25 missing after plane crashes into hotel

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A jet fighter crashed a mile short of an Indianapolis International Airport runway today, plowing into a hotel where at least seven people died and others were injured as the jet exploded in "fireball," police and witnesses said.

Up to 25 people were missing and seven were confirmed dead in the accident at the 220-room Ramada Inn Airport, which occurred just after 9 a.m., said Robert Duncan, an attorney for the Indianapolis Airport Authority.

Up to 10 people were transported to area hospitals, said Larry Curl, a spokesman for the fire department rescue units on the scene.

A temporary morgue was established at the east end of the hotel. Authorities believe 107 people were in the building at the time.

The point of impact was the second floor, just above the main lobby, according to Curl.

The pilot of the plane, an A-7 Corsair jet fighter, bailed out before the crash, and apparently was not seriously injured, a broadcast reporter at the scene said.

The plane went down about one mile east of the airport, first hitting a bank and slamming into the north side of the building.

The hardest hit areas were the second and third floors of the hotel. Black smoke poured from the building.

Jim Yanuzzi, 38, of Flemington, N.J., a guest staying in a second-floor room in the east end of the motel, said he heard "a big explosion and the whole building shook.

"I went to the door, opened the door, and the hall was full of black smoke. I went back into the room, grabbed a chair and broke out the window."

He said he jumped onto the roof of a first-floor structure and then climbed down a ladder to get to the ground.

Outside, Yanuzzi said he saw a man on fire rolling on the ground and several women running out of the motel.

Joe Hays, who was working in a office building across the street said he raced to a window when he heard an explosion. "There was just debris and a big fire ball."

There are numerous hotels on the east side of the airport area, about 10 miles from downtown Indianapolis.

Bob Horn, executive assistant manager at the nearby Adam's Mark Hotel, said: "There are a lot of casualties that they are taking out of the building. The hotel ran close to full last night."

Horn said the plane scraped the front of Bank One and crashed into the front of the hotel, "right in front of the canopy."

"There is a lot of emergency equipment in front of the hotel and it's pretty badly burned," Horn said.

"For the type of disaster there is not that much confusion going on. The building is on fire and the majority of people are out of the building that were able to leave," he said.

A disaster center was immediately set up, and streets in the area were closed off.

In Washington, JoAnne Sloane of the Federal Aviation Administration said the plane was an A-7 Corsair that "evidently flamed out and

Coahoma board says please be at school

By KERRY HAGLUND
Staff Writer

The Coahoma School Board will be bringing a message to Coahoma students during the remainder of October: Go to school.

If average daily attendance during the month is less than 97.5 percent, the district could lose as much as $28,000 in state funding, Coahoma Independent School District Superintendent Gary Rotan said Monday.

That's because Coahoma's funding allotment — $1.2 million — is based on a 901 average daily attendance.

September average daily attendance was only 883 — a 96 percent rate, Rotan said.

As of Oct. 9, the school had 919 students enrolled — 42 less than October 1986.

Rotan said the district would lose about $1,375 in funding per student if the district's attendance drops below 901 in October.

Funds are based on October attendance figures, Rotan said.

Rotan suggested providing various incentives for students to attend class, including plotting attendance on graphs for elementary school students and providing free pizza or hamburger dinners for high school students.

He also suggested sending letters to parents explaining the importance of maintaining a 901 attendance level.

Board members considered discouraging students who must be absent from school for a medical appointment from leaving before second period — the hour that attendance is computed. Anyone absent second period is considered absent for the day, Rotan explained.

During Monday's regular 7:30 p.m. school board meeting, members also heard a report about the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce's junior leadership program, approved application for honors courses and approved a resolution supporting the return to an elected state board of education.

Teri Quinones, a member of the Leadership Big Spring Alumni Association, told board members that the association has begun a new program for high school juniors.

The program, Junior Leadership Big Spring, is fashioned after a nine-month adult program that acquaints members of the community with various agencies in the city.

The high school program, condensed into 10 weeks, will be from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. every Monday beginning Feb. 8, Quinones said.

The Coahoma School Board unanimously endorsed the program, but added that they would like more students from Coahoma to be eligible for the program.

The alumni association has geared the program for 20 students — 15 from Big Spring and the remainder from Coahoma and Forsan, Quinones said.

"Our goal is to nuture leadership and to encourage people to stay in Big Spring and become community leaders," she said.

"I think this is an excellent opportunity for students to have exposure to all the different factions of the community," Rotan said.

In other action, board members approved application to the Texas Education Agency for honors courses.

If the application is approved, graduating seniors will have the opportunity to receive a transcript indicating graduation in an advanced program with honors.

Five credits must be earned for the transcript.

Board members also unanimously approved a resolution supporting the return to an elected state board of education.

Coahoma hearing planned

The Coahoma City Council will have a regular meeting at 7 p.m. today in the community center at the corner of North and Main streets.

City Clerk Holly Best today said the council will have the first of two required public hearings concerning a community development grant for the city. The grant will be used to fund improvements to water lines in the city. A second required public hearing is scheduled for Nov. 10.

NTS Communications company will make a presentation to the council concerning the company's long-distance telephone service. The council will consider whether to award the company a contract for services, Best said.

"They are the first ones to approach us," she said. "They're coming out to present what their company has to offer and see if the city wants to go with their service."

Other matters before the council will be a possible update on the adjustment policy for water bills when customers have problems with leaks, she said, and hearing from two citizens concerning high water bills.

Best said the council also will consider how to improve collection on unpaid sewer bills.

Bids for diesel fuel deliveries will be reviewed at the meeting, Best said. The city had a contract with Reed Brothers' fuel service but the company has closed down, she explained, necessitating a new contract.

Other items on the agenda include a preliminary discussion of budget items and comparison of last year's budget projection to its performance. Employees' concerns will also be discussed.

Stock market fluctuation causes ripples overseas

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices leaped in heavy trading on the New York Stock Exchange early today but then gave back all of their gain, falling below the level it dropped to in Monday's $500 billion selloff.

The Dow Jones industrial average, up as much as 200 points in early trading, was down 3 points to about 1,736 at 11:59 a.m. The London Stock Exchange also retreated from a rally attempt in late trading.

Trading was even heavier than Monday's record, when the Dow plunged 508 points in a decline that rivaled the worst of the Great Crash of 1929.

Volume as of 11:30 a.m. was 258.56 million shares. The NYSE tape that reports trades was running 67 minutes behind.

Trying to calm the markets, the exchange asked securities houses not to use computerized program trading, which moves huge blocks of stock and contributes to the volatility of the market.

The Federal Reserve said it would inject money as necessary to support the health of the markets and banking

Local confidence remains high

By BILL FOSTER
Staff Writer

It was business as usual today in Big Spring after Monday's stock market nose dive.

Major local economic ripples from the market crash aren't expected to be felt, according to several Big Spring financial experts.

Although Security State Bank President J.D. Nelson said he doesn't fully understand what happened to the cause the stock market decline, he doesn't expect Big Spring banks to experience any adverse effects.

"It was the big money people playing games ... I expect the market to stabilize by Friday," Nelson said.

Big Spring State National Bank President John Currie echoed Nelson's comments saying he doesn't expect local bank assets to suffer as a result of the market decline.

"I don't think anyone locally will be hurt by the initial wave," Currie said.

He noted that the State National Bank has only 16 outstanding loans that have stocks as collateral. And those loans are for small amounts — between $1,000 and $8,000, he said.

"These loans are not made to speculators," Currie said.

