Signs of change seen on Polish scene

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski lifted censorship for foreign correspondents Saturday and met with Roman Catholic Archbishop Jozef Glemp in what appeared to be dramatic signs that the Polish crisis was easing after four weeks of martial law.

But the communist regime said President Reagan's sanctions made it "still more difficult to overcome the crisis" and termed the economic situation "fatal." It said Poland's foreign debt had risen to $28.5 billion and appealed for $6 billion in import credits and a Western "bridge for financing."

Later, Radio Warsaw said a separate state of emergency had been declared in the central Plock province where more than 1,000 people were evacuated after the Wilsa River flooded. No other details were provided.

Government press spokesman Jerzy Urban said foreign correspondents accredited in Warsaw could now file uncensored stories, but only through the telex at the government's foreign press center, which is only open during regular business hours. It was not known if other transmission facilities for foreign correspondents would be opened soon.

Urban told a news conference that foreign correspondents may be allowed to travel outside Warsaw soon, that telephone service will be restored across the country Sunday, and that Parliament will meet Jan. 20 to discuss martial law and other issues.

Radio Warsaw, in another sign of apparent easing of the situation, said theaters, movies, concert halls, art galleries and other "cultural and cultural-educational establishments" will reopen in the capital and Warsaw province Friday, but that the nightly curfew will remain in effect.

Urban would not elaborate on the meeting between Jaruzelski, the martial law chief, prime minister and Communist Party chief, and Glemp, Poland's Roman Catholic primate. It apparently was their first meeting since Jaruzelski declared martial law Dec. 13 and suspended the independent union Solidarity.

Radio Warsaw said that during the meeting "intentions aiming at the normalization of life in Poland were expressed" but said no more.

Jaruzelski and Glemp last met Nov. 4 in a session with Solidarity chief Lech Walesa that launched talks on a "front of national agreement." But on Dec. 12 Solidarity leaders called for a national referendum on whether Poland should remain communist and martial law was declared the next day.

Walesa, head of the first union free of party control in the Soviet bloc, is said to be sequestered in or near Warsaw and has not been heard from since martial law was imposed.

Urban said 5,937 people had been interned under martial law and 918 have been released, leaving 5,019 in detention. He said 565 people have been tried and sentenced to jail. He did not say what crimes they committed or how long the prison terms were. However, most sentences announced so far have ranged between three and six years.

Radio Warsaw said three Solidarity activists were sentenced Saturday for strike activity in December.

Janusz Obodowski, deputy prime minister in charge of economic reform, also addressed the news conference, and termed Poland's hard currency balance and its level of production at the start of the new year "fatal." He said the foreign debt increased to $28.5 billion due to increased food imports.

About $2 billion of the debt was owed to the Soviet bloc, and the rest to Western nations and commercial creditors, Obodowski said. He appealed for $6 billion in import credits to help the country recover economically.

U.S. signal to implicate influence of Soviet Union

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and its NATO allies plan to issue a joint declaration Monday that will unequivocally "point the finger at the Soviet Union" for the martial law crackdown in Poland.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., who was scheduled to leave Sunday, will attend the special NATO foreign ministers meeting in Brussels where the declaration will be issued.

The statement "will send a very strong political signal" to the Soviets, a State Department official said in an interview. NATO wants to discourage the Polish and Soviet governments from further repression, while insisting on lifting of existing repressive measures in Poland.

But, said the official who declined to be named, it is unlikely NATO will endorse new sanctions against Poland or the Soviets since differences remain between the United States and its allies over whether more sanctions will do any good.

On Tuesday, Haig plans to make a speech in Brussels, discussing Poland and western relations with the Soviets. The State Department official said Haig will take "the high road," supporting "a balanced approach to relations with the Soviets."

Haig plans to meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in Geneva on Jan. 27, unless there is a new outbreak of violence in Poland, the official said. Haig will also visit Cairo on Tuesday and Wednesday and stop in Jerusalem Thursday before returning home.

In the Middle East, Haig will discuss the U.S. displeasure over Israel's annexation of the Golan Heights as well as the status of the Palestinian autonomy negotiations between Israel and Egypt.

But an informed diplomatic source here said both Israeli and Egypt are pessimistic that significant progress can be made in achieving Palestinian autonomy before the scheduled April withdrawal of Israel from the Sinai.

The source, who did not want to be identified, said there is an informal understanding in both nations that they are unable, for domestic political reasons, to make enough concessions to achieve a compromise on autonomy before the April withdrawal date.

But a U.S. official disputed that notion and said there is reason to think progress toward autonomy is likely before April. The latest round of autonomy negotiations, scheduled this week in Israel, has been postponed.

The State Department official said preliminary wording of the NATO declaration on Poland has already been worked out. While Haig and the other NATO ministers will draft the final wording, there is little doubt it will hold the Soviets responsible.

"We want to point the finger at the Soviet Union...and indicate our absolute disapproval of what is going on," he said.

He indicated that Greece, regarded in Washington as "very erratic" on the question of Soviet responsibility for Polish events, could try to obstruct such a declaration, but said the other allies are prepared to act without Greece.

So far, no controversy has evolved

By HALLYE JORDAN

The controversy taking place in Arkansas and Louisiana over the legality of prohibiting the teaching of creation-science in public schools has not sparked any extreme amount of interest in Midland, or the state, as of yet.

According to most Midland Independent School District science department heads, there have been no calls from concerned parents regarding policies of evolution instruction.

Nor have Texas solons been worried. Many state legislators during last year's session wandered off in search of coffee within 45 minutes of the introduction of a floor amendment — similar to the Arkansas law — on a bill dealing with curriculum matter, according to Bill Kidd of The Reporter-Telegram's Austin Bureau. Speaker of the House Bill Clayton ruled it was not germaine and struck it down on a point of order, Kidd recalled.

The bill was never voted on during the session.

EVOLUTIONISTS generally believe that life forms began developing gradually several million years ago while creationists believe that most life forms came into existence suddenly about 6,000 years ago.

An Arkansas law requiring that schools teaching evolution must balance it with the theory of creationism was struck down Tuesday on the grounds that it violated constitutional guarantees of separation between church and state.

Arkansas was the first, and Lousiana the only other state, to adopt the statute.

According to Kidd, there has been some talk in Austin that there will be more legislation introduced in 1983. "But the latest indication is that they are abandoning that attempt," he said.

"It hasn't really developed as a political issue around here."

And Midland instructors and administrators hope it doesn't in this area.

"I fail to see the big controversy," Brian Saxon, MISD coordinator of math and science, said. "I think they (advocates of creation-science) are making something big out of it.

"As far as creation, the state is pretty particular about Darwin's theory and evolution, per se," he continued. "(In Midland) system-wise it (evolution) is not even mentioned. Evidently we don't have a great concern in the community (about evolution)."

Billy Gilbreath, head of Lee High School's science department, agreed. "We don't emphasize it (evolution or creation-science) at all," he said. "We give the choice to the students."

Most administrators in the science departments of Midland public schools said theories concerning evolution rarely come up in the classrooms. When a student does question a teacher about it, the teacher refers to the theories simply as what they are — theories.

"THERE ARE AS many facts on one side as on the other," Gilbreath explained. "I've had a graduate course in evolution and I accept it as theory.

"If I got up and taught evolution as fact, I'm sure I'd get a lot of calls from parents."

Dan Kallus, head of Midland High School's science department, said evolution is not taught as a specific unit in science courses.

"We just don't make a big deal about it. When it does come up, the ideas of the theories are entertwined where

Antitrust suits: The end of an era

NEW YORK (AP) — The dismissal of an antitrust suit against IBM, coupled with a settlement that will break up AT&T, ends an era that saw the government largely fail in efforts to restructure major industries.

Beginning in the late 1960s, the Justice Department and the Federal Trade Commission set out to break up dominant firms in industries ranging from oil to breakfast cereals.

"It looked like a very significant challenge," said Harvey Goldschmid, a law professor at Columbia University.

Encouraged by the apparent trend, numerous private suits were filed by small competitors against such dominant companies as International Business Machines Corp., Xerox Corp. and Eastman Kodak Co.

Now all the government's cases have been settled or dismissed, with the dominant companies winning in every case except American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and generally prevailing in private cases.

"In terms of the bottom line, these cases have produced a very limited return," said Goldschmid after Friday's actions were announced.

At the heart of the cases was the government's attitude toward domination of an industry by one company or a handful of companies, particularly if that domination was acquired legally.

Court decisions starting in the mid-1940s and continuing through the 1960s held that a company with monopoly power could take few actions to protect that position without running afoul of the antitrust laws.

In one case, Alcoa's monopoly in aluminum, which had been obtained through a patented process and sustained through techniques that a lower court said were normal business pactices, was ruled illegal.

The idea was that normal practices, such as price cutting or building new plants to meet anticipated demand, might be reasonable in a competitive industry but could be used to drive competitors out of business or keep them from entering if used by a monopoly.

But beginning in the 1970s, the courts moved away from that position, particularly in a case involving Kodak and Berkey Photo, a small competitor. Berkey lost most major issues on appeal.

Assistant Attorney General William F. Baxter, the head of the antitrust division, cited the Berkey case in dropping the 12-year-old suit against IBM: "You can't bring (the antitrust laws) to bear against a company just because it is large, successful, and captures a very big market share."

"There's far more freedom now for a company, once it obtains a monopoly, to defend that position," said Georgetown University professor Robert Pitofsky, who approved of the move away from the Alcoa decision but feared the administration may have gone too far.

"Bigness is an opportunity for abuse," he said, "and the same practice used by a small company can be an abuse in the hands of an IBM."

A major reason for the trend away from the harsh attitude toward monopolies was a feeling that antitrust action was making American business less competitive in international markets.

"It's part of a realization that we can't afford to hurt our companies anymore," said George C. Thompson, a business professor at Columbia and co-author of a text on antitrust law. "If IBM were severely handicapped, they'd lose out very rapidly to the Japanese, who are already threatening the computer industry."

Russian bear's real fear

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.

NEW YORK — Chancellor Helmut Schmidt is a feisty, outspoken character to friends and adversaries. He also knows that his country, West Germany, is the center of gravity of NATO abroad. So, he appeared annoyed before meeting President Reagan, purportedly for not having been consulted when we activated sanctions against the Soviet Union claiming they masterminded martial law against Poland.

The chancellor, whose mastery of the English language is almost perfect, even had an opportunity to vent his spleen while on a brief state-side vacation and practically to the doors of the White House before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. His subject remained the same: His government and the other allies — 14 all told — were not consulted by the U.S. before we took the Soviets to task.

As an old political hand, who has headed his government for the past eight years and been involved in frequent East-West negotiations, Schmidt also knows how to play-act for effect. I suggest that he was using just that kind of a ploy, giving heartburn to our policymakers and hope to the Soviets, by pretending that he was furious with our handling of the Polish problem. He is, of course, deeply concerned that the

Winter settling into Permian Basin

Winter is settling into the Permian Basin area as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for cloudy skies through Monday, colder temperatures today and a slight chance of rain Monday.

The mercury should push its way slightly past the freezing mark today with a high expected in the upper 30s. Low tonight should be in the middle 20s. The high Monday is expected to be in the mid-40s. Winds will be easterly today at 10 to 15 mph, with the chance of rain Monday 20 percent.

High on Saturday was a chilly 54 degrees when compared to the record high for that date of 79 degrees set in 1948. The record low for Saturday of 5 degrees, set in 1962, made the morning's low of 22 degrees seem warm.

Odessa man's leg severed in accident

ODESSA — An Odessa man lost a leg after being hit by a car here early Saturday morning.

Listed in stable condition at Medical Center Hospital late Saturday night was 42-year-old Miguel Guzman.

According to the Department of Public Safety, Guzman was crossing U.S. Highway 385 near the intersection of 61st Street when he was struck by a 1976 Pontiac driven by 19-year-old Gary Odener of Gardendale.

Guzman's right leg was severed in the accident, which occurred about 12:45 a.m. Saturday.

Cobb files for district clerk

Pat Cobb, a paralegal who has gained experience in the public and private sectors, has filed as a candidate for Midland County district clerk.

Mrs. Cobb, 39, is running as a Republican for the post.

"The district clerk's office should be run according to the statutes and laws of the State of Texas," Mrs. Cobb said Saturday in announcing her candidacy.

"The duties and responsibilities of this office are a most important function in our county government. The standards and procedures of this office should be raised and performed as those of other cities of comparable population and size as that of Midland."

Mrs. Cobb is the third contender to file for the $31,000-a-year post. Also running on the Republican ticket is Vivian Wood, 43, an assistant purchasing agent for an oil company and a former deputy clerk under the incumbent, Madge Wallis. Mrs. Wallis, 58, is filing for re-election under the Democratic Party banner.

Mrs. Cobb is a legal secretary for the Robert Truitt law firm and previously was office manager for the Trott & Co. accounting firm. Before that, she was administrative secretary to Sheriff Dallas Smith. And in the previous 8½ years, she was executive legal secretary to District Attorney Jim Mashburn, who served as DA from 1966 through 1978.

The former Pat Mills, Mrs. Cobb is a 1959 graduate of Midland High School.

Pat Cobb

is married to Jesse Cobb and is the mother of four children.

Mrs. Cobb is campaigning under a reorganization platform. "That office has got to be organized. I just feel like with my years of legal experience and knowledge (of the legal and judicial system), I can fulfill the duties and responsibilities of that office."

The district clerk's office is reponsible for handling the paperwork of the three state district trial courts serving Midland County.

So far, no controversy has evolved

they come in naturally.

"We haven't had any controversy in the past because we just don't push it as the central theme of biology," he said.

At the freshman high school curriculum level, evolution is not a concern. According to George Brown, science department head at Lee Freshman High School, the only science taught at that level is physical science. He said evolution would be more pertinent to classes such as biology or life science.

"In physical science we don't even approach it," he said. "If it was (taught), it'd be very simple: 'Here are several theories — and not facts,'"

Daniel Elias at Alamo Junior High said the only time evolution enters discussions in his classes are during topics such as genetics. "When the changes that take place in living things through the years do come up, we deal with them as theories," he said.

At Goddard Junior High, George Cooper said, "Students are shown that there is some similarity between one group of organisms and another, but it's just a comparison and not really even taught as a theory. We don't have a unit on creation or evolution."

Essie Haifler, science teacher at Goddard Junior High School, said that evolution is not a controversial issue. "We're studying earth history, which includes geology and paleontology (the study of fossil records). Man hardly comes into it.

"AS LONG AS WE present it as a theory, and stay within state regulations and avoid the church (aspects) we won't have any serious problems with it," she said.

According to Mel Gabriel of Longview, who is involved with the state textbook committee, opinions expressed by Midland public school teachers are compatible with those set down by state law and which are reflected by selections of the state textbook committee.

"We (Gabriel and his wife, Norma) have not been involved politically at all (with the evolution vs. creation-science issue). Our only concern is with the textbooks.

"Contrary to what that judge (in Arkansas) ruled, there is much evidence in creation-science," he said. "But that evidence is censored in the textbooks."

Private schools in Midland are not affected by the textbooks or the rules set down by Texas statutes. While Glen Walton, administrator of Permian Basin High School, said that evolution is not a concern or an issue at the school, it is taught as a theory just as interpretations of Shakespeare are taught.

"We strictly stay away from any religious overtones," Walton explained.

David Piercy, administrator of Oaklawn Baptist Church, said all instruction at the school is from a Christian point of view. "We teach the Bible plan as fact and present evolution as theory," Piercy said. "The state law limits academic freedom (in public schools), but our objective is Christian education.

"Our function is to raise Christians, not doctors, lawyers or politicians."

At St. Ann's Catholic School, students attend only through the sixth grade. Ed Doherty, administrator, said it is difficult for children that young to distinguish between any kind of theory or fact. "We shy away from teaching any kind of theory."

Rev. P.D. Peterson, headmaster at Trinity School agreed that theories can confuse the students. "What I'd like to do some day when I have the time is to put out a course on what the real facts are and what the flaws are. I think they have some valid points to make in the creation-science viewpoint. But I don't think the fossil records of dinosaurs will conflict with what the Bible says."

PETERSON THINKS evidence seems to indicate that words are used metaphorically in the Bible.

"I think they are contrasting two extremes: on one hand, creation, and on the other hand, a godless evolution. In the end there is not going to be any conflict between science and the Bible."

"We don't really want to get into the science against the Bible theory," he explained. "It's a false conflict and it destroys children's beliefs."

According to Gabriel, the issue is just beginning in Texas, as well as other nations.

"Evolution is just as religious as creation is," he said. "Evolutionists have to account for origin, too. Where creation is a theistic approach, evolution is an atheistic approach.

"There are parents across the nation who are concerned because their children are being taught (in the public schools) contrary to how they are taught at home."

If Gabriel's predictions that the issue is just beginning hold true, the next legislative session in Austin may look similar to the last session on a larger scale.

According to Bill Kidd, when the bill was introduced on the floor by State Rep. Mike Martin, R-Longview, it was late in the evening at the end of the last session. By then, "There were a couple of fundamentalist preachers and a couple of biology teachers climbing the walls."

Decree sounds death knell for Ma Bell

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The break-up of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. increases the likelihood that local phone rates will rise, produces uncertainty for 3 million stockholders and fuels doubt about the future of the nation's basic phone network, observers say.

While the settlement may cause local rates to double within five years and long-distance rates to drop, it may also speed a revolution in American communications that could benefit all consumers.

"Over time, there will be significant change," Charles D. Ferris, the former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, said after AT&T and the Justice Department announced a settlement Friday of the government's seven-year-old antitrust suit. "AT&T is finally saying it is not going to expend its energy in attempting to hold back the new national policy favoring competition."

"But this is also a reflection of (AT&T chairman) Charles Brown's judgment of where the most valuable parts of his business lie in the future," said Philip L. Verveer, the former chief of the FCC's common carrier bureau and the chief prosecutor when the suit was filed.

"This is the death of Mother Bell as we knew her," said Howard Anderson, president of the Yankee Group, a telecommunications consulting firm.

The agreement unveiled by Brown and Assistant Attorney General William Baxter calls for AT&T to divest itself of the 22 wholly owned Bell System operating companies that provide local service to more than 80 percent of the nation's phones.

AT&T will keep its long-distance operations; its manufacturing unit, the Western Electric Co., and its Bell Laboratories. Once it has spun off its local companies — by a procedure not finally determined — it will be free to enter virtually any new market it wants without federal regulation, including data processing, cable television and electronic publishing.

The agreement must still be approved by U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene, who has been conducting the antitrust trial and who scheduled a hearing Tuesday.

Observers says there are several likely impacts:

—The agreement does not set out a procedure for AT&T to determine the value of the property and facilities it is giving up. That valuation will be crucial, because allowable telephone profit margins are calculated on that basis.

—AT&T has subsidized local telephone rates with long-distance revenues. But long-distance operations will remain with AT&T. While local rates have already begun climbing because of regulatory changes, Brown, Baxter and industry officials agree the settlement would accelerate the rise. Local rates could easily double in less than five years, they say.

—Upward pressure on local rates will increase because the Bell system will lose the ability of AT&T to raise money. AT&T, the world's largest private company, has been able to raise huge amounts of capital to modernize facilities at the lowest possible rates. Many financial analysts doubt the operating companies will be able to do on their own.

—Long-distance rates are likely to fall as AT&T responds to competition in that field. And the Bell System companies might be able to moderate the increase local rate hikes by charging AT&T and the other long-distance firms more for the right to use their local networks.

—The proposed decree suggests that AT&T may transfer ownership of its local facilities by spinning off new stock to AT&T shareholders, but since it doesn't mandate that procedure, AT&T stockholders must wait to find out how AT&T intends to protect their interests.

—AT&T would be free to enter the cable television field and offer its own electronic publishing services. Deregulation legislation pending in Congress would limit that authority.

—AT&T could enter unregulated fields like data processing and equipment sales. But the settlement doesn't say how, by whom and to what extent AT&T's long-distance service will be regulated, and whether there will be any restrictions on how AT&T uses its long-distance revenue

Polish crisis brings calls for rejection of Yalta accords

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer

The new East-West confrontation over Poland has revived Cold War bickering over the 1945 Yalta agreements that were supposed to assure peace and freedom in Eastern Europe after World War II.

With Poland under a martial law that President Reagan blames on the Soviet Union, there are calls for Western rejection of the Yalta accords.

Despite pledges at Yalta of free elections, the nations of Eastern Europe one by one became Soviet puppets. Poland, a major concern at the conference, came under Communist Party control in 1947.

Former national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski raised the idea of renouncing the accords in a television interview last week, and the Wall Street Journal said in an editorial that renouncing Yalta "would send a clear message to Eastern Europe's peoples that we have not written off their aspirations for a better future."

Freedom for Eastern Europe was exactly what the Yalta accords were intended to guarantee, however.

Since the agreements were reached in February 1945, Yalta has become a codeword for Soviet domination of its eastern European neighbors. And in the Cold War rhetoric of the 1950s it was painted as a betrayal of the people of Eastern Europe.

President Franklin Roosevelt, Prime Minister Winston Churchill of Great Britain and Premier Joseph Stalin of the Soviet Union met at Yalta, a Soviet resort on the Black Sea, as World War II was concluding in Europe.

One of the chief objectives was to bring Russia into the war against Japan once Germany was subdued. Agreement to form the United Nations was also reached at the conference.

Of current interest is the Yalta accord on the disposition of post-war Europe. The allies agreed to divide Germany into zones for separate administration after the surrender instead of joint occupation, a decision which leaves Germany still divided.

They also shifted the boundaries of Poland, restoring to the Soviet Union a section it gave up in World War I and adding to Poland portions of eastern Germany with large Polish populations.

America and Britain, concerned for the future of the redefined Poland living in the shadow of a hostile Soviet Union, also sought to guarantee the country's freedom.

Churchill said at Yalta that Britain had gone to war so that "Poland should be free and sovereign... We drew our swords for Poland." Both Britain and France had declared war against Germany after the blitzkrieg of Poland in 1939.

Stalin stressed the problem of Russian security, saying: "Throughout history, Poland has been the corridor for attack on Russia."

At the time, Soviet troops occupied Poland, and Moscow could have done pretty much as it pleased. But the war was not quite over, and neither side wanted a split at this critical point.

The "Yalta Declaration on Liberated Europe" obligated the big powers to help the countries liberated from German occupation and the former Axis satellite states "to form interim governmental authorities broadly representative of all democratic elements in the population and pledged to the earliest possible establishment through free elections of governments responsive to the will of the people."

The declaration also contained this interesting, but long forgotten, provision: "When, in the opinion of the three governments, conditions in any European liberated state or any former Axis satellite...make such action necessary, they will immediately establish appropriate machinery for the carrying out of the joint responsibilities set forth."

If Yalta were still binding, the West could argue that this obligates the Big Three to intervene jointly in Poland.

The Soviets, on the other hand, would contend that a responsive government was formed in Poland by the will of the people and this government is free to do what it wants.

Stalin also agreed at Yalta to include non-communists in the new governments of Eastern Europe. At the time this was considered a major concession by Stalin.

Coalition governments were formed according to the Yalta pledge. Elections were held in Hungary in 1945, in which communists won only one-fifth of the vote. Early in 1948, Hungary's Communist Party, through its control of the ministry of the interior, arrested leading politicians, forced the resignation of Premier Ferenc Nagy and gained full control.

EDITOR'S REPORT

Russian bear might lumber rudely into West Germany.

In the end, after a most cordial session at the White House with President Reagan, Chancellor Schmidt supported the president on Poland and his attack on the vicious Soviet role in the affair. As eminent a legal authority as former associate U.S. Supreme Court justice Arthur Goldberg denounced the Polish regime's action and the Soviet role as a violation of the Helsinki Accords. Both communist parties solemnly signed the measures and conveniently ignored them since they involved human rights.

Schmidt then flew home and wants the the NATO foreign ministers meeting in Brussels tomorrow to join together in demanding that the U.S.S.R. relax its stranglehold.

The Reagan-Schmidt communique in Washington didn't mince words about universality or true togetherness, the trademark of all Soviet statements with comrades. It swiftly laid the blame on the Russians and kept the Atlantic alliance, as it always has been, in the forefront of the defense line and out of the Red Bear's paws. Here again, I believe, Chancellor Schmidt showed his nimbleness of mind and audacity of purpose.

He left the Soviet Union, only the other day salivating at the thought of West Germany — the prosperous Federal German republic of nearly 60 million — dangling a tin cup of bitter tea brewed with false hopes. Schmidt is much too intelligent to give neo-isolationists here any cause for lifting our nuclear umbrella over Europe or even to remove some of our 380,000 troop strength in the Old World.

The Federal West German chancellor outwitted all the specialists the Soviets used to entice Schmnidt away from NATO and the West European Common Market to which most allies belong. While Chancellor Schmidt didn't indulge in specifics as country-to-country communications, he said as much to the president and key presidential aides for future reference. He doesn't like to be caught with his plans (ok) down on important matters of state. But you can't convince me that he was unaware of U.S. sanctions against you know who!

Jaw-to-jaw talks in private, as Schmidt just had with the president, are invaluable. And while Schmidt doesn't need an interpreter, a phone call from Washington or London ordinarily cannot convey urgency. I was pleased to note that my admirable friend, British Prime Minister Mrs. Margaret Thatcher, managed to see Chancellor Schmidt after which she, too, urged the alliance to rally 'round the president.

While quite a few friends and critics of the president were openly wondering whether we had a substantive "foreign policy" because of bickering among allies, Chancellor Schmidt came up with his own answer. It's quite a crusher to the Soviets when you stop and think of their strategy efforts to promote a split in the West. It isn't a new technique, their trying to destabilize the West, but it's worth recalling the Russian methods in the last few months.

Their campaign began, of course, before Polish communist auxiliaries cracked down on the independent Solidarity trade union movement. Then, they courted Chancellor Schmidt like streetwalkers flaunting their wares in the hope of entrapment. Schmidt happened to be in East Germany, on a state visit to aluminum-toothed East German Communist leader, Erich Honecker. The East German boss, who ceased being a "youth leader" at age 60 a few years ago, sealed off his frontiers with Poland a couple of days before martial law.

Schmidt, whose own intelligence service is pretty sharp, would have obtained instantaneous data that the borders were closed and word about impending martial law. All the fawning for hard currency West Germany favors by communist East Germans didn't go down at all with Schmidt. Remember: he is leader of the West German Social Democratic Party (SPD), an old trade union man and the blows against Solidarity would be taken by Schmidt as personal injuries.

He came out of East Germany opposed to embargoes on nearly anything destined to feed and clothe the Poles. Actually, Schmidt was the most outspoken of any allied leader on these issues. He blamed it on "lack of consultation" which I take with a heaping teaspoon of salt. Schmidt tore the Soviet strategy to shreds when the Russians in the eyes of the world could least afford it. Sure, they'll try the old splitting routine again — and meet with the same results.

While it's abundantly true that the Soviets fear an explosion in Poland could lead to other East European folk demanding the same pivilege of self-determination for themselves, the Kremlin worries even more about being ridiculed and laughed at. That happens to be precisely what Chancellor Helmut Schmidt has just accomplished, with, of course, friendly help from President Reagan.

As a ploy, it was fascinating; as statecraft, most opportune. But the bear, remember, is always most dangerous when wounded. We should now be on our guard and look to our defenses.

Negotiations continue at Shell Oil Co. refinery

By The Associated Press

In a last-minute attempt to avert a walkout by 2,100 members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union at a Shell Oil Co. refinery, company and union representatives resumed negotiations Saturday.

But employees continued to picket outside two Port Arthur refineries and informational pickets were set up outside a Texaco plant in that industrial community.

Representatives of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union met at 10 a.m. CST with officials at Shell's Deer Park refinery to decide whether to continue contract talks or to issue a 48-hour strike notice.

Shell OCAW representative Ed Watson said his union had not issued a strike notice Saturday, pending results of the negotiations.

"We are still far apart on a number of issues — pay being one — but as long as the meetings continue and as long as there is give and take, that leaves the possibility of good talks," said company spokesman Bill Gibson.

Gulf Oil Corp. in Port Arthur also resumed talks today.

In Port Arthur, about 4,000 union members walked off their jobs Friday at the nation's largest Texaco plant and 500 employees of American Petrofina went on strike after their two-year contract expired and talks stalled on the issue of pension rights, said union spokesman R.C. Graffagmine.

Union negotiators walked away from the bargaining table Thursday after Texaco officials refused demands for a new pension plan and a contract extension.

Texaco spokesman Charles Rentz said plant operations were continuing "as usual," however, with supervisory and technical personnel working in three shifts around the clock.

Union members, working in groups of three and four, braved windy, chilly weather and continued to walk picket lines Saturday at the two refineries.

Law enforcement authorities, who monitored the plants during shift changes, said picketing was peaceful and orderly.

Informational pickets appeared Friday at the Texaco plant in Port Neches, 15 miles from Port Arthur. One union official predicted the union would have pickets "in front of everything with a Texaco sticker" within two weeks.

Also on Friday, a Beaumont judge lifted an injunction issued to halt violence during the 1980 OCAW strike after several automobile smashings.

Man involved in traffic fatality ordered to stand trial

HOUSTON (AP) — A local judge who faced sharp criticism after the sentencing of a man involved in a fatal traffic accident has thrown out the man's guilty plea and ordered him to stand trial.

"I have a good client caught in bad politics," attorney H. Wayne Gilles said of Jeff Morris, 49, who is charged with criminally negligent homicide.

On Dec. 14, after Morris pleaded guilty in the July 20 death of 60-year-old Willie Lincoln, County Court at Law Judge Neal Richardson assessed the punishment at 20 days in jail and $500 fine. Although there was no evidence that Morris was drunk when he rammed his lumber company truck into Lincoln's car, investigators said Morris told them he drank a half-pint of whiskey several hours before the accident.

After Morris' sentence was reported in the local media, the judge received letters and phone calls criticizing him for imposing a "light" sentence on Morris, who previously had been convicted three times for drunken driving.

"Public reaction has called my attention to the fact that there was an implication" by prosecutors that Morris was a drunken driver in the accident and should have received a heavier sentence, Richardson said.

The judge then withdrew Morris' sentence and ordered him to stand trial Feb. 8 to see if prosecutors can back up their "implication."

Assistant District Attorney Nick Vincent was the chief prosecutor in Richardson's court when the judge imposed the sentence.

After Vincent talked to reporters about the case, Richardson charged privately that Vincent distorted the facts to generate criticism of the judge.

"I will not permit the state or anyone else, by misrepresenting the facts of a case, making misleading statements or allowing accounts of the facts to be reported in the press, to subject this court or the system of justice in general to public criticism," Richardson said in court Friday.

Texas Democrats lead Reagan support

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan drew his strongest congressional Democratic support from the South last year, with three Texans among the top 10, an annual survey by Congressional Quarterly showed.

Charles Stenholm of Stamford and Phil Gramm of College Station backed the president 75 percent of the time and Kent Hance of Lubbock supported Reagan on 71 percent of the roll call votes in 1981, according to the study.

On the other end of the scale, Jim Mattox of Dallas backed the president least frequently, voting with him on only 29 percent of the issues. Close behind in frequence of opposition were Mickey Leland of Houston (30 percent), and Henry B. Gonzalez of San Antonio and Martin Frost of Dallas (34 percent).

