Reagan focuses on Central American ills

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — President Reagan announced today he will create a bipartisan national commission to advise him on Central American policy in a renewed effort to win congressional support for his campaign "to keep the light of liberty alive in Central America."

Reagan, in his prepared remarks, did not name anyone to the commission. Unconfirmed reports said Reagan asked former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to head the panel, and that Kissinger accepted.

In his toughly worded speech to the International Longshoremen's Association here, Reagan made clear that he has no intention of forsaking his determined defense of the Salvadoran regime or his anticommunist crusade in the troubled region.

Reagan said the commision "will lay the foundation for a long-term, unified national approach to the freedom and independence of the countries of Central America."

But he renewed his call for congressional support of his efforts to shore up the anticommunist government in El Salvador and said that, for the immediate future, "the legislative branch must bear its share of responsibility."

One day before the fourth anniversary of the Sandinistas' seizing power in Nicaragua, Reagan called that takeover "the revolution of broken promises" and said its leaders are liars.

"They rejected their pledges to their own people, to the Organization of American States and to the world," Reagan said in his prepared remarks.

Without referring specifically to this week's House consideration of cutting off the administration's not-so-secret aid to Nicaraguan rebels, Reagan asked, "Isn't it time that all of us in the Americas worked together to hold Nicaragua accountable for the promises made and broken four years ago?"

Painting a stark portrait of the two war-torn countries in the troubled region, Reagan said, "There is a vital link between what's happening in Nicaragua and what's happening in El Salvador. And the link is very simple: the dictators of Nicaragua are actively trying to destroy the budding democracy in neighboring El Salvador."

Conceding the continuing human rights problems in El Salvador, Reagan demanded, "The killing must stop!"

"But you have to realize," he added, "much of the violence there, whether from the extreme right or left, is beyond the control of the government. El Salvador is moving in the right direction."

"To give democracy and development a chance to work in the face of increasing attacks, we are providing a shield of military training and assistance to help our neighbors protect themselves," Reagan said. He called for Congress to join him in fulfilling that "moral responsibility."

"We must never let freedom fade where there is a chance to save it. We must never let the embers of human dignity die out simply because it's easier to turn the other way. With a timely investment now, we can save freedom in Central America."

The president's announcement follows several weeks of trying to sell his anti-communist crusade to an increasingly skeptical Congress.

One source, who, like the others demanded anonymity, said the commission was agreed upon in negotiations with members of Congress.

Contadoran leaders seek to avert war

CANCUN, Mexico (AP) — Four Latin American presidents have issued an urgent appeal to Ronald Reagan and Cuban President Fidel Castro to help avert war in Central America.

In a communique issued Sunday after weekend summit meeting, the presidents of the so-called Contadora countries proposed the immediate demilitarization of Central America, an end to arms smuggling and foreign intervention, and a ban on the establishment of foreign bases.

The focus of their concern was the growing conflict between Nicaragua and Honduras, in which both Cuba and the United States are involved.

"This very day we the presidents of the Contadora Group wll direct ourselves to the presidents of the Central American governments — involved directly in the problem — but also to President Reagan...and to Commander Fidel Castro, inviting them to join i this effort with good faith and decision, said President Miguel de la Madrid as the meeting ended.

The communique was signed by de la Madrid and presidents Belisario Betancur of Colombia, Luis Herrera Campins of Venezuela and Ricardo de la Espriella of Panama. Those four countries have been trying to defuse the violence in Central America since Jan. 5, when their representatives first met on the Panamanian resort island of Contadora.

"The conflicts in Central America confront the international community with a choice of supporting and strenghthening the path to political understanding... or passively accepting factors that could lead to armed confrontations of greater danger," the statement said.

The Contadora presidents indirectly blamed the United States and Cuba for the tense sitation that has developed in the region.

The communique also proposed demilitarized zones along Nicaragua's borders with Honduras and Costa Rica. Attacks by Nicaraguan rebels based in those two neighboring nations have intensified in an effort to overthrow the Nicaraguan leftist junta.

Honduras and Nicaragua have been massing troops along their common border, where the Nicaraguan exiles are based. Other exiles, mostly disenchanted Sandinistas, are based in Costa Rica and have been mounting attacks against the Nicaraguan government from the south.

The Contadora communique proposed a ban on the use by one nation "of the territory of another to mount acts of aggression against a third state."

This seemed to refer to the help the Central Intelligence Agency has been providing the Honduras-based rebels and to the establishment of a U.S. Army base in Honduras to train 2,400 Salvadoran soldiers in counterinsurgency tactics.

The communique's condemnation of arms smuggling apparently refered to accusations that the Sandinistas have been secretly supplying weapons to leftist rebels fighting for power in El Salvador.

The communique proposed the withdrawal of all foreign military advisers from the region.

The United States has had a contingent of 55 American noncombat advisers stationed in El Salvador for the past two years.

Cuba is believed to have about 2,000 advisers in Nicaragua helping train the Sandinista army.

Puddle jumpers

Brief bursts of showers Sunday afternoon didn't aid Midland ranchers or farmers, but it did help Leah Coats hitch a ride from her father Rick, of 3111 W. Louisiana, who plods through puddles in a parking lot at Andrews Highway and Cuthbert Street. The rain fell in only isolated areas of the city.

Man killed, son injured in robbery attempt

From staff and wire reports

BAKERSFIELD, Texas — A gas plant attendant who was "the wrong person to rob" shot a father and son wanted for capital murder in the slaying of a West Texas deputy sheriff, killing the father.

The son, 18-year-old Thomas Graham, was in critical condition at Odessa'a Medical Center Hospital today with shotgun wounds to the face and shoulder.

His father, 40-year-old Richard Graham, was fatally wounded in the chest late Saturday by blasts from a shotgun wielded by the unidentified attendant of the Intratex Co. natural gas processing plant.

"They just picked the wrong person to rob," said Upton County sheriff's deputy Sgt. George Willeford.

Both suspects had been charged with capital murder in the early Friday morning killing of Upton County sheriff's deputy Charles A. "Chuck" Renfro, 45, who was shot when he answered a burgar alarm at a lumber and hardware store in nearby McCamey, about 50 miles south of Odessa.

Renfro worked as a deputy with the Midland County Sheriff's Department in the early 1970s.

"I know they came in here trying to rob the attendant," Willeford said, "and everybody in this part of the country has been keeping an eye out for them."

The attendant "detected something moving around and was able to get them before they got him," said Willeford. The father and son apparently were carrying knives when they entered the plant and stole a rifle.

The Intratex plant is about 20 miles south of McCamey and 20 miles east of Fort Stockton in Pecos County.

The elder Graham's 19-year-old daughter Terri has also been charged with capital murder, but a prosecutor said he would ask a grand jury to drop the charge.

She was charged Friday and released on $10,000 bond. But investigators later learned she was at work when the deputy was killed, said District Attorney Aubrey Edwards.

Ms. Graham had been arrested because authorities discovered a truck apparently used as a getaway vehicle was registered to her.

The charge against Ms. Graham will still be presented to a grand jury Monday, but Edwards said he would ask the panel not to return an indictment. "After investigating the case, I determined that she was not involved in this."

Richard Graham, 40, left, was killed and his son, Thomas Graham, 18, was wounded in an apparent robbery attempt Saturday. The two were suspects in the Friday death of Upton County sheriff's deputy Charles A. Renfro.

Brother's gift really stinks

CHICAGO (AP) — Last year, John Matar complained his brother Sam's birthday gift to him "stunk." So this year Sam made sure it did.

John, who recently turned 43, came home from his job as a plant supervisor to find his front yard fenced in and 100 skunks nibbling on the shrubbery.

Sam, the younger brother who is an automobile dealer in Carmel, Calif., had left this note on the fence:

"John: You complained that last year's present stunk. How about these stinkers!!! Happy Birthday. Sam."

But Sam had done the de-scent thing. The skunks, brought in last Thursday from a Moran, Mich., pet farm, had been deodorized.

Last year Sam sent John 50 shaggy, smelly goats.

The brothers have been trying to outdo each other on their birthdays ever since Sam sent John 25 birthday cards 12 years ago.

"He thinks he really got me with these skunks," John said. "Wait until Feb. 7," Sam's birthday.

Panel gearing up for 'Texas-sized' birthday celebration

DALLAS (AP) — When Texans sing "Happy 150th Birthday" to their state in 1986, they plan to do it in style.

At least the Texas Sesquicentennial Commission is planning to do it in style.

After three years of preliminary planning, the commission is now shifting into high gear for the next 2½ years, trying to make the state's 150th anniversary in 1986 a year-long extravaganza.

The commission says it is planning a Texas-sized birthday bash with activities ranging from a Tall Ships parade to a traveling train museum to animal exhibits from Australia.

"The Texas centennial celebration in 1936 was a really big deal, and we hope this will be just as big, if not bigger," said Thad Sitton, public affairs spokesman for the commission.

Sitton said the job of preparing for the state's 150th anniversary of independence from Mexico is growing increasingly hectic.

"Participation is starting to multiply geometrically," he said. "And by next year we expect the phone will start ringing off the hook."

Although the celebration is still 2½ years away, about 100 citizens' committees have been approved by the commission or are being organized, Sitton said.

By September, the agency with the tongue-twisting name plans to nearly double its staff of full- and part-time employees to about a dozen, Sitton told the Dallas Times Herald.

Despite a close brush with the Legislature's budget ax, the commission's current operating budget of $154,221 will nearly triple to $477,056 in fiscal 1984, and jump again to $677,209 in fiscal 1985, according to Legislative Budget Board figures.

The commission will act as a consulting and coordinating agency for the committee, which will plan an assortment of events at the local and state level and secure funding for them.

About 500 Texas towns — 40 percent of the state's communities — participated in the nation's bicentennial celebration in 1976. The commission "hopes to do better than that" for Texas' 150th birthday, Sitton said.

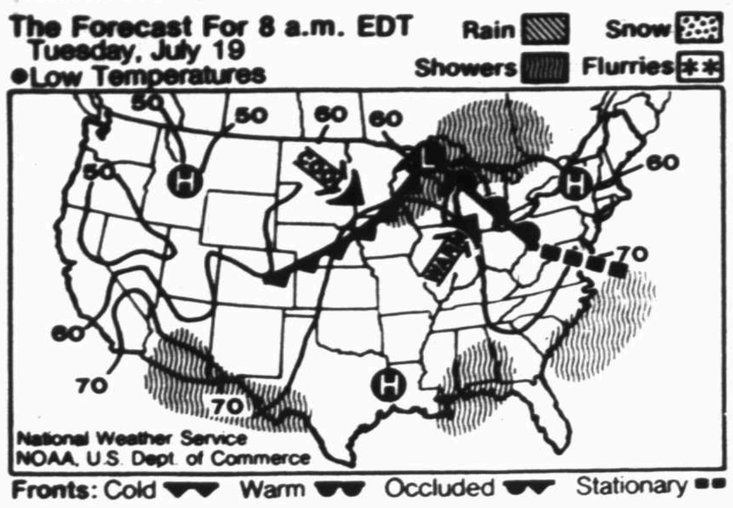
"This is a Texas celebration and Texans have a very strong regional sense," he said.

Among the events already planned are a Tall Ships procession in Galveston Bay, a statewide tour by a Sesquicentennial Train housing a Texas history exhibit. Congressional approval of a special postage stamp commemorating the Texas sesquicentennial is pending.

An exchange program is planned with the province of South Australia, which also is celebrating its 150th anniversary in 1986. The Texas-South Australia Committee was one of the first formed and is one of the state's most active, said commission chairwoman Ann Quirk.

"There is an enormous level of similarity (between Texas and South Australia)," said Colin Schwartz, a University of Texas pathology professor and South Australian expatriate who heads that committee. "You have states that are in some ways the last frontiers of western civilization. ... Their longitude and latitude are even almost the same," north and south of the equator.

WEATHER SUMMARY



AP Laserphoto Map

Clear, warm weather is forecast for most of the nation through Tuesday, according to the National Weather Service. Showers are expected for the Southwest, eastern Gulf, Carolina coast and Great Lakes areas.

Thunderstorms still a possibility

If your car has a half-inch of dust on it because you've been waiting to wash it until clear skies are forecast, you will have to put it off a few more days. As they have nearly every day this month, the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is predicting a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms tonight and Tuesday.

Temperatures tonight should be mild, with lows expected to be in the mid 70s. Winds from the south 5 to 10 mph are anticipated.

Tuesday's forecast calls for a less than 20 percent chance of isolated late afternoon thunderstorms. Highs in the upper 90s are forecast, accompanied by southerly winds at 5 to 15 mph.

Sunday's high of 94 degrees was nine degrees below the record 103 reached July 17, 1981. The low of 70 was far warmer than the record set in 1936.

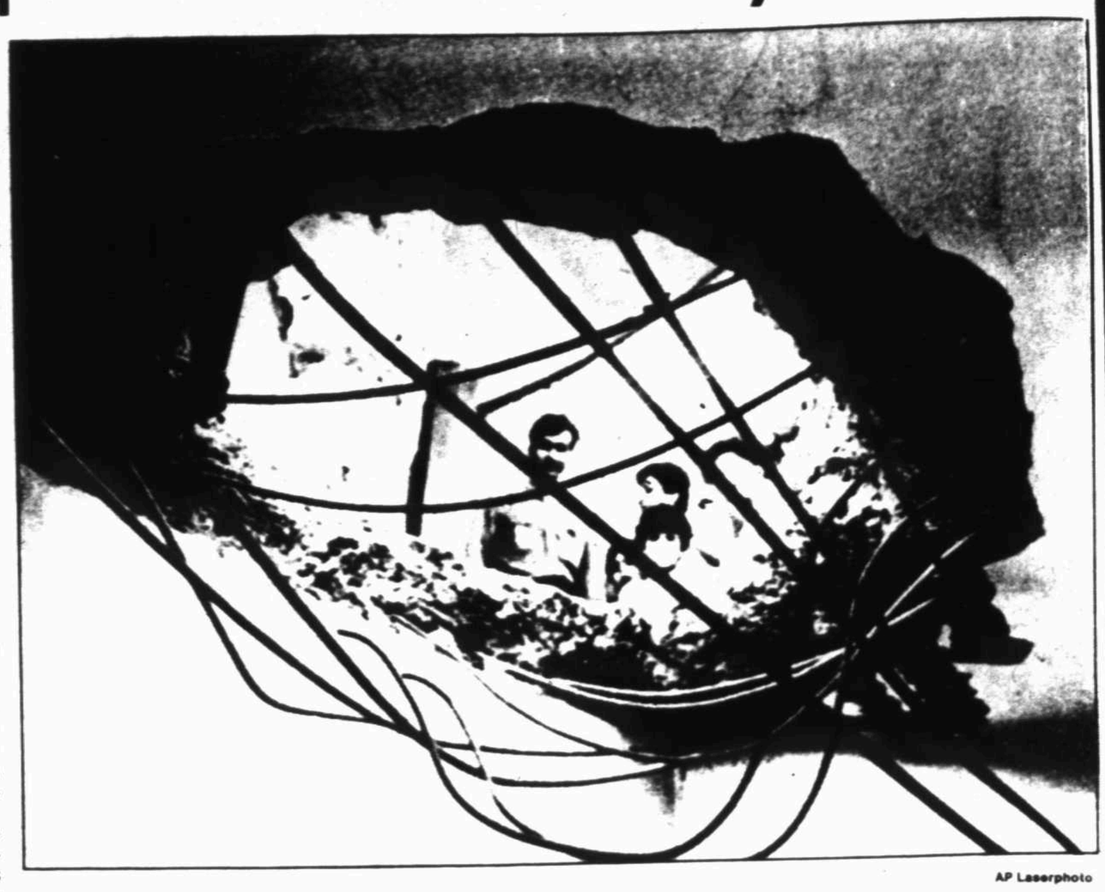
Clashes put Lebanese army to test



AP Laserphoto

Residents look through a two-yard-wide hole blasted through their wall by a 130-caliber field artillery shell. The shell, fired by leftist Druse militia in Lebanon's Shouf Mountain area Sunday, injured only one of the summer home's 27 residents.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The stepped-up fighting among factions around Beirut may be a deliberate test of the Lebanese army's ability to assert control once Israel's troops leave the area, Israeli officials say.

The latest clashes came Sunday, when Christian and Druse militiamen battled fiercely in the central mountains and poured artillery fire on crowded beaches north of Beirut that sent bathers running for safety.

Beirut radio stations said the fighting tapered off at night after more than five hours of artillery duels in the Israeli-occupied Chouf and Aley mountains east and southeast of Beirut.

There was no immediate report of casualties Sunday, although battles between Christians and Druse have claimed several hundred lives since November.

Israel has considered withdrawing from the mountains and regrouping behind more defensible lines in south Lebanon to reduce casualties.

In Jerusalem, Israeli officials said Sunday that Prime Minister Menachem Begin may summon his top advisers to set the pullback in motion.

The officials, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said the decision on the redeployment may be made before Begin leaves for a July 27 meeting with President Reagan in Washington.

The officials said they believe the renewed fighting among the Lebanese factions in and near Beirut was a test to see whether Lebanon's army can take control once the Israelis leave.

Israel has been consulting with the Lebanese and U.S. governments to ensure that the void left by its troops is not filled by hostile Syrian or Palestinian forces, the officials said. But one official said the decision to redeploy "is independent of who will fill the gap."

Israeli Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Moshe Levy has said the most likely redeployment line would be the Awali River, about 20 miles south of the current line in Beirut's southern outskirts.

Israeli troops have been in Lebanon since invading last summer to drive the Palestine Liberation Organization out of Beirut. A Lebanese-Israeli agreement for withdrawal of all foreign troops is contingent upon Syria's signature, but Syria — whose troops have been in Lebanon since they were sent in to monitor the civil war cease-fire in 1976 — has rejected the agreement.

Although the Lebanese government plans to move its army into areas vacated by the Israelis, Druse leaders have warned against deploying the army at their strongholds before a truce is reached with the Christians.

In an interview in Beirut's Monday Morning weekly magazine, Joseph Hashem, a Christian leader in the Chouf region, said Lebanese soldiers should be deployed in the mountains once the Israelis leave and before truce talks with the Druse begin.

The deterioration of the security situation around Beirut came as President Amin Gemayel prepared for a trip to Washington this week to discuss the withdrawal of foreign forces from Lebanon.

In Tel Aviv, the Israel military command said two civilians were killed and seven Israeli soldiers wounded in the Kfar el-Luz area of southern Lebanon.

The soldiers were wounded in an ambush about eight miles west of the Syrian border, a spokesman said. He said Israeli troops later opened fire when a car failed to stop at a roadblock, killing the two occupants.

In another development, Israel dismissed as "nothing new" a report by Minnesota Attorney General Hubert Humphrey III that he had delivered a peace message from Jordan.

Humphrey, son of the late U.S. vice president, met last week with Jordan's King Hussein and said in a radio interview Sunday he later told Begin that Hussein felt peace talks might be started between the nations.

Sky ride facing its first test

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A $10 million, 60-car gondola ride over the Mississippi River for the 1984 World's Fair undergoes its first big test this week in seeking approval by the City Planning Commission.

If the project is to be ready in time for the fair's May 12, 1984, opeing day, workers must begin laying foundations by late August for the 310-foot towers on the east and west banks of the Mississippi.

The commission is the first of a half-dozen public agencies which must approve their project.

The other agencies include the U.S. Coast Guard, the state Department of Natural Resources, the city Department of Safety and Permits, the Orleans Parsh Levee Board, the city Department of Property Management, the Dock Board, and the Exhibition Hall Authority.

Carnival float manufacturer Blaine Kern, 56, and architect August Perez III, 50, are the project's developers and have formed a company called Mississippi Aerial River Transit, or MART.

Kern said all permits have been applied for.

Bob Becker, executive director of the City Planning Commission, said approval is likely, but not guaranteed.

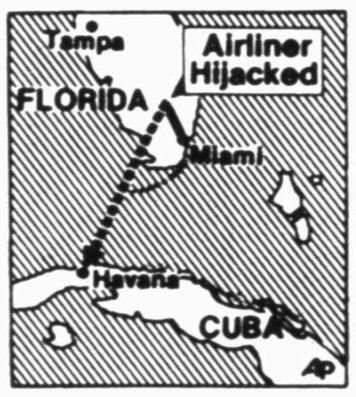
"We like the concept," Becker said. "It is a privately underwritten $10 million investment that is intended to provide both a tourist oriented thrill ride and a highly functional commuter service that could relieve some of the congestion on the Greater New Orleans Mississippi River Bridge."

