May broaden Soviet embargo

Reagan promises no revenge against Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) — In power only 10 days, President Reagan is not ready to spell out a new policy toward Iran, except to rule out revenge, or to plunge into decisions on a broad sweep of domestic problems.

At his first news conference since moving into the White House, Reagan refused to take a stand Thursday on whether he will abolish draft registration, lift the partial grain embargo against the Soviet Union or call for his proposed tax cuts to be retroactive to Jan. 1.

Instead, he hinted he might consider extending the embargo to items other than farm goods. He accused Moscow of using detente as a "one-way street" to attain its aims and, in unusually harsh language, said Soviet leaders reserve "the right to commit any crime, to lie, to cheat, in order to attain that."

Reagan said his first days in office have been devoted to Cabinet meetings on economic proposals, and that decisions on other matters will be made "down the road some place."

While saying his administration is still studying future policy toward Iran, Reagan declared, "I'm certainly not thinking of revenge and I don't know whether reconciliation would be possible with the present government, or absence of a government, in Iran."

At another point, however, he said: "Now, I think that any country would want to help another if they really showed an intent to have a government that would abide by international law and do what they could to help them in that regard. But until such a thing appears apparent there, I don't know that there's anything we can do."

He said the United States "will honor the obligations" of the agreement leading to freedom of the American hostages after 444 days' captivity. He added, however, that the most important obligations already have been carried out.

Asked why he ruled out a policy of revenge, in view of his pledge Tuesday for swift retribution in future terrorist attacks on U.S. diplomats, Reagan replied:

"What good would just revenge do and what form would that take? I don't think revenge is worthy of us. On the other hand, I don't think we should act as if this never happened."

Reagan urged Americans to "think long and hard before they travel to Iran because we don't think their safety can be guaranteed there."

Any businessmen eager to deal with Iran should consult "by long distance," the president quipped, because "we wouldn't want to go back to having just a different cast of characters but the same show going on."

Reagan seemed at ease and mixed jokes with his answers during the half-hour question-and-answer session. Under a new set of groundrules set by the White House staff, reporters sought the president's attention by raising their hands in silence, instead of jumping from their seats and shouting, "Mr. President."

On Capitol Hill, reaction to the new president's debut before the press was slow in coming.

House Minority Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois said he found it "refreshing" that Reagan generally avoided specific responses. However, Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, expressed disappointment at the scarcity of details.

In an opening statement, Reagan announced he was abolishing the Council on Wage and Price Stability which administered the voluntary wage and price guidelines established by former President Carter. "This council has been a failure," Reagan declared.

Governor to sign

Legislature sends Clements 5.1 percent pay raise bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Legislators have made "Blue Monday" brighter for state employees by approving a 5.1 percent pay raise, with a $50-a-month minimum for 35,000 lower-paid employees.

Gov. Bill Clements' signature today was all that was needed to make the $86.8 million pay raise effective by Monday.

Late Thursday, Clements announced at a news conference that the measure was exactly what he wanted in a state pay bill and said he intends to sign it.

"That was the concept I had in mind originally with Lt. Gov. (Bill) Hobby and Speaker (Bill) Clayton," the governor said of the legislation.

State employees will see the raise in the paychecks they receive at the end of February.

What Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, called a "compromise to a compromise" was approved by both the House and Senate on Thursday. The Senate vote to accept a proposal negotiated by a 10-member committee was 27-0. The House vote was 124-0.

Both houses responded to Clements' veto threat by accepting a proposal that was $23.5 million less than one originally adopted by the Senate and nearly $7 million under what the House had recommended.

Doggett, whose district includes thousands of state employees, said Clements had adopted a "completely unyielding position" against anything more than a 5.1 percent raise with a $50 minimum.

Speaker Bill Clayton said he and Lt. Gov. Bill Clements had met with the governor a week ago, and "We were lucky to get him up to 5.1 percent." The governor originally proposed a 3.4 percent hike, with no minimum increase, which would have cost $54.5 million.

Clayton said the 5.1 percent raise would be subtracted from a 14.3 percent increase recommended for September.

Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston, asked Rep. Gerald Hill, D-Austin, "Don't you think the House and Senate are succumbing to government by executive fiat instead of the Legislature standing up and doing what it thinks is in the best interest of the people?"

"I agree," Hill replied.

Doggett, Hill and Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, were the only holdouts in a 7-3 conference committee vote on the compromise negotiated between the House and Senate. The three all wanted a larger pay hike.

Immediate pay raise for state employees supported by Shaw

Larry Don Shaw, state representative from Big Spring, said Thursday he was strongly in favor of an immediate pay raise for state employees.

"I think that is the general concensus (to go with the 5.1 percent increase)," Shaw told a Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau reporter. "We wanted much more, but we were truly concerned that they (the state employees) get something in their pockets now.

"They needed much more. I would have liked to see them get more but the most important thing is that they get something as soon as possible. The emergency status really pertains here."

Shaw said he preferred the 6.8 percent increase passed Monday in the House.

"That's what I would have liked," he added. "It's not like a long term thing. The emergency raise only lasts until September. I feel like the state employees need it. I saw this morning where gasoline might go up a nickel a gallon.

"And it's costing the state money (the turnover that calls for retraining). I think if you put in a fair day's work, you ought to be paid a fair wage."

Thursday was Shaw's 28th birthday anniversary. He sported a gift boutonniere and was about to tear into a celibratory cigar as he talked.

McEwen candidate for city council

Russ McEwen, a native of Big Spring has announced he will be a candidate for the office of city councilman in the April 4 election.

McEwen will seek the Place 4 seat being vacated by Larry Miller, who announced earlier this week he was stepping down after one term in office.

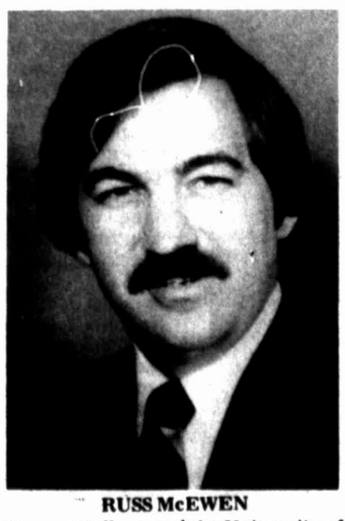

McEwen is the second man to announce he would seek a position on the council. The other is Jack Y. Smith, the Place 3 incumbent. Two positions are open on the council.

McEwen serves on the boards of the United Way, the YMCA and the First Christian Church. At the present time, he is chairman of the YMCA membership drive, the Howard County United Way drive and the First Christian Church board.

He has also served as chairman for the Citizens for a Better Big Spring, which promoted passage of capital improvements program last year.

In making known his decision to run, McEwen said he simply wishes to be presented with the opportunity to serve the citizens of Big Spring at a time the city is showing the potential for excellent growth.

McEwen, a graduate of the local high school, later graduated from Howard College and the University of Texas.

RUSS McEWEN

He is married to the former Lara Parks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wendal Parks of Big Spring. They have three children, Torbin, Kisa and Drew. The family makes its home at 2207 Morrison St.

Hostages get New York welcome

NEW YORK (AP) — A group of liberated hostages rode in a path of glory today, greeted on the streets of New York by hundreds of thousands of their jubilant, flag-waving countrymen and a blizzard of ticker tape and confetti rivaling the reception given this nation's greatest heroes.

Following a night of champagne, fancy dining and theater-going, 22 former hostages began a ticker-tape parade through Manhattan in a triumphant procession that recalled the return of Charles A. Lindbergh and the end of World War II.

Leading the procession in a 1952 Chrysler convertible, their fists raised in victory salutes, were ex-captive Moorhead Kennedy Jr., a former New Yorker, and Mayor Edward I. Koch. Members of the state's congressional delegation and state legislators marched in file.

Bands played rousing patriotic music as the city officials and their guests ploughed through the tons of waste paper wafting down from lower Manhattan skyscrapers, enough ticker tape to stretch to Boston and back.

The yellow tape began streaming from the buildings even before the parade began, with a brisk breeze blowing it into trees in Battery Park, festooning the branches with yellow.

Hundreds of thousands of people jammed the parade route and City Hall Plaza. Subway trains headed south to the parade area were packed, and Battery Park was filled with people and American flags. Two Fire Department aerial ladders formed an arch for the parade to pass under, with six large American flags strung between.

A fireboat in the harbor, between the park and the Statue of Liberty, shot red, white and blue water high into the air.

"It's great. It's wonderful. Only New York could do this," said former hostage Michael Howland.

"This is very glamorous," said former hostage Moorhead Kennedy as he surveyed New York's skyline from Windows on the World, a posh restaurant on the 107th floor of the World Trade Center.

Earlier, nearly a dozen former captives joined more than 2,000 people at a prayer service at the National Cathedral in Washington, D.C.

Colorado City school trustees, contractor discuss settlement

COLORADO CITY (SC) — Colorado City school trustees are waiting for an answer from contractor John Drummond on a possible settlement at Kelly Elementary School.

Drummond had done the air conditioning job for the school which extended past the time the job was to have completed. The school district still owes $12,496 for work on the $57,272 project but, with the penalty assessed for exceeding the time limit the district claims it owes only $8,833.46, however, on a 4-1 vote the board offered to settle with the contractor for $10,000.

Drummond said he would have to study the proposed settlement.

In other business during Thursday's meeting, Supt. Charlie Uselton said the "Texas Parks and Wildlife Department has approved an allocation of $27,440 for two tennis courts, which would be constructed adjacent to the high school courts. The funding is contingent upon final approval by the Heritage Conservation and Recreation Service in Albuquerque, N.M.

The architectural firm of Huckaby and Donham is obtaining estimates on building the court.

The trustees wrapped up their meeting Thursday by calling an executive session in which grading at the Middle School was discussed. No action was taken after the board resumed its open meeting.

Man found in car trunks

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — For four days, Steve Braman knew only darkness, the heat of the midday sun and the piercing cold of night, he told Corpus Christi police.

Convinced he might die, he said, he scribbled a note, bidding farewell to his girlfriend.

Braman's ordeal ended Thursday in Corpus Christi when a maintenance man at a local motor lodge heard strange noises coming from the locked trunk of a late model Oldsmobile sedan. He called police after he knocked on the trunk and somebody knocked back.

Braman, a 26-year-old manager of a grocery store in North Charleston, S.C., emerged from the trunk pale, unshaven and weak. He said he had eaten only a hamburger since Monday.

No Cubans in East Texas

DALLAS (AP) — An Illinois organization has decided against relocating Cuban refugees to seven East Texas counties because of strenuous objections from area residents.

World Relief Organization issued a statement Thursday from its Wheaton office, saying "the communities indicated they were not in favor of the resettlement" of the 5,800 refugees still at Fort Chaffee, Ark.

The statement noted the organization resettled a group of Cubans in Haltom City last fall.

"After this experience, which was very favorable, we were asked again for help through the citizenry of East Texas."

The Justice Department contacted key East Texas public officials about the proposed relocation, and the officials were told there was a possibility as many as 2,000 Cubans would be sent to the area if jobs and housing could be found.

Hostage was prepared to die

DALLAS (AP) — Marine Sgt. Johnny McKeel Jr. said today he was prepared to go through with a Feb. 12 escape plan formed by some of the hostages in Iran, even though he knew it probably wouldn't succeed.

"We were waiting ... to see what the outcome of the elections were. If nothing was solved at that time, we had planned on trying to make an escape. We'd been planning this for about four months," the former hostage said in an interview on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

At the last place he was held, "there were about four or five guards out in the hall guarding us. We were just planning on trying to overpower them and try to get out," he said from WFAA-TV's studio here.

Asked if the Marines planning the escape were prepared to die, McKeel said, "Yes, we were."

McKeel, of Balch Springs, said he made that decision on Christmas 1979.

Israelis stage air strikes

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Palestinian guerrilla rockets wounded three more Israelis today in the northern border town of Kiryat Shmona and Israeli artillery returned the fire across the southern Lebanon frontier, the Tel Aviv command said.

In Beirut, Lebanese officials said Israeli reconnaissance jets crossed the cloud-shrouded frontier in apparent preparation for new air attacks.

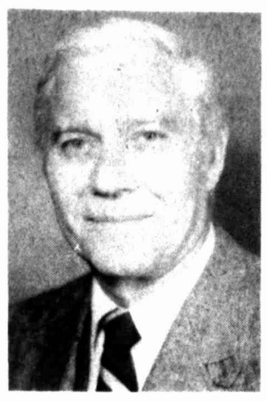

Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization confirmed the Israeli shelling, but made no mention of a guerrilla rocket barrage.

Israel reported a total of 10 people wounded in two consecutive overnight attacks on Kiryat Shmona, in the northern Galilee panhandle.

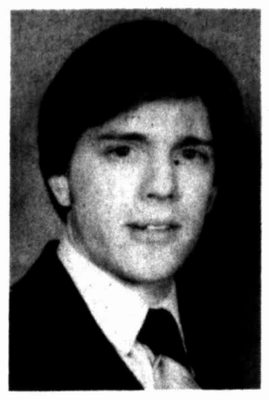

Lebanese and Palestinian officials reported four guerrillas and 10 Lebanese villagers killed and 30 people wounded in the first day of aerial retaliation Thursday.

