Three members of a negro family are found dead in a tightly closed room, their lives snuffed out by the poisonous gasses which killed without warning. This tragedy is a warning to every resident of Wichita Falls. Keep the doors and windows of your home and your garage open as much as possible during the winter time. Be sure proper ventilation is arranged in your home. This is for good health, as well as for safety from gases.

Marking of the aerial route between Dallas and Kansas City with giant revolving beacons, in order that planes may travel safely by night as well as by day, is nearing completion. Dallas, Fort Worth and other cities of the state and nation are far ahead of Wichita Falls in air transportation. A loyal and hard-working chamber of commerce committee is still struggling to complete a $25,000 stock company to build an airport here. Other cities have their ports and their fields, and are on the map in a transportation system that is growing by leaps and bounds. Wichita Falls is just a good place to land in a parachute.

"The life blood of the country is being gradually drained by the automobile and its inevitable expense and most of the violation of the laws of the country is attributed to the automobile," is the message W. T. Atkins of East Texas carried to the readers of the Dallas News. Back to the ox-cart period of civilization. Back to the mud roads or cow trail period of civilization. Back to the days when the mule was a flyer, the grape vine was the telegraph transmitter, the Colt gun was the arbiter of personal disputes, the drinking capacity of a he-man ranged from a quart to a gallon, school houses were few and far between in the rural districts and the one-crop cotton farmer was the master of the situation.

Next to the art of printing, intelligent men say the auto is the greatest civilizer that time has known.

Damon Runyon, excellent newspaper writer who can make an ordinary murder trial interesting reading, writes at length about witness Samuel Bark in the Lillendahl case, said to be a former Texas. We do not know whether the language attributed to Bark is Mr. Bark's or Mr. Runyon's. In either case, they both might pay a visit to Texas. In all this writer's life, he has never heard anyone talk like Texans are supposed to talk in novels and in eastern newspapers.

Wichita Falls residents seem to think the companionate marriage a rather poor thing, judging from interviews published in this newspaper Friday morning. There is no doubt but that marriage is an institution that cannot be tampered with with impunity. But we rather agree with the Rev. Nat F. Grafton, who says: "This idea of companionate marriage is just a fad that has grown out of something that has been true all the time — when two people can't agree, they quit." Now we wonder what Judge W. W. Cook of the 78th district court thinks. He has 105 divorce petitions of the ordinary type of marriage pending in his court next week.

PEACE REIGNS FOR WHILE IN PARTY CAUCUS

But Republican Chieftains See Plenty of Trouble In Offing

OUSTER IS CERTAIN

Final Barring of Senate Doors to Two Men Predicted Now

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Peace prevailed in the Republican caucus of the senate today, but there was trouble aplenty in the offing over the seating of Vare and Smith and satisfying the demands of the progressives before senate control can be established.

While Republican leaders have no doubt that the ultimate outcome of the Vare-Smith cases will be the ousting of both, they were in greater confusion than ever whether the oath of office shall be administered and over the method of procedure to be pursued.

A dozen different courses were discussed at length at a conference of G. O. P. wheel-horses, but no decision was reached. The proposals presented ranged from a filibuster to force administration of the oath to Senators-elect Vare of Pennsylvania and Smith of Illinois, to reprisals upon southern democrats.

Conference in Seclusion.

Among those attending the conference were Senators Reed of Pennsylvania, who will lead the fight for the seating of his colleague-elect, Deneen of Illinois, who will assume a similar role for Smith, Moses of New Hampshire, Smoot of Utah, Edge of New Jersey and Bingham of Connecticut and Watson of Indiana.

The conferees met in a secluded committee room and seemed much chagrined at their discovery by newspapermen. While they refused to discuss the details of the conference, they admitted that no decision had been reached.

In the end, it is entirely probable that the militant Vare and Smith supporters will accede to the proposal of the administration leaders to permit the challenged senators to stand aside for the time being and defer the opening of the real fight until after the president's message has been read on Tuesday.

Reed Leads Vare Foes.

The battle to unseat Vare and Smith will be led by Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, chairman of the slush fund committee which uncovered the huge primary expenditures in the Pennsylvania and Illinois primaries. He has prepared a speech for delivery on Monday.

A canvass of the senate made by friends of Vare and Smith shows only 30 Republicans and nine Democrats at most in favor of seating the senators-elect who are under fire. The proponents of barring them at the senate door count more than fifty votes in favor of that procedure.

Among the Democrats counted upon to bolt their party on the proposition of barring Vare and Smith are Senators Overman, North Carolina, Smith and Blease, South Carolina, King of Utah, Steck, Iowa and Ransdell and Broussard of Louisiana.

Olive Branch Offered.

The Republican regulars made the first move toward mollifying the progressives in order to insure their support for reorganization of the senate machinery by extending the Olive Branch in the shape of a place on the committee on committees to Senator Nye of North Dakota, one of the insurgent group.

17,000 View New Ford Car Models Here Friday at First Day's Showing

A complete description of the new line of Ford automobiles was made public in Wichita Falls yesterday.

When the reception closed at 12 o'clock last night, it was estimated that 17,783 had visited the show-rooms and learned the details of this revolutionary car which is to succeed the famous model T Ford after more than 19 years of leadership in the low price, light car field.

Visitors to the show-rooms yesterday and last night included city officials, heads of civic, commercial and professional organizations and many prominent business men. The entire sales force of the Langford Motor company was kept busy throughout the day and evening pointing out the new features of this new car which Henry Ford himself has described as being "superior in design and performance to any now available in the low price, light car field."

Even before the display rooms were opened at 8 a. m. there was a line of visitors on hand to be

State Rangers Conduct Inquiry In Slaying of Flomot Constable

Charges of Murder Filed Against Five of Six Men Held At Lubbock as Slaying Suspects

LUBBOCK, Dec. 2. (AP)—With murder charges filed against five of the six suspects brought to the Lubbock county jail for safekeeping and three Texas rangers detailed on the case, investigation of the fatal shooting of Constable Lee Stegall of Flomot, Motley county, there Monday night, moved forward today. Captain Tom R. Hickman and Sergeant M. T. Gonzaullas, of the Fort Worth ranger company, and Private W. H. Kirby of Borger, arrived in Lubbock at noon today and immediately went into conference with Deputies Gabe Garrison and R. H. Tanner of Motley county, studying the case which is thus far surrounded in mystery. Shortly after mid-afternoon, Sergeant Gonzaullas left for Matador and Flomot where he will investigate the case, Captain Hickman and Kirby awaiting further orders here.

Calvin Barnes, Adolphus Mosely, Harmon Mosely, W. F. Allen and Paul Landry, all of the Flomot community, have been charged with murder in connection with the shooting, Sheriff Bud Johnston, Lubbock county, said today. A sixth man, Scott Knight, who was also arrested, has been released by order of Motley county officials.

He has proved that he was in no way connected with the case, officials said.

A habeas corpus hearing, petitioned by defense attorneys in an effort to get the men charged out of jail has been set for Monday morning and will be held here.

Telephone reports from Matador said today that Motley county was quiet and that there is no indication of further violence and the report was vouchsafed for by Deputies Garrison and Tanner here. The duties of the rangers, requested on the case by Sheriff Claud Warren of Matador, are of an investigation nature and not for protection, officers here said.

MAYS LANDING, N. J., Dec. 2.—Down here in old South Jersey, where the cranberries grow as big as the nine ball, there are folks who don't believe in getting gabby about such propositions as murder, as one gatered from couple of witnesses for the defense in the Lilliendahl-Beach trial this afternoon.

A woman and a man came into the rain-bound little old court room on the Hadding highway each with stories that—if true—would have cleared the widow Lilliendahl and her alleged patootie, the 55-year-old Willis Beach, of

AL SMITH FOR OBEDIENCE TO ALL STATUTES

Finds No Fault in Plan To Amend Dry Law However

RIGHT OF VOTERS

Presidential Possibility In Plain Statement Of Attitude

ALBANY, N. Y. Dec. 2. (AP)—For the first time since he has been prominently mentioned as a democratic presidential possibility, Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York state tonight broke his silence on the prohibition question by declaring that while he stands for enforcement of all laws, he sees no reason why any group of voters should not oppose the federal prohibition statutes.

The governor's declaration, made at the annual convention dinner of the New York state league of women voters, was in answer to a resolution adopted by the Nassau county branch of the league condemning organized opposition to the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act and urging "respect for an obedience to law."

"What's wrong about that?" asked the governor after he had read the section of the resolution referring to organization of a group to oppose the prohibition laws. "Is there any question about the solidity, force, and effectiveness of the forces on the other side of the question when they have gotten close to $5,000,000 for the operation of their organization in the last few years?

"It is the right of our people to organize to oppose any law and any part of the constitution with which they are not in sympathy. I have taken an oath of office as assemblyman, as sheriff of New York county and four times as governor, to sustain the constitution of the state of New York and yet there are parts of it I hate. I have promised to sustain it, but I have not promised to give it up any right to oppose any part of it I don't like."

POISON GASES KILL THREE

Members of Negro Family Found Dead

A second daughter, Marie, aged 3, found on the floor of the death chamber in an unconscious condition, was taken to the Wichita General hospital, where attending physicians late Friday night said she had a possible chance for recovery.

Fumes of carbon monoxide from flames of a gas stove, which was left burning during the night, was held responsible for the tragedy. A coroner's verdict of death from asphyxiation was returned after an inquest by Justice of the Peace R. V. Gwinn.

McCowan had been employed as a yard man for the R. M. Tittle family, who live at 1924 Eighth, and who own the house in the rear of which the McCowan family resided. They had lived in Wichita Falls about six months, coming here from Darby Springs, Texas.

CASTNER CASE TO BE SETTLED OUT OF COURT

54-Hour Law Hereafter To Be Observed at Asylum Here

DECISION AT AUSTIN

State Labor Commissioner Agrees to Withdraw His Charges

By Universal Service.

AUSTIN, Nov. 2. (AP)—Settlement of the controversy between the board of control and Charles McKemy, labor commissioner, over violations of the nine hour per day, and 54 hour per week labor law, was apparently accomplished today at a conference attended by McKemy, members of the board of control and former Senator J. D. Parnell of Wichita Falls, attorney for C. W. Castner, superintendent of Wichita Falls State hospital.

Under the agreement reached, the board is to instruct heads of all eleemosynary institutions to discontinue the practice of working female employes more than nine hours a day or more than 54 hours a week.

Charges which were recently filed against Castner, and now pending in a Wichita Falls court, will be dismissed.

CASTNER CASE SET FOR TRIAL DECEMBER 12.

Wayne Somerville, county attorney, could not be reached Friday night to learn his attitude about the dismissal of the charges now pending. However, as Commissioner McKamy is the prosecuting witness and the signer of the complaints against Dr. Castner it is thought the cases will be dismissed. They were to have been tried Dec. 12.

The suits were filed on a recent visit of Dr. McKemy here when he made an inspection of labor conditions at the Wichita Falls State hospital for the insane. Two charges resulted, one that Dr. Castner had worked a female employe more than 54 hours in a week and the second one had worked one more than nine hours in one day.

Several conferences have since been held between the board of control and McKemy but Tuesday apparently were not near settlement as Mr. McKemy telegraphed he would be here for the cases with additional information.

Failure of the legislature to appropriate enough money to pay help at the state institutions was said to be the cause of the law violations by the board of control. They contend the patients would have to be neglected or the employes work overtime unless more money was forthcoming from some source.

DETROIT VIES WITH 'FRISCO

National Republican Chiefs Assemble at Capital

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2. (AP)—Activity in behalf of Detroit and San Francisco put them in the front today in republican convention city speculation as members of the republican national committee continued to arrive in Washington for their meeting next week.

In the background but still strongly in the race were Kansas City, Cleveland and Philadelphia, although Philadelphia's chances appeared to be restricted by a desire of many of the early arriving committeemen to take the convention into the west.

Although Detroit's backers claimed promises of support from San Francisco supporters in the event it was demonstrated the Pacific coast city could not win, many of the committeemen who intend to vote first for San Francisco said they favored Kansas City as a second choice.

Sessions Begin Monday.

Sessions of the national committee wil begin Monday, with Tuesday set aside to hear arguments in favor of the dozen cities seeking the convention. A decision as to where it is to go is expected Wednesday morning.

As the campaign by delegations representing the contending cities was pushed forward today, the committeemen busied themselves sounding out political sentiment within their ranks, and the discussions progressed to a point where specific cadidacies were being mentioned.

A noticeable development was the apparent disposition to believe President Coolidge entirely out of the race, the committeemen evidently having assured themselves than an amplification of his "do not choose" statement is not an early prospect. The president will address the committee members late Tuesday at the White House but there is no indication that he will discuss his own political future.

The viewpoint of some committeemen is that the only thing to do is to begin to look more seriously upon other candidates who have been mentioned and to let the word go out to their respective campaigners that they might as well get busy.

Wyoming for Hoover.

One of today's arrivals, Pat Sullivan, committeeman from Wyoming, said that in his opinion there was no question that Mr. Coolidge was definitely out of the running. He said not only would Wyoming send a delegation to the convention for Secretary Hoover but that it would refuse to participate in any attempt to secure the nomination for President Coolidge at a sudden, dramatic move. He said he would not agree with some politicians that the convention would deadlock and suddenly nominate Mr. Coolidge as the result of an emotional demonstration.

In spite of Vice-President Dawes' declaration that he is not a candidate, Mr. Sullivan declared that the vice-president also has considerable strength in Wyoming and runs a second choice to the commerce secretary.

Another committeeman to arrive today was Charles A. Rawson of Iowa. He reported sentiment for Frank O. Lowden as strong as ever in his state and also that Vice-President Dawes could be looked upon as Lowden's "heir" in event the former Illinois governor showed insufficient strength in the balloting.

Hughes Not Popular.

Although none of the committeemen would commit himself, it was apparent that the suggestion of Charles D. Hilles, member of the committee from New York, that Charles Evans Hughes stood in a good position to get the nomination was not received with unrestrained enthusiasm by some of the early comers, particularly those from the west. It was declared that Hughes' failure in 1916 and his own recent statement that he was too old to be president were militating against the former secreary of state.

the first to get the story of the new cars. On all sides were heard comments of surprise at the striking change in the appearance of the new Ford line. The low, rakish lines, the striking new colors and the luxurious equipment of these new automobiles, made a marked impression upon the crowds of visitors.

Even more impressive to the visitors, however, were the details of performance as they were unfolded by attendants. Visitors were particularly struck with the speed, pick-up and ease of handling of the new cars and with the fact that they are equipped with a four-wheel brakes, shock absorbers and standard gear shift transmission of the type used in cars in a much higher price class.

Attendants at the display rooms were overwhelmed with requests for private demonstrations of the new models and it is expected that the demand for such demonstrations will continue for weeks to come.

Ford factories at Detroit and branch plants in other sections of the country are now preparing for capacity production and it is expected that all dealers will be able to meet the demand in full within the next few weeks.

The design of the new line is so distinctly different from that of the model T the Detroit factory and branch plants have had to undergo a complete equipment change to produce the new cars. It is expected, however, that the next few weeks will see all former Ford production records broken.

In the meantime Henry Ford has announced that manufacture of replacement parts for model T Ford cars will continue to be an important part of the Ford business. It is estimated that there are still more than nine million model T Ford cars in operation and the policy of the Ford Motor company, it is said, will be to continue supplying parts for these cars as long as there is any demand for them.

LORADO TAFT HERE - TONIGHT

Noted Sculptor Speaks At Woman's Forum

Lorado Taft, one of the leaders in American sculpture and its criticism, will deliver a lecture here Saturday at the Woman's Forum beginning promptly at 8 o'clock. The subject of the lecture, one that has won him the approbation of audiences in many cities, has been announced as "American Sculpture and Sculptors."

The artist, who resides in Chicago, is best known, in the field of creation, for his ideal and allegorical works, the "Solitude of the Soul," and the "Fountain of Time," being among the best work of his brain and chisel. However, his fame as a sculptor is rivaled by his ability as a critic and lecturer, his wit and tact in delivering an address having captivated many audiences.

Mr. Taft, born in Elmwood, Ill., in 1860, is the son of a geology professor in the state university from which the artist later graduated. His early ambition to write gave way to an interest in sculpture when, as a lad of 12, he assisted a Belgian sculptor put together some damaged plaster casts.

Continuing his modeling through his college days, he went to Paris after his graduation in 1879, and studied for five years at the Ecole des Beaux Arts, and independently. At present he is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, the National Academy of Design, and an honorary member of the American Institute of Architecture.

The lecture is open to the membership of the Forum on their red membership cards, and to gentlemen holders of the green card. Admission price has ben set at $1.50 and 50 cents.

MISSOURI EDUCATOR DIES

New South Wales, home of the native bear, has placed a ban on the importation from other countries of the skins of the animals.

Royal Air Truck Again Delayed in Arrival

The Royal air truck, scheduled to reach Wichita Falls last Wednesday, has been further delayed by storms in the central states, and probably will not reach Wichita Falls before Monday, according to C. W. Cahoon, Jr., chairman of the Wichita Falls airport committee. Mr. Cahoon says he expects telegraphic advices on approximate arrival of the heavily laden air truck Saturday.

Drive for funds for establishment of an airport in Wichita Falls will be picked up within the next few days, Mr. Cahoon said, and efforts pushed to achieve the full quota of $25,000 which the committee has set. About $17,500 in subscriptions already has been raised, Mr. Cahoon said.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.—Adv.

Grain Futures Law Sustained as Valid

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Dec. 2. (AP)—The state supreme court today ruled the Missouri grain futures act to prevent gambling in grain futures is valid and does not conflict with the United States grain futures act.

The federal act, the opinion said, was not intended to encroach upon or destroy the police power of the states, nor to nullify the Missouri law, but to restrict its operation.

NEGROES FLEE DEATH SCENE

Lilliendahl Defense Gains In Day's Evidence

the charge of killing the aged Dr. Lilliendahl quicker than you can say "scat," if they had been related at the time of the murder.

Witness Saw Negroes

The woman, A Mrs. Lillie Lehman, middle-aged, buxom, well dressed, and the keeper of a train tower at Winslow Junction for the Pennsylvania railroad, from which post she sees that the trains keep moving o. k., saw two men that she took to be colored men on the Atsion road near the scene of the murder on the day of the crime.

Anderson was arrested in connecton with a robbery at Jenkintown, Pa., some time ago and brought to Mays Landing, where, it is asserted by the defense, he was identified by Mrs. Lilliendahl as one of two negroes who robbed her and murdered the husband. The state contends that Mrs. Lilliendahl didn't identify him.

Widow's Story Verified

The other witness, Martin Lashley, a young truck driver, of oceanville, N. J., had an even more powerful story than that of Mrs. Lehman, his tale tending positively to corroborate the story the widow Lilliendahl has stuck to since the hour of the murder.

He said he was driving along the Atsion road about 12:30 o'clock on the day of the murder when he saw a car with a dark man on either running board, turning into a side lane. He thought they were negroes. In this manner does Mrs Lilliendahl claim the black robbers and murderers of her story compelled her to drive off the main road to the fatal spot back in the thicket.

But with all the hue and cry over the murder of the venerable doctor since September 15, last, and with two persons in the hoosegow waiting trial for their lives, did Mrs. Lehman and Martin Lashley dash about crying for justice for the accused?

Not, it seems, as you could notice it.

Witnesses are Tardy

Mrs. Lehman didn't present her story to the defense lawyers until about 14 days ago, and Martin Lashley waited until last Tuesday. The lady said she was under heavy expense and feared she might be kept out of her work of watching in that railroad tower if she got too gossipy about what she had seen that day.

She didn't intend to come forward unless the accused were convicted, she said. Willis Beach stared at the lady owlishly, as if he felt that this might be a delayed play. The spectators in the crowded court room, many of whom think a murder is something to talk about, looked at her in

"Why didn't you call the police and tell them what you knew after you heard of the murder, and knew that two colored men were being talked of in connection with it?" S. Cameron Hinkle, the assistant prosecutor, asked Martin Lashley.

Wanted to Keep Out.

"Well, I'll tell you how it is with me," replied Lashley. "I'm in business and didn't want to lose time and get mixed up in it."

"You own your own property—pay taxes, don't you?"

Lashley nodded.

