Parks Department to begin interviews

A Texas Parks and Wildlife Department official said he hopes to choose a superintendent for the Big Spring State Park by June 1 or soon thereafter.

"I've marked it (the job opening) as ASAP," said Tom Palmer, regional supervisor for the department. He said he would begin interviewing by May 21.

"I would hope to have somebody in there by June 1, but that's not always the way these things work," Palmer said.

He said some local applicants seemed to be good prospects for the job.

City puts Cuadra on hold temporarily

After a request from Howard County court officials, facing a backlog of files, the city of Big Spring will stop filing complaints against Gil Cuadra, whose company MPG Management owns the dilapidated Settles Hotel.

Cuadra has appealed the nearly 100 complaints to county court, and court employees have to open a file each time a case is filed.

Cuadra is scheduled to appear in County Court May 17.

The city has cited Cuadra for failure to complete renovations and repairs to his building, which reportedly does not meet city codes for safety. City Attorney Mike Thomas has recommended that the city continue to prosecute Cuadra, but file no further cases until the pending actions are complete.

Changing voting places too difficult

A federal mandate determines the voting places and district lines for school board elections. Ron Logbank, assistant superintendent for Big Spring Independent School District, said to board members during the special meeting called May 7. He said changing the voting places to be more congruent with the city council election voting locations would take, "not weeks or months, but years. But this discourages people from voting and gives the voting judges a great deal of anguish," Logbank said.

Al Valdez, board member said, "They (the voters) come in and we tell them, 'you have to go down there, and over there' and they say, 'I'm going home'."

The board members voted unanimously to accept the recent election in which incumbents Donnie Baker and Ford Farris were re-elected.

The regularly scheduled board meeting will be May 9 at 5:15 p.m., and new board officers will be elected. Approval of full-day kindergarten and a resolution to change the method of financing the tax appraisal district will also be considered at that meeting.

U.S. aircraft fired on over northern Iraq

DOHUK, Iraq (AP) — Allied troops today awaited the go-ahead to move into the provincial capital of Dohuk, in what would be a major expansion of the allied military effort in northern Iraq.

U.S. officials, meanwhile, said an American warplane came under anti-aircraft artillery fire while flying over northern Iraq, but it was not hit.

Tuesday night's anti-aircraft fire was the first direct attack on a U.S. aircraft since allied troops crossed into Iraq last month to aid Kurdish refugees.

Thousands of those refugees boarded trucks, buses and farm wagons to head home today, leaving behind spartan border camps and the graves of many who did not survive the ordeal of their trek into the mountains.

The Kurds' migration back to northern Iraq was an apparent indication the U.S.-led occupation of the area is reassuring the refugees, who fled after Iraqi troops in March crushed their rebellion following the Persian Gulf War.

In southern Iraq today, the U.S. pullout neared completion. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said during a visit to the U.N.-controlled buffer zone on Tuesday that he expected all U.S. troops to be out within 48 hours.

It was not immediately clear who shot at the A-6 Navy bomber. The pilot reported he came under fire about 20 miles northwest of Mosul and another time about six miles west of Dohuk, said a U.S. spokesman at Incirlik air base in southern Turkey.

The plane was not damaged and the pilot was not injured, according to a statement from Incirlik, headquarters of the allied relief operation for the Kurdish refugees.

U.S. aircraft continued today to fly over Dohuk, 25 miles south of the Turkish border. Allied troops on Sunday reached the outskirts of Dohuk but had not yet moved into

Council inducts newest members

By DEBBIE LINCEUM

The Big Spring City Council inducted three new members and postponed an Energas rate increase request at its meeting Tuesday.

Before a crowd of more than 75 citizens, newly elected members Mark Sheedy, Ladd Smith and John Coffee recited the oath of allegiance and took their seats on the council.

Meeting chairperson Pat DeAndrea, serving in the absence of Mayor Max Green, recognized the three-year service of Sidney Clark and Gail Earls, both unseated along with Chuck Condray in Saturday's election.

Energas district manager Mike Mancil requested approval of a 6 percent increase in the company's rates. He said the increase would cost the average customer 22 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, or $27 annually.

City Manager Hal Boyd said city Secretary Tom Ferguson had attended a meeting of officials from other cities who are considering hiring legal counsel to review the request. The council approved a 90-day suspension of the increase request and set a public hearing on the issue June 11.

In other business, the council:

- Took no action on a pending lawsuit against the city filed by car repair shop owner James Leffler and his wife Dorothy. The Lefflers allege the city's decision that their business violated zoning ordinances was reached unfairly.

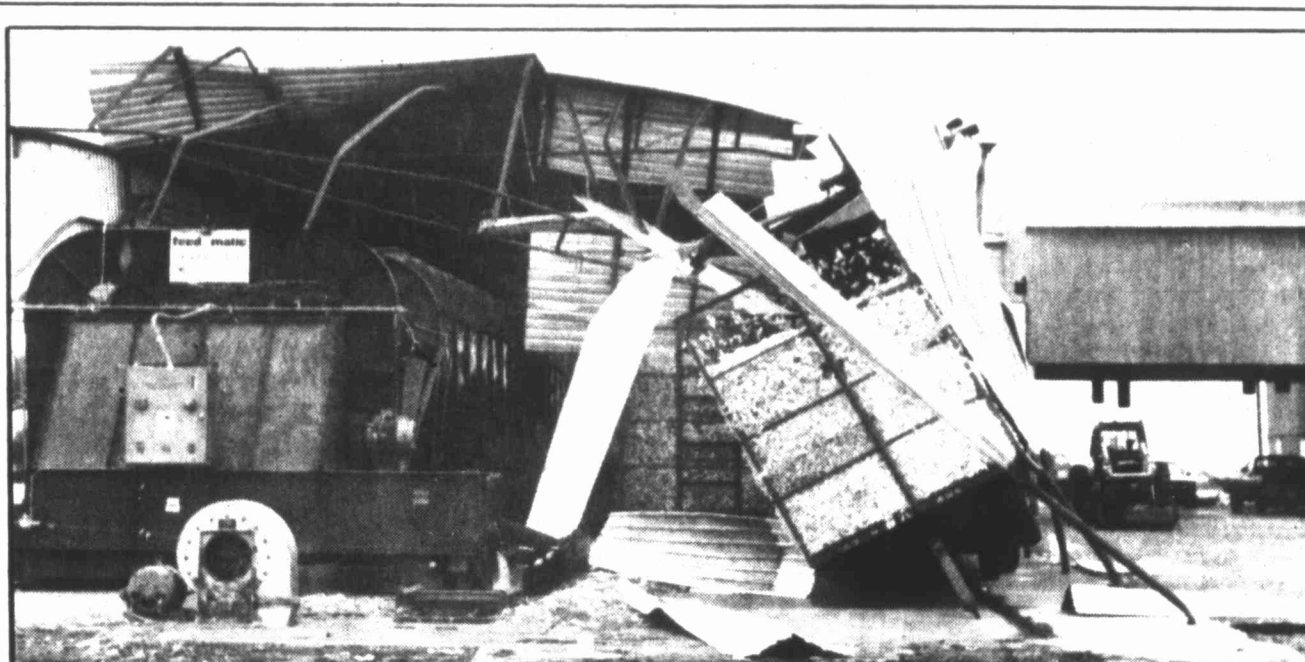

After two executive sessions and testimony by attorneys for the complainants, as well as neighbor Roger Coates, the council reconvened and adjourned immediately.

City Attorney Mike Thomas said he advised the council against taking action, which would have sent the decision back to the planning and zoning commission for reconsideration. He said the city has a chance of winning the case in court on a technical issue.

Thomas said Coates and his attorney, who support closure of the Leffler business, are "interested parties" in the case and might testify when the case goes to district court.

- Authorized the city manager to enter into an agreement with the Big Spring Family YMCA for the exchange of property. The YMCA wanted to purchase an adjacent piece of land, currently occupied by the Big Spring Fire Department

Storms cause damage in area

Tornado-force winds destroyed a gin and other structures near Ackerly in Martin County as thunderstorms passed through several area counties Tuesday night.

"It didn't just sound like a train, it sounded like a big train," said a motorist whose car windshield was broken by hail when she passed near a funnel cloud.

Over a two-hour period, thunderstorms with hail as large as 2 1/2 inches struck parts of Dawson, Borden, Howard, Martin and Mitchell counties, said Ron Brown of the National Weather Service office at Midland.

During this time, the weather service received numerous sightings of potential tornadoes moving to the southeast from Dawson County, said Brown.

About 8 miles west of Ackerly, the Flowergrove Co-op Gin was struck by what workers at the facility said could only have been a tornado.

Rows of cotton trailers were twisted and overturned. A large sheet-metal building was demolished, scattering metal for hundreds of yards around.

Wesley Peacock, who works with his brothers at the gin said, "The water-pump house is just gone. You see those round tanks over there, we don't even know where those came from. There is an over-head diesel storage tank out there that's no more."

Hail in the Vealmoor area was as large as 2 1/2 inches.

A farmer at the gin said, "I counted 42 (power line) posts the thing blew down." Across the road, workers from Cap Rock Electric Co-op were replacing the downed power line poles. Martin County Judge Bob Deavenport said he had received reports of as many as 60 power line poles downed.

A short distance to the northwest, Brandon Oaks was surveying the damage at his home. "I wasn't here when it happened. When I got here, half the barn was in my house," he said.

Further away, his cousin Burton Oaks was home alone when the tornado-like winds passed through. "I thought the house was going to go. I came out to look and there was so much dust it was hard to see, but I looked up and saw pieces of sheet metal, it seemed like a mile in the air just turning like this," drawing a slow circle in the air with his finger.

"We put a module builder (a heavy piece of farm machinery) down in a caliche pit and it was turned over," said Oaks.

There were numerous reports of damaged farm machinery and of an electrical fire at a drilling rig about 1 mile south of Ackerly, authorities said.

No injuries were reported, according to Brown and Deavenport.

Deavenport said that the American Red Cross was sending a representative to Ackerly to survey the damage and determine if Red Cross services will be needed.

Meanwhile, there were no reports of damage in Mitchell County Tuesday night, the Mitchell County sheriff's office and Colorado City police said.

Some hail near Westbrook was reported, said Sheriff Wendell Bryant. "From what I'm told there was marble-sized hail, but it never got to Westbrook. It went around," he said.

COLORADO CITY — Representatives of the Texas Water Commission and Fina Oil & Chemical Co. plan to meet Friday in Austin to discuss ownership of a polluted former refinery site here of which Fina still owns a part.

Present and past owners can be liable for cleanup of the site, a task which could cost "millions," said Brent Wade, a field investigator with the commission office in San Angelo.

"No one wants to or will turn their back on the sites," said Big Spring Fina plant manager Jeff Morris. "We want the right thing to occur for Colorado City."

The old refinery is suspected by commission officials to have caused petroleum leakage into the Colorado River, which feeds Lake Spence, a source of drinking water for 500,000 people in West Texas, including Big Spring.

Petroleum continues to leak from a bank into the river near old U.S. 80, but at least 90 percent of it is stopped by two concrete culverts installed April 23, days after the leak was discovered.

• OIL SPILL page 8-A

COLORADO CITY — Vegetation particles have built up on the surface of the Colorado River due to four booms stretched across the river surface to prevent leaking petroleum from going downstream. The booms also prevent the buildup from dispersing, a Texas Water Commission official said.

College students to graduate Friday

By MARSHA STURDIVANT
Staff Writer

The largest graduating class in the history of Howard College is scheduled to receive diplomas or certificates in special ceremonies Friday.

"This is the largest we've ever had," said Lisa Carnes, secretary to the vice president of instruction and graduation ceremony coordinator.

The 45th annual commencement begins at 7:30 p.m. in the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum, followed by a reception for graduates and their families. Students from Howard College's Big Spring campus, the Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf and the Lamesa campus will be honored at the ceremony and receive official recognition of degrees completed.

Carnes said the prospective list of graduates is about 180. The official list will not be available until grades are checked next week, she said.

The students will receive diplomas or certificates in the ceremony. In the past, honors students were recognized with certificates or small gifts, but Carnes said this year honor graduates will be recognized as they walk across the floor.

David Sprinkle, who is receiving an associate of arts and an associate of science in math and English degrees, and Regina Williford from SWCID, will speak to the assembly. Williford is receiving a certificate for dental laboratory technician.

The ceremony and reception should last about two hours, Carnes said. Howard College food service is catering the reception.

The awards convocation for the SWCID campus is scheduled for 2 p.m. Friday. Students will be recognized for academic excellence, outstanding student organizations and outstanding student workers and volunteers, said Shelley Massey, secretary to the dean of students.

The SWCID Presidential Award honoring the outstanding student of the year will be presented. The American Legion will present citizenship awards to two students, and the SWCID leadership award

D-FW airport to resume suit

GRAPEVINE (AP) — The Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport board says it will resume a lawsuit against the city of Irving after four months of negotiations failed to bring about a settlement regarding two proposed new runways.

