Stockman leaves post for Wall Street calm

WASHINGTON (AP) — David A. Stockman, President Reagan's earnest field marshal in the budget wars with Congress, is leaving the battlefield for the relative calm of Wall Street.

No successor for Stockman was immediately named, but a congressional source who spoke on condition that he not be quoted by name said the White House will announce that Joe Wright, deputy budget director, would serve as acting director until a successor is in place.

Stockman, 38, will remain as budget director until Aug. 1, allowing him keep a hand in trying to resolve the current budget deadlock on Capitol Hill before Congress takes its annual August recess.

"David Stockman has served with dedication and distinction," Reagan said Tuesday director of the Office of Management and Budget was leaving.

"His tireless effort to bring fiscal discipline to the federal government and ensure economic stability for the country are deeply appreciated," the president added.

Stockman's departure sometime this year had been widely assumed.

It is "something that's been in the works for a long time," said Edwin L. Dale Jr., Stockman's spokesman. "He had told them all over there (at the White House) that he would see (it) through one more budget cycle."

With the current congressional budget talks apparently heading for a compromise and the administration needing to begin preparations for the budget it will submit to Congress early next year, this appeared to be the easiest time for Stockman to announce his departure.

Salomon Bros., a New York investment banking firm, said that Stockman will become a managing director Nov. 1 with responsibilities for corporate and governmental finance.

Stockman's salary as budget director was $75,100 a year. Craig Lewis of Salomon Brothers' public relations firm, Adams and Rinehart, said Stockman's new salary would not be disclosed.

Those mentioned as possible replacements for Stockman include Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, John A. Svahn, the president's top domestic policy adviser and former head of the Social Security Administration, and former transportation secretary Drew Lewis.

When Stockman was sworn in in 1981, at the age of 34, he was the youngest man to hold Cabinet rank in 150 years. From 1977 until 1981 he had served as the Republican congressman from Michigan's Fourth District.

All year, Stockman appeared to become increasingly weary of the seemingly endless squabbles within the administration and with Congress over trying to rein in government spending, and those feelings began seeping into his public remarks.

Like all of his actions in office, Stockman's resignation brought sharply contrasting reactions from Congress.

"He may be the most brilliant man in government," said Rep. Trent Lott of Mississippi, the assistant Republican leader in the House.

"Stockman will go down in history as creating the largest budget deficit in the history of the world," said Rep. Bill Alexander of Arkansas, chief deputy Democratic whip in the House. "No one ever before has managed such an enormous accumulation of debt."

Lake board lacked quorum

Only four of the nine members of the Buffalo Lake Water District Board showed up for Tuesday's regular monthly meeting in Canyon.

In the absence of a quorum, members Garth Thomas, Bill Devers, Enoch Henderson and John McMenamin held a planning session for the next meeting. Thomas said this morning it may be necessary to call a special meeting later this month because the Bureau of Reclamation has set a July 26 deadline for public comment regarding its revised draft environmental assessment of the lake.

The new document, released late last month, suggests that water be maintained in the lake, which is now dry, with a series of small dams. The BOR had last winter proposed raising the main dam and installing a "gloryhole" spillway similar to the one at Lake Meredith north of Amarillo, but came up with the alternate plan after the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service announced that the seven million dollars or more needed for the project would probably not be appropriated by the U.S. Congress in the near future.

The Buffalo Lake Board is not in favor of the new proposal, and believe funds can be obtained for repair of the Umbarger dam.

"It's a compromise that really won't satisfy anyone," Thomas said of BOR's new plan.

The board has had bad news concerning its efforts to call a tax election, Thomas said. The legislation which established the board in November of 1983 had provided for the election of three of the nine board members on the first Saturday of April of odd-numbered years.

But because the first tax election failed and the district has no income with which to finance an election, members had sought to have their election date coincide with the general election in November.

A new piece of legislation was

Muleshoe housing mustang surplus

MULESHOE, Texas (AP) - Thousands of mustangs that have overpopulated western range lands in recent years are now making Muleshoe, Texas, their foster home while they wait for adoptive owners.

Randall and Paula Carr, two Tennesseans who handle surplus horses and burros for the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, have opened a holding pen for 2,000 mustangs here.

The horses will later be sold to new owners nationwide from three adoption centers.

"The ranchers in several western states have been asking the government to take the overpopulated horses off the land because there just isn't enough grass to go around," Mrs. Carr said.

"This facility is just the first stop before the horses go to the adoption centers."

While the Carrs have participated in the government adoption program at their ranch in Cross Plains, Tenn., the Muleshoe contract with the Department of Interior proved to be one of their biggest challenges, they said.

After being chosen last year from among 400 applicants who submitted bids for the holding facility, the Carrs were awarded the job with the stipulation that the 40-acre facility be ready to receive the wild horses within 52 days.

"We finished it in 32 days," Mrs. Carr told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal.

The facility was put in Muleshoe, she said, because the government required that a holding pen be built west of the Mississippi. Muleshoe also was a convenient location as a halfway point for moving the animals to the three adoption centers, and because of its amenable climate.

The first large shipment of wild horses arrived May 10, another in June, and a third is expected in the fall.

Most of the wild horses come from Nevada, Wyoming and Oregon and suffer from severe malnutrition. But on a diet of ground hay, oats and high-nutrition alfalfa cubes, they

Teens arrested for burglaries

Hereford police picked up three teenagers Tuesday in connection with weekend burglaries of Hereford High School and Bradly Photography. The high school had been broken in to and library looted, while cash, guns and knives were taken from the photography studio.

Four juvenile boys were taken into custody and released to their parents about 2:30 this morning, after a local police officer caught them swimming in the Splash pool in northeast Hereford.

A woman who lives at Blue Water Gardens told police she returned from the movies last night to discover that someone had entered her apartment and made himself at home while she was gone.

A can of beer was left on a table, the ashtray had been used and books rearranged. Police recovered a credit card which was apparently used to open the lock.

Another burglary occured in the 200 Block of Ave. H, where posters, cigarettes and cassette tapes valued at $135 were lifted.

Two men were stopped by Hereford police for harrassing two young women, after the women led police to the suspects. The girls said they would consider filing charges today.

There was one report of domestic violence, and one report of tires being slashed.

Lavon and I had a great time over the holiday weekend attending the Golden Tornado Jubilee in Lamesa, an all-school reunion held every five years. There were lots of hugging and kissing as long-parted friends recognized and greeted each other for the first time in years. We spent hours reminiscing and swapping stories among former classmates about the old days as students in the Lamesa schools.

Exes in Lamesa came up with the idea in 1965 and decided to hold a Jubilee every five years. It has grown to gigantic proportions, with approximately 8,000 former students and teachers attending this year's event. It is always held on the July 4th weekend, providing exes to make plans well in advance of the reunion.

The exes who still live in Lamesa do a great job in preparing for the event. The registration system allows each person to check cards and see who is at the reunion; class meetings are set up in classrooms at the high school, local exes host class parties in their homes and open up bedrooms for visitors, and an Extravaganza talent show winds up the program on Saturday night.

This year, the Jubilee committee

Military assisting in rangefire battle

By AVI ARDITTI Associated Press Writer

Military helicopters hauled water and firefighters for a combined air-ground assault today on more than a thousand wildfires that are stretching resources to the limit in their march across more than 1 million acres of Western brush, timber and range.

Three more California counties were declared disaster areas Tuesday as flames forced thousands of people from their homes and authorities coordinating the attack on fires in 14 states considered asking for more military help.

Kay Grenke, whose family lives north of Rome, Ore., said flames drove thousands of grasshoppers onto her house and a shop building on Monday.

"The wind started blowing and brought that black cloud over, and it was just like the end of the world," she said.

Over 1,000 fires burned in the western United States and three Canadian provinces, authorities said. At least 484 burned in Arizona, California, Idaho, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, Montana, Oregon, Utah and Washington, according to the Interagency Fire Center in Boise, Idaho. Other fires were either contained or controlled in the Dakotas, Nebraska and Wyoming.

As many as 4,500 people were evacuated Tuesday in northern California as flames burned tinder-dry brush and trees near 2,000 homes near Los Gatos. That fire added seven homes to the 150 already destroyed in recent firestorms.

About 1,400 people were evacuated from Canal Flats in southeastern British Columbia because five fires, which had charred 12,000 acres, circled the town, said Forests Ministry spokesman Ray Wormald.

More than 11,000 U.S. firefighters were stretched across thousands of miles of fireline, while in the Canadian provinces of British Columbia, Alberta and Manitoba, where 380,000 acres have burned, at least 543 fires raged Tuesday, according to the Canadian forest service.

California National Guard spokesman Phil Jordan said some 360 Guard members were operating 13 Huey helicopters, three C-130 tankers, jeeps, other vehicles and radio-telephone links between camps in California and Montana.