But only two other Democrats, House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Fort Worth and Jack Brooks of Beaumont, voted with Reagan less than half the time. Wright backed Reagan views 49 percent of the time while Brooks, dean of the 24-member Texas delegation, supported the president on 42 percent of the votes.

In the Senate, Lloyd Bentsen of Texas backed the president 70 percent of the time, third highest among Democrats. Republican John Tower of Texas gave the president his vote on 75 percent of the issues.

While the study reflects Reagan's first-year success on Capitol Hill, it is not a measure of how much of his program was approved, and should be used with caution as a measure of an individual lawmaker's loyalty, the publication said, because:

— The study counts only issues that reach a roll-call vote on the House or Senate floor. Elements of the White House agenda that are abandoned or defeated before they reach the floor, that are quietly compromised, or that breeze through on a voice vote are not counted;

— The study counts votes only on issues where the president has indicated clear, personal support or opposition, usually in messages to Congress, press conference remarks or other public statements; and — All votes are given equal weight, with the same emphasis given major and minor votes and no distinctionmade between close calls and lopsided decisions or between administration initiatives and proposals born on Capitol Hill.

Broken down by region, Congressional Quarterly said, the presidential support scores illustrate the impact of two growing intra-party factions, the conservative Southern "Boll Weevils" and the Republican moderate "Gypsy Moths" of the Northeast and Midwest.

The Boll Weevils, which Stenholm heads, gave Reagan his strongest Democratic backing. Of the 22 most supportive Democrats, 21 came from the group.

Gramm, co-sponsor of Reagan's budget bill, and Stenholm tied for fourth among Reagan's stauncher supporters, the study showed, while Hance, co-sponsor of the president's tax bill, tied for ninth.

Among Texas' five Republican congressmen, the most supportive of Reagan was Tom Loeffler of Hunt, the deputy minority whip of the House, who voted with him on 79 percent of the roll call votes. Next were Jack Fields of Humble, 76 percent; Jim Collins of Dallas, 71 percent; Bill Archer of Houston, 67 percent; and Ron Paul of Lake Jackson, 59 percent.

Besides Stenholm, Gramm and Hance, five other Boll Weevils are Texans, and they also backed Reagan most of the time, CQ said.

Marvin Leath of Marlin was supportive on 68 percent of the votes, followed by Jack Hightower of Vernon (67), Richard White of El Paso (67), Sam B. Hall of Marshall (66) and Ralph Hall of Rockwall (61).

Other Texas Democrats with Reagan half the time or more were Jake Pickle of Austin (61), Abraham Kazen of Del Rio (58), Charlie Wilson of Lufkin (57), Kika de la Garza of Mission (57) and Bill Patman of Ganado (50).

From a negative standpoint, Gonzalez led all Texans, disagreeing with Reagan positions 64 percent of the time, Leland 53 percent and Mattox 51 percent.

Reagan and Congress agreed on 55 of 76 votes in the House and 112 of 128 votes in the Senate, by CQ's count. Since the study began, in 1953, that overall support of 81.9 percent ranks second only to the 93 percent unity behind Lyndon Johnson in 1965. The lowest is Richard M. Nixon's 50.6 percent backing in 1973, during the Watergate era.

Reagan commandeered Republican support by a unanimous margin on several key votes in the House. Senate Republicans, on average, voted with Reagan on [illegible] percent of the roll calls counted.

Three men jailed in shooting death

DALLAS (AP) — Three men remained jailed today as police prepared formal charges against them in connection with the shooting death of a Boy Scouts executive.

Michael Lynn Bishop, 30, was found lying in his apartment Wednesday night. He had been shot once in the head with a .22-caliber revolver during an apparent robbery attempt, police said. He had served as North District executive of the Scouts for about five years.

Police said an informant's tip led them to the suspects, who were arrested early Friday. A .22-caliber revolver also was confiscated, said homicide Lt. Roger Duncan.

Man accused of fraud is out on bond

DALLAS (AP) — A man accused of defrauding an Ohio dentist out of $200,000 in an alleged oil fraud scheme has been freed on bond.

Joseph A. Timo, 35, was freed Friday after turning himself in and posting $100,000 bond set by U.S. Magistrate John Tolle. Tolle also set a preliminary hearing for Jan. 18.

According to a sworn statement by FBI special agent Eugene F. Gee Jr., Timo met with Dr. George Collins of Columbus, Ohio, while the two were in the Cayman Islands last April.

The statement said Timo told Collins he was buyng and selling Nigerian oil and that any investment would net a 33 percent profit. Gee said Collins invested $110,000 and received $146,300 in return three weeks later.

In June, the statement said, Collins invested another $200,000, but was told his money and profits had been reinvested.

Timo and his company, J. Timo International, have filed for Chapter 11 reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws. Gee said a review of the company's financial records shows no investments in Nigerian oil.

Several other of Timo's investors have filed suit in federal court, saying they lost $7.8 million in similar deals. They seek $36 million in damages.

Jewelry vendors sentenced for bribery

DALLAS (AP) — Two California-based jewelry vendors have been sentenced to one-year probations and fined $15,000 each for bribing employees of the U.S. Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

Makoto Siroishi and Masaaki Nakamura pleaded guilty to charges of bribing the employees by giving them "currency and other things of value."

In sentencing the men Friday, U.S. District Judge Sarah T. Hughes also ordered the men to perform 100 hours of community service and recommended that Nakamura, a Japanese citizen, not be deported.

Shiroishi, 47, was an employee of Yuzo Susagano Inc. and Nakamura, 39, was an officer of Oriental Distributing.

Brownwood coach files suit against ABC

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A lawyer representing Brownwood High School football coach Gordon Wood says he will file suit Monday against American Broadcasting Co., alleging that ABC-TV damaged Wood's reputation by misidentifying him as the coach roughing up players in a film clip.

Gary Stephens said the suit, to be filed in San Angelo federal court, stems from Wood's appearance on a September "Good Morning America" show.

In the film clip, Stephens said, a coach "grabbed hold of players' jerseys and slapped them up beside the head." Program host David Hartman identified the coach in the film as Wood.

An ABC executive apologized and said the incident was a "crude attempt to ambush" the coach. Hartman also apologized on the air.

Stephens, a Houston attorney, and Wood said the film clip was from a 1974 documentary on violence in football and was actually of a Florida coach, the Austin American-Statesman reported Saturday.

"The whole thing was a setup," Wood, 68, told the newspaper. "I got an invitation to be on the program, and I thought I was representing high school football and my fellow coaches. Instead, I was seated next to a young boy from Dallas who had been paralyzed playing high school football, with the implication that this was what Texas high school football produced."

"After the clip was run, Hartman said, 'Coach, how do you justify this sort of treatment?' I told him the man in the clip was not me and if any of our coaches treated boys that way they'd be out of town by sundown."

George Merlis, executive producer of "Good Morning America," said the show "was a violation of our network's policy not to set people up...I feel very bad about it and I'm sorry to the coach and I'm sorry to the people of Brownwood.

"I'm more sorry for the damage it's done to the credibility of 'Good Morning America.'"

Stephens said ABC had refused to allow Wood to make a second appearance on the program or to arrange for Hartman to read a prepared statement on the show.

In addition to seeking "in excess of $10,000" in damages, Stephens said he plans to ask that Wood be allowed to make another appearance on the program, or for Hartman to read a statement.

Stephens said Wood gave the money — "$100, I think it was" — he got for appearing on the show to the injured Dallas player, Jim Wallgren, 16.

Thieves steal 50 fur coats

HOUSTON (AP) — Thieves who knew what they were looking for broke into a department store vault and stole $500,000 worth of fur coats, police say.

Investigators said Friday someone pried open an employee entrance door at the Marshall Fields Co. store and stole from the vault 50 fur coats valued at $10,000 each.

"Nothing else appears to be missing so it certainly appears they were only interested in the furs," Marshall Fields spokesman Sanford Sacks said.

Detectives are investigating a possible link between the fur theft and a Wednesday burglary where a jewelry case was smashed and $6,000 in gold chains were taken from a nearby jewelry store.

Police look for link in three homicides

HOUSTON (AP) — Investigators are trying to determine if there is a link between a double homicide last week and the shooting death of the wife of one of the victims two months ago.

The bodies of Robert Styles, 32, and Vickie Martin, 18, were found Thursday night in the Woodgate subdivision, a sheriff's department spokesman said.

Bob Layton Osborne, 24, was arrested Friday by Harris County sheriff's detectives and charged with two counts of murder. He was held on $80,000 bond.

Miss Martin and several friends went to Styles' home Thursday night and apparently surprised the gunman, who already had shot Styles in the face with a .32-caliber pistol, said Lt. Grace Ozmer of the sheriff's special investigation unit.

Miss Martin was shot in the back of the head as she ran from the house, witnesses told investigators. Ms. Ozmer said the young woman's friends would be questioned later.

Secret Service agent Tim McIntyre displays some of the $4 million in counterfeit money seized Thursday and Friday following the arrest of Ronald Geroge Slighte, 36, of Seattle. Slighte was being held in Montreal. He also faces charges in the United States.

Man not laughing now that he's in jail for passing funny money

SEATTLE (AP) — During their 23 years in business, the motto of Bob and Argene Abrams was: "We print anything but money."

But authorities say that shortly after they went out of business, their presses at Flash Advertising apparently were used to print more than $4 million in counterfeit $100 bills.

An arrest came after phony cash was used to buy gold coins in Canada, authorities alleged.

Most of the bogus money and engraving plates were seized at two rented storage sites north of the city early Friday, several hours after authorities in Montreal arrested Ronald George Slighte, 36, of Seattle, a former real-estate salesman who also once held jobs as a male model, taxi driver, and operator of an ambulance service.

Canadian officials and U.S. Secret Service agents said Slighte faced charges of fraud and passing counterfeit bills in Seattle and three Canadian cities. He was being held without bail in Montreal.

The Abramses said they decided to retire three months ago and listed their home and business with the real-estate firm where Slighte worked. He introduced them to a buyer, Roger B. Heppenstall of Seattle, who signed a purchase contract that was to take effect in March.

Slighte, who was to operate the print shop for Heppenstall, leased it last month.

On Wednesday night, U.S. Secret Service agents visited the Abramses.

"We were absolutely floored," said Mrs. Abrams. "My stomach's been upset since."

"It was a real shock," Abrams said. "I've never been tempted to print money."

Montreal police said Slighte was apprehended in the waiting room of a downtown coin shop. On Friday, they displayed $90,900 in counterfeit U.S. $100 bills and 200 South African gold Krugerrands they said were found in Slighte's briefcase.

A Krugerrand contains one ounce of gold. The price of gold closed Friday at $395 an ounce.

Tim McIntyre of the Secret Service in Seattle said another $3.5 million in fake bills was found in two rented storage areas between Seattle and Everett.

Police said the investigation began when a man bought five Krugerrands in Vancouver, British Columbia, and paid with counterfeit bills Dec. 31.

Authorities say the man then went to Calgary, Alberta, and bought another 200 Krugerrands with fake bills.

When a man tried to pass some bills Thursday at a Montreal coin store, the clerk "noted the money didn't look too good," said Police Sgt. Roger Ratelle, "and she telephoned us to report something was fishy. We notified all the big coin shops and banks in the city."

Later in the day, Slighte was arrested while trying to exchange several Krugerrands for Canadian funds at the House of Coins. Police said a suspicious manager had checked a telecommunications system linking gold and coin dealers across Canada and learned about the Calgary fraud.

Police alleged Slighte apparently printed his own money, working alone for six nights a week.

Sgt. Jacque Auger, a Montreal detective, said the bills were "almost perfect, a little too light perhaps.

Schmidt says early summit meeting between Reagan, Brezhnev is vital

WASHINGTON (AP) — West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt says an early summit meeting between President Reagan and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev is needed to avoid Soviet miscalculation and make Brezhnev understand "the guts that are behind the American president."

"They underrate you," Schmidt said of the Soviet leadership. "They underestimate you and this is a great danger. It can lead to miscalculations which might spell danger for all of us; for you as well as for us in West Europe, as well as for them."

Schmidt said the Soviets have come to question the continuity of goals and strategy of the United States.

"The Soviets have questioned the strategy behind denying them grain, then giving them grain, then denying them something else," he said.

"They need some strong words (and) need to feel the will behind those words."

Reagan has said a summit meeting is likely this year and Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. says Reagan believes summit meetings may be even more necessary and useful in times of crisis than in calm.

Schmidt commented in an interview on the ABC television news program, "This Week with David Brinkley." The interview, scheduled for broadcast today, was recorded Tuesday during Schmidt's visit to Washington. Excerpts were released Saturday.

Schmidt repeated his view that the Soviet Union is to blame for the martial law crackdown in Poland. And he said that while the sanctions invoked by Reagan "don't mean anything" economically, they did send "a very clear...political signal to the leadership in Moscow."

At the same time Schmidt said that the United States might find that rewards are as useful as punishments in dealing with the Kremlin.

It is sometimes necessary, he said, "to hold out some carrot from time to time — not only to hold it out to them, but also (to) give rewards if they act in a way you think is proper and would benefit the common...good."

Schmidt said that even though 500,000 jobs and 700 West German companies depend on trade with Soviet-bloc nations, a far more important consideration in German consideration of possible sanctions against the Soviet Union is the fact that 17 million Germans live in the Soviet sphere in East Germany and elsewhere.

"This is what matters much more in our mind than the economic disadvantages," Schmidt said.

Schmidt declared that far from dragging his feet, he had early on placed the blame on the Kremlin for the crisis in Poland.

Two men die when oil rig explodes

LARNED, Kan. (AP) — Two men were killed and two others were injured when an oil rig exploded and burned about 8 miles east of this central Kansas town, authorities said.

Frank E. Lovejoy, 28, of Hoisington, died shortly after the blast Friday and David Eubank, 29, of Pratt, died Friday night at the burn center of the University of Kansas Medical Center, said hospital spokeswoman Becky Bishop. Two other men, one of them critically hurt, were hospitalized for treatment of burns.

Pawnee County Sheriff Cliff Atteberry said authorities were searching for the cause of the explosion and fire.

Rare diseased bird sold to pet shop

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Two people who allegedly sold a diseased rare bird to a pet store were ordered to appear in court Jan. 20 on misdemeanor charges.

The district attorney's office Friday charged Josh Holland of Los Angeles with selling and advertising a Psittacine bird without a license from the Colorado Department of Health. Mary Christiansen of Colorado Springs, accused of helping sell the bird, also was charged with a misdemeanor.

The bird was infected with a potentially devastating ailment called Newcastle's disease, and 240 birds in the pet shop where the bird was discovered were ordered destroyed by the health department. Officials, learning unlicensed exotic birds had been brought to Colorado, searched and found one in Denver last week.

Farmer charged with cruelty to animals

BRISTOL, Conn. (AP) — A dairy farmer was charged with cruelty to animals after authorities found 23 Holstein cows dead of starvation and 87 others in the herd in poor condition.

The animals had been given no water and no food for at least five days "and not much of anything for a long time before that," said Frank Intino, chief of law enforcement for the Connecticut Humane Society in Newington.

Warren S. Roberts, 45, described as the caretaker of his family's farm, was charged Friday with 23 counts of cruelty to animals and released, according to Bristol police Lt. Patrick Coty. Maximum penalty would be a $250 fine and one year in jail for each count.

Man held for violating anti-slavery laws

NEW YORK (AP) — A 22-year-old man accused of holding migrant farm workers against their will in North Carolina has been arrested here on charges of violating federal anti-slavery laws.

The FBI said Darrel E. Gadsden was seized Friday morning on a federal warrant issued last month in Greensboro, N.C. A six-count indictment alleged Gadsden promised migrant workers they would be hired for a farm crew and given free room and board.

The workers, however, were charged for their food, did not receive all of their wages, lived in unsanitary conditions and were assaulted when they tried to leave, the indictment alleged. Conviction carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Morman women chain themselves to temple gate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nine women, including two Mormons, chained themselves to the gate of the Washington Mormon Temple in suburban Maryland on Saturday to protest what they called the church's intervention in national politics.

A group of more than 30 women, including the nine, spent an hour at the Kensington, Md., temple and left peacefully after reading a statement criticizing the recent federal court decision in Idaho against the Equal Rights Amendment.

Shirley Wallace, a Mormon who was spokeswoman for the group, said in the statement that the protesters "are outraged that the Mormon Church, by openly and fiercely fighting against the passage of the Equal Rights Amendment, is keeping all women in chains."

Ms. Wallace said the decision by Judge Marion Callister in Boise, Idaho, is an example of unwarranted Mormon influence on legal matters and national politics.

"We are affronted and scandalized that a Mormon judge, in following the direction of church leaders, has betrayed cherished American values and sought to deny equal rights for women under the law," she said. "Judge Marion Callister must not be allowed to do this with impunity.

"It is time to hold Mormon Church leaders accountable," Wallace said. "As a Mormon woman, I fear that my church will go down ignominously in history as the institution that thwarted efforts for justice for women in the 20th century."

Teacher learns to love Vietnamese orphan

By DALE LEACH
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Nine years ago, a photograph of tiny Tran Thi Het's half-clothed body inside a C-ration box on a Saigon street brought home one of the grim realities of a distant war.

Today, her halting speech is bringing hope to other children in this central Ohio community.

"Her determination is unreal," says Evelyn Heil, who operates a school for learning-disabled children inspired by her adopted daughter, now called Nhanny. "She gets a hold of something and keeps at it."

For most of her 10 years, Nhanny has been struggling simply to live.

She came to the attention of Ms. Heil and other Americans in 1972 when an Associated Press photographer snapped a picture of the child, who along with an older brother was being used as bait by their Vietnamese mother, a beggar.

After her mother died of tuberculosis and her brother was killed in Danang, Nhanny was put on a plane for the United States. But a congenital heart defect and malnutrition took their toll. The child stopped breathing en route to Honolulu and again, a few weeks later, on the way to a Houston hospital.

"I couldn't stand it after I saw her picture, so I started calling the next day at the hospital," said Ms. Heil, then a Houston resident.

Although authorities had narrowed the list of eligible adoptive parents to five, she said, "I talked them into making it six."

When Ms. Heil finally brought Nhanny home in October 1974, the girl was three years old. She weighed only 12 pounds and was unable to sit up. And her years in the box had left an ugly depression in the left side of her skull — a depression which has since disappeared.

Ms. Heil later learned that Nhanny had holes in her eardrums, making her virtually deaf. And during her early days with the Heils, Nhanny never slept for more than 15 minutes without waking in the grip of a violent nightmare.

"She'd make these animal screams...and sweat would be pouring off her," said the divorced mother of three other children. "I'm sure something terrifying had to have happened to her sometime when she was sleeping."

When Ms. Heil came here in 1977, she immediately took Nhanny to a specialist who replaced her right eardrum. A little more than a year ago, the child began hearing well for the first time in her life.

At that point, Ms. Heil attempted to have Nhanny taken out of classes for educable mentally retarded and placed in a regular classroom. But she met resistance from school administrators and finally decided to teach her in her own school.

Nhanny now is one of 13 children at the Warren Center of Learning, a private school for learning-disabled children in an aging frame structure on Springfield's north side. Mothers and aides fill the rooms, but Ms. Heil is its only teacher.

Mrs. Heil is certified to teach in the public schools and has done extensive research to help her better teach students with learning problems.

"I've done a lot of extra work — a lot of digging out — to work with Nhanny," she said. But Ms. Heil says much of what she offers her students is encouragement.

"They've been so beaten down before they come here," she said. "This is a very warm, a very loving environment."

Ms. Heil estimates that Nhanny is now reading on almost a fourth-grade level and that her reading is improving her speech. She said other students have made similar progress at the school.

In addition to overcoming her physical problems, Nhanny has had to overcome sometimes violent reactions to her Vietnamese heritage.

Proposed changes in welfare rules may not help mother

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — Welfare mother Jean Meshey, whose daughter was inundated with Christmas gifts from newspaper readers, says her faith "is restored" at word the government is easing restrictions on gifts to welfare recipients.

But a spokeswoman for the federal Department of Health and Human Services says she can't be sure if Mrs. Meshey, who suffers from cancer, and her daughter can keep their benefits after receiving $2,300 in gifts and cash.

The state of Florida had threatened to halt $150-a-month payments to Mrs. Meshey, 47, and 12-year-old Jessica after the Clearwater Sun reported the child had not received a Christmas gift in five years. The story sparked the outpouring of presents.

State officials said new Reagan administration welfare rules that took effect Oct. 1 and were aimed at tightening eligibility would force the state to eliminate about $2,300 in welfare payments for Mrs. Meshey — the equivalent amount of the gifts. That could mean she would not receive her check for 15 months.

Her story received national attention. On Friday, HHS Secretary Richard S. Schweiker said he will give states limited authority to allow poor people who get large charitable gifts to stay on the welfare rolls.

Mrs. Meshey told the Sun that she was staggered by the news and her faith "is restored." Sun editor John L. Perry said a federal turnabout on such cases is welcome, though tardy, but added that the relief may not cover the family.

"Saddest of all is that no one cared enough in advance to prevent an injustice, which would have been easier to avoid than it was to remove," Perry said.

Claire Dorrell, a spokeswoman for Schweiker, said the department did not know all the facts about Mrs. Meshey's case and could not be certain that she will be able to keep her benefits under Aid to Families with Dependent Children. In any event, Ms. Dorrell said, the woman will lose her welfare eligibility for the month she got the gifts.

Schweiker said he had already decided to give states some flexibility on the rule before he learned of Mrs. Meshey's case Thursday.

He said in a statement, "The regulations I approved will allow some flexibility, while maintaining our basic goal of tighter restrictions on outside income."

Ms. Dorrell said that under the revised rule, Florida would have the option to review this case and determine whether the circumstances warrant an exception.

She said the final rules will be published in the federal register in several weeks following review by the Office of Management and Budget. She did not have the wording available.

Congress slashed the AFDC rolls as part of President Reagan's effort to hold down federal spending. Tighter eligibility rules, aimed primarily at the working poor, are expected to cost 2 million families all or some of their AFDC benefits.

Several state and local officials had expressed sympathy for Mrs. Meshey's plight and had vowed to seek an exception to the rules.

Mayor irked at his city being ranked as worst place to live

HAVERHILL, Mass. (AP) — So his city is the worst place to live in the United States?

Haverhill Mayor William H. Ryan thinks the authors of a book claiming that dubious title for the Lawrence-Haverhill area should come to town. And maybe a judge should make them.

Ryan was planning to meet over the weekend with Lawrence Mayor Lawrence LeFebre, who said Friday his city plans to sue the Rand McNally publishing company for damages "on the basis of the ranking we received and the degredation the city of Lawrence is undergoing by being labeled the worst city in the nation."

LeFebre said his city will ask Time magazine, which printed an article on the study, for equal space to respond.

The analysis, Places Rated Almanac, ranked 277 metropolitan areas according to nine categories: climate and terrain, housing, health care and environment, crime, transportation, education, recreation, art and economics.

The Lawrence-Haverhill area, about 35 miles north-northwest of Boston, was ranked the worst place to live, at 277. The Fitchburg-Leominster, Mass., area, was ranked next to worst at 276.

The report was compiled by two Massachusetts men, novelist Richard Boyer of Concord and David Savageau of Gloucester, an executive with a job placement firm in Lexington.

Boyer said Saturday he and Savageau meant "no mal intent or good intent." The ratings were made on a "very complex" scale using 63,000 variables. The two rated the all metropolitan areas listed by the federal government in 1978, the year they started the book.

"I firmly believe the publicity accorded to these towns and their chance to tell their side of it is going to do more for the towns than any other billboard and advertising they've done in the last five years." He said he thinks a suit "wouldn't do any harm to the book sales."

No one answered at Rand McNally's New York offices Saturday.

Atlanta was ranked the best place to live.

Savageau said earlier Boston, for example, came in 18th because it is "gifted with cultural and artistic amenities, with very fine education institutions and with superb health care facilities. Everything else is negatives."

Asked why Lawrence-Haverhill came in last, he replied: "It doesn't have anything."

European winter storm causes flooding, deaths

By ANDREW WARSHAW
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Bitter cold and heavy snow gripped the British Isles for a second day Saturday, bringing mid-winter misery to motorists and isolating several towns and villages. At least 11 people were known to have died in the snowstorms.

It was the same across much of Europe, where severe flooding was reported.

In Britain, rescue workers fought throughout the day to free more than 1,000 drivers who took their chances on the icy roads and lost.

In Somerset, police got so fed up with motorists ignoring their danger warnings that they erected giant snowballs at access roads to prevent cars getting through to the expressways.

Engineers worked in the bitter cold to restore power to 13,000 homes in South Wales after cables were snapped by heavy snow and high winds.

The roof of Cardiff's largest concert hall, the Sophia Gardens Pavilion, collapsed under the weight of the snow, but no one was hurt.

On the railways, timetables were virtually abandoned. Snow drifts of up to 15 feet had to be cleared on some lines in the English midlands.

Air travel was also severely affected, and travelers faced long delays at Heathrow and Gatwick airports.

Weathermen said the unseasonable cold would last until Monday or Tuesday. The snow was expected to give way to clearer skies and even lower temperatures.

Exiled Iranian claims 10 killed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The leader of Iran's main opposition group claimed Saturday that more than 2,000 striking auto workers were arrested in Tehran recently and seven of them shot to death.

Three doctors also were executed recently in Iran, according to a statement issued by Iranian guerrilla leader Massoud Rajavi from his Paris exile. The statement telephoned to The Associated Press in Beirut said two of the doctors executed, Sadeq Aqmesheh and Ali Banan, were members of Rajavi's Mujahedeen Khalq guerrilla group.

"Following a strike at the car manufacturing factory of Iran National (in Tehran) more than 2,000 of the workers have been arrested and seven workers killed with the bullets of (Ayatollah Ruhollah) Khomeini's revolutionary guards and scores of others injured," Rajavi claimed.

The statement said those arrested were still in detention. It did not say when the strike occurred.

A Revolutionary Guard spokesman in Tehran contacted by AP's Beirut office said he had not heard of such a large number of arrests at Iran National, which manufactures an Iranian version of the British Hillman automobile.

Sources in Tehran have said Khomeini's Moslem fundamentalist regime forcibly ended a short strike by workers at the Iran National plant several months ago. The sources, who asked anonymity, did not mention any arrests.

On Friday, Iranian President Ali Khamenei confirmed there had been acts of sabotage committed in Iranian factories by "counterrevolutionaries."

Ghana future seems unclear after coup

By SUSAN LINNEE
Associated Press Writer

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — More than a week after Ghana's civilian government was overthrown, it is still unclear who is running the West African nation and how its staggering economic problems will be solved.

Former air force Lt. Jerry Rawlings, the apparent head of the new regime, said after the Dec. 31 coup that it would transform Ghana's economic and social order.

The tone of subsequent announcements has led diplomatic observers here to believe Ghana's ruling Provisional National Defense Council favors a radical approach and scrapping European-style parliamentary democracy.

Ghana, a nation of more than 12 million, was the first African colony to become independent when Britain relinquished its rule 25 years ago. Political parties have now been banned, the constitution suspended and the Parliament dismissed.

The PNDC has announced that people's tribunals would try former officials accused of corruption, and that people's defense councils would be organized to defend the revolution. Similar "people's" institutions appeared in Cuba, Nicaragua and Iran after revolutions in those countries.

Rawlings' political rhetoric is a mixture of Third World nationalism, Marxist-based analysis and Christian morality.

In his first public appearance since the coup, Rawlings told a large, union-organized rally Friday that "no one in society has a right to have more than his basic needs when other productive workers can hardly get theirs," according to Accra radio.

Inflation has been running at over 120 percent and the cedi, the national currency, is nearly worthless. As of last June, Ghana had only $80 million in foreign reserves and an outstanding oil import bill of $350 million.

At one time, Ghana was the world's leading cocoa producer. Production has fallen 50 percent in the past 10 years because of aging stock, falling prices and poor marketing facilities. Much of what is produced is smuggled to neighboring countries where it fetches higher prices.

According to estimates, Ghana could be the world's third-largest gold producer after South Africa and the Soviet Union, but the lack of foreign capital needed to purchase equipment and poor management have kept the annual production to less than six tons.

Rawlings and the PNDC have lashed out against political and bureaucratic corruption and greed, yet the majority of Ghana's salaried workers are employed by the government where kickbacks and other benefits augment low salaries. Following his last coup, Rawlings executed six high-ranking military officers for corruption.

Former President Hilla Limann is under arrest. Former Vice President William Degraft-Johnson, at least 11 government ministers and more than 60 other leading political figures have turned themselves over to police "for their own protection," according to Accra radio. Their assets have been frozen.

The economic measures announced by the new regime so far are largely cosmetic. Merchants, market women and taxi drivers have been told to cut prices. After Rawlings' first coup, in June 1979, prices went down at first, but then goods simply disappeared from the market.

The composition of the PNDC, apparently chaired by Rawlings, a 34-year-old air force officer who led another coup in June 1979, has not yet been made public. Accra radio has been the only source of official information about developments since the coup.

Kuwaiti officials, former Swedish prime minister meet on Mideast war

KUWAIT (AP) — Former Swedish Prime Minister Olof Palme conferred with Kuwaiti leaders Saturday on the war between Iran and Iraq.

Foreign Minister Sheik Sabah al-Ahmad al-Sabah said he and Kuwait's ruler, Sheik Jaber al-Ahmad al-Sabah, "explained to Palme Kuwait's stand toward the war and the necessity to bring it to halt."

Palme made several trips between Tehran and Baghdad last summer as a special envoy of former U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim in an attempt to arrange a cease-fire in the war.

Similiar mediation efforts by non-aligned nations and the Islamic Conference have failed to produce peace between Iran and Iraq.

Nations to meet to discuss Palestine

KUWAIT (AP) — Representatives from non-aligned nations will hold a two-day conference here April 16, Kuwait Foreign Minister Sheik Sabah al-Ahmad al-Sabah said Saturday.

He said the 36 foreign ministers from the 94-member movement, members of the movement's executive board, will discuss the Palestinian question.

Two earth tremors hit western Greece

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Two strong earth tremors jolted western Greece Saturday, but no injuries or damage were reported, the Athens Observatory said.

Seismologists said the two quakes measured 4.4 and 4.6 respectively on the Richter scale. Their epicenter was in the sea 103 miles northwest of the capital.

Police holding man found with guns

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (AP) — Police have detained a white man after allegedly finding a cache of arms at his suburban Salisbury home, the Herald newspaper reported Saturday.

The man, who was not named, is being held incommunicado on allegations of hoarding arms, including 17 assault rifles, a machine gun and 25,000 rounds of ammunition, the paper said. The weapons were found Wednesday while police were investigating the man for allegedly hoarding gold and precious gems, it said.

Police also found a field telephone, flares, land mines, hand grenades and camouflage uniforms, the paper reported.

The man joins 11 other whites detained since October under emergency powers. All are accused of hoarding arms, spying for white-ruled South Africa or plotting to overthrow the 21-month-old black Socialist government of Prime Minister Robert Mugabe.

Paisley has Canadian visit message

TORONTO (AP) — The Rev. Ian Paisley, Northern Ireland's militant Protestant leader, will come to Canada next weekend "to combat pro-IRA propaganda," he said in a telephone interview.