A spokesman at the Edward D. Jones & Co. investment office in Big Spring said the office was "swamped" with calls and visits from clients this morning.

Howard College Economics Instructor Larry Reese is also confident that the market drop is temporary and won't have a significant negative impact on the local economy.

Although Reese said the market decline could trigger a national recession, he doesn't expect it to cause a major economic upheaval like the one after the stock market crash of 1929.

Forsan board considers student program

By SARAH LUMAN
Staff Writer

Forsan Independent School District board of rustees approved a proposal from the Big Spr-ng Area Chamber of Commerce to institute a eadership training program for students, and ieard a proposal to begin on-the-job training or prospective principals.

The board unanimously approved a proposal)y Johnnie Lou Avery of the Big Spring Area 'hamber of Commerce to make available the 'unior Leadership program for Forsan tudents.

Avery described the program as a series of neetings, one night weekly for ten weeks dur-ng the school year, offering participating uniors in high school a chance to see commun-y leaders in action.

The students and school district, she em-)hasized, would not be charged for par-icipating in the program. The students' only xpense would be for transportation to and rom the group's meetings.

School superintendent J.F. Poynor asked the oard to begin considering staffing for the 988-89 school year. He suggested asking new eachers who are certified in various fields to onsider an on-the-job training program for ad-inistrative positions.

Among other business:

- Heard a report from Stallings and Herm and received their audit for the year just ended. According to Steve Stallings, the school district shows a positive balance of $201,226 on revenues over expenditures for the past year. He described that as an excellent achievement in view of current economic conditions, noting that many districts of similar size are heavily in the red.
- Voted to support board member Lee George in the upcoming election for the Howard County Tax Appraisal District.
- Decided to continue membership in the Texas Association of School Board's legal defense fund. In a related matter, the board opted to continue monitoring a legal case originating in Arlington.

A court decision against several school districts in the case favored parents' conducting home schools; the court also awarded damages and attorneys' fees to the parents and required the fee payments to be divided among every school district in the state.

- Approved a defined appraisal period for teachers who require only one appraisal during this school year under a modification of House Bill 72.
- Voted to accept a financial report and decided to continue considering major repairs for district buildings and grounds until the next meeting.
- Discussed amending the district's communicable disease policy and decided to hear suggestions at the next meeting for standardizing procedure to be used when handling blood or bodily-fluid spills resulting from injury or illness at school.
- Discussed concession operations at ball games and decided to revise the division of revenue.

Until this year, concession operators provided all the food and labor for the concession stand. This season, the district will provide cafeteria workers to assist.

The district also began receiving a 75 percent split of revenue this year; Monday night the board proposed a retroactive revision of the revenue division to 50 percent for the school district and 50 percent for the group operating the concessions.

- Forsan trustees decided to not to act on the recent visit of the state accreditation team to the school pending delivery of the team's formal report, expected within the next two weeks. Board president Dr. Robert Patterson, DDS, described the overall comments of the team as favorable to the district.

A statement from West German authorities today eased concerns that Germany would allow its interest rates to rise, a move that might choke off economic growth in the United States by forcing interest rates higher here as well.

The market's action continued to perplex analysts. Investors seemed torn between the theory that massive U.S. trade and budget deficits would cause the dollar to fall and trigger high inflation and high interest rates, and the alternate theory that interest rates and inflation would be dragged down by a recession.

"Right now you can build a case for whatever you want," said Morgan McDonnell, managing director of Moseley, Hallgarten, Estabrook & Weeden Inc. in Chicago.

Bond prices surged. Traders said one reason was that investors were putting money in bonds out of fears of the possibility — however remote — that the devastation in stock markets would cause another 1930s-style depression by wiping out people's investments and causing a crisis in confidence.

In contrast, analysts said the rebound in stocks seemed to grow out of a conviction that corporate earnings were good enough to support higher prices.

Prices of U.S. Treasury bonds soared early today as investors sought a safe haven in government securities offering fixed incomes. That meant the yield on the bonds fell, a measure of lower interest rates. They fell back slightly later in the morning.

Two banks that had raised their prime rates last week, Chemical Bank and Marine Midland, rolled back the increases to the general level of 9.25 percent. The prime rate is used as a benchmark for a variety of consumer and business loans.

Legislature in 1984, dissolved the 27-member elected board and created a 15-member appointed board.

The board was considered a transitional board to implement education reforms included in the bill, Rotan said.

A constitutional amendment appears on the Nov. 3 ballot asking voters if they want to maintain the appointed board.

Elected officials would be directly accountable to the citizens who elect them, but appointed officials could be held accountable only by those who appointed them, board member Stanley Phillips said.

In other action the board:

- Approved appointment of Gary W. Rotan as the authorized representative of the national school lunch program for the district.
- Approved first reading of a retention, promotion and placement policy. The local policy lists alternatives for students who do not meet achievement standards. Alternatives include tutoring, summer school and repeating a grade level.
- Approved an appraisal calendar for certified personnel.
- Received the September tax collection report. According to the report, $11,053.87 in delinquent taxes were collected.
- Received a copy of the Texas Association of School Boards AIDS policy for study. Rotan predicted the Coahoma district would have a communicable disease policy established by January.
- Received notice that the administration has prepared a notice of bid for the sale of two vacant houses owned by the school.

Jessica rescuers say they're not heroes

Dr. Terry Tubb, one of three Midland doctors who are in charge of caring for 18-month-old Jessica McClure, tells members of the press Monday that Jessica's condition is still serious but stable. Monday doctors operated for the second time and added that now it's just a case of "wait and see."

By The Associated Press

New Mexico men who helped free Jessica McClure from an abandoned well in Midland say the real hero of the rescue operation was the 18-month-old girl who was trapped for 58 hours.

"We're not heroes," said Kragg Robinson of Albuquerque. "Jessica's the hero. We just happened to be there."

Robinson, vice president of Robinson Rathole Service of Albuquerque, was one of the first workers on the scene. He and co-workers Scott Fletcher and Carey Mitschelen worked around-the-clock for most of the 2½ days Jessica was stuck in the well.

Robihson said Monday he and the other men were working on a bridge project in Midland Wednesday morning when a police officer asked them for help.

"I said 'sure,'" Robinson said. "We were drilling by 11 a.m."

Robinson and Fletcher said everybody knew the girl would be rescued — the question was when.

"On the second day she was singing to her mother," Fletcher said. "That was it, we had to keep going."

Robinson was one of several men who volunteered to descend into the two-foot-wide shaft with jackhammers and special drills and drill horizontally to reach the well.

He described the situation as 'hanging in there and jackhammering our hearts away." About 50 people helped with the drilling and rescue, he said.

Fletcher said he, Mitschelen and Robinson participated in all but a few hours of the 58-hour rescue operation.

Coffee, food and the emotion generated by several hundred onlookers kept them on the job, Fletcher said.

"That was the main thing that kept us going, all the people," he said. "It was incredible."

Robinson said he supervised the rescue operation until Thursday, when Carlsbad resident David Lilly, a mine inspector for the U.S. Mine Safety and Health Administration, took over.

Lilly also downplayed his role in the rescue operation.

"I didn't do anything anybody else wouldn't," he said. "I just hope by being there I speeded the process up a little."

Lilly said he drilled and chipped away at the rock whenever rescuers reached a critical spot. He called in paramedics to check on Jessica when he saw the girl's foot above him on Friday.

He said he thought about his 7-month-old granddaugther as he worked to free the girl.

"I don't think there was a dry eye in the crowd," he said. "We were just overjoyed. It made it all worthwhile to see her come out of there alive."

