Buddy Poppy sales begin

Members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Ladies Auxiliary will be selling Buddy Poppies throughout Snyder today and Saturday.

The annual poppy sale began this morning at Snyder National Bank, West Texas State Bank, American State Bank and First American Bank.

Saturday, they will be sold at Don's Value King, Lawrence IGA, Everybody's Thriftway and Wal-Mart.

"Most of the money received from the sale of Buddy Poppies remains here in our own community to meet the calls from needy veterans," Commander John Fair of the local VFW post said.

"The post maintains a relief fund into which is placed all net profits received from the sale of Buddy Poppies. This fund is available to meet any calls for relief from our local veterans," said Fair.

"The balance of the proceeds of the sale is used to help maintain the nationwide rehabilitation service of our organization."

Buddy Poppy assembly is a year-round project in some 11 veterans facilities and a part-time program in others. The Veterans of Foreign Wars pays the disabled veteran for his work. In most cases, the money provides extra income for the disabled veteran to pay for the small luxuries which make hospital life tolerable.

The Buddy Poppy sale has been conducted by the VFW since May of 1924. The Buddy Poppy tradition began in 1921 when the Franco-American Children's League conducted a nationwide sale of poppies made in France, for the benefit of children in the war-torn areas of France and Belguim.

On Monday, Memorial Day, there will be a flag-raising at 9 a.m. at the VFW post. The ceremony will continue at the American Legion, Snyder Cemetery, Hillside Memorial Gardens and, at about 10 o'clock, at the county courthouse.

All veterans and their families are invited to a barbecue from 5-7 p.m. Monday at the VFW. Families are asked to bring a salad, dessert or both.

Dulaney to sign restraining order

Senior Judge Gene Dulaney was expected to sign a restraining order early this afternoon preventing Snyder Independent School District from submitting student academic achievement records to the Texas Education Agency.

The injunction is being filed by Jack and Barbra Jones, who feel their daughter, senior Holly Renee Jones, should be named sole valedictorian of the Snyder High School graduating class.

The restraining order does not seek to halt tonight's graduation ceremony at Scurry County Coliseum.

Miss Clay has a higher honors point average than Miss Jones — 7.073 to 7.0614. However, Jack and Barbra Jones challenge whether Miss Clay is eligible to be certified as the top student because of a portion of the high school handbook which reads that students shall be ranked "at the end of four years of high school." Miss Clay is a three-year graduate.

As they intrepret the handbook, their daughter should be named valedictorian because she is the senior with the highest cumulative four-year grade point average.

At stake, the Joneses say, is thousands of dollars in scholarship funds, which their daughter needs in order to attend college. They have retained Lubbock attorney Robert Nebb to represent their daughter.

Snyder ISD administrators have said that they support Miss Clay as the high-ranking senior — making her the only student eligible for a Texas Education Agency certificate redeemable for scholarship funds.

After signing the restraining order today, Judge Dulaney is expected to schedule a hearing date. The hearing will be held in 132nd District Court within 14 days of granting the order.

Listed as the defendant in the case is Snyder ISD, with Miss Clay, her parents Vernon and Velma, and SHS senior Ellen Strayhorn named as nominal defendants.

Miss Strayhorn was named salutatorian of the graduating class. Both Miss Clay and Miss Jones will represent Snyder High School as co-valedictorians tonight.

For Scurry County...

Values see $40 million drop

Taxable values in Scurry County fell by slightly less than $40 million from 1994 to 1995, according to information supplied Thursday by the county appraisal district.

The news could be construed as good, considering total values dropped by about $100 million from 1993-94.

Not unexpectedly, the losses are due to a steady decline in the oilfield, which has seen values plunge $1.88 billion since 1982.

Oil values for 1995 fell $45 million; however, a gain of about $5.5 million in real estate value softened the impact slightly. That gain was an increase in value primarily on better brick homes and new construction, according to the appraisal district.

Combined appraisal values as of May 15 were $590,924,726 for Scurry County. That figure represents a loss in values of $39,449,593 from 1994. It should be pointed out that final values will not be set until July 15, and could change slightly.

Appraised values for the junior college district as of May 15 were $640,020,757 or some $37,043,536 less than in 1994.

Values for Snyder Independent School District dropped $15,305,157, from $519,909,680 in 1994 to $504,604,523 in 1995.

The City of Snyder will see an increase in overall values of $5,171,572. Though oil values declined from $23,714,320 to $23,087,800, real estate values increased from $198,747,469 to $204,545,561.

Ira ISD will be harder hit by the appraised values than Snyder ISD. Ira lost $17,565,561, suffering a decline in both oil and real estate values. 1994 values within the Ira ISD were $90,013,428 in 1994 and have been appraised at $72,447,867 as of May 15 this year.

Hermleigh ISD will see a drop, primarily due to a loss in agriculture value. Values were $32,069,886 in 1994 and have been appraised at $31,711,742 in 1995 — a loss of some $358,144.

The drop in values also means an increase in effective tax rates for five of the six taxing jurisdictions in Scurry County. Effective rates are the rates necessary to raise the same amount of taxes as the previous year.