Deputy Defense Minister Mordechai Zippori cited President Reagan's statement that terrorism should be dealt with "swiftly and unequivocally." He said Israel would continue to fight the guerrillas "with every means at our disposal."

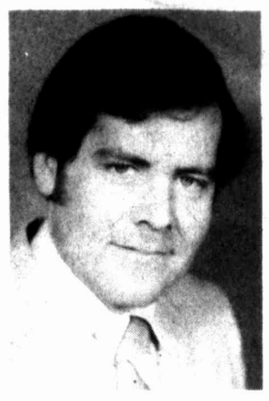

The Israeli military command said two volleys of Soviet-made Katyusha rockets fell on Kiryat Shmona, less than a mile from the Lebanese border between 1 and 5 a.m. today. It said another salvo landed in western Galilee at 7:15 a.m., and two more barrages were fired into central Galilee, but they caused no casualties or damage.

Polish government, labor talks start

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's communist government opened crucial talks today with leaders of the independent labor movement after warning it would take "necessary" action if the "anarchy and chaos" resulting from wildcat strikes continued.

Labor leader Lech Walesa, smoking a pipe and wearing a turtleneck sweater and jacket, arrived with his deputy and six other unionists for the meeting with Premier Jozef Pinkowski and other government officials.

Walesa refused to talk with waiting reporters, but his deputy, Andrzej Gwiazda said, "We want the talks to be as brief as possible — we know what we're talking about."

Pinkowski agreed to meet with Walesa and other national leaders of Solidarity, the big labor federation, to discuss the demands for legalization of an independent farmers' union, a five-day workweek, relaxation of censorship and union access to the mass media.

As the negotiations were in progress, the Polish Prosecutor's Office declared that sit-ins at public buildings, disruption of production and dissemination of uncensored publications were punishable crimes. Such actions," it said in a communique, were "on a collision course with existing law."

On Thursday, Warsaw Radio warned that the government would take "the necessary decisions to ensure the normal functioning of plants and enterprises" unless the workers heeded the appeals from Solidarity's national leaders to end the widespread local strikes.

"Anarchy and chaos are entering the life of the state, endangering the fate of the homeland and itslcitizens. Forces hostile to the socialist system are getting active," the government radio said.

However, Solidarity's deputy chairman, Bogdan Lis, admitted that the union's national leaders "cannot contain those strikes." He said the workers "are just too impatient."

Warsaw Radio did not say what the government might do if the strikes continued. But each upsurge of labor unrest arouses fears that the Polish army will be ordered into action against the workers or that Soviet troops will intervene as they did in Czechoslovkia in 1968.

It said this places Solidarity "in a position of political opposition" to the Polish Communist Party and government.

Bentsen advocates hostages 'deal' quiz

States News Service

WASHINGTON — Congress should investigate the Iranian hostage ordeal even if questions are raised about policy decisions made by the Carter administration, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said Thursday.

Bentsen, speaking at a news conference, said he would participate in such a probe as a new member of the Senate Intelligence Committee. Other senators have called for such an investigation since the 52 hostages were released after 444 days in captivity.

"I think we have to highlight for the world the atrocitives of the Iranian government and the way they treated the prisoners and how they violated international law," he said. "I think continuing attention to that is important."

Bentsen also Thursday proposed a tax cut to encourage business to modernize, allowing new facilities to be depreciated at a faster rate.

The bill, idential to one he introduced last year, would save an estimated $4 billion in taxes during the remaining months of fiscal 1981 and encourage investment, Bentsen said.

"A tax cut designed to put modern tools in the hands of American workers can be of substantial help in our efforts to increase productivity and thereby hold down prices while at the same time creating hundreds of thousands of new jobs," he said.

Bentsen, a conservative Democrat who has said the oil business should never have been controlled by government price ceilings, said President Ronald Reagan's decontrol decision Wednesday is good energy policy but not necessarily good economic policy.

"It (decontrol) will have some inflationary effect," he said.

He speculated the expected six to 12-cent increase in the price of gas at the pump will cause a drop in consumption nationwide of as much as 100,000 barrels a day.

"When you decontrol prices there is always some economic pain," he said.

He called recommendations that Texas be used for at least part of the sit for the proposed MX missile—a complex rail system of nuclear weapons—a "political ploy."

Congressional studies have shown that to locate the massive defense system in Texas rather than the first choice areas in Utah and Nevada would cost an additional $3 billion, displace 1,400 families and use up 1,000 acres of land, he said.

Bentsen said he is unaffected by rumors that Roger Staubach, the former Dallas Cowboy quarterback, and Robert Krueger, the former special trade embassador to Mexico, may run for his senate seat in 1982.

"If I listened to all the names that were floated I would not have much time to worry about my own responsibilities here," he said. "No one owns these seats."

He said the "juices" of his supporters have already been stirred by the fact that a conservative fundraising group has put Bentsen on a hit list of senators who should be defeated in the next election.

YMCA drive tops $10,000

Members of the YMCA Participating Membership Committee hit the ground running this week.

Led by Kay Price and Morris Rhodes, the committee — which has over 100 workers — have raised $10,135. That represents 27 percent of the committee's objective.

The drive, which is being captained by Russ McEwen, extends through Feb. 9.

Ms. Price led all the campaign workers with pledges totaling $1,215. Rhodes has also raised over $1,000. That entitles both to membership in the exclusive "$1,000 Club."

The Y's Sustaining Membership Drive will be conducted at a later date.

Productivity down in 1980

WASHINGTON (AP) — Productivity in private business fell by 0.3 percent in 1980, the third straight year of decline, the Labor Department reported today.

The decline in the fourth quarter was 1.9 percent on a seasonally adjusted annual basis, a reversal from the 1.5 percent rise registered by business and labor in the third quarter.

Productivity declined last year because paid working hours increased at a faster rate than economic output, said the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Hours rose by 8.4 percent while output in goods and services rose by only 6.3 percent.

The 0.3 percent decline in 1980 followed a drop in productivity of 0.4 percent in 1979 and 0.2 percent in 1978, and was only the fourth annual decline since the years following World War II.

Productivity measures the efficiency of the U.S. economy by computing how many goods and services are produced in one hour of paid work.

When productivity declines, rising wages cannot be offset by increased production. As a result, unit labor costs go up even more sharply, producing upward pressure on prices.

Texans asked to not forsake Canadian oil exploration

DALLAS (AP) — Government officials from the province of British Columbia have asked Texas oilmen — leery over Canada's new national energy program — to delay any plans for abandoning oil and gas exploration in Canada.

Robert H. McClelland, minister of mines and resources for the province, told about 25 key oil and gas industry officials at a luncheon Thursday that British Columbia and Alberta expect to win their battle against "onerous" higher taxes annnounced three months ago.

The oilmen — whose group included billionaires Herbert and Bunker Hunt — lent a sympathetic ear but expressed their alarm, McClelland said over a "Canadianization" program.

"The meeting was pretty free-wheeling. And pretty candid, I might add. I hope it helped us," McClelland said.

The Canadian government announced last Oct. 28 that in order to keep the oil industry in Canadian hands, it planned to acquire "one or more" multi-national oil and gas companies, financing the purchases by a tax against producers of 30 cents per thousand cubic feet.

"Unless Canada's national energy policy is withdrawn, that's going to be the end of American investment in energy resources in Canada," said Herbert Hunt, who is involved in some oil and gas investments in western Canada.

Hunt Energy Corp. and American Quasar Petroleum hosted the luncheon to give McClelland and two other British Columbia officials an audience they requested with Texas oilmen.

Another oil official observed, "It's damn close to nationalization. That's the bottom line. The taxes they're imposing ... means it just would not be economical to drill for oil and gas in Texas. You can't ask a company to go to Canada and invest in oil and gas when he could get more by putting it into CD's here."

Ashley Priddy, head of Sabine Corp., one of the largest independent oil and gas companies, asked McClelland what would keep Canada from applying its "Canadianization" in other industries, such as the extraction of silver, gold, uranium or coal.

McClelland was accompanied by Don Phillips, minister of industrial development; Roy Illing, deputy minister of energy, mining and petroleum; and Don Rawlyk, B.C. Petroleum Corp.

McClelland called the energy program unconstitutional in that British Columbia and Alberta are both guaranteed the rights to exploration and development of their resources.

The national policy has already had a negative impact, he said, in the large number of drilling rigs being pulled down at the completion of jobs and shifted to exploration in the United States. Also, he said, the province is losing much of its exploration expertise, also to the United States.

Earlier in the week, the British Columbia officials met with oilmen in Houston, San Antonio, Fort Worth and El Paso. After leaving Dallas, the Canadians headed home, with a stop in Salt Lake City to visit with pipeline officials.

Soviets back in U.S. foreign policy light

WASHINGTON (AP) — First the secretary of state accused the Soviets of fostering terrorism. Then the president denounced them as liars and cheats. Now, another blow: they've taken away the Soviet ambassador's special parking privileges.

The moves are not monumental, but they do add a sharper edge to U.S.-Soviet relations.

They might cut deeper if President Reagan carries out his hint of Thursday: to broaden, not lift, the partial Soviet grain embargo imposed by Jimmy Carter a year ago to punish the Soviets for their intervention in Afghanistan.

For now, though, the most visible evidence is Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin's experience of Thursday.

His limousine headed for the basement parking area he always uses at the State Department, but security officers told the chauffeur to park on the street.

So Dobrynin was left to use the normal diplomatic entrance, no longer afforded the privilege started during the Ford administration of coming and going through the basement without being seen.

State Department officials said the Soviet Embassy had been informed in advance that Dobrynin would lose his special access, which apparently was accorded no other foreign diplomat.

One reason, they said, apparently was because the American ambassador to Moscow has no similar privilege when he calls on the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

Dobrynin said the whole matter was "no problem."

The Soviet ambassador had gone to the State Department for an appointment he had requested with Secretary of State Alexander Haig, presumably to discuss Haig's harsh remarks a day earlier that Soviet policies "foster, support and expand" international terrorism.

Haig's hard line was echoed Thursday by President Reagan at his first news conference since taking office.

He said the Soviets believe they have the "right to commit any crime, to lie, to cheat" to achieve their goal — "a one-world socialist or communist state."

"I think when you do business with them, even in detente, you keep that in mind," he added.

Revenues record set by Missouri Pacific

ST. LOUIS — Downing B. Jenks, chairman of the board, has reported that Missouri Pacific Corp. achieved record financial results for 1980.

Consolidated revenues exceeded the $2 billion level for the first time in the corporation's history, totaling $2,237,432,000 against $1,981,536,000 in 1970. Net income for the year was $166,065,000 compared to $153,270,000 in 1979. Fully diluted earnings per share improved from $9.77 in 1979 to $10.56 for 1980.

The results for 1979 are based on continuing operations and do not include $26,887,000 ($1.71 per share) representing the earnings and extra-ordinary gain on the sale of River Cement Co., a subsidiary which was divested July 19, 1979.

For the fourth quarter of 180, consolidated results were as follows: revenues, $620,647,000; net income $44,762,000; fully diluted earnings per share, $2.85. The comparable results for the fourth quarter of 1979 were: revenues, $560, 252,000; net income, $51,921,000; earnings per share, $3.30 fully diluted.

The Missouri Pacific Railroad System had net income of $123,388,000 for 1980 compared to $110,027,000 in 1979 and operating revenues increased to $1,712,541,000 from 1979's total of $1,461,126,000. For the fourth quarter, the Railroad earned $33,574,000 on revenues of $463,623,000 versus 1979's income of $37,060,000 and revnues of $389,006,000.

Net income of Mississippi River Transmission Corp. was $34,980,00 in 1980 compared to $34,610,000 for 1979 with revenues of $524,891,000 against $520,410,000 for the prior year. Fourth quarter net income was $9,287,000 compared to $12,200,000 in 1979 with revenues of $157,024,000 in 1980 and $171,246,000 in 1979.

The board of directors, at a meeting held Tuesday, declared a quarterly dividend of 90 cents per share on the common stock, payable March 31, to stockholders of record at the close of business on March 11.

Space shuttle engines readied for launch

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Engineers plan to rev up the rocket engines on America's first manned space shuttle next month in preparation for its maiden flight into orbit and back, launching the nation into what the vehicle's builders say is a new era of space travel.

Te rockets will be fired for 20 seconds on Feb. 10, and the shuttle itself will be launched from Cape Canaveral March 17.

Rockwell International engineers who explained the mission in detail Thursday emphasized that the shuttle was designed to give spacemen an economical ride into orbit and back — and not to travel to any other planets.

It will allow astronauts and scientists to repair satellites already in orbit, build new ones, and conduct experiments outside the earth's atmosphere, Rockwell spokesmen said.

"It's a rocket. It's a hypersonic craft. It's supersonic. It's subsonic. And it can be flown like an airplane," said Bill Green of the company that builds the stubby-winged, $500 million space shuttle.

One problem engineers had in designing the rockets on the 145-foot-long shuttle was heat.

Clements predicts Texans will see oil prices fall

MCALLEN, Texas (AP) — Texans will pay more in the next two months for gasoline due to President Reagan's decontrol of oil prices but then prices will decline, predicts Gov. Bill Clements.

