FIRE PERILS 3000 HERE

LAWYER MAKES THREAT TO JAIL BANKER SCHIFF

Financier Says He'll Take Untermyer With Him

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 3.—The sparks flew again today at the Lockwood committee investigation of the latest steel merger, with Samuel Untermyer, committee counsel, swinging on the anvil and Mortimer L. Schiff of Kuhn, Loeb and company, flaring in anger at his interrogations. Their verbal fusillade got so hot at one time that Untermyer warned the banker he might go to jail for refusing to answer questions. Schiff quickly intimated that if he did, Untermyer would keep him company behind the bars.

Schiff Tells His Part

The discussion centered around the part Kuhn, Loeb and company are to take in merging the Republic, Midvale and Inland companies into the North American Steel corporation. Schiff insisted the relationship of his firm was purely one of banking.

They were "financially fathering" the enterprise, he said, and were to head a syndicate to underwrite $25,000,000 in preferred stock at $90 and $44,000,000 in common stock at $43 and then raise another $20,000,000 in cash to purchase additional Midvale paper.

Untermyer contended that the bankers intended to "create a market" for the stock of the new corporation with this $20,000,000 cash and that they were likely to manipulate prices to favorable levels by buying and selling securities.

Hot with resentment, Schiff called on Chairman Lockwood to make Untermyer cease asking "unfair" questions.

After he had admitted that the bank might both buy and sell the stock, the question that set off the fireworks was put to Mr. Schiff in these words:

"So that whilst with one hand the syndicate is selling stock to the public, with the other hand, it is buying stock from the public."

Schiff said this was not true because the transactions were not simultaneous and when the lawyer inquired how he knew, he shouted:

"We do not wash stock, and I resent that implication."

"All these resentments, you know, do you not?" Untermyer remarked.

NEFF ASKS TO B E RE-ELECTED

Governor Says He's Better Informed

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, June 3.—Governor Neff announced today as a candidate for re-election. In a statement to the "democracy of Texas," he tells of the experience of his first term.

The statement follows:

"Sixteen months ago I was inducted into the office of governor of Texas. At that time the detailed working affairs of the state government to me were new. I, therefore, proceeded with my work cautiously and carefully. By constant thought and conscientious work I have become reasonably familiar with the various departments.

Says He's Equipped Now.

"I have also visited and studied numerous educational and eleemosynary institutions and know something of their wants and necessities. While gaining an intimate knowledge of the government and institutions, I have at the same time kept in close touch with the people and their conditions and know their thoughts concerning the state's affairs.

"Believing that the work and thought given by me to the duties of the office of governor in the past will enable me better to serve in solving some of the pressing problems now pending for consideration and having an ambition thus to serve, I hereby announce my candidacy for re-election for a second term to the office of governor.

Admits Mistakes.

"In public office as in private life, the distinguishing trait and the priceless principles to which all right thinking people pay homage and respect is unfaltering fidelity to truth and unswerving devotion to duty. These virtues I have faithfully followed, as your governor, in so far as He who rules in the councils of men has given me light and wisdom to see. Perhaps I have made mistakes in the past. I doubt not that I shall make mistakes in the future However, I have tried to serve the citizenship of the state in the highest and truest sense, and at all times, through good and evil report, I have had as a constant companion, a clear conscience.

"If the democratic voters of Texas feel that they can in full justice to their state honor me with a second term as their governor, I shall deeply appreciate it and shall continue my efforts in behalf of the welfare of our people, with a sincere ambition to fulfill their expectations and to justify their confidence."

Dainty Nighties Are Shown in Valentino Trial

LOS ANGELES, June 3.—Dainty silk Garments, two suits one of white and one of purple, were introduced today as exhibits in the preliminary hearing of Rodolph Valentino, actor, on a charge of bigamy. They were presented as the attire in which Valentino and his second bride, Miss Winnifred Hudnut, whom he married in Mexicali, Mexico, May 13, appeared in public during their honeymoon a few days after their marriage, at Palm Beach, Cal., a desert oasis.

Hudnut

It was left to judicial determination as to what the articles were, the prosecution contending that they were pajamas, while the attorneys for Valentino declared they were Chinese silk suits. They were identified however, by Mrs. Alva Hicks of Palm Springs as the apparel in which the honeymooners appeared.

While the state hoped to present Mme. Nazimova today and place her on the stand, their efforts were of no avail. Attorneys for the state failed to locate her, despite their country-wide search for the dimunitive Polish actress.

Dr. Floretta White of Palm Springs testified to having attended the Mexicali wedding ceremony and of the bridal couple arriving at Palm Springs shortly after midnight. She said they went to a cottage occupied by Mme. Alla Nazimova, Russian dancer and screen actress, but later returned to the doctor's cottage where they spent the night.

Valentino

Valentino occupied a room with Douglas Gerard, motion picture actor, who was best man at the wedding, and the bride was ill and occupied a room by herself. Following identification of the silken garments by Mrs. Hicks, the prosecution submitted the case and arrangements were started by Frank James, attorney for the Famous Players-Lasky studio, employers of Valentino, who asked dismissal of the charge.

When the arguments of counsel were completed, Judge Hanby announced he would take the case under advisement and announce his decision at 9:45 Monday morning. It is not unlikely, however that Mme. Nazimova will play a part into the case before it is finally disposed of. She entered the case following presentation of a photograph into the record yesterday. The Polish actress was identified as being the original in one of the group. She is also said to have been a member of the wedding party and to have accompanied "the screen lover" and his second bride to Palm Springs after the ceremony. It is understood that Mme. Nazimova and Winifred Hudnut, Valentino's second choice are close friends.

Nazimova

Following introduction into the case of the photograph, attorneys for the state immediately instituted a wide search, but they had not succeeded in locating the screen star at the close of the hearing today.

Cross examination has brought out the assertion that Valentino and his bride did not wear purple pajamas during their stay at Palm Springs as stated in direct testimony. This declaration came from Paul Ivanichevitchke, a friend of Valentino.

GRANDSTAND AT BASEBALL PARK BURNS QUICKLY

Game to Be Played This Afternoon Despite Damage

Three thousand fans were forced to flee from the grandstand at Athletic park yesterday afternoon during the second inning, as a blaze that spread with amazing rapidity destroyed property valued at $150,000, when the stand and many automobiles burned.

Two persons were injured early in the excitement. Charles Eubanks was painfully burned about the face and arms as he attempted to drive his automobile to safety. Eubanks was rushed to the Call Field hospital where he was treated for the burns, which caused him intense pain.

Herbert Gray, an employe of the park, was also burned about the head and back as he fell among burning timbers which threatened to cut off his retreat to safety. Gray was not burned as seriously as Eubanks and was not taken to the hospital.

$125,000 Loss in Cars

From the estimate obtainable, $100,000 worth of automobiles which were ranked along the fence against the rear of the destroyed stand were burned to the ground or badly damaged by the flames. Many others were partially damaged before being driven to a place of safety—making the total damage around $125,000. An insurance man estimated that a large number of cars were not insured, and that the average coverage of the others was half.

Cars were jammed in disorder along the rear of the stand and many were burned to a twisted mass of steel and iron without being moved an inch, so intense was the heat. Small rings of ashes beside the charred remains of once high-powered and expensive cars, marked where wheels had burned away and fallen outward. Casings were completely destroyed on those in the rear line.

Eye witnesses state that the blaze originated when a cushion which had become ignited from a cigaret was dropped into a pile of trash on top of the house occupied by the concession stand.

WHEAT REAPER HUMS THRUOUT WICHITA COUNTY

Activity to Increase During Coming Week

After an idleness of nearly a year, the farmers reaper was busy throughout Wichita county during the closing days of last week—busy in a harvest field which, while not as broad in area as the average, is returning a higher yield and a better quality than that of the average year.

The coming week is expected to see even greater activity in the harvest field by the end of the week. It is expected that the harvest will be in full blast and threshing ready to begin here and there.

Grain is ripening fast in even the slower fields in all directions from the city.

Expect Quick Market

Marketing—that is considered a problematical issue by local grain men. If the market holds up when the harvest is well under way, it is expected that the crop will be marketed quickly. If it should go off, it is considered likely that many farmers would hold.

Last year is considered no criterion in this connection, for last year the market began to rise when the crop began moving to market, and continued up until the crop had been marketed—then dropped off. This is something of a freak market.

Grading System Better.

The grain dealers also held the sack last year as a result of non-uniformity of the government grading system—graders at the ports putting much lower grades on wheat shipped for export than other government graders had put on the same wheat bought from the farmer, and for which the farmer was paid. This is now remedied as continued lack of uniformity would not only have penalized the grain dealers for another season, but would have reacted against the farmers as well unless the corrective action had been taken, it is considered.

Major Harris is Dead—
He Defied Gamblers—
Who Tried to Hang Him

By H. N. F.

MAJOR MOSES C. HARRIS HAS passed over the divide. He was a unique character. He hadn't a counterpart in the great southwest. He was born in Kentucky 80 years ago. He was of the first family of God's chosen people. He knew George D. Prentice, the man who made the Louisville Courier-Journal in his serviceable manhood and he knew Henry Watterson when Prentice died and Watterson became his successor. Harris became a printer and a writer. He was a master printer and for years and years the most picturesque of a free lance as a publisher and orator and creator of literature which stamped him as a genious out of the ordinary.

HE WORKED FROM OCEAN TO ocean in his youth and then he invaded the wild west and the still wilder southwest. Hot Springs, Ark., in those days was one of the wide open towns of the world.

Saloons never closed their doors and gambling houses ran three shifts of men and the sky was the limit. Mose Harris established a little daily newspaper in this gambler's paradise, where the adventurers of the world flocked for play and to drink the waters.

Political control of Hot Springs was vested in the gambler chiefs and two boss gamblers headed two factions of the sporting men who controlled the politics of the city and largely of the state. But all this was in "the good old days."

EDITOR HARRIS RAN A WIDE open newspaper. He lampooned as well as harpooned the gambler bosses and their lieutenants. Harris never acknowledged a boss.

"There was hell to pay" as he expressed it and the boss gamblers and their gangsters ordered him out of town. They were all powerful and the law of the city was the law of the gunman.

He refused to move out and they placed a rope around his neck and led him out. He never ran up the white feather.

He damned the gamblers with a rope around his neck. He damned their gunmen. He said if his life was spared he would come back. They were too cowardly to kill him. His life was not safe in the gambler controlled city. He came to Texas. He instituted suit in the federal courts claiming damages in a large sum from some of the "prominent citizens," who had threatened his life, destroyed his business and deported him from Arkansas. He won damages.

HIS TEXAS CAREER AS A PUBlisher, if tradition isn't a liar, began almost 50 years ago. He

THOMAS TO RUN FOR SENATE, HIS FRIENDS HOPE

Others Mentioned to Fill Williams' Term

By H. N. F.

LEWISVILLE, Texas, June 3.—This is the home of the Hon. Charles A. Thomas, speaker of the lower house of the Texas legislature and known the state over.

He has several teams to his credit and during the regular and special sessions he was known to be in sympathy with the law makers who favored liberal appropriation and did not favor the slogan, "Cut to the bone."

Mr. Thomas is one of the successful business men of Denton county and as a law-maker he is said to take high rank. He advised against a low tax rate during the regular and special sessions, but his advice did not prevail. He is weary of serving in the lower house.

Thomas Asked to Run.

This senatorial district is comprised of the counties of Denton, Wise and Montague. Guinn Williams was elected state senator two years ago. He resigned following his election as the congressional representative of the thirteenth district. This created a vacancy.

Mr. Thomas is being urged to make the race for state senator to fill the vacancy. Governor Neff is expected to issue his call for a special election this week. Wise county democrats claim that the unexpired term should be filled by a Wise county democrat. It has been customary to pass the prize around. First to Montague; next to Denton and then to Wise.

Two Years to Serve.

Guinn Williams was elected two years ago. He had two years to serve when the voters of the 13th congressional district gave him a ticket to Washington with instructions to pre-

HARDING HARD HIT BY DEMO

He's Charged With Muzzling Press

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 3. — President Harding and Attorney General Daugherty were assailed today in the senate by Senator Stanley, democrat, Kentucky, in connection with statements credited yesterday to President Harding with respect to a senate attack on Secretary Hoover and to assertions made by Mr. Daugherty in his Chicago address yesterday as to the policy to be followed in filling the 24 judgeships created under a bill recently passed by the senate and house.

Senator Stanley, interpreting the president's remarks on the basis of some newspaper accounts to refer to criticisms of all cabinet officers, including Mr. Daugherty, said Mr. Harding was attempting "to stifle if not to muzzle the press."

Turning his fire on the attorney general, the senator accused him of having by his Chicago speech served public notice on applicants for the judgeships that they must not say anything in criticism of Mr. Daugherty if they expect appointment to the bench.

Reading from a dispatch in the Philadelphia Public Ledger in which it was stated that the president had taken a "two-fisted fling at the political blackguards," who attacked executive officers, Senator Stanley

Pilot in Helium Bag Smoked With Safety; Missing Balloon Found

Fair Test Not Made As Naval Entry Leaked Badly Forcing Man Down

By Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 3.—Lieut. Com. Joseph P. Norfleet, of the naval air station at Lake Hurst, N. J., who piloted the navy's balloon, the thirteenth to take off, but not as a contestant, today said that the use of helium gas for balloons, such as tested by him gave no great advantage over the coal gas balloon.

The use of helium in the bag piloted by Commander Norfleet was a navy experiment.

The rules requiring coal gas for balloons participating in the race, barred him as a contestant.

Describting the peace time advantage, he said the pilot could smoke, helium being non-inflammable. The war time advantage, he said, would result in the reduction of danger from enemy shells.

Balloon Goes 425 Miles

He covered about 500, miles, he said, passing over Chicago, crossing the Mississippi above the month of the Illinois river, and the Missouri above St. Charles, Mo. His landing was about 425 miles from Milwaukee.

The bag for helium had been rushed to completion, he said, and leaked as a result, making it necessary to throw overboard 1,500 pounds of sand ballast last Wednesday night. He started with 2,500 pounds and had 300 left at the end of his journey. Norfleet asserted he would have remained up last night, if the leak had not affected the bag.

LAST MAN TO REPORT LANDS IN MOUNTAINS

By Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, June 3.—Lieut. W. F. Reed, navy pilot, and the last of the 13 air mail to leave Milwaukee in the national air race Wednesday was reported here in dispatches to the Wisconsin Aero club to have landed Friday in the Ozark mountains in southern Missouri.

In a second telegram to the Wisconsin Aero club tonight, Lieutenant Reed placed his distance from Milwaukee at only 445 miles. Officials of the coast guard weather bureau and aero club estimated the distance variously at from 475 to 550 miles tonight.

Covers 535 Miles

The United States coast guard service announced tonight that Lieutenant Reed had covered 535 miles in his flight, making him third in the race and one of the American contenders in the international event to be held at Geneva.

"Salem, Mo.; Navy balloon landed very gently in valley cornfield in Ozark mountains at 10:35 a. m., June 2 at 18 miles north of Emmingence, Shannon county, Missouri. SCURRY GUEST AT WASHINGTON

Reception Given In His Honor

By B. N. TIMMONS,
(Washington Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Judge Edgar Scurry, of Wichita Falls, was the guest of honor at a reception given tonight in the Confederate Memorial home here. Judge Scurry, who is commander in chief of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, was introduced by Dr. Clarence J. Owens, former commander in chief.

Judge Scurry, who is here to attend the Confederate memorial services at the Arlington National cemetery Sunday afternoon, recalled the fact that today is the anniversary of the birth of Jefferson Davis. He spoke of his father's having served at the battle of Buena Vista, in the Mexican war, with Davis as his leader and later in the Civil war, when he was a general. Judge Scurry spoke of the romance between Jefferson Davis and the daughter of Zachary Taylor.

Dr. Owen, another speaker, also spoke of memories of Jefferson Davis. Judge Clarence B. Howry, commander of the northern Virginia camp of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, was another speaker. More than three hundred members of the Confederate organizations attended the reception and shook hands with Judge Scurry.

For the first time in the history of the United States the Sons of the Confederate Veterans will be received at the White House.

Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock Judge Scurry and his staff will go to the White House, where they will be received by President Harding. The reception is expected to do much towards healing old sores which may exist between the sections of the United States.

BLACKS LEAVE HOME TO HIDE FROM GUNMEN

Sheriff Says They Fear More Than Defy Whites

By Associated Press.

KIRVEN, Texas, June 3.—Practically normal conditions had returned in and near Kirven early tonight.

The exciting rumors of possible race riots were discussed more or less, but the reports had been dispelled and discounted. Many men who were armed this morning had laid aside their weapons tonight and most of the crowds which rushed here from adjoining counties and nearby cities had gone home.

So far as could be observed what danger of trouble continued was rapidly disappearing.

Bodies of Allie and Leroy Gibson, the two negroes killed in a fight with officers yesterday, are in the possession of relatives, it was said tonight.

The bodies had been taken during the night from where they fell and one report today was that they had been burned. This was denied by county officials.

Only one other negro than the two killed was involved in the shooting, according to the story told today as search for him continues.

Sheriff Mayo denied today that the negroes were taken into custody because of alleged connection with the murder of a 17-year-old girl which resulted in the lynching of four negroes.

The sheriff declared there was no formal charge against the Gibsons and deputies sought them to investigate an alleged attempt by white men to whip Leroy. The intentions of the officers evidently was misunderstood, he declared, and shots were fired at the deputies, who returned the fire.

"The negroes in the community are behaving themselves and I don't anticipate any trouble from them," the sheriff declared.

"Their attitude seems to be one of fear toward the whites rather than one of defiance." Sheriff Mayo emphatically denied that there was any danger of a race riot in the community.

"Many negroes spent Friday night in trees and bushes, completely abandoning their homes through fear of the white people." M. T. Gonzaulles, government agent, who came here to investigate the reported trouble, said today, following a trip through the negro settlements.

NEGROES ALLOWED TO BURY BODIES

CORSICANA, Texas, June 3.—According to information received at Corsicana late today the bodies of the two negroes killed at Kirven Friday afternoon have been located. The authorities have granted permission to the negroes of the vicinity to bury the bodies, it was reported. It is said the bodies were removed from the field where they lay by members of their own race and had been placed in a nearby house, causing the report of their mysterious disappearance.

AMUNDSEN OFF ON FIVE YEAR TRIP TO ARCTIC

Huge Crowd Gathers To See Explorer's Ship Leave

By Associated Press.

SEATTLE, June 3.—The auxiliary powered schooner Maud, bearing the Amundsen polar basin scientific expedition sailed from Seattle at 3:46 o'clock this afternoon for Nome, Alaska, on the first leg of a five-year voyage through the Aretic ice pack.

Capt. Oscar Wisling, sailing master of the Maud, commanded the vessel, Roald Amundsen chief of the expedition, having decided to proceed to Nome by steamer, sailing tomorrow.

The United States navy tug Mahopac and a flotilla of cruisers from the fleets of the Seattle and Queen City yacht clubs escorted the Maud up the Puget sound.

A huge crowd gathered at the Union Oil company's dock to wish the expedition God speed. At the time of the departure the United States band burst forth with the "Star Spangled Banner," and a detachment of American marines raised the stars and stripes over the dock and cast loose the Maud's cables.

The band took up the Norwegian national anthem as the little vessel moved out into the stream, northward bound.

Scores of ships in the harbor blared a farewell with their whistles.

Captain Amundsen accompanied his ship only to West Point, a few miles up sound. He sails for Nome on the steamer Victoria tomorrow to rejoin the expedition when the Maud reaches there.

TEXAS BUSINESS MEN PREPARING FOR BIG TRADE

Stocks Raised to $128,750,350 In Past Month

By S. RAYMOND BROOKS,
Austin Staff Correspondent

AUSTIN, Texas, June 3.—Capital stock of companies doing business in Texas increased during May by the enormous sum of $128,750,350, according to records of the secretary of the state department.

This is the actual net increase of capital stock resulting from the incorporation of new companies, the admission of foreign corporations to do business in the state, and the increase of capital stock of these Texas and foreign corporations.

The surest sign of business improvement, according to statistical experts come from the actual increase of business volume, and from the amount of new business undertaken.

The tremendous new investments in Texas commercial enterprises during May, it was declared, which is more than double the new capital stock accumulated in April, is the strongest possible indication of the return of speeded up, rejuvenated business activity.

Many New Corporations

New Texas corporations were chartered during the month with a total capital stock of $14,544,950, and capital stock of corporations already in existence was increased by the sum of $4,412,700. A few corporations reduced their capital stock by a net total of $494,300.

Foreign corporations were admitted with a total capital stock of $43,764,000, and given permission during the month to begin business in Texas.

During the same month foreign corporations already holding permits to do business in the state increased their capital stock, and filed certificates to that effect, by a total of $80,070,000.

One foreign corporation reduced its capital stock $247,000, but after both the deductions enumerated have been taken from the new capital stock value, the total of $128,750,350 net new capital stock marks the highest point ever reached in a single month in Texas of business gains.

One hundred and forty new companies were chartered in Texas during May, and 21 foreign corporations were admitted to the state.

GRANDSTAND—

port first baseman, who had badly wrenched his knee sliding into the plate. A wisp of smoke gave first intimation of the blaze and before those directly above the point where the fire originated, realized that there was a possibility of any damage, the entire under section of the stand was ablaze.

Mistaken for Fight

Those near fought with cushions, coats and other available articles, but there was never a chance for them to stop the spread.

As the cry was carried through the crowd, many interpreted "fight it" for plain "fight" and paid little heed until the flames burst through about them. The main entrance was quickly a seething mass of flames as the tinder like cushions burst into flames.

There was no panic or disorder. Men who realized the situation urged fans to be patient and take their time. This they did. Although women became highly excited, there was no outcry. Those penned in the front boxes were rescued by members of the two teams who rushed to the stand and tore the netting away. Women and children were lifted to safety inside the park.

Car Sacrificed.

The heavy gate could not be held up by those who hurried out of the park and a Ford which stood near was rolled under the free end. The car was never rescued and was sacrificed for the safety of the crowd.

So rapidly did the flames spread that only cars on the extreme outer edges were driven away. Volunteers hauled and pushed hundreds out of reach of the spreading conflagration. So intense was the heat that gasoline tanks, exposed to the full effect, exploded with resounding reports, spreading their contents as added fuel to the burning mass which enveloped the entire location.

Cars were not ranked in order and many who obtained hurried exit from the stand, reached their machines but were unable to drive them away. Confusion reigned as men braved the heat and exposed themselves to the dangers of further explosions, to rescue valuable cars. When it became evident that the stand must go, efforts were directed by the fire department, although handicapped by the many cars, to save the club house.

Hydrants Surrounded.

Fire hydrants were surrounded by automobiles and it was impossible to reach some that were closer than those used. Leads of hose were brought in from both sides, but the entire stand was enveloped and their attentions turned to saving bleachers on either end as well as what protection was possible, to the cars.

As the open structure blazed from end to end, the heat sent those within the park to the extreme corners. Players made a hasty retreat with their possessions from the club rooms. Volunteers assisted in carrying out their baggage.

Expensive Cars Lost

Although there were a number of the lighter cars accounted for, many of the cars destroyed were of expensive make. A Cadillac 61 suburban belonging to Norris Martin, and a Locomobile belonging to Mrs. John O'Neill were among those damaged, but not totally destroyed.

The coach work and finish of the Martin car was practically a total loss, but the motor and chassis was unharmed—due to the energy and initiative of three employes of a downtown drug store, who went to the park after the fire had started—pushed the car out of a bunch of blazing cars, started the motor, and when it had gotten out of the melee stopped the blaze which had started work on the top and the upholstery.

Presented With Check

Finding the name of the owner in one of the pockets of the car, they drove it to his home, and were presented with a check of $50 each for their services.

The three were C. G. Darnal, in charge of the soda fountain at the Owl drug store, Louis Cawley, his assistant and Reuben Norris, porter for the store.

Ambulances Called

Ambulances were rushed to the scene, many fearing great loss of life, so rapidly did the blaze spread. None suffered from the exit to safety. The crowd was orderly under the admonition of sane men who possibly admonished disaster. All filed out as though the game had been finished. The fire shut off passage from the main entrance, but as the wire was torn from the ends of the stand, there was ample time for all to leave.

Press representatives and telegraph operators in the "coop" on top of the stand were almost directly above the fire. They failed to understand the happening below and thought it was a merry fisticuff. When they learned the danger which lay below them, a rush was made toward the stairway which afforded their only safe exit. All escaped unharmed, despite the many anxious glances and cries from the crowd.

Negroes Save Cars

Occupants of the negro bleachers had best opportunity to leave the park and their assistance in removing endangered cars saved many. The negro fans saved many cars, including several high priced ones, from total loss, before an exploding gasoline tank led them to desist in their efforts.

