Drug-testing proposal meets resistance

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's proposal to mandate drug testing for some federal employees as the cornerstone of an attack on drug abuse is meeting immediate resistance from members of Congress, unions and civil libertarians.

"This is the federal government's way of just saying 'no' to drugs," Reagan said Monday in signing an executive order requiring urine and blood test for federal employees in "sensitive positions" and calling for a 40 percent increase in government spending on drug abuse.

More than half of the new money, $500 million, would go to increased law enforcement efforts to combat drug trafficking. But the major thrust of Reagan's proposal — and most controversial — is to use the federal work force to, in the words of a White House statement, "set an example for all employers to provide drug-free work places."

The proposal met immediate opposition on Capitol Hill, where the House last week passed by a 392-16 vote a bill to use the military and increase federal spending on the drug problem by $6 billion over five years.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, in an interview Monday, labeled as "pretty absurd" the House directive ordering Reagan to send military forces to U.S. borders to help stop drug smuggling.

"We've always in our country, quite properly, said the military shouldn't engage in domestic law enforcement," Weinberger said. "The time that would be diverted into this is enormous. You would have to have commanders and various witnesses testifying in court in thousands of cases, and those things are never over quickly."

■ New York City police get creative in war against drugs — 2A

While the House bill called for a military role to stem the supply of drugs, it carefully avoided the issue of mandatory testing as a means of decreasing the demand for drugs.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on civil and constitutional rights, said Monday he is confident Reagan's order of mandatory testing will be held unconstitutional in court.

"The president's order violates three fundamental rights: the right not to testify against yourself, the right to be treated as innocent until proven guilty and the right to be free from unreasonable governmental intrusions of privacy," Edwards said. "Government employees do not check their rights at the door to the office."

Federal and state courts so far have furnished mixed rulings on the issue, but the overwhelming majority of them have held that mandatory tests by the government absent some other evidence or "probable cause" are illegal.

"Almost every court that has looked at the constitutionality of mandatory drug testing has ruled that at least there has to be a reasonable suspicion that a person is using drugs before urinalysis can be administered," said Loren Siegel of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Federal employee unions, some of them already waging court challenges to mandatory testing orders from specific government agencies, also described Reagan's order as an illegal "punitive dragnet."

"Reagan has opted for the role of hangman of federal workers," said Robert Tobias, president of the National Treasury Employees Union, which represents 120,000 Customs Service and the Internal Revenue Service workers.

"Sure, he might find some abuse," Tobias said. "So would strip-searching employees and visitors...random searches of employees' homes and wiretaps. Can they be far behind?"

White House counsel Peter Wallison said "there isn't a ballpark figure" on how many of the government's 2.8 million civilian employees will be tested. Each agency head, he said, will decide which employees are in "sensitive positions."

But several union leaders said a number as high as 1.1 million was discussed last week at a White House Cabinet meeting.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III described the mandatory tests as "generous program to help the worker who has a drug problem." He said employees who test positive will have access to drug rehabilitation programs, in all likelihood while remaining on the job.

Shigellosis findings released

By FRANK TROMBLEY

ODESSA — Midland and Ector County health officials Monday revealed that a total of 160 people have contracted shigellosis in the Midland-Odessa area since the outbreak began about August 29. Three other cases were reported in Big Spring and two in Hobbs, N.M.

Officials also indicated those people likely ate at one of three eating establishments in Midland or Odessa prior to becoming ill.

Ector County Health Director Dr. Robert Rowntree III, during a news conference Monday afternoon, said, "There are 67 confirmed cases in Midland and 93 cases in Odessa."

In a joint statement issued by Rowntree and Midland County Health Director Dr. James M. Humphreys Jr., they explained that "culture evaluation of victims of the infection, and the area food handlers is ongoing and incomplete. Statistical analysis of 31 cases and 62 matched controls from each city has been performed and the following conclusions are suggested:

— Ill persons in Odessa were more likely to have eaten at Taco Villa than those who did not become ill. Such a correlation could not be shown for Texas Burger in Odessa.

Lewis says Senate has not been cooperative in making budget cuts

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Despite a day of hot-tempered name calling, House-Senate budget negotiators have resolved their differences on most major state agencies, setting the stage for a final showdown over higher education today.

Moving into the second week of the second special session to deal with the state's $2.8 billion deficit, House Speaker Gib Lewis complained Monday that he hasn't "seen any cooperation at all" from his counterparts in the Senate over budget reductions.

"It's the House doing all the giving and no one wanting to make any cuts," Lewis told one group of reporters before storming off into an elevator. "I can't sell that in the House...All I see is just more spend, spend, tax, tax. We're not going to go for it."

"They haven't made any cuts," the speaker said later. "And here we've gone in and made some hard decisions, some hard votes in the House to try and do what we think is the responsible thing."

Senators replied that they had "gone more than halfway" in trying to compromise on the cuts. Sen. Grant Jones, D-Temple and chairman of the conference committee, said the Senate had offered a plan that reached the agreed-upon cuts of $580 million.

"You have a strange way of figuring it," responded Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield and chairman of the five-man group of House negotiators. That dispute centered over whether to count the elimination of a $70 million state employee pay raise in the $580 million figure.

One observer credited Monday's harsh words to a "vitriolic" meeting where "tempers flared" between Lewis and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby at the governor's mansion Friday. Asked about that meeting, Gov. Mark White said, "There were some differences of opinion." Hobby denied any clash.

No work — if any — will come on a tax increase until the two chambers resolve the cuts. House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Stan Schlueter, D-Salado, said it would take about two weeks to pass a tax bill. As of Monday, 20 days remained in the special session.

The committee began the day where it left off Sunday, trying to reach a compromise over cuts in spending for prisons, paroles and probations. With Attorney General Jim Mattox watching, the committee reached "an agreement in principle" to reinstate — on White's request — the $33.7 million the House had cut from the prison budget.

Mattox took that information with him to an afternoon federal court hearing on the state's compliance with prison reforms. After hearing of Lewis' strong comments, however, the Senate negotiators returned later in the day offering to accept some prison cuts.

House members, now taking a strong law-and-order stance and pushing strongly to restore the cuts, balked.

"We though we were dealing as adults in good faith, and we let him (Mattox) leave here thinking we would put the $33.7 million back in," said Rep. Bill Hollowell, D-Grand Saline.

That, in turn, brought an angry response from Senate Criminal Justice Committee Chairman Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, who said the senators wanted a package decision on prisons, paroles and probation.

"I get incensed when I'm accused of backing out of a deal," Caperton said. "If there's any misunderstanding, I hope that there's not any further, that we consider the criminal justice issue an entire package. Complete and whole. We never agreed to anything upon which we're reneging. I hope that's very clear."

"We'll know how to deal with you in the future, senator," Hollowell replied.

With Lewis watching closely, the panel eventually replaced $30 million cut from the prison budget and agreed to about $6 million in cuts for paroles and probation.

"We did maintain some halfway-house programs and some money for parole selection — who comes out of the prisons and who stays," said Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls. "There was considerable compromise by the Senate."

The committee also agreed to about $88 million in cuts for the Department of Human Services and about $16 million from the Department of Health.

American diplomat tells Soviets they don't understand U.S.

JURMALA, U.S.S.R. (AP) — A U.S. diplomat told Soviets today at a private superpower conference that by not comprehending why the KGB case against U.S. journalist Nicholas Danilofhas so upset Americans, the Russians failed to understand America itself.

"If there is any lack of understanding how strongly Americans feel when an innocent man is put in prison, I urge you to study the history of my society," Mark Palmer, U.S. ambassador to Hungary, said.

He was responding to a Soviet delegate who complained that the Americans were trying to ruin the meeting with continuous references to Daniloff.

"It is not tangential to this meeting, but central," Palmer said. "It is part of our whole approach on human rights, and if you don't understand that, you don't understand the United States."

Palmer spoke to nearly 2,000 people gathered in an open-air pavilion in this Baltic resort on the second day of the Chautauqua-Jurmala conference, a private exchange aimed at improving U.S.-Soviet relations.

Daniloff, 51, a correspondent for U.S. World & News Report weekly news magazine, was arrested by the KGB secret police on Aug. 30 after a Soviet acquaintance handed him a package later found to contain photographs of military equipment and maps marked secret.

Daniloff was held for 13 days in a Moscow prison and charged with spying before being released into the custody of the U.S. embassy pending trial. He denied Soviet contentions that he worked for the CIA.

Palmer described Americans as "deeply proud of, and willing to fiercely defend, their liberty.

"This is an issue which all Americans feel strongly about.

"This is not just a question of right-wing radicals from the military-industrial complex of troglodytes who feel strongly about this," he said.

The five-day meeting was organized in response to a similar exchange at the Chautauqua Institute in New York state in May 1985. The U.S. delegation at Jurmala was depleted by boycotts protesting Daniloff's treatment.

Minister depressed about relatives' deaths kills self

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — In his last sermon, the Rev. Dr. David Ray used humor to exhort churchgoers to attend an evening service.

"But if He tells you it's all right to stay home and watch TV, I want you to know I'm going to pray that your TV tube blows up," Ray told the congregation at South Side Baptist Church.

After they laughed, he added, "I did that in another city once and between 7 and 8 p.m. that night, the cable went out and no TV in town worked. You think the church wasn't packed Monday night?"

Those who heard the sermon Sunday morning said there was no indication of internal turmoil that would cause Ray to take his life a few hours later.

Friends said, however, that the 53-year-old evangelist had been depressed by the death of two close relatives in the past two weeks, and that he expressed dissatisfaction with his own preaching that morning.

More rain in area forecast for tonight, Wednesday

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

It rained last night in Midland.

And the usual happened in town: drainage streets turning into shallow but fordable creeks.

And out in the rural areas where farmers and ranchers mostly praise the blessings of rain, it rained too much for the temperament of the county's cash crop, cotton.

The weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport reported .32 inch of rainfall, which last night featured a backdrop of thunder and lightning. More rain may be in the offing tonight and Wednesday.

"It just sprinkled a little bit (in the Warfield community southwest of Midland)," noted farmer Vernon Chandler. "I hope it doesn't rain any more for awhile. It sure sounds bad to say that."

Chandler and other cotton farmers eagerly are awaiting a sunny, relatively hot and dry period to allow the immature cotton bolls to mature, open and display their snow-white lint. When the temperature drops below 60 degrees, cotton will stop growing, Chandler said.

New York police use video in anti-drug campaign

NEW YORK (AP) — Police are using creative energy to help keep schoolchildren off drugs — from a ventriloquist-policeman's lesson with a dummy to a rock video with music and lyrics by another of New York's finest.

One officer even came up with a coloring book with an anti-drug theme for younger students.

Under the School Program to Educate and Control Drug Abuse, or SPECDA, started in two school districts in February 1985, the police department and the Board of Education hope to reach 250,000 students in 15 of the 32 metropolitan districts this fall.

The New York City program is called one of the nation's most effective by the U.S. Education Department.

Operating on a budget of about $3.5 million, the program is divided into law enforcement and instruction.

The law enforcement goal is to create a 1,000-foot, drug-free perimeter around schools, rolling back the pushers and the "smoke houses" where crack and other drugs can be used. So far, $1 million worth of drugs have been seized and 7,500 pushers arrested.

The instruction effort focuses on fifth and sixth graders. For eight weeks each year, a uniformed police officer and a board of education drug counselor teach the children assertiveness, how to resist peer pressure and about the harmful effects of drugs, from alcohol and nicotine to cocaine and PCP.

Fifth and sixth graders were picked because they are "on the doorstep of drug abuse," said Lt. James J. Davis, who runs the police program.

Drug use generally begins in junior high school. There, conservative estimates say, 16 percent of city students were using cocaine before the advent of crack — a powerful, highly addictive cocaine derivative, another 11 percent are alcoholics and even greater numbers regularly smoke marijuana.

"Clearly we've got a major problem," said Levander Lilly, assistant to Schools Chancellor Nathan Quinones and an expert on narcotics.

Younger children are made aware of drugs through school assembly programs, movies and a coloring book designed by SPECDA police Officer Holly Pastore.

"Sure it's early," said Ellen Shayet, a researcher at the Center for Criminal Justice at John Jay College, which has studied the effectiveness of the program. "But if you're talking inoculation, you should do it before the disease strikes."

Ms. Shayet and Nancy Jacobs, the director of center, said it is too early to determine the program's long-term effectiveness; the center is seeking money to track SPECDA students into adult life. But, an early study of the program showed that the children said it made a difference.

"Although SPECDA students...give indications of being in close and regular contact with drug users," Jacobs wrote in the study, "the great majority of students volunteered that SPECDA strengthened their resolve to become or remain drug free."

As sixth grader Bich-nga Nguyen put it: "I think we should get SPECDA all year because the more support the better."

Another student involved in the SPECDA effort is Vinny Marquez, a 16-year-old streetwise kid from the Bronx who is the featured act in the program's rock video that is being shown in schools.

In the five-minute video, Marquez plays a drug abuser who tries to entice a young girl with narcotics. Vinny and drugs get dumped.

The son of a former drug addict and a product of the rough-and-tumble streets of the Bronx, Vinny said the video gave him a chance to put to good use the lessons he's learned, on the street and at home.

"What made me turn off to the stuff was my father. He's an ex-junkie," he said. "That hurt me and that's why I want to get the message out."

The parents of many city students are drug abusers, Lilly said, adding that "the others often don't have time to teach their kids right from wrong. The schools were compelled to take on the role of surrogate parents."

Police, too, confronted by dope dealers who hand out free samplers to curious children, urging them to "Don't be shy, get high," concluded that enforcement alone would not solve the problem.

The lyrics and music of the video's song were written by 24-year-old Officer Robin Vance, who sings while 200 SPECDA graduates dance.

"It's a song that tells people what the program is about, tells the drug dealers that children aren't interested and tells the children that it's OK to say no to drugs," said Vance, who first began performing when she was 5 years old.

While the video is the biggest SPECDA project, there are many others.

One policeman skilled in ventriloquism, Officer John Carlson, brings in his dummy and combines a laugh with a lesson. Officers who excel in sports take students on field trips.

"Kids are fascinated with police, their uniforms, their authority," said Jacobs of the John Jay criminal justice center. "It's a gimmick but it makes them listen."

Group releases hostage's alleged letter

Jacobsen

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Islamic Jihad today released a letter it claimed was written by American hostage David Jacobsen, accusing President Reagan of caring more about a U.S. newsman arrested in Moscow than for American captives in Lebanon.

The three-page handwritten letter included numerous grammatical errors and misspellings, and read as if it had been translated into English from another language. There was no way to confirm its authenticity, although Jacobsen's signature appeared identical to that on an earlier letr, and there were similarities between the signature and the writing in the body of the letter.

"Our bodies are sick and our psychological state is bad," today's letter said. "We also fear the possible ending of our story."

Jacobsen, the director of the American University Hospital in Beirut, was kidnapped May 28, 1985. The letter, accompanied by a photo of Jacobsen and a statement from Islamic Jihad, was left in an envelope on the doorstep of a Western news agency in Moslem west Beirut.

Islamic Jihad, a Shiite Moslem extremist group believed linked to Iran, claims it holds three of the six Americans missing in Lebanon and that it has killed a fourth.

The letter referred to U.S. News & World Report correspondent Nicholas Daniloff, who was arrested in Moscow on Aug. 30, charged with spying and released Friday into the custody of the U.S. Embassy pending trial. The United States, which negotiated for his release, and Daniloff deny Soviet claims that the reporter was a spy.

Today's letter misspelled Daniloff's name and referred to him as a "spy." Numerous other words were misspelled.

Dr. Ahmed Nasrallah, acting head of the American University Hospital, said there was "a resemblance" between the handwriting in the letter and that in a note written by Jacobsen before his abduction. But Nasrallah also said there were dissimilarities.

Professor Lutfi Diab, acting president of the American University, said: "Maybe the guy was under pressure when he wrote the letter. Maybe he was afraid and made some mistakes."

Today's letter said, "Why was Reagan interested minute by minute with spy journalist Daneloff but he is not interested one minute in our story and he didn't do anything to solve it...Are not we Americans?"

"Why doesn't the Congress act and request to solve our problem which has been for more than 17 months?" the letter said.

The snapshot of Jacobsen, 55, wearing beige pajamas, was almost identical to a picture of him released with an Islamic Jihad statement last week.

Islamic Jihad has said statements claiming to be from the organization could be considered authentic if accompanied by a snapshop of one of the hostages.

The letter warned against "gambling on time" and asked the Reagan administration to abandon its policy of not negotiating with the kidnappers.

It said, "What are you waiting for? For us to die one by one?"

The Arabic statement accompanying the letter said Washington's willingness to negotiate Daniloff's release "provoked many question marks in the hostages' minds, comparing what the (U.S.) government did in the 'Daniloff' case with what it is doing for them."

The statement also said Jacobsen wrote the letter "at his own wish to relay his plea to the people, the government and world public opinion."

The letter, dated Sept. 15, said Jacobsen, of Huntington Beach, Calif., and fellow captives Terry A. Anderson and Thomas Sutherland "feel homesick" after their lengthy captivity.

The letter appealed to former hostages the Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco, Benjamin Weir and Jeremy Levin as well as Anderson's sister Peggy Say to "continue their efforts because you are our only hope and you know our suffering very much."

Weir's release was announced Sept. 18, 1985. Levin escaped Feb. 13-14, 1985, and Jenco was freed July 26.

— Ill persons in Midland were more likely to have eaten at Chili's or Texas Burger than those who did not become ill. Such a correlation could not be shown for Taco Villa in Midland."

According to Dr. Harold Davis, an epidemiologist with the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., who is assigned to the Texas Health Department in Austin, of the three confirmed cases reported by Howard County health authorities in Big Spring, two of the victims had eaten at fast-food restaurants in Midland. A third victim had eaten at a restaurant in Big Spring.

"One case does not an epidemic make," he said.

What Davis described as "suggestive epidemiological evidence" is the only thing that can be derived from such isolated cases.

Because the five cases were not included in the neighborhood-match control study he has done, Davis said, the Big Spring and Hobbs cases were not included in the release of information to the news media Monday.

The Ector County Medical Authority went on to say that "it now appears that regardless of which restaurants were invloved in the initial outbreak, the food source no longer is a threat. Therefore, avoidance of these restaurants for fear of illness seems totally unwarranted."

Davis said were it not for the fact he was involved in the investigation "I would not hesitate to eat in any restaurant in Midland or Odessa."

Humphreys and Rowntree observed that "the outbreak (of shigellosis) occurred simultaneously both in Midland and Odessa in individuals who had eaten in several different restaurants."

"A food distributor who supplied at least some of the food products to these restaurants voluntarily suspended distribution of products (chiefly shredded lettuce) and recalled these products at the distribution points as of Sept. 6, 1986," they said.

According to Rowntree and Humphreys, the "recall was initiated before the time that consideration of the produce as a vehicle for shigella was any more than a possibility. Their prompt action in this regard may well have prevented an outbreak even more serious than what has occurred."

Rowntree stated that the "investigation of the outbreak is continuing, and must be pursued to its conclusion."

As to the initial source of the shigella bacteria, he said this has not been determined, though "the most obvious common thread" appears to be that all of the restaurants involved purchased food products from the same distributor. But, he said, tests conducted have discovered no bacteria in any of the food products tested from restaurants or the distributor.

The first cases of shigellosis in the Midland-Odessa area were reported about Aug. 29.

At a news conference called Friday in Odessa by Permian Basin Restaurant Association members, Fred Phillips, Taco Villa regional manager, estimated the Mexican-style fast-food chain had lost "hundreds of thousands of dollars" as a result of rumors concerning the source of the acute bacterial infection.

Generally, he said, area restaurants were reporting business off from 40 to 50 percent.

Larry Pierson, general manager of Comark, a food distribution firm owned by Cox Marketing, the parent firm of Taco Villa, said that when the company was notified of the shigellosis outbreak fast-food locations in 19 cities served by Comark were told to remove all lettuce that had been delivered and that a total of more than 2,000 pounds of lettuce was destroyed.

Pierson said this action was taken as a precaution, even though laboratory tests by the company's microbiologist did not show the presence of any infectious bacteria.

Tests done at the Texas Health Depaartment lab in Austin on food products from Comark and some food from restaurants the company supplies also showed negative results. The shigella bacterial infection can only be transmitted through uncooked food, according to health officials. Cooking kills the bacteria.

Health officials have been most emphatic in explaining that shigellosis is not food poisoning, and that shigella bacteria is a fecal organism carried and transmitted by people.

Rowntree said the first phase of the outbreak appears to be over and is in the second phase. In the second phase, he said, "scrupulous hygiene" will control further spread of the disease.

The symptoms of shigellosis are diarrhea, stomach cramps, nausea, vomiting and high fever.

Sunday, Taco Villa and Comark officials held a meeting with employees to tell them "what we knew about shigellosis and how to prevent it from spreading in their families," Pierson said.

At Monday's news conference Rowntree was asked what the normal incidence of shigelosis was in the Midland-Odessa area. He said from zero cases to two, but he noted shigellosis usually occurs in children from 1-to-4-years of age. "We knew we had an outbreak," he said, when it was found the age range of victims was from 14 to 45.

"But it was a marvelous sermon. My kids (ages 5 and 10) even came home talking about it, and they're not always that attentive in 'big church,'" one distraught member said.

Ray, a former Hardin-Simmons University official who had been a fulltime evangelist since 1978, was found dead of a self-inflicted gunshot wound in the driveway of his parents' home near the Wylie community in south Abilene shortly after 4 p.m.

The body was found in the driveway near a mobile home that served as "traveling study" for Ray and his wife during their far-flung evangelism ministry. They moved the headquarters of his ministry in 1984 from Abilene to Ruidoso, N.M.

Justice of the Peace Clarence Collins ruled the death a suicide. He said Ray placed a 12-gauge shotgun under his chin and pulled the trigger.

Ray had opened a four-day revival Sunday morning and was scheduled to preach at the church again at 7 p.m.

The Rev. Dale Hill announced the death to a hushed congregation Sunday night, then led a brief meditation.

Ray was pastor at Trinity Baptist Church in Fort Worth from 1961 to 1965; Haltom Road Baptist Church, 1965-67; and First Baptist Church in Lubbock, 1967-72.

Ray was only 33 when he was called to become pastor of First Baptist Church of Lubbock, then the second largest congregation in the Southern Baptist Convention.

There were more than 5,000 additions to the church during his pastorate, but the "administrative and executive duties of a church of that size took their toll on David when his great love was preaching," said Dr. Elwin Skiles, chancellor of HSU and president when Ray was a member of the HSU staff.

Ray took a leave of absence to regain his health in 1971, but resigned the following year, officials in Lubbock said.

Skiles praised Ray's work as an assistant vice president for development at HSU from 1974-78.

He is survived by his wife; one son, David Michael of Houston; two daughters, Janet (Mrs. Rick) Spurlock of Miamisburg, Ohio; and Kelle (Mrs. David) Vanderberg of Coppell, Texas; one grandson, Joshua Spurlock; and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lem Ray of Wylie.

His only sister, Joyce Saur, died Sept. 2 — the day before Ray's 53rd birthday — in Irving after an illness of 12 years, and his aunt, Bessie M. Jackson, was buried Saturday in Coleman.

Funeral will be at 2 p.m. Wednesday in Pioneer Drive Baptist Church in Abilene.

DANILOFF

In open debate Monday, more than 270 Americans and hundreds of Soviet participants traded accusations of repression and discrimination, lack of sincerity in arms talks, hypocrisy in human rights and disregard for the sovereignty of other countries.

Today, the Americans in the audience applauded Palmer's defense of Daniloff and the relevance of the case to the current conference. But many of the Soviets tried to disrupt his remarks with derisive laughter.

American journalist Strobe Talbott of Time magazine also pleaded for Daniloff's release during a speech on arms control.

"Being a journalist, I feel particular regret and particular dismay over the continued detention in Moscow of my friend and colleague, Nick Daniloff. This incident casts a shadow over this meeting of our and all other aspects of Soviet-American relations," Talbott said.

Talbott was filling in for Richard Perle, assistant defense secretary, as the American speaker on arms control issues. Perle did not participate in the conference, apparently because of the Daniloff case.

The treatment of Daniloff has strained U.S.-Soviet relations and prompted White House officials to warn Monday that a summit between President Reagan and Mikhail S. Gorbachev could be in danger if Daniloff is not allowed to return home.

Palmer, an expert on Soviet affairs, presented the U.S. government view and fielded questions along with the Soviet speaker, Col. Gen. Nikolai Chervov, a frequent Kremlin spokesman on defense.

Talbott quoted Deputy Foreign Minister Vladimir Petrovsky's speech on Monday in which the Soviet official warned against painting a "good guys and bad guys picture" of superpower relations.

"I consider this such good advice that I would suggest it cuts both ways," Talbott said.

Chervov gave a hardline speech, portraying the Soviet Union as the underdog in the arms race, willing to agree to any arms reductions proposals.

"The United States would like to see their threat against the Soviet Union retained. What's more, it would like to see the threat increased," Chervov said.

He reiterated standard Soviet complaints about U.S. refusal to give up the Strategic Defense Initiative to develop what Reagan contends will be a space-based missile defense.

Chervov also repeated Soviet protests about U.S. refusal to join the Kremlin's moratorium on nuclear test and the American threat to abandon the unratified 1979 SALT-II arms control accord.

WHAT IS PREVENTIVE MEDICINE TODAY?
1. It is much more than the prevention of contagious diseases!
2. It is involved in treating the patient as well as the disease; it is much easier to treat the patient before the disease occurs.
3. It is improving the immune system to make it competent through dietary control, lifestyle programs, exercise programs, relief from mental stress, and early detection of disease & malignancy.
4. A competent immune system that can be maintained will avoid most of the degenerative diseases, allergic and auto immune diseases, and many forms of cancer.
5. Lifespan can be increased along with a better quality lifestyle.
6. Lenghty illnesses and pro-longed hospitalization can be avoided.

Authorities: Alcohol abuse more widespread than drugs

By PAUL RAEBURN

NEW YORK (AP) — Authorities disagree over whether widespread screening will help prevent illegal drug use, and some say alcohol abuse is a far more important and widespread problem.

On Monday, President Reagan ordered the heads of federal agencies to establish mandatory drug testing for employees in sensitive positions as part of a national crusade against drug abuse.

The action was criticized by Arthur McBay, chief toxicologist in the North Carolina medical examiner's office, who said he has just completed a study of drug testing and found it isn't cost effective.

To be cost-effective, testing should be limited to people who show some sign of deterioration, he said in a telephone interview Monday.

He also was critical of the president's action on the grounds that it didn't include alcohol testing.

"Alcohol has a greater effect on health, safety and performance than all of the other drugs," McBay said. Furthermore, he said, "Adequate personnel, procedures and instruments are available for testing alcohol. ...This is not true for the widespread testing of urine for other drugs."

McBay, who has testified on behalf of unions opposing the drug testing of federal workers, mentioned a study done for the government's Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health Administration that found that the social cost of alcohol abuse was roughly twice that of all other drugs combined.

NATION

An author of that study, Henrick Harwood of Research Triangle Institute in North Carolina, said, "Alcohol affects more people than do other drugs, and it affects them more seriously."

