Panel clears tax legislation for final action

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate-House committee on Saturday cleared for final congressional action a compromise version of President Reagan's tax-cut bill, working through the night before deciding how deeply to reduce taxes on the oil industry.

The Senate planned to take a final vote Saturday night on the bill. But that was in question after Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., indicated that he was prepared to stage a filibuster. He pledged to "to do all I can to oppose the gigantic multibillion dollar giveway to the oil industry that has just been included in the tax bill."

Approval by the Senate and then by the House when it meets Tuesday would send the measure to Reagan for his signature and produce the largest tax cut in history — about $750 billion through 1986.

The bill is the only thing standing between Congress and a five-week recess.

Included in the bill are a three-year, 25 percent, across-the-board cut in personal tax rates, starting on Oct. 1; automatic annual tax cuts starting in 1985 to help offset inflation; a new deduction for working couples who now pay a tax penalty for being married; various incentives for savings; and $150 billion worth of business tax reductions over the six-year period.

For a typical four-member, two-earner family with $20,000 income, the bill would provide tax relief of $544 when fully effective in 1984. The $10,000 family would get $113; the $100,000 family, $6,872.

Most of the major provisions were decided even before the bill was sent to a Senate-House conference committee to work out final details. As expected, the biggest obstacle to a quick agreement among the 15 conferees was the oil question, and that agreement was reached only as the clock struck 8 a.m. — signaling the end of a 14-hour session.

The compromise oil provision will be worth about $11.7 billion to the oil industry from 1981 through 1986. That is about halfway between the $16.9 billion originally passed by the House ($46 billion over 10 years) and the $6.6 billion approved by the Senate ($19.9 billion over 10 years).

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., manager of the legislation, had predicted the Senate would pass it Saturday night even though liberal senators had promised a filibuster if the compromise was significantly more than the original Senate bill. One of the senators threatening a filibuster, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, announced Saturday he would not hold up final passage.

But Kennedy declared in a statement, "I know that my colleagues wish to begin the current recess and to leave the long hot summer of a Washington August. But I believe that we should stay in session until this issue (the oil provision) is resolved," he said.

"At a time when millions of average families are being asked to sacrifice as part of the administration's economic program, and at a time when millions of elderly citizens are being asked to accept drastic cutbacks in their Social Security benefits and their retirement plans, it makes no sense to give the federal store away to the oil companies," Kennedy said.

Tom Griscom, a spokesman for Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said Saturday afternoon that Baker had not talked to Kennedy but that the Republicans had asked the Democrats to check on whether they would be able to "clear" the tax bill for a vote Saturday night.

Here are some of the basic items that had been in dispute between the Senate and House and which were settled by the conference:

—An increased tax credit for child-care expenses incurred by working parents. The current limit $400 for care of one child and $800 for two. The bill allows a credit based on family income; a $10,000 family would get up to $1,440 for two children; a $30,000 family, $960.

—A better tax break on contributions to tax-deferred retirement plans and extension of such accounts to workers already covered by company pensions. A worker now may delay taxes until retirement on up to $1,500 deposited each year in an Individual Retirement Account; the bill raises that to $2,000. A worker covered by a company plan could use the deduction for an IRA or for the company pension.

—For the 71 percent of taxpayers who don't itemize, a special deduction for charitable contributions. It would began at $25 next year and rise gradually to an unlimited amount in 1986.

—For a person 55 or older or one severely handicapped, a once-a-lifetime tax-free profit of up to $125,000 from the sale of his or her personal home. The current limit is $100,000; the handicapped are not covered. A person of any age would have 24 months — up from 18 months — to invest home-sale profits in a new home and avoid taxes on the gain.

Plenty of jobs — no place to sleep

By GAIL BURKE

George steps down off the bus.

He's one of many "American refugees" — a day laborer.

No place to live, no money, no job. But he heard there are plenty of jobs in Texas — "Go to Midland."

What he didn't hear is that there is a housing shortage.

These people, mostly men, travel into Midland looking for work. They can get a job, but most of the 20-25 men that congregate each morning at the Texas Employment Commission can't keep a job for more than a day because they have no place to live, no place to shower.

THE DAY LABORER is not the same as the transient. A transient travels from city to city, working a day, maybe a week, and then heading on to the next town. But the day laborer is trying to establish residency. He works from day to day, hoping to find permanent work and housing.

George, 53, has been in Midland for a week, coming here from Illinois. He stays at the "star-lite motel," sleeping under the stars on the ground. Large pieces of cardboard become his bed; sheets of plastic cover him from nature's elements.

"I got here to Midland willing to work, but there's no place to stay, not even a motel, so I'm sleeping outside," George said.

Most of the laborers sleep in a clearing in south Midland. Yet, George is more particular about where he stays.

"Something like this is bad on you," he said. "There's a lot of heavy drinkers around, but they're not drifters in every case. They're lonely and away from home. Even if they did have money in their pocket, there's no place to go. So they come here to sit around, drink, tell stories and sleep. But there's no way you could get me to sleep down here."

GEORGE EXPLAINED that he may be sleeping on private property and did not want to disclose his sleeping location. He said the police might ask him to move on.

According to Detective Lt. Earl Luckey with the Midland Police Department, the department gets calls on these people all the time.

"They're staying anywhere they can until they can find a place," he said. "As long as they're not on someone's property we don't bother them."

But, some day laborers disagree.

"The police hassle you all the time," said one angry laborer.

"Every place is private property — there is no public property."

Reagan's revolution

SAN SIMEON — The last week in July of 1981 will long be remembered for the final historic skirmish in the great Reagan tax revolt. From arm-twisting to nose-counting it had all the high drama that keeps American politics from having many dull moments.

The favorable tax-cut votes in the Senate (89 to 11) and House (238 to 195) came about for three reasons. First and foremost, of course, was the persistent leadership of the president. Second, last week's decisions never would have taken place if it had not been for the willingness of both sides to compromise in the interest of the common good. And finally, that often intangible factor known as public opinion had much to do with the outcome.

Our leader in the White House deserved his victory. It seems to me that our president, given the size of the mandate Ronald Reagan got, should be given a chance to lead. If he is wrong we will discover it soon enough, but in view of the strong support by the majority of American voters he merits the right to prove himself. Others apparently support this view.

You may recall the trouble President Jimmy Carter had with the Congress over the energy issue. Jimmy may have been right, but because of congressional disapproval his proposals stayed on the back burner and never were brought to a test. In Ronald Reagan's case it is turning out differently. The good news of last Wednesday is that he is to be given the tools to put his tax-cutting principles into practice, and we the people will have plenty of time to sit in judgment as his fiscal policies are put over in the next three years.

A victory for the president would be hollow indeed if it were not also a

The badge of honor for Midland police officers is fast becoming a symbol of shame because low pay brings many of them uncomfortably close to the border of poverty.

Police pay not a pretty picture

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

A Midland Police Department rookie with two children and a wife who doesn't work is eligible for rental assistance from the government. If he made $77 a month less than his current base salary of $14,508 per year, he could apply for food stamps.

That financial picture was sketched with figures from the Department of Human Resources and the Department of Housing and Urban Development. And low pay is the prime reason 22 officers — including four detectives and two patrol sergeants — have left the force since the first of the year.

"It's unheard of for that many detectives to leave in so short a time," said a ranking veteran officer who noted the time and effort it takes to achieve detective status.

Collectively, according to Chief of Police Wayne Gideon, the loss represents 114 years of experience. Should the trend continue, the department will rack up a 28 percent turnover rate by year's end. City officials get nervous when turnover rates approach even 10 percent.

"IT TAKES two years before a new officer really becomes comfortable, streetwise and productive," said Gideon. "It takes that long for the taxpayers to start getting a return on their investment. The cost to train a (cadet) is about $8,500."

The base salary range goes from $14,508 per year for a recruit, to $21,420 for patrol lieutenants — a rank that generally requires a minimum of 10 years to acquire. The lowest detective rank is that of sergeant. Detective salaries start at $16,788 and end at $19,440.

The maximum additional pay an officer can expect to receive for things like longevity and continuing education is approximately $180 a month.

Although department salaries are about on a par with those of comparable agencies across the state, Midland's economy is such that its cost of living is the highest in Texas and the 13th highest in the 200 cities, according to a poll taken annually by the American Chamber of Commerce Researchers Association.

AND, ACCORDING to a study of buying power by Sales and Marketing Management magazine, Midland's average per household income is $26,083 — after taxes. That figure was based on 1979 statistics. Averaging the annual increases which have occurred during the past five years produces an anticipated 1981 after-tax income of $31,000. The national average for 1979 was $20,685.

In putting together rental assistance requirements, HUD's computations take into account the various living costs in given locales around the country, while food stamp eligiblity is based on an inflexible national norm, according to a spokesman for the Texas Department of Human Resources in Midland.

HUD's calculations were done in 1980 and used $21,000 as the median gross income for the city. Said

Air controllers to return to bargaining table today

WASHINGTON (AP) — The prospect of a nationwide air traffic controllers strike increased Saturday as talks deadlocked and the Reagan administration called the union's demands "nothing short of outrageous."

The two sides broke off their talks after meeting only about 30 minutes but were to resume negotiations today.

"We're still miles apart and there hasn't been much bargaining," federal mediator Kenneth Moffett told reporters. "I'm not very hopeful right now."

White House spokesman David R. Gergen said President Reagan, who was monitoring the developments while at Camp David, Md., "very much wants to avoid a strike."

"He wants to do everything possible to avoid a strike, within the context of a fair settlement," said Gergen, the president's assistant for communications. "We'll be fair, but we'll also be firm," Gergen said.

"We are hopeful the controllers will fulfill their obligations," he said. "A strike would be illegal. The government has contingency plans in the event of a strike. If there is a strike, the emphasis of this administration will be on safety."

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis called the union's demands "excessive" and said the union package would cost the government $681 million a year and amount to nearly $39,000 in wages and benefits for each controller.

"These demands...are nothing short of outrageous," Lewis declared. "We cannot yield to, or even entertain, such demands." He called the union proposal "an affront to the American public."

The government's wage offer amounts to $40 million a year and Lewis said he was not budging from that figure. He said military controllers and supervisory workers were prepared to direct the nation's air traffic if the controllers walk off their jobs.

Robert E. Poli, president of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, was asked Saturday what the union's estimate of the cost to the government would be if its demands were granted. He did not answer. Lewis has said the union's estimate is $490 million.

A strike by the controllers could ground half of the nation's air traffic, particularly flights of less than 500 miles, play havoc with air travelers and cost the economy tens of millions of dollars a day.

Some travelers were booking flights during the weekend in attempts to get where they want to go before a strike. Car rental agencies, bus lines, and AmTrak were preparing for a rush of business if air traffic is interrupted.

Panama's leader dies in plane crash

AP Laserphoto

Former U.S. President Jimmy Carter embraces Panamanian President Omar Torrijos in ths 1977 file photo, following the signing in Washington of the Panama Canal treaty. Torrijos was killed Saturday in the crash of light plane.

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Gen. Omar Torrijos Herrera, the political strongman who forged the treaty with the United States giving Panama control of the Panama Canal, has been killed in a plane crash, the national guard reported Saturday.

A spokesman said five others in the light plane also perished when it crashed Friday in a remote jungle area 60 miles west of the capital. He said the wreckage was found Saturday and the bodies have been recovered.

"The guard leadership has met with President Aristedes Royo and Vice Presisdent Ricardo de la Espriella to make arrangements for a state funeral," a statement released by the national guard said. Torrijos, 52, was commander of the guard, which serves as Panama's army.

The statement said Torrijos' body will lie in state for 24 hours starting Tuesday morning, and the funeral will be held in the Don Bosco Church.

A television announcement by Maj. Domingo O'Calagan said Torrijos' plane disappeared after taking off for the short flight between the cities of Pemonome and Coclesito and the wreckage was spotted by the pilot of a search plane early Saturday.

The national guard said Torrijos, the country's military and political leader for the last 13 years, was making a routine check of guard outposts. He maintained a residence in the peasant community of Coclesito.

A helicopter flew to the crash site to transport the bodies of the six victims to Panama City, the national guard said.

Torrijos won agreement in 1977 with then-President Jimmy Carter for the pact that that turns sovereignty of the Panama Canal over to Panama by the end of the century. The controversial treaty was ratified in 1978, and Torrijos jumped into a canal lock during the celebration.

Torrijos, born in Santiago de Veraguas, Panama Feb. 3, 1929, was the son of schoolteachers. He studied in El Salvador's military school and graduated as second lieutenant in 1953, returning here to hold a variety of military posts.

He was named military aide to President Arnulfo Arias in Oct. 1968. Less than two weeks later Torrijos and Col. Boris Martinez led a coup that toppled Arias.

The next year, Torrijos effectively took sole power by exiling Martinez and taking the title of brigadier general. A newly elected assembly in September 1972 gave him full civil and military powers for a six-year term.

In 1977 Torrijos went to Washington and in meetings with Carter won the treaty aimed at turning over the Panama Canal to Panama.

Torrijos, usually seen packing a pistol and chomping a cigar, was a political independent. He was an unswerving ally of the United States and even accepted the former Shah of Iran when the Persian ruler's presence in America became an embarrassment.

In October 1978, Torrijos surprised Panamanians by stepping down after 10 years as chief of government.

One well-placed Panamian said at the time, "Torrijos was tired of being called dictator, and that was no small factor in his decision to step down and move ahead with some constitutional reforms."

Although the title was abolished and the executive functions were passed to a new president, Torrijos retained control over the new government as commander of the national guard.

The new president, Aristides Royo, was hand-picked for the post and made no secret of his admiration for Torrijos, who once described himself as a "dictator with a heart."

Egyptian leader to visit Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Anwar Sadat of Egypt will visit Washington this week for talks with President Reagan that will be crucial for keeping the Camp David peace process with Israel alive.

Sadat's first visit since Reagan became president occurs against a background of Arab-Israeli turmoil that has pushed the Egyptian leader further out on a limb in isolation from most other Arab countries.

The Egyptian president will arrive in Washington Tuesday and hold his first meeting with Reagan on Wednesday. Sadat also plans a private meeting with former President Carter in Plains, Ga., next Saturday.

Sadat and Reagan are expected to explore ways to resume meaningful discussions between Egypt and Israel on autonomy for Palestinians in the Israeli occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, the next step in the peace process.

"What Sadat probably is looking for is a clear cut recommitment from us that we do want to get the autonomy process going again and that we give it high priority," a State Department official, who didn't want to be identified, said in an interview Friday. "He will get that."

"This is the key and essential next step to keeping the process going," the official said.

Before any decisions can be reached, however, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin must also be consulted. He will come to Washington for his first official meeting with Reagan in September.

Sadat is expected to make the point that he hopes Reagan will press Begin to "be forthcoming" on the autonomy issue, the official said.

"He is probably uncertain what the new Israeli government policy will be," he added. The Reagan administration shares that uncertainty, especially in the wake of the strains that have developed in the U.S.-Israeli relationship over Israel's recent actions in the Middle East.

The official said he thinks Begin "wants very much to resume talks. It's a question of whether everybody is talking about the same kind of talks."

Palestinian autonomy talks are provided in the Camp David peace accords between Israel and Egypt, which were negotiated with Carter's help in 1979. But the talks have been stalled since last fall.

U.S. officials don't rule out that Reagan, Sadat and Begin will agree to hold a joint discussion on the autonomy issue at a later date. Another possibility is for Reagan to name a full-time special Mideast negotiator similar to the position held by Sol Linowitz and Robert Strauss in the Carter administration.

Sadat has said that a major purpose of his trip is simply to get to know Reagan. Both nations obviously want to establish the same good working relationship that Sadat has enjoyed with other U.S. presidents.

Sadat said in Cairo last week that he will tell Reagan he is disturbed at U.S. "passivity" toward aggressive Soviet behavior in the Middle East, especially in Afghanistan, Libya and Syria. "These are all problems that should be dealt with," he said.

Few world leaders have been as closely identified with American foreign policy interests, in both word and deed, as Sadat has in recent years. In return, he has been on the receiving end of a great deal of U.S. economic and military aid, more than any other nation after Israel.

Iranians preparing for new cabinet

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran's government went through the formality of resigning Saturday to pave the way for a new cabinet, authorities announced 22 more executions and ex-President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr moved from one Paris suburb to another to avoid assassins.

His supporters in Iran, meanwhile, shot and killed two revolutionary guards in a patrol car in the Caspian Sea town of Amol, and set off a bomb that killed three fundamentalist Islamic politicians in the central city of Shiraz, the official Pars news agency said.

Pope 'cured;' Agca questioned

ROME (AP) — Doctors said Saturday that Pope John Paul II's viral infection has been cured, paving the way for a second operation to help him recover from the attempt on his life.

Mehmet Ali Agca, the Turkish extremist convicted of shooting the pope and two American tourists in St. Peter's Square in May, was interrogated in Rome's Rebibbia prison Saturday by two West German magistrates, Italian officials reported. They said the Germans questioned the 23-year-old prisoner about the murder of a Turkish citizen in Germany last year.

Passion play opens in Jerusalem

JERUSALEM (AP) — An American-directed version of "The Passion Play," carefully cleansed of the slightest hint of anti-Semitism, opens today in Jerusalem within sight of the places where Jesus was betrayed, condemned, crucified and buried.

It is a setting the play's producer-director, Francisco de Araujo of Washington, calls "the best backdrop in show business."

Earthquake hits Mexican coast

MEXICO CITY (AP) — An earthquake rocked Mexico's Pacific coast early Saturday about 200 miles southwest of the capital, the University of Mexico's seismological laboratory said. No injuries or damages were reported.

The quake measured 5.6 on the Richter scale and was centered just off the coast near the boundary between Guerrero and Michoacan states, the laboratory said.

Haig, ministers open two-day summit

CANCUN, Mexico (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and 21 other foreign ministers opened a two-day meeting Saturday to plan the first summit conference of developing and industrialized nations to tackle the problem of reducing poverty in the world.

"The time has come, finally, to launch a great crusade to defeat fear and death, hunger and injustice, and to establish a reign of equity and hope," Jorge Castaneda, Mexico's representatives, told his colleagues in a welcoming speech.

Polish leaders fear national conflict

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's communist leaders warned Saturday that protests and tension over food shortages could explode into nationwide conflict.

The statement by the Communist Party's 15-member Politburo, elected at the party congress in mid-July, was the first by that ruling body on the food crisis.

British customs officers seize heroin

DOVER, England (AP) — Customs officers seized heroin worth more than $5.6 million hidden in a family car and arrested its driver, who is a local official, and his wife, authorities reported Saturday.

A spokesman for the Customs Department at this English channel port said 22 pounds of heroin, the biggest haul in Britain this year, were found in the vehicle, searched Friday as it returned from Turkey. Names of those arrested were not immediately available.

Another 4.4 pounds of heroin were seized during a raid early Saturday on eight London homes, a customs spokesman said. Eight Turks were detained in the London raids.

Britain: From fairy tale to stark reality

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — After the fairy-tale wedding of Prince Charles and Princess Diana, Britain returned to the harsh reality of its decaying cities, antiquated economy and hatred-torn province of Northern Ireland.

As the honeymooners flew to Gibraltar to embark on a honeymoon cruise, the pomp and circumstance of Wednesday's ceremony watched by millions worldwide receded further into memory.

The Financial Times commented Saturday: "It will be to a Britain stripped bare of bunting that the Prince and Princess of Wales return from their honeymoon in gentler climes."

The Times of London said Britain now must face "all those harsher realities of national life."

Among those realities are:

—Riots in Liverpool, London and other cities where joblessness, decrepit housing, alleged police harassment and racial discrimination led to unprecedented scenes of looting and burning earlier this month. The first fatality in the riots came in Liverpool's Toxteth district the day before the wedding. Hundreds have been injured and substantial damage taken place.

—The crisis in Northern Ireland, where the outlawed Irish Republican Army is fighting to end British rule and 12 years of sectarian strife have claimed at least 2,124 lives. The IRA is focusing its campaign on the Maze prison's hunger strike to the death in which jailed guerrillas are seeking reforms amounting ot political-prisoner status.

—Unemployment at its highest levels since the Great Depression. More than one in nine people — 2.85 million people — are out of work, a rate of 11.8 percent. Last Monday the government set aside almost one billion dollars for job training, early retirement schemes and employers' subsidies, a package that opposition Labor Party leader Michael Foot dismissed as "derisory."

—A sinking pound sterling, which Friday hit a three-year low of $1.84. The pound was worth $2.43 six months ago but has been hurt by high U.S. interest rates and falling world oil prices, blunting the effect of Britain's virtual self-sufficiency in North Sea oil.

—An annual inflation rate of 11.3 percent, down 10 percent from a year ago but still above Conservative Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's single figure target.

A piece of good news for Mrs. Thatcher was Thursday's victory for the government in the 21-week pay dispute with civil servants that produced a series of sporadic strikes by 530,000 white-collar employees in nine unions. They had sought a 15 percent raise but settled for 7½ percent, after an original government offer of 6 percent.

The settlement came 24 hours after the wedding, when this class-divided country seemed to have its confidence and purpose restored.

Nearly a million people from skinheads, the young white rightists involved in some of the recent riots, to stockbrokers gleefully celebrated wedding day in the streets of London. People shared food and drink, joined in songs and cheered their future king and queen with ardor.

Scotland Yard set up its most elaborate security operation in history but arrested only 10 pickpockets and other minor offenders.

The weekly New Scientist magazine observed that the wedding "threatened no one, fascinated unprecedented numbers and must have demonstrated to the world — full of potential tourists — that Britain is not going down the tubes in a blaze of riots, muggings and extortionate prices for goods."

Gambian coup leaders say they'll execute their hostages

DAKAR, Senegal (AP) — Coup leaders in neighboring Gambia broadcast more threats to execute hostages Saturday, several hours after Senegalese troops claimed they retook the Gambian radio from the Marxist rebels.

Youngsters identified in the broadcast as children of the Gambian president said they would be killed unless the Senegalese troops were pulled out of the tiny West African state.

The fate of the hostages, said to include at least 10 Senegalese nationals, was not known, and there was no independent confirmation of reports of looting and several deaths since the coup was launched Thursday.

Western diplomatic sources monitoring the situation from Dakar said Senegal had reinforced its initial contingent of airborne troops and that they were closing in on the island capital of Banjul.

But Radio Senegal said the advance into rebel-held neighborhoods was cautious because the troops, acting under a mutual defense treaty, were under orders to "avoid the loss of civilian lives."

A Western diplomat, who asked not to be identified, said the Senegalese troops "apparently met more resistance than they expected," and that the initial claim of retaking the radio was premature.

The diplomatic sources quoted observers in Banjul as saying gunfire, apparently from small arms, was heard throughout the day in the city.

The Senegalese government said it intervened in the tiny nation which it surrounds on three sides at the request of pro-Western Gambian President Sir Dawda Jawara, who was in London for the royal wedding when the coup occurred.

Gerald Terry of the federal agency's Dallas office: "I realize that (figure) falls short of reality, but it was based on (several complicated) factors."

ACCORDING TO HUD guidelines, a family of four in Midland is eligible for rental assistance if their income is less than $16,800 a year. (Terry said figures published in the Reporter-Telegram July 29 were outdated.)

And, officials agree, if DHR eligibilty requirements were adjusted for local costs, more than one Midland police officer could no doubt draw food stamps.

Former Patrol Officer Tom Moore resigned Friday. He holds an advanced law enforcement certificate and spent four years on the Midland force and six years with the Arlington police department. He's now employed in the private sector.

"Sure, I miss police work," he said. "I respect the (department) and anyone willing to stay with it. But the city is going to have to realize (officers) are on call 24 hours a day and are going to have to have more pay.

"MIDLAND IS a great place to live, but the economy is booming and pay can't be based on other towns in the state with similar populations.

"A lot of experience is going down the drain, and a lot more officers are going to leave if something isn't done. It's a good profession and I'd have stayed if I could have made the money I'm making now."

Former Detective Sergeant Roy Harrison resigned a month ago. He has a bachelor's degree and a total of 10 years' experience — two of it in Midland, where he grossed $22,200 a year because of his education. He claims he still found it necessary to hold down two part-time jobs.

Said Harrison: "Like any job, you can exist (on police pay). But to live halfway decently would be hard. I hold no animosity toward the department or the citizens of Midland. I enjoyed the job very much.

"IT'S NOT happening in Midland alone. Cops everywhere are getting out. The stress just isn't worth it. Detectives get no overtime pay here. There's a comp time system, but there's so damn much going on you can't use it. Then you lose sleep wondering if you missed something in an investigation.

"The lay person needs to realize it takes years to develop informants and good investigative skills. When you have violent crime, you need experienced investigators."

When the department lost Detective Sergeant Ronnie Bryant July 3, they lost a man who started 14 years ago, lacked only six hours for a master's degree in police administration and had never worked for another police force — outside of the four years he spent as a military policeman.

In commenting on his resignation, Bryant, who has four children, said: "I had to do something where I could work one job. I never saw my family. I worked nights on the force and days on construction."

POLICE LAY THE blame for low pay on a city government they say is unresponsive to their needs — except at election time. Said one veteran officer: "The mayor used to be here all the time. Now that he's elected, he can't seem to find the place."

Assistant City Manager Fred Poe, however, says the city hasn't been asleep at the wheel: "We didn't think we were that far out of line until we started seeing the number of people we were losing generally, and the police department in particular. The turnover rate in the traffic engineering department has been running at 100 percent.

"If the economy wasn't booming, it wouldn't be as bad as it is. We've held out for degreed, quality people in the police department. People of their caliber are in high demand in the oil industry. A landman, for instance, needs good research techniques and the ability to get along with people.

"We hired outside consultants three or four years ago to study every job classification we've got. We tried to equate salaries to responsibilities and we made adjustments. We thought we had everybody equated. The study was updated in March, but we'll no doubt have to take another look."

Poe said the city is in good financial shape and 6 percent across-the-board salary hikes are due city employees in October. "Even so," he added, "it looks like the police department will still be 10 to 12 percent behind the sheriff's department."

BOTH DEPARTMENTS have similar fringe benefits and come January, county law enforcement officers are scheduled for a pay increase that will see patrol deputies with a bachelor's degree, an advanced training certificate and four to five years' experience making $24,000 a year.

Starting pay for a raw recruit will be $16,800 — almost twice the department average when Sheriff Dallas Smith took office in 1977.

"The man with more education and experience gets more money because he's capable of doing more for the department and for the public," said Smith. "We're interested in paying people who produce and we add incentives for them to go to school.

"The (county) commissioners recognize that you must have quality men to keep up with a criminal justice system where the defense attorney, the district attorney and the judge are lawyers. The officer is the first on the scene of a crime, though, and traditionally has been the one who knows the least about the law.

"I'm pleased with the direction the commissioners have helped aim this agency. It's had an excellent effect on our men. It's good for morale knowing the man next to you has the training and experience to back you up."

Police officers say they don't expect the city to be able to match what private industry can provide. As one of them put it, "Police work is like cancer — you can't get it out of your system. None of us got into it for the money, but we've got to make a living. We can't survive the way things are now."

With any luck, it may rain

Omens of thunderstorms to give temporary respite from the hot, dry summer may be looming today if the weatherman's 1-to-4 odds for rain get real lucky.

The chance for rain this afternoon and night is a dampened 20 percent, according to a weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The trace of rainfall which graced the Midland area this weekend wasn't sufficient to lift the spirits of dryland cotton farmers who direly need a rain just as their crops are bearing fruit.

Sunday's high temperature is to be near 100 degrees, and tonight's low is to be in the low 70s.

Monday's high is to be in the upper 90s.

Saturday's high temperature was 102 degrees, which was short of the record high of 105 degrees for the date in 1944. The overnight low of 71 degrees missed tying the record low of 61 degrees in 1973.

Winds today are to southerly at 15 to 20 mph and are to diminish to 10 to 15 mph by tonight.

Thunderstorms were reported Saturday over northeast and southwest Texas, the northern Panhandle and the central coastal plain, while the rest the state had sunny skies and warm temperatures, according to the National Weather Service.

The 4 p.m. temperature extremes were 100 at Abilene and 80 at Dalhart, with winds generally from the south at 10 to 20 miles per hour.

The forecast called for a few scattered showers through Monday. Otherwise, more hot and dry weather is expected.

Editor's Report

victory for the people. Approval of the first tax cut in 20 years is cause for great rejoicing on the part of the hard-pressed taxpayers of this nation. But it never would have come to pass without an amazing show of leadership from the top.

When Ronald Reagan first started talking about a tax cut, in his first campaign for the presidency, no one really believed him. It sounded like the typical political act of coming out in favor of baseball and blueberry muffins. But he stayed with it, and as the Wednesday votes proved, America has come to take him seriously.

The spirit of compromise also was a key. The original Reagan plan called for a 30 percent cut over a three-year period. Some of his opponents said No to everything. Then both sides began to budge, each making concessions in the interest of a consensus. The result was a democratic decision, democratically arrived at, and for that the nation can be pleased and proud.

Public opinion was on the president's side, and he showed appropriate appreciation for it in his final rallying speech. He noted that his tax-cut program seemed to be getting nowhere until "your voices began to be heard."

So what we have at the end of this historic month of July is tax reform momentum brought about by a president who would not give up, supported by a people who believe in him and created by a bi-partisan coalition that gave priority to the public.

None of the nose counters on either side of the House ever came close to openly forecasting the decisive victory chalked up by the administration. Each mentioned guardedly that they'd win by 5 - 10 votes. The vote, backed by 48 Democrats, decided a conservative shift in our economic policies; a radical change in the role of the federal government in the American economy. Stunned and veteran Washington watchers are already calling the economic-political turn of events "The Reagan Revolution."

Interestingly, it was House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill who months ago told Democratic colleagues that President Reagan had the momentum — and probably the votes. He urged Democrats to go along to get along. Many younger Democrats were enraged at this blunt assessment. They began to suggest aloud that canny old Tip, a politician with 40 years' experience, had lost his grip and maybe should be replaced. To quiet rebellion in his own Young Turk ranks, Speaker O'Neill reluctantly went on the attack.

He was right in the first place and now the Democrats find themselves bewitched and bewildered. The president graciously viewed the triumph — "The New Beginning" as he terms it — as a bi-partisan achievement which he hopes will endure for the good of the nation. It took President Reagan 190 days to prove his legislative mastery. The real hard work begins right now to make it stick.

So say we all of us.

Day laborers, above, who had been waiting at the Texas Employment Commission Saturday morning, surround a woman who drove up looking for someone to work in her yard. George, left, who came to Midland a week ago from Illinois. "I got here willing to work," he says, "but there's no place to stay."

the night, George goes to the Texas Employment Commission, 501 N. Loraine St., at 7 a.m. daily and waits with dozens of other day laborers searching for work.

"THEY (TEC) give you a job card and every day you check in for work," George said.

Ed Miller, manager of the Midland TEC office, said the office has a labor pool that is open until noon. Some of the people, according to Miller, are "very good" and want to work. However, he explained it is difficult for the everyday person to differentiate between the day labor-type and the transients.

"Ninety-nine percent of the transients are there (in the situation) by choice. We work with some very good people who just prefer to work on a daily basis."

All the day laborers, who range in age from 24 to 56 and make an average of $30 per day, agree there's no problem finding the work — it's there, but the housing situation interferes with the type of job they take.

"You can't take a job in a restaurant, if you don't have a place to clean yourself. The only other thing to do is outside work, like yardwork or construction," George said.

THOSE WHO ARE sleeping under the stars say if a man is desperate he can use the facilities at the bus station.

"We don't mind the facilities being used, but we discourage people from hanging out," a spokesman for the Greyhound bus station said.

He added that the bus station is not a place to use on a regular basis and it is an inconvenience for their customers if the facilities are monopolized by non-paying customers.

However there are alternatives to the "star-lite motel." If they are lucky, some of the laborers find a type of boarding house, and some even get into a motel. But a majority of the men drift in and out of the Salvation Army.

Ben Petersen, counselor at the Salvation Army, said the facility houses 14 or 15 men each night.

"They come here first. We give them nice, clean lodging and encourage them to find full-time work. We refer them to TEC for work," Petersen said.

THE FIRST NIGHT is free of charge; there is a $10 fee thereafter. This includes a room and two meals a day. The day laborer usually gets paid at the end of the day so the charge is on a daily basis.

The opinion of the laborers vary about the Salvation Army. Some are grateful, while others feel there are too many restrictions.

"You can't find a better environment," he said. "You can't sleep and eat for $10 a night anywhere else and the food is pretty good."

On the other hand, some laborers complain the rules of the house are rigid.

Although Salvation Army officials indicated that as long as the fee is paid there is no limit on a boarder's stay, some laborers complained they were asked to leave after seven days to keep the "riff-raff" out. Additional complaints include lack of hot food, the fact that if a man does not get off work by 7 p.m. he can't get a room, and that a resident can't leave once he checks in.

DURING THE PAST month, according to Petersen, because of a shortage of help, the Salvation Army had to close its doors at 7 p.m., but now the regular hours of 5 to 11 p.m. have resumed. The facility is closed during the day.

Petersen explained the Salvation Army is set up as a dormitory, with check-in at 5 p.m. The men are then shown to their rooms and may shower. Meals are served and lights are out by 9 p.m. If an occupant chooses to leave anytime in the night, he may, but he cannot get back in, Petersen said.

"Some of our residents are on a work-program. If we let one of them (laborers) out at night, they go to the bars and it presents a problem to those trying to avoid that atmosphere," Petersen said.

For reasons not explained, George does not stay at the Salvation Army. But for David Hammerly, the "Sally," as many of its residents refer to it, has been a place to stay while he searches for a permanent job.

"The only thing I don't like about the 'Sally' is the thing about signing in and not being able to get back in if you leave," Hammerly said.

It is an inconvenience for those who work six days a week. "You can't go do your laundry and most of us don't have enough clothes to last until a Sunday," he said.

All these men have something in common. They gather, sharing and complaining about their experiences. But when the laborers are at the TEC it's a different story.

The TEC office is closed Saturdays, but the men still wait around for someone to offer them a day's work. People who use the day laborers' services will drive by to pick and choose from the line of waiting workers. If a dozen men are waiting for work and a job is offered, they scramble at once to get the job.

A woman drove up early Saturday morning in her car looking for a man who previously had worked for her. He wasn't around, so she asked:

"Any of you want to work?"

About nine men dashed to her car at once.

"Ten dollars an hour," he quipped.

"I don't make that much! I need someone who knows the difference between grass and weeds," she said. "I'll pay $4.50 an hour for seven to eight hours of work."

The man accepted the job and as he crawled in the back seat of her car, the rest of the men groaned.

The men resume waiting and waiting. As dusk approaches they are searching and searching — plenty of jobs — but no place to sleep.

Joint meeting scheduled

The Midland County Commissioners and the Midland City Council will hold a joint meeting at 2 p.m. Monday in the Midland County Courthouse to open bids on the city-county owned site of the Midland County Public Library.

The officials are requiring $100,000 in earnest money from each bidder on the property at 301 W. Missouri Ave.

Expected to be high bidder is The First National Bank of Midland, which is planning to build a 40-story tower in a business district to be named Midland Plaza. The old library rests on part of the site which the bank plans to develop.

The bank has indicated it may assist in financing a new library to be constructed on the plaza after it obtains title to the land.

The public sale of the land is by sealed bid, and bidding is open to any financier who can post the $100,000 earnest money. Up for sale are Lots 1 through 12 of Block 87 of the Original Town of Midland.

The proposed library will contain 80,000 square feet in three floors and may cost $4 million or more.

The existing library was built in 1958.

Following the joint session, the commissioners will recess briefly before discussing a proposed septic tank order, setting a public hearing and announcing the 2 p.m. Aug. 10 public hearing on redistricting of commissioner precincts.

Milwaukee institution comes to an end

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Schlitz, long advertised as "the beer that made Milwaukee famous," is closing its brewing operation here after 132 years.

The Joseph Schlitz Brewing Co. announced the shutdown Friday, stunning the city and 720 brewery workers who have been on strike since June 1.

Mayor Henry W. Maier called it "the end of this Milwaukee tradition."

"It was like Pearl Harbor all over again," said Leroy Mattmiller, 39, a 17-year veteran, as he walked a picket line. "Management was sitting there negotiating and then they hit us."

Schlitz, formed in Milwaukee in 1849, joined with such competitors as Pabst, Miller and Blatz to earn for Wisconsin's largest city the reputation of the beer capital of the world.

A week ago, Schlitz announced plans to merge with the G. Heileman Brewing Co. of La Crosse, maker of Old Style, Carling Black Label and Special Export.

Heileman officials said they were not involved in the decision to close the 101-year-old Schlitz brewery, located on the city's northeast side.

The shutdown on Sept. 30 will leave Milwaukee with two major breweries, Pabst and Miller. Schlitz will keep its headquarters here and a canning operation in suburban Oak Creek.

The company said 700 employees would be affected by the closing. Some of the strikers have opted for early retirement.

"It is not a happy moment for our city when a part of our history comes to an end," Maier said. "I am also aware of the role of the company in the growth and development of Milwaukee's reputation as the brewery capital of the world."

"A lot of people have broken hearts right now," said picketer Wayne Donzelli, who has worked at Schlitz for 14 years. "It's terrible. We thought they were going to bargain in good faith. We didn't think they were going to close the place."

Milwaukee will not be the same withot Schlitz said Gus Mader, whose German restaurant is almost as much of a landmark as the brewery.

Schlitz helped Mader's open in 1902, and owned the establishment for years. Schlitz also has been a patron of city entertainment, sponsoring fireworks, circus parades and concerts.

"We always thought the Schlitz brewery was a part of old Milwaukee," Mader said. "We believed their slogan, 'The beer that made Milwaukee famous.'"

Schlitz capitalized on the attention and penned its slogan before the turn of the century, replacing it only recently with ads telling customers they "only go around once in life."

The brewery has been shut down since the strike, reportedly over wages and plans to turn distribution over to a private company.

Guests flee Las Vegas fire

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A smoky "suspicious" fire forced the evacuation of nearly 200 guests from a high-rise tower at the Sahara Hotel, on the glittering Las Vegas Strip, officials say.

Two guests were treated for smoke inhalation as a result of the Friday night fire, which was was quickly controlled by Clark County firefighters.

Haitian transfer approved

BOSTON (AP) — An appeals court ruling has cleared the way for the transfer of 800 Haitian refugees from Miami to Fort Allen in Juana Diaz, Puerto Rico.

The U.S. Court of Appeals on Friday overturned a decision of the U.S. District Court in San Juan that had barred the transfer.

The move had been opposed by about 2,000 families living near the Puerto Rican facility. The Puerto Rican government initially had opposed moving the refugees there, but then said it would accept an agreement reached with the federal government last month.

Woman wills fortune for cats

ANNISTON, Ala. (AP) — An elderly woman who lived on Social Security checks has willed more than $110,000 to her six cats and Auburn University's School of Veterinary Medicine for the study of feline diseases.

Grace Kemper, who died in 1979, had left $91,737 to the veterinary school, authorities said last week. Another $20,000 went to Anniston veterinarian Tom Beam to care for her six cats "until such time as they shall reach their lives' end," the will said.

"It came as a complete surprise to me," Beam said Friday. He said he understands that if the two remaining cats die before the $20,000 is used up, the money will be his.

Detroit issues layoff notices

DETROIT (AP) — The city of Detroit has begun issuing layoff notices to 107 firefighters and 389 other municipal employees, all members of unions which have not agreed to a two-year wage freeze, officials said.

City Labor Relations Director Mark Ulicny said the firefighter layoffs, effective Aug. 15, would eliminate one of the fire department's 10 battalions.

He wasn't sure if the reduction "would have a material affect on overall service." Fire Commissioner Melvin Johnson said response time will be slowed by 12 percent.

Talks between the Detroit Fire Fighters Association, which represents 1,335 firefighters, and the city broke down on Thursday after six hours of negotiations. The layoff notices began going out Friday.

The other employees work in various departments.

Acceptance of pay freezes by all city unions is one of three elements of Mayor Coleman Young's fiscal survival plan for the nation's sixth largest city. Detroit also plans to sell $125 million in long-term municipal bonds and to raise the city income tax.

Also delivered Friday were notices that 502 supervisory level police officers, members of the Lieutenants and Sergeants Association, would be demoted. Their union also has resisted a pay freeze.

The city must present a union-approved wage freeze, commitments to bond sales and a balanced budget to the state by Aug. 15, or it will not be able to collect a 1 percent city income tax increase retroactive to July 1.

A delay even until late August would mean the tax could not be collected until Sept. 1, costing the city $20 million for July and August, City Treasurer Stanley Gruzkowski said.

Fault line runs under nuclear lab

LIVERMORE, Calif. (AP) — A small fault line running under a nuclear weapons laboratory here is listed as active on a proposed state geologic map, which could force building restrictions on the sites, officials said Saturday.

Spokesmen for Sandia National Laboratory and Lawrence Livermore Laboratory said buildings at the neighboring sites were designed to withstand any earthquakes from the Las Positas fault, which was first mapped in 1977.

"We have no idea if the fault will become significantly active in the future, but we found what we believe is probable ground rupture along it after the January 1980 quake," said Earl Hart, manager of the state fault zone program.

If the map prepared by the state Division of Mines and Geology is approved, probably by January 1982, it would require special geologic studies before any structures could be built or expanded within 500 feet of the fault zone.

The fault zone, which showed some movement during a January 1980 earthquake, touches only an unbuilt-upon corner of Lawrence Livermore, which is one of two labs in the country responsible for work on radioactive components of nuclear weapons.

"No buildings are there and none are planned there, so it does not affect us," said Mike Ross, a spokesman for Lawrence Livermore, which is operated by the University of California.

None of the buildings at Sandia, which develops non-nuclear components for the top-secret weapons, falls on the fault line, although the Tritium Research Laboratory and several other buildings fall within the 500-foot zone.

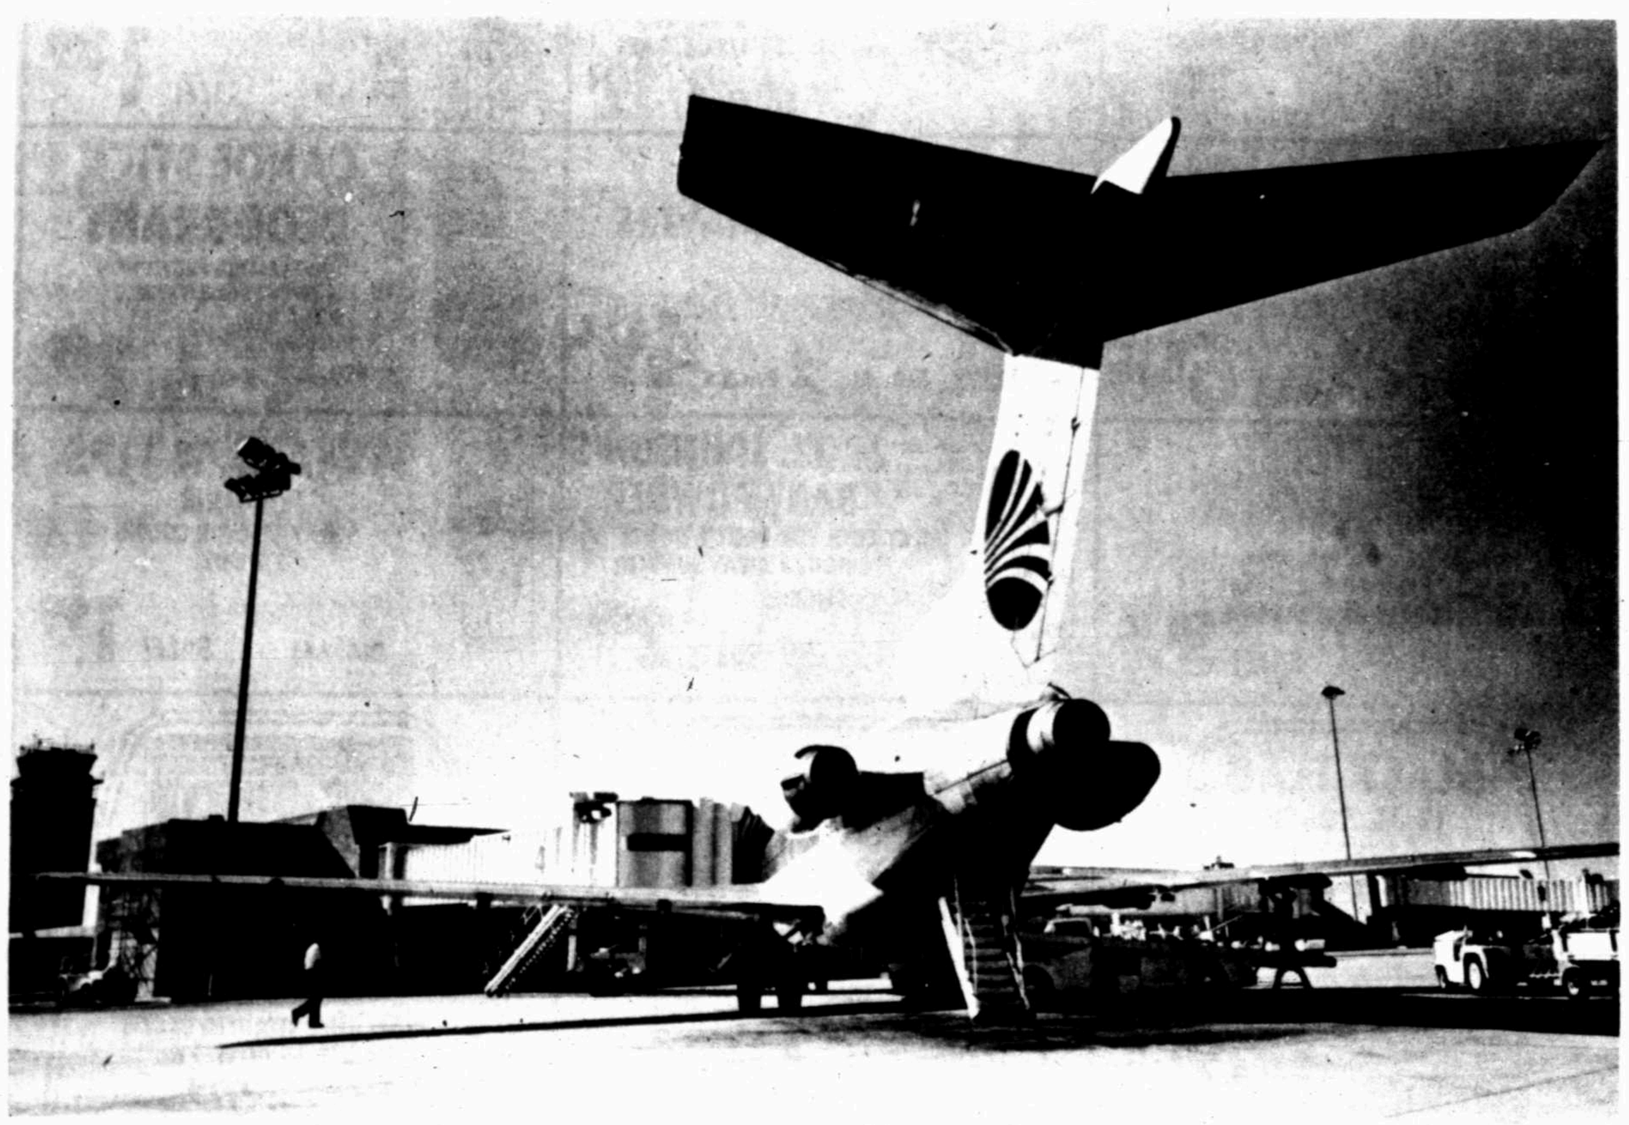
The Midland Regional Airport... just another great part of Midland...a great city!



