Reagan goes against 'gimmick'...

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan, facing a near-certain setback in pushing his version of budget cuts through the House, says a rival plan backed by House Democrats would "sabotage our attempts to cut federal spending."

Frustrated in his desire for a single yes-or-no vote in the House on a Republican-backed package of budget amendments, Reagan accused Democrats Wednesday of resorting to a "parliamentary gimmick to thwart the will of the people."

Rhetoric aside, however, administration officials said privately they doubted they could muster enough support to reverse the decision Wednesday of the House Rules Committee against a single vote on the GOP plan. Republicans planned to challenge the committee's action on the House floor today.

Despite the long odds against winning, the administration fought up to the last minute for one vote on Reagan's plan, which calls for $5.2 billion more in budget cuts than the $37.8 billion package supported by House Democrats. The administration fears that if the House takes separate votes on politically popular programs such as food stamps and housing subsidies they will be rejected and the budget reductions will fall far short of Reagan's goal.

The president was expected to sharpen his criticism of Democrats today in a speech before the California Taxpayers' Association, a business-supported research and lobbying group. He also was scheduled to get a briefing fgrom Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. on his just-concluded two-week trip to Asia.

The Rules Committee's action caused Reagan to change his tune as he set out Wednesday on a six-day trip from Washington, combining work, social visits and a long weekend at his ranch outside Santa Barbara.

In the first of three speeches plugging his economic program, Reagan told the U.S. Jaycees convention in San Antonio that Congress had made enormous progress toward restraining federal spending. However, the praise turned to sharp criticism when, in a last-minute addition to the speech, the president lambasted the Rules Committee and unleashed his harshest attack yet on House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.

Responding to O'Neill's charge that Reagan's policies could destroy America, the president said: "Those who make such charges want to return to the same old discredited policies that set off America's economic high fever in the first place."

"If you're better off with the repeated red ink, high taxes and monster government of the past, then you go ahead and oppose our new program," Reagan challenged. "But if you're ready to try something new, come with us."

The audience of more than 8,000 shouted and whistled its support.

Arriving in Los Angeles later in the day, Reagan fired off telegrams asking support in today's vote from the 63 House Democrastts who bucked their party and gave Republicans the margin of support to approve the president's budget blueprint May 7.

"Gag rule to deny House consideration of our entire package is unacceptable and denies American people opportunity to be heard on runaway federal spending," the telegram read. "Our previous efforts will be badly damaged unless we can stay together on this issue."

In a separate statement, Reagan said that by forcing separate votes on different parts of his budget-cutting package Democrats wanted to "splinter that package into pieces. They are pursuing a divide-and-conquer strategy, a strategy that would once again allow special interest groups to triumph over the general economic interest of the nation."

Art Sauer adds some kindling to his campfire in a vacant field behind Highway 80. Working as a laborer in Midland, Sauer said he can only afford to live in a tent. But, he said he enjoys "roughing it."

He's not contented with life in tent

By SUE FAHLGREN

Art Sauer came to Texas expecting to find the Land of Opportunity. He did find a job — something he couldn't do in San Diego. But he had no luck with the other accoutrements of finer living.

Sauer, 30, lives in a pup tent in a vacant field behind Highway 80 in Midland. He has a full-time job and often works overtime; however, he said he can't afford to live anywhere else.

"If I had to live in these blasted motels and hotels, I'd starve to death," he said Wednesday at a Midland restaurant where he eats most meals. "I'd sooner live in a tent than starve."

Saber is a laborer and makes $4 an hour for a local firm. He said he had a hard time finding a job after he left the Army and returned to San Diego.

"They ain't got no jobs in San Diego," he said. "So, I was living in a mission and I heard from a guy there: 'Go to Texas; they got jobs there.' "

So, he slung his belongings on his back — two bundles and a portable AM/FM/cassette stereo — and hitchhiked to the Lone Star State.

"It only took me a day and a half," he said. "I go faster with my thumb than most people can drive. There's a lot of good people on the road."

He found a job through the Texas Employment Commission and rented a room at a low-budget motel, using money he saved while in the service. He soon found out about Midland's cost of living.

"It's high," Sauer said. "If you work and earn $4 an hour, that's $160 a week. After rent, it leaves a little over $60 to eat on and $60 just don't last as far as food's concerned."

Living in a motel, he said, "there was no place to cook my food. And $60 just don't last at Denny's."

So, he took to the woods.

At first, he only had a sleeping bag and a tarp for covering. Then a few days ago, he bought a pup tent with his savings after living here about two months.

Sauer said he wouldn't mind paying rent for his spot in the field, if he knew who the owners were. "I'd like to talk to them (the owners) and pay them some rent," he said. "I've asked some people and they don't know who owns it, but there's gotta be an owner somewhere."

He said he had checked with the Midland Police Department about in-city camping restrictions. "They didn't know who owned it (the land) and they thought it would be all right," Sauer said.

Nestled under a few trees, his camp includes a concrete-blocked fire pit created by earlier travelers. Sauer said he's not like the others.

"I've seen quite a few characters on the road," he said. "But I ain't like

But Jaycees go for Reagan

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — President Ronald Reagan drew chants of "Reagan, Reagan, Reagan" and "U.S.A., U.S.A," from nearly 10,000 Jaycees and their wives during his plea for public support to push his economic program past Democrats in Congress.

On his first trip to Texas since his election, Reagan drew applause at least 30 times Wednesday during the 32-minute speech urging the Jaycees "and a few million of your fellow citizens" to let Congress know they want budget and tax cuts.

The loudest applause came when Reagan asked for continued support from those who elected him to get the 25 percent, three-year tax cut he promised through Congress.

He said Democrats were using a "parliamentary gimmick to thwart the will of the people" to keep it the tax cut from coming to a vote in the House of Representatives.

"It's your money — not theirs. You earned it — they didn't. And it's time that they let you keep a bigger share of it," Reagan said to loud applause and cheers.

Mike Langton, a Jaycee from Jacksonville, Fla., where he served as an aide to the mayor and a state representative, termed "beautifully orchestrated" Reagan's choice of the young middle-class oganization as an audience for a major speech on the economic proram.

"The speech was tremendous, very moving," Langton said. "I was a strong Carterite and Reagan is starting to sway me over. He's just a such a dynamic speaker."

"Fantastic," said Barbara O'Brien of Lansing, Mich. "We're behind him 100 percent. Enough is enough."

"I though it was an excellent, very positive speech," added Jim Parker of Louiston, Me. "The Jaycees are 100 percent behind him. We want to take control over government programs and with more volunteerism, I think his program will work."

Eric Olsen, of Golden, Colo., said his state needs more capital for construction and that he believed the tax cuts would provide the money to lending instutions.

"Certain Democrats have vested interest in being stars in Congress," Olsen said. "But I believe there is support on both sides (Republicans and Democrats). Union leaders may not have supported Reagan, but the rank and file put him in office."

"Even though I'm a Democrat, I support the (tax cuts) programs," State. Rep. John David Miles of Georgia said. "Young people need the help. They're hurting."

While Reagan's received a warm welcome inside HemisFair Arena, three separate protests of his appearance attracted about 50 demonstrators outside.

The tightest Secret Service protection ever afforded a president in San Antonio kept the demonstrators across a boulevard and a half block away from where Reagan's limousine came and departed.

The protesters were with San Antonio Women United, a coalition of pro-Equal Rights Amendment groups, the International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, AFL-CIO and a group called People's Anti-War Mobilization, objecting to U.S. arms being shipped to El Salvador.

U.S. fears French connections

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials say they are worried about France's ability to protect military secrets now that four Communists have been appointed to the new French government.

The officials commented after the State Department issued a statement late Wednesday acknowledging that the "tone and content" of French-American relations as allies "will be affected" by Communist representation in the government.

One official, who asked not to be identified, said the United States will give a "careful look" to the degree of protection French authorities give to NATO secrets before such information is shared with the French government.

"Given the fact that they are a military ally, we cannot but be concerned about the inclusion in the government of a group of people who are inimical toward us, toward the alliance and toward our purposes," the official said.

The official State Department position was much milder. "While we fully recognize and respect the right of the government of France to determine its own composition," it said, "it is a fact that the tone and the content of our relationship will be affected by the inclusion of Communists in that government or in any government of our Western European allies."

According to the officials, the statement was designed to ensure U.S. adherence to the principle of non-interference while making it clear that the United States was not developing a tolerant attitude toward Communist representation in allied governments.

Vice President George Bush sounded a similar theme earlier Wednesday after a 2½-hour meeting in Paris with French President Francois Mitterrand.

"Our European allies are sovereign nations and the decision on how they are governed rests with their citizens and their elected representatives," Bush said.

"However, the position of the United States on the subject of Communist participation is well known," he continued. "This participation is bound to cause concern."

France withdrew from NATO's military structure in 1966 but participates in NATO political councils. It has now become the only NATO country and the only major Western power with direct Communist participation in government.

French officials have moved quickly to try to ease U.S. concern over the appointments. After his meeting with Bush, Mitterrand said France remains a faithful and loyal ally of the United States.

A French Communist official disputed Western descriptions of the party as beholden to Moscow. "The Communists are not pro-Moscow; they are for France," he said.

Courthouse proposals formalized

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The upshot still is nebulous.

But at long last, Midland County commissioners on Wednesday formally were presented a two-fold proposal for expansion of the courthouse by John Hyde, spokesman-chairman of the commissioners-appointed ad hoc committee on courthouse building.

The commissioners listened to Hyde's exhaustive report; their comment was minimal.

Hyde had proposed that:

—A Midland City-County Government Building be built on the downtown courthouse square; the recommendation may or may not call for razing the existing 1929-30-built courthouse.

—An Annex Tower be constructed adjacent to and just north of the courthouse.

"I guess it's for us to mull over it," Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis allowed after Hyde gave the report, "because everybody's breathing down our backs."

Hyde, an attorney who chaired the nine-member ad hoc committee which formulated the alternative plans after considering a slew of proposals over a five-month period, detailed the logic of his two-fold proposal. But Commissioner Durward Wright wanted him to say more.

"Go a little further," Wright said, "and tell us how to get the money (for the building expansion)."

HYDE PROMPTLY informed Wright that the committee's assignment, as drawn-up by the Commissioners' Court, was to offer proposals for courthouse-annex expansion and not how to finance any new building or expansion.

"It did appear to us, unhappily," said Hyde, "that likely the county would face a bond issue."

The committee, also called the blue-ribbon committee, "confined discussions to space needed and locations rather than costs," Hyde said.

The costs and how to finance any new building ventures will be for the Commissioners' Court, as well as the Midland City Council should the joint Midland City-County Government Building be seriously considered, to ponder.

"It is the committee's opinion that the expansion efforts should take into consideration the growth potential of Midland and probably county government needs for the next 15 to 20 years," Hyde said in his report to the commissioners. "Anticipating Midland's growth, the committee foresees the possibility of legislation establishing a new district court and new county court-at-law." At present, three state district courts (the 142nd, the 238th and the 318th) and one county court-at-law are seated in the courthouse.

THOUGH NOT IN conflict with his two-fold proposal, Hyde was adamant in keeping the judiciary in the same building. After all, he said, a "courthouse is a house of courts."

He also addressed a proposal which the commissioners had been considering for several years: removing the basement-level Tax Assessor-Collector's Office from the courthouse and to another location, either leased or built anew.

"The committee finds that removal of the county Tax Assessor's Office to a new location will not suffice present courthouse needs," he said. "The committee further finds it important to retain county offices at the present courthouse site rather than divide offices and remove some offices to a different location.

"Accordingly, the committee recommends that the county consider the feasibility of a combined City-County

Begin vows to maintain control of West Bank

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin, in a TV debate with election challenger Shimon Peres, vowed today to maintain Israeli control of the occupied West Bank of the Jordan and boost its Jewish settler population. Peres said Begin's policies left Israel "scorched earth."

Begin said Israel would retain physical control of the West Bank to prevent the Palestine Liberation Organization from taking over, but remained willing to negotiate autonomy for the Arab inhabitants of the area.

"We have set up 144 settlements to which we can add buildings and add population," said Begin. Jerusalem would remain united under exclusive Israeli rule, he said.

Peres, leader of the Labor Party, claimed Begin's economics and his tough foreign policy "has left us scorched earth." By election time June 30, he charged, "the nation's coffers will be empty and Israel isolated."

Peres accused Begin of inflating the Lebanese missile crisis into warlike proportions with threats to use force unless Syria removed the rockets deployed in late April after Israeli jets downed two Syrian helicopters attacking Christian militia positions in eastern Lebanon.

Begin said force would be used if necessary, but meanwhile U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib would be given ample time to seek a diplomatic solution.

Peres also attacked Begin's decision to bomb the Iraqi nuclear reactor, saying it had jeopardized the Egyptian-Israeli peace process and put Egyptian President Anwar Sadat "in an impossible position."

Budget battle in slugging stage

WASHINGTON (AP) — After weeks of jabbing and feinting, House Democratic leaders and President Reagan and his Republican allies have reached the slugging stage in the budget-cutting fight.

The action heated up Wednesday as the Democrats pushed what Reagan called a "divide-and-conquer strategy" for considering the $37.8 billion package of cuts prepared by House committees controlled by Democrats.

The strategy, approved by the Rules Committee on an 11-5 party-line vote, will permit Republicans to bring to the floor the alternative Reagan package containing $5.2 billion more in reductions.

But the Democrats say they want the House to vote separately on six segments of the Republican package, a move which would force members to take politically distasteful positions on cuts involving such programs as food stamps, welfare, student loans and subsidized housing.

The House was scheduled to take up the Rules Committee's procedure proposal today, and Republicans are promising a battle.

"We simply have to go to the mat and fight it out," said House GOP Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois.

Reagan, who wants a single all-or-nothing vote, called the manuevering "backroom politics" that would "allow special interest groups to triumph over the general economic interest of the nation....

"In my absence, it seems that the Democratic leaders ... have agreed to go forward with a scheme ... that would effectively sabotage our attempts to cut federal spending," he said in Los Angeles during his six-day western swing.

He dispatched telegrams to the 63 Democrats who joined with House Republicans last month to approve the Reagan budget-cutting blueprint which is now being translated into actual reductions.

"Gag rule to deny House consideration of our entire package is unacceptable and denies American people opportunity to be heard on runaway federal spending," the telegram said. "Our previous efforts will be badly damaged unless we can stay together on this issue."

In other congressional business Wednesday:

—The Senate Finance Committee continued to prepare the tax-cut bill Reagan wants while Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee were working on a substitute offering more relief for persons earning less than $50,000 a year.

The House panel voted to allow creation of a new savings certificate exempting from taxes the first $1,000 a year in interest for individuals and the first $2,000 for couples.

Only institutions dealing in home mortgages could issue the certificates. The Senate committee wants the certificates to be available also through entitites such as credit unions which don't do mortgage business.

—The Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee approved and sent to the floor legislation encouraging teen-agers to practice "self-discipline and responsibility in matters of human sexuality."

The bill would authorize spending $30 billion a year to promote the idea as well as encourage unwed teen-age mothers to give their children up for adoption.

—A House Government Operations subcommittee voted to subpoena all Department of Energy documents connected with Union Oil Co.'s request for government price guarantees for its shale oil project in Colorado.

The panel chairman, Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., said the subcommittee is concerned that DOE has not determined that a subsidy is needed to convince Union Oil to build a plant.

Clements still backs water fund

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements Wednesday reaffirmed his support for Speaker Bill Clayton's "water trust fund" proposal, warning Texans that "we are in a water crisis right now."

Clements, presiding at a meeting of the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council (TENRAC), said he "totally" supports the idea of creation of a fund to provide for water development projects, although he is leaving details of the proposal up to the special session of the Legislature starting July 13.

"I would say that I know of no issue in this state that, long-term, is as important as the water issue," Clements said, "and I have said that on many occasions.

"Because of the lead time involved in solving these problems, the crisis is now.

"We can't wait until the year 2000 to solve the problems or to seek the solutions. It has to be now...," Clements commented.

Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace joined with Clements, commenting that in the 1950s the Railroad Commission was warning the county of what would happen to the production of oil and gas.

"We're going to have exactly the same situation in water as we have in oil and gas," Wallace warned, "and it's sheer folly."

Wallace added that "as a practical matter, you can live without oil and gas, but you can't live without water. You've got to have water if this state is going to survive."

Following the TENRAC meeting, Clements told reporters that "I have been trying to sell the idea that we are in a water crisis right now," and that the problem isn't limited to agriculture and to the High Plains and West Texas areas.

"The first priority is the quality of life in Texas," Clements said, noting the state is expected to have 20 million people in 2000.

Clayton is expected to be the lead sponsor on the water trust fund legislation in the special session, but his office hasn't released any details on any proposal to be considered.

Clayton's proposed constitutional amendment to create such a fund failed in the final hours of the regular session, which ended June 1.

Midland work force tops 50,000

Midland's working force during May jumped past the 50,000 mark for the first time in history, according to figures released by the Texas Employment Commission.

At the same time, the number of persons eligible to work and the amount of unemployment increased.

The total employment figure hit 50,090, which is 0.6 percent higher than the 49,800 in April and 11 percent higher than the 45,130 working a year ago.

Meanwhile, the civilian labor force soared to 52,530, up 10.5 percent over the same month in 1980. During May last year, 47,530 persons were listed as eligible for work in Midland County. And it is 0.9 percent higher than April when 52,050 were listed in the labor force.

Unemployment last month hit 4.6 percent, compared to 4.3 percent in April and 5 percent in May 1980.

The TEC office in Midland attributed the slight increase in unemployment to "more job seekers from other areas" entering the job market here.

In comparison, the state unemployment figure for May was 5.2 percent while the national mark was 7.1 percent.

The report noted that wage and salary unemployment in the county rose to 44,820 in May. Manufacturing increased by 0.5 percent for the period, with growth here being attributed to an increase in orders for non-electrical machinery.

Non-manufacturing employment showed a net gain of 390 from the previous month due to growth in several sectors.

Financial concerns reflected a 3.2 percent hike in personnel.

Contract construction employment also increased due to more office buildings going up. On the other hand, the amount of construction experienced a downturn as the industry overall suffered from high interest rates.

On the business side, activity in area oil fields soared during the past year, creating a 17.6 percent rise in mining employment, the TEC related.

In addition, new retail stores produced a 6 percent gain in trade while the financial area saw a 17.4 percent increase since May 1980. A 12.4 percent increase in services was reported. And government saw a rise of 1.5 percent overall in the past year.

The Midland employment office is trying to place persons in hard-to-fill jobs, including appliance technician, machine shop lead person, key punch operator, service manager, shop carpenter, sales secretary and administrative assistant.

The TEC lists other job openings for oil and gas drafter, electrical engineer, petroleum engineer, registered nurse, bookkeeper, general office clerk, receptionist, secretary, cook, silk finisher, alteration tailor, construction worker, auto mechanic, diesel mechanic, electrician, automatic transmission repairer, machinist and heavy truck driver.

Permian Basin temperatures expected to cool off slightly

Friday may be ever so slightly cooler than recent days as the high temperature is expected to only reach 90, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

And partly cloudy skies on Friday may bring some showers and thunderstorms to the Permian Basin to increase the annual rainfall total which has stagnated at 6.58 inches for the past few weeks. However, the chance of rain is only 20 percent.

Fair skies will prevail tonight as the low drops to the low 70s. East to southeasterly winds will be a slight 5-10 mph tonight increasing to 10-15 mph on Friday.

This morning's low was 67 degrees. The record low for the date was set at 57 degrees in 1940.

Wednesday's high was 95 degrees. The all-time high for the date was set last summer at 104 degrees.

Odessa getting new hotel

ODESSA — A new, 164-room hotel is coming to Odessa, it was announced at a press conference here this morning.

According to the Odessa Chamber of Commerce, the Granada Royale chain will erect the hotel at the southeast corner of Eighth Street and Dixie Boulevard on a site currently occupied by the Crestview Apartment complex, which will either be torn down or moved.

Cost of the seven-floor hotel will be $11.5 million. It's expected to open by late 1982. The chain operates similar hotels throughout the state and in Arizona, Colorado and Chicago.

Local financing is being handled by the Odex Development Corp. of Odessa, a recently formed company owned by several directors of Odessa National Bank. The hotel will feature suites, Spanish style decor and a courtyard.

them. I hate to be dirty. I hate to stink. I camp close to where I can take a bath. I ain't no gypsy. I ain't no bum. I work for a living. I like to travel, so I guess I'm a nomad."

However, he said he'd prefer to stay in Midland and live in an apartment.

"I'd consider it (apartment living), naturally," he smiled. "It's not that I don't like roughing it — I'm a young man, I could go out in the wilderness — but, I'd rather have an apartment. It just costs too much money."

With no running water, Sauer said he finds clean restrooms and takes a "hobo's bath: a little soap and a wash cloth does wonders."

Sauer said he's not afraid of staying in the woods. "What's there to be afraid of? Out there, it's only fear itself," he said. "There ain't nobody out there running around. The snakes don't come out at night and all the dogs in the city are tame.

"The Indians lived in tents and they did that for many years," he said. "If they can do it, I can do it. Even if it meant doing it from now to six months from now."

Monday, Sauer was robbed. Burglars took his battery-operated stereo "and all my tapes," his backpack, a lantern, a bowie knife, a machete "for chopping wood," and his toothbrush.

"The only reason why they ain't took my sleeping bag is it stinks," he said. "And I keep it that way," he chuckled, then grew serious. "Everybody has a right to enjoy what he's earned...but no man has the right to take what he don't deserve."

Government Building on the present courthouse site," Hyde said.

Commissioners informally indicated that if the latter proposal entailed the razing of the five-story courthouse, then there would be "no way" they would consider tearing down the 51-year-old building. The Courthouse was renovated under a $1.9 million bond issue in the early 1970s, but ultimately, that work cost the taxpayers more than $3 million.

Hyde expanded on the No. 1 proposal for a City-County Government Building:

"THE CONVENIENCE to the residents and the potential tax savings of a joint county and city government building are logical considerations in a decision for expansion of government offices," he said. "The committee is mindful that the offices of the city of Midland are presently overcrowded and therefore recommends efforts toward combined government offices for Midland."

The committee chairman elaborated on proposal No. 2 for an Annex Tower:

"Alternatively, the committee recommends the construction of an Annex Tower adjacent to and north of the present courthouse so that all county offices are located on a single site within a courthouse complex," Hyde reported. The committee believes that division of county government offices among different locations would be inefficient and therefore recommends that all county offices be situated on the present courthouse site."

In addition, the committee recommended "multiple-level parking facilities" on the north, east, and west sides of the southward-facing courthouse.

"To increase parking space, the committee recommends efforts to acquire Loraine Street between Texas and Wall avenues for the purpose of providing a multiple-level parking facility on the east side of the courthouse."

Furthermore, Hyde presented the committee's 12-point observations which led to the two-fold proposal:

—"That the jail facility (on the fifth-floor of the courthouse) is rapidly moving toward maximum capacity;

—"That a new courtroom is needed for the 318th District Court;

—"That a central jury room is needed to serve the district, county and justice courts;

—"That adequate space should be provided for the county law library;

—"That an additional courtroom is needed for the county courts;

—"That an additional courtroom is needed for the justice courts;

—"That an absentee voting room is needed;

—"That the county clerk's office will exhaust all usable deed records space before the end of 1982;

—"That the county and district attorneys presently need approximately double the existing allocated office space;

—"That the district clerk's office has reached maximum capacity and cannot meet expansion needs with existing allocated office space;

—"That the sheriff's office needs additional space at the present time; and —"That the juvenile and adult probation offices are unable to meet existing statutory personnel requirements with the present allocated space (in the 1964-acquired two-story Courthouse Annex a block north of the Midland County Courthouse)."

Afterward, the Commissioners' Court expressed appreciation to Hyde and the committee for their study and two-fold proposal.

"I'd just like to thank John (Hyde)," said Commissioner Charlie Welch.

"It wasn't an easy assignment," noted Davis.

In turn, Hyde said that he and the committee were "very satisfied that the recommendations are sound."

Serving on the committee were Hyde, chairman, and committeemen Gregory Wright, Tom Reynolds, Freddie Nelms, Roy Graham, Bill Heck, Clark Moreland, Charles Priddy and Reagan Legg.

Midland man robbery suspect

A 38-year-old Midland man was in the city jail this morning, accused of stealing $2,500 from an eastside grocery store Wednesday.

An employee of the Bonito Grocery, 609 N. Dallas St., said a man took the money from a cash drawer and fled. The suspect was arrested in an alley in the 500 block of West Cuthbert Avenue about 9:30 p.m. Wednesday. Formal charges are expected to be filed today.

In other criminal activity during the past 24 hours, Georgia Johnson of 1113 E. Pine St. told officers someone entered her home and stole a TV set valued at $579. Entry was gained through a window.

Grain sale near completion

By RICHARD COLVIN
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — More than one million bushels of grain deteriorating in bankrupt elevators is being sold for $3 million in a legal wrangle that sparked a protest by hundreds of Midwest farmers earlier this year.

Five bankrupt Missouri grain elevators could be empty within 90 days once the sale to Bearhouse Inc. of Hamburg, Ark., is completed, trustee Robert P. Lindsey said Wednesday.

The legal tangle began more than a year ago when James Brothers Co. of Corning, Ark., filed for bankruptcy, and the grain stored in its 11 elevators was impounded. Farmers maintained the grain belonged to them, not to James Brothers.

One farmer, Wayne Cryts of Puxico, Mo., defied federal marshals and last February led a convoy of hundreds of farmers to the Ristine elevator where his grain was stored. The protesters siphoned out Cryts' 31,000 bushels and transferred it to an elevator in Bernie, Mo., where federal officials again impounded it.

Cryts' attorneys argued in a federal bankruptcy court hearing last month that only farmers had valid claims on the soybeans stored at the Ristine elevator.

Lindsey, who tried last fall to get permission to sell the grain, argued the grain should be sold because it was deteriorating and would lose value. U.S. Bankruptcy JUDGE Charles Baker of Little Rock ordered the grain sold.

Lindsey said Wednesday Bearhouse has offered to pay $3 million for the soybeans and milo. He said the sale would be complete with the signing of a contract and the transfer of the grain.

Lonnie Couch, Bearhouse general manager, said it would take about 90 days to move the grain from the elevators in southern Missouri.

Lindsey said the $3 million from the Missouri sale would be invested along with $4 million from the sale of grain in six Arkansas elevators until all claims against the bankrupt company are settled.

The money will not be sufficient to satisfy the claims farmers, banks and the trustee have made on the grain, Lindsey said. Baker said last month he would would appoint a special master to appraise the various claims on the firm's assets.

The 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis, in answering a lawsuit filed by the Missouri Department of Agriculture, ruled earlier that Baker — not the state — had jurisdiction over the grain.

Cryts could not be reached for comment Wednesday. He has said in the past that he did not think the sale was just.

Surplus cheese putting squeeze on storage space

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is buying so much surplus cheese that storage space is becoming a problem.

So the Agriculture Department plans to suspend until further notice its purchases of process American cheese, which comes in small, five-pound packages. Instead, it will buy only bulk cheddar cheese in 40- and 60-pound blocks and in 500-pound barrels.

Buying cheddar cheese in bulk will help alleviate some storage problems and will making handling easier, Agriculture Secretary John R. Block said Wednesday.

The department's Commodity Credit Corp. — which buys cheese, butter and nonfat dry milk under the government's milk price support program — owned about $675 million worth of surplus cheese as of June 12.

That included about 290 million pounds of process American and about 188 million pounds of bulk cheddar.

Cheese and other dairy products acquired under the support program can be donated to school lunch programs and other institutions, used in some foreign aid programs and, under certain conditions, sold back to the industry for domestic and export use.

Cattlemen recommend change in farm predictions process

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Cattlemen's Association says Agriculture Department economists should stop making predictions on production and market prices of commodities.

If that were done across the board, the department's role as a prognosticator of agricutural fortune would be sharply reduced and perhaps eliminated altogether.

The NCA, as the group is known, made the recommendation Wednesday in a statement to the department in connection with the budget process for the Economic Research Service, until recently called the Economics and Statistics Service.

According to the NCA, changes should be made in agricultural statistical and economic reports "which would make the information more useful and, at the same time, save taxpayers' money."

The agency, it said, should:

—"Collect and provide only basic economic data for use by agricultural producers and related industries.

—"Provide only those vital services and information which it is not feasible for the private sector to provide.

—"Conduct useful and timely economic research which addresses current and prospective industry problems. The primary objective (of the agency) should be to provide useful and timely information for use in making management decisions."

More specifically, the NCA said the department "should reduce or eliminate its current analysis and outlook" information.

"It should provide basic inventory and other data of use to cattle and other producers. But it should not be issuing price forecasts," the NCA said. "Analysis and outlook information is now provided by private services, state extension services and others. It no longer is necessary for USDA to devote expensive resources to forecasting."

Democrats endanger budget cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats and President Reagan's congressional allies are heading toward a political donnybrook over a parliamentary scheme aimed at sidetracking a package of budget cuts the president wants.

Democratic leaders, who appeared down for the count a month ago when Reagan easily prevailed on a bill setting a lower overall spending budget, rebounded Wednesday with a hard left-handed punch to the president's plans for even more cuts.

Reagan, on a cross-country speaking tour, retaliated immediately, accusing Democrats of trying to sabotage his program and pit special interests against the American people.

The outcome of this test of the president, the biggest challenge so far by Democrats, comes today when the House takes up a bill setting ground rules for the debate over specific budget cuts.

"We simply have to go to the mat and fight it out," said House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois.

While the House budget battle was being fought, the Republican-controlled Senate was trying to finish work on a package of $39.6 billion in 1982 budget cuts Reagan favors. Senate action continued today, with completion due this week.

House Democrats have proposed a $37.8 billion package of spending cuts. Reagan, contending some of the cuts are unrealistic or phony, wants another $5.2 billion stripped from the fiscal 1982 budget.

But the real fight was not so much on the bill as on the way it was to be presented.

The House Rules Committee, which decides which amendments can be offered and what form they must take, voted on a straight party line vote — 11 to 5 — late Wednesday night that Reagan's package must be introduced in six sections instead of in one piece as the president wanted. They also ruled that only amendments making cuts — and not amendments restoring funds already cut by House committees — could be considered.

The Reagan package includes such volatile items as new cuts in food stamps, aid to dependent children, student loans, subsidized housing and a fast phaseout of unearned minimum Social Security benefits.

The Democrats' proposed rule — if accepted by the House — would put members in the politically distasteful position of having to vote on each of those cuts separately.

Republicans immediately cried foul, but Democrats responded that the American people have the right to know what cuts are being made and how their congressman voted on them.

Reagan called the tactic "a scheme ... that would effectively sabotage our attempts to cut federal spending." And he urged voters to speak up quickly if they want to overcome "backroom politics" that would "allow special interest groups to triumph over the general economic interest of the nation."

But Rep. David Bonier, D-Mich., a member of the Rules Committee, said Republicans 2anted a one-vote rule because it would allow them "to hide behind the president's package" and tell their constituents they opposed certain specific cuts but had to accept them because they were part of an overall package.

The White House began gearing up for the battle even before the rules committee had voted. Reagan and his Republican allies began attacking the rule hours before the vote was taken.

The White House sent telegrams shortly after the vote to the 190 House Republicans and 63 Democrats who supported the president in his first round victory on the overall budget outline. And House Republicans considered a series of parliamentary objections, possible delaying tactics and attempts to buttonhole Southern Democrats who supported the president on the overall budget.

House GOP Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., vowed an all-out battle on the rule.

Panels favor savings incentives

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee is preparing to give President Reagan the tax-cut bill he wants, while House Democrats are unveiling a substitute offering more relief for persons earning less than $50,000 a year.

Despite their disagreements on most parts of Reagan's tax plan, House and Senate tax committees are both recommending tax incentives for savings. Both have voted to allow individuals to earn $1,000 tax-free in a special savings plan.

The Republican-controlled Finance Committee, which had to postpone final action on the president's plan Wednesday after members began pressing for special-interest tax breaks, headed for a final vote today.

And Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee planned to offer details of their proposal for cutting individual taxes. Instead of Reagan's three-year, 25 percent, across-the-board reduction, Democrats are calling for a two-year plan focusing on extra relief for couples and individuals with annual incomes below $50,000.

However, the full committee is not expected to begin voting on personal tax cuts until after returning from the Fourth of July recess.

The Ways and Means Committee voted 29-3 Wednesday to allow individuals to avoid taxes on up to $1,000 in interest from a new one-year savings certificate. Couples could exempt $2,000. The certificates could be issued only during the year beginning next Oct. 1.

The Finance Committee approved similar legislation Monday. While the House plan permits only savings institutions dealing in home mortgages to offer the certificates, the Senate version would be available to any bank, savings and loan association or credit union.

The savings certificates would pay interest equal to 70 percent of the rate earned on one-year Treasury bills. If the Treasury-bill rate were 15 percent, for example, the special certificate could pay 10.5 percent. Since that amount would be tax-free, it would be attractive to anyone whose tax bracket is 30 percent or higher.

To pay for the new certificate, both committees agreed to change an existing law allowing a person $200 and a couple $400 in tax-exempt interest or dividends. Starting next Jan. 1, that exemption would apply only to dividends and at half the current levels.

In a second effort to spur savings, the Ways and Means Committee voted to liberalize tax-deferred Individual Retirement Accounts, just as the Finance Committee already has done.

Current law allows only people not covered by a company pension to deposit up to $1,500 a year in an IRA account. The money is not taxed until withdrawn on retirement, resulting in a considerably lower tax for most people.

Both committees have agreed to raise the limit to $2,000 a year for people without company pensions and for the first time allow people covered by company plans to set aside up to $1,000 a year.

In the Finance Committee, Reagan's plan for cutting business taxes by allowing faster write-offs for buildings and machinery won easy approval. But the panel was unable to complete the bill Wednesday after Democrats offered more than a dozen amendments.

The committee:

—Defeated, 11-4, an amendment by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., to allow the third-year tax cut proposed by Reagan only if the administration is able to forecast in 1982 that inflation will drop to 7 percent in 1983.

"It is unwise to lock ourselves into a three-year tax-cut package when the state of the economy is so uncertain, and this amendment will provide a safety valve to use if necessary," said Bradley.

John E. Chapoton, assistant treasury secretary for tax policy, said the amendment would deny savers and investors the certainty they need.

—Approved an amendment by Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., extending special tax treatment for money earmarked by an employer to help employees buy stock in the company.

—Rejected, 10-3, an effort by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., to grant a tuition tax credit of up to $500 a year for parents of elementary and secondary school pupils in private schools. This popular proposal was defeated only because of budget concerns.

—Defeated, 10-7, a Moynihan amendment allowing the 30 percent of taxpayers who do not itemize deductions a special deduction for charitable contributions.

Magistrate orders woman held at mental hospital

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A woman arrested after she allegedly told a motel security guard she was going to "shoot the president" has been ordered returned to a state mental hospital.

San Antonio Night Magistrate Tony Jimenez refused late Wednesday to accept a state charge accusing the woman of making a terroristic threat.

Jimenenz ordered the woman, whose identity was not released, to be sent to San Antonio State Hospital for 30 days' observation. He noted the woman recently was released from the same hospital.

The woman had been held in the Bexar County Jail following her arrest Wednesday several hours before President Reagan arrived to make a speech to a Jaycees' convention.

Mitterand had rather have Communists inside his tent

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
Hearst Feature Service

PARIS – Bringing the Communists into France's government for the first time in nearly four decades may seem a highly disquieting event abroad.

But, over here, it looks more like the French Communists have once again fallen into the mighty Mitterrand's trap.

The Reagan administration and, especially, the state department would be wise not to overreact to what is, in political reality if not political myth, a considerably less than momentous development.

After suffering tremendous shellackings in the French presidential and parliamentary elections over the past five weeks, the Communists have been picked up from the floor, dusted off and set back on their wobbly legs by the man chiefly responsible for clobbering them, the new Socialist President Francois Mitterrand.

Why has he done it? The brief answer – to bowdlerize an old saying of the late Lyndon Johnson – is that he believes it will be safer having them inside his tent than outside looking in. He is almost certainly right.