More than 1,600 square miles of brush, range and timber land have burned in the western United States and Canada since late June.

Eight fires remained out of control Tuesday in California, which has suffered more than a quarter of the U.S. burned acreage.

Mexican-American Chamber planning several events

The Comerciantes Organizados Latino-Americans of Hereford changed its official name to the Mexican American Chamber of Commerce during Tuesday's regular business meeting at the Hereford Community Center.

It was decided the name would be more easily recognizable by members of the community, and also in keeping with Hispanic chambers in other cities which usually call themselves by that name.

Prior to the meeting, a money management seminar was presentd by John Galivaz of Galivaz and Associates Financial Services of Amarillo.

A 19-year veteran of Hispanic Chamber of Commerce organizations, Galivaz told members present they need to work together within the community to alleviate common business management problems.

A survey of Hispanic business owners, Galivaz said, indicated many of the same business problems. He said Hispanics need to diversify their business interests, be more aggressive in obtaining business financing, and maintain emergency cash funds for surviving hard times.

A breakfast meeting is planned for Aug. 19, during which recently-elected officers will be installed. Rumaldo Garcia is president of the chamber, with Herb De la Rosa and Gloria Hubner serving as first and second vice president, respectively. Pete La Fuentes is the new secretary and treasurer.

The group voted to hold a tamale sale this weekend, to pay expenses for delegates to the state convention July 17-20 in San Antonio.

Sales will be conducted at Price Less grocery this weekend.

Plans are underway for a fashion show and a menudo cookoff, to be held later this summer.

Garcia announced that representatives from the Texas Department of Agriculture will be in Hereford Thursday morning at the Red Carpet Inn, to meet with members of the chamber. Garcia said TDA wants to know how the organization feels about the possible location of the nation's first underground nuclear waste repository in a site north of Hereford.

Father takes steps against kidnapper

ALVARADO, Texas (AP) — The father of a 13-year-old girl who was kidnapped by a man now loose from jail said he is taking precautions to protect his family but that life goes on.

Don McNiel, a 9-mm Colt pistol stuck in blue jeans, Tuesday offered a $2,000 reward for the capture of the convicted kidnapper who escaped from Johnson County Jail last week.

McNiel said he would pay the money for information leading to the arrest of James Wesley Foote, 34, who was sentenced in March to life in prison for kidnapping McNiel's daughter, Amy.

The girl was rescued by law enforcement officers 2½ days later.

"I want the man caught," said McNiel. He said he began carrying the gun after Foote escaped July 4.

McNiel told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that at least three sheriff's deputies are posted on his ranch around the clock.

But despite the gun and the guards, he said it's almost business as usual at the McNiel household and at McNiel Enterprises, the company he runs in a red barn about 200 yards from the two-story house.

Texas may not be out of Saturn running

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — After another testing of the waters, U.S. Sen. Phill Gramm now says Texas may still be in the running as the location of the new General Motors Corp. Saturn plant.

Recounting a conversation with General Motors sources in Washington, Gramm, R-Texas, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that Texas still is a contender for the economic plum pursued by several other states.

Last week, Gramm said Texas more than likely would not be chosen as the site for the plant. Lack of positive signs from GM — and Texas' right-to-work laws — indicated the $5 billion Saturn project would go elsewhere, he said then.

"I've talked with GM every day to remind them the Lone Star flag is still flying," Gramm said Tuesday. "I'm proceeding on the assumption we're still in the hunt."

Gramm said he had maintained daily contact with General Motors officials in Washington for the past month as part of the state's bipartisan effort to bring the high technology plant to Texas.

Fish kill causes investigated

TYLER, Texas (AP) — An estimated 170,000 fish may have died from oxygen depletion in the Trinity River, but experts are still searching for a cause for the fish kill.

The 50-mile stretch of dead fish may have occurred when a bottom layer of sewage sediment was stirred by heavy flows of water and began using up oxygen in the river, said Victor Palma, a regional chemist for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department in Tyler.

Other state and federal wildlife officials said the kill may have been caused by organic material deposited in the river from sewage-disposal plants, runoff and other sources.

"We don't think its related to one event," Palma said.

"You have a whole bunch of sediment entering the river at once," Palma said. "It stirs up and you get a tremendous load from the bottom."

The sewage sediment is something plants in compliance with disposal permits will release, Palma said.

The cities of Dallas, Fort Worth and Lewisville all have large sewage treatment plants along the river. The Trinity River Authority also has plants along the river.

Water samples and samples of surviving fish will analyzed by the department, he said. Also analyzing samples are the Texas Department of Water Resources and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Department.

Car bomb kills heiress, son

NAPLES, Fla. (AP) — The heiress to a $400 million tobacco fortune and her tennis pro son were killed and her daughter injured in a car-bomb blast that sent debris rocketing 200 feet through an exclusive neighborhood, police said.

The explosion Tuesday killed Margaret H. Benson, 63, of Naples, and Scott R. Benson, 21, of Lancaster, Pa., in Mrs. Benson's Chevrolet Suburban outside her Quail Creek home, said Collier County Sheriff's Lt. Eric Daniels.

The blast, which also injured Carol Lynn Benson, 40, of Boston, was caused by a bomb, but authorities have not determined the type of explosives involved, said Sheriff's Capt. Curtis Mills.

"We've never had anything like this around here," Daniels said.

Steven Wayne Benson, 33, of Fort Myers, who was visiting his mother Tuesday, and his wife, Debbie, were in protective custody today in a Naples hotel, said Janet Lee Murphy, the victim's sister in Lancaster.

MUSTANGS

lose the gaunt look so prevalent in the newer arrivals, the Carrs said.

The Muleshoe facility will house only mustangs, Mrs. Carr said, although wild burros are also in big demand through the adoption program.

"Burros are the craze," she said. "Burros hate wild dogs, and they're good at protecting cattle because of that. They'll stomp any wild animal that tries to attack the herd."

Although each new shipment of horses brings the curious from around the Panhandle who like the idea of beinga ble to buy a horse for a much lower price, the horses cannot be sold out of the Muleshoe center.

Later, they'll be shipped to the Carrs' facility in Cross Plains, Tenn., to another location in the east and to Collinsville in western Grayson County.

"We're hoping that we can eventually talk the government into letting us sell some horses here because so many people have expressed an interest," Mrs. Carr said.

She added that there are some tentative plans to hold a one-day adoption sale in August or September in Lubbock, Texas, although "we want to get them all together (the 3,000 mustangs that will eventually end up in Muleshoe) before we have any big adoptions."

Gaining ownership of a mustang through the program is a lot more difficult than the $125 sales price, Mrs. Carr said. The horses remain government property for one year after purchase, and can be taken away if mistreated.

"We try to tell people to wait a while before they get one. If they wait a while, it's not so much of a whim because when they come back, you know that they're serious," she said.

Part II of series

'Double-taxing' generates uproar

EDITOR'S NOTE — President Reagan's proposal to eliminate the deduction for state and local taxes is one of the most controversial aspects of his tax reform plan. Part II of a five-part series describes how the battle lines are forming.

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's proposal to eliminate the income tax deduction for money Americans pay in state and local taxes is generating the biggest uproar from those who appear likely to lose the most.

Based on the theory that Americans shouldn't be taxed twice — paying federal taxes on money they have already paid in state and local taxes — the deduction has been a part of federal rules since the income tax was inaugurated.

But the provision is not really fair, Reagan contends, giving the biggest benefits to residents of high-tax states who itemize their deductions.

And, federal officials say, eliminating the deductions would generate an extra $30 billion in revenue for fighting the huge federal deficit.

National labor leaders have strongly opposed the proposal, telling the House Ways and Means Committee that it would mean higher taxes for middle-income wage earners and would force states and municipalities to curtail needed services.

On average, a U.S. family would pay an extra $927 in federal income taxes each year, according to a study done by the Congressional Research Service.

In high-tax New York, the increase would be $1,646 for the typical family, the study said. At the other end of the scale, a typical Wyoming family would pay an extra $323.

State and local officials also say that requiring people to pay more in federal taxes leaves them less for spending — and for state and local taxes.

And, they say, people will resist increases in state and local taxes even more strongly than they do now if they are unable to deduct them.

If that occurs, the officials say, it would hamper their ability to fund state and local programs at the same time that federal expenditures for them are being reduced.

New York Gov. Mario Cuomo has been voiciferous in leading the battle against the proposal, terming it a "rip-off dressed up as reform."

Cuomo has accused Reagan of trying to divide the country by pitting high-tax states against those with lower taxes.

"This plan overturns the central idea at the heart of our republic — that we are one nation, not 50 nations. This plan, if it is enacted, would pit state against state and region against region," he told a congressional hearing.

