Clinton to lift gay-GI ban

President-elect says he'll consult with military

By Thomas L. Friedman
N.Y. Times News Service

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — President-elect Bill Clinton said Wednesday that he plans to lift the ban on homosexuals in the military after he takes office in January.

Clinton disclosed his plans following a Veterans Day speech in the Arkansas State House, marking the first time he has addressed a specific policy decision since he was elected.

In the speech, Clinton, whose avoidance of the Vietnam War draft became a central campaign issue, seemed to go out of his way to signal veterans of that war that as commander in chief he would protect their interests and insure that they are not left "out in the cold" after the Cold War.

Clinton also used his first major address as president-elect to try to reassure members of the armed services that he would be as tough on national security affairs as any of the Republicans who questioned his mettle in the campaign or the medal-draped Arkansas veterans with whom he shared the platform on Wednesday.

Clinton vowed that his administration would not establish normal relations with Vietnam as long as it was suspected of withholding information about missing American servicemen. He also said that his Veterans Affairs secretary would seek to improve the veterans' health-care system, and that he would support initiatives to give military men and women cut from the armed forces for budgetary reasons a chance to earn their 20-year pensions

Police arrest two

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Police investigating a string of attacks on motorists announced the arrests Wednesday of two teen-agers believed involved in one shooting. Jacksonville Sheriff Jim McMillan said the two boys, ages 16 and 17, fired a weapon from a moving vehicle into the car of Debra Lewis. The bullet hit her in the ear and lodged in her jaw. The two were charged with attempted murder./3D

Violence in Detroit

The beating death of a black man at the hands of a racially mixed group of police has roiled Detroit, once proud of its integrated, neighborhood-based policing. The case resounds with echos of the Rodney King case, but those familiar with Detroit's police say Malice Green's death points to something else: an undermanned force lacking the leadership to weed out "thumpers," the violent cops of both races./3D

Yeltsin on POWs

WASHINGTON — Russian President Boris Yeltsin told U.S. senators Wednesday in a letter that Americans were held in prison camps after World War II and some were "summarily executed" but others still live in his country voluntarily. Yeltsin's letter also said some Americans had been forced to renounce their citizenship./9A

'Penguin' flap

COLORADO CITY, Ariz. — A school superintendent on Wednesday defended a principal who reprimanded a student for wearing a T-shirt with a picture of "The Penguin," the mortal enemy of comic-book and movie hero Batman. Principal Lawrence Steed contended that the shirt, depicting actor Danny DeVito in his "Batman" movie role as "The Penguin," was a sign of devil worship, said Trudie Bateman, the boy's mother. Her 14-year-old son, James, was reprimanded for wearing the shirt to class last week. Colorado City, a town of a few thousand on the Arizona-Utah line, was settled more than a century ago by polygamous Mormons after the church banned plural marriages.

Remembrances flow while basin honors veterans

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

In commemoration of Veterans Day, 203 Permian Basin soldiers killed or missing in action in the Vietnam War were remembered Wednesday at the future site of the Permian Basin Vietnam Veteran's Memorial.

"Basically it means welcome home. It means thanks for what you did. . . . We are deeply in debt to you and we have not confused the warriors with the war," said John Philbeck, president of the memorial committee.

About 40 people attended the 11 a.m. ceremony at the site ground located off Wright Drive near the Confederate Air Force at Midland International Airport.

Veterans, local dignitaries and others read the names of the 203 soldiers who lost their lives during the war.

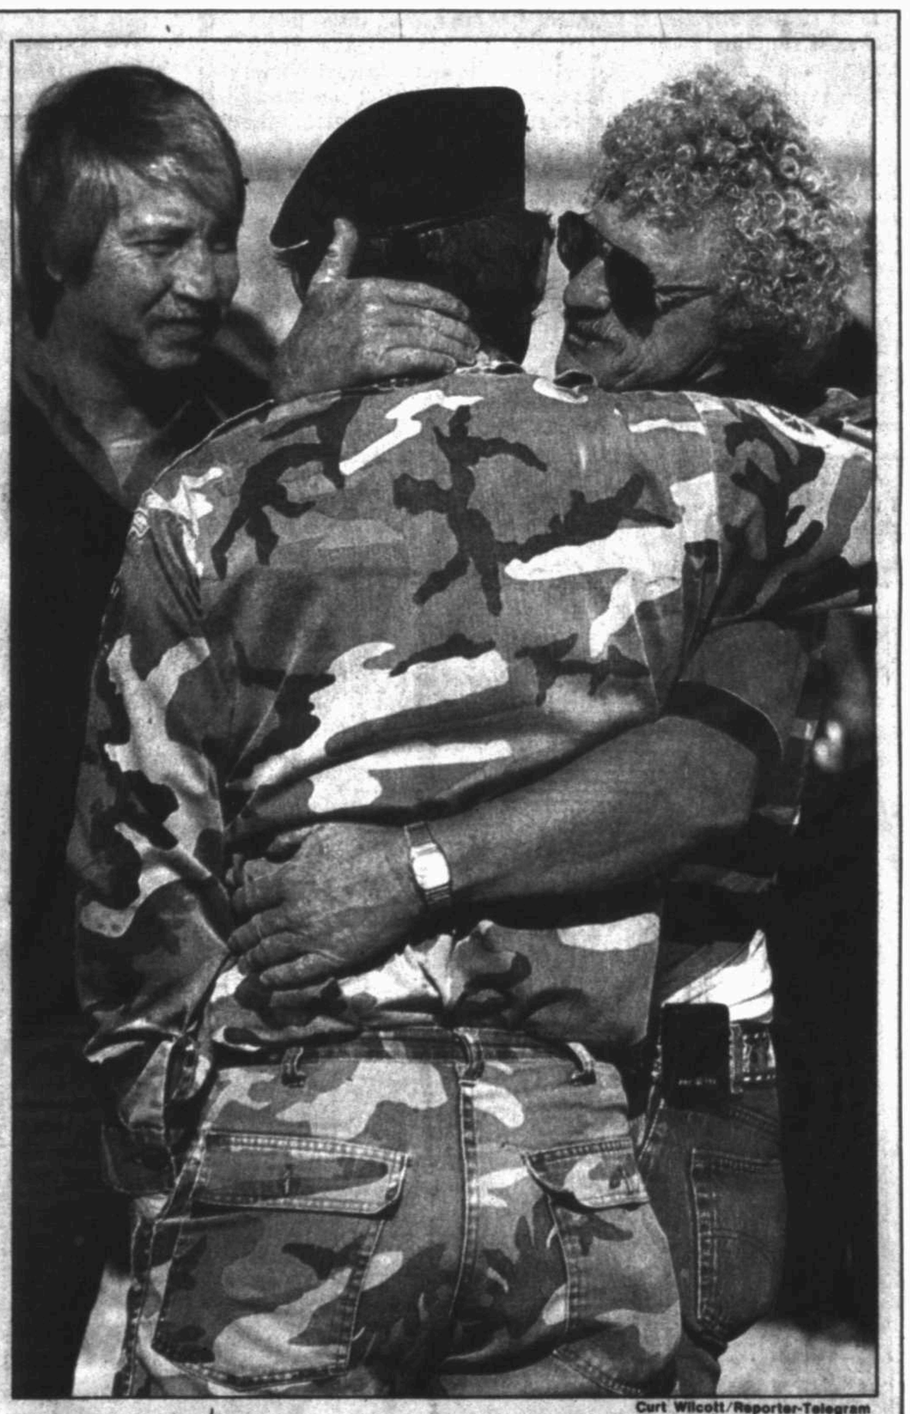

Vietnam veteran Bill McNeill, dressed in fatigues and visibly emotional, read part of the names as his voice cracked.

"It's a very special day. I lost an uncle in World War II. My father was shot down in World War II. And I lost a good many friends in Vietnam," he said following the ceremony.

McNeill, who served with the River Boat Patrol, U.S. Navy, said the memorial will help veterans, family and others affected cope and remember the past.

"I believe it will help all of us. I hope it will. I don't know much else to say, but we need it. We want it," he said.

Panel speeds school-finance plan to Senate

■ Amendment would allow state to transfer local property taxes across district lines.

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin bureau

AUSTIN — With blitzkrieg speed, the Senate Education Committee approved a proposed constitutional amendment on school finance by a 9-1 vote Wednesday and sent the measure to the full Senate.

The amendment would allow the state to transfer local property taxes across school district lines, and would define equity as the equal sharing of 95 percent of all local and state school funds among the state's 1,060 school districts.

It also would use $750 million in state bonds to pay for new school construction and create a $1 billion Good Schools Fund from existing funds to provide financial rewards for schools that make progress on education performance standards.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, chairman of the education committee, said he would try to suspend Senate rules this morning so senators could vote on the bill today rather than waiting 48 hours.

If two-thirds of the 31 senators approve it, the amendment could move to the House for consideration by Friday.

Whether the amendment can gain approval of two-thirds of the 150 House members remains in doubt. But if the votes are there, the decision could come quickly, and legislators would return home before 10 days of the 30-day special session have past.

If not, lawmakers will face an additional chore. State law requires Gov. Ann Richards to submit her appointments to state boards for Senate approval after 10 days of a legislative session.

Church of England OKs women priests

LONDON (AP) — The Church of England voted Wednesday to ordain women as priests, risking a schism with a stubborn minority in its pulpits and pews who feel the move contradicts Scripture and tradition.

The vote allows the Church of England to join 12 of the 28 self-governing provinces in the Anglican Communion that already ordain women priests — most of them in the 2.5 million-member Episcopal Church in the United States.

But in Rome, Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro said the vote was a "grave obstacle" to repairing the 16th century split between Roman Catholics and Anglicans.

"The church has been emotionally exhausted over this. Now we can get on with preaching the Gospel," said Cave Bergquist, a chaplain at Trinity College, Cambridge, who was in the crowd awaiting news of the vote outside Church House in central London.

With a two-thirds majority required in each of the three houses of the church's General Synod, the legislation was approved 39-13 by the bishops, 176-74 by the clergy and 169-82 among the laity after a day-long debate.

A switch of just two votes among lay delegates would have blocked the path to priesthood for the church's 1,350 women deacons.

If Parliament and Queen Elizabeth II endorse the decision, as expected, the first woman priest could be

City leaders reverse roles in search of better City Hall

By Darren J. Waggoner

Midland leaders, planning to reverse traditional role-playing between city employees and supervisors, are counting on the change to create a more efficient City Hall.

"The basic idea is to get ideas from the people in the field, the people doing the work, the people that know how to get things done," City Manager Fred Poe said during a one-hour briefing to a group of city workers. "In the past we told you how to do things, what we expected and when we wanted it done. That's going to change."

On Wednesday and continuing today, city leaders — including Poe, Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor and Assistant City Manager Susan Thorpe — are teaching city em-

■ Israeli's bomb suspected guerrilla targets

METULLA, Israel — Israeli bombers raided an alleged Lebanese guerrilla base in south Lebanon on Wednesday night and officers ordered civilians in Israel's north to go into underground shelters.

The raid came at the end of a day during which Israel moved artillery pieces into southern Lebanon to back threats of retaliation against the Lebanese-based Hezbollah, or Party of God.

Hezbollah gunners in southern Lebanon have hit northern Israel with a series of barrages this week. The Jewish state has responded with artillery fire, driving Lebanese civilians north.

The jets Wednesday struck near Sadiqqin village, seven miles north of the border. The military statement said the targets were used as a meeting place and exit point for "terrorist acts."

■ U.N. deploys troops to Somalian airport

NAIROBI, Kenya — U.N. troops sent to Somalia six weeks ago to protect famine-relief shipments spent their first full day of deployment Wednesday guarding the fractured nation's international airport.

A U.N. spokeswoman in Somalia's capital, Mogadishu, said 120 troops are working in tandem with 200 Somalis of the Hawadle clan. The clan has controlled the airport and commanded lucrative landing fees since March.

The U.N. airport guards, who took up position for several hours on Tuesday, are among 500 troops from Pakistan who have been largely confined to the former Somali air force barracks at the airport since arriving in September.

The airport reopened Sunday after being closed for three weeks because of shooting incidents. Relief planes have been flying into a dirt airstrip 30 miles west of Mogadishu since then, and some aid agency officials said they would continue to do so until it was clear that Mogadishu airport was under control.

■ 'Father of Dutch Astronomy' dies at 92

Jan H. Oort, the Dutch astronomer who made major discoveries about the dynamics of the Milky Way galaxy, the mass of the cosmos and the origin of comets, died last Thursday in Leiden, the Netherlands. He was 92 and lived in Leiden.

He died of complications from a broken hip, Dr. Tyeerd Van Albada, an astronomer at the University of Groningen in the Netherlands, said Wednesday. "He was the father of Dutch astronomy," Van Albada said of Oort.

As an astronomy professor at the University of Leiden and for years director of its observatory, Oort established a reputation as one of the century's foremost explorers of the universe. One of his earliest and most important achievements was to establish the rotation of the Milky Way and to chart the solar system's place in that galaxy.

But Oort was probably more widely known for an idea that sprang from work in his astronomical sideline, the study of comets. In the 1940s, a student interested him in comets. By studying their trajectories, Oort traced these blazing objects back to what he considered the most likely mother lode for nearly all comets. This reservoir of comets is known as the Oort Cloud.

Germany cracks down on radicalism in military

BONN, Germany (AP) — Soldiers with radical-right beliefs are suspected in the deaths of three Germans as well as attacks on foreigners, and a crackdown has been ordered on extremism in the military, officials said Wednesday.

It was the first official confirmation of right-wing radicalism within the military, a discomforting issue for a country mindful of the Nazi era and atrocities committed by German soldiers against civilians during World War II.

Germany is reeling from more than 1,600 far-right attacks this year, most of it against foreigners. Eleven people have died.

The military's disclosures appeared to be an attempt to contain any damage to the democratic image of the armed forces.

The Defense Ministry said in a statement that officers have been told to "carefully observe tendencies and appearances of radicalization and take rigorous action" against neo-Nazis and other extremists.

According to the ministry, there have been reports of 24 radical-right or anti-foreigner acts by off-duty soldiers so far this year, mostly spreading racist propaganda or shouting xenophobic remarks.

Twenty-two conscripts were involved, the ministry said.

Alfred Biehle, liaison between Parliament and the armed forces, said three conscripts are suspected of involvement in three separate killings and that off-duty soldiers participated in more than 20 attacks on refugee shelters.

On Monday night, three officers and a noncommissioned officer threw a dummy hand grenade at a shelter in the northern port of Kiel, the ARD television network said. No injuries were reported and ARD gave no other details.

A letter to the Defense Ministry by the Inspector General of the Army, Lt. Gen. Helge Hansen, said it is also suspected that right-wing radicals have furtively used army maneuvers sites for training.

"If we want to be credible, we must ensure that radical groups are given no chance to carry out their sinister deeds on armed forces property," Hansen wrote in the letter, which was released by the ministry.

Hansen wrote there is no reason to fear that radical-right beliefs are widespread in the military. But he said "this problem must be confronted with all seriousness and rigorousness."

Worry has also arisen in the German navy, which released a letter from Vice Admiral Hein-Peter Weyher stating: "In the navy there is no room for intolerant soldiers."

Israeli troops kill four, hurt 21 Palestinians

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops shot and killed four Palestinians and wounded 21 in clashes in the occupied lands Wednesday, the army and Israel radio said. It was the highest one-day casualty toll since April.

One soldier was seriously wounded in a Palestinian ambush.

Near the West Bank town of Beit Omar, soldiers shot and critically wounded 17-year-old high school student Ibrahim Mohammed Khaleil, Palestinian reporters said. He died four hours later at a hospital, they said.

The army confirmed the death and said troops fired after Palestinian youths stoned their jeep.

In the occupied Gaza Strip, troops shot to death Jihad Nimer Moammar, 23, after Palestinians ambushed a military patrol, the army said.

Israel radio said Moammar had thrown a grenade at the patrol. Palestinian reporters said Moammar belonged to the Red Eagles, a Palestinian vigilante group.

Wednesday's deaths brought to 973 the number of Palestinians killed by Israeli troops or civilians since the start of the uprising against Israeli occupation in December 1987.

West Africans battle guerrillas in heavy fighting for Liberian capital

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — The deadline for a cease-fire had barely passed Wendesday when West African soldiers and rebels trying to seize the capital fought one their fiercest battles yet.

The seven-nation West Africans bombarded the guerrillas from land, sea and air, and there were gun battles in central Monrovia.

Sounds of war drifted across a bridge leading to Caldwell, four miles north of downtown Monrovia. The West African forces claimed they had taken the area, which they must secure to restore water to the capital. The stench of rotting bodies filled the air with clouds of smoke as explosions issued from booming cannon and sub-machinegun fire crackled.

The West African force was sent to Liberia two years ago to halt the nation's civil war, which began when Liberian rebel leader Charles Taylor invaded in December 1989.

But the U.S. assistant secretary of state for African affairs, Herman Cohen, said what had long ago become obvious: The West Africans could no longer be considered peacekeepers.

"Unfortunately, the Economic Community of West African States is no longer a neutral party," Cohen told the British Broadcast Corp. on Wednesday. "They came in there as a neutral party hoping to bring about a mediation but they are now one of the combatants."

In the latest fighting, Taylor had set a unilateral cease-fire for noon Tuesday, and the West Africans set one for midnight Wednesday. Neither was observed.

Brig. S. Victor Malu of Nigeria, the West African chief of staff, said fighting intensified through Tuesday night. Before dawn Wednesday, Taylor's guerrillas emerged from hiding in swamps outside downtown Monrovia and opened fire on West African troops.

Malu said Taylor had "mounted a full scale war" on the West Africans.

The seven-nation force responded by bombarding the rebels with artillery from land batteries, gunboats and jet fighters. It was some of the heaviest fighting in the 27-day battle for the capital.

Neither side immediately reported on casualties.

West Africans fighting alongside another armed faction, the Armed Forces of Liberia, have been battling Taylor's rebels in Caldwell since Oct. 20, when Taylor seized the area from a breakaway rebel faction.

West Africans need to secure Caldwell because it leads to the White Plains water treatment and hydroelectric plant, which the rebels captured three weeks ago. Monrovia has been without piped water ever since.

Nigerian troops in Caldwell, a U.S. Embassy residential compound in the 1970s, refused to discuss the fighting with an Associated Press reporter. But the officer in charge of the Liberians allied with the West Africans, Capt. Shad K. Joloe, said they had captured the main Caldwell base from Taylors' men on Monday.

"The (Taylor) rebels were forced into the swamps and they have been attacking us ever since, both from the left front and the right front. If you cross the bridge, you are in enemy zone," he said.

Hundreds of rebels reportedly were killed recently in fighting over Caldwell by rival rebel forces. Witnesses said there were dozens of bodies, all in camouflage uniforms, on one side of a bridge over Stockton Creek, but this reporter did not risk going on the bridge to survey the battlefield.

Reporters who went there said Nigerian troops advanced more than half a mile down the road and swamps alongside overnight.

Taylor's forces still are three miles from downtown Monrovia, and they control most of the country outside central Monrovia.

Colombian bombings kill one, hurt 30

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The government blamed leftist rebels for bombings that killed one person and wounded more than 30, and said Wednesday that it might offer large rewards for the capture of guerrilla leaders.

President Cesar Gaviria's administration already has promised $1.4 million for information leading to the arrest of drug lord Pablo Escobar.

The national police chief, Gen. Miguel Gomez, said rebels set the nine bombs that went off at police posts Tuesday and Wednesday — eight of them in Medellin. He suggested two rebel groups may be working with the Medellin cocaine cartel.

The bomb in the southern city of Cali during rush hour Wednesday morning injured about 25 people, three seriously. Pamphlets from the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia, a Communist guerrilla group, were found nearby.

A 30-year-old woman was killed and a police officer hurt in one of the bombings in Medellin, Escobar's base. Seven police officers were injured when their station in Medellin's posh El Poblado suburb was destroyed by another.

Six other bombs at abandoned police posts in Medellin caused no injuries and minor damage.

A police officer shot to death Wednesday became the 25th officer slain in Medellin in the last two weeks.

The Medellin cartel has offered bounties for dead police officers in revenge for the Oct. 28 shooting death of a leading cartel member.

President Cesar Gaviria declared a 90-day state of emergency Sunday night, giving him authority to take action against public enemies without consulting with Congress or the courts.

A Defense Ministry spokesman, speaking on condition of annonymity, said the government also will offer substantial rewards for the capture of guerrilla leaders.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Via Associated Press

Today to bring 65, north winds

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high near 65 and north winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be clear with a low near 30, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Friday should be sunny with a high near 65.

After an overnight low of 62, Wednesday's high reached 81, compared to the record high for that date of 83 set in 1964. The record low was 19 set in 1932.

STATE

A cold front brought showers and thunderstorms to much of Texas Wednesday, while East Texas also contended with drizzle and fog.

Temperatures remained in the mid-60s to mid-70s over most of North Texas. Today, temperatures drop west and central. Lows 40 to 64 were expected in the east.

Clearing from the west to east today. Highs 56 northwest to 69 southeast. Mostly clear and cold tonight. Low 32 to 42. Fair and cool Friday. Highs 60 to 68.

Fog and drizzle diminished across south Texas late Wednesday. A cold front brought with it lower temperatures and scattered showers and thunderstorms.

Wednesday's temperatures were in the upper 70s to lower 80s. Today, the temperatures are expected to range from the 60s in the Hill Country to the 80s on the coast.

South Texans can expect decreasing clouds under windy, cool conditions.

NATION

Rain and snow were scattered from coast to coast Wednesday, with heavy rain producing a threat of flooding in Oklahoma. Temperatures dropped below zero in Wyoming.

At midday, snow over eastern Colorado and northeastern New Mexico extended into western Kansas, changing to showers and thunderstorms over the southern half of the Plains and the southern and central Mississippi Valley.

Overnight rainfall in Oklahoma included 9.32 inches at Grandfield, 8.06 inches at Trousdale, 7.68 inches at Marlow and 5.62 inches at Cox City, the National Weather Service said.

Hail three-quarters inch in diameter fell at Jones and Luther, Okla., during the early afternoon.

Flash flood watches were in effect into early today over large sections of Oklahoma and Texas.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

4 Marines who survived Ngok Tavak reunite

By Jackie Koszczuk
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Before that night, they all were just kids really. They smoked pot, idolized Jim Morrison of the Doors and were beguiled by the opposite sex. Few had yet seen much combat in Vietnam, and most had not reached their 21st birthday.

For more than two decades, the horror of that night in 1968 has languished on a shelf in the minds of the Marines who survived it, like some terrible storybook they never intend to reread but can't throw away.