The airport in January put the lawsuit on hold while trying to work out the dispute over airport expansion. The lawsuit, which challenges the city's claim to zoning authority over the airport, is set for a May 24 hearing in state district court in Dallas.

In March, Irving city officials offered to stop fighting expansion of a runway on the airport's east side if construction were moved 1,000 feet to the west, shortened 2,500 feet and designated for arrivals between 7 a.m. and 10 p.m.

That proposal was unacceptable to the airport.

"After several weeks of intense review, it became apparent that this proposal was wholly unacceptable," airport spokesman Joe Dealey said Tuesday.

House amends animal cruelty bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The House gutted a bill designed to make it easier to prosecute animal cruelty offenses, and amended it to provide a new defense for farmers and ranchers who may violate the animal cruelty law.

The amendment would "allow Texas farmers and ranchers to intentionally and knowingly transport livestock in a cruel manner. I don't think the people of Texas want that type of activity authorized," said Rep. Elliott Naishtat, bill sponsor.

Current law makes it a Class A misdemeanor, punishable by up to a year in jail and a $2,000 fine, to intentionally or knowingly transport or confine an animal in a cruel way.

Judge dismisses Houston charges

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — A judge dismissed both charges against pop singer Whitney Houston stemming from a fracas in which she allegedly punched a man and threatened his life.

District Judge Lewis Paisley also Tuesday dismissed assault charges against Miss Houston's brother, Michael.

The prosecutor, Norrie Wake, had recommended dismissal of assault and terroristic-threatening charges against her because he said contradictory evidence would have made a conviction impossible.

Four injured in Houston helicopter crash

HOUSTON (AP) — Four people remain hospitalized today after a helicopter crashed into an east Houston apartment complex, demolishing two units and narrowly missing a nearby junior high school.

Police said the Bell Jet Ranger helicopter apparently had engine trouble as it flew over the Wheatley Plaza apartments. The copter had been chartered from Southern Bell Helicopters Inc., of Houston, to shoot an industrial videotape over the area.

"It sounded like a bomb," said Sheila Gardner, who lives in the building behind the crash site. "I'm past frightened. I'm not going back into that . . . place."

Ms. Gardner's neighbor, Sheila Myers, 22, who is six months pregnant, ran out of her second-floor apartment as the helicopter crashed through the roof, landing over a stairwell between Ms. Myers' apartment and one next door.

"She ran out the front door as it was coming in her house," Ms. Gardner said.

The helicopter did not crash through to the ground floor of the 16-unit publicly subsidized complex.

"Luckily, it was supported by the walls between them," said police spokesman Sam Price.

Ms. Myers, who suffered cuts in the accident, was taken to Ben Taub Hospital for observation. Spokesman Roger Widmire said she and the fetus appeared to be fine. Her two other children, who were in school at the time of the accident, spent the night with friends Tuesday.

Also injured in the accident were pilot, Donald McDavid, 57; Dalton Knight, 37; and Duke Newton, 24.

Newton, who was doused in gasoline and suffered a broken nose and facial scrapes, walked away from the crash. "We were flying and then went up suddenly like a rollercoaster ride," he said. "I thought I was dead for sure."

"I could hear the motor sputtering," said complex resident Leonard McMillan. "I saw the pilot trying to get altitude. I saw the propellers stop and go through the ceiling."

McDavid, who was trapped beneath the wreckage for more than 30 minutes, suffered head injuries. He was flown by LifeFlight helicopter to Hermann Hospital.

Ethics legislation halts preaching activities

DALLAS (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service has confirmed what a lot of people have thought about the tax collectors for years — you can't be a man of God and work for the IRS.

The Rev. Max Butler, one of at least seven Dallas-district IRS employees who may be forced to leave their part-time pulpits because of zealous enforcement of new ethics legislation.

"I'm being denied a sacred right. It's against the First Amendment," Butler, a tax collector and pastor of DeSoto Foursquare Church, a 20-member Pentecostal congregation that meets in his home, said Tuesday.

The Ethics Reform Act of 1989, which took effect Jan. 1, prohibits federal employees from accepting honoraria, defined as payment for appearance, speech or written article.

"I think Congress goofed. They went too far. They weren't going after your standard file clerk, but because of how the statute was written, that's who's getting hurt."

John Vanderstar

Butler said he was told last week he could no longer preach or write religious tracts because of the legislation.

"As it's interpreted, the law is incomprehensible to the human mind," Thomas Fishell, a tax examiner from Garland who faces losing work as a Southern Baptist minister, told the Dallas Times Herald.

The legislation, passed after House Speaker Jim Wright resigned in an ethics scandal, was designed to keep high-ranking officials from obtaining fat appearance fees, publishing contracts and the like.

The IRS and other agencies have been targeting rank-and-file employees, many of whom speak or write to help feed their families.

"I think Congress goofed," said John Vanderstar, an American Civil Liberties Union lawyer who last week challenged the statute in a Washington, D.C., federal court. "They went too far. They weren't going after your standard file clerk, but because of how the statute was written, that's who's getting hurt."

Butler, 42, moved to Dallas in 1982 from Texarkana after entering the ministry because of what he calls an "out-of-body" experience.

He has worked part-time for the IRS since 1988. He earns a $300 monthly housing allowance for his moonlighting work in the pulpit.

The IRS has asked all employees in the past few weeks to request permission to continue their outside activities. Butler became the first minister to be rejected last week.

Officials with the National Treasury Employees Union expect at least six other ministers in the Dallas district, which includes most of North Texas, to be turned down. Their alternatives: quit preaching, quit accepting money for preaching or quit the IRS.

BPP chairman Granberry resigns

AUSTIN (AP) — The chairman of the Board of Pardons and Paroles, which has been under fire for paroling inmates convicted of murder and other violent crimes, has resigned.

James Granberry criticized lawmakers Tuesday for using "Band-Aid" solutions to the state's crime problem, and urged Gov. Ann Richards and lawmakers to make comprehensive changes to the criminal justice system.

Granberry, a former Lubbock mayor, was appointed in 1989 to a six-year term on the board by then-Gov. Bill Clements, who named him chairman last year when the board was merged with other criminal justice agencies.

Granberry said he wanted to return to private life and was not resigning under pressure.

In recent weeks, the Pardons and Paroles Board has been criticized for paroling several high-profile murderers.

One of those paroled was Leonardo Ramos Lopez, who served 16 years of a life sentence for the 1971 execution-style slayings of three sheriff's deputies in Dallas.

But board members have defended their actions, saying that they were following parole laws written by the Legislature, and that because of prison overcrowding they are forced to parole 150 inmates per day.

"The parole board is the saddle horse for all politicians who want to ride it. Whenever something goes wrong, the politicians blame the parole board," Granberry said.

Granberry called for Richards to bring "some semblance of order to the criminal justice system in Texas."

"Long-range planning is desperately needed," he said.

Webster will retire as CIA director

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush announced today that William Webster is retiring as director of the Central Intelligence Agency, praising Webster for proving "the value of an intelligence organization that is professionally directed."

Webster, a former federal judge, was director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation before taking the CIA post following the swashbuckling tenure of Iran-Contra figure William Casey.

Bush, just returned from an initial test for his hyperactive thyroid, summoned reporters to the White House briefing room for the surprise breakfast-hour announcement and a subsequent news conference.

The president did not announce a successor. He was asked about Robert Gates, deputy national security adviser and a longtime CIA official, and described him as a "worthy man."

Bush had praise for Webster, who appeared with him. Bush, himself a former CIA director, said, "I hate to see him go."

Webster said he was leaving "a healthy organization."

A former appellate and District Court judge and U.S. attorney in St. Louis, Webster, 66, served as FBI director for nine years before being named head of the CIA. Webster said that later this month he will have served 26 years in federal posts. He did not say what he would next.

State House supports abortion pill

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — New Hampshire, the state that gave George Bush his second-largest margin of victory in 1988, could also become the state that gives America the abortion pill.

Although Bush made it clear during the election and after that he opposes abortion, the New Hampshire Legislature has broken with him on that issue in blocking the adoption of anti-abortion laws.

Now the state House has passed a resolution asking businesses thinking of testing France's abortion pill in the United States to come to New Hampshire to do so.

The Senate plans to vote on the issue later this month.

"We are the state that gave George Bush the second-highest percentage in the last election," said Robert Spurrier, spokesman for Planned Parenthood. "But this resolution is in keeping with the kind of conservative state New Hampshire is. We don't believe in having government interfere in personal, private decisions."

The resolution's advocates say that while the measure doesn't carry the force of law, they hope it will spur more tests on the pill, RU486.

Clinic for Kurds in Iran forced to close

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — The only private U.S. relief group with a medical clinic for Kurdish refugees in Iran fled the country after Iranian guards harassed volunteers and held a gun to a nurse's head, a doctor says.

The team from AmeriCares, based in New Canaan, left Iran abruptly Saturday after a week, said Dr. Curtis Bakken, who headed the group. He is a physician at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn.

Bakken, two nurses and a paramedic were surrounded by armed guards each day after opening the clinic April 26 outside a huge refugee camp near Bukan, about 25 miles from the Iraqi border.

The team managed to keep the clinic open a few hours each day despite daily harassment but gave up when a guard put a gun to a nurse's head and said he could "kill her in a minute and not face any consequences," Bakken said.

"We decided we just couldn't practice medicine under these conditions," Bakken said.

The staff abandoned the $500,000 clinic and $2 million worth of medicine, food and other supplies, said Steve Norman, an AmeriCares spokesman.

Bakken said some 200 Kurds were treated each day, most of them Iranian suffering dehydration and malnutrition.

"We almost had a riot" when the clinic closed, he said.

"The Kurds were just beside themselves trying to get in to see us," he said. "Moms crying, grabbing onto us, asking us to please see their children."

An estimated 1.5 million Kurds fled to Iran after Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's forces crushed a rebellion. At least 335,000 escaped to the border areas between Turkey and Iraq.

AmeriCares sent five plane loads of supplies to Iran without incident, Norman said.

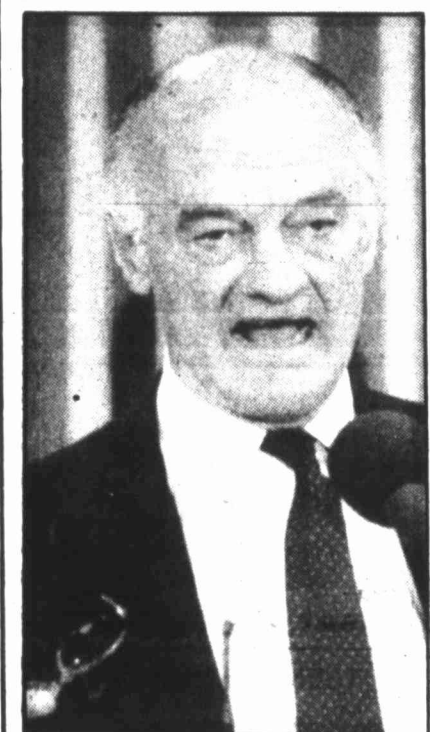

But the moment the clinic opened, two men in suits accompanied by armed guards showed up, he said. They ordered the clinic shut down, even though other Iranian officials had authorized it, Norman said.

Bakken said the armed men appeared to be Iranian Revolutionary Guards. He said the civilian security officials accused the Americans of working for the CIA.

An AmeriCares worker spoke with a local governor and was assured the clinic could stay open, but the guards returned the next day, Norman said.

The guards searched the Americans' belongings six times and allowed them to go only to the clinic and to their quarters, he said. The guards drove the team to the clinic each day; sometimes the 3-mile trip took three hours, he said.

Bush tested for overactive thyroid

DR. BURTON LEE

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush this morning underwent the first test on his overactive thyroid gland, which doctors blame for an irregular heartbeat that returned briefly on Tuesday evening, his spokesman said.

The heartbeat returned to normal within a few minutes, and the president was administered an anti-coagulation drug called coumadin, press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said this morning.

The president told reporters at a news conference that doctors had advised him, due to the thyroid problem, to ease up on his physical activity for a few days.

Bush's doctors said he underwent a background scan at Bethesda Naval Hospital early today, then swallowed a diagnostic dose of radioactive iodine before leaving the hospital.

Dr. Burton Lee, the president's physician, said Bush will return Thursday for another scan.

WASHINGTON — William Kennedy Smith, nephew of Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., walks down a Washington street Tuesday, Palm Beach, Fla., police said Tuesday they will recommend that rape charges be filed against Smith in the alleged March 30 assault on a young woman at the Kennedy estate in Palm Beach.

William Smith: One of most inconspicuous Kennedys

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — As part of the nation's most prominent family, William Kennedy Smith was one of its most inconspicuous members.

