Uncommon parasite detected in World War II veterans

CHICAGO (AP) — A group of World War II veterans formerly held prisoner by the Japanese in southeast Asia have been sick for almost 40 years with an uncommon Asian parasite that could have been treated earlier if it had been diagnosed, a researcher says.

The parasite has caused frequent outbreaks of itchy skin rashes and a variety of stomach ailments among veterans.

But because the parasite is uncommon in this country, doctors who were consulted by the veterans did not look for it, according to Dr. Lawrence Pelletier.

The parasite, a microscopic worm called strongyloides, is also very difficult to find in laboratory tests, says Pelletier, chief of the medical service at the American Lake Veterans Administration Medical Center in Tacoma, Wash.

Pelletier, who discovered the parasite in the veterans, said it can take a full day of laboratory testing to find it in a single patient. Standard exams for parasites usually do not detect strongyloides.

Pelletier discussed the research in an interview Friday during a meeting of the American Society for Microbiology.

THE MEN CARRYING the parasites were part of a group of 530 prisoners of war captured by the Japanese on Java in 1942 and sent to work on the Burma-Thailand railroad.

Pelletier sent questionnaires to the veterans, asking them whether they had rashes and stomach disorders since World War II. The veterans who reported problems were tested and so far 45 have been found to be carrying strongyloides. Pelletier expects that the disease will be found in about 100 of the veterans.

At the conclusion of World War II, when these men came home, there was no cure for strongyloides. But a treatment has been available since 1967, and until now there has been no effort to find and treat victims of the disease, Pelletier said.

The illness is not life-threatening, he said, unless the victim's natural defense systems are weakened by disease or by treatments like chemotherapy.

When the bodies defenses are weakened, the worms can multiply rapidly and the disease can be fatal if it hasn't been discovered.

PELLETIER SAID some Vietnam veterans might also be carrying strongyloides, which is found in the tropics and in areas where there is poor sanitation. In this country it is occassionally found in Appalachia and the South.

The parasite, which lives in human waste and in the soil in tropical climates, burrows into the skin and eventually into the blood stream. As the young worms crawl under the skin, they leave in their wake what doctors call "creeping skin eruption" — swollen, itchy red lines.

The worms travel through the blood to the lungs, crawl up the airway to the throat and are swallowed. The mature worms, still too small to be seen without a microscope, reside in the small intestine.

There they reproduce, sending a new crop of young worms on their way under the skin to the lungs.

Some types of parasitic worms get old and die over a period of time, Pelletier said. Unfortunately for the veterans, strongyloides can reproduce and live in its victims indefinitely.

Pelletier decided to look for the parasite after reading that it was being found in Australian and British veterans of World War II.

He said the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta is trying to develop a quicker test for the disease that will make it possible to search for it in large numbers of veterans.

Soviet defense minister pledges military parity

MOSCOW (AP) — Defense Minister Dmitry Ustinov vowed the West will never overtake the Kremlin in military strength as missiles, tanks and troops were paraded through Red Square Saturday in the Soviet Union's annual revolution day celebration.

"The Soviet armed forces possess everything necessary to deliver a crushing rebuff to any aggressor," warned the 73-year-old marshal, a member of the Communist Party's ruling Politburo.

He accused the Western nations of feverishly building arms to achieve military domination, but asserted there was "absolutely no chance" Moscow will be beaten.

In Venice, meanwhile, NATO Commander Gen. Bernard Rogers urged the West not to acquiesce to what he called a Soviet military threat and called for "an effective deterrent to halt Soviet expansionism." He said the Soviets have a 4-1 advantage in arms systems and 3½-1 advantage in nuclear warheads.

SEVERAL MOSCOW parade-goers carried banners denouncing U.S. plans to build neutron weapons and deploy medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe to counter a perceived Soviet threat.

"We protest the aggressive course of the Reagan administration," one banner read. Another showed a picture of what was described as a neutron bomb crossed out by a resolute hand.

Others carried portraits of Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev, who watched the two-hour festivities in a cold rain atop the Vladimir I. Lenin mausoleum overlooking the square. Lenin was father of the October 1917 revolution that brought the Communists to power.

Brezhnev, in ill health, climbed the stairs unaided to the top of the tomb and stayed until the parade's noon conclusion. Ustinov and other top Kremlin leaders accompanied him.

Ambassadors of Sweden, Denmark, Norway and Iceland boycotted the parade to protest the Soviet submarine that trespassed Swedish waters and got grounded Oct. 27. The sub, reportedly outfitted with nuclear weapons, was freed Friday after sparking a major diplomatic flareup between the Soviets and Swedes.

About twelve Western ambassadors, including U.S. Ambassador Arthur A. Hartman, also boycotted the parade to renew their protest against Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

BUT PRESIDENT Reagan sent a message to Brezhnev expressing congratulations on the holiday and asserting the United States wants a relationship with the Soviet Union based on "restraint and reciprocity."

Brezhnev said at a reception earlier that the military might of the Soviets and their allies is one of the main guarantees of world peace.

Absent from the festivities was 67-year-old Politburo member Viktor Grishin, arousing speculation by Western diplomats that the chief of Moscow's local party organization was ill.

Western military attaches said the weapons shown were almost identical to those paraded last year. About 220 vehicles, missiles, tanks and artillery were displayed, many dating from the 1950s and 1960s.

The Soviets rarely exhibit their latest military hardware in the parades, apparently preferring vintage displays that give a mighty appearance.

There were no intercontinental missiles shown, nor any of the multiple-warhead SS-20 nuclear missiles that ring the Soviets' Western Europe border, trained on European targets.

As in other years, the parade included the 35-foot-long SA-2 "Guideline" surface-to-air missile, which has eight fins and a large movable launch pad. Also shown was the BMP armored infantry vehicle, used by Soviet troops in Afganistan.

SOME VETERAN observers said there were more portraits of Brezhnev than at similar events in the past. Several marchers carried pictures of Brezhnev meeting leaders of other Warsaw Pact countries.

However, there was no picture of the Soviet president with a Polish leader.

There have been no reported meetings between Brezhnev and Wojciech Jaruzelski, Poland's premier and defense minister who took over as Polish Communist Party chief last month in that country's continuing power struggle between the party and the independent Solidarity union.

Poland's state news agency PAP said Jaruzelski telegrammed Soviet leaders to congratulate them on the anniversary. The message pledged stronger friendship with the Soviet Union and a vow to "counter all attempts of reactionary forces."

Midland lice problem worsens in cold weather

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

With the temperature already dropping and the promise of even cooler weather to come; woolen scarves, hats and sweaters are being pulled out of storage.

And during the winter season a continuing problem that exists in Midland, and other cities, can become even more aggravated.

The problem is lice, or more specifically pediculus humanus capitus, or head lice — and the infested area is not limited to the east side of Midland.

"They're everywhere — wherever people congregate," Clinton Adams, principal of Long Elementary School said. "And they've been here a long time."

Adams said that irate parents will come in and blame the schools for the lice infection. The children probably did come into contact with the lice in the schools, he said, but that it might have occurred anywhere.

CHILDREN CAN BECOME infected with head lice by playing with each other's hair and, more commonly, by wearing each other's hats and scarves or using each other's brushes and combs, he noted.

Ruth Mitchell, a Midland Independent School District nurse, agreed, saying the infection spreads "especially in the cold weather when the kids start wearing stocking caps.

"Teachers have even gotten them (lice) from little kids hugging on them," she said. "All it takes is direct body contact — in the nurseries, the schools, the day care centers, even in the movie theaters."

She remembered one instance where an entire class was infected when they passed a comb to each other before getting a class picture taken.

Older children usually don't have the problem because they tend to take care of themselves more, she said. "They are usually washing their hair every night, whereas the little ones don't know how to take care of themselves."

Unfortunately, many people "are not even aware that this even goes on," she said. "I think we have a lot of people who really don't know what it (lice infection) is."

According to Ms. Mitchell, the problem, which has been in Midland for quite some time, is due mainly to the fact that most parents are unaware that it exists.

"IF THEY KNEW what to look for they could help us."

According to Payton Cook, MISD director of pupil and community services, the problem "gets worse every year."

"They (lice) are here and parents need to be looking for them," he said.

Ms. Mitchell said three types of medication are commonly used for the treatment of lice. Kwell shampoo requires a doctor's prescription, which, in turn, usually requires a doctor's fee. Two over-the-counter remedies that also are effective are RID and A-200 Pyrinate shampoos.

Adams said ordinary shampoos won't kill the lice. Medicated shampoos should be used once every seven to 10 days to effectively treat the lice.

According to a report issued by the Texas Deparment of Health, the female head louse cements a single egg to the base of the hair shaft next to the scalp. The egg needs body heat in order to hatch. After an incubation period of seven to 10 days, an immature head louse, called a nymph, will hatch from the egg and begin feeding by sucking blood from the scalp. This process produces the itching which is the major symptom of head lice.

After 10 days, the nymph is mature enough to lay eggs. The adult female head louse can lay four to six eggs every 24 hours and may survive up to 30 days, laying a total of about 120 eggs in her lifetime.

BY USING THE medicated shampoos as prescribed, the lice will be killed. But the nit, or shell in which the egg is cemented to the hair shaft, will remain unless combed out with a fine toothed comb. Unlike dandruff, the nits cannot be lightly brushed out of the hair.

To protect the child and his family from future attacts of head lice, the TDH recommends that all clothes, bed linens, hats, brushes, and other personal items be washed in hot water and soap, or dry cleaned. If anyone contracts head lice, the entire family should be inspected and begin the treatment.

The nape of the neck and above the ears should be regularly inspected for nits.

Parents should also caution their children not to use friends' combs or brushes, or to wear other's hats and scarves.

The main thing to remember is that lice can infest anyone, Adams said. A clean person can come in contact with them just as easily as someone who doesn't practice good hygiene.

"People are so worried what their neighbors might think," he said. "The fact is, their neighbors could have lice just as easily as they do."

Parents concerned with the possibility of lice infestation of their children or persons interested in more information, are urged to contact the school principals, MISD nurses, or the Midland City-County Health Department.

Dollars and defense

NEW YORK — Like many of you, I've been trying to make up my mind over the national debate raging about our big military budget. It's hard at this stage to formulate an informed judgment with critics demanding cuts and defenders urging us to stand pat.

With all my reading on the subject, one of the most interesting presentations comes from veteran economist Herbert Stein, A. Willis Robertson professor at the University of Virginia and Senior Fellow of the American Enterprise Institute. Because of his brilliance, he served as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under presidents Nixon and Ford. His thought-provoking article appeared in The Wall Street Journal of October 20, 1981, and my excerpts of his published views follow:

"For many years defense and budget policy have been plagued by a childish notion of the proper relation between defense spending and non-defense spending by the federal government. The result is a defense establishment that is too weak and a budget that is too big.

"The childish notion is that if you -- parents -- want me to do something that is good for me you must also let me do something that is bad for me.

"Today a large bloc of Congressmen, Republicans as well as Democrats, say that if you want to cut non-defense spending you must also cut defense spending, or cut it more

Interest rates are bright spot

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid the dark signs of a worsening recession, rising unemployment and burgeoning budget deficits, the Reagan administration has found a bright ray of hope — falling interest rates.

And, as long as interest rates continue to recede, President Reagan and his economic advisers seem willing to accept a weakening economy and a jobless rate likely to burst above 8 percent as the necessary trade off.

"Interest rates are dropping, and dropping rapidly," Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan noted last Friday, trying to cushion a new report by the Labor Department that unemployment had surged to 8 percent in October, the highest level since 1975.

ALTHOUGH THERE has been only slight downward movement in mortgage rates, which have kept millions of would-be homebuyers out of the market, other long-term and short-term interest rates have shown rapid decreases in recent weeks.

The short-term prime lending rate that banks charge their most creditworthy customers has dropped from 20.5 percent to 17 percent within two months, and Regan predicted "17 percent would be pierced in the near future."

Interest rates on long-term government bonds have fallen from 15 percent to below 14 percent just in the last two weeks.

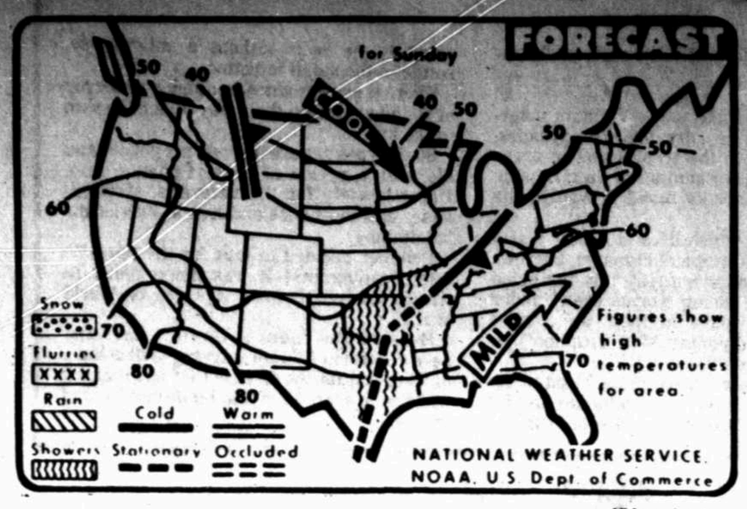

These developments are a mixed blessing for Reagan's fellow Republicans in Congress, who have been under intense pressure from constituents to bring interest rates down from their painfully high levels. But the Republicans also are concerned about the effect their president's policies will have on the economy by next fall's congressional elections.

JUST A FEW WEEKS ago, the administration was saying the nation was in a short and mild recession. Now it appears the recession will be deeper and longer than expected.

Administration economists predict the economy will remain in a recession until next spring, with unemployment likely to climb above 8 percent. But they say a strong recovery should be under way by the summer — well in advance of the elections — with a cut in personal income tax rates scheduled for next year providing the needed boost. Private economists are issuing similar forecasts.

The administration defends the rising unemployment rate as a "natural short-term consequence" of its fight against inflation, but Democratic critics say the nation is witnessing a repeat of a familiar Republican formula — trading jobs for more stable consumer prices.

Students quit television cold turkey

By HAL SPENCER
Associated Press Writer

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Is there life after television? Fifty families here, egged on by an English teacher who fears that TV keeps people from thinking, will find out this month.

Peter H. Hufstader, a teacher at the private Wheeler School, says about 11 percent of the 454 families who send their children to Wheeler have signed a pledge to unplug the tube for the month of November.

He issued the challenge to students and their parents as a "gimmick" to draw attention to his pet contention: "Children who are watching a great deal of TV and not reading and listening don't become good readers or good handlers of the language."

He does not suggest that parents permanently banish the tube. But he argues that too many families switch the TV on in the morning and leave it "mumbling in the corner like an insane relative."

Hufstader has written a booklet for the parents, "A Family-Based Reading Program," that contains, among other things, ways to encourage children to read and tips on how to cultivate proper use of television in the home.

Priscilla Wolff's family is among those who have agreed to go cold turkey.

"We've unplugged it and it's just sitting there staring at us. It looks kind of sad," she said.

"At first, the children expressed disbelief. 'None? No TV?' they asked. But they're doing all right. As a last resort, my 11-year-old son took out a book the first evening and started reading. He read all night," she said with a laugh.

One of the parents who ignored the challenge, Rosemary Wittels, said her daughter enjoyed such shows as "Sesame Street" and "Mister Rogers." Mrs. Wittels said she doesn't believe television interferes with her 4-year-old daughter's emerging reading skills, partly because the child watches relatively little.

Hufstader, who heads the English department at Wheeler, which enrolls students in nursery classes through 12th grade, cites studies as well as "20 years of observation as a teacher," to support his view that television is "overpowering our ability to use language and to think intelligently."

While recognizing that TV is here to stay, he urges parents to encourage reading as an alternative.

"As nearly as we can tell, the good readers at Wheeler were read to as babies, by parents who very early took their infants on their laps and led them lovingly and entertainingly through childhood nursery stories and fantasies," he said.

Hufstader has several suggestions for controlling television use in the home. Among them: "Do not allow children to watch TV 'because there is nothing else to do'." Instead, children should be required to justify to their parents why they should be permitted to watch a certain program, he said.

Mrs. Wolff said her two sons used to watch a lot of television out of boredom. Will her television be back on in December?

"We don't know what will happen," Mrs. Wolff said. But at least "the children will have learned there is life after television."

Communism is a stone's throw away

By LE KILGORE
San Angelo Standard-Times

CIUDAD ACUNA, Mexico (AP) — Communism, stretching its heavy hand northward through Latin America, is within a stone's throw of the United States, within wading distance of Texas.

The Mexican Communist Party, PCM, has chosen Ciudad Acuna, Piedras Negras and Jimenez — three Mexican communities on the Texas border — for its first serious challenge to the long-dominant national party. Ciudad Acuna is across the border from Del Rio, Piedras Negras is next to Eagle Pass and Jimenez is on the Rio Grande between the two. All are in the Mexican state of Coahuila, which runs along the Texas border from Big Bend to just west of Laredo.

Residents of these communities, listening to promises of food and freedom, say they seriously are thinking of voting Communist in the Dec. 6 municipal elections in defiance of their national party leaders.

The strength of the Communist challenge is acknowledged by leaders of the Institutional Revolutionary Party, PRI, which has held undisputed power over politics and the government in Mexico since 1929.

So far, the battle in these three communities is being waged peacefully, with radio announcements, brilliantly colored red, white and yellow posters and promises of a better tomorrow right now.

The peaceful nature of the campaign, however, may represent the calm before a bloody storm.

Jose Aranda Reynel, PCM secretary-general for the northern district of Coahuila, said last week the Communist Party's ambitions for Mexico in Acuna are built on a plan to bring "freedom to the Mexican people through the democratic process."

He acknowledged, however, other options do exist for Communist forces.

Harking back to the Mexican Revolution of 1910, Aranda shook his finger and said harshly, "The Mexican Revolution was not fought with flowers, but with the blood of thousands of Mexicans who died for freedom."

Jose Arada Reynel, left, the Communist Secretary-general for the Northern District of Coahuila, and Evaristo Perez Arreola, the Communist candidate for the Acuna Municipality presidency, stand on the podium after a communist rally Oct. 31. The Municipal Presidente for Acuna would have jurisdiction of about 160 miles along the U.S.-Mexican border.

A Communist takeover via the ballot box is the party's first choice, he said. "But remember, if you have food and I have none, and I ask you to share your food with me, and all through the years you continue to refuse, then there comes the moment when we must take up arms and fight for our rights.

"In the history of change, there has never been a transition of a state in any part of the world without fighting — when there was no other way to effect that change," he said.

"We speak the language of the people," he said, "and we are international in our concepts, because workers exist everywhere, and workers are exploited everywhere — in the United States, in Mexico and in most of the world."

The movement is international in concept, Aranda said, vigorously denying at the same time a link to foreign sources. He said the Mexican Communist Party is "completely Mexican."

"We are Latin American Communists, and we are not led by, nor do we receive direction or support from Cuba, nor from the Soviet Union, nor from the United States," he said.

Aranda said all money for the campaign comes "from the people right here."

Information gathered in Acuna indicates campaign spending by the Communist Party in Acuna alone will be at least $150,000.

Aranda said the PCM slate is "a coalition of the left to offer voters, for the first time in 60 years,

Handicapped infants may be allowed to die

LONDON (AP) — The acquittal on an attempted murder charge of a pediatrician who allowed a 3-day-old mongoloid baby to die has split Britain's medical profession and prompted debate on when mercy becomes murder.

The British Medical Association welcomed the verdict, saying it meant prosecutions were "less likely" of doctors who allow handicapped babies to die. An estimated 300 such babies die untreated every year in Britain.

But it upset the Roman Catholic Church and doctors attached to a strong anti-abortion pressure group, Life, which reported the baby's death to the police, after a tip from an unidentified informer in the hospital.

"I hope this decision will not be interpreted as a license to kill handicapped babies," said Dr. Robert Zachary, retired professor of Pediatric Surgery and member of Life.

"But I fear it will now be very difficult to bring a prosecution against any doctor who brings about the death of a baby."

The jury acquittal was handed down at Leicester Crown Court in the Midlands Nov. 5 after the 18-day trial of Dr. Leonard Arthur, 55, a pediatrician. It was the first trial of its type in this country.

The BMA, the doctors' trade union, said Arthur — described by both defense and state lawyers as caring, compassionate and highly competent — was put in the dock for making a decision pediatricians regularly face.

The baby, John Pearson, was rejected by his parents.

Arthur, a consultant pediatrician at Derby City Hospital in the Midlands, wrote "nursing care only" on the child's medical sheet, and prescribed four-hourly doses of a pain-killing drug Dihydro-Codeine.

The child, born with Down's Syndrome, commonly known as mongolism, died from bronchial pneumonia in a nurse's arms last July 1. He was 69 hours old.

The BMA's code of ethics stipulates that "parents must ultimately decide" whether or not a handicapped child be treated.

The prosecution, which initially charged Arthur with murder, claimed he prescribed the drug to kill John, son of a grocer, John Pearson, and his wife, Molly, 32. The defense said the drug was to relieve distress and Arthur merely allowed the baby to die.

The murder charge was dropped after the defense showed John also suffered from organic brain, heart and lung defects, and would not necessarily have survived just by being fed.

"To allow to die is not intending to kill, and certainly not intending to kill unlawfully," Arthur's lawyer, George Carman, argued.

Professor John Lober, of Sheffield Children's Hospital, who 10 years ago drew up guidelines on whether or not to treat such babies, declared after the hearing:

"In my opinion, there is no sense whatever in carrying out a policy of saving every possible life when it leads to...disastrous consequences.

"Children have a right to live. But they also have a right to die in dignity surrounded by those who love them."

Zachary retorted: "The doctor's obligation is to see how best he can improve a baby's quality of life, not to abandon an innocent child because it has a defect."

Eminent physicians, nurses and a parent whose handicapped child Arthur treated, came to the defense of Arthur, a father of six children.

Commented Cardinal Basil Hume, head of the Roman Catholic Church in England and Wales: "Allowing people to die from deliberate neglect is just as wrong morally as actively killing them."

Mild conditions will prevail in area

Despite a slight chance for precipitation issued by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, no rain materialized Saturday, leaving the year's total standing at 17.55 inches.

Mild conditions and sunny skies prevailed, as the mercury edged up to the 77-degree mark after an early morning low of 48. The extremes did not threaten the alltime marks for the date of 88 established in 1963 and 22 set in 1938.

The NWS expects fair skies through Monday, with a little cooler temperatures tonight. The high today should reach 70 before a drop tonight to near 40, while Monday's high should be in the mid-60s.

Westerly winds 15-20 miles per hour and gusty are forecast for today.

Midland man is shot during quarrel

A 27-year-old Midland man suffered a gunshot wound to the chest early Saturday in a quarrel in the parking lot of a lounge in the 4300 block of West Highway 80.

Elier Avila of 1210 Montgomery was taken initially to Midland Memorial Hospital and then transferred at 1:36 a.m. Saturday to Odessa Medical Center. He was listed in stable condition in intensive care late Saturday.

Midland police were looking for a bearded Mexican-American male driving a blue, possibly Mercury, vehicle in connection with the shooting. No arrests had been made by late Saturday.

Pistol stolen from construction office

More than $5,000 in merchandise was reported taken in burglaries and thefts investigated Saturday by Midland police.

Jim Kincaid of Route 6, Box 600 reported the theft of an electric engraver, Ruger pistol and holster from Harvey Construction's office at 600 W. Texas Ave. Total value of the missing items was $285, according to a police report.

A 23 channel CB radio, two tool boxes, an AM-FM cassette tape player and a scanner with a total value of $1,550 were reported missing after the burglary of a vehicle belonging to Tom Tyler of 4000 W. Illinois Ave., No. 101.

J.D. Martin of 612 W. Kansas Ave. reported the theft of a gold ring and a wedding band valued at $3,400.

Hospital fire forces evacuation of more than 100 patients

ARDMORE, Okla. (AP) — A handful of nurses and hospital workers evacuated more than 100 patients from a hospital here early Saturday after a fire spread thick smoke and knocked out power to parts of the building.

Ken McCall, associate administrator of Memorial Hospital of Southern Oklahoma, said the evacuation was orderly, but there were reports of patients screaming from hospital windows and from the roof.

McCall said nurses and other hospital personnel carried patients out of smoky corridors in total darkness after the fire knocked out half of the hospital's electrical system.

He said patients were first moved to areas with power and then carried down as many as four flights of stairs to a hospital across the street and to a YMCA nearby.

An elderly woman, whose name was not released, died shortly after the fire started, but McCall said she had been near death for several days.

EDITOR'S REPORT

than the president has proposed. This is likely to result in a compromise in which we cut defense spending more than we should.

"There are two flaws in this way of looking at budget decisions. It asks the wrong question and it gives the wrong answer even to the wrong question.

"The question being asked is: Do we want to cut non-defense spending or do we want to cut defense spending? Those who value the non-defense spending the most, and are most reluctant to cut it, feel obliged to propose cuts in defense spending. As they say, there is nothing sacred about defense spending. But cutting defense spending is not the only alternative to cutting non-defense spending.

"The administration has helped to cultivate the notion that total government spending must conform to the downward path of tax rates and of the deficit which the administration has laid out. But the administration has not been totally rigid in this matter. During the campaign Mr. Reagan said that if it came to a choice between balancing the budget and defending the country he would accept a deficit.

"IN HIS STATEMENT of Sept. 24, 1981, President Reagan made some moves to revise the tax code in ways that would increase revenue. Since then, OMB Director Stockman has said that what matters is not the precise size of the budget deficit but the assurance of a steady decline of the deficit. This kind of talk may open the way to considering alternatives to further cuts of the non-defense budget other than cutting the defense budget.

"We hear about the Soviet threat and the window of vulnerability. We also hear about waste in the military and about the self-interest of the military-industrial complex. On the other hand we hear about waste, fraud and inefficiency in the "social programs." But we are moved by concern for some categories of people who receive federal assistance.

"In this welter of uncertainty one fact seems to me of great importance. Aside from defense and interest on the debt almost all of the big spending programs of the federal government are for purposes that would be served otherwise to a considerable degree if the federal government were not in the picture.

"If there were no Social Security System people would make more private provision for their own retirement. If there were no federal expenditures for welfare, some of the present recipients would earn more for themselves, some would receive support from state and local governments and some would receive private support. If federal funds for the National Endowment for the Arts are cut there will be some funds from other sources. I don't mean to suggest that these are complete offsets to the loss caused by cutting the federal programs, though in some cases they will be complete offsets or better. But the net loss would often be small relative to the size of the expenditure cut. . .

"There would be no such offsets to a cut of defense spending. That is why defense has always been at the head of the list of the functions of the national state. It is not because defense is more important than everything else but because defense is one of the few things that only the national government can provide.

"THIS IN NOT AN argument for unlimited increases of defense spending and unlimited cuts of all other spending. Reason and information must be utilized. But in the presence of great uncertainty about how much of what is needed, there is a strong case for the federal government to lean toward doing what it alone can do."

I HOPE YOU WILL find Mr. Stein's cogent reasoning as interesting as I did. There will be many other arguments and contrary views, of course, to inflame this debate. But Mr. Stein's article should help us all to think clearer about this most important matter of preparedness.

The immortal words of Thomas Jefferson, "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," still pertain. When he said that he was warning in general terms. Today however with a predatory Communist Russia, whose stated objective is to dominate the world, it is even truer now than it was then.

Texas gets chemical wastes

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico State University has completed shipping hazardous chemical wastes that were improperly stored to a waste disposal site in Texas, an NMSU official says.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency on June 24 issued a compliance order to NMSU citing 15 violations of federal standards for storage of toxic chemical wastes from laboratories.

The citations were issued after federal officials inspected the school's hazardous waste storage area at Las Cruces, said Eddie Lee of the EPA's Dallas office.

"I guess it was a pretty sloppy operation," Lee said.

EPA inspectors found some toxic chemicals from laboratory work stored in cardboard boxes, plastic containers and tin cans, he said.

The wastes should have been kept in federally approved metal drums, Lee said.

Some of the other waste containers were left open in violation of federal laws and a trailer where much of the waste was kept had "a ceiling falling in," he said.

Inspectors also found that a fence surrounding the storage area was open and no warning signs were posted for passers-by.

There was not enough aisle space between drums of waste so there "was substantial threat to human life and environment," the citation said.

Other violations concerned record keeping provisions of the law and included the absence of a training manual for handling accidents and failure to inspect storage areas on a regular basis, Lee said.

Under federal law, the university is subject to fines of up to $25,000 per day per violation, but the compliance order stated a proposed penalty of $27,650.

The fine will be determined later this year after meeting with NMSU officials, Lee said.

E.J. Waid, an NMSU spokesman, said all the violations have been corrected and the wastes shipped to a disposal site in Texas.

The violations resulted from the university being unable to understand complex federal law and having nowhere to dispose of the wastes, he said.

The regulations are "as big as a phone book," Waid said.

The laboratory chemicals were stored in cardboard boxes and other containers because the federal regulations were not in effect when the wastes were accumulated, he said.

Two plead guilty

PARIS, Texas (AP) — Two Northeast Texas county commissioners have pleaded guilty to mail fraud, raising to eight the number of officials to enter plea bargains in the ongoing federal invesigation of political corruption.

Red River County Commissioners James Darwin Floyd, 60, and Robert L. Edwards, 57, pleaded guilty Friday to single counts of mail fraud and conspiracy to commit mail fraud. A plea bargain calls for them to resign and make restitution of $5,000 each to the county.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice delayed sentencing pending a recommendation by probation officers. The charges carry a maximum penalty of five years in prison and an $11,000 fine.

The pair originally was charged with 37 counts of extortion, conspiracy and mail fraud when indicted last June.

Three road and bridge materials vendors and 18 former and present commissioners have been indicted in the road and bridge materials scheme.

The two pleaded guilty to placing fictitional purchase orders for road and bridge materials in return for 50 percent kickbacks on the purchase cost from 77-year-old vendor Dallas Thompson of Arlington, who also has been indicted. The commissioners admitted accepting a total of $630 from the vendor.

Disabled get discounts

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — People with hearing or speech disabilities who communicate by teletypewriter or a similar keyboard device are eligible for discounts on direct-dialed long distance interstate calls, a spokesman for Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. said Saturday.

"To apply for the discount, hearing and/or speech impaired persons who use a teletypewriter should contact their local business office or Phone-Center Store," said Steve Simmons, division manager for residence services.

The discount would range from 35 percent to 60 percent, depending on when the call was made.

Jail suit may be settled

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department and Texas officials are discussing a possible settlement of the government's massive civil rights suit against the Texas prison system, a department spokesman said Saturday.

John Wilson, spokesman for the department's civil rights division, said attorneys for both sides were in the process of negotiation. But more time is needed before any settlement can be reached.

Last December, the department won its case in U.S. District Court when Judge William Wayne Justice ruled that the state prison system, the nation's largest with more than 30,000 inmates, was so overcrowded that it violated inmates' Constitutional protection against cruel and unusual punishment. Texas officials have appealed that ruling to the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals.

The settlement efforts came as the 5th Circuit granted on Friday the Justice Department's request for a week's delay in submitting its appeal brief.

When the federal government joined as a plaintiff in a long-running private suit during the Carter administration, it said that about 3,000 Texas inmates had no beds and were sleeping on floors or window sills.

Earlier this year, Justice ordered a comprehensive list of changes in the prison system including putting inmates in single cells. The Texas system has begun housing some inmates in tents to begin compliance with the order.

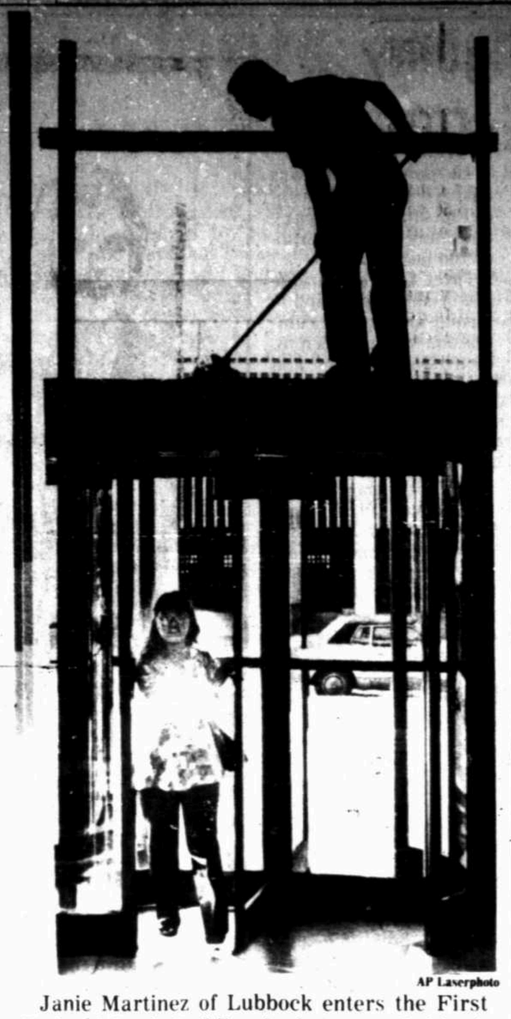

Since the Reagan administration took office, Attorney General William French th has said that the Justice Department will no longer insist, as the Carter Justice Department had, on prison standards stricter than those required by the Constitution. For example, the Carter administration had argued in several prison cases that single cells should be required, but the Supreme Court ruled earlier this year in a case involving Ohio that the Constitutional prohibition on cruel and unusual punishment does not require single cells.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements, a Republican, has met with Smith several times on the suit.

Shortly before Justice ordered remedial steps, Deputy Attorney General Edward C. Schmults told Justice Department trial attorneys to seek a delay in his ruling to give the government time to reach a settlement with Texas. But the judge went ahead, and Justice Department sources say that Schmults gave a tongue-lashing to a government trial attorney for not arguing more forcefully for the delay.

The department sources, who asked not to be named, also said that since then the Justice Department's Bureau of Prisons was ordered to work with Texas officials on the case. The department's own trial attorneys previously had sought assistance from the Bureau of Prisons without success, the sources said.

Wilson added that there is "no way to tell" if any agreement between the Justice Department and the state of Texas will be reached and that, as of now, possible settlement terms are uncertain.

Armadillo to be Smokeout chairman

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A native South American who definitely is a non-smoker will serve as honorary chairman of the 1981 Great American Smokeout in Texas, the American Cancer Socieity announced Saturday.

The chairman is a 100-pound armadillo.

"In the past we've had some terrific Texans like Lee Trevino and Larry Gatlin as honorary chairman — but this armadillo, though not a native, represents Texas perhaps more than anyone — or anything," said Penny Reeves, Austin radio personality and volunteer coordinator of the Smokeout in Texas.

The armadillo recently was acquired by the San Antonio Zoo.

The Smokeout, a nationwide event to encourage smokers to give up their cigarettes for just one day — Nov. 19 — is sponsored by the American Cancer Society.

The society said a survey by the Gallup organization indicated nearly 16.5 million Americans tried to give up cigarettes on Smokeout day last year. Just under five million made it the full 24 hours, and one to 10 days later, 2.2 million still were not smoking.

Rallies against smoking are scheduled in Houston, Dallas, San Antonio, Fort Worth and Austin, the society said.

Not using census data may cost Texas money

WASHINGTON (AP) — The failure to use 1980 census data may be costing Texans as much as $6 million a month in federal funds, U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said Saturday.

Bentsen, D-Texas, said he is "putting on all the presure I can to get them to plug in this new data now so that we get a fair apportionment, particularly at a time when we're cutting back on the budget."

At the first of the year, Bentsen said, he told Office of Management and Budget Director David Stockman "that I want to be sure that we put the new figures in there. Otherwise, Texas is going to be penalized."

"Texas just grew faster than most people thought it was in the 1970 period," he added. "We grew by 3 million people. The way you divide out federal funds is based a lot on population itself."

Among programs still relying on old census figures are revenue sharing and comunity development grants, he said.

Doctor working with sex hormones declared innocent of malpractice

DALLAS (AP) — Dr. Harold H. Varon has pledged to continue his work with sex hormones now that he has been found innocent of malpractice for injecting a man with steroids to treat his arthritis.

"If they leave me alone for 20 years, (I'll win) a Nobel Prize in medicine," the 51-year-old endocrininologist said.

Jurors heard eight days of testimony and deliberated for three hours before acquitting Varon. Lenard A. Durrett and his wife Nan had filed suit seeking $400,000 in damages.

The 63-year-old Grand Saline man contended the series of hormone injections he received for lower back pain in 1980 produced swollen breasts, an uncontrollable sex drive, hypertension, homicidal tendencies and a heart attack.

But 10 of 12 jurors decided Varon's treatment would have been used by other physicians under similar circumstances.

Employee cutbacks were 'essential'

DALLAS (AP) — Recognition Equipment Inc. has dismissed about 170 of its 1,700 employees, saying the cutbacks were "essential in order for the company to improve its profitability in 1982."

Officials of the Irving-based company said Friday's dismissals are permanent. Most of the terminated employees were in manufacturing, but almost all departments were affected.

REI lost $1.7 million in the first nine months of fiscal 1981.

Senior vice president William C. Kramp said the company does not anticipate another substantial reduction, "but one never can be sure in this world. It all depends on the level of backlogs that we will have and the sales success we have."

More than a third of REI's sales are to foreign customers, and the rallying U.S. dollar has forced the company to raise prices overseas.

Also compounding the company's troubles are high interest rates and last year's $8 million acquisition of a division of Cummins-Allison Corp., which "just started out slower than we thought it would and it took more money and time to get it going than we thought it would," said spokeswoman Sheila Gallagher.

Convicted killer gets two terms

McKINNEY, Texas (AP) — A convicted murderer has been sentenced to two more 50-year prison terms for the slayings of two McKinney residents in 1977 and 1978.

Billy Dean Battenfield, 28, was sentenced Friday for the murders of Ruth McCarty and Roy Lovelady, whose skeletons were found stuffed into a well near this Northeast Texas town in February 1979.

Collin County District Attorney Tom O'Connell said Battenfield, who was extradited from New Mexico, pleaded guilty to the slayings. He said deputies established a link between the convict and Lovelady, 75, through a banking transaction.

Lovelady cashed a $1,500 Social Security check shortly before he disappeared on May 3, 1978. Mrs. McCarty, 51, had been missing since June 3, 1977.

Battenfield already is serving a 10- to 50-year sentence in New Mexico for the murder of an 83-year-old California man whose body was found near Tucumcari, N.M.

ETSU president named

COMMERCE, Texas (AP) — Dr. Charles J. Austin Saturday was named the eighth president of East Texas State University.

Austin, vice president for academic affairs at Georgia Southern College, also will serve as chief executive officer of the ETSU system, which includes ETSU at Texarkana.

When he takes office Feb. 1, Austin will succeed 68-year-old F.H. McDowell, who retires Jan. 31 after 45 years of service to ETSU, including the last 10 years as president.

The announcement was made at a news conference by Dr. James H. Granberry of Lubbock, chairman of the ETSU regents' board.

Radioactive water recovered

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Florida Power Company officials said Saturday they have safely recovred 1,000 gallons of radioactive water spilled at the company's reactor in Crystal River.

The water spilled Friday to the floor of the nuclear reactor, located about 70 miles north of St. Petersburg. The reactor was not operating at the time, having been shut down for routine refueling.

Approximately 15 workers were evacuated for several hours after the spill, according to utility spokesman Larry Shriner. The contaminated water never escaped from the containment area and was sucked into the normal waste-collection system, he said.

The accident occurred about 8:15 p.m. as workers were changing a pump on the reactor, said Shriner.

The Crystal River plant, cited earlier this year by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission as being poorly managed, has been shut down since Sept. 27 for refueling and maintenance.

Shriner said someone made an "inadvertent cross connection" between the main cooling system and a storage tank and the contaminated water bubbled out. There was no damage to reactor and the accident shouldn't cause any major change in the maintenance schedule, he said.

All but two states show income rising

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans in all but two states saw their average incomes grow last spring, with total income rising at least as fast as inflation in a majority of states, the Commerce Department reported Saturday.

Total U.S. personal income rose 2.1 percent to an annual rate of $2.34 trillion in the April-June quarter — just under $11,000 for every man, woman and child in the nation. In the January-March quarter, total personal income rose 2.9 percent.

Consumer prices as measured by Commerce's implicit price deflator for personal income expenditures rose 1.7 percent in the April-June period, the report said.

Only West Virginia and Kentucky showed income declines during the spring quarter, a development Commerce officials blamed on the coal strike which kept thousands of workers off the job.

The biggest gains were the 3.5 percent increase for total income in Alaska, 3.4 percent in Oklahoma, 3.2 percent in Delaware and Michigan and 3.1 percent in Florida, the report said.

Income dropped 4.5 percent in West Virginia and 1.1 percent in Kentucky. Talking of the two latter states, they "had large declines in, . . . reflecting the coal strike, mining," the report said.

By region, the Southwest piled up a 2.9 percent increase, the largest in the nation, followed by the Great Lakes states at 2.4 percent, the Far West at 2.2 percent and the Plains states at 2.1 percent.

The personal income increases, unless otherwise noted, for individual states were:

—NEW ENGLAND: Connecticut up 1.6 percent to $38.7 billion, Maine 1.9 percent to $9.6 billion, Massachusetts 2.3 percent to $62.8 billion, New Hampshire 0.7 percent to $9.1 billion, Rhode Island 1.8 percent to $9.6 billion, Vermont 1.5 percent to $4.4 billion.

—MIDEAST: Delaware up 3.2 percent to $6.7 billion, District of Columbia 1.5 percent to $8.2 billion, Maryland 1.8 percent to $47.3 billion, New Jersey 1.8 percent to $86.2 billion, New York 2.1 percent to $194 billion, Pennsylvania 1.2 percent to $118.6 billion.

—GREAT LAKES: Illinois up 2.6 percent to $132 billion, Indiana 1.3 percent to $53.6 billion, Michigan 3.2 percent to $100.6 billion, Ohio 2 percent to $110.2 billion, Wisconsin 2.6 percent to $47.4 billion.

—PLAINS: Iowa up 2.1 percent to $28.5 billion, Kansas 2.2 percent to $25.5 billion, Minnesota 2 percent to $41.9 billion, Missouri 2.3 percent to $47.3 billion, Nebraska 2 percent to $15 billion, North Dakota 2.1 percent to $6.1 billion, South Dakota 1.3 percent to $5.5 billion.

States get more taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The amount of money state governments collect from taxpayers has almost tripled since 1970 to reach $607 a year for every man, woman and child in 1980, according to a new study published Sunday.

The report by the Tax Foundation Inc. said state taxes totaled $137.1 billion in fiscal year 1980, a gain of 186 percent since $48 billion in 1970. In 1970, state taxes averaged $237 for every man, woman and child.

"State taxes averaged double-digit growth in the 1970s for the second consecutive decade, and more than quintupled from 1965 to 1980," said the report by the non-profit research organization. The figures were not adjusted for inflation.

Alaska collected the most state taxes on a per capita basis in 1980 — $3,594 for each state resident, said the report. Hawaii was No. 2 with $1,035 per capita, followed by Delaware at $867; Wyoming, $824; California, $818; and Minnesota, $786.

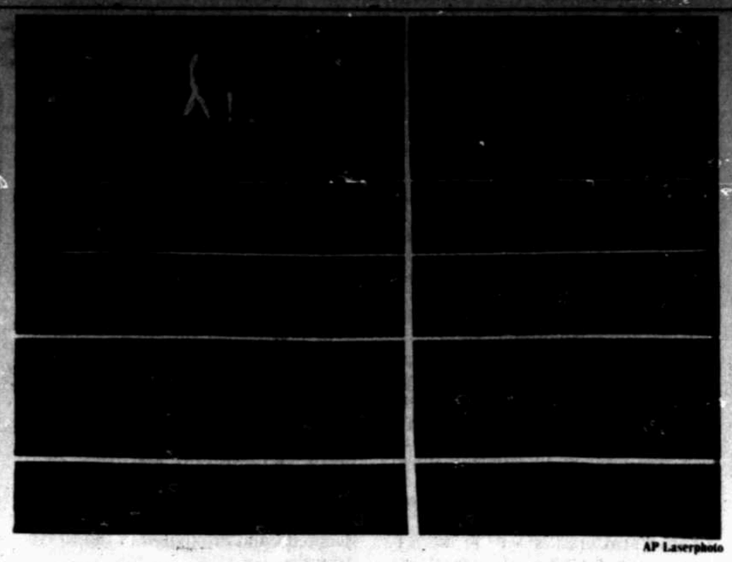

Rounding out the top 10 were: New York, $724; Wisconsin, $715; New Mexico, $712; and Washington, $706.

At the bottom of the list in 1980 were: New Hampshire at $290; South Dakota,$392; Tennessee, $411; Missouri, $426; and Ohio, $441.

States got their largest chunk of tax revenue in 1980 from general sales taxes and selective sales taxes on motor fuels, alcoholic beverages and tobacco. But the amount dipped to slightly less than half of total tax revenues for the first time ever, said the group.

Income taxes from individuals and corporations accounted for 36.8 percent of the total collected in 1980, said the report.

"State income tax collections continued to outpace growth in virtually every other state tax revenue source, rising as a share of total state taxes for the ninth consecutive year in fiscal 1980," the study said.

Crash survivor's cries for aid unheard because of noise

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A woman who survived a 15-hour wait for help after a plane crash that killed two people said Saturday that her cries for help were drowned out by farm equipment operating nearby.

Federal Aviation Administration officials were investigating at the site of the crash — a cornfield about one-half mile from the end of a runway at Hopkinsville-Christian County Memorial Field.

The crash occurred about 8 p.m. CST Thursday. The wreckage was discovered at 11:30 a.m. Friday during a routine security patrol by airport manager Roy Hughes.

James Donald Moon, 40, and his wife, Jewell, 25, of Clarksville, Tenn., remained in serious condition Saturday at Jenny Stuart Memorial Hospital in Hopkinsville. Both suffered multiple injuries.

Killed in the crash was William Bolling, 54, of Hopkinsville, the pilot, of the single-engine plane, and Annie Mae Nesbitt, 52, of Clarksville, Tenn., said Christian County Coroner Alan Beard.

The Moons were thrown free of the wreckage, but could not move to seek assistance, Mrs. Moon said.

She said her husband tried to start a fire to attract attention and to ward off the chill as the temperature dropped to 35 degrees, but was unsuccessful.

"In the morning I could see people in the distance, I think on a farm, but they didn't hear me scream," she said. "I screamed as loud as I could, but a combine machine drowned out everything.

State police investigators said the plane evidently came in too low on its return, struck some treetops, plunged to the ground nose-first and turned over.

Hurricane Katrina dissipates

MIAMI (AP) — Tropical Storm Katrina, which caused two deaths and widespread flooding as a hurricane over Cuba, dwindled in strength early today and finally was absorbed by a low-pressure system, forecasters said.

By 11 a.m. EST, the remnants of the storm were about 600 miles east of the northern Bahamas and were moving east-northeast as squalls at about 35 mph, according to forecasters at the National Hurricane Center here.

Hurricane Katrina crossed swampy Cuban coastal land and caused some flash flooding in the mountains before its winds dropped from 75 to 50 mph early Friday, forecasters said. It was then downgraded to tropical storm status.

Forecasters said the storm regained some force Friday morning as it pelted scattered islands in the Bahamas with 50 mph winds. The storm picked up speed and headed back out to sea later Friday after passing the central Bahama islands.

Havana radio, monitored in Miami, said 150,000 people and 120,000 head of cattle, most located in south-central Cuba, were moved to higher ground as the storm moved northwest across the island.