They were surprised in their foxholes well before dawn by the sound of their own ammunition depot exploding, then spent one night desperately trying to hold onto a hill in the middle of triple-canopy jungle in South Vietnam, a hill that U.S. commanders later said had no real strategic value.

Grossly outnumbered and overrun by the North Vietnamese Army, they witnessed the massacre and mutiliation of more than a dozen of their friends.

Tim Brown, of the Dallas suburb of Richardson, was just 20.

"I was a different person after that," he said. "I was not the same mentally. None of us were."

Four Marines who survived the battle at Ngok Tavak were reunited this week for the first time since the Vietnam War, brought together by Brown at a Radisson Hotel in suburban Washington.

On the eve of Wednesday's celebration of the 10th anniversary of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, they recounted events they say they have not discussed with anyone since their return from the war, not even their wives.

Dave Fuentes, the son of San Antonio migrant farm workers, has not been able to reconcile what he did at Ngok Tavak with his strict Catholic upbringing.

"You knew it in your heart," Fuentes said. "You knew killing was morally wrong."

Even the passage of nearly 25 years has not put enough distance between these four middle-aged men and their foresaken youth at Ngok Tavak.

Brown, Fuentes, along with R.C. Higgins of Boonville, Mo., and Scott "Doc" Thomas of Springfield, Mass., were part of a Marine Corps unit called Delta X-Ray that, in spring of 1968, was dispatched to Ngok Tavak, an old fort and onetime tiger-hunting lodge for the South Vietnamese president. A division of the North Vietnamese army was moving into South Vietnam from Laos and trying to build a road connecting the Ho Chi Minh Trail in Laos with Route 14 in Vietnam.

The allied encampment at Ngok Tavak was supposed to track the enemy's movement, and provide a barrier to any march on Kham Duc, a village four miles away where the U.S. Army Special Forces maintained surveillance of the nearby Laotion border.

The arrival of the heavily equipped Marine unit, with its two 105mm howitzers, 40 men and full field kitchen, was a most unwelcome sight for the Australian army officer in charge of the multinational garrison.

Capt. John White knew his force operated best when mobile. For weeks, he had been trying without success to get permission from headquarters in Da Nang to disappear into the jungle, to sniff out opportunities for guerrilla contact with the enemy. His men were vastly outnumbered by the enemy operating in the area, and the Marines further encumbered him, according to White's account of the battle, published years later in an Australian magazine.

"We had now become an inevitable target, with withdrawl possible only at the expense of abandoning our guns," White wrote.

At nightfall on May 9, 1968, half the men were asleep in their foxholes. Scott Thomas, who was the only Marine corpsman, or medic, at the camp, remembers drifting off to sleep feeling secure because, just that day, the Marines had dragged the howitzers up the hill to the fort. Now the cannons and their crews were safely inside the perimeter, he thought.

But on the last light of the moon, at about 3 a.m. on May 10, a small group of Vietnamese — apparently infiltrated by the enemy — marched up the hill, crying, "Don't shoot, don't shoot. Friend-ordained in 1994.

"The ordination of women to the priesthood alters not a word in the creeds, the Scriptures, or the faith of our church," said Archbishop of Canterbury George Carey, the spiritual head of the Church of England.

The legislation does not permit women bishops. Also, parishes may refuse to accept a woman as priest, and bishops cannot be compelled to ordain women or accept them as priests in their dioceses.

Following its historic vote, the synod approved severance pay arrangements for any full-time priest who decided to resign rather than accept women.

Some opponents threatened to leave the church. Michael Silver, who was in the crowd outside Church House, said those who did not want the change "have no choice but to rebuild the Church of England from outside."

Bishop David Hope of London said that a split "is a danger, but we have to wait and see how the thing turns out."

"I now have to reflect carefully on the decision and the sort of options that lie open before me," said Hope, who opposed the legislation. "And I hope that I will do that in a generous and Christian kind of way."

The crowd of about 400 outside Church House roared in approval as it heard a radio broadcast of Carey announcing the vote. Many who had been clutching lighted candles hugged, cried, danced in circles and set off fireworks.

"The vote was an affirmation of the direction the U.S. Episcopal Church took, and it will have an immense effect on the Australian Anglicans who vote on it Nov. 21," said the Rev. Robbin Clark.

the neonatal intensive care unit, said Dr. Leonard Fox, a neonatologist at the hospital.

One child, 2-pound, 2-ounce Amy Leigh, was breathing with a ventilator. Her sister, 2-pound, 12½-ounce Kelly Ann, was breathing on her own, said Fox.

"Everything looks great," said Fox. "The chance of survival now is excellent."

Mrs. Shearing is believed to be the oldest American in the latter stages of menopause to deliver babies through the in-vitro process, said hospital spokesman Dennis Gaschen.

The twins were conceived using sperm from her husband of seven years and eggs from an unidentified donor in her 20s, who was paid $1,500, doctors said. They were born prematurely because the membrane enveloping the infants in the womb broke early.

Shearing said the couple decided to undergo in-vitro fertilization in part to set an example for other older women and couples with problems having children. Mrs. Shearing miscarried a non-test tube pregnancy four years ago.

"There is hope that they, too, can experience a family and children because it is a fantastic experience," Shearing said. "We didn't do this for ourselves. We did this for other reasons."

He dismissed criticism that his wife was too old to have children and noted that many older men become fathers.

"It's a double standard," Shearing said.

The girls should be able to go home in about 12 weeks, said Dr. David Diaz.

VETERANS: Permian Basin honors fallen warriors

(From 1A)

Another Vietnam veteran, Steve Dennis, who also read names, agreed.

"My unit lost over 700 in Vietnam, some of whom I knew. It is particularly gratifying to me that we are going to have a memorial ... to recognize the men from the Permian Basin who did not come home," said Dennis, who was with the U.S. Army, 11th Armored Calvary Regiment.

The memorial will consist of a piece of "sunset red" granite in the shape of Texas against a masonry wall, said Dennis, a memorial committee board member.

A Lone Star, set in the ground before the wall, will have a point coming out of the ground and aimed at the Permian Basin region on the granite Texas, Dennis said. Names of the Permian Basin soldiers will be engraved on the star point.

The memorial, an idea conceived in 1988 by local veterans, will be for everyone in the Permian Basin, Philbeck said.

"This is not the Midland memorial. This is not the Ector County memorial. This is the Permian Basin's memorial," he said.

Groundbreaking is tentatively set for July 1993 with opening ceremonies slated for Veterans Day next year.

The estimated budget for the memorial is approximately $500,000 although only $175,000 has been raised so far, Philbeck said.

The memorial committee hopes to bring in $250,000 from Midland County donors, $100,000 from Ector County donors, and the remaining $150,000 from the other counties in the Permian Basin.

"We feel real confident this thing is going to develop," Philbeck said.

The committee has until July 4, 1994, to complete the memorial or lose the site, according to an agreement with the city.

The commemoration Wednesday coincided with the 10th anniversary of the opening of the Vietnam War Memorial in Washington, D.C.

PLAN: State committee approves amendment

(From 1A)

Some of her appointments to the State Board of Insurance and the Texas Water Commission have pleased consumers and environmentalists but have raised the ire of business groups.

Republicans have contended Richards called the special session to get her more controversial appointments through the current Senate, which has nine GOP members. With the Nov. 3 election, four more Republicans will join the Senate when it convenes in regular session Jan. 12, and the 13 Republicans could block the two-thirds vote for Senate confirmations.

Richards has denied the allegation, and told legislators if they finish their work within 10 days, the issue would be moot.

Milton Rister, director of the House Republican Caucus, said the caucus has not adopted a formal policy on the amendment, but that members generally oppose the measure. Rister is an aide to the caucus chairman, Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland.

Rister said Republicans want to know what the enabling legislation that goes with the amendment will be like.

"Our biggest concern is that we don't want to change the constitution and write a blank check," he said. "We would like to see the amendment attached to some legislation."

The Fair Share School Finance Plan proposed by Richards, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Gib Lewis has met widespread opposition. The state leaders have urged lawmakers to approve the amendment, and return to write a specific plan in the regular session.

If all 58 House Republicans voted as a block, they could deny a two-thirds vote for a constitutional amendment.

Rister said it takes a two-thirds vote of caucus members to adopt a formal policy on legislation, but it serves only as a recommendation and there is no penalty for anyone who does not follow the vote.

One rumor Wednesday was that a majority of House members were gathering behind a county-wide school finance plan by Rep. Steve Ogden, R-Bryan, that would not require a constitutional amendment.

But Ogden denied he had any groundswell of support.

"It is clear the Legislature will have to deal with the (Richards) leadership plan before any other plan becomes a viable alternative," Ogden said.

"There is some support for my plan, and if the amendment can't get the votes, there will be a lot more support," he said.

ROLES: Leaders pull switch

(From 1A)

ployees about the new philosophy.

The premise of the internal movement is to get city employees working together to establish goals for their department and the city in general.

Beginning next week, work groups will be set up to facilitate the ideas.

"Because we have the support of the council, I feel this can work," McGregor said. "But only if we get the support of the employees. If we can reach an 80, 85 or 90 percent acceptance level on this, then it will be a success."

Officials have outlined numerous key strategies they believe need to be met to create a "citizen-oriented" team.

"We want to get the citizens and city employees working together and we want to create a real working relationship between city employees and supervisors," said council member Buddy Sipes.

"The guy closest to the problem should be able to best solve the problem. That's what this whole plan is about."

The plan is the offspring of a similar program adopted by Arco Oil and Gas. Earlier this year, Ken Thompson and Dale Dunn of Arco helped the city develop a long-range vision for the city.

The supervisory course promoted leadership and listening, teamwork and self-esteem.

Connie Ladd, a management consultant working closely with the city, believes the training was essential for the new program to work.

"They will definitely be better listeners, they'll be more objective," she said.

But Poe admitted the process may be slow.

"And it won't be easy. We have these habits and ways that we're set in," he said. "We've accepted it in management and we, along with the council, are committed to it."

CLINTON: President-elect says he'll rescind ban

by working for local police, as teachers or in other public service jobs.

Clinton also used his address to sketch the broad outlines of his defense policy. He said he intends to restructure the American military to put an even greater emphasis than the Bush administration on smaller, more mobile, high-technology forces, and to adjust government regulations and spending plans to make it much easier for military contractors to move back and forth between commercial and military manufacturing.

Even in his discussion later of the issue of homosexuals in the military, Clinton seemed bent on tempering his hotly debated stand on the issue with a promise to consider the views of the uniformed services.

Clinton spoke on a day in which he had a telephone conversation with President Bush from Air Force One, and in which the two men agreed that Clinton would go to Washington next week for a visit of two or three days. Clinton also invited the Democratic leaders of Congress to Little Rock for a meeting on Sunday.

Advisers to Clinton also said today that two more transition aides would be named this week. One is likely to be Samuel R. Berger, 46, a former deputy director of the State Department policy planning staff in the Carter administration, who would advise the president-elect on appointments of national security aides.

Berger, a Harvard-educated lawyer who is a partner in the Washington law firm of Hogan & Hartsen, has known Clinton since they worked together in the 1972 presidential campaign of George McGovern.

Robert B. Reich, 45, a professor at Harvard's John F. Kennedy School of Government, was said to be the leading candidate to head the transition team's search for economic officials. He is a proponent of a national industrial policy that would use government subsidies and tax regulations to support industries in areas where the United States faced strong foreign competition. The idea of an industrial policy has been prominent in Clinton's economic proposals.

As he left the capital rotunda, Clinton was asked by reporters whether he intended to fulfill his campaign promise to lift the 48-year-old ban on homosexuals in the uniformed services.

"Yes, I want to," he answered. "My position is that we need everybody in America that has got a contribution to make, that's willing to obey the law and work hard and play by the rules — that's the way I feel."

He said, sexual orientation alone should not, "in the absence of some destructive behavior, disqualify people."

Clinton stressed that he would first consult with the armed services chiefs to determine the best way to go about lifting the ban, as well as the proper timing for such a move.

The current regulations prohibit any homosexuals from serving in the uniformed services. This ban, however, does not apply to civilian Defense Department employees.

TALES: 4 middle-aged men who lost their youth at Ngok Tavak reunite

ly, friendly."

Fuentes, on sentry duty, heard them and checked his fire.

Within seconds, the camp was in chaos.

The infiltrators rushed behind the camp's defensive line, tossing satchel charges and grenades everywhere. The regulars of the North Vietnamese Army were right behind them.

From his position in the dark, Fuentes could not see much, but he recognized the voices of two of his buddies, an inseparable pair of Massachusetts natives who had trained together and who, on their leaves, saw the same girl. "Lovely Rita" they called her, after the Beatles song.

Paul Czerwonka and Joseph Cook, sharing a foxhole about 30 yards from Fuentes' post, were among the first to be overrun by the North Vietnamese.

"They were cutting them up," Fuentes said. "They were mutilating them. We could hear them screaming, 'Kill me. Kill me.'"

The two friends were later found dead together in the hole. Along with others on the front, their tatoos had been carved away and carted off as trophies. Czerwonka was castrated.

Thomas, the corpsman, was jolted awake by an explosion, perhaps caused by a grenade igniting the ammunition. He grabbed his medical kit and headed for a central aid station.

"I never made it," Thomas said. "All of a sudden I'm hearing, 'Corpsman, Up! Corpsman, Up!' This was minutes into the attack, and already there was wounded."

Prevented by enemy fire from advancing to the aid station, Thomas stayed close to the howitzers to treat the Marine crews manning them. As he crawled on the ground, he saw an explosion of white goo. He suddenly remembered the 15-gallon vat of Kaopectate he had mixed earlier that day after an outbreak of diarrhea at the camp.

"It's strange what you remember," Thomas said.

Seconds later, there was another deafening explosion and Thomas was blown into the air, knocked out and thought to be dead.

That night, the North Vietnamese took over two-thirds of the hill. The Marines and the rest of the Ngok Tavak troops retrenched into a tight perimeter around the command post, praying for daylight.

"It was massive chaos," said Brown, who was stationed near the command post. "Those of us who were not killed withdrew into a tight 'Custer's Last Stand' circle. We were out of water, and nearly out of ammunition. We just hunkered down into a grenade-throwing battle."

Fuentes was moving from hole to hole, "like a rabbit," he recalls, replenishing ammunition and grenades. Before dawn, Thomas came to. He remembers hearing the reassuring sound of an Air Force gunship, also known as a "Puff the Magic Dragon" or "Spooky."

The gunship dropped a steady stream of flares, letting the allied soldiers see their attackers well for the first time that night, while at the same time pouring fire on enemy positions. That was the turning point. The severely depleted force at Ngok Tavak mustered a counteroffensive. The battle was stalemated.

It's strange what you remember about war.

In the developing daylight, Fuentes was scrambling to replace his lost helmet, and so picked up one from a dead Marine. Fuentes observed that his friend looked amazingly unbloodied and "peaceful," unaware that blood had drained away from a hole in the back of the man's head. Fuentes put the helmet on and was doused with blood.

John White knew that his command would not survive another attack. He radioed headquarters for permission to withdraw his troops, but was told to stay put. At noon, White radioed back that he was going to withdraw, with or without permission, in one hour. He led his men into the jungle, where they cleared a helicopter landing pad. The survivors of Ngok Tavak were airlifted out.

White, in the magazine article, later described his disenchantment with the battle plan, which, in a way, spoke to the many failures of American involvement in Vietnam. White wrote: "A ... force which normally operated in a mobile role was forced to adopt a defensive stand against a well-disciplined enemy in defense of a piece of ground of no value to us."

The four former Marines who gathered this week struggled through the years with their own problems, disenchantment with the war among them.

Brown developed an addiction to cocaine, lost a marriage, but recovered in the early 1980s, when he sought help from his parents and former vets. Today he is remarried, has two children and heads the Vietnam Veterans Foundation of Texas, which provides services to veterans.

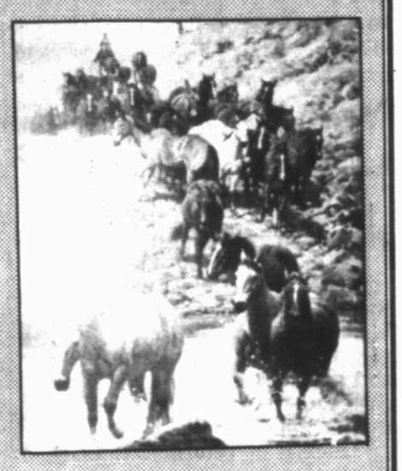

Fuentes now runs a door and window supply business in suburban Chicago; Thomas is a salesman in Springfield, Mass. Both are married with children. The fourth of the group, R.C. Higgins of Boonville, Mo., recalls very little about the battle of Ngok Tavak. His memory was wiped clean by years of alcoholism.

"Sooner or later," Brown said. "We have to deal with this."

Kasparov: Fischer is an unworthy foe

MOSCOW (AP) — World chess champion Garry Kasparov said in an interview published Wednesday that American Bobby Fischer would be an unworthy and unprofitable challenger for the sport's top honor.

"The quality of games of the Fischer-Spassky match didn't give grounds for challenging the world champion," Kasparov told the Russian labor daily newspaper Trud.

Fischer last week won his match with Boris Spassky 10-5. The match was played for $5 million in Yugoslavia despite U.N.-ordered sanctions that prohibit commercial dealings with the Serb-led republic.

Kasparov, who defeated challenger Anatoly Karpov last year, conceded a "hypothetical" possibility of playing Fischer.

"However, putting it into practice will entail a lot of difficulties. Fischer's actual chess potential is clearly not sufficient to create public interest in such a match," Kasparov said.

The chess champion said he would agree to a match only if Fischer shows improvement, and then only under two conditions.

"Firstly, the prize fund should be absolutely legal. And secondly, the match should be played in a civilized country, acknowledged by the world community," Kasparov said.

Yeltsin assures Hungarians of no Communism

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Russian President Boris Yeltsin on Wednesday praised Hungary's revolt against Communism in 1956 and promised to open Russian archives on the brutal repression of the uprising.

"There is no returning to Communism, neither in my country, nor in Europe, nor anywhere in the world," Yeltsin said in an address to the country's parliament. "We bow before all victims of the 1956 revolution."

Yeltsin said he hoped the Russian archives would shed light on how Soviet troops and tanks were used to crush the revolt in Hungary, a former Soviet satellite.

Previous Soviet regimes have said Hungarian officials asked for intervention to suppress the revolt, which was termed a counter-revolution.

Yeltsin, on his first trip to Hungary since the breakup of the Soviet Union, spoke of a new era in relations based on mutual respect.

"The horrible past is over," Yeltsin said. "Now is the time of reason."

Hungary was the first country to extend diplomatic recognition to Russia after it declared independence in 1991.

The two countries signed agreements for the disclosure of documents on the 1956 revolt, the return of Hungarian art works taken to the Soviet Union after World War II, and a financial settlement to pay for withdrawal of Soviet troops from Hungary.

Protestors burn Mexican election headquarters

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Angry protestors on Wednesday sacked and burned the state electoral commission office in this border city after guards beat demonstrators protesting alleged vote fraud.

Opposition party leaders were trying to enter the building when they were pushed back by truncheon-wielding guards in camouflage uniforms, according to Isidro Canales, who witnessed the confrontation.

The demonstrators became enraged after a woman was badly beaten, witnesses said. Ignoring tear gas, they attacked the building and set fire to it.

Burning ballots inside the election headquarters smoldered for hours.

People milling in the street displayed ballots they said came from the building and showed proof of vote fraud.

Opposition supporters, who started a sit-in Tuesday in the city hall across the Rio Grande from Brownsville, Texas, said they would continue to protest until the results of last Sunday's election in Tamaulipas state were declared fraudulent.

"This is only the beginning," said opposition supporter Alejandro Blaz. On Monday, the governing Institutional Revolutionary Party, known by its Spanish acronym PRI, delcared its candidate, Manuel Cavazos Lerma, the victor in the state gubernatorial race. The PRI denied fraud allegations.

Red Cross suspends evacuation; Bosnia awaits cease-fire

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Fighting erupted in Bosnia's capital Wednesday night shortly before a planned cease-fire, and the Red Cross scrapped efforts to move more civilians from the besieged city before winter sets in.

Glowing tracer bullets streaked the sky after sundown. The thump of exploding mortar shells and chatter of machine guns and rifles sounded south of the presidency building in central Sarajevo, and machine guns could be heard firing in the western outskirts.

The combat was the worst in the capital in days. Intense shooting lasted about a half-hour, but fighting continued into the night at the approach of a midnight deadline for a truce throughout Bosnia that was agreed to by military leaders of the republic's warring Muslim, Serb and Croat factions.

Dozens of cease-fires have failed to stop the 8-month-old war triggered by the decision of Muslims and Croats to break Bosnia away from Serbia-dominated Yugoslavia. Fighters in the field often appear to defy the orders of their commanders, but U.N. officials expressed hope this truce would take hold.

Shortly before the heaviest shooting in Sarajevo, the Red Cross canceled the evacuation of some residents after one of its bus drivers was wounded in a mortar attack.

Apparently ending a two-month effort to take away thousands of women, children, elderly and wounded because of food shortages and a lack of heat and shelter, the cancellation prompted some frustrated people to threaten to flee on foot.

"Listen, commander, I'm fed up to my ears," Red Cross chief Pava Barisic angrily told the Bosnian army's 1st Corps commander, Mustafa Hajrulahovic. "I don't want anything to do with any convoys anymore. I just want these people to get out of town."

The Red Cross has been battling resistance to the convoys, planned to evacuate 6,000 people, from the military forces of all parties.

The driver was wounded while returning from taking Serbs to a suburban meeting point from where they were to head to Belgrade, the capital of both Serbia and what is left of Yugoslavia.

The driver, Miodrag Bosiocic, was alone in the bus. He apparently did not serious wounds. There was no indication who fired the mortar shell.

Barisic told Serbs waiting at the railroad station that the convoys were canceled.

Some threatened to march to Serb-held Lukavica, where the buses to Belgrade waited. But they slowly filtered away, walking home with their luggage in the darkness.

U.N. officials expressed guarded optimism that the new cease-fire accord would work despite the failure of previous truces.

"This is the first time I know of in Bosnia-Herzegovina when we have had the three groups sitting together and signing a cease-fire," said Adnan Abdelrazek, spokesman for the U.N. peacekeeping force in Sarajevo.

Earlier cease-fires were agreed to by letter or verbal pledge.

"Since we got the military commanders to sign it, there is more hope," said Gen. Satish Nambiar, head of U.N. peacekeepers in former Yugoslavia.

Before Wednesday's fighting, Red Cross officials had resumed moving about 750 Serbs to Lukavica. About 350 others had been evacuated Tuesday before fuel problems and frightened drivers halted the operation.