Without air transportation, Midland might be little more than an isolated oasis in the west Texas sun. The Midland Regional Airport makes us and our industry easily accessible to any part of the country. Over 32,000 people arrive and depart here on the average each month using our commercial airlines. More private and corporate aircraft per capita operate here than in any other city in the nation. Almost 500 aircraft take-off and land at the Midland Regional Airport every single day. Thanks to the Midland Regional Airport, Midland is not an isolated oasis, but a dynamic city of the world, and...at the First National Bank of Midland, we're proud to be a part!

Baker says Reagan cut no deals

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan cut no deals with House Democrats to win support for his tax-cut program, his chief of staff, James A. Baker III, said Saturday.

Instead, said Baker, the president was "pursuing the political process" as consideration of natural gas taxes, Social Security and a peanut subsidy entered the campaign for the tax plan.

Baker, with presidential counselor Edwin Meese III and Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, gave a postmortem on the administration's successful fight for what it claims is the largest tax cut in the nation's history.

The White House chief of staff said that Reagan made no commitments to special interest groups to secure their support for the tax program, a key element in the administration's economic recovery plan. With House and Senate conferees completing work on it Saturday morning, it appeared headed for enactment in time for Reagan to sign it by mid-week.

Baker said three issues were discussed with individual members of Congress as Reagan sought their support: the tax on "windfall profits" stemming from removing price controls from natural gas, a subsidy for peanut farmers, and the $122 minimum monthly Social Security payment.

He said Reagan outlined his opposition on the gas tax, which was opposed by members of Congress from gas-producing states.

Reagan had opposed the peanut subsidy, but when he found it acceptable, he picked up five Democratic votes for his side. "It was probably going to become a reality anyway," Baker said.

On Social Security, Reagan was said by his aides to have told Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., that he would study continuing the minimum Social Security payment to the "truly deserving." The congressman voted for Reagan's tax cut.

"Those aren't deals and that's not dealing," Baker said. "That is pursuing the political process. It's consensus-building and it's exactly the same thing the Democrats were doing on the other side in trying to pull together a majority behind their bill."

Meese, Baker, and Regan figuratively patted each other on the back throughout briefing in the White House press room, and the treasury secretary said the legislation was "95 percent of what the president wanted."

"We can now look forward to the start of the president's (economic) program," he said, indicating that the economic impact of the huge tax bill, which will cost the treasury an estimated $724.5 billion over five years, would not be felt until nine to 12 months have elapsed.

Meese said that he received congratulations on the effort from the chief of staff of West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, with whom he spoke Saturday morning, while Reagan was at Camp David, Md., for the weekend.

Land-based missile system still under consideration

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee said Saturday that he has been assured that the Reagan administration has made no decision on scrapping plans for a land-based MX nuclear missile system.

Sen. John G. Tower, R-Texas, told a news conference he doubted a proposal for an air-based MX would get through Congress, despite strong opposition from some Western senators to a land-based system.

"The air mobile plan has been carefully studied and virtually discarded by the House and Senate Armed Service Committees as too unreliable, too costly and of questionable survivability," Tower said.

He reacted swiftly to a Washington Post story which said President Reagan "is prepared to recommend" an air-based MX.

At the White House, David R. Gergen, Reagan's chief spokesman, said the president continues to have reservations about a land-based MX, but has made no final decision.

Tower said he was assured by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger Friday night that no decision had been made and that a land-based system has not been ruled out.

"While I don't know at this moment exactly what kind of plan may be forwarded to the president, I am not at all confident that Congress will go along with an air-mobile system, especially one that has already been studied and discarded by most of the experts," Tower said.

The MX concept calls for creating 2,300 missile silos, scattered over a vast area in the West. Missiles would be shuttled from one to another on underground tracks, so Soviet planners would never know where they were, assuring the United States of the ability to respond to a surprise nuclear attack.

But many Westerners have objected to that plan and during his election campaign Reagan expressed opposition to a land-based system.

Compromise may save condor from extinction

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Federal and state officials have worked out a compromise in their efforts to save the majestic California condor from extinction, the Los Angeles Times reported Saturday.

The agreement would allow the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to trap some of the birds for radio tracking and breeding in captivity, but not as many as it had requested, the Times said.

The compromise reportedly was worked out in a series of meetings Friday in the office of state Fish and Game Director Charles Fullerton.

At a state Fish and Game Commission hearing Tuesday, the condor research plan appeared doomed because federal officials refused to accept any state-requested restrictions.

The dispute centered on how many birds could be trapped and how much handling and testing would be permitted.

According to the agreement, Fish and Wildlife, which works in conjunction with National Audubon Society researchers on condor study, would be allowed to attach radio monitors to two of the fewer than 30 birds left alive.

Fish and Wildlife agents had wanted to monitor six in the first year of the plan. By tracking the birds, researchers hope to find clues to what is causing the population to die.

Under the agreement, the researchers could ask for permission to radio-tag more birds if the initial two suffer no ill effects.

In addition, the newspaper said, the state will allow capture of three birds for breeding in captivity.

The compromise still must be approved by the state Fish and Game Commission at its meeting this week.

The initial Fish and Wildlife Service proposal had drawn fire from environmentalists who said more emphasis should be placed on habitat protection and charged that the government was plunging ahead with an overambitious program at the risk of speeding the condor's decline.

The largest North American land bird, the condor has a wing span of 10 feet.

Pickwicks, from left, John Dennett, Jay Wells and Dee Ann Jones rehearse a scene from Ed Graczyk's "Aesop's Falables" which opens in Theatre I at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., at 2:30 p.m. Thursday. The play, directed by Midland Community Theatre's assistant director Ted Strickland, runs Friday at 2:30 p.m. and Saturday at 1 and 3 p.m. The Pickwick Players are the youth theater at MCT. Tickets may be purchased at the door, or by calling MCT's box office at 682-4111.

Council says budget cuts bad news

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Council on the Arts said Saturday the Reagan administration's budget and tax cuts foretell "a devastating blow" to private as well as government support for the arts.

The council, a government advisory panel of prominent figures from the art world, also predicted that serious artists are going to find life more difficult in the future with government aid drying up and the commercial world ever less interested in marketing works that do not promise to be instant, blockbuster successes.

Calling for an increase, rather than a scheduled decrease, in government support for individual artists, the council said:

"The public does not really understand why the federal government supports individual artists at all. Most people assume that a good artist will make a living or that, in the immutable order of the universe, he must prove his dedication to art by courting starvation."

Among the council's members are singer Theodore Bikel, choreographer Robert Joffrey, director Harold Prince, conductor Erich Leinsdorf, author Toni Morrison and architect I.M. Pei.

The council, an advisory arm of the National Endowment for the Arts, presented its report to the Presidential Task Force on the Arts and the Humanities appointed in May by President Reagan. The co-chairmen of the task force are movie actor Charlton Heston and educator Hanna H. Gray, president of the University of Chicago.

Reagan asked the task force to report by Labor Day on how private support might offset cuts in the budgets of the arts and humanities endowments.

Reagan proposed that the $175 million arts endowment budget for the fiscal year that starts Oct. 1 be halved from $175 million to $88 million. Congress voted Friday to provide $119 million. Reagan argued that the business community could fill the gap, but the council disagreed.

"As the pressure builds on states, municipalities, corporations and foundations to make up the difference caused by reductions in social welfare and other federal programs, there will undoubtedly be an impact on their ability to increase — perhaps even to continue — their present support for the arts," the council said.

It said Reagan's tax cuts also may discourage private support for the arts. "If higher tax rates have been, as we all believe, an incentive to charitable giving, then the converse may well be true."

The report concluded: "To time a harsh reduction in federal support to occur simultaneously with this potential erosion in the customary support from non-federal support would be to deal arts organizations a devastating blow."

It said the prospect of stepped-up corporate support for individual artists is bleak.

"Corporations do not take artistic risks with their money," it said. "They support the traditional, the known, the visible aspects of the arts."

In also noted that most corporations lack the staff to evaluate individual artists and so give all their arts aid to organizations.

The report said the average artist earned $7,900 annually between 1970 and 1976, with no increase to match the 47 percent inflation rate of that period.

Chayefsky dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Paddy Chayefsky, the award-winning screenwriter of such films as "Network" and "Marty," died Saturday of cancer at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center. He was 58.

Jaime Gill, spokesman for the hospital, said Chayefsky's illness had been brief.

MCT production needs help

Know anyone with an authentic World War II British General's uniform complete with appropriate medals and ribbons?

Locating one is just one of the challenges facing Midland Community Theatre production crews when work begins Aug. 12 on MCT's production of Agatha Christie's "10 Little Indians."

The prop crew will be searching for or making 10 statuettes representing the 10 Little Indians of nursery rhyme fame. They also will be looking for or making a large needlepoint sample with the nursery rhyme on it.

Tryouts for "10 Little Indians" will be held today at 3 p.m. and Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Redfern Room at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. Perusal copies of the script may be picked up in the business office. Roles are available for three women and eight men, with ages ranging from early 20s to mid-70s.

It is not necessary to be a MCT member to take part in a MCT production.

Positions are also available in all of the production crews. "Ten Little Indians" opens Sept. 6 and runs through the 26th in Theatre I. The show is directed by MCT's assistant director Ted Strickland.

For more information call the theater's business office at 682-2544.

Pickwick production planned

Ed Graczyk's rock musical "Aesop's Falables" will open Thursday at 2:30 p.m. in Theatre I at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

The production is being presented by the Pickwick Players. Other show times include Friday at 2:30 and Saturday at 1 and 3 p.m.

Although the Pickwick's normally offer two summer sessions, with the departure of the Midland Community Theatre Youth Theatre director, Louis Moloney, the summer program had to be curtailed. Moloney left Midland after a six months residency at MCT to return to Austin to further his theatrical training.

MCT's assistant director, Ted Strickland, is directing "Aesop's Falables." Originally produced at MCT in 1969, "Aesop's Falables" has become a part of the standard Children's Theatre repertory across the U.S.

The play is based on "Aesop's Fables" and the stories of "The Tortoise and The Hare," "The Country Mouse and the Pail of Milk" and "The Grasshopper and The Ant," complete with a new and modern twist.

Presley attorney asks payments be halted

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — An attorney for Elvis Presley's 12-year-old daughter has asked a court to halt payments the late entertainer's manager is receiving from Presley records and movies.

Blanchard E. Tual, attorney for Lisa Marie Presley, accused Col. Tom Parker, Presley's longtime manager, and RCA Records of "collusion, conspiracy, fraud, misrepresentation, bad faith and overreaching" in some of their dealings with Presley.

Tual was appointed by a Probate Court judge in May 1980 to protect Lisa's rights in the settling of her father's estate. Last September, he accused Parker of mishandling Presley's business affairs and criticized an agreement between the singer and his manager that gave Parker half of Presley's revenue for life.

In a report filed in Probate Court Friday, Tual charged that RCA paid Parker to keep Presley in line while the record company cheated the star.

Tual recommended that the court file suit to void all previous contracts with Parker.

"There is no basis for any accusations against this company in relation to its dealings with Elvis or his estate or Col. Parker," RCA said in a statement issued late Friday night.

Parker, 71, of Los Angeles, was unavailable for comment.

Presley died of heart failure in 1977 at the age of 42. Lisa is his only child.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music's newest duo — Willie Nelson and veteran Webb Pierce — got together because of a newspaper item.

The two have recorded an album, tentatively titled "Willie and Webb," at Nelson's studio in Austin, Texas. It consists of duet versions of such Pierce classics as "More and More" and "Back Street Affair."

Pierce, 55, whose records dominated country music in the mid-1950s, said the two got together after he read a newspaper story in which the 48-year-old Nelson said he planned to continue recording despite his recent movie career.

"After all, I haven't done my Webb Pierce album yet," Nelson said.

"When I saw what he said in the paper, I thought I'd just call him and see if he was really interested in doing an album," Pierce said. "Willie said he'd love to do it and told me to come see him in Austin to figure out a time to record it."

Nelson has recorded extensively in the past with Waylon Jennings.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Actress Judy Carne has been awarded $95,000 in damages from her ex-husband as a result of an auto accident in which she suffered a broken neck.

Miss Carne, 42, testified that she was unable to work for more than a year after the 1978 accident in which a car driven by her former husband, Robert A. Bergmann, struck a utility pole in suburban Bucks County.

"I'm really, really pleased after a very horrible and hard week," she said Friday after the trial. "They really threw the book at me, accusing me of being self-destructive in the past and dredging up all kinds of lurid details — making them sound so disgusting. Now it's a wonderful feeling."

The U.S. District Court jury awarded her $45,000 for lost wages and $50,000 for pain and suffering.

Miss Carne, the "sock-it-to-me" woman on the old "Laugh-In" television series, also starred in the TV series "Love on a Rooftop" and on Broadway in a revival of the musical "The Boyfriend."

Indian art exhibition on view in Fort Worth

FORT WORTH — "Manifestations of Shiva," one of the largest and most important exhibitions of the art of India shown in the U.S., is on view at the Kimbell Art Museum through Sept. 27. It focuses on a single god — Shiva — who is worshipped by millions of Hindus.

The many visible forms assumed by the god over the centuries are shown in almost 200 objects, including outstanding examples of Indian painting and temple sculptures in stone and bronze. Spanning 2,000 years of Hindu art, the objects are on loan from museums and private collections in India, Nepal, Europe, Canada and the U.S.

Shiva appears in human, animal and abstract forms, each manifestation reflecting a different side of his nature and of the universe. The contradictory forms of the god encompass almost everything of consequence on human life, serving both psychological and spiritual needs. Shiva is represented as both creator and destroyer, male and female, erotic and ascetic, sensuous and severe — everything and its opposite. As lord of the arts, particularly of the dance, Shive is central to Hindu artistic expression.

To assist the visitor toward a greater understanding of this ambiguous and complex god, as well as the life and culture of India, the Kimbell has arranged numerous special events. These include free slide-tape and film presentations, dance performances and lectures.

An audio-tour of the exhibition also will be offered for $2, or $1 for students and visitors over 65. The exhibition, which will be mounted in the north galleries and lower lobby gallery of the museum, will be free and open to the public.

The film "Manifestations of Shiva" will be shown at 2 p.m. weekdays beginning Thursday. A series of eight feature films by noted Indian directors will be presented on weekends, beginning at 2 p.m. every Saturday and Sunday. An eight-minute slide-tape presentation on Indian temples, their decoration and ritual use, will run continuously in the Kimbell auditorium from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and 3 to 4 p.m. daily.

The exhibition, which closed in Philadelphia in June, will travel from Forth Worth to two other museums, the Seattle Art Museum and the Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

The show was made possible by grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities, a federal agency; the Atlantic Richfield Foundation; The Pew Memorial Trust; Air India; and the Indo-U.S. Subcommission on Education and Culture.

The Permian Civic Ballet Association is sponsoring a special ballet summer workshop at Audrey Walker's School of Dance, 3320 N. Big Spring St., Monday through Aug. 14.

Instructors for the two-week workshop are Anne Burton, who choreographed and danced the leading role in the association's spring presentation of "Coppelia," Andrew Kuharsky, assistant director of the Carolina Ballet Theatre, and Tom Pazik, co-director of the Atlanta Ballet. Pazik also has choreographed for the Metropolitan Opera Ballet and the Boston Ballet.

Classes are Classical Barre, junior, intermediate and senior; Variations and Mime, intermediate and senior; Character Modern, intermediate and senior; and Classical Ballet, senior.

For more information contact Ms. Walker at 682-9761.

Pruitt paintings to be on display

SNYDER — A retrospective exhibition of the paintings of cowboy artist A. Kelly Pruitt will be on display at the Diamond M Museum of Fine Arts at Snyder beginning today and closing Aug. 17.

Artist, writer and lecturer, Pruitt is included in "Who's Who in American Art," Ed Ainsworth's "The Cowboy in Art," and Patricia Janis Broder's "Bronzes of the American West." Pruitt has written two books of poetry, "The North Wind" and "Travelers from the Long Night," and a novel based on his childhood, "Wild Red from Presidio."

An open reception for Pruitt will be held at the museum, 909 E. 25th St., today from 1 to 4 p.m., with Pruitt demonstrating his painting techniques. The reception is free and the public is invited to attend.

Wounded lawmaker returns home in guarded convoy

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The freshman GOP lawmaker wounded when an unknown assailant fired four shotgun blasts left an Austin hospital Saturday and headed home in a guarded convoy.

"I won't lie to you. I'm a little scared right now," Rep. Mike Martin, 29, of Longview said at a news conference before leaving Brackenridge Hospital.

Investigators, who have few leads and no suspects in the case, first took Martin to the scene of the shooting, the trailer park where he lives during legislative sessions. Martin had parked his car at the park at 2:40 a.m. Friday when he was hit in the left arm by shotgun fire.

Among the possible motives being checked is Martin's investigation of bidding on a state prison construction contract. He said he asked the attorney general's office to look into the bids on a $35-million job after a constituent asked him about it.

The inquiry led to a re-bidding for the job. Asked whether the prison bids led to his shooting, Martin said, "I can't comment on that."

Martin ran on a single-issue platform, the teaching of creation science in public schools. It was the only bill he filed during the recent session; it did not pass.

"Whoever did this was pretty sharp about not leaving any clues. This is the only thing that frightens me, no clues," said Martin, who said he was uneasy that the assailant had not been caught.

HOUSTON (AP) — Defense lawyers for investor Markham Duff-Smith, whose case took a battering when a key defense witness switched sides, face closing arguments Monday after scuttling plans to put their client on the witness stand.

Duff-Smith is being tried on charges of plotting the 1975 strangulation of his adoptive mother, Gertrude Zabolio. He also is accused of arranging the 1979 shooting deaths of his sister, Diana Wanstrath, her husband John and their 14-month-old son, Kevin.

Prosecutors say Duff-Smith plotted the deaths so he could inherit his family's money. The defense claims Duff-Smith was framed and that prosecution witnesses committed perjury.

Defense attorneys decided not to put Duff-Smith on the stand after their key witness surprised the courtroom Friday when he switched sides and became a witness for the prosecution.

Jerry Saul Eikenhorst, a convicted thief brought here from the state prison, reduced defense lawyers to near panic and at one point to arguing among themselves as the unexpected drama unfolded.

Eikenhorst, a jailmate of Duff-Smith, was called to the stand by defense attorney Candelario Elizondo, supposedly to tell jurors that he had heard a major prosecution witness say he intended to lie in court.

The defense lawyers said Paul MacDonald, a confessed "middleman" in the Zabolio hired killing, had never met Duff-Smith and lied on the witness stand when he told jurors that he had. Eikenhorst's testimony was supposed to back that up.

Eikenhorst said "yes," that MacDonald had told him in the jail that he had met Duff-Smith.

But when Elizondo asked the key question — did MacDonald ever change his story and confess that he really never met Duff-Smith — Eikenhorst's answer of "No" elicited gasps from the packed courtroom.

At that point lead defense lawyer Blaine tried to halt the questioning, saying, "Judge, this is a complete surprise. We'd like to impeach this witness."

But Elizondo continued, in a desperate attempt to salvage the defense's case. He produced a letter Eikenhorst had written him outlining MacDonald's admitted "lies."

Eikenhorst said he wrote the letter because he'd "been offered some help if I testified."

"Who offered you the help?" Elizondo asked.

"Markham Duff-Smith," Eikenhorst said.

Duff-Smith leaned over and talked animatedly with his obviously shocked attorneys, but otherwise showed no response to the damaging revelation.

In the hallway after Friday's session, Blaine just shook his head when asked if the day's testimony had changed his final argument strategy.

"It certainly puts a different light on it," Blaine said. "But I hope all isn't lost."

Collins declares for Bentsen's seat

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Rep. Jim Collins, a North Dallas conservative Republican, has filed a declaration of candidacy for the U.S. Senate seat now held by Democrat Lloyd Bentsen.

The statement, filed last week in Washington with no public announcement, legally makes Collins a Senate candidate.

Rocket testing delayed to Tuesday

MATAGORDA ISLAND, Texas (AP) — The president of a commercial space flight company says his inyestors will pay "whatever it takes" to get their 55-foot rocket into space, despite a series of technical and bureaucratic roadblocks.

Plagued by a series of minor, nagging problems, engineers have pushed back a critical engine test on the 55-foot rocket Percheron until at least Tuesday.

Heart patient's prognosis 'guarded'

HOUSTON (AP) — The prognosis for a Dutch heart-transplant patient who lived 54 hours on an artificial heart remained "guarded" Saturday as the use of the controversial plastic organ received the backing of a watchdog committee.

Willebrordus A. Meuffels remained in critical but stable condition, according to a spokesman at the Texas Heart Institute here.

Southwest Austin residents evacuated

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Hundreds of residents of southwest Austin subdivisions fled their homes Saturday when a ruptured gas pipeline released flammable and toxic fumes into the air, police said.

Austin Police Sgt. Robert Lewallen said three-square mile area was evacuated because of the dangerous gas leak. A high school was opened as an evacuation center.

Dallas police officer dies

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas police officer who suffered fatal injuries after being struck by a pickup truck died in a hospital emergency room where his fiancee was working, friends of the dead officer said.

Involuntary manslaughter charges were pending Saturday against a 46-year-old man in the death of Charles J. Maltese Jr., who was killed while trying to divert traffic from a pedestrian fatality, authorities said.

Reaching for the stars

Text by Patrick Dearen

A thunderhead hovers over Mount Locke and McDonald Observatory near Fort Davis. At right, astronomer Dr. Edward Nather of The University of Texas stands before 6,650-foot Mount Fowlkes or Flat Top, the nearer mountain whose summit lies just beyond the end of the small road. Here, he hopes, the planet's largest telescope will perch by 1986 and make McDonald the primary observatory in the world.

McDONALD OBSERVATORY — The summit of Mount Fowlkes lies some 200 feet below that of Mount Locke and its twin telescopic domes one mile distant, but in consideration of its possibile significance to the future of the astronomical world it towers light years above it.

For here, a giant 300-inch telescope which could revolutionize mankind's concept of the universe and make other observatories of the world obsolete may someday be situated, perhaps as soon as 1986.

"We are standing at the brink of a new era," said McDonald observatory head and University of Texas at Austin astronomer Dr. Harlan Smith.

The fruition of such a project, he and others believe, will mark a monumental moment in mankind's quest for his own future through delving into the past. For a telescope with a 300-inch mirror will summon unnamed galaxies across unthinkable galactic distances to these grass-covered ridges and spires of the Davis Mountains, calling forth worlds which flourished eons before our own ever was conceived.

BUT IT APPEARS that the ascent of the world's largest telescope to the summit of Mt. Fowlkes, or Flat Top as it is known locally, poses just as vast a challenge as a mountaineer's scaling of the world's most demanding peak. Obstacles loom foreboding at every vertical meter, but they are not chimneys or cracks or sheer precipice, but massive battlements of silver and gold — $46 million worth.

"I've discovered it's not an easy thing to do to raise $20 or $30 million," said Dr. Smith. "It looks like it's going to be a two or three year thing instead of two or three months."

"We were wildly excited, thinking we'd have all the money in a year," amplified Dr. Edward Nather, UT astronomer and member of the telescope steering committee. "But nobody comes up with that type of money without preparation, without lead time. What we hope to do is use private funds throughout the project...but it takes a long time to supply all the information to (potential donors)."

While the concept of a giant telescope at McDonald has been germinating within the mind of Dr. Smith 10 years, actual solicitation of funds began only four months ago.

"EFFECTIVELY WE'RE just well started," he explained. "We've had a lot of encouragement, and the first $100,000 has come in from four foundations...and individuals. The really large donors ordinarily need a considerably long time, to think long and hard and readjust their funding pattern. I suppose realistically we're looking at a one or two-year time period (for acquisition of funds)."

The possibility exists that the UT Board of Regents could furnish financial support to the project, though no guarantee exists.

"I am convinced if we can come up with $10-$15 million in private funds, the Board of Regents would supply the rest," opined Dr. Nather. "I think they're concerned with an investment in excellence, so I think this is an appealing project in that sense."

Mrs. Jane Blumberg of Seguin, chairman of the academic affairs committee of the Board of Regents, told the Reporter-Telegram she "would not rule out" the possibility of the Regents offering financial assistance to the project.

"I expect that we will be getting more and more information on the telescope," she indicated. "In December we approved it in principle, but there has been no request, suggestion or recommendation so far that we should fund part of it. The people out at McDonald and at the UT Astronomy Department are very enthusiastic and have high hopes for much private funding."

DR. NATHER, who received his Ph.D. from the University of Capetown, South Africa, and has been at UT since 1967, expressed hope the telescope would be completed "Sept. 23, 1986 — my 60th birthday. I picked that rather arbitrarily, because they don't put me out to pasture till I'm 70 and that would give me a full decade to use the telescope."

However, since since six years probably will elapse from the time the "money faucet is turned on" until the giant telescope crowns Mt. Fowlkes in scientific glory, 1987 or 1988 could be a more realistic completion date.

"But we're targeting 1986 — the 150th anniversary of Texas," said Dr. Smith, who hopes to have the first couple of million dollars accumulated within two years so construction of the mirror can begin at Corning Glassware in New York.

"Almost every great telescope that's ever been built started out with a mirror, and before that, with a relatively detailed preliminary design," explained the nationally known scientist, author and teacher. "We have a very thorough preliminary design, and the funds we're currently receiving are going into final detailed design. As soon as we get roughly the first one or two million the mirror will go on order, and then as further support is received, we'll go step by step."

WHILE THE scientific advantage of a 300-inch telescope is obvious — much greater light gathering ability than than any previous instrument — Dr. Nather believes another important reason exists for construction of such a telescope to be operated by The University of Texas at Austin.

"If you simply rest on your laurels, you will find the world has passed you by," he noted. "The 107-inch telescope (at McDonald) was the third largest in the world when built; now, it's thirteenth. There's bigger ones around with better instrumentation. So you have trouble attracting the very best people and very best graduate students if you don't have the very best equipment.

"If we have an endowed chair and the largest telescope on the planet, we're sure to get the best observor around, and he'll attract other people."

Dr. Nather deals primarily with the corpses in the galaxy, studying these intrinsically faint stars to determine what they were like before

Modern-day adventurer

In quest of the unknown

Hiking boots and backpack strapped on, adventurer Richard Galle attacks the trail in his pursuit of the unknown characteristics of the terrain ahead. He's canoed treacherous canyons, scaled awe-inspiring bluffs, spelunked foreboding caverns and hiked mountain trails, all to satisfy his unquenchable craving for freedom and "discovery of new things."

Staff Writer

It was an expedition to test to the utmost his skills as a canoeist, rock climber, backpacker and adventurer intent on survival.

It began in April 1977 for Richard Galle of Midland as a simple canoe trip down the lower canyons of the Rio Grande, one of the wildest and most desolate stretches of river remaining in North America. This was to be the first journey through the canyons for each of the four men in two crafts, and as a result they relied solely on topographical maps to tell them what lay beyond the next bend.

That reliance, he remembers, is what almost resulted in their deaths several days into the canyons.

As his canoe swished smoothly through water while towering bluffs closed in from eitherside like jagged walls of some gigantic hallway, the meandering river plummeted out of sight just ahead.

"THE TOPO MAP indicated Upper Madison Falls, where all canoers must portage," remembers Galle, whose steely eyes and full beard give him a Viking-like appearance. "But I misread the map and thought it was still three hours away, so I decided to go ahead."

It was a mistake. They loomed at the very brink of the falls — not several hours away from them. They dropped down into a stretch of white water which savaged their craft. The roar of the rapids was like the blast of jet engines. A spray hung in the air, swept over their faces and obscured vision. The canoe slashed between awesome boulders, then eased into a short stretch of calm waters.

Ahead, the river suddenly disappeared entirely, amid rocks and boulders and a torrent of mist filling the air like an exploding waterspout.

Each paddle fighting against the pull of the other, the canoe twisted sideways, crashed savagely into a boulder, folded itself about it like metal warping before a torch.

Thrown into the rapids, Galle and his companion fought the current, managed to grasp the boulder, clamber to safety. Seeing their disaster, the other canoeing party pulled out along a canyon wall and stood helplessly surveying their predicament.

Trapped on a boulder in the midst of killer rapids, Galle went under water as his companion held his feet and slashed the packs free from the upended canoe. By chance, he had brought along his climbing rope. Throwing one end a hundred feet away to the other party who tied it to a tree, Galle made his end fast to the boulder and they crossed the white water hand-over-hand Tyrolean Traverse style to shore.

BUT THAT WAS only the start of dangers, for now they were stranded in the middle of more than 100 miles of remote canyons of wall-to-wall water with only a two-man canoe for four persons and their gear.

Galle and his companion did the only thing they could do.— they floated downstream in life-jackets, the frigid early-spring water chilling them to the marrow.

"I could feel the hypothermia coming through me all over," he recalls.

New telescope sought for McDonald Observatory

they burned out. "We're in the stellar graveyard business...so I'd love to get my hands on a telescope that can reach out to the objects beyond the local stellar region," he noted wishfully.

WHILE SITES other than Mount Fowlkes have been proposed for the 300-inch, including privately owned Spring Mountain to the northwest, Fowlkes remains the prime location due to monetary considerations and its proximity to current McDonald facilities.

"Logistically, it costs a lot of money to start a new observing site," noted Dr. Nather. "When you start from scratch, you'll spend a lot of money preparing the site...a road, electricity, facilities...and when funds start getting cut from a project of this nature, it's usually from the scientific angle."

Dr. Nather explained that one of the rationales behind building a 300-inch scope at McDonald is the presence in the Davis Mountains of "a tremendous natural resource — a dark sky."

"That's one of the reasons we've been able to compete with larger telescopes," he noted. 'It's a resource that once you lose, you never reclaim. Now there are other (locations across the nation) with dark skies, but they're remote and hard to get to."

The proposed 300-inch telescope is not the only project under way at McDonald, however — a 30-inch telescope to be located on the ridge between Mount Locke's 107-inch, 82-inch, 36-inch, and 30-inch telescopes and the summit of Mount Fowlkes should be in full operation by late autumn. It has been designed specifically to relieve the 107-inch of the burden imposed by the laser ranging project, in which light beams are bounced from a reflector left on the moon by astronauts.

"IT WILL actually be more efficient than the 107-inch in laser ranging," said Dr. Smith, who listed four reasons:

—It will deal only with one color light rather than the entire spectrum; it will have a 98 percent reflectivity, compared to a typical mirror reflectivity of 80-85 percent.

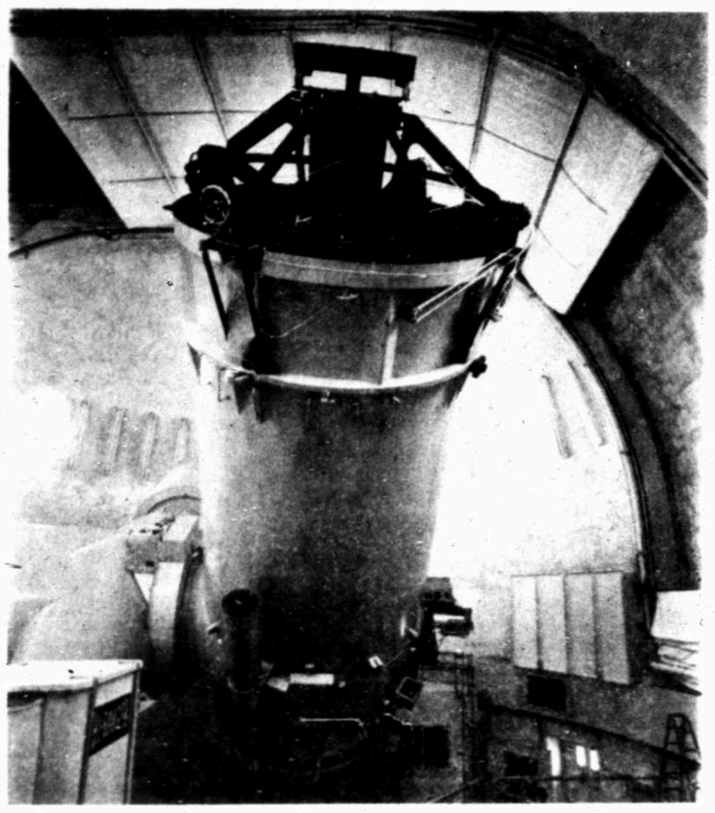
—Its size will allow it to swivel very rapidly to follow nearby satellites, not just the moon.

—Its function will be solely to deal with laser ranging, that project can be pursued many hours a day rather than just a few minutes as in the case of the 107-inch.

—The new technologically advanced laser will fire a beam 10 times per second rather than once every three seconds as in the 107-inch, allowing a better percentage of return signals to be achieved.

The new laser ranging scope may free the 107-inch for pursuit of other scientific endeavors, but Dr. Smith and Dr. Nather will not be satisfied until a giant telescope which would dwarf the 240-inch Russian and 200-inch Palomar scopes completes its arduous climb to the summit of Mount Fowlkes.

Then, as an East German magazine recently proclaimed, the great telescope of man's future will become reality, summoning forth billions of years of the universe's past history to launch man forward in his unending quest for his own destiny.



McDonald Observatory's 107-inch telescope, which would be dwarfed by a 300-inch in the planning stages, will be relieved of the burden of its laser project with completion in the fall of a nearby 30-inch telescope.

Center's summer hours

McDONALD OBSERVATORY — Summer hours for the new W. L. Moody Jr. Visitors Information Center, opened amid dedication ceremonies July 25, have been set.

The $316,000 center will be open from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1 to 7 p.m. Sunday through Aug. 31. From Aug. 31 to May 31 the facility will close at 5 p.m.

More than 100 UT Regents, administrators, observatory advisory council members and other dignitaries were on hand for the official ribbon-cutting at the facility, situated at the base of Mount Locke near Fort Davis.

Within the center nine freestanding and four wall-mounted panels display information on topics such as optical and radio astronomy, the nature of light, constellations, the history of astronomy and astronomical research. Four additional backlighted panels explain stellar evolution, galaxies, the solar system and the sun.

The center is named for the Moody Foundation, which provided funds for the exhibits.

Information on slide shows, lectures and public observing can be obtained by contacting the W. L. Moody Jr. Visitors Information Center, Box 1337, Fort Davis, Texas 79734.

Answer Line

By Franchelle Moore P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702

By FRANCHELLE MOORE

I have three questions for Answer Line.
The first is what is the best and safest way to dispose of arsenic?
When we moved into our house, there was evidence of rodents, so we purchased a container of a rodent-killing compound containing arsenic.
I now would like to dispose of the remainder of the substance.

There was an article in The Reporter-Telegram about a hotline the public could use to call to express their opinions to manufacturers about different products. Could you find the number for me?

Finally, I have read or heard something about a crime prevention program in which the public can assist law enforcement agencies with the apprehension of criminals. Qualifications have to be met by those registering in the project, and identifying cards are issued to those who qualify. Can you tell me anything about this program? — Mrs. M. G. Manning

ANSWER: Regarding your first question about the proper way to dispose of arsenic, a professional Midland exterminator suggests that you place the substance in another container, place this in your garbage bag and set out the bag containing the arsenic the day your garbage is collected.

You evidently read an advertisement appearing in The Reporter-Telegram for the Shoppers' Hotline, a project where the consumer can "talk back to manufacturers about product preferences."

Members of Shoppers' Hotline are issued identification cards, which can be used when shopping at participating stores. The stores are Albertson's on the Andrews Highway, Gibson's on Cuthbert, M Systems on Midland Drive, Rankin Highway and A and Scharbauer Drive and the Safeway stores on West Illinois Avenue and in the Plaza Shopping Center. Information about the program can be obtained at the stores.

Answer Line checked with the Midland Police Department and was informed that the program of citizens being issued identification cards to assist law enforcement agencies does not exist in Midland, and, to their knowledge, not in the state of Texas. There is the Silent Witness project in Midland, which the public can use to report violations.

Answer Line is still receiving calls about barking dogs, and what the public can do about the problem in their neighborhoods. The following is a reprint of the answer given in an earlier Answer Line column.

If the problem is really severe, you should telephone a dispatcher with the Midland Police Department, 683-4281, and report the nuisance.

An officer will check with the neighbor involved and report the complaint. Possibly, until your neighbors learn how to train their dogs not to bark, the canines could remain indoors, not disturbing the entire neighborhood.

As to the how to's of training a dog not to bark, suggest contacting the Midland Animal Shelter, 1601 Orchard Lane, 683-2941. The mentioned party could be put in touch with a reliable obedience training facility.

I am four months pregnant, and my obstetrician says that I must begin looking for a pediatrician now.
I have called every pediatrician in Midland, and they all tell me that their practices are closed. What is the average expectant mother supposed to do? If I cannot get a doctor for my upcoming newborn, that is a pretty sad situation, I believe.
What is the solution? Do we need to work on attracting more doctors like this to Midland? It seems to me that this is a critical need.
And, is there any way that I could get a pediatrician? — Mrs. M.W.

ANSWER: You are right, Answer Line is told by one pediatrician's office that new patients are not being accepted by the majority of Midland pediatricians, because their practices are full and the doctors are working to the limit with the cases they already have.

It was pointed out that Midland pediatricians are doing everything possible to attract more pediatricians to Midland. "We are not sitting on our thumbs" in regard to this problem, one doctor's receptionist said.

It was suggested that you contact one of the newer pediatricians who are practicing in Midland.

New apartments planned in Andrews; Odessa may soon have police chief

ANDREWS — The Andrews City Council has approved plans for 15 additional apartment units in this city which, like Midland, is feeling the oil boom.

Approved were a 12-apartment unit proposed by Roger Bufler and a triplex proposed by B.B. Stephens.

Bufler had requested approval of a 36-unit apartment complex in the 300 block of Southeast Third Street, but councilmen expressed concern about potential problems, such as access for garbage collection, convenient location of dumpsters, play area for children of tenants, and access for law enforcement and fire-emergency vehicles.

●

Sweatt is expected to announce Stewart's appointment to the job in a 9 a.m. Monday press conference at City Hall.

Thirty-three lawmen have applied for the post, which was vacated last spring by Chief Jack Tomlin, a 30-year veteran lawman, who resigned under pressure.

Stewart, 34, has been on the Plainview police force since 1977.

Odessa City Councilman Houston Seabolt, who was a detective on the Odessa police force when Tomlin was ousted, said he was pleased with Sweatt's choice.

STANTON — The Martin County Commissioners' Court is pondering the county's 2.1-million budget, which includes a tentative 12 percent blanket pay raise for county employees.

The court, which has not firmed up the pay hike, also is considering placing a $12,000 salary ceiling on chief county office personnel.

The biggest single item in the 1982 proposed budget is the $957,524 budget for the road-and-bridge department.

●

First runner-up was Jeanie Robertson.

ANDREWS — Andrews doesn't approach education cheaply. And bearing that out is the proposed $1.5 million budget increase, which would hike the 1981-82 school budget to $12 million.

The trustees of the Andrews Independent School District are expected to set the new tax rate at 33.5 cents per $100 valuation on a 100 percent property assessment.

Contributing to the budget increase are the 12.4 percent increase in teachers' salaries and the hiring of an additional 14 elementary teachers to compensate for the growing enrollment in grammar school.

Other factors which contribute to the spiraling budget are the expense of collecting taxes, janitorial services, food services, athletic program and busing, according to Superintendent James Pennington.

STANTON — City taxes here will be upped by 50 percent to finance city services and to fund tentative improvements projects.

The Stanton City Council passed an ordinance to raise the tax rate from 98 cents per $100 valuation to $1.47 per $100 on a 100 percent assessment ratio.

Improvement projects in the offing include a $19,000 sealing coating of city streets and the addition of dumpsters for garbage collection, according to City Manager Garry Rudler.

Stanton's planned $600,000 sewage-treatment plant project was set aside after federal funding for the work was denied due to a nationwide budget cut imposed by the Republican administration.

The government was to pay 85 percent of the sewage-plant cost, and Stanton was to fund the remaining 15 percent, which would amount to $90,000.

●

BIG SPRING — Old-timey fiddling will be a highlight of the Old Settlers Reunion at Comanche Trail Park Pavilion here at 1 p.m. on Saturday.

The fiddling will be judged by the fiddlers themselves. "The judging is probably the fairest method ever devised," according to an Old Settlers news release.

Fiddlers may use acoustic and/or amplified instruments, according to Don Tolle, reunion chairman.

Suit involving hotel fixtures transferred to Midland court

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A Houston promoter's suit against a U.S. Internal Revenue Service agent who allegedly confiscated and auctioned off for back taxes furnishings and memorabilia in the historic El Paisano Hotel in Marfa has been transferred from 142nd State District Court to federal court in Midland.

The case was lodged in the federal court's Midland-Odessa Division upon the motion by the principal defendant, IRS agent Frank J. Valenzuela of El Paso.

Plaintiff in the suit is Jack L. Brown, the Houston promoter who struggled to rejuvenate and make prosperous the 1930s-built hotel in which Elizabeth Taylor, Rock Hudson, James Dean and other stars of the 1950s movie "Giant" slept. The movie was filmed in Marfa between the Davis Mountains and Big Bend National Park.

Brown, who is seeking $280,000 in damages, is alleging that the property was unlawfully seized and sold in an auction last April 15 for $3,986.15 in back federal taxes.

The IRS collected $6,740 from 27 buyers in the auction.

Brown is contending that he owns no back taxes on the property, which he converted to condominiums, apartments and curio shops in the 1970s.

Among the "irreplaceable" items sold in the IRS auction were autographed photographs of "Giant's" actors and actresses; barbed wire collection belonging to American West; mounted wildlife heads once in the hotel's hobby and owned by Midland-Kermit rancher Tom Linebery; a Jesse French piano, tables, desks, chairs, and other furnishings in the lobby, and Harmon Hann paintings.

Brown, as president of El Paisano Condominiums and Patio Apartments, has filed the suit against the IRS agent and against Joe Doe and Jane Doe, the "unidentified purchasers" of the seized property. Also brought into the suit are Linebery, American West, and the Bill O'Bryan Weir Trust of Lea County New Mexico.

In other cases filed in the Midland-Odessa:

—Odessan C. G. Foster's suit against Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. to recover losses for omission of his advertistment in the yellow pages has been transferred to federal court from 244th State District Court in Odessa.

Foster, who owns a self-storage mini-warehouse business, claims that he contracted with a Bell represenrtative in June 1979 for the advertisement, which, he claims, never appeared in the telephone directory.

"Defendant's failure to list plaintiff's business number and advertisement after its acceptance of plaintiff's payment was an unconscionable act," Foster is alleging in his petition. He says that his business has been adversely affected by the omission, which he interprets as a "false, misleading or deceptive acts."

Foster says he lost $5,000 worth of business, as well as $100 "spent for alternative ineffective advertising.

"There was no effective alternative (in advertising) due to defendant's monopoly on the telephone directory business," says Foster.

His warehouse was 90 percent unoccupied for a year, he alleges.

—The 1941 Douglas DC-3 twin-engine cargo aircraft confiscated by the U.S. Customs Service in early 1980 is defendant in a suit filed against the airplane by the U.S. government.

The airplane, registered as N78W to Richard Morley Stewart of Norman, Okla., was seized after it was landed with a 6,000-pound load of marijuana on a ranch south Odessa last Feb. 25, 1980. The pilot and other principals, including the financiers and contact people in the case, have been arrested and handled by the courts.