Two Cubans drowned while trying to cross a rain-swollen river in eastern Camaquey province, the broadcast said Friday. It gave no report of property damage.

Storm warnings were in effect for the central Bahamas, and forecasters urged residents to monitor the storm's developments today.

The late-season storm already had dumped 12 inches of rain on the Cayman Islands, south of Cuba, before it grew to hurricane strength.

There have been six other hurricanes this season — Dennis, Emily, Floyd, Gert, Harvey and Irene. The strongest system of the year has been Harvey, which had winds of 115 mph in September as it safely bypassed Bermuda and dissipated in the North Atlantic.

The most serious damage this season was caused by Tropical Storm Dennis, which dumped 20 inches of flooding rain on South Florida on Aug. 16 before passing into the colder Atlantic.

New launch set for shuttle

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space officials Saturday rescheduled Launch II of the space shuttle Columbia for next Thursday, setting up a special birthday celebration for one of its pilots, astronaut Richard Truly, who turns 44 that day.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials made the decision after certifying that two contaminated power units that halted a launch attempt on Wednesday are now ready to fly.

Analysis indicated that had the units flown Wednesday, they probably would have performed okay. "It's not absolutely certain, but the tests appear to indicate that," said NASA spokeswoman Theresa Foley.

Dirty oil has been flushed from the units and their filters have been replaced. If it had been necessary to install new units, the launch could not have been attempted until the week of Nov. 15.

Launch director George Page gave the order to start a renewed countdown at 8 a.m. EST Tuesday, aiming for liftoff of Columbia on her second mission at 7:30 a.m. Thursday.

Word of the new date was passed to Truly and astronaut Joe Engle at their training base at the Johnson Space Center in Houston. This is the fourth launch date they've had; the others, Sept. 30, Oct. 9 and Nov. 4, were wiped out by technical problems.

For Truly, born Nov. 12, 1937, in Fayette, Miss., the two solid fuel rockets that help propel Columbia into orbit could be the biggest birthday candles ever.

The astronauts came within 31 seconds of flying last Wednesday, only to have the countdown clock stopped dead when high pressure was detected in the lubricating systems of two of the ship's three auxiliary power units.

The APUs, which weigh 88 pounds each, drive the hydraulic lines that swivel the main engines on liftoff and move the body and wing flaps and rudder that control the vehicle during re-entry and landing.

Technicians worked non-stop in three shifts to resolve the problem. They drained lubricating oil from the two suspect units, flushed the plumbing, removed and inspected the filters, installed new filters and refilled each unit with three quarts of oil — a special blend developed for military use which costs $5 a quart.

NASA reported Saturday that the filters were found to be clogged with a material produced by a chemical reaction between the lubricating oil, water and the hydrazine fuel that powers the units. A small amount of hydrazine apparently leaked through a pressure seal into the lubricating system.

"It was concluded," the agency said, "that the impurities did not degrade the lubricating properties of the oil and that the size of the impurities would not lead to a clogging of any passages in the lubricating system."

"Getting to a Thursday launch is a very tight schedule but one which the mission management team feels can be made," said NASA's L. Michael Weeks.

At the launch pad, crews were completing the APU work and getting ready for another countdown start.

Columbia had yet another problem Friday. Two of its fragile heat-resistent tiles on the tail wing were slightly damaged when hit by a flashlight that fell about 100 feet from a workman's tether.

"The two white tiles were patched and fixed; there is no problem now," said NASA spokesman Dick Young.

Staying on top of petroleum financing.

In 1923, Midland National watched West Texas' first oil wells being drilled. And we took strides to provide the banking services that would be needed for this young industry.

We learned that timing is critical: delays in engineering and evaluation could prove very costly.

We also learned that we could analyze our clients' collateral more quickly if we did it ourselves. So we established the first Oil and Gas Department in the Permian Basin. And we were the first to employ a petroleum engineer on a full-time basis as a bank officer.

For more than seven decades now, we've played a primary role in financing the oil industry of West Texas.

We use our in-house computer and latest petroleum evaluation techniques to determine reserves, estimated cash flow and the loan value of properties. Even with only limited data on complex new areas, we can still make a quick, confidential determination of the maximum value of collateral.

Energy production has come of age, and so have we. As a member of the 21st largest banking organization in the United States, we have $11 billion in assets behind us. And ahead of us, a future dedicatd to keeping pace with the petroleum industry.

Whatever your financial needs—whether it's quick capital to help you develop newly discovered reserves or trust services to help you protect and preserve what's yours—bring them to Midland National.

Family of man killed by cop awarded $1.5 million in Detroit

DETROIT (AP) — The family of a man killed by police five years ago has been awarded $1.5 million by a Wayne County jury.

The jury found the city of Detroit and police officers James Younger and Alford Wilson guilty of negligence Friday in the Nov. 8, 1976 slaying of Larry Gates, then 22, of Detroit.

According to testimony, Gates was shot in the head by Wilson, who responded with Younger to a call about a street argument between a man and a woman. Wilson said he fired the fatal shot because he thought Gates was reaching for a weapon. Officals later determined Gates was unarmed.

Death sentence handed down

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A Criminal Court judge has ordered Laron Williams executed for the slaying of a police officer.

Judge Joseph McCartie set a March 15 execution date after a jury recommended the death penalty Friday.

Williams, 32, was convicted in the May 12 shooting death of Lt. Clarence Cox, who was trying to arrest Williams. Williams had escaped from Memphis Correctional Center, where he had been serving a 10-year sentence for the 1977 murder of a Nashville prostitute.

Williams is scheduled to stand trial Nov. 30 in the May 14 slaying of a Roman Catholic priest in Jackson.

Sri Lankans jailed for drug sales

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Three natives of Sri Lanka who tried to sell $180,000 worth of opium and hashish to federal drug agents have been sentenced to 10 years each in federal prison.

U.S. District Judge Frank Polozola imposed the sentences Friday on Mohamed Hanthiayas, Shafiqur Rahman and Ajita Senanayaki.

Each had pleaded guilty to possessing the drugs and conspiring to distribute them. Three other counts against each were dropped in a plea bargain with the U.S. attorney's office.

Woman to have test tube baby

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Another test tube baby is expected in May to a woman who was "hopelessly infertile," doctors at County-USC Medical Center said.

The woman, whose name was withheld, had blocked Fallopian tubes which prevented her eggs from traveling to the uterus. Doctors removed an egg from her ovary and fertilized it in a test tube, then implanted it in her uterus.

The program is the second in the nation. Doctors at Eastern Virginia Medical School at Norfolk have reported three test tube fertilizations since the world's first test tube baby was born in England in 1978.

Man faces shooting charges

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Thomas Francis Edwards will return to California this week to face charges in the shooting death of a 12-year-old camper and the wounding of her friend, the Orange County District Attorney's office says.

Edwards, 37, changed his mind and agreed to return voluntarily to stand trial after having resisted extradition since his arrest Sept. 28, authorities said.

Edwards is charged with murder and attempted murder in the Sept. 19 shooting of Vanessa Iberri and Kelly Cartier. The Elsinore girls were shot by a man in a camper truck while on a weekend camping trip in the Cleveland National Forest.

CLU asks for investigation

By LARRY McSHANE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Civil Liberties Union called Saturday for a federal investigation into the conduct of U.S. Attorney John Martin, contending he maintained "an atmosphere of hysteria" in his investigation of a $1.6 million Brink's robbery.

In a telegram signed by NYCLU Executive Director Dorothy Samuels, the group said Martin's treatment of Fulani Sunni-Ali, also known as Cynthia Boston, and her attorney, Chokwe Lumumba, made "a mockery of prosecutorial ethics."

Federal conspiracy charges against Miss Sunni-Ali were dropped last week at Martin's request after a New Orleans car mechanic swore she dropped her van at his shop for repairs on Oct. 21.

The Brink's robbery, which left two policemen and a security guard dead, took place in Nanuet on Oct. 20.

Miss Sunni-Ali, who has stated her preference for the Muslim name, was arrested at a Mississippi farmhouse by a team of 200 federal and local law enforcement agents backed up by tanks and helicopters.

Authorities began looking for her after the wife of a Mount Vernon landlord identified a photo of her as that of one of five people who emptied the contents of a suspected terrorist "safe house" into a van the day after the aborted robbery.

The NYCLU said Martin failed to "promptly investigate alibi evidence" and tried to disqualify Lumumba as Miss Sunni-Ali's lawyer.

Martin has said he attempted to bar Lumumba's participation in the trial because both he and Miss Sunni-ALi are members of the black separatist group Republic of New Africa, which is part of the investigation.

"Under Mr. Martin's leadership, what should be a careful and professional investigation of very serious criminal charges in connection with the tragic events in Nyack has been transformed into a political witch hunt," the group charged.

Miss Sunni-Ali, an official of the black separatist group, revealed Friday that she has been subpeonaed to appear before a federal grand jury investigating the case on Nov. 16. Her lawyers, Lumumba and William Kuntsler, said she will resist the subpoena.

The New York Post reported Saturday that Rita Jensen, a newspaper reporter who shared a Manhattan apartment with alleged terrorist Katherine Boudin, has also been subpeonaed to appear.

There was no answer to phone calls placed to Miss Jensen's home and her lawyer's office. She has said she knew Miss Boudin, a member of the Weather Organization, as Lynn Adams and lived with her for more than a year.

Jeffrey Jones, a member of the radical Weather Underground, is shown as he surrenders to authorities in Chicago to face charges stemming from the 1969 "Days of Rage" demonstrations against the Vietnam War. Jones and his common-law wife, Eleanor Stein Raskin, were arrested in New York City Oct. 23 on charges relating to the robbery of a Brink's armored truck.

Haig says job not easy

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first nine months of the Reagan administration have not been easy ones for Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., by his own account.

He asserted last Tuesday that a high official in the White House had been conducting a "guerrilla campaign" against him from the outset of Reagan's term in office.

His claim stunned official Washington. It was unprecedented for such a high official to publicly air the "dirty laundry" of an administration he serves, although such revelations are often made privately.

As if that wasn't enough controversy, Haig was involved two days later in a public disagreement with Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger over whether the NATO alliance has a plan for a nuclear warning shot in the event of war with the Soviets in Europe.

Haig said yes, raising eyebrows that he would even mention such a plan at a time of extreme sensitivity in Europe to discussion of anything concerning nuclear war. Weinberger said no.

The White House sought to nip the disagreement in the bud by claiming both were right, which, of course, both couldn't possibly be.

But Haig's disagreements with other administration officials are nothing new.

Sometimes they are over policy, such as his opposition to the White House decision to proceed with production of the neutron weapon. He wanted a delay. He also favored putting off the AWACS sale for Saudi Arabia, but lost.

Sometimes they appear to be over turf, such as his complaint to Congress earlier this year that he should head the administration's crisis management team. The vice president got the nod.

In another move that raised eyebrows, he sought to place himself in charge of the government on the day President Reagan was shot, setting off a nasty row with Weinberger and White House officials, who didn't agree.

But Haig feels he has come up short in the administration so far because he thought he had assurances from the White House that he would be the "vicar" of foreign policy, aides say.

"On every single issue it has been difficult for him to prevail," said one key aide, who didn't want to be identified.

After his earlier battles, which raised speculation he might resign or be fired, Haig adjusted to having less authority than he wanted and appeared to become the "team player" the administration wanted him to be. But adjustment wasn't the same as liking it.

"There was an acceptance (by Haig) of the collegial atmosphere of this administration," the aide said. "But he has not been entirely comfortable with this. He thinks there should be only one spokesman on foreign policy — him."

But aides also admit privately that some of Haig's problems are of his own making. They say he can be "abrasive" and is jealous of his turf, which leads him into conflicts he would be better off to avoid.

It is turf and abrasiveness that some officials see at the root of Haig's problems at the White House.

Haig never named the official he said was trying to discredit him from within Reagan's inner circle.

Most everyone familiar with Haig's problems thought Haig thought his tormenter was Richard V. Allen, Reagan's national security adviser.

But Allen denied to a reporter that it was him and said Haig had assured Allen that he knew it wasn't him. Haig didn't say anything publicly either way, dodging reporters and their questions for the balance of the week.

"He has nothing further that he intends to say about it," Alan Romberg, the deputy State Department spokesman, said Friday.

For his part, Reagan acted like he didn't believe, or didn't care, that someone was out to get Haig, although he did call columnist Jack Anderson in praise of his secretary of state. It was an Anderson column that pushed the latest controversy into the limelight.

Reagan also met on Thursday with Allen and Haig privately in an effort to prevent anymore public eruptions of dissent.

Reagan had said even before the latest controversy — in putting down rumors Haig might be dropped from his administration — that "Al Haig as secretary of state, I think, is one of the finest we've had in a very long time."

For all his troubles at the White House, Haig has impressed the nation's key allies abroad, especially those in Europe where he once served as NATO commander.

European leaders, such as Great Britain's Margaret Thatcher and West Germany's Helmut Schmidt, seem to regard him as the only high official in the administration who has a grasp of foreign policy issues and whom they can trust to keep their interests in mind.

Catholic hospital lifts Sun-Times ban

By SUSAN J. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Holy Cross Hospital officials say they have made their point concerning Chicago Sun-Times stories about Cardinal John P. Cody, and will resume accepting copies of the newspaper for sale in the institution.

Sales of the newspaper at the hospital gift shop were stopped Wednesday morning after the newspaper reported new developments on Tuesday in a continuing federal investigation of an alleged diversion of church funds to a friend of the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Chicago.

The Sun-Times broke the news of the inquiry in September with a four-day series of stories.

Holy Cross spokesman Eugene R. Liner said the administration of the Roman Catholic hospital did not object to reporting the existence of a federal investigation, but felt the Sun-Times has been "editorializing" against the cardinal in its news columns.

"We object to the unfair publicity," Liner said. "We say if this is a matter in hands of legal sources and courts, that's the proper place for this to be tried, not in the newspaper."

The hospital said in a statement Friday that its ban had "had the desired effect. The action did result in the loss of sales to the Sun-Times of $100 dollars a day, since 400 newspapers a day are sold in the hospital."

"We just wanted to make them aware that readership can be affected by such a decision (to run a series about Cody)," Liner said.

He said Sun-Times sales in the hospital would resume Monday.

A spokesman for the Sun-Times, Hank Ottery, said he would not comment except to dispute the numbers of newspapers the hospital says it sells. Ottery said only 165 papers are normally sold there.

While Cody, 73, has not given a detailed response to the allegations, he has said he has been "falsely accused." His archdiocese has 2.4 million members, the largest in the country.

Liner said the hospital had received a large number of telephone calls about the ban, including some from patients.

Man has death wish granted

LOS ANGELES (AP) — William J. Foster finally won a battle he fought for almost a year when doctors disconnected his life-support system and allowed him to die.

The 67-year-old retired bus mechanic died of heart failure Friday less than an hour after doctors at the Veterans Administration Hospital disconnected a ventilator and intravenous feeding equipment.

He had been hospitalized since October 1980 with Lou Gehrig's disease, a crippling neurological disorder named after the New York Yankees baseball player who died in 1941.

The only family member present when Foster died was his oldest son, Billy, 43. The son had supported his father's wish to be allowed to die — a wish opposed by VA doctors who feared legal complications and Foster's wife, Janet, who objected on religious grounds.

U.S. District Judge Robert M. Tagasuki ordered the life-support equipment removed on Thursday, one day after VA doctors said Foster had suffered "brain death."

Former World War I flying aces pose before journeying to Paris for an Armistice Day reunion with former adversaries and allies in the Great War.

Fliers reunite to reminisce about Great War

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The old flier put on his hearing aid and explained how it was to go to into the Great War with only 90 hours of flight training — and end up shooting down 13 of the Kaiser's aircraft.

George Vaughn, 84, downed more aircraft — 12 planes and one balloon — in World War I than any other living American. He arrived at Kennedy Airport on Friday along with eight other aces and the last surviving member of the famed Lafayette Escadrille.

After getting reacquainted at a reception, the old fliers boarded a jetliner headed for Paris and an Armistice Day reunion with 31 other former aviators, both friend and foe, in a tribute led by the president of France, Francois Mitterrand.

Joining Vaughn were Douglas Campbell, 85, of Cos Cobb, Conn., the first American serviceman to down five planes and win the title of ace, and Carl Dolan of Honolulu, at 85 the last surviving member of the Lafayette Escadrille. The Escadrille was a group of American volunteers who flew with the Allies before the United States entered the war.

"I was in college and said to my buddies, 'Let's go over and save France,'" Dolan said with a laugh. He is not an ace, since six of his eight dogfight victories were unofficial.

They were also joined by Robert Todd, 84, of San Diego, who destroyed five German planes before he was shot down and captured in 1918.

The men described history's first great air battles as personal duels in which men were more important than machines and pilots got close enough to see the color of their foes' scarves.

They discussed the relative merits of Sopwith Camels, Spads and Nieuports and recalled comrades killed weeks before the armistice on Nov. 11, 1918.

And they showed their age: Ernest Hoy, 86, of Toccoa, Ga., checked out of a hospital and arrived in a wheelchair. Kenneth Porter, 84, of Queens, who downed five enemy aircraft, limped a bit.

Eyes that once spotted enemy planes while they still were specks in the sky now require spectacles, and hands that gripped the throttle shake a bit.

But "they're survivors," said retired Air Force Col. Rick Glasebrook, a military historian. "Something keeps them going. You can see it in their eyes."

In World War I, the flyers said, the pilot's job was simpler yet more difficult than today.

"Then, all you had to do was fly the plane and shoot the guns," said Vaughn. "The big difference was what we didn't have — parachutes, wheelbrakes, instruments, radios.

"Now," he added, "everything is written down, prescribed and settled beforehand. I don't mean today's pilots aren't great, but now it's all in the technology."

Vaughn got his first kill in June 1918. "I didn't see the fellow (the German pilot) and he shot my tail full of holes before I knew he was there. He thought he'd gotten me and flew away. But I followed him and got him."

Campbell shot down the first German plane he ever saw on his first battle flight — which lasted 4½ minutes from takeoff to landing, and came after he had completed only 50 hours of flight training.

"Back then, we used to get within 100 feet of 'em. Now, you can shoot down another guy without ever seeing him," Campbell said. "Radar tells you where he is, steers you to him, tells you when to shoot at him and whether your rocket hit him."

Raymond Brooks of Summit, N.J., Duerson Knight of Rossmoor, Calif., William Thomson of Spring Lake Heights, N.J., and Donald Paton of Palm Beach, Fla., rounded out the party of pilots headed to Paris.

They said they were looking forward to meeting German pilots with whom they might have fought. But what does one say to a man who was trying to shoot you down 63 years ago?

"You laugh about it," said Vaughn. "You slap him on the back, buy him a drink and laugh about it."

West German mayor calls for removal of U.S. tactical nuclear weapons

SAARBRUECKEN, West Germany (AP) — A provincial leader of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's Social Democratic Party called Saturday for removal of all U.S. tactical nuclear weapons from West Germany.

Oskar Lafontaine, mayor of this industrial city, told delegates to a state meeting: "A defense policy that gives the civil population no chance of survival in case of a conflict is no defense policy...The very first thing to strive toward would be stationing the nuclear weapons in the countries that produce them."

NATO plans to station 572 Cruise and Pershing II nuclear missiles in Western Europe beginning in 1983 in what Western military leaders say is a move to balance Soviet SS-20 missiles aimed at the West. Lafontaine opposes the plan.

Russian revolution marked in Zimbabwe

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (AP) — About 80 youths marking the anniversary of the 1917 Russian revolution dispersed peacefully Saturday when police ordered them to stop their march.

The march, organized by the Patriotic Front Party of Joshua Nkomo, was in violation of an emergency order requiring seven days' notice and police approval of public gatherings, officials said.

Nkomo, junior partner in the 18-month-old coalition government, led a guerrilla faction backed by Moscow that joined forces with current Prime Minister Robert Mugabe to fight for independence from Britain and an end to white minority rule.

Fallout shelters are trendy in Canada

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Businessman Wayne Pratt says Canadians are showing increased interest in recreation homesites that can double as underground fallout shelters and a place to go in case of economic collapse.

"Basically, we caught onto a trend in the United States where people are putting places in the country, in the desert, away from the major target areas of a possible nuclear conflict," he said of his construction and architecture business.

His shelters start at $8,000 for a basic 9 by 12 concrete box. Extras such as radio, water and power systems can drive the price up to $25,000, he said.

Pratt said his company has "gone from thinking this is an opportunity to a necessity."

"Anyone who says there's no concern at this moment is a fool or a liar," he said.

Yugoslav Foreign Ministry cuts staff

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The Foreign Ministry has been ordered to close some offices, cut staff and take other money-saving steps to meet a goal of paring its expenses by about $8 million in 1982, the newspaper Borba reported Saturday.

A total reduction of 350 foreign ministry staff positions is to be in effect by the end of the year, the paper said. Ambassadors will be replaced by charge d'affaries in some offices, according to the paper.

It did not state which offices are targeted.

U.S. arms sales to China pending

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Assistant Secretary of State John Holdridge said Saturday the United States will consult with the five non-Communist Southeast Asia countries before selling arms to China.

He said any arms sales would be of a small scale and the weapons would be for defensive purposes with conditions attached. He did not elaborate.

Relations with the Philippines, Indonesia, Thailand, Singapore and Malaysia, which make up the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), are valued "highly," Holdridge said.

Malaysian officials said they view China as a long-term threat to Malaysia because of its moral support for the 3,000 jungle guerrillas of the banned Communist Party. They said the United States on the other hand views the Soviet Union as the main threat in the region.

'Religious Disneyland' in the works

TORONTO (AP) — Len Cullen, a Baptist who says religion has been getting a bad press, wants to develop a 35-acre "religious Disneyland" east of here.

"You very seldom see a religious person in any movie or play portrayed as honest, fair, wholesome and Christ-like," said Cullen, 56. "There's been a lot of nice Christian people pass through this world."

His plans call for replicas of early church buildings and activities depicting pioneer life in Ontario. Alcohol will not be sold on the premises, although Cullen says "There will be some commercialization, I have to make it pay."

Demonstrators converge on the Soviet Embassy

By HARALD MOLLERSTROM
Associated Press Writer

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Four hundred demonstrators, some carrying a cardboard submarine and posters mocking Kremlin proposals for a nuclear-free Nordic zone, converged on the Soviet Embassy in Stockholm Saturday.

There was no response from embassy staffers who were trying to celebrate the anniversary of the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution.

The embassy festivities were low-key, apparently because of embarrassment over the recent violation of neutral Sweden's territorial waters by a Soviet submarine believed armed with nuclear-tipped torpedos.

There was a heavy snowfall and temperatures dipped near freezing during the rally organized by the East European Solidarity Committee and several Baltic organizations, mostly made up of anti-Moscow exiles from the Soviet bloc, and the Swedish Liberal Party's youth wing.

Signs such as: "Keep on Sleeping, Europe, Soviet Missiles Will Wake You Up" and "No Soviet Nuclear Subs in the Baltic" referred to the 10-day stalemate which ended Friday when the Soviet sub that ran aground off the Karlskrona naval base Oct. 27 was released.

Sweden said there was evidence the submarine's torpedos were armed with nuclear warheads and called the incident the worst violation of its sovereignty since the end of World War II. Swedes said it raised new questions about Soviet sincerity in proposing a nuclear-free zone of the Nordic area and a public opinion survey showed over a third of Swedes who responded believe Sweden's defenses need to be bolstered.

Other signs bobbing along in the Saturday procession criticized Soviet interference in other nations' domestic matters — "No Soviet Interference in Poland" and "Soviets Get Out of Afghanistan."

The conservative Svenska Dagbladet newspaper said: "For everyone with common sense and elementary knowledge of military and political realities in our part of the world it has long been clear that sweeping communist talk about the Baltic as the 'Sea of Peace' is nothing but propaganda."

The liberal Expressen said: "...Our conception about Sweden, Scandinavia and Europe cannot remain what it used to be...The Soviets' activities force us to ask ourselves if the Soviet Union really respects Swedish neutrality. For Swedish opinion neutrality is something that applies in any situation. Now the Soviet Union behaves like it was a question of neutrality for the time being, to be respected as long as it fits them..."

A poll by the Institute of Market Research published in the liberal Dagens Nyheter on Saturday showed 37 percent of the respondents saying Sweden needs a stronger defense, 49 percent saying present military capabilities are adequate, 7 percent supporting a reduction and 7 percent undecided.

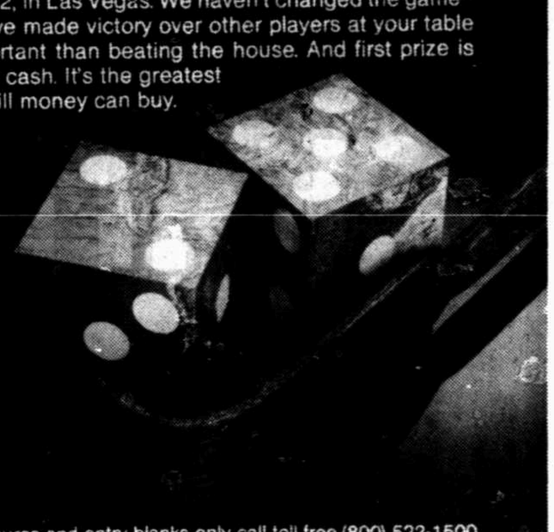

Previous polls have shown an average of 25 percent of the respondents believing Sweden needs to upgrade its defenses and that between 75 percent and 80 percent support the general idea of a strong defense. The new poll shows 90 percent now support the general idea of a strong defense.

Nineteen percent of the respondents also said their view toward the Soviet Union became more negative because of the incident but 80 percent said their attitudes were unchanged.

Canadian constitution guarantees provincial sovereignty

EDITOR'S NOTE — The writer has closely followed the Canadian constitutional story for the past two years.

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

Canada's leaders, in what could be likened to a peaceable version of the American Civil War, agreed on a new constitution last week. But in many ways it was as if the South had won.

The settlement reached by Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and the premiers of nine Canadian provinces last Thursday cemented provincial powers in a way that might have pleased the most militant advocates of states' rights in old Dixie.

Transferred to the American scene, Canada's constitutional deal would have meant, for example, that Connecticut and Rhode Island could have remained "wet" in 1919 when the other 46 states approved the Prohibition amendment. Or a pro-slavery state legislature could have ignored the Bill of Rights and shut down the abolitionist press.

Trudeau hailed the compromise accord with the nine provinces — all but French-speaking Quebec — as "a fresh start in meeting the challenge of living together in our beloved country."

But the Canadian prime minister had to make substantial concessions to the strong-willed provincial leaders in order to reach the agreement.

The concessions included a major dilution of his proposed "Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms," and acceptance of a ratification process that allows some provinces to reject constitutional amendments that have been approved nationally.

The constitutional deal, which requires passage by the Canadian and British parliaments, is the culmination of generations of rivalries, distrust and jealousies among Canada's disparate provinces, colonies that were cobbled together in a loose federation by Britain a century ago. In some cases the provinces joined Canada only half-heartedly.

Newfoundland Premier Brian Peckford, in a comment typical of today's provincial attitude, denounced Trudeau's original constitutional proposals as a "grand plan to centralize and homogenize this nation."

The government of the oil-rich province of Alberta told Albertans that Trudeau's suggested amending formula, which envisioned possible national referendums on amendments, could have been used by other Canadians to seize control of Alberta's natural resources.

Stephen Scott, a constitutional law expert at Montreal's McGill University, described Trudeau's final settlement with the provinces as a "complete capitulation."

An Analysis

Scott said he was particularly disappointed with what he called the "toothless charter of rights."

"For example, I would see nothing...that would stop the legislature of Quebec from closing down all English-language newspapers," he said.

The reform plan will make the British North America Act of 1867, an act of the British Parliament that serves as Canada's constitution, a completely Canadian document. It has remained under British legislative control until now because the Canadian provinces could never agree on what method they would follow to make future amendments.

The provincially proposed amending formula finally accepted by Trudeau requires constitutional changes to have the approval of the national Parliament and seven provinces with 50 percent of the population.

But it allows the three provinces that oppose an amendment to "opt out" — to decide that an amendment affecting provincial powers will not apply in their territory.

Trudeau's compromise on the charter of rights also solidifies provincial autonomy in a way that would be alien to the post-Civil War system in the United States. It concedes to the provinces the power to enact legislation that disregards such charter provisions as freedom of the press and religion, anti-discrimination guarantees and other rights.

South of the border, these issues of federal-versus-state supremacy were largely settled by the Civil War.

"If you go back to before the 13th, 14th, 15th Amendments, to a time before there were restrictions on state sovereignty — that, I suppose, is what we have here now," Scott said.

Even the ultimate question answered in the Civil War — whether a state could secede from the Union — remains essentially unanswered in Canada. The government of Quebec is working toward eventual secession from the Canadian confederation, and the federal government makes clear it will not use force to keep Quebec in.

The Canadian agreement may take on special interest for Americans at a time when a new states' rights movement, involving public lands and revenues, has arisen in the western United States.

The "Sagebrush Rebellion," as it is called, is not secessionist. But it does have an affinity to the Canadian movement in an important way — it, too, is aimed at asserting state control over natural resources, in this case by having millions of acres of federal lands in the West transferred to the states, and by levying hefty taxes on coal and other resources sent out of state.

U.S. threat of military action gets attention of Castro government

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Scare tactic or not, Secretary of State Alexander Haig's desire for the Pentagon to come up with possible U.S. military actions against Cuba has succeeded in getting the attention of Fidel Castro's government.

Raul Roa Kouri, Cuba's ambassador to the United Nations, delivered a note to U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim on Thursday protesting what he said were U.S. plans to blockade or bomb Cuba.

"I believe that there is a danger of either a naval blockade, of economic actions, or of persecuting the companies that do business with us, and even of an air strike against key economic points of Cuba," Roa told reporters later.

The perceived U.S. threat also has prompted Cuba to place its military forces on alert.

"We know military action is being prepared," said one Cuban diplomat in Washington. "The only question is whether it will be carried out."

Haig indirectly acknowledged Thursday the accuracy of reports that he had asked the Pentagon to examine options for possible military action in El Salvador and against Cuba and Nicaragua.

The Reagan administration's perception — emphatically denied by Cuba — is that Cuba continues to supply weaponry to Salvadoran insurgents.

It is not clear whether military force is seriously being considered or whether the administration is merely engaging in scare tactics aimed at inducing Castro to end his alleged support of Central American guerrilla movements.

But, because of the large stake the Soviet Union has in preserving the Castro government, some analysts believe the administration will take no action which would threaten Castro's survival.

According to these experts, any U.S. military move against Cuba could trigger Soviet retaliation in an area of first importance to the United States, such as Berlin.

Haig, however, may feel compelled to take some action in light of his repeated promises to go to the "source" in dealing with the turmoil in El Salvador. He has left no doubt of his belief that Cuba is the "source" of much of El Salvador's civil strife.

Since taking office, the administration has taken only limited steps against Cuba — tightening an economic embargo to reduce circumvention and planning to begin beaming anti-Castro radio broadcasts to the island in a few months.

Various sources said consideration has been given to establishing a naval blockade to prevent Soviet oil shipments from reaching Cuba and to unleashing anti-Castro Cuban exiles in Florida.

The sources refused to be identified and their accounts could not be substantiated by State Department planners.

An editorial in the Communist Party newspaper Granma last Tuesday likened the current situation to the periods before the Bay of Pigs invasion of 1961 and the Cuban missile crisis of 1962.

As in the two earlier conflicts, the United States is "creating a climate favorable for aggression," the editorial said.

Cuba also has been particularly troubled by an alleged message sent by Haig to unnamed foreign governments last month contending that Cuba flew 500 to 600 special forces troops to Nicaragua for possible deployment in El Salvador.

NATO commander calls for 'effective deterrent to halt Soviet expansionism'

VENICE, Italy (AP) — NATO Commander Gen. Bernard Rogers on Saturday urged the West not to give in to what he called a Soviet military threat, and he called for an "effective deterrent to halt Soviet expansionism."

Rogers spoke as the Soviet Union paraded arms through Moscow's Red Square in the country's celebration of the 1917 revolution that brought the Communists to power. Soviet Defense Minister Dmitry Ustinov said during the festivities that the Kremlin will never let the West achieve military superiority.

At a Venice conference on Soviet strategy, Rogers said Western allies could not agree how to respond to "the growing will and capacity of the Soviet Union in recent years to employ military power for political purposes on a world basis."

The U.S. general who heads the North Atlantic Treaty Organization said Soviet forces were trying to scare Poland in that country's power struggle between the Moscow-backed Communist government and the independent union Solidarity. But Rogers did not elaborate on the Polish situation.

"The Soviets continue their brutal occupation of Afghanistan. At the same time they favor Vietnamese aggression in Southeast Asia," he said, giving other examples of what he called Soviet strategy.

About 80,000 Soviet troops are stationed in Afghanistan to support the regime of Babrak Karmal against Moslem rebels. The Soviets also aid Vietnam, which stations thousands of troops in Cambodia to back a pro-Hanoi regime.

Rogers said Western allies should reject pacifism, neutralism or disarmament, and instead create "an effective deterrent to halt Soviet expansionism and, at the same time, start a positive East-West dialogue."

At a news conference, Rogers said the Soviets have a 4-to-1 advantage in arms systems and a 3½-to-1 advantage in nuclear warheads.

The Soviets have ringed their European borders with scores of multiple-warhead SS-20 nuclear missiles. NATO plans to respond by deploying U.S.-made medium-range missiles in Europe.

Responding to a question on whether a limited nuclear war in Europe was possible, Rogers said: "We cannot believe the Soviet leaders could accept seeing their country hit without reacting with strategic nuclear arms capable of hitting the United States."

Rogers' speech came at the end of a two-day conference in Venice on the theme "Soviet strategy and Western responses," organized by the Italian Atlantic Committee, a private study group.

Evidence indicates Braun buried elsewhere

By MARK S. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — New dental evidence uncovered by a California research team strongly suggests that the woman found next to Adolf Hitler in his Berlin bunker was not his mistress, Eva Braun, a British medical journal reports.

The findings indicate Miss Braun was buried elsewhere, or may even have escaped alive, the British Medical Association News Review said in its November issue.

Miss Braun was 24 years old when she met Hitler in 1936 through her Nazi photographer employer. She spent nine years as the Fuhrer's mistress before marrying him in the last days of his life.

Soviet soldiers who captured the burning German capital in the spring of 1945 came upon 13 bodies near the bunker, and Soviet authorities cited autopsy records to prove the bodies of Hitler and Miss Braun were among them.

The British medical journal said a 10-year study of World War II era records revealed the Soviet evidence on Hitler matches the Nazi leader's known dental records on 26 separate points, including a unique "window crown" on one tooth and bridgework in Hitler's lower right jaw.

However, "The odontological data virtually eliminates the previous assumption that (the woman's body found by the Soviets) was the remains of Eva Braun," the BMA review said.

It presented evidence that a dental bridge made for Miss Braun and used to link the corpse with Hitler's mistress had in reality never been installed in her mouth.

Several teeth found with the body showed extensive cavities while Miss Braun's dental records showed the same teeth cavity-free, it said. Moreover, it claimed two cosmetic "Hollywood crowns" made of fireproof porcelain should have been found with the body but weren't.

The medical journal also said the woman whose remains were found by the Soviets had suffered extensive shrapnel wounds and had hemorrhaged. Miss Braun is believed by many to have committed suicide by taking poison.

The BMA review based its report on the findings of a research team led by Reider F. Sognnaes, a professor of oral biology and anatomy at the University of California at Los Angeles.

It quoted Sognnaes as saying "The Russian identification (of Miss Braun) would never stand up in court."

Sognnaes believes Miss Braun may still be buried in the rubble of the Chancellery, now part of East Berlin, according to the journal.

Or, "It is possible Eva Braun escaped," it quoted him as saying.

"After all, there were a number of men in the bunker unaccounted for who could have helped her. No one actually witnessed her death and there are inconsistencies in the accounts of those who supposedly took Eva's body outside the bunker."

Hitler's final hours have been documented by aides who were with him in the bunker, 50 feet below Berlin's Reich Chancellery building, on April 30, 1945.

With the city surrounded by the Soviets and the bunker under artillery bombardment, Hitler assembled his officers and staff and, Eva at his side, bade them farewell. The two then retired to their wood-paneled sitting room.

A short time later, one shot was heard. The Fuhrer's deputy, Martin Bormann, and other aides burst in to find Hitler slumped on a sofa, his Walther pistol at his side and a bullet through his head. Beside him lay Miss Braun, dead after biting into a cyanide capsule.

Aides said the bodies were carried up to the Chancellery garden under shell-fire and burned. It is there that the Soviets found the two charred bodies, along with 11 others.

An autopsy was conducted on them May 18, 1945, at a military hospital in the Berlin suburb of Buch. On the basis of the autopsy, the Soviets concluded that Hitler and Miss Braun had died.

The BMA review said Sognnaes' team recently obtained a handwritten report by dental technician Fritz Echtmann testifying that the gold bridge with four teeth he made for Miss Braun had never been installed because there was no time.

The document led researchers to dental assistant Kathe Keusermann — "now in her 50s and living quietly in a West German City" — who confirmed the information and filled in details of Miss Braun's dental history, the periodical said.

Egypt-Arab relations are improving

KUWAIT (AP) — Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak was quoted Saturday as saying that Egypt's frosty relations with other Arab nations have improved although there have been no diplomatic breakthroughs.

"Tension has now eased between Egypt and the Arab world, but there are no contacts either direct or indirect," Mubarak told the daily al-Seyasseh in an interview with the paper's editor, Ahmad Jarallah.

"I do feel the relationship between Egypt and the Arab world is now better and I maintain friendships with people in the Arab countries, including the rejectionist states," he was quoted as saying.

Most Arab nations broke off relations with Egypt after slain President Anwar Sadat signed a the U.S.-sponsored Camp David peace accords with Israel in 1979.

Mubarak was quoted as saying the arrested people would be released from jail "shortly" if investigations clear them of involvement in Sadat's murder by four Moslem fanatics during a military parade.

Half of the alcoholics in the United States are women, but few rehabilitation programs were designed for them. Now there's Women for Sobriety, which was explained by the organizer during a seminar in Odessa.

Women alcoholics have a place to turn

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Often the woman alcoholic is pictured in a sleezy hideaway bar slumped over a table in a lewd, seductive position groping for a lively, witty personality through that bottle of liquor she so desperately needs.

She is sometimes imagined as loud and obnoxious, babbling to anyone who will listen.

But in reality many alcoholic women are hidden away in the security of their homes feeling lonely and depressed, trying to rid the demon possessing them to continue drinking.

When an alcoholic woman finally recognizes that she cannot go through one more day of the inevitable hangover, and the physical symptoms of withdrawal overwhelm her until the next drink is taken, she may reach out for help. The woman alcoholic is usually approachable at her very worst.

Out of 10 million alcoholics in the United States, half of them are women, according to Dr. Jean Kirkpatrick, founder of the first national program of recovery for women alcoholics.

Consequently, in a lecture Thursday at Odessa's Holiday Inn, Dr. Kirkpatrick explained an alternative treatment for women alcoholics — Women for Sobriety — and advocated opening a chapter in the Permian Basin area.

"I'M HIGHLY QUALIFIED to speak on this subject because I am one," Dr. Kirkpatrick said, referring to the 28 years she spent as a practicing alcoholic.

She explained that Alcoholics Anonymous is a program designed for men. Statistically, "more women go back to the bottle than men."

Therefore, Dr. Kirkpatrick established Women for Sobriety in 1975 to meet the needs of women alcoholics, helping them to develop a sense of self-esteem and positive attitudes toward everyday life.

"I'm not anti-AA," she said, "but now women have an additional approach with a different kind of program. Now women have three choices — AA, WFS or the combination of both programs, which I advocate."

> "It is a program that came from a woman's experience with alcoholism and it recognizes that women alcoholics have different emotional needs in recovery from those of male alcoholics."

Women for Sobriety, like AA, consists of loosely knit self-help groups which meet as often as they want, Dr. Kirkpatrick noted. The organization differs from AA in that Women for Sobriety uses a method of 13 statements of acceptance designed specifically for women as opposed to AA's 12 steps originated for the male alcoholic.

She said Women for Sobriety has helped more women alcoholics in a six month period than all the programs operating in the nation combined.

"SINCE THE FIGURES show there are approximately 10 million alcoholics in the U.S. with half of these women, we have found only 200,000 women are in a treatment program of some kind — AA, government funded programs, WFS and private programs," she said.

According to Dr. Kirkpatrick, in 1975 the government funded 574 programs for men and only 14 for women. There are 600 halfway houses for men with only 30 for women, she said in pointing out treatment facilities "lag in providing adequate treatment for women."

Through a speakers bureau and the media, Dr. Kirkpatrick has been reaching out to women who need help with their alcoholism. And this program provides women who have requested help with the 13 point acceptance program, a monthly newsletter and a work schedule to be followed until a group is formed.

Reasons for lack of treatment in the past are economics, a conspiracy of silence and the differences between men and women, Dr. Kirkpatrick cited.

She explained "a conspiracy of silence" as no one wanting a woman alcoholic in the family and with the family reflecting an attitude of "they got themselves into this; they can get themselves out."

Because of the differences between men and women, Dr. Kirkpatrick said women are perceived differently by doctors and therapists.

"WOMEN REQUIRE specific things for treatment," she said. "They have an overwhelming guilt that needs to be treated."

Dr. Kirkpatrick advocates a female therapist for the individual or group in the first few weeks and months of treatment, adding men therapists do not provide the needs, role model or identity in treating women.

"Thirty percent of the women recovering with male therapists increased to 59 percent with women therapists," she said.

And with only 4 percent of the women in the country using the AA program, this is part of the reason Women for Sobriety was formed.

"It is a program that came from a woman's experience with alcoholism and it reeognizes that women alcoholics have different emotional needs in recovery from those of male alcoholics," she said.

Water exercise helps figures

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

By the time a woman reaches her seventh or eighth month of pregnancy, there will probably be a limitation on her amount of physical activity.

But, Midland's Alamo YMCA has just the answer to keeping muscles toned during pregnancy so that after the baby arrives the mother can quickly slip back into shape.

Genie McCartney, aquatics director for YMCA of Metropolitan Midland, is introducing a Pre-natal Water Exercise class for pregnant women to enjoy mild water exercises and relaxation.

The class will meet two mornings a week in warm shallow water at the Alamo Y pool.

"The water temperature is about 88 to 90 degrees," Ms. McCartney said, adding that any cooler temperature would be too uncomfortable for these exercises.

"This class sounds like a good deal," Dr. James M. Humphreys Jr., a Midland obstetrician, said. "Swimming has always been a good exercise and it certainly would be good for the pregnant women to exercise in the water."

Laura Huff, instructor for the class, said the Y has heard from several other doctors and "they're all for it."

However, she added that it is required for all pre-natal participants to get the approval of their doctor before entering the class.

Laura Huff, left, instructor for a new pre-natal water exercise class, assists Cindy Bailey, who is seven months pregnant, with exercises for the pregnant woman. The class will be held two mornings a week at the Alamo YMCA.

"We're not going to have the ladies put their faces in the water," she said.

"The class is basically for mild exercise and relaxation with nothing strenuous and because of the flotation there will be no strain on the women's stomach."

Ms. Huff noted that a water barbell will be used along with stretching exercises.

Cindy Bailey, who is seven months pregnant and was a former swimming instructor at the Y, demonstrated some of the exercises and said "it was very relaxing with no strain."

A YMCA membership is not required for the class and participants need not know how to swim or have any knowledge of swimming skills, Ms. McCartney commented. She added that for women who are prone to eye, ear, nose and throat infections or allergies this would be the perfect program because the head will not be submerged.

For information about the class call the Alamo Y at 694-2528.

Five military air traffic controllers train in Midland

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Midland Regional Aiport has received five qualified military air traffic controllers who are in classroom training to prepare for working in the control tower.

Staff Sgt. Ed Plaza, Spec. 5 Johnny Dotharard, Spec. 5 Edward Hardick, Spec. 4 Bill Hughes and Spec. 4 Jeri Hughes arrived from Fort Rucker, Ala., Monday as part of 42 Army air traffic controllers who were added to the 162 controllers already working at Federal Aviation Administration facilities across the nation.

Military controllers are being sent to air traffic control towers across the country to boost the workforce that was depleted last August when union controllers went on strike. The union members essentially were fired by President Reagan when they refused to return to work.

Experience in air traffic control of the five sent to Midland range from three to 13 years, with Plaza having 13 and the Hughes, a husband and wife team, having three years experience.

They are in classroom training sessions at the Midland airport eight hours a day, becoming familiar and learning about the facility. All five are FAA certified and will be with the Midland tower until August 1982.

To become air traffic controllers, Army personnel are trained at Fort Rucker in a self-paced and more intensive training course than the FAA program, according to a U.S. Army Communications Command news release.

The total training program results in the same certification for FAA and Army controllers with a written test as the basis for the verification.

But, Midland's military controllers have been through this training program, gained experience "on the job" and are qualified to handle the duties of the air traffic controller, the replacements noted. And in any occupation where there is a job transfer, orientation is usually the procedure — the military is not any different.

All five controllers commented it is not unusual to go through a retraining procedure and that they are constantly in a training atmosphere.

"In the Army, each time you change facilities you're in training again," Mrs. Hughes noted.

Army air traffic controllers, clockwise, Staff Sgt. Ed Plaza, Spec. 5 Johnny Dothard, Spec. 5 Edward Hardick, Spec. 4 Bill Hughes and Spec. 4 Jeri Hughes occupy this room in the flight service station at Midland Regional Airport about eight hours a day in classroom training to familiarize themselves with Midland's facility.

The classroom training is estimated to take about 10 days, said Bill Hill, FAA control tower chief at Midland Regional Airport, adding that just the first phase of the intensive familiarization program includes 16 written tests.

"They (army controllers) must know the structure of the facility before they go to work (in the control tower)," Hill said.

He added the army controllers use "the same identical tests any controller must take whether they are from the FAA academy or an FAA facility."