Comparing the 1994 tax rate with the 1995 estimated effective tax rates:

	1994 Actual	1995 Effective
County	.5498	.5868
College	.2908	.3089
City	.3969	.3893
SISD	1.44	1.4921
IISD	1.50	1.50 *
HISD	1.3672	1.3785

Ira ISD's estimated effective tax rate for 1995 is $1.8742. However, state law prohibits school districts from assessing a tax rate above $1.50 per $100 in valuation.

Bush signs bill allowing concealed guns in state

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislation to allow Texans to carry concealed handguns for the first time since the 1870s was signed into law today by Gov. George W. Bush.

"Texas will be a better place because of this law," Bush said.

The legislation permits qualified Texans, beginning Sept. 1, to apply for licenses to carry concealed guns. The licenses would become valid on Jan. 1.

The Legislature gave its final stamp of approval to the bill last week, ending nearly a decade-long movement that gained momentum with the election of Bush, who said during his campaign that he supported the right to carry.

His opponent, Democratic Gov. Ann Richards, vetoed a bill in 1993 that would have allowed Texans to vote on the issue.

Supporters of the legislation have said the election of Bush, a Republican, over Richards shows that Texans want the right to carry concealed guns.

They contend the bill will allow innocent people to protect themselves against criminals, but opponents believe giving citizens the authority to carry guns will cause more violence.

The SDN Column — By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "What seems to be the end of the road may well be a new beginning."

Keeping tabs on our neighbors:

A letter to the editor in the Levelland News-Press, written by a crime victim, had some unique suggestions to future car thieves.

"Has it come to this? In order to be safe and save money, should we put notes on our car windows saying, 'Door is open, please don't break windows. Key is under seat. If you can, please bring it back after your joy ride in order for me to go to work. If there is not sufficient gas in tank, you will find an emergency purse in glove compartment with a $10 bill. Please leave coffee money for the trip to work after you have brought back the car. The joy ride will be more enjoyed if windows are in and gas in the tank. Sorry, no more phone. Did not have the money to replace last one.'"

The Andrews County News reported on recent rains, wondering if the moisture was sufficient to be termed a "drought-breaker."

Gordon Cox, a long-time local rancher, recalled that the last real rain was ten months previous. He further said he has four-year-old catfish that are busy learning to swim.

The Rotan Advance reports that the city council there has reacted favorably to a suggestion that state inmates from the Price Daniel unit in Snyder be used on public work projects in Fisher County.

The council was told the inmates are willing and able, and transportation to the work project is the major need.

We might suggest that Scurry County sell its van to Rotan and use the proceeds to buy a bus so that more state inmates can be utilized in Scurry County.

Pair arrested in school theft

Two suspects have been identified in the May 16 burglary of Northeast Elementary, in which a large amount of cash was taken in the break-in.

Arrested at 6:40 p.m. Thursday were 17-year-old Pedro Chavez Jalomos, 1505½ College Ave., and a 16-year-old male juvenile.

The juvenile was also identified as having committed criminal mischief at Grumpy's Cafe on North College Avenue on May 15.

Taken in the school break-in was several hundred dollars in cash that students had brought to the school for year-end activities and several pocket knives that had been confiscated throughout the school year.

Entry into the school was made through a broken window and the money was taken from a strong box in the principal's office.

The juvenile was released to the custody of his parents while Jalomos was booked into the Scurry County Jail. His bond was set at $5,000.

One pocket knife has been recovered.

Full DNA sequence decoded first time

NEW YORK (AP) — Two scientists say they have decoded the complete genetic code of a free-living organism for the first time, work that could lead to a host of medical applications, The New York Times reported today.

Scientists unveiled a DNA chain of 1,830,121 DNA bases. That's the entire genetic data base of a bacterium known as Hemophilus influenzae, the newspaper reported. DNA bases are the chemical units of the genetic code.

"This is really an incredible moment in history," Dr. Frederick R. Blattner of the University of Wisconsin told the Times. "It demonstrates the ability to take the whole sequence of an organism and work down from that to its genes, which is what geneticists have been dreaming of for a long time.

The work, announced Wednesday at a meeting of the American Society for Microbiology, was led by Dr. J. Craig Venter, who left the National Institutes of Health and its Human Genome Project after a disagreement about the best method for decoding DNA, and then completed his work with private money, the Times reported.

Venter's work, conducted at the Institute for Genomic Research in Gaithersburg, Md., has been submitted for publication in the journal Science.

When medication causes weight gain

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My daughter has a weight problem. She lost 105 pounds through a national program; however, after a checkup with her doctor, she was found to have a cyst on her ovary. He put her on Provera for the cyst and, as a result, she's gaining weight again. Should she continue the medication?

DEAR READER: The weight gain caused by female hormones, such as estrogen and Provera, is usually a result of fluid retention from the drugs. Therefore, I don't believe that your daughter need worry about redeveloping obesity as a consequence of her therapy — especially if she sticks to her diet and doesn't become discouraged.

I recommend that your daughter check this out with her gynecologist, who may take the position that the ovarian cyst, a harmless and common condition, may not need treatment, especially therapy that seems to undermine your daughter's considerable (and very successful) efforts to slim down. Ovarian cysts characteristically cause no discomfort and frequently disappear over time without treatment; such cysts should be monitored with ultrasound examinations.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is niacin effective in the treatment of high cholesterol? If so, how should it be taken? I'm now on Mevacor, which is expensive, and I wonder about the side effects. However, after taking it for three months, my cholesterol level has lowered.