The study, which estimated the social costs of alcohol and other drugs in 1983, found that alcohol abuse cost the nation $117 billion that year. Most of that was due to lost productivity, amounting to $65.6 billion, Harwood said.

The cost of drug use was $60 billion, including $33 billion in lost productivity, he said.

Harwood also found that the loss in productivity from drug abuse came entirely from only the heaviest drug abusers — those who had used drugs daily for at least a 30-day period at some time in their lives.

There was no significant loss of productivity attributable to drug users who used drugs less regularly, he said. "There are literally millions of Americans who use psychoactive drugs throughout the year with no detected impairment."

A report released in June by Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., found that the drug testing of federal workers was costly and useless.

Five percent to 20 percent of workers tested were wrongly found to be drug users, she said. And the testing cost up to $100 per employee, she said.

She criticized the drug testing programs because the "testing procedures of many labs are sloppy," and said workers have the right to be "protected from unreasonable intrusions into their bodily functions."

Dr. Robert Lewy, director of employee health programs at New York's Presbyterian Hospital, said the accuracy of testing has improved significantly since 1983, when he did a study suggesting that pre-employment drug testing was not cost-effective.

"I don't think we're at a stage where we can eliminate all of the false positives, but we can make them a minimal consideration," said Lewy, whose hospital recently began routine drug testing of job applicants.

He cautioned against incorrect interpretations of test results, however. "A urine test is like any lab test. It measures one point in time, and you can't tell anything about other than that one point in time."

'Cory' receives outpouring of affection as nine-day tour starts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Philippines President Corazon Aquino is receiving an outpouring of affection as she starts a nine-day trip to America, but she wants more: concrete action by U.S. government and business leaders to help her unify and enrich her struggling country.

Mrs. Aquino, who lived in exile in the Boston area for three years before returning to her homeland and ousting Ferdinand E. Marcos as president, had been expecting a warm welcome in the United States, and she got it.

She arrived in Washington on Monday night by helicopter from nearby Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland, and was greeted by Secretary of State George P. Shultz as she stepped onto the floodlit grounds of the Washington Monument. Nearby, a group of cheering Filipino-Americans waved yellow flags emblematic of Mrs. Aquino's political party.

In a symbolic gesture, Shultz pulled a yellow handkerchief from his breast pocket and got a broad grin in return from Mrs. Aquino.

Earlier in the day, about 600 people, accompanied by a U.S. Navy band, turned out at the San Francisco Airport to cheer Mrs. Aquino, hoist yellow balloons and chant "Cory! Cory!"

"We Filipinos are not so fortunate yet to have the progress to keep our democracy going forever, but we are starting," she told the crowd in San Francisco. "We are starting to put our country back into shape, starting to rebuild a many-pillared house worthy of our new democracy."

She said the diplomatic and economic reasons for her visit were important, but, "the overriding reason I am here is because I wanted to see my friends."

Nevertheless, Mrs. Aquino will spend most of the week in Washington, meeting President Reagan on Wednesday for the first time, addressing a joint meeting of Congress on Thursday and holding talks with business leaders whose investment dollars are eagerly sought in the Philippines.

"The primary purpose of the visit, from our point of view, is to show that there is a high level of support for Mrs. Aquino and what she is trying to do in the Philippines," said a U.S. official planning for the visit.

"We're also eager to do as much as we can — substantively — to help her carry out her program," said the official, speaking on condition he not be identified. It was not clear how much she would get.

Mrs. Aquino comes to America at a time when she is trying to refinance a $26 billion debt, to wither a communist insurgency through negotiations and economic reforms and to keep her faction-ridden government together.

"She is facing serious problems and we want to show that we really do support her government," the official said.

Mrs. Aquino said before leaving the Philippines that she would like to arrange, in her talks with international banking officials, more liberal terms for repayment of the country's national debt. Interest alone on that borrowing now soaks up half the country's earnings from exports.

With better terms from the World Bank, she would be able to arrange better terms with commercial bankers.

She also has called for increased direct aid from the United States. The Reagan administration has pledged to give her country $505.4 million in the current fiscal year and recently turned over a $200 million installment.

No additional aid is envisioned by the administration, but Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, has called for appropriation of an extra $100 million and has received widespread support. But Congress has not yet acted.

In addition, Mrs. Aquino, who will meet on Wednesday with Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, wants some of the strings removed from U.S. military aid, so she can use the money to boost soldiers' salaries and living conditions, and spend less on equipment.

She also believes the United States should buy more Philippines textiles and sugar, two industries that have been hurt by competition from other developing countries.

At the Carnegie Endowment for Peace, Richard Kessler, a leading U.S. authority on the Philippines, said, "In her dealings with the administration it will definitely be a love fest on the surface; a major questions is whether she comes home with specific commitments."

Mrs. Aquino will be absent from Manila during a difficult period for her government, which includes those who favor the current policy of negotiating with the communist New People's Army and those who fear that approach.

There also have been rumors that Marcos supporters may cause trouble while she is gone.

"Those who are afraid that my absence will endanger the democracy are those on whom we cannot depend to protect it," she said. "For democracy here is not held up by me alone, but by the power of the people who won it."

Grandmother fights drug war in nursing home

CANTON, Ill. (AP) — A 79-year-old great-grandmother says she's bringing President Reagan's war on drugs home to Canton, beginning with the nursing home where she lives.

Ruth Howard said she got so excited watching the president and Mrs. Reagan's televised call for a national crusade against illegal drug use that she hardly slept Sunday night.

Monday morning, she rallied fellow residents and staff at the Nursing Center of Canton in a campaign to plaster the home with posters reading, "Just Say No," the slogan of Nancy Reagan's national campaign against drug abuse.

Mrs. Howard said she hung one of the posters on her wheelchair, and planned to hit the streets with the message.

"We're getting ready to put posters all over the city," she said in a telephone interview Monday. "I'm going to ask any business with a mirror to put them up, like barbershops. I don't suppose it'd do any good in taverns, but it can't hurt anything."

Mrs. Howard said she hopes to get the message into the schools in this central Illinois city of 14,000.

"I want 'Just Say No' written on all the blackboards in all the schools all the time," she said. "If I can just stop one child from taking drugs in school, I will have accomplished something worthwhile."

"I think it's super," said administrator Kathy Demler. "She's as active as she can be, especially when she's excited about something."

The home is more a starting point than a target, Mrs. Howard said, adding that her main concern is stopping children from experimenting with drugs.

"I have one great-grandchild who is 13 years old, and I worry terribly about it," she said.

Man's gold tooth yanked during robbery

CRANSTON, R.I. (AP) — A man's gold tooth was yanked out with pliers during a beating and robbery after he lost control of his car and smashed into another vehicle in a park, police said.

Carlos Infante, 29, of Yonkers, N.Y., was "showboating" Sunday in Roger Williams Park when he lost control and rammed a car, police said.

Several bystanders, not including the driver of the other car, jumped Infante, beat him, pulled several gold chains from his neck, took his watch, money from his pocket and a ring from his finger, then used pliers to pull the tooth, police said.

Young Kennedy considered 'favorite' Democrat to Congress

Associated Press

Joseph P. Kennedy II tried today to extend his family's political dynasty into another generation and move a step closer to Congress as voters went to the polls in Massachusetts, Washington and Oklahoma.

At age 33, the oldest son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy was considered the favorite to win the Democratic nomination in the crowded race to succeed U.S. House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill Jr.

Massachusetts' secretary of state predicted Monday that a turnout as high as 75 percent of the registered Democrats in the state's 8th Congressional District, which Kennedy's uncle, John F. Kennedy, represented in Congress before O'Neill.

In statewide voting, Republicans decided on a nominee to run against popular Democratic Gov. Michael Dukakis. The party's endorsed candidate entered too late to get on the ballot while the two candidates on the ballot have dropped out of the race.

In Washington, Republican Sen. Slade Gorton and Democrat Brock Adams, the former transportation secretary, were favored to win their primaries for Senate against a number of challengers.

In Oklahoma, Democrats were asked in a runoff to decide whether businessman David Walters or Attorney General Mike Turpen should run for governor against former Republican Gov. Henry Bellmon. Walters led in the Aug. 26 primary, but did not win a majority.

Kennedy spent more than $1 million to fend off 10 other candidates. He faced his strongest challenge on his left in three-term state Sen. George Bachrach, who in the closing hours of the campaign tried to portray himself as the little guy up against the political establishment.

"Clearly, the million-dollar man has spent a lot of money, and it's been effective," Bachrach said.

But Kennedy did not express certainty of victory.

"There have been jitters for a year," he said late Monday.

The winner of the Democratic primary is expected to have little trouble defeating the Republican nominee in November. The district includes the western edge of Boston, Cambridge and some western suburbs.

Bachrach scrambled to offset the impact of a last-minute statement by O'Neill saying he would vote for Kennedy, whose forces plastered the statement in local newspapers and on television.

The lastest poll, a Boston Herald-WBZ-TV survey released on Friday, had Kennedy leading Bachrach by 40 percent to 26 percent.

Kennedy has enjoyed financial support from his wealthy family in the campaign, and his relatives have played key roles at campaign headquarters.

But Kennedy has shunned public appearances with some of the best-known members of the clan. He has not campaigned with his uncle, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, who easily won the 8th District in his most recent election to the Senate in 1982.

Among the other candidates on the ballot, former state Rep. Melvin King, a leader of Boston's black community, predicted he would stage "the greatest political upset in Massachusetts history."

Attorney James Roosevelt Jr., a grandson of Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt, also campaigned vigorously Monday night.

In the GOP primary for Massachusetts governor, businessman George Kariotis was a write-in candidate, having been named the party favorite after Royall Switzler, a state representative, admitted he had lied about his military record, and attorney Gregory Hyatt faced evidence of more than 1,000 forged signatures on his nomination papers. Switzler and Hyatt both said that if they emerged with the most votes, they would step aside in favor of Kariotis.

Dukakis was unopposed for the Democratic nomination.

BOSTON (AP) — The widow of Gregory Jarvis, an astronaut killed in the Challenger explosion, has received a distinguished alumnus award on his behalf from Northeastern University.

Marcia Jarvis on Sunday thanked Northeastern for giving her husband, who received a master's of science degree there in 1969, "the ability to look forward at that point in his career."

University President Kenneth G. Ryder announced at the ceremony that a Northeastern flag carried by Jarvis was found among Challenger's wreckage and will be returned to the school for display.

Reagan to address U.N. assembly next Monday

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will travel to New York to address the U.N. General Assembly next Monday, the same day that Philippine President Corazon Aquino makes her first appearance before the forum.

Announcing Reagan's plans, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Monday that the United States hopes that U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar will be re-elected for another five-year term when his current mandate expires Dec. 31.

During his visit, Reagan will call on de Cuellar "to thank him for his active efforts to improve the workings of the U.N. and to encourage him to continue those efforts," Speakes said.

"We believe the interests of the U.S. and the world community would be well-served by his continued leadership of the U.N. during the challenging period ahead," Speakes said.

President challenged on bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. William Gray, the highest-ranking black congressman, is challenging President Reagan to sign a bill imposing tough sanctions on South Africa.

"This is the one time the president could lead the entire Western world," Gray, D-Pa., told reporters on Monday. "The Western democracies are looking to the world's greatest democracy to provide leadership ...when we stand up for freedom and practice what we preach, others will join us."

Last Friday, the House voted 308-77 to approve a Senate-passed sanctions bill that would sharply curtail U.S. financial dealings with South Africa but falls short of requiring American firms to disinvest.

Reagan is expected to veto the bill. The administration contends that such legislation would strengthen South African radicals on both sides and hurt the interests of the blacks it was intended to help.

Soviet-Afghan border eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Air Force satellite has photographed two new high-technology facilities near the Soviet-Afghanistan border, and intelligence agencies think they may involve the world's first operational ground-based laser anti-satellite system, a magazine reports.

The White House is assessing the reports, Aviation Week and Space Technology says in this week's edition.

The reports suggest the Soviets are "in a position to break out of the anti-ballistic missile treaty with similar ABM missile systems and new command facilities observed in the USSR," the magazine says.

The facilities are described as unusually large. They were photographed on mountain tops near Dushanbe and another site in the region by an Air Force imaging reconnaissance satellite, according to Aviation Week.

Data leak rumors accurate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige says a spate of rumored leaks of sensitive economic data turned out to be nothing more than lucky guesses.

Baldrige said Monday an investigation by the department's inspector general had found no evidence of premature release of government statistics despite rumored leaks of the data in financial markets on four occasions in recent weeks.

The rumors were accurate in predicting a sharp downward revision in the Gross National Product to annual growth of just 0.6 percent in the second quarter. The rumors were also correct in predicting a 1.1 percent rise for July in the Index of Leading Indicators.

However, rumors about the July report on the trade deficit and the August report on retail sales proved to be wide of the mark.

Baldrige said investors who trade on such rumors are fools.

"The rumors are almost never right, and then only by coincidence," he said.

Home innovations delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Manufacturing innovations that could make American homes better and cheaper have been needlessly retarded by inadequate research and a scattershot regulatory system, says a congressional agency.

The Office of Technology Assessment concluded that the United States is seriously lagging other nations, most notably Sweden and Japan, in developing high-tech, factory-produced housing components.

The OTA said Monday factory construction of housing products, ranging from pre-hung windows and doors to pre-assembled walls and even entire rooms, can cut labor costs, improve productivity and enhance quality while still leaving the buyer a full range of design options.

The OTA, which was established in 1972, is the analytical arm of Congress.

Weapon buying to change

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon plans to change its weapon-buying procedure to emphasize construction of prototypes during the early phases of advanced research, says a Defense Department official.

At a Pentagon briefing Monday, Donald A. Hicks, the undersecretary of defense for research and engineering, said the new policy would increase the cost of developing new weapons. He also said it represents a change from the department's current procedure of awarding fixed-price contracts as early as possible.

However, Hicks said the process of requiring — and paying — competing contractors to build working prototypes before awarding design and production contracts would save taxpayers money in the long run.

Hicks said the Defense Advanced Projects Agency would be the first organization to adopt the policy. The agency serves as the Pentagon's high-tech arm, funding dozens of small research projects aimed at exploring new technologies and scientific developments.

Salvadorean rebels 'back out' of talks

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The government's dispatch of troops to a town selected for peace talks ended chances for a third round of meetings aimed at halting this Central American nation's civil war.

The leftist rebels backed out of the talks, scheduled for Friday, on Sunday night, blaming the government for sending troops to occupy the proposed site, Sesori, 95 miles northeast of San Salvador, the capital.

President Jose Napoleon Duarte on Monday accused the guerrillas of seeking "a dialogue of war" by insisting troops withdraw from the entire area.

When the site was agreed upon last month during a meeting in Mexico the town was not occupied by either the military or the rebels.

But three days later, several hundred soldiers moved in. Duarte defended the action, saying troops would protect both sides.

Security became a key issue because the guerrillas planned to send two of their top leaders, Joaquin Villalobos and Leonel Gonzalez.

The Christian Democratic president's June proposal for renewed talks to end the nearly 7-year-old civil war had been criticized by several sectors from the start. Many saw it as Duarte's chance to bolster failing popularity.

The president sharply lost support last year among the military and the rightists because of a deal he worked out to free his daughter, kidnapped and held for 44 days by the guerrillas. Her release came after Duarte freed 21 rebel prisoners.

A Salvadoran colonel abducted by the rebels 11 months ago still is not free. The guerrillas are asking for the release of jailed union representatives.

Duarte also alienated much of the business community and other sectors after he imposed austerity measures in January. The package raised the price of petroleum, hiked bus fares and cut imports.

Those same sectors lost confidence in Duarte after what appeared to be an aggressive search for right-wing kidnappers and some army officers came to a standstill. The army, frequently charged with human rights abuses, remains unbridled although witnesses have testified against them.

The president's critics also questioned the viability and rationale of renewed peace talks since neither Duarte nor the rebels backed off the positions they held two years ago when two rounds of meetings ended without a single step forward.

The rebels want to share political power in a provisional government, and are seeking new elections and an army that incorporates guerrilla forces.

The government called on the guerrillas to lay down their arms and test their strength during municipal and legislative elections set for 1988.

The U.S. government, which pumps $1.5 million a day into El Salvador, publicly says it supports dialogue. But American diplomats privately say peace talks give undue legitimacy to the rebels.

The government, pushed by the strong military, which has grown from 12,000 in 1980 to 53,000, also refused a temporary rebel-proposed truce for the talks.

"We are willing to have a permanent truce, to put down arms and enter a peace process," Lt. Col. Reynaldo Lopez Nuila, deputy defense minister for security forces, said in response to the guerrilla suggestion.

The army's special U.S.-trained Arce battalion moved into Sesori on Aug. 26, three days after government and rebel representatives met in Mexico to set the date and place for the talks.

"If the rebels want us out of the town, let them try to take it," an officer said in Sesori. He declined to be identified.

The rebels are substantially weakened since the last peace talks ended Nov. 30, 1984. At that time they held 30 percent of this Massachusetts-sized nation. Today they hold no territory permanently, moving in and out of areas where there have sympathizers.

The military estimates there are about 4,000 guerrillas, down from about 10,000 in 1981. But they remain determined to fight, to outlast American aid and to conduct a "prolonged people's war."

The rebel armies, grouped as the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, held Sesori for a year two years ago. They passed through frequently, before the army set up its makeshift base there three weeks ago.

Several Sesori residents say the army had not spent more than a week in the isolated town since the war began in 1979. But they said they welcomed the military presence, adding that before they felt abandoned by both sides, yet were forced to respect whatever group came through.

The army, according to an officer, said the troops would leave next week. He acknowledged the rebels would return but said there were not enough soldiers to act as police in Sesori.

Judge orders arrests of 26 acquitted in assassination

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A judge today ordered the arrests of former armed forces chief Fabian C. Ver and 25 others whose acquittals in the 1983 assassination of President Corazon Aquino's husband have been overturned by the Supreme Court.

Justice Francisco Garchitorena, head of a court that tries government personnel, said it would be decided Friday which of the court's three divisions would conduct a retrial.

Last Friday, the Supreme Court ordered a new trial for Gen. Ver and the others, saying their December acquittal in the killing of opposition leader Benigno Aquino was a "sham" orchestrated by then President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

Aquino, a former senator, was gunned down at Manila airport Aug. 21, 1983, as he returned from self-imposed exile in the United States to lead the opposition against Marcos.

The trial that ended in December ruled Aquino had been killed by Rolando Galman, an alleged communist agent, who was shot dead on the airport tarmac by soldiers.

A popular revolt following Aquino's assassination, culminating in nationwide protests over the fraud-tainted Feb. 7 presidential election, led to Marcos' ouster on Feb. 25, and Corazon Aquino's installation as president. Ver fled to Hawaii with Marcos a day later.

Mrs. Aquino is currently on an official visit to the United States.

All of the defendants remain in the Philippines except for Ver and air force Capt. Felipe Valerio. Air force officials say Valerio is also believed to be in the United States.

Garchitorena told The Associated Press that he issued arrest warrants for Ver and the others because the original indictments against them still stand.

The new trial is to be conducted by the same court but under new judges who have been appointed by Mrs. Aquino since she took power.

Garchitorena said 17 of the defendants, who had been named as principal conspirators, were not entitled to bail but Ver and the eight others were.

Prosecutors, who have begun reviewing the evidence, had indicated that they may indict more people in the new trial but have not identified any of them.

The Philippine constitution forbids trials in absentia, and there is no extradition treaty between the United States and the Philippines.

In overturning the acquittals, the Supreme Court said a special commission it created had evidence that Marcos and his allies pressured prosecutors to withhold evidence and harassed and intimidated witnesses during the 10-month trial.

"The court will see to it that (the new trial) will be just like any other case — just and fair so that, hopefully, in the end justice will prevail," Garchitorena said in a radio interview shortly after issuing the warrants.

Libyan links Gadhafi to grenade smuggling plot

LONDON (AP) — A Libyan testifying at the trial of two Arabs on Monday linked Col. Moammar Gadhafi's government to a plot to smuggle hand grenades into Britain for terrorist attacks.

The witness, identified only as Mr. I, was disguised with a false beard and dark glasses for fear of reprisal.

He said in Old Bailey Criminal Court that he backed an anti-Gadhafi movement, but pretended when he returned to Libya from Britain in 1984 that he supported Gadhafi.

The two Arabs on trial, Nassar Abdul Karim Mohamed, 28, and Rasmi Abdul Hafez Awad, 43, pleaded innocent Monday to a charge of conspiring to cause explosions.

They are suspected of being connected with the Abu Nidal terrorist group and were arrested in London on Sept. 22, 1985, after they allegedly received four grenades from Mr. I while police had them under surveillance.

Officials said Mohamed is an Iraqi-born Jordanian citizen and Awad is a physician born in Jordan and holds both Jordanian and Spanish passports.

Mr. I testified that a "Mr. S," who he described as "well known in Libya as a member of the Gadhafi regime," instructed him in 1985 to accept a parcel at the London Airport.

He gave the court the following account:

After contacting British police he kept the appointment, and at the airport he was given a package by a man wearing the uniform of the Libyan Arab Airlines.

He took it to waiting officers, who found four hand grenades hidden under chocolates.

U.N.'s 41st meet opens with 142 items on agenda

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The General Assembly opens its 41st session today with proposals to reform the U.N. bureaucracy and a 142-item agenda including proposed resolutions condemning South Africa, Israel and the arms race.

In a new item, Libya will ask that the world body condemn the United States for the April 15 raids on Libya, which U.S. leaders said were in retaliation for alleged terrorist acts sponsored by Moammar Gadhafi's government.

Since the 101-member non-aligned movement has already approved such a resolution, the same countries are expected to contribute to a comfortable majority to put the item on the agenda, sparking an angry debate about terrorism.

More familiar proposals include proposed resolutions condemning South Africa for apartheid and its occupation of Namibia, and Israel for its occupation of Arab territories and treatment of residents of those territories.

There will also be calls for withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia and Soviet troops from Afghanistan; Iran and Iraq will be asked to end their six-year war, and dozens of resolutions will call for various forms of disarmament.

The General Assembly opens with the already-agreed election of Bangladesh Foreign Minister Humayun Rasheed Choudhury as president, succeeding Jaime de Pinies of Spain.

Another important issue, choice of secretary-general for the next five years, seems to have been resolved. Javier Perez de Cuellar, whose term ends Dec. 31, is expected to be elected to a second, five-year term barring a last minute surprise.

The 66-year-old Peruvian diplomat underwent a quadruple heart bypass in July but is recovering. He has reportedly told those close to him that he will not campaign for the job but would be available for another term.

Sources who spoke on condition they not be idenified said four of the five permanent members of the Security Council, who could veto the appointment, have said they will approve a second term. They are Britain, France, the Soviet Union and United States.

China, the fifth permanent member, has not expressed its position but is expected to go along.

In a recent report, the secretary-general said the United Nations' current financial crisis, its worst in history, is still acute.

The crisis was largely provoked by cuts mandated by the U.S. Congress and the possibility of further reductions in U.S. funds that now provide 25 percent of the organization's budget.

The financial situation and reforms will be debated when the General Assembly considers a report by an 18-member committee headed by Norway's U.N. ambassador, Tom Vraalsen.

The committee recommends cuts of 15 percent in the 11,000-member staff, improvement of the budgeting process, fewer meetings, fewer documents and bureaucratic reorganization to avoid duplication and waste.

Vraalsen said he is hopeful the proposals will be accepted. Others are less optimistic.

Vraalsen said Congress' demand for weighted voting on budget matters under which donor nations would get voting power proportional to their contribution "is impossible" because it would require a change in the one-nation, one-vote provision in the U.N. Charter.

But some U.S. diplomats said a sincere reform effort might be used by the Reagan administration to persuade Congress to forgo a 20 percent cut in U.S. financial support, threatened if weighted voting is not accepted.

The drug scourge

President and Mrs. Reagan's call for a national crusade against drugs should serve to focus public attention on a scourge they claim is "menacing our society."

To the ordinary person the hoopla surrounding the drug menace may seem a bit extreme. Didn't the great marijuana scare take place nearly three decades ago? Haven't illegal drugs been a part of American life for a long time? Aren't a number of drugs — including cocaine — actually accepted by society in general?

The answer to all those questions is "yes" and that's exactly why a national crusade against drug abuse is needed. Familiarity breeds complacency. The fact that drugs are threatening this society is hardly deniable. Rarely a day goes by that some nationally-known sports, political or performing arts personality is not recognized for drug use or addiction. More and more stories detail how drugs are being used by physicians, lawyers, emergency personnel, journalists, air traffic controllers and others. In fact, it could be argued that drug use daily endangers Americans in any number of ways.

And in the public schools, drug use is being found among younger children. Without a doubt, the threat to American society is not exaggerated; the call for an unequivocal position against drug and alcohol abuse is well taken.

While Reagan's order for mandatory drug-testing programs for federal employees in "sensitive positions" is appropriate and may prove effective, other elements of the drug crusade launched by he and Mrs. Reagan will not be so easy to implement. In fact, the American Civil Liberties Union already has announced plans to challenge particular portions of the drug crusade.

Yet such a challenge is only to be expected and does not diminish the need for the Reagan drug campaign. The goal of the campaign is to make drug use socially unacceptable. In a sense, it must become that if a break in the chain of illicit drug use is to occur.

No doubt the national road back from drug abuse will be long and difficult. It will require a lot of hard effort, understanding and national caring. Yet it's a road worth traveling if this country's future is, in fact, at stake.

We believe it is.

Knowing injustice

When I first read the Midland Reporter-Telegram articles, back in early summer, about the critical study contracted by our City Council on the police department, I wondered why on earth they would hire an outside firm for this study if it was so obvious the police department was so mismanaged and poorly organized. Then when the reported cost of the study grew from $50,000 to $75,000, it seemed ridiculous that our city manager couldn't conduct such a study.

Well, the published article, Aug. 17, about how the city manager is improving worker productivity put that thought to rest. I don't think I'll ever be able to look at a city employee again without wondering, "Is he/she in the Dirty Ten, People Power, or the Kick Butt 10 group?" I surely wouldn't want to look at one of our burly policemen with such a thought in my head.

Considering the wage differential between our city manager, deputy city manager, public works director vs. our former chief of police, we kind of had a bargain, didn't we? And it's obvious that our city government puts about the same value on the department that stands between us and the criminal as does our national government toward our national defense.

One of the City Councilmen mentioned that the idea for this expensive police department study came from a regional meeting he attended. Has the Midland Reporter-Telegram ever done an in-depth study of the Permian Basin Regional Council of Governments? It is, after all, the facet of government most determinate of monies (city, state, and federal) that our City Council distributes to the various bureaucratic and business entities dependent upon tax monies. And, you have stated in an article that for every tax dollar spent in Texas it costs the taxpayers $1.50. Humanism does, after all, have its price.

Alexander Pope described this unhappy human frailty, that our politicians understand so very well, when he wrote in 1716: "...If Man's unhappy, God's unjust; If Man alone engross not Heaven's high care; Alone made perfect here, immortal there: Snatch from His hand the balance and the rod, Rejudge His justice, be the god of God..."

Japanese 'in chips'

Over the past few years, American electronics companies quit manufacturing microchips, claiming it was economically preferable to acquire the much cheaper ones that were made in Japan.

