Dam bursts; Water pours into Italian town

CAVALESE, Italy (AP) — A swollen lake burst an earthen dam Friday and poured a raging torrent into homes and tourist hotels in a Dolomite Mountain valley. Officials said at least 220 people were killed.

They said a 150-foot-wide wall of water, mud and uprooted trees crushed 20 houses and four hotels in 20 seconds in the village of Stava.

"I saw the end of the world," said a survivor who broke down in tears.

Another said: "It sounded like an earthquake, I thought the mountain had collapsed."

Civil Defense Minister Giuseppe Zamberletti said at least 220 people were killed.

Fifteen people were dug out of the mud alive, officials reported.

State-run RAI television said almost all of the dead identified were tourists, but there was no official confirmation. No identities of the victims were released.

One survivor, who gave his name only as Pietro, told reporters his brother climbed a tree to escape the first wave of mud and water that hit the village of Stava, but a second carried him away.

"Many families were wiped out with their houses" when the dam burst at about 1 p.m., said Alma Bernard, who owns a hotel in Tesero, about two miles from the disaster scene in the Fiemme Valley of northern Italy. "Earth and mud cover the village (Stava)," she said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

Rescue workers and soldiers brought in by helicopter fought through mud and debris in the search for victims. They said 78 bodies had been recovered.

Film taken by television cameramen flying over the scene showed an empty artificial lake and a 3½-mile-long channel of mud stretching into the valley. The dam was completely washed away.

RAI, which broadcast the film, said the mass of water, mud, trees and other debris reached depths of 130 feet.

The earthen dam was built about 20 years ago to filter waste water from a mine that produces fluorite, a mineral used in making glass.

Officials of the Civil Defense Ministry said the rushing water carried with it sediment from the mine that

Nation honors U.S. men missing in Southeast Asia

Associated Press

Army helicopters in a "missing man" formation paid tribute Friday and family members planted a memorial tree on a hilltop, as the nation remembered more than 2,450 Americans still unaccounted for in Southeast Asia.

Black flags of remembrance flew over state capitols in Missouri and Texas on the 6th annual National MIA-POW Recognition Day. Shouts for "Rambo," the movie liberator of languishing prisoners, broke in on ceremonies in Washington, D.C.

"This is just to pay our respect to those individuals and their families for what they endured," said Steve Gish, chief of voluntary services at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Salt Lake City, where 26 roses, representing Utah residents listed as missing in action, formed a bouquet of recollection.

The flowers were placed one-by-one on an altar in the hospital chapel as Barbara Endicott read the 26 names, including that of her brother, Lt. Col. Bruce C. Walker.

While many family members said they still held out hope for those missing, others found ways to accept that their loved ones were dead.

"We are all are getting older; he never did," said Patricia Tym of her brother, Lt. j.g. James E. Dooley of Manchester Center, Vt., who was shot down in a mission over North Vietnam on Oct. 22, 1967.

Chaplain Alfred W. Eustes Jr. urged those attending a ceremony at Tinker Air Force Base in Oklahoma to keep pressing the inquiry into those still unaccounted for, adding: "Love your country, keep faith with your nation and keep your love alive for the missing in action."

The MIA issue remains "probably the most open wound we have yet to heal from Vietnam," said Peter Sharp, director of the Vietnam Veterans' Center in Oklahoma City.

Outside Washington, Rep. Stephen J. Solarz, who oversees a House task force on POWs and MIAs, told a crowd of 800 that resolving the fate of those unaccounted for is "a national obligation and moral responsibility."

Interrupted by shouts of "Rambo!" he cautioned: "We must be careful not to raise false hopes." The New York Democrat agreed with other members of Congress that there is no credible evidence that Americans remain alive in captivity in Southeast Asia.

Generals saluted those missing during ceremonies at the Pentagon Friday, as 1,400 people gathered to watch a scene reminiscent of the Vietnam era: an Army helicopter flyover, this time with one chopper deliberately missing.

"We are confident that the Vietnamese hold far more information about our missing men than they have provided," said Gen. John Vessey, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, at the Pentagon observance.

The National Park Service flew the POW-MIA flag — bearing the inscription, "You are not forgotten" — at the Washington's Vietnam Memorial.

Reagan to be released from hospital today

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will be released from Bethesda Naval Hospital to return to the White House today, just one week after undergoing surgery to remove a cancerous tumor from his colon, his spokesman announced Friday.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan would leave the hospital after making his weekly noontime radio address, which will mark the first time the president's voice has been heard live in public since he entered the hospital July 12.

Reagan's five-minute radio speech last week was recorded in advance as a precaution. The tape was broadcast Saturday as doctors worked to remove a two-foot section of the president's colon containing the large, malignant tumor they found during a thorough intestinal examination a day earlier.

Speakes announced to reporters at the White House that Reagan's doctors "gave the president the green light to go home. He'll arrive at the White House seven days virtually to the hour after his surgery."

Although he flew to the military medical center outside Washington by helicopter, Speakes said Reagan would make the eight-mile trip home from Bethesda, Md., by motorcade.

The medical team told Reagan "to plan on an abbreviated schedule for a few days, but other than that, he's good as new," the spokesman said.

The president spent one hour, 35 minutes in back-to-back meetings Friday morning with White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan, national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane and Secretary of State George P. Shultz, Speakes said.

The president accepted Regan's recommendation that Federal Trade Commission chairman James C. Miller III be named to head the Office of Management and Budget, succeeding outgoing budget director David Stockman. Speakes said they also discussed other personnel matters during a 40-minute meeting before McFarlane came in to talk about the recently concluded round of U.S.-Soviet arms talks and the president's planned summit meeting in November with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in Geneva.

Reagan remained in his hospital bed while talking to his staff, Speakes said, but he got up to greet Shultz at the door to the suite and escorted him to a sitting room for a 35-minute session in which the secretary "gave the president a detailed readout on his trip to Pacific and Southeast Asian countries."

Mrs. Reagan arrived around noon to tell her husband the doctors had approved his return to the White House.

Speakes said Reagan, who was put on a solid-food diet Thursday, had a cheeseburger with relish for lunch and salmon, fresh corn, spinach, fruit slaw and peach melba on the menu for dinner.

After intestinal surgery, patients usually go from intravenous feeding to a liquid diet to solid food within about a week as their normal bowel functions return. Speakes said the president has kept right on schedule and that doctors have been particularly impressed with his stamina and

NASA says New Hampshire teacher has the 'right stuff'

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA picked Sharon Christa McAuliffe, a social studies teacher from Concord, N.H., as the educator with the "right stuff" Friday.

She will get to ride the shuttle Challenger in January as the nation's first lay passenger to rocket into space.

Ms. McAuliffe, 36, a mother of two who is a Girl Scout leader and volunteer at a family planning clinic, burst into tears when Vice President George Bush made the announcement in a ceremony at the White House.

James M. Beggs, administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, also chose Barbara R. Morgan, a second-grade teacher from McCall, Idaho, as the back-up candidate who will undergo the same training and make the trip if Ms. McAuliffe cannot.

The 10 finalists — survivors of a field of more than 10,000 applicants — actually got the news a few minutes before Bush disclosed it to reporters in the Roosevelt Room.

"I've made nine wonderful friends over the last two weeks," Ms. McAuliffe said between tears. "When that shuttle goes, there might be one body, but there's going to be 10 souls that I'm taking with me."

Later, she told reporters on the White House lawn, "It really hasn't hit me yet. I'm still kind of floating. I don't know when I'll come down to Earth, but I feel wonderful."

Ms. McAuliffe, who is married to an attorney, teaches law, economics and history to 11th and 12th graders at Concord High School, as well as a social history course on "The American Woman" she designed herself.

Her project for the flight of the Challenger — scheduled for Jan. 22, 1986 — is to keep a journal like the pioneer travelers of the Conestoga wagon days. Ms. McAuliffe said she wants to "humanize the technology of the space age" for her students and "to demystify NASA and space flight."

President Reagan promised last August to send a teacher into space to signal the importance of the profession.

Bush said NASA had searched far and wide for a teacher "with 'the right stuff.' Really there are thousands...We're honoring all those teachers of merit today," he said.

A panel of educators, astronauts and celebrities picked the finalists from 114 semifinalists three weeks ago. They underwent extensive physical and psychological tests, as well as some rudimentary astronaut training, at the Johnson Space Center in Houston last week and then a final round of interviews with top NASA officials here this week.

Candidate: Attorney general needs to be 'tough on crime'

Sen. J.E. Brown

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

State Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, seeking the Republican nomination for attorney general, emphasized the need for a "conservative attorney general who is tough on crime" during a campaign appearance here Friday.

Brown, considered by some Republican insiders as the favorite to capture the GOP nomination, formally announced his candidacy at a news conference in the Houston area on Wednesday.

"This election will be tough, but it's a tough job being attorney general," Brown said. "Today, I'm beginning the campaign that will give Texas a tough conservative, law and order attorney general."

Brown, 44, is a second-term state senator, lawyer and former assistant district attorney in Brazoria County. His district includes parts of Brazoria, Fort Bend and Harris counties.

He was elected to the state Senate in 1980, defeating Democratic incumbant A.R. "Babe" Schwartz of Galveston. He won re-election two years later with more than 88 percent of the general election vote.

Brown said the major factor in his decision to seek his party's nomination for the state's top legal post was the growing call for conservatism in Texas.

"We need new leadership in the office of Attorney General," he said. "It is time we had a conservative attorney general who is tough on crime."

Murder-for-hire suspect refuses plea bargain

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

The disappearance of a key witness led the Midland County Attorney's Office to offer a plea-bargain arrangement Friday to a 28-year-old Midland man accused of trying to hire an undercover officer to kill his brother's ex-wife.

But a tearful Muhammed M. Majid refused to go through with the deal after newspaper and television reporters showed up at the hearing before 238th District Court Judge Vann Culp.

"I have suffered enough. We will go to trial. If the jury gives me 99 (years) I will take 99," he told his brother Khalid, who was apparently trying to persuade him to accept Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre's offer.

"He wasn't going to plead guilty with the reporters and the media around," said Schorre, who refused to say what kind of deal Majid had been offered. If convicted by a jury, he faces a possible penalty of five to 99 years or life in prison.

Reporters had been called to a 4:45 p.m. press conference Friday by Schorre and Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter, who thought the hearing would have ended by then. But it had been delayed, and when Majid saw the reporters in the courtroom and the television cameras filming him through the courtroom door, he became visibly agitated and backed out of the arrangement.

Midland man found not guilty of burglary

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A 22-year-old Midland man was found not guilty of burglarizing an oil-well-servicing company Friday despite being implicated in the crime by a friend who was arrested at the scene.

Ellis Warren III, 1409 E. Oak, had also signed a statement admitting he'd tried to find a buyer for some oil-well packers shortly before Raymond Earl Hall was arrested by sheriff's deputies March 28 with a van full of packers stolen from Tubing, Anchor and Packer Service Inc. on Garden City Highway.

Hall, who had previously pleaded guilty to the burglary and been sentenced to six years probation and a $1,500 fine, testified Thursday in 142nd District Court that Warren and TAPS employee Dan Keets, 1507 N. Main, had planned the burglary with him. But Warren said the subject was only briefly mentioned, after which Hall did the burglary on his own.

"We were just more or less just talking about it and the subject of the packers came up and the subject dropped," said Warren. "Dan said it was senseless, stupid, that it was not worth the trouble."

"I told him (Hall) it was a stupid idea," testified Keets, whose indictment for the same offense will be dismissed because the only evidence against him is Hall's testimony. Under Texas law, testimony from an alleged accomplice is not by itself enough for a conviction, according to Midland County Assistant District Attorney Chuck Roades, who prosecuted the case.

The other evidence against Warren was a pair of his boots, which had paint on them similar to that on the stolen packers, and his statement, which he signed at the county courthouse the night of the burglary after Hall gave his and Keets' names to sheriff's investigators.

But Warren, who used to work for TAPS, said painting packers had been part of his job there, and while he admitted calling a Hobbs, N.M., oil-field-servicing company shortly before the burglary to see what price he could get for some packers, he insisted Hall acted on his own.

Defense Attorney David Smith called several of Warren's friends to the stand to account for his whereabouts during the time of the burglary, which occurred about 10:48 p.m. Among the witnesses were Judy Johnson, with whom Warren was living at the time, and Maxine Walker, who described herself as his girlfriend. Ms. Walker and Warren testified they were going to the movies that night, but changed their plans after Ms. Walker had an argument with Ms. Johnson.

Other witnesses placed Warren at Ms. Walker's apartment at the time of the burglary. Hall said Warren and Keets escaped on foot, but Roades had no other witnesses who could place the defendant at the scene of the crime.

"The evidence shows he was not there, he was over at Maxine's house," said Smith Friday during closing arguments. But Roades said it was "incredible" that Hall could have planned the burglary by himself.

"The evidence proves beyond a shadow of a doubt that this defendant is at least a party to this crime," he said, but after deliberating about an hour, the 10-man, two-woman jury apparently found room for reasonable doubt.

Warren had a previous conviction for burglary of a building, but under deferred adjudication his conviction was voided when he completed three years of probation about a year ago. According to 142nd District Judge Pat Baskin, the previous conviction couldn't have been used to enhance the punishment range, but could have been considered by the jury in setting punishment within that range, had they voted to convict.

The seven packers found in Hall's van had a value of about $21,000, Roades said.

Supreme Court upholds ruling on lawsuit

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court has upheld lower court rulings in a products liability lawsuit from Reeves County, denying recovery by Billy Woods, injured in an oilfield accident.

Woods sued Crane Carrier Co., Inc., alleging it defectively designed an oilwell servicing rig.

Woods contended the design was a "producing cause" of injuries he received when a floor, or "gate," above him collapsed on his head.

Woods also alleged Crane Carrier failed to warn of the gate's danger or to provide instructions on its safe use, and that rendered the gate "unreasonably dangerous as marketed," the Supreme Court reported.

The trial court, based on a jury verdict, ruled that Woods "take nothing," with that ruling upheld on appeal.

The Supreme Court affirmed the lower courts.

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Reps. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, and Kelly Godwin, R-Odessa, are among the "initial group" of 24 Republican members of the Legislature supporting a possible gubernatorial bid by U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, the congressman's campaign committee reports.

Craddick and Godwin were among the members listed by the Tom Loeffler for Governor committee in a release distributed in Austin Thursday.

Loeffler said in the release that he was "particularly gratified" by the support of the legislators who "know firsthand that Texas needs a governor with a commitment to excellence and political integrity."

The flag also flew in Austin, Texas, where Gov. Mark White said in a proclamation that those Americans who lost their lives or were imprisoned in Vietnam "shall remain as models for all Americans faced with adversity."

A six-foot pear tree was a symbol of recollection in Georgia, as 46 family members of soldiers missing in Vietnam gathered at Dobbins Air Force Base near Marietta on Thursday.

At dawn Friday, seven men dressed in combat fatigues began a vigil at the Vietnam-Korean War monument in Syracuse, N.Y., constructing a cage of wood and rope that they said would show passersby how the North Vietnamese Army sometimes confined war prisoners. They said confinement may be continuing.

Recent thunderstorms have been swelling mountain streams in the area of the lake and dam, about 4,000 feet above sea level near this Trento province town 193 miles northeast of Milan. Stava is about 18 miles southeast of Bolzano.

Rescue workers were called to the scene of the disaster from as far away as Tuscany, in central Italy. Dogs trained to sniff for victims buried under rubble also were rushed in. Police closed roads in the area to allow access by rescue squads and heavy earth-moving equipment.

cheerful attitude toward the surgery and recovery.

The doctors had said from the start that the president would spend seven to 10 days in the hospital if he had a normal recovery from the major abdominal operation.

Speakes said Reagan would resume his duties almost immediately, welcoming Chinese President Li Xiannian to the White House for a state visit on Tuesday and lobbying members of Congress by telephone in an attempt to break a deadlock on the budget.

The spokesman said the president would return to the Oval Office, where he normally conducts his official business, "in short order," although he would begin by working out of the residential quarters of the executive mansion.

He quoted the physicians as saying Reagan "is fast returning to championship form" and said Reagan is "anxious to return home and get back on the job as soon as possible."

For the rest, the disappointment was palpable.

Robert S. Foerster, 34, a sixth-grade math and science teacher from West Lafayette, Ind., said the last two weeks were "a grueling experience."

He said he was "relieved to know that the decision's over...It's like being a kid when you're waiting for Christmas: you're glad when the day finally gets there, whether you got what you expected or not."

BROWN

He cited his record of tough anti-crime legislation as a state senator, which in the recent session of the Legislature resulted in passage of two bills making it more difficult for convicted criminals to get off with light sentences.

One bill requires that conviction appeals based on defective indictments be made by the defense prior to beginning of the trial.

In addition, the bill calling for a constitutional amendment to appear on the November ballot as Proposition 11, would allow a judge in a case to correct a defective indictment without sending the document back to a grand jury.

Passage of the proposition would "eliminate convictions from being overturned because of minor technical defects in indictments," Brown said.

Brown also was responsible for passage of legislation that allows Texas juries to be informed about the parole laws before they sentence convicted criminals, makes it a crime in Texas to possess child pornography and makes it a felony for Texas prisoners to possess weapons.

Brown said Friday that "we must continue to improve our criminal justice system until we send a message to criminals that arrest is a higher possibility, that conviction is a greater probability and that punishment is a swifter and surer reality."

PLEA

able for comment after the hearing.

Majid's trial was to begin Monday, but it will have to be postponed because federal agents scheduled to testify were told they weren't needed after the deal was arranged, Schorre said.

A key prosecution witness "has disappeared, and we felt like it was going to be difficult to proceed without him," said Schorre in explaining why he was willing to offer a plea-bargain arrangement to Majid.

"The man who brought the case to us and would be the main witness in the case has disappeared," said Painter. "We don't know what happened to him or where he is."

Painter said the deal offered Majid did include a prison sentence: "He was going to plead guilty and do time."

Majid, 3601 Andrews Highway, has been held in county jail on $100,000 bond (reduced from $1 million) since his arrest March 23 at an east-side laundry-grocery store.

A tip, presumably from the missing witness, had alerted county officials Majid was looking to hire someone to kill Khalid Majid's 24-year-old ex-wife, who lived in Abilene. He was indicted after a Midland grand jury reportedly heard recordings and viewed videotapes of his second meeting with an undercover agent posing as a hit man.

The agent showed Majid faked photographs of the woman covered with ketchup and lying in a field, but Majid "was trying to put the undercover agent off" about payment, Painter said at the time. Without the missing witness, county officials may have been concerned about an entrapment defense.

At the time, Majid told reporters he had been set up.

"If I wanted somebody killed so bad, I would not get a third party to do it," he said.

Majid claimed he had hired the undercover agent merely to locate, not to kill, his brother's ex-wife, whom he said had denied his brother visitation rights and was "going to run away" with their child.

Soviet officials hire New York firm to distribute press releases in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet Embassy officials, normally secretive sorts, have paid a New York firm to distribute press releases written like news stories to newspapers and radio stations around the country.

So far this year, North American Precis Syndicate Inc. has shipped out three Soviet government-inspired releases to 3,800 newspapers and 5,000 radio stations.

Justice Department officials said there is nothing illegal about the practice so long as the syndicate files under the Foreign Agents Registration Act, which it has done.

The Soviet stories generally stress the strong bonds between the two countries and the need for more cooperation.

There's a glowing account of a July 1975 U.S.-Soviet space effort, Apollo-Soyuz, in which Soviet cosmonaut Alexei Leonov remembers Americans and Soviet astronauts meeting as friends.