That changed Easter weekend when a 29-year-old woman accused Smith of raping her at the Kennedy estate. She had accompanied him home for drinks after meeting him, his uncle Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and a cousin at a nightclub.

Smith, a 30-year-old medical student at Georgetown University in Washington, has denied any wrongdoing. But police said Tuesday they believed the woman's account and were recommending Smith be charged with rape.

The Smiths, though powerful within the Democratic dynasty, were publicly the least recognized. While the children of President Kennedy, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy and Edward Kennedy grew up in the spotlight, the four Smith kids were spared scrutiny.

David Horowitz, co-author of "The Kennedys: An American Drama," said that in the late '70s and early '80s, Smith was not one of the "Hyannisport Terrors," as those of the 28 Kennedy cousins who frolicked and partied at bars and clubs on Cape Cod, Mass., were known.

Smith's mother is Jean Kennedy Smith, the youngest of Rose and Joseph P. Kennedy's five daughters.

He grew up in New York City, where his father, Stephen, managed the family's fortunes — and misfortunes. The elder Smith was regarded as the "fixer" in the family, a master of damage control during crises such as Sen. Kennedy's accident at Chappaquiddick. He died last summer.

William Smith attended the elite and rigorous Collegiate School in Manhattan, where his cousin John Kennedy Jr. also was a student. Smith transferred to the Salisbury School in Connecticut and graduated in 1978.

Smith once said that he had vague memories of his slain uncles, "but the strongest childhood impression I have are of funerals."

Mark Mirkin, 32, a West Palm Beach lawyer who was Smith's roommate at Duke University in Durham, N.C., remembered him as confident but unassuming.

"I'll never forget the day he walked in the room," Mirkin said. "I thought he had these Kennedy-like cheekbones. But he just said he was Willie Smith. Then he hauled in his luggage and I saw his middle name on it. I said, 'With those cheekbones and that luggage, you could pass for a Kennedy.' Then he said he was one."

"He's very into the family," Mirkin said. "Once I had some friends up who were sort of conservative and they made a little fun of the Kennedys and Willie snapped right back at them."

Smith is close to Sen. Kennedy. "After what he's gone through publicly and privately, I'm in a state of awe for the man," Smith said in 1980.

William Chafe, a former professor of Smith's at Duke, was skeptical of the rape accusation.

"The alleged incident is completely inconsistent with what I knew of him," Chafe said. "He was someone who I think really wanted to devote his life to helping people."

ACCORDING TO THE AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY, ONE OUT OF TEN WOMEN WILL DEVELOP BREAST CANCER SOMETIME IN HER LIFE TIME. IT IS CURRENTLY ESTIMATED THAT OVER 37,000 WOMEN DIE EACH YEAR AS A RESULT OF BREAST CANCER. NINETY PERCENT OF BREAST CANCERS ARE DIAGNOSED BY WOMEN OR THEIR PHYSICIANS FINDING A LUMP IN THE BREAST. WOMEN WHO ARE DIAGNOSED WITH A LUMP LARGE ENOUGH TO FEEL HAVE A 50 PERCENT FIVE YEAR SURVIVAL RATE. A WOMAN WHO IS DIAGNOSED AS HAVING BREAST CANCER BY MAMMOGRAPHY, BEFORE A LUMP CAN BE FELT, HAS A 97% FIVE YEAR SURVIVAL RATE AND A 90% TEN YEAR SURVIVAL RATE. THE COST IS ONLY $60.00 + $4.50 S&H. A MAMMOGRAM CAN DETECT A CANCER THIS SMALL, • EVEN BEFORE IT CAN BE FELT.

Neutralizing of park name

The historical revisionists are back at work again, this time trying to remove the name of Gen. George Armstrong Custer from Montana's Custer Battlefield National Monument. Critics think the Indians who defeated Custer's 7th Cavalry in the Battle of the Little Bighorn got a historical scalping. We don't share the currently fashionable opinion that everything paleface did was bad and everything Indian did was good, but in this case the critics have a point.

Although born in Ohio, Custer grew up downriver in Monroe, Mich. He graduated from West Point at the bottom of the list in 1861. During the Civil War, he fought in almost every battle waged by the Army of the Potomac, from Bull Run to Lee's surrender. In the latter part of the war, he commanded the Michigan Brigade, the cavalry unit that had the highest casualty rate in the Federal Army. Custer had 11 horses shot out from under him and was responsible for blocking the Confederate cavalry at the critical Battle of Gettysburg.

Custer went West after the war with a reputation as a heroic cavalry commander. Although a brilliant battalion commander, he did not have the head for higher command of combined forces. Tasked with the mission of rounding up Indians and returning them to their designated lands in 1876, he underestimated the Indian force (poor intelligence) and split his forces into three parts (bad tactics) before the Battle of the Little Bighorn. His cavalry unit was overwhelmed and annihilated.

There is an initiative in Congress, led by Rep. Ben Nighthorse Campbell, D-Colo., the only native American in the House, and Rep. Ron Marlenee, R-Mont., to have Custer's name removed from the battlefield park site. They also want a monument erected to Native Americans, and they don't like the use of the word "massacre" in describing the 1876 event. The proper way to view what happened, they say, is that the Indians repelled an invading army.

We agree with their point about the site's name. The other historic battlefields are not named for the generals who won or lost. Gettysburg is Gettysburg, not Meade (the winner) or Lee (the loser). Normandy has not been renamed for Gen. Eisenhower nor Kuwait for Gen. Schwarzkopf, though both were winners of historic proportions.

Naming the Bighorn site for Custer reflects the anti-Indian feelings of a bygone era. More recent histories show that Custer's last stand was hardly the heroic act that frontier lore made it out to be. It would be fitting to rename the site in a more neutral fashion. The event was a shared experience, with individual glory and tragedy on both sides.

Program from Austin unveils nature of Spam

It was my mother who first introduced me to Spam. I'm not certain exactly how old I was. Seven or eight.

But it certainly was long before my first sexual experience. Before I finally had sex for the first time, I'd eaten enough Spam to fill the back seat of a '57 Chevy, where initial sexual experiences often occurred when you could pay 50 cents to go to a drive-in and ignore a Doris Day movie.

Wasn't it Oscar Levant who said of Doris Day, "I knew her before she became a virgin?"

How I veered off on sex and Doris Day in a discussion of Spam, I'm not sure. There's certainly nothing sexy about Spam.

Of course there wasn't much sexy about Doris Day, either. I think it was Rock Hudson, her frequent co-star, who first said that.

Anyway — Spam. It appeared on my dinner plate one evening, bearing the appearance of having been battered and fried.

"What is this?" I asked my mother, pointing to the mysterious meat on my plate.

"Spam," my mother answered. "What is Spam?" was my next question.

"Just eat it," said my mother. I ate it. It wasn't too bad. It certainly was better than liver.

I had fried Spam often after that. But it wasn't until I was older that I realized why my mother hadn't explained Spam the first time she served it to me.

She didn't know. That was back before the government made food manufacturers put the ingredients of what they were selling on the containers in which they came.

Or, if the ingredients in a can of Spam were listed, nobody ever thought to look at them.

We were more truthful in those days. If our friendly grocer stocked it, it had to be OK to eat.

I stopped eating Spam after I left my mother's home. None of my ex-wives ever cooked it, and when I wasn't married, I always ate out, and never came across Spam on a restaurant menu. So I never did learn Spam's ingredients.

Lewis Grizzard

We were more trustful in those days. If our friendly grocer stocked it, it had to be OK to eat.

But then I picked up a newspaper the other day and there was a story about Spam from Austin, Texas.

The story, as a matter of fact, was about the 16th Annual Spamarama in Austin, described as a "semi-organized pageant of athletic, culinary, musical and satirical stimuli."

One of the things that occurred at the 16th Annual Spamarama was a Spamput — who could throw a big glob of Spam the farthest. They do some weird stuff in Texas.

But the most important paragraph in that story was the one that finally explained to me exactly what is Spam, are Spam, or, be Spam:

Chopped pork, pork shoulder, with ham meat added, salt, water, sugar and sodium nitrite.

So, there you have it. Spam unveiled.

It's pig and sodium nitrite, which — I seem to remember from chemistry class — you can also find in jet fuel.

I need to end this with some sort of tie-in with Doris Day and sex, but I can't think of anything.

All that sodium nitrite in all that spam I ate in my childhood may have permanently damaged a few of my brain cells.

Bush's health problems spotlight Quayle

Walter Mears

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dan Quayle's is the dilemma of an understudy who needs to prove himself but can't audition.

Quayle was better off politically before it seemed he might be cast briefly in the only vice presidential role that really counts.

When President Bush's doctors decided Monday that he need not undergo treatment requiring anesthesia for his irregular heart beat, it eliminated the prospect that Quayle would temporarily assume the powers of the presidency.

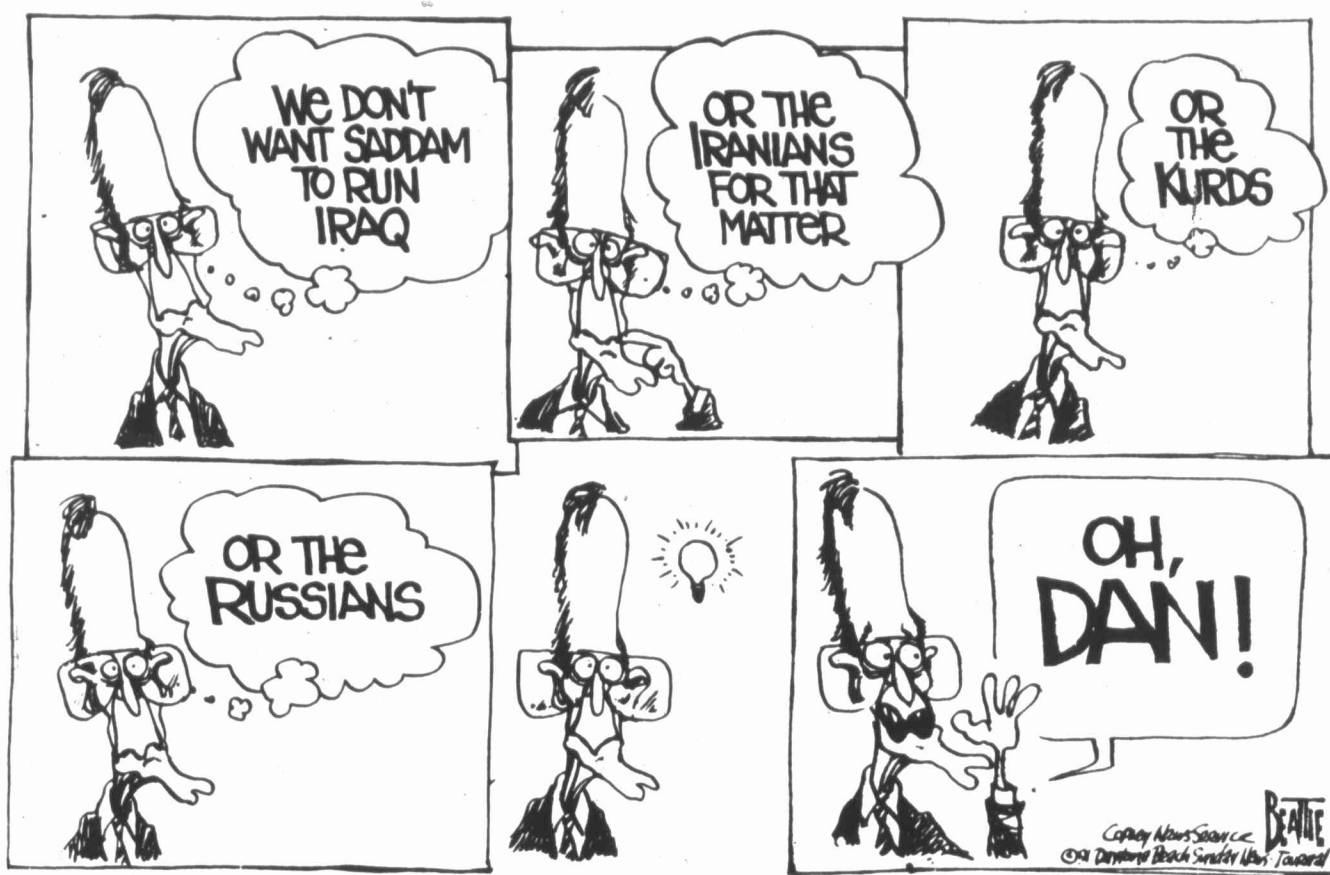

But Bush's weekend hospitalization has revived the Quayle factor as a political issue, and Democrats looking toward 1992 took instant aim at the vice presidential half of the Republican team.

The more people think about Quayle as a potential president by succession, the more political trouble his opponents can make about him as Bush's designated running mate next year.

