NEW PLAINS OIL AREA OPENED AS BOLES TEST FINDS PAY SAND

SEVEN FEET OF FORMATION HAS RICH SHOWING

BIT STOPPED AND HOLE BEING CLEANED TILL OWNERS ARRIVE

DILMEN OPTIMISTIC

NEW DISTRICT MAY BE OPENED UP BY THIS FIND

Hailed as the most important oil find yet found in a Plains test, a strong showing of oil was encountered by the Tolbat and Simms number one, Boles test, five miles southeast of this city on Section 21, Block S G. C. & S. F. survey, at a depth of 1,133 feet.

The bit entered the sand at 1132 and was sent on down to 1149 with the oil increasing as the entering deeper. Drilling was stopped and a phone call put through to Jack Tolbat at Tulsa, Okla., who ordered the crew of workmen to keep the hole cleaned out and casing until he could get there. The well will be drilled further when the sand Mr. Tolbat was dug in town some time last night.

Oilmen who have visited the test believe that it will make a producing well, though no estimate as to production could be made from the showing.

The block of sand on which the hole was drilled, was associated with a considerable experience in both California and Pennsylvania fields. Mr. Heller, together with Sam Arden, organized the Center Oil company to drill on these holdings, and control later passed to Tolbat and Simms in a trade after the death of Mr. Heller in California.

FEW BAD SPOTS REMAIN ON CONTINENT SAYS DR. KLEIN

In a report to his chief, Secretary Hoover, the trade official declared today that European countries generally had shaken off the "calamity complex" or mental hazard from a stranger business morale and were rapidly becoming convinced that the problem "is one of trade dislocation rather than downright destruction."

The Woman's Day

Bear with me, gentle readers. If I say I am inspired to be preachy, and preach I must! I have just returned from lunch with friend Edith and I insist upon making my point articulate. Edith is nice but she's such a moaner...

Edith's tale of woe isn't so bad I tell you. It's all down, it seems that she must support her mother and her brother won't help because he's married and assumes that it's up to Edith and mother assumes it, too, and it's all Edith can do to make ends meet...

Of course, I don't blame Edith for a slight peevish at the brother who took it upon himself to assume further responsibility, when he knew his mother's state...

But I sometimes wonder just why Edith considers her state so abnormal. I wonder if she happens to know that less than one per cent of all working people are free from financial responsibility.

I wonder if she ever stopped to think how many men, for instance, get much for themselves out of their pay envelopes, other than the satisfaction of knowing that their earnings are providing necessities and a few comforts for their wives and children...

And I wonder if she ever stopped to observe the equal restlessness and discomfort of girls who are effectively free to spend anything, anywhere, do anything, I wonder if she has ever noticed that these girls are just about as ready to sway their perfect freedom of time and money and energy for the wifely state which means sharing less money, perhaps, than they earned and spent alone, and means responsibility manifold.

I wonder if it ever occurred to her that the old law of compensation works here—an ounce of dress or an ounce of gold—that perfect reason is bought with the price of emotionally driven lives, and that well-rounded, emotionally satisfying lives are bought with the price of responsibility, economic and otherwise.

Edith has so much that she doesn't even know she has. Her mother, full of gratitude and pride in Edith, makes a perfect home for her a cozy place of graciousness and charm where Edith's friends are entertained beautifully.

Edith talks about her home responsibilities and financial obligations, but the truth of the matter is that her mother is such a good manager that even supporting her, as Edith does, she lives better for one than she would spend if she were indeed "free" living in her apartment or in a club or hotel.

We both have another friend, Marcia, who is tied three times as much as Edith. Marcia's mother is an invalid. Marcia lives on with her mother in the old rickety family home. Marcia herself, if alone, would never live as she does, but her mother loves the old home with its memories, so Marcia stays on home with her. Marcia has more friends to the square inch than any girl in the world, I am sure.

Her friends expect her return from Marcia. But Marcia insists on giving her return. She says her dinner and luncheon and bridge debts are promptly and charmingly as many of her friends whose houses, mansions, and by-ones, can be used for free entertaining. Marcia takes the gang to a charming tea-room with never a word of complaint for living conditions which make it necessary for her to do differently than other people. She is not "mouthing time." She is not waiting for any sort of release. She is happy right now and lives a well-rounded life, glad that she has her very obligations.

"Yes, it gets hard," I have heard Marcia say. "But I'm so lucky to have a mother, sick or well."

SPORT WILD

Is it true that this generation is sport wild? We believe that it is being carried to extremes to say the least of it. Sport according to our dictionary is a pastime; a diversion and amusement.