Leonov is quoted as saying he joins others "who stand for international peaceful cooperation in space."

Then there's a story, with picture, about the close bonds and friendships formed by U.S. and Russian soldiers who met on the banks of the Elbe River in Germany in April 1945 at the end of World War II.

Ronald N. Levy, the syndicate's president, said the Soviet news releases, sent out in printable form, are accompanied by a separate piece of paper noting that the syndicate is paid by the embassy.

That procedure is required by the Justice Department, but agency spokesman Robert Sharp said there was no way to ensure adherence to that policy because the department doesn't check the cover letters.

It's unclear how many of the stories have found their way into print, but Soviet Embassy official Yuri Subbotin said he has been pleased with the results.

He said he was unable to provide the names of the papers using the Soviet material. Besides, "the names mean nothing to me...they are not big like the New York Times," he said.

Subbotin said that when North American Precis Syndicate approached him about joining its business, he figured, "Yes, why not?"

Authorities say they control drug profits

HOUSTON (AP) — Federal authorities say they now control more than $17 million in drug trafficking profits and assets seized during a massive 2-year-old investigation into a Mexican drug cartel linked to the death of a U.S. drug agent.

No criminal charges have been filed in connection with the drug investigation, but authorities say the spate of property seizures has put pressure on organized crime.

"We aim to hit them where it hurts by taking their assets away. We can send them to the penitentiary, but it doesn't necessarily impress them because they still have their millions when they get out," says U.S. Attorney Henry Oncken of Houston.

Oncken announced Thursday that federal authorities have seized $3.9 million in alleged cocaine trafficking profits that they believe is linked to a ring run by alleged drug kingpin Rafael Caro Quintero.

A former official with the Mexican federal police allegedly deposited the money in various accounts at McAllen State Bank and Valley Federal Savings and Loan Association, which also is in McAllen, Oncken said.

Oncken said he filed papers in court seeking forfeiture of the money from accounts allegedly controlled by Rodolfo Moises Calvo, who worked with the Mexican police several years ago.

Quintero is charged in the February abduction and killing of Enrique Camarena Salazar, a U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent in Mexico. He also is charged in the deaths of the agent's pilot and two American tourists that he reportedly mistook for DEA agents.

Quintero has been in jail in Mexico since April. He and his two uncles allegedly run a multimillion-dollar drug cartel with assets in Texas and California.

"Past history has shown us that an organization with cash in these quantities is in a position to corrupt society on both sides of the border," said Marion Hambrick, head of the DEA field office in Houston.

Oncken refused to say whether authorities think Calvo is directly involved in drug trafficking. DEA officials say they believe Calvo is in Mexico.

Federal law allows authorities to seize property that is believed to be the profits of drug trafficking even if no criminal charges have been filed. If the forfeiture is granted, the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force for the Gulf Coast Region will be permitted to use the funds for its investigations.

The more than $17 million in seized assets linked to the cartel include $6.8 million — the largest cash seizure ever — in alleged drug profits. Authorities, who seized the funds a year ago, believe the accounts are related to the Quintero cartel.

Federal authorities say drug agents using Internal Revenue Service liens also have tied up about $5 million in real estate and other property linked to Quintero.

State accountant arrested for theft

AUSTIN (AP) — State accountant James Fontaine was arrested Friday on a charge that he stole a $247,000 state check, but investigators and state officials said they don't know what he could have done with the check.

"He must be a little stupid," said one state employee who has known Fontaine for about 15 years and doubts he could have cashed or deposited the big check.

Fontaine, 43, surrendered to the Travis County sheriff's office Friday after officials notified him of the charge. He was released later in the day after posting $10,000 bond. The complaint, filed Thursday, alleges the $41,400-a-year accountant this month falsified documents needed to have the check written.

He allegedly had the check made out to a Cedar Park company that has done business with the State Highway Department in the past, M.E. Ruby Jr. Inc. The owner of that rock company said Friday he wasn't owed money by the state.

"But my, my, I sure could have used that money," owner M.E. Ruby Jr. said.

Fontaine, who was fired Thursday afternoon, is accused of stealing the check from the mail room.

The fact that the check was in the mail room raised suspicions. Winston Anderson, highway department finance official, said his agency doesn't mail checks directly from Austin. They go through district offices.

The check also carried an out-of-sequence number, he said.

"When we first saw it we thought it was a clerical error," said Anderson.

When he looked at the paperwork that caused the check to be written, Anderson said he noticed what appeared to be a forged signature.

After 23 years as a state accountant, Fontaine now faces the first-degree felony charge of theft over $20,000 by a public servant. The charge is punishable by five years to life in prison.

What Fontaine might have done with the check remained a mystery Friday.

"That is a good question," said Anderson.

"I have no way of knowing what he could have done with the check," said Assistant District Attorney Rose Mary Lehmberg.

"At this time, my attorney has advised me not to discuss the situation with anyone," he said Friday in a telephone interview from the county jail.

According to the complaint filed against Fontaine, he told an investigator he did it because he was frustrated with the comptroller's office and so he could be "king of the mountain with $247,000 in his pocket."

A banking association official said there are, basically, two ways someone can try to pass a check not made out to them.

"Checks can be altered, even a state check. It's not easy, but there are some very sophisticated techniques," said Chris Williston, director of banking professional activities for the Texas Banking Association.

"This is no difference that federal government checks, which are stolen from mail boxes. Those things are picked up by individuals and altered in amount and payee," he said.

The other method involves opening an account in the name that's on the check.

"That's less likely" to succeed, according to Williston, especially when a large government check is involved.

"When it's a state check it automatically sends up a flag to the new account officer," he said. "And it's difficult to open an account in a company name. You have to show corporate documents."

Because the bogus check was detected early, the Treasury Department put a hold on it. The state would not have covered it if it came back from a bank.

"It could have been cashed if it was dumped on someone else, but we were not going to cash it," said Bill Cryer, spokesman for Treasurer Ann Richards.

Opera singer's face burned in steam room

DALLAS (AP) — A 33-year-old guest opera star who visited a steam room to clear his sinuses before a rehearsal says he had to cancel his performance in a Dallas production because of burns he got from the steam.

Carroll Freeman, whose last role was as Prince Charming in an Iowa Public Television production of "Cinderella," says he has been in pain ever since the incident a week ago.

"Never have I had a moment of no pain," said Freeman, who was interviewed with his lawyer present.

"I couldn't sing now because the throat is not the only part that sings in opera," he said, describing an opera performance as an "athletic event."

"I just pray it doesn't affect my voice," said the tenor who has performed professionally since he was 12.

Freeman said the burns forced him to cancel his performance as Ernesto in the Public Opera of Dallas production of "Don Pasquale," which opens next Friday.

The singer said he went to the President's Health & Racquetball Club in North Dallas last Saturday morning to sit in the steam room to clear his sinuses a few hours before his first rehearsal with the Dallas company.

In the process of moving to Houston from New York, Freeman said that as a member of the health club chain in another city, he was entitled to one visit at a Dallas club.

Freeman said a health club employee took him to an emergency clinic for treatment, but "after I got home...my skin started blistering. I had blisters about the size of ping pong balls."

He wound up going to Parkland Memorial Burn Center for what he describes as "horrible" treatments that involve scraping his skin off every day.

"It's miserable. They soak me and they scrape me every day. I am covered with different kinds of antibiotic creams," the singer said.

NOW issues overshadowed by election for president

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The National Organization for Women opened its annual convention on Friday, distracted by an increasingly hardfought presidential election contest.

"We need to put more oomph into what we're doing," said the challenger, Eleanor Smeal, promising more visible public activity.

Replied incumbent Judy Goldsmith, "There have been concrete outstanding gains for women" during her term, including selection of Geraldine Ferraro as last year's Democratic vice presidential candidate.

With the balloting a day away, Friday's opening session of the national meeting was set aside for discussion of feminist issues, but the campaign intruded everywhere.

"Everything is being overshadowed by the election politics" said Jennifer Brown, president of the New York NOW chapter. "It's harmful to the extent that this conference could be much better devoted to our issues for the next year."

"It's a real campaign here. It has all the attributes of a real campaign," added Sandra Farha, head of the California chapter.

The 2,500 delegates milling throughout the convention hotel might easily be mistaken for delegates at a political convention. Some wore buttons saying "Smeal for a strong NOW" while other wore "Go for the Gold Re-elect Judy." Ms. Smeal's backers were doing a brisk trade in raspberry-colored T-shirts and scarves emblazoned "Ellie," and the incumbent's supporters thrust blue "Re-elect Goldsmith" decals into the hands of everyone who walked by.

Both candidates were accompanied by noisy supporters.

With no disagreement on goals, the two camps waged a battle over tactics.

Ms. Goldsmith called a morning news conference to announce a million-signature petition drive designed to safeguard abortion rights, a response to the Reagan administration's decision to ask the Supreme Court to overturn a 1973 ruling that legalized the operations.

"They can never stop abortion. They can only make it illegal and deadly once again. On this issue they will never win," she said.

Asked if her announcement had anything to do with her candidacy and Ms. Smeal's challenge, she replied, "I am doing this...as president of NOW."

In the manner of incumbents everywhere, she replied to another question by saying, "I really would prefer not to answer that as a candidate, but as a president."

Ms. Goldsmith backers say she has been effective in developing grass-roots organizations throughout the country, preferring that quiet approach to large, public demonstrations designed to reap national headlines.

Ms. Smeal, a former two-term president who picked Goldsmith to succeed her, responded with a noontime news conference at which she said that whatever the issue, "We need to put more oomph into what we're doing."

"A false signal is being sent out not that somehow now is the time for quiet, behind the scenes negotiations. My question is with who? You can't nrgotiate with the right wing," she said.

Under Ms. Goldsmith's leadership, she said, NOW has waned.

"Is there a decline and is there no growth? The answer is yes," she said.

Ex-hostage to be credited for miles flown

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Trans World Airlines officials said Friday the airline has credited a former TWA hostage for the miles he traveled when hijacked Flight 847 was flown four times between Algeria and Lebanon.

Larry Hilliard, director of corporate communications for TWA, said Debra Toga, wife of former hostage Arthur Toga, had inquired about credit for the mileage under TWA's Frequent Flyer program. Mrs. Toga said Friday she had contacted the airline but did not recall asking about credit for the miles between Algiers and Beirut.

The program allows travelers to earn free trips by gaining credit for miles flown on TWA.

The St. Louis couple were aboard TWA Flight 847 when it was hijacked by Shiite terrorists June 14 while en route from Athens, Greece, to Rome. The plane was flown to Beirut, then Algiers, then Beirut, back to Algiers and back to Beirut, where it remains. Mrs. Toga was released in the first days of the crisis, but her husband was one of the 39 hostages set free June 30.

Hilliard said 11,000 miles would be credited to Toga's account for the trip, from Athens to St. Louis. He said he did not know how many miles were covered in the flights between Beirut and Algiers.

Credit would not automatically be given to any other former hostages in the program, Hilliard said.

"We are not going to go out and solicit other hostages to request mileage for this," he said. "We consider that in poor taste. If some other hostages call up and request it, we'll do it."

The issue was raised Thursday when a St. Louis Post-Dispatch columnist reported that Mrs. Toga had requested and received credit under the Frequent Flyer program for the miles her husband flew as a hostage.

Hilliard said records show a call July 12 from a Debra Toga saying she was a former hostage and asking whether the Arthur Toga account would be credited with mileage between Algiers and Beirut. Asked whether she had made such an inquiry during the call, Mrs. Toga said, "I don't recall that I did."

Gunfight breaks out in Beirut in violation of security plan

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A brief gunfight broke out Friday between Moslem militiamen — the first reported violation of the west Beirut security plan.

Negotiations to extend the plan to the capital's Christian sector were reported.

The Syrian-sponsored security arrangement was imposed at dawn Tuesday. Its purpose was to clear rival Moslem militias from west Beirut, which has been their battleground for a decade.

Syrian advisers are here to see that the plan works, and riot police backed by a special army unit patrol the Moslem sector.

Lebanon's 13 principal Moslem leaders, including the militia chiefs, agreed to the peace plan earlier this month at a meeting in Damascus called by Syria, which has become the real source of power in Lebanon.

Police said they sealed off the Tallet Khayat neighborhood Friday after gunmen firing from a speeding car wounded a Druse militia commander in the arm and provoked return fire from his bodyguards.

No other injuries were reported. It was the first officially acknowledged violation of the security plan.

The joint Lebanese-Syrian committee coordinating the effort to end the violence ordered militia commanders to investigate the cause of Friday's incident and report back.

Militia commanders, government security chiefs and Syrian advisers make up the coordinating body. They went to the scene of the gunfight, but police were in control and there was no sign of the gunmen who fired on the Druse commander.

The committee reported earlier that government authority was being effectively restored in the city's Moslem sector. Reporters have seen militiamen on the streets, however — in civilian clothes and without their standard automatic rifles, evidently carrying sidearms.

Battles continue daily across the three-mile-long line that divides Beirut into Moslem and Christian sectors.

Beirut's main newspapers, the independent An-Nahar and the leftist As-Safir, said preliminary negotiations were being held on including Christian east Beirut in the security plan in the next few weeks.

The ultimate goal, as expressed previously by both Lebanese and Syrian officials, is to end the 10-year-old civil war that has cost an estimated 100,000 lives.

An-Nahar said current efforts focus on selection of negotiators from both sides of the line.

Moslem leaders, whose growing community now makes up about 55 percent of the nation's 4 million people, want equal power with the Christians, who have dominated the government and economy since independence from France in 1943.

President Amin Gemayel, a Christian; most Moslem leaders, and President Hafez Assad of Syria favor all-party peace talks.

Moslem leaders insist, however, that Christian opponents of Gemayel's dominant Phalange Party be represented at preliminary negotiations.

They particularly want to include former President Suleiman Franjieh, who is pro-Syrian, and former Interior Minister Raymond Eddeh, who has lived in Paris since 1977.

Syria has supported previous peace efforts that failed, but this is the first time it has become a participant by sending advisers to see that its wishes are carried out.

In west Beirut, bulldozers and crews of city workers continued to clear the streets of sandbag ramparts that had protected militia offices and checkpoints.

Elephants reportedly killed for ivory

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ivory poachers are wiping out the elephant population in the Central African Republic, one of the animal's last strongholds on the continent, wildlife conservationists reported Friday.

Dr. Iain Douglas-Hamilton, a leading expert on the African elephant, said he and other members of an aerial survey team found a "catastrophic reduction" of the elephant population there over the past four years.

The survey, conducted in June by the World Wildlife Fund and the International Union for the Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources, concluded from its observations that a 25,600-square-mile northern region contained about 7,800 elephant carcasses and only 4,300 live elephants.

Douglas-Hamilton, a Briton who lives in Nairobi, said the evidence indicated at least half and possibly 75 percent of the elephants in the Bamingui-Bangoran and Manovbo-Gounda-St. Floris national parks had been killed in the past three or four years.

Most of the poachers are horsemen from Sudan and Chad who kill for the ivory tusks, he said. People who live in the area are believed to kill elephants for both ivory and meat.

The team estimated that the Central African Republic's total elephant population has been reduced from 80,000 to 15,000 in the past decade.

It also said the rhinoceros, relatively plentiful in the surveyed region until late 1982, appeared to have been virtually eliminated. The team's report said none were sighted.

The team said the upsurge in poaching stemmed from the reopening of the legal and lucrative ivory trade in 1981. It recommended that such trading in the Central African Republic be halted and that the government begin a major anti-poaching campaign.

"This is the first qualitative evidence of the collapse of elephant populations in the Central African region due to the overexploitation of ivory," Douglas-Hamilton said. "This is the endgame of a process happening in Sudan, Chad, the Central African Republic and Zaire."

Douglas-Hamilton said the African elephant is not in danger of extinction, but called its plight in the center of the continent "one of the wasteful mammalian tragedies of this century, primarily attributable not to human population growth but to human greed."

They found 220 tusks at the site, including many of relatively light weight that indicated a large number of young elephants had been killed, the report said.

Party protests candidate's lost

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — Members of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, taking a lesson from protesting opposition parties, have moved into the streets to protest the defeat of one of their candidates in the recent elections.

About 30 women waving labor union banners and flags carrying the Revolutionary Party, or PRI, insignia, briefly blocked traffic in front of the PRI offices Thursday on busy Pino Suarez Avenue.

The women, shouting, "We want Maria Elena Chapa in the legislature," organized to pressure the government into recognizing their candidate's triumph.

The women left peacefully after a meeting with Norberto Mora Plancarte, PRI delegate to Nuevo Leon state.

Of the 26 state legislative seats at stake in the elections, the PRI won 24 and the opposition National Action Party won two, one of which was in Ms. Chapa's district.

The protest was the first time since the elections that PRI members blocked streets to protest the results.

National Action, known as PAN, also lost the races for governor and for all 11 federal congressional posts in Nuevo Leon.

But the PAN refuses to recognize the official results and says PRI-organized voter fraud nullifies the elections.

Hemingway's son jailed for kicking restaurant door

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — Dr. Gregory Hemingway, son of Nobel Prize-winning author Ernest Hemingway, remained in Missoula County jail Friday after he kicked out the glass in a restaurant door after he was refused service.

Hemingway, 53, was sentenced to six months in jail after pleading guilty to misdemeanor criminal mischief. The incident occurred last weekend. Hemingway said he meant to kick the door, but didn't mean to break it.

Gregory Hemingway is the son of the late author and his second wife, Pauline. In 1976, his biography of his Nobel Prize-winning father, called "Papa," received high praise.

Hemingway has lived in Montana since the mid-1970s with much of that time spent practicing medicine in the small communities of Fort Benton and Jordan. He said he moved to Missoula about a year ago and has been working on several other books.

Jet lands after bomb threat

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — An Eastern Airlines jet made an emergency landing Friday at Will Rogers World Airport after airport officials said there was a call that a bomb was on board.

The jet landed safely about 3 p.m. CDT, and about 150 to 200 passengers were taken from the airliner, said Marcia Wolfe, who works at the airport information desk.

Air traffic control officials at the airport said they received calls from Kansas City, Mo., air traffic control, which said it received a call that a bomb was on board, according to Tom Morton, airport spokesman.

A bomb squad began searching the airliner, authorities said.

Oklahoma City police Detective Ken Smith said airport officials requested a bomb squad be sent to the airport.

Pittsburgh's meters highest

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh's downtown parking meters are among the most expensive in the country — up to $2 an hour.

"Our garages are charging $1.50, $2 an hour, but which would you park at?" asked George Charlton, executive director of the Pittsburgh Parking Authority. "The best space is the one right in front of the door."

Pittsburgh's meters cost twice as much as a long list of runners-up, including New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Dallas, Denver, Washington and Boston, the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette reported Friday.

Of the 25 largest cities, Phoenix, Ariz., has the cheapest meters at 20 cents an hour, the newspaper said.

Chrysler to recall cars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chrysler Corp. will recall about 129,000 imported cars from the 1981 and 1982 model years to bring exhaust pollution within federal limits, the Environmental Protection Agency said Friday.

The cars, made by Mitsubishi Motors Corp., Chrysler's Japanese affiliate, were sold in the United States as the Dodge Colt and the Plymouth Champ.

The EPA said its testing showed the 1981 cars were exceeding standards for all three regulated pollutants — unburned fuel, carbon monoxide and nitrogen oxides — while the 1982 cars exceeded the standard for carbon monoxide.

Repairs will depend on the car, the agency said, but dealers will adjust carburetors on all of them, change ignition timing on 1981 models and clean carburetors of the 1.6-liter engines.