"The purpose of my visit is to inform the people of Canada, and Toronto particularly, about what is happening in Ulster, to represent the Unionist viewpoint," he said.

He said it is important for people to know the Protestant viewpoint because of "the international pressures applied to the British government to ditch Northern Ireland contrary to the wishes of its people."

The U.S. State Department refused Paisley permission to visit the United States. He was scheduled to be part of a delegation touring 20 U.S. cities to condemn the predominantly Catholic Irish Republican Army, which is fighting to drive the British out of Northern Ireland and to unite the country with the Irish Republic.

Paper says French projects stopped

KUWAIT (AP) — A Kuwaiti newspaper said Saturday that some Persian Gulf countries have frozen industrial projects being carried out with France because of the French government's current Middle East policy.

Al-Rai al-Am, which attributed its report to unnamed reliable sources, gave no details on the projects said to have been frozen.

It said a united stand against France will be discussed at a forthcoming meeting of Arab foreign ministers.

Arab countries have objected to statements by French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson that the Middle East should resolve Arab-Israeli problems on its own without European intervention. His statements were seen as an attempt to throw cold water on the so-called European initiative which calls for the Palestine Liberation Organization to be represented in peace talks.

Italian police arrest fugitive Red Brigades leader, others

By JOHN PHILLIPS
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — Police investigating the kidnapping of U.S. Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier on Saturday arrested a fugitive suspected leader of the Red Brigades and 10 others believed to be members of the terrorist organization, authorities said.

The arrests came during dawn raids on three hide-outs located on the outskirts of Rome, police said.

Police identified the chief suspect as Giovanni Senzani, 42, a professor of criminology at Florence University who was charged in connection with the kidnapping of an Italian judge in December 1980. He has been a fugitive for more than a year.

During their search of the hide-outs, police seized bazookas and documents. Police Chief Giovanni Pollio said the terrorists were preparing to attack an important target, but he declined to elaborate.

The arrests came at the end of a week of fruitless searches conducted by hundreds of agents trying to find the American general. Dozier was kidnapped from his Verona apartment Dec. 17.

Police followed up tips from anonymous callers who claimed Dozier had been killed and that his body would be found at any one of a number of locations. Police said the callers were either cranks or members of the left-leaning Red Brigades trying to confuse searchers.

One call led police to partially drain an artificial lake in which Dozier's body was said to have been dumped. Police found no trace of the general.

The Red Brigades have issued communiques saying Dozier would be "tried" by them, as well as interrogated. They have neither demanded ransom nor set conditions for his release.

Police did not say what role Senzani might have had in Dozier's kidnapping. Anti-terrorist police allege he is the leader of the Rome and Naples cells of the Red Brigades. It is the Venice group that is being sought in Dozier's kidnapping.

Only one of the other suspects was named, Lino Vai. Police did not say what charges would be filed against those arrested.

Under Italy's anti-terrorism laws, suspects may be held three days before being charged.

Senzani was a criminology lecturer and an expert on Italy's prisons. He had been an adviser to the Justice Ministry where Judge Giovanni D'Urso was a top official.

After four weeks, Polish future unsure

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

For her 36 million sons and daughters — stern-faced generals and muzzled workers, prayerful bishops and nervous young soldiers — Poland's time of trial has brought new martyrs and new dangers, but as yet no new directions.

Military rule in Poland, now ending its first four weeks, has drawn the American and Soviet superpowers into harsh confrontation, and world communism into a crisis of confidence.

But for the mass of ordinary Poles, it is a time to withdraw into the safety of their homes and themselves, Associated Press correspondent Thomas Netter has reported from Warsaw.

A Swedish aid official sensed the fear behind Warsaw's silence.

"People are frightened...They don't talk to each other," Per Stenbeck said after returning home from Poland recently. "It's silent in the buses. It's silent in the street."

Instead, Poles crowd around their short-wave sets at home, listening for word of what's happening to them.

THE FOUR WEEKS began late on Saturday Dec. 12, when police trucks pulled up on Warsaw's snow-coated Mokotowska Street, site of the local headquarters of Solidarity, the Soviet bloc's only independent labor movement.

At the same time, security forces were on the move in the northern port of Gdansk, where Solidarity chief Lech Walesa and 106 other members of the union's national commission were meeting. Warnings of approaching danger apparently came too late.

Police poured into the Warsaw offices and scooped up files and a handful of union activists, while in Gdansk they rounded up the leaders. The dragnet would soon pull in thousands or tens of thousands of other Poles throughout the nation.

Polish television abruptly went off the air; jazz wailed on into the morning hours on Polish radio. Finally, at 6 a.m. Sunday, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, Poland's premier and Communist Party first secretary, went on the radio to announce, "with a broken heart," that a Military Council of National Salvation was taking charge of the country.

"The hour of hard trial has come," he said.

The council, 19 army generals and colonels and one admiral, swiftly imposed a tough new regime, a "state of war," on Poland. Almost all political, labor and educational activities were suspended, most communications within Poland and to the outside were cut, borders and airports were closed, everyone was to be off the streets between 10 p.m. and 6 a.m., and a six-day week was ordered in many workplaces.

MUCH OF HEAVY industry and mining was "militarized," making worker disobedience subject to penalties up to death.

The final showdown had been building for months as Solidarity, which grew out of labor unrest in the summer of 1980, and the Communist government reeled from one battle to another, over working conditions and wages, prices and economic reform, and ultimately over the legitimacy of the government itself.

Leon Dubicki, a Polish general who defected to the West, said the Poles, with help from Soviet army officers, had been preparing a possible military crackdown for months.

The final sparks were lit at Solidarity meetings in early December. On Dec. 3, asserting the government was trying to take back rights previously won by Solidarity, the leadership warned it would call a general nationwide strike. At the Gdansk meeting, they added a call for a national referendum on the government itself.

After declaring martial law, the Polish regime claimed that "counterrevolutionaries" within Solidarity had been plotting an armed overthrow of the government.

Jaruzelski's lightning strike stunned Solidarity. Archbishop Jozef Glemp, primate of Poland's formidable Roman Catholic Church, appealed for calm in a Sunday sermon, urging Poles not to "give your lives away."

BUT BY SUNDAY evening Solidarity activists were spreading the call for a general strike Monday. Active resistance then surged in a series of bold but poorly coordinated sit-in strikes, which were not finally crushed until after Christmas.

The tight new controls kept the outside world from knowing just how widespread the resistance was. Many enterprises appeared to be operating normally that Monday, but sit-in strikes were reported at coal mines in the southern region of Silesia, at the Ursus tractor factory in Warsaw, at steel mills in Warsaw and the southern towns of Katowice and Nowa Huta, at factories in several provincial cities, and at the giant Lenin Shipyard in Gdansk, the plant where Solidarity had been born 17 months earlier.

"Factories are open, but workers don't work. They come to the factory and sit there," a Polish-American woman said after flying to New York from Warsaw.

Later Monday police stormed the Warsaw and Katowice steel mills, the Ursus factory and a railroad car factory in the western city of Wroclaw, arresting more than 100 alleged strike leaders, reports from Poland said.

Warsaw officials later reported that the first fatality of the December crisis occurred at Wroclaw, when police evicted students and faculty strikers at the polytechnic institute, and one professor suffered a fatal heart attack.

ON WEDNESDAY, Dec. 16, the military leadership decided to strike against the strongholds of resistance, sending waves of police crashing through the gates of the Gdansk shipyard, into the Nowa Huta mill and against some of the coal miners.

Jet said to land at closed airport

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — A jetliner belonging to a Libyan-based airline landed Saturday in Accra, the capital of the neighboring West African state of Ghana, witnesses said, according to reliable reports reaching here.

Officially, Accra's Kotoka international airport is still closed following a coup Dec. 31 that overthrew the civilian government of President Hilla Limann.

The reports said the aircraft, bearing green and white markings of United African Airlines in English and Arabic was accompanied by two fighter planes from the Ghanaian air force.

The witnesses, who asked not to be identified, said vehicles with diplomatic license plates were waiting to meet the aircraft.

United African Airlines' transport aircraft, flown by hired American, British and Turkish pilots, participated in the evacuation of Libyan troops from Chad in November.

Libyan Arab Airlines is Libya's regular commercial airline. It does not, however, fly to Accra.

According to flight crew and maintenance personnel — all European — in N'Djamena, the capital of Chad, United African Airlines flies only between Libya and Chad on an irregular schedule.

There have been reports that Edmund P. Wilson, a former CIA agent believed to be living in Tripoli, Libya, was involved in setting up the airline.

Former air force Lt. Jerry Rawlings, the apparent strongman in Ghana's latest coup, reportedly has made at least one trip to Libya.

Libya supports the coup, which Rawlings has said was carried out to "transform the economic and social order" of the West African nation and end corruption and profiteering.

Limann's government ordered the Libyan Embassy in Accra closed last year on grounds that the Libyans were interfering in Ghanaian internal affairs.

On Friday, Ghana's state radio said, pro-Rawlings demonstrators in Accra mobbed the head of the Trade Union Congress, Alhaji Issifu, throwing sand and gravel at him and accusing him of being a profiteer. Troops intervened, took Issifu to a nearby military police office and used belts and whips to drive away protesters who tried to enter the office.

Rawlings, meanwhile, addressed the mass rally that Issifu had been scheduled to appear at, telling Ghanaians to "reorganize yourselves as workers to protect your political force...You have to become the necessary political force to enable the economic liberation of this country to start," Radio Accra said.

Government says 'conspiracy' uncovered

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Nicaraguan government said it has uncovered a foreign-aided "vast conspiracy" to blow up industrial plants and assassinate government leaders. Fifteen accused plotters were arrested, the Interior Ministry said.

The alleged conspiracy involved mercenaries from Honduras and several South American countries, according to the communique released late Friday night. Military attaches of diplomatic missions accredited in Nicaragua were also involved, the ministry said.

The Interior Ministry said William Baltodano Herrera, alias "Comandante Romulo," was the head of the operation. It said he traveled to Nicaragua on a false passport supplied by an unnamed foreign military official. Two others in the group were identified as members of the national guard under the late dictator Anastasio Somoza, toppled by the Sandinista-led revolution in 1979.

The communique said the alleged conspirators planned to use 312 sticks of dynamite to blow up the nation's only petroleum refinery, located on the northeastern outskirts of Managua. They also planned to blow up the national cement plant at San Rafael del Sur, 25 miles east of the capital, the government said.

No details were given about the alleged assassination plans, but the government said security officials would let "the Nicaraguan people know within the next few days all the dimensions of the conspiracy."

The announcement of the arrests was the latest in a series of steps taken against Nicaraguans the government considers counterrevolutionaries.

On Friday, the foreign minister of Honduras sent a sharply-worded protest to Nicaragua, saying Nicaraguan forces have killed Honduran civilians and soldiers during repeated raids across the border.

Earlier in the week, a Honduran military spokesman said Nicaraguan troops massacred at least 200 Nicaraguan exiles in Honduras during two incursions last month.

Many of the estimated 27,000 Nicaraguans who have sought exile in Honduras are supporters of the ousted Somoza regime. The Nicaraguan government denies its forces have entered Honduran territory, but it claims the exiles regularly stage raids across the border.

Afghan rebel group organized, tough

ALLAH JIRGA, Afghanistan (AP) — One of the best-organized and most disciplined factions of the Afghan insurgency is the Hezbi Islami Gulbiddin, which seeks to impose an authoritarian Islamic state that would sequester women and punish Moslems who don't practice their faith.

For those reasons and others, the Hezbi Islami (Islamic Party) also is the most criticized of the two dozen or more factions fighting the Soviet-backed government of Afghanistan.

The discipline is uncommonly tight here at the faction's base, which protects a guerrilla supply route from neighboring Pakistan, about 10 miles south. Even ranking faction officials are disarmed and searched by sentries at the base checkpoint. Only a telephoned command from its bunker headquarters allows visitors to proceed further.

The Moslem fundamentalist group is amply proud of the base, which it recently showed off to a group of Western, Chinese and Iranian reporters. It boasts six captured Soviet-made armored personnel carriers, heavy machine guns, an anti-aircraft weapon and 600 "mujahidin" (Islamic holy warriors) — although only about 300 were in evidence at the time of the visit.

The faction claims to have provided arms to 80,000 men, but knowledgeable sources elsewhere say that figure is not a reliable measure of the Hezbi Islami's overall strength and may be exaggerated.

The faction's leaders feel Allah Jirga, which means God's Council, is secure enough to serve as the prison for three Soviet soldiers captured last summer north of Kabul, the nation's capital. The last attack against the base was an ineffectual strafing run by Soviet warplanes 10 months ago, said its commander, Zafaruddin Khan, 26, who defected to the Hezbi Islami in August 1979, as a lieutenant, after massacring 23 fellow army officers he claimed were Marxists.

Khan takes orders only from the chief of Hezbi, a former Kabul University engineering student, Gulbiddin Hekmetyar, who has lived in exile in northwest Pakistan since his release from Afghanistan's Dehmazang Prison in 1973.

The 35-year-old Hekmetyar says he looks to the day when the Soviets are driven from this central Asian country and a strict Islamic system is enforced.

A Hezbi official said the faction hopes to lead the government that replaces the regime of Marxist President Babrak Karmal in Kabul. At its head would be Hekmetyar as "caliph," the title used by ancient Moslem rulers who claimed succession from the Prophet Mohammed, founder of Islam.

A little green book, entitled "Aims of Hezbi Islami," says the group seeks to have women sequestered by law and non-practicing Moslems "properly punished."

A Hezbi song summarizes its ambitions and identifies some of its enemies:

"Let our banner fly high, waving over the entire world.

"Down with atheists and infidels, death to Marxists'...

"We desire not the Western system, we desire not the Eastern (Communist),

"We desire not the Godless, satanic system.

"What we desire is the Islamic state."

There are other Afghan insurgent groups as fundamentalist as Hezbi. But the faction backs its ideology with a modern party structure.

Need for abuse facility has substance

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

In the past, Midland's polite society with its higher socio-economic living standards has tended to view alcohol and drug abuse through rose-tinted glasses.

The stigma of the chemically dependent person, as in other cities in the U.S., was kept behind closed doors. Those who had a problem were treated with "hush-hush" attitudes.

But society today — in Midland and throughout the country — is recognizing that what once was seen as a social problem actually is a medical problem. As testimony to that, various local health agencies have applied to set up facilities to treat chemically-dependent persons closer to home.

All are citing the increasing need for such help locally.

A CHEMICAL DEPENDENCY unit is one of those bureaucratic labels for drug and/or alcohol treatment. Its surnames include substance abuse facility, addictive disease unit, behavioral health service, detoxification, rehabilitation and chemical abuse treatment.

A treatment unit for alcohol and/or drug abuse usually is included in a psychiatric facility with a percentage of beds set aside for such treatment. But Midland has no such facility.

Midland doctors and chemical abuse-related agencies say that while alcohol and drug abuse cases are on the rise, the two combined and prescription drug abuse also are increasing. The latter is classified by health agencies as an illness along the same lines as alcohol abuse.

One Midland physician said patients will use several doctors to obtain the necessary drugs.

"It sure can ruin your day to find out someone who is in the emergency room has taken an overdose on a prescription you've written," he said. "But, as a physician, it is difficult to combat. We spend such a short time with patients trying to treat them and too often don't realize they've seen another doctor."

However, as of Jan. 1 a law concerning prescription blanks has been changed to tighten controls on Schedule 2 drugs, which are classifed as narcotics.

Although Midland lacks a medical facility for specific in-patient treatment of the chemically dependent person, within the Permian Basin are facilities and agencies with various out-patient programs for substance abusers. These include services at Midland Memorial Hospital, Big Spring State Hospital, the Palmer Drug Abuse Program, Alcoholics Anonymous, Teen Challenge, Johnson Center, Permian Basin Center for Mental Health/Mental Retardation, Family Services of Midland, Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission Regional Alcohol Plan and several other referral agencies.

Spokepersons for several of the agencies are supporting a local treatment facility, citing the increasing numbers of drug and alcohol abusers.

There are about 10 applications to the Texas Health Facilities Commission in Austin for psychiatric facilities containing chemical/substance units.

A PRIVATE corporation, Southwest Health of Midland/Odessa Inc., applied in November to construct West Plains Hospital, a 60-bed psychiatric hospital with 20-beds for chemical abuse at the Midland Air Terminal.

Prior to this application, Midland Memorial Hospital submitted a pre-application or letter of intent to convert 20 beds for chemical abuse treatment. However, after a study of the community, MMH realized there is not only a need for the facility in the Permian Basin, but also it was not feasible to use the general acute care and surgical beds for the treatment.

Therefore, the MMH pre-application was amended for a 50-bed freestanding facility to be located in northwest Midland.

Midland's private facility, Parkview Hospital, also submitted an application to THFC to convert the 60-bed acute care existing facility into a 60-bed psychiatric hospital, including beds for substance abuse.

In addition to these applications, six other private organizations have submitted applications for similar facilities.

To date, no organization or facility has been selected to bring the community a chemical abuse treatment center.

However, Bob Savage, executive director of PDAP, said that in a community where 50 percent of the population uses some kind of drugs, whether it be prescription or mind-altering chemicals and alcohol, he would like to see a facility in the Permian Basin.

"Are we going to penalize people in this country because they have an alcohol or drug problem?" Savage asked. "More people in Midland would probably get help if it was available. We have plenty of out-patient services, but nothing for medical treatment."

Savage, who works with young adults 17 years and older, said Midland is becoming more aware there is a need to help the chemical abuser.

"EVEN THE corporations are interested," he said. "I get calls from companies all the time. A representative for Mobil Oil from New York came to talk to me last year wanting to know what facilities are available here in Midland."

One service available is the Johnson Center. Betty Galloway, alcoholism supervisor and counselor, said the 14-bed detoxification facility is designed basically for "drying out," and is not equipped to handle any medical problems.

"We can't take anyone with a medical problem or on a heavy drug like heroin because the withdrawal is too severe," she said. "However, we do have a screening process for people who should be referred to a hospital."

The Johnson Center is funded by the county and users of the facility, Ms. Galloway said, adding that fees are based on a sliding scale.

But if an abuser has a medical problem and must be admitted to a hospital the treatment can be expensive.

"I'm lucky I wasn't in such bad physical difficulty or I wouldn't have been able to go to the Johnson Center," said a member of Alcoholics Anonymous. "Treatment centers can cost $1,500 a

Deepening dependency

Dependency on drugs, alcohol or both is growing among Midland and area residents, but there is no in-patient treatment facility for those wanting to rid themselves of the disease. To answer local needs, several local agencies have applied with the state to set up substance abuse treatment facilities.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith (not their real name) denied that their son had a drug problem until two years ago when he was arrested for felony theft charges.

They grounded him. They tried to talk to him.

"But once these kids are on drugs you're talking to the chemical — not the person," said Mrs. Smith, referring to the difficulty in reaching her son, who was 16 at the time.

They made more attempts to communicate with their son, but after nine months they told him he would have to leave.

"IN THE YEAR he was gone," Mrs. Smith said, "he went from one job to another. We saw him periodically. He had knots on his arm. We knew he was shooting up something."

Mrs. Smith said three days before the family saw him again he was trying to get off the needle. He opted to discontinue the drugs and went into withdrawal. He thought he was dying.

When the Smith's son finally hit bottom he went home. That was Nov. 2.

He admitted his drug problem. He wanted help. He told his parents how he stabbed his arm with a syringe as many as 50 times looking for a vein that would absorb the "bathtub speed."

The speed, which was homemade amphetamines, was inexpensive compared to prescription drugs, the son explained to his parents. He told them he began smoking marijuana, tried a lot of LSD and cocaine.

When the boy came home on that November day, he estimated that his habit had cost about $15,000.

On Nov. 3, the Smiths and their son went to the Palmer Drug Abuse Program in Midland.

The PDAP counselor advised the Smiths that their son needed hospitalization.

"IT WAS A CHOICE of Big Spring State Hospital or going to Dallas to a private hospital," Mrs. Smith said. "My son did not want to go to Big Spring and I didn't want him to either because the hospital does not treat the drug and alcohol abusers chemically free," she added, referring to the fact that medication is used in detoxification.

The private hospital was the only other alternative.

Mrs. Smith talked to officials at Dallas' East Town Hospital, where one floor in the hospital is set aside for chemical dependency treatment.

For 30 days, the treatment price tag is $10,000. The Smith boy arrived Nov. 4 and was there for six weeks.

"We panicked!" Mrs. Smith exclaimed. "We checked on our insurance and Dallas accepted him, but not before we paid $1,200."

The Midlander recalled her son "was p vchotic" when he went to East Town. was 10 days before our first visit," Smith said, adding that it was ble to fly back and forth to Dal- we went twice, which cost us [illegible] we only had a facility here, we could have seen him more and visited with his doctors."

She explained East Town's treatment included a complete physical, group therapy, one-on-one therapy and anti-

Snelson ready to 'ease on down' political road

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Pete Snelson stands at a crossroads in his life.

After spending almost two decades representing the 25th Senatorial District in the Texas Legislature, it was time to move on or out. Snelson decided to take the road that would lead him to a higher position, the one with a sign pointing to state land commissioner.

Wallace Eugene "Pete" Snelson, 58, has chosen that road described by poet Robert Frost as "the one less traveled by," but on the eve of his journey, the Midlander exuded confidence he could go the distance.

He's spent the past two decades serving the constituents in Midland, and this experience he is using as a jumping off place for a higher position. But the move onward isn't without some mixed emotions, Snelson says as he looks back on those years.

Snelson's biographical sheet shows him as being born and reared in Grandfalls, a small town in Ward County. By first grade he had picked up the nickname of Pete, and by high school he had picked up the love of journalism, which he bore to fruition by working on the Grandfalls Gazette and later the El Paso Times.

AFTER SERVING in the Army during World War II, Snelson returned to Grandfalls as a teacher and moved up the strata to become an instructor at The University of Texas at El Paso.

Then came a move in 1952 to Odessa to head up public relations at Odessa College. By 1955, he felt ready to make it on his own and Snelson established his advertising agency in Midland.

Five years later, Snelson entered the world of politics by winning a Texas House seat. Four years later, he began his tenure as a state senator.

His political endeavors were no surprise to his family, Snelson says, recalling that it was the family who encouraged his moves into that arena.

"The family was always involved in participation of government at various local levels. It was natural that I aspired to public office."

His political family included father Luke Snelson, who held several Ward County and school district posts, and uncle Fred Snelson of Monahans, who served as mayor, county judge and justice of the peace of his community.

Snelson's striving to be the leader didn't stop with the political world. In 1957-58, he led the state Jaycees organization as president, traveling the state and speaking in more than 200 communities. He views the race for land commissioner as a chance to "retrace those steps."

ALTHOUGH HIS teaching career wasn't a lengthy one, it was something Snelson never forgot. Throughout his years in the State Senate, he shouldered the problems of educators and the educational system, pushing for and receiving better legislation. His work in the area of education was recognized during the last session of the Legislature when Texas Monthly magazine singled him out as one of the 10 best legislators, citing his work on an early childhood intervention program and bilingual education.

"I taught school at all three levels and observed it from the administrative end," says Snelson.

When he hit the Senate in 1964, Snelson asked for and received an assignment on the Education Committee, a group he stuck with throughout his Senate terms. As the years passed, he says, the committee's scope broadened to meet the demands.

"Providing appropriate educational opportunities for all children has evolved throughout the years.

"Education touches every community and every family," he says of his continued interest in the field.

Setting up programs to meet the students' needs has been only part of the work, as Snelson sees another emphasis on the classroom teacher. "I believe the key to good education is the classroom teacher. It's important to have school administration support the teacher. And community support for the school district is vital. People who care a lot about their schools devote the necessary resources to them," he says.

NUMEROUS PROBLEMS with teachers have cropped up in recent years, ranging from obtaining enough qualified persons to retaining them in the field.

Pete Snelson admits to leaving the Senate with "mixed emotions, but I have no regrets about moving on. I've made my contribution to the Senate."

Now it's time "to aspire to climb another mountain. Once you reach the top of a mountain, there's a temptation to just sit there. That's not my nature. Mine is to keep climbing."

"For many years, teaching was a career for a woman," Snelson says. "But now there are so many other economic opportunities for women that the classroom doesn't have the appeal for them."

Education, he continues, will have to be made a financially attractive field to draw the most qualified people.

And the need for more teachers is becoming critical, according to Snelson, who cites figures stating that school enrollment in Texas will be 50 percent higher by the year 2000. "Yet there are fewer and fewer people who want to go into teaching as a career."

The State Legislature, he adds, "must deal with the situation by having a more attractive economic base."

Complaints that teachers weren't qualified for their jobs slapped the public and legislators a few years ago, and Snelson sees that as another problem which must be resolved.

Although the state set up a testing program for college students wanting to go into teaching, that isn't the answer to the problem, he believes.

"IT'S A DILEMMA of which comes first, the hen or the egg. You can eliminate a group of people who aspire to teach (but aren't qualified), but how do you attract the gifted students into the area of teaching. Money is one facet. We all recognize that a substantial increase in salary levels will be necessary for teachers.

"With the Legislature meeting once every two years, it's difficult to keep up with inflation. That should be the major focus of future legislative sessions."

Snelson assisted Midland in getting Midland College established back in the early 1970s, while The University of Texas of the Permian Basin was being set up as an upper-level university.

Today, UTPB officials are asking that the school be turned into a four-year university.

"You always learn from hindsight," Snelson says of the situation today. But when UTPB was approved, he explains, the University Coordinating Board had decided that "rather than to create more four-year schools, they would encourage creation of more two-year schools. The upper-level schools would be fed by junior colleges.

"I think there are some success stories" with this theory. "It's appropriate the state take a look at how these schools are functioning. If some aren't a success, then look at what are the solutions."

In preliminary campaign rhetoric, Snelson has pointed out that revenue from lands controlled by the state land commissioner's office goes to support public education and secondary schools, and has argued that the state office would be the natural next step for him.

Snelson also sat as a member on the first Sunset Commission, a group of legislators who reviewed state agencies and decided if they should continue to function.

"WHAT WE ELIMINATED were deadwood," Snelson says of the group's actions. "It's healthy to have legislative review of why something was created in the first place. The result has been to make agencies more responsive to the people."

Changes in the State Legislature have been numerous over the 20 years. Snelson remembers that as a representative he and his cohorts had no offices in Austin. "The only office we had were our desks on the House floor. We had a secretary and she would come to your desk for you to dictate a letter."

Offices added since those early days "make for a more orderly process in governing."

During the past 20 years, bills introduced at each session have jumped from about 1,500 to 4,000, and committees now stay busy throughout the two-year terms, whereas they used to disband at the end of a legislative session.

"Demands on one's time have increased," Snelson says. "You used to move the whole family down to Austin for the session because you were paid for one round trip. Now you're allowed a weekly trip home during the session."

The "dean" of the Senate has spent "90 percent of my time involved in this office because of my seniority and my work load." But he notes that it's not in his nature to sit down on the job.

"AS A GENERAL RULE, you find a third of the (Senate) membership assumes the work load, a middle third is vital and works as a swing group," he says and pauses before adding without criticism, "and another group doesn't work as hard as the others."

In the beginning, Snelson's trip down that road to the land commissioner's post won't be too lonely. Opposing him on the Democratic ticket are Speaker of the House Billy Clayton and Garry Mauro, former manager of the State Democratic Party.

Clayton gained recognition when he was accused of taking a bribe. Known as the Brilab scandal, he was cleared of any wrongdoing.

Despite Clayton's statewide name recognition, Snelson believes his identification is better.

"ID involves both positives and negatives. All polls indicate he (Clayton) does have a negative factor to overcome," he says, carefully choosing his words. On his behalf, Snelson cites statewide contacts made from his years spent in the Senate.

"My statewide ID is very positive and is based on my achievements and accomplishments, not on anything negative."

He admits to leaving the Senate with "mixed emotions, but I have no regrets about moving on. I've made my contribution to the Senate."

Now it's time, he says, "to aspire to climb another mountain. Once you reach the top of a mountain, there's a temptation to just sit there. That's not my nature. Mine is to keep climbing."

THIS WEEK IN GOVERNMENT

Midland City Council to begin preparations for bond election

Preparations for a bond issue this spring will begin Tuesday when the Midland City Council discusses future bond requirements at its meeting in City Hall Council Chambers.

That item is listed near the bottom of a 68-item agenda. The council will start its session at 10 a.m.

According to Assistant City Manager Fred Poe, a bond issue probably will appear on the ballot in the spring election. Purpose of the Tuesday item is to allow the council to set a later date when they can review all items being considered for a bond issue and their estimated costs.

Another updated report will be given the council on the sewage treatment plant, Midland Draw and disposal of effluent. Poe recalled that at last week's meeting before the Texas Water Commission, the city agreed to irrigate additional acreage with effluent. Contracts with those farmers need to be signed at the Tuesday meeting, Poe said.

He noted that a plan to pump the effluent to J. "Timber" Floyd's land southeast of the city had become a feasible idea and engineers were putting together cost estimates on the project.

Out of the 68-item agenda, 36 items deal with planning matters, and public hearings taking up the afternoon through 4:45 p.m.

Requests for day nurseries are coming from Ollie Bonds, 100 E. Dengar Ave.; Vickie Coleman, 3113 W. Ohio Ave.; and Carlos and Egla Castro, 4513 Mercedes Drive.

Other planning matters deal with requests for specific use permits to sell alcoholic beverages, and zone changes.

Annexation of a 651-acre tract northeast of Green Tree Country Club will be considered on a first reading. The annexation request came from a Canadian development firm, Meyer-Denton Development Corp.

Also requesting annexation is West Texas Consultants for a 640-acre tract bounded by North Fairgrounds Road, Mockingbird lane, County Road 1160 and County Road 40.

In addition, the council will consider an annexation study of an area east and northeast of the Midland city limits.

The council will consider a contract with The First National Bank of Midland for MidTran shuttle bus service, and an ordinance providing for No Parking along both sides of Loop 250.

Also on the agenda for discussion is a proposal to lease a city-owned parking lot to Classified Parking System, Inc.

MISD Board of Trustees

Midland school trustees are expected to approve a revision of the Bilingual Education policy during their regular board meeting at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday in the administration building at 702 N. N St.

The revisions, made so that the district will be in compliance with state law, include the establishment of a language proficiency assessment committee on each campus to allow professional education personnel and parents to be responsible for decisions regarding "the identification, instructional placement and reclassification of limited English proficient students."

This committee will be responsible for continuing a child in the bilingual or special language program or for reclassifying and placing him in an all-English curriculum.

Board members are also expected to approve bids on athletic equipment and supplies, the payment of $100 in annual dues to the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, a change in pledged securities, tax roll collections, the cafeteria financial statement as of Nov. 30, and personnel appointments, resignations and leaves of absence.

A report on a revised parents manual, to be presented by the Midland Association of Retarded Citizens, and a report on administrative guidelines for fund raising activities will also be given to trustees.

Board members are expected to meet in an executive session pertaining to personnel and real estate matters.

County Commissioners Court

Midland County commissioners will consider a 17-item agenda, including architect Walter Pate's report on status of the courthouse expansion plans, at 10 a.m. Monday in the Midland County Courthouse.

Other business to be taken up by the commissioners includes:

—Consider approval of a plat near County Road 130-South.