But White House Communications Director Patrick Buchanan, in a letter to The New York Times, called Cuomo a "glib, fast-talking lobbyist for a reactionary liberalism that would kill tax reform in its crib, rather than surrender a cherished special interest exemption that benefits mostly the rich."

Cuomo counters that there are important reasons why states such as New York levy higher taxes than some other jurisdictions.

"We have more poor people. We have enormous numbers of welfare people. They're not all ours. They come from all over the nation. We have a high tax not because we're luxuriating in New York but because we have to pay for things," Cuomo said on a recent broadcast interview show.

The Democratic governor charged that the proposal "punishes states that are trying to provide essential services in the face of massive federal spending cuts."

But not just Democrats oppose the plan. New York Republican Sen. Alfonse D'Amato recently joined Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., in staging a mock Boston Tea Party. They tossed into the East River boxes marked "No Double Taxation."

Just across the state line, though, Pennsylvania Gov. Dick Thornburgh, a Republican, is backing Reagan.

His state's taxes are relatively low, and the current deduction tends to benefit only about one-third of the state's residents, those who itemize deductions. In general, Thornburgh says, Pennsylvanians will benefit more from an overall reduction in federal tax rates than from keeping this deduction.

Under the current system, Thornburgh charged, taxpayers in states with low local taxes are in effect subsidizing the federal levy on those in high-tax jurisdictions, who can deduct the local payments.

"The effect of the proposed reform would be to redress that imbalance and provide an across-the-board cut in taxes for all taxpayers in all 50 states," said Thornburgh.

And even Democratic Gov. Michael S. Dukakis of Massachusetts — a state with relatively high taxes — has said that the president's plan is worth study, with any deduction being evaluated in the context of the entire plan.

The contention that the current system causes low-tax states to subsidize others drew a rebuke from Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich.

"Well, if we are going to talk about subsidies, then we should look across-the-board and take into account that Michigan only gets 79 cents back for every dollar it sends to Washington. This proposal could worsen the imbalance that already exists in how much Michigan gets back for every dollar it sends to the federal government," Levin said.

In Kansas, where the Congressional Research Service says the added cost would be well below the national average, Gov. John Carlin, a Democrat who is also president of the National Governors Association, opposed total elimination of the deductions.

The federal deficit is the No., 1 issue right now, Carlin says, and if concern about deductions sidetracks attention from that problem the result could be dramatic.

On the local-government front, New York Mayor Ed Koch, whose city levies its own income tax, has joined Cuomo in spirited opposition to dropping the deduction, stating that the loss of income would be devastating for New York City.

Cleveland Mayor George V. Voinovich, president of the National League of Cities, has pointed out that group's strong opposition to the plan.

"The withdrawal of federal funds has shifted a greater burden to state and local taxes, and the elimination of deductability could add to the strains already present," he said.

And Detroit Mayor Coleman Young said that the proposal "will be bad for those of us who live in Michigan, for the simple fact that we pay high taxes, both state and local."

"Local governments will be hard hit by the elimination of deductions for state and local taxes, and especially the property tax," said Phil Elfstrom, president of the National Association of Counties.

"Just as the federal budget is about to shift greater financial responsibility for domestic programs to local governments, this proposal would seriously limit their flexibility to raise revenues to meet this responsibility.

"We cannot continue to be given more responsibilities for increased services and not the ability to pay for them. We need the flexibility to give our citizens the services they require," said Elfstrom, of Batavia, Ill., a Kane County board member.

"As a county official, it concerns me to think that this plan may inhibit local taxpayers in their support for local efforts to raise revenue for needed services," he concluded.

passed before the Texas legislative session ended this summer, but when board members read the law they discovered that the new date was specified as the first Saturday in November, rather than the first Tuesday.

Thomas said he is not sure how the mix-up occurred, but it is very depressing news to the board. As it stands, an election the first Saturday in November would still have to be financed by the board just as the April date would have.

The board is in need of tax monies not only for its own operating expenses but also to enable it to take part in improvements and increased public use of the lake south of Umbarger.

Fires may have been intentionally set

Hereford Volunteer Firemen made four runs on Tuesday, three of them within a one-hour period.

The first call came at 11:12 a.m., when volunteers extinguished a trash and dumpster fire behind the old bowling alley.

Trash and grass fires at 11:48 a.m. and 12:06 were in the same neighborhood, at 405 East Fifth and 406 McKinley. Hereford police are investigating the second fire, which burned a fence. They believe it may have been intentionally set.

The final call was at 3:40 p.m. Tuesday, to a dumpster fire in the 100 block of Ave. B.

added a domino tournament, golf scramble, tennis and racquetball tourneys, and "old-timer's" basketball and baseball games. There are also two dances on Friday and Saturday nights–one for the old-timers and one for the younger exes. Many churches hold special services Sunday morning for the home-coming crowd.

Exes who register are eligible for a free trip and receive an information packet which includes items from the retail trade committee of the chamber, along with coupons for special "sales" offered by some of the stores. The registration fee of $4 a person or $7 for a family includes everything except a huge barbecue supper at the football stadium and golfing fees. A local movie offers a free kiddie movie during class meetings, and the city swimming pool is open, free to anyone wearing a Jubilee registration tag.

It's not unusual to see three generations of a family attending this all-school reunion. The Lamesa exes put in a lot of planning and work on the event, but they don't seem to mind doing it every five years!

Former resident visits here

Irene Boardman of Route 3 served as hostess during a barbeque dinner held Tuesday evening at her home. Guest of honor was her daughter, Linda Boardman of Copenhagen, Denmark.

The 1967 Hereford High School graduate is a consultant for big business in Copenhagen and is currently touring the United States along with her husband, Gert Jensen, and their two sons, Stefan and Thorsten.

The former Hereford resident attended Austin College in Sherman, Tx. and received her physcology degree from Texas Tech University in Lubbock.

Following a period of political violence, the United States occupied Haiti from 1915 to 1934.

Thank You

Thanks to all my friends; for all the love and prayers while I was in the hospital in Amarillo. The flowers, telephone calls, and the lovely cards and visits are greatly appreciated.

I will be at Prairie Acres Nursing Home in Friona for a while and very much enjoy company.

Ann Landers

Try sleepwalk

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My 17-year-old brother lives with us. He has a history of sleepwalking and sleeptalking. He often laughs in his sleep and carries on some mighty lively conversations.

The talking does not bother me, Ann, but I worry that one day he might harm himself. I have caught him walking out the front door and found him asleep in the bathtub and on the kitchen floor. I have witnessed him leaping off the bed, with his eyes wide open, like a wild person.

He never remembers anything the next day and doesn't believe that he said or did any of these things. I have had conversations with him while he was sleepwalking and he doesn't recall a single word.

We live on the fourth floor of an apartment complex. I worry that one night he may decide to sleep on the balcony and walk right off. He is 6 feet 5 inches tall and weighs 200 pounds. No way and I a match for him. Please give me the help I need.--LA-LA LAND IN ARLINGTON HEIGHTS

DEAR LA LA: My consultant is Dr. Rosalind Cartwright, Chairman, Dept. of Psychology and Social Sciences and Director of Sleep Disorder Service and Research Center at Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago.

Dr. Cartwright said 15 percent of all children will sleepwalk. Sleepwalking occurs when they shift from a deep sleep to the dream state.

Sleepwalkers are not likely to harm themselves. However, a few do get hurt, especially those who walk out into traffic. They can also fall and bump into things.

I suggest a sleepwalk alarm. This is an alarm box fastened to the sleeper's leg with a Band-aid. The jerking movements will trigger the alarm. It is also a good idea to lock the windows.

Don't try to awaken a sleepwalker. Better to lead him gently back to bed. The most hopeful note about sleepwalking is that most children outgrow it as they outgrow bedwetting and nightmares.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: "Liberated in Larchmont" may have had problems with professors who came on to her, but believe me, Ann, you had no reason to feel there was any egg on your face. Female students can be very seductive.

Every university has its share of "lollipops"–this is a name professors' wives give coeds who hang around our husbands. They make after-hour appointments wearing tight T-shirts and jeans that look as if they were glued on. They pretend to be seeking advice about the course but usually the pretext is fairly transparent.

The "Lollies" know exactly what they are doing. You would not believe how strong they come on. All we wives can do is hope our husbands aren't "ego-massaged" to the breaking point. The professors who travel are especially vulnerable. "Research," they call it.

Not only are young, attractive professors targets, some of the older ones in their 50s and 60s have been bedazzled by young girls who have ruined their academic standing and wrecked their marriages. I hope this letter will alert those professors who are book-smart and people-dumb.–NO NAME IN MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR MINNIE: Thanks for a letter that puts some professors in the dunce corner. Go to the head of the class.

Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teenager," explains every aspect of sexual behavior–where to draw the line, how to say no, the various methods of contraception, the dangers of VD, the symptoms and where to get help. Wedding vows spoken in afternoon ceremony

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Lady announce the marriage of their daughter, Cynthia Diane, to Robert Howard McClure, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allan McClure of Dimmitt.

The ceremony was held Friday at the Church of the Nazarene with Rev. Bob Huffaker officiating. Members of the immediate family were in attendance.

Bridal attendants were Allison Lady, maid of honor, and Becky Shewchuk, bridesmaid. Allan McClure was best man and Kent Kirby was groomsman. Candles were lit by Brian Lady.

Melanie Davis and Heather Gee sang "Household of Faith" and Davis vocalized "The Lord's Prayer" accompanied by Linda Davis at the organ.

A reception was held in the home of the bride's parents with wedding cake and punch served by Mrs. Robert Moore, sister of the groom, and Mrs. Allan McClure,Jr.

The bride graduated from Hereford High School in 1983 and attended West Texas State University. She is currently employed at Barrett-Crofoot, Inc. of Hereford.

The bridegroom graduated from Dimmitt High School in 1980. He attended South Plains Junior College and the University of Texas in El Paso in 1983. He is currently employed by Brownlow Brothers, Inc. of Hereford.

The couple will be making their home in Hereford.

Mr. and Mrs. Weldon Gilcrease of Weslaco were recognized as special guests. Other guests attending represented Amarillo and Alameda, Calif.

Food safety begins at home

"We have a far greater chance of contracting a food-borne illness as a result of our own negligence than from unsafe food products," says a Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service nutritionist.

The recent tragic food poisoning incidents involving cheese and milk have left many consumers concerned about the safety of foods they buy at the grocery store, says Marilyn Haggard.

But incidents such as these are very small in number when compared to the Food and Drug Administration's estimate of 69-275 million cases of food-borne illness per year, most of which result from improper food handling or storage at home, she says.

"The bacteria that cause most food-borne illnesses occur naturally in raw foods, so it's up to consumers to make sure these bacteria are destroyed before the food is eaten," Haggard explains.

The specialist recommends the following steps for increased food safety at home:

-Be sure to wash your hands carefully before handling food and wash raw foods very well.

-Be especially careful with your cutting board and knives. Cooked foods are often contaminated with raw foods that have been cut on the same cutting board. Wash your cutting board and knife in hot soapy water after each use.

-Heat foods to at least 155 degrees Farenheit before serving and keep cold foods well-refrigerated until serving time.

-Refrigerate or freeze leftovers immediately after a meal, and never allow foods to stand at room temperature for more than 2 hours.

"Fortunately, most cases of food-borne illness cause only flu-like symptoms and diarrhea," says the nutritionist. However, the potential for more serious complications is always there.

Study supports UIL's end to annual sports physicals

A study of three Houston researchers supports the University Interscholastic League's decision not to require annual physical exams for junior high and high school athletes.

After screening 2,114 athletes, the researchers at The University of Texas Medical School at Houston conclude that "the cost-benefit ratio of the annual screenings was clearly unfavorable."

A new UIL policy requiring physicals for athletes only when entering junior high and high school will "result in a substantial and appropriate savings in health care costs without significant increase in risk," they note.

An article by Dr. William L. Risser and Dr. G. Gordon Bellah Jr., both pediatricians, and Harold M. Hoffman appears in the July issue of Texas Medicine, the Texas Medical Association's journal.

In eliminating the required annual physicals last year, the UIL relied largely on advice from the Texas Medical Association. The new UIL rules require a health questionnaire for screening athletes in years without physicals and a complete physical exam if the answers reveal a need for one.

The researchers said their study and others showing few medical problems discovered during sports screenings support the UIL decision to require them less often. They said the annual exams had been criticized for the largely unnecessary expense to athletes' families and for the unnecessary demands placed on the health care system.

Of the 2,114 Houston-area athletes examined, only 71 (3.4 percent) were referred to physicians for additional examination. Only six of the 71 were disqualified from sports participation (0.3 percent).

Is it really fresh?

Some Texas consumers are expressing concern about buying poultry labeled as "fresh," only to discover at home that it seems partially frozen, says Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service nutritionist Dr. Alice Hunt.

According to United States Department of Agriculture rules, a poultry product may be labeled fresh as long as it is not completely frozen, even though there may be a slight frozen crust on the surface, she says.

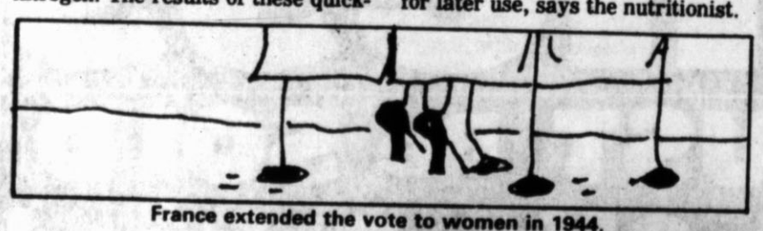

Poultry is classified as frozen when it's held at zero degrees until it's frozen solid.

Most poultry plants now pack poultry in ice and hold it at 28 degrees F., or chill the birds with nitrogen. The results of these quick-chilling processes is a slight crusting of ice crystals on the surface of the birds.

"The surface feels frozen, but the inside is not, therefore the bird is still basically fresh," Hunt explains. These quick-chill techniques remove body heat from the poultry and preserve it enroute to the supermarket.

Once at the store, it will stay fresh in the refrigerator case for five to seven days.

Since fresh poultry crusted with ice crystals is not frozen, you can cook it using the same temperature and cooking time you use for unfrozen poultry, or you can freeze it for later use, says the nutritionist.

In Babe Ruth district tourney game

Mental error proves costly

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

A grand slam home run was hit by Friona in the Babe Ruth League 13-year-old all-star district tournament Tuesday, but none of the runs counted in the score when something unusual happened in the world of baseball.

A mental error proved costly as Friona fell to Hereford 15-12.

After a scoreless first inning Tuesday, Friona built up a 7-0 lead in the second inning with five walks, a player reaching base after being hit by a pitch, a double and a single.

A grand slam home run was slugged over the right centerfield fence to make the score 11-0, but the Hereford all-star team made an appeal to the home plate umpire that a baserunner had not touched home plate–the runner who was on third base when the home run was hit.

The appeal was upheld and none of the four runs were allowed, because that baserunner from third base became the third out of the inning. That put the score back to 7-0.

Today at 8 p.m., Friona meets Plainview in a loser's bracket contest. Plainview lost to Hereford 8-6 on Monday night.

The winner of tonight's game plays Hereford in the championship game at 8 p.m. Thursday. If a second championship game is necessary, it will be played at 8 p.m. Friday.

Tuesday's game was filled with walks, including nine times in which Hereford batters walked with the bases loaded.

There were 35 walks in the game. Twenty-four Hereford batters walked and 11 Friona batters walked. Hit totals for the game were five for Hereford and nine for Friona.

Hereford loaded the bases in the bottom of the second inning on a single by Johnny Cornelius, and two walks. Hereford's first run was scored on a bases-loaded walk.

Robert Cavin drove in a run with a single, and Jim Eric Andrews batted in Hereford's third run with a sacrifice fly.

Hereford tied up the game at 7-7 in the third inning with four bases-loaded walks. Of the first seven Hereford batters to reach base, six of them walked and the other one, Shane Kapka, hit a single.

Jim Anima then put Hereford ahead 9-7 in that same inning with a two-run double.

Friona moved back in the lead in the top of the fourth inning, 11-9. Hits included a two-run double and an RBI single.

In the Hereford fourth inning, the bases were loaded when three batters walked. Three bases-loaded walks gave Hereford a 12-11 lead, and Steve Kapka hit a sacrifice fly to increase the margin to 13-11.

Another bases-loaded walk in the fifth inning gave Hereford a 14-11 lead. Friona scored a run with an RBI groundout in the top of the sixth inning to cut the lead to 14-12.

Hereford loaded the bases in the bottom of the sixth with three walks, and scored a run on an RBI groundout by Karl Schumacher.

Hereford's Jason Walterscheid was moved to the pitcher's position in the seventh inning and shut down Friona to save the victory for his team.

Walterscheid struck out one of the three batters he faced and got the other two to ground out.

Blyleven tosses four-hitter

Rangers fall to Indians, 7-2

By The Associated Press

Cleveland Indians' pitcher Bert Blyleven thiks his outstanding record will mean more to him after he retires.

That's when the 34-year-old Blyleven says he'll be able to "look back and thank the good Lord that he gave me the good fortune to pitch for a long time."

Blyleven, 8-8, struck out five Texas Rangers Tuesday to pass the 100th strikeout mark for the 15th time in his career. Blyleven tossed a four-hitter and another veteran star, Andre Thornton, knocked in four runs with a home run, two singles and a bases-loaded walk to beat the Rangers, 7-2.