A hearing is to be held by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton to determine fate of the aircraft, which the U.S. Army Air Forces had designated as the C-47 Skytrain in World War II.

The aircraft, which now has a crippled main landing gear, is impounded at Odessa's Schlemeyer Field.

—Two Odessa women have filed a sex discrimination suit against Affiliated Foods Inc., a cash and carry store.

Plaintiffs in the suit, Lova Sisk and Alma Nealy, alleged that they were fired because they, due to their female sex, "were not strong enough to do the lifting required of a stock clerk."

The petition also says that the women's employer "was afraid that they (Affiliated) would be sued by plaintiffs (Sisk and Nealy) as a result of heavy lifting."

The two women are seeking a court injunction to stop Affiliated from its alleged sex discriminatory practices. Attorneys for the plaintiffs are Michael McLeaish and Melissa Hirsch.

Fire burning out of control

CHALLIS, Idaho (AP) — A forest fire burned of control in heavy timber stands Saturday, and fire officials said they didn't know how soon it could be contained.

Gordon Reid, a spokesman for the Challis National Forest, said the fire, which broke out Thursday 25 miles southwest of Challis in central Idaho, had spread to 750 acres by Saturday morning.

He said 220 firefighters would be on the fire lines by Saturday afternoon, bringing the number of people battling the blaze to 475.

Staff Photos by Paul Gilbert

"...When I unlocked the door of that tiny, empty building at 8 a.m. on June 1, 1969, every instinct told me to turn around and run as far and as fast as I could...." Now, "I feel very lucky to have had the opportunity to serve a great community like Midland and a great institution like Midland College."

— Al Langford

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Dr. Al Langford lit a cigarette and leaned back in his chair to reflect over his past 12 years as president of Midland College

An amused expression crossed his face as he straightened up in his seat and said, "You know, it really hit me today. I drove through those gates this morning and all of a sudden I thought, 'My gosh, this is my next-to-next-to-last morning to ever drive through these gates and enter this office again in my life.' "

And after being totally involved with the college since its birth, Langford had many years of memories to sift through.

"You see, I've always thought of myself as an optimistic person," Langford said, "but when I unlocked the door of that tiny, empty building at 8 a.m. on June 1, 1969, every instinct told me to turn around and run as far and as fast as I could from Midland."

LANGFORD WAS selected to be president of the new Midland College which was to begin classes in September 1969 as part of the Permian Junior College System.

With only four full-time instructors, one administrator and two secretaries in a small, unfurnished building located on Andrews Highway across from the Westwood Cinema, Langford faced the difficult task of putting together classes that would be beneficial to local students.

Langford said he and his small force worked hard, sometimes from seven in the morning until ten or eleven at night, almost everyday. If the front porch needed sweeping, he'd pick up the broom himself.

"When you're developing something new, you know will serve the people of the community down through the years...well, I never got tired," he said.

"Our motto during those years was 'In order to build something with quality, first you have to learn how to crawl before you can walk and walk before you can run.' "

And run they did.

Classes began on Sept. 1, 1969, with 688 students. Only 200 were expected.

THEY QUICKLY outgrew the few Lee High School classrooms they rented at night, and within six months moved to larger facilities in the Breckenridge building on Wall Street.

At this point, the stumbling became a steady walk.

In less than a year and a half, the school had outgrown those facilities and moved to a larger site on Andrews Highway.

Langford said at this location the school was finally able to start its library and Vocational Technological program.

First a part of the Permian Junior College District, MC became a separate community college district in 1973 after the Texas Legislature approved an act enabling the Midland Independent School District to create its own separate college district. A $5.1 million bond issue was passed to purchase land and begin construction of a permanent campus.

MC's first permanent facilities were occupied in January, 1975. But the facilities were already crowded and another bond issue for $6.3 million for construction of two new buildings and an addition to a third was approved in February, 1976.

"EVERY MILESTONE was exciting," Langford said. "Everytime I'd see the way the people of Midland would turn out to vote on one of our bond issues — well, it was just so exciting."

Another exciting time, according to Langford, was when the city had a drive to raise funds for landscaping the campus. "All of the landscaping out there is from private donations from all of Midland. And I mean the entire cross-section," Langford said proudly.

"We would receive the donations in the mail and sometimes I'd pull out two dollar bills with a note that said 'I want to be a part of Midland College.' I'd look at the return address and see that it was from a low-economic section of the city and it would just fill me with excitement.

"That's what has made Midland College: people of this community taking Midland College to their hearts and supporting it in every way," he said.

Langford also gave the students credit for making MC a success. "Our number one concern is the students," he said. "We have never had the attitude that some schools have of doing the students a favor by letting them in. They are doing this institution a favor by coming and allowing their minds to be molded by our administration."

AND THE STUDENTS have been responsible for many of the milestones achieved by the college. Langford paused a moment to reflect on one example.

"Those tennis girls have got to be one of my favorite groups. They all have so much energy," he said. "I remember when they won the first national championship for Midland College in '75 or '76. I had a meeting in South Texas and drove over to Kerrville to watch them play. That was really exciting...our first national championship."

Langford came out of his train of thought and smiled. "I feel very lucky to have had the opportunity to serve a great community like Midland and a great institution like Midland College," he said.

Retirement from his life in education was a difficult decision to make, but Langford looks forward to his new career as an oil entrepreneur.

"And I'm so thankful that the people of Midland have put up with me all of these years."

MC's new president to begin duties Monday

Dr. Jess H. Parrish

For the first time in its 12-year history, Midland College will be under the leadership of a new man. Dr. Jess H. Parrish will assume the position of president on Monday, succeeding Dr. Al G. Langford, who is retiring from his position as founding president in order to become a full-time independent oil operator in Midland.

Parrish comes to MC after serving 10 years as the founding president of Shelby State Community College in Memphis, Tenn.

"The Board of Trustees has selected an outstanding community college president in Jess Parrish and I know that he will accomplish great things," Langford said. "Midland College is in good hands."

During the month of August, Langford will serve as a consultant to the new president and to the Board of Trustees.

"I am looking forward to my association with Midland College," Parrish said soon after moving to Midland this week. "It has an excellent reputation throughout the United States and its Board of Trustees is known for its solidity and experience, as well as its commitment to provide first-rate educational opportunities for the residents of this area.

"Besides, I'm a West Texan who is coming back home."

Parrish is a native of Ballinger and earned his bachelor's degree, his master's degree and his doctorate in education from Texas Tech University. He was an instructor and an administrator at Texas Tech and Angelo State University.

Parrish served as vice president for student affairs at Memphis State University from 1967 to 1970. He then was appointed to become founding president of Shelby State Community College which opened in 1972.

At the time of his appointment as president of MC, Parrish held memberships in: American Association of Community and Junior Colleges, American Psychological Association, Tennessee Association of Student Personnel Administrators, Southwest Association of Student Personnel Administrators, and the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators.

His leadership involvement includes: Board of Directors, American Association of Community and Junior Colleges, 1976-80; Chairman of the Board, AACJC, 1978-79; Commission on Colleges, Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, member of the Committee on Admission and Standards, current; Board of Directors, the Southern Association on Community and Junior Colleges, current; chairman of the Tennessee Council of Community College Presidents, 1976-77; chairman of the Joint Council of Tennessee Presidents, 1976-present; member of the Superintendent's Advisory Council, Memphis Board of Education, 1975-present; board member, Memphis and Shelby County Private Industry Council; board member, Memphis Council on Crimes and Delinquency, current; and executive committee, International/Inter-cultural Consortium of the AACJC, current.

He has served as speaker for the Tennessee Teachers of Home Economics, Tennessee English Association, Southern Bandmasters Association, Ohio Two-Year College Association, Oklahoma Junior College Association, Southern Association of College and University Business Officers, Council of Chief Academic Officers and the Tennessee Community Education Association.

He and his wife, Norma, have two sons: Kip, 29, and Kyle, 27. His hobbies are golf, music and painting.

Pre-registration begins at city's public schools

Students new to Midland public schools and those who have moved from one attendance area to another during the summer will begin pre-registration Monday.

Pupils in grades seven-12 new to Midland and those who have moved into another attendance area will need last year's report card and a copy of their immunization record at the time of pre-registration.

Students in grades 10-12 may pre-register at the resident campus Monday through Friday. Students in grades seven-nine may call the principal's office of the resident school to obtain additional information concerning secondary school pre-registration.

Students new to Midland in grades two-six will need their last year's report card and a copy of their immunization record. First grade and kindergarten pupils new to Midland will need a copy of their birth certificate and a copy of their immunization record.

Elementary students who have moved from one attendance area to another will need only last year's report card to pre-register.

All of these elementary pupils will pre-register on Monday in the principal's office of the resident school.

Parents may call elementary school offices from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. for additional information beginning Monday, Aug. 10.

Parents interested in Head-Start information may call 683-6176 after Aug. 10.

"It got to where we'd float for 30 minutes, get out and shiver for 45, and float for 30 more."

Shorn of their earlier strength, their endurance waning, hypothermia and death looming nearer, by the time they reached San Francisco Canyon two days later Galle decided he could not survive the water any longer.

Strapping on a day pack and slinging his climbing rope across his shoulder, Galle and his companion took the only alternative possible — they abandoned the river.

THEY BEGAN BY scaling a vertical cliff along the American battlement wall, a feat which taxed their weakened muscles. At the summit, Galle studied his topographical map and determined a course for Dryden, a remote settlement of 45 persons in southern Terrell County. Guided by a compass and wearing only tennis shoes and river garb, they were confronted by many miles of jutting gorges, rocky bluffs and rock-strewn desert so rugged that even the most physically able of backpackers would be tested to their limits.

In Galle's case, it was a matter of life and death.

Thirteen hours later, in swirling darkness at three in the morning, they staggered into Dryden — battered but alive.

In Galle's 21 years of backpacking, canoeing, mountaineering and spelunking, that experience, he says, ranks as the ultimate. "That was a trip that could've ended in tragedy," he reflects on this day, sitting in a plush, air-conditioned office at Alamo YMCA, where he serves as association executive and community services director, far from the wilderness he craves.

A LIFELONG Midlander, Galle's entire life has seemed to share a oneness with the backwoods. He began camping with family at age 4, and by the time he was 12 he was solo backpacking. In high school he got his first taste of rock scrambling "to the point of it becoming dangerous," and gained further mountaineering experience as a member of a climbing club at Texas Tech University, where he majored in physical education and psychology. Galle worked for a mountaineering equipment shop in Midland prior to serving as a seasonal ranger in 1973 at Big Bend National Park, where he went through the extensive National Park Service mountain rescue school. He received additional training in rock climbing and rappelling in climbing schools in Colorado.

Having scaled the heights, spelunked the depths and shot the rapids "from California to Florida," Galle has explored some of the most remote, desolate regions in the United States, and it is the adventure, the potential of what may lay around the next turn, beyond the next bluff, within the next cavern chamber that keeps luring him back to the wilderness.

"THAT'S IT — discovery," he readily admits. "I couldn't any more be led on a backpacking trip and have somebody tell me what was around the next turn than anything. If I had my choice of calling in life, it would be a professional explorer. To be paid to discover new things would just be tremendous."

Especially if they were woven deeply into the lore and legend of the wilderness, as in the case of his search for the esoteric Ben Sublette gold mine in the Guadalupe Mountains, now under National Park Service jurisdiction.

The Apache chief Geronimo had claimed the Guadalupes contained the greatest gold cache in the Southwest, and the legend goes that Sublette discovered its location within a cave so situated in the face of a sheer canyon wall that it was attainable only by lowering himself by rope from the cliff's summit. There, according to the old prospector's story, he picked up gold nuggets from the cavern floor like gathering shells on a seashore.

Flying over the Guadalupes a few years ago, a pilot had spotted a cave high in the sheer south wall of McKittrick Canyon and solicited Galle's help in checking it out as a possible location of the lost Sublette mine. Rappelling off the summit of the 2,000-foot precipice, Galle dropped over a bush and suddenly his boots no longer struck canyon wall. Instead, he swung under an overhang and inward, making contact with the roof of a small cavern replete with stalactites and stalagmites. The cavern narrowed quickly to an opening only wide enough to stick his head through, and while he would have liked to have dug it out with a shovel to discover what lay beyond, dangling as he was at the brink of a half-mile abyss he was in a precarious situation to conduct such a maneuver.

TO THIS DAY, he says, it remains unexplored. And as to whether or not old Ben Sublette's gold nuggets still lay within — well, Galle says he'd like to go back and find out someday, with the permission of the National Park Service.

The pursuit of the unknown horizon is not the only reason, though, why Galle abandons civilization "as often as I can" to seek the sensual aspects of the wilderness. It even goes beyond the one-to-one confrontation with nature; it involves the deepest wellsprings of the human experience: the search for self-discovery and the relationship of man with his environment.

"I get over-saturated with people pretty easy; I enjoy solitude," says the 33-year-old veteran of countless solo backpack and canoe trips. "You don't have to be a hermit to enjoy it either. I enjoy getting out with a friend too, but most of the friends I backpack with, we don't communicate much on the trail. We may stop here and there and make a comment about how fantastic something looks, but for the most part we just hike along and enjoy the experience."

The freedom to speak or simply allow oneself to be encompassed by the sensory details of the backcountry is just one appealing aspect of unshackling the bonds of civilization.

"YOU'VE GOT your food, your clothes, your shelter on your back, and there's no one to tell you when to go to bed, when to get up, which direction to go," he says. "The freedom is everything"

Galle, in his position at Alamo YMCA, has the opportunity to introduce other persons to the freedom of the backcountry through Y-sponsored trips to such places as Pecos Wilderness, N.M.; Stone Mountain Ranch in Colorado; Big Bend National Park; and possibly the lower canyons of the Rio Grande in the fall. Furthermore, during the past seven years he has taught a climbing school through Midland College that culminates in a climb and rappel of a 300-foot bluff at Point of Rocks in the Davis Mountains.

A confirmed ecologist, Galle says that he treads lightly upon the backcountry and feels a certain responsibility to see that others do not abuse it. "To a backpacker, there's a certain ownership you feel about a place," he explains. "When I take a group down there, I have the feeling, 'It's my park, and they better take care of it.' "

Galle's 21 years experience in spelunking, canoeing, mountaineering and backpacking have given him tremendous self-assurance in his ability to deal with the backcountry, he says, and he admits he feels much more at ease scaling a mountain or hiking a trail than he does walking the streets of a city.

"OUT IN THE sticks I'm very confident in myself, almost to the point of cockiness," he notes, "and that's one of the things that can get you in trouble."

Such as the time he and a companion were hiking the desolate desert trail known as Telephone Canyon through Big Bend's Dead Horse Mountains, which are infamous for their devastating heat and lack of rainfall. Galle and his companion felt they were aware of the demands of such a trip, however, and earlier had planted caches of water at daily hiking intervals. And so it was with his accustomed confidence that Galle attacked the aptly named Dead Horse Range.

But his over-confidence almost spelled disaster, for what he had assumed would be a manageable hike between water caches proved to be more than they were capable of, and they ran out of life-giving moisture.

Here, in the blazing desert where the swollen sun and strenuous hiking sapped strength and dehydrated a person rapidly, underestimating the rigors of a trail was a matter so deadly serious that even Galle began to be concerned with mere survival.

"I'll admit I was worried" he recalls, visions of cracked lips and tongue cleaving to the roof of his mouth swirling through his eyes. "I was so worried I couldn't go to sleep that night, wondering if we were going to make it."

THIS TIME, they didn't. At least, not to the water supply. But with luck, they stumbled upon a rare find in these desert crags — a tinaja filled with water. And they survived.

If Galle has any real goals as an adventurer — other than merely to survive — it is to explore the backcountry of Oregon and Washington someday, he says. There, such bulwarks of ice and rock as Rainier, Hood and St. Helen's await. But until then, the appeal of nearer wilderness areas will continue to lure him away from the yokes of civilization with frequency.

The call comes swiftly, with suddenness, sometimes in the least likely of locations. It looms strong this day, surrounded as he is by the walls of his office as a vacuum cleaner roars from the hallway beyond. The desire for the scent of pine, the feel of elbows and knees hugging sheer cliff, the taste of remote canyon water, fills his eyes, and he sighs deeply.

"I'm getting cabin fever sitting here talking about it right now," he says.

Soon, no doubt, he will replace the walls with battlements of rock, the noise of the vacuum cleaner with the grinding of his hiking boots against the rubble of a virgin trail.

And he will continue his undying quest to discover what lies just beyond the next ridge, and the one after that.

Browns ring in football

Hero McDonald skips the praise

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Paul McDonald passed the buck Saturday when it came to accepting praise for his role in the Cleveland Browns' 24-10 Pro Football Hall of Fame Game victory over the Atlanta Falcons.

The Browns' No. 2 quarterback praised his offensive line after throwing two second-half touchdown passes to Ricky Feacher.

"The line is eight-tenths of a successful passing game. It provided me the time to throw. My job was simple. All I had to do was complete the passes," he said after the opening game of the National Football League exhibition season.

Atlanta Coach Leeman Bennett promised that the Falcons, the defending National Football Conference Western Division champions, would be better when they face the Browns during the regular season.

"We had a lot of young players in the game. We worked on a lot of one-on-one, a lot of individual things, things that will show up as the season goes along. We won't play this way against the Browns the next time," he said.

Bennett was disappointed over the Falcons' rushing attack, which was good for only 60 yards in 20 attempts. "And we couldn't stop their running. The Browns whipped us in these areas," he said.

Cleveland rolled up 205 yards on the ground and 273 in the air for a total of 478 yards to Atlanta's 266.

McDonald, a left-hander from Southern California, passed 29 and 37 yards to Feacher to lead Cleveland to its first victory in 12 years in the annual Hall of Fame game.

Cleveland's victory came before a record Fawcett Stadium crowd of 23,921 and millions more on national television. It was only the fourth triumph for the AFC in the 11-year rivalry with the NFC in the game.

The NFC has won six games, with one contest ending in a tie.

The Browns and Falcons, defending divisional champions, used their veteran personnel in the first half, with Brian Sipe and Steve Bartkowski quarterbacking the squads, respectively.

However, neither Sipe nor Bartkowski had the success of the less-heralded McDonald, who did not throw a single pass during regular-season play last year.

Sipe, the NFL Player of the Year last fall, hit 13 of 25 passes for 140 yards. Bartkowski, who threw a league-leading 31 touchdown passes for Atlanta last season, hit 10 of 21 attempts for 139 yards. However, neither threw a touchdown pass Saturday.

Fullback Cleo Miller and reserve running back Charles White provided the first-half offense for the Browns. Miller ran 10 times for 98 yards. White scored the only touchdown of the first half, a 1-yard run in the second quarter that gave Cleveland a 10-3 halftime lead.

Don Cockroft opened Cleveland's scoring with a 20-yard field goal late in the first quarter for a 3-0 lead. Atlanta's scoring came on a 33-yard field goal by rookie kicker Mick Luckhurst in the second quarter and a 3-yard run by Mickey Fitzgerald in the third quarter.

The Browns, who won the AFC Central Division title last year with an 11-5 record, had not triumphed in their opening exhibition game since 1979, beating San Francisco 21-16 at Seattle.

McDonald, a second-year pro, played the entire second half. He connected on nine of 14 passes for 133 yards and the two touchdowns. His favorite target was Feacher, a sixth-year pro from Mississippi Valley, who caught four passes for 99 yards.

Atlanta used Mike Moroski at quarterback for the last two quarters. The third-year player from Cal-Davis was 7-for-20 for 73 yards. He threw three interceptions.

Before the game, George Blanda, Willie Davis, Jim Ringo and Morris "Red" Badgro were inducted into the Hall of Fame.

Committee votes to ratify agreement

CHICAGO (AP) — The executive committee of the Major League Players Association voted unanimously Saturday to ratify the agreement reached by negotiators that ended baseball's 50-day strike.

Representatives from all 26 major league clubs attended the three-hour meeting, which was conducted by Marvin Miller, executive director of the union.

"The vote by the executive board was unanimous and we recommended adoption of the agreement," said Miller.

THE PLAYER representatives now will return to their individual clubs for a vote by rank-and-file members of the association.

While the meeting went on, teams held their first formal workouts since the settlement was reached early Friday morning. With only a week in which to get into shape, the workouts resembled a speeded-up spring training. The season is scheduled to resume next Sunday, Aug. 9, with the All Star Game in Cleveland, followed on Monday, Aug. 10, by the resumption of the regular season.

There could be a logistics problem involved there because of a threatened air traffic controllers strike. Federal mediator Ken Moffett, who was involved in the baseball talks, was working on the ATC problem Saturday.

But the players concerned themselves only with the provisions of the settlement.

"We had a long discussion as you well know," said Miller. "The memoranda of the meeting runs between 17 and 18 pages. Everybody wanted to know all of the details involved. The individual clubs will have to ratify the agreement by Tuesday or Wednesday."

WHILE TELLING reporters he never expects any ratification to be a formal procedure, Miller said, "If you want me to guess, I'll say they'll ratify it. It carries my recommendation and that of the executive board."

However, Miller admitted there will be players who are not totally satisfied with the agreement.

"I think there are many players who feel compensation is unjustified in any shape or form," he said. "If some players vote against ratification, I can understand it.

"I don't expect it to be unanimous. I'm just happy to see baseball back on the field," he continued. "This meeting was mostly designed to have a better understanding of the agreement. There were no dissenters here."

Catcher Tim Blackwell, player rep for the Chicago Cubs, concurred. "Everything's real clean as far as I'm concerned," he said. "I don't think we'll have any trouble selling it to the players."

Childers boogies to R-T's top spot

By DORIAN MARTIN
Staff Writer

Gusty winds plagued Saturday's first round, causing higher scores than were expected in the 1981 Midland Reporter-Telegram Men's City Championship at Hogan Park Golf Course. The tournament's final round will be played today.

"It got a little windy. The winds picked up in the middle of the round," explained Rex Worrell, Hogan Park golf pro.

Despite the high scores, several golfers still had a crack at the championship at the end of Saturday's play.

In the championship flight, Boogie Childers was the first round leader with a round of 73. "I'm surprised (to be leading) because I didn't think 73 would lead the thing," he exclaimed.

However, his score didn't leave Childers too much breathing room. Charles Roberts and Ken Harbert were one shot behind at 74 while two more golfers, Kelly Eng and Sam Ellis, turned in rounds of 75.

Noting the close competition, Childers said the tournament "is up for grabs." He didn't know what second round score would be needed to win the flight, but added, "I'd take even par and not show up."

Lu Ladage, a golfer in the second flight, turned in the day's lowest gross score for all flights with a 71. His net score of 60 led his flight's field by four strokes. The second lowest total was turned in by David Crow with a 64.

The third flight co-leaders were Phil Young and Charles Warren. Each turned in a net score of 65.

The fourth flight leader was Rick Poynor with a net score of 63. Moe Gavia's round of 65 put him two strokes behind the leader.

In Friday's practice round, David Teichmann took medalist honors with a round of 72.

Despite who wins the R-T title today, he will be a new champion. Billy Sitton, the defending champion from last year, has moved to Houston and is not in the field this year.

Using a different format this year, players are shooting for two scores, both low net and low gross. Handicaps are being used for the low net winners.

Championship Flight

11:30 — H. Thompson (83), R. Haywood (82), D. Pyle (80), R. Valdez (79); 11:37 — D. Teichmann (79), R. Anthony (79), J. Hart (79); 11:44 — F. Nobles (78), S. Ellis (75), K. Eng (75); 11:51 — C. Roberts (74), K. Harbert (74), B. Childers (73)

Will fans return to nation's parks?

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Will baseball fans forgive, forget and flock back to the ballparks, or will they conduct a strike of their own when the 1981 season resumes after an interruption of nearly two months?

That is the big question facing major league baseball club owners and players in the wake of the first midseason walkout in the sport's history. Idle since June 12, baseball returns with the All-Star Game next Sunday and the resumption of regular season play the following day.

Many are wary of the bitter aftertaste that might be left by the strike that forced cancellation of more than one-third of the season.

"We have to be prepared to accept the wrath of the fans," said Baltimore Orioles General Manager Hank Peters. "They might come out and boo, or they might not come out at all. It will take some time to heal the wounds."

"It's going to be very enlightening to see how the fans react," said Orioles pitcher Jim Palmer. "I won't blame them for being mad."

But Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver feels he has the answer.

"By Aug. 27, nobody will remember the strike — if we're in first place," he said.

Even that wouldn't be enough to win back a couple of Atlanta Braves fans who have been turned off by the strike.

"The season won't mean anything now, it's too late," said Bob Litsey. And John Pralinsky said, "I don't know why they even bothered to come back. It's Falcons (football) season now."

Other fans expressed similar feelings.

"I think the fans should go on strike for the rest of the year. Who needs 'em?" declared Jim Rychlicki, a St. Paul, Minn. cab driver.

"It blew my whole summer," New York bartender Ken McDonnell said of the strike. "I think the fans should get together and boycott them."

"The rest of the baseball season doesn't mean a thing to me now," said Lou Ferari of Baltimore. "In fact, I think I'll go watch a Colts (football) practice rather than an Orioles game."

"I have been a baseball fan all my life but I'm not anymore," said Nancy Fink of Huntington, N.Y. "The strike was ridiculous. I'm for boycotting the remainder of the season."

But that might not be easy for some fans. Jim Bertoni of San Diego compared baseball to smoking.

"You miss it for the first few weeks, then after the withdrawal symptoms are gone you don't have the desire to watch a baseball game. I really don't care anymore," he said.

Will he go back to the ballpark? "I don't know," Bertoni replied. "It's like smoking — once you get started again, it might be hard to stop."

Vito Sanatoro, owner of a restaurant in Seattle that's a popular hangout for sports fans, predicted, "Now that football is starting, the interest in baseball is gone. It will take a long time — I'd say two years — for the game to recover."

But Brian Butler, a bartender at another sports hangout near the Kingdome, feels differently.

"I don't see any boycott," he said. "I've always been a baseball fan and I can't see somebody who's loved the game all his life just staying away. Five years from now, the season will just be another asterisk in the standings."

Pete Grady, a Los Angeles Dodgers fan, has no intention of launching a personal boycott.

"I've got tickets fo Aug. 11 and 2 and I'm anxious to go," said Grady.

District 5-5A teams already at war over 1982 schedule

TERRY WILLIAMSON

Not one down has been played in the 1981 District 5-5A football season, yet some possibly stormy battle lines are already forming for the 1982 season.

The University Interscholastic League, the governing body of high school sports in Texas, has a new ruling, which in effect, says that if any team is not satisfied with the schedule, that team may ask for a new one. This ruling will be in effect in 1982 and schedules will be up for change every two years from that time on if any team desires a change.

IN THE past, the 5-5A schedule only had to be approved by a majority of the schools in the district. As a result, the 5-5A race has been played to a set schedule year in and year out. Now a lone dissenter can change all that according to the UIL.

And a dissenter has already come to the front. San Angelo has asked that the district adopt a new schedule. In fact, Dick Rittman, director of athletics at San Angelo, has drawn up three proposed schedules for the league to consider. It seems that San Angelo doesn't like the idea of playing Big Spring during the final week of the season. They reason that they end the season every year with Big Spring when one or both clubs are out of the race while the other schools are having their intra-city rivalries where interest is high regardless of where the teams stand.

Since then, Odessa High and Big Spring have submitted proposals and the District 5-5A Executive Committee will hold a discussion, and possible vote on the schedule, Tuesday in Big Spring during its regular August meeting.

So if the bottom line reads that San Angelo doesn't want to play Big Spring on the final date of the year, the intra-city matchups can not be held then either.

ALSO IT means that if eight teams can not sit down and agree on a set schedule, a drawing will have to held to determine the schedule. And that means that local teams might have to play at home on the same weekend, which in turn means that some games would have to be played on either Thursday or Saturday. It also means that there is a possibility that the local teams could go as many as three or four weeks without either team playing at home.

It's plain to see that the district members would rather decide on a proposed schedule than go to the draw. Everyone wants to keep all games on Friday nights, and that would be impossible in a draw.

Because of Odessa Ector, Permian and Odessa High have always played one Saturday game each. None of the other district schools have Thursday or Saturday games scheduled.

"I'm not going to submit a schedule to the committee," Midland AD Gil Bartosh said, "but we have requested that we play only Friday night games. I think it is for certain that the Midland High-Lee game will not be played at the end of the season in 1982-83. I would favor a schedule that did keep that game as late in the season as possible and I wouldn't mind seeing us play the Odessa schools during the last week."

JACK BREWER, Odessa athletic director, also said that he is not going to submit a proposed schedule either, but did confirm that Odessa High will submit one.

Neither Midland High coach Pat Culpepper or Midland Lee boss Spike Dykes expressed an interest in submitting a schedule to the committee.

"I have enough trouble trying to decide who to put on the field than trying to figure out when we should play who," Culpepper said. "You have to play everybody sometime, so I don't think it makes much difference. But I want to keep the Friday games with either Midland High or Lee at home and the other on the road. I would vote for any schedule before I would let it go to a draw. I think the draw would be bad for the high school game."

Quickly looking over the three proposals by San Angelo, Culpepper did find one that appeared attractive to him. It included, in order of play, Big Spring, Abilene High, Lee, Abilene Cooper, Odessa Permian, San Angelo and Odessa High. "I could live with that just looking at it off the top of my head, but I don't really care if we can keep the Friday games intact."

DYKES, ON the other hand, seems to be ready to play whenever they tell him to. "If they want to play on Thursday, Friday or Saturday, we'll be there. It doesn't make any difference who you play or when. You have to play everybody sometimes."

But Dykes admits that the draw is not the best way to go. "I think it's in the best interest of high school football to keep all the games on Friday nights. You wouldn't be able to use your facility properly in a schedule coming from a draw. You might have rain during a Thursday game and have to come back and play on it again the next night. You could really tear a field up that way. Also I see no reason for two Midland teams playing games in Abilene on the same weekend."

Dykes looked through the San Angelo proposals and said that any of them would be fine with him.

It is not known if the proposed schedules will be voted on Tuesday, but they will certainly be discussed. It is possible that a vote will not come until after October when the UIL announces the new district alignments.

It will certainly be in the best interest of the league to adopt a schedule without going to a draw, but can you get eight people to agree on one schedule? That seems to be the question right now, and if anyone wants a draw when all the discussions have been held, they will get it. The UIL says so.

Rutherford puts Chaparral on pole

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — Defending national champion Johnny Rutherford led a trio of drivers who broke the Wisconsin State Fair Park track record Saturday, earning the pole position for the A.B. Dick Tony Bettenhausen Classic Indy car race.

Rutherford whipped around the one-mile track at 135.890 mph to take the inside spot on the front row in his brilliant yellow Chaparral, owned by Midland's Jim Hall.

But, Tom Sneva, driving his new March racer, was the first to shatter the one-lap qualifying mark 134.933 mph, set by Danny Ongais in August of 1978.

Sneva roared around the paved one-mile oval at 135.272. But, only moments after Sneva stepped out of his car, Bobby Unser outdid him.

Unser, whose season was badly marred when officials stripped him of his apparent third Indianapolis 500 victory by penalizing him a lap for illegal passing, sped around wide track at 135.380 in his Penske PC-9B.

The 47-year-old Unser, elder of the two racing brothers from Albuquerque, N.M., received the accolades of the crowd and, like Sneva, was besieged by the media.

That's when Rutherford, driving his Cosworth-powered racer, designed by car owner Hall and prepared by chief mechanic Steve Roby, took to the track. His first lap was quick, but well short of Unser, and Sneva. But his second lap, which took just 26.492 seconds, put the three-time Indy winner on the pole for Sunday's 200-mile race.

"We've been kind of down because of all the fast times in practice, and we weren't among 'em," Rutherford said. "But, when the time came, it was all there.

"Actually, on the very last lap in practice, we got into the 26s and the car really felt good. And we had another little trick to pull, and it worked."

The 43-year-old Texan wouldn't say what that trick was, but, with a mischievous smile on his handsome face, he said, "That's for us to know and the other guy's to find out."

Rick Mears, Unser's teammate on the team fielded by Roger Penske, was fourth at 134.519, followed by three-time Indy winner Al Unser, Bobby's younger brother, at 134.168 in the Longhorn entry of Midland owner Bobby Hillin. Gordon Johncock and Steve Krisiloff, both driving for Pat Patrick, were next in their Wildcats at 132.641 and 131.810, respectively.

Although he won the season opener at Phoenix, Rutherford has not had a particularly successful year. He has qualified well for several other races, but the car has been stymied time after time by a variety of mechanical or tire problems.

In fact, Rutherford, the defending champion in this race, led several times in the Rex Mays race, but lost his chance at a victory because of several cut tires.

"You can never foretell something like that, but I feel very confident this week," Rutherford said. "Last year was a Cinderella year for us, but this year we've been struggling.

Thompson holds PGA lead as Hayes is ambushed

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — Mark Hayes lost the lead when he was ambushed by a double bogey on the final hole and Leonard Thompson emerged with a one-stroke advantage Saturday in the third round of the $425,000 Canadian Open Golf Championship.

Thompson, who had taken a four-shot lead with a spectacular, 9-under-par 62 in Friday's second round, went 11 shots higher to a 73. But, when Hayes' watery woes were completed, Thompson still had the top spot in this national championship going into Sunday's final round.

"No excuses," Thompson said. "Just your basic lousy round of golf. I just hit a lot of bad shots."

Hayes, a soft-spoken Oklahoman who hasn't won in four long years, hit only one bad shot, but that one cost him dearly.

With Thompson backing off from the lead, the steady Hayes had crept in front moments after the national television cameras had completed their coverage for the day.

But, from a marginal lie, Hayes went for the green with a 3-wood second shot on the par-5 18th. And he put it in the water.

"With the lie I had, it was a test of nerves and mine didn't stand up," Hayes said. "I made a mistake. I just hit a bad shot, hit it thin."

It led to a double bogey-7 that finished off a 69 that left him at 208, five strokes under par. Thompson completed three trips over the 7,060-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club course in 207, 6 under and still leading.

But, instead of the four-shot advantage he had at the start of the warm, sunny summer day, the margin had dwindled to a single shot and he'd opened the door to a host of challengers, including Tom Kite and Jack Nicklaus.

Kite, who has compiled a enviable record this season that includes finishes of seventh or better in nine of his last 10 starts, had a 3-under-par 68 that put him at 209, only two shots back.

Nicklaus, who designed the Glen Abbey layout in suburban Toronto as a permanent site for the Canadian Open, rallied with three consecutive birdies in a row on the back and posted a third consecutive round of 70.

"Not much different from what I've been doing," said Nicklaus, who has been second four times in this event but has yet to win. "It was kind of middle-of-the-road golf. I made a couple of birdies when I needed to and that was the key to getting me back in the golf tournament."

He was tied at 210, only three back and very much in title contention, with Tom Purtzer, Andy North and Peter Oosterhuis. North, a former U.S. Open champ and runner-up last week in the Anheuser-Busch Classic, and Purtzer each had a third-round 69. Oosterhuis shot 72.

U.S. Open champ David Graham had a 70-212. Lee Trevino, three times a winner in this event, was 71-215. Masters titleholder Tom Watson also matched par 71, despite a double bogey, and was at 216.

Ray Floyd, winner of three American PGA Tour events and the Canadian PGA earlier this year, became ill on the golf course and withdrew.

Caponi breaks away from pack

DANVERS, Mass. (AP) — Dona Caponi chasing millionaire status in her 16th year on the Ladies PGA Golf Tour, broke away from the pack with a third consecutive sub-par round Saturday and took a commanding lead in the $150,000 Boston Five Classic.

Caponi, tied with Carol Mann at 69 after the first round and then with Kathy Young at 137 at the halfway mark of the 72-hole test, fired a 4-under-par 68 for a 54-hole total of 205 at Ferncroft Country Club's 6,008-yard course.

The 36-year-old two-time U.S. Open champion held a 3-stroke lead over playing partner Jan Stephenson, who equaled the women's course record of 66 Friday, but shot a 70 for 208 after three rounds.

Young, winless in three years on the tour and grouped with Caponi and Stephenson, faded with a 5-over-par 77 for 214.

JoAnne Carner, just $35,000 shy of joining Kathy Whitworth as a $1 million winner in the LPGA ranks, moved into third place, with a sizzling 66 for 211, six strokes back.

Barbara Moxness added a 70 to her previous rounds of 72 and 71 for 213 and fourth place. Tied another stroke back were newly crowned U.S. Open champion Pat Bradley, Carolyn Hill, Sandra Palmer, Betsy King and Young.

In the tournament's first controversy, Mann, a member of the LPGA Hall of Fame, and Kyle O'Brien were assessed two stroke penalties for slow play after finishing the round. Mann, who had a bogey 6 on the 18th green, was given an 8, while O'Brien was assessed a 9.

Mann finished the round with a 74 for a total 216 and O'Brien a 76 for 217. Their playing partner, Marlene Floyd, was not charged with slow play and had a 78 for 220.

Caponi, a four-time winner on the tour this year and needing just $40,000 to become a million-dollar winner as an LPGA member, fashioned five birdies and one bogey in her third consecutive par-breaking round.

"I've been playing pretty well but I think it's going to take another sub-par round tomorrow to win," Caponi said of her bid for to win the $22,500 top prize.

Alcorn Ruff-Necks set pace for unbeaten softball teams

Defending state champion Alcorn Ruff-Necks of Victoria heads eight unbeaten teams in the 43-team, double elimination 1981 Texas State Class "A" Women's Slow-Pitch tournament being played at Hogan Park through today.

Out of Midland's 13 teams entered in the meet, Claydesta remains the Tall City's only unbeaten entry. Claydesta opened the tournament by defeating S&S of Wink in the opening round, bombed the Black Angels of Kountze, 15-0, in their second game and edged Midland Kittiwake in their third outing.

Also unbeaten through games at 10 p.m. Saturday were Ricardos of San Angelo; Aggies of College Station; Neff Land & Cattle Company of Crane; Johnny O's of Stephenville; Action Drilling Fluids of Abilene and Chickaree Industries, Inc. of Odessa.

In the late games Saturday, Ricardos played Claydesta; Aggies faced Neff; Johnny O's and Action Drilling tangled; and Chickaree and the Ruff-Necks squared off.

Today at 10:20 a.m. the four unbeaten survivors meet in the semifinals that are scheduled to be played at 12:40 p.m. and the finals to get underway at 3 p.m.

The top two finishes in the Midland tournament advance to the national meet.

Players return for real workouts

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Wayne Krenchicki, a reserve infielder with the Baltimore Orioles, summed up the emotions of many of the 650 major leaguers who returned to the playing fields this weekend for their first workouts since the strike interrupted the 1981 major league baseball season on June 12.

After the tentative agreement between the players and club owners was announced Friday morning, players wasted little time getting their uniforms out of mothballs and sharpening their spikes. Although formal workouts were not scheduled until Saturday, many players turned out for informal sessions on Friday, hours after the settlement was reached.

"Let's get down to business," declared Keith Hernandez, the St. Louis Cardinals' star first baseman, echoing the sentiments of many of the players who rushed back to the diamonds this weekend.

Rookie pitching sensation Fernando Valenzuela, whose baffling screwball provided some of the brightest moments of the pre-strike season, was one of eight Los Angeles Dodgers who showed up for informal workouts Friday.

Cleveland Indians Manager Dave Garcia watched veteran Bert Blyleven throw hard for 20 minutes on Friday and said, "I don't think the ballplayers are going to be too far out of shape. Blyleven's been working out several days a week, and I wouldn't be surprised to see him go nine innings his first time out."

Outfielder Bill North of the San Francisco Giants felt the players would have extra incentive to get back into shape quickly.

"In spring training, it usually takes a hitter about a month to get ready, but the intensity will be a lot higher now," North predicted. "Maybe we can do it a little quicker."

"A club that bounces back and has the pitchers in the best condition might win the whole thing," Craig said. "The key is going to be the pitchers."

That would suit the Baltimore Orioles just fine.

"The last seven weeks of the season are going to put quite a bit of emphasis on pitching," said veteran hurler Jim Palmer, who joined other Orioles for their first workout Saturday. "That could work to our advantage since that's our strength."

J.R. Richard may pitch in exhibition game for Astros

HOUSTON (AP) — J.R. Richard, the hard-throwing righthander who suffered a stroke just over a year ago, may pitch in an exhibition game against the Texas Rangers this week, Houston Astros Manager Bill Virdon said Saturday.

"It's a possibility," Virdon said at the team's first workout following the settlement of major league baseball's 50-day strike. "He's going to throw batting practice Monday night and we'll make a decision then. We might even take him to Dallas."

Houston meets Texas at Arlington Stadium on Thursday night. The Astros then meet the Rangers in the Astrodome on Friday night.

Richard has not hurled his fiery fastball competitively since July 30, 1980, when he suffered a life-threatening stroke during a workout. And some team officials say they still aren't sure Richard has progressed enough to return to the major leagues.

"There are a lot of people who are surprised I can throw, period," Richard said. "I'm not saying I'm totally ready yet. It took me 30 years to build what I had. You've got to give me some time to get it back."

Richard said his vision, endurance and strength have improved since spring training when fielding and catching balls proved difficult because of his weakened left side.

"Now,I'm reall coming along. I've been pushing a lot of weights, some 200 to 300 pounds," he said. "No heavier than that. I don't want to kill myself."

Cubs sweep Travelers before heading home

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — The Midland Cubs rode the fine pitching of Craig Lefferts and Henry Mack to gain a doubleheader sweep over the Arkansas Travelers here Saturday night to move 1½ games in front of the San Antonio Dodgers, who also won Saturday over Tulsa.

Over 6,000 fans watched the Cubs beat the Travs 3-2 in the first game and 2-1 in the second.

In the opener, Craig Lefferts handcuffed the Travelers on three hits as he gained his 10th victory against nine defeats.

Lefferts made a strong bid to pick up his sixth shutout of the season, but a bad pitch in the fourth was hit out of the park for a two-run homer by Dave Kable. After Kable's 16th homer in the fourth, Lefferts retired the last 12 men he faced in going the distance.

The Cubs had grabbed a 2-0 lead in the top of the fourth. With two outs, Fritz Connally's fly ball was muffed by rightfielder Luis Roman and Connally scooted into second. Joe Carter followed with an RBI double and J.T. Mitchell walked. Carter and Michell then executed a double steal and Carter scored when Kable fumbled Randy LaVigne's grounder at first.

After Kable tied it in the bottom of the inning, the Cubs scored the winning run when Mel Hall led off with a single, went to second on a wild pitch and raced home on a single by Carmello Martinez.

The only serious threat Arkansas could mount against Lefferts came in the opening frame. Gotay Mills opened the game with an infield hit and Peachy Guiterrez walked to put men at first and second with no outs. Lefferts got out of the jam by fanning the next three batters.

In the second game, Arkansas jumped to a 1-0 lead with four straight hits off Mack, but got only one run out of it. Midland came back to tie it in the second Fritz Connally walked and scored on a two-out double by Mitchell.

The Cubs won it in the fourth when Carter doubled in Mel Hall, who had singled and stole second.

Mack went 5 2/3 innings to get the win, but Phil Nastu came in to get the final out in the sixth and Rob Blyth picked up a save in the seventh when he came in to strikeout the final Arkansas batter.

The Cubs return to Cubs Stadium Tuesday to face San Antonio in a key series. The Cubs won four of five games against Arkansas and won eight of ten on the year against the Travs.

Blowout lead unchanged

The team of Randy Geiselman, Steve Whiteside, Steve Cromwell and Ernie Swart fired a second-round 65 for a two day total of 123 as they maintained a slender one-stroke lead in the championship flight of the fifth annual Ranchland Hills County Club Blowout, a four-man team best ball tournament.

Tied for second at 124 were the teams of Wayne Roye, C.E. Boyd, Craig Campbell, Jamie Winkel; and Ron Hicks, Tony Farish, Jeff Lutke and Steve Hammil. Roye's team turned in a 62 for the second round's best card in the championship flight. The 62 is one over par for the course.

First day leaders in the first flight, the team of Bill Hull, Jeff Hill, Kyle Rowland and Monty Watson, carded a 64 to go with their opening 64, but saw three other teams join them at the top of the leader board. The teams of Wayne Young, Mike Mullins, David Williams; and Ken Sewell, Ted Ferguson, Dr. Dean Strack, Graham Mackey shot second-round 63s while the team of Joel Mayes, Mike Mahan, Tommy Walker and Richard White carded a 62 to forge a four-way tie at 138 after two rounds.

In the second flight, the team of Buck Watkins, Mark Woodfin, Ken Stockton and Mark Martin shot a 65 to break a four-way tie and take a commanding three-shot lead in today's final round.

After four teams shared the first round lead at 70 in the third flight, the team of Haney Atyia, Freid Atyia, Rick Peterson and Bob Hellinghausen recorded a 67 to take a one shot lead through the second round.

The team of Gene McDaniel, Buddy Redden, John Carey and Franklin carded a 64 Saturday to overtake the first-round fourth flight leaders captained by Steve Holder. McDaniel's team holds a three-stroke advantage going into today's action.

In the fifth flight, the team captained by Cherokee Sloan broke a three-team logjam by shooting a 68 to take a one-stroke lead after the second round.

Sixth flight leaders, Frank Estep, Tom Newman, Ron Pepper and John Casey added a 72 to their opening 68 to grab a four-stroke lead going into today's final round.

Four teams share the seventh flight lead after two rounds. Captains for these teams were Tom Bius, Ralph Huggins and Mike White.