"You knew the county was spending a lot of money trying to solve this case, but you let it go ahead spending when you had this information?" pursued the state's attorney.

"Yes," said Lashley, non-commitally.

He is a young fellow, blonde, and rather good looking. He is married. He wore a soft blue shirt and he did not seemf altogether at ease when Hinkle, with a skeptical light in his eyes, took him in hand. But he held to his story.

One of the dark men wore a cap. He couldn't see the face of either man. And from then until last Tuesday young Lashley refrained from chattering about his knowledge, finally calling up Attorney Phillips, of the defense.

If the ladies and gents of the jury believe the story of Mrs. Lehman and Lashley then, of course, their verdict is a foregone conclusion. But it seems that S. Cameron Hinkle plans immediate steps to produce some doubt in the minds of the jurors. Alfonso Anderson, the cooped up negro, may be brought in as a witness in rebuttal for the state.

Large Day for Defense.

Allowing that the testimony fell with any weight on the jurors it was a large day for the Widow Lilliendahl and Beach, even though the impression is slowly gaining ground among the folks listening to the trial that some of the witnesses on one side or the other must be slightly mistaken.

Any way, Willis Beach finally heard himself get a few boosts for his morality, which heretofore seems to have been run down no little by different persons connected with the case.

A number of his old time friends came forward and while they didn't say in so many words that the chap who has been pictured as a veritable Don Juan of the cockadoodledoo world down vineland way, is as pure as the driven show, they intimated that he might at least make it close with a lily in purity.

Alibi for Beach.

After hearing them, one gazed upon Beach more respectfully and wondered if indeed he is not a mlaigned man. The Widow Lilliendahl also came in for some nice puffs from friends. Furthermore, alibi for Beach on the day of the crime was built up by the defense with the assistance of enough witnesses to make a good crowd on any street corner.

TOO MUCH SPORT

Educators Say Colleges Give Too Much For Athletics

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 2. (AP)—Fort Worth, Texas, was chosen for the 1928 meeting of the association of Colleges and secondary schools of the southern states at the closing session of the convention here today.

Dr. H. M. Ivy, superintendent of schools at Meridian, Miss., was elected president. The association went on record as opposed to undue emphasis being placed on intercollegiate athletics, which, it was asserted, some of the southern colleges and universities are doing. Such practice, the association said "is an undesirable feature rapidly spreading among southern members."

Youth Admits Death Scheme

School Teacher Near Death In Blast

OTTAWA, Ill., Dec. 2. (AP)—Because he did not wish to marry Miss Iola Bradford, school teacher, Hiram Reed, only son of a wealthy Mossville farmer, confessed, according to police, that he planted a stick of dynamite in the school house stove and today as a result of the explosion the teacher is near death.

Reed said he tied the dynamite in the stove Wednesday midnight and attached a 10-inch fuse to it, thinking it would kill Miss Bradford when she lighted the morning fire.

Authorities said Miss Bradford was to become a mother in a few months and that Reed had delayed their wedding date several times.

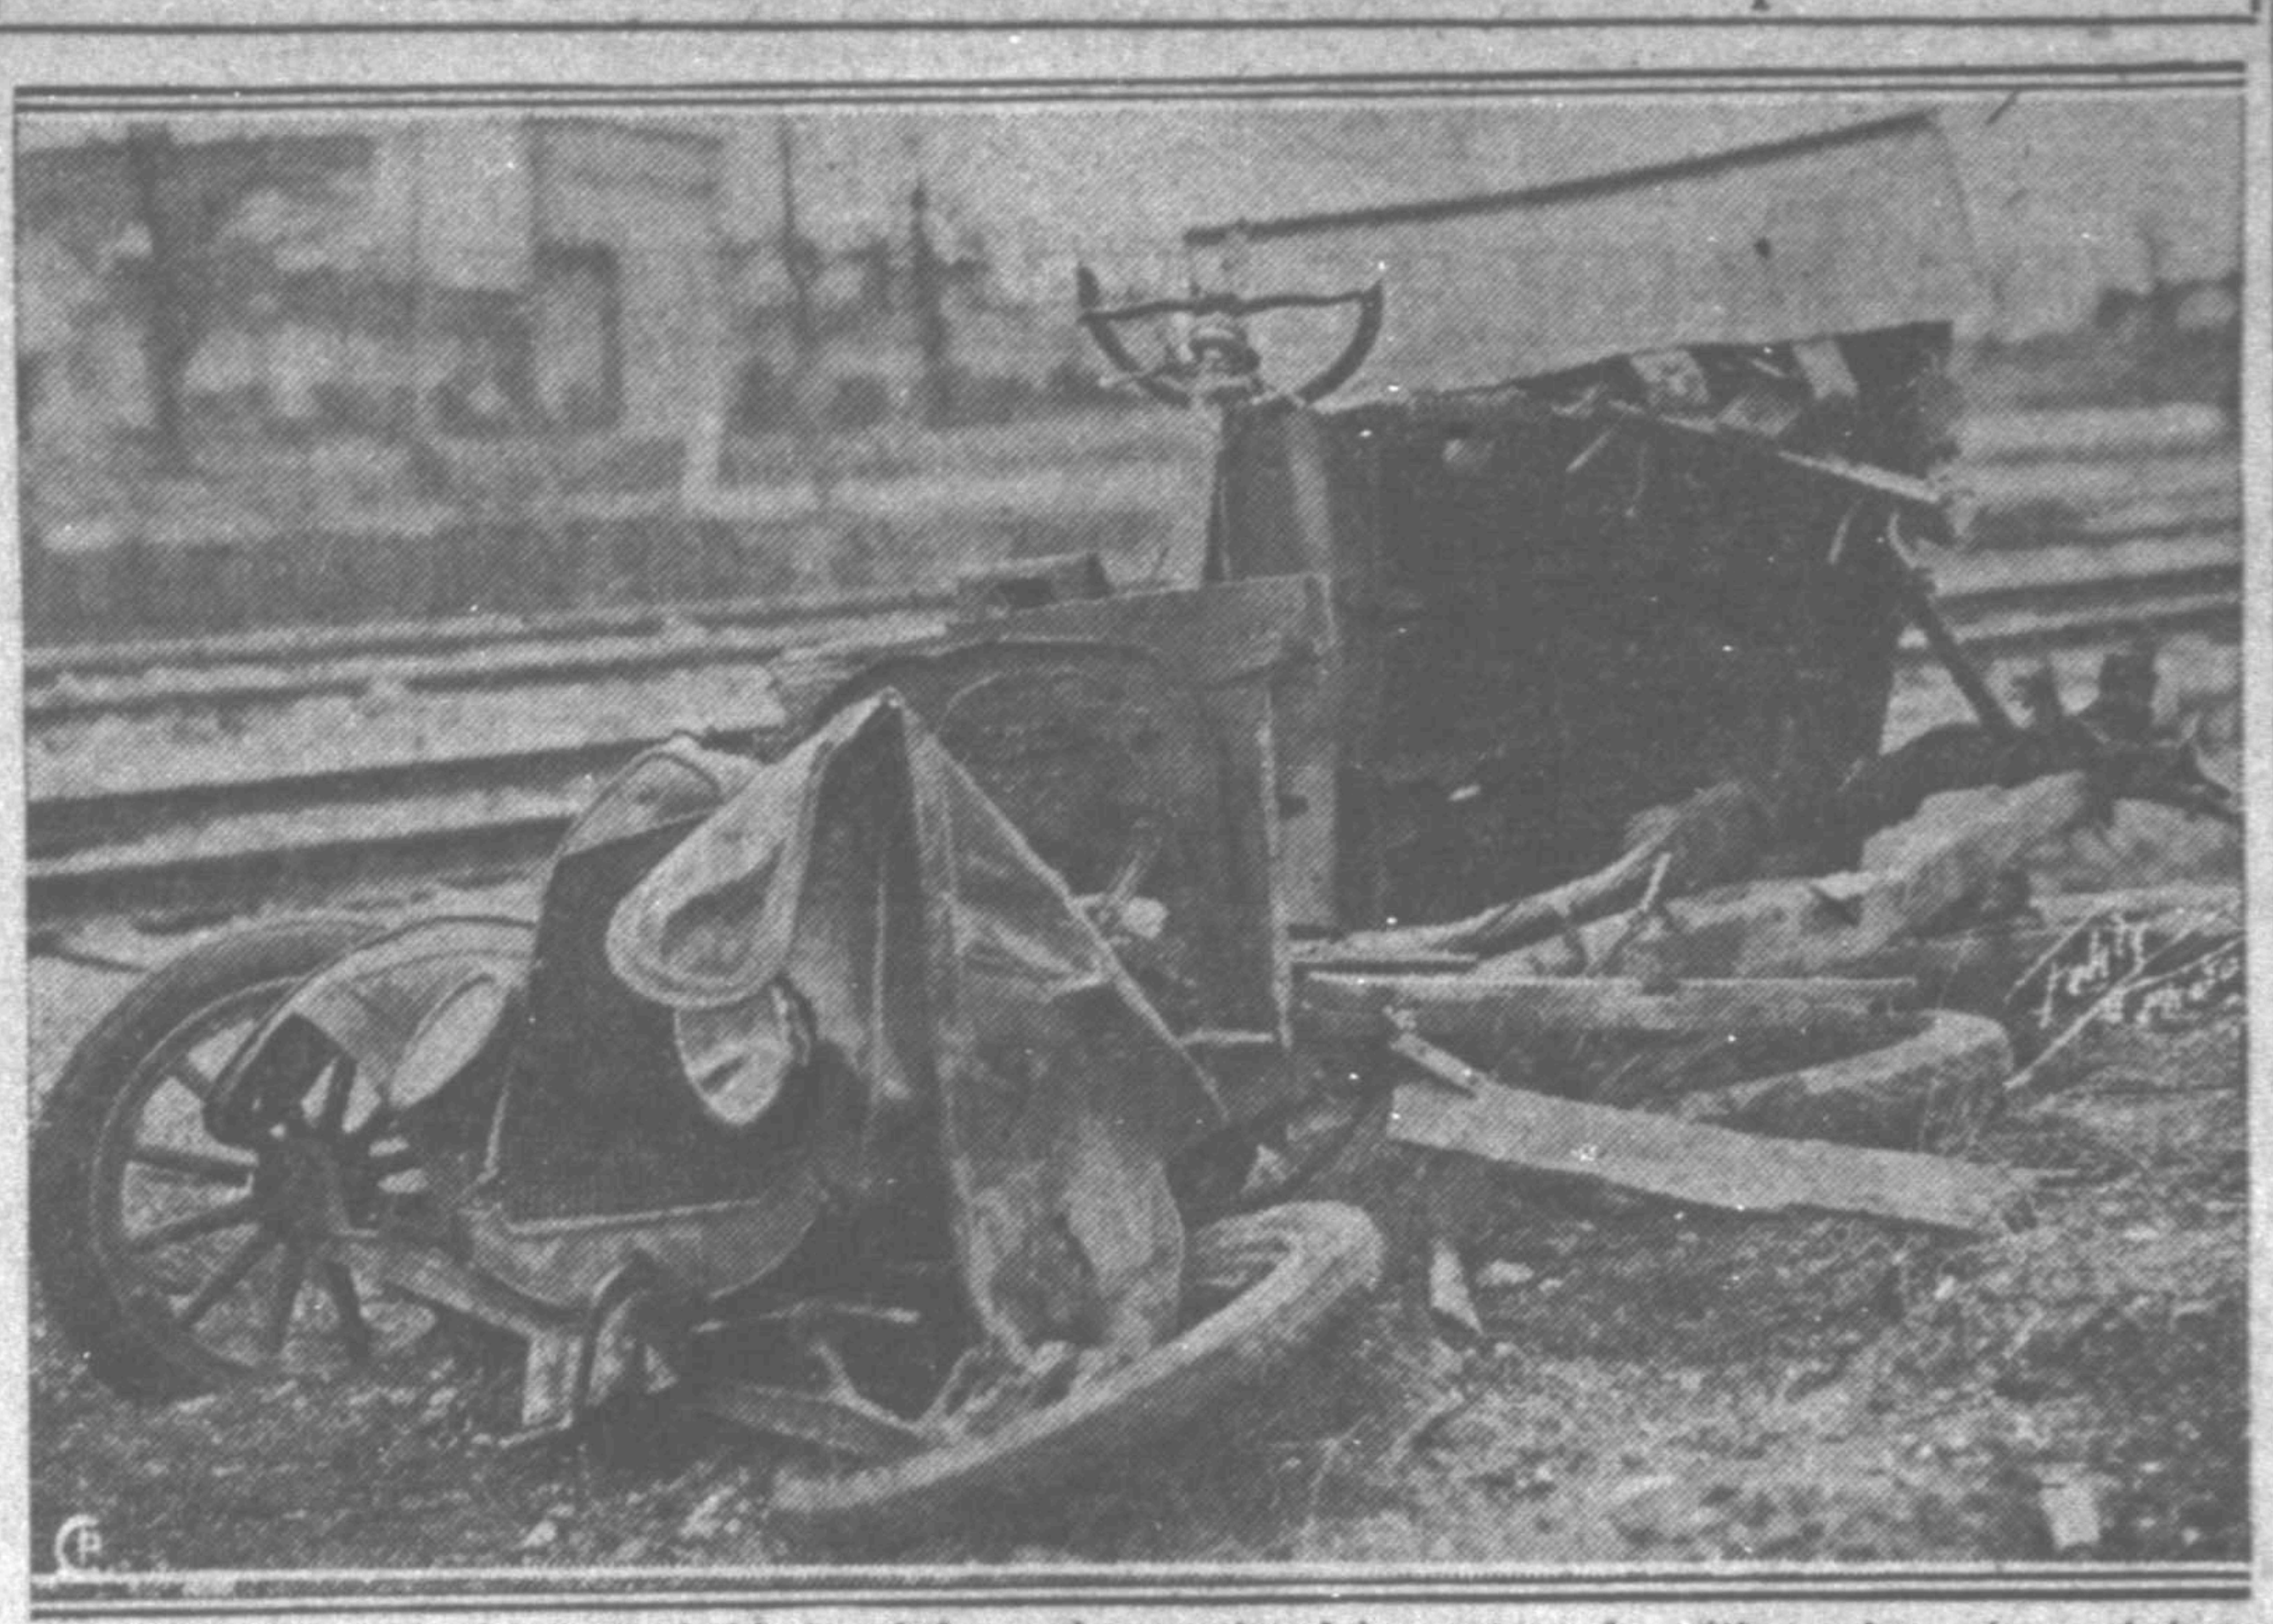
This Doesn't Often Occur—Driver Escapes!



It seems impossible, but out of this tangled wreckage, the driver escaped with only minor injury. His truck, hit by a passenger train, Earl Stein, of Jefferson, Wis., landed on the locomotive pilot and the engine crew accomodatingly permitted him to rest there until the next town with a physician, Fort Atkinson, was reached.

NEW ROUTING TO OKLAHOMA

Destroyed Bridge Causes New Routes

FORT WORTH, Dec. 2. (AP)—Tourists traveling to Oklahoma are being given a new routing by Ed Macrae, superintendent of the chamber of commerce tourists bureau because of the destruction by fire of the toll bridge over Red river, seven miles north of Gainesville.

Motorists going to points northeast of Gainesville or to Ardmore and vicinity were being directed to Gainesville where they can cross the river at Turk's ferry. Those bound for Oklahoma City and points in northern Oklahoma were advised to take the Meridian highway through Decatur and Bowie, crossing the river by bridge at Terrall, Okla., and proceeding through Waurika and Duncan to Chickasha then to Blanchard and thence into Oklahoma City.

The citizens of Gainesville already have begun to rebuild the bridge and probably will be open for travel in a week or 10 days.

New Furniture For Officials of City

Mayor R. E. Shepherd announced Friday that plan has been worked out whereby the city offices in the new memorial auditorium are to have new furniture. Much of the present furniture is unsightly and also inadequate to the use it is being put. Where the condition warrants desks will be worked over and put in first class shape. Others will be traded in on new equipment and in some instances additions made.

Rough kitchen tables have served in several departments and practically all of these will have to be replaced. They are unsuited for use and are unsightly.

The Boy Scouts executive offices were moved to the auditorium quarters Friday with Scout Executive Frank B. Creighton superintending the work. The scouts are the first of the welfare and educational organizations coming under the Community Chest to move.

C. C. Bunnenberg, park superintendent, moved his offices also Friday. His is the second city department to move, the water department being the first tenant of the new building.

All departments are expected to be at the auditorium before Jan. 1.

Smith of Illinois Looks Over Seat and Awaits Senate Fight

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2. (AP)—Frank L. Smith of Illinois wandered leisurely into the senate chamber today, found the seat assigned to him was on the back row, gazed on it for a brief period and then sauntered out to await the contest to be waged over his right to occupy it.

Mr. Smith found his seat easily. Not only was it the last seat on the last row, but it was nearest the rear door by which he entered the chamber.

Glancing over his prospective neighbors the Illinois senator-elect noticed that William S. Vare of Pennsylvania, also facing a contest, was assigned immediately in front of him on the last seat of the next to the last row.

"How do you like your seat?" Mr. Smith was asked as he strolled from the empty chamber.

"Well, I found one marked for me all right," he replied, smiling.

SEEK MORE CRUISERS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2. (AP)—The administration plans to make recommendations to the approaching congress for further construction of cruisers, it was said today at the White House.

REMUS 'CRAZY' SAYS WITNESS

But He's Now Rational As After Wife's Death

By Universal Service.

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 2.—Lay testimony to the effect that sanity returned to George Remus with the killing of his wife was admitted here today in Remus' trial for her murder.

In its lengthly array of witnesses who tell of the indications Remus gave of being unbalanced for a period of two years prior to the slaying, Charles Elston, co-defense counsel is inserting evidence that will shield Remus from confinement in an insane asylum should he be freed of the murder charge.

John S. Berger, St. Louis exposition manager, who yesterday described Remus' fits of insane frenzy when told of alleged misconduct of Mrs. Remus with Franklin L. Dodge Jr., today assured prosecution Charles P. Taft that Remus was undoubtedly sane at present.

Remus Now Rational.

No longer does Remus attempt to twist off his own ears and throw his shoes through hotel windows as formerly, said Berger, but seems quite rational.

"Remus is just as sane as you or I," Berger replied Taft's questions, "I see him many time a day."

"Then it is your opinion that killing his wife cured him?"

"Yes," was the reply.

"Although Dodge is still alive?" returned Taft.

"He ought to be where she is," retorted Berger.

A gale of laughter from the courtroom greeted this retort, and Judge Chester R. Shook warned that another such outburst would result in a cleared court.

Berger Proves Tartar.

Berger proved a tartar under cross-examination, and returned peppery outbursts of sarcasm to Taft's queries.

"It's no use trying to pump me. I'm only trying to tell the truth," he fired at Taft when the exact time of one of Remus' outbursts was being sought.

"Did you tell Mrs. Remus that Remus had sent you to get $25,000, and did you not see Remus at that time in a very shabby condition?" Taft inquired.

"Absolutely no," shouted Berger, "N-o," he spelled it out for the prosecutor's benefit.

Berger was asked whether or not he told Mrs. Remus that unless she gave Remus the $25,000 sought that she would be kidnaped and her arms and legs broken by the kidnapers.

"That's a manufactured lie!" he cried.

"Didn't you, upon leaving, tell Mrs. Remus that this tragedy would be upon her head?"

"No, N-o," bellowed Berger.

Three Questions Barred.

Remus' co-counsel was denied the right to ask Berger these three questions, which the three alienists are taking as their basis for an ultimate report upon Remus' sanity, at the order of the court:

1. Was Remus able to judge right from wrong at the time of the killing?
2. Was he a free agent?
3. Could he appreciate that it was a violation of the laws of God and man to commit murder?

FAMILY MUST BE REGARDED

Man Should Not Devote All Time to Work

The Foolish Father Who Sacrifices His Home Life to Business—How Can a Girl Tell the Difference Between Real and Synthetic Lovemaking?—Advice to a Dependent Widow.

Dear Miss Dix:—I am a young married woman, the mother of four small children. I am attractive, well dressed, jolly, a good housekeeper and I know that my husband is satisfied with me. He, himself, is everything that is good and kind and generous, but he is very successful in business and is so absorbed in his work that he has no time for his family. He is too busy to notice the children. He never enters into any of their games or takes one on his lap. He spends very little time at home and is always preoccupied. Yet he says he loves us, and I think he does in his way.