The victory gave the Indians its first three-game winning streak since May 21.

"He stabilizes the whole middle of the lineup," Blyleven said of Thornton. "When Andy hits like he has been the last week, guys like Pat Tabler and Brook Jacoby get better pitches to hit. His attitude during his slump was outstanding. Andy's a hard worker and a dedicated man."

Thornton has been dealing with the lingering effects of knee surgery and a batting slump this season. But he has driven in 13 runs in the last seven games.

"You can't get behind (Thornton) and you have to make good pitches on him," said Burt Hooton, 4-3, the Rangers' starting pitcher. "Andy's a good hitter and you can't make a mistake on him."

Blyleven, with a major league-leading 12 complete games, has 101 strikeouts this season, one behind Detroit's league-leading Jack Morris, and has recorded 100 or more strikeouts in 15 of his 16 big league seasons. Only in 1982, when the right-hander pitched only 20 innings because of an elbow injury did he fail to record at least 100 strikeouts.

Cleveland took a 2-0 lead in the first inning when Julio Franco singled and scored on Tony Bernazard's double. Thornton then singled home Bernazard.

The Rangers tied the game in the third on Pete O'Brien's two-run double before the Indians regained the lead 3-2 in the bottom of the inning. Brett Butler grounded into a fielder's choice, stole second and scored on Franco's single to put Cleveland ahead to stay.

Cleveland padded its lead to 5-2 in the fifth. Jerry Willard doubled and Franco reached first with two outs on shortstop Curtis Wilkerson's error. Bernazard walked to load the bases and Thornton walked to force in a run. Dave Rozema relieved Hooton and allowed another run by walking Jacoby.

Cleveland closed the scoring in the seventh when Bernazard doubled and Thornton followed with his fifth home run.

Becker did not know about death of grandfather

LONDON (AP) — Boris Becker, the 17-year-old West German tennis star who became the youngest Wimbledon men's champion Sunday, played the entire two-week tournament unaware that his grandfather had died a week before.

Becker's parents, Karl-Heinz and Elvira Becker, arrived at the All England Club in Wimbledon to watch the final.

But an uncle, Hans Becker, revealed that his parents kept the news of the death a secret from their son so that it would not affect his play during the championship.

Slaney prepares for rematch with Zola Budd

CORK, Ireland (AP) — American track star Mary Slaney warmed up for her long-awaited rematch with Britain's Zola Budd by storming to victory in an 800-meter race at the Cork City Games.

Slaney, the 26-year-old world champion over 1,500 and 3,000 meters, was eight-hundredths of a second off her American record for the distance, finishing in 1 minute, 57.68 seconds.

The two runners are due to race against each other for the first time since the 1984 Olympics at a Grand Prix meet in London July 20.

Herschel Walker is unanimous USFL MVP choice

NEW YORK (AP) — Herschel Walker of the New Jersey Generals, whose 2,411 yards shattered pro football's single-season rushing record, was the unanimous choice of the Pro Football Writers of America as the United States Football League's Most Valuable Player.

Walker broke pro records with 11 consecutive 100-yard games and 14 games of more than 100 yards rushing. His 22 touchdowns — 21 of them rushing — and 132 points in the 1985 season, and his 233 yards rushing in one game, established USFL records.

Radio station WTAW in College Station, Texas, broadcast the first play-by-play desciption of a football game in radio history on Nov. 25, 1920.

Astros suffer 10th loss in last 12 home games

By The Associated Press

Philadelphia's youthful trio of Juan Samuel, Rick Schu and Kevin Gross, gaining confidence at the expense of the Houston Astros, led the Phillies to their second straight victory in the Astrodome.

The 5-3 setback Tuesday night was the Astros' 10th loss in their past 12 games at home.

Philadelphia, 37-44, erupted for all five runs in the fourth inning off Houston starter and loser Bob Knepper, 8-5, as Samuel drove in two runs and Mike Schmidt, Garry Maddox and Bo Diaz knocked in one apiece.

"I was fortunate to get the bloop hit. We had timely hits even though we didn't hit the ball hard," said Samuel, a second-year shortstop.

Schu, a rookie third baseman who opened the inning with a double and scored, is 5-for-9 in two games against the Astros.

"I'm adjusting to big league pitching," Schu said. "And I've gotten a few hits to build up my confidence."

The 24-year-old Gross, 8-7, won his third straight game after a stint of 6 2-3 innings in which he allowed only one earned run and scattered six hits. Kent Tekulve came on in relief to notch his eighth save and second in as many games.

"Right now I'm in good shape and I'm ready to go nine innings every time I pitch," Gross said. "I'm throwing hard and moving my fastball around as well as developing an off-speed pitch."

Houston's Kevin Bass, Jose Cruz, and Denny Walling each had one RBI, but it was Houston's 12 men left on base and its defensive collapse that concerned Knepper.

Knepper, who allowed eight hits in seven innings, seriously addressed the Houston situation after departing from the dressing room.

"We're just not playing like we want to win ball games. You could say the time is tired or flat. I don't know what's wrong," Knepper said. Houston, 41-42, has left 40 runners on base over the past 37 innings.

"It's frustrating when balls are hit directly at guys and they drop them. We've got to bear down and win. We just have to kick ourselves in the rear and decide if we want to win this thing or not," Knepper said, referring to the National League West race.

Summer camps becoming bigger as UIL rules change

By GEORGE BREAZEALE Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN (AP) — Coaches once were the summer students of such teaching legends as Knute Rockne in football and Adolph Rupp in basketball.

But in increasing numbers, athletes and would-be athletes are absorbing the summer teaching of such college coaches as Eddie Sutton and Dean Smith in basketball, Barry Switzer in football and Cliff Gustafson in baseball.

In other parts of the nation, summer camps have been prominent for two decades or more, providing five-figure annual incomes to North Carolina's Smith and to Sutton, who recently moved from Arkansas to Kentucky.

Summer camps are not big business in Texas — yet.

High school football, basketball and volleyball players for two decades were banned from camp attendance; a rule change last year allowed non-varsity athletes to sign up. And not until the late 1970s did most Texas colleges allow coaches to conduct such schools on campus.

But University Interscholastic League rules are changing, and colleges are jumping into the market that's opening up.

Since the University of Texas changed its policy on facilities and coaches' work schedules in 1979, the school and its men's and women's coaching staffs have developed camps in basketball, women's volleyball, swimming, track and field, tennis, baseball and strength conditioning.

Doug Messer, UT's assistant athletic director for financial affairs, says the camps are set up partly to complement coaches' salaries. But Messer emphasizes the community service concept, "to allow boys and girls of every age to have an educational and athletic experience."

Camp directors at UT receive rent-free use of such facilities as Memorial Stadium, Gregory Gymnasium and Disch-Falk Field to house their operations — all of them, that is, except for swimming Coach Eddie Reese, who pays the Texas Swimming Center about $5,000 for use of the pool for six weeks.

All the camps, Messer said, have such expense items as room and board for resident campers, advertising and awards and T-shirts for campers who enroll.

"Women's athletic department policy is that the camps cannot lose money, because there is no money in the budget to cover deficits," said sports information director Chris Plonsky. "But the ones that Jody Conradt (basketball), Mick Haley (volleyball) and Eddie Reese (swimming) have are all moneymakers."

Messer said that in 1984, the last year for which full accounting is available, all camps sponsored by the men's athletic department made money.

Bob Weltlich's basketball camp took in $45,652 and spent $43,876, Gustafson's baseball operation had $23,755 in enrollment fees and spent $23,357, the track and field camp received $14,136 and spent $13,919 and strength camp receipts were $12,399 against expenses of $11,685.

Instructors' salaries are included in the expenses; Messer said some coaches are paid a flat fee, while others receive a percentage of the profits.

While camp income induced Sutton and Smith to settle in at their schools, Messer does not see such revenue as critical to retaining UT's men's coaches. But women's swim coach Richard Quick came to UT three years ago partly because of the income potential from Reese's summer camp.

Messer, who has been in athletic administration at Mississippi State, Florida State and Kansas, says UT's approach to camps is, contrasted to those schools, conservative.

"At all three of those schools the biggest camp is the football camp. Some people may visualize a football camp as pushing a blocking sled around in the July heat, but they're fun camps. Kids learn fundamentals, but there are other activities."

Messer says camps have the potential to be long range recruiting tools and that "a 14-year-old athlete three or four years later might remember the pleasant associations he had at a camp and pick that school for his sport."

Gustafson said two 1985 Longhorns, shortstop Coby Kerlin and third baseman Dodd Johnson, went through the UT baseball camp, and football Coach Fred Akers sees a recruiting benefit to the camp he hopes to launch next summer.