The championship and second flight will tee off today from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m. First and third flights will tee from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m. Flights fourth and sixth tee off 9 a.m. to 10 a.m. while the fifth and seventh flights get things started between 8 a.m. and 9 a.m.

Padres offer free opener

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Calling it a first in baseball and an official apology to the fans, San Diego Padres owner Ray Kroc announced Saturday that all seats will be free for the club's reopener Aug. 10 against Atlanta.

Kroc, the 78-year-old fast-food king, said the open house is "our way of telling the fans we're sorry" for the 50-day-old strike.

All 50,000 seats at San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium will be given away on game day on a first-come, first-serve basis, team president Ballard Smith said. A full house would mean the Padres lose an estimated $250,000 in ticket revenue for the night.

Kroc, founder of the McDonald's fast-food empire, said he hopes the gesture will lessen fan animosity toward the players and owners.

"Maybe we can let 'em know we're sorry. We want to open the floodgates," said Kroc, who became a local hero in 1974 when he grabbed the microphone during the season opener and publicly criticized the Padres' poor play.

Amistad offers fishermen large, varied bass populations

KENNY REDIN'S
Fin & Feather

Rated Number 2 as Texas' finest fishing lake is Amistad Reservoir. As a bass fishing lake, the Mexico-Texas border impoundment is rated second overall, according to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's statewide bass club survey.

And folks, that's only a few representatives of all those who fish Amistad regularly. Most people, who fish a lot, rate Amistad only as a fine bass lake, but what they are forgetting is the walleye, smallmouth, striped and white bass populations. Not to mention the superb catfishing with rod and reel.

WE RATED Toledo Bend as No. 1, but doubt if this lake will compare to Amistad's bass catching rates. Larger size fish are taken from Toledo Bend more often than from Amistad. But, based on catches per hour, we'd have to say Amistad must be better than Toledo Bend.

As we mentioned in the Toledo story, guides are a must if you really want to learn the lake and know how to fish. Amistad fishing is not as complicated as Toledo Bend, but the lake is so large, a guide would be worth the investment for at least one day, especially if you're new to the lake.

Bass fishing should continue to improve through August and September, tapering off in the middle of November. Mid-summer fishing is tough in the hot hours, but take out a Pico Pop early and late, followed by a plastic worm later in the morning. Fish these baits over the newly discovered moss beds and it's possible to catch a limit of keeper bass in one or two hours.

AS MOST guides say, "Fish the Burro and Zorro Canyon regions of Amistad for best bass action." That's true to some extent, but don't forget about the Pecos River arm, Castle Canyon region and the Box Canyon area. These are also good places to catch bass.

Largemouth bass fishing is still Amistad's top attraction, but striped bass fishing is beginning to take hold rapidly. To date, the new lake record tipped the scales at 30 lbs., 8 ounces, but this record should be shattered soon. Of course, you hear all kinds of reports, but I've talked with guides and striper anglers who claim they've had the new lake record, but couldn't land the big fish. How true, we don't know, but we believe there's some 40 lb. stripers reaming the gin-clear waters of Amistad.

Concentrate your summer time striper fishing in the lake's main deep channel. Stripers tend to follow the channels until they discover a school of shad. Once they've located the forage fish, they will chase the little baitfish to the top and that means nothing but striper fury for 15-20 minutes. It's always a good idea to take along a depth sounder or chart recorder, especially to find the channels. Chart recorders are especially helpful at pinpointing schooled fish. If a school of fish is located, it's wise to drop a big jig or live bream to their depth and hold on.

FOR THE rod and reel catfisherman, Amistad can't be beat. It's simple too! Find a likely region, 15 to 30 yards off the creek channels which has a smooth bottom setting. One day prior to fishing, drop or bait the area with soured grain such as corn or milo. Take your favorite catfish bait out the next day and catch a boatload of catfish. Guides are also helpful in locating good catfish areas.

Something that is relatively new to Amistad waters, but certainly underharvested is the walleye. This huge border lake is full of walleye, but no one fishes for them. Trolling hellbenders and bombers are good methods of locating the waleye, but not a good way to catch them. Once you've caught two or three trolling, anchor and hold in position with the trolling motor and commence using a 3/8 ounce bucktail jig, tipped with a live Canadian nightcrawler. You should get your limit in a hurry.

Another fish that is creating some new excitement around Amistad is the smallmouth bass. This introduced species is reproducing well and growing at an alarming rate.

FISHING FOR this little exotic fish is almost like fishing for the largemouth, but you need to concentrate your efforts around more rocky structures. And you need to use smaller equipment. Small crank baits, 4-inch plastic worms and small bucktail jigs are ideal baits for the scrappy smallmouth.

Although Amistad Reservoir lost a lot of its fame and fishing glory back in the mid 1970s, it's back and better than every before. Since the Amistad Fishery Advisory Committee was formed, fishing has increased. The stocking of the fast-growing Florida bass and the accidental or mysterious showing of aquatic vegetation has put Amistad back on the fishing map. The lake is the second finest for several species of Texas gamefish. It's well worth your visit to fish this lake, half of which extends into Mexico.

If you plan to fish on the Mexico side, you must first obtain a Mexico fishing license. They may be purchased at Fisherman's Headquarters in the city of Ciudad Acuna or at both ends of the dam.

Between Amistad and Toledo Bend, you are fishing two of the finest lakes in the world. Texas can be proud of their accomplishments in the name of sportfishing.

Just how great was Bob Gibson?

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — How great was Bob Gibson?

Great enough to force a rule change in the national pastime. And great enough to force his way into the Baseball Hall of Fame in his first year of eligibility.

Gibson, the fireballing right-handed pitcher for the St. Louis Cardinals from 1959 through 1975, enters baseball's shrine on today along with slugger Johnny Mize and Rube Foster, a pioneer of the Negro Leagues. Gibson became just the 11th man to be elected to the Hall on his first try.

The reason the overpowering hurler collected 337 of 401 ballots cast by the Baseball Writers Association of America was his dominance of the game in the 1960s. Gibson held such control over opposing hitters that, after he went 22-9 in 1968 with an astounding 1.12 earned run average and 268 strikeouts, the pitching mound was lowered and the strike zone altered to help improve the offense.

Gibson wasn't solely responsible for the rule change but his phenomenal 1968 season probably was the deciding factor.

"I perfected it and then they changed it," joked Gibson, who carries special memories of the '68 season, when he won his first of two Cy Young Awards and was the National League Most Valuable Player.

"I can't remember having a bad start that season," he said. "I did everything right. Everything I threw was knee-high and on the corner. It was a once in a lifetime year. I cherish that season."

And how does he react to making the Hall of Fame?

"I still feel the same as I felt last January," he said, recalling his emotions when told of being elected to the Hall. "It's a great honor but I never really thought about it. I still don't spend time thinking about it. It shows I had a pretty good career.

"I've always been the type to hide my emotions. That doesn't say I don't have any. I'm sure on Sunday I'll have some jitters. But nobody will know because I'll hide them."

Gibson, one of only five pitchers with more than 3,000 career strikeouts (3,117), won 251 games for the Cardinals and posted a 2.91 ERA and 56 shutouts. He won 20 or more games five times.

Gibson was at his best in the World Series. In 1964, he helped the Cardinals erase an eight-game deficit to win the NL pennant on the final day of the season. He won 19 games that season and struck out 245 batters, then punctuated that fine campaign with an outstanding Series against the Yankees.

DON'T BE AFRAID TO ASK

You are a house hunter and have been working with "XYZ" Realtors. You are happy with them and have an excellent relationship. While driving home from work you notice a "For Sale" sign on a house that interests you, but with another Realtor's name on it. Can you ask your friends at "XYZ" Realtors about it? Absolutely!

Understanding how multiple listing service (MLS) operates is an important part of the home buyer's education. First-time buyers, especially, are not aware that one Realtor can provide them with information on homes listed by another Realtor using MLS. Or, for that matter, nearly any other home listed on the market.

If you are working with a firm you like, and you see a house with another company's sign in front, don't feel that you might bothering your broker if you ask for information regarding the other house. Any Realtor in the MLS can sell the house and it's easier working with one than several Brokers.

If you have any questions on this subject or any other aspect of real estate, feel free to phone or drop in at DON HARVEY Realtors 702 Andrews Hwy. Phone 683-5333. We're here to help! Come in for your free copy of "Home or Living" magazine.

E 1/2 F

Once you've filled the tank of the 200-SX, you'll find the gas gauge spends a lot more time on "F" than you thought possible.*

But the looks and performance of this Datsun make this fuel economy your little secret. The incredible NAPS-Z engine actually delivers more power from less gas than the engine it replaced.

Combine that with the four-wheel disc brakes, slick 5-speed and luxurious appointments, and you've got the car that makes "F" a perfect grade. Come in and see it today.

200-SX Sport Luxury Standard Equipment:
· 2-liter, fuel-injected NAPS-Z engine · Rich fabric upholstery · Fully reclining front bucket seats · 4-speaker AM/FM stereo with power booster and speaker balance and fader controls · Dual styled mirrors with electric remote control · Automatic electric antenna · And much more.

200-SX
Sport Luxury Hatchback

48 Month Financing Available.

28 EPA EST MPG 39 EPA EST HWY

Remember: use estimated MPG for comparison. Your mileage may vary, depending on speed, trip length and weather. Your actual highway mileage will probably be less.

One More Good Reason To Buy That 1981 Cadillac....

5 years/50,000 Mile Engine Value Protection Plan

V8 6-4 FUEL INJECTION

An Expression of confidence.
You have to have tremendous confidence in an engine to back it up with a plan such as this. And that's the message of Engine Value Protection (EVP). In response to unwarranted adverse publicity, Cadillac hereby publicity demonstrates its belief in the quality and value of the V8-6-4 engine.

No charge to owner.
Cadillac is providing EVP at no charge to all owners who have purchased and those who will purchase Cadillacs powered by the V8-6-4 engine. EVP provides protection for 5 years or 50,000 miles from the date the car is sold to the first owner...and applies to any owner of the car during the unexpired part of the 5-year or 50,000 mile period.

Remains in effect even if you sell your Cadillac.
That's correct. It applies to the car for 5 years or 50,000 miles, whichever comes first, regardless of whe owns the car. And that could be significant at trade-in time.

Plus Highest Trade-in Allowances For Your Present Car.

See You Tomorrow!!

The 650 LTD has crossover pipes, mag-style wheels, semi-step seat, chopper type handlebars and some mean graphics.

The engine is a 652cc DOHC four-stroker that holds world speed and endurance records. Dependable and easy to service.

Because it's lightweight you can whip it through the turns. The front drilled disc brake and heavy duty rear drum will stop you fast and smooth.

KNOW WHY VESPA'S OUR MOPED?
IT'S SIMPLE.

Riding a Vespa moped is almost as easy as saying "giddy-up". Even the first time you get on one. The controls are very simple. And so is the whole design. For instance, Vespa has a belt drive, which is one part. Other mopeds use chains, which have hundreds of pieces.

A Vespa is cheap to feed—gets up to 160 mpg. Or push a button and pedal for free. Test ride a Ciao* Bravo or Grande. We think you'll agree Vespa's the logical choice—pure and simple.

*Say "chow," Italian for "hi."

1½ miles of Animas River rushes through a box canyon. Four lakes, numerous springs, waterfalls, meadows and rugged trails. The varied and spectacular scenery has been used for numerous movie locations. Hunting, excellent fishing and wildlife. All the ranch has been purposely left wild and is the last privately owned land in the Animas Valley. Beautifully located 12 miles from Durango and 12 miles from Purgatory Ski Area and 5 miles from Tammarron Resort with golf and tennis available. Owner and guest house -- several out-buildings. A rare opportunity (should be a National Park). SUB-DIVIDABLE.

"They need love more than anything else," explained foster parent Jeanne Jackson

Very special families

By NANCY LORD
Lifestyle Writer

He may be a newborn infant who has been abandoned by his parents. She may be a six-year-old girl who has been physically abused, and maybe even sexually molested, by a parent. Or, it could be a teen-ager who has rebelled against his or her parents.

They are all children with problems who need the love and understanding of a family. They are foster children.

Foster children are ages birth to 18 years, and who, for one reason or another, must be separated from their natural parents either temporarily or permanently. The Department of Human Resources becomes the child's legal guardian until the child either returns home or other permanent arrangements are made.

It is during the time that the Department of Human Resources has custody of the child that foster homes come into the picture. A foster home is a place for the child to go while he and his natural parents try to work out the problems that have caused them to be separated.

Natural parents are not told the name or location of the foster home in which their child is staying. They visit their children at the Child Welfare office unless visitation rights have been denied by a judge.

According to Nancy Miller, Midland County Foster Home Developer, both the children and the parents receive counseling and guidance while the child is a ward of the Department of Human Resources. She said the primary goal is to return the child to his natural parents, which happens in about 80 percent of the cases she handles. She also noted that the children are supervised for a time after they go back home.

Ms. Miller said there is an average of 27 children per month in Midland County under the legal custody of the Department of Human Resources. Many of these children go to foster homes and others go to various child care institutions.

nMs. Miller said that there are presently only 11 foster families in Midland, with an average of 10-15 children placed in foster care per month. She noted that if there were more foster families, there would be more children placed in foster homes rather than institutions.

Because the need for more foster families is so great, the Department of Human Resources launched a foster parent recruitment campaign earlier this summer. Ms. Miller said that the department has set a goal of 30 foster families for this campaign, which ends on Aug. 31.

Ms. Miller noted that the need for minority foster families is one of the greatest concerns of the campaign. She emphasized the importance of placing children with foster families from their own ethnic group. "They're going through enough without having to change cultures," she said.

Presently, Midland County has only one black family and one Mexican-American family acting as foster families.

Lack of knowledge is one reason Ms. Miller cited for the low number of foster families in Midland.

"They think they have to be the perfect parents," she pointed out, and added, "We're just looking for the average people."

The Dennis O'Conner family is one of the "average" families presently involved in foster care. Dennis and his wife, Sharon, have two children of their own, both of whom still live at home. In the five years they have been foster parents, they have had a total of 37 foster children, with an average length of stay of five months.

Mrs. O'Conner said one reason they became foster parents is that Mr. O'Conner had always wanted a very large family, but she thought two pregnancies was enough. Becoming foster parents was a way of compromising.

"It's the kind of thing that everyone (in the family) has to be for it," Mrs. O'Conner said of being a foster family.

She noted that there are sacrifices that must be made by all family members when taking in foster children. She also said that it's not always easy to take care of these children.

"When they come in, they're lost," she explained. She said that one reason they have had such success with the children they have kept is because the kids who are already there help the new foster children to adjust by explaining the rules and helping them to feel more comfortable.

"A kid will listen to a kid more than he will listen to an adult," she said. "It works for us."

Mrs. O'Conner said that it is often difficult to let a child go after he has been in her home for a while, but she also said that she was glad to see some of the children go.

"You've got to remember that you can't love every child," she said. "The whole purpose of foster care is to help the child while his family gets straightened out."

She added that for the past year she has been experiencing "foster-parent burnout." The reason for this, she said, is because she has had so many kids without a break. Presently, she only has one foster child, a 17-year-old girl who has been with the family since they first became involved in the program.

Mrs. O'Conner said that if there were more foster families in Midland, it would probably ease the burden on those families experiencing a "burnout."

She pointed out that there are advantages to being a foster family. "There's a satifaction in watching them adjust and grow," she said. "It makes you feel good to know that you may have helped a child."

"The most important thing is to be sure why you want to do it," she explained. She said not to take foster children to be a companion to your children, a babysitter or a housekeeper, and not to expect to make money from it. "It can get to be expensive."

The O'Conner's will take children from all ages, but Ms. Miller said that foster parents have a choice of what age of children they want. "They also have the right to say no," she noted.

Don and Jeanne Jackson have been foster parents for nearly a year, and they prefer to take infants and small children. They have taken in 13 foster children since last September.

Mrs. Jackson said that they decided to become foster parents because they like children. She said that Mr. Jackson had always wanted to open an orphanage and since they couldn't do that, they opted for foster care.

The Jackson's have four natural children. Two are married, but the other two, girls ages 17 and 19, live at home. Mrs. Jackson said that her daughters have really been a big help with the foster children.

Many of the children the Jackson's have kept have been victims of child abuse or neglect. According to Ms. Miller, most of the children placed in foster care have been abused or neglected.

"They need love more than anything else," Mrs. Jackson said. She said it is important to teach the abused or neglected child that there are loving people in the world.

She says she tries to teach her foster children how to respect and to love, adding that it often takes a lot of time and patience to do this.

Mrs. Jackson said that one thing that made being a foster parent worthwhile is knowing that she might have done one little thing that will help or change the child later on in life.

One of the more unique foster parents in Midland is Gloria Fryson, a single black woman who has two foster children.

She is a driver for MidTran, working from 6:30 a.m. to 6 p.m., and still manages to be a parent to two girls, ages 16 and four. Her four-year-old stays at Community Day Nursery while she works.

"I love them both," she said. She said the only thing that would separate her from her foster children is death.

Ms. Miller said that the Texas Department of Human Resources will have a foster parent orientation at 7 p.m. Aug. 18 at their offices at 2301 N. Big Spring. She said that this orientation is for people interested in finding out more about the program. She also noted that persons who cannot be foster parents, but who would like to help the program through donations may send them to: Midland Foster Children's Fund, P.O. Box 2880, Midland, 79702.

Requirements for licensing as a foster home by the Texas Department of Human Resources

1. The members of the foster family should be responsible, emotionally stable people of good character and known integrity. Three character references are required.

2. Both parents are included in the application. All members of the family are interviewed during the home study.'

3. There should not be any ill or mentally defective family members in the home if the presence of such person would be detrimental to the child or children in placement.

4. The foster family should have an income adequate to maintain themselves without dependency upon board for children from the agency. There is some reimbursement for foster parents, $7 a day for each child from birth to age nine, and $8 for each child 10-18 years old.

5. The foster family must understand and accept the agency's jurisdiction over the children it places.

6. The home should be large enough to provide plenty of space for rest and play; 40 square feet per person in the sleeping areas. A bedroom eight-foot by ten-foot can provide sleeping arrangements for two children.

7. The foster child must be allowed to attend the church of his choice. If he has no preference, he may attend with the foster parent.

8. Approved fire and health inspections, with all recommendations met are required.

9. All members of the family are required to have a negative TB test or a follow-up X-ray.

The first endowed professorship in an English-speaking country was established at Cambridge, England, in 1510 by Lady Margaret of Somerset, mother of King Henry VII.

Lifestyle guidelines

Information for our Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday; or two days before publication in a daily paper.

Engagement announcements must appear at least four weeks before the wedding date. Wedding stories must be submitted within a week of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials should include the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. The Reporter-Telegram has forms for engagement and wedding announcement stories.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons living within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

Only the bride's picture will be used with both the engagement and wedding announcement.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of pictures and stories.

DEAR ABBY

Let her smoke what she wants

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm being married soon at a formal weddding. All the plans are going well, but there is one problem I need help with.

My fiance's mother is a nice lady, but she smokes those long, thin, brown cigarettes that look like cigars, and I can't imagine her sitting at the bridal table puffing away on those things. It looks so masculine.

Since she's my fiance's mother, I think he should tell her to do away with them for one day and smoke regular cigarettes if she has to smoke at all.

He says I should tell her because he doesn't have the nerve. Abby, if I tell her, I'm afraid it will start our marriage on a sour note. How should we handle this situation? — TROUBLED BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: I would let the lady smoke whatever she's accustomed to smoking. Those who know her will not be shocked, and let those who don't know her draw their own conclusions. Please enjoy your wedding day. It's a time for joy and merrymaking, not a show for the public.

DEAR ABBY: Lately at our family get-togethers, my children, who are themselves parents, use such foul language that it makes me ill. They never heard such language in our home.

Sometimes I feel I never again want to attend another family get-together, but since my husband's death two years ago, I need my children more than ever.

They all have college degrees and should know better. I am too embarrassed to ask my clergyman for advice.

Please, how can I stop the use of such foul language? — DISTRAUGHT MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: You can let your children know that you are very much offended by foul language, then hope that out of respect for you, they will clean up their act — at least in your presence.

CONFIDENTIAL TO SHOCKED AND DISAPPOINTED IN PITTSBURGH: People who eavesdrop rarely hear anything good about themselves.

Swimming pools: Plan before you buy

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the perspiration trickles off your brow on a hot summer day your thoughts may drift to the joy of owning a swimmimg pool, but experts urge taking time to plan before plunging ahead.

Since you are not the only one with this idea, summer is a busy time for pool builders and finding one who is available may be a problem.

Check with several builders who are properly licensed in your area and, if possible, inspect some pools they have installed. Also, before picking one, check with your local Better Business Bureau to learn of their reliability.

Builders should carry liability insurance and should be familiar with existing zoning, building and grading requirements.

And watch out for questionable sales tactics such as a salesperson telling you an advertised model is not available and trying to sell a more costly model, or pressuring you to sign a contract.

In-ground pools cost more and may increase your property taxes, but they also represent a permanent improvement to property when it is sold.

Once you have decided which type and have chosen a builder, work closely with him, making day-to-day decis.

You may need to move shrubs or tree to get equipment to the site, grading may be necessary and there will be permits or licenses to obtain.

Most importantly, make sure all specific information about the pool is written into the contract before it is signed. Better Business Bureau experts advise that every item of expense, including labor and optional equipment, should be covered; as well as the date the work will start, when it will be completed, and the total cost and final arrangements.

SAVE GLASS — Making glass takes energy and materials, and the glass industry wants to save by recycling glass bottles.

The industry recycled nearly 2.7 billion glass containers last year, and they want to top that effort.

To help, the Glass Packaging Institute has issued a new booklet discussing glass recycling and listing the location and telephone numbers of plants across the country that purchase used glass for reuse.

The booklet is available free from the Glass Packaging Institute, Communications Department, 2000 L St. NW, Suite 815, Washington, D.C., 20036.

WATCH THE CURRENT — What you don't know can indeed hurt you if you're caught in a rip current, according to government oceanographers.

According to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration many fatalities result from swimmers attempts to fight against such currents.

Twins Marla and Kari Brewer have their fingerprints taken by Melanie Johnston. Local club in nationwide study

Dr. H. W. Kloepfer of Tulane University is conducting the test in which he is attempting to calculate the penetrance of certain genes for dermatoglyphic features to help in determining how a trait is being transmitted.

Twins who attended a picnic hosted by the club at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Priddy, No. 22 Saddle Club, participated in the study by having their prints taken. Sgt. Hank Norton of the Midland Police Department assisted in getting the necessary equipment to make the prints and demonstrated the appropriate techniques for printing.

According to Melanie Johnston, group spokesman, Dr. Kloepfer believes that the use of prints to describe a number of previously undescribed genes will be helpful in medicine as well as dermatoglyphics. For this reason, hand and foot prints will be taken not only of the twin pairs, but of as many of their family members as possible. Several brothers, sisters, parents and grandparents are participating in the Midland study.

Another factor to be examined will be a method of determining whether same sex twins are identical or fraternity with at least 95 percent accuracy. "This is important to mothers of twins because the most common method of determining whether twins are identical or fraternal is by using a placental test, which at best is 75 percent accurate," said Mrs. Johnston.

After all of the data has been collected and assessed by Dr. Kloepfer, he will send each participating family a summary of his findings.

This information will also be presented at the national convention next year. The state convention will be held in Midland next spring.

Preserve posies for use in winter bouquets

By PATRICK DENTON
Copley News Service

While you are enjoying the beauty of the flowers in your garden this summer it's worthwhile giving a thought to preserving a few for winter decorations.

Some flowers may be dried just by hanging in a dry, dark place. Strawflower, statice and ornamental grasses are picked, the leaves stripped off. They are tied in small bunches with elastic bands and hung upside down to dry.

But even more of your annual flowers can be preserved for the winter by the simple method of burying blossoms in a drying agent to preserve their natural look. Most kinds of garden flowers can be dried, but the most satisfying are zinnias, marigolds, roses, small dahlias and asters. I have found that carnations and chrysanthemums tend to shrivel and lose their petals.

The two best agents are silica gel and sand of the sort sold for sandboxes. Sand is the least expensive if you want to dry flowers in any quantity. Any box or pan with tight seamscan serve as a receptacle — simply line the container with wax paper.

Silica gel reduces drying time and produces the brightest color and for this you will need a cake tin with a tight-fitting lid. The technique of covering the blooms is the same for both agents and both are reusable.

Unlike flowers to be gathered for fresh bouquets, whose moisture must be conserved by picking them in the cool of the morning or evening, flowers for drying are picked in the heat of the day when there is the least amount of moisture in the petals. They should never be gathered for drying after a rain nor when they are wet with dew or after standing in an arrangement.

Pass up blossoms that show signs of age. Gather them when their color is brightest and just before the centers of the flowers unfold. Have your equipment ready so you can process the flowers immediately.

Remove the stems from zinnias, marigolds and other similar flowers. Replace the stems with a two-inch length of 19-gauge florist wire inserted into the blossoms. Lay daisy-type blossoms face down on a one-inch layer of drying agent. Begin by pouring sand or silica gel around the edge of the petals, piling it up to the base of the wire stem.

Thicker and more intricately shaped flowers like marigolds should be placed face up. Build the drying agent up around the outside, then fill in between the petals to equalize the pressure and prevent mashing.

Follow a similar procedure with spiky blooms such as snapdragons but rest them horizontally. Tap the edges of the box to eliminate air pockets, then cover any exposed parts of blossoms.

You can leave the box open if you're using sand. Mark the date and the flower's name to estimate the correct time for removal. Never mix flowers of different types nor stack in more than one layer.

Drying time varies according to flower bulk or thickness. In silica gel, simple open flowers may take only two or three days while thick, bulky marigolds may require five days to a week or more depending on size. In sand, flowers lose moisture more slowly.

Avoid uncovering until the blooms are completely dry.

Widows: Facing the image of life's losers

By ELIZABETH MOONEY
Special to The Washington Post

A widow has the image of one of life's losers. Ask anyone for free association and he'll offer gray hair, loneliness, matinees, dependence on children and grandchildren, attachment to television commentators. Even in the printer's world the widow has a bad name. It's a leftover word, taking up a whole line, that must be pruned from the end of a paragraph.

There is plenty of pity for a new widow. Everybody knows that a terrible thing has happened and is very sorry, but they don't know what to say. The recent death reminds them of their own inevitable demise, and certainly the less said about that the better. In addition, there is the risk of tears. All in all, the three days before the funeral is about what the widow gets to shape up if she wants to be part of the world she knew.

All this is certainly understandable, yet the years alone are slated before we begin, the specter at the feast at every marriage. We women tend to marry older men and we are, well, tougher. Only one wife in 12 will escape widowhood, but whoever believes that her own particular marriage will not outlast the tides, the turning of the earth and the statistics? The result is that widows can expect no more understanding from wives than from the world at large.

Women now in their 20s and early 30s are engaged in working out whether it is possible to combine marriage, children and a career, thus avoiding the single-minded focus on a marriage.

We took our identities from our husbands. We were doctors' wives or the wives of plumbers or teachers, and the only other identity we had was as mothers of Cub Scouts or Brownies.

"I am training you to be a widow," murmured my husband when he knew — and I was still refusing to believe — that he was dying. But in reality no one was ever less trained. He took decisions off my shoulders, and in his sleep he tossed and turned and begged me not to worry. Until two days before he died, he dressed and commuted by bus to his office, protecting me even from the knowledge of his pain. Up to the moment when he died in my arms on the kitchen floor, I knew he was going to get better. I, like so many before me, became a widow while still believing it was impossible.

It takes two years, say the psychiatrists, before a widow absorbs what has happened and is capable of making decisions. Early, there is the merciful numbness, the long weeks before you, as suvivor of the amputation, feel the real cut of the knife. And the first thing you understand when your senses begin to return is that although you are the same person, nobody else believes it. And after a while you see that they are right and you have to grow up in middle age.

When a man to whom you have been married for decades dies, a piece of you dies with him. What happens to you after that eventually changes you irrevocably, and that is as it should be. If life doesn't change you, you haven't been listening.

The changes come about gradually, because at first you are too busy. Maybe it is arranged that way or you might never get out of bed, but little by little you realize that everything from taxes and insurance to the un sticking of windows and the changing of furnace filters is up to you, and nobody is even going to remind you. Small things also take their toll, like having to take the sliver out of your own finger, having nobody to pooh-pooh your worries, nobody to catch your eye when somebody says something stupid.

Busy picking up the reins once shared by two, you eventually realize that the rules of the game have been changed, but only for you. The lives of other people you know are ticking along just as before, and all of a sudden you know things they would rather not think about, have learned skills in which they have no interest. And since one chooses one's friends from among those most like oneself, a widow usually discovers she is alien.

"Don't join the widows' club," muttered my husband one evening over the hamburger he was pushing around his plate.

"You're not going to die," I shouted, angry and terrified. I didn't even take in the words. Not until after he was dead, and I began to feel like the only passenger on an excursion boat who, lifting my parasol like the others against the sun, was still aware where the motor was and where the oil ran out.

It is so easy for us widows to seek the company of others like us. They know the territory, their needs are the same, we suffer the same rebuffs. And there are so many to choose from, 10.5 million last time I looked. We have to reach for companionship and there they are.

But I was never a joiner, so I fled instead, angry and alienated — to Paris when I didn't have the money, to a job where I got back my sense of self. And even, because I had promised myself I would never again be afraid to do anything I wanted to, to a computer dating service. That was where I finished my metamorphosis.

In Florida, we are told, lonely women tip the condominium doormen to tell them when single men move in. It is assumed by everyone that a widow is only looking for a second chance. Whereas, as I hear from the lips of every widow I meet, a good marriage is a hard act to follow and what most women left be hind want is only someone to take them to dinner.

I didn't use my real name at the dating service. I did not expect to find happiness in the file drawers. I was simply curious to see what happens in this Alice-Down-the-Rabbit-Hole kind of world, to know who checks real life on the street below to confide their ultimate hopes, pet peeves, happiest moments to a stranger's file folders.

Such a pretty girl to greet me. Coffee? And what age group was I interested in? I could look over a selection and, if I found anyone to my liking, view him on videotape — after paying, of course, a small sum. The pretty girl paused in the doorway en route to the files, appraising me like a clerk in an expensive dress store before checking the stock in the back room.

On the videotape in the next room, I could hear a slightly nervous young man speaking earnestly about the importance of a committed relationship, openess and sincerity. And then the pretty girl was back with a half dozen files and left me to sort through them. First names only. No address. No telephone number. Elaborately casual pictures.

Loneliness was so palpable in that room that I inhaled it with the lingering smoke of the pretty girl's cigarette. And I got up and walked out of there because I had finally realized, as Katherine Hepburn once remarked, that I'm not afraid to be alone.

One of the things they don't tell us in that it doesn't get easier. You get used to things, but this is only accommodating. It represents no cure.

I was married more than 30 years. That leaves a lot of places full of lingering tendrils of memory, places where you walked or quarreled or had an expensive lunch or bought a handful of vendor's flowers. It used to sweep over me in odd places, in a Chinese restaurant or waiting for a traffic light, what I had lost. Once, when I was especially down, discouraged and scared, I called up a college friend who is six months my senior in widowhood and asked her if she had any answers. Did she know some secret not yet vouchsafed to me?

There was a pause and I could see her pushing a strand of hair behind her ear, considering before she spoke. I knew there were no answers, but irrationally I believed she would find some.

Her reply was soft, and the Boston accent slurred it. "Hello, sister," she said.

But oddly, after working your way through the worst of it, there are compensations. You don't believe this at first, but it is true, as true as that Tuesday follows Monday and, barring complications, spring will come again next year. I hear it from other women who have lost the men they love, and I know that it is true.

The reason we are alienated and sometimes thorny women is that we are different women. We are women who have learned to depend on ourselves, stronger women who are more than a leftover. It is the gift that comes after the fire, and I learned it in a strange way.

I was talking to my son and suddenly, surprising me as much as him, I burst into tears. Shamelessly reversing the roles we both had come to depend on, violating boundaries heretofore observed, across the wires to a distant city, I sobbed it all out.

Through my sobs I could hear his voice, horrified to hear me casting aside all semblance of self-control, reassuring me.

"You're going to be all right," he said gently. "You're doing a fine job."

It was then he gave me the Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval, which in my anguish at the time I scarcely noticed.

"I respect what you're doing," he said.

And what was I doing? Just what 10.5 million women like me out there are doing.

Farm's marijuana used for research

President Lyndon B. Johnson in July 1968 signed a bill establishing a federal marijuana farm at the University of Mississippi as a research center for the botany, chemistry and cultivation of the drug.

Mr. and Mrs. Gaylon W. Hail exchanged vows at the first wedding held in the lovely Midland Rose Garden recently. City Parks and Recreation officials are encouraging bookings at the Rose Garden for anyone who wishes a wedding ceremony in an outdoor setting. According to Wayne Kohout, director of Parks and Recreation, a fee of $25 is required to reserve the Garden for a wedding, and money goes into the Midland Rose Garden Foundation, a tax-exempt foundation. For more information, call Kohout at 683-4281.

Novel artfully done

By GREGORY RYAN
Associated Press

THE CLOWNS OF GOD. By Morris West. Morrow. 370 Pages. $14.95.

Morris West seems to have a sixth sense about world affairs. His latest novel, "The Clowns of God," is about a crisis in the Vatican.

It is late in the 20th century, and Pope Gregory XVII has a vision that he is the prophet of the Parousia — the Second Coming of Christ. He writes an encyclical about his vision, but the conservative Vatican hierarchy moves quickly to suppress it.

They fear the encyclical, if released, will incite suicides and mayhem — especially in a world on the brink of World War III.

Despite this setback, Gregory is determined to tell the world of his vision. The Vatican feels that it has no other choice but to force him to abdicate and exile him to a monastery.

However, fate intervenes and Gregory is permitted to leave the monastery when a friend, who is recovering from a CIA assassination attempt, requests Gregory's presence.

Once free, Gregory meets with world leaders to tell them of his prophesy — that we must love and share in order to prepare for the Second Coming. After many intrigues, the unseated Pope meets his bizarre fate.

Nutrition. Just what is it? A simple definition of this complex subject is: the process of eating and using food. Fortunately for us, we don't need a thorough knowledge of food and body chemistry in order to apply the principles of good nutrition. Rather, we simply need to learn what foods to eat for energy and nourishment, and learn how to select foods that will fulfill those requirements and develop good eating patterns that will provide pleasurable and healthful meals.

Unfortunately, our eating habits are often all too careless—beginning with where we get our foods, what types we get, how they are cooked and how we eat our meals. In the past few decades, eating patterns have changed dramatically, along with our life styles.

Loading up on handfuls of vitamins, or eating large quantities of certain "magic" foods will not set you and your family on a magical road to good health and vitality. Instead, a variety of foods, carefully prepared and attractively presented, helps create lifelong good eating habits that will help ensure good health. Remember, there is a wide world of food combinations to choose from.

Prize short stories

This collection is the 61st in the O. Henry Memorial Award series. It also is the book that short-story lovers look forward to each year.

The new collection, like those that have gone previously, has a couple of clunkers included in it, but the majority of the 21 stories contained here range from good to very good indeed.

Best of the lot, and the one editor William Abrahams has singled out for "first prize," is Cynthia Ozick's "The Shawl." It's only 4½ pages long, but within that limited space Miss Ozick has compressed a world of feeling and sadness.

If a second prize had been awarded it should have gone to W.D. Wetherell's "The Man Who Loved Levittown," a beautifully written piece that shatteringly sums up in limited space the absolute difference in values as well as the vast difference — indeed the loathing — between the generations.

Carrying it further, if a third prize had been given it should have gone to John Irving's "Interior Space." Irving, author of the best-selling "The World According to Garp," tells a hilarious story of one couple's experiences in a univIsity town.

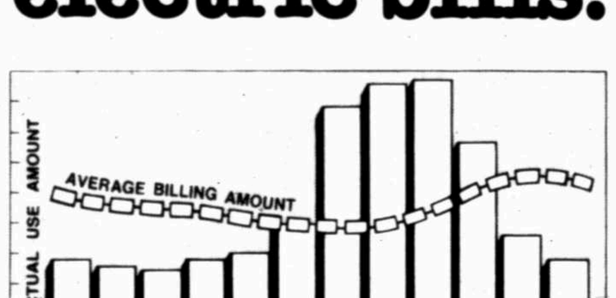
Average Billing can help smooth out high summer electric bills.



If you use the same amount of electricity this summer as you did last summer, you'll see a big increase in your bills.

But our Average Billing Plan can help, because it "averages out" your payments. You still pay for all the electricity you use. However, in high-use months you pay for less electricity than you use, and in low-use months you pay for more than you use.

Many customers find this helps ease the impact of high summer air conditioning bills. Our Average Billing Plan is available to both residential customers and churches. If you'd like to know more, give us a call at Texas Electric.

Shorter skirts and higher boots featured at Paris fashion show

By JACQUELINE CLAUDE
Agence France-Presse

PARIS — The royal wedding in Britain last week may have kept some of the crowds away from the French haute courte collections, but Yves Saint Laurent still packed them in here to see styles more varied than those of the hundreds of guests at the London ceremony.

Saint Laurent has shortened his styles for the fall-winter season. Even classic overcoats are cut to 78 length, and the longest skirts merely brush the knee.

For evening, boots climb high as skirts shrink to mid-thigh. Knees thus become an important fashion accessory. Smooth and softly rounded is the look.

Suprises at the showing included an ankle-length leather trench coat, which is shed to reveal — and the word is appropriate — a mini-skirt.

Astrakhan is the fur for the coming season. It's worn at all hours and in all ways: for cuffs and collar on a leather jacket, as a skirt paired with a red jacket, as a coat or as a hat.

Bearing no resemblance to Britain's new princess of Wales, Saint Laurent's model bride wore plum taffeta and a black veil and carried a huge bouquet of Red roses.

At Givenchy, three key themes were developed: The long tunic over a pencil-slim skirt, the long blouson over a pleated skirt and the dropped-waist dress (or coat) over a short, full skirt.

Hems hide the knee, but only just. Givenchy colors for next season are delicious and include carmel, red, lavender, plum, rust and ocre.

Paco Rabanne, high fasion's metal-worker, mixes wool or silk with vinyl, metal and plastic for an extravagant line in which shoulders are broad, sleeves enormous and embroideries spectacular.

Guy Laroche likes gold, gold and more gold from morning to night. His daytime wear is the most classic, with tweed coats and narrow trousers in a range of beiges.

A long sheath in pine green satin, whose plunging neckline in back was underscored by a huge, full-blown rose, was the most popular model present.

Here's how: Prepare paper logs for winter

By GENE GARY
Copley News Service

Q. I have a 1,250-square-foot home that is heated solely by a wood stove, and heated fairly adequately when I was able to obtain wood. But the price of wood is outrageous now and I have since become disabled to the point where I cannot cut it. So I have gone to making rolled newspaper logs, but as hard as I try I can't get them to keep burning and they are hard to light.

Could you please tell me the best way to make long-burning newspaper logs? I can make them this summer and be ready for next year. — Fred B., San Diego, Calif.

A. Although we carried a lengthy explanation of instructions on this subject a few months ago, the interest is enough to merit a repeat of the column. Also now is the time to get into such production to prepare for fall and winter months.

These logs, a good example of recycling made practical and easy, are made of rolled-up papers soaked in a salt solution and thoroughly dried. Use them just as you would wooden logs. They are easy to light, long-lasting, give off heat and burn with a bright, colorful flame.

To make these logs you need only these items: Newspapers, magazines and scrap paper of all type (it's also a good use for junk mail), two pounds each of coarse salt and borax, heavy twine, transparant tape, a four- or five-gallon nonmetallic container, such as earthenware, enamelware or plastic, not affected by boiling water. A five-gallon plastic garbage can is suitable for the purpose.

Then follow this procedure: First make the solution. Put the salt and borax into the container. Pour in two gallons of boiling water, stir vigorously to dissolve the solids as much as possible. Let the solution cool, stirring from time to time.

Now make the logs. Use newspapers alone or newspapers with a rolled-up magazine core, or newspapers with scrap papers distributed evenly between the larger sheets, or magazines alone. Whatever you use, make a paper pile that is thicker in the middle than at the ends. Start at one end and roll up very, very tightly to form a long roll about three inches in diameter. The tighter you roll, the denser the finished log will be and the longer it will burn. Secure the roll with transparent tape while you tie it at the ends and center with heavy twine. Since tape loosens and falls off when wet, it cannot be used alone. (There are rollers on the market especially designed to roll paper logs, and these devices make the job much easier.)

Next comes soaking the logs. Stand them on end in the solution in the container. Put in as many as you can without crowding or causing overflow. However, the solution should rise to the top of the container, and if it does not, add warm water to fill. Let the logs soak for about 24 hours. Add two quarts of warm water and turn the logs upside down. Let soak, turning several times, for two or three more days, or until all the liquid has been absorbed. Remove logs from the container and lay on paper in a warm place. Then let dry thoroughly, at least two weeks. Meanwhile, roll more papers and prepare more solutions. Keep the production going so you can throw another log on the fireplace or in the stove.

Q. I'm stuck. Several years ago we traveled to Italy and bought a beautiful tea cart. We are now having trouble wuth the two small front wheels bleeding a brown substance on our white shag carpeting.

We have tried several commercial carpet cleaners, solvents and other rug cleaners, but nothing make a dent on these stains. The small wheels on the cart have what I think is a rubber tire that is doing the bleeding. We now have plastic cups under the wheels. Can you suggest a cleaner? — W.B.

A. In case of unusual stains such as yours, I would highly recommend you hiring a professional carpet cleaner. Actually, this should have ben done before an attempted do-it-yourself cleaning, as the methods previously used may have set the stains so they are impossible to remove.

However, I would still call in the professional carpet cleaner to see what can be done.

Q. I often run across the term "lag screw." Can you tell me what this is? — Art M.J.

A. A lag screw is usually a large version of an ordinary wood screw. However, it does not have a head that is driven with a screwdriver. Instead, it has a square head that is turned with a wrench.

Support grows for national exam

BY George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — For most teen-agers, a high school diploma is a symbol of achievement as well as a passport to college or a decent job. But for many, it has about as much significance as a time clock, showing only that its owner went to high school.

One proposal for ipsuring that a diploma remains a mark of educational attainment has the backing of a large majority of American teen-agers. When questioned in the latest Gallup Youth Survey, 70 percent of teens voted in favor of requiring all high school students to pass a standard nationwide examination before they could get their diplomas. When the survey last asked this question, in 1977, it found 63 percent of teens in favor.

The steady decline in college entrance exam scores and the fact that many kids who graduate from high school are unable to read or write or to make simple computations has caused some educators to demand more rigid standards for high school graduation. One way of upgrading these standards is for every student to pass the same exam. Those who disagree argue that students would be unfairly penalized because not all schools teach the same subjects or have the same criteria for passing. Many states now have some form of minimum competency testing.

In our survey, substantial majorities in every teen group favored the standard nationwide exam. For example, boys were just as likely as girls to backthe proposal as were teens in both age groups. However, as might be expected, youngsters whose academic standing at school was above average were more likely to favor the plan (75 percent) than were teens who didn't do so well in their studies (65 percent).

Similarly, teen-agers who plan on going to college were more favorably disposed toward the proposal (73 percent) than were teens whose formal education will probably end with high school (61 percent).

First, speaking for the majority who favor a nationwide test:

"People wil know if students really pay attention or not, and if they go to school to learn — not to play around and cheat on exams." (14-year-old girl from Laredo, Tex.)

"Too many people who graduate know very little. Many kids take easy courses so they won't have to work s hard. If a nationwide test was used it would establish a minimum competency for everybody." (17-year-old girl from Milford, Ind.)

"I found out a few weeks ago that there are some teen-agers who graduated from my high school who can't read on a third grade level." (18-year-old boy from Duluth, Minn.)

Paperwork laws

FARMINGTON, Conn. (AP) — Not only is our society being digitized, but the fallout from a quarter of a million laws passed since 1970 is burying everyone in paperwork, says an executive of a multinational company here.

T. Mitchell Ford, chairman and president of Emhart Corporation, says our generation has 30 times more laws than our grandparents' generation.

The government, he adds, issued some 8,500 regulations last year alone. In one year, Congress introduced 22,313 public and private bills and resolutions.

Drug-resistent syphilis may be imminent, researchers say

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The emergence of a new strain of syphilis resistant to treatment by today's medicines "may be imminent," two researchers say.

If syphilis becomes drug-resistant, they said, it could be more dangerous than the mutant strains of gonorrhea that have developed in recent years with immunity to certain antibiotics.

Writing in Science magazine this week, the scientists said they had found that syphilis has a genetic component that could give it an immunity against the drugs — penicillin and, to a lesser extent, a few other antibiotics — now used to treat it.

There is no evidence yet that syphilis has developed drug resistance, said the researchers, Drs. Michael V. Norgard of the University of Texas at Dallas and James N. Miller of the University of California at Los Angeles. But they warned that emergence of an uncontrollable form of this sexually transmitted disease "may be imminent."

Untreated, the disease can cause nerve, brain and heart damage, blindness and birth defects in the babies of infected mothers. It is transmitted through sexual intercourse.

Miller said in a telephone interview Tuesday that the potential problem is so great that scientists should start looking for other syphilis treatments now in case resistance develops.

"As a result of this study, I have a program going with the Los Angeles health department in which we are trying to find a case in which a patient does not respond to penicillin," said Miller, a professor of microbiology and immunology.

"If we find a case, it could mean the genie is out of the bottle," he added.