The Communists are being given only a handful of secondary posts in the cabinet. In the French system no cabinet member, except the prime minister, possesses genuine political importance or power. Communist ability to influence major decisions will be negligible.

But, by being in the government, the Communists are committed to supporting Mitterrand's policies. Their ability to make mischief will be substantially reduced. Since, despite their electoral defeats, they still hold great power in the French labor unions, this is not an insignificant consideration for a government which has a severe economic crisis and nearly two million unemployed on its hands.

The real question is not why Mitterrand decided to have them but why they agreed to join him. The answer to that is that the Communists, under their hapless leader, Georges Marchais, appear to be maintaining their record for making the wrong tactical decision. This stunning talent for guessing wrong has, in less than 10 years, reduced their voting strength by more than a quarter and cost them half their seats in parliament.

An Analysis

By almost any analysis, the Communists' best bet would have been to stay clear of the new government in their present, weakened condition. From outside, they could snipe at its inevitable mistakes, exploit the disillusionment that is sooner or later bound to set in among the Socialists' working class supporters and then gradually re-build their own strength at the Socialists' expense.

The trouble was that Marchais, sensing Mitterrand would be elected president but never realizing how poorly his own party would do, began clamoring for cabinet jobs early last spring. He assumed the Communists would be vital to the new government's parliamentary majority and thus would be able to wield decisive influence inside the cabinet.

Instead, the Socialists won a lopsided majority in parliament, outnumbering the conservative opposition and the Communists together by 100 seats. The Communists were reduced to a parliamentary rump of just 44 members.

Marchais had painted himself into a corner on the question of cabinet posts, with Mitterrand handily supplying the brush.

To get into the government even in a minor capacity, the Communists have been forced to bow to all the Socialists' conditions. Most notably, these have included a wholesale switch on their position regarding the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan – they supported it before but now they have to say they condemn it – and a much more forthright stance than they took previously against Soviet intervention in Poland.

The whole operation has made the French Communists look even shoddier and more intellectually dishonest than before. Mitterrand may well have had this in mind.

One objection which had been posed to Communist inclusion in the French government was that it could serve as a model for other Western European countries, notably Italy. But that is hardly to be taken seriously. The Italian political situation – in which the Communists are strong and the Socialists weak – offers little comparison. In any case, the Italians are not political parrots who meekly repeat what happens elsewhere.

The final word on the latest French political development may have come from the astute Michel Jobert, a former foreign minister and now Mitterrand's minister for foreign trade. "The question," he said a few days ago, "is not whether the Communists will enter the government, but when they will quit it."

Bids to be taken

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation will take bids July 14 on proposed improvements to State Highways 158 and 191 in Midland County.

The highway department plans to work on grading, structures, flexible base, two-course surface treatment, asphaltic concrete pavement, concrete curbs and gutters, storm sewers and lighting on 1.43 miles of SH 158 from its intersection with SH 191 to 0.4 mile east of Loop 250 and 5.17 miles of SH 191 from FM 1788 to the SH 158-191 intersection.

Estimated cost of the project is $4,311,059 and completion time is estimated at 300 working days.

Golden Triangle may become top drug threat

By WILLIAM BRANIGIN
The Washington Post

BANGKOK — A bumper crop of opium from Southeast Asia's Golden Triangle area after two years of drought threatens to glut the American and European heroin markets later this year, according to U.S. and Thai narcotics officials here.

Heroin produced from the opium crop has already begun to hit the streets here, and the number of Americans and other foreigners arrested here on smuggling charges is on the rise, officials say. Those caught face harsh prison sentences under a new Thai law, with jail terms for major offenses ranging between 25 years and life.

Despite their efforts to stop the traffic, narcotics officials expect about 90 percent of the Golden Triangle heroin to elude them. As a result, about 27 tons of high quality heroin from the area straddling Burma, Thailand and Laos are expected to flood Southeast Asia and the rest of the world.

So far, very little if any of the Golden Triangle heroin has reached the United States, American narcotics officials say. But they regard an influx as virtually inevitable, and that could mean serious problems for cities such as New York, Los Angeles and Washington.

"The prospects look pretty bad," said Dick Hart, the head of the U.S. Embassy's Narcotics Control Unit here. He said the number of heroin addicts in the United States had been steadily declining since the late 1960s, when the figure reached about 600,000.

By the end of last June, the number had dropped to about 380,000. But it started to rise again toward the end of the year. Now officials estimate there are as many as 450,000 U.S. addicts.

Based on past experience, narcotics officials expect the influx of Southeast Asian heroin to be accompanied by further increases in the number of U.S. addicts and in the purity of the drugs sold. Heroin prices may drop somewhat, and more overdose deaths and emergency room admissions can be expected. In addition, some U.S. cities could see higher crime rates and new outbreaks of gang warfare, officials say.

Despite expectations of increased work here, the U.S. government apparently is going to reduce the staff of the Drug Enforcement Administration's regional office here, transferring seven regional functions to Washington. Thailand's Office of the Narcotics Control Board has expressed disappointment about the move in view of this year's bumper crop.

The Golden Triangle's high opium production this year — nearly triple that of the last two years — seems likely to surpass production from the Golden Crescent region that includes parts of Iran, Afghanistan and Pakistan, according to the DEA office here.

Disruptions caused by resistance to the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan and by the Iranian-Iraqi war are believed to be limiting the Golden Crescent's opium production this year to 450 to 650 tons, down from 1,300 tons last year. By contrast, DEA officials here forecast that the Golden Triangle's crop "may just exceed 650 tons."

The DEA expects about half of this amount to be converted into heroin, yielding about 35 tons of the drug. Of the amount that eludes seizure, the DEA says, about 70 percent is usually consumed in Southeast Asia, 23 to 25 percent is smuggled to Europe, Australia and New Zealand, and 5 to 7 percent makes its way to North America.

Last year, according to DEA figures, Americans used 4.5 tons of heroin, about a third of it from Southeast Asia. Because of the anticipated shortfall from Southwest Asia this year, narcotics officials expect the percentage from this area to increase.

"We expect the Golden Triangle to become the No. 1 threat to the United States and Europe," said DEA regional director Robert De Fauw. "We'll be witnessing a glut in the heroin market in late summer, fall and winter this year and early spring next year."

Largely responsible for the anticipated surge in the heroin trade, De Fauw said, is an elusive Burmese warlord and trafficker named Chang Chi-fu. Having expanded his operations along the Thai-Burmese border during the last six months, Chang Chi-fu, 48, now ranks as the undisputed king of the Golden Triangle.

Although most U.S. addicts probably have never heard of him, drug enforcement officials consider Chang Chi-fu the world's biggest narcotics dealer. De Fauw calls him "enemy No. 1."

Preventive medicine important to health

Dear Dr. Solomon: There's an automobile diagnostic service in my community where I can bring my car and learn what is wrong with it and what has to be done to get it back in shape. It seems to me that a program that would do the same for humans would be very worthwhile. Isn't preventive medicine that can help a person avoid illness supposed to be preferable to treatment after the person is sick? — Carl

Dear Carl: Preventive medicine is an important part of total health care. As I've written on a number of occasions, a great deal of illness and disease could be eliminated if people were only willing to change their lifestyles. I'm referring to such practices as smoking, overeating, drinking to excess, and lack of exercise.

Recently a number of fitness centers, whose main function is to prevent rather than treat illness, have opened throughout the country. By "fitness," these centers mean an increase in work performance, a reduction in stress, greater energy, improved confidence, and increased stamina and concentration.

Baltimore's Union Memorial Hospital has established such a program. It provides participants with an evaluation of both their physical and psychological health, together with an analysis of their risk factors and advice on what they can do about them. To help insure lasting change, spouses are welcome to take part in the consultation.

The physical evaluation includes the taking of a complete history, a physical examination, laboratory and psychometric tests, and a stress electrocardiogram. After the findings are analyzed, a physician discusses with the patient the results of the tests, including any immediate problems that may have been uncovered. The participant and the doctor are then able to work out a plan for reducing his or her health risks and preventing future illness, such as a change in diet or participation in an exercise or stop-smoking program.

The services offered by fitness centers such as this should prove helpful not only in prolonging life, but in enhancing the quality of life as well.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son wants to try out for his high school basketball team. Since I myself played high school and college basketball and continue to be very interested in sports, I would very much like my son to participate as well. However, he has had asthma for several years and I'm concerned about any involvement in competitive athletic activities. What would you advise in this case? — Mr. L.F.

Dear Mr. F.: Since I don't know your son, I am unable to give you specific advice. However, I think you would be interested in knowing that many patients with asthma do participate in a variety of athletic activities, including the Olympic games. But whether a particular patient can safely participate in a particular sport at a particular time is something only his or her doctor should determine.

Atlanta's nightmare

Fear still runs deep in Atlanta. Rightfully so.

Atlanta had shuddered and pleaded in recent months as the death toll of young blacks continued to mount. Now it stands at 28.

But the arrest Sunday of 23-year-old freelance photographer Wayne Williams, a black, and the subsequent filing of a murder charge against him in connection with the death of one of the 28 victims should give no one in Atlanta the confidence to relax.

Williams has been charged in connection with only one of the slayings and he faces what most probably will be a long and difficult court appearance. At this point, he is presumed to be innocent. Even with the charge lodged against him, 27 definite question marks remain.

There is pressure in Atlanta to find all those responsible for the slayings and to end the bloody nightmare. But even police officials there agree that there could be, and likely are three or more killers involved. To relax before all of them are behind bars is to risk more killings and a continuation of the nightmare.

The fear being experienced by young Atlanta blacks was described by 16-year-old Jesse Pullins who said, "I still have fear. We walk around in groups. No. More than that. We live in groups."

The depth of their fear cannot be imagined. It is a fear of dark places — and of light; a fear of strangers — and of relatives; a fear that tomorrow will never come — and that it will, and be just as full of fear as today.

That fear is Atlanta's nightmare, a nightmare which demands resolution.

Wise voice at U.N.

Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick passed her first major test at the United Nations in statesmanlike fashion.

The test was not easy. It involved representing the Reagan administration in a vote favoring a Security Council resolution condemning Israel for attacking Iraq's nuclear reactor. Both her formal speech and her later defense of the American position shone with balance and diplomatic sensitivity.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick avoided the black-versus-white trap into which it is so easy to fall. After telling her U.N. colleagues that Israel should be condemned, she added some condemnatory comments about Israel's neighbors who, she said, "should recognize her right to exist and to enter into negotiations with her to resolve their differences."

Drawing on her academic background, the scholarly ambassador put the Middle East in historical perspective, noting that the area "provides combustible matter for international conflagration akin to the Balkans prior to World War I, a circumstance made all the more dangerous today by the possibility that nuclear weapons could be employed in a future conflict.

"The area that stretches from Southwest Asia across the Fertile Crescent and Persian Gulf to the Atlantic Ocean is, as we all know, torn not only by tension and division but also by deeply rooted, tenacious hostilities that erupt repeatedly into violence."

She reminded the Security Council of its obligation to work toward erasing those hostilities and building a lasting peace.

It is good to have a U.N. ambassador who can give us lessons in history as well as diplomacy. She also gave us a lesson in fair-mindedness as her criticisms were leavened with wisdom and restraint. Her general tone lacked the dogmatism and arrogance of one of her predecessors, Andrew Young.

Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick emerged from her most troubled week looking like an able spokesman for her government, her country, and international good will.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Feds not concerned with Terpil-Wilson

WASHINGTON — International terrorism has been proclaimed the No. 1 target of the Reagan administration's foreign policy. Yet our own clandestine services may have contributed to the spread of terrorism.

Jack Anderson

As I first reported last October, two CIA renegades, Ed Wilson and Frank Terpil, have used the grisly expertise they gained in their undercover work to help such bloodthirsty despots as Libya's Muammar Qaddafi and Uganda's Idi Amin dispose of their opponents. They have also enlisted the services of other former CIA men and green berets to train gangs of terrorists.

What is most disturbing is that the CIA has done nothing to halt this macabre moonlighting and may even have condoned it. There is evidence, for example, that these merchants of death had close contacts with high-level U.S. officials as they planned and executed their terrorist training operations.

In February, the frustrated star witness in the Terpil-Wilson gun-running prosecution, an ex-CIA analyst named Kevin P. Mulcahy, approached my associate Dale Van Atta with shocking details of the FBI's bungled investigation of the case.

Mulcahy also talked to Seymour Hersh of The New York Times, whose recent articles have confirmed many of the facts I had previously reported. From what Mulcahy divulged, it became clear that the Terpil-Wilson case was being properly pursued only by a pair of courageous investigators for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms named Richard Pedersen and Richard Wadsworth.

One thing the two sleuths concluded was that the investigative agencies involved — Customs, BATF and the FBI — were not cooperating. "From the perspective of the current investigaton," they wrote in a secret memorandum, "the extent of the problem appears to be much greater than recognized, and is compounded by conflicting agency jurisdictional responsibilities."

Despite the widening ramifications of the Terpil-Wilson case, neither the White House nor congressional intelligence committees seem to feel the need for a special effort to get to the bottom of the case. What's needed may be a special prosecutor not confined to the narrow limits of indictable offenses, but whose job would be to expose the whole sorry mess.

Here are some of the things that should be explored through a coordinated investigative effort:

— A theft ring has been operating at the supersecret naval weapons facility at China Lake, Calif., where James Bond-type devices are developed for the CIA and other agencies. China Lake employees and ex-employees have been stealing and selling explosives, night vision devices and electronic gear to Libya, according to secret Justice Department files.

— Terpil and Wilson are "known to bribe U.S. government officials to enhance their businesses," according to secret files that identified two specific cases. Mulcahy hinted that the arms merchants may have bribed members of Congress and bugged Army supply panel meetings.

— A government witness, who had been "less than candid with the FBI" when questioned about allegations that a CIA official accepted payoffs from Wilson, had a change of heart and told investigators he had "disbursed $8,000 ... in cash ... in the lobby of the Page Building in Vienna, Va." The alleged bribe went to the suspected CIA official and others, the witness testified.

— Another witness told investigators that a "high Department of Energy official" was paid from $1,000 to $1,500 a month to help Wilson get lucrative contracts.

— Two months ago, a former green beret was arrested and accused of attempting to assassinate a Libyan student at Colorado State University. The suspect has been linked to Wilson.

— Mulcahy said that Wilson was behind an earlier unsuccessful attempt to kill a Libyan defector in Washington several years ago, and that a professional hit man was given at least $10,000 as a down payment for the assassination.

— Mulcahy, who once worked with Wilson, believes that his own life is in danger, and prosecutors in the case agree.

It is past time that either the administration or Congress mounted a concentrated attack on the continuing machinations of Ed Wilson and Frank Terpil. Their activities — and particularly their buddy-buddy relationship with U.S. officials — are an embarrassment to the United States, and should be exposed to the world.

UNDER THE DOME — Some high-level Republicans are reported to be trying to dissuade Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., from running for re-election next year. He is thought to be vulnerable to Republicans like Maureen Reagan, the president's daughter, and Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr., to say nothing of Democrats like Gov. Jerry Brown and Tom Hayden. The 74-year-old senator is apparently unimpressed by these doubts. "His attitude is, the more the merrier," a Hayakawa staffer reported.

— Nevada's only congressman, Rep. Jim Santini, is starting to raise money for a possible race next year against a fellow Democrat, Sen. Howard Cannon. Building on a $197,499.77 surplus from last year's campaign, Santini threw a small, private fund-raising dinner party in Georgetown on April 13. But some East Coast supporters of Cannon complain that Santini has been trying to tap them for contributions without mentioning that he is thinking of running against the 23-year Senate veteran.

GEORGE F. WILL

Reagan wants appointees who can lengthen his shadow

WASHINGTON — Institutions are, indeed, the lengthening shadows of men, and President Reagan can, with Supreme Court nominations, cast his shadow into the next century. His criteria for selecting nominees can be surmised.

George F. Will

Presumably he wants a person young enough to serve a long tenure, but old enough to have a substantial record of achievement in public service and in jurisprudential reflection. The nominee should be accomplished in both fields, because otherwise the person's published thoughts on the law and this unique Court, however diligently arrived at, are abstract and give the President unreliable guidance as to the person's probable comportment on the Court.

Furthermore, the person should have a demonstrated interest in economics, because considerable litigation concerns the imposition of public burdens on the private sector. "In a ten-year period federal litigation in the Supreme Court increased two and one-half times and that was primarily due to the growth of regulation." This is part of "the spread of an oppressive and excessive legalism throughout the social body."

Most important, the President needs a nominee who knows that "we have never had a rigorous theory of judicial restraint; for a time we had a tradition; now that is almost gone." The President needs a person with the intellectual power to provide a theory.

The person should understand that "the Supreme Court is an excellent barometer of change in the political and moral atmosphere, not because it follows the election returns, but because men who read the words of the Constitution unconsciously pour into them the animating conceptions of their age." The President needs a person alert to this tendency, and who has a record of rebutting the conceptions that have animated three decades of judicial excess.

This person should oppose the tendency "to create rights by arguments from moral philosophy rather than from constitutional text, history, and structure." He should know that that approach leads to "the destruction of the idea of law. Once freed of text, history and structure, this mode of argument can reach any result." And "not even a scintilla of evidence supports the argument that the framers and the ratifiers of the various amendments intended the judiciary to develop new individual rights, which correspondingly create new disabilities for democratic government."

The 1980 Republican Platform speaks of selecting judges "who respect...the sanctity of innocent human life." But it would be wrong to seek (and hard to find) thoughtful judges who would hold that the 14th amendment protections of "persons" extend to fetuses. Any Justice who would purport to find authority for that in the Constitution would be just as arrogantly legislative and anti-judicial and result-oriented as were the Justices who, in 1973, overturned the abortion laws that reflected the community judgments of 50 states. Such a new Justice would be just as guilty as the 1973 Court was of an authoritarian shortcut around the democratic process, using litigation rather than legislation to impose social change.

The platform's language alluding to abortion is conditioned by the passage immediately preceding it, which calls for judges "whose judicial philosophy...is consistent with...efforts to return decision-making power to state and local elected officials."

The truly conservative criticism of the 1973 ruling is not simply that it was incoherent in its attempt to find a right to abortion in the Constitution (a right supposedly inhering in a recently discovered right to "privacy"). Rather, the basic conservative complaint is that the 1973 ruling used — abused — the Constitution as a pretext for nationalizing a question that traditional and correct construction of the Constitution had treated as a moral judgment to be settled by the political processes of the states.

As has been said, "Courts must accept any value choice the legislature makes unless it clearly runs contrary to a choice made in the framing of the Constitution." And: "No argument that is both coherent and respectable can be made supporting a Supreme Court that 'chooses fundamental values' because a Court that makes rather than implements value choices cannot be squared with the presuppositions of a democratic society."

All the words quoted above, aside from those from the 1980 platform, are from the writings of the person called (by a scholar of the opposite persuasion) "perhaps the most able and articulate proponent" of the sort of judicial philosophy the President endorses. He is a man who took economic instruction at the font of Reaganism, the University of Chicago, and who has authored a seminal book on anti-trust policy. He is the man who, since the death of Alexander Bickel, has carried on Bickel's great work of precisely defining the compatibility of judicial review and democratic theory — defining that is, not the impropriety but the gravity of invalidating acts of democratic bodies.

He is the 54-year-old former Solicitor General of the United States, the first Alexander Bickel Professor of Public Law at the Yale Law School — Robert Bork.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, June 25, the 176th day of 1981. There are 189 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 25, 1950, the Korean War began with North Korea's invasion of the Republic of Korea.

On this date:

In 1788, Virginia ratified the U.S. Constitution.

In 1876, Gen. George Custer's force was massacred in the Battle of the Little Big Horn in Montana.

And in 1942, the British Air Force staged a 1,000-bomber raid on Bremen, Germany, during World War II.

Five years ago: Workers' protests prompted the Polish government to withdraw its plan to raise food prices sharply.

One year ago: President Jimmy Carter renewed his proposal for turning pro-Soviet Afghanistan into neutral state, but Moscow said it had no intention of loosening its grip on that country.

Today's birthdays: Film director Sidney Lumet is 57. Singer Carly Simon is 36.

Thought for today: We owe to the Middle Ages the two worst inventions of humanity — romantic love and gunpowder — Andre Maurois, French biographer (1885-1967).

ART BUCHWALD

Number two in defense tries harder

The Defense Department keeps insisting that the United States is short of all types of military weapons, from tanks to airplanes. We probably are. But every time you pick up the newspaper, there is an announcement that we're selling our stuff to some other country, or giving it away for free. No wonder we can't stockpile anything for ourselves.

Art Buchwald

The latest news bulletin, which came right after the Israeli raid on the nuclear facilities in Baghdad, was that the president had agreed to sell F-16s to Pakistan. Now anyone in the U.S. Air Force will tell you that they need every F-16 they can get. The question is, how do we keep supplying arms to all our friends and still have any left to equip our own armed forces?

There is a solution. Instead of selling our equipment to every ally that asks for it, we could rent the hardware on a daily or weekly basis. Working with Hertz, Avis and other leasing companies, we could set up booths at air, naval and Army bases where all our military hardware would be kept.

Pretty women officers in attractive uniforms would be behind the counters.

This is how it would work: A foreign general and his staff would come to the counter and say, "We'd like to rent five F-16s for a pre-emptive strike on our archenemy, Balanteria."

"That's no problem. I assume you want them fully equipped with rockets, bombs and gas."

"I certainly do."

"Well, that's included in the price of the rental. But if you have to rearm and refuel, you will have to pay for it yourself. The first 500 miles are on us, but you will be charged a thousand dollars a mile after that."

"That's reasonable. Can we charge it to our credit card?"

"Of course. Now when were you planning on making your strike?"

"Why?"

"Well, if you made it on a Saturday or Sunday, we could give you our special tourist weekend rate of $5,000 per plane, though you would have to return them on Monday morning."

"The weekend is as good a time as any. It might even be a better surprise. Do we have to return the planes to the same airfield?"

"No, you can drop them off at any American Air Force base, after your raid. Now would you like liability insurance in case you are brought in front of the United Nations Security Council after the raid?"

"Sure, why not?"

"Here you are, sir. Take the Hertz bus right outside, and you can pick up your planes from our hanger."

"Oh, by the way, we also wanted to rent an AWAC airplane in case Balanteria decides to attack our oil installations in retaliation."

"All our AWACs have been rented by Saudi Arabia. Maybe Avis could help you."

The general would be directed to the next counter. The lady officer would punch his request into a computer. "We have a new AWAC coming in this afternoon. It's a sports model with only 10,000 miles on it. It will be $50,000 a day, but that's with unlimited mileage."

"That will be just fine."

"While you're here, sir, would you be interested in joining our VIP Nuclear Club?"

"What's the advantage of that?"

"You don't have to run through airports to get your planes. You can telephone in your order to the toll-free number and they will be ready when you get to the counter."

"That's a good idea."

"You also get a 20 percent discount on our F-4 fighter aircraft, and when you produce your card you will have priority on the latest air-to-air missiles just off the production line."

"Give me the application. You Americans certainly do have a wonderful customer relations program."

"Thank you, sir. When you're second best in defense, you have to try harder."

Reagan task force wants AT&T case dropped

WASHINGTON (AP) — The staff of a special task force says President Reagan should order the Justice Department to drop its seven-year-old antitrust suit aimed at breaking up American Telephone & Telegraph Co., according to sources.

The recommendation was given to Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige before a June 12 meeting of cabinet officers and President Reagan, sources said Wednesday.

Baldrige is the chairman of the Cabinet Council on Commerce and Trade, a group of cabinet officers from key economic agencies. The council's special task force on communication issues includes Baldrige and the secretaries of Defense, Agriculture and Energy and the head of the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

White House officials confirmed previously that the task force was studying the option of dropping the AT&T suit. The issue was deemed so important that Reagan sat in on the June 12 meeting.

The sources, who requested anonymity, would not speculate if Baldrige and the council would support the staff recommendation or if Reagan would order Justice to drop the suit, one of the largest antitrust actions ever filed by the government.

Baldrige recently told Congress he prefers a legislated scheme of deregulation rather than the break-up of AT&T and its Bell System through the courts.

"Now that the issue is squarely on the table, there will be a lot of careful consideration," one source said. "There might not be a decision at this time. The council might just focus on proposing amendments" to a Senate telephone deregulation bill.

The Washington Star said Wednesday that the staff concluded that the antitrust suit is creating too many uncertainties in the industry, hurting investment and hampering AT&T's efforts to remain competitive abroad.

The report said the issue needs to be resolved immediately by dismissing the suit, rather than attempting to work out a consent agreement that could be challenged in the courts, the Star said.

The staff recommendation was revealed as the government was concluding its case against AT&T in U.S. District Court in Washington. Prosecutors have said they would present final witnesses today and complete their case next Tuesday.

AT&T has asked Judge Harold H. Greene to dismiss the charges of anticompetitive conduct as unproven. Greene has said he will rule today on whether to hold oral arguments on AT&T's motion.

The cabinet task force was created last month by presidential counselor Edwin Meese III after it became clear that administration officials were split over the future of the suit.

Besides Baldrige, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger has also taken a strong stand on the issue, claiming the suit threatens national defense because the Pentagon relies on AT&T

Parents convinced son will be cleared

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The parents of Marine Lance Cpl. Leman "Deacon" Hutchinson, sentenced to be executed Monday after being convicted last week of premeditated murder, say their 21-year-old son has not yet received a fair trial.

"Deacon's side has never come out," Lorraine Hutchinson said. "We hope that the discrepancies will be caught by some review away from the military."

The younger Hutchinson was convicted in the February 6 shooting death of Marine Pfc. Terry Gunter, 25, of Fort Worth, Texas. His conviction will go through a long appeal process, but if it's not overturned he may take it to the federal appeals system.

The Hutchinsons, of Brunswick, Ga., said they are convinced that their son will eventually be cleared.

"You don't see me and the wife upset, do you?" said Leman L. Hutchinson Sr.

He said he is eager for his son to have a civilian trial, contending that it is impossible for his son to receive a fair trial in the military.

Mrs. Hutchinson complained about the testimony of Hutchison's codefendant in the case, Lance Cpl. William Haught, and said her son didn't testify before the military authorites because he didn't think it would do any good.

"It seems that it didn't matter what anyone said," she said. "They (prosecution witnesses) could lie and admit they had lied. Yet they were allowed to testify against our son."

Haught, giving the most damaging testimony against Hutchinson, said that Hutchinson lured Gunter to the Verona Loop Road area of the base and shot and robbed him. It was later determined that Hutchinson fired the fatal shot into Gunter's head.

Haught was given life imprisonment after pleading guilty to the same charges filed against Hutchinson. During his testimony, Haught also admitted that he lied to the Naval Investigative Service after he was arrested, telling agents that Hutchinson had fired all the shots that night.

In exchange for his testimony, Haught's sentence is expected to be reduced to a 50-year prison sentence, which will eventually make him eligible for parole.

Mrs. Hutchinson complained that Haught's testimony was accepted, even though he admitted that some of his previous statements were false.

She said Haught initially told NIS agents that Hutchinson forced him to the Verona Loop area at gunpoint. That allegation was never mentioned in court, but she claimed that it may have influenced agents and prosecutors to build their case against Hutchinson rather than Haught.

In another incident, the couple charged that NIS agents took Hutchison's wife, Carol, to the Naval Regional Medical Center at Camp Lejeune and gave her a shot that they reportedly said would "calm her nerves." The couple said the agents then visited her at her Midway Park home the afternoon following the shooting and got her to sign a statement.

The Hutchinsons said Carol told them the injection gave her blurry vision and that she could not see what she was signing. The couple said Carol has no recollection of the document, which was not introduced as evidence in the court-martial.

"That's the type (of) tactics they use in Communist countries — not what you'd expect in America," the elder Hutchinson said.

Napa County fire almost contained

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — The Napa County inferno that caused $36 million damage as it scorched 23,000 acres and 52 homes is almost conquered, nearly three days after it was ignited by an arsonist's matchbooks.

With the fire 90 percent contained and half extinguished, only 400 to 600 firefighters manned the lines Wednesday night, said Paul Schaden, spokesman for the California Department of Forestry.

"We'll probably continue to work the fire for a week and possibly longer" to douse lingering sparks and embers, Schaden said.

As many as 1,600 people, armed with everything from air tankecs to wet burlap bags, battled the county's largest fire in 17 years as it raged across brush, oak and chapparal in the mountains forming the eastern boundary of the lush wine country.

Arson investigators continued to search for the culprit behind the blaze, which started about 1:30 p.m. Monday as four small fires set along the Silverado Trail. Lighted cigarettes inside matchbooks were used in at least two cases, officials said.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. declared a state of emergency in the area Wednesday and said the federal government would be asked to provide low-interest loans to help residents rebuild.

"That was quite a fire. What a blaze," said the governor. He circled the area for about 20 minutes in a plane and walked through thick ash at a burned-out home, viewing twisted wrought-iron chair frames and the chalky rubble of stucco.

Cooler weather and morning fog Wednesday helped firefighters tame the blaze, which had been driven by 50 mph winds over land tinderdry from a nine-day heat spell.

The intense heat of the fire, which ate through 7,000 acres in its first hour, devoured homes in minutes as firefighters watched helplessly. Towering clouds of smoke colored the sunset for hundreds of miles.

The fierce winds also prevented what could have been greater disaster — they drove the fire aw$y from the area holding some of the nation's most prestigious wineries and vineyards.

Although the fire came within feet of a few vineyards, none was reported damaged.

At least 120 structures, 12 automobiles and eight motorcycles were destroyed, officials said. Twelve people, including three firefighters, were injured, none seriously. The average value of the homes destroyed was $200,000, officials said.

The cost of fighting the blaze during the first two days was pegged at $717,314, not including food and fuel, Schaden said.

Hundreds of people fled their homes and flames blocked scores of others who tried to save their belongings. Deer, other wildlife and cattle were killed when they couldn't outrace the flames.

As homes burned in minutes, "We had to tell people, 'Sorry, we can't do anything. We must move on,'" said Fire Capt. Mike Edwards.

"Flames were coming at us very fast and up to 50 feet high. It was hell," said firefighter Jim Wattenburger.

Plane crash kills three

SHERMAN OAKS, Calif. (AP) — A collision sent a light aircraft plunging onto the roof of a shopping center, killing three on board the plane and sending about 1,000 scurrying from the mall, authorities said.

Stores at the Sherman Oaks Galleria shopping mall had closed just before the 9 p.m. crash. Some people were still in the May Co. department store when the Piper Cherokee Archer II crashed into its roof, said Fire Department spokesman Ray Walker. He said most of the people still in the mall were in the four theaters.

Sgt. Jim Thompson, watch commander at the Los Angeles Police Department's Van Nuys division, said the downed plane apparently collided with a single-engine Cessna 152, which then made its way back to the Van Nuys Airport. The unidentified pilot of that plane was not injured, authorities said.

A spokesman for the shopping center's security office said evacuation of the large mall "went smoothly and nobody was hurt."

None of the victims were immediately identified.

Thompson described the wrecked plane as "half in and half out of the building. It's through the roof, down into where the customers shop" in the three-story store, he said.

The pilot of the Cessna 152 had radioed the Van Nuys Airport tower at 9:13 p.m. and reported he thought he had had a mid-air collision with an unknown aircraft, a Federal Aviation Administration official said.

Debris fell mostly on the roof of the May Co., which sustained an estimated $3 million damage, Walker said.

Police checking suspect in other Atlanta killings

ATLANTA (AP) — Suburban authorities say they are investigating the free-lance photographer charged in one of the Atlanta slayings to determine if he should be a suspect in 15 other cases.

The man, 23-year-old Wayne B. Williams, was ordered held for grand jury action this week on a charge of murder in the death of Nathaniel Cater, 27, the oldest and most recent victim in the string of 28 slayings of young blacks dating back to July 1979.

A special police task force under the direction of Atlanta Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown has been investigating all 28 killings, but authorities in each jurisdiction where bodies have been found have been working independently on the cases in their areas.

Bob Wilson, district attorney for DeKalb and Rockdale counties, said Williams has been under scrutiny in connection with the five DeKalb cases and one from Rockdale County.

"At this point, we cannot help but look at him (Williams) as a serious suspect," Wilson said. "He remains a suspect because there's nothing that rules him out."

Authorities in Douglas and Fulton counties, along with officials from the city of east Point, also said this week they are taking a close look at Williams in connection with the nine slayings under their jurisdiction.

The murder charge against Williams, who was arrested Sunday, was the first filed since the killings began.

Williams was turned over to the grand jury Tuesday after witnesses testified at a hearing that microscopic analysis of fibers as well as a May 22 pre-dawn encounter between Williams and police on a Chattahoochee River bridge gave authoritie enough reason to charge him with Cater's murder.

Under Georgia law a grand jury must examine any murder charges filed by local law enforcement authorities before a suspect can be tried.

Brown told reporters Wednesday the state's case presented at the preliminary hearing dinot include all the evidence the task force and FBI agents have gathered against Williams, a black free-lance photographer.

Williams' attorney, Mary Welcome, has characterized the state's case as "very, very weak."

The arrest of Williams was one factor in the FBI's announcement in Washington on Wednesday that the dozens of agents assigned to investigate the slayings will be withdrawn gradually, Associate U.S. Attorney General Rudolph W. Giuliani said.

FBI spokesman Dave Divan, who announced plans for the withdrawal, said the FBI will continue "to fully support the investigation. We'll have whatever people are necessary there."

Continued federal support for the investigation also came from another front Wednesday as President Reagan, meeting in Washington with Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson, pledged federal authorities will continue to assist the city "until there is a solution."

Attorney made name as anti-smut crusader

ATLANTA (AP) — Mary Welcome, the attorney defending Wayne Williams on a murder charge in the Atlanta slayings case, made her name not as a defense lawyer but as a hard-charging city solicitor who closed down the massage parlors that once flourished in downtown Atlanta.

Ms. Welcome, nicknamed "Wild Mary" by opponents in her anti-smut campaign five years ago, took over the Williams case before the 23-year-old Atlanta man was charged with murder Sunday in the death of Nathaniel Cater. Cater was the latest victim in a series of 28 slayings of young blacks that began in July 1979.

The 39-year-old attorney's history shows a mixture of concern for the poor and downtrodden, a zest for politics and public life, aggressiveness in the courtroom and a yen for more money than a city solicitor's salary.

"She is creative, talented and brave," said Atlanta attorney Ed Garland, whose firm hired Ms. Welcome in 1978 after she resigned as Atlanta's first city solicitor. "I think you would have to say she comes down on the aggressive side."

Before Williams was charged with murder, Ms. Welcome petitioned a U.S. District Court to prohibit the news media and law enforcement officials from linking her client to the slayings. U.S. District Judge Orinda Evans denied the petition Tuesday after Williams was charged with murder.

Ms. Welcome could not be reached for comment on how she came to represent Williams. Garland said he assumed Williams sought her "because she has a reputation for being a good attorney," and she accepted the case because a lawyer "should not turn your back on even the most highly condemned."

Reared in Baltimore as the only child of a surgeon and a state senator, Ms. Welcome, who is black, got her first contact with the downtrodden when she campaigned for her politician mother at the age of 14.

During the campaign, she "saw people who had problems — their sons were in jail and didn't do anything, people in poor areas couldn't get landlords to do anything, people who did not even know they could vote and how important it was. Even then I wanted to know what was being done," she once said in a newspaper interview.

The civil rights movement hit Baltimore when she was 16, and she and three companions were jailed for three hours after a sit-in at a segregated lunch counter.

"A lot of what I learned during that time was that the civil rights problem was a lack of understanding, a lack of familiarity," she said. "I did not see hatred then. Whites just looked at us as strange beings, and they didn't want to change."

After a marriage ended in divorce, Ms. Welcome was appointed in 1975 by Mayor Maynard Jackson to become Atlanta's first solicitor, a position with no budget, no staff and no office space except a former solitary confinement cell at police headquarters.

Ms. Welcome promptly launched a prosecutorial rampage against the bathhouses and massage parlors — she said they were little more than brothels — that had sprung up on the city's famed Peachtree Street.

Ms. Welcome said she wasn't attacking the sex establishments from a standpoint of morality but because they were nuisances to the community. "I am not a prude, far from it," she once said.