An exact estimate of the loss sustained by the owners of the park could not be obtained, but authoritative sources report the cost of the structure would be $15,000 if replaced in duplicate. Insurance to the amount of $20,000 was carried on the entire plant, club house, fences and all other property.

Concession Loss

W. H. Newell, proprietor of the concession stand, estimated his loss at $3,000 with $500 insurance. More than $1,200 worth of cushions were burned. Supplies in soda water and smokers demands had been brought down in anticipation of the mammoth Sunday crowd expected for the double bill called for on the schedule. Mr. Newell also lost a valuable automobile which had been purchased a few days ago.

Lloyd Weaver was a heavy loser in cars. He estimated his total loss at $5,000. Spectators report that Mrs. Weaver reached her high-powered limousine, but that smaller cars blocked her passage to safety. Using the bumpers for their purpose, she banged her way to a clear path. Driving the smaller ones out of the way by the impact of her heavy motor, she was enabled to drive out.

Many owners were burned slightly about the face and hands as they rescued cars and paint was blistered on many which escaped the flames. Tops were burned away on a large number which were rolled out of the path of the flames. Large strips of top material were torn away by frantic owners in an attempt to delay the destruction until help arrived.

Before the smouldering mass of charred timbers had been extinguished, carpenters were already at work on new stands that the Sunday schedule might not be interrupted. Material was being unloaded from a dozen trucks and a small army of laborers had begun construction of temporary accommodations. The two sets of bleachers saved will be covered and moved to the location of the destroyed structure. Improvised bleachers will be thrown up along the foul lines and the schedule will be adhered to. However, it was decided to bill only one game as the Sunday attraction. The game will be called at 3:00 o'clock.

R. O. Harvey, president of the club, was not in town at the time of the disaster and definite plans of the management had not been determined, but the efforts being put forth by the club owners emphasizes immediate reconstruction.

Early reports that the remaining games of the home stay would be transferred away are erroneous. Manager Salm stated emphatically that he will be able to accommodate the crowd tomorrow. In that event, he will be enabled to continue the schedule as outlined.

"Mr. Chairman, you had better warn this witness that he is not in his banking office," said the lawyer.

"And neither are you in your office," came the retort.

"Mr. Chairman," continued the banker, "Mr. Untermyer is trying to put words in my mouth that we are manipulating stocks, and I will not do it. I refuse to answer another question."

Then came the jail threat.

"Mr. Untermyer twists words in my mouth," said the banker.

"No, I cannot get in your mouth," Untermyer assured him. "If I could, I would close it."

In a moment they were at it again, Untermyer insisting that the syndicate was a "buying and selling one," and Schiff agreeing that all syndicates were of that nature, but that purchases and sales were not made at the same time.

"You may have had experience in that way, but I haven't," the banker said to the lawyer. "I know something about your transactions. I know you have a large interest in Bethlehem."

Schiff Resents Word

"Don't tell me about your experience or mine," Untermyer barked back. "I think I know yours and I do not think you know mine. If you think you know any of mine, you are at liberty to state them now from the witness stand and not dare make these contemptible insinuations."

"The facts are what we are looking for."

"Then put the question in the way so that they are facts, and don't" "I resent the word 'contemptible,'" Schiff remarked.

"They are contemptible because they are not true," said Untermyer.

"I do know some of your transactions," the witness went on. "I know you are a large shareholder of Bethlehem."

"Every one knows that," Untermyer put in. Then he again got the last word in this manner:

"I told it to the committee when I started. I am not selling it. I have held it for 15 years. Is that what you call an operation?"

Later Schiff said if more persons wanted to sell than buy, his bank bought stock. If the public had confidence in their judgment and was ready to buy, the stock was for sale, he said, insisting the bankers were not buying and selling simultaneously. The committee will resume hearings Thursday.

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

established a daily newspaper in the city of Fort Worth when Fort Worth was the home of cowboys, buffalo hunters, gamblers, highwaymen and a few good citizens, determined upon the building of a real city "where the panther laid down." His experiences in that town would have filled a large sized volume. All the towns in West Texas at that time were frontier towns, all were wide open and two of the widest and wildest were Bowie and Henrietta. Colorado City was another and Mobeetie was as wild as they ever grew 'em. Publisher Harris moved on from Fort Worth to Dallas, where he had a like experience.

He printed a free lance newspaper and he never played favorites. His writings were both pungent and peppery and he was a master of invective. When Dallas grew too quiet for him he moved on first to Austin and then to San Antonio. For years and years his was a familiar figure in the hotel lobbies of Austin, in the haunts of legislators and lobbyists and in the press gallery under the big dome. San Antonio became his favorite spot. He pitched his tent there.

BORN AND REARED A DEMOcrat, the son of a family noted for its loyalty to the confederacy, the major became a republican and for years and years thereafter he fought the battles of Texas republicanism with tongue and pen, but ever damning "the nigger in politics."

He drew the color line. He believed in a white republican party and control of the government in city and state and nation by white men. He was the founder and editor of the Texas Republic. San Antonio was its birthplace and may be its burial place.

In all the years that it was printed this newspaper mouthpiece of Major Harris was readable to say the least. He spared his friends and he potshotted his enemies. He had his own code and he lived his own life. He had a few faults and he had many virtues. He was a product of the civilization into which he was born and which is rapidly passing. He did not believe in woman suffrage. He did not believe in prohibition. He did not believe in socialism or socialistic laws.

HE HAD A WIFE WHO LOVED him and children who were proud of him. He was neither a hypocrit, a liar or a coward and he came to Texas when the range was free, the buffalo and the wild horse were in evidence, cowmen were kings and cowboys were in their glory, gunmen flourished everywhere, gambling houses were recognized institutions, saloons never closed and the man who was the quickest on the trigger got there first. He was as courteous as a Chesterfieldian gentleman, he had a merry laugh, he was not vindictive and he always ran true to form "when Texas knighthood was in flower."

THOMAS—

sent himself to the clerk of lower house of congress and ask to be sworn in as a member.

Mr. Thomas is well known as a progressive democrat, and as a successful business man he is said to favor progressive but not wild cat legislation. He is of the opinion and his friends share it with him that he would make a very useful member of the upper house of the Texas legislature.

James R. Wiley is another democrat who may make the race to fill the vacancy. He is a former state senator and his home for many years was at Nocona, in Montague county. Mr. Wiley has been temporarily sojourning in the city of Denton, where his daughter is being educated at the College of Industrial Arts. He is more than willing to make the race.

Morris Pushed to Front.

R. Lee Morris of Chico, Wise county, is another prominent democrat and business man who is being pushed to the front by his friends. Mr. Morris does not hesitate to say that Wise county is entitled to the senatorship for the unexpired term of Guinn Williams and he very bluntly says that it would be a breach of faith on the part of the democrats of Montague or Denton county to run away with the honor.

County Attorney Paul Donald of Montague is one of the leaders of the young democracy. He has been urged to announce should the democrats of Denton present a candidate, but a state senatorship would not appeal to him. Donald campaigned for Guinn Williams in the congressional roundup and made many speeches in Archer, Jack, Throckmorton and Clay as well as in his home county.

He has a preference and his preference is Representative R. C. Coffee of Wise, who introduced a bill at the regular session placing a heavy tax on the gross production of petroleum, but his pet measure was put to sleep by the vigilant watchmen on the firing line by the champions of retrenchment and reform and tax reduction.

Here's the Line-Up

Thomas is willing to serve; Wiley is willing to serve; Morris might be induced to serve; Donald does not want the job, but wants Coffey of Wise to trot out and if possible get there.

Speaker Thomas is of the opinion that a special session of the legislature will be called in August or September. He insists that the tax rate of 35 cents instead of 22 cents should hav been made by the powers that be and that there will be a deficit of $1,000,000 or more before the coming of early autumn.

Unless the leaders of the Wise county democrats win their contention that the honor should go to a Wise county man there may be a very bitter contest for the prize. On and after 1924 this senatorial district will be made up of five instead of three counties, Jack and Palo Pinto having been attached to Guinn Williams' district when the law makers redistricted the state with the provision inserted in the bill that it should not become effective until 1924.

Then it is said Montague, Jack and Palo Pinto may form a combination which will result in the rich and populous counties of Wise and Denton being shut out unless their democrats are good fellows and willing to pass the honor around without a squabble of a contest.

HARDING—

wanted to know who were these "political blackguards who are assailing the attorney general."

"They are two members of congress," he said, "who only wore the colors and the uniforms of a soldier; eminent senators representing sovereign states, ambassadors from two proud commonwealths. Is it possible that a genial, self-poised, courteous gentleman occupying this high place should so far forget himself in his desperate attempt to shield a man who dares not shield himself; to speak for a man who dares not speak for himself?"

Quoting from a dispatch in the Philadelphia Public Ledger, in which it was stated that the president believed newspapermen and newspapers performed a public service in "putting on the brakes" in the publication of attacks on executive officers; Mr. Stanley said he would tell the president that 'this is not Austria; this is not Prussia; this is the once free America," at least.

SOVIET STARTS MONEY MINT

Silver Coins Are Being Made

(By International News Service)

MOSCOW, June 3.—The Soviet government now has a mint for silver coinage in full operation.

It is situated in the famous Petropaviovsky fortress in Petrograd, the burial place of all the Romanof czars, and the terrible prison house where political offenders were imprisoned.

The mint is now coining ten, fifteen, twenty and fifty kopek pieces, and one ruble pieces. The coins contain 0 per cent silver and the rest copper. Their assay size and weight are identical with those coined during the czarist regime. On one side is engraved the Soviet emblem—the hammer and sickle—and the inscription, "Workers all lands unite." The other side of the coin has practically the same appearance as the old.

One of the officials of the mint told me that the government does not intend to put these coins into circulation. They will be issued as collateral for the special paper currency, one of the present large denominations running into millions and in small, pre-war amounts guaranteed by the silver fund. It is hoped that this will put an end to the present cumbrous system.

Socks—To Be Or Not to Be? That Is the Question

The Hague is worrying over the coming of the Genoa diplomatic remnants. Berlin is battling with reparations. Chicago has its building war and Squawville its new town pump.

But all of these pale into insignificance beside the most momentous question of the day. A question that threatens to disrupt every city, town, village and hamlet in this great and arid (?) land.

When should a girl wear socks and why?

Over in Brooklyn Miss N. M. Truman, director of Girl Scouts, has tabooed the bare knee altogether. "They'll have to stop scouting if they wear 'em rolled at any age," says she.

But then down in Oklahoma, famous for codes and other things, it has been decided that socks could be worn up to ten—years, not size.

Out in one institution of higher education in Kansas it has been decided that Mr. John Conscience shall be the one and only advisor of the fair co-eds as regards occasional disclosures of dimpled knees over socks and roll-downs.

And so it goes throughout the provinces. Some say socks up to twelve—years; others only to nine.

Says Mrs. Clarence B. Smith, who resides in the well known village of New York:

"How come a child should be trained for twelve years to wear socks and then be compelled to don long ones only to 'roll her own' a few years later?"

Of course in the well known flapper strongholds the motto is "roll 'em down, wear socks or go barefoot if you prefer."

Chorus the flapping brigade: "They see our bare knees at the beaches, so why not in town?"

And so, all in all, the great American question has the problems of Genoa, Berlin and way points looking like the thinkfest of a blank mind.

Now That's Rather Odd

By Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, June 3.—Frank W. Anderson, floor manager in a department store here, was found shot to death in a hotel room early today and Miss Peggy Marie Beal of Springfield, Ill., was found unconscious on the floor, a revolver in her hand and a bullet in her breast. The two met during the war when Anderson was a captain in the aviation service and Miss Beal was an army nurse.

Letters and poems, written by Anderson and the young woman, indicated that she came here expecting to marry him. Anderson was married.

CHICAGO, June 3—Belief that Police Lieutenant Charles E. Burns, missing from duty and his home since last Friday, is the victim of an extortion plot and either is being held prisoner or has been killed by persons who sought to wring money from him, or else has committed suicide, is expressed by detectives working on the case.

DECATUR, Ill., June 3.—Hair dressers, wearied from snipping off long tresses, are resting now for the reflex, trying to make them look long again, because, according to Mrs. Theodora Bender, manager of the national convention of hair dressers, most girls are tired of bobbed locks. The convention will be held in St. Louis in July and a series of medals will be offered there for ingenuity in methods of getting long graceful roll effects, she said, especially for wear with evening gowns.

FLINT, Mich., June 3.—Mrs. Lola Robuck-Spayer, who confessed to bigamy charges, was sentenced in court here today to from 18 months to five years in the Detroit house of correction.

Mrs. Spayer admitted having been married to both Anthony Spayer, night police patrolman, and Henry Robuck, a day time factory worker. She denied, however, the allegations that she spent her nights in Robuck's home and each day in the home of Sparer.

President Serenaded By School Youths

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Washington school children were to serenade President Harding today at the Lincoln memorial, as the conclusion to a local celebration of a week of music, but rain prevented and instead the President and Mrs. Harding had the youngsters come to the east room of the White House where, led by professions, they rendered several patriotic airs. The president complimented them on their performance saying their singing was so good, he was almost glad it had rained and forced them into the White House.

Soon after news of Johnson's arrest became known, a mob formed on the courthouse square, threatening demonstrations being made. Spud-Gasser Contest Burned Out in Second; Game Today

SALM DIGS IN FOR ONE GAME AT 3 O'CLOCK

By "SPIKE" COOPER

The Spudders' winning streak was momentarily interrupted yesterday afternoon when fire swept the stands and halted the second game of the Shreveport series in the second inning.

Arrangements are being completed this morning which will permit play this afternoon. The Spudders will resume their tilt at 3:00 o'clock, where they left off Friday afternoon when the rains stopped the opener, 3-3.

Three thousand fans journeyed to the park yesterday for the game, there to stand in the will journey back again this afternoon by possibly that many more to see the Spudders at their best.

Pixy Harvey was not in town at the time of the disaster, but Manager Salm and Lloyd Weaver, one of the principal stockholders, began arrangements before the fire had been extinguished which will permit play today.

Two sections of bleachers which were saved will be moved into advantageous positions and covered with temporary canvas. Rough bleachers will be finished before time for the game, giving the two foul lines for the accommodation of the crowd.

Carpenters threw up a back wall last night across the opening left bare by the fire and an entrance will be provided whereby the crowd can be accommodated.

Gassers Threaten In First

Wheeler started on the mound for the Spuds this morning and promptly got into deep water. Johnny Baggan opened by dragging the first pitched ball to stand for an easy one at out for a hit. Wheeler succeeded to field the ball but was late at first. Bruce Hartford tried a single to center on a hit and run play and Baggan went to third. Ezell grounded to Beck who held all runners safe. Felix topped one that stayed high over third, but Buddy Lanier reached his length and with a great effort scattered the ozone. A couple of balls before he touched ground. Cupid Baggan at the plate. It was one of the toughest plays seen this year. Hollahan went out at first.

The Spudders were easily out in order. Vann lined out to Bag gan in right. Tanner popped out to Hartford, who went back into left field for the ball. Bescher drew a pass but was left stranded when Summa grounded to Hartford.

Visitors Get 2 Then the Fire

The Gassers got a couple of runs before the game was interrupted in the second when the fire was discovered. Summa singled sharply over short. D. Burns dropped a Texas league fly and Summa scored. Storey counted the winning run when Bischoff let a perfect peg from Summa get away from him on the play. Summa's throw was to the plate. D. Burns fanned. Baggan drove a fast ground ar to White and the ball bounded badly rolling into left. Storey started for third with the crack of the bat and King Lee White was playing to the plate to head him home. He fanned on a third strike pushed to the ground where he, offering from a ball, was out trying.

At this juncture the fire cry was heard and the game was halted.

Smith was carried from the field amidst the excitement. Players of both clubs rushed to the front of the stand and assisted occupants of the boxes to escape when the wire in front was torn away.

MAYBE SO!

Vann says: No wonder fire broke up the game. Look at that Gasser battery, Burns and Burns. Guess things just naturally got too hot."

Umps Dale took the plate again as the game opened. He worked the Friday game as well. It was agreed between the two that Brashear should work both games of the card-ed double-bill. Seems he's one up now, since there is only one carded for today.

MANAGER VANN TALKS ABOUT CLUB

Jack Vann philosophized before the game as the Gassers were getting right again. He opened the passing of his former boss, Billy Smith. It modestly admits that the team has a different attitude since he took over the management. Looks that too. They're out there with lots of pep, and putting up a great game.

The Shreveport team is carrying only five heavers right now, Bird having been sent home with a sore arm and the one-day rest is going to help Vann along.

JACK SAYS SPUDS BEST IN LEAGUE

And then Vann philosophized some more. He lows as how" the Spuds are the best club in the league. Vann says that the Cats may have a little better pitching than the Spuds, but they haven't the all-round team.

Thanks, Jack, but we were already of that opinion. Your frankness helps a lot right now, and when you said that you understand why they won ten out of 14 games on the road, we wonder if all the fans in South Texas don't feel that they do too.

GASSERS LEAD IN ONE DEPARTMENT

But right now, we're going to be just as good to you, Jack. The Gassers look an even 100 per cent better than on their last appearance here. There is nothing the matter with the club, in fact, the Gassers aren't going to occupy the cellar much longer if they continue with the fight and pepper you're put into them.

And not only that, but you've got a good bunch of fellows along. May you haven't the best club in the loop, but by a damsite you've got the best quartette.

When Burns, Hartford, Felix and Storey get together, then there's some harmony in sight.

With all due respect to Messrs. Mokan, White, Bescher et al., your melody mill leads the loop.

HE'S THERE

The brilliant fielding of Short-stop Walter Gerber is one of the important reasons why the Browns are giving the Yankees a fight for the honors in the American race to date.

Swatting Ivey for five safeties and five tallies in the first game of the Texhoma - Railroaders doubleheader yesterday afternoon won the Texhomas their second game of the season. This lead with three other counters proved to be too great for the Clerks to overcome in the seven cantos. The Oilers used three heavers, and between them the game was won. When one weakened another would warm up and display his curves till the Railmen pounded him too freely.

The Texhomas led the game with a comfortable margin till the Railmen had a few good innings and in the sixth frame tied the score and went one ahead, with hits by Pels and Parker, followed by a single by Burns. The Oilers, however, were determined to take the game and climb out of the cellar. Blanton was safe on the first sacker's error. Wafford singled sharply to left and brought in Blanton for the tying run. Skeen singled and Wafford slid in with the winning score amid a cloud of dust.

All the twirlers had fast support given them. Skeen of the winners nabbed five difficult drives in the left garden. Kizziar, Parker and Ivey all covered their ground and nabbed a dozen runners from the first and second sack.

In the second game, the Oilers started pounding Shipley in the opener. Wyatt for the Texhomas was given fast support and only by the Railmen bunching hits did they manage to tie the score, 5 to 5. Darkness postponed the game until a further date. Jones handled a mean stick for the Oilers, pounding three out of four. Seven of the Oilers were struck out by Shipley's curves. Moore and Parker took the most of the putouts by their fast covering of their territory.

ALL RIGHT AS FAR AS IT WENT

Senator John Sharpe Williams of Mississippi is more often spoken of in the superlative than any other member of congress.

It is said of him that he is the best classic student on Capitol hill.

As floor leader of the democrats in the house of representatives his claim to being the fastest man on his intellectual feet in that body was undisputed.

He is the only man of whom Uncle Joe Cannon was ever suspected of being afraid in forensic combat.

He says of himself that he is the only man who ever went to Heidelberg back in that period forty years ago who did not afterward claim to be a classmate of the kaiser.

He is the man in congress who wears the most exaggerated type of "corrugated" trousers.

Finally, he is the most absent-minded man in congress. There is the often told story as to the occasion when he dressed for a reception, taking great care as to the condition of his hair, shirt front, necktie. "Finally regarding himself as being duly arrayed, he presented himself to his secretary for approval.

"How do I look?" he wanted to know.

"Pretty good, upstairs," said the secretary, "but I would suggest that you put on your trousers."

MAYFIELD SPEAKS.

SULPHUR SPRINGS, Texas, June 3.—"It is indeed interesting to note how other candidates for the United States senate from Texas have one by one awakened to the fact that the demand for the repeal of the Esch-Cummins bill is the paramount issue in this campaign," declared Railroad Commissioner Earle B. Mayfield in his address here this afternoon to one of the largest crowds ever assembled in this city to hear a candidate for office.

Women were permitted to vote in city elections in Kansah as far back as 1887.

EX-SCHOOLMATES MEET

Waite Hoyt, left, greeting Edwin Goebel, when the Yanks and Nats clashed recently.

Once stars on the same team at Erasmus high school, Brooklyn, Waite Hoyt and Edwin Goebel are now big league rivals. Hoyt is starring on the mound for the Yankees and Goebel is outfielding for Washington. The two had quite a chat about "the old days" when the Yanks and Nats clashed the last time in New York.

STARS FALL FROM LEAD BY DEFEAT

The Texaco Stars lost their leadership by dividing a twin bill with the Presbyterians in their schedule yesterday afternoon. In the first, the Texacos barely were able to emerge with a 3 to 2 win. Chubby Neal clouted a homer into the right garden with one aboard for the Presbyterians' only counters. The fielding of both nines was fast and deadly.

Young Claude Harris, ex-Coyote hurler, started the mound work for the second game after taking half of the first one. Booting and careless fielding lost the Texas boys the second game. Gordon, of the Texacos poled a homer with two on and tied the score and after bringing in other counters looked as if they had that game cinched. The Presbys, however, came in and showed enough fight to emerge victors, 9 to 8. The leaders leadership went fading away when four of the stars kicked the ball, followed by hits on the part of the churchmen. The score:

FORMER TEXAS TOSSERS STAR IN SOUTHERN

Champ Team Can Be Picked at Present

Texas league players in the Southern association this season outnumber all other entries from any one other league. To date there are 22 former Texas loop tossers in this circuit with New Orleans leading the list with seven. Birmingham has five, Little Rock four, Atlanta two, and Memphis, Mobile, Nashville and Chattanooga one each. What's more about these Texas players, is that most of them are standing out as the stars on their respective clubs.

A team that would outclass any contender for the pennant this year could be picked from the following players: Dutch Bernsen, Henry and Schleibner, first basemen; Chick Knaupp, Joe Connolly and Monroe, second basemen; Smith, shortstop; Taylor, third baseman; Howard Camp, Doc Silva, Rhino Williams, Harry Harper and Pep Ripperton, outfielders; Bob Dowie, Lanan and Robertson, catchers; and Mike Eberhard, Molly Craft, Joe Martina, Matteson and Bill James, pitchers.

Below is given the Texas players, the club they were formerly with and where they are now playing:

New Orleans—Henry (San Antonio), Monroe (Beaumont), Martina Beaumont), Smith, (Beaumont), Matteson (Houston), Craft (Shreveport), Dowie, (Galveston).

Birmingham—Robertson (Dallas), Harper (San Antonio), Eberhard Wichita Falls), Silva (Shreveport), Taylor (Beaumont).

Chattanooga — Pep Ripperton (Beaumont).

Memphis—Camp (Dallas).

JAKE DAUBERT STILL GOING STRONG

By NORMAN E. BROWN.

Jake Daubert isn't quite through yet, judging from the day he's been slamming the pill for Cincinnati. Failed to get a hit in a game against the Dodgers recently after collecting at least one bingle in twenty-two consecutive games. And he made the pitchers work in that game. He drove out three flies, any one of which might have become a base hit with a little more stuff behind it.

Daubert is romping through his fourth campaign with the once great Reds after cavorting about first base for Brooklyn for nine busy seasons. Which makes him considerable of a vet, as big league stars go.

He might have starred in the American league instead of the National had the Cleveland club decided he was ready for service when it tried him out in 1907 after he had shown well with Marion, O. The Cleveland team sent him under option to Nashville in 1908, however, and later recalled him and sold him to Toledo, March 28, 1909. Two months later Toledo sold him to Memphis and the following season he went up to Brooklyn under a special agreement.

With the exception of his last season in Brooklyn—1918—he has played first base in 125 games or more every season since his debut. The year mentioned he appeared around the first sack in 108. While playing brilliantly in the field he has hit above the .300 mark nine seasons and ranged close to that mark in the other years.

GULF WALKS AWAY WITH BANKERS

When the Bankers put a patched line-up on the diamond, the Gulf Production nine walked all over them for a two game win, and thereby took the leadership of the league, held till then by the slugging Texacos.

Hart, the Banker's leading moundsman, was out of the city, so a new pitcher was initiated on the hill only to be pounded unmercifully by the Gulf Giants.