Robinson said he and his crew have received thanks from the Midland community for days after the rescue.

"We haven't bought a drink since it happened," he said. "All the bars just give us what we want."

Fletcher said the men went to buy Jessica a new pair of tennis shoes, and "everybody in the shoe store recognized us and they said 'take your pick, anything you want.'"

Appeals court ruling favors lawman

CONROE — Montgomery County Sheriff Joe Corley says he should not be responsible for statements made by his deputies and he's ready to defend that position in court.

The 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans on Monday reversed a $350,000 award against Corley that involved unauthorized statements made by his chief deputy.

The appeals court reversed the February 1986 decision against the sheriff and remanded the case to the federal district court for a new trial.

"Obviously, I'm delighted," Corley said when informed of the ruling Monday. "I believed we were right to begin with," he told The Associated Press. "I would attempt to defend that position again" during another trial.

Last year, a Houston jury in U.S. District Judge Lynn Hughes' court ruled that Corley had slandered Michael Jauch, 28, a former narcotics detective with the sheriff's department.

Judge dies aboard homeward flight

DALLAS — Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Robert Madden Hill, who as a district judge presided over the 1979 conspiracy trial of Billy Sol Estes, has died.

Hill, 59, of Dallas, who died Monday, was remembered by friends as a tough but fair jurist who sometimes injected a little humor into the courtroom.

"He was fair, he was conscientious and he was willing to listen," said Dallas lawyer Marvin Wise, a longtime associate of Hill. "He could tell a joke as well as anyone I knew."

Hill died after an asthma attack while he and his wife, state Rep. Patricia Hill, R-Dallas, were flying to the United States from Kenya, where they had been vacationing.

Hair rules entangle Houston school

HOUSTON — Parents are concerned about a school district's ban on long hair that led to the expulsion of a 7-year-old and prompted a high school student to withdraw from classes.

Johnny Vigh withdrew from Dulles High School last month after Fort Bend Independent School District officials told him he would be expelled if he didn't cut his shoulder-length hair.

"My hair is not unruly or scuzzy or anything," Vigh said. "I take time in styling it. A lot of people at school came up to me and said they liked my hair. People enjoyed it. I don't see how they could say it's disruptive."

Mattox mulls SMU grand jury probe

AUSTIN (AP) — A decision should be made by mid-November whether to go to a grand jury in the investigation of Southern Methodist University's pay-for-play football scandal, Attorney General Jim Mattox says.

Mattox said his office's investigators were continuing to review written material and to interview witnesses.

Mattox said he hoped a decision would be reached by Nov. 15. If the case is taken to a grand jury, Mattox said, it probably would be in Dallas County.

Opinion

FBI's actions questionable

Not long before he committed suicide, author Ernest Hemingway said he was convinced that the FBI was tapping his phone. At the time, his concerns were taken to be a sign of paranoia or mental illness. Now assertions have been made that make it appear to some people that Hemingway could have been right.

An article in New Yorker magazine, for which author Herbert Mitgang said he obtained dossiers through the federal Freedom of Information Act, asserts that surveillance of Hemingway was one of a number of FBI operations involving prominent writers in America.

Mitgang's list of authors under surveillance from the 1930s to the 1960s includes a roster of other Nobel Prize winners: Sinclair Lewis, Pearl Buck, William Faulkner, John Steinbeck. Others on the list were novelist Thomas Wolfe, poets Carl Sandburg and W.H. Auden, and dramatist Thornton Wilder.

The author of the New Yorker article said he saw files in which Hemingway was labeled a communist. Lewis was under suspicion for presenting the view in "Kingsblood Royal," that blacks could be social equals to whites.

Buck was criticized for a similar attitude. Steinbeck came under FBI scrutiny because his distinguished Depression-era novel, "The Grapes of Wrath," depicted a dark side of American life.

Such excesses on the part of the FBI reflected the overzealousness of J. Edgar Hoover, an autocrat who stayed too long in his job.

If the FBI actually had the writers under surveillance, it had no business doing so unless it had evidence of criminal activity.

How Iran formed a Lebanese hideout for outlaws

By JACK ANDERSON
and JOSEPH SPEAR

Syria and Iran are moving warily and hesitantly toward a confrontation in the strategic and perilous Bekaa Valley of eastern Lebanon. Our associate Barbara Newman has just returned with an eyewitness account of what is happening.

Jack Anderson

This is outlaw country — populated by sullen Lebanese farmers and villagers, patrolled by rugged Syrian commandos — where terrorists run free.

Across the valley stretches the dark, inhibiting shadow of Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini. By intimidation and histrionics, his mullahs have transformed the area into an Islamic state, a nation within a nation, that has the look of a little Iran. Their authority is backed by an invisible force of armed fanatics.

Here's how it happened: In 1979, the unruly ayatollah took advantage of the mounting bedlam in Lebanon to attempt a theocratic takeover. He sent hundreds of revolutionary guards into the Bekaa Valley to recruit and train terrorists. They established a terrorist base in the city of Baalbek, on the valley's edge.

Khomeini also took advantage of Iran's close alliance with Syria to maintain access to the Bekaa Valley. First, the revolutionary guards poured into the valley through the Damascus airport.

They were followed by a procession of Iranian mullahs, officials and couriers who rallied the fragmented Shiite Moslem community and brought leadership and unity to this chaotic corner of Lebanon.

The wily Khomeini also routed a steady flow of cash and arms through the Damascus airport. Thus he was permitted to arm the terrorists and pay them salaries.

He used some of the money to buy the loyalty of the Shiite farmers and villagers, paying bribes and providing social services. All the while, his mullahs indoctrinated the people with Khomeini's fanatical, fundamentalist doctrines.

His words were scrawled on walls, emblazoned on road signs and broadcast over loudspeakers placed on village mosques. His picture, with the patriarchal beard and compelling eyes, sprang like the marijuana that grows in the valley.

Because the populace is Lebanese, the Iranian influence was downplayed. The appeal was religious and revolutionary, designed to incite the Shiite masses with a radical fury.

It was accompanied by a call for martyrdom: "All Moslems must rise and conquer their fear of death so that they can conquer the whole world!"

Suddenly Syria was confronted with a fundamentalist Islamic regime, loyal to Ayatollah Khomeini, in the middle of its sphere of influence — a potentially hostile regime that had been created right under its nose.

Syrian sources confessed to Newman that the ayatollah skillfully used diplomacy and oil shipments to placate them. His task was easier because both countries shared a common hatred for Iraq.

As his fanatical following grew, Khomeini began to use the terrorist threat as a counter-force against the established Syrian regime.

Khomeini has a history of turning against his benefactors. He is now waging war against the Iraqis and inciting terrorism against the French; yet both gave him shelter while he was plotting against the Shah of Iran.

So the Syrians began to crack down. They halted the flow of arms and money through the Damascus airport. They also blocked the visits of Iranian leaders and couriers to the Bekaa Valley. And they stopped the free movement of terrorists between Baalbek and Beirut.

But the Syrians stopped short of a military confrontation. They continue to man the checkpoints and restrict terrorist operations.

The soft dollar has hardened the Frenchies

By ART BUCHWALD

PARIS — The last time I saw Paris the tourists still controlled the main boulevards and sidewalk cafes. Americans were smiling and the French were glum. Unfortunately all this has changed. Now the French are smiling and the Americans are glum.

Art Buchwald

"What on earth went wrong?" I asked the doorman at my hotel.

"Your dollar went soft and our franc went hard," he said. "Nobody pays attention to anyone who has soft currency dribbling out of his pocket."

