Price of crude oil falls every day this week

■ WTI closes at $59.20, a drop of 3.19 percent

By Trevor Hawes
thawes@mrt.com

It wasn't a good week for the price of oil.

The Energy Information Administration said Wednesday that crude oil production hit a record high 10.25 million barrels per day (b/d); however, the price of West Texas Intermediate futures contracts for March delivery fell every day this week.

On Friday, WTI closed at $59.20 per barrel, down $1.95 (3.19 percent), marking the first time this year the price had settled below $60. WTI had an intraday low of $58.07.

For the week, WTI fell by $6.25, nearly 10 percent.

For the year, WTI is down by $1.17 (1.94 percent). The average price after 28 trading days is $63.49 per barrel. The year high is $66.14.

The EIA revised its Short-Term Energy Outlook this week. The agency said crude production will average 10.6 million b/d in 2018, which would surpass the previous high average of 9.6 million b/d set in 1970.

The EIA estimates daily crude production will hit the 11 million b/d mark in

A SUMPTUOUS EVENING

James Durbin/Reporter-Telegram

Midlanders — including Bob Bintliff, left, and Victoria Printz — showed up in style for the 13th annual Chocolate Decadence Friday at the Horseshoe Pavilion. This year's theme was "Phantom of the Opera," and guests were encouraged to wear costumes from 19th century France. The event included chocolate desserts, a raffle for a trip to New York City and a live auction. Auction prizes were a trip to this year's Indianapolis 500, a week-long stay at a Florida vacation home, a catered cocktail party, diamond earrings and a homemade quilt. The event benefits Aphasia Center of West Texas, which serves people who have lost their ability to communicate.

Painter: Skeletal remains case is homicide

■ Preliminary autopsy report indicates cause of death was 'gunshot to skull area'

From staff reports

Preliminary autopsy reports on the skeletal remains found in two pits in Midland County indicate cause of death was "gunshot to the skull area," Sheriff Gary Painter said Friday morning. "Manner of death on both skeletal remains is declared as homicide."

The report did not mention identification of the remains or results of DNA testing, Painter said in a press release. The forensic pathologist at the Tarrant County Examiner's Officer has not completed scientific examinations.

The discovery of the first set of remains — beginning with a skeletal foot — was made in a pit in the area of the 5000 block of West County Road 116 on Jan. 28, according to a previous Reporter-Telegram article. The second set of remains — beginning with a skeletal skull — was found Feb. 3 in a second pit in the same location, according to a previous article.

Painter believes the remains are connected to the case of two missing teens from October 2015, according to the article.

Investigators were led to the WCR 116 area after receiving information in reference to a possible homicide. A K9 team began searching an 18-acre area, and the dogs made hits on two locations in a pit that was mostly filled in. The county and city provided equipment to move debris, and investigators also were using shovels and rakes.

Rig count in Permian jumps 10

■ Reeves adds 7 rigs for total of 73; Midland is unchanged at 47

By Trevor Hawes
thawes@mrt.com

The Permian Basin added 10 rigs this week for a total 0f 437, with its most-active county seeing a surge.

Reeves County, in the heart of the Delaware Basin, added seven rigs for a total of 73, 25 more than the next-highest county, according to Baker Hughes. Lea County, New Mexico, recorded 48 rigs, and Midland County tallied 47, unchanged from a week ago.

Other counties with double-digit rig counts were Eddy, New Mexico (38); Loving (30); Martin (28); Howard (27); Glasscock (19); Reagan (17); Ward (16); Culberson (14); Winkler (14); Pecos (13); and Upton (13).

Railroad Commission District 8 recorded 295 rigs, up seven. For other areas with activity in the Permian, District 7B held at one rig, District 7C rose by one to 34, District 8A was unchanged at 21 and New Mexico was up by two to 86.

The Permian had 301 rigs a year ago.

Texas & New Mexico

Texas' count rose by 14 to 479. The last time Texas had 500 rigs or more was the week ending March 13, 2015, when 501 rigs were recorded.

The Eagle Ford in South Texas added three rigs for a total of 69. The Barnett in North Texas was unchanged at two.

Fifteen of the Haynesville's 50 rigs were in East Texas. Seven of the Granite Wash's 11 rigs were in the Panhandle.

Texas had one offshore rig.

New Mexico's rig count rose three to 88. Its pair of non-Permian rigs were in San Juan County in the northwestern part of the state.

At this time last year, there were 362 rigs in Texas and 50 in New Mexico.

United States

A surge of new oil activity helped send the U.S. rig count higher. The number of rigs searching for oil rose by 26 to 791,

Mexico nabs Zetas cartel leader Jose Maria Guizar Valencia

By Mark Stevenson
Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — Authorities said Friday they have arrested dual U.S.-Mexican citizen Jose Maria Guizar Valencia, the alleged leader of the Zetas drug cartel.

Mexican National Security Commissioner Renato Sales identified the suspect only as "Jose Maria," but a federal official who was not authorized to be quoted by name confirmed Guizar Valencia's last name.

Guizar Valencia is known by his Zetas code name, "Z 43."

The United States had offered a $5 million reward for his arrest.

Sales said Guizar Valencia was arrested Thursday in Mexico City's trendy Roma neighborhood, which is known for its restaurants and cafes.

The commissioner said the leader was one of the main generators of violence and had directed Zetas' drug trafficking and other activities in southern Mexico.

Under a 'Wanted' page online, the U.S. Bureau of International Narcotics and Law Enforcement Affairs said Guizar Valencia is "responsible for the importation of thousands of kilograms of cocaine and methamphetamine to the United States on a yearly basis" and faces separate U.S. drug trafficking indictments in Texas and Virginia.

It also said he had taken over territory in neighboring Guatemala.

"Los Zetas, under the command of Guizar Valencia, have murdered an untold number of Guatemalan civilians during the systematic overtake of the Guatemalan border region with Mexico during recent years," the bureau said.

It said Guizar Valencia was born in Tulare, California.

Mystery book takes place in Odessa

By Paul Wedding
Odessa American

Murder, Mexican gangs and Boston mobsters will all be featured in an upcoming book by Shelton Williams that takes place in Odessa, which Williams said is as much of a character in the book as any other.

The fictional book, "Covey Jencks," follows the eponymous main character on his return after a stint at a Washington D.C. law firm. Jencks is coming back to Odessa to solve the 1979 murder of a black employee at his family's business. The book will also feature scenes in North Texas and Mexico as well.

Williams himself is an Odessa native, now living in Washington D.C. and serving as president of the Osgood Center for International Studies, but he still sees himself as an Odessan.

"I just see it as a fascinating place," Williams said about Odessa. "And the characters are so large that you have to consider writing about Odessa even if you don't know anything about it."

Growing up there in the '50s and early '60s, Williams said there were tons of people moving into Odessa, which brought along a lot of characters to the town.

"Everything was sort of magnified, good and bad, and that carried with me," he said. "I see West Texans themselves as storytellers, and I consider myself a West Texan, and so I identify."

Williams speculated that the reason so many West Texans are storytellers is because it's generally a substantial tradition in the Texas oil industry.

"People who gravitated to West Texas primarily to exploit the bounty of oil were fast talkers," he said. "They lost a job in Missouri and find a job in Odessa, and maybe didn't tell the same story about themselves in the same places."

Since he had moved to Odessa from California when he was in the third grade, he had always known Odessans to be talkers. Since he went by Shelly himself, what he said was a girl's name, he said he developed a sense of humor quickly to get out of teasing and bullying.

If the sales of "Covey Jencks" do well, Williams said he would like to turn the book into a series, telling more stories in the Permian Basin.

"The thing I like about 'Covey' is you can go into it with 'what does this guy have to say about us now,'" he said. "I still have family that works in the oil field there, so I know that there's some interesting people and funny people and messed up people, and I think they make for good storytelling."

Williams previously wrote a true crime book also taking place in Odessa, "Washed in the Blood," which details the 1961 murder of his cousin, Betty Williams. That story was later retold on Investigation Discovery's series "A Crime to Remember," which will be replayed on Investigation Discovery at 8 p.m. tonight.

"Covey Jencks" will be published today, and is available for pre-order on Amazon.

Oil

From 1A

November, a year earlier than previous projections. The EIA forecasts average production to be 11.2 million b/d day in 2019.

The agency also says West Texas Intermediate crude oil prices will be on average $4 per barrel lower than North Sea Brent through 2019. WTI will average $58.28 per barrel this year and $57.51 in 2019.

Weekly crude imports fell by 60,000 b/d to 6.605 million b/d, the EIA reported Wednesday. The reporting week was for Feb. 2. Exports dropped by 478,000 b/d to 1.287 million b/d. Commercial crude inventories rose by 1.9 million barrels to 420.3 million barrels. The Strategic Petroleum Reserve saw 500,000 more barrels for a total of 665.1 million barrels.

Total motor gasoline stocks rose by 3.4 million barrels to 245.5 million barrels. Kerosene-type jet fuel inventories rose by 1 million barrels to 42.6 million barrels. There were 141.8 million barrels of distillates in inventory, up by 3.9 million barrels.

Plains Marketing posted prices also were lower this week. The Reporter-Telegram tracks WTI "all other areas" and West Texas sour. Both crude grades fell by $2 Friday, with WTI posted priced at $55.75 per barrel and sour fetching $53.60. They also were down $6.25 for the week.

The spread between WTI posted and sour has been $2.15 for the past seven trading days. The spread between WTI futures and WTI posted was $3.45 on Friday.

Sour's average price is $57.69 per barrel; WTI posted's average slipped below $60 to $59.97. Sour is down $1.40 (2.55 percent) for the year; WTI posted is down $1.25 (2.19 percent).

In other futures trading Friday, April contracts were down by $1.95 to $58.99 per barrel, May dropped $1.95 to $58.67 and June fell by $1.95 to $58.32.

Rig count

From 1A

and natural gas rigs were up by three to 184. In total, the U.S. had 975 rigs, up 29.

The offshore rig count was unchanged at 16; all were in the Gulf of Mexico. Inland waters increased by one to two.

By drilling trajectory, there were 832 horizontal rigs, up 24; 70 vertical rigs, up four; and 73 directional rigs, up one.

The U.S. had 741 rigs a year ago.

Most active

Basins with the highest rig counts were the Permian, the Eagle Ford, the Cana Woodford (66), the Marcellus (55), the Haynesville and the Williston (50).

States with the most activity were Texas, Oklahoma (118), New Mexico, Louisiana (61) and North Dakota (49).

Canada & North America

Canada's rig count fell by 17 this week to 325. Oil rigs dropped by 13 to 221; natural gas rigs were down by four to 104. Canada had 352 rigs a year ago.

JC "Jess" Steward

On February 7, 2018, JC "Jess" Steward joined his parents and eight siblings, along with his special cousin, Charles Steward, in Heaven.

Memorial service will be held at 11:00 a.m., Saturday, February 10, 2018 at Water Valley Baptist Church. Arrangements are by Shaffer Funeral Home/Grape Creek.

He is survived by daughters, Belinda (Scott) Weddell, Stephanie Steward, and Vickie Steward; grandchildren, Neil Weddell, Jeni (David) Cason, J.C. Steward, Destinee Linker; and great-granddaughter, Haylee Cason.

Jess was born September 6, 1931 in Udiana, near Mt. Vernon, Texas and travelled to West Texas with family following oil field and cotton work. As a teen, he worked for the railroad, then started the many years of truck driving all over the United States. Throughout the years, he learned several trades through his many business adventures. For 11 years, he worked as the maintenance and was the helping hands to the many residents of Midland Hillcrest Retirement Home. At the age of 80, he came to live at the ranch in Water Valley, where for six years he shared his life with Scott, Belinda, Destinee, and extended family and friends. He enjoyed helping with the livestock and his many special cats.

The family would like to thank the staff at Kindred Hospice for their compassionate care, with special thanks to Nurse Theresa and Lillia, along with caregivers, John, LaVonda, Lisa, and Madelyn.

Kay Johns

Kay Johns passed away on January 31, 2018, at the age of 74 in Austin, TX. She spent her formative years in Midland and graduated from Midland High School in 1962. She always sought out interesting places and interesting people. After high school she lived in Dallas; New York; Lexington, KY; Guantanamo (as Navy wife); Corpus Christi; Houston; Camp Wood; Santa Fe, NM; and ultimately, Austin.

She made friends easily. She had a loving son, and he with her many caring friends were of great comfort to her during her final months. A few days before she died her friends gathered with her for a going away party, and each had an opportunity to say "Goodbye." She insisted that there be no funeral service.

She always thought her life was influenced by moon cycles. So it might be worth noting that she died during the Super Blue Moon and near the time of the Lunar Eclipse.

She was survived by a son, Shawn Smith, and a brother, George Johns.

Russell August Blumentritt

Russell August Blumentritt, 90, of Midland, passed away peacefully on February 3rd, 2018 surrounded by his loving family.

Born March 31, 1927 in Runnels County, Texas, he attended Wall School, and graduated from San Angelo High School, with proud moments scoring touchdowns for the Bobcat football team. He earned an Associate degree from San Angelo College, and both a Bachelor's degree in Geology and Master's degree in Geophysics from Texas Tech.

He began his petroleum industry experience well sitting in West Texas with Geolog, followed by employment at Core Laboratories in Dallas. Russell extended his career into geophysics working with Geophysical Services, Inc. (GSI), the original parent company of Texas Instruments. This job gave him the opportunity to work in many places, including the United States and overseas countries such as Iran, Saudi Arabia and England, where he met Marlene, his wife of 44 years. Shortly after the birth of their first child, they returned to the United States in April 1975 to settle in Midland, Texas. After 30 years of service with GSI, Russell transferred to Gulf Oil/Chevron Corporation. Following retirement from Chevron in 1992, Russell worked in petroleum consulting for several years, he then went back to his farm roots and worked in the federal program for cotton boll weevil eradication in Stanton and Garden City until the age of 82 years.