Alleged killer pleads guilty

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — A teenager who pleaded guilty to the slaying of a woman who was bludgeoned to death and then buried in a backyard planter will spend up to eight years in an institution for juvenile offenders.

Steven Eloy Telles, 17, pleaded guilty to the May 1984 death of Eugenia Flores Baker, 60, of Costa Mesa.

Superior Court Judge William Thomson sentenced him Wednesday to a term of 26 years to life, but agreed to send him to the California Youth Authority instead.

McFarlane: Soviet IBM advantage not diminished

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new intelligence estimate reportedly indicating that the Soviet Union's SS-19 missile is less accurate than had been believed does not diminish the "massive Soviet advantage" in intercontinental ballistic missile warheads, President Reagan's national security adviser said Friday.

Robert C. McFarlane, briefing reporters on the round of arms talks that wound up on Monday in Geneva, was asked about a report in the New York Times quoting administration sources as saying that the new estimate indicates the SS-19 is too inaccurate to pose a threat to U.S. missile silos.

"I can't discuss intelligence reports," McFarlane said. "I think, just to talk hypothetically, the inference of the article is misleading. Misleading in the sense that the clear imbalance of prompt hard-target systems in favor of the Soviet Union exists without regard really to the SS-19's precise capabilities."

McFarlane said the Soviets' SS-18 missiles comprise about 3,000 warheads and make up "a very, very solid capability against our systems" and the Soviets are "at the point of deploying two additional systems, the SS-24 and SS-25, which will preserve a massive Soviet advantage in ICBM warheads."

"The point of the article, to the extent it implies a diminution of the problem, is just misleading," McFarlane said.

The newspaper said the new appraisal, differing from assessments by the Pentagon, is part of a secret report called the National Intelligence Estimate that is prepared annually by the Central Intelligence Agency.

The national security adviser also said he detects "a few signs that might ultimately prove to be promising" despite an overall failure to make progress during the second round of U.S.-Soviet arms talks in Geneva.

Lost items often found in the strangest of places

By GLENDA PETTIT

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — Somebody, somewhere, is walking around without his false teeth. He either lost them or misplaced them. The dentures were eventually found — way down deep, in the bowels of a couch — by a man who re-upholsters furniture.

Another time, a man either lost or deliberately left his pants — with the seat ripped-out — in the outside restroom of a sandwich shop.

Yet another time, in a bar in Sabine Pass, a woman misplaced something less tangible. Her marbles. The assistant manager found the woman — minus all her clothes — lying on the restroom floor, making ZZZZZs.

"I guess she thought she was home, so she took her clothes off," Dianne Weeks, assistant manager of Leo's Night Club, said. "It wasn't funny to her, but it sure was to us."

Most likely, almost everyone has lost something somewhere, somehow, sometime.

But some lost items befuddle the mind and make for interesting, if not amusing, browsing through lost and found departments of hotels, bars, restaurants, bus stations, taxi terminals and re-upholstery shops.

"Eyeglasses, I never have understood how or why, but most of the time, you never hear from the owner," said Dorothy Etter, manager of the Ramada Inn Motel in Groves.

"Their false teeth, they go off and leave those and that one I sure don't understand," she said.

Neither does M.H. Driggers, owner of M&M Furniture Upholsterers in Port Arthur.

He's the one who found the false teeth in the couch. "I don't know if he was drunk or what when he lost them," Driggers said.

Driggers was thoughtful, though. The dentures were never claimed, so he offered them to his employees. No one accepted.

The most unusual thing Phyllis Jackson, owner of the Blue Heron in Nederland, ever found in her club was "one shoe. It belonged to a female. You just wonder about things like that," she said.

Ms. Jackson said she often finds driver's licenses, too. And "that is something people do not come back for."

Some lost items are claimed by their previous owners. Others are not.

John Bicard, a driver for Yellow Cab of Port Arthur, has found wallets and marijuana cigarettes in his cab after a fare gets out.

"I throw that (marijuana cigarette) out right away," Bicard said. "I don't want the law to catch me with that."

And "No ma'am, nobody ever asks for them back," he added with a laugh.

Yet other items — once they have been perceived as missing-in-action — command lightning-speed attention by the person who misplaced them.

"Sometimes, people will walk off and leave their keys, sunglasses, cigarette lighters, and once in a great while, their purses," Bluet Humble, manager of Tater's in Port Arthur, said.

"They come back after the keys and purse very shortly, real quick when they get out to their car and they can't get in," he said, with a laugh.

Some lost-and-found items, particularly when they are found, cause speculation as to the actual circumstances surrounding the loss.

For example, Stephanie Stephens, co-owner of The Great Outdoors, a charter bus service in Port Arthur, said they once found a man's wedding ring on the bus after a chartered trip.

"Maybe he took it off to do a little flirting, I don't know," she said.

Although finding large amounts of "green" is something of a fantasy, reality says "you might find 15 cents worth of change from time to time," Ms. Stephens said.

James Bowen, a former driver and now a dispatcher for Yellow Cab of Port Arthur, would disagree with Ms. Stephens.

He once found a $100 bill on the floorboard by the side of the front side.

As luck would have it, the bill was claimed, so Bowen didn't get to keep it. Nonetheless, it was fun finding it anyway, he said.

Wallets, keys, flashlights, and an occasional shopping bag — full of "stuff" — comprise the bulk of what Willie Chetham, owner/ driver for Jet Taxi of Port Arthur, finds in his taxi.

Houston man gives 'elephant' to state agency

AUSTIN (AP) — C.G. Johnson of Houston has donated the 23,000-acre Elephant Mountan Ranch near Alpine to the state, the Texas Parks & Wildlife Department announced recently.

Department officials said the land was given to the TP&WD to be managed as a wildlife management area for the conservation and development of bighorn sheep and large game animals.

The department said it was the single largest donation ever made to the department.

Officials said the ranch, 20 miles south of Alpine on Texas 118 in Brewster County, is home to mule deer, pronghorn antelope and elk. They said the area is suitable bighorn sheep habitat and will aid the department's bighorn sheep propagation efforts.

The property includes a main residence, six other residences, two barns and corrals.

The department said the ranch, named after the 6,200-foot Elephant Mountain within its boundaries, would remain closed to the public until a management plan for its use can be developed.

Administration may not welcome famine aid from rock stars

By R. GREGORY NOKES

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — The spectacle of rock stars raising $55 million for famine aid for Africa cannot be a totally comforting one for the Reagan administration.

Rock singers and their influence over American youth were among the targets of some true believers in the Reagan revolution. It is dogma among many conservatives that the advent of rock music in the late 1950s became a destructive factor in American life.

A lot of Americans, not just conservatives, object to the explicit sexual message in many rock songs and their suggestions of permissiveness toward drugs, homosexuality and rebelliousness. But a lot of Americans don't.

Former Interior Secretary James Watt barred the Beach Boys from the official U.S. Fourth of July celebration in Washington in 1983 because he claimed the band attracted degenerate people. After a public outcry and pressure from Nancy Reagan, the Beach Boys performed at the event the following year.

The Beach Boys also performed in Saturday's Live Aid concert for African relief. But they were models of decorum compared to many of the performers. One popular singer was Madonna, who is featured nude in photographs in the current Penthouse and Playboy magazines.

The Live Aid concert in Philadelphia and London so completely dominated American television that it became apparent that not only were rock stars still solidly entrenched as a musical force in the United States but possibly as a political force as well.

John W. Sewell, director of the Overseas Development Council, said the success of Live Aid showed that "Americans with political savvy were surging way ahead of the government" in providing development aid for the global poor, just as Americans had earlier been ahead of their government in civil rights, womens' and environmental issues.

"For the first time in the development field, the equivalent of the nuclear freeze movement and environmental movement has taken charge," Sewell said in an interview. The ODC is a non-profit think-tank which focuses on foreign aid and global poverty.

Sewell gives the administration good marks in providing emergency famine aid to drought-ridden African countries, a total of $751 million so far this year. But he gives it poor marks in providing development aid to build roads and irrigation systems for long-term solutions.

The administration has slashed U.S. contributions to the most important international development aid program, the World Bank's International Development Association, and indicated it might end U.S. contributions altogether by fiscal 1988.

Sewell said the 1985 foreign aid bill of $15 billion contains only about $2 billion for development aid in low-income countries. The remainder he said is for politcial and security asssistance to friendly nations, with Israel getting the biggest single chunk. The share of American aid that goes to poor nations has steadily declined during the Reagan administration, he said.

In the Live Aid project, groups which had not performed together for years took the stage to help raise money for famine relief and develoment aid. Contemporary rock groups such as Duran Duran mixed with older groups such as Led Zeppelin. They were joined by folk-singers from the 1960s, such as Joan Baez, who played a prominent role in the anti-Vietnam War movement, the war Reagan refers to as "a noble cause."

The message of the lyrics had not changed very much over the years. Folk singers Peter, Paul and Mary were there. They now sing a song called "El Salvador" critical of past human rights abuses by the U.S.-backed government there.

The Who, in London, sang of the "new revolution." Bob Dylan, sporting an earring now, sang of injustice in America. A raucous duet by Mick Jagger and Tina Turner was heavy with sexual content.

The message of protest and discontent is not the kind of message the Reagan administration has stressed in its five years in office. The administration has focused on building patriotic feeling and returning to traditional family values.

The administration has said from the beginning that it wanted private groups to do more in providing aid. But it probably didn't guess that rock music groups would rise to the challenge.

The Reagan administration had little to say about the Live Aid concert. In England, Prince Charles and Princess Diana appeared as sponsors of the London performance, but there was no comparable administration role on the American side.

Irish singer Bob Geldof, who master-minded the project, declared he was overwhelmed by the multimillion dollar response to the concert, and predicted on Monday that the response would stir world governments.

"Pop music more than anything else expressed the emotion of the day and I think the message is finally, finally getting through (to governments)," Geldof said.

Nurse picked children who would be fed

BOSTON (AP) — Six days a week for six months, Betty Normandin walked among hundreds of starving Africans and picked the 50 thinnest children who, for that week at least, would get a gruel of corn, wheat and pea flour called "faffa."

"We couldn't take them all because we didn't have the resources," Ms. Normandin said on her recent return from Ethiopia. "It was easy to spot the ones who were really bad.

"But it was just really hard to step over the ones that weren't at that point yet."

The effect of the three-year drought in Africa came alive for the Watertown nurse the first morning she awoke in Gewha, a mountain village of several thousand people in the Shoa region of Ethiopia.

She and three other nurses were assigned there by the relief arm of the National Council of Churches to set up a supplemental feeding program for 14 mountain districts parched by drought.

As a nurse in the cardiac surgical unit at Boston's Children's Hospital, Ms. Normandin saved lives using sophisticated equipment. As a volunteer in famine-plagued Ethiopia, she had only food to keep death at bay.

"We went out the first morning and there were just thousands of them crowding around because we were white," she said. "They were taking their babies and throwing them at us. They'd be on the ground grabbing you on the ankle and kissing your feet and just saying, 'help me.'"

The scene was repeated almost daily as the nurses worked to set up a system to provide emergency rations to those whose body weight was 80 percent or less than normal for their size.

Once a week, on an assigned day, residents of each of the 14 kebeles, or villages, would bring their children to Gewha in hopes of receiving the bracelet that identified those entitled to food.

"Some of them would come from 25 or 30 kilometers away. Some would take eight hours, some would take days to get there," she said. "A lot of them you wanted to pick, but they weren't quite skinny enough. Yet you always knew that if you didn't take them, you would send them home and chances were they wouldn't make it back the next week."

The food was meant to supplement a regular monthly allocation of 15 kilos, about 33 pounds, of grain per adult distributed by Ethiopia's Relief and Rehabilitation Commission.

But Ms. Normandin said fuel shortages and other problems frequently prevented the basic survival rations from reaching the remote mountain region.

Ms. Normandin said she saw several children die of starvation while she was in Ethiopia, but she also saw many others go from near-skeletons to healthy children.

"I've seen some awful-looking kids turn out fine," she said. "But what bothers me is, how long is it going to stay that way?"

Salt mines hold wastes

Some toxic wastes in West Germany are disposed of in bricked-up caverns in old salt mines whose formations have been stable for 250 million years and are presumbly immutable for eons more, National Geographic reports.

Texas Vietnam vets holding reunion

TYLER (AP) — Three helicopter gunships landed at the East Texas Fairgrounds Friday, marking the beginning of a three-day reunion of Texas Vietnam veterans marking the 10th anniversary of the end of the war.

Organizers of the reunion said they expected about 2,000 veteran to attend.

Brian Taber, second vice commander of AMVETS Post No. 68, said the reunion is the first of its kind.

"There's never been a reunion like this in Texas," Taber said. "Once we learned about 950,000 Vietnam veterans were residing in Texas, we thought this would be great."

A candlelight ceremony in honor of those still missing in action was held Friday night at a half-sized replica of the Vietnam Memorial, which made its national debut in Tyler in October.

One-hundred sixty-two candles representing 162 veterans missing in action in Vietnam were lit during the ceremony.

The 250-foot long, six-foot high traveling memorial was brought back to Tyler from Anchorage, Alaska, for the reunion.

The reunion will also include the initial meeting of the Alliance of Vietnam Veterans Organizations, which brings together the commanders of 26 Vietnam veterans groups statewide.

A tiger cage where the Viet Cong kept American prisoners will be on display and the Gold Star Mothers in Tyler will prepare a meal similar to that eaten by prisoners of war in Vietnam.

Shell to buy ARCO stations

HOUSTON (AP) — Shell Oil Co. has signed a purchase agreement for an undisclosed amount with the Atlantic Richfield Company to buy about 400 service stations in eight northeastern states and the District of Columbia, officials announced Friday.

Shell will take possession of most of the stations Oct. 30 and will close on the remainder Dec. 2, officials said. Conversion to Shell operations will take place within 30 days after closing, officials said in a written statement.

The 400 stations are located in Connecticut, Delaware, Maryland, Massachusettes, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Virginia and Washington, D.C.

Firm to restore goddess

AUSTIN (AP) — Roy Graham, architect of the Capitol, said Friday a contract has been awarded to Washington University Technology Associates, Inc., of St. Louis to handle the first phase of restoring the Goddess of Liberty on the Capitol dome.

In a preliminary report last year, General Manager Patrick Rice of Technology Associates said the 97-year-old statue had deteriorated because of exposure, pollution and sandblastings in the 1950s and 1968.

Rice's proposal calls for the erection of scaffolding to inspect all the cracks in the 19-foot statue and for analysis of specimens of the alloy. The project is expected to take two months.

UTD denied new school

AUSTIN (AP) — Officials of the University of Texas at Dallas say they are disappointed at the rejection of their request for a separate engineering school, but glad their plan to offer engineering degrees through another department has been approved.

Following the recommendation of their staff, members of a Texas College and University Coordinating Board committee turned down UTD's request for the new engineering department.

The staff opposed the plan because they said it still lacked solid financial support.

But the committee voted 8-7 to let UTD offer engineering degrees through its School of Natural Sciences and Mathematics.

Ortega: U.S. terrorist because it supports rebels

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Daniel Ortega said Friday that Nicaragua is not helping plan attacks on Americans in Honduras, as Washington claims, and the United States is terrorist because it supports anti-Sandinista rebels.

He spoke to hundreds of thousands of cheering supporters gathered in the capital's main plaza to mark the sixth anniversary of the Sandinista victory that toppled the conservative government of President Anastasio Somoza.

"Nicaragua does not support or provoke or encourage terrorism," he said, and challenged the United States to prove its allegation in the International Court of Justice. He accused the Reagan administration of practicing "state terrorism" through its aid to rebels fighting his left-wing government.

"Who blew up the fuel depots in Corinto, who mined the ports? Who bombed Sandino Airport? Who are the terrorists? The government of the United States or the Nicaraguan people?" he asked the crowd, which he estimated at 500,000.

His remarks referred to several major attacks that the rebels, also known as Contras, have mounted over the past three years on Nicaraguan targets.

Nicaragua went to the International Court of Justice with charges that the United States violates international law by supporting the Contras. The Reagan administration has said it would not recognize the World Court's jusrisdiction in the matter.

Many people came in buses and trucks from outlying provinces to hear Ortega speak in the plaza near Lake Managua. They chanted Sandinista slogans — "No pasaran!" (They shall not pass!) and "Aqui, alla, el Yanqui morira" (Here, there, the Yankee will die).

Eleven Soviet helicopters flew past the plaza, armed with six rockets each in pods of three.

Unlike previous years, when top officials from leftist or Third World countries came to Managua for the anniversary, only minor foreign officials attended Friday's ceremony.

The Sandinistas came to power after a revolution that ended 42 years of rule by members of the rightist Somoza family, who were supported by the United States.

Tension between the United States and Nicaragua has risen in recent months. The Reagan administration has accused the Sandinistas of jeopardizing peace and security in Central America by establishing close military ties with Cuba and the Soviet Union. It imposed a trade embargo against Nicaragua last spring.

Sandinista officials have repeatedly accused the United States of preparing to invade the country and have moved army tanks into parts of the capital.

Ortega accused the United States of being "intransigent" and "arrogant." He said U.S. analysts at the Pentagon mistakenly believed that toppling the Sandinistas "would be as easy as hitting a drunk on the head."

Even so, he said, Nicaragua is willing to pursue a negotiated peace under the auspices of Latin American nations and through direct talks.

The United States broke off bilateral talks in January, after nine sessions. U.S. officials said the negotiations, held in Manzanillo, Mexico, were leading nowhere.

On the eve of the anniversary, the Nicaraguan government revealed the Spanish text of a diplomatic note from the United States that accused the Sandinistas of supporting plans for terror attacks against U.S. citizens in Honduras, and said it will hold Nicaragua responsible if any occur. The State Department issued an English text in Washington.

U.S. Ambassador Harry Bergold presented the note on Wednesday. He left on Thursday for a vacation in the United States, with a minor embassy official designated to represent him at the anniversary celebration.

The note said another incident such as the killing of four U.S. Marines and two other Americans in El Salvador on June 19 would have serious repercussions. "The patience of the U.S. government and of the American people has grown short," it said.

In the note, the United States said Nicaragua supports leftist groups in El Salvador, including one that claimed responsibility for the June 19 attack, in which gunmen fired into a sidewalk cafe. The Mardoqueo Cruz Urban Guerrilla Commandos claimed responsibility for the attack and said others on U.S. military personnel would follow as part of the 5½-year war against the U.S.-backed Salvadoran government.

In a reply to the note, the Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry said Thursday, "Nicaragua categorically rejects the contents and the form of this missive, which contains false accusations, intolerable threats and is a violation of the form and manner of relations among states."

Treasurer: Economy still crisis

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog says "new obstacles" have appeared in Mexico's fight to bolster its struggling economy but that the government will not change its overall economic strategy.

The financial blueprint followed since 1982, he said, "is the correct one. There's no better one. If it existed, we would have chosen it."

But he said in a speech Thursday to a celebration marking the birth of national hero Benito Juarez that "the crisis has not been overcome."

Mexico owes some $94 billion in foreign debts, the second highest in the developing world after Brazil.

The nation has been regarded as a model of debtor countries in working to reshape its economy and make timely payments of interest costs on its debts.

But its efforts this year have weakened somewhat, hindered by falling demand for its oil, sluggish sales of its non-oil exports, a shaky currency, and high inflation and government spending.

Silva Herzog, without giving specifics, said, "New obstacles have appeared — some, through errors of instrumentation...others, of diverse external nature. Additional stones are in the road — nothing more."