But I would rather have less money and more of my husband and I feel that no wealth can make up to me for what we are missing in the family circle. What can be done to wake a man up to the fact that he has responsibilities to his wife and children aside from supplying their physical needs?

MOTHER OF FOUR.

Answer: Your husband is making the great and tragic mistake that nine-tenths of the successful American men make. And it is what fills the country with divorces and with second generation wasters and,spenders.

Men like your husband get so absorbed in the game of money-making that it blots everything else out of their consciousness. It is their one absorbing interest in life. They put their business before their wives and children. They sacrifice their families to it, and this is not because they are lacking in natural affection, but because they are caught up in the fascination of a great adventure that lures them on, and on, and on.

When they have time to think of it they love their families. They even justify their absorption in money-making in thinking that they are working for their wives and children so that they may give them luxuries and advantages, and they fully intend, when they have reached their goal, to go back and take up all the tender domestic ties and be lovers to their wives and pals to their children.

But the trouble is we never can go back. We never can reknit any human ties that we have broken. In the years in which the husband lives in the world of business and the wife lives in the world of the home and society they drift so far apart that they can never come together again. Love dies of starvation. Conversation languishes between them because neither knows anything that the other knows, nor has any interest in the thinks that are vital to the other. They have no memories in common.

Nor can any man get acquainted with his grown children. Still less can he win their affection. Parenthood can be a bar as well as a bond, and no stranger is so alien to children as the father of whom they stand in a certain awe and fear because he has authority over them, but whose real mind and heart and soul are as unknown to them as that of any passerby on the street.

You have to get acquainted with your children while they are still in the cradle if you are ever to establish any comradeship with them. You have to have made mud pies with them, and dressed dolls with them, and had pillow fights with them, and had long talks with them when you took them to the circus, and tucked them in bed to get on a footing with them where they will tell you what they really think and confide their hopes and plans to you.

And so the man who is too busy while his children are little to get acquainted with them and help rear them and start their little lives along the right lines misses his opportunity. It is too late when he gets around to doing it, and he cannot compensate them for all they have missed even if he lavishes upon them high-powered cars and fine clothes and all the luxuries that money can buy.

People often wonder why the children of successful self-made men generally amount to so little themselves. The answer is that the fathers were so absorbed in money-making that they had no time to give to the rearing of their families. Father gave them money instead of love and understanding. He handed out checks to them instead of personal guidance.

Certainly no man makes a greater mistake than he who sacrifices his home life to his business, for no matter how much money he makes it can never repay him for all he misses in the love and companionship of his wife and children.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix:—Why are men such triflers? They all spin the same yarn about how much they love you, yet they seldom mean a word of it. Is there any way to determine whether they are sincere or not?

ROSE B.

Answer: Most men make love t owomen because they think the women expect it of them, and because they fancy themselves as lovemakers. It is merely a pleasant way of passing the time, and they do not expect to be taken seriously.

When a man tells you that he fell in love with you at first sight, and that you are the one woman he has been looking for all of his life, and that you are so different from any other girl, and that he never saw anything so blue as your eyes, or so cute as that little curl on the nape of your neck, lend him a willing ear, for it is a pleasant thing and soothing to one's vanity to be flattered and cajoled.

But unless these protestations of affection are coupled with a bona fide offer of marriage, with a date set for the wedding, take them for what they are. Apple sauce. Candy kisses. The sweetmeats that a man offers you to nibble on between the acts of a play or to add a little spice to an automobile drive. Nothing more. He isn't offering to supply you with bread and meat for life.

Don't be so foolish and unsophisticated as to think that every man who comes around you is in love with you, or that every man who flirts with you intends to lead you to the altar.

There is only one way to tell when a man's lovemaking is serious and sincere and that is when he is willing to marry you to prove it. Laugh off all the rest.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix:—I am a widow with a child two years old and after my husband died I went back to my people to live. My father is well off, very generous and willing to support me, but my mother and sister resent my presence and nag me about when I am going to get a job. What shall I do?

UNHAPPY.

Answer: If your father is not able to give you enough money to live independently upon, away from your mother and sister, the best thing you can do is to go to work and learn some way of supporting yourself and your child.

If you are untrained, get your father to give you enough money to take a thorough course in some business or technical school so that you may perfect yourself in any work you decide to do and be an expert who can command a good salary.

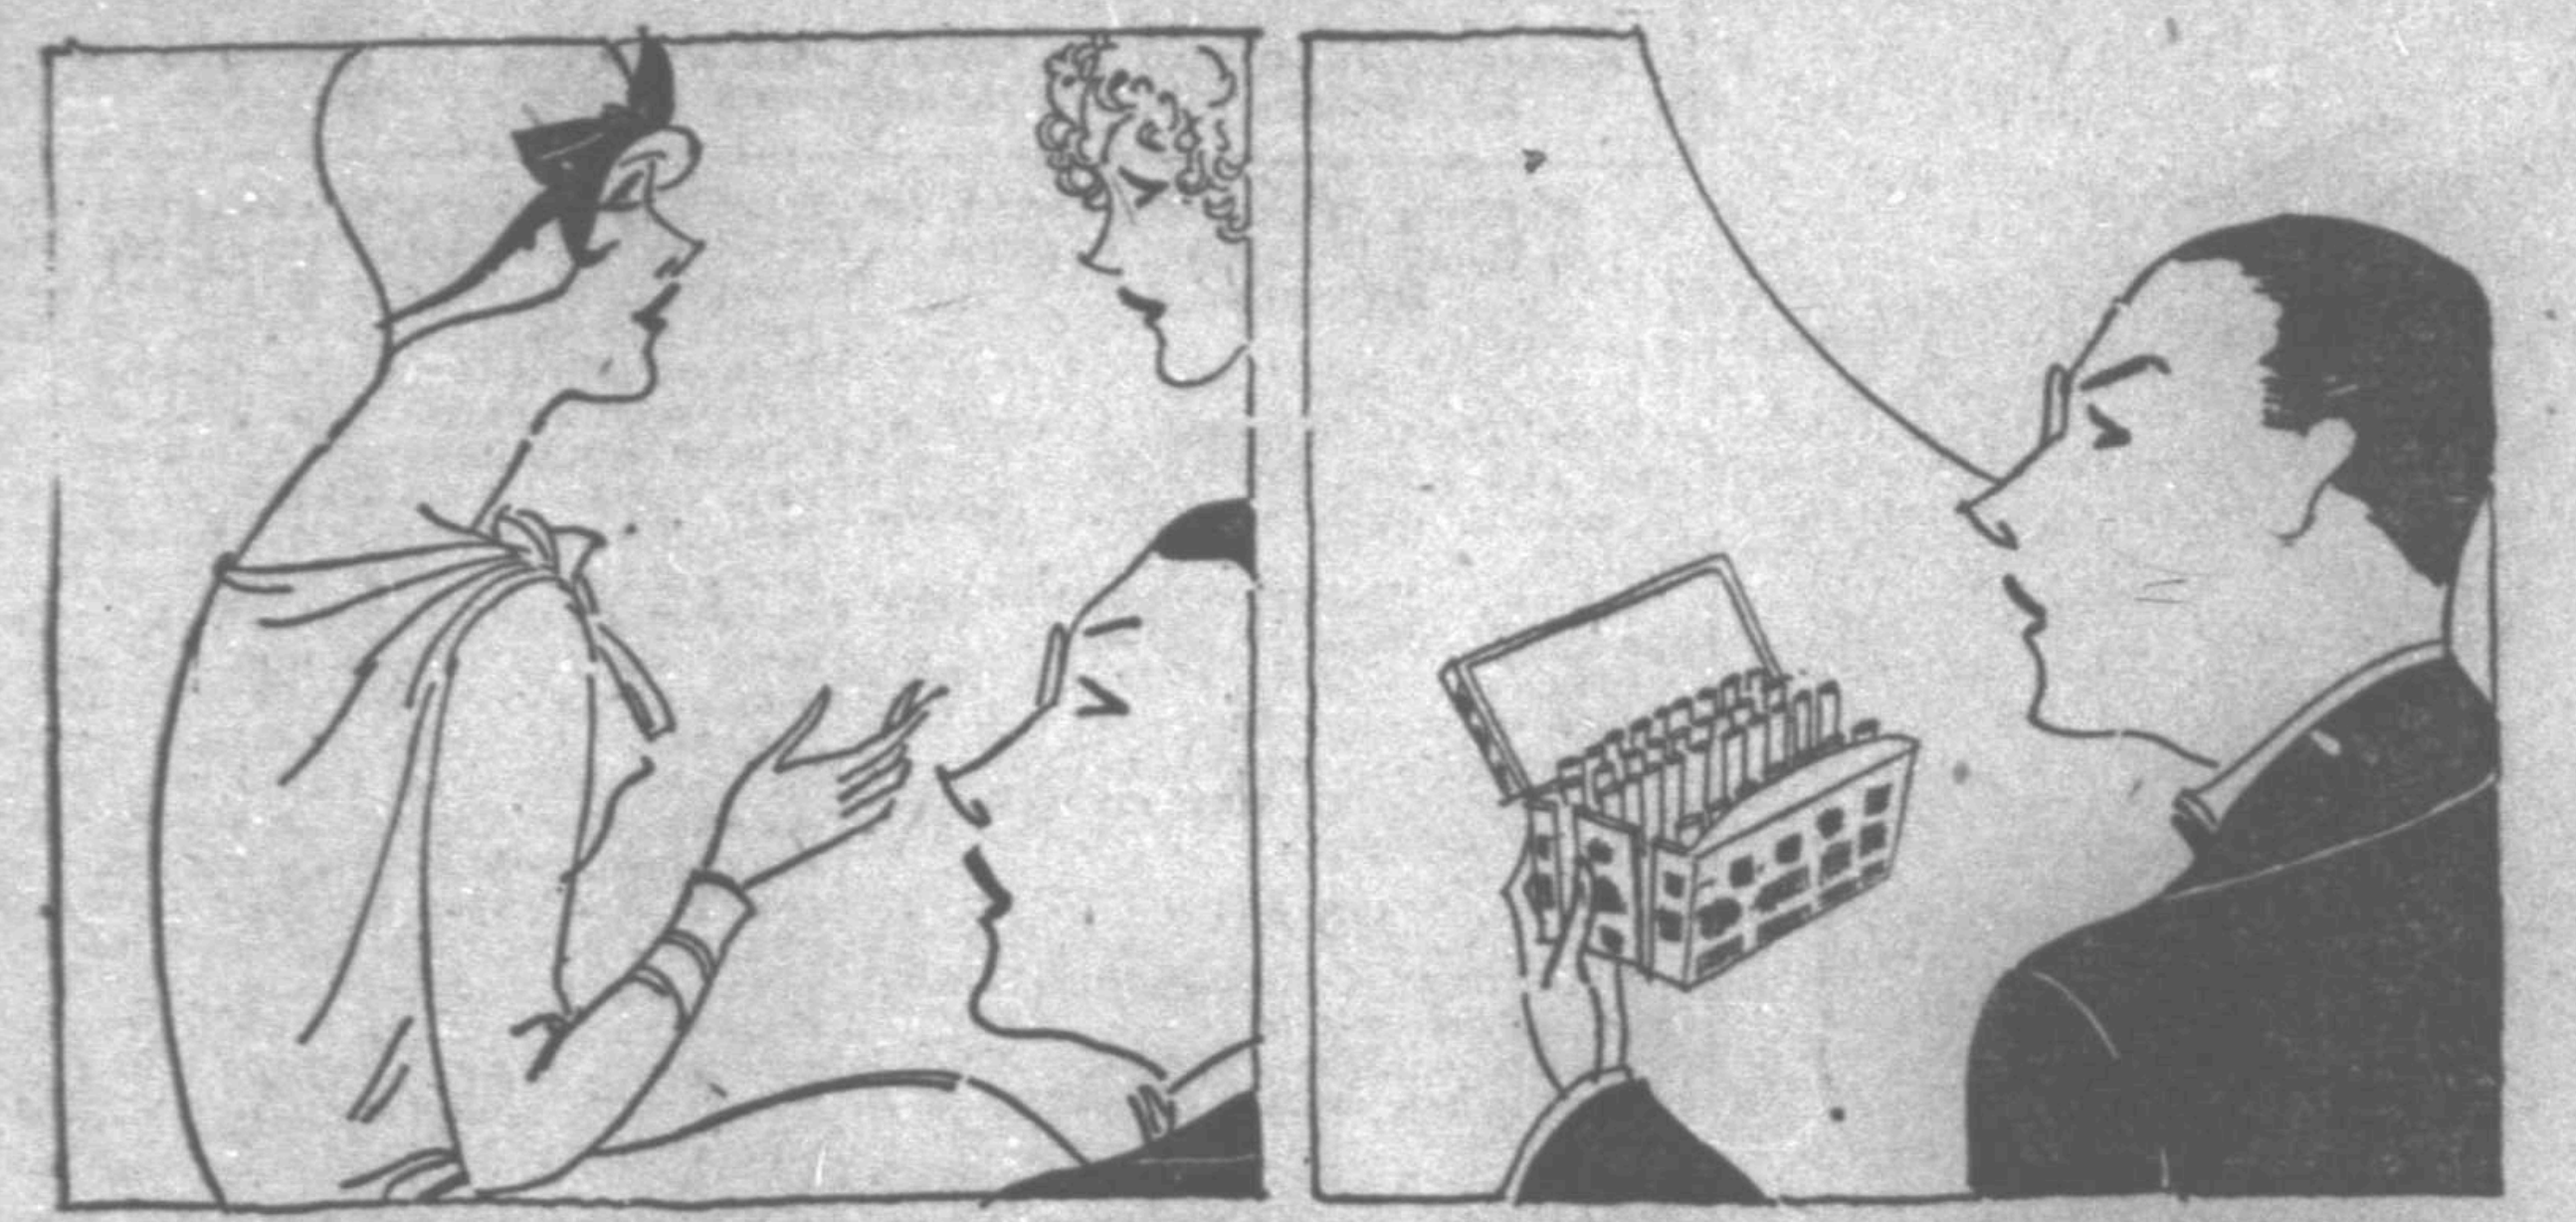
You will be far happier when you are a busy, self-supporting woman than you are now, eating the bread of dependence and having to endure your mother's and your sister's unkind reproaches.

DOROTHY DIX.