Russell had a long-standing love of cars and motorcycles, and became a well-known collector of the most interesting and low mileage examples he could find. He won many awards with his favorite, a vintage candy apple red 1966 Ford Mustang. Russell was a member of many affiliations, including the Corvette and Mustang Club, Gem and Mineral Association, Commemorative Air Force, and Sibley Nature Center. Other interests he enjoyed that kept him active throughout life include gardening, photography, rock collecting, and loyally supporting the Texas Tech Red Raiders.

Russell was preceded in death by his parents Sam A. and Edith P. Blumentritt of San Angelo. He is survived by his loving wife Marlene, daughters Patricia and husband Michael Tanner of Georgetown, Tania and husband Darrell Tompkins of Austin, brother Charles Blumentritt of Dallas, and valued cousins and friends.

He will be remembered as having a s trong and independent work ethic, selflessly caring for others, offering a square deal, and keeping his cards close to his vest.

The family wishes to thank the doctors and nursing staff at Medical Center Hospital and Home Hospice in Odessa, where he received extraordinary care during his critical last days.

Funeral Mass will be held on Saturday, February 10, 2018 at 12:00p.m. at St. Ann's Catholic Church, 1906 W Texas Ave, Midland Texas, 79701. Inurnment will follow in St. Ann's columbarium.

Boy, 12, fatally shot in family car at drive-thru

Investigators say a 12-year-old West Texas boy has died after being accidentally shot while in his family's car in the drive-thru lane of a restaurant.

Lubbock police spokeswoman Tiffany Pelt said Friday that authorities are trying to determine who fired the shot that killed Damion Cortez. A police statement says the Lubbock boy was dead at the scene Thursday night outside a McDonald's restaurant.

Police received a 911 call about a shooting inside a vehicle carrying a couple and their four children. Officers were advised that a teenage brother of the victim had a gun and at some point the weapon was pulled out and fired.

Investigators are trying to determine where the teen, whose age wasn't immediately released, got the gun and who pulled the trigger.

Teacher gets almost 16 years in prison for enticing student

A high school teacher in a small West Texas town has been sentenced to almost 16 years in federal prison after pleading guilty to enticing a 16-year-old male student.

A federal judge in Lubbock sentenced Shonna Lynn Calaway on Friday to 15 years and eight months in prison.

The 48-year-old high school teacher at Motley County School in Matador admitted that she used sexually explicit photos on a Snapchat application to entice the 16-year-old sophomore into a sexual episode in December 2016.

Motley County School had an early elementary-to-high school enrollment of 159 in October. 2016. Matador, a town of about 520 residents, is about 70 miles northeast of Lubbock.

Last of 5 charged over 2014 slaying also gets prison

A fifth person has been sentenced to prison over the 2014 death of a man whose beaten and burned corpse was found in a vacant downtown El Paso building.

The El Paso Times reports Marcus Wayne Adkins was sentenced Wednesday to five years in prison after pleading guilty to evidence tampering. Adkins was the final defendant sentenced in connection with the death of 21-year-old Gerardo Luna Jr.

Prosecutors have said they believe Luna was targeted because he entered the building, where homeless people were known to stay, from a street during the daytime.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

Note: Bigar's Stars is based on the degree of your sun at birth. The sign name is simply a label astrologers put on a set of degrees for convenience. For best results, readers should refer to the dates following each sign.

A baby born today has a Sun in Aquarius and a Moon in Sagittarius if born before 8:21 p.m. Afterward, the Moon will be in Capricorn.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Feb. 10, 2018: This year you will open up to many new experiences, some of which will be quite conventional. As a result, you enjoy your life even more. You flex your muscles, spiritually and intellectually, as you break into new areas of study. If you are single, you will have the opportunity to add a sweetie to your life. Understand that you will have to make time for this person. If you are attached, you enjoy your life together more and more. Be careful not to make your significant other jealous. CAPRICORN can be difficult to relate to at times.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Be willing to stand up for what is important to you. A parent or an older friend could play a major role in your decisions. You tend to give this person the time and respect that he or she deserves. Sharing news with diverse friends is important to you. Tonight: A must appearance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ You might have difficulty in a meeting or when trying to get in touch with a friend at a distance. You could be quite tired and drained until this person's name comes up. Why not make plans to meet halfway soon? Tonight: Look to making plans, then discuss various possibilities.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Reach out to a loved one who might be so enmeshed in a project or in his or her work that it will take extra effort on his or her part to meet up with you. You have a lot going on. Pick and choose the various plans and invitations that seem the most appealing. Tonight: Be a duo.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Defer to others, and don't worry so much about what could happen. Your way of communicating could be so unusual that some people might not know how to react. Encourage more open exchanges with friends about an important relationship. Tonight: Be a better listener.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ Understand what is happening within a particular situation. Do you really want to handle it immediately? You might need to sit on a volatile matter for a while. Stay centered and rethink your logic. You might want to ask some questions that seem to be helpful. Tonight: Play it easy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ Remain more upbeat. Sometimes you cause your own problems without realizing it. If someone decides to point out an issue, express a willingness to listen. You might have difficulty listening to this person well enough to see the relevance. Tonight: Air your thoughts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ You already know that you are going to push your case to the point that you could annoy others. Perhaps by buying some treats before an important meeting, you'll be able to warm the vibes between you and others. Stay open to a positive change. Tonight: Go with the moment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Be willing to distance yourself from an intense conversation. You could feel a bit uneasy about proceeding as you have been. You might want to veer in a different direction, but perhaps you don't know which way to go just yet. Your efforts make a big difference. Tonight: Say little for now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★★ You will be on top of what you need to do; however, you might have a desire to do some frivolous shopping or participate in some other fun pastime. You have worked so hard that being able to take a break means a lot. Don't expect others to agree with you. Tonight: Fun and games.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Don't push yourself too hard. Remember that it's the weekend and you need a break. You might get involved in a discussion that feels a bit too heavy for you. Decide to distance yourself from what you feel is unworkable or unacceptable. Tonight: Reach out to a vulnerable friend.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Defer to others right now, and simply go with the flow. Many of your friends and loved ones will be delighted to hang out with you. This type of company pleases you to no end. You often can be found out and about within your community. Tonight: The only answer is "yes."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You have more options available than you might realize. Consider heading in a new direction. How you see a situation could change in the next few days. Walk through a new door, and don't worry about closing it — you are just sampling this option. Tonight: Till the wee hours.

Authorities investigate the scene where multiple law enforcement officers have been shot and a suspect is dead south of Atlanta, Friday, in Locust Grove, Ga.

Officer slain, deputies wounded, suspect dead near Atlanta

By Jeff Martin
Associated Press

LOCUST GROVE, Ga. — A police officer whose wife is expecting the couple's second baby was killed Friday and two deputies were seriously wounded in a shooting that also left a suspect dead south of Atlanta, authorities said.

Henry County Sheriff Keith McBrayer said gunfire broke out as the officers were serving an arrest warrant around 11 a.m. at a home in Locust Grove, about 40 miles southeast of Atlanta.

Locust Grove Mayor Robert Price identified the slain officer as 26-year-old Chase Maddox, who had been with the department since he was 22.

"His wife is expecting their second child any day now, I'm told. We just need a lot of prayers for he and his wife and the baby that's coming into this world without a daddy because of somebody ..." the mayor said, choking up.

"We got to pray for the two county officers that's wounded. One's not doing so hot and the other is better."

McBrayer said one deputy was in serious condition and undergoing surgery, and had been hit below the bullet-proof vest. The other was in fair condition, and was hit in the vest. Their names were not immediately released.

He said shots were fired inside the house as the deputies were trying to take a male suspect into custody on a warrant from the municipal court in Locust Grove. McBrayer wouldn't say who fired first or give other details about how it happened.

The sheriff said that "after about 10 minutes of talking with him realized they were going to be making an arrest, and they were going to have issues placing him in custody." At that point they called Locust Grove for backup from an officer.

He said they had no reason to believe when they arrived that the suspect would be violent.

The Georgia Bureau of Investigation has been called in to investigate the shootings. GBI spokeswoman Nelly Miles said the suspect's relatives were being notified before his name is released.

Police blocked off multiple entrances of a subdivision not far from an outlet mall, and turned away people who don't live in the neighborhood.

Yellow police tape cordoned off a section of one home's front yard. Nearby Locust Grove Elementary School was put on lockdown.

Juankeena Rodgers, 36, lives in the subdivision but police weren't allowing her to go back home.

"It's quiet. I've never had any issues and I pray I don't have any, said Rodgers, who has lived there nearly two years. "It's scary because you never know who is in your neighborhood."

Trump says it's a 'tough time' for ex-aide accused of abuse

By Jonathan Lemire, Catherine Lucey and Jill Colvin
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump said Friday that a former aide accused of domestic abuse by two ex-wives had done a "very good job" at the White House, adding, "We certainly wish him well." Trump emphasized that former staff secretary Rob Porter maintains his innocence, and the president made no mention of the women who have reported physical and emotional abuse.

It was Trump's first comment on the allegations against Porter, who has been one of his most trusted staffers until this week. Porter resigned after his ex-wives' allegations became public.

Trump offered sympathy for Porter, saying, "It's a, obviously, tough time for him. He did a very good job when he was in the White House. And we hope he has a wonderful career."

Trump said he was sad to learn of the allegations, but added: "As you probably know, he says he's innocent. And I think you have to remember that."

The comments came the day after White House chief of staff John Kelly tried to assure staff that the Trump administrations takes domestic violence "very seriously" amid mounting questions about how Porter managed to maintain a position of high influence despite the allegations.

Porter, who was arguably White House chief of staff John Kelly's closest aide, cleaned out his desk on Thursday. The fallout from his resignation reverberated amid concerns about his access to classified information and about how long senior staffers had known about the allegations.

Porter has denied the allegations, calling them "outrageous" and part of "a coordinated smear campaign."

Though the accusations against Porter became public this week, Kelly learned last fall that something was amiss with the staff secretary's attempts to get a security clearance, according to an administration official who was not authorized to publicly discuss internal matters and spoke on condition of anonymity.

The chief of staff had sought information about the status of security clearance applications for top aides, and it was then he learned there were allegations against Porter from his ex-wives, said the official. Porter and Kelly later discussed the allegations. The official said White House counsel Don McGahn was apprised of at least some of the accusations at least four times, including in January 2017, the official said.

That includes in November, when one of Porter's ex-girlfriends called McGahn to describe allegations of domestic abuse against him.

The person stressed that the FBI had at no point revoked Porter's security clearance, which they could have done.

The White House official said that staffers felt misled about how Porter downplayed the allegations, both to Kelly and McGahn. Kelly himself faced criticism for initially defending his aide — only to later shift course after the publication of photos showing one of Porter's ex-wives with a black eye.

"It's fair to say we all could have done better over the last few hours or last few days in dealing with this situation," said White House deputy press secretary Raj Shah, who faced a barrage of questions about Kelly during a press briefing Thursday.

Kelly sent a memo to staff late Thursday in which he wrote that "while we are all processing the shocking and troubling allegations made against a former White House staffer, I want you to know that we all take matters of domestic violence very seriously. Domestic violence is abhorrent and has no place in our society."

When the allegations first emerged against Porter a number of senior aides rallied around him, and the White House acknowledged that personal relationships may have played a role in their response. Communications Director Hope Hicks, who was dating the staff secretary, helped draft the original statements defending him, according to three current and former White House officials.

Shah said Thursday that Hicks later "recused" herself from some aspects of the matter, but it was unclear from what. Kelly, meanwhile, was Porter's loudest defender, including in the first hours after the graphic photos of alleged abuse emerged.

Only later did the chief of staff, who had argued for Porter to keep his post, release a second statement in which he said he supported Porter's resignation.

Shah said that Trump was not aware until Tuesday of the accusations against Porter, who was a frequent presence in the Oval Office and helped craft last week's State of the Union address. By the time the president was fully briefed of the claims against Porter on Wednesday, the once-rising White House star had already resigned, according to the official.

A number of lawmakers criticized Kelly, and a leading women's group called for the chief of staff to resign.

The president, for his part, has not signaled to allies that he is on the verge of making a change. But his frustration with Kelly has grown in recent weeks.

Trump has long resisted Kelly's attempt to control him. In recent weeks, the president has complained about the chief of staff to his circle of informal advisers, according to two people who speak to the president regularly but are not authorized to publicly discuss private conversations. One of the people said Trump was angry that Kelly did not bring the Porter allegations to him sooner.

Kelly also drew Trump's ire last month when he seemed to suggest that the president was flip-flopping on his call for a border wall. Trump complained to aides that the chief of staff had portrayed him as a child who had to be managed, a contention that particularly irked the president in the wake of the way he was portrayed in the recent Michael Wolff book, "Fire and Fury."

Though Trump frequently vents about senior aides, he is often loath to fire staffers. A dismissal of Kelly would surely revive the narrative of a White House in crisis as it faces the ongoing Russia probe and the midterm elections.

But Kelly's handling of the Porter affair rattled some aides, who questioned his full-throated defense of an accused batterer, according to more than a half-dozen White House officials and outside advisers who were not authorized to speak publicly about private conversations.

Democratic swiftly called for an investigation into Porter's presence at the White House.

"If John Kelly is covering this up, he needs to be held accountable," Sen. Jon Tester, D-Mont., told CNN's "New Day," adding, "He better have a really good reason. Otherwise, he's gone, too."