Because of the changes, he said, the government has been forced "to carry out adjustments to what was programmed and to vary some planning of the econmic policy, without damaging the fundamental objectives."

The government, he said, "hasn't lost the road, neither are the additional stones insurmountable. There is confidence and security in our destiny."

Mexico depends heavily on sales of its oil to bring in foreign revenues to pay off its debts and buy needed imports.

Last week, the government slashed the price of its oil to foreign buyers in an effort to restore sales, but some analysts worried that lower costs would hurt its ability to pay off its debts.

William Rhodes, an official of Citibank who heads Mexico's debt coordinating group, said, though, that Mexico isn't expected to need new loans from banks and won't have to reopen debt agreements because of the oil price cuts.

Rhodes, speaking at Cambridge University in England, said falling interest rates in Europe and the United States have offset the decline in oil prices.

He noted that a one-point decline in interest rates saves Mexico an estimated $750 million in annual costs, while a $1 drop in oil prices reduces revenues by about $550 million annually.

In addition to cutting oil prices, Mexico last week devalued the peso currency on the tourist market. It earlier took steps to pare government spending.

Some analysts said that with these actions, the government is moving to reimpose austerity measures in an effort to keep the economy from tumbling into the steep downturn of just a few years ago.

Silva Herzog said the nation has "passed through three years of head-on struggle to overcome the crisis."

"We have obtained important achievements, such as braking hyper-inflation, avoiding greater unemployment and maintaining the productive plant," he said. "On the problem of the foreign debt, we have won time, room to maneuver."

Cloudy skies, hot weather to continue

From Staff and Wire Reports

The Permian Basin will continue to bake under partly cloudy skies today, with a high in the low 90s predicted by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. There's a 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms, and winds will be from the southeast at 5-15 mph. Tonight and Sunday will also be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. Tonight's low will be in the upper 60s, while Sunday's high will be in the low 90s.

Friday's high of 96 was 9 degrees below the record for the date of 105, set in 1981, while the overnight low of 70 was 8 degrees above the 1959 record of 62.

STATE

Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms, some heavy, developed over most sections of the state Friday.

Tropical moisture spilling northward, along with afternoon heating and a slightly unstable airmass, was mainly responsible for the shower and thunderstorm activity, the National Weather Service said, while a weak cold front stretched from central Kansas into central New Mexico.

Other than the storms and showers, skies were partly cloudy to cloudy across most of Texas.

Winds in the 5 to 15 mph range were from the south and southeast across most of the state except variable in direction over parts of the Edwards Plateau and northeasterly west of the Pecos.

The forecast for North Texas called for hazy and humid air with widely scattered mainly afternoon and evening thunderstorms through Sunday, with lows in the 70s and highs in the 90s.

West Texas should be partly cloudy through Sunday with widely scattered thunderstorms. Lows should range from the mid 50s in the mountains to near 70, with highs from around 90 to 102 near the Big Bend.

The South Texas forecast called for partly cloudy through Sunday, with a chance of thunderstorms mainly in the northern sections, with lows in the 70s and highs in the 90s.

NATION

Flash flood warnings were posted across much of the desert Southwest and the mountains of southern California Friday as developing thunderstorms raised the threat of heavy downpours.

Scattered thundershowers also extended from the Great Lakes across the central Plains to the central and southern Rockies, dumping as much as 8 to 10 inches of rain in parts of Nebraska.

MUGS to decide softball championships today

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Midland Red's Kim Williams (Division III) takes a cut at the ball during USGA regional tournament play this weekend at Ulmer Park. Play continues today with championship playoffs games starting at 8 a.m.

From Staff Reports

Three of the four divisions in the 1985 West Texas Class AA United Girls Softball Association regional tournament determined their championship pairings without any extra games.

Division III (age 13-15) almost did the same, but unbeaten Midland Blue came up one run short in extra innings in the final game Friday against Odessa Grey at Ulmer Park.

Grey scored a run in the top of the ninth inning and then held Blue to three up, three down in the bottom of the frame to force a three-way tie for first place.

Odessa Blue, which defeated San Angelo 27-6 in an earlier game, also finished Division III regular tournament play with a 3-1 record to force the tie-breaker.

To determine Saturday's pairings, the three teams held an odd-man out coin flip which Midland Blue won to gain a title berth. Odessa Blue and Odessa Grey meet at 8 a.m. today with the winner advancing against Midland Blue at 1 p.m. for the championship. Both games will be played on Field 3.

In other Division III games Friday, Odessa Blue pounded out a 15-2 victory over Midland Red, Odessa Grey defeated San Angelo 22-3 and Midland Blue downed Midland Red 12-4.

THE DIVISION IV (16-18) championship pairings were determined in the opening day of play when Snyder and Odessa each claimed victories over Midland and Andrews.

Friday, Odessa remained unbeaten with a 3-0 win over Snyder and the two teams will meet again today at 10 a.m. on Field 4 for the title.

Midland finished the tournament with an 18-10 victory over Andrews.

THE MIDLAND Blue team from both Divisions I and II managed to gain berths in their respective championship games.

In Division II (10-12), Blue, 3-1, will take on Odessa Red, 3-1, at 10 a.m. Friday, Odessa Blue posted a 6-2 victory over Midland Red, Odessa Red defeated San Angelo 23-7, Midland Blue edged out Midland Red 9-7, Odessa Blue ripped San Angelo 35-3 and Odessa Red defated Midland Blue, in a championship preview, 11-6.

The Division II title game will be played on Field 2.

Odessa moved into the Division I (7-9) title game with an unbeaten record, 3-0, while Midland Blue qualified at 2-1. The title game is at 10 a.m. on Field 1.

In Friday's action, Midland Blue pounded out a 39-7 victory over Midland Red and Odessa downed San Angelo 7-0.

Winners of today's title games advance to the national tournament next week in Big Spring.

For San Angelo, the tournament was a long and sometimes painful one. However, the Concho River kids are only in their first year of play so this tournament is looked upon as a learning experience from which they can someday build a respectable program.

Basin nines suffer losses

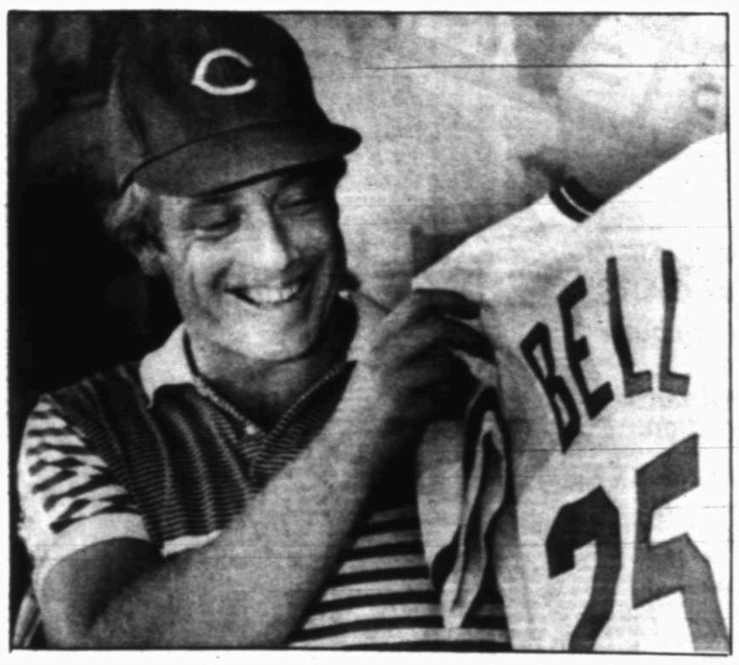
From Staff Reports

Permian Basin teams had their problems in the opening round of the 1985 Regional Amateur Softball Association Girls 12 & Under Fast Pitch Tournament at the Bill Williams Complex in Hogan Park.

The Midland Maniacs, the only Tall City representative in the state-wide tournament, were knocked into the loser's bracket by the LaPort Lions, 26-3. Odessa's Kentucky Fried was also a first-round loser, dropping an 11-1 decision to the Irving Panthers.

The tournament, a double elimination format, is being played to determine the Region VII (Texas) representative to nationals on Aug. 8-11 in St. Louis. The top two teams in each of the 15 regionals advances to nationals.

In other first round games Friday, Texas City Illusions defeated Spring Klein Royals, 7-5; Live Wires of Spring downed Arlington Stars, 11-6; Cy Fair Fillies beat Everman Destiny, 11-5; Alvin Bayou Babes ripped Pasadena Wildcats, 11-2; Houston Cyclones edged Irving Angels, 9-8; and Richland Wildcats routed Freeport Recreation Association, 11-1.



Buddy Bell...all smiles after trade.

Buddy Bell's dream comes true

Becomes a Redleg, just like his dad

BY JOE KAY
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Third baseman Buddy Bell nervously donned a Cincinnati Reds' jersey bearing the number of his father Friday and said it felt like living a dream.

The Reds obtained Bell, 33, from the Texas Rangers on Friday for outfielder Duane Walker and a player to be named later. The other player is expected to be a minor-league pitcher.

Bell, who grew up in Cincinnati watching his father Gus play for the Reds, arrived at Riverfront Stadium for a pre-game news conference and admitted he was a little uneasy.

"Dreams do come true sometimes. When they do, it makes you a little nervous," Bell said.

Bell, a lifetime .284 hitter in 13 seasons with the Cleveland Indians and the Rangers, will take over the Reds' third-base job. Player-manager Pete Rose said the return home should help Bell crack a slump that's dropped his average to .236.

"There's no pressure on Buddy," Rose said. "There are 74 games left. He doesn't have to knock in 80 runs. He just has to go out and do day-in and day-out what he did at Texas. He's not the only star here. There's no pressure on him."

Bell got the No. 25 worn by his father, who played for the Reds from 1953-61 and is in the Reds' Hall of Fame.

Bell was born in Pittsburgh but grew up in Cincinnati, attending Moeller High School and Xavier University, and later Miami University in Oxford, Ohio.

Bell, a right-handed hitter, has won six consecutive Gold Gloves and is a five-time All-Star. He had asked for a trade from the Rangers.

The third baseman flew to Cincinnati on Thursday and agreed to contract terms with the Reds. The trade unexpectedly was held up until Friday afternoon by Commissioner Peter Ueberroth's office, after Rose already had told Walker about the trade.

"I think their major concern was that they didn't know who was involved," Reds General Manager Bill Bergesch said of the last-minute snag. "And they wanted to be sure that Texas got a fair deal."

Terms of Bell's new contract weren't announced, but the Reds said it would keep him in Cincinnati through the 1988 season. He reportedly made $600,-000 a year under his contract with the Rangers.

"Buddy Bell should have been here a long time ago," Reds owner Marge Schott said. "This shows the commitment we have to getting that pennant, and this guy is going to help us do it."

Savage wind scatters British Open hopes

BY BOB GREEN
Associated Press

SANDWICH, England — A savage, howling wind swept Christy O'Connor Jr. out of the lead, Jack Nicklaus out of the tournament and turned the 114th British Open into what one contender called "an open house."

"I'm not even thinking about winning. Not now. Too many holes left, too many players close," said Sandy Lyle after he'd tied David Graham for the lead Friday in the second round of golf's oldest championship.

"Bit of an open house, isn't it?" Lyle asked after a look at the standings of the leaders.

It was, indeed.

The dozen players within two strokes of the lead going into Saturday's third round were a mixed bag that included representatives from England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales, a stray from Zimbabwe, three Australians (one a transplant), a West German, a Spaniard (but not the defending champion) and one lone American.

THE WEATHER was the principal factor. It was windy in the afternoon, very, very windy.

And it was worse in the morning. The morning winds were accompanied by cold temperatures and driving rain.

"The guys who played this morning got the raw end of the deal," said Graham, an Australian now living in the United States. He, like Lyle, had a 1-over-par 71 in the afternoon and finished two trips over the Royal St. George's Golf Links in 139, 1-under.

Nicklaus was among the unfortunates with an early starting time. He played in the worst of the weather — and didn't play well enough.

Nicklaus, holder of 17 major professional titles including three British Open crowns, struggled to a 75 and had a 152 total.

That's 12-over-par and three shots higher than the score necessary to qualify for the third round.

It provided Nicklaus with two negative firsts. It was the first time the 45-year-old Golden Bear had missed the cut in the British Open since making his first appearance in 1962. Last month he missed the cut in the U.S. Open and now, for the first time, has missed the cut in consecutive majors.

IS THIS, he was asked, significant?

"It's significant only because I haven't done it before," Nicklaus said. "I'm disappointed because I came in feeling up, thinking I was going to win the golf tournament."

Seve Ballesteros, the Spaniard who is the defending champion, also played in the wind-driven rain of the morning and shot a 74. He just made it at 149.

Can he still win from 10 shots back?

"If I play early in the morning, the weather is beautiful, I shoot a 65 and a big, bad thunderstorm comes up in the afternoon, maybe so," he said.

D.A. Weibring, runner-up in the Tournament Players Championship earlier this season, had a 71 and was tied at 140, a single shot off the lead, with O'Connor and Tony Johnstone of Zimbabwe. O'Connor, the Irish product who led the first round with a 64, went 12 shots higher to 76. Johnstone shot 72.

NASTERS champion Bernhard Langer of West Germany led the group at 141, two shots back. Also at 1-over-par were Australians Peter Senior and Wayne Riley, Robert Lee and Howard Clark of England, Ian Woosnam of Wales and Emilio Rodriguez of Spain.

Langer closed up with a 69. Rodriguez and Riley matched par 70. Clark, Woosnam and Senior had 71s. Lee shot 73.

Of the 12 leaders, only Senior, Lee and Langer played in the morning.

And of the 12, only Langer and the veteran Graham have positive experience in the majors. Langer, of course, won the Masters early this year, and twice has been runner-up in the British Open, including the last time it was played at Royal St. George's.

"I am very confident about my game over the next two days. I think I can win," Langer said.

Graham, 39, a former winner of both the U.S. Open and the PGA, was a little more cautious.

"I'm driving the ball well. I'm confident about the way I'm playing. I'm happy with the way I'm playing. But we'll just have to wait and see," said Graham, who one-putted nine times and dropped par-savers of 20 and 30 feet.

He kept the round together with a spectacular par-5 on the 14th, where he drove into the deep rough, moved the ball only 15 feet with his second shot and was still in the rough, played out short of the canal, then hit a 1-iron fourth shot to the green and made the 30-footer.

"Very, very lucky there," he said.

Chi Cubs jump the gun on Series

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Cubs announced Friday that if the ballclub qualified, it would not play its World Series contests at home "because of the light situation in Wrigley Field," the last major league ballpark without lights.

General Manager Dallas Green said in a letter sent to season ticketholders that "it is also possible" the team's home dates in any National League Championship Series would be move elsewhere.

The Cubs currently are appealing to the Illinois Supreme Court the constitutionality of state and city laws that effectively ban night baseball at Wrigley Field.

Earlier this year, Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth informed the ballclub and its owners, Tribune Co., that ABC-TV, which will televise some post-season games, had decided to exercise an option in its contract with league owners to have all such games played at night.

Ueberroth did not specify lights as a solution to the problem in his letter.

He later urged the ballclub to seek a compromise with neighborhood groups that have opposed the installation of lights at the 70-year-old ballpark, citing noise and traffic problems.

Rosie Jones of Albuqueruqe blasts out of trouble in Boston Five Classic at Danvers, Mass.

Jones retains lead

Rosie fires another 69

DANVERS, Mass. (AP) — Rosie Jones shot her second consecutive 69 and led after two rounds of the $225,000 LPGA Boston Five Classic by one stroke over Marta Figueras-Dotti, who equaled the course record of 65 Friday.

"I really played pretty consistent golf the last two days," said Jones, who had a 6-under-par 138. "I only had two or three bogeys. I'm just putting well."

Figueras-Dotti, who was 5 under par on the back nine of the par 72, 6,008-yard Tara Ferncroft course, has been anything but consistent.

"I was a little frustrated yesterday (Thursday) with a 74 because I hit the ball too well for a 74. I couldn't get the speed of the greens ... I did work on it last night."

The Spaniard, who tied the tournament and course record set last year by defending champion Laurie Rinker, added, "I haven't shot in the 60s in a while. It feels good."

She nearly broke the record with an eagle on the 479-yard 18th hole, but her 9-iron shot stopped three inches from the cup.

Jones and Figueras-Dotti both are seeking their first tour victories.

So is first-day leader Laura Baugh. She shot a 67 Thursday but had a 10-stroke turnaround Friday with a 77 that left her at even par 144.

"I don't recall ever being as uncomfortable on the golf course," she said. "I can't understand why. I hit the ball on the practice tee as well as I ever hit it. On the practice green, I made every putt."

Figueras-Dotti's 139 was one stroke better than Rinker and Jane Geddes. Rinker shot a 69 Friday and Geddes had her second 70.

Judy Clark, the runner-up last Sunday at the U.S. Women's Open, and Donna Caponi, the 1981 champion here, were at 141.

Caponi shot 70 Friday. Clark's 6-under-par 66 was the second best round of the day and included one of the two holes-in-one for the round and the third of the tournament.

Clark's ace came with a 7 iron on her third hole, the 150-yard 12th.

Sandra Palmer got Friday's other hole-in-one with a 5 iron on the 158-yard 16th. She had a 73 Friday for 148. Baugh had a hole-in-one with the same club on the same hole Thursday.

It's the second time this year that LPGA golfers have made three aces in one event.

Rookie paces Q-Cities

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Rookie Bob Tway shot a 3-under-par 67 Friday to take a 1-stroke lead after the second round of the $300,000 Quad Cities Open Tournament.

Tway, 26, of Edmond, Okla., birdied five holes and bogeyed twice to finish the round with a 3-under-par 67, giving him a two-round total 131, 9 under par at the tournament's midpoint.

Tway, who joined the PGA tour full time this year and has won $39,000 so far, shared the lead after Thursday's opening round with Steve Jones, also 26. The two, who competed against each other in college, both had shot 6-under 64s.

Jones, on a second-round par-70, fell to 134 and a three-way tie for fifth place with John Mahaffey, runner-up of last weekend's Anheuser-Busch Classic, and David Eichelberger, who hit a hole-in-one during Thursday's play.

Tway, who won only $1,719 last year, said his game suffered Friday because he was in the last group to begin play — a two-some behind the day's trios.

"We tried walking as slow as we could but it wasn't enough," he said. "If you get to the sixth (hole) tee and there's three groups on the tee (in front of you), you just have to wait, and it bothers your concentration."

One stroke behind Tway, at 132, were defending Quad Cities Open titleholder Scott Hoch (who also won here in 1980) and Brett Upper, both of Orlando, Fla.

Each said his game Friday on the 6,514-yard Oakwood Country Club course was helped by rain that fell most of day, slowing down the greens.

Upper shot a 64 Friday to add to his first-round 68, while Hoch shot a 65 atop his opening-round 67.

In fourth, two strokes off Tway's pace, was 24-year-old Jay Delsing of St. Louis, who joined the Professional Golfers' Association tour this year.

Forty-one entrants, including Jack Nicklaus Jr., son of the legendary all-time PGA money-winner, failed to make the halfway cut and could not continue with the tourney's final 36 holes this weekend.

Nicklaus, 23, shot a 3-over-par 73 for a two-day total of 148 — 8-over par. Golfers with a 1-over 141 or better continue for the final 36 holes.

Nicklaus' father, meantime, suffered the same fate Friday as the son — failing to make the cut at the auspicious British Open in Sandwich, England.

Upper, who has won $73,000 this year compared with $37,700 from two previous years of PGA touring, posted five straight birdies on the back nine to finish his second round tied with Hoch for second place.