—Consider approval of Snively Addition, Section 8.

—Discussion of television cable service in east Midland County.

—Discussion of an insurance plan for Midland County and status of the county's current plan.

—Consider dedicating roads 1286-South and 126-West as county roads and thereby subject to county maintenance.

—Consider audit proposal for Midland County.

—Consider appointments to the Midland County Library board.

—Considering hiring a county personnel director.

—Listen to the annual review of the road and bridge department by Albert Stewart, department superintendent.

Malpractice lawsuit filed

Midland psychologist Dr. Sam P. Hooper Jr. has filed a medical malpractice lawsuit against Midland gynecologist-obstetrician Dr. John W. Young Jr. and Midland Memorial Hospital.

The suit, filed in Midland's 142nd State District Court, says that Hooper's wife, Margaret Lee Chambers Hooper, 37, died on Dec. 22, 1980, in Midland Memorial Hospital following surgery for removal of a right ovary and tumor on the uterus.

Young was her surgeon, the petition says.

Mrs. Hooper was a diagnostician in special education for the Ector County Independent School District in Odessa.

The suit's petition alleges that "Young's surgical procedure and post-operative follow-up care fell below the minimum standards of a reasonable and prudent physician under the same or similar circumstances."

The petition claims that Young's alleged negligence was a proximate cause of Mrs. Hooper's death.

In naming the hospital as a co-defendant, the petition says that hospital personnel "committed acts...which constitute negligence." The hospital is liable for Mrs. Hooper's death under the Texas Tort Claims Act, the petition says.

The suit seeks actual and exemplary damages but did not suggest money figures.

Hooper has lodged the suit in behalf of his daughter, Mary Margaret Hooper, almost 2; his wife's parents, Delbert and Louise Chambers; the estate of his wife; and himself.

Attorney for the plaintiff is Frank L. Branson of Dallas.

Cancer discussion planned

The Make Today Count group will hold an open discussion with a panel of five nurses on cancer, its treatment, impact on the individual and viewpoints from the professional involved in care and treament at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the community room of Commercial Bank and Trust Company.

Previously, the group was called Alive Today, but it chose to become affiliated with the national organization, Make Today Count, Inc. This will give the group a slight redirection of its goals and purposes, but will enable it to have privileges associated with operating as a non-profit, tax-exempt organization.

Meetings are held on the second Monday of each month. For more information contact Melinda Leaseburg at 683-1908.

Radio system a scrambled issue

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

While the cost of sophisticated scrambling devices will likely preclude them from a new radio system the city is considering for the police department, scramblers are not a recent addition to law enforcement technology. They have been used by other departments to prevent the public and criminal element from monitoring police activity via home and portable scanners.

"We were probably the first in the country to use them on all our channels," said James Grant, spokesman for Abilene's communication services department and the man who was charged with installing the devices for that city's police force back in 1972. "Other departments had generally used them only on their narcotics channels."

Among the advantages scramblers afford police is the elimination of scanner-roused gawkers at crime and accident scenes. Recalling a fatal accident on FM 868 two or three years ago, one Midland officer said, "They blocked traffic so bad we couldn't get the fire department's Jaws of Life equipment through."

Another advantage, according to some officers, is that scramblers thwart crime by keeping burglars with pocket scanners from knowing police are on the way.

But other officers take issue with that contention. Said a Midland detective who indicated that he and most of the Midland force are indifferent to the devices: "They (burglars) would just break a window and wait around the corner to see if we show up."

Police agree, however, that the public's use of scanners can be beneficial at times, as when someone calls in with information on a wanted person or vehicle after hearing dispatchers alert officers in the field.

Except for officers and dispatchers having to put up with a disconcerting two-second wait ("sync delay") before being able to broadcast, Abilene's scramblers worked satisfactorily for the year or so they were used, according to Grant and Abilene Chief of Police Warren Dodson.

But the city switched from Motorola radio equipment to the General Electric brand in 1973. The scramblers, which were built for the Motorola system, didn't adapt well to GE's and the devices were scrapped.

Because the news media rely on scanners to keep abreast of breaking crime and accident stories, Dodson had authorized a "land-line," phone-like hookup from the police radio room to various newsrooms in the city, allowing reporters to hear calls going out to officers in the field.

"Overall, it worked pretty well and the media accepted it," Dodson said. Asked if they had received any flak from the public, Grant called the complaints "comments" and said there hadn't been many.

Despite the fact Abilene no longer uses scramblers, both Grant and Dodson say technological improvements in the past 10 years have reduced sync delay to a few thousandths of a second and the newer devices are worth considering — even in light of their price.

Noting that it cost Abilene $40,000 in 1972 money to buy about 60 scramblers, Grant said, "I'd like to see us go to modern scramblers, but they are very expensive."

Added Dodson: "Midland would be taking great strides if they went to the new scramblers."

LULAC discourages answering letters

HOUSTON (AP) — A lawyer for the League of United Latin American Citizens says Mexican nationals should not respond to letters from the Immigration and Naturalization Service asking them to discuss voluntary deportation.

INS is notifying about 2,200 Mexicans in the Houston area that temporary, or so-called "Silva" permits, which enabled them to live and work in this country legally are no longer valid and applications for permanent legal status will not be processed.

"What I would do if I was a Silva person is stay home," Lulac lawyer Josefine M. Rendon said Friday.

The INS letter is not legally binding and all Mexicans have the right to a hearing before deportation, Rendon said.

More than 100,000 Mexican nationals holding the permits have been told by the INS they must leave voluntarily or face deportation. Nationals applied for permanent legal status based on the fact that they have a minor child born here or an adult offspring who is a legal resident.

"The deportaion of the Silva people is, in effect, the deportation of many United States citizen children and will result in the repression and denial of their rights as Americans to live in the country of their birth," said Frank Ortiz, Lulac deputy district director.

Stanton judge announces candidacy; Area residents seeking re-election

STANTON — Martin County Judge Bob Deavenport, who pledges to continue to "apply sound business practices" to county government, has announced his candidacy for election to the judgeship.

Deavenport, who once farmed, operated a dry-goods store and managed the Martin County Farm Bureau, was appointed judge by Commissioners' Court to succeed Jimmy Mathis, who resigned last spring.

The judgeship is a four-year term.

•

ANDREWS — James H. Clack has been sworn in as judge of the 109th District Court for Andrews, Crane and Winkler counties.

He succeeds Ken Spencer, who resigned one year shy of completing a four-year term of office.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements appointed Clack, an Andrews attorney, to the bench following Spencer's recent resignation.

•

McCAMEY — Martha Neeley, who has worked in the field of alcoholism and drug abuse for eight years, has been named counselor for the Upton County Mental Health Center in McCamey.

Mrs. Neeley, who is employed at Big Spring State Hospital, is available at the center from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. each Wednesday.

•

ANDREWS — Sarah Alexander, executive secretary to retiring Andrews County Judge Roy D. Bennett for the past 10½ years, has announced her candidacy for the county judgeship.

The judge is the county's chief administrative officer and presides over the Commissioners' Court.

Her duties as secretary have included budget preparation, bookkeeping, decision-making in the absence of the judge, preparing the court dockets, proceedings and other court work.

She has been in secretarial work for 23 years.

•

STANTON — Doris Stephenson, who has served as Martin County's county and district clerk for 29 years, has filed for re-election to the post.

"I want to thank the people of Martin County for the privilege of serving as their county and district clerk," Mrs. Stephenson said in her announcement. "I enjoy the work and feel lucky to serve you." She is seeking the Democratic Party's nomination for the post in the May 1 primary election.

•

McCAMEY — Margaret Roberson has filed for re-election to the office of Justice of the Peace, Precinct 3, in Upton County.

Ms. Roberson said that her experience as justice of the peace has been "exciting and full-filling."

•

ANDREWS — R.L. "Rusty" Bartley, former Andrews County sheriff's deputy, has filed as a candidate for justice of the peace for Precinct 4.

He has garnered 11 years in law enforcement. Due to heart surgery in 1980, his active career as a lawman has ended.

"I loved my work as a deputy and as a jailer," Bartley said. "As justice of the peace, I can still play a passive role in law enforcement."

Bartley, who is operator of the Holiday Motor Inn here, is campaigning on the Democratic Party ticket.

Special speakers to share insights at 32nd annual School of Christian Living

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

"Our whole lives are essentially a story we are telling about ourselves to the whole world and to ourselves."

So says the Rev. Tom Boyd, associate professor of philosophy at the University of Oklahoma. An ordained Presbyterian minister, Boyd is a former instructor in theology at Vanderbilt Divinity School.

He is among those in Midland today for the 32nd annual School of Christian Living. He will talk about story telling.

Stories for the Journey, Boyd's topic for the school, "is an an attempt to make religion more vital and more expressive of how human beings actually experience it," Boyd said in a recent telephone interview. "For instance, the Bible is largely a series of stories strung together by commentary, poetry, etc. Jesus himself was fundamentally a teller of stories."

His course is broken down into four categories — "Marking a Path Through Time," "Strolling Through the Valley of the Shadow," "Penetrating the Cloud of Witnesses" and "Riding Point in Our Own Time."

" 'Marking a Path Through Time' will talk about storytelling using stories as examples," Boyd said. This section will cover such points as "what stories do, how they mark our pilgrimage."

" 'Strolling through the Valley of the Shadow' will deal with storytelling to help us deal with the negative experiences of our lives. What does it tell us about ourselves?

" 'Penetrating the Cloud of Witnesses' is based on a statement in the Book of Hebrews," Boyd said. This session will deal with the spiritual witness and how the lives of the saints "inspire our stories." Boyd said he plans on using "Huckleberry Finn as a great American story of redemption."

In the last session, "Riding Point in Our Own Time," Boyd said he will "talk with the participants about what their own story is and the things they can do to enhance their life pilgrimage."

Also interviewed by phone was Mary Lee Loving whose sessions, "Life in a Family Journey," will center around the family structure. Mrs. Loving, director of the Mental Health Division of MHMR in Amarillo, is a psychotherapist and the mother of five.

The first session, "As Mother Goes, So Goes the Family," deals with mother's role and responsibility. Here Mrs. Loving places "the emphasis for the responsibility of growth and development in a family on the mother. I feel it has been this way for at least 100 years — a matriarch society. No matter what the changes are — death, divorce — the responsibility for the development of those people involved still rests with the mother. Mother sets the mood; the rate of development and growth for the family. If mother is negative then so goes the rest of the family."

Session Two, "We Need More of Dad and Less of Mom," focuses on the role of the father.

"What we are beginning to see is the liberation of the male," Mrs. Loving said. "In the past it was unacceptable for males to show characteristics such as gentleness and warmth, historically attributed to females. As males become freer to express those feelings they will set more appropriate models for the young males" who look to them for roles to emulate.

" 'Oh to be a Child Again,' focuses on the child, how he grows and what his developmental pattern is," Mrs. Loving said. The session covers "theories of raising children, the changing roles in the family and in the changing world. It includes techniques to use to help children develop positive self concepts, to learn how to think things through and to solve problems and make decisions."

The final class, "Who Belongs to Whom and Why?" focuses on two different subjects.

In the first, "the results of a divorce or a different lifestyle for a single parent, we'll spent a lot of time talking about step-parenting," Mrs. Loving said.

"When the anger has been resolved then both the natural parents and the step-parents can exist in the same world," she said, adding that in the Panhandle area of Texas, 60 percent of the children in school have more than one set of parents.

The other part of the session will be spent on the subject of aging.

"We are a population who is living longer," Mrs. Loving said. "Middle-aged parents (mid-40s) are learning to cope with aging parents who have retired (over 65) who are coping with aged parents (over 80) in nursing homes."

Other instructors include the Rev. S. Garrett Short, the Rev. Joseph Schley of Midland and Pat Blosic and Frances Tafuri of the Franciscan Missionary Sisters of the Immaculate Conception of the Mother of God, currently core members of Maranatha House of Prayer in New Jersey.

Registration will begin at 6:30 p.m. today and at 8:45 a.m. Monday in Midland Center, corner of Wall Avenue and Main Street. Fee for the courses is $10 for an individual, $15 for a family and $5 for senior citizens and students. Each of the four sessions will be presented from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. and repeated the next day from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

The school is sponsored by the Midland Association of Churches.

Drug-, alcohol-related illness becoming more prevalent

Savage said the concept of a treatment center is a good idea, but it has to be affordable — even in Midland.

"Private hospitals are limited to the people they treat," he said. "From personal experience I know cash deposits ranging from $1,000 to $7,000 are required upon admission. I don't think we can reach the people we need to reach. We need a public facility."

Savage explained by the time a person has become addicted to alcohol or drugs he is usually on his last leg.

"Most of the 100 people I see a week have not worked or if they have, it has been sporadic," he said. "The majority of people are not covered by insurance. I don't care if mom and dad have money — the kid usually doesn't. I'm not advocating taking care of every indigent person, but we need to take care of these people here in Midland."

The AA member agreed, adding that if there were a facility available, the "hospital would not cater to only the winos under the bridge — as society would stereotype those patients — because the disease does not know discrimination. There are as many kinds of alcoholics as there are alcoholics. We need to be responsible as a community to help our own."

AND WITH A NEW Texas law that took effect Jan. 1, it is now mandatory that insurance companies offer optional group coverage for alcoholism and drug abuse services.

Elaine Gwaltney, director of public information for Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Texas in Dallas, said there has been a misconception by the public about how the 6,000 insurance groups in Texas handled the alcohol and/or drug abuse coverage.

"In very general terms detoxification from substance abuse has been a covered item in the past," she said.

"And because it is considered an acute medical condition, if a group had psychiatric benefits, rehabilitation was covered. But, one of the difficulties has been that the diagnosis of substance abuse is sometimes hidden by another diagnosis," Ms. Gwaltney added, referring to medical problems that stem from alcohol and drug abuse.

The new law doesn't mandate a business to cover its employees' substance abuse, but "insurance companies must make coverage available for purchase by group insurance plan," Ms. Gwaltney said.

Consequently, in Midland's growing community, Cathy Clayton, director for the Regional Alcohol Plan, said with this law and a chemical abuse treatment facility more people in the Permian Basin can be reached.

"In Midland County with a total population of 82,636, over 17,000 people in Midland are either alcoholics, potential alcoholics or directly influenced by the alcoholic," she said. "Alcoholism in this area is not growing in proportion to the population. It is growing faster."

Ms. Clayton attributes this to such factors as the influx of people to the Permian Basin who experience loneliness, to the type of workers, the transients and the "macho kicker mentality" that appeals to the blue collar worker.

"But there are also alcohol problems with the white collar worker," she said. "We've come away from some of it, but there are still the alcohol-related business deals, company parties and entertaining clients with alcohol," she said.

According to the Regional Alcohol Plan statistics, there were 550 admissions to some type of substance abuse facility in 1981. Ms. Clayton added that because of the nature of these admissions, the statistics fall under a "revolving door syndrome with typically a 50 percent recidivism rate."

Therefore, about "225 people who sought treatment last year in some capacity at the Veterans Administration Hospital, Big Spring State Hospital, a private hospital or a half-way house checked in for a 28 to 90 day program with half of these people entering a private in-patient facility like Southwest and MMH are wanting," she said.

Public meeting to be held

The Permian Basin Health Systems Agency will hold a public meeting on the certificate of need application from Southwest Health of Midland/Odessa Inc., at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the conference room of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission. Offices are headquartered at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Southwest is proposing to construct, equip and operate West Plains Psychiatric Hospital, a 29,580 square foot 60-bed facility on 2.5 acres in the Midland Air Terminal area. The facility will provide adult and adolescent psychiatric services and chemical abuse services.

Anyone interested may testify at the project's review committee hearing.

The review committee will also hold a meeting at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 18 on the certificate of need applications from Midland Memorial Hospital for a 50-bed behavioral health service facility and Parkview Hospital to convert the existing 60-bed acute care facility to a 60-bed psychiatric facility.

The PBHSA Governing Body will meet on Jan. 20 to make the final decision.

depressant medication.

Eight-hour passes were given to the Smith boy, but he could not leave because there was no one in Dallas for him to visit.

"The telephone calls were tremendous — sometimes three hours a day," Mrs. Smith said.

Her son was released Dec. 18 from the hospital to go home.

"THE DOCTOR SAID he needs a therapist here, but in Midland they are few and far between. He will continue at PDAP," Mrs. Smith said.

"I think if there was a facility here a lot more people could be helped," she said. "So many times people view alcohol and drug abusers as lying in the streets, but it is prevalant in everyday life."

Because of the distance involved, Mrs. Smith never met her son's doctor. "Honestly, I think there should be a facility here available for people of all incomes. I'm very proud that my son asked for help. I'm not ashamed — it's an illness — self-induced but still an illness."

Another Midland couple who has a similar problem with their 17-year-old daughter said they would like to see a facility like the East Town Hospital's chemical dependency floor in Midland.

Their daughter is at East Town now.

The mother explained that "insurance does not cover all the expense and it is a very necessary thing for a chemical abuser to have. There are health problems with addiction," she said.

The parents agreed that agencies in Midland are adequate, but the city does not have any in-patient facility.

"A facility is necessary," the mother said. "It is no longer a luxury because of the number of people on drugs and alcohol. This is a family, school and work problem — the chemical abuser affects everyone around him."

The parents are preparing to go to Dallas for a meeting Monday night so they can learn how to treat and help their daughter with her drug abuse.

"It is almost impossible for us to attend these meetings, which are included in the treatment charge," the mother said. "We have to miss work, plus the expense of the airline fare. It would be so much better if we had a choice here in Midland."

MC registering students for spring semester

Two final days of pre-registration, to be followed by two days of formal registration, are scheduled this week for Midland College.

Persons who plan to enroll for credit courses during the spring semester are urged to pre-register Monday or Tuesday in order to obtain time permits and complete other pre-registration necessities between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. in the Office of Student Services, located in the Administration Building.

Midland College will officially register for the spring term on Wednesday and Thursday in the Physical Education Building. Time permits have been issued for all of Wednesday and much of Thursday. Registration hours, for those who have pre-registered, are assigned between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. or 4:30 p.m. and 8 p.m.

Students who are unable to pre-register may report to the Physical Education Building after 4:30 p.m. Thursday and no later than 7 p.m., and will be processed as quickly as possible.

If the pre-registration count is indicative, MC appears to be on its way to another enrollment record. By Friday morning there had been 1,768 persons pre-registered for classes. This is above the 1,645 who had pre-registered at the same time in 1981. The 1981 spring semester regestration concluded with 2,581 students.

"We are pleased that we have employed another fulltime geology instructor for the spring semester," noted Dr. Don Hunt, vice president of instruction. "This will enable us to accommodate twice as many students as in the past, when we often had to turn away a large number of students. We also have replaced our law enforcement instructor, and have obtained an art instructor, replacing two instructors who left at mid-term."

In the music department, Brian Gum has been employed to direct a college orchestra that will be formed during the spring semester. The popular Midland College Community Band also will be rehearsing and performing again during the spring semester.

And Midland College, with considerable assistance from the community, will be sponsoring an opera workshop and one performance of "Rigoletto" during the spring semester. The opera is scheduled for Feb. 3-8, and the performance of "Rigoletto" in the Midland Community Theatre on March 25. Both the opera workshop and the performance will be handled by a professional cast and directors from the well-known Texas Opera Theatre.

Persons interested in taking part in the opera workshop may register for that course during regular college registration. There also will be a special enrollment period just prior to the beginning of the workshop.

"We also want to remind interested persons that there should be a number of openings in some vocational courses — such as machine technology, welding, automotive technology, and diesel mechanics — during the daytime. This is due to a reduced number of Midland Independent School District students who are being permitted to take vocational courses at Midland College this year," Hunt pointed out.

Additional information about spring semester credit courses may be obtained by visiting the Office of Student Services or by calling 684-7851, extension 166.

By Franchelle Moore — P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702

I am looking for a recipe for Fortune Cookies. Can you find one? — Mrs. H. P.

ANSWER: A check was made with both Chinese restaurants in Midland for a Fortune Cookie recipe. One replied a definite "NO" and the other said, "they are too hard to make, we order ours."

However, Mrs. Vincent Scury, a member of the Couples Gourmet Group of the Midland Branch, American Association of University Women, has come to your rescue. The following recipe is published in a book entitled "Wokcraft" by Charles and Violet Schafer. Here goes.

First, type your messages on small pieces of paper and fold.

Stir 1⅛ cups white sugar into ¾ cup unbeaten egg whites. Add salt to taste.

When sugar is dissolved, beat until well blended. Beat into the sugar and egg white mixture, 1 cup melted butter, 1 cup flour and ½ teaspoon vanilla.

Drop by teaspoonsful, well apart, on a greased cookie sheet. Bake in a 350 degree F. oven until edges of cookies curl; about 5 minutes.

Place messages on cookies, and fold cookies in half. Mold them over wooden spoon handle. Or, stand cookies up in muffin pan to cool.

The recipes goes on to say that "this is hot, fast work." If cookies harden before you have a chance to insert messages, return cookies to oven to soften.

The recipe yields about 60 crunchy and sweet cookies.

I am a newcomer to Midland and would like to get in touch with an organization for singles. Can you help me get in touch with one? — S.T.

ANSWER: You can contact the Single Trees, an adults' singles group, by calling 563-2321 or 694-4252.

Around the time of the Pecan Festival there was a picture in The Reporter-Telegram of a man with an electric sheller. We have a large amount of pecans and would like to know where we could get an electric sheller. If not in Midland, where else? — Mrs. Jack Moore

ANSWER: A spokesman with the Sandyland Pecan Co. says her company has ordered a new supply of electric shellers, and they should be in around February 1. You can contact the company by calling 682-2714, or by writing to them, Route 7, Box 595, Midland 79701.

Is it true that the life insurance policy I just took out can be canceled by the company any time within the next two years? — J.P.

ANSWER: Not true — unless the company can show that you knowingly made false statements in your application, says The American Council of Life Insurance.

If your application statements were true to the best of your knowledge, the policy cannot be cancelled after it has gone into effect unless you stop paying your premiums. And after your policy has been in force for two years, it becomes "incontestable," which means the company cannot cancel it for any reason — except nonpayment of premiums, of course.

It seems like every time I need new frames for my glasses, I also have to purchase new lenses because newer frames have changed and won't hold lenses designed for the original frames.

Why aren't frame manufacturers required to keep frames available for a set period of time — much like federal law mandates that auto parts be kept on hand for 10 years? — C.C.

ANSWER: A representative of Ronald D. Hardaway, master certified optician, says that manufacturers of glass frames, just as clothing manufacturers, change their styles about every three months. This usually makes it impossible to get frames' parts to fit the original lenses. There is no law regulating the production of glasses' frames.

Building permits continue their record pace

The city of Midland granted building permits representing investments of $7,291,894 the first week of January, picking up where last year's record pace left off.

Midland Independent School District accounted for $5,498,000 of that amount with the issuance of permits for construction of two new elementary schools, a new library and new office space. The new 51,000-square-foot De Zavala Elementary School building will be built at a cost of $2,350,000 at 1101 E. South St., while Northwest Elementary School building, also 51,000 square feet and representing an investment of $2,350,000, will be located at 3800 Norwood.

A new library for Midland High School will be constructed at a cost of $648,000 at 906 W. Illinois and will contain 10,800 square feet in two stories, while 1,540 square feet of office space will be constructed for Lee High School at 3500 Neely at a cost of $150,000.

Permits for new residential construction totaled investments of $1,535,894, with permits going to Albert Jones, 608 S. Lincoln, $20,000; Foremost Builders, 4003 Westminster, $92,000, and 4011 Westminster, $82,000; Friday Construction, 2903 Whittle Way, $65,000, 2905 Whittle Way, $65,000, 2907 Whittle Way, $65,000, 3001 Whittle Way, $67,000, and 3003 Whittle Way, $65,000;

Materials available for viewing

Films and other audio-visual materials available to public schools through Region 18 Education Service Center may be requested for preview by parents and other interested adults during a one day review session set for Jan. 28. The session is scheduled from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the center, located on LaForce Boulevard at Midland Regional Airport.

Parents and other citizens interested in requesting preview of particular films from the collection maintained at the Service Center should notify the center at least ten days in advance so the staff will have time to check on the availability of the films and set up preview rooms. In the event a film is not available on the date requested, the person making the request will be given a date on which it may be seen.

Persons wishing to request preview of films may call Vera Smith, staff member of the Education Service Center, at 563-2380. The name of the film desired and the approximate time the person will arrive at the center should be given to Mrs. Smith.

Nurses, law course set

A one-day program in "Nursing Practice and Texas Law" will be offered Jan. 29 at Midland Memorial Hospital by the University of Texas at El Paso College of Nursing and Allied Health.

Marta L. Reeder will be in charge of the program, scheduled from 8 a.m.to 3:30 p.m. with a break for lunch.

Among topics to be discussed will be the nurse's legal obligation to the patient for "reasonable care." Continuing education credit may be earned.

Advance .egistration may be made by mailing the $20 fee (with check made payable to UTEP College of Nursing) to Sister Aloysius Williams, director of continuing education program, UTEP College of Nursing and Allied Health, 1101 N. Campbell St., El Paso, Texas 79902.

Kent Hance to be guest

ODESSA — U.S Rep. Kent Hance will be featured speaker at the Jan. 21 meeting of Leadership Odessa here in the Odessa College Community Room.

Leadership Midland also has been invited to hear the Lubbock Democrat's discussion of issues relevant to both communities. Hance is in his second term as representative of the 19th Congressional District.

Speakers for the afternoon include Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission Director Ernie Crawford and Speaker of the Texas House Bill Clayton.

Reservations must be made by Jan. 18 by telephoning Alison Peeler at the Midland Chamber, 683-3381.

ARMED FORCES NEWS

Graduations, promotions, honors listed

Marine Pvt. Dwaine Wells, son of Billy G. Wells of Andrews, has completed the infantry combat training course at Camp Pendleton, Calif.

During the six-week course, he received classroom instruction and participated in field exercises involving infantry tactics; the construction and camouflage of fighting positions; and the use of mines, demolitions, and intra-company communications equipment. His specialized training centered on the duties of a rifleman, with emphasis on squad tactics and the techniques of fire of the squad's weapons.

A 1980 graduate of Andrews High School, he joined the Marine Corps in November 1980.

George L. Peebles Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Peebles of Andrews, has been promoted in the U.S. Air Force to the rank of first lieutenant.

Peebles is an executive support officer with the 6570th Air Base Group, Brooks Air Force Base, Texas.

He is a 1979 graduate of Golden Gate University, San Francisco.

Marine Gunnery Sgt. Raymond S. Mendoza, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Mendoza of 4606 W. Illinois St., Midland, has been promoted to his present rank while serving with Marine Air Control Squadron-2, Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneone Bay, Hawaii.

A 1969 graduate of Midland High School, he joined the Marine Corps in June 1969. His wife, Darlene, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam J. Stringer of 1310 W. Francis St., Midland.

Navy Machinist's Mate 2nd Class David C. Dodson, grandson of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Brice of 804 W. Golf Course, Midland, recently participated in exercise "READIEX 1-82" off the coast of southern California.

Dodson is a crewmember aboard the guided missile cruiser USS Bainbridge, homeported in San Diego.

There were 21 ships, 40 aircraft and more than 7,000 sailors participating in the nine-day exercise. He and his shipmates practiced combat systems tests in anti-air, anti-submarine and anti-surface ship warfare.

A 1978 graduate of Midland High School, Dodson joined the Navy in January 1978.

Cadet Alan K. Tillman, son of Jan K. Schneider of Midland, was selected as a member of the San Marcos Baptist Academy President's Honor Guard.

The military staff selected the candidates for this high honor based upon academic credentials and exemplary conduct. The President's Honor Guard will perform during numerous ceremonies during the academic year.

Tillman has been a student at the academy for one year and is a freshman.

Airman James W. Pyle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Warner E. Pyle of 3800 Cedar Spring, Midland, has graduated from the U.S. Air Force pavement maintenance specialist course at Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas.

Graduates of the course learned maintenance procedures for aircraft runways, roads, parking areas and railroad tracks, and earned credit toward an associate degree in applied science through the Community College of the Air Force.

Pyle, who will now serve at Hahn Air Base, West Germany, is a 1981 graduate of Robert E. Lee High School, Midland.

The Midland Army Recruiting Station has now reopened at 4340 West Illinois, Westwood Plaza. Sgt. First Class Ed Chamber, the recruiter in charge of the station, asks that you stop by and visit him or call him at 694-5426.

Surgeon named dean

Odessa surgeon William A. Wiesner, M.D., has been appointed interim associate dean for Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center School of Medicine Regional Academic Health Center at Odessa.

"Dr. Wiesner's distinguished career in medicine in Odessa and his knowledge of the Permian Basin region will greatly facilitate development of the initial faculty and programs for the Regional Academic Health Center," said acting dean J. Ted Hartman, M.D.

A native of Sealy, Wisner attended The University of Texas at Austin and received a doctor of medicine degree from The University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston.

Wiesner and his initial staff and faculty will be located at Medical Center Hospital pending design and construction of an RAHC building on adjacent property provided by the city of Odessa and Ector County.

Texas' red meat production up

AUSTIN — Supplies of hamburger, pork and lamb will continue to be in abundance if current trends in red meat production continue, according to Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown.

Although Texas beef production is down slightly from last month, overall red meat production for 1981 is up from a year ago.

"Texas meat producers are continuing to do an excellent job for consumers in the U.S. and several foreign countries," Brown said. "Food prices are expected to remain stable throughout 1982, but the costs of producing meat continue to rise. This makes it very difficult for producers to realize a profit."

The number of calves slaughtered during the January-November 1981 period was 227,100 — up 28 percent from a year ago. More than 5.4 million head of cattle were slaughtered during that period for a 2 percent increase.

Commercial slaughtering plants in Texas produced 3.7 billion pounds of red meat in the January-November time frame.

The number of hogs, sheep and lambs slaughtered in Texas in that 11-month period was down slightly. More than 1.27 million hogs and 1.03 million sheep and lambs were slaughtered.

Careful sorghum planning urged

PLAINVIEW — With depressed market prices and increased production costs narrowing profit margins for grain sorghum production, farmers should make careful management decisions before planting their 1982 crop.

"Nearly every sorghum production area requires different farming techniques," said Charles Ikard, agronomist with Southwestern Division of Pioneer Hi-Bred International Inc. here. He stressed the importance of farmers to select performance-proven seed, fertilizers and irrigation methods for soil types.

"In nearly every case, it will pay for growers to put extra time and effort into planning their next sorghum crop. They cannot be guaranteed high prices at harvest time, but with good management, they can hold down their expenses and still produce good crops."

Three Texans nominated to board

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Two Texas ranchers and a cotton oil-mill operator have been nominated to succeed William Dale Nix of Canadian, Texas, on the Federal Farm Credit Board.

The nominees, selected by Texas Farm Credit System borrowers, are Edward Breihan, who is president and general manager of Plains Cooperative Oil Mill in Lubbock; Tom H. Carothers, who operates a cow-calf ranch and raises registered Brahman cattle and winters steers near Palestine; and R.B. Thomason, a Huntsville rancher and real-estate developer.

Copies of publication available

COLLEGE STATION — Livestock producers in the Edwards Plateau region have a new source of information on range forage and the level of protein and minerals in the grasses.