"We would expect it to be two-way, as far as benefits go," Akers said. "It's possible that some of them might be in a Longhorn uniform some day."

Are sports camps worth the money?

Dennis Seale, who produced a 1984 Class 2A state baseball runner-up at Dripping Springs, says he thinks they are, especially to younger athletes.

"Once I get a boy into my program as a freshman, I like to have control of him," Seale said, "but a fifth-grader, say, has an excellent chance to learn correctly fundamentals from qualified coaches. He's paid his money and he's listening to coaches he respects, so he's probably going to remember what they say."

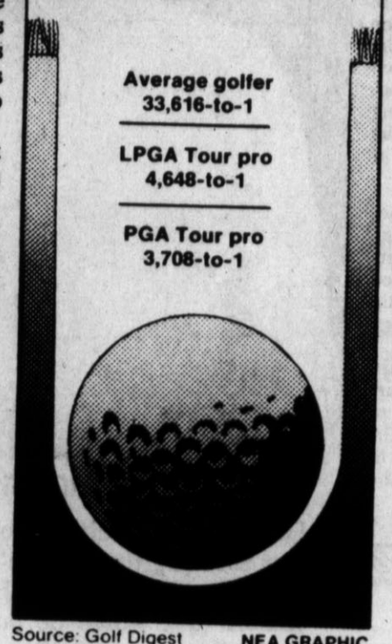

Elgin baseball coach Glenn Bacak also likes what summer camps can do for young athletes.

"One big benefit is, if an athlete goes to a camp, he is thinking about that sport," Bacak said. "He's there because he wants to be, and that's the best learning situation you can get."

Asked if some youngsters go into camps ith unrealistic expectations of the benefits, Messer said, "Some parents might have that illusion about their kids, but I don't think many kids do. Maybe a few kids are pressured to go to camp, but I do think most of them are there for four days, a week, or whatever, because they want to learn and to have fun."

HOLES-IN-ONE

What the odds are

Source: Golf Digest NEA GRAPHIC

What are your chances of making a hole-in-one? Pretty slim, unless you're a touring pro. Even then it's tough. Last year the LPGA Tour recorded 24 aces (a record by the women); the PGA Tour, just 22.

Buddy Bell asks to be traded from Rangers

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The Texas Rangers probably will trade Buddy Bell within the next week, possibly as early as today, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported.

The newspaper said today that sources close to the club confirmed that Bell had asked to be traded and that the club was trying to accommodate him.

Bell reportedly gave Rangers General Manager Tom Grieve a list of about 10 teams he would agree to go to, the newspaper said. As a player with 10 years in the league and five with the same team, Bell can veto any trade.

Bell denied early reports that he asked to be traded after efforts to renegotiate his contract for the fourth time in five years fell through.

"This has nothing to do with my contract," Bell told the Star-Telegram Tuesday in Cleveland, where the Rangers lost 7-2 Tuesday night to the Indians. "I have never asked to renegotiate. I have renegotiated (in the past) but I've never asked."

Sources close to Bell said the Ranger third baseman was miffed when owner Eddie Chiles allegedly reneged on a promise to renegotiate.

"He feels he was lied to, that's the crux of it," said one source.

"I can't say anything else," Bell said, "but I'm not mad at anybody."

Chiles, contacted at his home in Fort Worth, Texas, declined to comment.

According to insiders, Bell's agent, Ed Keating of Cleveland, proposed a three-year package totaling $5.25 million. The package called for $1.5 million the first year, $1.75 the second year and $2 million the third.

"It (renegotiation talks) never got that far," Bell said. "It never got serious."

Chiles reportedly was shocked at the proposal and offered Bell an additional $55,000 a year to be added to his current salary of $600,000 a year, the Star-Telegram said in today's editions.

Bell quickly rejected that offer and allegedly accused the Rangers of not being faithful to their promise to renegotiate in good faith.

Bell, club President Mike Stone and Grieve have had several meetings in the past few weeks in an effort to resolve the situation short of a trade.

Grieve is thought to be negotiating with several teams in an effort to move Bell and may conclude the trade within the next few days.

The Los Angeles Dodgers, who have long had an interest in Bell, are believed to be the leading contender in the Bell sweepstakes. There is also talk of a three-way deal with the Dodgers and Pirates in which the Rangers would acquire hard-luck Pittsburgh pitcher Jose DeLeon.

Grieve would not comment on Bell's situation.

"I can't confirm or deny any of it," Grieve said. "I'd rather not comment on any aspect of it right now."

Stone took a similar stance.

"I'm not going to comment on any player's contractual status," Stone said. "I can't do that publicly. I will say that we've kept our (contractual) commitment and will continue to do so with all our players."

Bell, 33, is signed through 1987 with an option for 1988. The Rangers reportedly offered to guarantee 1988, along with the extra $55,000 a year, but Bell also turned that offer down.

In 1905, the sport of football produced 18 fatalities and 159 serious injuries. Teddy Roosevelt threatened to ban the sport.

Drugs cited as problem among high school athletes

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — A vast majority of the delegates at the National Federation of High School Association convention last week said drugs are a problem among high school athletes, according to a USA Today survey reported.

Of 142 state and national delegates in Lexington, Ky., responding to the survey, 110 said drug use is a problem.

Estimates by the delegates showed 30 percent of the high school athletes in New York use drugs; 40 percent in Wisconsin; and 25 percent in Colorado.

Some delegates said 85 to 95 percent of the students — many of them athletes — drink alcohol.

BASEBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — Managers Jim Frey of the Chicago Cubs and Bob Lillis of the Houston Astros have been selected as National League coaches for next week's All-Star Game, NL Manager Dick Williams of San Diego said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball owners may have overstated their 1984 losses by $12 million, an accounting professor hired by the clubs said. But the report said the 26 teams still lost $31 million.

The head of the players union said the figures indicate that "some of what they say can be taken at face value," but continued to insist that the owners actually made as much as $10 million in 1984.

Air freshener

DEAR POLLY — Remove the cover from used-up stick-on air fresheners, then spray the insert with your favorite room deodorizer to rejuvenate them. Replace the cover and stick it up again.

If absolutely must put a stove-top pan in the oven for a short period of time, wrap the handle with several layers of foil.

Keep an old electric coffee pot in your laundry room to quickly heat hot water for treating certain stains.

If you need a quick draft preventer at the bottom of a door, roll a newspaper the length of the door and hold it together with a rubber band. — T.M.C.

DEAR POLLY — Here's how I keep a satin comforter from slipping off the bed. I sewed an elastic loop at each bottom corner. These loops slip over the bottom bed posts. This helps keep the comforter from slipping off the bed. — MRS. N.W.

DEAR POLLY — If you have a loved one who must be confined to bed for a period of time, move the bed to a place in the house where the person may be included in as much household activity as possible. Placing the bed in the living or dining room prevents isolation from the family and the normal activities of the family.

Birthday parties for children do not have to be expensive affairs. I make my own invitations. Refreshments can be simple but good. Most children prefer cupcakes and gelatin or a dip of ice cream to more elaborate things that are too sweet or difficult to eat. I use plain paper plates, cups and napkins that I buy on sale and I skip party hats and balloons. I invest my money in prizes and nice party favors for each child. The key to success is to keep the party short and all of the children busy. — OLIVE

Artist Of The Month

Don Walser was chosen for Artist of the Month which is sponsored by the Women's Division of the Chamber of Commerce each month. Here, Walser is shown with a shadow box which he built, with a miniature train, clock, tricycle, and a fireplace scene which is a replica of the one in his house, all made by hand.

Improvement in commodity reports urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Crop and livestock reports issued by the Agriculture Department need to be improved where possible, and honed so that commodity information is easily accessible to the public, a panel of experts says.

"Every effort should be made to provide equal access to information," the advisory panel said in a report released Monday. "The statistical, analytical and research activities of the USDA should be isolated from the influence, and the appearance of influence, of political considerations."

One of the problems cited by the panel is "a communications gap between the USDA and the providers and users" of crop and livestock reports issued by department agencies, including the Statistical Reporting Service and the Economic Research Service.

"The situation may partially reflect the general loss of public confidence in government," the panel said in its report to Secretary John R. Block.

"Low commodity prices and increasing financial stress in production agriculture may also result in more finger pointing in the search for something or someone to blame."

Block was in Europe, and an aide, John Ochs, had no comment on the panel's findings and recommendations.

The reports examined by the panel cover a wide range of commodities and situations, including monthly estimates during the season of crop production, livestock inventories, total supplies and demand, prices, exports and foreign production.

In almost all cases, one way or another, the reports have an impact on markets and, eventually, what farmers get for their commodities — and what consumers pay at retail stores.