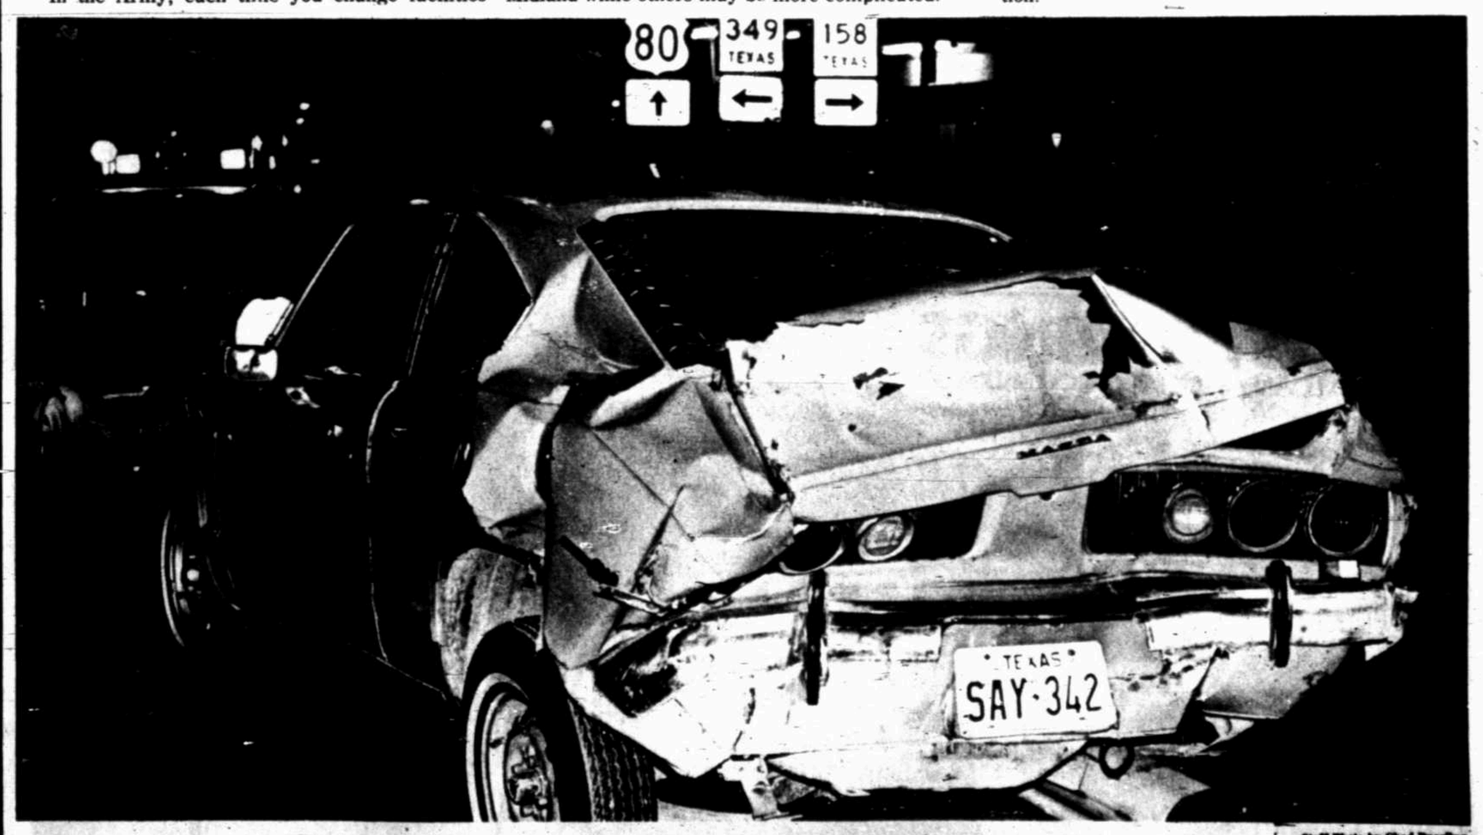

Even though the training procedure is similar, the intensity of the training depends on the facility itself. The controllers agreed that "it all depends where the army puts you — some fields are just as large" as Midland while others may be more complicated.

"If we went to another army facility, we'd still have to go through the same thing (training)," Plaza said.

However, since the Army and the FAA do not always have the same control positions, there may be slight differences in the steps required for position qualification.

According to the Army news release, an Army tower normally has two or three positions. These positions — local control, flight data and ground control — are the same as the FAA positions with an exception of the FAA clearance delivery position. The Army usually combines this position with ground control.

"Probably 95 percent of the positions (FAA) are the three basic positions," Hughes said with his wife interjecting, "We are qualified to work each position."

Texas School for the Deaf director to discuss deaf education this week

The new executive director at the Texas School for the Deaf understands the problems of being a deaf student. Victor H. Galloway, 53, has been deaf since he developed meningitis as an infant.

The Midland Association of the Deaf will bring Galloway, the first deaf director of TSD, to the Holiday Inn Country Villa, 4300 W. Highway 80, at 2:30 p.m. on Friday to discuss deaf education. Parents of deaf children are encouraged to attend.

Galloway said there are 4,365 deaf children in Texas who must be educated. "We (deaf educators) have the awesome responsibility to see that all deaf children get the most appropriate education," he said.

He said he believes deaf education should include a "total communication approach, including oral speech, sign language, written language, sound amplification and finger spelling."

Galloway spent his early school years at the South Carolina School for the Deaf. He said he considers this experience significant to his philosophy of deaf education.

His struggle through the public high school system in Spartanburg, S.C., took place "long before mainstreaming was in vogue."

"I really had to shift for myself because in those days they did not have interpreters or supportive services," he said.

Despite the obstacles, Galloway succeeded in his studies. He went to Gallaudet College where he earned a bachelor of science degree. For three years he worked as a high explosives research chemist for the Naval Ordnance Laboratory and for 12 years he was a senior materials and process engineer for Lockheed Missile and Space Company. At night he taught shop and math blueprint reading to the deaf.

Galloway's engineering career began to fade as his commitment to the education of the deaf grew stronger. He eventually entered the master's program at California State University at Northridge, where he earned a degree in educational administration and supervision.

He enrolled in the doctorate program for education and rehabilitation administration at the University of Arizona. He wrote his dissertation in absentia while performing the duties of assistant education director of the Model Secondary School for the Deaf at Gallaudet College in Washington, D.C. At the National Technical Institute for the Deaf (NTID), Galloway was the first director of the technical education program, developing most of the program for deaf students currently in use.

He was superintendent of the Scranton State School for the Deaf in Scranton, Pa., before being named TSD executive director by the TSD Governing Board, appointed by Gov. William Clements.

Galloway is the second deaf executive director/superintendent in the country. Two other schools in Oklahoma and Louisiana have deaf top administrators as well.

For more information about Galloway's appearance in Midland, write Thelma Archer, at Route 3, Box 610, Midland, 79701, or call 684-0043. Deaf persons with TTY machines may call 697-4001.

"We (deaf educators) have the awesome responsibility to see that all deaf children get the most appropriate education,"

— Victor Galloway

County court to consider rehabilitation guidelines

The Midland County Commissioners' Court will consider adopting policies and guidelines on housing rehabilitation within the windowpane area in south central Midland County in its 10 a.m. Monday meeting at the Midland County Courthouse.

The rehabilitation is part of a $1-million plus improvements program in the under-developed area, which is surrounded by the city of Midland but falls under the county's jurisdiction.

The county has received a U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) Community Development Block Grant to upgrade the area by installing water and sewer lines, paving streets and laying curbs, razing dilapidated houses, repairing houses in ill-repair and building a day care center.

The city of Midland is expected to annex the three-quarter-mile area just north of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum and between Interstate 20 and U.S. Highway 80 once improvements are made and property values are up.

In other business, the commissioners are to:

—Consider an industrial revenue bond application from the Midland Industrial Development Corp. The corporation's spokesman is to be Grant Billingsley.

—Review recommendations for the HUD community development day care center. Proposals will come from Kim Modisett and Mary Hinkle.

—Consider legal services for the community development program.

—Review status report on the engineering, planning and architectural projects of the community development project.

—Consider bids for additional patrol cars for the Sheriff's Department.

—Consider a presentation by Jack Wood & Associates, a Dallas architectural firm, for interior design for the proposed Midland County Public Library.

—Consider presentation of Fisher & Spillman for interior design of the library.

—Consider additional personnel, vehicles, and equipment for the Constable's Office and to revise the office's 1982 budget.

HOW TO EARN UP TO $2,000 INTEREST AT THE DROP OF A HAT.

★ Introducing a financial first. From First Savings & Loan Association of Midland. The All Saver's Certificate, a fully insured savings plan that earns up to $1,000 tax-free interest on individual returns or $2,000 tax-free interest if you file a joint return.

★ Now for the first time, Uncle Sam will not only fully insure your savings plan, he'll give you a tax break on it as well. Here's how it works: to equal an assumed tax-exempt yield of 12½%, a taxable investment would have to earn 17.86% if your family income is $25,000 and your tax bracket is 30%.

★ Just check the chart.

IF YOUR FAMILY INCOME IS	YOUR TAX BRACKET PROBABLY IS	THE INTEREST RATE YOU'D HAVE TO RECEIVE TO NET 12.5% AFTER FEDERAL INCOME TAX IS
$50,000	50%	25%
$35,000	40%	20.83%
$25,000	30%	17.86%
$20,000	25%	16.67%

Figures above are approximate and based on 1981 tax tables. Interest rate on 12.5% is an assumed average investment yield on the All Saver's Certificate. Actual rate is 70% of the average investment yield on one-year treasury bills at date of purchase.

★ You can see why the All Saver's Certificate is a savings break-through. But you may not see it for long. The program begins October 1, 1981 and ends December 31, 1982. So hurry to First Savings and Loan Association of Midland and purchase your All Saver's Certificates.

★ The All Saver's Certificate is a limited offer with valuable results.

Stanton looking for subdivision plans

STANTON — Stanton City Council is looking at plans for a 45-acre subdivision on the west side of town that will include single family homes and possibly an apartment complex.

The council heard preliminary plans on the development from Ed Lawson and Spencer Blocker during a meeting Tuesday night. The site is near the Tamarack oil well, and the developers said they were interested in having at least half the tract annexed into the city limits.

Lawson pointed out the subdivision would be geared toward middl-income people.

Mayor Danny Fryar supported the plans, saying, "We've got to grow if we're going to stay in business."

Odessa man purchases Settles Hotel

BIG SPRING — An Odessa businessman reportedly has purchased the historic Settles Hotel here, even though the Howard County clerk's office has no record of the hotel's deed being transferred.

Bo Rich has obtained a building permit to do $100,000 worth of repairs on the vacated structure. He said that he had purchased the hotel for about $500,000.

Rich said that he may have to put in $1 million into the hotel in the next three months, but he hopes to have it open in the spring.

The Odessa businessman said he figures Big Spring will be a booming town soon, along with Midland and Odessa.

Andrews building permits top million

ANDREWS — Building is booming in Andrews this year as the building permits for October topped the $1 million mark. This pushes the year's total to $8.5 million, which is $5 million more than this time last year.

Permits issued last month went for 15 mobile homes, three duplexes, a 12-unit apartment building, three houses, three townhouses, two commercial buildings, nine residential alterations and three buildings moved.

Topping the list of permits this year is one issued last month to the Church of Christ for a new 1,200 person auditorium. That addition should cost $900,000. The next largest permit went to Modern Thriftway supermarket for an addition.

Company sponsoring contest

STANTON — Cap Rock Electric Cooperative is sponsoring an all-expenses paid 13-day trip to Washington, D.C. as the top prize in its oratorical contest.

The competition is open to any boy or girl who will be at least 16 years old by Sept. 1, 1982, but not yet 18 by then.

Each entrant must give a five to eight minute talk on "The World Moves Around Energy," and answer one or more questions from the judges. Contestants will judged on the basis of knowledge of the subject, speaking ability, poise, personality and appearance.

More information about the contest can be obtained from local high schools or by writing Cap Rock Electric Cooperative, Inc., Box 700, Stanton, Texas, 79782.

Midland firm granted securities permit

AUSTIN — The State Securities Board has granted 15 permits to sell more than $17.24 million in securities in Texas, including a permit for one Midland area firm.

The board approved an application by Permian Financial Corp., Crane, to sell $1,674,000 in securities.

The permit was among those approved during the week ending Oct. 31.

McCamey convalescent center to add

AUSTIN — The Texas Health Facilities Commission has approved an application by Upton County Convalescent Center, McCamey, to construct an addition to its facilities.

The center plans to build a 5,952 square-foot addition for the expansion of support areas and 17 additional intermediate care beds.

The nursing home presently has 13 intermediate care beds.

Church sponsoring fellowship day

The Peoples Baptist Church, 1201 W. Spruce St., is sponsoring a City Wide Fellowship Day beginning at 2:30 p.m. today.

The Rev. L.L. Martin invites the public to attend this Men's Day Program.

Andrews textbooks to be topic

ANDREWS — Textbooks and vocational programs will be the major topics of discussion when the Andrews Independent School District board of trustees meets at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the School Administration Building.

The board will approve the local textbook committee's recommendations for 1982-83 textbooks. And the panel will consider proposed changes in the vocational program.

In addition, the board will approve an audit for the period ending Aug. 31, 1981, hear a report on utilization of facilities during a play-off game and consider a request from a citizen concerning use of the school gymnasi-

Farmer named to special task force

GARDEN CITY — Clifford Hoelscher, a St. Lawrence cotton farmer, has been named to a special agricultural task force of Texas A&M University.

Hoelscher is serving on the 89-member Task Force for Agriculture, Forestry and Veterinary Services, Agencies and Non-Academic Programs of Related Colleges, according to Norman C. Kohls, the Glasscock County agricultural agent.

The task force is charged with developing a blueprint to help A&M better serve the state's agricultural industry.

Other A&M task forces deal with the four academic institutions of the A&M system and with the engineering agencies and services.

Textile representatives visit Lubbock

LUBBOCK — Seventeen textile executives from 13 European counties and two from the People's Republic of China will be in Lubbock today and Monday to study High Plains cotton production, processing, merchandising and research facilities.

In the past two years, Mainland China has been the largest single importer of U.S. cotton. China purchased 2.2 million bales of 1979 cotton and 1.4 million bales of 1980 cotton.

Combined annual U.S. exports to the 13 European countries is estimated at more than 500,000 bales.

Those in the touring party are representing Belgium, England, Finland, German, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Morocco, Norway, Poland, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and China.

"There is a real opportunity for us to expand the markets for our cotton in these countries," said Gary Ivey, president of Plains Cotton Growers Association.

The visit is part of the annual U.S. Cotton Orientation Tour sponsored by Cotton Council International, National Cotton Council, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Foreign Agricultura Service and local hosts.

Midland company joins association

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Sledge Cattle Co. Inc. of Midland has been accepted into membership of the American Hereford Association, according to H.H. Dickenson, AHA's executive vice president.

The AHA, headquartered in Kansas City, is the world's largest beef-breed registry organization and has entered more than 18 million head into the record books since it was founded in 1881.

Hereford, one of the oldest breeds in the United States, stands out in its ability to convert grass and grain into beef efficiently.

Poison Plant Symposium to be held

FORT STOCKTON — Poisonous plants on the rangelands are nature's response to the misuse of the land, according to Dr. Allan McGinty, a range specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX).

McGinty will enlarge on the subject when he opens the first Trans-Pecos Poison Plant Symposium Dec. 17 in the Pecos County Large Community Center here.

The day-long symposium will feature range specialists, weed-control specialists and veterinarians from TAEX.

The timeliness of the symposium, McGinty said, is evident in the $50-million loss in livestock which Texas cattlemen suffer each year due to the blight of 80 species of poisonous plants on the range.

Farm profit margins suffer drop

LUBBOCK — The U.S. farmer's profit margin has undergone a "drastic" reduction over the past 100 years despite a six-fold increase in farm production.

The change of agriculture to a capital-intensive industry is one reason for the profit decline, contends Dr. J. Wayland Bennett of the Texas Tech University's agriculture-finance faculty.

"Farms at one time were operated with hand labor, horses and mules," Bennett said. "In the 1930s, we began to substitute the combustion engine for horsepower. Today, contrary to the past when farmers were self-reliant and self-sufficient, farmers are purchasing their power and equipment. Dollars are now moving off the farm."

The decrease in farms over the past 50 years has been drastic, he said. Even in the past 20 years, the number of farming operations has decreased by 900,000, although production has continued to increase. The consolidation of small farms into bigger operations has become a way of life in an effort by some farmers to achieve the maximum benefits of mechanization.

The farmer's biggest problem now is financial management.

DIRT, SQUIRT, QUIRT

Saving fruits and vegetables

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent
Agriculture

Gardeners who still have tomatoes, squash, okra, pepper, eggplant or other cold sensitive plants producing in the vegetable plots can often extend the season several more weeks by knowing what to do prior to first killing frost.

The kirst killing frost often is followed by several days, if not weeks, of favorable growing weather. Protecting cold-susceptible plants from early frosts can increase the productivity and the value of a family vegetable garden.

A common water sprinkler can be used as a frost protectant system. Water is a great equalizer of temperature. It has a high specific heat, that is, a pound of water gives off more heat in losing a degree of temperature than any other substance. Commercial farmers in many areas of the country have successfully protected cold-susceptible plants from freeze damage by applying water during the freezing period. Farmers actually use the heat of the water to protect their growing plants. The gardener can do exactly the same thing.

If a light freeze or frost is predicted and the conditions are suitable, the gardener might consider sprinkling the garden for frost protection. The water should be applied continually during the freezing period. If freezing temperatures occur througout the night, sprinkling the garden the entire night will be necessary. If only a frost is predicted, adequate protection usually can be provided by a light sprinkling in the early morning, as this is when frost damage is most likely to occur. Many gardeners try to protect their crops from frost damage by washing the frost off with warm water in the early morning. Actually this practice may increase the damage. Plant tissues required to go from freezing conditions to thawing conditions in a short period of time will show much more damage than those allowed to thaw slowly over a period of time.

Remember, the first freezing weather does not have to mean the end of a successful summer garden. A little water applied at the right time may go a long way toward saving those highly nutritious and tasty home-grown vegetables.

Fall is often the time when fruit tree care is forgotten or neglected, but it's a critical time for controlling some apricot, peach and plum tree diseases to insure a good crop next year.

With the arrival of fall,

there's often a tendency to forget our fruit trees that served us so well last summer. Applying fungicide now can stop or reduce three diseases that attack apricot, peach and plum trees in West Texas. These are coryneum blight on apricot, and bacterial leaf spot and bacterial canker on peach and plum.

The material to use is a copper-containing fungicide such as Kocide 101. Timing of the fall spray is critical for effective control and for avoiding tree damage. Copper is a metal and may cause severe defoliation unless applied correctly.

Time to spray is when 70 percent of the leaves have fallen off the tree. Spraying too early will cause leaf shed or cause the spray to be ineffective later.

Coryneum blight affects both the foliage and fruit of apricot. Dark, blackish to purple spots develop on the fruit. Bacterial leaf spot affects both fruit and foliage of peach and plum. The infection causes fruit to crack and leaves develop angular spots which drop out. Bacterial canker will kill trees slowly. Infected trees will have gum or wax forming on the trunk and main limbs.

The correct time for applying the copper fungicide spray in Midland should be sometime in the next 15 days. Start checking your trees closely if you think you have had the above problems. There is no other time when one spray can be effective for three major fruit tree diseases

Compromise increases dairy price supports

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional negotiators tentatively agreed on a compromise Friday that would increase dairy price supports from 1983 through 1985.

It was the seventh compromise reached in the long struggle to draw up a farm bill acceptable to the Reagan administration.

New arthritis treatment is encouraging

Dear Dr. Solomon: I read where the kind of dialysis used on kidney patients was being tried on patients who were mentally disturbed, but that it didn't seem to help. Is dialysis being considered in the treatment of any other kind of disease? — Ken, Miami Beach

Dear Ken: A process known as apheresis, which is similar to dialysis, is being tried experimentally in the treatment of arthritis. However, the researchers warn that the procedure is potentially dangerous and very expensive.

Dr. Daniel J. Wallace and his associates at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles have used the technique with 10 rheumatoid arthritis patients; five actually received apheresis, while the other five were given a simulated treatment. Those actually treated with apheresis did show a great deal of improvement.

As I mentioned, the procedure is highly experimental, and the researchers emphasize it should be used only in patients who have chronic progressive disease, and only if they can be closely monitored. Doctors are not even certain what substance is being removed by the process of apheresis that can account for the improvement.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A network news program carried a story abut a research project that showed that the wives of men who smoke at least a pack of cigarettes a day have a greater chance of getting lung cancer than the wives of men who don't smoke. Do you know anything about this research, and is there anything to it? — Don, Petersburg, Va.

Dear Don: The study you mention was conducted in Japan and, as you note, did conclude that the nonsmoking wives of smokers were at greater risk of lung cancer than the nonsmoking wives of nonsmokers. Now, however, an analysis of the study has caused some people to doubt its validity.

One of those questioning the results of the Japanese study is Dr. Lawrence Garfinkel, of the American Cancer Society. He reports that a study he conducted found no evidence linking the wives of smokers to lung cancer. Others claim that the researchers who published the original report made a mathematical error that deprived their conclusions of any significance.

In short, those of us who argue against cigarette smoking should not use the Japanese study to support our point of view.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Ever since I received a promotion in my company and started rubbing elbows with the top management, I seem to be coming down with more frequent and more serious colds. I'm tempted to say that one is linked with the other, but I wonder if this makes sense. — Tom, N.Y.C.

Dear Tom: It is possible that your change in circumstances is related to the severity of your colds. A study conducted at the University of Sussex in Brighton, England, revealed that this phenomenon often occurs in people who change their activity and social contact as a result of life events.

Andrews school cost increases

ANDREWS — Cost for Andrews new elementary school scooted up when the school board here decided to let the builder, K.A. Sparks Construction Co. of Odessa, go with other subcontractors than those who had given him low bids.

Total cost of the contract is $6,746,129, an increase of $31,328 over the original amount.

Nationalization signals era's end for Rothschilds

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
European Correspondent
Hearst Feature Service

PARIS — For nearly two centuries, the name Rothschild has been synonymous with wealth, and nowhere more than in France where the Rothschild family for generations dominated both the board rooms of high finance and the glittering salons of high society.

But the decision by France's new leftwing government to nationalize key industries, including banking, signals the end of power for the legendary House of Rothschild.

Of five branches -- the famous "five arrows," still the family symbol -- established by the sons of Frankfurt money-lender Meyer Rothschild in the early 19th century, only the one in London now remains. The quiver is almost empty.

Notwithstanding their riches and eminence, the French Rothschilds are no strangers to hard knocks. An earlier left-wing government, the 1936 Popular Front, stripped them of their ownership of a large segment of France's railroad network which they built in the mid-19th century.

WHEN FRANCE capitulated to Hitler in 1940, the collaborationist Vichy regime confiscated the family fortune under its anti-Jewish laws. The Rothschilds, who had either fled to America or joined General de Gaulle's Free French, were deprived of their citizenship.

The clan staged a dramatic postwar comeback. No longer pre-eminent as bankers and advisers to governments as they had been in the past, they nonetheless rebuilt their bank's prosperity, expanding into new fields such as mutual funds. Internationally, they branched out into industry, particularly mining, and resuscitated their old railroad company, converting it to hotel and restaurant activities.

By the time the bell tolled here with the election last May of Socialist President Francois Mitterrand, who pledged to take over the big private banks, the Rothschilds had long since regained an important financial role, domestically and worldwide.

But 72-year-old Baron Guy de Rothschild, the family elder and senior partner of the bank says that, this time, there will be no attempt at a dynastic comeback, at least in France. He is deeply and openly embittered.

"To rebuild out of the ashes twice in a single lifetime," he declared, "is at least once too often."

He and his cousins and banking partners, Alain and Elie, are unimpressed by the government's offer of compensation for their financial and business interests.

"The French Rothschilds committed the terrible error of believing they would be allowed to evolve and develop in step with their times and in their own country," the baron said. "Doctrinaire socialists have excluded us from France's economy. Of the House of Rothschild, there will now rest a few morsels, perhaps nothing at all.

"To those who tell us, 'But you are going to be indemnified,' I say, 'We have never been for sale.'"

THE FRENCH nationalization measures were not specifically aimed at the Rothschilds. But, the baron believes his family has been utilized by the left as an easy symbol of great power and wealth, even though there are many French capitalists nowadays who are substantially richer.

In spite of their impressive record through many generations of endowing hospitals, schools, museums and countless other good works, he complained that French politicians treat the Rothschilds like "disease carriers."

CONSUMER TIPS

Franchises are sometimes a risky business

By LINDA TRUITT
Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin, Inc.

To most of us, owning a franchise would seem to be a license to mint money. Those barrels of fried chicken can turn into barrels of bucks. Ballroom dancing lessons are learned to the tune of a ringing cash register — your cash register. A job placement service pays you while others work. You're the director.

It's true that some franchises have turned some investors into millionaires. It's also true that many franchises have turned some investors into bankrupts. While there are still good deals in franchises, there also are some poor investments in franchises.

If you are now toying with the possibility of investing in a franchise, the BBB urges you to investigate it thoroughly from several viewpoints before you sign any papers or fork over any down payment money.

Franchises are available for many products and services: Fast food, motels, travel, sports retailing, weight control, sewing centers, tools and hardware, security, printing, photography, drugs, pets, real estate, auto products and services. Regardless of the franchise you may be considering, first ask yourself if you have had any experience in the field.

Statistics show that most franchises fail because the franchisees enter fields of business that they know nothing — or very little — about. For example, just because you can cook a topnotch hamburger on the backyard grill doesn't qualify you to operate a full-menu restaurant. In fact, as a franchisee, you will be more of a business manager than an "on-line" employee of the franchise business. Therefore, you must be compatible with all aspects of the type of business you want to operate.

The more you know about it at the outset, the better success you probably will have.

ALL THINGS considered, you — the franchisee — are making the franchisor money by taking on the franchise. The franchisor is simply using a technique (you) to distribute a product or service. For example, a "Taco A Go-Go" wants to sell its flour and meat in the form of a burrito. You're the store — the outlet or retailer. The franchisor shares its product and money power with you only in hope that its products and/or services achieve rapid and profitable growth in the marketplace through your involvement.

When you fully understand the franchisor's position, ask yourself these two basic questions:

1. Do I have the physical and mental resources to own and operate the type of business the franchisor wants me to take over? Be honest with yourself. Your candid appraisal of your own strengths and weaknesses should precede any final business decision.

2. Are my perceptions of the business accurate? What looks easy seldom is. Spending 60-70 hours per week every week is not an unusual schedule for the owner. Talk to a franchisee in the business — the same one, if possible, out of your marketing area so the owner gives you straight answers. Then talk with a number of different franchisees in different businesses.

AS YOU PROBE and ask questions, the franchisor through a Federal Trade Commission rule must provide you with a disclosure statement with information about the franchisor, business experience, litigation history, bankruptcy history, money required, continuing expenses, a list of affiliates, realty and other items you must purchase, the description of the consideration you pay, restrictions, termination, statistical information, your rights, training programs, celebrity involvement, financial information, and so forth.

Other questions you should ask include the kinds and amounts of advertising support, personal earnings potential (the bottom line — your "take home pay"), operating policies and restrictions of the franchise, site location and territorial practices, and the value and appeal of the franchise firm's product or service. This last item is very important. If there is no market in your area for the product or service, the franchise won't go. This is not the fault of the franchise or a "gyp" situation. Simply, there is no market.

More facts on selecting a franchise may be obtained by contacting your local Better Business Bureau — a good place to start your investigation when you get the urge to be your own boss through franchised retailing.

Dr. Jess H. Parrish

MC president attends congress

Dr. Jess H. Parrish, president of Midland College, is scheduled to attend the Second Congress of the new Inter-American Organization for Higher Education in Buenos Aires, Argentina, Nov. 9-12.

He will be the only community college president among the large delegation of educators from the United States, serving as the official delegate from the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges and representative of the International-Intercultural Consortium of the AACJC. Parrish is a former president of the AACJC.

"Much of this congress will be devoted to technology education, where the American community colleges have traditionally taken a strong leadership role. It is expected that more dialogue and visits between American community college leaders and educators from Central and South American countries will be taking place during the next few years," Parrish explained.

"We can expect exchanges of faculty members, visits from Latin American educators, and more students from these areas in coming years. Vocational and technical education can be forecasted to be more important to developing nations, which have good university systems but very little comparable to our excellent community college programs."

The Inter-American Organization for Higher Education is a new organization comprised of Western Hemisphere university presidents. The conference in Buenos Aires is expected to attract more than 200 university presidents, not including those from the United States.

Blood donors needed

Give one pint of blood anytime this week you will get one week's free membership at Golden Life Health Spa, according to Arlene Stickland, public relations/development director at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Blood donors are especially needed during the holidays, a traditional time of critical shortage. Those interested in donating blood should call the donor room at Midland Memorial Hospital, 685-1636, to make an appointment. Donors and families will be eligible for a $35 credit if they should require blood during the coming year.

The donor room will extend its hours on Tuesday and Friday from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. and will remain open during the regular hours of 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Milk, bread helped win

GRAYSON, Ky. (AP) — Now that it's over, Mayor-elect Frank Prater freely admits that he milked the town for every possible vote in last Tuesday's election. He says he had to put up a lot of bread, too.

"We distributed 180 half-gallons of milk and 180 loaves of bread," said Prater, who won the nonpartisan election by just 35 votes. "We put the milk and bread on their doorsteps in the middle of the night."

Skyscraper climber arrested

DALLAS (AP) — A skyscraper-climbing acrobat was arrested Saturday after tackling the building that houses the fictional office of J.R. Ewing.

Dan Goodwin, the 26-year-old man who climbed the Sears Tower in Chicago on Memorial Day, was taken into custody after reaching the top of the 56-story First International Building, at 710 feet the tallest in Dallas.

The building is used for the offices of Ewing Oil in filming the television series "Dallas."

Officers said a member of the public called them at 6:30 a.m. after seeing a man scurrying up the wall, wearing a bright red and blue wetsuit, red webbed boots and gloves and a black helmet with American flag decals.

He refused to come down and altered the path of his climb when police used a ladder to try to halt his ascent early in the journey up the side of the building.

Goodwin, of Kennebunkport, Maine, was arrested for criminal trespass after reaching the top of the building at 10:37 a.m. If convicted, he could face a maximum sentence of six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Goodwin climbed the Sears Tower, the world's tallest building at 110 stories and 1,454 feet, in 7½ hours, despite 40 mph winds.

Last Sunday, he tried to climb Chicago's 1,127-foot John Hancock Center, which is 110 stories high. He only made it to the second story, however, saying suction cups he uses for climbing would not stick to the girders and give him the brace he needed to hoist himself in the foggy weather.

Town's schools close after tax vote

ESTACADA, Ore. (AP) — Some 2,500 students from the northwest Oregon foothills are on an indefinite "forced vacation" after voters rejected for a fourth time a new tax increase to help pay the district's bills.

Students were sent home Friday not knowing when, or if, they would return. Some shouted with joy as they left their classrooms in this mill town, while others bid tearful farewells to teachers who worry about the impact even a brief closure would have on education.

Voters and the school board have another chance to reach agreement on funding in a special election Nov. 24. In Oregon, voters must authorize school budgets and the resulting tax levies. The state is not permitted to bail out a district in which schools are closed.

On Tuesday, voters turned down a proposed $2.9 million tax levy. It was the fourth time this year the budget has been rejected, and the decision to close the district marked the first such closure in Oregon since 1976.

The new budget proposal is about $100,000 less.

Estacada resident Mack Ferrick blamed the school board for not making more of an effort to cut the budget earlier.

"The votes have been a chance to say no to something," Ferrick said. "I think a majority of people want to see the schools keep operating. No one ever realized schools were actually going to close down."

"This is a lumber-dependent district and unemployment is high," said Daicy Mahar, spokeswoman for the Oregon Education Association. "This is one of the few budget figures they can say no to."

Even if the closure lasts just two weeks, it will leave scars, said Lynne Meehan, principal at Estacada Grade School.

"Probably we'll lose two months of curriculum this year, especially in reinforcement and enrichment activities," Mrs. Meehan said.

She said the school board ordered the students not to take any school work home with them.

Working on a grinding wheel in preparation for the Gem and Mineral Show is Andy Gilliland. The show will be held Nov. 14-14 in the Midland County Exhibit Building.

Gem, mineral show to be next weekend

Midland Gem and Mineral Society will hold its annual show and exhibit Nov. 14-15 at Midland County Exhibit Building.

Hours will be 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Nov. 15. Admission will be $1 for adults and 25 cents for children. Sponsored children's groups accompanied by an adult will be admitted free from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday.

The show will consist of dealers displaying finished jewelry, findings, rough and finished gem stones, rough and finished rock, and opals from Australia and Idaho. Demonstrations will be presented in lost wax casting, gold wire mountings, gem trees, faceting and channel jewelry.

Special exhibits will include a black matrix opal carved in the likeness of Cuauhtemoc, considered the last brave warrior of the Aztecs, complete with headdress and a mounting of seven pounds of solid silver. The opal weighed 30,000 carats when found and weighs 16,875 in its finished form.

Also on display will be a stone model of an old prospector's cabin in Utah, along with minerals found in the vicinity of the structure. Carvings of turquoise and other materials also will be exhibited.

Midland Gem and Mineral Society was organized in 1953 with 14 members as Midland Lapidary Group. The society, incorporated under its present name in 1963, now boasts a membership of 183, consisting mainly of rockhounds interested in the lapidary-arts.

Classes are held twice annually to teach new members how to polish stones, facet gem stones and make mountings using precious metals through silversmithing or lost wax casting.

The group also places lapidary journals and other periodicals in local libraries.

The society presently is searching for a building to house the lapidary equipment. This would enable continued teaching of lapidary arts.

Council to tackle city residents' wastes problem

Decision day may come Tuesday for the Midland City Council as it dives into the problem of selecting a site for disposing of the residents' wastes during its regular meeting in City Hall Council Chambers. The session will start at 10 a.m.

On Aug. 25, the council backed off from its Salt Lake plan to give county residents 60 days to find farmers willing take the primary treated effluent and use it for irrigation. The deadline has passed.

The Salt Lake proposal called for pumping the treated effluent to Salt Lake eight miles south of the city. About 3 million gallons of the effluent would be used to irrigate city-owned farm land adjacent to the sewage treatment plant southeast of Midland.

One stipulation of that plan required that the land on which the effluent would be used must have poorer quality ground water than the effluent.

The council will take another step toward designating an area of downtown Midland declared blighted so it can obtain Industrial Revenue bonds for a parking garage. The area under consideration has been the southwest corner at Wall and Big Spring streets. At this meeting, the council is set to the date, time and location of a public hearing on the matter and notify the Texas Industrial Commission of the session.

An engineering contract with Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., if approved by the council, will be one of the first steps toward turning into reality a redesign of the parking lot and street improvements at Midland Regional Airport.

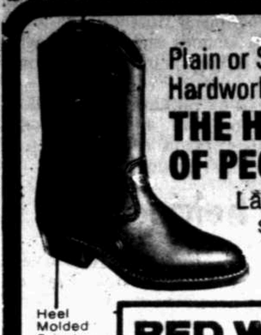

At the Oct. 13 meeting, the council selected a Master Plan, which recommends how to expand the airport until the year 2000. The first phase calls for changing the street configuration and enlarging a currently overcrowded parking lot.

During a public hearing that should start about 3:15 p.m., the council will consider an appeal by Earl Ray West to change zoning on a 0.954 acre tract of land north of Hillander School from multi-family to office. Under present zoning, West could build an apartment complex behind Hillander School.

At 10 a.m., the council will hold a public hearing on an application for an Operations Assistance Grant from the Urban Mass Transportation Administration. This grant concerns the operation of MidTran for fiscal years 1979-80, 1980-81 and 1981-82.

In other action, the council will look at a bid received for a portion of Tolbert Park, consider creating a Health Facilities Development Board, review requests for various freight loading zones, appropriate additional funds needed to complete installation of sprinkler system at the city farm and advertise a tract of land at the Regional Airport for sale.

In addition to hearing various requests for zone changes, the council will look at applications for annexation on a 100 acre tract east of Lamesa Road and north of Interstate 20, a 300 acre tract adjacent and north of Green Tree Blvd, and a 640 acre tract northeast of the intersection of Midland Drive and Green Tree Blvd.

Lee wins speech awards

The Lee High School speech and drama squads won the efficiency sweepstakes for having the most people with the highest degree of earned ranks in competition at the Lubbock Coronado Texas Forensics Association Invitational Tournament in Lubbock Oct. 30-31.

New qualifiers for the TFA state tournament were Chris Ewing and Jimmy Moseley in duet acting, Kenny Jonsson in boy's extemporaneous speaking and Chris Ewing in girl's extemporaneous speaking.

Jimmy Moseley and Chris Ewing placed first in duet acting, while Tracy King and Kenny Jonsson placed first in cross-examination debate. Kenny Jonsson also placed first in boy's extemporaneous speaking and Chris Ewing placed third in girl's extemporaneous speaking.

Finalists were Rex Rowland in original oratory, Chuck Camarillo in humorous interpretation, Valerie Hochman and Paige Pendleton in duet acting and Dana Tompkins in girl's extemporaneous speaking.

Larry Blankenship and Darren Groce placed in the semi-finals in standard debaté and Scarlett Moss and Dana Tompkins placed in the quarter-finals of cross examination debate.

Other semi-finalists were Jimmy Moseley in boy's extemporaneous speaking, Valerie Hochman in prose reading, Kevin Duke and Carrie Marchant in duet acting, Scarlett Moss in girl's extemporaneous speaking and Tracy King in original oratory.

Halverson to address hospital

Paul B. Halverson, M.D., from the Medical College of Wisconsin, will address the medical staff of Midland Memorial Hospital on Wednesday. The topic for his program is "Milwaukee Shoulder."

"Milaukee Shoulder" is a recently described type of arthritis associated with the deposition of hydroxyapatite crystals in the joint space. Dr. Halverson has been involved with the initial clinical and biochemical studies and publications on the subject.

Dr. Halverson is speaking in Midland at the invitation of Roberta M. Case, M.D., a local ear, nose and throat specialist. Drs. Case and Halverson both completed their medical residencies at the Medical College of Wisconsin.

Currently an assistant professor of medicine at St. Luke's Hospital in Milwaukee, Wisc., Dr. Halverson is a Fellow in Rheumatology. He is the co-chairperson of the Milwaukee Arthritis Voluntary Action Committee and he is the recipient of a public health service grant to conduct a "Study of Particulate Matter of Synovial Fluid."

Dr. Halverson's program here is being held in conjunction with the Midland Memorial Hospital Continuing Medical Education conferences.

Toastmasters to hold conference

Toastmasters International is holding its District 44 Fall Conference at the Midland Hilton Nov. 13-14.

Scott Long of Midland is chairman of the weekend speaking contests and educational sessions. He is a petroleum engineer with Texaco.

The district conference will be attended by Toastmasters from 32 clubs in northwest Texas. District 44 covers clubs in West Texas and the Panhandle. The convention should draw about 100 persons, including 50 from the Midland area.

Libertarians want less government

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The Libertarian Party is embarking on a program to size down government, build up people's influence, expand individual freedom and let liberty reign throughout the nation, Libertarian spokesman Ed Clark said here Saturday en route from Houston to Los Angeles.

Clark, the 51-year-old Libertarian Party nominee for President in 1980, said he envisions that 25 percent of the U.S. populous are libertarians who seek virtual uninhibited freedom to do as they please as long as their neighbor is not offended; 25 percent are conservatives; 25 to 35 percent are populists who welcome more government intervention in the people's affairs; and 10 to 15 percent are liberals.

Clark, a Los Angeles lawyer, is advocating abolition of government regulatory agencies and a return to the Jeffersonian concept in which landowners live under as little government influence as possible.

He proposed that disputes be resolved through court action and that agencies from the U.S. Department of Agriculture to the Environmental Protection Agency be abolished.

Clark, who seemed to advance the cause of isolationism, critized the United States for subsidizing the military defense of Germany and Japan. The subsidies in effect allows those countries to spend less of their own money for defense, so Germany can sell Volkswagens cheaper and Japan can sell Hondas cheaper than otherwise possible.

"We are not trying to isolate ourselves from the rest of the world," Clark assured the smattering of reporters in a conference room at Midland Regional Airport. He said he wants "no entangling foreign alliance," however.

On the homefront, the Libertarian Party would do away with virtually all government controls and would let the people decide what they wanted to do with, for examples, wildlife refuges, wilderness areas and parks. He said public land would be open to homesteading.

In many cases, taxation would be optional. If a person shunned a program, such as public education, why should he subsidize education in the form of taxes?, he said.

Regulations on water and air pollution would be eliminated, he said.

"We think everybody has the right to be free from invasion" by other people and pollutants and should be free of hurt.

Clark claims that land would be better managed under private ownership than under government control.

He advocated a mass repeal of laws, saying "there are too many laws."

He would get rid of laws pertaining to victimless crimes, such as smoking or otherwise using marijuana, drinking alcoholic beverages after hours and gambling.

He was critical of the Ronald Reagan administration's "excessive" spending, which he likened to that of the Jimmy Carter administration, and said the Libertarian Party would cut taxes, cut spending and cut the federal budget.

Congressman opposed social security

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Congressman Bill Archer told college-age Republicans Saturday that if he had been in Congress in the 1930s he would not have voted to create the Social Security system.

"I would rather see people provide for their own retirement," said Archer, R-Houston, the ranking Republican on the House Subcommittee on Social Security.

In a speech to a training conference for College Republicans of Texas, Archer said he had "reluctantly concluded" that Social Security is here to stay — for economic as well as political reasons.

"We cannot precipitously change Social Security," he said.

Clements to visit Odessa

ODESSA — Gov. Bill Clements will be in Odessa Nov. 17 for a barbecue and western dance at the Pan American Ballroom, co-sponsored by the Ector County Republican Party executive committee and the Ector County Republican Women's Club.

He will be accompanied by his wife, Rita. The governor is expected to arrive at the Pan American Ballroom about 7:15 p.m.

Cocktails will be served at 7 p.m. The barbecue will follow at 7:30 p.m., catered by the Odessa Chuck Wagon Gang. The western dance band, The Sessions, will play until midnight.

Tickets, at $10 each, are available from the Odessa Chamber of Commerce ticket booth, from members of the Republican Women's Club and executive committee, or by telephoning 332-3099 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., or 366-1504 after 5 p.m. in Odessa. Tickets in Midland are available at 410 N. Main St. from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. or by telephoning 684-4449.

Court upholds conviction

AUSTIN — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has upheld the Ector County conviction of Steven Patrick McClarty, who was sentenced to 12 years in prison for robbery.

McClarty appealed the conviction on grounds the trial court erred in denying his motion for a directed verdict of not guilty, in refusing to instruct the jury that the state was bound by exculpatory statements in the confession and in injecting unsworn testimony into the record during final arguments before the jury.

In overruling the first two contentions, the appeals court ruled that "the prosecution is not bound to disprove exculpatory statements which are not introduced by it but which are introduced by the accused."

The court rejected the third contention stating that the statement in final arguments that McClarty objected to was a "fair deduction from the evidence."

Ranger High School reunion set

Ranger High School graduates will hold a reunion at 7 p.m. Saturday at Manuel's restaurant, 1404 E. Second St., Odessa, according to Lem Bray, president of the Ranger High School Exes.

For more information, contact Wally Reed in Odessa at 366-0163 or Ray Lingle in Midland at 683-6920.

Martin

During the six-week course, he received classroom instruction and participated in field exercises involving infantry tactics, the construction and comouflage of fighting positions, and the use of mines, demolitions and intra-company communications equipment. His specialized training centered on the operation, employment and maintenance of machine guns.

Martin joined the Marine Corps in March 1981.

Army Pvt. Wesley J. Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. S.E. Williams of Big Lake, has completed basic training at Fort Gordon, Ga.

During the training, students receive instructions in drill and ceremonies, weapons, map reading, tactics, military courtesy, military justice, first aid, and Army history and traditions.

Navy Fire Control Technician Seaman Thomas M. Thompson son of Doris O. Thompson of Andrews, recently returned from a deployment to the Western Pacific and the Indian Ocean.

He is a crewmember aboard the guided missile cruiser USS Bainbridge, homeported in San Diego.

During the seven-month cruise, his ship operated as a unit of the 7th Fleet and participated in various training exercises with other 7th Fleet ships and those of allied nations.

Port calls were made to Korea, Thailand, Republic of the Phillipines and Hong Kong.

A 1980 graduate of Andrews High School, Thompson joined the Navy in March 1980.

Randy Brotherton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Brotherton of Midland, was promoted to Cadet Captain for the 1981-82 school year at San Marcos Baptist Academy. Randy and other selected cadets received leadership training from Aug. 15 to Aug. 19 under the supervision of the academy's military department.

On Aug. 28, 1981, the officer candidates were required to appear before a board consisting of the academy president, vice-president and senior Army instructor and commandant of cadets. The board made their final selections for officer positions based on demonstrated leadership, potential for increased responsibility and academic credentials.

Brotherton has attended the academy for the past four years.

Sgt. Gary L. Fesler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin E. Fesler of 4825 W. Illinois, Midland, has completed the field general communications security equipment repair course at the U.S. Army Signal School, Fort Gordon, Ga.

During the course, students learned to replace and repair faulty communications components and individual parts.

His wife, Roberta, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Arvig of Fairfax, Va.

Lt. Col. Melroy Borland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Borland of Midland, has arrived for duty at Holloman Air Force Base, N.M.

Borland, an air operations officer and pilot with the 833rd Combat Support Group, was previously assigned at Howard Air Force Base, Panama.

He received a master's degree in 1975 from the University of Utah at Salt Lake City.

Sgt. Pedro Hernandez Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Pedro Hernandez Sr. of Big Lake, has re-enlisted in the U.S. Air Force after being selected for career status.

Assigned at Norton Air Force Base, Calif., Hernandez was approved for re-enlistment by a board which considered character and performance.

He is a jet engine mechanic with the 63rd Field Maintenance Squadron.

The sergeant is a 1974 graduate of Reagan County High School, Big Lake.

School trustees to meet

Midland Independent School District trustees will hold their regular meeting at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Administration Building at 702 N. N St.

Board members are expected to approve drawings for school facilities, the job descriptions for departmental chairmen, and bids for audio-visual equipment, a pickup and window glass replacement for the Midland High School gym.

The appointment of 14 professional staff members to serve as members of the MISD Textbook Committee is expected to be approved.

Also, the appointment of three new members to the GEM Advisory Committee should be approved.

An evaluation report of the Title VII Bilingual Program will be given, showing the significant results in kindergarten through third grade levels.

Other items on the agenda include approval of the 1981 tax rolls, a review of the game reports and the approval of personnel resignations and appointments.

Several key witnesses never testified in milk fraud trial

By SUSAN STOLER
Associated Press Writer

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Several witnesses expected to give crucial testimony in the federal fraud trial of four Mission school workers never were called to testify in the three-week-long trial.

Jurors resume deliberations Monday after considering the case four hours on Friday. They were not sequestered during the weekend.

Presiding U.S. District Judge James DeAnda wants to know why one subpoeaned witness, Myrtice Caddel, was never put on the stand by the prosecution.

Mrs. Caddel was indicted this summer with those on trial but pleaded guilty. As Mission food services director until 1978, trial witnesses have testified she made an arrangement with an Edinburg dairy for the school district to receive credit for unused milk.

THE GOVERNMENT contends the arrangement went one step further. The milk never was delivered to the school district, which allegedly went ahead and claimed federal reimbursement for $486,000 worth of meals that did not contain the required milk serving.

DeAnda has postponed sentencing Mrs. Caddel at least twice, until after a verdict in the trial of her former co-workers. The judge was scheduled to sentence her Friday, when jurors began deliberations.

He delayed the sentencing after announcing he wanted to know why she never testified.

U.S. Attorney Eddie Medrano said defense lawyers could have called Mrs. Caddel. Defense attorney Joe Connors testified, however, that Mrs. Caddel's lawyer refused to let her be interviewed before the trial.

Defense lawyers decided not to call her without some idea of what she might say.

Lead defense lawyer Frank Maloney of Austin told jurors that Assistant Superintendent Robert Wicks, a defendant, would testify as would School Superintendent Kenneth White.

NEITHER Wicks nor White testified.

DeAnda has ordered attorneys not to discuss the case with reporters.

The only defendant to take the stand was Michael Jon McCarthy, Mrs. Caddel's successor.

For sale: Share in nuclear plant

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Want to buy a share in a half-completed nuclear power plant?

That's the question Austin will be asking other Texas cities and electric utility companies in coming months.

The answer may be slow in coming.

Austin voters decided by a 60 percent margin last Tuesday they wanted no more of the controversial South Texas Nuclear Project. A 34,726 to 24,976 vote authorized the city council to sell Austin's 16 percent share of the multibillion dollar power plant near Bay City.