Another convoy of about 1,100 Muslim and Croat refugees reached a Croat-held suburb late Tuesday, but not before Serbs at one checkpoint temporarily blocked the Muslims because of the problems in evacuating the Serbs.

Gen. Phillip Morillon, the U.N. commander in Sarajevo, said the United Nations wanted to send observers to battlefields in the north and the west to be ready to quickly try to contain any cease-fire violations.

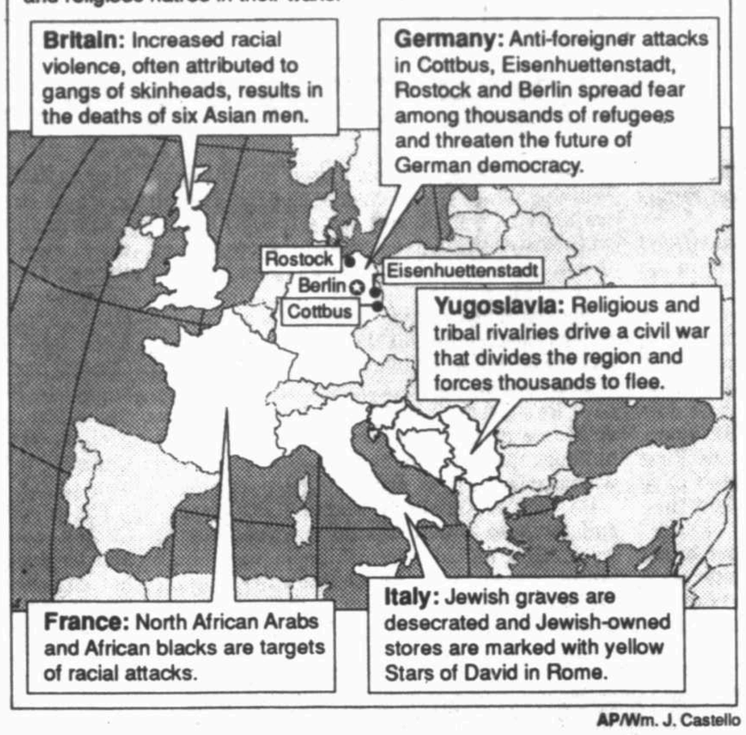

Allied Muslim and Croat forces have been fighting in the north to block a corridor linking areas under Serb control with Serbia proper. The Bosnian Serb news agency SRNA said Croat troops broke the corridor at the northern town of Orasje after heavy fighting early Wednesday.

In the west, Croats appeared to be trying to widen their hold on territory adjacent to Croatia. Croatia radio reported artillery and infantry fights throughout the western areas, especially in Mostar, 45 miles southwest of Sarajevo, and in nearby Stolac.

The war began when Serbs rebelled against a Feb. 29 independence vote by Muslims and Croats. Serbs, one-third of the prewar population, have captured about two-thirds percent of Bosnia. Croats hold most of the rest, leaving Muslims, about 43 percent of the population, in control of small pockets.

Legislature needs to heed Sharp's words

It seems that just about everybody in state government these days is at least talking about ways to reduce public spending. That's good. With the state potentially facing what could be a multi-billion dollar shortfall as a result of the pending change in the way it finances its public school system, it's imperative that government stretch tax dollars as far as possible and set spending priorities according to the wishes of the people footing the bill.

A few worthwhile ideas along that line were passed along recently by State Comptroller John Sharp while on a visit to Midland. Members of the Texas Legislature, now in special session in Austin to consider revising the school financing law, would be wise to heed Sharp's advice.

He said what is needed today is what he termed "one-stop government to serve the people." Anyone who has had the occasion to call a government office in Austin as well are finding that what we're getting today falls far short of one-stop government.

In fact of the legislators, Sharp remarked, "They have forgotten who the customer is. The customer is not the guy who appropriates the money. He is the taxpayer who pays the bills."

With one-stop government, Sharp said, the state would have fewer agencies, fewer bureaucrats, and fewer lawyers.

The comptroller, who was speaking at the 30th annual meeting of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, hit the nail squarely on the head when he noted that an independent audit of state finances had revealed $4.2 billion in savings that could be achieved without cutting services, but the Texas Legislature has already overlooked more than half of the proposed cuts.

It's time for a change. Now that the November election is behind us and voters have made their selections of whom they want to serve them in all levels of government for the next few years, it's time for voters to remind the officeholders of what they were sent to the courthouse, the statehouse, and the nation's capital to do.

Making this government work as it should is the duty of us all. Comptroller Sharp has noted the challenge facing state legislators in regard to the budget. Seeing that they follow through as the electorate intended is our next task.

GUEST EDITORIAL

Clinton to change presidency's image

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Broccoli is coming back to the White House. The Clinton family eats tons of the stuff.

And tacos. And chicken enchiladas. (Don't ask me why, but just about everybody in Arkansas loves Mexican food.)

A catfish fry and barbecue almost certainly will be part of inaugural festivities. But if you're assuming that Bubba Clinton and a mewling pack of barefoot rednecks and flea-bitten coon dogs are about to move their double-wides into the Rose Garden, think again. Bill and Hillary (that's what we call the First Couple in Little Rock and they wouldn't have it any other way) are Ivy Leaguers and then some.

Bill Clinton's common touch masks broad and sophisticated tastes. It's an eclectic style that Washington and some other parts of the country may have trouble getting used to.

Here in Arkansas, it has raised the question: Will the White House change the Bill Clinton we know? Perhaps. But my guess is that he will reshape the conventions of the presidency to suit his style, which, after all, is an integral part of his political success.

His tastes are wide-ranging. If he can give a minilecture on the Old Masters in the National Gallery of Art, as he once did for a friend who visited him during his Georgetown University days, he's just as likely to compliment the owner of one of those pictures of poker- playing bulldogs that you still see in barbershops and veterinarian offices around Arkansas.

He can expound on Picasso's "Guernica" and loves to watch Mikhail Baryshnikov at work. He's an admirer of Bach, and you'll probably hear "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" at the inaugural. But you also might hear an appropriately titled song by Pentecostal singer Mickey Mangan, "The Darker the Night, the Brighter the Dawn Is Gonna Be."

Spirituality will be a noticeable feature of the Clinton White House. Detractors might say this is by calculation. I'm not so cynical. Could Clinton really have expected that a fellow choir member at Immanuel Baptist Church in Little Rock would recall for a reporter how Clinton had once, years before, admired his annotated Bible? Was Clinton carefully salting the public relations terrain when he talked to lifelong friends about C.S. Lewis's "Mere Christianity" and its profound effects on his own faith?

The important thing to remember about Bill Clinton is his bond with small-town Arkansas and its people. It sustains him. One brutally hot day, he refused to get into an air-conditioned car until he had pumped the hand of every spectator at a state park dedication. "I love it," he exclaimed, drenched in sweat, to a traveling companion who had long before sought refuge in the car.

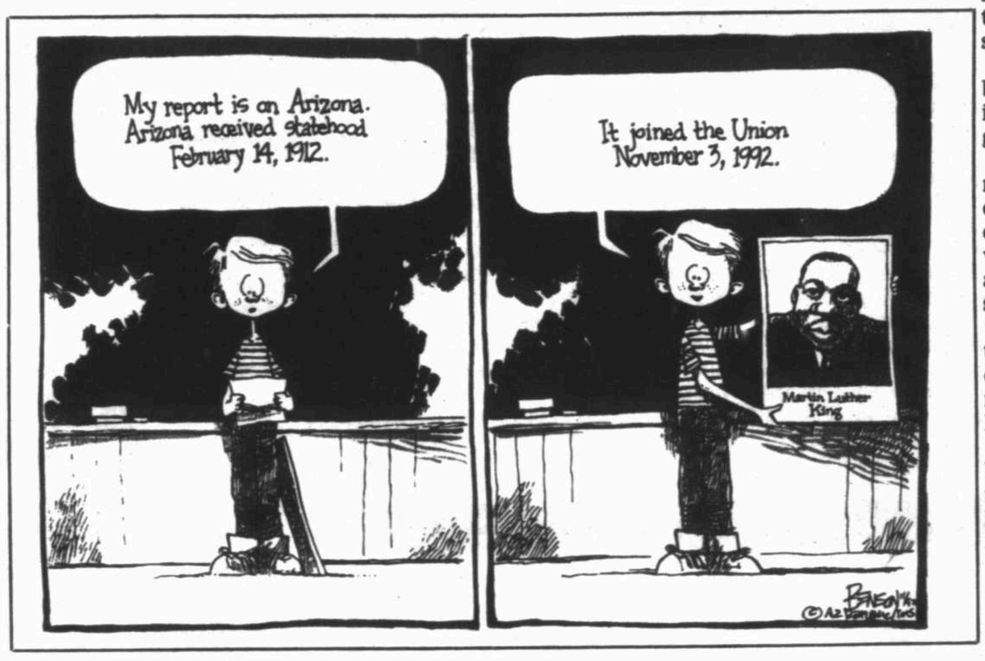

There's a measure of calculation in this, to be sure. Arkansas is a rural state and painfully insecure. We'd be downright suspicious of a governor who put on airs.

Felicitously for Clinton, America seemed ready this year for his common touch — for a candidate who seemed, in romancing TV cameras, to be talking straight to voters. Which is why I think the White House will have a casual air that belies the Clintons' essential sophistication.

This easy, top-down lifestyle will be difficult to continue behind a protective cordon of Secret Service. Their heightened security has already made his jogging entourage a hazard to Little Rock traffic.

Clinton worked the state Legislature, a bumptious and hidebound lot, like he worked the voters. No regal executive, he prowled the hallways, buttonholing legislators, preaching and cajoling.

Term limits remove careerism as motive

WASHINGTON — Now comes the condescension of the political class to the voters who last week imposed term limits on many of the condescenders.

The political class says the voters — silly children — were just having a tantrum; they could not have understood what they were doing because they also re-elected 93 percent of House incumbents. Actually, voters expressed a temperate, reasonable judgment: The problem is systemic, not personal.

Will

No particular representative is the problem. Term limits are a measured, Madisonian reform that removes one motive — careerism — for entering legislative life. Limits will increase the frequency that legislators will think of the next generation rather than merely the next election.

Term limits won in all 14 states that voted on them. In 13 of the 14, limits got more votes than Clinton got. Limits won more votes in 14 states than Perot won in 50 states. In January, 148 representatives and 30 senators (Colorado passed limits in 1990) will be under limits. Those limited include Speaker Foley of Washington, Majority Leader Gephardt of Missouri and Majority Whip Bonior of Michigan, three states that acted last week.

Opponents of limits have said newcomers will be incompetent amateurs. But 72 percent of the freshmen coming to Congress in January have previously held elective offices.

Opponents of limits have charged that limits are a partisan ploy to dislodge Democrats. However, supporters of limits say Democrats have advantages that will favor them in competition with Republicans for open seats, the largest advantage being that Democrats like government and therefore attract better candidates. For four decades Democrats have been doing better than Republicans in open seat contests and last week they won 58 of 91.

Supporters of limits have argued that by unclogging the political system, limits would hasten the ascent of women to power. This year 21 of the 24 new women who won were elected to open House seats.

Many opponents of term limits acknowledge that the current system is heavily skewed to the advantage of incumbents, but propose achieving equity through public financing and restrictions on campaign giving and spending. However, there are constitutional and moral problems with government stipulating, by limits on political giving and spending, the permissible amount of political communication. Such rules are inevitably rococo and porous. Furthermore, proponents of campaign finance reforms fault the current rules, which were written by incumbent legislative careerists. What reason is there to think today's careerists will write rules less beneficial to themselves?

In fact, term limitation is a campaign finance reform. Today incumbents get the lion's share of PAC money. Imagine the nervous breakdowns that PACs will suffer when, regularly confronted with numerous competitive races for open seats under term limits, they cannot be sure, as they now can be, that their contributions are currying favor with secure incumbents.

The political class so loves democracy, it refuses to allow a vote in Congress on a constitutional amendment to limit terms. Such a vote, says the political class, would be "anti-democratic."

Adept lobbyists to change for Clinton

What makes Washington such a great city is that its people are willing to change. The time when this is most obvious is after a presidential election when one party is booted out and another one is kicked in. Those most adept at coping with change are the lobbyists, whose jobs depend on being close to the big shots who push the nation's buttons.

Buchwald

Randy Turtledove, one of the capital's leading power-brokers and dean of the alligator-shoe influence peddlers, has lived through nine different presidents.

When it comes to changing horses in midstream, Randy is a master of the hounds.

I found him pacing the halls of Congress the morning after the election. He was playing a saxophone and wearing an "Arkansas is Number One" T shirt.

"What happened to the Yale beanie and the Right-to-Life cuff links you used to have when you were lobbying on the Hill?" I inquired.

"They were undignified." Then he let out a loud razorback call. I noticed that he had a pail of $100 bills next to him and I asked him what they were for.

"They're to help those incumbent congressmen who have a problem balancing their checkbooks."

"Can I assume that you have switched party loyalties in order to lobby for the things that you believe in?"

"This election was about jobs," he replied defensively. "Mine. My clients don't care what party I support as long as it is the one that does something good for America. Clinton is for change, which is good. My job is to ensure that he doesn't change too much too fast, particularly where my people are concerned. Would you like me to play 'Night and Day' on the sax?"

"Randy, when I talked to you during the campaign you were very skeptical about Clinton and even raised the character issue."

"That's a dirty lie. I was the first one to cancel my subscription to Penthouse magazine when they put Gennifer Flowers between the covers. I was the one to applaud Clinton's trip to Moscow as a student because I knew that someday he would be President and have to use the hot line."

"I don't recall you doing any of those things," I said.

"Give me a break," he pleaded. "I told all my clients that I have the new administration in my hip pocket. I had to convince them that the Clintons are going to keep a spare bedroom for me in the White House. Lobbying isn't what it's cracked up to be. It is not who you know, it's who everyone thinks you know that counts."

"But surely, Randy, you gave to both sides? Doesn't that make your influence-peddling business safe?"

"Yes and no. Lobbyists are judged by how close they can jog with the President of the United States. If I could call Clinton 'Bill' when he's in the Oval Office, my stock as an influence peddler would shoot right through the ozone. Up here on The Hill legislators pay attention to those of us who have access to Hillary Clinton's oatmeal cookies."

School board should consider other plans

I am writing to express my concern about the proposed junior high attendance boundaries.

I am a parent of a Parker Elementary student. Like parents of students all over town, I want the best possible education for my child. A good education does not depend on the age or location of the school building, so my concern is not whether my child goes to Abell or Alamo. My concern is that, under the proposed plan, one school will be overcrowded while one is underutilized. If Northgate area students will be sent to Bush instead of to Greathouse to avoid the overcrowded/underutilized situation, why not use the same logic with Abell and Alamo?

I realize that planning for an entire school district is an enormous responsibility and an incredible amount of work. I appreciate the school board members' willingness to take on such a thankless task. I would ask, though, that they take care of the needs of current students before those of projected students.

I regret that this issue has become so divisive. Like most Parker parents, my concerns are not property values or old school/new school. My concerns are education and fairness. Attending an overcrowded school would not be fair to students from any of the elementary schools currently projected to attend Alamo. I respectfully ask the school board to consider other plans, particularly those worked out by Michael Dobey, before making a decision.

Midland should take look at another side

On the morning of Oct. 22 Midland police were called to a disturbance, not knowing what to expect, anything could have happened at that minute. Who is to judge who was right or wrong, the police or Francisco Madrid?

The police officer was probably thinking so fast at that point that the only thing to do was to shoot first and ask questions later. But in no way is this incident related to the Rodney King case and we should remember that as citizens of Midland, we all as Midlanders have to keep that in mind and focus on more positive things. It is unfortunate that this has happened, but for a second look at another side. What if Madrid had stabbed someone or taken off in that patrol car, what would have happened then? I hate to think about that part, but I also believe there should be more training in what is called quick passive restraint training for the police department.

Something needs to be done or we will end up hating each other like they do in Los Angeles. Remember this next time, please.

People need to vote in political primaries

When I voted in the general election, 11 candidates out of 22 offices were unopposed. Two Democrats and nine Republicans were automatically elected. I believe that some candidates were unopposed even in the primaries. This means that people can automatically get elected to an office by merely entering the primary. Those people who did not vote in the primary lost a choice in 50 percent of the offices on the ballot. I do not believe democracy is working when voters are presented only a few choices on the ballot.

I have been told that if political parties believe they cannot receive the majority of votes cast in order to win, they will not waste time and money by entering a candidate on the ballot. This system saves money for the candidates and time for the voter. This will also cause voter apathy — why vote for the unopposed?

It is important to vote in the primaries. In order to preserve democracy, opposition candidates are needed. Term limits and third parties might help. The traditional political parties need to encourage the democratic process, and not impede it.

Yeltsin: U.S. prisoners still live in Russia, many were executed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Russian President Boris Yeltsin told U.S. senators Wednesday in a letter that Americans were held in prison camps after World War II and some were "summarily executed" but others still live in his country voluntarily.

Yeltsin's letter also said some Americans had been forced to renounce their citizenship.

Russian leaders are almost certain no U.S. citizens are still being detained, Yeltsin said in his letter, read to a Senate committee by the general who serves as Russian head of a U.S.-Russian commission searching for American POWs and MIAs.

Gen. Dmitri Volkogonov told the Senate Committee on POW-MIA Affairs that he has pored through Russian archives but has so far found no evidence that any Americans captured in the Korean or Vietnam wars were taken to the former Soviet Union. He said he was aware only of nine American servicemen who deserted in the Vietnam War and went to the former Soviet Union.

He added, however, "hypothetically we cannot dismiss the possibility that Americans were taken from Vietnam to the Soviet Union, but we have no precise information" about any specific cases. But it is "a possibility and I believe not a very strong possibility," he said.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., chairman of the committee, characterized as revelations the Russians' acknowledgements that Americans held after World War II were forced to renounce their citizenship, that some were killed and some still lived in the former Soviet Union voluntarily.

"They will be talked to ... and asked whether they want to come home," Kerry said, adding that the list of names and addresses that Volkogonov delivered to the committee would be made public.

Last August, Volkogonov signed a statement printed in a Soviet newspaper which said several dozen Americans were jailed by Soviet secret police during and after World War II and that one of them was executed on orders of Soviet dictator Josef Stalin. The statement said most were forced to renounce their citizenship. Two Americans trapped in the Soviet Union for years were interviewed by an Associated Press reporter shortly thereafter.

In answer to a reporter's question Wednesday, Volkogonov said through a translator that 119 Americans were held in Soviet camps after World War II. But he did not say how many were executed or how many were still living in the former Soviet Union.

Committee aides did not immediately make available any of the information that Volkogonov turned over to the panel.

Kerry also said it was too early to say definitively whether any Americans captured in Korea or Vietnam were later taken to the former Soviet Union.

"I think you have to go through this process considerably further before you start making judgments," he told reporters.

The committee is finishing its work and plans to issue a report in mid-December before it goes out of existence at the end of the year. Some committee members planned to visit Southeast Asia this month.

Yeltsin's letter said that the U.S.-Russian commission "has found traces of American citizens' stay in camps and prisons of the former U.S.S.R. and discovered shocking facts of some of them summarily executed by the Stalin regime and in a number of cases being forced to renounce U.S. citizenship."

Although some still live in the former Soviet Union, he said that "as a result of the work done one may conclude that today, there are no American citizens forcibly held on the territory of Russia." But he added that "all questions have not been fully answered. There are cases that still require additional examination."

Fake bomb found on jetliner

NEW YORK (AP) — A harmless device that looked like a bomb was found aboard a jetliner during a flight Wednesday after United Airlines received a bomb threat, an official said. The jet landed safely at Kennedy Airport.

The Boeing 767 was taken to a remote area of the aiport where the 48 passengers and 10 crewmembers left the plane, using portable staircases.

A package found on the aircraft contained a harmless device rigged to resemble a bomb and included a note demanding $600,000, said Port Authority spokesman Bill Cahill. The FBI was investigating.

Law enforcement sources said a rambling letter was faxed to the airline's Chicago headquarters while Flight 46 was en route from Los Angeles to New York. The letter ordered that the money be delivered to an office in midtown Manhattan, said the sources, who insisted on anonymity.

The sources said a crew member found the package in an overhead bin, where the note said it would be, and immersed it in water at the rear of the plane.

Passenger Harold Delbeck, an accountant from Orange County, Calif., said the captain told passengers there was a bomb threat and asked them to move foward to empty seats. He said the passengers were calm and helped each other.

School, parent clash over penguin T-shirt

COLORADO CITY, Ariz. (AP) — A school superintendent on Wednesday defended a principal who reprimanded a student for wearing a T-shirt with a picture of "The Penguin," the mortal enemy of comic-book and movie hero Batman.

Principal Lawrence Steed contended that the shirt, depicting actor Danny DeVito in his "Batman" movie role as "The Penguin," was a sign of devil worship, said Trudie Bateman, the boy's mother.

Her 14-year-old son, James, was reprimanded for wearing the shirt to class at the Colorado City Unified District No. 14 school last week.

"I couldn't believe what I was hearing," Mrs. Bateman said. "I would just like my child to attend the public school and dress like any normal American child."

But Superintendent Alvin Barlow said the district's policy was "as liberal as it can be" and that Steed had authority to ban the shirt and reprimand Mrs. Bateman's son.

Her son said that the reprimand he received Nov. 4 was not the first time he had been singled out for his appearance.

He said students and teachers gave him a hard time two years ago for wearing short-sleeved shirts to school.

"They kept saying that I was wicked," he said. "But I just think I'm normal."

FBI arrest four with explosives, ties to the IRA

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Four men were arrested Wednesday on charges of transporting explosive detonators that were used in terrorist attacks in Northern Ireland by the Irish Republican Army, the FBI said.

Two others charged in the same indictment with the four arrested are already in prison. They were convicted last December of trying to buy a Stinger ground-to-air missile from undercover agents in Florida in January 1990.

The six were indicted in Tucson on Aug. 26. The four arrested Wednesday were taken into custody in New York City.

A federal grand jury charged all six with acquiring 2,900 detonators from a Tucson company in November 1989 and shipping them by Greyhound bus to New York. An undisclosed number of the detonators were then sent from Toronto, Canada, to Ireland on Dec. 13, the indictment said.

The FBI said other agencies participating in the investigation were the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

According to the indictment, the company selling the detonators was told they were to be used for Arizona mining operations.

Some detonators were used in bombings in Northern Ireland between January 1991 and June 1992, the indictment said.

Jack Callahan, an FBI spokesman in Phoenix, said authorities didn't know whether people were injured by the bombs.