"It's temporary," I protested. "We are working on a new chemical process to harden the dollar. Soon it will be as tough as the yen."

"If you say so. Did you want to take a bus or the metro?"

"I can afford a taxi," I said. "Americans may be poor but when it comes to taking cabs we are a proud people."

"Even if I got you a taxi you couldn't go anywhere."

"Why not?"

"All the traffic in Paris is standing still. Nothing is moving. You see those cars out there in the street? They have been there since last Thursday."

"What's wrong?"

"It's the hard franc. Everybody now has money to spend so all the French are trying to get to a store or a restaurant at the same time. They might be able to make it except the workers are on strike."

"Are they blocking the streets?"

"No, the police are blocking the streets to prevent the workers from jamming them."

"Why are they protesting?"

"They want more hard francs so they can be part of the traffic tie-up."

I said to the doorman, "I recall the days when the dollar was strong and every store had a sign, 'English Spoken Here.'"

"I remember that also," he said. "We even gave you discounts for your traveler's checks."

"And you sent our packages to the airplane as a courtesy."

The doorman said, "You Americans thought it would last forever."

"It would have if someone hadn't stomped all over the dollar. Tell me the truth, do the French respect us anymore?"

"They don't disrespect you. They ignore you. To them you are no better or worse than a Swedish tourist. Remember, there is nothing you can do for the French. They have everything."

I finally said, "There is more to life than hard currency, good living and gridlock."

"Why didn't you tell us that when the franc was soft?"

"I need a taxi."

"Where are you going?"

"To a fine French restaurant."

"What are you going to use for money?"

"I have a credit card that permits me to charge up to $2,000."

"That should do it if you don't order a fancy wine."

"Don't you worry about me," I said. "I know how to order a French meal. When I was here the last time I had the greatest dinner in the world at a bistro called Chez Bebe for $25 a person."

"Bebe is no longer there."

"Where is he?" I asked.

"He's out in the traffic, trying to take his mistress to Maxim's."

Baby's rescue emotional media event

By KERRY HAGLUND
Staff Writer

For three days she dominated the news.

Americans sat in front of their television sets in a trance-like state watching the Jessica McClure saga develop.

At a glance

Interest in the growing tension in the Persian Gulf, a record stock market plunge and Nancy Reagan's cancer surgery waned as the minutes ticked by and concern mounted for the Midland toddler trapped in a backyard well.

The struggle to save the child tugged at the hearts of people everywhere, and the volunteers' rescue effort captured the nation. Even foreign media from as far away as England and China were reporting the incident.

By noon Thursday, volunteers had dug within several inches of the toddler.

In the Herald newsroom, the feeling was anxious.

Employees from other departments passed the newsroom frequently requesting information about the rescue attempt, while several residents called asking for the latest news.

Jessica could be rescued at any moment, radio and television announcers reported.

But the minutes ticked by and press deadline loomed near.

Top-of-the-page coverage of the event was scrapped.

Because of the time element involved, the latest report, hot off the press at 1 p.m., could have been wrong if read at 6 p.m.

Live reports of the event suggested the child would be rescued by the time papers reached subscribers' porches — that was not the case.

At noon Friday, it was once again a race against time.

In charge of keeping abreast of developments, I checked the Associated Press wire every few minutes.

Unfortunately, it takes much longer to write a story about the rescue effort than to broadcast it over the airwaves.

When a story implying imminent rescue appeared on my screen about 12:30 p.m., Editor Robert Wernsman decided to go with it.

Much to everyone's disappointment, baby Jessica remained trapped throughout the afternoon and evening.

It was not until nearly 8 p.m. Friday that the child was finally freed.

The roles of broadcast and print media were clearly defined by the coverage of the three-day incident.

Nothing can compare to the live television account of the child being pulled from her 58-hour prison.

The people watching felt as though they were a part of the rescue effort. It was an emotional scene — one that parents with young children could especially relate to.

"She's blinking," one newscaster ecstatically reported, as viewers obtained their first glimpse of the tot.

Voices of some reporters quavered, as they were taken in by the emotional scene before them.

Viewers could hear the crowd cheering and could see the rescuers smiles.

Broadcast media concentrated on a moment-by-moment coverage of the incident as it unfolded.

Newspaper journalists, because of the nature of the business, could not report the incident as it was happening.

Instead, press reporters re-told the story, and expounded on the live broadcasts.

Five stories about the incident were published in Friday's Herald.

Through the written word, reporters told of the emotional scene.

"Schoolchildren prayed and anxious spectators with youngsters of their own looked on ... " read one story describing the scene.

Area newspapers covered a wide range of aspects besides the actual rescue, including reports of other abandoned wells in the area and a report of a similar accident that occurred in California in 1949.

Now that the child has been freed from the well, readers will continue to be informed about her condition and any other developments that come about.

I think everyone, including weary members of the media, is glad the incident has ended — for the most part — and especially so because of the victorious outcome.

Truck hits school bus

GAFFNEY, S.C. — A tractor trailer slammed into a bus early today, killing four people and injuring 13, authorities said.

The bus, carrying members of the Converse College women's basketball team, had broken down and apparently was on the shoulder of Interstate 85 just outside Gaffney when the collision occurred about 12:45 a.m., the state Highway Patrol said.

The bus was carrying 16 people to back Spartanburg. Thirteen people were taken to Cherokee County Memorial Hospital, hospital spokeswoman Sally Hammond said.

Jackson backs strike

NEW ORLEANS — The Persian Gulf must be kept open for shipping even if it requires such action as the U.S. military strike on two Iranian oil platforms, says Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson.

Jackson has been one of the harshest critics of the Reagan administration's policies in the Middle East, but he expressed no doubt that the attack was justified, saying at a news conference Monday, "Under these conditions it was absolutely necessary."

"We must reach out to the world and multilaterally patrol the gulf and define those international waters, those waters that must be kept open," Jackson said during a campaign stop in New Orleans.

NBC nears agreement

NEW YORK — NBC's striking workers voted by a 2-1 margin to accept a contract offer, but their 17-week walkout continued today after two small units of the broadcast employees union held out.

A tally Monday showed that 12 of the 14 units in the 2,800-member National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians voted to accept an offer that had been opposed by most of their leaders. Under union policy, the strikers cannot go back to work until all the units agree.

CIA releases report

WASHINGTON — The CIA acknowledges that U.S. intelligence agents filed a report on Austrian President Kurt Waldheim in 1945, despite agency denials in 1980 that such documentation existed.

In April, Waldheim was banned from entering the United States because of his alleged involvement in Nazi atrocities during World War II, when he was an intelligence officer in the German army.

The CIA admitted the existence of the 1945 report in a letter to the World Jewish Congress, which attempted unsuccessfully to obtain a copy under the Freedom of Information Act.

Goetz

Court gives him six-month term

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernhard Goetz says his six-month prison sentence for illegal possession of the gun he used to shoot four young men on a subway won't deter him from defending himself.

"I have letters from people who have been permanently injured in crimes and say they would gladly trade places with me," Goetz said in a telephone interview late Monday. "They say they would rather have gotten my sentence than their injuries and gone through what they have gone through."

Goetz, 39, was sentenced earlier in the day by acting state Supreme Court Justice Stephen Crane, who presided over an eight week-trial stemming from the 1984 shootings. The jury convicted Goetz on June 16 of a single charge of illegal possession of a weapon, and acquitted him of attempted murder and assault.

Goetz, who is white, said he shot the four black 19-year-olds because he believed they were about to rob him when one approached and demanded $5. They said they were panhandling money to play videogame machines that they intended to burglarize.