In an 18-month span, 15 bathhouses were closed following city court action, including Wild Mary's Massage Parlor — hence the nickname.

Ms. Welcome resigned in 1978 to enter private law practice.

She said in a newspaper interview at the time she wanted to leave the $27,000-a-year city position for a private job in which her income would be limited only by her talents.

In 1980, Ms. Welcome sought the Atlanta City Council presidency, finishing fourth and winning 10 percent of the vote.

She is now preparing for what could be Georgia's biggest case in many years.

"She is to be admired for her willingness to take on that case, which in all probability will be a sacrifice in time and money," Garland said. "Sure, it has a commensurate bit of exposure, but it will pale beside the effort she will have to expend."

Austin man held in double slaying

DALLAS (AP) — An Austin man was in police custody today in connection with the deaths of two men who were found stabbed to death in their home here just minutes after one of them called a burglary alarm company saying they had been attacked.

The Austin man surrendered to Travis County authorities in Austin late Wednesday.

Dallas Homicide Sgt. Bill Parker said a pickup truck spotted near the slaying scene was traced to the Austin man who reportedly had done some plumbing work for one of the victims.

The Austin man was being held in the Travis County jail today pending arraignment, Parker said.

Police were dispatched to the north Dallas home after receiving a call from Sonitrol of Dallas. A alarm system monitor told officers that a man had called about 2:47 a.m. and told her he had been stabbed.

When police arrived they found Stan William Frank, 34, lying face down in a pool of blood with a six-inch slash to his throat.

Officers found Roger Biff Lawson, 30, in a chair at a desk, a telephone just inches from his hands. He had been stabbed once in the upper stomach, police said.

A neighbor told police he was awakened about 2:45 by a loud scream. He said he saw a man running out of the next house, but didn't learn of the mens' deaths until the next day.

Ho Chi Minh City in midst of clean-up drive

By BERNARD ESTRADE
Agence France-Presse

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam — Six years after the American defeat in Vietnam, remains of "decadent" Western culture still exist in Ho Chi Minh City (formerly Saigon) and officials have launched a vigorous clean-up drive.

This time it appears they might be successful.

Le The Thoung, deputy director of the Information and Cultural Service here, said in an interview: "We must clear away the weeds and plant pretty flowers."

His agency is spearheading the battle against "decadent phenomena."

The new campaign was unleashed by authorities here earlier this month after a public attack by a local communist party leader who said that six years after the reunification there remains of a way of life here accepted with difficulty by those familiar with the more austere atmosphere of the old Hanoi regime. The campaign is aimed mainly at books, music and clothes.

The clean-up operation has been carried out energetically to make the city more austere. For instance, most of the cafeterias along Dong Hoi Street (formerly Catinat Street) which used to broadcast the latest western hit songs have closed down. The "book market" on a quiet street near the city center where one could buy light magazines or erudite works has closed down, officiallybecause an inventory must be taken.

There is such an appalling housing shortage that whole families are living in the tiny wooden kiosks once used by flower sellers.

Thuong explained that officials have classified reading matter in to five categories — reactionary, fiction, pornography, technical and classics. Only classics are freely permitted.

Thuong said hat in the past year his department has seized 100 tons of forbidden books and destroyed them.

He said the authorities are urging people to hand over their forbidden books, instead of having them confiscated. He showed a reporter banned books that had been seized, in parcels by Vietnamese relatives living abroad, and Vietnamese newspapers published in the United States and Australia.

There were comics which Thuong said "are tales of love, fighting and murder with a political theme aimed at destroying our youth." there were also erotic publications, published on a typewriter, with such titles as "diary of a virgin" and "a young peasant girl discovers city live."

Thuong commented: "A young girl who reads such books is no good for work afterwards."

He said these particular publications were written by a former officer in the South Vietnamese army after he had attended a re-education camp. He loaned them out at $12, or half a worker's monthly wage. He is in jail awaiting tail.

Music, another specialled "decadent" target, is usually tape recorded by Vietnamese exiles living in the West and sent back here. The cafeterias playing them have almost all closed down these days.

Thuong said that "to listen to these songs with such titles as "for those who remain" or 'revenge Saigon', is for us like hearing a declaration of war." He said forbidden Western music had at one time even stricken some members of the officially sponsored "songs for the young" movement, and they were having to make public self-criticisms.

At present all foreign music -- including music from communist bloc countries -- is banned until officials finish compiling a comprehensive list of what can be played.

Thuong explained: "We must show what was bad about the old life, like favoritism, exploitation and decadence, and promote the new way of life — work, morality and love of one's country and the international proletariat."

He added: "...it is not easy."

Government officials have several times tried to clean up all signs of what they term "Western decadence," but they have never succeeded in wiping them out completely. The present purge seems to be more vigorous.

One official said in an interview: "If they want to drink coffee, then we will open the cafeterias, but they will be state-run. If they want to listen to music we give them revolutionary songs with catchy tones."

Army chief declares that all-volunteer army works

By L. EDGAR PRINA
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Secretary of the Army John Marsh says he sees no need to go to the draft now or before 1987 at the earliest if Congress adequately supports the all-volunteer force.

"I know there are critics of the all-volunteer force," he told reporters. "But our current experience in the last two quarters is that it is working."

Marsh noted that the Army was meeting its enlistment and retention goals for active-duty personnel and that enlistments in the National Guard and Army reserve were increasing.

The secretary put the fate of the AVF squarely up to Congress. He said it must give the military the tools with which to do the job.

"If we get the right pay and quality of life improvements and modernization of our equipment, I project an all-volunteer force up through 1987," he said.

Marsh cited that time frame because, he explained, the Pentagon does its planning on a five-year basis and the fiscal 1983 budget is now being put together for submission by the president next January.

12-day-old baby denied right-to-die

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — A neurosurgeon who was given court permission to operate on an infant despite objections from the parents says the girl's open spinal cord was enclosed without complications.

"This child may die (even) with all the things we've done today," Dr. Glenn Morrison said at a Wednesday night news conference after the delicate three-hour operation. "All we can do is make the best of the situation."

Twelve-day-old Elin Daniels was in stable condition at Variety Children's Hospital today. The infant was born with a particularly severe form of spina bifida called meningomyelocele in which the nerve endings of the spinal cord were tangled in a sac on the surface of the body.

To complicate matters, the infant also was suffering from hydrocephalus, commonly called water on the brain.

During the first part of the operation, Morrison inserted a flexible tube into the infant's body to inhibit the buildup of water pressure on the brain. The second half of the operation involved closing the protruberance on the girl's lower back to prevent infection.

Morrison said such operations should be performed during the first 24 hours of life, but he said Wednesday night's operation "was not medically different from the others. ... The only difference was in the notoriety associated with it."

The case attracted public interest after Albert and Jennifer Daniels, the girl's parents, said they did not want the hospital to operate. Hospital officials took the case to Dade County Circuit Court to ask that the child be turned over to the custody of the state so the operation could be performed without parental consent.

Judge Ralph Ferguson said in an opinion Tuesday that the child deserved a fighting chance. The Daniels, who awaited word of the operation at home Wednesday, said they would not fight the judge's ruling and signed the consent forms.

The Daniels had said prior to the court ruling they opposed the operation because they thought whatever happened to Elin should be allowed to occur naturally.

Morrison said it was too early to determine if the surgery would prolong the child's life.

"The best the child could have is to walk with braces and be incontinent of bladder and bowel," Morrison said. "Years may go by, or she may have complications tomorrow. We don't know."

Surgical techniques for treating meningomyelocele have been in use only for 25 years, and there's no solid record of how long treated individuals survive. Before the 1950s, victims of the birth defect rarely survived.

American girl 'dumbfounded' by prestigious ballet award

MOSCOW (AP) — Amanda McKerrow, the 17-year-old American who won a first prize at the Moscow International Ballet Competition, said today she was "dumbfounded" by the prestigious award.

Miss McKerrow, of Washington, D.C., said in an interview at the Bolshoi Theater that she had danced "as well as I could" during the two-week competition that is sometimes called the Olympics of ballet.

But she recalled her shock when awakened at 3:15 a.m. today by her coach, Mary Day, and told that she had shared the first prize in the junior women's competition with Russian dancer Natalya Arkhipova. The coach was at the Bolshoi to hear the jury announcement and telephoned the ballerina at her hotel.

"Amanda McKerrow quickly earned the sympathies of the Moscow public," the Soviet news agency Tass said. "Her dancing was marked by spirituality, lyricism, and suppleness."

Miss McKerrow's partner, Simon Dow, was awarded the men's prize for partnership even though he was not formally competing for prizes. Two Americans dancing for Canada, Kimberly Glasco of Eugene, Ore., and Kevin Pugh, of Indianapolis, Ind., won silver medals in the senior competition, for dancers at least 20 years old.

Miss McKerrow, who dances with the Washington Ballet Company, said she hoped to celebrate her victory at dinner with her parents after a special performance tonight by the medal winners.

Pugh, 21, and Miss Glasco, 20, both said they were thrilled by their prizes and expressed delight at the warmth they had been shown here.

"The audience was so receptive," Miss Glasco said, as she loosened up. "It was the nicest feeling. You just don't get that very often in North America. They're much more reserved."

Pugh said, "I feel great, really happy and surprised."

Both are soloists for the National Ballet of Canada in Toronto, where they have trained since their early teens.

Cities urged to remember persons with lung diseases

Communities planning observances for the International Year of Disabled Person (IYDP) are urged by the American Lung Association of Texas to remember those with breathing disabilities.

Chronic lung diseases are a major health problem ranking second among causes of disability in this country, the volunatry health agency noted. But because victims of emphysema and chronic bronchitis often do not have visible handicaps their problems may be overlooked.

According to federal statistics, most of those diabled by lung diseases are men, half of them younger than 65. Thus, many are fathers, husbands and wage earners. Since chronic obstructive lung diseases run a protracted course, not only the victims, but their families suffer incalculable misery.

Disability from crippled lungs ranges from shortness of breath serious enough to limit normal activity to damage so severe the victim requires continuous oxygen. For these individuals even tying a shoelace can be a struggle.

The United Nations designates an "international year" on behalf of a particular group every two years. Previous observances have focused on women and children.

In this country, the U.S. Council for the IYDP — of which the American Lung Association is a national partner — is working with the 50 state governors, more than 1,600 communities and nearly 300 organizations. Goals for the disabled include expanded opportunities in education and employment; greater social and recreational participation; access to housing, buildings and transportation; and accident and disease prevention.

For more information on the control and prevention of lung disease, contact the American Lung Association of Texas, 7701 N. Lamar Boulevard, Suite 104, Austin, TX 78752.

Chamber advised of Bell upgrading

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Officials of Southwestern Bell Telephone advised the Midland Chamber of Commerce board of directors Wednesday that they have upgraded plans to meet the demands of growth in the Tall City, with some exceptions.

Steve Simmons, with SW Bell in Austin, told the regular monthly gathering of chamber directors that it is the corporate office in St. Louis, Mo., which controls the purse strings of the five-state Bell system. Once the chamber brought it to the Bell officials' attention that businesses were not being provided the service they wanted, Bell officials had to readjust their forecasting figures for the Tall City.

"We're particularly impressed by the growth here; it's mind-boggling," remarked Simmons. "It didn't hit us until April when we saw the demand for phones in March."

After readjusting the timetable, Simmons assured the directors that Bell would be able to meet Midland's telecommunications needs in the future, with the exception of some pockets of problems.

One of those pockets involves residential service and the fact that new customers will soon have to go on a two-party line, instead of private, when they first hook up in Midland.

The new time schedule shows that installation of toll trunks will be completed by November 1981, rather than December; 8,192 new lines will be added by December 1981 rather than May 1982; another 4,096 lines will be installed by August 1983 instead of May 1985.

The switching capacity of the Midland Oxford station will be increased immediately, rather than waiting for completion in September 1981; and 4,096 lines will be added by November 1982 instead of October 1983.

The variable which couldn't be upgraded on the time schedule was completion of work on the Terminal station, which handles 563- numbers. Completion date is scheduled for May 1982.

Simmons remarked that "we knew with the Reagan Administration and decontrol of oil there would be a boom in Midland. But we didn't expect the magnitude of that boom."

Clay Coty, district manager for business installation and maintenance, was pointed out as the person to contact when there are problems with business telephones. His number is 684-1600.

Coty — whose district includes Midland, Odessa, Abilene and Big Spring — said he has added 40 percent more employees to the Midland staff in the past year. However, the problem is in the time required to train the new people.

The chamber board also pointed to the city's unprecedented growth as a reason to bring the Highway Department commissioners to Midland and request earlier completion of Loop 250.

Walter Moore and Associates of Houston, who conducted a parking survey for the chamber, was given the go-ahead to determine site selection for an eight-story, half-block parking garage.

One of the suggestions in the study was to build some high-rise parking garages to meet the demand for downtown parking. Under consideration are two general locations — one on the south side of Wall Street and east of Big Spring Street; the other north of Wall Street and east of Big Spring.

Bill for the study is $28,000 and the chamber mentioned enticing various government entities and private enterprise to pay the bill.

A representative from the Board of Realtors related that 187 housing units were sold in May for $13,255,287 — "our best month for the year." Total for the year in housing sales is $56,640,000.

Hance mailing questionnaires

WASHINGTON — U.S. Rep. Kent Hance has announced that every resident of the 19th Congressional District will receive a questionnaire through the mail from his office soon.

"We are sending our 1981 congressional questionnaire through the mail now and residents should begin receiving them within the next few days," Hance said. "This is similar to the questionnaire I mailed out in 1979 except that we have updated the questions to include issues now before Congress."

Midland is located in the southern tip of the 19th District, and Hance has been the area's congressman since his election in 1978.

"Last time we had more than 32,000 people respond to our questionnaire and we hope to have as good a response this time," noted the West Texas congressman from Lubbock.

"The 19th District residents have always been very responsive through the town hall meetings we have had and we consider this an extension of those meetings. We want the people of West Texas to give us their opinions on the major issues. This really helps me when I am formulating my policy in Washington."

Every resident in the district will be getting a questionnaire, according to Hance. "Each questionnaire can be filled out by two individuals and extra copies will be available from one of my district offices if someone discovers they have not received a copy."

Hance's Midland office is located in the George Mahon Federal Building, 200 E. Wall St., 683-5407.

Jaycees to vote on admitting women

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — After two years of courtroom battles with defiant chapters charging discrimination, the nation's 320,000 Jaycees will vote this summer whether to admit women to the all-male service organization at the local level.

Following his election Wednesday at the Jaycees' 61st national convention, President Gene A. Honn said the full membership — and not just a small group of Jaycees leaders — should decide whether individual chapters should be allowed to admit women.

Honn, 30, said national officers agreed to allow a referendum — scheduled for August and September — on whether to change bylaws restricting membership in the Jaycees to males aged 18-35.

"If it fails, we will continue to operate as we are currently," he said.

The Tulsa, Okla.-based group admitted women during a three-year pilot program that was halted in 1978. But some local chapters refused to oust their female members when the pilot program ended, and in January 1979, the national Jaycees began revoking charters of defiant groups.

The bitter dispute landed in courtrooms across the country as rebellious local chapters fought to keep both their national affiliation and their women members.

The Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination ruled the no-women Jaycees' policy discriminatory, and judges in Minnesota, Alaska and the District of Columbia also maintained women had the right to be active Jaycees.

Pittsburgh lost its 42-year-old charter two months ago and decided to establish an alternative Jaycees group — with women. The group is being organized late this summer. Charters also were revoked in Philadelphia and Rochester, N.Y.

Earlier this year, the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that the Philadelphia group could not continue using the "Jaycees" trademark.

The Jaycees' chapter in Palo Alto, Calif., is suing national headquarters in a complaint that alleges discrimination and seeks a court injunction preventing the national group from revoking the charter.

Jaycees' public relations officer Randy Kindy said Wednesday courts in at least two states have ruled against the all-male policy, but the rulings were being appealed.

"Traditionally, the ones to challenge (the all-male membership) have been from the metropolitan areas where there are a lot of working and business women," he said.

Kindy said this summer's referendum, "is seen as a compromise, as a way to let each member to cast a vote" on the admission of women.

When the question of admitting women was brought up at previous national conventions, it was voted down by "only one or two percent" of those attending, he said.

The referendum would allow women to have full membership status in local chapters, but Kindy said he did not know if the women would be allowed to vote in state and national conventions.

A women's auxiliary of the organization currently meets at the same time as the Jaycees' convention, but the women have no votes. They are also barred from holding office and cannot receive Jaycee awards.

Honn, an agriculture extension advisor for the University of Illinois, served this past year as national vice president of the organization, representing Illinois, Idaho, Kansas, Montana and South Carolina.

Israelis frequently move into Lebanon

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
Hearst Feature Service

HANITA, Israel — "Lebanon is no longer a nation," the young Christian militiaman declared. "It's only a figure of speech. We Lebanese know it. The Syrians know it. The Israelis know it. Only you Americans don't yet know it."

Lieutenant Omar Glennaoui, an intelligence officer with Major Saad Haddad's Christian militia forces in southern Lebanon, had crossed the frontier into Israel on one of his regular liaison assignments with Israeli military and civilian officials. In fact, for people on both sides, the frontier has all but ceased to exist.

Israeli commanders make little secret that they move patrols in and out of the area on virtually a daily basis. Israeli convoys carry equipment into "Haddad-land" for the militia's use and bring it out again when it is in need of repair or replacement.

For Glennaoui and the 7,000 men of Haddad's militia, the Israelis are neither invaders nor natural friends, but wartime allies. He explained, "political circumstance and military necessity brought us together. Now, there are no foreseeable circumstances that will part us in the near future."

The world's attention has been focused more on the struggle in central Lebanon between Christians and the Syrian peacekeeping force, a conflict heightened by the Israeli-Syrian confrontation over the SAM missiles brought in by the Syrian army. But, many observers believe, the real key to the future in this endlessly troubled region lies in what happens in the south.

As an Israeli army major put it, "Here is where the Palestinians and the Syrians must come to fight us, if they are going to fight us. Here is where the struggle will be decided. They can destroy the Christians in the north, but until they can destroy the southern Christians they cannot really get at us. And this, we have no intention of allowing them to do."

The war that rages in Lebanon is fought on at least two levels. To Haddad's Christian forces, the main enemy is Syria which he and his supporters are convinced is determined to annex all of Lebanon into a "Greater Syria," something that only can be achieved if the Christian community is destroyed or driven out.

In this context, the guerrillas of the Palestine Liberation Organization are regarded as little more than a passing irritant, even though they have made living a hll for the Christian communities in the south. The militiamen ight them, but curse the Syrians.

By contrast, Israel's primary concern is he need to secure its northern flank againt PLO incursions. Hadad-land is, above all, a valuable buffer against terrorism. Notwihstanding the furor over the missiles by Prime Minister Menachm Begin, the Israeli military sees Syria as much more of a longterm problem.

This difference has occasionally created lifficulties between the Christian militiamen and the Israeli command but, in the main, their collaboration has been honed dring the past three years into a smoothly running operation.

"In the beginning, the Israelis didn't takeus seriously," said Glennaoui. "They thought we were a bunc of trigger-happy desperadoes. I think we've earned their respct since then."

The Israelis agree. "Militarily speaking, their role is not enviable," the Major pointed out. "A permanently defensive stance -- which is what they have had to accpt -- is never very agreeable. But they know how to endure. Theyare a tough bunch of people. Man for man, I would take them ver the PLO or the Syrians, any time."

The Christian militiamen and the Israelis re completely in accord on one thing: their almost total contempt for the United Nations peacekeeping force that is charged wh policing southern Lebanbon.

"The blue helmets are inept soldiers and tightened policemen," Glennaoui says, spitting out the words ininger. "They are intimidated by the PLO and scared to death of ctually carrying out their mandate. The effect of what they o or don't do is usually to help the people who are trying to detroy us."

An Israeli political official here said, "Th average U.N. soldier and his officers are just hoping to put in teir time and get home without getting hurt. Who can blame them? None of this is their affair. That's the weakness of peacekeeing forces. Furthermore, they operate under a political dinction which is basically very hostile to us."

The war in southern Lebanon goes through peiodic phases of calm and then tends suddenly to heat up. Glennoui is sure he and his comrades will be in uniform and inveved in armed struggle for "many, many years."

Democratic Party already getting encouragement

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Hearst Feature Service

Washington--The Democratic Party is so broke it has only a month's worth of operating money in the bank.

But it is not without resources.

Five Democratic pollsters, for example, have agreed to donate their skills to begin to build up a sophisticated polling operation for the party that would help at the grass roots as well as at the national level.

"We all feel a stake in the party and want to give as much help as possible," said Patrick Caddell, former pollster for President Carter. "We can give some advice on strategy as they request it. I think there are a lot greater opportunities for action than have been taken."

While not downplaying the party's problems, Caddell said President Reagan and his administration are vulnerable and will be more so--far more so than what he called "the elites in this town believe. The question of his 'mandate' has been the most distorted thing I've ever seen. That is not to say Reagan has not done an effective job in intimidating people with his claim of a mandate."

In addition to Caddell, Democratic pollsters Peter Hart, Bill Hamilton, Paul Letzger and Vic Fingerhut met at length recently with Charles Manatt, the new chairman of the Democratic National Committee, to outline what should be done.

One of the first steps taken on their advice was for the DNC to hire its own pollster. Dotty Lynch, who has worked for both Hart and Caddell, now is helping the DNC political strategists interpret the bombadment of national data about voters' perception of the parties and their fast-changing affiliations.

Last week, Lynch gave the DNC the good news and the bad news. The newest Harris Poll did indeed provide encouragement: that 50 percent of those questioned considered themselves Democrats compared to 44 percent aligning with the GOP--but the margin was almost entirely made in the West where there is a backlash against Interior Secretary James Watt.

She added a further note of caution: 100 of the 180 western interviews came from California, which she called "probably the most politically volatile state in the country."

There has been one other valuable move by the pollsters. A questionnaire designed by Hart for before-and-after polling of voters in an overwhelmingly Democratic congressional district in suburban Maryland provided revealing data about Reagan's strengths and weaknesses.

Reagan's endorsement of the Republican contender, Audrey Scott, appeared to have a negative impact, Lynch said. The bulk of voters said it had made no difference in their choice but for those who were influenced by Reagan's blessing of Scott, only 6 percent said it swayed them toward her and 16 percent said it prompted them to vote the other way, for the winner, Democrat Steney Hoyer.

"The Reagan endorsement was a red flag for those Democrats who might have thought she was all right," Lynch said.

It is from such nitty-gritty political analysis that trends are spotted, party activists are supplied with specific data, politicians are stiffened in their resolve to speak out -- and money is raised for 1982 candidates.

Manatt has been criticized for being too much of a technocrat, for being too stiff and uptight in his public appearances, for being a nuts-and-bolts person when the Democrats desperately need a national spokesman.

But he is a nuts-and-bolts person--and he is telling party loyalists as well as big-buck moneymen that he is "here to do business, to cut out some things that have gone on in the past"--and to equip the party for the future.

Next week, the DNC will start what is envisioned as a long-term direct-mail fundraising operation that, if it works, could put the party on a far better financial footing.

It will take years, however. The Republicans began about 10 years ago and not only get the bulk of their operational money from small donors but have $9.3 million in the bank right now, with plans to raise another $29 million for the 1982 elections.

Manatt would like to raise up to $7 million this year and $11 million the next. But he'll have to do it from the big-money people and from fancy fundraisers because it will take years of plowing donations from the initial direct-mail receipts back into expanded mailings for there to be a solid base in the future.

Despite his own personal reserve and his low-key manner, Manatt has signed off on what will be the most harsh attack on the Reagan administration by the party to date.

"Our appeals will be much more aggressive, much more on the attack," Manatt said.

Using the data from the pollsters on Reagan's vulnerabilities, the DNC will emphasize the rich man-poor man theme in contrasting the goals of the two parties and will talk about the New Right ideologues who are having much to say in the administration such as Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C. and Interior Secretary Watt.

"Watt is playing very well for us," Manatt said, adding he thought they could pick up many seats in the West next year if oil companies began offshore drilling in California as Watt has said they can do.

Manatt also is setting in motion many other activities to build up skills of the party's activists, to raise money and help technically not only in congressional races but also in governors' and state legislative races.

Those last two would be new ventures for the DNC. Manatt said he thought the DNC help could make a difference in the governors races in Texas, Ohio, Minnesota and Oregon, among others.

For the first time, the DNC will sponsor a fund-raising dinner at the National Governors Conference in August and will help with smaller fundraising events there for such contenders as Rep. James J. Florio, who is the Democratic nominee in the New Jersey governor's race.

One other significant change has been Manatt's daily contact with Democratic leaders and campaign committees in Congress. He is on Capitol Hill several times a week for strategy sessions, sometimes on 1982 matters but sometimes giving advice on substantive legislative issues as well.

On the controversial Democratic tax bill option, for instance, the lawyer-businessman Manatt said he advised them to "keep it simple, just keep it simple and target it toward more productivity."

Manatt is not a typical back-slapping political charmer. In many quarters, his reserve may be a disadvantage.

As one veteran activist and now top DNC official said, "there isn't much political massaging that goes on and that's unusual at a party headquarters. But he has hired top people, taken it on faith that they can perform, is working hard to give us assets--and is holding people accountable. You can't ask for much more."

MX can't replace Minuteman yet

WASHINGTON (AP) — The MX strategic missile will not be able to effectively replace the Minuteman system until 1990, no matter how it is deployed, congressional researchers say.

Analysts in the Office of Technology Assessment made that conclusion in releasing a report Monday on a 13-month study of various basing modes that have been suggested for the MX.

Five of the methods studied, including the multiple-shelter and mobile system favored by the Air Force, "offer reasonable prospects for feasibility and survivability," research team leader Peter Sharfman told the House public lands subcommittee.

"I should emphasize, however, that none of these five modes is without serious problems, risks, uncertainties or drawbacks," Sharfman testified.

"A matter of particular interest, and one of the major findings of this study, is that we have found no basing mode which would be likely to provide a substantial number of survivable MX missiles much before the end of this decade," he added. "The so-called 'window of vulnerability' (to Soviet attack) cannot be closed quickly."

The OTA study parallels one that a special MX advisory panel is due to present to Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger on July 1. President Reagan is scheduled to make the final decision on MX basing in August.

Sharfman said the office was making no recommendation as to how, or whether, the new nuclear weapons system should be developed and added that "OTA's technical analysis does not support a clear and simple choice."

Besides the basic multiple protective shelter system, the Air Force is pushing, the OTA study said the basing methods that appear feasible were:

—Defending the multiple shelters with a low-altitude anti-ballistic missile, or ABM, system.

—Placing MX missiles in silos and relying on quick communications and decisions by national leaders to launch the weapons moments after an enemy attack begins.

—Basing the MX at sea aboard a new class of relatively small submarines.

—Making the MX air-mobile by dropping the missiles from wide-bodied aircraft and launching them as they fall.

The researchers also considered but rejected as infeasible six other possible basing modes: In underground silos protected by an ABM system, in "super-hardened" shelters deep underground or aboard surface ships, railroad cars, trucks and off-road vehicles.

Based on an endorsement received during the Carter administration, the Air Force has been doing preliminary work that assumes the MX mode will be a 200-missile, 4,600-shelter mobile system spread over a 50,000-square-mile desert area of Nevada and Utah.

In its analysis, the OTA said the multiple shelter concept would "preserve the existing structure and balance of U.S. strategic forces," offer improvements over current missiles and be much less vulnerable to destruction than the Minuteman missiles, which are housed in fixed silos.

On the other hand, it added, the system is the most expensive option and its economic, environmental and social effects on Nevada and Utah "would be severe and could include the long-term loss of thousands of square miles of productive rangelands."

The report said the number of missiles and shelters envisioned in the Air Force plan would be too small if the Soviet Union continues to build nuclear warheads at its current rate.

"OTA finds that a prudent construction schedule would aim at somewhere between 8,000 and 9,000 shelters and 350 MX missiles deployed by 1990," Sharfman said.

He said this change would boost the estimated cost of the multiple shelter system from $43 billion to between $58 billion and $62 billion, using the value of the dollar in 1980 and making no provision for inflation or other cost increases.

The cheapest option, listed at $15 billion to $20 billion, was the silo-based quck-reaction system, while submarine basing was priced at $39 billion and air-launching at roughly $40 billion.

Families sue Union Carbide

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — The families of two Union Carbide Co. employees filed separate $1 million lawsuits, claiming chemical fumes at the Texas City plant caused the two men's death.

The suits, filed here Wednesday, claim that Q.A. Sandberg and Orville B. Kuhn were continuously exposed to vinyl chloride and other fumes that Union Carbide knew, or should have known, were dangerous.

The company also was negligent and withheld knowdledge from its employes that the fumes could be deadly, the suits claimed.

Sandberg died Sept. 13, 1976 and Kuhn died July 26, 1976.

U.S. Vice President George Bush speaks with newsmen after meeting with French President Francois Mitterrand, left, in the Elysee Palace in Paris Wednesday. Bush expressed concern over the appointment of four Communist ministers to the new French government.

Bush moves on to London

LONDON (AP) — Vice President George Bush, declaring Britain and the United States have mutual goals that will not be easy to achieve, arrived here today from Paris for talks with senior British ministers.

"I hope our talks today will enhance what is an already excellent relationship," Bush told a news conference at London's Heathrow Airport.

"We have many, many mutual goals," he said. "Achieving these goals will not be easy for either of our countries." He did not elaborate.

Bush, who was met by U.S. Ambassador John L. Louis and British officials, is scheduled to confer with Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington this afternoon and to dine with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher at her No. 10 Downing Street residence.

THE TWO-DAY British visit is Bush's first trip to London since the Reagan administration came to office.

Before leaving Paris earlier today, Bush said he feels comfortable about the relation between France and the United States and has nothing more to say about the Communists who just joined the French government.

"I've said all I'm going to say about this issue and the position of the United States is well known," said Bush, who met Wednesday with Socialist President Francois Mitterrand.

After his meeting with Mitterrand, Bush said that Communist participation in the government of any U.S. ally "is bound to cause concern."

The U.S. State Department, in a statment issued in Washington, said the "tone and content" of U.S.-French relations would be affected.

BUSH DECLINED to answer questions about that statement but said, "I feel very comfortable about the relationship with the new governments of the United States and France."

There were reports that Bush sought, and may have received, assurances from Mitterrand and his ruling Socialists that sensitive information on the North Atlantic Treaty Organization would be withheld from the four Communists appointed to ministerial posts on Tuesday. None of the Communists was given a defense-related job.

France is the only member of NATO in which Communists have a share of power. It does not participate in the integrated military structure of NATO but is a key West European power with its own nuclear force.

But French officials familiar with Mitterrand's thinking point out that sensitive matters such as defense and foreign affairs are seldom discussed in sessions of the full Cabinet, which has more than 40 members. Such decisions are usually handled by small groups of selected ministers.

An important part of the discussions between Bush and the French leaders was high U.S. interest rates, which the Europeans complain have forced them to push up their own rates.

FRENCH FOREIGN Minister Claude Cheysson, who visited the United States June 4-6, is known to have pressed for a change in U.S. fiscal policies.

"We made the point that the best way toeliminate thee high interest rates which are hurting not only France but the United States as well is by immediately implementing the Reagan economic program," Bush said.

"Ours is not a policy of high interest rates. Interest rates are a result of policies with which we disagreed," Bush said.

More Soviet troops moving into war

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The Soviet Union probably will send more advanced weapons instead of more troops to its war against the tenacious Moslem rebels in Afghanistan, a Western military expert predicts.

But the anti-Communist guerrillas who control most of the rugged Afghan countryside also are receiving modern weapons and training, the expert said, and the Soviets "will have to do a lot of thinking."

The military observer spoke to reporters Wednesday on the condition that he not be identified by name or nationality.

He asserted that Soviet troops are using toxic chemicals that are "non-persistent, lethal, mainly nerve gas. They are probably testing some new stuff, too, but the main use is of conventional stuff."

"They use it indiscriminately to clear an area," dropping gas bombs before a troop column passes through. "It makes things a lot easier."

The source said his information confirmed a diplomatic report in March that 5,000 to 15,000 more Soviet troops had been sent to Afghanistan, a report the U.S. State Department said was not true.

Even even if the 85,000 Soviet troops the U.S. government estimates are in Afghanistan have been increased to 100,000, many more will be needed to stamp out the resistance, the expert said. But "I predict more and better weapons instead of a lot more troops," he added.

In the past 60 days the Soviets have started using night-vision equipment, putting a crimp into the after-dark activities of the insurgents, he said.

"They are learning a lot about the use of helicopters, the use of light armor," he continued. "I expect to see ;reater use by the Soviets of more sophisticated airborne weapons, such as CDBs — canister delivered bombs — for example."

"The rebels are getting more sophisticated, too," the expert said.

They are getting such weapons as surface-to-air anti-aircraft missiles, or SAMs, and rocket-propelled grenades across the porous borders with Pakistan and Iran. They also increase and improve their arsenals by capture; "all the weapons they need are available within the Soviet ranks," the expert observed.

"If the rebels ever get a lot of SAMs, the Soviets are in trouble," he added.

Supreme Court expresses doubts about hostage deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Supreme Court justices, in the tribunal's first summer hearing since the Watergate tapes case of 1974, have voiced doubts about a key part of the deal that freed 52 American hostages from Iran last January.

The skepticism — not necessarily indicative of how the court will rule — appeared Wednesday as the Reagan administration told the justices that former President Carter acted constitutionality in striking the bargain with Iran.

"Someone has to have the power to act," argued Rex Lee, solicitor general-designate. "Under our system of government that person has to be the president."

The issue is whether Carter had the authority to order, as part of the agreement ending the hostage crisis, the suspension of all American lawsuits against Iran and the return of Iranian assets frozen 10 days after the hostages were seized in 1979.

The court is expected to rule by July 19, the date by which Carter agreed that about $2.3 billion in frozen assets would be returned. The agreement also calls for an international tribunal, rather than U.S. courts, to decide claims by U.S. firms and citizens against Iran.

Lee told the justices the financial pact falls within a president's power to defuse an international crisis with "honorable and reasonable terms." He said U.S. claimants would be "better off" before the international tribunal.

"That goes to whether it (the hostage accord) was a good deal or not," Justice John Paul Stevens said at one point. "It doesn't say whether the president had the power to enter into it."

"The more you read the newspapers the more doubts you have," Justice William H. Rehnquist said, referrng to the intrnational tribunal.

When Lee said the tribunal's rulings would be enforced by "traditional forces" of international law, Justice Potter Stewart responded: "Those traditional forces did not seem to prevail in the seizure of the hostages, did they?"

Also expressing reservations about the hostage agreement were Justices William J. Brennan, Lewis F. Powell and Byron R. White, who seemed troubled by the possibility of the international tribunal rejecting some claims.

"The argument is really strong that the treaty (an apparent reference to the agreement) would exclude some of the claims," White said.

The court's two-hour argument session touched only lightly on the practical results of a possible ruling that the agreement was illegal.

Thomas Shack, a Washington lawyer representing the Iranian government, said the international tribunal could order the United States to pay Iran for breaking its promise.

The agreement's fate in no way is tied to that of the 52 hostages who were released last Jan. 20 after more than 14 months in captivity. They do not face any further threat.

One courtroom exchange involved the possibility that as part of the agreement the president might have ordered one of the court's nine justices to surrender himself to the Ayatollah Khomeini, Iran's religious leader.

Telling Lee he was advocating an "extraordinary power" for the president in times of crisis, Stewart said: "According to your argument, the president last year could have exchanged you or me for a hostage."

When Rehnquist raised that possibility while exploring with Shack the boundaries of presidential power, Shack said if such a presidential order were issued, "I think Justice Stewart would have to start packing a bag."

Syrian troops kill opponents

WASHINGTON (AP) — Syrian troops rousted scores of teen-age and adult males from their homes in the city of Hama last April and massacred them with gunfire, the Washington Post reported today.

The number of victims varied from 150 to "several hundred," according to the newspaper, which quoted an unidentified witness from Hama and "diplomatic reports" from Europe, Washington and the Middle East.