Upper bogeyed the 18th hole to spoil a chance at tying a course-record 62.

"I was a little disappointed with the bogey on the 18th, but it was a good, solid round," said Upper, a pro since 1977 who only joined the PGA in 1983 after earlier failing to qualify for his pro card.

The second round also had the tourney's second hole-in-one, a 171-yard shot with a 7-iron by Texan John Adams on the eighth.

TED BATTLES

DeWit foe interesting

The LeRoy Caldwell that Willie deWit fights in Houston Aug. 7 has fought most of the big name heavyweights currently around, so he should give the former Olympian from Canada a stern test.

However, perhaps the most intriging aspect of the bout is that Caldwell recently fought Henry Tillman, whom deWit fought in the Olympics. And while Caldwell lost, it was by a decision.

DeWit's budding career as a pro is of particular interest to here, since Midlanders are among his financial backers...

It sounds as though the Chicago Cubs are trying to manufacture a little pennant enthusiasm with the announcement that the National League team will vacate Wrigley Field in the event they make it to the World Series.

With the length of their injury list, a pennant seems a remote possibility at best. And then there are a few other obstacles, such as the Mets, the Cards, the Expos, not to mention the Dodgers and Padres in the other division.

But, it pays to be prepared....

Bet you can't name the batter who has hit the most home runs in Major League All-Star games...a memory refresher? Well, there's Hank Aaron, Ted Williams, Joe DiMaggio, Willie Mays, Joe Adcock, Johnny Bench, Fred Lynn, Earl Averill, Hal Trosky, Harmon Killebrew....

Regardless of what you read in the newspaper, the NFL really hasn't started summer training. How could they? No story has moved yet on the the guy who should be starting at quarterback for the Dallas Cowboys. Let's see, it's been so long what were their names....Gary White and Danny Hogenbloom...

Although Mike Schmidt has hit 30 or home runs in six straight seasons, the record of nine 30-or-over seasons is held by.....?

Did the Rangers really get enough for Buddy Bell. At first glance, it doesn't look like it, but don't pass judgement too quickly. Remember, the Yankees, to get Johnny Sain, gave up a minor leaguer for him. The minor leaguer turned out to be Lew Burdette, who pitched the Milwaukee Braves to two pennants...And, then, not long ago, the Chicago Cubs landed Ken Holtzman from the Yankees by giving up an obscure minor league starting pitcher in Midland. Ron Davis isn't having much of a season this year, but he's had some fine years as a reliever for the Yankees and Twins...

Trivia answers.....Stan Musial holds the record for most homers in All-Star play with six and Eddie Mathews hit 30-or-more homers for nine straight seasons....

Dick Enberg predicted three of the four finalists at Wimbledon, but who would have believed that the one that kept him from being perfect would be John McEnroe....

If Florida bolts the SEC, it would try interest Miami and Boston College in forming another conference. Strange bedfellows indeed and would BC really want to get mixed up with a reputation like Florida's?....

North Central wins, 9-3

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — It took two-plus innings for the offensive attack to warm up and once it did there was no stopping Midland North Central as they went on to post a 9-3 victory over Midland Mid-City to gain a berth in the championship game in the Divsion III Little League playoffs here.

North Central pitcher Don Schroeder checked the Mid-City batters, holding them to three runs on four hits while striking out seven. Rick Posey took the loss in 2⅓ innings of duty with Matt Wyatt finishing the game in relief.

At the plate, Schroeder contributed to his pitching with a pair of singles for one RBI while Chad Thomas led the team's hitting attack with a 3-for-4 performance, including two doubles for an RBI.

For North Central, Posey collected two of his team's hits for an RBI.

Mid-City scored the game's first run, a lone tally in the top of the third only to have North Central ignited for three in the bottom of the inning, two in the fourth and four more in the fifth. Mid-City's final runs came in the top of the sixth.

The loss gives Mid-City third place in the tournament with a 2-2 record.

Tonight, North Central, 5-1, takes on unbeaten Midland Eastern, 4-0, at 8 p.m. at National League Park. An Eastern win and the tournament is over. Should North Central win, the if necessary game is scheduled for 8 p.m. Monday at National League Park.

Lloyd posts easy victory

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd downed sixth-seeded Gigi Fernandez, 6-1, 6-2, Friday in the quarterfinals of the Virginia Slims of Newport.

Second-seeded Pam Shriver, third-seeded Wendy Turnbull and unseeded Eva Pfaff of West Germany also advanced to the semifinals.

Evert Lloyd played better than she did in her second-round match against Hu Na, but it was Fernandez's erratic shotmaking that was the difference in the final score.

"I was disappointed in the way I played," said Fernandez, who pushed Evert Lloyd to three sets in their last meeting. "I gave up. I was trying, but my mind wasn't in the match."

In the last game of the match, Fernandez swung half-heartedly.

"She wasn't playing her best tennis, that's for sure," Evert Lloyd said. "I could sense her frustration. That last game, she really threw in the towel."

Evert Lloyd broke Fernandez three times in the first set and broke ahead in the second game of the second set. Evert Lloyd hit a perfect lob in the corner of the ad court to break Fernandez in the sixth game and then saved four break points on her serve in the seventh.

"When I lost that game, I said, 'Forget it,'" said Fernandez, who was returning after a five-week layoff because of a thigh injury. "It was frustrating. I didn't know if I could beat her, but on grass I thought I could do well."

Well, if there isn't a strike...

BY JOHN NELSON
Associated Press

The temptation here is to make an assumption that can't be made — that there will be no strike by major league baseball players.

—The St. Louis Cardinals and New York Mets would fight it out for the National League East title, meeting for the last time at Shea Stadium in a crucial three-game series Sept. 10-12.

"THE LOS Angeles Dodgers would slowly pull away from San Diego in the NL West, winning by perhaps as many as eight games, while the Padres struggled with none of the team speed that helped them win the pennant last year.

—The Toronto Blue Jays, New York Yankees and Detroit Tigers would make a three-team race of the American League East, while Baltimore and Boston fought it out for fourth place.

—The California Angels would hold off a September rush by the Kansas City Royals to win the AL West for the second time under Gene Mauch, only to lose in the playoffs, for the second time under Gene Mauch.

Such post All-Star Game speculations, while at the heart of the game's popularity, must be hedged this year against the very real likelihood of baseball's second midseason players' strike.

ONE SOURCE close to the owners predicted as long as two months ago that the players would strike. The reason for the prediction was that players see disunity among owners and an inability to withstand any lengthy labor action.

These predictions took on added credence after the union's executive board voted to set an Aug. 6 strike deadline. At that time, another source said some owners actually had encouraged the deadline to force the Player Relations Committee — the bargaining arm of the owners — to negotiate more seriously. If true, this would indicate disunity of the highest order.

The last strike, which cut seven weeks from the middle of the 1981 season, forced then-Commissioner Bowie Kuhn into some very unpopular scheduling gymnastics. The season was split into two halves, with the first-half winners going into a miniplayoff with the second-half winners to decide the division champions.

But since the last strike ended near or before the date this one would begin, a split season is not an option for 1985.

If a strike is brief, the season simply could be resumed. Some games would be lost, and the remaining schedule might have to be reworked. But right now, this might represent the most optimistic hope.

There are two more frightening possibilities:

—A strike is more lengthy, and the two sides do not come to an agreement until the eve of the playoffs. At that point, the teams that were leading their divisions when the strike began would be declared the winners.

Wohl meets with Nets

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Los Angeles Lakers assistant coach Dave Wohl on Friday held his second day of meetings with New Jersey Nets officials about filling the National Basketball Association club's vacant head coaching job, sources said.

Wohl, 35, had a morning meeting with Nets Executive Vice President Lewis Schaffel, the source said. Wolh also met with Schaffel on Thursday.

"I don't want to discuss it," Schaffel said when asked if he had met with Wohl. "I have tried like heck not to go into names. We have spoken to a few people and we plan to meet with a couple more in the next week to 10 days."

Wolf reportedly said the talks on Thursday were encouraging.

"It was a preliminary type meeting and I thought it went very well," Wolh said. "We discussed matter of philosophy and it was an encouraging talk."

Earlier this week, the Nets spoke with Boston Celtics assistant coach Jimmy Rodgers about becoming the successor to Stan Albeck, who left the Nets after the season to take a job as head coach of the Chicago Bulls.

Nets President Bernie Mann said that Rodgers remained a candidate for the Nets job, but sources said Rodgers probably would not get the job because he did not want to move his family to New Jersey, a condition the Nets want to new coach to meet.

Cruz docked for ducking showdown

LONDON (AP) — Joaquim Cruz, Brazil's Olympic 800-meter champion, was banned Friday night from his next two track meets in Europe after pulling out a scheduled showdown with Britain's Sebastian Coe, the world record holder.

Cruz and Coe, who took gold and silver medals, respectively, at Los Angeles, were expected to hold their first head-to-head clash since the Olympics at the Peugeot Talbot Games in London.

But the Brazilian withdrew at the last minute, sending the program into confusion and disappointing a capacity crowd of 16,500 at Crystal Palace stadium for the first day of a two-day Grand Prix meet.

Afterwards, Andy Norman, promotions officer for British athletics, conferred with Sven Hansen, organizer of the Bislett Games in Oslo on July 27.

The two men agreed to bar Cruz and the rest of the Brazilian team from the Edinburgh Games on Tuesday and the Oslo meet five days later, at which Cruz was to have competed in the Dream Mile.

Norman said Cruz had refused to run because he was annoyed that Coe had switched from the 1,500 meters to the 800.

"Cruz said he was not mentally prepared for a sudden change in opposition, yet said he was quite happy to run in tomorrow's 1,000 metres instead", said Norman.

"I told his coach, Luis d'Oliveira, that he would not be allowed to change, and that as he refused to go through with his commitment he and the whole Brazilian party would not be allowed to compete in the Edinburgh Games on Tuesday, or in the Oslo meeting next Saturday."

"The fact is Cruz agreed to run in the 800 meters. It was arranged before Christmas and there was no question of making any conditions on who would be in the race," said Norman.

Next week's Bislett Games, another IAAF-Mobil Grand Prix meet, is one of the most prestigious events on the European track calendar.

"I was neither mentally or physically prepared to run against Coe," said Cruz, who finished a poor seventh in a 1,-500-meter race in Nice earlier this week. "I wanted more notice."

All the changes in the program had followed a request by Steve Cram, who broke the 1,-500 world record in Nice, to skip the 1,500 meters here and run instead in Saturday's mile on the second day of the meet.

Once Cram's request was granted, Coe lost the chance of top-class opposition and asked to move to the 800, which upset Cruz.

Norman said that there could be no complaint about Cram. "He asked 24 hours in advance. He wanted more time to recover (from Nice) and was not refusing to run against anyone."

In the absence of Cruz, Coe won the 800 meters easily, turning on a great finishing spurt to come through in 1 minute, 44.34 seconds.

Injury may end Selmon grid career

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Tampa Bay Buccaneers defensive end Lee Roy Selmon said Friday that he has a lower back injury that could force him to miss the 1985 National Football League season or possibly end his career.

"Retirement is an option, but right now I'm looking at other alternatives," the original draft choice of the expansion Bucs in 1976 told a news conference at the team's training complex.

Selmon, 30, said he would announce a decision concerning his future Tuesday after spending the weekend "digesting" information gathered from tests conducted by doctors in Tampa, Oklahoma City and Los Angeles.

The six-time Pro Bowl selection said the injury originally was believed to be a muscular problem, but was later diagnosed as a herniated disc in his lower back.

He said he first noticed the pain in February after playing in the Pro Bowl in Hawaii, but was not certain if he hurt his back in the annual NFL all-star game.

The Bucs' concern about the 10th-year pro's status mounted after the problem flared up during the club's mini-camp in May.

Selmon said he doesn't experience constant pain, but that "certain things you do let you know something is not right."

Muncie gets good standing back in NFL

NEW YORK (AP) — Running back Chuck Muncie, suspended last year after failing a drug test, was reinstated Friday by National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle and then traded from San Diego to Minnesota, the league said.

Muncie must comply with a strict drug monitoring and treatment program in order to remain on active status, the league said.

Muncie was suspended last September after being traded from the Chargers to the Miami Dolphins. Traces of cocaine and marijuana turned up in his urine during a Dolphin physical. That nullified the trade, and Rozelle ordered a complete drug evaluation, then suspended Muncie.

The 6-foot-3, 230-pound back was ineligible to play his ninth NFL season and would have missed his 10th but for Rozelle's decision.

"We met recently with Chuck Muncie and reviewed all the factors in his case," Rozelle said. "We also reviewed the medical views of physicians involved in his rehabilitation and after-care program.

"According to the information available to me, Chuck has made substantial progress in working out his problems and establishing his true priorities while remaining drug free. He fully understands the consequences of further drug use, noncompliance with his program or any other conduct detrimental to the integrity of NFL football or public confidence in it."

San Diego received an undisclosed draft choice from the Vikings, said Pat Rogers, a spokeswoman for the Chargers.

"We have the data on his progress and are satisfied with it," Viking Coach Bud Grant said. "We don't expect to have any problems. He's shown he is capable of maintaining a straight course and we feel he can help this football team."

A team spokesman said the Vikings' newest running back is expected in camp Aug. 1.

"Although we are happy with our running back situation, when you have an opportunity to get a player of his ability, you do it," Grant said.

In 1983, his last full season, Muncie led the Chargers a fourth straight year with 886 yards rushing. He scored 12 ruching touchdowns and caught 42 passes, incvluding one for a TD.

In all, Muncie has gained 6,651 yards on 1,546 carries.

But he holed 20-foot putt par on the difficult fourth, then birdied the sixth from eight feet, the seventh with two putts and the ninth from 10 feet.

Expos' Smith blanks Houston, 4-0

MONTREAL (AP) — Bryn Smith fired a six-hitter as the Montreal Expos blanked Houston 4-0 Friday night, the Astros' third straight shutout defeat and fifth straight loss.

Smith, 11-3, allowed only three runners to reach second base en route to his third complete game of the year.

The Expos' right-hander struck out seven and did not walk a batter as he extended the number of scoreless innings pitched against Houston to 34 straight. Two of the three shutouts were by Montreal, with the other by New York.

Mike Fitzgerald broke up a scoreless tie with a double in the sixth inning and Vance Law and Tim Wallach each clubbed solo home runs in the seventh for the Expos. Law's homer was his fifth and Wallach hit his eighth.

Knepper, 8-7, pitched seven innings, giving up nine hits.

Reds 3, Phillies 2

CINCINNATI — Gary Redus dropped a soft double down the right field line with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning Friday night to score Ron Oester with the winning run.

Oester led off ther ninth with a bunt single off reliever Kent Tekulve, 4-5, and was sacrificed to second by Dann Bilardello.

Redus, who entered the game as a pinch-hitter in the seventh inning, looped an opposite-field double to score Oester and give the victory to reliever John Franco, 7-1.

The Reds scored in the first inning as Eddie Milner drew a walk, took third on Max Venable's single and scored on the first of Pete Rose's two sacrifice flies.

Reds starter Tom Browning singled to start the fifth and went to third when Mike Schmidt let Venable's grounder get through him for his third error since moving to first base on May 29. Rose's fly to center brought in the unearned run off starter Kevin Gross.

The Phillies tied it in the seventh and chased Browning. Jeff Schu walked, John Wockenfuss singled and Von Hayes doubled into the left-center field gap to easily score both runners.

Buddy Bell, acquired Friday from the Texas Rangers for Duane Walker and an undisclosed player, started at third base for the Reds and had one hit in four at-bats.

Braves 1, Mets 0

NEW YORK (AP) — Zane Smith has achieved his goal of becoming a member of the starting rotation for the Atlanta Braves despite the fact that he was not around at the finish as a four-game winning streak of the New York Mets was snapped.

The 24-year-old Smith allowed three singles, struck out three and walked two before giving way to Bruce Sutter, who registered his 16th save, with one out in the eighth.

"I was suprised when he (Manager Eddie Haas) took me out," said Smith, a 6-foot-2, 195-pound lefthander. "The hit by (Tom) Paciorek was a bloop and when I struck out Johnson, I figured I'd stay. Sure I was still strong, but he's the boss and I'm not going to create problems. It looks as if I'm in the rotation to stay and that's been my goal. They've been looking for a left-hander and I'm it."

Smith, brought up from the Richmond Braves late last season, has made eight starts since moving into the rotation and has compiled a very credible 1.47 ERA over that span. His win over the Mets was the first after two losses and his sixth victory in 11 decisions overall.

Gamble pays off for Valentine

DETROIT (AP) — Texas Manager Bobby Valentine calls himself "a hard-headed Italian" and his stubbornness helped the Rangers beat the Detroit Tigers 2-1 Friday night.

Valentine brought Dave Rozema in to relieve starter Burt Hooton at the start of the seventh inning but Rozema loaded the bases with two outs and Kirk Gibson coming to the plate for the Tigers.

Out bounded Valentine from the Texas dugout.

"I've gone out a couple of times with Rozie on the mound and left him in," Valentine explained. "I was watching his eyes as I walked out there. He couldn't take his eyes off Gibson. That's why I left him in.

"He told me he was mad and he wanted him. I sure would have looked bad if he'd hit him, though."

Rozema got Gibson to hit an inning-ending grounder to shortstop Curtis Wilkerson on the first pitch.

"I could see Gibby was hyped up," said Rozema, whose feet never stopped tapping as he talked to reporters afterward. "I figured the advantage would be mine in that situation."

It made a sweet homecoming for Rozema, who played his entire career with the Tigers — and who became Gibson's best friend — before signing as a free agent with the Rangers last winter.

"I respect those hitters because I know them so well," Rozema said. "I think they're an awesome team, so I didn't want to press.

"When I came off the mound I was pumped. Wow! I wanted to get it against those guys and especially that guy (Tiger owner Tom Monaghan) that flies around with that 'D' on his helicopter.

"I was here the whole week and this feels great. I just love this place."

Hooton, 5-4, scattered six hits over the six innings he worked, walking one and striking out three. Rozema earned his fifth save.

"Rozie pitched outstanding tonight," Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said. "He made a great pitch to Gibson."

Dan Petry, 10-9, gave up only four hits in his six innings. He walked five and struck out four for the Tigers, who have lost five of six.

Petry, Bill Scherrer and Aurelio Lopez held the Rangers to seven hits.

"Pitching is about 75 percent of the game," Anderson said. "If we didn't have our pitching, we wouldn't be existing.

"You don't count hits. You count runs scored and we're not scoring."

With two out and the bases clear in the first, O'Brien belted a 1-2 pitch into the upper deck in left field.

The Tigers tied it in the third when Lou Whitaker stroked his second successive double, went to third on a fly ball by Tom Brookens and scored on a sacrifice fly to center by Alan Trammell.

Gary Ward singled in the Texas fourth, stole second and scored on a two-out single by Geno Petralli for the go-ahead run.

The Tigers committed five errors, but none of them figured in the scoring.

Yankees 6, Twins 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Mike Pagliarulo and Don Baylor hit two-run homers Friday night as the New York Yankees beat the Minnesota Twins for their seventh victory in eight games.

Minnesota starter John Butcher, 6-9, gave up a double to Willie Randolph in the second inning, and Pagliarulo followed with a home run into the right-field upper deck to give New York a 2-0 lead.

New York made it 4-0 in the third inning. Ken Griffey led off with a walk, stole second, and advanced to third on a fly out. Dave Winfield hit a ground ball to third baseman Gary Gaetti, who threw wildly to home. Griffey scored and Winfield took second.