It was the sixth vote on the power plant in nine years.

Austin originally bought into the nuclear project in 1973 for $161 million after natural gas shortages brought on a winter crisis in electricty generation.

Since then, city officials say, Austin's cost has risen to $345 million, due largely to cost overruns and construction delays.

Houston Lighting & Power, the principal partner in the venture, said Thursday the total cost has risen from less than $1 billion to between $4.4 billion and $4.8 billion. The expected completion date has moved from 1980 to 1986.

Environmentalists and others generally opposed to nuclear power teamed with those unhappy with the economic situation in voting to sell the city's share in the project.

"The project has proven to be too costly, a bad investment," said Peck Young, a member of the city electric utility commission.

"I have no idea how long it will take to sell our share," said Mayor Carole McClellan, who wanted to stay in the STNP. "First you have to find a buyer and then you have to find a buyer who will pay you what it's worth."

Friday, the City Council took the first step toward disposing of the 16 percent share. The seven council members approved a plan for selection of a negotiation team to sound out and solicit possible purchasers. A larger team of attorneys, engineers and researchers will back them up.

"The negotiation team has not been named but logically it would include a member of the city attorney's office, a member of the city manager's office, a members of the electric utilities department and maybe another member or two," said Assistant City Attorney Richard Balough.

The next move will be for City Council to develop criteria for the sale, including a price. The details will be distributed to all who might be interested.

"We certainly want to recover the money we have spent and ideally would get some additional for the years we have administered the project share so far," Balough said.

The negotiation team will approach possible buyers, including the other partners in the project — Houston, San Antonio and Corpus Christi. Later, formal bids will be taken.

"It's possible a completed sale would take 14 to 15 months," Balough said. "There are lots of things to do."

Meanwhile, Austin must keep up its payments according to the original agreement — roughly $1 million a week.

There is enough bond money in hand to cover payments through April, and the city could sell an additional $51 million in bonds which were authorized by voters in 1979 but have not been sold.

However, if a sale has not been completed by early 1983, city officials say they would be forced to call another bond election to continue paying for a nuclear plant the people don't want.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

RE: The City of Midland's Application for U.M.T.A. Operating Assistance Grants for Fiscal Years 1979-80, 1980-81, and 1981-82.

I. Notice is hereby given that a public hearing will be held by the City of Midland for the purpose of considering projects for which Federal Operating Assistance under Section 5 of the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964, as amended, is being sought, generally described as follows:

A. DESCRIPTION OF PROJECTS

1. The Name of the applicant is City of Midland, Texas. The transit system being assisted is MIDTRAN. The project periods are:

FY1979-80 (October 1, 1979 - September 30, 1980)
FY1980-81 (October 1, 1980 - September 30, 1990)
FY1981-82 (October 1, 1981 - September 30, 1982)

2. The service area for each of these projects is the City of Midland, Texas.

3. The estimated net project cost for each fiscal year is as follows:

Fiscal Year	Federal Share	Local Share
FY79-80	$105,364	$105,365
FY80-81	$165,750	$165,750
FY81-82	$182,000	$182,000

The source for the local share is the City's General Fund and other eligible sources.

B. RELOCATION

No persons, families, or businesses will be displaced by these projects.

C. ENVIRONMENT

The proposed projects will not have a significant environmental impact upon the service area.

D. COMPREHENSIVE PLANNING

Each of the projects is in comformance with comprehensive land use and transportation planning in the area and is consistent with the adopted programming of projects in the Transportation Improvement Program.

E. ELDERLY AND HANDICAPPED

The projects will take into account the special needs of the elderly and handicapped. A reduced fare for elderly and handicapped persons, which has been in effect since the inception of the system in February 4, 1980, will remain in effect through the last project period. If fares are increased, the fare for elderly and handicapped persons during off peak hours will not exceed one-half of the regular full fare.

F. CHARTER BUS OPERATIONS

MIDTRAN does provide local charter services within the Midland-Odessaarea seven days a week, but does not provide service more than 50 miles beyond its service area. Any and all charter business is performed with spare vehicles from the MIDTRAN fleet which will not interfere with regularly scheduled service.

II. The hearing will be held in conjunction with the regular meeting of the City Council at 10:00 am on Tuesday, November 10, 1981. The meeting will be held in the City Council chambers, 300 North Loraine, Midland, Texas. At the hearing, The City of Midland will afford an opportunity for interested persons or agencies to be heard with respect to the social, environmental, and economic aspects for the projects. Interested persons may submit orally, or in writing evidence and recommendations with respect to the said projects.

III. A copy of the application will be available for public inspection at the public hearing and anytime thereafter at the MIDTRAN office at Carver and South Street, Midland, Texas. A copy of the Transportation Improvement program is currently available for public inspection at the same location.

Mental patient captured

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — A woman who was found innocent by reason of insanity in the mutilation death of her 4-year-old daughter was captured shortly after she walked away from a mental hospital here Saturday.

Patricia Ann Frazier, 26, who admitted she cut out the heart of her daughter, Khunji Wilson, in February of 1980, had been confined in the "lock-up ward" of the Wichita Falls State Hospital, officials said.

She and a companion were reported missing from the facilty about 5 p.m. Saturday, hospital officials said.

Ms. Frazier had been held in a locked ward but was free to roam the hospital grounds during certain hours, said hospital spokesman Adolph Interial.

The two escapees were picked up just outside of Olney, about 45 miles south of Wichita Falls, said Olney Police Chief Charles Boyd.

Wichita Falls County Judge Tom Bacus ordered her held at the state mental hospital here following her release from Rusk.

Houston, Texas pucker up and kiss for bowls

HOUSTON — Ok, so it wasn't 39-39, but 14-14 can have its moments too, especially when a post-season bowl invitation may dangling out there somewhere.

Besides, this sister-kissing business between Houston-Texas Saturday night was like something dreamed up by the Bard of the Avon on a Mid-Summers Night.

It read like a comedy of errors with all 14 of Houston's points coming as a result of Texas turnovers while the Longhorns tying field goal came after a Houston turnover.

WHAT MADE it exciting for the crowd of 52,589, the third largest UH home crowd ever, was the way Texas stormed back from a 14-0 halftime deficit to tie it on a 47-yard Raul Allegre field kick with 2:40 to play. And just the way they used to do it in those old B football movies, the heros came off the bench to save the day.

When starting quarterback Rick McIvor suffered a shoulder-neck injury, the doctors felt it was too risky for him to play the second half, Robert Brewer, a junior spear-carrier from Richardson, came in to put some spark in the Texas offense. McIvor hadn't been all that great anyway, going 2-for-12 with as many interceptions as completions.

But the night's biggest play was turned in by another stand in, John Walker, a sophomore tailback Killeen.

The stage for Walker was set when Texas drove 50 yards in 11 plays on its first second-half possession and Allegre booted a 45-yard field goal with 5:01 left in the third period to leave the Steers behind, 3-14.

But that was it until the fourth period when Texas, with Brewer, completing four passes, marched from its 20 to the Houston 34. The only trouble was it was fourth and four.

BREWER AND Walker solved that when John took a pitchout and fled outside right end to the eight-yard line and then two plays later took it over from the eight, diving the final four yards to leave Texas trailing 9-14. Walker then caught Brewer's conversion pass to reduce the margin to three.

Houston seemed headed for the clinching touchdown, driving from its own 36 to the Texas 25 when halfback James Durham fumbled and Texas turned it into a 47-yard drive that set up Allegre's tieing field goal.

Durham related. "I can't tell you how bad I feel. I had the ball, cut up, and someone hit me from the side. I just feel like the world ended."

The tie left both teams in the SWC run for the Cotton Bowl Jan. 1. A loss could have expelled Houston or, in Texas' case, could have brought the Longhorns back to the crowd.

"No one likes to tie," said Coach Fred Akers, "but considering what we gave them in the first half, I have to be proud of the way we fought back. And we had our chances. Allegre just missed that long field goal attempt in the third period."

The gifts Akers was referring to was a first half which turned the Astrodome for a chamber of horrors for the Horns.

Two interceptions of McIvor passes set up chip-shot touchdowns for Houston.

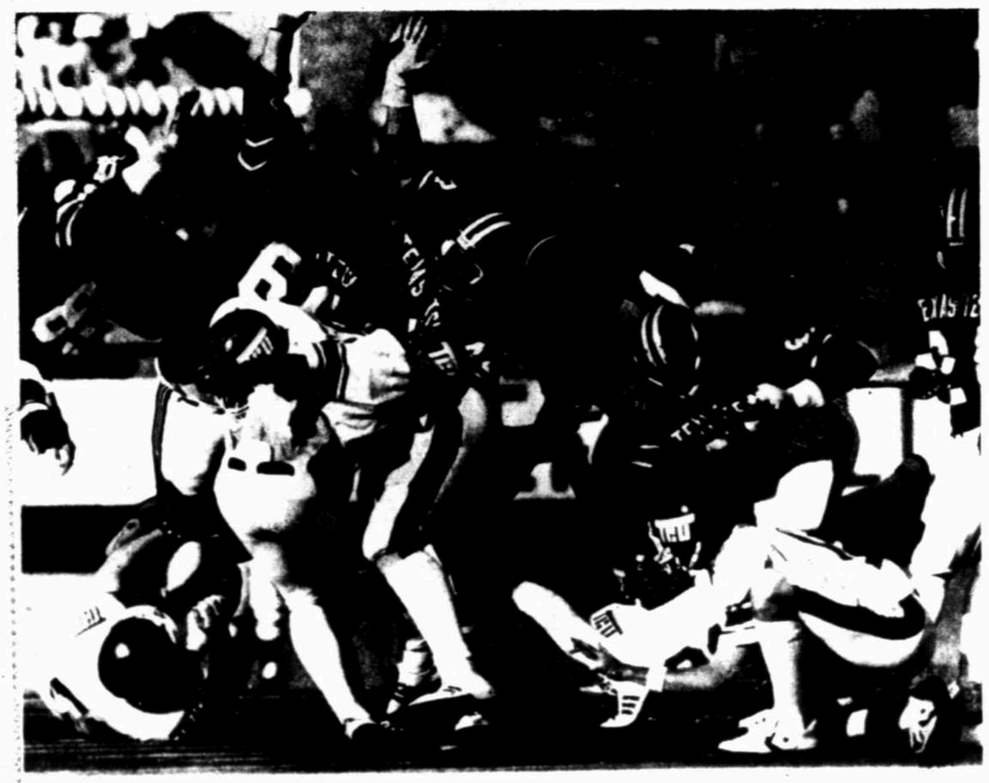

THE FIRST came when McIvor trying to Abilene Cooper's Terry Orr, was picked off by Butch LaCroix who returned 10 yards to the Texas 22. Four plays later quarterback Lionel Wilson kept on an option right for a touchdown.

Defensive end Kelly McDonald fleeced another McIvor pass on an attempted screen to Donnie Little in the second period to give the Cougars another point-blank shot from 15 yards out. This time halfback David Barrett did the honors over right guard from the one.

Houston's best drive of the half, from its own five to the Texas 23, ended in a missed 42-yard field goal attempt by Mike Clendenen, but the Horns in the first half were little resemblence to the Texas team that made Oklahoma look like Northwestern a few weeks back.

But then the Steers have been having problem moving the ball ever since and it has been the defense that has been getting the job done. However, Saturday night when the offense started compounding its troubles by turning the ball over, they in effect sabataged the defense. Texas has been winning but not in the offensive style to which it would like to be accustomed.

"We just told them to keep doing what they had been doing in the first half...after all we'd been averaging five yards a carry...but to stop giving the ball away," Akers answered a question. "Houston is good and we didn't have to make it easy for them." — TED BATTLES

TCU's Greg Porter nails a 40-yard field goal against Texas Tech in the third period at Lubbock Saturday, clearing the teeth of the Raider defensive team. TCU put on a final half rally to tie Tech, 39-39.

Frogs rally to tie Red Raiders

Despite 800 yards of offense, kicking game is the key

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — The game featured 800 yards total offense, nine touchdowns, three field goals and a safety. So what did the opposing coaches pick as the key to the outcome? The kicking game.

"Our kicking game went sour and the whole game hinged on that," said Texas Tech Coach Jerry Moore, who considered himself the loser after the Raiders surrendered 21 fourth-quarter points and let Texas Christian rally for a 39-39 Southwest Conference football tie.

"Our kicking game produced some big plays for us," agreed TCU Coach F.A. Dry.

He watched his special teams recover two on-sides kickoffs to set up touchdowns, run one punt back 70 yards for a touchdown and block another punt out of the Red Raider end zone for a safety.

"This is just like a loss to us," grumbled Moore, whose Raiders blew a 32-9 third-quarter lead. "We had a chance to win big and didn't. The blocked punt was blocked by a guy who wasn't even supposed to block it."

That was linebacker Mike Dry, the coach's son. He batted down Maury Beauford's kick with 1:28 to play and gave the Frogs the tying points.

Tech had a chance to win it when free safety Stan David intercepted a pass to give kicker John Greve a 28-yard field goal try with six seconds left. Greve missed.

"I have never dodged a bullet in a game like this that late," said Dry.

Reserve quarterback Reuben Jones directed the late Frog effort, in which TCU scored a safety, three touchdowns and a field goal in the final 15 minutes.

The comeback overshadowed the effort of Tech quarterback Ron Reeves who ran for two touchdowns and passed for two more, including a 68-yard bomb.

Tech is now 1-7-1 for the season and 0-5-1 in the SWC, while the Frogs are now 2-5-2 on the year and 1-4-1 in the conference.

Jones took control of the Frog offense in the second half, after spending the first half on the sidelines.

His heroics included a 7-yard touchdown run and a 5-yard scoring pass to Kevin Haney. Phillip Epps ran a punt back 70 yards for a score, Zane Drake plunged 2 yards for a TD and Greg Porter tacked on two field goals to complete the Frog scoring in the second half.

Tech had taken a 17-6 halftime lead on Reeves short touchdown dive, a 26-yard John Greve field goal and a 10-yard touchdown romp by guard George Smitherman on a trick play.

Jones finished with 19 completions in 34 tries for 297 yards, while Reeves' stat sheet showed 14 of 32 successful passes for 243 yards.

It was the most points either team had scored this season and the total of 78 was the highest combined total in the history of the Tech-TCU series.

Smitherman tallied the only touchdown of his college career on a third-down and seven play from the TCU 10. Center Denny Harris put the ball in Reeves hands on the snap, then snatched it back and placed it on the ground.

While the rest of the team faked an option right, Smitherman grabbed the ball, headed left and clomped 10 yards for the score.

It was a play Tech Coach Jerry Moore learned while he was an assistant coach at Nebraska, and this was Tech's first use of it this season.

TCU receiver Stanley Washington had nine catches for 156 yards, the best stats of his college career.

Arkansas escapes Baylor

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Bruce Lahay calmly booted a 27-yard field goal with 12 seconds left as 19th-ranked Arkansas came from behind to beat Baylor 41-39 in a crazy Southwest Conference game Saturday night.

Baylor had taken a 39-38 lead with 2:05 left on a 9-yard, fourth down touchdown pass from Jay Jeffrey to Dennis Gentry.

Starting from the Arkansas 24, freshman quarterback Brad Taylor hit four straight passes to move the Razorbacks into field goal range.

He drilled a 14-yarder to Mark Mistler to get the drive started and then Jessie Clark, who tied a school record with five touchdowns, popped clean for 18 yards. Taylor threw a bullet to Gerald McMurray for 15 yards and zipped a 14-yarder to Darryl Mason for a first down at the Baylor 16. Three plays later, Lahay, who is 17 out of 21 this season, ended the madness.

Arkansas remained alive in the SWC race by upping its league record to 4-2 while Baylor, the defending champion, dropped to 3-3. Representatives from six bowls watched the game.

Baylor led 24-17 at the half and then went in front by 10 points before Clark scored three touchdowns to put Arkansas ahead 38-27 with 10 seconds gone in the fourth quarter. Jeffrey's third down, 27-yard scoring pass to Gerald McNeil with 9:44 left in the game made it 38-33.

Two possessions later Mason and Baylor safety Van McElroy collided and Taylor's pass down the middle bounced high into the air. Vic Vines intercepted on the run and his 28-yard return put Baylor on the Arkansas 37. Nine plays later Jeffrey threw to Gentry for a one-point lead.

Spinks stops Johnson with big overhand right

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Michael Spinks stopped Vonzell Johnson with vicious combinations in the seventh round as the former Olympic champion retained his World Boxing Association light heavyweight title Saturday.

An overhand right coming off a clinch at 1:15 of the seventh round of the scheduled 15-rounder put the challenger to the canvas in his second try at a light heavyweight title.

After taking a mandatory eight-count from referee Larry Hazzard, Johnson stood up and seemed ready for more. But one left from Spinks was all it took for Hazzard to stop the fight and declare Spinks the winner.

Spinks, now undefeated in 18 professional outings, made his first successful defense of the WBA title that he took from Eddie Mustafa Muhammad in Las Vegas on July 18.

Johnson, 29, of Columbus, Ohio, is now 22-3 as a professional. One of his losses came to World Boxing Council champion Matthew Saad Muhammad on Feb. 28 here, when Johnson was knocked out in the 11th round.

Johnson looked better against Muhammad then he did against Spinks, who, at 173 pounds, repeatedly backed Johnson into the ropes with an effective left jab that preceded left crosses and combinations to the head.

Spinks, 25, of St. Louis, was most effective on the inside, where he repeatedly beat Johnson to the punch.

Spinks, who also has a 1976 Olympic gold medal to his credit, earned $300,000 from the fight.

SMU's Eric Dickerson (19) eludes a tackle attempt by Rice's Brian Mica on his way to a 58-yard TD run Saturday in first quarter action. The Mustangs went on to win 33-12.

Mustangs go overland to rout Owls

IRVING, Texas (AP) - The only mystery at Southern Methodist's homecoming Saturday wasn't whether the Mustangs would live up to their No. 10 national rankings but if they would get 500 yards rushing.

As it turned out the Mustangs rolled for 446 yards overland in a 33-12 Southwest Conference homecoming victory over the Rice Owls.

IT KEPT SMU atop the SWC standings with an overall ledger of 8-1 and 5-1.

"We had a lot of yards today but we played poorly," said tailback Eric Dickerson. "I was trying hard but I think I could have played better. I had trouble personally getting motivated for this game."

SMU was a 24-point favorite over the Owls, now 3-6 for the season and 2-4 in the league.

Dickerson and Craig James each rushed for over 100 yards.

"It was a frustrating day," said SMU Coach Ron Meyer. "I knew the backs had to be gaining a lot of yards but everytime I looked up there was a yellow hanky (flag) on the field. I guess it's a mark of a good team when you win even when you're not playing well."

Dickerson rushed for a career high 186 yards on 26 carries and his alternate at tailback, James, gained 161 yards on 20 rushes.

JAMES SET up SMU's first two field goals and Dickerson dashed 58 yards for a touchdown in the first half as the Mustangs built a 16-0 lead.

Rice narrowed the deficit to 16-6 early in the third quarter after freshman Dwayne Holmes recovered Dickerson's fumble at the 50. Quarterback Michael Calhoun hit wide receiver Ricky Askew with a 12-yard scoring pass.

SMU put the Owls away on quarterback Lance McIlhenny's five-yard touchdown pass to tight end Rickey Bolden and Garcia's third field goal of the day, a 27-yarder.

The Calhoun-Askew combination clicked again with five minutes to play on a 25-yard touchdown pass, long after most of the 28,750 fans in Texas Stadium had left for their cars.

After Rice's final touchdown, the Mustangs chalked up another touchdown when wingback Lee Jeane scampered 40 yards on a wingback reverse.

The Mustangs had to resort to a fake punt to get their first score.

Late in the first period James took a short snap from punt formation and rambled 20 yards to the Rice 27. The Owls held and Garcia kicked a 39-yard field goal.

James set up another field goal, this time a 25-yarder by Garcia, with runs of 22 and 20 yards to make it 6-0 early in the second period.

DICKERSON'S 58-YARD touchdown run gave him SMU's single season rushing record at 1,035 yards. He also set a new SMU single season touchdown record at 18.

The score mounted to 16-0 when tackle Richard Neely charged through to block Dale Walters' punt out of the end zone with two minutes to play in the first half.

The Neely-led Mustang defense held the Owls to only three first downs during the first half and just 19 yards rushing on 20 sorties.

Freshmen are key to Chaps' season

With a lot of question marks floating around, Midland College opens its basketball season Thursday night with a home game against the McMurry College junior varisty. Starting time is 7:30 p.m. in the Al G Langford Chaparral Center.

The Chaps are coming off their best season and their first conference title, but coach Jerry Stone doesn't quite know what to expect this year.

"We have just two returning lettermen, Puntus Wilson and Lance McCain, that we can depend on," said Stone. "The other eleven players are freshmen and we don't have much size. The first part of the season will be a larning experience for the young players. We think they are capable of competing in the league, but we won't know until they get some experience."

Thursday's game will be the only home court appearance for the Chaps this month. Following the McMurry tilt, they will go to Cisco for a game against Cisco Junior College on Saturday night. They they have two consecutive weekend tournaments, Nov. 19-21 in Great Bend, Kansas for the Barton County Classic, and Nov. 26-28 for the Amarillo Classic. They'll return home Dec. 1 for their conference opener against South Plains, followed immediately by the Chaparral Classic Dec. 3-5 in Chap Center.

Ticket prices for the Chaparral games remain the same, $2 for adults and $1 for students. Fulltime Midland College students are admitted free to games with their ID cards. Season tickets for all Chaparral home games, except the Chaparral Classic, are on sale at Chaparral Center, Bill Williams Tire Center, and the Midland College athletic office in the Physical Education Building. Season tickerts are $15 for one person, $25 for a couple and $35 for an entire family. Season tickets will remain on sale through the Dec. 1 game.

All Midland College home games, and some nearby road games, will be broadcast on Quad K Radio, 99 FM.

Wilson earned a starting position last year with the Chaps, when Stone had eight sophomores and just four freshmen on the team. The smooth shooter was named first team All-Conference and first team All-Region, plus three All-Tournament selections. At 6-foot-3 ½ and 174 pounds, Wilson was the Chaps' second leading scorer last year behind junior college All-American Charles Johnson. Wilson is from Dallas South Oak Cliff, where he was twice All-Conference and All-Metro, Metro Player of the Year, and MVP in two high school all-star games.

The sharp-shooting McCain, 6-foot-4, 170 pounds, is from Andrews where he was an honor graduate. McCain came off the bench in several games last year to add scoring punch to the Chaps' offense. In high school, he was All-District three years, All-Region two years, and All-State two years. He played in the 1979 Texas All-Star game.

Freshmen on the squade include:

Reggie Boyd, 6-foot-5, 203 pounds, from McLain High School in Tulsa Oklahoma. He was an All-District honorable mention.

Jerome Crowe, 6-foot-4, 175 pounds, a graduate of South Garland High. He was team captain and leading rebounder his senior year and was named to the All-Garland squad and second team All-District.

Robert Earl, 6-foot-5, 185 pounds, from Southside High School in Buffalo N.Y. He was named All-City, All-High and All-State.

Rodney McChriston, 6-foot-2, 178 pounds from Mssick High School in Memphis, Tenn. He was named All-District, All-Region, All-Tournament and teams' Most Competitive.

Justin Morett, 6-foot-5, 185 pounds from Midland High School. He played on the 1980-81 Bulldog squad that won district and had a 35-3 record for the year.

Bradley Richardson, 6-doot-3, 172 pounds from Washington High School in Tulsa, Okla. He was named All-Area, All-City, All-Region, as a senior after transfering from Snyder. His father is the basketball coach at Tulsa University and formerly at Western Texas JCollege, whose team won the 1980 NJCAA title and the 1981 MIT crown.

Charles (Chuck) Robinson, 6-foot-3, 185 pounds from Southwest High School in San Antonio where he was All-District and teams' Most Valuable player. He is a walk-on who made the Chap squad.

Chester Smith, 6-foot-6, 195 pounds from Dallas Wilmer-Hutchins High School. He was All-District two years. He was also All-Tournament at the Austin Classic, Lon Morris Classic and Dr. Pepper Classicd. He's a good shooter both inside and outside.

David Thompson, 6-foot-6 ½, 199 pounds from Hutchinson Central High School in Buffalo, N.Y. He's the stronest player on the squad and a good rebounder with a nice touch around the basket.

Anthony (Spud) Webb, 5-foot-6, 130 pounds from Dallas Wilmer-Hutchins High School. He was All-District, All-Region, All-State, All-Metro, All-Greater Dallas, district MVP and district's leading scorer. He also dunks the basketball and is the floor leader at the point guard position.

Tony Williams, 6-foot-5, 180 pounds from Mound Bayou High School in Mississippi.

Last season's Chaps set five team records with the best season record of 30-3, the best conference record of 16-2 that earned them their first conference title, the best scoring average of any Midland College squad with 89.92 points per game, a 17-game winning streak, and the biggest victory margin, a 48-point spread over Eastern Arizona in a 117-69 victory during the Chaparral Classic.

The Chaps last year started quickly taking victories in Hutchinson, Kansas, Quarterback Classic, the Amarillo Classic, the Chaparral Classic, and the ABC Classic in Big Spring. They ran their string to 17 straight before suffering two straight two-point losses at home.

Of last year's sophomores, Charles Johnson is playing at Texas Tech, Raleigh Freeman is playing at Wayland Baptist, Scotty Tutwiler is playing at Delta State, Virgil Slay and Kevin Willingham are playing at Midwestern University, and Ernie Tate is playing at Central Florida.

Michigan quarterback Steve Smith (16) pops the option as Illinois' Willie Young looks on. Smith ran for three TDs and passed for three more as the Wolverines went on to post a 71-21 victory.

Steve Smith runs crazy as Michigan scores 70

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan quarterback Steve Smith passed for three touchdowns and ran for three more Saturday to lead the 12th-ranked Wolverines to a comeback 70-21 Big Ten football victory over Illinois.

Illinois, behind the passing of junior quarterback Tony Eason, shocked Michigan with three touchdowns took a 21-7 lead after one period of play. But the Michigan defense came up with three big second-quarter interceptions and Smith put the Wolverines' offense into gear.

The 6-foot, 191-pound sophomore quarterback combined with All-American wide receiver Anthony Carter on a 60-yard touchdown pass play for Michigan's first touchdown.

Smith ran for second-quarter touchdowns of 1 and 42 yards and threw a 9-yard scoring pass to tight end Craig Dunaway to lift Michigan to a 28-21 halftime lead.

Lawrence Ricks scored on a 1-yard plunge, Stan Edwards had a 7-yard scoring run and freshman Rick Rogers had a 4-yard TD dash for Michigan in the fourth quarter. Quarterback B.J. Dickey passed for 6 yards to Tom Hassel for the final Michigan touchdown of the day.

Buffs thump Indiana State

CANYON, Texas (AP) — Paul Bell tiptoed around left end for a 15-yard score and Danny Clark added a 4-yard blast up the middle moments later as West Texas State surged past Indiana State to post a 17-14 Missouri Valley Conference win Saturday.

After opening a 3-0 lead at halftime, West Texas State fell behind 6-3 midway through the fourth period. The ISU scores came on 24- and 37-yard field goals by Dennis Teegarden.

But West Texas State took the lead for good when Bell capped an 80-yard drive with his 15-yard touchdown.

Sunday's Night wins feature

SUNLAND PARK, N.M. (AP) — Sunday's Night led most of the way to score a length and a half victory in the featured race Saturday at Sunland Park horse track.

Sunday's Night dueled with Native Bux for the lead out of the gate in the 870-yard race, then gradually drew out for the convincing victory.

Ridden by Larry Byers, Sunday's Night zipped to a 45.52 clocking, the best at the distance this season at Sunland Park.

Sunday's Night returned mutuel payoffs of $6.00, $3 20 and $2.40. On The Chin, near the leaders throughout under jockey Bobbie Don Harmon, took second with payoffs of $4.00 and $3.80. True Rounder finished third and returned $3.80 to show.

In the co-featured Texas Derby Prep, Born To Lead did his best running late in the mile chase for 3-year-olds and took a half-length decision over Reddy Rampart.

Wildcats set record

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Quarterback Brian Clark hurled three touchdown passes in the first half Saturday to lead Michigan State to a 61-14 victory and send Northwestern reeling to a major college record 29th consecutive defeat.

Northwestern had shared the NCAA Division I record of 28 consecutive losses with Kansas State and Virginia. The Wildcats' last win dates back to the second game of the 1979 season, when they tripped Wyoming 27-22. It aas their 33rd straight Big Ten defeat and their ninth loss this season. Michigan State improved its record to 3-4 in the Big Ten and 4-5 overall.

The Spartans scored on all seven of their first half possessions, posting three touchdowns in the first 10:31. Two of those touchdowns came on passes from Clark to Otis Grant and Al Kimichik.

Clark, who gave way to Rick Kolb late in the second quarter, finished 11-for-15 with 118 yards. Kolb completed 6 of 12 passes for 78 yards and a pair of touchdowns, a 10-yarder to Kimichik and a 31-yard hookup with running back Aaron Roberts.

Northwestern quarterback Mike Kerrigan, who lost his starting job early in the season, entered the game late in the second quarter. He broke a string of 14 scoreless quarters by the Wildcats when he hit Dave Bahoric with a 14-yard scoring pass to cap a 52-yard drive in the third quarter.

Kerrigan came back with another 25-yard touchdown strike to Steve Bogan, finishing 14-of-33 for 177 yards.

Permian puts lock on 5-5A grid title

ODESSA — Odessa Permian must be in love with the dramatic finish.

Last week against Midland Lee, Panther Bobby Knott kicked a 37-yard field goal with 13 seconds remaining on the game clock for a 9-7 victory. Saturday, against San Angelo Central, tailback Mike Troglin scored the winning touchdown with 31 seconds on the clock for a 17-14 final score and a 9-0 record, 6-0 in District 5-5A.

The victory gave Permian the 5-5A title, but for awhile it looked like it was going to be decided next week against Odessa High, the Panthers' final opponent of the regular season.

San Angelo jumped out to a 7-0 lead in the first quarter when fullback Kel Crain scored from one-yard out. Mark Bates booted the extra point. Knott cut the lead to 7-3 in the second quarter with a 28-yard field goal and that's where the score rested through halftime.

San Angelo score a second TD in the third quarter when Crain punched the ball over the goal line from two yards out and Bates added the PAT for a 14-3 lead. Permian waited until the fourth quarter to begin its rally for the victory.

With 7:29 remaining to be played, Troglin scored the Panthers first six-pointer on a 10-yard run and quarterback Coy Brown threw to receiver Steve Striifler for the two-point conversion and a 14-11 score.

Then, on Mojo's last possession, Troglin scored the winner on a four-yard run to lock up the gsme and title.

With the loss, the Bobcats fell to 5-4 overall and 3-3 in the league.

El Paso dominates x-country

LUBBOCK — Five El Paso high schools showed their dominance in the Regional UIL cross country meet here Saturday by finishing one-two-three in both boy's and girl's events.

The boys events were won by El Paso Bowie with 44 points followed by El Paso Austin with 57 and El Paso Bel Air with 64. Midland High finished a distant seventh with 159 points.

For the girls, El Paso Bel Air came out on top with 43 points followed by El Paso High with 59 and El Paso Coronado with 78. Midland High failed to score.

Individually, Chuck St. German was the highest finisher among the Midland runners, 21st in 16:04. The winner of the event was Bobby Aquirre of El Paso Riverside in 14:54.

Other Midland High runners were Mike Betteridge in 34th place; James Beverly, 52nd; Jesse Diaz, 55th; Mike Reed, 56th; Danny Ramirez, 64th and Arturo Arciga, 70th.

Beverly, who was third in the state 800 meters last spring as a sophomore, announced that he is moving to Farmington, N.M., in two weeks and will not be a part of the Bulldog track team this spring. That will be a big blow to the Dogs.

Brenda Moore of Amarillo won the girls race with a time of 11:41. Sandy Rodriguez was the only Midland High runner competing and she finished 51st in 13:19.

Nimitz wins grid title

The 1981 football season came to a close in most of the junior high school football conferences Saturday.

In ninth grade battles, Nimitz concluded its season with an unblemished 9-0 record by defeating Lee Maroon 20-6 while runnerup Lee White (8-1) defeated Bowie 14-0.

In other games, Midland Purple stopped Ector 29-20, Hood defeated Bonham 21-6 and Crockett downed Midland Gold 14-7.

Eighth grade football, in the Midland-Odessa Conference saw Nimitz clinch the title with a 22-14 victory over San Jacinto. Both teams went into the game with 6-1 records. In other M-O games, Blackshear routed Bonham 56-0, Goddard bombed Bowie 49-8, and Crockett defeated Hood 23-6. There are two weeks of play remaining in the league.

The only eighth grade Midland City Conference score reported was a tie between Alamo and San Jacinto, 16-16. Goddard B vs. Trinity was not reported.

Goddard White won the seventh grade American Conference with a perfect 8-0 record by posting a 20-0 victory over San Jacinto Green. No. 2 Goddard Red, 5-2-1, finished the season on a sour note by dropping a 12-6 game to Alamo Grey. Also, San Jacinto White defeated Alamo Scarlet 26-0.

The seventh grade National Conference, which plays its games on Tuesday, has one week of play remaining.

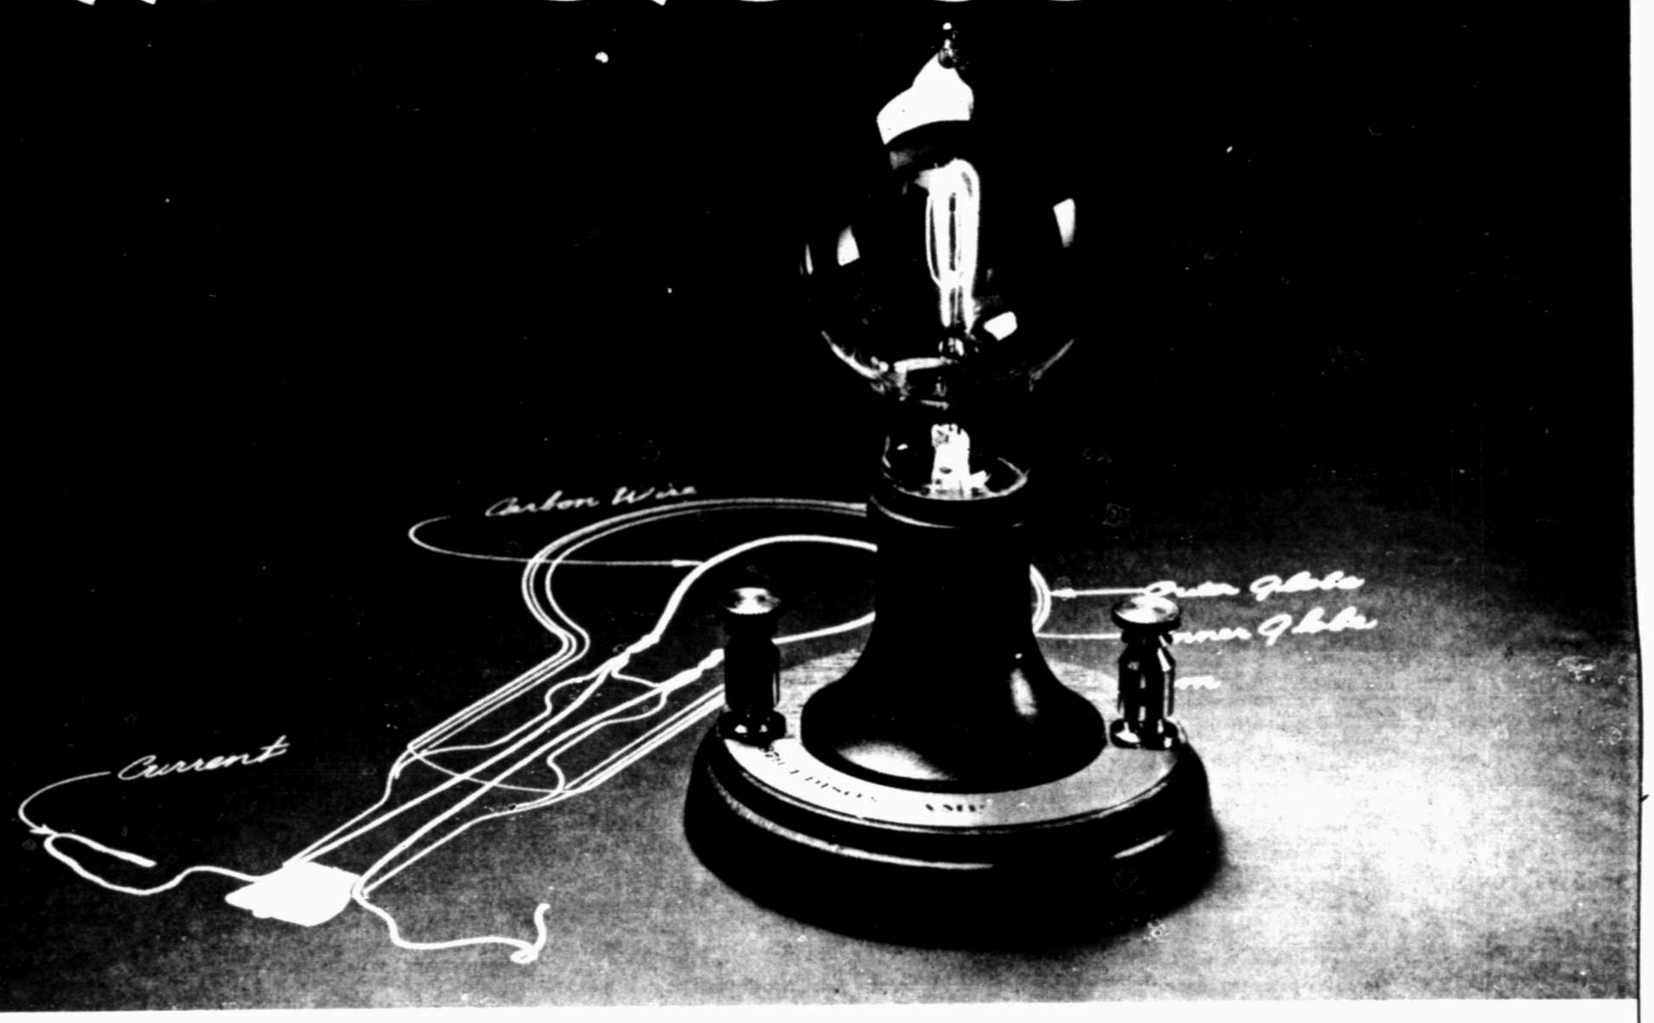

Goddard, Alamo win city titles

In the eighth grade girls basketball tournament played at San Jacinto Jr. High School this weekend, it came down to Goddard vs. Goddard in the title game Saturday night.

Goddard White posted a 45-39 victory over Goddard Black to win the tournament crown. San Jacinto White posted a 42-28 victory over Alamo Red to finish in third and Alamo Blue defeated San Jacinto Green 37-33 to win consolation.

In the seventh grade tournament at Goddard, Alamo Scarlet survived an overtime period to defeat Goddard White 36-32 for the city title. Goddard Black was a 51-17 winner over Alamo Grey for third place and San Jacinto Green defeated San Jacinto White 20-14 to win consolation.

"This idea will never sell!"

Wrong.

Thomas Alva Edison came up with a lot of ideas in his lifetime, and not all of them were commercial successes. But he had that rare combination of insight, imagination, and luck that led to the discovery that sound could be recorded and reproduced. His invention — the phonograph. His incandescent light led to the development of the light and power industry.

Edison was a businessman. He understood the importance of profits in furthering his research.

At Commercial Bank we like to keep an open mind on new ideas. Who knows when another Edison might come along? Bring your idea to a Commercial Banker.

Ohio State's Tim Spencer (46) makes a good cut against the Minnesota defense for a 73-yard touchdown, but the Buckeyes suffered a 35-31 upset at the hands of the Gophers

Gophers kick Buckeyes out of Big Ten lead

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Mike Hohensee passed for five touchdowns and 444 yards, incluqing a 28-yard game-winner to Jay Carroll with 2:38 to play, as Minnesota upset 18th-ranked Ohio State 35-31 Saturday to knock the Buckeyes out of first place in the Big Ten.

Hohensee, a 6-foot-1, 190-pound junior college transfer, completed 37 of 67 passes and rallied the Gophers from a 21-7 halftime deficit.

Carroll, a tight end, caught the winning pass in the end zone after Buckeye cornerback Kevin Bell deflected the ball. That erased a 31-28 Ohio State lead and gave Minnesota its only lead of the game.

It was Carroll's third TD catch of the game. He grabbed an 18-yard scoring pass with 6:56 to play after the Buckeyes had taken a seemingly safe 31-21 lead.

Buckeye quarterback Art Schlichter drove over from the 1 to break a 21-21 tie late in the third quarter. Bob Atha booted a 31-yard field goal, giving Ohio State a 10-point lead midway through the fourth quarter.

Hohensee and Carroll teamed up on a 27-yard scoring play to pull the Gophers back into contention early in the second half. After a short Buckeye punt, Hohensee whipped a short pass to fullback Frank Jacobs, who ran the last 10 yards to complete a 17-yard scoring play.

The Buckeyes held Minnesota to 22 yards on the ground, forcing Hohensee to pass early and often.

The Gophers broke a 15-year losing jinx against the Buckeyes, who slipped to 4-2 in the Big Ten. Minnesota is 4-3.

Pacific stuns South Carolina

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Alternating quarterbacks Harley Miller and Grayson Rogers passed for 335 yards and three touchdowns to lead Pacific to a 23-21 upset victory over South Carolina Saturday.

But the margin of victory was two points that Pacific received when strong safety Darryl Ragland blocked Chris Norman's punt into and beyond the South Carolina end zone in the first period.

Rogers, who ran every other offensive series for the Tigers, connected on 18 of 30 passes for 207 yards and Pacific's first two touchdowns. He was intercepted twice.

Miller put the game on ice with the final touchdown toss with a little more than 4 minutes remaining in the game. He hit on 13 of 28 attempts for 128 yards, and he was intercepted once.

South Carolina scored first after Pacific fumbled the opening kickoff. Quarterback Gordon Beckham threw a 13-yard pass to split end Ira Hillary for the touchdown.

Golden Eagles sting State, 7-6

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Tailback Sammy Winder dived a yard for a touchdown after a big second-quarter fumble recovery and 20th-ranked Southern Mississippi survived a late scare for a 7-6 college football victory over 15th-ranked Mississippi State Saturday.

The unbeaten Golden Eagles, now 7-0-1, held Mississippi State quarterback Tim Parenton inches short on a fourth-and-one play to kill the Bulldogs' last threat at the Southern Mississippi 33 with 1:26 left in the game.

Iowa ends frustration

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Quarterback Gordy Bohannon ran for two touchdowns and Tom Nichol kicked a pair of field goals as Iowa, ending 20 years of frustration, swept past Purdue 33-7 Saturday in Big Ten Conference football.

The victory secured Iowa's first winning season since 1961 and broke a 20-game losing streak to Purdue. No other major school in the country had gone longer without finishing .500.

Iowa, now 6-3 overall and 4-2 in the Big Ten, scored the first three times it had the ball enroute to a 30-0 halftime lead. Purdue, which couldn't crack Iowa's defense for a touchdown until the final minutes of the game, fell to 5-4 and 3-4.

Bohannon, running and passing effectively out of the shotgun formation, dashed 12 yards for a touchdown late in the first quarter and scored on a seven-yrd run at the end of the second period. Nichol booted field goals of 42 and 48 yards, Phil Blatcher scored on a one-yard run and defensive back Tracy Crocker fell on the ball in the end zone after a blocked punt for another touchdown.

Purdue's Scott Campbell, who passed for 516 yards against Ohio State last week, was not as effective against Iowa.

Clemson's Tigers escape 10-8 scare

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Jeff McCall's 7-yard run in the second period and Donald Igwebuike's 39-yard field goal in the third quarter capped Clemson's only two sustained drives and enabled the unbeaten, second-ranked Tigers to nose out eighth-rated North Carolina 10-8 Saturday in an Atlantic Coast Conference football showdown.

The Clemson defense, led by tackle Dan Benish, shut down the ACC's most prolific attack — which was bolstered by the return to partial duty of tailback Kelvin Bryant and quarterback Rod Elkins — without a touchdown and turned aside several North Carolina threats in the final period.

Clemson, 9-0 for the first time in 33 years, moved into sole possession of first place in the ACC with a 5-0 record. North Carolina, 7-2 overall, is 3-1 in conference play.

After spotting North Carolina a 3-0 lead on Brooks Barwick's 22-yard field goal early in the second period, the Tigers drove 81 yards in 14 plays. McCall's touchdown run at 8:06 of the period gave them a 7-3 lead which they never relinquished.

However, they needed Igwebiuike's field goal at 6:53 of the third quarter to stave off the Tar Heels before an overflow crowd of 53,611, the largest in the history of Kenan Stadium.

After Clemson took the lead, North Carolina twice pulled within two points. The first time was at 7-5 when linebacker Danny Barlow blocked a punt by Clemson's Dale Hatcher with 14 seconds left in the first half and it rolled through the end zone for a safety. Barwick kicked a 26-yard field goal with 30 seconds left in the third quarter to make it 10-8, but the Tar Heels wasted two glittering opportunities after that.

The first came when Clemson's Billy Davis fumbled a punt at his 37-yard line with 10:44 left to play and Dwight Parrish recovered for North Carolina. Three plays lost 6 yards, however, and the Tar Heels were forced to punt.

Sophomore quarterback starter Scott Stankavage, who gave way to Elkins in the first period and then returned when Elkins re-injured an ankle in the second quarter, passed the Tar Heels from their 20 to the Clemson 41 with 3:30 left. However, North Carolina elected to gamble on fourth-and-12 and a Stankavage pass was batted down by cornerback Hollis Hall.

Nebraska cans OSU

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Quarterback Turner Gill ran for two touchdowns and passed for one TD Saturday as 11th-ranked Nebraska cruised to a 54-7 victory over Oklahoma State in a Big Eight Conference football game.

Nebraska's first three drives in the opening period ended in two touchdowns, including 4-and 9-yard runs by Gill, and a field goal.

The Oklahoma State defense, ranked second in the nation before the weekend, stopped Nebraska in the second period.

But Gill connected with tight end Mitch Krenk for a 9-yard touchdown pass that gave the Cornhuskers a 24-0 lead at the start of the second half.

Oklahoma State's only successful offensive thrust came in the third quarter when wingback Ron Ingram capped an 80-yard drive with an 8-yard touchdown run. That broke Nebraska's streak of 5½ games without a touchdown by an opponent. The Cornhuskers had allowed only three field goals in that span.

Top ranked Pitt crushes Rutgers, 47-3

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Quarterback Dan Marino ran for one touchdown and threw for three more as No. 1-ranked Pittsburgh crushed Rutgers 47-3 in college football Saturday at Giants Stadium.

Marino, who completed 18 passes for 239 yards, hit fullback Wayne DiBartola with a 5-yard pass to give the undefeated Panthers a 7-3 lead in the second quarter.

The junior quarterback capped the next series with a 31-yard pass to tight end John Brown deep down the middle, seconds before the half.

Halfback Bryan Thomas sprinted 5 yards for a touchdown in the third quarter. Marino, who entered the game as the nation's fourth-ranked quarterback, sneaked over the middle for the fourth touchdown.

DiBartola dove 2 yards for Pitt's fifth touchdown in the fourth quarter, and Marino connected on a 30-yard touchdown pass play to flanker Barry Compton.