Toni Van Pelt, head of the National Organization for Women, was more direct. She revisited the accusations that Trump himself has sexually harassed women, allegations he has denied.

World travelers mooch rides to the airport from friends

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: We have some friends who take a couple of expensive extended vacations each year. They go to Europe and take cruises. For the last four years, they have never once booked ground transportation from home to the airport and back. Instead, they rely on friends to take them to the airport.

They have plenty of money. They are just too cheap to pay for a shuttle, cab or limo. They never offer to put gas in the car or pay for the parking. It is a 45-minute drive in heavy traffic.

They are getting ready for another trip. What should I say when asked? Please give me your thoughts on their behavior. — UNHAPPY ABOUT THIS IN GEORGIA

DEAR UNHAPPY: These friends appear to be centered on themselves. Rather than fume about it, the next time you are asked to drive them to the airport, tell them you have a conflict and are unavailable.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 47-year-old professional man who loves children, but never had any of my own. Consequently, I have never had to contend with the considerable cost of raising children. Many of my friends are parents, and I feel the urge to buy their kids nice presents I know they want, or that I never received when I was a child, e.g., a wonderful bike or train set.

What's the protocol for giving an expensive gift (e.g., a saxophone that can cost $1,000) to non-related children without creating awkwardness or obligation? Naturally, I would always check with the parents first. (All of us are white-collar executives and employed, but no one is "filthy rich.") — GIFT GIVER IN OAKLAND, CALIF.

DEAR GIFT GIVER: The protocol is the one you are already observing, which is to have a conversation with the parents before buying expensive gifts for their children. And when you do, make clear that it is not your wish to cause awkwardness or a sense of obligation.

DEAR ABBY: I am increasingly reluctant to attend social and church events because several members of our group photograph everything and post the pictures online. My husband and I are private people, and we are uncomfortable with this. Why do people think they have the right to do this, and what can we do to stop it? — DISCOURAGED IN THE EAST

DEAR DISCOURAGED: People post photos of themselves, their activities, their meals, etc. for a variety of reasons. Because you and your husband prefer not to be "memorialized" this way, tell the person taking the photos that you prefer to remain out of camera range — and request that in the future, any shot you might "accidentally" be in not be posted. If the person demands to know why, say, "Because I don't want anyone from the IRS to find us."

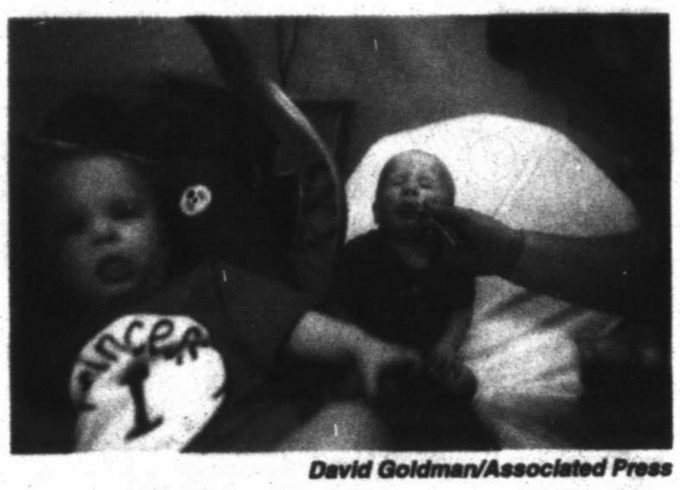
Flu season still getting worse; now as bad as 2009 swine flu

By Mike Stobbe
Associated Press



David Goldman/Associated Press

Kilian Daugherty, 1, gets his nose cavity swabbed Friday for the flu by emergency department technician Jake Weatherford as his sister Madison, left, waits to be examined as well for flu symptoms at Upson Regional Medical Center in Thomaston, Ga.

NEW YORK — The flu has further tightened its grip on the U.S. This season is now as bad as the swine flu epidemic nine years ago.

A government report out Friday shows 1 of every 13 visits to the doctor last week was for fever, cough and other symptoms of the flu. That ties the highest level seen in the U.S. during swine flu in 2009.

And it surpasses every winter flu season since 2003, when the government changed the way it measures flu.

"I wish that there were better news this week, but almost everything we're looking at is bad news," said Dr. Anne Schuchat, acting director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Flu season usually takes off in late December and peaks around February. This season started early and was widespread in many states by December. Early last month, it hit what seemed like peak levels — but then continued to surge.

The season has been driven by a nasty type of flu that tends to put more people in the hospital and cause more deaths than other more common flu bugs. Still, its long-lasting intensity has surprised experts, who are still sorting out why it's been so bad. One possibility is that the vaccine is doing an unusually poor job; U.S. data on effectiveness is expected next week.

Some doctors say this is the worst flu season they've seen in decades. Some patients are saying that, too.

Veda Albertson, a 70-year-old retiree in Tampa, was sick for three weeks with high fever and fluid in her lungs. She said she hadn't been this sick from the flu since the 1960s, when she was a young mother who couldn't get out of bed to go to the crib of her crying baby.

"It was like 'Wham!' It was bad. It was awful," she said of the illness that hit her on Christmas Day.

Heather Jossi, a 40-year-old Denver police officer and avid runner, said her illness last month was the worst flu she's experienced.

"I don't remember aches this bad. Not for four days," said Jossi. "It took me out."

Albertson said she got a flu shot, Jossi did not.

Last week, 43 states had high patient traffic for the flu, up from 42, the CDC reported. Flu remained widespread in every state except Hawaii and Oregon and hospitalizations continued to climb.

"It's beginning to feel like a marathon," said Dr. Anthony Marchetti, emergency department medical director at Upson Regional Medical Center, a 115-bed hospital in rural Georgia. A quarter of the hospital's emergency department visits are patients with flu, and the hospital has added nursing staff and placed beds in halls to accommodate the increase, he said.

"It just means we have to keep on keeping on. We're getting used to it," Marchetti said.

So far, it has not been a remarkably bad year for flu deaths. Flu and flu-related pneumonia deaths have lagged a little behind some recent bad seasons. The CDC counts flu deaths in children and there have been 63 so far. They have gone as high as about 170 in a season. Overall, there are estimated to be as many as 56,000 deaths linked to the flu during a bad year.

But reports of deaths — some in otherwise healthy children and young adults — have caused growing fear and concern, health officials acknowledge.

On Friday, Delisah Revell brought her 10-month-old daughter to the Upson Regional emergency room. "I heard how bad it is and I didn't want to take any chances," said Revell, who drove 30 minutes to get to the hospital in Thomaston.

The CDC said the amount of suspected flu cases at doctor's offices and hospital emergency rooms last week matched that seen in 2009, when a new swine flu pandemic swept the world. Swine flu, also called pandemic H1N1, was a new strain that hadn't been seen before. It first hit that spring, at the tail end of the winter season, but doctor visits hit their height in late October during a second wave.

Budget finally OK, Congress heads into big immigration fight

By Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — They can all claim wins in the big budget agreement: President Donald Trump, congressional Republicans and Democrats, too. Next up, however, is a Senate immigration battle that may well lead nowhere, complicated by divisions within parties rubbed raw by the spending pact plus election-year pressures that always make compromise challenging.

In Washington's latest embarrassing display of governance by brinkmanship, a bipartisan accord bolstering military and domestic programs by $400 billion and deepening federal deficits became law Friday — but not before the government technically shut down.

In what amounts to an achievement these days, lawmakers limited the overnight closure to less than nine hours — the time between when agencies technically ran out of money at midnight and Trump's morning signing of the bill. It was the government's second shutdown in three weeks, following the January's three-day closure when Senate Democrats demanding legislation shielding young "Dreamer" immigrants from deportation blocked a bill keeping agencies open.

This time, Senate passage was delayed until after midnight when Sen. Rand Paul, R-Ky., stalled the vote to protest Congress' willingness to drive up deficits. Paul said he hoped his stand would teach conservatives "to not accept just anything because it comes from a GOP Congress," but House Speaker Paul Ryan, R-Wis., called the brief shutdown "entirely needless."

The budget measure provides Pentagon spending increases sought by Trump and the GOP, more money for domestic agencies demanded by Democrats and $89 billion that both wanted for disaster relief. The two-year pact, which also continues the government's authority to borrow money, postpones any possible federal default or likely shutdowns until after the November elections.

But the 652-page budget bill says nothing about protecting the Dreamer immigrants, and that largely explains why a quarter of Senate Democrats and a third of House Democrats voted no. Passage left Democrats with little leverage to force congressional action on preventing deportation of hundreds of thousands of the young immigrants who arrived in the U.S. as children and remain here without permanent legal protection.

"Democrats have fought hard but, in the end, many opted to say yes to other priorities and leave Dreamers behind," said Frank Sharry, executive director of the pro-immigration America's Voice. He called that decision plus opposition by many Republicans "inhumane and indecent."

Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., set next Monday as the start of a free-wheeling immigration battle, a debate he promised when Democrats agreed to vote to reopen the government last month. Ryan hasn't scheduled House consideration, infuriating Democrats, but he said Friday, "We will focus on bringing that debate to this floor and finding a solution."

Democrats want to extend the Obama-era Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals program, or DACA, which lets the immigrants temporarily live and work in the U.S. but that Trump would end March 5. The Democrats also want to make the immigrants eligible for citizenship or permanent residence.

In exchange, Trump wants $25 billion to build his beloved, proposed U.S.-Mexico border wall and other barriers. He also wants reductions in legal immigration, including limiting the relatives whom legal residents can sponsor and eliminating a lottery that offers visas to residents of diverse countries.

There's no obvious compromise that could win the 60 votes from Republicans and Democrats needed to prevail in the Senate. The most promising outcome may be a narrow bill extending DACA protections for a year or so and providing some border security money for Trump. Whatever happens, this week's budget battle dealt a clear immigration defeat to Democrats, who'd initially vowed to block spending bills until there was a deal to help the Dreamers. The setback left party members divided.

No. 2 Senate Democratic leader Richard Durbin of Illinois, a leader in the immigration fight, said the budget pact "opens the door" for Senate votes on protecting the young immigrants. But Rep. Luis Gutierrez, D-Ill., said anyone supporting the spending measure was "colluding with this president and this administration to deport Dreamers."

Such disputes won't help the party energize the Hispanic and liberal voters it will need as it tries capturing House and perhaps Senate control in November.

Immigration divides Republicans, too. Sen. Jeff Flake of Arizona is preparing compromises to offer during his chamber's upcoming debate and says his party will suffer in November if the issue isn't addressed. No. 3 House GOP leader Steve Scalise of Louisiana says Republicans still disagree about "how to handle this number of people that Barack Obama encouraged to come in here illegally."

With the immigration fight looming, Congress voted overnight to finance the government through March 23, giving budget-writers time to craft detailed legislation funding agencies through the rest of this fiscal year. The House voted 240-186 to approve the bill just before dawn Eastern time, hours after the Senate approved the measure 71-28, with some of Congress' most conservative and liberal lawmakers voting no. Trump signed it as business hours began, and he couldn't resist a dig.

"This Bill is a BIG VICTORY for our Military, but much waste in order to get Dem votes," he tweeted. "Fortunately, DACA not included in this Bill, negotiations to start now!"

Why prospect of higher budget gaps is spooking stock market

By Josh Boak and Paul Wiseman
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The stock market may be firing off warning shots to the Trump administration and Congress about their plans to blow up the size of the federal deficit.

The anxiety that has gripped the market this week appeared to escalate Thursday just as President Donald Trump and lawmakers were setting the government up for annual budget deficits that would routinely exceed $1 trillion. The higher that deficits rise, the more likely it is that interest rates will surge, too, and undercut corporate profits, stock prices, consumer spending and the overall economy.

A two-year budget accord that was forged early Friday ended a brief overnight government shutdown. But the additional spending the accord contains, coming soon after Trump signed into law sweeping tax cuts, are raising alarms about high deficits and potentially higher borrowing rates. Stocks turned choppy afterward amid fierce trading.

On Friday, the rating agency Moody's concluded in a report that the federal government's "balance sheet is set to deteriorate," in large part because the tax cuts will amplify the debt pressures caused by other expenses and potentially higher interest costs.

Administration officials have downplayed the risk of simultaneously slashing taxes and boosting spending, arguing that the result will be faster growth that will then shrink the debt. But the higher deficits would come just as the Federal Reserve is on course to continue — and perhaps accelerate — the pace of its short-term rate hikes. The Fed's rate increases will likely lead, in time, to higher borrowing rates for consumers and businesses and likely slow economic growth.

One tenet of modern economics has been that the government should run higher deficits during a recession to help the economy heal but then reduce those deficits when the economy is relatively healthy, as it is now.

The market's plunge over the past week was initially ignited by fears of higher inflation and interest rates. But investors have also had to consider a new threat: A two-year government funding deal that would add about $300 billion to budget deficits from higher spending. The Fed might have to respond by raising rates more aggressively to counter the stimulative effect of the spending increases.

Increasing budget deficits deliver a "double whammy" to investors, said Mark Zandi, chief economist at Moody's Analytics. "Treasury is going to be issuing a lot more bonds to finance deficit-financed tax cuts and spending increases ... and the Federal Reserve will have to be more aggressive in raising interest rates" to offset the stimulus.

When a government borrows more, its increased demand for debt typically leads to higher interest rates charged on that debt.

Trading opened Friday morning with the Dow Jones Industrial Average having shed 10 percent from its January high — the definition of a market correction.

Before this week, the stock market's steady climb deep into record territory had led Trump to boast repeatedly of its performance under his watch. Now, its sudden and steep reversal has become a source of concern.