Winfield moved to third on an infield out and scored on Randolph's single to left.

The Twins scored their first run off Joe Cowley, 8-3, on a two-out home run to right by Randy Bush in the third inning making the score 4-1. Gaetti's leadoff homer in the fourth, his 11th, made it 4-2.

Baylor followed Winfield's single in the fifth with his 16th home run to make the score 6-2.

Mark Salas's two-run homer following a walk to Tim Teufel brought the Twins to within 6-4 in the sixth inning. It was Salas' third this year.

Brewers 9, Mariners 7

MILWAUKEE — Paul Molitor homered and stroked a three-run double, Ted Simmons had two run-scoring hits and Mark Brouhard added a two-run double to power the Milwaukee Brewers.

Leading 4-3, the Brewers broke the game open with four runs in the sixth inning. They chased Matt Young, 7-10, by loading the bases with one out on singles by Bobby Clark and Jim Gantner and a passed ball on Ernest Riles' strikeout.

Molitor then lined a double off reliever Roy Thomas, clearing the bases. Robin Yount followed with his third single of the game, driving in Molitor.

Molitor led off the bottom of the eighth with his eighth homer.

Singles by Yount, Cecil Cooper and Simmons gave the Brewers a 1-0 lead in the first inning. Milwaukee scored again in the third when Yount singled and Simmons ripped a two-out double.

Brouhard's double followed Bobby Clark's single and third baseman Jim Presley's throwing error on Jim Gantner's bunt for a 4-0 lead.

The Mariners came back with three runs in the fifth inning. Alvin Davis and Dave Henderson singled, then Presley struck his 21st homer of the season.

Four Mariner runs in the eighth chased starter Teddy Higuera, 7-5, who won his third straight game. Pinch-hitter Ivan Calderon's single and Al Cowens' sacrifice fly drove in one run each and Gorman Thomas' single drove in two.

Bob Gibson pitched the last 1 1-3 innings for his sixth save.

Angels 3, Red Sox 2

BOSTON — Dick Schofield belted a two-run home run and Brian Downing's bases-loaded grounder broke a sixth-inning tie Friday night as the California Angels defeated the Boston Red Sox.

Ron Romanick, 11-4, and Donnie Moore combined to hold the Red Sox to six hits. Moore pitched the ninth inning for his 18th save. Bill Buckner's two-run homer in the first inning drove in the only Boston runs.

Boston starter Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 11-8, went the distance and gave up only six hits.

Boyd breezed through the first two innings, striking out three. But Bob Boone singled with one out in the third and Schofield hoisted the next pitch into the left-field screen for his seventh homer, tying the score 2-2.

With one out in the sixth, the Angels loaded the bases on a walk to Doug DeCinces, a double by Jerry Narron and an intentional walk to Reggie Jackson.

Downing grounded to second baseman Marty Barrett, who bobbled the ball, losing any chance for a double play. Barrett's throw to shortstop Glenn Hoffman forced Jackson but DeCinces scored.

Dwight Evans led off the Boston first with a double. He scored two outs later as Buckner leaned into a 3-0 pitch and belted his 10th homer and first since May 30.

Boston's Wade Boggs singled in the ninth inning, extending the major league's longest hitting streak this year to 22 games.

In beating an East Division team for the eighth time in nine decisions, Romanick hurled the Angels to their fourth victory in five games, their eighth in 10 and their 12th in 15.

Sox 1, Indians 0

CHICAGO — Tom Seaver pitched a four-hitter for his 298th career victory and Carlton Fisk homered as Chicago edged Bert Blyleven.

Fisk hit his 24th home run, most in the major leagues, off Blyleven, 8-10, in the second inning. Blyleven allowed just five hits.

Seaver, 10-7, walked only one batter and struck out four in recording his first shutout of the season and the 61st shutout of his career.

Blyleven pitched his ninth straight complete game and his major league-leading 14th of the year.

It was Chicago's fourth straight victory and second consecutive shutout of the Indians. White Sox hurlers have blanked the Tribe five times this season.

Blue Jays 5, A's 1

TORONTO — Ernie Whitt hit a solo home run and Rance Mulliniks doubled and scored twice as the Toronto Blue Jays ended their four-game losing streak.

Jimmy Key, 8-4, gave up eight hits, struck out one batter and didn't walk any over 8 2-3 innings. After Mike Heath and Mickey Tettleton doubled in the ninth to break up the shutout, Bill Caudill got the last out.

Whitt's second-inning homer, his 11th of the season, gave the Jays a 1-0 lead and came off Don Sutton, 9-6, who suffered his first loss after six straight victories.

To determine the two-digit code for any letter of a Ticker Symbol, remember: The first key to be depressed is always the one on which the letter appears. The second key is always a "1," "2" or "3" indicating that letter's position on its own key (first, second or third position). EXAMPLE: "IBM" = "43 22 61"; "BX" = "22 92." Remember to depress the star key (*) after entering each code.

Cowboys' Brooks gasps for breath

BY JIM CARLISLE
Associated Press

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. — Kevin Brooks was out of breath after the Dallas Cowboys' morning workout Thursday.

The 6-foot-7, 262-pounder who'd just ended a four-day holdout was a little embarrassed about it.

"I had to run a penalty lap because I jumped offsides in a concentration drill we had," said Brooks, a first-round choice in the 1985 National Football League draft.

"There's always a lot of ribbing if you're a first-round pick, but it's all in good fun and I'm just happy to be here."

BROOKS, a defensive end from Michigan, signed a four-year contract Wednesday and reported directly to the Cowboys' training camp at California Lutheran College.

Brooks became just the fifth of the 28 first-round picks in the National Football League to sign a contract. His four-year pact includes an option by the team to renew for one additional year, according to his agent, Mike Trope.

"It's just that nobody wanted to be the first one to sign," Brooks said of the first-round picks who are holdouts.

"Since our training camp started early, I was at a disadvantage, so we had to go in and talk to (player personnel director) Gil Brandt and (president and general manager) Tex Schramm about what was going to be done. I mean it wasn't any specific reason for holding out, it was just that nobody wanted to be the first one to sign."

THE NFL appears to be taking advantage of the United States Football League's financial problems to cut back on salaries after two seasons in which competition for players drove overall salaries up more than 50 percent.

Most first-round picks have been offered less than their 1984 counterparts, thus few have signed.

In an unprecedented move of cooperation, agents for 19 of the top choices met two weeks ago in Chicago to try to come up with a unified plan to get NFL teams to increase their offers.

But Brooks said there was really wasn't any kind of conspiracy between the players.

"I don't know if you would call it a united front," Brooks said. "It was something that was just unspoken."

Dallas Coach Tom Landry, who assessed the penalty lap against Brooks, said he was happy to have his No. 1 pick in camp.

"Of course, I didn't watch him much today, but obviously, you're always excited when your first choice comes in because that's the guy who you thought was the best guy at the time you picked," said Landry. "It'll take him a little while to catch up. These guys are about four to six practices ahead of him right now and he'll try to go at their pace but he won't be able to for awhile."

Landry said the club was most attracted to Brooks because of his size.

"He is a tremendously big guy, almost 6-8, and he's big and he's fast and he's quick," the coach said. ""He's got all the physical qualities. Now, when you come into pro football, it's the mental qualities that determine whether you're going to be any good or not."

AT MICHIGAN, Brooks spent his freshman year as an outside linebacker and was then switched to defensive tackle, becoming a three-year starter at that position for the Wolverines. The Cowboys plan to try him first at defensive end.

He led Michigan last season with 13 tackles for losses and six quarterback sacks and was the Wolverines' fourth-leading tackler with 69. Brooks started the first four games of 1982 before being sidelined with a knee injury in a game against Indiana. He came back to start against UCLA in the Rose Bowl and was Michigan's second-leading tackler in the game with 10 stops.

Astros name minor chief

HOUSTON (AP) — Bill Wood, director of minor league operations for the Houston Astros for the past five years, was named Friday as the team's assistant general manager.

Wood replaces Andy MacPhail, who is leaving to become vice president of player personnel for the Minnesota Twins. Astros General Manager Al Rosen said MacPhail, who has been with the Astros since 1982, will join the Twins the first week of August.

Wood will continue to oversee the Astros' minor league operations, Rosen said. Before coming to Houston, Wood served as an assistant for the National Association, the governing body of the minor leagues.

Corpus Christi man outsmarts mosquitos

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — If it isn't about mosquitoes, Tex Villarreal isn't interested.

"I'm a single-idea man," said the 40-year veteran in Corpus Christi's never-ending war on mosquitoes. And city residents can be thankful for his obsession because the result is not even a single suspected case of encephalitis.

Villarreal is bringing a long career in vector control to an end this week when he retires. He has battled the carriers of yellow fever, malaria, typhus, polio and encephalitis.

Because of his efforts, Corpus Christi broke ground on some important fronts. It was the first city in the country to fog underground sewers in the fight against Culex, the St. Louis encephalitis mosquito. It is one of very few cities whose mosquitoes have built up no tolerance to insecticides because diesel oil, not chemicals, is used on standing pools of water.

Looking back over his long career, Villarreal's biggest puzzler was the Culex mosquito's hideout. In 1966, Corpus Christi had an outbreak of St. Louis encephalitis — 100 diagnosed cases with an estimated 40 undiagnosed cases for each of the 100 confirmed cases.

"IT WAS A major outbreak, but we weren't catching enough Culex mosquitoes to account for it," he said. Groups of scientists came here and trapped birds, looking for parasites, but they didn't find a sufficient quantity of virus in the birds' bloodstreams to account for the outbreak. They did identify the host as the English sparrow instead of the pigeon which had been previously suspected. Meanwhile, there were sleepless nights for Villarreal since the entire city was at risk.

"Virtually no one, unless they've had encephalitis, has any immunity to it, so that meant thousands of possible cases," he said. At that time, the only underground attack was periodic fogging of the sewer catch basins at each intersection. Somewhere swarms of Culex mosquitoes were hiding, and their secret nagged Villarreal. The next winter, he concentrated his Culex search on the sewers.

"The sewers are laid absolutely level, but what happens as the earth shifts is that little dams develop under ground,' he said. "That winter, I crawled down there. It would have been too dangerous in summer. As I crawled through, I found 100 adult Culex mosquitoes on the spot. The winds blow down there forever, and it's warm so mosquitoes have a perfect environment."

THIS DISCOVERY prompted Villarreal to make vector control history by fogging the sewers. This required a special machine since a combustion-engine couldn't be used because of the danger of igniting sewer gases. His goal was to break the life cycle of the Culex mosquito, but that couldn't be done.

"We've settled down to a set procedure; we fog every six weeks, and this provides a very satisfactory control."

Villarreal, who talks of his department's achievements in terms of we, is quietly proud of the fact that his department was ecologically ahead of its time. "We have only used diesel oil on standing water, so the mosquitoes have not been exposed to a chemical residue," he said.

Therefore, they have built up no tolerance to insecticides. During the heyday of insecticides, this reluctance was derided. Outsiders called the department the Model T of vector control, he recalled. "They thought we were real old-fashioned, but all the time we were doing the right thing. As a result, a small amount of insecticide is still effective here."

VILLARREAL'S ENTRY into the vector control business was accidental. A lifelong Corpus Christian, he had marched off to fight in World War II. But an accident during maneuvers sent him home with a leg problem and a medical discharge. Jobs open to disabled vets in 1944 included one in vector control with the U.S. Public Health Service.

MIDLAND SANITARY PLUMBING

RELIGION IN BRIEF

LDS bishop says families strengthening home life

Many families in the Midland area are taking steps to strengthen their home life, said Bishop John Johnson, leader of Midland Third Ward of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The church sponsors a family-strengthening program called "Family Home Evening" in which a family sets aside one night per week to meet and discuss important principles or participate in fun activities.

"The idea of this program is to improve communication and love among family members," said Johnson. "It really works. I've seen real progress in our family relationships since we started having a family night or family home evening."

Johnson explained that families often use this night to discuss how to use gospel principles in everyday living, or how to solve family problems. Activities might include lessons, sports, excursions, or a Scripture study. Refreshments are usually served.

"One important aspect is that all members of the family interact in a positive setting, where they can feel accepted," Johnson said. "Family members can develop stronger friendships in that situation."

To aid families in starting this program, manuals are available at a small cost. Those interested may call the church librarian, Alma Holst, at 694-4782.

Midlanders win competition

Midlanders Robert Dorn of Shekinah Glory Church placed first and Andrea Adkins of Wilshire Park Baptist Church second in the KKKK Christian Music Competition in Odessa in July.

Judges for the event were Mr. and Mrs. Mike Balok of KKKK. Chuck Enderson emceed the event.

Third place went to "The Gospel Review" an Odessa gospel group. Honorable mentions were awarded to "Shalom," a Midland duet, and Odessan Robert Blanco.

"The applause was sweet, the love of gospel music mutual and, by and large, we can be justly proud of the talent represented in the Midland-Odessa area," said fellow contestant Gary Trent of Greenwood Baptist Church who, along with his wife Ella and their children Angela and Christopher make up the Christian group "Pilgrimage."

"As contestants ourselves, my wife and I had the distinct pleasure of 'testing the water' having been selected to perform first, and although we did not win, we were thankful for the opportunity to play original music before a live audience. For this opportunity, I would like to thank, and I feel certain that others with original compositions feel the same, KKKK for providing the opportunity to be heard."

Church hosts speaker

John Bechtel was guest speaker in the Seventh Day Adventist Church for Saturday's morning worship service. His wife Evangelina presented a ministry in song.

The Bechtels, who live in Bakersfield, Calif., brought a report on the 54th World Session of the Seventh Day Adventist Church which convened in the Louisiana Superdome in New Orleans in June and continues through Aug. 6. In attendance at the session are 45,000 including 2,300 delegates from 184 countries.

According to the Bechtels, undergirding the Adventist world are nearly 25,000 congregations which provide more than $700 million annually in tithes and offerings.

Neal C. Wilson and G. Ralph Thompson were re-elected as president and secretary of the world church. The retiring treasurer, Lance L. Butler, is being suceeded by Don F. Gilbert. There were four generations of the Wilsons at the session.

Children and youth took an active part in the colorful, multi-lingual presentations from all corners of the world, said the Bechtels. Reports were presented from the world divisions and plans are already underway to Session '90.

LDS bishop appointed

Max Howard Jensen has been appointed bishop of the Midland First Ward of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He will be responsible for 360 members.

Like all leaders in the church, Jensen will serve voluntarily and without pay during the time he has free from his work as a division manager of Schlumberger of the West Texas division. His new duties will include giving spiritual guidance to local members.

Jensen and his wife Karen Lee have 10 children.

He will be assisted in his new church calling by David Keller, first counselor, and Kirk Spencer, second counselor.

The previous bishop of the Midland First Ward was Kenneth Gray who served for four years. His counselors were Darrell Call and David Keller.

Man to be ordained bishop

SAN ANGELO — The Very Rev. Michael Pfeifer will be ordained bishop of the Diocese of San Angelo Friday at Sacred Heart Cathedral.

The 48-year-old priest is the superior of a religious order of missionary priests known as the Oblates of Mary Immaculate in San Antonio. As the fifth bishop of San Angelo, he replaces Bishop Joseph Fiorenza who left Feb. 17 to become head of the Diocese of Galveston-Houston.

As head of the Oblates, Pfeifer's domain covered all the southern states, Mexico and Zambia, Africa, where he traveled two years ago to begin a mission. He also spent 16 years in Mexico City and Oxaca, Mexico as a missionary.

The Diocese of San Angelo is composed of 29 West Texas counties. Some of the larger towns include Midland, Abilene, Odessa, Fort Stockton, Big Spring and Brownwood. The bishop's office will be in San Angelo and his official church will be the Sacred Heart Cathedral.

Holy Communion slated

The Service of Holy Communion is being observed each Wednesday morning at 7:15 in the sanctuary of St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3011 West Kansas.

This celebration has become a regular part of the worship services of the church. "All who believe in Jesus Christ as their Lord and Saviour are cordially invited to this service of the Eucharist," says the Rev. Jarrell Sharp, pastor.

The service is concluded in time for individuals to be at their jobs by 8 a.m.

Communion service set

The Rev. Jean Pierre Meshew, archdeacon of the Diocese of the Southwest of the American Anglican Church, will celebrate Holy Communion for St. Paul's American Episcopal Church at 10 a.m. the first and third Sundays of each month.

Services are held in the chapel of Ellis Funeral Home. The 1928 Book of Common Prayer is used by the congregation for all services.

English services offered

Genesis Baptist Church, 306 N. Weatherford St., is reaching out to all English-speaking Hispanics by conducting services in English as well as Spanish-speaking services.

Sunday services include 9 a.m. in Spanish, 10 a.m. English and Spanish in Sunday School, 11 a.m. in English, 5:30 to 6 p.m. Brotherhood and WMF and 6 p.m. in English and Spanish. Wednesday a prayer and Bible study meets at 7 p.m.

The Rev. Oscar Bejil is pastor for Genesis, which is sponsored by La Primera Iglesia Babtista.

School accepts minister

The Rev. Jimmy Huff has been accepted by "Youth With a Mission" for language and Bible school.

He will be leaving Sept. 15 for Maui, Hawaii. After completing the language and Bible school, Huff said he will be ministering in the Samoa Islands, South Pacific.

Huff has made a request for financial aid. Those interested in helping Huff accumulate the $2,494 needed for the school and air fare may get in touch with him by writing Route 1, Box 123A, Stanton, Texas 79782.

The Main Street Church of Christ, North Main and Parker streets, is having its 30th Anniversary Gospel Meeting and Homecoming through Sunday.

Service times are 7:30 p.m. today and 10:30 a.m. and 3:40 p.m. Sunday. Also scheduled Sunday is an "Old Fashioned Gospel singing."

This weekend has been designated as Homecoming Week-End and many former members will be attending the sessions.

The public is invited to attend.

Institute halted by inaction

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Peace Institute, which Congress established last fall with backing of most major religious bodies, remains non-operational because of inaction by President Reagan, says a prominent United Methodist.

"What we need is something to put flesh on the bones," says James H. Laue, of St. Louis, chairman of the board of the National Peace Institute Foundation, which had shepherded the drive for the institute.

Although Congress appropriated $4 million for the institute's work this year, the president has yet to submit names for its 15-member board of directors to the Senate, leaving the institute languishing, Laue says.

The Newspaper BIBLE

THAT'S A GOOD QUESTION!

As Jesus was teaching the people in the Temple area, he asked them this question: "Why do your religious teachers claim that the Messiah must be a descendant of King David? For David himself said--and the Holy Spirit was speaking through him when he said it-'God said to my Lord, sit at my right hand until I make your enemies your footstool.' Since David called him his Lord, how can he be his son?"

(This sort of reasoning delighted the crowd and they listened to him with great interest.) (Mark 12:35-37)

Jehovah said to my Lord the Messiah, "Rule as my regent--I will subdue your enemies and make them bow low before you."

Jehovah has established your throne in Jerusalem to rule over your enemies. In the day of your power your people shall come to you willingly, dressed in holy altar robes. And your strength shall be renewed day by day like morning dew. Jehovah has taken oath, and will not rescind his vow, that you are a priest forever like Melchizedek. God stands beside you to protect you. He will punish the nations, and fill them with their dead. He will crush many heads. But he himself shall be refreshed from springs along the way. (Psalms 110)

Southern Baptist educators to preach at encampment

ALPINE — Two Southern Baptist educators will be the preachers as Paisano Baptist Encampment meets for the 65th consecutive session Monday through July 28 at the encampment grounds located near Paisano Pass, halfway between Alpine and Marfa on Highway 90.