Norgard, an assistant professor of immunology, said in an interview that he found a piece of DNA called a plasmid in the syphilis bacterium, known as Treponema pallidum or Tp.

DNA, deoxyribonucleic acid, the basic substance of heredity, makes up the genes that pass the traits of an organism from generation to generation.

Norgard said plasmids are DNA not necessary for the growth or survival of an organism, but which play a major role in transfering characteristics to and from an organism.

The plasmid found in the Tp organism does not appear to have a drug resistant gene in it now, but he said it could be potentially dangerous in two ways.

There could be a precursor, or immature, gene in the plasmid that woud mutate into drug resistance or the plasmid could serve as the receptor for picking up a resistant gene from another organism, he said.

What is so bothersome about syphilis, said Norgard, is that it is not like other bacterial diseases. The disease can stay in the body for decades and do damage long after it is caught, he added.

World's largest crypt now open to the public in Paris

Visitors to Paris can now visit a 2,000-year-old archaeological site beneath the square in front of Notre Dame Cathedral. It has been opened to the public after 15 years of excavation and is the world's largest crypt, a corridor stretching nearly 400 feet underground, its vaulted roof spanning a width of 32 feet.

Unlike in a museum, no glass separates viewers from the Gallo-Roman ruins and artifacts. Information panels and scale models help visitors visualize what the area looked like at 16 stages of history.

Dots of color determine value of porcelain plaque

By JAMES G. MCCOLLAM
Copley News Service

Dear Mr. McCollam: This hand-painted porcelain plaque was bought in Italy in the early 1900s.

The plaque itself measures 3.5 by 2.5 inches. The frame is made of wood with a gold finish.

I would appreciate anything you can tell me about it. — E.M.W., Pelham, N.H.

Dear E.M.W.: This probably dates back to the 19th century.

To detemine the value, examine the picture with a magnifying glass. If you see many small dots of color, this is a copper plate transfer — value $50 to $100.

If there are no dots and only solid colors and possibly brush strokes, then it is hand painted — value $300 to $500.

Dear Mr. McCollam: This vase was purchased at auction about 1900.

It is like stoneware and is glazed. The tusks are genuine ivory.

Can you give a brief history and approximate value? — O.B.H., Paradise, Calif.

Dear O.B.H.: This looks like a Japanese Sumida vase made in the late 19th century.

Sumida is characterized by a glazed red or black ground with figures in high relief. The chop mark on the side of the vase is a commendation mark and does not indicate the potter nor the dynasty.

It would sell for about $300 to $500.

BOOK REVIEW: "Collecting and Care of Fine Art," by Carl David, $10, plus $1.50 postage, Crown Publishers Inc., One Park Ave., New York, N.Y. 10016.

This is a thorough examination of the intricacies of the art market for novices and experienced collectors, as well as dealers and appraisers. Its primary value to the average collector is the articulate delineation of what makes a work of art valuable.

The author is director of a prominent Philadelphia gallery that was founded by his grandfather. His credentials eminently qualify him to guide collectors, etc., in the field of fine arts.

His counseling from the standpoint of art as an investment and a brief course in art appreciation make this book an outstanding guide in fine arts.

Send your questions about antiques with picture(s), a detailed description, stamped, self-addressed envelope, and $1 per item to James G. McCollam, P.O. Box 687, Dunedin, Fla. 33528. All questions will be answered, but published pictures cannot be returned. As a special service, information is also available on how and where to sell your antiques.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Lost: An earring backer

DEAR LADIES:

Do you know how frustrating it is to lose the little back to a stud-type earring... boy I do!

Early one morning I lost the back to my earring. I was on my way to do a live T.V. show with no time to even stop in a dime store to buy a cheap pair so I could use the stud-back.

Guess what I did! Tore off a little tiny piece of cork and stuck it on the end of the earring behind my ear.

Do you know that it held all day long... from 5 a.m. until I finally reached home (sweet home) at 2 a.m.

I kept checking it and really was surprised and pleased that it lasted through all that.

If this ever happens to you, just find a little piece of cork and go about your day. — Hugs, Heloise

LETTER OF LOVE

Dear Heloise: While fixing dinner one evening, I was boiling a lemon to extract the extra juice.

My 4-year-old son, Richie, saw this and asked why. After explaining to him, he said quite innocently:

"Hey, that's really neat. I'll bet you got that idea from Heloise!"

The best part about it is he was right! Linda Popovich

+ + +

GELATIN MOLD

Dear Heloise: I was always having difficulty centering a molded gelatin salad on a bed of lettuce, but no more.

Now I place the lettuce around the edge of the mold instead of the plate, invert the plate over this and turn everything over as one unit.

Works beautiful every time. — Marie Burt

+ + +

Once the mold is upside down, to loosen the gelatin, place a hot towel around the mold for a few seconds. — Heloise

LINT CATCHER

Dear Heloise: My washing machine has a lint catcher with tiny holes that are next to impossible to keep clean.

Any suggestions? — Jean

+ + +

I know what you mean. But a toothbrush or bottle brush does makes the job a little easier.

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure in this case, though. Clean the lint catcher each time it's used to prevent a buildup that dries and hardens.

Might mention that nylon net does a pretty good job, too. — Heloise

FUNNY MARKER

Dear Heloise: I'm a college student who reads the newspaper every morning, rain or shine. Comics first, then your column. And since I have to read much more than your column, I have to have bookmarks.

Now I don't use just anything. I mark my places in philosophy, English Composition (blah!) and math models with clippings of my favorite comic strip.

They serve the purpose and when I get fed up with philosophy or English, I read my comics over again, and I feel better. (But not as good as when the professor says, "Class dismissed"!) — Amy Theresa

+ + +

Guess I'll settle for second place, next to the comics, especially if it's helping you through your studies.

Keep prodding, as there's always a light at the end of the tunnel (and it isn't necessarily a train!). — Heloise

Getting a good fit

By BETTY W. KINSER
COPLEY NEWS SERVICE

Without a good fit, your best sewing efforts can go right down the tubes.

What does it matter if you have put in the perfect hem if tha hem is uneven? What does it matter that you slaved two hours over matching plaids if that garment is too tight across the bust or too long in the back?

A good fit is definitely a must!

Even though you buy the size pattern that best suits your figure, chances are you are still going to have to make a few changes. These changes can be made at three levels of construction — on the pattern, on the basted garment and on the finished garment.

Pattern alterations: To give you all the possibilities in this area would take three reams of paper and a couple of weeks. The general idea is this: Compare your measurements to the pattern measurements and adjust the pattern where necessary. Major changes not made on the pattern can cause you terrible headaches later.

Baste fitting: Once your pattern has been altered and your garment cut out, you are ready to baste the major pieces together for a first fitting. Be sure to stay-stitch all curve areas to prevent their stretching during fitting. Do not put a garment on wrong side out! This fits your right side to the left side of the garment, and none of us is symmetrical.

Final fitting: When your garment is nearly finished, you should try it on one more time to mark hem and to look for any changes you might have missed before. For this fitting be sure to wear the undergarments and shoes you will be wearing with the finished garment.

A few tools for fitting you should have: a tape measure that doesn't lie, a full-length mirror in a well-lighted area, a curved ruler, large head pins and a hem marker.

Questions may be addressed to Mrs. Betty Kinser, Copley News Service, in care o this newspaper.

KNOW WHY VESPA'S MY MOPED?

IT'S CLEAN AND QUIET.

That's because Vespa enclosed the engine and all moving parts. Vespa mopeds have a clean, dry belt between the engine and rear wheel instead of a chain. No clanking or oil spatters on my bobbysox. I chose Bravo. You might like Grande or Ciao.* All three are peppy little numbers, even though they get up to 160 mpg. Take one for a spin around Pasadena or your home town. You'll see what I mean.

Indian ambush just ahead for blissful drilling contractors

By MAX B. SKELTON
AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Ed McGhee says there is something of a parallel between the current oil patch scene and a great old-style western movie.

The executive vice president of the International Association of Drilling Contractors sees the contract drilling industry as a wagon train rolling across the prairie blissfully unaware of an Indian ambush just ahead in the form of an impending surplus of land drilling rigs.

He sees an unaiding posse as the hoped-for repeal of the Windfall Profits Tax and the Seventh Cavalry, the eventual rescuer of the wagon train, as decontrol of natural gas prices.

"Not until the eleventh hour will we know whether the troopers will arrive in time, but we do know they're already on their way," McGhee said.

"The Reagan administration has made clear its intent to take the initiative soon on natural gas."

McGhee said most observers predict President Reagan will push for a phaseout of natural gas price controls over about a three-year period.

"Not known is whether the Congress will adopt any or all of his proposals," he said.

"Also not known is how quickly gas price decontrol will translate into new well drilling."

McGhee said there is no secret about the existence of a number of gas reservoirs that would achieve economic viability immediately upon decontrol but said it is doubtful such known deposits by themselves would suffice to avert an overbuilding of drilling rigs.

"For that, a lot of wildcatting probably will be required," he said.

In his "Drilling Ahead" report in the August edition of the trade group's monthly publication, McGhee writes that industry outriders concur that "an oversupply ambush does await U.S. land rigs."

"In the absence of an early major development such as gas decontrol, contractors can expect to be stacking equipment for lack of work, they predict," he said.

"How soon? Within the next 12 months is the usual guess."

McGhee said one producer observed that the scenario reminds him of an old saying about the weather in that everyone talks about a rig surplus but no one does anything about it.

"Certainly, U.S. contractors can't be accused of doing overmuch to avert a glut," McGhee said.

"Every day, at least one new firm opens its doors for business as a contract driller. Every day, the new and the old firms collectively add a net of four rigs to the domestic fleet.

At that rate, McGhee added, even immediate and complete decontrol of gas will only postpone the inevitable.

"Expansion-minded contractors know this," he said.

"They're betting that by the time the stimulus of gas decontrol has spent itself, U.S. politics will permit a repeal of the Windfall Profits Tax."

Industry surveys indicate a record 4,000 rotary drilling rigs are now in use in domestic oil and gas operations.

McGhee said current uncertainty, however, also spotlights an old problem with counting active rigs.

"Reed Rock Bit long ago quit trying to include in its annual census any equipment which can't put a well down below 3,000 feet," he said.

"Hughes Tool frankly admits it may miss a few small units in its weekly tally of active rigs. Most statisticians shrug off the 'post hole' rigs as insignificant to the overall industry."

Adding further to the confusion, McGhee said, is the hermaphrodite nature of many domestic well service rigs.

"Some alternate regularly between new well drilling, completing holes drilled by ordinary drilling rigs and working over existing wells," he said.

"In days past drilling contractors yielded only grudgingly when the operator wanted to turn completion work over to a specialty rig. Now, few fret."

What Californians don't know about

By ROBERT A. ROSENBLATT
(c) 1981, The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — A worldwide surplus of oil, an abundance so great that petroleum companies are using transport ships as floating storage tanks, has led to a nationwide drop in gasoline prices — but Californians would never know it.

In contrast to the national trend, prices at California gas pumps have been rising as the result of an extraordinary drop in West Coast supplies last spring, when stocks were even scantier than during the big gasoline shortage of 1979.

As recently as March, leaded regular gasoline was selling at an average price of $1.32 a gallon both nationally and in California. By July 1, however, the national figure had dropped to $1.27 a gallon while the price in California had climbed to $1.34, according to the Lundberg Letter, an authoritative marketing survey.

Looking to the future, there is hope of relief for California's motorists. Gasoline supplies are getting back to normal and wholesale prices have started to drop. Prices at the pump should follow, industry officials say.

The special situation in California provides a case study of the intricate business of gasoline marketing, in which a tiny shift in supply can make the difference between a comfortable surplus and waiting lines of cars filled with panicky motorists. The same principle applies to the world oil market, where gluts and shortages follow each other in confusing succession.

Oil executives say shutdowns of refineries on the West Coast, both for scheduled maintenance and to repair fire-damaged equipment, reduced supplies, which are now being restored.

Edward F. Wagner, vice president for volume management at the petroleum products division of Atlantic Richfield Corp., says, "I would expect the gap to narrow soon" between California prices and those in the rest of the country.

An oil industry critic, Ed Rothschild, director of the Energy Action Educational Foundation, has accused the companies of taking advantage of the situation to reap profits. "Their interest is in seeing the price go up, rather than go down," he said..

"Why did t take so long for the companies to handle the problem of low inventories in the West?" Rothschild asked. "Particularly at a time of oil and gasoline glut in the rest of the world, they should be able to handle the problem very quickly. Instead, it takes months, and the price goes up."

In any case, oil companies want to sell oil, not store it, and that explains much of the difficulty surrounding the concept of an oil glut. It costs about 1.5 to 2 cents a month to keep a gallon of oil products in storage. Such costs mount quickly for big companies selling billions of gallons of gasoline, jet fuel, heating oil and other products. The companies dislike this storage cost because it could cut deeply into their profit margin, which has ranged between 3.5 cents and 7 cents a gallon in recent years.

The oil industry has been operating its refineries at an unusually low rate, less than 70 percent of capacity, for the first half of this year, compared with 77 percent a year ago, to keep down the storage of unsold products. The demand for oil products is down a hefty 6.2 percent from a year ago, reflecting both the impact of higher prices and the slower pace of the national economy.

There is plenty of crude oil available to run through the refineries. World inventories of crude petroleum are about 500 million barrels above normal levels, according to Thomas Peake, economics department manager at Chevron Oil Co., the domestic arm of Standard Oil of California.

"A lot of the oil is at sea, on tankers steaming slowly, or sailing around in circles," Peake said, exaggerating a bit to make his point. Some tankers, availaable at depressed rates, have been chartered to stay in docks as floating storage vessels, according to an official of another giant international company.

The non-communist world consumes about 50 million barrels of oil a day. There is now about 5 million barrels a day of surplus productive capacity — meaning that much more crude oil could be pumped if the producing countries wanted to expand their output. Production has been dropping, particularly in the nations that charge a premium for their oil — Libya, Nigeria and Algeria. The customers — the oil companies — are simply buying less of the high-priced crude, forcing production cutbacks.

But the glut, which is really a surplus that ebbs and flows, is a short-term phenomenon. If Saudi Arabia, for example, were to cut 3 million barrels a day from its production of 10 million, the glut would vanish. Nervous oil buyers, worried about further cuts, probably would rush into the market, seeking extra supplies for storage. And their very nervousness would drive the market tighter, sending prices up as companies bid for supplies, fearing the next day's charge would be even higher.

A 5 percent supply loss in 1979, during the Iranian revolution, led to panic buying, triggering a price explosion that drove up the cost of oil more than 100 percent in a year. Yet an identical supply loss when the Iran-Iraq war broke out in 1980 had virtually no impact on prices because inventories were adequate and buyers stayed calm. The 1979 situation resulted in a "shortage", while 1980 was characterized as a period of "glut."

The West Coast reactions to the differing national supply situations were similar — panic in 1979 and nonchalance today.

In 1979, demand for gasoline in the states west of the Rocky Mountains totaled 1,120,000 barrels daily. Demand for the first half of this year was 1,055,000 barrels daily. (There are 42 gallons in a barrel.) The difference was slight, yet 1979 was the year that saw gasoline lines at service stations, pump attendants wearing pistols and some commuters riding horses. In 1981, nothing happened except that prices rose.

In 1979, gasoline supplies were very low in the East, and there was no extra fuel to send to the starved California markets, Atlantic Richfield's Wagner noted. Demand for gasoline was very strong. When the first lines formed, panic spread quickly and drivers tried to keep their tanks filled constantly, a process which almost guarantees a shortage.

(The average driver usually has about a quarter of a tankful at any given time, according to surveys. During panic shortages, the average motorist keeps the tank three quarters full. With millions of cars carrying extra gasoline in their tanks, service stations are easily drained.).

Chevron had two large gasoline producing units in California shut down from April through June of this year, reducing gasoline production. Atlantic Richfield's normal maintenance program took longer than anticipated.

West Coast refineries also were processing increased amounts of heavier California and Alaska crude oil, which yield less natural gasoline than the lighter imported crudes from Saudi Arabia and Indonesia.

As a result, gasoline inventories on the West Coast began slipping badly in March. For April, May and June, there was less gasoline on hand than during the same months of 1979, when lines were common at gas stations.

"We could have had a very tight situation," said Wagner. But gasoline lines and panic were averted: demand was lower than it had been in 1979, and the industry was able to bring additional supplies through the Panama Canal from the East.

In the early part of the year, gasoline was moving from the West to the East. But in April this movement of extra gasoline switched and began going from the East to the West.

West Coast supplies are now returning to normal. Gasoline inventories rose rapidly early in July, and prices are dropping in the wholesale spot market, which covers shipments not under long-term contract.

Higher inventories will lead to lower retail prices on the West Coast because the companies want to avoid storage costs. With more fuel coming into the market, prices should weaken and fall, according to industry officials. California gasoline costs should decline, dropping closer to the national average price.

Twin pumping units in Exxon U.S.A.'s Sand Hills Field, in the company's Midland production district, an 115,000-square-mile area of West Texas. There are approximately 1,800 wells in the district, producing 17,000 barrels of oil and 450 million cubic feet fo naturla gas per day.

Higher oil prices spurring exploration in East Africa

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — East Africans have embarked on a big hunt for oil, hoping to match discoveries in west Africa that are transforming some of the world's poorest countries.

Spurred by skyrocketing bills for oil imports, the governments of Somalia, Kenya, Tanzania and Mozambique have given permission to foreign oil companies to begin exploration. South Africa, threatened by a possible international oil boycott because of its apartheid policies, also is searching.

The African continent has long been a major producer of oil, but so far the rich fields have been confined to the north — Libya and Algeria — and the west — Nigeria and Gabon.

But experts in the four eastern countries, stretching more than 2,500 miles along the coast, say that region has potential oil-generating geological formations, both on land and offshore.

Comparatively few wells have been drilled in the area and nearly all have been dry. The outlook for major discoveries is uncertain, at best.

In the past 20 months, since Somalia lost a war with Ethiopia and broke with the Soviet Union, five big Western oil companies have signed agreements with the Somali government for exploration and drilling rights over half the country, as well as offshore. More companies are expected to join in soon.

Mineral Resources Minister Hussein Kassim says 94 percent of Somalia is composed of oil-generating marine sediment. But Andy Anderson, a manager for Cities Service Co. of Tulsa, Okla., rates the chance of finding oil in Somalia as only a "slim possibility."

In Kenya, an American consortium — Cities Service, Union Oil Co. and Marathon Oil Co. — is about to begin drilling 15 miles offshore in Ngwana Bay, north of the resort of Malindi.

Western experts say Kenya's geological formations have the potential for oil, but the same area was previously explored by Shell and a French company without success.

During the last 26 years, 14 wells have been drilled in Kenya and not a drop of oil has been found.

Tanzania signed an agreement with the Algerian oil company, Sonatrach, last month to drill wells and carry out a seismic survey on Mafia Island. Five wells have been drilled near Songo Songo Island, off Tanzania's southern coast, by a multinational group assisted by the World Bank, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and the European Investment Bank.

Tanzanian officials say test wells have revealed some oil deposits but the quantity and quality have not been determined.

Tanzania also has discovered natural gas and has formed the Kilwa Ammonia Co. with the U.S.-based firm Agrico to produce ammonia and urea for fertilizer, starting in 1985.

Mozambique's secretary of state for coal and hydrocarbons, Abdul Magid, said in June the country plans to invite bids for offshore prospecting rights next year. The Mozambican news agency, AIM, reported that contracts were signed June 27 with the Geophysical Co. of Norway and the Western Geophysical Co. of Houston for seismic explorations on the continental shelf.

Magid said three natural gas fields were discovered in the past two decades but that the extent of Mozambique's reserves was still unknown.

Oil discoveries in any of the east African countries could bring unprecedented prosperity. In Tanzania and Somalia, they could make the difference between economic survival and collapse.

Tanzania, where a decline in revenue from agricultural exports has brought the economy near a standstill, spends 60 percent of its foreign exchange on oil, despite stringent gasoline rationing. Somalia, a nomadic nation with few exports, is burdened by hundreds of thousands of refugees from drought and the war with Ethiopia.

Somali officials say export earnings last year, nearly $130 million, merely covered the oil import bill. National Planning Minister Mohamed Omar Giama says, "All major development projects have been subject to suspension due to lack of fuel."

While east Africa struggles to join the club of oil nations, west Africa is moving to increase exports and locate new fields.

Nigeria, Libya, Algeria and Gabon already are big exporters and are members of OPEC, and recent discoveries in the huge Gulf of Guinea oil fields extending along Africa's west coast from the Ivory Coast to Angola could pave the way to an oil-rich future for a dozen more countries.

Angola and Cameroon are exporting oil and the Reagan administration has recently approved an $85 million loan to Angola through the U.S. Export-Import Bank to double productioorting. The Ivory Coast's recently discovered Espoir-Hope field, being worked by Phillips Petroleum Co., is expected to become the biggest producer in west Africa after Nigeria.

Experts believe there is oil somewhere offshore along most of the gulf, mainly in deep water. Explorations are currently under way off Sierra Leone, Guinea, Guinea Bissau, Liberia and Equatorial Guinea.

Production for domestic needs is under way off Ghana, and Norway is expected to become involved in oil production off Benin at the end of the year.

And South Africa, with an abundance of coal but no proven oil reserves, is exploring a promising oceanbed site 55 miles south of Mossel Bay, along the southern coast. The government-run Southern Oil Exploration Corp. says the site has more apparent potential for natural gas than for oil.

Union, DOE sign synfuel contract

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Energy has signed a $400 million contract with Union Oil Co. guaranteeing subsidized government purchases of synthetic fuel produced at a plant the company is building in Colorado.

Connie Stuart, a DOE spokeswoman, said the deal was concluded Wednesday after being approved by President Reagan, settling an internal Cabinet dispute between Energy Secretary James Edwards and budget director David Stockman, who opposes synfuel subsidies.

As he signed the contract, Edwards apparently also settled a dispute with the House Government Operations Committee over his refusal to provide documents about the shale oil project that had been subpoenaed by the panel.

Moffett said he doubted a citation would pass now.

Basin area drilling up

The number of rotary drilling rigs working the Permian Basin counties of West Texas and eastern New Mexico is up 20. During the week of July 27 to 31, 471 rigs were making hole, according to a Reed Rock Bit Co. survey. The week before, there were 451.

The International Association of Drilling Contractors reports that during the week ending July 27 there were 4,009 rigs working across the nation. There were 1,476 working in Texas — on and offshore — and New Mexico.

One year ago in the Basin, there were 329 rigs turning to the right.

OIL INDUSTRY NOTES

The No. 1 Southwest Midland, located about 3 1/2 miles from town, is a flowing oil well producing stabilized flows of 105 barrels of oil per day and 207,000 cubic feet of gas per day, on a 16/64-inch choke, with 350 pounds of flowing tubing pressure.

Production is through perforations between 11,691 to 11,711 feet in a newly discovered Mississippian age reservoir.

Pressure Coring, Inc. has added conventional coring service to its existing pressure coring operation.

The PCI conventional coring tools will cut 3 3/8-inch diameter cores in 20-foot, 40-foot or 60-foot lengths, using a 4 3/4-inch barrel and a 6 1/2-inch poly/crystalline diamond coring bit.

The company is claiming that producers can substantially lower their operatng costs by having both conventional and pressure coring services performed by a single operator.

Midland Southwest Corp. recently announced successful completion of a second group of three oil wells in an 18-well drilling program in the Austin Chalk Trend of south Texas.

Well No. 4 was drilled in Gonzales County, well No. 5 and No. 6 were drilled in Burleson County. They flowed 338 barrels of oil per day and 50,000 cubic feet per day of gas; 79 BOPD and 300 mcf; and 289 BOPD and 315 mcf respectively.

Midland Southwest has a 25 percent working interest in the drilling program, which involved $5 million in capital expenditures.

****

Dawson Geophysical Co. recently announced that its revenues for the nine-month period ending June 30, were at a record high.

L. Decker Dawson, president and chief executive officer, sait revenues were $11,361,675; a 66 percent increase over the $6,847,375 recorded during the same period a year ago.

Net income for the nine months was $2,154,413; an increase of 150 percent over the $859,411 earned last year.

Dawson attributed the dramatic increase in revenues to strong demand for the company's seismographic exploration services. It operates primarily in the southwestern and Rocky Mountain areas. Dawson Geophysical was founded at Midland in 1952.

G. Arthur Donnelly III, chairman and president of Midland Southwest Corp., recently announced the company's revenues for the six months ending June 30, reached $14,111,039; up 70 percent from $8,298,985 reported for the first half of 1980. Net earnings after taxes were $2,469,555, up 185 percent.

The puchase of Equipment, Inc. was completed June 1, and the results of operations for one month are reflected in the six-month financial statements, contributing $922,178 to total sales. Contract drilling revenues increased 74 percent to $10,719,611; oil and gas revenues increased 36 percent to $274,697.

Midland Sosuthwest is primarily engaged in contract drilling for oil and gas; in the esploration and developemtn of oil and gas for its own account; in gas gathering activities in Texas and oklahoma and in the supply business along the Gulf Coast.

****

Canyon Conolidated, Inc. recently announced the aquisition of Ventura Manufacturing Company. Ventura manufactures aircraft support equipment, cargo-to-passenger conversion modules, aircraft comfort amenities and modifies fuselage air frames. The company's headquarters and principal plant are located near Kelly Air Force Base at San Antonio.

W.F. Ortloff, Canyon's president, said that the aquisition is a step in his company's diversification program; to expand outside its present activities of crude oil and gas gathering, gas compression and transportaion.

Pressure Coring, Inc. has announced the introduction of a directional coring barrel that permits the taking of pressure cores in deviated or directionally drilled holes with an angle in the 30 to 40 degree range.

The angle of deviation from the vertical position that can be successfully cored will be partially dependent upon the formation type, with consolidated formations being better able to sustain the greater angles.

The R&D division of PCI states that the initial tests have been slightly gratifying in their results and plans are being formulated to conduct a series of field operatioal runs prior to finalizing and adopting the new application design.

Dorchester Gas Corporation has announced it sold its Odessa based chemical manufacturing facility to Permian Chemical Company, Inc., a privately held company. The sale price of $5.5 million, in cash and notes, is approximately equal to the book value of Dorchester's investment in the operations.

The chemical plant was built by Dorchester in 1978 to manufacture hydrochloric acid and potassium sulfate. The operations have not been a profit contirbutor to the company due to delays in both construction and implementation of engineering design. The divestiture of the facility emphasizes Dorchester's strategy to concentrate its activities more in the area of building energy reserves.

Pipeline equipment sale to Russia approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration gave its approval Friday for export of new pipeline-laying equipment to the Soviet Union, accompanying the announcement with assurances for European nations that are uneasy about becoming overly dependent on Soviet gas supplies.

Friday's Commerce Department announcement said approval had been granted for export of 100 pipe-layers by the Caterpillar Tractor Co. of Peoria, Ill.

The pipe-layers are replacements for units exported to the Soviet Union in past years, the announcement said, and it noted that the Soviets can get such equipment elsewhere.

The government controls export of such oil and gas pipe-layers "for foreign policy reasons," the announcement said. But it also said they "represent low-technology equipment."

"This licensing action in no way diminishes the administration's intent to address the long-term security aspects of Western investment in and dependence on Soviet gas supplies," the announcement said.

"The administration has begun actions with our allies to minimize long-term Western strategic dependence and vulnerability," it said.

A Commerce spokesman, asking not to be named, said that sentence apparently was a reference to recent talks — during the economic summit in Canada — concerning improving controls over trade with the Soviets.

The announcement said that "under the terms of the license and sales agreement, the pipelayers involved in this transaction are not to be used in construction of the proposed 3,000-mile Siberian-West European gas pipeline project."

Rocky Flats plutonium facility ready for use

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — The operators of the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant said Friday they are on the verge of completing a $215 million plutonium recovery facility.

Radioactive plutonium materials will be moved into te new facility starting next week, and engineers will begin processing the materials into plutonium metal, plant officials said.

The facility is the plant's largest expansion project.

Rocky Flats, operated by Rockwell International under contract with the Department of Energy, manufactures components for nuclear weapons.

Plant General Manager R. O. Williams said 10 years of design and construction work went into the new recovery facility, which is the only operation of its kind in the nation.

Don Ofte, the Energy Department's top official at the plant, said the structure is capable of withstanding 300 mph winds or an earthquake measuring up to 6.2 on the Richter scale.

The new facility is expected to provide jobs for an additional 200 to 250 people and will go into full production by next March, officials said.

The building has several valves that will close in less than two seconds to seal the facility's operations from the outside in the event of an accident, officials said.

The facility also is equipped with robotic devices and remote-handling equipment that will provide for a greater separation between employees and the plutonium metal, they said.

Haig heads to Mexico for North-South summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. headed for Mexico Friday for a weekend of meetings with 21 other foreign ministers to lay the groundwork for the so-called North-South summit conference in October.

Haig and his colleagues, representing a broad sampling of industrialized democracies and developing countries, will attempt to reach agreement on agenda and procedural issues for the October meeting.

The conference this weekend — and the summit conference as well — will take place in the Mexican resort town of Cancun.

The summit meeting, which will be attended by President Reagan, represents a renewed effort by rich and poor countries to develop a common policy for dealing with long-term international economic problems.

A number of North-South conferences held over the past decade have failed to produce agreement on ways to narrow the income gap between affluent countries and the developing world.

A member of the U.S. official party traveling to Mexico said a principal U.S. objective at the summit "will be to avoid the kind of sterile North-South debate which has characterized previous meetings."

The official, who asked not to be identified, said the administration believes the summit will be much more useful if it is carried out in a relaxed atmosphere free of formal trappings.

In Senate testimony Thursday, Haig said the United States seeks "helpful and constructive relations" with less industrialized nations.

Generally, however, Third World leaders regard the Reagan administration as being insensitive to issues important to them.

NRC rejects closure petition

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has rejected a petition from a woman who sought to close all nuclear plants in the country on the grounds they posed unacceptable health risks, the agency said Friday.

The NRC released Friday a 37-page opinion in which it turned down the petition Jeannine Honicker of Nashville, Tenn. filed three years ago.

Mrs. Honicker had sought not only to shut down the country's 70 operating nuclear power plants but also all uranium mining and enrichment activities because radioactivity from these activities would cause "hundreds to thousands" of additional cancer deaths.

The NRC said Ms. Honicker far overestimated the numbers of deaths that will result from use of nuclear power. The commission said since her petition was filed the agency has already imposed more stringent regulations at uranium mines on mill tailing piles to cut down radiation.

While nuclear power will result in some deaths, so would any other method of generating electricity, the commission said. It did not gave an estimate of future deaths from any method.

"The number of deaths estimated to result from the nuclear power progam is extremely small compared to the number of persons benefited," the commission said.

No objections to DuPont's bid, no word on Mobil's

By R. A. ROSENBLATT
(c) 1981, The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The Department of Justice, completing an antitrust review, said Friday it had no objections to DuPont's proposed $7.3 billion takeover of Conoco Inc., but the government remained silent on its position on Mobil Corp.'s bid for Conoco.

The ninth ranking U.S. oil company and 17th among all American corporations in sales, Conoco is being sought by a trio of suitors: chemical giant DuPont, distilling conglomerate Seagram Co. Ltd., and Mobil, which is second only to Exxon among oil companies.

DuPont is the leading contender. Owners of 48 million Conoco shares, or 56 percent of the company's stock, have agreed tentatvely to sell to DuPont. Conoco shareholders offered the stock to DuPont in response to its bid of $95 for each of the first 38.7 million shares, and 1.7 shares of DuPont for each remaining Conoco share. The DuPont stock is worth about $76.

The Department of Justice earlier had expressed concern on antitrust grounds about Conoco's joint venture with Monsanto in a petrochemical plant at Chocolate Bayou, Texas. DuPont competes with Monsanto as a major producer of plastics and fibers made from chemicals. To eliminate that potential problem, DuPont quickly agreed to sell Conoco's share of the plant to Monsanto, or else buy out Monsanto's interest.

Either solution would satisfy the Department of Justice.

"No other aspect of DuPont's planned merger with Conoco appears to us to be objectionable on antitrust grounds," the Department of Justice said Friday in a letter to DuPont.

The company will file court papers agreeing to dispose of the Monsanto joint venture. After that, the Department of Justice will waive the remainder of the 30-day waiting period for preliminary review of big mergers, and DuPont Tuesday will begin mailing checks to the Conoco shareholders who have offered their stock, a DuPont spokeswoman said Friday.

The Conoco shareholders, however, are still free to withdraw their promises, and instead offer the stock to the other bidders. Mobil is offering $105 a share for 51 percent of the stock, and securities valued at $85 for the remaining shares. Seagram is offering $92 a share for 51 percent of the Conoco stock.

Business Briefs

Dr. S.J. (Sal) Mazzullo has announced the opening of his offices in Midland as a geological consultant for reservoir analyses of carbonates and sandstones.

His emphasis is on regional and local facies and porosity analyses and field studies as predictive tools for hydrocarbon exploration in stratigraphic traps. He has spent the last seven years performing such analyses from cores and cuttings samples, in such areas as the Permian Basin, Anadarko Bain, Denver-Julesburg Basin, deep Jurassic of the Gulf Coast region, and eastern Overthrust Belt.

He was senior staff stratigrapher and manager of the stratigraphic exploration group for Union Texas Petroleum Corporation for the past three years.

His offices are temporarily located at 2800 Sentinel in Midland. His permanent offices will be at 602 North Baird beginning October 1.

Mazzullo has authored more than 50 technical papers and books on such subjects as stratigraphic traps and reservoir analysis of carbonate rocks, ancient reef depositional environments, carbonate diagenesis, dolomitization,and depositional environments in sandstones.

He is a member of the AAPG, SEPM, IAS, WTGS, PBS-SEPM and other professional societies.

Administration impounding gasohol loan guarantees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is effectively impounding $250 million in federal loan guarantees Congress authorized the Agriculture Department to issue for alcohol fuel plant development.

In a letter earlier this month, Frederick N. Khedouri of the Office of Management and Budget, asked Agriculture Secretary John Block to advise "concerned members of Congress" of that decision.

"This administration has opposed federal loans and loan guarantees to support alcohol fuel production," Khedouri reminded Block.

He called the loan guarantees, authorized earlier this year, "both unnecessary to a viable alcohol fuels program and inconsistent with the president's economic program."

"Therefore, we do not plan to use the authorization," he told Block.

Khedouri said the alcohol fuels industry already has enough incentive through its exemption from federal fuel taxes and fuel taxes in 30 states, investment tax credits and decontrol of oil prices.

During confirmation hearings Wednesday on Charles Shuman's appointment as head of the Farmers Home Administration, which would administer the loan guarantee program, Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., questioned the decision to withhold the loan guarantees in light of the express congressional intent that they be used.

Schuman gave Zorinsky and Sen. Mark Andrews, R-N.D., no assurance that as FmHA chief he would try to comply with what they said was their congressional intent.

He also declined to say he would recommend to White House officials that they seek formal congressional approval of the decision.

While saying he would not "take issue with the Congress," Schuman only repeated the administration's position that incentives already available are sufficient.

Federal law prohibits the executive branch from impounding funds specifically appropriated by Congress, but Khedouri said attorneys for both the Agriculture Department and OMB had determined that loan guarantee authority is not subject to that law.

Because of those legal opinions, he said, it was not necessary for Congress to formally reverse its earlier action.

Licensing board orders plan for bigger quake

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Onofre nuclear power plant must be prepared to withstand a massive earthquake of 7.5 on the Richter scale

Southern California Edison Co. was told to present a new emergency plan at hearings before the board starting Aug. 25 in Orange County.

The utility, which owns 80 percent of the San Onofre plant, has argued that emergency planning need not consider the possibility of a "maximum credible earthquake," which it described as a magnitude of 7 on the Richter scale.

But power plant opponents told a hearing in San Diego that Edison underestimated the size of a possible quake and the length of the underwater fault system five miles from the plant.

A drill of the utility's emergency-response plan in the event of an earthquake was conducted on May 14 but was described by the Federal Emergency Management Agency as inadequate.

Administrative Law Judge James L. Kelley said Thursday that the licensing board's new ruling broadens the planning requirements set by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission after the Three Mile Island accident in Pennsylvania in 1979.

Another administrative judge, Cadet H. Hand, said the decision combined concern about Three Mile Island "and general earthquake concern in California."

The utility must be prepared to cope with an earthquake that simultaneously causes severe radiation leaks and knocks out communications and transportation, the four-page ruling said.

Bert Turner, manager of Orange County's emergency management division, called the board's ruling "the most ridiculous thing I ever heard of. Because of our position on the coast, all it takes is one bridge to be down or one rockslide to block a road and we're out of business as far as mutual aid is concerned."

Until now, required emergency-response plans for nuclear mishaps have assumed telephone lines, freeway bridges and other facilities to be intact.

Manipulation documented

SEATTLE (AP) — Stock manipulation by a Chicago broker caused a dramatic rise and fall in the price of Olympia Brewing Co. stock in the mid 1970s, federal investigators allege in court documents.

In papers filed with the U.S. District Court, the Securities and Exchange Commission said R. Jack Bernhardt was chiefly responsible for the near tripling in price of Olympia stock to $61,75 a share and its subsequent tumble to $23.13, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer reported Sundav.

Mobil profits up, Cities Service down

By FLOYD NORRIS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Mobil Corp., the nation's second largest oil company, reported a 2 percent gain in second-quarter profit Wednesday and said higher profits on U.S. energy operations more than offset a decline in overseas earnings.

Mobil said it earned $700 million, or $1.65 a share, up from $688 million, or $1.62 a share a year earlier. Revenues rose to $16.6 billion from $15.4 billion.

Mobil said its Mongomery Ward retail stores continue to be plagued by losses, which it blamed on competitive pressures and high interest rates. Montgomery Ward lost $28 million in the quarter, compared with a loss of $36 million in the same quarter a year ago.

Another oil company, Cities Service Co., reported a 15 percent decline in second-quarter earnings, but said that refining and marketing operations were profitable after posting a loss in the first quarter.

Cities Service said it earned $90.5 million, or $1.09 a share, down from $107 million, or $1.29 a share in the same period of 1980. Revenues rose to $2.27 billion from $1.84 billion.

Cities Service President Charles J. Waidelich said, "Higher earnings in domestic exploration and production and natural gas transmission were more than offset by declines in other business segments. Exploration expense increased by 30 percent, reflecting the company's expanding search for new energy resources."

The 1981 quarter included a profit of $13 million resulting from the settlement of helium contract litigation with the federal government.

Mobil reported it made $279 million on U.S. energy operations, up 13 percent from a year earlier, but said foreign energy earnings of $453 million were down 4 percent.

One concern of business people, whether they are connected with a large or small business, is saving money while increasing efficiency. Basin Tex-Tronics, 2512 W. Ohio, can save your business money and make your mailing process simplier.

Basin Tex-Tronics is an authorized agent for Friden electronic mailing equipment. Boyd Bowen has been in business 17 years and has been an agent for Friden mailing equipment for the past 4 years.

Friden has mailing equipment to handle small businesses, as well as complete systems for the large business. A small business could use a postage meter to savemoney. Meter mail moves through the mail faster and there is the conveience of having the machine in the office. Time that used to be spent buying stamps at thepost office now may be spent productively. Large businesses could benefit from acomplete mailing system that could include as all-electronic postage computing scale, an all-electronic UPS register, and all-electronic accumulating printer. Bowen says electronic scales are the most time-saving, money-saving item they have. Friden is now selling a line of newly designed mailroom furniture which Bowen feels is the best on the market.

A telephone call to Basin Tex-Tronics can usually establish what equipment a business needs. There are also salesmen available to demonstrate the equipment andadvise what would be best for their business.

To find out how electronic mailing equipment can help your business in Midland or Odessa call Basin Tex-Tronics at 683-1351 or stop by 2512 W. Ohio between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday-Friday. There is also an office located at 1410 Avenue Q in Lubbock. Their phone number is (806) 747-3193. All Friden electronic mailroom equipment may be purchased or leased.

Basin Tex-Tronics also sells and services Toshiba and Canon calculators.

Basin Tex-Tronics is an established long-time business and as an agent can givetheir customers more time and personalized attention.

Ventarama skylights add dimension to room planning in homes, offices

Skylights are the greatest room planning discovery in the building products field. They work for almost any room, any roof, and in any climate. Ventarama combines the qualities of a skylight with the features of a window. It gives maximum light with a minimum opening, at an economical cost.

You can open up a dreary room with light all day, the moon at night, and have a place for your favorite hanging plants. The ability to open and close creates natural air-conditioning for both room and house and in the most important levels.

Ventarama has a very special dome designed with deep molded sides. It is shatterproof, weatherproof, extremely durable and insulated. There are solar values in summer or winter and power savings the year round. A Ventarama with its light-shaft to a room below is always practical and visually exciting and motorized units are available for high ceilinged rooms.

It should be worthwhile to consider that, in less than a day, a Ventarama can turn the ordinary into the spectacular.

Ventarama skylights are distributed by Skylights of Texas, 2003 W. Industrial Avenue, 682-8721.

Skylights are energy efficient because they lower the cost of operation for your home. Ventarama skylights have a lifetime guarantee against leakage, breakage and rust. All sizes are available and homeowners may have a free home inspection upon request.

Skylights of Texas also sells Patton ceiling fans which have five-year warranty.

Skylights of Texas will be opening a new branch office at 1015 N. Midkiff the first of August.

To find out how skylights or ceiling fans can be used in your home call Skylights of Texas at 682-8721 or stop by 2003 W. Industrial Avenue between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday-Friday.

Reagan creates landslide by knowing when to compromise

NEW YORK (AP) — By the power of his conviction, by his willingness to compromise on the small issues to gain something bigger, and because of grass roots lobbying, Ronald Reagan has created a landslide again.

In another contest that was supposed to have been close but wasn't, the President swept aside opposition to his tax-cut plan and emerged from the Congressional debate with overwhelmingly favorable votes.

But did he and his people do it alone? No way. He had the help of the people, of course, and the good sense to recognize it. And, like good performers in all walks of life, his sense of timing was superb.

Or is that the way to put it? When historians write of this era of new conservatism, of old economics presented as new and experimental, they will probably say that Reagan didn't set the clock so much as events did, and that his role has been to respond when the alarm went off.

Which is to say that Republican Reagan, like Democratic leaders whose giveaways he said had gotten the country into an economic mess, is in the enviable position of being able to give the people what they want.

In this instance, the people appear to have declared themselves in favor of less government, though it means fewer government services; lower taxes, though cuts mean fewer social services; and more control over their money — to earn it, save it, spend it, invest it.

It is a vast, and to some old political hands who thought they had the knowhow and the commitment from the people to do what they thought best for them, an incomprehensible change of mind and soul.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Bedwetting not unusual, for boy or girl

Dear Dr. Solomon: My 7-year-old son continues to wet the bed at night and feels miserable about it; I know he's at least as unhappy about the situation as I am. I've had him to our pediatrician for a complete checkup and have been assured that he is in good physical health.

What's next? If I thought that psychiatric treatment would help him, I wouldn't hesitate; but I don't want to get him involved in any long-term treatment unless it's clear that that's the best thing to do. How common a problem is bedwetting? I'd welcome any help you could offer. — Mrs. N.Z.

Dear Mrs. Z.: From 20 percent to 25 percent of all children 5 to 6 years of age, almost evenly divided between boys and girls, wet the bed. By 11 years of age, many more boys than girls continue to do so. By age 12, two percent to four percent of children are still enuretic, while among adults the figure is one percent.

In regard to what you can do about it, you've already taken the first step by having your son evaluated by your pediatrician. Your concern and understanding that he is unhappy about bed-wetting are good signs that a sound basis exists for him to get the help he needs.

Dr. Charles Keith, an associate professor of psychiatry at the Duke University Medical Center, says that 97 percent of children over four years of age who are persistent bed-wetters are physically healthy. Nevertheless, the possibility of some physical basis for the enuresis must be considered before other steps are undertaken. From 30 percent to 40 percent of these children have emotional problems that require some form of psychiatric treatment.

Although you mention a physical checkup for your son, you say nothing about a psychiatric evaluation. Some pediatricians have the expertise to assess the extent of any emotional problems in their young patients, but this is not always the case. If yourson's bed-wetting is the result of an emotional problem, some form of psychotherapy would be indicated; if an emotional problem is ruled out, you would have to look elsewhere for a solution.

According to Dr. Keith, behavioral treatment for bed-wetters shows a cure rate of about 90 percent, with fewer relapses than occur following any other method of treatment. One form makes use of a pad and alarm system that sounds when the child wets the bed, waking him up. Another behavioral approach is to train the child to hold urine during the day for increasingly longer periods of time. A reward system, which involves having the parents give the child something of value, can serve as reinforcement and increase the likelihood of success.

Some physicians use drugs in the treatment of noctural enuresis. One dose taken at bedtime helps one-half of all bed-wetters stop within a few days. Once the drug is stopped, however, about half of these children start wetting the bed.

I want to make clear that I am not recommending the use of drugs or behavioral treatment in your son's case; such a recommendation would have to come from a physician a lot closer to the situation than I am. But in the apparent absence of a physiological basis for the enuresis, these approaches, or psychiatric treatment — or doing nothing — would appear to be the options.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

CONSUMER TIPS

Publications appeal to your vanity

By LINDA TRUITT
Better Business Bureau
of the Permian Basin, Inc.

Have you ever received a mail solicitation stating your were recognized as a community leader and for a modest fee your biography would be included in a book of distinguished personalities?