DEAR READER: Niacin does reduce cholesterol levels in many patients. However, it must be given in extremely high doses (1,500 to 3,000 milligrams a day) to be effective. Such excessive doses often cause flushing, headache, cramps, nausea, kidney stones, and liver damage.

Niacin is a B vitamin that is necessary for many metabolic functions; the Recommended Daily Allowance is about 20 mg.

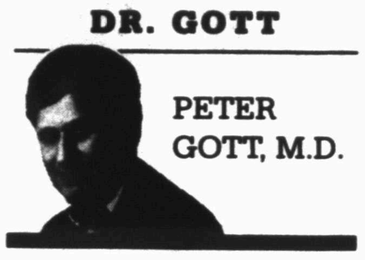

In my practice, patients who opted to use niacin (for high cholesterol levels) universally gave it up after awhile because the side effects were too troublesome. My patients are more likely to choose prescription medicine, such as Mevacor or Lopid, which — although more expensive — works well and is relatively free of complications.

You should follow your doctor's advice about which drug to use. Mevacor can cause liver inflammation in a small percentage of patients; therefore, people who take it should have periodic blood tests of liver function. If, after three months, you've had no problem with this medication, I'd stick with it and forgo the niacin.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Understanding Cholesterol." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

Militias say they protect Constitution

WASHINGTON (AP) — Representatives of militia groups say they are patriots who want to win people to their ideas through education, not violence.

So at a news conference Thursday, the groups passed out copies of the Constitution.

"What you're watching, what you're seeing occur is a political movement in the birthing process," John DeCamp, a former Nebraska state senator who is a lawyer for Militia of Montana, said at a news conference.

"We reject violence," said John Trochmann of the Montana group, who argued that the militia movement, despite its paramilitary features, wants to win people over through education.

"If we don't win that way, that means we have failed," said Trochmann. "And I hate to be a failure."

The militia members called the news conference after a Senate Judiciary hearing on the movement, at which they were expected to testify, was postponed until June 8.

They hawked a familiar theme of a federal government infringing on its citizens and the Constitution through a wide range of activities from sending economic aid to Mexico to the Oklahoma bombing investigation. And they vowed to work for change through the political process, not violence.

That failed to quell the concerns of some House Democrats, who asked Speaker Newt Gingrich for prompt hearings and a full congressional investigation into the "troubling phenomenon" of militia groups.

"If you look at some of the writings and some of the speeches, they don't call themselves a political movement," said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y. "A lot of the writings advocate violence."

Judge laments sentences

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge says he has no choice but to impose lengthy sentences on three Metropolitan Police Officers for accepting $2,000 bribes in a 1993 FBI cocaine sting.

U.S. District Judge Thomas F. Hogan lamented Thursday that federal sentencing guidelines force him to impose sentences of between 49 and 55 years in prison on former officers John C. Harmon, 26, Troy Taylor, 26, and Dwayne Washington, 29, for taking money to escort drug couriers out of the city.

The Washington Post today quotes Hogan as saying he did not believe the sentences, which he characterized as "overly harsh, overly long and tragic," were justified by the wrongness of the defendants' actions.

Before their trial began in the fall, Hogan had urged the men, along with nine other police officers charged in connection with "Operation Broken Faith," to accept plea bargain agreements of up to 10 years in prison for drug and bribery charges.

When the men refused, prosecutors added weapons charges which nearly double the minimum mandatory sentences.

Aim along the right path

There is an expression about having more than one string to one's bow. But has anyone tried to shoot two arrows simultaneously from a bow with two strings? And how about a bow with three strings — as in today's deal?

Against three no-trump, West led the spade queen. After winning with the ace, East returned his second spade. South ducked the trick to West's nine; he won the third spade in hand, East discarding a heart. Now declarer tried each minor suit in turn, but both broke 4-2 rather than 3-3. Finally, declarer took the heart finesse, but it lost and West cashed his two spade winners to defeat the contract.

"Wow!" said South. "We had 27 points, yet nothing worked."

"Yes, you were unlucky," agreed North. "But you still should have made the contract. Why not win the second trick?"

"Ah, I see what you're getting at. I exit with my third spade. West cashes his tricks and East discards his three hearts. But I win West's minor-suit exit and cash the heart ace to squeeze East in the minors."

"No, that isn't what I mean. The squeeze doesn't work because you must discard from the dummy before East. He just discards from the same suit as the dummy. What I suggest is that after winning trick two, you try clubs and diamonds. If either breaks 3-3, you are home. But here, when East shows up with four cards in each minor, you just exit with your last spade. West may cash his spade tricks, but then he must lead a heart around into your ace-queen."

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A sharp-eyed juror with an eye for cheap strawberries spotted a phony evidence photo, freeing a theft defendant who faced up to six years in prison.

"This jury deserves congratulations," defense attorney Theresa Marks said Thursday. "Sometimes juries don't care, but this one did."