On the other hand, however, are hundreds of planning and technical details that must be settled, including the impact on Algiers residents, parking facilities, land use changes, etc.

"To be worthwhile, the sustem has to reduce congestion, not create congestion," Becker said.

The sustem, to be built by Pomagalski, S.A. of Grenoble, France, would consist of 60 cars, each with a six-passenger capacity, operated by a hydraulic drive system.

'Reluctant' girl among persons seized in Delta Air Lines hijacking



TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Authorities in Cuba seized seven people, including an unwilling girl carrying a doll, after members of what had seemed to be a "family on a vacation trip" hijacked a Delta Air Lines flight.

The comandeering of the Miami-to-Tampa flight carrying 107 people Sunday was the third hijacking to Havana this month and the seventh since May 1, despite increased federal vigilance.

Passengers said the hijackers — three Spanish-speaking men, two women, a boy about 16 and a girl about 12 or 13 — waited until the plane was on its final approach to the Tampa airport.

They said one of the men then went into the plane's galley and held a stewardess hostage at knifepoint, while a second man threatened to ignite an aerosol spray can with a lighter.

After the plane landed in Cuba, Cuban officers boarded and the men pointed to the two women, the boy and the girl carrying a big doll, passengers said.

The youngsters had to be forced off the plane, one passenger said.

"The older man forced them," said Renaldo Begerano. "The Cuban soldiers grabbed the man by the collar and said, 'Why did you come back? You are going to jail.'"

The group looked "like a classical Cuban family on a vacation trip," said Dr. Barry Blass, a Tampa doctor who was on the plane.

No one was injured. The plane landed at Jose Marti International Airport in Havana about 12:30 p.m. and returned to Tampa at 4:40 p.m.

Robert Butler, agent in charge of the FBI office in Tampa, said that during the flight one of the hijackers mentioned he was not happy with his life in the United States. Another said he was trying to keep the family together and "was asked by yet another of the individuals to please keep quiet."

Delta spokesman Jim Ewing said from Atlanta that officials confirmed passengers' reports that one of the hijackers carried a knife and another had an aerosol can. But he said the spray was not ignited.

But one passenger, Linda Mahy of Oldsmar said, "He lit it. We saw a few flashes of fire. It petrified all of us. We thought we were all going to be torched."

Some of the passengers, including Begerano, were Cuban exiles who fled Cuba during the 1980 boatlift from Mariel and said they were afraid to land in Cuba.

Adelaido Prado, who fled Cuba in 1959, said she was afraid to go back to the Communist island. "I couldn't believe when the guy said that we were going back to Cuba. I said, 'No, no no!'"

She said some of the passengers began stuffing their jewelry into their pockets, trying to hide it, because they were afraid Cuban authorities would take their valuables.

Flight 722, a Boeing 727 with 100 passengers and seven crew members, left Miami at 10:50 a.m. and was over south-central Florida when it was diverted.

Although the Federal Aviation Administration has studied airport security, renewed the sky marshal program and made use of a "hijacker profile" developed in the 1970s, the agency has been unable to curb the spate of hijackings of Miami area flights that began May 1.

FAA spokesman Jack Barker said no sky marshals were aboard the flight hijacked Sunday.

Earlier this month, FAA officials trying to deter acts of air piracy released a list of hijackers who have received 10- to 20-year prison terms in Cuba for diverting American planes.

Most of the recent hijackers have been described by U.S. officials as "homesick Cubans" who were unable to return to Cuba legally.

A man who commandeered an Air Florida jet to Cuba July 7 by claiming to have a bomb, however, was an American.

Cuban hijacking eighth this year

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The seizure of a Delta Air Lines jet carrying 107 people by a hijacker who held a knife to a stewardess's throat was the third hijacking to Cuba this month.

Sunday's hijacking was the eighth this year in the United States, despite federal efforts to stop air piracy and pledges by Cuban officials that hijackers face long prison terms there.

Here are details on previous 1983 hijackings:

—July 7: An Air Florida jetliner carrying 47 people from Fort Lauderdale to Tampa was hijacked to Havana by a man claiming to have a bomb and described by passengers as "an All-American boy."

—July 2: Two men shouting "Go to Cuba" and flicking cigarette lighters near a bottle of gasoline diverted a Pan Am jetliner to Cuba on a flight from Miami to Orlando. The suspects had arrived in Florida during the 1980 boatlift from Cuba.

—June 14: A New Orleans man shouting "Cuba! Cuba!" hijacked an Eastern Airlines jet on a Miami-New York route, locking himself in the lavatory and threatening to blow up the plane.

—May 19: A wildly gesturing man claiming to have explosives forced an Eastern jet to Cuba on a Miami-New York route. Federal Aviation Administration officials later said there was no bomb.

—May 12: A woman armed with a plastic flare pistol hijacked a Capitol Air flight from San Juan to Miami and Chicago.

—May 1: On the same Capitol Air flight, a man tossed leaflets across the cabin publicizing his "hunger, unemployment, misery and grief." He barricaded himself in the lavatory and threatened to blow up the plane unless it went to Havana.

—Feb. 15: A man identified as Hussein Shey Kholya, a 37-year-old former Iranian air force pilot, hijacked a commuter flight from Killeen, Texas. He was told the plane could not go to Cuba, and it landed in Nuevo Laredo, Mexico.

Best use of Medicare made by those who know rules

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

If you're over 65, you probably know about Medicare, the federal health insurance program for the elderly.

But unless you know exactly how Medicare works, you may be paying more than you have to for health care.

Does your doctor accept "assignment," for example? What is an approved charge? How much will Medicare actually pay?

There are two parts of Medicare, one for doctors' bills and one for hospital charges.

When it comes to doctors' bills, Medicare generally will pay 80 percent of the approved charges for covered services above a fixed annual deductible, currently $75.

The approved charge — sometimes referred to as the reasonable charge — is not necessarily the same amount your doctor charges you. It is based on a formula involving all the fees charged by all the doctors in your area for a particular service.

The Health Care Financing Administration of the Department of Health and Human Services says that "because of the way approved charges are determined and because of the high rates of inflation in medical care prices, the approved charges are often less than doctors' and suppliers' actual charges."

You are protected against the difference between approved and actual charges if your doctor agrees to accept assignment. When a doctor agrees to accept assignment, he or she agrees to accept the amount approved by Medicare as payment in full — even if he normally charges more.

Here's what it means:

Suppose you go to your doctor for a cardiogram. The regular charge is $50. The approved charge, according to Medicare, is $35.

Assume you've already paid the $75 deductible for this year. (If you haven't, you'll have to pay the full bill yourself because the deductible means you're responsible for the first $75 in charges you incur.)

Medicare will pay 80 percent of the approved $35 charge for your cardiogram or $28. If your doctor agrees to accept assignment, all you must pay is the remaining $7. If he or she does not, you must pay $22 — 20 percent of the approved charge, plus the difference between the approved charge and the actual one.

Those extra charges can add up. According to a 1981 study by the Public Citizen Health Research Group, a consumer activist organization in Washington, D.C., a government survey showed that doctors billed Medicare beneficiaries more than $1 billion in excess fees in 1979.

You can save money by asking your doctor, in advance, if he or she will accept assignment. If not — and if you do not want to change doctors — try to find out ahead of time the difference between Medicare's approved charges and your doctor's fee schedule so at least you will be prepared for the bills.

Linda Graves rides an exercise bicycle at the Longview Regional Hospital, Longview, in the employee fitness center. The "Wellness Program" gives hospital employees an opportunity to ease day-to-day stress.

Doctors, nurses get dose of own medicine

LONGVIEW (AP) — Irene Bixby takes care of her "patients" — after they take care of their patients.

Ms. Bixby is a health care expert at Longview Regional Hospital — but her patients are doctors and nurses.

Longview Regional is one of a rapidly growing number of hospitals that offer employees fitness centers to stay in shape and ease the stress of day-to-day healing.

"Sometimes they'll be in surgery a long time and things won't always go well and they'll come in here and work away the tension," said Ms. Bixby, director of the two-month-old "Wellness Program."

"They say to me, 'I'm standing there watching a patient die of cancer and then I go and take a cigarette,'" she said. "I guess that is their way of dealing with stress."

Ms.Bixby said 50 employees — mostly nurses — have joined the program, housed in the pulmonary rehabilitation unit of the 250-employee hospital in East Texas. They exercise, diet and attend "wellness" seminars.

"There's a lot of stress here and it's very important for the employees to take care of themselves," Ms. Bixby said. "Exercise has a lot of subtle effects. And we've had pretty good success. They're starting to feel better and have started to have more energy."

Baylor University Medical Center in Dallas was one of the first hospitals to create a fitness program for employees, health care experts said. Methodist Hospital in Houston also has a large one.

The Baylor program — dubbed the Center for Physical Conditioning — began in 1978 as a retail business and continues to operate in much the same manner as a privte health club.

Politicians: Disclosure laws vague

DALLAS (AP) — High-priced campaigns are forcing many political candidates to resort to loans to fund their races, and politicians complain that vague disclosure laws are leaving them open to political, legal and ethical questions.

Thirteen of 16 statewide candidates last year loaned money to their campaigns, and their interpretations of the laws governing disclosure of the transactions varied widely, the Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday.

Gov. Mark White, the newspaper said, made a personal loan of $500,000 to his campaign, money received as a personal loan from RepublicBank Austin, where two law partners of his campaign treasurer are board members.

His campaign repaid White with interest in two weeks and White then repaid the exact amount of principal and interest to the bank.

On his subsequent campaign disclosure statement, White never mentioned the relationship with the bank.

Secretary of State John Fainter, White's chief political appointee and the officeholder in Texas charged with interpreting election laws, said White complied with the law.

Attorney General Jim Mattox made two loans to his campaign the same week a Seattle bank loaned his brother and sister an identical amount. Mattox's campaign repaid him one day before his relatives repaid the bank. Clinton Manges, whose political action committees contributed $50,000 to the Mattox campaign, was a major customer of the Seattle bank.

Mattox did not mention his relatives or the Seattle bank on his disclosure statements because, he said, his brother and sister were repaying a loan to him, so the money was his own.

But his disclosure statement is under investigation by Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle.

Disclosure laws are confusing and open to interpretation, complain many of the candidates and their aides.

"The nature of legislative drafting is such that there is not a clear-cut sentence in the entire election code," said Vic Terry, treasurer of Republican George Strake's losing campaign for lieutenant governor.

"It is really incredibly difficult," agreed Jane Hickey, campaign treasurer for state Treasurer Ann Richards. "I think we have set a minefield for candidates and treasurers and campaign managers ...There are problems with the law and what is required. You're just hanging out there, and you feel you're just hanging over a cliff."

But Jim Francis, the 1982 campaign manager for former Gov. Bill Clements, says "the law is very clear."

"The true source of the money is to be shown on the financial reports," Francis said. "It is the intent of the law that if you are borrowing money, that institution or person has to be listed."

The campaign finance disclosure law, written in 1973 and refined in 1981, requires candidates to disclose "the full name and complete address of each person who assisted in obtaining credit or a loan of money for or on behalf of the candidate."

Candidates also must list any person who "agreed to assume any financial obligation for or on behalf of the candidate...if the benefit of the credit...was to be involved directly or indirectly, in an election."

Violation of the law is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of up to $200.

But the law does not say whether the loan's source — in White's case, a bank — must be listed. And the law does not say whether a candidate should report the loan's source if that source is a person rather than a bank.

"It seems that it was the intent of the Legislature for us to say when a bank was providing money, directly or indirectly," said Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, whose financial reports listed the bank making each campaign loan, as well as co-guarantors.

Former State Sen. Bill Meier, R-Euless, who wrote the 1981 law, said the Legislature did not intend to require candidates to disclose the source of "personal funds" they pump into their campaigns.

"There is not a specific requirement for listing the name of the bank," he said. "There is a specific requirement for listing any person who helped you obtain credit."

John Hildreth, state director of the political watchdog group Common Cause, said he believes it is legal for candidates not to name banks as the source of a loan but may raise ethical questions about "how up-front you are being with people."

Only 3 percent of children who need transplants will get them

HOUSTON (AP) — There are 2,000 children across the country who need liver transplants, says Butch Davis of Beaumont. His daughter is one of them.

Only 60, or 3 percent, of those children will be matched with suitable organ transplants, Davis said, quoting liver transplant pioneer Dr. Thomas Starzl of Philadelphia. The others will die.

Davis' daughter, 8-month-old Courtney Davis, is currently at the pediatric intensive care unit of Texas Children's Hospital in Houston. She will die unless she gets a liver transplant soon, doctors have said.

Another Texas infant, 10-month-old Ashley Bailey of Abilene, is in a Minneapolis hospital awaiting a donated organ.

There are at least 12 other children in the Houston area alone who suffer from liver disease and eventually will need organ transplants, the Houston Chronicle reported Sunday.

Davis, his wife Lori, and some of the parents of other Houston-area children who suffer from liver diseases met recently at Texas Children's Hospital. They discussed the need for more liver donors and more medical facilities that perform the transplant operation.

The parents said they would like to see a professional at every hospital who would seek organ donations and create a pool of donated organs. Under such a system, they said, an adequate number of organs would be available and the agonizing search that currently must be undertaken in all the cases would be eliminated.

But many doctors and organ procurement specialists doubt there could ever be enough donated organs to supply all needy patients.

Texas families awaiting liver donations also are concerned that the few hospitals where the transplants are performed are so far away. Transportation time is a crucial factor because recipients must get to the hospital where the surgery will take place within six hours of the time an organ is located.

Dr. George Douglass Ferry of Texas Children's Hospital said a center where liver transplants can be performed is in preliminary planning stages at the Houston hospital, but its board first must approve the program.

Ferry said he looks forward to a day when individual appeals for organs do not have to be made for each patient.

"I want to find a way to do this without individual appeals for each patient, because I think that, although necessary, it is not the way to do things," Ferry said. "There are negative aspects involved in such appeals."

Search for 'Latin eyes' ends in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — "The Eyes of Texas" are on an advertising campaign produced here that features the romance of Mexico and a popular liquor.

The new campaign for Juarez Tequila, previewing in Texas and later to run nationwide, features a pair of Mexican-American eyes that belong to Doris Lopez, a Dallas model with the Kim Dawson Agency.

Veiled behind black lace, the eyes invite viewers to taste Juarez Tequila.

"We were looking for Latin eyes," said Paul Lux, president of David Sherman Corp., distributor and bottler of Juarez Tequila, the No. 1 selling tequila in Texas.

"Obviously, you wouldn't want a Scandinavian advertising tequila," Lux said.

St. Louis-based David Sherman searched for the right pair of eyes in New York, Chicago, Atlanta, Oklahoma City, Kansas City, St. Louis and Dallas before selecting the model.

"We literally checked out hundreds of eyes for the advertising program," Lux said. "When we finally photographed Doris...there was no contest."

Trial enters punishment phase

HOUSTON (AP) — Jurors begin hearing testimony today on the punishment for Billy Ray Clore, who faces a possible 20-year prison sentence after being convicted of attempted murder in the shooting of his comatose father.

Defense attorney Jack Zimmermann has said he will ask that Clore, 26, be given a probated sentence.

Clore had been tried for murder in the death of Robert Clore, 62, but was found guilty Friday of the lesser attempted murder charge.

Texans to overtake New Yorkers

WASHINGTON (AP) — By the year 2000, Texas will pass New York as the nation's second largest state — both in population and number of jobs — according to a nonprofit research organization.

The National Planning Association says that by 2000, Texas will have a population of 18.8 million, or 4.5 million more than in 1980. Only California will be more populous.

Eighth horse killed in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — An eighth mare has been killed in a series of bizarre mutilations of horses that began in March, police said.

The Appaloosa mare was found dead in far-south Dallas. It and seven other horses were killed and sexually mutilated with tool handles or pipes in four incidents.

Company soups up its soap

By MICHAEL KUCHWARA
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — The third floor office with cathedral windows and early American furniture doesn't look like a command post, but it's the nerve center where Joanna Lee is marshaling her troops in the battle to save "Search for Tomorrow" from extinction.

In the corner sits a huge television screen, directly opposite Ms. Lee's desk. From there she can monitor daily tapings of the venerable soap opera which became her responsibility in March when she took over as the show's executive producer.

"I work very closely with the writers. I am on top of every single script," she said recently during a short break in her hectic schedule. "There is not one script that is on the air that I have not personally put my pen to — not one."

"Search," which first went on the air in September 1951, has been floundering for several years. In March 1982, its owners, Procter & Gamble, moved the show from CBS to NBC. The network change didn't help, and the ratings declined even further.

That's when Ms. Lee, a 15-year television veteran who has written 10 TV movies and hundreds of scripts for other shows, was hired.

She immediately went to work to rejuvenate the show.

Nothing escaped her attention. Even the lighting was changed.

"The more contemporary lighting we're experimenting with now is lighter and brighter," she said. "Costuming is more up-to-date and more elegant, for the people who should be elegant."

That switch was most apparent in the character of wealthy businessman Travis Santell, played by actor Rod Arrants.

"He's the hero on which myths are built," Ms. Lee said. "They had him lounging around in sweatshirts and Levis. No, my heros wear beautiful Italian suits and ties. We got him dressed again."

More important changes were made with other characters. Some actors were not being used to their best advantage, said Ms. Lee, specifically mentioning young Lisa Peluso who plays Wendy.

"I think Lisa is the most beautiful girl in daytime. She's incredible," Ms. Lee said. "When I came here, she was still little Wendy in bobby sox.

"I took a look at her and thought, 'That's Joan-Collins-eat-your-heart-out time.'"

The bobby sox went out the window, and in less than two months, Wendy became a vixen, even breaking up her best friend's marriage.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ983 ♡84 ◇74 ♣K652
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
2 NT Pass 3 ♠ Pass
4 ♠ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Partner's cue-bid in clubs shows a maximum two no trump opening bid with good trump support. Therefore, you need not be ashamed of your hand. Since you have no first-round control to cue-bid, bid five clubs to show the king in that suit.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J ♡K8753 ◇Q103 ♣9872
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass
2 ♠ Dble Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—If you elected to take any action at all, there is something about takeout doubles you don't understand. Had partner wanted to hear your best suit, he would have doubled one spade! Now he is making a penalty double of two spades and, since your hand includes a trump honor he thinks the enemy holds, you have an excellent hand for him. Pass.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠987532 ♡J6 ◇AK107 ♣A
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 NT Pass
What do you bid now?
A.—You cannot be sure now useful your hand will be to partner, but you do know that you have at least an eight-card spade fit, and your hand should produce more tricks in a spade contract than at no trump. Jump to four spades. That is a shutout bid — had you wanted to investigate another contract, you had a wide choice of forcing bids available.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠7 ♡AK9 ◇Q10762 ♣AK83
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one heart. What action do you take?
A.—Although you probably have the best hand at the table, there is no action you can take that is not fraught with danger. An overcall of one no trump asks for trouble if partner is weak; two diamonds is 1400 territory; and a double could lead to an unmanageable auction. Pass, and see what develops.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK10954 ♡93 ◇6 ♣AKJ3
The biddng has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass
What do you bid now?
A.—You are too strong to just rebid two spades. Indeed, spades may not even be the right spot, which is why we dislike a jump to three spades. A bid of two clubs is most flexible. If partner passes, you are probably in the right spot. And if he does anything else, you can rebid spades to show a 6-4 distribution and a good hand.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠732 ♡84 ◇AKQ74 ♣KQ6
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ◇ Pass
2 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—This is simply a matter of addition. Partner has shown a balanced 19-20 points and you have 14 and a good five-card suit. To bid less than six no trump would be criminal negligence.

Swifter justice

Past rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court have made it more difficult for states to impose the death penalty and easier for convicted murderers to delay execution indefinitely by filing endless appeals. Not long ago the court moved back in the direction of swifter, surer justice in rulings on three capital punishment cases.

The most significant came in a Texas case in which the Supreme Court ruled that federal appeals courts can refuse to grant stays of execution even when a death row inmate has filed a non-frivolous appeal. Encouraging lower courts to reaffirm a death sentence after rejecting an appeal should relieve the Supreme Court of the burden of handling so many last-minute appeals.

The ruling should also tend to shorten an appeals process — typically five or six years in death penalty cases — that most legal experts acknowledge has become excessively long.

In a California case arising from passage of the Briggs Initiative in 1978, the court ruled 5-4 that judges can be required to inform penalty-phase jurors that a convicted murderer could someday be set free even if he is given a life sentence "without possibility of parole."