Hama is a center of agitation against Syrian President Hafez Assad. It is the home of the outlawed Moslem Brotherhood and a center of Sunni Moslem fundamentalism, which has opposed Assad on the grounds that he has favored rival Alawite Moslems for high government and army positions.

About 70 percent of Syria follows the Sunni sect and about 14 percent the Alawite.

Last year and early this year, the Hama was bombarded by Syrian army artillery.

The witness, a former resident of Hama, was quoted as saying that troops swept through the city before dawn April 24, bursting into residences and leading away victims.

The witness said he heard gunfire all morning and went out at 11 a.m.

"I walked a few steps before coming on a pile of bodies, then another," he said. "There must have been 10 or 15. I walked by them, one after the other. ... In each pile there were 15 bodies, 25, 30 bodies."

The Post said diplomatic reports confirmed the account but conflicted on the date, placing it between April 22 and April 28. The reports described it as a reprisal for attacks on militiamen of Assad's Baath Socialist Party and on a neighboring Alawite village.

Bus wreck kills 21

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — A passenger bus crashed off a bridge and tumbled into a river below, killing 21 people and injuring 26, a police spokesman said today.

The spokesman said the bus was speeding as it approached the bridge early Wednesday en route from Surabaya in east Java to the city of Yokyakarta in central Java.

Soviet newspaper accuses west of blackmail

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet newspaper today accused Western nations of using Poland's debts for "economic blackmail."

In a dispatch from London, the Soviet trade union newspaper Trud also charged that there are "dirty intrigues around the Polish events" in Britain.

"Economic blackmail is today the most obvious means of pressure by international capitalism on Poland," Trud said.

"The adventuristic sliding into indebtness to Western banks and governments is now hitting back at Poland in the form of serious financial difficulties," the report said.

Poland's overall debt to the West is estimated at $25 billion. Officials of 19 Western banks were meeting in Paris today to discuss whether to ease the repayment conditions on Polish commercial debt falling due this year.

Participants said the U.S. banks want to obtain some kind of reassurance that Polish authorities are acting to prop up Poland's shaky economy.

"The governments and banks of imperialist powers depict themselves virtually as well-wishers of the Polish people" as they grant postponements in interest payments, Trud said.

It claimed that "the assistance is rendered 'double-faced' and with strong political strings attached."

"The economic blackmail is backed up by a really unprecedented psychological British propaganda campaign," Trud said.

"The dirty intrigues around the Polish events amidst definite political quarters of Britain in the final analysis boil down to the following aim: to exploit the crisis and, relying on counter-revolutionary forces inside the country, to try to turn back the decades of historic development of Poland, to wrest it from the socialist community," the newspaper said.

In Warsaw, a high-ranking Polish Communist Party official reminded his countrymen Wednesday about past military interventions in Soviet bloc countries.

Stefan Olszowski, a member of the ruling Politburo, told a provincial party conference about political crises in East Germany in 1953, in Hungary in 1956 and in Czechoslovakia in 1968.

"In all these instances the crisis phenomena were ended by a military solution including an intervention of fraternal states," Olszowski said.

On frequent occasions in the past year, Western observers have said a Soviet-led military intervention to reverse political and social liberalization in Poland seemed near.

Italians, Swiss fined

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Two Swiss bankers were fined $13 million each and an Italian industrialist was fined $5.6 million after a bank fraud trial in which 46 people were convicted.

The fines imposed Wednesday night by a Milan court amounted to $70 million. The defendants included Italian businessmen charged with moving money illegally to Switzerland and Swiss bankers charged with manipulating their books to cover the businessmen's deposits.

DEATHS

W.E. 'Bill' Klatt

Services for W.E. "Bill" Klatt, 77, of Route 7, Box 482, will be at 2 p.m. Friday in the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel with Leon Odom of the Cuthbert and Austin Street Church of Christ officiating. Burial will be at Resthaven Memorial Park.

Klatt died Wednesday in an Odessa hospital.

Born Feb. 26, 1904, in Germany, Klatt moved to Geneva, Ohio, as an emigrant. He moved to Groveton, Texas, where the family farmed and operated a blacksmith shop. In 1926, he moved to Midland and worked for the old Texas Electric. In 1929, Klatt opened a blacksmith shop which he operated until the beginning of World War II. During this period, he served as one of the first volunteer firemen of Midland. He became the second fireman in Midland to be regular and paid in 1944. He was the first Fire Marshal on a regular basis and served until 1971 when he retired. He was a member of the Church of Christ.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, Ernest Klatt and Eddie Klatt, both of Midland; a daughter, Barbara A. Black of Midland; three brothers, Fred Klatt of Houston, John Klatt of San Antonio and Paul Klatt of Monahans; a sister, Emma Hedges of Midland; five grandchildren, two great-grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

The family requests that memorials be directed to the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center.

Charlie Hedges

Services for Charlie B. Hedges, 45, of County Road 120 in rural Midland, were to be at 3 p.m. today at the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Dr. Bill Berryhill, pastor of Faith Baptist Church in Big Spring, officiating. Burial was to follow in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Hedges died Tuesday afternoon at a Big Spring hospital.

Pallbearers were to be Floyd Danley, Doyle Land, Bob White, Roy Wallace, Roy Haverman and Keith Morrison.

Ruby Keogh

Services for Ruby Keogh, 78, of 800 Powell St., were to be at 11 a.m. today in St. Ann's Catholic Church with the Rev. Cliff Blackburn officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park, directed by Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Keogh died Tuesday in her home after suffering a heart attack.

Born May 26, 1903, in Baird, she spent her early life in Baird and finished school there. She married William B. Keogh and they lived in Dallas until 1940, when they moved to Denver, Colo. He died there in 1960. She moved to Midland in 1960.

Survivors include a brother, W. A. Hunt of Baird, two cousins and a nephew.

Five more Bani-Sadr supporters killed

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran's revolutionary regime has executed five more supporters of fugitive ex-President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr and says it will hold the election to pick his successor on July 24.

Tehran Radio said four more followers of the outlawed Bahai sect also died before firing squads Wednesday, bringing the total number of executions announced this week to 43.

Thirty-four of these were linked to Bani-Sadr, seven were Bahais accused of spying and collecting funds for Israel, one was a journalist convicted of corruption and the other was described as a collaborator with SAVAK, the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's secret police.

MOST OF THE Bani-Sadr people put to death were reported to be leftists accused of fomenting street clashes between foes and supporters of the president.

Bani-Sadr, dismissed on Monday by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini after the Iranian parliament voted him unfit for office the day before, was reported still at large. An order for his arrest was issued Sunday, and he has been rumored to be in Egypt, Turkey, western Iran or in hiding in Tehran.

His successor as president apparently will be Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai, the high school teacher picked by the fundamentalist clerics of the Islamic Republican Party to head the government when they broke with the Westernized, leftist Bani-Sadr a year ago.

RELIABLE SOURCES in Tehran reported by telephone that Rajai would be the IRP candidate. This insures his election since the party controls the government, the parliament, the election machinery and the revolutionary guards, and has the full backing of Khomeini, the supreme leader of revolutionary regime.

The sources said Minister of State Behzad Nabavi, who headed the Iranian team in the negotiations that freed the U.S. hostages, would become prime minister.

The presidency, which the clerics of the IRP reduced to a figurehead post during the power struggle with Bani-Sadr, is now filled by a three-man council made up of Supreme Court President Mohammad Beheshti, Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani and Rajai.

BEHESHTI, the head of the IRP, and Rafsanjani are both ayatollahs, the highest clerical rank in the Shiite Moslem faith. Tehran Radio said Rajai would be in charge of the day-to-day affairs of the presidency while Rafsanjani would represent the presidency on the Supreme Defense Council, which is running the war with Iraq.

Having disposed of Bani-Sadr, the Moslem fundamentalists now are expected to consolidate their victory over the moderate and leftist secularized factions in Khomeini's revolution by enacting a 199-article Islamic Law of Punishment, or Quesas, giving victims of crimes the right to take "eye-for-eye" revenge on their assailants.

THE LAW GOES to great lengths to define fair retaliation, saying in Article 62, for instance, that "for the punishment of someone who cuts the right hand off someone else, only the right hand of the offender should be cut off. If the offender does not have a right hand, then the left hand can be cut off and if he has neither left nor right hands, one of his legs can be severed."

The law also is in accordance with the Islamic principle of male superiority. For example, a man who kills a woman can be punishe-by death, but the father of the murdered woman will have to pay the killer's family a court-determined "blood worth" to compensate for their losing his income. But if a woman commits murder, the victim's family is not required to pay compensation for inflicting the death penalty.

Bani-Sadr had been trying to rally opposition to the code.

'Great Turtle Race' scheduled

People who like spectator sports can select their favorite on Monday if they go to Hill Park for the city's ninth annual "Great Turtle Race," Frisbee throw and the first glider race.

Competition begins at 9 a.m. with the turtle race. Anyone — youngster or oldster — who wants to compete should show up with a turtle. Awards will be given for first, second and third place turtles whose owners are in various age divisions. An entry fee of 10 cents will be charged for each turtle entered.

After recuperating from the exhilerating "fast-paced" turtle race, the glider competition comes next. Gliders will be provided by the Parks and Recreation Department. Age divisions will be 9, 10, 11 and up.

Capping the morning's events will be the distance Frisbee throw. Age divisions will be 3 through 5, 6 through 8, 9 and up.

Awards will be given in each age division in the glider and Frisbee competitions.

City parks personnel are urging people to "bring a sack lunch and spend the day." Free drinks and watermelon will be provided.

Wealthy Texans want more conservatives in Congress

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Several wealthy Texans have formed a coalition to persuade state lawmakers to come up with a congressional redistricting plan aimed at putting more conservatives in Congress.

The group, Texans for a Conservative Congress, was formed during a breakfast meeting at the Loews Antole Hotel in Dallas last week, the Corpus Christi Caller reported Wednesday.

"We're interested in continuing the move toward conservatism in the nation," said Amarillo attorney Wales Madden Jr., who will co-chair the committee along with Victoria banker Zac Lentz.

The meeting, hosted by Corpus Christi attorney Hayden Head Sr. and Steak & Ale restaurant magnate Norman Brinker of Dallas, was attended by about 40 business leaders from across the state, the newspaper reported.

"We hope to generate support for conservative redistricting without regard to (political) party," Head said.

The Texas Legislature was unable to agree on a redistricting plan during its regular session which ended June 1. Legislators begin a 30-day special session in July to consider, among other things, the issue of re-mapping of congressional lines.

"We're going to try and make a contribution to get them to come up with a redistricting plan that will afford the conservative candidate the opportunity to be elected," Madden added.

He said the state's receptiveness to a conservative congressional delegation was evident when the voters swung to the Republican camp last November.

Madden says the committee will need about $100,000 to begin its direct mail campaign targeted at getting voters to put pressure on Texas lawmakers for the preferred conservative plan.

"We're going to say, 'look, the state of Texas is vital in the political future of the nation and let's continue to see that we have a conservative congressional delegation,'" Madden added.

Speaker to discuss Central America

The Midland Friends Meeting (Quakers) will sponsor a talk and slide show on U.S. foreign policy in Central America at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Trinity School Library, 3500 W. Wadley Ave.

The speaker will be Ken Carpenter, an Austin-based representative of the American Friends Service Committee, who has recently returned from an AFSC-sponsored fact-finding tour of eight nations in Central America.

Carpenter will place special emphasis on the continuing U.S. military involvement in El Salvador and on the emerging American relationship with the national reconstruction government in Nicaragua.

The public is invited to attend.

Judge to review relationship

NEW YORK (AP) — The presiding justice of the Brooklyn Appellate Division will review an investigation of Yonkers lawyer William Griffin who allegedly served as courier in financial dealings between Richard Nixon and billionaire Howard Hughes.

Justice Milton Mollen said Wednesday that early in 1976 Nixon refused to testify in a secret investigation of Griffin by a Westchester County lawyers' disciplinary committee.

Alamo Pool to close for swim meet

Alamo Pool will be closed today through Monday, according to a spokesman with the Parks and Recreation Department.

The pool will be readied today for the Allison West Texas Invitational Swim Meet which starts Friday and continues through the weekend.

Swimming lessons will resume on schedule Monday, but the pool will be closed to the public until Tuesday morning.

English language paper caters to foreign readers

PEKING (AP) — For the foreign capitalists in its midst, communist China now provides the latest foreign stock market listings, sports scores and crossword puzzles.

It's all in The China Daily, the first English-language newspaper printed in China since the 1949 communist takeover.

Along with Chinese news, features and commentaries reflecting the Communist Party's views, the newspaper reports major international stories in dispatches from such foreign news agencies as The Associated Press, United Press International, Reuters and Agence France Presse.

Like the Chinese-language press, it has movie listings and television programs. Unlike Chinese papers, it has the crossword puzzle and major foreign sports events, including American baseball results — before the current players' strike, which it also reported.

Since The China Daily began appearing regularly Tuesday through Saturday this month, foreign residents and the 530,000 foreign tourists who pass through the country each year have been able to follow the Dow Jones industrial index or see the Yankees displace the Orioles from first place in the American League East.

They can take bridge lessons, too. They can also do that through the Peking Evening News — if they read Chinese.

The headlines in the paper's first regular edition ballyhooed China's invitation to its citizens' relatives on Taiwan, seat of the rival Nationalist Chinese government, to attend the funeral of Soong Ching-ling, widow of Chinese revolutionary leader Sun Yat-sen.

The most prominent headline since concerned Israel's bombing of Iraq's nuclear reactor.

The paper, which has a circulation of 30,000 and costs 7 cents a copy, also reported the non-amorous adventures in Washington, D.C., of the London Zoo's giant panda, Chia Chia, originally a gift from China.

It printed news service dispatches on the assassination of Bangladesh President Ziaur Rahman, political strife in Iran, the Socialists' victory in the French elections, Poland's economic turmoil, U.S.-Soviet disagreements, President Reagan's budget, a disastrous train wreck in India and prospective U.S. arms sales to China.

It did not report Reagan's denunciation of communism as an "aberration" which faces a quick demise. But it did use a Washington dispatch by China's official Xinhua news agency on Reagan's stated intention to keep selling arms to Taiwan.

The Chinese-language papers did likewise. But unlike The China Daily, the Chinese papers include foreign reports supplied only by Xinhua or their own correspondents, although they occasionally quote foreign-supplied reports in their dispatches.

While The China Daily gives more prominent play to foreign news than the Chinese papers, it must strictly follow Communist Party guidelines — it is published by the party newspaper, People's Daily.

The makeup of The China Daily is uncluttered and it uses photographs more prominently than Chinese papers. It carries letters from both foreign and Chinese readers. Its opinion page carries no editorial of its own, instead using translations from the Chinese press and an occasional commentary by one of its foreign helpers.

In one of those commentaries, Jack Steele wrote, "In the past, tourists and other visitors in China often felt as though they'd been stranded on a deserted island without a short-wave set. As far as knowing what was happening back home and in the world as well as in China, there was no way."

He said The China Daily "is aimed at catering to the news needs of tourists and a not inconsiderable foreign community. Any Chinese who wants to can buy the paper.

"In total numbers, the bulk of the paper's readership is bound to be Chinese — officials, trade people, professionals and especially the innumerable students of English all over this huge country."

The paper has also become something of a forum for criticizing foreign journalists in China.

McCloskey introduces bill on migrant workers

By TOM EASTHAM
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON--A bill designed to "legitimize" migrant workers and rescue them from fear and exploitation was introduced Wednesday by Rep. Paul N. McCloskey, Jr., R-Calif.

The legislation promises to be controversial -- on several counts.

It proposes possible prison sentences for employers persistently hiring illegal aliens, Social Security-based identity cards, more border police and eventual full citizenship for migrants.

National identity cards have been persistently opposed by liberal groups as an infringement of civil rights.

The six-term Menlo Park congressman, who was to announce the legislation at a press conference later today, said his primary purpose is to help "the two to four million workers which we cheerfully accept for labor."

"They should pay taxes, Social Security and for health insurance just like other Americans -- and they should be entitled to the protection of the law," he added.

An aide said McCloskey's bill was more comprehensive than any of several immigration and guest worker bills now under consideration in Congress.

"It is a blend of a number of different bills. We've taken their best elements and in some cases modified them, to produce what we think is legislation that deals with the issue more completely," the aide said.

She pointed out that while the bill is McCloskey's first legislative venture into the controversial migrant worker issue, he is familiar with the problem from work in his district south of San Francisco.

McCloskey's bill is based on these six basic concepts:

1 -- Legitimization of a migrant worker program, allowing aliens to enter the United States for up to eight months per year for agricultural and other employment. After five years of working for at least four months each year, the alien could seek permanent resident status with citizenship attainable five years thereafter.

2 -- A Social Security Card with an identifiable photograph and counterfeit-resistant identification data. Falsification or misuse of the card would be punishable by heavy fine and-or imprisonment.

3 -- Employers knowingly hiring illegal aliens would be subject to a $500 civil fine, $1,000 for a second violation and criminal penalties of $5,000 and-or one year in jail.

4 -- Amnesty would be granted, allowing permanent resident alien status for illegal aliens who have been residing continuously in the U.S. for two years prior to the date of enactment, with citizenship attainable five years thereafter.

5 -- Border Patrol officers would be increased from 2,200 to 2,800 or more. The fine for smuggling aliens would be increased to $5,000 and-or one year in jail.

6 -- Bilateral consultation would be conducted with Mexico on the migrant worker program, amnesty, bilateral development and trade, and on increasing immigartion quotas.

The Newspaper BIBLE

GOD YES; GODS NO!

While Paul and Barnabas were at Lystra, they came upon a man with crippled feet who had been that way from birth, so he had never walked. He was listening as Paul preached, and Paul noticed him and realized he had faith to be healed! So Paul called to him, "Stand up!" and the man leaped to his feet and started walking!

When the listening crowd saw what Paul had done, they shouted (in their local dialect, of course), "These men are gods in human bodies!" They decided that Barnabas was the Greek god Jupiter, and that Paul, because he was the chief speaker, was Mercury!

The local priest of the Temple of Jupiter, located on the outskirts of the city, brought them cartloads of flowers and sacrificed oxen to them at the city gates before the crowds.

But when Barnabas and Paul saw what was happening whey ripped at their clothing in dismay and ran out among the people, shouting, "Men! What are you doing? We are merely human beings like yourselves! We have come to bring you the Good News that you are invited to turn from the worship of these foolish things and to pray instead to the living God who made heaven and earth and the sea and everything in them. In bygone days He permitted the nations to go their own ways, but He never left Himself without a witness; there were always His reminders -- the kind things He did such as sending you rain and good crops and giving you food and gladness."

But even so, Paul and Barnabas could scarcely restrain the people from sacrificing to them!

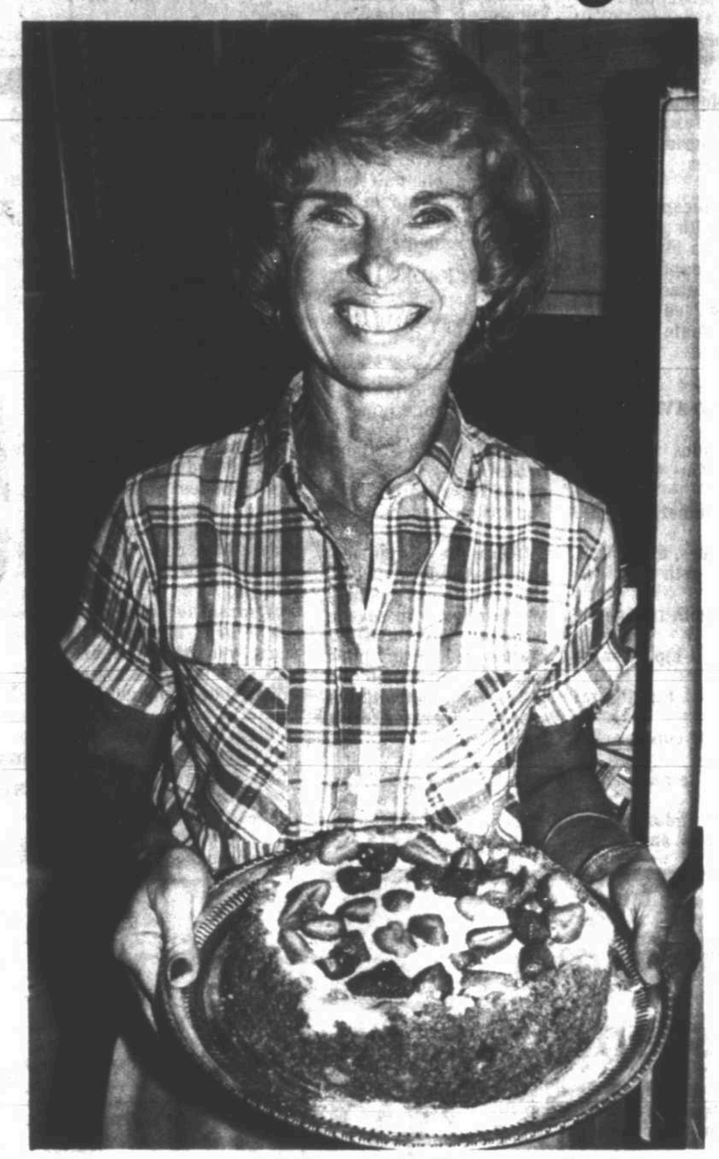
What's cooking?



Sam Guyton

Anyone who is a lover of strawberry cheese cake (and who isn't?) will welcome Sam Guyton's special recipe.

"This cheese cake is especially good for the summer because it's lighter than most cheese cakes," she said. "It's the most different recipe for a cheese cake that I've ever eaten," she said. Her secret for its lightness is the egg whites, she believes.

A therapist for the Permian Basin Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation for the past 11 years, Sam enjoys cooking as a hobby.

"I guess I got that from my mom," she said. "She's Polish and she always loved to cook. But she never used a recipe—she did it by touching, tasting, etc."

As counselor for MH-MR, Sam is supervisor of the Outpatient Drug Program and of Community Consultation and Education. This includes informing and educating the community about sound mental health and the prevention of stress and mental illness through various means—presenting programs, seminars and talks, and working with other agencies and professionals.

She is also active in the Business and Professional Women's Club, and is currently membership chairman. She also helped organize the St. Ann's Group for the Formerly Married and several other singles organizations here.

Though she is a native of Corning, N.Y., she has lived in Midland for the past 20 years.

In her spare time, she enjoys spending time with her two college daughters, Julie, 17, and Kim, 20, "when they have time," she says. "We love to play tennis, go to the beach or go camping," she said.

Here is her recipe for Strawberry Cheese Cake. Allow plenty of time for baking.

STRAWBERRY CHEESE CAKE

Melt 1/4 lb. of butter.

Mix one package of zwieback crumbs and 1/2 cup sugar, and add this to the butter. Line the sides and bottom of a spring form pan with this mixture.

Cream together:
Two 8-oz. packages of cream cheese
1 cup sugar

Add:
Two 1/2 pints of sour cream
1 teaspoon lemon juice
5 egg yolks
1 teaspoon vanilla
Fold in five stiffly beaten egg whites.

Pour this into the center of the shell made from the crumbs. Cook for one hour at 300 degrees. DO NOT PEEK! Turn off oven and leave cake in for one more hour. DO NOT PEEK! Open the oven door, but leave the cake in oven for 1/2 hour more. LOOK NOW! As soon as it cooks sufficiently, put into refrigerator to chill. Top with fresh strawberries or other fruit of your choice.

Egyptian food unchanged since ancient times

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

A cuisine I know little about is that of Egypt, which dates back to ancient times. So I welcomed the chance to get a fill-in from Dr. Ali Rahmy, press counsellor of the Egyptian mission to the United Nations.

"As a general thing, Egyptian food tends to be spicier than American," said Rahmy. This goes back to the days of the pharaohs in whose tombs were found samples of sage, rosemary, coriander and other herbs, placed there to sustain the rulers in afterlife.

"The only American dish I can compare with any Egyptian food is the hamburger," said Rahmy, "except that we grate onion in the minced meat, mix it with an egg, bread crumbs and spices, and fry."

It sounds more like the meatballs we serve with spaghetti.

I learned more about the background of ancient Egyptian food from a spokesman for Cairo's embassy in Washington. It is much the same today.

"From inscriptions, paintings and dried food found in tombs, we learn how the early Egyptians ate," he said. "It is possible to breakfast or dine today on the same foods that the pharaohs ate thousands of years ago.

"The basic elements of Egyptian cooking, the beans and onions, cereals and bread, fish from the Nile, melons, pomegranates and dates, remain as they were at the time of Ramses the Great," he said.

The Egyptians are believed to have been the first people to make leavened bread. Samples made some 4,000 years ago have been found in sealed tombs.

Most Egyptians start off their day with a bean dish called Foul Madamis. It consists of dried broad beans than have been boiled all night, then dressed with olive oil and lemon juice.

The people of this ancient land are also fond of grape leaves stuffed with meat, rice and seasoning. The meat is usually lamb or mutton, or sometimes water buffalo, which is much like our beef.

Fruit is a popular dessert, but there is also a cake known as Basbousa. Here's an Egyptian recipe:

CAKE

3 cups semolina flour
1½ cups sugar
1 cup milk
3 tablespoons butter
½ cup blanched almond halves

SYRUP

2 cups sugar
2 cups water
1 teaspoon lemon juice
Few drops vanilla extract

Mix semolina, sugar and milk with butter into slightly soft dough. Put in greased cake tin and decorate top with almond halves. Bake in 300-degree oven till golden brown.

To make syrup, dissolve sugar in water over low heat. Add lemon juice, turn up heat and let boil a few minutes. Remove from heat, add vanilla and allow to cool.

Pour cold syrup over cake while it is still hot, cut into squares and serve.

Milk supplies up

Milk supplies are up and that should be good news to consumers faced with steadily increasing food prices.

Furthermore, June is "Dairy Month," so consumers will want to take advantage of the last remaining days in the month to look for special promotions of dairy products.

"Because of a bountiful supply of milk, prices for both fresh milk and dairy products should be generally steady during the summer," points out Dr. Bud Schwart, dairy marketing economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

"In fact, many stores and supermarkets will likely be featuring 'specials' on a host of dairy products in the weeks ahead," speculates Schwart.

Stick like a stamp

Henry Wheeler Shaw, American humorist (1818-85), used the pseudonym Josh Billings and gave such advice as "Consider the postage stamp, its usefulness consists in the ability to stick to one thing 'til it gets there."

Beef, chicken primary features on this week's meat trade

Supermarket sources report that beef and chicken were the primary features in this week's retail meat trade, according to the Texas Cattle Feeders Association.

Pork was only lightly featured. One retail chain advertised bef at 20 percent, or more, off. Average price of advertised beef cuts this week was $2.33 per pound, up 6.39 per cent from the same week a year ago.

Pork was $1.46 per pound, up 14 per cent from a year ago.

Chicken averaged $.77 per pound, up 10 per cent from a year ago.

The Association also reported that consumers are beginning to buy cheaper cuts of meat according to a survey by the research firm of Lou Harris and Associates.

Thel firm reports that consumers are buykng about the same amount of meat, but are economizing on cuts, watching specials more carefully and planning meals to save money.

Average grocery bill for most Americans is $55 per week; $67 for families on an income of more than $25,000 a year.

Food Marketing Institute reports that consumers spent 16.6 percent of their disposable income on food at home and 4.4 percent eating out.

Quick fruit recipes

Need a quick dessert? Ice Cream Ambrosia is just the ticket. Lightly toss 1 teaspoon grated orange peel, 1½ cups orange sections (from 3 to 4 oranges) with juice and ½ cup flaked coconut. Cover and chill, then serve over scooped vanilla ice cream in dessert dishes. Ambrosia's enough for 4 to 6 people.

Vegetarian cooking: Savory salad recipes for summertime

By CLARE BARRETT
Copley News Service

Every summer loves a salad, and summer is the time for salads to shine.

Rather than let it take the back seat to a heavy main course, make the salad the center of your meal on hot summer days. It will cool and refresh you as its garden-fresh ingredients nourish you like nothing else will.

Protein can be added to a salad meal in many ways. The inclusion of cooked beans (garbanzos are especially nice) is one. Sprinkling the salad with toasted sunflower and sesame seeds is another. Cubed cheese and sliced hard-cooked eggs are also welcome additions.

There are so many wonderful salads! Here are a few to add to your repertoire. Enjoy the full-but-not-fat feeling you have after a main dish salad supper, accompanied by crusty French bread and a tall glass of iced herb tea.

BULGHUR TABOULI SALAD

4 cups water
2 cups bulghur wheat
1 head lettuce, shredded
1 cucumber, diced fine
2 tomatoes, diced fine
2 radishes, diced fine
3 scallions, diced fine
One-fourth head cabbage, shredded
One-fourth cup fresh parsleya, chopped fine
3 tbsps. tamari soy sauce
2 tbsps. oil
One-fourth tsp. garlic powder
One-fourth tsp. paprika
One-fourth tsp. basil

Put water in large saucepan over medium-high heat, bring to boil. Add bulghur and pinch of salt if desired. Reduce heat to low, cover and simmer approximately 15-20 minutes or until bulghur is soft and all water is absorbed. Allow to cool. Then combine all vegetables in large bowl. Add bulghur and seasonings and dressing if desired. Serves 4. Variation: Soak bulghur in water for an hour or more until soft, drain and follow recipe as above. Add other salad vegetables such as beets, celery or peppers, or add 2 tbsps. lemon or cider vinegar.

PINEAPPLE BOATS

1 ripe pineapple
1 ripe avocado
Raspberries,
Fresh banana

Cut pineapple in two halves, lengthwise. Scoop out insides and cut it into cubes.

Toss pineapple cubes together with other fresh fruits and a little honey. Refill pineapple shells with fruit salad mixture. May be served at breakfast or as main dish for a fruit dinner.

STUFFED AVOCADOS

2 avocados
2 scallions or chives, diced
1 cucumber, cut into chunks
2 radishes, diced
One-fourth tsp. sea salt
One-eighth tsp. garlic powder
One-half tsp. sesame meal
2 tbsps. nutritional yeast
One-half cup sprouts, any kind
2 tbsps. tamari

Cut avocados in half, remove pits and gently scoop out insides, leaving shell intact. Mash avocados, add scallions, cucumber, radishes, tamari and other seasonings, mix well. Fill avocado shells with mixture. Top with yeast, sprouts and sesame meal. Serves four. (To make sesame meal, mix 1 cup sesame seeds and one-half teaspoon salt, grind in nut mill or blender in 2 tablespoon increments.)

ORANGE FRUIT JELL

Orange sections from 1 orange
1 sliced pear
About 8 strawberries
3 cups orange juice
3 tsps. agar (this is a tasteless gelling agent produced by seaweeds, available at health stores and Oriental shops)

Place the orange sections, pear and strawberries (equivalent amounts of other fruits in season may be substituted) in shallow dish. Bring juice and agar to a boil and pour over the fruit. Let set in refrigerator for at least 3 hours.

SALAD ON A SKEWER

1 cup pitted California ripe olives
30 small cubes cheddar cheese
1 very firm hed cabbage
1-2 crisp, red apples
Lemon juice
10 cherry tomatoes
1-2 tbsps. sugar
2 tbsps. vinegar
One-half tsp. salt
1 cup sour cream

Stuff holes in ripe olives with cubes of cheddar cheese. Cut cabbage across head in 1-inch slices, then cut in cubes. Cut apples in thick wedges, core, then cut in half to make chunks. Dip apples in lemon juice to prevent darkening. On 8-inch bamboo skewers, alternately thread chunks of cabbage and apple with stuffed olives. Top each skewer with a tomato. Place filled skewers in plastic bag, chill. Serve at buffet with Sweet Tart Dressing. The following will make 10 servings: Stir 1 or 2 tablespoons sugar with the vinegar and salt into the sour cream. Cover and chill.

Japanese killing consumers by product obsolescence

By ERMA BOMBECK

When are Japanese manufacturers going to give Americans a break?

They are killing consumers by instant obsolescence. How many of you have bought a camera that was the last word in technology? It fit in your shirt pocket, took bright pictures on a cloudy day, required no settings, no flash, corrected its focus light, had drop-in film, was battery driven and cost pennies to develop.

By the time you got it to the car, it was obsolete.

They were unpacking a new one that fit on your ring finger, thrived on sand and hard knocks, didn't even have to be pointed toward the subject, and the picture appeared by a three-year-old spitting on the lens.

Remember when Detroit thought they had progressed by putting lights in a car that said, "FASTEN YOUR SEAT BELT"? The Japanese brought out a car with voices that remind you your lights are on and your brake is set.

As for stereos, you have to open up the store in the morning to keep on top of it. I've seen the natural progression in our home . . . from records that chipped when they were in a draft to cassettes and tapes. Needles that went from gold to platinum. From systems that played one 45 to an entire album.

Now it seems the Japanese are making all of it history. They are bringing out a "system" featuring a special record that you can beat to death and it will play for hours. It is "digested" by a machine that has no needle . . . just a laser beam. What you do with a $3,000 record collection you already have, I don't want to think about.

For years, I've been wanting to buy a new portable typewriter. The one I have now could not be carried by an expectant mother after her second month. It weighs a ton. Week after week, I have watched the evolution of portable typewriters as they become smaller, lighter and more efficient. Last week, I heard a Japanese manufacturer tell of a new one that not only weighed "ounces," but stored up to 200 pages of material on tape.

I'm still holding out. I figure by next Wednesday they'll have one that is powered by perspiration, is programmed for humor, reaches out and tickles the readers, and is made to carry me.

If it doesn't do that, then I'll just wait until Thursday to buy it.

Rooting softwood cuttings

By TOM STEVENSON
(c) 1981, The Washington Post

Mid- to late June is one of the best times to root softwood cuttings of azaleas, roses, forsythia, privet, pyracantha, viburnum, abelia, buddleia (butterfly bush) and English ivy. Very little equipment is needed, and very little expense is involved.

A softwood cutting is one taken of new growth. It roots quicker than one of older wood, usually in 6 to 8 weeks. The older the wood, the longer it takes for it to root.

If the softwood cutting is too soft, it probably will die before roots can develop. It if snaps like a fresh string bean when you bend it, it is okay. If it is soft, rubbery and does not snap, it is not suitable.

Cuttings about 6 inches long should be taken. Put them immediately between moist newspaper to keep them from wilting. Remove the lower leaves, leaving four or five. Make a slanting, smooth cut across the base end. Then put the cutting into the rooting medium, so that the leaves are near the soil.

When the air around the cutting is moist (high humidity), the leaves give off much less moisture, and the chances of wilting are reduced. To maintain a high relative humidity, and to make frequent waterings unnecessary, use polyethylene plastic film. Plant the cuttings in pots and completely enclose the pots with plastic. No further watering of the cuttings should be necessary for several weeks.

Since the plastic is permeable to air, carbon dioxide and oxygen can flow in and out. The water vapor in the air inside the plastic is retained, because the plastic is impermeable to the vapor.

For small lots of cuttings, use clean clay pots about 6 inches in diameter, which should hold about 6 cuttings. Put some pieces of broken pot over the drainage holes to keep them from becoming stopped up.

A good mixture for rooting the cuttings is one part peat moss to one part horticultural vermiculite. Clean, washed sand can be substituted for vermiculite.

Moisten the mixture thoroughly, and then let it drain to the point that only a drop or two of water comes from a handful when squeezed tightly.

Early morning is the best time to take the cuttings. The end of the stem is used. Use a sharp knife to cut cleanly instead of crushing. Cut the stem at a 45-degree angle.

Directions for canning fruits, tomatoes

By WANDA MOUTON
Lifestyle Editor

Anyone who wants to preserve food can do so, according to Sharon Hillis, county extension agent, and Betty Ambrose, homemaking teacher at Lee High School. They instructed a food preservation seminar last week at Lee High School.

Subjects included canning vegetables and fruits, directions for making jams, jellies and preserves, and freezing and drying.

Earlier issues of The Reporter-Telegram have published tips on canning and how to process fruit. The following is a list of directions for canning some fruits and tomatoes.

Other stories will be devoted to processing methods for vegetables, recipes for jams, jellies and preserves, and best ways to freeze and dry foods.