"What'll happen is that right now our gasoline stocks are very high. I would anticipate gasoline may go up 5 or 6 cents a gallon during the short term of 30 or 45 or even 60 days," Clements said Thursday at a news conference.

"By the time the market forces go to work, I think you'll see prices will go down because of the inventory going down," said the governor, who founded SEDCO Inc., an international oil drilling company based in Dallas.

Both the state treasury and Texas oil operators will benefit from Reagan's decontrol order, he said.

"This will mean higher tax revenues. Twenty percent of the Texas state budget comes from severance taxes on oil and gas," Clements said.

"All good" are the words he used to describe the overall effects of the president's action on Texas.

"I think we in this contry and particularly we in Texas believe in the free enterprise system, the law of supply and demand," he said.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock has estimated the state will get $150 million in additional severance taxes this year due to the lifting of price controls.

In other comments, the Republican governor said it was "unfortunate" that the state Senate rejected his nomination of Billie Pickard of Raymondville as a regent for Pan American University in Edinburg.

Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, invoked senatorial courtesy to block Mrs. Pickard's confirmation. She was appointed during the legislative interim and had uncovered instances of questionable spending practices by university officials during her brief term.

Two gunmen theory costing taxpayers

If there is anything as certain as death and taxes, it is that the conspiracy theory of President Kennedy's assassination will live on.

THE POSTULATORS OF conspiracy were given major support last year when the House assassinations committee concluded that it was probably that two gunmen fired at Kennedy when he was killed 17 years ago in Dallas.

Now, the Federal Bureau of Investigation has again discounted the two-gunmen theory. It said that the committee's evidence was based on faulty premises and "must be considered invalid."

THE COMMITTEE'S "EVIDENCE" was flimsy at best. It rested on acoustical studies of a tape recording of sounds said to have been picked up by an open microphone dangling on a Dallas policeman's motorcycle in the Kennedy motorcade.

The committee's acoustical experts claimed they detected a fourth shot fired from ground level while Lee Harvey Oswald was pumping three shots from an upper-floor window of a nearby building.

THE FBI CONCLUDED after studying the tape recordings for several months that there was no proof that the sounds were made in Dealy Plaza where the assassination occurred or that they were sounds of gunshots.

The FBI suggested that no further study be made since it would involve additional expense and the tape recording is of such poor quality that it probably would produce inconclusive results.

THE AGENCY ESTIMATED that a full-scale investigation probably would cost more than $1 million and would tie up several FBI experts for three years.

The House spent $5.4 million of taxpayers' money in the two-year investigation that produced so little.

IF THE CONSPIRACY advocates want to stir the cold ashes some more, let them use their own money to do it.

War without weapons

Joseph Kraft

WASHINGTON — Most of us loved it when Jimmy Carter repudiated the Imperial Presidency by walking down Pennsylvania Avenue after his inauguration four years ago. Very few noticed that in moving to fight unemployement, the new president also put in for a heavy dose of inflation.

Most of us also loved it when Ronald Reagan repudiated the Peanut Presidency by what was called the "elegance" of his inauguration. Very few noticed that in declaring war on inflation, the new president may have thrown away the crucial weapons.

The war on inflation was declared in the most unambiguous terms. After six paragraphs of obligatory grace notes, President Reagan turned in his Inaugural Address to the "business of our nation." The next 18 paragraphs, the whole first part of the speech, dealt with "an economic affliction of great proportions . . . the longest and one of the worst sustained inflations in our national history.

SMALL-TOWN MORALITY provided the model for the analysis that followed. There were good guys—"professionals, industrialists, shopkeepers, clerks, cabbies and truck drivers." There was also a bad guy. "In this present crisis," Reagan said, "government is not part of the solution; it is the problem."

The prescription for arresting inflation favored by the Reagan administration follows closely on that model. As a prime step, dollars will be returned from the villain to the good guys. There will be proposed a massive tax cut, 10 percent annually in three installments, working chiefly to benefit individuals.

Government will be made to pay for the tax cut, by relentless chopping of non-defense spending. In that spirit, the new Budget Director, David Stockman, spoke of "major surgery" on domestic programs.

The theory behind that approach is the theory of inflationary expectations. The idea is that a dramatic tax cut accompanied by drastic reductions in spending will break the psychology of inflation that has gripped the private sector. Markets and corporations will steady themselves, and begin to invest with confidence. Output per worker, or productivity, will rise, and goods in short supply will become abundant. Inflation rates will then head down.

Since expectations are a matter of guesswork, nobody can consummately challenge that theory. Surely it deserves a chance. If it works, all of us will be healthier and wealthier. Many of us will be wiser.

Still, there are reasons to think the theory might not prove practical. For other forces contribute to inflation besides government. There is the cartel of the oil-producing countries known as OPEC. It has doubled energy prices in the past 18 months. With the Iran-Iraq war still on, there is the prospect of more shortages and another push in prices beginning this spring.

THEN THERE ARE the big unions and the big companies. With inflation now rising at a rate of about 10 percent annually, union leaders are under heavy pressure to go for wage increases to keep pace. Big companies are in the habit of paying up and passing the increase on to consumers in the form of higher prices. Thus there is a deep connection between the momentum of inflation and the wage-price cycle.

The weapons for dealing with OPEC and with the big unions and companies all lie within the province of government. But President Reagan seems, almost without knowing it, to have put them aside. He has forsworn government actions that would restrain wages and prices. He has no energy program to restrain the push of OPEC.

Instead of early success, accordingly, President Reagan may face an early emergency.

Why high fiber foods?

Dr. Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: What are foods with high fiber content? Everyone seems to know a couple, but one can't maintain a balanced diet with just a couple of foods. I would appreciate your supplying a list of some of them.—L.B.K.

High-fiber foods are those that can partially resist being broken down by our digestive juices. This undigested fiber (residue) holds water in the colon so that stools do not become hard and dry. That means the colon does not have to push so forcibly. That helps prevent diverticulosis (intestinal outpochings) which you mention in another part of your letter.

Fiber is also thought to be useful in control of diabetes. High fiber causes a slower release of sugar from the digestive tract into the bloodstream. Since the blood sugar does not rise so high, less insulin is needed.

A partial list of high-fiber foods follows.

Cereals: whole wheat, bran, oatmeal.

Fruits: apples, dates, prunes.

Vegetables: Cabbage, celery, beans, peas, barley, broccoli.

Breads: whole wheat, rye, bran, cracked wheat.

To learn how one person beat the high-fiber problem, read the following letter from Mrs. S.:

Dr. Dr. Donohue: I am 35 and for years I had a problem with constipation. My doctor told me to get off laxatives and eat bran. I tried a bowl of bran cereal every morning, but after two weeks I couldn't face the thought of another bowl of it. So back to the laxatives. Then I became very determined to get off them again.

So I started eating only a bowl of the cereal twice a week. In between I made bran muffins, sometimes adding nuts, chopped dates or chopped prunes. I'd eat one in the morning. For lunch I might include a sandwich of wheat bread. I found a variety of tasty things to eat with fiber.

It was a struggle at first, but I kept at it and all turned out well. I no longer need laxatives and feel just great. I hope my letter is of some help to someone. You really don't need much fiber every day, just some. Isn't that right?—Mrs. S.

You are entirely right. A fiber diet does not mean you must give up non-fiber foods, just that you get a little of it every day.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am a diabetic and when I look at labels on canned fruits and juices I see the words "corn syrup." Is that sugar and should I use it?—Mrs. L.M.

Corn syrup is used as a sweetener and food thickener. It is a mixture of many sugars. If you use products with it you should take them into account in your daily ration of sugar and calories.

Dear Dr. Donohue: If a woman has had surgery to remove a single ovary, does she need estrogen medicine afterward? Wouldn't the loss of the ovary produce a deficiency?—Mrs. T.H.

Not necessarily, so long as the remaining ovary is healthy and producing estrogen. That should be sufficient.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Can smoking marijuana cause one to have urination problems?—M.

Smoking should not. However, actual ingestion may cause urinary retention and inhibit unination.

Dear Dr. Donohue: What is Norgesic Forte?—Thanks.

Muscle relaxer-pain reliever. — You're welcome.

Dear Dr. donohue: Exactly what is a vascular headache, a term my doctor uses but never explains?—J.T.

It means a headache related to blood vessels. A migraine headache is a vascular headache. In that condition there is a sudden narrowing of the blood vessels serving the brain. This is following by an expansion (dilation) of the same vessels, and this quirk of the vascular system is what causes the headache.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Is it true that vitamin E is a sex vitamin?—Mrs. R.O.

No, nor is any other vitamin.

What about constipation? Many can be relieved of it, both mentally and physically, by reading Dr. Donohue's booklet, "The Way to Stop Constipation." For a copy write to Dr. Donohue in care of The Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Nothing is too good for reader

You'll have to admit the American press is accomodating. The media not only prints all the news that's fit to print, it tries to capsulize some items its editors feel would interest the average reader.

Weather reports, as an example, have long been front-page staples and there are summaries of world, regional and local news easy to find.

The Washington Star has carried this practice one step farther. It has introduced a front-page feature it has entitled "today's Violent Local Crime."

The concise report, no doubt, is well read by the victim, if he is in a condition to read, the people who might become potential victims but usually by the criminal himself—to see how well he scored.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I have heard you talk on television about God's forgiveness. But I have many, many sins in my background, and I don't see how I can really be forgiven, do you??—Mrs. D.O.

DEAR MRS. D.O.: Yes, it is possible for you to be forgiven, and my earnest prayer for you is that you would come to know God's forgiveness. One of the greatest joys in life is that joy of knowing we are completely forgiven—that God has wiped away our sins. "blessed is he whose transgressions are forgiven whose sins are covered" (Psalm 32:1).

I suspect that part of your problem may be that you believe God thinks the same way we do. If someone does something which hurts you very much, you have a very hard timd forgiving them—let along forgetting about it! But God is not that way. He loves us, and because he loves us he wants to forgive us of our sins. And because he is perfect, he is able to forgive and forget our sins perfectly. "For as high as the heavens are above the earth, so great is his love for those who fear him; as far as the east is from the west, so far has he removed our transgressions from us" (Psalm 103:11-12).

How can God do this? God is able to offer us forgiveness because Jesus Christ came and died on the cross for our sins. God is perfectly holy, and sin must be punished. We deserve to be punished for our sins, but Christ—the sinless Son of God—loves us and took upon himself the punishment we deserve. He willingly went to the cross to die as a sacrifice for our sins.

You can be forgiven because of what Christ has done for you. If you had been the only sinner in the world, Jesus Christ would still have been willing to die in your place. And by turning from your sins and opening your heart to him by faith, you can be forgiven. Trust Jesus Christ for forgiveness and salvation, and if you will he has promised to forgive you and save you. There is no reason for you to delay—God is ready to welcome you as His child—fully forgiven—if you will trust Christ today.

Around the rim

James Werrell

A few years back it was lemons.

Those who paid any attention as the advertising bandwagons rumbled across the TV screens probably noticed the executives from nearly every major American company jumping aboard carrying armloads of lemons.

It seemed to me that virtually every product on the market at that time had lemons in it: lemon shampoo, lemon dishwashing liquid, lemon oven cleaner, lemon air freshener, lemon fabric softener, lemon cologne, lemon deodorant, lemon everything.

AS ALWAYS, THE fringe products really taxed the credibility of even the most obtuse buyers. Who among us ever walked into a friend's home, took a good whiff of the kitchen, and declared, "My, you oven smells so lemony-fresh!"

Now, thankfully, it appears as though the buying public has finally soured on lemons. But don't worry, the next bandwagon is lumbering into view.

And the load it is carrying is a "lite" one.

Not light, mind you, but lite; everything from soup to nuts to beer, fruits, margarine, soft drinks, candy bars, cooking oil, cigarettes, potato chips, cheese, cake frosting, pancake syrup, even plain old salt.

The advertisers, it seems, would have us believe that if we eat enough of their products, we will somehow rise up off the ground and float pleasantly away.

Try testing this theory with a half-dozen lite candy bars or a couple of lite cakes. You'll probably find that your feet are more firmly attached to the ground than you'd wish.

Hearing about these products, or worse, tasting some of them, can really give you a craving for something nice and heavy. The ideal place to get rid of a bad case of lite-headedness is some shack named Mom's where the smoke from burning grease could choke a horse:

"May I take your order, sir?"

"Yeah, skip the salad. Give me a cheeseburger, and make sure the cheese has a very high cholesterol content. Soak the buns in grease until they're the consistency of wet Bounty Paper Towels.

"Give me a side order of french fries and onion rings. Use lard.

"I'LL ALSO HAVE a chocolate shake made with whole milk, and ice cream that goes off the scale in terms of saturated fats.

"For dessert, I'll have the cherry pie. Make sure the cherries came in a can packed in sugar syrup, and if the crust is less than an inch think I'll send it back."

To top all this off, you buy a handful of mint patties, the kind with no natural ingredients, as you pay your bill.

Unfortunately, although this type of meal is good for the soul, it's hell on the arteries. So you're back where you began, munching on plastic cheese, sipping chemical-flavored soft drinks, and listening to lite-hearted advertisers. Maybe we were better off with lemons.