A convicted murderer had challenged the judge's instructions on grounds that it made the jury more likely to impose the death penalty. The court ruled, sensibly enough, that telling jurors a governor can commute a life sentence is nothing more than a statement of fact and is not inherently prejudicial.

The court also declared in ruling on a Florida case that the death penalty can be imposed for capital crimes even when the "aggravating circumstances" considered in sentencing are not specifically spelled out in state law. This ruling too seems to affirm a broader concept of justice as opposed to legalistic overelaboration.

None of these rulings was unanimous. Several justices and many civil libertarians will continue to believe that the more legal barriers to execution, the better. Much of the public will no doubt continue to believe that the 1,200 inmates now on death row have already been given many more chances than their victims had.

Another View:

Chrysler did it!

Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca had the blissful grin of a bear full of honey at the National Press Club on Wednesday, and with good cause. His company, which escaped bankruptcy three years ago only because Washington guaranteed loans that kept the company alive, will be ready to burn the rest of its $1.2 billion federally backed mortgage sometime in September — seven years before the due date.

In 1980 nobody thought that Chrysler had a prayer, even in a good sales year, and no sooner had Chrysler got its money than the bottom fell out of the American automobile market. Many objected to the deal — we among them — because it looked like the first of many rescues in which failing companies would be dragged along at half-mast by public subsidies.

Chrysler stock that was worth less than $5 in 1980 was worth $30 on Wednesday. Sales are up 35 percent over last year. Record losses have turned to a prospect of record profits in the second quarter of the year. Iacocca was generous in victory. He didn't say, "I told you so." He didn't have to. Sweeter than honey, actually.

Iacocca was generous in sharing credit for Chrysler's turnaround with the company's workers, its suppliers and the banks that actually made the loans. And he was realistic about the challenges that the company still faces. If interest rates start rising again, he said, all bets on the future are off.

The first challenge is negotiating the workers' share of Chrysler's new prosperity. The company's hourly employees have gone more than two years without pay raises, in effect contributing $1.1 billion to the Chrysler cause.

Some workers want to get back to wage parity with Ford and General Motors immediately. Douglas A. Fraser, retired president of the United Auto Workers, who joined the Chrysler board of directors as part of the loan plan, has read the books and says that parity is out of the question, but he said that this does not mean that the union will not fight for "fairness and equity."

There were, as Iacocca said Wednesday, many helpers and many sacrificers in the Chrysler success, but it is also very much a personal victory for the 58-year-old chairman and for enlightened management — the kind that the nation will need more and more of in the future if it is to translate its immense wealth and talents into an industrial renewal. All the help in the world would not have pulled Chrysler through with the wrong man at the controls or the wrong man at his side — someone with less common sense and vision than Fraser.

American business should study the Chrysler story page by page, because there are lessons there in team play for managers of not only weak companies but strong.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, July 18, the 199th day of 1983. There are 166 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 18 in 64 A.D., the Great Fire of Rome began. Legend has it that the emperor Nero set the fire and fiddled while the city burned.

On this date:

In 1812, the British introduced the concept of voting by secret ballot.

In 1938, pilot Douglas "Wrong Way" Corrigan arrived in Ireland after leaving New York with the announced intention of flying to California.

In 1940, the Democratic National Convention in Chicago nominated Franklin Roosevelt for a third term as president.

And, in 1969, a car driven by Sen. Edward Kennedy plunged off a bridge into a tidal pool on Chappaquiddick Island, Mass. — resulting in the death of a passenger, Mary Jo Kopechne.

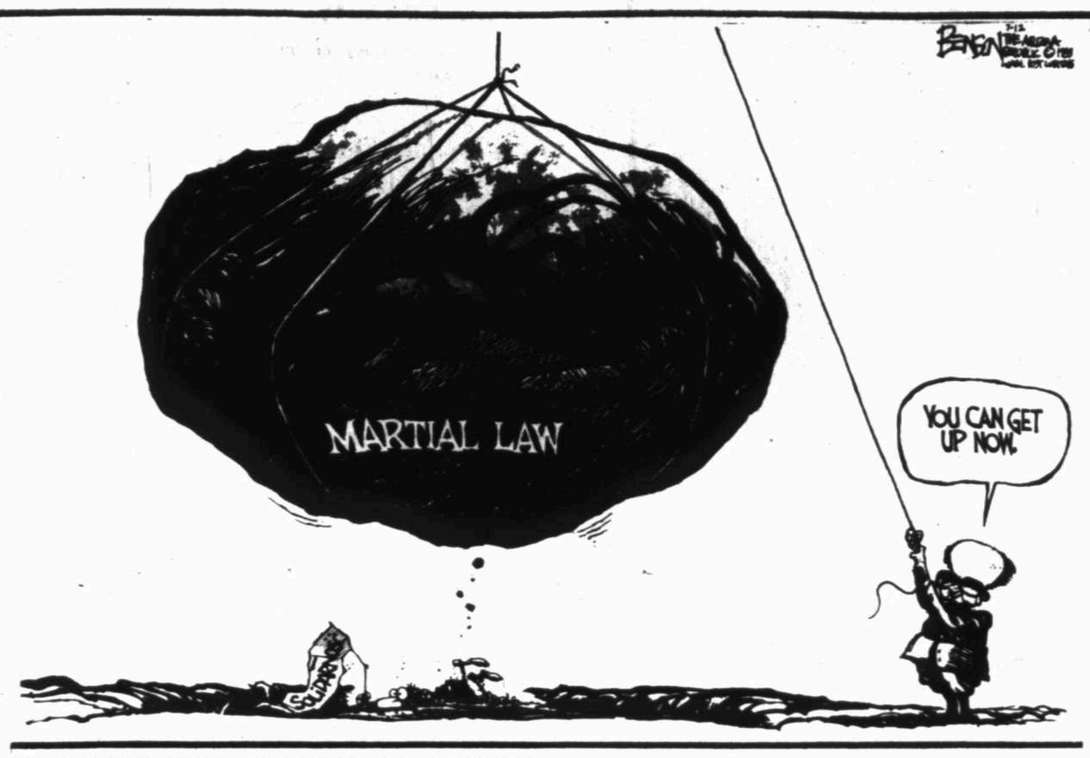
Ten years ago: The Pentagon announced the end of U.S. minesweeping operations in North Vietnamese waters, and 18 minesweeping ships withdrew.

Five years ago: The U.S. government took over control of the export of American oil technology to the Soviet Union in a move seen as a response to Soviet treatment of dissidents.

One year ago: Iraq reported a fifth consecutive day of heavy fighting as its forces tried to repel an Iranian invasion of southern Iraq.

Today's birthdays: Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko is 74. Comedian Red Skelton is 70. Sen John Glenn, D-Ohio, is 62.

Thought for today: "Money is like a sixth sense without which you cannot make a complete use of the other five." — W. Somerset Maugham, English writer (1874-1965).



WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Hounds didn't howl at Vesco

WASHINGTON — The bloodhounds of the press are in hot pursuit of the mole who slipped Jimmy Carter's political secrets to the opposition during the 1980 presidential election campaign.

Jack Anderson

Let us suppose that President Reagan should become personally implicated in the scandal, that criminal charges should be laid before a grand jury, that an accused accomplice should be rewarded with a presidential appointment, that he should fail two lie-detector tests and that the president's personal attorney should counsel a witness against being "too open with the FBI." How the bloodhounds would bay!

Then let's say that incriminating documents should be withheld from the grand jury, that jurors should accuse the prosecutors of protecting White House witnesses and that the grand jury foreman should charge the Justice Department with "duplicity," "manipulation" and "cover-up" to protect the Reagan administration. What a howl reporters would raise!

Finally, let's say that the grand jury should want to bring indictments but that the Justice Department should refuse to prosecute. Does anyone doubt that the news hounds would holler to high heaven?

This startling scenario is not wild imagination; such events have already occurred. But the president who became entangled in this mess was Jimmy Carter, not Ronald Reagan. What happened to the vigilant press during those explosive events? Where were the banner headlines? In fact, there was scarcely a murmur from the press.

What are the details of this suppressed scandal?

Fugitive financier Robert Vesco, described in a biography as "the largest international swindler of our times," made a deal with some Georgians to fix the federal case against him. The Georgians had ties inside Carter's White House.

Vesco agreed to transfer a block of stock worth $10 million to the Georgia group. But first he demanded two signals that the Georgians really could pull the necessary strings inside the White House. He wanted the Justice Department to drop its attempts to extradite him from Costa Rica, and he insisted that President Carter himself telephone Costa Rican president Daniel Oduber about the Vesco case.

Not long afterward, Vesco became satisfied that both conditions had been met. He then transferred the $10 million stock through a complex financial maneuver to the Georgia group. Here is the incriminating sequence:

On Feb. 8, 1977, a small-town Georgia attorney, Spencer Lee IV, showed up at the White House after a visit with Vesco in Costa Rica. Lee had a 3:00 p.m. appointment with his boyhood buddy, Richard Harden, who was a trusted Carter aide. The two friends also had dinner together that evening. Both later admitted that Lee told Harden about Vesco's multi-million dollar offer.

The next day, at precisely 4:47 p.m., President Carter telephoned President Oduber in Costa Rica. This was an unlikely person for a president to be calling only 20 days after taking office. Carter told the FBI, according to a Justice Department memo, that he placed the call to congratulate Oduber for receiving "a conservation award." Vesco later confessed that Oduber told him Carter had spoken, as pre-arranged, about the Vesco case.

A week later — on Feb. 15, to be precise — Harden dropped by the Oval Office for a meeting with the president. The White House later admitted that Harden spoke to Carter about Vesco's offer to pay millions of dollars for a political fix. Recounts a Justice Department memo: "The president then proceeded to write a note to the Attorney General stating, 'Please see Spencer Lee from Albany when he requests an appointment.' The handwritten note was initialed J.C."

Lee never sought the appointment. It was unnecessary. Someone else arranged for the extradition proceedings against Vesco to be dropped. Former New York Times reporter Charles Kaiser says he was told that Carter himself made the decision to stop the extradition attempt.

This information assertedly came from Robert Fiske, a former U.S. attorney in New York City, who in an interview hedged on the question of Carter's personal involvement. All Fiske would confirm was that the ultimate decision to stop the extradition proceedings was made by the White House.

These facts were laid before the Justice Department, which was controlled, of course, by the White House. Lee failed two lie-detector tests. Harden refused to take a test; his testimony was described in Justice Department documents as "perjurious." Incriminating documents and testimony were withheld from the grand jury. The president's personal attorney, Charles Kirbo, was picked up on tape advising a witness, "I think it's a mistake to be too open with the FBI."

Members of the grand jury claim that the prosecutors seemed to be protecting White House witnesses. One juror said the chief prosecutor "tried to lead the jury by the nose." The foreman, Ralph Ulmer, tried to resign, charging that "coverup activities are being orchestrated within the Department of Justice under the concept that the administration must be protected at all costs."

In the end, the Justice Department attorneys notified the grand jury that they would not prosecute anyone, so the jurors considered it futile to issue any indictments. Explained the foreman in a report to the judge: "The Justice Department told the grand jury there would be no indictments because they would sign none... Jury was asked only to clear those involved... Jury neither indicted nor cleared anyone."

Footnote: What happened to Spencer Lee IV after he admitted to the White House that he was involved, at least temporarily, in a conspiracy to obstruct justice for a multi-million dollar payoff? President Carter appointed him to a judicial nominating committee that helped to select federal judges.

INSIDE REPORT:

Pope to confront South Africa

WASHINGTON — Pope John Paul II is planning a tour of Southern Africa late this year which for the first time would turn the full moral and religious power of the papacy directly against South Africa's policy of apartheid — the legal separation of the white minority that rules South Africa from the black majority.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Papal advisers agree with the pope that in view of his strong, courageous criticism of the communist-military junta in Poland during his trip there last month, he could not trim his moral sails in South Africa. Yet, for all its faults, South Africa is Western-oriented and anti-communist.

The pope conceivably could avoid the problem by bypassing South Africa on his visit to adjoining countries in black Africa. But Vatican insiders are certain he would not duck out of a delicate situation, raising the likelihood of a direct, on-the-spot confrontation between a pope and South Africa's racial policies for the first time.

THE STRAW VOTES

Despite opposition from some of his state and regional operatives, Sen. John Glenn now leans toward a total boycott of all future Democratic Party straw ballots designed to show a preference for a Democratic presidential nominee.

Glenn knows he does best in the largest possible forum and worst in the smallest — including straw ballots — where liberal zealots can muster their maximum strength. Glenn came in third in the Massachusetts straw vote but finessed two others: California and Wisconsin.

Big ones coming up include New Jersey in September and Florida, Maine and Iowa in October. Glenn's rationale for staying out would parallel the strong criticism of presidential straw votes by party chairman Charles Mannatt as meaningless gestures that consume time and money and create intra-party hostility.

WEST VIRGINIA SHOOTOUT

Gov. Jay Rockefeller, who plans to run for the Senate when his term ends next year, sent an emissary to his long-time political enemy, Arch Moore, a former Republican governor of West Virginia, with this warning: If you run for governor next year, count on my total opposition, including financial support for the Democratic nominee.

But Moore, who beat Rockefeller for governor in 1972 and then lost to him in the 1980 statehouse race, sent this word back to his old opponent: I will be running for the U.S. Senate next year against you, not for governor!

That sets the stage for a third titanic struggle in the Mountain State between the the fabulously-rich New York Democrat who decided to make West Virginia his home and political base, and the plain-spoken Republican. They will be contesting for the seat that has been held by Democratic senator Jennings Randolph since 1959.

LEAVE FAITH ALONE

Backbiting against White House aide Faith Whittlesey by her colleagues came to a sudden stop because of a flat order delivered by senior aides James Baker and Edwin Meese.

Whittlesey is a prominent conservative Republican politician from Pennsylvania who served as President Reagan's ambassador to Switzerland. But from the moment she replaced Elizabeth Dole (now secretary of transportation) as Reagan's assistant for liaison with the public, Whittlesey was the target of personal attacks by "pragmatist" White House staffers. At one point, she called communications chief David Gergen into her office and demanded that he lay off.

Shortly thereafter, Baker and Meese brought the affair to a head at a White House staff meeting. They said the poisonous remarks to reporters about Whittlesey not only hurt her, but also the president, and must stop.

CHARLEY REESE

Education's problem at the top

To give the education funding matter some perspective, let's say that a private business such as a bank went to pot. The tellers did not keep the accounts straight; the loan officers made nothing but bad loans; the new account executives did not get new accounts.

Charley Reese

As the board of directors became aware of this, the officers of the bank stepped forward and said, "Yes, all of that is true; now give us a raise and increase our budget."

Such a scenario is so absurd that it is difficult to write it with a straight face. The directors would fire the officers and bring in a new management team.

Yet public education administrators are getting away with such a scenario. Yes, they say, the product is bad, so increase the budget. No way should that be done. Paying incompetents more money will not increase their competence; it merely indicates your own incompetence.

The job of management is to manage. At all times in recent years there have been classrooms, students, teachers and textbooks. Therefore, money cannot be used as an excuse for any failure in the core duty of the public education system. That duty is to educate children from kindergarten through the 12th grade.

Prudent managers, faced with a shortage of money, prune auxiliary services and luxuries. So maybe the school doesn't have an indoor gym. Maybe you cannot offer this extracurricular activity or service. Maybe you cut back on administrative overhead.

In the meantime, none of this has anything to do with the basic instruction in the classrooms. Reading, writing, math, science, history and geography were taught long before the advent of computers, film strips, motion-picture projectors, television and other doodads that business has dreamed up to sell to school systems.

Moreover, test scores do not measure the lack of or plentiful supply of doodads and auxiliary courses and services. The scores measure basic knowledge.

The point is obvious: Something has prevented teachers from doing their jobs with maximum effect in the classroom. That something cannot be money. Teachers may, in fact, deserve more pay, but to blame, as educational administrators and politicians are doing, the problems primarily on teacher pay scales is to neatly shift the blame from the shoulders of administrators to the shoulders of the teachers. It is also an insult to the teachers, most of whom conscientiously teach despite the pay scale.

School administrators have no function other than to create an environment in which teaching can take place. They are in terms of value, entirely subservient to the teacher. Like the janitor who cleans the classroom, the school administrator's function is simply to give the teacher the tools — tangible and intangible — with which to do the job.

We would do well to follow the logic of private enterprise and fire the managers before we begin to worry about the employees. Competent managers will motivate and encourage employees to do their best. Incompetent managers will destroy morale and put impediments in the way of employees.

I, for one, am completely unwilling to advance one more penny to the educational bureaucracy until the managers and administrators who failed to be good stewards of previous resources are fired.

Nothing could be more pointless or more asinine than to pour good money after bad into the same hands that have mismanaged previous budgets.

Yet that is what the NEA and many politicians are advocating. That is what many school administrators are advocating. It's an old, old con game and you would think the public would have caught on by now.

Give me a 20 percent reduction in administrators and I'll go stump for 20 percent increase in teachers' salaries. But don't ask me to finance bad administrators who have driven more good teachers out of the classrooms than low pay scales ever will.

The American people are generous in supporting education, but that generosity will evaporate unless there are structural and management changes at the top of a faltering industry.

'Miracle Kid' recovers from burns

ATLANTA (AP) — The "Miracle Kid" isn't quite ready to visit the amusement park yet, but his amazed doctors say 4-year-old Jeremy Peck of Gainesville is on the road to recovery.

Jeremy suffered burns over 93 percent of his body June 13 when he was trapped in a flaming van. Given little chance to live, he was taken to the Shriners' Burns Institute in Galveston, Texas, one of the world's premier centers for treatment of burn victims.

But after Jeremy's fifth major skin graft operation last week, his parents got some good news. Doctors told his father that Jeremy "is out of the woods" and is going to be fine.

"Medically, he should be dead," his father, Michael Peck, said in an interview with The Atlanta Constitution and The Atlanta Journal published over the weekend. "Most of them burned this bad do not survive.

"Every time the doctor comes in the room he just can't believe how Jeremy is doing," Peck said. "He's amazed and says it's just a miracle that he survived."

Jeremy was hurt on June 13 when he and his mother, Cathy Peck, went to visit his father at the Gainesville Health Care Center, where Peck works as a cook. Mrs. Peck went inside to chat for a minute, leaving Jeremy in the van.

When she came outside, the van was engulfed in flames. Peck was able to get the boy out, but he had been badly burned by the intense heat of the burning van.

Peck said it still isn't known how the fire started.

Jeremy first was taken to the Northeast Georgia Medical Center in Gainesville, and then to Doctors Hospital in Augusta. But his physicians realized he would need specialized treatment to have a chance to survive, and the Galveston hospital sent a plane for him.

The Shriners are picking up the costs of Jeremy's treatment, and also the Pecks' expenses, including meals and an apartment near the hospital.

Jeremy is ready to come home, his father said, adding, "He says he wants to go to Six Flags."

Peck took his son to the Atlanta amusement park shortly before the June accident. "He talks about Monster Plantation (a feature of the park). I promised him I'd take him there when he gets better," Peck said.

After two more skin grafts, Jeremy should be able to leave the hospital in five or six weeks, his father said. For 12 to 18 months after that, he will have to wear a special suit with hood and mask to keep pressure on the grafted skin, and complete recovery could take even longer.

Beatles' studio to open to public

LONDON (AP) — The Abbey Road recording studio in London, used by the Beatles at the height of their fame, opens its doors to the public today for the first time.

Fans not only will get a look at the studio but — for a $6.80 admission fee — will view Beatles film clips and listen to recordings which the rock group never released.

Electric and Musical Industries, an entertainment giant which owns the facilities in north London, is opening Studio Two through Sept. 11 for three shows a day, seven days a week.

The studio has been fitted out with the original equipment used by the Beatles, whose first hit recorded there was "Love Me Do." They later immortalized the studio complex with an album named "Abbey Road."

"We expect to see visitors from all over the world," said studio manager Ken Townsend, a former sound engineer with the group.

"People kept writing and telephoning, saying 'Can we come to Abbey Road and look at the studios,' so we decided to help them out," he told a reporter.

Prince watches racing trials

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Britain's Prince Andrew, spending part of his leave from the Royal Navy watching the America's Cup racing trials off Newport, took a helicopter for a spin over the sailing course.

Andrew, 23, third in line to the British throne, made his last round of public appearances on his North American tour Sunday. He had been visiting Newport at the invitation of the Victory Syndicate, sponsor of Great Britain's entry in the Cup races.