And now that we no longer have a domestic source for these essential computer components, the Japanese have increased the price fourfold.

This is a textbook example of the export of an industry, the destruction of a domestic supply in favor of imports. No wonder the Japanese are smiling — they're in the chips!

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Sept. 16, the 259th day of 1985. There are 106 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Sept. 16, 1810, Mexicans began their revolt against Spanish rule, an event commemorated as Mexico's Independence Day.

On this date:

In 1630, the Massachusetts village of Shawmut changed its name to Boston.

In 1638, the "Sun King" of France, Louis XIV, was born.

In 1893, hundreds of thousands of settlers swarmed onto a section of land in Oklahoma known as the "Cherokee Strip."

In 1908, General Motors filed its papers of incorporation.

In 1919, the American Legion was incorporated by an act of Congress.

In 1940, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed into law the Selective Training and Service Act, which set up the first peacetime military draft in U.S. history.

In 1966, the Metropolitan Opera opened its season in its new opera house at New York's Lincoln Center with the premiere of "Antony and Cleopatra" by Samuel Barber.

In 1982, the massacre of Palestinian men, women and children by forces identified as Lebanese Christian militiamen began in west Beirut's Sabra and Chatilla refugee camps.

Ten years ago: The Episcopal Church, at its General Convention in Minneapolis, formally approved the ordination of women as priests and bishops.

Five years ago: Boxer Sugar Ray Leonard unified the world welterweight title by scoring a 14th-round technical knockout of Thomas Hearns in Las Vegas.

One year ago: Britain announced it was expelling six more Soviets for spying — following the ouster of 25 Britons from the Soviet Union that followed Britain's expulsion of 25 Soviets accused of espionage.

Today's Birthdays: "Candid Camera" creator Allen Funt is 72. Actress Lauren Bacall is 62. Blues singer B.B. King is 61. Clergyman-author Dr. Robert Schuller is 60. Actor Peter Falk is 59. Actor Ed Begley Jr. is 37.

Thought for Today: "Men hate those to whom they have to lie." — Victor Hugo, French writer (1802-1885).

Arts groups benefit from D.C. clout

WASHINGTON — The way to a man's heart may, as the lady said, be through his stomach. But there's little doubt that the way to a congressman's generosity (with the taxpayers' money) is through his wife.

Jack Anderson

Nine esteemed institutions of art and culture in Washington, D.C., have capitalized on nearness and dearness to form an unusual "pillow talk" lobby by putting congressmen's wives — and the wives of some prominent executive branch officials — on their boards of directors.

The results have been astonishing: At a time of drastic retrenchment by the National Endowment for the Humanities, these crafty few have seen their federal funding grow significantly while arts groups in the hinterlands have suffered steep cuts in grants from Washington.

Not only that, but $3.5 million of the money earmarked for the wives' pet artistic outlets didn't even require the bothersome competition for funds that less well-connected supplicants must endure. The House, deferring to the husbands of the patrons of the arts, set up a unique non-competitive endowment fund (The National Capital Arts and Cultural Affairs Program) tailored specifically for the nine Washington cultural organizations.

It may be unseemly to dredge up Byron's mocking couplet: "But — Oh! ye lords of ladies intellectual,/Inform us truly, have they not henpeck'd you all?" Yet the nagging suspicion arises that the patrons' propinquity to power must have had something to do with it all. Consider:

The leader of the House culture vultures is Rep. Sidney Yates, D-Ill., chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee that oversees the Humanities Endowment budget. He got $2 million in non-competitive funding for the Nepotic Nine last year, and pushed through the current $3.5 million this year.

Yates' wife, Adeline, is a director of three of the recipients — the National Symphony Orchestra, Arena Stage and Corcoran Gallery of Art — and is a volunteer fund-raiser for another, the Capital Children's Museum.

Sens. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., and Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, are on the matching Senate subcommittee. Carol Laxalt is a director of Ford's Theater, another beneficiary of the special endowment. Ann Stevens is a director of Arena Stage and another recipient, the Washington Opera Society, while she and her husband have served on committees of the Folger Shakespeare Library, yet another anointed arts institution.

Ford's Theater also uses the direct approach. Rep. Joseph McDade, R-Pa., a subcommittee member, is vice president of the theater's board of trustees.

"What you're going to find," a candid official of Ford's Theater told our reporter David Davis, "is that organizations that have congressmen and senators on their boards use them for their names. We find that their wives have more time. They work their tails off for us."

In addition to those already mentioned, the nine Washington entities include the new National Building Museum and the Phillips Gallery.

Seven of the nine institutions get other, competitive funds from the Humanities Endowment. From 1983 to 1985, federal funding for these seven rose 41 percent — about the same percentage that the grants to arts organizations nationwide have dropped.

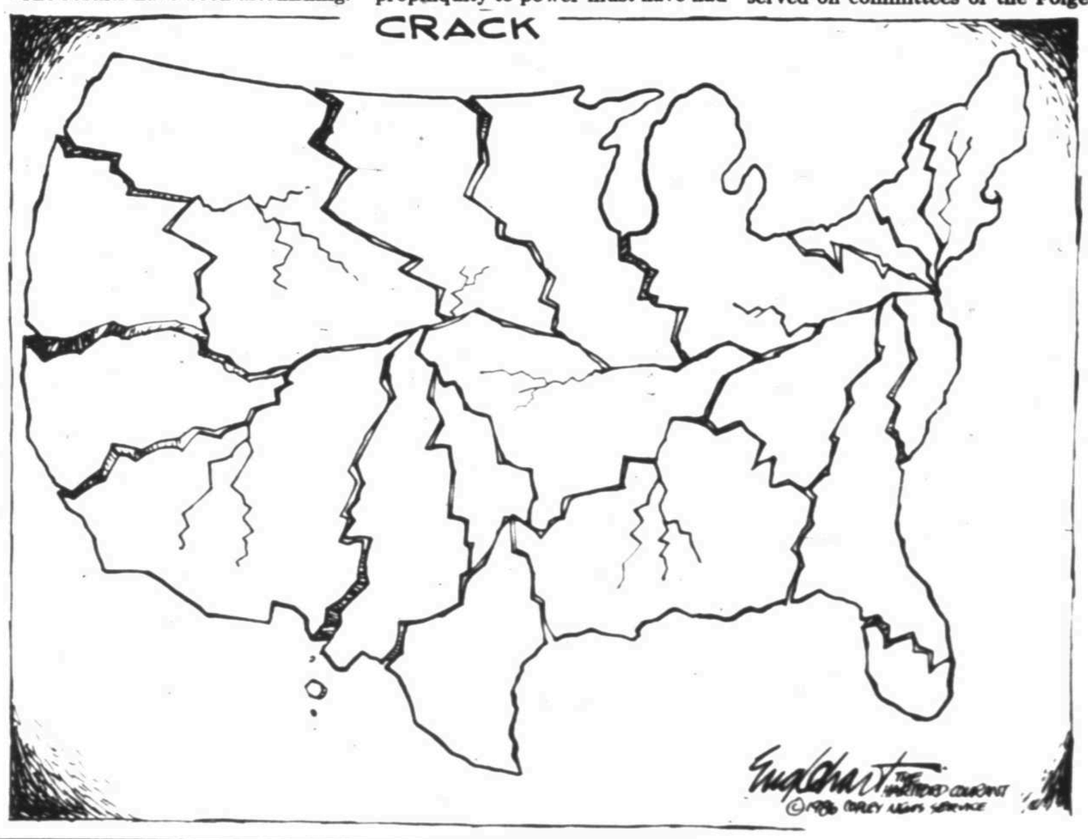

Acting Endowment chairman John Agresto is not happy about the special "insider" funding. With the White House's blessing, he has tried to kill the special program. He points out that the favoritism is not just geographic but size-oriented as well; only applicants that spend at least $1 million a year are eligible to receive money from the special fund.

This led Agresto to use a sardonic twist on the Bible in a letter to Yates: "Freezing out the smaller institutions seems to imply that those to whom much is already given, even more shall they receive."

• • •

MINI-EDITORIAL: If you thought the $100 million OK'd by Congress was the extent of taxpayers' largesse to the Nicaraguan contras, consider this: Heavyweight donors being asked to give $10,000 apiece to tide the contras over temporarily are being told they can write it off their taxes, even though the contra group that spends the money doesn't qualify for such a tax break. As a political consultant to the group explained, "They can make a grant to a foundation. The foundation will give it (to the contras)." If this is true, it's a loophole that should be plugged immediately.

EVANS & NOVAK

Tax reform facing 'same old Republicans'

WASHINGTON — Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III could scarcely believe his ears last Wednesday at the closed-door House GOP conference as one Republican congressman after another denounced President Reagan's tax reform.

Rowland Evans

Unless the president intervenes personally, he will be embarrassed by substantial Republican opposition when his premier domestic achievement reaches the House floor this week for a final vote. Most of the party's House leaders are lukewarm to cool. After passage, which is assured, Democrats will campaign around the nation as the architects of tax reform.

Robert Novak

Despite six years of hoopla about the Reagan Revolution and party realignment, these really are the same old Republicans. GOP candidates are ignoring economic growth and an aggressive national security policy, seizing instead on two issues put forth by Democrats: drugs and trade. Showing no pride over tax reform, they parrot alarms of special business interests.

The House Republican posture betrays half a century in minority status. While President Reagan and such resilient Senate leaders as Robert J. Dole and Bob Packwood have adjusted to power, GOP House members are frozen to demands of their financial contributors. As populistic as a country club board of directors, they cannot bear to betray their patrons in real estate, oil and banking. What the bill does for the economy and ordinary citizens is ignored.

That mindset confronted Baker last week. Rep. Frank R. Wolf, who represents bureaucrat-filled suburbs in northern Virginia, griped about tax treatment of public employees. Rep. Frank Horton, a liberal from upstate New York, complained that the investment tax credit was repealed retroactively. Other grumblers were Reps. Bill Frenzel of Minnesota, a key member of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee, and Steven Gunderson of Wisconsin.

What irritated Baker most was a half-hour diatribe by fellow Houstonian Bill Archer, second-ranking Republican on Ways and Means. He lambasted the Reagan-backed proposal not only for its oil and gas provisions but as a general blight on the economy.

Rep. Jack Kemp, chairman of the conference and leading House Republican tax reformer, interrupted Archer to rebut him. But no Ways and Means colleague rose in the conference to defend tax reform. Indeed, nearly all of them had sat out the last two years, while Senate Republicans, House Democrats and the administration passed a bill.

What little defense there was for Baker came from an unusual source: Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia, a leader of the backbench right-wingers who call themselves the Conservative Opportunity Society. Last year, Gingrich lambasted his ally Kemp for supporting the House Democratic tax bill so it could get to the Senate.

But the former history professor, with a longer view toward building a Republican Party that is more than a mere agent for petty lobbies, changed his mind. In last week's conference, Gingrich commended Baker for improving the House bill more than he had dreamed possible. He urged his colleagues to compare that product not with an impossible ideal but with present law.

The argument had little impact on Republicans just returned from late summer recess, when special interests — not plain citizens — harangued them at home and the vacationing president was silent out West.

Kemp alone among the party's House leaders defended the bill, showing this is no limited revolt. Minority Leader Robert H. Michel, never fond of tax reform, was even less enthusiastic after talking to Caterpillar officials back home in Peoria. Nobody knows how Michel will vote. But the respected GOP policy chairman, Rep. Dick Cheney, figures to vote no. An unenthusiastic Minority Whip Trent Lott was coaxed into tepid support only after being reminded the bill follows guidelines he hammered out as 1984 Republican platform chairman.

When the conference adjourned, a majority of House Republicans probably opposed Reagan's tax reform, enabling the Democrats to claim credit for passing it. Gingrich started lobbying colleagues with starkly political arguments. Would it be "more painful and more scary" to upset special interests or to face a Democratic opponent campaigning against them for opposing tax reform? Such a foe, he added, never would attack an incumbent Republican for supporting the bill.

A whip count completed Friday showed about half the House Republicans undecided, with the rest narrowly tipped in favor of the bill. Presidential intervention will be needed to avoid such embarrassment. Kemp has urged Reagan to get on the telephone to solicit votes for lower tax rates instead of tax shelters, for taxpayers instead of CPAs. That such a call is necessary suggests that, down deep, they are indeed the same old Republicans.

CHARLEY REESE

Drug usage an effect, not cause of problems

When thinking about the drug abuse problem in the United States, we should ask ourselves why people use drugs in the first place.

Charley Reese

Since narcotics alter the perception of reality, it is obvious that people wish to escape their perception of the non-drug-altered reality of their lives. The euphoric state produced by the drugs is deemed better than the real situation.

And why is that? In the case of children in poverty-stricken areas, the answer may seem obvious but I think it is not. I think children in affluent homes turn to drugs for the same reason children in ghettoes turn to drugs and that both turn to drugs for the same reason well-off professionals or business people turn to drugs.

The reason? To escape the pain of their existence. Human pain is rarely caused by economic reasons alone. A miserable rich person is just as miserable as a miserable poor person. A happy poor person is just as happy as a happy rich person. I'm using poor in the American context, not in the Third World context where poverty can mean starvation.

It's a fact that whether we are happy or unhappy depends in all but extreme circumstances on how we view our situation rather than on the situation itself. I'm afraid that a great many Americans view their lives as barren of any real meaning. They are bored and depressed.

Drug abuse is a symptom of a philosophical problem. I would include it with TV addiction, health and fitness addiction, sports addiction, work addiction, and with any of the other methods people use to escape the emptiness of their lives.

I don't intend to sound like a preacher but the problem is really a spiritual crisis. Materialism or humanism, both the capitalist and the socialist version, is a fatally flawed attempt to find a substitute for religious faith. It was dreamed up by intellectuals who thought themselves too sophisticated to believe in God.

The fatal flaw is that it dodges completely the tough question all great religions face squarely — man's mortality and all the sorrow that unavoidably entails. The humanist says man's happiness on earth is his only purpose, and humanism falls on its face at that point. Man's lot on earth is essentially unhappy and we all know it.

Buddha, for example, was born a healthy, handsome, wealthy prince. He had it all. Yet, he also had the insight to see that aging, disease and death awaited him. If things so fleeting as youth and health and wealth are all there is, then a person would have to be a fool to be happy. Second by second everything on which happiness depends is inexorably slipping away. All of mankind lives on Death Row. Christianity and Judaism teach the same truth.

Even those of us who are not one ten-thousandth as wise as Buddha understand this fundamental fact of human existence. When the only answer to the question "What is my life all about?" is drive a nice car and drink Michelob and invest in a good mutual fund, the result is equally disastrous to those who can never hope to drive a good car and to those who can.

People find meaning for their lives in a number of ways. Some with religion. Some with revolution. Some with a professional or business quest. Some by simply loving someone else. Those who cannot find meaning self-destruct by one means or another and drugs are just one of several methods.

I don't think we will solve the drug abuse crisis until we recognize that it is an effect and not a cause. The real crisis is the crisis of the human heart caused by the false god, Materialism. Those who keep crying for treatment centers and law enforcement are in the long run doomed to frustration. They are treating symptoms instead of the infection.

Call it myth or Holy Writ but the Genesis story contains a great truth. Man lost paradise when he gained the knowledge to foresee his own doom. He's been trying to find his way back ever since.

France tightens borders in wave of bombings

By PAUL TREUTHARDT

PARIS (AP) — France tightened its borders today in response to a wave of terrorist bombings, deploying troops to aid frontier police and imposing visa requirements on all visitors except those from selected European nations.

Internally, security was heightened once again at vulnerable public locations and government offices after the latest and most daring attack Monday.

That bombing, the fourth in a week, killed one person and injured 51 in the driving licence offices of Paris police headquarters, despite security checks of all entering the building.

Finance Minister Edouard Balladur, the government's senior minister, said this morning in a radio interview that France would reply to terrorism "by all the means at our disposal, and they are numerous."

Premier Jacques Chirac said Sunday that France would inevitably capture a terrorist red-handed "and he will talk...those who manipulate him should understand clearly that they will be the object of draconian reprisals, that we will be pitiless, whatever the consequences."

The visa restrictions announced by Chirac Sunday went into effect today for six months. All visitors except nationals of the 11 other European Common Market nations and Switzerland will need visas.

For two weeks they will be available at French border posts and airports on arrival, but after that, must be issued by French consulates abroad.

The Monday bombing in central Paris, and one the previous day that killed a policeman, led to hundreds of calls to police and fire brigade services, either hoaxes or genuine reports of suspect packages.

The terrorist group which has claimed responsibility for the series of bombings warned the next target will be President Francois Mitterrand's Elysee Palace offices in the heart of Paris.

In Beirut Monday, a French-speaking telephone caller said the police headquarters' bombing was the work of a group called the Committee of Solidarity for Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners. That name also was used in claims for bombings last week.

The caller told a Western news agency: "We will be thankful if you inform Mitterrand and Chirac that the next operation will be at the Elysee."

Police said the police headquarters bomb appears to have been similar to those used in the three other attacks since Sept. 8.

Conflicting claims of responsibility for those bombings were issued in the names of the Committee of Solidarity and another group, the Partisans of Rights and Freedom. French news reports say investigators believe they may be the same group.

On Sept. 1, the Committee for Solidarity issued a statement saying it would resume a bombing campaign to gain freedom for Georges Ibrahim Abdallah, who police believe is the leader of a terrorist group called Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Factions.

After several bombings last winter and spring, the committee had declared a truce, saying it would give the French government until the end of summer to free Abdallah, who is serving a four-year sentence for possession of fake passports.

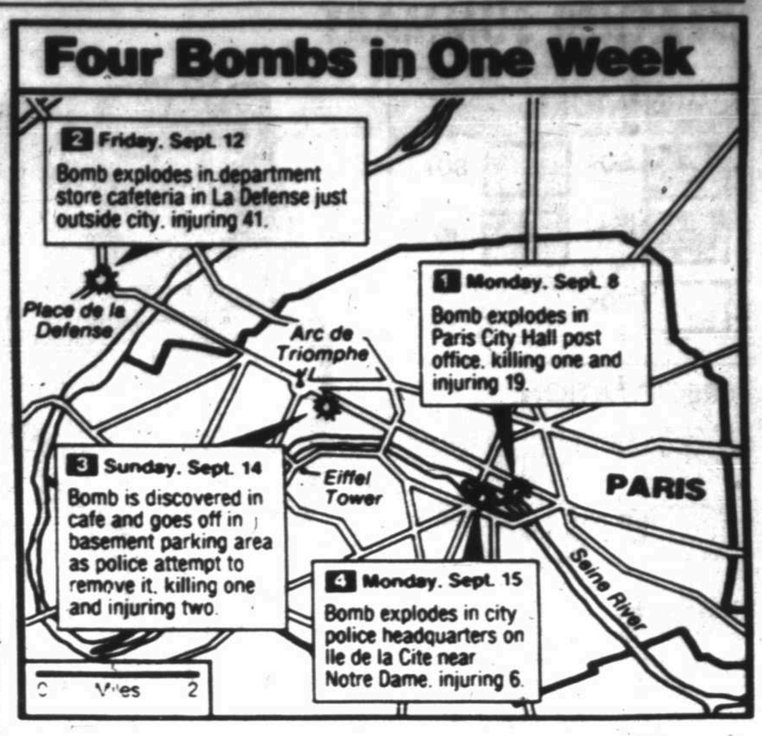

Chirac had been about to announce his conservative government's new anti-terrorist steps Sunday when a bomb planted in a crowded cafe went off in an underground parking lot, where it had been carried by two policemen and a cafe employee.

One of the officers was killed and the two other men seriously injured.

On Sept. 8, a woman was killed and 18 people injured when a bomb exploded in the post office at City Halll.

On Friday, 40 people were injured when bomb went off at lunchtime in a cafeteria on the outskirts of the capital.

Abdallah also faces charges of complicity in the assassinations of an American military attache and an Israeli diplomat in 1982, but there is concern that the evidence is too thin and that the charges could be dismissed before trial.

Trade ministers battle commerce rules, agree change crucial

By KEVIN NOBLET

PUNTA DEL ESTE, Uruguay (AP) — Trade ministers with clashing national interests are giving little ground as they battle over reshaping the rules of world commerce, agreeing only that change is crucial to avert all-out trade wars.

Without an agreement, "We run the risk of causing definite damage to the trade system itself," said Uruguayan Foreign Minister Enrique Iglesias, chairman of the week-long meeting of the 92-nation General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs.

In opening the talks Monday at this posh Atlantic resort, Iglesias called on delegates to lay aside domestic political and economic interests in order to revitalize GATT, the principal legal framework governing world commerce.

The meeting of the Geneva-based group, which was established in the late 1940s to encourage freer trade, is aimed at setting an agenda for exhaustive trade talks that could last years.

U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter told delegates in his opening remarks that the United States would not waver from its position that the trade talks include services such as banking, telecomunications, foreign investment and protection against copyright and patent piracy.

Yeutter said the United States would no longer tolerate "global trade distortion and economic disequilibrium." The United States, "with a trade deficit approaching $200 billion, is the major victim of this disequilibrium," he said.

"GATT members need to work together to move the world back toward economic equilibrium — to the benfit of all," Yeutter said. "If other countries are not interested in doing so, the U.S. will have no choice but to defend its own interests in its own way."

Brazil's delegation, however, said it would continue to press for moving the services issue to "parallel" talks outside the GATT mainstream — a proposal unacceptable to the United States.

"There is nothing in GATT that permits the inclusion of new issues such as services," Brazilian Foreign Ministry spokesman Rui Nogueira said at a news briefing.

Brazil and India lead a group of developing countries that fear a drop in protective barriers would allow competition in industrialized countries to bury their fledgling service industries.

Another divisive topic, farm subsidies, seemed moving toward a possible resolution as Willy de Clercq, spokesman for the 12-member Common Market, indicated his group's support for putting the issue on the agenda. It represented a reversal of the European trade bloc's stiff opposition to such a move when it was first proposed four years ago.

A group of agricultural countries, including Australia, Canada and Argentina, are pressing for an agenda that would call for a reduction and eventual end to farm subsidizing. The United States has signaled its support for the measure.

Australia's trade minister, John Dawkins, warned in a speech that "protection still looks attractive as an option for some in our various countries, but it is a short-term option that can only lead us to disaster."

"The richest and most priveleged countries have lacked the fortitude to face the consquences of economic change. They have cocooned their farmers in a fool's paradise," Dawkins said.

Japan threw its weight behind a proposal supported by 59 countries to include both services and the agricultural subsidy issues. It also proposed that the new trade talks be called the "Uruguay Round."

WORLD in brief

Unbreakable glass didn't stop vandals, they stole it

SWANSEA, Wales (AP) — The display window of Robin Branhall's surfing shop was smashed more than 20 times by vandals. So he replaced it with a sheet of unbreakable glass.

Branhall said that when he arrived at his store Monday in the south Wales village of Mumbles near Swansea, the window had been stolen.

Diplomat to attend U.N.

MOSCOW (AP) — Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze left today for the United States, where he is scheduled to attend the 41st U.N. General Assembly and hold a presummit meeting with Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

Shevardnadze's trip and the meeting with Shultz come at a time of strained relations, with Moscow accusing Washington of failing to respond to Kremlin arms control initiatives and Americans angry about the detention of a U.S. newsman on charges of spying.

The official news agency Tass, in adherence to strict protocol, said only that Shevardnadze was leaving Moscow to attend the U.N. General Assembly in New York.

It made no mention of the subsequent meeting in Washington Friday with Shultz which is supposed to prepare a scheduled summit later this year between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

White House officials warned Monday that the summit could be in danger unless American newsman Nicholas Daniloff, accused by the Soviets of spying, is allowed home first.

The U.S. News & World Report correspondent was released from a Moscow jail Friday into the conditional custody of the U.S. Embassy, but remains restricted to the area of the Soviet capital and must be available for questioning on his case at any time.

Jack Matlock, senior specialist on Soviet affairs for the U.S. National Security Council staff, told a private Soviet-U.S. conference in Jurmala in Soviet Latvia Monday that the Daniloff case hampers improved relations.

Austria sets early elections

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Chancellor Franz Vranitzky announced Monday that his Socialist Party will terminate its coalition with the small Freedom Party and schedule early elections.

Vranitzky set no date for the elections but mentioned November in an interview with Austrian radio. Political analysts said the most likely date is Nov. 23.

The Socialist-Freedom Party coalition was formed after balloting in April 1983, and the next scheduled elections were set for April 5, 1987.

Vranitzky's break with the Freedom Party followed that party's convention Saturday in Innsbruck when delegates ousted liberal Norbert Steger and elected Joerg Haider as party chairman. Haider, 36, leads the party's right-wing faction.

During the tumultous convention, Haider rejected efforts to strike a compromise that would have named Defense Minister Helmut Kruenes as the sole candidate for party leader. In the balloting, Haider received 57.7 of the votes of the 460 delegates compared to 39.2 for Steger, with the others ruled invalid.

Socialist Party leaders had said earlier that Haider would be unacceptable as an alliance partner.

The Freedom Party won less than 5 percent of the vote in the 1983 elections.

Showers spread across nation

Showers and thunderstorms spread across broad sections of the nation today and temperatures dipped across the upper Great Lakes region.

Frost and below-freezing temperatures extended across northeast Minnesota early today and Neguanee, Mich., tied its low temperature record at 34 degrees, matching a low set in 1976 and tied in 1984.

Showers and thunderstorms stretched from central New England across New York and Pennsylvania.

Anothern group of showers and thunderstorms ranged from New Mexico across northwest Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, southwest Missouri and northwest Arkansas.

Showers and thunderstorms also extended over north-central Colorado, western Nebraska, western South Dakota and Washington.

Today's forecast called for rain and thunderstorms scattered from western Missouri across Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and southeastern South Dakota; and showers scattered along the northern Pacific Coast and across the Texas Panhandle and central New England.

RAIN

"I've got a good cotton crop that needs a lot more sunshine to do good," he said. "I've got a real pretty crop. It's just almost made."

Hoot Leonard, manager of the Midland Farmers Co-op, said that the rainfall was mostly scattered. "It just rained around in spots." The rain bypassed the Greenwood community Monday night, but about one-half of an inch fell there Sunday.

Northwest of Midland in Gardendale area, almost an inch — .8 to .9 of an inch — of rain fell there.

"We need some good, old sunshine," Leonard said.

In Midland, the rains washed the streets. The drainage streets and avenues, such as Wadley, Golf Course, Garfield, Midkiff, Midland and Illinois, turned into mini-channels for draining.

Fred Baker, Midland's public works director, said that a street contractor on Monday had just started re-paving work on Garfield Street — between Wadley Avenue and Cimarron Drive.

"We have not missed a time yet," he said of rain immediately following the launching of a street-repaving project. "Anytime you want it to rain, just give us enough money to build a new street," he jested.

Baker noted that A Street construction work, hampered by rain, finally is completed except for some striping of the street.

So far just this month in Midland, the National Weather Service has gauged 6.57 inches of rainfall — more than three times the the 2.08-inch average for September. The average yearly rainfall of 13.50 inches has been exceeded though the first 9½ months of the year. The year's rainfall tally up to this morning is 19.52 inches.

More rain is possible.