MODISH MITZI

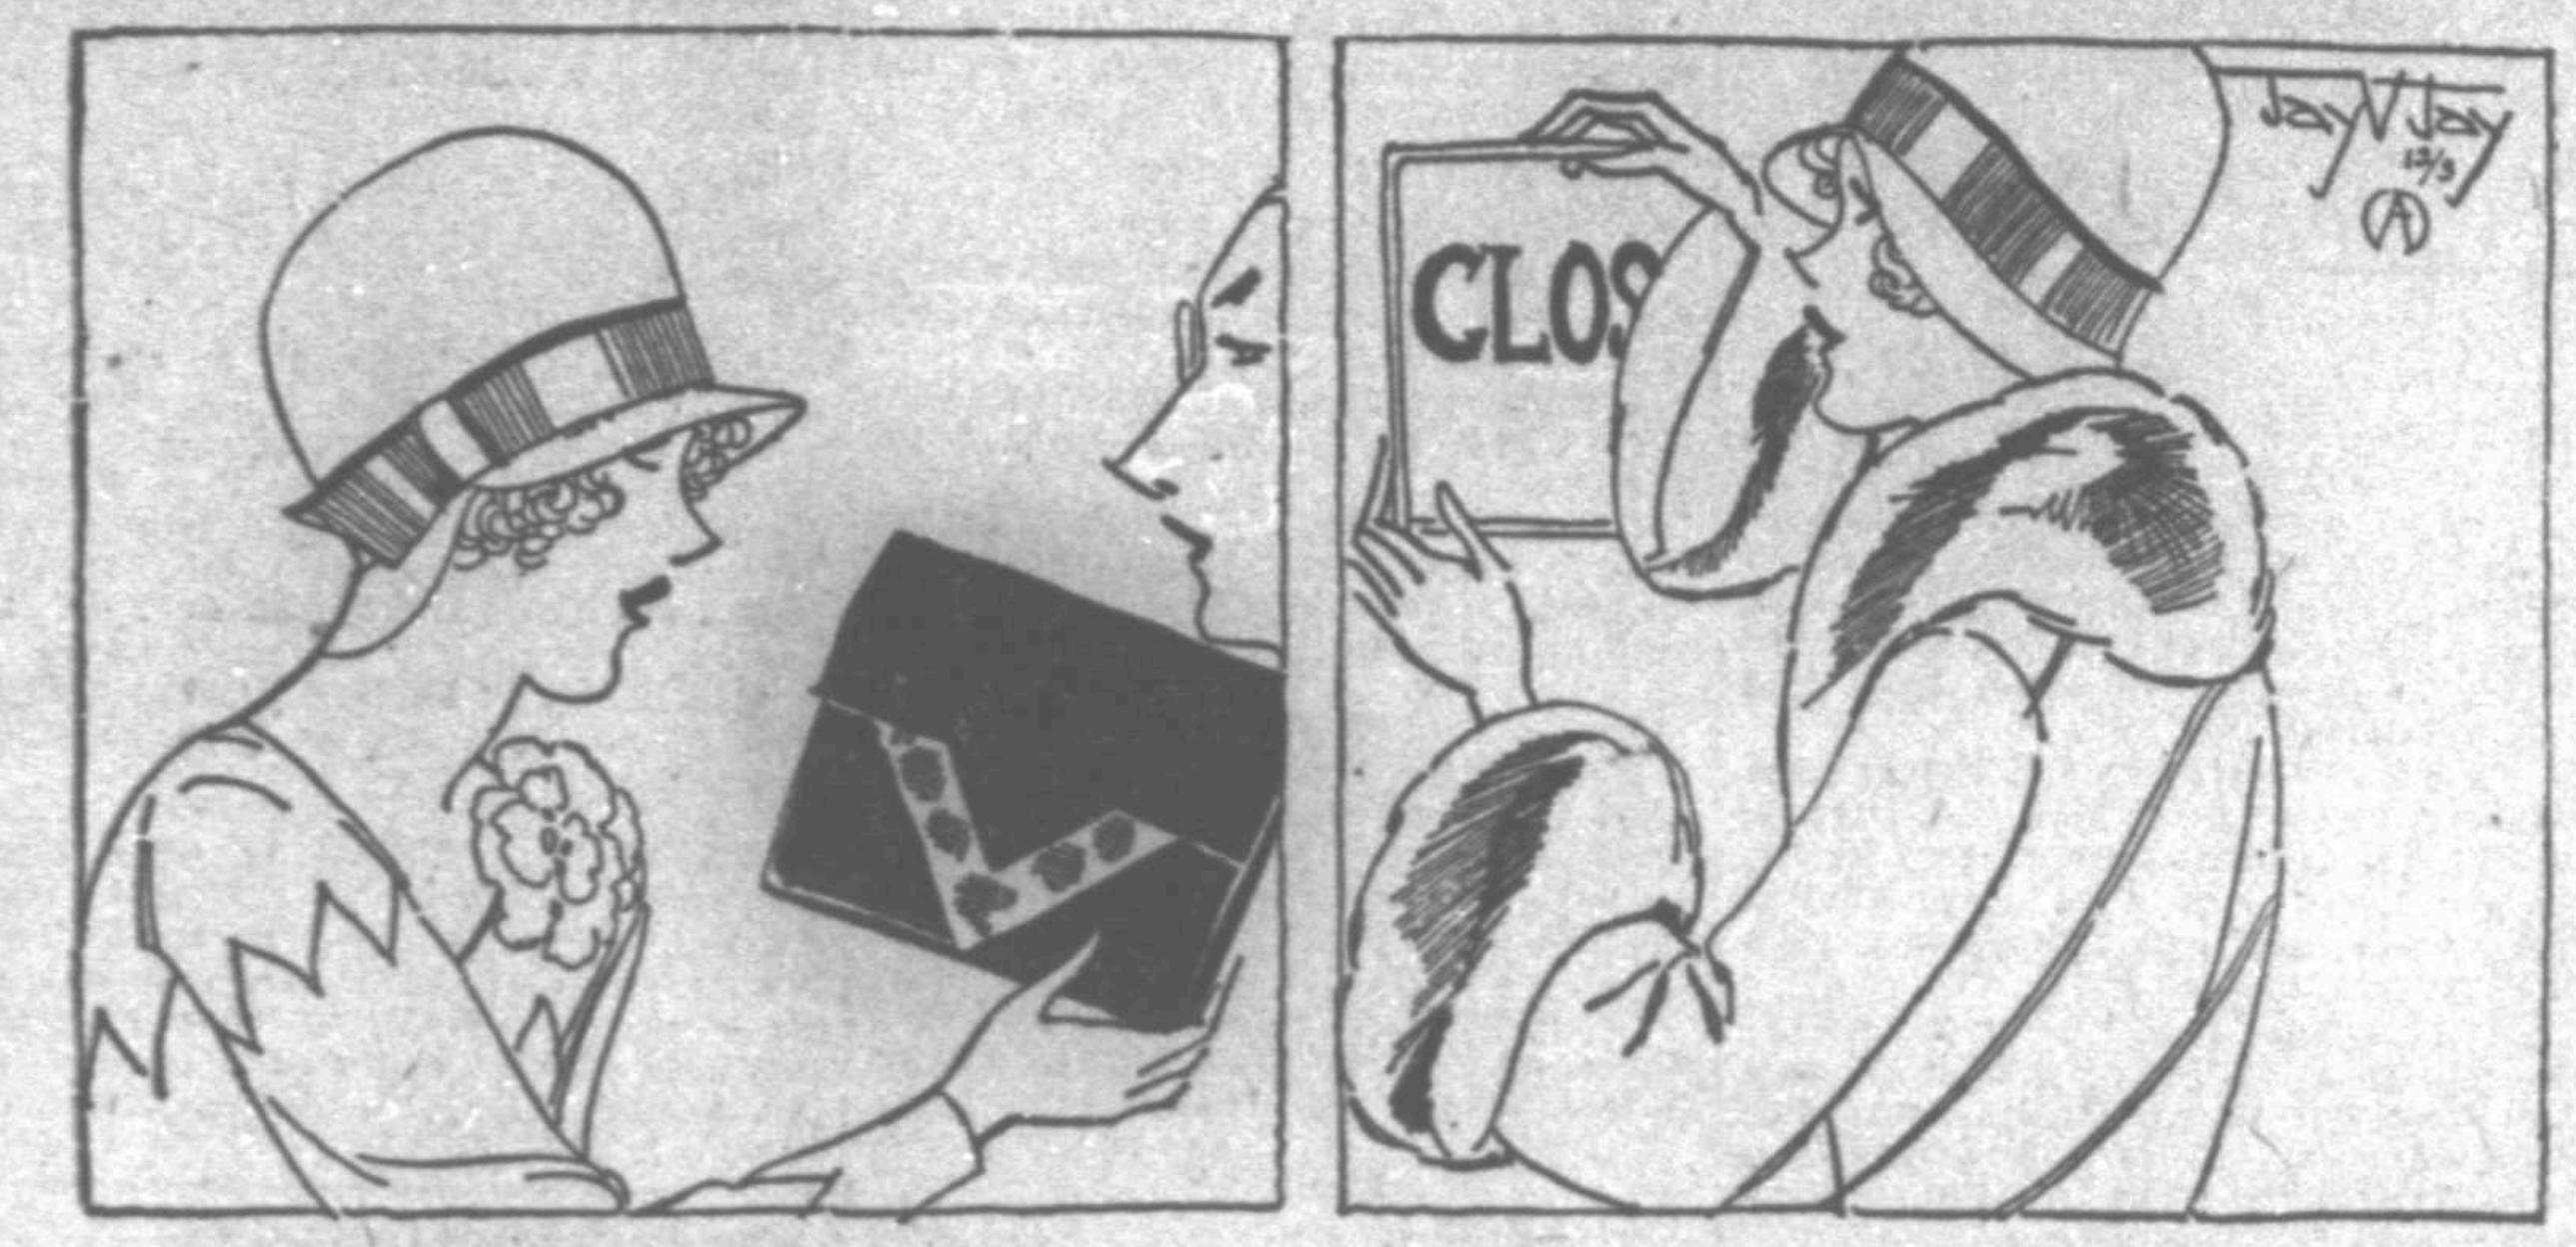
Polly Closes Out

By JAY V. JAY



Polly has decided to close her gift shop—at least she will as soon as she can sell the last gift. She really can't give teh time to it! Mitzi has enlisted the Goofer's assistance in closing out. He'll know what to do about it—at least he will when he sees the shop.

The girls show the Goofer a cigarette container covered with leather trimmings. Well, he'll know what to do with that. He always wanted one himself. That this one is of genuine skin adds to the its attractiveness. It also holds a prodigious number of cigarettes.



The envelope pocket book trimmed with feather also appeals to the Goofer. He'll buy it for his mother. Polly encourages him, of course, by saying that she knew he'd know what to do with her problems. He's really most helpful.

Tho few things left were sold outright to the Goofer. It seemed to him easier that way. It made his losses Polly's gain. And, after all, it was the quickest way to get Polly to go to tea with him. Chivalry is not dead. Not by a long shot.

Nearly four times as many houses will be constructed in England in 1927 as in 1913.

A lecture on fish was a feature of a tea recently given by the emperor of Japan.

Voice of Main Street

A LITTLE coterie of democratic women in the city of Washington known as the Woman's National Democratic club jumped into the headlines when they announced the democratic slogan for all the democratic men and women voters of the country for the campaign of 1928. Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard of Maine is responsible for the slogan. Read it, "Eight Years of Wall Street—Give Main Street a Chance."

Isn't it a hair lifter? Isn't it a rabble rouser? Isn't it a blood tingler? It is certain to incite the great massed mob of the followers and the alleged followers of Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson and Grover Cleveland to the highest pitch of political frenzy.

It appears that all the grand old party needed was a slogan to win in November of next year. Now a daughter of Maine has invented one. Pass it on down the line. It is the greatest harmonizer ever invented. A democratic sister from South Carolina submitted a slogan, "By Their Loots Ye Shall Know Them." This Palmetto bomb was thrown in the waste basket.

Another bomb from the Palmetto state was submitted to the judges on award, "Tariff Relief Means Farm Relief." There is a lot of truth suggested; tariff relief would bring relief to the tillers of the soil, but the bomb failed to explode and it was thrown aside.

Of course the prohibition issue bobbed up. A democratic sister, who has a habitat on the banks of the Potomac submitted this, "My Eye, We're Dry." This vociferous explosion did not make a dent. Why, even the judges laughed when a California sister tossed this one on the table, "You Bet, We're Wet."

Politics has an amusing side. Burchard gave the country, in the long ago, "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion." He sounded the slogan for James G. Blaine. It was a boomerang. It destroyed, politically, Burchard and it defeated and broke the heart of James G. Blaine.

Now what will this one do? "Eight Years of Wall Street—Give Main Street a Chance." Really the truth is that Main street is in New England, in the rural eastern seaboard states, in the rural midwest and far west and northwest. There are Main streeters and they vote the Wall street ticket.

They have been voting the Wall street ticket ever since the close of the civil war. For the most part they are the growers of things, dominated by the makers of things and never recognized when high tariffs are made for the protection "of American labor."

Beat the Drums, sound the tomtoms, clash the cymbals and "let her go."

A Woman the Winner

A CASH award of $25,000 for the writing of a novel judged the best of 1391 manuscripts submitted in the contest conducted by the Woman's Home Companion and the John Day Company will be paid Miss Katherine Holland Brown of Quincy, Ilinois, as soon as she can be found. The publishers who conducted the conquest say Miss Brown at present is traveling somewhere in the south. The novel is called "The Father." She all ready has written several books and short stories.

After all the centuries, a daughter has vindicated The Old Man. Father has been given a place in the picture. Women writers submitted the 1391 manuscripts in the contest where the bright member of the Brown family copped the $25,000 cash prize. Another priez of $25,000 offered for the best novel submitted by the man will go unrewarded, because none of the approximately 500 manuscripts submitted was judged good enough.

Man appears to be deteriotating. Perhaps the judges were members of the sisterhood and gave the male brutes a shade the worst of it. Well, there is one consolation—the prize pugilists who rake down a million dollars a night and the baseball players and football champs continue to draw the largest crowds in American history.

Will "The Father" be one of the six best sellers? Not unless it makes a hit with the ladies for they are the book buyers of the nation.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By BURTON RASCOE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Trysting places in the metropolis have their own distinct characters. The Pennsylvania hotel is brash, cheerful, noisy, and even with its deep-cushioned lounges, partly shaded in the vast lobby, it has always seemed to me an indecently public meeting place for lovers. There is, in the Pennsylvania lobby, always a plethora of traveling men, as there is also in the McAlpin, the Astor and the Waldorf, and any consciousness on the part of lovers of the impatient or cynical attitude these go-getters must have toward the tender emotions when displayed so openly must be disconcerting. Yet with page boys crying "Mr. Garfunkel, Mr. Eisenstein, Mrs. Hansen, Mr. O'Keefe, Mr. Garfunkel, Mr. Eisenstein, Mr. Hansen, Mr. O'Keefe, Mr. Garfunkel—" and porters rushing about with bags and the noise of a thousand voices in conversation about them, young men and women will meet there and gaze tenderly into each other's eyes and carry on muffled conversations and hold hands before going out to the movies or to the Roseland dancing palace.

The Waldorf, with its old Peacock Alley, lined with red plush chairs embracing hard-eyed females with legs crossed in a sort of arrogant and defiant display, always makes me wonder what sort of birds these women are waiting for. Certainly nothing less than multi-millionaires and probably most of them with faces like Mussolini and physiques like Hackenschmidt; for the women are so Junoesque and so opulent in furs, pearls, diamonds and legs. I like that hotel once I have run the gauntlet of those terrifying women and get to the tinkling refinement of its tearoom or its grand ballroom or grand banquet room, still presided over my the inimitable Oscar. But to reach them I have the same impulse to run down Peacock Alley that a negro has in passing a graveyard at night.

More quiet and subtle are the atmospheres of the Ambassador, the Park Lane and the Gladstone, and trysts there take on a sort of Adolphe Menjou aspect. As you walk up the wide staircase leading to the lobby of the Biltmore, you are confronted with a three-sided bench, set into a niche, completely filled with girls and women facing you, and all waiting for their sweeties or, in some cases, their husbands. They scan your face with that inquisitive but chilly glance that detectives have at the line-up of suspects for identification after a police haul. It is disconcerting also in another way. A man may be coming up right behind you, but you haven't heard or noticed him on account of the heavily-carpeted stairs. A face in that bevy may brighten and smile and come forward as though she were going to embrace you on the spot; and by the time you have reached the head of the stairs you discover, with some relief, that she is not making for you at all. But not until you have felt rather ridiculous.

The Roosevelt is polite and softtoned, and has so many corridors and so much mezzanine space, that trysters may meet there inconspicuously. The Ritz, of course, has an air all its own. The real meeting place at the Ritz is a lobby just outside the tearoom and its floor space is about the size of a night club dance floor or a kitchenette. The girls look mostly like Millicent Rogers Ramos and there is a liberal sprinkling of visiting English, French, Argentine and Brazilian gentry, and the chatter is mostly in French, Spanish or English accents, imitated or real. The place is so crowded that if you stand there for five minutes you come away smelling of ten diferent kinds of perfume.

Other trysting places in New York include the corridor or the front steps of the public library, the space around the information desk at the Grand Central statioin, the various drug stores along Forty-second street, and so on. But by accident I discovered the most satisfactory of all trysting places, which, if I am ever in a mood for trysting, I think I shall take advantage of. On the east balcony overlooking the grand corridor of the Grand Central station there is a perpetual exhibitiion of various types of railroad trains from the first one used by the New York Central down to comparatively recent times. You can get a long distant view of them from the main floor of the station; and it appears that everybody, including myself, is satisfied with that view and never takes the trouble to climb the stairs and inspect the exhibit more closely. I had been meaning to for years, and only the other afternoon, while waiting for my wife to arrive, who had missed a train, I went up there.

I did not get to inspect the engines. Two lovely-doveys had discovered the isolation of the place, and they were sitting on a support for one of the engines, with their wings softly enfolding each other; and when I saw them, I did not wait to cough: I tip-toed out.

Money Love

By BEATRICE BURTON Author of "SALLY'S SHOULDERS" "HONEY LOU" "THE HOLLYWOOD GIRL," ETC.

"It Could All Be Yours," said Sue

READ THIS FIRST:

LILY LEXINGTON is the spoiled only daughter of the CYRUS LEXINGTONS, who lives far beyond their means. She realizes her highest ambition when she becomes engaged to STALEY DRUMMOND, a rich bachelor older than herself. On the day after he proposes, she goes down town to meet her chum, SUE CAIN. On the way she sees a man watching her, and feels herself oddly attracted by him before she notices that he is in the uniform of a taxi driver. Moved by some sudden impulse, she jumps into the cab and her friendship with him begins.

She learns that he owns his cab and is going to sell it to raise money to finance a piston ring invention of his. He tells her he will go into some other kind of work until the invention is successful, to keep himself afloat, and Lily is down-hearted because she knows she won't see him after he stops driving the cab. Her friend, SUE CAIN, tells her she's foolish to even glance at a poor cab driver when she can have a man like Stanley, provided she really cares enough about him to tolerate him as a husband. About the time Lily makes up her mind to be honest with Staley her mother announces the engagement and the wedding date is set for early in June.

Staley becomes suspicious of her when she takes Pat's identification card from the cab and he comes to the house for it. She denies having it, but later admits to Pat that she has it. Then, one day—the last day of cab driving for Pat—Staley passes them in the road. In her excitement, Lily leaves the cab without paying her fare, and rushes to Staley's car, hoping he won't notice that it's Pat's car. But Pat comes driving up alongside for his money and when he's gone Staley asks her to be honest with him for once and tell him how friendly she is with Pat. She tells a lie and says she isn't friendly with him at all. But in that moment she decides to forget him for good, and thanks fortune he's selling the cab.

CHAPTER IX

No woman ever tried to make herself care for a man more than Lily tried to make herself care for Staley Drummond during the first few days of that warm and balmy May.

A hundred times a day she told herself that she was the luckiest girl in town to be getting him—and that she was perfectly happy.

She wore his flowers, and ate his chocolates, and read the books that he brought her.

On the first Sunday in the month she went to his house on Wallingford Heights with her mother and father, to have dinner.

Staley's house was a very beautiful house, with moss-green carpets and very old Italian furniture and very wonderful old silver and paintings in it. There was a little conservatory at the southern end of it and the big, luxurious rooms were filled with flowers—pale-pink and yellow roses and carnations that sent a spicy, sweet fragrance into the air.

The table was a long, narrow one, covered with a satiny yellow cloth, and the water glasses and salad plates were clear yellow glass. So were the roses in the center, and so were the little ash trays that were set on the table with the coffee.

"What fun it would be to live in this house with someone you were wild about," thought Lily, and then reminded herself that there couldn't be a better pal than Staley, who was always cheerful and entertaining—who was the best sport in the world.

"What fun it's going to be to live in this house, Staley," she said without the flicker of an eyelash. "It's the most beautiful place I've ever seen. Only—I'd like to furnish part of it myself. I wish you had two or three bare rooms for me to do."

Staley laughed. "I'll clear out a couple of them for you," he said, "if you like."

"He means it, too," Mrs. Lexington said in her forciful, convincing way as they rode home that night. "There's nothing in the world too good for you, as far as Staley goes. And you're a very, very fortunate girl, Lily Lexington. I hope you know your luck!"

"I do," answered Lily. She felt soothed and contented tonight, with the memory of the beautiful quiet house still in her mind. Why, just to live in a place like that would be a joy. And the parties she could give in it—the clothes she would have!

"I'd love to go to Europe on my honeymoon," she thought dreamily. "I'll make Staley take me." She decided that in an instant.

"Yes, you're very lucky, Baby," her father echoed in his deep, slow voice.

And the next morning when Sue Cain came to the house she had the same chorus to sing.

Sue was one of those early birds who actually love to get up at the peep of dawn and go for a horseback ride or a long hike in short skirts and high boots. She came breezing in at half past nine to talk about her dress for the wedding. It was all settled that she was to be maid of honor.

"Hello, Sleepytime Girl!" she sang out, banging the door shut and plumping herself down on the bed. "If I spent the hours in bed that you do I'd have four double chins and a couple of hips. How you keep thin is a mystery to me—you're the laziest thing under the sun!"

Lily waved her hand over her breakfast tray. There was nothing on it but a glass of unsweetened grapefruit juice and a cup of coffee.

"That's how I do it. I've been hungry every day for a year," she yawned.

Sue gazed at her in admiration. "I never saw anything like you," she declared. "You never stir a finger to do anything, but everything you want comes to you—everything from breakfast trays to Staley Drummond. You lucky thing, you!"

She opened a fashion magazine she had brought with her and turned its pages to the picture of a dress she wanted to wear as Lily's maid of honor. A slim-waisted, full-skirted dress all aflutter with little ruffles.

"If your decorations are going to be white and yellow, why can't I have this made up in yellow with a picture hat of satin to match?"

bridesmaids going to wear?"

asked Sue. "And what are the

"I haven't even picked out my bridesmaides," Lily laughed. "I suppose I'd better do it pretty soon. The wedding's only five weeks off."

Five weeks! Only a little more than a month! And then she would be Mrs. Staley Drummond, with a town house and a country house and an automobile of her own and a chauffeur to drive it—a chauffeur—

For a second Pat France's face flashed out of her memory. The dark hair, the quick blue eyes, the fine nose and mouth.

Then she put him out of her mind just as swiftly, as she and Sue went on talking over the wedding.

"I think we'll go to Paris for our honeymoon," she told Sue, sipping the last of her bitter black coffee. "And then when we come back we can give a lot of parties at the house at Eagle Rock. That's all I ask of life, Sue. A good time, and a big house and lots of money so that I can give my friends a good time always."

Sue let out that little irritating giggle of hers that could mean so many sarcastic things. "You want a few clothes and diamonds and automobiles and diamonds thrown in, don't you, Piggy?" she inquired, gaily, and then her dark, vivid face became grave.

"It can all be yours, Lily," she said. "Staley would get you a corner lot on the moon if you asked for it, I think. Jack says he would, and Jack knows him better than anyone does."

Then she became a shade more solemn and went on: "Lily, you do care a lot for Staley away down deep in your heart, don't you? That crush you had on the cab man was just silly nonsense, wasn't it?"

Lily stirred the dregs in her cup. "Whatever it was, it's over."

The next day marked the beginning of Mrs. Lexington's plans for the wedding.

The caterer came to the house to take her order for the wedding supper. The florist came and looked over the rooms, and talked about the price of yellow roses and smilax and potted palms.

A duchess-lace veil came from a trunk in the attic, and was sent to be cleaned. Yards of ivory-white satin arrived, and a little dressmaker named Sarah MacCabe came to the house to start Lily's wedding dress.

It was all very exciting and pleasant, and Lily began to thrill to it. She always enjoyed buying things for herself, and she spent practically all of the first week in May in the shops, charging stockings by the dozen, perfume by the pint, powder by the pound, and gloves by the box, to her father's account. She had the time of her life.

Then on Saturday a dreadful thing happened.

Mrs. Lexington had insisted that Buller, the new butler, should learn to drive the blue limousine.

"There's no reason in the world why you shouldn't drive that car," Lily heard her tell him the day after he came to work in the house. "Carrie has always looked after the house, and you haven't a thing to do but wait on table and keep the pantry clean. That leaves you lots of free time for driving. So from now on, I'm going to expect you to take Mr. Lexington to the office every morning and then bring the car home."

And without waiting for an "aye, yes or no" from Buller, she had sent for an instructor to teach him to drive the blue limousine.

On Saturday morning it was raining—a drizzle that made the pavements shine as if oil had been poured upon them.

"It's a bad day for Buller to drive alone the first time," Mr. Lexington said, with a shake of his head when he heard the car backing out of the garage.

"Oh, fiddle-dee-dee!" Mrs. Lexington's tone was snappy. "If he's going to drive that car, today's as good a day for him to start as any other day. It's not going to stop raining in this world just because we have a new chauffeur, Cy."