Before sentencing, the state Probation Department had recommended Goetz receive "intensive supervision coupled with indefinite psychiatric intervention," but no jail time.

Besides the jail term, Crane fined Goetz $5,000, put him on probation for five years, ordered him to perform 280 hours of community service at New York University Medical Center, and directed him to undergo psychiatric treatment. Goetz remains free on $5,000 bail, pending appeal.

He could have received a maximum penalty of seven years in prison, but first offenders like him often do no time.

The judge said statistics show about half of first offenders convicted under the weapons law get prison terms.

"A non-jail sentence for Mr. Goetz would invite others to violate the gun law," Crane said. "Whether you agree with the law or not, it is the law and it was the law on Dec. 22, 1984, and it remains the law."

Bernhard Goetz was sentenced yesterday to six months in prison for illegal gun possession nearly three years after he shot four teen-agers on a subway in New York.

Crash toll rises to 152

JAKARTA, Indonesia — Rescue workers today freed more bodies from the wreckage of two passenger trains that crashed head-on, killing at least 152 people, many of them children, police said.

Communications Minister Rusmin Nuryadin said officials of two railway stations were being questioned about why the Jakarta-bound train did not wait for an outbound train to pass on the single track before the collision Monday.

"The train from Rangkas Bitung was already 20 minutes late, but why was it permitted to leave the station after a brief stop?" said Nuryadin, the communications minister.

Ex-rebel gets amnesty

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — Former Nicaraguan rebel leader Edgar Chamorro has returned home under a government amnesty, saying he will "work for peace and reconciliation."

In another development, government censors told an opposition radio station that reopened this month that it could not broadcast news without permission.

Chamorro, who arrived Monday, had left Nicaragua before the leftist Sandinista government took power in 1979. He was a director of the U.S.-backed Contra rebels from 1982 to 1984, when he left the group, charging they were manipulated by the CIA.

Tamils resist attack

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — Indian troops led by tanks met fierce resistance from Tamil guerrillas today as the soldiers tried to link up with an Indian force holding the center of Jaffna, Sri Lankan military sources said.

Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi meanwhile said he was optimistic a settlement could be reached and that his troops won't be in Sri Lanka "forever."

An Indian column led by tanks and armored personnel carriers was trying to move into Jaffna from the north today, to meet Indian forces on the city's southern waterfront, according to sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Sudanese lead protest

KHARTOUM, Sudan — Fifteen thousand people marched peacefully [illegible] government apply Islamic laws and scrap loan agreement with the International Monetary Fund that led to price increases.

Monday's demonstration was organized by the opposition Moslem fundamentalist group, the National Islamic Front. It is the third largest party in Sudan's 264-seat Parliament, with 51 seats.

Ophthalmologist warns: Use eyedrops with caution

By NYU MEDICAL CENTER

Using over-the-counter eyedrops for more than a day can mask serious problems that warrant medical attention, cautions an ophthalmologist at New York University Medical Center.

"While non-prescription eyedrops are generally harmless, their use to treat decreased vision, eye pain or unexplained eye redness or dryness which persists for more than a day is unwise," said Dr. Robert C. Cykiert, clinical assistant professor in ophthalmology at the center.

Cykiert noted there are two types of eyedrops available without prescription: those which reduce eye redness, and those which lubricate dry eyes. In addition, eyewash products and solutions are available without a prescription.

"Products which reduce eye redness contain vasoconstricting chemicals that shrink tiny blood vessels on the surface of the eyeball," said Cykiert, who explained that such redness is generally caused by inadequate sleep, excess alcohol intake, or environmental irritation such as exposure to cold weather, wind or tobacco smoke.

"Since eye redness also can be a sign of serious underlying eye infection, inflammation or glaucoma, using an eyedrop can fool the individual into thinking the problem has been solved — and meanwhile damage to the eye develops."

Lubrication drops, also known as artificial tears, temporarily eliminate dryness and pain. "Again, such symptoms may really require medical attention; dryness can be caused by a foreign body in the eye or by a corneal infection."

The NYU eye specialist recommends using artificial tears only to treat diagnosed deficiencies in tear formation.

In general, he also recommends avoiding over-the-counter eyewashes, saying that they provide no significant benefits and may not be completely sterile.

"These eyewash solutions and cups often remain in bathroom medicine cabinets for months, creating an environment for bacterial growth," he explained. "When used without proper sterilization, as they often are, they can cause eye infections."

Cykiert emphasized that eyes have their own excellent cleansing system.

Lab's error causes tragedy for couple

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: My wife, Kathy, and I are both Jewish, so when she became pregnant in 1985, I took a simple blood test to determine if I was a carrier of Tay-Sachs — a hideous disease that predominantly strikes Jewish children. About one out of 30 Jewish adults is a Tay-Sachs carrier.

If a carrier marries another carrier, there is a one out of four chance that their baby will develop Tay-Sachs.

I was tested at a local hospital and was told I was not a carrier, so since both parents must be carriers in order to produce a Tay-Sachs child, there was no reason for Kathy to be tested.

In June 1986, Kathy had a beautiful baby. We named her Abigail. She appeared to be a normal, happy baby, but when she didn't sit up or progress the way other babies her age did, we became concerned and consulted a specialist. His diagnosis: Tay-Sachs. We were devastated! Abby, our daughter will never crawl, walk or speak. Instead, she will go blind, become paralyzed, have seizures and die before she is 3, 4 or 5 years old.

How could this have happened when I was told I was not a carrier? Our specialist called the hospital and discovered that the lab technician had made a simple mathematical error! We later learned that the hospital's policy was to only "spotcheck" their results. Meanwhile, we looked into suing the lab, but were advised by several prominent malpractice attorneys that in New York it is not possible to collect damages of "pain and suffering." We finally found a lawyer who agreed to take our case, but were told not to expect too much.

Abby, no amount of money can compenstate for having to watch one's child slowly die, but we want to warn other prospective parents so this won't happen to them. No one should have to go through the hell we are presently going through. You may use my name.

DAVID ASTOR, QUEENS, N.Y.

DEAR MR. ASTOR: My heart goes out to you, Kathy and your precious daughter. Thank you for caring enough to write as a warning to others.

Readers, be aware that Tay-Schs has occurred in non-Jewish babies, too — but the incidence is much lower. And in order to reduce the possibility of a laboratory error, the man and woman should be tested twice — preferably at different labs.

DEAR ABBY I appreciated your answer to that letter from "Considering Marriage" — the older, impotent man who was considering what he presumed would be a sexless marriage to a younger woman in a wheelchair. Thanks for setting him straight.

My husband has been a paraplegic since he was a teenager (spinal cord injury), but being in a wheelchair has not stopped him from being the sexiest, most satisfysing lover a woman could want.

FULFILLED

DEAR FULFILLED: To assume that all people in wheelchairs have no sexual feelings and cannot perform is a popular myth that needs to be dispelled. Thank you for validating my statement.

★ ★ ★

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are in our 40s. Friends, also in their 40s, have invited us to their wedding (his fourth, her third).

My wife thinks we should send them a wedding gift. I say they have already received enough wedding gifts as they both own homes and don't need any items to start a household. The fact that we will be attending their wedding indicates our best wishes, and that should be enough.

If my wife insists, I say we should give them a toaster. Who's right?