Analyses of 95 range species which were collected over a three-year period are available in the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station publication B-1357, "Nutritional Value of Range Plants in the Edwards Plateau Region of Texas." Copies of the publication may be obtained by writing Agricultural Communications, Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas 77843 or to the Texas A&M Agricultural Research and Extension Center, Route 2, Box 950, San Angelo, Texas 76901.

The anayises include grasses, forbs and browse plants.

The Edward Plateau region is made up of 24 million acres, most rangeland suitable for cattle, sheep and goat. The region also supports wildlife, such as deer, turkey, javelina and quail.

Texans to celebrate Arbor Day; Prepare to control scale insects

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent — Agriculture

January 15 is Arbor Day in Texas. It's an important day, not only for gardeners, but for every citizen of our great state.

What is Arbor Day? Well, it is a day set aside each year to remember one of our most valuable resources: the tree.

The idea of Arbor Day began in the mind and heart of J. Sterling Morton in the mid-1800s. However, it was not until April 10, 1872, that Arbor Day officially began in Nebraska.

On that day, it is said, more than a million trees were planted across Nebraska. Since that time millions of trees have been planted in all states throughout our country.

●

Although the national observance of Arbor Day is in April, Arbor Day in Texas is observed the third Friday in January by a resolution adopted by the Texas Legislature in 1949.

The importance of trees has become increasingly apparent in recent years, and as such, new emphasis and meaning is now being given to this 109-year-old observance we know as Arbor Day.

We know, of course, that trees provide lumber and paper, but let us not forget that trees also purify and beautify. They cleanse the air we breathe by absorbing carbon dioxide and returning oxygen to the air. They cool and humidify the air; reduce soil erosion; beautify our neighborhoods and communities; provide cover for fowl and wildlife; and offer a natural challenge for youthful climbing. In other words, trees work overtime to make our world a nicer place.

Trees can even help in energy conservation. Evergreen wind barrier plantings on the north and west sides of the house can cut 10 to 40 percent off winter fuel bills. And trees planted on the south and west sides of a house can reduce inside temperatures up to 8 degrees.

It is fitting that Arbor Day in Texas be observed in January, since January is an ideal time for planting trees.

Why not resolve to plant a tree this month? Or perhaps you would like to select a special tree for that boy or girl and let them plant it themselves. (Dad or mom might help them by digging the hole and supervising, but let them do the rest).

If you need suggestions as to the best tree to plant, check with your local nurseryman. He will be glad to advise you as to which trees will best suit your needs. He should have a good supply of most shade, fruit and pecan trees now available.

In many communities the trees that are so admired today are the direct result of planting that was done generations ago by pioneers, school children and the interested public. They left them for us to enjoy.

Let us resolve to leave even more trees for our children and future generations to climb, build a treehouse in, or just sit under and enjoy the cooling shade on a hot summer's day.

Join in the celebration by thinking trees, and by planting a tree in your own landscape to commemorate the occasion of Arbor Day 1982.

MAKE PREPARATIONS to apply a dormant oil spray to control scale insects. The principal scales in the West Texas area are the euonymous scales and Kermes scale on oak species. Be sure you have a problem before going to the trouble and expense of dormant spraying.

Dormant oil should be applied in later winter just before buds break when the insects are easiest to kill. Apply dormant oil spray on a calm, sunny day when the temperature is between 40 and 70 degrees F. Never apply oil when there is a chance of freezing temperatures within 48 hours after application.

Two farm groups oppose changes in programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration's plan for overhauling the nation's soil and water conservation programs is under attack by two farm groups that have substantial clout on Capitol Hill.

A conservation association leader said the proposal "really doesn't offer anything new."

The head of a major farm organization said the plan dodges what Congress intended to achieve when it ordered a review and updating of federal programs.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block last October unveiled what was termed a "preferred" program to guide federal, state and local conservation efforts over the next five years.

It calls for greater reliance on state and local programs, and private groups working in cooperation with the federal government.

One feature specifies block grants which would have to be matched by states that qualify for them. No boost in federal funds would be called for, however, and the money for the block grants would come from existing conservation programs.

The American Farm Bureau Federation said Thursday in its weekly newsletter that Block has been told the plan falls short of what Congress intended.

Robert Delano, federation president, said the Agriculture Department "failed to meet the mandate" of the 1977 Soil and Water Resources Conservation Act — commonly called RCA — to improve the delivery of the federal conservation programs.

Soil erosion eroding U.S. ability to produce

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lester R. Brown, whose business includes telling people about the abuses they inflict on their planet, is not impressed greatly by the huge piles of corn and wheat American farmers have amassed from last year's record harvests.

The current bulge in U.S. grain supplies, he says, may be only a temporary bubble that could burst quickly unless the world comes to grips with its two biggest problems: soil erosion and population growth.

Brown is the president of Worldwatch Institute, a private think-tank concentrating on research and publication about food supplies, natural resources, the environment — virtually everything that people need to stay alive.

In his latest book, "Building a Sustainable Society," Brown explains how soil erosion has taken its toll as nations strive to feed growing populations.

Soil erosion in the United States, he says, worsened as farmers for many years boosted production to feed rising domestic and foreign demands.

There is an urgent need, Brown says in the book, for nations to realign priorities so the brakes can be put on population growth and the erosion of the world's cropland.

Brown, in a recent interview, elaborated on his book and said he cannot predict a "doomsday" when the world might suddenly erupt because of starvation and disintegrating social order.

It's much more complicated and uncertain for those kind of predictions, he said. But there is a discernible slowdown in the growth of agricultural productivity that worries Brown.

"I think we have now have enough data that's available from the Third World, from this country, from the Soviet Union, to be able to say, without qualification, that civilization cannot survive this continuing loss of topsoil," Brown said.

The excessive rates of soil erosion combine with population growth and many other things to affect the world's grasslands, fisheries, energy supplies and other resources essential to human survival.

"At the moment, when we just came off the best harvests we've ever had in this country, it's a little difficult sometimes to think in these terms," Brown said.

"My concern with the loss of momentum in growth in world food output is that that loss of momentum will continue."

Africa — or in that part of the continent south of the Sahara — is a tragic case in point.

"What we are now beginning to see in Africa is environmental decline in the countryside — in soils — contributing importantly to a decline in per capita food production, which, in turn, is now contributing to a decline in per capita income and living standards," Brown said.

"That scenario will expand in terms of geographic coverage if we're not able to respond fairly quickly on a number of fronts — such as getting the brakes on population growth."

Brown said population growth — the number of people exceeding the food supply — is "the most important single factor because it feeds all the problems that we face."

A widely known researcher, author and lecturer, Brown said he participates in many international conferences where population comes up.

Invariably, Brown said, some African official will contend that his country has lots of space for population growth and that the problem is not so serious as it sometimes is made out.

"What they don't understand is that when you practice shifting cultivation, you need lots of space," he said. The creep of deserts into previously cultivated areas is another major concern.

But attitudes about population control are beginning to change, he said. The progress of some countries — notably China and Indonesia — has made a big impression on many others, even some of the Marxist nations that previously disdained any kind of curbs on population growth.

"It has taken the wind out of the sails of a lot of people in international conferences when you can just point to China," Brown said.

Reindeer program revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rural development can be a new factory for a depressed area in Appalachia, a new electric generating plant in the Rocky Mountains — or improved reindeer herds in Alaska.

The Agriculture Deparment says cooperative efforts by its specialists, the University of Alaska, and native groups and organizations are aimed at boosting the size of herds, thus making them a source of meat and employment.

Scientists are trying to solve the two major health problems of reindeer: parasitic warble flies and brucellosis, a disease that also affects domestic livestock.

The reindeer program was described recently in a department article explaining attempts to revive the herds which totaled about 600,000 animals at one time on the Alaskan tundra but then dwindled to only around 30,000.

John Shaeffer, president of the Northwest Alaska Native Association, said he hopes a lot of people will get into the business of starting new reindeer herds.

Shaeffer estimates the association could harvest 1,200 carcasses annually by increasing its present herd from 7,000 head to 30,000. That would reduce meat costs in the region and provide an estimated 40 full-time jobs and 80 seasonal jobs.

"Both the lower meat costs and jobs would benefit Northwestern Alaska, with its 14 percent unemployment rate," the report said. "The average income per household in that area is near the national poverty level."

Reindeer are not native to Alaska. The first 16 were imported from Siberia in 1891 and died. The next year, Dr. Sheldon Jackson brought a second herd to the Seward Peninsula, along with Lapp herders to manage the animals and instruct the natives.

Some vegetable supplies down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers may see smaller supplies of certain fresh market vegetables this winter because of reduced acreages for harvest, says the Agriculture Department.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said Thursday farmers intend to have an estimated 185,000 acres of the 13 major vegetable crops for harvest in January, February and March. That would be down 5 percent from 195,000 acres a year ago.

DEATHS

R.C. Williamson Sr.

MARLIN — Roy C. Williamson Sr., 80, father of Roy C. Williamson Jr. of Midland, died Saturday at his home in Marlin.

Services will be at 10:30 a.m. Monday in Adams Funeral Home Chapel in Marlin with the Rev. Jessie Harris, Marlin Methodist minister, officiating. Burial will in Calvary Cemetery here.

Williamson was born Dec. 14, 1901, in Fort Smith, Ark. He was a 1923 graduate of Baylor University, where he was named All-Southwest Conference football player and was a member of Baylor's Athletic Hall of Fame. In 1929, he received a degree in petroleum engineering from the University of Oklahoma. He was cited as OU's most outstanding engineering student at that time.

Williamson began his career with Lion Oil Co., became president of Southern Production Oil Co. in Fort Worth and was vice president of Sinclair Oil Co. in Houston when he retired in 1965. He lived in Fort Worth before moving to Marlin in 1976.

He was listed in "Who's Who in the Southwest."

Other survivors include his wife, two brothers, a sister and two granddaughters.

Harry L. Kellogg

Services for Harry L. Kellogg, 63, of 2401 Camarie, will be at 2 p.m. Monday in St. Nicholas Episcopal Church. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park, directed by Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Kellogg died Thursday in a Midland hospital.

Pallbearers will be Otis Day, W.B. "Hank" Henry, Larry Wollsehlager, M.E. Mertz, Mort Thompson and Jack Horsley.

Mrs. Patrick Ruppe

AUSTIN — Services for Ann Denniston Ruppe, 31, wife of former Midlander Patrick J. Ruppe of Giddings, will be at 2 p.m. Monday in the Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd here with the Rev. Samuel Baxter, officiating. Burial will be in Austin, directed by Weed-Corley Funeral Home.

She died Friday in Giddings.

Other survivors include her parents, three brothers and a grandmother.

Loyd C. Jones Sr.

SEYMOUR — Services for Loyd C. Jones Sr., 82, of Seymour, brother of Katie Bowman and Juanita Hickey, both of Midland, will be at 10 a.m. Monday in the First Baptist Church here. Burial will be in the Masonic Cemetery, directed by Seymour Memorial Funeral Home.

He died Saturday in a Seymour hospital.

Jones was born Nov. 9, 1900, in Coleman County. He was a lifetime resident of Seymour and a member of the First Baptist Church.

Other survivors include his wife, a son, two sisters and two brothers.

Minnie Willingham

UVALDE — Services for Mrs. Ray (Minnie) Willingham Sr., 86, of Uvalde and formerly of Midland, were held Jan. 2 in Hamlin.

Mrs. Willingham died Dec. 31 in Uvalde after a brief illness.

She was born Feb. 6, 1895, in Hamlin, where she was married to Ray Willingham Sr. in 1916. She attended Southwest Texas College and was a deputy in the tax assessor's office in Lubbock 17 years. She retired in 1970 and lived in Midland before moving to Hamlin. She had lived in Uvalde 2½ months. She was a member of First United Methodist Church and Eastern Star. She was preceded in death by her husband in 1942 and by two sisters and three brothers.

Survivors include her son, Ray Willingham Jr. of Midland and Uvalde; a brother, Clee Barnett of Midland; a sister, Tennie Moore of Hamlin; four grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Surprises surface in Williams' trial

ATLANTA (AP) — New disclosures about two of 28 slayings that frightened this city for two years surfaced during the first days of Wayne Williams' murder trial, just as District Attorney Lewis Slaton had promised.

The Fulton County district attorney told the jury of nine women and three men during opening arguments last week that they would be more alert if they "didn't know what was coming next." Despite the publicity that has swirled around the case for months, he vowed to keep them surprised.

But defense lawyers Alvin Binder and Mary Welcome produced some suprises of their own, like getting a medical examiner to admit he couldn't rule out accidental drowning in the death of one of the young blacks Williams is accused of killing.

Slaton opened the state's case by focusing on Williams' encounter with a police stakeout and the discovery of the body of one of the victims the 23-year-old freelance photographer is accused of killing.

The jury heard from 19 witnesses in the first three days of testimony, leading Superior Court Judge Clarence Cooper to say, "we are much farther along than anyone could anticipate."

Slaton has presented a list of more than 500 potential witnesses, although not all of them are expected to be called.

Williams is being tried on murder charges in the deaths of Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, two of 28 young blacks whose deaths are being investigated by a special police task force. No other arrests have been made.

Witnesses testifying last week included the mother and girlfriend of Payne, the police officers and FBI agents who manned the stakeout team that stopped Williams, the fishermen who found Payne's body and a water flow expert from the Army Corp of Engineers.

Wiliams was stopped by police near a Chattahoochee River bridge May 22, two days before Cater's body was found a mile downstream. Payne's body was found a month earlier in the general area.

Prosecutors for the first time indicated they believed Payne's body, as well as Cater's, was thrown from the bridge where Williams was stopped. Water flow expert Benjamin Kittle testified that studies of water speed, topography and obstructions in the river showed Payne's body would most likely come to rest where it did if thrown from that bridge. But he added his work was not an exact science.

New testimony also came from Robert Campbell, the only member of the police stakeout team who did not testify during two pre-trial hearings about Williams' first encounter with police. Defense lawyers could not locate him earlier to serve a supboena.

Although it was known through the testimony of others that Campbell had heard the splash in the river, his testimony was the first disclosure that Williams' car was spotted directly over ripples.

Defense lawyers also scored points during the prosecution's part of the trial. Associate Medical Examiner Saleh Zaki, under intense cross-examination from Binder, conceded he could not rule out accidental drowning in the death of Payne.

Although Zaki said it was unlikely that Payne died accidentally, he said his ruling of homicide was based on factors other than his medical findings. Zaki conceded the deaths of other young blacks under similar circumstances led him to rule that Payne was murdered.

Soft turf battle launching pad for Super Bowl

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Super Bowl XVI will be either an exciting new experience for the young San Francisco 49ers or trip No. VI for Tom Landry's Dallas Cowboys.

Landry, the only head coach in the 22-year history of the Cowboys, brings the team into Candlestick Park to face the 49ers in today's National Football Conference championship game. Dallas has reached the title game nine times in 12 years.

The 49ers finished regular season play with the National Football League's best record, 13-3, and their most impressive victory was the 45-14 demolition of the Cowboys three months ago on Candlestick's notoriously soft turf.

But the 49ers' Bill Walsh, NFL Coach of the Year, says flatly, "Dallas is the team to beat in the NFL."

A San Francisco victory would give the 49ers their first conference championship and send them into the Jan. 24 Super Bowl game at the Pontiac, Mich., Silverdome. The Cincinnati Bengals or San Diego Chargers, two other teams with no Super Bowl experience, will represent the American Conference.

"I don't think there are any dominant teams in the NFL. We don't have to reach the Super Bowl to validate our 13-3 record," says Walsh, the third-year coach who had 2-14 and 6-10 records his first two seasons with the 49ers. "If we lose, we'll just say the best team won, wish them luck and start getting ready for next season."

Dallas has a pair of five-time Super Bowl performers, linebacker D.D. Lewis and safety Charlie Waters, on defense. The Cowboys' pass rush, led by linemen Ed "Too Tall" Jones and All-Pro Randy White, is one of the most experienced and feared in the NFL.

But the 49ers' defense, featuring three extraordinary rookies in the secondary and All-Pro Fred Dean on the line, was much more consistent this season than the Dallas unit.

San Francisco quarterback Joe Montana, the 25-year-old Notre Dame product in his first season as a full-time starter, led the NFC in passing this season, with the Cowboys' Danny White ranking second.

"It all boils down to putting pressure on Montana. He has to know we're in the game. And he will," says Jones.

In the regular season meeting of the teams, Montana was sacked just once and threw for 279 yards. The game's most startling statistic was the mere 21 yards rushing by Tony Dorsett, who set a Dallas season record with a total of 1,646 yards.

"I was counting on Dallas playing Dallas football, but that's not what we saw," says 49ers linebacker Jack Reynolds. "I know we'll see Dallas football this time."

The Cowboys, perhaps shaken by the Oct. 11 embarrassment in San Francisco, righted themselves and won the NFC East title with a 12-4 record.

Dallas wiped out Tampa Bay 38-0 last weekend, giving Landry his 18th postseason coaching victory. The 49ers, in their first playoff game in nine years, outscored the New York Giants 38-24.

"We'll be coming into the game with some momentum," said Landry. "The 49ers have some momentum, too."

Walsh's team carries a six-game winning streak into the NFC title match and has won 13 of its last 14 games. The 49ers began the season where they hope to end it, at the Silverdome, where they lost to the Detroit Lions 24-17.

After three weeks of regular season play, the 49ers were 1-2. They were 4-2 after ambushing the Cowboys.

"We saw the 49ers at their best," said Dallas quarterback White, who was sacked three times by Dean in the October game. "It was obvious what happened to us. It wasn't one or two players, it was 45 — a total breakdown."

Landry said his players left Candlestick mad at themselves, not the 49ers. But he did remind them of the Oct. 11 embarrassment by re-showing the game films this past week.

"Any time you play like we did, you should get beaten badly. Really, revenge has nothing to do with it," the coach said going into this rematch.

Can this man, quarterback Danny White, make the Dallas Cowboys forget the 45-14 slaughter administered by the San Francisco 49ers? The answer will come today at the same site, but this time the winner goes to the Super Bowl.

AFC contrasts are striking

Chargers' loose ship takes on jacket-clad Bengals

CINCINNATI (AP) — The contrasts between the San Diego Chargers and the Cincinnati Bengals, the opponents in today's American Football Conference championship game, are striking.

The Chargers' coach is Don Coryell. He runs a loose ship. He's been known to show up late for his own meetings.

The Bengals' coach is Forrest Gregg. He runs a tight ship, almost military like. Jackets and ties are mandatory on road trips.

The Chargers' quarterback is Dan Fouts. His passes are bombs, a "more-is-better" passer. If he doesn't set a record for his number of throws or their distance, he's had an off-day, or an off-year.

The Bengals' quarterback is Ken Anderson. He is precision personified, a three-time passing champion in the National Football League (including the 1981 season), who also owns the record for the best passing percentage in a game.

The Chargers' receivers specialize not so much in yardage as is mileage. Ten AFC receivers gained more than 1,000 yards during the 1981 season. San Diego had three of them (Charlie Joiner, 1,188 yards; Wes Chandler, 1,142, and Kellen Winslow, 1,085).

The Bengals had one — rookie Cris Collinsworth, who sneaked in with 1,009 yards.

The Chargers, for all their vaunted air superiority, also gained 2,005 yards rushing this season (eighth in the conference) led by Chuck Muncie's 1,144 yards (second in the AFC) and rookie James Brooks' 525 yards.

The Bengals were ninth in the AFC in rushing with 1,973 yards. Pete Johnson was their leader with 1,077 yards.

Defensively, the Chargers were survivors — barely. They were next-to-last in the conference in defense, ahead of only Baltimore. Their league-high 478 points overcame the 390 they allowed and helped them finish with a 10-6 record and win the AFC Western Division title.

The Bengals' defense was fourth overall in the conference, but only ninth against the pass. It allowed 304 points. But Cincinnati scored 421, enough to give the team a 12-4 record, the best in the AFC.

The teams met once during the 1981 season and played a game of role-reversal. The Bengals were the explosive entity as Anderson passed for 444 yards in a 40-17 romp.

Gregg said the rout at San Diego was relatively meaningless. "This is what happened: we jumped on them early, got the turnovers and an interception (a 103-yard runback by Louis Breeden) that turned the tide. Otherwise, that game was a lot closer than the score indicated. I never relaxed during the whole game and the players didn't, either," he said.

Each team won an opening-round playoff game last weekend.

Saturday, the Chargers rolled up a 24-0 lead over Miami in the first period but couldn't hold it. The Dolphins ultimately went ahead 38-31 and were driving toward what might have been a clinching field goal or touchdown with barely four minutes to go when rookie Andra Franklin fumbled. The Chargers regained possession, Fouts tied it in the final minute of regulation with a 9-yard touchdown pass to Brooks, and San Diego won 41-38 in overtime.

Sunday, the Bengals built a 14-0 lead over Buffalo, but the Bills rallied to tie the score 14-14 and later at 21-21. After Cincinnati went ahead again on Anderson's 16-yard touchdown pass to Collinsworth with 10:30 to play, Buffalo was driving toward a potential tying score. But a delay-of-game penalty on fourth down wiped out a completion from Joe Ferguson to Lou Piccone, good enough for a first down at the Cincinnati 14-yard line with less than three minutes to play, another fourth-down pass failed and the Bengals held on for a 28-21 victory.

After playing against Miami in weather not unlike their own in San Diego, the Chargers will have to deal with a wintry Queen City, where today's temperature has been projected in the low 20s.

"We're just happy to be playing for the championship, even if we have to play in a blizzard," said Coryell. "I'd be more concerned about wind than snow and the wind-chill factor. With the wind, you don't know where the ball's going to go — and we throw the ball so much."

Gregg agreed. "Unless the wind is blowing hard, the weather's not going to be much of a factor," he said. "In Green Bay this year, we felt that 20 degrees was like being in the tropics."

"We could play them in Alaska," Winslow said of the Bengals, "and it wouldn't make any difference."

And defensive tackle Gary "Big Hands" Johnson said emphatically: "We're a football team. We'll play with the same intensity whether it's 20 below or 110 above. To get to the Super Bowl, we'd go to the moon and bounce around up there (the winner plays the National Conference champion, either Dallas or San Francisco, in the Super Bowl Jan. 24 at Pontiac, Mich).

"We're like 'Rocky.' We keep getting knocked down and keep coming back," Johnson added. "With the powerful offense we have, all we have to do is hang in there."

Can White chase haunting memories?

By JIM DENT
(c) 1982, Dallas Times Herald

DALLAS — On the first Sunday in January 1981, Danny White chased the final memories of Roger Staubach down the long tunnel of Atlanta's Fulton County Stadium and into the night. As Dallas won in the final minute, so would the new Cowboy quarterback. The touchdown pass to Drew Pearson with 45 seconds remaining drew the line that separated the old from the new.

The doubts would return, though, as White began his second season. Even Tom Landry predicted last summer that the long winter was forthcoming, that the White of '81 would falter a bit before climbing again. The 28 touchdown passes, the last-minute wins in St. Louis and Atlanta and the hoisting of Dallas into the NFC title game could not be equaled, Landry said.

On Oct. 11 in San Francisco, White was wondering if it could be true.

DALLAS HAD been trampled, 45-14, by the 49ers, a team the Cowboys had defeated, 59-14, the previous year. White would spend the final 20 minutes on the bench, realizing the worst humiliation of his life.

"For some guys it might be better to take things like that more casually," White said. "But I cannot. It's amazing all the things you think about when you're losing like that. You think 'Well, maybe I'm eating the wrong thing for lunch on Thursday.' When you hate to lose like I hate to lose, you try to think of any little thing that might help you turn it around."

White and the Cowboys have come full circle since their humiliation in San Francisco. They will have a chance for redemption in the NFC championship game against San Francisco.

"In the back of my mind, this is the game that I've been waiting for," White said. "At that time, I had to try to not think about the 49ers. I don't know if it's revenge or what. It's a feeling that you still have something to prove to yourself."

AFTER LOSING to San Francisco, Dallas began the long climb the following Sunday against Los Angeles. The Cowboys beat the Rams, Miami, Philadelphia and Buffalo on consecutive weekends.

The Cowboys needed two touchdowns in the final five minutes to defeat the Dolphins.

"I think that's when the season was really turned around," White said. "Dallas has been doing this for several years. It is like backing a lion into a corner. You come out fighting. The game wasn't quite as important as the Washington comeback (35-34) two years ago, but the pressure to come back and score at the end was the same."

Watching from a seat in the stadium, Staubach could see a reflection of himself within the new Dallas quarterback.

"The Cowboys have been that come-from-behind team for a long time, and it's been a tradition," he said. "And that was passed along to Danny. Dallas has the big-play people, and now they've still got a quarterback they can believe in. Something was developed in the Dallas offense a long time ago that allows it come back in the final two minutes. It goes all the way back to Don Meredith."

STAUBACH WAS doing TV commentary in Los Angeles when the Dallas-Philadelphia score flashed on the screen. The Eagles led 14-3 in the fourth quarter. He turned to Tom Brookshier and said: "Dallas will win."

"Danny has the bloodlines," Staubach said. "Look where he came from. He had the winning history at Arizona State. He's won at everything he's ever done. When we play pick-up basketball, I want Danny on my side. We might not be as good as the other guys, but we'll win. When you have two people who want to win as bad as we do, you'll come through most of the time."

Landry said, "Danny is proving to be of the same mold as Roger. I mean, Roger was a great quarterback under pressure. He had great character and so does White. Very seldom does he not have control of the situation. It is something you develop. But it's also something you must have in your character."

Staubach once threw a ping-pong paddle at a wall after losing a friendly game to White at training camp. He stormed out of a pick-up basketball game when his team was losing. "Quitters!" he yelled back at his teammates and slammed the door behind him.

INSTEAD OF going home after an upset loss to the Giants last season, White went to a small gymnasium beneath his office in North Dallas. He vented his frustrations by pumping weights for an hour.

"I used to mope for three days after losing," Staubach said. "After losing to San Francisco, Danny was talking about how he hated to lose so much that he sometimes wished he didn't play the game. Landry is the same way. He doesn't show it, but it eats at him for days and days after losing."

When Staubach retired, it was as if Landry went to Sears and ordered another quarterback of the same size, weight and Republican philosophy. If Staubach was Capt. America, White is Lt. America. He does not drink, smoke or drive the fast lane. White is a Mormon and donates 10 percent of his salary to the church.

On the field, White is more patient than Staubach, preferring to stand in the pocket until his receiver clears the coverage. Although White is faster, he will seldom scramble. However, when the Eagles' zone defense smothered Doug Cosbie in the teams' first meeting this season, White scrambled to his right and, as the tight end altered his pattern, he looped a pass for the end zone. The touchdown cut Philadelphia's lead to 14-10.

Staubach's strong arm allowed him to throw between defenders and to throw on the run. White will pass on timing, meaning that the ball is released before the receiver breaks. Tony Hill had his back to the quarterback when White delivered one in the fourth quarter against Philadelphia. Hill would take three steps, turn and find the football in his chest.

"Of all the years that I've been around the Cowboys, it was the best pass that I've ever seen a Dallas quarterback throw," said Ermal Allen, an assistant coach for the last 20 years.

DREW PEARSON became an All-Pro receiver under Staubach, but with White he is just another flanker. Pearson's disappearance from the Dallas offense is a reflection of White's style.

Staubach's speciality was the 25-yard turn-in to Pearson, who would split the safeties. Because his passes lack Staubach's velocity, White relies more on slant routes to the sideline where he can arc the ball.

Not until Staubach's retirement did the Cowboys' coaches fully realize the lack of zip on White's passes. It was during training camp two summers ago when Danny Reeves, who is now the head coach in Denver, first noticed that White's passes did not hang on a line like Staubach's. Part of the offensive scheme had to be changed.

TODAY, THOUGH, Landry says that the pass patterns are basically the same.

"There is not much difference in the game plans between Danny and Roger," Landry said. "What you've got to understand is that the quarterback can do different things with the same play. That's what you see Danny doing a lot of this year."

No. 1 Tar Heels sting No. 2 Cavs

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — James Worthy thought fate might have had something to do with it, but there was nothing metaphysical about the way top-ranked North Carolina scratched and clawed to victory over Virginia Saturday.

Worthy's jump shot with 3:47 left gave undefeated North Carolina its first lead since midway in the first half, and the Tar Heels defeated the second-ranked Cavaliers 65-60 in the second No. 1 vs. No. 2 matchup in two weeks.

North Carolina's second-half comeback, which began with the Tar Heels trailing by nine points, took some of the shine from a 30-point performance by Virginia's Ralph Sampson.

"He had been hitting all day," Worthy said. "He had to miss one sometime, I guess fate was on our side."

Sampson missed two free throws just before Worthy's go-ahead basket, and the 7-foot-4 Virginia center said that might have been the key that got North Carolina through the door.

"I missed those two free throws and then I threw the ball away one time, and I think that helped them get the momentum," Sampson said.

Worthy took over the defensive duty against Sampson after North Carolina center Sam Perkins drew his fourth personal foul with four minutes to play. Worthy's defensive job and a compressed North Carolina zone defense kept Sampson scoreless in the final two minutes.

"Everybody thinks Worthy and Perkins are so great. They're two good ballplayers. OK?" Sampson asked rhetorically. "They're not all-world. I'm not all-world. I just try to play my role."

North Carolona Coach Dean Smith felt that the victory "has to help us in the future."

"You certainly witnessed a great basketball game today," Smith said. "I thought you saw two excellent teams playing very hard. There were also some great individual performances."

The teams traded advantages in the closing minutes until two foul shots by Perkins with 1:48 to play gave North Carolina the lead for good, 59-58, and the Tar Heels held on for their 11th victory this season by going into their famed four-corner offense.

Perkins then put the finishing touches on the victory. After reserve guard Jim Braddock sank four free throws to put North Carolina ahead 63-58, Jeff Jones pulled the Cavaliers within three points, 63-60, with a jump shot with seconds to play.

Tennessee stuns No. 3 Kentucky

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Kentucky missed two crucial free throws in the final minute Saturday night, and Tennessee's Tyrone Beaman scored five consecutive points to lead the Volunteers to a 70-66 upset of the No. 3 Wildcats in Southeastern Conference basketball.

Kentucky, after dominating the first half, went cold the final minute, and the 5-foot-11 Beaman hit two field goals and one free throw to assure the Volunteers' victory.

With eight minutes remaining, a tip-in by Tennessee's Dale Ellis had tied the game at 54-54. The lead then changed hands five times with only a one-point difference before senior Steve Ray hit a 10-footer with 5:05 remaining to put the Vols ahead 61-60.

After a Tennessee timeout with 4:40 to play, Kentucky's Jim Master missed an inside shot and Charles Hurt fouled Tennessee's Michael Brooks on a layup. Brooks then hit both ends of a 1-and-1 from the free-throw line.

In the final two minutes, Kentucky managed only three field goals, each by 6-6 junior Derrick Hord. The final one came with five seconds remaining.

Ellis led Tennessee scoring with 23 points, followed by Brooks with 19 and Beaman with 10. For the Wildcats, Melvin Turpin, a 6-11 sophomore center, had a game-high 28 points, while Hord contributed 18 and Master 14.