The Bankers fought hard for nine innings. The steady hitting of the Gulfers was too much for them and in the end they were smothered, 8 to 2. Oberwetter led the hitting for series, poling out a double and triple. Connolly, Mathews and Johnson each banged the apple for two each. Kubecha and Britten of the losers each singled for their club for the only safeties.

The second contest was a five inning affair. The Gulf team was going too good to be stopped and they were not stopped. By bunching a half dozen bingles, they emerged victorious from the second game, 6 to 0. The Bankers were beginning to locate Connolly's delivery for safeties, but the game was too old for them to stage a rally.

The scores—First game:

Bankers 200 000 000	2	2	2

Batteries: Connolly and Oberwetter; McCain and Nolen.

Second game:

Gulf 310 2x	6	6	0

Batteries: Connolly and Oberwetter; McCain and Nolen.

One dollar a week saved for 25 years at 6 per cent will amount to $3,024.

Babe Ruth's Thru; Bambino Will Never Again Sway Stands

FANS CRAVE NEW CHAMPION WITH RUTHIAN ABILITY IN PLACE OF THE YANK HERO

Beaumont and the Spuds: Beck Out Of His Slump; Sisler Still Going; Tanner Delivers; Alec Slipping

By "SPIKE" COOPER

The big Bam has finished his day in the calcimine glow.

Babe Ruth is becoming a past issue in baseball. Of course he will hold the headlines for some time to come, but he is not the hero of yesterday.

When he defied the laws of the national organization, Ruth found that he was not bigger than baseball. He showed the fans he was not. They are now admitting that to themselves and will soon be doing the same to their friends.

When he was kicked out of the game in his own park, in his home town, even his followers booed and booted him as the one-time greatest left the field.

He has proven himself otherwise.

It is now time for another champion. That is the routine of time. People do not particularly crave to see Hornsby or Williams oust him from the homer leadership. It is not that. But is hededitary with sport that a new champion is more admired than an old one.

And possibly the Babe realizes the same. His three year contract with the Yank owners might have had cognizance of the fact. Who knows?

HERE'S WHAT BEAUMONT THINKS OF SPUDS.

In a recent story of a contest between the Spudders and one of the teams in first division, the sport writer who covered the game said of the visitors:

"Both Fincher and Ruth received sensational support, particularly from Earl Adams, the rabbit-like shortstop, and "Bob" White, second baseman. On both sides of the middle bag, the Wichita Falls pitchers were backed by a phenomenal defense. Spudder outfielders also bobbed up in unexpected places on several occasions to snare Beaumont base hits."

"From some source Shorty Adams and Buddy Tanner gathered the impression that they must win the game all by themselves. At any rate they drove in all the Spudders' runs."

Thanks, Sam Greene.

Sam is sport editor of the Beaumont Enterprise. He is a good one. Sam is a critic of the game. He knows baseball and baseball players. When the Spudders are credited with that brand of a game in a foreign town, when it behooves Spud fans to clothe themselves in modesty and admit that the Spudders are the best club in the league.

FRED BECK PULLS OUT OF SLUMP.

Fred Beck had a heartbreaking slump at the plate during the first month of the season. He didn't try to alibi out of it. He admitted that he was no spring hitter. Records show that during the opening of the 1921 season he played in 14 consecutive games without a base hit. His record here was hardly that bad, but when the team departed for southern climes he was hitting barely .200 as a regular member of the team.

But two days before the club left, Fred's bats arrived. Four clean, solid smacks were registered that day. That was the begining. His figure for today tells the rest.

Few wonder now, how he led the Western league with 35 homers last year.

HAS ALEC PASSED FROM THE TEXAS LOOP.

Last season Alec was one of the best catchers in the Texas league. He won many games for Beaumont. But along came Anderson and Brooks.

Alec isn't a class "D" catcher. Not by any means. But fate wields a wicked wand over the head of many a ball player. Maybe somebody will take him away from the Bronco and maybe not. Anyway, he'll set that league on fire.

GEORGE SISLER NO FLASH IN THE PAN.

Lot of people said last year that Sisler played over his head.

Then he's doing it again this year. George is hitting above .400 for the season, leading the league in stolen bases, runs knocked in, runs scored, total hits and about every department that is recorded.

Maybe another favorite diamond hero is about to see his equal. The only question is, "Can he hold out at it as long as did Ty?"

BUDDY TANNER SHOWS HIS OLD TIME STUFF.

Fans shook their heads when news wires told of the serious injury of Tex McDonald, leading third sacker of the league last year, and who head and shoulders above them all this year.

It did look like a hard blow to the Spudders. BUT, Buddy Tanner hero of every Spudder victory since the lamentable accident, stepped into the vacancy on the hot corner.

Not only did he step into the vacancy, but to the present he has over-stepped it. He is simply burning up the corner. Making what has been called "hot" look like a chunk of ice stranded on the Sahara.

BILLIE SMITH'S NOT WORRIED OVER JOB.

Smith was one of the scrappiest, yet headiest, leaders of the Lone Star loop. But he has passed. The finx overtook him.

But Smith is not done with baseball. Not by any means is he.

Smith and Clarke Griffith, mogul of the Washington Senators have been lifelong friends. It was this friendship that made possible the possession of Slim McGrew by the Gassers. This was the last big "deal" Billie turned for the Shreveport club.

Who can say but that before another month rolls around that the Senators may have a new "ivory hunter" in the bushes, looking out for some rookie who must soon fill the shoes of the faithfuls, Walter Johnson and Claude Milan?

FANS GET DOUBLE BILL TODAY AT 2:30.

The first bargain matinee of the season in Athletic park is carded for this afternoon when the Gassers wind up a four game engagement in three days.

Whether or not the Spuds can get over their Sunday jinx remains to be seen. At the rate the club has been traveling of late, they might possibly cop both ends of the twin show just to demonstrate their ability as hoodoo smashers.

BOB MEUSEL'S BACK IN GAME AND FEW KNOW IT.

Little was said when the suspension of Bob Meusel was lifted. He was just a party of the second part it seemed. BUT—

The day Landis permitted the two outlaws to return to the game the fans went to see Ruth with his mighty flail. And his flail was all they saw.

Ruth started on the wrong foot. Clubbed out one homer then drew a suspension for mussing up and umpires uniform.

In the meantime, Bob was paddling alone, slamming out homers and the crowd said little. But at that, Meusel has a one-poke lead on the Big Bam or (Bum) and he hasn't been headlined yet. How come?

LUCK BREAKS FOR DANNY CLARK.

Danny Clark fell straight into a piece of luck last week when Cobb and Heilmann were suspended. It afforded him opportunity to demonstrate his all-round ability as a player. He was sent to right field and used in the line up near the top of the column. While he has slumped in his average, he is still poling the apple at a creditable clip. His third homer of the season came in the Friday game at St. Louis. He also added a single and double that day.

Danny seems to be the favorite pinch hitter of the Tyger manager and when he is not used in a regular role, usually breaks into the box score as an emergency clouter. And he usually clouts one for the boys when called upon.

OLD TIMER PASSES THROUGH WITH HIS CLUB.

"Bus" Wetzel and his Clovis youngsters passed through Wichita Falls Thursday night enroute to Amarillo.

"Bus" is one of the old time favorites around the Texas loop. He loves the game and though he has passed his usefulness in a uniform, he is willing to devote his time to the education of the youngsters who are trying to learn. He has a nice club, although badly in need of a couple or three good hitters.

His pitching staff is all that he could ask. Vick is a veteran of many seasons. Moore and Mickey are youngsters with Class A futures while Anderson is winning his percentage of the games. And these four hurlers are carrying the burden of the club.

Wetzel expressed a strong inclination to miss his train that he might fan awhile with the old timers who pulled into town Friday for the Gasser-Spudder series.

TEXAS COACHES ALL PICKED FOR 1922-23

AUSTIN, Texas, June 3.—The University of Texas coaching staff for the 1922-1923 season will include only one new man, Milton Romney of the University of Chicago. The present members are Billy Disch, Berry Whitaker, Clyde Littlefield, Charley Seddon, Roy McLean and Dr. D. A. Penick. Whitaker of the University of Indiana, coach of Varsity 1920-1921 football team will remain in the position of head coach. Seddon, of the University of Ohio, line coach for 1920-1921 football team will be in charge of the Varsity 1922 linesmen Romney, the new coach, will have charge of the backfield. He also will be head basketball coach, taking the place of L. Theo Bellmont. With the addition of this new backfield coach, Texas' chances for a winning eleven are regarded as much brighter. Coach Stagg of the University of Chicago considered Romney to be one of the best backfield men he has ever had under his coaching.

MURRAY KNEW HIS CHANCE

A few days ago Bob Shawkey started against the Indians for the Yanks and was nicked for four runs in one and two-thirds innings before Manager Huggins decided he wasn't there. Then Murray got his chance. He passed Tris Speaker, first man to face him, and then retired the next man for the final out of the inning.

Score was 4 to 0 then. When his turn came to bat in the Yanks' second two men were on. Murray drove a homer into a bleacherite's bread basket. Then he slammed out a triple later in the game while allowing the Indians three hits in the seven cantos he worked.

Which is some boost for Charlotte, N. C., where George was born September 23, 1898. After starring four years in baseball and football at North Carolina State college, he received his first pro tryout with Rochester in the International league last season. All he did was to win thirteen and lose seven games while hurling 169 innings. Fanned eighty and walked seventy-seven. Hit .384 while doing it.

Which shows that Mr. Murray has a faculty for stepping into the midst of things without hesitation.

TRADE TRIPPERS MEET MONDAY

They'll Leave Early Tuesday Morning

Wichita Falls "trade ambassadors"—five Pullman car loads of them—leave Tuesday morning on a special train which will take them through the northwest and western part of the trade territory for which Wichita Falls is the distributing center. The trip will be of two days duration, and will be one of three to be run this summer which will cover the entire territory adjacent to Wichita Falls in all directions.

The trip is the first real trade trip to be made by local business men in just six years, the last trip taking in the places along the Wichita Falls & Northwestern to Altus—the first day's journey of the present trip.

To Draw for Berths

Trippers will meet Monday afternoon at 3 at the chamber of commerce to draw for berths on the train, to receive final instructions, and to secure an issue of the paraphernalia which has been made uniform for the trip, white hat bands, linen dusters and purple and white striped umbrella.

Features which have been arranged for the trip include a wireless receiving set for the train, a phonograph and piano in the observation car, and a well stocked commissary department in the baggage car in charge of the Richard-Thompson Wholesale Candy Co. here.

FIST FIGHT IS SEQUEL OF SUIT

Election Contest Is Cause of Bout

Suit over a school trustee election held recently in district 20, resulted Saturday in an affray between one of the plaintiffs and one of the defendants, for which the former paid a fine of $10.80 in justice's court.

The suit, styled C. M. Moore et al vs. J. L. Bill et al, was tried before Special Judge Orus O. Ross in the 78th district court. The court held for the defendants, ruling that the election, which was being contested, was legal.

The plaintiffs alleged that illegal practices had entered into the election of the school trustees, that some of the contestant's names had been purposely withheld from the official ballot and that W. B. Minnix, officer in charge of the voting, had held up some of the ballots until after the boxes had been closed.

When the case had been decided, Moore attacked Minnix as the two men left the court house. Minnix is said to have offered no resistance to his assailant.

Schools Becoming Social Centers

Special to the Record News.
AUSTIN, Texas, June 3.—"School buildings are becoming more and more the social centers of communities," Mrs. S. M. N. Marrs, president of the state parent-teacher association declared in pointing out the use to which the school house is put by the parent-teacher societies in holding meetings and entertainments.

The use of visual instruction films owned by the University of Texas has aided in making the school house a community center for entertainment and instruction of parents, as well as pupils, Mrs. Marrs said.

Womanless Wedding Performed at Burk

Special to the Record News.
BURKBURNETT, Texas, June 3.—One of the most successful entertainments of the season was the "womanless wedding" that featured a church social of the First Christian church at the home of Dr. and Mrs. W. P. Martin, Wednesday evening.

The host was the "bride" and a charming bride he made, bedecked in satin evening gown, bridal veil of the gorgeous lace curtain variety with an embellishment of Crees jewels and sunflower wreath.

The "groom," M. H. Armstrong, received more attention than the usual run of bridegrooms, for he was indeed a dear little fellow in the conventional black. These twain were made one, under the "happy bonds of wedlock" their wives being present and giving their consent.

The bride was attended by Harley Snyder, the maid of honor, and preceded by Dr. Carl T. Steen, the flower girl, each dressed in girlish evening array, including rolled down sock, picture hats, ribbons and frills, paint and powder.

John E. Haynes of the American bank, was the demure, young ring bearer, the jewel being carried on the half section of a cabbage-head. Rev. Ed S. McKinney in fitting frill carefully bore the bride's train—suggestive in length of a freight train. Dr. F. D. Shepherd solemnly performed the "ceremony" from the ritual—a Sears & Roebuck catalogue, by which he concluded the vows with a pledge that all household and future necessities would be ordered from this establishment. To all of which they said—"I will."

What Beyond the Border?

That definite age line of fifty when men are no longer young, when plans of earlier years have shown their fruit, when some wish for another trial at this thing called LIFE. Young man of twenty, this is your day. Lay a plan of saving and stick to it and fifty will bring full financial independence. For your consideration:

Save $40.00 a month to make $500.00 a year.

Deposit it in the Building & Loan Association.

At fifty you have saved $15,000, BUT your earned interest should be approximately $75,000. You are worth about $90,000 in cash, which if invested at 7% interest will bring you $6,300 a year without reducing your capital. Thirty years is not long, young fellow. Mr. J. A. Two Inch Rain Help to Stamford

Special to the Record News.
STAMFORD, Texas, June 3.—A fraction more than two inches of rain fell here at an early hour this morning, and the reports indicate that the rain has been reasonably general. The rain came at a time when the farmers were completing their planting, and getting their maize crops worked out. Those who were able to get to the city today, say that the rain will not do a great deal of damage further than to keep them out of their crops for two or three days.

OIL SHOWING MORE STRENGTH

Standard Reacts As Others Gain

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 3.—The week end session of the stock exchange opened with another bullish demonstration in the oil division, but the markets tone soon became irregular on mixed purchases and sales of these issues.

Spectacular feature of the previous day, especially California Petroleums, Pacific Oil and several of the Standard Oil group reacted one to three points, while Mexican Petroleum, Royal Dutch, Shell Trading and Houston, Cosden and Marland oils gained 1 to 4 points.

Similar confusion of movements occurred among the steels, equipments, motors and other leaders of the industrial division. United States Steel failed by the smallest fraction to duplicate its recent maximum, but Crucible, Midvale and Republic, especially the latter, were under constant pressure.

Studebaker again led the motors and many of the subsidiaries of that type strengthened as a result of favorable trade conditions. Among unclassified issues Du Pont was conspicuous for its further rise of 8¾ points, or a total of almost 25 points for the week.

Rails moved in desultory fashion, the only noteworthy movements being restricted to Junior or low priced shares, such as Lake Erie and Western, common and preferred, and Wheeling and Lake Erie, common and preferred.

Sales amounted to 800,000 shares.

Despite the less assuring cables from aboard, foreign exchanges were firm to strong, sterling making yet another new high on the sale of demand bills at 4.48. German marks were the only remittance to east, falling 1⅛ from their best quotation of the mid week.

Loans and discounts of clearing house banks showed another actual expansion of about $47,000,000 and the actual cash gain of $8,000,000 increased excess reserves to slightly over $26,600,000, as against the $5,500,000 of the previous fortnight.

Ford's Offer to Be Investigated

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Further consideration of the difficulties of the offer of Henry Ford and the proposal drafted by the house military committee for the development of the government nitrate and power projects at Muscle Shoals, Alabama, was ordered today by Representative McKenzie, Illinois, acting chairman of the committee.

A meeting of the committeemen with W. B. Mayo and J. W. Worthington, representing Mr. Ford in the negotiations today came far from bringing about an agreement.

BOND MARKET

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Realizing incidental to the week end accounts, further hesitation in prices of leading bond issues today, most of the liberty issues closing at yesterday's levels.

International loans were mixed. Republic of Cuba 5s rising 2 points, Cuban railroad 5s eased, with additional reversals in Mexican governments. British and French offerings were not benefited by the strength of exchange. United Kingdoms of 1937 issues were fractionally

New York Central 6s, Reading general 4s, Norfolk & Western convertible 6s and Wabash first 5s showed firmness, while recessions among Junior mortgage issues of several of the western and southwestern rails held within fractional limits of last sales (par value) aggregated $6,943,000.

The coming week is expected to bring out many new domestic and foreign underwriting, the latter probably including another Brazilian loan.

OIL VALUES GO HIGH IN WEEK

Confusion Rules All Stock Deals

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Regardless of the fact that quoted values in a majority of instances registered substantial gains with a number of new high records among speculative favorites for one to two years, the week on the stock exchange was marked by much confusion and irregularity.

Circumstances which entered largely into the conflicting movements of the week included the cut in railway labor wages, decisions of the United States supreme court affecting the shares of the Reading and Southern Pacific roads and the former money tendencies.

Traders evidently took little comfort from the action of the United States railroad labor board and the rulings of the supreme court were followed by offerings of transportations stocks which resulted mainly in moderate depression of those issues.

Higher money quotations were the natural sequence of the calling of brokers' loans to meet June requirements, but the larger ratio of reserves held by the federal reserve bank pointed to early relaxation of local monetary condition.

Speculative interest was sustained by the further rise in values of such commodities as oils, metals and sugars together with the greater activity reported in the motor equipment business. Recent gains in general business were maintained, trade authorities reporting further recoveries from the depression from the first quarter of the year. Labor disturbances in the coal and textile fields were less acute and the buying power at agricultural centers showed marked increase.

Strength of United States steel coincided with the public statements by Chairman Gary, which drew attention to the corporation's remarkable financial and technical position.

COTTON SELLS LOW AT CLOSE

Opening Strong On Evening Up

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 3.—The cotton market was irregular and unsettled today as a result of evening up for over the week-end and liquidation of July contracts. October sold up to $20.64 during the early trading, or 12 points net higher, but later eased off to $20.41, closing at that level.

The general market closed barely steady, net 19 points lower to 6 points higher with the near months relatively easy. The opening was steady at an advance of four points to a decline of one point and after some irregularity July sold up to $20.92 and December to $20.46 on this advance, but the market then eased under realizing for over the week-end and increased offerings of July.

People who were long on July and short of October, seemed to be undergoing the straddle, which brought considerable pressure against the near month while there was scattering liquidation of both old and new crop positions.

July sold off to $20.59 and December to $20.25 or 14 to 23 points below yesterday's closing quotations and last prices were about the lowest of the morning. Late deliveries were relatively firm and quiet. Sales of print cloths in the Fall river market for the week were estimated at 130,000 pieces.

WHEAT VALUES GO DOWNWARD

Prices Over Cent Off at Close

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 3.—Liquidation was on in wheat during the short session of the board of trade today and with stop loss orders caught in profusion, values dropped to a new low on the present downturn. At the finish prices showed a net decline of 1 3-8c to 3 1-8c with July $1.14 7-8 to 1.15 and September $1.15 3-8 to $1.16 1-2. Corn was off 1-8c to 1 3-8c; oats 5-8 to 7-8c lower and provisions ranged from 5c lower on lard to 5c to 10c advance in ribs.

A week ago July wheat closed about 3 1-2 cents over September and today sold at a small discount. Local sentiment was decidedly bearish and the best support on the way down came from shorts who were evening up for the week. Outside interest was light. There was nothing in the character of the crop news to cause the bears any uneasiness. Export demand was reported as slow and no material business is expected until after Monday. Foreign markets were closed today and will not reopen until Tuesday.

Trade in corn and oats was almost entirely of a local character and both grains ranged lower in sympathy with wheat.

Provisions were dull and about steady with a light local trade.

DRY GOODS MARKET

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Cotton goods were firm today; yarns were higher in spinning centers, but buying for domestic consumption was light. Wool goods sold slowly at higher prices. Silks continued unsettled. Burlaps were less feverish. Jobbers reported a moderate amount of reorders and some additional fall business.

STEEL BUYERS AWAITING RATES

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Steel buyers are inclined to await the new freight rates in consequence the demand is rather less active. Producers are filling old orders, however, and are not disposed to consider reductions owing to the fuel situation and the uncertainty over the wage questions. Pig iron showed up to await developments, but remained firm and leading furnaces have a plentiful supply of orders on hand. Copper continued firm. Although in smaller amounts, buying for home consumption has been fair in the aggregate and some additional business has been reported for export chiefly for Germany and Italy. Domestic demand was mostly for July and August.

The trade estimates that may exports will probably be sixty million pounds against about 67,000,000 in April.

Tin was firm in sympathy with the strength of sterling exchange and London, because of small supplies a good demand developed for spot and June.

Lead strong with the leading producer advancing prices to 5.45 East St. Louis 5.65, New York.

Antimony quiet but steady.

Bankers Called to Meet in Austin

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, June 3.—A call for a conference of state bankers to be held at Waco on June 15 and 16 was announced by Commissioner of Insurance and Banking Ed Hall today. Mr. Hall said that the conference was for the purpose of correcting false impressions that have gone forth regarding the state bank situation.

The meeting is for setting in motion an aggressive campaign in behalf of the state banking system to offset the propaganda that is being spread broadcast by the opponents of the system and especially the guaranty fund.

Governor Neff and Thomas B. Love will address the meeting.

Ford's Proposal Partly Approved

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Henry Ford's proposal to develop the government's vast power and nitrate project at Muscle Shoals, Ala., was given conditional approval by the house military committee today and ordered reported to the house with a recommendation that it be accepted in the form agreed to in committee.

The action was taken by a vote of 12 to 9, in executive session and was interpreted by committeemen generally as being in effect but the preliminary skirmish to which promises to become a bitterly contested battle between proponents and opponents of the Ford offer in the house.

Shriners Threaten Laurels Of Even P. T. Barnum In Wonderful and Weird Attractions Booked For Shrine Circus

Circus stunts and attractions that will rival Barnum-Bailey & company are promised Wichitans by Maskat Shrine when they hold their Shrine circus here July 1-8, inclusive.

The circus will be held at Spudder park.

Plans for the big circus are reported as being well under way and organization for handling the show is said to be near completion. Enthusiasm displayed by Maskat Temple members is indicative of a comical and successful affair.

According to Shriners, temples throughout the country have been putting on a series of circuses that have attracted enormous crowds. Hundreds of people are said to have been turned away from the circus gates in other cities because of a limited seating capacity. Maskat Temple membership express themselves as believing they will attract at least 10,000 persons to Wichita Falls during the performances.

Five hundred animal actors and 300 performing people—nobles, Maskat band, patrol, drum choir and chanters will participate.

The entertainment July 4, it is announced, will be "something stupendous" both in street parades and at the circus grounds.

An enormous parade will be held July 1 at 1 o'clock, when the show people march down the streets here on the opening day of the circus.

Juveniles At Gatesville To Plan Ball This Summer; Get Balls, Bats And Gloves As Gifts From Wichitans

Juvenile inmates of the Gatesville training school are going to get enough baseball equipment to play all the summer.

Through the efforts of R. L. Yates, Wichita county probation officer, a supply of balls, bats, mitts, etc., were shipped to the juvenile school at Gatesville June 2, the officer having raised sufficient funds for the equipment through popular subscription among the Wichita Falls business men.

The following letter, addressed to J. T. Cantwell, superintendent of the institution, accompanied the baseball outfits:

"I am expressing to you a complete baseball outfit. I want the juvenile boys in the juvenile yard to have it since I promised the equipment when I was there last.

"This equipment consists of four balls, four bats, catcher and first baseban's gloves, seven field gloves and umpire and catcher's outfit. This is made complimentary to the boys from Wichita Falls.

(Signed) "R. L. Yates,
"Probation Officer."

Argue Wrestling But Argument Is Soon Turned To Demonstration Of Principles of Pugilistic Art

"A place for me and then the fight started, judge."

Thus an Irish defendant enlightened Police Judge Chauncey Saturday morning concerning a battle which had been in progress in a Lamar street restaurant when city officers intervened.

The defendant displayed an ugly gash behind his left ear and several scratches on his face which indicated that he had been in the thickest of the brawl.

"We were arguing over wrestling, your honor," he said. "I think they come in there to start an argument. I was bound the counter when one of them grabbed at me, and then I started into them.

"No, I wasn't drinking. I was just standing up for principle."

The officers related that one of the principals had fled at the appearance of the police, but when he heard a gun click, as the trigger was pulled back for action on a big .45, he came to an abrupt halt and stood in his tracks until the hand of the "law" reached out and ordered him to "come along."

One of the combatants had put up a $25 cash bond, and had departed for Burkburnett, planning to return and face the charges against him.