Wilma Baxter was arrested November 22, 1994 after walking out of a Raley's grocery store, without paying for a half-dozen bottles of liquor worth $86. The defense didn't deny Baxter took the booze, but said that she was so dazed after a two-week drinking spree following her mother's death that she didn't know what she was doing.

The day of the trial, prosecutors produced a belatedly discovered photo supposedly taken Nov. 22. It showed a shopping cart containing bottles of scotch, gin and brandy that were covered by a newspaper. Prosecutors said that the covered-up bottles showed that Baxter intended to steal the liquor and was not in an alcoholic daze.

The photo was brought to prosecutors by Michael Quinn, then a Raley's security guard and now a trainee for the Pleasant Hill police force.

Three hours into deliberations, a woman on the jury noticed something suspicious: The newspaper covering the bottles had an ad for strawberries at 69 cents a pound — too cheap for November.

As she looked at the ad, the woman realized she had seen it May 10, the day before the trial started. The jurors asked the judge for a magnifying glass, and the lawyers followed suit.

"Chills went up and down our spines when we realized that you could see Mother's Day in the ad," Marks said. "The district attorney turns five shades of pale. He runs upstairs and gets his orders, comes down, and dismisses the case."

Ms. Baxter, 47, who had been behind bars since missing a court hearing in February, was freed immediately. She had no comment Thursday.

The juror whose suspicions paid off for the defense has refused interviews and asked not to be identified for fear of retaliation.

The prosecutor, Deputy District Attorney Gregg Scott, said the photo was under investigation and he could not comment further.

'Casper' to begin in Snyder

Beginning today in Snyder, Casper and the infamous Ghostly Trio — Fatso, Stinkie and Stretch — will defy gravity on the big screen as Amblin Entertainment and director Brad Silberling join forces with many of the creators of Who Framed Roger Rabbit? and Jurassic Park to unleash a mile-a-minute, live action funhouse ride that delivers delightful chills to audiences of all ages.

Casper will be shown at the Cinema I. (See the ad on page 5 for showtimes).

Casper is a friendly but lonely young ghost who can't seem to help scaring people. Then, one day, two new visitors show up on the doorstep of his fantastically haunted house, Whipstaff Manor: Kat Harvey (The Addams Family's Christina Ricci) and her eccentric dad, Dr. Harvey (Bill Pullman of Sleepless in Seattle), a self-styled "ghost therapist." Whipstaff's scheming owner, Carrigan Crittenden (Cathy Moriarty), has hired Harvey to exorcize the house's spectral inhabitants so that she can get her hands on the manor's fabled treasure. Unfortunately for Dr. Harvey, the Ghostly Trio have their own methods of getting rid of unwanted visitors — and a certifiably twisted sense of humor.

Eric Idle (Monty Python's Flying Circus, Splitting Heirs) co-stars in Casper, which is produced by Colin Wilson and executive produced by Steven Spielberg, Gerald R. Molen and Jeffrey A. Montgomery. Casper's breakthrough visual effects and raucous comedy create ghostly fun for a whole new generation.

Mick Jagger once sang 'LaBamba'

LONDON (AP) — Mick Jagger sang "La Bamba"? Yes, before the Stone age.

A 1961 recording of then-unknowns Jagger and Keith Richards performing the song that Ritchie Valens made famous fetched $81,000 Thursday at a Christie's auction. Jagger and Richards were only 17 when they made the recording.

"Mick Jagger's voice is instantly recognizable, it's a little bit higher, a little bit nasaler than the Jagger we know today and Keith Richards playing is instantly recognizable too," said Christie's popular-music expert, Carey Wallace.

The jam session — recorded the year before the Stones became a band — also included lively versions of Chuck Berry's "Little Queenie" and Elvis Presley's "You're Right, I'm Left, She's Gone."

The tape was sold by an unidentified pal of Jagger and Richards who recorded the session in his living room.

Magic ups Pacers

Orlando, Fla. (AP) — They're young, bold, talented and up 2-0 on Indiana in the Eastern Conference finals.

The Orlando Magic, however, aren't making any brash predictions about the remainder of the best-of-7 series that resumes Saturday in Indianapolis, where the Pacers have to win at least once to avoid elimination.

Shaquille O'Neal & Co.'s impressive performance in Game 2 Thursday night prompted questions about the possibility of a sweep.

O'Neal scored seven of his 27 second-half points in the last two minutes to keep Orlando ahead until Anderson sealed Indiana's fate with a 3-pointer with 13.9 seconds remaining.

Scott (25 points), Hardaway (19 points, 15 assists) and Anderson (17 points) hit 12 3-pointers, while O'Neal (averaging 35.5 in the series) did virtually anything he wanted inside against the Pacers' Rik Smits (19 points) and overmatched power forwards.

"We've got to take one or the other away — inside or outside," said Reggie Miller, who had 37 for the Pacers on 12-for-18 shooting. "They can't have both."

The Magic overwhelmed the Pacers with five 3-pointers in the first quarter, building an 11-point lead, and their perimeter shooters were left open in the second period

"I'm not a maid," the all-star center said after the Magic's 119-114 victory. "I'm not worried about sweeping."