Or perhaps the solicitation suggested your surname was rare and for a low fee you could purchase a book explaining your family ancestry?

Vanity publications, as they are often called, exist because people enjoy seeing their name in print. There are numerous publishers ready and willing to assist aspiring authors or recognize community leaders for a specific sum. While there are many respectable vanity publishers, it has been the experience of the Better Business Bureau that often the advertising is misleading and many people are disappointed either with the publication or with the service they receive.

By learning the type of vanity publications, you can avoid buying a product or service that brings only frustration and dissatisfaction.

— Ancestory Books. The direct mail advertising will imply that your surname has been extensively researched and is very rare. It will also suggest that the book contains an explanation of your family background.

Actually, the book will only contain a list of names and addresses of many others in the United States having your same name. Other chapters will be devoted to general subjects such as how to research a family history and geneological charts for you to fill in.

— Biographical Directories. Patterned after the "Who's Who" publications, various publishers solicit the biographies of persons for inclusion in directories, which may bear prestigious-sounding titles.

The solicitation will often come after your name has appeared in the newspaper, and is typically accompanied by the request for a "membership" fee, or for an order of one or more copies of the projected directory.

The distribution of the book is usually limited to libraries and those who order a copy because their biography will be included.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Veteran actor Martin Sheehan celebrates his birthday today. And on this day in 1481, Christopher Columbus set sail from Spain with the Nina, the Pinta and the Santa Maria, and a crew of 90 men. The coming year will be a time of great adventure and discovery for you! Business progress depends on your ability to come up with original ideas. Although the money situation remains tight, you find new ways to increase savings, build up investment capital. Romance enjoys favorable influences, and marital conflict should be substantially reduced. You and your loved ones benefit from a change in environment.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Work is excellent therapy for those who feel down in the dumps. Avoid seeking oversimplified solutions and you will find the right answers. A sense of humor is a valuable asset now.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A cooperative attitude counts big with the boss. Put your ego aside and join others in getting the job done quickly. Ignore gossip or romance could turn sour.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Someone may try to distract you from your goals this week. Ignore this person's "bright ideas" and stick to the "tried-and-true." Avoid making romance any more complex than it already is!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): There could be a hidden motive for wanting to communicate with someone far away. Certain information is withheld. Postpone negotiations involving your career or finances.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Hard work and a desire to be of service are the main ingredients for success. Artistic debuts are in the spotlight. If engaged, you could be having second thoughts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Examine even minute differences of opinion to prevent errors. Follow higher-ups' instructions. Emphasize domestic harmony when dealing with family members.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An attitude of "give-and-take" will ensure progress at work, home. Sign agreements, contracts. Keep secrets. Extend a helping hand to someone with a problem.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can now increase your earnings. Perform services for kin without attaching any strings. The comforts of home could be much more appealing than an expensive night on the town.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Everything should go smoothly at work now. Seek cooperation from someone who has been opposing you for no particular reason. Travel can be beneficial now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do not let ambition get in the way of progress. Your practical, hard-working ways pay off handsomely. Romantic interlude starts the week off on a happy note.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your powers of concentration are excellent today. Tackle that paper work you have been avoiding. Review your past mistakes and profit from them.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Pursue your immediate objectives and you will probably be able to reach way beyond what you thought possible. Relative lends a helping hand. Review your financial situation.

RINGING THE BELL

College facing bleak future

With BOB TIEUEL

A Black College Faces Bleak Future: In a recent letter to alumni, Dr. Harry S. Wright, president of Bishop College, a black-Baptist oriented institution of Dallas, stated that despite significant improvements in nearly a dozen areas, the college is still floundering financially and may not open for the fall semester.

Wright said the college needs at least $100,000 in order to make the August 10 payroll.

"If we miss this payroll, we would have difficulty staying open in September, and progress made thus far would be negated. Accreditation with the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools would surely be in jeopardy," Wright said.

A review team from the U.S. Department of Education is scheduled to visit Bishop shortly to examine its operations over the past two years and determine if it can begin repaying a $1.4 million federal debt. In the meantime, Reed Saunders, the Department of Education official who monitors Bishop College and will head the review team, said the agreement could be changed to allow Bishop more time or lower payments. He added that the college was having cash flow problems.

Wright in his letter said there had been increased financial support from black churches and conventions but "our income is just not sufficent for current operations...the realities are that we are falling behind, treading water and buying time."

The letter said Bishop owes the IRS $265,000 in delinquent taxes and must pay $38,000 on Section 207 loans to the federal Education Department immediately in order to receive federal grants.

"Save Bishop Now" rallies were being launched here in Dallas, the Southwest and the nation by alumni, black churches and leaders.

Meanwhile, Dr. Queen F. Randall, 46, an educator from Kansas City, Mo., will become the next president of El Centro College, downtown campus of the Dallas County Community College District. Forty-six percent of the college's 6,405 full time students are black, and 8 percent are Hispanic. Dr. Randall is the first black president of the Dallas Community Colleges. She will take office August 3 and will receive $45,000 per year.

BULLETIN: Texas KKK Grand Dragon Louis Beam will give up his post due to persecution, loss of job and threats against his family, according to our Houston sources.

POSITIVE THINKING

The boy who didn't die

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Over a hundred years ago, in the eastern Berkshires of Massachusetts, a boy named Johnny Ring tried to enlist in the Union forces during the Civil War. But Johnny Ring was under-sized and under-developed; the Army wouldn't have him.

Then he heard that a nineteen-year-old neighbor, young Russell Conwell, fresh from Yale, had been commissioned a captain and empowered to raise an artillery battery. He persuaded Conwell to take him along as his servant because he couldn't be a real soldier.

So, off to war went these New Englanders, their captain proudly wearing a magnificent gilt sword his men had presented to him bearing an inscription in Latin, "True Friendship Is Eternal." Johnny Ring was proud of his captain's sword and spent all his spare time polishing it and keeping it bright.

One day in action the battery's position was overrun and the young captain and his men retreated across a bridge, setting fire to it to avoid pursuit. They were safely across when Johnny Ring realized that his captain's sword had been left behind. He didn't wait to ask permission; he dashed back for it.

Somehow, he got back to the campsite, found the sword and returned to the bridge, now blazing furiously. Plunging through the fire, the sword held high, he crossed admidst the flames only to collapse at Conwell's feet. He lingered for a day or two, then he died.

Not long after, Conwell himself was wounded and lay all night on the battlefield. In his agony, he kept seeing the flamed body of his faithful friend, Johnny Ring, holding his sword. He vowed then, that if he survived, he would live not only his own life but the cut-off life of Johnny Ring as well.

Russell H. Conwell did survive. After the war he returned to New England to become a lawyer, a lecturer, an editor and a correspondent. Finally, at thirty-six, he entered the ministry. Here he found that he could live his own life to the fullest — and live the life of Johnny Ring as well as his own.

For Conwell became not only one of the most renowned ministers of his time, he was also one of the world's most famous lecturers: His lecture "Acres of Diamonds" remains a great inspirational classic. It was given probably more times and in more places than nearly any lecture in American history. It earned more than $4,000,000 and he used this money to found the great Temple University in Philadelphia and to finance the college careers of hundreds of young men. He justified his own life — and the life of Johnny Ring also.

Fear of unflown

CHAMPION, Mich. (AP) — Mother Nature left Hector out on a limb, giving him a terrible fear of the unflown.

When the redheaded Brazilian parrot went camping with his owner, he had to be plucked from a pine by a fire company, which usually reserves rescues from trees for cats.

Gloria Vander Zanden told firefighters that Hector can cause a flap or two, but he simply cannot fly.

She said he was sitting atop of his cage at night when a gust of wind tossed him into the tree, 50 feet up. She tried coaxing him down, but Hector just pined away at Van Riper State Park.

The next morning, Hector was no longer high and dry — just high — after firefighters tried to spray him to earth with a hose. Firefighter Jim Mitchell went up a ladder, got to within arm's length of the bird and stuc out his hand, hoping Hector would hop on.

"Hello," Hector shouted, startling Mitchell and causing cackles among the spectators who had gathered.

A new beginning

Considering all the nail-biting, hand-wringing and gnashing of teeth earlier this week, one would have thought President Ronald Reagan was sure to be handed his first major defeat as the House of Representatives considered his tax cut proposal.

Of course, that's all history now and Mr. Reagan is sitting atop one of the most shining victories of any president in recent memory. A new day has dawned for the American people; the United States stands on the threshold of a new economic beginning, one that emphasizes restraint in government spending and a reduction of the tax burden on the public.

The tax cut bill, which calls for a reduction of more than $753 billion in taxes over the next five years including a 25 percent cut in taxes over 33 months, was ushered through the House by Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock and Rep. Barber Conable of New York. The efforts of Reps. Hance and Conable were vital to passage of the measure. The congressmen worked diligently for the bill's passage and now can breathe a little easier as they view the fruits of their labors.

Passage of the measure also marks a tribute, once again, to the artful, persuasive political abilities of President Reagan, who some have acclaimed since the bill's passage as the most skillful presidential tactician since Franklin Roosevelt. His appeal to the American people Monday night for support of what he termed "the first real tax cut for everyone in almost 20 years" paid off later this week as mail and telephone calls flooded the offices of numerous congressmen and, in some instances, changed minds and votes.

The President made a convincing case that the Hance-Conable offering was vastly superior to the Democratic alternative in that the bill will provide tax relief for economic growth while the alternative by the Democrats was only a plan to redistribute income. He was correct and the American people told their congressmen they thought so, too.

Not all the bill's provisions had been addressed at this writing. Some of the unanswered questions centered on sorely needed tax relief legislation for the oil industry. That fight was anticipated to go down to the wire with a lot of heated lobbying continuing.

It's an impressive tax bill anyway one chooses to view it; it will benefit all Americans.

Passage of the Hance-Conable bill will be long talked because it sets a new course for the people of the United States and their government. It's truly a new beginning.

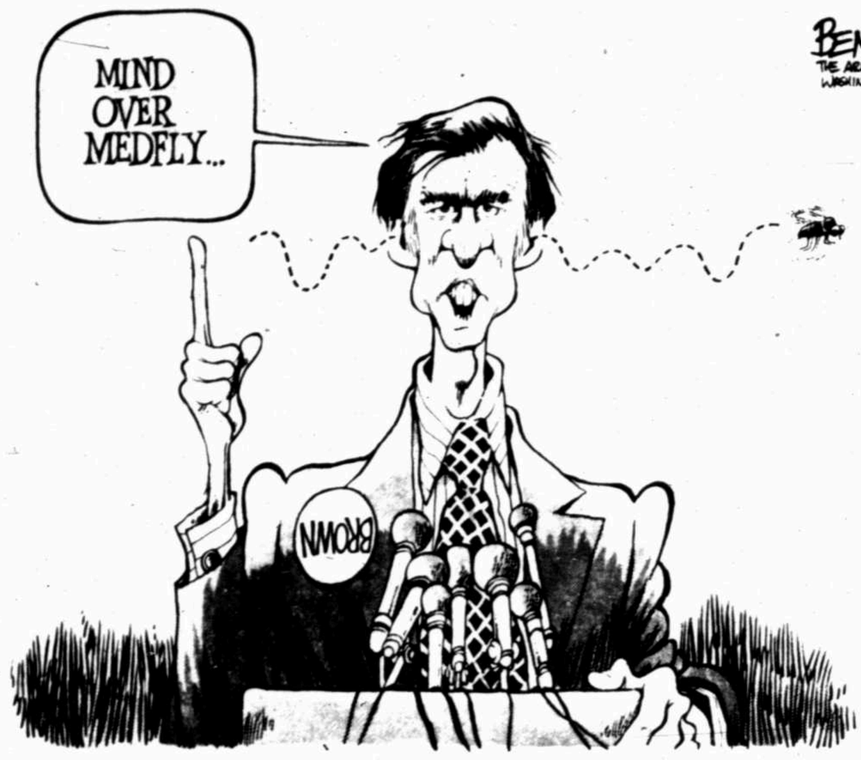
Conservative teen-agers

Most of the results of the latest survey of high school students by the National Center for Education Statistics were predictable. The students are more conservative and more concerned about themselves than their counterparts of a decade ago.

Nine years ago, 19 percent of the students identified themselves as intent on "having lots of money." Now that percentage stands at 31. Similarly predictable: 75 percent of the students spent five hours a week or less on homework, up from 65 percent in 1972.

One surprise: Black students ranked slightly higher than whites in the percentage taking three or more years of math and in the number expecting to attend four or more years of college or other advanced training.

What may be distressing, other than the evidence of grade inflation that only confirms much other data, is that the percentage of students concerned about the social and economic inequities around them has declined precipitously in the past decade. That's no surprise, but it's certainly nothing to cheer about.



WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Two Reagan goals at conflict in Pakistan

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's determination to bolster world resistance to Soviet colonialism and to crack down on the international drug trade, two seemingly unrelated goals, have come into collision in Pakistan.

Jack Anderson

The president wants to send billions of dollars worth of military equipment to Pakistan, whose national airline allegedly is a conduit for narcotics. Indeed, the State Department apparently has known for seven years that Pakistan International Airlines is used by drug smugglers to transport their foul product.

"Available information indicates that PIA is a major conduit for illicit narcotics from Pakistan to Western Europe, the Far East, Canada and the United States," warns one of several secret documents examined by my associates Jack Mitchell and Indy Badhwar.

The drugs "are smuggled aboard PIA planes by pilots, stewards, ground crews and baggage handlers, and are hidden in luggage and various compartments inside the aircraft," one report states.

In the past, the CIA relates, "crew luggage (was) not marked as belonging to a specific crew member, so if the bag containing narcotics should be discovered it cannot be sourced to any one individual."

The PIA dope traffic is no penny-ante operation, the CIA documents make clear. Amounts smuggled out of Pakistan have ranged from small packets of opium to one incredible load of 1,700 kilos — nearly two tons — of hashish.

Pakistan has become the drug-smuggling capital of Asia, and the Karachi airport is the center, with international PIA flights leaving every day for destinations around the world. As a result, "narcotics networks, organized by major international traffickers, have become increasingly active with PIA," according to one CIA report.

The Pakistani airline has a penchant for secreting suspicious-looking containers aboard its planes. For example, I have learned that PIA had hidden cartons marked as stereo equipment above airliner galleys.

The suspicious packages were "in a critical section of the fuselage with naked wires which could have caused shorts and fires," inspectors reported. The Pakistanis had asked the airplane maker to give PIA written assurance that such irregular storage was in fact routine and permissible. But sources familiar with the exchange said the request was turned down by the plane manufacturer on grounds that the storage was an obvious violation of safety rules.

PIA officials have done little or nothing to prevent use of the national airline as a dope delivery system. In a meeting with State Department officials, PIA representatives said there was "little chance to incarcerate or remove from service those PIA personnel involved in drug trafficking" because, as they lamely explained, "they are backed by a powerful union."

How high up the rot extends is not documented. But several years ago a PIA security official was himself arrested in Frankfurt on charges of drug smuggling. And it should be remembered that Pakistan is a military dictatorship, with the national airline under direct control of the top tinhorn's trusted sidekicks.

Maybe the generals are unable to halt the deadly traffic in drugs; maybe they don't want to. In either case, their failure to do so is hardly a recommendation for supplying them with military aid.

Yet the Reagan administration is going ahead with the proposed aid package, which is to include some of our most sophisticated fighter planes. Apparently the decision has been made that it is more important to cultivate Pakistan as an ally than to make an issue over the drug smuggling. The State Department therefore has hushed up the scandal.

Critics, meanwhile, have questioned the wisdom of putting the United States on the side of yet another repressive dictatorship. Diplomatic and intelligence sources have warned that for all its apparently tight control, the military regime is in serious danger of toppling from internal pressures.

President Muhammad Zia's unpopularity among influential Pakistanis and the populace at large increases daily. Far from being a stable ally in the Middle East, these critics warn, Zia may turn out to be another shah of Iran. If he is swept away by a high-level coup or a popular uprising, his successors will harbor understandable resentment against the United States for supporting him.

As I've already reported, hatred of Zia's tyranny has already rubbed off on Americans in Pakistan. Not only was the U.S. Embassy sacked and its personnel terrorized, but individual Americans have been subjected to physical violence in the streets of Pakistani cities — for no other reason than their American citizenship. The resentment against Uncle Sam is already there; it can be expected to explode if and when Zia's U.S.-backed regime is eventually ousted.

The Republicans are coming up with the old familiar reactions to the criticism of Casey — "politics," "fishing expedition," and "lynch mob." Two questions: Isn't that Barry Goldwater holding the rope? And when did he become a Democrat?

●

We might consider that if the charges against William Casey prove to be true, he still should head the CIA. Anyone keeping all those things secret for so long qualifies for the job.

The issue here is stock fraud, which I know nothing about. But I do know this: always steer clear of any broker who wears a cape, black silk hat and a handlebar mustache.

GEORGE F. WILL

Today's art may be abstract or absurd, but it isn't boring!

WASHINGTON — Art lovers are heartened by New York's decision not to prosecute the fellow who put what the police called a bomb atop the Brooklyn Bridge. The fellow, who calls himself an "environmental artist," says the bucket full of fireworks was a "kinetic sculpture." Well, it would have been if the "sculpture" had not had a defective fuse.

George F. Will

A British gallery has a new work, "Room Temperature," featuring two dead flies and a bucket of water, in which float four apples and six uninflated balloons. A gallery official says the work left him "amazed by its completeness, its oneness, its apparent obviousness. Yet it had the ability to tease, to make me wonder, and question, to lead me in other directions. Why? This is air and this is water. Have you looked at them, have you actually seen these elements before? Here they are."

Matisse said he hoped his art would have the pleasing effect of an armchair on a tired businessman. Matisse, alas, is not around to meet the artist who fired a revolver at an airplane taking off from Los Angeles, and called his act a work of art. In 1929 Walter Lippmann said art had "ceased not only to depict any theory of destiny but has ceased to express any important human mood in the presence of destiny." But pistol-packing "artists" express a mood: Anything goes.

In 1977, one of Joseph Beuys' masterpieces — a child's bathtub flecked with sticking plaster — was mistakenly used to cool beer during a party at the museum that owns it. But, then, a conscientious janitor would have cleared away the pile of bricks that was a display at London's Tate Gallery. The bourgeoisie of Hartford, Connecticut, questions the wisdom of spending $87,000 for 36 boulders which an artist-entrepreneur placed in some green space and called "stone field sculpture."

But an American foundation paid $300,000 to finance "Vertical Kilometer," a brass rod one kilometer long, buried in a hole one kilometer deep. The same artist also perpetrated "Lightning Field," a patch of New Mexico made into a pin cushion by metal rods. Ah, wilderness: Consider "Spiral Jetty," a curling path of rocks bulldozed into Utah's Great Salt Lake.

Claes Oldenburg, who makes large toothbrushes and other banalities (Philadelphia has a giant clothespin) once said: "I am for an art that is political-erotical-mystical, that does something other than sit on its ass in a museum." His masterpiece, "Two Cheeseburgers with Everything" (a burlap-and-plaster model of just what the title says), sits in the possession of New York's Museum of Modern Art.

Roy Lichtenstein (he paints large snippets from comic books) once said his aim was to paint a picture so ugly nobody would buy it. The harder he tried, the hotter became his sales. The avant-garde was a 19th century idea of revolutionary daring in the face of stultifying elite standards of acceptable taste. Pity the poor artist today: Where there are no standards, there can be no avant-garde.

Robert Hughes, Time magazine's art critic and author of "The Shock of the New," says that every five years America's art schools graduate more people than lived in Florence in the last quarter of the 15th century, and that there probably are more galleries than bakeries in New York. But college credit in "art" has been given for photographing 650 San Diego garages, and for spending a week in a gym locker (a work — or act — of art called "a duration-confinement body-piece").

The broadened definition of art to include doing anything, as well as making anything, is a triumph of democracy. Everyone can be — indeed, cannot help but be — an artist. Hughes notes that Richard Tuttle "was chosen to represent America at the 1976 Venice Biennale with a stick rather longer than a pencil and three-quarters of an inch thick, cut from a length of standard 1-inch lumber, unpainted, and placed in solitary magnificence on the wall of the U.S. Pavilion." Your tax dollars were at work in that display of purely democratic art: Having no content, Tuttle's "art" was immune to the charge of "elitism."

New York City, which evidently has cash to spare, is considering requiring that works of art be purchased for all new or renovated municipal buildings. In an age when sticks count as art, the supply of art is sure to expand to satisfy the economic demand.

In 1915, Paul Klee said: "The more fearful the world becomes, the more art becomes abstract." What can be inferred about the world when art becomes absurd?

ART BUCHWALD

Writer once scorned can cause pain!

EDITOR'S NOTE: Art Buchwald has gone to summer school for remedial supply-side economics. David Stockman told him he could not go unless he left behind some of his favorite columns.

One of the most important functions a writer has is to provide blurbs for other writers' books. The blurb business is one of the biggest in the country, and it is now estimated that 30,500,226 book blurbs are produced very year in the United States alone.

Art Buchwald

Everyone has seen book blurbs in advertisements such as, "Hym Golderweller has written another 'Godfather,'" or, "Not since 'War and Peace' has anyone caught the spirit of the women's liberation movement better than Sandra Bitter has in 'I Hate You, Marlon Brando.'"

There is a rule in the publishing business that no book can be printed unless the publisher receives 20 blurbs in its favor.

For the public unfamiliar with how book blurbs come about, I think I can be of service. When a book is about to be published, the author is asked by the publisher's publicity department to provide a list of friends, preferably well-known, who will say something nice about the work before publication.

The publicity department then sends out the galleys to people on the list. "Waldo Kransky has asked me to send you the galleys on his latest book, 'The Fingers That Couldn't Walk Through the Yellow Pages.' Would you kindly send us your comments."

Now when I receive the galleys, I am faced with a dilemma. I don't have time to read Kransky's book, but obviously under the rules of the game, I have to provide a blurb. Otherwise when I write a book Kransky won't give me one for my book.

About five books back I had neglected to give Kransky a blurb on his less than bestseller, "The Sexual Myth of the Seat Belt," and I ran into him at a party. He was very miffed. I explained the reason I didn't give a blurb was that his publisher had sent me the typewritten manuscript, which was 900 pages, and I had dropped it on the floor. I could never get the pages back together in any kind of order.

Kransky found this unacceptable, and said he had taken his case to the Author's League, charging me with refusing to give a fellow author a book blurb, which is considered one of the most serious crimes a writer can commit.

A few days later the Author's League ruled in Kransky's favor, and I was forbidden to solicit book blurbs from any member of the league for my next book. This was a cruel blow because without any blurbs, my publisher saw no reason to advertise my book.

I rifled through the galleys of "The Fingers That Couldn't Walk Through the Yellow Pages" and then sat down to write the blurb: "Kransky has done it again." I sent it off special delivery to his publisher.

Unfortunately, this was not the only book I had received that week. I had, in fact, gotten 14 galleys of books in the mail. Each required a different favorable quote, which wasn't easy since I had no intention of reading any of them.

I may not have made such a great effort, except that I have a new book coming out this fall, and I have been soliciting blurbs for myself. I knew the quality of the blurbs I would get was dependent on the quality of blurbs I wrote.

I spent all last week working on book blurbs for friends' books. It took me a day to come up with "Dynamite!" for a book on dieting, but only an hour to come up with "Eat your heart out, Norman Mailer" for Maynard Bowditch's new biography entitled, "I Never Knew Marilyn Monroe, Either."

There is some talk I may be nominated for a National Book Blurb Award this year. I hope so, because it would really kill Kransky.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 2, 1934, Adolf Hitler became dictator of Germany when President Paul von Hindenburg died.

On this date:

In 1610, the English navigator Henry Hudson entered the U.S. body of water now known as Hudson Bay.

In 1824, one of the world's most famous thoroughfares was opened — New York City's Fifth Avenue.

In 1914, Germany invaded France, Belgium and Luxembourg, and Russia invaded Germany.

And in 1974, former White House counsel John Dean was sentenced to one-to-four years in prison for his admitted role in the Watergate scandal.

Ten years ago: The U.S. said it would support seating Communist China in the United Nations but would oppose the expulsion of Taiwan.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Directed funds have a long, dignified history in the Texas legislature

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Government, Voltaire cynically remarked, consists of taking as much money as possible from one class of citizens to give to another.

There is, of course, a degree of truth in that remark — how much can be debated at length — but it's at least indisputable that the State of Texas takes in large amounts of money from its citizens.

And to some extent, the Legislature is given the job of determining how that money is spent.

But only to some extent — because the Legislature, over the years, has taken away much of its power to determine how much of the State's budget is spent.

The argument over how much discretion the Legislature should have in determining State spending has been renewed during the special legislative session because of Speaker Bill Clayton's water trust fund plan — which would dedicate half of any future surplus to water projects.

Some lawmakers — even those who dearly love water and water projects — aren't comfortable with that proposal.

Clayton says he understands concern over dedicating State revenues — and that he even shared it, at one time.

"I used to be of the philosophy that we didn't need any dedicated funds...But I've changed 180 degrees," Clayton relates.

"What you're doing with dedicated funds is setting priorities," the Speaker adds.

"You get lobbied so hard on emotional issues that you can forget about planning for long-term needs."

"Without dedicated funds, we would not have the quality of public schools, or highways, or higher education, that we have," Clayton argues.

Clayton's feeling is that the water trust fund will enable Texas to fund its water needs at less cost to taxpayers over the long haul, by saving funds which are available now — but which may not be available in the future.

Dedicated funds have a long, dignified history in Texas, with lawmakers in 1854 setting up the Permanent School Fund, with $2 million.

That fund, and the Permanent University Funds, have received the money Texas has made from its public lands, including from oil and gas on those lands.

The highway system has been built up thanks to the dedication of gasoline taxes.

And, as Clayton notes, those funds have worked pretty well.

But not all funds set up by the Legislature have had as happy a history.

For over a quarter of a century, efforts have been made to get better control over some of the funds which were created as lawmakers created new agencies.

In 1959, for example, it was estimated that only one-tenth of the State's total income was going to the General Revenue Fund — with an estimated 3,000 special funds (apparently counting a number of college scholarships) then in existence.

Ten years after that, then Secretary of State Martin Dies Jr., was calling for a study of special funds.

And during the legislative sessions in the 1970s, several efforts were made to require State agencies to get their funds into the State Treasury instead of leaving them in various banks, or, as in the celebrated case of the Board of Cosmetology, in shoe boxes.

And all during that time there were proposals for other dedicated funds — such as that in 1977 by Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, to create a State "savings account" by putting aside $250 million annually.

At the time, House Appropriations Committee Chairman Bill Presnal, D-Bryan, who also is the current chairman of that panel, objected that the State "has no business setting aside" funds in that manner — and he argued any surplus should be returned to the people.

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, says his concern is that Texas could find itself in the same shape as the Federal government if it continues creating dedicated funds — with too many outstanding commitments, and an ever-growing need for revenue.

"Here's the problem," Farabee says of Clayton's plan. "We're seeking to dedicate a fund when we don't know how much will be in it; we don't know exactly what the demand is, and we don't know who's going to get it."

Already, Farabee argues, over two-thirds of the State's budget is in dedicated funds or "first call" funds — meaning only one-third of the State's spending lies in the discretion of the Legislature (and that one-third includes such things as the court system, prisons, colleges, etc.).

Similar concerns have been voiced by Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, chairman of the State Finance Committee — although he, like Farabee, supports development of Texas' water resources.

Clayton insists his proposal won't result in increased taxes — and says that dedicated funds will protect the public from the need for higher taxes.

History will give the answer on that — but one thing is sure: There have been few, if any, instances of governments un-dedicating funds, and apparently none in Texas.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

● Readers are invited to submit letters to be considered for publication.

Letters may be on any subject, but should not be slanderous or defamatory. They must be signed by the writer and must bear the writer's correct mailing address and a telephone number at which the writer may be contacted during the day, either home or office.

For valid reasons, at the discretion of the editor, the name will be withheld but must be included in the original letter.

Writers should be as concise as possible and the right to condense letters is reserved.

Letters must be received by noon Thursday for Sunday publication. If necessary, the latest received may be held for publication the following Wednesday or Sunday.

They should be addressed to: Letters to the Editor, The Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, Texas 79702.

To The Editor:

Tuesday, August 11, should be a red-letter day for long-suffering Midlanders who daily experience the frustration of trying to drive a car in the central business district of Midland. On that day the first of two hearings will be held at 5 p.m. by the Midland City Council regarding the proposed one-way street system. I feel it is urgent that Midlanders attend this hearing to voice support for a direly-needed modernization of our downtown traffic system.

For those who may have missed it, the Council has commissioned an engineering study of the Midland street system and its inherent traffic problems. This study has resulted in a recommendation that several of our streets be converted to one-way streets to meet the current and future traffic loads. The east-west streets involved will provide for Missouri to be eastbound from Wall (at The Village) to Main, Wall to be westbound from Main to Circle Drive, Texas to be eastbound from Andrews Highway to Front, Illinois to be westbound from Front to Andrews Highway, Michigan eastbound from Delmar to Orchard Lane and Louisiana westbound from Orchard Lane to Delmar.

North-south streets will involve Marienfeld to be southbound from a new cutoff from Big Spring street just south of Cuthbert to its convergence with Rankin Highway (South Big Spring). From that point Big Spring street will be one-way northbound to Cuthbert.

This study has been a comprehensive one using current traffic loads and projecting loads in the next decade and beyond. The benefits of the recommended system are numerous, not only in the downtown area but in the residential areas as well. Where the one-way streets become involved with our schools, normal school zone speeds will be observed and students who cross these streets will only be concerned with the traffic from one direction instead of the confusion of crossing two-way traffic. The same can be said for people crossing in residential areas. Another benefit will be a return of sorely-needed curbside parking along the downtown segments of Big Spring and Illinois streets. Of course, sequential traffic lights and ease of making left turns off of these streets in the downtown area is by far the most advantageous of the benefits.

In 1978 Midland tried to set up one-way streets on Texas and Illinois. No opposition was voiced at the first hearing by the City Council and we all thought that relief was on the way. Then at the second and final hearing the Council was blitzed by selfish business interests, replete with lawyer, and the effort was shot down in flames. No one was at the meeting to speak for the plan. Will this be the case again? Will no one speak up for moving Midland into the 1980s? At 5 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 11, would it be worth an hour of your time to show up at City Hall and tell your Councilmen that you support their efforts to update our traffic system? I hope so. I will be there and I would like to see a packed room.

Thanks offered

To The Editor:

The Lee High School Chorale has had a very enjoyable and successful trip to the International Youth Music Festival in Vienna. On behalf of the Midland Independent School District, I would like to express my appreciation for the assistance and support which were extended by you to this group as they prepared for this exciting project.

As a part of the business community of Midland, your donation of special services to this group made it possible for the arrangements and fund-raising to proceed smoothly. You can feel a sense of justifiable pride that you had a significant part in giving these forty young people an experience which will never be forgotten.

Thank you again for demonstrating your community pride in a very tangible manner.

Prayer needed

To The Editor:

Since school is about to begin, I thought about that one person who won against a multitude of Christians to ban prayer from our school system.

No wonder our children have so little respect and love for God, country and school. They spend six to seven hours in school a day for nine months of the year. Why can't they start the day with a little prayer for strength, the ability to learn, for love and patience to see them through the day. Also the Pledge of Allegiance to our wonderful country. (Most kids don't know how to recite it).

Maybe that little prayer would help a student having trouble to try harder and not give up. It could help a student that was going to cut the next class to want to attend it.

I am not trying to offend anyone and maybe I am not wording this right. I hope there are some people that will understand what I am trying to say and we can do something about it.

Restrain children

To The Editor:

Tubb's thoughts in your recent article of Canine vs. Child has prompted this letter.

The number of children injured, maimed, or killed as a result of riding unrestrained in cars ranks number one over every other single danger facing our children.

Statistics show that unrestrained rides in automobile accidents are responsible for the deaths of one out of 60 children and injuries in six out of 10 children.

Yet, how many times do you see a child or infant being held in someone's arms or standing in the front seat while riding down the street?

As loving, caring, responsibile mothers and fathers we don't need to have "petless" homes or never ride in cars with our children to protect them.

By using car seats and seat belts on every ride and by proper supervision of children and dogs at play, these two dangers should be kept well under control.

KINGSBURY-SMITH

U.S. may bail out 'hungry' Poland

By JOSEPH KINGSBURY-SMITH
National Editor
The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — With mass hunger demonstrations and spontaneous strikes in Poland reviving fears of Soviet military intervention in that communist-ruled but Western-oriented country, some thought is being given in Washington to the possibility of a major Western allied effort to meet immediate food and medical shortages.

The Reagan administration has decided to give Poland $55 million in new long-term credits to purchase about 350,000 tons of U.S. corn to salvage its poultry industry. However, there is also a grave shortage of meat, butter, sugar, grains and rice which has brought women and children out in "hunger" marches in some of the major cities. Workers are also threatening wildcat strikes.

Warsaw reports have described the situation as "potentially explosive" with growing danger that uprisings might occur which could precipitate Soviet intervention.

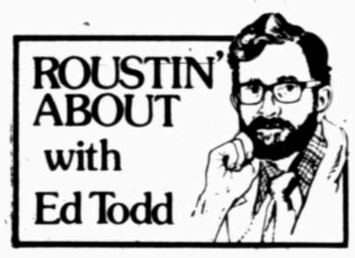
Maryland's moderate Republican Senator Charles Mathias told The Hearst Newspapers he would favor a joint effort by the United States and its major Western European allies to send food supplies to Poland to help relieve the food shortage if there is dire need for such assistance. He thought the question of whether such need exists could be determined by the Western embassies in Warsaw.

Senator Mathias, a leading member of the Foreign Relations Committee, believes it would be in the interests of this country on humanitarian grounds as well as the preservation of peace to avert the danger of hunger riots in Poland leading to Soviet intervention in that country.

However, he does not think the United States should act alone in a major effort to relieve the acute food shortage. He pointed out that the European allies, especially France and West Germany, are deeply concerned over what the consequences would be of a Soviet military occupation of Poland. It is considered highly probable that they would revive cold war tensions, disrupt East-West trade, and delay indefinitely nuclear arms limitation talks with the Soviets. He also noted that France has a large number of Polish exiles. Therefore, it would, in the Senator's opinion, be in the interests of the European allies as well as the United States to try to prevent hunger strikes and demonstrations in Poland from giving the Kremlin any excuse to intervene to smash the political reform movement there.

Not that he believes the Western allies should assume a permanent responsibility for bailing out the Polish communist regime from food shortage problems created largely by the failure of its economic policies, which have left it broke and owing the west $24 billion in debts. However, the reforms already achieved by the workers' independent Solidarity movement and the tension that exists among the Polish people at present makes this a particularly sensitive and dangerous period in Poland. Therefore, Senator Mathias believes that if the food shortage situation is as grave as reports indicate, emergency relief aid by the Western allies might avert catastrophe.

'The path of error...'



Everybody blunders every now and then.

It's only man's first nature.

And the third nature is to cover up the first cover-up and so on to ad infinitum. Eventually, the first comes around, and no more convenient excuses are handy. The piper is paid one way or another.

Shame.

Now, the solution to his embarrassment is not to find the perfect cover-up; it's still undiscovered. The course is to try to rectify the initial blunder by admitting the goof — be it blunder, lie, half-truth, omission, ill will or mal-deed.

That's sometimes difficult, for it pangs the pride.

But, to be fair to thine own self and to the one done wrong is the only thing to do. Make amends.

It's something man has been doing for a lifetime, even as he constantly strives for perfection.

Man, like woman, falls short.

Or, woman, like man, falls short.

Man, who supposes he is the "prime rib" of God's creation, is prone to error even when he "knows" he is right.

"To err is human," said the Bard.

It's always been that way.

Man is a study in mistakes by making "wrong" decisions. And sometimes the wrong decision is making no decision at all.

All have fallen short of not only God's glory, but of their own honor.

But when the error is truly recognized, the path to seek is truth.

By STEPHEN S. ROSENFELD
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The quarrel that William J. Casey and his fellow speculators had over an investment turkey in the 1970s is piquant, and the play in the Senate Intelligence Committee about his tenure as CIA director is instructive. But what I have wanted to know is whether this erstwhile World War II spy runner, lawyer, diplomat, banker and Reagan campaign director— okay, whether this Wall Street hustler— could provide good intelligence.

Start at Team B, then-CIA director George Bush's mid-'70s panel of outside experts set up to critique the CIA-led intelligence community's analysts on the Soviet threat. The argument then was whether Team B was a healthy "competitive review" of a shop that had gone ivory-tower soft, or whether its hard-line membership and assumed political man date made it a "kangaroo court."

Intellectually, that argument was not resolved. Politically, it was. Team B won. That is, trends in the real world and the emerging political consensus, in some combination, made their inevitable mark on the intelligence bureaucrats, and the darker, more hawkish and more pessimistic estimates prevailed. This happened during the Carter period.

So it was that when when Casey arrived at the CIA and checked out the estimating process, he found it sound, needing attention to performance but not design. You can read this several ways. It could be evidence that the process has in deed achieved the goal, so venerated by analysts, of turning out a politics-proof product. Or it could mean that Casey, inheriting a full set of political biases, didn't think or care to examine them.

In any event, confidence in the product brims at Langley. So does confidence in a process based on a notion of multiple competing centers of analysis, those centers being inside the separate government departmens and outside in the academic, business and scientific communities. Such competition is traditional, but it is now being tended with a certainty that it is an improvement on the old style.

It is not just the Team B episode that underlies the current insistence that pursuit of diversity has been institutionalized. Albert Wohlstetter's earlier charge that the intelligence community had "systematically" underestimated Soviet missile deployment is taken as the guiding gospel. Israel's pre-1973 organizing of its intelligence service on centralized rather than competitive lines is taken as a real-life object lesson.

Casey has kept (departmental) dissents in the texts of estimates. Oddly, in one estimate his was recorded as the sole dissent. He has thrown back a number of estimates on the stated grounds that they fell short intellectually, did not address the right question or did not include (or explain the absence of) key evidence. The "right question"? The other day, The New York Times reported, Casey said he had rejected estimates on Africa and Latin America that had "not addressed Soviet interests, activities and influence."

The one Casey-era CIA document I have seen is a "research paper," "Patterns of International Terrorism: 1980," published in June. Press reports have said Casey ordered it to blame the Soviet Union; it does — as a victim of terrorism as well as a party "deeply engaged in support of revolutionary violence." Again oddly, Casey is now held to feel that the paper was published to satisfy a State Department wish to get the numbers out and that the analysis in it was not good enough. On the latter point, surely he's right.

It is worth noting. that the people running the analysis side enjoy wide respect, not least from some of those who regard Casey as a buccaneer. One of these is his deputy, Adm Bobby Ray Inman, who has won high and unusually unpatronizing civilian regard for his seriousness and competence.

Savings and loan firms buck national trends

Articles in the Wall Street Journal, news magazine and the major wire services accurately report that the national economy has dealt severely with the savings and loan industry. The local situation appears much brighter, however, thanks to a booming local economy, a housing shortage and some creative steps by financial executives.

Instead of red ink on the bottom line, at least one savings and loan is reporting good earnings during the second quarter, according to Ray P. Moudy, president of Citizens Savings and Loan Association.

Moudy indicated he was concerned that adverse publicity about the plight of savings and loans nationally would reflect unfavorably on local lending institutions.

"It's true that if we operated Citizens in the controversial manner, adequate profits could not be generated in today's economy," Moudy observed. He cited the key problems as being the high cost of funds, inflation, and the rapid outflow of funds from lower yielding money market funds.

"Our decision to diversify in the area of land development has been the key to our recent profitability," Moudy said. "This decision has benefitted not only Citizens Savings, but the Midland housing market as well," he added.

He pointed to the Northgate development in northwest Midland, at the southeast corner of the intersection of Holiday Hill Road and Loop 250, which will eventually house about 750 families. Construction is under way on 89 houses ranging in price from $60,000 to $85,000.

"There is a desperate need for housing in this range," Moudy said, adding that a below market mortgage rate offering was quickly subscribed and is no longer available.

Another 138 lots have been purchased by other Midland builders, and construction on these lots will start soon.

"There's no question that our land development program has kept Citizens solidly in the black," Moudy stated. "We're going to be here for the long haul, and use our capital and earnings for the benefit of the community."

Citizens Savings is also developer of Meadowpark, a 182-unit development of patio homes and townhomes in north Midland, northeast of A Street and Loop 250. Of the 18 completed homes in Meadowpark, ten are occupied, and eight more under construction. A recreational area with swimming pool and tennis courts will soon be completed.

UT Austin, PBGC offering new management program

AUSTIN — The University of Texas at Austin Graduate School of Business and the Permian Basin Graduate Center in Midland will join forces in the fall to offer from Sept. 20 to Dec. 5 a management development program for Permian Basin executives.

Enrollment will be limited to 25 participants from the Permian Basin area who are now executives with general management responsibilities or who are being groomed for such duties.

Designed to provide new insights for facing problems of general management in the 1980s, the program is patterned after UT Austin's Advanced Management program. Teachers for the course will come from the UT Austin facility.

Six sessions have been planned, beginning with a Sept. 20-24 retreat at the YO Ranch near Kerrville, where participants will undergo concentrated study in taxation, accounting and finance. The remaining five sessions will be conducted at the Permian Basin Graduate Center at 105 W. Illinois in Midland on alternate weekends through the first week of December.

The sessions in Midland will be devoted to "Managing Human Resources" (Oct. 9-10), "Management and the Law" (Oct. 23-24), "Managing Information Systems and Managing Information" (Nov. 6-7), "Marketing" (Nov. 20-21) and "Perspectives on the Firm, the Manager and the Environment in the 80's" (Dec. 4-5).

The weekend sessions will meet from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 pm. Friday and 8:30 to 11:30 am Saturdays. Lectures, outside readings, class discussion, case analysis and business simulations will be among instructional methods.

According to Paul Kirtley, director of administration for the Permian Basin Graduate Center, the registration fee for the course is $2,500 if paid before Aug. 15, and $2,6750 thereafter.

Additional details about the course may be obtained from Judy Golasinski, executive director of the Permian Basin Graduate Center in Midland (915) 563-2311, or from Dr. Paul Nelson, director of Management Development Programs, University of Texas at Austin Graduate School of Business (512) 471-5893.

Hike in workers' compensation insurance rates considered

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State Board of Insurance has under consideration a recommendation for a 5.2 percent increase in worker's compensation insurance rates to provide for an increase in weekly benefits — with Texas Association of Business opposing the proposed rate hike.

The increase, which is expected to be approved by Sept. 1, is being proposed to cover the cost of increased benefits, which are mandated by a rise in the average weekly wage in manufacturing.

TAB, which opposed the recommendation by the SBI's staff at a public hearing, argued against raising the rate, and the Texas Worker's Compensation Assigned Risk Pool urged the SBI to reconsider its changes eliminating the requirement for filing of new worker's compensation policies with the agency on a daily basis.

That, TWCARP argues, will cause extreme difficulty in promulgating surcharges on policies, and could cost the pool up to $100,000 a year in premiums.

Commissioner Sam Kelley, Office of the Consumer Credit Commissioner, is busily issuing interpretations under HB 1228, the interest rate ceiling legislation passed by the regular session of the Legislature this year.

One of the interpretations concludes that loans for the purchase of motor vehicles intended for business or commercial use must be made using existing State disclosure provisions, rather than Federal provisions, since there are no comparable Federal disclosure requirements.

Kelley also has concluded that the alternate rates provided in the bill (those rates above 18 percent; which are tied to the rate of U.S. Treasury obligations) don't apply on various home solicitation transactions.

The number of rulings has been growing steadily, with Kelley noting that the complex nature of the bill will require a number of questions to be answered — especially in the early part of its operation.

The OCCC has been given the responsibility for taking the lead interpreting HB 1228, in order to provide consistency among the various regulatory agencies involved in the financial area.

●

Texas Housing Agency is continuing its efforts to establish a multi-family housing assistance program, THA Executive Administrator Earline Jewett reports, despite problems with Federal regulations and bond market conditions.

"We're in a difficult situation," she acknowledges, with Federal laws and regulations having "for the moment just about closed off the possibility of issuing new single-family bonds," and the bond market having closed off many long-term bonds.

No decision on any additional bond issues has been made at this time.

●

The Texas Multi-Peril Advisory Committeee has set a meeting for Sept. 17 in Austin to begin a study on several matters relating to commercial multi-peril insurance policies, with the panel's recommendations to go later to the State Board of Insurance.

Among the items to be considered are the small business boiler and machinery program, forms on storekeepers liability and coverage for churches.

●

Changes in regulations relating to operation of subsidiaries by savings and loan associations have been approved by the Savings and Loan Section of the State Finance Commission, in an attempt to expand the authority of associations and to make it easier for them to operate effectively.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Your 'book entry' bond investment safe

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Until recent years, when I bought Federal Home Loan Bank bonds and bonds of other federal agencies, I received the bonds in "bearer" form. I kept them in my safe deposit box and clipped coupons to collect interest.

Now, the bonds of many federal agencies come only in "book entry" form. All I get from the local bank through which I make the purchase is a slip of paper, showing the amount, interest rate and maturity of the bond. Is this arrangement safe? Suppose the bank goes bankrupt. What then?

A. You have nothing to worry about. Your investment is as safe as safe can be. Your bank is acting as custodian of your bonds. It does not have possession of your bonds, which are being held — as a computer entry — at a Federal Reserve Bank. Your bonds belong to you. They are not counted as part of your local bank's assets.