Lily heard the tale-end of her speech as she came running down the stairs in a new suit and hat of hunter's green cloth. "I'm going down town, too, dad," she called to her father. "I saw some shell-pink slips yesterday, and I think I'll get three or four of them. I don't really need them, but they were so pretty—all Irish lace and embroidered net."

"A girl can't have too many nice underthings," said Mrs. Lexington, darting a defiant look at her better half. "And I'm sure your father wants you to have everything nice for your trousseau!"

Mr. Lexington gave her a mournful kiss. After all, he had to pay the bills for the Irish lace and the embroidered net—for the wedding supper and the hundreds of yellow roses and bushels of similax.

He was the pack-horse who carried the load of debts.

The car skidded as it turned into Montpelier road.

"Carefully, there, Buller," Mr. Lexington said. "Take your corners slowly—especially on a wet day like this."

Buller touched his cap respectfully and said: "Yes, sir."

The road was wide, and there was very little traffic until they reached the edge of the business district. Then automobiles and street cars and wagons began to weave around them like a net that dragged them along with it.

"Take it easy, Buller," Mr. Lexington said nervously, as they reached the corner of Fifteenth street and Albemarle. For the blue car was going at much too smart a speed.

Then, a truck loaded with oranges and celery and boxes of apples, came toward them. Buller did the very worst thing that he could have done. He suddenly threw on his brakes—not only his foot brake, but his emergency brake!

Lily saw the truck of market produce tower above them for an instant. Then a noise like a cannon sounded in her ears, and her eyes were blinded by purple darkness shot with lightnings of pain . . . . After that she knew nothing else for hours.

It was late afternoon when she opened her eyes. She was lying in her own bed in her own room, and the first thing she thought about when she came to was the pale-pink princess slips.

"I didn't get them," she said, aloud, and in her own ears her voice seemed to come from a great way off.

"You didn't get what?" asked a voice that she did not know. A white-capped nurse appeared from nowhere, very sunddenly. She came up to the side of the bed.

"My slips."

The nurse smiled down at her. "Don't worry about your slips," she said. "Just be glad that you have your life. You remember what happened to you, don't you?"

Lily nodded, after a minute. It began to come back to her—the scream of the brakes as Buller threw them on—the oncoming truck—the sound of her own terrified shriek as it hit the blue limousine.

"How's my father?" she asked. "Is he hurt, too?"

*Celery and Nut Salad: Slice celery in quarter-inch pieces. Mix with desired quantity of chopped nuts that have been roasted in a pan in the oven until thoroughly browned, or dextrinized. By this process most of the protein is destroyed, leaving behind a flavoring mixed with the dextrose which is very agreeable to the taste, and is a food which may be used with almost any meal. Heap the celery and nut mixture on beds of shredded lettuce. The addition of chopped parsley adds a pleasing taste.

QUESTION: G. D. writes: "When I was a year old I had whooping cough and from the coughing I lost almost all hearing in one ear. A doctor told me it would be almost impossible for me to ever hear in that ear again, but he said one of the nerves had been deadened and the drum was too weak. Do you think it is possible for me to regain hearing in that ear? Or, do you think I have waited too long? I am 20 years old."

ANSWER: Your trouble may be caused by the closing of the eustachian [illegible] from the throat into the inner ear. It is often possible to relieve the stoppage by curing any excessive catarrhal condition. This can be accomplished through dieting. I have seen several cases of deafness caused by whooping cough which have been cured through chiropractic treatment. It seems that the continued hard cough practically misplaces some of the vertebrae, which makes an impingement upon the nerves supplying the ear. If more pressure exists on one side than the other, it is possible that the nerve supply will be almost completely shut off. If this is the cause of your deafness you will notice an improvement in your hearing after one or two treatments given by a chiropractor, osteopath, naturopath, or any physician who understands manipulative therapy.

QUESTION: Reader asks: "Is it proper to use stewed prunes or figs, or applesauce with a breakfast of oatmeal porridge?"

ANSWER: It is all right to use stewed prunes, figs, raisins, or applesauce with a breakfast containing real wholewheat or real oatmeal.

QUESTION: Miss H. D. writes: "What kind of mixture is 'Olla Podrida'?"

ANSWER: This is a Spanish dish, consisting of a rich stew of meat, sausages, cabbage, peas, etc. The name "Olla Podrida" is sometimes used to describe a jumble of words or ideas—the dish, itself, being such a varied mixture.

QUESTION: D. K. D. asks: "Will you please tell me how to reduce the ankles?"

ANSWER: There is only one method I know of to reduce the ankles, and that is by exercise. Many twisting and bending exercises may be used, but walking is the best one of all, and will reduce the ankles as much as they can be reduced.

Kitchen Hints

BY MRS. MARY MORTON
MENU HINTS

One way of using up the roast is the meat pie. Sometimes it is best to cook the meat a little more before putting into the pudding pan, especiall yif it is a little tough. Onions, potatoes and other vegetables may be added to the meat pie if desired, but should be at least partially cooked before adding the crust.

Meat Pie Baked Potatoes
Hot Biscuit
Tomatoes and Cumumbers Sliced with French Dressing
Dutch Apple Pudding
Milk or Tea

Today's Recipes

Meat Pie—Cut the meat in suitable pieces, and arrange in a baking dish in its own gravy. If the amount is not too generous, use plenty of gravy and invert a tea cup in the center of the dish to hold the crust.

Make a rich biscuit crust and lay it carefully over the top of the dish, or cut into biscuit shape and cover top. Bake in a hot oven until the crust is baked through and nicely browned.

Roll and cut the rest of the biscuit dough and place in a baking pan and put into the oven when the meat pie comes out. Then they will be ready to eat when the family is seated at the table.

Dutch Apple Pudding—One pint two) cups) flour, two teaspoons sugar, one-fourth cup butter, one egg, one cup milk, one-half teaspoon salt, two teaspoons baking powder, four sour apples. Mix dry ingredients. Beat the egg, add milk, then stir into dry mixture. Spread one-half inch thick in shallow baking pans. Core, pare and cut apples in eighths and lay them on the dough, spinkle with a little sugar. Bake in a hot oven twenty or thirty minutes. Serve with lemon sauce.

Hamburg Steak
(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe.)

One pound of chopped beef made into balls with a little chopped onion, half a cup of bread crumbs, an egg or two and flavored with pepper and salt. Drop into sauce made o fone pint tomatoes, one chopped green pepper and one chopped onion. Simmer for one-half hour and serve with sauce poured over them.

Broil—To cook by direct heat from the fire. The ideal fire for broiling is over charcoal. Over coals the material is held by the bars of a gridiron or broiler. In broiling by gas flame the material rests on a rack set on a pan that is run under the flame. It is a quick method of cooking.

Can Be Used Twice

If you wish to save crocheted lace for another pillowcase, try this method whe nmaking. Sew strong rick-rack braid on the under side of the hem, letting the points extend below the hem far enough to catch your hook instead of hooking into the pillowcase. Then when the case wears out, rip off the bral dand sew onto the new case. The lace will always outwear two pillowcases.

Easily Eaten

A nice way to prepare peaches to be take non picnics is to wash them well, leave the skin on. Then with a knife make a series of cuts lengthwise of the peach through to the pit and about three-fourths inch apart. Leave a small space at each end of the peach uncut so that it will hold together. In other words, consider the peach as a globe representing the earth and carve the meridians from one polar circle to the other, leaving the polar regions intact. Wrap each peach separately in waxed paper and at lunch time it will easily come apart in right size pieces.

An attractive door knocker is a nice present to give the young couple who have just built a new home. Of course find out the style o farchitecture and buy a knocker that will conform with the period.

Always looking for something a bit "different" to serve, are we not? The menu for a day submitted may not be good for those who are on a reducing diet, but would taste good and may give you some idea of varying the food you were planning to serve, if you cannot use the whole menu.

Saratoga Lamb Chops For Change

Winner 2.50 Menu Prize

Tomato Surprise
Clear Consomme Cheese Straws
Celery Olives
Saratoga Lamb Chops
Potatoes with Melted Butter and Parsley
Peas Carrots in Cream Sauce
Avocado Pear Salad
Toasted Almond Ice Cream
Fruit Cake

This make a most attractive and appetizing dinner, which also is simple to prepare and serve.

Tomato Surprise is a colorful hors d' oeurve prepared by selecting a very large bright tomato for each person, remove the inside entirely and stuffing the shell with creamed crabmeat, and decorating the top with grated egg yolk and a sprig of parsley.

Clear consomme:

A shin of beef and a shin or knouckle of veal are wiped with a damp cloth and meat removed from bones and cut into blocks. Put two tablespoonfuls of sugar and a sliced onion in soup kettle to brown. Add meat from veal and beef. When this is carefully peared, add bones and five quarts of water. Cover and bring mixtures slowly to a boil and skim. Cook for three hours over low flame; the soup should barely bubble, not boil. At the end of three hours add one onion into which have been stuck twelve cloves, a bay leaf, a sliced carrot, a few green celery tops, salt and pepper. Cover the mixture and simmer another hour. Strain the stock and leave to cool. When cold remove fat from surface. Reheat for serving.

Saratoga lamb chops:

Should be ordered from the butcher well in advance to allow him time to prepare this excellent loin chop. Wipe each chop carefully with damp cloth and place on broiling rack to cook slowly. When done season with salt, butter and lemon juice, and serve on chop plate garnished with parsley.

New potatoes are boiled and simply served with melted butter and chopped parsley.

Half an avocado pear is allowed for each person, and served with French dressing.

Toasted almond ice cream:

Make a custard foundation for the ice cream by scalding two cups of milk, adding three egg yolks beaten with one-half cup of sugar and pinch of salt, and cooking in double boiler five minutes. Fold in half pint of cream, whipped, and three-fourths cup of toasted almonds that have been ground. Freeze.

The program as outlined is said to be one of the most ambitious ever presented before the people. The election was ordered on November 29 by commissioners' court.

Funds derived from the bonds, in case they are voted, will be used both in the construction of new roads, and in the retirement of district bonds. The election notice specifies that $120,000 of the issue will be used to retire district bonds, while $880,000 will be used to construct macadamized, graveled or paved roads. It is also specified that $220,000 of the $880,000 shall be used for the construction of main roads.

HOME-KEEPING HEARTS

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Lure of Travel Loses Power When You're in Love

By Beatrice Fairfax,
An Authority on the Problems of Love and Marriage.

LOVE of home and love of travel are two conflicting motives which, between them, keep this old world of ours progressing. Fascination of the unknown, back of the urge to travel, impels pioneers to conquer every wilderness. Love of home and family passes the torch of life to each succeeding generation.

Somewhere in your nature these two primitive urges—longing for home and longing for adventurous travel—are hidden. Some day, they may clash. Then there will be a battle royal.

It is wise for every girl and young man to look about a bit and enjoy care-free good times before settling down to the responsibilities of home and marriage. If these play-years include travel, so much the better. Rich girls often find their travel year through a school or college far away from home. Others, less affluent, sometimes plan to teach school or obtain work in a distant city, for the sake of change, travel, possible adventure. The travel spirit is stronger in most young men than in girls. Usually, however, when Cupid comes along, desire to see the world takes a back seat and the two in love have "but one common thought"—enthusiastic desire to marry and start their own little home.

But this is not always the case. Only last week I had a letter from a young man I shall call Dick, which told of a battle with himself.

Dick, it seems, is in love with the nicest girl in the world. He had intended to marry her if she would have him. Then at the last moment his love of adventure was too strong for him. He enlisted in the army for three years of travel. Now he's very forlorn. He longs for his girl and the home they were planning together.

The vagabond spirit is supposed to be light-hearted. But wanderers are usually lonely. Love of home is perhaps the most primitive instinct. When it fails to find expression in time, restless discontent, melancholy and intense loneliness follow. Heart hunger for home and all that goes with home only becomes more insistent when it is suppressed.

"I'll try the stage a year or two, then come back and marry Jack," reflected Anne. "Jack loves me, so he will wait for me. And I do want to travel."

But alas! When Anne returned, three years later, she found Jack had turned for consolation to another girl, deciding that Anne was too fond of change and excitement ever to settle down happily as his wife.

Travel and a career at the cost of love are about as satisfying as apples of the Dead Sea, which are said to turn to ashes at the slightest touch.

"A rolling stone gathers no moss," runs the old proverb. "But it becomes polished," some modern wit has added.

If it comes to a choice, however, love and home are more important to your happiness than travel and adventure if you are the average girl or young man. For the home-hunger is the deeper.

Marry the finest young man you know while you are still young, while you have strength and courage for hum-drum drudgery, difficult adjustments and monotony, which are as much a part of the great adventure of marriage and homemaking as its joy and peace and achievement.

Make your nest with the man you love. It will be a real home, the sweetest place on earth, if you and he bring all your efficiency and energy, all your sympathy and understanding, to the task of homemaking.

Are Your Manners Correct?

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

"Inspire" Gallantry.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: You have helped me so many times through your kind advice to others, but there are some questions that I should like to ask for myself.

1. Is it proper for a girl to meet a young man in front of the theatre that they are to attend? Assuming that the girl has gone out with the young man about a dozen times and she feels that she knows him rather well.

2. Is it proper for a girl who has known a young man for about three months, to spend a whole day on Sunday with him? A married couple are in the party.

L. E. G. B.

THIS is correct for convenience, but not for gallantry! It just isn't courteous for a man to ask a girl to do this, unless it is absolutely necessary for him to do so, when any girl with common sense will understand his asking. But for him to make it a practice—well, a girl who allows him to do so, is a foolish girl. Nothing is so easy as to allow a man's gallantry, his courtesy in things of this kind, to become lax. I don't mean that a girl should "nag" him about being "polite," but there are many subtle ways that she may show him that a well-bred girl does not get all excited with delight when she is asked to meet her escort in front of the theatre they are to attend. Part of the invitation of the well-bred man is the taking for granted that he is to come for the girl and "beau" her to the theatre.

2. Yes.

Engagement Cards.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: I received a card from a girl friend announcing her engagement a few days ago. What is the proper thing for me to do? I would like to write to her, although I don't know the man to whom she is engaged.

E.

BY all means acknowledge the engagement announcement, telling your friend of your best wishes for her happiness and any other friendly comment that is appropriate.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

JOY OF JOYS:—to Have Lunch with a Man Who Has a Baby, Too!

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

WHAT DID YOU DO TODAY?
HAD A WONDERFUL LUNCH-HOUR! WITH A FELLOW WHO HAS A BABY TOO!

IN a joyful mood, when the silver lining shows, a fellow can count up on his spread fingers and not have enough for them all, quite a showing of wonderful and worth-while things to be grateful for!

His work—for there are other fellows who haven't any.

His wife—for those that some other unlucky fellows have are priced, not "above rubies," but at the rate of synthetic ones.

His beautiful baby—for it has a "good brain" and is, oh so much smarter and sweeter than most people's babies. And besides, he knows a fellow whose little child is gone, its tiny feet treading away beside those soundless ones of the Death Angel, its tiny hand in one of hers. How grateful he is that HIS is safe asleep in its bed when he clicks open his front door tonight!

Well—and his home—for it IS a home, even if it is tiny, and he can look at trees from his dinner table at night, and his baby has a gate of its own to swing on.

His automobile—ah, ah, it isn't one of the high-priced ones, but he PASSES them, and it's a great picnicker and its name is Cleopatra!

There are no mortgages, no debts, everybody's well, and the car runs. 'URRAY! All serene.

All these are joys, you betcha. But there are some little ones, peculiar ones, unexpected ones, that everybody has had a gift of once in a while, that seem to be the creme de la creme of gratification.

And one of them is to have lunch with a fellow who "HAS A BABY, TOO!" Oh, unspeakable satisfaction. You KNOW you do not bore him. And he certainly doesn't bore you. And he knows it. For how you both understand! Just the shine in his eyes and the delighted wag of his head is the very way YOU FEEL. And just as fast as either one of you gets through telling about what his baby did, the other fellow tells what HIS baby did. And then they both laugh insanely together!

Who has this experience save the two who have one? A fellow can't be himself about his baby with a man who never had one; unless he be that rare person who really understands and cares for the whole race of children. And there be such! But the one who doesn't. A fellow can't make his lunch-hour a festa for a baby that he does not care for and perhaps never saw. So a fellow must bury certain seething thoughts and boastings. He must burst with pride and yet keep it under cover.

But when he can overflow, and watch with understanding the pride of another father in the same state, then he goes home and tells a little wife who asks, "What did you do today?" that he "had a GREAT time at lunch. Liked it better than any in a long time. Had lunch with Dan. HE'S got a baby, too! A little boy. We had a great talk."

And his wife, knowing why the talk was what it was, had to laugh. And she heard with delight what Dan's little boy had done, and with pride the things that John had contributed about their little girl.

Bread Is Chief Staple of Well-Balanced Diet

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.,
Former President of the American Medical Association.

YOU may have been impressed with the notion that brown bread, costing the same, is cheaper than white bread, because it is more nourishing. This is a fallacy so far as the flour content of the two breads is concerned.

From an economic point of view white bread contains actually more than brown bread of the kind of nourishment which is ready for use by the body, and even if they cost the same, you would get more nourishment for your money in white bread than in brown. Actually brown is more expensive. Remembering that the vitamin B question is unimportant, as there is already plenty of B. in the diet, the only advantage is the dubious one of the scouring effects of whole-meal bread upon the bowel. And it is very doubtful whether a man wants to take his roughage in his principle article of food, and whether it is not better taken in one of his subsidiary foods.

The success of food faddists is based on the common belief that there should be a special diet for all ills. Doctors find that many of their patients will not leave them alone until they give them some sort of orders about diet, and so they recommend some safe kind of food simply to satisfy this need. But these are the people who fall an easy prey to the dietmonger. Diet is not a universal panacea, which will prevent or cure all diseases; on the contrary, its healing capacity is very limited. Moderation and variety are more valuable than the most carefully worked-out tables or the most brilliant ideas. They also have the merit of being strictly scientific.

Professor V. H. Mottram, of the University of London, supports Sir Thomas Horder's views on the brown versus white bread controversy.

White flour was invented because whole-meal bread was heavy, had an unattractive crust, needed a good deal of yeast, soon went rancid and easily harbored weevils. Roller milling was intended to remove the bran and germ; it gave a much whiter flour which kept better, because none of the oil from the germ got into it. Everyone was pleased except the food experts, who complained that the price paid was too heavy; that vitamin B was lost and valuable roughage and proteins were wasted. They even accused white flour of causing most of the digestive troubles that afflict us, and even indicted it as a cause of cancer. These statements, says Professor Mottram, are grossly exaggerated. The ordinary European gets any amount of vitamin B in other food, and much better protein than wheat germ in meat, milk and cheese. His fibre ration he gets from green vegetables and fruit. Many eminent authorities on both sides of the Atlantic, including Professor McCollum and Drs. Osborne and Mendel in America, held the same opinion after doing actual work on the subject. Eat brown bread if you like it, but not as a duty to yourself and your neighbors.

You will recall that I have frequently taken occasion to advise you against a "lopsided" diet. All lopsided diets are "faddist" diets. They are contrary to the findings based upon the largest and most scientific experiment ever tried—the experiment of universal human experience in eating. That experiment, like all great experiments, has many records of failure.

But out of it all has evolved the diets of peoples by which the various peoples live and have become adjusted to their respective environments. In Europe and America in particular, but practically all over the world, the diet of civilized peoples is a mixed and, on the average, a well-balanced diet. In all of them bread has been and still is the "staff of life" for all normal people.

HER HUSBAND'S SECRETARY

By William Almon Wolff

Eileen Meets Mrs. Foster

THEY stood together, Eileen and John MacVeagh, as far to the front of the ferryboat as they could get, watching the skyline of Manhattan. Eileen's breath came fast; she clung to John with a grip that made him turn and smile down at her.

Now, at last, and, readily for the first time, there was joy in her over this approach they were making together to a new home, a new life, a new city. New York vast, beautiful, mysterious, lay before them in the gathering dusk. A million points of fire twinkled in a million lighted windows. Before them was the harbor, murky, full of sombre life. A thousand strange noises assailed Eileen's ears, a thousand strange sights challenged her flickering eyes.

MacVeagh, too, was impressed. Never before as it happened, had he come to New York so, in the old way of tradition. He had come always in haste, borne through one or the other of the tunnels cut through the city's very heart to save men like him a half hour of a business day.