Nevertheless, the Magic clearly is in the driver's seat after getting 39 points from O'Neal and another big night from Dennis Scott, Anfernee Hardaway and Nick Anderson.

This was a team the experts claimed was too young and inexperienced to go this far in the postseason. Now they've got the playoff-seasoned Pacers wondering what it'll take to stop them.

"Traditionally in the NBA, you've got to learn from losing. But this team is a team that believes in itself," said Orlando's Jeff Turner. "It's very cocky in what it can do and it shows. Maybe this team is so young that they don't know they have to pay their dues."

O'Neal had 10 third-quarter points, but Indiana kept hanging around until the Orlando center went to the bench with four fouls. When he picked up his fifth with 7:24, the Pacers began their final push.

Anderson delivered his clutch 3-pointer after Indiana pulled within two with 33.1 seconds to go.

"They made the plays," said Brown. "We didn't lose this game. They won it."

Dennis home for Colonial

FORT WORTH (AP) — Clark Dennis shot a 64 on the course that was his childhood playground and grabbed a share of the first-round lead Thursday in the Colonial National Invitation tournament.

"It's good to be home," Dennis said after the 6-under-par effort that gave him a tie for the top spot with Lennie Clements, who played without a bogey on the rain-softened Colonial course.

"When you give yourself that many opportunities, you're going to make some of them," Clements said.

The tough old course on the banks of the Trinity River was robbed of its natural defenses by the absence of wind and some showers that slowed and softened fairways and greens.

"It's vulnerable, about as vulnerable as Colonial is ever going to be," the veteran Clements, who has yet to win in a 15-season tour career, said.

Dennis, whose parents were members of Colonial and who has played this layout "since I was a kid," agreed.

"It was there for the taking," he said.

And golf's touring pros made the most of it.

Billy Andrade shot 65, while the group at 66 included Fuzzy Zoeller, Payne Stewart, Curtis Strange, Mike Hulbert, Jeff Maggert, D.A. Weibring and Australian Craig Parry.

Nick Price of Zimbabwe, the defending champion and the top-ranked player in the world, was 3-over at 73. John Daly and South African Ernie Els, the U.S. Open champ, each had 71s.

Other winners included: Billy Rollins, placing second in the Male Compound Aided catagory; Eddie Rollins, placing third in the Male Compound Aided catagory; and Carla Futrell, placing third in the Female Bowhunters Release.

Other club members attending the shoot were James Wenetschlaeger, Eddie Morris, Tommy Smith, Tommy Patterson, Gary Maddux, Graig Forbes, Wesley Smith, Gary Poe and Andy Poe.

New study supports giant-impact theory of origin of moon

WASHINGTON (AP) — New evidence about lunar composition supports an old theory that the moon became a natural satellite of the Earth after it smashed into the planet and then ricocheted back into orbit.

Paul G. Lucey of the University of Hawaii reports in a study published today that a research satellite called Clementine has shown that the bulk composition of the moon has less iron than previously believed and is far different than the chemistry of the Earth. This, he said, eliminates two of the four theories about the moon's origin.

"We concluded that the moon did not form from the same source material as the Earth," said Lucey. "The moon is really quite different than the Earth in composition."

This means that only one theory, the "giant-impact" hypothesis, is most likely correct about the moon, he said.

The study was published today in Science, the journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Graham Ryder, a staff scientist at the Lunar and Planetary Institute in Houston, said Lucey's study gives a big boost to the giant-impact theory of the moon's origin, but that more studies are needed before the theory is accepted as fact.

"The study is really excellent, but it doesn't prove the theory," said Ryder. "But giant impact is the only model we have that fits these data."

The four major theories for the moon's origin are:

—Co-accretion: The moon formed in the same place and of the same materials as the Earth.

—Fission: The moon is a chunk of the Earth that was broken away from the planet and propelled into orbit by an asteroid impact.

—Giant Impact: The moon was a Mars-size rock that hit the Earth; a large part, perhaps in the form of molten rock, ricocheted into an orbit about the planet.

—Capture: The moon was a huge rock that wandered into Earth's gravitational grasp and was captured in the planet's orbit.

Lucey said that since the moon's composition is so different from the Earth's, the co-accretion and fission theories would not be possible. The capture theory, he said, is generally rejected because computer simulations have shown it to be very unlikely.

"This study is consistent with the giant-impact model, but not for the (co-accretion or fission) theories," said Ryder. The capture theory, he added, "is supported by only a small minority" of the scientific community.

Lucey said instruments aboard the Clementine spacecraft measured the chemistry of about 93 percent of the moon's surface using instruments that gathered geochemical data with remote sensors.

These data were then tested by exposing the instruments to actual lunar soil samples that had been collected by astronauts during the Apollo missions.

Both the moon and the Earth are thought to have formed about 4.5 billion years ago.

Loaded gun found in man's typewriter following execution

JARRATT, Va. (AP) — An hour after the execution of a killer who took part in three escape attempts, a loaded pistol was found hidden in his typewriter.

Willie Lloyd Turner was executed by injection Thursday night for the 1978 murder of a jewelry store owner. He made no final statement.

Turner had given his typewriter to his lawyer, Walter Walvick. The attorney said that about 30 minutes before the execution, Turner told him to look in the back of the typewriter when he returned to his motel room.