Much of the following material is derived from booklets published by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Kerr Research and Education Department, U.S. Department of Agriculture and Jel-Ease Co.

DIRECTIONS FOR CANNING FRUITS & TOMATOES

"Use only fresh, sound, ripe fruit," advises Ms. Hillis. "And read all instructions carefully before starting to can."

APRICOTS AND PEACHES

Preparation — Wash. Peel or place fully ripe, firm fruit in wire basket or cheesecloth and dip in boiling water 2 minutes or until skins slip. Plunge into cold water quickly. Slip off skins. (It is not necessary to peel apricots). Cut into halves and remove seed. Pack according to the following methods:

One-step, Cold Pack — Pack raw fruit to one-half inch of top of jar. Cover with boiling syrup, leaving 1/2-inch space at top of jar. Close and process. Put in boiling water bath—25 minutes for pint jars and 30 minutes for quarts.

Pack raw and steam — After peeling and removing seeds, pack lightly and pile above top of plain can. Pour boiling syrup to 1 or 2 inches from top of container.

Steam No. 2 and 2 1/2 cans for 10 minutes. Close and process in boiling water bath for 30 minutes (No. 2 can) or 35 minutes (No. 2 1/2 can).

Remove containers from water bath and cool.

Hot pack method — Wash and peel peaches as directed above. Heat peaches through in hot syrup. If fruit is very juicy, you may heat it with sugar, adding no liquid. Pack fruit to one-half inch of jar top or to 1/4 inch of can top. Cover with boiling iquid leaving 1/2 inch space at the top of jar or fill can to the top with liquid. Adjust jar lids or seal cans. Close and Process 20 minutes for pint jars, 25 milnutes for quart jars, 25 minutes for No. 2 cans and 30 minutes for No. 2 1/2 cans, all in boiling water bath.

BERRIES (EXCEPT STRAWBERRIES)

Preparation — Wash berries and drain well. Cap. Discard soft ormoldy berries Crush smaller, imprfect berries for juice. Add sugar to juice and bring to a boil. Pack according to one of the following methods:

One-step, cold pack — Fill jars to 1/2 inch of top with prepared berries. Shake while filling for a full pack. Cover with boiling syrup, leaving 1/2-inch space at top of jar.

Close and process in boiling water bath at 10 minutes for pints and 15 minutes for quarts. Remove from water bath and cool.

Pack raw and steam — After cleaning and sorting berries pack berries tightly and pile above top of R-enameled can. Pour boiling syrup over berries to 2 inches from top of contalner.

Steam No. 2 and No. 2 1/2 cans for 10 minutes. Close and Process in booiling water bath for 15 minutes in No. 2 cans and 20 minutes in No. 2 1/2 cans. Remove containers from water bath and cool.

FIGS

Preparation — Wash and sort figs. Cover with boiling water and let simmer 5 minutes DRain.

Hot Pack— Pack within 1/2 inch of the top of the jar. Use heavy syrup. Pour boling syrup to 1/2 inch of top of jar. For flavor, add 1 teaspoon lemon juice and one thin slice of fresh lemon to pints, two teaspoons lemon juice and one slice of lemon to quarts. Close and process containuers for 85 minutes in pints and 95 minutes in quarts Remove containers from water bath and cool.

FRUIT JUICE
(Plum, berry, cherry, grape or blends of these)

Preparation — Wash fruit. Crush and heat to simmering. Extract juicae. Add 1/2 to 2 cups sugar to a gallon of juice according to taste. Add no sugar to juie which is to be used later for making jelly. Heat again to simmering.

Hot pack — Pour into hot, clean jar to 1/2 inch of top or 1/4 inch of top of R-enamel can. Close and process in boiling water bath for 5 minutes in pints and quarts, and in No. 2 and No. 2 1/2 cans. Remove containers from water bath and cool.

PEARS

Preparation — Can only ripe mellow pears Gather Kieffer pears when they becom e slightly yellow. Wrap in paper and allow to mellow. This may required 2 to 3 weeks. Summer pears may be canned after ripening on ree. Wash pears. Peel, cut in halves and core. Pack according to one ofthe following methods.

One-step, cold pack — Pack raw fruit to 1/2 inch of top of jar. Cover with boiling syrup, leaving 1/2-inch space at top of jar. Close and process in boiling water bath for 25 minutes in pints and 30 minutes in quarts. Remove containers from wath and col.

Pack raw and steam — After cleaning and cutting, pck tightly and pile above top of plain can. Pour boiling syrup to 1 inch from top of container. Steam No. 2 cans for 10 m inutes and Steam No. 2 1/2 cans for 15 minutes. Close and process in boiling water bath for 20 minutes in pints, 30 minutes in quarts and No. 2 cans and 35 minutes in No. 2 1/2 cans. Remove containers from water bath and cool.

PLUMS

Preparation. Wash plums. To can whole, prick skin of each plum with needle to prevent bursting. Frestone varieties may be halved and pitted. Pack according to one of the following methods.

One-step, cold pack — Pack raw fruit to 1/2 inch of top of jar. Cover with boiling syrup, leaving 1/2 inch space at top.

Close and process in boiling water bath for 20 minutes in pints and 25 minutes in quarts. Remove containers from water bath and cool.

Pack raw and steam — Wash and prepare plums as directed above. Pack tightly and pile above top of R-enamel can. Pour boiling syrup to 1 or 2 inches from top of container.

Steam No. 2 and No. 2 1/2 cans for 10 minutes. Close and process in boiling water bath for 15 minutes for No. 2 cans and 20 minutes for No. 2 1/2 cans.

Hot Pack — Wash and prepare plums as directed above. Heat to boiling in syrup or juice. If fruit is very juicy, you may heat it with sugar, adding no liquid. Pack hot fruit to 1/2 inch of jar top or 1/4 inch of can top. Cover with boiling liquid leaving 1/2 inch space at top of jar or fill can to top. Steam can 10 minutes and seal.

Process in boiling water bath: 20 minutes (pints), 25 minutes (quarts), 15 minutes (No. 2 cans), 20 minutes (No. 2 1/2 cans).

TOMATOES

Preparation — Wash and sort fresh, firm, vine-ripened tomatoes. Put in wire bsket or thin cheesecloth bag. Dip in boiling water 1/2 minute or until skins crack. Plunge into cold water immediately. Remove core and skins. Leave hole or cut in halves or quarters. Add 1/2 teaspoon salt to each pint or No. 2 cand and 1 teaspoon salt to each quart or No. 2 1/2 can. Pack according to one of the following methods:

One step, cold pack — Pack tomatoes to 1/2 inch of top of jar, pressing gently to fill spaces. Add no water.

Close and process in boiling water bath for 35 minutes in pints and 45 minutes in quarts. Remove containers from water bath and cool.

Pack raw and steam — Wash and prpare tomatoes as directed above. Pack in plain can. Press together s that juice will cover solid pieces. If whole canned tomatoes are desired, pack slightly above top of container. Pour hot tomato juice to 2 inches from top of container. Steam No. 2 and 2 1/2 cans for 15 minutes. Close and proess in boiling water bath for 35 minutes for No. 2 cans and 55 minutes for No. 2 1/2 cans. Remove containers from water bath and cool.

TOMATO JUICE

Preparation — Wash well-ripened tomatoes. Cut away any bruised or green portions. Quarter. If seprosieve is available, put tomatoes through it without heating. Otherwise, simmer 10 minutes in covered pan (without adding water) and press through a fine strainer or cheesecloth. Heat juice to simmering in a covered pan. Add 1/2 teaspoon salt to a pint or No. 2 can and 1 teaspoon salt to a quart or No. 2 1/2 can.

Hot Pack — Pour simmering juice into glass jar to 1/2 inch of top or 1/4 inch of top of plain can. Close and process in boiling water bath for 10 minutes in pints and quarts and 15 minutes in No. 2 and No. 2 1/2 cans.

Remove containers from water bath and cool.

He has an acne problem

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Copley News Service

Dear Shirley: I am a 17-year-old boy but I am not dating any girls because I am afraid to ask a girl to go out with me. I think they would turn me down because I look so bad.

I have acne and I would do just about anything to get rid of it. My Mom says not to worry about it because it will go away when I get older and it is too expensive to go to a doctor.

I want to ask a certain girl to the prom, which is coming up soon. Is there any kind of diet that would help me? I read your column all the time and I hope to hear from you becaue I am really desperate. — J.T.

Dear J.T.: I understand and sympathize with your predicament.

Several years ago it was thought that chocolate, carbonated beverages, shellfish, iodides and french fries aggravated acne.

Today, it is generally accepted that it is due to increased hormone production in sebaceous glands during adolescence.

Medical therapy will help more than anything, and I hope you will see a dermatologist as soon as possible. Why don't you get get a job to pay for your own care? Tell your Mom acne may not disappear by itself, and it can leave permanent scars.

THE BUTCHER

The meatman's mail bag

By MERLE ELLIS

We speak of varied things today, for it's mail bag day.

Q: "What I would like to know is what has happened to brains? I love them. No market seems to have them anymore and the butchers can't give me an answer that I can understand. They are so delicious and I'm sure you agree. I am a senior citizen and was always able to buy them for years. What do they do with them today?"

A: I do agree. They are delicious. Unfortunately, there seem to be too few of us these days who think so. Many markets simply do not handle brains — or a variety of other wonderfully good "variety meats," such as beef heart, pork heart, tongues and tripe — because they have a hard time selling them.

I have worked in many markets over the years where much of what came in on Monday went into the bone barrel before the week was out. At today's prices, no market can afford to throw anything in the bone barrel.

Also, many of the variety meats that used to be available are now being exported to Europe and the Orient where, it seems, people have not forgotten how good they can be. I'm sure there is, however, a market or two in your neighborhood that still stocks brains — or will order some for you. Don't give up. If enough people ask for them, you can be sure the butcher will have them in his meat case on a regular basis.

Q: "Boneless chicken breasts cost a fortune, but the ones I buy with the bone left in have so much bone I end up throwing out at least half of what I paid for. Which do you think is the best buy?"

A: Neither! As you pointed out, boneless chicken breasts cost a fortune. And, the chicken breasts that the butcher sells with the bone in have half the back and the breast bone left on them. Most butchers haven't cut up a chicken with a knife since the advent of th electric saw. It is virtually impossible to bone out a chicken breast the way they are cut today without an excessive amount of expensive waste.

The best and most economical way to get boneless chicken breast is to buy the whole chicken — cut it up and bone out the breast yourself. It's much easier to bone out the breast of a bird that you have cut the right way — with a knife — than to bone out the ones the butcher has cut on an electric saw. The legs, wings and back pieces can be used for soups, salads, curries and casseroles, and you'll get beautiful boneless breast pieces at a far better price.

If cutting up a chicken and boning out the breast sounds like more work than it's worth, believe me, it is not. Send a legal sized (9 1/2 by 4 1/4 inch) self-addressed stamped envelope to "Chicken," P.O. Box 907, Tiburon, CA 94920, and I'll send you simple illustrated instructions for doing both.

Q: "What is the best beef to use for boiling? I have been on a special diet for years and have used a lot of bouillon cubes to cook vegetables. Now I have been told no more salt, so I will have to start making my own beef broth. I would like to know which cut to use. I hope to use the meat sliced cold for sandwiches."

A: There are several good cuts to use for boiling. Beef shank is marvelous for making broth. It has a rich, beefy flavor and a good deal of connective tissue that gives the broth a good body, but it doesn't slice too well when you're finished — it falls apart.

Probably the best cut for boiling and slicing would be the brisket of beef. Like the shank, it has a lot of connective tissue to make a good rich broth, but it holds together better and slices beautifully when cold.

When you make boiled beef, however, don't boil it — simmer it. Bring to a boil enough water to cover the meat. Put the meat in and when it comes to a boil the second time, turn down the heat to a gentle simmer and cook until done. The flavor of both the broth and the meat will be improved if you let the meat cool in its own liquid.

Q: "Please! If it would not be unethical, I would appreciate your advice on a good brand of sharp knives. I have wasted more money buying "sharp" knives that will not cut butter."

A: There are several brands of good knives available today. Wusthof, Henckels, Sabatier (at least some of the 15 different companies that carry the name), F. Dick, Forshner and Wenger are just a few of the many companies that make quality cutlery. Most good department stores and kitchen equipment stores have more than one quality line of cutlery in stock.

The knives that I have used for years, and that my father used before me, were, until recently, not readily available to the average consumer. The Russell Harrington Company has been making knives for professional butchers and cooks since 1818, but they were sold only through restaurant and butcher supply stores. However, they have a new line on the market that is now, or soon will be, available in most stores that handle quality cutlery.

The line is called "Connoisseur" and they are among the finest knives I have ever held in my hand. They are also, because they are made in the United States, priced a little more reasonably than most of the comparable, imported European cutlery.

Whatever knife you choose, don't expect it to stay sharp forever. You have to keep it sharp.

They are a bit too lengthy to include here, but if yu would like illustrated instructions on sharpening a knife, drop me a line. Send a legal sized (9 1/2 by 4 1/4 inch) self-addressed stamped envelope to "Sharp Knives," P.O. Box 907, Tiburon, CA 94920.

Save 20¢ on Lipton Family Size Tea Bags.
And get $1.00 in refund coupons good on future purchases of Lipton® and Imperial®.

Use these coupons now to save on Lipton Family Size Flo-Thru Tea Bags and quick-dissolving Imperial Pure Cane Sugar. And look for the $1.00 refund certificate on backs of specially marked 5-lb. bags of Imperial Pure Cane Sugar.

Sun Tea is a good, old-fashioned way to prepare iced tea outdoors by naturally letting the sun brew the tea. As it never boils, it has a deliciously unique taste and a clear, non-cloudy color. It's easy to make. Just follow these simple directions.

1. Put three (3) Lipton Family Size Tea Bags in a gallon jar and fill with cold water.
2. Set outside in the sun for 3 to 4 hours.
3. Serve over ice.
4. Sweeten to taste with quick-dissolving Imperial Pure Cane Sugar.

Notes:

- Vary the number of tea bags and the duration of brewing according to the tea strength you like.
- If desired, you may substitute nine (9) regular cup-size bags.
- Spice up your Sun Tea with Lipton flavored tea bags. Just add three (3) Lipton flavored tea bags when brewing your Lipton Sun Tea. Adds a delicious twist of flavor so simply.

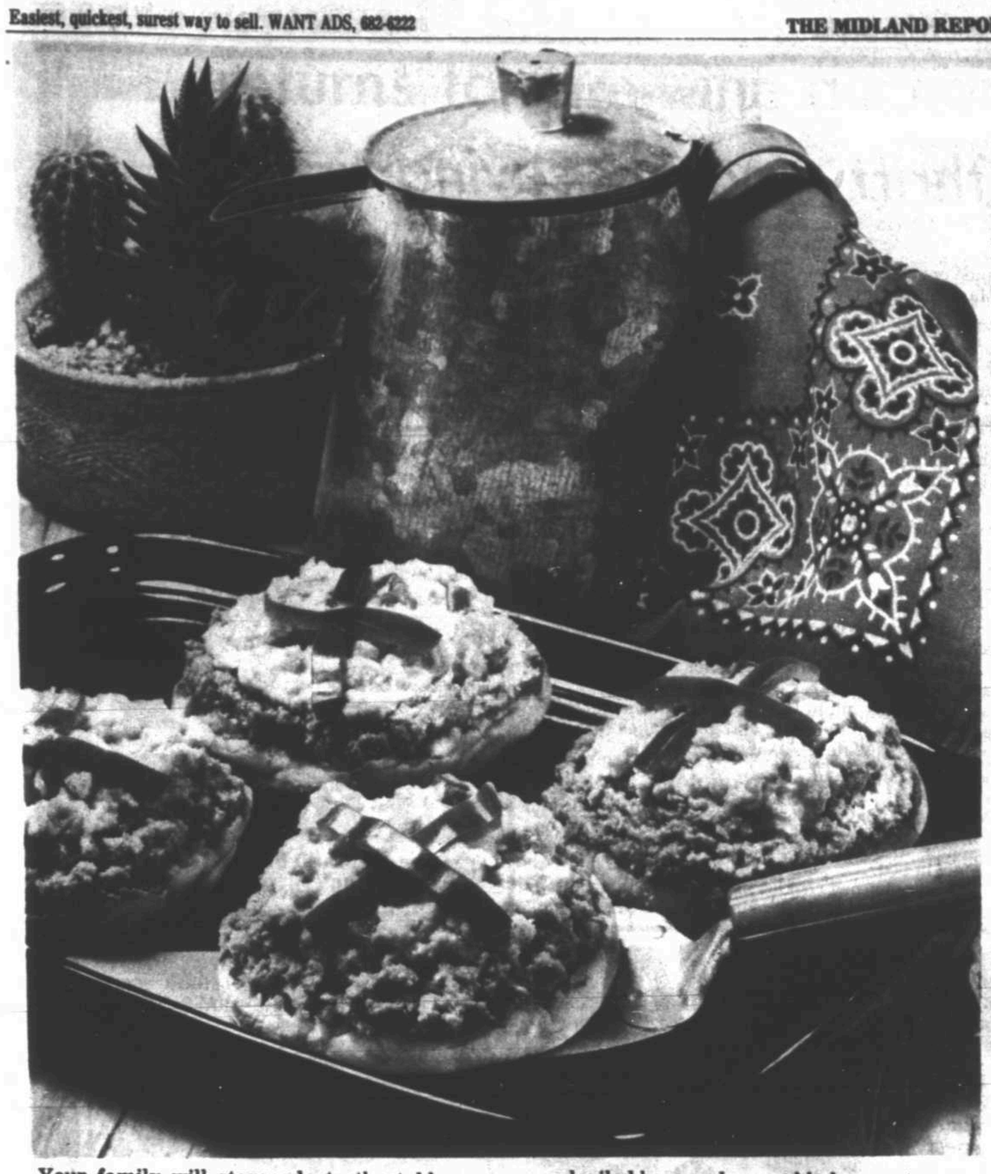
Brunch-wiches create excitement for those at-home family meals



Your family will stampede to the table when you serve zesty Cowboy Brunch-wich — deviled ham and scrambled eggs atop an English muffin!

It's the weekend. You'd like to make a special, good-tasting meal for your family, without going to a lot of expense and effort.

A good idea is to make a brunch — the between breakfast and lunch repast that's becoming so popular. An even better idea is to serve brunch-wiches. Brunch-wiches feature toasted English muffins, with meat spreads and eggs and any of a variety of toppings. An interesting way to perk up family meals, these hearty dishes capture all the excitement of dining out, with the coziness and economy of eating at home. And since brunch-wiches rely on the kinds of foods you keep on hand, they can be easily made in a juffy.

The secret to the heartiness of these dishes is the canned meat spread that lends natural moistness and meatiness — all at modest cost to boot!

Corral your loved ones together with a brunch starring Cowboy Brunch-wich. This zesty eye-opener combines deviled ham with scrambled eggs, colorfully garnished with green pepper.

For another crowd-pleasing favorite, serve Chili Brunch-wich. It's a refreshing twist on the popular Mexican recipe. Our version includes roast beef spread on an English muffin, capped with a blend of scrambled eggs, tomatoes and cheese for South of the Border flair!

COWBOY BRUNCH-WICH

¼ cup butter or margarine
1 large green pepper, chop ⅔ cup, slice remainder
8 eggs, lightly beaten
½ cup catsup
2 cans (4½-ounces each) deviled ham
4 English muffins, split, toasted

In medium skillet, melt butter; saute ⅔ cup green pepper until crisp-tender. In medium bowl, combine eggs, catsup and deviled ham; add to skillet. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until eggs are set. Spoon scrambled egg mixture on each muffin half. Garnish with green pepper strips.
Yield: 4 servings.

CHILI BRUNCH-WICH

2 tblsp. butter or margarine
½ cup chopped onion
1 can (16-ounces) tomatoes, drained, cut in pieces
¼ cup chopped, canned, green chilies
8 eggs, lightly beaten
½ cup shredded Muenster cheese
2 cans (4¾-ounces each) roast beef spread
4 English muffins, split, toasted
2 tblsp. chopped parsley

In medium skillet, melt butter; saute onion until soft. Add tomatoes and chilies; cook 3 minutes. Combine eggs and cheese; stir into tomato mixture. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until eggs are set. Spread roast beef spread on muffin halves. Spoon egg mixture over beef spread. Sprinkle with chopped parsley.
Yield: 4 servings.

Voices comfort kids

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Tape recordings by parents seem to be a comfort to hospitalized children, according to Gail McCain, instructor in Nursing at the University of Rochester School of Nursing and clinical specialist in pediatrics at the university's Strong Memorial Hospital.

Miss McCain reports that in a study the children, all between age 4 and 8, asked again and again to hear the tapes, played at the "lonely" times, just after awakening in the morning and again at naptime. They seemed to suffer less "separation anxiety," thanks to hearing their parents' voices, she said.

India to boost rubber

India, the fifth-largest natural rubber producer — after Malaysia, Indonesia, Thailand and Sri Lanka — is not an exporter. It consumes its entire domestic output of about 140,000 tons a year. A new plan would step up production enoughto allow exports by 1990.

Fresh apricots go gourmet

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

No doubt about it. Many Americans are cooking differently from the way they once did. One example: nowadays cooks are often interested in the alluring desserts that may be concocted with poached fresh fruit.

MERINGUE-TOP FRESH APRICOTS

6-ounce can frozen concentrated pineapple juice, undiluted
2 tablespoons regular orange juice
8 fresh ripe apricots, each about the size of a large egg
2 large egg whites
¼ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon almond extract

In a 10-inch skillet (preferably with a heatproof handle), over medium low heat, heat the pineapple juice and the orange juice until the mixture begins to boil. Reduce heat to low.

Halve apricots and pit. Arrange apricots, cut sides down, in the pineapple mixture. Cover skillet and cook gently for a few minutes. Turn apricots and continue to cook gently, uncovered, until they are just tender but still hold their shape — about 2 minutes. (The cooking time will depend on the ripeness of the fruit.)

If the skillet you have used does not have a heatproof handle, carefully spoon the apricot halves, cut side up, into a baking dish (about 10 by 6 by 2 inches) so they are in a single layer. Pour the pineapple mixture from the skillet around the apricots.

In a small deep bowl with an electric beater at high speed, beat the egg whites until foamy. Gradually beat in the sugar until stiff glossy peaks form. Beat in the almond extract. Spoon the meringue into the apricot cavities. Or, spoon the meringue into a pastry bag fitted with a star tube and pipe the meringue into the apricot cavities.

Bake in a preheated 500-degree oven just until the meringue is set and some tips are pale gold — 1 to 2 minutes. Serve warm or chilled.

Makes 4 servings — 2 meringue-top apricots per portion.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Nifty, thrifty money saving tips

DEAR HELOISE:

When you bring home a bunch of celery, cut off the top of the bunch where the leaves begin and add to meat loaves, salads, etc. Use the stalks for stuffing and munching.

Dandelions are not a total curse. Clean the tender, smaller leaves under running water and snip them into tossed salads. A few mint leaves are a tasty surprise in salads too.

Don't let your produce man discard your beet greens. Steamed and served with butter and lemon juice they are delicious. Break them up and add to a green salad and they are as good as raw spinach.

Small new pea pods may be snipped and added to salads too.

In other words, to conserve the folding green stuff, don't throw away the edible green! — Mrs. Robert Hargreaves

+ + +

You're a gal after my own heart. Mix it all together, call it salad and I'll eat it! — Hugs, Heloise

TRAVEL TIP

Dear Heloise: Whenever we go on a trip and it takes a day or two to reach our destination, I pack a large dress box with a change of clothes for each member of the family for each day on the road.

This way the suitcases don't have to be unloaded and unpacked until we reach our final destination. — Mary Prudhomme

FOAM TRAYS

Dear Heloise: To use old foam vegetable packing trays to advantage, I like to put deviled eggs on them when taking them on a picnic or luncheon.

I place the eggs on the tray, stick a toothpick through each egg and into the foam tray. They are then covered with plastic wrap.

The eggs don't slide around since they are secured to the foam with the toothpicks. When serving, the eggs can be picked up with the toothpick (if tilted slightly) and you'll have a toothpick when the meal is over. — Teresa Lassek

SCRAPBOOK IDEA

Dear Heloise: Whenever I buy a new scrapbook, I also purchase a pair of portfolio rings.

I remove the cord from the holes in the scrapbook and insert the rings.

This enables me to lay the pages down flat when pasting items in the book, and also makes for much easier viewing later. — Aubrey Marshall

HOMEBAKED GOODIES

Dear Heloise: When my children were small and the freezer was low on homebaked goodies, I set one evening aside for baking after the children were safely in bed.

No more burned cookies and no more distractions so that I forgot whether or not I had added baking powder, etc. because a small crisis had arisen.

Oh yes! I always saved a small bowl of cookie dough so the next day the small ones had a bake-out of their own right in the small toaster oven (with Mom's close supervision).

I was much more relaxed and they enjoyed the day after my baking day. — Mrs. Ralph Taylor

Change of habits

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Copley News Service

Dear Shirley: I am fat, but not because I eat much. I never eat a whole meal, I just snack all the time.

How can I get so fat that way? I even sleep late, so I don't eat breakfast. I usually stay up to watch the late-night movies because they are just about the only entertainment I have.

I don't have much energy to do anything. I feel lazy most of the time, although I am not sick. My children are grown and gone,and I have been a widow for seven years.

I am 5 foot 4 and weigh 192 pounds. More than I have ever weighed in my life.

I take vitamins every day, and don't eat much. How come I am fat? What am I doing wrong? — E.L.C.

Dear E.L.C.: You probably are another victim of the dumb-habit list. Many people get into bad habits without realizing what they are doing to themselves.

Your body cannot help but reflect the way you treat it. I am not surprised that you are overweight and lack energy, since you almost totally disregard your diet and lead a very inactive and undisciplined existence. What else would you expect?

Here is the dumb-habit list.If you are guilty of any of these your body will show it.

1. No regular meal times.
2. No regular exercise.
3. Shop only when hungry or when food runs out.
4. Buy snack-type food only, that needs no preparation, but tastes good. These are usually high in fat, sugar, salt and calories.
5. Go to bed late, sleep late in morning every day.
6. Eat late at night and go to bed wth full stomach.
7. Keep coffee pot going all day and most of the night.
8. Stand up to eat — never sit to enjoy a meal.
9. Grab any available food when hungry. Eat until full, with no thought of quantities taken.
10. Feel sorry for self and bored but make no effort to help or contact others.
11. Have a "sweet tooth" that is always first to be satisfied.
12. Always late and get behind in even trivial chores. This causes nervousness, which is relieved by eating, usually something sweet.

The results of the dumb-habit list are overweight, lethargy, depression, accelerated aging, and sometimes illness. If you change the dumb habits, you can change your life. It's up to you.

Weight problems? For information on my million-dollar diet program send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Shirley Bright Boody, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper.

Sanity returns to rare-wine auction

By NATHAN CHROMAN
(c) 1981, The Los Angeles Times

NEW ORLEANS — Sanity and dignity have been restored at Heublein's recent rare-wine auction here. No carnavalistic hoopla or publicity-seeking dramatics marked the $567,702 sale of wines, the second highest total in the auction's 13-year history.

In earlier years, network television brought high bidders into the national limelight after hectic bidding drove ancient bottle prices soaring to limits like $31,000 for a single bottle of wine in 1980. The highest price paid this year was $8,800 for four Bouchard 1865 Burgundies, Beaune Premiere, Chambertin, Closs Vougeot and Volnay Santenots.

Not exactly cheap, but at least the wines were not tired, lifeless relics. Each offered a decent taste of Burgundy, especially the Volnay Santenots which consistenlty showed well both times I tried it. While I would be hard pressed to pay $2,200 for a single bottle, I could understand the desire and justification of a Burgundy fan to acquire them. A New Orleans wine buddy purchased the 1864 Beaune, Clos de la Mousse, for $700 and I immediately offered $50 for a taste upon uncorking. Perhaps that is the way to enjoy old, expensive bottles; that is, by the sharing of the cost of a high bid.

Prices on the whole at the auction were hard to understand. Most were high but there were glimpses of common sense bidding such as 1978 Chablis, Premier Cru, Bouchard at $110 per case. That price is getting close to current market value and may indeed be an indication of future, more sophisticated wine bidding practices. Six bottles of Le Corton 1928 sold at $780 while a like number of Pommard, Rugiens 1929 sold for $1,000.

Old Madeira, Abudarham Bual, Frasqueira Soares Franco, 1820 sold for $370 along with Abudarham Estreito 1833 from the same firm for $420.

Difficult to fathom were the high prices for unreleased Inglenook Cabernet Sauvignon of 1980 Cask Reserve — 43, purchased in several lots for as high as $240 for six bottles. While the wines may be good, opening release prices in mid-1983 will be nowhere near $40 to $50 per bottle. This also applies for Inglenook, Cabinet Port, 1979 at $270 per case of 12 bottles and Charbono 1978 at $230 per case.

California wines in general sold for premium prices although they were limited principally to Inglenook and Beaulieu Vineyards, properties of Heublein. An Inglenook Zinfandel "ancient" 1891 sold for the highest price yet for a California bottle, $1,150, followed by Pinot Noir 1892 at $1,050.

Relatively youthful wines sold at high prices, too, such as six bottles of 1949 Cabernet at $1,200. Other Inglenook Cabernet sales were in six bottle lots, 1958 — $440; Cask Reserve J-6, 1959 — $520; and 1963 — $250.

Beaulieu Cabernets did well, too, especially Private Reserve which sold in 12 bottle lots, 1964 — $920; 1966 — $850; 1968 — $1,250; 1970 — $950; and 1974 — $540.

Currently available BV wines such as 1976 Los Garneros Pinot Noir sold for $230 per case of 12; Pinot Chardonnay 1979 — $200; and Muscat Blanc 1978 at $210.

Two of my California favorites, Angelica and Port 1875, Isaias W. Hellman went for $500 and $480, respectively, for A&W bottle lot. Well worth the money considering the vigorous superb tastes of both — truly collectors' items.

An annual criticism of the auction is that a broad variety of California wines is not offered. Heublein understandably wants to promote their own properties, yet I have been assured by several company representatives that discussions are currently under way to consider a greater inventory. That has been said before, but I am inclined to believe that now it will be done because of intense national interest in older stocks of California wines. If the auction is going to maintain its national character, no doubt Heublein (legal constraints permitting) will have to act accordingly.

DEAR ABBY

Little lady wants own place

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: The mother of a friend is a lovely lady of 82. She is sweet, gentle, alert and is not ailing physically. She takes turns living with her children, who love her dearly, but she is very unhappy.

She feels that she is "in the way," but whenever she mentions going to a retirement home, her children insist that elderly parents belong with their families, not in "institutions with strangers."

The little lady appreciates everything her children do for her, but says she wants a place of her own, however tiny. She wants to feel independent.

Her children are well-to-do and could afford to keep her in a very nice retirement home, but they refuse to consider it.

Please comment, Abby. The elderly lady says her children read your column. — A FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: Aging parents who are in good health and able to look after themselves "belong" where they WANT to be, if they have a choice. With most, independence means survival.

DEAR ABBY: Paul and I have been living together for two years and we're very happy. We have no intention of marrying because we both feel that we don't need a piece of paper to prove we love each other. We plan on being together for the rest of our lives, but we realize we could break up anytime.

I have three children from a previous marriage who live with us, and they are the problem. Paul's parents have accepted me, but they have never accepted my children. I am invited to all the family gatherings, but my children are excluded. If I refused to go, Paul wouldn't go either, and I don't want to be the cause of any arguments between Paul and his parents.

How can I make these people accept my children? Please don't say that Paul should speak to them. I've asked him to, but he finds one excuse after another and keeps asking me to give his parents more time. Well, I think two years is long enough, and I'm tired of having my children ignored and hurt. I can't handle it any longer. What do you suggest? — DISGUSTED WITH PAUL'S PARENTS

DEAR DISGUSTED: Paul's spineless attitude doesn't say much for Paul, so you will have to decide whether to continue having your children ignored and hurt, or insist that they be treated as part of your family. Paul's parents are obviously trying to discourage the relationship between you and Paul by ignoring your children. If he permits it, he is choosing his parents over you; if you permit it, you are choosing Paul over your children.

DEAR ABBY: Norma married George. George's sister Emma married Pete. George and Pete are brothers-in-law.

What is the relationship between Norma and Pete? Is Pete Norma's brother-in-law?

Please settle the argument. — C.S. IN LA MARQUE, TEXAS

DEAR C. S.: Yes. A brother-in-law is:

1) the brother of one's spouse;
2) the husband of one's sister;
3) the husband of one's spouse's sister.

(Do you wish you had more friends? Get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (35 cents) envelope to: Abby, Popularity, 2060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.)

Here's the answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — After my toilet is flushed, water keeps running into the bowl, not too much, but enough to be wasting money. Besides, it is annoying to the ear. I took the porcelain top off the tank in back of the bowl. There is a wire guide that places the flush ball over the opening at the bottom of the tank. It does not appear to be set evenly and water is seeping under it. How do I properly align the ball over the opening? I do not want to touch anything until I know what I am doing?

A. — Turn off the shut-off valve, usually under the tank at the left side. o do so, urn it clockwise. If there is no valve, which is sometimes the case in older houses, and you don't know where it is in the basement or utility room, hold up the horizontal rod in the tank with a piece of string attached to something higher than the tank. Or use any method you want to keep that rod upward so that water does not flow into the tank while you are working there.

When the noise of running water has stopped, loosen the screw that keeps the guide tightly attached to the vertical overflow tube. Rub steel wool around the inside of the valve seat at the bottom to clean off any rust or grit. Place the flush ball on the valve seat so that no water runs into the bowl. When it is set perfectly, tighten the guide screw.

Flush the toilet a few times to be sure no water is dripping into the bowl. In some cases, you may have to loosen and then retighten the screw until the ball sets properly. When it does and everything is working, turn on the water and replace the tank top. Be very careful when putting back the tank top. If it falls on the hard bathroom floor, it most certainly will break.

Q. — The cold water pipes in our house run across the basement floor. At certain times during the year, there is a constant dripping from these pipes which forms puddles on the basement floor. What can we do to stop this dripping?

A. — When water forms on the outside of cold water pipes, wherever they may be located in the house, it is condensation. This is caused by warm, moist air hitting the cool metal surfaces of the pipes. The best way to prevent this condensation, other than getting rid of the moist air, is by wrapping the pipes with coverings made especially for this purpose.

Hardware stores, lumber yards and home centers are among the establishments selling these coverings. They vary in price, depending on what they are made of and how easy they are to apply. Some are wound around the pipes and some are merely placed on the pipes and sealed at the joints. Since the materials do not get cold, there is no condensation when the moist air hits them and, consequently, there will be no dripping.

Garrett may lead U.S. negotiating team on whaling

By BILL STALL
The Hartford Courant

WASHINGTON — After a long bureaucratic delay, the Reagan administration apparently has decided to nominate an ardent conservationist to lead the U.S. delegation to the annual meeting of the International Whaling Commission in Brighton, England, next month.

He is Thomas Garrett, a former staff member of Friends of the Earth and a member of the U.S. delegation to the whaling commission since 1971.

The office of Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldridge said that Baldridge had proposed to the president that Garrett lead the American negotiating team as acting U.S. commissioner, but that no decision had been made on selection of a permanent commissioner.

Although Secretary of the Interior James G. Watt has battled with environmentalists on many issues, Garrett has received the outspoken support of the secretary.

Watt wrote to Baldridge and Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. on May 8 with a glowing endorsement of Garrett.

"Tom Garrett is a distinguished conservationist and I wholeheartedly recommend his appointment as U.S. Whaling Commissioner," Watt said in his letter.

Under the law, the president makes the nomination on the basis of recommendations from the secretaries of commerce and state, in consultation with the secretary of interior. Traditionally, the head of the U.S. delegation is the administrator of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, a Commerce Department agency.

This year, however, the new administrator for that agency, John Byrne, was not confirmed by the Senate until June 10 and has not yet been sworn in, making his attendance at the whaling commission meeting out of the question.