The yield on the benchmark 10-year Treasury note, in the meantime, has been steadily rising, reaching 2.83 percent after having begun the year at barely 2.4 percent. The increased yield has reflected in large part an outlook for higher inflation. Now that the projected budget deficit for 2019 would equal possibly 5 percent of the economy — a record percentage when unemployment is so low — bond yields could rise further and herald higher rates on mortgages and other long-term loans.

John Cochrane, an economist at the conservative Hoover Institution, said there are two likely scenarios right now about what's happening in the markets. The first is that investors are adapting to higher rates that merely reflect strong economic growth. The second is that the markets see an already troubling national debt worsening right before mounting costs for Social Security and Medicare will require even more borrowing.

Cochrane said his guess is that the stock market losses so far reflect the anticipation of higher growth and interest rates. But it's also clear that investors are struggling to digest an enormous amount of information and stocks are swinging violently as a result.

"What you're seeing with all this volatility is the process of digestion," he said. "It's like what happens after the night you go out for too many tacos."

Raj Shah, a White House spokesman, told reporters that the president's forthcoming budget plan would lead to stronger economic growth, which, he said, would then reduce the deficits. No outside economist has forecast that the $1.5 trillion worth of tax cuts Trump signed into law can generate enough growth to pay for themselves.

The Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget, a nonprofit that seeks to limit the national debt, estimates that the government funding deal would cause the 2019 deficit to balloon to $1.2 trillion, with trillion dollar deficits to continue "indefinitely."

That borrowing could temporarily boost growth in the next few years because there would be more money flowing through the economy. But growth would likely suffer later once taxpayers had to pay down the debt.

"The budget deficits we are seeing will accelerate economic growth in the short-run — through 2018 and maybe into 2019," said Sung Won Sohn, economist at California State University, Channel Islands. "After that, we could actually see slower rates of growth."

GOP the party of deficit hawks? That was then.

By Kevin Freking and Matthew Daly
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Republicans rode the tea party wave to power eight years ago on a message of fiscal responsibility and attacking budget deficits, and kept at it during President Barack Obama's two terms. That was then.

Republican leaders early Friday rounded up support for a bipartisan budget bill putting the government on track for annual deficits topping $1 trillion, a gap last seen toward the end of Obama's first term. President Donald Trump tweeted that he had signed the bill, ending a brief federal government shutdown that occurred as lawmakers took up the measure overnight.

The projection for massive budget deficits has split Republicans. Dedicated fiscal conservatives criticized the plan while others accepted it as a necessary compromise to shore up military spending and keep the government running after a short-lived shutdown last month.

"I can't in all good honesty, in all good faith just look the other way because my party is now complicit in the deficits," said Sen. Rand Paul, the Kentucky Republican whose protest stalled the bill in the Senate Thursday night, causing the government to shut down again.

Paul was joined in opposition by others in his party, including Sens. Mike Lee of Utah and Bob Corker of Tennessee.

Corker said the budget agreement was "doubling down on the irresponsible mentality in Congress of spend now, pay later. To say I am discouraged by the outcome of these negotiations would be an understatement."

Corker voted for the recent Republican tax cut after raising similar concerns in the weeks leading up to the vote.

Republicans are pinning their long-term hopes on their $1.5 trillion tax cut, which they say eventually will stimulate enough economic growth to help reduce the deficit. GOP leaders were using that argument and a desire to boost military spending to sell the budget plan. Congress needs to approve a spending bill by midnight Thursday to avoid a partial government shutdown.

Many in the GOP ranks were willing to sign on despite the soaring deficit.

"It all comes down to one thing — economic growth. That's where you take care of the debt and deficit," said Rep. Dennis Ross, R-Fla.

Republicans supporting the package include defense hawks who say military readiness has been harmed by years of automatic budget cuts known as sequestration. The budget bill boosts defense spending by $165 billion over two years.

"If you vote no, you're voting against fixing the military," said Rep. Mac Thornberry, R-Texas, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee.

Conservative angst about the growing deficit was valid, he said, "but you are not going to fix them by cutting our military or by failing to provide the equipment that our troops need."

Other lawmakers cited the need to keep the government running and boost domestic spending on infrastructure and programs such as community health centers. The budget plan also was drawing support from Republicans representing states that would benefit from $89 billion in aid to speed recovery from last year's hurricanes and wildfires.

Still, some Republican lawmakers and conservative activists worried that the deal reinforces the notion that congressional Republicans are not delivering on their promises to slash spending and reduce the size of government.

Jason Pye, vice president of legislative affairs at Freedom Works, a conservative group that helped launch the tea party movement, said Republicans are retreating on their deficit-reduction message. The House Freedom Caucus, a group of conservatives that grew out of the tea party, denounced the deal for growing the size of government.

"The only folks who should be voting for this are the debt junkies, who love unsustainable spending bills," said Rep. Mo Brooks, R-Ala., a freedom caucus member.

A leader of the GOP's fiscal conservatives, Rep. Mark Walker of North Carolina, said he understands the frustration.

"You can make a case that it seems to be a little hypocritical because we ranted and raged during the eight years of Obama about the national debt," said Walker, who said he will vote against the budget bill. "If it's truly our core principle, it should be equal whoever is in the White House."

United States' Nathan Chen performs Friday in the men's single short program team event at the 2018 Winter Olympics in Gangneung, South Korea.

Tirico's debut, stumbling ice skaters in Olympics opening

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Highlights from television coverage of the Pyeongchang Olympics:

SPRING TRAINING

NBC's first night, before Friday's opening ceremony, had the feel of spring training. You could see it in the team ice skating, where men took tumbles one after the other. NBC's Tara Lipinski and Johnny Weir, to their credit, didn't make excuses for anyone. "That was the worst short program I've ever seen from Nathan Chen," Weir said of the American skater, calling his opening routine "a disaster." Said Lipinski: "When you step on the Olympic ice, it changes the game."

TIRICO TIME

No spring training for Mike Tirico, whose debut as NBC's prime-time host was smooth and uneventful. He paid tribute to his predecessor, Bob Costas, at the end of Thursday's broadcast.

We especially liked the short but illuminating discussion with Joshua Cooper Ramo on Korean politics. North Korea's participation is "a historical moment," Ramo said. "We just don't know its importance yet."

FIREPLACE

Not sure Tirico is well-served by the cavernous set NBC built for him, though. It feels cold and makes him look small. Where's that fake fireplace when you need it?

MISSING SKATER

NBC absorbed years of criticism for prime-time shows filled with tape-delayed competition, but it learned in Thursday's telecast that live has its pitfalls, too.

The network skipped Israeli skater Aleksei Bychenko's performance to show a sappy feature on a visit to Chen's elementary school. It was a risk, and producers were burned when they missed the best skate of the first hour of competition. Chen's lackluster performance only made it worse. The roasting NBC received online even included suggestions that the decision was anti-Semitic.

TOTALLY RAD

"Oh, that is so rad!" skiing analyst Jonny Moseley exclaimed during some moguls preliminaries. One other run was "epic." A third skier "hangs this thing out to dry." Yet another was "having a rippin' middle section." Hope that got the cliches out of your system, Jonny.

TWEET OF THE DAY

"Dude! I'm like, totally stoked listening to the moguls ski announcers."

RECAP

In a bit of cross-promotion, NBC's "This is Us" star Sterling K. Brown narrated a seven-minute film, "Always Start With the Dreams," before coverage of Friday's opening ceremony. NBC will show it tape-delayed in prime time, for early risers, the ceremony was streamed live online.

Koreas share historic handshake at Olympic opening ceremony

By Eric Talmadge
Associated Press

PYEONGCHANG, South Korea — It was a historic moment, and it happened even before the Pyeongchang Winter Olympics had officially begun.

As South Korean President Moon Jae-in and his wife greeted VIPs in their dignitary box to watch the opening ceremony, they turned to shake hands with North Korean leader Kim Jong Un's younger sister, who arrived earlier in the day on an unprecedented visit to the South by a member of the North's ruling Kim family.

All broke out in broad smiles.

Kim's sister, Kim Yo Jong, was at the opening ceremony with North Korea's nominal head of state, 90-year-old Kim Yong Nam. They are part of an extraordinary diplomatic push by the North aimed at using the Olympics to ease tensions with Seoul and bolster unity between the two Koreas after a year that has been marked by escalating fears of war and increasing angry rhetoric between Pyongyang and Washington.

As they shook hands, the North and South Koreans spoke briefly. It was not immediately known what they said, but all of them were smiling.

U.S. Vice President Mike Pence and his wife arrived after the handshakes. They were seated beside the Moons and next to Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and his wife. His office said he did not interact with the North Koreans.

The Moons, Nam and Kim all stood again as athletes from both Koreas marched together behind a blue-and-white "unification" flag for the first time since 2007. There was another handshake.

The Pences did not stand for the unified Korean team's entrance. During the parade of nations, they stood only for the U.S. team.

Young Lady Dawgs impress in 2-6A opener

By Oscar LeRoy
oleroy@mrt.com

Midland High girls soccer coach Cooper Barham wanted his team to show that it could play with one of the best teams in District 2-6A in Odessa Permian despite having some young players on its roster.

The Lady Bulldogs certainly did that on Friday night.

Behind Kylie VonHolle, one of the best goal scorers in the district, and some stellar defense, the Lady Bulldogs defeated Odessa Permian, 3-0, in the district opener at Grande Communications Stadium.

VonHolle scored two of the goals, while Raquel Houston added another one off a corner kick from Reagan Rivas for MHS, which improved to 8-1-3 overall and 1-0-0-0, 3 points in district.

"It's huge. I'm so excited that it went that way and we were able to come out with the big win," said VonHolle, who now has 22 goals on the season. "Now we have to focus on the future.

"They key was working together. The communication was there and it was how we needed it to be."

Added Barham: "We want to make a statement to everybody in the district that we're here to play and we're ready for this, we're prepared. The biggest thing is that I wanted (the Lady Bulldogs) to come in here and have that confidence. The first game you always have the nerves, but I told them just to enjoy it.

"To get to play a great team like Permian, you know it's going to be a battle for 80 minutes. I give a lot of credit to Permian. (Head coach Chad Peterson) does a great job, his players are always hard-nosed, tough, skilled. I was proud with how the girls showed up and matched their intensity."

Blown opportunity

Frenship eliminates MHS from playoff race

By Will Korn
wkorn@mrt.com

The Wolfforth Frenship boys basketball team brought the tenacity and purpose it needed to put itself in position to clinch District 2-6A's final playoff spot Friday night.

And after plenty of heart and hustle, it was freshman guard Calaway Dykes who sent the Tigers to the postseason. He converted all 14 of his free throw attempts in the fourth quarter to help Frenship pull away from Midland High for a 65-58 win at Chaparral Center.

Dykes finished with a game-high 22 points and was 17-for-17 from the free throw line, while guard Noble Robinson added 14 points for Frenship. As a team, Frenship (14-15, 4-5 in District 2-6A) sunk 26 of its 30 attempts at the charity stripe.

"It was just back and forth, back and forth and they did what they had to do at the end of the game," said MHS head coach Shan Hooker of the Tigers' fourth quarter.

Rahkiem Petterson scored a team-high 14 points for MHS (11-19, 2-7), which has now dropped its last five games and has been eliminated from playoff contention.

His team on a three-game winning streak, Frenship head coach Paul Page said the composure his team played with down the stretch was inspiring.

"We were able to get to the free-throw line and convert those," said Page. "That says a lot about our character. We're young — our point guard (Robinson) is a sophomore and then Cal is a freshman, so to see those two guys step up, take care of the basketball and knock down free throws, it's huge for us."

Each team had much on the line Friday and that showed in the opening minutes. The Bulldogs' Duce Warren and Daniel Elliott nailed back-to-back 3-pointers to open the contest, but Frenship countered with a focus on directing the ball inside and kept things close.

In the second quarter, the Bulldogs received a boost from the physical presence of freshman forward Brett Canis, who collected seven points, four rebounds, a block and an assist and helped MHS to a 26-24 halftime lead.

But the Tigers grabbed control in the third quarter with their persistent dedication to interior play. Forward Ryan Bennett led the charge with eight of his 10 points in the frame and handed Frenship a 37-35 lead that would continue to grow.

Just before the third quarter buzzer, Dykes

Permian outlasts MHS in PKs, take 2-6A opener

By Oscar LeRoy
oleroy@mrt.com

There was no doubt that the stakes were higher during Friday night's District 2-6A boys soccer opener between Midland High and Odessa Permian at Grande Communications Stadium.

The pressure was high and the will to win was great on both sides.

But in the end, it was Permian that found a way to escape with a heart-stopping win. After the teams were tied at 3 at the end of regulation, the Panthers edged the Bulldogs, 5-4, on penalty kicks as Isaac Herrera provided the game winner.

Bales

Quintero

This was a heartbreaker for the Bulldogs (4-5-2, 0-0-1-0, 1 point in district), who had to overcome plenty of adversity, including playing with a man down when Brian Natividad picked up a red card with 24 minutes left in the contest and was ejected for the game. That means that Natividad will be forced to miss Tuesday's game against Lee.

Despite being down a man, MHS took a 3-2 lead when Fernando Quintero scored on a header in the 59th minute.

"Even when we went down to 10 (players) when we did, the guys kept battling and we put one in," MHS coach JD Bales said. "You can't fault the kids' effort. They never gave up. They fought until the very end. PKs come down to who's lucky the most. We're happy to get out of here with a point.

"I'm very proud with the way they kept their composure and kept fighting. They never gave up."

Permian coach Luis Carmona, whose team improved to 7-6-1 overall and 0-1-0-0 (2 points) in district, said he wasn't surprised with the way the Bulldogs kept battling.