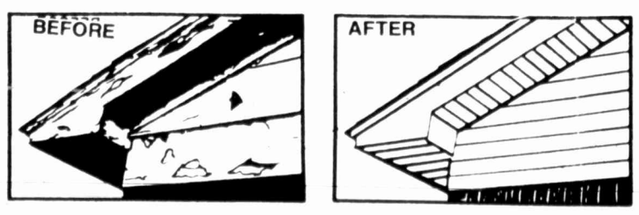

GIFT GIVER

DEAR GIVER: Your wife is. Some kind of gift is in order. Forget the toaster; make it something the couple doesn't have — "his and her" stationery, or monogrammed

Economists spurn comparisons with 1929 crash

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. economy is more resilient, and the government is better prepared for a rescue than in 1929, the last time the stock market collapsed so rapidly, analysts say.

The chance of economic ruin is always present, but a repeat of the Great Depression of the 1930s seems unlikely, economists said Monday after the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks lost 508 points.

"We have to step back now and say is 'Apocalypse Now' justified? As I look at the outlook for the economy, our political system, I don't think so," said Alfred E. Goldman, director of market analysis for A.G. Edwards & Sons Inc. in St. Louis.

The U.S. economy already had been in recession for two months by Oct. 28 and 29, 1929, the Black Monday and Black Tuesday that prefaced the century's worst economic downturn.

In contrast, today's domestic economy is growing at about 3.5 percent annually.

The dollar's decline has helped correct the trade deficit, although slowly, so the manufacturing sector of the economy has gained strength.

Consumer spending also remains healthy despite high debt, and inflation remains modest.

"We are not in a recession, and the U.S. economy if anything looks like it's on the verge of starting to do better. We're more competitive," said Kathleen Cooper, chief economist for Security Pacific National Bank in Los Angeles.

Moreover, in contrast to 1929, the Federal Reserve has shown a willingness to inject more money into the economy to prevent interest rates from soaring and choking off growth.

In 1929, the Fed was actually tightening the money supply, making things worse, said Stephen Slifer, senior vice president of Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc.

"I have a hard time believing corporate America is worth 20 or 30 percent less this morning than it was yesterday morning," Slifer said.

Monday's collapse wiped out more than $500 billion worth of market value, and that is likely to crimp consumer spending by taking wealth out of people's pockets and making them more nervous about the economy.

But Slifer said he expects the economy to keep growing, although perhaps at a rate of 1.5 to 2 percent next year instead of 3 to 3.5 percent.

"The basic thing that really turned the 1929 situation into a depression was, I think, the lack of safeguards in the monetary system. The fact that banks were allowed to close, that you had a sharp reduction in the money supply and you had things feeding on themselves in a downward spiral in the real economy," said William Cline, senior economist for the Institute for International Economics in Washington.

"Nobody thought we were going to have a depression in April 1986, and yet we've had a joyride that's just brought us back to the level of then," he said.

Presumably, the stock market is more stable today than in 1929 because the Securities and Exchange Commission requires stock purchasers to put up at least 50 percent of the purchase price. In the Roaring Twenties, some buyers pyramided tiny investments into empires and were wiped out when falling stock prices made them unable to repay their loans.

Some remain calm as market dives

DALLAS (AP) — Paul Weisberg figures he's seen it all in the stock market. Easy come, easy go. That's how it works. He lived through 1929 as a teen, when his father lost everything. Now he's watching 1987 as a 72-year-old investor, confident it's not his turn.

Up the market runs, down it falls. Weisberg and his friends watch it all in a local brokerage office, playing checkers while peaking at the ticker.

"It doesn't shake me up one bit," Weisberg said of Monday's violent 508-point plunge of the Dow Jones Industrial Average. "Every morning I pinch myself and say, 'Made it to another day.' Tomorrow will be no different."

"The market will come back."

Easy come, easy go, indeed.

Around town, office workers tracked the fall Monday and traded tales of selling out at just the right time, or resisting the temptation to buy at what would have been the wrong time.

Some small investors said they expected the slide; some said they didn't care. Others just shrugged their shoulders and laughed at the losses. There was more black humor and bravado than crying in the streets.

"You better watch out — people may start jumping out of those windows," said Jack Cook, who sold all his stock last January, joking to his friends at a downtown plaza. "I think this means times are going to be bad for another year and a half."

"If I bought a turkey farm, they'd outlaw Thanksgiving," chuckled Jim Ward, a government worker who, like other small investors interviewed at lunch spots and gathering places here, said he wasn't hurt financially Monday because he had given up on the stock market for safer ventures.

"Maybe they'll all be as poor as the rest of us," Ward said of big New York-based traders, investors and brokers. "But you can bet that the little man got hurt today, too."

Just one month ago, Mobil Oil Co. employee Tim Griffin listened to a stock broker's elaborate sales presentation, complete with charts showing the Dow's climb.

"It was going up, up, up, and they were trying to persuade me that it would keep going up. It looked to me like it had gone beyond where it was supposed to drop," said Griffin, who decided not to invest.

"It's kind of funny that I thought that, and all of a sudden here it comes," he said proudly.

Bob Tredwell, a government employee, said he, too, saw it coming and ran for safe hiding.

"I bailed out with what I had not too long ago. I've been expecting a drop for two months, and I'm surprised it stayed up as long as it did," he said.

At Linda Pierce's Fine Shine shoeshine stand, customers stopped in Monday for a quick buff and the latest news bulletins on her radio.

"Most of them think it has to do with the bombing of the Iranian oil platform," Ms. Pierce said of her customers. "And most of them think it was time the president did something. They're more excited about that than the stock market."

Crossroads Chalk Talk

It was a rough week for Crossroads Country football teams as only three area teams won in week six.

Of the three winners, the Colorado City Wolves pulled off the week's biggest win, a convincing 27-7 upset win over the Merkel Badgers. The victory gives coach Tom Ramsey's Wolves a tie for the District 5-3A lead with Merkel, Ballinger and Abilene Wylie. All teams are 3-1.

What was supposed to be a close six-man matchup in District 4-A West Zone play, turned out to be a rout as the Sands Mustangs dominated area team Klondike Cougars 55-22. Sands leads the zone with a 4-0 record.

The Borden County Coyotes snapped a five game losing streak by defeating fellow area team Grady, 40-36.

In a battle of 6-AA unbeatens, the Forsan Buffaloes had their three game winning streak snapped by the powerful Reagan County Owls. The Owls scored 35 first half points and cruised to a 35-8 win.

In a bit of an upset, the Rankin Red Devils defeated the Stanton Buffalos 27-12 in District 6-AA play.

In a pair of heart-breakers, the Coahoma Bulldogs dropped a 8-7 5-3A match to the Sonora Broncos, and the Garden City Bearkats fell to the Bronte Longhorns 20-14 in 6-A play.

Coahoma had a 23-yard field goal blocked on the last play of the game; and Bronte scored the winning TD on a 25-yard scoring pass with 10 seconds left in the game.

Here is what area coaches had to say about last Friday's games and this week's opponents.

Jan East, Forsan, on his team's first district loss to Reagan County and this week's game against Stanton — "To be truthful, I think we were a little bit scared or something, but we didn't play very good football. In the second half, it finally dawned on us that we could play with them. I hope the kids learn that they can play with anybody.

"Stanton has a good team. From now own we'll have to beat everybody to get into the playoffs. Every game is a challenge that we'll have to be up for."

Joe Bond, Borden County, on his team's win over Grady and this week's contest versus Dawson — "I guess you could call it an upset, our kids had to be underdogs a little because we haven't won since the opening week.

JOE BOND

"We were able to move the ball both on the ground and in the air. We outscored them, we really didn't play that well defensively. We did hold them on fourth and short four times. But I figured we'd have to score a lot of points to win.