May fund plant

Jack Anderson,

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan's new energy secretary, James Edwards, has made no secret of his enthusiasm for nuclear power. What's not so well known, though, is his enthusiasm for a bailout of a nuclear processing plant in his home state of South Carolina. The tab to the taxpayers could amount to $2 billion.

Knowledgeable insiders have described the operation in question as nothing less than a boondoggle. It is such a risky venture, in fact, that the nuclear power industry wanted nothing to do with it—unless Uncle Sam would put up the money.

THE FACILITY IN question is the Barnwell Nuclear Fuel Plant in Barnwell, S.C. Its construction was halted—half-completed—in the mid-1970s, and the plant has existed in a sort of half-life of federal research and development grants ever since.

Now, with Edwards in charge at the Department of Energy, the scientists at Barnwell are happily looking forward to a new lease on life.

The Barnwell project began in the early 1970s as the brainchild of a consortium of companies known as Allied-General, which included Allied Chemical Corp. and General Atomic, a subsidiary of Gulf Oil. The idea sounded good: Barnwell would take spent fuel from nuclear power plants, and separate out plutonium and uranium for recycling.

It seemed like a great idea at the time: Nuclear wastes wouldn't have to be dumped; they could be put to use all over again.

But somewhere along the line, the hope of a profitable solution to the nuclear waste problem evaporated.

By 1975, Allied-General, and the nuclear power industry in general, realized that it wasn't going to work out commercially.

According to secret files of DOE's predecessor agency, the Energy Research and Development Administration, Barnwell was an obvious lemon. The only question was whether it should be allowed to die—or the government should bail it out.

EXECUTIVES OF ONE energy corporation, Atlantic Richfield, described the plutonium-reprocessing project at Barnwell as "an impossible solution," and recommended that the government "should accept control and operate it as a demonstration facility until technology is proven."

Oddly enough, while the nuclear industry experts were trying to foist Barnwell off on Uncle Sam, they continued to tout the cost-effectiveness of the plant. If Barnwell's reprocessing were successful, they insisted, the resulting plutonium would provide cheaper energy than that obtainable by oil or any other fuel. But the industry magnates weren't willing to put their own money where their mouth was. Instead, they wanted the taxpayers to ante up the dough.

And the money involved in the production of Barnwell's "bargain" fuel could be prodigious. In a recent letter to Edwards, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., predicted that Barnwell "will cost the taxpayers $2 billion to complete . . . if it is taken over by the federal government."

Did Edwards "favor federal subsidies for this project?" Kennedy asked.

The new energy secretary's views were made pretty clear at his confirmation hearing. He would "favor reprocessing," he said, adding that the facility in his home state "offers an early opportunity to re-establish the U.S. program" for reprocessing. The decision on federal aid, he said, will "receive my attention early on."

Although a spokesman for Edwards told my associate Lucette Lagnado that the resuscitation of Barnwell was an "option" that had yet to be decided on one way or the other, another spokesman—for Barnwell—said the mood at the South Caroloina plant was definitely upbeat. Small wonder.

THE VOICE IS GARBLED: I've reported earlier on the boo-boos committed by the Voice of America in its broadcasts to listeners in the Soviet Union. Now, it seems, the Russian-language broadcasts aren't the only ones that make the kind of stupid mistakes that destroy VOA's credibility overseas.

A cable from the American Embassy in war-torn El Salvador to Foggy Bottom complains that inaccuracies in VOA braodcasts are hurting the United States.

The embassy press officer, Howard Lane, was particularly chagrined by a recent VOA radio report on the murder of three American nuns and a Catholic lay worker. "The VOA," Lane complained to headquarters, "has the exhumation of the four nuns (sic) taking place in Sarasota, Fla., when two of them, the Maryknoll sisters, are buried in El Salvador and a third is buried in Cleveland."

A possible explanation for VOA's apparently endemic inaccuracy was provided by Lane's cable: While reporters for the wire services call the embassy in San Salvador on the average of five times a week to check out their stories, VOA in Washington had called once in the past month.

CLAUSEN'S CHOICE: House Democrats aren't the only ones who faced problems from the Republicans' 33-seat gain last November. Rep. Don Clausen, R-Calif., found himself the ranking GOP member on both the Interior and Public Works committees.

The rules limited him to minority top dog on only one of the two influential committees. Both posts would be important to his California constituents.

After agonizing awhile, Clausen made what he called a "difficult decision," and chose the top minority slot on Public Works. For his pains, he irked both California Republicans and the House Republican leadership, who wanted him to remain with Interior. Sometimes you lose when you win.

Blacks' poverty, fatalism tied to child deaths

ATLANTA (AP) — The poverty and fatalism that have branded black existence throughout American history are closely entwined with the murders and abductions of 17 black children, according to Atlanta sociologists.

Since July 1979, police say, 14 black children between the ages of 7 and 15 have been slain; three others remain missing. All were from low-income areas on the city's southside.

An independent investigator, however, said Thursday that the toll figure is arbitrary and should include at least 24 youths, adding seven others who are missing and whom police list as runaways.

The city has had a curfew in force since autumn to try to keep children off the streets after dark. Almost all the known victims were unsupervised when they were abducted — their parents simply did not know where they were.

Black children often are not supervised, not because of deliberate neglect or lack of concern by their parents, but simply because life at the poverty level forces them to be on their own, said Fred Crawford, director of Emory University's Center for Research and Social Change.

"We talk about vulnerability in the black kids, but it...has been a necessity, a pattern for a long time," he said. "These kids are different from white people in that they frequently have to do more things by themselves.

"They are out more, sometimes working or running errands, and their parents don't have cars to carry them around," he said.

Black children are frequently left to their own devices because their parents usually work during the day, he added.

"Contrast that to the white suburban areas, where most of the mothers are still there most of the day and don't let their children out of sight without knowing where they are going," Crawford said.

"I think it's probably true that these children are more independent-type kids who operate without much adult supervision," said Anna Grant, head of the sociology department of Morehouse College.

"I'm not talking about neglectful parents. I'm talking about a lifestyle that has nothing to do with a parent's love or concern for their children."

Police have formed a 35-member task force to investigate the slayings and disappearances. No arrests have been made. At a news conference Thursday, President Reagan promised that federal officials would meet soon with Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson to try to help in what Reagan called "a most tragic case."

Ms. Grant said the black community "is almost paranoid" and that people stay indoors far more than before the killings began.

"It is really tragic for poor families with overcrowded households. The fact that children could go out and play helped to ease the physical crowding in the homes," she said. "Parents could say, 'go out and play.' Parents are reluctant to say that anymore."

The first child slain, Edward Smith, 14, attended Therrell High School in southwest Atlanta, where a classmate, Lee Manuel Gooch, is among those who are missing but considered runaways.

A 15-year-old Therrell student who asked not to be identified said he has definitely reacted to the child deaths.

"I just try to stay home a lot, but at night I carry a knife when I go out. And me and my partners stay together," he said. "We usually are out together, but if I was out by myself, I would carry some protection."

That sense of self-reliance can be lethal, Crawford said.

Many "street-wise" black youths have a treacherous sense of false security that short-circuits common caution, he said.

"They all think they are big enough or fast enough to get away. That kind of confidence it pitting a mouse against a cat," he said.

Crawford added that because of laws that discriminated against blacks for decades, black families often feel fatalistic, unable to help themselves. There is the idea that "there are some things in life you can't protect yourself from," Crawford said.

Authorities need to help youths understand they are up against "something they have never seen — a monster coming out of the sewer," he added. "These kids don't know what they're up against."

Crawford criticized the police for their refusal to disclose information about the investigation. He said the refusal prevents concerned parents from telling their children what to avoid.

If kids "knew anything about how the kidnappings are done, they would be able to protect themselves," Crawford said. "The parents could say, 'If you see a blue car, run. If you see a man in uniform, you don't have to go up and talk with him.'

"If there is any information they can provide that would help protect children, it seems to me they are duty-bound to say it even if it gives the killer an advantage," he added.

"I think these children deserve the best protection this world can offer them."

Sotelo nominated in Spain

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Spain's governing party today nominated Deputy Premier Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo to succeed Premier Adolfo Suarez, who resigned amid growing criticism. But he may not be able to hold the government coalition together, and King Juan Carlos may have to call a general election.

The king was expected to consult with political leaders today on Calvo Sotelo's nomination. If Juan Carlos approves it, the nomination will go to the lower house of Parliament for confirmation or rejection.

Former mayor back in politics

DALLAS (AP) — Former Dallas Mayor Wes Wise has ended his absence from local politics with an announcement that he will be a candidate in the April city council elections. Wise told a news conference he will file for Place 10, an at-large seat on the council.

Wise, 51, was Dallas Mayor for three terms, from 1971 through 1976, when he resigned to run unsuccessfully for Congress against incumbent Jim Mattox.

Whatever happened to Main Street?

Conference discusses ways to fight downtown flight

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — A familiar sight in Texas has become increasingly vacant downtown areas while development moves out to the city limits.

"I think the word is all roads used to lead to downtown and now they lead out of downtown," Anice Read of the Texas Historical Commission said Thursday.

She was attending a meeting of representatives from 30 small cities — including five from Texas — starting a National Main Street Center project designed to prevent or reverse' downtown deterioriation.

The stories the project managers from the Texas towns of Eagle Pass, Navasota, Hillboro, Plainview and Seguin tell are similar.

In Eagle Pass on the Mexican border, for example, plans call for a large enclosed mall on the outskirts of the city and for a highway leading straight from the international bridge to the new mall.

Arch March, the town's Main Street manager, estimated the vacancy rate downtown is 15-20 percent including the upstairs areas above stores.

He said many of the buildings have been modernized and as a result much of the flavor of Texas border architecture has been lost.

"We can go to the building owners and say, 'Hey, there's a better way,'" March said, noting that much of the restoration could be done for a small price.

"They will be working to change the image of downtown in the eyes of the community," Mrs. Read, the Texas coordinator for the project, said about all five towns.

She said Rita Clements, wife of Texas Gov. Bill Clements, is scheduled to tour the five towns in February to show "the governor's commitment" to the new project.

The National Trust for Historic Preservation has organized the Main Street project.

Tom Moriarty, the trust's coordinator of the Texas project, said the general idea is to make sure that all the elements of a healthy downtown are in place — including retailing, transportation and recreation — so residents don't have to travel elsewhere for the goods and services they need.

"There is a general impression of historic preservation being a museum," he said. "We're talking about economic development ... bringing those buildings to their highest use."

Moriarty said the project is designed to attract as much private participation as possible through spreading information about tax incentives and other means, although government funds are involved as well.

The project managers for the five Texas towns say their goal is not to follow a master plan of historic preservation and turn each downtown into a miniature Old Town Alexandria, a historical area across the Potomac River from Washington where the national conference is being held.

"It's a terribly flexible plan," Mary Crites of Plainview said. "I don't particularly see it as a plan."

She said the South Plains city's downtown faces future problems because it will be bypassed by a new interstate highway between Lubbock and Amarillo, and a regional mall is planned on the outskirts of town.

Moriarty said the Main Street project in each town is tailored to meet specific needs.

Hillsboro project manager Paula Peters said downtown there remains occupied but merchants would like to recapture the customers they lost to more sophisticated shopping areas in the expanding Dallas-Fort Worthmetropolitan area just to the north.

She said the town's Main Street project will try to get merchants to capitalize on the local flavor to persuade customers to return. Marketing studies will be run to find out what the local people need to be able to find downtown.

After that, Ms. Peters said the local atmosphere will be promoted outside of Hillsboro in an attempt to draw in new customers.

Mrs. Read noted that no one is predicting overnight success for the Main Street programs, even though the three pilot projects in the Midwest that started in 1977 were considered successful.

"Downtown didn't die in one year," the Texas Historical Commission official said. "We see it worth at least a three-year program."

She said the five cities were chosen because they had a "can-do attitude" and illustrated many of the problems typical in smaller Texas cities and towns.

"We've had a tremendous amount of interest from all over the state from other cities," Mrs. Read said. She added that plans call for five cities to be added to the program next year.

Among the programs at the week-long conference were sessions on real estate and banking, how to attract retailers, economics and architecture, design and promotion.

Mark Malnory, the Navasota project manager, said commercial development on a loop outside of town has started to make its impression felt on the East Texas city's downtown area.

Seguin project manager Vince Houser said the vacancy rate in the town east of San Antonio is not as great as in the other towns, but physical improvements on the downtown buildings could make them more attractive and prevent future problems.

Dear Abby

Mother Scoffs At Scofflaw Tag

DEAR ABBY: My brother and I need your help. Our mother has been cooking and keeping house during the day for an elderly well-to-do gentleman. He has been paying her in cash, and she has not been reporting her earnings.

Mother has decided to keep this gentleman in her home, for which he will pay her room and board. We are trying to tell Mother that if she doesn't start reporting her income, she will be in violation of the law.

She refuses to listen to us, but says, "If Dear Abby says so, I will listen to her."

Please comment, because Mother subscribes to the Ft. Lauderdale News only to read your column.

WORRIED IN FLORIDA

DEAR WORRIED: Please tell Mother that Abby says that she (and her employer) are already in violation of the law, and if she wants to continue living in Ft. Lauderdale instead of Ft. Leavenworth, she must not only start reporting her income PDQ, but pay the IRS what she owes in back taxes!