BLACK-DRAUGHT OVER 30 YEARS

"Saved Me Many a Sick Spell," Says Texas Farmer, Who Has Long Known Usefulness of Black-Draught.

Naples, Texas.—"I have used Thedford's Black Draught for years—I can safely say for more than 30 years," declares Mr. H. H. Cromer, a substantial, well known farmer, residing out on Route 3 from here.

"I am 43 years old, and when a small boy I had indigestion and was puny and my folks gave me a liver regulator. Then Black Draught was advertised and we heard of it.

"I began to take Black-Draught, and have used it when needed, ever since. I use Black-Draught now in my home, and certainly recommend it for any liver trouble.

"I have given it a thorough trial, and after thirty years can say Black-Draught is my stand-by. It has saved me many sick spells."

Mr. Cromer writes that he is "never out of Black-Draught," and says several of his neighbors prefer it to any other liver medicine. "I always recommend Black-Draught to my friends," she adds.

This valuable, old, powdered liver medicine is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs, and has none of the bad effects so often observed from the use of calomel, or other powerful mineral drugs.

Black-Draught helps to keep the liver in trim, helping prevent or relieve such troubles as constipation, biliousness, indigestion, sick headache.

BARRY MILLER HERE TUESDAY

Speaks Twice For Culberson

Judge Barry Miller of Dallas, "war horse" in Texas politics and the lifelong associate of Senator Culberson, whose candidacy for re-election he is managing, will make two speeches here Tuesday in the interest of the Culberson candidacy.

The first will be made at the University club luncheon at noon—an organization which has entertained practically all of the senatorial aspirants or their representatives since the campaign opened. The club has declared the occasion an open session, as has been the case with the other condidates, and has extended a general invitation to the public to attend the luncheon. A large attendance and a snappy program, with musical features is expected.

In the evening Judge Miller will address the general public, at place which has not been definitely selected yet, and expected to be either at the Wichita theater or at the courthouse.

Judge Miller enjoys a wide acquaintance among Wichitans, having appeared here in the course of many campaigns in the past. His last appearance here was in 1916 when he campaigned for the re-election of Senator Culberson—a campaign which culminated in the impressive defeat of former Governor Colquitt, the veteran senator's opponent in the runoff.

BUSINESS MAN TO SPEAK IN CHURCH

Members of the congregation of the First Christian church will hear an address on Christianity from the standpoint of a business man at the morning service, John W. Bradley, local merchant, speaking on "Life's Cost Book." At the evening service Rev. Frank B. Solin, born in the Jewish faith and afterword becoming a Christian, will speak. The services will be held at the usual hours, with Sunday school at 9:30 and the morning service at 10.40.

Judge E. W. Napier, who announced Saturday morning that he would not be a candidate for the gubernatorial nomination this year, would neither affirm or deny Saturday his intention to become a candidate for the office in 1924.

Judge Napier's announcement came within a few weeks of his announcement of his intention to become a candidate this year, and was made soon after his return from a trip in the interest of his candidacy from which he was recalled by news of the serious illness of his seven-year-old son, Eugene. The lad was operated on for appendicitis and is reported to be resting comfortably and his condition favorable.

In announcing his intention of withdrawing from the race, Judge Napier expressed his appreciation of the many offers of support he has received—especial appreciation being expressed for the home people who accorded him their support.

BELFAST, June 3.—Reinforcements for the British military forces in northern Ireland poured into Belfast today and the influx is to continue all next week, according to present prospects. The city had to go back to the energetic days of March, 1914, which preceded the Curragh brigade mutiny, to find a parallel for the present military activity.

Wichita Flappers Organize

Action Pictures of Speakers at Dredge Program

T. B. NOBLE.

WICHITA SHOWS ITS GRATITUDE

Launching Signifies First Step

With the launching of the powerful dredge last Tuesday—signalizing the first step toward the real big work on the project, the work has settled down to routine swing, and news from the project carries little except intelligence that construction schedules on the various parts under construction are being maintained and in cases succeeded.

But Tuesday's affair will remain one of the landmarks in the progress of the project, and it was fittingly observed by citizens of Wichita Falls and neighboring towns.

A complete set of pictures of the launching of the dredge, the crowd, the speakers, the dredge and the breaking of the bottle of champagne was printed first in the Record News yesterday.

For one thing it provided an opportunity for Wichitans to show their appreciation of the work of one of their chief officials on the project—T. B. Noble, for whom the big boat was named.

For another, it provided another opportunity for taking stock as to the real significance of the great project and what it meant to Wichita Falls—and as this was analyzed by Frank Kell it opened some new vistas of future greatness and value for this city and surrounding territory.

Rare photographs of these two Wichitans in action was obtained by Arthur Nash for the Record News on this occasion—the upper showing Mr. Kell during his discussion of the meaning of the project—the other showing Mr. Noble during the brief talk in which he expressed his thanks for the honor conferred on him on this occasion.

She Reads Paper, Drives Car and Nurses Her Babe

We all live and learn. This was the opinion of a local guardian of traffic and parking ordinances yesterday.

With a baby in her lap, reading a newspaper and at the same time dodging traffic on Eighth street yesterday, a woman drove her Ford coupe with the unconcern of a peanut vendor.

The motor cop confessed a hesitancy in stopping the driver for fear of an accident, either to himself, the baby or the car.

How they can do these things so successfully puzz'es many, but they do, regardless of admonition, warning or even threats from "safety first" committees.

Evidently many Wichita Falls motorists live that old slogan "every man for himself, and the devil for us all."

Plan to Be Worked Out In Detail Before Long.

Less than a year ago Frank Kell first advised Wichitans of his plan, following the completion of the Wichita Falls & Southern, and the building of the Byers-Waurika extension to work with other interests for a consolidation of railroad lines north and south through Wichita Falls into a system with the main line running through Wichita Falls, and the northern terminus at an important northern market city and the southern terminus on the Mexican border.

The plan was no vision, he declared, but would be worked out within the near future—as the near future goes in railroad deals.

And quiet work in progress now on the Wichita Falls & Southern indicates that he is steadily building ahead to this day. The Wichita Falls & Southern, enjoying good business and consequently having a good maintenance appropriation in proportion, is being rapidly ballasted.

It is not being ballasted with the usual makeshift used on southwestern roads, either. The slag from the Newcastle mine shaft which caught fire a number of years ago, is being used—considered by the few railroad men in this section who are acquainted with its merits as the finest ballast obtainable in the United States. Practically burnt ballast, it is declared to be considerably superior to the gumbo used as ballast on many northern roads. About 25 miles of the line have been ballasted to date—for the most part the part of the new line lying south of Newcastle and between that point and Graham. In time the whole line will be ballasted—its condition is being steadily improved now. And when that is done the new line will be in as good shape as any of the main lines in this section—better than many.

The new part of the line, from Newcastle south, is laid with 65 pound steel. The older part of the line has 60 pound steel. The main line of the Santa Fe, for many years handled the crack trains of the road and had only 60 pound steel—the lighest rail used on the Southern. The condition was the thing. And the Southern is getting in condition and will be prepared to handle anything on wheels when events shape up to make it a link in a real system.

Price of Crude Up on Gulf Coast

Just when the edge of the expectancy of local oil operators—boomed by advances in the refined products market—was about to wear off, and they were sitting down to wear it out until the market moved along, the expectancy was revived to its full bloom by an unmistakable sign—a rise in the price of crude.

The rise did not start according to tradition, this time—it did not start in Pennsylvania—and accordingly passed unnoticed by many. It started where the crude price movements usually end up—on the Gulf coast. Gulf coast crude was boosted last Thursday, two bits worth, and is now $1.25. Other price movements are accordingly expected.

SHRINE PATROL COMING HERE

Galveston and Other Nobles Coming

Stunts and novelties in profusion will characterize the stay here Tuesday, June 30 of El Mina Shrine temple's delegation from the southland. El Mina is located in Galveston and besides a band of 40 pieces, the uniformed visitors will comprise members of El Mina patrol, all nobles of Port Arthur and Beaumont, Texas.

The special train will arrive in Wichita Falls at 5 p. m., and will make a seven hour stay here, departing at midnight. Entertainment will be provided by nobles of Masket temple.

"The biggest brass drum in the world" will be one of the features presented by this party of Shrine nobles from the southwest's port and playground. This drum is some eight feet in diameter and is really the biggest noise in captivity.

"In Old Galveston" a catchy, swingy song written by two Galveston nobles will be distributed by the visitors.

"The Eliminaphone" a novel and melodious musical instrument built expressly for the Galveston Shriners also will be seen and heard. This instrument alone, Band Director William Schneider believes would set El Mina's musical organization above and apart from the usual run of brass bands.

In case circumstances permit, the famous bathing girl revue will be staged by El Mina's nobles. First in this parade comes the costume which won first prize at the recent Bathing Girl revue held on Galveston's beach. Band and patrol members will be suitably decorated for the occasion.

Picture of First Wichita Falls Flapper Club

There's been quite a bit said about Wichita Falls pretty girls. When this newspaper brought in a gang of reporters from other parts of the state recently, they immediately took it upon themselves to begin writing their opinions about the many and unusual types of beauty found here. Truth is, the thing got to be a sort of habit and the editor had to call a hand. But it is to be said to the credit of these young scribes that the girls of Wichita Falls got a bunch of good advertising throughout Texas, as a number of papers have been reprinting these stories and commenting on them.

But to get back to this picture. Who took it is a secret. Felicia Falls, our woman feature writer, knows. But getting anything confidential out of Felicia, is like fishing on Sunday. There ain't anything stirring. Felicia is like all other women in every respect except this one. She refuses to confide even to the editor the name of the photographer. And Felicia deleted the faces before she turned in the picture. At any rate we will not have to worry about getting the photographer's name on this one picture.

THEY ROLL THEIR OWN HOSE, SHOW DIMPLES ON KNEE AND SMILE BEHIND THEIR CENSOR

Local Union Becomes Nationalized and Gets Recognition From Official Headquarters, And Stand 100 Per Cent For Many Things That Girlies In Many Other Clubs Do

By FELICIA FALLS

Have you a little flapper in your home?

Printed elsewhere on this page are the charter members of the first Wichita Falls local, No. 258, Flapper union, affiliated with the national protective association for the independence of flappers.

Is your flapper among them?

From Maine to California they are organizing, these flappers, and not to be outdone by sisters of other states and cities, the Wichita Falls girls have organized.

But the flapper union is still somewhat like the ku klux klan, that is so far as Wichita Falls is concerned. Hence the wholesale mask across the smiling countenances. There's a reason. Sixteen reasons, in fact. If you're right bright perhaps you can figure them out for yourself.

Flappers they call them today. Baby vamps they were termed last year. Gibson girls some seasons go. Clinging vines still earlier. And before that it was the girl with the "Grecian Bend" and the "Water Fall" that incurred public displeasure.

EVEN STAID OLD ROME HAD ITS FLAPPERS.

This seasonal public displeasure with the habits and wearing apparel of femininity, and particularly youthful femininity, dates away back yonder. Back past the days when the old Romans disapproved of the way the young Romaneses wore their ribbons twisted through their chignons or whatever they called them, the way they shook their scandals, as they pattered through the streets, or turned down their thumbs as they called for the death of the vanquished gladiator.

They probably date back to the day when Father Adam and Mother Eve took a slant at some of the sweet young things from the land of Nod who were making eyes at their eldest son, Cain and disapproved of the shortness of the fig leaf skirt.

The moral of which tale is: If they hadn't been flappers and disapproved of, they would have been something else, and been equally disapproved.

BRITISH VISITOR SAYS THEY'RE OKEH.

The disapproval, real or pretended, which is being voiced against the flappers by columnists, paragraphers and many others in America, is not echoed by visitors to this country from other lands. In fact Lady Astor, a former Virginia girl, now distinguished as the first woman member of the English House of Lords, thoroughly approves of the flapper and her styles and modes, according to an interview quoting the famous lady, and one time celebrated beauty of two continents.

"Just what is a flapper?" Lady Astor is said to have asked, when an enterprising reporter queried her as to her stand on the subject.

The reporter pointed out a girl, attired in a short, full sport skirt, slip over sweater, high neck and long sleeves, sport shoes, low heels, bobbed hair and a round, turned brim hat.

"If you mean a girl with sensible comfortable clothing, I most surely approve of her," the distinguished lady said decidedly.

EVEN THE SWEATER HAS ITS FOES.

Many other noted women in America have also taken up the cudgel in defense of the flapper. They find nothing offensive in the garments that have become known as flapper duds, but instead approve of the practicality of low-heeled oxfords or pumps, and the unpretentious sport garb, that has become the real flapper uniform. And, they say, is not a plain, rolled brim hat, in far better taste for street or any other wear, at all hours, that some fragile, flower trimmed affair of perishable straw.

Folks disapproved of peg-knee waists several years ago, and more recently turned their attention to georgette crepe blouses. Now the flapper critics are not pleased with the sweater craze, that the flapper has created.

Flappers are also credited with rolled stockings and bare knees, or rather discredited, this being a very strong point in their disfavor. Physiology which is taught in the public schools from the primary grades on up, is responsible for the statement that tight garters cut off circulation and are bad for the health. Rolling is the only really satisfactory manner of maintaining hose in proper condition, without tightly binding around the knees.

KNEES NOT ALL GOOD TO LOOK AT.

But rolled hose seem in some circles to be taken as a direct sign of immorality. Wrinkled hose would therefore seem to be an indication of a strictly moral state.

The strongest argument against bared knees is the unbeautiful appearance of many of the knee when presented to public gaze. Not many knees that have been on this mundane sphere 20 years or more are particularly attractive to look upon.

Likewise with bobbed hair. The only consideration with the length of the hair, in the mind of the writer and from representative opinions privately gathered, is the becomingness to the wearer. There is no question as to the sanitary and comfort advantages of the short hair coif. And there is nothing more attractive on a pquant faced miss than the frame of short curls, or a fluffed natural bob.

The great mass of artificial puffs and curls worn during the days of the mercy widow craze called forth great criticism from many sources. Some preachers inveighed against false hair, as an outward manifestation of inward sham. There were many other arguments against the

THE FLAPPER of today is the baby vamp of yesterday. She is the girl youth of today. She personifies what feminists for ages have strived to attain. Her mother was a Gibson girl, her grand-mother was a "clinging vine" her great-grand-mother danced the Virginia reel in pantalets.

The word flapper is of English derivation. Girls between the ages of 14 and 18 wore their hair down their back in braids in England in olden days. Their hair flapped. Therefore the term "flapper" was applied to them. Just how the term was ever appended to the bobbed-haired queens of today, it is not known, other than it is because of their youth.

FLAPPER

Miss Patsy Ruth Miller, presiding flapper.

The Flappers' Protective Association, Chapter No. One, has been organized in Los Angeles to fight the propaganda against modes and habits of the "flapper." Presiding Flapper Patsy Ruth Miller will direct the campaign to place the flappers' side of the question before the public.

Wichitans, Beware of Butyl Bug in Booze

Something's Going to Take Place Here Soon, They Say

Something interesting—something spectacular—may be staged by the ku klux klan here in the not distant future, if rather nebulous reports picked up here and there can be trusted to accurately forecast coming events.

Whether it take the form of a parade, or of a great big evening open air initiation, with a huge class of initiates and with the full ritual of the order is not known—but something is expected.

Such an event will be a distinct change in policy for the local klan, which has heretofore rather avoided the spectacular. Those expressing partisanship for the klan declare that it has not been necessary in the past, and has been avoided in order to deprive their opponents of the enjoyment of something to talk about.

Campaign For Members.

If it comes now, the report declares, it will come in the nature of a celebration—a celebration, tis said, of the numerical increase of the local klan, and of their satisfaction at the start toward a cleanup for which members, and even some of their most outspoken opponents here, give the klan credit for.

That last is no joke here, either. A prominent local business man who has from the first been outspoken against them, and whose influence, perhaps, more than any others, prevented a local organization at first and delayed the appearance of the order in this city, recently voiced the unreserved belief that the activity of the klan had not only improved law enforcement here, but all over the state as well.

"Think what you will, but I know it is the truth," he said flatly.

The klan believes that it is entitled to credit for the shake-up in the police and city courts, which has resulted in a following cleanup of vags—open bars—professional gamblers and the like.

The klan does not think, partisans declare, that Wichita Falls is in any danger of becoming a "Holy City" or that vice is absolutely stamped out here—but they do think that their influence has made a dent in its reign—has driven it under cover—and has made the road rough for the transgressors who are detected and who are now beginning to get a wholesome respect for the law.

So the "dope" is that the klan is planning some movement which will sort of put the stamp of its approval on its progress here.

Wolf of Wall Street Finally Surrenders

NEW YORK, June 2.—David Lamar, known as "The Wolf of Wall Street," wanted on a larceny charge, surrendered today. A bench warrant was issued for his arrest yesterday after Mrs. Estelle Allison, a widow, charged he had stolen $6,300 which she had given him to buy oil stocks.

280,000 Years Cut Off Population of Wichita Falls Citizens' Lives Through Drinking of Poison Hooch, Says Scribe

"Who's your hooch-maker?" and "do you know your bootlegger?" are becoming leading questions of consumers of the modern day interpretation of beer and whiskey.

Possibly a more correct interrogation in their stead should ask: "Who's your poison-stiller?" or "Do you know the guy who brings you the butyl-fluid?"

Present day inhabitants of the nation are divided into two classes, those who formulate decoctions of hooch, or those who depend on some friend to formulate decoctions of hooch.

Estimates show that fully 75 per cent of the homes of today are now, or have shortly in the past, providing their alcoholic refreshments from home-brewed stuff which is supposed to, and often does, contain a kick.

Its All In the Germ.

Sweet extract of mule-shoes!

The majority of those who feel a befuddling effect from a "shot" a hip-flask immagine it to be the same as that oldtime "bun" of bourbon or Scotch. But it isn't that at all. It's the butyl-bug.

Butyl bugs are a member of the germ family, instigators of better business for the undertakers, promoters of horrible morning afters, blindness, paralysis and insanity.

Then there is a twin destroyer that appears in the crocks and kegs which are used as containers for mash and brew. The lengthy exposure to atmosphere creates aldehyde, and aldehyde is that element which destroys vitality.

Mash Is the Thing.

Men who know the distillery game from A to Izzard declare that whiskey can not be made in small quantities. They admit that certain receipts will provide a liquid which possesses strange propensities but the stilling of real whiskey can not be done in small quantities.

The production of whiskey from mash requires certain temperatures and condition that are impossible to a home brewer.

But the mash is the big difference. Of course not all whiskies were made alike in the days when distilleries were real business enterprises.

It is the handling of the mash from the time it is set until it goes into the still that makes the difference. It is from the mash that aldehyde is formed.

When the substances are allowed to lie open to the air, aldehyde forms. How or why it forms can be explained only through chemistry. But the fact that it does is sufficient.

The Red In Red Eye.

Aldehyde is formed through the oxidation of alcohol. When the liquid is allowed to remain in this form and then run through the still, this condition produces a very irritable gas.

It was this gas that gave rise to the old familiar expression, "Red Eye." When the handlers came in contact with this gas, even that was so strong that their eyes became highly inflamed.

But the liquid aldehyde is still stronger than the gas.

Kicks Carry Poison.

Any kitchen distiller can put a mess of stuff into a crock and produce a mess of brew. And the brew has the necessary kick.

But what is the kick contained in the liquid?

Many will say of their brew, "It has a kick like a mule." If they but really knew the entire content, they might well add, "It is as poison as undertaker's fluid."

The poison is not always as highly effective in instantaneous action as some other known substances, but it is just as deadly in its final effect.

The home hooch maker is a smart man. He thinks he knows what he says he knows, and will say so, but he doesn't.

If you should want him what action takes place when the ingredients undergo the change which transforms them into some "kickish" liquid, he could not tell you.

Just some chemical action provided by the force of nature does the work. That is all he knows about it.

Then if he can't tell you how it happens, how can he tell you what happens?

But whiskey doesn't happen. In the days when there was real whiskey, it was made. Properly made by those who understood the manufacture of it.

Today the poisonous potions which are dealt out by kitchen stillers and amateur moonshiners does no more resemble the real subject that it does spring water.

It is the mistaking of the poisoning effect on the nervous system for the alcoholic effect that is bringing on all the trouble.

People are being poisoned daily by their own hand and do not realize the fact. Others are being sold a slow death in a supposedly liquid which substitutes the effect once known as "That Gr-r-r- and glorious feelin'" of yesteryear.

280,000 Years Lost.

Figures by students of human life estimate that an average of seven years is being subtracted from the end of every American life by the drinking of poison. This is the estimated average.

Then taking that average for a basis and the population of Wichita Falls as 40,000 people, then 280,000 years of human existence is being wasted here in our fair city by imbibers in hooch.

Good Road Deadlock Is Finally Broken

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The deadlock over federal good roads between the senate and house was broken today when their conferees reached a compromise by which $50,000,000 will be available during the next fiscal year for continuing federal and state cooperation in road development.

ANITA MONROE TELLS HOW SHE GOT HER START

Local Stage Beauty Home for Short Vacation

"Show people are just like ordinary people.

"They are not the people that many of those beyond the stage lights would class them.

"When we are not before the crowd doing our parts, we are usually sitting behind the scenes in our dressing rooms, reading good, wholesome books, knitting sweaters, sewing, or doing something to better ourselves; we are not smoking cigarettes and drinking the wine that we often get the credit for doing."

She's With Mitzi.

Those were the startling statements of enticing little Anita Monroe, daughter of Mrs. George Davis, 1510 Ninth street, who returned to her home in Wichita Falls Friday morning following her second year's engagement with the "Lady Billy" theatrical company, of which Mitzi Hajos, famous actor, is the star.

"Oh, to be sure, it's a very interesting life," she emphatically asserted to a question, and when asked whether she contemplated continuing her career on the stage, the engaging young actress stated proudly:

"Yes—I think I shall. You see, we get to see the country; next fall we open at the coast. No, I don't know what the name of the season's play is to be yet, but it will be good. Henry W. Savage does not produce any other kind."

Curling herself up on a large divan in a room which has clearly a western atmosphere, the little lady—one of the four leading dancers of the big theatrical company—presented a striking picture for anyone's camera, with a red house dress drawn loosely about her shoulders and a pair of dancing pumps on her tiny feet, which daintily peeped from beneath the dress as she reposed.

She shrugged her shoulders as she talked, and her conversation was voluminous.

Says She Ran Away.

"We rarely ever—in fact we never interview the newspaper men," she informed the press representative. "That's always done by our own press reporter. We have hugh laughs over the things we read in the eastern papers about the things we said or did. You see, the show's press representative will take our pictures in stunning costumes, and then turn them over to the papers with statements about what we said. Lately they printed my picture in knickers, and beneath the picture I was quoted as saying that knickers are to be very popular, etc.

"I joined the company two years ago. They tell awful press tales about me up there. They state to the readers that I ran away from home and went on the stage, and all that kind of publicity.

"No, of course I didn't run away from home—that is, not exactly. I had been away to school in Curry two years, where

Spring Departs Among Whirr of Social Activities in Wichita Falls

Lure of Outdoors Leads To Pleasure of Little Season for Festivities

THE last month of the spring season proved almost as busy socially as the earlier months, although but few large events were given. With continued cool weather, and few departures for summer homes to speak of so far, there is no reason for a quietus being put on things socially.

* * *

NEVER has the city seemed so beautiful—so like a garden set with houses—never has there been so many things planned for the out-of-doors. This lure of the outdoor entertaining is adding picturesque animation to the closing of the "little season." More and more are the members of the social set taking to the open for their pleasures. There is a particular fascination about these pleasures when conventionalities may be left at home, and all are free to follow the inclination of their pleasure loving natures.

MANY of the picnics planned by clubs and cliques were postponed the past week on account of rain which has been a daily visitor, carrying out the old adage, "if it rains on Monday, it will rain three days out of the week."

PRE-NUPTIAL affairs, for the popular June bride-elect, Miss Marian Maer, are keeping members of the younger set somewhat busy, one of the largest and most elaborate of the past week, being a bride shower given for her by Mesdames Charles I. Frances and Leslie Stringer at the Country club. Misses Annette Walsh and Louise Frieze will entertain members of the bridal party Wednesday of this week with a luncheon at Kemp Court, the second affair since the announcement of the approaching nuptials.

The living room and reception suite was attractively decorated for the occasion in limbs of peach blossoms, nasturtium and a profussion of Dorothy Perkin's roses, giving the entire house the appearance of a fragrant garden of the Orient.

SOCIETY

NEW CHORAL CLUB REHEARSING NUMBERS.