FBI Director William Sessions said in a statement, "We have no doubt saved numerous lives on the other side of the Atlantic" with the arrests.

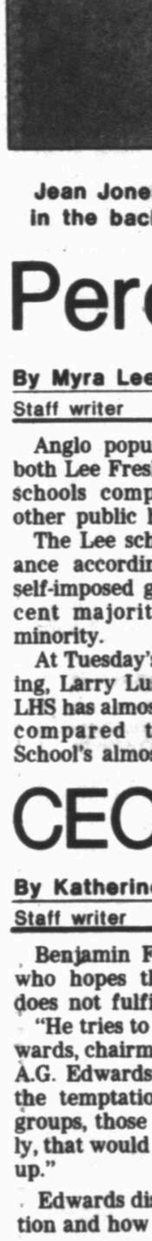

More than 2,800 people have been killed in political and religious violence in Northern Ireland since 1969.

Those arrested Wednesday were identified as: Gerard Anthony Brannigan and Patrick Moley, both of New York; Denis Leyne of Toronto; and Thomas Oliver Maguire.

Jean Jones, office manager at MARC, discusses the three coil-spring toys that were recently stolen. A similar toy stands in the background behind the place where one used to be.

Thieves take toys at park

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Five-year-old Ryan Outlaw, like many youngsters who visit Chris Davidson Opportunity Park, enjoyed playing on the coil-spring toys.

"I know the motorcycle. That was a popular one," his mother, Debbie, said. "They liked to rock around on them."

Mrs. Outlaw, Ryan and his 4-year-old sister, Tiffany, were at the park Wednesday afternoon.

The motorcycle wasn't.

Neither were two other coil-spring toys — a bumble-bee and a duck.

"Three of the coil-spring animals were robbed last night. They unbolted them and took them out of the park," said Jean Jones, office manager for the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens, which maintains the park.

"I just don't understand why people do this," Ms. Jones said.

The half-million-dollar private park — open to the public — is one of only three in the country fully accessible to people in wheelchairs.

On a nice day, about 300 people — like the Outlaw family — visit the park located at Ventura Avenue near A Street.

"This is probably one of the nicest parks in town," Mrs. Outlaw said.

Apparently some thieves thought the same about the three toys.

"Somebody had to go there with a distinct purpose. You'd have to have a big wrench," said Ray Unterbrink, executive director of MARC.

The toys — valued at more than $300 each — were taken from the lighted park, and under a full moon, between 7 p.m. Tuesday and 8 a.m. Wednesday.

"This was not a prank. We have pranks and this was not a prank," he said.

Unterbrink said he believes the toys were taken to be used. Several months ago, a similar toy was taken from the park.

Percentage of Anglo students is highest in Lee schools

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Anglo populations are high at both Lee Freshman and Lee High schools compared to Midland's other public high schools.

The Lee schools are out of balance according to the district's self-imposed guidelines of 60 percent majority and 40 percent minority.

At Tuesday's school board meeting, Larry Lusby announced that LHS has almost 67 percent Anglos, compared to Midland High School's almost 56 percent Anglo enrollment.

LFHS has 64 percent Anglo students compared to Midland Freshman High School's 55 percent.

Lusby said prior transfers and placement of the ESL (English as a Second Language) program are factors in the Lee schools having larger Anglo populations.

He said the elimination of the district's grandfather clauses may decrease future Anglo populations since many of the district's transferees to LHS are Anglo students.

MFHS and MHS also offer the ESL (English as Second Language) programs for high school students which draws mostly Hispanic students. "If all the ESL students went to the school in their district, and transfer students were where they should be, it would balance better," Lusby said at the board meeting.

Trustees suggested offering ESL programs at both Lee high school campuses as well as the Midland high campuses.

"The ESL programs were put on the Midland high campuses for staffing efficiency. But it makes more sense to split the ESL programs with a direct feeder system," said Ted Miller, MISD spokesperson.

Lusby noted that overall, 1992 is the first year that the total Anglo population in the district has declined.

The Anglo population in 1989 was almost 60 percent, approximately 59 percent in 1991, about 59 percent in 1990, and about 57 percent in 1992. Total enrollment in the district has increased by 1,981 students from 1989 to 1992.

Hispanic enrollment has increased from about 29 percent in 1989 to almost 32 percent in 1992. Black enrollment has remained just under 10 percent all four years.

The total Anglo population for the district is 56 percent, with almost 33 percent Hispanic students, almost 10 percent black and less than 2 percent American Indians and Asians.

Miller said the U.S. Census indicated that while MISD's population is 56 percent Anglo, Midland County's population is 70 percent Anglo.

"There are white students in private schools, home schools and in Greenwood (which would be included in the Midland County census)," he said.

Lusby said the trend of an expanding Hispanic community is evident in the lower grades.

"The trend of the Hispanic population increasing is a trend that will progress as time goes on," he said, crediting construction projects throughout the city and the county's low unemployment rate for the steady growth. "Hispanics also traditionally have larger families," he said.

The district's Anglo population averages around 56 percent in lower grades until the seventh grade

CEO tells how election will effect market

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Benjamin F. Edwards III is one American who hopes that President-elect Bill Clinton does not fulfill his campaign promises.

"He tries to make everyone happy," said Edwards, chairman and chief executive officer of A.G. Edwards & Sons, Inc. "I hope he resists the temptation to give into special interest groups, those in the left-wing. More than likely, that would drive interest rates and inflation up."

Edwards discussed the present market situation and how the election will affect it during a stop Wednesday at the Midland branch of the St. Louis-based brokerage firm.

Edwards

"I think the market anticipated the election of Clinton," he said. "But, I just hope that he uses his own good judgment and doesn't put a layer of taxes on businesses that would price them out of the world market."

Although Edwards said he believed there was still life left in the nation's economy, he doesn't predict a particularly great investing market.

"I don't see a very buoyant market," he said. "I think people will continue to invest in stocks, but, let's face it, the stock market is not in its best shape."

Edwards said the best thing for investors would be for Congress to lower, eliminate or index the capital gains tax.

"It kills people that try to start a new business and their investors," he said. "If the business is successful, Uncle Sam steps in and takes a huge sum. And if the business fails, they have no credit."

Edwards' visit to the Midland office is one of Library to unveil new book written by 15 authors

Staff report

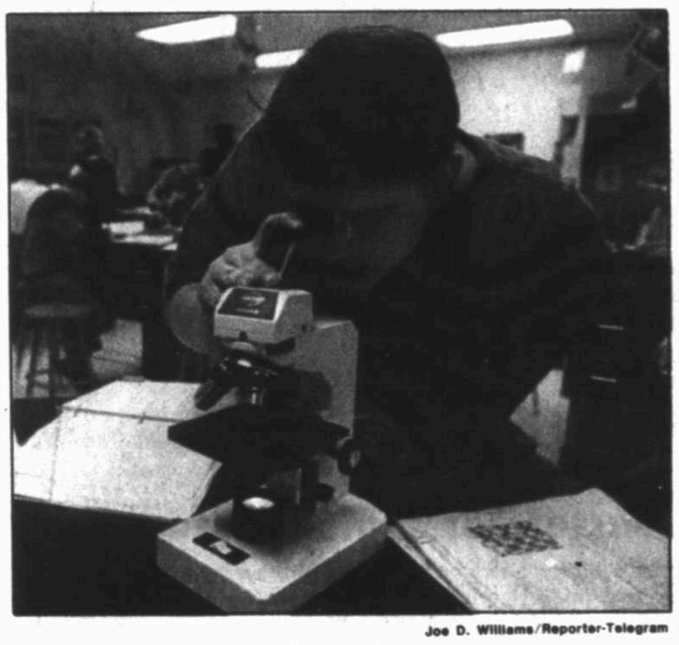

A new publication of the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library — "Cowboys Who Rode Proudly, Carrying Cattle ... and the Methods of Handling Them" — will be unveiled at a book-signing from 4 to 6 p.m. Friday at the library, 1805 W. Indiana.

The book, edited by Evetts Haley Jr. and dedicated to his father, renowned cowman-historian J. Evetts Haley, features biographical essays on 28 cowmen written by 15 different authors, and illustrated by 11 artists.

Cowmen featured in the essays include many individuals familiar to Midland residents and others in Texas and New Mexico — Tom Blasingame, "Scandalous" John Selmon, W.F. "Wild Bill" Scarborough, the Merchants of the San Simon, Bill "Tige" Avery, Spence Jowell, Beale Queen, Nicasio Ramirez, Young Lee, the Cowboy Keltons, Johnny Abers, Young Bell, Arthur Lee Judkins, Wesley Labrier, Clarence Hailey Long Jr., Clay McGonagill, Herbert Thomas "Herb" McSpadden, Marion Otis "Bug" Means, Albert K. Mitchell of the Tequesquite, Herb Pate, John "Whon Pat" Patterson, Lanham Riley, "Bell Cord" Rutherford, Thomas Royal Stoner, Roland Sullenger, Dan Terry, Cliff Vincent, and Mark Wood of the Bells.

The essays were written by a wide range of authors including noted Western novelist Elmer Kelton, Paul Patterson, Dr. Lawrence Clayton, Johnnye Montgomery, Jane Pattie, Evetts Haley Jr., John A. Haley and others. The book also features an original sketch by noted Western artist Tom Ryan of Midland as the frontispiece, in addition to the illustrations by other

ED TODD

We remember childhood teachings in our everyday life

Childhood must be the most wondrous of times. It is adventure. It is discovery. It is revelation. It is brief.

Childhood is a walk, a run, a flight into the world. It is a time when the heart and mind are most sensitive and receptive. It is a time when life's adventures are put on course. Childhood perceptions of life, for good or ill, linger and loom into the grave.

Todd

And there are many perceptions, as many as there are leaves on the mightiest of trees or, to go to the hyperbole, stars in the heavens. Family scenes, especially those that revolve around a coming together of families, are among the most endearing.

What love on earth can exceed that of a nurturing mother or grandmother imparting gentle, unconditional love? When you are ill or distraught, your loving caretaker comforts you and gives you sustenance and assurances that all, in time, will be well. And what love on earth can exceed that of a disciplining and encouraging father or grandfather?

Among childhood's more poignant remembrances are those Bible-quoting, guilt-imparting, and forgiveness-promised scenes under the tabernacle during summer's hot, sweaty, fan-waving revivals.

Even today, I am drawn to those stirring elements as if I need admonishment, perhaps occasional chastisement, for the wrongs I have done and for the rights I have left undone. Along with the guilt, there is the promise of absolution and redemption.

The principal player, the one overseeing the flock, at tabernacle revivals is the minister. He is proclaiming doomsday and Death if sin orders your life or bliss and Life if you trudge the straight-and-narrow and if you are blessed by grace.

Up on the podium, the preacher, more sweaty than the congregation of sinners, is hard at work. Life's time clock is running. Whether he was "called" (drafted) into the ministry or the lifestyle inherent in a humble ministry appealed to him, the preacher seems enthralled in his preachments and allows no doubts about the surety of his message.

The preacher is standing on a raised platform — not on the solid, green earth with the congregation and any stranglers outside the usual flock. It doesn't seem to matter what he's standing on, a tree stump, wooden soft-drink cases, or hand-built podium, the message doesn't change:

Repent, be saved, and enjoy the prospects of an eternally blissful life far beyond this flesh-and-blood mortal life. But, if you dare to ignore the pleadings from the pulpit and reject salvation, you may spend the rest of eternity putting out fires.

To be really effective and to build up the numbers at the altar call, the hometown minister, who is too well known about town to be taken seriously as an evangelist, brings in Brother James Paul Matthew from out of town to win over souls.

The singing of the old standards, capped off by "Amazing Grace," gets the sinners all primed up to receive the evangelist's message.

He quotes verse after verse to back up his propositions, illustrates his main points with personal testimonials or draws on spiritual experiences told by others both on and off the podium, restates his message, and gives everyone within earshot several opportunities to "come forward" in preparing to step into eternity's threshold.

Between stanzas of "Just As I Am," the preacher hushes the piano playing and the singing and suggests a "what if."

"Suppose," he says, "you don't come forward and don't profess your faith, and you, a sinner, leave here unsaved and drive off. And the next thing you know, suppose a steaming locomotive pulling a hundred freight cars crashes into your pickup truck. Suddenly, you're bleeding to death. Eternity is moving in fast. Where do you want to spend eternity, up there and or down yonder?"

I'm still pondering the question.

And here's why.

Today, it is no real concern of mine just exactly what is "on the other side." I am curious. What is, is. I'll find that out soon enough. Ultimately, I have no control over which way I "go" on eternity's elevator. That's God choice after I've acted on my options.

Day after day, you try to do what you think is right or at least think about it, err a bit too much, run into some turbulence, bounce around, straighten up, fly right, run around, stumble, eat dirt, get up, wash up, keep on plugging, do right and on and on it goes.

The really big challenge is cleaning up the daily messes and resolving to do better next time.

And I pray that that message, planted in my childhood, is maturing today.

Ed Todd is a staff writer for the Reporter-Telegram.

ROB: Thieves take toys from park

(From 1B)

"These have no marketable value. Maybe they'll show up in a backyard and a neighbor may know they are not suppose to be there" and tell police, he said.

Steve Davidson, a leader in the development of the park, expressed concern about the incident.

"I think obviously, certainly, it's not acceptable behavior by any standard. I think people who wantonly and intentionally do this need to be apprehended and dealt with to the full extent of the law," he said.

The four-acre park, which opened on May 21, 1989, was named after Davidson's late son, Chris.

Davidson said Midlanders need to become more concerned about such incidents and "not only at Opportunity Park ... but facilities all over the city."

Otherwise, those who contribute to the betterment of the city are going to start thinking twice, he said.

"People are going to stop doing these things in a community ... They're going to think it's just going to get torn up ... from wanton destructive vandalism," he said.

Davidson said he hopes the toys can be recovered.

"Maybe someone's conscience will be jolted and they'll bring them back."

HIGH: More Anglos attend Lee schools

(From 1B)

when it climbs to almost 60 percent.

Miller said one factor causing the increase in seventh grade is that students in home schools and private schools often elect to transfer to public schools in their secondary years.

"And the continued growth in the Lee High School district, which is heavily white, skews the numbers some," he said.

Miller said the district's proposal for balancing ethnicity and socioeconomics of the junior high school populations has about 56 percent Anglo students attending each school. The balancing is being done using current fifth and sixth grade enrollments.

He said the ability to have larger minority percentages of students in the junior high schools indicates the increase in the Hispanic population, which is in line with the minority growth in the district as a whole.

About 300 students attend home schools, and almost all are Anglo, according to information from MISD. A 1991-92 survey at Trinity School, a private school, indicated that 91 percent of the students attending were Anglo, less than 2 percent, black; less than 2 percent Hispanic, and 6 percent other races.

At St. Ann's Catholic School, a 1991-92 survey showed 59 percent of the students were Anglo and 37 percent Hispanic, 1 percent black, and 3 percent, listed as other races.

Midland Christian School had 95 percent Anglo, less than 1 percent black; and 4 percent Hispanic students attending in the 1991-92 school year.

artists with the individual essays.

The name of the book is taken from a passage in "Longhorn, Lasso, and Latigo," written by J. Evetts Haley and published in 1930. "Cowboys rode proudly, buoyantly, recklessly upon the trail, carrying not only cattle, but the methods of handling them — the techniques of the range — to the cow country from Chihuahua to Saskatchewan."

"Cowboys Who Rode Proudly" goes on sale Friday at the Haley Library. Price is $50 plus tax. There is only one edition available and only 2,000 copies for sale.

The authors and artists involved in production of the book will be on hand Friday to autograph copies of the book if desired. Other than those previously mentioned, they also include Barney Nelson, Sabrina Haley, Bill Modisett, Jim Evetts Haley, Guy Logsdon, T. Dudley Cramer, Joyce Merchant Peters, Lois E. Myers, Wayne Baize, Joe Beeler, Duane Bryers, Mike Capron, Dino Cornay, John W. Hampton, Bob Moline, Gary Morton, William Moyers, and Sandy Scott.

Haley Library is also featuring a sale until the end of the year. Those who purchase $100 worth of books or materials will receive a 10 percent discount. Those who purchase $200 worth will receive a 20 percent discount.

many he will make this year.

"I think of our headquarters as a fantasy land and these offices as reality," he said. "We are a customer-driven firm and the only way we know what the customers want is to visit the people that work directly with the customer."

"We don't have any profit centers in our headquarters," he continued. "Our profits are made by offices like this."

The CEO visits about 50 branches a year. Tuesday's visit included the A.G. Edwards & Sons office in Odessa and is part of a tour of branches throughout West Texas and New Mexico.

The Midland office has been in business since 1986.

Quartet performs for students

Sally Williams and Ken Nickels with New York Opera Quartet give performances to MISD students at Midland High School on Wednesday and will perform today for Ector County School District students. In addition, New York City Opera Quartet, brought here by Midland Opera Theater, performs at 8 p.m. today in the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium, Midland College campus. Admission is $5 per person for a program which includes selections from "Candide," "Carmen" and "Don Giovanni." A reception with the performers follows the event.

Free workshop to be at museum

Staff report

Former Midlander Barbara Carlyle will demonstrate oil pastel painting at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., at 2 p.m. Sunday.

The free workshop, to be held in the Stables at the museum, is sponsored by Midland Arts Association in cooperation with the museum and is open to the public.

Ms. Carlyle, who now lives in Houston, will illustrate techniques for using the oil pastel sticks.

Her works, which have been shown in 81 one-man shots, include murals for public buildings and covers for publications. Her paintings are in private and corporate collections.

She received her education at State University of New York, University of Oklahoma and Avignon, Franch. She also studied at Chiapas, Mexico, and has traveled throughout the world.

MAA is an organization of individuals interested in the visual arts. Both professional and amateur artists and persons interested in art are invited to join MAA. Information about membership will be available at the free workshop.

Police make drug arrest

Staff report

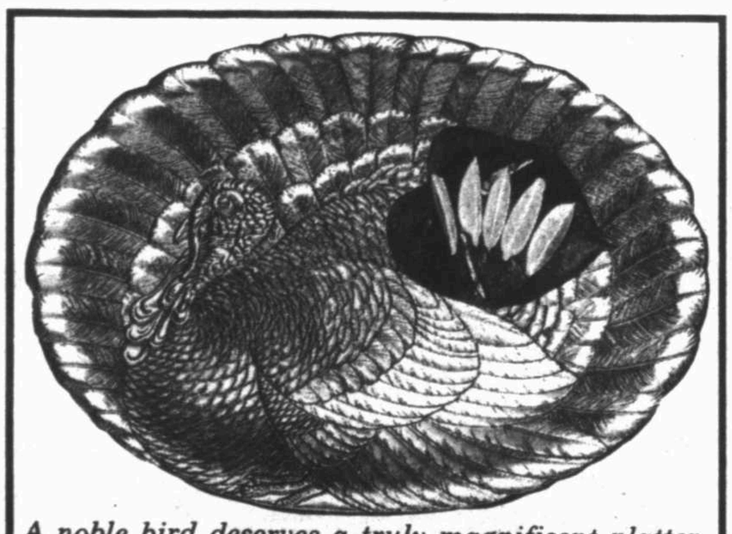

ODESSA — An Odessa man was in jail Wednesday after officers found what was believed to be heroin at his residence Tuesday.

According to an Odessa police report, Municipal Court Judge Otis Moore issued a search warrant Tuesday for 1344 E. 2nd, apartment 23. The warrant was executed by officers from the Narcotics, Canine and Patrol units at approximately 4:30 p.m.

Officers found a small amount of heroin with an estimated street value of $100 and drug paraphnalia.

Jose Jasso Munoz, 50, was arrested and charged with possession of heroin. Bond was set at $7,500.

Dodson

Dodson died Monday at a local hospital.

He was born July 22, 1920, in Stephenville and moved to Midland with his family when he was six years of age. He graduated from Midland High School in 1939, and he married Gwen Ward on Oct. 7, 1941, in Odessa.

Dodson enlisted in the U.S. Army and served during World War II in the European Theater. Following his discharge in 1945, he returned to Midland where he operated Charlie's Mobile Home Park for 18 years. He then opened Dodson's Fun and Party Shop, which he operated for the past 24 years. He was a member of the First Presbyterian Church and the International Brotherhood of Magicians.

Survivors include his wife; one brother, Kenneth Dodson of Midland; one sister, Beatrice Tiner of Midland and numerous nieces and nephews.

The family requests memorials be directed to the American Heart Association or a favorite charity.

Three men carry on legacy of guitar maker, Mossman

By John Churchill
Associated Press Writer

SULPHUR SPRINGS — John Kinsey, David Hallmark and Bob Casey are all partners in a joint business venture.

Their shop is not very big, and they don't produce many products, but they are immensely proud of what they do — carry on the legacy of guitar maker Stuart Mossman.

Although owners of their business, Mossman Guitars, since 1989, the trio has occupied their converted dairy barn in Sulphur Springs for a little more than a year.

Friends, partners and musicians themselves, the Mossman boys turn out anywhere from six to eight professional-quality handmade guitars a month, "depending on the weather, and how we feel," Kinsey said, smiling.

"Actually, it takes about 40 hours of work, per guitar, before they're ready," he said. "We usually work on them in batches of five to seven at a time."

This, says Casey, who carves the guitar's necks by hand, takes up about 90 to 95 percent of their business.

"We make five basic models," Kinsey said. "That takes up most of our time, but sometimes, like now for instance, we'll get swamped with a bunch of custom orders."

Since most all of their guitars are constructed basically the same way, Kinsey said, "custom" usually means fancy. "People are basically looking for three things in a guitar: they want something that's aesthetically pleasing, an instrument that sounds good and something that nobody else has.

"So a lot of times, that means using alternate, or exotic woods, and fancy inlays," Kinsey said. In some of their custom models, they've used such exotics as Brazilian rosewood, Honduran mahogany and other woods from Africa and Hawaii. "People just want theirs to be different, I guess.

"There's really only so much variation in building one of these," he said, holding a custom guitar still in the construction state, "so we're looking for a marketing edge as well."

Fortunately, by simply keeping the Mossman name, they may have all the edge they need.

"Mossman guitars have some serious dyed-in-the-wool fans from back in the old days," Kinsey said, referring to the 5,000 or so Mossman guitars made by Mossman himself up until about 1978. "They're real popular with bluegrass and country musicians. For example, Emmylou Harris has a few Mossman's, John Denver has some of our custom made guitars, Ray Wiley Hubbard has a bright red one we made ... there are a few others. We really don't need to advertise, because we sell everything we make.