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My neighbor is driving me nuts! She is forever ringing my phone or doorbell. She does nothing but complain, and she expects me to listen. I am sick of listening to her, and I have told her so. It does no good. She can't be insulted.

Yesterday when she called, I told her I was busy and had to go, but she kept talking anyway. I finally had to hang up on her. She called me back, and I hung up on her again. Next thing I knew this dingbat was at my front door, without a coat in the freezing weather, yelling and cursing and leaning on my bell. When I saw who it was I didn't pay any attention to her, so she went around and started pounding on my back door. When I ignored her, she threw stones at my window!

How can I get this pest to leave me alone? I hate to call the police.

HARASSED

DEAR HARASSED: The woman is obviously more than a pest — she is a sick pest. If she lives alone, let her family (if she has one) know of her irrational behavior. The poor soul needs help. If you can't locate her family or close friends, please notify your local mental health association.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I am enclosing an item from a recent National Guard publication. Considering the seriousness of the drunk-driver problem in the U.S., perhaps more severe penalties should be considered.

"How They Handle Drunk Drivers in Other Countries:

"Australia: The names of convicted drunk drivers are published in the local newspapers under the heading: 'Drunk and in Jail.'

"Malaya: The driver is jailed; if he's married, his wife is also jailed.

"Finland, England and Sweden: Drunk drivers are automatically jailed for approximately one year.

"South Africa: The drunk driver is given a 10-year prison sentence, a fine of $10,000 — or both.

"Turkey: Drunk drivers are taken 20 miles from town by police and forced to walk back under escort.

"Bulgaria: A second conviction of drunk driving is your last. The punishment is execution!

"San Salvador: Drunk drivers are executed by firing squads."

BILLY STEENSLID, PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR BILLY: Thanks for a sobering item.

Capt. Morris gives Forum crime prevention program

The GFWC Modern Woman's Forum met on Jan. 23 at K-Bob's Restaurant with Mrs. Fred Whitaker serving as hostess.

Mrs. Cass Hill, president, led the club in the Collect, Pledge of allegiance to the American Flag, and salute to the Texas Flag, and presided.

Mrs. Bert Affleck, reports chairman, announced that department chairman reports were due to the District officers by Feb. 1, as well as all reports on projects.

Mrs. Affleck, chairman of the GFWC project on Crime Prevention, introduced Captain Claude Morris of the Big Spring Crime Task Force. Capt. Morris explained the organization of the local police force and stating that all cities are under Texas Commission on Officers' Standards and Education in Austin. Before a police officer can begin work he must have 320 hours from a certified school. After a year of actual experience and more courses of study he could obtain an intermediate certificate. A police officer transferring from one town to another must clear through the Austin Commission. This Commission was established in 1968.

Capt. Morris distributed some pamphlets and pointed out several ways for citizens to assist in crime prevention.

Prevention should begin at home. One should be particular to keep all doors and windows locked securely. When going out of town arrangements should be made with a neighbor or relative to watch the house and pick up mail and newspapers. This person should be given a key and should know where the resident can be reached in case of emergency. Also automobile doors should be locked, whether occupied or not.

Another effective way is a neighborhood watch program. If someone is going from door to door in the neighborhood trying doors to see if they are unlocked, or going into a side or back yard, they might be regarded as suspicious persons. Such actions are even more suspicious if one person remains in the front or if a car is following a few houses away.

There are not enough police officers on any city force to cover all areas thoroughly, so it is the duty of all citizens to be alert to unusual incidents or suspicious persons. When calling the police, one should be prepared to give a good description of what has happened including when, where, description and license number of vehicle if one is involved, and a description of the person, including clothing if possible.

Refreshments of pie and coffee were served, and it was announced that the next club meeting will be Feb. 13 in the home of Mrs. Woody Smith.

Covered dish supper planned

Big Spring Rebekah Lodge No. 284 met in its regular session Tuesday evening. A salad supper was served to all members and guests attending. Noble Grand Lillian Rhyan presided over the meeting. Total members present was 32, with 22 of them being Past Noble Grands, and 36 visits to the sick were reported.

The Rebekah Degree was given to Callie Bennett and Della McNew.

The Lodge will celebrate Valentine's Day Feb. 10 with a covered dish supper. The refreshment committee for February consists of Janell Barnhill, Charlsa Myers, Winnifred Wood and Irene Smith. Gay Smith will serve as chairman of that committee.

Next meeting of the lodge will be Feb. 3 at 7:30 p.m.

Auction sales of cattle down 600,000 in 1980

AUSTIN — Even though last summer's drought forced large numbers of cattle and calves onto the market, statewide auction sales of cattle were down by over 600,000 head in 1980, reports Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown.

"Cattle and calves marketed through Texas auctions totaled 5,567,000 head in 1980, far short of the 6,184,000 head marketed the previous year," Brown said. "Total sales probaly would have been even lower if ranchers had not been forced to thin out their herds this past summer and fall. Texas has just entered the rebuilding stage of a new cattle cycle, and it is likely that auction sales will decline further as ranchers hold back breeding cows and heifers to rebuild their herds."

Brown pointed out that the number of cattle and calves in Texas and the United States follows an up-and-down pattern known as the cattle cycle. As herds grow larger and drive prices down, ranchers must sell off animals in order to cut herd size down to more profitable levels. When herds shrink and prices improve, cattlemen begin to rebuild herds to take advantage of better prices.

As of July 1, 1980, Texas cattle herds showed an increase in numbers for the first time in three years, meaning that expansion efforts are beginning to be felt. However, the drought and heat wave of this past summer destroyed much pastureland, forcing some ranchers to cull their herds heavily. The overall impact of this liquidation, and the effect of continued dry weather on winter wheat pastures, remains to be seen, Brown noted.

December, 1980, auction sales were above a year ago for cattle, the same for hogs, but below for sheep, lambs, and goats, according to the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Fewer sheep goats in Texas

AUSTIN — There were 2,360,000 head of sheep and lambs in Texas on Jan. 1, 1981, a two-percent decline from a year ago, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown has reported.

The number of goats in the state, both Spanish and Angora, stood at 1,380,000 head, one percent fewer than in 1980, he added. Angora goats, at 1,050,000 head, were down three percent, while Spanish goats showed a three percent increase.

A breakdown of the sheep and labm inventory shows 1,700,000 ewes, up one percent from 1980. A drought-reduced lamb crop showed a six-percent drop, while the number of ewe lambs was down sharply by 26 percent.

Block promises cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although Reagan administration officials have not spelled out how and where they hope to cut Agriculture Department spending, substantial knife work may develop in the dairy program.

Unless Congress changes the law, however, dairy farmers automatically will get another boost of about 6.9 percent in milk price supports April 1, adding further to federal costs of operating the program.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block, at his first news conference since joining the Cabinet, said Wednesday the dairy program "is becoming more costly than it should" and indicated, without being specific, that he would work with producer groups to find solutions.

Block was asked if he supported legislation recommended by the Carter administration just before it left office that would allow the April 1 support increase to be skipped.

"We are looking at that," Block replied. "That might be a possibility. I am not prepared to say precisely what we want to do."

Later in the news conference, Block talked about cuts in spending generally, indicating that "all departments, all parts of departments, all agencies" will share in the cost reductions, some more than others.

Pressed further to cite some examples, Block said, "The costly ones. I think probably the dairy program is going to have to be given a lot of consideration."

Texas honey bees' nectar flow declines

AUSTIN — Texas honey bees produced some 6.9 million pounds of honey in 1980, down 4.5 million pounds, an almost 40 percent drop below 1979, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown has reported.

"Extremely dry conditions in most of the state that prevailed during much of 1980, severly reduced the nectar flow, or in some cases, completely eliminated floral sources," said Brown. "this forced bees to work many secondary and other formerly unnoticed sources during the summer."

According to the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, bee colonies were estimated at 198,000, an increase of 8,000 colonies from 1979. However, average yield per colony decreased to 35 pounds per colony, down 25 pounds per colony from last year.

"The average price per pound per to Texas producers was 56 cents," said Brown. "This is an increase of 5.2 cents above the 1979 price of 50.8 cents."

Gross income for Texas honey producers decreased substantially last year, with the total value of honey and beeswax estimated at $4,109,000, compared to $6,152,000 in 1979, Brown noted.

Mrs. Daniel will plead innocent; lawyer to ask for venue change

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Vickie Daniel, indicted for the murder of her husband, former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr., will plead innocent and ask that the trial be moved, her lawyer says.

Andrew J. Lannie of Baytown said Thursday he will waive a speedy trial, which otherwise would have to be held within 120 days of the indictment.

Lannie said he was not surprised by Wednesday's indictment but disagreed with District Attorney Carroll Wilborn saying after the indictment was returned there was indication of premeditation.

"Premeditated?" Lannie asked. "She was preparing dinner for her three children, two of them sick, just prior to the shooting."

Lannie said Kimberly Moore, Mrs. Daniel's 11-year-old daughter by a previous marriage, told him and apparently told the grand jury she attempted to pull her stepfather off her mother during an altercation in the family home minutes before Daniel was killed.

"Kimberly Moore did observe and did become involved in the altercation that preceeded the shooting," Lannie said.

Mrs. Daniel remains free on $50,000 bond and is not expected to go on trial until summer.

The 33-year-old former waitress is scheduled to be arraigned next Wednesday.

A Liberty County grand jury heard nine hours of testimony from 19 witnesses before returning the indictment. Afterward, prosecutors said she may have acted in premeditation.

Wilborn said there is evidence of "some premeditation or motive" in the Jan. 19 slaying, but did not elaborate.

Mrs. Daniel remains under a physician's care and is taking medication for shock, Lannie said.

She was hospitalized for five days after the shooting, suffering from shock and hysteria, her doctors said. She was released from the hospital Jan. 23 and charged the next day.

If convicted, Mrs. Daniel could face five years to life in prison. Wilborn said probation also would be possible.

Authorities contend Mrs. Daniel fired a single .22-caliber rifle shot into her husband's stomach at their ranch home north of Liberty, from Houston.

Liberty County Sheriff C.L. Eckols said Lannie told him a warning shot was fired. The sheriff said the bullet went through the ceiling and out the roof and could not be found.

Daniel died from internal bleeding after the bullet struck his aorta, a major artery, an autopsy showed.

Daniel, 39, had been active in Texas politics for many years, and was the namesake and son of Price Daniel Sr., a former governor, U.S. senator and Supreme Court judge in Texas.

Both state and defense sources acknowledged an altercation before the shooting.

The sources differed sharply about what the child may have seen or heard. Wilborn said he expects her to be called as a defense witness.

The 12 grand jurors heard from investigators, hospital and ambulance personnel, a reporter, an accountant-attorney and family members of both Daniel and his wife.

Daniel's brother, Houston, his wife, Charlotte, and a cousin testified, as did Mr. Daniel's ex-husband, Larry Moore.

"IT IS FINISHED"

The news story was about a soldier who had been on an island in the Pacific, and he had been there since World War II. He had been fighting there all alone, convinced that the war was still on. Oh, he'd heard rumors, but he refused to believe them until someone went to that island with proof and convinced that poor man that the war had been won thirty years before.

I've been there, haven't you? The struggle, the conflict, the hurt, — fighting a war that has already been won. We can give it up. We can claim His peace.

We can feel life flood in and heal up the bloodsoaked battleground. We can feel the worthiness of His love put a new value on us. We can quit the struggle! We can breathe in freedom.

Then I heard that the King of the Ages
Had fought all the battle for me,
And that Victory was mine for the claiming.
And now, praise His name; I am Free!
"IT IS FINISHED!" The battle is over!
"IT IS FINISHED!" There'll be no more war!
"IT IS FINISHED!"

Hawk Queens visit Tarleton Tourney

STEPHENVILLE — The Howard College Hawk Quuens take their number 11 national juco rating into this weekend's Tarleton State University Women's Basketball Tournament with high hopes of winning their third tourney of the season.

The Hawk Queens take an excellent record of 19-2 into tonight's contest with Ranger JC in the 16-team tourney, and HC Coach Don Stevens is ready for action. "We're looking forward to playing aginst a few universities and other good junior college teams," Stevens said.

"We finished third here a year ago," Stevens continued, "losing to Western Texas in the semifinals by one point. But we came back and played a great game in the third place game, and that seemed to set our pace when we returned home to win the Western Conference title."

That WJC title chase will resume next Monday for the Hawk Queens when they host Frank Phillips just prior to the Harlem Globetrotters visit to Big Spring in Garrett Coliseum.

And Stevens admits that the WJC title chase concerns him more than the Tarleton Tournament, although he no doubt would like to see his Hawk Queens perform well here.

"We're looking forward to the WJC race, but this tournament should get us ready for the rest of the conference schedule, because at this stage, that's what's the most important."

OSU defends rating with win over UCLA

By the Associated Press

Oregon State showed UCLA who was the boss.

"This could have been the best game we've had all season," said Oregon State oasketball Coach Ralph Miller after an artistic 81-67 triumph over UCLA Thursday night. "I thought we executed well, both offensively and defensively. It would be very nice if we could remember to do that every time out."