"They're a talented team," said Carmona about MHS. "Sometimes the most dangerous game to be playing is when you're ahead or playing against a team that's down. With the talent that Midland High had, their kids never gave up. Credit to them. On the flip side, credit to our boys too. Any other team would have probably folded. The heart was there, the fight and the belief was there. It was just a

Gotta hand it to Vonn: US ski star wears gloves at Olympics

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press

PYEONGCHANG, South Korea — Known for her hard-charging style on skis, Lindsey Vonn is not taking any chances off the slopes.

The black gloves she wore to a pre-Olympics news conference Friday made that clear.

After waiting eight years — "a very long time," she called it — to return to a Winter Games for the fourth — and, she left no doubt, final — time, Vonn is making sure to cover her hands to try to avoid picking up any germs.

Even donned the gloves for her flight to South Korea.

"I just don't want to get sick," she said. "Just being safe."

The U.S. Alpine skiing star is not accustomed to erging on the side of caution while racing, which is why she owns a pair of Olympic medals and four overall World Cup titles. She has won her past three races, raising her World Cup total to 81 victories, a record for a woman and the second-most in history, five behind Ingemar Stenmark.

That speed is also why she is all-too-familiar with dealing with health issues , including the torn-up right knee that forced her to miss the 2014 Sochi Games.

She estimates that she spent the equivalent of about three years on rehabilitation from various injuries, while Vonn

Grayson College dominates Chaps in sweep

From staff reports

DENISON – The Grayson College baseball team out-scored Midland College, 28-5, during a non-conference doubleheader sweep on Friday.

The Vikings rolled to a 13-4 victory over the Chaparrals in the first game, and followed with a 15-1 win over MC in the second game.

In the early game, Grayson's Zack Phillips tossed six shutout innings of two-hit ball, while striking out five.

Jackson Glenn had a home run and three RBI to lead the Vikings' offense, while Brandon Talley led Grayson (2-1) with three hits and added a double.

Trailing 13-0, MC (0-5) salvaged four runs in the top of the seventh. Cade Bullinger went 2-for-3 with an RBI for the Chaps.

In the second game, Grayson's J.T. Morgan cracked two home runs and had seven RBI to lead his team's 13-hit attack. Vikings starting pitcher Nathan Hawkins tossed 5 1/3 scoreless innings of one-hit ball. Hawkins struck out 11. Hawkins carried a no-hitter into the sixth inning until MC's Tommy Gillman led off the frame with a single.

MC scored its lone run when Benton Rogers plated Lee grad Tristan Martinez with a seventh-inning sacrifice fly.

The Chaps will seek their first win when they visit North Central Texas Community College in a double header today.

Lady Chaps go 2-1 on first day of MC Spring Classic

From staff reports

The Midland College softball team went 2-1 during the first day of its host Midland College Spring Classic, Friday at Freddie Ezell Softball Complex.

Otero JC squeaked past MC, 1-0, in Friday's opening game, but the Lady Chaps (10-5) bounced back to upend Lamar Community College, 13-3, in five innings, and beat Northeastern JC, 14-1, in five innings.

Against Otero, MC sophomore Crystine Kistner took a tough luck loss, as she held the Lady Rattlers to one hit – a home run by Jenica Kevil – over six innings. Kistner struck out 14.

The Lady Chaps fell despite out-hitting Otero, 5-1.

In its win over Lamar, MC was spearheaded by the bat of Alexis Sullivan, who went 3-for-4 with a double, two RBI and two runs scored to lead the 13-hit parade.

The Lady Chaps also had noteworthy performances from Rayla Jacobs-Kea, who was 2-for-3 with two RBI and three runs scored; and Permian grad Elizabeth Chastain, who went 2-for-2 with three RBI.

In the night cap, Jacobs-Kea shined with both her bat and in the circle for MC in its run-rule win over Northeastern.

Jacobs-Kea held Northeastern to two hits and one run (unearned) over five innings, while striking out seven. At the plate, Jacobs-Kea was 2-for-4 with a home run, three RBI and two runs scored. Regan Hubbard and Alexis Sullivan also homered for MC in the win over the Plainswomen.

The Lady Chaps close out the tournament with games against Snow College and Colorado Northern today.

Stars beat Penguins 4-3 in shootout

Associated Press

DALLAS — Tyler Seguin scored the deciding shootout goal and Kari Lehtonen stopped all three Pittsburgh shooters in the tiebreaker in the Dallas Stars' 4-3 victory over the Penguins on Friday night.

Evgeni Malkin, Sidney Crosby and Phil Kessel, with 71 goals among them this season, failed to score against Lehtonen. He won his fifth straight game, and stretched Dallas' winning streak to five games.

Shooting second, Seguin sent a shot off of Matthew Murray's right side and into the net.

Pittsburgh took a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Riley Sheahan and Carl Hagelin.

The Stars' comeback began when Seguin scored his sixth goal in five games at 17:57 of the first period. John Klingberg and Dan Hamhuis scored early in the third period to give Dallas a 3-2 lead.

Dallas remained fourth in the Central Division but pulled within three points of co-leaders Nashville and Winnipeg. Pittsburgh fell five points behind Metropolitan Division leader Washington.

Lehtonen finished with a season-high 34 saves.

Murray made 33 saves, including stops on breakaways by Jamie Benn and Alexander Radulov in overtime.

Benn assisted on all three goals in regulation for Dallas.

Sheahan scored at 9:07 of the first period. He beat Dallas' Jason Spezza to a loose puck, skated unmolested down the left side and slid a backhand between Lehtonen's legs.

Dallas had a 4-on-3 power play when Hagelin took the puck for a breakaway.

Harden, Capela lead Rockets to 130-104 win over Nuggets

By Kristie Rieken
Associated Press

HOUSTON — James Harden scored 28 points, Clint Capela added 23 points with a career-high 25 rebounds and the Houston Rockets never trailed in a lopsided 130-104 win over the Denver Nuggets on Friday night.

Harden had 11 assists and seven rebounds as Houston won its seventh straight and 11th of 12.

The Rockets had a double-digit lead for most of the game and held an advantage of 20 points or more throughout most of the second half. Harden didn't play in the third quarter, and Capela and the rest of the starters sat down for good with about nine minutes left and the game out of hand.

Trey Lyles scored 24 points off the bench to lead the Nuggets, who had a three-game winning streak snapped.

The Rockets had a 27-point lead to start the fourth and a 14-6 run to open the quarter made it 111-76 with about nine minutes left. Eric Gordon, Ryan Anderson and Gerald Green all made 3s in that stretch and Chris Paul scored the other five points.

Coach Mike D'Antoni took out most of his starters after that and Denver scored the next eight straight, with Torrey Craig and Lyles making four each, to cut the lead to 111-84 with seven minutes remaining.

The Nuggets had no answer for Capela, who had 16 rebounds by halftime. He grabbed his 20th to tie his previous career best with about five minutes left in the third.

Denver had a terrible night from long range, making a season-low three 3-pointers on 28 attempts.

The Rockets led by 16 early in the third quarter before using a 7-2 run to extend their advantage to 73-52 with about nine minutes left in the period. Capela led the way in that span with four points and Harden added a 3-pointer.

Nikola Jokic made a basket for the Nuggets after that before Harden scored the first five points of a 10-2 spurt that made it 83-56 with seven minutes left in the quarter. Houston still led by 27 at the end of the period, 97-70.

It didn't take VonHolle very long to find the back of the net as she squeezed past the Permian defense for a goal in the seventh minute.

MHS took a 2-0 lead at the half when Houston punched in a goal off a corner kick from Rivas in the 27th minute.

Meanwhile, Permian (11-2-1, 0-0-0-0) had its opportunities in the first half but the MHS defense and junior goalkeeper Allison Robinson were solid and turned away the Lady Panthers. Robinson had three saves in the first half.

"I thought my defense played great," Barham said. "They've come a long way. I have two freshmen starting in the back and you can tell they're playing at a higher level. They never give up and just fight. They want to work hard and that's something that's pretty awesome to watch. And of course Ally in goal, she's done really well this year. She's big and tall and she does a good job of coming out and making some big saves."

VonHolle added an insurance goal in the 57th minute and once again she proved that whenever she touches the ball, she's a threat to score.

"The first one was a battle. I knew I had to fight in order to get that one," said VonHolle, describing her goals. "The second one, I saw the opening and I saw the gap and I knew I had a chance if I could get it."

Barham said VonHolle has a knack for scoring.

"Anytime she gets the ball in box, you kind of watch and see what's going to happen," he said. "At the same time, I give a lot credit to the entire team. They set it her up in good positions and they do an excellent job of finding her when she's open."

was fouled shooting a 3-pointer and tacked on three free throws to pad the Tigers' lead.

"We finally got it together and we got the two point lead and we were able to stretch it out there," Page said. "We were able to go inside a little bit more. Being able to do that in the third quarter allowed us to create that separation and then give us some space."

Each team put 21 points on the scoreboard in the fourth and the Bulldogs made 7 of their 11 shot attempts to keep the pressure on the visitors.

But Dykes calmly delivered, as he stepped to the line seven times in the final two minutes with perfection.

He said his entire team has become more composed over the last few games.

"I just wanted to get to the playoffs," Dykes said. "I think we wanted it more. We started off 1-5 (in district play) and we kept fighting. I love (games like Friday's). The first time we played everyone, we weren't as calm. Now we are."

After the loss, Hooker reassured his players that they are making progress and have one more game, 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at district champion Odessa Permian

"It's a young team and the future looks bright. We've just got to put the work in the spring, summer and fall next year and continue to grow and mature," Hooker said. "I told them 'You can't fault your effort, you did everything we asked of you out there with your effort. We've just got to clean up some parts of our game.'

"We've got one more practice Monday, then we'll go over to Permian and give them our best shot."

well-played game overall. We talked at the beginning of the game that it was probably going to come down to mistakes. A bunch of these goals had mistakes surrounded by them, but we'll take the points, we'll take the win."

It seemed every time a team landed a blow, the other team responded with a counter punch.

MHS took a 2-1 lead at the half when Natividad scored in the 17th minute, while Matthew Arizpe added a goal in the 37th minute off a ricochet off the goal post on a penalty kick taken by Alan Rodriguez.

Permian's goal came in the 33rd minute when Wyatt Matta beat MHS goalkeeper Noah Venegas to the ball to punch it in for the score.

Permian added two goals in the second half by Aiden Everett, including the game-tying score with 15:01 left in regulation.

"This group of guys has shown that even if we get behind, we still have the manpower and firepower to come back," Carmona said. "The most important thing is that we keep our cool and we play our game. We're not going to be the quickest out there, but when we keep the ball we are pretty dangerous. Tonight, we put away our chances and that's what good teams do."

The Bulldogs know that there's still a lot of soccer left and now they must get ready to face their crosstown rivals on Tuesday.

"We're going to lick our wounds, we're going to fix our mistakes and we're going to be ready to come back to work on Monday and be ready for Lee," Bales said. "We can't dwell on this. We just have to learn from this and get better. Our boys will be stronger for it and we'll move on."

Johnson, Hossler tied for Pebble Beach lead

By Doug Ferguson

Eric Risberg/Associated Press

Dustin Johnson follows his shot from the 13th tee of the Monterey Peninsula Country Club Shore Course during the second round of the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am golf tournament Friday in Pebble Beach, Calif.

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Dustin Johnson already was feeling good about his game heading over to the Shore Course at Monterey Peninsula. Another day of gorgeous weather in the AT&T Pebble Beach Pro-Am made him feel even better.

Johnson ran off three straight birdies to start his round, made four birdies in a five-hole stretch around the turn and wound up with a 7-under 64 on Friday to share the 36-hole lead with Beau Hossler.

"Probably my lowest by about seven shots at Monterey Peninsula, so I was happy with that," Johnson said. "It's probably the first time, too, I think we have ever played over there with nice weather. So it was definitely a good day."

He only slightly exaggerated, but not by much. In four times playing at Monterey Peninsula since it joined the rotation, he only broke 70 one time and twice shot 73. The evidence of the different day he faced came early. Johnson hit a 9-iron on the 176-yard hole that plays downhill. A year ago, he hit 4-iron. On the 434-yard 13th hole a year ago, he "roasted" a driver and a 3-iron. This year, he hit 3-wood and had 85 yards left.

"But I was right behind the tree," he said.

Hossler, the PGA Tour rookie best known in these parts for contending on the weekend at Olympic Club in 2012 U.S. Open when he was 17, was flawless at Spyglass Hill in a round of 67 to join Johnson at 12-under par.

Hossler has not made a bogey this week. He holed an 18-foot par putt on the 10th hole at Pebble on Thursday. For his second round, he never came close to bogey, hitting all but two greens in regulation and having standard chips on those.

Hossler heads over to Monterey Peninsula, while Johnson spends his last two days at Pebble Beach.

They were two shots ahead to par on Julian Suri (67 at Monterey Peninsula) and Troy Merritt (67 at Spyglass Hill).

Lurking another shot behind were Phil Mickelson and Jon Rahm.

Mickelson hasn't won since the British Open in 2013 at Muirfield, and he finally started to see some reasonable results after a sluggish start this year. Mickelson was tied for the lead at one point when he ran off three straight birdies at Monterey Peninsula, though he made only two more over his final 11 holes for a 65.

Rahm was at Pebble Beach and holed his share of 6-footers for birdie for a 67. Just as big was the 8-foot putt he made on the 18th hole for par when he hit 3-wood to the right behind a tree, pitched nicely under the limbs and over the bunker just through the green, and then his chip ran downhill by the hole.

Jason Day had a 65 at Monterey Peninsula and was in the group at 9 under that included Steve Stricker (66 at Monterey Peninsula).