For tonight and Wednesday, the weatherman is predicting a 20 percent chance of rain and a "slight chance" of thunderstorms. Tonight's low is to be in the mid-60s, and winds are to be southeasterly at 5 to 10 mph. Wednesday's high temperature is to be in the upper 80s. Winds are to be southerly at 10 to 15 mph.

Monday's high temperature was 88 degrees, and the record high for a Sept. 15 was 100 degrees in 1965. The overnight low was 64 degrees. The record low for a Sept. 16 is 50 degrees in 1951.

STATE

Moist, unstable air near the Gulf of Mexico brought showers and thunderstorms today over parts of the Texas middle coastal plains while other rainfall along the Caprock area dissipated.

The National Weather Service said thunderstorms that drenched the western part of North Texas have moved into Oklahoma. Skies were cloudy across nearly the entire state today.

Pittsburgh quarterback Mark Malone is sacked by Denver's Simon Fletcher in Monday Night NFL action. The Broncos went to 2-0 with a 21-10 victory.

Elway spurs Broncos to win

3 TD passes drop Steelers to 0-2

By DAVE GOLDBERG

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Denver Broncos are discovering that help can sometimes come from the most unlikely sources.

Like the Pittsburgh Steelers' fans.

The Broncos improved their record to 2-0 Monday night by beating the Steelers 21-10 in a game that may have turned on a touchdown the crowd helped them get.

It came late in the third quarter with Denver holding a 7-3 lead. But Pittsburgh was coming on — Gary Anderson had just kicked a 42-yard field goal to give the Steelers their first points in seven quarters dating back to last season, and the always noisy crowd was aroused.

On a third down and one from the Pittsburgh 34, quarterback John Elway faked to Sammy Winder who dove high into the line. Then Elway, who threw for 243 yards and three touchdowns, faded back, hiding the ball on his hip, holding it ... holding it ... holding it ... then flicking it finally over the defense to a wide open Steve Sewell who scooted into the end zone.

"STEVE WAS covered all the way," Elway said later, "and I was about to look for my secondary receiver. Then I heard the crowd roar and the defensive back seemed to let up and Steve was all alone."

"I knew the guy was with me," Sewell said of Harvey Clayton, the Pittsburgh cornerback who was covering him. "But as I looked back, I saw a Pittsburgh guy throw up his hands like he had stopped Sammy and the crowd roared and then I was all alone. All I had to do was wait for the ball come down."

The Pittsburgh loss — the Steelers' second straight loss following a 7-9 1985, their first losing season in 15 years — followed a week of harsh criticism in Pittsburgh following a season-opening 30-0 loss in Seattle.

Monday Night

The criticism continued in the form of continuous boos from the fans during the first half, when Denver took a 7-0 lead on 21-yard second-quarter pass from Elway to Steve Watson.

THE BOOS were particularly loud for quarterback Mark Malone and the offense, which managed only 68 yards in the first half.

But after Rich Karlis missed a 27-yard field goal attempt on Denver's first possession of the second half, Malone finally got hot, completing five straight passes in a drive that set up Anderson's field goal. And after Sewell's touchdown, the Steelers came back again on a 73-yard drive culminated by Rich Erenberg's 7-yard touchdown run.

Then came the game's most controverial play.

From his own 21, Elway pitched over-handed to Gerald Willhite, who appeared to be well behind him. Willhite ran a few steps forward, then threw the ball downfield to Steve Watson, who took it all alone and waltzed in for the end zone.

BUT LINE judge Boyce Smith ruled that Elway had passed the ball forward to Willhite and the play was nullified, although the instant replay in the press box showed it appeared to be a lateral

"I thought it was a terrible call," said Elway. "My only job on the play is to make sure it's a lateral and it was. I asked the referee to ask for a replay and he said 'we can't ask for a replay unless they call us from the booth."

Bob McElwee, the referee told a pool reporter afterwards: "we don't think about consulting the replay."

It turned out to have no effect.

Pittsburgh got the ball back, but Denver's Tony Lilly picked off a pass by Malone, who finished with 22 completions in 48 attempts for 216 yards and was almost the entire offense, since the Steelers gained just 30 yards on the ground.

From there the Broncos took six plays to go 31 yards for the clinching touchdown, a 13-yard pass from Elway to Winder.

FOR DENVER, it's now a matter of building on, a 2-0 record. For Pittsburgh, it's a matter of rebuilding.

"We have some young people in there and we've tot to hang with them," said Coach Chuck Noll. "I think they'll come around if we do that. They need my support and they're going to get it."

Mets wonder: How long can it take?

Associated Press

How long is it going to take?

This magic number business is a little trickier than the New York Mets thought at first.

The Mets lost a fourth straight game for only the second time this season, on a bases-loaded walk in the 13th inning Monday night. Curt Ford drew ball four from Roger McDowell and Willie McGee was waved home, giving the St. Louis Cardinals a 1-0 victory.

The Mets' magic number stayed at two since Philadelphia beat Pittsburgh 5-0 after completing a three-game weekend sweep of the Mets. New York — still — needs any combination of Mets wins and Phillies losses adding to two in order to win the National League East.

"It's like waiting for a baby that doesn't seem to come on time," Manager Davey Johnson said. "It makes you antsy. I'm not uptight ... you're always disappointed after a loss."

The walk immediately followed an intentional pass given to Terry Pendleton. McGee had singled, been sacrificed to second and taken third on an infield hit by John Morris.

"It had to happen sooner or later, so why not now?" Mookie Wilson asked rhetorically. "We'll clinch it. I think we could clinch it even if I had to pitch one of the games. It's just a matter of time. We've just got to be patient."

The Cardinals had only seven hits in the game; the Mets had nine.

St. Louis' Todd Worrell, 9-10, pitched 1⅓ innings for the win. "As much as we've battled them every game, we don't want them popping champagne and celebrating in our park," he said. "We like to beat them. At least we've got a chance to even up the season's series with them."

New York's other four-game losing streak this year was entirely composed of losses to the Cardinals.

Now the Mets may clinch at home after all. They left for the road needing only one win over the Phillies for the title, didn't get it, and may go back to New York on Wednesday uncrowned.

"I said I'd almost rather win it at home in front of our fans, who've been so supportive of us, and it looks like it might happen now," Hernandez said.

Phillies 5, Pirates 0

John Russell drove Philadelphia's first four runs with a double and triple, and Mike Schmidt passed another milestone with a solo homer. Schmidt's 36th home run of the season — best in the majors — was the 494th of his career, and moved him past Lou Gehrig into 14th place on the all-time list.

Don Carman, 9-5, pitched a four-hitter for his first major-league shutout, though he did throw nine shutout innings in his perfect-game bid last month.

Carman, who began the season as a reliever, is 6-3 since he became a starter. "Before I couldn't get my breaking ball over," Carman said. "But now I even throw it when I'm behind in the count."

He said he throws the same pitch two ways. "It's a slider when I throw from the side, and when I come over the top, it's a curve ball. It's the same pitch from two different angles," he said.

Cubs 7, Expos 3

Rafael Palmeiro hit a two-run double and Chico Walker had four hits, scored two runs and drove in one, as Chicago pounded out 15 hits to beat Montreal.

"I prefer batting either first or second," said Walker, who hit leadoff Monday. "I've been in different spots in the order, but I like it at the top because that's where I feel I can make things happen."

Jamie Moyer, 6-4, gave up two runs in five innings. Scott Sanderson pitched the final four innings for his first save since 1983.

Sergio Valdez, 0-2, lost his second major-league start.

TEXAS TECH Red Raiders

Tech's worst loss still encouraging, McWilliams

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Tech suffered its worst defeat in history at the hands of second-ranked Miami of Florida, but several aspects of the Red Raiders' play were encouraging, Tech Coach David McWilliams says.

He said he was impressed with the play of the offensive line and with the team's determination to keep fighting.

Miami quarterback Vinny Testaverde passed for 330 yards and four touchdowns and ran for 41 yards and another touchdown as Miami raced to a 61-11 victory in a game played in the Orange Bowl.

"We made a lot of fundamental mistakes. We didn't tackle as well as we had been. We didn't block as well. It was poor lack of execution," McWilliams said Sunday afternoon. "It was very evident from the films that we simply didn't execute like we did against Kansas State."

Tech's 317 yards of total offense would have produced more points if the Raiders had started with better field position, McWilliams said.

HE TOLD his offense that it improved from Tech's opening game to the second game and should be confident, taking into consideration the caliber of the Miami team.

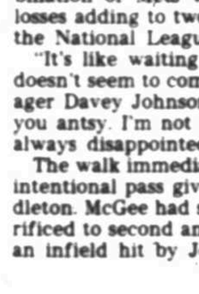

"Certainly, we still have a long way to go, but we did a lot of things well," McWilliams said.

Miami's defensive line, rated one of the best pass-rushing foursomes in the country, managed only three sacks against Tech quarterbacks Billy Joe Tolliver and Monte McGuire. McWilliams called that feat "a big plus."

"We had good protection against Kansas State, but, as I said last week, we'd know a lot more about our linemen after a game against a team like Miami," McWilliams said.

The Raiders suffered one serious casualty on the Orange Bowl's grass turf. Backup quarterback McGuire strained a knee after a 7-yard gain early in the fourth quarter and will be sidelined from four to six weeks.

McGuire, a fifth-year senior from Monahans, had arthroscopic surgery Sunday, but no cartilage damage was found. He was placed in a cast for three weeks.

Rivalries dominate non-district season

In the weeks before district play gets underway, as coaches adjust, fine tune, or scrap the playbook in preparation for the district season, regional rivalries add a little spice to the football fan's life.

Last week, McCamey and Crane got the air crackling south on Highway 385 as the 2A Badgers won their third straight over the 3A Cranes. Yes, it's true, the larger school rarely has anything to gain stepping down in class.

In Week 3, these local shoot-outs begin to hit full stride in the Permian Basin as Greenwood and Stanton butt heads at the Buffs' homecoming and Andrews-Lamesa tangle in the district opener for both sides.

When Andrews and Lamesa lock horns in their annual neighborhood power struggle, it's always more than another football game. And once again this year, the Andrews-Lamesa tussle also signals the start of "District Wars" in 2-4A.

With the addition of Big Spring, District 2-4A now has nine members, so 2-4A teams now have just two pre-district contests to get ready for the in-house competition. Andrews, playing a brutal two-game stretch with Hereford and Midland High, has been a little slow getting out of the gate.

The Mustangs, 0-2, didn't score a point in 1986 until late in the fourth quarter against the Bulldogs.

"We don't have what you would call a whole lot of momentum going in to district play," Andrews coach David Visentine understated. "But scoring the last time we touched the ball showed a little character, even if it was against their second team."

The Tornadoes are coming off a big 41-20 win over Brownfield. Coach Clyde Noonkester's offense got into high gear as quarterback Tim Berry completed 11 of 18 passes for 180 yards. For the year, Berry is 22 of 42 for 323 yards.

"He is definitely able to throw the ball," Noonkester said.

In Stanton, Buffs fans are basking in their first 2-0 start since 1980 in getting ready for homecoming with Greenwood. The Buffaloes have even surprised coach Dale Ruth with their ability to learn the wishbone system installed this season.

"Our offense has really been gearing up, it's come along a lot faster than I thought it would," Ruth said. "We've got some excitement going in town for the first time in a long time."

Workers are trying to replace some sections of stands that were blown down by tornado-like winds that blew through this summer. Ruth said the work should be done by Friday to accommodate the anticipated large crowd.

AREA RUMBLINGS: Stanton fullback Derek Sorley hit the century mark in yards gained for the first time with an even 100, and also made 18 tackles from his middle linebacker slot. The Buff defense of Stan Young, James Vidal, Steve Villa, Joe Flores and Carlos Ortiz were all pointed out by Ruth as big contributors against Coahoma...

Greenwood 's Rangers hope to begin turning things around in going to Stanton Friday. The Rangers, off to an 0-2 start under new coach Maurice Hodges, showed a lot of improvement in a 26-21 home-opening loss to Reagan County.

Hodges still points to the District 4-3A opener with Fabens on Oct. 10 as the Rangers' target date for implementing his new offensive scheme. Until then, the Rangers are relying on the inside-outside combination of the Popham brothers — Garry and Steve.

Steve, the senior speedster, romped for 132 yards on the outside against the Owls, while Garry, a 215-pound sophomore fullback, bulled his way to two touchdowns...

The Red Devils of Rankin got on the right side of the win-loss column with a 31-0 whitewash of Sterling City last week, evening their mark at 1-1. Coach Dwayne Turner watched contentedly as halfback George Abalos cut loose for 207 yards and a pair of TD scores.

Turner has decided to go to a two-quarterback system, alternating Doug Braden and Bruce Hooker at QB. Both will see time at end while the other is signal-calling. The Devils are back on the road at Roscoe, long a Class A power, this Friday...

McCamey coach Buster Leaf has coaxed his third straight win over Class 3A's Crane, a come-from-behind 20-14 win last Friday. The Badgers turned the tide just before halftime, taking advantage of one of nine Golden Crane turnovers. Quarterback Roman Zarate, one half of the McCamey tandem, hit tight end Kirk Eddelman with a TD pass and it was all McCamey from there.

The Badgers will play their third Class 3A opponent in a row in a homecoming game against Alpine this week...

Crane, ranked highly in all preseason polls, was stunned for the second straight week. The Golden Cranes, 0-2, have now lost to a 4A school and and a 2A school. They will try their luck this week against Seminole...

Garden City, 0-2, is still looking for its first win of the season against Irion County at home on Friday night...

Miami's win closes gap on No. 1 OU

Associated Press

Saturday's 61-11 rout of Texas Tech enabled second-ranked Miami to close ground on No. 1 Oklahoma in this week's Associated Press college football poll as their meeting on Sept. 27 took another step toward becoming a 1-2 shootout.

Oklahoma, which was idle and plays Minnesota this Saturday, received 55 of 59 first-place votes and 1,175 of a possible 1,180 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Miami, which raised its record to 3-0 by routing Texas Tech, received one first-place vote and 1,099 points. Last week's first-place votes also were 55-1 but the point differential was 1,175-1,050.

Michigan remained a distant third with 1,000 points after edging Notre Dame 24-23. The setback, in Lou Holtz' debut as Notre Dame coach, boosted the Irish into the Top Twenty for the first time since the second week of the 1985 season. The Irish are No. 20.

Alabama held onto fourth place with 992 points by defeating Southern Mississippi 31-18; Penn State, idle over the weekend, remained No. 5 with 938 points, and Nebraska, also idle, stayed sixth with 924 points.

HOWEVER, TEXAS A&M lost to LSU 35-17 and slipped from seventh place to 16th. Washington, a 40-7 winner over Ohio State, shot from 17th place to seventh and knocked the Buckeyes out of the rankings. The Huskies received the remaining first-place ballot and 751 points.

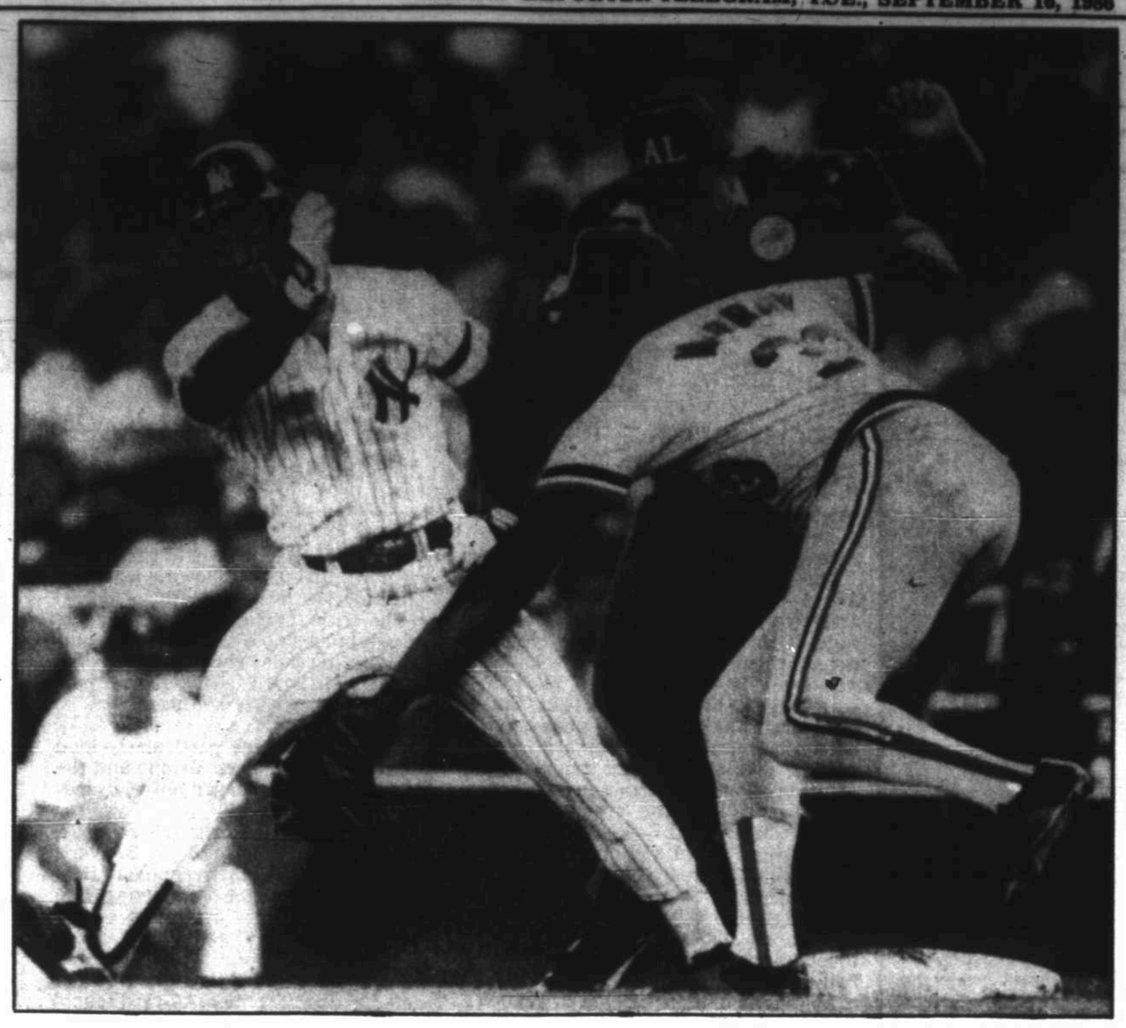

LSU climbed from 14th to eighth with 747 points. Baylor trounced Louisiana Tech 38-7 and jumped from 12th to ninth with 629 points. Auburn, which was idle, slipped from ninth to 10th with 615 points.

The Second Ten consists of Brigham Young, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Florida State, Texas A&M, Arizona, Arizona State, UCLA and Notre Dame.

Last week it was BYU, Baylor, Florida, LSU, Florida State, UCLA, Washington, Arkansas, Georgia and Michigan State.

Besides Ohio State, eighth-ranked Tennessee dropped out of the Top Twenty by losing to Mississippi State 27-23 and Michigan State fell out after bowing to Arizona State 20-17.

The newcomers to the rankings are Arizona, Arizona State and Notre Dame. The appearances were the first for Arizona since midway through the 1983 season and the first for Arizona State since early in 1984.

Rangers, Hough win but Angels in control

Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Texas right-hander Charlie Hough had both poor control and a sinus problem going against him when the Rangers took on the Oakland A's.

Trailing the California Angels by nine games in the American League West didn't help.

"We have to continue playing as if we still have a shot to finish first," said Hough after the Rangers defeated the A's 6-2 Monday night.

"And even if the race is over, you still have to give it all you've got because you owe it to the people who pay good money to watch a big league game," said Hough, who improved his record to 13-10.

Hough's first pitch of the game sailed six feet behind the batter.

"Charlie told me he wasn't feeling well before the game," Howe said. "And when I went out there in the seventh he told me to get him out of there because he had nothing left."

Hough gave up three hits, walked four and struck out five before Dale Mahorcic pitched the final three innings for his seventh save.

Angels 6, White Sox 5

Perhaps Bob Boone will never be known as "Lightning" or "Speedy," but how many of his California Angels teammates can say they scored from second base on a fly ball?

Boone's dash — on a deep fly to Chicago left fielder John Cangelosi — highlighted a five-run seventh inning the Angels rode to a victory that reduced to 11 their magic number for clinching the American League West title.

Urbano Lugo, making his first start in more than a year, scattered four hits over 6⅔ innings, and Gary Pettis and Jones drove in two runs apiece for California. Donnie Moore pitched the final 1⅓ innings for his 19th save.

AL Roundup

Yankees 5, Orioles 3

Don Mattingly knew what to look for and what to do when he got it.

"When Don Aase gets behind in the count, you know you're going to get a fastball," said Mattingly, who hit a 2-1 pitch into the right-center-field seats for a decisive three-run homer in the seventh inning.

The homer, Mattingly's 26th, but first since Aug. 30, made a loser of Orioles right-hander Mike Boddicker, 14-11. Boddicker, who struck out 10, is 0-6 in his last nine starts and has not won since Aug. 4.

Blue Jays 5, Brewers 2

Toronto's Willie Upshaw, with just 10 hits in his last 44 at-bats, knew it was time to make some changes.

"The changes I made (in his batting stance) felt good," said Upshaw, who went 3-for-4 and hit a decisive three-run homer in the fifth inning for Toronto.

Rookie left-hander John Cerutti, 9-3, pitched seven strong innings as the Blue Jays remained in a second-place tie with the Yankees. Both trail idle Boston by 8½ games in the East.

Indians 4, Twins 0

When Phil Niekro talks, fellow knuckleballers listen.

"Phil Niekro told me that what I have to do is start the game with command of just one of my knucklers," Tom Candiotti said after pitching a seven-hitter for Cleveland's fourth consecutive victory.

Niekro, 47 and a lifetime 311-game winner, has helped Candiotti, 29, master the knuckleball. Candiotti, 14-11, throws the floater at various speeds.

In pitching his third shutout, Candiotti tied Minnesota's Bert Blyleven for the league lead with 14 complete games.

Montana's status uncertain

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The back surgery undergone by San Francisco 49ers quarterback Joe Montana should reduce the chance of future problems, said a team spokeswoman. But it's still not known whether the two-time Super Bowl champ will be able to play again.

Experts say such an operation involves several days in the hospital, six or eight weeks of recuperation and orders not to lift anything heavy for at least three months.

"We understand it was a successful operation," said Coach Bill Walsh. "So we're optimistic that he will be back in football."

The surgery on Monday at St. Mary's Hospital involved widening the spinal canal and removing a spinal disc, said team spokeswoman Shelley Wollman.

Dr. Robert Gamburd, a back specialist with the team, said the surgery was needed because Montana's fifth lumbar disc had been damaged and had been pressing on a nerve. He said there was some urgency in operating now so that Montana wouldn't suffer lasting nerve damage.

On Sunday, the team's orthopedic specialist, Dr. Michael Dillingham, said of the $1 million-a-year player, "There is a chance he won't play football again. I think there is a general consensus that Joe will play again, but there is also the risk that even if the surgery is successful, it won't relieve that pain."

Gamburd said Montana's recovery period will last from three to six months. "The success rate in somebody returning to a normal life is 90 percent," he said. "Returning to play professional football is in a different league," he said.

Montana, 30, has a history of back pain. He aggrevated the problem throwing a pass during the 49ers' season-opening 31-7 victory over Tampa Bay, a game in which he completed 32 of 46 passes for 356 yards.

With Montana on the sidelines, the 49ers lost on Sunday, 16-13, to the Los Angeles Rams with former Rams' backup quarterback Jeff Kemp at the helm.

Gamburd said Montana would not be able to play without the operation.

"We discovered the herniated disc on Friday," Gamburd said. "He made the decision to go ahead and have the surgery. He's a very tough guy. He was very professional about it. He has been aware for a while that surgery might be a possibility. He is having this done because he wants to play pro football again."

Before Sunday, Montana had missed just two games in his career due to injuries, both of them relatively minor.

Bryant out for six weeks

WASHINGTON (AP) — It seems that no matter what Kelvin Bryant does, he can't get a career going in the National Football League.

The star running back, injured in Sunday's game against the Los Angeles Raiders, underwent arthroscopic surgery on two stretched ligaments in his left knee Monday night. He will be out for at least six weeks, team officials said.

Bryant, the second-leading rusher in USFL history, had immediately become a key contributor to the Redskins. After scoring two touchdowns in his debut Sept. 7, Bryant injured the knee with 18 seconds to play in the first half of Washington's 10-6 victory.

Team trainer Bubba Tyer said Bryant stretched the knee's anterior cruciate and medial collateral ligaments. Tyer said the fragile joint will be immobilized for three weeks and Bryant will then undergo three weeks of "aggressive rehabiliation."

Bryant injured the knee and sprained his left ankle when he was tackled by two Raiders on a trap play. After being stopped by defensive end Sean Jones, Bryant had his leg folded under him when linebacker Jerry Robinson hit him head on

Howser wants to return in '87

The Washington Post

Dick Howser, the Kansas City Royals manager who returned from victory in the All-Star game to learn that he had a malignant brain tumor, expects to be back managing next season.

"The way I feel now, I can handle it," Howser told the Kansas City Times. "I'm not going to say it's been easy," Howser said. "I've had days when I've been depressed. But right now, I feel great. My plans are to manage the Royals in 1987."

The Royals front office will be ready for him.

"We're not looking for a manager," said Royals General Manager John Schuerholz. "We have one. Dick Howser is the manager of this ballclub. Dick Howser will be the manager of this ballclub. And Dick Howser will remain the manager of this ballclub."

Royals coach Mike Ferraro has been interim manager.

Howser met with Royals President Joe Burke and Schuerholz for an hour last Thursday to discuss player personnel. When the season ends, Howser will sit in on the evaluation meeting to weigh changes and trades.

On July 18, less than 72 hours after managing the American League to a victory in the All-Star game, he was diagnosed as having a brain tumor that turned out to be malignant. During surgery, dkctors discovered a tumor that they could not completely remove because of its proximity to Howser's speech centers.

Bereaved lay Lopez to rest

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Pablo Lopez was the least likely player on the Florida State football team to die a violent death, but he also was the one best prepared to meet his maker, according to Coach Bobby Bowden.

"I've been in coaching for about 34 years and in those 34 years I've had about three boys called," Bowden said Monday at a graveside ceremony for Lopez. "It seems to me sometimes that God seems to call the ones that are ready."

Lopez, 21, of South Miami, was shot to death during an altercation outside a fraternity dance on the school's Tallahassee campus at 1:40 a.m. Saturday.

Bowden was joined at the funeral ceremony by several hundred of Lopez' family members and friends.

Pack on lookout for Oilers' Everett

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — The Green Bay Packers may be searching for a third quarterback. Is Jim Everett on the list?

Green Bay Coach Forrest Gregg isn't denying it.

Will McDonough, a football writer for the Boston Globe and CBS television analyst, said Sunday that the Packers and Houston Oilers were working on a deal for Everett, the former Purdue quarterback who is unsigned.

"I can't control what people say on TV," Gregg said Sunday after the Packers' two active quarterbacks threw seven interceptions in a 24-10 loss to New Orleans.

On Monday, Gregg sidestepped the issue again.

"When a team's having trouble and struggling like we are now, naturally there are going to be rumors," Gregg told reporters. "You just have to sift that out for yourself. You guys are in the rumor business, I'm not."