Garrett, who strongly favors a worldwide ban on the killing of whales for commercial purposes, had the support of a number of conservation groups to be leader of the U.S. delegation. The commission last year set a commercial whale kill quota of 13,851. Proposals, supported by the United States, for a total commercial moratorium were defeated.

There was some opposition to Garrett within the Department of Commmerce because of the tradition that the NOAA administrator lead the delegation, while others feared that his credentials were not politically compatible with the administration. Some NOAA officials, however, were dismayed at the delay because of the likely impact it would have on American efforts at Brighton to get a commercial whaling ban.

New criminal shows no remorse, fear

By JANE GLENN HAAS
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — He's between 18 and 25 years old, poor and undereducated. He lives in his own culture, a world of have-nots, of guys hanging around with nothing to do.

The only human beings he gives a damn about are himself and the guys he runs with. Everyone else is his prey. He robs and rapes, hurts and murders neighbor and stranger alike.

He does it all as easily as swatting a fly.

Increasingly, this is the public perception of the new wave criminal: The guy who is violent without reason.

And, in recent months, courts and prisons are seeing more of him.

Today in California prisons, the average male prisoner is 28.5 years old. In 1968 the average age was 32. Now, more than one-third of the prisoners are under 25.

Of those in prison, 61 percent are minorities, 23.5 percent Hispanic, 35.1 percent black and 2 percent other minorities.

The proportion of minorities in the prisoner population has been steadily increasing. In 1968, minorities were only 45 percent of the total inmate population.

And now there is a dramatic increase in the violent crimes for which they are imprisoned.

The California Department of Corrections reports 15,000 of the 24,500 currently in prison are there for crimes of homicide, assault, robbery and rape. Eleven years ago when the prison population was at a high of 28,000, only 10,500 were convicted of violent crimes.

"With few exceptions, persons sent to state prison have committed serious crimes or have long prior records of criminal conduct. A large proportion have committed violent crimes," says the Department of Corrections report.

Defense attorneys, prosecutors and prison officials agree violent criminals are getting younger.

They are seeing young men who come from broken homes. Too many, they say, have slipped through an "easy" juvenile justice system. Some are living a drug-high lifestyle.

Many simply may not be deterred by a system of punishment designed by those with traditional, middle-class values.

Leisla M. Howell has been a psychologist at California Institute for Men at Chino for 20 years. She's seen some men return time and time again.

And, she points out, too many times people look at the criminal within the framework of how they expect others to act.

"But it isn't that way for a lot of people. There are people put together with the type of personality structure that simply does not include a conscience."

Defense attorneys say they are baffled — and frightened — by the growth in the number of clients who lack any conscience.

"This guy is committing a street robbery, for example, and there's no reason to finish it off with a killing, but he does it anyway," says defense attorney John Cheroske.

"He has no fear, no concern, no respect for human life. I don't know the answer to the problem, but it's scaring the living hell out of me."

Cheroske says many of the young criminals show no fear of punishment.

"I had a death penalty case and my guy was acquitted. He showed no emotion. I said, 'Do you understand you get to go home tonight? Do you have anything to say to me?' And he said, 'When do I get back the jewelry the police took from me.' That was the total impact of the case on him.

"It's like we said to this guy, 'We're going to hit you in the face with a cherry pie.'

"People on the streets are actually dying and this should have some effect on him, but it doesn't make any difference. It's just, 'Get me my parole and let me go home.'"

Cheroske is among some defense attorneys who are starting to turn down cases because of the attitude of some defendants.

"These people have no remorse," says defense attorney Peter N. Priamos. "Killing to them is like swatting a fly. It comes, I think, from a breakdown in the family unit and from this emphasis on sex in everything we do."

Los Angeles County District Attorney John Van de Kamp has tracked an increase in violent crimes by unemployed blacks.

"There is a black rage among the young people and a corresponding increase in social disturbances in the black community," he says.

Bill Hoston, a black newspaper publisher in the Crenshaw area who is working with state Sen. Diane Watson on legislation to aid crime victims, said:

"I think that segregation has gone on so long that some black people have got to the point whites were at many years ago. They hate white people.

"They hate everything. They hate themselves. They hate failure (because) everything in our society is to be the best," Hoston said.

"It goes back to the basics of racism. That's one reason crime is where it's at today and will continue to grow in the '80s."

Howell says some violent criminals "may be from families where there's not enough to go around."

Mack's relief job saves 11-7 win for Cubs

Cubs' Craig Kornfeld, limbering up before game, delivers deciding two-run single as Midland clips Gold Sox.

BY TED BATTLES

Henry Mack didn't exactly have a third season with Midland in the Texas League in mind when he reported to spring training at Mesa, Ariz., this spring, but, then, neither did he count on the misfortunes that have befallen him this year.

As a result, coming in to pitch four innings in saving an 11-7 victory for Randy Clark had to be an accomplishment of sorts for the Winchester, Ky., rifle. At least, he didn't break, pull or lose anything.

Craig Kornfeld's two-out two-run single in the fifth, capping a five-run burst provided the winning margin, as it turned out, but mighty Joe Carter's triple in the eighth that led to a run and solo homers in the ninth by Javier Fierro and Fritz Connally provided Mack with some insurance down the stretch.

AMARILLO made it close with three runs in the sixth when Clark, who has pitched better in defeat than he did in beating the Sox, walked Ron Tingley and Aaron Cain to lead off the sixth. The Cubs were leading 8-4 at the time, but Manager George Enright remembered what had happened the night before, when Amarillo scored eight in the ninth to wipe out an 8-5 Midland lead for a 13-8 win, and summoned long relief man Mack.

Henry got one out, but then Jeff Pyburn took a fast ball over the left field fence to make it an uncomfortable 8-7 game with more than three innings left.

However, it was the only mistake Mack made in blanking the Gold Sox the rest of the way.

THAT GIVES Midland a 2-1 edge in the six-game series going into tonight's 7:30 p.m. Chamber of Commerce giveaway gala at Cubs Stadium.

Mack was ticketed for Iowa this season, but had to have a knee scraped for the third time in his career and that set him back for a while. He got in a couple of weeks at Iowa when a pulled groin muscle sent him to Sarasota, Fla., for rehabilitation. He was healthy when he reported to the Cubs for a recent series in Amarillo and promptly pulled something in his arm.

But Wednesday's return debut in Cubs Stadium went off without incident. "Yea, I'd rather been in Iowa or Chicago, but I'm not unhappy. I like Midland. And, no, shaving my head wasn't a form of protest."

The Cubs scored a couple of unearned runs off starter Troy Dixon, 4-8, in the first when Kornfeld walked, Mel Hall doubled, to extend his hitting streak to 10, and with two out Connally's grounder went through Jack Stevenson's legs at short.

Doubles by Randy LaVigne and Mike Diaz made it a 3-0 game in the second before the Gold Sox retaliated on Dan Gausepohl's solo homer with two out in the fourth. It was the UCLA grad's seventh homer, four of them coming in Cubs Stadium. Clark, who has now won five straight after losing his first six, began to lose it in the sixth when the Sox rallied for three runs as Cain doubled, Pyburn doubled, Jerry DeSimone singled for a second run, Joe Lansford walked and Joe Steels looped a single to short left-center to score DeSimone.

MONDAY—El Paso at Cubs Stadium, 6 p.m.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—Hall's is 19 for 40 in his current hit streak and has upped his average from .277 to .309...Fierro, on a seven-game streak of his own, cracked out three hits, including his second homer in two nights, to up his average to .319...The Cubs didn't exactly cool off Joe Lansford, but rendered him harmless with three walks. However, his 1-for-2 gives him 8-for-11 in the series...The Cubs are now 18-16 at home...Rob Blyth pitched batting practice Tuesday and will be ready for relief duty again tonight, which should ease things. Enright has been going along with a Churchill and Milner for the past week or so...

Wimbledon no longer No. 1 for Bjorn

Borg's heart is elsewhere

By THOMAS BOSWELL
(c) 1981, The Washington Post

LONDON — The rain arrived at teatime and, like a bad guest, wouldn't leave. Finally, a deluge at dusk ended Wednesday's play at Wimbledon with only 17 of 72 scheduled matches completed. On only one of the 18 grass courts at the All England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club was play so fast that two matches could be played in the two hours before the rain arrived.

Naturally, that was on Court No. 1, where the two top seeds in these championships — Bjorn Borg and Chris Evert Lloyd — won their lopsided second-round matches with such dispatch that they beat the rain in this land that has no climate, only weather.

Even when it rains at Wimbledon, a certain pungency hangs in the air. Players arrive here at such a highly strung pitch they give off a superabundance of energy. The same itinerant folk who seem jet-lagged and dull when they visit the backwater burgs of tennis' transcontinental flying circus are vivacious when they get here.

Even the stolid Borg, after getting a good workout from Mel Purcell, 6-4, 6-1, 6-3, went beyond his usual range of pleasant comments, (example: "For sure, I practice every day my volley.").

BORG EVEN went so far as to say Wimbledon is no longer Number One in his heart.

"My main ambition now is to win the U.S. Open in August," said Borg, who is zero for nine in that event and plays much better before queens than he does in Queens. "As long as I stay in tennis, the biggest for me now is the first U.S. Open ... Yes, bigger than my sixth (straight) Wimbledon."

That's Borg's way of telling the rest of the field here that it might as well go home, because he doesn't feel a shilling's worth of pressure over his Wimbledon winning streak that has reached 37 matches.

Perhaps most symbolic of the Wimbledon high that grips players was the almost euphoric good humor of No. 4 seed Martina Navratilova who, on this day when no seeded players lost, swept past Susan Mascarin, 6-0, 6-1.

"I was quoted as saying that I was playing so well that I would bet on myself," snickered Navratilova. "Well, this morning a bookie got my phone number, called and asked me, 'Well, how much do ya wanna bet?'"

Asked if all her legendary superstitions were in working order, Navratilova replied, "Since Borg never shaves during Wimbledn, I've decided not to, either."

And what about her sometimes tootaut nerves?

"I've found that doing the laundry in the morning settles me down," said Navratilova, who may have other players delivering their dirty whites to her door by the finals.

NAVRATILOVA was in such generous spirits that she deliberately gave a second-set game to Mascarin so as not to embarrass her, love and love.

"I felt sorry for Susie," said Navratilova of the 16-year-old Mascarin, the second-youngest player in the world's top 100. "She was just a nervous wreck before she went on the court. With the Duke and Duchess of Kent there she had been practicing curtsies and that didn't help her any .... Even after the match, she could hardly talk. I remember how nervous I was when I first played on Centre Court."

Evert was also in a gift-giving mood, conceding a miscalled point to Yvonne Vermaak in her 6-1, 6-2 blitz. "I don't know whether I would have done the same thing if it had been in the final," said Evert candidly. "It would depend partly on my frame of mind and partly on whom I was playing. For instance, with Martina, we're both always honest. But, to tell the truth, others are not so generous, so you give them nothing."

Just as Borg is haunted by his U.S. Open failures, Evert admitted, under the influence perhaps of Wimbledon truth serum, that these championships dog and bedevil her.

"Am I fearless enough to win here?" she asked, knowing her timidity in leaving the safety of the baseline. "Yeah, I guess so. Not real convincing-sounding, huh?

"I have to admit that last year really stung. Losing in the finals (for the third straight year) stayed with me a long time.

"Something always seems to happen to me in the finals here, doesn't it?" said Evert, who is "only" two for nine in winning the silver plate. "Well, if I get there this year, it's definitely going to be a different story."

THE TENNIS Wednesday was intermittent, but all the better for vignettes and vibrations. For instance, as black skies approached and thousands of umbrellas sprouted, two fine players — each at tense junctures in their careers — tried to rush critical stages of their matches to a conclusion.

One was Pam Shriver, a U.S. Open finalist in '78 but now, a week from her 19th birthday, a mere seventh seed and a somewhat forgotten star. Shriver hurried to the conclusion of her 6-0, 6-3 victory over Australian Elisabeth Little. Now a veteran, Shriver knows the importance of getting matches over and done with quickly here before the schedule, tangled by rain, becomes a labyrinth. When you must play seven matches in 12 days to become champion, get 'em out of the way when you can.

"I could be the dark horse, but it's a long road," said Shriver, who has gone the full route of childhood stardom that 14-year-old Kathy Rinaldi of

WT swim meet has new look

Area swimmers key to Alamo Pool meet

By Mike Cruver
Sports Writer

For swimming fans who have followed the Allison West Texas Invitational Swim Meet regularly, the meet this year will have a new name, less national and international flavor, and more swimmers from the West Texas area.

Inflation, what is considered a "slow pool", plus changing the meet from an AA to an ABC meet has cut deeply into the West Texas Invitational Swim Meet which opens Friday and runs through Sunday at Alamo Pool.

THE EVENT, known in the past as the Allison West Texas Invitational, has only 133 entries from seven West Texas swim clubs. Last year, the meet, held in the middle of July, drew 157 entries from seven clubs. Included in last year's field were clubs from Miami, Fla., Albuquerque, Las Cruces, Oklahoma City, Houton, El Paso and the City of Midland team.

According to Gary Ilman, COM swim coach, many clubs that had came in the past were not interested this year because of the cost of transportation and lodging their athletes. Another factor, according to Ilamn, is the fact that Alamo Pool is not considered a good pool for registering fast times.

Ilman stated, "Alamo Pool is a good pool — but it is too shallow where the swimmers turn. It is only three feet deep and the turbulence can really slow a swimmer down. That is why it is considered a slow pool. The pool here (COM's pool) is faster and one like Texas University's is one of the fastest in the world. Of course, the pool there is nine feet deep in the turn areas."

THIS YEAR, teams from Amarillo, Lubbock, Monahans, Odessa, Abilene, Big Spring and COM are expected for the weekend battle. Ilman noted that several clubs from El Paso would not be able to attend the meet becuase they had already committed to a meet being held at Fort Bliss.

COM will have only 35 swimmers entered in the meet. Ilman said, "We have a lot of swimmers out of town and several others just didn't want to swim this summer." Ilman added, "The meet is much smaller than we had hoped but it still should be a good meet."

For the local swim fans, COM will present some of the top senior girl swimmers in the area. Perhaps the top female senior swimmer in the meet could be COM's all-around performer Lori Thompson.

In last year's meet, Thompson swam in six events and placed in the top five in five of them. Her best finish was a second in the 200 backstroke while her lowest was seventh in the 100 fly. Thompson is expected to challenge for the title in all of the events is which she enters.

ANDREA FREEMAN will be back to defend the title she won in the 1500 free last year. Freeman also placed sixth in the 200 breast and third in the 400 freestyle.

Other COM senior girls to keep your eye on are Jana Houseman, Bridget Coon, Caroline Reed, and Suzi Simpson. Simpson is stepping up after swimming in the 13-14 age group last year. Simpson placed in five events last year with a second in the 100 fly her best finish.

Reed, who swam in the 11-12 age group in the meet last year, nabbed a fifth in the 400 freestyle. She is expected to take home several more medals in this year's activities according to Ilman.

Younger COM girls being tabbed for possible titles are Tracy Delaney, Becky Simpson and Laura Morse in the 11-12 age group. Morse saw action in the 10 and under class last year's meet and collected a fourth in the 200 free, fifth in the 100 free, sixth in the 100 backstroke, and an eighth in the 50 backstroke.

IN THE 10 and under class, the Tall City tankers may have the ace of the division. According to Ilman, Michaela Hasek is "one of the top three in Texas in her age group." Two weeks ago, in a meet at Albuquerque, Hasek was the top point getting in her class.

Hasek participated in last year's extravaganza and chalked up a second in the 50 back, thirds in the 50 freestyle and 50 back, sixth in the 200 free, and an eighth in the 100 breaststroke.

In the boys competition, Mike Seay, Bruce and Mark Quenzer and Pat Rhamey are threats to grab titles for COM.

Seay, who just turned 15, will be one of the youngest senior boys but is expected to be near the top in most events said Ilman. In last year's meet, Seay finished sixth in the 1500 freestyle in the 13-14 age group.

THE QUENZER boys and Rhamey have been working hard said Ilman and they should be ready to place among the leaders.

Interest high in meet

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — For a misnamed tournament without a sponsor until it was bankrolled on a one-year ballout by Gannett Rochester Newspapers, the $125,000 Sarah Coventry unfolding this week at Locust Hill Country Club carries an uncommon amount of interest.

For starters, Nancy Lopez-Melton tees off today on a course she practically owns — two victories in two tries. The first tournament she played here resulted in her fifth straight triumph — a Ladies Professional Golf Association record — during her 1978 rookie season.

In addition, Kathy Whitworth could become the first woman ever to exceed $1 million in career earnings; Donna Caponi and Lopez-Melton rank 1-2 in 1981 winnings and will be looking to further pull away from their competitors, and the City of Rochester has rallied behind the tournament in a way no one dreamed possible last winter.

The fifth consecutive LPGA tour stop at Locust Hill, a par-73, 6,155-yard layout shortened this year from 6,206 yards at the request of LPGA officials, looked shaky a few months ago when G.H. Stuart Co. of Newark, N.Y., which manufactured costume jewelry under the Sarah Coventry label, filed for bankruptcy.

But Robert Thompson, a member of the tournament committee, said the support has been "tremendous."

Texas hunters must buy new waterfowl stamp

Good news for Texas waterfowl hunters, that is, if you'd like to pay more for a special new Texas waterfowl stamp. Every time we turn around, it seems, there's another license, permit or cost increase for taking certain birds, animals or fish.

Some are good and some not so good, but conservationists believe the new stamp is good.

If Gov. Bill Clements signs Senate Bill 709, waterfowl hunters in Texas will be required to purchase a $5 state stamp from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department for 1981-82. The stamp would be required in addition to a valid hunting license and the federal migratory bird stamp available at post offices.

SB 709 specifies that funds accrued from the waterfowl stamp may be spent only for "research, management and protection of waterfowl, for the acquisition, lease, or development of waterfowl habitatis in the state."

It does empower the TPWD to make grants to appropriate international nonprofit organizations for the purpose acquiring, developing, and maintaining waterfowl propagation areas within the Dominion of Canada that provide waterfowl for the Central Flyway."

BEFORE PASSAGE of the bill, it kicked up a storm of controvrsy. Originally, it was a designed so that funds raised would be distributed to waterfowl conservation organizations in North America and certain conservation groups, with Ducks Unlimited the prime beneficiary.

However, now that the bill benefiting Texas has passed in a revised form, Texans are happier. It seemed to me that Texans didn't want to spend five more dollars on a waterfowl stamp that would be used in other states and countries and is another instance where Texas sportsmen stood up for their rights.

FEWER DROWNINGS—With boating and water skiing season here, it's time again for safety-conscious Texans to think about before they leap.

Fewer water-related fatalities occured in 1980 than 1979 in Texas, say safety officials, with 570 drownings in 1980, a drop from 628. Reductions were noted in three categories. Boating fatalities dropped from 132 to 122; motor-vehicle fatalities dropped from 56 to 38, fishing without a boat, 32-18, and swimming 207-202.

Fatalities from falls, 110-114, and wading 43-44, were up in 1980. Counties reporting the most water fatalities were Harris, 32; Galveston, 28; Brazoria, 25; Nueces, 23; El Paso, 21; Tarrant and Travis, 19; Cameron 18, Matagorda and Denton, 16 each.

Lakes leading in fatalities were: Canyon, Grapevine, Travis, nine each; Texoma, eight; Lewisville, seven; Lavon, Livington, Sommerville, six; Corpus Christi and Ray Hubbard, five.

The Rio Grande led rivers with 25 fatalities, followed by the Brazos, 11; Trinity, nine; Sabine, eight, and Guadalupe and San Jacinto, seven each.

This should tell us something. Even though more Texans are taking to the lakes, rivers, ponds and ocean than ever before, we are more conscious of water safety. However, the 570 drownings last year is three times too many. Only about a fourth were under circumstances where the victim couldn't help himself. The rest were attributable to careless errors. Not wearing a life vest was the number one cause.

Leonard shoots for another crown

Hearns will defend his welterweight crown

HOUSTON (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard shoots for a second world championship tonight and Thomas Hearns defends his portion of another crown. But in three months the two will be back in the same ring, ... together.

Leonard, the World Boxing Council welterweight champion, is challenging unbeaten Ayub Kalule for the World Boxing Association junior middleweight title. And Hearns, who owns the WBA welterweight crown, puts his crown on the line against Pablo Baez.

ALSO ON tonight's card are a pair of 10-rounders with ex-welterweight champion Jose "Pipino" Cuevas going against European welterweight champion Jorgen Hansen, and unbeaten Tony Ayala facing Jerry Cheatam in a junior middleweight bout.

Both Leonard and Hearns are heavy favorites and most of the fight crowd is looking ahead to a proposed Sept. 16 match between them in Las Vegas, Nev. In fact, there has been so much talk about that confrontation that Bob Arum, president of Top Rank, Inc., promoter of tonight's card, is threatening a lawsuit against Leonard.

Arum says his contract for this closed circuit show specifically bars Sugar Ray from pumping up a Hearns bout until after he's finished with Kalule. The promoter talked Wednesday about holding up the purses but that will be tough since Leonard's $2.5 million is in the form of a letter of credit, automatically released when the fight takes place.

MIKE TRAINER, Leonard's attorney, shrugged off Arum's bluster which seemed designed to stir interest in the show, reportedly lagging at the gate.

Meanwhile, the WBA spent Wednesday debating the fate of its heavyweight champion, Mike Weaver. After a long discussion, it ruled that Weaver must sign by mid-July for a Sept. 30 defense against James "Quick" Tillis.

Weaver already has a contract for an October date with Gerry Cooney but the WBA is insisting on a Tillis fight first, claiming that the youngster from Chicago was the "leading available contender" on March 31, when Weaver was supposed to make a manditory defense.

If Weaver does not agree to a Tillis fight, and his manager, Don Manuel, made it clear the Cooney fight was still on, the ruling body could strip him of his title. There is already talk of a Tillis-Greg Page bout to fill a vacated WBA title if Weaver balks at Wednesday's decision.

WHILE THE heavyweight division occupied the WBA rule-makers Wednesday, the lighter weights will be in tonight's spotlight. Leonard and Hearns are two of the most exciting fighters around andtKalule gives the card three legitimate champions.

Leonard, 25, carries a 29-1 record into this bout and his victory over Roberto Duran last Nov. 25 left him as one of America's most popular fighters. If he wins tonight, he'll own two titles and he is talking about a possible shot at the middleweight crown, too.

"If it's legally possible," he has said, "I want to hold three titles at the same time. I want to emulate Henry Armstrong."

Kalule, 27, has won all of his 36 bouts. A Ugandan who now lives in Denmark, he is a southpaw and mostly unknown in this country. But his record is impressive.

"I MUST remind you, Ayub is the champion and Ray Leonard is the challenger," said Kalule's manager, Mogens Palle.

That is a fact that people here sometimes forget.

For Kalule's part, he feels he can handle Leonard. "I didn't come here to lose my title," he said.

No-hit gem highlights LL

Carlos Lozano fired a no-hitter to lead Eastern to a 7-0 win over Tower in the third round of the American League Little League City Championship Wednesday night at the North Central diamond. Lozano's masterpiece eliminated Tower while Eastern advances against Mid City tonight at 6 p.m.

Lozano was in complete control throughout the contest. He struck out 13 and walked only one as Tower managed only two baserunners against the hard-throwing right hander. Mike Acosta, the victim of a grandslam home run suffered the loss.

SCORELESS through the first two innings, Eastern's Joe Rendon led off with a double, Lozan singled and Rocky Johnson plated Rendon with a single. Joe Reyes walked to load the bases and Tommy Yorkman followed with a grandslam homer (his third homer of the tournament). Before Acosta could retire the side, Jim Fennell singled and Rocky Sanchez walked as Eastern added two more runs.

Derrick Gray relived for Tower in the fourth as Eastern added a single run. Eastern scored its final run in the fifth inning.

In the winners bracket, the North Central Scouts scored eight runs in the top of the fifth inning to record a 9-2 win over the Angels of Mid City.

THE SCOUTS scored first in the third when Drue Reeves reached safely with two outs, moved to second on a passed ball and came home on Larry Smith's RBI single.

Holding a 1-0 lead after four innings, the Scouts erupted for eight runs on four hits against Angel starter Craig Crawford and reliever Lance McClure. After Johnny Hewitt made an out, Jeff Connally singled, Drue Reeves singled and Smith was safe on an error to load the bases. Criag McGaha singled in two runs and Jim Werner walked to reload the bases.

McClure came into pitch but ran into immediate trouble. He surrendered a two-run single to Jason Logi, walked Joe Eldridge and Kevin Walum to force in another run. After Hewitt struckout for the second out, Connally lifted a fly ball to right field that was misplayed for an error that allowed on run to score. On the throw in, the second baseman let the ball get away and the Scouts scored their final two runs.

MID CITY scored in the bottom of the fifth when McClure singled, went to second on Clark Crawford's sacrifice and scored when Bradley Taylor's grounder was booted.

In the sixth, Mid City scored another run when Craig Crawford' reached third when centerfielder Jim Pennell couldn't glove his long drive and Scott Mowles followed with a sacrifice fly.

In the only game tonight, Eastern and Mid City will play at 6 .m. for the right to face North Central in the finals at 6 p.m. Friday. The loser of tonight's game will be eliminated from the double elimination tournament.

Borg, Lloyd win as rain interrupts Wimbledon

Stuart, Fla., began here on Tuesday. "There seems to be an assembly line of young players with good ground strokes and two-handed backhands and they're all tough.

"They start in a fairyland and when things go wrong, it comes as a shock. It happened to me."

If youth is tough, so is a little age. Ask soon-to-be 29-year-old Jimmy Connors.

Once, Connors won with brass and blasts: now, he squeezes through the tough days on experience and guts under pressure. Wednesday, it was 24-year-old Chris Lewis of New Zealand who gave Connors fits and probably should have ended the day with a two-sets-to-none lead. Instead,it was Connors who escaped with a pair of tie-breaker wins and a two-set lead in a discontinued match.

Finally, this truncated day left impressions of two great champions — Borg and Evert — who were so swiftly excellent that neither rain nor competent opponents could delay their appointed task.

Borg is like some fabulous, versatile machine that oils and polishes a new function into working order each day. In his first set, Monday, he was practically comic: by his last set today, he was brutally overpowering. "I'm very pleased with my progress here," said Borg, who is not easily pleased. "I feel really good out there."

Earlier comments about Borg's rusty form will please be disregarded.

But the most pleasing sight was Evert who performs like a Degas ballerina of the baseline. Her play is like a combination of dance with analytical geometry — a blend of light, graceful footwork and constantly changing strategic angles. To scramble to the net, or even attack, seems for her like a violation of an elegant, prearranged choreography.

Even in two dry hours Wednesday, there was time for both the dynamo and the dancer to take the same court, do their work and be gone before the mortals got their drenching.

Homer lifts Jackson to win

By Associated Press

Mike Fitzgerald's three run homer in the first inning helped boost the Jackson Mets to a 6-5 Texas League victory over the Arkansas Travelers Wednesday night.

In other Texas League action, San Antonio beat El Paso, 9-2, Midland defeated Amarilo, 11-7, and Shreveport whipped Tulsa, 7-2.

Jackson held a 6-0 lead until Arkansas staged a rally in the seventh inning when Fred Tisdale doubled and scored on a homer by Dave Kable. The Travelers scored three more runs in the eighth, but came up one run short of sending the game into extra innings.

Terry Leach, 4-1, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Ruben Gotay, 2-6.

Myron White had a homer as the San Antonio Dodgers beat the El Paso Diablos, 9-2. Steve Davis had a homer for El Paso.

The winning pitcher was Chris Malden, 5-4. Doug Jones, 5-6, was the loser.

Doug Wabeke and Doran Perdue had three hits each to pace a 15-hit attack as the Shreveport Captains beat the Tulsa Drillers, 7-2. Larry Reynolds was involved in both Tulsa runs, driving in one and scoring the other.

The winning pitcher was Greg Moyer, 3-3. Kevin Richards, 3-2, was the loser.

Good field for Oslo

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Seventeen world record holders, a dozen Olympic champions and many other athletes are among those entered for an international track and field competition at Bislett Stadium Friday night.

Among the top American entries are Carl Lewis (long jump), James Sanford (200 meters), Ben Plucknett, Mac Wilkins and John Powell (discus), Edwin Moses (400-meter hurdles) and William McChesney and Craig Virgin (5,000 meters).

The top event for women is a 3,000-meter race headed by Norway's Grete Waitz and Jan Merill of the United States.

Owners offer proposals to players

NEW YORK (AP) — The major league baseball strike entered Day 14 today with the players association due to respond to new free-agent compensation proposals from the owners — and the owners in danger of losing their projected $50 million in strike insurance.

THE FIRST face-to-face bargaining sessions in five days broke up after less than two hours Wednesday as a grim-visaged Bob Boone of the Philadelphia Phillies, the National League player representative, termed the proposals "insignificant" while management expressed its displeasure with Boone's remarks.

In Philadelphia, Common Pleas Judge Stanley M. Greenberg issued a temporary injunction blocking Lloyds of London from paying out any of the strike insurance the owners were to begin collecting Wednesday.

Richie Phillips, the attorney for major league umpires, said the order was issued pending a hearing Friday on a class-action suit filed by the umpires' union, which accuses the owners of bad-faith bargining, partly because of the existence of the insurance policy.

THE 26 major league owners paid Lloyds $2 million for insurance that would pay each $100,000 per date lost to the players' strike for approximately seven weeks after the cancellation of the 153 games. The 153rd cancellation in the 13-day old strike took place Wednesday.

The owners threw the ball back to the players when the chief management negotiator, Ray Grebey, director of the Player Relations Committee, said that "the burden of movement at this point in time rests with the players association; they called the strike."

Federal mediator Kenneth Moffett said both sides would meet again today — "We're shooting for 11 a.m." — but it appeared likely that the players would reject the owners' new proposals which, among other things, would limit the number of "ranking" free agents in the re-entry draft requiring a major league player as compensation to no more than 14 in any one year.

THE NEW alternatives also would reduce the percentage of free agents who would qualify as "ranking" under certain specified performance criteria and would thereby require more than the current amateur draft choice as compensation.

Although Moffett described Wednesday's meetings as "business-like," Boone termed the new compensation proposals — and compensation for free agents lost through the re-entry draft is the sole issue in the major league baseball's first in-season strike — "not fundamentally different from the proposals which have been on the table for some time."

Grebey expressed resentment at Boone's remarks, calling it an "unfair" characterization of the owners' latest move. "To get a reaction that this is minor and insignificant ..." he said, his voice trailing off.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, was again absent from the latest negotiations, as he has been since the strike began. Boone was joined by Baltimore's Mark Belanger, Cincinnati's Tom Seaver, Rusty Staub of the New York Mets, Bobby Murcer of the New York Yankees and Donald Fehr, general counsel to the union.

BESIDES AN annual limit of 14 free agents who would require a major leaguer as compensation, the major changes in the owners' new proposals would classify "ranking" free agents as those in the upper 25 percent (Type A) and upper 40 percent (Type B) of specified performance categories. The figures represent a reduction by the owners from a previous proposal of 33 and 50 percent.

Hal Middlesworth, a consultant to Grebey's committee, said that only three of the 46 players eligible for free agency last year would have qualified as "ranking" free agents. He identified them as San Diego's Dave Winfield, Los Angeles' Don Sutton and Kansas City's Darrell Porter, who signed with the New York Yankees, Houston and St. Louis, respectively.

Middlesworth also said no more than six players would have qualified as "ranking" free agents in any of the last three re-entry drafts. "We're talking about something that will affect very few players," Grebey added.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, June 26, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actor Peter Lorre shares this birthday with you, and so does Virginia's Lieutenant Governor Charles Robb. The coming year will be both hectic and highly profitable for those in business. True financial progress depends on your ability to curb your and your loved ones' extravagance. Short trips will prove quite useful, but long journeys are not favored. Look for new outlets for your managerial talents! You are a natural leader and organiser, skillful at bringing out the best in those you supervise. Romance proves very rewarding now and singles will enjoy many happy interludes. Married couples experience a new feeling of closeness.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Business trips are best postponed. Activities on the homefront will demand much of your time and effort. Avoid hearing associate's temper tantrums by isolating yourself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Distant affairs need careful handling now. Call on the expertise of a trusted friend or colleague. Be cautious if traveling.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Adopt a low-key approach today. Your quiet concern will be deeply appreciated. This is an excellent day for checking on securities or insurance matters.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good day for financial negotiations and real estate deals. Keep all transactions strictly confidential. Others will admire your discretion. Guard against being overconfident.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Tie up any loose ends at work. A serious misunderstanding can be avoided if you stick to the bare facts. Keep spending within reasonable limits.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Seize an opportunity to further a longtime personal aim. Hobbies can be rewarding now. Your charm works overtime in the romance department. Someone you admire pays you a meaningful compliment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Assess "inside" financial information with a critical eye. Weigh the odds before making a decision. A favor is repaid with interest! Hide your astonishment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Work should go well today. Seek a quiet refuge if working against a deadline. Problems lead to new self-knowledge. When entertaining a business client, keep spending to a minimum.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Parents should give their children more responsibility, set firm guidelines and make sure they are followed. You may have to make some personal sacrifices.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Travel is under very favorable influences. The support you need for a pet project may suddenly become available. Listen to the advice of an expert.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You find opportunities opening up that could both advance your career and provide needed financial relief. Do not make any hasty judgments! Romance could lead to a new relationship.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Some important people could be held up today if you fail to get your share of a project done on time. Do not take any financial risks. Meet all deadlines.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♡.

It is more blessed to give than to receive—especially if, by giving, you put yourself in line to become a receiver.

This hand was played in a team match. The auctions were straightforward. The only point of interest is North's raise to two spades with only three trumps and a ruffing value—it is the natural bid on the hand and receives this department's endorsement. Why rebid a ratty five-card suit when you have such a descriptive alternative?

At both tables the lead was West's singleton heart. Both Easts played the ten and both declarers won the king. Each declarer would have liked to ruff a club in dummy, but they realized that that was too risky. The opening lead was quite likely to be a singleton, so East could win the club and give his partner a heart ruff and, if East held the ace of diamonds, he could regain the lead and possibly give his partner a second heart ruff to defeat the contract. So both declarers drew trumps in three rounds, and then ran the nine of hearts.

At one table East won the nine with the queen, and that was that. Declarer won the club return and ran hearts, sluffing two clubs from his hand. He ended up losing two diamond tricks and a heart to just make his contract.

At the other table, East allowed declarer's nine of hearts to win. This generous act meant that the defenders did not win a heart trick. However, it effectively killed dummy's long suit. Since East held the ace-queen of diamonds over Dummy's king-jack, declarer could establish a fourth heart trick, but could not enjoy it. With careful defense, the defenders were able to collect two tricks in each minor suit for a one-trick set.

After all, charity does begin at home.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? This Disney story is different

By CHARLES CHAMPLIN
The Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — The Disney suspense story is different from all the others in the film industry.

It involves not financial caastrophe but creative momentum. The old company is doing quite nicely, thanks, what with the continuous recycling of its classic products and the health of its theme parks, among other endeavors. Its chips are still blue.

The matter at issue continues to be whether the feature film side of Disney — live action and animation — can move up from the lucrative plateau that the studio achieved in Walt Disney's lifetime. Through most of the 15 years since Disney died, the studio has in effect lived off the creative capital he left, reproducing, usually with great skill, the kinds of films he had shaped so well.

But it has grown ever clearer that the world and the market will not stand still, even for the magic of the Disney name on a film, unless it aims for something more than a simple replication of what was.

AT THE MOMENT, Disney's live-action films are obviously in a transitional stage. The image of a toe hesitantly testing hotter water springs to mind.

"The Black Hole" represented a bold financial commitment and left no doubt that the studio is capable now as ever of superlative special-effects work. But "The Black Hole" was built around a story hole no wizardry could mask, and the financial commitment was somehow compromised by caution.

Now, as a way of hedging its bets on live-action films, Disney has for the first time entered into creative partnerships, dividing the risk and the world market, and leaving most of the creative driving to its partners, as on "Popeye" and the forthcoming "Dragonslayer," a medieval tale with Ralph Richardson as a Merlin-like figure called Ulrich and a dragon who could nibble King Kong as a between-meals snack.