"Dawson has some kids that can hurt you, but if we play good, we've got a chance to win. They're basically a running team, that runs an unbalanced set."

Steve Park, Coahoma, on his team's narrow loss to Sonora, and this week's game against Brady — "The kids deserved to win. They played hard for four quarters, and we really needed that win. "On the blocked field goal we missed a blocking assignment. We had the ball at the one, but had it moved back to the six because of a motion penalty. Our kids made a goal line stand in the first half and stopped them on the one-foot line.

"Brady is scary because they have some real fine running backs. The best one is Michael Sillemon, but they are all dangerous. They changed offenses and defenses last week. We've got to get the ball in the end zone this week."

Sam Scott Garden City, on his team's six-point loss to defendning district champions Bronte, and this week's contest against Water Valley — "We should have won but we didn't. We probably would have won if I had made some better calls. The kids played some good ball.

"We came back from a 12-point deficit and took the lead. We finally got our offense going.

"Water Valley should be one of the best teams in the district, but they haven't been playing well. They're probably the best lookng team in the district. They've got a line that averages about 220 pounds, and a 200-pound fullback. We've got a great group of kids and they'll be ready to go."

Tom Ramsey, Colorado City, on his team's big win over Merkel, and this week's game versus Clyde — "It was a good one. That was about as good as we can play. Everthing was going our way, it just seemed to be the Wolves' night. It was homecoming and it was standing room only. I think that helped the kids.

TOM RAMSEY

"Clyde has been playing pretty good football up until last week when they got beat 33-0 by Brady. I think we'll be pumped up and ready. Last year Clyde beat us 49-14. That's the worst defeat we've ever had. Its give us a little more incentive, plus this is our last home game."

Dale Ruth, Stanton, on his team's 27-12 loss to Rankin, and trying to get back on the winning track against tough Forsan — "We really did play well. One key play was when we had third and goal from their six in the fourth quarter. But we fumbled the ball and lost 14 yards, and we didn't score. If we had scored that touchdown, it would have given us the lead and made it a different game.

"We lost our starting running back, Robert Jones, in the first half. He had a slight concussion but we think he'll play this week.

"Against Forsan, we'll pretty much try to do what we've been doing, mixing up the run and pass. Forsan has a good defense. There's no way we'll just line up and run over them."

Sid McCowan, Sands, on his team's remaining in first place with a win over Klondike, and this week's non-distict clash against Midland Christian — "We had a good first half. We were able to get a lead and went on from there. It was the best half of football we've played all year. We don't have a junior varsity team, so we got a lot of playing time for our younger players.

SID McCOWAN

"It should be a good game against Midland Christian. I hope we're up for the game. We've been up the past two weeks for Wellman and Klondike, and we'll have to be up for Loop next week. We'll just have to wait and see how we approach the game Friday."

Tom Ham, Klondike, on his team's lopsided loss to Sands, and this week's encounter with Loop — "I'd like to forget about the whole game. We had some injuries but we didn't play well. They came out high as a kite and we came out flat. They played exceptionally well. They were aggressive on both offense and defense. Our starting cornerback Wesley O'Brien was out with a concussion, and we really missed him. Hopefully he'll be back this week.

"Things don't get any easier with Loop this week. They're a power team with a big runnng back named David Davis. This is a rough week for us because we've got some many distractions. We have school pictures and UIL band contest. This might slow down the kids mentally.

Mike Mathis, Grady, on his team's four-point loss to Borden County, and this week's game against Wellman — "They didn't surprise us, but we didn't play worth a darn. The kids really don't know how to play to win yet. We let them make several key fourth down conversions. We didn't convert ours. Plus we had two touchdowns called back. The Borden County kids played the whole game; we played here and there.

"Wellman will be a tough game. If the kids come to play we can play with them, if not, it will be a tough night. Wellman just came off a big win over Loop. They may be down.

Skins' scabs too much for Pokes' regulars

IRVING (AP) — It was only fitting in the NFL's final replacement game that a former semi-pro quarterback was the winner and a 13-year veteran quarterback failed with the contest on the line.

The Washington Redskins, without any regular starters, beat the Dallas Cowboys, who started seven veterans, 13-7 Monday night in an NFC East showdown for first place.

Tony Robinson, a former Tennessee star who was playing for the Richmond Ravens in September, led Washington to victory after Ed Rubbert went down with a shoulder injury in the first period.

Robinson completed 11 of 18 passes for 152 yards and Lionel Vital ran for 136 yards against a Dallas defense that included a frontline of veterans Randy White, Don Smerek, Kevin Brooks, and Ed Jones.

Washington advanced to 4-1 and Dallas dropped to 3-2 because veteran Danny White couldn't produce with four downs from the Washington 20-yard line in the final minute.

"It is one of the most emotional wins I've ever been associated with," Washington Coach Joe Gibbs said. "Our (replacement) players kept us in the conference race. They were 3-0 in their three-game season."

Robinson said he realized he could be back with the Ravens soon.

"I don't know where I'll be three days from now," Robinson said. "I was just happy to be part of the Redskins' organization and play in a game. This was a great opportunity for me."

Robinson added "I hated to see Ed get hurt. He had been doing a terrific job."

What was heaven for Robinson was hell for the heavily booed White.

"This was one of the most difficult games I've played in," White said. "The boos don't make my job any easier. We could really use the homefield advantage. Right now we don't have it."

The 60,415 fans, second largest of the NFL replacement games, booed White and Tony Dorsett every time they touched the ball.

Washington Redskins wide receiver Ted Wilson (80) reaches for a pass in the third quarter as Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Bill Hill (31) and Alex Green (48) break it up Monday night at Texas Stadium.

There were only 197 no-shows.

"The fans pay their money and can respond any way they want to," Dorsett said.

Gibbs said Robinson "was great" considering he was "thrown in there cold against the Cowboys. He made some big plays and it was a tribute to him. He had tremendous poise for his first NFL game."

Dallas Coach Tom Landry the Cowboys contributed to Robinson's success.

"We were our own worst enemy," he said. "And we just couldn't stop that second quarterback they had in there. He kept making some big plays."

Landry said he never considered replacing White despite the boo birds.

"It's our job to turn boos to cheers," Landry said. "I didn't want to take Danny out. We had a chance to win until the last play of the game."

Chants of "We want (Kevin) Sweeney, We Want Sweeney" began in the second period. Sweeney had quarterbacked Dallas to two replacement game victories.

"I had to make a choice and when I decided on Danny and Tony it was their game, at least as long as it was close. You have to stick with your veterans."

White hit Kelvin Edwards with a 38-yard touchdown pass, but it wasn't enough to offset two field goals by Obed Ariri and Ted Wilson's 16-yard touchdown on a reverse.

NFL veterans go back to work

By The Associated Press

With temporary rosters set at 85, NFL teams are balancing the return of regular players this week with the best of the replacements who played during the 24-day strike.

Among those who will stay, for now, is Los Angeles Raiders replacement quarterback Vince Evans. The 32-year-old Evans was out of football for two years before catching on with the Raiders' strike team.

Indianapolis Coach Ron Meyer cut just 16 replacements, retaining 71 players, although he said more would be cut later this week.

But Philadelphia and Cincinnati cut all their replacements. Detroit Coach Darryl Rogers said there was a slim chance any of the Lions' replacements ultimately would make the 45-man roster, although none were cut Monday.

The replacements departed with some sadness at San Diego, where the irregulars went 3-0, putting the Chargers at 4-1, their best start since 1981.