Walvick said a .32-caliber revolver wrapped in tissue was tucked in a secret compartment behind the typewriter ribbon. He said there were six bullets in the wooden-handled gun and 12 extra bullets in a plastic bag beneath the weapon.

Under the bullets, Turner had written the word "Smile."

The typewriter had been outside Turner's cell in the death house, but he could reach it through the bars, Walvick said.

Walvick said Turner told a prison official shortly before the execution, "I'm letting you do this to me."

"I realize now what he meant," the attorney said.

He said he had no idea how Turner got the gun. Two reporters were with Walvick when he found it.

"In a way it was almost a kind of vindication to see that there. It confirms my judgment" that Turner was a changed person, Walvick said.

"If he was this really awful person that everybody said, he could have blown somebody away."

Turner, 49, was convicted of murdering W. Jack Smith Jr. during a botched robbery of his Franklin jewelry store. A police officer saw Turner shoot Smith three times.

He took part in three escape attempts, including a 1984 breakout of six death-row inmates. Turner did not flee with the other six inmates, but prison officials said he helped plan the escape.

He was executed six hours after the U.S. Supreme Court rejected his claim that spending more than 15 years on death row — longer than any of Virginia's 56 condemned inmates — amounted to cruel and unusual punishment. Justice John Paul Stevens dissented.

Assistant Attorney General Robert Anderson III had likened Turner's argument to that of a man who kills his parents and then "pleads for mercy because he is now an orphan."

But a similar argument in April resulted in a Supreme Court stay for Texas inmate Clarence Lackey, who has spent 17 years on death row.

Turner said he had too much pride to ask Gov. George Allen for clemency.

Two members of Smith's family witnessed the execution in a room separate from the official witnesses, corrections officials said. Their names were withheld at their request.

In a statement issued after the execution, Smith's family said, "Tonight, we can move on with our lives knowing that — despite the many delays and frustrations — justice has been determined and carried out."

Six years after Turner's 1980 conviction and death sentence, the U.S. Supreme Court ordered him resentenced because of possible racial bias by the jury. Turner is black; Smith was white. In 1987, a new jury again sentenced him to death.

Turner was the 26th inmate executed in Virginia and the 282nd nationally since the Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty in 1976. Only Texas and Florida have executed more inmates than Virginia, which resumed executions in 1982.

8th Simpson juror dismissed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The dismissal of an eighth juror again brought the lumbering O.J. Simpson trial to a halt, shifting attention from a decision about the admissibility of Simpson's police statement to fears that the dwindling alternate pool may run dry.

After an unplanned, five-hour meeting with the judge Thursday, defense attorneys were all smiles, apparently happy with the ouster of the panelist who will be replaced today.

Prosecutors, on the other hand, looked grim as they rushed out of the private session. Deputy District Attorney Christopher Darden told reporters, "Get a life, guys."

The alternate pool has dwindled from 12 to just four, with months to go in the marathon murder trial that has been rocked by wide-ranging jury complications.

"This bodes very badly for the future of this trial," said law professor Robert Pugsley of Southwestern University. "I don't see realistically how they're going to make it."

No reason was given for the dismissal, and the identity of the juror wasn't announced. Both sides said they had been ordered to withhold comment about the dismissal.

Jury selection began Sept. 26, and the panel has been sequestered for more than four months, since Jan. 11.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito's decision to stop testimony for half a day was remarkable given his new get-tough policy aimed at keeping the trial moving quickly. Jurors have been impatient with the slow pace and suggested last week that more hours be added to the court schedule.

Myrna Raeder, a Southwestern University law professor, thought Ito would heed that request.

"It would not surprise me if Judge Ito decides to lengthen those hours in order to ensure the best possibility of attaining a verdict," she said. "A blow like this is bound to reinforce the need to keep that testimony flowing."

If the number of jurors drops below 12, it would take an agreement by both sides to continue. Otherwise, a mistrial would be declared.

A few dismissed jurors have described a troubled jury divided along racial lines. Explosive comments by one former panelist about some of her colleagues and deputies who guard them led to an investigation by the judge.

Before the latest ouster, the jury included seven blacks, three whites and two Hispanics. There were nine women and three men. The alternate pool consisted of four blacks and one white; four women and one man.

The trial was interrupted as more arguments were to begin on the admissibility of Simpson's statement to police on June 13, the day after his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman were killed.

Senate approves open records overhaul

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Senate has passed a bill revising the state's Open Records Act, including a provision that would limits what local governments could charge for providing public information.

The measure by Sen. Jeff Wentworth, R-San Antonio, and Rep. Sylvester Turner, D-Houston, was approved on a voice vote Thursday and now goes to the House for consideration of Senate amendments.

Wentworth said the bill brings the 22-year-old open records law into the high-tech age by making sure people can obtain information from their government no matter whether it's kept on paper or computer disk.

"In 22 years, most information being maintained is on computer, not just in boxes in the county clerk's office," Wentworth said.

The bill would change the term "open records" to "public information" and specify that the law applies to data held in computer memory banks or in audio or video form as well as on paper.