"In this business, at least in our case, that's the key," he said. "We don't want to build more guitars simply because we have the facilities and the capability, we'll only do it if we can keep the quality. the Mossman name is synonymous with quality.

"We're all over 50 or so," Kinsey said, "so this is what we're going to do for the rest of our lives. It was really a conscious decision for us. We have the time and the discipline to do it so we're going to keep the quality, even if it means less quantity."

Your basic Mossman guitar, or at least the top of the instrument, usually starts life as a spruce tree. The wood is split into the proper thickness, and then cut into the proper thickness, and then cut into the desired shape.

"Then, we'll inlay the design around the middle," Kinsey said. "We'll decide which design we want, depending on the model we're making, and put it in first. Then, we'll cut the hole in the middle.

"The making of a guitar takes basically three different processes," he said, pointing around the tidy shop to the different work areas. "Making the body, carving the neck and making the fret boards."

Around the open work area, there are guitars in all three of these various stages. There are pearl-inlaid fingerboards on one table, guitar backs on another, and guitar sides drying on a shelf after being heated and bent.

Governor, insurance leaders announce consumer program

AUSTIN — Gov. Ann Richards had some advice Wednesday for Texas insurance consumers: You'd better shop around.

Richards and other state leaders unveiled a new consumer guide and a beefed-up hot line for insurance shoppers.

Their hope is that the steps will lead to more comparison shopping and more competition, thus better services and lower prices.

"That's how the market is supposed to work and that's the way our flexible price system is designed to work," she said.

The system allows companies to charge up 25 percent above or 30 percent below the standard rate for insurance.

But the system relies on consumers doing their part, Richards said.

"With flex band, companies still have room to compete with each other, but do not have room to exploit the Texas consumers. The consumer is the key. With the range of price options that are available to insurance buyers, they indeed do need to go shopping," Richards said.

Claire Korioth, chairman of the State Board of Insurance, said insurance rates have risen overall about 1.9 percent since the flexible price plan went into effect in March.

Insurance companies had been asking for bigger rate increases — in some cases as much as 26 percent — before the system was approved, Ms. Korioth said.

Commission votes against caller ID

AUSTIN (AP) — State wiretap laws don't allow residential customers to obtain a service that would let them know who is calling before they answer the telephone, the Public Utility Commission says.

The PUC voted 2-1 Tuesday against Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.'s proposal to offer Caller ID to residential customers. But the commission said certain businesses might be able to legally use the service if telephone companies get state permission to offer it.

Bob Digneo, spokesman for Southwestern Bell, said the company has not decided whether to revise and resubmit its application to the PUC. He said the company might appeal in court or ask the Legislature to change the wiretap law.

"There are customers all over the state that want the service. Thirty-six other states have the service. Anyone that's ever been interrupted by a call at home in the evening when they're trying to eat dinner can appreciate the value of Caller ID," Digneo said.

State law prohibits anyone outside law enforcement and some businesses from using a "trap-and-trace" device, which can display an incoming telephone number and other information.

Sugar quiets crying babies, studies show

By Jean Carper

Sugar quiets a crying baby. It's an old folk remedy. Sometimes the baby sucks on a "sugar teat," a spoonful of table sugar wrapped in a cloth. Or a fussy infant is given sugar water called "gripe water."

Carper

Yes, it really works, according to Elliott Blass, a psychology professor at Cornell University. In tests, he found that newborns stopped crying instantly when given a few drops of sugar water. Their crying time dropped from about 40 percent to 3 percent. Further, their heart rate fell from a fast 155 beats per minute to a normal 125-130 beats a minute. "The infants were less agitated and much more relaxed, but still very alert, not sleepy" says Blass. The sugar water worked in seven out of eight newborns, he says.

Additionally, sugar water blocked pain in the infants. For example, when subjected to painful medical tests or circumcision, newborns given sugar water cried about half as long as those not getting sugar water. "It increased their pain threshold," says Blass.

He theorizes that such tiny amounts of sugar water activate natural "opioid" chemicals in the brain that reduce pain and distress.

Carrot breakthrough

Did you ever hear that people with cancer often crave carrots? It's a bit of folklore, but there could be some wisdom in it.

Carrots contain lots of beta carotene, and exciting new research finds that the body actually converts beta carotene into a substance now widely used to treat cancer. Yes, you eat beta carotene, and it manufacturers small amounts of a powerful chemotherapeutic agent known to combat tumor growth.

So say researchers at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging at Tufts University.

Study-director Dr. Xiang-Dong Wang explains that, during digestion, beta carotene breaks down into small doses of retinoic acid — the same substance used as a drug to treat cancer, notably blood and bladder cancer. Moreover, beta carotene is stored in lung, liver, kidney and fat tissues; the tissues also convert carotene into anti-tumor retinoic acid, as needed.

The discovery may be one reason that people who eat lots of beta carotene are less likely to get cancer or die of it. All dark-orange fruits and vegetables, and dark-green leafy vegetables are rich in beta carotene.

Clot busters

Worried about heart disease? Then, you are better off improving your blood clotting factors than your cholesterol, says Serge C. Renaud, M.D., of INSERM, the French equivalent of our National Institutes of Health.

Renaud notes that coronary thrombosis (blood clots) is now recognized as the main cause of heart attacks. Moreover, he says, studies show that preventing such blood clots can cut your chances of heart attack within one year. In contrast, it takes three or four years to reduce heart-attack risk by lowering blood cholesterol.

And what foods are likely to promote or deter blood clots? In studies of French farmers, Renaud finds that animal fat, particularly the type in meat and whole milk tends to clog arteries. The type of fat in fish retards clogging. He also notes that the biggest link to heart disease in a study of 21 countries was dairy fat. Interestingly, Renaud says cheese is not dangerous to arteries because its fat is not readily absorbed. Other experts disagree.

Renaud also praises red wine as an anticoagulant, but it must be consumed with meals and in moderation, he cautions.

Pumpkins and prostate

Could eating pumpkin seeds be a possible remedy for swollen prostate, called benign prostatic hypertrophy? That's what James Duke, Ph.D., medicinal plant expert at the U.S. Department of Agriculture, wants to know.

He points out that this condition affects about 50 percent of men over age 50. A common drug treatment costs about $600 a year.

But Duke says inexpensive pumpkin seeds are a common folk remedy throughout the world for such prostate problems. A possible rationale: Pumpkin seeds are rich in certain amino acids that dramatically reduced symptoms of prostate swelling in a controlled study of 45 men. In fact, ½ cup of pumpkin seeds contains five times more of the amino acids than the amount found effective in the study, he says.

Other possible food remedies are cucumber, watermelon and sesame seeds; carob; soybeans; flaxseed; almonds; walnuts and saw palmetto fruit, according to Duke. He says sound medical tests should be done comparing these inexpensive, potentially effective, folk remedies with drugs. "The American public deserves to know whether they work or not," he says.

Avocado vs. cholesterol

Looking for a good substitute for margarine or butter on your bread? How about avocado? Seriously, avocados when smashed and spread on bread or crackers did marvelous things for blood cholesterol, according to a new Australian study.

If fact, avocados proved far superior to the traditional American Heart Association low-fat diet in improving cholesterol in a test of women with both low and high cholesterol.

For three weeks they ate a low-fat, high-carbohydrate diet. Then for three weeks they ate a high-monounsaturated-fat diet; almost all the fat came from raw avocados — between a half and one-and-a-half avocados a day — in salads or as a spread.

On the low-fat diet, the women's total cholesterol dipped 4.9 percent. But on the avocado diet, it fell 8.2 percent. Most alarming, the low-fat diet depressed good-type HDL cholesterol a whopping 14 percent. In contrast, the avocado diet depressed only bad-type LDL cholesterol; good HDL cholesterol remained the same.

The study, like others, finds avocados good heart medicine.

■ Police arrest 2 more teens for slaying of boy

RICHARDSON — A fifth teen-ager has been arrested in the fatal shooting of a high school student after a football game Friday night.

Police on Tuesday arrested Emmanuel Charles Fofanah, 18, and charged him with capital murder.

Four other teens already were arrested for the slaying of Sean Patrick Cooper, 17, near the Berkner High School parking lot.

A passenger in Cooper's car also was beaten and the vehicle was stolen. It was later found stripped in the Pleasant Grove area of Dallas.

Richardson police Captain Dennis Moeller said the shooting took place after the suspects drove up to the school looking for a rival gang member.

■ Attorneys charge supervisor in adoption plan

AUSTIN — Burnet County's jail administrator has been charged with illegally agreeing to accept a gift while a public servant.

But the gift is not a car or cash, it's a baby.

The administrator, Donna Wilson, was booked on two misdemeanor charges Tuesday and then allowed to return to work, police said.

Ms. Wilson, 45, was prepared to take custody of inmate Stephanie Templet's baby, due Nov. 23 because Ms. Templet faces up to 18 months in prison on forgery charges and wants the child to have a home.

The adoption also was supported by Joey Allen, a jail inmate who wed Ms. Templet.

County Judge Martin McLean said, "If a lawsuit arises out of this adoption, which had its beginning in the county jail and involves a county employee, there is a potential for liability."

Ms. Wilson also was accused of tampering with government records, specifically the form signed by Allen and Ms. Templet relinquishing parental rights to Ms. Wilson.

■ Police accuse sheriff of taking from church

HOUSTON — A Harris County deputy sheriff is accused of taking money from a church collection plate as it was passed around the congregation.

Edward Estmere Webb Jr., 44, has been charged with misdemeanor theft for allegedly taking about $600 from the collection taken at Southeast Church of Christ.

Houston police spokesman Alvin Wright said that after the money was reported missing over several Sundays, church officials were tipped to watch Webb.

On two consecutive Sundays, Nov. 1 and 8, church officials saw Webb reach into the plate as it passed, but not to make a donation, police said.

Comptroller releases Texas' crime report

AUSTIN (AP) — Comptroller John Sharp released Wednesday what he touted as the first-ever comprehensive report on the state's crime problems and said it indicates how inefficiently Texas' criminal justice system operates.

"Violent crime in Texas has jumped 50 percent in the past 10 years. We'll pump more than $3.5 billion in state and local taxes into the system this year, but our crime rates keep rising," Sharp said.

"Texas Crime, Texas Justice" is designed to spark debate but does not include any recommendations to cut crime, Sharp said. Such recommendations will be made in several weeks, he said.

The 136-page report touches on all aspects of the state's criminal justice system, Sharp said.

"This is the first time that all the different cogs of the criminal justice system and the law enforcement community and the parole system have been put together and analyzed in one form," Sharp said. "It's comprehensive and I think that's the difference between this and some other (reports)."

Sharp said he did not know if anything in the report conflicted with past looks at aspects of the criminal justice system.

Sharp said he hoped the report would be the "catalyst to finding practical solutions."

"I think one of the problems in state government is that every single entity may have a plan ... but state government does not have one," Sharp said. "Here we are, a $30 billion-a-year corporation and we don't have a plan for 10 minutes after this meeting, much less five years, 10 years, 20 years from now."

The scope of the problem, Sharp said, calls for major changes.

"We would hope that there would be sweeping recommendations by a lot of people," he said. "We don't think the problem can be solved other than by sweeping recommendations."

Sharp also said he would support more prison privatization when it proves cheaper than using public funds.

"What our recommendations look at is generally redirecting funds, trying to make the funds operate in a more efficient manner," he said.

Mourning over

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — The Charlotte Hornets have reached a contract agreement with Alonzo Mourning, ending the holdout by their No. 1 draft pick, a newspaper reported Wednesday.

The Hornets and Mourning agreed to a multiyear deal, ending an impasse that kept the 6-foot-10 rookie center from Georgetown out of the Hornets' preseason schedule and the first three games of the regular season, The Charlotte Observer reported, quoting an NBA source close to the negotiations.

Hornets president Spencer Stolpen expressed hope that Mourning soon would be wearing a Hornets uniform, but declined to confirm that an accord had been reached.

"We're very close," Stolpen said in a telephone interview early Wednesday. He would not say whether a first-year salary of $2.5 million cited in one report was accurate.

"I won't even tell you if that's close," he said.

Stolpen said he expected to resume talks with Mourning's agent, David Falk. "I can't predict exactly when, but I'm confident it will happen very soon," he said.

While the Hornets are off to a 2-1 start, most observers consider Mourning the final component in Charlotte's bid to make the playoffs for the first time in the club's five-year history. His rebounding and defensive skills are just what the Hornets need after finishing near the bottom of the league in both categories last season.

Cowboys' coach Jimmy Johnson ...more relaxed in the NFL

Johnson's 'way' does work

■ Dallas Cowboys' head coach says he has more control over his NFL players than he did coaching college teams.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Not unlike Frank Sinatra, Jimmy Johnson does it his way.

And Johnson's "way" from coaching a national championship at the University of Miami to turning around the Dallas Cowboys from worst to first is a strict regimen of workouts, meetings, and psychological indoctrination.

If anything, Johnson is finding that handling professional football players is less ulcer provoking than dealing with college players, their parents and alumni.

"I had less control of my players at Miami than I do at Valley Ranch," Johnson said. "The players were going to class and trying to get an education. And there were a lot of distractions from girlfriends to alumni."

Johnson can run a much tauter ship at Valley Ranch.

"I can't control the players when they are away from Valley Ranch but I've got their attention all day, every day," he said. "I try to keep an even keel approach.

"Our preparation is the same every week. We try to put the previous game behind us on Monday. At 3:30 p.m, we started talking about the Los Angeles Rams. They have Tuesday off. Then we get back to work on Wednesday."

Like in college Johnson sometimes has trouble controlling the focus of his teams.

"In the professional ranks I keep telling my players they need to evaluate their commitment when they leave the training facility," he said. "I tell them they have to be more focused if they want to be successful."

At Miami, Johnson said he had a sweeter deal because "at Miami we were significantly better than most every team we played. There were only three or four teams we played who were close to us."

Johnson said the Hurricanes were so good that the team spent most of their spring training and weekly workout time preparing for just three of four teams such as Notre Dame, Florida, and Florida State.

"We worked out constantly against their schemes and that's why we were so prepared when we played them," Johnson said. "In the NFL you don't have that luxury. And the talent level from the worst to the best is very small. You are tested every Sunday. "

Johnson himself is a much more relaxed coach in his third professional season.

He admitted after the Cowboys got into the playoffs last year "for the first time I'm totally relaxed with my job. I don't have to answer to the critics anymore."

League titles up for grabs

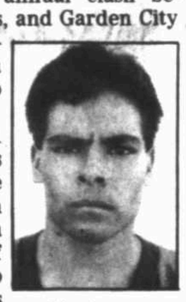

■ Andrews visits Sweetwater and Garden City hosts Rankin in key area district football battles.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff writer

■ AREA FOOTBALL

Football has reached the bi-district playoff level for the vast majority of Texas high school teams, but not for squads in Districts 8-A and 3-4A where one final regular-season Friday needs conducting before all the pieces can be fit into the postseason puzzle.

Andrews takes its perfect 9-0 mark to Sweetwater for the annual clash between 3-4A's Mustangs, and Garden City hosts Rankin in a pivotal 8-A contest as a pair of league titles go up for grabs.

Abalos

Bradford

Sweetwater, 8-1 overall, and Andrews each stand 5-0 for the 3-4A season and each has already secured a slice of the playoff pie. But the two groups of Mustangs shared the league crown last year, and unless they tie Friday just one will be awarded a championship trophy.

"I'm glad they've gone to a two-team playoff system, but it kind of takes the meaning out of a district championship," said Andrews coach W.T. Stapler, who once coached Sweetwater to a state crown. "Still, our youngsters would like to go 10-0 for the season."

But if that game is mostly for pride, the game in Garden City is not.

The Garden City Bearkats can still make the playoffs, but to do it they have to knock off the defending 8-A champion Red Devils by at least 10 points under the league's plus-minus points system for breaking three-way ties — assuming Wink beats Grandfalls on Friday, which is a very good assumption.

"We told our kids that the score would be 9-0 in Rankin's favor at the start of the game," Garden City coach Dennis Bryant said. "It's going to be a big challenge, but we think our kids are going to accept that challenge."

In other area games Friday, Midland Christian School (8-0) sees its first postseason action since winning the 1991 state Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools (TAPPS) championship when the Mustangs take on Dallas Winston (5-3) at 7 p.m. in Abilene's Elmer Gray Stadium.

And the Big Spring Steers (4-4-1) will be looking to finish the season on an up note when they host Fort Stockton (3-6) at 8 p.m.

But Garden City will be looking to prolong its season against the long odds of a pre-game deficit.

The Bearkats are 3-1 in the loop, but the loss came 39-27 at the hands of Wink, which is also 3-1, and that leaves Garden City at minus 12 entering the finale.

Rankin, 4-0 in 8-A, is plus seven because of a 14-7 win over Wink.

And Wink, with a 12-point win at Garden City and a seven-point loss to Rankin, sits at plus 5. If the Wildcats beat Grandfalls Friday, they will be assured of a playoff berth. And that's likely since Grandfalls is just 3-5 for the year and 1-3 in league play.

So that leaves Garden City with the unenviable task of having to beat Rankin by no fewer than 10 points to swing the plus-minus rating in its favor. And the Red Devils know they have the Bearkats in a hole.

"We don't want it to come down to the points system, but it will always be in the back of my mind so we know where we stand and what each situation means," Rankin coach Raul Sanchez said. "And we told the kids about it so they would hear about it from us and not from someone else. But we don't want it to be on the kids' minds during the game."

What has been on the minds of the Red Devils lately is winning football games. Following a 30-24 opening-season loss to Iraan, Rankin has reeled off eight straight wins, out-scoring 8-A foes 139-20 so far.

"That game (opener) was a learning experience for us," Sanchez said. "Our kids have really come on since then. We only have five seniors, but they've provided great leadership. And the younger kids have done an outstanding job."

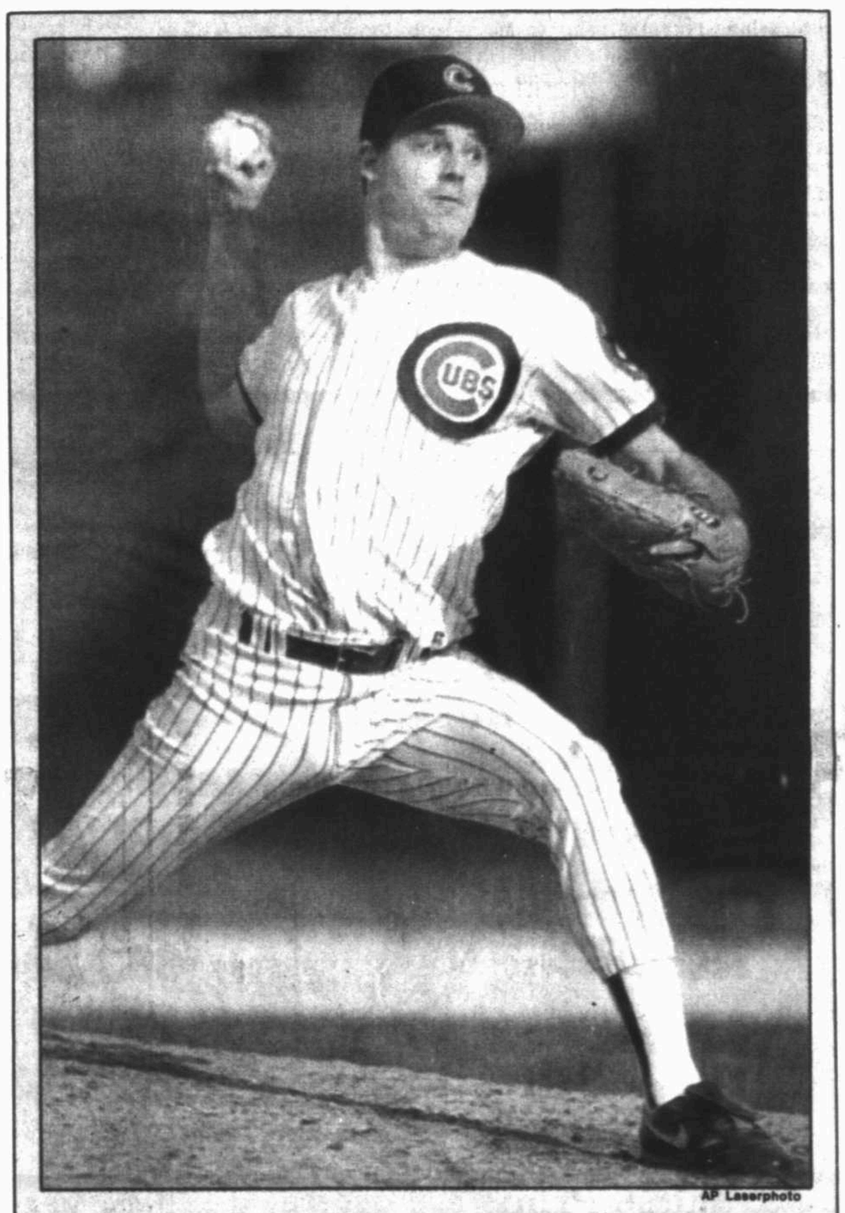

Junior running back Roy Abalos has led Rankin's ground attack, gaining 1,280 yards on 150 carries. And junior quarterback Jo Jo Guerra has a little over 1,000 yards passing, finding seniors Jeff Jones and Joey Varela a total of 29 times for 850 yards.

Garden City may not have as many weapons as Rankin, but the Bearkats can be explosive when Jody Bradford gets his hands on the ball. And that happens a lot.

Bradford has rushed for 1,955 yards thus far, accounting for 17 TDs along the way.

"He (Bradford) is going to get his yards," Sanchez said. "You don't shut down a back like him. He's not the whole

Chicago's Greg Maddux is the National League Cy Young award winner after winning 20 games for the Cubs.

Maddux nails Cy Young

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK — Greg Maddux, who won 20 games for a losing Chicago Cubs team, outdueled Atlanta ace Tom Glavine and was named winner of the National League Cy Young Award on Wednesday.

Maddux went 20-11 with a 2.18 ERA for the Cubs. He received 20 of the 24 first-place votes from a panel made up of two writers in each league city, and was named second on the remaining four ballots, finishing with 112 points.

Glavine, trying to become the NL's first repeat Cy Young winner since Sandy Koufax in 1966, was 20-8 with a 2.76 ERA. He got the remaining four first-place votes and finished second with 78 points.

Maddux won despite the Cubs going 78-84 — seven of his losses came in shutouts — and finishing fourth in the NL East. He is the fourth Cubs pitcher to win the Cy Young, joining Ferguson Jenkins (1971), Bruce Sutter (1979) and Rick Sutcliffe (1984). Maddux also is the first NL starting pitcher to win the award on a team with a below-.500 record since San Diego's Randy Jones in 1976.