Jordan Spieth found some touch with the putter to make five birdies on his opening nine holes at Monterey Peninsula, and he wound up with a 66, though he remained seven shots behind Johnson.

"I saw a couple putts go in early and normally that's all I need to kind of stop skiing uphill and start to turn downhill," Spieth said.

Rory McIlroy went downhill.

He was hanging round at 5 under, not far from the lead, when he drove to the front of the par-4 fifth hole at Monterey Peninsula, leaving him a 70-foot eagle putt. He ran that about 6 feet past the hole, and then missed his birdie putt. But then he missed his par putt from 3 feet, and it ran about 6 feet by the hole, and he missed that one. That's five putts for a double bogey, and two more bogeys led to a 74 and left him in danger of missing the cut.

Hossler, who played at Texas, is part of the new generation who thought they could take on the best from when they were in college.

He's not one to be intimidated by the world's No. 1 player (they are represented by the same manager), and that won't be an issue on Saturday, anyway.

Johnson is part of the celebrity rotation at Pebble Beach. Hossler figures to be in relative solitude at Monterey Peninsula.

"I try and not let those things affect me," Hossler said. "But yeah, playing on a moving day-type day, not at the home track for the tournament, that's certainly different really most weeks out here."

Johnson was full of good news on Friday — his 64 for a share of the lead as he goes for a third victory at Pebble Beach, and he found out that his dad bowled a 300. The world's No. 1 golfer grew up with bowling and said he once had a chance at a perfect game.

"I bowled 11 in a row," he said, breaking into a smile, "and then I gassed it."

Jones, Taylor are TSWA Class 5A players of the year

Associated Press

BRYAN — Dallas Highland Park senior quarterback John Stephen Jones was the offensive player of the year on the Texas Sports Writers Association's Class 5A all-state football team.

The son of Dallas Cowboys Executive Vice President Stephen Jones and grandson of Cowboys owner Jerry Jones passed for 4,901 yards with 61 touchdowns and only four interceptions in leading the Scots to the 5A Division I state title. Jones, who signed Arkansas on Wednesday, added 380 yards rushing and two touchdowns.

Manvel senior linebacker DePriest Taylor was the defensive player of the year. He had 119 tackles, 12 of them for sacks for Manvel which fell to Dallas Highland Park in the title game, though Taylor had 10 tackles, half of them for losses.

US speedskaters eager to put Sochi debacle behind them

By Beth Harris

Shani Davis of the United States, far right, trains during a speed skating training session prior to the 2018 Winter Olympics on Friday in Gangneung, South Korea.

PYEONGCHANG, South Korea — Perhaps no team has more to prove at the Pyeongchang Olympics than the U.S. speedskaters.

Limited to one medal four years ago, they are eager to bounce back and show why their sport has produced the most medals for the U.S. in the Winter Games.

Going 0 for 12 in long track and 1 for 8 in short track in Sochi was a "disaster," long track skater Mitch Whitmore said.

It's certainly a memory the Americans haven't forgotten, either.

"The thought is definitely in the back of my mind, you don't want that to happen again," Brittany Bowe said. "You just have to bring it back to, 'Have I done everything I can to prepare myself the best way I can?' I can answer that, 'yes.'"

That's quite a change from 2014, when the Americans debuted a high-tech skin suit they thought would lead to more gold, silver and bronze.

Instead, it was an unqualified failure. Skaters complained the suit was too tight and they were stuck dealing with sizing issues on the day of their races. To compound their woes, the Americans trained outdoors at altitude leading up to the games when the venue in Sochi was indoors at sea level.

"The team morale was really weird," Joey Mantia said. "There was just a weird vibe in the village among our team."

This time, things are completely different.

"Basically, our entire staff has handed us all the tools we need to get medals," said Mantia, a favorite for gold in the mass start event. "It's just up to us now. There's no more blaming it on anyone else."

Last year, the Americans traveled to the Gangneung Oval, where they will race this week, and measured ice temperature and thickness and air conditions. They took that information back home and used it to reproduce those conditions at the Pettit National Ice Center in Milwaukee, where the long track Olympic trials and a pre-Olympic camp were held.

"We felt this was the best strategy to ensure we have peak performance at the right time," said Shane Domer, sports science director for US Speedskating.

They will find out starting Saturday when long track begins with the women's 3,000 meters. Short track starts with the men's 1,500-meter final, along with qualifying in other events.

The U.S. team isn't totally free of distraction, however.

Five-time Olympian Shani Davis tweeted that the process in which luger Erin Hamlin beat him out in a coin flip as the U.S. flag bearer for Friday's opening ceremony was handled "dishonorably." The final vote by their fellow athletes ended in a 4-4 tie, leading to the coin flip.

VONN

reiterated Friday she plans to ski another season to eclipse Stenmark, when she mentioned the word "retirement," it was in the context of how long her knees will hold up.

So Vonn is thrilled to be back on her sport's most visible stage.

She plans to compete in the downhill, the super-G and the combined, but said Friday that she has opted to skip the giant slalom "because my knee is just not really in a place to do that."

"I would love to," she continued, "but unfortunately, I just don't think I can contend for a medal, so there's really no point."

Yes, there's a little insight into how Vonn thinks.

If a bit of hardware is not realistically in the offing, then why bother getting into the starting hut?

That is the sort of burden of expectations she places on herself.

There already are plenty of expectations from others heading into her first race, the super-G, on Feb. 17. Next comes the downhill on Feb. 21, then the combined two days after that.

At Vancouver in 2010, Vonn won the gold medal in the downhill, along with the bronze in the super-G.

This time, at age 33, she could become the oldest woman to win an Olympic Alpine medal.

"It's harder in some ways, definitely, that it's my last Olympics, because I want to end on a high note. I really want to put an exclamation point on my career," said Vonn, who brought her dog Lucy to the session with reporters. "It took me until my third Olympics to really figure out how to deal with the pressure. Most of the time ... I put more pressure on myself than anyone put on me."

Vonn smiled and kidded around for much of the half-hour Q-and-A, but her mood changed when she was asked about her grandfather, Don Kildow, who died in November.

She closed her eyes and paused, then spoke haltingly as she began crying.

"I miss him so much. He's been such a big part of my life. And I really had hoped that he would be alive to see me (at these Olympics). But I know he's watching, and I know that he's going to help me, and I'm going to win for him," Vonn said.

Then, moments later, she spoke about skiing in his memory.

"I'm just going to lay it all out there. I'm going to give it everything I have, and whatever happens will happen. I'm not going to be nervous. I know he's looking out for me," she said, "and that actually gives me a lot of peace of mind."

Houston looking ahead after winning first World Series

By Kristie Rieken
Associated Press

HOUSTON — The celebration is over for the Houston Astros after winning their first World Series last season.

They don't want to think or talk about 2017. And they certainly aren't dwelling on their big win.

The Astros believe the only way to build on their success is by winning again in 2018.

"These guys are not satisfied with what happened and they want to ... take a great team and make it legendary," general manager Jeff Luhnow said. "We're a great team, with great accomplishments. We're not legendary yet. And I think they all desire to be legendary."

That sentiment was on display on Wednesday when the team's marketing department unveiled the theme for the season of: "Never Settle," words that will adorn their website, Twitter account and ballpark.

"The plan that Jim Crane had in 2011 when he hired me and bought this team was to get the Astros relevant as soon as possible and then win multiple championships," Luhnow said of the Astros' owner. "So we're on our way to our goal. We certainly by no stretch have achieved it."

Houston returns almost everyone from the team that beat the Los Angeles Dodgers to win the title and is confident the Astros will contend again this year. Luhnow said he isn't really concerned about any area and that injuries are the only thing that he feels like can derail another deep run.

Here's what to watch for when the Astros arrive in West Palm Beach, Florida, for spring training:

New look: The Astros bolstered an already powerful rotation by acquiring right-hander Gerrit Cole in a January trade with the Pirates. The top overall pick in the 2011 amateur draft gives Houston another ace to pair with lefty Dallas Keuchel and Justin Verlander, who the team acquired in an Aug. 31 deal last season. The Astros also added relievers Joe Smith and Hector Rondon; their only major loss from last year's team comes with the retirement of designated hitter Carlos Beltran.

Rookies to watch: Derek Fisher, a 24-year-old who made his debut last season, could compete for playing time in left field and Tony Kemp, who has split time between Houston and the minors over the past two seasons, could also compete there.

They're set: This team is set in basically every area after retaining almost every key player from last year's World Championship team. The two strongest areas are the middle infield where shortstop Carlos Correa and second baseman Jose Altuve, last year's AL MVP, return to anchor the middle of the order. Correa hit .315 with 24 homers — both career-highs — last season and Altuve had his finest season, hitting a career-best and major league-leading .346 with 24 homers and 81 RBIs to become the first Astro to win MVP since Jeff Bagwell captured the NL award in 1994. The only problem with the Astros rotation is that they might have too many good arms this season. Along with Keuchel, Verlander and Cole, the Astros have young star Lance McCullers, Brad Peacock, who is coming off his best season, Charlie Morton and Collin McHugh. The surplus of starters may force one of the pitchers at the back end to move into a long-relief role in the bullpen.

Rangers know about challenges in tougher AL West

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

Adrian Beltre goes into his 21st major league season still seeking a World Series title. The offseason for the Texas Rangers likely would have gone much differently if the third baseman and 3,000-hit club member was their general manager.

"He probably would have made some different moves this winter. I think he would have addressed some different things," said Jon Daniels, the actual GM. "I respect that, but I don't feel any different from how I did at the end of (last season). We're going to go into spring training with a chance."

Even in the AL West that is home to the World Series champion Houston Astros and now Shohei Ohtani, the pitcher-outfielder from Japan coveted by the Rangers before he signed instead with the Los Angeles Angels.

"I believe we're in a good place to allow guys, young guys, to continue to grow," fourth-year manager Jeff Banister said. "We brought in some players that we feel like really have an opportunity to help us."

There will be no expensive reunion with Yu Darvish, the ace traded to the NL champion Los Angeles Dodgers last July 31.

Daniels knows there will be challenges and says the team will "need some guys to step up and develop."

Joey Gallo, who hit 41 homers playing three positions last season, could get the chance to be the primary first baseman. Delino DeShields gets another opportunity in center field. Ryan Rua, Drew Robinson and Jurickson Profar will be in the mix to fill multiple positions.

"We have intentionally not brought in kind of the one-year stopgap guys to be in front of ... guys of that nature," Daniels said. "Our interest is in seeing these guys. We're at a point, we believe in these guys and their talent level, and we want to see that through."

Some other things to watch with the Rangers headed to spring training in Surprise, Arizona:

New look: instead of Darvish, there are several options to join returning left-handers Cole Hamels and Martin Perez in the rotation. Plus, Matt Bush gets a shot at going from the bullpen to the rotation. Doug Fister didn't pitch in his first MLB game last season until late June, and Mike Minor hasn't started a game since 2014. Matt Moore, acquired in a trade from the San Francisco Giants, beat Texas in an unexpected playoff start for Tampa Bay in 2011. Bartolo Colon, who turns 45 in May, goes to camp with a minor league deal.

"We chose to spread our resources around to add a number of pitchers to fill innings and fill roles on the club that we believe in, but that admittedly are guys that we see as values, we see as guys that have a chance to outperform the acquisition cost," Daniels said.

Rookie to watch: Willie Calhoun, the top prospect acquired in the Darvish deal, hit .348 in 333 minor league games while primarily a second baseman in the Dodgers organization. The 23-year-old Calhoun gets a chance to become the primary left fielder. He made his big league debut in 13 games at the end of last season, hitting .265 in 34 at-bats.

They're set: With Beltre at third, Elvis Andrus at shortstop and Rougned Odor at second, the infield is solid. Andrus, at 29 and already going into his 10th season, hit a combined .299 the past two years and is coming off his first 20-homer season.

They're not: Along with the rotation changes, Texas needs some stability in the bullpen. Relievers had 21 blown saves and a 4.76 ERA last season. Young lefty Alex Claudio had 11 saves after the All-Star break, but other closing options could include a healthy Jake Diekman.

On deck: After AL West titles in each of Banister's first two seasons, Texas is now in an underdog role. "It doesn't really matter," Andrus said. "As a team right now, we're concentrating on getting ready. ... We have a really good team, and we know what we need to get better at."

WINTER OLYMPICS

Pyeongchang 2018

ATHLETES TO WATCH

SHAUN WHITE
Age: 31
Hometown: Carlsbad, California
Sport: Snowboarding
Best shot at gold: He's the biggest name in the sport and is seeking his third gold on the halfpipe. It's no guarantee, though, not with Japan's high-flying Ayumu Hirano and the defending champion, Iouri Podladtchikov (the iPod), in the mix.