Smith, Navratilova gain finals

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Anne Smith staged her third upset of the week Saturday night, toppling West Germany's Sylvia Hanika 6-3, 6-4 to advance to the finals of the $200,000 Avon Tennis Championships of Washington against Martina Navratilova.

Navratilova, seeded second, survived two tie-breakers Saturday afternoon before downing Barbara Potter 7-6, 6-7, 6-3.

Smith, who earlier this week eliminated both top-seeded Tracy Austin and No.5 seed Pam Shriver, dominated play with her booming serve in the first set.

The 22-year-old Texan surrendered just one point on her serve during the set.

Smith grabbed a 5-3 lead in the first set, breaking the fourth-seeded Hanika in the eighth game. Trailing 15-30, Hanika sent an approach shot into the net and lost the game on the following point when she failed to reach a lob over her head.

Aggies nip Baylor by one

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Junior guard Tyren Naulls scored the winning basket with 14 seconds left to give Texas A&M a 47-46 Southwest Conference basketball win over Baylor Saturday night.

After Naulls' bucket put A&M in front by one, Baylor's Joe Copeland missed from out front and the Aggies rebounded as time ran out.

A&M now has an overall record of 9-3 and is 2-0 in conference play. Baylor is 7-4 and 0-1.

A&M jumped off to a 7-0 lead during the first eight minutes of play, but Baylor rallied to take a 22-15 halftime lead.

Frogs clip Owls

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Christian's Doug Arnold scored 32 points, including two pressure free throws with 12 seconds to play, to lead the Horned Frogs to 65-64 Southwest Conference basketball victory over the Rice Owls Saturday night.

The victory evened TCU's conference record at 1-1 and dropped the Owls to 0-2.

Arnold, starting his first game after being suspended from the team for an unexcused absence, outshot Rice's Ricky Pierce, who finished with 26 points.

Howland ignites Longhorns

DALLAS (AP) — According to his coach, Texas forward Virdell Howland runs hot and cold. Earlier this week, against Texas Tech, Howland missed nine straight field goal tries as the Longhorns narrowly escaped with a victory.

But Saturday, against Southern Methodist, Howland exploded for 24 points — 16 of them in a tempo-setting first half — and led the Longhorns to a 60-51 Southwest Conference basketball win.

"Virdell sure gave us a game today," allowed Texas coach Abe Lemons. "He's a streaky player, some nights he just hits a lot better than others. Actually he's always playing well — he's done a great job on defense this year."

His defense became necessary when the Mustangs got hot briefly to open the second period and pulled within two field goals before the Longhorns woke up to regain control of the contest.

"This was another game I could see slipping away," said Lemons. "We just seemed to hit some dead spots there for a while. We've been a good second half team most of the year and, fortunately, we were again today."

Texas center LaSalle Thompson, the nation's fifth-leading rebounder going into the regionally televised contest, dominated play at both ends of the floor, grabbing 21 rebounds and blocking two shots.

The unbeaten and unranked Longhorns, 10-0 overall and 2-0 in SWC play, established their winning margin in the final nine minutes of the first half, outscoring the Mustangs 16-2 and taking a 34-18 lead into the locker room.

SMU, 5-7 and 0-2, came out shooting in the second half, with freshman Larry Davis ringing up two field goals and four rebounds to lead the charge as the Mustangs scored 12 unavenged points and pulled within four, 34-30.

At that point the 6-10, 250-pound Thompson resumed his ownership of the backboards and the Longhorns pulled steadily away, going into their spread offense with 2¼ minutes remaining.

Texas guard Ray Harper's free-throw shooting kept the Mustangs at bay as the game wound to a close. Texas outscored the Mustangs 14-1 from the foul line.

Addison led SMU with 18 points and Dave Piehler added 10. Mike Wacker was the only other Longhorn in double figures with 12 points.

Cougars hold off Red Raiders, 78-68

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Rob Williams scored 25 points as the 14th-ranked Houston Cougars held off upset-minded Texas Tech for a 78-68 Southwest Conference basketball win Saturday night.

Tech made a determined comeback attempt during the second half, tying the score on four occasions, but Williams hit a 15-foot jump shot to put Houston ahead to stay, 59-57, and Houston outscored Tech 27-11 in the final 7½ minutes.

Clarence Swannegan led all scorers with 30 points for Tech, his career high, while former Midland High star Charles Johnson added 16 and Jeff Taylor tallied 11.

Akeem Olajuwon, the 7-foot center from Kenya, was the only other Houston player in double figures.

Houston, 11-1 overall and 2-0 in SWC play, led by as much as 12 points during the first half and went to the locker room with a 41-35 lead at intermission.

The Raiders fell to 9-4 and 1-2.

"I guess we just ran out of gas there at the end of the game," said Tech coach Gerald Myers. "Houston did a good job of controlling the ball the last four or five minutes."

Myers, whose Red Raiders have upset Arkansas and came within a point of beating Texas in Austin earlier this week, paid Houston a high compliment.

"Without a doubt Houston is the best team we have played all season," he said. "They are well-coached and they have some excellent athletes who know what to do with the ball."

Houston coach Guy Lewis said, "Texas Tech has a very tough, very physical ball club. No, it surely was not (a typical 10-point victory)."

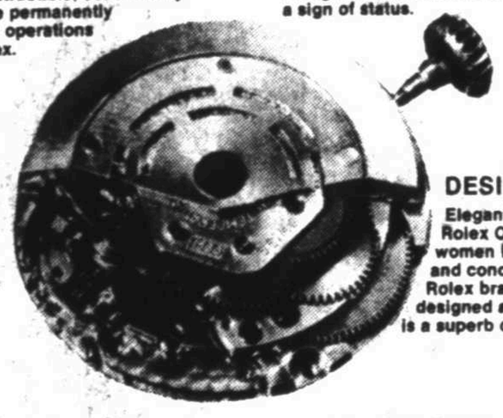
ROLEX

The Rolex Oyster Perpetual

EACH OF ITS QUALITIES REINFORCES THE OTHERS

DEPENDABILITY
The Rolex Oyster Perpetual defies obsolescence. Its classic dependability in a time of disposable possessions is the Rolex hallmark. Virtually indestructible, consistently precise, its performance permanently blends the 162 separate operations required to make a Rolex.

RECOGNITION
Rolex has now received over two million official Swiss Chronometer Certificates—nearly half of all those awarded over the past 60 years. Instantly recognized world-wide, it is—unmistakably—a sign of status.



MYSTIQUE
To identify with excellence is to understand the Rolex mystique. And the preference for Rolex among world leaders in sport, in science, in statesmanship.

DESIGN
Elegant, impregnable, the Rolex Oyster for men and women is a triumph of form and concept. The distinctive Rolex bracelet, as meticulously designed as its Oyster case, is a superb complement.

CRAFTSMANSHIP
Proud heir to a peerless heritage of Swiss handcraftsmanship, the Rolex Chronometer embodies over seven decades of the watchmaker's art. Its Oyster case is carved from a solid block of 18kt. gold or surgical stainless steel. Accuracy of the self-winding movement confers the Chronometer title on each one.

TECHNOLOGY
As each Rolex is submitted to weeks of testing and fine tuning, its unique elements must prove their integrity: the Twinlock crown; the rotor perpetual system; the diamond-cut crystal; and the seamless Oyster case, guaranteed pressure-proof to at least 165 feet.

The Rolex Day-Date, self-winding superlative Chronometer in 18kt. gold with matching President bracelet (1803/8385).

Padres' Dick Williams to be banquet guest

Dick Williams, the fourth winningest active manager in the major leagues, will be among the celebrities attending the fourth annual Midland Sports Banquet at Green Tree Country Club Feb. 9, it was announced by Midland Cubs General Manager Bill Schammel.

Bobby Bragan, former Texas League president and National Association president, will serve as master-of-ceremonies for the festivities which will offer a glittering galaxy of sports personalities.

Williams, who may be most recognizable for his Miller Lite Beer commercials, has been one of baseball's most successful managers and next season the San Diego Padres are counting on him to turn their program around, as he did at Montreal.

Williams, who was named Associated Press' National League manager-of-the-year in 1979, has compiled 1,075 victories in 14 years as a big league manager, only only the Angels' Gene Mauch, the Tigers' Ralph Houck and the Orioles' Earl Weaver have more victories.

Williams led the Boston Red Sox to its "Impossible Dream" pennant in 1967 and won successive world championships with the Oakland A's in 1972 and 1973. He piloted the Montreal Expos into pennant contention the last three seasons, although he was fired by the Expos late last season.

Dick Williams

In addition to being named National League manager of the year, Williams won the honor in the American League in 1967 and in 1971.

Williams' playing career included stops at Brooklyn, Baltimore, Cleveland, Kansas City and Boston. Williams played for Fort Worth in the Texas League in 1948-49-50.

Schammel said tickets for the banquet are available at the Cubs' offices.

Coryell has nightmares about wicked weather

CINCINNATI (AP) — Everybody talks about the weather, but Don Coryell has nightmares about it.

"I don't like the cold and snow," said the head coach of the San Diego Chargers, who came to arctic Cincinnati to meet the Bengals for the American Football Conference title today and a place in the Super Bowl.

"I'm not used to it. Nobody in California is used to it. It makes the football heavier and harder to throw and catch."

On the other hand, Coach Forrest Gregg of the favored Bengals appeared less than upset if not actually delighted. He knows the Chargers live by the pass.

"I don't want my players even thinking about the cold," he said Saturday. "It can be a distraction."

Windblown snow swept into this river town overnight and posed a threat of slippery conditions plus numbing cold for the championship game. Forecasters predict a temperature of 10 to 15 degrees with a wind chill factor of 30 below.

Coryell said his team would be equipped with normal thermal protection plus heavy gear and gloves.

"We have rented a bench heated to keep bottoms warm," he said. "It seats only 20. I expect a scramble."

The Chargers, whose quarterback, Dan Fouts, generally throws between 35 and 40 passes a game, have had ideal conditions for their past eight games — five in sunny San Diego, one each in warm Tampa and Oakland, and the other under a dome in Seattle.

Some of the National Football League's most historic games have been played in the kind of foul, numbing weather predicted for Riverfront Stadium Sunday.

One of the most historic was the 1967 National Football Conference championship game at Green Bay between the Packers and the Dallas Cowboys.

They called it the "Ice Bowl."

The field was frozen and the wind chill factor was 60 below zero. Packers' quarterback Bart Starr sneaked for a touchdown in the closing minutes for a 21-17 victory.

The Packers then went to sunny Miami and beat the Oakland Raiders 33-14 for Coach Vince Lombardi's second straight Super Bowl title.

The 1962 NFL championship game in Yankee Stadium between the New York Giants and Packers also was played in windy, sub-zero temperatures. The Packers won 16-7.

The Giants also were winners in the famous "Sneaker Game," when they donned sneakers at halftime to beat the Chicago Bears 30-13 on the glassy Polo Grounds turf in 1934.

The Cleveland-Oakland playoff game at Cleveland a year ago was another memorable contest.

It was 16 below on the field, but Tom Mees of ESPN cable TV, who was on the roof at the time, recalled that the wind-chill factor there was 50 below zero.

"Jeff Israel, our cameraman, had icicles running down his mustache," Mees said. "He had a can of Coke brought to him and it exploded."

Don Weiss, executive director of the NFL, recalled that films taken of the game were frozen despite relay runners who carried it from the field to fires under the stands to prevent destruction.

"We thought about postponing the game," Weiss said, "but we learned it was going to be 20 below the next day. It was 40 below when we got the airport."

Weiss offered one consolation.

"Extreme heat is worse than extreme cold," he said. "Army experts, making surveys, say deaths result from heat exhaustion."

Bulldogs, Steers split net matches

Midland High opened the 1982 District 5-5A tennis season Saturday by splitting with Big Spring on the MHS courts.

The Bulldogs won the girls' singles 4-2 while the Steers took the boys' singles 4-2. In the doubles, Big Spring took two out of three from the Midland boys while the MHS girls won two of three from the Steers. Overall, the teams won nine matches apiece.

Midland High's next match will be Friday when the Bulldogs travel to Abilene to take on Abilene Cooper.

MHS Boys 2, Big Spring 6
Boys Singles: Duncan Fraser lost to Kip McLaughlin, 7-6, 6-1; Watson LaForce lost to Aubrey Weaver, 6-2, 6-3; Clyde Pine lost to Greg Franklin, 6-2, 6-1; Robert Hinson lost to Cavin McMahon, 6-4, 6-4; Peter Leede defeated Scott Nelson, 6-3, 6-1; Tommy Hill defeated Paul Prudhome, 6-2, 6-4.

Daugherty scores ace

Don Daugherty aced the 110-yard, Par 3, No. 8 hole at Ranchand Hills Country Club Saturday using a nine iron.

Witness to the hole-in-one were Randy Randerson and Oddrev Nelson.

Kermit whips Denver City for Reagan County crown

BIG LAKE — Kermit rode 16 points from Wilson to defeat Denver City 53-47 in the finals of the 51st annual Reagan County Invitational Basketball tournament Saturday. Denver City was led in scoring by the tournaments's Most Valuable Player Gary Nelson with 17 points.

In the battle for third place, Crane slipped by Reagan County, 58-48, behind 14 points from Tim Lowe. Thomas Thomason led the Owls with 14 tallies.

The Yellowjackets of Kermit advanced into the finals by whipping Crane 47-42. Yett led Kermit with 14 points while Lowe and Ed Jones netted 12 each for the Golden Cranes.

Nelson scored 18 points to guide Denver City to a 60-53 semifinal victory over Reagan County. Ed Mendez fired in 14 for the Owls.

In the consolation finals, Ozona defeated Coleman 64-63. Borrego led Ozona with 18 points while David Jenkins gunned in 25 for the losers.

Ozona advanced into the consolations finals by stopping Bronte behind Borrego's 13 points. Schoenfield netted 13 for Bronte.

Will 'other' game still have impact?

BY WAYNE LOCKWOOD
Copley News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — At the time, it was little more than a mild curiosity — one of those Any Given Sunday things.

In the sixth week of the 1981 National Football League season, the San Francisco 49ers discomfited the Dallas Cowboys 45-14.

There was some stirring of interest. The 49ers, after all, had gone 8-24 over the previous two seasons. The Cowboys were, after all, the Cowboys.

Still, these things happen. No big deal.

It has grown larger as the weeks pass, however. The 49ers, 3-2 when they last faced the Cowboys, have won 11 of 12 games since that point to emerge as the most successful team in the NFL.

Their 13-3 regular-season record (compared to Dallas' 12-4) and that earlier victory are the reasons Coach Bill Walsh's surprising athletes will enjoy the home-field advantage when they engage the Cowboys today in the NFC championship game. And there is no home-field advantage quite as advantageous as that of soggy Candlestick Park.

CLEARLY, that surprising game in the sixth week of the season has had a considerable impact upon what followed. Will it continue to have an impact today?

The answer is yes, no and maybe, depending upon who offers it.

Everyone is in agreement about one thing, though. The 49ers totally dominated the first game, the worst loss for Dallas since 1970.

San Francisco outgained the Cowboys, 440 yards to 192. Dallas had three turnovers. Tony Dorsett gained 21 yards in nine carries. Forty-Niner quarterback Joe Montana passed for 279 yards. Fred Dean, newly arrived from San Diego, sacked Dallas quarterbacks three times.

It was a thorough piece of work.

But how much does it mean nearly three months later?

Very little, in the opinion of veteran 49er linebacker and coach on the field Jack Reynolds, who is believed to be the only player to participate in nine straight NFL playoffs (eight of them with the Rams).

"I don't know who we played that day," says Reynolds of the earlier meeting. "But I know damn well it wasn't the Dallas Cowboys."

AMEN, say the Cowboys.

"I didn't even know who half these guys were when we played them the first time," Dallas defensive end Ed Jones says. "But we'll be ready for them this time."

"We went into that last game in a mental fog," Cowboy Coach Tom Landry says. "We just weren't ready to play."

Needless to say, he does not expect that to happen again. Especially in the playoffs. Neither does Reynolds, who has learned the hard way about such things.

"I've seen that happen to Dallas before, where they just weren't themselves for some reason," he says.

"Last year, when I was with the Rams, we met Dallas on Monday night, and I think they were looking ahead to their next game against Philadelphia. So we beat the heck out of them.

"In the playoffs, though, they beat the dog out of us 35-13. So that's one reason I'm not paying any attention to how Dallas played against us earlier in the year.

"When they came out here earlier in the season, they seemed flat. For some reason, their intensity just didn't seem to be there. It was an eerie feeling because I could tell.

"Going into that game, I felt that if we played as hard as we could play we would be lucky to stay within 10 points of them," Reynolds says. "But I was counting on Dallas playing Dallas football. That's not what we saw, and I'm sure I'm not saying anything that the Cowboys don't already know. I know we'll be seeing Dallas football this Sunday."

The open class boxers will be competing in a bout at the Floyd Gwinn Gymnasium in Odessa on Jan. 21-22 and will host West Texas boxers against Ft. Bliss at the National Guard Armory on Jan. 30.

Aggies pull upset over No. 10 Tulsa

LAS CRUCES (AP) — Senior forward Jaime Pena scored 20 points and three other players notched double-figures as New Mexico State stunned 10th ranked Tulsa 74-66 in a Missouri Valley Conference game Saturday.

The Aggies' win snapped a eight-game winning streak for the Hurricanes, who dropped to 9-2 overall and 1-1 in conference play. New Mexico State now stands at 8-5 overall and 2-1 in district play.

Trailing 55-53 with 7:56 left in the contest, the Aggies held the Hurricanes scoreless for almost 5 minutes, while taking a 61-55 lead with 3:40 left on a baseline jump shot by Pena.

The Aggies largest lead was 11 points, 71-60, with 56 seconds left to play, despite Tulsa hitting 58 percent of its shots in the second half and 55 percent for the game. NMSU shot 50 percent for the contest.

In the first half, the Hurricanes broke to an early 17-9 lead, before the Aggies came back to take a 31-28 halftime lead.

Following Pena's 20 point outing, for New Mexico State was center Renault Moultrie with 14 points and guards Steve Colter and Ernest Patterson with 13 and 12, respectively.

Forward Paul Pressey paced Tulsa with 14 points. Steve Harris added 13, Mike Anderson 12 and Greg Stewart 11.

Kofler's arm lifts West

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — San Diego State's Matt Kofler threw two touchdown passes to Brigham Young's Dan Plater, who totaled nine receptions, to lead the West to a 20-13 victory Saturday in the 57th Shrine East-West Game.

Texas kicker John Goodson contributed two field goals for the West, from 47 and 48 yards, and averaged 44 yards on eight punts.

Goodson's 47-yard field goal, late in the second period, broke a 7-7 tie and sent the West ahead to stay in the college football all-star game played before 75,000 fans at Stanford Stadium.

Kofler hit Plater on a 19-yard touchdown pass in the first period and connected with the BYU star on a 20-yard scoring toss in the third quarter. Plater, named the game's outstanding offensive player, was one short of the East-West record with his nine receptions. He totaled 120 yards.

Michigan running back Stanley Edwards scored two touchdowns for the East, which drew even at 7-7 after he plunged 2 yards to score in the second quarter. Edwards' second touchdown came in the final period when he caught a 4-yard pass from Georgia's Buck Belue.

The East trailed 17-13 after the touchdown pass, but Goodson's second field goal made the margin seven points. An East drive late in the game ended at the West 34, where Florida State quarterback Rick Stockstill threw an incomplete pass on fourth down.

In the final minute of the first half, the East blew a scoring opportunity set up on a 45-yard interception return by Alabama's Jim Bob Harris to the West 11.

Stockstill was sacked for a loss of 15 yards by Texas linebacker Bruce Scholtz, and a fumble by Edwards was recovered by Kansas linebacker Kyle McNorton.

Miami's Larry Brodsky gained 110 yards on pass receptions for the East. His five catches included one for 48 yards that set up his team's second touchdown.

McMahon, Abercrombie do hula

HONOLULU (AP) — Brigham Young's Jim McMahon teamed with Walter Abercrombie of Baylor for three touchdown pass plays as the West All-Stars came from behind to defeat the East 26-23 in the Hula Bowl Saturday.

MaMahon, the All-American quarterback, passed for 330 yards, a Hula Bowl record, after getting off to a slow start in the first half of the 36th annual college football game.

Abercrombie's three TD receptions, another Hula Bowl record, earned him the game's Most Valuable Player title.

Behind 23-13, the West was pinned back on its own three-yard line in the final quarter when McMahon began his first bombing attack, passing 12 times in a 97-yard drive that ended with a touchdown pass to Abercrombie.

Because of a Hula Bowl rule that gives the trailing team the option of receiving the kickoff, McMahon was able to go right back to work from the 20-yard line. After six plays, he hit Abercrombie again for the final score.

The East jumped out to an early lead as Ohio State quarterback Art Schlichter moved the team 58 yards in 10 plays before settling for a 22-yard field goal by Ohio State's Bob Atha.

Gordon Wood to file suit against ABC

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A lawyer representing Brownwood High School football coach Gordon Wood says he will file suit Monday against American Broadcasting Cos., alleging that ABC-TV damaged Wood's reputation by misidentifying him as the coach roughing up players in a film clip.

Gary Stephens said the suit, to be filed in San Angelo federal court, stems from Wood's appearance on a September "Good Morning America" show.

In the film clip, Stephens said, a coach "grabbed hold of players' jerseys and slapped them up beside the head." Program host David Hartman identified the coach in the film as Wood.

AN ABC executive apologized and said the incident was a "crude attempt to ambush" the coach. Hartman also apologized on the air.

Stephens, a Houston attorney, and Wood said the film clip was from a 1974 documentary on violence in football and was actually of a Florida coach, the Austin American-Statesman reported Saturday.

"The whole thing was a setup," Wood, 68, told the newspaper. "I got an invitation to be on the program, and I thought I was representing high school football and my fellow coaches. Instead, I was seated next to a young boy from Dallas who had been paralyzed playing high school football, with the implication that this was what Texas high school football produced."

"After the clip was run, Hartman said, 'Coach, how do you justify this sort of treatment?' I told him the man in the clip was not me and if any of our coaches treated boys that way they'd be out of town by sundown."

George Merlis, executive producer of "Good Morning America," said the show "was a violation of our network's policy not to set people up ... I feel very bad about it and I'm sorry to the coach and I'm sorry to the people of Brownwood.

"I'm more sorry for the damage it's done to the credibility of 'Good Morning America.'"

Stephens said ABC had refused to allow Wood to make a second appearance on the program or to arrange for Hartman to read a prepared statement on the show.

In addition to seeking "in excess of $10,000" in damages, Stephens said he plans to ask that Wood be allowed to make another appearance on the program, or for Hartman to read a statement.

Stephens said Wood gave the money — "$100, I think it was" — he got for appearing on the show to the injured Dallas player, Jim Wallgren, 16.

"I went up there to represent Texas coaches and I feel like I'm not done yet," said Wood.

In a 40-year high school coaching career, Wood's teams have won 374 games, making him the winningest coach in the nation.

Stadler strangles Tucson field

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Craig Stadler fired a 4-under-par 66 and took a stranglehold 7-stroke lead Saturday after the third round of the $300,000 Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open, the kickoff event on the 10-month pro golf tour.

His leading margin was the largest third-round lead since Tom Watson had an 8-shot edge 2½ years ago in the Heritage Classic. Stadler's 54-hole total of 195, 15 under par on the Randolph Park Municipal course, was the lowest since Curtis Strange had the same total in the 1980 Houston Open.

There's another 18 holes to go, but Stadler's spectacular scoring in the Arizona sunshine had his opponents all but conceding the title and the $54,000 first prize to the stocky man who, quietly and without fanfare, has established himself as one of the tour's most accomplished players in the last two seasons.

"Unless he does something crazy, like break his putter on the first hole tomorrow, we're in trouble," said Jay Haas, the man in second place.

"You have to be realistic about it," Haas said. "He could shoot 70 or 71 withou playing very well, and I'd have to shoot something like 63 or 64 to catch him."

"It's pretty much a one-horse race," acknowledged Greg Powers, one of the closest pursuers.

Multi-year contract ruin game—Robby

(Compiled from R-T wire services)

Frank Robinson blames multiyear contracts and skyrocketing salaries for today's lack of desire among athletes. "A lot of players arrive at the ballpark when it's almost time to go out on the field and when the game's over, they rush to get out of uniform. I'm not knocking them. We still have great players, but they don't think about the game as much or apply themselves. We had to, or we didn't make a living."

Robinson noted that some current players ask to renegotiate long-term contracts two or three years ahead of time, claiming they can't concentrate until such pressure is relieved. "If they think that's pressure, they should play without a multiyear contract, knowing that next year's salary depends on what you do this year. That's pressure."...

Detroit Tiger GM Jim Campbell has rescinded restrictions placed on Grand Rapids Pres s sports writer Vern Plagenhoef. Campbell was angered at a story Plagenhoef wrote disclosing Manager Sparky Anderson's private — and less than flattering — evaluations of his players and told the writer he would no longer be permitted in the stadium dining room or on team charter planes or buses. He also told Plagenhoef the club's traveling secretary no longer would aid him in booking flights and reservations with the team.

Campbell hinted that Plagenhoef came by the report illegally. However, the reporter maintained that the report was leaked to him by a team employee. Campbell said that Mike Lloyd, editor of The Grand Rapids Press, notified him that Plagenhoef gave him (Lloyd) the name of the Tiger employee and that Lloyd has talked to that worker who confided the confidential document was given to the writer with knowledge it would be used in a newspaper story...

Montreal Outfielder Andre Dawson says the $2 million salary catcher Gary Carter is "a little ridiculous" and could cause dissension. Carter, has one year remaining on a five-year contract believed to pay him $230,000 per season. "Not taking anything away from Carter, he's the best catcher in baseball," said Dawson, "but something is going to have to give because if it (Carter's contract negotiation) carries on into spring training, there could be a lot of tension and animosity."...

South Carolina named Richard Bell, a Gamecock assistant under Jim Carlen since 1975, as head football coach. Bell took the job with mixed emotions after serving under Carlen as an aide two years at West Virginia and five at Texas Tech. "You don't know how much I owe to Jim Carlen. I'm sorry that it's happened this way." Bell, a native of Little Rock, Ark., began his college coaching career 19 years ago at the VMI. He and Carlen were assistants together at Georgia Tech...

Arizona basketball coach Fred Snowden, who will resign at the season's end to become assistant AD, said it was not due to reports that linked him with an alleged campus "slush fund." Th NCAA is looking into alleged violations that could lead to probation. Snowden, in his 10th year, is 5-7 after two straight losing seasons...

Ray Meyer hits 1,000 games

CHICAGO (AP) — Guard Kenny Patterson made a clutch defensive play with 1:20 remaining and Bernard Randolph sank two free throws as DePaul edged Dayton 71-69 Saturday in the 1,000th game for Blue Demons Coach Ray Meyer.

Meyer, who began his career at DePaul in 1942, becomes the fifth college coach in history to reach the 1,000 mark in games coached. This was his 662nd victory.

The fifth-ranked Blue Demons, 12-1, did fend off the Flyers, 9-3, until the final four seconds when Dayton's reserve senior center, George Morrison, missed two free throws.

With 26 seconds remaining, Skip Dillard, who led DePaul with 18 points, was called for traveling and the ball went over to Dayton.

Snow chains? Which is the front and which is the back?

Christmas Sleigh Ride in the Rockies

And snow came to the pass in Colorado

By TED BATTLES

There was no disguising it. The limp was unmistakable and the Doomsayer gloated triumphantly, "Went skiing anyway, eh? I told ye 'twas foolhardy for someone of your age to go about behaving like a teenager. And ye see what you got for it."

The reprimand was accepted without protest rather than debate the issue. Besides he'd never believe the truth.

True enough, it was a limp, but not from skiing. While standing in line for the Cotton Bowl press elevator, the handle on the portable typewriter broke and it fell with a yelp-eliciting thud across the toes.

While Midland's Flatlanders will find plenty of snow at Colorado's Copper Mountain for Texas Ski Week, beginning today, skiers were biting their fingernails over marginal conditions a week before Christmas.

ALTHOUGH INJURY on the slopes was escaped, the holiday ski trip was not without its moments of travail and despair, starting with the wipe out of plans to billet at Taos. A check with Red River revealed 25 inches, all right, but it was all on the beginner's slopes. Santa Fe wasn't much better, so it was back to loyal, faithful, trustworthy, honest, and, above all, reliable Wolf Creek, a snowstorm in a sea of clear blue tranquillity.

Wolf Creek was the skiers' salvation the year before and it offered the best available skiing once again. In fact, en route a snowstorm struck the southern Rockies dumping an additional foot on the Continental Divide slopes.

PICKING UP the rest of the family at Albuquerque International, Santa Fe was reached at dusk and at Espangol it was discovered that the gravel that blew off the truck going the opposite direction in the sand storm at Denver City had knocked out a headlight.

A new unit was purchased and installed by the dim light of a shopping center parking lot to the accompaniement of chattering teeth.

On a steep ice-snow glazed incline between Chama and Pagosa Springs, potential disaster when an unruly crowd of 10 or 12 elk crossed the highway like a gang of sailors on the way back to ship following their first liberty in six months. If the vehicle hadn't been proceeding cautiously, it could have been a calamitous situation.

BUT THE true test of the dedicated skier was yet to come. 10 to 15 degree below zero mornings which required a 20 minute car warmup and at this time of year. Wolf Creek Pass requires chains. In fact, violators trying to scale the treacherous road without snow tires or chains when the warning signs up are risk a $50 fine.

Unfortunately, snow conditions at that time precluded our dreamed of a ski week of Telluride, Purgatory, Wolf Creek and Taos, but the proximity of Purgatory made it an irressistable lure for "one day, just to see what it's like."

As it turned out, the upper slopes were passable, but the lower slopes were icy, hay strewn in exposed areas, making the descent at the end of the day hazardous and fatiguing.

WHILE THE snow conditions failed to match those at Wolf Creek, the scope and variety of runs and the number of crowd-dispersing lifts to remote areas was enough to make a first timer at Purgatory want to come back when snow conditions were ideal.

Even so, the snow covered mountain scenery snatched the breath. Could the Alps be anymore spectacular?

Another plus for Purgatory is the Powderhouse, a two-level mountaintop restaurant which offers the most complete menu we've encountered at any resort —although our experience admittedly is limited—and from where one can enjoy a respite with a brandy-spiked hot cider while marveling at those majestic mountains across the valley through the picture windows.

No, I m not a TCU alumnus.

A minus is the Powderhouse PA, which blares wild music, intruding on the splendor of nature's awesome majesty.

Purgatory, we'll be back, but for this trip, Wolf Creek was where the best snow was at. And it's easy to understand how the mountain averages 400 inches and up a year. One day was finished in a snow squall, but once out of the Pass area, Pagosa Springs was sunny, clear with no trace of falling snow. The weather reports didn't even carry a mention of the storm.

Spow fell throughout Christmas Day and by mid afternoon had thinned out the crowd. In the last hour, it was possible to make five runs down the mountain and snow conditions improved by the minute as the powder piled up.

WITH ONLY one chair lift and a poma lift to the powder area atop the mountain, Wolf Creek isn't built for big crowds, but they'd had better start considering what to do about the increasing number of skiers who have discovered the area in the last two years. Once again, Texans predominated, many whose original plans were for a week at Taos or Red River.