There has seldom been much mileage in vice presidential candidates as campaign issues because the voters concentrate on the men at the top. Preparing for an uphill challenge to Bush, Democrats hope to make Quayle an exception and a vulnerability.

They were talking about it long before Bush's heart problem sent him to the hospital for treatments that are continuing at the White House. But there wasn't much they could do while Quayle was conducting the routine duties he's been assigned by Bush. That, and presiding over the Senate, is what vice presidents do for a living. They serve, one of them said, as standby equipment.

Quayle has been making headway at those tasks. His vice presidential approval ratings have improved in the public opinion polls. Bush, who is publicly committed to keep Quayle on his ticket in 1992, has said repeatedly that the vice president is doing his job well.

"Hey, he has my full support, always has," Bush said Monday morning as he returned to the White House. "And he's doing a first-class job."

But when the pollsters ask about Quayle's qualifications to be president, the ratings remain negative, with no sign that voters are warming to the possibility. Indeed, according to an April poll conducted for Time magazine, 67 percent say Quayle is not qualified to be president.

Those are the misgivings Democrats want to tap. Sen. John Breaux, D-La., said when people heard that Bush was ailing, the next thought was of Quayle as a possible successor.

"People are tremendously worried about that," Breaux said.

Gov. Bill Clinton, D-Ark., who may seek to challenge Bush next year, said the president is going to have to tell the American people whether Quayle is the person best qualified to succeed him if necessary.

Democrats have been making arguments like those ever since Bush surprised them, and Republicans too, by choosing Quayle to run with him in 1988. They hammered the Quayle factor throughout the campaign, without noticeable impact on the outcome — Bush trailed by 17 percentage points in the summer polls, but won by 8 at the polls in November.

Bush has said flatly that Quayle, 44, will be his choice again in 1992; his press secretary said Monday there's been no change in that commitment.

What has changed, at least for the present, is Quayle's option of keeping his profile low and proving himself in the routine work of the vice president as he prepares for the next campaign and tries to overcome controversy and ridicule that linger from the last one.

While Bush's health remains a concern, so will the question of succession and of Quayle's ability to take over. Should that persist, it could lead to Republican pressure for a change in the ticket next time. Not all of Quayle's detractors are Democrats. But there's also time for the weekend worry to subside, for the 66-year-old president to get back to the full vigor that made succession a remote prospect until Saturday.

Dwight D. Eisenhower had a heart attack the September before his 1956 re-election campaign, and intestinal surgery in June. But his health was not a major issue in the fall campaign. Nor was his vice president, Richard M. Nixon, who was a figure of some controversy.

Eisenhower tried unsuccessfully to ease Nixon off the ticket, suggesting a Cabinet post instead. "He said it was too bad that my popularity had not grown more," Nixon recalled in his memoirs.

According to biographer Stephen E. Ambrose, Eisenhower told an associate that people thought Nixon, then 43, was immature.

Walter R. Mears, vice president and columnist for The Associated Press, has reported on Washington and national politics for more than 25 years.

Court loses its collective temper

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Supreme Court lost its collective temper last week. Instead of preserving its usual majestic image, the court took on the aspects of a petulant monarch in a tin-plate crown. This kind of thing does the court no good.

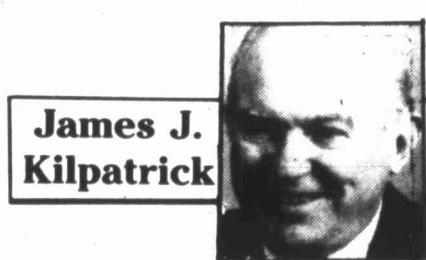

What happened? A convict in Washington state, John Robert Demos Jr., got under the thin skin of Chief Justice William Rehnquist. His Royal Eminence then rounded up five other members of the court, and together the Big Six fashioned a new rule to deter the filing of "frivolous" or "malicious" pleadings. Petitioner Demos won't be petitioning any more.

The Demos case marked the third time in two years that the court has fretted publicly about the supposed burden of petitions filed "in forma pauperis," i.e., in the manner of poor people. Since this term of court began in October, more than 3,200 pauper cases have been filed, an increase of roughly 20 percent over the preceding term.

In order to file as a pauper, without paying a $300 docketing fee, a petitioner must swear that he has no significant assets. The overwhelming majority of such pleas come from prison inmates, desperate for any avenue that might lead to a new trial. Probably 99 percent of the petitions are instantly recognizable as legally worthless.

Poor petitioners rarely succeed in leaping over the hurdles of high court protocol. In 1957 convicted kidnapper Caryl Chessman won reconsideration of his death sentence. In 1963, in a landmark case, Clarence Earl Gideon won the right of an indigent defendant to have counsel in a felony trial. These are exceptions.

Far more typically the court

brushes off the "in forma pauperis" petitions with a terse order denying review. That was what had happened repeatedly to a pestiferous fellow named Jessie McDonald. He had been convicted in Tennessee of obtaining title to an automobile under false pretenses. He felt he had been the victim of a bum rap. Between 1976 and 1989 he "relentlessly" bombarded the high court with 73 petitions for appeals, rehearings and stays.

The annoyance thoroughly irritated Rehnquist & Co. Over the strong objections of Justices Brennan, Marshall, Blackmun and Stevens, the majority two years ago directed the clerk to deny any further indigent petitions from McDonald asking for an extraordinary writ. Brennan criticized his colleagues for an "unwise, unprecedented and potentially dangerous course." He predicted the court under Rehnquist would take further steps to discourage a poor petitioner.

Brennan was an excellent prophet. Four months ago the Rehnquist Six jumped on Michael Sindram of Maryland. This litigious fellow began his career as a plaintiff by filing a malpractice suit against a doctor who had done minor surgery on his fingernail. He sued a garage that had done repair work on his car. When he was fined $35 for speeding, he vowed an eternal pursuit of justice. As an indigent he filed 42 petitions and motions in the Supreme Court. Thirteen of these were virtually identical petitions for rehearing.

On Jan. 7 the court ran out of patience. Terming Sindram's motions "both frivolous and abusive," the Big Six banned him from filing further indigent petitions for extraordinary relief. It was against that background that the court last week jumped on John Robert Demos Jr.

Rehnquist's position is that frivolous filings waste the court's time and reduce its efficiency. This is doubtless true, but it is also true, as Justice Marshall has said, that the inconvenience to the court is "greatly exaggerated." The preparation and mailing of rejection notices is no trick at all.

Marshall also has pointed out a major inconsistency: The court's new rule, formally adopted last week, applies only to certain petitions filed by poor applicants. Well-to-do petitioners also file frivolous pleadings.

"In closing its doors today to another indigent litigant," said Marshall, "the court moves ever closer to the day when it leaves an indigent litigant with a meritorious claim out in the cold. And with each barrier that it places in the way of indigent litigants, and with each instance in which it castigates such litigants for having 'abused the system,' the court can only reinforce in the hearts and minds of our society's less fortunate members the unsettling message that their pleas are not welcome here. I dissent."

And Justice Kilpatrick, meaning me, joins in that dissent. Petulance and impatience will become the highest court in our land.

COAHOMA — High school industrial technology students, under the direction of teacher Mark McLean, attended the Technology Student Association state competition in Waco last weekend.

Freshman Wayne Cox was awarded first place at the state contest for a wooden table he constructed.

Craig Jackson, also a freshman, was awarded best in division, first place and certificate of quality for a construction model in the state competition.

Junior Ross Jackson won three second place awards at the state contest for pencil drawings. Ross won best in division, two first place awards and one third place at the regional contest for drawings.

Clark Coskey, freshman, was awarded best in division and first place for a wooden bowl in the state contest.

Junior Mike Mendez was awarded first place at state competition at Waco for a computer drawing. Mike received a best in division and first at the regional contest for graphic solutions tech systems, and two third place awards for written tech systems and computer drawings.

Senior Ned Hildebrand placed first for a wooden cabinet and first for a computer drawing at the state contest. He also won second for a pencil drawing. At regionals, Ned was awarded a best in division and first place for graphic solutions construction systems.

David Taylor, senior, placed third at the state competition for a computer architectural drawing. David placed second for computer architectural drawing at regionals and third for a wooden bowl.

Junior Tommy Roper placed first at state for a wooden bowl.

Terry Martinez, freshman, was awarded two second-place ribbons for pencil drawings at state. At regional, Terry won best in division and first for drawing, and third in drawing.

It's a good time to become a nurse

By MARSHA STURDIVANT
Staff Writer

National Nurses Week is this week, and now is a better time than ever to become a nurse in Texas, officials say.

Area hospitals will have special celebrations honoring their nurses, and with sign-on bonuses, scholarship programs and monthly stipends, becoming a nurse becomes a very lucrative as well as worthwhile occupation.

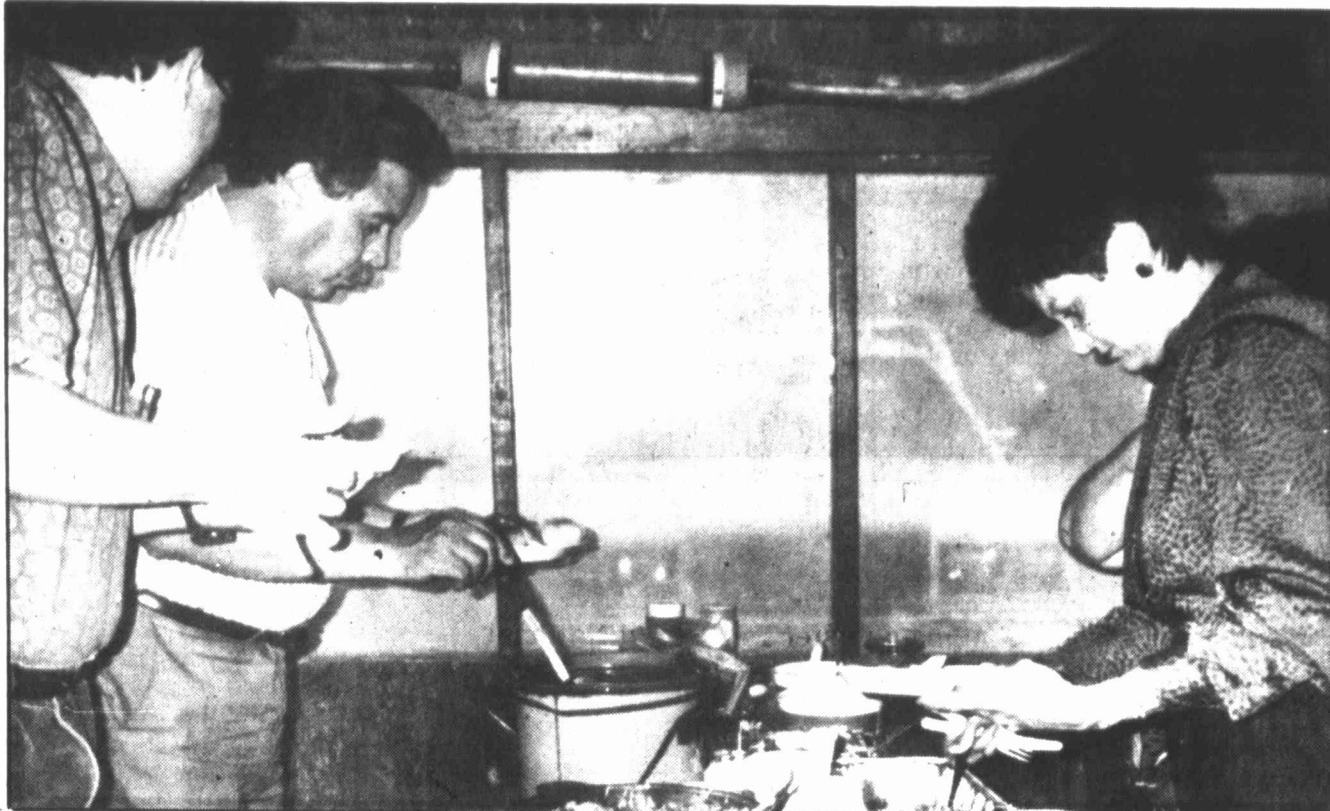

"It's an unbelievable job market and a super job opportunity for anyone who will go into the nursing field right now. But it's not an easy preparation. But if they get in and do well, they can be back in the job market much faster (than other students)," said Harvey Rothell, dean of counseling at Howard College.

Scenic Mountain Medical Center, the Department of Veterans Affairs Medical Center, and the Big Spring State Hospital offer scholarship programs for nursing students. The programs provide financial assistance for students accepted into nursing school, with an agreement to work for the hospital for a specified length of time after graduation.

Shirleen Brown, director of nurses at Scenic Mountain, said three nursing programs at the hospital provide financial support for students. The basic program provides books, tuition, fees, registered nurse review board fees, state board fees, graduation fees and uniform allowances for students after completing the basic prerequisites for the degree.