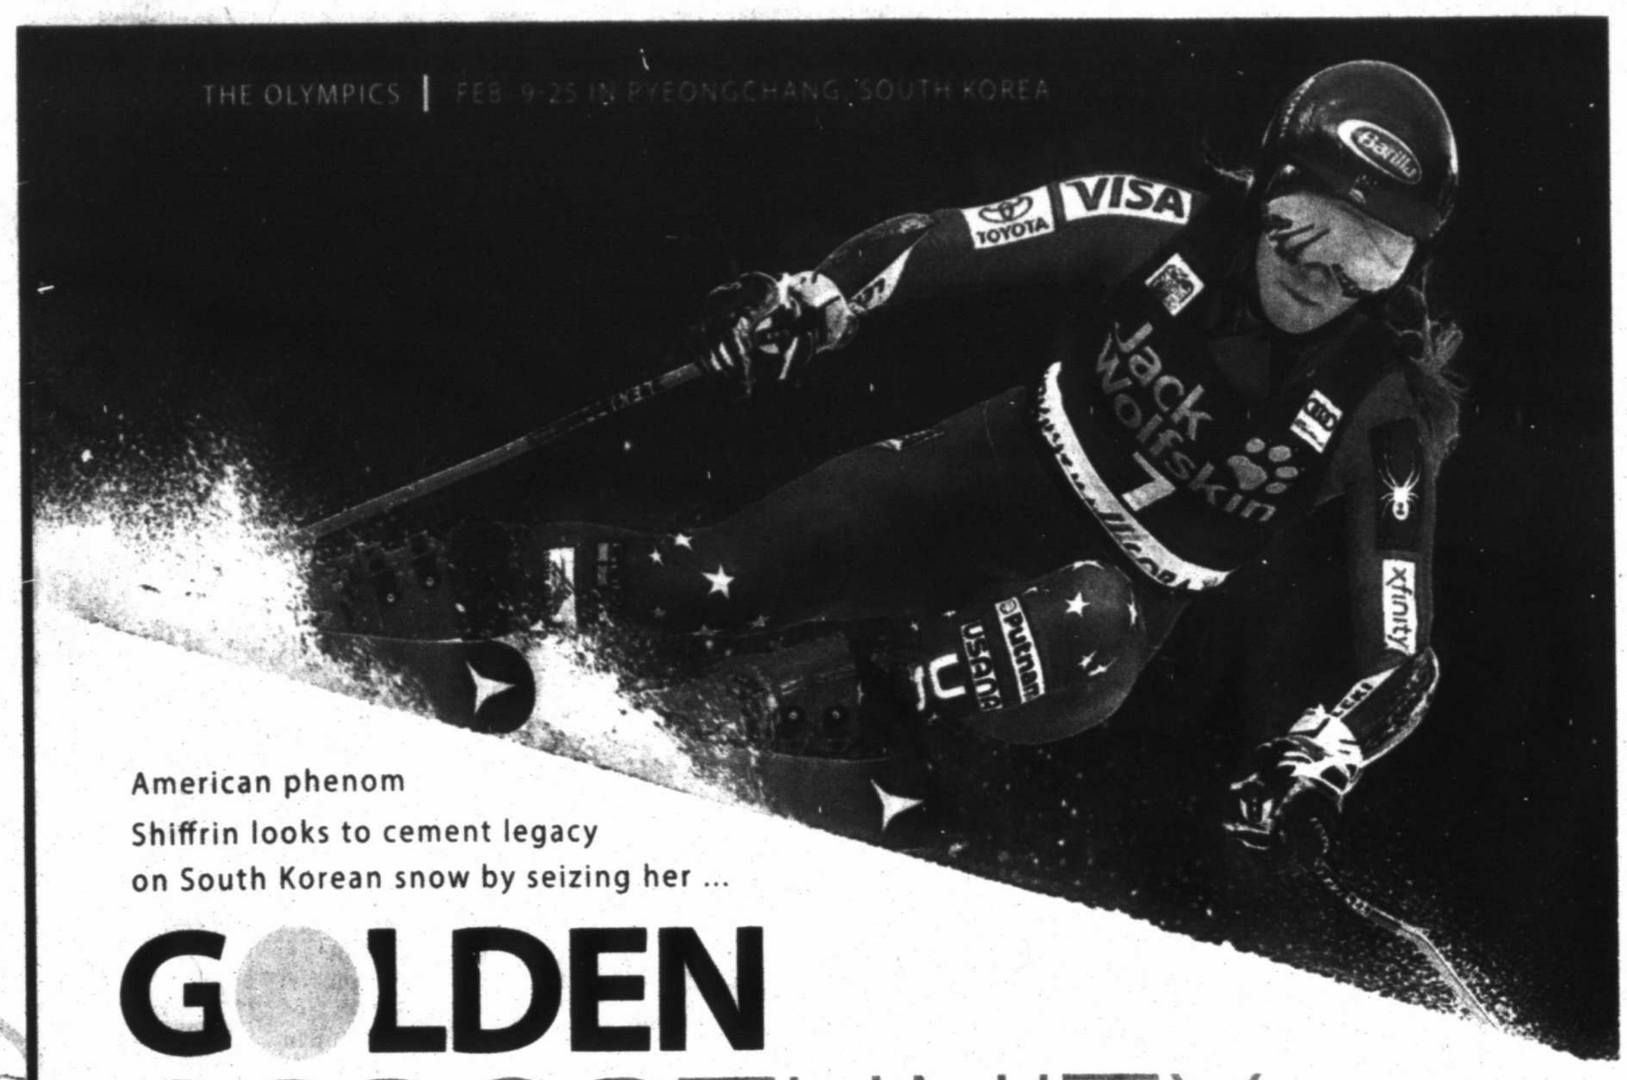
LINDSEY VONN
Age: 33
Hometown: Vail, Colorado
Sport: Alpine Skiing
Best shot at gold: Eight of her World Cup titles have come in the downhill, the longest of the individual events, and five have come in the super-G, so if she's healthy, it's a coin flip. She could win both.

NATHAN CHEN
Age: 18
Hometown: Salt Lake City
Sport: Figure Skating
Best shot at gold: He's America's best hope for a gold medal in this sport. The master of the quad, he includes five of those jumps in his free skate. Some skaters don't try any.

BECCA AND MATT HAMILTON
Ages: 27 and 28
Hometown: McFarland, Wisconsin
Sport: Curling
Best shot at gold: If you're one of those who can't seem to look away from curling, then keep an eye on this brother-sister team. They qualified for the men's and women's squads, and also as a two-person, mixed-doubles team for that format's Olympic debut.

MAAME BINEY
Age: 17
Hometown: Reston, Virginia
Sport: Short Track Speedskating
Best shot at gold: The Ghana native with the mile-wide smile is the first black woman to qualify for a U.S. speedskating team. She should contend at 500 meters where she has had success at junior and senior levels on the road to Korea.

ASHLEY CALDWELL
Age: 24
Hometown: Park City, Utah
Sport: Freestyle Skiing
Best shot at gold: Caldwell is one of the few female aerials skiers who will try a triple flip. It's high-risk, high-reward, and if she lands it, the degree of difficulty will put her on the podium.



American phenom Shiffrin looks to cement legacy on South Korean snow by seizing her ...

GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY

BY EDDIE PELLS
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

IF MIKAELA SHIFFRIN stopped right now, at age 22, she would go down as one of the best to ever step into skis.

The rest of the skiers at the Pyeongchang Olympics should be so-lucky.

Already an Olympic gold medalist, already a four-time World Cup slalom champion, already a World Cup all-around champion and already more than halfway to breaking the all-time wins record that Lindsey Vonn took more than a decade to collect, Shiffrin is ready to go for more in South Korea. None other than America's most decorated Olympic skier, Bode Miller, says Shiffrin is the best he's ever seen.

Shortly after becoming the youngest Olympic slalom champion four years ago in Sochi, the native of Vail, Colorado, started pondering the possibility of returning four years later and winning five gold medals.

It would be a stretch, one that even she conceded felt like a dream. It would involve a very busy schedule that could include entering all five individual events and a team event that is new to the Olympics this year. And it would force her to beat out people with much more experience and guile — including Vonn, who is hungry as ever, especially after missing the 2014 Games because of an injury — in the downhill and Super-G races, which are not Shiffrin's specialty.

What makes her Olympic journey that much more intriguing is that her best events, the slalom and giant slalom, are first on the schedule. She'll be favored to have at least one, maybe two, of these gold medals in pocket before sitting down to decide what else she wants to try for.

"It doesn't feel like it's something crazy that's happening," she said earlier this Winter, on the road to her 10th slalom win of the season and 41st overall for her career. "It's not like dreaming. And that's really cool."

Shiffrin is hardly the only cool kid on the mountain.

There's a good chance 17-year-old snowboarder Chloe Kim might already have an Olympic gold medal at home had she been allowed to compete in Sochi. But she wasn't old enough. Only fitting. The halfpipe rider will make her Olympic debut in her parents' native country. They moved to the United States in part to help their daughter's snowboarding career.

And, of course, no talk about the halfpipe is complete without mention of Shaun White. After a shocking fourth-place finish four years ago, White is back and promising big things in his quest for a third Olympic gold medal.

These Olympics, like all of them before, are not all fun and games. Increasing tensions between North Korea and the United States led to numerous questions about whether the U.S. would even send a team. It will. Russia, however, will not. Multiple investigations found the Russians ran a state-sponsored doping system to increase their medal count at the Olympics on home turf in Sochi four years ago. Their Olympic committee is banned and Russia will not be allowed to fly its flag any sooner than the closing ceremony. But in a compromise, dozens of Russians who can prove they are clean will be allowed in and called 'Olympic Athlete From Russia." Any medals they win will not count in Russia's column.

That gives the United States a chance to top the medals table over its 17-day stay in South Korea. Canada, Norway and Germany will all be in that mix, as well.

Individually, Shiffrin stands as good a chance as anyone to take home the most hardware.

She has won 21 of the last 26 slalom events she has entered, but if she has grown complacent in any way, she is not showing signs of that.

"Every single one of the competitors can match," she said. "That makes me even more motivated to keep moving forward."

OTHER THINGS TO WATCH FOR IN PYEONGCHANG

BIG AIR | It's a bird. It's a plane. No, it's Big Air. In their neverending quest to draw the younger audience, Olympic bosses added another snowboarding event to the schedule, and it's a doozy. Big Air involves snowboarders catapulting themselves up a 45-foot ramp, then traveling up to 90 feet skyward before searching for the "sweet spot" to stick the landing. The vaunted "triple cork" — three flips and as many rotations as possible — will win the men's event. Remember this name: Red Gerard.

HOCKEY | Do you believe in miracles? A U.S. victory in the Olympic hockey tournament wouldn't rise to 1980 "Miracle On Ice" standards, but it would be quite a shock. The NHL opted not to send its players to Pyeongchang this time around — a decision that severely hamstrings both the United States and Canada. Despite the doping issues, the Russians will field a team and are favored to win gold.

BIATHLON BREAKTHROUGH | The U.S. biathlon team has been on a steady upward climb. The biggest step would the one onto the Olympic podium, a place an American has never been. If it's going to happen, Susan Dunklee, Lowell Bailey or Tim Burke will probably be the ones to do it. Last season, Dunklee won silver to give the U.S. its first women's medal at world championships and Bailey won gold to become the first U.S. world champion.

HOW TO WATCH

There's a 14-hour time difference between Pyeonchang and the Eastern time zone. NBC will offer the bulk of its 2,400 hours of live streaming at nbcolympics.com and on cable channels NBCSN (10 days of 24-hour programming), CNBC (watch here for lots of curling) and USA Network (lots of hockey). The network also has an app that will offer live coverage. But the prime-time extravaganza will still exist. For the first time at a Winter Games, NBC will provide live coverage in prime time across all U.S. time zones, highlighted by skiing, snowboarding and figure skating.

FACTS AND FIGURES

Things to watch at the Winter Olympics

By Mark Zeigler
The San Diego Union-Tribune

PYEONGCHANG, South Korea — Things to watch at the XXIII Winter Olympics that opened Friday in Pyeongchang, South Korea.

The hosts

It used to be Pyongchang in English, but locals thought it was too similar to the nefarious North Korean capital of Pyongyang so they added an "e" and capitalized the "C" for PyeongChang. (Most western media went for the e, not the capital C.)

But if you really want to forge an international identity, there's nothing quite like the interlocking rings, which might explain why Pyeongchang resolutely continued to bid after losing by three votes to Vancouver in 2010 and by four to Sochi in 2014.

This marks a return of the Winter Games to remote, cold locales after four straight in either sprawling metropolises or temperate climates, or both. Salt Lake City, Vancouver and Torino didn't need the Olympics for people to know where they are. Sochi is a summer resort city along the Black Sea.

Pyeongchang is in Gangwon Province in the northeast corner of the South Korean peninsula, a long forgotten coastal and mountain region that bumps up against the heavily-fortified Demilitarized Zone with the North. A high-speed KTX train was built to connect it with Seoul in the west, along with an upgraded road network of tunnels and bridges.

It also makes South Korea the sixth member of an exclusive global club to host the big three sporting events: the Summer Olympics (1988), soccer's World Cup (2002) and now the Winter Olympics.

They hope it is worth the wait.

The moment

The signature moment of these Games might not happen on the slopes or rinks or jumps, but in a frigid outdoor stadium Friday as the final delegation of athletes marched in Opening Ceremony.

Korea.

Not South Korea or North Korea, just a single Korea.

After years of negotiations, the IOC and the two governments agreed on a joint team in an attempt to ease the contentious politics of the peninsula. Beside a 150-member orchestra, North Korea is sending 22 athletes, including half of a unified women's hockey team.

It remains to be seen whether it is a genuine gesture of goodwill that can thaw relations between two countries technically still at war, or merely a political stunt that will be extinguished with the Olympic flame in 17 days.

On Thursday, North Korea held an elaborate military parade in Pyongyang.

And remember, the two Koreas also marched as one at the 2000 Summer Games in Sydney. Eighteen years later, President Donald Trump and North Korean counterpart Kim Jong Un were trading threats about who has the bigger nuclear button.

"The Olympic Games," IOC President Thomas Bach said Wednesday, "should be beyond political tensions."

The weather

If you shelled out $1,000 for a ticket to Opening Ceremony, you might want to spend a few hundred dollars on a parka, too. The last two Winter Games used domed stadiums. Pyeongchang is not.

Wind chills dipped below zero earlier this week, and it was so frigid during an Opening Ceremony rehearsal that spectators were leaving before it ended. So frigid that batteries inside photographer's cameras stopped working. So frigid there were reports of alpine skis warping after training runs.