Halfback Marlon McIntyre completed the scoring on a 16-yard run.

Alex Falcinelli gave the Scarlet Knights their only points with a 26-yard first-quarter field goal.

The victory boosted Pitt's ecord to 8-0, while Rutgers fell to 5-4.

The Panthers relied heavily on Marino's pin-point passing, supplemented with a ground game led by DiBartola and Thomas, who ran for 105 and 168 yards, respectively.

The Pitt defense unsurpassed in the nation against the rush, held Rutgers to 48 yards on the ground, while the Panthers rolled up 315.

Rutgers' passing also was weak, totalling 113 yards. Ralph Leek, who lost his starting job to Keith Hudak, replaced Hudak in the final quarter after the sophomore quarterback completed just nine passes for 83 yards.

Falcinelli's first-quarter field goal capped a frustrating drive that started with good field position on Pitt's 35-yard line. The series was marred by a broken reverse that lost 4 yards, an incomplete pass and a blitz that forced a run by Hudak, who netted 3 yards.

Pitt lost a chance to score early when, on Rutgers' 15, Snuffy Everett fumbled the snap on an attemped field goal, recovered and ran, only to fumble again. This time the ball was recovered by Rutgers on its own 31.

On the ensuing drive, Rutgers moved to within 15 yards of the goal line, but Pitt defensive end Mike Woods recovered a fumble by running back Dwayne Hooper.

The Panthers' second touchdown was the turning point, Pitt Coach Jackie Sherrill said later.

Racing the clock as the half approached, the Panthers relied almost entirely on Marino's passing to march 81 yards in just 1:17. DiBartola ran 15 yards before connecting with Marino on a 4-yard pass play. Marino then hit Compton for 16 yards, flanker Dwight Collins for another 15 yards and, finally, he capped the series with his 31-yard touchdown pass to Brown.

THE '82 VOLVO DIESEL. IT OFFERS ECONOMY YOU CAN'T MEASURE IN GALLONS.

Roof racks optional.

True, it gets 29 37. But with the Volvo Diesel, high mpg's aren't the only blessing you'll count. Like all Volvos, it's built to be kept. Which means it provides the kind of comfort that won't make you feel restless no matter how many gas stations you pass. And performance that won't leave you embarrassed by the number of cars that pass you. In fact, considering its rugged construction, the only thing you may notice passing are the years.

So test drive the Volvo Diesel. Over time, the mileage you can get between fill-ups won't impress you nearly as much as the mileage you could get between cars.

K-State throws scare into Oklahoma, 28-21

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Quarterback Darrell Shepard uncorked fourth-quarter touchdown runs of 20 and 49 yards Saturday to rally No. 17 Oklahoma to a 28-21 victory over upset-minded Kansas State.

Kansas State, which upset then-No. 11 Iowa State a week ago, stunned the Sooners by jumping to a 21-0 lead in the second quarter. The Wildcats led at halftime 21-6 after recovering two on-side kicks. Kansas State thoroughly dominated the Sooners, who were 26-point favorites but stymied themselves with four turnovers and a rash of penalties.

Oklahoma got back in the game on two touchdowns by freshman Alvin Ross on a 4-yard run in the second quarter and a 12-yard burst in the third period. Shepard's 20-yard gallop made it 21-20 with 6:47 left, then a pass for a two-point conversion was tipped away by Phil Switzer.

Shepard shook two tacklers at the line and sped 49 yards for the winning touchdown with 2:51 remaining, then ran in the two-point conversion himself.

Kansas State marched 80 yards with the opening kickoff, with Mark Hundley scoring on a 1-yard run. After recovering an on-side kick, Hundley capped a 43-yard drive with another 1-yard touchdown dive.

James Robinson recovered an Oklahoma fumble seconds later and Losefatu Faraimo made it 21-0 with a 2-yard run.

Hurricanes blow over Florida State, 27-19

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Miami quarterback Jim Kelly, passing for 273 yards, engineered two fourth-quarter scoring drives, leading the 13th-ranked Hurricanes to a 27-19 football triumph over No. 14 Florida State Saturday.

The victory boosted Miami's record to 6-2 and snapped Florida State's 19-game winning streak in Doak Campbell Stadium. Florida State's record dropped to 6-3.

Danny Miller's 57-yard field goal lifted Miami into a 13-13 tie midway through the third quarter.

The Hurricanes then took command when linebacker Greg Brown blocked a 44-yard field-goal attempt by Florida State's Mike Rendina early in the final period.

Miami took possessimn at the Miami 44. Then, Kelly hit fullback Speedy Neal with a screen pass that went for 33 yards and connected for 17 yards to wide receiver Rocky Belk.

Halfback Smokey Roan ran 6 yards for a touchdown on the next play and Miller, who booted a 32-yard field goal in the first half, added the extra point for a 20-13 lead.

Miami got the ball back two plays later when safety Ronnie Lippett intercepted a pass by Rick Stockstill and returned it 15 yards to the Florida State 25.

Notre Dame hands Georgia Tech a slap

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Blair Kiel hurled two touchdown passes, including a Notre Dame record-setting 96-yard strike to Joe "Small Wonder" Howard, to lead the Irish to a 35-3 victory over Georgia Tech Saturday.

Kiel and Howard, a 5-foot-7, 163-pound freshman, also combined on a 58-yard touchdown pass in the second quarter, and John Mosley scored two touchdowns in the second half.

No. 6 Penn State rebounds in 22-15 win over NC State

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Ken Kelley and Harry Hamilton combined for a 51-yard touchdown pass off a fake punt to lead sixth-ranked Penn State over stubborn North Carolina State 22-15 Saturday in college football action.

N.C. State, 4-5, had taken a 9-7 lead on three field goals by Todd Auten.

After the Wolfpack defense stopped the Nittany Lions on their on 49, Kelley and Hamilton pulled off the fake. Kelley threw a short pass to Hamilton, who ran the rest of the way with 6:30 left in the third quarter. Ironically, both men play the hero position, or rover.

Wisconsin stays alive

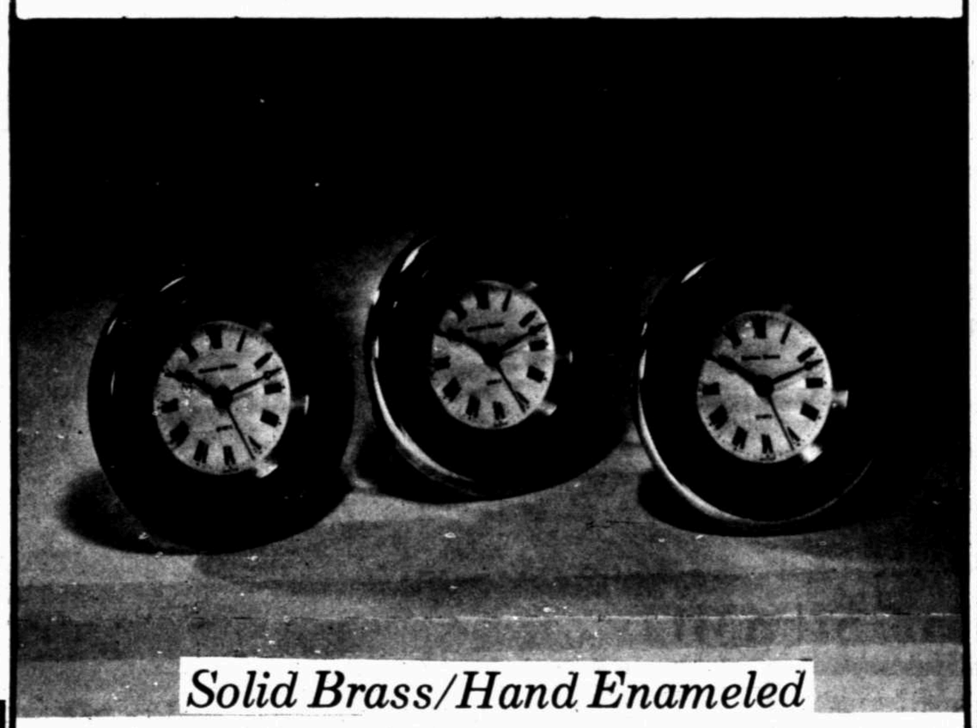

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Quarterback Jess Cole ran for one touchdown and passed for two others, including a 56-yard scoring strike to Michael Jones early in the fourth quarter Saturday, leading Wisconsin to a 28-7 Big Ten Conference football victory over Indiana.

The triumph lifted the Badgers to 5-2 in the Big Ten and 6-3 overall, keeping them in contention for the conference championship. The Hoosiers fell to 2-5 in the league and 2-7 for all games.

Cole's touchdown run, a seven-yard scamper midway through the third quarter, broke a 7-7 tie. The Badgers, who had been shut out by Indiana the past two years, scored again on their first possession of the fourth quarter.

Georgia nips Florida

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — All-American Herschel Walker scored four touchdowns, the last on a 1-yard dive with 2:31 remaining, as No. 4 Georgia overcame an early 14-point deficit and trimmed Florida 26-21 in a nationally televised college football game Saturday.

Walker's game-winning plunge capped a 95-yard drive on which he was the workhorse, carrying 11 times for 65 yards to erase a 21-20 Florida lead. The Gators went ahead early in the final quarter when Wayne Peace fired his second touchdown pass of the game, a 10-yarder to Spencer Jackson.

Walker, who ran for 190 yards on 45 carries to go over the 3,000-yard career mark in only 20 contests, also scored on a 4-yard run and hauled in two touchdown passes from Buck Belue covering 24 and 16 yards.!The 24-yarder came with only 31 seconds left in the half after Florida had built a 14-0 lead by striking twice for scores within a span of 1:54.

The first Gator touchdown came 5:31 before halftime, a 54-yard pass play from Peace to Steve Miller, who caught the ball behind the Georgia defense at the Bulldog 20.

A fumble by Ronnie Stewart on Georgia's first play after the touchdown was recovered by David Galloway at the Georgia 5 and James Jones plunged the final yard with 3:37 left in the half.

The victory was the sixth straight for Georgia lifting its record to 8-1 overall and 5-0 in the Southeastern Conference, gaining a tie for the lead with Alabama.

Florida fell to 5-4 and 2-3 in the SEC.

Walker's 47 carries broke the SEC record of 43 in a game he had shared with Louisiana State's Charles Alexander. His 192 yards lifted his career total to 3,117, fifth best in SEC history, as he surpassed former Tulane great Eddie Price, who had 3,095.

Sul Ross bites Tarleton State

ALPINE, Texas (AP) — Andrew Hill ran for 153 yards and a touchdown to lead Sul Ross to a 30-17 victory over Tarleton State in a Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Conference football game Saturday.

Mitch Pritchett contributed three field goals and three extra points to the Sul Ross effort.

Terry LeBlanc intercepted and ran 30 yards to set up a 7-yard pass from Larry Hill to John Watson for another Sul Ross score.

Tarleton scored on a field goal by Kevin Petty, a 31-yard pass from Bill Bayless to Floyd Beasley and a 1-yard run by Ricky Bush.

Sul Ross is 8-1 in conference play while Tarleton drops to 5-4.

NTSU falls to Auburn

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Auburn quarterback Joe Sullivan hit Ed West on a 42-yard touchdown pass play Saturday as the Tigers jumped to an early 17-0 lead and then turned sluggish in a 20-0 victory over North Texas State.

The Auburn victory before a homecoming day crowd of some 63,000 was highlighted by Al Del Greco's school record 45th straight extra point. A sophomore from Coral Gables, Fla., Del Greco has yet to miss an extra point in his college career.

Auburn, now 5-4, scored on its first possession when Sullivan hit West up the middle and built a 17-0 lead with less than 8 minutes gone in the game. That sent the Eagles of North Texas State reeling to their eighth loss in nine games.

Kentucky rally beats Vandy

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Andy Molls returned a punt 87 yards for a touchdown with 5:29 to play in leading Kentucky to a come-from-behind, 17-10 Southeastern Conference football victory Saturday over Vanderbilt.

Molls, a free safety, raced up the right sidelines from the Kentucky 13 to break a 10-10 tie. The 5-foot-10-inch, 186 pound, junior from Parma Heights, Ohio, rolled up 195 yards on six kick returns for the day to lift the Wildcats to their first SEC win of the year in four attempts and their second victory in eight games.

It was a frustrating game for the Commodores, who had scored 10 points the first two times they got their hands on the ball.

The first Vanderbilt score was set up when defensive end Steve Bearden recovered a fumble by Pete Venable on the Kentucky 30-yard line.

LCC ends longest losing streak

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Terry Drake rambled for 172 yards and two touchdowns as Lubbock Christian ended the NAIA's longest losing streak at 25 games by defeating McMurry 13-7 in a Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association game Saturday.

Drake gave Lubbock Christian its homecoming victory on scoring runs of 9 and 4 yards.

McMurry got its lone touchdown on a 15-yard pass from Darrell Harris to Randy Tarrant.

Lubbock Christian now is 1-8 and McMurry 3-6.

Howard Payne defeats SFA

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — Karl Cooper rushed for 207 yards, including an 80-yard touchdown dash, to lead Howard Payne to a 14-6 victory over Stephen F. Austin in a Lone Star Conference football game Saturday night.

After a scoreless first half, Royce Giddings caught a 28-yard touchdown pass from Howard Payne quarterback Ricky Shields.

Cooper logged the Yellow Jackets' final touchdown on his 80-yard run.

Howard Payne is 3-5 on the season and 1-4 in LSC play. Stephen F. Austin slips to 0-5 in conference play.

ACU defeats Sam Houston

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Wide receiver Quinton Smith caught 11 passes for a Lone Star Conference record 220 yards and one touchdown, and runningback Anthony Thomas ran for two other scores as Abilene Christian beat Sam Houston State 27-13 Saturday night.

Abilene Christian improved its record to 7-1 for the season and 4-1 in the LSC. Sam Houston dropped to 2-6 for the year and 1-4 in the conference.

The Wildcats scored on a 46-yard touchdown pass to Smith, with runs of 1 and 30 yards by Thomas and two field goals by Martin Perry.

SW Texas bombs Angelo State

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Donnie Williams rushed for two touchdowns and Mike Miller passed for another in a third quarter scoring burst to lead Southwest Texas to a 31-7 victory over Angelo State in a Lone Star Conference football game Saturday night.

Williams scored from three yards out in the third to break a 7-7 halftime tie. Miller, who rushed for 117 yards and passed for 146, scored later in the period. Williams added another touchdown on a 12-yard run later in the quarter.

Southwest Texas is 9-0 on the season and 5-0 in LSC play. Angelo State drops to 6-3 for the season and 3-2 in conference play.

Stanford rips Oregon St., 63-9

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — Darrin Nelson scored a school record five touchdowns and John Elway passed for three scores Saturday as Stanford ripped hapless Oregon State 63-9 in a Pacific 10 Conference football game.

The 5-foot-9 Nelson scored on runs of 80, 10, 3 and 1 yards and caught a 53-yard scoring pass from Elway. Nelson carried the ball 19 times for 190 yards and caught 10 passes for 107 yards.

Allen leads USC with 243 yards

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Southern California's Marcus Allen ran for 243 yards, increasing his season total to a major-college record 1,968, and scored three touchdowns as the third-ranked Trojans beat California 21-3 Saturday.

The Trojans' All-American tailback went 20 yards on a play late in the fourth period to surpass the NCAA single-season record of 1,948 yards set by Tony Dorsett in 1975. Earlier in the game, he broke the Pacific-10 season record of 1,875 yards set by Ricky Bell of USC in 1976.

Allen, whose seventh 200-yard rushing day of the season was marred by four fumbles, figures to reach the 2,000-yard mark next Saturday against Washington.

Southern Cal will take an 8-1 season record and 4-1 Pac-10 mark into the Washington game.

All three of Allen's touchdowns against Cal's Bears were on 1-yard dives, in the first, third and fourth periods. He carried the ball a career-high 46 times for his 243 yards.

Hawaii keeps on top in WAC

EL PASO — The University of Texas-El Paso Miners gave the Western Athletic Conference leading Hawaii Rainbow Warriors a slight scare in the second half before giving up the ghost in a 35-7 defeat.

Hawaii, 7-0 overall and 5-0 in WAC play with the win, got a first quarter touchdown from Anthony Edgar on an 82-yard run and added a second score when Gary Allen scored from three yards out for a 14-0 halftime score.

UTEP pulled to within seven early in the third quarter when Greg Adams scored on a two-yard run to cap a 69-yard drive. Scott Wecdell kicked the extra point. The rest of the scoring belong to Hawaii. Edgar then added a 47-yard TD run and Allen score on a three-yard run and a 62-yard pass from quarterback Bernard Quarles.

The loss dropped UTEP to a 1-8 record overall and 1-6 in WAC play.

UCLA stuns Washington Huskies, 31-0

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Quarterback Tom Ramsey fired two touchdown passes to wide receiver Cormac Carney Saturday as opportunistic UCLA rolled to a 31-0 Pacific-10 Conference victory over 16th-ranked Washington to keep the Bruins in the Rose Bowl race.

Ramsey, whose first two passes of the game were intercepted by Bill Stapleton, teamed up with Carney on scoring plays of 9 and 15 yards in the second quarter.

The triumph raised UCLA's Pac-10 record to 4-1-1 and its overall mark to 6-2-1. The Huskies fell to 4-2 in conference action and 7-2 for the season.

BYU wins by 63-14

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Brigham Young quarterback Jim McMahon threw seven touchdown passes and had more than 500 yards in the air en route to becoming the nation's career total offense record setter and whipping Colorado State 63-14 in Western Athletic Conference football Saturday.

McMahon's unofficial passing totals for the game put him well ahead of the four-year career total offense mark set by Purdue's Mark Herrmann last year.

Herrmann finished his career with 8,444 yards and MacMahon needed only 87 Saturday to pass that standard. He had 144 yards and three touchdown passes in the first quarter.

With more than 8,600 passing yards, and two games to go, McMahon is well within reach of Herrmann's four-year passing yardage record of 9,188.

In the process, the senior signal caller also set two other NCAA records — points responsible for and touchdowns responsible for. Both of those records were held by Joe Adams of Tennessee State.

McMahon also became only the fifth quarterback to have passed for more than 2,500 yards in two consecutive seasons. His 44 completions in the game was also an NCAA single-game record.

McMahon took BYU to an easy score on the first series.

Missing game warden causes concern

KENNY REDIN'S
Fin & Feather

Tragic events always fill the front pages of the nation's newspapers each and every day, but when outdoor events make headlines that's getting really bad. Especially when it pertains to the murder and disappearance of game wardens.

Game wardens, who's occupation is to protect the fish and game from outlaw poachers, doing us, as sportsmen a favor wind up dead and missing, this shows that there's a lot more crazy people out there than what we are reading about. This incident which we are about to relate to you happened in Idaho, but just as well could have happened in Texas and similiar incidents have happened over the years.

This article appeared in the "Reports section of the American Rifleman and the American Hunter in the October issues. If you read it, then that's good, because we need to find the man who slayed these game wardens. If you didn't see the article, then read this carefully and let's find the killer. The National Rifle Association is urging all of the nation's outdoor writers to print and reprint this article as much as possible. They, as well as myself, want this killer to be found and put away.

"Idaho game warden Conley Elms' body was discovered last January in the south fork of the Owyhee River two days after his murder. The body of Elms' companion, senior warden Bill Pogue has disappeared withouth a trace. Authorities have lllrned from an eyewitness the full story of the grisly murders, but like Pogue's body, all traces of the man waned for the cold-blooded killings have vanished in the vast, rugged plateaus and canyons of southwestern Idaho and northeastern Nevada.

According to the eyewitness account, 31-year-old Claude Lafayette Dallas Jr., a self styled mountain man who apparently rejected and and all authority, gunned down Pogue and Elms as they attempted to arrest him for game law violations. It was reported that Dallas had been camping for several months along a fork of the Owyhee ot the base of a remote canyon on the Idaho and Nevada border and that he had been poaching deer and taing bobcats out of season with illegally baited traps.

OFFICERS POGUE and Elms visited Dallas on January 5 at his campsite where they found considerable evidence of poaching. With Dallaw was another man, James Stevens, a local farmer who had just that morning packed in supplies for his friend. It was Stevens who later gave authorities the details of what happened.

Aware that Dallas could be hostile and potentially dangerous, the agents took the precaution of unloading the pistol that Dallas carried on his hip. They also disarmed Stevens. As Pogue kept a watchful eye on the two, Conley Elms proceeded to search Dallas' tent where he spotted two bobcat pelts. Upon being confronted with the illegal pelts, Dallas suddenly pulled a hidden pistol and from a combat stance at point blank range shot Pogue before he had a chance to react.

Dallas then spun around and shot Elms twice as he emerged from the tent. He turned back to a wounded Pogue, who was fumbling for his own revolver, and apparently fired two more shots.

Then, according to Stevens' report, Dallas took a .22-calibre rifle and very calmly, as if finishing off wouned game, proceeded to pump a built into each officer's head.

While later attempting to dispose of Elms' body, Dallas reportedly suggested to Stevens that they quarter the 290 pound game warden in order to pack him out of the area. But Stevens balked at the idea and Dallas then dragged Elms to the river and dumped him in.

WITH STEVENS' assistance Dallas transported Pogue to the tiny Nevada town of Paradise Hill. There Dallas borrowed another friend's pickup truck and proceededalone, driving into the desert to hide Pogue's body.

Dallas was last seen when the pickup's owner dropped him off in the desert 12 miles north of Winnemucca, Nev. There his trail vanished.

The events have launched a nationwide manhunt and have resulted in a reward of $20,000 for the killer's arrest and conviction.

But in the 10 months sine the crimes occured, authoritis have few leads at to where Dallas might be.

"He could be anywhere," said Owyhee County Sheriff Tim Nettleton, the chief investigator on the ease. "We're working on several lads. We'll catch him. There's no doubt about it.

"Dallas is not a loner," said Harry Capsul of the Idaho Bureau of Innestigation. "He's intelligent and adaptable. He could be in the Brooks Brothers suite in downtown Los Angeles or back up in the hills of some remote wilderness."

Wherever he is, authorities feel certain that Dallas is obtaining help from either friends or relatives.

Nettleton and Capaul both described Dallas as upredictable and rebellious.

"He feels that the rules and regulations just don't apply to him," Nettleton said.

DALLAS, WHO had previously been cited in Nevada for game law violations, reportedly vowed that he would never again be taken into custody.

"If it hadn't been Pogue or Elms," Capaul said, "it would have been some other law enforcement officer."

The murders have unnerstandably outraged members of the Idaho Department of Fish and game where both Pogue and Elms were well liked and highly respected.

The case has received a good share of exposure in various newspapers and magazines across the country. While authorities feel that this may have helped in developing leads, they are disturbed over the romantic portrayal of Dallas as a self-sufficient mountain man and a loner who shunned the normal restraints of society.

Their concern is shared by relatives of the slain officers. "Claude Dallas couldn't hold a candle to Bill Pogue and my younger brother. They were far better outdoorsmen than he could ever hope to be," said Mike Elms, a state game officer from Mountain Home, Idaho.

Pogue's younger brother Eddie, who has been pursuing the case on his own, scoffed at the depictions of Dallas as anything other than just "a thief and a poacher, and now a cold-blood ed killer."

Officers of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, which has been circulating wanted posters throughout the northwest, are administering the $20,000 reward fund. Those close to the case are hoping that if the reward gets high enough, someone who may be helping Dallas or who knows of his whereabouts will decide to turn him in.

The man needs to be caught and convicted!

Navy rolls Syracuse

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Halfback Eddie Meyers ran for 298 yards, scored four touchdowns and set a Navy career rushing record as the Midshipmen romped to a 35-23 victory over Syracuse Saturday.

The senior halfback scored on runs of 78, 32, 10 and 5 yards and broke the Naval Academy's single-game rushing record which he set in 1979 when he picked up 278 yards against Army.

Meyers' career total of 2,620 yards broke the old record of 2,582 yards, set by Cleveland Cooper in 1974.

The 35 points was the most Navy has scored this season, even though the Middies were playing without their first- and second-string quarterbacks, both of whom were injured last week against Notre Dame.

Junior quarterback Jeff Korn, who had been in for only 15 plays in the first eight games, guided the Middies to their sixth victory in nine games.

Navy was trailing 10-7 midway through the second period when Meyers began his touchdown binge with a 10-yard run that gave the Middies a 14-10 halftime lead.

Early in the third period, he raced 32 yards for a touchdown and added another on a 5-yard scamper five minutes later, to give Navy a comfortable 28-10 lead.

Holy Cross rips Army

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Andy Clivio scored a pair of touchdowns late in the first half as Holy Cross erased a 13-0 deficit and defeated Army 28-13 Saturday in college football.

Army's Gerald Walker scored a pair of touchdowns that enabled the Cadets to take an early lead, but his fumble gave Holy Cross its first opening.

Following a second Walker bobble, Holy Cross moved 37 yards in six plays with Clivio going the final 2 yards with just 2:38 remaining in the first half. Tony Melink added the first of four successful conversions.

With time running out in the half, a bad Army snap sailed over punter Joe Sartiano's head with John Andreoli retrieving for Holy Cross on the Army 3. Clivio took it in from there.

Holy Cross went ahead 21-13 on a 70-yard, 11-play drive with quarterback Dave Boisture scoring from 3 yards out on a keeper.

NM Lobos tie Utah

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Senior Robin Gabriel came off the bench Saturday to rifle a 33-yard touchdown pass to Robert Mitchell, rallying New Mexico to a 7-7 tie with heavily favored Western Athletic Conference co-leader Utah.

The tie could end up costing Utah's Utes in the title chase since they play one less league game than most of the other teams in the conference.

Utah, which went into the contest tied with Hawaii for the WAC lead, now is 4-0-1 in league play and 7-1-1 overall. New Mexico is 2-3-1 and 3-6-1 overall.

Utah placekicker Gil Alvarez, who booted a 42-yard field goal to beat San Diego State in the final minutes last week, was short on a 60-yard attempt as time ran out.

Utah scored first, going 68 yards in 12 plays with halfback Carl Monroe running in from 6 yards out with 1:09 left in the first half.

New Mexico's offense, booed throughout the first half by the hometown fans, finally got untracked when Gabriel replaced starter David Osborn midway through the third quarter.

Angels ink Bobby Grich to four-year contract

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Second baseman Bobby Grich says he wants to spend the rest of his baseball career with the California Angels. His signature on a new four-year contract with the American League club puts him in a good position to do just that.

"I want very much to finish my career with the Angels and, hopefully, I will contribute to a pennant or two," said Grich after agreeing to terms late Friday night. "Angel fans have been wonderful to me and they deserve a World Series ballclub. If we all play up to our potential, we may give it to them in 1982."

Grich and his agent, Jerry Kapstein, met for six hours Thursday with Angel executives Buzzie Bavasi and Mike Port. There were more negotiations Friday before agreement was finally reached. Terms were not announced.

Grich, who turns 33 in January, completed a five-year contract with the Angels at the end of the 1981 season and had filed for free agency. He figured to be one of the more sought-after free agents had he not signed with California.

He became the first California player ever to lead the AL in home runs this past season, finishing in a four-way tie for the top spot with 22 homers.

In addition, Grich led the league in slugging percentage with a mark of .513, hit .301 for the first time in his career and drove in 61 runs. In addition, he had a 21-game hitting streak, longest in the league.

Grich was sidelined because of a back injury most of his first season with the Angels.

An Apology from Jim Allega, president Allega Travel

To our many freinds and loyal clients who have been unable to reach us by phone for the past three weeks, we truly apologize. We are dependent on Southwestern Bell for our srevice, of which there has been very little during this period.

After having reported our phones out of order almost daily for this period, I paid a visit to Southwestern Bell's Midland office on November 4th. The receptionists, whose concern ranged from apathy to total disinterest, advised that the only office of Sothwestern Bell that could help me is in San Antonio.

This paid ad for this apology is just another way to let you know that we cared even though feel we suffered irreparable injury and losses. We are indeed sorry that we have been put into such a defensive position because of lack of telephone service, and Southwestern Bell's apparent lack of concern.

Pope to visit Canada in 1983

TORONTO (AP) — Pope John Paul II has tentatively agreed to visit Canada sometime in 1983, church officials say.

A spokesman for the Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops said the conference's past president, Archbishop Joseph McNeil, and his assistants repeated a long-standing invitation to the pope while in Rome a few weeks ago.

Spokeswoman Bonnie Brennan said the pope's convalescence after the attempt on his life earlier this year has disrupted his schedule of visits.

The visit to Canada could be set for the spring of 1983 or the following September, officials said.

DALLAS (AP) — A skyscraper-climbing acrobat was arrested Saturday after tackling the building that houses the office of fictional oil baron J.R. Ewing.

Dan Goodwin, 26, who climbed the Sears Tower in Chicago on Memorial Day, was arrested after reaching the top of the 56-story First International Building, which at 710 feet is the tallest in Dallas.

The building is used for the offices of Ewing Oil in filming the television series "Dallas."

Officers said the climb was first reported at 6:30 a.m. by a person who saw a man scurrying up the wall wearing a bright red and blue wetsuit, red webbed boots and gloves and a black helmet with American flag decals. The climber altered his path when police used a ladder to try to halt his ascent early in the journey, officials said.

Goodwin, of Kennebunkport, Maine, was arrested on charges of criminal trespass after reaching the top at 10:37 a.m.

Goodwin climbed the Sears Tower, the world's tallest building at 110 stories and 1,454 feet, in 7½ hours. Last week, he tried to climb Chicago's 1,127-foot John Hancock Center, which is 100 stories high, but gave up because his suction cups would not stick properly.

How about an encore?

The Statler Brothers and Brenda Lee entertain approximately 3,700 fans during Thursday's double-billed Chaparral Center concert. Both acts were well received by the audience, who wanted, and got, an encore out of each. See review on Page 11C.

BUYING HOME DOES PAY

Purchase of a house during high inflation makes financial semse. For example, you have a choice of putting $12,000 in a money market certificate at 15% or buyuing a home.

Let's assume you're in a 37%- tax bracket. If you bought the certificate, 12 months later you will collect your $12,000 plus $1,800 interest. Of the $1,800 interest, income taxes will take $666, leaving yopu with $1,134 or 9%. Purchasing power of the total $13.134 remaining has declined to $11,165130

Now, use the $12,000 as down-payment for a $60,000 house assumikng the same 15% appreciation, a 25 year mortgage for $48,000 at 15%.

Twelve month8s later the hjouse will be worth $69,000, the mortgage will be down to $47,808, and your cash equity will be $21,192. This means the same $12,000 has increased by 778%. This increase is not taxable until the house is sold and may not be taxable if reinvested in another house, or if the one-time tax exclusion is taken for those over 55.

Statler Brothers, Brenda Lee audience went home happy

The Statler Brothers and Brenda Lee performed at Chaparral Center Thursday for about 3,700 fans. The last time the Statlers came to town in March of 1980, the crowd was considerably larger.

That audience hit 5,400, Chaparral Center's largest seated crowd to date. The record was broken during the fall of 1980 for the Eddie Rabbitt, Mickey Gilley and Johnny Lee and The Urban Cowboy Band performance.

Perhaps the Crystal Gayle-Eddie Rabbitt concert at Ector County Coliseum last Wednesday had a negative effect on Thursday's crowd size. Two country-western concerts played that close together in towns that share audience members during times when escalating prices mean fans have to decide which one to attend can have a detrimental effect on the amount of tickets sold.

It didn't, however, have an effect on the crowd's enthusiasm.

From the audience response Thursday night, it is doubtful that any of the fans went away disappointed.

The Statler Brothers — Harold Reid, Lew DeWitt, Phil Balsley and Don Reid — have been awarded, to name a few, the Country Music Association's Vocal Group of the Year Award every year since 1972; the American Music Awards Country Vocal Group 1979-1981; and Grammy Awards in 1965 for Best New Country & Western Artist and Best Contemporary Performance by a Group and Best Country Vocal Performance by a Duo or Group in 1972.

Thursday they sang most of their old songs as well as some of their new ones, joking with the audience in their usual manner and entertaining the audience with their antics.

Once again, the Statlers proved that memories sell, with selections such as "Bed of Roses" and "Class of 57" drawing as much response as they always have. This show was as good as their last Chaparral Center performance.

Not only did the crowd enjoy the Statlers, but Miss Lee also was given a standing ovation, securing for the fans what they seemed to want — an encore.

Miss Lee first hit the national music scene at age 11 in 1956. Her first hits, "I'm Sorry," "All Alone Am I" and "As Usual," delivered with her throaty, emotion-filled voice, combined with her tiny size of 4-feet, 9-inches, earned her the nickname "Little Miss Dynamite."

Since then she has sold more than 80 million records, has had more double-sided hits than any other woman in popular music and has charted over 60 different titles in almost every musical category.

At one time, as Miss Lee said backstage, "I was the number one female vocalist in the world. At that time, getting married was a big deal; it was a hard blow to a career. When I married, it was a big decision.

"Especially after I had my first baby, I knew things would change. I had to give up a lot, but its been well worth it. I wouldn't trade my husband and my girls (Julie, 17, and Jolie, 12) for all the stardom in the world," she said.

While onstage, Miss Lee asked the audience if they wanted to hear her old songs. The response was a resounding yes. Thus she, like the Statlers, sang her old songs as well as her new ones. Her easy rapport with the crowd was evident; the audience really enjoyed her jokes and listening to her sing.

As she said backstage when asked about her career plans, such as movies or television, "All I've ever tried to do is better what I do the best and that is sing."

And Thursday night certainly proved that "Little Miss Dynamite" can still belt'em out.

Terry Bumpas casts a new pottery vase at his workshop in Hobbs, N.M. Bumpas, a professor at New Mexico Junior College, will present a pottery demonstration and slide show during the Midland Arts Association's November meeting today at 2:30 p.m. in the ceramics room at the Allison Fine Arts Building, Midland College. The public is invited to attend this free presentation.

Friends of Music sponsors third concert

The last of a three-part concert series sponsored by The Friends of Music will be presented in the sanctuary of First Christian Church, 1301 W. Louisiana Ave., at 2:30 p.m. today.

The program includes Baccherini's "Trio in C Major," performed by the Adonia Trio (Musical Feast), with Gloria Steelman and Karen Walker as violinists and Vilia Walter as cellist.

Next, the newly-formed choral group, Pro-Arte Chamber Singers of Texas, conducted by Dr. Stanley Engebretson, will sing selections by Schumann, Effinger and Nelhybel, featuring soloists Mary Ann Sikes, Debra Patchell, Drew Anderson, Jeff Hollomann and David Wilson.

The concert will conclude with flutist Martha Davis, pianist Nancy Knapp and clarinetist Don Grant performing works by Faure and Poulene.

This concert series has been presented in an effort to provide area residents with a Sunday afternoon of relaxed chamber music. The concert will last approximately an hour. A reception to meet the performers will follow its conclusion.

A free-will offering will be taken.

Gottschall sculptures displayed at Lionel Daury Restaurant

The works of sculptor Robert Gottschall will be on display and for sale at the Lionel Daury Restaurant, Plaza Shopping Center, Thursday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Gottschall, who now resides in Houston, has for the past nine years worked with marble, jade, bronze, soapstone and wood, composing poetic statements for each of his pieces.

Gottschall served for two years as a member of the governing board of the Texas Arts Alliance, for two years as a member of the board of directors for the Texas Arts and Crafts Foundation at Kerrville, and later with the Public Arts Commission at Aspen, Colo.

His works are owned by numerous art collectors throughout the U.S. His largest and best known piece to date is the black walnut sculpture titled "Freedom" which has been on exhibit at the state capitol of Colorado in the lieutenant governor's office.

The show is open to the public.

Shidoni Gallery exhibit at McCormick Gallery

The fourth annual exhibit by the Shidoni Gallery of Tesuque, N.M., is currently on display in the McCormick Gallery at the Allison Fine Arts Building at Midland College. The show closes Nov. 21.

The show includes more than 125 pieces of sculpture, both western and contemporary, by 25 artists. All pieces are for sale. A commission from all sales goes to Midland College to help defray expenses for the numerous exhibits shown there each year.

A number of sculptures will be displayed outdoors.

Works by Norman Boyles, Juan Dell, Dennis Silvertooth, Duke Sundt and Lloyd Woodbury are among those on display.

For this show the McCormick Gallery will be open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursdays, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Fridays, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays and 1 to 5 p.m. Sundays.

Cynthia Valentine guests with Symphony Chorale

The Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale performs its third subscription concert of the 1981-82 season at 8 p.m. Saturday in the First United Methodist Church in Odessa and 2:30 p.m. Nov. 15 in the First United Methodist Church in Midland.

Soloist with the chorale is soprano Cynthia Valentine. A native of Jacksonville, Fla., Miss Valentine will perform the "Laudate Dominim" from Mozart's "Vesperae de Dominica." She will also perform in a quartet of soloists, contralto Debra Patchell, tenor G.W. "Dub" Shepherd and bass Dwight Whitsett, in the Franz Joseph Haydn "Mass in D minor" — the "Lord Nelson Mass."

Miss Valentine received her formal training in voice at the University of North Florida, followed by coaching from Eileen Farrell and Roberta Peters. This marks her second performance in Midland-Odessa as she was a guest soloist with the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale in April 1980.

Thouvenel String Quartet members Gene Purdue and Teresa Fream will be soloists in the Bach "Double Concerto in D minor for Two Violins." The orchestra will be directed by Dr. Stanley Engebretson.

ARAMCO

PETROLEUM ENGINEERS

Earn up to 40 percent more, save more, vacation more as you take on new challenges with Aramco in Saudi Arabia.

Aramco, the principal oil company helping Saudi Arabia develop its energy resources, is constantly expanding oil sources and developing new fields.

You can make a personal contribution to this effort—and be well rewarded for it.

We have immediate openings in jobs which offer opportunities for rapid professional advancement.

If you have the following qualifications, we have the following openings now:

Production Engineers
You can demonstrate your expertise as you handle technical responsibilities for maintaining oil production, and gas and water injection rates in all existing facilities. The job includes coordination of the new development projects, review of operating performance, planning and monitoring of testing work, and provision of technical guidance in such specialist areas as corrosion, desalting/dehydration, well equipment, artificial lift production control and allocation.

Required: A Petroleum Engineering degree and a minimum of 7 years' experience.

Reservoir Engineers
Challenging jobs now being filled in: Reservoir Management, Reservoir Simulation and Reservoir Description.

1. Reservoir Management: You will work on current and future reservoir development, well completions and the evaluation of past, present and future performance. Aramco operates 150 reservoirs in 45 major oilfields.

2. Reservoir Simulation: You will use specialized programs for reservoir performance analysis, surface and subsurface fluid flow and well testing. Advanced modern software and hardware are available for all data-handling requirements.

3. Reservoir Description: You will use all formation evaluation techniques, including computerized well log processing. Drillstem test and buildup analysis, and core analysis to determine producing characteristics of new and established reservoirs.

Required: A Petroleum Engineering degree and a minimum of 5 years' experience.

Competitive compensation and benefits
Aramco pays a competitive base salary and a cost-of-living differential that equalizes living expenses between Saudi Arabia and the United States. In addition, Aramco pays an expatriate premium of 40 percent on the first $30,000 of base salary and a 20 percent premium on the next $20,000. And there is an outstanding combination of benefits: long vacations, comfortable housing, abundant recreation and an excellent school system.

Saudi Arabia bonus
Newly hired North Americans for Aramco in Saudi Arabia receive a special bonus. It equals 10 percent of your annual base salary, up to $5,000.

To arrange a private, completely confidential interview, call Bob Shannon at our 24-hour line any day: (713) 750-6965. If you wish, call toll-free: 1-800-231-7511 between 7 A.M. and 4 P.M., Monday-Friday, Central time.

If you prefer, send your résumé in full confidence or write for more information to: Aramco Services Company, Mail Code MRT1108TA03A, P.O. Box 53607, Houston, Texas 77052.

*The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 12.5% for 90% loan-to-value. Interest will be charged at the most recent six-month Treasury Bill rate plus 3.5% rounded to the highest 1/8 of 1%, but not to exceed the maximum rate allowed by law. Payments on GPAM mortgages are graduated so as to increase 7.50% each year for the remaining four years. At the end of the first five year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 3.5. The 7½% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan.
ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 13.25% ON 90% LOANS.

*Variable Rate Mortgage interest rates may increase or decrease. Payments may change accordingly.

For little Maria, High Sky Girls Ranch is home.

A challenge to care...

High Sky Girls Ranch begins building project

THE CHALLENGE: The children of today and tomorrow.

For almost 20 years, High Sky Girls Ranch has been dedicated to the task of caring for girls who need a home. More than 350 girls have called the ranch "home" these past 18 years.

Today, additional requests for this care are received at the rate of 20-25 per month.

"Drastic changes in our society have delivered several rude blows to the American way of life these past few decades," said David Maley, director. "Disintegrating families; single parents unable to cope; high unemployment; poor housing; and increasing abuse of children, women and elderly. Of course, those who have been hurt most by all of this are the young," he said.

"Providing a 'home' requires much more than food, clothing and a place to sleep," continued Maley. "The professional staff of the Girls Ranch strives to provide a quality program of care to effectively meet each girl's unique and individualized needs in all areas of her life."

MEETING THE CHALLENGE: A proposed expansion program includes the following to be completed over the next five years:

A Library-Learning Center.
Three cottages, each serving 10 additional girls.
Grocery commissary and clothing room.
Maintenance shop building.
A recreation building.
Necessary site and road work.
Additional on-campus staff housing.

According to Maley, these capital additions and improvements will enable the ranch to essentially double the number of girls served—increasing the capacity from its present 30 to a new capacity of 56-60.

PROPOSED COST? $1,350,000.

BACKGROUND: High Sky Girls Ranch is a non-profit, residential, child-caring agency established to provide care for Texas girls who can not live with their natural families. Founded in 1963 by private citizens, the ranch is licensed by the Texas Department of Human Resources to care for 30 girls, ages 6 to 18 years.

Approximately 15 percent of the operational funding for the ranch program comes from state and federal sources, such as social security payments, the Aid to Families With Dependent Children program, and from parental support. Another five percent is earned by donations from the Fraternal Order of Eagles who has supported the ranch as a national project since 1965.

For the remaining 80 percent, High Sky Girls Ranch depends upon private gifts and donations from interested individuals and groups.

The ranch is governed by a volunteer board consisting of 30 community, business and professional people. Board members may serve two consecutive three year terms or a total of six years.

THE PROGRAM: "Our staff strives to provide a quality program of care to effectively meet each girl's needs in all physical, psychological, educational and spiritual areas of their lives," said Maley. "Individual, group and family counseling are provided. The girls attend school in the Midland school district and take full advantage of its resources. In addition, we have on-campus tutoring and remedial reading programs which are conducted in conjunction with the school district.

"A general atmosphere of understanding, care and resolving family problems and conflicts is the goal of our counseling staff," he said.

THE EXPANSION PROGRAM: Major cost of the program will go to the cottages and library-learning center.

Each of the three proposed cottages will contain approximately 4,600 square feet of living space and house a maximum of 12 girls, plus the child-care staff. Each cottage will be distinctive in design and appearance both internally and externally s that an institutional environment can be avoided and maximum effort made to provide a family-like setting.

Each girl will share a room with another girl and have an opportunity to "individualize" the room with her own pictures, posters and decorating ideas. Bathrooms, large enough to accommodate four girls, are situated between the two bedrooms. Meals in the cottage aare served family-style so the kitchen and dining areas are designed to enhance this atmosphere. The large den-living area is flexible to serve many functions, whether it be a cottage meeting, a relaxed game or a special study area. A small formal living room will serve for quiet visits with family, friends or visitors. The laundry room, pantry and storage areas have been designed to obtain maximum usage from minimal space.

Staff quarters include a living room, two bedrooms and a bath for the homeparent couple and their children. A separate bedroom and bath are available for the relief homeparent and can double as a guest room for the cottage. A double carport and a patio play area complete the cottage plans.

"We believe that this cottage plan recognizes the importance of the individual living in a group setting and emphasizes a quality home-life and family-unit privacy essential to the overall goals of the ranch," said Maley.

The multi-purpose Library-Learning Center, when completed, will be the center of all campus activity. It is designed to be energy and space efficient and will include a library/storm shelter, study area, study cubicles, counseling area, administration space, fund raising and developmental areas, guest or staff apartment, High Sky historical room, child-care library and more.

The Library-Learning Center is designed to be a multipurpose facility.

A homelike atmosphere is emphasized at the ranch, according to director David Maley. Girls 6-18 years of age are referred to the ranch by parents, the Department of Human Resources and Juvenile Probation and other private sources such as churches and families.

Christian Women's Club has meeting

Holiday decorating tips given

By WANDA MOUTON
Lifestyle Editor

"Tis the season to be very busy," said Rita Smith, artistic designer from Legacies Unlimited who spoke on "Decorating Your Holiday Table" at Wednesday's luncheon program of the Midland Christian Women's Club.

Approximately 153 women attended the monthly meeting which featured Ms. Smith; Paula Cahoon of Midland who presented musical entertainment; and Judy Amen of Denver, Colo., a speaker, wife and mother.

"From now until Dec. 26, get on your roller skates and get rolling," said Ms. Smith. "There's really not all that much time to prepare for the holidays."

She said that utilizing items sitting on one's closet shelves or in the attic is the best way to use creativity and reflect personalities in holiday decorating.

"Wreaths, centerpieces and other holiday decorations should reflect the interests of you and your family," she said.

"For example, if your child loves skiing or sledding, put together a wreath using this theme."

Ms. Smith demonstrated several wreaths and centerpieces which she had created. One wreath followed a sugarplum theme in colors of pink, blue and yellow. "For parents or grandparents, make a simple wreath in basic holiday colors of red and green, but place two dolls in rocking chairs on them for a final touch," she said.

Ms. Smith also showed the mechanics of making a centerpiece, beginning with a board base. A pumpkin filled with dried flowers and pyracantha was one example. She said that this year, antique corner baskets are popular, as are centerpieces using a duck or deer theme.

"If you have animal statues sitting in your home, decorate them with gaily colored ribbon," she added.

Judy Amen tells her story

It was through a series of hardships that Judy Amen learned that God is "my refuge and my strength," she told members of the Midland Christian Women's Club Wednesday at Midland Country Club.

"He gave me a challenge to be God's woman—and it took years, but I finally accepted that challenge," she said. And she challenged the group to also be "God's women."

Mrs. Amen, a speaker, wife and mother from Denver, Colo., said that her learning process began when her husband and she first married. "Those of you who have helped build a house or seen it built will understand this," she said. "You don't build a house on a weak foundation. And a marriage relationship works the same way. A man and woman doesn't build their relationship on a weak foundation.

"My husband and I had not begun to build our foundation upon Jesus Christ," she said. "It was built on human love and emotion—and that's not enough.

"When I met my husband, he was handsome, smart, sensitive—all those good adjectives. But after our marriage, we both soon learned that we weren't perfect—and those hairline cracks began to appear," she continued.

"My husband was away a lot and I found that being a wife and mother wasn't enough. Our family was growing, we moved into a bigger house in a new neighborhood, and met new friends.

She said that, at that point, she was ready for something new because she felt something missing in her life. A friend invited her repeatedly to go to a Bible study and she finally accepted.

"There, I met lively, happy women just like you," she told the Midland audience. "They kept referring to Jesus Christ as their very best friend. And I knew I wanted to be like them.

She learned then that she was a sinner, but that she had been forgiven for her sins. "I eagerly began to read the scriptures, and my belief came to a front not long after that," said Mrs. Amen.

Her husband lost a power struggle in his company and found himself on the streets without a job, paying for a new home and supporting a family of four.