Everett is seeking a four-year deal worth $2.7 million, while the Oilers have given Everett a take-it-or-leave-it offer of $2 million over four years, newspaper reports say. Marvin Demoff, Everett's Los Angeles agent, has said the Oilers drafted his client as a luxury and that Houston has shown little commitment to Everett's career.

IF EVERETT doesn't sign before the start of the '87 draft, he would return to the draft-eligible pool and Houston would lose his rights.

Oilers' spokesman Chip Namias said from Houston that the NFL club is maintaining silence during the negotiations with Everett.

"We're not commenting on any of the rumors," said Namias, adding that media reports have linked Everett with four of five other teams.

The Packers' starting quarterback is third-year pro Randy Wright of Wisconsin. Veteran Vince Ferragamo is the backup. Robbie Bosco, a rookie from Brigham Young, is on the injured reserve list with a sore shoulder.

Green Bay, 0-2, has a new ball-control offense this season. But it has scored only one touchdown in its first two games. The Packers lost three consecutive preseason games going into the season as the offense sputtered.

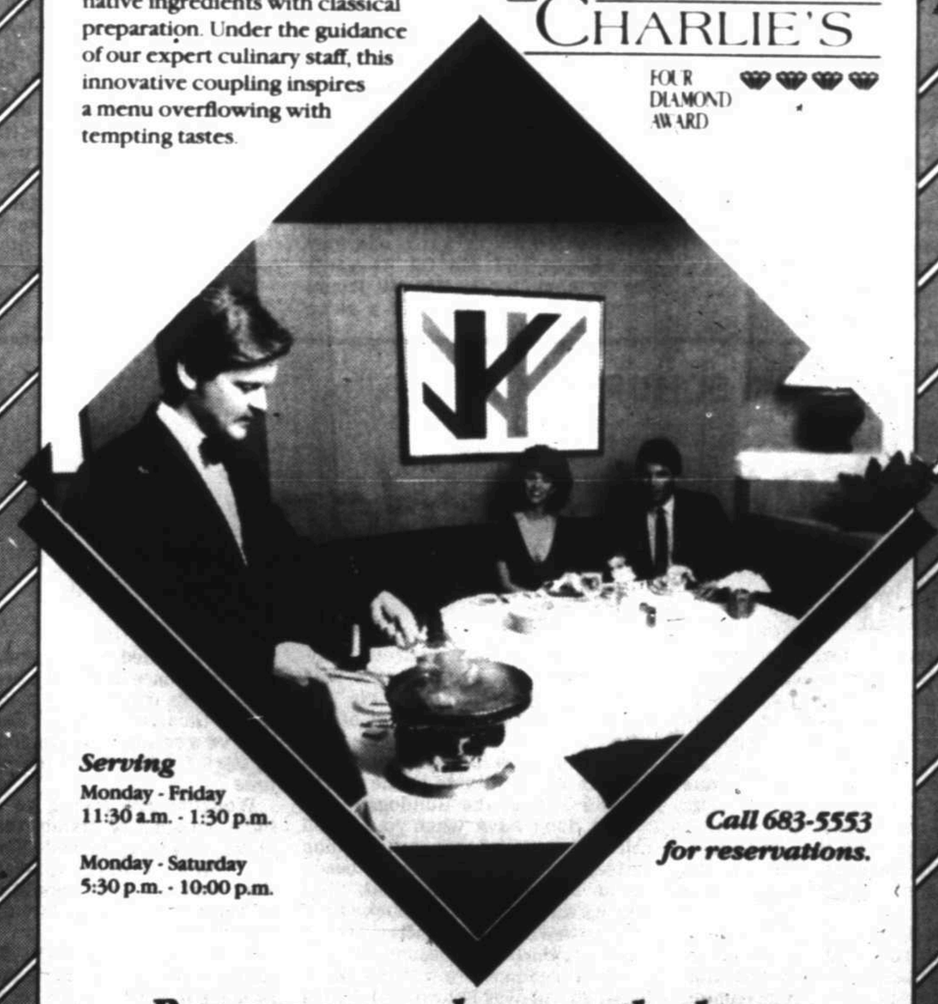

Gregg hasn't ruled out obtaining a third quarterback, although he expresses reservations about bringing someone in who's unfamiliar with the system.

"Where do you get a third quarterback?" Gregg said. "We've looked at one (former Buffalo Bills quarterback Bruce Mathison). We'll probably start taking a look at some more."

Dollar rises

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose against most major currencies in early European trading today. Gold was little changed.

Currency dealers said trading was quiet and little unusual action was expected as there were no scheduled announcements of major economic statistics.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell against the Japanese yen, closing at 155.80 yen, down 0.85 yen from Friday's close. Later, in London, it was quoted at 155.95 yen.

Trading was moderate. The Tokyo market was closed Monday for a public holiday.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Monday:

—2.0520 West German marks, up from 2.0500

—1.6610 Swiss francs, up from 1.6570

—6.7205 French francs, up from 6.7025

—2.3155 Dutch guilders, up from 2.3140

—1,414.25 Italian lire, up from 1,412.00

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.4770, compared with $1.4817 Monday.

Gold opened in London today at a bid $413.50 a troy ounce, up from $412 bid late Monday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $413.55.

In Zurich, the noon bid price was $413.25, down from $414 late Monday when markets closed for a half-day holiday.

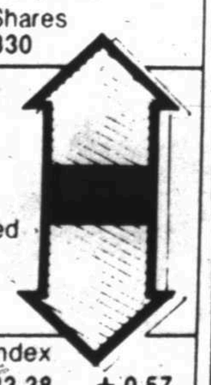

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $2.09 to close at a bid $411.10.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.80 a troy ounce, up from Monday's $5.79.

Auto sales soar 36.9 percent

DETROIT (AP) — Bargain-hunting buyers gave the nation's automakers their second best 10-day selling period ever, but analysts say early September's feast may turn into October's famine after cut-rate financing ends.

Sales Sept. 1-10 by the seven domestic automakers on a per-day basis stood 36.9 percent above the corresponding period last year. The companies on average sold 46,084 cars per day. The highest was 53,959 in late September 1972, said L. Raymond Windecker, Ford Motor Co. manager for research and analysis.

The soaring sales came in the first period for which the major automakers were offering financing at 2.9 percent and below, more than 8 percentage points below the car-loan rates offered by banks.

"I believe what the manufacturers are doing is moving into September sales that normally would have occurred in October or November and beyond," Jeanette Garretty, automotive analyst with the Bank of America in San Francisco, said Monday.

"The message being delivered by the 2.9 percent is if you're going to buy a car this year, you should buy now," she said. "But it's not clear to me that it is creating any additional demand."

The seven companies sold 368,674 cars in early September, compared with 235,680 a year earlier. Sales by the Big Three automakers totaled 355,847, up 57.6 percent from 225,810 in the corresponding period last year.

Industry-leader General Motors Corp. in late August announced 2.9 percent financing on some 1986-model car loans. No. 2 Ford followed with a similar 2.9 percent plan, and Chrysler Corp., the nation's third-largest automaker, weighed in with 2.4 percent.

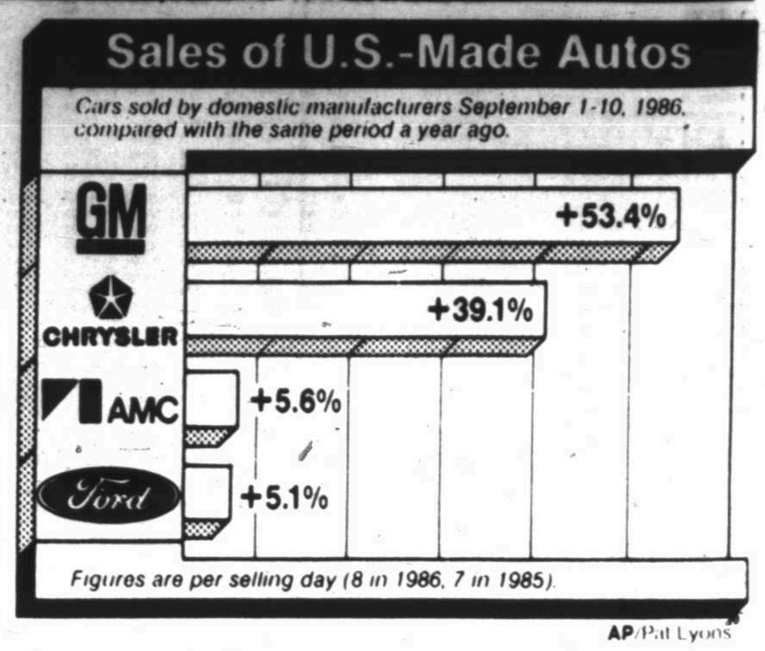

American Motors Corp. announced it was offering interest-free financing on most of its 1986 models.

The offers all end Oct. 8, around the time the 1987 models are introduced. Bank loans for cars are now running between 11 percent and 12 percent.

The annualized annual selling rate for early September was 17 million cars, compared with 12.4 million a year earlier.

"I think it was absolutely insane," said Scott Merlis, automotive analyst with the New York brokerage house Morgan Stanley. "We were looking for a 15 million rate, which we thought was way, way too high.

Culberson County may see 300 jobs with gypsum mine

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

A Houston-based company may bring as many as 300 new jobs to sparsely populated Culberson County in far West Texas. Standard Gypsum Corp. has entered an agreement to buy and reopen a gypsum mine 35 miles northeast of Van Horn formerly operated by Elcor Corp., Midland.

Standard president Al Dugan says his company will "absolutely" close the deal to buy 12,428 acres, holding an estimated 200,000,000 tons of cored and proven gypsum reserves, by the end of the month.

Operations at the mine were discontinued in 1971 by Elcor, according to vice president and chief financial officer, Dick Rosebery. He says much of the previously used mining facilities have been dismantled in the past 15 years.

However, Dugan notes that at least $20 million in improvements to the mine are still in place.

Standard's plans call for opening a sheetrock manufacturing facility at the mine site. When completed mining and manufacturing jobs are expected to employ a total of about 300, Dugan says.

Elcor's operations at the Culberson County plant concentrated on mining gypsum to produce sulfur. The company suspended operations in 1971 because falling sulfur prices made the mine uneconomical to operate, Rosebery says.

Elcor considered other uses for the mine, he notes, but none of the alternative uses — including sheetrock manufacturing — proved attractive enough for Elcor to reopen operations. Elcor is involved in building materials manufacturing, making asphalt and tile roofing materials.

Dugan says Standard is convinced that the company's proposed project is feasible, but that third-party engineering feasibility studies are expected to begin within a month.

Engineering studies and arranging the financing for the manufacturing plant are expected to be completed within six months, Dugan says, and construction should begin by early 1987.

In addition to the 200 million tons of proven reserves being purchased from Elcor, Standard has state permits to prospect another 12,000 acres adjacent to the mine and has entered an agreement to fee purchase rights to an additional 12,000 acres in the area.

Elcor's Rosebery notes that his company's operations in the mine from the mid-'60s until 1971 did not significantly reduce the reserves in the mine.

Dugan declined to outline the full price of the deal, saying only that a combined cash and royalty arrangement was being negotiated.

Mexican official calls import fee harmful

HOUSTON (UPI) — A Mexican energy official and chairman of that country's oil producer says an import fee by the United States on foreign oil would not be in the best interest of either country.

Alfredo Del Mazo, Mexico's secretary of energy, mines and state industry, and chairman of the board of Petroleos Mexicanos (PEMEX), the country's oil producer, said Monday he is aware there are discussions in the U.S. about imposing an import fee on foreign oil.

"We are aware of the difficulties in the United States and it would seriously affect Mexico," Del Mazo said. "Forty to 50 percent of our exports are to the United States. Because of the intense trade between our countries, it would affect trade both ways. Perhaps it would not be in the best interest for either country. But, as we say, we try to review our oil strategy in a flexible way."

Del Mazo, who was in Houston to meet with city officials, representatives of the oil industry and participate in several ceremonies honoring the anniversary of Mexico's independence, said he believes the price of oil will be about $18 or $19 a barrel by the end of the year.

"It depends on the next OPEC meeting," Del Mazo said. "Mexico does not belong to OPEC, but we have kept a close contact with them and have tried to cooperate."

Del Mazo said Mexico, in efforts to modernize its economy, must keep a flexible policy in dealing with the low price of oil.

"Our strategy is to be flexible," he said. "We are headed toward modernness. We want a stable oil market with fixed and reasonable prices that will allow for a sound industrial development and a proper diversification.

"We want to be responsible. We've had a 10 percent cutback in production. We are losing $150,000 per day, but the situation we are in right now has to be flexible to the market."

Del Mazo said reports of a large number of oil field workers being laid off in the Mexico because of the depressed oil situation is not true.

"The figures are very small," he said. "Many of those (layoffs) were due to negotiations with unions. We have had to cut back in exploration, but we are trying to intensify that. Mexico is undergoing many changes, especially economically, and it takes time to adjust."

Computer show scheduled

From Staff Reports

The seventh annual Data Processing Management Association (DPMA) computer show Wednesday and Thursday at Midland Center, will showcase the latest developments in computer hardware and software for business and home applications.

In addition to viewing displays from approximately 20 exhibitors, show attendees have the opportunity to participate in hour-long seminars both days of the show.

Seminar topics will include local computer clubs, writing effective resumes and introductions to using spreadsheet and word processing programs. Each day at 3 p.m. Dan Cihonski will present an Overview of Artificial Intelligence.

Past shows have drawn an average of 1,500 to 2,000, says Lonnie Yee, international director for the 50-member local chapter of the DPMA. "We expect to draw about what we did last year, 1,500," Yee says.

Admission fees ($2 per person, or $1 with a business card or discount coupon) collected are used by DPMA to fund scholarships for local computer science students at Midland College, Odessa College and the University of Texas at Permian Basin.

Experts don't discount report Texas Commerce for sale

DALLAS (UPI) — Texas Commerce Bancshares Monday declined comment on reports it was for sale but banking experts said the reports could not be discounted in view of pending interstate banking legislation.

Officials of the state's fourth largest bank holding company headquartered in Houston refused comment on a New York Times report the institution had put itself up for sale. The report said prospective buyers would include Chase Manhattan Corp. and Chemical New York Corp., both of New York, and First Interstate Bancorporation and Security Pacific Corp., both of Los Angeles.

Chemical and Chase said Monday they would not comment on the report. Security and First Interstate had said earlier they want to acquire banks in Texas.

Texas Commerce also had held talks with Sun Trust Banks, formed in 1985 through the merger of Trust Co. of Georgia and Sun Banks of Florida, the report said.

The news did not come as a surprise to banking experts in Texas.

"In the environment we are in, we naturally believe the east coast and west coast banks are taking a look at Texas banks," said Georgia Head, banking analyst for the investment firm of Rauscher Pierce Refsnes, Inc. in Dallas.

"It is not a matter of the fourth largest bank in Texas putting itself up for sale," Head said. "It is a matter of who is going to be first. Between now and the end of the year you are going to hear a lot of announcements."

But Head thought the $1.5 billion or about $36 a share calculated in the New York Times report was too high for Texas Commerce.

"The company had $800 million in non-performing loans as of June 30 and that could increase in the third quarter," Head said.

She said her calculations show an adjusted book value at about $21 a share. If a 50 percent premium were added, the going price would be in the low $30s.

Texas Commerce stock rose $1.50 to close at $26.75 a share Monday on the New York Stock Exchange.

The state legislature approved interstate banking during a recent emergency session to consider ways to reduce its huge budgetary deficits. The bill is awaiting what observers feel is a certain signature by Gov. Mark White.

The other part of the legislation, permitting branch banking by Texas banks will be placed before voters next November.

The reality of interstate banking in Texas has brought a flood of speculation that major national banks are waiting to move into the state.

People Express sale could affect airline industry

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — In a move that would have wide effects on the airline industry, the Texas Air Corp. will acquire People Express in a stock deal, the airlines announced Monday.

The acquisition, which would create the nation's largest carrier, came as a result of People's weakened financial condition and a belief by its management that it needed a quick infusion of cash to get through the winter, when traffic is weak and revenue is low.

Under the terms of the deal, People will be acquired for about $125 million. Monday, the Newark-based carrier got a $10 million cash infusion from Texas Air as part of a total of $49.5 million in cash that will be transferred to People in return for planes, spare engines and parts. Texas Air will also buy People's Denver-based subsidiary, Frontier Airlines, for $176 million.

The acquisition, which is subject to regulatory approval, could bring under the Texas Air umbrella a group of carriers — People Express, Continental Airlines, New York Air and Eastern Airlines — that could dominate such important hubs as New York, Miami, Houston and Denver.

SEPM sets conference, field trip

The Permian Basin Section of the Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists, SEPM, will sponsor a research conference on hydrocarbon reservoir studies of the San Andres and Grayburg formations of the Permian Basin.

The conference will be at Midland Center, Oct. 7-9, with sessions beginning at 8:15 a.m. and lasting until around 4:30 p.m., with lunch breaks from 11:45 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Thursday's session will end at 11:45 a.m.

Selected titles for the conference will include "Facies Control of Porosity in the Grayburg Formation, Dune field, Crane County," "Stratigraphic Potential for Hydrocarbon Entrapment on the East Flank of the Means San Andres Field, Andrews County," "The Grayburg Formation at North McElroy: A Cinderella Formation," and "Reservoir Facies of the Permian San Andres Formation in the Mabee Field, Midland Basin, West Texas - Characterization for Enhanced Recovery."

Core workshops will also be held at the Midland Center on Oct. 7 and 8. Schedules will be available at registration. Also, a limited number of rooms for conference participants has been blocked off at the Midland Hilton. Call the Hilton for reservations.

The SEPM is also sponsoring a field seminar Oct. 10-11 at Carlsbad, NM. During the field seminar, San Andres-Grayburg and their facies equivalent outcrops will be studied in Big Dog Canyon (Algerita Escarpment) and Last Chance Canyon, Guadalupe Mountains area, Texas and New Mexico. Field trip leaders will be J.F. (Rick) Sarg, P.J. (Pat) Lehmann, and F.J. (Jerry) Lucia.

Cost of both the symposium and field trip is $250, $150 for full-time students. For the symposium, cost is $120, $75 for students, and $150 for the field trip only, $95 for students.

Apple unveils latest in long line of computers

New computer works three times faster than Apple IIe

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

Two years ago when Apple's portable computer made its debut, it was in typical Apple-splash fashion. The theme, "Apple II Forever," was repeated everywhere — signs, T-shirts, buttons and even a song. On Monday, Apple began singing a new verse to the same old tune.

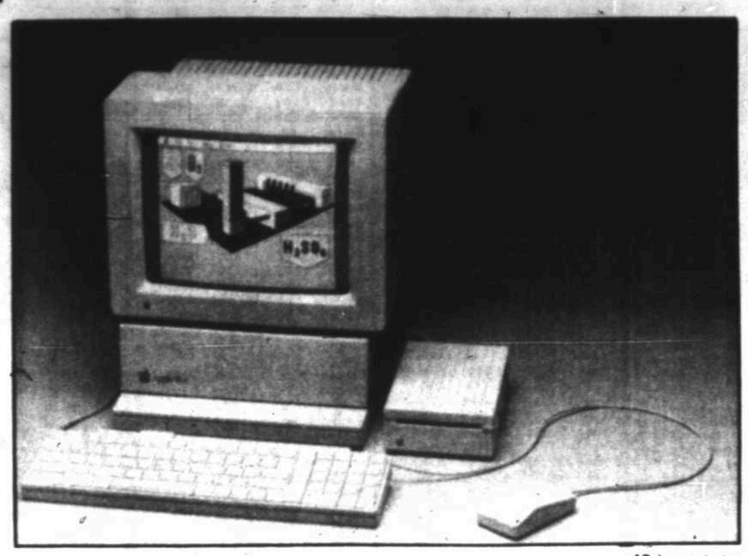

The No. 2 maker of personal computers unveiled the Apple IIGS Monday, the latest in the long line of Apple II products. The GS performs jobs three times faster than its predecessor, Apple IIe, has flashy color capabilities and the voice of a sawed-off synthesizer. It is, say analysts who have seen the machine, a pretty good little computer.

But there are lots of pretty good little computers — so many in fact that a mini-price war has broken out and every Tom, Dick and Computer-Land is offering discounts. And in recent weeks, several new personal computers have been added to the list.

In fact, the new Compaq computer unveiled two weeks ago is newer, technologically; it uses cutting-edge components. The Apple IIGS is, after all, part of a family whose technological base goes back 10 years.

But that is the point precisely, say Apple executives — with not a few analysts nodding in agreement.

"I get a real kick out of it when people start to corner me about the life cycle of the Apple II," said Del Yocam, Apple's executive vice president. "And I say to them, 'Well, you draw the line, you tell me where this life cycle ends.' But it's really all up to us, how long it goes." The new Apple IIGS, he said, is part of that "Apple II Forever" promise.

AP Laserphoto

Apple Computer is hoping to strike gold iwth its new platinum-colored Apple IIgs which boasts high processing speed, high resolution graphics and advanced sound capabilities.

The original Apple II was the Steve Wozniak-designed machine that sparked the personal computer revolution. It has been the bread-and-butter machine for the Cupertino, Calif.-based company; its sales fueled the company's growth as the major — some say only — serious alternative to the IBM world of personal computers.

As a sign of the continuing folk-hero status of Wozniak, a "designer" limited edition of the new Apple will bear a "Woz" signature plate.

But Apple's commitment to the Apple II product line is more than affectionate nostalgia. The Apple II family has a huge existing installed base and hundreds of software products have been written for the computers over the years. The new Apple is fully compatible with the existing programs, but it offers enhanced memory storage and processing speeds, which will allow even more sophisticated programs to be used.

Analyst John Girton of Birr, Wilson & Co. in San Francisco said: "I am surprised and amazed at how long the Apple II phenomenon has lasted. But this upgrade is necessary to prevent loss of (Apple's) market share in education."

Competition has been heating up in the education market, where Apple is dominant with as much as a 60 percent share of computers used in kindergarten through the 12th grade. Apple said the new GS machine (whose initials stand for graphics and sound) is intended for the education and consumer — read "home" — markets.

Analysts said the timing of the Apple IIGS' introduction meant that it would be a hot-selling item this holiday season. It could spell trouble for Commodore, whose similarly priced Amiga computer has been strong in the home market.

"This may put the final nail in Amiga's coffin," said Norm DeWitt, personal comuter analyst at Dataquest, a San Jose, Calif., market research company. DeWitt said Apple would not be able to produce substantial quantities of the IIGS this year — perhaps 35,000 of them. But advertising for the IIGS likely will draw customers to stores and other Apple products, such as the Macintosh, will benefit.

The base price for the Apple IIGS is $999. A typically configured system, including the enhanced color monitor and a disk drive, would cost about $1,800.

SALES

"The stronger it explodes now, the harder it's going to fall next month."

GM increased its share of sales to 63 percent, compared with 56.2 percent a year earlier. Ford's share dropped to 20.7 percent from 27 percent and Chrysler held nearly steady at 12.8 percent, 0.2 percentages points above last year.

GM sold 232,252 cars Sept. 1-10, up 53.4 percent and the highest since late September 1973. Chrysler sold 47,096 cars in early September, up 39.1 percent from a year earlier. Ford sales were up 5.1 percent to 76,499.

Percentage comparisons were based on sales per selling day, since there were eight selling days in early September this year and seven selling days in the corresponding period last year.

The major automakers' supply of unsold cars dropped to about 40 days' worth, compared to about 60 days' worth at the end of August, according to analysts' estimates.

Among the smaller automakers, early September sales by American Honda Motor Co. Inc. were up 53.3 percent from a year earlier; American Motors, up 5.6 percent; Volkswagen of America Inc., up 2.2 percent; and Nissan Motor Corp. in U.S.A., down 52.9 percent.

Industrywide, sales Jan. 1 through Sept. 10 stood 1.7 percent below the corresponding period last year.

This year through Sept. 10, GM sales were down 0.3 percent from a year earlier; Ford, down 5.5 percent; and Chrysler, down 0.7 percent.

For the year through Sept. 10, American Honda sales were up 28.1 percent; American Motors, down 44 percent; Volkswagen, down 1.3 percent, and Nissan, up 63.2 percent.

AIRLINE

By ending the intense rivalry between People Express and Continental, the deal could mean more restrictions on low discount fares, some analysts believe.

The combination, however, would also create the nation's largest low-cost carrier, which could force down fares in markets dominated by such major carriers as United, American and Delta. The new airline would have about 67,000 employees, more than 600 planes and yearly revenues of more than $7 billion. It would account for about 21 percent of market share for the domestic industry compared with 18 percent for United and 15 percent for American.

FRANK A. LORENZO, the chairman of Texas Air, said at a news conference at the St. Regis hotel Monday that People Express would operate independently for a while but that it would eventually be merged into one of the subsidiaries of Texas Air and cease to have a separate identity.

For now there will be no major change that will affect travelers who use People Express. It will continue to fly out of Newark International Airport and still expects to move into a new terminal being built there by mid-1987.

Donald C. Burr, the head and founder of People, which became a symbol of a lean, low-cost, no-frills carrier that forced established carriers to cut their fares, sat near Lorenzo and said that the transaction was a "bittersweet moment, but the sweetness outweighs the bitterness."

Burr was once a protege of Lorenzo and worked for him as the president of Texas Air. Frustrated by Lorenzo's rigid management style, he left Texas Air to found People in 1980. Under Burr's unorthodox approach, employees were given management responsibilties, bought shares in the company and worked at a variety of jobs.

The boards of Texas Air and People approved the deal in meetings Sunday night. The transaction has to be approved by the Department of Transportation, which previously rejected Texas Air's proposed takeover of Eastern. Texas Air has asked the department to reconsider that decision.

SOME ANALYSTS SAID that Texas Air's request to take over People could put the Transportation Department in a dilemma. If the deal is approved, the analyst pointed out, it could mean less competition in Newark where People and New York Air, a Texas Air subsidiary, both have shuttles to Boston and Washington and on the New York-to-Florida routes where People and Eastern are major competitors.

If the deal is not approved, People could end up in bankruptcy and competition would be lessened in that way.

If the Transportation Department approves both requests, then Texas Air, a holding company based in Houston, would preside over a carrier that would be second only to Aeroflot, the Soviet state airline.

Recently, mounting losses resulting from an overly ambitious expansion had forced People to more toward a more traditional management structure and to change its strategy to become a full-service carrier.

As part of that effort, People acquired Frontier last November. However, heavy losses — including about $10 million a month from Frontier alone — forced People to begin to cut back its routes and start to transform itself into a full-service carrier by adopting a frequent-flier plan, first-class service and joining the industry's major reservations systems.

LAST JULY, People reached an agreement to sell Frontier to United for $146 million. The deal fell through, however, when United and its pilots' union could not agree on terms for absorbing Frontier pilots, and People was forced to have Frontier file for protection under the bankruptcy code on Aug. 28.

People was thus unable to get about $100 million still due from United and has since been searching for a means to build up its cash to survive.

Welders on the firing line, with trucks in a row, weld up the 49-mile, 24-inch carbon dioxide pipeline in southwestern Wyoming. The pipeline is expected to be placed in service this month.