The second and third programs are for licensed vocational nurses who choose to return to school to receive a registered nurse degree. Brown said. One program finances the last year of nursing school, while the other supports an LVN on staff at Scenic Mountain while completing the accelerated registered nurse degree at Howard College.

The VA Medical Center provides scholarships for nurses, occupational therapists and physical therapists through the Health Professional School Program, said

Honoring 18 graduating nurses and celebrating National Nurses Week, the American Nurses Association District 24 gathered for a covered-dish dinner at Big John's Feed Lot Tuesday. The restaurant supplied the main dish, and members of Big Spring's nurses association brought prepared foods to round out the occasion. The local chapter was formed in the 1930s.

LeeAnn Morrow, personnel specialist. The program offers assistance in the final year of an associate nursing degree, the third and fourth year of a bachelor's degree and entry level master's degree programs.

Students must be accepted into their particular program and be attending an accredited school or university, Morrow said. The assistance is offered on a one-to-one basis, meaning for every year of financial aid, the student agrees to work within the VA system for one year, she said.

"They can't be obligated for service under any other program," she said. The student must meet application requirements and interviews, she said.

The state hospital offers similar nursing scholarship programs, according to Barbara Brooks, coordinator of staff development. But this hospital offers an additional program, educational leave, that provides up to eight hours of paid leave for student employees to attend classes, she said.

"We have real problems recruiting nurses. It's a critical problem because with state guidelines we can't offer sign-on bonuses. It takes a certain kind of person to work in psychiatry," she said.

The American Nurses Association sponsors National Nurses Week, and Leslie Champlin, communications specialist in Kansas City, Mo., said this year's theme is "Nurses Care For America."

"Overall, this is to recognize the excellent care nurses provide patients in and out of institutions," she said.

Champlin said a 10 percent or higher vacancy rate shows a serious shortage, and current data available within her organization shows hospitals nationwide have a 12.7 percent vacancy rate.

Figures for the West Central Region, made up of Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas, show a 13.3 percent vacancy rate for hospitals, she said.

"Yes, you do have a problem. Nursing homes show a 19.6 percent vacancy rate, and home health care providers show a 17.5 percent vacancy rate," she said.

She said the studies conducted by the ANA, including demographics and statistics, show there are more nurses working now than ever before, but because of advanced medical technology and the "sicker in, sicker out" trends toward hospitalization, more nurses are needed.

"Patients are being sent home with high tech equipment, with less recovery time in the hospital. It's the growing demand as opposed to the dwindling supply," she said, indicating that enrollment in nursing programs dropped but is expected to increase in the next two years.

House Speaker doubts need for anti-harassment guidelines

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas S. Foley is questioning a plea by women employees of Congress for new written guarantees against sexual harassment, saying they're not necessary.

"You know that there's absolutely no justification of any kind for any office tolerating in any way the sexual harassment of its employees," Foley said recently.

"And it shouldn't be necessary to make a signature testation (affirmation) to that."

Foley, D-Wash., was responding to a campaign by the Capitol Hill Women's Political Caucus to get each member of Congress' backing for new guidelines restating and emphasizing opposition to sexual harassment.

"Every congressional office is responsible for ensuring a work environment free from sexual harassment," the guidelines say.

Foley, however, said he didn't think he wanted his name attached to that.

"I'm not sure I want to sign such a pledge because, in the end, the question seems to arise that a signature is necessary," he said.

Jean Brodshaug and Lisa Joy Zgorski, who head the caucus, said in a statement that "sexual harassment occurs on Capitol Hill, just as it does off the Hill."

They argued that because Congress exempted itself from certain civil rights and employment discrimination laws, each lawmaker should sign a pledge embracing guidelines barring sexual harassment.

The Capitol has been plagued by charges of sexual harassment in recent years. The House ethics committee was faced last year with complaints against then-Reps. Jim Bates, D-Calif., and Donald "Buz" Lukens, R-Ohio.

Pasta meals for families on the move

Celebrate the warm weather months with quick and delicious pasta meals that can be prepared in only twenty minutes. Made with the season's freshest vegetables, seafood and meats, and tossed with hearty American-made pasta, these healthful, time-saving dishes are perfect for weekly family meals or weekend entertaining. Pasta's versatility and convenience offers a variety of quick and easy meals that simply can't be beat!

For a weekend brunch or patio party, serve "Light 'N Easy Pasta and Fruit Salad," a delicious, tropical pasta salad that can be prepared while the pasta cooks. Simply combine cooked chicken, celery, pineapple chunks and mandarin oranges, with a light, tangy yogurt dressing and toss with cooked mostaccioli or other favorite pasta shapes. Garnish with toasted almonds for an added crunch and refrigerate until serving time for a colorful warm-weather pasta salad that adds a touch of spring to any table.

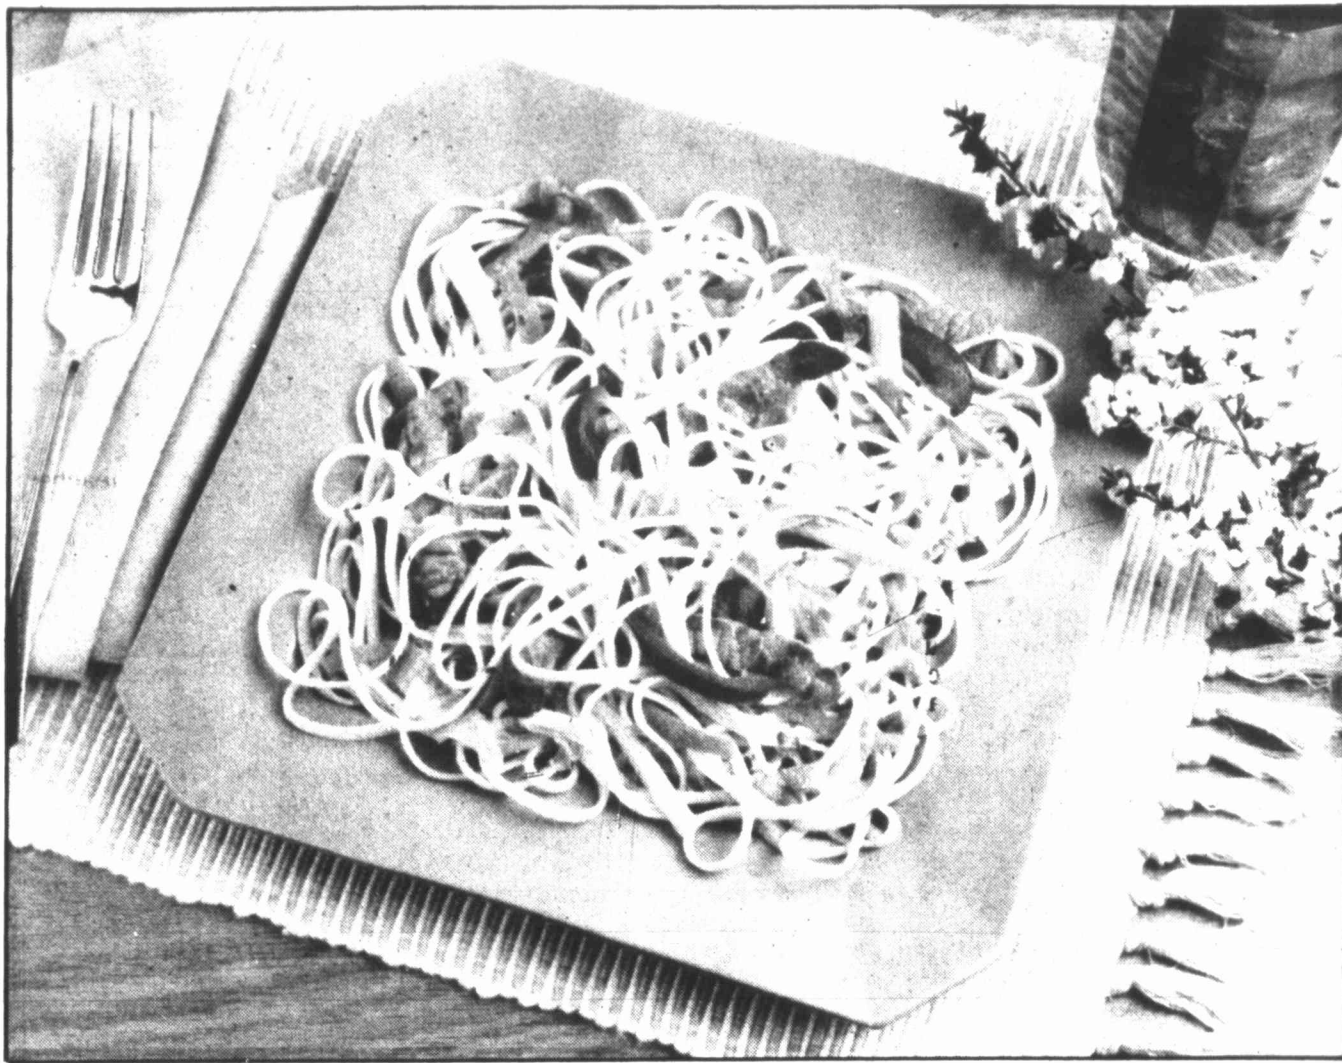

When late nights at the office leave little time for meal preparation, whip up "Linguine and Pork Stir-Fry," a speedy and easy-to-make skillet dinner that the entire family is sure to enjoy. Cooked linguine is tossed with browned pork tenderloin and stir-fried cabbage, onions, red pepper and carrots for a tasty meal that's perfect for last-minute company or late-night dinners. Store leftovers in the refrigerator and tuck in a pita for a quick and delicious lunch or weekend snack.

Entertain company during the warm weather months with "Spicy Noodles and Scallops," a one-pan seafood dish that can be prepared in minutes. Simply saute fresh broccoli and celery until tender-crisp, add fresh sea scallops, season with white wine and hot sauce and toss with egg noodles for a delicious meal that family and friends will enjoy throughout the season. Substitute your favorite pasta shape like fusilli or linguine for variety and a special added touch.

Spring and summer months are the perfect time to prepare quick and simple-to-prepare meals using the season's freshest ingredients and one of America's favorite foods — pasta!

LIGHT 'N EASY

PASTA AND FRUIT SALAD
2 cups packaged mostaccioli,

"Linguine and Pork Stir-Fry" is a delicious, simple-to-prepare dish that is perfect for last-minute dinners, unexpected guests and quick and easy lunches.

uncooked
1 1/2 cups chopped cooked chicken or turkey

1 cup sliced celery
1 (15-ounce) can pineapple chunks, drained reserving 2 tablespoons liquid

1 (11-ounce) can mandarin oranges, drained and halved
1 (8-ounce) container orange or peach flavored low-fat yogurt

1/4 cup toasted almonds, chopped

Cook mostaccioli according to package directions; drain. In large bowl, combine mostaccioli, chicken, celery, pineapple and mandarin oranges. In a small bowl, blend together yogurt and reserved pineapple juice. Toss with salad mixture. Serve immediately or cover and chill. Garnish with almonds. 4 to 6 servings.

Pasta substitutions: medium shells, elbow macaroni, wheels, spirals, or penne.

LINGUINE AND PORK STIR-FRY

1 pound packaged Linguine, uncooked

3 tablespoons vegetable oil

1/2 pound pork tenderloin, cut in thin strips

2 cloves garlic, minced

4 cups thinly sliced cabbage

3 or 4 thinly sliced green onions with tops

1 small red bell pepper, thinly sliced

1 large carrot, shredded

1 teaspoon salt

1/4 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes

Cook linguine according to package directions; drain. In Dutch oven or large skillet, heat oil. Add meat and garlic. Stir fry until meat is lightly browned. Add remaining ingredients, except linguine. Stir fry until tender. Add hot linguine; toss to mix.

Pasta substitutions: vermicelli, capellini, spaghetti or fettuccine.

SPICY NOODLES AND SCALLOPS

1 pound packaged egg noodles, uncooked

1/4 cup vegetable oil

2 cups fresh broccoli flowerets

2 stalks celery, diagonally sliced

1 clove garlic, minced

1 pound raw sea scallops

1/2 cup dry white wine

1/2 teaspoon bottled hot sauce

3/4 cup grated Romano cheese

1 tablespoon grated orange peel

Cook egg noodles according to package directions; drain. Heat oil; add broccoli and celery. Cook, tossing until tender crisp. Slice scallops in thirds (bay scallops can be used whole). Add to vegetables and cook until opaque, about 1 to 2 minutes. Add wine, basil and hot sauce; heat through. Toss scallop mixture with hot noodles and Romano cheese. Garnish with orange peel. 4 to 6 servings.

Pasta substitutions: Fettuccine, fusilli, linguine or spaghetti.

Quick and easy kid pleasers

NEW YORK (AP) — Here are some quick and easy summer snack ideas that sure to keep the group happy.