The top-ranked Beavers, one of the country's best shooting teams, hit a season-high 69 percent from the field on 34 of 49 attempts in the big Pac-10 game. Steve Johnson led the way, hitting 12 of 17 field goal tries, grabbing 11 rebounds and scoring 27 points.

"Anytime you come in here (Corvallis, Ore.) and they shoot that well, you're in trouble," said Larry Brown, coach of the 10th-ranked Bruins. "They have Steve Johnson inside, and he's such a factor. Johnson's a great offensive player."

Miller: "It was defense and ball handling, the same old keys. To hold a team as good as they are under 70, that's good defensive work."

Elsewhere in college basketball, 13th-ranked Iowa defeated Purdue 84-67; No. 17 Michigan whipped Northwestern 77-52; Indiana downed No. 19 Minnesota 56-53 in overtime and Rhode Island upset 20th-ranked Connecticut 78-75.

The Beavers, tied with Virginia for the No.1-ranking in The Associated Press poll, never fell behind in the contest. UCLA trailed by as many as 16 points early in the second half but rallied to pull within six, 57-51, on Darren Daye's inside basket with 9:44 remaining.

But Oregon State reserve guard William Brew responded with a three-point play moments later and UCLA never got closer than seven after that.

Rod Foster paced the Bruins with 19 points, 14 in the first half.

"Oregon State plays with confidence," said Brown. "We didn't seem confident and I told the kids that. I don't want to see that again. We lost patience in the second half when we needed it."

Noted Oregon State guard Ray Blume: "We had a scare in Seattle (a 97-91 overtime victory against Washington). We came back here and went to work." (Blume hit eight of 10 field goal shots and had two steals.)

Iowa beat Purdue with the help of a 15-point streak in the first half sparked by Kevin Boyle and Steve Krafcisin. Boyle scored 21 points and Krafcisin came off the bench to net 20 as the Hawkeyes retained a share of the Big Ten lead.

The column was ommitted last week due to lack of time . . . So, I thought it would be a good time to see if it was missed. Sure enough, my two daughters-in-laws — one dear friend came & asked, "Why?", It seems I had ruined their Friday by leaving it out. Next day I saw another devoted reader (my Mother) & asked her if she too were upset about the column not being there . . . she responded, I didn't notice, I thought I read it & cut it out? So much for customer response!

To OHS in 5-AAAAA encounter

Steer girls fall short

The Odessa High Bronchos held off a stubborn bunch of Big Spring Steers here Thursday evening to claim a 65-46 District 5-AAAAA girls basketball contest.

The final 19-point margin was somewhat deciving, as OHS led by only nine entering the final quarter. But in the end, it was simply the youthfulness of the Steers and the depth of the OHS team that spelled the difference.

After OHS took a 15-7 first quarter lead, the Steer girls came back to narrow the margin to 29-24 at the intermission.

But that would prove to be the biggest quarter for the BSHS team, and the Broncho girls held on for the win, which increased their second half 5-AAAAA mark to 1-1 and their season record to 7-17. Big Spring, meanwhile fell to 0-2 and 4-21 with the loss.

Linda Baker and Clara Hamilton shared high point honors for OHS with 14 points each.

Elise Wheat had 13 to pace the Steer fems, with Shell Rutledge and Sylvia Randle adding 11 and 10 points, respectively.

The road to victoy won't get any easier next time for the Steer fems, either, as they travel to meet the first half champion San Angelo Bobcats on Monday.

Turnovers stop Hawks in loss to Amarillo

AMARILLO — Nearly two months ago, Howard College and the Amarillo Badgers met in a WJC men's game, and the HC Hawks rolled to a 44-20 halftime lead en route to an 84-62 win.

But on this cold Thursday night in late January, the story was nearly a complete reverse, as the host Badgers exploded in the mid-way stages of the first half for a big halftime lead in racing to a 98-71 triumph over the Hawks.

The Hawks entered the game with the lead in the Western Conference race, but following the night's happenings, find themselves back in a three-way tie with Midland College and Frank Phillips. All of them have an 8-2 record in conference play.

It won't remain that way for long, however, as Howard ventures on to Borger and a date with Frank Phillips tonight, with the winner once again taking a slim lead in the rugged WJC race.

WESTERN CONFERENCE MEN'S STANDINGS

Howard	8-2
Frank Phillips	8-2
Midland	8-2
South Plains	6-4
NMJC	5-5
Western Texas	4-6
Odessa	3-6
Amarillo	3-6
Clarendon	3-7
NMMI	1-9

Last night's results: Amarillo 98, Howard 71; South Plains 60, Western Texas 49; Midland College 75, Clarendon 61; Frank Phillips 84, NMMI 51; Odessa 95, NMJC 91.

Turnovers proved to be the downfall of the Hawk team in the loss to the Badgers. In the first half alone, Howard turned the ball over 16 times. But more importantly, Amarillo converted 14 of the 16 HC turnovers into 28 points worth of buckets and a whopping 52-33 halftime lead.

But for those spectators that witnessed the first half the 19-point Amarillo lead was nearly too quick, as Howard once led by 19-14 in the contest.

But three straight turnovers led to six Amarillo points and a 20-19 lead, before the Hawks took the lead again at 21-20.

Another rash of turnovers allowed the AC team to then score eight unanswered points and take the lead for good. From that point, the game seemed to snowball, just as the weather did outside.

The 19-point margin of difference at halftime was not out of the each of the high scoring Hawks on some nights, but it would be this time.

"We tried to get organized at halftime," explained Howard College Coach Harold Wilder. "They were getting way too many turnovers in that first half, and then feeding Don Gandy on the fast breaks for some easy buckets. We stopped that in the second half, but they started hitting everything they threw up from way out."

Wilder seemed to blame the 98 points the Badgers accumulated more on the Hawk offense than the defense. "Our half-court defense was adequate," Wilder stated, "but they just killed us with the turnovers and their conversions off of it on the break."

Gandy paced Amarillo with 29 points, with Tom Sewell adding 27.

Howard College was paced in the scoring column by WJC leader Randy Corker's 18 points. Crushon Loving added 12 and Ron Akins 10.

Tonight's showdown with Frank Phillips will be broadcast in Big Spring on radio station KBST.

HOWARD (71)—Akins, 4-2-10; Jones, 3-2-8; Corker, 8-2-18; Faubion, 4-0-8; Loving, 3-6-12; Johnson, 2-0-4; Hirsch, 1-2-4; Adams, 2-1-5; Mound, 1-0-2; Word, 0-0-0; Chatfield, 0-0-0; TOTALS, 28-15-71

Steers visit Odessa in battle for pride

ODESSA — While the District 5-AAAAA boys basketball leaders square off in the first half showdon in Abilene Cooper Gym, a pair of teams trying to avoid the cellar will square off when the OHS Bronchos play host to the Big Spring Steers here at eight.

Both the Bronchos and Steers are winless in five district starts, but both have shown the potential to play winning basketball at times.

The Steers led the Cooper Cougars by nine points on Tuesday night going into the fourth quarter, only to see the Cougars rally and stay in first half title contention.

OHS, meanwhile, was being drubbed by 5-AAAAA leader Midland, 70-50.

The Steers take a season record of 9-14 into the contest, with their last win coming in their final non-district encounter at the expense of Coahoma. OHS is 4-21 on the year.

The 5-AAAAA showdown features Midland (5-0) playing at Cooper (4-1). A Midland win would clinch at least a tie for the first half title, depending on the outcome of the San Angelo (3-2) vs. Odessa Permian (4-1) contest. In the other district game, Abilene High (2-3) faces Midland Lee (2-3).

But nobody seems to care

None, however, get quite the attention accorded the person who so often rules the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am Golf Tournament — the weatherman.

Another in a series of winter storms forced a postponement of Thursday's first round in the famed tournament and set back the schedule by a full day. It now has a Friday-through-Monday run.

Even that delayed schedule is very much subject to the weather. Tournament officials, with one eye on the gloomy clouds rolling in off Carmel Bay, were extremely cautious and non-commital in making long-range plans.

"Perhaps," said Clyde Mangum in assessing the possibility of playing the first round Friday.

"Hopefully, we will be able to complete the tournament on Monday."

Pressed for contingency plans in the case of more rain or other delays, Mangum said only: "We wouldn't want to go beyond what we have announced."

Mangum, deputy commissioner for the PGA Tour, announced the one-day postponement Thursday after more than three inches of rain and some hail fell on the three Monterey Peninsula courses.

Pumps were used in an attempt to empty the flooded sand traps, but they couldn't keep up with the squalls. Fairways were also flooded. Shallow pools formed on greens and tees.

The forecast called for showers through today with clearing on the weekend.

The format for this unique event makes it impractical for double rounds to be played as in some tournaments. The 168 pros, each with an amateur partner, play one round on each of three courses before the field is cut for the final round at Pebble Beach. It would be inequitable to cut the field before all players have played all courses.

The players generally shrugged off the postponement. With the rain-drenched courses closed for the day, they scattered over the Peninsula for shopping expeditions with wives, card games and movies.

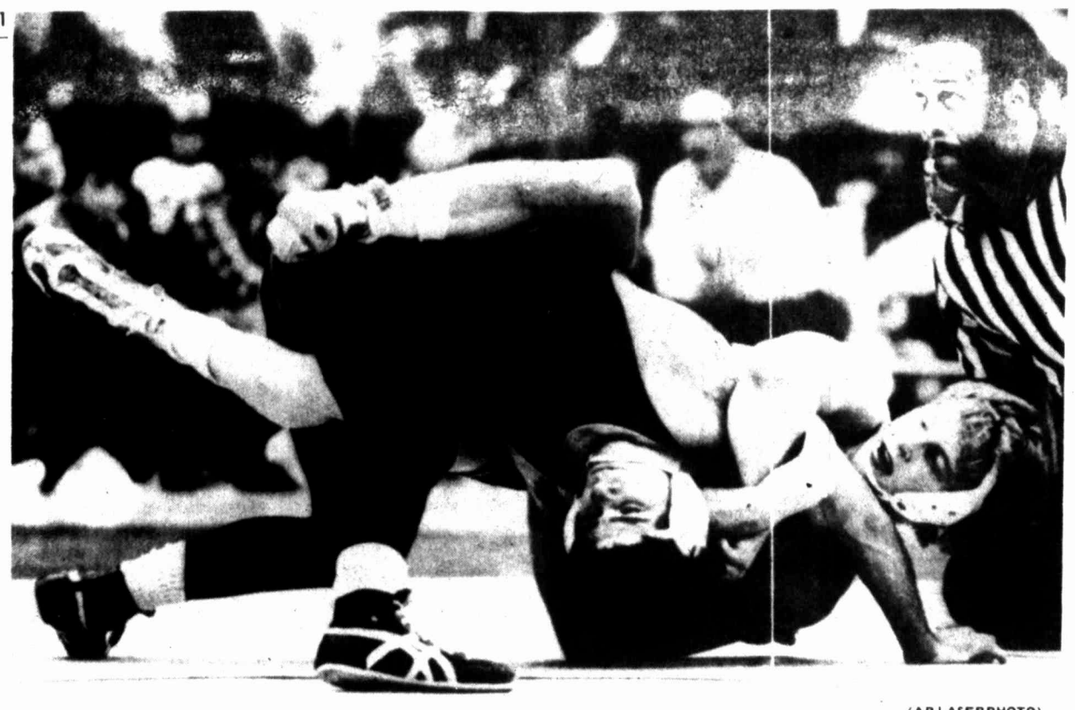

"Well, there are worst places to be rained out," said Tom Kite.

"It isn't your ideal situation," said Nicklaus, "but there's nothing you can do about it. Over the years you adjust to it."

And then, glancing at his watch and noticing he already was late, Nicklaus hustled off for a lunch date with the former president.

While players and officials took the schedule change in stride, it caused a massive headache for a travel agency at the Pebble Beach tournament headquarters.

"We've had to change literally hundreds of flights," one harassed clerk said.

ZALESKY WINS MATCH — Iowa wrestler Lenny Zalesky struggles to gain control of his opponet Jeff Barksdale of Cal-Poly during their 142 lb. match last night in Iowa City. Zalesky managed to hold on long enough to beat Barksdale, 16-10, as Iowa revenged last year's duel match loss to the Mustangs 48-0. (Zlesky's face is to the right)

AL owners accept bids for 2 clubs

CHICAGO (AP) — The new owners of the Chicago White Sox and the Seattle Mariners say they are committed to developing their clubs' farm systems.

Sale of the White Sox to a group headed by a suburban real estate developer and a network television executive and of the Mariners to a California millionaire won the unanimous approval of American League owners Thursday.

The new owners were approved by a pair of unanimous 14-0 votes at a meeting that lasted less than an hour.

The White Sox were bought for $20 million by a group headed by Jerry Reinsdorf and Eddie Einhorn while George Argyros purchased 80 percent the Mariners for $10.4 million.

Reinsdorf, 44, is a Highland Park real estate developer. Einhorn, 45, is a Paterson, N.J., television executive who plans to resign his position with CBS next month.

Argyros, 43, is a self-made millionaire land developer from Newport Beach, Calif., who only 20 years ago was the manager of a supermarket.

With the White Sox, Reinsdorf will run the baseball end of the operation and Einhorn the business end. They will be equal and general partners but are taking on numerous limited partners.