Rehearsals for numbers on the Texas Women's Press association program which will be held here the middle of the month are occupying members of the newly organized Wichita Falls' Woman's Choral club which is a recent auxiliary to the Musicians club.

The organization has made ambitious plans for work during the coming fall and winter when they expect to co-operate with the Musicians and University clubs in bringing artists here, or bring them here themselves individually. They also expect to become one of the very best Choral organizations of local talent available.

Plans for twilight musicals to be held probably at the Kemp hotel at stated periods during the season, were also discussed.

Appointment of committees for various work will feature the meeting to be held at the parish house as a part of the business session and rehearsals Wednesday morning.

A wedding of interest to a large circle of friends of both bride and groom in Wichita Falls and other points in the state, was solemnized Thursday afternoon at the home of the bride's uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Covington at Alvord, Texas, when Miss Merle Frensley, daughter of Mrs. Zada Frensley, became the bride of Glenn Kincaid of Burkburnett. The ceremony was read in the spacious living room which was profusely decorated for the occasion with pot plants and cut flowers, by the Rev. W. C. McClung, pastor of the First Baptist church at Denton.

Preceding the wedding, pre-nuptial music, including numbers by Homer Jordan of Dallas, cousin of the bride was rendered. Mr. Jordan also played the accompaniment to a violin solo "Traumerei" by Mrs. Bruce C. Schulkey and vocal numbers, "Because" and "I Love You Truly" by Miss Judith Taylor.

NOLEN GOES TO DIXON MOTORS

Nolen-Stringer Firm Dissolved

Charles W. Nolen, better known as Charlie to his many friends in the automobile business, is a new member of L. L. Dixon's staff of Buick representatives at the Dixon Motor company. As assistant manager to Mr. Dixon, C. W. began his duties June 1st.

Mr. Nolen is well known here and is conceded by automobile men to be one of the best all around salesmen and automobile men in the city. Before going with the local Buick agency, Mr. Nolen was a member of the firm of Nolen-Stringer company, local Haynes and Lincoln dealers. As Nolen-Stringer company, the firm was successful in placing in the trade radius many Haynes and Lincoln cars. Due to the loss of the Lincoln to the firm of Henry Ford's purchase of the Leland properties, and an expiration of the lease on their quarters at Tenth and Scott, both Mr. Nolen and Mr. Stringer decided to dissolve partnership.

In speaking of the appointment of Mr. Nolen as assistant manager for Dixon Motor company, Mr. Dixon said, "We feel exceptionally fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Nolen and feel that his acceptance of this position will meet with the approval of our various Buick owners and prospective owners in this section. Mr. Nolen's knowledge of used car problems and his accurate valuations of used cars will place him in position to be of valuable aid in this department, as well as in the management of Buick interests here."

Studebaker Men Are Live Wires

"We have made Wichita Falls a Studebaker town," that is the slogan adopted by Frank Keim and his live wire bunch of salesmen at the Excelsior Motor company, and from reports of the present business done by Studebaker here, it comes near being so.

"Our business," stated Mr. Keim yesterday, "is about 100 per cent ahead of figures this time last year and were we only able to deliver the cars would eclipse even business done by Studebaker during the boom days."

Yet not only here is that true but from every part of the country comes the reports of increased demand for Studebakers. Dallas received 96 cars about two weeks ago Mr. Daugherty, our sales manager, was able to get five of them while in Dallas Thursday and reports there were only eleven left then. Only a few were jobbed out to dealers, the 96 being the Dallas agency's quota from the factory. The cars we are receiving this month are the orders we placed for May. The factory is fast eliminating the shortage and has all plants working night and day to catch up on production, and we have hopes in the course of a few weeks of receiving shipments normally again.

CHAS. NOLEN

Nolen's appointment as assistant manager of the Dixon Motor company, local Buick dealers, was announced in conjunction with the removal of the firm to their new quarters in the Thom building, corner Seventh and Scott streets.

Chandler Building New Model Sedan

Recognizing the growing demand for close coupled sedans of the more sociable type, the Chandler Motor Car company has responded splendidly in bringing out the Metropolitan sedan, according to James Moulder, manager of Willhelm Moulder company, local Chandler and Cleveland dealers.

Distinctively handsome, graceful and clean-cut, this new five passenger sedan is a worthy addition to the Chandler family which now numbers ten models.

For the matinee, the country club, and all social activities the Metropolitan sedan provides a pleasing combination of luxurious exclusiveness and dependable conveyance.

This new sedan embodies the fulfilment of every motoring requirement. Its soft, alluringly comfortable cushions of mohair velvet invite restful relaxation. In performance it possesses the velvety ease characteristic of Chandler cars.

The elimination of unsightly protruding door hinges is accomplished in a manner reminiscent of "custom built" quality. This refinement, commonly found only on the very high priced cars, wonderfully enhances the smooth, graceful lines of this new five passenger sedan.

DIXON MOTORS IN NEW HOME

Buick Company Now At 7th and Scott

Dixon Motor company, local Buick agency, is now established in their new home in the Thom building, corner of Seventh street and Scott. Three floors are given over to the agency and upon the arrangement and locating of all departments it will be one of the most completely equipped and largest automobile houses in the state.

The building, originally built for a local automobile firm, is ideally arranged for the needs of Buick here, having concrete floors, elevators and windows on every side, thus affording plenty of light in all departments. According to present plans announced by L. L. Dixon, the first floor will be given over to the offices of the company and the used car department. The second floor for parts and storage, and the third floor for the repair and Buick service departments.

"We have felt the need for larger quarters for some time," states Mr. Dixon. "The number of Buick cars now operating in Wichita Falls and the surrounding territory necessitated us finding quarters where we could be able to care for the requirements of Buick owners. In our present location we believe we have one of the best arranged automobile houses it is possible to find.

"We are especially proud of our shops, located on the third floor of our new building. Additional equipment has been added here and upon completion of our plans now outlined we will be able to offer local Buick owners every service it is possible to obtain in any city anywhere.

"Business? Yes business is good, and now is only a question of securing cars to fill the orders on our files. The new special jobs put out by Buick are meeting with a demand almost unequaled in the history of Buick manufacture. Every member of the firm is optimistic as to the future here and now that we are located in quarters where we will be able to better serve our car owners, we can see no reason why 1922 should not be the banner year for Buick in Wichita Falls."

Livery Company Gets Packards

Three new Packard single sixes were delivered by L. O. Brown of the Victory Motor company last week, to the Kemp Hotel Auto Livery. The new single sixes were the first of the new Packard models Mr. Brown has been able to receive here and according to Mr. Brown he had quite a task in getting the Dallas agency to release them.

Homer Crawford of the Victory people made the sale and delivered the cars, bringing them to Wichita Falls from Dallas.

The new single sixes are meeting with wide popularity throughout the country, Mr. Brown says, and the Packard factories are working at capacity to fill the orders coming to them from the various dealers throughout the country.

Used Car Problem Is Solving Itself

"A check of the used car situation in the great middle west shows that this problem soon will solve itself," says E. V. Leslie, Federal tire dealer in the Wichita Falls territory.

"There is no question that much of the curtailment in the manufacture of automobiles has been due to the fact that dealers were loaded up with used cars.

"In Detroit all during the winter, it was possible to buy used cars at pretty nearly your own price. Try it today? You will find an entirely different situation. I know of a dealer in a city 90 miles from Detroit whose supply of used cars was exhausted. He had so many inquiries that he decided to buy a stock of used cars in Detroit where he knew conditions had been bad.

"With a number of certified checks he went to the world's automobile center. But to his surprise he found that the conditions had undergone a radical change. There were no overstocks of used cars and the price on those remaining were too stiff. Certified checks in the amount he had estimated did not appeal to dealers or distributors who had used cars.

"It has been predicted that there is millions of dollars for the man who can solve the used car problem. But today it has solved itself in the great automobile centers of the country. I look now for a decided turn for the better in the automobile industry."

CUT RATE MEN SELL NEW TIRE

Howe Company Has Representative Here

"Business is good with the Cut Rate Tire company," says Gene Segal, local manager, "for the last three months our sale of tires have been increasing until we have been forced to double our orders to the various factories we represent."

Mr. Segal also states that since the first of the year they have received several carloads of tires which they have disposed of in Wichita Falls and the surrounding trade territory. The company claims to be the only firm in this section of the state doing a wholesale and retail business in tires and buying in carload lots.

"We have recently been appointed distributors for the Howe tires and tubes in Wilbarger, Archer, Childress, Hardeman, Clay, Baylor and Wichita counties. In acquiring the Howe line, we have a tire that is recognized for it's proven ability and is guaranteed by us to give a mileage of 12,000 miles," says Mr. Segal.

E. W. Herrington who is associated with Mr. Segal, was formerly representative for the Howe people in this district and was for many years a member of the factory staff. The company is authorized to make all adjustments on tires locally, by the factory.

Zihlman Moves to New Location

Miss "Lotta Smiles" the fair vamp who greets you between "smiles" on the Kelly Springfield advertisements, has changed her residence in Wichita Falls. Joe Zihlman packed Miss Lotta up the other day and together with all other tire equipment moved the Zihlman Auto Supply company across the street on Scott to the location formerly occupied by Stout's garage.

In the new quarters the firm will have additional room and will be in position to offer even better service on Kelly users. Besides offering tire service, Mr. Zihlman states they have installed a greasing rack and facilities for washing cars. Storage space tires, the firm is offering a new tube for cars is also an added feature of the new location.

As an added inducement for the public to become acquainted with the new location and Kelly Springfield free with every tire purchased within the next week, Joe says the Kelly business is good and that Zihlman Auto Supply company is putting out a powerful lot of new tires these days.

Among the new jobs delivered were: A new Hudson speedster to Conner, Son and Cloughly, five passenger Essex to R. R. Fiske, and Essex cabriolet to F. R. Quimby. LOCAL DEALERS HEAR HARRISON

Motor Association Has Meeting

Hubert Harrison, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce was the principal speaker at the semi-monthly Automotive Dealers association banquet held in the private dining room of the Kemp hotel, Friday. About 25 members were present at the meeting.

Mr. Harrison stated that in appearing before the automobile dealers, he did not come to make a speech, but only to tell them of the numerous plans the Chamber of Commerce now has and to ask them for co-operation in furthering these plans, which he stated were of vital importance to the future growth of Wichita Falls. During the course of his talk, Mr. Harrison stated that from all statistics Wichita Falls had braved the slump of several months past and that all lines of business were showing an increased activity. As an illustration of this he metnioned the increased deposits in local banks and the city's rental situation.

After New Business.

"We are receiving bona fide inquiries from large manufacturers in the east who are now considering Wichita Falls as their logical distributing center for this section. We are going out after this business," Mr. Harrison stated.

As an illustration of the advertising and sales arguments the local chamber is advancing, he displayed for the dealers the new prospectus and illustrated circulars being sent to various firms and distributors in the east.

"Wichitans know no handicaps," Mr. Harrison said, "our slogan 'The City that Faith Built' is more than just a slogan. It represents the spirit of a community 95 per cent of whom are white, free born Americans, a fact that every Wichita Falls man or woman or child has a just right to be proud of. There is no limits to the possibilities our city can attain and there is no reason why Wichita Falls should not attain heights of great importance before many more years have passed."

At the conclusion of Mr. Harrison's talk, President Quiesser of the Automotive Dealers association responded with thanks to Mr. Harrison for his address and suggested that the Automobile Dealers association go on record as endorsing Mr. Harrison and the Chamber of Commerce for the splendid work they are doing for the advancement of Wichita Falls.

BLOW-OUTS

Leslie Stringer, formerly of Nolen-Stringer company, is contemplating a trip to his ranch in the plains country, about June 5. Leslie says he expects to be up in that part of the country about all summer and from the plans now outlined will have plenty to keep him busy. Meanwhile he is disposing of the few remaining used cars in stock, when the firm dissolved partnership, June 1st.

Julian McFall and Manager Cregor of McFall brothers returned Wednesday from a trip around the trade territory. While gone they visited the new associate dealers recently appointed by the company. G. M. Stout of Stout's garage is another man of leisure these days, having turned over his building to Joe Zihlman of the Zihlman Auto Supply. Stout says he hasn't any definite plans of action for the summer, and is not considering any until he finishes a fishing trip that has been on his mind for several weeks past.

Members of the Wichita Falls Automotive Dealers association who missed the Friday night meeting have a reason to feel sorry about it. The 25 or 30 members who were there stated it was one of the best meetings held this year. Talks like that given by Mr. Harrison of the Chamber of Commerce are good for livening up even automobile men, who are supposed to be born optimistis anyway.

AUDIT CITY BOOKS

Auditing of the city books has begun.

The work is being conducted by Ira S. Harris, certified public accountant, the city auditor assisting him.

It was stated at the city hall yesterday that a saving will probably be effected for the city through city clerical help aiding the accountant. In this connection it was pointed out that in 1919, the audit cost Wichita Falls a total of $5,000, covering a term of years, while the next year's audit cost $2,600.

It is not expected to cost over $1,200 this year.

MY BOY'S INSANE, PLEA

Young Eugene Bryant and hi s father, Wilbur F. Bryant.

CHICAGO, June 2.—(Special)—"I believe the boy should be given a psychopathic examination to test his sanity."

Thus seventy-one-year-old Judge Wilbur F. Bryant of Hartington, Neb., defended his son, Eugene, "poison penman," before Judge Morgan in the East Chicago avenue police court.

The father's defense followed testimony of Detective Sergeants Prendergast, Brandt and Klatzco, who told how they disguised themselves as waiters in a loop restaurant and captured the letter writer when he called to collect an envelope supposedly stuffed with bills by Mrs. A. H. Shotwell, victim of his blackmail attempts.

A. H. Shotwell, millionaire candy man, gave the history of the ten months' persecution of threats from the younger Bryant. The first letter, he said, came in July, 1921. Those subsequent threatened bombing, death, and kidnaping of their small child, he declared. He described it as a "reign of terror."

"My boy was a war casualty," he said. "His last letters home were very strange. Just at the time he was arrested we were preparing to place him in a sanitarium. I am not at all bitter against Mr. Shotwell. I'd act the same if I had received such treatment."

Mrs. Delp had been an invalid for about two years. She is survived by her husband, a local oil operator, a daughter, Miss Isabel Delp, and also by her father, mother, sister and a brother, living in Illinois.

OIL CLAIMS IN RED RIVER UP

Mellish Bases Plea On Discovery

BY B. N. TIMMONS

(Washington Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 2.—Placer mining patents would be issued to the Mellish Consolidated Placer Oil Mining association on claims in the south half of the Red river bed, which have been held by the United States supreme court as not subject to the federal mining laws, under a resolution introduced in the house today by Representative Oldfield of Arkansas, at the request of former Senator Thomas P. Gore of Oklahoma.

Gore Represented Claimants

Gore represented a number of Placer mining claimants when the case was before the supreme court.

The resolution also authorizes the secretary of interior to investigate other Placer mining entries and claims "made or attempted in good faith," prior to October 1, 1919, in Tillman county, Okla., between the middle of the main channel and the south bank of the river.

Brought in Well

It is recited by the resolution that the Mellish people, after the expenditure of considerable money, brought in the discovery well, thus demonstrating the presence of oil in the river bed.

The particular patents which the secretary of interior would be authorized to issue to the association by the resolution would be on the border line, the Tiger, the Lucky Spot and the Bleck Jeck claims.

Mr. Von Allman reports he has had numerous inquiries regarding the new Chevrolet model and anticipates splendid sales on them upon the arrival of them here.

Solving the One Great Problem

THE SYMBOL shown at the top of this page solves for you the one great problem you face in the purchase of a used car. . . . It gives you absolute assurance of obtaining REAL VALUE for the price you pay—and of getting the lowest possible price on that value.

Many men, who have never bought a used car, have wanted to do so. They have seen used cars that appealed to them—but they have not been sure that the price was right, and have had no accurate way of judging the value that yet remained in the car.

WHEN you buy a used car from a reliable established automobile dealer, you can be assured that the price is the lowest possible, and that the value is as represented.

The automobile merchants listed below are reliable established dealers. You can buy your used car from them with absolute confidence in the value of the car and the price they asked.

These merchants are permanently in business here. They maintain real establishments. They have a reputation to uphold. They value your friendship and good will.

MERCHANTS, such as these, do not buy USED cars for the purpose of reselling at a profit. They profit in the sale of the new cars they handle—and are satisfied with that profit.

They are interested in getting the money out of the cars which they acquire in the ordinary routine of their new-car business. They accept only used cars of real merit. They know the value of these used cars.

And, since they are not seeking a profit when they sell the used cars, their prices are lower than elsewhere.

Wilbarger Cotton Crop Most Promising for Number of Years

VERNON FARMS BOOST ACREAGE

Spirits Raised by Advancing Price

By ERIC G. SCHROEDER.
Special to The Record News.

VERNON, Texas, June 3.—Prospects in Wilbarger county for a good cotton crop and price simultaneously are the most promising in years is the frank comment of local bankers and farmers, and a distinct spirit of optimism is permeating everywhere in this vicinity. With excellent crop weather during the present season farmers have been enabled to carry out their work thoroughly and painstakingly, and as a result, a good crop is expected.

Wilbarger acreage in cotton has been increased this year, and some of the crop is well advanced. In most parts of the county it has a good stand. It is estimated that there will be more cotton in Wilbarger this year than in any since 1914. Without additional rain a fair crop of cotton can be gathered here, and with showers in June a bumper yield will probably result. With the price of cotton advancing, the local situation is deemed by many to be decidedly flattering.

It is thought that many farmers from the southern districts, hard hit by floods and boll weevil, will seek employment in this section during the summer and fall, causing an attendant drop in the price of labor. Turkeys and poultry, too, are given credit for playing an immense part in aiding local farmers. The industry has enjoyed a phenomenal growth over last year.

The attitude generally is that everything is pointing to success. Farmers are busy everywhere, crops are growing, and unless the unforeseen occurs, there will be prosperity this fall in Wilbarger county, those in a position to know are stating.

RAIN BENEFIT TO HASKELL

Cotton Already In Ground

Special to The Record News.

HASKELL, Texas, June 3.—Beginning at about midnight and continuing until after 8 o'clock this morning, rain fell all over this and adjoining counties, making the crop prospect look much better and permitting a number of farmers to continue with their planting.

Most the cotton is planted and up and many farmers have their crops worked out, but much maize is still to be planted and in many places the ground had gotten too hard to plow.

The rainfall averaged more than one inch in most sections and in some places reports that there were two and three inches rain fall.

TOMMY MIX IN EMPRESS SHOW

He Does Some New Stunts

Tom Mix, who is now doing more thrilling stunts than ever before his latest William Fox picture, "Chasing the Moon," which comes to the Empress Thursday, has made himself a sensation of the screen because of his daredeviltry. His desire to amuse to make people forget their worries and troubles, has caused him to take more chances against death or injury than any other prominent figure on the screen today.

While one is amazed that he does these things and contemplates doing others equally dangerous, you cannot make Mix believe they are dangerous —that is, dangerous for him. He realizes that others might get hurt in attempting them, but not Tom Mix. That is the reason he refuses to have a "double" do some of his thrillers. They might not do them right, they might injure themselves.

Mix figures the thing out like a mathematician. He knows just how to do the stunts before the camera begins clicking. He'd get nervous watching someone else do them. In his present picture, "Chasing the Moon" he not only gives you many thrills, but lots of hearty laughs in addition.

He has a very robust and hard boiled wife who objects to his late hours, causing Charlie to devise some clever schemes to be IN and OUT at the same time.

Edna Purviance appears as his boss' daughter, innocently bringing many jealous pangs to Charlie's wife's heart and knots to Charlie's head.

Negro Flogged Fails to Protest

"They's" been some flogging done here lately, and it wasn't done by the ku klux either—at least the delegation which did the flogging and it was said to have been one am bastin' wallopin' flogging at that—did not wear masks or regalia.

The "lambaster" was a negro bell boy working at a local hotel, who is declared to have been rather free in his relations with the white women of a certain profession which stop at the hotel for which he was working.

Such is the burden of a report which is current on the streets here. It can not be confirmed—everyone who talks on it has it from hearsay, but it is told with all the earmarks of truth.

And the delegate who was lambasted—well, if he has not mended his ways, according to those whose ear the story has come, at least he has not raised any very loud howl that his rights have been infringed in fact it is suspected that he wonders if he didn't get off pretty light at that.

Rail Brotherhoods To Meet Tuesday

By Associated Press

CINCINNATI, Ohio, June 3.—J. D. Mumby, chief assistant to Edward H. Fitzgerald, this afternoon received a telegram from B. M. Jewell of Chicago, head of the railroad employes division of the American Federation of Labor, stating that the meeting of the 16 railroad brotherhood chiefs and other railroad union officials would be held on Tuesday in Cincinnati as scheduled.

The telegram was a reply to an inquiry from Mr. Fitzgerald regarding a report from Chicago earlier in the day, stating that the meeting might be changed from Cincinnati to Chicago.

STARS AT OLYMPIC

LILA LEE.

Another star in the cast of "Is Matrimony a Failure?" is Lila Lee. She plays opposite Mr. T. Roy Barnes who admits there are many reasons for an affirmative answer.

LOIS WILSON.

Antonio Moreno Is uite a "Sheik" Himself, As Work In New Goldwyn Film, Where Star Dons Turban, Shows

Speaking of sheiks, and who isn't these days, here is Antonio Moreno all dressed up like an Arab or Turk or something. Moreno, you now, is one of the few, the very few film stars who is unmarried. He likes flappers, all of them, he confesses and he prefers brunettes to blonds. When asked why he never married, he usually replies, "can't marry 'em all, you know."

Goldwyn secured the services of Moreno but recently after he had some differences with the Vitagraph company concerning the kind of parts in which he was cast. His next picture, however, is not to be of the sheik variety. He has merely donned this oriental costume to oblige the photographer and interviewer. Tony really should go on for turbans and the like for they are so becoming to his Castilian features.

Alas for romance though, he seems to prefer tweed suits and white madras shirts.

EARLE BECOMES A BLOND

Earle Williams is basking in the tropical atmosphere of South America as his new picture gets under way at Vitagraphs West Coast studios.

Williams, wearing a blond wig for the opening sequences of the story, is well satisfied with the part which includes Fatsy Ruth Miller as leading woman. Miss Miller is a striking young brunette, and with her light curls and black mantilla is a picturesque contrast to the casual nonchalance of Mr. Williams, it is said.

IT'S COMING

Lovers of the north who remember the Saturday Evening Post story, "The Lawless Godliness of Billy Snake," will be interested in the announcement that Vitagraph is producing an adaptation of the story, with William Duncan in the title role.

Kathryn Perry will reappear on the screen with her husband, in "A Previous Engagement," for the first time since she became Mrs. Owen Moore.

Is matrimony a failure?

"Maybe it is and maybe it isn't," observes T. Roy Barnes, who plays one of the all-star roles in the new Paramount special comedy, "Is Matrimony a Failure?" which will be shown at the Olympic theater next Monday.

"Be that as it may," continues the actor, "there are many things which are entered up in the books in red on the failure side of the account—little breakers which buffet the matrimonial ship about in its stormy voyage and keep the vessel all shaken up."

Using hubby's best razor to carve corns and open canned goods.

Intereference by one parent when the other chastises one of the offspring. This gets the parent's goat and spoils the child.

Too many "important business" appointments by hubby after business hours.

LOVE, HATE IS THEME OF FILM

"Over the Wire" Is Alice Lake's

In "Over the Wire," the Wesley Ruggles production for Metro, which will be seen at the Gem theater on Monday as the feature attraction, Alice Lake, the brilliant little screen actress, who plays the starring role, has a picture specially made for her by Arthur Somers Roche. The latter is distinguished as a writer of fiction.

Strong hate that in the crucible of emotion changes to love, is the great underlying theme of this remarkable picture, which has all the vitality and life characteristic of the works of Mr. Roche. The story, briefly, deals with Terry Dexter, who commits suicide rather than face exposure, as a swindler by a financial magnate, John Grannan. Before Terry dies he telephones his sister, Kathleen, that the end is come. Kathleen distrait, vows she will avenge her brother's death through ruining Grannan. This involves a series of escapades, a Wall street coup, a marriage, elopement and a sudden life and death adventure where Kathleen, to her amazement, finds that she does not hate her husband, Grannan, but instead, loves him.

Majestic to Show Feature Films

The Majestic theater will offer this week, three of the best pictures it has been their pleasure to offer in one single week. Opening Monday for two days showing will be a big double bill with Norma Talmadge in one of the strongest pictures she has ever appeared in, "The Woman Gives." This is a return date on this wonderful production. When it was shown here on its first run, due to very bad weather very few people got to see the picture. Those that did the management feels sure will come to see it again. On the same bill will be seen Harold Lloyd in "The Marathon," which is fifteen minutes of laughter.