"OUT OF THE PARK"

POPCORN
8 cups popped popcorn

1/4 cup butter or margarine, melted

One 4-serving size package gelatin, strawberry, cherry or raspberry flavor

1 cup peanuts

Place popcorn in a large bowl. Add melted butter and toss to coat. Sprinkle with gelatin and toss again until evenly coated. Mix in peanuts. Makes 9 cups.

(Recipe from: Jell-O brand gelatin)

PITCHER'S MOUNDS

2 cups milk

One 4-serving size package chocolate-flavor instant pudding and pie filling

3 1/2 cups (8 ounces) frozen non-dairy whipped topping, thawed

One 16-ounce package chocolate sandwich cookies, crushed

Pour milk into a medium bowl. Add pudding mix. Beat with wire whisk until well blended, 1 to 2 minutes. Let stand 5 minutes. Stir in whipped topping and half of the crushed cookies.

To assemble, place about 1 tablespoon of the crushed cookies into the bottoms of eight to ten 8-ounce paper or plastic cups. Fill cups about three-fourths full with pudding mixture. Top with remaining crushed cookies. Chill. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

(Recipe from: Jell-O brand gelatin)

MAGIC PIE

42 chocolate sandwich cookies

2 tablespoons margarine, melted

1 quart chocolate ice cream

1 pint vanilla ice cream, softened

1/2 cup prepared whipped topping

Chocolate fudge sauce

Finely roll 22 cookies. Mix 1 1/4 cups cookie crumbs and margarine; press onto the bottom of a 9-inch pie plate. Stand 14 cookies around the edge of the plate, pressing lightly into the crust.

Scoop chocolate ice cream into balls; arrange in a prepared crust. Coarsely chop remaining six cookies; sprinkle over ice cream scoops. Spread softened vanilla ice cream evenly over cookie layer; freeze 15 minutes.

Top with a layer of remaining cookie crumbs, pressing gently into the ice cream. Freeze several hours or overnight. To serve, garnish with whipped topping and fudge sauce. Makes 8 servings.

"Low-Cal" Cajun

"Low-Calorie Cajun Cooking," by Enola Prudhomme, $17.95 (Hearst Books-William Morrow & Co.)

This book features unlikely Louisiana treats from chef Paul Prudhomme's younger sister, also a restaurateur. After years of high-calorie, high-fat Cajun food, Prudhomme says, she began experimenting with ingredients, keeping all the rollicking seasonings and getting rid of cream and butter.

It can't get any fresher

By ERIC TALMADGE

Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — The latest in food fables in Japan is to eat fish live — flounder that flap around on the plate, finger-length eel swallowed raw. And remember, if the shrimp don't dance, send 'em back.

"The food moves around a lot — that's the whole idea," said Sunao Uehara, a chef at Chunagon, a well-known seafood restaurant in Ginza, one of Tokyo's most expensive nightspots.

Shrimp, flounder and lobster are by no means the only energetic entrées on the trendy diners' menu. Other attractions include firefly squid, loaches, sea bream and young yellowtail.

Waiters bring the fish in wiggling, their eyes and mouths moving, then quickly slice open the midsection and gut it, so the fish is ready to eat. Like sushi or sashimi, the slices are dipped in a mixture of soy sauce and horseradish.

Lobster is served belly up, with an incision made along the length of the tail so diners can get at the meat. Small squid and eels are eaten whole.

Shrimp are featured in a dish called "dance," and are expected to do just that.

"We're packing them in," boasted Uehara, who specializes in preparing live lobster.

Though some Japanese express misgivings about eating live food, it is a concept that fits in easily with the emphasis on freshness and au naturel presentation upon which Japanese gastronomy is based.

Toshio Fujii, an X-ray technician from a stretch of Japan's western coast where discerning seafood eaters are the rule, said he prefers to eat his fish live because "they don't come any fresher."

"My 7-year-old daughter likes them, too," he said. "But eels are kind of gross. I had them in my beer one time. Too many little bones."

The recent resurgence in the popularity of live food in Japan — practiced for centuries by hungry Japanese fishermen — is part of a larger "gourmet boom" fueled by Japan's ever-growing economy, according to one industry official.

"People have more money to spend on food and are looking for better-tasting, more unusual dishes," said Tatsuo Saegusa, spokesman for the Japan Food Service Association, which represents several large restaurant chains. "The rediscovery of live fish and shrimp is definitely part of that."

Live fish tend to be expensive. Lobster courses at Chunagon range from a basic $44 meal to the top-of-the-line $120 dinner.

"The expense just makes it all the more appealing," said Fujii. "The more it costs, the better we expect it to taste."

Saegusa said there are reasons besides trendiness and flavor that account for the popularity of live seafood. "It's a performance. It's like the cook is saying, 'Here, I am giving you a life.'"

A spokesman for the Japan Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals said the group doesn't consider the practice to be cruel.

"Eating live fish is part of our unique Japanese culinary culture," said the spokesman, who requested anonymity.

"Westerners eat dead fish, we eat them live. It's just a cultural thing," he said. "We are not being cruel, we want to have the best-tasting fish. If the fish were prepared simply for show, like for TV, we would be very much against that."

Lifestyle

That's her problem

DEAR ABBY: I am a 36-year-old woman with a wonderful husband and a terrific 4-year-old son. I also have a very immature, unmarried 21-year-old stepdaughter, "Dolly," who is expecting a baby any minute. The baby's father disappeared when Dolly announced her pregnancy. She wants to keep the baby, and I have been getting a lot of pressure from my husband's family who think the logical place for Dolly and her baby is with her father and me.

Abby, I don't want Dolly and her baby moving in with us because Dolly has always been lazy and irresponsible and I'd have to take care of the baby. Also, I had planned on returning to college in the fall when our son will be in school full time.

I feel strongly that since Dolly decided to have sex, decided not to have an abortion and decided to keep her baby, the baby is her responsibility — not mine. Need I tell you how unpopular my decision has made me with my husband's family? He does not blame me, but his mother and sisters think I am selfish, cruel and unreasonable — although they did not offer to take her in. How do you vote, Abby? Sign me ... THE WICKED STEPMOTHER

DEAR "WICKED": I'm voting with you. There is no reason why you should postpone going back to school because your husband's daughter decided to keep her baby. Dolly is old enough to accept responsibility for her actions and decision. And she's lucky to have a grandmother and aunts who are so concerned about her welfare, because if she's as immature as you say she is, she'll need all of their assistance in learning to shoulder the emotional and financial responsibilities that go along with single parenthood.

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to "Overtaxed," the couple who was trying to find a clergyman to quietly bless their spiritual bond — while the IRS would consider them to be still in a "singles" tax bracket — was both inaccurate and unkind. Wanting to have the church sacrament of matrimony without the IRS's unspeakable tax penalty for married persons is not "crooked," Abby. It is reasonable and moral. It is also easily achieved in Texas.

As a Texas lawyer and church member, I sympathize with your reader. "Holy matrimony" and "legal marriage" are not the same thing. There are thousands of Christian clergymen in most denominations who consider their Christian function more important than their governmental one, and the two are unrelated. They will not require a state marriage license, nor will they report the ceremony to the state, since they are performing a sacrament involving only the couple, God and the church.

If the couple desires a legal marriage, after living together and establishing themselves as a married couple, in time, they are indeed legally married by common law. In Texas, such a marriage need not be recorded, yet both parties and their children enjoy all the legal rights of a formal marriage before a judge. (They should, of course, not lie on their tax returns.)

Dear Abby

If either of these arrangements hurts the feelings of the folks at the IRS, too bad. They weren't invited to the wedding, and wouldn't have sent a gift if they had been invited. The government loses nothing but its chance to encourage and reward "living in sin."

New company plans opening in C-City

By BARBIE LELEK

Texas Yarns and Fibers, a newly developed company, is preparing to set up shop in Colorado City. If all goes as planned, a textile mill will be placed on 105 acres north of Colorado City and in its initial phase will employ about 80 people. When all phases of operation are complete the mill could employ up to 1,000. Maggie Compton, local CPA, is spearheading the project, which she has been involved in for two years. Governor Richards has shown interest in the project and will possibly be conversing with Mrs. Compton soon about the project.

The deserving employees of the CISD. A special memorial plaque was presented to the family of the late Barbara Clifton. Mrs. Clifton was long-time cafeteria supervisor at Kelley Elementary. Several retirees were also honored with a plaque. Those include: Carolyn Weaver, Dorothy Fowler — Plan A; Bobbie Swank — High School registrar; Virgie Goodlett — middle school aide; Bonnie Crites — Hutchinson lunchroom; Jerry Reynolds — high school principal; Wilma Reynolds — second grade teacher; Louise Phillips — lunchroom supervisor at middle school; Charles Upton — high school biology.

Service pins were presented for five, ten, fifteen, twenty and twenty-five years of faithful service. Only one twenty-five year pin was presented this year, going to cafeteria supervisor, Christine Cooley. This pin was decorated with a genuine diamond. The twenty year pins having a emerald-like stone were presented to Minnie Godina — middle school lunchroom, and Anita Reyna — Hutchinson secretary. The fifteen year pins having a sapphire-like stone were presented to Jeneal Chambers — assistant tax collector; Brenda Johnson — first grade teacher; Linda Mathis — P.E. teacher at middle school; Alice Silva — custodian at the administration office, and Ronney Conner — high school world history teacher, who received a tie tac. Those receiving the ruby-like ten year service pins were Orphie Conner — middle school teacher; Connie Davilla — Kelley lunchroom; Linda Gardner — middle school secretary; Emma Godina — Kelley Elementary teacher; Rita Hardegree — fifth grade teacher; Teresa Lemonds — first grade teacher; Leona Lewis — high school lunchroom supervisor; Margaret Rees — Hutchinson teacher; Vickie Rees — superintendent's secretary. Five year service pins with no stone were given to Leah Daves — Kelley Elementary teacher; Helen Espinoza — custodian; Mary Gaona — Kelley Elementary lunchroom; Connie Hudleston — middle school teacher; Leslie Perkins — fifth grade teacher; and James Owens — maintenance supervisor received a tie tac.

Toast to Broadway is success

If you did not have the opportunity to catch "Another Toast To Broadway" at the Colorado City Playhouse, you missed out on a good thing. The show was comprised of players from Colorado City and the Sweetwater Little Theatre Group and was directed by Frank and Gloria Swindle. The show contained many humorous songs and skits to delight the audience. The Sweetwater Municipal Band was said to have given an outstanding performance.

A new arrival!

Some of my readers may have noticed that I did not have an article last Friday. Due to the excitement, my husband forgot to mail my article in. That excitement was the birth of our second child, Tamara Michelle Lelek. She was born at 5:27 p.m. April 24 and weighed 9 lbs. 7 1/2 oz. and was 20 inches long. Her big sister, Terah Beth, is probably the most excited of anyone.

Calendar

TODAY

• The City of Big Spring Clean Team will be working in district 4 through Friday. If you have articles to be picked up, call the city at 263-8311.

• There will be a blood drive from 3 to 7 p.m. at the Coahoma Church of Christ.

• The Divorce Support Group will meet from 6 to 7 p.m. at the First United Methodist Church, room 101. Anyone welcome. Child care is available. Use the back entrance at Gregg Street parking lot. For more information call 267-6394.

• Co-Dependents Anonymous will meet at 7 p.m. at Scenic Mountain Medical Center, fourth floor.

THURSDAY

• Spring Tabernacle Church, 1209 Wright Street, has free milk and bread to give to the area needy from 10 a.m. to noon.

Sheriff's log

The Howard County Sheriff's Department reported the following incidents:

• A 37-year-old man was arrested for revocation of probation for drug possession. No bond was set.

• A 26-year-old woman was arrested for revocation of probation for burglary of a habitation and forgery. No bonds were set.

• A 22-year-old woman was arrested for selling alcohol to a person under 21 years old.

• Joe Rudy Rodriguez, 28, 1400 Dixie Avenue, was arrested on a Howard County Court judgment for driving while license suspended. He was sentenced to 20 days in jail and ordered to pay $314.50 in fines and court costs.

Court docket

Gregory A. Nelson Sr., 24, PO Box 634, was found innocent of indecency with a child by a 118th Judicial District Court jury Tuesday.

Testimony was heard by a 10-woman, one-man jury from half a dozen witnesses in the one-day trial. The jury deliberated more than two hours before returning a verdict.

Richard Joseph Nunez, 28, 710 N. Scurry Street pleaded guilty in 118th Judicial District Court to theft of service. He was given three years deferred adjudication and ordered to pay $1,066.22 in restitution. Nunez was accused of keeping a rental car beyond a one-month contract period.

Police beat

The Big Spring Police Department reported the following incidents:

• A 28-year-old man was arrested for driving while intoxicated.