After services at Trinity Church, where he sat in a booth once occupied by George Washington, the prince flew a chopper over Rhode Island Sound.

"He's a good pilot," said Glenn Wales, who sat alongside the prince during the flight. Andrew, who saw action as a helicopter pilot in the Falklands Islands war last year, was to depart today for a private three-week Canadian vacation.

Bernstein

LAWRENCE, Mass. (AP) — Composer Leonard Bernstein is going home again — in part to celebrate his 65th birthday but also to help a resident dash a claim that it's the worst place to live in the United States.

Ever since 1981, when "Places Rated Almanac" used government statistics to list the Lawrence-Haverhill area as the 277th best place to live in the U.S. — out of 277 entries — Laurence Frizzell has been trying to dispel the last-place notion.

Frizzell, 29, said Friday that his efforts will peak Aug. 25 when Bernstein returns home for a birthday bash and concert.

"It's going to be a good old-fashioned American birthday party; we're going to have a lot of fun with this," Frizzell said.

Bernstein, a conductor who composed "West Side Story," hasn't seen the city since he was 18.

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Movie star Charlton Heston may be able to part the Red Sea, but he and other members from the TV miniseries "Chiefs" crew were stopped by state and local politicians in a charity tennis event.

"I have connections upstairs if we get in trouble," the 58-year-old actor warned before his match Sunday, referring to his role as Moses in "The Ten Commandments."

State Reps. David Wilkins and Robert Sheheen squeaked by Heston and his teammate, "Chiefs" director Jerry London, in straight sets, 7-6, 6-4. Greenville Mayor Bill Workman and Rep. Harriet Keyserling beat actor Paul Sorvino and another crew member 4-6, 6-3, 6-4.

The three-alarm blaze at Sunset Boulevard and Queens Road, reported at 12:15 a.m., raged for more than an hour before county firefighters contained the flames, said Los Angeles County sheriff's Deputy John Broussard.

Broussard said the rock star owns the building but didn't know if Stewart had been contacted.

The deputy said the fire was "suspected arson." A county fire dispatcher, who declined to give his name, said arson was "most likely" because the building was vacant and lacked any utilities, such as gas or electricity, that could have touched off the blaze.

Exercise boosts 'good' cholesterol

Dear Dr. Solomon: I read in your book about how exercise can increase the good cholesterol and how it could keep a person from getting a heart attack. I've already had a heart attack. Is there any point to my beginning to exercise now? — Mickey, Miami Beach, Fla.

Dear Mickey: There is evidence that moderate exercise can increase high-density lipoprotein (HDL) levels (the good cholesterol) and decrease low-density lipoprotein cholesterol levels in men who have had myocardial infarctions. This conclusion is based on a study of 42 men by Dr. Fiona C. Ballantyne and her colleagues at the Royal Infirmary and the Victoria Infirmary in Glasgow, Scotland.

Men who exercised for six months had more than a 14 percent increase in HDL cholesterol, while the level in those who did not exercise remained unchanged.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband is going to have a coronary bypass operation, and I think the thing that bothers him most is whether he will be able to go back to work. I try to reassure him but it doesn't seem to do any good. Maybe I'm too optimistic. Do people who have heart surgery usually go back to work? — Mrs. K.F., San Francisco, Calif.

Dear Mrs. F.: The results of a study conducted by researchers from the Boston University School of Medicine and Harvard Medical School may give you and your husband some general idea of the likelihood of his returning to work. Of the 150 patients who had been employed during the year prior to the operation, almost three-fourths resumed employment within six months. In addition, almost one-fifth of those who had not been employed started working after undergoing the operation.

Among the factors that seem to be useful in predicting a patient's return to work are the educational level and family income. The person's occupation or the level of physical exertion required on the job were less important.

Four-year-old Tasha Bevan sits in the lap of her father, Del Ray, after being found alive and well. The girl was abducted Thursday from a suburban Salt Lake theater. She was rescued late Saturday from an abandoned school house in the Idaho town of Strevell. Tasha's mother, Reta, is in the background.

Abducted child found in Idaho

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The parents of a 4-year-old girl found in an Idaho ghost town after being abducted from a suburban movie theater three days earlier say they are grateful and "thrilled to death" to have her home.

Tasha Bevan, the blonde, blue-eyed daughter of Del Ray and Reta Bevan, was reunited with her parents Sunday as authorities pressed a search for her abductor.

The weary child managed to say "cheese" for photographers at a brief news conference.

Tasha disappeared Thursday after leaving her seat at a movie theater in Kearns, a Salt Lake City suburb, to get a drink of water. Authorities say her abductor, when located, will face tough new Utah anti-kidnapping laws passed in response to a string of recent child abductions and slayings in the state.

Salt Lake County sheriff's deputies planned to meet today with detectives and the FBI to discuss the case.

Authorities refused to speculate on a motive for the abduction. But Sheriff Pete Hayward said officers were awaiting results of medical tests to determine if Tasha had been sexually abused.

Tasha's disappearance from the Twin Valley Theaters sparked a countywide search that involved over 100 law enforcement officers and up to 2,000 volunteers who scoured fields, canals and knocked on doors in a vain effort to find her.

She was found after a self-described "biker" telephoned Box Elder County sheriff's deputies late Saturday from Snowville along the Utah-Idaho line to say he had found "a small girl in an abandoned building" in the ghost town of Strevell, Idaho, just over the border from Utah.

'Fairness' issue put on front burner

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's aides, concerned about the potential political damage from the "fairness" issue, are working to dispel a perception that the administration treats poor people unfairly.

During the past week, the administration turned a spotlight on its efforts in civil rights areas to counter anticipated negative publicity during Senate Judiciary Committee hearings on Reagan's controversial plan to revamp the U.S. Civil Rights Commission.

Officials believe that by focusing on civil rights, they can help fight what they see as a "misperception" that Reagan has helped the wealthy at the expense of the poor.

One White House official acknowledged that the president's aides see no chance that he will draw "massive numbers of black votes" if he seeks reelection in 1984.

But the official said it was hoped that the steps being taken "will reduce hostility" while improving Reagan's standing with "middle-of-the-road Americans" who are concerned about "the standards government sets."

During a period of seven days, the administration took the following actions:

On Saturday, July 9, the president used his weekly radio address to announce a long-awaited initiative to beef up the nation's fair-housing laws.

The next day, Attorney General William French Smith published a long article in The Washington Post about the administration's civil rights efforts.

On Monday, the government filed a civil suit in U.S. District Court in Birmingham, Ala., charging that Alabama's public colleges and universities maintained a system of racial discrimination. It was the first such suit the administration has filed.

On Tuesday, the president unveiled the specific fair-housing proposals.

On Wednesday, the Justice Department asked the federal courts in Mississippi to overturn election district plans in two counties there, arguing that they were racially discriminatory. Also Wednesday, Reagan met with several Republican women to talk about child support and pension equity.

On Thursday, Reagan signed an executive order calling for government agencies to develop plans for increasing minority participation in government grants and contracts.

On Friday, Vice President George Bush addressed the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's convention in New Orleans, and Reagan shook hands with a group of "gifted and talented" minority students who were visiting the White House.

While the timing of some of the events was coincidental, one well-placed White House official, speaking with the understanding that he would not be further identified, said the flurry of activity was at least partially tied to the Senate hearings as well as a political need "to demonstrate good faith" in civil rights efforts.

Man to fight against retirement

BRANFORD, Conn. (AP) — A 72-year-old says he'll fight "as a matter of principle" a law that forced him to retire from public-school teaching, even though he's obtained a job at a private school.

Armand Zimmerman said in an interview last week that because he has accepted a contract with the private Country School at Madison, he will drop his request for a temporary court order requiring him to be rehired at Branford High School.

But he said he still intends to sue the state to fight a law that requires teachers to retire at age 70 unless they obtain annual approval from the board of education. The Branford board said he was let go because of to budget constraints.

Plague victim doing 'very well'

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — A 15-year-old plague victim "is doing very well," but it is unclear how she contracted a form of the disease not normally spread from one person to another, officials said.

The girl, whose name was not released, is the 15th person to contract plague in New Mexico this year, Dr. Harry Hull, a state medical epidemiologist, said Sunday.

Hull said the teen-ager was hospitalized Thursday with septicemic plague, which is not transmitted by other humans and in which the disease-carrying organism goes directly into the bloodstream.

Driver may get smuggling charge

EL TORO, Calif. (AP) — The driver who abandoned 40 California-bound Mexicans in a jam-packed rental truck on a major freeway could be charged with smuggling illegal aliens, but authorities doubt the person ever will be caught.

The 40 men were "virtually suffocating" by the time California Highway Patrol Officer Rich Soto managed to reach the truck, which created a miles-long traffic jam on Interstate 5 south of Los Angeles.

The men were bused back to Mexico after they were let out of the truck Friday and the truck was impounded, Soto said.

Radiation 'no health hazard'

AIKEN, S.C. (AP) — Radiation released at a nuclear weapons plant posed no health hazard to the public and there is no need for off-site protective action," a government spokesman says.

The accidental release Saturday night of 56,000 curies of tritium from the Department of Energy's Savannah River plant will give humans a dose of radiation equivalent to the exposure received on a 30-minute jet flight at 36,000 feet, said Cliff Webb, DOE deputy director of external affairs, on Sunday.

An equipment malfunction caused the release, Webb said.

Victims may have left their seats

CHEROKEE, N.C. (AP) — Two people killed in a chartered bus accident apparently panicked and left their seats when the driver lost control of the vehicle on a mountain road, police said.

The bus plunged down a 20-foot embankment into a creek, killing the couple and injuring 33 other people Saturday. Cherokee police spokesman Quince Watty said when the bus went out of control, the two victims "stood up and walked to the back." The bus was carrying bingo players back from a high-stakes match at an Indian reservation.

In Nevada, another bus crash Saturday injured 44 people when their chartered "gamblers special" bus careened off a freeway 40 miles from Las Vegas.

Adviser concerned about budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former presidential economic adviser Alan Greenspan says he is concerned that efforts to reduce the federal budget deficit won't be made before the spring of 1985.

"I'm quite uncomfortable that we have to sit here for the next year-and-a-half with expectations of very large federal deficits," Greenspan said Sunday during an appearance on the NBC television show "Meet the Press."

Despite the deficits, Greenspan, chairman of President Ford's Council of Economic Advisers, said "inflation has almost no chance of accelarating in the next year."

But Greenspan warned that huge deficits could cause an eventual return of inflation. "The huge deficits that created the high long-term interest rates . . . is not a one-year problem, but a problem for the next 20 years," he said

Plan wanted for space station

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an apparent reversal of his previous stand, presidential science adviser George Keyworth has asked the nation's space agency to formulate plans for a manned space station.

In a speech delivered two weeks ago in Seattle and an interview in Science magazine, Keyworth indicated he no longer opposes the concept of a space station.

Texsun Introduces "Uncanny" New Packaging For Fruit Juices

Texsun, a subsidiary of Royal Crown Cola, and the world's largest producer of grapefruit juice, is introducing a new, advanced package for its full line of 100% pure grapefruit, orange and fruit juice combinations.

The new Texsun packaging system, called the Un-Can, is a plastic-coated, aluminum foil-lined container that is flash sterilized and sealed without air. This process produces a better flavored juice than conventional cans and enables the consumer to store the juice for up to six months without refrigeration and without preservatives.

Texsun's Un-Can requires refrigeration only after the package is opened, but even then, will store in the refrigerator without developing "canned" taste.

Texsun's new Un-Can packages of juice are now available in food stores in the family-size liter package and will soon be introduced in a single serving ¼ liter package with its own straw attached.

Panthers 1st USFL champ

DENVER (AP) — The comparisons are inevitable and when they are made, the United States Football League's Nameless Bowl will have nothing to be ashamed of, thanks to Bobby Hebert and Anthony Carter, a passing battery that decided not to wait for the National Football League.

Together, they led the Michigan Panthers to the first USFL championship, a 24-22 victory over Philadelphia Sunday night that made the summertime Super Bowl a memorable first time around for the new league.

Hebert was the game's most valuable player, hitting 20 of 39 passes for 314 yards and three touchdowns. Nine of his passes were caught by Carter, who gained 179 yards, 48 of them on a touchdown with 3:01 to play that choked off a familiar-looking comeback by the Stars.

Philadelphia had overcome a three-touchdown deficit in the final 12 minutes to force an overtime and beat Chicago in the semifinal a week ago. So when the Stars shaved a 17-3 Michigan lead to three points in the fourth quarter Sunday, there was concren on the Michigan bench.

Hebert took the Panthers to midfield and then called an out route for Carter, who had been burning the Stars all night. He also warned his team in the huddle to stay alert for a change of play.

Carter took it for the TD. The cushion allowed the Panthers to surrender a final drive Philadelphia touchdown without harm.

Three weeks ago, Hebert cried tears of anguish when his college coaches at Northwestern Louisiana State called to inform him of the drowning death of ex-college teammate Joe Delaney, the Kansas City Chiefs' running back. This time, the tears that came in the dressing room were joyful ones.

"People had written us off, but we knew we were a better team and we had to go out and prove it," he said.

The Panthers did, winning 12 of their final 14 games as Hebert emerged as the league's top-rated passer. One of the losses, however, was against Philadelphia, which fashioned a 15-3 record, best in the league.

With seven minutes left in the first half, Hebert and Carter connected on completions of 27, 12 and 13 yards.

Then Hebert changed targets, pitching a 12-yarder to a wide open Derek Holloway for the game's first touchdown.

John Paul, Jr.
...happy winner

Paul speeds to victory

By MIKE HARRIS

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — John Paul Jr. had lost his self confidence.

The young road-racing star was down. And, when Paul of the Midland-based team found himself in Victory Circle after Sunday's crash-marred Michigan 500, Paul had trouble putting his first Indy-car victory in perspective.

"It just hasn't sunk in yet," said the 23-year-old former national sports car champion, who won in only his fourth Indy-car start. "It's pretty monumental, pretty dramatic. I never expected to be competitive here."

Paul, who started ninth in the 33-car field, reeled in Penske teammates Al Unser and Rick Mears after coming out of the pits third following the last of 11 caution flags in the 500-miler at Michigan International Speedway.

MEARS passed Unser, the eventual second-place finisher and the leader in the CART-PPG Indy-Car World Series, 22 laps from the end. Paul, driving a Cosworth-powered Penske PC-10, followed suit three laps later.

He then stayed close behind Mears' Penske PC-11 until the leaders entered the backstretch on the last lap around the 2-mile, high-banked oval.

At that point, Mears came upon another Indy-car rookie, Chris Kneifel. The two-time defending national champion hesitated for an instant before going around Kneifel on the inside.

"I saw him hesitate for just a second and then move," Paul said. "I followed him down to the inside and then got to the bottom of the track and went past Rick."

As Paul sped through the last two turns toward the victory, worth $90,776 for the Midland, Texas, team of Belgian Count Rudy van der Stratten, Mears suddenly lost control and slammed into the wall in turn 4. Kneifel's car then struck Mears' Penske.

While Paul was accepting the accolades of the crowd of more than 65,000 for his unexpected victory, Mears was being taken by ambulance to an Ann Arbor hospital where he was kept overnight for a possible concussion and Kneifel was released from a Jackson hospital after an examinaton and X-rays.

THERE WERE no other serious accidents or injuries in the marathon race that began about two hours late because of an intense rainstorm.

The storm was bad enough that the stands, only about one-third full at the time, were evacuated by track safety personnel. A fiberglass and wood sun canopy from the roof of the grandstand blew into the stands and injured several people walking down to safety, none of them seriously.

The race was very competitive, with 28 lead changes among 11 drivers. Paul led three times for 66 laps, but didn't get up front until the 147th of 250 trips around the fast Michigan oval.

Despite 92 laps under the caution flag, Paul averaged 134.862 mph. But the victory was such a surprise to the tall, dark-haired driver that he didn't even know he'd won when the checkered flag was waved at him.

"After the last caution flag, Phil (crew chief Phil Casey) said he thought I was about fifth. After I passed Al and Rick I knew I'd done pretty well, but I didn't realize I was the winner. I had to ask my pit crew (during the cool-off lap) where I finished."

Paul has driven the last two races with his mending left leg in a brace, a reminder of a crash in May during practice for the Indy 500.

"I really had a hard time regaining confidence in myself after Indianapolis," Paul explained. "When I got here Wednesday, I was running around in practice and I said, 'What are you doing here? You shouldn't be doing this.'"

Paul, who also crashed in practice in the season-opener at Atlanta then finished third in the race in his backup car, came back two weeks ago for the 500-kilometer road race at Cleveland and finished 21st.

"My leg was real painful and made it hard to use the clutch, but there has been a tremendous improvement since Cleveland. I still couldn't use my left foot on the brake, though."

Franz Weiss, of the Midland-based team, said the next race will be in Wisconsin in three weeks and two weeks later it will be the Pocono 500.

Watson joins 5-time club

Tom wins British Open

By GEOFFREY MILLER

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — After Tom Watson had been presented with the British Open golf trophy for the fifth time, he was handed a telegram.

It was from Peter Thomson, one-time Australian great. It said: "Delighted and thrilled to welcome you to the five times club."

That reminded the golfers and tournament officials raising champagne glasses in the Royal Birkdale clubhouse that Watson had truly joined the immortals. Only four other golfers have ever been British Open champion five times — old-timers J.H. Taylor, Harry Vardon and James Braid back in the 1890s and the early years of this century, and Thomson between 1954 and 1965.

"What a way to end a dry spell," said Watson, who had not won a tournament since last year's British Open at Troon.

HIS OTHER victories were at Carnoustie in 1975, Turnberry in 1977 and Muirfield in 1980.

A record 142,894 attended the tournament. Some 30,000 watched a thrilling dog-fight between a dozen tightly-packed players in Sunday's final round.

Nobody could guess the winner until Watson came up the 18th fairway and hit a majestic iron shot from light rough into the middle of the green.

"It was probably the best iron shot of my life," Watson said.

The shot left him with two putts to spare for the title and he could not miss.

Watson finished with a four-round total of 275 — 9-under-par for the 6,968-yard, par 71 seaside links.

HALE IRWIN and Andy Bean were one stroke back, tied for second place. Graham Marsh was at 277, Lee Trevino 278, Seve Ballesteros and Harold Henning 279 and Nick Faldo, Bill Rogers, Christy O'Connor Jr. and Britain's Denis Durnian bracketed at 280.

Other contenders like Craig Stadler, Mark McNulty and Fuzzy Zoeller faded in the excitement of the day's firing.

"Looking at the names on the leader board, and the way everybody was playing, it looked like a play-off all the way," Watson said.

At one stage he was tied with Marsh, Irwin and Bean.

Marsh, eight strokes behind Watson when the round began, surged with seven birdies between the 5th and 17th holes.

The Australian went to the clubhouse as co-leader and waited while his rivals played the home nine. And that' where Watson took a stride ahead of the rest.

At the 16th he canned a putt from 20 feet for a birdie three.

"It was my best putt of the tournament," Watson said. "It just hit the middle of the hole."

Watson and Stadler were the last pair home. Watson drove into light rough, of the kind that had plagued many golfers these last few days.

The hole was 212 yards away. Watson took a 2-iron and planted the ball to 18 feet from the pin.

He had two putts to sink the ball and retain the title.

"I concentrated on getting the first one near to the cup," Watson said.

Then he knocked it in from a few inches.

THE TOURNAMENT was played in a heat wave and was packed with drama and dazzling golf.

Rogers shot a double eagle on the 542-yard 15th hole on the first day, holing with an iron from 228 yards.

Durnian, a little known English club professional, played the first nine in 6-under-par 28 on the second day and set an all-time record for the British Open, which was first played in 1860.

Rodger Davis of Australia hit a hole-in-one.

Stadler, the 1982 Masters champion, set a course record 64 in the first round and led the field going into the last day. His hopes began to disappear when he bogeyed the first two holes Sunday.

At the clubhouse celebrations, when the cheering had died away and Thomson's telegram was read out, they sang "For he's a jolly good fellow."

But this time it was not for Watson. The Jolly Good Fellow was Keith Mackenzie, retiring after 16 years as secretary of the Royal and Ancient Club, which runs the tournament. Watson proposed a toast to him and led the singing.

"Keith has made this tournament the great world class event it is," Watson said.

Heritage strikes 3rd straight year

MACKINAC ISLAND, Mich. (AP) — Heritage outraced 283 other boats to become the first craft across the finish line for the third straight year in the 76th Chicago to Mackinac Island Yacht Race.