Wednesday and Thursday, the Majestic will present Gloria Swanson in "You Can't Believe Evrything." This picture is not her latest, still it is strange to say that it has never been shown in this city. It was over looked in the bookings and still is one of Miss Swanson's best pictures.

Friday and Saturday will be shown "Daring Dangers" a Western picture full of action, thrills and excitement, together with an extra funny two reel comedy "The Saps."

BERT LYTELL IS JUNK DEALER

Actor Says Picture Showed Chance

"Ditch the old; on with the new!" That, according to Bert Lytell, the Metro star, is the American economic motto. And he criticises it.

"We act as thriftlessly as soldiers headed toward the front," he says. "After months of lugging about expensive equipment and caring for it tediously, most of it is tossed into a ditch. 'It's just junk,' says the soldier. 'There's lots more where that came from.'

"And that's where we, as a nation, generally fall down. Things we have used appear for the time to have outlived their usefulness. We toss them away. We're not going to have a litter of junk about us.

"Where does it go? Ask the junk man; he knows. Our castoff goods in themselves would be enough to make nearly all of us rich. Look at the junkman sorting the rubbish heaps. We look down upon him; he's a 'foreigner' as a rule. But he's a trader, too, and his succession of 100 per cent profits makes him very wealthy in a short time. Think of the millionaires who were made by thrifty use of casts off! If I hadn't found my metier as an actor, I would probably turn to the junk business.

"It took my new photoplay, 'The Idle Rich' to awaken me to junk possibilities. I play the role of a wealthy young idler who suddenly loses his fortune. All he has left is some old junk. The traders' instinct that he had inherited leads him to start bartering junk; it leads eventually to his leading his own Barter and Exchange company."

Strand Secures Dallas Organist

Manager Day of the Strand theater announced securing the services of Miss Lou Thomas of Dallas, as organist.

Miss Thomas enjoys the reputation of being one of the most accomplished organists in the south. Though she has had considerable experience in theatrical work, she has recently been engaged in recital playing. Miss Thomas is talented as a soloist as well as organist.

Public service corporations of the United States require new capital of $20,000,000,000 annually.

Watch Name of Virginia Valli Soar To Electric Signboards After She Appears In Her Coming Big Picture

Virginia Valli, one of the younger players on the west coast, is expected to make a name for herself in her next picture, "The Storm" taken from the famous Broadway success of the same name. Those who have seen a preview of the picture, which is to be released soon, think that it will lift Miss Valli to stardom just as quickly and just as surely as did the Broadway opening of the play make a star of Helen MacKellar, who created Miss Valli's screen role on the stage.

Although Miss Valli has been in pictures for some time it was but a year ago that she joined the Los Angeles film players. Since that time she has been winning friends everywhere for her screen work. She went out west to make three pictures with Bert Lytell, the last of which, "The Light That Failed" has recently been released. Then she played with Dustin Farnum, and later with Frank Mayo and then she was chosen for the leading part in "The Storm." It is expected that she will be a star before another 12 months.

New 1400-Foot Sand Sensation in Electra Field Developments

GOOD WELLS IN 1900 FT. SAND

Lesser Depth Being Tested

Interest in the South Electra operations was divided this past week between the west side of the field, where a newly discovered 1400 foot sand is being tested, and the older pool, where there were several unusually good wells completed in the new 1900 foot sand.

The flush production of wells drilled in this past week amounted to 2,700 barrels, with a possibility of this reaching 3,000 men final completions are reported.

The John O'Neil No. 3 Rio Bravo in section 31, just west of the Harvey-Cullum 1600 and 1900 foot wells, is testing out a 1400 foot sand which has made a good showing. The well will probably be completed, if the testing proves satisfactory production at this depth by the first of the week. On the No. 1 this lease which is just above the 1400 foot sand, a rotary is being rigged up, to drill to the sand and test. This well has been drilled with cable tools to the 1400 foot depth.

Improves Flow.

The Griswold Oil company's No. 25 Burnett drilled in the first of the week, with a showing for a fair well, was drilled one foot deeper into the sand on Thursday night, with a resulting increase in production which brought the flow up to 800 to 1,000 barrels a day.

This same company's No. 18 Burnett was drilled in Thursday night, 1900 foot sand, with an estimated production of 600 barrels a day.

In the southwest part of the pool the Shamrock Oil company's No. 1 Waggoner is swabbing and flowing at the rate of 500 barrels daily. The fourth 1900 foot completion in this pool for the week is the No. 44 Burnett of the Planet Petroleum company, making 600 barrels.

All of these wells are inside the proven pool, but the continued heavy production in new wells is considered a very encouraging sign, indicating that the large producing wells first brought in were not freaks, and that the new 1900 foot sand would be found in a real pool.

Five Drilling On Planet.

The Planet Petroleum company has five wells drilling down to the 1900 foot sand on it's Burnett lease, all inside production. The No. 44 drilled last week, is the second 1900 foot well on the Burnett for this company and the third deep producer in the pool, the No. Waggoner being brought in about three weeks, in the south end of the pool.

The Griswold Oil company's No. 26 Burnett is drilling around 1750 feet, and the No. 10 Burnett, lease B, is drilling around the same depth. Both wells are to go to the 1900 foot sand.

The Griswold's No. 1 Waggoner B, formerly the Howell lease, 's drilling down from the top 1900 foot sand. Casing was set at 1890 feet and drilling through the top sand and the lime break is now in progress. The top sand contained sufficient oil to fill the hole up several hundred feet.

The Gulf Production company's No. 4 E. D. Collett producing for some time in the 1800 foot sand, was drilled to the 1950 foot sand but failed to make a satisfactory producer, and is being plugged back. This well is about a half mile east of the Planet's 1900 foot Waggoner well, and the Griswold's deep Waggoner well, drilled before the bringing in of the big producers to the north.

The Texas Company has had no completions this week, but there are several wells down around sand depth.

The No. 210 has 6 5-8 set at 1800 feet, and is preparing to drill into the deep sand.

Texaco Drilling.

The No. 217 Waggoner to be completed in the 1800 foot sand is reported preparing to drill in, with casing set around 1700 feet.

The No. 222 Waggoner is drilling around 1850 feet. The No. 223 Waggoner is drilling around 1800 feet. The No. 224 Waggoner drilling around 1770 feet.

The No. 220 and 221 Waggoner are rigging up cable tools. The No. 225 Waggoner is driling around 700 feet. The No. 226 Waggoner, located in the Texas Company's warehouse yard at Electra, spudded in this week and is down about 125 feet.

The No. 227 Waggoner is drilling around 900 feet. The No. 228 Waggoner is drilling around 70 feet, and the No. 229 is a derrick. The Nos. 230 and 233 Waggoner are rigging up rotaries, and Nos. 230 and 231 Waggoner are derricks.

The territory west of the older South Electra pool has no new developments this past week, outside the testing of the 1400 foot sand reported in the opening paragraphs.

The Bankers Petroleum company, on their Waggoner lease, just north of the Petroleum Producers shallow pool, are still working to test the 1600 foot sand.

Harvey-Cullum Lease.

On the Harvey-Cullum lease the No. 5 is about due to drill the 1900 foot sand, after being held for several days with a fishing job.

The No. 6 on this lease is drilling around 750 feet, and the No. 4 has been shut down around 420 feet, with a fishing job.

Both of the John O'Neil tests in section 31 drilling for the deep sand are to be tested out in the 1400 foot level this week. The No. 2 is still shut down on the shallow sand.

The No. 1 of John O'Neil in section 19, in Wilbarger county is drilling around 1700 feet and the No. 1 in section 18, also in Wilbarger county is drilling around 850 feet.

The Rio Bravo Oil company has the rig up for it's No. 1 in section 31, located in the northwest half of the southeast quarter of the section. It is an offset to the Harvey-Cullum No. 6 Rio Bravo.

In section 13, northeast of the Harvey-Cullum and Texas Company's deep producers, the Texhoma Oil and Refining company's No. 1 Burnett is reported drilling around 1250 feet.

On the old Gladiolus lease the Hobbs Oil company is completing a new well in the 1800 foot sand, and drilling three more down to the 1900 foot sand.

The Texas Company's No. 7 Tate Waggoner, in the old Electra field, is reported drilling around 1750 feet. The No. 15 Honaker, also in the old field is drilling around 1700 feet. The No. 28 Skinner has set 6 5-8 at 1200 feet.

The Gulf Production company is rigging up a star machine to drill in the No. 8 Burnett C, in the old South Electra shallow pool, just north of the 1900 foot producers, this well being on the sand at 1670 feet. There are 1800 foot producers on this lease, but the 1900 foot sand has not yet been tested. The No. 9 Burnett C is drilling around 1750 feet, and the No. 10, same lease is drilling around 1250 feet, and the No. 11 drilling in a hard sand, around 1200 feet.

The No. 18 Burnett A lease, of the Gulf Production company, is reported drilling around 750 feet.

On the Burnett lease of McDonald et al the No. 4 is reported drilling in, sand at 1000 feet. This is the lease on which the first 1900 foot well in the shallow pool proper, was completed, about two months ago. This well led to the new developments which up to the present time has increased the Electra production from 12,000 to 16,000 daily.

ANITA—

I had been studying expression. I heard they wanted some new dancers on the Mitzi company, so I stopped off in New York on my way home.

"I went to the Broadway office of Henry Savage and asked for a try-out.. Julian Alfred—he's the dancing instructor—picked me out from 15 others, I believe, as well as I can remember, and I became the only southern girl on the show.

Loyal to Wichita.

"I have a great time spoofing them about Texas. I tell them we don't know what telephones are, nor street cars, nor anything modern. I make much of big murders, and tell them how rough we get down here.

"But I am always loyal to Wichita Falls. I tell them about our 12-story buildings, and what a thriving, bustling metropolis this city is.

"A 13-story building?" she queried in amazement when told that she should have lauded the City National Bank of Commerce building. "I wish I had have known that; but I'll store it away in my memory and tell them about that when I get back."

Interesting to converse with those whose lives are spent to amuse others? As interesting a conversation as a president or a king could afford. Wichita Falls' tiny protege of the dance, lythe, full of enthusiasm, all full of smiles and not too bashful about her life, is indeed charming.

They Call Her "Texas."

The past season, she said, among other large cities that "Lady Billy" played were New York, Chicago, Boston, Milwaukee, Louisville, Brooklyn. Her second voyage home since she became a part of the great entertainers will be for a six weeks' stay, she declared, and then she will see the great Golden Gates of the west.

"They call me 'Texas' in the company," she confided laughingly, "and that's a good name, isn't it?"

SHE'S KNOWN TO STAGE FOLK AS "TEXAS"

LITTLE MISS ANITA MONROE.

Miss Monroe, one of the members of "Lady Billy," a Wichita Falls girl, who is spending a short vacation before rejoining the Mitzi Hajos company, says they all call her "Texas" on the stage. She has been in "big time" for a number of years.

GULF DOUGLAS SHOWING FLOW

Produces 20 Barrels In 900 Sand

The Gulf Production company's No. 1 Douglas B, north of the road, and about 2,000 feet north of the 1900 foot discovery well of this company on the Jennings, is a 20 barrel producer in the 900 foot sand. The No. 2 Douglas B is reported rigging up a rotary.

At Fowlkes.

The T. F. Hunter-Mona Marie No. 2 Roberts has just set casing on the 1600 foot sand, preparing to drill in next week.

The Gulf's No. 2 Powell is reported a 15 barrel well, in the 700 foot sand. The No. 1 Roberts C is reported drilling around 2,200 feet.

Dale Ranch Wildcat.

The Gulf Production company is rigging up on it's Dale wildcat north of the town of Electra, and not far from Red river. This well is to be made a deep test, and is in the general neighborhood of the sevarl tests which got showings of more or less importance around the 2,500 foot level last year.

On John-Jeff Ranch.

Preparations for new drilling activity on the John and Jeff Waggoner ranch in the neighborhood of the new 1500 foot producer brought in by Dr. Bailey and associates, are reported, with several locations already made.

T. F. Hunter has made an offset location, his No. 1 Waggoner Bros., J. W. Culbertson et al are offsetting the new well to the west, and the No. 2 of the discovery company is the third new location.

Shallow K. M. A. Well.

The Texhoma Oil and Reining company has completed it's No. 4 Kemp and Kempner, in block 48, K. M. A., shallow field. The well is a 15 barrel producer, sand at 670 feet.

Archer County.

The No. 22 Gose of the Texhoma company is drilling around 1500 feet, due to get the sand in the next day or so. The No. 4 Coffman of the Texhoma and J. J. Perkins is also down around 1500 feet.

The No. 1 Chance of the Texas Company is drilling around 700 feet. This well offsets the Texhoma's No. 17 Gose, on the south side of the pool.

HUNTER WELL BURK FEATURE

Shallow Drilled In For 100 Barrels

Completion of the T. F. Hunter No. 4 Murdock, in the new South Burkburnett shallow pool featured operations in this part of the field the latter part of the week. The well, completed in the 1200 foot sand, was drilled in Thursday night, and is rated a 100 barrel producer.

Two 500 foot wells are also in process of completion on this lease, the Nos. 5 and 6, their production estimated at 20 and 25 barrels respectively. These wells will be the first completed in this shallow depth on this newly opened pool, north of the old shallow field.

The No. 3 Fowler of the Texhoma Oil and Refining company is reported a 50 barrel completion in the 1300 foot sand. The No. 4 Fowler is a new location.

WILL FLAPPER STAND THE TEST OF TIME?

The trained skirt, that not only hid the feet, but swept the floor, was condemned as unsanitary and extravagant. The waisted corset, and the exaggerated bustle, gave reformers much material. The narrow skirt also furnished a target for invectives.

And now the short, full skirt, the normal waistline, natural effect is on trial, together with short hair, and a comfortable arrangement of both mentionable and unmentionable effects.

Oates Says Business Men Interested

Not only the farm demonstration agent but the business men of northern Texas are taking a big interest in fostering diversified farming.

M. B. Oates, traveling agent of the Wichita Falls & Denver City route, declared Saturday that "the best thing I found the past week during my work was that the bankers of northern Texas are taking an interest in diversified farming."

The agricultural expert declared that the National bank of Spur, in Dickens county, issues an eight page pamphlet once a month entitled the "Spur National Bank News," the booklet running at least one story on the success of some Dickens county farmer who diversifies his crops.

W. B. Lee, cashier of the bank, Mr. Oates states, is taking the initiative among the crop farmers of that community. A large sign hanging in the bank announces that: "We finance diversified farming. Diversify and try us." Lee claims the bank is fostering, in promoting diversification ing diversified farming because it has become necessary and conditions demand it.

The cashier told Mr. Oates, the latter says, that the bank is furnishing money clubs, and loaning it to farmers to purchase hogs, cows and chickens.

W. B. McKinzie, cashier of the Peacock bank, is distributing small placards showing the results that diversified farming brings. The Penick Hughes Hardware company of Stamford, Mr. Oates states, is using practically a similar placard, sticking it on every letter and package that leaves their business house.

DRAKE DENIED NEW TRIAL BY ROGERS

Motion for a new trial made on behalf of W. T. Drake in the county court at law Saturday afternon was overruled by Judge Guy Rogers.

Drake is charged with aggravated assault in connection with an alleged assault said to have been made upon a young woman employed in a local rooming house.

The defense introduced testimony Saturday with their motion tending to prove that the prosecutrix has been married twice and that her first husband divorced her. She had testified in the trial that she had only been married once.

Worry over finances always hinders successful effort along any line. Possession of a steadily growing reserve found in the City National Bank of Commerce is the surest preventative of such worry and at the same time a constant spur to effort.—Ad

The American "Flapper" Countess Who Shocked Paris Twice

Shock No. 1---Solange Hutchins, Daughter of an Italian Nobleman and Stepdaughter of an American Millionaire, Dances in the Gayest and Most Undressed Show in the French Capital.

Shock No. 2---Solange Threatens to Expose the Debauchery of Parisian Social Life When Her Mother Causes the Arrest of a Virginian on a Charge of Abduction.

WHEN they first arrived at Paris and motored along the Bois de Boulogne there was hardly a soul who could have told which was the mother and which the daughter. The former Countess Lastazzi, reintroduced to Paris society as the wife of the millionaire American tire manufacturer, Walter Hutchins, made it a point in pride not only to feel as young but to appear as young as her beautiful daughter, Solange, just 16.

And Solange, having a pride for a youthful parent, was justly pleased with her mother. This until one Harry W. Nelson, society man, of Virginia, flashed across the horizon of mother and daughter at an afternoon affair held at an American friend's house to which many well-known folk from the States were invited. Then occurred the rift that caused Solange to shock Paris twice.

Just what happened in the Hutchins menage may never be exactly known. But what is known is that not long after the Virginia gentleman made his entrance Solange, who had enjoyed the refined domestic environment of the home of a millionaire father and a thoughtful mother, whose only fault seemed to be the commendable desire to keep young, suddenly appeared on the Paris stage.

Nor was it as a member of the cast of a society pageant that this 16-year-old beauty made her debut. She accompanied her advent behind the footlights with a daring dance that woke up Paris.

After the reported clash between mother and daughter, which, subsequent statements by the daughter reveal, featured the name of Mr. Nelson, much to the surprise of Mrs. Hutchins the young girl left the hotel where she had been stopping with her mother.

Mrs. Hutchins, friends say, did not suspect what was in the girl's thoughts. She attributed the act to wilfulness. She confidently predicted her return in time for dinner. But the night passed and the days passed and she heard no more of her until, two weeks later, she was horrified to read that her little girl was appearing as the leading dancer in the Babylon scene in the Folies.

When Solange left her mother's house she called a taxi and drove to the Folies Bergere. She was still excited with her adventure when she gained admittance to the manager's private office. She began:

"I want a chance in your show. I'll put some action into it. Your Folies are as tame as a church tableau. I am the daughter of an American millionaire. My name will look good on the billboards. And I can dance, too! Look here!"

Blase Paris Rubs Its Eyes

She whirled about the office in a manner that showed talent and training and that not only displayed grace but a pair of ankles that the wily manager knew could be quickly and profitably commercialized. So he signed her up, immediately, this American broiler in the nationally and internationally famous Folies, and on the billboards her name went announcing to a horrified mother and a startled American colony that Solange had been hired to put jazz into the most dazzling show in Paris.

And she did it. The American girl caused blase Paris to rub its eyes and take new interest in life.

Mrs. Hutchins was among those present. She was furious in her disapproval of her daughter's doings. A resourceful woman, she counted her time to even things up with her headstrong daughter. For she considered it a terrible slap in the face that she should be so defied. It was shocking humiliation for her. She was internationally known and respected as the former Belle Livingstone, daughter of John Ramsay Livingstone, and the only woman the late Lord Kitchener trusted to send to the gold mines of Egypt as the representative of Berwick & Moring, London engineers. Besides, there were many connections she had made through her three marriages. Her first was to Edward Mohler, a New York railroad director. Her second husband, whom she divorced, was the Comte de Lastazzi, an Italian nobleman. Her present husband is Walter Hutchins, millionaire tire magnate.

Solange first startled Paris in June, a year ago. It was not until December that Mrs. Hutchins had her chance.

Solange and Mr. Nelson had been wining and dining together and remarks that the daughter made about her mother, coming back to her mother's ears, made the breach even wider.

An Unwelcome Interruption

So, one night just after Christmas, when a cafe which the girl and her fiance frequented was crowded with young folk celebrating the season with copious draughts and giddy dancing, Solange's mother walked in. She was accompanied by a gendarme.

"There he is, arrest him! He betrayed my little girl!" shrieked Mrs. Hutchins, pointing to Mr. Nelson, who was staring at her from his table with Solange.

The drinkers stopped drinking, the dancers stopped dancing, the musicians stopped the music. The silence demanded that someone do something dramatic. This was Paris. Moreover, this was Mont Martre. Something dramatic must be done.

"This is the love of a mother for a daughter," she said, pointing to her mother. "All this is my mother's fault. She is simply jealous because Nelson preferred me to her. She wanted to make a kitten out of herself but Mr. Nelson here, whom she is having arrested on a false charge, saw through her game. She is even angrier because, after she drove me from home, Mr. Nelson refused to continue his friendship for her.

"I have been forced to take engagements as a dancer to help support myself. I made good, as all who are here who have seen the Babylon scene in the Folies can testify. Now she is come to harass me and humiliate me."

Seeing there was no time to lose, the temper of the merrymakers suddenly turning to anger, the gendarme suddenly rushed the captive outside, and whirled him to the nearest police station. He was locked up but in the morning was freed when it was discovered that Solange was old enough under the French law to do as she pleased.

But her mother was not yet done. She had her daughter's sweetheart arrested the second time, this time charging him with abduction. On that he was held for trial. But the trial never came off. For when daughter met mother in the courtroom daughter said:

"If you press that complaint against Harry I'll take the stand and reveal all I know of the hidden scandal and debauchery of Parisian social life which I learned in your home!"

That opened the prison doors for Mr. Nelson. It more firmly fixed the resolve of Solange to marry him. More than that, it supplied the society tabbies with their choicest tidbit and the newspapers just screamed the second sensation of Solange, the American dancer, who had not only shocked Paris, but talked about her own mother and her friends before the world.

So that, at the present writing, Solange and Mr. Nelson are undisturbed in their visits about the Mont Martre. They drink and laugh and sing in contentment. And every time she dances a theatreful of sightseers goes to see in the flesh the little daughter of an American millionaire mother who thought more of romantic love than she does of her mother's millons.

In her off-stage moments Solange sermonizes on the pitfalls dug for young girls by American business men visiting Paris. She recently said:

"I thought I knew what a brute the average society man in Paris was when I met him in my mother's house near the Arc de Triomphe, but I know him even better now.

"On my very first day behind the scenes, when all was new and strange to me, one of the French chorus girls came to me, her eyes swollen from crying.

What Happened to One Girl

"'You are an American, aren't you?' she demanded, and when I said yes: 'Well I wanted to ask you——do you know an American in Paris named F———?'

"I told her I did. The man was one of the leaders of American society in Paris. He has a fine apartment near the Bois de Boulogne, is married to a dear woman and has three children —two girls and a boy. His is one of the most respected names in Paris and New York, where he has a house.

"'Why doesn't he see me any more?' said the girl, and then she broke down in sobs. Between them I got her story.

"F———, the pillar of society, had met her when she was a manikin in a big dressmaker's. He had gone there with his wife. Afterward he had lingered and paid one of the midinettes to send her a note, asking her to dinner at a famous restaurant.

"'I was a fool to go,' sobbed the girl, 'but all the other girls accepted such invitations and thought nothing of it. So I accepted.'

"What followed was the old story—but incredible to my ears, because I knew the man involved. She had gone to him, had suffered the usual complications, had been discharged from her job because her form, suddenly become womanly, was not suited any longer to a manikin's employment, and for a while had lived in a small apartment for which the American had paid.

"One day the concierge told her the rent had not been paid. She telephoned the man—she needed money also for her child. F——— told her brutally that she was no longer pretty and he didn't like naggers. 'I am through with you —find someone else!' he told her.

"Unable to find employment, she drifted finally to the stage and had been given work as a 'figurante' at the Folies. Her monthly wage there was 200 francs—about $18. Some chorus girls get more than that, but not much more. On that insignificant sum she was supporting herself and her 9-months-old baby.

"Before I had been at the Folies very long I understood that none of the chorus girls lived on their wages. Often they wore hats and clothes that had cost more than they earned in three months. If they demanded more money, on the plea that they couldn't live on what they got, one of the under managers would laugh and tell them to ask the other girls 'how they got along.'

"I soon had plenty of opportunities to 'get along' in the same way only luckily I had lived so long in an atmosphere of wealth that money had lost its power to tempt me."

MAJOR-GENERAL JOHN L. CLEM

By ARTHUR BUDD

Not very young American boys fought in the recent World War. Some youngsters doubtless obtained enlistment by misrepresenting their age, but there were no babies in the drummer-boy infants. The recruiting system was too strict.

In the Civil War it was different. A good many very young boys served as drummers with the regiments, and youngest of them all was "Little Johnny" Clem, the famous Drummer Boy of Chickamauga.

Little Johnny is today a major general, a rank recently bestowed upon him by Congress. Before his retirement for age, he was the only man in the United States Army who had seen service in the Civil War. He is now the youngest surviving veteran of that memorable conflict.

"In May, 1861, I was a schoolboy in Newark, Ohio," said General Clem the other day. "I was ten years old and looked rather less, being small for my age. My mother was dead, and, knowing that I could not gain my father's permission to go to the war, I made up my mind to run away.

"Patriotism? Say, rather, the spirit of adventure, which in every normally constituted boy is a vigorous impulse. The soldiers were marching through Newark; how I wished that I could join them!