Now, tonight, time hadn't mattered, didn't matter. Tomorrow it would; it would be again the vital thing it had been for him almost ever since he could remember. But on this trip he hadn't hurried. They had stopped over in Chicago most of a day, taking an evening train out, rather than the swifter one that would have brought them to New York in the morning, in time for him to make his first appearance in his new office on the very day of his arrival.

"Show me where your office is," Eileen said. It was as if she could read his thoughts. But he had to laugh, ruefully.

"Honey—I can't!" he said. He pointed up beyond the white tower at Madison Square, with its great lighted clock. "Somewhere up there, in a great, tall building—but which one I don't know."

"Oh!" said Eileen, vaguely disappointed. "I thought it would be downtown. I thought all great business men had their offices downtown."

"Not any more. Oh, there's lots of business still done downtown, but a lot of offices are up around Forty-second now, and even farther up. I like it. We'll get an apartment on Park avenue and I'll be able to walk to work."

"It's going to be fun house hunting and buying furniture and everything," said Eileen. "I was terribly afraid I wouldn't have enough to do, but I guess I will."

"Sure you will—lots. But—well—this business of buying furniture—people turn that over pretty much to decorators these days. At least—that's what Mrs. Foster and some of those women I met told me. Better talk to them before you get in too deep."

"Do you mean they let some one else pick out their furniture?"

"Well, there are firms that make a specialty of it. Antiques, you know—and getting things matched right. I suppose there's a fashion about such things, just as there is about clothes. We'll have to look about a bit and see what's what."

"I don't think I'd like that," said Eileen. "I think I'll want to have my house as I want it, not as some interior decorator thinks it ought to be."

"Oh, well, they'd work with you—all they do is to see that you get the right things," said John. "Tired, honey?"

"No! I'm too excited. Oh, John—you do know how wonderful I think you are to have—h, to have accomplished all this!"

"I haven't started yet," he said. "I was thinking—I'm going to be pretty busy, you know, the first few weeks—it may be pretty dull for you, while I'm tied down so much. But tonight—I didn't let Foster or any of them know we were coming today. It's a second honeymoon for us."

"I know," she said.

"And so I thought we'd have a little celebration, just the two of us, tonight—unless the trip had tired you too much."

"Of course it hasn't! Why should it tire me to sit in a train and ride!"

The boat turned, by now, and was making for its slip. Soon they were ashore, and speeding in a taxi toward their hotel, which overlooked Central Park. Its luxury, when they arrived, appalled Eileen; silenced her; she had very little to say as she wandered about their room, pausing to look down at Fifth avenue, with its never ceasing stream of traffic. She listened, a little awed, to the orders John gave over the telephone, dinner, with all her favorite dishes, tickets for a play she'd spoken of, a few weeks before, wistfully, because its famous star never went out of New York, so that, she said, she couldn't hope to see it.

It was an evening, she thought, as, after midnight, they danced in a famous night club, to music such as she had dreamed of, but had never heard, that she would never forget. She was the luckiest girl in the world, and she smiled, to herself, as she remembered the shaking heads, the prophecies of unhappiness her marriage had evoked. She wished all those people could see her now—her and the man they had warned her against with their solemn croakings!

Then something happened. Some people across the crowded room were looking at them; they bowed to John, and he, a little confused, she thought, greeted them. Then a man came over, and John rose.

"My dear fellow—we didn't know you were in town!" He smiled. "And Mrs. MacVeagh—I'm sure it is! Let me welcome you to New York. Your husband tells me you've never been here before. He won't introduce me—I'm Arthur Foster. I think you've heard of me."

"I'll say she has!" said John, recovering himself.

"Mrs. Foster sent me to bring you over to our table—you'll like the others, I'm sure," said Foster. "No—no—we won't listen to any excuses. Your husband's a big man, Mrs. MacVeagh, but I'm his chief, even so. And—my wife is mine!"

There was nothing for it. But, all at once, Eileen was conscious of the poor appearance that she made, beside the women at that other table. And—she knew that John, too, was thinking of it. Something had been taken away from what she had already begun to enshrine as a perfect memory of a perfect night. But, head up, smiling, eyes bright, she went to meet Katharine Foster and the others.

Knowing Your Own Worth

By Lucy Lowell.

LUCY LOWELL

HAVE you ever stopped to consider how much true worth there is in people generally, and how ignorant of it many of them are?

If you can say the word—perform the small action — to awaken them to this splendid thing they have, you will have done both humanity and yourself a benefit, for what lifts one lifts all.

"What a man most wishes," wrote Emerson, "is to be lifted to some higher platform, that he may see beyond his present fear the transalpine good, so that his fear, his coldness, his custom, may be broken up like fragments of ice melted and carried away in the great stream of good will."

He goes on:

"Let a man then know his worth, and keep things under his feet. Let him not peep or steal, or skulk up and down with the air of a charity-boy or an interloper, in the world which exists for him.

"But the man in the street, finding no worth in himself which corresponds to the force which built a tower or sculptured a marble god, feels poor when he looks on these."

Not many of us, of course, have the ability to express this as did Emerson. But all of us can tell ourselves how simple a thing it is to do or say the small thing—a word often will do—which will awaken another to a sense of his own vast possessions.

Our Rhyming OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

"WHAT have you done?" the bright hours cry,
The while they haste, unpausing, by;
"What have you done, for good or ill,
Since dawn lit up the farthest hill?

"Have you some work of lofty worth,
Some child of thought your brain gave birth,
And do you, joyous, fill the day
With good that will not pass away?"

"For me, no great and splendid task
With such rewards as few may ask;
Enough if for a little while
I bring to troubled hearts a smile.

"Enough if sometimes on my way
I change dull tears to laughter gay,
Make some man's outlook seem more bright
Or bring some child a swift delight!"

The glad hours smile and make reply,
The while they hasten blithely by:
"Good is the work which you have done
If to one thought you bring the sun!"

Fashion Fads and Fancies

By Mildred Ash

Badger Becomes Badge of Smartness for this soft flattering fur strikes one of the most recent fashion notes in the trimming of the daytime coat of black cloth. Its light natural colorings offset the somber black wraps that are worn by so many smartly dressed women.

Mating Purse and Necklace is the latest rage. Black velvet or antelope envelope purses have a metallic border of a slender gold vine, which is matched in the leaf-like garland that forms a choker. Bracelets and earrings to match are often used to complete the ensemble.

"Wear Yellow—Catch a Fellow"—Is an old-time adage to girls, and it seems to be taken seriously this season as yellow is the predominant color scheme for the latest youthful frocks. From greenish tones to old gold, this color is seen in many variations.

Fantastically Frosted is the surface of the tiny buds that are tightly bunched into boutonnieres, which represent the very latest Parisian rage. These wee buds are surrounded by glossy little green leaves.

Virginia Governor Warns On Lynchings

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 2. (AP)—Governor Harry F. Byrd has given warning that lynch law will not be countenanced in Virginia.

Describing a recent lynching near the Virginia-Kentucky border as a "dastardly and cold blooded crime," Governor Byrd declared in a statement issued last night that it was "full time for Virginia to make an example of those committing the crime of lynching and to punish the guilty as other murderers are punished."

"Cut Throat" Tactics Deplored by Speaker

WASHINGTON, Dec.. 2. (AP)—Elimination of over production and "cut throat price competition" in the development of natural resources through cooperation and government regulation was advocated by Sidney J. Georgia U. Versus Georgia Tech Headline Postscript Gridiron Calendar For Saturday

AND—

A Column of Et Ceteras in Sport

BY VON

Amarillo vs. Abilene.

Forrest High (Dallas) vs. Cleburne.

Waco vs. Jeff Davis High (Houston).

Athens vs. Sherman.

Listed above are the eight Texas state interscholastic league district champions who meet today for the four bi-district titles in the quarter finals of the state championship race. Abilene plays at Amarillo, Forrest at Cleburne, Athens at Sherman and Jeff Davis at Waco.

* * *

We are not going to predict any detailed scores on these four contests. The memory of a recent flop in an oracular attempt is still too painful for us. But we can't help having an opinion as to the outcome of the four games. Therefore we will declare that we believe after the smoke of Saturday's frays have cleared away Abilene will have defeated Amarillo, Cleburne will have eliminated Forrest High, Waco will certainly have dressed down Jeff Davis most thoroughly, while the Athens-Sherman embroglio will have been decided.

SHERMAN 20, ATHENS 13.

SHERMAN, Dec. 2. (AP)—Sherman high school of district 5 won the bi-district championship in the interscholastic league class B race here Friday afternoon by defeating Athens high, district 6 by the score of 20 to 13.

It is interesting to note the gyrations of various sports experts in the selection of their All-American teams. One of the most interesting angles is the comparison of the undefeated Georgia university eleven's two-star ends, Shiver and Nash. On his first All-American eleven, Red Grange placed Shiver at left end. On his first All-America team, Grantland Rice, writing for Collier's names Nash at right end and omits Shiver from the lineup. Georgia is indeed fortunate to have two ends, either of whom is worthy of All-American mention. That's one, or make it two, reasons why the Crackers have overridden all rivals this season and are well in the lead for the mythical national football championship.

At this point, we wonder how Drury, University of Southern California quarterback, would compare in a game with either Joel Hunt, quarterback of the Texas Aggies, or Gerald Mann, quarterback of the S. M. U. Mustangs. Both of these Texas players have been declared by the sports authorities of the southwest to be of All-American caliber. Drury has been named first-string All-American quarterback by both Red Grange and Grantland Rice. Joel Hunt and Gerald Mann have both invited to play in the annual east-west game this month. It is a certainty that Drury will be quarterback of the west team if he wants to play. Maybe Hunt or Mann, and perhaps both, will be given a chance to show their stuff as substitutes for the U. S. C. star.

Abe B. Ross, manager of the Wichita Falls Athletic club, is proud of the new handball court which has been installed at the Gym. Ross told this writer that it cost him several hundred dollars to outfit this feature of the gymnasium equipment for the athletic club. Now he's getting set to sponsor a series of handball tournaments. It looks like a good thing to us.

RITTICISMS ...... By Bill Ritt.

Thousands stormed the place where the Dempsey-Kearns trial was held, in an effort to get in. Two Jacks drawing a full house.

During the trial Tex Rickard was accused of being a "sinister shadow." Ought to give him an idea. He might put on some "sinister shadow" boxing for the fans.

Columbia university students burned down the stands at their football field. Probably sore because their team did not burn up the opposition.

Democracy, me eye! It's got so in this country a fellow gets jailed for tearing up a piece of paper—if a traffic court summons is printed on it.

NATIONAL GRID TITLE INVOLVED

Georgia Crackers In Lead For Mythical Crown

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2—Saturday's postscript football card will give a number of those all-American football choices a chance to show how they got that way.

Morley Drury, The University of Southern California back was universally selected by the experts for the highest football honor. Georgia had a double-barrelled claim for and honors with its two star wing men, Ivy Shiver and Nash, and there were few all American selections on which the southern team failed to bag a position. Wild Bill Spears of Vanderbilt was also well thought of while Jesse Hibbs of University of Southern California was frequently found holding down a tackle position on the same all-American tea mas his running mate Drury.

Stars See Action

All these men will see action Saturday. While the northern, eastern, and midwestern section of the country huddle about the baseball "hot stove league" and turn their attention to ice hockey and basket ball the sunny South and balmy California will make good their weather boasts and prolong the football season.

Undefeated and untied Georgia will once more risk her perfect record, this time against Georgia Tech the Crackers' old rival. The game will be played at Atlanta and advance ticket sales presage a record southern crowd.

Another interesting game finds Coach Wallace Wade's ebbing Alabama crimson tide in action at Birmingham. The Tide meets Vanderbilt, undefeated in the southern conference and a victory for Bama would do much to dispell some of the gloom that has gathered over the Tuscaloosa campus during the course of Alabama's most disasterous season in a decade.

Trojans Seek Salve

At Los Angeles, Coach Howard Jones' University of Southern California Trojans will attempt to lessen some of the sting of that defeat at the hands of Notre Dame in Chicago last Saturday by walloping their conference rival, Washington.

It is seldom that two such tardy football games are of such national importance. The Georgia-Georgia Tech game and the U. S. C.-Washington contest must be played before the winners of the Southern and Pacific coast conference can be established. The national mythical championship also is affected.

Should Georgia with her thousand halfbacks treat Tech as she has treated all other rivals this season, the Southern Conference crown is hers indisputably. The Crackers will also remain the leading candidate for the national mythical championship.

Stanford Has Chance

If Southern California shows the effects of its long trip to Chicago and back, and loses to Washington, a team that has come along with a rush lately, the title goes to Stanford without dispute. If the Trojans win, then another one of those popularly unpopular Pacific coast ties results with Stanford and U. S. C., who fought to a tie themselves deadlocked for conference honors.

Moody Promises Aid of Texas Rangers To Stop Dog Races Planned At Dallas

Dallas County Authorities Enlist State Aid in War On Proposed Operation of Dog Race Track

AUSTIN, Dec. 2. —Governor Dan Moody and Attorney General Claude Pollard Thursday assured Assistant District Attorney Will Curtis of Dallas that powers of the state, including state rangers, will be immediately available for any aid Dallas county officials might ask in halting operation of greyhound races near Grand Prairie Saturday.

The officials claim a "gambling" feature is involved.

Mr. Curtis, emissary of District Attorney William McCraw, Dallas, said he believes Dallas county officials can handle the situation but that state aid will be sought if deemed necessary. Curtis intimated that some sort of action will be taken if the races scheduled for Saturday or operated on the system planned at the $120,000 race track of the Fort Worth-Dallas Kennel club. He said he expected to examine the record in the pending habeas corpus proceedings in the court of criminal appeals testing legality of the "certificate plan" of horse racing. The Dallas official conferred at legnth with Governor Moody and then went to see the attorney general. Mr. Pollard said that he is leaving the matter up to Dallas county, but that if called on he will use his full power under state law to aid.

Governor Moody discussed with Mr. Curtis a state law providing for confiscation of any property found to be used in violation of the law.

PROMOTERS OF RACES POSTPONE MEETING

DALLAS, Dec. 2. (AP)—Opening of the greyhound race track of the Dallas-Fort Worth Kennel club on the Dallas-Fort Worth pike near Grand Prairie, has been postponed until after the Christmas holidays, P. M. Williams, general manager, announced Friday.

This action is not due to the opposition of state, county and city officials who have expressed fears that there would be gambling on the race course, Mr. Williams said.

MISSOURI HAS TROUBLE OVER DOG RACE TRACKS

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Dec. 2. (AP)—Quo warranto writs returnable in 30 days were issued today by the Missouri supreme court against the four dog race tracks near St. Louis and Kansas City against which Attorney General N. T. Gentry recently filed ouster suits in the supreme court.

The concerns were ordered by the court to appear and show cause why they should not be ousted for alleged violation of state charter privileges and for permitting betting which the attorney general claims violates the state anti-betting and anti-lottery laws.

DAVENPORT, Iowa, Dec. 2. (AP)—Red Uhlan, California middleweight, will be forced to jump off the government bridge into the Mississippi river if he loses a 10-round bout to Wolcott Langford, Chicago negro, here December 9, Tom Walsh, Chicago, Uhlan's manager, said Friday after Langford had boasted that Uhlan would be easy for him.

REAGAN CAGE SQUAD HAS 30

First Call Brings Out Good Material

Not to be out done by the other Wichita Falls schools, Reagan junior high school opened its first basketball meeting with 30 men out for the squad. If Zundelowitz comes out with a large squad it will make things look as if Wichita Falls will turn out some winning teams this year.

Coach Morriss has four letter men back from last year's squad and the other material looks like fast men who should develop into good basket players. The squad will hold its first workout on the Zundelowitz court Monday afternoon. The Junior high schools will both use that court for games and praticice this year.

For the first week's practice Coach Morris plans to drill his men only on fundamentals, passing and floor work. No games have been scheduled so far but Coach Morris expects to have one set in a short time.

COYOTES TRAIN FOR NOCONA GAME FRIDAY

Coaches McCallum and Foster gave the Coyotes a good workout Thursday in order to get them in shape for their game with Nocona here Friday night. McCallum drilled them on the fundamentals and on defense. Every man that is out is working for a chance at the team. Captain Mills says, "Every one is working hard to make the first team and I believe we are going to have a winning team, and if there were not enough men for the squad we would submit some of the managers as we have six out for manager."

So far in practice Captain Mills, Maurice Allred, Joe Bailey Howard, Henry Barton, M. A. Smith, Blondy Halone, Lewis Sullivan, Frank Bains, Henry Anderson and Morris Lee are showing up well. Coach McCallum is giving every man a chance and several first-year men may develop into stars.

Coach McCallum has written letters to 21 schools for games and has already matched the following games: Nocona at Wichita Falls, Dec. 9; Nocona at Nocona at Nocona, Dec. 16; Petrolia at Wichita Falls, Dec. 12; Ardmore at Ardmore, Jan. 6; and Waurika at Waurika, Jan. 27.

INDIAN CAGERS WANT GAMES WITH LOCALS

Coach Herb Ludgate's Wichita Falls Junior college Indians got down to real work Friday and are getting into shape to put out a winning basketball team this year. The Indians invite all city teams to play them and are expecting to have several acceptances for games before Christmas. The only games that have been matched so far are with Bowie high school Dec. 19 at Wichita Falls and the Cameron Aggies at Wichita Falls Jan. 15.

Rags Matthews To Play On T. C. U. Cage Quintet at His Usual Guard Post

Special to The Record News.

FORT WORTH, Dec. 2.—One of the hardest battles for positions on the T. C. U. basketball team since the university entered the Southwest conference looms as the largest squad of candidates ever to report for a Horned Frog varsity tryout on the court got under way in practice.

In spite of the fact that Coach Bell [illegible] prospects keep up their present pace.

It is hardly possible that another coach in the Southwest is so liberally supplied with guards as Coach Bell is this year. Besides the veteran "Rags" Matthews and Albert Acker, both bidders for all-Southwest honors last year, he has in Lowell Parrish, Horace Wallin and Cecil Provine, three men who [illegible] in the circuit.

However, the coach's big worry now is in finding a running mate at forward for Captain "Slim" Steadman. Steadman worked in most of the games last year with Franklin [illegible]

BURK HAS HOPE FOR CAGE FLAG

Bulldog Basketball Squad Works Nightly

Special to The Record News.

BURKBURNETT, Dec. 2.—Hopes for a county or district basketball championship are running high in the camp of the Burkburnett Bulldogs at the present time with a lively looking crew of about 25 men out for the team. Among this number are six old letter men. Five of these were letter men last year while the other was out last year.

Coach Johnson and Captain Howard Blair have been working the crew hard every night for the past week and hope to play their first practice game next week. The Hub Clothiers from Wichita Falls have been trying hard for a game with Burkburnett and loom right now as the most likely opponent for the bulldogs in their first game.

John Holmes, a new man in Burkburnett, looks like one of the best bets for the center job. Holmes looks like one of the best centers that this county has seen in a long time. He is rangy and fast as well as a good shot at the basket. Holmes lettered last year at Sour Lake.

Harrington, Williams, Brown, Blair, Wood and Hogue are the other letter men that are back this year. Othel Hogue was captain of the Bulldogs year before last and was considered one of the best forwards in the county at that time.

Harvey Moore, a letter man last year, is still in school, but he has announced his intention of remaining idle this year and turning most of his attention to tennis. The loss of Moore will be felt by the Bulldogs, but they hope to find a man that will fill his shoes.

Radio Not Bar To Grid Grounds

Attendance at Games Not Cut Down at All

BOSTON, Dec. 2.—Reports from Harvard and Yale football authorities show that radiocasting of the games has not lessened the attendance. In fact, it has probably been a great help to those who have the alloting of tickets to the big games these colleges play as some of those whose applications can not be filled can listen in.

Touch football has been very popular at Harvaard this fall the Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity winning the championship of the university.

The wooden stands at the Harvard Stadium are being torn down for the last time, and it is expected that before another Harvard-Yale game comes to Boston, the open end of the Stadium will be permanently closed and the capacity of the entire structure much increased.

Pacific coast players will get a chance to see Bruce Caldwell, the Yale backfield star who was ineligible to play against Princeton and Harvard, in action, as he will be a member of the all-eastern eleven which will play an all-western eleven next month.