Expansion plans are on the boards, but are dependent upon successful negotiations with the Forestry Service. Another lift is penciled in for the present ski area, but, surprisingly, it is said to be dependent first on expansion of rest room facilities.

Wolf Creek was our first experience with a poma lift, one hangs on to a pole and is dragged up the mountain, and it can be as exciting a run through a twisting glade. Until one gets the "feel" of it, it can be treacherous. Skiers fall down and can come sliding back into the skier behind, which means trouble for everybody, so usually a fallen skier scrambles to get out of the way, sometimes no easy task on a steep incline.

And while our ski form may not be Jean Claude Killy or Phil Mahre, on a mountain where imaginative headware runs rampant, we were voted an unofficial first place, although some envious souls snickered and a son said, "You look like a buffalo." Ski lift operators at Wolf Creek declared, "If we were giving a prize for best hat, you'd win it."

Conservative vote leans to Cowboys

TED BATTLES

BATTLE SCENE

If you are voting conservative, stick with the Dallas Cowboys and Cincinnati Bengals in Sunday's National Football League championship games.

Quarterback Ken Anderson is enjoying his finest season as a pro and as a result the Bengals are the most consistent team in the American Football Conference. Solid as a rock and, what's more, they are playing in the cold, clammy confines over Riverfront Stadium today.

San Diego, on the other hand, relies heavily on an explosive but highly erratic aerial attack and its prime running threat is Chuck Muncie, who ,'tis said, would never make it as a pickpocket, not with those hands.

WHILE IT'S true the Chargers beat Don Shula's steady Miami Dolphins last week, it was in Florida, blessed with a salubrious winter climate, like San Diego.

You can imagine what will happen to San Diego's receivers and Muncie in the raw, frigid Cincinnati ice box.

San Francisco was the Cincinnati of the National Football Conference, a team whose consistency bred the best record in the NFC. Still, Dallas is the grizzled playoff veteran. Most Cowboy fans can't remember or even imagine the excitement that was generated when Dallas earned it's first Runner Up Bowl berth back in the mid-1960s. And if they did, they'd deny it out of shame. The Cowboys have lived in the lap of playoff luxury for so long, they don't even want to be reminded of their days in the NFL's ghetto.

Then, too, the 49ers made one critical mistake this season. They beat the Cowboys, 45-14, during the regular season. You can't blame San Francisco for rubbing it in after what the Cowboys did to them in Dallas the year before, but the 49ers know what they've done...that's why they are whistling on the way to the game.

IN 1977, Dallas pinned a similar humiliation on Pittsburgh in the final exhibition game and the Steelers, then still a force to be reckoned with, came back to extract revenge later in the season. Even after the exhibition game, there was no gloating in the Cowboy locker room. They knew all they had done was provide the Steelers with incentive for their regular season game.

NOW THAT we've made it easy for you, just a word of caution.

After all of the painstaking review of statistics, emotion and motivation, not to mention talent and the matchups-to-watch, just remember Wally Henry and Wesley Walker.

Walker dropped three passes, including two that would have been touchdowns, as the New York Jets lost to the Buffalo Bills. Wally Henry fumbled a punt and kickoff and the Giants were on their way to a playoff upset over this year's Designated NFC Super Bowl team.

LOOK UP AT TAX SHELTER

Put this newspaper down (for just a second, please) and look up. Go ahead, we'll wait until you come back.

Okay, what did you see? A roof, right? Well, if it was your own roof on your own house, we have news for you: You're already into tax shelters.

Think about it. Your house allows you to deduct items (interest and property tax payments) from your federal income tax return; it helps you preserve capital; it even creates capital growth (as the house appreciates in value). Thus, that which shelters you and your family from nasty outside elements also shelters you from the nasty tax man who always cometh by April 15th.

many people think tax shelters are only for the very wealthy, but inflation and a graduated income tax and growth in two-earner households are putting many people where they ought to at least think about the possibility of sheltering some of their inco e. Real estate (your own) is a good, sound, safe way to start.

Lady finds trapping can be fun

By BILL SCHULZ

NEWINGTON, Ga. (AP) — Each morning for 2½ months of winter, Vivian Pryor rises early, cooks breakfast for her husband and two sons, then gathers her gear and sets out to work.

She works a trapline.

On a normal working day, Pryor, 40, and her partner, Buck, who lives five miles down the road, have about 200 traps out on farms along the south edge of the Savannah River basin.

Her husband, Lloyd, trapped when he was younger, but now he runs the farms and seldom traps with her, she said.

"My husband and I do not get along quite as well on a trapline as Buck and I do," she said. "Lloyd thinks I should do everything like he wants it, and I know I am hard-headed and bull-headed, and I want to do it the way I want it."

Usually she and Buck bring home a dozen to 15 animals, including bobcat, raccoon and fox. The price for beaver ms so low, about $6 per skin, they don't usually bother with them.

WORKING the trapline is a daily job. There is no time off for holidays when the traps are out.

Pryor is president of the Georgia Trappers Association and one of an estimated 1½ million trappers in the United States.

She regularly looks for signs of animals, particularly for her favorite prey, the bobcat. "You know when there's a cat in the area, or a litter of cats in the area. I'd say we've got a half-dozen families on the place and I can tell you now where they've been raised this year," she said.

Her work started early this year, when she renovated and insulated an old barn to use as a drying shed. Dried pelts bring a little more than green pelts. She hired two boys to do her skinning this year but still does much of it herself.

IN NOVEMBER, the traps came out.

"We have to boil our traps and dye them," she said. "We dye them a black, dark color so they will be easier to cover. It takes a while to get all your traps out and separated and cleaned up, and all the rust off of them — probably a couple of days."

She said she owns about 300 traps.

A trap must be boiled each time an animal has been trapped in it to get rid of the odor. Then the trapper should handle it only when wearing gloves that are used for no other purpose.

TRAPPING requires miles of walking each day. Pryor, who is in her sixth season, said she always has enjoyed being outdoors, hunting and fishing. Her brother-in-law taught her how to trap. Very few trappers, she said, are in the business full-time. For most, it's extra income.

KENNY REDIN'S

Fin & Feather

Wow, if 1981 wasn't a wild year for outdoor sportsmen!

Waterfowl provided the major stories during an eventful 1981 and the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department had its share of challenges.

A LATE-summer pesticide scare, a courtroom challenge to the nontoxic shot rule and establishment of a new state waterfowl stamp combined to keep ducks and geese in the news during the year.

Fortunately, the discovery of residues of the pesticide Endrin in waterfowl and other wildlife species in Montana during the summer proved to have little effect on Texas' waterfowl hunting seasons.

Laboratory analysis of 201 ducks collected to date from across the state revealed no detectable amounts of Endrin.

Pesticide use is just one threat to waterfowl. Another, lead poisoning, also made the outdoor news during 1981.

The TPWD established a nontoxic shot zone for the 1981-82 seasons made up of all or portions of six Southeast Texas counties. The possession or use of lead-loaded shotgun shells for waterfowl hunting is illegal within the zone.

The zone is inended to reduce the incidence of lead poisoning in waterfowl, which pick up lead shot pellets.

A SUIT against the department sought to halt enforcement of the nontoxic shot rule. The petitioners claimed in part that the nontoxic shot zone discriminated against hunters in that area, since waterfowlers in other parts of the state still could use lead loads. A state district court in Austin ruled in favor of the department and the steel shot law was enforced.

Waterfowl hunters had a special opportunity to assist their beloved resource for the first time this fall with establishment of the first state waterfowl stamp. The $5 stamps are required of all waterfowl hunters, in addition to a valid hunting license if required. Federal law also requires hunters to have a $7.50 federal waterfowl stamp.

BY MID-season, more than 100,000 state stamps had been sold, and the total was expected to surpass the 140,000. Revenues from stamp sales will be used for waterfowl management and research as well as acquisition, lease or development ofhabitat.

There were a number of other noteworthy activities by the department's Wildlife Division during the year. These included:

During 1981, a record total of 16,000 ring-necked pheasants were stocked in 21 counties. These included new areas within Calhoun, Guadalupe and Williamson Counties. Also, pheasants were released for the first time in Comanche, Hamilton, Hudspeth and McLennan Counties.

A spring turkey season was held in 72 counties, the largest number of counties ever to have a spring turkey season. The total will increase to 127 counties in 1982.

Biologists brought 92 pronghorn antelope from Colorado and stocked them in King, Shackelford and Foard Counties in West Texas. In exchange, the department sent 50 Rio Grande turkeys and a shipment of catfish and crappie to Colorado.

A total of 23 eastern turkeys from Oklahoma were stocked in Red River county, and eight from Mississippi were stocked in Newton County.

Two new wildlife management areas were opened featuring public hunting. They are Granger W.M.A. on the shores of new Granger Lake, Williamson County and Choke Canyon W.M.A.

AN OUTSTANDING hunting season was enjoyed by the state's hunters. Favorable weather conditions allowed turkey and quail to have good survival. The same results were noticed on the High Plains pheasant populations. More birds were reported on the High Plains than ever before. Also, quail limits were increased to 20 per day in some counties. Deer hunting was also good in most areas, with the animals in unusually good body condition. Antler development was also above average.

The 1981 outdoor sport hunting seasons, research done by the department and conservationists throughout the Lone Star State made last year one of the best on record.

You may complain about our Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, or you my praise them, but whatever your case may be, we've got the best fish and game department in the United States.

WEST TEXAS OUTDOORS

Helpful tips for angler

BY ROD N. REELE

Wind makes fishing tougher because it's difficult to control your boat and to see what's below the surface. A simple rule worth following is: In white-capping winds, fish shallower waters into the wind because fish feed in currents caused by high winds. It also can be hard to located fish with water levels fluctuating as much as 30 to 50 feet in some reservoirs.

On a rising condition try fishing the shallows. When the lake is falling, try larger stream inlets and below dams in the fast water...

There are times when a lightweight, responsive bobber such as a quill, or slim foamed plastic, can beat your own sense of feel for telling you that a light biter has taken the baited hook. It's fun, especially for a beginner, to watch a bobber snitch on a crafty fish...

MEMBERS of the pike family have a habit of following a lure all the way to you. Here's how to outsmart these wary rascals: Before you lift the lure from the water, give it several figure eights alongside the boat with your rod tip about a foot under water. Be sure the drag is set light enough so a big fish won't pop your line when it attacks...

Bass fishing with a flying rod can be as exciting and rewarding as a man can stand. Especially, if you stay with a floating deer-hair mouse or moth and tease the fish along close to shore cover such as weeds, lily pads and reeds. Don't need to be an expert. Just use short and accurate casts...

THREE COVE samples at Lake E.V. Spence by marine biologists of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department promise excellent fishing next spring.

Not only were census counts encouraging, but the condition of the game fish was uniformly good to excellent, according to Bill Follis, in charge of the evaluation which is part of the annual statewide striped bass study. In addition, the forage fish crop appeared to be the best in years.

Biologists blocked off an acre of water in three separate coves and obtained a complete fish population count as to variety and size. There were 55 stripers per acre, 10 of which came from the 1981 stocking and which attained a length of 11 inches and weighed a half pound.

Of the remainder, there was an even distribution of 3, 4, 7, 10 and 12 pounders, indicating no skips in any of the stocking years.

With a count of 30-35 per acre, the outlook for crappie fishing is good, especially since many of the crappie already are a half pound in weight and because of the abundance of thread-fin shad, which are small enough for the smaller game fish to utilize.

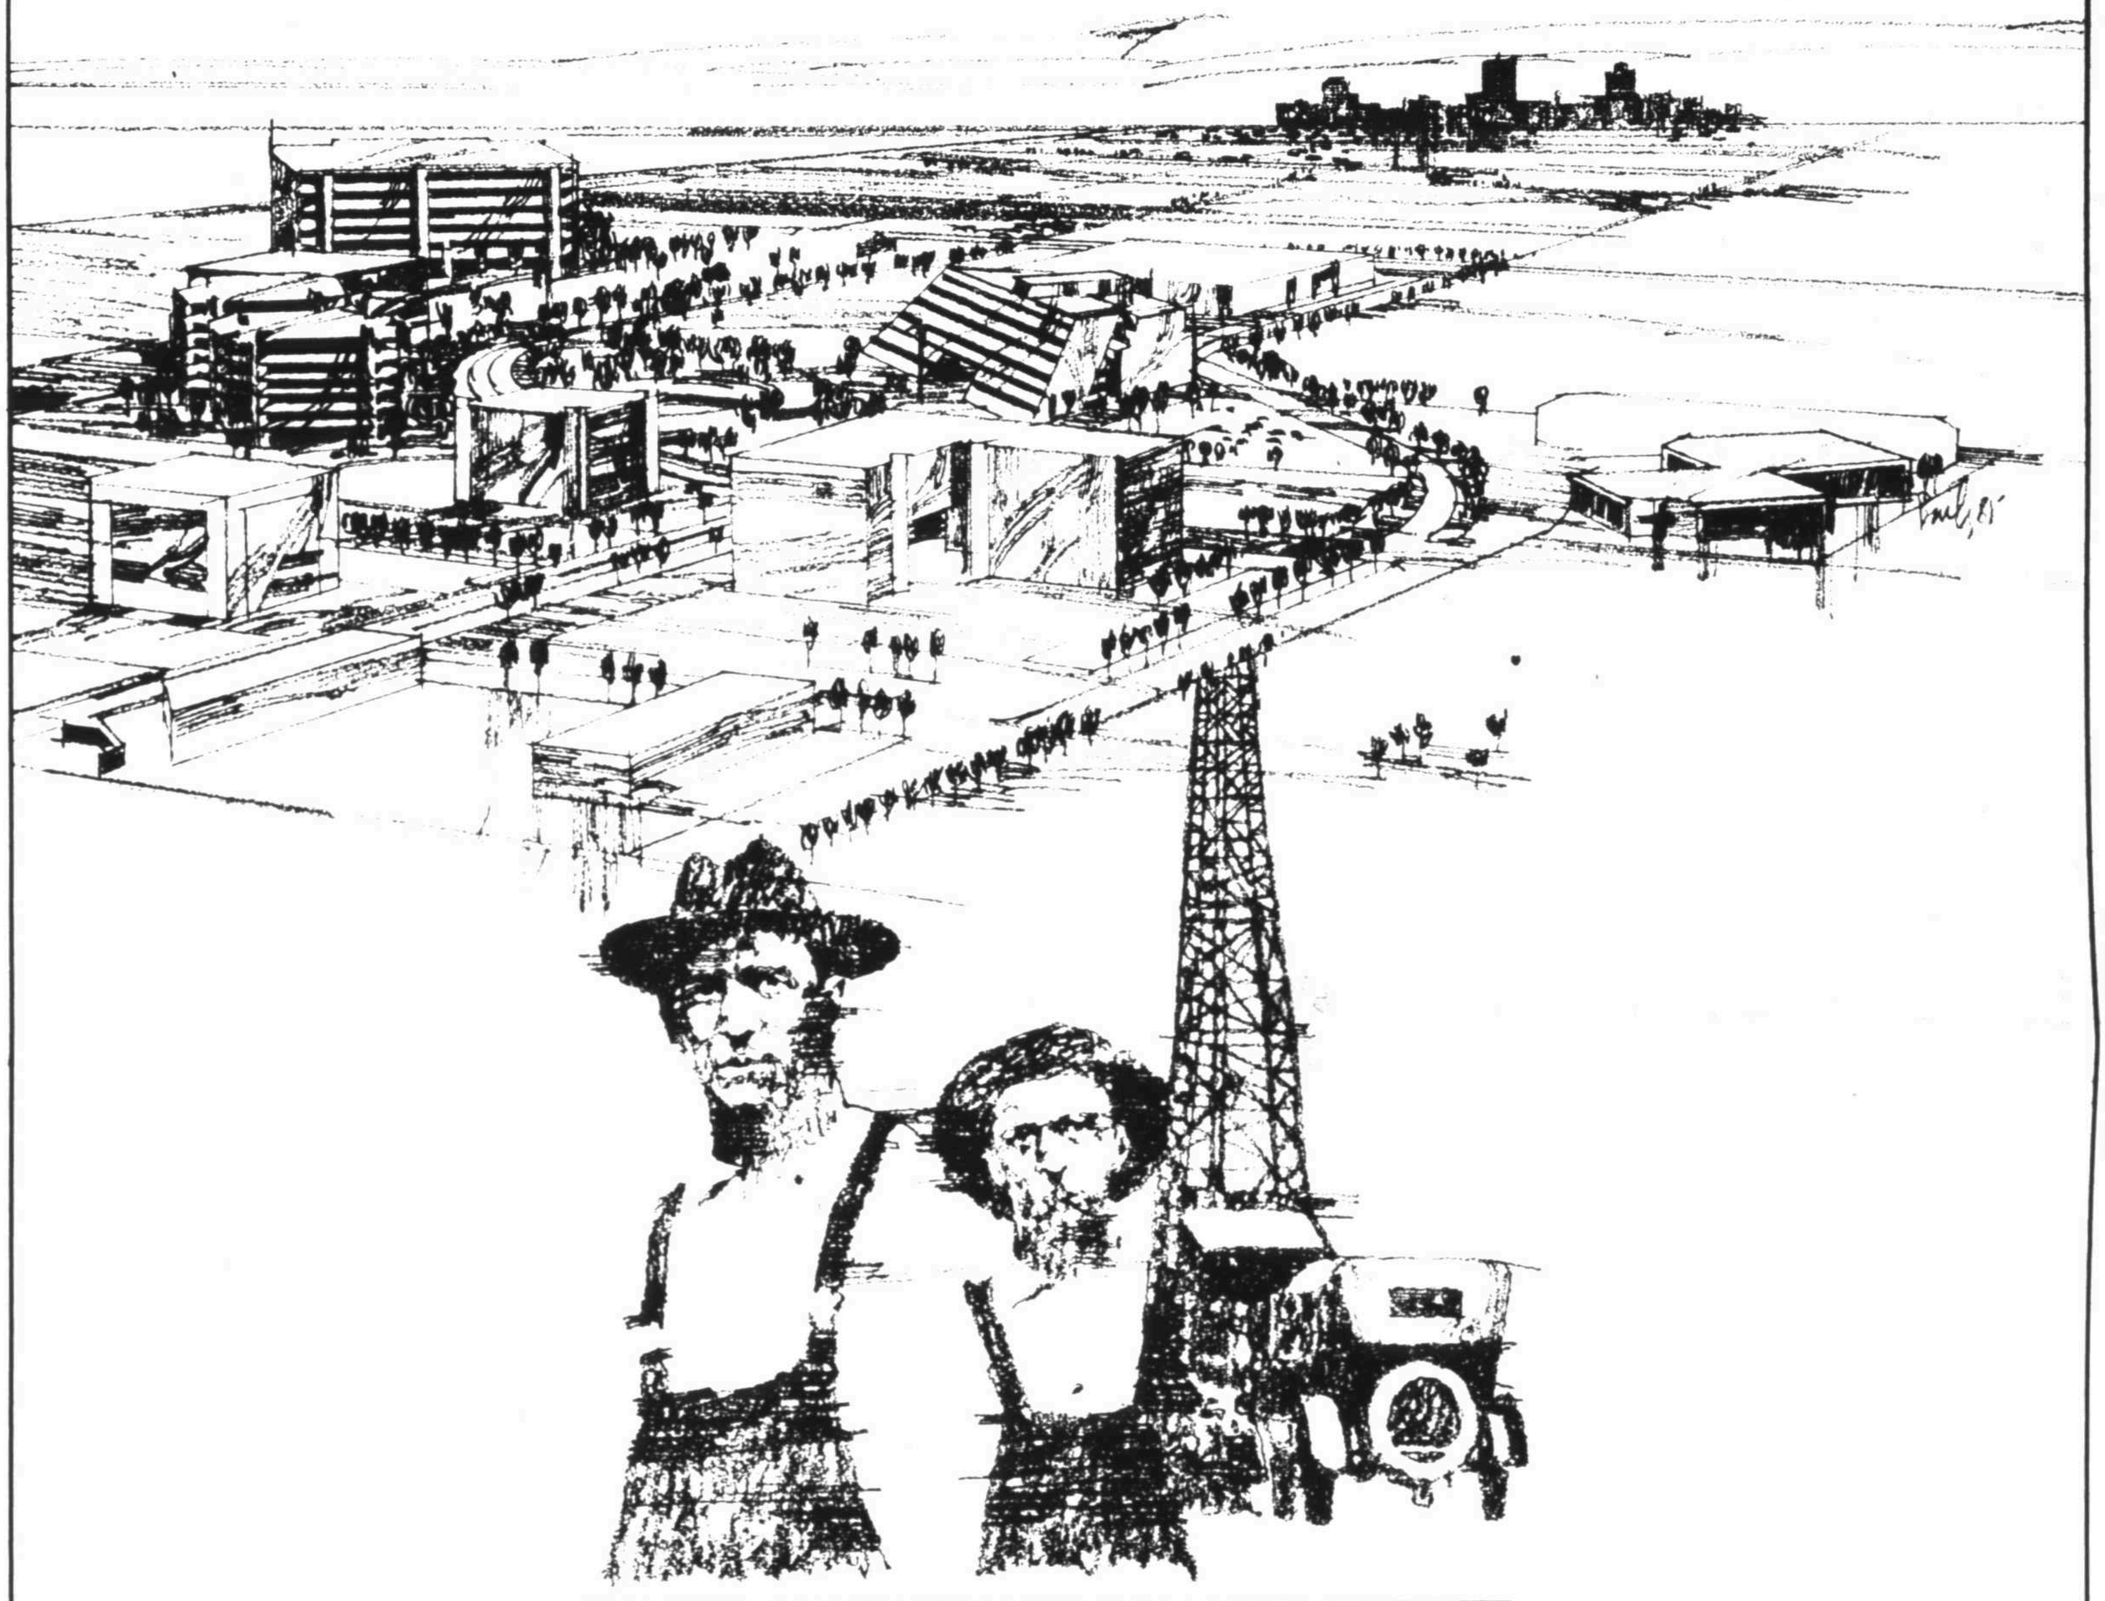
UNTIL CLAYDESTA PLAZA, THEY SAID THE BEAUTY OF THIS LAND WAS WHAT WAS UNDER IT.



THE BEAUTY AND THE BEST. ClayDesta Plaza is land. 175 acres dedicated to be the best business environment west of the Mississippi. And the best direction to take your business into the future. It's adjacent to AirPark and just ten minutes north from the heart of Midland. The city that showed Texas what a little oil and a lot of planning can do for a dusty West Texas town.

WE DUG A LITTLE DEEPER. And we found what Midland really needed. A master-planned business environment where business can grow as big as Texas. A convenient and flexible office community where tenants have the option of leasing pre-designed office space. Or have space built to their specifications. A business community with abundant free parking. A 3½-acre central park. A bank, hotel, restaurants and convenient retail shopping. All highly accessible.

THE GRASS IS GREENER IN MIDLAND. That's right. Grass. Tree-lined boulevards. Rolling berms covered with shrubs and flowers. And a beautifully landscaped park. ClayDesta Plaza promises to be a lush environment for business growth. Its master planning creates an elegant yet functional business environment. It offers perfect settings where you can relax during a busy day.

HOME ON THE RANGE. For Gulf Oil. Their building is to become headquarters for Gulf Western Division. For Southland Royalty, Williams Accounting and ClayDesta Financial Center, home of ClayDesta National Bank (under organization), the Plaza will be their home also.

In all, ClayDesta Plaza is projected to develop 10 mid-rise buildings and 25 smaller facilities.

TALL TEXAS TOWERS. It's ClayDesta Towers. Two six-story office towers joined by an atrium mall and housing a convenient log library on the lower level. It offers you flexibility. Convenience. And competitive prices.

So come see what's happening at ClayDesta Plaza, and ClayDesta Towers. You'll see that the West Texas plains are now just plain beautiful.

Portofino is jewel of Italian seacoast

By LOUIS B. FLEMING
Los Angeles Times

PORTOFINO, Italy — The walk may be the loveliest of many that tempt travelers along the Italian coast, for it combines isolation, serenity and extraordinary views with a taste of history.

A lighthouse, with a platform below open to the sea on three sides, is the destination.

Along the way are a castle, wall-lined lane, woods and gardens, silent after the sounds of the village.

Unlike most Italian seacoast sites, Portofino has managed to isolate the automobile from its fabled waterfront. The parking areas, hardly adequate for the midsummer weekend crowds, are hidden from view at the port. So there is something of the feeling of Capri, liberated from the internal combustion engine.

Nevertheless, some escape from the action can be welcome. That escape is offered by the delightful path to the lighthouse at Punta Portofino.

The stroll can be managed in a leisurely hour, but the time conceals the exertion: A third of the walking is up and down steep steps. This is perpendicular country.

Partway to the point is the Fortezza San Giorgio, a walled castle with a view from its flowering terrace to the port below. Each room in the centuries-old building offers different vistas of sea, shore and woods.

The Italian word for lighthouse is faro, likewise the word for automobile headlamp, and the faro at Portofino is a headlamp indeed. A broad visitors' terrace below the light is arrayed with benches on which to recover from the steep approach while taking in the whole sweep of the Gulf of Rapallo, one of the loveliest on the Italian Riviera.

There is a challenging detour for the intrepid, long flights of stairs down to a tiny cove that when not littered with floating trash, affords a private entry to the outer harbor.

Portofino's 773 inhabitants live from the sea and tourism. However, enormous fiberglass and chrome motor yachts have left scant room for characteristic fishing boats. Indeed, little of the feeling of the past, when the harbor played host to Richard the Lion-Hearted on his way to the Crusades, survives the new generation of diesel-guzzling yachts.

But the charm of the waterfront survives. Nets are still mended in front of the colorfully painted buildings; small bars, ready to serve espresso or stronger, line the waterfront.

Grilled fish, served after a steaming pasta and with a fresh mixed salad accompanied by the crisp local white wine, is perfect preparation for a stroll to the lighthouse. One of the best restaurants is Stella, where that model meal would cost about $20 a person.

There are only five hotels here, ranging from the Splendido, one of Italy's most celebrated and beautiful resort hotels, to four small second-category hosteiries, for a total of 255 beds (half in the Splendido).

The Splendido deserves its name. An old villa has been remodeled into the hotel, clinging to the mountainside with its own cliff-top swimming pool, beautifully tended gardens where flowers compete with olives and palms and semitropical shrubs, and its own serene walk down to the village. The rooms look down to the port and across the point to the gulf.

Accommodations are limited in winter, as most hotels take temporary closings. Reservations are recommended at any time. The summers are crowded, especially on the weekends when the five-mile twisting road from the autostrada exit at Rapallo is choked with cars. May and October, despite their greater risks of rain, have the advantage of thinner crowds.

The best access is by rented car from Genoa, 22 miles away. The major agencies have offices near the rail station, served by express trains from Rome and Turin, and at the spectacular Cristoforo Colombo Airport, constructed on fill in the busy harbor, with service from major Italian cities as well as other Western European airports.

Khadafy supposedly offers aid to Poland

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — The official Libyan news agency JANA reported Col. Moammar Khadafy met here Saturday with a member of Poland's martial law council and said Libya is ready to send food to Poland.

JANA said the Libyan leader was given a message of thanks from Polish Premier Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski by the visitor, identified as Gen. Tadeus Hualowski.

Hualowski is a Polish Cabinet minister with economic and evironmental responsibilities as well as a member of the military council ruling Poland since martial law was declared Dec. 13.

The news agency did not say why the Polish official was visiting and there was no independent confirmation of the report.

POSITIVE THINKING

Draw upon higher power to make things possible

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

When problems seem just too much for you as they sometimes have a way of doing, and you start wondering if you have what it takes to carry on, what then? Where do you get the needed strength? The comeback power? Well, different people go at this in different ways but here is how that question resolved itself for one man.

It began with a bit of drama in a clubhouse locker room after a golf game. "I and two others," this man told me, "were concerned about a friend who was having a very rough time of it. So we three ganged up on George and asked him to complete a foursome for a round of golf. We thought maybe it would do him good — take his mind off himself for a while."

So it seems they had a pleasant game and in the locker room afterwards George said, "Look, I want to thank you fellows. I know what you were up to, asking me to play with you today. You've known that I'm having a hard time and this was your way of helping me. It was real thoughtful of you. You are good friends. Out there on the course I forgot my troubles a good bit of the time. But how to get through this present crisis, I don't really know," he concluded sadly.

At this point one of the other men stood up, ready to leave. He dropped his hand on George's shoulder. "Look, George," he said, "I haven't known you too long; but I think I know how you feel. You see, a few years back so many things were going wrong for me that I didn't know whether I was coming or going. I almost cracked up. I guess I actually had what you might call the makings of a nervous breakdown.

"But then a friend gave me a suggestion that turned out to be the answer. He told me to draw upon the higher power. That's all he said. 'Why not draw upon the higher power?' I figured he meant God. Well, I couldn't shake the thought and finally I did what he suggested. And it changed everything for me. So you do the same, friend. Draw upon the higher power."

The man telling of this incident went on to say, "Well, I didn't say anything but I had been having my share of troubles too. And that idea grabbed me. Maybe that's what I ought to do! Draw upon the higher power...I knew very well that I had little power in me. All I was doing was keeping one jump ahead of failure!

But just how would a person draw upon the higher power? I started reading spiritual literature and trying to get an answer. And to my astonishment one day I experienced a tremendous release. I suddenly realized I had been infused with new power. It was glorious. That very day I started overcoming weaknesses and resentments, fears and nervousness. As a matter of fact, I've been pretty much on top of things from that time on."

He quoted from St. Luke a statement which has become, he says, his special guidance: "The things which are impossible with men are possible with God."

When you're in contact on a spiritual level, motivation starts going for you. Then things which you thought you never could do move out from the category of the impossible into the area of the possible. I doubt that a single day goes by without somebody, somewhere, personally discovering this tremendous fact. My mail brings me many thrilling accounts of people who experience exciting change in this way.

"Just a few lines to tell you," says one letter, "that another full-fledged positive thinker has joined the ranks. It took me five months of hard fighting. But the day I started I let the good Lord know that I meant business and that I needed His help — and, believe me, He knew I meant it and gave me help.

"Life to me now is great. Everything I do I enjoy. I even enjoy problems and difficulties, because now I have the power I need to handle them."

The new year first will be yet another precious time-chapter, holding problems and perils, but also terrific possibilities, for mankind collectively and for each person individually. And, of course, the best time to start becoming the person you aspire to be is now. Get going at it with the new year.

"God never says you should have come yesterday," said John Donne 350 years ago. "He never says you must again tomorrow, but today if you will hear His voice, today He will hear you...All occasions invite His mercies, and all times are His season."

So let's start drawing upon the higher power and make 1982 the greatest year ever.

France, U.S. at odds over arms sale to Nicaraguan regime

By BERNARS D. KAPLAN
Hearst Feature Service

PARIS — The disclosure that France is selling arms to the left-wing Nicaraguan regime points up a sharp paradox in U.S.-French relations.

Socialist President Francois Mitterrand stands four-square with President Ronald Reagan in his evaluation of the Soviet menace in Europe.

But, as far as the French president is concerned, that is where the menace begins and ends.