The 63-foot Heritage, skippered by Don Wildman, crossed the finish line at 7:17 EDT today, about 28 minutes ahead of the 61-foot Brassy, owned by M.S. Keeler, said Ellen Gustman, spokeswoman for the Chicago Yacht Club Race Committee, which is sponsoring the race.

Bogeys give Daniel scare

MALVERN, Pa. (AP) — Beth Daniel won the $350,000 McDonald' Kids Classic, but not before going through a "pretty scary experience" by being forced into a sudden-death playoff.

Daniel earned $52,500 after surviving a pair of double bogeys on the front nine of the final round Sunday in the 72-hole tournament at White Manor Country Club.

She started the last 18 holes two strokes ahead of defending champion JoAnne Carner, three in front of Patty Sheehan and four up on Kathy Whitworth

Mets end Ryan streak

HOUSTON (AP)— New York Mets rookies Darryl Strawberry and Walt Terrell handled the pitching and the offensive chores respectively as the Mets defeated the Houston Astros and pitcher Nolan Ryan 3-1.

Ryan's eight-game winning streak was snapped as well as Terrell's 4-game losing skein.

Terrell, 2-4, a 25-year-old righthander, pitched six innings with relief help from bullpen ace Jesse Orosco who gained his ninth save with four strikeouts and only one hit in three innings.

In the process the lefthander lowered his ERA to 1.10.

Speaking of Orosco, Terrell said "he's one of the best in the business. All you have to do is give him the ball and let him pitch."

Terrell earned his second major league victory because he was "just throwing strikes, getting them to hit the ball on the ground."

He did entice the Astros into eight groundouts.

"I had been wild when I threw hard, so I tried not to throw hard, jammming them occasionally, and the last few times out have gotten better and better," Terrell said. "Control was the key to the sixth inning when I got behind the last three hitters."

Strawberry, the heralded 21-year-old from Los Angeles, rocketed a Ryan fastball for a two-run triple to left center in the fourth inning.

"That was the second time I've faced Ryan. He's one of the greatest pitchers ever. No one comes close to throwing as hard. I hit a fastball away on a 3-1 count because I didn't want a full count situation because of his experience. I tried to stay back and hit the other way. I had put it in my mind to go up the middle or left (field)," said the southpaw hitter.

The Mets extinguished Houston's five-game win streak and dropped the Astros to 10 victories in their last 12 outings.

Ryan, 9-2, exited after six innings, but the 16-year veteran managed to regain the all-time strikeout lead from Philadelphia's Steve Carlton with five strikeouts for a 3,583-3,582 advantage. It was Ryan's first career loss against the Mets.

The new crisis in pro sports

For years, one of the favorite pasttimes has been to ask "What's wrong with the Cowboys?"

Sometimes, just winning wasn't enough. If the Cowboys didn't level an opponent in the expected fashion, the inevitable "What's wrong with the Cowboys?" would become the topic of discussion at Tom Landry's post-game press conference and around the Monday morning coffee-cup.

So, now that several Cowboys are under suspicion, I guess, some sages will nod in the I-told-you-so manner and archly declare, "Now we know what was wrong with the Cowboys."

Coke can have that effect.

HOWEVER, it's not only the Cowboys. Just look around, any sport, and it's a topic that just won't be brushed under the table.

Suspicion is every where.

Young Steve Sax, a star in the Texas League in 1981, a year ago was a rookie with so much promise that the Dodgers could afford to get rid of Davy Lopez, a longtime fixture at second for Los Angeles.

Last season, Sax was everything the Dodgers thought he would be. This year, he can't throw the ball from second to first.

A few years ago, it might have been written off as the Sophomore Jinx. Today you wonder if there's something they aren't telling us?

It's probably still the Sophomore Jinx, but on a team that has had Steve Howe and Bob Welch admit to alcohol or drug dependency, it's only natural to suspect the worst.

THE CARDINALS' Lonnie Smith began making an unseemly number of errors in the outfield early this season. No one could figure what was wrong with Lonnie, then he turned himself in for help.

Tim Raines, a base-path demon one year, a mysterious flop the next. How come? And then we found out.

More and more players are seeking help. That's wonderful.

In the old days, sports didn't have such problems, not because they weren't there. Everybody simply ignored them.

While recognizing and attacking the malady is a step forward, it also presents problems.

In view of the publicity of what's going on off the field, any time a player fails to perform up to capability, it now raises the suspicion...drugs, alcohol....?

And that leads to the suspicion of fixing the outcomes of games. That's not so far fetched. It has been done in basketball by kids who weren't on drugs.

JUST ABOUT the time you think you've got this dependency business figured out, along comes a Howe, whose dependency does not seem to have any noticeable effect on his performance.

Some athletes can function. Others can't. Maybe in Howe's case, it's because he's a relief pitcher and his game-time is relatively brief.

Pittsburgh Hall of Famer Paul Waner had a reputation for imbibing after the game. Sometimes pretty heavily, but he compiled one of the highest lifetime averages in the National League. Big Poison they called him, not for what he liked in a glass, but those stinging line drives.

Players knew what was going on and watched out for one another.

One day teammates advised the rival pitcher that Paul had had a particularly rough night and probably couldn't see too well. "Be careful of him," they advised.

Waner may have been hung over, but that day he set a record for two base hits in one game.

Don Newcombe, the ex-Dodger pitcher, now spends his life warning ball players of the perils of alcohol. As a player, Newcombe got away with it for a while. He was the mainstay of the Dodger staff, a 20-game winner. Eventually it ended his career and, for a while, his life. Now he is a missionary. Living proof. But how many hear or see?

Bucs stretch streak to seven before returning home

By Associated Press

The Pittsburgh Pirates went to the West Coast with high hopes and a fresh outlook and returned home with a big winning streak and a new position in the National League East.

"I knew we had the potential to get back in it. There are four, really five teams that are starting the whole season over now," said Pirates reliever Kent Tekulve, who escaped from a bases-loaded, one-out threat in the bottom of the ninth inning as Pittsburgh topped the San Diego Padres 4-3 Sunday.

The victory extended the Pirates' winning streak to seven games and enabled them to conclude their West Coast road swing with a 9-1 mark.

And that, in turn, left the Pirates in third place in the NL East, just one game behind Philadelphia and St. Louis.

"Our division is so even," Tekulve said. "It's almost mandatory that the winner in the NL East have a good West Coast trip."

Jason Thompson's RBI single and two-run homer, his 13th, drove in Pittsburgh's first three runs against Eric Show, 9-6. Rookie Marvell Wynne then singled home a sixth-inning run to put the Pirates ahead 4-3.

Starter Lee Tunnell, 4-3, went five innings and Tekulve was brought in to relieve Manny Sarmiento with Tim Flannery on second and one out in the ninth.

Pinch hitter Kurt Bevacqua singled Flannery to third and took second on the throw home. Alan Wiggins was then intentionally walked before Tekulve earned his 10th save by getting Juan Bonilla to hit into a forceout at the plate and Steve Garvey to ground out to third.

Reds 5, Phillies 2

Johnny Bench, playing his last game in Philadelphia, drilled a three-run pinch-homer in the seventh inning to give the Reds a 4-2 lead.

Cincinnati's Frank Pastore, 4-8, pitched a two-hitter, allowing Bo Diaz's ninth homer in the second inning and Mike Schmidt's 18th in the fifth. Eddie Milner hit the first pitch of the game from Kevin Gross, 2-1, for his fourth homer.

Dan Driessen continued his hot hitting for Cincinnati with two hits in four at-bats. He has gone 16-for-29 while hitting in eight straight games.

Expos 3, Braves 1

Montreal right-hander Greg Bargar made an impressive major-league debut to help the Expos end their six-game losing streak by allowing five hits over seven innings to get the victory, which snapped Atlanta's four-game winning streak.

Jeff Reardon came in to start the eighth but ran into trouble in the bottom of the ninth. His error and two walks loaded the bases, and he then walked Dale Murphy with two outs to force in a run. But Reardon then got Bob Horner on a short fly ball for his 14th save.

Andre Dawson's two-run homer, his 19th, gave Montreal a 2-0 lead in the fourth.

Cubs 10, Dodgers 0

Dickie Noles pitched a seven-hitter and singled in two runs during the Chicago rout.

Noles, 3-5, struck out seven and walked two in winning his first game in three starts since serving a day in a Cincinnati jail for assaulting a policeman.

Jody Davis drove in three runs with three hits and Bill Buckner belted his 12th homer, singled twice and stole two bases.

Bob Welch, 7-9, gave up five runs in five innings before 44,852 in Los Angeles.

Giants 3, Cardinals 1

Bill Laskey, making his 20th start of the season, scattered seven hits for his first complete game of the season. Laskey, 11-8, struck out six and walked two.

Milt May slugged his fifth home run of the season to give homestanding San Francisco a 1-0 lead in the second inning and then delivered an RBI single in the fourth to snap a tie. Jeff Leonard hit his 10th homer in sixth as San Francisco won for just the sixth time in 18 games.

Brewers going ape in AL East

By Associated Press

Cecil Cooper is a player who can carry a team, and right now the Milwaukee Brewers are riding his bat.

"Cooper is going absolutely crazy," says Milwaukee pitcher Jim Slaton. "That helps a lot."

The resurgent Brewers have won 16 of their last 20 games to climb back into the American League East race, thanks to Cooper's eight home runs in that stretch. He hit two of them Sunday, driving in four runs, to key a 10-6 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Cooper's first two-run homer of the game keyed a three-run sixth that gave the Brewers an 8-4 lead. The Milwaukee outfielder slugged another two-run shot in the eighth, his 20th homer of th year, for the Brewers' final runs.

Yankees 8, Rangers 6

In New York, Rick Cerone's run-scoring single snapped a sixth-inning tie and Dave Winfield drove in three runs with a double and single as New York defeated Texas, handing the American League West-leading Rangers their ninth loss in 11 games.

Odell Jones, 3-4, walked pinch hitter Steve Kemp to open the sixth and then hit Don Baylor with a pitch. One out later, Cerone singled to score Kemp.

George Wright had a three-run homer and Wayne Tolleson also knocked in three runs for the Rangers, including a two-run single that tied the game 6-6 in the top of the sixth.

A's 13, Red Sox 9

In Boston, Jeff Burroughs drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single in the eighth inning as Oakland outlasted the Red Sox in a three-hour, 34-minute marathon. The A's were outhit 17-15 by the Red Sox, but capitalized on 11 walks, two Boston errors and seven stolen bases to split a four-game series.

Oakland fell behind 9-8 on a three-run Boston seventh keyed by Carl Yastrzemski's 448th lifetime homer.

Orioles 11, Angels 1

In Baltimore, Jim Dywer stroked four hits, including three doubles, and drove in four runs as the Orioles walloped California behind the four-hit pitching of Allan Ramirez.

Cal Ripken Jr., Rich Dauer and Gary Roenicke drove in two runs apiece for the Orioles, who have won seven of their last eight games.

Ramirez, 3-0, hurled his first complete game in his fourth major league start, striking out three and walking two. He lost a shutout when Bobby Grich hit his ninth homer leading off the fifth.

Royals 7, Indians 2

In Cleveland, Amos Otis drove home two runs with a bases-loaded single in the eighth inning, leading Kansas City over the Indians.

With the score tied 2-2 in the eighth, the Royals loaded the bases against reliever Dan Spillner, 1-6. Hal McRae's sacrifice fly broke the tie, and after Willie Aikens walked to reload the bases, Otis singled home two runs. Frank White followed with an RBI single to finish the scoring.

White Sox 3, Blue Jays 2

In Chicago, Harold Baines and Carlton Fisk blasted home runs in support of Floyd Bannister's two-hit pitching in seven innings to lead the White Sox over Toronto.

Baines hit his sixth homer off loser Doyle Alexander, 0-3, in the second inning and Fisk hit his 14th to lead off the third. The White Sox scored in the fifth when Fisk singled with one out and came home on a passed ball by catcher Buck Martinez.

Tigers 8, Mariners 1

In Seattle, Tom Brookens' two-run double and Enos Cabell's two-run single keyed Detroit's seven-run 10th inning as the Tigers defeated the Mariners.

Reliever Bill Caudill, 2-6, walked the bases loaded in the 10th, then reliever Ed Vande Berg gave up Brookens' two-run double.

It's there for taking

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Hey, all you young athletes dreaming of becoming of those instant millionaires in bigtime professional sports — there's a $1 million bonus waiting for you out there if you can dig it.

All you have to do is win the U. S. Open tennis championship and, that done, follow up by winning the National Open golf title. Or, win the golf title first, then take the tennis championship. Either way, and with no time limit. Just do it.

The $1 million check has been put up by an Englishman named Clive Greaves, who is chairman of the board of Gordon's Gin, with U. S. headquarters in Stamford, Conn.

Greaves made the offer publicly last month at a press conference and luncheon dealing with the Arthur Ashe Tennis Classic, an event with divisions for kids starting at eight years of age and going up to the pros, held annually for the benefit of Ashe's favorite charity, The United Negro College Fund.

Ashe's tournament previously had been sponsored by Miller Beer, a segment of Phillip Morris, Inc., the cigarette conglomerate. As a campaigner against cigarette smoking, Ashe felt he should seek another sponsor.

Nat Fields, New York publicist and entrepreneur, suggested Gordon's Gin, which was looking for such an outlet.

Ashe and Graves were brought together at the luncheon designed to announce the new partnership.

"Do you play tennis?" Ashe asked Greaves, when they were introduced.

"No, golf," Graves replied. "Golf is my bag."

"You know, that's funny," said Ashe, who won the U. S. Open tennis tournament as an amateur in 1968 and upset Jimmy Connors in the Wimbledon final in 1975. "After I won the Open I thought I'd like to take a year off, work on my golf and try to qualify for the U. S. Open golf championship.

"My life dream has been to be the first in history to win both the U. S. tennis and golf championships."

"That's interesting," he said. "I'll put up $1 million for anyone who can do it. It'll be a lasting offer."

"It can be done," said Ashe. "But I think it would have to be a tennis player who does it. Tennis players are better athletes. Tennis a game that has to be learned young. Most kids come out of college equally adept at both sports."

Captains defeat El Paso

A three-run homer by Jesse Ruid in the seventh ignited a five-run Shreveport seventh as the Captains edged El Paso 8-6 in Texas League play.

Elsewhere, San Antonio took both halves of a doubleheader against Tulsa, 4-1 and 3-2. Beaumont whipped Jackson 15-11.

The winner in relief was Mark Grant, 7-7. The loser was Steve Parrott, 3-5.

Kevin Buckley knocked in a run that keyed San Antonio's opening game win and Dale Holman homered.

Tony discusses investigation

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) - Tony Dorsett says he hopes a federal cocaine investigation in which his name surfaced will be resolved soon.

Dorsett, the Dallas Cowboys' All-Pro running back, spoke openly for the first time Sunday, saying he wasnt guilty of cocaine usage and wishes the federal government would file chares if they have any evidence.

"It becomes frustrating and you wonder why, why are they doing these things," Dorsett told reporters upon his arrival at training camp. "If you want to sling the mud, sling the mud. Let's get it over with...I'm not guilty of anything."

Dorsett said he was interviewed by fedeal agents a year ago in training camp and noted "I will do that agan if they want."

Cowboy President Tex Schramm has confirmed that federal agents are reviewing information linking Dorsett, defensive end Harvey Martin, defensive end Larry Bethea, fullback Ron Springs and receiver Tony Hill with possible cocaine use. No charges have been filed.

"I mean to be honest. I have not been formally arrested or charged," Dorsett said.

"Wouldn't it be easier if you and I had a joint bank account?"

Peace likely hot topic at cool OPEC meet

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

Peace keeping, not price cutting, is expected to preoccupy OPEC oil ministers as they open their summer strategy session today in Helsinki, Finland, analysts say.

That means the price of gasoline and other fuels made from crude oil should hold steady, at least through the summer, after having risen a bit over the past four months.

After cutting their price by 15 percent last March, to $29 a barrel, the ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will face virtually no pressure in Helsinki to reduce prices further.

Instead, they probably will reaffirm the March survival plan and try to avoid the kind of internal bickering that ruined a similar scheme a year ago. It took two weeks of acrimonious meetings to reach March's agreement.

The plan limits oil exports by OPEC members to prevent prices from dropping, and if it fell apart in Helsinki, the cartel could be thrown into perhaps the greatest crisis of its 23 years. Few analysts believe, however, that OPEC ministers will risk such a nightmare.

"I think it will be the calmest meeting they've had in quite a while," said Dillard Spriggs, president of Petroleum Analysis Ltd., a consulting firm in New York.

Analysts see little chance of OPEC changing the system of production sharing and individual quotas adopted last March.

"The leaders of OPEC are acutely aware of the provocative nature of reopening the issue of individual production quotas," said William Randol, an international energy analyst at the investment firm of First Boston Corp.

Last July, when the OPEC ministers could not agree how to rejigger their production-sharing plan, several members, desperate for money, began flooding the market with oil. Their actions backfired.

The glutted condition of the market allowed oil prices to sink even lower, and by March OPEC was forced to cut its base price for the first time. To try to avoid future price cuts, the members adopted the production-sharing plan and vowed to honor it as long as needed.

So far they have, with one or two exceptions. As a result, the ministers may do little more in Helsinki than crow about their four-month success.

The world price of oil has risen slightly since March, allowing most OPEC members to sell as much oil as they are permitted by the March accord. An exception is Iraq, whose sales are hampered by its war with Iran.

The price of Saudi Arabia's top crude oil, for example, is selling in the spot market — where single cargoes are sold by middlemen — for about $29 a barrel. That is a gain of $1 since March. Other crudes have risen more.

The retail price of gasoline in the United States has risen about 13 cents to an average of $1.25 a gallon in that time.

OPEC also has been able to increase its production to an estimated 17 million barrels a day from 14.7 million in March. OPEC committed itself to producing no more than 17.5 million barrels a day through 1983.

"They have done quite well," said Herbert Krupp, an energy economist at Bankers Trust Co. in New York. "We think they will continue to hang in there."

This tranquility may be short lived, however, because an underlying problem persists. OPEC's dilemma is that it needs to sell more oil than the world is willing to buy.

That was not true before 1980, when demand was rising and OPEC controlled as much as two-thirds of the market. But in recent years, conservation, substitution of other fuels and new oil production in Mexico, Britain and other non-OPEC countries have eaten away at OPEC's power.

Last year, for the first time since 1962, the United States and other non-communist countries outside OPEC produced more oil than OPEC.

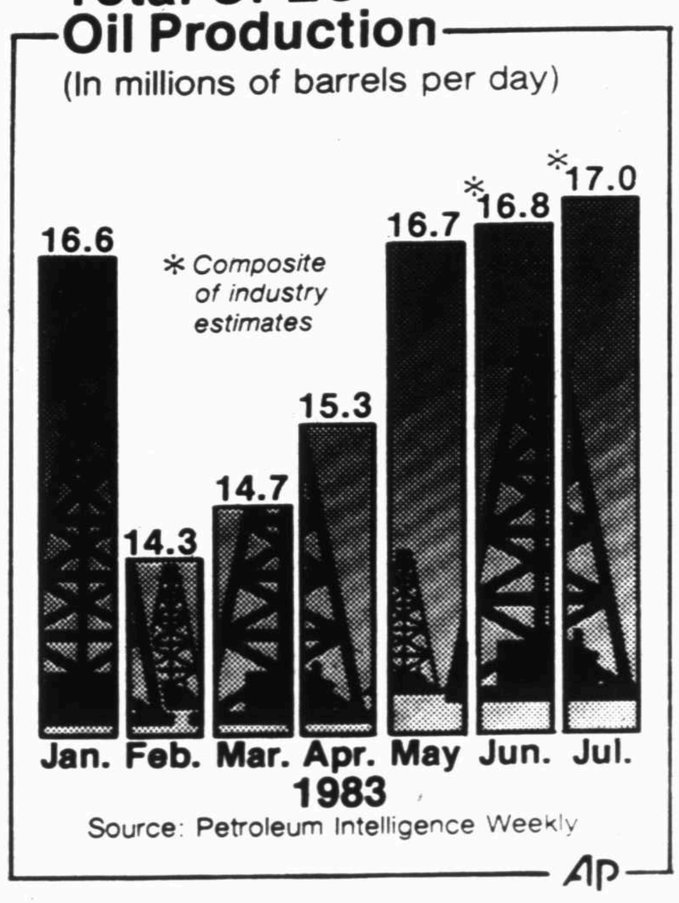
OPEC's current sales of 17 million barrels a day compares with almost 27 million just three years ago and a peak of almost 31 million in 1979. That sales slump has hit Venezuela, Nigeria, Indonesia and some other OPEC members particularly hard, in some cases spoiling ambitious economic development plans.