The newcomer on the preaching team is Dr. Jesse C. Fletcher, president of Hardin Simmons University, Abilene. He is a replacement for the Rev. James Flamming, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Richmond, Va., who was not able to attend after having suffered head injuries as the result of a fall from a tree June 1.

Fletcher, president at HSU since 1977, has been involved with the Southern Baptist Convention throughout his ministry. He served with the Foreign Mission Board of the SBC for 15 years before coming to Abilene. The author of 10 books, Fletcher has led HSU to enrollment gains each year, and in a complete reorganization of the university around a core curriculum of a College of Arts and Sciences, and schools of business and finance, music, education and graduate studies.

Dr. Robert Naylor, president emeritus of Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, Fort Worth, will be preaching for his fourth year at Paisano. He, too, has served the Southern Baptist Convention in much of his ministry as a pastor, author and educator.

Naylor was president of Southwestern Seminary, the largest theological school in the world, from 1958-78.

Music will be directed by Ed Wittner, minister of music, Columbus Avenue Baptist Church, Waco. Wittner, who grew up in Alpine, will be returning for his fifth time as music director.

Organist is Nancy Russell of First Baptist Church, Pecos, and pianist is Mrs. C.S. Randall, Columbus Avenue Baptist Church, Waco.

This year's special emphasis will be on the "family." C.W. Brister and Gloria Brister will lead a Family Enrichment conference from 7 to 7:45 p.m. Tuesday through Friday. Brister is chairman of the Ministry Studies Division, Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary and the author of 10 books.

Camp missionaries will be Dr. and Mrs. Justice Anderson, who teach missions at the Fort Worth Seminary.

Bible study, led by the Rev. Virtus Gideon and the Rev. Alta Ada Williams, Signal Mountain, Tenn., will be available for all ages and the popular Day Camp for first through sixth graders will be lead by John LaNoue, consultant with Texas Baptist Men, Dallas.

An "Early Bird Worship Service" will be led by Jess Smith Jr., new pastor of the First Baptist Church, Alpine, at 8 a.m. Sunday.

The public is invited to attend the encampment.

The Life of Christ Pageant is located halfway between Cisco and Eastland, Texas on U.S. Highway 80.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Sunday, July 21, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Curb a tendency to act irritable and you will win new friends and customers. A parent-child relationship becomes more and more rewarding. Changes in the economy work to your advantage. You get a lucky break in October or December. Make the most of it! A change of environment improves both your health and your outlook. Profits rise. Put extra cash back into the business. A new business alliance gives you greater clout. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: actor-comedian Robin Williams, rock singer Cat Stevens, Cleveland Indians pitcher Rich Barnes, concert musician Isaac Stern, producer-director Norman Jewison.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You have a responsibility to yourself as well as to others. Give more thoughts to your own happiness. It is "now or never" where a vacation is concerned. Be realistic.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A child has something important to tell you. Make it easy for him or her to share confidences. An affectionate gesture sends your spirits soaring. You may be in love without knowing it!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Try not to take everything mate or partner says so seriously. A friend who goes from doctor to doctor could be a hypochondriac. Don't hesitate to ask someone to put out a cigarette.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A vacation spot may be too crowded for your taste. Good music helps you relax. Make friends with those who share your interests and goals. Teamwork means faster progress.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You feel more independent now. Put off someone who tries to conduct business while you are on vacation. Those at the beach should avoid getting too much sun. Take an afternoon rest.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take care of household bills before you go out today. Being too daring could prove dangerous. Accept a last-minute invitation or you could miss an opportunity to meet someone famous.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Refuse to be rushed into making a premature decision. You should not feel guilty about asking for more time to think things out. Romance makes everything you do more exciting!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Go ahead and blow off steam to a trusted relative or friend. He/she will understand and sympathize. Your sense of humor helps you keep your equilibrium. Devote more time to romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Trying to impress others by spending a lot of money will have the opposite effect. A business or marital partnership would benefit from certain changes. Be willing to compromise.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Make minor changes in your plans to accommodate a sibling or friend. Good ideas need time to mature. Refuse to let someone give you the runaround. Probe beneath the surface.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Narrow your choices before attempting to make a final decision. Although you may not consider yourself especially artistic, you do have a talent. Keep others in mind when making travel reservations.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Work to restore peace between battling relatives or neighbors. Choose recreational activities the entire family will enjoy. Be kind but firm with an aging parent. Love conquers all!

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

German Nobel laureate dies

MERTEN, West Germany (AP) — Writer Heinrich Boell was buried Friday in the Eifel hills near the family home where he died. The president of West Germany joined leading literary figures at the funeral to honor the Nobel laureate.

Boell, who wrote of the social problems of postwar Germany, was buried in a small cemetery outside the town of Merten. He died Tuesday of vascular disease at the Merten home of his son, Rene. He was 67.

Boell wrote of what he considered postwar Germany's single-minded obsession with material reconstruction after World War II, and intolerance toward non-conformity.

He won the 1972 Nobel Prize in literature. Some of his best-known novels included "Billiards at Half Past Nine," "Views of a Clown" and "Group Portrait with Lady."

About 180 mourners, including President Richard von Weizsaecker, attended a funeral service at St. Martin's Roman Catholic Church before walking about a mile to the burial site.

Boell's family and the mourners formed a funeral procession through the streets of Merten, a town of 3,500. A four-piece gypsy band played as the mourners walked in bright sunshine.

Boell's simple oak coffin was carried to his grave under a gnarled oak tree by writers Guenther Grass and Guenther Wallraff; exiled Soviet writer Lev Kopelev; Boell's sons, Rene and Vinzent; and his nephew, Christoph.

His ife, Annemarie, laid a myrtle branch in the grave, as the gypsies played accordion and guitar music.

The author's works provided a "warning voice" that made Germans recognize their responsibilities, said the Rev. Herbert Falken during the funeral service.

"Let him rest from his work and give him the peace that cannot be found on this earth," prayed Falken, a friend of Boell.

Boell left the Roman Catholic Church in 1979, but had asked Falken to give him a religious burial, and local hurch officials agreed.

Flags flew at half staff in Cologne, Boell's native city, and in Duesseldorf, the capital of North Rhine-Westphalia state.

Dutchman to lead Minnesota Orchestra

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minnesota Orchestra has engaged Dutch conductor Edo de Waart as its next music director, succeeding the British conductor Neville Marriner, who will leave his post in May 1986.

De Waart will join the orchestra in the fall of 1986, orchestra officials said Thursday.

De Waart, 44, has signed a four-year contract with the orchestra which calls for him to conduct 10 to 12 weeks of concerts during his first season and at least 16 weeks in each of the remaining years. De Waart will step down as music director of the Netherlands Opera in 1988.

"I like in the U.S. a lot of things: the vitality and the energy of the people and the desire to do better," De Waart said Thursday by telephone from France, where he was vacationing with his wife. "I always say that in Europe we know we can't do any better, whereas, in America, you're still trying."

Marriner, founder of the hugely popular British chamber orchestra, the Academy of St. Martin in the Fields, will continue with a number of commitments to that group and European orchestras.

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — "I'm doing all right," film star Joseph Cotten told fans who hugged him during a comeback appearance at a senior citizens home.

"You did too, Joe. You just said it," said his speech therapist, Lowell Nece.

Cotten lost the ability to speak after a stroke four years ago but regained it through therapy.

"He didn't know if he was ready," said his wife, actress Patricia Medina. "But this is great for him. He wants to help them as much as possible. He wants to tell them they must never give up. Never."

As the star attraction at the first-ever Community Celebrity Celebration this week, Cotten was besieged by autograph seekers in wheelchairs, many of whom are undergoing similar therapy.

Cotten, star of "The Magnificent Ambersons" and Alfred Hitchcock's "Shadow of a Doubt," appeared opposite Orson Welles in "Citizen Kane" and "The Third Man" and co-starred with Marilyn Monroe in "Niagara" and Bette Davis in "Hush, Hush, Sweet Charlotte." On Broadway some of his starring roles were "Postman Always Rings Twice," "Jezebel" and "Philadelphia Story."

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Peace activist Daniel Ellsberg has surrendered for a two-day term for blocking a Federal Building doorway during May protests of the U.S. trade embargo of Nicaragua.

A federal magistrate found him guilty after a one-hour trial earlier this month, and gave him a choice between a $50 fine or two days in custody. He surrendered Thursday.

The U.S. Marshal's Office bureau of prisoners assigned the former Rand Corp. consultant to a halfway house rather than jail. Ellsberg, who was the source of the "Pentagon Papers" leak in the 1970s, said his daughter works in a Nicaraguan health clinic that has been attacked by U.S.-sponsored contras.

• • •

The New York Daily News reported Friday that Stallone, 39, is engaged to 23-year-old Danish model Brigitte Nielsen.

The couple is celebrating in Honolulu and no date has been set for a wedding, in a report by News columnist Suzy.

Stallone is still awaiting his final divorce decree from his wife of 10 years, Sasha.

They met when Miss Nielsen, hearing Stallone was staying at at a Manhattan hotel, repeatedly called the actor in an attempt to meet him. Stallone would not respond to the call, but a photo sent up by the model changed his mind.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I get many honors and, while it's very pleasant, it's a reminder that we're getting on," says composer Cy Coleman, the subject of a television tribute scheduled for filming early next year in London.

Coleman, 56, has been the recipient of Tony and Emmy awards and will see three of his works performed on Broadway this fall, including a new musical, "13 Days to Broadway," and the revivals of "Sweet Charity" and "On the Twentieth Century."

The cheerful, energetic composer isn't sitting around waiting for his trio of opening nights.

"I treat my career like somebody who owns a greenhouse," Coleman said in a recent interview. "I keep planting seeds around. I have a few other things I'm working on."

Coleman, who has written such song standards as "Witchcraft" and "The Best Is Yet To Come," admits to being struck by inspiration occasionally while walking down the street.

But, he says, "If it woke me up at night I'd be too lazy to get up and write it down."

Injury doesn't thwart Denton fire chief

DENTON (AP) — Jack Gentry began a love affair with the fire department when he was 11. It has survived fires and floods and bureaucrats and attempts to rescue frightened kittens from trees.

It has evolved from a small boy's adulation to the respect a commander has for his men. It has burned strong through a 43-year career, 27 of those years as fire chief.

Gentry loves the fire department; why should a little thing like a broken back from a fall from the third floor of a burning building change a thing?

Dispatchers have a standing rule to call the chief if a fire goes to two alarms. The call came about midnight June 18, when a condominium complex under construction on Avenue E began to blaze. As usual, the chief was already dressed and on his way out the door before the telephone rang.

"I sleep with the scanner on by the bed," he said. "It always wakes my wife up, but I sleep right on through unless it's a bad fire. It's a sixth sense. I get up and go."

He goes, Gentry emphasises, not to direct the firefighting operation, but to support his commanding officers and lend a hand if he's needed. The fire was extensive on that Tuesday; Gentry climbed to the third-floor landing to help.

"When you've got a lot of fire in a big complex, the situation changes to some extent," he said. "Our people are doing things they don't ordinarily do — like in my case. Everybody there was doing what they were supposed to do real well, plus other things. Our people put a stop to that fire."

They had to do it without the chief's help, after all. About 12:30 a.m., Gentry reached for a hose. The next thing he remembers is waking up in a hospital room.

"I never knew," he said. "I've got five stitches in my thumb and burns in the palm of my hand that must have come from the hose sliding through my hand as I fell. I've got several stitches in the top of my head. My back and shoulders and left side are black and blue and orange and green. Sometime during the day, after a series of X-rays, they told me my back was broken."

The ninth vertebrae of his spine has five cracks in it, Gentry said. doctors fitted him with a brace that holds him erect, and they believe he will not require surgery.

It's the first time he's been badly hurt fighting fires, the chief said. "Oh, I've been overcome by smoke and passed out a lot of times, but nothing like this."

Gentry remembers two other times in his career when men were badly hurt on the job. There has been only one fatality, in 1967, when firefighter Kenneth Kramer was killed in a blaze that destroyed the old Kimbell-Diamond Milling Co. on Oak street.

In 1974, a fire truck collided with an automobile. Several firefighters were injured, he said. One, Thad Blocker, was severely injured and spent a year recuperating before returning to work. Blocker is still with the department.

"It doesn't matter who it is, whether it's the chief or the low man on the totem pole. Everybody gets upset when someone gets hurt," he said.

Gentry knew what he was getting into when he joined the fire department as a student firefighter at 17. He moved across the street from the station when he was 11, and "I hung around the station more than I did the house," he said.

There was always a fire house dog, he remembers. But none of them were the traditional black-and-white spotted breed. "Once, we had a big, old white slick-haired bulldog. It had two black spots around its eyes. That's about the closest we ever came to a Dalmation."

Gentry has a lot of good memories to draw on while he recuperates, but he's anxious to get back to work as soon as possible. The time frame is under dispute.

"My wife thinks the doctor said it would take six to eight weeks. I remember him saying four to six weeks. I wouldn't be surprised if I didn't get down there in few days."

Not being at the station doesn't mean Gentry doesn't see and hear from his men. The one thing he hasn't been able to do for himself is get out of bed in the mornings. Off-duty firefighters have been coming by every day to help him up.

Local firefighters aren't alone in their concern for the chief. Calls began coming in from all over the United States hours after the accident, and they continue. Gentry belongs to several associations of fire chiefs, and he teaches every summer at College Station at a fire fighters' seminar.

"It's a lonely feeling when you can't get up and go to work, you know," he said.

Student builders tackle houses in hands-on class

LEVERETT'S CHAPEL, Texas (AP) — Little boys build with Tinker Toys. Bigger boys like Lincoln Logs or Leggos.

But high school boys, at least at Leverett's Chapel High School, use real logs and lumber to build their houses.

For the last eight or nine years, the juniors and seniors enrolled in Tom Ansley's woodworking classes have built houses instead of individual projects.

At the end of each school year, they sell that year's house and use the proceeds to pay for its materials and any new equipment needed for the next year's project.

This year, Ansley's 12 students are building the shell of a 1,225-square-foot, three-bedroom, two-bath log cabin, with room for a washer and dryer.

"This has been a lot of fun for me," Ansley said, "and I think the kids enjoy it. There are not many who don't return for the second year.

"Last year we did a log cabin, too, but we're going to start alternating. That way, one year we'll build a frame house, the next year a log one, so the kids will get to learn a little about both types of construction."

Students build the shell houses from scratch in a small lot between the school oil well and the parking lot. They use a floor plan modified from one used by Ansley, a former house builder.

They begin with textbook studies on how to build a floor, followed by how to build a wall or put on a roof. As they complete each section of formal study and pass their tests, they build that part of the house, Ansley said.

"This isn't a vocational course, where you get students for about half a day," Ansley explained. "Each class is in here for about an hour a day so there's not time for architectural planning or other building trades.

"And it's not intensive enough to prepare students to be carpenters, though some of them do go on as carpenter's helpers in the summers or for part-time work through college.

"Sometimes what they learn is that they really don't want to do this, so then it's sort of a negative process, but just as important to keep them from wasting time with something they don't want to do later."

Ansley said he first had the idea to have the classes build houses after the school's football coach asked students to build a storage shed for the team's equipment.

They did, and that summer he considered making such construction a regular project.

"We did, and it's really worked well," Ansley said. "The project really pays for itself."

East Asia fears U.S. import trade limits

TOKYO (AP) — East Asia's trade with the United States quadrupled in the past decade, bringing new prosperity to millions of Asians. But the Asians are selling more to Americans than they buy from them and that has raised fears here the United States will take steps to cut back.

Japanese cars, Korean steel, Taiwanese electronics, Indonesian lumber, Malaysian palm oil and textiles from Thailand and China all helped push total East Asian trade with the United States last year to $169 billion.

That U.S. Commerce Department figure, which includes Australia and Oceania, is a sharp contrast to $42 billion in 1974 and $132 billion in trade with Western Europe, once the United States' most-favored partner in commerce.

The Asian goods selling in U.S. markets, however, have given a sharp tilt in the Asians' favor in the U.S. trade balance in the area.

East Asia last year sold $63 billion more in the United States than U.S. merchants sold in Asia, accounting for more than half of America's record high trade deficit of $123 billion.

That imbalance has brought concern among Asians that the U.S. Congress will throw up barriers.

Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad of Malaysia said in a recent speech in Hong Kong that all of Asia could be affected by U.S. trade retaliation against Japan, for example.

"Rather than be over exercised by the Soviet threat," he said, "I would argue that a much greater threat to the entire Asia-Pacific region is the emerging economic cold war between the United States and Japan."

Japan, with massive shipments of autos and electronic goods and a bilateral trade surplus of $36.8 billion in 1984, has borne the brunt of U.S. complaints about unfair trade practices. But in fact the newly industrialized countries of South Korea, Taiwan, Singapore and Hong Kong — the NICs, as they are called — are outdoing the Japanese in expanding U.S. markets.

Five of the 10 nations with the worst trade imbalances with the United States last year were Asian — Japan, Taiwan, Hong Kong, Indonesia and South Korea.

Asian exports to the United States took off in 1984 as a result of the robust U.S. economy and the strong dollar, which made foreign goods relatively cheaper.

Toys, garments, electrical products and other goods shipped from Hong Kong last year were worth $7.85 billion, up from $5.14 billion in 1983. Korean exports — from shoes to electronics — climbed 29 percent to $10.48 billion. Malaysian shipments passed $2 billion, up 20 percent, while Singapore's exports jumped 21 percent to $3.6 billion.

Trade with China, a latecomer to the Asian economic scene, shot up from $4.4 billion to $6.1 billion, with sales of textiles and petroleum products slightly topping purchases of U.S. wheat, lumber and fertilizers.

The economies of the four NICs, which have grown at a pace of nearly 10 percent during the past decade of international recession, have benefitted the most.

Total trade with the NICs jumped from $8.7 billion in 1973 to $46.5 billion in 1983, with more than 90 percent of NIC exports being manufactured goods and high-tech products.

Asia's cheap labor means Asian goods are cheaper for Americans but Asian technology also is advancing at a rapid rate.

IFAD offers seeds of hope to the world

ROME (AP) — For little more than half the $400 it costs to ship a ton of food aid, a United Nations agency says it can help an Ethiopian farmer grow a ton of a local grain called teff on 2½ acres of land.

That would be more than enough for a family of four for a year, and officials say the low-cost plan may be the most effective way to fight hunger in other parts of the world as well.

Under the program, a farmer gets tools, fertilizer and high-yield seeds worth $95. In addition, he gets help in tapping underground water and technical assistance.

The entire package costs about $250.

Teff is a drought-resistent grain and grows on rough terrain. It produces white flour of fine quality and is Ethiopia's main staple.

Since it was introduced by the International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD), a U.N. specialized agency, the package has proved effective in expanding food production in many areas of the world — from the highlands of Bolivia to isolated islands of Indonesia and scorched fields of Bangladesh.

The primary objective of the project is to increase the production of low-cost foods and enhance the food purchasing power of the poor.

Typically, a group of five people with no access to credit gets a $250 loan after they demonstrate that the money can be used to produce an income. The loan is repayable over 50 weeks with 13 percent annual interest.

With the money, the farmers may buy a cow and sell the milk, buy a loom and make saris, open a food stand or set up shop as a rickshaw-repairer or a tailor.

"IFAD is making a significant contribution to improving the economic condition of the rural poor in developing countries," said a report by the U.S. Agency for International Development earlier this year. "(IFAD is) introducing quick-yielding food production techniques using technologies adapted specifically for small, low-income farmers."