"The soldiers were volunteers of the Third Ohio Regiment, under the command of Captain McDougal. I went, to him and asked to be enlisted. He looked me over, laughed, and replied that he was not enlisting infants.

Bound To Be A Soldier

"That might have settled the matter with some boys; but not with me. When the regiment was put aboard a train, I sneaked into one of the cars with them, and so managed to 'beat' my passage to Cincinnati, where I tried to enlist in the Thirty-third Michigan. Again I was turned down; but I went along with the Thirty-third Michigan just as if I had been accepted, and, because nobody knew what to do with me or how to get rid of me, I stayed.

"The officers found me amusing; they said they liked my 'spunk.' They, and the men as well, soon came to regard me as a sort of mascot. I was the baby of the regiment. Though not on the muster roll, I regularly drew $13 a month, the pay of a private soldier, which came out of the pockets of the officers, who 'chipped in' for the purpose.

"The regimental tailor cut down a soldier's uniform to fit me. I shared a tent with two soldiers, and drew the regular army ration of pork (which we called 'sowbelly'), beans, hardtack and coffee. There were many hardships, especially on the march and sometimes I was hungry; but a sturdy small boy does not mind things of that sort, and I found the life enjoyable. In camp there was plenty of fun, with ball games and other amusements.

"Twelve months after my informal joining of the Federal forces I became a properly qualified fighting man, being regularly enlisted as a drummer. That was at Covington, Ky. Although put on the muster roll as a drummer-boy, I was provided not long afterwards with a musket, the barrel of which was sawed off to make the weapon match my stature.

When The Gun Proved Useful

"To carry a musket made me feel much more like a real soldier. More than once I was asked why I preferred it to a drum, and, thinking the question very silly, I replied that there was no fun in being shot at if one could not shoot back at the enemy. It was not long before I had an opportunity to use that gun, and to some purpose.

"It was at Chickamauga. I went into the battle seated proudly alongside of an artilleryman, on a caisson. If history depended on me for an account of that fight, not much would be known, for my own recollection of it is exceedingly confused. I remember very well, however, that toward evening my brigade had got the worst of it and was retiring toward Chattanooga. The retreat was rapid, and, my legs being short, I lagged behind.

"I heard a shout from behind me, and a Confederate colonel, reining in his horse, yelled, 'Surrender, you d—d little Yankee!' Scarce realizing what I was doing, I raised my sawed-off musket and, without taking aim, pulled the trigger. The colonel fell off his horse, badly wounded.

"I was glad to learn, some time afterward, that his wound did not prove fatal. As for me, only luck fetched me through that episode. Three musket balls went through my cap—though I did not know it until the next day—and it occurred to me that the best thing I could do was to drop dead. I dropped, and stayed dead until after dark, when I managed to find my way to Chattanooga.

Captured By The Enemy

"A few days later I was captured by troops under the command of Gen. Joe Wheeler, and for weeks I was kept on the march most of the time. It was a trying part of my war experience. The Confederate soldiers were by no means inclined to make a pet of me; rather the opposite, indeed. They stole my jacket, my shoes, and even the cap with three bullet-holes in it, which last I would have been glad to preserve as a souvenir.

"I am afraid that General Wheeler regarded me in the light of a joke. He took delight in exhibiting me to women, saying, 'See to what straits the Yankees are driven, when they have to send their babies to fight us!'

"I was a prisoner for only two months, at the end of which I was exchanged. The regiment was glad to see me back, and General Thomas promoted me to the rank of sergeant. Though I served through the war, it was the only promotion I got.

"But in the meantime a story about my shooting of the Confederate colonel had found its way into the newspapers, which called me the 'Drummer Boy of Chickamauga.' Patriotic ladies in Chicago became interested, obtained my measurements from officers of the regiment, and with their own hands made for me a handsome uniform. You may judge whether I swelled with joy and pride.

"In 1863 General Grant dropped in at the field headquarters of General Thomas, who had made me his orderly. 'Where did you pick up little John?' he asked.

"'At Chickamauga,' replied General Thomas. 'I have made him a sergeant.'

"With boyish impudence, I looked up at him and said, 'Is that all you are going to do for me, General?'

"I ought to have been spanked; but they both laughed.

Wounds And A Smashed Drum

"I was in a good many battles—among them, Stone River, Resaca, Kenesaw, Peach Tree Creek, Atlanta and Nashville—but was wounded only twice, and both times slightly. On one of these occasions a piece of shell struck me in the hip. The other time was at Atlanta, carrying dispatches from General Thomas to General Logan, when a ball nipped my ear. Once my pony was killed under me. And at Shiloh my drum was smashed by a shell fragment. They called me 'Johnny Shiloh' for a while after that.

"General Thomas was a very kindly man, and I became a sort of protege of his. He ordered his aide and nephew, Colonel Sandford C. Kellogg, to give me lessons in spelling and arithmetic; but I fear I was an unwilling pupil.

Back To Home And School

"In January, 1865, General Thomas, sure that the backbone of the Confederacy had been broken, felt confident that the war could be won without my further help. 'You must go home,' he said, 'and finish your education.' So I bade goodbye to my comrades of the Army of the Cumberland, and went back, a full-fledged hero, to Newark, Ohio.

"It was a sad come-down; for presently I found myself a schoolboy again. But I had formed an ambition to be an officer in the regular army, and this dream I had not relinquished when, at twenty years of age, I was graduated from the local high school.

"I sought admission as a cadet at West Point; but my education was not up to the mark, and I failed. The examinations were too much for me. Then it was that I decided to go on to Washington and see my old comrade-in-arms, General Grant, who at that time was in the White House.

"I expected no difficulty, and great was my disappointment when I found that I could not gain admission to the General. 'The President is too busy to see you,' I was repeatedly told. I had hung about the White House anterooms for two or three days when who should come along but an old and friendly acquaintance, General Dent, the President's brother-in-law.

"'Hello, Johnny Clem!' said he. 'Waiting to see the President?'

"When I told him what had happened, he said, 'Won't let an old soldier see General Grant? Well, I guess they will!' And he marched me in past the secretaries to the President's room.

An Officer At Last

"'I told General Grant that I had failed to get into the Point, and that I meant to try for a civilian appointment in the army.

"'We can do better than that,' he said. 'I will appoint you now a second lieutenant, and will send you down to Fortress Monroe to catch up with your studies.'

"My commission as second lieutenant was dated December 19, 1871. At last my ambition to be an officer in the regular army was realized. But trouble was brewing in Texas, and almost immediately I was packed off to join my regiment, the Twenty-fourth Infantry, there. Afterwards I went to the artillery school at Fortress Monroe, and was graduated therefrom in 1875.

"In 1882 I was transferred to the quartermaster's department of the army, and my last years of active duty in the service were as superintendent of the national cemeteries.

"Yes, I call myself John L. Clem. The 'L' stands for Lincoln. I was not born with that middle name, but adopted it because of my admiration for the great emancipator."

BARBARA CASTLETON was born in Little Rock, Arkansas, and attended a school at New Rochelle, N. Y., where she was a chum of Anita Stewart. It was while she was living in Canada that Miss Stewart wrote for her to come to New York and suggested she go into pictures. Her parents raised objections, but she had stage fever, and became understudy to Peggy Wood in Cohan and Harris' "It Pays To Advertise." Herbert Brenon saw her and engaged her to play a part in support of Nazimova in "War Brides." From that time on her success was rapid.

"Seeing's Believing"

Diana and Jack are the two harum scarum millionaire Webster orphans. Diana is discovered by Bruce Terring, overseas pal of Jack in a delicate situation. He believes the worst. In fact he fully believes the old adage, "Seeing's Believing." So just to show him that he is wrong she intrigues with her aunt to lead him astray to a country hotel where he is to be victimized by the "badgerites." But the latter see bigger game in the wealthy girl and get her into worse trouble than ever. The hero arrives at this point, breaks in the door where the frame-up is occurring and rescues her in romantic fashion. Viola Dana plays the leading role with her customary vivacity.

"The Beauty Shop"

The story is that of Dr. Arbutus Budd, a New York beauty specialist, who poses as a missing baron of the Principality of Bolognia. Dr. Budd expects to find a fortune in Bolognia, but instead gets more than his share of trouble, his only legacy being a duel with a notorious bad man. After a comical array of adventures and complications matters straighten out for Dr. Budd and all ends happily.

"My Wild Irish Rose"

"My Wild Irish Rose," is adapted from the famous Irish play, "The Shaugraun." Pat O'Malley plays the lovable neer-do-weel while Pauline Starke is seen as Moya, his sweetheart. When Robert Ffolliot is torn from his sweetheart's arms by the British troops as a Fenian, he is quickly sentenced for life to Australia and all seems lost. Then it is that Conn, the shaugraun, ships aboard the prison ship and frees his beloved friend. On their return, Harvey Duff, an informer sees Robert and hastens off with the news to Corry Kinchella who through hatred of Robert whose fiancee he covets, had framed Robert in the beginning to get rid of him. Immediately there develops a sequence of dramatic events in which Conn and Moya fight against the great power of the authorities to save Robert. And at the same time

"The Man From Beyond"

The action revolves around the character of Howard Hilliary, portrayed by Houdini. Hilliary is found encased in a tomb of ice on board a derelict vessel in the Arctics, by a party of explorers. Chopping him out of the icy tomb in which he has been confined for 100 years, these explorers are amazed to see him return to life.

He returns to civilization and then follows a series of melodramatic incidents, which culminate in a real thrill, the rescue of the heroine by Houdini at the brink of Niagara Falls.

"Cold Feet"

Henry B. Walthall

Mr. Walthall was on the stage many years before appearing in "movies." Among his best known releases are: "Classmates," "Strongheart," "Beulah," "Ghosts," "Pillars of Society," "Home, Sweet Home," "The Gangster," "The Raven" and "The Confession."

Mme. Bronislava Lamprect von Petschenko of Berlin came to this country a few days ago. She was happy on the way over. For was she not coming to organize a movement to aid Russian intellectuals who have taken refuge in Berlin during the Red reign in Russia. MISS RAPP'S LOVER TO WED

Miss Jocelyn Leigh with Henry Lehrman.

When Virginia Rapp, in connection with whose death Roscoe Arbuckle was acquitted after three trials, was buried in Los Angeles, Henry Lehrman sent a blanket of 1,000 tiger lilies to be draped over her coffin. He remained in the east to mourn lest his feelings get the better of him should he say anyone connected with her death, he said. But his heart has been mended. His engagement to Jocelyn Leigh, featured beauty of the Midnight Frolics, has been announced. Lehrman is known as a producer of comedies.

GO ON, GIRLS, BOB IT

There's no longer need to shed a bitter tear as the barber transforms your chestnut braids into a Dutch bob. Wigs have come back. Not merely little transformations to help out one's scanty locks, but actual wigs in all sizes, shapes and colors are being worn.

It is not only the woman who has lost her hair who seeks refuge in these new wigs, but the many women who went in for "bobs" and then decided they preferred a luxurious coiffure are also having wigs made up to suit their particular type. And they are having them made up in the plural, too, for one wig is never enough for the modern woman.

She must have at least three, one for morning, afternoon and evening wear.

"Is my wig on straight?" will be the next phrase added to the growing list of flapper phraseology.

NEW POOL AT ELECTRA

No, this is not a picture of the Northwest Extension during the heighth of its development—it is just a scene in the new South Pool at Electra, showing the intensity of the development program now under way there. The respect for offset distances is one distinguishing feature from the development in the two big Burkburnett pools at a similar stage in their development—testifying to the effectiveness of at least one state regulation which has grown up since that time.

Gladys Walton, screen star, famed for her "divine eyes," is the latest recruit from moviedom to the fast swelling ranks of the divorcees. She is suing Frank R. Liddle, Jr., for divorce. She charges cruelty, non-support and neglect. WHO SAYS SENNETT BEACHED BATHING GIRLS?

Somebody started the rumor that the famous Sennett bathing beauties were to be eliminated from all future comedies and it was further stated that Sennett himself was going to give up the beauty chorus which has made him famous. Well, now this doesn't look like it, does it? There young ladies are three new beauties he has just added to his payroll.

PRISON CELL HOLDS MILLIONAIRE YOUTH

Walter S. Ward, millionaire self-confessed killer, has been forced to give up his luxuries of his palatial home near New York for hardships of a jail cell while authorities investigate his story of the killing of Clarence Peters, ex-marine. Ward says he shot in self-defense after Peters and two others had attempted to extort $75,000 from him. His wife is prostrated at their home. Ward was at liberty on $10,000 bail for a short time following his confession, but alleged discrepancies in his story caused his re-arrest. He was later freed on $50,000 bail.

SHE'S FREE

Mrs. Evelyn Farriss Bennett.

An ultra-modern marital agreement was disclosed in the suit of William S. Gill against his ex-wife, Evelyn Farriss, former movie actress. Both agreed that each should be allowed a divorce if one was desired. While Gill was in Europe his wife obtained a divorce and married Raymond B. Bennett of Chattanooga, Tenn. Gill is seeking to recover $75,000 in stocks and other securities which he alleges he intrusted to his wife before leaving.

KIDNAPED

Mrs. Irvin L. Stair.

This caveman stuff as applied to wooing may go all right the first time out, but it doesn't work so well as the preliminary to a second honeymoon.

As a result the learned judges of the Minnesota supreme court are now strugging with the question: Can a man be sent to jail for kidnapping his own wife?

The complaining wife, Mrs. Irvin L. Stair, has demanded that her wealthy husband, president of the Great Northern Grain company, be prosecuted for kidnapping.

THE CASE OF BLIZZARD

WILLIAM Blizzard is the boy chieftan of the striking coal miners of West Virginia. There are one hundred thousand coal miners on strike. They have been on strike for months. They say they are striking for living wages. They say the are striking for the right to live. They say they are striking against the hired gunmen of the operatives of the mines, and terrorists who are ever doing their utmost to destroy the miners unions. Young Blizzard. They idolized him. They obeyed his commands to the letter. They followed his instructions.

A grand jury in Logan county indicted Blizzard for treason to the state. This grand jury indicted hundreds of his followers. Blizzard was charged with conspiracy to overthrow the government in West Virginia and to set up a government of his own. Labor leaders have been accused of many crimes. Blizzard is the first accused of treason to his state. His trial lasted for weeks.

His story was carried to forty million firesides. Able lawyers were employed as special prosecutors, and the attorney general of West Virginia sent his first assistant to Logan county to prosecute Blizzard to the limit. If the jury convicted Blizzard those who were anxious to get him felt that the strike would be broken, that the leaders of the miners unions would beg for mercy and that the lesser lights would return to their old jobs for the wage tendered. But Blizzard was acquitted. He was found not guilty of the charge of treason to the state. A jury of his peers picked from men hostile to the striking miners heard the law and the evidence and returned a verdict that vindicated Blizzard and gave him his liberty.

There has been a condition of war or a condition bordering on war in West Virginia for months. There the big operatives employe their own standing armies of professional gunmen. There they have their sheriffs appoint gunmen as deputy sheriffs and the salaries of the deputies are paid by the mine owners. No doubt there are striking miners who are not saints; their followers are not angels but there is something wrong in the methods which prevail in West Virginia and something wrong with the lawmakers of a commonwealth who permit mine owners to employ gun fighters as their special guardsmen and two gunmen posing as deputy sheriffs to do their bidding. Texas has her rangers. They are paid by all the people. They are appointed by the adjutant general but the governor is their commander-in-chief. Texas rangers do not take orders from corporations or individuals. They take orders from their captains and their captains get their orders from the adjutant general or the governor of the commonwealth. Law should be uppermost everywhere but justice should be done. There should not be a special privilege class in America. Private citizens should not be made the victims of hired gunmen who serve or who are paid to serve special interests. There are newspaper correspondents who say that law is trampled in the dust in many counties of West Virginia, and that the verdict goes to the most potential purse and the cunning and the strong. Well a Logan county jury acquitted William Blizzard of the crime of treason, of treason against his state and gave him to his wife and to his children.

The law did not go to the longest purse or the cunning and the strong in this instance. West Virginia lawmakers should create an organization of state rangers. They should be picked by the governor and the adjutant general. They should be directed by the governor and the adjutant general. They should be paid their salaries by the people of West Virginia. They should not be paid nor directed or controlled by mining kings. Coal or iron barons, labor leaders or the political forces of the commonwealth. Then justice might be done.

LOST

ILLUSTRATED BY HUBERT MATHIEU

"Black is the sky, but the land is white—
(O the wind, the snow and the storm!)—
Father, where is our boy to-night?
Pray to God he is safe and warm."

"Mother," mother, why should you fear?
Safe is he, and the Arctic moon
Over his cabin shines so clear—
Rest and sleep, 'twill be morning soon."

"It's getting dark awful sudden. Say, this is mighty queer!
Where in the world have I got to? It's still and black as a tomb.
I reckoned the camp was yonder. I figured the trail was he e—
Nothing! Just draw and valley packed with quiet and gloom;
Snow that comes down like feathers, thick and gobby and gray;
Night that looks spiteful ugly—seems that I've lost my way.

And buffet and blind and beat me. Lord! it's a hell of a night.

"I'm all tangled up in a blizzard. There's only one thing to do—
Keep on moving and moving, it's death, it's death if I rest.
Oh, God! if I see the morning, if only I struggle through.
I'll say the prayers I've forgotten since I lay on my mother's breast.
I seem going round in a circle, maybe the camp is near.
Say! did somebody holler? Was it a light I saw?

Or was it only a notion? I'll shout, and maybe they'll hear—

What will they find, I wonder, when they come to the end of my track—
A pie-faced corpse in a snowbank—curse you, don't be a fool!
Play the game to the finish; bet on your very last card;

"I'm going to lick this blizzard; I'm going to live the night.
It can't down me with its bluster—I'm not the kind to be beat.
On hands and knees will I buck it; with every breath will I fight;
It's life, it's life that I fight for—never it seemed so sweet.
I know that my face is frozen; my hands are numblike and dead;
But oh, my feet keep a-moving, heavy and hard and slow;
They're trying to kill me, kill me, the night that's black overhead,
Curse this snow that's a-piling a-purpose to block my way.
It's soft as a bed of feathers, it's warm as a stack of hay.
Curse on my feet that slip so, my poor tired, stumbling feet—
I guess they're a job for the surgeon, they feel so queerlike to lift—

"Father, a bitter cry I heard,
Out of the night so dark and wild.
Why is my heart so strangely stirred?
'Twas like the voice of our erring child."

"Mother, mother, you only heard
A waterfowl in the locked lagoon—
Out of the night a wounded bird—
Rest and sleep, 'twill be morning soon."

Who is it talks of sleeping? I'll swear that somebody shook
Me hard by the arm for a moment, but how on earth could it be?
See how my feet are moving—awfully funny they look—
Moving as if they belonged to a someone that wasn't me.
The wind down the night's long alley bowls me down like a pin;
I stagger and fall and stagger, crawl, arm-deep in the snow.
Beaten back to my corner, how can I hope to win?

Oh, I'm so warm and sleepy! No more hunger and pain.
Ha! what was that? I'll swear it, somebody shook me again;
Somebody seemed to whisper: "Fight to the last, my boy."
Fight! That's right, I must struggle. I know that to rest means death;
Death, but then what does death mean?—ease from a world of strife.
Life has been none too pleasant; yet with my failing breath
Still and still must I struggle, fight for the gift of life.

Yonder a light is gleaming; oh, I know it so well!
Father is through with the milking; there goes the supper-bell.

Mother, your boy is crying, out in the night and cold;
Let me in and forgive me, I'll never be bad any more:

I'm, oh, so sick and so sorry: please, dear mother, don't scold—
It's just your boy, and he wants you. . . .
Mother, open the door. . . .

"Father, father, I saw a face
Pressed just now to the window-pane!
Oh, it gazed for a moment's space,
Wild and wan, and was gone again!"

"Mother, mother, you saw the snow
Drifted down from the maple tree
(Oh, the wind that is sobbing so!
Weary and worn and old are we)—
Only the snow and a wounded loon—

A SEAT IN THE GALLERY

By HERBERT COREY

WITHIN the senate press room peace reigns. Serenity is the dominant motive. Half a dozen reporters are sitting about, smoking cigars, being very weighty. Two or three other reporters are throwing rocks at reputations. Two or three others are in the work-room and the clatter of their typewriters is dimmed by distance. Jim Preston, for untold years corral boss of the press gallery, is doing seven or eight of the numberless things he is continually doing. One reflects drowsily that without Jim Preston the press gallery might as well put up the shutters. There should be the hum of a bee some where. It would add the final touch of somnolence.

"Borah speaking."

A helpful man has thrust his head through the swinging doors that lead to the banked seats of the press gallery, overhanging the head of the vice-president. From the visitors' gallery one can see that look of muted alarm the vice-president seems always to wear. It is curious. The reporters park their cigar butts and move into the gallery.

No one ever, willingly, misses Borah. Nor does Borah, willingly, ever miss any one. Even if he doesn't hit the man he aims at he is fairly certain to bing somebody with a brick.

A husky, broad-shouldered, heavily built man. Not always a good voice. Sometimes it bellows and sometimes it squeaks. A frightful habit of misfitting metaphors. Oratorically speaking he continually yokes large red bulls and small pink jackasses together. But he makes them work. Senator Lodge's delicate literary system must be affected by Borah's habit of short-circuiting similes about as a woman in ill health is said to be nauseated by robust dill pickles. Nevertheless Lodge listens. So does every one else. It isn't safe to go away when Borah talks. Asking Borah questions is not always regarded as safe, either.

He talks steadily, seriously, with an accent of sincerity. He doesn't perorate. His grammer slips and hesitates and his singulars and plurals get all gummed up and some of his sentences come out at unexpected places. Not a good speaker, one would say upon reading a verbatim report of an address. Yet he is. He marshals his facts well. He never spread eagles. Above all else he is in earnest. Not very well liked by his republican colleagues, for they never know whether he is their republican colleague or not. His pockets are filled with hand grenades.

Suddenly one discovers that the press gallery is full. Borah plods on until he gets through. Then he stops. He has displayed no eloquent tricks, no funny stories, no oratorical devices. He is not graceful, or suave or entertaining. Forceful, certainly, vigorous, earnest somewhat choleric. Addicted to positive statements. He never says "about a dozen." He says "twelve." Or "eleven."

Then he stumps back to his office for more brickbats.

The fact that Russians are eating tree bark may yet suggest something to American manufacturers of breakfast foods.

The typewriter is faster than hand writing, but you can't make a neutral wiggle when you don't know how to spell it.

Let us be thankful for masculine styles that permit us to wear last summer's tattered underwear without sharing the secret with the world.

THE 5:15 —By Segar

DR. CRANE'S EDITORIAL

FOUR HUNDRED AND EIGHTY MILLION BUYERS

IF the head of a business house found out that there were 480 million potential buyers somewhere, he would get busy at once to reach them.

The United States is more of a big business house than it is of a nation, in the old sense in which naton has been so often used. That is, our people are individually and collectively more interested in doing business than we are in promoting national glory. We are patriotic enough, but our patriotism is conceived in terms of general welfare rather than in terms of conquest or swashbuckling.

There has always been competition among western nations for the trade of China, but, all said and done, it has only flibbled a bit at the edge of the cake.

Great Britain and Germany have long fought for Chinese trade.

The Germans especially are making up just now the time they lost during the war; their goods are freely entering the Treaty Ports, and Chinese customers are being diligently cultivated. German houses are being flooded with orders, especially for dyes, machine tools, cheap tractors, textiles, and that sort of machinery which Germany is prepared to furnish.

Great Britain, being a sea-going nation, is also pushing its advantage in a lively way. Dr. Wellington Koo, who was Present at the Washington conference, declares that conditions of international trade were formerly much simpler than they are now. "There was then relatively little competition, while practically every important nation has now entered the industrial market, and those who fully realize the altered conditions are best prepared to adapt themselves to them prosper most."

He also states that in the old days it was sufficient to export in the confident belief that there was a large market ready to welcome foreign goods. The large market in China is still there, and with the spread of western ideas it is becoming larger, but in the face of keen competition it has to be studied, and the tastes of its buyers cultivated and appreciated if their purchasing powers are to yield any adequate advantage to those who have goods to sell.

The Chinese have always had a reputation for commercial honesty. They are good people with whom to do business. China has abundance of raw materials to export, and a market for manufactured goods which bids fair to increase with the rapid awakening of the country. China is more receptive than ever before to the ideas of modern science and education, and to the advantages of trade with the west.

It does not take a long look into the future and it does not require the son of a prophet to foresee that the time is not far distant when Pacific trade will surpass Atlantic trade. For the simple reason that the Orient wants what we have and has what we want, while Europe has what we have and wants what we want.