The OPEC members' eagerness to sell oil may cripple their plan to keep prices at $29 a barrel, some analysts believe. Once the world recession ends and oil requirements in the industrial nations pick up, OPEC will be tempted to exceed its self-imposed ceiling, the analysts reason. If it succumbs to that pressure, prices may fall anew as production jumps ahead of demand again.

Spriggs, of Petroleum Analysis, said he believed the demand for OPEC oil might exceed the cartel's 17.5-million-barrel ceiling as early as August. Other economists said it was more likely to happen late in the year.

If OPEC does raise the ceiling, it could open the door to the kind of haggling over individual quotas that scuttled the 1982 plan and made the March meeting so difficult.

And even if demand does not push through the OPEC ceiling, the financial pressure on some members may force them to violate the agreement to pay their bills, That could create a new OPEC crisis, and a new decline in energy prices worldwide.



Figures show many S&Ls still weak

WASHINGTON (AP) — About a quarter of the nation's 3,287 federally insured savings and loan associations still were running low on capital in the last half of 1982, nearly the same percentage as in the first half of the year, according to industry figures. A majority of those were in the red.

The figures, contained in financial reports the associations are required to file with federal regulators, indicate that despite falling interest rates, lower inflation and federal help, the S&L industry continued to be dogged by financial troubles even at the end of last year.

In all, 68 percent — 2,227 — of the savings and loans with deposits insured by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. lost money in the last six months of 1982. In the first half of the year, the money-losers represented a staggering 83 percent of the industry.

Of the 2,227 S&Ls losing money at the end of 1982, 684 had reserves, or net worth, below the Federal Home Loan Bank Board's minimum regulatory requirement of 3 percent of liabilities. The bank board is the industry's chief federal regulator.

An additional 183 S&Ls fell below the minimum regulatory requirement for net worth but were making money.

Net worth is the excess of assets over liabilities. Mortgages held by an institution are counted as assets and its savings accounts are recorded as liabilities.

The industry is expected to pull out of its worst financial crisis since the Depression this year, with industry officials predicting it will turn a profit for the first time in three years.

The industry has been battered by inflation and high interest rates. When interest rates are high, the mortgage-heavy S&Ls are forced to pay out more for new money than they are taking in from home loans agreed on years earlier when interest rates were much less.

The earnings picture has brightened since last summer when interest rates began tumbling, although in recent months they have been turning up again.

Despite the crisis, no saver has lost a penny in an account insured up to $100,000 by the insurance corporation.

Federal regulators measure an institution's financial health on the basis of its capital backing.

ENERGY runs out of gas

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — ENERGY Newspaper, a 26-month-old Louisiana-based oil and gas journal has ceased publication, publisher and editor in-chief Joe Puglia announced Saturday.

"The economic slowdown in the oil field, coupled with the projected duration of a sagging oil and gas economy, forced us to make the decision," Puglia said.

ENERGY has entered an agreement with the Gulf Coast Oil Reporter, a Houston-based monthly oil and gas magazine, for subscribers to receive the Reporter for the duration of their ENERGY subscriptions.

Puglia said ENERGY readers will still obtain timely and important industry news through the arrangement.

"ENERGY filled a void in coverage of this complex and important industry," Puglia said, "but when sales revenues fell below operating costs for more than three quarters, closing was the logical step."

ENERGY, which employed a fulltime staff of five, ceased publication with its June issue.

Oil stocks stage modest comeback on Street

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — With little immediate threat of oil prices collapsing, and with the U.S. economy on the mend, oil stocks are staging a modest comeback on Wall Street.

That's not saying much, considering the long and sharp selloff of oil stocks since mid-1980, when a developing oil glut began pushing down crude prices.

"There's a lot of evidence that we are in a transition period in the oil industry," said Alvin Silber, who follows international oils for Dean Witter Reynolds.

After more than three years of declining demand for oil, and generally declining prices, many analysts believe prices and demand are beginning to steady. Even so, few think the industry is headed for a boom period any time soon.

In the first six months of this year, oil consumption in the United States was 4 percent below year-earlier levels, according to the American Petroleum Institute. But for June alone, oil use was up 2.6 percent from the same month a year ago.

Compared with recent past, even a stabilization would be good news for the oil stocks.

Some issues, particularly those in the offshore drilling and oil equipment and supply group, already are benefitting from a shift in perceptions among investors. The offshore drilling group topped Standard & Poor's list of best-performers in the second week of July, and the oil equipment and supply group was second.

Todd Bergman, an energy analyst at Goldman, Sachs, said the outcome of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' meeting this week in Helsinki, Finland, is unlikely to influence the outlook for oil stocks, since few OPEC decisions are expected.

A more critical time for the oil industry will come this fall, when OPEC is expected to grapple once again with the problem of dividing oil sales among its 13 members. The cartel established an oil production-sharing program in March that helped stabilize prices. By late summer or early fall, when oil demand is expected to pick up, the system is likely to need some adjustments, Bergman said.

William Randol, an oil analyst at First Boston Corp., said that while no "meaningful upturn" in oil use has occurred yet, he expects consumption to begin rising as the U.S. economic recovery becomes more firmly established.

"If there is no evidence of such an upturn in petroleum demand within the next few quarters, we believe a reassessment of the market prospects by OPEC — and energy investors — is in order," Randol said in a recent report to clients.

Silber, too, warned that the modest pickup in oil stock prices "may be just another trading rally" that will be snuffed out by a fresh decline in oil prices.

Racial income gap wide

NEW YORK (AP) — The income gap between whites and blacks remains as wide today as it was in 1960, according to a new study.

The main reason for the disparity, the report said, was because the proportion of black families headed by women increased from one-fifth to nearly one-half, while the proportion of black men with jobs fell sharply during the period.

According to the study's findings, reported in today's New York Times, families headed by women were about twice as likely to be poor as two-parent families — regardless of race. The researchers found that the incomes of half of all black families headed by women fell below the poverty line.

The study was conducted by the Center for the Study of Social Policy, a private research group.

The group found that both black and white families were better off now than in 1960, largely because in many families both parents now work. Black families in which husband and wife work increased their earnings at a faster rate than did white families.

The study found that during the last 20 years the education levels of blacks has increased and is now near that of whites, moving many blacks into the middle class. However, the study said, college educated blacks earned about the same income as whites with only a high school education.

The black family median income in 1960, measured in 1980 dollars to allow for inflation, was $9,919, compared with $17,259 for whites. By 1981, family incomes had increased to $13,266 for blacks and $23,517 for whites.

ElPEC seeks rate increase

LAS CRUCES (AP) — El Paso Electric Co., which serves consumers in southern New Mexico, is seeking an $8.7 million rate increase in an application filed with the state Public Service Commission.

The utility is seeking the increase in two phases. The first, amounting to $2.8 million, would take effect next January and the second phase, $5.9 million, would take effect in April or May 1984.

Robert C. McNiel, director of community relations for El Paso Electric in Las Cruces, said last Friday the utility needs the additional money to maintain its financial integrity and to recover construction costs for the Palo Verde Nuclear Generating Plant's No. 1 unit. The unit is expected to come on line in early January.

Walesa: Proposed government rules could be worse than martial law

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa says Poland may be better off under martial law than under the proposed regulations which the government is expected to adopt in its place later this week.

Walesa, a founder of the now-outlawed Solidarity trade union, said in a telephone interview Sunday that the new laws are "something I just cannot accept."

"I looked at the proposals of the government and the new laws and I just hope they will be rejected," he said from his home in Gdansk. "I would prefer martial law than that."

The Communist government is widely expected to end military rule Friday, but it has been drafting laws and regulations incorporating many of the tough martial law restrictions into Poland's regular criminal code.

Martial law was imposed Dec. 13, 1981, then eased a year later. Solidarity, the first independent trade union in the Soviet bloc, was suspended when the military rule was declared and was outlawed by Parliament last October.

Parliamentary sources said Henryk Jablonski, president of the Council of State, will propose lifting martial law Wednesday.

They said Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, Poland's premier and Communist Party chief, then will present the proposal in a speech on political amnesty scheduled Thursday.

The government is preparing to declare an amnesty for all but 40 of about 450 Solidarity members and advisers imprisoned for martial law violations, the sources said.

Walesa, who returned to his Baltic seacoast home Saturday night after an unauthorized two-week vacation, said the new regulations will alienate the people.

"I will never forget August and I just hope that society will never forget it," he said, referring to the August 1980 shipyard strikes that led to the creation of Solidarity. "The ideas of Solidarity will never die. They must win some day."

Zia will hold two rounds of talks with Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone which are expected to focus on Tokyo's economic assistance and the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan.

Crew cannot locate helicopter wreck

LONDON (AP) — A salvage crew reported today that it could not find the wreckage of a helicopter or 20 of its passengers missing in the English Channel since Britain's worst helicopter crash occurred two days ago.

"The hull, probably with the missing 20 people still inside, is 200 feet down. We know where it sank but it seems to have been swept away by the strong tides," said Michael Osborne of the coast guard control center at Falmouth.

The pilots, two 60-year-old women and two youngsters survived the disaster Saturday about one mile from the end of the airport runway at St. Mary's, capital of the Scilly Isles.

The three crew and 23 passengers aboard the British Airways helicopter were on a 20-minute lunchtime flight to the resort islands from Penzance on the southwest England mainland, 25 miles away.

The salvage vessel Seaforth Clansman, under charter to the Royal Navy and carrying divers and elaborate seabed detection equipment, was anchored over the crash site.

Osborne said the helicopter, designed to float for at least an hour, "sank like a bullet" when it hit the sea as it descended to land in fog at St. Mary's. The impact apparently sheered off containers housing flotation bags.

The 20 missing, including eight children in three families, were trapped when the aircraft sank. The six survivors apparently got out through an emergency front door and were picked up by rescue boats.

The crash wiped out two families named Fuller and Nye and made orphans of 12-year-old Howard Goddard and 15-year-old Ellen Hanslow.

The survivors spent about an hour in the water clinging to wreckage, helped to stay afloat by the pilots, Capt. Neil Charlton and Capt. Dominic Lawlor.

State-run British Airways remained tight-lipped about the possible cause of the crash, after debriefing the pilots.

However, the company said it was resuming its flights to the islands today with other S-61 helicopters from its fleet. The announcement indicated the airline had established the cause of the crash, lending support to the theory that the helicopter flew into a flock of birds.

Rescuers, coast guards and fishermen reported seeing hundreds of mutilated seabirds floating in the vicinity.

An S-61 has a guard to prevent birds being sucked into its two turbo engines, but if it hit a flock of birds, the main or tail rotors could have tilted the blades, causing the aircraft to dive out of control.

One survivor, Scillies councilwoman Lucille Langley-Williams, 60, said a steward told her just before the crash that they were flying only 100 feet above the sea.

BA's helicopter manager, Michael Ginn, said: "No evidence yet available to the investigators suggests any specific malfunction of the helicopter."

Reporters and sightseers who took boats to the crash site were ordered away by wreck investigators and other officials.

Howard lost his parents, brother and sister. Ellen, an only child, lost her parents.

Howard's father, Ronald Goddard, 45, flew thousands of miles each year in his job as a salvage inspector with Lloyd's.

"Helen, his wife, was terrified of the sea so she always went by helicopter for their annual holiday in the Scillies. But as she was afraid of flying, too, she had to drug herself with tranquilizers each time," said family friend Pat Godfrey.

Orthopedic surgeon David Fuller, his doctor wife, Jean, and their three children, Rachel 15, Simon, 13, and Alison, 11, all died. Prof. Robert Duffy of Oxford called Fuller the "oustanding man " in his field, which was congenital malformation of the newborn.

David Nye, his wife Susan, and their daughters, Sophie, 10, Susanna, 8, and Kyrstan, 5, were lost. Nye edited a journal for the Bank of England.

Police detain 40 Armenian bombing suspects

PARIS (AP) — Police rounded up more than 40 suspected Armenian activists in the Paris area today and reportedly confiscated weapons and explosives in connection with their investigation of the bombing at Orly airport which killed six people and wounded 55 others.

The Interior Ministry said the Armenians were detained because it was believed they could have information the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia (ASALA), which has claimed reponsibility for the bombing Friday at the Turkish Airlines counter at Orly.

A ministry spokesman said police also found documents and "other things of interest." He would not elaborate, but the French network TF1 reported that officers confiscated automatic weapons and explosives during the roundup.

An incendiary bomb ripped through a crowd checking in at Orly for a flight to Istanbul on Friday afternoon. Three people were killed instantly, and three others died later at Paris area hospitals.

Officials said more than 30 people remained hospitalized, and about five of those were considered in critical condition with severe burns.

Over the past decade, Armenian terrorist groups have conducted a campaign of bombings and assassinations against Turkish diplomats and Turkish-owned businesses in revenge for the massacre of Armenians in Turkey in 1915.

The terrorists claims 1.5 million Armenians were systematically killed. Turkey says that figure is exaggerated and that any killings which did occur were random.

The Paris newspaper Liberation reported today that ASALA leader Hagop Hagopian, who was reported killed during last summer's fighting in Beirut, was alive and had been photographed by French intelligence in Paris last April.

Liberation said French authorities decided not arrest Hagopian at the time because they feared reprisals by ASALA.The newspaper reported that intelligence officials believe Hgopian came to France to restructure ASALA's organization and personally take command of its members.

New tape demands release of assailant

ROME (AP) — The purported kidnappers of a Vatican employee's teen-age daughter, in a new tape containing a woman's screams and moans, demand the release of papal assailant Mehmet Ali Agca in exchange for the girl's freedom, police reported today.

The girl's uncle, Mario Meneguzzi, told reporters the family was convinced that a voice on the tape belonged to the girl, 15-year-old Emanuela Orlandi.

He said the family made that determination after analyzing one clearly audible sentence on the tape that says "please let me sleep."

"We are convinced it's her voice," said Meneguzzi.

"At another point," the uncle said, "she says 'I feel terrible, oh my God, I feel terrible,' but the voice is so high-pitched, we couldn't really say whether it's the same person."

The cassette tape was found Sunday night on the stairs near the Quirinal presidential palace in central Rome by an employee of the ANSA news agency who was directed to the spot by an anonymous caller, police said.

Anonymous telephone callers claiming to be Emanuela's abductors have previously demanded that the Turkish terrorist, now serving a life sentence, be released in return for the girl by Wednesday. The new message did not say what would happen if Agca was not freed by the deadline, police said.

However, Rome's Il Messaggero newspaper said its switchboard operator received a call Sunday evening from a man who said "free the Turk or we will kill Emanuela on the 20th" and then hung up.

On Friday, police had said they believed Emanuela, who disappeared June 22 after leaving a music lesson in Rome, was snatched by "professional kidnappers."

Police distributed composite pictures of two men believed to be members of an abduction gang who might have followed Emanuela on the day she vanished.

The tape recording, according to police, starts with several minutes of screaming, moaning and pleas for help by a woman, followed by a long message read by a man with "a thick foreign accent."

Emanuela's father and uncle have said the previous callers seemed to have a foreign accent.

The message said the girl's release could be negotiated only through Italian Cardinal Agostino Casaroli, the No. 2 man at the Vatican as the secretary of state, and made a fresh demand for "a direct channel of communications" between the Vatican and the kidnappers, according to police.

Moshe Arens urges Jewish-Arab coexistence

HERMESH, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Defense Minister Moshe Arens, flanked by soldiers bearing submachine guns, turned over this hilltop military outpost to eight Israeli families and bid them to "reach out in peace" to their thousands of Arab neighbors.

"We want to and we must live in peace and friendship with our Arab neighbors everywhere that we settle," Arens said at the dedication ceremony Sunday.

He asked the young families to "reach out ... in peace and neighborliness, especially those of us who dream that one day there will be Israeli sovereignty in all the area of Judea and Samaria," the Biblical name for the West Bank.

Perched on one of the northern West Bank's rolling foothills, Hermesh is the latest of more than 80 settlements established by Israeli civilians on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River. It is the newest of several small enclaves established in the last two years in this area, almost 11 miles southwest of the large Arab town of Jenin.

The dedication ceremony emphasized Israel's refusal to cease settlement activity in the occupied territories, something Jordan's King Hussein has demanded as a precondition for negotiating peace with Israel.

Two dozen men and women soldiers of the Nahal, or military settlement corps, bearing Uzi submachine guns, stood in two rows alongside a makeshift platform from where Arens spoke.

One of the woman soldiers saluted her commander, Brig. Gen. Amnon Eshkol, and formally relinquished the settlement that the soldiers established about a year ago.

The radio said the cosmonauts, in space for three weeks, already "have obtained as much information as the previous crew did.

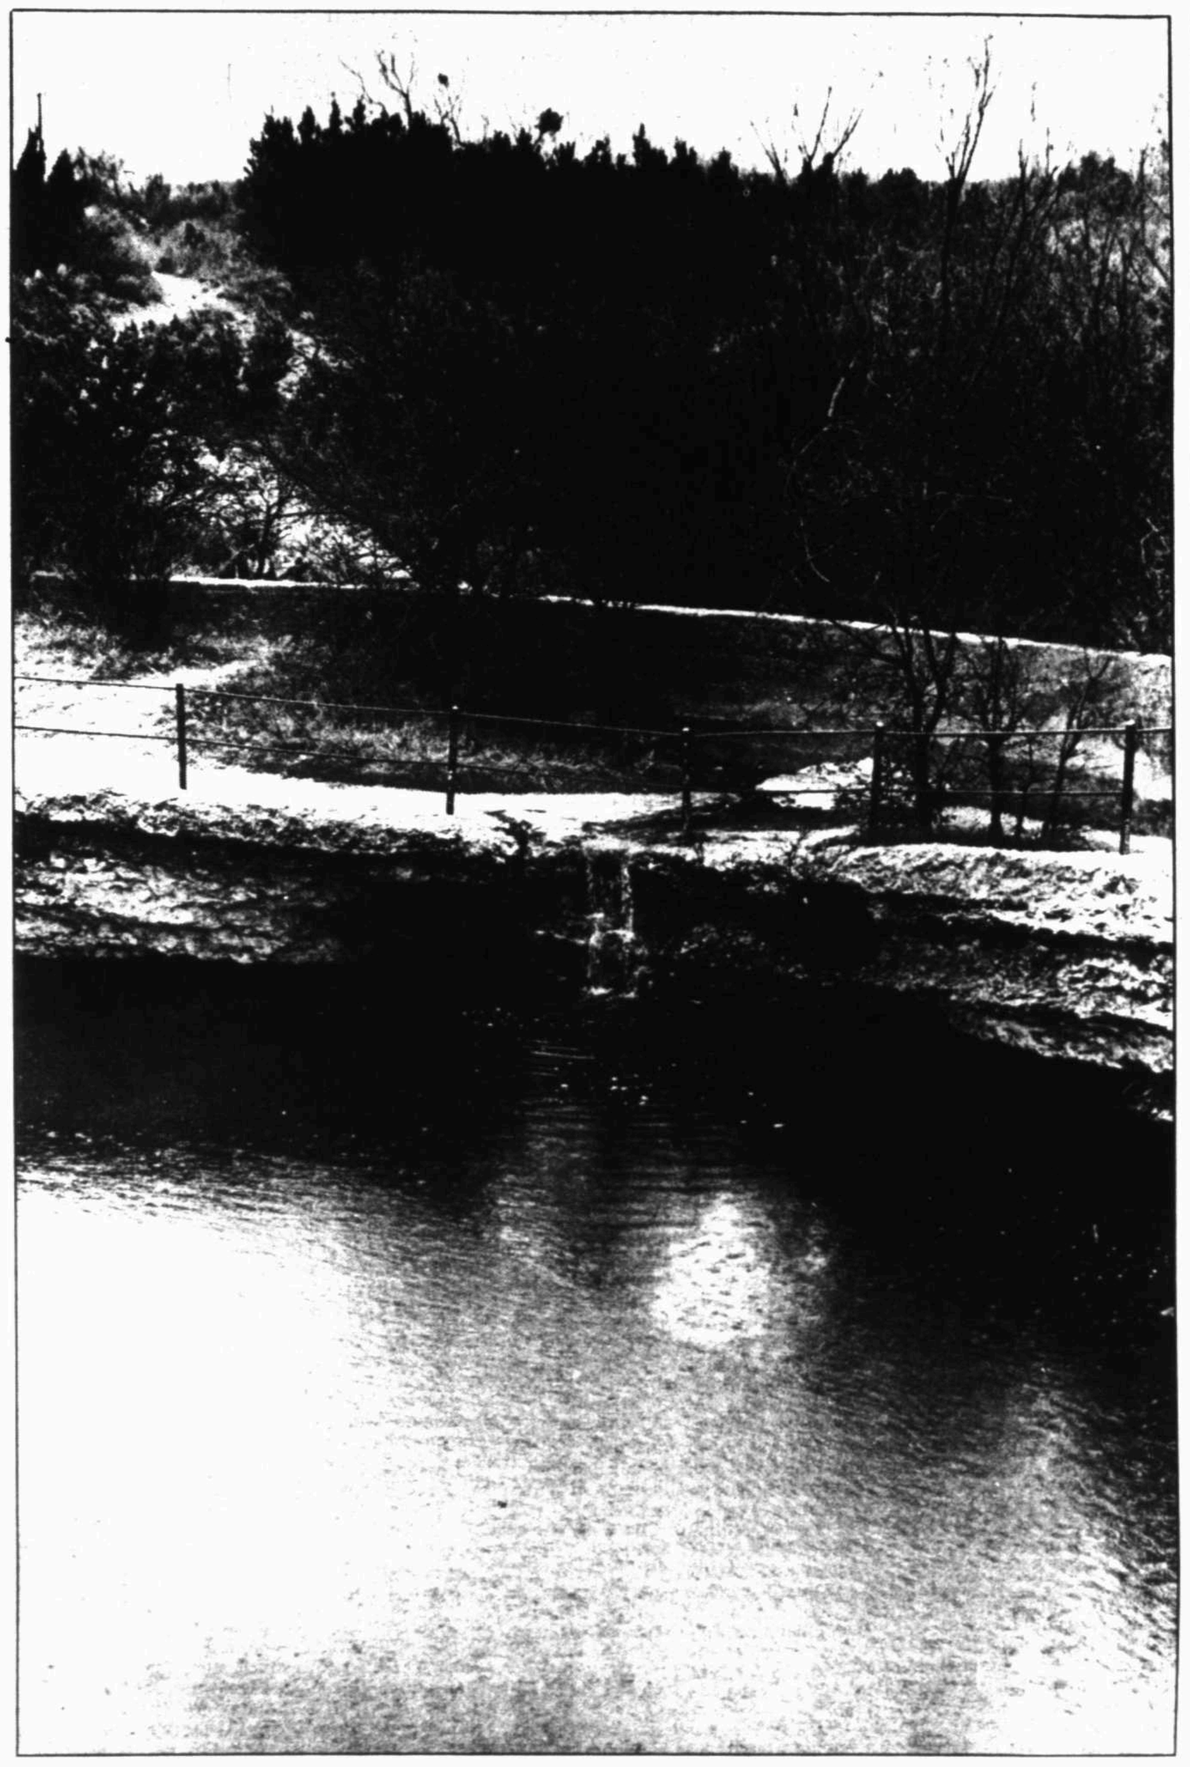
Only an hour's drive from Midland, Moss Creek Reservoir in Howard County beckons fishermen young and old.