The panel's study was made in the wake of complaints in recent years that USDA's figures for certain livestock and crop totals were off base and did not reflect actual situations as viewed by the trade.

Panel members represented private commodity and industry interests, farmers and universities.

"Many individuals apparently have the view that USDA estimates and projections are in some way biased to support current administrative positions or specific policies," the report said. "Producers often perceive that USDA reports have a negative influence on price."

It may be, the report said, that USDA's reports are "suffering a credibility gap" as a result of a number of circumstances.

"Inconsistencies such as the soybean production and stocks estimates of January 1984, the significant revisions in quarterly grain stocks estimates, and the apparent inconsistencies of hog inventory estimates and subsequent slaughter have all contributed to some loss of confidence in USDA reports," the panel said.

One of the problems is that users "do not have an adequate understanding" of USDA procedures in gathering and analyzing information. A solution would be to set up advisory panels for each commodity or groups of commodities. More information on the design of surveys should be made available.

The report recommended that last year's attempt to bunch some reports for release on the same day were not working well. Those should be spread out more to give analysts more time. An example are the "supply-and-demand" analyses which are currently issued on the same day as major crop reports.

Another recommendation would eliminate the Feb. 1 survey of farmers' crop planting intentions in favor of one on Jan. 1 and another on March 1. Surveys of hog farrrowing intentions should be more frequent.

Throughout the system, USDA should take advantage of new research — and make further investigations — to upgrade sampling procedures and analysis of foreign as well as domestic crop and livestock situations.

Feed runoff cited for water pollution

COLLEGE STATION – Runoff from animal feeding operations is often cited as contributing to water pollution. Consequently, livestock and poultry feeders need to work hard to keep their image clean regarding manure management and environmental quality.

"All animal feeding operations regardless of size need to keep all manure and wastewater out of streams–even dry streams," emphasizes Dr. John Sweeten, agricultural engineer in waste management with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

Feeders should adopt the no-discharge policy with respect to manure handling and should get permits where state regulations require them, Sweeten points out. Nearly all large feedlots have been in compliance with state water pollution control laws for many years, but this is not necessarily the case with smaller operations.

Clean runoff from outside a feedlot should be diverted from the feeding facility to avoid contact with manure-covered surfaces.

Runoff from open, unpaved feedlot surfaces should be collected and disposed of by land application. Solids accumulate in runoff holding ponds and debris basins, so these structures need to be cleaned out periodically to maintain their design capacity.

Many dairy, swine and caged layer operations now have lagoon systems to store and biologically treat liquid manure and in some cases to furnish recycled wastewater for flushing, notes the engineer. All lagoon systems need a sprinkler irrigation unit to dispose of lagoon effluent when necessary to prevent overflow.

"Wastewater from a lagoon, though improved in quality, may still have several times the pollutant strength of raw domestic sewage and should ot be discharged," Sweeten cautions.

However, lagoon effluent can be used for irrigation. Where a recycle flush system is used, irrigate with about 25 to 30 percent of the lagoon contents annually and replace with pond or well water, suggests the engineer.

"Never drain or pump manure or lagoon contents into a drainage ditch or stream," cautions Sweeten.

Although buildings with solid manure handling systems have little or no water pollution potential, it's another matter with stored or stockpiled manure removed from confinement buildings and open feedlots, says the engineer. Leached materials from manure stockpiles on porous soils can contaminate shallow groundwater, so select a site with impermeable subsoil and good surface drainage. Sweeten recommends using dikes or ponds to collect surface runoff from stockpiled manure for disposal by irrigation or evaporation.

Using manure or wastewater on land requires matching application rates with soil and plant requirements for available nitrogen and other nutrients. Sweeten recommends soil testing and manure analysis for proper guidance. To conserve nutrients, solid manure should be disked into the soil promptly after application while liquid manure should be injected when feasible with respect to soil and crop conditions.

"When applying manure to land near streams, lakes or drainage structures, leave a vegetated filter strip of 100 feet or more wide to prevent direct runoff into a water body," advises Sweeten. "Avoid permeable soils with a high water table, shallow creviced bedrock, waterways, floodplains, wet soils and excessive application rates."

A 100-foot wide grass filter strip between the property boundary and all buildings, manure handling facilities and land disposal areas can greatly reduce transport of manure solids, sediment and nutrients off your property, says the engineer.

Corn reaches silking stage

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 11 percent of the nation's corn crop reached the silking stage of development by July 7, compared with only 3 percent a year ago and the average on the date of 5 percent, according to a weekly report by the Agriculture Department.

The crop's development varied widely in the major producing states. In Illinois, for example, 20 percent of the corn was silking, compared with 1 percent a year ago and the average of 10 percent on July 7.

Farm defense fund signed

WASHINGTON – Documents incorporating the Family Farm Defense Fund, a national legal assistance group organized to help debt-burdened family farmers, were filed on behalf of the presidents of three national farm organizations.

The documents were signed May 7 by Sydney Beck of Women Involved in Farm Economics. Cy Carpenter of National Farmers Union, and DeVon Woodland of the National Farmers Organization. They were filed in the District of Columbia with the Superintendent of Corporations in the Recorder of Deeds Office.

The formal organizational meeting of the legal assistance group was scheduled following a family farm benefit concert at the Civic Auditorium in Omaha on June 2. Country singer John Conlee presented the concert and all proceeds went to the Family Farm Defense Fund.

The documents list the fund's purposes as initiating litigation on behalf of family farmers and ranchers, providing specialized advice to attorneys handling problems of farmers and ranchers, and conducting studies and preparing reports on the family farm system of agriculture.

Woodland said the fund will be able to go to court and sue any agency or institution that deprives farm and ranch families of credit or other legal rights. "It is patterned after highly successful legal assistance groups like the Environmental Defense Fund and the Natural Resources Defense Council," the NFO president explained. "We don't have anything like that for family agriculture and we badly need it."

Carpenter said family farmers are in deep economic trouble and need legal protection for themselves, their families, and their farming businesses. The help and support needed, he said, has to come from sources beyond their own operation.

"The Family Farm Defense Fund will facilitate referrals for legal assistance, counseling, and other services that can be extremely helpful," the NFU president said. "Polls show that more and more urban people are showing support for farming families and a deeper understanding of the current economic depression in rural America. We want to provide the same support systems to rural people that urban people already have."

Man given 75 years for stealing 16 turkeys

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — A man convicted of stealing 16 frozen turkeys faces up to 75 years in prison after a state district court jury recommended the stiff sentence.

Harold Mackey, 31, of Lubbock was found guilty of burglarizing $200 worth of turkey from a tractor-trailer rig in November. The minimum sentence was raised by prosecutor Bill Sowder by showing Mackey's two prior burglary convictions.

The seven-man, five-woman jury took only 12 minutes Monday to find Mackey guilty of taking the birds from the refrigerated trailer parked near a South Lubbock restaurant about 1:30 a.m. Nov. 5.

Tuesday's punishment deliberations lasted only 20 minutes.

"I just asked the jury what it would take to show Mackey that we're serious about protecting citizens from crime in Lubbock County," said Sowder.

Defense attorney Brian Murray pointed out during closing arguments that if the jury assessed Mackey 25 years, that would be more than 1½ years per turkey.

Non-citrus fruit crops up slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) — An annual report by the Agriculture Department shows the value of non-citrus fruit crops last year was an estimated $3.22 billion, up slightly from 1983 but about 8 percent less than in 1982.

Huge Tractor Savings
with John Deere IRAs
(Inventory Reduction Advantages)

Right now you can buy anybody's tractor at a pretty good price. But John Deere offers you something better: John Deere IRAs. Inventory Reduction Advantages like:

- Our 40-85-hp utility tractors, 100-190-hp row-crop tractors and rugged 4WD tractors are value-priced like never before. John Deere factory-backed programs enable us to make very competitive deals, horsepower for horsepower, dollar for dollar.
- John Deere IRAs apply to all new tractors, not discontinued models. We're out to sell the best product we've ever built, at the best possible price.
- A variety of finance options are available* including waiver of interest charges until April 1, 1986. Or you may wish to take a discount worth up to thousands of dollars in lieu of finance waiver. The John Deere finance waiver may actually give you an effective A.P.R. lower than competition's "low-rate" financing. We can give you the details.
- Besides a great product, you'll get great support — the best in the business. Our factory-trained technicians provide prompt, competent service. John Deere's parts back-up is legendary with a communications network that can locate and ship a vital part fast!
- The best IRA of all is John Deere quality. Because our high quality is what will ultimately make the difference between a "cheap" deal and a great deal.

Find out what John Deere's IRAs can do for you today.

*Availability of John Deere financing subject to approval of credit. These offers may be withdrawn at any time.

Anti-nuclear movement divided

TOKYO (AP) — Forty years after the atomic bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Japan's two largest anti-nuclear groups continue their battle against the bomb and against each other.