Exxon finals construction of carbon dioxide pipeline

HOUSTON — Exxon Pipeline Co. has completed construction of a carbon dioxide pipeline in southwestern Wyoming for Exxon Company U.S.A.'s Southwestern Division, headquartered in Midland.

The 112-mile 20-inch pipeline will transport carbon dioxide from an existing pipeline near Rock Springs, Wyoming to a receiving facility near Baroil, Wyoming. The initial carbon dioxide deliveries will be used by another company in enhanced oil recovery projects near Bairoil.

The carbon dioxide will be produced at Exxon's Shute Creek facility in Wyoming, currently undergoing startup. Initial deliveries to Bairoil will begin later this year.

In 1985 Exxon built a 49-mile, 24-inch carbon dioxide pipeline linking the Shute Creek facility with another company's receiving facility near Rock Springs. This line, the origin point for the Bairoil pipeline, will be started up this month.

Both of the pipeline construction projects were managed by Exxon Pipeline Co. The construction contractor was Southeast Pipeline Constructors of Tempe, Ariz.

Oil change business expands by getting back to basics

METAIRIE, La. (UPI) — While most oil-related businesses are suffering from unstable prices and a downturn in the industry, two Louisiana men are expanding their business nationwide by getting back to basics.

Garry Copp and Kevin Bennett, both 32, have become millionaires since they founded SpeeDee Oil Change and Tune Up in 1980. Their first year of business brought in $110,000, but they expect that sales volume to soar to $5 million this year.

The secret, the childhood friends say, is in borrowing from an earlier time and providing a service many motorists had forgotten they wanted.

SpeeDee's business has been bolstered by service stations' trends toward self service. Stations with attendants who routinely check oil and fluid levels, fill the gasoline tank and wash the car windows are dwindling.

"We fill that vacuum," Copp said. "We try to give the customers what they want."

That service includes oil changes in 9 minutes, tune-ups in 30 minutes, transmission service, flushing the radiator, charging the air conditioner and more. The owners also keep odds and ends on hand, such as radiator caps and windshield wiper blades, and employees even vacuum the carpet in the car.

The conversion of full-service gas stations to self-service has created a gold mine for Copp and Bennett because SpeeDee employees provide a personal touch and remind motorists of details once handled routinely by their service station attendant.

"Our business is increasing every month," Copp said. "We have an almost endless supply of customers, especially since full-service stations went self-service."

Copp said he expects to continue building a steady stream of customers because automobiles require periodic maintenance to keep them running smoothly. Changing a car's oil should become a habit, like going to the dentist, he said.

A car's oil should be changed every three months or 3,000 miles, rather than the 7,500 miles recommended by most automobile manufacturers, Bennett said, and routinely freshening a car's fluids extends the life of the automobile and provides for smoother operation. SpeeDee even sends its customers cards every three months to remind them it is time for their car to be serviced.

About 65 percent of their customers return, Copp said, and SpeeDee now commands 5 percent of the market for oil changes nationwide.

"It's all preventive maintenance," Copp says. "A lot of time people put it off because it is inconvenient. But with us you get your oil changed in nine minutes, it costs only $18.95 and your car sounds and runs better.

"It's a whole new marketing concept — like fast food used to be. We're the fast food of 20 years ago, like them in their infancy."

Just as fast-food chains expanded into national enterprises, so is SpeeDee Oil Change and Tune Up.

District attorney's office gets two grants from state

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The Midland County District Attorney's office has received two grants from Austin, one of which will be used to hire a special assistant district attorney to prosecute only repeat offenders.

District Attorney Al Schorre said the grants — totaling about $68,000 — will fund the salary of two employees, enabling his office to be at full staff at a time when the county budget is stretched paper thin.

"You bet I'm happy about it," Schorre said, "because it is going to make up for the shortfall we've had in the county budget. Officially, we've been down two attorneys under the authorized level, but from a practical standpoint we've only been one slot down that we've wanted to fill."

The larger of the two grants — just over $40,000 — will be used to pay the salary of an additional prosecutor who will handle only cases in which the defendant has at least one prior felony conviction.

"The (number) of those cases is statistically significant," Schorre said. "We're not experiencing an upswing in our violent crime, but we certainly are having a lot of crimes involving property, such as burglary and theft."

Schorre said repeat offenders constitute from 10 to 15 percent of the caseload of his office.

The DA's office currently is staffed with five assistant district attorneys and two investigators.

Schorre said his office has begun accepting applicants for the position, and hopes to have it filled by the first of October.

The grant declines over a five-year period; it will be funded fully from Oct. 1 this year to Oct. 1, 1987. After that, the state's contribution decreases 20 percent per year. Schorre said he will include the position in his budget and expects Midland County to fund it after the grant expires.

The Victim-Witness Program of the DA's office also has received a grant, which will enable the office to hire another employee Oct. 1. Tedda McAnear, program coordinator, welcomed the news of the addition.

"I think because we are so understaffed, we felt a need to accentuate the victim assistance program," Ms. McAnear said. "The grant was the only way to do it, since Midland County can't afford to hire anyone else."

Ms. McAnear said she has spoken to the governor's office, and said she hopes the $28,000 grant, which lasts until Oct. 1 next year, can be extended to 1988.

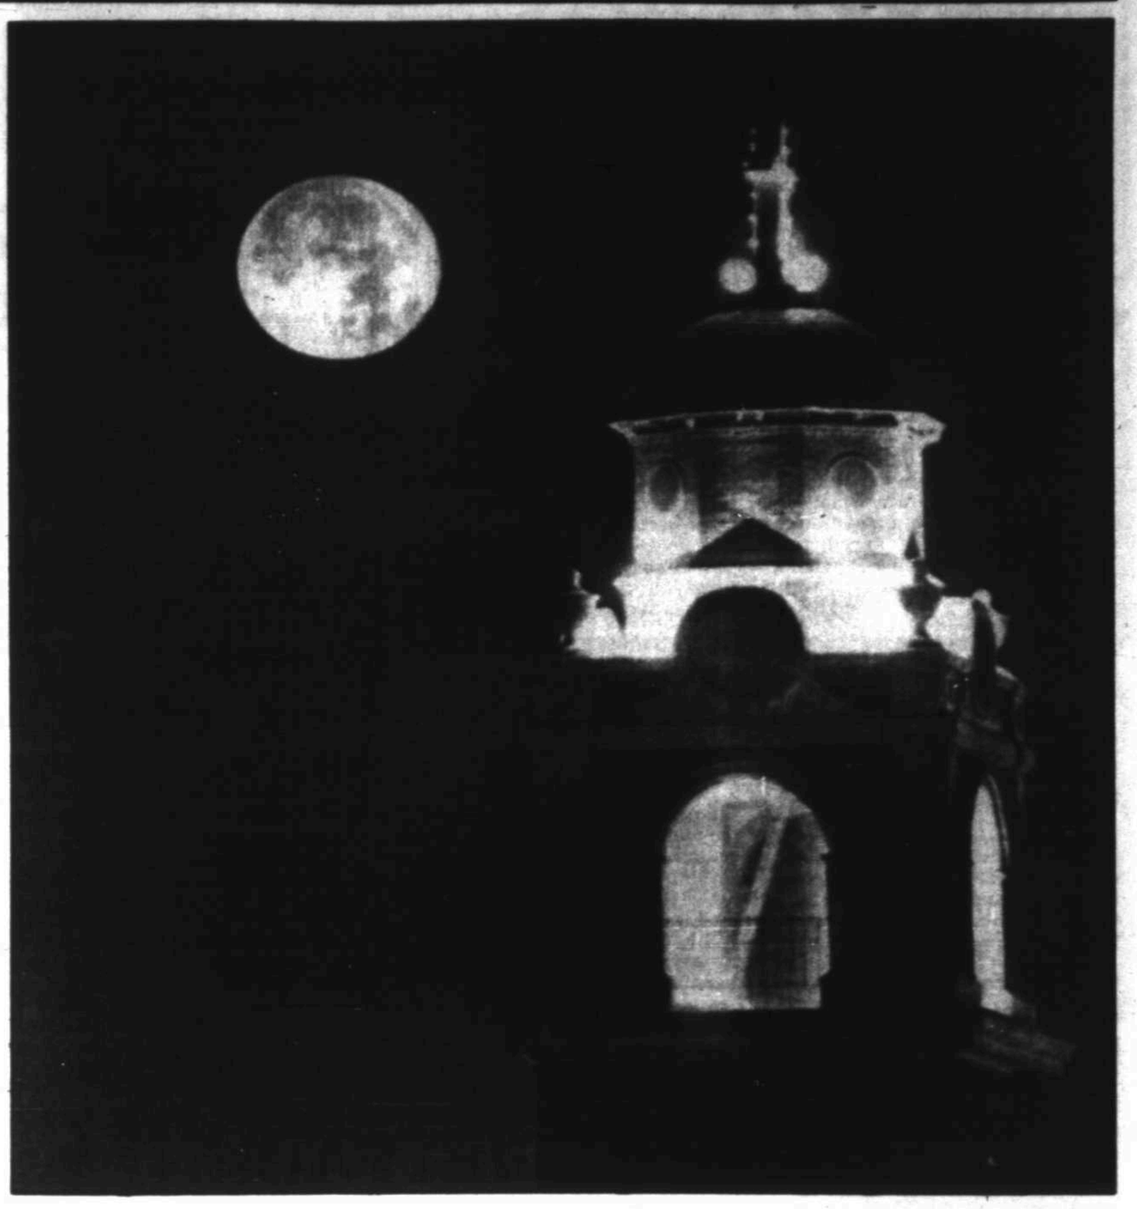

"I just think it is really exciting that we can use some positive time just working with victims," she said. "The way the grant is structured, it is just geared for victim assistance."

She said she hoped the new staffer would be able to work more closely with other agencies that deal with victims, such as the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women.

Ms. McAnear credited Schorre for the formation of the program. She said only counties with a population of 150,000 or more are required by statute to have a program for crime victims and witnesses.

In 1985, she said the State of Texas set out a crime victims' Bill of Rights, one of 39 states that have formulated similar documents.

Ms. McAnear said her office does anything possible to help crime victims, including informing them about possible compensation, referring victims for counseling if necessary and in violent cases handling protective orders. In violent crimes that victimize children, she said support and counseling is also provided.

Permian Basin leaders to gather at UTPB for 'superconference'

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A select group of leaders from the 17-county Permian Basin region that includes Midland-Odessa will gather Wednesday at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin Wednesday for a "superconference."

The day-long superconference grew out of the Private Industry Council's concern for the worsening mismatch between workplace needs and workforce capabilities and is dubbed "Project Transition."

Odessan Dave Cox, chairman of the Permian Basin Regional Private Industry Council, says the council gave Johnny Lou Avery of Big Spring the responsibility of planning the superconference. Indications are as many as 400 Permian Basin leaders will be on hand to participate in discussions of what Cox terms "a critical issue" facing the area as well as the state. Cox is also chairman of the state Association of Private Industry Councils.

Goals of the conference will be to study the most critical issues facing employers, employees, educators and job trainers, create lines of communication and stronger working relationships between business, education, public agencies and government agencies.

Tom Wageman, RepublicBank First National Midland president, will serve as moderator of the superconference that begins at 8 a.m. Wednesday with registration. There is no fee for registration.

Panel members for a discussion of alternatives will include: Peter O'Donnell Jr., president of the O'Donnell Foundation, Dallas; Brux Austin, editor-in-chief of the Dallas-based Texas Business magazine; William Grossenbacher, director of the Texas Employment Commission; State Rep. Jim Rudd of Brownfield; Joe Rutledge, vice principal of Odessa's Permian High School; and Dr. Bob Riley, president of Howard College in Big Spring.

The luncheon speaker will be Clayton Williams, Midland businessman, financier, rancher and oil and gas producer, who also is an instructor in entrepreneurship at Texas A&M.

Cox will moderate an afternoon panel discussion on perspectives. Panel members will include: James Roberts, publisher-editor of the Andrews County News; Troyt York, director of the UTPB Center for Energy and Economic Diversification; David Thayer, director of the Permian Basin Bid Center; and Clyde McQueen, director of employment and training for the Texas Department of Community Affairs in Austin.

Immediately following the luncheon small group meetings will be held, with preassigned participants giving their viewpoints on business, education, human resources and governmental agencies and the relation of each to the perceived mismatch between workplace needs and workforce capabilities.

The overall goal of the superconference will be to evolve short and long-term solutions of the problem.

The conference will conclude with UTPB President Dr. Duane Leach addressing the group.

The conference will be held in the Student Lounge at UTPB.

Ruling forces Greyhound Lines to leave driving to union labor

From Staff and Wire Reports

PHOENIX, Ariz. — A union victory in a contract dispute at Greyhound Lines Inc. is putting unionized drivers behind the wheels on about 1,000 miles of bus routes in the Southwest and New England, it was reported today.

However, the settlement will not affect the Midland Greyhound line, said terminal manager Bill Brinkley today.

"It didn't really affect Midland," Brinkley said.

The runs affected in West Texas were portions between El Paso and Fort Stockton and El Paso and Pecos, Brinkley said.

In June Greyhound abandoned these portions of the route which were picked up by the Lubbock-based Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma Coaches, said the smaller bus company's President Robert Greenhill.

"Whenever they abandoned them (the routes) we jumped on them. When they elected to go back on the routes Sept. 3, we felt we had no choice but to abandon them," Greenhill said.

Greenhill said he was not happy with Greyhound's decision to take those routes back over on Sept. 3.

"I don't particularly like it, but there's not much I can do about it," he said.

The smaller bus company recently laid off 25 drivers that were hired for the West Texas routes when Greyhound pulled out June 25, Greenhill said.

The drivers were unionized but lower paid than Greyhound drivers, Greenhill said.

Passengers probably noticed no difference in the changeover, he said.

"There won't be one iota of difference from the handling of passengers when we were handling them and when Greyhound was handling them," Greenhill said.

Arbitration on the Greyhound Lines labor contract followed an apparent attempt by the company during the spring to replace more than 100 Amalgamated Transit Union drivers with lower-paid drivers by discontinuing routes that could be served by two smaller bus companies, according to documents cited by a newspaper.

Those smaller lines — Texas, New Mexico, & Oklahoma Coaches Inc. and Vermont Transit — are owned by Greyhound Lines' parent company, the Phoenix-based Greyhound Corp.

Greyhound Lines officials said during arbitration hearings in May that the company had a right to drop the routes, according to documents obtained by The Arizona Republic and cited in a story published in today's editions. But an arbitrator ruled Aug. 25 that the company's actions violated its labor agreement, the newspaper said.

"Although it may be proffered that this arrangement was a responsible action taken to assure continued service to passengers on the routes," arbitrator Milton Rubin wrote, "the evidence is persuasive to me that this arrangement was a means of substitution of other less-costly employees to perform the continuing work defined for the bargaining unit in the labor agreement."

Rubin then told Greyhound Lines in a binding decision to once again resume service on the routes and to pay lost earnings and other costs to the affected workers. The contract between Greyhound Lines and the union calls for an arbitrator to make decisions in such cases.

As Greyhound Lines and the union continue to negotiate a contract to replace one that expires on Oct. 31, company and union officials have agreed to avoid discussing labor matters with members of the news media.

The disputed routes that went back to Greyhound drivers included six routes in Arizona, New Mexico and Texas that were abandoned in April by Greyhound Lines and picked up without an interruption in service by Texas, New Mexico & Oklahoma Coaches, officials said.

Greyhound Lines spokesman Herb Doherty said the company resumed service Sept. 3 on those routes.

The New England routes included all those in Maine as well as in parts of Connecticut, Massachusetts and New York, but Doherty said Greyhound Lines did not drop the New England routes as scheduled in June but agreed instead to wait for the arbitrator's decision.

Twenty-two people injured when school bus flipped over in Pyote

From Staff and Wire Reports

Twenty-two people were injured when a school bus flipped onto its side after being struck broadside by a car in a West Texas community, and five special education students were injured in another school bus accident in Fort Worth, officials said.

All 16 injured in a Monday morning bus wreck in Pyote have been treated and released from Ward Memorial Hospital, a hospital spokesman said.

Gary Shreve, Ward Memorial Hospital administrator, said 14 children and two adults were treated for minor cuts and bruises after a car hit the school bus broadside Monday morning.

"We were real fortunate because the bus wasn't full," Shreve said.

"The most major injury was a broken wrist," Shreve said.

A spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety in Pyote said the car hit the bus broadside and acted as a wedge as it went under the bus — flipping the bus over on its side.

Shreve said the driver of the car received a cut.

"We had a good outcome from what could have been a major accident," Shreve said.

The new $32,500 bus carrying 20 students was hit as it was stopping to take on more students, according to Connie Bean, director of transportation for the Monahans-Wickett-Pyote Independent School District.

The bus was picking up students to transport them to various district schools. Pyote is about 45 miles west of Odessa.

The driver of the bus suffered an elbow injury, and a trainee driver suffered an arm injury, Ms. Bean said.

In Fort Worth, five Eagle Mountain-Saginaw special education students and their driver were injured Monday when a small bus went out of control along a rural paved road in far northwest Fort Worth and slid into a 3-foot ditch.

Local police investigate residential burglaries

Police Roundup

The Midland Police Department is investigating several residential burglaries, including one that netted burglars jewelry valued at $800.

The victim of the burglary, Gwen Dormady, 4315 W. Neely Ave., told police a gold rope chain with a gold nugget valued at $600 and a gold rope chain with diamond valued at $200 were stolen.

According to reports, force apparently was not used to gain entry to the residence.

A cable television converter box valued at $250 also was reported stolen to police. The victim, Tracy Beggs, told police the item was stolen from a residence at 2910 W. Michigan Ave. Reports said the item was stolen Monday, between 8 a.m. and 10:30 a.m.

In other reports, the Midland County Sheriff's office is investigating the burglary of a vacant house. According to reports, a fireplace screen valued at $300, a ceiling fan valued at $200, and a pencil drawing valued at $20 were reported stolen from the residence, located on County Road 1244 North, south of County Road 60 west.

Lawyer: Ruling will affect suits

FORT WORTH (AP) — An attorney says a federal judge's decision on whether Texas or Georgia law should govern scores of lawsuits filed in connection with a Delta Air Lines crash would greatly affect their outcome.

Windle Turley said Monday that the ruling expected from Judge David O. Belew could have a big impact on the number of people who might be entitled to recover punitive damages against the airline in connection with last year's jetliner crash at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

Texas trio brings back 'good ol' days' of TV

By ANNA HAYES

TEMPLE (AP) — Ever wonder what happened to the good old days of television, when shows didn't seem to be merely carbon copies of each other?

Well, two Temple men remember a time when television had drama and adventure, style and comedy, and a whole lot of creativity: the halcyon days of television, as they put it.

Foremost among the programs of this golden era were those of Warner Bros. Television, programs of such trend-setting series as "Maverick," "Hawaiian Eye," and "77 Sunset Strip."

Lynn Woolley and Robert Malsbary of Temple, and Robert Strange of Dallas, Woolley's cousin, have written a book, "Warner Bros. Television," that catalogs every series episode produced by the company during the 1950s and 1960s.

The Warner Bros. series are worthy of commemoration, the authors write, because they were "vintage television; they set the trend for most of the dramatic shows that are on the air today, and they are a part of history. They deserve to be remembered."

Malsbary, who teaches English for the Temple Independent School District and raises horses, said the Warner programs showed "a lot of creativity that's missing today. They had a good mix of comedy and drama."

"They just had a flair," said Woolley, co-owner in the advertising firm of Cannon, Woolley and Assoc.

Warner Bros. was the first major motion picture studio to make a commitment to television, the authors said.

The studio's programs also played a pivotal role in establishing the ABC television network, then a distant third to CBS and NBC in ratings and prestige.

"WARNER BROS. kept ABC alive," Malsbary said.

Woolley added, "It's a lot of conjecture on our part. They've (ABC) always played catch-up. They were the smallest of the three networks."

Many of today's programs are pale imitations of old Warners programs, said Malsbary. "Miami Vice," he said, is derivative of the Warner Bros. series "Hawaiian Eye."

Also, Warner programs began many innovations in programming that are commonplace in series today.

For instance, lead characters in Warner Bros. series often would have guest appearances on other programs by the studio.

"Magnum, (Tom Selleck of 'Magnum, P.I.') is going to show up on 'Murder, She Wrote,' and Warner Bros. started that (crossing over)," Malsbary said, although "they sometimes got into trouble with sponsors."

Robert Malsbary, Lynn Woolley and Robert Strange

Also, Woolley said, "It's amazing how many of the Warner Bros. stars are superstars today: James Garner, Roger Moore, Robert Conrad and Efrem Zimbalist Jr."

As an example of the creativity of Warner Bros. productions, Malsbary cited "Maverick," a western that blended comedy and drama and featured James Garner and Roger Moore among the title players.

"Yes, it was a western, but it had the comedy aspects that led to 'M*A*S*H.'"

Warner Bros. also was not afraid to try the unusual.

Roger Smith, husband of Ann-Margret and star of "77 Sunset Strip," wrote some of the scripts for that series. One of the most notable was "The Silent Caper," also known as "Much Ado About Nothing."

The episode contained not one word of dialogue.

"THEY MADE a mint on it, because there were no dubs (when airing in foreign countries)," Malsbary said.

Another interesting story the authors discovered during their research concerned "W. Hermanos," who was credited with quite a few scripts during one period of Warner Bros.' heyday.

"There was a writers' strike in the middle of Warner Bros.' glory days, and stories kept giving credit to W. Hermanos' — 'hermanos' being Spanish for 'brothers' — and you figure they would take a '77 Sunset Strip' script and rewrite it into a 'Maverick,'" Woolley said.

DEATHS

Jimmy Leo Clifton

BRYAN — Jimmy Leo Clifton, 52, of Bryan, died Thursday evening at a Waco hospital.

Services were at 2 p.m. Sunday at Memorial Funeral Chapel with the Rev. John Barnett, pastor of World of Faith Outreach in Bryan, officiating. Burial was at College Station Cemetery.

Clifton was born July 26, 1934, in Stamford. He was a former Midland resident. He was retired from Southwestern Bell Telephone in Midland and had been a resident of Bryan for 18 years. He had served in the U.S. Army.

Clifton was a member of World of Faith Outreach Church.

He was preceded in death by one son, William Blake Clifton.

Survivors include his wife, Verdie Clifton of Bryan; two sons, Bruce Whitmore of Houston and Mark Whitmore of Bryan; four daughters, Linda Clifton Hardin of Houston, Joan Barnett, Karen Brown, and Lee Ann Brown, all of Bryan; one brother, Donnie Clifton of Farmington, N.M.; one sister, Camille Burson of Farmington; and eight grandchildren.

New development threatens heavenly view

FORT DAVIS (AP) — A real estate developer who plans to build more than 100 retirement homes around the Davis Mountains says scientists at McDonald Observatory need not fear that their view of the heavens will be impeded by light from the development.

"Part of the romance of the area is looking up on that mountain and seeing the white dome," developer Howard Durham of Alpine said about the observatory atop Mount Locke.

"We have excluded exterior lighting in an effort to be as responsible as we can," Durham said. The only outdoor light planned for his homes are "candle-type" porch lights, he said.

That's music to the ears of Harlan Smith, director of McDonald Observatory, who is concerned that newly developed subdivisions, rising popularity of outdoor lighting, cities' growth, and night football games will cut into the amount of research that can be conducted at McDonald.

The major criteria in selecting the site for an observatory is fair weather, elevations that offer ideal nighttime observations, and a remote location untarnished by light from surrounding communities.

The dark corners of West Texas have provided skies fertile with research possibilities since the University of Texas observatory was established 50 years ago, 175 miles southeast of El Paso.

Of six major observatories in the United States, only McDonald Observatory has managed to escape light pollution problems, Smith said.

"People on the ground have their birthright taken away from them when they can't look up and see the stars," Smith said. "Now, there is a tendency for people to spray light around, turning night into day."

Outdoor lights at Fort Davis, 10 miles southeast of the observatory, scare away burglars and cattle rustlers. They also scare away the stars, Smith said.

Astronomers at McDonald Observatory probe the heavens from the Davis Mountains at a height of 6,800 feet, examining the sky in near darkness, scanning to the south through a 107-inch telescope and a host of other instruments.

But light pollution emanating from cities softens the darkness and makes it harder to peep at objects that may be a million times fainter than what can be detected by the naked eye.

Uncertainty makes districts delay setting tax rates

AUSTIN (AP) — A delay in certification of property tax rolls and the special session of the Texas Legislature has caused a number of Austin area school districts to postpone setting tax rates.

Jon Graswich, Austin school district budget director, said Monday the two uncertainties make it unwise to set the tax rate now.

When the budget calendar was set at the first of the year, Austin trustees were scheduled to adopt a new tax rate Sept. 22. However, Graswich said, that was before homeowner protests of appraisals delayed certification of the tax rolls and before the special session was called.

Graswich said State Education Commissioner William Kirby has advised school districts to postpone setting tax rates until the special session adjourns, because legislators could reduce the amount of state aid allocated to districts. Districts also are reluctant to set tax rates until the certified rolls show the amount of district revenues.

Although districts can amend their budgets, they cannot amend the tax rate, Graswich said. So for now, Austin's proposed tax increase "will sit on a back burner," he said.

A number of other Austin area districts also are playing the waiting game.

Bob Spoonemore, superintendent of the Pflugerville Independent School District, said Monday "I've been basically sitting on the fence" on whether to set the tax rate.

"I attended a meeting with 50 other superintendents last Thursday, and asked how many will set the rate and how many will wait and it was split, about 50-50," he said.

However, Spoonemore said he is less concerned about the special session than he is the lack of tax rolls.

"I haven't heard of anything coming out of the Legislature that would hurt Pflugerville," he said, adding that he is inclined to advise trustees to set the tax rate once the rolls are certified.

Panel votes to delay payments to retirement funds

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Realizing the state will begin writing hot checks soon, a Senate committee Monday decided to forego upcoming payments to retirement trust funds to keep money in the Treasury's checking account.

The Senate State Affairs Committee reluctantly agreed to take five months of payments to the Teacher Retirement System and Employees Retirement System — more than $358 million — and retain the money in the state's general revenue fund to pay day-to-day expenses.

Treasurer Ann Richards predicts the state will go into the red and bounce checks in mid-December unless the Legislature approves measures like borrowing from trust funds and delaying other payments.

The committee, however, made the payment deferrals to the retirement funds contingent upon the Legislature passing a tax increase, which most senators support. The House has proposed delaying 12 months of payments to the retirement systems, no taxes and deeper spending cuts, which Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, called "a House-ful of unacceptable alternatives."

"Assuming we do pass a tax bill, we still will be short on cash," said Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguin. "There's not one dollar taken from any teacher or state employee. During this shortfall period, we're deferring payments to the trust funds. We're not taking any money out."

After the five months of deferred payments, the Treasury will repay the money with a minimum 8-percent interest over the next eight months under the Senate plan. Traeger said delaying the payments would not damage the strength of the retirement trust funds.

Gary Hughes, a lobbyist for the Texas Public Employees Association, said while his group doesn't like the state deferring payments from the systems, it's better than massive layoffs or salary reductions.

Public employees can stomach five months of deferred payments, Hughes said, but they won't support the House-backed plan to defer 12 months of payments.