Work is a good thing. To be unemployed is generally counted an evil—anyway, it is so in the case of a poor man; but, it seems to me, that the obligation to be engaged in some, honorable and useful kind of labor, is as truly devolved upon the rich as upon the poor, perhaps more so.

When fire and gasoline get together there is bound to be an explosion. That seems to be the condition in some homes. The wife is all fire and the husband is all gasoline, and therefore the court dockets are crowded with divorce suits.

tion?" or "What can it do on the diamond?"
That the demand for sport is endangering the work of God is evident. A prominent divine of New York City announced a summer or two ago that beginning from that Sunday until further notice there would be no morning service because so many members of his church wanted to play golf on Sunday morning.

SO THINK WE

We think that Lubbock County's first bale has been ginned and sold. It will be only a short time until other farmers of this section begin to bring in the fleecy staple.

We think that a greater portion of the Matadors have arrived for fall training which starts today.

We think that Lubbock is lining up with other cities of the Panhandle in the proposed Ardmore-Lubbock line.

We think that the English ace flier that started for America and landed in Spain may consider himself lucky in that he was fortunate enough to find something other than the deep blue to land on.

We think that Texas' last county to organize was Crane County. Officers and the county seat were selected Saturday in the county election.

We think that the South Plains baseball fans will have a real treat in having the opportunity to see the Ft. Worth Cats in action here within the next few weeks.

We think that should any merchant in Lubbock who has an opening for more employees he should consider the young college students that desire to secure work during their time in the school.

We think that Lubbock is the best to the greatest Teachers Institute in West Texas this year. More than one thousand South Plains Teachers are here attending the annual South Plains Institute.

We think that school children of this city are preparing for the opening day for another year of study. The Lubbock city schools will open next Monday.

VISITORS CAN TELL
A visitor can always tell whether or not a town has civic pride by its appearance. It is easy to distinguish between the community that is standing still or sliding back. Outward appearance counts just as much in the case of towns as it does in the case of individuals.

Lubbock is not the clean town that it should be. There are hundreds of vacant lots in this city that look their very worst in the fall and summer when most of the visitors come this way. We believe that now is a mighty good time to do some of this work, and have the town looking good when the large number of people come in for the opening of the public schools and Texas Tech. There will be hundreds of parents and friends of students come to Lubbock with the young people to see that comfortable located for the term, and better the town looks the better impression it will make on these visitors. Let's clean up and look our best all the time.

Corn Harvesting Machines

(Editorial in Farm Implement News)
The announcement by the largest manufacturer of farm equipment of a line of cotton harvesting machines may mark the end of an epoch in American agriculture and the beginning of a new one. Whether the transition actually occurs depends, of course, upon the success of these machines in the field.

The significance of such a transition should be clear. It is a step toward the mechanization of agriculture. It is a step toward the elimination of the human element in the process of harvesting. It is a step toward the production of a surplus of cotton.

The general use of cotton harvesting machines in the South will have momentous results in many ways. It is not a matter simply of one machine displacing a less efficient one, as is now in process in many sections where the combine is displacing the equipment previously used in grain harvest. With the cotton harvester, it is a fundamental proposition where a machine displaces human labor, and that labor can be largely dispensed with in all other steps in cotton growing even in cotton chopping.

According to statements of Southern experts in the past year or so, cotton plantings have been developed which, if used with tested high vitality seed, will eliminate

And murmured with quiet grin

THE PENNY PRINCESS

by Anne Austin

BEGIN HERE TODAY

VERA CAMERON permits her self to be transformed from a plain business girl into a beauty by JERRY MACKLYN, her boss, advertising manager of Pease, Brown & Company, Co. Jerry falls in love with Vera, also called Vee-Vee, and his love persists even when he learns she consents to the transformation only because the man she falls in love with, JERRY MACKLYN, ignores her.

Vera spends her vacation at Lake Minnetonka because Smythe is there. Smythe and other guests mistake her for VIVIAN CRANDALL, ex-princess, who after a Paris divorce is in hiding. Vera emphatically proclaims her true identity but it is not believed.

The Crandalls learn from hotel records that Vera is the city of the supposed daughter's whereabouts. Vera gets word while she and Smythe are on the pier late at night that she is wanted at the hotel. She and Smythe flee in a stolen car. Smythe confesses his love and says they must be married at once. Believing he loves her for herself alone, Vera tells him the truth, substantiating her identity with Jerry's letter. Smythe is furious, revealing himself as a fortune hunter. However, he retrieves when it occurs to him this girl may really be the princess, who is trying to out-smart another man.

Two masked men stop them and Vera is taken with them in an airplane to a shack in the mountains. PRINCE VIVA, Vera's husband, reveals he is there. Vera and the prince are horrified when the men immediately announce they will hold them a ransom they will demand from a ransomer from the Crandalls. Vera convinces the prince, who is furious at the discovery Vera is not his wife, that they must play the part, otherwise the men, angered at finding her unable to draw a ransom will murder them.