So, if that bank goes bankrupt, its creditors could not make any claim against your bonds. In the unlikely event of your local bank going belly up, the account with your bonds in it would be transferred to another commercial bank. Your ownership of the bonds would not change one little bit.

That "slip of paper" you mention is your "confirmation statement," attesting that you have purchased the bonds and that they are being held in safekeeping for you.

The book entry system is safer and, for most people, more convenient than the old system of getting bond certificates — engraved pieces of paper. You have no worries about losing your bonds and interest is automatically credited to your account at your local bank.

The book entry system was started in 1968 and has gradually been expanded. Right now, you can buy securities of some — not all — federal agencies, as well as U.S. Treasury bills, only in book entry form. Eventually, all U.S. Treasury and federal agency securities will be recorded as book entries.

Q. When I purchase U.S. Treasury bills directly through the Federal Reserve, the book entry record of ownership is in my name. When I buy T bills through a bank, the book entry is in the bank's name. If I purchase T bills through a broker, in whose name is the book entry?

A. In the brokerage firm's name. But don't let that bother you. The securities, you have left with a brokerage firm are protected up to $500,000, by the Securities Investor Protection Corp. (SIPEC) if the brokerage house goes bankrupt.

Q. Suppose I have U.S. Treasury bills in an account at one brokerage firm and want to switch my account to a different brokerage firm. Can the T bills be transferred to my new brokerage?

A. Surely. When you open the account at your new brokerage firm, just tell your broker about your old account and give instructions that you want your securities transferred. Your new broker will give you some forms to sign and take care of the details. In the case of transfer of book entry recording of T bills, the brokers will use U.S. Treasury form PD 4633.

Q. I know there have been some "extended maturities" granted to older Series H, U.S. Savings Bonds. But I'm not sure of the details. Can you tell me if H bonds issued in January, 1960, will continue to earn interest beyond Dec. 31, 1981?

A. Yes, they will. Those particular H bonds won't reach "final maturity" and stop drawing interest until January, 1990.

H bonds were issued with original maturities of 10 years. However, all were granted two 10-year additional — giving them an interest-paying life of 30 years. The earliest H bonds, issued in June, 1952, will reach final maturity in June, 1982.

Midland Park Mall announces openings of several stores

In keeping up with Midland's rapid growth, Midland Park Mall has announced the opening of several new stores. Coming soon to the Mall are Bernie Franks Ltd. Men's Store, offering quality menswear; Roberto's Luggage and Gifts, a fine luggage store based in Albuquerque; Midland-based Citizen's Savings & Loan; Oshman's Sporting Goods of Houston, one of the finest sporting goods operations in the country; and Brooks Fashions, a national ladies fashion chain.

"The opening of Sakowitz will mark the culmination of efforts to offer the highest quality of shopping experience possible to the Midland area," said Len Weinman, senior leasing representative for Melvin Simon and Associates who developed, owns and manages Midland Park Mall.

Olga's Kitchen, an addition to Midland Park Mall's food court will also open soon. This Detroit-based restaurant chain will offer a sit-down restuarant and a cocktail lounge. Another food court addition is the Taco Factory from Kansas City.

These new tenants will be joined by Hastings Records and Tapes based in Amarillo and regarded as one of the top music stores in the southwest; Butler Shoes, a fine women's shoe salon from Atlanta; and Walden books, a leading national book chain based in Stamford, Connecticut.

California-based Desmond's Men's Store which offers top quality menswear in Beverly Hills and Palm Springsis now open, as is J. Harris, an excellent women's fashion store.

The mall still has excellent space available for good local merchants. "We're seeking top-of-the-line tenants to enhance Midland Park Mall's quality image," says Weinman.

Midland offers six private schools

Families seeking alternatives to the public school system in Midland have six private schools from which to choose.

Trinity School, located at 3500 W. Wadley Ave., offers classes for 3-5 year olds and first through ninth grades.

A non-denominational school, Trinity uses the Montessori method of teaching kindergarten through third grades. Under the direction of the Rev. P.D. Peterson, the headmaster, the school will start classes in September with the enrollment expected to be between 460-470 students.

Heritage School offers a developmental program stressing readiness and motor development activities for children from ages 3-5.

Located in the Christian Church of Midland at 2608 Neely Ave., the school will enroll about 40 students. Classes will start Sept. 9 and meet two to three days a week from 9 to 11:30 a.m. All teachers in this program have been certified with the Texas State Teachers Association.

Offering pre-school through 12th grade classes, Midland Christian School has about 500 students and 25 teachers. According to Arnold Evans, principal, the school offers a regular curriculum plus a daily Bible Study program. Classes are scheduled to start Aug. 31.

The school is located at 2001 Culver St. and has undergone a building expansion phase allowing the housing of classes for secondary students. The school graduated its first senior class this year.

Permian Basin High School, located at 3100 N. A St., offers grades 8-12. Described as an "alternative school" by Carol Ward, director of education, the school will focus on having one teacher for every student. At full capacity, the school will house 80 students. Enrollment is accepted throughout the year.

Described as a college preparatory school, the curriculum will be strictly academic. Classes will be offered in English, science, math and history and will be designed to be an accelerated program.

The Hillander School will begin classes Sept. 8. Located at 1600 W. Wadley Ave, the school offers classes for 3-year-olds through 6th grade.

According to Mrs. Fred Sides, director of the school, students are taught by the Carden program which is "a very strong phonetics program." Children are taught to read at age 5, and each grade builds on the one preceding it.

Accelerated Christian Education (ACE) is offered at Oaklawn Park Baptist School. The self-paced program covers kindergarten through 12th grades.

The school, located at 3001 N. A St., is headed by David Piearcy. Twelve teachers are employed to instruct approximately 120 students. Classes will begin in September.

MISD lists its calendar

School will start August 31. School holidays are scheduled for Sept. 7, Nov. 26-27, Dec. 23-31, Jan. 1, March 1-5 and April 9-12.

Classes also will be recessed for teacher in-service days on Oct. 16 and Jan. 15. Additional teacher inservice is set for Aug. 24-28.

School will end May 28, followed by a teacher work day on May 29.

The first semester will run from Aug. 31 to Jan. 14. The second semester starts Jan. 18 and ends May 28.

Centers for teens

The two senior high school youth centers are designed to provide Midland young people with a place for dances, games, lunches and alumni reunions.

The Midland High and Lee High Youth Centers are adjacent to the campuses and are administered by the Midland-Lee Youth Centers, Inc. Each employs an adult director who runs the center with the help of a student council and oversees its programs.

Midlanders served by post office

Major towns in the area are Midland, Odessa, San Angelo and Big Spring.

Three zip codes are assigned to Midland: 79701, 79702, 79703.

Permian Basin blessed with many excellent libraries

Midland and its neighboring communities are blessed with libraries and museums which reflect the human experience.

Libraries and museums in Midland include the Midland County Public Library; the Permian Basin Petroleum Musesum, Library and Hall of Fame; the Museum of the Southwest and its Marian Blakemore Planetarium and Lancaster Garden Center; the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library, the Midland County Histrical Museum, and the Taylor Brown-Dorsey Medallion Home.

Odessa boasts the Presidential Museum and the Ector County Public Library.

Big Spring has its Heritage Museum, which delineates the history of that city and Howard County.

The years' toll on Martin County is depicted in the Martin County Historical Museum in Stanton.

The community, which is economically rooted in farming, ranching and oil and gas production, got its beginning as a wayside station called Grelton in 1881, when the Texas & Pacific Railway Co. laid its tracks across the Plains in the 1880s. Catholic settlers renamed the town Marienfeld for Field of Mary. But the community was re-christened Stanton in honor of President Abraham Lincoln's Secretary of War, jurist Edward M. Stanton, in 1890 by the Protestant element.

RANKIN, AN early-day ranching community on the old Kansas City, Mexico and Orient Railway (now, the Santa Fe Railway System) line, is served by the Rankin Museum and by the J.C. Carroll-established Mule Train Museum & Tavern just west of town.

Crane, another oil town which was founded a year later, features the Crane County Museum.

Up north is Lamesa, which absorbed neighboring Chicago in 1905. The farming-ranching community, which is gaining prominence in oil production, promotes the Dawson County Historical Museum.

Big Lake maintains a park which pays tribute to the Santa Rita No. 1, the historic oil well which in 1923 gushed and signaled the beginning Permian Basin oil boom.

THE MIDLAND County Public Library at 301 W. Missouri Ave. in downtown Midland shelves about 150,000 bound volumes and audio and visual resource materials.

"We have a very literate, well-educated population," says Librarian John Deats.

The library features an exhaustive collection of scientific-technical, geological and oil books and other works associated with public libraries. The library's literary works span pre-school booklets to scholarly tomes. The library is well into works on the fine arts, business, and genealogy and has stacks of reference materials.

The library features an art-rental service by which prints of paintings by renowned and obscure artists may be rented.

The Midland County Historical Museum in the basement of the county library exhibits artifacts, photographs, costumes and special displays dealing with Midland County history.

The Midland County Historical Commission maintains the Taylor Brown-Dorsey Medallion House, one of the oldest in Midland, at 214 N. Weatherford St.

THE PERMIAN Basin Petroleum Museum, just off Interstate 20 in south central Midland, depicts the geological evolution of the earth's formations, the under-sea world, the formation of the oil-gas-rich Permian Basin, and the settlement and development of the Midland area.

The museum's grounds feature old-timey oil equipment, including cable-tool rigs, tools, the Christmas Tree and pump jacks.

The Museum of the Southwest at 1705 W. Missouri Ave. is a stately edifice in the mansion-home of the late Mr. and Mrs. Fred Turner. The museum concentrates on the fine arts, regional history and science, and natural history.

Each year, the museum features a variety of special exhibits, which range from paintings, photographs and sculptures to Indian pottery and from patchwork quilts to fossils.

In cooperation with the Midland Arts Association, the museum annually sponsors the Southwestern Regional Art Show, which is a survey of the creative works of arts and craftsmen.

Donald R. Furgeson, business manager.

Samuel L. Taylor, attendance officer.

Larry Lusby, director of research and computer services.

Bill Zeitler, director of transportation and custodial services.

Leslie Hinds, director of special programs.

Bryant Saxon, director of program development and research.

Vivian Busley, director of food services.

J. Hal Battle, coordinator of physical education and driver education.

Dr. Ruby Morris, coordinator of special education.

Bertha M. Starks, coordinator of law focus education project program.

Dr. Charles R. Thompson, coordinator of vocational.

Wilson E. Heidelberg, purchasing agent.

There are three coordinator positions that are currently being filled. These positions are bilingual coordinator, gifted and talented coordinator and reading and language arts coordinator.

Program involves public

Volunteers in Public Schools, a citywide program which assists Midland's elementary schools, involves the public in improving the quality of education.

Funded by four local banks, VIPS was named the Outstanding School Volunteer Program for 1980-81 by the Texas Elementary Principals Association.

VIPS allows volunteers to help with school programs in art, enrichment areas, Carver Center, field trips, Halloween carnivals, Head Start, homeroom parties, libraries, materials preparation, math groups, music/drama, partners-in-reading, school improvement and beautification projects, and storytelling and book reviews.

The 1981-82 program is headed by the volunteer coordinating team of Mrs. Don Furgeson, Mrs. Curtis Gedrich and Mrs. James Dodson.

Each elementary school has a volunteer chairman to coordinate each school's program.

New residents welcomed by Newcomers Club

New residents to Midland are greeted by the Newcomers Club of Midland, an organization designed to help those individuals make new friends and get them involved in various interest groups.

The Newcomers Club strives for immediate involvement. Because of that goal, officers serve only six-month terms.

Officers serving until the end of July are Lacy Crary, president; Kathy Davis, first vice-president; Beverly Cowan, second vice-president; Carol Rodgers, third vice-president; Linda Meyers, secretary; and Brenda Alsfeld, treasurer.

Those individuals comprise the executive board of the club. Others serving on the executive board include Peggy Brown, assistant membership; Ruth Westenburg, hospitality; Ellen Smith, publicity; Cathie Broten, parliamentarian; Jo Barbee, outside activities; Gayle Madonna, new members' coffees; Kathy Dean, decorations; Fay Baum, editor; Lesley Pagano, sunshine; and Jackie Ely, yearbook editor.

The club meets the third Thursday of each month for a general meeting. Programs vary from fashion shows, book reviews and musical programs to gardening, lawn care and arts and crafts shows.

In addition to the monthly meetings, the club has a bowling league and numerous interest groups which meet for needlework, arts and crafts, tennis, golf, jogging, gourmet luncheons and couples' gourmet. There are several bridge groups and a baby-sitting co-op.

A monthly newsletter attempts to keep the members informed of all the activities. The editor is Fay Baum.

District's 26 schools serve 15,000 students

Midland Independent School District operates 26 schools, serving approximately 15,000 students in kindergarten through grade 12.

Special bilingual classes are offered in several schools for students who have limited English. Other classes are offered for students with learning or emotional disabilities, exceptionally gifted students and slow learners.

The district includes 19 elementary schools, three junior high schools for students in the seventh and eighth grades, two freshman high schools for ninth grade students and two senior high schools.

Carver Cultural Center is used by students in the primary grades and for some special education classes.

The Midland school district, through its five-year accreditation plan, has committed itself to individualized instruction for students. To follow through on this commitment, classes are offered for a broad range of students' interests and abilities.

Exceptionally bright students have the option to take a number of high school honors classes in the areas of English, science, social studies, mathematics and foreign languages.

The honors classes cover more material and require a higher level of abstract thinking by the students than the regular classes in the same subjects. They also provide the opportunity for students to pursue special projects working independently at their own pace.

Next year, classes for gifted and talented students in grades 4-6 will be offered for the first time. The program will be two-tiered.

Tier One will provide enriched activities in the areas of mathematics and reading/language arts.

Participants in Tier Two will be specially selected from outstanding students nominated by parents, teachers, administrators, peers, or self. The program will be interdisciplinary and will include field trips, guest speakers, investigative learning and research projects.

For students with less than average aptitude in certain subject areas, modified classes have been established. These classes cover the basic material taught in the standard course, but less comprehensively and at a slower pace.

All schools in system have PTA units

Each Midland public school has a Parent-Teacher Association (PTA). PTA units and their presidents can be contacted for further information.

City Council PTA President — Mrs. Ronnie Sowders.

MISD's cluster system in operation

Midland's desegregation plan, resulting from a lawsuit filed against the school district by the U.S. Attorney General in 1970, primarily involves the integration of young people in grades four through six. The cluster system has been in operation since August 1977.

Kindergarten through third grade students remain in their neighborhood schools. They take eight field trips each year where they meet students from other schools in preparation for busing in the fourth grades. Three of these field trips are to Carver Center and the others are to other schools within the cluster.

The cluster program in the fourth through sixth grades pairs three schools in different economic areas.

For instance, fourth grades from the Henderson, Emerson and Pease districts all attend Henderson Elementary; fifth graders attend Emerson; and sixth graders attend Pease.

In cluster II, fourth graders in the the Jones, Bowie and Milam districts attend Jones; fifth graders attend Bowie; and sixth graders attend Milam.

In cluster III, fourth graders in the Burnet, Fannin and South districts attend Burnet; fifth graders attend Fannin; and sixth graders attend South.

Cluster IV includes the Lamar, Rusk and Crockett districts. Fourth graders attend Lamar; fifth graders Rusk; and sixth graders attend Crockett.

Long, Houston and DeZavala districts are in Cluster V. Fourth graders attend Long; fifth graders attend Houston; and sixth graders attend DeZavala.

Cluster VI includes Bonham, West and Washington. Fourth graders attend Bonham; fifth graders attend West; and sixth graders attend Washington.

Students at Travis Elementary School attend kindergarten through fifth grade there and then attend Washington Elementary for the sixth grade. Travis also houses an early childhood unit.

Red Cross offers help

Midland's chapter of the American Red Cross located at 2306 Elizabeth Ave., offers a variety of community health-related educational opportunities.

A United Way agency, the Red Cross offers such courses as cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR), nursing courses, first aid and water safety and swimming instructions.

Further, the Red Cross provides assistance in disaster preparation planning and relief if necessary.

Tall City hosts 36 day care centers

Thirty-six licensed day care facilities operate in Midland, providing working parents with a chance to have someone care for their children during the day.

The state of Texas defines a child care center as a facility which provides care, training, education, custody, treatment or supervision for a child unrelated by blood, marriage or adoption to the owner-operator of the facility, for all or part of the 24-hour-day, regardless of whether or not it is operated for profit or charges for services.

Centers must accept more than 12 children and meet minimum requirements to be licensed by the state.

Many registered family homes also exist in the city, although the Department of Human Resources does not routinely visit or inspect such. A list of these homes is available upon request at the DHR office, 2301 N. Big Spring St.

Licensed day care centers in Midland include:

Mary Had A Little Lamb Day Care, 3125 Travis; Midland Lutheran Palaestra Preschool, 2705 W. Midland Optimists dedicated to young people

Optimists in Midland's three clubs and the one in Greenwood devote a lot of their time and money to the youths of each community.

But "service to youth" is one of the chief reasons the Optimists are around. The clubs are dedicated to good government, patriotism, friendship among all people, community service and, as previously noted, service to young people.

The clubs in Midland — Optimist Club of Midland, Westside Optimist Club and the Breakfast Optimist Club — and the Greenwood Optimist Club, which is organized under the charter of the Midland Optimists, are among the 3,000 groups within Optimist International, which promotes optimism as a way of life.

The Optimist Club of Midland meets at noon each Tuesday in the Civic Room at the Midland Hilton. Membership is between 50 and 60. President is Dan Macklem.

Optimist Club of Midland sponsors activities which include Youth of the Month selection, Youth Appreciation Week, a punt-pass-kick football contest, oratorical contests, two soccer teams and a baseball team. The club also sponsors "Respect for Law" week and numerous other youth activities in the community.

Westside Optimist Club meets at noon each Wednesday in the Fraternal Order of the Eagles (FOE) aerie at 4300 W. U.S. Highway 80. Membership is 40. President is Mike Pierce.

The Westside Optimists' primary youth-oriented projects include a moto-cross track project, girls' softball, oratorical contests and Youth Appreciation Week. Money for the club's youth programs is raised during a spring sports show.

Breakfast Optimist Club meets at 6:30 a.m. each Wednesday at Sambo's Restaurant, 3201 Andrews Highway. Membership is about 20. President is Bob Grant.

The club's primary projects are youth oratorical contests, Youth Appreciation Week and sponsorship of softball, soccer and baseball teams.

Greenwood Optimist Club meets at 7:30 p.m. on Thursdays at Greenwood school. President is Ted Benton.

Primary projects of the Greenwood club are sponsorship of baseball, flag football and various other community projects such as the turkey shoot held last year.

In sports, the Tall City could be called Title City

Midland's Tall City moniker could almost become Title City as far as the two sports-minded high schools are concerned.

During the last school year, Midland High captured District 5-5A titles in basketball, golf and swimming while Lee captured loop titles in baseball, swimming and basketball.

Midland High raced to an impressive 32-5 campaign under second year head basketball coach Jack Stephenson. The Bulldogs also won a bi-district crown before falling in the regionals.

The Midland Lee girls tied for the 5-5A basketball title, but lost to San Angelo in the district playoff game. Under coach Shirley Stephenson, Lee has won or shared four straight 5-5A titles.

Mary Baird's girls golf team won the 5-5A golf crown for the second year in a row and went on to place third in the state meet.

MHS coach Jesse Marsh and Lee coach David Whytlaw brought the Tall City two 5-5A swimming crowns as MHS won both district and regional titles in the girls division and Lee captured the same honors in the boys division.

No title was in sight in the rugged 5-5A football wars as Lee's Spike Dykes and MHS' Pat Culpepper went through their first year. Lee posted a 6-3-1 record and MHS was 5-5. However, the state champion came from the district with Odessa Permian winning its second state title.

The 5-5A track title was just missed by Lee, but the Rebels did win eight individual titles and Midland High won another. Lee's Arthur Williams placed second in the state meet in the 200 meters while MHS sophomore James Beverley was third in the 800 meters. Lee is coached by Sam Volpe and MHS by Johnny Williams.

Midland High's Lance Armstrong and Richey Houdek won the top two singles spots in the District 5-5A tennis wars for the second straight year, but both fell at the region meet after gaining state berths two years ago. Pete Barizon is the MHS coach.

Gil Bartosh has just completed his first full year at the helm as athletic director for the Midland schools, and this was also the first year for the position of assistant athletic director. Edwin Nixon is the first to serve in that capacity.

Bartosh and Nixon have worked long and hard to see that Midland has the best coaches available for all of the athletic endeavors at both Midland High and Lee.

It's easy to see that Midland is dedicated to producing a good atmosphere for its young athletes.

A few calls can establish utility service in Midland

After moving in, one of the first things a new resident usually is concerned with is getting utility service to his residence as soon as possible.

To get telephone service established in the home, the individual should call Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. at 684-1680 or go by the offices at 410 W. Missouri Ave.

To begin electrical service, the new resident may call or go by Texas Electric Service Co. at 123 N. Colorado St., 683-4651.

Hickey-Freeman®

The man who has never worn a Hickey-Freeman suit may hesitate at the price. But the man who has worn a Hickey-Freeman suit knows why they are worth the price.

He knows that Hickey-Freeman suits are hand-tailored with a level of quality virtually unequalled today. He knows that the fabrics are the best of the world's mills. That the tailors take as much pride in the creation of Hickey-Freeman suits as he does in wearing them. And that impeccable styling will keep him at the forefront of fashion. Finally, the man who has worn a Hickey-Freeman suit knows that the comfort and ease-of-wear it provides is confidence-inspiring.

Is a Hickey-Freeman suit worth its price? Ask any man who owns one. Or stop by and try on a Hickey-Freeman suit from the Adesso Collection and see for yourself.

Just un-Ynding

YMCAs offer variety of programs

Many of the programs are designed for grade-school students, but other family activities are an integral part of the overall program.

More than 12,000 members are affiliated with the four Midland Y branches. New members are accepted year-round.

The Central YMCA at 800 N. Big Spring St. is the largest of the four branches. It contains complete health club facilities for men and women, including a sauna bath, whirlpool, solarium, steam bath and exercise and fitness testing areas.

Many athletic activities are available at the branch including flag and tackle football, raquetball, basketball, soccer, dance, swimming, gymnastics and fitness programs for men and women.

A popular feature of the program is the community education classes, also open to non-members. Course subjects include jogging, disco dancing, aerobics, Spanish, yoga, belly dancing, arts and crafts and indoor plant care.

A Travel Club has organized activities for senior citizens 50 years and older.

Babysitting services are available. A nursery is open Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 11:45 p.m. Fees are 75 cents an hour for the first hour and 50 cents for every additional hour.

The Washington Branch, at 1600 E. Wall Ave., sponsors athletic and arts and crafts programs designed to fit the needs of the youth in the area it serves.

The most important goal of the Washington YMCA is to develop a strong family program, according to a center spokesperson.

Alamo YMCA is located at 901 N. Midland Drive.

The summer program is extensive, offering Indian Guide and Princess activities, indoor soccer, baton, charm school, disco dancing, china painting, macrame, belly dancing, climb school, family camping, family night, martial arts and self-defense.

MidTran designed to meet needs

MidTran is a custom-designed public transportation service to meet the needs of Midland.

The system, which started rolling in February 1980, consists of seven small buses, some vans and a medical transport van for riders who need to get to the doctor quickly.

The type of service provided varies. What has attracted many Midlanders is the subscription service in the early morning and late afternoon to take workers from their home to their jobs. Subscription rates for those working inside the city limits is $31 a month. For persons needing transportation to Texas Instruments on Interstate 20, the charge is $42 a month.

Between the hours of 9 a.m. and 3:30 p.m., MidTran switches to a flex-route and demand-responsive system. Buses travel some set routes in the south and east sides of Midland and pick up riders at any point along the way. The charge for these rides is 75 cents per person, 40 cents for elderly persons.

Demand-responsive involves someone calling the MidTran office and requesting the ride 24 hours in advance to allow for scheduling. This door-to-door service is $1.75 per person, 80 cents for elderly, and 25 cents for handicapped persons.

Reservations and further information may be obtained by dialing 684-7433.

MidTran also is serving the social services agencies, providing transportation for their clients. Agencies needing more information on this service should call MidTran.

Chief Wayne Gideon

Police chief responsible for 134 officers

Claiming a respectable 62 percent crime clearance rate, the Midland police force patrols some 35 square miles of city streets and helps maintain order among a burgeoning population.

Charged with that responsibility are some 134 commissioned officers and 32 civilian employees who work under the leadership of Chief of Police Wayne Gideon and Assistant Chief Sid Corley.

Personnel are split among divisions that range from the detective detail to marked patrol units that stay in the hands of individual officers even when they're off duty, giving the department a "high visibilty" that helps keep the crime rate down.

In addition to three patrol shifts which work round-the-clock, the department has a special patrol unit called "D Shift" that works the "hot" hours of the workday: 7 p.m. to 3 a.m.

This special unit employs highly trained police dogs and is usually called upon to back up other officers when necessary.

One feature of the department is its Crime Prevention Unit, which gives talks to local groups and conducts security surveys of businesses and residences — free of charge.

Over the years several officers have been injured in the line of duty, and two of them have been killed. Portraits of the dead officers hang above the switchboard in the lobby of the station's main entrance on Texas Avenue.

Club information available

Clubs and organizations abound in the area. An annual directory of community services published by the Junior League of Midland lists a range of such groups from the Alcoholics Anonymous to YMCAs.

Included in the seemingly endless list are the American Association of Retired Persons, American Cancer Society, several Lions Clubs, the Midland Ministerial Association and the Musicians Club.

More information about clubs and organizations can be obtained by calling the Chamber of Commerce or the Junior League.

MidTran designed

Couples desiring to get married are obliged by the state to follow a series of legal steps before the knot can be tied officially.

If both parties are at least 18 years old, the initial step is to have a premarital examination form filled out by a physician or medical laboratory. The form includes blood test information and any other medical data the doctor wishes to include.

Next, the couple must go to the county clerk's office to obtain a license. Proof of age, usually a driver's license, must be presented. If either party is a minor, a birth certificate must be displayed. A Social Security number is required, along with the premarital examination form and fee payment of $7.50.

If either person has been divorced, 30 days must have elapsed between the date of the divorce and the acquiring of the license, unless the divorced parties are remarrying one another.

The license is good anywhere in the state of Texas until 21 days after the medical examination.

Social Security assistance available

Services to young and old, windowed and disabled are provided by the Social Security office, located in Room 108 of the George Mahon Federal Building at 100 E. Wall Ave.

The office has a staff of 10 fulltime employees and one part-time employee, according to Joyce Tays, the resident representative.

The staffers handle applications for Social Security benefits for survivors, retired persons, the disabled, those seeking Medicare and those seeking Supplemental Security Income.

Emergency? Dial 911

Help in any type of emergency is only three phone digits away: 911. The number is manned 24 hours a day, seven days a week by the fire department.

Police, ambulances, fire trucks, sheriff's deputies and the Department of Public Safety can be mobilized in seconds through a switchboard designed specifically for the 911 phone system. It has eight incoming lines and can be operated by two attendants at a time.

Camping, hiking available to Midland residents

Want to get out of Midland for a day, or a week, but the high cost of gasoline's clipping your wings?

Well, don't get the gas price jitters. There's plenty to do close enough to Midland that the gasoline bill will leave you with plenty of cash for play.

There are trips, in fact, for a day, for overnight, a weekend or longer. Sightseeing, camping, hiking, recreation and adventure are all abundant in a 300-mile radius of Midland.

Trips that will please those only interested in a one-day excursion include the Odessa Meteor Crater, Sandhills State Park near Monahans, Big Spring State Park and Comanche Trails Park in Big Spring, Moss Creek Lake near Big Spring, Champion Creek and Colorado City Lakes in Mitchell County, Lake J.B. Thomas near Snyder, and E.V. Spence Reservoir and Oak Creek Lake in Coke County.

Other one-day jaunts include Castle Gap Park in Crane County, Mackenzie State Park and "Prairie Dog Town" in Lubbock, Balmorhea State Park and Red Bluff Lake in Reeves County, Buffalo Lakes near Lubbock, the Caverns of Sonora in Sutton County, and Old Fort Stockton and Alley Oop Park, both in Pecos County.

Overnighters will enjoy Alpine, Marfa, Big Bend National Park, Palo Duro Canyon State Park near Amarillo, Carlsbad Caverns National Park near Carlsbad, N.M., Fort Concho in San Angelo, Fort McKavett State Park in Menard County, Buffalo Gap State Park near Abilene, the Davis Mountains including old Fort Davis and McDonald Observatory, White River Lake near Crosbyton, and Alamo Village at Brackettville.

Weekend trips include Lake Amistad, Del Rio, Langtry, and Ciudad Acuna, Mexico; Dallas-Fort Worth Metroplex including Six Flags Over Texas and Texas Stadium; and the Texas Hill Country.

11-member panel plans city growth

Studying planned developments for Midland is the primary objective of the 11-member Planning and Zoning Commission. This body looks at comments from the city staff and makes recommendations to the City Council concerning developments or zone changes.

It works directly with the city's planning division and legal department in considering proposals for city development requiring zone changes, land acquisition and subdivisions.

Commission members are appointed to the council and serve three-year terms in a staggered pattern so an experienced group is maintained each year.

Richard Hennessy is director of the planning and community development department for the city. He has held that post since 1976 when he moved nere from Amarillo where he had been chief planner.

Hennessy and his staff study the requested changes in zoning and plans for development and make recommendations to the commission.

The commission meets in regular session at 4:30 p.m. on the first and third Monday of each month.

Requests for zoning, annexation or planning first are received in the city planning office.

After extensive study by the city staff, the request is brought before a committee of the zoning commission. The committee, in a 3:30 p.m. session prior to the commission meeting, reviews the request and makes recommendations as to the feasibility of the request and additional work that may need to be done for approval. The request then is sent to the commission for final discussion and eventual recommendation by the City Council.

Recommended action on the proposal is studied by the City Council during a public hearing. Proponents and opponents of the proposal are given a chance to voice their opinions in both commission and council sessions.

Notices are mailed to each citizen in the neighborhood where a zoning issues is to be considered by the commission. The commission's agenda is posted at City Hall, 300 N. Loraine St., in advance of each meeting.

Discussion is accepted from all citizens.

WAYNE TYRONE and Jerry Tabb shared the TL homer title in 1974 with 29 each while Corder, Don Schroeder and Gary Junge all pitched one-hitters for Walt Dixon's Cubs in a prelude to the 1975 pennant season under Doc Edwards, a year to be savoured.

Midland trailed Shreveport's Pirates by 13 games in June, but compiled a 60-26 record over the last three months to win the West Division flag by 2½ games. It was a remarkable pitching staff, easily the best ever assembled in Midland, which compiled a team ERA of 3.43 and finished second to Jackson's 3.42. Midland hurlers completed 40 games and compiled a league-high 15 shutouts. Four of the pitchers went up to Chicago, Donnie Moore (14-8), Mike Krukow (13-6), Dennis Lamp (7-5 with five saves) and Bruce Sutter, 13 saves, who was to become the National League's Cy Young Award winner in 1979.

But it was the guys who did't make it to the majors that were the difference...Bernie Beckman, 9-2 before being summoned to Wichita at mid-season, then Steve Hamrick reporting from Cornell at midseason to take up the slack with a 7-2 record, giving the two lefties a 16-4 mark for the season, and, of course, Corder, 8-3.

It was also the year that fans booed shortstop Mike Sember for his errors that cost the Cubs two playoff losses against Alexandria at Cubs Stadium. But when the series resumed in Alexandria, it was Sember's home runs that gave Midland two victories in a championship series abbreviated by bad weather.

DENNY SUMMERS, now a Cleveland coach, left Alexandria to manage the Cubs in 1976, a year distinguished by Beckman's seven-inning no-hitter against San Antonio June 8 and also the sad tale of Jay Temple. Jay, a relief pitcher out of Rice who had 14 saves by mid season, made remarks that the Chicago organization took as criticism to a "vacationing" writer from the Windy City and when the remarks were published, they eventually led to Jay's release.

Jim Saul, who was to coach at Oakland in 1979, began a two-year tenure in 1977, the year Karl Pagel was named Texas League MVP after batting .334 with a league leading 28 homers, 104 rbi and a league topping .637 slugging percentage. The Cubs, 70-60, also had the second best won-lost record in the TL, but didn't even get into the playoffs, because El Paso, 78-62, won both halves in the West.

Baylor grad Steve Macko led the TL in hits in 1978 while Jim Tracy led the Texas League in batting with a .355 average in 1979, Midland's first year under Randy Hundley. The Cubs won the second half title in '79 and had the best overall record in the West, but lost in the playoffs to San Antonio. The Cubs set an attendance record and Bill Rigney Jr. was recognized as the top executive at the AA level of pro baseball.

Midlanders have seen a decade of baseball

It doesn't seem that long, but Midlanders have watched a decade of Texas League baseball. During that time, the Midland Cubs have managed just one pennant, but kept things interesting with two or three near misses. Still, the trophy case is chocked full of memories, humorous, bizarre and, yes, with deeds worth retelling.

Every fan probably has his own favorite memory, like that midsummer night in 1973 when the grasshoppers invaded Cubs Stadium between games of a doubleheader and forced cancellation of the night game when batters spent more time swiping at dive-bombing bugs than at the opposing pitcher's curve.

Or maybe yours was the sign some rooster-raising Midland ranchers bought in the outfield in honor of a player, or, perhaps, it was the night the umpire tried to attack a player after the game.

Over the years, Midland has sent its share of players to the major leagues, including the only Cy Young winner the league has produced in the last decade.

OF SEVEN managers, two have made it to the majors as coaches and the alumni of general managers can boast of one AA Executive of the Year and another who almost didn't make it to the front office in Chicago when he began his Tall City career by locking himself in an ice box in the middle of the winter.

On the field, Midland has produced one earned-run-average leader, three home run leaders, a Texas League MVP and a batting champion.

The umpire who went after the player was Ernie Gallagher, a little guy who one night wore his temper on his sleeve. His rhubarb with the visiting dugout began late in the game and resulted in words and ejections. After it was over, Ernie took off across the field after one of the offending players. Only a flying tackle on the ump by Midland Coach Jim Duffalo prevented serious trouble. Unhappily, Duffalo wasn't around a couple of years ago in a Pennsylvania bar when Ernie got in an argument and was shot to death.

That was 1972, a dreadful year for the Cubs in which San Antonio's Gorman Thomas and Memphis' Dave Shneck made life miserable for Midland pitchers. Midland finished with a flourish, winning 29 of its last 41. But things had gone so bad early in the year that after a 15-game winning streak, the Cubs lost one and a TV announcer commented, "Well, the Midland Cubs lost another one tonight..."

MATT ALEXANDER, the speedster who left Ralph Garr eating dust in the sprints when both were at Grambling, went to the majors from the '72 club and is still there as a base-running specialist with Pittsburgh.

Pete LaCock is the outfielder who had the signed dedicated to him when a group of Midlanders honored Peter Marshall's son with a sign that read simply, "Vive LaCock." Pete has been with the Kansas City Royals and this year is playing in Japan.

That also was the year the Cubs drafted Ray Burris out of SW Oklahoma State, brought him up in July from the rookie camp and the next spring he made it with the Chicago Cubs.

In 1973, Midland's second under manager Al Spangler, Cubs Stadium was ravaged by the grasshoppers and it was the year Dan Corder won the TL ERA title with a 2.32, posting a 13-3 record with the last 10 in a row...all in half a season before he was summoned to Wichita.

Rob Sperring hit three homers in one game and Jerry Tabb went for the cycle against Memphis, his second homer winning the game in the 11th. Dan Corder had a 14 whiff night against Amarillo, 12 against Alexandria and lefty Dyain Frazier had a 12-strikeout game against San Antonio.

Population climbing

Midland County's population has climbed over the 82,611 mark — according to 1980 census figures — and is heading toward the 1985 anticipated population of 98,155.

The population is being boosted by the 82 "family units" moving to the Tall City area each month, chamber officials say. That's a net increase of 82 family units, the officials say.

Midland's population in 1980 totaled 70,523, according to figures released in June this year by the census bureau.

By 1990, the county's population should reach 108,045, the chamber says.

Casa de Amigos helps

Programs for senior citizens, tutoring for children, conversational English classes and other activities are sponsored by Casa de Amigos, an ecumenical Christian outreach agency sponsored by 11 Midland Churches.

The agency, initiated in 1964 through the efforts of St. Mark's Methodist Church, is located at 1101 E. Garden Lane. Mary Hinkle serves as director.

Current programs include:

— Daily activities for senior citizens with a congregate meal provided five days a week by the Ector-Midland Elderly Nutrition Program.

— A Children's library program from 3 to 4 p.m. Tuesdays.

— A quilting group.

Other services provided by the Casa include translation, help with employment, information and referral, emergency relief funds, income tax reporting assistance, and maintenance of the rummage room which accepts donations of good used clothing.

General, specialty shops found in malls, plazas

Midland has a world of shopping — if you don't mind criss-crossing town to the general and specialty shops.

Major shopping centers include:

—Dellwood Mall Shopping Center at Midkiff Road and Illinois Avenue. The mall is climate-controlled and features department stores, clothiers and kitchen-and-bath shops.

—Imperial Shopping Center at 3211 W. Wadley Ave. This center is made up of a series of specialty shops and buildings, sometimes connected but not under a common roof.

—Midland Park Mall at FM 868 and Midkiff Drive is the largest shopping center in Midland. The climate-controlled mall features more than 100 shops with four major anchor stores, two tiled fountains and quick-stop food concessions.

—San Miguel Shopping Center at Wadley Avenue and Midkiff Drive follows a Spanish architectural scheme and is also a series of specialty shops, plus restaurant.

Two more centers have been approved in Midland. These are North Park Shopping Center, being developed by Loop 250 LTD, and Midkiff Plaza. North Park will be north of FM 868, diagonally across from Midland park Mall.

Midland home of pros

Midland may seem to be far away from the mainstream of professional sports, but there are many Tall City residents who bring Midland into the spotlight of pro sports.

Regardless of which sport you follow, there is probably a Midlander with which you can follow.

Perhaps football is your fancy, and if so, you surely know former Midland Lee star Junior Miller was the National Football League's rookie of the year in 1980 with the Atlanta Falcons. Miller was all-everything at Lee before becoming All-America tight end at Nebraska. He was a first round draft choice by the Falcons.

Tom Brahaney, a former Midland High star, is a reserve center for the St. Louis Cardinals and was an All-America choice in his college days at Oklahoma.

Keith Bishop, a former Lee great who played his college ball at Baylor, made the grade as a rookie last year with the Denver Broncos at guard. Bishop was a sixth round draft choice and was considered a steal in the draft since he was felled early his senior season at Baylor with a knee injury.

James Zachery was an 11th round pick of the New York Jets last year, but the former MHS and Texas A&M star ended up in the Canadian Football League.

Brad Wright, a former Lee quarterback who set all kinds of passing marks at New Mexico despite two major injuries, was drafted this year by the Miami Dolphins and he hopes to become another Midlander in the pro football ranks.

Jim Hall

Auto racing is another endeavor highly laced with Midlanders. Jim Hall, owner and designer of Johnny Rutherford's Chaparral mount, has brought Midland two Indy 500 titles in the last four years and the national points championship twice.

Midland's Bobby Hillin is owner of the fast improving Longhorn Racing Team, and it was Hillin who had the first Indy 500 entry from a Midlander. Al Unser drives for the Longhorn team.

The VDS Racing Team, owned by Belgian Count Van der Stradten, recently moved its engine shop to Midland under the direction of Franz Weis, who formerly worked for Hall. Several of the engines used by Indy cars come from the Midland shop.

Certainly, Judy Rankin, the first woman to win $100,000 during a season on the LPGA tour, is a household word in Midland. She continues to play well on the women's circuit, which has grown more competitive each year.

Then there's John Adams, a member of the rugged PGA tour. At one point, the former Arizona State golfer lost his PGA playing privileges after qualifying at the Spring 1978 and Fall 1979 schools. But he's back at it again and once qualified for the U.S. Open.

If bowling is your bag, then you've probably heard of John Denton, a Midlander active on the PBA tour. He made his first appearance on ABC television's Pro Bowler's Tour program.

Alcohol services offered

Important information, education and referral services are all provided by the Midland Council on Alcoholism, which opened its doors to problem drinkers in 1959.

Under the direction of executive director Lynne Stoner, the council's purpose is to increase public awareness and understanding of alcoholism and to aid those whose lives are touched by alcohol abuse.

The council utilizes the services of more than 250 volunteers, and is supervised by a 21-member board of directors. Many of the volunteers are themselves recovering alcoholics, interested in helping others with drinking problems.

Although the council is not connected with Alcoholics Anonymous, many of its volunteers are members. Some are members of Al-Anon, a group that serves the spouses and other affected adult members of the alcoholics family. The group also works with Al-Ateen, a group designed for teen-age alcoholics. All volunteer on an individual basis and not as members of the other organizations.

Council volunteers seek to prevent alcoholism through public education by presenting programs to schools, church groups and civic groups.

Films and literature also are made available to organizations and interested persons.

The council also offers a referral service which provides pre-counseling to alcoholics and problem drinkers, as well as their relatives. The counseling is on a one-to-one basis.

The office of the Midland Council on Alcoholism is at 3701 N. Big Spring St., and the phone number is 682-4721.

Midland Board of Realtors, a trade association of realtors whih acts as a clearing house for real estate in the city, maintains a roster of Midland real estate agents. When a seller places a house on the market, every member knows the house is for sale the following day. By using the multiple listing system, buyers and sellers both benefit, according to board officials.

At Midland National Bank, we know there's a lot of groundwork to be laid before you ever set foot in your new job and your new community.

And our Newcomer Counselors are prepared to roll out the welcome mat as soon as you let us know you're moving to Midland.

We know your first priority is putting a roof over your head. So our counselors will put our Newcomer Package in your hands, furnishing you with the latest information on temporary and permanent housing, sources of mortgage money, and current interest rates.

You'll want to know where to send the kids to school. Our counselors have done their homework; they can tell you which schools have accelerated courses, honors classes and enrichment programs, and they'll supply you with a profile of the schools and their districts.

You won't need to shop around for Midland's facilities; our counselors can point you in the right direction for shopping centers, private clubs, recreational facilities—all the things you'll want to know about Midland; but didn't know who to ask.

Since our Newcomer Counselors are also banking professionals, they know how unsettling it can be when you're trying to get settled and your bank drags its heels on transferring funds from out of town. Or how a bank can tie your hands by rejecting your remodeling loan just because you're new in town.

So they'll put you in touch with trained financial experts who can promptly and efficiently help you with all your financial needs, whether it's opening a checking and savings account, setting up a trust, or making a quick evaluation of your petroleum collateral.

You see, at Midland National Bank, we want you to feel as much at home in Midland as we do. Give us a call at 685-5151 and ask for any of our Newcomer Counselors. We know it takes more than just another big bank to get a sure foothold in your new community.

WE'RE MORE THAN JUST ANOTHER BIG BANK.

Traveling, fishing go hand-in-hand

Just the other side of Big Spring is Moss Creek Lake, a reservoir and fishing hole. The lake is a holding tank for water westbound from the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

To the east, in Mitchell County, are Colorado City and Champion Creek lakes. Fishing and other water sports may be enjoyed at Lake J.B. Thomas, southwest of Snyder in Scurry and Borden counties.

Also Lake Spence, near Robert Lee, is a water fanatic's paradise. Like Thomas, Spence is fed by the Colorado River.

There are a couple of popular fishing lakes within driving distance to the west of the Tall City. Balmorhea Fishing Lake lies between Pecos and Fort Davis.

Colorful annual events add to city's attractions

The Summer Mummers, an old-time melodrama produced by Midland Community Theatre and often referred to as summer madness, began this summer in July and continues through Sept. 5. "Debauchery on the Drawbridge," or "Fighting a Duel For a Fair Maiden is More Than Just Another Sworded Affair," will be presented Thursdays through Saturdays at 8:30 p.m.

Performances are being held this year in the Mummers' new home at the downtown Yucca Theatre. It is interesting to note that the Yucca was the site of MCT's forerunners drama presentations in the 1930s. The Midland Little Theatre, which later changed its name to Civic Theatre, used the stage at the Yucca to present its plays.

The Midland Cubs will end their 1981 home season Aug. 28 when the Cubs play El Paso. And the Midland-Odessa Symphony will offer a Pops in the Park Concert Aug. 29. The location has not yet been announced. In the past concerts have been held at Wadley-Barron Park, which is under renovation this year.

September will be kicked off with Septemberfest the weekend of Sept. 12 at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave. The arts and crafts festival is held on the museum grounds. The Midland-Odessa Symphony will hold a Pops in the Plaza concert Sept. 30 beginning at noon at the First National Bank Plaza downtown. Although rain is greatly appreciated in West Texas, it is hoped that it doesn't happen during this outdoor concert. Last year it did.

Diez y Seis de Septembre Festival honoring Mexican Independence Day is scheduled for Sept. 16.

The Midland Arts Association will hang its big show of the year at Midland College during the first part of October. The show will be juried this year for the first time. The Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale officially opens its season Oct. 13 with a concert featuring Roberta Peters.

The Midland Jazz Festival is held annually in November, as well as the Midland Gem and Mineral Society's annual show. Other November events include an invitational tennis tournament sponsored by Midland College.