It cited a recent survey that showed that in Bangladesh the incomes of those participating in IFAD projects increased at a rate 10 times the national average.

"There's no doubt this is how we should move to help poor farmers to be self-sufficient," says Millicent Fenwick, the U.S. ambassador to the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization in Rome.

"We can't move in with tractors and big projects....Rather we should give plows and seed money to these people who cannot get a loan from local banks because they are not considered credit-worthy."

In Bangladesh, for example, IFAD in seven years has helped 50,000 rural poor get started in business for themselves. A main feature of IFAD projects is to draw unemployed women, who outnumber men among the poor, into small-scale businesses and food-producing enterprises.

In Djibouti, former French territory on the Red Sea, IFAD helped buy new fishing boats and built storage facilities and ice-making machinery for $1.2 million. After three years of operation, the country's fish catch rose from 180 tons to 400 tons a year and consumption of fish and fishermen's incomes have more than doubled.

On larger communitywide projects, IFAD provides concessional loans repayable over 50 years with a 10-year grace period and a service charge of 1 percent a year.

The U.N. agency, however, is running out of funds for assistance projects.

Anthologies promise 'more cerebral' TV

By FRED ROTHENBERG
Associated Press

ENTERTAINMENT

Bradbury Martin Hitchcock Spielberg

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television is returning to its roots with anthology series such as "The Twilight Zone" and "Alfred Hitchcock" that favor mind games over car chases and require less time commitment from viewers, filmmakers and the stars themselves.

The term anthology covers a broad terrain. Basically, it's any program that doesn't have the same characters doing the same things every week. Case in point: When "The A-Team" exercises vigilante justice, it's episodic TV; when a different team does it each week, it's an anthology.

Anthology can also describe potpourri sports shows, such as "ABC's Wide World of Sports" or, as ABC Entertainment President Lew Erlicht insists, the multistory formats in "Fantasy Island" and "Love Boat."

But Erlicht seems to be missing the boat on what constitutes the common storytelling threads in this season's anthology resurgence.

"TWILIGHT ZONE" on CBS, "Alfred Hitchcock" and Steven Spielberg's "Amazing Stories" on NBC, and "Ray Bradbury Theater" on HBO will feature short stories that promise to be more surreal and cerebral than episodic TV's standard-issue soap operas and cop shows.

The earlier definition of anthologies was necessary because not everybody speaks Hollywood's language. Certainly not comedian Steve Martin, who is executive producer of "George Burns' Comedy Week," for which different creators and actors will collaborate on weekly plays and Burns will provide the prologues and epilogues.

When Martin read about the Spielberg project, he thought it might work with comedy. "I didn't know the word 'anthology' when I went in to CBS," he said. "They said, 'Oh, you want to do an anthology,' and I said, 'Yeah, that's it.'"

Filmmaker extraordinaire Spielberg, whose "Amazing Stories" received an unprecedented 44-week, two-season commitment solely on the basis of his name and before a single frame was shot, said his series would feature "germs of ideas that aren't long enough for feature films."

NBC OFFICIALS have confirmed that Spielberg's series will be the most expensive half hour in television history.

The "Amazing Stories" will be written by Spielberg and others. "Hitchcock" will update Hitchcock's TV classics, while "Twilight Zone" will do original episodes. Bradbury is choosing from among his 400 stories for the HBO series.

One advantage of the form is that it can attract major writers, feature film directors and stars who won't make long-term commitments to weekly TV. For example, Clint Eastwood and Martin Scorcese ("Taxi Driver") each will direct episodes of "Amazing Stories," director William Friedkin ("The French Connection") is doing a "Twilight Zone" and Brian de Palma ("Scarface") has been signed for "Alfred Hitchcock."

Other pluses, according to David Poltrack, CBS' vice president for research, are that anthologies attract a wealthier, better-educated audience and the short segments may counteract itchy-fingered channel switchers.

SYNDICATED EPISODES of "The Twilight Zone" have been popular with kids and teen-agers, noted Poltrack, and, with an 8 p.m. Eastern timeslot on Friday, the new multipart "Twilight Zone" can be tailored to meet different audience needs: The first segment could be for kids, while the last story could be more psychological for adults tuning in early to "Dallas."

Two and three decades ago, the anthologies "Alfred Hitchcock Presents," Rod Serling's "Twilight Zone" and Dick Powell's "Zane Grey Theater" were very popular, but in the early '60s, network programmers decided that TV's heaviest viewers preferred to embrace familiar characters and situations.

"Conventional wisdom is the lack of the same characters coming back is the main disadvantage of anthologies," said Philip DeGuerre, executive producer of "The Twilight Zone."

But that deficiency could be offset in today's brave new world of multiple video choices and impatient viewers clamoring for variety and unpredictability.

"PULLING THE RUG OUT from the audience is what people need," said Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment. "After 35 years of TV, they've seen every cop and comedy series."

Despite the greater freedom for characters to change and perhaps even die in anthologies, don't expect radical surgery on TV's value system. "I doubt that evil will triumph," said Gene Jankowski, president of the CBS Broadcast Group.

The popularity of TV formats often goes in cycles, and anthologies are in vogue again. Last season, there were none on commercial TV; now there are four. HBO said that stems from a recognition of the popularity of HBO's "Hitchhiker" anthology, but the networks deny any connection.

Bradbury, who condemns commercial TV every chance he gets for its limited imagination, said simply that bringing back the anthology marked "a sudden lapse of ignorance."

Composers to honor Constitution

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Six American composers have been chosen for "The Constitutional Commissions," a project to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the U.S. Constitution in 1987.

The Philadelphia Orchestra will commission six new works for world premier performances during 1987. The works will be by composers Milton Babbitt, Christopher Rouse, Ralph Shapey, Steven Stucky, Nicholas Thorne, and Stanley Walden.

Poet honored for translation

Snow was picked for his translation of Rainer Maria Rilke's "New Poems." Snow was awarded a $1,000 cash prize.

Snow, on leave from Rice University, is currently translating he second volume of Rilke's "New Poems."

Bush must be assertive but avoid seeming to grab for power

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush is trapped in an unenviably delicate position as he stands in for the ailing President Reagan while trying to avoid the appearance of grabbing power during the president's illness.

He has an opportunity, with attention suddenly focused on him, to demonstrate the leadership he someday hopes to offer. But he must not seem too eager.

During his moment as acting president, Bush made no move at all, not even to assure the nation the system was working as it should. He left that to the president's men.

"He's being very good about not pushing into things," said one senior White House official, speaking of Bush on condition he not be identified. "Instead of just running in and saying, 'I'll take over, and I'll do this or I'll do that,' he's asking, 'Do you want me to do things?' or, 'Tell me what you need.' "

An Analysis

That may be helpful to the White House staff, but it hardly presents Bush as a leader, which he may not be now as vice president but which he hopes to show he is when he runs for president to succeed Reagan.

"If I'd been George Bush and my president had just had major surgery," volunteered one congresswoman privately, "I would get over to Bethesda Naval Hospital and assure myself the president was all right. I wouldn't wait for Don Regan to tell me when it's convenient."

But Bush did wait — until Wednesday — and still was Reagan's first official visitor other than Mrs. Reagan and the president's top staff aides, including chief of staff Regan.

"He approached it on a personal basis," said Marlin Fitzwater, Bush's press secretary. "When a friend has had an operation, you go to visit him when he's well enough and when the family says it's appropriate."

The vice president has stepped in to chair meetings with members of the Senate Finance Committee who had been scheduled to meet with Reagan this week, and he is set to welcome the teacher picked to be the first citizen-passenger aboard the space shuttle.

He also has let it be known more often than usual when and where he would be available to be photographed and answer questions. But in each case he has stressed the good and speedy recovery of the president and not what he was doing in Reagan's place.

"There really has not been a void to fill," one vice presidential aide explained. "He feels the best thing he can do is continue to be the same solid, supportive vice president he was before."

Even during the eight hours on Saturday when he was acting president, Bush made no move to assert his authority.

In fact, although he interrupted his plan to spend the weekend on the Maine coast and returned to Washington, aides said he made that decision out of personal concern for the president before he knew Reagan would transfer power to him for the period the president was unconscious.

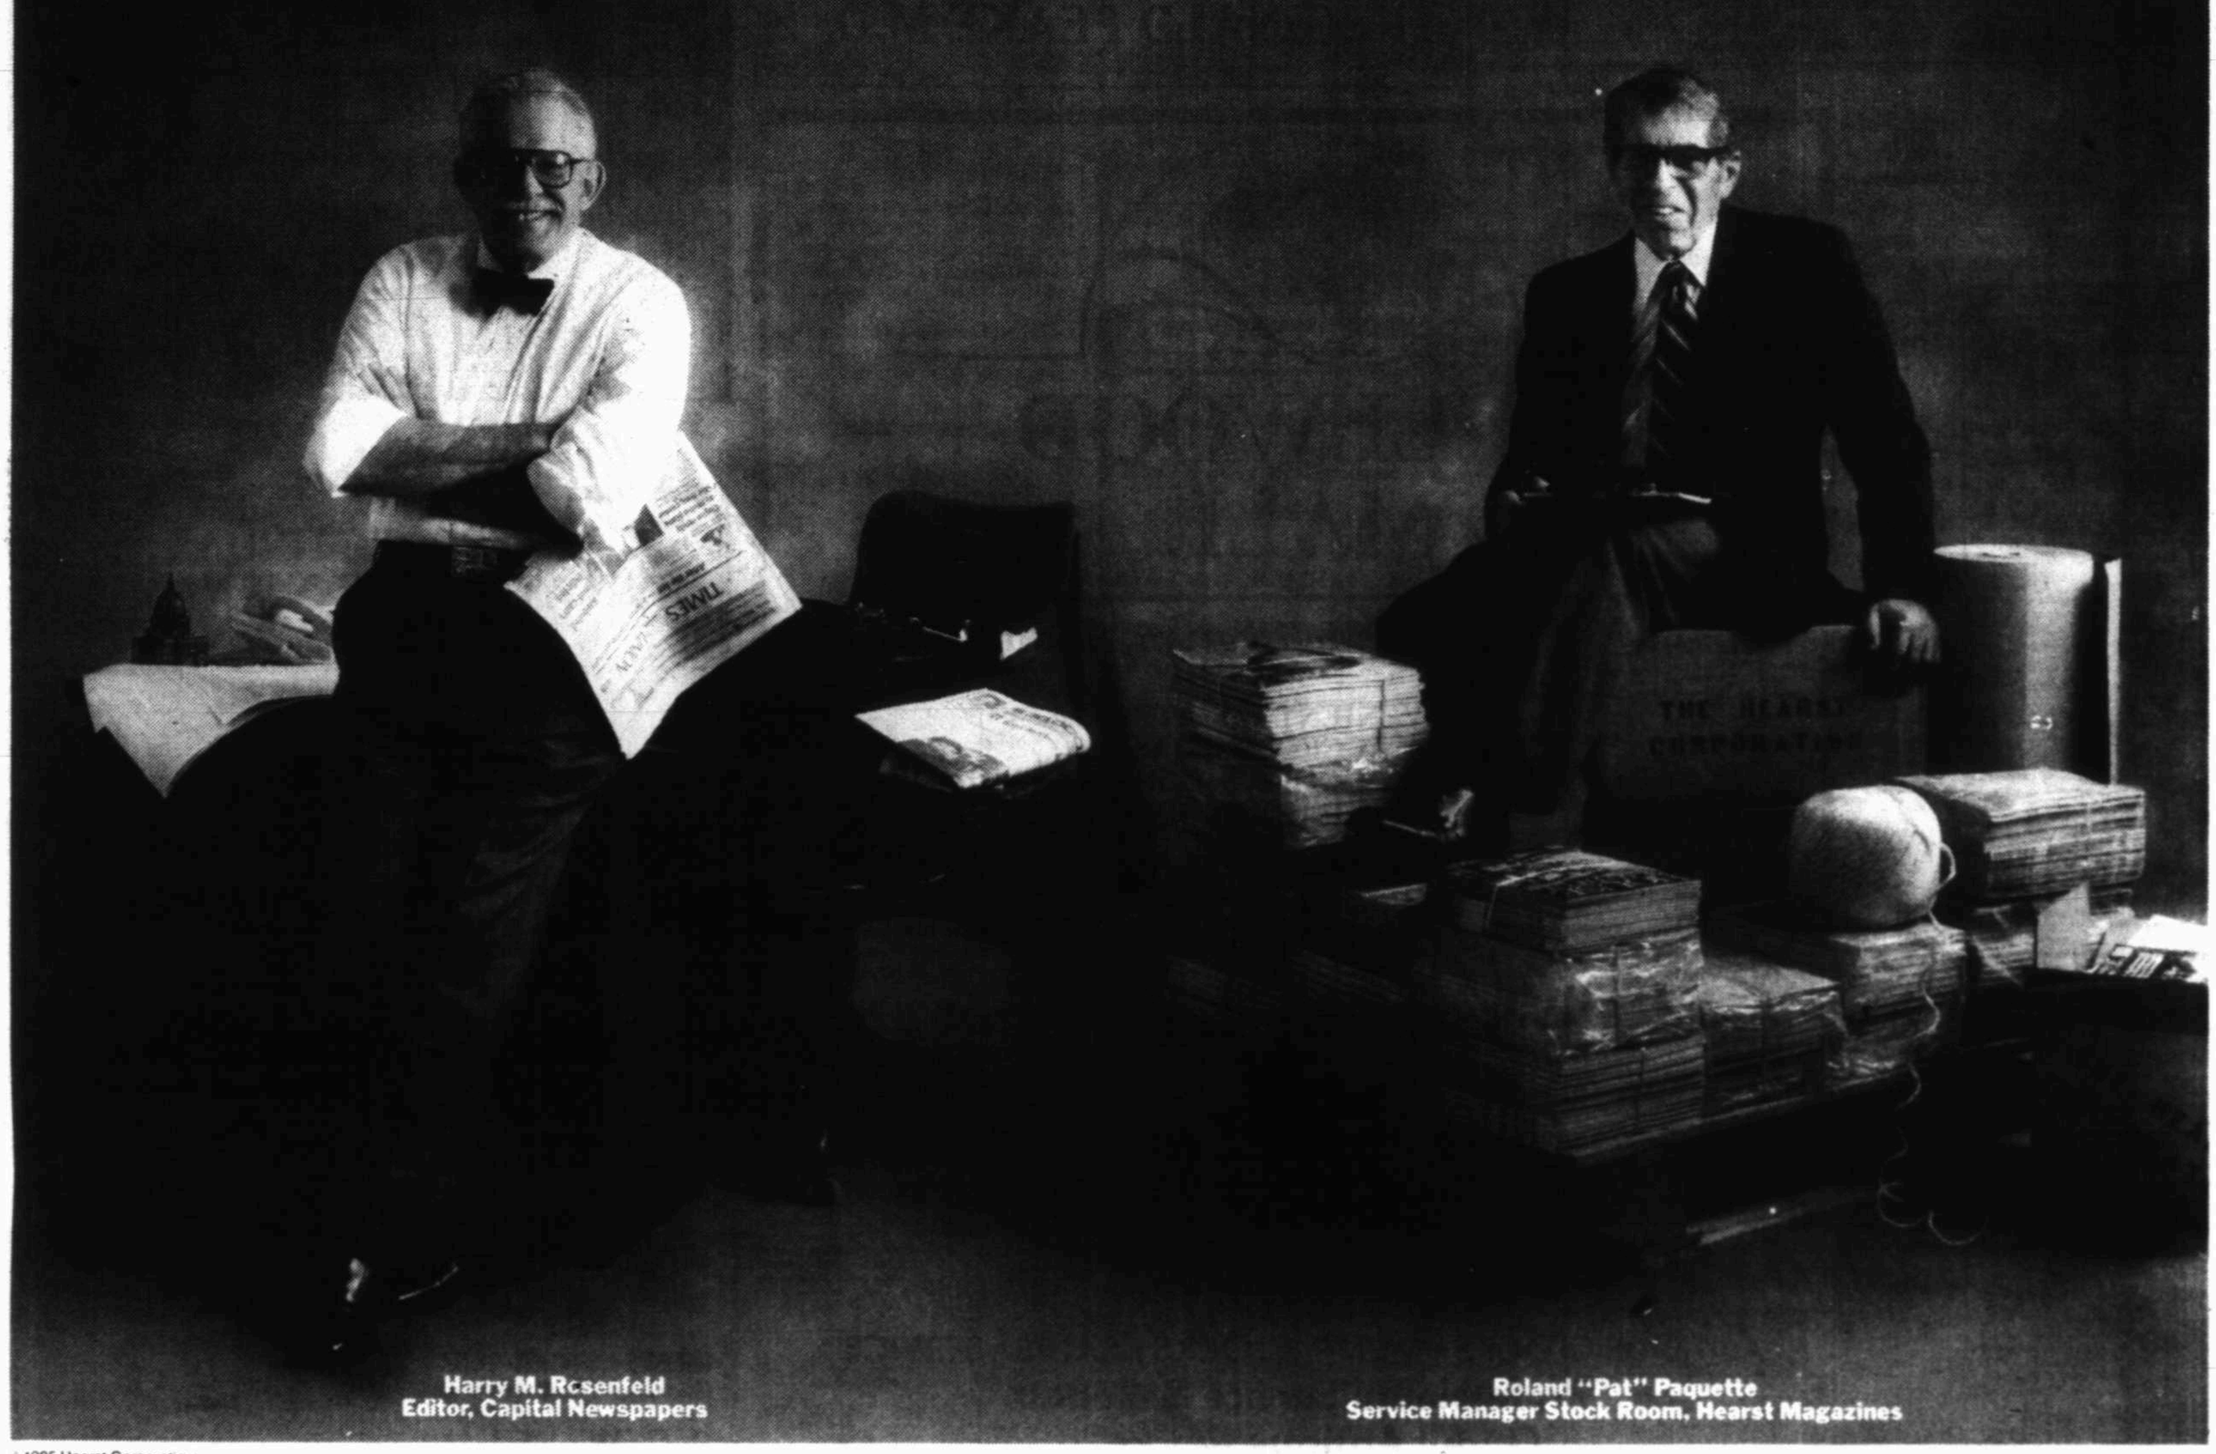
Harry Rosenfeld had the creative ideas that have made Hearst's Albany newspapers 'must reading' in New York's state capital.



Harry M. Rosenfeld
Editor, Capital Newspapers

Roland "Pat" Paquette
Service Manager Stock Room, Hearst Magazines

© 1985 Hearst Corporation

Pat Paquette's creative ideas at The Hearst Magazines Division started 53 years ago and haven't stopped yet.

To build a great company, you need good creative ideas. Ideas that come from not just a few of our people, but from all of them.

At The Hearst Corporation, we like to think of all our 13,000 people as creative people.

People whose creative ideas have helped us more than triple our size in the past ten years and have made us one of the largest and, we think, one of the best communications companies in the world.

Harry Rosenfeld's creative ideas have produced news coverage that has made the Albany Times-Union and the Knickerbocker News two of the most respected newspapers in the State of New York. Whether it's a story about the aging suburbs, or patients' rights in hospitals, Hearst's Albany newspapers are among the best examples of contemporary journalism.

Pat Paquette joined Hearst in 1932 and for more than 50 years has been coming up with creative ideas to improve record-keeping and formalize our historical magazine backlog. What's more, he's a "walking encyclopedia" of the people who have built our company during the last half century.

We at Hearst know that as long as our people keep contributing their creative ideas, the best is still yet to come.

The Hearst Corporation