Meantime Jerry Macklyn in New York reads of what has happened at the Minnetonka. At the office, Jerry is stunned when a dispatch reports ROSEMARY FITCH, tells him she saw Vera that morning in a subway jam, her old plain self again, wearing spectacles. She tells him she gave her one of the advertising booklets in which Vera's pictures appear. Jerry gets a phone call and a request to come immediately to an address in the Bronx. Jerry surmises it is VIVIAN CRANDALL herself who is summoning him and he hurries away.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXXVIII

When Vee-Vee, refreshed by the breakfast which she had taken a malicious pleasure in watching the Russian prince prepare, entered the second of the two rooms of the mountain shack in which she was being held a prisoner, she was no longer too tired to look about her with lively curiosity.

There was one small window, roughly boarded over with rolling strips of weather-stained pine. She dragged a stool, the only sort of chair that the room afforded, to the wall in which the window was set, and standing on it, poked against the boards with her fists. As she had expected, they yielded not at all, and any effort to force an opening by banging upon them with the stool would, of course, instantly bring the guard, the moon-faced kidnaper who was called "Happy". There was a door but she knew that it had been made fast with a padlock before "Satan" had left to arrange the mysterious details of his ransom-collecting.

She next turned her attention to the door which led into the front room. Vee-Vee had already noted that it swung, lock and latchless, like a swinging door between a kitchen and butler's pantry. There was no way at all by which it could be made fast to serve as a protection for her against either the kidnappers or the prince, if they should decide to violate her privacy.

Her heart lunged sickeningly with fear, but she quickly conquered it, telling herself that she was not the villain-missed heroine in a western movie. The prince had not intentionally abducted her. His desires were centered on the woman who had been his wife, the woman he had thought he was abandoning. Understandably enough, he was angry with her—Vee-Vee, and probably would be as glad as she when the ransom was paid and they were released or taken within a reasonable distance of New York. However, the kidnappers might arrange the details of the ransom. It was silly to be afraid, she told herself secretly.

Along one wall were two bunk beds, built one above the other, as in the front room. Both were neatly made up, with new sheets and with new brown army blankets. Curiously she turned back the sheets to discover what sort of mattresses the abandoned kidnaper had offered his guests, and found that they were not mattresses at all, but the cushions of an automobile. So the prince had a car somewhere near, unless the kidnaper, "Satan", had confessed to L. It had not occurred to her before to wonder how the prince had arranged his own part of the mad adventure, but it was fairly evident that he had either rented or bought a car for the trip. On the faded-back mattress of the top bunk, by a pair of pale blue silk pajamas, as neatly arranged as if the prince's valet had laid them out for him.

When she had taken off her evening dress earlier in the morning and dressed herself in more suitable clothes, she had left her suitcase on the floor, and had hung her blouse on the rusty nails in the wall opposite the bunks. Although it was broad daylight outside, the room was in semi-darkness, because of the boarded-up window. Her hair curls were becoming curly again in the lack of light and she

NATIONAL GUARD INVITED TO HELP WELCOME LINDBERGH TO ABILENE

ABILENE, Sept. 5.--All National Guard units in the territory contingent to Abilene have been invited to attend the Lindbergh celebration in this city on September 28.

Abilene's three companies of quardmen will take part in the program at full strength. During part of the day the soldiers will assist in directing traffic, parking vehicles and in other ways.

With the assistance to be had from the military units, it is thought that the civil officers of Abilene and Taylor county will be able to handle the mammoth throng expected here for the event with a minimum of confusion and disorder.

It is the aim of the committee handling arrangements for this occasion, to do everything possible to keep down accidents, embarrassment and anxiety.

Special Rates To Abilene Offered

ABILENE, September 5--Railroads of Texas have authorized special excursion rates from all stations in the state to Abilene for the period of September 25 to 30, according to information received recently by officials of the West Texas Fair.

On all tickets where the regular one-way fare amounts to more than $5 the special round trip rate will be one and one-third the regular one-way fare. Where the one-way ticket amounts to $5 or less the special rate for a round-trip ticket will be one and one-third the regular one-way rate.

Granted for the benefit of visitors to West Texas Fair, this special railroad rate will be available for those who come to Abilene to attend the celebration to be held on September 26, in connection with the visit of Colonel Chas. A. Lindbergh.

K. N. Remper, new member of the Tech faculty, is leaving the city for Abilene, where he will meet his wife and bring her back to Lubbock.

France conferred the Legion of Honor upon her for her literary accomplishments as well as her daring air feats. She has a gold medal of the French Aviation Club.