If that wasn't enough, two doctors then diagnosed her huband as having a brain tumor.

"We thought we had it all—a good family, a nice home—even a country club membership," said Mrs. Amen. "And then it all fell apart."

"Our friends were uncomfortable with the situation, so they didn't call us. It was just before Thanksgiving and it seemed everyone was preparing for a happy holiday but us.

"We thought all was lost. But one morning I woke up, walkd into my kitchen, sat down and memories of that first Bible study came flooding back. I then realized what a sinner I had been and asked for forgiveness.

"That was 15 years ago," continued Mrs. Amen. "My husband went into the hospital the next day for x-rays prior to exploratory surgery. The doctors had already determined that the tumor had gone down into my husband's spinal column. But after those x-rays, they came to me and said, "'Judy, we could find no sign of the tumor.'"

"It was amiracle, but I knew it was provided by God," she said.

"We had to start all over, but God gave me the courage to support my husband and start the long haul.

"And it was all given back to me five and a half years ago when my husband joined me in the family of God."

In addition to Mrs. Amen's speech and the presentation by Rita Smith on decorating for the holidays, Paula Cahoon presented several musical numbers for those attending, including "Bless the Beasts and the Children." She was accompanied on the piano by Susie Roberts.

The Midland Christian Women's Club was organized 10 years ago. The national clubs are unique in that there is no membership or dues. All who attend are encouraged to invite friends, neighbors and business and professional associates to an inspirational and relaxing occasion. Attendance is by reservation.

Councils, clubs and couples' clubs endeavor to perpetuate good will in the community and work in harmony with local churches.

The local group hosts a luncheon every month, and a prayer coffee on the third Wednesday of each month.

Biblical publications are also made available to the organization.

Rita Smith, left, Margaret Marcum, center, and Syl Hampton display just a few of the items which will be available at the Theta Charity Luncheon and Bazaar to be held from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Thursday in the Midland Girl Scout Program Center, 901 W. Dengar St. The event, which will benefit a local charity, is open to the public.

Theta charity luncheon, bazaar set

The Theta Charity Luncheon and Bazaar will be held from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Thursday in the Midland Girl Scout Program Center, 901 W. Dengar St.

The bazaar will feature the work of local artisans. Studio Plus will display functional pottery and bead jewelry by Tanya Godfrey, toys and Christmas ornaments made by Ramah Bosecker, Sylvia Hampton's custom jewelry designs and sculpture and weavings from Beth Buster.

Margaret Marcum will have her original watercolor paintings available, while Sherry Hewett will create special silk flower arrangements.

Personalized items of everything from bows and barretts to riding horses and Christmas ornaments are the speciality of Vicky Chase.

The Canopy will provide informal modeling of holiday fashions, while the luncheon of chicken crepes is served.

Rita Smith will show her Christmas Potpourri designs and Ruth McFarland and Ann Williams will have a wide selection of colorful fabric baskets.

Custom children's fashions and handmade quilts are the specialty of Paula Ramsey.

The Bradford Co. has the Fritz and Floyd Collection of brass, as well as ceramic items.

Pettiets Christmas Store will have custom Christmas trees and decorations.

The public is invited to attend. There is no admission fee for the bazaar. The luncheon is $7. Proceeds will benefit a local charity.

A special Christmas at Williamsburg

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas at the Colonial Williamsburg Restoration in Virginia — not as we know the holiday today, but as it might have been celebrated by 18th-century Virginians.

The restoration, a recreation of that era of the 18th century when Williamsburg was the capital of Virginia, has had seasonal decorations since 1939. Today, it is well-known for its arrangements of natural materials and live greens which adorn its 18th-century homes, shops and public buildings, and its 19th-century Carter's Grove plantation, just outside the historic area.

Libbey Hodges Oliver, supervisor of the flower section at Colonial Williamsburg, said she and five assistants had been knee-deep in natural materials for the decorations all fall. Anyone who would like to create similar decorations at home should also start early to collect and arrange the dried and natural materials, she added.

"Except for some styrofoam and floral wire (which do not show), the decorations make use of nothing that might not have been available locally during the 18th century," according to Ms. Oliver.

The restoration does not claim the decorations are authentic since "there is really no firm historical record of precisely how Williamsburg families did decorate their homes for the holiday," despite considerable research on the subject, added Ms. Oliver.

Nevertheless, some information about past Christmas customs of the area may be inferred from what is known about past celebrations.

"From contemporary accounts we can say that celebrations were usually marked by a more liberal use of candles. There was considerable visiting, and dances, fox hunts and gunpowder salutes were typical in wealthy Virginia cities," explained Ms. Oliver. It seems certain that colonists collected native materials, making use of the typical architectural ornamentation of the day — swags, garlands, plaques and wreaths — to celebrate the season, she added.

Today, arrangers prepare numerous large wreaths of fresh greens and locally-occurring fruit such as apples and pomegranates (which were grown in Virginia in the 18th century). They also use oranges and lemons which were imported in those days.

"Here at Williamsburg, pine cones, cotton bolls, okra pods and lotus pods as well as American holly, boxwood and Southern magnolia leaves are common, so we also use these materials in our decorations," she said.

There are, however, no bows on the wreaths.

"Ribbon was imported and probably too rare and expensive to use in this way, although we do have some ribbon on a wreath at the milliner's shop," she said.

Colonial table decorations did not include flowers, according to Ms. Oliver. Instead, tables were laid in a rigidly symmetrical fashion with containers of fruits and nuts brought in as both the dessert course and table decoration at the same time.

The liberal use of pineapples in the decorations seemed surprising since pineapples were hardly likely to be a crop in the Virginia area. Ms. Oliver explained that pineapples — the symbol of hospitality — were being grown in hothouses in England and could have been imported into Virginia.

Accounts of the day indicate there was considerable trading back and forth of plant material and seeds. "We know the Virginians sent goldenrod and dogwood back to England and received herbs, pea and cabbage seeds and bulbs of all kinds from the old country," she said.

According to Ms. Oliver, visitors asked so many questions about how to duplicate the decorations they saw that there are now several day-long workshops in the fall where about 40 participants at a time learn how to recreate them.

Parent Rally to be held by PTA

Midland Freshman High Parent Teacher Association (PTA) is sponsoring a Parent Rally Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

The event will begin in the school cafeteria.

Featured speakers are to be Doc Dodson, Midland High School trainer, and Steve Partlow, Midland area Young Life director.

Information pertinent to all parents of MFHS students will be presented by these community leaders. Plan to attend.

Smoking and hearts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some segments of the general public do not know there is a relationship between smoking and heart disease, according to a national medical publication.

Internal Medicine News, citing government findings, says nearly one-third of Americans are unaware of the dangers of smoking cigarettes, despite increasing scientific documentation of the health consequences.

Millions of hysterectomies unnecessary

By HARRY NELSON
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — As many as 500,000 of the 3.5 million hysterectomies performed on reproductive-aged women in the United States between 1970 and 1978 were done for questionable reasons, an analysis by the Centers for Disease Control has disclosed.

Dr. Joel Greenspan, an epidemiologist at the federal center in Atlanta, reached his conclusion after looking at the records of a representative group of some 20,000 of those cases.

At least 5 percent — and as many as 15 percent — of the hysterectomies were done for reasons that do not appear to be justified, Greenspan told the annual meeting of the American Public Health Association under way this week at the Los Angeles Convention Center.

Example of questionable reasons for doing the surgical procedure, which removes the uterus, included a number of benign diseases of the cervix or neck of the uterus, benign diseases affecting the ovaries or the fallopian tubes, and polyps on the cervix or in the uterus.

Hysterectomies on women of reproductive age — 15 years to 44 years — account for about half of all the hysterectomies done in the United States, the physician said.

According to the study, the rate for doing hysterectomies varied sharply from one part of the country to another. The highest — 11.5 per 1,000 women of reproductive age — was in the South. That was more than double the rate in the Northeast — 4.5 per 1,000. In the West, the rate was 7 per 1,000.

One in four of the vaginal hysterectomies had one or more complications, Greenspan said. Among women who had the abdominal type hysterectomy, the complication rate was 40 percent.

Complications included fever, surgery, blood transfusions, and readmission to a hospital for further treatment. In some cases, death resulted.

"Women should be informed of these risks," the physician told a news conference Tuesday.

Lifestyle guidelines

The following are suggested guidelines for publication of stories in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram:

Information for our Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday; or two days before publication in a daily paper.

Engagement announcements must appear at least four weeks before the wedding date. Wedding stories must be submitted within a week of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials should include the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. The Reporter-Telegram has forms for engagement and wedding announcement stories.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons living within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

Only the bride's picture will be used with both the engagement and wedding announcement.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of pictures and stories.

Answering problems

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — We moved into our house several months ago. We used the fireplace in the living room for the first time a week ago. In less than five minutes, we had to put out the fire because smoke was curling out into the room. Can you tell us what causes this and what we can do about it?

A. — A fireplace which has what is called a poor draft may need cleaning. Have it looked into before you light another fire. Sometimes a buildup of creosote in the chimney can be seen by opening the damper and using a mirror to see upwards. When such a chimney is cleaned, it often permits the fireplace to draw properly. But this is only one of several possible reasons for your problem. It just may be the fireplace is not properly built and that it has never worked since it was installed or the house built. Another possibility is that something on the outside, such as an overhanging tree, may be causing a down draft. There are certain ways to correct the failure of the fireplace to draw properly, including the use of a commercial draft-inducer or a piece of material to cut down the size of the opening. You may have to call in a professional to find the exact cause of the trouble.

Q. — For years I have cleaned the inside of my oven with baking soda and water. Now that I have a microwave oven, can I use the same cleaning mixture?

A. — Yes. Unplug the oven before doing the cleaning. Apply the mixture with a sponge and be sure to rinse well and wipe dry.

Q. — Our kitchen faucet leaked for several weeks. It has since been fixed, but the constant dripping left stains on the bottom of the sink. I used a cleansing powder on them, but it only lightened them a little. Is there any way to get these marks off? They look somewhat like rust.

A. — They probably are rust, which may have formed in very old water pipes and which ordinarily you do not see. In any case, use one of the rust-removing solutions. Be sure to rinse well after the stains are gone.

(Leaky faucets, balky toilet tanks, clogged drains and dripping pipes are among the subjects discussed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Make Simple Plumbing Repairs," available by sending 50 cents PLUS a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Preemies lack success

Some pre-term babies may weigh as much as 5½ pounds and some full-term infants as little as 5. The difference is that the full-termers are physically mature enough to breathe and suck normally shortly after birth while the pre-termers aren't.

Anniversary scheduled

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Lovell

BROWNWOOD — Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Lovell of Brownwood, formerly of Monahans, will be honored on their 50th wedding anniversary with an open house from 2 to 4 p.m. Nov. 21 in the home of Mrs. Billy Graham in Brownwood.

Children of the couple are Mrs. Graham of Brownwood, Mrs. Joe A. Neill of Midland and Mrs. Terry Weatherford of Temple. They have four grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Hostesses to the party will be the daughters of the couple and a granddaughter, Mrs. Patrick White of Brownwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Lovell were married Nov. 21, 1931, in the First Christian Church of Cisco. She is the former Lila Odell Wharton, and was a member of the Monahans Baptist Church 26 years. Mr. Lovell has been active in drilling and pumping oil wells. They have lived in West Texas for most of 50 years.

Princess Diana dazzles House

LONDON (AP) — A dazzling Princess of Wales attended her first full state occasion this week, seated at her husband's side as Queen Elizabeth II formally opened a new session of Parliament.

The first Princess of Wales in 70 years to attend the glittering annual ceremony, Diana joined Prince Charles, her husband of three months, in the procession from Buckingham Palace.

They rode to Parliament in the Glass Coach that carried them to St. Paul's Cathedral for their wedding, and were joined by Charles' sister Princess Anne and her husband Capt. Mark Phillips.

In a white fur coat over a white satin dress, a diamond tiara crowning her short blonde har, 20-year-old Diana exchanged smiles with Charles, 32, as they sat at the queen's right hand before the assembled ermine-robed dukes and duchesses, peers, bishops and judges in the House of Lords.

During the 10-minute ceremony the monarch read out the government's plans for the coming legislative year.

Altrusans, from left, Jean Reid, Lois Carter and Oralia Corrale, exhibit some of the items to be sold at the annual Mall Sale Nov. 14 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Dellwood Mall. Proceeds from the event will go to support the club's community service projects. Mrs. Reid is chairman of the Community Service Committee.

Birthday observed

Highlight of a recent meeting of the Altrusa Club of Midland, Inc., in the Midland Hilton was the celebration of the club's 33rd birthday.

Three charter members who are still active in the club are Annie Ford, Ada Phillips and Caroline Keisling.

Beverly Dyer presented the program and introduced Ms. Keisling, who told members and guests about Altrusa's role in organizing the Friends of the Library, which was instrumental in starting the Midland public library.

Past presidents of the club honored were Ms. Phillips, Loleta Guffey, Thelma Gardner, Ms. Keisling, Lois Carter, Mary Alice Tidwell, Carol Hastings and Barbara Culver.

Perfect attendance awards were presented to Ms. Dyer, Tup Ferguson, Myrtlene Bearden, Ms. Gardner, Ms. Guffey, Ms. Hastings, Ms. Keisling, Jean Reid and Ms. Tidwell.

Ms. Hastings, president, presided. Mary Ritchie reported on the Altrusa district conference held in Houston. The theme was "Leadership." She said the Midland club was awarded a certificate for the second largest club contribution to the F.F.V.A. and a certificate for the second largest member contribution to the F.F.V.A. This is Altrusa's fund which helps women qualify and find jobs in vocational fields.

Attending the conference from Midland were Ms. Ritchie, Ms. Bearden, Pauline Simmons, Ms. Ferguson, Ms. Tidwell and Ms. Hastings.

Ms. Reid, community service chairman, reported the Mall Sale will be held from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday in Dellwood Mall. Items to be sold include knives, hammers, Christmas decorations and miscellaneous household items. There also will be a bake sale. Proceeds will go to support the club's community service projects, which include the Lucy Mashburn Woman of the Year awad, Vial of Life and Banana Bingo.

Long-term study done on infant crib death

By DON BRANNING
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — The infant crib death rate soars to its height following peak winter carbon monoxide pollution.

That's one of the findings of a long-term study done here of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, commonly known as crib death, by researchers at four institutions. The SIDS study has isolated possible characteristics in the 7,000 babies who die in their sleep in the United States every year.

And it has pointed to factors that may create mild hypoxia — shortage of oxygen — which causes those babies to work harder to breathe in the weeks or months preceding their deaths.

Babies believed to be at greater risk of dying without apparent cause also have different sleep patterns from normal babies and faster heartbeats and respiration rates.

In the Los Angeles study, subsequent brothers and sisters of infants who died of SIDS were monitored in their sleep. They were believed to be at greater risk of sudden death in their sleep than other children. Tracings of their physiology in sleep were analyzed at the Brain Research Institutes of the University of California at Los Angeles.

The study analyzed air pollution conditions during the deaths of 693 infants who died suddenly between 1974 and 1977. It also monitored fetal heart rates of subsequent brothers and sisters of SIDS victims.

Dr. Toke Hoppenbrouwers, who was in charge of the project, said there was a seasonal increase in the sudden deaths of the infants in the seventh week following the annual winter peaks of carbon monoxide and other pollutants. Babies who fall victim to the Sudden Infant Death Syndrome usually die when they are two to six months old.

Hoppenbrouwers, who conducted the project with pediatrician Dr. Joan Hodgman, said the pollution study also found that SIDS infants who were born in months of low pollution lived longer than SIDS babies born in the high-pollution months. And SIDS babies born in a district with low pollution lived longer than SIDS babies born in a high-pollution district.

Neighborhood watch: Weapon against crime

By DONALD ROBINSON
(Special From Reader's Digest)

Last year the national crime rate was up nine percent over 1979, with almost a third of all Ameri-can households experiencing some type of crime. Today, Americans are reacting: According to the National Sher-iffs' Association, an estimated six to 10 million citizens are presently participating in anti-crime programs such as the Neighborhood Watch groups.

What are they? How do they work? Are they effective against streetwise felons? A Reader's Digest special report:

For more than two months, a vicious youth gang which came to be known as Wolfpack I had terrorized senior citizens of Oakland, Calif. The members beat an 85-year-old woman so savagely she had to be hospitalized. They tortured a 65-year-old woman with a flaming newspaper, although she had already revealed where she had hidden her savings. They robbed, beat and bound another 70-year-old woman, then shoved her dog into the lighted kitchen oven.

The gang had tortured and robbed 18 elderly people, among other victims in Oakland. Finally, one day, a resident reported to police that a hysterical elderly woman was wandering in the street. The police were on their way immediately and soon discovered that the woman and her husband had been beaten and robbed and their car stolen.

In finding the stolen car, officers also rounded up six Wolfpack members. They turned out to be responsible for the reign of terror.

Law-enforcement officials have called this incident an excellent example of the importance of the citizen's role in stopping crime. Today, over 35,000 residents of Oakland and San Francisco are participating in volunteer anti-crime programs. Oakland, for example, has more than 1350 crime watch groups; San Francisco, 800.

They have proved especially effective against burglary. Lt. Frank Jordan, in charge of the crime prevention education unit of the San Francisco Police Department, claims that active groups reduce the number of burglaries by 5000 a year.

There is no limit to who may participate in these crime-prevention programs. After several elderly residents were mugged in the Diamond district of Oakland, a group of 25 senior citizens organized their own patrol. Wearing distinctive yellow jackets and carrying two-way radios and shriek alarms, they now patrol a 12-square block area. Walking in pairs, they escort elderly neighbors to community centers, recreation centers and churches.

Recently, Hazel Manica, 67, saw a mugger grab the purse of an elderly woman. She pulled out her walkie-talkie, reported the crime to the base station while continuing to shadow the purse-snatcher from a distance. In minutes, the police had handcuffs on him.

Prodded out of apathy by sky-rocketing crime rates, the numbers of neighborhood crime-watch volunteers have increased dramatically all across the country:

Detroit has one of the best organized - and most effective - programs in the nation. It was inaugurated in early 1977 in the midst of a crime wave.

As a target area, police selected the 155-block Crary-St. Mary's section. Its more than 12,500 residents include professional people as well as skilled and unskilled laborers. Statistics showed crime, especially burglaries and street robberies, on the increase. A team of four uniformed officers went into the district to ring doorbells and ask for active citizen support.

Results were spectacular. The officers enrolled 150 of the 155 blocks into the program with a total of 9680 active participants. In the first two years of the program, serious crime in the area was reduced by about half.

Once a group qualifies to become a crime-watch block - at least 50 percent of its households must be actively involved - the city posts large signs at the corners as a warning to street criminals.

In 1973, two New York City policemen, Sgt. Gary Messina and Det. Frank Favilla, approached officials at Citibank with an idea. Result: the enthusiastic sponsorship by the bank of a Civilian Radio Motor Patrol made up of cabbies and bus drivers. It began with 35 taxis. Now it encompasses some 13,000 radio-equipped taxis, buses, limousines, delivery trucks, tow trucks, even harbor boats.

All told, some 150,000 New Yorkers are today participating in assorted citizen-volunteer crime-watch programs. According to Richard Shapiro, director of New York City's Participation Programs, the volunteers have cut burglaries 41 percent in some communities.

Fairfax County, Va., a suburb of Washington, D.C., has nearly 100 highly trained neighborhood-watch groups including citizen patrols.

Bernard Clayton unfolds pastry's subtle secrets

Pastry expert writes on tough subject

By ANNE CRUTCHER
The Washington Post

Bernard Clayon Jr., tall, lean and bespectacled, looks like the sort of man who would write books about politics or literature or the ancient Sumerians. Baseball, even. But pie?

So much for appearances. This is the author of "The Complete Book of Pastry, Sweet and Savory" (Simon and Schuster, $17.95). Having told us all there is to know about bread in two masterworks — "The Complete Book of Breads" and "Breads of France and How to Bake Them in Your Own Kitchen" — he has done the same thing for the other great branch of flour cookery.

What's more, he's about to retire from the University of Indiana, where he has been a writer and editor for 15 years, to work full time with food and explain the how and why of it. His next book will be about soups to go with the bread — and before the pie.

Like bread, pastry is easy to go wrong on. It can be tough, soggy, crumbly, flat, blistered and just plain inedible.

Furthermore, instructions on how to avoid such undesirabilities tend toward the ambiguously subjective. Such terms as "enough" and "too much" intimidate rather than enlighten. Nobody really defines the "light hand" that is supposed to make all the difference between a hopeless pastry maker and a triumphant one.

Clayton would be the first to admit that some of the subtleties can be learned only by doing. There is such a thing as the right feel of the dough, and it takes hands-on experience to recognize it. But insofar as words can convey the refinements of pastry technique, he's the person to go to.

Partly, the clarity of his instruction reflects a former newspaperman's skill at getting a message across. Partly, though, it's a tribute to the hours of experimentation behind every recipe.

For the pastry book, like the bread books, Clayton baked and rebaked and baked again. He had a steady stream of neighbors and friends programmed to turn up on the circular drive in front of his house to receive the test items he and his wife couldn't eat. While he was still in his bread phase he had worn out the family stove and accepted the idea that, for what he wanted to do, he needed a kitchen of his own.

The upshot was a new wing on his house in Bloomington, big enough to take care of not one extra stove, but six. There's one where he can bake on hot stones after shoveling the coals of a wood fire into the fireplace. There's also a big professional-size gas stove.

However, much of Clayton's baking is done on two home-style ranges — one gas, one electric — each with two ovens. Since he is writing for the home cook, he wants to make sure his recipes work with the kind of equipment in home kitchens.

Besides his array of stoves, his most valued pastry-making tool is the marble slab he keeps in his refrigerator. Marble is the favored surface for pastry dough because it has a smooth, nonstick surface and because it changes temperature slowly. Maintaining the chill in pastry dough is, he believes, one of the factors that matter.

Indeed, he argues that many a pastry problem can be solved by simply popping the dough back into the refrigerator to get a bit colder. The right degree of chill is what it takes to keep the fat granules in pastry separate, as they should be to expand into airy deliciousness when the oven heat reaches them.

The purveyor of all this expertise was not one of your born cooks, eager to have a hand on the mixing spoon as soon as he was old enough to get underfoot in the kitchen. His Indiana mother was a good, if predictable, cook. His Indiana wife is a good cook.

Clayton's interest in getting into the act began when he and his wife took a bicycle trip across Europe, eating bread all the way. After the delights of all those picnics and cafe lunches, coming home to American bread was a letdown.

It was trying to duplicate some of the eating satisfactions of the trip that started him poring over Julia Child and Erma Rombauer. The success of the two bread books that followed led him to a three-year digression into the rest of the baking tradition.

While bread and pastry have much in common, they do require different approaches. "I had to learn to be gentle again," says Clayton. The folds and turns and rollings of pastry are a far cry from the punching and kneading that goes into bread dough.

He mastered the transition, though, and a good deal more. A nearly blind Hungarian immigrant woman who had made strudel for her own wedding 60 years earlier taught him the secrets of stretching a small ball of dough into the gossamer wrappings Central European cooks put around poppy seeds and apples. And many Americans helped his understanding of that supremely American dessert, pie.

Of course, as Clayton points out, pie is not only the most favored American dessert, but also the worst made. "I think the crust should be as good as the filling," he says. For anybody who takes his advice, it will be.

For instance:

PLANTATION CHICKEN PIE

(6 servings)
Dough:
3 cups all-purpose flour, approximately
½ tablespoon each baking powder and salt
2 eggs
½ cup lard or shortening, room temperature
1 tablespoon sherry
4 tablespoons (½ stick) butter, room temperature
2 to 3 tablespoons water
Filling:
3-pound chicken
1 tablespoon butter
1 onion, chopped
½ green pepper, chopped
½ sweet red pepper, chopped
1 clove garlic, chopped
2 tablespoons vinegar
½ cup sherry
1 tablespoon sugar
2 cups tomato sauce
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 cup peas
1 cup whole green olives, cut in half
2 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
1 egg and 1 tablespoon milk beaten together, to brush
12-by-18-by-2-inch baking dish

To prepare the dough: In a large bowl stir together 4 cups flour, baking powder and salt. Form a well. Drop in the eggs, shortening, sherry, butter and water. Stir briskly to blend, pulling the flour in from the sides as you stir. Add 1 or 2 more cups flour, if necessary, to form a smooth, soft dough. Work together until the mass is well blended. Wrap the dough in waxed paper or plastic wrap and refrigerate until chilled and relaxed, at least 1 hour.

Cook the chicken whole in salted boiling water until the meat is tender, about 1 hour. Allow the chicken to cool before removing the meat from the bones. Dice into small pieces.

Make the sauce in a deep skillet or heavy pot by saute'ing the onion in the butter until soft and translucent, about 8 minutes. Stir in the peppers, garlic, vinegar, sherry, sugar, tomato sauce, salt, pepper and paprika and cook over medium heat 20 minutes. Remove from heat. Add chicken pieces and peas. The olives and eggs will be added later.

Roll dough 1-8-inch thick and line baking dish with one large piece or with wide strips along the sides, moistened and pressed together, and a rectangle cut to fit the bottom. It does not matter that the bottom piece is not joined to the sides. If less dough is desired, do not add the bottom piece. In either case the sides should extend 1-2 inch above the dish.

The filling should come to within 1-2 inch of the edge of the dish. Arrange the olice pieces and egg slices over the top of the filling.

Cut a rectangle of dough for the top, allowing a margin of 1 inch. to assure a seal, moisten the margins before the top piece is positioned.

If you are using a pie bird, cut a small hole in the center of the top crust to allow its bill to come through. The crust will rest on its wings. Otherwise, cut a pattern in the top with a sharp knife or razor blade to allow the steam to escape.

Place the dish on the middle shelf of the hot oven. After 15 minutes, reduce heat to 350 degrees and continue baking until the pie is light brown and bubbling, about 45 minutes.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 8 1981

B.J. Holloway, 11, gives his fingers an exercise break during a strenuous three-hour workout of Chisanbop: a Korean word meaning "finger calculation method."

A handy calculator

A teacher in Fort Stockton called it one of the most beneficial teaching aids or tools that she has run across.

A teacher in Pecos said she was really surprised to find that it improved concept as well as calculation.

The Fort Stockton teacher said her students gained confidence in their abilities by using it. The one in Pecos said her students increased their understanding of their lessons.

And the best aspect of all is that this method doesn't cost either of the school districts a single cent.

The procedure, based on the 4,000-year-old oriental abacus, was brought to the United States only a few years ago by a 34-year-old Korean as an adaptation of a method his mathematician father used in teaching people who were experiencing difficulties with advanced computation of numbers.

IT IS CALLED Chisanbop — a Korean word meaning "finger calculation method."

A class of about 30 students, ranging from one second grader to a few adults, was recently taught how to "count on their fingers" in a Midland College short course by Sue Ashwood of the Region 18 Service Center.

"As a classroom teacher, I never cared if kids counted on their fingers, toes, or whatever," Mrs. Ashwood told the class. "Kids, like adults, all have different learning styles."

She said that most youngsters learn better using a concrete method of instruction and that one study indicated that 33 percent of high school students also preferred a tactual kinesthetic learning style.

"If that is true and the kids are being lectured to all day, they probably aren't learning well," she said.

AFTER HEARING about the Chisanbop method through Johnny Carson's and Phil Donahue's talk shows, the Texas Education Association conducted a training consortium around the state. The TEA gave pre- and post-tests to the pilot programs and found "a favorable outcome with math," she said.

Mrs. Ashwood received her Chisanbop training in Lubbock about three years ago. She said the following year, she trained 67 regional teachers in Chisanbop.

"The kids that grasp it best and show the greatest progress in using it are the second graders," Mrs. Ashwood said. "They are usually able to go beyond the curriculum set for that level."

But it is not limited to children. Adults find the method is a simple and fast way to add and subtract anything from basic equations to confusing checkbooks.

In the Chisanbop system, each finger represents a certain value. By pressing the fingers and thumbs on a surface, the hands can have any value from one to 99.

THE RIGHT HAND represents the ones and the left hand represents the tens. The right hand totals nine, with each finger counting one and the thumb representing five. The left hand totals 90, with each finger representing ten and the thumb counting 50.

If you press the index finger of the right hand to a surface, you have a value of one. "Clear" it and press the ring finger down for a value of three. Clear and press the thumb and the index finger down for a value of six.

On the left hand, the index finger has a value of 10, the middle finger a value of 20, the ring finger a value of 30 and the little finger a value of 40. The thumb has a value 50 and when pressed with the fingers, can represent 60, 70, 80 and 90.

Press the thumb and the index finger on the left hand for a value of 60. To add eight, count eight by pressing the thumb of the right hand for five and the index, middle and ring fingers for six, seven and eight. To add three more, count to three by pressing down the ring finger for one, clearing the right hand and pressing the middle finger on the left hand for two and the index finger on the right hand for three. You should have the thumb, index and middle finger pressed on the left hand and the index finger pressed on the right hand for a total of 71.

60+8+3=71. Easy.

ACCORDING TO Mrs. Ashwood, Chisanbop isn't intended as a total math program but it can strengthen it.

"It can really help people with poor memories," she said.

Betty Henslee, a second grade teacher at Comanche Elementary School in Fort Stockton, who trained under Mrs. Ashwood, said Chisanbop serves as a good bridge between the concrete and the abstract. "It builds good concepts until they can remember better," she said.

One of the most beneficial elements, she said, is that with the addition being done on the fingers instead of in the head, mistakes can be more easily caught by the teacher.

"You can catch them right off when they're wrong," Mrs. Henslee said. "This way, they get immediate feedback."

There are other more complicated stages to the method but students can usually catch on to them without any difficulties.

Rosemary Jackson, a second grade teacher at Pecos Elementary School in Pecos, who also trained under Mrs. Ashwood, cautioned, "Now it doesn't always work for every single kid — but no other method does either."

SHE SAID HER students gained a much clearer understanding of the math process than they normally would. "Before we start something new, we go through whatever process with the finger system first.

"And we've had quite a lot of improvement."

Mrs. Henslee said the method seemed to help her students' attention span and retention of the math she taught. "It's great on place value and helping them see more of the math relationship," she said. "My students were wanting the problems to be longer and bigger."

In an article that appeared in the July 9, 1978, issue of Family Weekly, Ruth Foster reported, "During recent demonstrations on the 'Today' and 'Tonight' shows, grade-school children accurately added series of four- and five-digit numbers at electronic calculator speeds — even beating the time of a college math professor who used a pocket calculator — although Edwin Lieberthal, co-founder of Chisanbop Enterprises, Inc., stresses speed is not the main objective of the method."

"The greatest benefit," Mrs. Henslee said, "is the confidence that the students gain in themselves and their abilities to do math."

Kim Qlick, 10, illustrates a few of the stages of the Chisanbop method: confusion, concentration and, finally, completion.

Instructor Sue Ashwood demonstrates how to properly "count on your fingers."

Tabor house in Parade of Homes

This exclusive contemporary home, designed and built by Tim Tabor, president of Tabor Construction, Inc., offers many unique features in architectural design and decor. It is Tabor Construction's entry in the Parade of Homes.

The house features three bedrooms, 2½ baths, one living area, formal dining, breakfast room, study, studio, covered patio and private redwood deck.

The kitchen and living room ceilings are vaulted and finished in beautifully stained wood. The large master bedroom upstairs is made even more spacious by a cathedral ceiling. A black Kohler Steeping Bath adjoining a large clear glass shower, accent a roomy master bath. The combination of a stained glass window in the shower and a stained glass skylite are breathtaking. The stained glass windows also featured in two other areas of the house are custom designed and made by Denise Grace.

The garden room atmosphere in the breakfast room is provided by two atrium areas, large windows, a built in aquarium and an octagon shaped ceiling which supports a 36 inch fan suspended from its center point.

The custom designed ash cabinets feature all of the latest innovations in kitchen appliances and make the kitchen a housewife's dream come true.

The fireplace in the living area is accented by custom cut and polished marble with a hand crafted wood mantel.

Karen Kalisek of Sloan-Bagwell Furniture is co-ordinating the interior design. The furniture and all accessories will be placed in the Show Home for the duration of the Parade of Homes by Sloan-Bagwell.

The exterior landscaping will be designed and installed by Tom's Tree House.

The 1981 Parade of Homes, sponsored by the Midland Homebuilders Association, is Dec. 12-20 in Skyline Terrace West of Midland. Ticket sales from the event will go to Christmas in April, the volunteer repair program for the homes of elderly and handicapped. CIA is coordinated by the Human Relations Council.

AT WIT'S END

Teenagers want advice most from parents

By ERMA BOMBECK

I was really interested in the recent survey McCall's magazine did among 160,000 teenagers who said what they wanted most from their parents is more advice.

Let me get this straight. Are they saying that just because they slam a door on your lips they still want to hear what you've got to say?

What a fool I've been. I thought when my kids hummed the theme from "Dragnet" during my lectures or drove off in the car while I was explaining my philosophy of life, they just didn't care.

We've been on an understanding-children kick for almost 20 years now. I don't think there's a mother alive who does not understand children's fears, their legal rights, what motivates them, their sensitivities and their concerns. It's been a Camelot of ask-not-what-children-can-do-for-their-parents-but-what-parents-can-do-for-their-kids.

God forbid a parent should swim against the tide, but let me tell you where most parents are coming from. The No. 1 complaint we get from kids is, "You don't trust me." Wrongo. You don't trust US.

You don't trust your parents enough to tell them the truth and have us believe you. You don't trust us enough to risk our disapproval of anything you do. You don't trust us to pull from our experience and youth and understand what you're going through.

You don't trust us enough to share what you're feeling. You don't trust us enough to follow advice that we give you out of pure love.

You play games with us. Find the evidence. Catch that lie. Where did we really go and with whom.

We fear you. Does that surprise you at all? It shouldn't. We're afraid if we're too strict or too dogmatic, we will lose you to peer pressure, drugs, someone else's liberal mother . . . or the open road.

Two minds meeting from two generations is difficult at best. Both must compromise. If we talk too much, we're a nag. If we don't talk at all, we don't care.

If we come too close to your life, we smother you. If we keep too great a distance, we lose contact altogether.

Probably the only optimism I got out of the survey was a 17-year-old who acknowledged, "It's tough to be a parent. I let my Mom ramble on and on when she's giving me advice about something, but once I get past the lecture, I usually can filter out a piece or two of good advice."

Ask yourself what did your mother get out of it and you'll just begin to understand what parents are all about.

What's in a name?

In the lore of the oil patch, there is usually a story behind it. This is true of the Santa Rita Club, volunteer organization of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame.

The name Santa Rita originated in New York. A stock salesman from the early Texon Co. had sold a group of Catholic women Group 1 stock. A little worried about this new investment, they consulted with their priest. He suggested that they invoke the help of Santa Rita, patron saint of the impossible. As the salesman left New York, the women handed him a sealed envelope containing a red rose blessed by the priest. He was instructed to take the rose back to Texon, climb to the top of the derrick, scatter the petals over the rig, and say, "I christen thee Santa Rita," which he did, and the rest is history. On May 28, 1923, the well came in, and the huge Big Lake field was born.

Equally blessed were the parents of Santa Rita Club volunteer, Rita Wheeler. She was the first child born in the camp of the Texon Oil and Land Co. The general superintendent had insisted, with the enthusiastic agreement of the oil field workers and her parents, she be named after the company camp in which she was born. Mrs. Wheeler, who has a full-time job, felt that her choice of volunteer service should fittingly carry on the tradition of the Santa Rita name.

Not all of the volunteers, who, since the museum opened in 1975, are so closely identified with the history of the Permian Basin. May have shared the home town, city, state or country also claimed by the museum's 250,000 visitors.

The volunteers have provided 45,538 hours of service to the museum in three areas. One is the Gift Shop, which has a wide variety of books and gift items relating to the past and present history of the oil industry of the Permian Basin. Another is the Archives Center, which was established in 1967, as an historical collection of primary sources on all aspects of the petroleum industry of the Permian Basin and West Texas and southeastern New Mexico. Its purpose is for the collecting, preservation and dissemination of knowledge of the petroleum industry. The center maintains a comprehensive collection of private papers, company records, manuscripts, sound recordings, scrapbooks, photographs, motion picture film and maps pertinent to the petroleum industry and related fields.

Joyce Hammett and Martha Hunt share the distinction of being "Arch-Angels," so named by Betty Orbeck, museum archivist, as a tribute to their thousands of hours of detailed service. They have transcribed some of the 260 taped interviews of those persons who played important roles in the development and growth of the industry. There also are interviews with those men and women who witnessed the economic, social and cultural growth of the boom towns; the ranchers, merchants, doctors, lawyers, educators and the women who pioneered the oil camps and new towns.

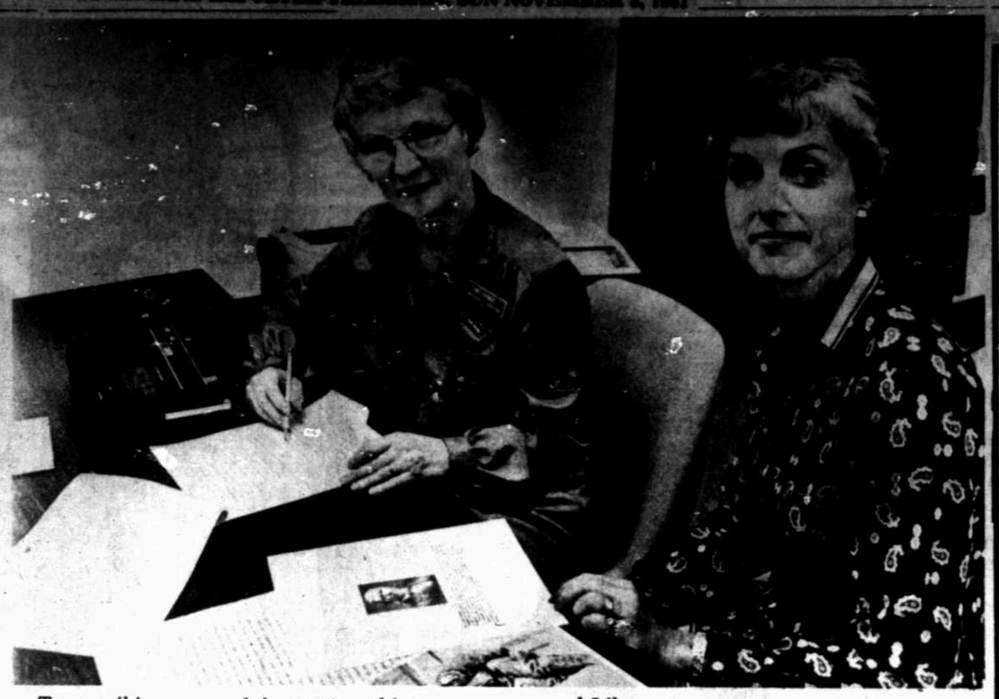

The Archives Center continually seeks material which is available to the researcher, scholar and historian seeking information.

The docent program, chaired this year by Dorothy Campbell, is responsible for giving thoroughly researched tours of the museum's exhibits to school children of surrounding towns, and to special adult groups requesting them.

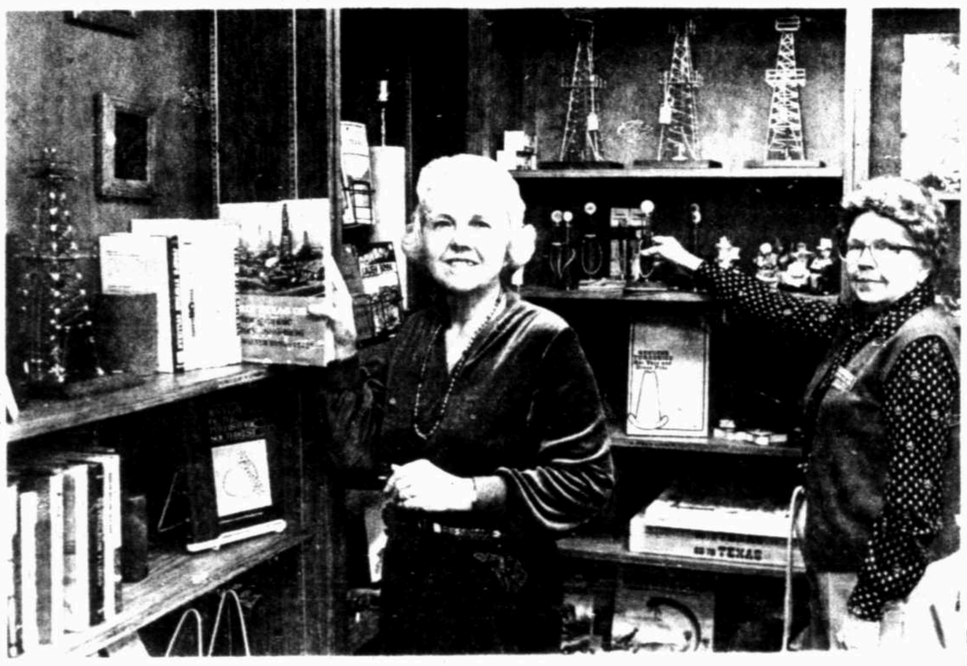

The opening the new North Wing Friday will greatly expand the geological and engineering areas. Santa Ritans will be given a special preview from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Ed Rowland, assistant museum director, has recognized the services of Santa Rita Club members, maintaining, "The museum would be hard put to operate without the men and women who give so willingly of their time and talents."

Current Santa Rita Club President Paul Wecker invites all persons who have an hour or two a week, or a month, to join the group. For information, call 684-4179.

Transcribing some of the 260 taped interviews of persons who played important roles in the development of the oil industry for the Archives Center of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Hall of Fame and Library are Mrs. John Hammett, left, and Mrs. Joe Hunt. Mrs. Hammett and Mrs. Hunt are members of the museum's volunteer group, the Santa Rita Club.

Santa Rita Club volunteers Mrs. Floyd L. Wheeler, left, and Mrs. Al Tweelings, check items in the Gift Shop of the Permian Basin petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame. The shop has a variety of books and gift items relating to the past and present history of the Permian Basin oil industry.

Toxic shock syndrome discovered in patients recovering from surgery

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Doctors have discovered 15 cases they say prove toxic shock syndrome can be contracted while recovering from surgery.

The findings, reported Wednesday at a meeting of the American Society for Microbiology, emphasized that the disease can strike men and women of all ages, not just women who use tampons.

The Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta says 1,400 cases of the syndrome that causes fever, low blood pressure, skin rash, vomiting, and sometimes death, have been reported since it was discovered several years ago.

Researchers have linked the disease to the staphylococcus aureus bacteria, a frequent cause of infections in hospitalized patients and others.

Dr. Donald Graham, of the Springfield Clinic in Springfield, Ill., and a group of doctors from four other institutions across the country found 15 patients who had developed toxic shock after various types of surgery. One patient died of pneumonia, probably as a result of having had toxic shock, Graham said.

The patients — five men and 10 women — developed the symptoms of toxic shock within a few days after surgery. None of them had infections or any other complications from the surgery, Graham said.

Most cases of toxic shock still occur in women who are menstruating and using tampons, but Graham said the unusual appearances of the disease in surgical patients and others might be on the rise.

Scientists also found evidence that toxic shock syndrome can be passed from one patient to another in a hospital.

Zola's law: Adultery is no-win proposition

By BARBARA MORAN
Copley News Service

Adultery is in vogue.

But then, says author Marion Zola who is promoting her book on the subject, it has been in vogue "for a long, long time. Otherwise, we wouldn't have needed a biblical commandment about it."

The difference between now and then, she explains, is that "people are more willing to discuss it."

Not that much more willing, if her book "All The Good Ones Are Married" is any indication. Having scoured the earth for five years in search of people willing to discuss their affairs, Zola apparently found about 300 here and in Europe. And none of them is quoted by name.

Still, even though they have all begged anonymity, the lovers' stories (as well as Zola's own experience, which she said she weaved into the book), make entertaining reading.

Zola, who is single, said during a recent interview that she decided to write the book, not only because many of her friends were involved in affairs, but because she, too, spent time in a triangular relationship. She somberly described it as having been "very intense. It's over now."

Her book does not moralize, although it does offer some advice, namely: be prepared to lose. For women, she suggests not giving up dating other men or giving up pursuing promising careers. She advises women to not allow their secret lives to interfere with normal family relationships. Nor should they spend time waiting for the phone to ring. And don't, she warns, try to compete with a wife.

Since Zola estimated that only 15 percent of the women she interviewed ended up with the married men they wooed, she suggests most importantly that women date married men on their own terms.

And when the negative outweighs the positive, she says, think about a change.

About 150 "other women" were interviewed in the book. Another 50 wives of unfaithful men told all. The remainder were stories from the men involved in liasons.

Based on their confessions, Zola concludes that men are more apt to deny their affairs than are wives. But wives, she said, "are having affairs more than ever before."

The double standard is gone, she said, and since more women are working, they have a greater chance of meeting men with whom they share interests and a great many hours of their lives.

Single people who opt for affairs are often involved in careers and are interested in intimacy without the ties of marriage. "Life for single people is growing continuously easier," she said. "There are all kinds of establishments which now cater to their needs, restaurants and apartment complexes, for instance."

Other single people just plain fall in love. Married men, she said, are capable of courting in a very special and considerate way. And the fact that there are 7.8 million more women than men in America increases the probability that single women will date married men.

Men are more apt to initiate affairs for the sake of adding excitement to their lives, particularly those who married young, she said.

"For a lot of reasons, the odds today are against a long-term monogamous relationship, but I'm not pessimistic for the future. Young people are quite alarmed by the high rate of divorce.

"People are waiting longer to get married. They are being more cautious. They are taking the time to get their personal identities established first. And they are choosing to marry with more realistic expectations. They are emphasizing communication, emotional and sexual compatibility."

That, said Zola, may prove the best compromise between arranged marriages and marriages based on a vague, infatuating emotion presumed to be love.

Her book is enlightening, but seems to lack depth. For nearly 300 pages, the reader is subjected to rather shallow accounts of lovers like Greg, whose only moral consternation is that, "I feel my wife would be hurt if she found out. I don't want her to find out and be made a fool of, but that doesn't stop me from making it with her best friends. And somewhere she knows. I guess I feel guilty."

Zola, who is a television comedy writer and not a psychologist (although she consulted some for the book), attempts in this unscientific exploration to explain human behavior.

In Greg's case, he "sees himself as the modern, liberal husband — no jealousy, no double standards. He hopes his wife would enjoy any affair she might have. I interviewed a fair number of men who said they felt this way. I wonder how calmly Greg would actually react if he discovered she were involved in an affair."

And then, she added a remark which may best sum up the difficulty in writing such a book, "Men's reactions, I found, are as diverse as women's."

There's silver in the house

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — There's silver in that thar courthouse, even if the "lode" isn't exactly a bonanza for taxpayers.

About 31 ounces of unrefined silver "mud," the dregs of a basement film processing operation, has been recovered in the bowels of the Broward County Courthouse, says W.W. "Bill" Kuchinskas, director of the county recording division.

"We knew we had a silver mine down here and didn't want it to go down the drain," Kuchinskas said.

The silver comes from developing microfilm, which contains a thin coating of the mineral.

Mixed marriages tough

By GORDY HOLT
Hearst Feature Service

Mixed marriages are for the birds.

Some say they work; I don't know.

Mine's been 50-50 and for years I wondered why. Now I know.

I'm right-handed; she's a southpaw.

It's the little things that get in the way.

From the beginning, for example, there has been a problem with the toothpaste.