"The emphasis is not on the form. The emphasis is on making information available and accessible," Turner said.

"We are also saying municipalities, governmental entities and state agencies cannot make a profit off of requests that are being made by the general public for information that they have every right to get," Turner said.

An amendment hammered out by Wentworth and Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas, would allow local governments to charge 25 percent above or below a fee schedule for public information set by the state General Services Commission.

An earlier version of the bill approved by the House would have allowed local governments to charge 50 percent above or below that fee schedule.

Lobbyists representing cities and counties fought to allow local governments to set their own fees for public information.

But Turner said he didn't want the Open Records Act being used as a money maker.

"It's only intended to provide some general oversight to make sure that when someone requests information they don't get a bill for $6 million when it only cost $6,000," Turner said. "It's those egregious examples that we are trying to keep in check. We are not trying to control counties or local governments at all."

Cities, counties or school districts would be allowed to charge more than the 25 percent variance if they justify the increase in a letter to the General Services Commission.

Senate OKs bill

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill that targets hot check writers has passed the Texas Senate.

People convicted of knowingly writing a hot check would face up to a $500 fine under a measure by Sen. Florence Shapiro, R-Plano. The bill, approved Thursday on a voice vote, now goes to the House for consideration of Senate changes.

Currently, writing a hot check is not a crime.

Ms. Shapiro said her bill wouldn't penalize people who make an honest mistake in overdrawing their check account.

"Unfortunately, I've done that myself," Ms. Shapiro said. "So in no way would we be punishing that."

Turnpike fatality

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — A 39-year-old Texas woman died of head injuries following an accident at the south Wichita entrance to the Kansas Turnpike.

A Kansas Highway Patrol spokesman identified the victim in Thursday morning's accident as Lutita Torres of El Paso.

Investigators said Torres' car hit the back of a pickup truck and trailer that were slowing to stop at the toll booth.

More charges may be filed in bombing of federal building

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A friend of bombing suspect Timothy McVeigh's who allegedly inspected the federal building with him is negotiating a plea bargain with the FBI, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

Michael Fortier of Kingman, Ariz., has been cooperating with authorities in Oklahoma City as they seek a broad conspiracy indictment, the Times quotes three unidentified federal sources as saying.

Officials have spent a week discussing a written agreement for Fortier, 26, to plead guilty to limited charges and become a key witness against McVeigh and Terry Nichols, the newspaper said.

The newspaper's sources said Fortier could face charges ranging from having knowledge of the bombing conspiracy to giving false statements to authorities. Those charges carry minimum five-year prison terms.

Fortier and McVeigh became friends in Kingman, where they worked in a hardware store following their service in the Army. Both men traveled to Oklahoma City and posed as job applicants to inspect the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, unidentified sources told the Times.

Mack Martin, an Oklahoma City lawyer representing Fortier, wouldn't comment on the meetings.

So far, McVeigh, 27, and Nichols, 40, are the only people charged in the April 19 attack that killed at least 167 people. They face the death penalty if convicted.

Fortier's mother said she holds McVeigh responsible for her son's situation. "He just got caught in the middle of something that is unexplainable," Irene Fortier told the Times.

On Thursday, Nichols' attorney said his client shouldn't be subjected to 24-hour video surveillance, the taping of a phone conversation with his mother and other "unlawful tactics."

Cat has 24th birthday party

HAYS, Kan. (AP) — The guest of honor curled up on the restaurant table. No one moved him. The birthday cake was decorated with a mouse. No one objected.

After all, a cat that's lived 24 years can pretty much do whatever he wants.

I.B. Dent began celebrating his tomcat's natal day when the black and white beast turned 21 — "Old enough to go to the bars," as he said.

"Every year I say it's going to be his last birthday party, but then he lives another year," Dent said.

Cat's deaf, and he doesn't see very well any more, but he's in great shape for his age, according to longtime friend Mary Ann Thompson, president of the board of the Humane Society of the High Plains.

At his party Wednesday night, Cat relaxed on his red-and-white blanket at center table, watching lazily as his guests enjoyed the white, rodent-decked birthday cake.

He graciously accepted the catnip toys and cards, mindful of his person's promise that he'll never own another cat.

Good Husband Picks Up Bad Habit by Chewing Tobacco

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the letter from "St. Paul Wife," whose husband's scratchy beard was her biggest complaint:

I would be glad to change places with her. My husband's newfound habit has definitely put a strain on our marriage. He chews tobacco.

As "St. Paul Wife" stated, "If my husband had had a beard when I first met him, I would not have even considered dating him ..." Well, if my husband had been chewing tobacco when I met him, I would not have even spoken to him.

He is a good provider and a good husband and father —which far outweighs his one nasty habit — but I have seriously considered divorce because he is no longer sexually attractive to me.

Beards, I have no problem with, but chewing tobacco is out of the question!

MIXED EMOTIONS IN FLORIDA

DEAR MIXED EMOTIONS: Please inform your husband that chewing tobacco is as dangerous a health risk as smoking tobacco.

According to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and the American Cancer Society, chewing tobacco has been known to cause cancer of the gum, mouth, tongue, jaw, pharynx, larynx and esophagus. And it may also play a role in cardiovascular disease and strokes.