Jack Kelly, a Texas State Teachers Association lobbyist, said his group could not endorse any delays in payments to the trust funds. He said teachers are worried that the deferral will become permanent.

Farabee then told Kelly that the Senate has worked hard to avoid cuts in public education and teacher salaries, yet teachers have not lobbied hard enough for a tax increase.

In another move to ease the state's cash-flow problems, the full Senate approved the use of cash management notes, which the state would sell — like bonds — to make up for temporary shortfalls. The bill, sponsored by Farabee, would establish a committee made up of the governor, comptroller and treasurer — plus the speaker and lieutenant governor as ex officio members — that would have to authorize any sale of the notes.

Farabee's bill also limits the amount of cash management notes the state can use in a year and forces the state to pay all outstanding notes by the end of each fiscal year.

TV

Malsbary added, "They just rewrote a western script into a private eye script and a private eye into a western, and it really got them through what could have been a tough time.

"They could change a script on the spot. All the fun and spontaneity is out of it (today), because it's all in the network's hands. You can't change a script. Bill Cosby is kind of changing that, so maybe it's going to go back to that," Malsbary said.

In addition to listing the episodes, the book tells about the stars, scenes and studios behind the shows.

"We go into how they (stars) were discovered, funny things that happened behind the scenes, who were the prima donnas. It's a real fun book to read," Malsbary said.

Information is given on stars such as Garner, Jack Kelly, Grace Lee Whitney and Connie Stevens.

"I spent three hours with Grace Lee Whitney, who was Captain Kirk's first girlfriend," Woolley said. "This was in 1979. I interviewed her long before the first 'Star Trek' movie."

THE CHAPTER titles are intended to jog the reader's memory. "They're lines from the theme song of each series," Woolley said.

It took the trio about four years to write the book and another five years to get it into print.

Woolley and Malsbary became interested in writing the book because they "were big trivia buffs," Malsbary said.

"The way this all started," Woolley said, "Robert and I were invited to a friend's house in the (early) 1970s to watch old movies, and someone said Warner Bros. had a lot of good television shows. Somebody suggested we write a book about old television shows, and the most popular shows were the Warner Bros. shows. There were a whole lot of people that were going to work on this book, and it was dropped for a couple years, and it ended up just being the three of us."

In addition to co-writing the text, Strange was the "cameraman" for the book. "The pictures were from a collection that could not be moved. He took pictures of the pictures," Woolley said.

Prosecutor demonstrates for jury

HOUSTON (AP) — A prosecutor got down on his hands and knees to show a jury how a Rice University student suffered two fatal gunshot wound to the head.

The capital murder trial of John Kennedy Barefield, 22, began Monday with prosecutor Jim Peacock demonstrating as Harris County Medical Examiner Dr. Joseph Jachimczyk testified how Cindy Rounsaville died.

The jury was scheduled today to view a 30-minute videotaped statement by Barefield. In the tape, the man admits to kidnapping, raping and robbing the architecture student and then killing her so she could not identify him, Peacock said.

Barefield and his brother, Perry Joshua Barefield, 29, are accused of kidnapping the 25-year-old woman outside her apartment, forcing her to withdraw $70 from an automated bank teller and then taking her to a field.

The medical examiner testified the victim was shot twice in the back of her head. Grass found on her knee and mud on her body indicated she was kneeling when shot in a weedy field, Jackimczyk said.

In other testimony, Ms. Rounsaville's roommate, wept after she identified a Rice ring the victim wore. Drunette Fleishmann, 22, said she could read the ring's engraving although it had been scratched out.

Lawyers seek to block execution

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Attorneys today sought to block the execution of convicted killer Raymond Riles, scheduled to die after midnight for killing a used car dealer during a $42 robbery.

Houston attorney Will Gray on Monday filed a motion with the U.S. Supreme Court to halt the lethal injection. Another motion is pending before the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Riles, 36, is slated to die for the 1974 slaying of John Thomas Henry, of Houston.

The Wednesday execution date is the third for Riles, whose trial was marked by repeated outbursts, including one incident in which he tried to attack the judge.

Riles would be the 19th inmate to be put to death since Texas resumed executions in 1982. He would be the ninth to die this year.

Crime Stoppers seeks data on two fugitives

Crime Stoppers this week is offering a cash reward of $500 each for information that leads to the apprehension of two fugitives from Midland County.

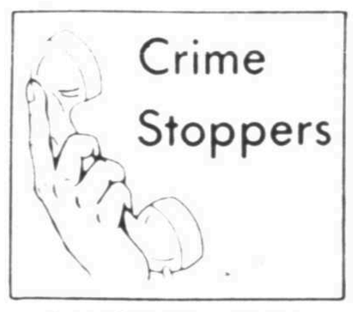

Jerry Ray Murphy, 42, is wanted for forfeiture of a bond on a charge of aggravated sexual assault of a child. Murphy is a white male, five feet six inches tall, weighing approximately 165 pounds, and has several tattoos on his body. According to investigators, Murphy did have black hair, a beard and mustache, but may now have blonde hair and be clean shaven.

Raul Holguin Armendariz, 26, is wanted by investigators for a murder that occurred in Nov. 1984. Armendariz is a Hispanic male, five feet eight inches tall, weighing approximately 130 pounds, with brown hair and eyes.

Crime Stoppers will pay $500 each this week only for information that leads to the arrest of Murphy or Armendariz. Crime Stoppers in Midland can be reached at 694-TIPS, and in Odessa at 333-TIPS. Callers do not have to reveal their identities.

Dallas City Council meetings 'fairly lively'

DALLAS (AP) — When the City Council talks, people often talk back, creating such an uproar that council members are considering rules to restore decorum to the meetings.

The fuss over rowdy sessions is in sharp contrast to the usually staid tone of municipal meetings, concedes two-term council member Craig Holcomb.

"I think we're fairly lively," he said.

When the proposals to govern unruly speakers first were discussed, apartheid protester Marvin Crenshaw was thrown out of the meeting by security guards when he refused to leave the podium.

In the past, as many as 90 people have marched down to Dallas City Council sessions to complain about issues varying from police shootings to church zoning. But lately, most of the protest has been about city contracts with businesses that have ties to the white-minority government of South Africa.

"It has gotten pretty exciting," said Beverly Mitchell, director of the Greater Dallas Community Relations Commission. Ms. Mitchell is chairwoman of a committee appointed to study ways to govern intractable speakers.

Under the proposed rules, people who speak too long would get one verbal warning and after that would be ejected and barred from speaking — but not from listening — to the council for four consecutive meetings. Being cited twice would mean being barred from speaking for up to a year.

The two-minute warning, set at the discretion of Mayor Starke Taylor, was a sore issue with speakers at a recent council meeting. A digital clock on the podium counted down the seconds, setting off a warning chime when time was up.

Debate was sparked by a computer contract. Apartheid-protesters Crenshaw and Roy Williams ignored the chiming bell and were told to sit down, although neither was threatened with arrest.

"I think that it should be time that we should just deal with this issue right now," said Crenshaw, who represents the Malcolm X Community Council. Voices were raised as he and Taylor became embroiled over the implications of a Houston divestiture ordinance.

Williams, who represents a group called Selective Enhancement of Latent Faculties, tried to smooth over the situation.

"Marvin and myself we don't want to come here and have no chaos with you," he said. "That isn't our intent."

Holcomb said one reason people are moved to speak out at council sessions is that even without the protests, council members usually are ready to debate an issue.

"To begin with, we've got a pretty diverse point of view on the council," he said. "You've got some people that are fabulously wealthy and some people who have trouble paying the rent. None of those people are particularly shy."

Holcomb, who used to speak to the council as president of a homeowner's group, said knowing that there is a free exchange of ideas on the council encourages people to make a presentation.

Albertsons has 'Singles Night'

From Staff Reports

The first "Singles Night at the Market" will be held from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. today at Albertsons, 3317 Midland Drive.

About $3,000 worth of gifts will be given away, including discounts on groceries. The event is sponsored by KGEE-100 and Albertsons.

Robbers show they're real sports

DALLAS (AP) — A 78-year-old woman was robbed of $33,000 in valuables, but not of the opportunity to watch a Dallas Cowboys game, police say.

Margie Palmer told police that two men entered her house at about 1:15 p.m. Sunday after one of them pretended to be a neighbor bringing her a potted plant.

The pair tied her to a chair with tape, stole rings from her fingers, $1,100 cash from her purse and a $20,000 set of sterling silverware, police said. The bandits did not display a weapon, Mrs. Palmer told investigators.

The robbers brought her a glass of water during the 45-minute heist and before leaving asked Mrs. Palmer if she wanted to watch television.

"Yes, turn it to the Dallas Cowboys game," she said.

The men disconnected the telephone, turned on the television and moved the chair so Mrs. Palmer could watch the NFL game between the Cowboys and the Detroit Lions. A 70-year-old sister found Mrs. Palmer at about 5 p.m. after failing to get an answer when she telephoned, police said.

Millionaire's lawyer seeks appeal

HOUSTON (AP) — An attorney for millionaire Shearn Moody Jr. is asking the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals to overturn a federal judge's decision to jail the Galveston businessman on a civil contempt charge.

An appeal has been sent to the federal court in New Orleans requesting the federal court to overturn U.S. District Judge Carl Bue's decision to jail Moody without bond, attorney Marian Rosen said Monday.

A writ of habeas corpus filed with Bue was denied Monday, she said, and that decision also is being appealed to the federal court.

Bue ordered Moody and his assistant Norman Revie jailed Friday because they refused to cooperate with a federal grand jury.

Jury foreman Charles Mott said both men read a statement invoking their Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination and other constitutional guarantees. They also would not produce subpoenaed documents or authorize the inspection of foreign bank records, he said.

Bue ordered Moody to pay $1,000 and Revie to pay $100 for each day they continue to refuse to cooperate with the grand jury. The fines will be returned if they cooperate.

Moody, grandson of the late multimillionaire W.L. Moody Jr., has high blood pressure and congestive heart failure and should not be in jail, Ms. Rosen said. She said he was in a medical facility at the Harris County Jail.

TDC near bottom of the barrel of inmates

TYLER (AP) — The Texas Department of Corrections is reaching the bottom of the barrel in efforts to come up with inmates to parole in order to keep the state prison population from overflowing, a state lawyer said.

If the state releases prisoners early to comply with a prison reform mandate, the result could be an increase in crime, said Scott McCown, an assistant attorney general.

"We are reaching further and further down in the barrel," McCown said Monday in a hearing before U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice.

The hearing entered its second day today.

Justice, who set limits on prison population in an order settling a prison reform lawsuit, is considering whether the state can ease overcrowding in the TDC through a temporary emergency relief proposal.

Last week, Gov. Mark White announced that 300 minimum-security prisoners would be moved to the Fort Wolters National Guard Armory to keep prison population within 95 percent of capacity and avoid early releases of inmates.

However, Justice issued a temporary order Friday blocking the move.

"Without the beds, a significant number of parole decisions will be made," McCown said Monday. "Of that decision number, we know there will be a 33 percent failure rate and that, we know, is crime the state could forego."

Carl Jeffries, TDC assistant director of classification, said that if a state law mandating release of prisoners if the inmate population exceeds 95 percent of capacity had been implemented Monday, 178 inmates would have been released. Counting the beds at the armory prevented the release, he said.

William Bennett Turner, an attorney representing the inmates, said the state's proposal would violate a court order issued last year concerning educational and recreational facilities that each prison unit must have.

"Using Fort Wolters will drain the staff and violate other court orders. Prisoners who are uprooted from where they are assigned will be taken out of programs, extremely important programs," he said.

Turner said the "dilapidated" barracks at Fort Wolters do not have any agricultural programs or education facilities, recreation and other programs mandated by the federal reform order.

Fort Wolters, about 50 miles west of Fort Worth, was a training site for U.S. Army helicopter crews during the war in Vietnam. It would be used until after completion of 10 trusty camps designed to hold up to 2,000 inmates at existing prison sites.

The state also proposed moving 95 inmates to the TDC's hospital in Galveston.

Ranger: It's unlikely Lucas killed woman

EL PASO (AP) — A Texas Ranger testified that it was doubtful that one-time drifter Henry Lee Lucas was in this West Texas city when a woman was slain in her Lower Valley home.

Ranger Phil Ryan said Monday it's unlikely that Lucas left the Stoneburg, Texas, area until June 4, 1983 — about 10 days after Librada Apodaca's death.

Ryan and a Montague County district attorney's investigator were interested in Lucas and kept an informal watch on him during that time because he was a prime suspect in the disappearances of two women in the North Texas county, testimony showed.

The marathon hearing before State District Judge Brunson Moore has focused on Lucas' murder confessions and the alibi

Dallas pilot program would try to mainstream special education pupils

DALLAS (AP) — A plan by school administrators for learning-handicapped students groups them by ability rather than by grade level in a pilot program that would be the only one of its kind in Texas.

Dallas Superintendent Linus Wright said the program would try to "mainstream" special education students into regular classes at their level of ability rather than by their age group.

Officials said on Monday the pilot program would eliminate special education programs such as the Chapter I remedial plan and use the money from those programs to reduce class sizes and train teachers to work better with slow learners.

School board members were expected to be briefed on the plan Thursday.

"The TEA (Texas Education Agency) asked us to explore ways that we could mainstream more kids," said Wright. "There's too much specialization in schools today. There are too many programs that just address one factor.

"We've gone from 'special education' meaning the profoundly handicapped, to a situation where more and more children are included in the category," said Ruth Turner, head of special education in the district.

"So we want to try something to demonstrate that if you put those same (financial) resources in the core program and train teachers well, you can succeed and the students can learn," she said.

The TEA has asked Dallas to pilot the program and will make up any money that is lost, Wright said. But TEA spokeswoman Terri Anderson said the state has not approved the program.

Lawmaker backs minimum sentence for prison inmates

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A state representative said Monday he will reintroduce legislation requiring Texas prison inmates to serve a minimum of one-third of their prison sentences.

Rep. Dan Morales, D-San Antonio, said the average felon can expect to be released from the Texas Department of Corrections after serving one-fifth of his sentence.

Felony offenders in Texas now can receive up to nine days of good conduct credit for each calendar day actually served, meaning some felons can be released after serving as little as 10 percent of their sentences, he said.

"These statutes make a mockery of our criminal justice system and represent a cynical and contemptuous disregard for the safety and security of the citizens of this state," Morales said at a Capitol news conference.

Prison overcrowding and projected revenue shortfalls are compounding the problem, he said.

Morales said he probably will introduce the bill when the regular legislative session convenes in January. But he said he might bring it up in the current special session if the House considers a tax bill to help solve the state's financial problems.

"I think my colleagues would vote for a tax increase if a portion of it is dedicated to prison (reforms)," said Morales, a member of the House's Ways and Means Committee, where a tax bill likely would originate.

The state Board of Pardons and Paroles approved an average 57 percent of all parole applications for the months of May, June and July, he said.

Also, Texas ranks in the bottom 10 nationally in that its prison inmates serve an average 21 percent of assessed jail time, he said, quoting U.S. Department of Justice figures. Inmates in Maine and California, he said, serve an average 61 percent and 59 percent, respectively, of their jail sentences.

"This shows Texas is not willing to respect the judgments of our courts and the judgments of our juries," Morales said.

In related action Monday, the Senate Committee on Criminal Justice approved a bill that would require state officials to give notice of a pending parole to both the county where a parolee is being released and also the county where the parolee committed the crime.

The committee also heard testimony on a bill that would affect prisoners serving consecutive sentences.

Basin Polygraph can be a valuable tool for your company

Basin Polygraph Security Service offers pre-employment, specific and periodic examinations. Walter Knight, a licensed polygraph examiner, said that such examinations can be of great benefit to companies and individuals alike.

"Verifying truthfulness is basically what the polygraph exam is there for. Anybody can pass the polygraph exam, the only requirement is that they be truthful," Knight said. This can mean peace of mind for employers that stand to loose if an employee is dishonest. In addition, polygraph examinations provide innocent individuals an opportunity to clear themselves of any suspicion or any derogatory allegations.

The particular need determines the type of polygraph examination to be administered. Pre-employment screening is designed to determine the general honesty of an individual.

"More and more litigation is showing that employers are responsible not only for their employees' behavior during employment but also for past criminal history," Knight said.

Pre-employment screening can help the employer in making the correct hiring decisions. The areas covered include: employment record, health, criminal convictions, undetected crimes, drugs and narcotics selling or usage, alcohol, employment theft, miscellaneous admissions (driving record, etc. if applicable). The content of the test can be varied according to a particular company's needs.

This same screening process gives the job candidate a fair opportunity to explain questionable situations. For example, if an individual has been fired, the former employer is unlikely to give a good recommendation regardless of what the real situation was. The screening allows the applicant to sell himself.

Periodic polygraph exams also determine general honesty but are used a little differently than the pre-employment screening. Periodic exams are appropriate when a company is considering promoting a current employee or rehiring a former employee. In addition, the examination may be administered to employees on a periodic basis covering general honesty on the job for the time period since employed or since their previous polygraph examination.

Specific polygraph examinations are becoming more and more popular as companies realize that internal theft may account for a tremendous amount of unexplained losses.

This examination is used when the employer has inventory and/or cash shortages or any other specific issue that might arise where the polygraph could be used to verify truthfulness or deception.

Some people are hesitant to utilize polygraph examinations, but Knight explained that it may be the fairest alternative. He cited a case where a manager was faced with continual unexplained inventory losses. The only alternative the manager thought he had was to fire everyone that could have been responsible for the losses. Knight suggests that polygraph examinations are a much fairer alternative, allowing the innocent person to eliminate themselves from any suspicion.

For many companies, polygraph testing has proven to be a great tool in screening job applicants and otherwise verifying honesty.

Since beginning to utilize polygraph examinations, a major motel chain has seen their unexplained losses drop to about one-eighth of what they were.

The average company, Knight said, could expect to cut their losses by 50 percent by using the valuable tool of polygraph examinations.

Knight went on to explain, "No polygraph exam is better than the examiner giving it."

Knight's credentials are quite extensive. He has a B.A. in Criminal Justice from U.T.P.B., was introduced to polygraph exams when he served as a police officer for 6½ years and went to polygraph school. Knight graduated from Baxter School of Polygraph and is a Texas Polygraph Licensed Examiner, license number 851. In addition, he is a member of the Texas Association of Polygraph Examiners and American Polygraph Association.

While he handles Basin Polygraph's new Midland office, located at 4500 W. Illinois Suite 203-5, his father, William R. Knight continues to operate the company's original office at 802 E. 7th Street in Odessa. William Knight adds even more expertise to the organization.

John's Furniture buys, sells, trades household goods

John at John's Furniture announces that he has a good selection of household goods, including brass and glass items. He also buys good, used household goods and appliances at the corner of Terrell and Florida.

Have you been wanting to buy, sell or trade furniture. John's Furniture at the corner of Terrell and Florida is the place to go.

John keeps a good stock of new and used home furnishings. He recently announced that once again he will buy good, used appliances and household items. That gives you the opportunity to sell or trade those items that you are tired of or no longer need. In addition, this means added selection and value for those looking for household goods.

As you browse through John's Furniture, you will be amazed at the wide selection. John has everything it takes to make a house a home. Whether you need something for the living room, the kitchen, master bedroom, or child's room - the best values in town are at John's Furniture.

John is offering four evaporative air conditioners (window units) at a tremendous bargain right, now. If your air conditioner has seen better days, now is the time to buy while prices are incredibly low. John has 4500 CFM and 3000 CFM units and can order downdraft units. Everyone in the house will enjoy these.

For the living room, John's Furniture has a good selection of sofas, loveseats, sleepers, rockers and recliners. Just pick the style and color you like from the wide variety of plaids, florals, solids, traditional units, contemporary looks and early American designs.

To complete your living room decor, John's Furniture has glass and brass shelves of all shapes and sizes. You'll find tables, plants stands and coat racks. If wood tones or more appealing to you, you'll be glad to know John also has bookshelves, end tables and coffee tables to fit your taste.

Are antiques your style? You'll love the antique barber chair at John's Furniture.

For the kitchen, John stocks everything from cabinets to dining room suites and extra dinette chairs. Right now John's Furniture has a good number of nice used cabinet units available. Want one for a double sink or just one large sink? Need to fit a particular space? Check these out.

John also offers some terrific values on wood/brass/glass dining set. There are fabric chairs and vinyl chairs to meet your family's needs. If all you need is an extra chair, John has that, too.

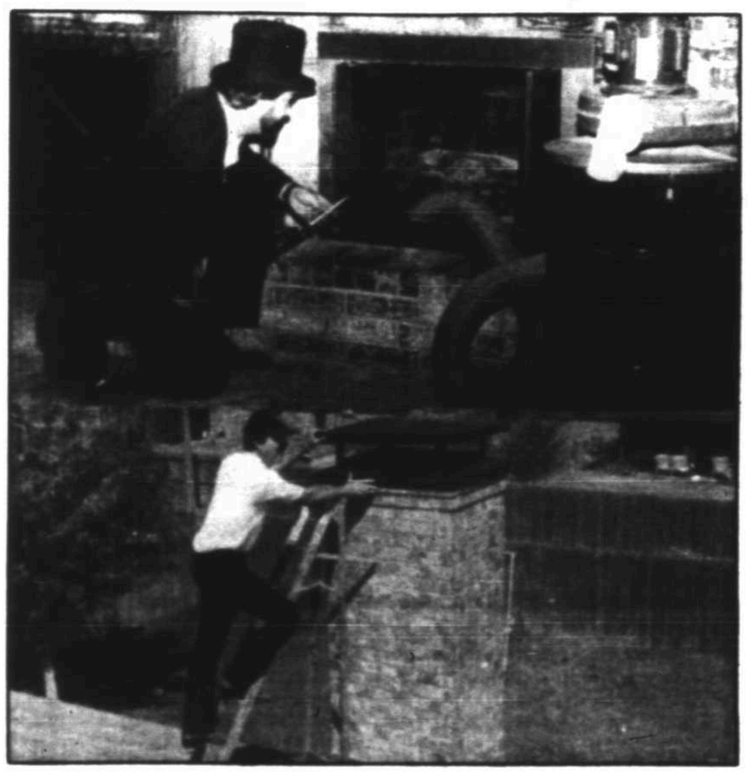

John's Furniture will also help you furnish your bedroom. There's new and used bedding, headboards, dressers and chest of drawers. John even has a used, king size water bed in stock right now. John also has some handsome day beds and practical rollaway beds.

Do you think a desk would help the kids with their studying? You'll find the selection at John's makes the grade. He even has some that look like the desks in school rooms.

Many miscellaneous items are also available at John's Furniture. You're sure to find a bargain at the corner of Terrell and Florida. The store is open Monday through Saturday, 9:30-5:30.

All Seasons Chimney Service describes what a chimney fire's like

Thousands of chimneys burn each year in the United States, many could have been avoided. ALL SEASONS CHIMNEY SERVICE professionasl describe what it's like to have a chimney fire in your home.

The experts at All Seasons Chimney Service install custom caps, measured and designed to fit each individual fireplace. The owner of All Seasons Chimney Service is shown installing a custom cap after a chimney cleaning. For appointments or free estimates, call 697-7585 between 8 a.m. and 9 p.m.

"Begin with one dirty fireplace, let's say one that hasn't been cleaned for a ocuple of years. THe soot, lining the chimney is satureated with a flammable creosote (chemicals formed during the incomplete combution of wood). The creosote is then easily ignited by an ember or a piece of newspaper sucked up into the flue."

"Once ignited, burning cresote spreads quickly, in a matter of seconds, the fire spreads up through the flue and creates a draft that only increases the fire's intensity."

ALL SEASONS' professionals then state: "At this point, your average chimney fire begins to ROAR, sounding like a rocket taking off n your living room!"

"Like a giant roman candle, burning creosote, peeled off the inside of your chimney is carried up your fireplace by a strong draft. Much of the burning creosote is thrown on the roof, threatening not only your fireplace but your entire home. However, if you stand your ground, a chimeny fire can be controlled. Call the fire department. Put out the fire in the fireplace with an extinsguisher or sand and cover the opening with a wet blanket."

ALL SEASONS CHIMENY SERVICE emphasizes, "Regular fireplace inspections and cleanings could prevent you from experiencing a chimney fire."

Those seasoned professionasl have the proper tools and expertise to do the job right. Their high volume dust-collection system insures proper filtration of any dust or soot which the brushing may release.

The owner of ALL SEASONS takes your chimney care one step further. "After we clean your chimney, we repair minor mortar damage to the firebox, then repaint the entire fire box and deodorize the flue."

With the recent rains in Midland, ALL SEASONS recommends installing a cap on those open chimneys. "Our caps are very functional in protecting your chimney. We are amazed at the number of damaged fireplaces we find due to rain entering an open chimney. Rain mixed with creosote forms an acid substance which will deteriorate the mortar. Seldom have we seen an uncapped chimeny more than five years old that hasn't suffered damage. Chimney caps also serve as good spark arrestors and keep unwanted debris from falling inside. They will also minimize downdrafts on windy days."

All Seasons Chimney Service has several types of caps to choose from. Their 'flue caps' offer complete protection to the internal parts of the fireplace.

Their 'custom caps' cover the entire chimney top, protecting both the mortar top and inside, while providing an attractive piece of fireplace hardware.

All caps are made of a strong galvanized metal and painted to provide extra protection and an attractive appearance.

All Seasons Chimney Service offers estimates on caps, along with inspecting your chimney.

"Our busiest months begin in October, so avoid the fall rush and take advantage of our September special," the owner says.

Their pre-fall package includes; chimney cleaning, repaint firebox, minor firebox repair and deodorizing for only $49.00, a 15 percent discount through September.

These experts also offer gas log replacement.

For professional service in Midland, Odessa, Stanton and Greenwood, call ALL SEASONS CHIMNEY SERVICE at 697-7585.

Office hours are 8:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

CARPET TIPS
Proper vacuuming of your carpet is important. Some vacuum cleaners do a better job on carpets than others. The cleaner should have a revolving brush and beater bar, and sufficient air flow to lift the dirt from the pile. House of Carpets does not sell vacuum cleaners, but will advise you on the best type to buy. When you need advice about carpet or carpet care, call the experts at House of Carpets!

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Wednesday, September 17, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Look forward to less pressure and more romance in the year ahead. New relationships develop slowly but will endure. When you please others, you please yourself. Changes in the economy will favor your efforts. Promotions could come sooner than you think. Pay attention to your first impressions; they will be right on target. Good luck and telephone calls go together. Reveal more of your thoughts to your co-workers.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Business partners could change their minds, leaving you in a pickle. You will regain the competitive edge. Avoid acting impulsively. Reading holds appeal.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A snag in a financial deal is removed. Share your ideas and you could save a company big dollars. Romance strikes a positive note.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Hidden hopes and desires will not be fulfilled until you share them with loved one. Attend to paper work before going to lunch. Seek your associates' views.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Widen intellectual horizons and you will find greater happiness. You can handle an authority figure if you follow your intuition. You have all the right answers.