The annual Christmas Parade, Christmas tree lighting ceremony, MCT's production of "A Christmas Carol" and the Midland-Odessa Symphony's Christmas Concert highlight December events.

The new year brings the Junior League of Midland's annual Charity ball in mid-February.

March is usually one of the busiest fund-raising months for varoius organizations. The Midland and Lee High school youth centers sponsor an annual benefit concert, usually featuring a name performer. The Downtown Lions hold an annual Pancake Jamboree at Dellwood Mall in March.

June brings the Allison West Texas Invitational Swim Meet. Juneteenth, the day that word of the slavery emancipation proclamation reached Texas, is celebrated here each June 19.

In July, the Midland Kiwanis Club celebrates the Fourth of July with a fireworks display, usually following a Midland Cubs game in the stadium July 3. The Daughters of the American Revolution sponsor an annual children's parade on July 4. The 1981 parade, games and picnic were held at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

The Summer Mummers, an old-time melodrama produced by Midland Community Theatre, has moved to its new home this year, the old Yucca Theatre.

Parkview undergoing changes

Parkview Hospital at 3201 Sage St. has a history of change — and this year will be no exception.

American Medical Centers purchased the hospital in October 1980 from former owners Western Hospital Corporation. AMC, a division of Psychiatric Services, Inc. of Nashville, Tenn., arrived with a commitment to the area, according to division representative C.J. Barklay.

"AMC is committed to making a real good second hospital out there," Barklay said in a recent interview from Tennessee. "Not so much a competitor with Midland Memorial, but a facility providing services not readily available in Midland. We are there to stay. We want to be part of the community. We're committed to spend money on that hospital."

Last month, Dick Liley from Sacramento, Calif., was installed as administrator, replacing Steve Wallach in that position. Wallach had been AMC's replacement for Thomas Moses, WHC's administrator.

Liley said there will be some renovations of the private 60-bed hospital during his tenure; however, the quality of care will remain consistent.

"We have a full range of medical services, excluding emergency room services," Liley said. "And we have no obstetrics unit. Our Intensive Care Unit will be in operation in about a month. Right now we are working on the telemetry units."

In addition, the hospital will be adding a professional office building on adjacent land. "Hopefully, we'll have groundbreaking next month," Liley said.

With Liley came new controller Robert Wadrell. A new director of nursing will be added shortly, Liley said.

Currently operating at 75 percent of its available bed capacity, the hospital has some 70 physicians with active staff status.

AMC also established a Community Advisory Board for community input in the hospital's operations. Board members include Giffert Alstrin, Bill Clanton, Russell Craddick, Bill Dillard, Louis Hochman, Ron Lynch, Dr. Martha Madsen, Dr. Louis Zinterhofer, Dr. Terry Tubb and Reagan Legg.

The Allison Center was formulated as the dream of the late Helon Y. Allison, the major donor, who gave the original $2 million for the building itself in 1979 in memory of her husband and son who preceded her in death. Other memorials and donations came from individuals as well as companies to amount to the necessary $1.49 million for equipment.

Formally dedicated in late June, the Allison Center offers Type 2 cancer treatment, as described by the Texas Health Facilities Commission. Including state-of-the-art radiation and other treatment modalities, the Allison Center actually began treatments May 14 and already has some "former patients."

The Center houses an array of the latest devices in cancer treatment: 6 and 20 Million Electron Volt (MEV) linear accelerators, a therapy beam simulator, an orthovoltage unit, a block cutter and a computerized treatment planner.

One area of the center still to be developed in the chemotherapy unit. With minor furnishings yet to be completed, the basement of the facility will be utilized as four chemotherapy treatment rooms when a medical oncologist is acquired.

Midland Memorial keeping up with community needs

Midland Memorial Hospital is keeping up with the growth of Midland.

Recently completing a $10 million expansion program, the 195-bed hospital is currently renovating its physical and occupational therapy units, its laboratory, its medical records department, its linen room and is adding a doctors' library and lounge.

Called a full medical center for the area, Midland Memorial has some of the latest equipment available in many of its departments.

In radiology, for example, employees are currently working to transform a CT (computerized tomography) scanner into a body scanner. The department, which completes some 2,000 exams a month, is "one of the most well-equipped departments in the West Texas area," according to Ray Meyers, chief radiologist there. The machines, Meyers said, cover "all modalities' of radiation work: from ultrasound for unborn babies to nuclear medicine to cancer therapy.

With new equipment have come new doctors to run it. As of this month, Midland Memorial has granted 89 physicians staff privileges at the facility. With the recent gubernatorial approval of legislative funding for area program development for Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center, the hospital may soon be adding a family practice residency program for interns.

Also on the upcoming improvements agenda are the filing of four certificates of need with the Texas Health Facilities Commission for an alcohol and drug dependency unit, an outpatient surgery facility, a 100-bed expansion and an area for plasmapheresis.

Since last year, MMH has added a variety of programs and new personnel. From the addition of a same-day surgery program to the selection of a new administrator, MMH has tried to keep up with the rapid growth of Midland and health services.

The Midland County Hospital District, led by president Edward Magruder, changed faces in April as well, after a second woman director was elected to join the five-member board. Wanda Mohr, a registered nurse, joined Pat Estes as the only women ever to serve on the 4-year-old board.

The board, which controls the operations and use of tax dollars at the hospital, formed a new management agreement this year with the Midland Memorial Foundation board of trustees for the day-to-day management of the hospital, as well. The updated agreement brought changes to MMH in the form of money responsibilities and more specific powers. For instance, the administrator installed in November, Ray Branson, is now called president.

Branson, an Oklahoman, was selected after a lengthy search to replace former administrator Wayne E. Ulrich, who served the hospital for nearly 12 years prior to that time. Branson was selected in October and joined the staff in November — nearly six months after Ulrich's resignation became known in June.

The chairmanship of the board of trustees also changed hands during the year when Roy Campbell replaced former chairman Tevis Herd at the head of the trustees' table. Campbell is responsible for the integration of the Tribrook management study recommendations for more efficient departments, while working as chairman of the Operations Committee of the trustees.

Sitting at the head of the Midland Memorial Foundation's board of governors, the fund-raising body of the hospital, is John J. Redfern Jr. Redfern is one of the founding fathers of the hospital, which marks its 31st anniversary this month and its 36th anniversary as a concept in health care.

When it opened in 1950, the hospital had only a 75-bed capacity. The east wing was added in 1958, doubling the hospital's capacity. Construction in 1966 added another 25 beds plus an operating room, recovery room and a nine-bed intensive care unit. In 1980, the completion of the west wing of the hospital added more space for the coronary care unit and the labor and delivery unit.

Midland Community Concerts Association, Midland Community Theatre, the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale, the Thouvenel String Quartet, the Lone Star Brass Quintet and the Permian Civic Ballet Association are among the entertainment forces in the city. Besides these offerings, there are both dramatic and musical events scheduled from time to time at Midland's two high schools, Midland College and local private schools. Further, a number of church groups give performances as well as the Midland-based West Texas Chapter of the American Guild of Organists.

Midland Community Concerts Association, in existence well over 30 years, was first called the Civic Music Association and later the Civic Concert Association. Each year, MCCA offers its members musical shows ranging from pianists to dancers, from vocalists to full orchestra performances.

Each membership drive is held in the spring. This year's program includes a Harlequin Theatrical Production of "Camelot," a performance by the Warsaw Philharmonic Chamber Orchestra, The New Christy Minstrels and the Romanian Folk Festival from Bucharest. All MCCA programs are held in the auditorium of Midland High.

MCT initiates its annual season in late January or early February with a lavish musical production, continuing the year with a series of drama and comedy productions.

Still to be staged this season are the productions of "10 Little Indians," "Lu Ann Hampton" and "Laverty Oberlander" from Preston Jones' "A Texas Trilogy," "Godspell" and "Bedroom Farce."

MCT's Summer Mummers, an old-fashioned melodrama, is in its 33rd season. Performances will run at 8:30 p.m. Thursdays through Saturdays through Sept. 5. The Mummers have a new home this year, the downtown Yucca theatre which has been restored especially for the Summer Mummers melodrama.

The theater is located at 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

The Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale, main office located at Terminal, begins its annual concert Oct. 13 with a special guest artist, Roberta Peters.

The complete season includes nine subscription concerts considered the A Series and a B Series. Most of the year's schedule is not definite at this time.

Concerts will be given throughout the year by both the Thouvenel String Quartet and the Lone Star Brass Quintet. Both are sponsored by the symphony.

New state law requires auto liability

Starting the first of January, Texas motorists will be required to carry automobile liability insurance.

The legislature passed the new law this spring. It allows police officers to ask for proof of insurance at accident scenes, during routine traffic stops and on other occasions.

Unlike some states with mandatory insurance laws, Texas will allow vehicles to be registered without proof of insurance. But driving without it will result in a minimum fine of $75, according to a Department of Public Safety spokesman in Austin.

Other highlights of Texas driving laws include the fact vehicles must pass yearly safety inspections and valid inspection stickers must be displayed on their windshields.

Persons moving to Texas have 30 days to get their vehicles registered, and inspected. They also have 30 days to get a Texas driver's license and turn in their out-of-state license. Persons moving from one part of the state to another have only 10 days to get the address changed on their driver's license.

A handbook containing the "rules of the road" is available from any DPS office. The Midland office is located near the intersection of Holiday Hill Road and Interstate-20.

If a person has a valid Texas or out-of-state driver's license, no driving test is required. But a 20-minute written test is mandatory.

License plates are available from the county tax office in the courthouse. A title and proof of inspection must be presented before Texas plates will be issued, and the person in whose name the title was granted must appear in person.

In the Basin, the boom goes on

Newcomers to Midland in all likelihood were told before they got here that a "boom" was under way in the Tall City.

And, indeed there is a boom — a boom in the form of new construction of all kinds. And, even though the muddy roads, scattered tin dwellings and ramshackle frame houses of the long ago Ranger and Burkburnett oil boom days are missing there is a drilling boom going.

An all-time construction record was set in 1980, and the way things are going now, it looks as if a new mark will be set this year.

In the search for oil, there are approximately 100 more rigs going in the Permian Basin at this time than were active a year ago.

Although Midland County did not join the other 59 counties of the Permian Basin of West Texas as an oil producer in 1947, the city of Midland has been the headquarters for the vast Permian Basin oil empire almost since the first commercial field was discovered in 1921 in Mitchell County.

Oilmen used Midland as their temporary headquarters the first few years, then Gulf Oil Corp. became the first major producer to move permanent operating headquarters to Midland, in 1927.

Since that time, oil company personnel have supervised the exploration and development of the oil industry in the Permian Basin.

And, the 1980 production figures reveal the importance of the Permian Basin to the oil producing industry. The Permian Basin counties of West Texas produced more than 524 million barrels of oil in 1980 — 53.5 percent of the total Texas yield for the year.

And the counties under the supervision of the Railroad Commission of Texas District 8 headquarters in Midland produced approximately 24 percent of the state's crude oil or 250 million-plus barrels.

No. 1 and No. 2 are in the north side of the Permian Basin — Yoakum being No. 1 and Gaines No. 2. The District 8-A headquarters in Lubbock administers the drilling and production operatios in those two counties.

Rounding out the top 10 last year were Gregg (in East Texas) with 43,527,927; Hockley, 43,318,942; Andrews, 39,844,906; Scurry, 39,377,274; Crane, 30,336, 534; and Refugio (south Texas), 28,536,219.

The top 10 counties in the state in 1980 were identical to the 1979 rankings. Pecos and Gregg counties were the only two of the top 10 counties to produce more oil in 1980 than in 1979. In all other instances, the top ten counties lost production.

The biggest drop was in Scurry County, almost 10,000,000 barrels. That area produced 48,187,208 barrels in 1979 and 39,377,274 in 1980.

Oil production was not the only West Texas long suit in 1980. The 59 counties produced nearly 5,675,595,010,000 cubic feet of gas well gas; 1,322,296,207 cubic feet of casinghead gas in 1980 and 29,259,688 barrels of condensate.

The Permian Basin leader in gas well gas production in 1980 was Pecos County with 439,126,049 cubic feet of gas down from 469,375,688 cubic feet for the previous year when it also lead the state. Kleberg County was second with 254,925,506,000 feet and Waller was third with 247,320,072,000 cubic feet.

The other top ten counties included Ward, 172,816,783,000; Brazoria, 165,687,340,000; Hemphill; 164,664,156,000; Moore, 162,587,133,000; Winkler, 154,194,902,000; Galveston, 147,473,631,000, and Panola, 144,001,821,000.

The top 10 casinghead gas producers in 1979 were: Crane, 122,093,885,000 cubic feet of gas; Scurry, 56,528,902,000; Ector, 55,373,881,000; Refugio, 52,024,962,000; Chambers, 45,583,599,000; Winkler, 40,956,692,000; Gaines, 38,567,007,000; Harris, 38,086,630,000; Yoakum, 34,700,967,000 and Andrews, 28,867,714,000.

High Sky Girls Ranch offers help

An atmosphere of affection and caring is emphasized at High Sky Girls Ranch, according to Executive Director David Maley.

The ranch is a refuge for young girls who are in trouble, whether they are runaways, truant, rebellious or simply in despair.

The ranch, located four miles northwest of Midland, began operation in 1963. Currently, it is composed of three cottage units with space for 31 girls.

The girls are accepted on a referral basis from parents, the Department of Human Resources, school teachers, pastors, the Juvenile Probation office and other sources.

Approximately 20 requests for housing are received each month from families, juvenile authorities and Child Welfare agencies throughout Texas.

Golf, tennis available

If tennis or golf is your game, Midland offers almost unlimited opportunities to fit almost any pocketbook.

The Tall City offers four top-notch golf courses. Hogan Park, Midland's municipal golf course, has 27 holes for public play. There also are three private courses at three of the city's country clubs.

Ranchland Hills CC, Green Tree CC and Midland CC all have excellent 18-hole courses provided for their members. The RHCC and MCC courses have long provided Midland with excellent golf courses and are ranked as top-notch courses. Green Tree is in its second year and is already rated as one of the top courses around.

Hogan Park opened in 1958 and has been the city's golfing center ever since, even hosting the Tall City Open, a regular stop on the LPGA tour, back in the 1960s. It was at Hogan that Mickey Wright had her record round of 62.

With the expansion, Hogan now has a different look for those who may have been away for a while. A new, improved clubhouse has replaced the cramped quarters near Cubs Stadium that served as the pro shop for 21 years and the new nine holes is now in its second year of operation.

All of the country clubs offer excellent tennis facilities for those who prefer the private club approach to tennis. The Racquet Club is another private club dedicated to tennis.

The Midland Tennis Club offers competition for those outside the "country club" atmosphere.

Midland's new downtown convention facility, Midland Center, was a big reason the city drew a total of 14,010 conventioneers to the Tall City in 1980.

Versatile facility facilitates city's convention trade

During 1980, a total of 14,010 conventioneers visited the Tall City. They visited 60 conventions and stayed in Midland an average of 2.28 days.

What's more, the conventioneers brought a total of $2,076,282 to the city, a staggering $553,784.40 more than the 10,844 conventioneers brought here the year before.

According to Jan Reeder, director of Midland's Conventions and Visitors Bureau, the city's convention future looks bright. One of the reasons for Midland's convention success, she said, is the fact that since 1977 Midland has been actively pursuing conventions.

But there are other factors, too. Midland is in a central location and is easy to get to, the convention director noted. The city also is blessed with good air traffic and hotel-motel accommodations.

All-in-all, Ms. Reeder said, Midland appears to be in store for another record convention year, even though perhaps not as large as the increase experienced last year. Ms. Reeder anticipates Midland hosting 75 conventions this year.

Sheriff Dallas Smith

Dallas Smith guides department

The Midland County Sheriff's Department is a far cry from the pot-bellied, cigar-chomping image of its counterparts elsewhere in the Lone Star State.

Under the stewardship of Sheriff Dallas Smith, the department has become a professional force of courteous, educated officers who are required to maintain a high degree of mental and physical capability.

Smith, a former trooper with the state highway patrol, took office in 1977 and put into play a number of measures which have made the department a model of county law enforcement in Texas.

Among the steps Smith took to accomplish that task were: uniformed deputies, marked patrol cars, periodic physical fitness tests and incentive pay for officers who continue their education.

He's also credited with convincing county government of the need to upgrade the salary scale of the department, which, for example, recently received a 6 percent pay hike. An additional 19 percent will come Jan. 1.

It's money well earned, with some 41 officers being responsible for law and order in the 1000 square miles that comprise Midland County.

The department also serves court warrants, runs the jail, handles some calls from city residents and has a reputation for showing up in person — even when deputies know in advance there may be little they can do about particular situations.

SPCA active in area since 1948, officer says

The Midland chapter of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (SPCA) has been investigating cruelty complaints in the Permian Basin since 1948, according to chapter president Jeannette Probandt.

With no building of its own, the chapter works in conjunction with the Animal Control Center to maintain standards for healthy animals in the Permian Basin.

"Most of the time, we try to talk to the people about what the law is as far as cruelty to animals is concerned," Ms. Probandt said. "If people can't take care of their animals, we let them know we'd be willing to take it and try to find it a good home."

In addition, the chapter is concerned about dead animals, reminding Midlanders it is illegal to leave a dead animal in a dumpster or to bury that animal in one's yard.

A volunteer organization, the SPCA has an answering service to collect complaints at 684-7582. Anyone with information about the mistreatment of animals should contact the SPCA immediately.

Haley library characterizes Southwest life

The rustic life and times of Southwest cowboys and ranchers are characterized in an exhaustive collection of books, manuscripts, letters and artifacts in the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library at 1805 W. Indiana Ave. in Midland.

The library-museum, which contains more than 10,000 items in a Spanish-styled building, is named in appreciation of Nita Stewart Haley, the late wife of noted cowboy historian J. Evetts Haley.

The library's collection consists of books, pamphlets, manuscripts, letters, oral interviews, artifacts and other material relating to ranch life, cattle drives and cowboys of the Southwest.

Founded in 1976, the library contains more than 600 of Edwin F. Smith's photographic negatives and photographs covering the various phases of the cattle industry in bygone years.

The library also stores books on Indian lore and life, the petroleum industry, wildflowers, wildlife, cities and towns, forts, numerous biographies and specialized volumes on various aspects of the Southwest.

One of the library's most sung artifacts is the "Alamo Bell," which originally tolled in the historic Alamo, the Spanish Colonial Catholic mission which has become one of Texas' leading symbols of its independence in 1836 from Mexico.

Parks programs offer variety of fun

The Midland Parks and Recreation Department offers a wide variety of programs throughout the year, ranging from soccer and exercise programs in the winter to swimming and tennis in the summer.

This past year, the department has been trying to expand its park system and variety of recreational programs.

The Petro Parcourse is under construction in the north part of Midland and is located in the undeveloped Windlands Community Playfield at A and Dengar Streets. When completed, this 1¼-mile asphalt course will be open for joggers, walkers, skaters and bikers.

Windlands Community Playfield and Tumbleweed Park, located in north Midland south of Wadley Avenue and west of A Street, will provide a variety of programs for Midlanders. After it is completed, the two parks will include a tot play area and softball fields.

Kiwanis Park at Haynes Street will provide a new play area for youngsters in the northwest section of Midland.

In addition, the city maintains 28 developed parks and utilizes four other sites as parks in agreement with other agencies, primarily schools.

Eighteen of these 28 parks are equipped with playground equipment; 16 of the parks have picnic facilities.

Hogan Park, the largest city park with 640 acres, contains two driving ranges, seven lighted baseball and softball fields, a municipal golf course, a large picnic rea, a swimming pool, a model airplane flying site and an undeveloped area for camping.

By fall, several soccer fields should be an added attraction for the park. This is part of the Soccer Association's attempts to locate all playing fields in Hogan Park.

The parks department maintains 37 baseball and softball fields. A year-round gymnasium and three other recreational centers also are available for public use. Eight volleyball courts, three of which are lighted, are open for public use.

Recreational programs include swimming, tennis, baton twirling and gymnastics. During the fall and winter are exercise programs for women, including classes for those expecting babies and for those who have just had them. Summer programs include supervised playground activities at numerous schools.

The parks and recreation office is located at 300 Baldwin St., 683-4281, extension 281.

Developed parks in Midland include Alamo Park, Midland Drive and Storey Avenue; Cole Park, Cloverdale Road; Cowden Park, Princeton and Maberry streets; Dennis the Menace Park, West Indiana and Garfield streets; Dunagan Park, Gist and Terrell streets.

Also, Elkin Park, Washington and D streets; Fasken Park, Humble and Mogford streets; Garrett-Brown Park, Delano and Holly streets; Grafa Park, Midkiff Road; Haley Park, Holloway and L streets; Halff Park, Main and New Jersey streets; Henderson Park, Eisenhower and Graceland streets.

Also, Hidalgo Park, Orchard Lane and Tyler Street; Hill Park, Kansas and F streets; Hogan Park, Lamesa Road and Wadley Avenue; Lancaster Park, Kansas and Alpine streets; and Lloyd Park, Cuthbert and Marienfeld streets.

Career development among Jaycee goals

The Midland Jaycees' goal is community service and personal and career development for men between the ages of 18 and 35 who want to improve leadership abilities.

Operating consession stands at athletic events, helping elderly or indigent persons and taking children on Christmas shopping trips are but a few of the projects undertaken by Jaycees.

The American Jaycees was first organized in 1915 at St. Louis, Mo., as the Junior Citizens Club. Their name changed to the Junior Chamber of Commerce in 1918, went national in 1920 and became known as the United States Jaycees in 1965.

Chaparral Center pulses with life

When filled to capacity, it holds 7,200 bodies and is pulsating with life. Vacant, the silence is almost deafening. It appears to be waiting; a sleeping hollow giant until the next crowd awakens it again.

Chaparral Center, located on the campus of Midland College, has been since its opening in September of 1978, a focal point for entertainment in Midland. It has housed, to name only a few, circuses, ice shows, graduation ceremonies, car shows, conventions, college and high school basketball games and name entertainers.

Among the name entertainers to fill its walls since January of 1981 have been The Oak Ridge Boys and Tom T. Hall, plus a rock concert by Nazareth.

The center's opening event was a concert — Captain and Tennille. Other entertainers in the past years have included Ted Nugent, Eddie Rabbitt, Mickey Gilley, Johnny Lee and the Urban Cowboy Band, Larry Gatlin and the Gatlin Brothers Band, Barbara Mandrell, The Statler Brothers, etc.

It also has housed a number of church-oriented concerts and events.

The building, designed by Preston M. Geren and Associates of Fort Worth, resembles a giant square, without the corners, and is constructed of exposed concrete. Located in the southeast section of the Midland College campus, it contains approximately 63,000 square feet.

Chaparral Center is a department of MC with a budget and its own staff. The money made from its rental goes back into the college fund to help offset the center's expenses.

It can accommodate a seated crowd of approximately 6,200 for concerts and shows and seats about 5,000 for sporting events.

New president, same Midland College

When Dr. Jess H. Parrish takes the reins as president of Midland College Aug. 1, not much of a change is anticipated in the college's general direction. The goal will remain basically the same: a community college serving everyone from high schoolers to senior citizens.

Dr. Parrish, coming to Midland from Shelby State Community College in Memphis, Tenn., replaces Dr. Al G. Langford who resigned earlier this year after having served as the college's president since its inception.

The college, located at 3600 N. Garfield St., sprawls across 115 acres. In the fall of 1980, there were 2,699 students enrolled at Midland College, according to college officials. This fall enrollment is expected to reach 2,800 to 3,000. Another 8,000 students or so sign up each year for non-credit courses.

Midland College has a three-fold purpose — to provide university-parallel education for students planning to earn a bachelor's degree, to provide occupational and technical programs for those employed or seeking vocational careers and to provide continuing educational opportunities.

An early admissions program allows high schoolers to earn college credits while still in high school. Credits are held in escrow until the student graduates from high school.

Academic and vocational classes are offered in the daytime and evening. Also, some course offerings of the regular fall and spring semesters are available during two summer sessions. During the Christmas and pre-summer periods concentrated two-week interim sessions are offered.

A new program in social services will be started in September this year by the college.

Some 300 short courses are offered each year through the Department of Community Services. The courses cover a wide range of interests. Defensive driving is offered to the public and groups of employees from companies.

Four full-time counselors provide assistance to students on required courses for transfer to another college, personal problems, career choices and financial aid.

Financial aid available includes a wide variety of scholarships, grants, loan funds and work-study programs. High school students who graduate in the top 5 percent of their class are eligible for scholarships which pay for their tuition, books and fees.

Aptitude Inventory Measurement Service of Dallas conducts specialized testing and career guidance on the college campus throughout the year.

Adult Basic Ecucation programs are offered at various locations to assist those who have left school and now wish to earn the equivalent of a high school diploma or for those who speak another language and want to learn English.

Senior citizens are eligible to attend Midland College tuition free and may obtain free identification cards from the college, use the library facilities and participate in numerous activities and programs designed for them.

Student clubs and organizations range from special interest to honor groups. An intramural director organizes and supervises non-varsity competition for interested students. Activities range from coed volleyball to soccer, basketball and bowling.

In addition to home varsity basketball games, other community activities such as concerts, exhibits, graduations and others are held in the multi-purpose Chaparral Center. The facility has more than 5,000 permanent seats and is designed to be used by the college and the community.

From comedy to drama — It's all available in Midland

Theater buffs in Midland can choose from a wide variety of entertainment options, ranging from recent Broadway comedies, dramas and musicals presented live, to first-run motion pictures.

Midland Community Theatre, for 35 years one of the leading entertainment forces in the Permian Basin, offers a selection of musicals, comedies and dramas during its year-round membership season.

The theater is in its fourth year of occupancy in its beautiful and spacious quarters at 2000 W. Wadley Ave. The structure, erected at a cost approaching $2 million, was paid for during a fund-raising campaign in January 1981.

MCT produces six major plays each season in Theatre I and three in the smaller Theatre II. Remaining plays for this year are "10 Little Indians," "Lu Ann Hampton" and "Laverty Oberlander" from Preston Jones' "A Texas Trilogy," "Godspell" and "Bedroom Farce."

In addition, the theater sponsors a young people's drama club, the Pickwick Players, which produces and performs several plays throughout the year.

Summer Mummers, now in its 33rd season, is a summer melodrama produced by MCT in weekend performances from July through Sept. 5. The 1981 melodrama, presented in the Mummers' new home — the downtown Yucca Theatre — is "Debauchery on the Drawbridge," subtitled "Fighting a Duel for a Fair Maiden is More That Just Another Sworded Affair."

MCT also sponsors a film club, Cinema 81, which shows classic motion pictures. More information on the theater's activities may be obtained by calling 682-2544.

Also available to city and area residents are productions at the dinner theater, the Country Squire, located east of Odessa on Highway 80. The evening's entertainment includes a buffet dinner and a comedy put on by professional actors and actresses brought to the area for the duration of the show. More information on show times may be obtained by calling 563-4111.

The Globe is the Permian Basin's near-perfect replica of William Shakespeare's own Globe Theatre in 17th century London. Permian Playhouse is Odessa's community theater which opens its annual season in September with a Broadway musical.

Moviegoers in Midland have several theaters from which to choose.

Indoor theaters include Hodge Cinema I & II, 200 Plaza; UA Cine IV, 3207 W. Cuthbert Ave.; Westwood Cinema, 4310 Andrews Highway; and Midland Park Mall Cinemas, 4511 Midkiff St. Drive-ins include the Chief on Andrews Highway and the Texan on West Highway 80.

Midland County counts on cotton and cattle

Midland County agriculture is as basic as the wind and rain that erode the soil and, at the same time, which combine with sunlight and soil nutrients to produce life-sustaining food and life-comforting fibers.

Though economically overshadowed by the petroleum industry, agriculture is vital to the economy here and does its bit to help feed and clothe the nation and the world.

The omens of rain, soil moisture, warm weather and conservation seem to forecast a profitable crop and livestock year if market prices hold up in 1981 and 1982.

But 1980 was not a money-making year for Midland County farmers and ranchers.

The drought, which was somewhat reminiscent of the first year of the seven-year drought of the 1950s, severely cut into crop and cattle production. And irrigated cotton and what little dryland cotton did pull through for the fall harvest was largely damaged by the heavy (9.70-inch) September rain.

The rains did, of course, bring a dramatic break in the drought and became a good sign for a productive 1981 year on the farm and ranch.

The 1980 agricultural cash receipts were estimated at more than $8 million. In 1979, those receipts were just about double that: $15.7 million. Crops accounted for about $10 million of that revenue in 1979.

Farmers and ranchers, with more than a little bit of work, hit the mother lode in 1979.

"We'll probably never beat that record," said Charlie Green, the Midland County extension agent for agriculture.

"I figure we made less than 10,000 (bales of cotton) in 1980," he said. The cotton yield in 1979 was almost 40,000 bales.

The 1980 drought-stunted range grasses, and the cattle's natural forage was necessarily supplemented by the relatively expensive commerce feed, feed supplements, hay and other fodder.

"Those calves were a little bit lighter," recalled Green, "and our cow herds were down. The steers weren't as heavy, and the quality wasn't as good."

The county's biggest alfalfa patch, farmed by E.F. "Gene" Jones & Sons southeast of Midland, yielded less than the previous year even though the alfalfa is irrigated year-round. The crop under went the stress of the drought despite the irrigation.

Crop and livestock enterprises in Midland County include the alfalfa hay, cotton, pecans, grapes, watermelons, sheep, poultry, annual forages, beef cattle, sheep and hogs, and dairy herds. Milk produced by the Roy-Roy Dairy here total 9.9 million pounds in 1979. And 3.6 million (300,000 dozen) eggs were laid. Wool production total 37,000 pounds.

Midland court system explained

Justice in Midland is meted out in several levels of courts which deal in civil-criminal matters from overparking, simple assaults and petty debts to income tax evasion, murder, grand larceny and million-dollar suits for damages.

Courts in Midland take in jurisdictions by the city, county, state and federal governments.

Courts seated in Midland are:

—Municipal Court. Presiding judge is James Fitz-Gerald III. The court is seated in the Midland Public Safety Building at 404 E. Texas Ave. in downtown Midland. The court of record serves to settle disputes stemming from alleged violations of city ordinances and deals with a heavy influx of traffic-related offenses. City attorney is Joe Nuessle. Court Clerk is Jean Jones.

—Justices of the Peace: Presiding justices are Robert "Bob" Pine and Charles Sprayberry. The justices' duties include the filing of felony and misdemeanor charges, setting of bail, acting as coroners, presiding over examining trials and presiding over cases involving claims as high as $500. The JP Courts is in the basement of the Midland County Courthouse and is served by prosecutors from the District Attorney's and County Attorney's Offices. Chief constable is Tom McGinnis.

—Midland County Court: Presiding judge is William B. "Bill" Ahders. The court presides over misdemeanor criminal trials, civil cases and probates wills. The county judge is the chief administrator of county government and as such presides over the Midland County Commissioners' Court. The commissioners' court is made up of Judge Ahders and Commissioners Durward Wright, Charlie Welch, C. DeWayne Davis and Win Brown. County clerk is Rosenelle Cherry. Chief prosecutor and the county's legal adviser is Robert Rendall.

—Midland County Court-at-Law: Presiding judge is Willie DuBose, who also is the county juvenile court judge. The court carries out functions similar to that of the county judge. The county court and county court-at-law courts handle civil cases involving damages up to $5,000. Chief prosecutor is County Attorney Robert Rendall. Clerk is Rosenelle Cherry.

—142nd State Judicial District Court: Presiding judge is Pat M. Baskin. The court has jurisdiction over felony criminal cases and civil cases involving more than $5,000 in damages. Chief prosecutor is District Attorney Vern Martin. Clerk in Madge Wallis.

—238th State Judicial District Court: Presiding judge is Vann Culp. The court has jurisdiction of felony criminal cases and civil cases involving more than $5,000 in damages. Chief prosecutor is District Attorney Vern Martin. Clerk is Madge Wallis.

—318th State Judicial District Court: Presiding judge is Barbara Culver. The court primarily deals in family matters from divorces to child custody to property settlements. However, the court has jurisdiction on felony criminal and civil matters involving damages. Chief prosecutor is District Attorney Vern Martin. Clerk is Madge Wallis.

—Federal Court: Presiding judge is Lucius D. Bunton. The court has jurisdiction over crimes which violate federal statutes and over civil interstate civil matters which involves damages in excess of $10,000. The court also presides over naturalization ceremonies.

Judge Bunton presides over the federal court's Midland-Odessa and Pecos divisions of the Western District of Texas. The Midland-Odessa Division takes in the counties of Andrews, Crane, Ector, Martin, Midland and Upton. The Pecos Division encompasses the counties of Brewster, Culberson, Hudspeth, Jeff Davis, Loving, Reeves, Pecos, Presidio, Ward and Winkler.

Chief prosecutor is Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Bock.

Federal magistrate is J. Michael Cunningham.

Voter information

Midlanders who are not registered to vote may sign up no later than 30 days prior to the Nov. 3 general election to be eligible to cast their ballots, according to Maxine Morris, Midland County assistant deputy voter registrar. Therefore, registration deadline is Oct. 4.

"They (voters) do not have to declare their politics" at the time of registration, said Janeice Builta, Midland County deputy voter registrar. "They can vote as they please."

As of April 4, 1981, there were slightly more than 44,000 registered voters in Midland County. There are some 83,000 residents in Midland County, of which some 60,000 are of voting age.

New Midland residents, as well as those who have neglected to register or those whose resgistration has expired, may sign up for the vote at the tax office in the basement of the Midland County Courthouse or with a volunteer deputy registrant.

Those wishing to sign up are asked to provide their Social Security number in addition to the date and place of their birth upon registration. Although the Social Security number is not required, it is helpful in distinguishing between persons of the same name, Mrs. Morris said.

Naturalized citizens are to provide the name of the court where their naturalization papers were processed.

New Midland residents may register to vote right away, as the old six-month waiting period has been abolished.

"They can move in one day, register the next and in 30 days, they'll be eligible to vote," Mrs. Morris said.

New voter registration certificates are mailed out every two years. However, the names of those people who have moved and who have not notified the voter registrar of their change of address will be stricken from the list. Those currently registered should have white voter registraion certificates which remain valid through Feb. 28, 1982.

Texas liquor laws can be confusing

Newcomers should be aware that Texas has a confusing array of liquor laws.

Midland County, for example, is "wet", while half the other counties in the state are dry — or partially dry. And although most states in the union forbid open containers of alcohol in vehicles, Texas has no such restriction.

That doesn't mean, however, that a person can drive under the influence of alcohol. It simply means, for instance, that you can't be arrested for having a beer as you wind your way home from work.

A bill that would have put a statewide ban on open containers in vehicles failed in the recently concluded session of the legislature. Yet local ordinances might forbid the practice.

The City of Midland has such an ordinance. But the ordinance is not enforced — probably because police are leery of its ambiguous nature. To wit:

"It shall be unlawful (to) transport, carry, possess or have any alcoholic beverage in or upon or about any motor vehicle (excluding the trunk) in or upon public highways, roads, streets, alleys or sidewaiks in the city, except (in their) original unopened container."

"What the hell does 'about any motor vehicle' mean?" asked one police officer. "Would three feet away be 'about' the vehicle?"

At any rate, even if the ordinance were enforced, chances are it could be successfully challenged in court. According to a beverage commission spokesman, the ABC — and not local governing bodies — has almost sole jurisdiction in deciding what the liquor laws will be.

"I don't know," said City Attorney Joe Nuessle. "All we can do is adopt laws we feel are in the public interest and see what happens if they're challenged. But it wouldn't amaze me to see (the ordinance) stricken from the books.

"It was based on similar laws in other states, but — probably peculiar to Texas — the ABC code pre-empts most liquor enforcement in the state. We'll stand by our ordinances until the courts tell us otherwise, however, and I'll argue in the proper forum at the proper time."

Meanwhile, the legislature did approve a major change in the drinking laws this past session. It used to be you could drink at age 18. Now, it's 19. The new age limit goes into effect Sept.1.

Some of the other drinking laws in the state are: bars and lounges may sell alcoholic beverages from 7 a.m. to midnight only, Monday through Friday; and from 7 a.m. Saturday to 1 a.m. Sunday; Sunday hours are noon to midnight; but establishments with "late permits" may dispense drinks until 2 a.m. daily.

Transportation services plentiful

Highways, air lanes and a railroad serve to move people and products through the ever-growing Permian Basin.

Two new airlines have been added to air routes in the past few months. American Airlines joined Braniff International, Continental, Southwest and Texas International as major air carriers, while Sun Air is scheduled to go into commuter operations this fall.

Continental Trailways and Greyhound bus service is available for ground travel. The Missouri Pacific Railroad, numerous trucking companies and a diversity of road and air charter services swell the ranks of people and product transportation services.

In Midland proper, Mid-Tran bus routes traverse city streets and offer door-to-door service in many instances. City cab service also abounds.

United Way agencies benefit many residents year to fund the member agencies, according to Nancy Miertschin, United Way communications director. The goal for this fall's campaign has been set at $1,350,000. Those funds will be allocated to the 20 member agencies during 1982.

In allocating funds, United Way volunteers consider other sources of funding available to agencies and encourage them not to be overly dependent on United Way funding. One such additional source of funding is membership fees for certain activities. Also, clients are sometimes charged according to their ability to pay for certain other services.

Although the figure varies slightly from year to year, about 90 percent of the money raised by the United Way of Midland goes directly to the local member agencies. The remaining percentage is used to pay for programs operated by the United Way itself and its administrative and campaign costs, such as salaries for a small professional staff and office rent.

Prior to their selection as United Way member agencies, organizations are screened to determine whether they fulfill a high priority human service need unduplicated in this area. The service also must be available to all people without regard to race, color or creed. In addition, agencies seeking admission to the United Way must meet certain standards applied to both their programs and financial management.

Besides these admission requirements, United Way volunteers maintain an ongoing review process to assure that the agencies are using sound management practices and that United Way funds are being used for the purpose they were intended.

During 1980 more than one out of every three Midlanders benefited from a member agency of the United Way of Midland.

The United Way organization in Midland, like other United Ways throughout the country, is affiliated with the United Way of America, but it is the local organizations which control the national group rather than being controlled themselves by the larger organization.

Those local organizations in Midland include American Red Cross, Boy Scouts of America, Boys' Club, Camp Fire Inc., Casa de Amigos, Community Day Nursery, Council on Alcoholism, Family Services Inc. (which includes Big Brothers/Big Sisters), La Florecita Day Nursery, Midland-Lee Youth Centers, Permian Basin Planned Parenthood, Salvation Army, Tape Lending Library, Alamo YMCA, Metropolitan YMCA, Park Center YMCA and Washington YMCA.

Two new agencies — Midland Rape Crisis Center and the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children — joined Midland United Way and will be included in next year's package, local United Way officials said.

Last year, the United Way raised $1,171,000 which is being used this

Many pets available

A variety of pets are always available for adoption at the Animal Control Center, 1600 Orchard Lane, at a minimal cost. All adoptees are required to be spayed or neutered once they leave the shelter and the cost includes this charge.

In addition, all pets — adoptees and other family pets — are subject to city ordinances. Dalton Byerly, head of Animal Control Department, said dogs and cats in the Tall City must be licensed.

Current license may be obtained from a veterinarian at the same time rabies vaccinations are updated, Bylerly said. Vaccinations must be renewed each year and are good for one year from the date of the vaccination.

Dogs must be kept on a leash or behind a fence at all times, Byerly said.

Professional installer can make home an energy-saving work of art

The only real difference between the Mona Lisa and a stick figure lies in the artist's ability. And, in much the same way, the results of home improvement projects depend on the skill of the craftsman.

It may be that your skills qualify you as a Michelangelo in the art of home improvement. But, if you're considering adding energy-saving fiber glass insulation to your home, for instance, and your skills are a bit rusty or undeveloped, it's important that you know how to choose a person skilled in the art.

To help you select a professional insulation contractor for your home, here are some tips from the CertainTeed Home Institute:

1. Finding contractors. Look in your telephone book under "Insulation Contractors—Cold and Heat," or check with your local remodeling contractors' association. They can be helpful in recommending contractors.

2. Checking credentials. Most reputable contractors belong to the Better Business Bureau. If you have any questions about a contractor, check with that organization.

3. Checking references. Ask the contractor for a list of former customers. Call them to see if they were satisfied with the contractor's work.

4. Getting estimates. Be sure that each contractor is bidding with the same materials. With insulation, R-values, rather than inches, should be compared. (An R-value is the measure of the material's resistance to heat flow. The higher the R-value, the greater the insulating ability.)

A professional contractor will use insulation that is made by an established company, such as CertainTeed. The manufacturer's reputation gives you an additional assurance of quality.

Once you've selected a professional insulation contractor, the CertainTeed Home Institute recommends that you insist on a written contract. This document is your best assurance that the job will be completed to your expectations.

In the contract, the following items should be clearly spelled out:

- Precise materials to be used, including brand names, square feet of coverage or number of bags of loose-fill insulation.
- Exact work to be done.
- Date job to be completed.
- Who is responsible for clean up.
- Whether or not the contractor has adequate insurance—for his personnel and for your home.
- Total price and method of payment.

Just as a fine work of art appreciates in value over the years, so too should the value of your professionally-installed insulation, as energy costs continue to rise and you continue to save.

Free new booklet offers tips on choosing replacement windows

Tips on how to save energy by replacing drafty old windows are offered in two new booklets from the Aluminum Window Information Bureau.

The booklets illustrate various styles of replacement windows which can help save fuel winter and summer, add value to your home and reduce maintenance by eliminating the need for painting.

Free copies of the literature, entitled "Aluminum Windows for Every Home," and "Thermalized Windows for Every Home," are available by writing to the Aluminum Window Information Bureau, Dept. RW-4, 250 West 57th Street, New York, NY 10019.

Backyard barbecue is easy

If you're into improving your home or apartment, don't stop at the back door. With a little extra planning and relatively little expense, you can have a nifty little backyard barbecue center.

All it takes is a covered kettle barbecue grill, a handy folding table/bench combination and an eye-catching covered container that holds charcoal briquets and other barbecue accessories.

With these three basic items, you have a complete outdoor kitchen set-up. All you need to add is the food. It's an ideal setting for spur-of-the-moment entertaining, casual family meals or more organized parties.

Helpful guidelines

Like the idea? Here are some guidelines about the equipment you'll need. Start with a Happy Cooker™ Covered Kettle Grill. This quality kettle is ideal for this project because it's made of heavy gauge steel with a durable, weatherproof porcelain enamel finish.

With it, you can enjoy barbecuing year-round. Since the food is covered, a kettle grill offers the luxury of cooking over the coals in any kind of weather ... any time of year.

Attractive indoors, too

Ideal where storage space is limited, the snacker has redwood-stained wooden slats and a high-strength steel tubing frame which makes it attractive for indoor use as well.

To make a regular picnic table seating four to six people, latch two of these snack benches together.

To complete your backyard barbecue center, choose a roomy, tightly covered container that's big enough to hold a bag of charcoal briquets, lighter fluid and long-handled barbecue utensils. In this way everything you need to cook out is stored conveniently nearby.

Fire department, ambulance services operate in wide area

Some 122 personnel man the city's fire department and ambulance service at seven locations throughout the city, including three special air crash trucks stationed at Midland Regional Airport.

The ambulance service has five vehicles with the latest lifesaving equipment aboard and its crews are trained in advanced life-support technology, including specialized cardiopulmonary care.

Chief Raymond Lewis heads up the fire department, and James Roberts is deputy chief. Lewis has been with the department 27 years and spent three years with the city's street department before joining the fire department.

The central station is located at 1500 W. Wall. The emergency phone number is 911, while the non-emergency number is 683-1561.

Local League of Women Voters seeks to inform

The Midland chapter of the League of Women Voters seeks to inform voters on various candidates' records and stands as well as national, state and local issues.

Currently issue studies being conducted by the League include the national health care system, women under Texas law and a local study of the academic curriculum of Midland high and junior high schools.

Locally, the League acts as an observer of the city council, school board, hospital board and county commission by publishing voter guides and a guide to elected officials. In addition, it conducts candidate rallies, however, the League seeks never to endorse political parties or candidates.

Further, members are available to serve as speakers on topics involving environmental issues, the Equal Rights Amendment, voting rights and citizen responsibility and rights.

Members volunteer their time to work with Girl Scouts on badges and hold forums on public issues. The League also distributes a monthly newsletter, The Voter.

Welcome to the New Texas Frontier!

Welcome to Midland...center for one-fifth of the total energy production in the U.S. Your new home stands tall in West Texas...an area as rich in tradition as resources.

Over 100 years ago, this area was developed by a tough, independent breed of cattlemen. Their vision, plus hard work carved an empire from the prairie. But then, as now, the price of success was not cheap. They needed a bank cast from their own mold to support the growth that lay ahead. That bank is The First National Bank of Midland.

Today, the economic health of Midland may be traced to the extraordinary resourcefulness and productivity of the people of the Permian Basin. The standards are still high and they keep getting higher, but the lessons of those early West Texans have been learned well. The First National Bank now has over $1 Billion in assets committed to a strong and economically viable region. This same strength that will support future growth also lets us offer our customers the best package of bank services available. For example, our exclusive Checking-Plus-Interest account that pays 5 1/4% interest with no minimum balance or service charge and the multiple-lane motor bank at Colorado and Ohio are two of the many reasons why more people in the Permian Basin bank on the resources of The First National Bank of Midland than on any other!

Put our resources to work for you. Call 685-2000 or stop by Wall at Colorado.