They bought the club from a group headed by Bill Veeck after the American League owners twice turned down sale of the team to Edward J. DeBartolo Sr., a Youngstown, Ohio, developer.

DeBartolo was turned down partly because the league opposes absentee ownership, and American League president Lee MacPhail was asked why the league allowed Argyros to buy the Mariners.

"Because there was a local bid for the White Sox," said MacPhail. "Such was not the case with Seattle. There was nobody around willing the purchase the club locally."

Jaworski glad for another chance

HONOLULU (AP) — Although his team lost the Super Bowl, Philadalphia quarterback Ron Jaworski still has an opportunity to close out the season with a bowl victory.

"I get a final chance to go out a winner," said Jaworski, who wll share the National Football Conference signal-calling duties with Atlanta's Steve Bartkowski against the American Conference in Sunday's Pro Bowl.

"It wouldn't make up for not winning the Super Bowl, but it would still be nice to end up the season with a win," he said after Thursday's practice session at Aloha Stadium.

Jaworski threw three interceptions and his face was a study in frustration in the waning moments of last Sunday's 27-10 Super Bowl loss to Oakland. But now he's accepted the defeat.

"It was 'a huge disappointment, but there's Nothing that can be done about it now," he said "It was a big thrill for me just to be in the game, and I think...I know we'll be back there again.

"We scrapped and we battled in that gama, but we just couldn't get anything going. Everytime we seemed to get started, we'd get a penalty or something."

The one play that haunts him a little, Jaworski said, was an interception he threw early in the game that led to Oakland's first score and put the Raiders ahead for keeps.

"That one bothered me because that's exactly what I didn't want to do, make a mistake that let them take the lead early," he said "I knew if that happened, I'd be facing their nickel defense and have Ted Hendricks (Oakland linebackar) and the rest of them coming after ma all day.

"It's impossible to explain but it was just one of those days when nothing worked right for us"

Jaworski, 29, was the NFC's leading passer this season with a 90.9 rating. An outstanding, though generally overlooked collegiate quarterback at Youngstown State, he has started the past four years for the Eagles after serving as a Los Angeles Rams' babkup tor three years.

The Pro Bowl appearance will be his first, and Jaworski said: "It's really fun to be here with all these great players and, considering all the talent, it's gotta be an exciting game Sunday".

Lemons wants 30-second clock

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Basketball Coach Abe Lemons of Texas says the Longhorns' 46-40 loss to Rice makes a good case for the 30-second clock in the Southwest Conference, which he refers to as the "No-Doze League."

"I've been for it for a long time, and it's got nothing to do with tonight," Lemons said Wednesday night. "We might be better off without it, but I think it's becoming inevitable. I think the conference will have to consider it."

"Everybody's found the secret. If you play slow, you always have a chance to win. Even Houston's holding the ball eight minutes to get a last shot these days. It's terrible, just terrible," said Lemons.

Some fans apparently found the Rice-Texas game so dull they started for the exits before the overtime period began. The score was tied 38-38 at the end of regulation as Rice went to a slowdown offense with just under nine minutes remaining.

Rice Coach Mike Schuler said, "It's not necessarily what I want to do. But it's in our interest to play that way. You have to understand the way it is with coaches. If you win, they keep you. If you lose, you get fired."

Duran has 2 boxing offers for big bucks

NEW YORK (AP) — Former welterweight champion Roberto Duran now has two offers which would bring him back to boxing and end what would be a very brief retirement.

Madison Square Garden Thursday said it would pay the Panamanian $750,000 to fight World Boxing Association junior welterweight champion Aaron Pryor in a 10-round non-title bout.

The proposal came one day after promoter Don King had said that he hoped to match Duran against WBC junior middleweight champ Maurice Hope of England in a title match on May 22 in Las Vegas, Nev. King said the bout would be on the same card as a fight between WBC heavyweight champion Larry Holmes and former champ Leon Spinks.

Garden Boxing President John Condon said that Pryor, of Cincinnati, has agreed to fight Duran, and that he would contact Carlos Eleta, Duran's manager, in New Orleans today. Condon said Pryor and Duran would get the same amount of money.

Duran had said he was finished with boxing when he quit in the eighth round of his first title defense against Sugar Ray Leonard in New Orleans on Nov. 25. But he later recanted and said he hoped to make a comeback.

King said no contracts had been signed for either the proposed Duran-Hope fight or the Holmes-Spinks match, but he said negotiations were underway for both.

Astros accept plaudits with warning to NL West

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Other National League teams no longer necessarily like to see the Houston Astros come calling, says batting coach Deacon Jones.

Jones recalled how — "say five years ago — when we went to a town like Cincinnati or Los Angeles they would say, 'The Astros are coming to town. Heck, we can almost stay out all night and beat 'em.' Out now (they say) the Astros are coming to town ... le better get our rest. These guys mean business."

Jones said Houston "got on the map ... came of age" last year when the Astros won the Western Division and missed by a single loss to the Philadelphia Phillies of making the World Series.

The coach appeared with pitcher Nolan Ryan and Craig Reynolds to accept the Legislature's congratulations for the 1980 season.

"Once you learn how to win, it becomes a lot easier. Jones told a news conference.

"We have something we want to accomplish we didn't accomplish last year," said Reynolds.

"It makes us a little more determined in the coming season, because we got so close," said Ryan.

Reynolds and Ryan discounted the suggestion that front office problems might affect the team's performance in 1981.

"We have no control over front office decisions," said Reynolds. "We go out when the bell rings."

Reynolds predicted the infield would be better defensively despite the loss of second baseman Joe Morgan and third baseman Enos Cabell, and Ryan maintained his famed fastball has lost none of its zip.

Reynolds predicted with Rafael Landestoy at second and Art Howe at third "we will have a little more range. Offensively, it's hard to compare. Defensively, there's no question we'll be a better ball club than last year."

Ryan said the "radar gun shows the same velocity" on his fastball, but he indicated he had difficulty learning how to pitch to National League hitters after shifting from the American League.

The Astros, whose star righthander J.R. Richards missed much of the season as a result of a stroke, signed pitchers Don Sutton and Bob Knepper in the off-season, and Jones said, "J.R.'s situation — nobody knows. If he comes back, we'll be that far ahead."

"Our dome is conducive to pitching," said Jones. "When guys like (Mike) Schmidt get in the batting cage, they say, 'Here we are in the tomb again.'"

Reynolds was asked how Sutton, the former Los Angeles righthander, felt about pitching in the dome, and Reynolds replied, "He's very excited ... not many guys can hit the ball out of the Astrodome. When he does make a mistake, it won't hurt him there."

Asked if he thought Houston could repeat as division champions, Jones said, "Dern right, dern right, but it's not going to be easy."

Jones later told senators, "We've come a long way but we've still got a long way to go. Next time we hope we can come back as world champions."

Spurs Restani in ICU after wild car wreck

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The car that plowed into a jeep driven by San Antonio Spurs basketball player Kevin Restani, seriously injuring him, allegedly was being chased by a third vehicle, according to the investigating officer.

Restani, 29, suffered five broken ribs, lung damage and burns in the collision about 10 p.m. Wednesday and was reported in stable condition in the intensive care unit of a local hospital Thursday.

Patrolman Leonard Paul Cicero, who investigated the wreck on a private parking lot, said Thursday Jeffrey Costello, 21, whose auto collided with Restani's jeep, told him he was fleeing from a man with a gun in another car.

The third man was arrested an hour later by other officers and charged with operating a stolen vehicle, Cicero said. He said the man allegedly chasing Costello possibly could face other charges, but that no traffic citations were issued because the wreck happened on private property outside a nightclub.

"The guy was chasing the guy who ran into Kevin," the officer said. "He was apprehended and hour and half later in a stolen vehicle and was in jail waiting transfer."

Cicero said the chase allegedly involved jealousy over a woman.

Teammates Mark Olbdering and Paul Griffin, who were at the scene, provided information and helped get Restani to a hospital, Cicero said. "They helped out at the scene," the patrolman said.

Restani, a native of San Francisco, was waiting to drive out of a parking lot on Perrin Beitel Road when the collision ocurred, according to team publicist Wayne Witt.

Celtics coach upset as streak broken

By the Associated Press

The Boston Celtics finally got bounced after 14 games. And they weren't let down easily by the Chicago Bulls, either.

"To say I was disappointed is the understatement of the year," said Boston Coach Bill Fitch after a 108-85 rout by the Bulls Thursday night that stopped a 13-game National Basketball Association winning streak.

"I can't use the words I would like to use for family newspapers. It's too bad we don't have another practice before the All-Star Game because I'd probably make them work without a ball."

The Celtics, who had won 25 of their last 26 contests, suffered their worst loss of the season while the Bulls won their sixth straight game to reach the .500 mark, at 27-27, right before this weekend's All-Star Game in Richfield, Ohio.

"I remember when we beat Boston by 21 points in March of 1970 (134-113) but this was our biggest margin," said Chicago Coach Jerry Sloan, a former Bulls player. "Reaching the .500 mark this way really makes me happy at the All-Star break."

In other NBA action, it was Golden State 117, Detroit 112; Cleveland 115, Phoenix 111; New York 114, Atlanta 111; San Antonio 122, New Jersey 108; Utah 99, Houston 97; Denver 131, Milwaukee 118; Portland 108, San Diego 106 and Los Angeles 118, Kansas City 104.

Reggie Theus led the Bulls with 22 points.

Warriors 117, Pistons 112

Bernard King, Lloyd Free and Joe Barry Carroll accounted for 88 points as Golden State rebounded from an 18-point deficit to beat Detroit.

King and Free both wound up with 30 points while Carroll had 28 to enable the Warriors to snap a two-game losing streak and send the floundering Pistons down to their 42nd defeat in 55 starts this season.

Knicks 114, Hawks 111

Ray Williams scored 15 points during a 40-point New York first quarter and the Knicks went on to a tight victory over Atlanta.

Williams finished with a team-high 24 points as the Knicks broke a three-game losing streak and posted their first victory in Atlanta since December 1977. The loss was the 13th in 14 games for the Hawks, whose losing streak on their home court reached seven games.

Spurs 122, Nets 108

George Gervin scored 26 points, James Silas added 24 and Mark Olberding chipped in with 21 as San Antonio defeated New Jersey.

The victory ran San Antonio's home winning streak to 12 games, tying a club mark dating back to 1968 ing dallas and breaking a three-game Spurs losing streak, the longest victory drought the team had suffered this season.

Jazz 99, Rockets 97

Adrian Dantley scored 37 points and teammates Ben Poquette and Rickey Green sparked a fourth-quarter comeback to help Utah beat Houston.

Moses Malone led the Rockets with 28 points and Major Jones, Mike Dunleavy and Calvin Murphy finished with 12 points each.

There's an old saying that "blue eyes belong to leaders and brown eyes to dreamers. . ." We can't tell the color of this child's eyes from her picture, but they look a great deal like the eyes of rich wisdom.

Wisdom comes to most of us only after many years of struggle and growth. And even when we feel a bit wiser, we soon realize that there is always much more to learn — that, in truth, learning is a life-long process.

But whatever age and degree of wisdom we may attain, our need for a changeless source of inspiration remains the same. Within your place of worship you will find a power of truth founded on eternal love and maintained by divine wisdom. On such, character is built and wisdom enhanced.

Draw new courage and hope from the wellspring of knowledge that makes men free. Worship this week!

Church sponsors Afghans

The congregation of First Christian Church of Big Spring voted last Sunday to sponsor a refugee family from Afghanistan. Rev. Victor Sedinger, minister of the congregation, said "The congregation unanimously supported the project in a business meeting following services on Sunday."

The principle involved in sponsorhip is to help the refugee family become adapted to life here and to aid them into a speedy self-dependency. Sponsorship by a congregation or agency does not involve a legal commitment, but there are moral responsibilities which go along with it. Sponsors agree to find temporary housing, an initial supply of food, clothing, and household goods, and they agree to help the head of the household find employment.

Several years ago the congregation sponsored a young Vietnamese family. "That overwhelmingly positive experience, I think, gave the congregation more confidence in deciding to take on a new family," said Rev. Sedinger. It could be several weeks before the necessary sponsorship papers are processed through the denominational offices in Indianapolis and the refugee camps overseas. All refugees are screened while they are awaiting sponsorship into this country, and no refugee may come into this country without a sponsoring agency.

Sedinger added, "the plight of the people of Afghanistan has been on our mind since early last year when the Soviets occupied and subjected their country. In my opinion, this sponsorship is a way for us to show our concern for what happened to them and their country, but more than that it is a witness to our faith and commitment to serve the Lord by helping those in need."

REV. TED L. ROBINSON — national evangelist from Nazarene International Headquarters, Kansas City, Mo., returns for the third speaking conference engagement to the Big Spring First Church of the Nazarene, Feb. 3-8. He will be speaking week nights at 7 p.m., and Sunday at 10:40 a.m., and 6 p.m. Robinson will relate current events to prophetic truths as well as speak on the timeless truths in Bible centered messages. By popular demand, he is returning for his third engagement here. Special music will be featured each evening, and nursery facilities provided.

Pope will find church growth minute in Japan

TOKYO (AP) — On his visit to Japan, Pope John Paul II will find a Roman Catholic church that is secure, influential and admired — but one which in 125 years has failed to convert more than a tiny fraction of Japan's people to its faith.