The original plan was to put a roof on the 35,000-seat stadium and plumb it for central heating, but the budget was just $107 million. No roof, no heat. And why spend more for a venue that will be dismantled after the Paralympics next month?

The good news is, organizers won't have to worry about mudflats on the cross-country course and puddles on the ski jump like they did in Vancouver and Sochi. Pyeongchang, meteorologists say, is the coolest place on the planet for its latitude on the 37th parallel, the same as the northern tip of Africa and the Utah-Arizona border.

Average temperatures for February are a high of 41 degrees (although the forecast for the first week is colder) and a low of 13, which puts it on par with the frosty 1998 Games in Lillehammer, Norway. It really gets chilly when the wind shifts, bringing air masses from Siberia and the Manchurian Plain.

There's not tons of snow but, then, they don't have to worry about it melting.

The king

Shaun White was in the ICU of a New Zealand hospital four months ago, wondering if his Olympic snowboard career was over. He is 31, faltered at the 2014 Games in Sochi, had major ankle surgery the previous season and now had 62 stitches on his face plus lungs filling with blood from a horrific training crash.

It's not over.

The San Diego native arrives in Pyeongchang as the favorite to win a third halfpipe gold Tuesday, in sentiment and on paper. That's what happens when you rip off a perfect 100 in the final run of a U.S. qualifier to clinch your spot in a fourth Olympics, and when you are the most recognizable winter athlete — the Winter Games' Michael Phelps.

White won gold medals in 2006 and 2010, and qualified in both the halfpipe and slopestyle for Sochi. But he withdrew from slopestyle shortly before the competition, then bombed (for him, at least) on a mushy pipe and finished fourth.

He had ankle surgery. He face-planted on the lip of the pipe in New Zealand in October. He looked shaky in the second of four events that served as U.S. Olympic qualifiers — failing to advance from the preliminary round and finishing 14th.

He fell in his first two runs of the final at the next qualifier, in Snowmass, Colo.

That left him with one run, one shot. His coaches looked at him, shrugged and said he might as well "do the hard stuff" instead of playing it safe, hoping to back into an Olympic spot. The result was one of the greatest runs in the sport's history and a rare perfect score from a panel of Olympic judges.

Frontside double cork 1440, cab double cork 1080, frontside 540, double McTwist 1260, frontside double cork 1260.

"I would love to feel like an underdog, but I don't," White said. "Ever since I can remember, I've been expected to do well."

The queens

If White is the U.S. king of the Winter Games, there are two queens.

Lindsey Vonn and Mikaela Shiffrin are the greatest women's skiers in U.S. history, one 33 and in the twilight of her career, the other 22 and just getting started. Shiffrin competed in Sochi four years ago, but Vonn was hurt — making this likely their lone intersection in the interlocking rings.

They won't cross paths much on the slopes, either. Vonn is all about speed; Shiffrin excels at the technical events.

Vonn is the favorite in the downhill (which she won in 2010). Shiffrin is favored in the combined, giant slalom and slalom. That leaves the Feb. 16 Super G — the downhill and giant slalom hybrid — for them to battle it out. Vonn has 28 World Cup titles in the event. Shiffrin has none and rarely skis it, but her form this season is such that you wouldn't want to bet against her.

"It's so ingrained," Eileen Shiffrin, Mikaela's mother, told the Associated Press. "They always compare Mikaela to Lindsey Vonn. ... It's a normal thing for people to do. But Mikaela, right from the get-go, always said: 'I'm not Lindsey. I'm not The Next Lindsey Vonn, I'm Mikaela Shiffrin. That's who I am. That's who I want to be.'"

The champions

They are called skikonge in Norwegian. Ski kings.

No nation embraces winter and winter sport like Norway, with about one-third of its territory above the Arctic Circle. And that is regularly reflected in the medals table.

The nation of 5.2 million has won more Winter Olympic medals (329) than anyone else, and that legacy figures to continue in Pyeongchang. Sports Illustrated forecasts Norway to collect 17 gold and 42 total medals here, ahead of Germany (35), Canada (30) and the United States (28).

Most will come in anything involving cross-country skis. In biathlon, Johannes Thingnes Bo could win all five individual events plus the team gold. In cross-country skiing, Johannes Hosflot Klaebo and Heidi Weng could win four each. In Nordic combined (ski jumping and cross-country skiing), Jan Schmid is a medal favorite in all three events.

And then there's 37-year-old Marit Bjorgen. She has won 10 career cross-country medals and comes to her fifth Winter Games three medals shy of the all-time Olympic record, which, of course, is held by a Norwegian (biathlete Ole Einar Bjorndalen).

The tourists

If there could be a Jamaican men's bobsled team, why not a Nigerian women's bobsled team?

Seun Adigun, born in the United States to Nigerian parents, dreamed up the idea in her family's garage four years ago, building a bobsled out of wood. She had competed for Nigeria as a 100-meter hurdler at the 2010 Summer Games in London; now she's responsible, with American-raised sprinters Ngozi Onwumere and Akuoma Omeoga as brakewomen, for Nigeria's first appearance in the Winter Games and Africa's first in the bobsled.

Ecuador, Eritrea, Kosovo, Malaysia and Singapore will also make their Winter Games debut, bringing the total participating nations to a record 92.

It is a slippery slope, however. The "tourist athlete" has become an increasingly popular practice at the Winter Games — preying on relaxed nationality and qualification standards so the IOC can trumpet its participation numbers. Four years ago in Sochi, a wealthy U.S. couple essentially bought their way to citizenship from the tiny Caribbean island of Dominica, then gamed the cross-country qualification system to gain entrance into the Games.

Or there's the four-athlete Mexican team. One is 38, used to ski for her homeland of the United States and married into Mexican citizenship. One grew up in Canada. Another has lived his entire life in the U.S. and speaks broken Spanish. And another, a 43-year-old cross-country skier, has lived in Texas for the past decade.

The rivalry

The International Olympic Committee and NHL couldn't come to terms on the men's hockey tournament, so the NHL opted to ban any player under contract — even those in affiliated minor leagues — from participating in Pyeongchang.

It makes for some interesting rosters, filled instead with promising amateurs and washed-up veterans.

But it also puts more focus on the women's tournament and the growing rivalry between the United States and Canada. It goes like this: The U.S. women win everything before and after the Olympics, and Canada wins the gold medal.

The worlds are held annually, and the U.S. has won four straight and seven of the last eight. The U.S. beat Canada for the gold in the Olympic debut of women's hockey in 1998, and Canada has won the four golds since. Three times, it beat the Americans in the final, including 3-2 in overtime in Sochi.

"It was certainly a tough loss for us, and we went and looked in the mirror," said Reagan Carey, USA Hockey's general manager for the women's program. "We talked about what we needed for gold and went hunting for all the small differences and changes we could, so that we could make sure we had success here in 2018."

The final is Feb. 21.

The Holy Grail

After winning ladies figure skating medals in 11 straight Olympics (and 14 straight if you don't count 1964, when a plane crash wiped out the entire U.S. team), the Yanks have been shut out in the last two Winter Games.

And, if form holds, it will be three straight in Pyeongchang.

Their lone hope to salvage some semblance of international respect, then, rests with 24-year-old Mirai Nagasu and a single jump: the triple Axel, the Holy Grail for female skaters.

Nagasu is the third U.S. woman to land the 3(-revolution jump in competition, joining Tonya Harding and Kimmie Meissner. Neither landed it in an Olympics, something only Japan's Midori Ito and Mao Asada have done.

Nagasu will get two chances, in the short program Feb. 20 and again in the free program two days later. She says she's not holding back. She's going for it.

"You know, it's just one jump in the program," Nagasu said, "but also at the same time it's really cool for me because I am one of the few who has the ability to land it."

Female athletes who could stand out at the Winter Olympics

PYEONGCHANG, South Korea – Wondering which athletes will become stars at the 2018 Winter Olympics? Here are 10 athletes to keep an eye on in the women's competitions.

Alina Zagitova, figure skating, Olympic Athlete from Russia

Zagitova, 15, won the Grand Prix Final and European championships this season, ending teammate Evgenia Medvedeva's reign in the European competition. Zagitova, the 2017 world junior champion, boldly places her jumps late in her long program to earn extra points. With Medvedeva recovering from a fractured foot, Zagitova could be the gold medal favorite.

Sui Wenjing, pairs skating, China

Nicknamed "the martyr" for her willingness to try risky moves in practice and not complain if she fell, she and partner Han Cong won the world title last year. The technical difficulty of their programs is dazzling, and they've pulled off quadruple twist lifts and throw quadruple salchows in competition. They've been together more than 10 years, a constancy that's lamentably rare among American pairs skaters.

U.S. women's hockey team

Team USA won the first gold medal awarded in women's hockey, at the 1998 Nagano Games, but archrival Canada won the next four. This U.S. team, coached by former Kings goaltender Robb Stauber, is the swiftest yet and boasts a mobile defense, but the U.S women had difficulty scoring goals in exhibition games. Look out for Canada forward Marie-Philip Poulin, who scored twice against the U.S. in the 2010 gold medal game and twice in the U.S.-Canada rematch at Sochi in 2014.

Mark Bjoergen, cross-country skiing, Norway

A versatile and mentally strong skier who is known for strong finishes, Bjoergen is poised to become the all-time top Olympic medalist among female Winter Games athletes. She has won 10, as did retired cross-country skiers Raisa Smetanina of the Soviet Union and Unified Team, and Italy's Stefania Belmondo. Bjoergen, 37, can also pass the all-time Winter Olympics medal record of 13, held by Norwegian biathlon legend Ole Einar Bjoerndalen.

Kaillie Humphries, bobsled, Canada

Humphries teamed with Heather Moyes to make Olympic history when Humphries piloted their sled to a second straight gold medal at the 2014 Sochi Games, becoming the first women to repeat as Olympic champions. A third consecutive triumph is a strong possibility. Humphries, 32, narrowly leads the women's World Cup standings over Elana Meyers Taylor of the U.S., who will slide with Lauren Gibbs.

Men who could be breakout stars at the Winter Olympics

PYEONGCHANG, South Korea – Wondering which athletes will become stars at the 2018 Winter Olympics? Here are 10 to keep an eye on in the men's competitions.

Nathan Chen, figure skating, United States

Chen is a two-time national champion who made history by landing five quadruple jumps during his long program at the 2017 U.S. championships. He did it again this year to remain undefeated for the season. Do the math and it adds up to a potential gold medal in Pyeongchang, where the 18-year-old who lives and trains in Southern California will try to wow judges with his athleticism.

Yuzuru Hanyu, figure skating, Japan

It might sound funny to say the defending Olympic gold medalist and two-time world champion has something to prove, but Hanyu can't be entirely satisfied with his last performance in Pyeongchang, where he lost to Chen in the 2017 Four Continents Championships. One more thing — the 23-year-old has been struggling with an ankle injury. Gracenote, a sports analytics firm that predicts medal winners, has him taking the silver.

Shaun White, snowboarding, United States

The Michael Jordan of his sport, White dominated the halfpipe with gold medals in 2006 and 2010. His fourth-place finish at the Sochi Olympics four years ago left some wondering if the sport had passed him by. Now the 31-year-old from San Diego has qualified for his fourth Games — and announced his presence with authority — by scoring a perfect 100 at the recent U.S. Grand Prix.

Mikael Kingsbury, freestyle moguls, Canada

The silver medal that Kingsbury won in Sochi was merely a jumping-off point — since then he has become the most dominant man in moguls history. Before a recent second-place finish, he had gone undefeated on the World Cup circuit for a full year. Now the Quebec native, who always competes in a T-shirt with the logo "It's good to be the king," figures to start a new winning streak in Pyeongchang.

Kamil Stoch, ski jumping, Poland

Only two men in the history of ski jumping have swept the prestigious Four Hills tournament with victories in all four events. Stoch is one of them, having completed the rare feat in Bischofshofen, Austria, last month. That puts the 30-year-old in good shape to defend both the normal and large hill events that he won in Sochi four years ago.

FEATURED RANCHES FOR SALE

36,460 deeded acres in Sandoval County, New Mexico – The terrain varies from high elevated ponderosa pine mesas to lower wide valley bottoms. This scenic ranch has the perfect "land of enchantment" charm. The property is well watered with extra nice improvements and the ranch receives over 100 elk permits. One-half minerals. $550 per acre.

10,666 acres located in Terrell County, Texas – This outstanding hunting ranch is located north of Sanderson. Big Canyon runs through the ranch creating a combination of limestone hills, ridges, valley bottoms and upland plateaus. The ranch features both mule deer and whitetail, and in recent years, elk have migrated to the property. Classified Minerals. $525 per acre.

25,785 acres located in Ector County, Texas – This ranch is located near Penwell in the heart of the Permian Basin. It has proven frac sand reserves on the east side of the Monahans Sandhills. The property has access off I-20 with extensive railroad frontage. There are three new Carrizo Aquifer water wells. Sand test results, survey and other pertinent information is available. Because of the proven frac sand availability, this ranch has great upside potential. $1,047 per acre.

14,393 acres located in Pecos and Brewster Counties – The terrain varies from wide, productive valley bottoms to rocky limestone hills and mountains. Extensive brush work has been done on portions of the ranch and approximately 4,000 acres are established to Klein grass pasture. Excellent hunting, including elk. Classified Minerals. $650 per acre.

7,705 acres located in Pecos County, Texas – The terrain is gently sloping on portions of the ranch, transitioning to rugged limestone hills; divides and deep canyons. The property is well known for producing large whitetail and mule deer, with elk now common. Classified Minerals. $550 per acre.

Brochures available on all ranches.