"I was pleasantly surprised. I thought I had a good enough year to get it and to get it means a lot," Maddux told Chicago's WLS-TV.

Maddux was the first Cubs pitcher to win 20 games since Rick Reuschel went 20-10 in 1977. Maddux gave up four or fewer hits in 12 of his 36 starts.

"You never really know how good you can be if you put together the best year you can. I felt like I did that this year," he said. "To be rewarded for it in this way is very gratifying."

Glavine's second straight 20-win season came for the Braves, who went 98-64 and won the NL West.

Chaps seek fifth victory against Pima

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

Midland College will accomplish something that hasn't been done by a Chaparral basketball team since 1987 if it comes away with a win tonight against Pima College, of Tucson, Ariz.

Should the Chaps defeat Pima, which seems likely after last year's 33-point win, MC would open the season 5-0, something it hasn't done since November of 1987.

While not to be confused with the grandest of accomplishments, starting out the season with five straight wins definitely shows the Chaps are headed in the right direction again. In its fifth outing last season, MC was defeated 118-116, the second highest number of points ever allowed by a Chap team.

That high of a point output by the opposition shouldn't be a concern today when the two teams tip off at 7:30 p.m. at Chaparral Center. MC defeated Pima, 93-60, at last year's Yavapai Classic in the fourth game of the season.

Thusfar in the 1992-93 season, the Chaps have shown a knack for dominating their opponents, as witnessed in Monday night's 111-64 win over Southwestern Christian. Through four games, the Chaps have outscored the opposition by a margin of 25 points per game. MC is averaging 105.5 ppg, while its opponents are averaging 80.5 ppg.

The Chaps are being led in both scoring and rebounding by Demeitreus Drew. The sophomore out of Wyoming's Cheyenne High School is averaging 26.2 ppg and 9.0 boards.

In player news, MC's roster has been trimmed to 11 after Midland Lee graduate Keenan Henry apparently quit the team. Henry, who saw brief playing time in the Chaps' first game, has not been to a practice or game since the second night of the Chaparral Classic.

"His personal choice was to go in a different direction," MC coach Steve Green said. "He apparently no longer wants to be a part of this basketball team, so therefore, he is no longer a part of this basketball team."

Following the completion of tonight's MC-Pima game, the Chaps will have the longest break of the season thusfar. The Chaps are idle until next Monday when Grayson Community College visits Chap Center.

CHAP NOTE: MC will open the 1992 Odessa College Thanksgiving Classic against McCook (Neb.) at 4 p.m. on Thanksgiving day. The Chaps will face Connors State (Okla.) in the feature game, Friday, Nov. 27, at 8 p.m. MC wraps up the tournament Saturday, Nov. 28, at 6 p.m. against Lamar, the second game that week the Chaps play against Lamar.

Aggies seek 'limited exposure' against Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum has a plan for tonight's game against Houston's prolific run-and-shoot offense: Limited exposure.

"You can't let them have too many shots at you," Slocum said. "One way to beat them is allow them limited exposure. We'll try not to turn the ball over and give them added shots at us."

The No. 4 ranked Aggies (8-0) defeated Louisville 40-18 on Saturday for their 18th consecutive regular season victory. The Cougars (3-5) were upset by Southern Methodist.

The Cougars usually see opposing defenses flood the field with defensive backs, trying to cover all the passing lanes of the offenses' four wide receivers.

"When we play Houston, it's like a contest to see who can get to the quarterback first," linebacker Marcus Buckley said. "First one to the quarterback wins."

The Aggies are 4-1 against the Cougars' run-and-shoot offense since former Houston coach Jack Pardee introduced it to the Southwest Conference in 1987. But Slocum never relaxes against the Cougars.

"There was a point in the Louisville game where I said to myself that we would win the game unless something drastic happens," Slocum said. "You never reach that point against Houston."

The Cougars have a history of starting slow and finishing fast. Houston has been outscored 168-111 in the first half of eight games this season, trailing Texas Christian 21-7 after two quarters to eventually win the game 49-46.

Houston's 41-18 loss to the Mustangs doesn't console Slocum.

"I've been trying to convince our players that the team they saw play SMU is not the team they'll face in the Astrodome," Slocum said.

"Houston had chances to make big plays and didn't, and SMU had some chances and they made them. The way Houston throws the ball around, three or four of those misses could have been touchdowns."

The Aggies are the only SWC team never blown out by the Houston run-and-shoot.

"I think some of the novelty has worn off," Slocum said. "In the early days of the wishbone, they ripped people pretty good because no one had seen it. It was the same with the run-and-shoot. People tried some things that weren't very good."

The balance is returning as defenses throw out what doesn't work.

"At some point it comes back to who has the best talent," Slocum said.

The Aggies offense still centers around its running attack, fueled by Greg Hill, who had a season high 142 yards against Louisville.

He's scored 11 touchdowns in the last seven games and has six 100-yard games this season.

True freshman Corey Pullig made his first collegiate start a successful one against Louisville and will start against the Cougars instead of sophomore Jeff Granger, who suffered a concussion against SMU.

The Cougars are trying to regroup after losing to the Mustangs, whom Houston embarrassed 95-21 in 1989.

Jimmy Klingler, brother of former Houston quarterback David Klingler, will start at quarterback.

Jimmy Klingler already has surpassed his brother's sophomore performance. Jimmy has completed 196 of 319 passes in eight games for 2,305 yards and 20 touchdowns.

Bowe overcomes 'lack of heart' tag

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Lack of heart.

It's a charge Eddie Futch heard about Riddick Bowe, so he first turned down a request to train the heavyweight contender.

Rock Newman, Bowe's manager, then asked Futch to talk to Bowe, a talk that changed his mind.

"He showed me he had character," the 82-year-old Futch said Wednesday. "He lived in one of the worst crack houses in Brooklyn. He didn't smoke. He didn't drink. He didn't do drugs."

"You had to fight your way into the building and fight your way out every day," recalled Bowe, the 12th of 13 children who grew up in the tough Brooklyn sections of Bedford-Stuyvesant, Brownsville and East New York.

"He walked his mother to work and picked her up," Futch said.

"I walked her to work, but I couldn't pick her up because I was in school," corrected Bowe, who graduated from high school.

Lack of heart?

"Labels are hard to shake," said Bowe, who now lives at Fort Washington, Md.

The label of quitter was stamped on Bowe when he was stopped in the second round by Lennox Lewis in the super heavyweight final at the 1988 Olympics.

It has stuck with him, despite a 31-0 pro record that earned him a challenge of undisputed heavyweight champion Evander Holyfield on Friday night at the Thomas and Mack Center.

"I know I didn't quit," Bowe said.

A tape of the fight backs up Bowe.

"I realize he hasn't been tested mentally for what is about to come," Holyfield said. "When I look at him, I look at a guy who doesn't really know all about it yet. Every fight has to give you that, but Bowe hasn't proved that yet."

Bowe has not proved himself in the pressure-cooker environment that a heavyweight title fight can be.

The 30-year-old Holyfield, however, does not expect anything less than a top effort from Bowe.

"Riddick Bowe wants to win, not just go the distance," the unbeaten champion said. "It's a make-or-break fight for him."

Futch thinks that what was taken as lack of heart by Bowe when he was an amateur actually was lack of concentration.

"He was just a kid," said Futch, who has worked with 17 world champions. "He was 20 when I met him. At the Olympics, he was still trying to find out who Riddick Bowe was. He hasn't shown any lack of focus to me.

"People attributed more maturity to him than he had. He was 6-foot-5, 235 pounds. They thought he was a man. He was boy."

It was quite an achievement for Bowe to even get to the Olympics.

He went to the Olympic trials after surgery for a popped tendon in his right hand, and he got beat by Robert Salters of the Army. He was invited to box-offs as Salters' most-noteworthy opponent.

Needing two victories over Salters to make the team, Bowe got them, although he boxed with a hairline fracture of the right ankle and two collapsed arches.

Big Eight, SWC to discuss merger possibility

AUSTIN (AP) — Big Eight Conference school presidents have agreed to meet with Southwest Conference leaders in January to discuss the possibility of merging the two leagues, officials say.

Big Eight Commissioner Carl James said Wednesday the conference presidents voted Monday in New Orleans to meet with SWC leaders during the 1993 NCAA Convention in Dallas, Jan. 13-16.

Last week, A. Kenneth Pye, president of Southern Methodist and head of the SWC Council of Presidents, announced that SWC leaders were interested in talking to the Big Eight about a possible merger.

The SWC presidents believe the Big Ten and Pac-10 may soon follow the SEC's lead by growing to 12 members and splitting into divisions.

"All we want to do is explore what the possibilities were for the two conferences," Pye said last week. "They (the Big Eight) happened to be closest to us and most of our teams already play a significant number of Big Eight teams."

The Big Eight and SWC have discussed a merger off-and-on for two years.

Tip of the Week: As in all games of finesse, the follow-through is especially important. If you can still see your hand in front of your face after your delivery, you will probably come up short of your target. Reach out toward that pocket and continue your swing up and over your head. You will generate a lot more pin action that way, thus carrying more strikes.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your ability to keep your cool when under pressure will be a huge asset. Refuse to be rattled by ridiculous demands. You will need to be more choosy when picking business associates and romantic partners in 1993. New doors open to you next March. Walk through them and make the most of some golden financial opportunities. By next September you will have found an innovative solution to a recurring financial problem. In October, share your hopes with someone special.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Justice Harry Blackmun, Olympian Nadia Comaneci, actress Kim Hunter, rock star Neil Young.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A friend offers a helping hand to a family member who is having difficulties. Be appreciative. Travel requires careful planning. Eat lightly tonight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Devote part of your work day to an artistic project. Its success could lead to a second income! Avoid playing guessing games with your health; schedule a visit to the doctor or dentist.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Research will help you verify important facts. Attention to detail is necessary to achieve success. Show more self-control when around your loved ones. A long-distance call could bring welcome financial news.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Profitable events are likely to take place today. Conditions are favorable for dealing with middlemen. Your rapport with a member of the opposite sex is at an all-time high.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Use a new method to put across your original ideas. A public relations program will be stepped up. Romantic ties are strengthened. Diplomacy will help you clear up any domestic problems.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Sharing your thoughts with someone you want to be close to helps create dreamy rapport. Resist confiding too much too soon. Be sensitive to the needs of those who share your home.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It may be time to share with others the reasons for underlying tensions. You have a discerning financial eye but are sometimes too trusting. Guard against unwise investments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You find contentment in solitude now, far from the spotlight. Higher-ups may be touchy; watch for signs of irritation or fatigue. A friendship deepens.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take advantage of an open-door policy at work to win new friends and boost your popularity. The coast is clear for romance tonight. Sincerity works best.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan.19): Your bargaining instincts will be sharp today. Hone in on a purchase or investment. You may be in for a sweet surprise. A good evening for attracting notice.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Some good news makes you want to celebrate with your loved ones. Resist the temptation to overindulge. Self-discipline helps you stay fit. Be more loving.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You could be moody this morning. Watch your step when dealing with people in authority. Keep track of important responsibilities. It is up to you to show what you can do.

TODAY'S CHILDREN can be painfully shy when young. Concerned parents will help these bright and sensitive children open up by being lovingly supportive.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Dbl	2 ◇	4 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇

You need do nothing more than pay heed to the auction to bring home this four-spade game. With almost every card marked, careful preparation is sure to deliver the contract.

With the equivalent of an opening bid facing a takeout double and a six-card major, there's no need to pussyfoot around. You know where you want to play the hand, and the surest way to get there is via the direct route.

After the opening lead of the king of diamonds, you are in danger of losing three club tricks and a heart—West must hold the ace of clubs to justify an opening bid. Since you know leading a club to the king is doomed to failure, you must find some other line.

The heart finesse is tempting, but if it loses there is no doubt East will return a club to defeat you. An end-play offers much better prospects.

Win the ace of diamonds and draw trumps. To complete the end-play, you must reach a position where, should West have some heart length, the suit can't be continued safely by that defender. So cash the ace and king of hearts and, when the queen doesn't drop, abandon that suit and instead lead the jack of diamonds, discarding a heart from hand. Saddled with the lead, West is well and truly trapped.

If West exits with a club, you lose, at most, two club tricks and a diamond. If West leads the queen of hearts, ruff and take a club discard on the jack of hearts, using a trump as the entry. If West returns a low heart, go up with the jack. Either that wins and you discard a club, or East covers and you ruff, setting up a long heart in dummy for a club discard. Simple enough!

Judge Bunton orders Zsa Zsa to pay San Antonian $3 million

SAN ANTONIO — A federal court jury has ordered actress Zsa Zsa Gabor to pay $3 million to a San Antonio businessman for not showing up at a "fantasy week" where vacationers were to meet Hollywood stars.

Chief U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton also admonished the Hungarian-born actress Tuesday, accusing her of thumbing her nose at the judicial system by not appearing for trial or having an attorney present.

"I'm glad you returned a verdict of $3 million," Bunton said. "I hope he collects every nickel from Mrs. Gabor."

Len Safir, founder and president of Hollywood Fantasy Corp., had sued Ms. Gabor for not honoring an $11,000 contract to appear in San Antonio.

Trial testimony took just 90 minutes. Jurors ordered Ms. Gabor to pay $1 million for breach of contract, $1 million for fraud and another $1 million in punitive damages.

Safir said he tried to sell "fantasy week" stays at a San Antonio hotel where guests would rub shoulders with stars and "be treated like a movie star."

Ms. Gabor, who signed a contract to appear at one of the events in 1991, did not show up, forcing Safir to pay refunds to the guests who had booked the weeklong stay for $7,500.

NEW YORK — Naura Hayden, author of the best-selling "How to Satisfy a Woman Every Time," has failed to satisfy a former friend who is suing her for not repaying a $25,000 loan.

Hayden

Frances Whyatt, a Greenwich Village poet, said in papers filed Tuesday in state court that on July 26, 1987, she lent Hayden $25,000 at interest of 15 percent a year with a promise to repay in 90 days.

Only $17,000 has been paid, she said, and by Oct. 26, the remaining principal and interest was $28,000.

Hayden, an actress who has written several self-help and health books, hit the jackpot with her sex manual.

She first wrote the 123-page book in 1983. It has been on best-seller lists in 1983, 1984 and 1992. More than 500,000 copies have been sold.

Hayden didn't return a call to her home Wednesday.

ELDON, Iowa — Tom and Roseanne Arnold have bought a former pizzeria. But hold the anchovies and break out the greasy spoons: They're converting it into a diner.

Roseanne and Tom's Big Food Diner will be open in six weeks, Arnold said Tuesday. It will serve breakfast, lunch and dinner.

"It will be real diner food," he said. "We're going to have turkey burgers, but that will be as California as we'll get."

Tom Arnold's brother Chris, who lives in nearby Ottumwa, will manage the diner. Chris Arnold said the menu will feature sandwiches, pizza and ice cream.

The Arnolds spend as much time at their 1,700-acre farm near Eldon as their schedules allow and they wanted to have a place nearby to dine after the Jones Cafe, the only restaurant in Eldon, closes at 6:30 p.m.

"Basically, we wanted to be able to have food we wanted cooked when we were there," Arnold said. "So we can always just call up and have them cook it. Plus, we like the restaurant business."

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Rap singer Sister Souljah urged college students to avoid casual sex and develop "a spiritual connection" with God.

"As an African woman I am telling you this: It is wrong to have sex with someone you do not know," Sister Souljah said Tuesday at the University of Buffalo.

"You have to learn to control yourself," she said. "You have to have a spiritual connection to your creator. You cannot let white people tell you what it is to be a man or to be a woman."

Souljah said she didn't expect much political change under the administration of President-elect Clinton, who compared her to white supremacist David Duke for comments she made after the Los Angeles riots.

SLIDELL, La. — A couple of Garth Brooks fans accused of forcing their way to the front of a line to buy concert tickets are in trouble with their boss — the sheriff.

St. Tammany Parish Sheriff Pat Canulette said some Brooks fans complained the two deputies forced them out of a shopping mall parking lot to be first in line for tickets.

Some of the fans had been waiting for tickets since Friday night. Mall officials said they didn't ask deputies to remove the fans.

Only the first 35 people in line got tickets to the Dec. 5 concert before it was sold out.

The deputies agreed to give up their tickets and work concert security without pay, Canulette said. They also face internal discipline.

But Canulette said that wasn't enough for some Brooks fans.

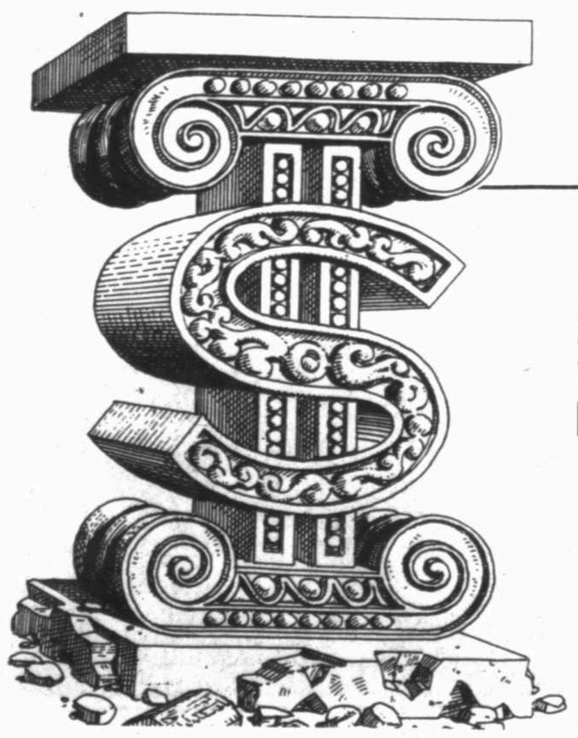

"I've had citizens who have told me to execute them," the sheriff said.

1992 America's Best

The National Weather Association Media Award winner is:

NewsWest

MIDLAND/ODESSA/BIG SPRING, TEXAS

KTPX

That's right. America's Best. That's what the National Weather Association has awarded NEWSWEST 9 . Mark Lee, our Chief Meteorologist, recently accepted the 1992 Media Award in St. Louis, Missouri at the annual National Weather Association Conference. It was a great moment for Mark, a professional in the truest sense of the word, to receive acclaim for the series he authored- "The Fifth Season".

This award represents the honor earned at NEWSWEST 9 for our weather special: "The Fifth Season". The segments - news series inside our news, safety tip thirty second ads, and the "Safety Tip/Warning Signs Guide" brochure - all comprised America's Best for educating the community about severe weather, including the protection of life and property. Yes, the very best communication effort by any media - radio, TV or print - in the land.

At NEWSWEST 9 we're indeed proud to have Mark's exceptional work receive such high acclaim. But we're even prouder that YOU, our West Texas viewers have told us how helpful "The Fifth Season" tips have been for you, your businesses and your schools. That's what really makes us feel good.

MARK LEE
METEOROLOGIST

And quite frankly, we're not at all surprised Mark did such a good job. He's serious about the weather and such a professional, that outstanding work is something he expects of himself everyday. And you can too.

Sure, we know some of you may watch other stations, but there IS a reason so many West Texans are switching to NEWSWEST 9. And Mark Lee is just one of these reasons.

Just watch Mark, one of America's Best, working with this area's most sophisticated weather equipment. You deserve the best. And we're committed to giving it to you on NEWSWEST 9. Tune us in.

Reaching more West Texas counties than any other local television station.

BUSINESS & OIL

Prices hold

NEW YORK — Oil prices settled unchanged at the New York Mercantile Exchange Wednesday, but gasoline prices fell and home heating oil rose as the market showed a mixed reaction to the previous day's supply figures.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in December settled at $20.47 per barrel, unchanged. Crude was higher much of the day following the inventory report, but was pulled down to the previous day's level late in the session by the weak gasoline prices.

Natural gas prices were lower, with contracts for delivery in December settling at $2.398 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 1.9 cents.

At the New York Mercantile Exchange, lower-grade sour crude for delivery in December settled at $18.42 per barrel, unchanged.

Diaper merger

HOUSTON — Drypers Corp. said Wednesday it was merging with Ohio-based UltraCare Products Inc. to create a company that will manufacture 1 billion disposable diapers annually.

The merger involving Houston-based Drypers and UltraCare of Marion, Ohio, was financed with a $75 million private placement in senior notes and refinanced existing debt. The notes, at 12½ percent, come due in 2002.

Drypers is the nation's third-largest maker of brand diapers, trailing industry giants Procter & Gamble Co. and Kimberly-Clark, which have 75 percent of the $4 billion disposable diaper market.

With the merger, Drypers gains entry into the baby wipes products line. It also gains UltraCare's Cozies brand of diapers to join its own Drypers and Baby's Choice brands.

Dollar slips

NEW YORK — The dollar fell against most major currencies during a quiet day of trading Wednesday, with bank holidays in the United States and Canada.

In New York, the dollar fell to 123.975 Japanese yen from Tuesday's close of 124.20.

In New York it cost $1.5250 to buy one pound, more expensive than Tuesday's $1.5155.

Stocks gain

NEW YORK — The stock market worked its way higher Wednesday in buying ascribed to an easing of uncertainties about President-elect Clinton's eonomic plans.

Trading set its busiest pace in more than three weeks despite Veterans Day observances that closed government offices and the domestic bond market.

S&L execs optimistic on rate prospects

■ Mortgage rates could drop if President-elect Clinton reins in deficit.

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Savings and loan executives and economists say mortgage rates could start declining again if President-elect Clinton proves to financial markets he isn't going to enlarge the budget deficit.

Since early September, when average interest on 30-year fixed-rate mortgages hit a 19-year low of 7.84 percent, rates have jumped up by nearly half a percentage point.

That's a reflection of the financial markets' nervousness over what Clinton might do, said executives and others attending the final session of the Savings & Community Bankers of America convention on Wednesday.

If the new president wants to see rates stabilize or even edge down, he must couple any effort to stimulate economic growth with a credible plan to reduce the deficit, they said.

That's essential to prevent an increase in interest rates from offsetting the economic effect of any stimulus from increased government spending or tax cuts, they said.

Martin Regalia, chief economist of the trade group, said he believed Clinton would resist calls from liberal Democrats and keep his economic package relatively moderate.

If that happens, mortgage rates, which hit a four-month high of 8.29 percent last week according to the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., could fall as low as 7.5 percent or 7.25 percent by the middle of next year, he said. If not, they could shoot up over 9 percent, he said.

"I think Clinton's a pretty sharp guy, and I think his advisers are pretty sharp," Regalia said. "They have a guy with a mandate, and they don't want to mess it up by doing something stupid that causes financial markets to react badly.