"Just another day at the office," said quarterback Mike Kelley, who threw a touchdown pass and a 67-yard completion to set up a field goal as the Chargers beat the Raiders 23-17 Sunday, San Diego's first-ever victory over the Raiders at Los Angeles.

"That's what made this so special," Kelley said. "We did it for us. We were fighting for us."

Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll said backup quarterback Bubby Brister might have become No. 1 over struggling Mark Malone had he crossed the picket line. Instead, Noll said, Brister may now be behind both Malone and Steve Bono, the Steelers' quarterback during the strike.

"He missed a golden opportunity," Noll said of Brister. "We'll have to see how they look after they come in, but it could well be that Bono will be the backup. Steve played well for us and the big thing was that we won with him at quarterback."

Atlanta kept only two replacements — quarterback Erik Kramer, who threw for 335 yards and three second-half touchdowns as the Falcons overcame a 17-0 deficit and beat the Los Angeles Rams 24-20 Sunday — and Rich Kraynak, a linebacker on injured reserve.

The New York Giants kept offensive linemen Dan Morgan and Mike Black from the group that

Steinbrenner hires Martin again

NEW YORK (AP) — Only George Steinbrenner could knock the World Series and the end of the NFL strike out of the sports headlines.

Billy Martin is coming back as manager of the Yankees for the fifth time.

Steinbrenner, ignoring Martin's brawls and angry words that forced his four previous firings, brought Martin back Monday to replace Lou Piniella, who promoted to general manager in place of Woody Woodward.

"I'm anxious to return as Yankee manager and I'm looking toward bringing an exciting and winning team to Yankee fans," Martin said in the statement.

Martin's last dismissal by the Yankees came just before Game 7 of the 1985 World Series.

"I feel this is a step forward in my baseball career and gives me the opportunity to learn a new facet of the game," Piniella said in the statement.

The Yankees finished fourth in the American League East, nine games behind first-place Detroit, in Piniella's second season as manager. The Yankees were second in his first year.

Steinbrenner's decision to hire Martin had been expected since last week, but Piniella's move to the GM post was a surprise.

Woodward reportedly asked out of the position.

"I felt like the demand of the schedule I was asked to keep was not one I wanted to continue," Woodward said. "I wanted to see what was out there. My plans are to be available to talk to any club that might be interested."

On Aug. 8 in Detroit, Steinbrenner issued a two-page statement in which he said he might have made a mistake by hiring the inexperienced Piniella as manager. He later reminded everyone that what counted was the "bottom line."

The bottom line was that the Yankees, who led the American League East by three games at the All-Star break, finished fourth with an 89-73 record.

"Nothing Lou did hurt us in any way," Yankees first baseman Don Mattingly said. "He did what he could. He put the best players on the field every day and made the right moves. We just didn't produce. We didn't play well when we had to. But we never lost respect for Lou. Never. We played hard for him."

Piniella had one year remaining on his two-year contract — though Steinbrenner's decisions have never been affected by that.

The Yankees suffered major injuries to their first two hitters in the lineup — outfielder Rickey Henderson, with a right hamstring strain, and second baseman Willie Randolph, who had torn knee cartilage that necessitated surgery. They missed a combined 109 games.

Piniella did not talk with Steinbrenner for almost a month after missing a scheduled call from his boss on Aug. 3. Piniella later apologized for not being in his hotel room to accept the call.

Series moves to St. Louis

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Minnesota Twins are gearing up for their first designated hitter-less game since the American League adopted the rule in 1973.

Tonight's Game 3 of the World Series against the St. Louis Cardinals also marks the first time the Twins have played a game that counted in a National League ballpark since 1965, when they met the Los Angeles Dodgers in the Series.

Unlike the Cardinals, who had never seen anything quite like the Metrodome in Minneapolis, the Twins have seen ballparks like Busch Stadium.

"It's a big ballpark here," Twins reliever George Frazier said after Monday's off-day workout. "There aren't many home runs hit here and the turf is just about the same as it is in Minneapolis."

Frazier probably won't be the first pitcher affected by the World Series DH rule, which states that the designated hitter is to be used in the AL team's home field, but pitchers must bat in the NL ballpark.

Don Baylor was the Twins' DH in Game 1 at the Metrodome and Randy Bush had the spot in Game 2. But at Busch Stadium, Twins starter Les Straker will have to take his turn at bat.

"I'm looking forward to it," Straker said. "But I don't think I'll do much except bunt.

Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog said a manager doesn't "have to manage as much with the DH. You write out the lineup and that's about it."

went 0-3 and left the Super Bowl champions in desperate straits at 0-5 overall.

Cleveland retained 15 strike players, although Coach Marty Schottenheimer said the active roster for next Monday night's game with the Rams would be the same 45 who were on the roster when the strike started.

Miami kept 14 replacements, New Orleans 11 — including much-traveled quarterback John Fourcade — and the New York Jets 15, including defensive lineman Scott Mersereau and linebacker Jay Brophy.

Another player who may have earned a job was punter Tommy Barnhardt of New Orleans, who averaged 44 yards a kick in three games. Regular punter Brian Hansen, a former Pro Bowler, averaged 36.9 in two pre-strike games.

Many coaches feared tension between the returning strikers and the replacements.

In New England, where 12 players crossed the picket line, Coach Raymond Berry was quick to tell his players he wanted no friction.

Running back Craig James, one of the strikers, noted that all the players ate together "and there was no food fight."

His teammates downplayed the existence of hostility.

"It's just not going to be a problem," Keith Fahnhorst, the team's co-player representative, said. "There were some hard feelings, but it's been tempered a bit because the strike is in the past. I think everybody can understand the situation now."

Like Fahnhorst, some player representatives were willing to forget.

"I don't think there are going to be problems," Miami's William Judson said. "We haven't had any incidents up 'til now and I don't see any reason to start."

There was even a little nostalgia as the replacements packed up and left.

Mavs' player fighting drug problem

DALLAS (AP) — Forward Roy Tarpley of the Dallas Mavericks has confirmed that he had been treated for cocaine and alcohol problems over the summer and said that he is having problems with his aftercare program.

In September, Tarpley had announced he was counseled voluntarily for a problem he didn't identify. He said then the problem had been resolved.

But on Monday, a day after he showed up late for an exhibition game with the Boston Celtics, Tarpley confirmed what some had speculated — that he sought treatment for drug problems.

Two NBA scouts with direct knowledge of Tarpley's college background said the Mavericks knew the athlete tested positive for cocaine while playing at the University of Michigan, yet still made him their top draft choice in 1986, the Dallas Morning News reported today.

Teacher's Guide

For use by teachers and parents at home and at school.

For use with issue: Can You Speak Italian?

Main idea: This issue is an Italian lesson. The following is a list of activities to be used with this issue. They are listed in order of difficulty, with the easier pre-reader assignments listed first. Ask the children to do the following:

1. Practice saying the Italian words in this issue. Learn what each word means, have your teacher say it, then repeat it after her.
2. Find Italy on a world map. On which continent is it located? Which countries border it? What does its shape look like?
3. Have you seen pictures of Italy on TV or in books? Would you like to visit there? What do you think of the Italian language? When the teacher says a word listed in this issue, find the word and the picture that goes along with it.
4. Look around your room for things pictured in this issue. Quiz your friends on the Italian word for things you see in the room or for things you are wearing.
5. Pretend you are in Italy and you want to send your family a postcard. Draw a picture of a famous site and describe it on the back.
6. Pretend you have an Italian pen pal. Write him or her a letter telling about yourself, your school, family, friends, hobbies, hometown. What would you like to learn about your pen pal?
7. There are many famous Italian-Americans. What famous people can you think of?