It was an oasis to the earliest nomads and it still is — the "big spring" at Comanche Trails Park of Big Spring, an ideal location for a stroll or a picnic.

Backyard locales

Suffer from the "greener on the other side of the fence" syndrome?

Depressed because you think there's no nearby place to take in the great outdoors in this, the height of the recreation season?

Well, bring your focus in a little closer and discover a wealth of backyard locales in which to lap up a few rays on these lazy summer days.

Within an hour's drive or so of Midland lie a full-fledged fishing and boating lake, two state parks, the second largest meteor crater in the nation, and several county and city parks with both historic and aesthetic attractions.

It's an area of diversity for the outward bound — a region that can summon fishermen and swimmers, hikers and bikers, "surfers" and loafers, campers and gawkers.

For fishing, boating and picnicking, try Moss Creek Reservoir in Howard County. Its cedar-strewn bluffs can be reached by taking the Moss Lake Road exit off I-20 at the 4.5 mile mark east of Big Spring and following the blacktop highway 5 miles south.

"Fishing in general has been pretty good on the days it's not windy," said lake ranger Jim Byers. "They've been catching channel cat, crappie, and white bass and a few black. We had 3,200 hybrid white bass stocked this week by Texas Parks and Wildlife."

FISHERMEN, HE SAID, have been catching catfish on Canadian nightcrawlers, chicken livers and blood bait; black bass on crank baits and large minnows; and crappie and white bass on small minnows.

Although swimming is permitted certain times of year, said Byers, the current low water level may force the closing of the designated area.

"The lake's at about 29 feet, down about five feet from what it was," he said.

Entrance fees recently were raised to $1 per person for day use from 6 a.m.-10 p.m. Overnight camping is allowed at no extra charge, though "the main gate is locked promptly at 10 each night," said Byers.

No size restrictions exist on boats and motors, which must adhere to "no wake" rule.

Bait, fishing supplies and groceries are available at a gate near the entrance.

A few miles east of Moss Creek Reservoir lies Big Spring, which, as its name implies, is the closest thing West Texas has to an oasis. The warriors of the Comanche War Trail and the earliest explorers found its namesake to be a lifesaver, as they partook of the waters of the "big spring."

Although it no longer bubbles up from the bedrock just off U.S. 87 in the southwest portion of the city, the spring and its adjoining lake do exhibit an abundance of water. The historic spring and fishing lake are only a couple of the attractions of Comanche Trail Park — a picknickers haven and shady retreat for those seeking forested sites in West Texas.

ATTRACTIONS INCLUDE swimming and wading pools, amphitheater, softball complex, playground, golf course, overnight camping area, and a hiking trail that carries outdoor enthusiasts through groves of trees, alongside the sun-splashed pool of the big spring, through meadows and along the rim of Cosden Lake.

Take a climb to the upper extremes of Howard County and discover Big Spring State Park. Located just off FM 700 in the western portion of Big Spring, the park caters to walkers and joggers, picnickers and historians.

Developed by the Civilian Conservation Corps in the early 1930s, the park encompasses 382 acres atop Scenic Mountain. Visitors can hike nature trails, view prairie dogs, examine the graffiti of a past century, and drive a 2.4 mile scenic loop.

Entry fee is 50 cents per vehicle.

Continue westward and discover Meteor Crater just off I-20 west of Odessa. Ector County maintains the site as a county park, and persons may walk into the depths of this aging feature created when a fireball plummeted from the heavens thousands of years ago.

For those who long for the seashore's sandy stretches, Monahans Sandhills State Park awaits six miles east of Monahans off I-20. But there is a difference: here, the water lies not in a great expanse before it, but within each dune. At times, the water surfaces between dunes in willow-fringed oases.

More than 70,000 persons annually explore or "surf" the rippled sands of the park, which comprises 3,840 acres of shifting terrain. But while the sand is expected of a park called "Sandhills", a forest is not — and that's just what the careful observer discovers.

FOR HERE LIVES one of the most expansive oak forests in the world, created by the dwarf Shin Oak (Quercus havardii) which averages but two or three feet in height.

Monahans Sandhills State Park is open from 7 a.m.-10 p.m. for day use at $2 per car and for overnight campers at $4 per night with electricity and $3 without.

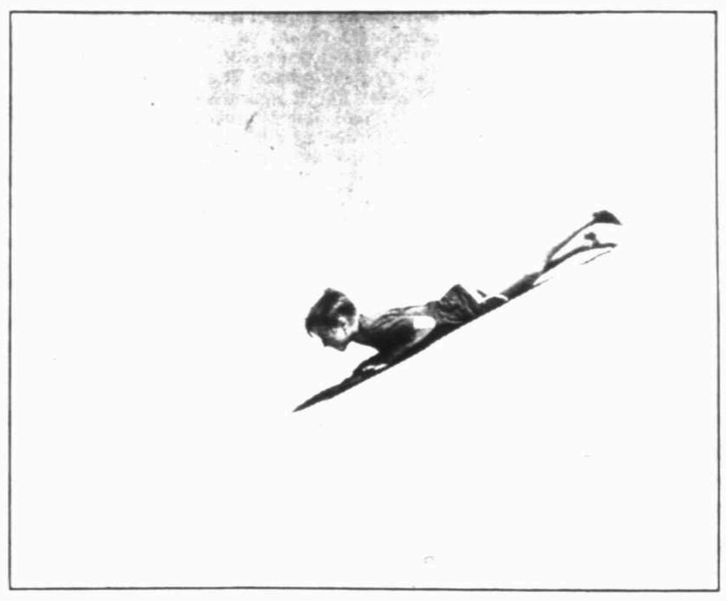
If you think the Midland area is flat, take an hour's drive down to Upton County south of Crane and Castle Gap yawns at you between the rimrock mesas of Castle and King mountains. Four miles eastward on a county road off Texas 385 lies Castle Gap Park, which consists of 100 acres at the mouth of that famous pass traversed by Comanche warriors, forty-niners, Butterfield stages, cattle drovers on the Goodnight-Loving Trail and westward-bound emigrants. And too, here roam the spectres of Maximilian's entourage and his supposed lost treasure.

Although two shelters are in need of repair, camping is permitted. Be prepared to rough it, though — there are no grills or sanitary facilities.

Northward, meanwhile, await the little-known attractions of Andrews, where six public parks offer a variety of outdoor recreation and good locales for cook-outs. Most noteworthy of these is Lakeside Park, which features a small fishing lake and scenic picnic sites. It lies just off Texas 176 a few blocks north of the Chamber of Commerce building.

The grounds of the Andrews CC hold their own attractions, as one of the better prairie dog towns in West Texas greets visitors. Adjacent to the site is a free overnight campground with water, restrooms and showers.

If it's the unusual you're looking for, try Alley Oop Park in Iraan, a true fantasyland complete with West Texas' only full-sized replica of a dinosaur. Overnight camping is permitted for a fee adjacent to the park.



The fact the ocean lies hundreds of miles away doesn't keep West Texans from surfing, as this youngster discovers at Monahans Sandhills State Park.

Desert and mesas — to those who frequent Castle Gap Park between Crane and McCamey it's a familiar sight. Through the gap's portals paraded hundreds of years of bloody history.

Elderly respond to puppy love

GALVESTON (AP) — Wet puppy kisses, caresses and hands — wrinkled and knarled with the passage of time — broad smiles and an occassional scolding or burst of laughter are all part of the scene.

It takes place in the sunny courtyard of the Moody House Retirement Center on every other Monday and involves the senior citizens living there and homeless pets from the Galveston Animal Shelter.

"People who live in a retirement or nursing home have usually suffered many losses," said Kim Mullaney, therapist at the Moody House. "They give up homes, loved ones, good health, and the last thing they had to do before coming here was find a place or home for their pet."

Recent reports show pets have tremendous therapeutic powers for everyone, but especially for elderly, heart patients and handicapped.

In Galveston, some of those powers are felt by those who participate in the "Companion Pet Program" at the Moody Retirement Center.

With the cooperation of people such as Margaret Love, Ned Donaldson, volunteers and Animal Shelter workers, several little furry friends are brought to the Moody House every second and fourth Monday of the month to get some of the tender loving care they have been needing — and residents of the Moody House seem to have in abundance.

In several recent statistical surveys it was found elderly people who have pets show a very strong tendency to get well faster when hospitalized, have a lower incidence of illness in general and have a much higher survival rate than non-pet owners.

Research with heart patients shows a lower heartbeat when a loved animal is present.

Stroking and talking to a pet lowers both the blood pressure of the pet and the person. Conversely, talking to another human being causes the blood pressure to rise, according to findings at the first international conference on the Human/Animal Bond.

Ms. Mulhaney is a strong believer in the fact that animals contribute to the well-being of elderly and handicapped. Her belief comes from first-hand experience with the success of such a program.

"One resident who is blind, has never responded well to other kinds of therapy, but when given a pet to hold, will fondle, stroke and relate to it for a long period of time," she said.

Holding very tightly to a puppy one sunny afternoon, Ethel Hilton occasionally leans over to give the furry fellow a kiss, or caress his soft fur with her cheek.

That same afternoon, Lila Waller sat closely by watching Ms. Hilton and the pup, suggesting somewhat enviously that indeed, "this must be the best little puppy here."

Anxious to get her turn, Ms. Waller was content only when an identical little brother pup was produced to get its share of attention from her.

Lilah Waller, a resident at the Turner Geriatrics Center in Galveston, spends a sunny afternoon talking to a homeless puppy. The puppy was brought to the center by local animal shelter volunteers as part of a "Companion Pet Program" for the home's residents.

While many were busy coaxing the little ones to remain still in their laps, others were occupied by the larger dogs frolicking around the courtyard.

Other residents were happy just to sit and watch, enjoying the sunshine and reaching down to give an affectionate pat on the head to one of the larger animals as they passed by.

One woman confessed that "furry friends time" was the only time she could hug someone as much as she wanted.

"When you deal with animals, they show unbiased acceptance," Ms. Mullaney said. "They know they are getting much-needed TLC and they respond accordingly. They don't notice that someone is 90 years old, has arthritic hands or can no longer see.

"Families and friends have a tendency to look at older people and not see them at all, or remember them as they used to be. They are loved and tolerated because of what they were in the past.

Texas A&M tops in underwater archaeology

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — If your country wanted to retrieve valuable artifacts from an ancient shipwreck at the bottom of the sea, you probably would not think of calling Texas A&M University — but that is exactly what many governments do.

The Institute for Nautical Archaeology, founded in Cyprus but moved to landlocked Texas A&M University in 1976, has achieved a global reputation as a leading excavator of sunken ships and their often priceless cargoes.

Jeff Alford, associate director for information at the university, said although A&M is 110 miles from the nearest body of saltwater, it is not that odd that the for the institute to select the university as home.

"We already had a very fine oceanography program that was recognized as one of the best. It was logical that we would want to go the next step, and George Bass was just the one to do it."

Researchers at the institute have assisted in the recovery of more than two dozen shipwrecks and related projects on four continents, and experts told The Dallas Times Herald that the institute is on the forefront of the relatively young academic field of underwater archaeology.

Bass, a professor of anthropology and sociology, founded the institute in 1973 in Cyprus, but left a year later because of a war between Turkey and Greece. He said after working "out of our bedrooms" for two years, the researchers reunited and brought the institute to Texas A&M.

"George Bass' ranking is right at the top in underwater archaeology," said Mary Smith, a research grant projects editor for National Geographic magazine. "George Bass is the founder of the modern method of underwater archaeology."

"He almost single-handedly made it a scientific field," said Alford.

Bass said he and his colleagues differ greatly in their techniques and their motives, but share the romance of discovering the resting places of long-lost ships.

He said the institute employs the exhaustive plotting and mapping procedures developed in land archaeology. And he said its interest is deriving the maximum scientific, historical and cultural information about the cultures that produce them.

Treasure hunters and salvage companies, he said, usually have little interest in the wreck site itself and may destroy it to extract the valuable cargo.

"A shipwreck provides an amost intact picture of one moment in time," said Bass.

"Most shipwrecks are remarkably well-preserved," and the pieces are generally in one place, he said.

He said the institute's projects sometimes span a decade, and some may never be completed.

He said his favorite project was an 11th century merchant ship discovered off the coast of Turkey. The excavation of the wreck yielded a trove of medieval Islamic glass, including nearly 80 vessels intact, some extremely delicate and intricately carved.

He said researchers also found remnants of pig bones and iron weights stamped with the name of Jesus Christ.

"The exciting part is finding out whose ship it was, whether it is a Moslem ship or a Christian ship," he said.

The institute is also, at the request of the Jamaica, excavating the old pirate city of Port Royal, which fell into the Caribbean during an earthquake 300 years ago.

And the researchers are excavating of a 15th-century wreck in the Caribbean that some salvagers have speculated may be that of the Pinta, one of three ships in Christopher Columbus' expedition to North America.

The institute also has advised the Canadian government on raising two American ships sunk on Lake Ontario during the War of 1812.

"I sometimes wonder about the value of what I do," said Bass. "But to me, it's like a symphony or a novel or a painting. I don't think it's going to contribute all that much to the world, but it's enriching."

Big Spring record store carries different tunes

BIG SPRING (AP) - Hidden in this West Texas city is a music store that has about 10,000 vintage records, many of which sell today for the same price they brought decades ago.

But octogenarian Oscar Glickman, maverick owner of The Record Shop, is trying to find a buyer for his store before he dies.

There's a catch: Glickman only plans to sell his shop to a music aficionado who promises to run it exactly as he has since 1934.

"A lot of people want The Record Shop to stay like it is, and so do I," said Glickman, nearly dwarfed by rows upon rows of old 33s, 45s and 78s. "I wouldn't sell at all if I thought I wasn't going to die."

Music lovers, some of whom travel thousands of miles to rummage through the shop, can find out-of-print records by artists such as Sammy Kaye, the Andrews Sisters and Nat King Cole. Bing Crosby's "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" — the original - sells like most of the others for $4.98.

"This is a landmark place. You won't find another like this," music buff Gene Fletcher said.

Collectors can't beat Glickman's prices. He often charges $3.98 for albums that first sold for $3.98 in the 1960s. Contemporary albums cost up to $8.98.

"I've never been much of a businessman. I'm not in this to make big money. I just love music, and so do those who come here," said Glickman, clad in a thin brown tie and a dress shirt that has seen better days.

From the first days after Glickman's brother helped finance The Record Shop — "he wanted me off the street. I was no angel" — Glickman went against usual business practices and refused to return to the distributor albums that hadn't sold.

"The reason you see so many old records is I never sent any back," he said. "When you buy records, you're allowed to send back what you don't sell, but that means you pay freight both ways. I figured it would be cheaper to keep them."

Some records he held onto are very forgettable - such as the original soundtrack to the box-office bomb "Cleopatra," which starred Elizabeth Taylor, Richard Burton and Rex Harrison. He has sold one of the 12 albums the record manufacturer sent him.

"My 'Old Lady'" — as Glickman calls his wife, Bobbie, who is 70 and suffering from throat cancer — "always fusses at me for buying so much and holding onto them," he said.

But, Glickman pointed out, "We've got records here you probably can't get anywhere else."

One collector annually travels from France to Big Spring to buy albums, Glickman said.

A Liberian student living in Houston purchased about $5,000 worth of albums to take home to Africa, he said. Others make monthly buying pilgrimages from Amarillo, El Paso and Lubbock.

One Lubbock man offered to buy The Record Shop lock-stock-and-barrel, Glickman said, but was turned down because the 25-year-old "didn't know the value of what I have here."

Glickman advised the man to work one year in his store to get to know what the shop had and its relative worth because "I hate for the kid to lose all his money."

Glickman has had some losers. He once sold — sight unseen — 2,200 dusty albums in the shop basement for 10 cents apiece. The buyer quadrupled his investment in six weeks because he uncovered so many classics. "Nobody knows what we have here — not even me," Glickman said.

Another time, rock singer Marty Balin - formerly of the Jefferson Airplane - strolled in to search for Airplane albums originally issued in the 1960s. Balin, disappointed Glickman didn't recognize him, found the albums he wanted and left.

Glickman, who oddly enough has no home stereo, said Elvis Presley and The Beatles are his best sellers.

Houston teacher fired for 'gross negligence'

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston shop teacher, fired because three of his students stole and wrecked a car during class, says he "got all the kids that no one else wants" but enjoyed his job because "I know where they're coming from."

The teacher, John Rauch, said in a Sunday interview he felt a Saturday school board vote to dismiss him was "fixed."

Rauch, 33, was fired for "gross negligence" from his job at Clifton Middle School after the March 10 incident in which three of his students took a car they were washing on a joy ride, then crashed it on a freeway.

"The safety of these children rests in the hands of the teachers in charge of them," said Bob Watts, an attorney representing the Houston Independent School District. "The car was totaled and the boys could have been seriously injured. Thank God that did not happen."

Rauch said Sunday his 6½-hour hearing was "a waste of taxpayer's money."

The firing cannot be appealed because Rauch was in his first year and on probation.

Consumers sweet on uncanny packages

MISSION (AP) — Corporate executives had feared that consumers would sour on buying fruit juice in a paper-like box, but the BigTex Texas Citrus Co. says that wasn't the case.

BigTex, a South Texas juice manufacturer that banked on the European-designed, non-refrigerated packaging, is now enjoying the sweet taste of success, a company official said.