Despite mixed reviews, "Popeye" did very well with audiences. Shortened until it is an action film rather than a musical, to fit the foreign market (where Disney is distributing it), "Popeye" now answers many of the American critical complaints and has opened well.

DOWN THE ROAD is an all-Disney feature called "Tron," which promises a rather more sophisticated story of science fiction to test the studio's effects men. If successful, it could signal Disney's safe arrival in a new day.

But Disney was born at the animation table and animation has always been the backbone, buttress and bulwark of the studio's success. All animation, in terms of technical achievement and perfection, must still be measured to the Disney standards, even though Ralph Bakshi and others here and abroad have thrust the contents of animation into realms far beyond Disney's darkest dreams.

Disney's animation, too, has been in a troubled transitional stage, a matter not only of the passing of Walt but of the retirement of most of the veteran animators who grew and drew with Disney as far back as the late 1930s, when life with Mickey was exciting and seldom serene, Walt being a tough taskmaster.

TWO OF THE LAST of the grand old men, Frank Thomas and Ollie Johnson, have retired from active animation but are completing what will almost surely be the definitive book on their art. Due out later this year, it is called "Disney Animation: The Illusion of Life."

Meanwhile, the studio's efforts to build a new generation of animators received a well-publicized setback when one of them, Don Bluth, led away 16 promising young talents to form a new studio, leaving a residue of bitterness not only among Disney executives but among those who stayed behind.

The setback appears to have been temporary. Disney's newest full-length animated feature, "The Fox and the Hound," will be previewed later this week and opens on July 10. It reflects the work of the Disney veterans, including Thomas and Johnston, and the newer animators whom Ed Hansen, the head of Disney animation, has been recruiting since he arrived in 1970.

The studio has 16 character animators, as it did before the Bluth breakaway, and Hansen hopes to increase it to 20 or 22, eyeing a release schedule of an animated feature every two years.

TWO RECRUITING TEAMS have been touring college campuses in the United States and in Canada, singing the Disney gospel and looking for pomising portfolios. In September, Hansen says, a group of approximately 20 young animators will arrive for a combination of work and classes, an apprenticeship after which the studio will offer permanent jobs to the best.

The co-producer of "The Fox and the Hound" (with Wolfgang Reitherman, another Disney veteran) is Art Stevens, who has been with the studio 41 years and is regarded as a guardian of the Disney style and standards. Stevens is also co-director of the film with Richard Rich, who came to Disney 10 years ago after graduating from Brigham Young, and Ted Berman, like Stevens a Disney veteran.

Listed as creative consultant to the producers is Mel Shaw, a remarkable figure in the studio organization who is in effect their in-house project salesman. Shaw devises design and character concepts and tentative story boards on which Ron Miller, the head of production, and other executives can base a go-ahead decision. Shaw set the style for "The Fox and the Houn" and he is now working up the concept for an animated feature that would (tentatively) be called "Musicana" and would be, or so an outsider guesses, a sort of spiritual sequel to "Fantasia," setting classic pieces of music, each with a strong national flavor, to appropriate images.

MORE IMMEDIATELY DISNEY is getting closer to a start date for its next animated feature, "The Black Cauldron," adapted from Lloyd Alexander's "The Prydain Chronicles," a five-book series of tales mythical and magical in feeling. The new animators will have a principal hand in its creation. One of the character designers is, for example, Phil Nibbelink, who came to Disney only three years ago.

Also in the works is a short version of "A Christmas Carol," featuring Mickey and other Disney characters, some of whom haven't had any chores in years.

The dilemma at Disney is unique because it involves profit only in the very long run. Creatively it is a very delicate dilemma indeed: how to keep moving and growing without losing or destroying all the qualities that established the image of Disney in the first place.

IT WOULD SEEM CLEAR that the Disney animators couldn't and shouldn't stop celebrating traditional virtues, or having animals talk. (It is an irony of sorts that the Don Bluth studio's first animated feature, based on "Mrs. Frisby and the Rats of NIMH," will be anything but a breakaway from the Disney style and tradition. The anthropomorphic menagerie voiced by Dom DeLuise, John Carradine and others will be in fact exactly in the Disney tradition, executed, early glimpses suggest, with very high artistry.)

'Burlesque' goes thud, thud

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Critic

NEW YORK (AP) — Broadway, which already has a cheery big salute to burlesque called "Sugar Babies," now has a truly awful competitor — "This Was Burlesque."

It's by Ann Corio, a former strip-teaser once called "The Girl With the Epic Epidermis." She's both mistress of ceremonies and director of the show, which first played here in 1962.

For reasons that elude me, the 1981 edition bowed Tuesday, billed as "a musical satire based on Miss Corio's recollections." I suspect the satire, if not the music, was detained by a previous engagement.

Like "Sugar Babies," "This Was" comes equipped with baggy-pants comics, hoary old skits and geriatric double-entendre jokes.

And by gum, it even has two strippers, one an "exotic" dancer, Lili Chanel (alas, her act is nothing to writhe home about) and Tami Roche, a raven-haired beauty with a very, very, very, very big chest. Miss Roche also twirls tassels on her buttocks as well as her bosoms. It is quite gaudy.

But mercy, neighbors, the show has none of the crisp precision, timing and whizbang fun of "Sugar Babies." It just sits there, the jokes and skits going thud, thud, thud.

True, the nine maidens who constitute the chorus are mighty easy on the eyes and dance right smartly. Good hoofing, too, by the comedy team of Phil Ford and Jerry Kurland, who score laughs singing an old wheezer, "Does Your Mother Know You're Out, Cecilia," in the styles of Boris Karloff, Peter Lorre and even Paul Lynde.

But the rest of the first act is dead on arrival, be it a pantomime with Miss Corio and a Charlie Chaplin character, a risque skit about an ancient ukelele teacher or even a flag-waving, red-white-and-blue Big Production Number that signals halftime.

(Incidentally, Miss Roche reappears here in pasties, a crown and a long, flowing robe, carrying a sparkler-lit torch. A truly amazing Statue of Liberty.)

I wish I could have stuck around for the second chapter, which had a new wrinkle for the ladies in the audience — a male stripper named Patrick. But I was late for my tuba lesson.

ENTERTAINMENT

Things are not much better off-Broadway, down in Greenwich Village, where a slightly different caper also opened Tuesday night.

It's "Oscar Remembered," a forgettable piece on Oscar Wilde, the Irish wit, writer, scandal and parent who ran afoul of young boys, then England's morals laws, before departing this world in 1900.

A one-man show, it has Maxim Mazumdar (originally from Bombay, India, now of Newfoundland) as the party in charge of memories. He plays, and none too convincingly, Lord Alfred Douglas — Wilde's friend, younger lover and cause of his downfall.

At first, m'Lord is a simpering young fop who often addresses an imaginary Oscar (who's seated in an empty chair), recalling their good and bad times in a manner that gives florid a bad name.

In Round Two, he's mature, impoverished, grief-stricken, but still remembering and loving Oscar — who by now has died. You can't blame Oscar. The show's that dull. No matter that there's at least one dramatic high point early in the proceedings.

T.G. Sheppard to appear at Six Flags

ARLINGTON — Country western recording artist T.G. Sheppard will perform two concerts Saturday at Six Flags Over Texas.

After nearly 20 years in the music business, both as a performer and a promotion man, Sheppard gained popularity in 1979 with a string of number one hits including "You Feel Good All Over" and "Last Cheater's Waltz." Sheppard's latest hit is "I Loved 'Em Every One."

Concerts by Sheppard are set for 8 and 10 p.m. in the park's Music Mill Theater. The same is true for the July 3 Ronnie Milsap shows.

Appearing July 4 for the all-night party at the park will be Merle Haggard. His performance times are 10 p.m. and midnight. The park will remain open till 4 a.m. July 5.

Mickey Gilley and Johnny Lee will appear July 5 at 7 and 9 p.m.

There is no additional charge for the concerts and seating is on a first-come-first-served basis.

Iselin speaks his mind on public TV

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — There are those who are certain public TV is in the last stages of life, suffering miserably from shrinking federal support and an intruding cable television industry.

And there are those, not remarkably on the inside, who are as convinced that the system is on the verge of unparalleled success.

"THERE IS nothing like a little bit of jeopardy to make the adrenalin flow — and get people thinking about what's important," says John Jay Iselin, president of New York's WNET, one of public TV's primary producing stations.

"One of the real benefits of the adversity," says Iselin, "was the realization that we have to figure out ways of pooling our responsibilities and our skills.

"And a good example of that kind of thinking is the maturation of our consortium — our cooperative — that is not only sharing the budget but the production responsibility for 'Playhouse,' our drama series that begins in January," Iselin says.

"PLAYHOUSE" is, indeed, testimony to the vitality of public TV, despite the prospect of dwindling income from government and other sources.

And though Iselin and others like him — counterparts at stations like WGBH in Boston, KCET in Los Angeles, Chicago's WTTW — share a commitment to the future of the Public Broadcasting Service, there are forces that threaten to tear the system apart.

There is disagreement, for instance, on the feasibility of the proposed Public Subscriber Network, a pay TV project conceived by Lawrence K. Grossman, PBS' president, over considerable objection from Iselin and others.

THE ISSUE IS certain to be a subject of debate at PBS' annual meeting, which begins Monday in Cincinnati.

"I guess Larry would say we should try to reach out and create a new clearing in the forest," Iselin says. "I frankly can see little reason right now to be diverting any of our acreage from the task at hand, and that is systematically extending the pieces of clearing that we have."

Several stations, including WNET, have begun to offer product and services to commercial TV, including cable, as a way of generating new income.

"I FIND IT beguiling of public broadcasting that there is so much hope that Larry can go out and do what he's doing," the WNET executive says. "I find it beguiling, but I think in demonstrates a lack of maturity on the part of the system.

"It sounds good, but should it be done with the financial underpinnings as elusive as they are?"

The Public Subscriber Network would produce programs, primarily cultural in content, in cooperation with major artistic organizations. Subscriber-viewers would pay a monthly fee, and the programming would be delivered by several methods, including cable.

The Public Subscriber Network presumably would consume programs like the "Dance in America" and "Live from the Met" productions now offered PBS by the New York member station.

ISELIN SAYS he sees the voluntary subscriber as an ever more significant part of the public TV funding process, and looks on the co-production arrangement as a primary programming tool.

Major blockbuster series like "Cosmos" and "The Adams Chronicles," produced primarily by single stations, may be a thing of the past, he says.

Those programs, he says, probably will be replaced by series like "The Brain," a co-production with the Japanese and French national networks, and "Brideshead Revisited," a dramatization of Evelyn Waugh's modern classic, co-produced with Britain's Granada Television.

Schwarzenegger can always find time for bodybuilding

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Suffering is temporary, film is permanent." That is the philosophy of Arnold Schwarzenegger upon his return from a punishing six-months filming of "Conan" in Spain.

The monument of muscle has come back to his Santa Monica home and office and resumed his many enterprises. One of them is his third book, "Arnold's Bodybuilding for Men" (Simon and Schuster, $14.95), for which he is making the rounds of the TV talk shows.

Pausing for tea at the Hollywood Brown Derby, he talked about the movie, the book, and life in general. Austrian-born, he has no trouble expressing himself in English.

In "Conan," Schwarzenegger plays the title role of the Dino De Laurentiis adventure, which will be released at Christmas by Universal in this country, 20th Century-Fox abroad. John Milius ("The Wind and the Lion") directed.

"It was a tough six months," Schwarzenegger said. "We filmed in Madrid, Segovia, Almeria — 10 different cities. We started in heavy snow — and I was working with almost no clothes. We finished in Almeria, where it was sweltering."

"Conan" was necessarily a physical movie, and he found himself wrestling with wolves, battling a huge snake and doing stunts that most leading men would not risk. How can you find a double with the dimensions of Arnold Schwarzenegger?

"The stunt coordinator, Terry Leonard, did three scenes with horses for me, and they painted his body to make him seem like me," he said. "Some scenes couldn't be doubled, and I took a fall from a 40-foot tower.

Mine workers ratify contract

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five months after top union and industry officials voiced hopes for strike-free contract negotiations and two strikes later, coal production in Eastern and Midwestern states is finally returning to normal.

Members of United Mine Workers construction affiliate have ended their three-month strike by voting by a better than 2-1 margin Wednesday to ratify a new contract with the Association of Bituminous Contractors.

The agreement took effect at 12:01 a.m. EST today.

The UMW headquarters here declared the contract ratified with virtually all of the big construction worker locals reporting. Some smaller locals had not reported by late Wednesday, but officials indicated the trend could not be reversed.

With the construction worker contract accepted, mines in Appalachia and the Midwest were free of labor strife for the first time in months.

As long ago as Jan. 23, when representatives of the UMW's 160,000 soft coal miners opened contract talks with the industry, union president Sam Church and Bobby R. Brown, chief bargainer for the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, expressed hope that the two sides could avert a strike for the first time since 1964.

They agreed that more labor strife would be harmful when demand for coal was increasing and the reliability of U.S. coal production was being questioned.

But they agreed on little else, and miners struck for 72 days before settling on a new 40-month accord with BCOA on May 30. The contract was ratified eight days later. But a resumption of work was hampered by the continuing walkout by construction workers, who negotiated a separate contract with the ABC.

Both segments of the UMW went on strike Mareh 27 when the previous three-year contracts expired.

Willard Esselstyn, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, announced ratification of the contract covering 11,500 construction workers after 7 p.m. EDT.

"The mass majority" of the workers approved the pact, he said.

"Notification is being given the mine construction locals and the Association of Bituminous Contractors that the contract has been ratified," Esselstyn told a news conference.

He said that "nobody knew for sure that this contract would be ratified." He said he felt it was a good deal for the UMW members who do construction work at mine sites.

"I'm pretty content with the results," he said.

The construction worker affiliates set up picket lines at many mines in Appalachia and the Midwest, keeping as many as 60,000 miners off the job after they had approved their new contract.

Picketing tapered off as Esselstyn and the other four UMW negotiators neared agreement with the ABC.

Elmo Hurst, ABC president, said after the settlement that he hoped mine construction workers would approve the pact so the economy of the coalfields and the coal states could get back on track.

Among other items, the contract provides a 38 percent wage increase, which will bring the typical construction workers' hourly wage to about $10.75.

The $3.60-an-hour increase over 40 months is virtually identical to that won by the miners, whose salaries are higher than those of construction workers. The average miner will earn about $14 an hour under the basic UMW contract.

Summer is season for Santa's helpers

By MARLENE AIG
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It's June 25. Summer is just beginning to flower with picnics and lazy afternoons of softball and tall, cool drinks. And, in case you haven't checked the calendar lately, you have 183 shopping days until Christmas.

In the toy factories of the world, Santa's helpers are fast at work.

For example, at Mattel Toys, nimble fingers are flying over hand-stitched cowboy shirts and sequined gowns for 23-year-old Barbie, the world's tiniest fashion model.

Machines are mass-producing cowboy hats and denim jeans for her holiday wardrobe. Mattel says Barbie is going Western in keeping with the fashions of the times.

Like other toy manufacturers, Mattel has employed thousands of summer helpers to fill the orders from retailers who hope they've guessed correctly what will be on every boy's and girl's Christmas list this year.

College students, homemakers and seasonal workers are the "elves" on Santa's assembly lines that turn out the plastic spaceships and fire trucks, cuddly dolls and furry stuffed beasts found under the Christmas tree Dec. 25.

'By now, toy manufacturers are committed for 1981 and are laying plans for 1982," said Doug Thomson, president of Toy Manufacturers of America Inc., a trade association.

Toymakers and stores place their bets on the toys children will want — and parents will buy — shortly after Christmas at the American Toy Fair, held each February at the Toy Center in Manhattan.

During the fair, 10,000 buyers from around the world examine the latest in stuffed bears, executive board games, talking dolls and revved up miniature trucks and cars.

They watch models dressed as astronauts, cowhands, chickens, goblins and other characters demonstrate new laser moon games and other playthings manufacturers hope will become the next Christmas rage.

The toy manufacturers association estimates there are 150,000 toys on the market in a given year, with 3,000 to 4,000 new entries each year. As much as 75 percent of toy sales, the industry estimates, come during the Christmas season.

More than 95 percent of the nation's $6.5 billion in wholesale toy sales is transacted at the fair, and most orders must be placed no later than May so factories can gear for the summer's high production schedule.

"The toy industry is a produced-to-order industry," said David DeMala, spokesman for the Cincinnati-based Kenner Products. "The assembly line is constantly changing."

Smaller companies, such as Eden Toys — which specializes in plush toys such as Paddington Bear and the Beatrix Potter characters — work a lot closer to the season because, said board chairman David Miller, "the lead time is less and the marketing not seasonal."

The average plush toy takes 60 to 90 days to produce, Miller explained, because material must be cut, shipped to South America or Haiti for stitching and returned to the UNITED States for finishing.

Eden tries to get most of its Christmas orders in by June, even though its continuous production means "we'll be making Paddingtons for Christmas in January and February," Miller said.

While the toys are being made, packaged and delivered to stores, retailers have to commit advertising and organize their toy departments so all is ready for the Christmas rush, which starts the day after Thanksgiving.

Most retailers want at least some of the toys in the stores by September to get a "feel" for what will be big for Christmas and to have time to re-order items that prove popular.

John Devine, executive vice president of Toys 'R' Us, which has 101 outlets across the country, said the outfit builds up inventory all year long and starts showing specific Christmas toys in October.

"The toys have to arrive by September," he said. "They have to be processed, ticketed and organized. If you wait for October, you just won't have enough hours in the day."

While retailers are ringing up their sales, toy manufacturers are taking a breather.

Said Jack Fox, director of marketing, public relations and licensing for Mattel: "Generally, there's no production at Christmas at all. In some places, we close the factories all together."

Just like Santa and his elves, toymakers rest a while before starting all over again.

Smoking on planes considered

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After months of debate, the government is tackling the touchy subject of whether smokers should be allowed to light up on airplanes.

The Civil Aeronautics Board is far from eager to jump into the emotional fray and is expected to reject any extreme positions, such as banning all smoking or lifting restrictions on smoking altogether.

Instead the board, which planned to consider the issue today, probably will just refine its current regulations, which allow smoking in restricted sections of airliners.

Representatives of the airline industry told the board at hearings last month that the airlines are not for or against smoking, but believe the issue can best be settle in the marketpace and not by government regulations.

Kathleen Argiropoulos, a lawyer for the Air Transport Association, said a ban on smoking on aircraft would cause many problems and would "result in passengers fleeing into the lavatories" to light up.

Federal regulations currently require that aircraft include a non-smoking section and that passengers be given seats in that section if they request them.

A common problem, industry officials said, results when a non-smoking passenger arrives late and boards a plane after all the seats in the non-smoking section are filled, requiring the airline to expand the section and possibly tell a smoker to move to another seat.

Richard F. Fahy Jr. of American Airlines said flight attendants have been "brought to tears" and smokers have exchanged blows with non-smokers on some flights.

Because of competitive reasons, he said, American Airlines would provide a non-smoking section on its aircraft even if the government would stop regulating the matter. The CAB regulations, Fahy continue-, "provide a backbone for allowing non-smokers to act obnoxiously."

Richard Schweiker, secretary of health and human services, recently urged the board to protect non-smokers "from the nuisance and, in some cases, the physical risk of exposure to tobacco smoke" on commercial airliners.

Schweiker in a letter to the CAB said almost two-thirds of travelers on commercial aircraft ask for non-smoking seats and 94 percent of non-smokers and 83 percent of smokers favor segregating smokers and non-smokers in public transportation.

A group representing 60,000 persons, Action on Smoking and Health, asked the CAB to tighten its present regulations and prohibit smoking on short flights and on smaller aircraft.

John F. Banzhaf, executive dirctor of the organization, said a majority of Americans do not smoke and 20 million to 30 million airline passengers suffer from physical problems that make them acutely sensitive to tobacco smoke and those interests must be protected by the government.

Surgery removes elephant tooth

SAN DIEGO — Lucky, a former circus elephant, probably has a giant headache today afer a surgcal team — wielding sledgehammer, crowbar and power drill — removed a five-pound molar the size of a sack of sugar.

The 40-year-old female Asian elephant at the San Diego Zoo was doing fine after undergoing the Wednesday operation, which lasted nearly four hours.

"It had a high potential for disaster," said Dr. David A. Fagan, a San Diego dentist who specializes in treating exotic animals. "In fact, it was a real white-knuckle affair.

"If the tooth fairy responds in terms of a hassle factor, this is clearly a $100 issue."

Fagan decided to yank the elephantine tooth after linking the faulty molar to a weight loss by the one-ton mammal, which lost 500 to 700 pounds over the last year, despite eating the same volume of food.

After analyzing the pachyderm's waste, Fagan discovered the molar had lost its normal range of movement of about a millimeter, resulting in poor digestion. The beast of burden was absorbing only one-fourteenth the food value of the grass hay she was eating.

"Essentially, she was gradually starving to death," Fagan said.'

A powerful narcotics mixture put Lucky to sleep.

Congress wants to know why anti-smoking campaign aborted

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress wants to know why the Reagan administration aborted a $68,000 anti-smoking ad campaign featuring teen model-starlet Brooke Shields with cigarettes sticking out of her ears.

The decision last month by the Department of Health and Human Services to drop its sponsorship of the ads has made the 16-year-old Miss Shields, best known for her role as a child prostitute in the movie "Pretty Baby" and her provocative ads for jeans, a cause celebre in smoking circles.

The House Commerce oversight and investigations subcommittee was holding a hearing today at which Miss Shields and her mother, Teri, were called to testify.

But because of a dispute between Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., the chairman, and Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker, no one was scheduled to appear for the government.

Dingell wanted to privately interview the Schweiker aides who scuttled the ads, but Schweiker insisted that an observer from his legislative office sit in on any interviews. Dingell rejected that arrangement, saying it "would impede the ability of the Congress to carry out its investigatory responsibilities."

Schweiker's chief of staff David Newhall III sent Rep. Marc L. Marks, R-Pa., the subcommittee's ranking Republican a letter deriding the Shields ads as "an untested, slick, Hollywood-oriented, fashion merchandising concept."

"HHS tries to feature preventive health information in our extensive anti-smoking efforts," wrote Newhall. "The ad campaign was based on name calling by a famous and sometimes controversial actress-model, not positive motivation and persuasion."

The American Lung Association accused Schweiker of catering to the tobacco lobby in dropping the ads. Schweiker and his aides vehemently denied that.

Newhall noted that after dropping out as a sponsor of the Shields ads, the department made them available to the association "to prevent any waste of taxpayer money."

Splash day set July 4

McNamara's dream comes true

By JOHN J. MULLINS
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — His four minutes on Symphony Hall's stage conducting the Boston Pops from his wheelchair was a dream come true, but 97-year-old Joseph McNamara didn't smile until it was over.

The former Navy bandmaster, who once played under John Philip Sousa, led the Pops in Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" Wednesday night. He won the applause of the musicians, who are members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the audience, and he saluted them with waves of his left hand.

The first thing he said as he was wheeled offstage was: "How was it?"

"That was wonderful. It sounded great," answered Mark Solomon, Pops production assistant.

Waiting in the wings where she watched him perform was McNamara's stepdaughter, Mary Haigh, who with her husband, Ronald, made McNamara's dream come true. The Haighs, of Wellesley, needed the help of NBC correspondent Jack Perkins, too.

The Haighs bid $1,826 at a fundraising event earlier this year to win McNamara the right to conduct. They were outbid by $624 by Perkins, however. But when Perkins heard about McNamara he donated the $624 to the orchestra and gave McNamara his chance to conduct.

So, dressed in a bulky white sweater and a gray jacket, McNamara was wheeled to the front of the conductor's podium by Harry Ellis Dickson, associate conductor, who led the rest of the program.

The Sousa number had been the theme of the late Arthur Fiedler, who conducted the Boston Pops for 50 years.

Mrs. Haigh said McNamara practiced conducting while listening to Fiedler recordings at the Veterans' Administration Hospital in Brockton, where he is the oldest patient.

"He really wanted to do it right," Mrs. Haigh said.

McNamara was 14 when he joined the Army and served as a musician during the Spanish-American War. After high school he studied classical clarinet at the New England Conservatory.

His stepdaughter said he conducted band concerts until a few years ago. Although he doesn't know the date, he remembers playing under Sousa one night in Mechanics Hall in Boston.

Since then, he dreamed of conducting the Pops in "Stars and Stripes," composed by Sousa in 1897.

Asked how his dream had gone Wednesday night, McNamara said, "Oh, fine." When he was asked if he would like to do it again, he said, "You mean right away?" and then said "I'll have to think it over."

One runner attracts some unusual attention

NEW YORK (AP) — No. 96 in a Central Park foot race drew more attention than might be expected for a runner finishing 436th.

Caroline Kennedy, running for the Metropolitan Museum of Art team, completed the 3.5-mile course Wednesday in 28 minutes, 19 seconds to finish in the top quarter of the 2,113 women who entered the race. It was her first road race, race sponsors said.

"She seemed very pleased with her time," said Fred Lebow, president of the sponsoring New York Road Runners Club. "In fact, her place and her time indicate she's in good physical shape and has the potential to be a pretty good runner."

C. Kennedy

Miss Kennedy was mostly unrecognized by racers and spectators, but she was mobbed by photographers when she crossed the finish line.

Peter McNeil, 25, was the top male finisher among nearly 8,000 entrants with a time of 16:21. Cindy Wuss, also 25, was clocked in at 19:35 to top the women's group.

LONDON (AP) — Portraying Jesus Christ as white or black is an affront to the Christian religion, Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie says.

Robert Runcie

Runcie, head of the Protestant Church of England and the worldwide Anglican Communion, which includes the U.S. Episcopal Church, was speaking Wednesday to a House of Commons committee examining religious education.

"The movement under Hitler to make out Christ as a true Aryan and the black power movements who say Christ was definitely black are both an equal affront to the Christian religion," he said.

The archbishop did not say what was the right way to portray Jesus.

LONDON (AP) — Fee Waybill, lead singer with the American rock band the Tubes, was fined $99 for obstructing a police officer during a noisy promotional stunt on a London street.

The 32-year-old Omaha native, born John Waldo, agreed with Magistrate Eric Crowther, who branded him "an arrogant nuisance."

"I quite like the bit about being an arrogant nuisance. But I wasn't thrilled by his comment that not all London likes to hear us," Waybill told reporters outside court. He said the fine "was a little over the top, but it won't break us."

Waybill admitted obstructing the London bobby who arrested him after he refused to turn down the sound level of the band's equipment as they played on the back of a truck in London's main shopping area Monday.

The Tubes, chided by British newspapers for performing simulated sex and sado-masochism in their stage act, are touring Britain.

Rooney files class action suit seeking movie compensation

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor Mickey Rooney is trying to do what the Screen Actors Guild has never been able to do — get extra pay whenever pre-1960 movies play on commercial television or pay cable TV.

Rooney filed a class-action suit against eight studios Wednesday on behalf of actors whose pre-1960 movies allegedly are exploited for television, home viewing or advertising purposes.

Rooney says his films date back to 1922 when he made his screen debut in a movie called "Not To Be Trusted."

The actor said the motion picture studios were violating federal antitrust and trademark laws in refusing to deal with the plaintiffs' claims for compensation.

The suit filed in U.S. District Court in New York asks the court to declare that actors "exclusively own the right to the publicity value of their names, likenesses, pictures, images and reputations" in movies they appeared in prior to Feb. 1, 1960.

Rooney also asked the court to order an accounting and to determine what monetary damages should be paid.

As far back as 1948, the Screen Actors Guild tried to get residuals for movies sold to television. But it wasn't until 1960 that SAG achieved a contract that provided such payments — a point SAG negotiators would not let producers forget during last year's 10-week SAG strike.

Dr. Allan T. Scholz, a biology instructor at Eastern Washington University, uses a tuning fork in a goldfish-training session. He hopes to train "traitor" goldfish to respond to sound and lead fellow goldfish into ambush in lakes. Goldfish dumped in lakes by kind-hearted former owners are crowding trout out of many lakes.

Sickout in lawmaker's hands

By GARY LANGER
Associated Press Writer

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — State employees whose two-day job action all but shut down state services returned to work today under an uneasy truce left in the hands of a troubled state Legislature.

The protest, which kept more than 80 percent of the state's 9,200 workers at home on Tuesdsay and Wednesday, ended when the union won Gov. Hugh Gallen's pledge to support higher pay raises in the state budget.

But Senate President Robert Monier called the job action illegal and said "The Legislature is not going to yield to such blackmail." The Legislature was to consider the budget plan today that prompted the unprecedented job action.

The sickout forced Gallen to call out 305 National Guardsmen to staff the state mental hospital, a school for the retarded and a correctional center for juveniles. The daily lottery was suspended, 50 of 69 state liuor stores were shut and the state closed welfare, unemployment and motor vehicle offices.

The union called the job action after a legislative committee on Monday proposed pay raises of 6 percent next year and nothing the year after, despite a previously negotiated settlement of 9 percent each year.

Union head Denis Parker would not rule out another job action if the House and Senate approved the lower pay package.

"There is no sense in talking about what we may have to do unless we are forced to do it," he said. "Future job action is not out of the question. ... Let's first see what the Legislature does."

Gallen, a Democrat, said the workers "proved their point" and called on lawmakers to defeat the budget proposal.

"Their actions showed people involved in the political process that they are a very effective force and no longer can the worker's desires be put on the back burner," Gallen said.

But Monier, a Republican considered a likely candidate in the 1982 gubernatorial election, promised a fight.

"The governor is giving the appearance of taking the side of the state workers now out of sheer political expediency," he said. "This illegal job action has cost the state hundreds of thousands of dollars and it's not going to advance the cause of the state workers one bit."

Monier criticized Gallen for signing the agreement with the union for 9 percent raises "when he knew full well that adequate funds were not available for it."

New Hampshire, which has no general state sales or personal income tax, has been struggling to fund a new state budget that takes effect July 1. State workers now earn between $7,808 and $25,954 a year, with few at the top and nearly two-thirds making less than $13,500, the union said.

"We are asking our members to pack the halls of the Statehouse, to make sure their legislators know the score," Parker said. "We have strength, we have shown it and we are not afraid to use it again."

Milliken approves rules banning nuke shipments

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Gov. William Milliken has signed emergency rules prohibiting nuclear wastes from being shipped through Michigan.

However, a spokesman for the Atlanta firm that was planning to handle the shipments says spent nuclear fuel rods still might travel through Michigan.

The emergency rules were signed Wednesday hours after the Nuclear Regulatory Commission approved the Michigan route for shipments from Canada. The governor banned the shipment of casks containing radioactive wastes over state roads and bridges until tests have shown the casks can withstand accidents.

The 23-ton casks used to shield the spent nuclear fuel have not been tested to determine if they could withstand the drop from the International Bridge at Sault Ste. Marie or the Mackinac Bridge linking Michigan's two peninsulas, or the water pressure of the Straits of Mackinac below.

Charles Johnson, vice president of Nuclear Assurance Corp. of Atlanta, which would handle the shipments, said Wednesday that his firm could challenge the newly signed rules in court, test the casks to prove they are safe or delay the shipments until February.

After February, new federal rules take effect that preempt local or state bans on nuclear shipments, he said.

Discarded goldfish squeeze trout

CHENEY, Wash. (AP) — A couple of 2-inch goldfish in a glass bowl do very little harm to anything. But toss them into a lake and they can grow to 8½ pounds, breed to abundance and squeeze out the trout from some of the state's finest fishing waters.

"Our back is against the wall," said Ray Duff, regional Game Department biologist.

He said the problem began in 1973 when some unwanted goldfish were tossed into Eastern Washington lakes by their owners instead of being flushed to oblivion. The proliferation of the fish has become one of his most serious problems, he said.

The goldfish have so crowded nine lakes in the Spokane area, "we are barely able to maintain even a mediocre trout fishery on what should be some of our most productive waters," Duff said.

An 8½-pound goldfish 24 inches long was plucked from one lake, he said.

The Game Department usually eliminates unwanted fish by peri9dically poisoning everything in a problem lake, waiting a year, then reintroducing trout. But poison didn't work with the goldfish.

"We seem to think it has something to do with the water chemistry in Eastern Washington because the chemical, rotenone, doesn't work very well," Duff said. "Western Washington has much softer (mineral-free) waters."

So now researchers are trying a Pied Piper approach.

The Game Department has turned to Allan T. Scholz, a biology instructor at Eastern Washington University who has devised a strategem whereby a few "traitor" goldfish are trained in the laboratory and released in a lake to lead, it is hoped, thousands of fellow fish to their doom.

Scholz already has trained goldfish to respond to a tone. His idea is to plant the fish in a crowded lake, switch on an underwater sound source and hope the untrained goldfish follow the "traitors" toward a cove, where they could be netted or otherwise exterminated.

There are some unknowns, however, such as whether the goldfish would remember their laboratory training if moved to a lake and whether other goldfish would follow.

But research has given Scholz enough hope to persevere with his experiments.

He has succeeded in lengthening the memories of rainbow trout by hormone treatment and plans to try the same thing on goldfish this summer. He also will be working on an underwater sound source.

Scholz is also studying another possibility: that goldfish naturally congregate in late fall.

Research in a goldfish-infested Wisconsin lake just before the lake froze showed goldfish begin moving to a specific site where they spend the winter. Crowded together, they could be caught with minimum effort and expense.

Scholz and a graduate student are testing the theory.

"If we find that fish aggregate naturally like that, then our whole problem is licked," Scholz said.

Scholz said he also plans to look into hints from other research that goldfish may be attracted by the smell of fermented corn.

Goldfish do well because they feed from the bottom of the food chain — algae, plankton, small insects "material that is in most abundant amounts," Duff said. "Most fish cannot convert those items."

Also, goldfish are "very prolific, a tremendous number of offspring produced by the females. Competition is virtually nonexistent," Duff said..

"Because we cannot control them, it's interfering with a multimillion-dollar recreation industry," he added.

Appeals court overturns ruling

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An injunction that had barred the government from reducing care at eight U.S. Public Health Service hospitals has been overturned by a federal appeals court.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, in a 2-1 vote, ruled that the Department of Health and Human Services and Congress could reduce financing for the hospitals without repeal of a law mandating care for merchant seamen.

The ruling also overturns U.S. District Judge Robert Aguilar's injunction barring the government from stopping payment for contract, or outside, medical care received by merchant seamen.

The appeal court ruled that Aguilar had abused his discretion in granting a preliminary injunction June 4 to the Sailors' Union of the Pacific.

"The balance of hardships in this case tips in favor of" the government, the court wrote.

"Moreover a greater public interest is served in keeping the hospitals and clinics open longer to serve all the beneficiaries than in keeping them open for a shorter time to provide American seamen with full services," the court continued.

At the heart of the dispute is the Reagan administration's plan to shut down the hospitals by Oct. 31. Budget cuts have already been approved by Congress, but Aguilar said a 1973 law providing for care for seamen would have to be repealed in order for the hospitals to be closed.

The appeal court disagreed. "An appropriations measure can suspend operation of or rescind by implication a substantive law," it said.

The hospitals are in San Francisco; Boston; Baltimore; New Orleans; Seattle; Nassau Bay, Texas; Norfolk, Va.; and Staten Island N.Y.

Lincoln Fairchild and friend (on shoulder)

Bigger IS better

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Go ahead, ask any female Fowler's toad who's worth her warts and you'll likely get the same response: Bigger is better, when it comes to choosing your mate.

Ohio State University zoologist Lincoln Fairchild will give the same answer — from a toad's standpoint, that is.

"Bigger is better, it turns out," said Fairchild, who's been studying the communication patterns of toads and other animals for more than 10 years.

Fairchild heads Ohio State's Borror Laboratory of Bioacoustics, which houses more than 21,000 animal sound recordings. He believes his theory is not only probable but also provable.

"There are few cases where you can show where animals are choosing mates for their physical attributes, not for the real estate they own or the car they drive — except in Fowler's toads," he said.

Fowler's toads, found in the eastern United States but rarer and smaller than American toads, are about 2½ inches from nose to vent and live up to eight years. But unlike other toads and frogs, Fowler females are attracted to males by the volume of the male mating call and, consequently, the volume of the male body.