On one side is the Japan Conference Against Atomic and Hydrogen Bombs, known as Gensuikin, which is supported by the Japan Socialist Party and representing about 50 anti-nuclear groups. Its similarly named rival is the Japan Council Against Atomic and Hydrogen Bombs, or Gensuikyo, backed by the Japan Communist Party and encompassing 60 member groups.

Although the two groups share the basic goal of abolishing nuclear weapons, they disagree on almost everything else.

"What started out as a signature campaign somewhere along the line became a movement centered around political parties and large organizations," laments Manami Suzuki, who handles international liaison for Gensuikin.

The original Gensuikyo was established in 1955, when a group of Tokyo housewives initiated an anti-nuclear signature campaign following the death of a Japanese fishing boat crewman whose ship was contaminated by fallout from a 1954 American nuclear test on Bikini Island in the Pacific. That year the first annual Atomic Disaster Anniversary World Conference was held in Hiroshima.

In the early 1960s, ideological disputes split Gensuikyo into several camps. The largest faction, formed by Japan Socialist Party members, withdrew and formed Gensuikin.

The socialist group opposed atomic experiments by all nations while the communists contended that nuclear testing by socialist nations was for defense purposes.

More recently, disagreements have ranged from policies toward nuclear power to the wording on banners at demonstrations.

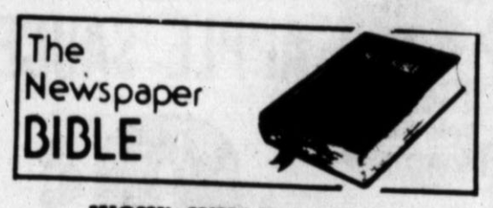

For the 40th anniversary of history's only atomic attacks, Gensuikyo is launching a large signature campaign to support an "Appeal from Hiroshima and Nagasaki for a Total Ban and Elimination of Nuclear Weapons." According to Gensuikyo General Secretary Koichi Akamatsu, nine million Japanese have already signed the appeal.

Gensuikin wants nothing to do with the campaign. "What do they think they can accomplish with such a statement at this stage?" argued Ms. Suzuki, who said the appeal is worded so loosely that even conservatives can support it.

Gensuikin, which claims 2 million members, is instead preparing an international forum for A-bomb victims at this year's world conference. Its definition of victims includes nuclear power plant workers and native Americans living near uranium mines. Last year the conference drew 20,000 people from around the world to Hiroshima.

Ms. Suzuki said the politicizing of the anti-nuclear movement has dulled the passion which gave rise to the original signature campaign.

The Peace Memorial Museum had 115,000 visitors in 1955, the year it opened, 931,000 by 1970 and almost 1.5 million in 1984. In the latter two years about 5 percent were foreigners.

WOW! WHAT A PRAYER MEETING!

The apostles were at the Mount of Olives when Jesus ascended, so now they walked the half mile back to Jerusalem and held a prayer meeting in an upstairs room of the house where they were staying. This prayer meeting went on for several days.

During this time, on a day when about 120 people were present, Peter stood up and addressed them as follows: "Brothers, it was necessary for the Scriptures to come true concerning Judas, who betrayed Jesus by guiding the mob to Him, for this was predicted long ago by the Holy Spirit, speaking through King David.

"Judas was one of us, chosen to be an apostle just as we were. He bought a field with the money he received for his treachery and falling headlong there, he burst open, spilling out his bowels. The news of his death spread rapidly among all the people of Jerusalem, and they named the place 'The Field of Blood.' King David's prediction of this appears in the Book of Psalms, where he says, 'Let his home become desolate with no one living in it.' And again, 'Let his work be given to someone else to do.'

"So now we must choose someone else to take Judas' place and to join us as witnesses of Jesus' resurrection. Let us select someone who has been with us constantly from our first association with the Lord--from the time He was baptized by John until the day He was taken from us into heaven."

The assembly nominated two men: Joseph Justus (also called Barsabbas), and Matthias. Then they all prayed for the right man to be chosen. "O Lord," they said, "You know every heart; show us which of these men You have chosen as an apostle to replace Judas the traitor, who has gone to his proper place." And Matthias was chosen and became an apostle with the other eleven.

Big bash planned to celebrate Stacy Dam

BIG SPRING, Texas (AP) — State leaders including Gov. Mark White are expected to be on hand tonight for a celebration for lawmakers who helped fight for the Stacy Dam and Reservoir.

Owen Ivie, general manager of the Colorado River Municipal Water District in Big Spring, told the Odessa American that Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and legislators also plan to attend the "light-hearted get-together" at the Big Spring Country Club.

The party will "celebrate a hard-fought victory to get the reservoir approved," said state Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock. "I think it obviously has political overtones."

Among the almost 200 invited guests are state Reps. Kelly Godwin, R-Odessa, and Tom Craddick, R-Midland; state Sens. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, and Grant Jones, D-Abilene; and members of city councils that are water district customers, Ivie told the Odessa American.

Montford and legislators had tied approval of the dam's water rights permit to their support for a sweeping, statewide water bill passed earlier this year.

"West Texas in general is going to be unwilling to sign on to a water package if they don't get this lake (Stacy Reservoir) built," Montford has said.

In April, after a seven-year fight by the Big Spring water district, the Texas Water Commission approved the permit for Colorado River water rights necessary to fill the reservoir.

Another water district, the Austin-based Lower Colorado River Authority, had opposed the reservoir and filed suit to stop construction after the permit won initial approval in 1978.

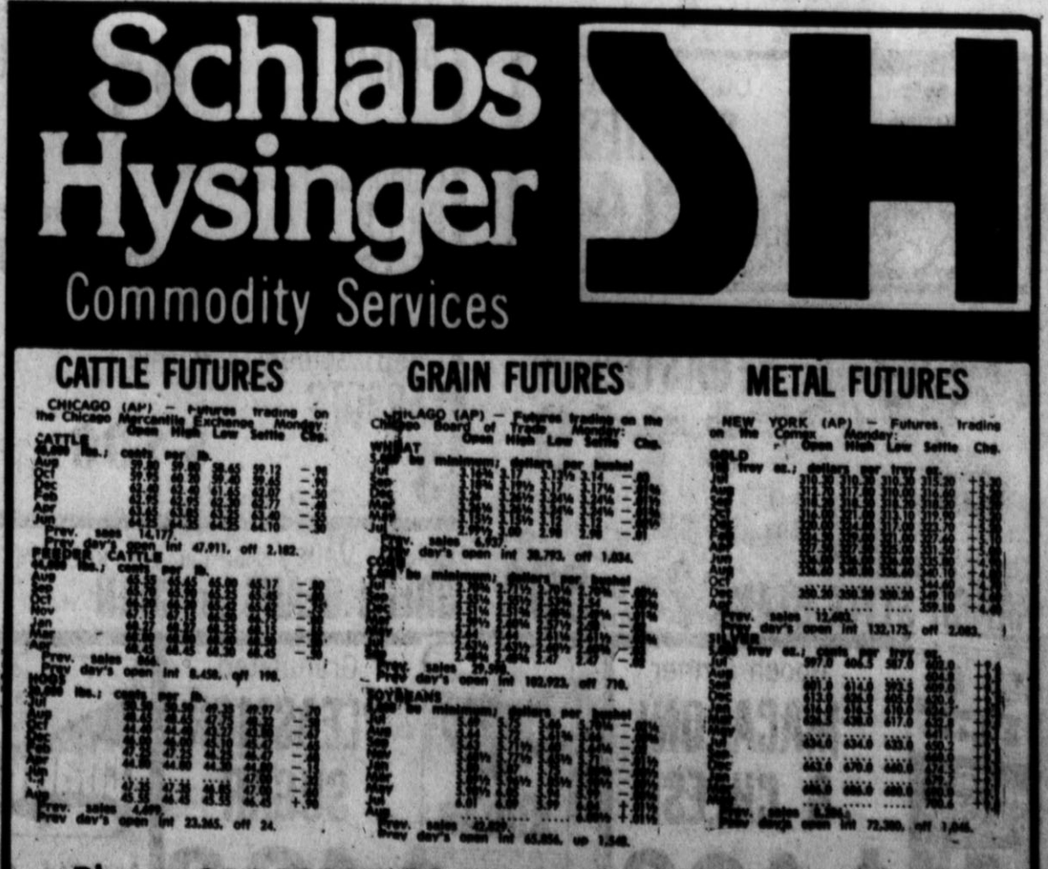

Last November, the case reached the Texas Supreme Court, which overturned the permit and instructed the two water districts to forge a compromise.

The reservoir, to be constructed near Ballinger about 140 miles east of Odessa, will cover 31 square miles, surrounded by a 200-mile shoreline, Ivie has said.