Church officials here are not dismayed by that state of affairs, and a leading Jesuit educator says it will be "very sobering" for the pontiff to "see the church in a minority in an industrialized country."

The Rev. Jose M. de Vera, a Portuguese Jesuit and dean of the prestigious international college at Tokyo's Sophia University, says the visit Feb. 23-26 will be the pope's first to a "truly non-Christian" country. Even mostly Moslem Turkey, which he visited last year, has a long Christian tradition.

Only about 1 percent of Japan's 116 million people are Christian, about two-thirds of these Protestant. Less than 400,000 are Roman Catholic, according to recent government surveys and the Catholic bishops' conference.

Available records indicate there were nearly as many Catholics or more — 300,000 to 600,000 — after the first Jesuit and Franciscan missionaries arrived in the 16th century. Even if the total were nearer the lower figure, the number today isn't growing much.

"We have reached the point of natural replacement — families of Catholics being baptized," de Vera says.

Christianity was brought to Japan by St. Francis Xavier in 1549. Within a few decades, up to 600,000 people were "converted." Modern Catholics dismiss most of those as false conversions.

"A daimyo (feudal lord) would become Christian, and everybody under him had to become Christian," notes the Rev. Campion Lally, a Franciscan missionary from South Orange, N.J.

About 1620, the new Tokugawa Shogunate (military rulers) closed Japan to the outside world, banning Christianity as a "foreign religion." All families were required to join Buddhist temples. Those who refused were killed.

Several thousand people publicly gave up their Catholicism, but kept it in secret. Many of these "hidden Christians" emerged 250 years later, when the Tokugawas were toppled in 1856 and Japan was reopened to the world. Catholics as well as Protestants, now the most numerous.

It is expected that Protestants, too, will share in welcoming the pope, as his trips generally have ecumenical dimensions. His February trip also includes visits to the mostly Catholic Philippines Feb. 17-22, and stops in Guam Feb. 22 and in Anchorage, Alaska, Feb. 26.

Hostages show strong committment

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — After visiting with former U.S. hostages on their brief hospital stay here, a U.S. Air Force chaplain says "a lot of them read the Bible and some read it several times" during their ordeal in Iran.

Chaplain Danny R. Thompson of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) says he sensed a "strong religious commitment" among the former prisoners.

Rabbis share majority concerns

LAKEWOOD, N. J. (AP) — The president of the Rabbinical Council of America, representing Orthodox rabbis, says that "to a large extent we share" the concerns of Moral Majority in seeking to shore up traditional sexual standards and end abortion.

"A return to classical values will strengthen the American family and restore the moral fiber of our nation," Rabbi Sol Roth told the council's Torah Convocation. But he added that "we must oppose that extremist tendency" to exclude others as shown by some Moral Majority supporters.

Ministers Fellowship has program on alcoholism

The Howard County Ministerial Fellowship met Monday at the Bonanza Steak House from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Fifteen area ministers, chaplains and guests attended.

Chaplain Russell Patrick of Veterans Administration Medical Center, presented the program, "How to Help the Alcoholic."

Baptists to hear directors

The men and boys of the Big Spring Baptist Association will serve a chili and stew supper at 6:30 p.m. Feb. 9 for $1 a serving in Hillcrest Baptist Church Fellowship Hall. Coffee and tea will be furnished.

Rev. Jerry Bob Taylor, state Royal Ambassador director from Dallas, will speak to the men in Fellowship Hall immediately following the meal. George Brown, regional camp R.A. director from Odessa will show slides and have a special presentation for the boys in the sanctuary.

James Kinman will direct the music program.

The Big Spring Baptist Association, directed by Sam Robertson, Big Spring, includes 31 Baptist congregations in the district including, besides Big Spring, Forsan, Garden City, Coahoma, Prairie View, Knott, Luther, Vincent, Vealmoor, Sand Springs, Salem and Courtney communities. Everyone is invited to participate.

Doctrinal series is scheduled

Rev. Carroll C. Kohl, St. Paul Luteran Church, began a 16 weeks refresher study course on Christian Doctrine based on scripture last evening at 7:30 in the Parish Hall.

The course is available free of charge to the general public as well as members of the church. Further information may be obtained at the church office, 267-7163 Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to noon or from the parsonage, 263-2764.

Rev. Kohl will be attending a District Pastor's Workshop in La Grange Feb. 3-5 whose theme is "Preparation for the Lenten Season."

Lutherans census is reported

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Lutherans in the world total 69.6 million, reports a survey by the Lutheran World Federation. About 52 million are Europeans and about 9 million are Americans.

Handguns do shoot people

NEW YORK (AP) — Commenting on slogans of the National Rifle Association against gun control, such as "Guns don't kill people; people kill people," Reform Judaism's social-action commission says:

"People do kill people, but they don't do it with sponges, rulers and rubber ducks ... The handgun, known not to be useful for hunting, is made and sold for the purpose of shooting people."

Doctors push practices act

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A doctor could lose his or her license for habitually overcharging patients if legislators pass a new Medical Practices Act sought by the Texas Medical Association.

TMA lobbyist Greg Hooser held a news conference Thursday with five legislative sponsors to announce the bill had been filed for introduction in the House and Senate.

Failure to pass a new medical act would put the State Board of Medical Examiners out of business on Sept. 1. The board is one of more than two dozen agencies up for review and renewal this year under the Sunset process.

The TMA's bill adds three consumer representatives to the 12-doctor board, prohibits officers of the TMA from serving on the board and adds several new grounds for revoking a physician's license.

But it leaves non-physicians off district review committees that investigate complaints against doctors, and it fails to give nurses the independent role in patient care that many of them want.

The TMA bill fills a vacuum left when the Sunset Advisory Commission was unable to agree on a measure continuing the board and rewriting the medical act.

Rep. Bennie Bock II, D-New Braunfels, commission chairman, noted that Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, had asserted the commission was dominated by the doctors and the medical board.

"Frankly, I resent that. ... Everyone had an opportunity to testify," Bock said.

The bill makes several changes in the existing Texas Medical Practices Act:

— A doctor could lose his or her license for "persistently and flagrantly" overcharging or overtreating patients.

Hooser said the board would follow "a reasonableness standard" in deciding whether a doctor overcharged or performed unnecessary surgery or other treatments.

— False advertising or "advertising professional superiority" would be grounds for suspending a doctor's license.

Asked if this meant it would be legal for doctors to advertise, Hooser said advertising never had been prohibited.

— The board could put a doctor out of business for incompetence or for repeated medical malpractice insurance claims that are found to be justified.

— The board through its rules and individual physicians through their decisions would firmly control any delegation of medical care to nurses or physicians' assistants.

Nurses' organizations say rural and ghetto areas will remain underserved until nurses receive greater authority for patient care.

— Patient records would be confidential unless a patient authorized disclosure or the records were sought as evidence in a board investigation, criminal proceeding or civil suit by a patient against a doctor.

Fire marshal's office burns

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Sometimes it's not so easy to practice what you preach, workers in the state fire marshal's office have discovered.

The fire marshal's headquarters was damaged Tuesday in a fire at a Sacramento office complex.

"It's a little bit close to home when you're the state fire marshal and trying to preach the message of fire prevention. But we're not immune," said the fire marshal's regional supervisor, Herman Schierenberg.

Children saw parents drown in Indonesian ship disaster

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — "The waves were very high. We saw our father and mother popping up once in a while in the waves. We called and screamed at the top of our voices and then we saw them no more," the 9-year-old girl said.

Juanita Armesetiawati and her 6-year-old brother Mewotan were among the 762 survivors pulled from the heaving Java Sea after the passenger ship Tampomas 2 burned and sank Tuesday in Indonesia's worst sea disaster.

The boy and girl were brought to the South Sulawesi port of Ujung Pandang today as rescue ships and planes continued searching for the 374 dead and missing, including the children's parents, some 220 miles offshore.

The fire broke on the ship broke out Sunday night, and Juanita said, "I was awakened by a lot of noise. We were all disturbed by the confusion."

She said her father, a plantation worker, told them, "The ship will never make it," but put a life vest on, "and we followed our father's action."

Texas claims artificial heart

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Two Texas physicians patented an artificial heart a decade before Utah's College of Medicine approved one for use in a human, one of the doctors said said Thursday.

Dr. C. William Hall, who joined famed Houston heart surgeon Michael DeBakey in patenting an artificial heart in 1969, said both the Texas and Utah organs were of the collapsible sac-type and do not differ greatly in design.

"This means they both require air or a hydraulic drive of some sort by an outside mechanism," said Hall, now medical director at Southwest Research Institute.

Hall said he and DeBakey worked on the artificial heart at Baylor College of Medicine from 1964 to 1969.

"Ours was made of dacron and silastic and replaced the two main pumping chambers of the heart," Hall told the San Antonio Express in an interview two days after the University of Utah made its announcement.

Hall was co-recipient with Debakey of patent number 3,755,825 for the artificial heart in 1969, he said.

Hall said the model being consiered for implantation in Salt Lake City was principally ddesigned by Dr. Robert K. Jarvik. He said the Jarvik-7 model is made of aluminum and a polyurethane plastic.

"The greatest advances have been in the biomaterials used to construct such devices, valve designs, and I am sure they have a refined version of the outside unit they will use to drive the heart," he said.

The artificial heart developed in Houston was used once in a human patient awaiting a heart transplant. The patient later died after the human heart transplanted into his body was rejected, Hall said.

Hall said neither he nor DeBakey received any benefit from their patent because it became public domain in custody of the former Department of Health, Education and Welfare, which helped in the development of the artificial heart.

Hall said the idea of an artificial heart had been around a long time.

McKeel says he would have attempted escape

NEW YORK (AP) — Former hostage John D. McKeel knew his planned escape was doomed to failure, but he says he was prepared to die in his break for freedom on Feb. 12.

The 27-year-old Marine sergeant described his do-or-die plans in an interview today on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

"At the last place we were at, four or five guards were out in the halls guarding us. We were just planning on trying to overpower them, and just trying to get out," he said.

Asked if he thought he and the other hostages in on the plan could succeed, he replied, "Not really."

He said he was prepared to die in the attempt planned for next month.

The plan had been in the works about four months, but he said the idea occurred around Christmas 1979 when "we were feeling a little depressed finding out that nothing was happening.

"We started making plans, but we never did get to go through with them because we were transferred around the country so many times," said McKeel, of Balch Springs, Texas.

No other Marines were part of his planned escape, he said. In an interview earlier this week, however, McKeel said he and three other Marines planned to jump their guards, fight their way out and flee to Greece.

The four communicated their plans by tapping on the walls and leaving messages in the toilets, he said.

"Most of the Marines are trained in jungle survival, desert survival, things of that sort. We felt that if we could get out, we'd be able to make it acorss the desert," he said Wednesday on the Larry King Show on the Mutual Broadcasting Systems.

Also interviewed today by ABC-TV were Marines Sgts. William A. Gallegos, 22, of Pueblo, Colo., and Steven W. Kirtley, 22, of Little Rock, Ark.

Gallegos said he did not regard himself or the other freed Americans as heroes.

"I feel that there have been many other people who have experienced a lot more, suffered more in different situations, Vietnam, World War I, World War II, Korea. They endured a lot more than we did," he said.

Both McKeel and Kirtley said they were proud of the country's reaction to the hostages.

"If what we've done has united the people in America and all over the wolrd, then for me being captive has been worth it," McKeel said

Kirtley said he was surprised at heroes' welcome for the freed captives. "In all my dreams, it never came to anything as big or as massive a bringing together of the United States as what has happened. I'm really proud as a Marine and an American to be a part of it."

Reappraisal activities reviewed for tax unit

COLORADO CITY (SC) — The Mitchell County tax appraisal board received an update Thursday night on the reappraisal activities of Southwestern Appraisal Company of Austin.

On hand to brief the board was the on-site supervisor for Mitchell and Sterling counties, Al Jett, who commented, "we will work the residential areas north to south, then the original town of Colorado City south of the railroad tracks during the months of February and March. Then we will do all the rural areas. We have done an in-depth study of the market value of property and we will complete these rural areas by May 15. Included in the evaluations will be personal property, livestock and equipment, excluding vehicles.

Mike Burt, who serves as chief appraiser for the board, mentioned anyone who has questions about the appraiser should feel free to contact him at his office in the courthouse.

The final item on Thursday's agenda was the appointment of a committee by board president Curtis Latimer to meet with the county commissioners for the purpose of securing office space for the appraisal district.

Making up the committee are J.D. Clifon, chairman; J. Craddock, Mrs. Vernon Lewis, and William Connally.

Mitchell County Centennial Committee off to fast start

COLORADO CITY (SC) — The finance group of the Mitchell County Centennial Committee is off to a fast start.

While no money total was released, Mrs. Charles Thompson, committee chairman, noted at a meeting Thursday, the committee would exceed the minimum goal of $10,000.

According to Mrs. Thompson "I've never seen people so willing to contribute their money and their time. We have a wonderful committee working on this project. After the Centennial, any money left over will be given to worthy causes within Mitchell County."

Mrs. Thompson concluded by saying "none of us will ever celebrate a Centennial again in Colorado City, so let's all make the most of it."