• A 39-year-old man was treated at Scenic Mountain Medical Center after his vehicle was struck by another car near the intersection of Highway 80 and FM-700 late Sunday. Eligio Viasano was transported to the hospital by ambulance for treatment after his car was struck by that of Lawrence Bilberry, 39, Snyder. Bilberry, who was cited for failure to control speed and disregarding a stop sign in the incident, reportedly fled the scene and was apprehended by officers.

• A Howard College student reported the theft of an $18,000 album collection as well as $150 in compact discs and cassette tapes from his dorm room. Damage to the door was listed as well.

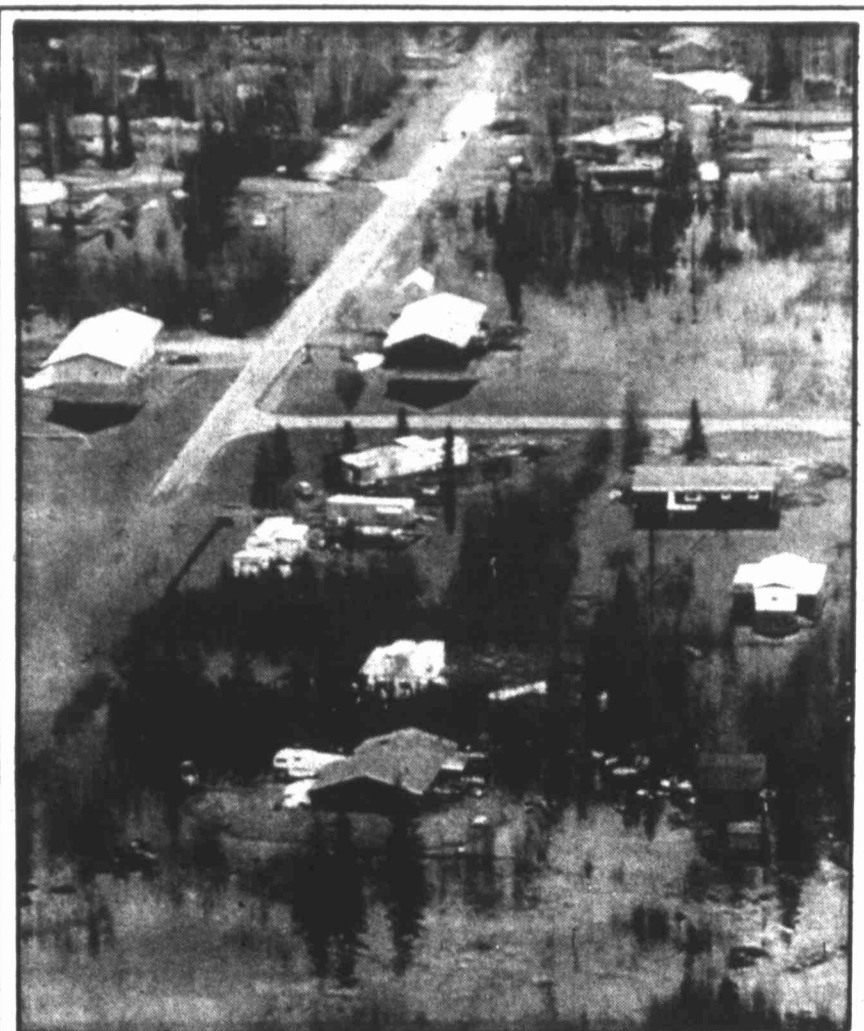

• A woman reported having been dragged behind a vehicle in the 2200 block of Main Street.

• A man living in the 300 block of Goliad Street reported someone entered his home and assaulted him, pushing him against the wall.

• Criminal mischief — damage to a door — was reported to a car parked on NW Sixth Street in front of a church.

• Unauthorized use of a vehicle was reported in the 2600 block of Wasson Road. A 1985 Buick Regal was reported taken without the owner's consent.

• A juvenile was reportedly assaulted at school. His parents said he had been hit and kicked, and there was evidence of bruises and a bloody nose, reports said.

Snowmelt flooding

NORTH POLE, Alaska — A record-level snowpack in Alaska has turned into record flood waters as the pack melted Tuesday in North Pole, Alaska. More than 200 homes in Fairbanks have been damaged and many families have been evacuated from low-lying areas between Fairbanks and North Pole.

Oil spill

Wade said. Also, four booms were put across the river the same day to stop oil from going downstream.

For at least a year before the leak was discovered, commission officials have known of petroleum seepage on the river bank, said commission investigator Ricky Anderson. A March 1990 report of a commission investigation said several seeps were found leaching into the river. They were within 20 feet of the "major" leak and the booms should stop petroleum from going downstream, Anderson said.

The investigation last year also determined there was a "blanket of petroleum waste" in the river bed from Highway 163 to the northern boundary of the old refinery site, which is about 1 mile long.

The refinery was built in the early part of the century and was owned by Col-Tex Refining until 1958 when it was sold to Cosden Petroleum Co., according to reports. Fina bought the plant in 1963 and dismantled it in 1968.

Fina has since sold parts of the site but still owns 132 acres, including one oil tank southwest of the petroleum leak, said Diane Perkins, an environmental specialist with Fina in Dallas. She said she was not sure how many acres Fina has sold.

The listed owner of 25 acres and three oil tanks that are near the leak is Terry Gould, whose last known address was in Corpus Christi, according to Mitchell County Chief Appraiser Mike Burt. Gould could not be reached for comment.

A title deed from the Mitchell County Courthouse showed that Gould should have understood when he purchased the land in December 1983 that there were waste products on it and the seller was not liable for cleanup or containment and claims for damages could not be made in the future.

However, that contract does not nullify state law that stipulates that companies that own land when pollution occurs, as well as current owners, are liable for cleanup, said commission spokesman Bill Colbert of Austin. "That's just between those two people. It certainly doesn't nullify state law," he said.

Spirit Transportation & Communications Inc., Mitchell County, sold the land to Gould. The same disclaimer was included in deeds passed down in purchases, in chronological order, from: Mesquite Country Resources Inc., Corpus Christi; the Colorado City Industrial Team Inc.; and Fina.

Gould has never paid any county taxes on the property, which is valued at $6,080 on appraisal rolls, according to a clerk in the county tax assessor-collector's office.

Meanwhile, commission and Fina officials are still trying to determine the extent of pollution in the area. Perkins said Fina began an assessment last week of the property it owned and expected it to be completed by September.

Commissioners, firefighters to meet

Members of the Big Spring firefighters' pension board have invited the Civil Service Commissioners to their meeting at 8 a.m. Thursday at the Central Fire Station.

The physical ability test administered to firefighters in training will be the subject of discussion between the two groups. As the result of a 1989 settlement of a federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission complaint against the city, changes were made in the testing process.

Because the test is now given at the end of the training period, current rookies Mark Settles and Kevin Gehrig were denied entrance into the pension fund until they completed the test.

Fraser opposes prison bill

By DEBBIE LINCEUM
Staff Writer

Texas Rep. Troy Fraser, R-Big Spring, said he has decided to vote against a bill that calls for the state not to accept inmates from county prisons in violation of a court order restricting overcrowding.

"I've been getting negative reports from the county judges... They've been calling me and telling me to oppose it," Fraser said. He said he had requested that they call to let him know their views.

The so-called "duty to accept" bill, HB-2798, may come up for a vote today or later this week, Fraser said.

Howard County Judge Ben Lockhart said he opposes the bill because it appears to allow "the state to just sit back like they are now and not build any more prisons." He said the counties would incur all costs of housing prisoners.

Fraser said the Texas County Judges Association has officially opposed the plan, which resulted from a lawsuit filed by some urban areas against the state. Urban areas have filed suit to regain money they say is owed them for housing inmates refused by overcrowded state prisons.

His concern, Fraser said, is that rural counties may be misled by the judges' association, which may be more loyal to the urban areas.

"I want to make sure they (the association) were telling our rural judges the whole story," he said. "I was told if we (passed the bill)... it would force settlement of the lawsuit."

Fraser said area judges appear to be worried about lack of reimbursement, but only urban areas such as Houston, a party to the lawsuit, are being reimbursed for inmate cost now.

He said his office had taken calls opposing the measure from Reeves, Borden, Upton, Winkler, Van Horn and Howard counties.

Council allows closing of street

By DEBBIE LINCEUM
Staff Writer

The Big Spring City Council has granted permission for a local promotion company to close a street but refused to allow that firm to sell alcoholic beverages at Comanche Trail Park.

Patt Rudd of Texas Productions described the company's plan to sponsor a series of Sunday afternoon Hispanic music concerts at the park's amphitheater. Council members Tuesday voted 4-1 against approval of a permit for serving alcohol at the events, with Pat DeAnda the only supporter of the permit.

Member Corky Harris said the problem seemed to be in the type of application filed by the Rudds. The application requested permission to "serve" alcohol, but the Rudds wanted to bring in a commercial firm to sell beverages during the concerts.

Harris said the permit, which requests alcohol be allowed in the amphitheater area every Sunday and some Saturdays April 28 through Sept. 16, is too broad.

Lanny Hamby, a resident of the Coronado Hills neighborhood near the park, said the concert series would disrupt the "family atmosphere" of the area. He said serving or selling alcohol would "create a dangerous situation out there."

He said traffic problems would make the area dangerous for the many children who live there, and noise would create a nuisance.

Harris and members Tim Blackshear, Ladd Smith and Mark Sheedy expressed concerns about liability, parking and the capacity of the theater, among other potential problems.

Raul Marquez, program director for a Hispanic radio program on KBYG, said the council should "work together" and make compromises to support the Rudds' plan.

Closure of some park streets during the concerts was approved by council. Park roads from Highway 87 to the "Y" and Belvedere Street as it enters Coronado Hills will be closed. Rudd said the company would hire monitors for parking during the entire event.

Assistant City Manager Tom Decell said the Rudds could meet with city officials to work out a detailed plan for the concert series, including issues of parking, sanitation and security. He said there is currently no ordinance that would authorize the sale of alcohol at the amphitheater, but the issue could be considered by the council and the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission.

In a related issue, Ray Lara of 7-Eleven narrated the showing of a short video he said was similar to an Hispanic television show the Rudds want to film in Big Spring. The company officials suggested the show, with entertainer Carlos Guzman as host, at a Monday press conference.

Steve's stuffMay 1 goes down as baseball's grand dayBy STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

I'll just call it Mayday. May 1 — it was baseball's biggest day, one baseball fans will always remember, the most dramatic day in the sport that has entertained Americans for more a century.

Rickey Henderson started it in the afternoon, becoming the all-time stolen base king by stealing number 939, breaking Lou Brock's mark.

The Milwaukee Brewers and Chicago White Sox kept it going into the early evening, playing 19 innings. Ironically it was the longest game in the American League since 1984 — when the same two teams went 25 innings.

Then there was Darryl Strawberry making history for his new team, the Dodgers. Strawberry tied a major-league record by striking out five times in Los Angeles' 9-3 loss at Montreal.

And then the grand old man capped it all off. Nolan Ryan made it a night to truly remember by pitching his record seventh no-hitter in the most dominating performance of his already amazing 25-year career.

It was sort of ironic that Ryan and Henderson were in the limelight on Mayday. On Aug. 22, 1989, baseball's all-time strikeout leader fanned the eventual stolen base champion for victim No. 5,000.

In the history of baseball, it's been rare for two really great events to occur on the same day. Recent events that rival Mayday are:

• Aug. 4, 1985 — Tom Seaver and Rod Carew. Seaver spoiled Phil Rizzuto Day at Yankee Stadium by pitching Chicago past New York for his 300th victory. Later that night in Anaheim Stadium, Carew singled for his 3,000th career hit.

• June 28, 1990 — Dave Stewart and Fernando Valenzuela. Oakland ace Dave Stewart pitched his first-career no-hitter as Oakland won at Toronto, 5-0. Later that night Valenzuela pitched his first no-hitter as Los Angeles beat St. Louis 6-0.

But, without a doubt, May 1 was truly awesome.

While on the subject of Rickey Henderson, someone the other day made the comment they didn't like Henderson because he boasted too much. They were especially ticked off when Henderson proclaimed "I am the greatest" after he broke Brock's record.

Stealing 939 bases is proof enough for me. He ran into the record books with amazing speed. He set the record in 1,154 attempts in 12 seasons. Brock needed 1,245 attempts over 19 years.

It took Ty Cobb 24 years to set the old American League record of 892 stolen bases.

Henderson got it in 11 years. Not only is he just a base stealer, he's a Gold Glove outfielder who finished in the top 10 last year in home runs, batting average, runs scored and stolen bases.

I say it ain't bragging when you can back it up.

While on the subject of Darryl Strawberry. It seems the Strawberry Patch hasn't bore fruit just yet.