Since both of us replace the cap and roll up as we go, this has not been the stuff of divorce. But every time I stand at the sink, brush at the ready in my right hand, the tube is pointing the wrong way. Week in, week out, I am forced to execute a tube flip left-handed. It wouldn't be so bad if it only began the day; it ends it, too.

In the tub, shampoo bottles are also a problem. They're on the wrong side — as are the washrags (SHE calls them "cloths") and the soap.

The kitchen, too, is backwards.

The butter knife always points east. It should point west. As a kid, I learned to cut so that the pad falls, left to right, onto the knife. Now I'm okay only if I get first crack at a new cube.

I seldom do.

The refrigerator is organized for another species. Milk is on the left; it belongs on the right.

Glasses are stored in a cupboard to the left of the sink. They should be in the cupboard to the right. The Ajax is behind the left door under the sink; I open the right door first.

There's more.

Only recently has American ingenuity designed an ambidextrous pair of scissors. For years we only owned scissors for lefties. I've claimed reverse discrimination, all to deaf ears.

Reading lamps illuminate over the left shoulder; the ironing board points the wrong way; I kick over the dog's dish because it's in the wrong corner.

Just once I'd like to answer the phone and not plug my teeth into the ear end.

It seems the only safe appliance in our house is the piano, but I'm not all that certain she wouldn't have the thing restrung.

Time was when righties had control; the planet spun clockwise as it should and you got to the southpaws in their cradles. Even if they had to write upside-down, schools made lefties conform. Shops for the left-handed never stood a chance.

These days, though, I've been shoved against the wall, imprisoned in a counter-clockwise world. The outlook is bleak.

Once the government might have intervened; now even that's unlikely.

DEAR ABBY

Fly-by-night boyfriend needs pinning down

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm 70 and have been a widow for two years. My husband owned a tavern and we both worked there. Lou, a regular tavern customer, started coming around to see me right after my husband died, and we really got stuck on each other. Lou is 55 and knows my real age, but says he doesn't care about the age difference — he loves me anyway.

Now the problem. I fix him supper every night, but this love affair doesn't seem to be going anywhere because Lou has to be home every night by midnight. He says he lives with his sister, who's 62, and his mother, 83, and they need a man in the house. I've never been to his house or met his mother and his sister. He says they're kind of weird and not very sociable.

Abby, I just sold my tavern and I want to get married and travel some. Lou doesn't want me to go with any other men.

What should I do? Lou says I should give him more time. How much time should I give him? — TIRED OF WAITING

DEAR TIRED: Until tomorrow. Tell him you don't care how "weird" his mother and sister are, you want to meet them anyway. And if he doesn't arrange a meeting pronto, kiss him goodbye.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 12-year-old girl, and our family just recently moved from a big city to a small town in the country. We really do love our home in the mountains.

The only thing that bugs me about our new home is that hunting is the name of the game here. Everybody hunts deer and elk. My dad is the only man in town who has any respect for wildlife. These animals don't hurt anybody, Abby. They're actually afraid of people. When I look out the window and see those beautiful deer walking across our property, then think of all the hunters out looking to kill them, it just makes me sick!

We sit in our house and hear gunshots every day. The hunters around here don't care about anything else. They shoot at anything that moves — or whatever chases their target away. That's why so many dogs have been killed around here. I'm scared to leave my dog out during the day. Abby, how can people kill such beautiful wildlife? — DISGUSTED IN SEQUIM, WASH.

DEAR DISGUSTED: I don't know, but I've heard that hunters actually do a "kindness" by killing those beautiful animals swiftly with a bullet — otherwise they would die of starvation or overexposure. It may be true, but I still can't buy it.

DEAR ABBY: I have been going out with the same wonderful guy for five years, and he absolutely refuses to go to bed with me! We are both over 21 and we love each other, so this doesn't make any sense to me.

We are planning to marry, and he wants to wait until we are married, but I feel that sex is such an important part of marriage we should make sure we can get along in bed as well as we do out of bed. Abby, I am not a dog; I'm an attractive part-time model.

I am sure he's not gay — he just has these old-fashioned ideas. Please tell me what to do. — WAITING PATIENTLY

DEAR WAITING: Keep waiting. And thank your lucky stars for your wonderful old-fashioned guy. If you really love each other, you'll get along fine in bed. And should there be some kind of sexual dysfunction, there is always Masters and Johnson.

DEAR ABBY: My boss asked me to write to you with a problem our office is having. Office gossip! Do you have any remedies? — A MEDICAL GROUP IN HOUSTON

DEAR GROUP: As long as there are people who are willing (indeed, eager) to listen to gossip, there will be gossip.

Gossip can be entertaining, boring, informative, true, false, malicious, innocuous, devastating, benign or it can sink a ship.

Some gossips aren't even aware that they're gossiping — they're merely attempting to be "good company," and always seem to have an amusing tale to tell.

The only remedy I know of to discourage gossip is to refuse flatly to listen. If someone says, "They say ..." and then proceeds to gossip, have the courage to ask, "And who are 'they'?"

Or if someone says, "Have you heard the latest dirt about So-and-so," have the courage to say, "No, and I'd rather not. It's none of my business." (They'll respect you for it.)

When gossips no longer have an audience, they'll quit gossiping. And not until.

Success is rare for a male model

By SHEEYL FITZGERALD
(c) 1981, Newsday

NEW YORK — Two years ago, George Koronios decided that the time had come to catch his dream on the fly. He quit his job as a construction worker and began — snapshots in hand — making the rounds of New York modeling agencies.

"It was terrible," he said of his attempts to get seen by the top agencies. "I didn't have any pictures except a few snapshots, and most of the time I didn't even get inside the door."

Koronios, 27, had been caught in the grind — the first level brush-off that some agencies use to keep young modeling hopefuls from wasting an agency mogul's precious time. "There are so many ways to say 'no,'" said Koronios. "Some people say it and it makes you want to scream or go away and give up," he said, explaining how one agency receptionist had practically thrown the only picture he had back at him across the desk. "I went away angry and depressed. There was no need to make me feel that way," he said. "It was so different from the second one I went to. Even there they said they couldn't use me, but at least they let me feel that even though I had been rejected I was a human being. They made some suggestions on things to do, took a little time and left me with some dignity."

Being a male model is often like that — hard on the dignity. When counting off the ranks in the profession, most people will agree that males run a poor second to females. With only a fraction of the job opportunities available to them, few — if, indeed, any — will get to be media stars like Brooke Shields and Cheryl Tiegs. Thus, most in the business agree, it takes a special sort of man to stand up under the pressure and keep pushing to get to that ephemeral place — the top.

Unlike most of the thousands of young men who storm modeling's bastions each year, Koronios did get some hope. "Go to the stores," he was told. "Try to get work in their shows."

Now, after two years of free-lance modeling in stores like Saks Fifth Avenue and Macy's and in shows for designers like Bill Blass and Lee Wright, Koronios is on the roster of Jennifer Models, a Long Island agency and is going to Europe for a month to try to get some exposure and build up his book for a second assault on the Manhattan agencies.

What does it take to become a successful male model? According to Dan Deely, head of the men's division at Wilhelmina, the answer will change as often as the customer's ideas change. Some years the All-American boy look is in, other years the customer wants a dissipated European wastrel look; other years he wants both. But some things, he explained, are constant. The applicant should photograph well, be tall — somewhere between 5-foot-10-inches and 6 feet — slim and should fit into a size 40-regular suit.

The potential male model should not be too young, Deely said. The clients who hire male models want maturity. They want men who are youthful, yet look like they've lived enough to be able to appreciate — and afford — the cars, good scotch, fine tailored suits, etc., that they'll be selling. So, said Deely, a man starts modeling later and lasts longer in the business than a woman — beginning his career in his early 20s and often lasting until 50 or older.

The rest, he explained, depends on personality — that indefinable something about an individual that enables him to project well in a photograph. This something, said Deely, is important in men because there's no makeup to help.

"Every guy who looks good in person doesn't look good in a photograph," Deely said. And it's personality — as well as bone structure — that can make the difference.

Many are called but few are chosen, Deely said. At present the agency represents about 70 men; he extimates that fewer than 10 percent of the 3,000 men who apply each year will get taken on. When they call in at Wilhelmina, they are asked a couple of questions — height, weight, suit size — to which the wrong answers will immediately begin the process of elimination. Then, said Deely, those who pass this first hurdle but live in far-flung cities are urged to send in a photograph or two rather than take expensive trips to New York on speculaiton. For the rest, the agency holds open interview three days a week. For 30 minutes on those days, anybody who shows up is seen and given an assessment of his chances.

Once a man is signed onto Wilhelmina's roster, contracts are signed that entitle the agency to 20 percent commission on bookings. Then, he said, the model gets sent to work on "tests," during which photogrpahers experiment with ideas, lighting and moods. These tests are a perfect way for new models to get photographs for their books without paying, Deely said. Also, they give a potential model an idea of the kinds of work he will be able to do. Once a model has enough shots, a composite showing him in various poses and outfits and giving his vital statistics is sent to clients.

At this point, Deely explained, if all goes well a model is on his way. He starts getting jobs and earning money.

This, said Kevin Lynch, is where the hard work begins. After 14 months as model, Lynch, 27, is just beginning to see the fruits of hours spent pounding the pavement, sitting in reception rooms and being on inspection before countless potential employers.

"I came into Wilhelmina four times before they took me on," Lynch said. "Part of being a model is just not giving up. You're always working; it never stops. You never get so good that you don't have to work at it."

For Lynch, who after 14 months says he's just getting to the point where he can make several thousand dollars in a good week, that means spending the days when he hasn't got a job making the rounds. On a recent morning, that included a stop at an advertising agency, where he was among hundreds of male models competing for a job in an advertisement, a meeting with a photographer's representative who promised to look at his photos and call him back later in the week and a check in at the offices of VogueRite, the company that produces most of the catalogs published in the United States. Such work is the mainstay of any male model, said Lynch. "Any guy who thinks he's going to get along without catalogs is crazy."

High school group raises guide dogs

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN
AP Writer

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The blonde-haired girl sways gently in a wooden rocker, frequently touching the golden retriever at her side, talking, appropriately, about a favorite topic: dogs.

Beth Anderson is involved in raising puppies, training them to become "working dogs," the "eyes" for blind people.

She is a 16-year-old, straight-A high-school junior who loves riding her Welsh pinto mare, Sandy, and enjoys swimming, camping, hiking and playing the guitar. She has skied and has tried judo.

But she takes special pleasure and satisfaction — mirrored on the face of her mother, Evelyn — when, her blue eyes unseeing, Beth discusses the Pima Seeing Eye Puppy Raisers. Her own guide dog, Muffin, she says, "is a part of you. She's your eyes."

Beth organized the Guide Dog Raising Club last year at Canyon Del Oro High School. The club, now part of the Pima Seeing Eye Puppy Raisers, a community-wide organization, raises golden and Labrador retrievers and German shepherds for about a year, then turns them over to a professional school for guide dogs.

Members are now raising seven donated puppies, the first of which will go this fall to the International Guiding Eyes School in Burbank, Calif. The school is one of but eight such training facilities in the country and does not have its own puppy-raising program.

"We want to start a breeding stock program," says Beth, because without one, only one in 10 dogs donated to such schools passes the rigorous six-month training needed to serve as a blind person's "eyes." "Out of a club like this, at least 75 percent will make guide dogs."

The puppies, 6 weeks to 3 months old, must be gentle, calm and sturdy. They must also have good hips — vital for pulling in harness. They are walked on short leash and are taught basic commands and good manners, rudiments of what will be their jobs.

"The dogs are owned by the school in care of the club," says Beth; those raising the puppies know they cannot keep them.

At one point, the sighted trainers take their four-legged students to heavily trafficked areas to learn, with signs saying "Seeing Eye Puppy in Training."

At the professional schools, the dogs are trained to lead their humans in traffic, to watch for such obstacles as low tree branches and to keep the blind from being injured.

AAUW World Affairs program set Tuesday

The World Affairs Group of the Midland Branch, American Association of University Women, will present E. E. Reigle in a program at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Energas Building.

Reigle will have a color slide program consisting of a Smithsonian-conducted tour in Russia, plus a self-conducted tour of parts of Poland.

Reigle, a native of West Virginia, is a true pioneer in the oil fields. He was born in the oil fields and has been engaged in various aspects of the oil business since 1922. He is the second of four generations of Reigles, all of whom were engaged in the oil industry. He is a graduate of the University of Oklahoma, with a bachelor of science degree in geology. He has been a resident of Midland since 1939.

Presently, Reigle is owner of Richmond Drilling Co. and principal owner of Farley Machine Works of Kansas and Colorado.

Since 1924, he has been a foreign traveler, having visited all six continents and all countries of Europe, except Finland and Albania. He also has traveled in all communistic European countries without benefit of tour groups. His favorite foreign country is Germany, especially Bavaria and Wurtenburg.

E. E. Reigle

Reigle is the father of two and husband of Violet Reigle, who was active in AAUW until her death in 1978.

Hostesses for the social period will be Arva Putnam, Mona Lewis and Dottie Merritt.

The public is invited to attend.

'The Old Home Place' topic of Thursday meeting

Dr. David L. Caffey, author of the recently published book, "The Old Home Place," will be the speaker when the Midland Genealogical Society meets at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Community Room of Commercial Bank & Trust Co.

Dr. Caffey is a graduate of The University of Texas. His doctorate degree is in higher education and was received from Texas Tech University. He taught at El Paso Community College and then was director of student activities at Midland College before he began his present assignment as chairman of the Division of Cultural Studies.

Dr. Caffey will talk on "The Old Home Place," and will cover the genealogy of his grandparents' people in Jones County, and United States history in the south after the Civil War as it affected migrations of people to Texas. "The Old Home Place" might be called a living history of the West Texas farm country. It portrays a bygone culture and illuminates the events of an era, not through a recitation of names and dates, but through the lives of real people who lived the times.

He also will discuss the problems involved in writing and publishing a book for genealogists involved in publishing their family histories.

Dr. Caffey was a member of the Philmont Scout Ranch staff several seasons, is an Eagle Scout and recipient of the God and Country Award, the William T. Hornaday Award and Vigil Honor, Order of the Arrow. He has published earlier "Head For the High Country," about those experiences.

Kevin Ratliff, a blind student who is learning to play the piano, performs under the watchful eye of his teacher Sue Martinez.

Blind student learns piano

Kevin Ratliff, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Ratliff of Midland, was guest performer at a recent meeting of the Delta Gamma Sorority in the home of Joyce Neff.

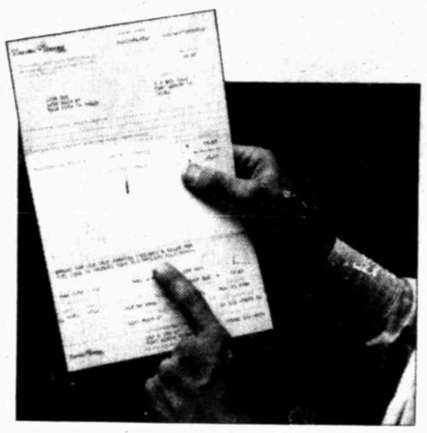

Kevin, the only totally blind child of school age taking piano lessons in Midland, began about two years ago when his teacher at Bowie then, Jamie Cornelius, recognized his interest. She helped him pursue it by locating a music teacher. Today, Kevin is learning under the tutorship of Sue Martinez.

The Delta Gamma group is funding his piano lessons in conjunction with its philanthropy program of aiding the blind. His lessons were funded during the 1980-81 school year and are being continued this year.

According to Mrs. Martinez, Kevin is now learning to play the music by ear and rote. "He will eventually learn Braille music, but right now ear training is more important," she said.

Kevin is also a fourth grader at Burnett Elementary.

The cost of fuel. And why it affects your electric bill now more than ever.

When we say "fuel" at Texas Electric, we mean the fuel that we use to make your electricity—primarily natural gas and lignite coal.

The cost of fuel is a necessary part of the cost of making electricity. Next year all the fuels we use will cost more, especially natural gas. This is partly because an old contract for low-cost natural gas expires at the end of this year. The gas provided by that contract will have to be replaced with gas selling at the "going rate," which is about 15 times as much as we now pay under the contract.

We buy all our fuels at the lowest price available.* We charge our customers exactly what we have to pay for fuel. And we show the amount for "fuel" on your bill each month.

If you'd like more information about the fuels it takes to make your electricity, give us a call. At Texas Electric, we want you to understand what you're paying for.

Several elementary schools in the district are sponsoring a seminar on "The Fine Art of Parenting" Monday, Wednesday and Thursday. Lecture and discussion will be presented by Gary Haaland, ThM., counselor. Time will be from 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. at Lamar on Monday, Rusk on Wednesday and Crockett on Thursday. The event is a Parent and Family Life Education program offered as a cluster activity by the various PTA's. Meetings are open to the public and a nursery will be provided. Pictured above are persons preparing for the event, including, from left, Sherry Prescott, little Mark Bellamy, Pauline Williams and Marlene Bellamy.

CARE cards will benefit needy families

NEW YORK (AP) — With the approach of the holiday season, CARE, the international aid and development agency, has announced a holiday gift card plan.

"This provides a distinctive way for people to send meaningful greetings to friends, relatives and business associates, while at the same time helping needy families overseas," says Dr. Philip Johnston, executive director.

"The cards let each person know that you have given in his or her honor to help needy families in 37 developing countries in Asia, Africa, Latin America and the Middle East."

The gift, Johnston explains, helps provide nourishing food for hungry children, materials to build rural schools, equipment for villagers to construct water systems, tools and training for struggling farmers to grow more food, plus other self-help projects for survival today and self-support tomorrow.

"And through MEDICO, the medical arm of CARE, you also help send teams of doctors and nurses to teach better health care and medical practices in remote areas," he adds.

Names and addresses on your list, with a minimum contribution of $3 per card, can be sent to CARE, Dept. HOL, Box 570A, New York, N.Y. 10156. Allow ample time for mailing. The cards will be sent to you, or if you prefer, directly to persons being honored.

Johnston cites examples of what contributions can do: $5 serves 100 children bowls of porridge for a week; $10 pays for hand tools for a farmer; $15 covers a month's training for a rural health worker; $25 provides clean water for a village through a community well.

Students in public relations

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A group of University of Southern California undergraduates in medical and health fields are volunteering their services and gaining clinical experience through a program sponsored by USC's Joint Educational Project.

The students, all bilingual, serve at two public clinics with many Spanish-speaking patients. Besides giving educational programs and translating, they take patient histories, assist in group counseling, provide information and referrals about community health services or act as a physician's assistant.

The students are majors in biology, biochemistry, predentistry, social work, psychology, physical therapy and occupational therapy.

More in work force

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women are playing an increasingly important role in the Latin American labor force, reports the Inter-American Development Bank's annual survey on social and economic development in the region.

The entry of women into the region's labor force grew by 3.6 percent annually in 1975-80 and is projected to increase by 3.8 percent in 1980-85 and another 3.6 percent annually in 1985-90.

How to drill an oil well — successfully

EDITOR'S NOTE: This story is one of an intermittent series of reports on the drilling of wildcat oil well No. 1 Houpt, located south of Midland. The series is intended to explain part of the oil well drilling process to our many readers who are not familiar with it. The series began Sept. 27.

By DAVID C. SODAMANN
Oil Editor

A week ago today the No. 1 Houpt was declared to be an oil well. Tomorrow a workover rig will move on to the location to complete the project.

The crew working Gene Sledge's Rig Four reached TD, or total depth, at 11,800 feet last Saturday night. Sunday, loggers tested the open hole cut since setting the second intermediate casing.

The logging operation was conducted much as the first had been two weeks previously. Dorchester geologist David Butts was again present to analyze the logs. This time he had to use the log data to decide whether or not the Houpt should be completed, or abandoned as a dry hole.

"Even before we were through logging I had seen enough to know," Butts said.

What he "knew" was that the Houpt No. 1 could possibly turn out to be one heck of an oil well.

ADMITTING THAT IT is dangerous to predict an oil well's yield, Butts took a shot at predicting the yield for the Houpt. "We would sure like 250 barrels of oil per day," he said, "but we will settle for 50 barrels on up."

Between 11,200 and 11,400 feet of depth, the Houpt well bore passes through shale and limestone in the lower portion of the Strawn formation. The Strawn commonly produces oil in this region.

"We've got four zones in there we hope are good," Butts said. "We expect to make a good well out of the first one (the one closest to bottom)."

This particular zone, Butts explained, has yielded 332,000 barrels of oil at a wellsite one mile east of the Houpt. Butts expects it to yield at least as good at the Houpt. If it does, Dorchester could earn up to $13 million from the bottom zone alone. "That's pretty good money," Butts said. "We could pay for our well three or four times over."

The second zone is something of a surprise. The logs indicate it should yield as much oil as the bottom zone. If it does, Butts said, it might be a first, because the zone has apparently never yielded oil before at any location.

THE THIRD AND FOURTH zones look good on the logs. They are "pay" zones in a field about six miles southeast of the Houpt.

Butts said the Houpt looks so good, in fact, it has become the subject of many excited conversations at the Dorchester offices here in Midland, and at headquarters in Dallas as well.

The reason for the excitement is simple. The Houpt is the company's fourth well drilled in Midland County, and only one of the four has been a producer. "Our batting average is not very good at this point," Butts said. The Houpt should improve the averages somewhat.

Shortly after the Houpt's potential became evident, Butts, and Dorchester drilling superintendent Leroy Hurt decided to run a 5 1/2 "liner," to case the lower portion of the well. The liner was run in the hole and cemented in essentially the same manner employed when setting the earlier strings of casing.

As the Houpt now exists, there is a string of 16-inch surface pipe, from the surface to 365 feet of depth; the first intermediate casing, 10 3/4-inch, from surface to 4,986 feet; the second intermediate casing, 7 5/8-inch, from around 9,840 feet back up to surface; and the 5 1/2 liner from bottom back up to 9,530 feet, inside the second casing.

Bringing the Houpt to this point has cost Dorchester $1.92 million. Part of the cost is shared by the company's partner in the operation, New England Energy Inc.

IF THE LOGS HAD INDICATED the zones near bottom would not be productive, the 5 1/2 inch liner would not have been run, and the well would have been abandoned as a dry hole. Should this have happened the cost of the well would have been reduced to $1.38 million.

A big part of the expense was for the drilling rig. It cost $7,090 a day. The two logging operations cost approximately $22,000 each, for 12 hours work each time.

The workover rig moving onto the Houpt Monday is, compared to the Rig Four, a small structure. In principal, it functions much like a rotary drilling rig, although it doesn't have the strength of the larger rig. The purpose of the workover rig is to handle the "light" chores of completing or maintaining, i.e. "working over", oil and gas wells.

The workover will move in, rig up and get some small jobs out of the way.

Then the casing opposite the first pay zone will be "perforated." The perforations, or holes, allow the oil and/or gas to flow out of the rock and into the pipe.

THE PERFORATING will be done with a "gun." On the outside, the gun looks a lot like an ordinary piece of pipe, but it contains explosives — shaped charges — which shoot jets of flame through the casing and into the formation when detonated. The jets burn through the steel and rocks much as a cutting torch would.

At one time, perforating guns actually fired bullets.

Once the casing is perforated, the Houpt will be observed for a while, perhaps a couple of days, to see what may happen. It is hoped that oil will begin to flow to the surface naturally.

If oil doesn't flow, there will be a "frac job," that is sand and fluid will be pumped at high pressure down the well, through the perforations and into the formations, fracturing the rock. By fracturing the rock, more open spaces are created for the petroleum to flow through.

If, after fracing, the well still does not flow naturally, it will be "swabbed." A rubber cup that fits tightly inside pipe in the hole will be lowered and pulled up rapidly, creating suction, which pulls fluid into the pipe. Often this process will cause a well to begin to flow.

SHOULD ALL ELSE FAIL, a "pumping unit," or "pump jack" as they are often called, may eventually be set over the hole, and a pump will be used to raise the oil.

Butts is optimistic.

"Hopefully it will kick off and start flowing by itself," he said.

Oilmen like flowing wells, as they are less expensive to operate. Expensive pumping units and energy to drive them aren't needed on a flowing well.

In any case, Butts expects the No. 1 Houpt will be making marketable oil sometime within the next two weeks.

RIG FOUR has moved on to another job. Friday afternoon it spudded in on a new well about 10 miles south of the Houpt. For the rig and its crews, there is little time off. Theirs is a seven-day-a-week job.

At No. 1 Houpt, they made hole for 38 days. They drilled 583 1/2 hours, wearing out 10 bits ranging in size from 20 inches to 6 1/2 inches.

Rig Four's work at the Houpt came to an end something like this.

Last Saturday night, TD was reached at 11,800 feet. Drilling stopped and mud was circulated to condition the hole for logging. Then the drill pipe was pulled out of the hole. Starting early Sunday morning, the lower portion of the hole was logged, and the casing decision was made.

When logging was complete, the drill pipe was run back in the hole, mud was circulated again to clean up the hole, the pipe was pulled out and then used to lower the liner into place.

Once the liner was cemented in, the drill pipe was pulled again. This time they "came out laying down," and the pipe was laid back on the racks.

Thursday was "rig down day," as Rig Four was disassembled and readied to move. Friday it was rigged up on a new location and spudded another well.

Senate told gas bills could jump

WASHINGTON (AP) — Residential customers could see their natural gas bills jump by $243 in one year unless the current program for decontrolling natural gas prices is modified, a Senate committee was told Friday.

The American Gas Association, which represents local gas distribution companies, said fears about a substantial price jump under the current decontrol timetable are real, but for different reasons than usually given.

Under present law, the price of about 60 percent of natural gas — supplies from wells which began producing after April 20, 1977 — will be completely decontrolled on Jan. 1, 1985.

Supporters of a faster decontrol timetable are arguing that although prices of this so-called new gas are gradually rising between now and 1985, the increases are too low and will result in a substantial price shock to consumers in 1985.

The AGA study presented to the Senate Energy Committee disputed this contention. The study said planned price increases between now and 1985 did not need to be changed, but the study warned that current contract agreements have escalator clauses which will impose substantial price increases unless they are modified.

The study predicted homeowners will be paying $583 for natural gas annually in 1984 and $826 in 1985 — a 42 percent increase in one year and more than double current prices.

The AGA study said that if Congress passes legislation modifying these clauses, the average 1985 bill will only increase by $73, or 13 percent over 1984 levels.

However, officials representing various natural gas producers disputed the AGA's contention that the escalator clauses — many of which tie the price of deregulated natural gas to 110 percent of the cost of fuel oil — would spell a disaster to consumers.

They argued that about 40 percent of natural gas supplies will remain under controls forever under current law and this "cushion" of cheap gas will put the average price consumers pay for all natural gas still below prices for competitive fuels.

Various producers told the committee that the current decontrol plan should be scrapped for a plan to completely deregulate all supplies of natural gas over the next three years.

The producers said if this was done, they would support AGA's push to have contract clauses modified by law.

AGA President George Lawrence said his group remains opposed to complete decontrol. Distribution companies, which make their money off the amount of gas sold, fear that they will lose customers to competing fuels if the prices rise too quickly.

Producers, on the other hand, contend that singling out natural gas as the only fuel remaining under government price controls is unfair and is hindering exploration for future supplies.

The Senate hearings had been expected to kick off a major push to accelerate the current decontrol timetable. But the Reagan administration indefinitely shelved its effort to seek faster decontrol after congressional leaders told President Reagan on Tuesday that they did not want to take up the divisive issue this year.

Basin, national rig counts climb

The Permian Basin rotary rig count inched upward again last week. According to a survey by Reed Rock Bit Co. there were 482 rigs making hole as of Friday. The previous week 479 rigs were counted.

The national count is up as well. The Interantional Association of Drilling Contractors tallied 4,346 rigs making hole Nov. 2. The Oct. 26 figure was 4,339. Of the national total, 1,311 rigs were working onshore in Texas, and another 139 were working New Mexico.

One year ago, 342 rigs were turning to the right in the Basin.

The 5 1/2-inch liner is run in the No. 1 Houpt. Working high in the derrick, the stabber steadies a joint as it is connected. Setting the liner was one of the last steps toward completion of the Houpt, which, it appears, will be a very good well.

Good news for everyone.
Better news for investors.

E.F. Hutton invites you to a seminar on the new tax law.

Forget the high tax rate on investment income.
Forget the old capital gains tax.
Forget the old restrictions on personal retirement funds.
Forget the old guidelines on estate and gift taxes.
Forget what you know about tax shelters, utility dividend investment plans, and commodity straddles.
In short, forget just about everything you know about taxes and tax investment. Because now, with this country's biggest tax cut on your doorstep, there's a whole new way to slay the tax dragon.

Learn about the new tax law, face-to-face with E.F. Hutton.

Wallace urges congressmen to oppose Soviet pipeline

Texas Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace has urged all members of the Texas Congressional Delegation to voice their opposition to proposed United States participation in the construction of a Soviet pipeline from Siberia to Western Europe.

Wallace said the 3,726-mile, 56-inch natural gas pipeline from Siberia to Western Europe carries "serious, long-term implications not only for the United States but the free world in general."

In a letter to the 26-member delegation, Wallace said he is concerned that the United States government has already tentatively aproved the sale off $40 million in pipeline-laying equipment to the Soviet Union.

"Our government has reportedly stated that under the terms of the sale, the pipelayers are not to be used in the construction of the Siberian project," Wallace said.

"But who can guarantee adherance to such a restriction?"

Wallace, the senior member of the state's oil and gas regulatory agency, said news accounts aiso suggest some multi-national oil companies may be involved.

"Many do not understand the significance of this pipeline," Wallace said. "But it appears to me that American industrial technology may make it possible for Russia to dangerously extend its influence over NATO countries."

Wallace said that according to news accounts of the proposal, the natural gas to be flowed through that line is expected to ultimately push West Germany's dependence on the Soviet Union for natural gas from around 16 percent to 30 percent of their natural gas needs.

"Pipelines have the capacity to change history--it has happened before," he said. "one pipeline saved us--this Siberian pipeline, however, threatens us."

He recalled the "Big Inch" pipeline built from East Texas to the northeastern states in the 1940s that, in effect, helped change the world.

"For it was through that line that more than 40 percent of the oil for entire allied war effprt was pumped," Wallace said. The line was built to stop the destruction of American oil tankers along the United States' eastern coast.

"I believe this Russian pipeline has the potential of changing the world order as well," Wallace said.

"I urge you to declare your opposition to this project and, especially, United States participation in it," he said.

At the same time, Wallace said the alternative should be the sale of American coal to bolster energy supplies in Europe.

****

A survey of the nation's major interstate natural gas pipeline companies and their wholesale customers by the Federal Energy Regulatory commission staff projects no significant disruption of natural gas service or supply, even if this winter is colder than normal.

The staff report is an analysis of the winter gas supply for the 28 interstate commerce. The pipeline companies anticipate natural gas supplies of 6,141 billion cubic feet available for the winter heating season, November 1981 through March 1982, an increase of 103 billion cubic feet or two percent over actual deliveries the previous year. This temporary surplus represents continued reduction in demand for natural gas because of conservation, a sluggish economy and price competition from alternate fuels, such as fuel oil and coal.

Projections are based on survey responses from the pipeline companies regarding anticipated gas supply, storage operations and inventory, emergency purchases, requirements and curtailment levels.

Fourteen pipeline companies project no curtailment of their customers during the 1981-82 winter season. Another five pipeline companies project cuttailment of only interruptible contract customers, and nine companies project curtailment of firm contract customers, and nine companies project curtailment of firm contract customers during the coming winter season. Eight companies project a surplus of available supplies for the winter over current requirements.

If the winter weather is substantially colder than the coldest weather pattern used in the survey, some disruption of industrial natural gas supplies could be expected. The coldest weather pattern used in the survey is based upon ten percent colder weather than normal during November and March and 20 percent colder than naormal during December, January and February. Alternate fuels, however, are generally expected to be available throughout the country without some unforseen event, such as a shut-off of oil imports, an interruption of liquefied natural gas imports or long periods of unusually cold weather which can affect transportation systems.

Copies of the report, "Impact of 1981-82 Winter Gas Supply for Twenty-Eight Pipeline Companies, "are available in FERC's Division of Public Information, Room 1000, 825 Capitol Street, N. E., Washington, D. C., 20426.

Railroad Commission Chairman Jim Nugent announced that Texas crude oil production totaled 74,991,170 barrels in August.

The figure compares with final compilations of reported July 1981 production totaling 75,475,024 barrels and August 1980 production of 77,574,024 barrels.

Texas oil production averaged 2,419,070 barrels daily in August 1981, down from 2,434,678 barrels daily in July 1981 and from 2,502,407 barrels daily in August 1980.

The August 1981 allowable totaled 100,723,482 barrels. The preliminary August summary indicated Texas oil production was 25.55 percent under the allowable for the month.

Lovelady completes significant extension to Schleicher field

Ike Lovelady, Inc., has completed a significant extension to the University 101 Ellenburger field in Schleicher County, Texas.

The No. 4 University "22" well has been potentialed flowing 105 barrels of oil per day, with no water and with a flowing tubing pressure of 840 pounds per square inch. Production was obtained through a 10/64" choke from an open hole completion in the Ellenburger formation at 7,950 feet to 8,042 feet. The well also indicated the probability of producing gas from the Canyon zone between 7,100 and 7,200 feet.

Ike Lovelady, Inc., owns a 21.875 percent working interest in the well and in the surrounding 640 acres.

Ike Lovelady, Inc., is an oil and gas exploration and producing company based in Midland, Texas, and is engaged in domestic oil and gas exploration, development and production.

Center uses satellites for exploration

FORT WORTH — A Center for Remote Sensing and Energy Research, the only such facility in the Southwest and one of only three in the nation utilizing the modern exploration tool for remote sensing for energy and mineral exploration, became fully operational at Texas Christian University on Aug. 1.

The University's geology department is stepping inton a leadership position in remote sensing technology, which is playing an increasingly important roal in large-area resource evaluation.

TCU's unique program utilizes NASA satellites to pinpoint areas of specific interest, such as those that have oil and gas potential. Information derived from the analysis is turned over to oil and natural resource companies on a contract basis.

Techniques using NASA satellite imagery have proved valuable for mapping regional and local fracture systems that control oil and gas accumulations as well ass for detecting surface alterations associated with ore deposits for provding data for geologic mapping. With the recent installation of a remote analysis station (RAS), which includes a television screen and interactive ability with software and a computer memory bank, the TCU system allows for calling images of the earth from the NASA satellites.

Combining geological techniques with engineering applications, the Center for Remote Sensing and Energy Research is involved in such projects as strip mining, coastal zone managment near Corpus Christi Bay, engineering applications on water channels, land-fill sitings and urban planning. Capabilities of the water system also make it particulary valuable in the search for and/or study of soils for clay content, as is being considered by one of the nation's largest brick companies, as well as watershed areas for the recharging process of surface water and surface soil types.

Heading the TCU center is Dr. Ken Morgan, assistant professor of geology. A member of the University's faculty since 1978, he earned a masters degree in engineering at Arizona State University and completed the Ph.D. Degree in applications of remote sensing at the universty of Wisconsin in 1978. The land resources specialist, formerly an environmental planner for Indiana State Board of Health, is associated with a group looking into the Overthrust Belt in Wyoming and Colorado, the Texas Permian Basin, Nevada, Mexico and China. His research has been published in such works as the Journal of Soil and Water Conservation, and Canadian Remote Sensing.

Dr. Leo Neland, who directs TCU's environmental sciences program, is associate director of the remote sensing and energy research center. Holder of master's and doctorial degrees from the University of Wisconsin, he holds the position of associate professor of both biology and geology.

The University's remote sensing facility will enable the geology department to access NASA satellite imagery for geologic teaching as well as research. This imagery from throughout the world could be used for interactive data analysis and color visual display, explained Dr. Morgan.

Research capabilities offered by the TCU Center include demonstation projects, technique assessment, resource exploration and energy supply analysis. The interdisciplinary nature of the facility encourages the application of multiple disciplines to energy research in addition to offering access to collaborative resources. It also provides a focal point for energy companies seeking research consulting assistance, Dr. Morgan added.

Projects contracted have included those with Union Carbide and the Department of Energy, Carpenter Oil and Gas Company of Dallas, Meeker Oil Company of Fort Worth, Standard Oil of Ohio, Mapco Inc. of Tulsa, Champlin Petroleum of Fort Worth, Pitcock Oil Company of Graham, American Quassar Petroleum Co. of Fort Worth, and Texaco.

Also participating in a cooperative project with TCU's Center is the Environmental Research Institute of Michigan (ERIM), a non-profit NASA- and state-supported institution that develops remote sensing research interests throughout the United States. Because the Southwest has a lacked a facility, ERIM has helped in developing TCU's capabilities, and these will be used for short course training programs to demonstrate the geologic applications of remote sensing to energy and mineral exploration companies.

Two major pieces of equipment, Dr. Morgan explained, used in the facility are an interactive data analyzer and a stereo transfer scope. The analyzer is able o use both telephone line and hard-wired communication to a host computer, and color display can provide resolutions up to 256 x 256 prxtels. The system's functions include dial-up image-loading speed and quality, the ability to display large portions of image scene by specifying language. Other funtions include imput ground control informatinf ro geometric image corrections and abilty to access the ERIM Earth Resources Data Center for the Landsat data processing.

The stereo transfer scope enables the operator to interpret aerial photography with greater ease, increased accuracy and better indentification. The latter includes showing the relative height of various topographical features such as hills and valleys and of man-made structures such as buildings, bridges and towers, added Dr. Morgan.

Optimistic about the future of this new technology, the TCU geologist points to it "being used to locate a number of other minerals — not just oil and natural gas."

Dr. Ken Morgan, director of TCU's Center for Remote Sensing and Energy Research, uses NASA satellite imagery to pinpoint earth areas that have oi, gas and other energy potential. TCU's new center is the only such facility in the Southwest and only one of three in the nation utilizing the modern exploration tool of remote sensing for energy and mineral exploration

Newton County gas-condensate discovery finaled

ABILENE — Harken Oil & Gas, Incorporated and Longhorn Oil and Gas Company have completed of its Arco Fee No. l, a gas/condensate discovery well, jointly drilled in Newton County.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 12,502 feet and test flowed 2,585,000 cubic feet of gas and 171 barrels of condensate per day through a 14/64" choke with 2,165 pounds flowing tubing pressure from the Wilcox sand formations perforated from 11,918 to 11,934 and 12,016 to 12,044.

The discovery well is approximately 45 miles north of Orange, Texas, and is five miles from previous production in the Wilcox producing trend. The prospect was drilled on a seismic anomally which indicated the possibility of several more locations.

Harken and its 1981-1 Ltd. Partnership has a 50 percent working interest in the well that is operated by Longhorn Oil & Gas Company of Houston, who also is a 50 percent working interest owner.

OKLAHOMA CITY — Midwest Exploration, Inc. has completed the Salisbury No. 1-21 as a Putnam Field development well, Section 21, Township 18 North, Range 19 West, Dewey County, Oklahoma, flowing 4,205,000 cubic feet of gas per day on a 48/64th inch choke with 275 pound per square inch flowing pressure from Oswego formation perforations anticipated in approximately four weeks.

Line pressure of the pipeline is about 180 pounds per square inch.

Midwest working interest in the well is 7.2 percent and gas base price is anticipated to start at $2.55 per MCF with a heating value adjustment raising the price to approximately $3.00 per MCF under Section 103 of the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978.

DENVER — Caribou Energy Inc. of Denver has reported the successful completion of two development wells in Okmulgee County, Oklahoma.

The first well, Detherow No. 110, already is in production. Gas from the well is being sold to Phillips Petroleum Company at the rate of 600,000 cubic feet per day.

The second well, Detherow No. 210, has been tested and is scheduled for pipeline hookup in two or three weeks. Caribou owns a 40 percent working interest in this well and 30 percent working interest in the Detherow No. 110.

Both wells are in Section 10, township 13 north, range 13 east and were completed in the Dutcher zone at a depth of about 2,180 feet. The Detherow No. 110 has a calculated open flow rate of 2.8 million cubic feet of gas per day and the Detherow No. 210 a calculated open flow rate of 1.8 million cubic feet per day.

****

FORT WORTH — American Quasar Petroleum Company has completed its West Strickland Gas Unit No. 1 as a gas/condensate discovery on the Northwest New Mag prospect in Grayson County.

The well was plugged back from its total depth of 15,070 feet in the Viola formation for completion in the lower Dornick Hills zone below 12,700 feet.

Perforations were made at intervals between 12,745 and 12,794 feet, and from 12,847 to 12,867 feet. On a 2-hour production test through an 11/64-inch choke opening, the well flowed gas at a daily rate of 4 million cubic feet plus 336 barrels of condensate. Shut-in tubing pressure was 6,100 pounds, and flowing tubing pressure was 5,970 pounds.

American Quasar, along with its Can-Am Drilling Programs limited partnerships 1980-1, 1980-2, 1980-3 and 1980-4, has 100 percent working interest in the well before payout, with 65 percent working interest after payout. There are approximately 4,350 gross undeveloped acres in the prospect area.

CALGARY, Alberta — Hudbay Oil (Malacca Strait) Ltd., a wholly owned subsidiary of Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas Company Limited has completed second delineation well drilled by the company and its associates, offshore Indonesia in the Malacca Strait contract area, has been flow tested at a combined rate of 10,519 barrels per day of clean, light gravity crude oil, further confirming the earlier oil discovery in the area in August, 1980.

The company has a 50 percent share of the contractor's interest in this 2.9 million acre area which lies offshore Sumatra.

The MSU-5 well was flow tested from the three separate test intervals on a one and a half inch choke size. The sands tested are at depths from 3,214 to 3,558 feet, within the Sihapas group of early miocene age. The MSU-5 well is located in a water depth of 53 feet, approximately 500 miles northwest of Jakarta and 100 miles west of Singapore.

All of the three wells drilled on the MSU structure have been successfully tested and yielded a total combined flow rate of 28,000 barrels per day. A second new field discovery in June, 1981, at the MSA-1 well, located on a separate structure approximately 3.5 miles south of the MSU discovery, tested at a rate of 12,017 barrels per day. Additional delineation drilling on both structures is scheduled to be completed by year-end.

Hudbay Oil (Malacca Strait) Ltd. is operator of the contract area for a group of companies which hold a production sharing contract with Pertamina, Indonesia's state owned petroleum enterprise.

The nuclear option

All this talk about "limited nuclear warfare" which surfaced during recent days may be labeled a step toward insanity by opponents of nuclear power and nuclear weapons. That represents an ostrich view of the world today, a dangerous position for any freedom-loving nation to assume.

One can understand the apprehension of those who would prefer not to address the issue of nuclear war. Their reasoning appears to be based on the assumption that talking about the subject makes its eventuality more likely. It certainly does not reduce the number of nations now possessing "the bomb" or the capability of producing it within a short span of years.

The reality of today, thus, makes it essential that the nations with the bomb fully realize the various options open to them short of nuclear holocaust. One of those options is "limited nuclear warfare," a concept being batted around to the discomfort of many.

That discomfort is understandable. A nuclear bomb is a weapon which has one purpose and one purpose only — the death of a nation's enemies and the destruction, to a large extent, of that enemies' civilization. Rather than subscribing to the premise that discussion of limited nuclear warfare makes such warfare — and escalation to all-out nuclear war — all the more likely, we think it will render a nuclear holocaust less likely. Limited nuclear warfare is an option, not a pleasant one but at least more sane than total destruction.

Albert Einstein, the brilliant scientist whose work and support in the field of atomic research helped lead to the development of the atomic bomb, said, "The release of atomic energy has not created a new problem. It has merely made more urgent the necessity of solving an existing one ... I do not believe that civilization will be wiped out in a war fought with the atomic bomb. Perhaps two-thirds of the people of the earth will be killed."

Einstein was not being cynical, he was being realistic in his assessment of the power of the atom and man's ability to control his destiny. Total destruction is not an inevitability but an option. It's an option no humane nation wants to see become a reality.

That's why it's important that limited nuclear warfare be discussed and recognized as an option. The decision of whether to resort to limited nuclear war or whether to allow an escalation to a holocaust will have to rest with the wisdom of today's leaders.

Follow Arizona's lead

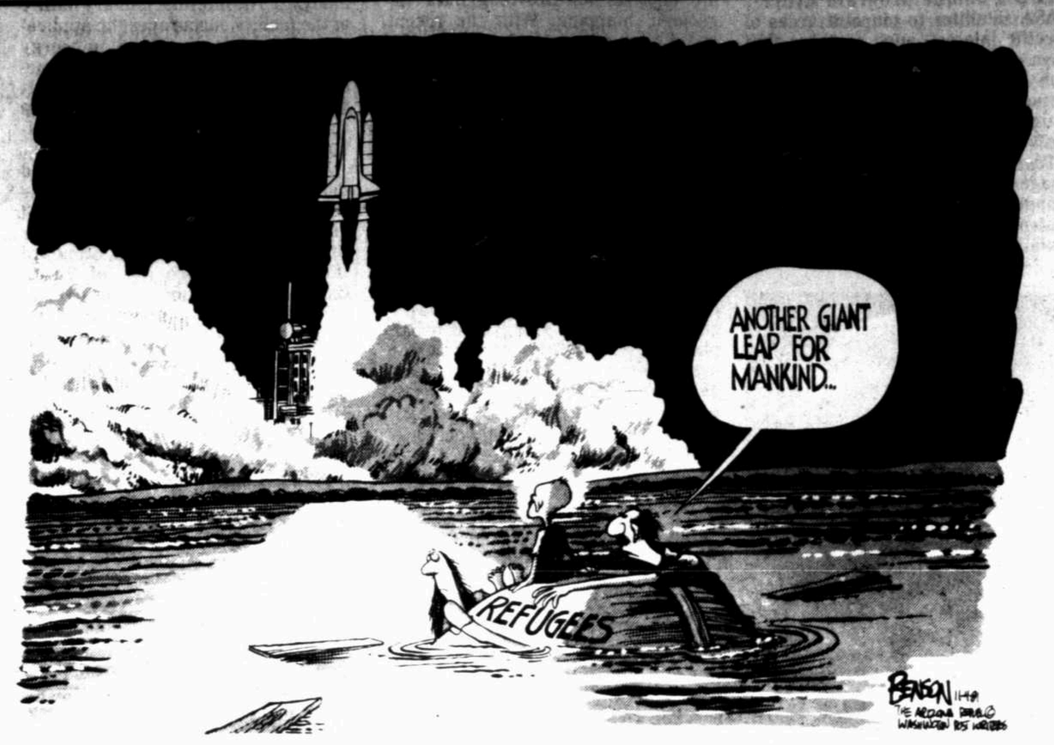

Out in Arizona, the land of sunshine, state officials have a bright idea for pruning waste in government. They get rid of the deadwood.

This is done with a sort of "firing" squad, headed by a two-man team which scouts the state for lazy or bumbling state employees. When found, the offenders are fired, demoted or suspended.

"We're destroying Arizona's reputation as the last bastion of the lame, lazy and incompetent," said Tom Rogers, an assistant state attorney general. The other head of the team to rid the state's payroll of goof-offs is Gordon Price, a state employee relations analyst.

Rogers and Price try to make sure that correct procedure is followed for employee discipline. Their main weapon is a half-inch thick book of laws, rules and sample form letters that is distributed to supervisors.

Their system appears to be working. About 1,000 of Arizona's 18,000 state employees fell victim to the Rogers-Price axe last year alone. Maybe some other states — and the federal government — could profit by using this kind of purge.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Afghanistan stalemate isn't Russian Vietnam

WASHINGTON — Contrary to prevailing notions, the Soviet stalemate in Afghanistan is nothing like the American experience in Vietnam a decade ago. The more cautious elements inside the Kremlin control the levers, and they are conducting a wary, almost timid campaign in Afghanistan.

