change anyone can appreciate.

But some of the best things about Bonds haven't changed. Savings Bonds are still as safe as ever. They're still exempt from state and local income taxes. And since Bonds cost as little as $25, they're as affordable as ever. What's more, Bonds remain a great way to keep our country strong.

You can purchase Bonds almost anywhere. At neighborhood banks, savings and loans and credit unions. Or easier still, right through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work.

For your free booklet, write: "50 Q&A," U.S. Savings Bonds Division, U.S. SAVINGS BONDS, Washington, DC 20226.

Variable rates apply to Bonds purchased on and after 11/1/82 and held at least 5 years. Bonds purchased before 11/1/82 earn variable rates when held beyond 10/31/87. Bonds held less than 5 years earn lower interest.