"There is no question" about consumers' acceptance of the paper packaging, said Walt Brightman, vice president of BigTex. "We have the marketing data to show it."

Several larger national fruit drink distributors are now offering the packaging, called "aseptic" for fending off spoilage.

"Everybody is doing well who moves into aseptic" packaging, Brightman said.

Aseptic packaging, available since May in Texas, is a revolutionary packaging with five layers including paper, aluminum foil, plastic, polyethylene and polyethylene laminate.

"Production people at BigTex have been working 24 hours a day, seven days a week to keep up" with Texas' demand, Brightman said.

Brightman and Texas Citrus Exchange plant manager Larry Tomlinson, both in this South Texas town, said a shorter packaging process means juice can be fresher when shipped in aseptic packaging.

"The flavor is better than anything available because of the short pasteurizing time," said Tomlinson.

Four Midlanders return from Special Olympics

After a week of trading cowboy hats and kimonas, more than 5,000 participants returned home Sunday from Special Olympics International, held in Baton Rouge, La.

Four Midlanders from the Midland Association of Retarded Citizens were among 100 athletes from the Texas delegation.

The four won medals in seven out of eight possible competitions.

Midlanders winning medals included Chelle Dumas, a bronze in the 200-meter dash and a bronze in the standing long jump; Steve Synatschk, a silver in the softball throw; Kathy Kirkpatrick, a gold in the 25-meter breast-stroke, a gold in the 100-meter (swimming) relay, and a silver in the 50-meter free-stroke; and Leonard Porter, a gold in bowling.

The four were accompanied by Georgeann Powers, Midland Independent School District special education teacher and area coordinator for special olympics.

The Special Olympics International, held every four years on the year preceding the regular Olympics, included competitors from 59 countries, including two Communist countries, and all 50 states, according to Ray Unterbrink, MARC executive director.

Besides the many celebrities at the event, Unterbrink said 23,000 volunteers and more than 1,000 host families from Louisiana assisted in the event.

Joyce Maynor puts the finishing touches on her Silver White Cake, a tender and moist creation of three layers held together by raspberry filling and topped with vanilla cream.

Create your own pastry fantasy

Copley News Service

Though many viewers were undoubtedly sidetracked by Jacqueline Bisset and George Segal, the real star of the 1978 movie "Who is Killing the Great Chefs of Europe?" was the Ice Cream Bombe.

To be sure, it's not easy to steal scenes from co-star Robert Morley or from Bisset's designer evening gowns. But a 45-quart mountain of liquer-spiked sherbet, chocolate almond ice cream and Grand Marnier-scented vanilla mousse flecked with shaved chocolate is quite a beauty in its own right.

Warner Bros.' lighthearted black comedy was set in London, but the curvaceous "bombe" was fashioned in the Los Angeles suburb of Whittier by Joyce Maynor, a pastry chef extraordinaire.

Founder and operator of Fantasy Frostings, a "referral only" custom cake business, Maynor also has many less lethal but equally luscious accomplishments to her credit.

Moonscapes, wedding cakes, carousels for kiddies and erotic fantasies for adults...Mayor does it all.

Though cakes can be ordered and picked up at her Whittier storefront (prices start at $32 for a 10-inch buttercream cake), most cakes are elaborate enough to necessitate delivery by Maynor or one of her designers. Good idea. Otherwise, what would the poor Sherman Oaks bride have done when the neighbor's dog jumped into her $600 Chocolate-Kahlua wedding cake?

"Short of someone falling into a cake and just wallowing there," says Maynor with a twinkle in her eye, "I can save anything."

SILVER WHITE CAKE

3 cups cake flour
3 tsps. baking powder
1 tsp. salt
2 cups sugar
1 cup butter or shortening
2 tsps. flavoring
1¼ cups thin milk (half water and half milk)
6 egg whites, stiffly beaten
whipped cream
Raspberry filling (recipe follows)
Vanilla cream (recipe follows)

Preheat oven to 325 degrees.

Sift together (at least 5 times) the cake flour, baking powder and salt. Set aside.

Combine sugar, butter or shortening and flavoring until very light and fluffy. Use medium speed on electric mixture. It will take at least five minutes. To the creamed mixture add alternately sifted dry ingredients very slowly along with the thin milk. Mix only to blend. Do not beat.

Gently fold egg whites into batter.

Generously grease and flour sides and bottoms of three 8-inch cake pans, lined with wax paper on bottom. Bake until you can touch center of cake and leave no imprint.

To assemble cake, place first layer of cake onto plate.

Cover top with whipped cream and gently spoon Raspberry Filling across.

Place second layer of cake ontop and spread Vanilla Cream across.

Add third layer of cake.

Chill thoroughly. Then spread sides and top of cake with whipped cream.

RASPBERRY FILLING

1½ cups fresh raspberries
3 tablespoons raspberry liqueur
Combine raspberries and liqueur gently.

VANILLA CREAM

3 tablespoons flour
½ cup sugar
1 cup half and half
4 egg yolks, slightly beaten
1 tsp. almond extract
1 tsp. gelatin
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
¾ cup finely shaved chocolate
2 tablespoons Grand Marnier

In a saucepan combine flour and sugar. Add half and half, place over medium heat stirring constantly, until mixture thickens slightly. Spoon a little of hot cream mixture into beaten egg yolks blending well. Pour egg yolk mixture back into cream mixture and continue cooking over low heat a few more minutes. Add almond extract.

Dissolve gelatin in ¼ cup cold water. Heat over boiling water until clear. Blend into cream mixture. When cream and gelatin mixture is cooled and slightly set, fold in whipped cream. Add shaved chocolate and Grand Marnier.

Movers offer firm estimates, reduced rates

The Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

Like most Americans, Alena McKinnon usually is a "do-it-yourselfer" when it comes to moving. But when a major van line quoted her a guaranteed, binding estimate of only $438 to move her belongings to Roseburg, Ore., from El Cajon, Calif., last February, she couldn't refuse.

But to her shock, McKinnon received a bill for $930 upon delivery, as the mover claimed the shipment included goods not part of the original estimate. Unable to pay immediately, McKinnon was forced to live for a month with virtually no furniture because her belongings were held in storage until she paid the higher bill. She secured a refund of the extra charges only after writing protest letters to the company and to the Interstate Commerce Commission, which regulates interstate van lines.

"It was really a traumatic experience for me," she recalls of living without her belongings. "That higher bill just blew me away."

WHILE MOST AMERICANS' moving experiences go smoother than McKinnon's, her predicament illustrates some of the dramatic changes transforming the nation's household-goods moving industry — and the growing need for consumers to keep abreast of the changes.

Largely due to deregulation of the industry in 1980 and changes in Americans' moving habits, moving companies have been introduced to the fierce world of competition, offering rates and services previously not allowed.

They are offering binding estimates, special discounts for senior citizens or others, guaranteed pickup and delivery, and insurance to replace damaged goods at their full value. Some offer special services, such as information on the schools and churches in a customer's new neighborhood. Some even have contests offering winners a free move.

"The most significant change under deregulation is that the consumer now has a much greater variety of choice than he had before," says Warren McFarland, director of the ICC's Office of Compliance and Consumer Assistance. "But that means the consumer has to be much more informed."

THIS NEW ENVIRONMENT is in sharp contrast from the situation of just four years ago. Then, interstate movers such as North American Van Lines and Bekins Co. were not allowed to deviate from ICC-approved rate schedules. Intrastate movers (under the rule of the Public Utilities Commission in California) were not allowed to charge below certain PUC-approved minimum rates, formulated in order to discourage cutthroat competition and the resultant poor quality of service.

While the PUC minimum-rate remain, ICC rules governing the long-haul carriers were sharply rolled back when Congress passed the Household Goods Carrier Act of 1980.

Meanwhile, fundamental change in habits have further sharpened competition.

The recession and high interest rates have curtailed new hiring and employee transfers and curbed purchases of new and existing homes. Recession-pinched consumers are less likely to afford the higher costs of using moving firms, as opposed to renting trucks and doing it themselves. The continuing growth of two-income families has reduced mobility because when one spouse moves to a new job, the other must find new work also.

ALTHOUGH MOVING LINES are reporting a pickup in customers due to the economic recovery, business is still far below the levels of the late 1970s, when the housing market was booming.

As a result, interstate moving lines (and their local agents, who actually carry out the work) have waged discount wars and other promotions to win business. Although the basic rates which interstate carriers are required to file with the ICC are almost identical among major carriers (they have risen 30.4 percent since January 1981, due to higher fuel, labor and other operating costs), movers are free to charge less than those published rates.

They frequently do.

American Red Ball, the nation's 10th largest moving line, has offered 5 percent discounts for elderly customers and 9 percent discounts for people paying in advance. Many carriers offer discounts as high as 30 percent to Fortune 500 companies and others moving large numbers of workers.

CORPORATE, SENIOR-CITIZEN AND other discounts are generally prohibited for intrastate carriers who move goods within California due to the PUC's minimum rate rules, notes Tom Hays, president of the California Moving & Storage Association, an industry trade group. However, he contends, this is actually good for individual customers because they do not subsidize corporate customers using discounts.

Intrastate carriers still are free to offer services offered by interstate movers. These services include guarantees for pickup and delivery on time, usually with a minimum shipment weight. Many movers will pay about $100 to $125 for each day a pick-up or delivery is late. For example, North American, the nation's largest van line, pays $125 or 10 percent of the cost of the shipment, whichever is larger, for each day a shipment is late.

Movers also offer relocation services to help families become familiar with their new communities.

MOVERS ALSO MAY provide, at extra cost to consumers, insurance to cover the full replacement costs of damaged goods. Before deregulation, movers were only allowed to provide an ICC-approved insurance plan based on the depreciated value of the damaged items.

Movers also are offering more services to battle with the "do-it-yourself" moving industry dominated by U-Haul International Inc. and Ryder System Inc., the nation's two largest truck rental companies.

These truck rental companies have enjoyed a significant pricing advantage. Howard Waddell, manager of marketing research for Miami-based Ryder, claims that on average a consumer spends about twice as much using a commercial mover than a rental company.

(The average charge for an interstate commercial move in 1981, based on the average shipment 5,711 pounds going 1,114 miles, totaled about $2,100, including $1,296 for transportation and $700 to $800 for packing, loading and other service charges, according to Joe Harrison, president of the Household Goods Carriers' Bureau, an industry-sponsored agency that publishes interstate carriers' rate filings.)

LARGELY BECAUSE OF the higher costs of using a commercial mover, about 40 percent of Americans who move do so with owned or borrowed vehicles, while about 35 percent rent vehicles and only 25 percent use professional movers, according to Ryder.

Moving companies are becoming more aggressive in courting the "do-it-yourself" crowd. Many offer reduced rates for consumers willing to pack themselves, although many will not accept liability for breakage unless the driver inspects the goods.

Perhaps the most significant change in moving-industry practices is the advent of the binding estimate. Before deregulation, movers were only allowed to give non-binding estimates based on preliminary calculations of the weight of the belongings, with the final charge based on the actual weight on the truck or trailer.

Under this system, many unscrupulous carriers intentionally underestimated the weight in order to win orders, only to raise the final charge upon delivery, notes Mary Alice Francy, a transportation industry analyst at the Los Angeles office of the ICC.

NOW, HOWEVER, CONSUMERS can protect themselves and get the best deal by asking for binding estimates from several companies. These binding estimates guarantee that the customer will not be charged a different price later — provided, of course, that the moving agent is shown all the belongings to allow an accurate estimate of weight.

Garage converted

Q. We are converting our garage into a family room-den.

We live in a warm climate and will not have a fireplace but we want an inviting, yet relaxed atmosphere. I'm trying to plan easy-care furnishings and materials.

The room needs flooring, window treatment and furniture. Please give me some ideas for an interesting room. — W.C.

A. Designer Jack Childs created a marvelous town house den by starting with a Mexican clay tile floor which he topped with a checkered sisal rug.

An L-shaped sofa provided seating as did wicker ottomans topped with rag rug-styled fabric.

A long counter which could double as a work area or simply a display for accessories was constructed along one wall, wrapping around a portion of another.

'Forces kill thousands this year'

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A Roman Catholic church official says government security forces and right-wing death squads have killed more than 2,500 people so far this year.

The homily by the Rev. Jesus Delgado Sunday was one of the church's strongest denunciations of human rights abuses in several months. He said it was more difficult to obtain statistics on atrocities by left-wing guerrillas but said figures showed they had killed 43 civilians.

"Only corpses and shell-shocked survivors" will be left to obey the country's new constitution, he said.

Delgado did not give figures for soldiers and leftists killed in battle during the civil war.

Heat may have caused explosion

BERLIN, West Germany (AP) — Police say the intense summer heat may have been responsible for the explosion of a World War II bomb buried under a city street.

The explosion damaged some 70 homes in a residential district Saturday, shattering windows and damaging roofs, but there were no injuries, a police spokesman said.It blasted a crater 15 feet deep in a normally quiet street.

Officials said the bomb was British-made and probably had been dropped by a Royal Air Force bomber.

Gromyko's staff makes change

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union's ambassador to Poland since 1978 has been named a deputy foreign minister, the third major change in Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko's top staff since Yuri V. Andropov became Soviet leader.

Boris I. Aristov, 57, was first secretary of the Leningrad Communist Party until his appointment to Warsaw. His promotion was announced Sunday.

Last week, it was announced that Aristov was being replaced as ambassador by Alexander Aksyonov, 58, a former KGB official.

New ambassadors to East Germany and Bulgaria also were announced recently. Some Western observers say the changes are part of a new look at Eastern Europe under Andropov, who succeeded Leonid I. Brezhnev as the Soviet Union's leader in November.

Ethiopian troops stopped by forces

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Somalia says its forces beat back invading Ethiopian troops which crossed over the border in two areas.

The official Radio Mogadishu, monitored in Kenya, Sunday quoted a communique from the Somali Defense Ministry as saying Ethiopian forces "have been completely expelled from all areas they had entered" Saturday.

There was no independent confirmation of Somalia's claim nor a similar report by the official news media of Marxist Ethiopia.

The official Somali news media claimed Saturday that Ethiopian soldiers, backed by air attack, invaded two areas of central Somalia.

The two nations battled in 1977-78 over Ogaden, a region of southeastern Ethiopia. Somalia invaded the Ogaden, but a massive influx of Soviet arms and some 15,000 Cuban troops led to Somalia's defeat.

Angry villagers kill six robbers

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Angry villagers "hacked to death" six men who robbed passengers of about $5,000 at a bus stop near Monghyr in Bihar state, United News of India said.

It said the robbers were armed with guns and home-made bombs but did not specify what sort of weapons the villagers used to attack them on Sunday.

Another try made for pregnancy

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Doctors have started their 14th attempt to produce a successful pregnancy from a frozen embryo after their best effort so far ended in a miscarriage last week.

Carl Wood, head of the Monash University team pioneering the frozen test tube baby technique, said it will be two more weeks before they know whether the latest operation was successful.

Nicaraguan civilian deaths annoy Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid reports of mounting Nicaraguan civilian casualities, congressional intelligence committee members are pressing the CIA to stop U.S.-backed counter-revolutionaries from firing on non-combatants.

The warnings came from members of both the House and Senate intelligence committees largely in response to news reports about attacks on Nicaraguan farm cooperatives and other economic targets that have led to civilian deaths, according to several members.

"We don't want (CIA-supported rebels) down there burning cotton fields and killing civilians," Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., a House Intelligence Committee member, said in a recent interview. "That's not something we want to be involved with."

Officials knowledgeable about the committee protests said the CIA has denied that U.S.-supported "contras" — or counter-revolutionaries — are responsible for the attacks despite reports from eyewitnesses to the contrary.

CONGRESSIONAL sources, who spoke only on condition they not be identified, said the CIA claims to keep firm control over and maintain close communication with the contras operating out of Honduras.

CIA spokesman Chuck Wilson refused comment.

Sources said House Intelligence Committee members expressed concern about attacks on civilians to CIA director William J. Casey in secret meetings in the weeks before the Democratic-dominated House committee voted on May 3 to cut off the covert aid going to the Nicaraguan counter-revolutionaries.

That bill, which would replace the covert aid with an $80 million open fund to help friendly nations stop leftist gun-running, is scheduled for House debate Tuesday.

Although the strongest objections have come from the House panel, some individual Senate Intelligence Committee members also have voiced concerns about civilian casualties blamed on the contras, sources said.

BUT ONE well-placed Senate source said most members of the Republican-controlled committee believed that, despite some civilian deaths, the CIA has maintained "remarkable control over this sort of thing" and held such violence to a minimum.

Other congressional officials are skeptical of CIA denials.

"Are they suggesting that there's some other force that we don't know about operating down there?" remarked one official.

"I can't imagine some rag-tag band outside the CIA's control," said Rep. Norman Mineta, D-Calif., a member of the House intelligence panel.

One source said that in early April, Casey was asked about an NBC News report on a contra attack against a Nicaraguan farm cooperative, and the CIA director denied that the attack was carried out by CIA-backed forces.

HOWEVER, the source, who asked anonymity, said a congressional investigator later uncovered a CIA "after-action" report on the assault that listed the capture of some food and farm implements in the raid. The source said the CIA maintains such reports only on actions in which it is involved.

On March 26, four residents of the small northern Nicaraguan town of Rancho Grande, including Pierre Grosjean, a French doctor doing volunteer work, were killed in an attack which villagers and news reports said was mounted by 300 contras. Seventeen other residents, including children, were wounded.

A West German doctor, Georg Pflaum, and 12 Nicaraguan assistants were killed April 30 in an ambush also laid to the contras.

In a House Intelligence Committee report that accompanied the bill to cut off the covert aid, McCurdy cited that incident as proving "all too convincingly that (rebel military) activity is not being restricted to military targets."

MORE RECENTLY, Lisa Fitzgerald, an American nun and a former assistant attorney general in Massachusetts, returned from Nicaragua and told House Intelligence Committee members that contra forces have systematically attacked economic targets, according to a committee staff report.

Sister Fitzgerald said the anti-Sandinista forces targeted the workers' quarters in an April raid on a tobacco plantation in El Porvenir and added that she saw women and children injured by mortar fragments, according to the report. She said the plantation was attacked on two other occasions as well.

Questions answered on security conference

MADRID, Spain (AP) — The Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, which convened here 31 months ago as a follow-up to the 1975 Helsinki accords on human rights, reached provisional agreement last week.

The final agreement will be signed at a formal, high-level session but no date has been set because of scheduling problems. It could be held late this month or in September. Secretary of State George P. Shultz is expected to sign for the United States.

Following are questions and answers on the origin of the conference, its purpose and what was achieved in Madrid:

Q. What is the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe?

A. It was first convened in Helsinki, Finland, in 1975 by all European nations except Albania, plus the Vatican, the United States and Canada, as a forum on human rights in the 35 participating countries. It produced a document called the Helsinki Final Act. One of the premises of the act was that human rights performance is an ingredient of security and cooperation and as such subject to international inquiry.

An initial follow-up meeting was held in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, from October 1977 to March 1978 to review the progress and implementation of the 1975 Final Act in participating countries.

Q. What did East and West achieve through the Helsinki Final Act?

A. The Soviet bloc gained official recognition of de facto World War II borders, including the separation of East and West Germany and the inclusion of a large chunk of Poland and the Baltic states — Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania — in the U.S.S.R.

The West achieved language that although not legally binding, recognized the right of individual citizens to know and act upon their rights.

This recognition resulted in the creation of citizens' monitoring groups, notably in the Soviet Union.

Q. What were the points of divergence that stalled the Madrid meeting?

A. The Madrid conference opened under the shadow of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan in December 1979 and tension in Poland following the creation of the independent labor movement, Solidarity.

Fourteen Pentecostalists to leave Soviet Union

MOSCOW (AP) — A family of 14 Pentecostalists was to leave the Soviet Union today, more than four years after two of them took refuge in the U.S. Embassy saying they faced persecution for their religious beliefs and wanted to emigrate.

Five other Pentecostalists who sought asylum in the embassy emigrated to Israel three weeks ago.

The family of Maria Chmykhalov was to leave for Vienna on an Austrian Airlines flight. Their final destination was not known.

An American supporter of the Pentecostalists, the Rev. Blahoslav Hruby, said in New York City Saturday that the 14, including four children, were expected to settle in the United States. Hruby edits the journal Religion in Communist Dominated Areas.

A U.S. Embassy source who asked not to be identified said today their eventual destination is "a matter for them to decide." He noted that "the interest they've always expressed and the place they've always put down (on application forms) has always been Israel."