Jack Anderson

They have committed a sparse force of about 85,000 men to Afghanistan — barely enough to hold the key cities and man the garrisons. The old men of the Kremlin seem determined not to let Afghanistan drain their military power the way the Vietnam War weakened the United States, intelligence reports say.

My foreign correspondent Peter Grant has confirmed these reports on the ground. He slipped into Afghanistan disguised as a freedom fighter, with a full beard and native garb.

"The Soviet and Afghan communist forces control only the largest cities and a few reinforced garrisons," he writes. "We are able to move openly in broad daylight. My hosts are completely unconcerned about the danger of an air attack."

He marched with a guerrilla force that assaulted the government garrison in the remote town of Tamir. The guerrillas flanked the town and laid siege to the outpost, without the slightest intervention from the skies.

"The rebels lived and cooked in abandoned houses," he related. "They made no effort to conceal their positions ... I kept imagining what U.S. tactics would have been under similar circumstances in Vietnam; defoliation of all the vegetation and carpet bombing from 20,000 feet."

In one effort to break out of their besieged trap, the Soviets sent a task force of 40 tanks to the rescue. "But the entire force halted after the Mujahidin blew up one tank just two miles from Tamir," wrote Grant.

When he asked guerrilla leaders how they could bottle up a superior communist force, with artillery and machine guns against rifles, they merely shrugged. "Most of them gave the credit to Allah."

Grant's companions were under fire from tanks, mortars and heavy artillery from within the fort. Yet their heaviest weapons were a recoilless rifle on the back of a donkey and a Soviet ground-to-air missile.

The resistance fighters wasted their captured missile on a shot that missed its target. "The only response from the enemy," wrote Grant, "was some relatively harmless machine gun fire. I was dumbfounded. For half an hour, we picked off machine gun nests. Yet the communists never put their heavy guns into action."

In retrospect, Grant reported, "I realized that the cautious tactics of the communists in this one engagement conformed to the pattern I had observed since entering Afghanistan. Everywhere I went I saw the Soviets neglecting military and strategic considerations for the sake of keeping their losses of both men and equipment to an absolute minimum."

During an arduous trek from the Pakistan border to Tamir, Grant observed hundreds of freedom fighters, their camels and donkeys laden with arms, plodding toward the battle area. "Our route was more like a superhighway than a hidden trail and was easily identifiable from the air," he said.

"As we trekked across the plain, I marveled at our freedom of movement. This tells the story, I thought. No one could argue that the guerrillas do not control this area if they are able to transport ammunition so freely in broad daylight."

On his return to Pakistan from the war, Grant sought more sophisticated comment from western diplomats. This suggested subtler reasons than Allah's intervention had persuaded the Russians to pull in their horns.

"They pointed out that from the very beginning, political considerations have dictated military strategy in Afghanistan," he wrote. "World opinion and domestic economic pressure have prevented the Russians from increasing their troop level above 85,000 men.

"This has forced them consolidate their scarce forces in the critical areas. So far these areas are far from secure. The countryside and towns like Tamir are slowly but surely coming under rebel control.

"The failure of the Soviets to make more than a token effort to rescue the besieged garrison is but another piece of evidence of how far the military situation has deteriorated for them."

But one diplomatic source cautioned Grant: "They are going to have to start making some decisions soon."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Nov. 8, the 312th day of 1981. There are 53 days remaining in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 8, 1917, Lenin became chief commissar of Russia and Leon Trotsky was named premier.

On this date:

In 1793, the Louvre Museum in Paris opened to the public.

In 1950, history's first jet plane battle took place as U.S. fighters were attacked by North Korean MIGs near the Yalu River during the Korean conflict.

In 1977, Israel shelled Palestinian guerrilla concentrations in southern Lebanon.

And in 1979, U.S. envoys met with representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization in Turkey in an effort to end the four-day hostage stalemate in Iran.

Ten years ago: The Pay Board voted to limit Americans' pay raises to 5.5 percent, under President Nixon's economic stabilization program.

Five years ago: Federal investigators were told South Korean officials were attempting to illegally influence policies of the U.S. Congress.

One year ago: About 1,000 medical students in the Polish city of Gdansk went on strike as part of the Solidarity movement's campaign for labor freedom.

ART BUCHWALD

Talk turning to modification of unthinkable

I can't tell you where the Limited Nuclear War Room is in Washington, but I can assure you that everyone there is working very hard.

Art Buchwald

Wakko, whose book, "Nuclear War — Keep It Small, Keep It Simple," is must reading for defense planners, said the idea of a Limited Nuclear War, or LNW as it is referred to in inner circles, is now catching on with more and more people who once felt nuclear war was unthinkable.

"According to our feasibility studies," he told me on the LNW mess, "it is now possible to fight a Limited Nuclear War with minimal damage to the U.S. and the Soviet Union."

"Where?" I asked.

"Luxembourg. The terrain is excellent and the population is small. If both sides can contain it there, we won't get much fall-out from the rest of the NATO countries. What do you think?"

"I'm no expert on LNW," I said, "but I don't see how we could keep it limited to just Luxembourg."

"If it does spill over, we're prepared to fight in Switzerland."

"I thought Switzerland was neutral."

"It is, but we can't do anything about the prevailing winds. If they're blowing that way, we may have to write off Geneva."

"I'm sorry to hear that. I was always fond of Geneva."

"Well, it's either Geneva or Paris, and we want to do everything in our power to spare Paris, if we possibly can."

"How come?"

"We were planning to set up our LNW headquarters there. Our generals prefer the hotels over Brussels."

"What guarantees do you have in a LNW that Paris won't be nuked?"

"We've told the Soviets if they zapped Paris, then we would nuke East Berlin."

"What about London?"

"We can't guarantee every European city in a Limited Nuclear War any more than the Russians can. But the object is to keep the fighting to the smaller towns, which won't be missed."

"I hope you can spare Rome and Florence," I said.

"I'm sure we can save Rome, but I can't give you any guarantees on Florence. If the Soviets come up from the south we're going to have to stop them somewhere."

"Have you written off Stockholm and Copenhagen if they attack from the north?"

"The Kremlin is aware that if they flatten Stockholm and Copenhagen, we'll wipe out Budapest and Warsaw. You see the beauty of Limited Nuclear War is that both sides can pick their targets, and if they overstep them, they know the other side will retaliate. For example, if the Soviets radiate Amsterdam, then we'll clobber Prague, and if they decide to destroy Lisbon, we'll hit Bucharest. This could lead to a major confrontation between the super powers, and we don't think the Soviets want that."

"As long as you believe an LNW can just be kept to the smaller towns in Europe, I don't see why any sane person would be against it," I said.

"We're getting some opposition from Europe, but we think it's being stirred up by the Communists. One of our jobs is to persuade our friends on the Continent that a Limited Nuclear War is in their best interests, even if it has to be fought on their soil."

"Better Madrid than Miami," I said.

"Well," Wakko said, "I've got to go back to work. We're war gaming an LNW in Monaco."

BEN WICKS

"Is it my fault you're a Reagan cutback?"

GEORGE F. WILL

William F. Smith's jurisprudence better than it sounds

WASHINGTON — William French Smith looks like an objet d'art that might be advertised in the New Yorker magazine, a sleek figurine called "The Attorney," manufactured by one of those companies that produce porcelain owls and bullfinches. If the ambiguities and controversies of jurisprudence, or anything else, roil the attorney general's inner life, the roiling does not mark the unlined face that is framed by silvery hair.

George F. Will

In a recent speech, Smith undertook to explicate the administration's determination to use selective litigation opportunities to lead the judiciary toward restraint regarding such matters as equal protection (irrational busing and quotas), antitrust, criminal justice and criteria of justiciability. But Smith's — or his speechwriter's — rhetoric undermined his reasoning. Rarely has inapposite prose done such a disservice to sensible principles.

Smith said that "the groundswell of conservatism evidenced by the 1980 election makes this an especially appropriate time" for the Justice Department to use litigation "to urge upon the courts more principled bases that would diminish judicial activism." He said: "History teaches us that courts are not unaffected by major public change in political attitudes." He quoted Justice Benjamin Cardozo: "The great tides and currents which engulf the rest of men do not turn aside in their course and pass the judges by." He cited Mr. Dooley's chestnut about the Supreme Court following the election returns. He said that Mr. Dooley was explaining the Court's 1901 decision that constitutional protections did not automatically attach to territories annexed after the Spanish-American war. Smith said the Court in 1901 was "paralleling the public opinion expressed in the election" of 1900.

Unfortunately, by noting and quoting these things complacently, even approvingly, Smith seemed to imply that courts should follow election returns, judges should be engulfed by political tides and currents, and jurisprudence should change as political attitudes change. Smith likes the most recent tides and currents, but there will be others, and his speech may one day be cited to suggest the propriety of following them, too.

Liberal judicial activism has not been rationalized as following election returns, but as a way of correcting the "infirmities" of representative institutions and the "timidities" of elected officials by addressing "unmet social needs." But the liberal principle is a close cousin to the one that lurks in Smith's speech: Courts should take their bearings from social judgments and political outcomes.

But surely, conservative jurisprudence is not as result-oriented as liberal jurisprudence; it is not just ardent for other results. It emphasizes process, and the duty of judges to render decisions controlled by the text, history and structure of the law.

Smith's infelicitous language allowed the New York Times to portray his speech as a "politicizing" attack on the idea of an "independent" judiciary. Ye Gods! The Times has been a persistent applauder of the activism that has led courts to legislate new rights and new hierarchies of rights; to promulgate bizarre biological doctrines to mow down 50 states' laws (abortion); and to seize the administration of school, prison and public housing systems. A sense of the ridiculous should prevent the Times from now waxing indignant about the thought that someone might "politicize" courts.

The political movement of which the Times is a supporter now depends heavily for the achievement of its ends on judges who understand "independence" as an absence of inhibitions inherent an the judicial function. They understand an "independent" judiciary as one engaged in the free-wheeling pursuit of social preferences. When political movements become anemic, and impotent at democratic persuasion (conservatives in the 1930s; liberals today), they resort to litigation to avoid legislation.

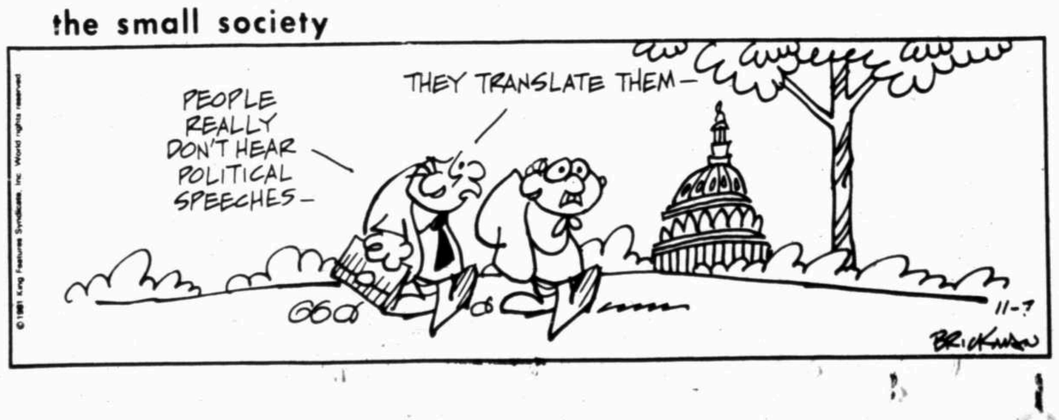

Smith merely wants to use litigation to make arguments for courts to enlarge their deference toward democratic branches of government. Granted, his is a jurisprudence that is apt to appeal to those who are, at any moment, politically confident. But its talidity is unrelated to political vicissitudes.

Close analysis of speeches such as Smith's may be mistaken. Most senior officials have little time or inclination to write their own speeches; few have the ability to actually speak to, as opposed to read at, an audience. Unscripted, extemporaneous public speaking, in which the audience sees a person's mind at work, has been largely supplanted by a kind of public declaiming in which the audience does not even hear the speaker's own words.

I note this not to excuse officials who deliver off-key speeches assembled by tone-deaf aides, but only to suggest a possible explanation for this fact: Smith's jurisprudence is (as Mark Twain said of Wagner's music) better than it sounds.

Flawn fears state boards troubled by lack of definition

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Dr. Peter Flawn, the scholarly geologist who serves as president of the University of Texas at Austin, says he's not really throwing rocks just at the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System.

"It's not so much that I'm criticizing the Coordinating Board," Flawn says, "but I think their areas of responsibility should be better defined."

At a recent meeting of the general faculty of UT-Austin, Flawn blasted what he calls increasing intrusion into academic processes through regulation in the guise of coordination at the state level and through accounting, reporting and compliance requirments at the federal level."

What has been happening, Flawn says, is that UT — and other universities — must grind out a staggering volume of reports demanded by state, Federal and quasi-governmental agencies, and by accreditation associations."

There are, as he pointed out, time reports, workload reports, annual evaluations, course evaluations, grievance procedures and hearings, elaborate recruiting and hiring procedures, "excessively detailed" personnel policies planning exercises, course inventories, program reviews and program evaluations.

And Flawn did direct a few comments specifically at the Coordinating Board — the same of which, he said, "disguises the purpose and function of the board," which "is an agency to regulate higher education."

And, Flawn added, "it is asserting management authority that overlaps and conflicts with authority wasted by the Legislature in boards of regents."

He argued that the authority of the Coordinating Board over course approval gives the agency "authority to prevent institutional faculties from changing the course substance of degree programs to meet the requirements of what are, in many areas, rapidly evolving fields of knowledge."

Flawn also expressed concern that such control may be the first step in a "leveling" of public universities to create a "sameness of curricula...faculty and students."

Commissioner of Higher Education Kenneth Ashworth, who oversees the day-to-day operation of the Coordinating Board, says Flawn's remarks are "simply a different point of view."

"Each individual school," Ashworth says, "wants to fulfill its own aspirations and ambitions."

"If we have too many schools trying to offer the same thing, it dilutes the effort," he says.

In the last four years, Ashworth reports, the Coordinating Board has approved over 250 degree programs "and we have disapproved a lot" — with some other requests having been withdrawn.

"It puts us in the position of being a nay-sayer," he agrees. "We do, from time to time, deny somebody something that they want very much."

And Ashworth says he's a bit puzzled by Flawn's decision to chastize the Coordinating Board.

"When you look at the record," he says, "in all the years since 1965 (when the board was created) we have never turned down a degree program from UT-Austin" — and over 30 requests have been approved.

"The allegation or charge is that we're taking away too much responsibility from the schools...you have to look at the authority we do exercise," he comments.

"We have no authority over grading standards, admission standards, athletics, course content, publications, student housing, budgets, hiring or firing, awarding of tenure...all of those issues are questions that are handled by the local administration and the governing boards of the school."

"We do try," Ashworth says, "to prevent unnecessary publication and get as much efficiency and economy in higher education as possible."

"The greatest problem we have is trying to keep other schools from trying to become like UT-Austin...What we have done, in a way, is protecting schools like (Texas) A&M, UT-Austin, Texas Tech and the University of Houston from having every school in the state trying to be just like them."

That hasn't been easy, he adds, nor is it likely to become easy.

"The fact is that we have a mixed situation among our schools," he comments.

Of Texas' 37 publicly supported senior colleges, 19 lost enrollment this year — while others grew subtantially — with the total enrollment increasing by 1.1 percent.

"Funding is one of the biggest problems we have," Ashworth says, "and it's related to declining numbers...and all of this is tied to the other problem, and that is quality."

POSITIVE THINKING

Courage becomes character

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

As they say, times come and go. Certainly over thhe centuries fantastic changes have taken place on this Earth. It wasn't so very long ago that the horse and buggy was considered the most modern, stylish means of getting from one place to another. Now we regard it almost as humdrum when we send a human being into outerspace and actually observe him spiraling around the globe at 18,000 miles an hour in a vehicle of incredible technological complexity.

Yet, for all the changes we have witnessed, one thing does not change. And that is human nature. Life today, as it was thousands of years ago, is still a question of man meeting the challenge of his environment and man battling with himself. If he fails to win the battle of self-mastery, whatever victory he may achieve elsewhere leaves him inwardly dissatisfied and often yields nothing but bitter fruit in the end.

And the key to self-mastry is courage. The Latin poet, Ovid, observed that courage conquers all things. And hundreds of years later, a French essayist reafirmed this declaration by calling courage the strongest, most generous, and proudest of all the virtues.

A friend of mine a while ago came across an interesting relic of the Old West — the last will and testament of a rugged frontiersman. It was crudely made, but left a great legacy to his son. "This here," he wrote, "is my last will and testament. I ain't got no money to leave you, nothing, exceptin' our old cabin, Old Buck (which was probably his horse) and my two guns. But I do leave you somethin' worth a parcel more than money:

One: A man's word that is as good as his bond

Two: Faith in God

Three: Courage, so you won't be afraid of nothin' or nobody."

Honesty, faith and courage! What a priceless legacy that is! Euripedes said that courage can be taught, as a child is taught to speak. And I rather think that is just what the frontiersman was trying to say. His example would serve his son better than a pouch full of gold, and he was right.

While a parent's good influence can help a child acquire courage, it is not the whole story by a long shot. What we do as his example, is critical. How much courage do we show?

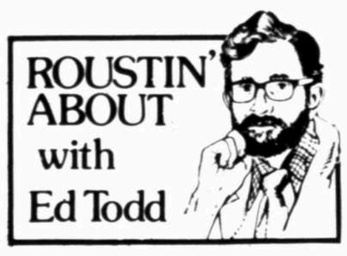

All of human experience tells us that the way of courage is to think courage constantly, and to act with courage in everything we undertake.

This holds true for the little things in life as well as the big things. We need courage to pay our debts promptly when we're tempted to stall our creditors. We need courage to look for a new job when something inside tells us that the old job has become unrewarding. We need courage in disciplining ourselves at the dinner table in turning down that second helping of dessert. We need courage to cut down on our workload and spend more time with our wives and children.

None of us has perfect intelligence, but we must exercise all the intelligence we have to make the most of courage. We must be careful not to equate impetuosity with courage. Decisions should be thought through carefully and when the proper alternative has been chosen, only then, must we proceed forthrightly and unhesitatingly.

The great thing about courage is that, when we get the hang of it, it becomes character. And character, after all, is the referee of our success.

Noboby wants less than best — or worst — record

Nobody really wants a police record unless it's the best (or worst) in the prison camp. If it's long and dirty and more foreboding than Dante's "Inferno," then it's the best of the lot from the evil-doer's viewpoint. From the viewpoint of the cop, judge or warden, it's the worst.

The "badder" the police record, the more the No. 1 Bad Guy can boast that he's far meaner than that ol' ugly junkyard dog.

Indeed, there is honor of sorts among thieves and others who are contemptuous of society's mores, laws, regulations and sacred cows. They have their pride. They have their hierarchy, and you best honor it if you're playing the con man's game of life. Those who don't just might end up below the roost in the chicken coop.

Outside the realm of the outlaw, society is different only in degrees. People are people whatever their background and record. They're more or less honest...to an extent.

"Law never made men a whit more just," penned Thoreau. But it made the would-be offender more stealthy in his criminal actions. Unless he wants to be punished due to a character flaw, the criminal doesn't wish to be caught and brought to justice.

Neither does Mr. Right. But for him, it's quite normal to violate minor laws. It's so much the norm, it's hardly worth mentioning.

"There are not enough jails, not enough policemen, not enough courts to enforce a law not supported by the people," said Hubert H. Humphrey.

Laws regulate the renegade, which is to say every soul alive.

"The violation of some laws is a normal part of the behavior of every citizen," wrote Stuart Chase.

Many people in a highly-organized society have police records. Most would if Big Brother were omnipresent.

"He didn't know the right people," Raymond Chandler said of the unfortunte criminal. "That's all a police record means."

That's what he said.

The convict whose personal preference is against so-called rehabilitation just to impress the system may well concur with E. Ralph Stewart's cynicism: "Of course, there's a different law for the rich and the poor; otherwise, who would go into business?"

If your lot in life is to be the worst rotten apple in the barrel, you've got one helluva challenge. It's almost like trying to be Mr. Perfect. If you didn't start out perfect, how are you going to end up thataway?

The upshoot is this: You might as well give up now on being the meanest, rudest jack in town or in prison. The devil claims the Golden Trophy of Evil, and he's in no position to give it up.

To heck with it.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

● Readers are invited to submit letters to be considered for publication.

Letters may be on any subject, but should not be slanderous or defamatory. They must be signed by the writer and must bear the writer's correct mailing address and a telephone number at which the writer may be contacted during the day, either home or office.

For valid reasons, at the discretion of the editor, the name will be withheld but must be included in the original letter.

Writers should be as concise as possible and the right to condense letters is reserved.

Letters must be received by noon Thursday for Sunday publication. If necessary, the latest received may be held for publication the following Tuesday or Thursday.

They should be addressed to: Letters to the Editor, The Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, Texas 79702.

Unnamed sources

To The Editor:

I wish to take issue with an article which appeared in your newspaper on Tuesday, November 3, 1981. The article written by Richard Orr concerned the resignation of Terry Lowe. Orr quoted unknown veteran policemen and ex-policemen as saying, "Officers, who fall out of favor with Administrative Officials of the Police Department, are transferred to Terminal." This is incorrect. Our Terminal staff are excellent police officers. The vast majority of these men and women work there by their own choice. They are dedicated, sincere, professional policemen who are valued employees and very much respected by their peers. I resent the accusation that this is a "dumpground" for officers who fall from favor.

I know the citizens of Midland are intelligent and recognize that when a reporter quotes anonymous sources, we must rely on the character and integrity of the reporter pertaining to accuracy of the statement for truth and veracity, or for that matter, if such statements ever existed. I regret the unfortunate incident which occurred, but I feel that I personally, and the police department have been treated unjustly by alleged anonymous quotes.

The same show?

To The Editor:

After we read Georgia Temple's Nov. 1 review of "Godspell," we went to see the production with some trepidation. At the conclusion, we wondered if she had seen the same musical as we had. Individual members of the cast deserve considerably more credit than Ms. Temple gave.

To say Greg Hancock "entertained ...with his gymnastics" is a tremendous understatement neglecting his fine solo performance. Janet Considine did more than "an admirable job acting out the parables;" she also sang several beautiful solos. Ture, Don Stroud may be young, but so was Jesus. We believe Stroud's youth enabled him to parallel the optimism and idealism of Christ.

Ms. Temple's statement that "the major problems ... are vocal difficulties and lack of belief in the participants' behalf" is simply untrue. The cast's exuberance more than compensated for any minor vocal problems. To us, the performers' total involvement made their characterizations come alive.

We felt that Ms. Temple's attack of the last song was unjustified. It became moving through its simplicity and repetition.

One-half of Ms. Temple's review was a criticism of the script and a comparison of the script to older Biblical translations. The examples she chose did not illustrate her point. The Book of Matthew was translated from Aramaic to Old English so that the layman as well as the priest could understand God's wisdom and love. "Godspell" also does this; it is a religious and touching play expressing the vitality, hopefulness, and love of Christianity.

If art is, in part, provoking an emotional response then "Godspell" is a masterpiece. Ms. Temple's remark that "The Bible is a work of art; 'Godspell' is not" is totally off-base.

Remove the plank

To The Editor:

Georgia Temple needs to remove the plank (2-by-4) from her own eye before she can even begin to criticize Midland Theatre's production of "Godspell."

Her critique belongs in Stephen Schwartz (composer-lyricist) and John-Michael Tebelak's (adaptor) mailboxes rather than The Midland Reporter-Telegram. Ms. Temple's attacking remarks almost wholly stem from her strong distaste for the play itself lending her further biased criticism of the performance to be utterly worthless and ignorable.

Ms. Temple's apparent uneducated remarks attacking the solo and chorus vocals could (possibly) be remedied by her attendance in a music education and appreciation class.

In closing, "My God my God, why hast SHE forsaken US?"

Growing problem

To The Editor:

The November 4 front page article on low voter turnout at the recent election, roughly 4 percent of the registered voters, illustrates a problem facing our democracy nationwide. Voter apathy.

The burden of this mounting problem clearly rests on the ability of the media to announce, and educate the public in advance of an election to make the event worthwhile. If I believed that The Midland Reporter-Telegram achieved this end I would not be writing the editor.

Voter apathy will continue to haunt the basic fiber of our government until the media, and more importantly the newspaper, begins to cover the issues at stake in a clear, concise and timely manner so as to fully prepare the people to vote.

Paul Kirtley
Midland

EDITOR'S NOTE: It's difficult to comprehend why you believe The Reporter-Telegram failed to meet its obligation of informing Midland voters about the issues in the recent election. From the beginning, Reporter-Telegram reporters covered news conferences conducted locally by various officials and others concerning the proposed amendments. Most of those stories were carried on the paper's front page.

On the Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday preceding the Tuesday election, a series of articles by Assistant City Editor Lana Cunningham addressed the pros and cons of the various proposed amendments. All those articles were carried on the front page.

On the Sunday and Monday immediately preceding the election, The Reporter-Telegram offered two editorials on its editorial page — one giving the newspaper's opinion of the merits of the various amendments and another urging voter turnout in the election because of the importance of the issues. The list of polling, places was printed for five consecutive days prior to the election.

What more can we do as a newspaper to elicit voter turnout?

Lack of talent

To The Editor:

I am writing this letter in regard to the recently played football game between the Midland Lee Rebels and the Permian Panthers.

After viewing the game, I have come to the conclusion that the lack of talent was not the problem with this year's Rebel team. The lack of coaching does come to mind!

In this regard I ask three questions and lay my case to rest:

1) Why has Dykes scribbled the forward pass from his play book?

2) Why would a well-schooled coach put in a prevent-defense late in the game — knowing that the opposing team has only to score a field goal to win?

3) Why would a coach with fleet wide receivers and an excellent tight end refuse to throw the ball?

In viewing the game, I felt as though I was watching an old Houston Oiler football rerun minus Earl Campbell!

How could a coach run up the middle eight out of 10 plays against a Permian defense? It was apparent that Dykes was going to win war of the trenches at all costs — even though the cost was a district championship!

In consolation to the Midland fans and the rest of 5-5A, the Lee Rebels could not have won a state championship or even a play-off game running up the middle every play and playing so conservatively!

In closing, I might add that the Permian Panthers will be a far better district representative than our own Rebels, although not for lack of talent but for superior coaching of the Permian staff!

A play on words

To The Editor:

I am indeed sorry Georgia Temple apparently "missed the boat" in viewing the play Godspell, the current musical production at Midland Community Theatre. Her review of Sunday Nov. 1, 1981, consisted in a large part of criticism of the script, by the young writers, ages 21 and 23, comparing scripture of the Bible with wordage of the play. It is a play on words, with a joyful group of young people spreading the Good News of Jesus Christ and sharing with each other the Joy of Christianity.

The director of the play, Don Bachmann, and the musical director of the show, Tom Roberts, will agree that the night Georgia Temple saw the show, there were some "musical errors," due to the last minute substitution of an actor-singer taking on a difficult role without prior rehearsal. We were of the opinion that he did a very good job considering he replaced an actor that had studied and rehearsed this role for some six weeks. The following night (Saturday and Sunday) he was excellent.

I had some reservations about the show myself: Whoever heard of Jesus Christ being portrayed in striped pants and a Superman T-shirt. After about 10 or 15 minutes of viewing the play and hearing the parables according the Matthew presented by the author and actors, I became involved and enjoyed the show.

In order to attempt to remedy the misgivings that Georgia Temple has about the play and the presentation at Midland Community Theatre, on behalf of Midland Community Theatre, I invite her to return and relax, view the snow as it is intended and give herself a chance to experience the Greatest Message of All Time. However, I wish to warn her, if she is not careful, she may enjoy it as so many people have expressed appreciation to Midland Community Theatre for presenting this show.

It is a great show. I hope no one is influenced in not seeing the show because of the Temple review. If they miss it, it is their misfortune. It is indeed the Good News in today's troubled world; enjoy it and view it as it is intended.

It's not church

To The Editor:

I have just attended a delightful exuberant performance of "Godspell," and am perplexed at the reviewer's (Ms. Temple) inappropriate conclusion that the play is a "not very good rewrite" of the scriptures.

I should like to point out that, despite what we might see on Sunday morning television, church is not meant to be theatre, and theatre, namely "Godspell," is not meant to be church.

Restaurant serves array of Mexican dishes

Visit the Monterrey Cocina Mexicana at 1501 N. Big Spring and enjoy the traditional dishes of Mexico. Service is efficient, and the atmosphere warm and welcoming. Owners George and Gloria Veloz enjoy carrying on the business George's parents began in Midland in 1953. Always happy to see longtime friends at the restaurant, the Veloz are pleased to welcome the many newcomers who come in, too.

In addition to its tempting array of Mexican dishes such as tacos, enchiladas, tamales, quisadillas, chile rellenos, quadalajaras, flautas, the ever-popular carne quisada, and quacamole salad, the Monterrey Cocina's menu now includes steaks. A children's menu is also available, and offers cheeseburgers as well as Mexican dishes.

The Monterrey's bar specialties are the Monterrey Margarita, Pepe's Pina Colada, Bloody Maria, Tequila Sunrise, and Jorge's Sangria. Wine by the glass, domestic and imported beer, and mixed drinks complete the list.

Luncheon reservations may be called in before noon at 684-9447, but they are not required, according to manager Gili Lopez. Separate checks will gladly be made out upon request, if that is convenient for your party. A moveable partition easily makes a private dining room which can be reserved for luncheons, dinners, meetings, and social occasions. Restaurant hours are from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. weekdays and Sundays, and from 11 a. m. to 10:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

The noon hour finds Monterrey Cocina Mexicana's dining room bustling with activity as hungry Midlanders enjoy delicious Mexican food in a warm and welcoming atmosphere. The Veloz family has been operating the Monterrey since 1953. Monterrey Cocina Mexicana at 1501 N. Big Spring is open weekdays from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m.; Saturday and Sunday from 11 a.m. to 10:30 p.m.

Periodical Publishers' Service Bureau has new manager

NEW YORK — John W. Harrison has been appointed southeastern division manager of Periodical Publishers' Service Bureau, it was announced jointly by PPSB President William S. Campbell and John P. Manion, vice president and general manager. The appointment was effective October 1, 1981.

In making the announcement, Manion said: "John is an ideal choice for this key assignment. He has demonstrated outstanding ability in achieving superior results as manager of the Shawnee Mission Branch."

Harrison, 39, joined the Shawnee Mission (Kansas) Branch in October 1979 and immediately started a winning tradition. In 1978, 1979, 1980 and to date in 1981, he has established himself as the national sales leader.

Government wastes $1.3 billion yearly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is wasting about $1.3 billion a year because of fraud, abuse, waste and errors in federal food assistance programs, Agriculture Secretary John Block says.

"This waste and fraud is not only a drain on the U.S. treasury, but it also deprives the truly needy citizens of this nation," Block said in an internal memo that became public Thursday. "We can not and we will not allow this to continue."

The compilation of the annual program losses was part of study Block initiated earlier this year at President Reagan's request.

The memo covered food stamp, school lunch, and other programs.

BUSINESS NOTEBOOK

Business problems to be explored

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Among the 21 task forces planned by Gov. Bill Clements to study various problems in State government is the Governor's Task Force on Small Business — which is due to hold its first meeting at 1:30 p.m. Thursday in Austin.

Clements has named Arturo Flores, former mayor of Eagle Pass and owner of Arturo Flores Agent, Inc., an import-export company, to chair the panel.

The committee is to make its recommendations to the governor and Legislature by Jan. 1, 1983.

Under the charge to the task force, Flores notes, members are to "do everything that we can to improve the climate for small business in Texas, and to promote small business."

That, Flores says, "covers a multitude of things — from looking at negative legislative action to supporting and encouraging legislation that might be good for small businesses in Texas."

Flores also says he anticipates the task force will seek "close coordination" with State agencies which affect small businesses — and may even look at possible recommendations for changes in curriculum at the college and junior college level.

"With a 25-member board," Flores comments, "we ought to be able to tangle with any problems that might be of concern to small businesses."

Flores says he expects the first task force session to be a "discussion session" among members.

He also says he wants to encourage participation in hearings by small businesses — and to hear from folks in small business.

Clements, in announcing the task force, commented that Texas' population is expected to increase from 14.2 million in 1980 to 22 million by 2000, meaning that 170,000 new jobs must be created annually to accommodate that increasing population.

Clements charged the group with finding ways to maintain and attract small business, as well as investigating laws and regulations affecting them.

Clements is expected to announce appointment of additional members to the task force.

State Board of Insurance has disapproved a staff recommendation that insurers no longer be required to file copies of low-premium policies with SBI on a daily basis.

The change had been sought on grounds the agency is running out of space to store the paper generated by the reports, but the proposal was opposed by representatives of the worker's compensation assigned risk pool — who contended the filings are needed to allow proper calculation of premium surcharges and for information on prior carriers and experience.

Two other matters involving worker's compensation have been set for hearing by SBI on Nov. 19.

The first matter is an endorsement and possibly a rate for coverage of volunteer personnel in political subdivisions; the second involves the assigned risk pool's authority to endorse policies to furnish coverage for an insured's operations outside of Texas.

Both changes involved laws passed during this year's legislative session.

The Department of Water Resources is conducting an evaluation of non-hazardous industrial waste disposal facilities and practices — an effort begun in 1980 to identify "those facilities that do not meet the minimum criteria" established under DWR rules and Federal regulations.

Facilities which are classified as "open dumps" after inspection and evalution will be required to be upgraded or closed, DWR reports.

Eight criteria are used to evaluate sites, including floodplain location, endangered species, surface water, groundwater and air pollution, disease vectors, food crops and safety considerations.

During fiscal 1981, DWR inspected 48 facilities and completed classification of 24 of them.

DWR also is awaiting word from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency regarding funds from the so-called "super fund" for clean-up of abandoned waste sites — with four sites in Texas expected to be on the EPA's initial list of 100 sites to receive clean-up funds.

Those four sites are located in La Marque, Crosby, Highlands and Grand Prairie.

The 1981 Legislature authorized Texas' participation in the "super fund," and appropriated $5.6 million for the state's share of the clean-up effort.

Some work already has been conducted at the La Marque site.

It's expected Texas will have additional information regarding the clean-up effort by mid-December.

RINGING THE BELL

Learning about schools

With BOB TIEUEL

From a Black Teacher's Viewpoint: "Dear Bob, As an elementary teacher for 12 years, I can't help being more than a little annoyed by the criticism heaped upon the public schools today. I don't think our schools are as good as they should be, but neither do I think that public education should be made the scapegoat for all of society's problems.

"First, it is time the public realized that schools have changed. No longer is there a clear separation between home and school. Where once home was the place where self-esteem, respect, discipline and values were nurtured, that role has now shifted to the schools. Teachers now serve as surrogate parents as well as amateur psychologists, counselors, sociologists, lawyers and disciplinarians. On top of this, we are expected to teach the three R's, which is our main job.

"I have no quarrel with educating the 'whole child' and monitoring his or her physical, mental and emotional well-being. No teacher can assume that kind of responsibility for every student, however. Students are confused about what school is for. Are they to learn, or to socialize? Should they expect learning to be fun, or should they demand a challenging curriculum? Should they be dependent upon teachers for answers, or should they be motivated to think for themselves? The state must provide adequate funding.

"Administrators must back their personnel. Teachers must be prepared to teach. Parents must take more than a passing interest in what their children are learning... We all need to stop passing the buck to one another, and work together to get the job done," signed J.L.S.

Well said, madam school marm. I bet a lot of bellringers agree with you. Let's back our public schools 100 percent and demand quality education and forget about busing, me thinks.

Black churches and black people themselves have always been in some deeply significant sense, this nation's conscience. This fresh coming together of seven of the major historic black denominations reflects officially the religious aspirations, heritage and purpose of more than one-half of all black Americans.

According to the National Black Monitor, The Congress of National Black Churches is thus a black response — at once infinitely religious and profoundly patriotic — to the social and civic disintegration among "our perplexed and beleagured youth, in our embattled and fractured families and in the fragile and disintegrated black communities throughout the land." These seven national black church bodies present a membership of an estimated 15 millin people and provide the primary informal network of influence in the nation's black community.

The national head of the NAACP, Attorney Benjamin L. Hooks of Washington, D.C., believes that more white people will be affected by present administration cuts than blacks. He said in Dallas recently that in gross numbers, there are 20 million poor whites and 8 million poor blacks. He added, "If the tax cuts trigger another round of inflation, which I am sure they will, then white people will discover that eggs don't go up simply in the supermarkets where blacks trade, they go up everywhere. I think that it is a tragedy that a lot of white people in this nation have not awakened to the fact that these hugh budget cuts in social programs is an assault on the poor of the nation, not just blacks."

Responding to controversial new U.S. Department of Education research that claims bilingual education programs don't work, one high NEA official declared "Teachers consistently express support of good bilingual education as an effective way of meeting the needs of non-English-speaking students."

Houston man arrested on animal cruelty charge

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who said he killed animals to spare them from being used for research was arrested after authorities found two dogs, 11 puppies and nine dead kittens caged in his truck.

Merlin Ray Elliot, a volunteer for animal control and humane organizations, was charged with cruelty to animals — a misdemeanor — and released on $800 bond.

"He said he feels a need to work in euthanasia.," said Lt. Guy Clark of the animal cruelty enforcement division. "He didn't want to do anything else — didn't want to sweep floors. He just wanted to work in the death chamber putting the animals to sleep."

Authorities arrested Elliot on Wednesday afternoon about eight hours after he picked up the animals at a Baytown humane center and promised to deliver them to a Houston animal adoption agency.

Authorites found the dead kittens stacked neatly in a tiny cage and the puppies dehydrated and crying for water, Clark said.

Clark said Elliott also is being questioned about 54 dead animals found in a drainage ditch near his house. They had been hit on the head and then dumped in a ditch, Clark said.

Elliot has not admitted killing the animals found in his truck and said he knew nothing about the animals found in the ditch, Clark said.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Monday, November 9, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Politicians Sargent Shriver and Florida Gov. Robert Graham celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: Hall of Fame baseball pitcher Bob Gibson, folk singer Mary Travers and golf champion Tom Weiskopf. Your sincerity and good humor will help you get your way in the months ahead. The financial outlook is excellent. Because of your many positive qualities, your family relationships are both meaningful and long-lasting. Romance is high on your list of priorities and will provide many tender, loving moments. Your willingness to try new things gives you the edge over your competitors where business and career are concerned.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An excellent day for reaching agreements! Do not overextend yourself financially. You would be wise to pay cash and keep your credit cards in reserve for next month's Christmas shopping.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Joint financial ventures begin to pay off. Do not take actions that will anger your co-workers. This is not the time for a blunt talk. Visit a favorite hideaway this evening.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Influential people are jumpy now. You will be most content when you can return home and do what you want. Your intuition should serve you well in an important meeting.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Tact and diplomacy are your best allies today. Domestic matters require kid-glove treatment. Extra money will come from an unusual source or tip. Rely on your intuition.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Follow the advice of experts. The increased "know-how" resulting from on-the-job-training will help swell profits. An unforeseen emergency will not leave you stranded. Help arrives.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Slow down and pay more attention to detail. Postpone or stagger your appointments. Someone pays you a meaningful compliment. Be strong-willed about saving money.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your associates can be unpredictable today. Work on your own as much as possible. Keep your priorities in mind and protect secrets. Be careful when handling equipment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Increase your insurance protection. A sensitive problem can be easily resolved if you use tact, diplomacy. Consult mate about adding to your income.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may feel that your co-workers have stranded you in mid-air. Work on your own! Higher-ups will take notice of your progress. Give mate greater freedom of choice.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): There will be at least one pleasant surprise for you today. Extra money could come your way. Make those phone calls you have been postponing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An excellent savings program can be started now. Your artistic talents emerge, advancing your career goals. You now find it easier to join forces with those who can help you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A better day for dealing with personal affairs than professional matters. An improvement in your fortunes is indicated! Romance may be draining both your energy and your pocket book. Slow down.

Ft. Worth judge selected

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State District Judge Tom Cave of Fort Worth has been selected to consider Department of Public Safety requests to install wiretaps on suspected drug dealers.

Cave was selected Thursday by John Onion, presiding judge of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals. Cave replaces Judge Byron Matthews, who retired.

Under the law approved by the 1981 Legislature, nine state district judges may be authorized to rule on DPS' wiretap requests.

'Success story' not without difficulties

By BILL MODISETT
Staff Writer

For the business person just starting out in Midland, the local economy ensures a pretty good chance of success. It also guarantees that individual will face some of the difficulties plaguing virtually every business in the rapidly expanding Midland-Odessa area.

"If businesses are doing anything around here, they're expanding," says Dr. Tom Schaefer, professor of management at The University of Texas-Permian Basin in Odessa. Dr. Schaefer is well aware of the challenges the small businessman faces in the locally booming economy. He is chairman of the Odessa chapter of SCORE (Service Corps Of Retired Executives) and of the Small Business Institute (SBI) at UTPB.

Nationally the business community experiences about a 9 percent growth factor each year, Dr. Schaefer says. The statistics indicate there are about 440,000 new business starts annually, even though Dr. Schaefer notes the "new start" statistic also includes expansions of existing businesses.

About 400,000 of those new business fail each year — a pretty startling figure — but about 40,000 new businesses survive. That, he says, is pretty impressive.

Statistics regarding new business starts and failures in the Midland area are unavailable. Such statistics aren't kept at the local level by either the Small Business Administration office in Lubbock or the Midland Chamber of Commerce, officials at both locations acknowledged.

But Dr. Schaefer is convinced that the local business growth rate is pretty healthy, probably twice the national rate or 18 percent. A lot of that growth can be directly attributed to the oil industry, but construction also is unusually healthy in this area. The health of the local economy gives a new business person tremendous additional opportunity for success.

Yet with that opportunity can come pitfalls. Even though the economy is booming locally, "success is not guaranteed," stressed Dr. Schaefer. The basic guidelines for success in business still apply.

Primary causes for failure, according to Schaefer, are the old standards — neglect, lack of experience, poor credit and collection experience, excessive investment in fixed assets.

For someone just beginning a new business, planning is extremely important. "Have the patience to plan adequately," he advised.

That plan should reaffirm who the business person's customers are, what the product is and so forth. Many problems can be avoided by adequate planning, Dr. Schaefer noted. How the business will be staffed. Where it will be located. What type of advertising it will employ. But some problems that will arise usually aren't seen in advance.

Perhaps the most prevalent problem perplexing new entrepreneurs is "a cash flow problem," Dr. Schaefer noted. The business person may have made the sales, but too much credit may have been extended; cash may not be coming in quickly enough.

To minimize cash flow problems, Dr. Schaefer recommends a new entrepreneur pay his suppliers as slowly as he can and limit credit sales.

Undercapitalization is another problem many new businesses encounter. Only the business person can estimate how much capital they will need. Usually they can calculate that amount by estimating as accurately as possible their anticipated expenses, their salary for a period of time (usually three months), the salaries of their employees for a period of time and the cost of their inventory. Then Dr. Schaefer recommends they add 10 percent to the final figure.

In the Midland-Odessa area, there are problems the business person will encounter that are not present in all regions. The lack of housing, for example, makes it difficult for companies to bring employees to the Permian Basin and the cost of that housing, when it is available, often makes a move unattractive to the potential employee.

Perhaps one of the most prevalent problems facing all businesses in the Midland-Odessa area is turnover. Dr. Schaefer calls the turnover here "just a fantastic, terrible problem."

This is one of the drawbacks of a boom economy, the professor noted. Restlessness is created within the labor market because jobs are plentiful and salaries are competitive. Workers in such a climate don't have to worry about their jobs, Dr. Schaefer noted, because they know they can get another one quickly.

To combat this problem, Dr. Schaefer recommends a company make its employees as comfortable as possible but not "coddle them."

"In one sense it's a problem we're going to have with us — as long as we have a burgeoning economy," the professor added.

PBGC offering short course on women's development

The Permian Basin Graduate Center will offer "Developing the Professional Woman" from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday in the PBGC Building, 105 W. Illinois St. Catherine Mundell will instruct.

This seminar is for aspiring female managers and supervisors who want to acquire effective management and leadership skills. It seeks to bridge the major gap between women and management. You will be shown how to acquire and use important management skills, communication, decision making, risk taking, leadership and organization. Valuable tips and insights on how to become a more effective part of the management team will be given.

Catherine Mundell is a professional trainer and consultant to corporations, government and private agencies. She has extensive experience developing programs to assist women to meet the challenges of new managerial and supervisory roles. She has wide experience in corporate development and retention of the female executive. She has assisted hundreds of women in their career planning. Her ability to convey practical information and techniques, along with a personalized presentation style will enhance your learning effectiveness.

Roegelein family's meat products are now available in Midland area

In 1905, Anna and Wilheim Roegelein left Germany and came to America to fulfill a dream. They arrived in San Antonio and opened a small meat market. Enterprise and hard work paid off for the immigrants. Soon word spread about their unique meat market that featured quality sausages made from old country recipes.

These old country recipes are still used by The Roegelein Co., which is now headed by William Roegelein Jr., grandson of the founder. The small butcher shop has now grown to become the largest independent beef and pork packing plant in Texas with a complete line of all processed meats.

Now, Roegelein Signature Quality meat products have been made available through Furr's in West Texas, including Midland, and New Mexico.

Joe Deres, vice president and general manager, announced that The Roegelein Co. is now undergoing the largest plant expansion program in its history. Roegelein also operates its own fleet of modern, refrigerated trucks.

Hicks Pension Services opens office in Midland

L.C. Train

Mark A. Griffith

Hicks Pension Services has opened an office in Midland to assist companies here with their pension and profit sharing plan needs.

The firm is located in Suite 106 at 3106 N. Big Spring St.

Open for business since Oct. 7, Hicks Pension Services is a "full service pension administration and service firm," according to manager L.C. "Bud" Train.

The specialists at Hicks, he said, can establish full service pension plans for companies here or take over existing plans and administer them. Each program is designed to individual specifications and recommendations are based on the desires and objectives of the particular firm, Train noted.

Griffith, a consultant who holds a degree from Texas Tech and received intensive training in pension consulting at Hicks' headquarters; Rick Roberts and Virginia Huckabee.

Hicks' services are divided into three phases: 1) Feasibility study and design. 2) Installation. 3) Annual consulting, actuarial and administration. The firm offers complete flexibility and individuality in its plans, Train stressed.

Hicks works with attorneys and accountants to arrive at a company's plan. The firm's specialists start with the design of a plan and carry it through to approval from the Internal Revenue Service.

By Jan. 1, 1982, the company will feature a computer at its office to facilitate in-house proposals and day-to-day maintenance of plans once they have been installed, Train said.

An Apology from Jim Allega,
president Allega Travel

To our many freinds and loyal clients who have been unable to reach us by phone for the past three weeks, we truly apologize. We are dependent on Southwestern Bell for our srevice, of which there has been very little during this period.

After having reported our phones out of order almost daily for this period, I paid a visit to Southwestern Bell's Midland office on November 4th. The receptionists, whose concern ranged from apathy to total disinterest, advised that the only office of Sothwestern Bell that could help me is in San Antonio.

This paid ad for this apology is just another way to let you know that we cared even though feel we suffered irreparable injury and losses. We are indeed sorry that we have been put into such a defensive position because of lack of telephone service, and Southwestern Bell's apparent lack of concern.