Strawberry is getting paid $4 million a year by the Dodgers. Right now he's batting .214 and had one hit in his last 21 at-bats, which includes 12 strikeouts.

Last night in his first trip back to New York, he homered against his old team, but grounded out to end the game with the tying run on base in the ninth inning.

While on the subject of Fernando Valenzuela. It seems Fernando is still waiting on his call after being cut by the Dodgers this year.

Fernando goes to a small public field in Los Angeles every five days to pitch to keep his arm in shape in case someone needs a pitcher.

Steers win district championship

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

The Spring Steers have their first district baseball championship since 1982, and they didn't have to beat the Sweetwater Mustangs to get it.

The Steers' game with the Sweetwater Mustangs was postponed until today at 5 p.m. because of lightening. The game was called after five innings of play with the score tied 2-2.

The game will re-start at the top of the sixth with Sweetwater batting.

The Steers got help from San Angelo Lake View and Monahans to nab the 3-4A title. Lake View beat Andrews 1-0 in eight innings while Monahans beat Pecos 8-7. It created a three-way tie for second place between Andrews, Pecos and Monahans.

The three teams will have a coin flip tonight. The winner of that flip gets a bye. The other two teams will play Friday. The winner of that game plays the team that drew the bye Saturday to see who is the district runner-up.

The Steers-Mustangs game boiled down to a pitching duel between Freddy Rodriguez and Sweetwater lefty Tim Holsey. Rodriguez controlled the Mustangs with a good fastball. Holsey kept the Steers off-balance with a wicked, slow curve. Rodriguez had a two-hitter going, striking out three and walking two. Holsey had allowed five hits, fanning five and walking two.

Steers coach John Velasquez said he'll probably pitch Shane Myrick or Gerald Cobos today. He said he isn't concerned about getting career win number 100 today. "I'll start all my seniors today," said Velasquez. "They haven't played a lot this year but they've been very supportive. They deserve to start today."

Velasquez said that Holsey always pitches well against his team and added he didn't think Holsey would resume pitching today. "He (Holsey) pitched good against us in the tournament. He's kind of deceptive; his curve doesn't hang, it just drops. I doubt if they'll come back with him."

State bound!
Big Spring golfers ready for elementsBy STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

To use a horseracing term, Don Cook hopes his Big Spring High School golfers are good mudders.

The Steers, who survived high winds two weeks ago to place second in the regional tournament in San Angelo, face the possibility of more inclement weather Thursday when they begin play in the state 4A golf tournament at Morris Williams Golf Course in Austin.

Forecasts call for an increasing chance of thunderstorms through the weekend for the Austin area. But, rain or no rain, Cook said the Steers are ready for the state tournament, their first in 20 years.

"They're excited," Cook said. "They're one of only eight teams left playing golf in Class 4A. That's something to be excited about."

The Steers will tee off with the fivesome of seniors Eric Lusk and Bo Hodnett, juniors Charlie Garcia and Jon Sims and sophomore Kyle Plumlee.

Cook said that Hodnett and Plumlee, the newest members to the varsity, have been pleasant surprises this year.

"Bo came through for us at regional. He shot an 81 the second day, and played well enough for us to go to Austin," Cook said. "He's been a little erratic, but hopefully he'll be all right when we go to Austin."

Kyle had trouble in San Angelo, but I really think he'll play better in Austin," he added.

"He's proved he can play well, and (Williams GC) seems like the type of course he can play on."

Williams Golf Course, near the Austin airport, is a 6,636-yard, par-72 layout with four par five and four par three holes to go, along with 10 par fours.

Plumlee, the son of Big Spring ISD Assistant Superintendent Ron Plumlee, said he is trying to maintain an even emotional keel heading to the tournament.

"We've been pumped up," he said. "Practices have been relaxed, and we're trying not to get nervous. I think it'll hit me by the time I get to state. I think it'll be one of the greatest things that ever happened to me."

Cook is expecting good, consistent play from his top three team members: Lusk, Garcia and Sims.

"Jon tied for number-two medalist in district this year," Cook said of Sims. "His lowest round this year was a 71, so I know he can play well.

"Charlie has always been a competitor," the coach added. "He very rarely shoots anything but the low 70s. You can pretty much always expect him to shoot between 73 and 76."

Leading the way for the Steers will be number-one player Lusk. This will mark the second trip to the state tournament for Lusk, who qualified for the Class 1A tournament as a sophomore at Borden County High School.

"Eric has been a good leader for the team," Cook said. "He's got some state experience, and I think that'll help us. He's a pretty steady player."

For his part, Lusk thinks this trip to state will be more special than his first.

"I think it'll be a lot more special this time," he said. "There will be a lot better competition. We've got to play one of the best tournaments of the year, but we've got a chance. There's supposed to be some high-powered teams there, but anything can happen."

For the Steers to be successful, Cook says the team will have to play close to the leaders the first day, then grab the lead on Friday.

"Looking at the scores, we're probably one of the weaker-scoring teams to go to state," he said. "But I don't think the people who qualified in the other regions played in as tough a regional as we did."

And, in a way, Cook is hoping the rain falls Thursday and Friday.

"Bad weather is an equalizer," he said. "But it'll really depend on which team is ready to play. That's the thing about golf: You don't play the other teams, you play the course."

HC athletes honored at athletic banquet

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Howard College honored its top athletes in four sports during the annual spring athletic banquet held Tuesday night in the East Room of Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Kim Robinson in women's basketball, Johnny McDowell in men's basketball, Frank Rodriguez in baseball and Jody Heath in rodeo received special recognition during the evening.

The event also served to note the changing of the guard in men's basketball. The banquet was the final official function at the college for departing coach Steve Green, who left to take a similar position at Midland College. New coach Jeff Kidder was introduced at the event.

Robinson received special recognition for garnering all-American honors from the National Junior College Athletic Association the past two years. Women's head coach Royce Chadwick called her "the best basketball player I've ever seen."

McDowell was named to the NJCAA's first-team All-American team this season. "Last year, I told Johnny, 'Thank you for being a freshman,'" Green said. Then, noting his move to Midland, he added, "This year, I'm thanking him for being a sophomore. I definitely don't want to coach against him."

Rodriguez received three awards from baseball coach Bill Griffin. In addition to being named the team's most valuable player, Rodriguez received awards for having the highest batting average (.476) and for most RBIs (78).

Heath, who has been ranked as high as third in the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association's barrel-racing rankings, received a special appreciation award from coach Bobby Scott for her contributions to the team the past two years.

Chadwick also was recognized for being named women's coach of the year by the Western Junior College Athletic Conference.

Other athletes that received awards Tuesday night included:

• Baseball — Mike Copple, last ERA and most wins; and Sean Teague and Jeff Schulz, academic.

• Women's basketball — Desiree Wallace, academic and newcomer; Rebecca Brown, most improved; Robinson, hustle award; and Mulu Tosi, most valuable player.

• Men's basketball — Chad Caddell, academic; Cecil Pittman, best defensive player; Harvey Petty, best offensive player; Dexter Abrams, most improved; Greg Jeffery, hustle award; Antonio Valiengo, most inspirational; and McDowell, MVP.

• Rodeo — Angie Pendley, high academic cowgirl; Kelly Adair, high academic cowboy; Jamie Bean, high point cowgirl; and T.J. Kenny, high point cowboy.

Other awards included Melissa Barnes as best student trainer, John Overton as best student manager, Vance Self and Anna Martinez as best cheerleaders and Tabitha Lewis and best dance team member.

Also honored was Bob Crowell, Crowell, a local resident, was named to the Howard College Hall of Fame.

Driver dies from injuries sustained in crash

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A massive head injury claimed the life of stock car driver Chris Gehrke three days he crashed at Talladega Superspeedway.

Gehrke, 25, of Lincoln, Ill., died about 10:25 a.m. Tuesday in the neuro-intensive care unit at Carraway Methodist Medical Center, said Cullen Clark, a hospital spokesman.

Gehrke had been in critical condition since he underwent surgery Saturday night to relieve pressure on his brain. He never regained consciousness and died from a closed head trauma.

"That's a massive brain injury," Clark said.

Gehrke's Oldsmobile was involly blocked by another car, slammed his Buick into Gehrke's vehicle, spinning both cars into the infield grass.

"Our sport can be very exciting and a beautiful thing, but it also can be very violent," said Ron Drager, vice president of the Automobile Racing Club of America.

Miskotten, 42, of Nashville, Tenn., is recovering from a head injury that did not require surgery. He has been transferred to a private room at University of Alabama-Birmingham Hospital, Drager said.

"His family and medical staff are pleased with his progress," the ARCA official said.

Construction Secretary II (Salary, $1,260/mo.)

I. Job Description
Performs somewhat complex secretarial work. Has some latitude for decision-making in carrying out routine phases of the work, such as answering correspondence, distributing mail, giving information, keeping records and files, and preparing routine reports. Work procedures are established by supervisor who periodically reviews completed work for conformance to procedures.

II. Minimum Qualifications
A. Must have three (3) years wage earning experience in secretarial and clerical work; two (2) yrs. word processing and spreadsheet programs. A verified typing score of 40 WPM required, 50 WPM preferred. All outside applicants must have taken a typing test with the Texas Employment Commission. The results of the typing score must be on file with TDCJ before the closing date.

B. Graduation from a standard senior high school or equivalent.
C. Ability to maintain records and prepare reports; to make mathematical computations with speed and accuracy; to compose letters and memoranda; to understand and follow moderately complex oral and written instructions; to assign and supervise subordinates; to make minor decisions in accordance with agency laws and regulations and apply them to work problems; to maintain confidentiality; and to establish and maintain effective working relationships with other employees and the public.

All interested applicants must fill out an application for employment and an application for a posted position. Applications can be obtained by contacting Mike Utley, contract construction, P.O. Box 99, Huntsville, TX 77340 (409)294-6924; or 294-6921, or by contacting your local Texas Employment Commission. All applications must be returned by the closing date of Tuesday, May 28, 1991, 4:30 p.m. Late applications will not be accepted.

Stack sues Star for 10 million

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Robert Stack has filed a $10 million lawsuit against the Star, claiming the supermarket tabloid libeled him in a story he said accused him of being too vain to admit his health is failing.

In court papers, Stack said the story would lead readers to believe he was "an old man crippled by failing health that threatened his ability to continue hosting the extremely successful television series 'Unsolved Mysteries.'"

Stack, 72, won an Emmy in 1960 for his role as crimebuster Eliot Ness in the TV series "The

A person who answered the telephone at the Star's New York office Tuesday said those who could discuss the lawsuit were not in.

William's expectations

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Robin Williams and his wife, Marsha, are expecting their second child, the couple's spokesman says.

The couple, married in 1989, have a year-old daughter, Zelda. Spokesman Mark Rutenberg said Tuesday their second child is due in December.

Williams is making the Steven Spielberg movie "Hook" with Dustin Hoffman. The actor and comedian has starred in such films as "Good Morning, Vietnam," "Dead Poets Society" and "Awakenings."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE:

Lasting success depends on your ability to focus on basic values and promote projects close to your heart. Tension will be replaced by hope when you make a fresh start in romance. The work scene looks especially promising in October. You can negotiate a major business deal in December. For best results, tie up all loose ends by February 1992.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): By now you have a better understanding of how key business relationships work. Others are anxious to climb aboard your success train. Your patience proves to be a wonderful asset.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Get ready to launch a big campaign. Your co-workers are unusually supportive. A change of pace gives you renewed energy. Be honest with yourself; a disappointing relationship will improve.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Revising a policy or product will help you make new sales. Diversification is the key to future business success. Political considerations affect the financial outlook. Stand up for your beliefs.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Check out a financial tip you receive from a friend or relative. A tempting offer may not be all it seems. Pay more attention to your physical well-being. Get a medical or dental checkup.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A good day to complete work projects. A diet is only as good as your self-discipline. Modify your eating habits. Romance could make this a very special evening. Speak from the heart.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Today's events will make you feel more comfortable about what you are doing. A member of the opposite sex comes on strong. Emphasize your need for a partner who shares your values.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone influential is impressed by your emotional maturity. Although your efforts to motivate someone meet with resistance, you will eventually be successful. Good luck accompanies you wherever you go.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your persistence makes you the victor in a contest of wills. Your ability to recognize what higher-ups are leaving unsaid gives you a major advantage in business. Keep your own counsel.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You find a ground swell of support for your ideas now. Forge important new alliances. Those in authority are sensitive to public opinion. Obeying all safety rules will prevent losses.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Write down your creative ideas before they slip away. Getting to know someone better could solve a communication problem. A friend or family member will return an item you thought was lost.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Go slow! The passage of time will work to your advantage. Acting impatient now could undo an important financial or career deal. New harmony at home makes romance even sweeter. Be affectionate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You could receive some long-overdue credit today. Contractual obligations could keep you from taking advantage of a novel opportunity. Talk about your plans for the future.