LEO (July 23-Aug 22) Carefully evaluate the facts and figures you are given to avoid making a costly mistake. Trying to make an end run won't help your cause. Buy time for that special idea.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do not overlook the obvious. A raise is possible. Money matters must be handled personally. You lose out if you procrastinate. Speak up.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Cooperative efforts bring the best results at work. Make reservations for an end-of-the-year vacation. This is no time to play safe. Taking a calculated risk will bring victory.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) When you are upbeat and open, good things happen. That should tell you something! It is no crime to be happy. Keep investment funds where they are. Call home frequently when traveling.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Your apprehension fades as soon as you decide to think positively. A blind date is a fantastic success. Educational needs could send you to another school. Show more trust.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A real-estate venture could bring you the extra cash you seek. Show others just how much determination you have. An unusual investment in a person pays rich dividends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Your idea could seem off-the-wall to those in charge. Do not give up! Social invitations come your way. Make careful choices. Keep spending to a minimum.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Throw off any guilt you feel because of something that happened to a friend. You were not responsible. Financial help is on the way. Show your heartfelt appreciation.

Opening lead: King of ♡ An underdog team from New Jersey captained by Sandy Burns of Englewood surprised the 10th-seeded team loaded with former national champions in the first round of the Spingold Knockout Team-of-Four Championship. The underdogs won by the margin of 11 International Match Points. They gained more than that on this hand, which features an avoidance play — a subject we wrote about in our recent series on the lexicon of bridge plays.

As the cards lie, East-West can make five hearts, and in the other room, where the New Jersey players held the East-West cards, they were allowed to play in four hearts. Here the New Jersey North-South bid as shown. North's bid of four spades made five hearts a less attractive contract, and East elected to double five diamonds rather than compete.

After the lead of the king of hearts South, Michael Huppert of Summit, was faced with the prospect of losing two spade tricks and a club. Since West almost surely held the ace of spades, East had to be kept off lead to prevent a spade coming through the king.

Rather than use the club entry to dummy to take what could easily have been a losing trump finesse, declarer got off to a grand start when he ruffed the opening lead and laid down the ace of diamonds, picking up East's king. After drawing trumps, South led a low club from hand and, when the king appeared, West was allowed to hold the trick!

The contract was now secure. Since he had no way to get to his partner's hand, West was faced with a Hobson's choice: If he cashed the ace of spades, his side would get only one spade trick and the club already in the bank; if he led anything else, declarer would eventually get one spade away on the table's long club, again holding his losers to only two tricks.

Miss America awed by Big Apple; Loser: Cash least-liked contestant

Cash

NEW YORK (AP) — Miss America 1987 Kellye Cash signed autographs on Park Avenue and said she was awed by the Big Apple, which she last visited when she was in grade school.

The 21-year-old Tennessee beauty who was crowned Saturday night was about to cross the street when a security guard approached her Monday for her autograph.

"I saw her out here and got excited. I wanted to have her autograph for my future kids," said Sandy Sanchez.

Miss Cash was excited, too.

"It's awesome," she said of New York City, which she last visited as a fourth grader. "I can hardly wait to get out and go shopping."

Meanwhile, Miss Cash says she has no idea why anyone would say she was the least-liked contestant in the pageant and denies that she traded on her famous relative's name.

Miss Florida Molly Pesce, a loser in Saturday's contest, said Miss Cash was unpopular and arrogant and won in part because she is the grandniece of country singer Johnny Cash and because the judges didn't appreciate feminism.

"Honey, between you and me, that girl was the least-liked girl around...She acted like she knew she was going to win," Ms. Pesce, who failed to place among the 10 finalists, told The Orlando Sentinel in a story published Monday.

"The judges were looking for a different type of girl than I am," she added. "They wanted a sweet kind of non-aggressive Southern belle. The judges apparently wanted country. All those girls in the top 10 were alike."

Miss Cash, contacted at her New York City hotel, said Miss Florida might have been quoted out of context.

"I do not think I was the least liked," said Miss Cash. "I made a lot of friends at the pageant. I don't know why or if she said that. I do not think my relation with my uncle had anything to do with my winning. It wasn't Johnny in the swimsuit who won, it was me," Miss Cash said. "He didn't get up on the stage. I did. I really hope she didn't say it."

Lewis

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jerry Lewis used golf clubs and slapstick to raise money for muscular dystrophy research during a pro-am tournament.

"Give me room," the 60-year-old Lewis, a right-hander, joked as he took a left-handed club in hand and stepped up to a ball on a six-inch tee. "You know what it's like to play with the elderly."

Eleven-year-old Ben Teraberry of suburban Glendale drove Lewis' cart Monday part of the time.

"You've got yourself a heck of a babysitter," Lewis told the boy, who has been a poster child for the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — Cybill Shepherd won't say whether her character Maddie Hayes and Bruce Willis' David Addison will become intimate during this season of "Moonlighting." But if they do, she says, it's sure to be a bust.

"On some level, Addison is 8 years old...It's hard for a woman to be with a man that immature. It doesn't have anything to do with age. Addison doesn't really know how to love," she said in an interview in October's Glamour magazine.

The 36-year-old Ms. Shepherd is featured on the magazine's cover, making her the oldest woman to grace a cover of Glamour. She unseats model Christie Brinkley, who posed for a Glamour cover at age 32.

• • •

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dennis Hopper, star of such classics as "Rebel Without a Cause," "Easy Rider" and "Apocalypse Now," says he's free of drugs and alcohol and busier than ever.

The 51-year-old actor, currently appearing in "Texas Chainsaw Massacre Part 2," has another film due out this week, "Blue Velvet," in which he plays a deranged drug dealer. Coming in the next few months are "Hoosiers" with Gene Hackman, "The Pick-up Artist" with Molly Ringwald, "River's Edge," "Black Widow" and the British-made "The American Way."

"I'm busier than I've ever been," Hopper said last week. "I've had, at the most, one week off between films for about a year and a half now."

• • •

Osmond

BOSTON (AP) — Singer Marie Osmond was forced to cancel a three-day, nine-show appearance at the "Big E" Eastern Exposition because of damaged vocal chords, a fair spokeswoman says.

The shows in West Springfield were to begin tonight, but Miss Osmond hurt her vocal chords while performing Sept. 6 in Salt Lake City when she was forced to sing louder than normal because of an equipment problem, Betsi Taylor, vice president of the exposition, said Monday.

"She is in Utah recovering under doctor's care," Miss Taylor said.

The Big E contracted with John Schneider, star of the television show "Dukes of Hazzard," to fill the scheduled Osmond performances, which run through Thursday, she said.

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — Lucille Ball says she has enough Egyptian henna to color her hair for the rest of her life.

The 75-year-old star, returning to television with a new situation comedy, "Life With Lucy," says in October's issue of Ladies' Home Journal that she noticed some time ago that her once tremendous supply of the dye had dwindled to only two cans.

Later, she told a reporter she wished for enough Egyptian henna to last the rest of her life.

"He put that in his column, and a man from the Middle East wrote to say he happened to be coming to the United States and he would be pleased to hand-deliver to me 25 cases of real Egyptian henna. And he did just that. I wrote to thank him, and he sent me 25 more cases. Now I won't have to worry about outliving my henna."

• • •

RAWLINS, Wyo. (AP) — U.S. Interior Secretary Donald Hodel, dressed in cowboy garb, said he was impressed at the roundup of about 35 wild horses.

"I've never actually seen the physical process of gathering the horses, and it's very impressive to me," Hodel said Monday.

Doug Powell, range conservationist at the Bureau of Land Management's Rawlins District Office, said officials in a helicopter and wranglers on horseback would capture more animals this week.

Sportswear provides lush look of luxury

By WENDI WINTERS
Copley News Service

American women have enjoyed wearing sportswear since that category of dressing first was introduced in the 1930s as a uniquely American blend of comfort, convenience and style.

Sportswear appeals to our stong sense of indpendence. We want to pick and choose what we are going to wear and how we are going to wear it — whether our mode of dressing is quixotically eccentric or blends in with the crowd.

This fall, American designers have created some of the finest sportswear to ever stride down a runway — or grace the racks in a department store. What separates Yankee separates from the remainder of the fashion universe is that the Americans concentrated on designing attractive, wearable, ungimmicky clothes that Americans will want to buy — and the rest of the world will envy.

As it acquires new importance in a woman's wardrobe this fall, sportswear also takes on an unmistakable look of luxury — the real thing or good look-alike. Many top designers lavished their collections with designs made of cashmere, alpaca, leather and suede, often trimmed with mink, fisher, fox or beaver.

Instead of introducing a drastic new silhouette, which would have immediately outdated most of America's closets, designers wisely chose to improve on the current vogue for clothes that emphasize broad shoulders and narrow, fitted waistlines. Tops are either bigger and fuller over lean narrow skirts or fitted over hip-skimming skirts that flare over the lower leg. Shoulders, while still wide, are softer and rounder. Hemlines of all lengths will be seen this fall, but the newest and best-proportioned length falls below the calf, usually on a flared skirt. Ralph Lauren's collection is chock-full of these skirts in wool tweeds, cashmere, suede and paisley-printed panne velvet. Peplums in all lengths and shapes were also used to best advantage — to emphasize the waist and detour attention from the hips, an illusory trick that works.

IF THIS SEASON has to have a "fad" item, it is the classic turtleneck sweater. Tirelessly profligate, the turtleneck appeared in nearly every major runway show, in nearly every color, most often in a black cashmere knit.

Black remains the dominant color this fall, with gray, in every tonality from pale platinum to charcoal, emerging as the new neutral. Pretty pastels and bold bright colors also make impressive statements but the color that made a surprisingly stong comeback is brown. Brown cast off its earth-mother image and appears in several collections looking rich and sophisticated.

The ubiquitous top-notch accessories in many collections are the wide, shamelessly expensive crocodile belt paired with dark Ray-Ban sunglasses, leather gloves in a gauntlet of colors, hooded or wrapped heads and extravagantly draped cashmere flings and stoles. For the first time in many years, models also carried handbags or luggage, most notably in the collection of newcomer Zack Carr. The important new shoe is a leather flat, preferably crocodile.

Willie Smith — A get-serious, very wearable collection from fashion's former clown prince. Hemlines on slim skirts tended to be slightly above the knee. Paired with tailored jackets, either hip length or short and boxy. Among the crowd-pleasers are wine boucle suit separates worn with charmeuse turtlenecks and zip-front rib knit tops and skirts.

DONNA KARAN — Karan continues to develop the bodysuit as the foundation for all of her designs. This season's hot, haute bodysuit is made of buttery butterscotch suede. Jackets, sarong skirts or pants, and jumpsuits are then draped and tied by the wearer over the bodysuit. Dressing with the flick of a wrist. It sounds more difficult than it is. Karan's designs incorporate more fullness than in previous seasons, but the overall effect is of soft, fluid layers of luxury. Even beaded and spangled evening fabrics adapt to Karan's design philosophy.

Carolyn Roehm — A name to watch in the seasons to come. This fall is Roehm's first serious attempt to make wearable sportswear separates, albeit tongue in chic. Roehm's forte is the cashmere knits often trimmed with Persian lamb or blond mink embroidered with gold bullion. Great swagger coats lined with more mink envelop sleek, slim beige sweater sets worn with charcoal trousers.

Perry Ellis — This, his last collection, is also his finest ever. America has lost one of its most innovative fashion creators. Everything — proportion, fabric, silhouette and color — comes together perfectly in this collection. Among the highlights, his introduction of sweet baby pastels in conjunction with black, usually as pastel blazers or swagger coats over all-black turtlenecks and trousers and the extravagantly wearable black alligator blazer. An Ellis quirk: his crocodile belts are worn with the buckle over the left hip, slightly off-center.

Geoffrey Beene — Beene is one of the few, true American couturiers. Big coats and exquisitely tailored fencing jackets of acid orange or incandescent emerald green mohair were paired with shapely trousers. A seamed and shaped jacket of tangerine and black stenciled ponyskin has the luxe sheen of satin.

Roaches to kick gators off polo shirts

By JAMES GOMEZ

MARBLEHEAD, Mass. (UPI) — A Massachusetts entrepreneur has just the thing for students returning to the hustle of college life this fall: an infestation of cute, cuddly cockroaches.

Cockroaches? Cute and cuddly?

The concept of roaches as status symbols could make a bundle for its creator, Susan Wonderly, and provide a comfortable way for enterprising college students to supplement tuition costs.

Wonderly, founder of Roaches Ware Inc., said she envisions hordes of students nationwide sporting the image of Aloischus the Adorable Roach above breast pockets once reserved for prestigious reptiles.

Her campaign to put the cartoon image of Aloischus (pronounced al-o-wish-us) on polo shirts, T-shirts, boxer shorts, book covers, mugs, posters, linens and decals grew from the financial frustration of being a single parent with teenagers headed to college.

Because of her sympathy for struggling students, Wonderly is specifically targeting collegians to sell the products on commission — with an added incentive of a week in Hawaii for the top salesperson.

The Roach Ware line will intitially be marketed on campuses by students.

The students will buy franchises and Wonderly insisted her representatives could earn between $100 and $500 a week in their efforts to give the roach a good name.

More than a few students have had negative experiences with the ubiquitous, enduring cockroach, said Wonderly, remembering her own college days. That is precisely the hook she feels will make the idea a success.

"You begin with a blatant negative, turn it around, add a little humor and humanness," she said.

Local newspaper advertisements and word of mouth has already started Wonderly with a crew of 56 roachlings, trained and ready to take their kits to school and pitch the products.

The students represent campuses from the University of New Hampshire to the University of Hawaii, and Wonderly said she hopes that by Nov. 1, she will have recruited more than 300 student representatives nationwide.

The business venture is neither a new idea for Wonderly nor a "shot in the dark," she said.

A market survey conducted five years ago at Harvard and Tufts Universities and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology convinced her that students would readily accept the concept of retro-yupple Aloischus.

In fact, she says, the survey showed a minimal 3.3 percent negative response.

Aloischus was destined to wait while the idea incubated in Wonderly's mind. She said that for a long time she feared approaching investors to get the project off the shelf.

"How do you tell your lawyer and banker you want to make a living off of roaches?" she asked.

Organization, mounds of paperwork and determination made it possible for Wonderly to launch the business in time for this year's fall semester, but not without the help of two Marblehead businessmen who had enough faith in Wonderly's brainchild to provide financing.

"I think the concept is dynamite," says David Buell, who along with Jeffrey Foster has jumped onto the roach wagon. "Aloischus is unique. In spite of his despicable relatives, this provocative little guy forces me to like him."

Wonderly and her associates said they feel that with low overhead and the student marketing approach, they will be able to market Aloischus in nationwide retail stores within a few years.

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

Every once in a while California and New York get real "weird" and try to influence the way America eats.

The rest of the 48 states start hearing words like "goat's cheese," "tofu" and "sushi." They read a lot about designer yogurt from New York and see pictures of California sandwiches that look like salad bowls and contain things no one can pronounce. Los Angeles says it's eating tanned and healthy. New York City contends ethnic is better for you. It's a food war.

Finally, a publication comes out and says Los Angeles and New York City are both going back to hardcore, Middle America, meat-and-potatoes food, so the rest of the country can make the swing.

I've got a flash for you. We never left it. The other 48 states wouldn't care if California ate its palm trees or New York tossed its graffiti in a wok with snows peas, they're going to eat like they've always eaten ... fat!

You wanta tell Texas to skim that grease off the top of the chili, or Louisiana to leave the sugar off the beignet doughnuts? Or Georgia to take the butter off that fried chicken? Get outta here!

During the last several years, I've traveled a lot for "Good Morning America" and have broken bread with that large segment of population that never makes the food pages. I remember a farm in Illinois. When we got there at 5 in the morning, the farmer's wife was serving rolls, juice and coffee. That was to get the men on their feet. Two hours later when the milking was done, she served the "real" breakfast: bacon, ham, sausage, eggs, waffles. I ate all of it and then in a flash of guilt asked, "Do you have skim milk for the coffee?" She looked at me like I was bilingual. On a dairy farm!

The two coasts can bad-mouth hot dogs, but the Midwest won't start a baseball game without them.

A few years ago, New York discovered pasta and sent out carbohydrate waves throughout the country. California acknowledged it was great, but took away the cream sauce and covered it with fresh vegetables. Middle America? They stuck with macaroni and spaghetti and used the rest of the pasta family for what it was intended ... making jewelry at Girl Scout craft meetings.

Nutritionists are probably spinning after reading all of this. They are offended by words like meat loaf, gravy, chili dogs and milk shakes. Maybe they're right. Maybe the Californians and New Yorkers will live longer ... or maybe it will only seem longer.

DEAR ABBY

Woman unsure of AIDs test

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 27-year-old woman engaged to marry a fine man. I just received a telephone call from the man I went with three years ago. We were lovers for nearly two years. He told me that he was advised by his doctor to inform me that he is bisexual, and had several male lovers during our relationship. He said he had been tested for AIDS and the results were positive! He told me not to panic — that it didn't mean he has AIDS; it means he has been exposed to the virus, and I should be tested.

Abby, I am terrified! I'm too embarrassed to ask my doctor for such a test. There are absolutely no secrets in that office, and I don't want anyone to know I requested a blood test for AIDS.

Must I tell my fiance? We have been intimate, and I suppose he should be tested, too. Please, please help me. I can't eat. I can't sleep. I am ... TERRIFIED IN HOUSTON

DEAR TERRIFIED: Your fiance must be told, and you both should be tested. Please don't panic. It's true: A positive result does not mean you have AIDS; it means you have been exposed to the virus and you could transmit it through unsafe sex practices.

If you can't bring yourself to go to your physician, call your nearest gay and lesbian community services center and ask where you can get a blood test with the utmost of confidentiality. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: After dating through four years of college, Betty and I are getting married in December. Both our families are thrilled, but there's a potential problem. Betty smokes at least a pack of cigarettes a day. She enjoys it and doesn't plan to quit anytime soon. But since my parents are very opposed to smoking, she's never smoked in their presence, so they have no idea that Betty smokes.

Now that we're engaged, however, I'm worried that they will eventually find out. We will be living near them and they will be visiting sooner or later and are bound to find out. Betty has even suggested that she may as well smoke in front of them now since they'll learn the truth soon anyway.

She has a point, but I know it would break my parents' hearts to see her light a cigarette. On the other hand, I won't be able to tell my wife she can't smoke in her own home. Help! — CAUGHT IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR CAUGHT: For you and Betty to hide from your parents the fact that she smokes is childish. As for smoking in your own home, smokers with good manners refrain from smoking in the presence of those who find it offensive, regardless of where they are.

DEAR ABBY: Mary (not her real name) and I have been living together for 10 years. I'm on friendly terms with her parents. Last month they invited us to their 40th wedding anniversary dinner to be held at a fancy place. They said all the men would have to wear suits and ties. Well, I don't even own a suit because I wear only jeans, so I went out and bought a suit. It set me back $128, which is a lot of money for me, considering I'll probably never wear the suit again.

Yesterday they told Mary they changed their plans, and instead of throwing the party, they decided to take a trip. I am steamed and think they should reimburse me for the suit. I would like your opinion. I hope you decide in my favor because I would like to show it to them. — STEAMED

DEAR STEAMED: Sorry, I don't agree with you. You never know what the future holds, so if another fancy occasion comes up, you'll be well suited.

DEAR ABBY: Recently my mother was sitting in my kitchen when my telephone rang. She listened casually while I carried on a brief conversation with a friend. When I hung up, she said, "Do you want me to help you to be a more refined lady?" So I said, "Sure." Then she said, "You say OK too much. Your father would never allow his secretary to use OK. It's not ladylike."

I was dumbfounded and think my mother was wrong to criticize me. I am 45 and Mother is 73. What is your verdict, please? — OKEYDOKE

DEAR OKEYDOKE: If you need a verdict, I would pronounce your mother guilty of perpetuating a 45-year-old habit — correcting you for your own good. But since it was done with your consent, you should waive the right to complain.

Gov. Mark White checks his watch before answering a question about the state's financial problems at a brief ceremony where he signed a school discipline bill into law at the Capitol in Austin Monday.

Bill provides 'another tool' against drugs in classrooms

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislation giving teachers and school administrators added power in dealing with troublesome students will help carry the war on drugs into classrooms, Gov. Mark White says.

"Today, our teachers are getting another tool to help them combat the problem of drug abuse among teen-agers and maintain discipline in our schools," White said as he signed the legislation Monday.

White said the bill would help keep classrooms free of drugs, alcohol, violence and the disruptions caused by misbehaving students.

"No teacher can teach, no student can learn, in an environment where one problem student can disrupt an entire class or where drugs and alcohol are present," he said.

The bill was passed during the first special session.

One of its authors, Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center, said the legislation was needed to restore disciplinary powers taken from teachers and administrators in the 1984 school reform bill.

White said the new law will give administrators and teachers clear authority to suspend or expel students who create disturbances, bring drugs or other illegal substances to school, or who present a threat to others.

Officials said that under current law, educators must place unruly students in "alternative education programs" in school before suspending or expelling them. In order to suspend a student, it must be shown that the child was "incorrigible."

Under the new law, schools could suspend students without trying the alternative first. The State Board of Education would set the procedural rules.

The bill also gives teachers increased power to remove students who repeatedly interfere.

White said the legislation will continue progress made in 1984 to help disruptive students, but that it will make certain classroom discipline is maintained.

"Teachers need the ability to control their own classrooms, and they need the support of principals, parents and the entire education system in handling disruptive behavior and problem students," White said.

In a ceremony signing the legislation, the governor emphasized its tie to anti-drug efforts.

"Teachers have long been on the front lines in the war against drugs and substance abuse, working to educate our children and help them grow to become responsible, talented and productive adults," White said.

"We want to ensure that we continue to lead the anti-drug effort with the most effective tools to combat disciplinary problems — and substance abuse — in our schools," he said.

Two men charged in couple's death

MANSFIELD (AP) — Two men have been charged with capital murder in the slayings of an engaged couple killed in a $15 robbery, police said.

Janet Louise Hancock, 21, and her fiance, Army Lt. Daniel Brennon Meyer Jr., 22, were shot several times after Miss Hancock apparently recognized one of the assailants, investigators said. Miss Hancock was a student at the University of Texas at Arlington. Meyer expected to graduate in December from Texas A&M.

The shootings took place about 1:30 a.m. Sunday in a field where a housing subdivision is under construction.

Lawrence Scott Rouse, 18, of Pantego, a Fort Worth suburb, surrendered to police about eight hours after the killings, according to Martin Ivy, interim police chief in Mansfield. Earl Behringer, 23, of Mansfield was arrested later.

Two counts of capital murder were filed Monday afternoon against both Rouse and Behringer, who were transferred to the Tarrant County Jail in Fort Worth. Bond was set at $200,000 each.

Mansfield is about 15 miles southeast of Fort Worth.

Ivy said Behringer was detained by police at an Arlington restaurant, where he planned to meet some friends before going to a gun show. Behringer gave police permission to search his home, where he was arrested at about 4 p.m. Sunday, Ivy said.

Behringer's friends said they were shocked to hear of the arrest. Sunday morning, Behringer led the congregation of the Mansfield Church of Christ in prayer.

"You would think you would have sensed an uneasiness, a nervousness about him, but I did not sense it in the least," said Bob Pipes, a minister at the church.

"I cannot believe that he has done this," Pipes said. "I'm not criticizing the police; I know they have to go by the evidence they have. But I'll have to have a whole lot of proof and an admission from him before I'll believe it."

Neighbor Greg Hudgens said he found it hard to believe that Behringer had been arrested.

"It's not like him at all," Hudgens said. "If he came to our door, my wife wouldn't hesitate to let him in."

Friends of Miss Hancock and Meyer said the pair had been dating since June 1985, became engaged at Christmas and planned to marry before the end of this year.

Texas graduates leave state for jobs

AUSTIN (AP) — Many Texas college graduates are seeking jobs elsewhere because of the state's economic turndown, officials say.

"We're getting comments like 'help' on the survey forms," said RoJean Starke, director of research and post-secondary planning for the Texas State College and University System Coordinating Board.

The coordinating board conducts a survey of 17,000 graduates from selected Texas colleges and universities every two years. About one-third of the responses from 1986 have been reviewed so far, she said.

Judging from those responses, "it seems as if there's more students leaving to go out of state. And not only are they going out of state, but also out of the country," Ms. Starke said.

Salaries are lower, too, she said.

Officials at the University of Texas placement center blamed the Texas economic troubles for higher unemployment rates among UT graduates.

Sharon Lutz, assistant director of business placement, said lower than normal employment rates among recent UT business graduates is "a direct reflection of the Texas economy."

Although employment rates for business graduates varied according to their degrees, Ms. Lutz said only about 60 percent of those students who were graduated last May with bachelor's of business administration degrees reported that they had accepted job offers.

"In past years, BBAs have probably placed closer to 72 to 73 percent," she said.

About 80 percent of the business graduates typically find jobs within the state, either with a Texas company or with a national firm having a corporate branch in Texas, Ms. Lutz said. This year, the number of both state and national corporations making recruiting trips to the campus has fallen.

Ms. Lutz also said the most noticeable decrease has been in Texas commercial banking.

STATE IN BRIEF

Chemical spill closes channel

HOUSTON (AP) — Hazardous chemicals spilled into the water after a ship slammed into a dock, prompting the Houston Ship Channel near the San Jacinto Battleground to be closed temporarily, officials say.

Coast Guard Commander Alan Dujenski said the tanker Vardass, out of Hong Kong, severed 12 pipelines when it struck the Pak Tank dock in Deer Park about 3:40 a.m. Monday.

The dock was destroyed and about 1,600 gallons of chemicals spilled into the channel, he said.

No injuries were reported and no one was evacuated, Dujenski said, but two ships left a nearby dock as a precaution because the chemicals produce irritating fumes and some are flammable.

The channel was reopened about 9:55 a.m. Monday, but reduced traffic speeds remained in effect that night because crews were working on damaged pipelines, Coast Guard Lt. Christopher Roberts said.

A mile-long section between the the Lynchburg Ferry and the Jacinto Port Ship had been closed.

Ex-controller pleads guilty

HOUSTON (AP) — The former controller of the Houston-Galveston Area Council pleaded guilty to conspiracy in connection with the embezzlement of more than $1.1 million.

William B. Prince Jr. pleaded guilty to conspiracy and failing to file his 1984 income tax return. He faces up to 16 years in prison and a fine of $30,000 when he is sentenced on the federal charges Oct. 27 by U.S. District Judge Cari Bue.

Prince served as the council's top financial officer from November, 1976, to late last year.

Charges still are pending against Jules Narcisse, the organization's former director of internal operations. Narcisse, charged with stealing $10,178 from the agency, faces up to 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine if convicted.

The charges against the two were filed last month following an eight-month investigation. Council officials said $1.66 million had been embezzled systematically from the agency.

Prosecutors said checks were written for goods and services the agency never received.

Strake: White playing politics

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White is playing politics with a special election to replace a Central Texas lawmaker who has resigned, according to Texas Republican Chairman George Strake.

Rep. Bill Messer, D-Belton, has quit his House seat and now is working as a lobbyist. However, because of constitutional provisions, he technically remains a member of the House until his successor is chosen.

Messer was recorded as absent on all 73 roll call votes taken during the first special session, which ended Sept. 4.

White plans to call the special election for Nov. 4 to coincide with the special election, according to Dwayne Holman, his campaign director.

Strake said it should be sooner.