The greatest civilizer, the greatest educator, and the greatest power of progress is trade.

Those western merchants and adventurers who have in former time done business with China have not always been of the higher order, and if the Yankees want to live up to their reputation for shrewdness, they will put their best salesmen, their strongest capital, and their highest grade of business dealing to work at cultivating these 480 million potential buyers.

TILLOTSON IN RACE

LEONARD Tillotson of Sealy has entered the race for state senator in the old eighteenth district. This should be good news to the friends of the conservation of flood waters and land reclamation. Leonard Tillotson has served several terms in the lower house of the Texas legislature. He is a man of wealth, an able lawyer, has a constructive brain and has been fighting for irrigation and drainage legislature for years and years.

He is one of the lawmakers who drafted the present conservation and reclamation laws of Texas. He worked shoulder to shoulder with Joseph A. Kemp and other friends of irrigation for many years. He gave of his money freely as well as of his time. He is constructive and should he go to the state senate he is certain to be a powerful aid to Governor Neff in putting over his constructive program next winter and this program calls not only for the reclamation of arid or semi-arid lands but the reclamation of swamp lands and the prevention of floods in the valley lands.

This year the people of Texas had another object lesson. They saw thousands of farmers driven from their homes, their lands inundated, their property destroyed, their growing crops swept away, in many instances lives were lost and destitution came to thousands.

All this could be prevented by the proper control of flood waters. All this could be prevented by the conservation and reclamation proposed by the Kemps, the Burgeses, the Tillotsons and their followers in Texas. There is a reason why the most progressive as well as the most constructive brains of the state should be elected to the legislature this year.

"Angels Weep when Barefooted Women Dance in Church"

So Says the "Texas Tornado," Preaching Old-Fashioned Hell-Fire and Brimstone, When He Visits New York and Finds Chiffon-Clad Girls Dancing in a Pulpit as Part of a Ritual Which Had Tabooed Dancing Ever Since Mediaeval Times.

Rev. Dr. J. Frank Norris, the "Texas Tornado," in the Pulpit of the Calvary Baptist Church, New York City, Lifting the Well-Known "Full Stop" Arm to Those Who Went to Dr. John Roach Straton's Church to Hear About "Evil New York."

The Bare-Legged Ritual Dancing Girls of St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, Whose Terpsichorean Interpretation of Religion Has Brought Loud Praise and Sharp Criticism—Left to Right the Girls Are: Margaret Ferzandie, Anne Schmidt, Phoebe Anne Guthrie.

PROPONENTS of the old-time religion with all its implications of a brimstone hell and a lustrous pearl-buttressed heaven are standing aghast at what is to them a new-fashioned dress on the form of Mother Church. To the conservative churchmen of the Christian church there is but one faith and that doesn't change. When striking innovations are introduced into a church ritual, they feel that an act that approaches blasphemy has been committed.

Recently at St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, the second oldest church in New York, a group of dancing girls was introduced by the rector to illustrate the ceremony of the Annunciation. This was not the first time that ritual dancers had appeared in churches, even in modern times. But it so happened that this ceremony was performed when one of the most militant spokesmen of the old-time religion in America was holding an old-time revival in New York.

The result was a sensational clash between two opposed methods of religious interpretation. The dancers appeared under the supervision of Dr. William Norman Guthrie, St. Mark's pastor. In putting them into the church service he simply carried out a fundamental belief of his that everything beautiful in life was necessarily allied with God and necessarily served to bring His word more forcibly into the hearts of suffering men.

Not so with Dr. J. Frank Norris, the "Texas Tornado," who had been expressing the faith that was in him in scorching metaphor and old-fashioned eloquence, at Calvary Baptist Church. It shocked him profoundly to hear that women in scanty chiffon raiment had been "carrying on" in the House of God at the very same time that he was exhorting sinners to hit the trail.

During the course of his long prayer, on the day following the St. Mark's celebration, the Rev. Norris said:

"When a church gives dances in a church yard then this city needs the greatest revival it has ever had." He called on the Almighty to turn people away from such terpsichorean seductions. Later on in his sermon he said:

"I notice that the description of the dance service held in the historic church of St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie says it was easy to see that the dancers were barefooted and that one of them had bobbed hair.

"One of the signs of the breaking down of womanhood at this hour is the exposure of her sacred person. It is bad enough for the stage to cheapen women's persons, but it is enough to make angels weep and hang crepe on the door of Heaven and to make the devils dance for joy for a church to take barefooted, bobbed-haired women in order to exploit itself and keep itself going. What are we coming to when our churches openly turn the sanctuary of worship into a place for the most licentious practice known to the mind of man?

"It takes no prophet to see where we are drifting when leading women smoke cigarettes, attend prize fights one day and give dances in the churches the next day."

Dr. Guthrie made no direct answer to this broadside. He simply stated that he had been prepared for criticism and was not in the least disturbed by what he had received. As for the ritual dancing, he said the time had come when dancing should be restored to its rightful status. Dancing had originated as a part of religious worship and it was entirely seemly that it should be used for such now.

"The banishment of the dance from the church has brought about its decadence," he said. "Yet there is nothing more beautiful and nothing that expresses the calmness of religious contentment better than the dance. The church is its rightful home."

The Annunciation dancers, he pointed out, were not professionals, but daughters of his own church members, and they had carried out the service in a reverential spirit. Dr. Guthrie himself trained them and controlled their performance in the church.

Even though the members of the congregation of St. Mark's were accustomed to Dr. Guthrie's liberal views on religious worship, they perceptibly sat up in their seats when the dancers trooped into the sanctuary.

The dancing took place at an evening service. Shortly after Dr. Guthrie began his service the lights in the church began to grow dim and a perceptible odor of incense was wafted over the congregation from lighted censers that swung above the altar.

When Dr. Guthrie spoke of the Annunciation, a pale ribbon of light pierced the darkness of the church and gradually grew broader until it embraced the whole of the sanctuary. The congregation leaned forward. Several dancing girls suddenly materialized from the gloom. Presently others joined them.

They were barefooted and wore slight, clinging raiment. They moved forward, formed a group, and then swung into the slow, graceful tempo of the dance. As Dr. Guthrie afterward explained, they gave a choreographic interpretation of the Annunciation. They put in terms of eurhythmics the same thoughts that he had been expressing in words.

"Theatrically Effective"

Certain members of the congregation who had technical knowledge of stage dancing declared that from a theatrical standpoint it was one of the most effective "numbers" they had ever seen.

After a while the dancers swung into their final figure and disappeared behind the sanctuary. The spotlight swung across the altar and played once more on Dr. Guthrie. He resumed his sermon. And the theme was unbroken by the interlude. The sermon and the dance explained each other and modulated into each other. The verbal climaxes had been emphasized eurhythmically in such a way that the whole congregation was thoroughly immersed in the spirit of the occasion.

Not so long before that Dr. Guthrie had challenged tradition by installing colored lights, which could be used singly, in combination and in various degrees of intensity at will. As explained at the time, he was using lights in their proper sense. He was using them subjectively.

He was inducing a mood in the people whose minds and hearts he was trying to reach.

The color effects were so adjusted as to accord with the particular occasion and the particular theme being set forth in the sermon. By causing them to be suspended to a point about half way between roof and ceiling, an effect of unlimited space above and to the side could be obtained at will.

The Pro and Con of It

The congregation, on the whole, subscribed to the idea of the colored lights. But the dancing innovation brought a good many adverse criticisms.

"The dancing girl is out of place in the church," one of them declared. "It is a secular institution and is associated with subjects that are anything but sacred or God-like."

"A sermon should be a sermon with a threat of brimstone ever to the front," said another.

"Dancing originally was a symbol of the church and should be restored to its one-time grace," some of them said. While others—"You are to be congratulated for illustrating your sermons in such an effectively beautiful way."

Outside his own church the majority of his critics oppose Dr. Guthrie without, however, going to the same lengths as the Rev. J. Frank Norris. They want to keep their church services more sedate, but they don't necessarily require the threat of brimstone.

With the Rev. J. Frank Norris, and the old-time religion elements which he represents so eloquently, brimstone is necessary for a hell and a hell is a prerequisite of religion.

This section of the Christian church sticks by a literal interpretation of Revelation and counts anything to the contrary as heresy. With them hell is visualized pretty much as it is in Dante's "Inferno."

Dr. Norris is very emphatic in his belief in hell.

"If there's no hell," he said, "there's no heaven. If there is nothing to save men from there is nothing to save men to. You can't read the Bible and fail to believe that there is a hell."

New and Interesting Facts from Science and Life

Would Man Be Healthier Going on ALL FOURS?

The Upright Position of the Body Is Said to Produce a Sagging Stomach.

Normal Position of the Stomach When Man Walked on All Fours.

WHEN primitive man, who, according to anthropologists, went about on all fours, he enjoyed a perfect digestion. But later when he became ambitious and assumed an upright position, his troubles began—just how Dr. Harry Campbell sets forth in the London Lancet in explaining the disadvantages of the upright posture of human beings.

"It is interesting to find," says Dr. Campbell, "that charwomen seem actually to enjoy the all-four position adopted in scrubbing the floor, and I am told that young girls in cookery schools delight in the same occupation, they sometimes actually spill water as an excuse for going on all-fours to wipe it up.

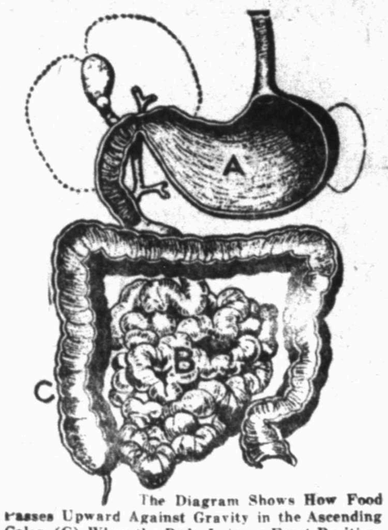

"In considering the influence of the upright position on the circulation, it is necessary to distinguish clearly between standing, walking and running. Standing is less favorable to the circulation than the latter two, inasmuch as rhythmical muscular contractions are an important aid to the circulation, and in this connection it is worthy of note that under natural conditions man spends little of his time in standing still, he either moves about or lies down. Such considerations emphasize the fact, universally admitted, that it is bad for humans whether school children, shop assistants, cooks or what not, to remain standing for any length of time, and they further point to the advantage of reclining after the Oriental fashion over sitting down. Many women derive great benefit from lying down an hour or so during the day."

As further evidence that some persons get indigestion as a result of bad postural habits, Dr. Joel E. Goldthwaite of the Harvard Medical school says that just as there are two distinct types of horse—the race horse and the Percheron—so there are two distinct types of human being—the slender and the stocky. And the diseases to which they are subject depend largely upon which type they belong to.

In a recent address before the New York Academy of Medicine and printed in the Medical Record, Dr. Goldthwaite discussed these different types, which, he said, were built on absolutely different anatomical lines. The slender type of human being had, like the race horse, slim, light bones, fine, small muscles and quick action. This was the type that had been pioneers. Their skeletons weighed ten or fifteen pounds lighter than normal. Their bones were different in shape and they often had six lumbar vertebrae.

To this type belonged the contortionists, acrobats and fancy dancers. No amount of training could turn them into Sandows. They had only about ten feet of intestines, instead of the normal twenty feet. Therefore, they could never be fattened because their intestines are not long enough to absorb all their food. Their livers were smaller and their kidneys subject to displacement because lacking in supporting fat.

The Percheron type was rarely seen nowadays. Instead the stocky, heavy type had taken its place. In these the chest was shorter and thicker, the skeleton weighed ten or fifteen pounds more than normal, and sometimes there were only four lumbar vertebrae. Their intestines might be as much as from twenty-five to thirty feet long. Consequently they grow fat because practically all their food was absorbed.

The Diagram Shows How Food Passes Upward Against Gravity in the Ascending Colon (C) When the Body Is in an Erect Position. (A) The Stomach. (B) The Small Intestine.

The slender type is the most sensitive, most commonly tuberculous, and the stocky type most liable to joint diseases. Slender children easily acquire bad postural habits and incorrect methods of breathing. When standing relaxed they allow their ribs to droop. Their diaphragm often becomes concave downward instead of upward. This results in only thoracic breathing, in impeding the return circulation and in displacement of the digestive organs.

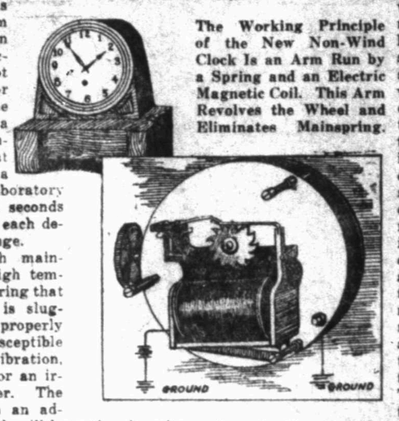

Growing children who have chronic digestive troubles due to this can be cured, Dr. Goldthwaite said, by correcting their posture. One such case he cited was that of a young girl whose chronic indigestion was cured by making her eat her meals lying flat on her stomach, her head and chest supported on her elbows. She also had to sleep flat on her back without pillows.

Dr. Goldthwaite said that fifty years ago only 20 per cent. of the people were of the slender type; today 60 per cent. are of this type. As the slender type was so rapidly increasing he urged the great importance of preparatory schools insisting upon correct posture.

A CLOCK THAT NEVER HAS TO BE WOUND

IF you are one of those who chronically forget to wind the clock in the kitchen or on the mantel in the living-room or on your car, you will welcome a clock that never needs winding.

A clock that will never run down, a clock you never have to wind, has been invented and is as perfect a timekeeper as any piece of mechanism yet devised. One reason why the clock is so accurate is that it does not have a mainspring, for the mainspring is the temperamental part of a watch or a clock. A high-grade watch or clock that draws its power from a mainspring will vary, laboratory tests show, about fifteen seconds in twenty-four hours for each degree of temperature change.

The Working Principle of the New Non-Wind Clock Is an Arm Run by a Spring and an Electric Magnetic Coil. This Arm Revolves the Wheel and Eliminates Mainspring.

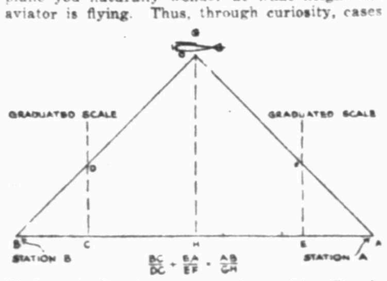

Another trouble with mainsprings is due to the high temper required. A mainspring that is not highly tempered is sluggish, and one that is properly treated is extremely susceptible to crystallization from vibration, with resulting breakage or an irregular supply of power. The mainspring also requires an adjustment so that the watch will keep time in spite of the fact that a stronger force is supplied when the spring is fully wound than when it is nearly unwound.

"Eliminate the mainspring with its required winding and other troubles and you eliminate the principal cause of inaccuracy in time-keeping," reasoned A. E. Keith, the inventor of the automatic telephone and a noted electrical genius. So he invented this clock that eliminates both mainspring and winding, a clock that is driven by electricity and will run a whole year on one small dry battery. At the end of that time the battery is replaced in a few seconds.

The clock, as a writer in the Illustrated World describes it, has a jeweled movement like a watch, except that it has no mainspring. Instead, a long arm attached to a small, untempered spiral spring pulls on a ratchet wheel. This furnishes power identical with that of the mainspring, except that climate cannot affect it and the amount of power supplied is always the same. For fifty-nine seconds this arm pulls the ratchet wheel, thus turning it through the length of one tooth. When the arm reaches the bottom of that tooth an electric connection is made and a magnetic coil pulls the arm back again, permitting it to grip another tooth and repeat the action. The spring that operates the arm pulling the sprocket wheel is so constructed that the pull on the arm is always the same. One of these clocks stood on the desk of the superintendent of accuracy tests in the watch factory for two weeks and three days and kept absolutely accurate time. In a laboratory, one of these clocks kept perfect time through oven and refrigerator tests of one hundred and twenty hours.

FINDING HEIGHT of AIRPLANES

WHENEVER you hear a loud humming sound overhead you invariably look upward to see the airplane you know is somewhere above you. And after spotting the plane you naturally wonder at what height the aviator is flying. Thus, through curiosity, cases of dispute, or just for general knowledge, it often happens that it is desired to know fairly accurately the height at which an airplane is flying. Although there are in use, at present, several complicated accurate methods, none of these are readily acceptable to the ordinary person or easily figured.

There is, described in The Illustrated World, a simple method for accomplishing this result. Although no delicate apparatus is used, the method is said to be accurate to within a few feet. The method is shown in the accompanying diagram.

When the airplane is seen approaching, two observers station themselves on either side of where the plane will come, and almost at right angles to the plane so that it will pass between them. Each carries a graduated scale which has graduations in feet. The observers each hold a scale directly in front of them, facing each other. When the machine cuts the plane between them each observer reads on the scale the length in feet the plane appears to be.

Knowing the distance between the two observers, the distance they held the scale away from them, and their readings, it is easy to find the height of the plane. For example, in the figure, A and B are observers; the distance between them, BA; the distance they held the scales BC and EA, and the readings EF and CD. Then to find GH, or the height of the plane, use the equation given.

SMALLEST ANIMAL in the WORLD

THE smallest speck which can be detected by the average unaided eye, is a bit of opaque, white substance, about 50 microns (.002 in.) in diameter, seen against a black background. The smallest creature in the world, however, is only 1-25th of this size. A graphic idea of the extreme smallness of this microscopic bit of life to which scientists have given the long name of pleuromonas jaculans, can be had by comparing it with the ordinary human hair, as shown in Fig. 2 of the accompanying drawing. A human hair ordinarily averages 50 microns in diameter. The body of this diminutive creature, however, in diameter, along the longest axis, rarely reaches a length of eight or nine microns (about 1-3000 of an inch), and individual creatures have been found as small as two microns (1-12,000 of an inch).

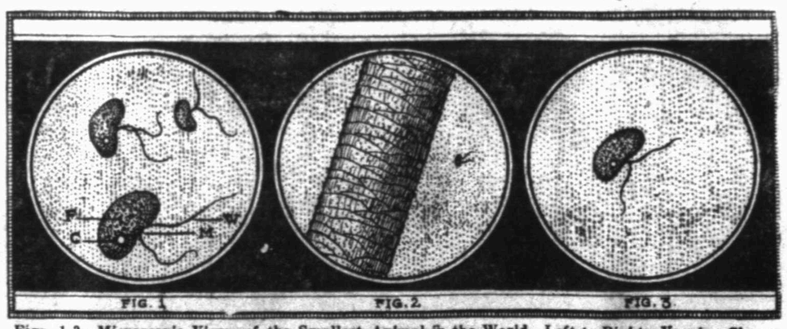

In Fig. 1 are shown three typical individuals. The body, as described in Popular Mechanics by Leon Augustus Hausman, Ph. D., is somewhat the shape of a kidney bean, with two long whip-like threads extending from a depression in one side. With these whips, known as flagellums, the creature makes its rather jerky way through the water in search of food, for it lives in pools and ponds amid decaying vegetation, where an ample supply of bacteria and juices from the disintegrating plant tissue is always present. These serve as its food, which is absorbed into the soft jellylike area at the base of the flagellums. The life of a single individual is usually but a few hours. At the end of that time the creature simply divides into two new individuals, both of which swim away, feed, and increase in size, and then themselves divide, and so on.

The capture of pleuromonas, while not involving any of the risk to life and limb which attends the capture of the largest living animal forms, the whales, still involves as great time and patience and perseverance on the part of the "hunter." Dr. Hausman has devised a special apparatus for the capture of the protozoa (the first great division of animals to which pleuromonas belongs), under the microscope.

"By skilful manipulation of the tip of the pipette under the objective of the microscope," says Dr. Hausman, "it is possible to secure single individuals of pleuromonas, and to transfer these either to glass microscope slides or to sterilized culture jars, to breed a new race. And many failures, either to capture or to transfer these tiny animals from one place to another, is the lot of the hunter after the smallest animal in existence.

"Pleuromonas claims our interest, not only because it is the most minute form of animal life known to exist on our earth today, but because it is of actual economic value to us as well. Often bodies of water filled with putrefying plant remains will be colored a milky hue by the immense numbers of these tiny creatures, each one of which is a valuable scavenger, helping to transform decaying vegetable tissue into animal substance. The pleuromonas are devoured, in their turn, by larger forms of the protozoa, or single-celled animals, which again are eaten by minute crustacea and insects. And these last constitute one of the most important supplies of fish food. In many cases, therefore, these tiniest of nature's children are the ones to take the first step in the great work of making many of our waterways sweet and pure."

The "TURKEN" NEW Barnyard FOWL

UNDER the direction of poultry experts of the universities of Washington and Oregon, Z. T. Spencer, of Santa Cruz, Cal., has developed in the past two years a hybrid fowl which he calls the "turken." The turken, which is a cross between a chicken and turkey, has done well for him and he now has a flock of 68. Concerning the origin and development of this new fowl Mr. Spencer gives the Pathfinder this information:

In 1918 a baby chick and a baby turkey were given to a little girl as pets. The birds became great friends and inseparable companions. In due time the chick developed into a full-fledged hen and the little turkey became a lusty gobbler. The hen then laid 13 eggs, fertilized by the gobbler. From these eggs five males and four females were hatched. One of the females of this original flock is still laying five eggs weekly.

The "Turken" Is a Hybrid of the Turkey and the Chicken.

Turkens multiply as other fowl; Mr. Spencer has the third generation now. The eggs hatch in 21 days. None of the roving nature of the turkey is manifested by the hybrid birds; they are gentle and as easily handled in pens as chickens. The eggs are brown in color, of about the same size as an ordinary hen's egg and the same in flavor. The birds are hardy and rapid growers, weighing at maturity about 10 pounds. The flesh is the same as that of the turkey, the legs and breast being much meatier than that of a chicken. The original four hens laid in a year an average of 231 eggs apiece. As market fowls and as egg producers Mr. Spencer considers the turken superior to all other domestic fowl. His flock was a triple prize winner at Watsonville, Calif., fair last fall.

What Becomes of Golf Balls

A SCANDINAVIAN fisherman recently gave a well-known English golfer a bag of 250 golf-balls that he had collected off the coast of Jutland. In all cases they were British-made balls. It is thought that these balls were played at Seaford and North Berwick. At the time the prevailing winds were westerly. The balls were blown out to sea, and curious cross-currents washed them over to the Danish coast.

A tricky problem was set the players on a golf course a short while ago. One of them had driven off and had the satisfaction of seeing his ball drop near the green. Just then a seagull appeared on the scene and swooped down on the ball, picking it up in his beak.

On being chased, the bird dropped the ball, but at once swooped and caught it again, giving the players a further chase of 150 yards. Finally, the ball was rescued and the point arose as to where the player must play from. After a hot discussion, the ball was dropped as near as possible to where it had first fallen.

A golfer of repute put on record that he once found 17 golf balls in a heap of fresh sand outside a warren on a Scots course; and, on another occasion, came across four in a crow's nest. Noticing that his ball seemed a long time in coming down, he told his caddie to climb one of the trees, and the four balls were found.

This record is beaten, however, by that made by an American squirrel when the golf players on a New Jersey course found no fewer than 100 balls in a squirrel's nest at the foot of an old tree.

Getting Gossip With a Garter

GETTING gossip via the garter—that's the latest marvel of the radio whereby any member of the fair sex can acquire a "sixth sense" and pluck secrets from the air.

This "sixth sense" comes in the form of a dainty beribboned garter, to be worn by its owner just below the knee. Around this garter, under the silk of ribbon and rosette, wire is coiled and connections are made by a "ground" of wire on a snap coil held under the foot and an aerial subtly concealed in the crown of the hat. When not in use the receiver, which hooks on the hat over the ear, hangs on a tiny bent wire concealed on the garter.

The radio garter is the invention of Walter P. Miller, a newspaper photographer. Mr. Miller first wound wire around a piece of stiff cardboard covered with silk to give the appearance of a lady's garter. He attached to this two ordinary eyeglass snap chains, one of which is held under the foot to make a ground, and the other connected to a coil of wire in the wearer's hat, forming the antenna. The crystal detector is in a glass tube attached to the garter. To complete the "hello garter" there are two little binding posts for the ear telephones.

Working Subconscious Mind

A SUGGESTION repeated to yourself with emphasis and concentration the last thing before you sleep, will work in your subconscious mind while you sleep, motivating to a remarkable degree your waking actions. Consequently auto-suggestion or a constructive statement of desirable facts or conditions at this time are surprisingly effective. Psychologists explain that it is a simple law of the way the mind works and there is nothing occult about it.