"If they do this one right, they could be looking at a fairly long run of a reasonably good economy. But if they mess this one up, it could be a nightmare four years."

In a survey by the trade group, 500 S&L executives seem to be modestly optimistic about mortgage-rate prospects. Only 10 percent said they expected a substantial increase over the next six months. Seventy-one percent anticipate a moderate increase of 1 percentage point or less. An additional 16 percent expect no change in rates and 3 percent see a modest decrease of less than 1 percentage point.

"I wouldn t expect to see much change in interest rates for a long time. . . . I would think that they would remain stable or only slightly increase." said David F. Holland, chairman of Boston Federal Savings Bank in Burlington, Mass.

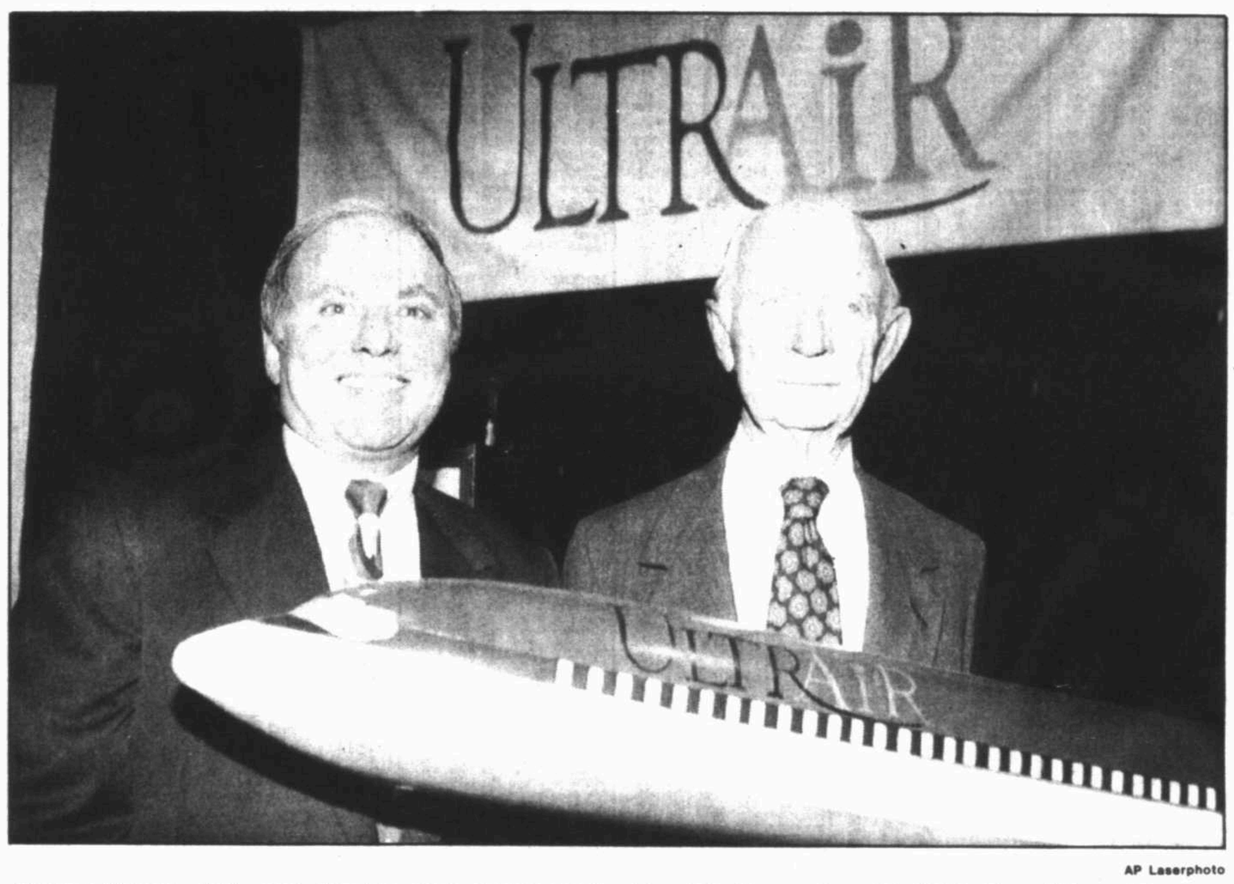

Economist James W. Christian, a consultant based in Boene, Texas, predicted long-term rates, including mortgages, could fall three-quarters to 1 percentage point over the next two years. Deposit rates over that period may increase by half a percentage point, he said.

S&L executives said many of their depositors, especially retired people, are being hurt by the lowest deposit rates since the Depression.

Elliott Knutson, chairman of Washington Federal Savings and Loan Association in Seattle said if economists' forecasts of a slowly improving economy proves correct, deposit rates at least won't drop further. However, he said they probably won't increase much either.

The expected direction of interest rates — slightly down or stable for mortgages and slightly up for deposits — will narrow the unprecedented interest-rate gap that has returned the S&L industry to profitability over the past year and a half.

But the executives and economists said the shift would not be abrupt or sharp enough to cause the kind of losses and disruption in the industry that some private analysts have predicted.

Barney Kogen, left, and Gordon Cain announced plans Wednesday in Houston to launch a new airline, UltrAir, on Jan. 10, 1993. The airline will serve five cities.

Pair launch luxurious, limited Houston airline

By Susan Hightower
Associated Press writer

HOUSTON — A new luxury airline called UltrAir hopes to dodge the industry's troubles by serving a tiny fragment of business travelers flying between Houston and four other U.S. cities, its founders said Wednesday.

"The airline industry today has had a tremendous amount of failure because the startup airlines have dreams of being amalgamated gigantic and they really turn into amalgamated gigantic Titanic. We know our market," founder Barney Kogen said. "UltraAir is going to remain a 10-airplane airline forever."

Nearly a year ago, Kogen sold his Lifeco Travel Services, the nation's fifth-largest travel service company, to American Express for a reported $100 million.

The new carrier's angle will be to put fewer seats with more room in their 727s, add extra space for baggage, turn their gates into "executive lounges," feature more and better-trained flight attendants and serve gourmet food and beverages by hand on china and tablecloths.

"There's not going to be any crowds," Kogen said. "There's going to be no crying babies, unless somebody wants to buy them a ticket. There's going to be no drunk vacationers."

Co-founder Gordon Cain's Airline of the Americas, a Smyrna, Tenn.-based commuter service, will be merged into UltrAir and will provide its planes. The some $10 million to start UltrAir was put up by Kogen and Cain, who is former chairman of Vista Chemical Co., co-founder and chairman of the Sterling Group and chairman of the board of Atlantic Coast Airlines.

Beginning Jan. 10, UltrAir will fly three times six days a week to and from Los Angeles. Newark, N.J. will two flights. There will be no Saturday service.

Flights to Washington National will start in March, when UltrAir takes delivery of three more airplanes, and service to New York La Guardia will begin in May when three more aircraft are added.

The founders figure 35 passengers per flight is their break-even point.

GATT official sees accord within month

N.Y. Times News Service

GENEVA, Switzerland — After a series of disappointments, including two occasions this year on which he was told a deal had been made only to find it had not, Arthur Dunkel, the man overseeing crucial world trade talks, says he believes an accord can be reached within the next month.

"We have reached rock bottom, and now there is a chance to bring the Uruguay Round back at full speed in the next few weeks," Dunkel, the secretary general of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, said Wednesday. "Everyone knows that if we do not succeed in a very short time, it will be a very long time before we have another opportunity."

The Uruguay Round is the name given to the long-stalled 6-year-old GATT trade talks involving 108 nations. A successful resolution could stir the world economy from its long downturn and eventually add about $100 billion to output. The negotiations have been blocked mainly by a festering dispute between the United States and France over agricultural subsidies.

Dunkel and officials close to him disclosed that the German government had wanted a trade accord at the Munich world economic summit meeting in July.

Texas marine park to lay off workers

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Sea World of Texas has announced it will lay off 56 full-time workers because of low attendance at the marine park this year.

The number of full-time employees will be reduced from 234 to 178, Robin D. Carson, executive vice president and general manager, said Wednesday. All departments will be affected, but Ms. Carson said the quality of animal care will not decline.

"While it is always a very painful decision to reduce staffing, it is a decision we had to make in order to reflect our current attendance patterns," Ms. Carson said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Troubled stock carries risk, but can pay off

By Bill Doyle

Q: A company I have been watching has made headlines by filing for bankruptcy and by disclosing other damaging news. The company's stock bottomed out at less than $2 per share.

Can someone speculate by buying the stock at such a low price and holding on to it?

Doyle

If the company turns around or is bought out by another company, I figure the stock price should increase.

Of course, the stock could become completely worthless. But, with the price so low, it seems to be worth the gamble. I would not bet the farm, but can this be done?

A: You can do what you have in mind. As long as a stock is traded on a stock exchange or in the over-the-counter market, its shares can be bought and sold.

Before you purchase stock in a bankrupt company, however, you had better be prepared for the high risk involved and use only "extra" money you can afford to lose. Your letter indicates you are ready for the unhappy eventuality of seeing your speculation wiped out. So I won't discourage you.

You're quite right about the purchase of stock in a bankrupt company being a gamble. But gambles sometimes pay off with big winnings.

A fair number of companies have come out of bankruptcy in good financial shape and the prices of their stocks have recovered nicely. However, many others have gone down the tube, making their stocks worthless.

Even when a company comes out of bankruptcy and operates successfully, its common stock can lose all value. That's because, in a bankruptcy reorganization process, bondholders and other creditors often end up owning the company, while stockholders — the previous owners — get nothing.

Q: During our working years, the company at which we were employed matched our contributions to a 401(k) retirement plan. Upon retirement, we left the funds in the plan intact. We now have about $250,000 in the plan, which utilizes a major New York City bank as trustee. We are currently realizing an 8.41 percent return.

We do not need the money now and had intended to begin withdrawals, as required, at age 70½, which is five years from now. However, we have been considering withdrawing all the funds now and investing in U.S. Treasury bonds and notes for security. How safe are the funds where they are?

A: Count them as very safe. Yours is a typical 401(k) plan. Because the bank acts as trustee, the plan's assets are removed from the control of the company for which you formerly worked. If that company goes bankrupt, your retirement nest egg would stay intact. Even if the bank fails, your money would be safe, because the assets in the plan are held in trust and are not part of the bank's assets. That means the bank's creditors could not get at the plan's assets.

With an 8.41 percent annual return, you have a very good thing going. You couldn't do nearly as well with Treasury securities. Even the longest-term Treasury bond, due to mature in the year 2022, now yields 7.63 percent.

Summed up: Keep what you have and enjoy your retirement.

Q: My father's estate included 50 shares of stock in a local corporation. At that time — 1974 — it was determined the stock had no monetary value. As executor of my father's estate, I endorsed the back of the stock certificate and gave it to an officer of that corporation. However, it seems no further action was taken.

Now, the corporation is in the process of liquidation. The corporation's records still show my late father as owner of the 50 shares. The stock now has a value of $15 a share.

Who owns the 50 shares — my father's estate or the corporation?

A: You should be able to make a good case for your father's estate, because ownership was not changed on the company's records. But, if that endorsed certificate surfaces, you'll probably lose out.

Maxwell's 24 second half points ignite Rockets over Hawks

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Vernon Maxwell scored 24 of his game-high 30 points in the second half and fueled a late fourth-quarter charge, leading the Houston Rockets to a 101-82 victory over Atlanta Wednesday night.

Houston, leading 83-77 with 6:39 to play, ran off nine straight points, seven of them by Maxwell, as the Rockets won their first game of the season after two losses to Seattle in Japan.

Hakeem Olajuwon added 26 points and got 17 rebounds and rookie starter Robert Horry scored 14 points.

The Hawks, who scored five points over the final 6:39, were led by Dominique Wilkins with 21 points and Travis Mays with 12 points.

The Rockets took a 39-30 lead with 6:07 to go in the second quarter for their biggest lead of the period. But the Hawks tied it at 43-43 on two free throws by Travis Mays with 2:29 left and both teams went scoreless the rest of the period.

The Rockets played without starting forward Otis Thorpe, sidelined with a bruised kidney.

NBA Roundup

Clippers 109, Kings 101

LOS ANGELES — Danny Manning had 21 points, 15 rebounds and nine assists as the Los Angeles Clippers won their first game of the season, beating Sacramento and handing the Kings their first loss.

Bucks 124, Mavericks 116

DALLAS — Blue Edwards led a third-quarter surge with 14 of his 31 points, lifting Milwaukee over winless Dallas.

Edwards converted five of six third-quarter shots as the Bucks won for the third time in four games. Derek Harper scored 21 points for the Mavericks, who have yets to win in three starts.

Brian Howard finished with a career-high 18 points for Dallas and Eric Murdock scored 16 points for Milwaukee.

Bulls 98, Pistons 96

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan's buzzer-beating basket from seven feet behind the 3-point line gave Chicago an overtime victory over Detroit.

Joe Dumars' 18-foot with 4.0 seconds left gave the Pistons a 96-95 lead. But after a timeout, Scottie Pippen inbounded the ball to Bill Cartwright, and he passed to Jordan, who finished with 37 points when his 30-footer swished the net as time expired.

Celtics 109, Hornets 99

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Xavier McDaniel scored 25 points and reserve Kevin Gamble 23 as Boston withstood Charlotte's fourth-quarter charge.

The Hornets were led by Johnny Newman with 24 points, Kendall Gill with 23 and former Odessa College star Larry Johnson with 15 points and 15 rebounds.

Pacers 120, 76ers 114

INDIANAPOLIS — Detlef Schrempf scored 22 of his 32 points in the first half and Reggie Miller finished with 28 points as Indiana won for the first time this season.

AREA: 3-4A title on line

team, but he gets about three-fourths of all they do. Our goal is to come out and play good team defense and try not to let them control the running game."

And Rankin is not the only team hoping to put on a defensive display.

"They have a few more weapons than we do," Bryant said. "We don't want to get into a scoring contest with them. We just have to step up and play good defense.

"Just beating Rankin at all is a real challenge. Yet if we don't beat them by 10 points it would be like a tie or worse. It wouldn't mean anything more than another 'W' in the win column."

Unless, of course, Wink folds its tent at home against Grandfalls, because a Wildcat loss coupled with a Garden City win — by any number of points — would send both the Bearkats and Red Devils into postseason play with 4-1 records.

And that's pretty much the scenario in Sweetwater, where both Mustang teams have already earned playoff berths. But this has become a stiff rivalry over the years, and neither team is likely to back off and rest on its playoff laurels.

Andrews used an Eric Langehenning field goal in the closing seconds to take a 13-10 win over Sweetwater last year, forcing 3-4A's co-championship.

"Our win against them was definitely an upset last year, and they probably remember it like the Alamo, Pearl Harbor and everything rolled into one," Stapler said. "You can be sure they've reminded their kids of it.

"Sweetwater is the team I sort of picked to win it (3-4A) this year, and I don't think anybody is capable of shutting them down. They have to make a lot of mistakes to get shut down."

Sweetwater, which opened the season with a 13-6 loss to Snyder, has won eight straight behind a running tandem nicknamed "Thunder and Lightning".

Chris Hines is "Thunder" and is 3-4As only thousand-yard rusher with 1,258 on 203 tries for a 6.2 average. Hines has 10.6 speed in the 100 it's that kind of speed that he's used to generate a league-best 18 TDs this year.

But it may be "Lightning" that most concerns Stapler. His name is James Moore, and he averages 11.8 yards a tote.

"I've seen a lot of backs play — backs like Curtis Dickey — but I've never seen another back do the things Moore can do," Stapler said. "He's dangerous on punts and kickoff returns, and he's probably even faster than Hines, but he doesn't run track.

"Still, if you worry too much about him, there's always Hines. Hines ran for 236 yards last week against Monahans, with Moore on the sidelines with a sprained ankle," he said. "Every time they snap the football it's a potential touchdown with the skill people they've got."

But Andrews will not be sneaking timidly into Sweetwater for this one. The Andrews Mustangs have some big-play personnel of their own.

Like Xavy Emiliano, whose 16 TDs rival those of Hines. And Emiliano, with 718 yards on the season, is one of the reasons Andrews leads the league in total offense with 389 yards a game, more than 50 a game over second place Sweetwater.

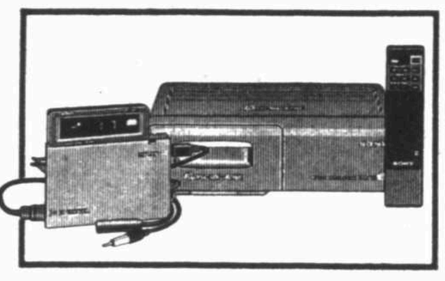

Jonathon McDonald has 640 yards and 12 TDs, and quarterback Bryan Lepard earns 7.3 yards a carry. Coming into the fray following an open date should also be to Andrews' advantage as the Mustangs used the week to heal their wounds and concentrate on six-week examinations.

Sweetwater played all the way into the semifinals last year, while Andrews only playoff game was an area round loss to Pampa.

Gianni Versace creates chic

By Trish Donnally
N.Y. Times News Service

Rebel designer Gianni Versace says the definition of chic is changing.

Since stars from the worlds of rock 'n' roll, Hollywood and fashion depend on him when they need a dose, he should know.

Look what the arbiter of taste has on his fashion plate these days — an upcoming trip to San Francisco where he'll lecture on design, a new exhibition in New York focusing on his work, the spring collection he recently unveiled in Milan that includes bell-bottoms, and a new mansion to decorate in Miami.

"Each of us has to try to express our personality from the way we dress and the way we live. The word chic is changing.

"Creating rules about fashion is so demode. It's the finish of fashion dictates. Today chic to me means nothing," says Versace.

The 45-year-old Italian designer's philosophy of design is "freedom. I don't have a message to give. My fashion speaks for itself.

"People can feel what they like. Fashion doesn't need a translation to talk to people. You see it, and you like it — or you don't."

AP Laserphoto

Italian designer Gianni Versace, along with his sister and business associate Donatella Versace Beck, stroll through an exhibit of their work at the Fashion Institute of Technology last week.

VERSACE'S DESIGN goal "is to make people happy, to understand today's life, to live with tradition, but break rules at the same time, (for) the past and the future."

When he presented his spring '93 ready-to-wear collection in Milan on October 8, he departed from some of his signature designs. Instead of opening his show with his wild prints that have been shamelessly copied throughout the fashion world, Versace explored new territory, beginning with a pure white statement in long, simple dresses with architectural cuts.

"I'm in the mood for change," says Versace.

He credits the tradition of haute couture and Cristobal Balenciaga as influencing him.

"But the attitude (nowadays) is completely different from what it was in the '60s. Life is so fast today.

"The root is not anymore chic women. They don't wear anymore the classic suit; that is passe. They wear a simple dress, a simple pullover or leggings with a jacket. The attitude is so easy and modern.

"Basically everything has changed and nothing has changed. It's just the way you put things together."

Though he typically shows bold accessories, Versace's trimmings are minimal for spring.

"I like a lot — or nothing. It's boring to have little pearls or a bracelet. Sometimes accessories are not necessary when you have a wonderful cut."

HIS CUT FOR upcoming seasons will be long.

"The basic fashion direction is long and lean, clean with some vents," Versace says. "I like surprising women who like to play with fashion, not be used by fashion."

The ruffled bell-bottoms Versace introduced in his fall haute couture collection in Paris this summer, and continues in his ready-to-wear collection for spring, are playful fashions he considers the next generation of leggings.

"We've had so many leggings in the last few years and women adore them. What I did was bell-bottoms with a bias cut. The fall (drape) of the bell-bottom is completely new. They are very tight like leggings, but flare on the bottom. In Paris, they're our No. 1 best-seller."

They will no doubt emerge in some future Versace fashion exhibition. But meanwhile, a free exhibition of the multitalented designer's work over the past 15 years will open at the Fashion Institute of Technology in New York with a private party on the evening of November 5, given by Anna Wintour of Vogue.

The doors will be open to the public the next day through January 9. At 15,000 square feet, this is the largest exhibition the academy has ever mounted.

FIVE AREAS of Versace's work: the theater, long dresses, embroidery and metal, prints, and leather, are highlighted. This display has previously been mounted in Milan, Italy; Kobe, Japan; and Munich, Germany.

"I don't like to think of it as a retrospective. I'm still on my way to completing my work," says Versace, who recently opened a shop in San Francisco with his lower-priced collection, Versus, which is an evolution in another direction.

In New York, Versace visited the Henri Matisse exhibit at the Museum of Modern Art and that of painter Francesco Clemente in Soho. Wednesday, he flew to Miami for discussions with his interior designer about his new digs at South Beach, a mansion that housed 20 tenants before he bought it. Versace says his new home on Ocean Drive will look "like an Italian coming to America. It will be an expression that is a little Cuban and a little exotic with very classical Italian furniture."

The ever-creative Versace is also discussing costume designs for a Joffrey Ballet piece with music by Prince, called "Billboard."

Of the haute couture collection he will unveil in Paris in January, Versace says, "I'm going in the same direction, to clean out and to refine the future classics. ... The classics are so boring and so deja vu. A true designer has to represent the age he lives in."

Program honors teen volunteers

Staff report

Last year, over 60 percent of American teenagers participated in some form of volunteer activity. The Noxzema Extraordinary Teen Awards (NETA) were created to reward the efforts of these remarkable young people who are dedicated to improving the world around them. This year, the NETA program will recognize outstanding teen volunteers from across the United States, awarding cash prizes of over $30,000.

All junior and senior high school students are eligible to enter the NETA program. The individual teen catefory will honor students who have single-handedly developed and implemented a volunteer project or have made a difference in school or in local, national or international communities through volunteer efforts. The teen group category will recogniae outstanding junior and senior high school groups who have conceived and implemented volunteer projects benefiting their schools or communities.

In the individual teen category, $1,500 cash prizes will be awarded to five finalists. One teen will be named the grand-prize winner and receive a $2,500 cash prize and a $2,500 grant to his or her favorite cause or project. In the group category, winners from all 50 states and the District of Columbia will receive certificates of honorable mention; five regional finalist groups will be selected to receive $2,500 for their project or cause. The group selected as the grand-prize winner will receive $5,000 for its cause, and a $5,000 grant for its school.

"The environment, homelessness, illiteracy and hundreds of other issues are facing today's teenagers," said Mike Yearling, spokesperson for Noxzema. "We believe that the Noxzema Extraordinary Teen Awards program can give them the tools they need to work for change."

To get involved, students should contact their school guidance counselors or call 1-800-488-7288 to enter themselves, their volunteer group or a friend in the NETA program.