SWIMMER SETS RECORD.

BERLIN, Dec. 2.—A new German record in free-style swimming was established by Friedel Bergés who covered this distance in 6m. 46.1s, at the international swimming contest in Darmstadt. He beat the old record by 3.7s.

RICE SELECTS STAR ELEVEN

Sports Expert Picks His All-American Team

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—The 39th annual all-American team, as named by Collier's Weekly, appears in its current issue. Grantland Rice recognized by many as successor of the late Walter Camp as namer of the all-America team, picks stars from eleven different colleges for the mythical national team.

In making his selections, Rice received the co-operation of numerous well-known coaches. These included Warner of Stanford, Zuppke of Illinois, Rockne of Notre Dame, Wade of Alabama, McEwan of Oregon, Jones of Southern California, Madigan of St. Mary's and McGuigan of Vanderbilt.

Only one member of the so-called big three appears in the all-America lineup; Charlesworth of Yale as center. No college has more than one representative on the team and the west predominates, having six of the eleven places.

End—Oosterbaan, Michigan.
Tackle—Raskowski, Ohio State.
Guard—Smith of Notre Dame.
Center—Charlesworth, Yale.
Guard—Crane, Illinois.
Tackle—Smith, Pennsylvania.
End—Nash, Georgia.
Quarterback—Drury, University of Southern California.
Halfback—Cagle, Army.
Halfback—Welch, Pittsburgh.
Fullback—Joesting, Minnesota.

Dilating on the difficulty of making selections from a season crowded with star performances, Rice departs from the practice of naming second and third teams by nominating an all-America squad of thirty-four players.

GREEN TEST IN SAND AT 950

Cooke County Wildcat In Second Showing

W. J. Green et al are making another promise to open up a new pool northeast of Muenster, their No. 1 Louis Campbell in the G. Lawerick survey having picked up a sand at an approximate depth of 950 feet, which shows the signs of a producer, according to reports here.

The new sand is supposedly the same from which Fain-McGaha's wells on the Vestal land, one and a quarter miles to the northwest.

Earlier in the week the Green test found a sand at 786 feet which would have made a small well but drilling was resumed in the hope of finding a larger quantity of oil. The test is located near the center of a 3000 acre lease which covers the Ball ranch.

Harris Test Fails.

Failure has been met in another attempt to find oil in Cooke county in Murchison and Sowell's No. 1 Harris, located southwest of Myra and in the S. P. R. R. survey, abstract 2000, which has found the Ellenburger lime and is being plugged at 1790 feet.

Although the Muenster field seems to have been practically defined, their is still some drilling being done there. Carey et al are putting down their No. 3 Fleitman in block 72 of the townsite while slightly south of the pool Oil Operators Trust is looking for the sand in its Klein well in block 2 of the Littleton survey.

"Conservation" Pool Appears as Failure

TULSA, Dec. 2.—The Conservation pool of northern Pontotoc county, opened last summer by Tom Slick, Inc., in 22-5-5, and which caused the Conservation Oil company and Conservation pool to be created, does not look so promising. At least this is the sign for the Hunton lime, in which the well found the pay.

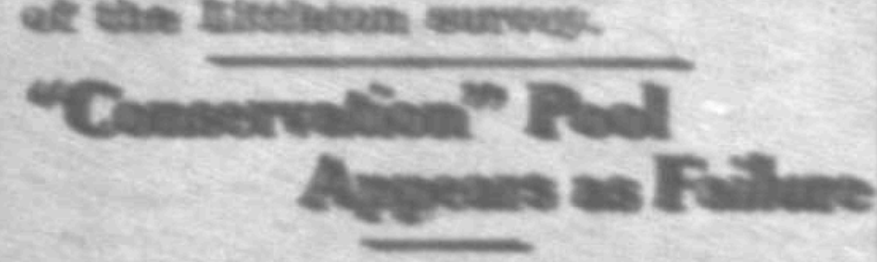
It is No. 1 Walker, in the southwest corner of the southeast of 22-5-5, and is making 255 barrels daily.

The west offset, Conservation's No. 1 Chast. Cox, in the southeast of the southwest of 22-5-5, was drilling below 2700 feet, with no show.

Its No. 1 P. Norris, in the northeast of the northeast of 28-5-5, had a show at 2707 feet, and was shut down for the oil to accumulate in the hole, so a bailing test can be made.

No. 2 Brown, in the northwest of the northeast of 28-5-5, was drilling ahead at 2705 feet, and this is to be a Wilcox sand test.

STOCK-A-DAY



THE DERBY OIL & REFINING CORPORATION

Five-Year Record.

The Derby Oil & Refining corporation was formed in 1922 to acquire the majority of the capital stock of the Derby Oil company. It now practically owns the entire capital stock of the latter concern.

The Derby Oil company was a complete unit for the production of crude oil, refining and marketing products, but in March, 1926, the company sold all its retail selling system to the Marland Refining company. Since that time it has concentrated on producing and refining, selling its product on contracts based on the average market price.

The company controls 36 producing leases and 126 wells covering 3874 acres in Kansas and Texas. It also leases 34,947 acres of undeveloped land which it is now engaged in developing. One hundred twenty-five miles of pipeline connects the wells with the refinery at Wichita which has a capacity of 6000 barrels of crude a day. In the first half of 1927, the plant operated at the rate of 3500 barrels a day. The company operates 136 tank cars.

There is no funded debt. Capital stock outstanding consists of 48,800 shares of $8 cumulative convertible preferred shares of no par value, and 217,128 13-20 shares of no par common. The preferred is convertible at any time into common on the basis of two common shares for one of preferred.

An initial dividend of $1 a share was paid July 2, 1923, continued Oct. 20, 1923 and Jan. 21, 1924. None has been paid since. One dividend of 50 cents a share was paid on the common July 2, 1923. None has been paid since.

For the six months ended June 30, 1927, there was a deficit of $8670. In 1926, net income amounted to $242,833 before deducting bad debts, loss on sale of assets and bond expenses.

As of June 30, 1927, current assets totaled $823,232; current liabilities were $246,445; net working capital $580,000, and book value of the no par common shares, $4.25 each, after allowing for the preferred stock at $40 a share.

Phillips Well In Bowers Pool Is Flowing Wild

Special to The Record News.

AMARILLO, Dec. 2.—Two big wells gave the new Bowers pool in Gray county a big boost today. Danciger Oil and Refining company's No. 2 Jackson in the northwest quarter of section 88, block B-2, offsetting the Delaney well on the north, was drilled in with rotary tools and began flowing 2500 barrels daily from granite wash at 2864 to 2885 feet. This is the second well in this pool to be finished with rotary tools.

Across a quarter, Phillips Petroleum company's No. 1 Jackson in the northeast corner of the southwest quarter of the southwest quarter of the same section is flowing wild from a pay hit at 2940 feet. These wells are of the same high gravity as the Delaney well which is 44.6.

Refinery Given Continuance

Bankruptcy May Be Taken Out of Courts

Hopes of the creditors of the American Refining company to take affairs of that corporation from the courts came a step nearer Friday when Judge William H. Atwell of the United States district court granted a continuance of all matters pertaining to the bankruptcy proceedings. It is the hope of the creditors and the receivers to place the affairs in the hands of an operating committee as soon as possible if the court deems such procedure wise.

The order on the continuance was agreed to by all parties to the suit and at present 97 per cent of the unsecured creditors have agreed to the reorganization plan and it is believed the others will agree as soon as they come to a full understanding of the plan.

The committee of seven, chosen by the creditors, has organized with the following officers: Fred W. Catterall, Galveston, chairman; E. H. Eddleman, vice chairman; J. C. Mytinger, secretary-treasurer and A. W. King, assistant secretary-treasurer. Other members of the committee are F. F. Florence, Dallas; J. C. Doughty, Tulsa, Okla., L. G. Hawkins, Vernon, and Frank Kell, Wichita Falls. Mr. King is not a member of the committee.

The committee recently formally accepted the trust formed from the creditors as provided in the organization plan and decided upon the American Refining properties as a trade name for the trust, including the corporation, partnership and individual properties.

Three attorneys of a committee of five provided for have been selected. They are John Neethe of Galveston, A. H. Britain and Leslie Humphrey of Wichita Falls. The other two will be named later. The attorneys were instructed to prepare the declaration of trust under which the committee of seven will operate and to work out a plan for operation of the properties in the future.

The lawyers are now preparing the plan and will probably have it ready for a meeting of the committee in about ten days.

WOOL MARKET.

Business in fine is running largely to French combing and to average strictly combing staple in mixed lots with the shorter clothing staple removed. Newspaper Figures Yates "Capable" Of Doing 604,768 Barrels Per Day

TULSA, Okla., Dec. 2. (AP)—Official gauge of the Yates pool of Pecos county, Texas, taken December 1 by the Pecos pro-ration committee shows the field to be actually capable of producing 25,207 barrels per hour, or at the rate of 604,968 barrels daily, the Tulsa Tribune says today, continuing:

"This pool now ranks highest of any ever opened in the history of the oil industry, being 77,568 barrels above greater Seminole field's highest peak attained on July 30 of this year.

"The two biggest gushers of the field, rated good for 65,880 barrels and for 79,000 barrels daily, are respectively located on the extreme southeastern and the northwestern edges of the pool, opening up an undeterminate amount of new territory in those directions from the proven area."

NEW YORK COTTON.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2. (AP)—The cotton market was more active and firmer today, prices advancing about 30 points on trade buying and covering. January sold up to 19.53 and closed at 19.52, the general market closing very steady, at a net advance of 24 to 30 points.

The market opened steady at an advance of 7 to 12 points on a continuation of yesterday's buying. Offerings seemed to be a little heavier around the 19½-cent level for March and there were reactions of 6 or 7 points from the best in early trading. Covering and trade buying continued, however, and as soon as early selling orders had been executed, prices turned firmer, the afternoon advance being accompanied by reports of a better spot demand in the southwest and a generally steady spot basis.

December contracts sold up to 19.50 and May to 19.92, net advances of 26 to 31 points. The close was within a few points of the best.

Two more private reports were issued, one estimating the crop at 12,785,000 bales while the other placed it at 12,700,000. These figures had comparatively little efefct on the market, but there may have been some scaling down of the larger crop ideas in the last two or three days which would naturally increase the disposition of shorts to cover in advance of next week's government report.

Offerings were light, or comparatively so, after absorption of the contracts encountered around the 19½-cent level for March, and that delivery sold up to 19.73 in late trading, or back to approximately the figures ruling before the break last Monday.

Private cables said trade calling and continental buying had absorbed liquidation and hedge selling in Liverpool and reported an increased cloth turnover for India, but complained of unsatisfactory prices.

Exports today 47,984, making 2,263,538 so far this season. Port receipts today 40,718. U. S. port stocks 2,538,356.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 2. (AP)—The cotton market advanced sharply late this afternoon after ruling quiet all morning and closed at net gains for the day of 28 to 30 points.

Short covering followed by scarcity of offerings were responsible for the upturn in prices.

March, which opened at 19.63 and declined soon to 19.53, advanced during the afternoon to 19.86 and closed at 19.85 which was $1.50 a bale net higher.

Liverpool was about as due and first trades here showed gains of 3 to 8 points, advancing promptly to 19.42 for January and 19.77 for May.

Later the market eased off on realizing and talk of large ginnings. January dropped to 19.24 and May to 19.68.

Around noon a slight rally started on a favorable view of weekly cotton statistics and continued when shorts became nervous as the result of unfavorable weather in the belt and crop estimates of around 12,750,000 bales. Covering of shorts brought about scarcity of offerings and January jumped to 19.67 and May 19.98. The close was at or near these figures, which were the highs for the day.

Exports for the day were 42,584 bales and 295,228 for the week.

DRYGOODS MARKET.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2. (AP)—Cotton goods continued very quiet today with prices barely steady; southern sheeting mills are beginning to curtail production and this policy is expected to be followed so long as prices remain under cost. Burlaps were in better demand for nearby and spot deliveries.

DUN'S REVIEW.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2. (AP)—Dun's tomorrow will say:

The last month of a year seldom is marked by important new trends in business, and such changes are not to be expected at present. Except in retail lines, this is normally a time for a slackening of activities. Inventorying and various restraints incidental to the period largely divert attention, in many instances, from other operations. With such a phase prevailing now, a general commercial expansion obviously is not to be anticipated. There are, however, several encouraging signs in the existing situation, which tend partially to offset some unfavorable factors. December began with a sudden turn to colder weather in different sections, including the east and this gave impetus to the movement of seasonable goods to consumers, which has been retarded this fall by unusually high temperatures over a wide area. The backward demand in that quarter naturally has had a deleterious effect in some other directions, but this condition is being ameliorated in some degree now, and there is an expectation of a heavy turnover of holiday merchandise.

Canadian Pacific Features Bull Market Friday On Wall Street In General Rush For Rail Shares

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Canadian Pacific featured a bull market in the railroad stocks today as Wall Street received details of the "good news" to come out regarding the carriers next week. The administration's attitude toward the carriers with particular reference to consolidations and the St. Paul decision of the commerce commission were the topics of the bullish rumors and reports which awakened the transportation stocks.

A few technical corners in the industrial list, such as Greene Cananea and Industrial Alcohol: moved athead vigorously but that group generally was quieter although quite firm throughout the session.

The street paid no attention to the $29,000,000 gain in brokers' loans nor the 4 1-2 per cent call money rate. Cotton recovered further while grain options turned irregular again on conflicting weather advices.

The administration's attitude toward railroad mergers has been expressed on occasion in the past. As the transportation legislation will be one of the most important activities of the next congress it was natural that the favorable advices told of in brokerage houses should immediately bring buying into the carrier stocks. Atchison was one of the outstanding domestic shares inasmuch as its constant additions to surplus point to ultimate special distribution although at the moment such melon appears quite a way off.

One new Ford arrived in Wall Street and while all traders took time to visit the exhibit there was sufficient trading in General Motors to make it the most active stock of the day. Professionals continued to pound away while the same sort of support evidenced for over a fortnight was in the market with the result that but a fractional price change was recorded. The Durant interests were at work in Hupp once again and it recovered over a point but other motors held to a fractional range.

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW.

CHICAGO, Dec. 2. (AP)—Announcement that estimated European corn production this season is 27 per cent under last year led to a sharp upturn in corn values today. Aggressive buying of corn future deliveries set in, and corn prices finished strong at virtually the day's top level, 1¼ to 1⅝c net higher, with wheat unchanged to ⅛c up, oats showing 1 to 1⅝c advance, and provisions unchanged to ⅛c up, oats showing 1 to 1⅝c advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 40c.

Wheat finally became responsive to corn strength despite considerable selling that Liverpool wheat quoiushrdluuupup of wheat against simultaneous purchasing of corn and notwithstanding that Liverpool wheat quotations failed to reflect yesterday's wheat advance here.

Oats followed corn, and went to a new high price level for the present movement.

Provisions reflected knowledge that Chicago stocks of lard exhibited a much larger decrease than expected.