"There's no data to show that larger is louder, but the pulse rate differs with size," Fairchild said, "Larger males have slower pulse rates, which can give the perception of a louder frequency. And females can tell the size by that speed."

Fairchild, 35, began his work with animal communications as an undergraduate student at Duke University in North Carolina. His original interest was in hepring gulls, but he turned toward toads "in search of a simpler system."

"I was again looking initially at interference, how do animals deal with noise? Not just environmental noise, but sounds that their neighbors also produce," he said.

In experiments, Fairchild watched as Fowler females hopped toward the larger males' songs, rejecting the cries of the measly males. The smaller toads tried to outsmart the females by waiting on the bank to snare unsuspecting ladies bouncing by — or by squatting on colder spots, thereby deepening their croaks.

Toads' sound vary with temperature, Fairchild said, with colder temperatures producing slower pulse rates. So it's a mad scramble for the coldest spots, whether in water or on shore depending on the night and the time of year.

"It's hard to think that a small toad thinks, 'God, I've got to get my cold spot tonight.' But the smaller toads are more successful (at attracting females) in cold spots," he said.

In the world of Fowler's toads, where males outnumber females 100 to 1 at most breeding spots, you do whatever needs to be done, Fairchild said.

Just what kind of voice does it take to lure the females?

"It's not very melodious, but it's effective, I guess," he said. "It's a harsh, nasal sound, very directional. Sort of like 'NNWWWWAAAAAAAA!'"

The breeding season for Fowler's toads lasts from April through June, much longer than the two to three weeks for American toads. That's one reason why female Fowlers can afford to be choosy, Fairchild said.

Still, why do the females push aside the puny toads and hold out for their heftier brothers?

It's not that the larger Fowler males are macho — they don't defend the females and young. It's not that they're more aggressive — they're not the combative type. And it's not because the smaller toads can't fertilize as many eggs — they can.

"What you're left with is that the larger male is imparting something to its offspring," he said. "It's purely genetic. ... A larger individual is one who has either grown faster or is older, and I have a sneaky suspicion that it's the growth rate rather than age that attracts females. It demonstrates that as an individual, you have survived, you've undergone a lot of ordeals and can hack it."

Fairchild has expanded his study to the albatross and frigate birds of the Midway Islands. But he keeps trailing the still unanswered questions: How loud must a mating call be before it's heard? What happens when the environment changes or when odds favor the males? Do poor croakers score?

For Fairchild, however, the most important thing is not whether the toads win or lose, or even how they play the game.

"The greatest significance is not that toads do it this way or that way, or any other animals, or how it pertains to people," he said.

"What is important is that it gives us a system to work out some of the relationships between different mating systems. If you know something about the social interaction of Fowler's toads, you know something about the total environmental picture."

Now the revolutionary Merrill Lynch Cash Management Account® offers tax-free income too!

The Merrill Lynch Cash Management Account, a truly unique financial service, now offers a tax-exempt money trust in addition to all its many other attractive features. This important new service gives the Cash Management Account a new dimension that will appeal to investors seeking tax-free income.

The CMA™ Tax-Exempt Trust gives you the benefit of professional management of a diversified portfolio of tax-free high-quality short-term municipal securities with the aim of providing maximum stability and liquidity and preservation of your capital. And, there's a constant net asset value of $1 per share.

With the Merrill Lynch Cash Management Account service you can write checks as you need. And you get this special advantage: your cash continues to earn tax-free* income, compounded daily, until the checks actually clear. Merrill Lynch is not a bank. Your checks are cleared through Bank One of Columbus, N.A. You never have minimum-balance problems. And your money is kept working full time until the last possible minute.

"Idle" funds are invested automatically. The proceeds of any security sale will automatically be invested in your CMA™ Tax-Exempt Trust on settlement date. Credits of $1,000 or more will automatically be invested in shares of your CMA Tax-Exempt Trust the following business day. Credits of under $1,000 will automatically be invested the first business day of the following week. So, even if you forget, we don't. Your money is kept working—tax-free—full time!

There is also a CMA Money Trust, which invests for higher, taxable yields. You always have the option of switching from one trust to the other, or to use both at the same time.

Instant loan availability. Suppose there's no cash invested in your Tax-Exempt Trust but you have securities in your CMA account. Then, you can continue to write checks up to the loan value of your securities. You have an automatically approved line of credit. You can pay the loan back whenever you wish. There is no time limit and there are no monthly payments. The cash that flows into your account from dividends, interest, sales proceeds, etc., automatically goes to reduce the principal amount of your loan.

Special VISA® card. As part of your CMA account, you are issued a special VISA card by Bank One of Columbus, N.A. It is honored everywhere VISA cards are accepted. In addition, it can be used to obtain instant cash at 80,000 banks worldwide.

Once a month, you get a comprehensive statement listing all security transactions, interest and dividends, check-writing and VISA card activities and a reconciliation of your total account, day by day.

No wonder CMA is attracting attention—and investors—everywhere. You can see that CMA is a truly revolutionary way of managing your money in a productive and efficient way while maintaining immediate access to it at all times. That's why Fortune Magazine devoted most of six pages to it (October 20, 1980 issue) and claimed that "The Merrill Lynch Cash Management Account...may be the most important financial innovation in years." You can use as many or as few of its features as you like. The point is, if you're about to commit funds to short-term tax-free investments, why not do it in a way that will make all these other valuable services available to you?

Taking the Fifth Amendment in the case of three youths who drowned in Lake Mexia on Juneteenth is Deputy Kenny Elliot, right, and reserve deputy Kenneth Archie, not shown. Limestone County Sheriff Dennis Walker accompanies Elliot as they leave the special court of inquiry being held at the Limestone County Courthouse in Groesbeck, Texas.

Mortician testifies youths were handcuffed

GROESBECK, Texas (AP) — A mortician who said he's seen 200 drownings believes that three black teen-agers were handcuffed when they fell from a boat and drowned last weekend while in the custody of sheriff's deputies.

The hands of Carl Baker were in "a very unusual position," when he arrived at the Darsey-Keatts Funeral Home in Mexia, mortician Leon Darsey II, who examined the body, said Wednesday.

Steve Booker of Dallas and Baker of Mexia, both 19, and Anthony Freeman, 18, also of Mexia, drowned about 11 p.m. June 19 when a small boat they were in with two Limestone County deputies and a probation officer capsized.

The three officers, who had arrested the youths on drug charges during a "Juneteenth" celebration at Lake Mexia, were able to swim safely 40 yards back to shore.

Relatives said Booker and Baker were excellent swimmers, although Freeman apparently could not swim.

State District Judge P.K. Reiter called the Court of Inquiry to get a "public airing" of the incident. The FBI and NAACP are conducting separate investigations.

Darsey testified in the second day of the inquiry that it looked as though Baker had died with handcuffs on because his hands were at his side, palms facing together, and because his wrists were discolored.

"It's highly unlikely you will find a drowning victim's hands in that position," said Darsey, who told the court he has been a mortician for 17 years.

However, Mexia Fire Chief Aarron Thompson testified earlier Wednesday there were no handcuffs on the bodies of three teen-agers when their bodies were pulled from the water.

Thompson said rigor mortis already had set in when the youths' bodies were recovered, but that all were in a relaxed position, with their arms stretched out above their heads.

Larry W. Baraka, special prosecutor for the court of inquiry, said he is convinced all three were handcuffed when they drowned and said he would produce television videotapes and witnesses to support his claim.

"I think some people also are suspicious of the medical report, and that's why the funerals are delayed," said Baraka, a Dallas attorney recommended for the inquiry by the NAACP.

Limestone County Sheriff's Department officers deny the youth's were handcuffed while in the boat. Autopsies showed no unusual marks on the victims.

Arthur Beachum and Cora Jackson, who were at the lake when the teenagers' bodies were recovered, testified Wednesday that they saw handcuffs being taken off of one of the bodies.

But Beachum said he could not identify the men who had been involved in the recovery effort, although he knew several of them personally.

Waylon Alewine, a game warden, testified that the officers violated water safety laws by not having lifejackets aboard and by loading the boat with 200 pounds more than its 600-pound limit.

Two convicted; More await trial

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Federal prosecutors probably are expecting more calls from defense attorneys seeking to negotiate deals today in the wake of their second straight win against a defendant involved in the county commissioner kickback scheme.

A federal court jury convicted Anadarko supply company owner Donald H. Skipworth on 26 counts of mail fraud and income tax evasion Wednesday after deliberating 55 minutes.

Last week, another federal court jury took about two hours to convict Blaine County Commissioner Orville Pratt on two counts of extortion and mail fraud.

The basic difference in the two cases was that Pratt was convicted of taking kickbacks while Skipworth was convicted of paying them. In both cases, the government had tape recordings of either the actual kickback conversations or conversations about past kickbacks.

Three other county commissioners are scheduled to go on trial July 15 on charges similar to those that were brought agiinst Pratt.

In addition, 13 other commissioners, former commissioners and suppliers are known to have agreed to plead guilty to kickback charges and more than 20 others reportedly are negotiating with prosecutors to plead guilty if the potential charges against them are reduced, sources said.

The three-year statewide investigation by the FBI and Internal Revenue Service ultimately is expected to produce more than 100 indictments or guilty pleas on charges relating to kickbacks paid to commissioners on purchases of lumber and heavy equipment used in construction of roads and bridges, sources told The Associated Press.

U.S. District Judge Luther Eubanks deferred sentencing Skipworth until he receives a report from a federal probation officer. Skipworth could receive up to 124 years in prison and $38,000 in fines, but Oklahoma judges haven't been assessing the maximum penalty in such cades.

He was convicted on three counts of income tax evasion and 23 counts of mail fraud. The tax counts each carry a maximum penalty of three years in prison and a $5,000 fine, while the mail fraud counts provide for a maximum of five years in prison and a $1,000 fine on each charge.

During the four-day trial, four government witnesses, including two former county commissioners, testified they had participated in a kickback scheme with Skipworth on purchases of lumber and road-and bridge-building equipment. Skipworth offered no defense.

When the defense rested without calling any witnesses Wednesday, it allowed the case to go to the jury much earlier than expected.

The 11-man, one-woman jury received the case at 1:02 p.m. and Eubanks began notifying the lawyers in the case at 1:57 p.m. that a verdict had been reached.

When asked if he was surprised that jurors deliberated an average of two minutes on each of the 26 counts, Assistant U.S. Attorney William Price said, "Well, I felt it was a strong case, and it wasn't rebutted by anything. Obviously, the jury also felt it was a strong case."

Apparent jail suicide investigated

CORSICANA, Texas (AP) — Corsicana officials were awaiting the results of an autopsy today to complete their investigation into the death of a 35-year-old Goodlowe alderman who apparently hanged himself in a Corsicana jail cell.

William Bryant was arrested for public intoxication at 10:30 p.m. Monday at a Corsicana city park and taken to a jail, police said. Corsicana Police Chief Verne Ellis said Bryant, who had no previous police record in Corsicana, did not resist arrest and did not seem suicidal.

Ellis said Bryant was not formally charged with drunkenness because the magistrate's office was not open.

Ellis said he glanced at television monitors of the cells about midnight Monday and noticed that Bryant apparently had used his shirt to hang himself.

Commissioners indicted in kickback scheme

TYLER, Texas (AP) — A federal investigation into county spending practices in Texas and Oklahoma has resulted in indictments against three county commissioners and two former commissioners on charges of bribery and mail fraud.

"All five are alleged to have extorted kickbacks under color of official right, using the mail to defraud their county governments," said U.S. District Attorney John Hannah during a news conference he called Wednesday to announce the indictments.

Named in the indictments were: Red River County Commissioner Robert Lunsford Edwards, 16 counts; Fannin County Commissioner Charles Eugene Edwards, 7 counts; Bowie County Commissioner J.C. Arnold, 36 counts; Former Bowie County commissioners Carlos Eugene Tidwell, 14 counts, and Bernard Nettles Brown, 38 counts.

Hannah's office and the FBI are leading the Texas investigation that is part of a multi-state federal investigation into kickbacks and extortion involving county commissioners and road and bridge materials salesmen.

The year-long probe has resulted in charges against 13 present and former Northeast Texas county commissioners and two Texas vendors.

The investigation also has netted at least 18 indictments against county officials in Arkansas and reportedly involves up to 100 judges or county commissioners in 40 counties throughout Oklahoma.

The indictments handed down Wednesday allege that the five commissioners conspired with vendors to place orders for road and bridge materials that were never delivered.

The county officials allegedly then endorsed invoices and mailed checks for the fictitious supplies to the various equipment salesmen.

The indictments allege that the vendors, Dallas Thompson and Sharron Griffen of Griffen Lumber Co., in Ferris, Okla., would then return to the commissioners about half the amount of money they received for equipment that was not delivered.

Besides Thompson, 77, and John F. Lands, 66, of Queens City, two other Texas county commissioners pleaded guilty in April to the bribery and mail fraud charges.

Six other county officials pleaded innocent last month to a total of 111 counts involving kickbacks, mail fraud and conspiracy.

FBI officials have examined records in at least 16 Northeast Texas counties over the past year and handed down indictments against officials in Bowie, Red River, Fannin, Titus and Cass counties.

Hannah, who says the investigation will continue, reportedly mailed letters last month to county auditors in Gregg, Marion, Camp, Harrison, Upshur and Wood counties requesting the names and addresses of all salesmen who have sold road machinery and supplies to the counties for the past five years.

The U.S. Attorney's designated replacement, Bob Wortham, said Wednesday that when he takes office later this month he will name Hannah as a special prosecutor to continue the investigation into political corruption throughout counties in East Texas.

Authorities compare notes on rent house scam

SPRING, Texas (AP) — Authorities are comparing notes with detectives from other states in an effort to track down two con artists who fleeced at least eight families in a clever rent house hoax.

Sheriff's Capt. W.F. Robichaux said he has been contacted by detectives in Tennessee, California, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma and Florida who said they had discovered similarities in other scams.

Meanwhile, sheriff's deputies continue their five-day-old search for a Tennessee couple who allegedly conned at least eight families of $5,900 in deposits and then vanished.

But, Robichaux admitted, investigators have had "absolutely no leads" to the whereabouts of Johnny Marcello, alias John Walker, 38, and his wife Susan, 35, of Donelson, Tenn.

"We don't know if they're in Texas, Louisiana or anywhere else," he said.

They are charged with five counts of theft by deception. If convicted they could received a maximum 50-year prison sentence and a $25,000 fine.

So far, eight families have arrived at this Houston suburb ready to move into the same three-bedroom, two-bathroom house. Authorities fear there could be more.

The telephone company reported Wednesday that someone named Stein — a possible ninth victim — had ordered a phone at the adress. But sheriff's Maj. Carl Mangogna said he had no firm evidence yet of any more families involved.

Meanwhile, members from five of the eight families spent Wendesday describing Marcello to a sheriff's department artist.

Sheriff's deputies said Marcello rented the brick home from Robert Ley. But, authorities speculated, the Marcellos posed as the owners of the house and accepted deposits from the unsuspecting "renters."

Sheriff's Lt. Tommy Clebuski said additional charges would be filed against the couple as soon as paperwork was completed.

Reagan, Haig praise ambassador

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. have praised U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick's work in helping develop a Security Council resolution condemning Israel's attack on Iraq's nuclear reactor.

The plaudits were issued Wednesday after the New York Times quoted unidentified Haig aides as saying the secretary was unhappy with Mrs. Kirkpatrick's performance in negotiations preceeding the council vote.

"Ambassador Kirkpatrick did a superb job that has been characteristic of her performance at the United Nations from the outset," Haig told reporters in Honolulu, where he spent two days resting following his Asia trip.

"I'm shocked and disappointed that such a story should be written and, more importantly, that it should be attributed to one of my aides, or more," Haig said.

"Any such statements by my aides are misinformed or they have been misinterpreted. They do not reflect my personal views and do not accurately reflect the consultation process" that went on between himself, the president, national security adviser Richard Allen and Mrs. Kirkpatrick, the secretary said.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the president complimented the U.N. ambassador during a cabinet meeting Tuesday and then called her Wednesday.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick was quoted in today's editions of The Times by telephone from St. Remy, France, where she is vacationing, as saying: "I was in continuous touch with the president and the secretary of state and I followed my instructions in the most minute detail. That is simply the truth."

The newspaper said it would not comment on Haig's statements.

The Times reported Wednesday that aides speaking with reporters aboard Haig's plane and in Wellington, New Zealand, said Haig had to intervene personally from Peking and Manila to insure that the resolution was not overly injurious to Israel.

The aides were quoted as saying Haig phoned the Iraqi foreign minister fromManila to obtain language that Ms. Kirkpatrick said was impossible to achieve.

A very senior State Department official told rporters Tuesday that during his trip Haig consulted with the foreign minister in New York by telephone on the wording of the resolution. It was known that Haig was not the official who was the source critical of Mrs. Kirkpatrick.

Texas schools to suffer under cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Burkburnett, a small town in North Texas, has 3,382 students in school, almost 20 percent of whom live on federal property.

Since the school district gets no property tax from those students, the federal government has been reimbursing Burkburnett — and 239 other Texas schools — to offset the cost of educating the children of military families.

But all 240 of those Texas schools will have a crisis on their hands if Congress approves President Reagan's proposal that the federal reimbursement be stopped, an El Paso educator testified Wednesday before the Senate Armed Forces Committee.

"UNDER THE president's proposal, Burkburnett will lose about $653,000," said James A. Francis, associate superintendent of the El Paso school district, arguing for a continuation of the aid.

"This loss will require the permanent residents to have to pay about $237 per child more money for the education of each of their own children in order that the military children can be accommodated in school along with them and that there will be no reduction in the quality of education."

Appearing with Francis before the Senate committee were two other Texas educators — Dr. Clarence Hamm, superintendent in Killeen, and Edmund D. Cody, superintendent at San Antonio North Side High School.

The committee chairman, Sen. John Tower, D-Texas, opened Wednesday's hearing by making plain his support of continued impact aid.

"THE FEDERAL government has at the very least a moral obligation to provide states with financial assistance to offset educational costs generated by the presence of military installations and activities," Tower said.

"We cannot simply turn our backs on these school districts which without such tax revenues are, in many cases, simply unable to afford the additional costs of educating the dependents of Department of Defense personnel."

The real issue, Tower said, is not whether federal impact aid should be continued to the schools, but how much.

In Texas, the 240 districts received $32.3 million in such aid last year, but Reagan's proposal would reduce this to $9.8 million to only six school districts, Francis added.

Killeen is one of the six districts that would continue to receive some impact aid. The others are Del Valle, Franklin, Lackland, Fort Sam Houston and Randolph, and the last three are districts where boundaries are contiguous with the military reservation.

KILLEEN, LOCATED near Fort Hood, would lose about $2 million, Francis added.

The only alternatives a school will have, if it wants to keep its quality of education high, are to raise property taxes locally or to charge tuition to military families.

Of the 212 square miles in the El Paso school district, almost half of it — 101 square miles — is the Fort Bliss military reservation and therefore untaxable for educational purposes, Francis said.

Property taxpayers in Texas may be unable or unwilling to replace the funds lost by federal impact aid, he suggested.

"If they are called on to do this, and they do follow through, the raise in taxes is likely to be accompanied by resentment that will affect our highly positive climate for military populations," he said.

EXTREME POVERTY exists in El Paso, he added. Among the school enrollment of 61,000 children are 36,827 who meet poverty guidelines and receive free or reduced-price lunches.

"This indicates that about 60 percent of our children come from families who are unable to adequately provide for the education of their own children. These same families are now being asked to pick up the educational costs of others," said Francis.

Soon, wherever military families are assigned in Texas, "their children are going to attend underfinanced schools, because the federal impact will so dilute community resources that an inferior educational program can be the only result," Francis added.

The El Paso educator said the Texas Legislature has just enacted legislation to allow school districts to charge tuition for a student who lives in military housing exempt from taxation by the district.

"MILITARY PAY is not adequate to afford this. Litigation would undoubtedly result, and this litigation would only be a further abrasion to the harmony that has existed between the military and civilian people in Texas," Francis said.

"Tuition from the military child is not a good solution to the problem. An increased tax burden on the local property owners is not a good solution. The best solution is the one we have in place right now — an adequately funded program that allows the federal government to provide school districts with funds in lieu of taxes."

Shelling undermines cease-fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Overnight shelling and artillery fire in Beirut and in the Christian city of Zahle undermined Lebanon's shaky cease-fire, police reported today.

The renewed battles came just as Arab mediators in Saudi Arabia were wrapping up talks by calling on all factions to observe the two-week-old truce.

The rightist-controlled Voice of Lebanon radio station said 30 people were wounded in Zahle, 30 miles east of Beirut. The city, controlled by right-wing Christian militas, has been under siege by Syrian peacekeeping troops since April 1.

There were no reports of casualties in Beirut, where Syrian forces and rightist militias traded artillery and rocket fire along the mid-city line which separates the capital into a Christian east and Moslem west. Police said residential areas in east Beirut were shelled heavily late Wednesday night.

In Saudi Arabia, Arab mediators wound up a conference in Jidda, where they had been discussing a strategy for peace in war-torn Lebanon. A communique issued Wednesday night stressed "the importance of putting into effect the commitment earlier registered by the committee that all factions in Lebanon observe the consolidation of the cease-fire on all Lebanese territory."

The committee of mediators first met at the summer palace of Beiteddine, 25 miles southeast of Beirut, and declared a cease-fire on June 8 between Syrian forces and the rightist Christians. The cease-fire has held despite minor infractions.

According to newspaper reports, Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam said in Jidda that Syria would welcome the addition of troops from other Arab nations to its 22,000-man force, which has been in Lebanon under Arab League mandate to police a civil war armistice.

Terrorists hanged

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Two leftist terrorists convicted of killing a U.S. Naval officer and his Turkish driver here last year were hanged a dawn today, authorities said.

They were the seventh and eighth men executed since the military seized power in a coup last Sept. 12. Before the coup, Turkey had not executed a political criminal since 1972.

Home may need changes

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The Secret Service is examining a $1.2 million Saddle River home purchased by Richard Nixon to see if changes are necessary to guarantee the former president's security.

"We've got people out there right now poring over every inch of the place to see what is needed," Special Agent James Boyle said Wednesday. "We don't want to be caught short."

The home, on four acres of land in one of the most exclusive communities in New Jersey, contains seven bedrooms, a pool and tennis courts. Nixon is expected to move there from his Manhattan townhouse in August.

The Secret Service — charged with protecting former presidents for the rest of their lives — is expected to recommend the installation of sophisticated electronic surveillance equipment and fencing around the property. Secret Service officials said they also will seek to build secure entrances.

Government experts support daylight time

By TOM EASTHAM
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — Government experts testified Wednesday in favor of extending daylight saving time two months to save energy and reduce traffic deaths and violent crime.

The Department of Transportation analysts threw their support behind legislation to increase daylight time from the present six month period to eight months by advancing the starting date from the last Sunday in April to the first Sunday in March.

His agency's studies showed "a consistent pattern of small, positive effects" of such change, Richard F. Walsh, director of the DOT's office of economics and public investment reported to the Senate Commerce Committee.

Polls have shown the public favors the longer daylight period by a ratio of two to one, Walsh reported.

The Department of Transporation expert was scheduled to testify later before a House subcommittee hearing. Both houses of Congress appear to be moving rapidly toward passage of legislation with little opposition in sight.

The push seems to be to get a bill passed in time to change the 1982 daylight time period.

Wednesday morning's Senate hearing concerned two virtually identical bills, one of which would end daylight time a week later than at present, in the first week of November, to relieve street and sidewalk hazards for children on Halloween.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., author of the main bill – S. 49 – with Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., told the committee adding two months of daylight time "makes good scientific sense" because it would result in maximum use of available sunlight – offering approximately equal daylight on the first and last day of the period.

But he added that "perhaps a better reason to adopt this bill is that people seem to like daylight savings time." His mail has been overwhelmingly in favor of his bill, he said.

Largely favorable comments on the eight-month proposal have been based on studies and public reaction to a one-year experiment with it in 1975, which was not renewed. Since then, the six-month period has been in force.

"Under the present system, we waste the resource that is daylight as we waste another resource that is energy," declared Sen. George J. Mitchell, D.-Maine, whose similar bill would extend the cutoff into November.

He cited estimates showing the extension would save about 100,000 barrels of oil -- a savings of more than $150 million a year nationally in electrical usage alone.

Department of Transportation studies show traffic fatalities would be reduced approximately one percent in those months, because home-bound commuting in darkness is more dangerous and drivers more fatigued and under greater influence of alcohol, he noted.

They estimate that moving daylight time to early March would result in 4,000 fewer traffic accidents and 200 fewer deaths.,

Moral Majority forming legal arm

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — The Moral Majority will start defending "folks who believe like we do" through a legal arm billed as a "conservative version" of the American Civil Liberties Union, a spokesman says.

"You'll see just as much of the Moral Majority Legal Defense Fund as you now see of the ACLU," Harry Covert, editor of the Moral Majority Report, said Wednesday. "We're going to bat for people who can't defend themselves.

"A lot of adverse rulings come out because people don't know how to defend themselves," he said.

"Private and Christian schools, ministers of all denominations and conservative citizens have felt the sting of liberal legislation in their own cities and counties and often have been helpless before the courts of the nation," he wrote in the "Report Card" column of the Moral Majority newspaper.

Covert said the legal arm will rely on volunteer lawyers to represent people who seek Moral Majority's help and be financed through regular Moral Majority fund-raising appeals and contributions.

In the past, the right-wing group founded by the Rev. Jerry Falwell has been asked for legal assistance, "but we didn't have the machinery to do it," he said.

"The shell has been set up," Covert said. "Now they go about setting up the work. We've had many attorneys who believe like we do volunteer their services throughout the country."

The Moral Majority newspaper said attorneys John Whitehead of Washington, D.C., and Mike Farris of Olympia, Wash., already represent the defense fund.

"Our legal defense arm will have a similar response to that of the American Civil Liberties Union ... We intend to make the Moral Majority legal defense a productive and influential part of the American scene," Falwell was quoted as saying in the June 22 issue of Moral Majority Report.

An example of a case of interest to Moral Majority's lawyers would be "if the tax department jumps on some private school with 100 students that doesn't have the money to defend itself," Covert said.

"We have some prominent cases before us now that we are examining and intend to serve as friends of the court," said Moral Majority Vice President Ronald Godwin.

Civil rights leaders say they're ready to do court battle.

Energy department refuses to turn over shale information to Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department, faced with a congressional subpoena, is standing fast in its refusal to turn over information about negotiations on government subsidies for a commercial shale oil project in Colorado.

"The department feels it has a responsibility, as part of the executive branch, to go forward with this process," spokesman Jim Merna said. "We can't honor the subcommittee's request."

On Wednesday, the House Government Operations subcommittee on environment, energy and natural resources voted to subpoena all DOE documents connected with Union Oil Co.'s request for government price guarantees for its Colorado shale oil project.

"We don't go off issuing subpoenas haphazardly," Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., said. The move came after three days of discussions between subcommittee staff and DOE officials last week failed to yield the information the panel is seeking.

Moffett, the subcommittee chairman, said the panel's major concerns are that DOE has not determined that a subsidy is needed to convince Union Oil to build the plant or that whatever subsidy is agreed on is justified.

"I fail to see how giving government money to projects that would go forward anyway is a wise decision," Moffett said. "In doing that, in fact, you're denying money to other projects."

But Merna, calling the subcommittee action "unprecedented," said that releasing the information before negotiations on the project are completed would "impair the integrity of the process leading to awards of public contracts."

He said Moffett has been advised that the department will consider any legal questions he raises about the proposal before those negotiations are completed, possibly in the next two weeks.

Subcommittee members argued, however, that the Union Oil contract would be binding once signed so any review after that will mean nothing should serious questions about its propriety remain.

Union Oil is one of two companies seeking federal aid under the $3.3 billion Defense Production Act. Edith Holleman, a subcommittee staff member who has been involved in the dispute, told the panel that unconfirmed trade publication reports indicate the government is ready to guarantee Union Oil $89 a barrel for between 10,000 and 20,000 barrels of oil a day from the plant.

She said there is no indication what the maximum amount of government subsidy for Union Oil might be. Government estimates place the cost of a barrel of oil at a maximum of $58 in 1990, not adjusted for inflation between now and then.

Rep. Floyd Fithian, D-Ind., said the $89-a-barrel price amounts to nearly twice the government estimate for the cost of producing synthetic fuels.

On the other project, Congress will have automatic review of the contract between DOE and the Tosco Corp. because it involves a government loan guarantee for construction of a shale oil plant adjacent to Union Oil's.

Hudspeth, Kent get wildcats; three field tests scheduled

A wildcat and three field tests have been scheduled in the District 8 counties of Hudspeth, Crane and Pecos.

HUDSPETH COUNTY

Border Exploration will drill the No. 71 J.J. McAdoo, an 8,500-foot wildcat in Hudspeth County, 8.6 miles east of Salt Flat.

Location is 1,000 feet from the north line and 1,000 feet from the east line of section 7, block 119 of the Public School Lands survey and is 10 miles northeast of a 10,740-foot discovery drilled in 1977.

KENT COUNTY

Energy Reserves Group Inc. of Midland will drill the No. 1 Fincher as a 4,600-foot wildcat in Kent County, six miles west of Girard.

Location is 467 feet from the north line and 467 feet from the east line of section 94, block 1 of the H&GN survey.

The site is 1 3/4 miles south and slightly east of the LeClair No. 1-A Thomas, total depth 4,607 feet.

PECOS COUNTY

SMS Oil Co. of Iraan will drill the No. 03 University "H" as a confirmer to the Taylor Link field of Pecos County, 1 north of Bakersfield.

Location is 330 feet from the south and 2,310 feet from the west lines of section 30, block 16, of the University Lands Survey. Contract depth is 1,600 fet.

The site is 1 3/4 miles north and slightly west of the F. Randolph, abandoned Dec. 12, 1962.

Cortez Pipeline to carrry carbon dioxide to Texas, New Mexico

CORTEZ, Colo. (AP) — Shell Oil Co. is planning to start construction of a 500-mile, $600 million pipeline to carry carbon dioxide from underground reservoirs here to old oil fields in Texas and New Mexico, officials say.

Bob Howard, general manager of Shell Oil's Mid-Continent Division in Houston, said construction probably would begin in 1982 and the carbon dioxide could be flowing by late 1983.

Howard would not reveal the size of the CO2 reserves believed to exist in the McElmo Dome region, west of Cortez, and in the Doe Canyon field, north of Cortez.

"When you have an asset the size of the McElmo Dome region, you are a little reluctant to talk about it," Howard said. "Just say there are considerable reserves ..."

A company landman is expected to arrive in Cortez next week to survey private property for rights-of-way acquisition for the project. The pipeline would cross both public and private land in Colorado, Texas and New Mexico.

According to Howard, 1.2 trillion cubic feet of the carbon dioxide will be used to extract an estimated 280 million barrels of oil from fields in the southwest corner of the Texas Panhandle, near Hobbs, N.M.

Howard estimated that another 2 to 4 billion barrels could be produced by injecting CO2 into old or marginal fields in the United States.

Carbon dioxide dissolves in oil droplets in the oil fields, causing them to expand and flow together into large globules, which then can be pumped from the underground reservoirs, Howard explained.

Independents plan to catch oil field thieves

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Independent oil producers plan a six-month project to catch thieves who steal oil field equipment.

Beginning July 1 a phone number will be available for producers to call collect to report thefts.

Jan Ward of the North Texas Oil and Gas Association will receive the information and pass it on to law officers and the local news media, according to the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association.

Automakers urge freezing of auto emission standards

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arguing that air quality goals are within reach under current controls, the nation's top five automakers say 1980 auto emission standards are sufficient and should be frozen.

The automakers, testifying before the Senate Environment Committee, said stricter standards scheduled to go into effect for 1983 and 1984 cars would cost consumers millions while benefiting only a few locations.

In testimony Wednesday, they said the 1980 standards for carbon monoxide and nitrogen oxides will allow air quality goals spelled out in the federal Clean Air Act to be met by the end of the decade, as cleaner new cars replace dirty older cars.

"Air quality is improving at a faster rate than had been projected when the standards presently in the act were established," argued Herbert L. misch, vice president of Ford Motor Co. "Moreover, there is the certainty of continuing progress as the old fleet is replaced.

"This permits some adjustment to the statutory levels without jeopardizing attainment of national ambient air quality standards," Misch said.

The savings to consumers could amount to anywhere from $80 per car, by Ford's estimate, to $360 per car, by General Motors Corp.'s estimate.

Executives of GM, Chrysler Corp., American Motors Corp. and Volkswagen of America Inc. joined Ford on Wednesday in urging Congress to relax the auto emission law.

While the five companies differed on some proposed changes in the air pollution law, they united in calling for three key amendments:

—Retaining a 1980 emission level for carbon monoxide of 7 grams per mile (gpm). The level is scheduled to be tightened to 3.4 gpm in 1983.

—Retaining a 1980 emission level for nitrogen oxides of 2 gpm, rather than tightening the standard to 1 gpm.

—Easing a scheduled 1984 requirement that cars be just as pollution-free at high altitudes, where less oxygen means less efficient burning of fuel, as they are at sea level. Current law allows dirtier exhaust at high altitude cities.

"None of these recommendations, if enacted, will result in deteriorated air quality," said GM Vice President David S. Potter. "All, in fact, will continue the progress that has been made toward achieving the national ambient air quality standards, but in a much more cost-effective manner."

Potter said relaxing the carbon monoxide standard would save $30 to $60 per car, but still allow national air quality goals for the pollutant to be met by 1990. He said the amendment is supported by both the National Commission on Air Quality and the National Academy of Sciences.

On the nitrogen oxides proposal, Potter said only Chicago, Denver and Southern California now have excessive levels of nitrogen oxides in the atmosphere, making the stricter standard unnecessary for most areas. But he said the stricter requirement would cost car buyers throughout the nation $165 to $300 per car if it goes into effect.

And Potter said the high-altitude requirement would require all car buyers to pay $65 per car for special controls although only 3 percent to 4 percent of autos are actually sold in high-altitude cities.

The automakers argued that quick action on the changes is critical because the certification process for 1983 models begins this fall, and assembly lines must be tooled next spring for the production run.

GM asked for final legislative action within 90 days, while American Motors said a decision is needed by the end of August.

Meeting either deadline is extremely unlikely. Controversy over the act is causing many lawmakers to question whether action can be completed this year, even though authorization for the Clean Air Act technically expires on Sept. 30.

Hospital aide develops steps to prevent surgical accidents

CHICAGO (AP) — Patients soon may have their bodies labeled with indelible markers before surgery to prevent an infrequent but tragic problem — operations on the wrong body parts.

A Sacramento, Calif., hospital aide developed the concept of signs like "Wrong Arm. Do Not Operate" last fall after reading a news story of a surgeon who mistakenly removed the wrong eye from a boy.

"It's kind of analagous to the signs you see on the freeway: 'Wrong way, do not enter,'" said Dr. Harvey D. Cain, who praised the technique in a letter recently published in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"The principal idea is not to get the wrong side operated on," Cain said. "It's quite practical and I certainly intend to do it on myself if I ever have surgery."

The simple labeling idea is the brainchild of Janet Peyton, a 29-year-old surgical and recovery room assistant at Kaiser-Permanente Medical Center in Sacramento.

She and Cain work together at the hospital. They have received numerous inquiries about the idea from around the country, but they don't know of any hospital using it yet.

Dr. Albert Kahane, head of the surgical committee at Kaiser, said Wednesday the idea has been proposed to the committee and is being considered.

Cain, who specializes in occupational medicine, said only rarely does a surgeon make such a mistake "but when it happens to you, it's 100 percent."

Ms. Peyton says body marking could easily be done as part of the standard pre-surgery procedure. Patients normally are showered before surgery, shaved if necessary, given a shot to make them drowsy, then wheeled to surgery.

The surgical sign-painting — accomplished with an indelible marker — could take place after the shower but before the shot, Ms. Peyton said. "The patient could help. They kind of like to participate."

She added the real value might be in allaying patients' fears.