Styles from upcoming movie are something to sink your teeth into

By Anne-Marie Schiro
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Beware. "Bram Stoker's Dracula," the movie, is opening here Friday the 13th, but it's already stopping traffic on West 34th Street. Shoppers and strollers at Macy's have stopped dead to ogle the store windows filled with mannequins dressed in costumes from the film in appropriately grisly settings.

Along with the actual costumes, designed by Eiko Ishioka, are five Dracula-inspired evening outfits by fashion designers.

A mannequin in Byron Lars' coffinlike bustier complete with bronze handles on the hips is given the evil eye by three of Dracula's brides in tattered costumes.

In another window, Dracula, in a natty gray suit and top hat, threatens a mannequin that is draped over a baptismal font wearing a black dress adorned with crosses by Coviello & Erickson. (Aren't crosses supposed to protect you from vampires?)

Those and the cross-and-dagger-bedecked outfits by Anna Sui, Zang Toi and Van Buren can be ordered through Macy's Buy Appointment.

The store also has a Dracula boutique, with T-shirts, ties, vests, bustiers and vampirish jewelry, including ruby-paved lips with rhinestone fangs. Prices range from $15 to $900.

The tie-in between the film and the products was orchestrated by Terry Melville Enterprises, a Los Angeles marketing company.

"Movie products used to be just T-shirts and baseball caps," Ms. Melville said last week. "I'm putting style, sparkle and magic into licensed products."

So what are you wearing when you go to see the movie?

Organization offers support to women seeking sobriety

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Three years ago, you published a letter from a woman who signed herself "Sober and Happy." She wanted to publicize the organization Women for Sobriety.

Van Buren

That letter prompted thousands of women to write to us about their alcohol addiction. Many joined our non-profit group, and are now leading sober, happy lives.

Abby, there is still a stigma attached to women alcoholics. Will you please run that letter again? — ANTOINETTE PABIS-MOCK, DIRECTOR, WOMEN FOR SOBRIETY INC.

DEAR ANTOINETTE: Yes. And here it is:

DEAR ABBY: Whenever a woman writes about her drinking problem, you recommend that she seek help from Alcoholics Anonymous, which is a wonderful organization. But AA doesn't work for everyone. I speak from experience. I attended a few meetings and left feeling depressed and alone. Then I heard about a group for women called Women for Sobriety. They have weekly meetings, so I attended one. I felt so at home and was able to open up with them far more easily than in the AA group with both men and women.

I have had a happy sobriety for six years now. Women for Sobriety concentrates on mind power, making the best of the present instead of dwelling on the past. Interested women can write for information to: W.F.S. Inc., P.O. Box 618, Quakertown, Pa. 18951. Please enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope, as this is a nonprofit organization. — SOBER AND HAPPY

DEAR ABBY: I respect your advice, and have a question for you. I feel strongly that with all the beautiful, warm, synthetic fabrics available today, there is no reason to wear the fur of an animal. To me, it symbolizes cruelty and selfishness. However, I generally keep this opinion to myself, and I doubt that even my closest friends are aware of my feelings.

My husband and I are planning a cocktail party before a formal event, and I am sure that some of our guests will show up wearing fur. What my guests choose to wear is their own business, but I will not allow anyone who is wearing fur to be a guest in my home. How should I make my guests aware of this? — KATE BARRY, NEWPORT NEWS, VA.

DEAR KATE: I suggest that you telephone your guests in advance and tell them.

It is highly unusual for a woman who is passionately opposed to wearing fur to keep this fact from her closest friends. An activist for any cause is totally ineffective unless he or she speaks out at every opportunity. (A "closet activist" is an oxymoron.)

Please, warn your guests in advance that fur-wearing folks are not welcome — or fur will fly!

DEAR ABBY: I hope you can help me with my problem. I have been dating this guy for five months. I love him very much and I know he loves me. He calls me every night when we are not together, and we usually spend the weekends together. Here's the problem: He lived with a woman for six years and they have three children together. They are 5½, 3 and 2 years old. He loves his kids, but he will not tell their mother (his ex-girlfriend) that he is in love with someone else so she should go on with her life and leave him alone. Everyone who knows us thinks that he should tell her. It's really making me feel like I am "the other woman" even though I'm not.

What should I do? — FEELING LIKE "THE OTHER WOMAN"

DEAR FEELING: You "feel" like "the other woman" because you are the other woman.

He may love you, but he has a moral obligation to the mother of his three children — with whom he lived for six years!

I think you should say goodbye to this man, for your sake, his sake and the sake of his three children.

Missing manners is sign of the times

By Erma Bombeck

I don't know Miss Manners personally, but she is a voice in the wilderness crying out to an audience who can't hear her because they've never been taught to be quiet while someone else is talking.

Bombeck

Courtesy and civility have become as obsolete in our society as carbon paper and coal.

Television commercials feature disgusting diners who stuff fajitas in their mouths and start talking. Cereal eaters shovel spoonfuls of cereal in their mouths as the milk drips down their chins.

Good manners behind the wheel of a car are rare moments indeed. I witnessed a scene one afternoon where a car passed another one whose driver became so incensed he increased his speed and tailgated him. As he passed he swerved like he was going to hit him and used the only limited vocabulary at his disposal: finger signals. When I told the story, someone said, "He was lucky; he didn't get shot."

I haven't finished with my kids yet. They still need work. It's an ongoing challenge. I'm still teaching manners. I used to have nightmares that as my son was receiving the Nobel Prize for Literature, I would crawl onto the stage on my hands and knees and tug at his pant leg and whisper, "Now, what do you say to the nice man?" and he would say, "Oh yeah, thanks."

The social grace that seems to have disappeared from the earth is the thank-you note. I've been tempted from time to time to call up a graduate for whom I have sprung $30 for a pen and say: "Forgive me, I thought you knew what a pen was for. Now I see it is useless. Please return it, along with the card. I'll read it to you."

Something has to happen before children can be taught good manners. Their parents have to know what they are before they are able to teach them.

Anyone who talks during a movie or hums the overture to a musical should be forced to go to manners school or have his driver's license revoked.

People who dial the wrong phone number and instead of apologizing or checking the number, hang up in your ear, should do two years of community service in a child care facility.

People who park in handicapped spots when they're not handicapped or fire lanes or areas that block the flow of traffic should be put away.

For those of you who have read this far, I thank you.

For those who are nodding and saying, "Isn't that the truth?" I say, "You're welcome."

Spring styles show sheer look

By Trish Donnally
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Spring '93 will be remembered as the season grunge got glorified, luncheon suits with short skirts hit the dust, and sheer, long, layers swept into fashion.

A new wave of softness is making structured, authoritative clothes look amazingly uptight, and you won't believe how sheer some of the clothes are.

"The jacket is there, but it's one of many layers," said Joan Kaner, senior vice president and fashion director of Neiman-Marcus. "The season is about clothes that move gracefully and flow around the body. Suddenly you find yourself wanting a blouse with a frill at the neck and sleeves, and pants that move."

The collection Donna Karan showed Friday typified that feeling. Layering flowing navy maxivests, white poet's blouses with big ruffled collars and navy bell-bottoms or flares, Karan captured the feeling for spring.

Though most of Karan's fabrics were featherweight, few were so thin as to be transparent, as was the surprising case in many collections last week.

Where are the fashion police when you need them? The many sheer tunics, dresses and blouses shown, most often without bras beneath, and sometimes with color-coordinated G-strings, will get a nod of approval — from Berkeley nudists. And they should be a boon to the lingerie business as women scramble to find foundations — body suits, slips, G-strings and brassieres. But for the average American woman, this is a shocking development.

EVEN HELEN Gurley Brown was caught off guard. "I can't decide what I think. Watching the Calvin Klein show this morning, I thought at first it was astonishing. There must have been 12 models bare-breasted. Usually you might have one, and everyone gasps, but this was so casual. I eventually got over my initial shock," Brown, the editor of Cosmopolitan, said.

Ivana Trump witnessed the transparency trend at several shows during the week. What did she think?

"We're all going to see it, buy it, and say, 'Line it.' Husbands might love it — on some other woman," she said, already wearing an up-to-the minute sheer gray Donna Karan body suit under a gray jacket with a high-slit, long skirt. "But I would not take off the jacket and have (only) a sheer blouse. I'm just not that kind of girl. You always have to keep something to the imagination."

AP Laserphoto

This jacket and skirt ensemble is part of Isaac Mizrahi's spring 1993 collection, shown recently in New York.

DESIGNERS CLEARLY feel different. Randolph Duke and Anna Sui, whose collections were the worst of the week, showed things that were so revealing, they even had the jaded fashion crowd doing double-takes.

Aside from sheer dresses, Duke showed lilac chiffon bell-bottoms, black crocheted fishtail dresses with bell sleeves that looked even worse in white, and dresses with foot-wide doilies stuck on them. In the end, Duke went on a fringe binge and forgot to come up for air.

Looking beyond the glitter eye shadow and lip gloss in Sui's show, there was a whole lot to be seen, not much of it worth the effort. But among the rainbow striped grunge garb, bell-bottoms, halter tops and cheongsams, what left the deepest impression were sheer granny dresses with G-strings to match. They left nothing, as Ivana advises, to the imagination.

Sui, it should be mentioned, deserves the blame for bringing back '70s (lack of) style. Her fall collection ushered in the trend that has hit Seventh Avenue like an avalanche.

Marc Jacobs of Perry Ellis blended some '70s influences with rock 'n' roll for fall but managed to make it modern. For spring, however, he, like many others, is in a retro rut. His spring look, which is inspired by grunge rock music, looks like thrift-shop chic that has been designer-ized.

FASHION PURISTS, like the mode mavens at Vogue, would probably argue Jacobs' was the best collection of the season, and it was a milestone show that brings grunge to the fashion forefront. It will no doubt set the tone for junior manufacturers who will knock off the plaid shirts, shrunken sweaters and many bell-bottoms, and it will appeal to kids who like wearing nose rings and pierced earrings in triplicate, as some of his models did. But at $250 for a crocheted sweater, $295 for a long-sleeve silk plaid shirt, and $900 for lace bell-bottoms, looking grungy doesn't come cheap.

Todd Oldham had the most exciting show of the season, and the energy it exuded left many people feeling high. He stuck to his vision, showing skirts of many lengths in an imaginative collection with a lighthearted country fair theme.

Kudos to Geoffrey Beene, too, for bypassing the runway and giving an up-close and fascinating look at his fashion masterpieces. Taking over a rehearsal studio, he displayed photos and sketches of ballet dancers in his designs, meant to show these are clothes you can move in. Samples were displayed on dress forms, which let the audience see and appreciate the intricate workmanship and whisper-weight fabrics.

But Ralph Lauren, good old Ralph, showed the best clothes of the season. He transformed the super-soft feeling into wearable clothes that don't make women look like waifs.

ISAAC MIZRAHI'S and Byron Lars' collections fell midway between the best and the worst. The highlight of Lars' insect-inspired collection was the metamorphosis of a 6-foot-tall cottony cocoon, whose occupant wiggled, squirmed and worked her way out one firm, long, shapely leg at a time. Other than that, Lars concentrated on snug-fitting safari dresses, skirts and jackets in beige and white, tossing in white mosquito-net veils over hats, and cargo pockets on halter bras.

This guy has given us so much original design in the first few years of his career that for him to be caught up in very constructed looks in a season of fluidity seemed off kilter.

Mizrahi made merry with structured looks too, among them straight, tight skirts that hit just below the knee and some of the only jackets fit for an executive that were seen all week. In a season when so many designers went bonkers with midriff-baring tops, Mizrahi's sleeveless, beige burlap cropped top banded in black velvet with a matching cropped jacket and floral chiffon pajama pants was a winner. But the designer ended his show on a mad note, showing a flurry of super-sheer white bell-bottoms that revealed white lace G-strings beneath, white feather vests and white eyelet pants or suits. It was Frederick's of Hollywood hits downtown Manhattan.

THROUGHOUT THE week, Gianni Versace's voice echoed up and down Seventh Avenue as designers — Louis Dell'Olio of Anne Klein for one — integrated black straps on clothes reminiscent of the Italian designer's bondage collection. (Versace opened an exhilarating exhibition of his work, which cost almost $1 million to mount at the Fashion Institute of Technology and is free and open to the public until Jan. 9, 1993.)

As four fashion editors caught in traffic for 45 minutes chatted about the collections and the bondage overtones, the transparent fabrics and visible G-strings, the burly New York cab driver, who had been silent throughout the ride, suddenly interrupted and said, "Let's get back to the bondage."

Pageant accepting applications

Staff report

Applications for participation in the 10th annual Miss Texas American Coed Pageant, to be presented in Dallas, are now being accepted. Girls aged 8-19 are invited to enter.

The pageant's three age divisions are: coed, 16-19; teen, 13-15; and preteen, 8-12. Last year more than $750,000 in cash awards, prizes and scholarships were presented nationwide.

Winner of the coed pageant will receive an all-expense paid trip to Hawaii to compete in the national pageant. Winners of the teen and preteen divisions will receive trips for two to Disneyworld and to Tampa to compete in their national pageants.

For applications and more information contact: American Coed Pageants, 10902 Crabapple Road, Suite 101, Rosewll, Ga. 30075, or call 1-800-937-COED.

Police arrest teens in sniper attack

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Police investigating a string of attacks on motorists announced the arrests Wednesday of two teen-agers believed involved in one shooting.

Jacksonville Sheriff Jim McMillan said the two boys, ages 16 and 17, fired a weapon from a moving vehicle into the car of Debra Lewis. The bullet hit her in the ear and lodged in her jaw.

The two were charged with attempted murder.

"I'm shocked it was kids, but I'm happy someone was caught," Mrs. Lewis said. "It will help me sleep a little bit easier." The 38-year-old woman still can't hear out of her left ear because of the attack, but went back to work part-time last week.

The July 29 attack on Interstate 295 was one of more than 30 along the highway in recent months in which motorists were shot at or had rocks or heavy objects hurled at their cars. One man was killed July 4 when he lost control of his car after it was hit by a piece of concrete.

Interstate 295 is a major gateway to tourists visiting Florida from the north, and the attacks had prompted the American Automobile Association to issue a warning to avoid the highway. About 150 Florida National Guardsmen have been stationed there to protect travelers.

The 16-year-old had been charged in August with conspiracy to shoot into a vehicle in another Interstate 295 incident, McMillan said, but didn't elaborate.

The two, whose names weren't released, may have also been involved in other attacks, McMillan said, although he added that police were still seeking other suspects.

"I think it is premature to say we've solved the problem out there," he said.

Brig. Gen. Richard Kapps said the National Guard would continue to patrol the area.

Both teen-agers belong to a gang called English Estates Posse, which is active in a residential area near the highway, McMillan said.

Authorities said they were investigating whether the shooting was linked to a gang initiation ceremony.

The 16-year-old was arrested Wednesday and the 17-year-old was arrested Tuesday night, McMillan said.

Foxfire founder pleads guilty to assualt

CLAYTON, Ga. (AP) — The former national teacher of the year who founded the innovative Foxfire educational project was sentenced to a year in prison Wednesday after pleading guilty to molesting a 10-year-old boy.

Wigginton

After he was indicted in September, Eliot Wigginton, 49, had pleaded innocent and said the charges were concocted to "take advantage of Foxfire's visibility." His trial was to begin next week.

Superior Court Judge Robert Struble on Wednesday imposed a 20-year sentence on the educator, with one year to serve and the rest on probation. He also fined Wigginton $10,000 and ordered him to undergo mental health testing and treatment and to provide such treatment for the boy.

The judge said Wigginton must resign from teaching and refrain from any contact with children under age 18 for the duration of his sentence.

Thousands of students have graduated from Wigginton's Foxfire program, which he founded in 1966 in Rabun Gap. The program, designed to get students in Appalachia interested in learning, earned Wigginton national teacher of the year for 1987.

The indictment alleged Wigginton fondled the boy in May during an overnight visit. Wigginton had claimed he simply put the child to bed and removed his pants and shoes after the youngster had fallen asleep on his floor. Earlier in the day, the boy had attended the annual Foxfire picnic.

"It is exceptionally difficult for us to reconcile the visible accomplishments of Mr. Wigginton in the classroom with the hidden wrongdoing he has now admitted," said James K. Hasson Jr., chairman of the board of directors of the Foxfire Fund Inc.

Hasson added that the project would continue.

A magazine on mountain folklife written by Foxfire students led to a series of books. The first, "The Foxfire Book," sold 4 million copies.

Royalties from the 16 books pay for scholarships for program graduates and operate the Foxfire Center, which has offices in nearby Mountain City. The center organizes seminars for teachers interested in adapting Foxfire — named for a luminous lichen — to their classes.

Man's death points to police violence

DETROIT (AP) — At the intersection of Warren and 23rd, where empty lots and boarded buildings still bear witness to the riots of the 1960s, there's a new focal point: the police violence of the 1990s.

On a wall adorned by flowers is a plastic-covered picture of Malice Green, a 35-year-old man beaten to death by police last week.

It has become a gathering point for neighborhood residents who come to see the spot where Green died, to see where gravel has been spread to hide the blood stains.

"I can't believe this is happening in my city," Carrie Washington, a mother of three grown children, said in frustration. "The police used to be our friends."

The death of the black motorist at the hands of a racially mixed group of police has roiled this city, noted for its integrated, neighborhood-based policing.

The case resounds with disquieting echoes of the Rodney King case. But those familiar with Detroit's police say Malice Green's death points to something else: an undermanned force lacking the money or leadership to weed out "thumpers," the violent cops of both races.

Green, an unemployed father of five, died from head injuries in a fracas Thursday with police.

Several hundred people, most of whom had never met Green, trickled into a Detroit funeral home for a wake Wednesday. Funeral services were scheduled Thursday.

While no official details have been released, witnesses say the confrontation began as Green dropped off a friend near a boarded-up hair salon suspected to be a crack house.

Two plainclothes officers in a "power unit," an unmarked car assigned to high crime areas, confronted Green. Witnesses said police began beating him when he refused to drop something in his hand, identified variously as a wallet, a piece of paper or drugs.

Other officers arrived. Lee Hardy, an emergency medical technician flagged down by police, told The Detroit News he saw four white officers kick Green in the chest and beat his head, arms and hands with a flashlight.

Six white officers and a black supervisor were suspended. Mayor Coleman Young and Police Chief Stanley Knox, both black, decried Green's death — Young going as far as to call it murder.

Residents of Green's neighborhood huddled under umbrellas and sheltered flickering candles in their hands Tuesday night during a vigil at the death scene.

"I'm surprised they went that far," Washington said of the police. "They used to come to the house and tell us about our kids. They used to run track with them."

But others talked of mounting police harassment by black and white officers — in particular white plainclothes officers Larry Nevers and Walter Budzyn.

Nevers, 52, was a neighborhood fixture for the past two decades. Local residents called him "Starsky," after the flamboyant, streetwise television cop.

Budzyn, 42, was named an Officer of the Year by his union in 1990, for making 31 arrests and recovering six stolen cars.

But the two officers had other records: 25 citizen complaints and five lawsuits.

On Saturday, Nevers told the Detroit Free Press, "I must have done something wrong. A guy died," but added, "nobody knows what it's like out there."

Budzyn has declined to comment.

READ WHAT THESE REPUTABLE AUTOMOTIVE PUBLICATIONS SAY ABOUT THE NEW MAZDA CARS AND TRUCKS

MAZDA 323

"It's hard to beat the 323 in terms of pure per-dollar value." Motor Trend – November 1991

"The 323 earned a '9' in quality scoring, as everything about the car – its tight body structure, freedom from squeaks and rattles, smooth controls – feels high grade." Car and Driver – July 1992

MAZDA PROTEGE

"A slick and tidy four-door sedan that runs almost like crazy." Car and Driver – February 1991

"This little car has a lot of good moves, and it thrives on hard driving." Car and Driver – February 1991

MAZDA 626

"The six-cylinder is smooth running, free revving, and torquey – and it pays attention to throttle orders." Automobile – April 1992

"With the 626's elegant styling, comfortable, roomy interior, exemplary road manners, and quick V6 engine, the view from here is that the New Mazda has produced another winner." Motor Trend – June 1992

MAZDA 929

"This beauty looks to have taken a long time dressing and making up before she went out." Car and Driver – February 1992

"If the 929 is a measure of what Mazda can do with a big car, the competition better watch out." Road & Track 1992 Complete Car Buyer's Guide

MAZDA MX-3

"Quite simply, Mazda's first shot at the small specialty coupe market has upped the ante." Road & Track – September 1991

"Clearly the MX-3, with its ABS and tiny-but-powerful V6 offers what others don't, and the others could be in trouble." Road & Track 1992 Complete Car Buyer's Guide

Winner of "Bonsai GT" comparison test by Car and Driver – 1991

MAZDA MX-6

"The MX-6 is every bit as fun to drive as it looks." Motor Trend – May 1992

"It's beginning to look like the new Mazda will take a back seat to no company." AutoWeek – April 20, 1992

One of Automobile's "Best Cars for $25,000 or Less" – September 1992

MAZDA MIATA

"... the littlest Mazda has a special appeal that will be immediately apparent to longtime sports car fans." Road & Track 1992 Sports & GT Cars

Named 1992 "All-Star" by Automobile

Named to "Ten Best" list by Car and Driver – 1991 and 1992

MAZDA RX-7

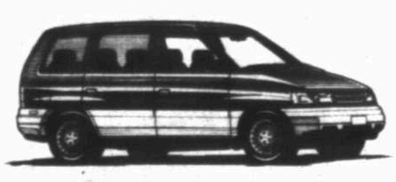

"It carves through canyons like a mean outside linebacker on a pass rush." Motor Trend – December 1991

"Wow! Just great. Light. Balanced. Fast. Lithe. Connected to the road." Road & Track – March 1992

"This is a lean automobile, with its skin pulled tight as a bubble pack around two passengers." Car and Driver – February 1992

MAZDA MPV

"... the MPV is capable of almost any task in various weather conditions." Motor Trend Truck & Van Buyer's Guide – 1992

Named "Best Minivan" in "Top Ten Import Car Buys for 1992" by Motor Trend

MAZDA NAVAJO

"In terms of performance, visibility and driving comfort, the vehicle was exemplary." San Jose Mercury News, reprinted in the Detroit Free Press – January 30, 1992

"So good is the Navajo as an all-around transportation device and off-road play machine ..." Road & Track Truck & Van Buyer's Guide – 1992

MAZDA TRUCK

"... a good, reliable, economical compact truck for a multitude of jobs from hauling work tools to taking mom to the shopping center." MotorTrend Truck & Van Buyer's Guide – 1992

"The ergonomics are excellent." Popular Mechanics – February 1989