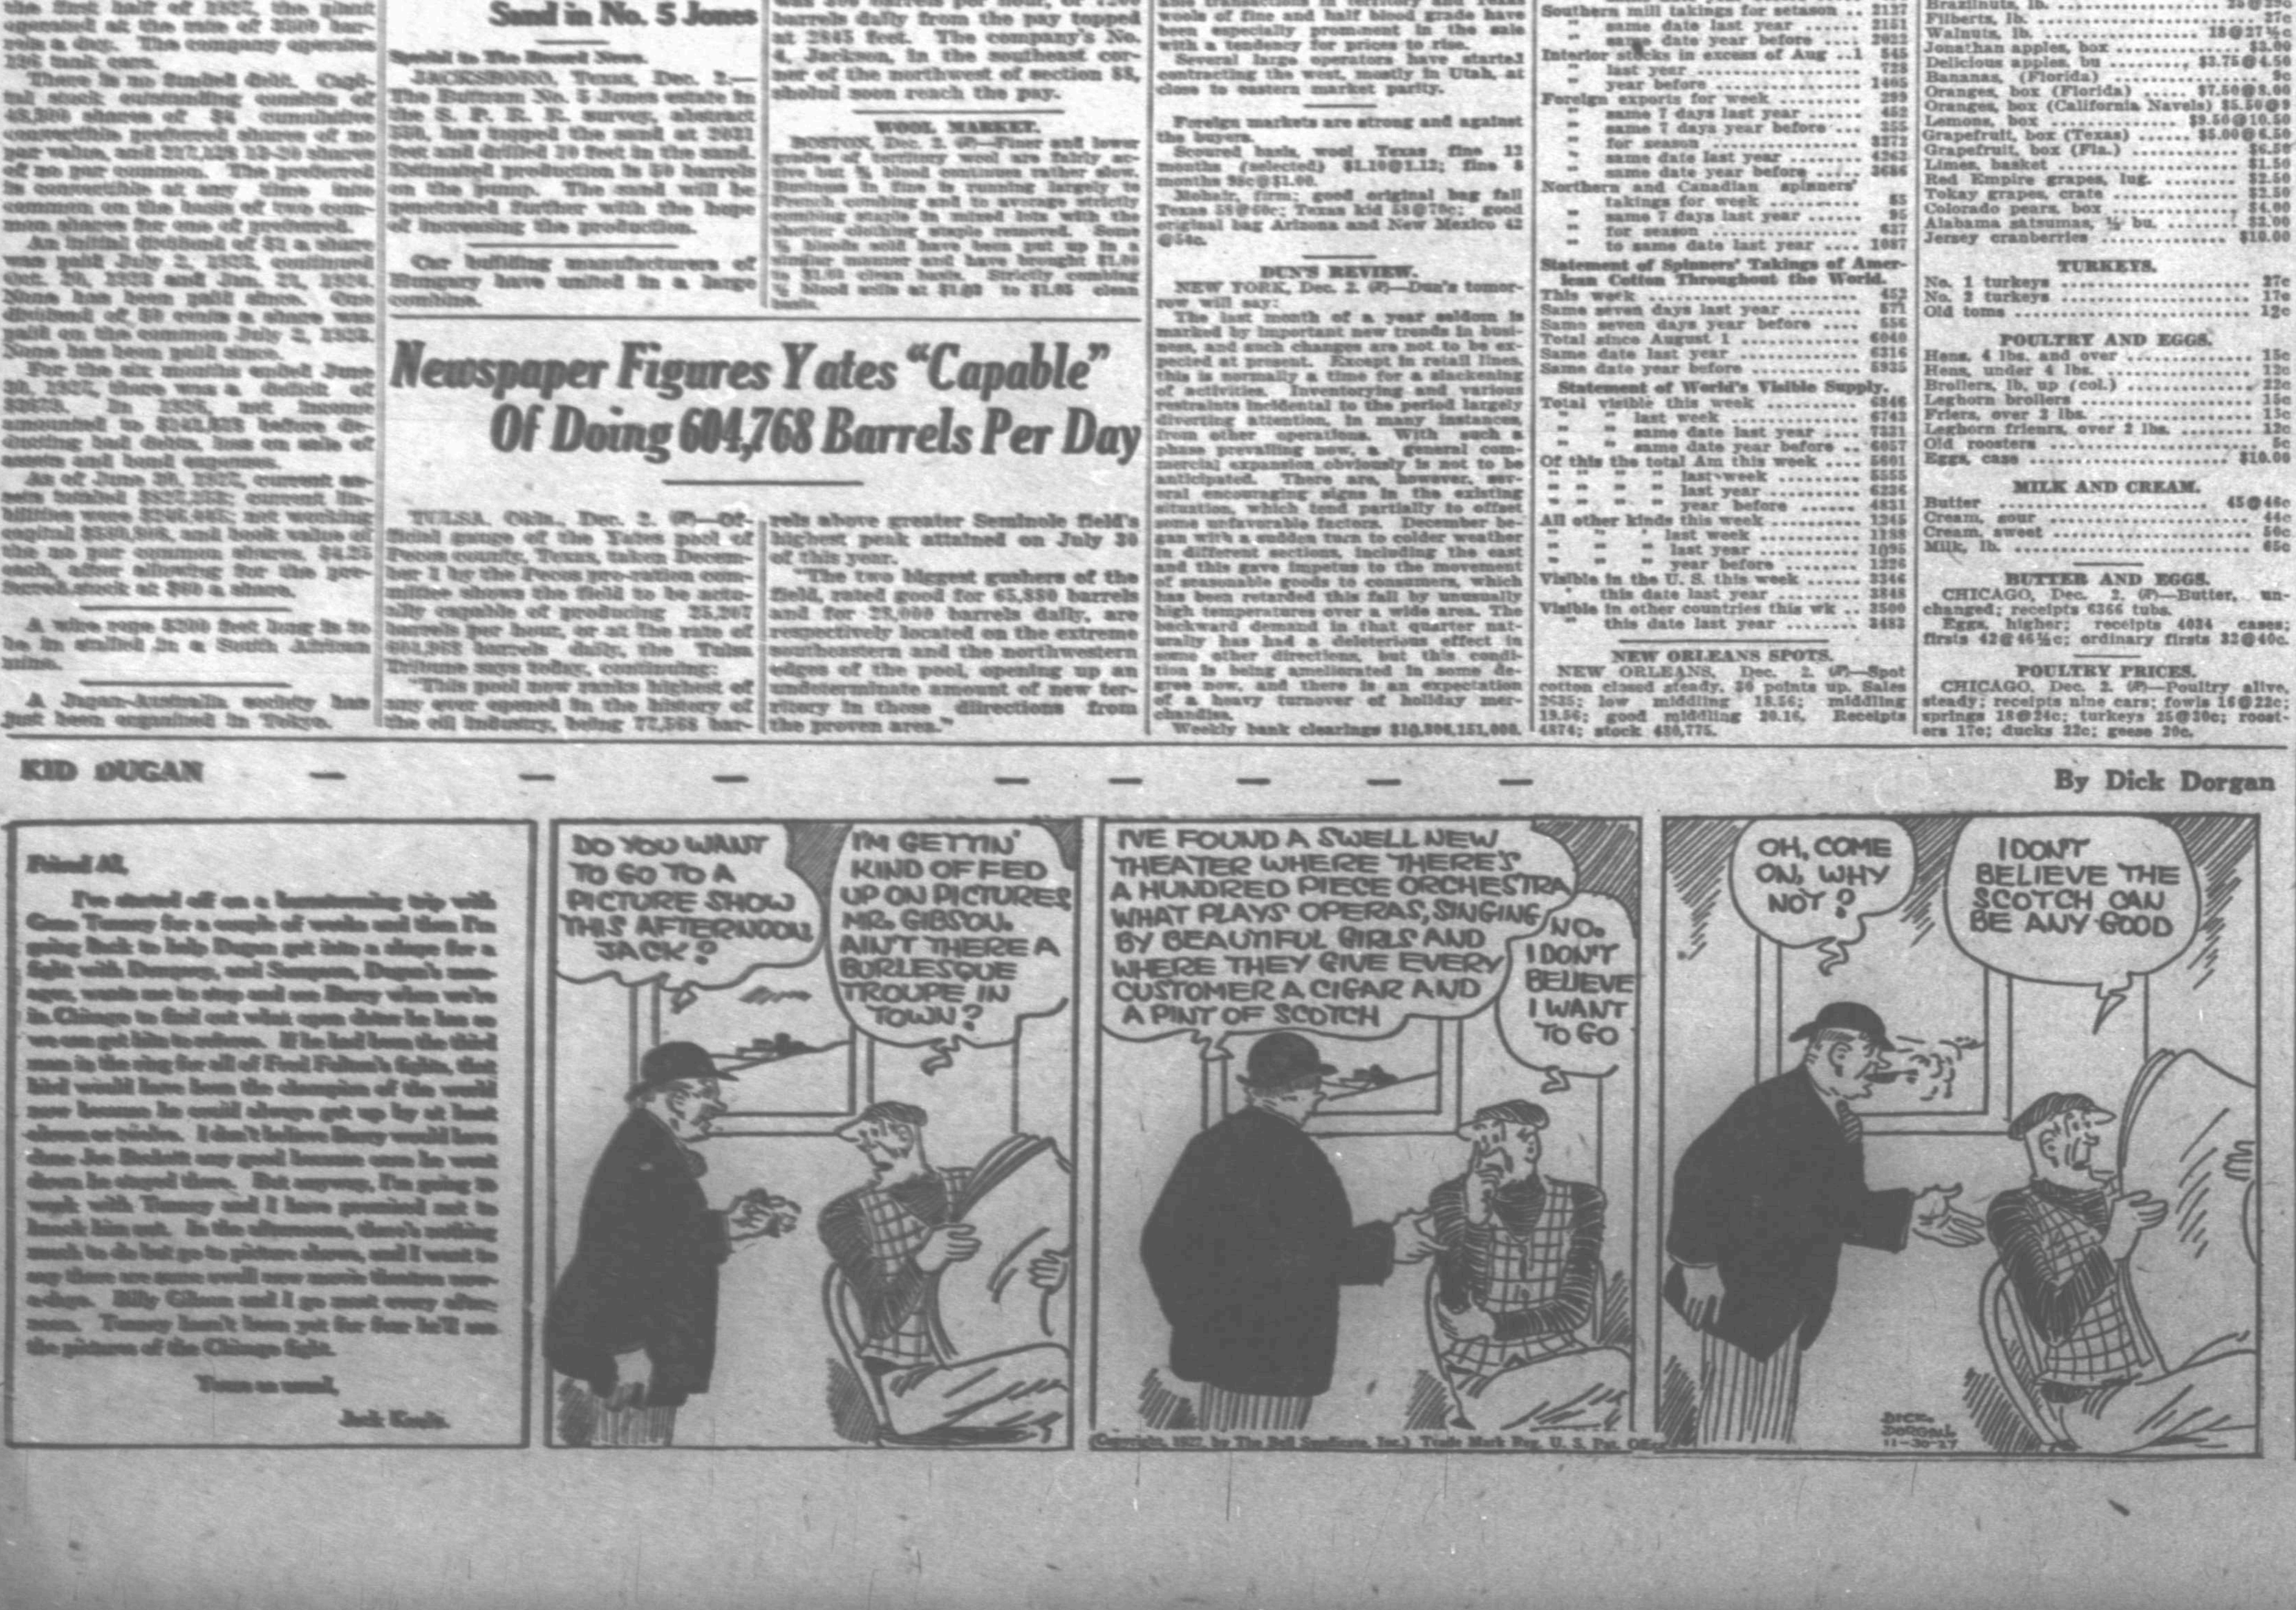
KID DUGAN

By Dick Dorgan



Friend Al,

I've started off on a barnstorming trip with Gene Tunney for a couple of weeks and then I'm going back to help Dugan get into a shape for a fight with Dempsey, and Sampson, Dugan's manager, wants me to stop and see Barry when we're in Chicago to find out what open dates he has so we can get him to referee. If he had been the third man in the ring for all of Fred Fulton's fights, that bird would have been the champion of the world now because he could always get up by at least eleven or twelve. I don't believe Barry would have done Joe Beckett any good because once he went down he stayed there. But anyway, I'm going to wrestle with Tunney and I have promised not to knock him out. In the afternoons, there's nothing much to do but go to picture shows, and I want to say there are some swell new movie theatres nowadays. Billy Gibson and I go most every afternoon. Tunney hasn't been yet for fear he'll see the pictures of the Chicago fight.

Yours as usual,

Jack Keats.

DO YOU WANT TO GO TO A PICTURE SHOW THIS AFTERNOON JACK?
I'M GETTIN' KIND OF FED UP ON PICTURES MR. GIBSON. AIN'T THERE A BURLESQUE TROUPE IN TOWN?
I'VE FOUND A SWELL NEW THEATER WHERE THERE'S A HUNDRED PIECE ORCHESTRA WHAT PLAYS OPERAS, SINGING BY BEAUTIFUL GIRLS AND WHERE THEY GIVE EVERY CUSTOMER A CIGAR AND A PINT OF SCOTCH
NO. I DON'T BELIEVE I WANT TO GO
OH, COME ON, WHY NOT?
I DON'T BELIEVE THE SCOTCH CAN BE ANY GOOD

NEGRO LEADER BID FAREWELL

500 Blacks Brave Rain For Departure

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 2. (AP)—Five hundred negroes stood in a pouring rain here today and shouted "God save our president," as Marcus Garvey, self styled "president of Africa," boarded the steamer Saramacca which a short time later left for Colon.

The negro, whose sentence recently was commutted after he had served more than two years in the Atlanta federal penitentiary on a technical charge of using the mails to defraud, will be taken to Jamaica from Colon. He had been ordered deported by the federal government.

Perched on a cannon on the promenade deck of the steamer Garvey delivered his valedictory to his adherents, pledging that he would carry on his work "for negro freedom all over the world," and declaring he had been "framed in order to get lands he was to colonize in Africa."

A swelling chorus of "amens" and "ain't that the truth?" greeted his speech and there was a burst of cheering when the ship left the wharf.

A committee of negroes, officers of the Universal negro settlement association, of which Garvey is the head, came here from New York, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland and Pittsburgh to witness his exit from the United States.

One of the leaders announced that members of the association had given Garvey $10,000 to defray expenses of the trip to Jamaica and for settling there after he arrived. He is expected open offices in Jamaica, it was stated.

General Trend of Business Toward Stability, Col. Barber Tells C-C

Repetition of the 1921 business slump is not expected by the United States Chamber of Commerce according to Col. A. B. Barber, chairman of the transportation committee of that organization. Colonel Barber spoke before the business council of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce Friday noon.

"The general trend in business," he said, "is toward stabilization. The business organizations are constantly looking ahead for the danger signs. There are always dangers but because these business organizations have learned to adapt themselves so quickly that nothing like the 1921 slump in general business is likely.

"The United States Chamber of Commerce functions to the nation like your organization does to Wichita Falls. There are several things on the current program of the national chamber that are of interest to business such as taxation, flood control, merchant marine, revision of postal rates, reorganization of government departments, railroad consolidations and others.

"The slogan of the United States Chamber of Commerce I think will set out clearly its attitude on these matters. 'If it is not for the public good it is not good for business'."

High Postal Rates

"The revision of the postal rates is one piece of legislation in which we are all interested. Let us look a little at the history of the present rates. They were made in 1925 when congress wanted to raise $68,000,000 to give the postal employes a raise. The president vetoed the bill and told the legislators they must find the money. A hastily drawn scale of postal rates were drawn and if the Interstate Commerce Commission had ever drawn such a schedule the members would all resign in a body.

"Take the rate on private mailing cards. This was raised from one to two cents. The revenue under the old schedule was $12,000,000 annually. Congress estimated the new revenue to be $22,500,000 but instead it dropped to $4,000,000 annually. Firms stopped using this means of advertising and picture postal cards went out. Many factories were forced to close down and in each instance from 300 to 400 men were thrown out of work. This is the most extreme example in the effect of the rate hike.

"Take the third class rate. This is the circulars that nearly all firms have used. The rate was raised half a cent to one and a half cents. Before the raise there were actually four billion pieces of mail a year going through the mails. This has dropped to three billion two hundred million. When the two-cent service charge was placed on fourth class mail has destroyed the usefulness of this for local delivery. This means a hindrance to business.

"Let us consider the second class rate. I expect the average man thinks most of the loss here has been due to the transporting of The Saturday Evening Post and like large magazines is responsible for the loss here. Such is not the case as according to the government figures a net profit of $65,000 is made on each issue of this magazine and in proportion on the others. The reason for the loss here is because these magazines and the newspapers are all lumped together with the free, county, fraternal and other papers that are carried at a flat rate of 1 1-2 cents a pound. Your newspapers are paying 1 1-2 cents on the reading matter and from two to nine cents on their advertising. This is too heavy a tax. The government has averaged losing 15 per cent of this business since 1920 while in reality it has increased 10 per cent. In other words the mail department is 25 per cent the volume it should be. We are hoping to put through the revised rates that will aid both the business man and the government.

Tells Airport Need

"You have asked about the need of an airport. Any city that does not have one, that is a suitable place for planes to land is going to be off the map. The big business houses are purchasing planes to send their staff men around. We do not know how far the value of the airplane will expand but the city that wants to be on the map must have an airport.

Committtees Named

"The general purpose of the United States Chamber of Commerce is best described by a quotation from Daniel Webster that is on the rotunda of the chamber building at Washington. 'let us develop the resource of our land, call forth its power, build up its interests, promote all its great works and, see whether we also in our day and generation may not perform something worthy to be remembered'."

Manager Hubert Harrison announced two committees named by President C. E. McCutchen of the chamber of commerce. They are the budget committee composed of J. C. Mytinger, C. H. Clark, J. S. Bridwell, N. M. Clifford and A. C. Raynor, and the program of work committee composed of John W. Bradley, J. E. H. Railey, James Biggs, Harry Hines, J. M. Bland, Luther Hoffman, rover Bullington, Dr. R. H. Graham, John O'Donohue, W. T. Knight, Sol Lasky, R. E. Penick, Roy B. Jones, A. E. Kelly, E. B. Lehrack, J. M. Baber, T. B. Noble, F. P. 6500 MAILED TAX REPORTS

Statements Sent Property Owners by City

City Tax Collector W. R. Hyer Friday morning placed 6500 statements of 1927 taxes in the mails for Wichita Falls property owners. These statements have been carefully checked by Mr. Hyer and his assistants. The work has required more than three months.

Citizens are urged to bring these statements with them when coming to pay their taxes as it will greatly expedite matters. Mr. Hyer pointed out that when the property owner has his statement it is but a matter of seconds to stamp it and hand the receipt back to the owner. Where the city employe is forced to go to the records and prepare a duplicate statement much work is involved.

Quarterly Conference Of New Church Tonight

The first quarterly conference of the Adams Street Methodist church, newest Methodist congregation in Wichita Falls which was organized only a few weeks ago, is to be held Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock, with the Rev. Walter J. Johnson, presiding elder of the Wichita Falls district, in charge.

In contrast to the usual procedure of the conferences, the meeting is expected to be taken up with formulation of plans of church work for the ensuing year, although, according to custom, several reports of committees are to be read.

The meeting is designed primarfily for church leaders, all of whom are urged to be present, the Rev. W. D. Cook, pastor, announced.

Williams Given 5-Year Suspended Sentence

Paul Williams Friday was found guilty of criminal assault in the 89th district court before Judge P. A. Martin and was given a five-year suspended sentence. The alleged attack occured on the Seymour road five miles from the city on August 5.

C. W. Sims, 1204 Grace street, left Wednesday night for Chicago on receipt of a message announcing the death of his father, T. W. Sims.

School - College Notes

Mrs. P. P. Williams led the devotional for the opening of the Junior college-high school Girls club meeting Friday morning. Miss Lanette Haynes, a new student at the college and a new member of the Girls club sang two solos and played her own accompaniment. A play "Si's Courting" was presented by Mabel Drinkard and Elna Stovall. Miss Stovall played the part of "Sal" and Miss Drinkard played the part of "Si." The closing number was a reading by Miss Lily Graham.

NEW BOOKS ORDERED FOR SCHOOL LIBRARY.

Approximately $700 worth of new books has been ordered for the Snider library at the Junior college building. Several new shelves, which will help greatly in relieving the shelf congestion, have been purchased by the school board. The shelves are well stained and polished and will add to the appearance of the library. At present the Snider library which was given by Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Snider to the Wichita Falls Junior college in 1924 is rated as one of the best and most complete junior college or high school libraries in the state, however, it is impossible to keep an adequate number of closed stacks owing to the fact that the school board has insufficient funds to employ an adequate force of librarians. At the present time the Snider library has 6993 volumes on its shelves.

CLASS STUDIES WORK OF CONGRESS.

Congress will be opened formally Monday in Professor Atticus F. Edward's second period college class, just as it is in Washington, D. C.

Several of the senatorial standing committees will be appointed and a report of the credentials committee will be heard.

Prehistoric Human Bones Near Childress

CHILDRESS, Dec. 2. (AP)—Bones of what are believed to have been two pre-historic men of a giant race were discovered near here Friday by hunters, buried under only a few inches of sand.

The lower jaw of one of the skeletons was so large it easily could be slipped over a modern human being's flesh covered jaw, the hunters said. The skeletons apparently had not been buried but covered by drifting sand.

BREACH SOUGHT IN 50TH YEAR

Aged Couple Decide To Separate

CHICAGO, Dec. 2. (AP)—Fred and Bertha Lehmann won't celebrate their golden wedding anniversary next spring because, they explained to Judge Sabath in superior court, they can't make a go of their married life any longer.

"We've been married nearly 50 years and know what's best for each other," Mrs. Lehmann, 65 years old, told the court. "We've decided we'd be happier in homes for old people, she in one, me in another," said Fred Lehmann, 75, a retired wholesale fish dealer.

Judge Sabath sought to prevent the breach, but with no success.

"Have you arranged a financial settlement?" he asked.

"We are dividing what little I have," the husband of half a century replied. "It's just enough for us to enter the old peoples' homes."

Dairyman Fined $10 On Milk Ordinance

A more strict enforcement of the city sanitary code was started Friday. A dairyman was fined $10 for the sale of milk on which the cap to the bottle did not display the grade of the milk. Another case has been filed and more will follow according to Dr. L. I. Lucey, city sanitary officer.

The ordinance, which is the standard one urged by the United States department of agriculture, provides that the grade of the milk in bottles must be printed plainly upon the caps. The grading is done by Guy Powell, dairy inspector, upon his findings and those of laboratory tests.

Jury Awards Plaintiff $10,000 In Suit On War Risk Insurance

M. W. Wolfe and others Friday were awarded judgment for $10,000 against the war risk insurance bureau of the government. The amount is the sum of a policy John Thurman Wolfe had with the United States. John Thurman Wolfe died and it was the contention of the plaintiffs that he was insane upon discharge from the army and the lapse date of the insurance.

Judge William H. Atwell of the United States district court where the case was tried in charging the jury said "There is but one issue before you gentlemen, was John Thurman Wolfe totally or permanently disabled on or before July 31, 1919 by either impairment to mind or body so that he could not continuously work at a gainful occupation after that date?" The court held this was the matter on which the whole case hinged and that upon the finding of the jury the attorneys would write the judgment.

The soldier according to the testimony did not keep up his insurance after his discharge. While in France he was thrown to the ground by the force of an explosion and bled from the ears. After his discharge he was unable to work long at a time and was finally adjudged insane and confined in the Wichita Falls State hospital.

MAJESTIC: Billie Dove in "American Beauty," comedy and Paramount News.

STRAND: "The Big Parade," with John Gilbert and Renee Adoree; comedy and Pathe News.

OLYMPIC: Rin Tin Tin in "Jaws of Steel," comedy and Fox News; also Colletta Revue on the stage.

MISSION: Bill Cody in "Gold From Weepah," and Al Russell's Baby Vampires in musical comedy.

GARDEN: "Border Cavalier," with Fred Humes; No. 3 of "Hawks of the Hills," serial.

GARDEN: "Roaring Rider," with Wally Wales; No. 7 of "Perils of the Jungle," serial and comedy.

A decidedly human story, presenting a real insight into the life of the American girl of average circumstances, is promsed in "American Beauty," Billie Dove's latest starring production starting today at the Majestic Theater.

As a typically American girl, with the not unusual ambition to marry a millionaire, but at the same time with a troubling affection for a youth in her own circumstances, the character played by Miss Dove is a very real one and gives her what is possibly her best opportunity for an outstanding screen portrayal.

"American Beauty," based on the short story of the same name by Wallace Irwin, was adapted to the screen and produced by Carey Wilson and directed by Richard Wallace.

Lloyd Hughes plays the leading masculine role opposite Miss Dove, with Walter McGrail, Margaret Livingston, Lucien Prival, Al St. Jorn, Edythe Chapman, Alice White, Yola d'Avril, Loretta Young.

The Joy of Possession

is one of the principle emotions of human life. You are proud of your fine shot gun, your bird dog, your favorite golf club, your accurate watch, your new automobile and many other things. What about your home? Do you own one or do you live in a rented house? Did you know it was unnecessary for any one to live in a rented house in Wichita Falls for very long? Do you know why? Well, if you want to know something it is because this institution has millions of capital to lend to good people to enable them to quit being renters and become home owners, to enable them to have something that will reflect the REAL joy of possession, something more than ordinary worthwhile achievement, a home, the finest thing in the world for anybody to possess. We invite your immediate co-operation in this connection.