DEAR ABBY: I have been umpiring both men's and women's softball leagues for 20 years, and I have had my share of verbal abuse, but last Saturday I was KO'd by an irate female player.

After a close call at home plate, I called the runner safe. The first basewoman ran up to the plate and began calling me every name in the book. I told her to get out of my face. When she wouldn't let up, I told her she was ejected from the game.

I suddenly found myself lying on the ground. My jaw was numb. A crowd had gathered, and some were daring me to get up and fight! I wasn't fully aware that the woman had hit me until I got back on my feet and saw her standing over me with her dukes up, ready to hit me again. I instinctively raised my hands as if to say "enough" — when she hit me again and broke my nose! Realizing she might seriously injure me if this continued, I said, "I've had enough!"

Incredibly, people — including my best friend — began ridiculing me and calling me a wimp. In my office a few days later, my secretary asked, "Have you tried the battered men's shelter?"

Abby, I am 42 years old, stand 5 foot 8 inches tall and weigh 150 pounds. The female who attacked me stands 6 foot 3 and weighs about 180. She played four years of college basketball on a scholarship. How can I be expected to defend myself against someone 30 pounds heavier, a head taller and 20 years younger — male or female?

I am sick of being ridiculed. Will you please tell my wife and friends that I am not a wimp?

RETIRED UMP IN ATLANTA

DEAR RETIRED UMP, HIS WIFE AND FRIENDS: In a civilized society, men are taught from childhood that men should not hit women. You proved you were a gentleman, not a wimp.

However, you broke the (unwritten) cardinal rule: Never remove your mask during an altercation.

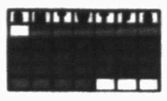

P.S. As for the Amazon who hit you, she should be traded to the Giants.

According to FDA...

GATT lets drug firms keep monopolies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The makers of Zantac and dozens of other brand-name drugs will keep their monopolies for up to three extra years under federal regulators' interpretation of laws surrounding a new global trade agreement.

That will mean a windfall for the manufacturers at the expense of consumers, said Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark. He complained Thursday that neither Congress nor U.S. trade negotiators ever intended the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade to work this way.

A University of Minnesota study estimated that Americans will pay $6 billion more over 20 years for 109 drugs due to the extended monopolies. The industry disputes those figures.

Generic drug makers called the Food and Drug Administration decision "outrageous" and hinted they will head to court to stop it.

But Glaxo Wellcome Inc., the makers of Zantac, the ulcer medication that is the world's top-selling prescription drug, hailed the outcome, saying "it preserves the integrity of the GATT agreement in terms of 20-year patent protection."

"Patent protection is the lifeblood of our industry," said Nancy Pekarek, Glaxo's manager of media relations. Companies will have a greater incentive to pour more money into research to find new, breakthrough medicines, she said.

GATT lowered trade barriers among more than 120 countries and gave manufacturers 20-year protection on a wide range of products.

Drugs in the United States have had a 17-year patent.

Congress, in implementing legislation, allowed companies that had made a major start-up investment to sell rival products during the extended patent period if they paid royalties to the original brand owner.

But Glaxo petitioned the FDA, arguing that a 1984 generic drug law superseded those GATT provisions and barred generics from the market entirely during the extended patent period.

The FDA reluctantly agreed with that interpretation.

"Our legal analysis was that the generic companies have to wait until the extended patent expires before they may market their products," said William B. Schultz, a deputy FDA commissioner.

Glaxo's Zantac, the ulcer remedy that was due to lose its patent protection in December, now is expected to keep its monopoly until July 1997. Zantac costs $83 for a month's supply. Generic companies had hoped to market the same medication at half the price.

More than 100 other prescription drugs currently under patent, including Capotem, Prilosec, Cardizem and Mevacor, will also enjoy an extended monopoly.

ANCIENT IDOLS!

THE PROPHETS IN THE BIBLE VILLIFIED THE PAGAN WORSHIP OF FALSE GODS, ALL OF WHOM WERE REPRESENTED BY SOME FIGURE IN STONE, OR WOOD, OR SOMETIMES BY PRECIOUS METALS. WHEN THE IDOL WAS METALLIC IT WAS FASHIONED BY RUNNING MELTED METAL INTO A MOLD, IN WHICH CASE THEY WERE CALLED "MOLTEN IMAGES." WHEN OF WOOD OR STONE THEY WERE MADE BY GRAVING TOOLS AND, NATURALLY CALLED "GRAVEN IMAGES." THE WHOLE PROCESS OF MANUFACTURE IS SATIRICALLY DESCRIBED IN ISAIAH (44:9-20). SOME WERE SMALL OBJECTS, ESPECIALLY THOSE DESIGNED FOR USE IN THE HOUSEHOLD, SOME WERE AS LARGE AS A HUMAN BEING (I SAM. 19:16) AND SOME WERE COLOSSAL LIKE THE HUGE GOLDEN IMAGE THAT WAS ERECTED BY NEBUCHADNEZZAR IN THE PLAIN OF DURA---WHICH ALMOST CAUSED THE DEATH OF SHADRACH, MESHACH, AND ABEDNEGO. (BOOK OF DANIEL, CHAPTER 3)