Mitterrand does more than merely reject the claims of Reagan and Secretary of State Alexander Haig that the Russians, through their branch office in Havana, are behind revolutionary unrest in Latin America. He has gone out of his way since gaining power seven months ago to try to expand French influence in that region, openly acting at cross-purposes with Washington.

The arms sale to Nicaragua is not large, amounting to only about $18 million. But it is another step in this process.

Notable among earlier ones was a joint declaration by Mitterrand and Mexican President Lopez Portillo proffering political support to the leftist guerrillas in El Salvador, as well as a Central American tour by French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson which was outstanding for his blunt public criticisms of American policies at virtually every stop he made.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Studies link vasectomies, atheroslcerosis in monkeys

Dear Dr. Solomon: My wife and I have four children, and we figure that's enough. I asked my doctor whether he would recommend I get a vasectomy. Instead of giving me an answer, he listed a number of reasons for and against it.

Can you give me an answer? Would you recommend a vasectomy as a form of birth control? — Pete, New York City, N.Y.

Dear Pete: Your doctor may not have given you the yes-or-no answer you wanted, but he did answer your question. Some controversy has arisen over a possible link between vasectomies and the development of atherosclerosis; until this controversy is resolved, many physicians are reluctant to recommend the procedure for their patients.

The difficulty arose when it was learned that laboratory monkeys that had had vasectomies showed an increased incidence and extent of atherosclerosis. While this does not necessarily mean that men will be affected the same way, the animal studies suggest that caution is advisable.

Whether vasectomies affect men the same way is now being studied by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development in Bethesda, Md.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have stopped smoking during my pregnancy and, to tell the truth, I don't miss it all that much. But I know a lot of women who smoked during the time they were pregnant, and it didn't seem to affect them or their babies. So what's the big deal with cigarettes? — Mabel, Boston, Mass.

Dear Mabel: No one has ever claimed that everyone who smokes three packs of cigarettes a day will get lung cancer, or that every alcoholic will wind up with cirrhosis of the liver. The prudent person realizes, however, that cigarette smoking and alcoholism are serious threats to health, and they act accordingly.

By the same token, smoking during pregnancy does not always seem to have a harmful effect on the fetus. However, there is strong evidence that cigarette smoking decreases the birth weight of infants and may have serious long-term effects that we are only now becoming aware of. Therefore, realizing that cigarette smoke contains from 2,000 to 4,000 chemicals that cannot do the developing baby any good, the prudent mother-to-be will refrain from smoking cigarettes, at least during the time she is pregnant.

And that's a pretty big deal.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is diabetes considered a modern disease? — Clara, Skokie, Ill.

Dear Clara: I'm not sure I know what you mean by modern, but diabetes seems to be almost nonexistent in underdeveloped countries. However, the incidence of diabetes increases as the populations of these countries begin to eat a more Westernized kind of diet.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Are cataracts hereditary? My mother had cataracts as did her father. Does that mean I am more likely to get them? — Tina, Topeka, Kansas.

Dear Tina: There are many causes of cataracts. However, since the condition does tend to run in families, some cataracts can be considered hereditary.

Novel depicts South Africa before apartheid

By ROBERT WELLER
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Alan Paton's first novel in 28 years, "Ah, But Your Land Is Beautiful," is a far more political work than the novel that made him an instant celebrity, "Cry, the Beloved Country."

Interviewed shortly before the book was published, Paton called it a "pretty thorough account of what South Africa was like from 1952 to 1958, and doesn't pull any punches."

Paton seems to have created some of the novel's characters to represent the spectrum of political views present when the structure of apartheid was built.

Some are real, however, including the late chief Albert Luthuli, the leader of the banned African National Congress who was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1960.

Paton, himself, appears to be the inspiration for Robert Mansfield, a beloved former member of the South African national cricket team, who forms the Liberal Party.

Unlike Paton, who suffered abuse for his anti-apartheid views during the 1950s, Mansfield flees to Australia after shooting and bombing attacks on his home. Paton staged on.

Paton says he created some "good Afrikaners" for his book because "if you paint all Afrikaners bad, then naturally your book is likely to be banned."

These "good Afrikaners" include the bureaucrat Van Onselen and his aunt, Trina, both National Party members. Both begin to question the wisdom of apartheid as the book progresses.

Van Onselen, however, prepares the way for the second book in this planned trilogy by placing his faith in "Dr. Hendrik" to solve the problems of the future.

Dr. Hendrik is a thinly veiled caricature of assassinated Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd, architect of apartheid.

Van Onselen quotes Dr. Hendrik as predicting that the homelands policy — aimed at shifting the black majority to rural tribal reserves away from white cities — will begin working well in 1976.

In fact, that was the year of the massive uprising in Soweto, the black township outside Johannesburg.

Paton's characters suffer the indignities of Dr. Henrik's laws, including expropriation of land, arbitrary termination of a marriage across the color bar and prohibition of racial mixing in libraries, church services and funerals.

Curiously, the only tragic scene that measures up to the heartbreak of "Cry, the Beloved Country" is the suicide of a leading Afrikaner nationalist caught while trying to seduce a black woman.

Your horoscope

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Academy Award-nominee Eva Le Gallienne celebrates this birthday with you, as do Rod Taylor, actress Christine Kaufman and singer Bobby Goldsboro. The year ahead ushers in a new period of prestige and accomplishment for you. Count on writing and travel to play important roles in your life. Your dealings with others show marked improvement. It is now possible to attain unusual goals. Although romance is generally happy, you must be careful not to confuse friendship with love. A combination of hard work and good luck upgrades your financial status. Share the rewards of your labors with those who helped you achieve success.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You reach a turning point where career or business is concerned. Be prepared to accept additional responsibilities. A Taurus will keep you very busy! Exercise self-restraint in family affairs.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do not follow the crowd. Influential person will be impressed by your orginality. Member of opposite sex challenges you to a battle of wits. You emerge the victor.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You have some good ideas, but parents may not agree with them. Compromise is the best solution. A domestic relationship is tested this afternoon. Patience pays off handsomely.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Business progress is slow but profits will soon increase. News from afar inspires you! Exceptional mental rapport, shared goals are in the spotlight. Your loved ones may confuse you at times.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Friends can be a mixed blessing and a cause for anxiety now. Your powerful feelings about someone are right on target. An accountant shows you new ways to cut expenses.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your diplomacy will help avert trouble at base of operations. Financial backing is available if you play your cards right. Romance provides some interesting moments this week.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A fine day for traveling and visiting, but watch out for minor extravagances. Love could blossom this afternoon. Get a second opinion regarding a new career or financial venture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A straightforward approach works best with someone who is difficult. Consider the words of elderly relatives; there may be some truth to what they are saying. Be patient with an irritating friend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Activities behind the scenes occupy your morning hours. Overseas calls add an air of excitement. Utilize your special talents to help advance pet projects. Share the evening with a new friend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The ability to speak a foreign language is a real plus today. Your communication skills are simply tops! Opportunities continue to open up around you. Seize a chance to get ahead.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Tolerance and patience are twin virtues, particularly when dealing with older people. Charm will work wonders with the object of your affections. You can count on renewing former relationship!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your growing popularity makes this a banner day! Others look to you for leadership. Do not let them down. A kind word at the right moment will help avert an afternoon confrontation.

Your electricity will cost more in 1982 mainly because the fuel to make it will cost more.

In 1982, we'll have to pay more for the fuels used to produce your electricity. Partly this is because another contract for low-cost natural gas fuel has expired. But mainly it's because the price of all fuel continues to rise.

We spent about $200 million in 1980 for fuel to make your electricity. In 1981, the fuel bill was about $400 million. And in 1982, we estimate we'll have to spend $640 million for fuel.

Approximate Cost of Fuel

Year	Fuel cost paid by Texas Electric	Your average annual fuel cost per kilowatt hour
1980	$200 million	1 cent
1981	$400 million	2 cents
1982*	$640 million	3 cents

*Estimated

We buy all our fuels at the lowest price available. We charge our customers exactly what we have to pay for fuel. And each month, we show on the bill the "fuel" part of the total cost of electricity.

At Texas Electric, we're trying to hold down fuel costs by making as much electricity as possible in plants built to use lignite coal — a cheaper fuel. And we're building a plant to use uranium, the lowest priced fuel available to us.

You can help hold down your electric bill by conserving at home. To learn how, please call us.

RINGING THE BELL

Hispanic-Black experiences

With BOB TIEUEL

The Brown Experience — La Vida Americanna: More than any other segment of the U.S. population, Hispanics are inter-city people. According to census data, about 85 percent of the 14.6 million Hispanics in the U.S. live in urban areas. During 1980, 20.4 percent of Hispanic families were living below the poverty level ($8,500 per year for a non-farm family of four) compared to 8.6 percent for the non-Hispanic population. In the Southwest, this under-class replenishes the urban core as whites leave for the suburbs. In the Northeast and Midwest, the under-class replaces whites who migrate to the Sun Belt.

In many urban communities, the federal budget cutbacks have brought a new and grim sense of competition between Hispanics and blacks — still the preeminent minority in the nation. In most communities where Hispanics and blacks coexist, the coalition — if any exists at all — is fragile.

In New York, bellringer sources report that Puerto Rican leaders complain that blacks control many of the social welfare programs. In Chicago, Hispanic leaders say black social workers and case workers routinely short shrift the Hispanic poor on the basis of language or citizenship.

According to these same sources, life for Hispanics is better in the Sun Belt than it is for those in other areas of the nation. Big city mayors in the Sun Belt such as Henry Cisneros (first Mexican ever elected there) of San Antonio and other leaders are worrying somewhat about the problems of the poor in the cities.

States Mayor Cisneros: "We haven't dealt with the terrible, terrible sensation I think we will be facing in the next budget year as people who we employ have to be laid off, as people we provided service for no longer get it."

The voices of the Washington lobbyists for Hispanic groups, neighborhood organizers and the people are growing louder as their numbers grow and their political sophistication increases.

Ruben Bonilla, national counsel of the League of United Latin American Citizens, recently issued a statement highly critical of reported plans by the Immigration and Naturalization Service to revoke tens of thousands of temporary residency permits that have allowed Mexican aliens to live legally in the United States since 1977. Bonilla said he found it ironic that while we grant the necessary and appropriate refuge to Polish refugees that we turn our backs on Mexican economic refugees. In a sense, it amounts to international double-cross.

QUOTES FROM a black columnist: "On the domestic scene, 1982 will see hard times for many millions of Americans, and millions more will taste personally the bitter pills of joblessness, bankruptcy, mortgage foreclosures — and simple hunger. We had better brace ourselves for some other bad developments, then work and pray for something better," said Carl T. Rowan.

LOU RAWLS itinerary resembles that of a presidential candidate. Detroit on Tuesday. Dallas on Wednesday. Meet with a dozen reporters, several college presidents. Attend two receptions, according to N. Bishop of the Dallas Morning News.

Rawls says he is making an extra effort to promote the second TV telethon in Dallas (also to be carried by several other TV stations in Texas soon) because of federal cutbacks that will affect 3,000 students attending 41 colleges in the United Negro College Fund system. Even before he became the UNCF's honorary national chairman, Rawls used to visit high schools and talk to black youths in low-income areas about bettering themselves through higher education. "I want to tell kids they can be somebody. Let them know that they have options," the 43-year-old singer says. He adds, "I don't do this for any return. If I can help one kid, then I've accomplished something."

Rawls formerly sung with The Pilgrim Travelers, a gospel singing group that was sponsored in West Texas and New Mexico by this correspondent. He has won several Grammy Awards and sold millions of albums and records during his career.

CONSUMER TIPS

Beware 'work-at-home' advertisements

By LINDA TRUITT
Better Business Bureau
of the Permian Basin, Inc.

"$180.00 per week part time at home. Company needs home workers to update local mailing lists. All ages, experience unnecessary."

Possibly you have seen an advertisement such as this in a newspaper or magazine which offered "huge profits" while working at home. Since the ad gives the impression that earning money is easy, you probably have been tempted to respond. Unfortunately, thousands of people have answered similar ads, only to lose their hard-earned dollars.

A nationwide investigation in 1980 by the Better Business Bureau of 55 work-at-home promotions revealed that those wanting to supplement their income by investing in work-at-home opportunities were losing their money to unscrupulous promoters using misleading advertising claims. The investigation showed that advertisements promising hundreds of dollars for a few hours' work were simply lures by the advertisers to sell information on how to set up your own business or conduct the same scheme as the advertiser's. No actual employment existed. On the contrary, would-be workers would have had to first pay for details purporting to show how to make the claimed income, and then invest more money in ads, envelopes, postage and other items.

A typical advertisement for a work-at-home opportunity claimed "$356.00 Weekly Guaranteed. Work two hours daily at home." Investigation disclosed, however, that the "guarantee" did not apply to the earnings, but only to a refund of the $15.00 paid for how-to details if the worker's own efforts failed to produce the weekly income. Another typical ad promised "$1,000-$3,000 monthly stuffing envelopes." BBB shoppers answering such ads did not receive the expected envelopes for stuffing, but instead got promotional material asking for $8.00 to $25.00 just for details on money-making plans. To make matters worse, to pursue the plans would have required spending several hundred dollars more for advertising, postage, envelopes and printing.

The initial details the aspiring worker receives about a work-at-home plan usually turn out to be booklets telling how to go into the business of placing the same kind of ad the advertiser ran in the first place. In short, the work-at-home scheme participant begins recruiting others for the same business of offering a work-at-home plan. It is not difficult to see that this system is one which feeds on continuous recruitment of persons to offer the same plan. By such a geometric progression, soon everyone in the country would be trying to sell envelope-stuffing plans in true pyramid fashion.

A variation of this theme is a plan whereby a company offers to pay 25¢ to 60¢ "per envelope stuffed and submitted to us according to instructions." One must buy the company's circulars on "money-making" plans and place advertisements at his/her own expense in newspapers and magazines inviting interested parties to send him/her a self-addressed stamped envelope for information on earning money at home. Each envelope received in this manner is then to be stuffed with the company's circular and, once a required number of letters are accumulated, sent to the company for payment. Earnings by participants are entirely dependent on the number of responses to the ads.

Advertisements which claim that you can earn unusually high income with little or no effort on your part should be viewed with suspicion. If the opportunity sounds too good to be true, chances are that it is. Before you send any money, call the BBB at 563-1880 for a report on the company.

Movie is 'Four Friends'' '60s

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

"Four Friends" is an idiosyncratic view of the American 1960s as seen by writer Steve Tesich ("Breaking Away") and director Arthur Penn ("Bonnie and Clyde").

Like Tesich, Danilo Prozor (Craig Wasson) is a Yugoslav immigrant who grows up in a Midwestern steel town. Danilo's closest friends are a jock (Jim Metzler) and a fat boy (Michael Huddleston), and all are in love with an uninhibited girl (Jodi Thelen). The story carries them through high school and into an unsettling era of assassinations, protests and disillusion.

Nero does Beatty's 'Reds' the Russian way

By DALE POLLOCK
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — The big cinematic backdrop of 1982 just may be the Russian Revolution. First the cataclysmic events of 1917 became the setting for "Reds," Warren Beatty's panoramic study of American journalist John Reed and his wife Louise Bryant.

Now the Russians have countered with their own version — actually two versions — one being Reed's exploits in the Mexican revolution, and the second his adventures in strife-torn Petrograd.

Instead of the tousle-haired, clean-shaven Beatty, the Russian films feature a mustachioed, grizzled Franco Nero as the politically adventurous journalist. Nero was here recently, after having spent an entire year filming the two movies. "Insurgent Mexico," the first of the Russian-Mexican-Italian co-productions, premieres in Italy next month.

Beatty's "Reds" runs 3 1/2 hours, with intermission; "Insurgent Mexico," based on Reed's reportage of Pancho Villa's 1915 revolution, runs 2 1/2 hours and "Ten Days That Shook the World" (Reed's book on which "Reds" is partially based) should exceed that length, said Nero. ("Ten Days" will be completed later this year, having been delayed by the harsh Russian winter.)

THE TWO FILMS were directed by Sergei Bondarchuk, who made the massive 1968 Russian version of "War and Peace," with a running time of more than six hours. Backed by the Soviet state-supported Mosfilm organization, Bondarchuk had unlimited resources to make the films about Reed, who is considered a Soviet hero and is buried at the foot of the Kremlin wall.

Discussing the experience, Nero recalled one Soviet Cultural Ministry official remarking, "The real revolution was less expensive than Bondarchuk's revolution." If a scene called for the Kremlin, Bondarchuk filmed in the Kremlin. Need to have the Winter Palace in Leningrad stormed by 10,000 Red Guards? No problem — Bondarchuk had the Russian army put at his disposal, so 10,000 extras were marshaled. Nero estimated the two films together, if budgeted by American standards, would cost about $100 million, dwarfing Beatty's expenditures of about $40 million.

"You will see things in the Russian Revolution scenes you've never seen on film," Nero marveled. "Bondarchuk is a master of crowd movement."

But there are other scenes that will be seen only in foreign versions of "Ten Days That Shook the World." Bryant, portrayed by Diane Keaton in "Reds," is portrayed by American actress Sydne Rome. Ursula Andress plays Mabel Dodge, the American heiress who had a stormy love affair with Reed in Italy before he met Bryant. Bondarchuk filmed one nude scene between Nero and Andress that will be expunged from the Soviet version (to be released next year in 2,000 Russian theaters simultaneously).

NERO, NOW 40, is best known to American audiences for his roles in the film version of "Camelot," and the film adaptation of D. H. Lawrence's "The Virgin and the Gypsy." But he has made about 75 films, many outside his native Italy.

"Filming in Russia is a completely different experience," said Nero. "There are no money worries, no time worries. The extras are always there, and so is the crew."

Both "Insurgent Mexico" and "Ten Days" were shot in English, although in Mexico, the native actors spoke Spanish, and the Soviet performers spoke Russian. All dialogue will be re-recorded depending on where the films are released. Nero said distribution arrangements have been made worldwide, with the exception of the United States.

Once both films are completed, said Nero, Bondarchuk will edit them together into a seven- or eight-hour television mini-series to be called "Red Bells," which will be syndicated worldwide.

"We shot the book," said Nero, explaining the major difference between "Ten Days" and "Reds." "If, in the book, Reed said he went to Petrograd, we went to Petrograd. We knew that Beatty was doing a different story, one of the love affair between Reed and Bryant. One movie is not better than the other — they're simply different."

NERO NOTED THAT Bondarchuk and Beatty did meet several years ago to discuss a mutual production, but no agreement could be reached. "But Beatty spurred the Russians on — I don't think they would have moved this quickly were it not for his film."

Nero said he has seen "Reds" and enjoyed it, but finds it difficult to compare his and Beatty's interpretations of Reed, a complex Harvard-educated man who spurned his upper-class background to become a politically active reporter.

"I think Beatty played him with a lot of humor. I couldn't have put so much humor in my portrayal because of the realism," Nero said. Left unsaid was the impression that the Russians don't view their revolution with much humor. And the only passion that will be on display in their version of "Reds" will be of the political variety.

Nero is now off to Germany to film a version of Jean Genet's book "Querelle" for director Rainer Werner Fassbinder. But he is optimistic about the fate of his two Russian films in this country.

"I think American audiences will love our film. In 'Reds,' the star could have been John Reed or any other character. It's a personal story. Now, for the first time, the Russian Revolution will be done properly."

Gumbel looking forward to new news post

By PETER J. BOYER
Los Angeles Times

Of the difficulties facing the new host of an established television broadcast, unfamiliarity is one with which Bryant Gumbel, new host of "Today," will not have to grapple.

Gumbel arrived at "Today's" Studio 8G this week on the wings of an exposure campaign that amounted to a virtual one-man NBC telethon. With him arrived NBC's hope for restored preeminence in television's bitterly contested morning wars.

"Everybody's talking about Bryant Gumbel; everybody's talking about the new 'Today' show," said "Today" executive producer Steve Friedman after Gumbel's inaugural broadcast on Monday. "The momentum's on our side. It's a great feeling. We have it to win."

Friedman's assessment is perhaps a bit optimistic. It would seem that the morning momentum is with ABC's "Good Morning America," a snappier, less formal morning program that has matched "Today's" audience size despite rival NBC's quarter-century head start.

In fact, "Good Morning America" (which is produced by ABC's entertainment division, while "Today" is a product of NBC News) crept ahead of "Today" in the ratings in 1981, establishing a decided edge in the final quarter of the year. In the last 12 weeks of the year, "Good Morning" averaged a 5.2 Nielsen rating compared to 4.9 for "Today," a margin that represents 244,000 viewers and $2,000 more per commercial minute on "Good Morning America" than NBC gets for "Today."

IT IS NBC'S fervent wish that Gumbel, a first-rate sportscaster with an uncanny video presence, will be the ratings remedy NBC has been seeking since "Good Morning America's" remarkable ascent in 1979.

Sportscaster says he's not interested in office

LAKE CITY, Fla. (AP) — TV sportscaster Pat Summerall says that he is not interested in running for the U.S. Senate this year and that reports he was considering a bid were all a misunderstanding.

Summerall, a CBS sports announcer who lives here, said rumors that he might run for the Republican nomination grew out of a conversation last September with state GOP Chairman Henry Sayler at a gathering in Jacksonville. The party honored Labor Secretary Ray Donovan, who employs Summerall's daughter.

Summerall

Summerall, asked by Sayler if he'd ever considered politics, replied that he'd consider it. And Sayler, looking for an attractive candidate to oppose Sen. Lawton Chiles in November, began quietly talking up Summerall as a potential Republican challenger.

In October, a reporter called Summerall to confirm reports that he would seek office. Summerall recalled telling the reporter he was "interested in politics." He insisted he never told the reporter he wanted to participate in them himself.

"I told him I care about who is running the country, what's going on in the world ... the Mideast, in Poland," he said.

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Christina Onassis, multimillionaire heiress of late Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis, has submitted her name as candidate in elections for the board of the Union of Greek Shipowners, a union official said.

Miss Onassis, if elected, would be the first woman to sit on the board of the union, which represents the merchant fleet.

Springfield Shipping Company, the Onassis company, owns 45 vessels, many of which are not registered under the Greek flag. Observers believe Miss Onassis, 30, is interested in closer links with Greece.

The UGS board has 30 members, and 44 candidates are bidding for the positions. The elections run Monday through Wednesday.

SHULLSBURG, Wis. (AP) — When Lewis and Naomi Jenson married 29 years ago, they talked about having a large family — maybe five or six children.

"Somehow, we got off the track," Mrs. Jenson said after the birth last week of her 22nd child.

Jenson, 49, and Mrs. Jenson, 47, had 15 boys and 7 girls, all single births. One daughter died in 1959. Their oldest child is 27.

The latest baby, Greg LeRoy, is the first they've had since 1977.

"There won't be any more," Mrs. Jenson said. When she learned she was pregnant this time, she said, "I thought I was getting kind of old. But my husband said it'll keep us younger."

There's plenty of room for the 14 children still at home on the Jenson's 200-acre farm in the town of Seymour in southwestern Wisconsin.

But there's not so much room in the Jenson's six-bedroom, one-bathroom house.

"We have to stagger the baths," Mrs. Jenson, said, but noted: "It'd be pretty lonely without them."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Holmes Tuttle, one of President Reagan's "kitchen cabinet" confidantes, sold the car dealership on which he founded his fortune, but said the car industry's bad year wasn't the cause.

The 3.2-acre tract went to four buyers in nine parcels. Tuttle wouldn't say how much he made, but John Ferris, vice president of Ellis Mercantile Co., said the Los Angeles theater prop company paid $875,000 for its 22,000-square-foot parcel.

Tuttle opened the lot at La Brea and Beverly boulevards in 1945.

It "was worth more as a piece of saleable real estate than as a car dealership," Tuttle's son, Bob, the lot's vice president, said Friday.

Tuttle said it was not the auto industry's disastrous 1981 showing that prompted him to sell. He still owns five other dealerships.

Tuttle lives in Montecito and had urged Reagan to run for California governor in 1966.

Will 'All Things' switch to TV be permanent?

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As its two or three million loyalists know, "All Things Considered" is a 90-minute news show of unlimited curiosity. It is known for its catchy theme music — the product of a Moog synthesizer — and for co-host Susan Stamberg's catchy "uh-huh."

Wednesday night, the National Public Radio show will dip a toe into the mainstream.

Just this once, "All Things Considered" is going on television.

"All Things Considered ... On Main Street," will be a one-hour special on public TV.

ON THE radio, Susan Stamberg's 'uh-huh" is a happy, greedy, tell-me-more sound. She calls people up and asks questions. About earthquakes or earthworms or earth mothers. It doesn't matter. She is interested.

In the move to television, the Moog makes the transition but the "uh-huh" disappears.

So does Ms. Stamberg's ample giggle, another cherished sound from the radio show.

"All Things Considered" cultists will take this transfer to television with fidgets and misgivings.

On one hand, it will be good to see what Ms. Stamberg looks like — and to see co-host Sanford Ungar, of the crackling voice which always sounds like it is coming out of adolescence.

AND THE other regulars — Linda Wertheimer and Cokie Roberts on Capitol Hill, William Drummond and William Buzenberg of the foreign and military affairs beats, Nina Totenberg on the courthouse run, economics reporter Robert Krulwich and Noah Adams, who conducts "All Things Considered" on the radio on the weekends.

But what if they're good?

What if they like television?

What if television likes them?

Are fans of 10 years' duration who know "All Things Considered" as a driving home or kitchen table companion going to be asked to sacrifice their program to television's masses in the living room?

SUSAN Stamberg, don't say uh-huh to television.

The people at NPR say it isn't so. They say this television special is a one-shot deal. A one-night stand. A yielding to temptation. Just for kicks. Nothing permanent intended. A flirtation.

A way, says Barbara Cohen, NPR's director of news, to lure television viewers to the radio show. Aha!

On those terms, OK: It is a pretty classy show. A bit sober, lacking the radio's zany grain, but with the chief of radio's endearing qualities: It takes time to tell the story. It takes a good hard look. It doesn't exaggerate.

The show looks in on America's frosty, bureaucratic reception for refugees from El Salvador and Haiti as impatient immigration judges, in trailer camp deportation hearings, quiz the aliens to see if they truly fear for their lives if they are returned to their homelands.

The program studies the modern-day U.S. Army, with its 9-to-5 soldiers, in uniform for the money in it. A platoon sergeant asks how he can run a tank unit with troops who are in "total indifference to authority."

Joe Papp's 'Alice' not necessarily child's fare

By NANCY ANDERSON
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — When Producer Joe Papp is warned that children will neither fathom nor care for his "Alice At the Palace," he shrugs.

"I never worry about children. They take care of themselves," says Papp.

Anyway, he observes, his show wasn't created specifically for little folk even though it is going to be presented by NBC-TV as a Project Peacock special, part of a series touted as fare for small-fry.

"Alice At the Palace" stars Meryl Streep as Alice in Wonderland in an adaptation of Elizabeth Swados' "Alice In Concert," which Papp produced and directed for his New York Shakespeare Public Theater.

The 90-minute television treatment will air Saturday morning, Jan. 16.

The show, though imaginatively produced and well-performed, seems so distantly related to the fantasies of Lewis Carroll that youngsters who've read their way with Alice down the rabbit hole and through the looking glass will find their favorite characters hard to recognize.

Rodney Hudson, a rangy, black dancer, is the Cheshire cat, lithe, leering and personable to be sure but not a thing like the cat of Wonderland. He is also a unicorn.

Streep doesn't look at all like a little girl, nor do most of the other performers look or behave much like the principals in Carroll's books.

"This isn't directed entirely at children," Papp says. "It's directed at families.

"We expect adults to be there. Hopefully they will have read the original work."But the special was never intended to be a close translation of the novel.

"This stands on its own, I think. ... It's not literal every inch of the way, the book. The book is the book.

"Let people read it if they're interested in that.

"But I think children will respond to this. I'm not worried about it." In any case, an effective producer can't worry about audience reaction as he puts together a show, Papp contends.

"You can't say, 'I'm going to do this for children. I'm going to do this for adults.'

"The nature of this material is whimsical, it's philosophical and I expect it to appeal to all ages.

" ... When I'm doing plays, I never think, 'Well. ...'

"When I'm doing Shakespeare, I expect adults to enjoy 'A Midsummer Night's Dream' as well as children. Even 'As You Like It.'

" ... I don't like to make distinctions. I don't like a play that's exclusively for tots.

He promised he'd tell no one about murder

DONCASTER, England (AP) — As a boy of 8, William Phipps watched in terrified silence as his drunken father strangled a young waitress to death in a lumber yard in 1946.

He kept silent about the murder for nearly 36 years — sworn to secrecy by his mother, who washed the victim's blood from her husband's clothes.

"Now that she is dead as well as my father, I have to get it off my conscience," Phipps was quoted by London's Daily Express as saying. "I saw my father murder a woman."

The 44-year-old former British soldier walked into the police station in this northern England town last week and revealed the secret that he said has given him "terrible nightmares."

DONCASTER police said Saturday they contacted detectives in Canterbury, in southeastern England, where the long-forgotten and never-solved murder of Lilian Miller occurred on Feb. 16, 1946.

Mrs. Miller was a 20-year-old World War II bride married to a Canadian army private named Bill Miller. After the war, she lived with relatives and worked as a waitress while her husband prepared a new home for her and their 1-year-old son, Victor, in Saskatchewan.

On the night of the murder, Mrs. Miller had gone to a dance with her brother, Frederick Kemp, and was attacked on her way home in the lumber yard where Phipps said he was playing.

MEDICAL evidence at the inquest showed Mrs. Miller struggled with her assailant. She was covered with bruises and the attacker apparently had attempted to assault her sexually before strangling her to death.

Police would not disclose Phipps' account of events, but British press reports said he gave this version of what happened:

"I heard someone coming and I hid in a secret camp some of us had made. I saw my father come through the entrance to the yard with a woman and I saw him kill her. I knew she was dead.

"I went home and did not tell anyone. My father was a drunken, violent man, and I was afraid of him. My mother knew what he had done because he came home with bloodstains on his clothes and she helped to clean them up ...

"She made me promise not to say anything to anyone, and I never did," Phipps was quoted as saying.

Canterbury police said they were interviewing witnesses in an attempt to corroborate Phipps' story. Detective Chief Superintendent Alan Parker said the department "cannot be certain whether the file will be finally closed or if any other action will be taken."

PHIPPS' mother, Anne-Laura, lived in Canterbury until her death in 1980. His father, Ernest, a railway porter, died in 1963.

Kremlin urges NATO to ignore U.S. sanctions

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin on Saturday urged America's NATO allies to ignore U.S. calls for sanctions over the Polish crisis, and compared President Reagan to "Big Brother."

"Poles...resorted to emergency measures for the sake of preventing a national catastrophe, for the sake of saving the Polish state from disintegration," the government newspaper Izvestia said.

"Of two evils it was necessary to choose the lesser. The choice was, naturally, in favor of the lesser evil."

The paper accused the Reagan administration of persisting in support of "political bankrupts who placed Poland at the brink of civil war."

"The White House teaches the Polish authorities what they should do and how they should behave. All this, it is being claimed, is in the name of humanism and humanism alone," Izvestia said

Geoscientists San Francisco

Sohio Petroleum Company is the largest domestic oil producer in the U.S. We are using our strong financial position as the basis for an aggressive exploration and lease acquisition effort. We have the following openings in our San Francisco offices.

Geologist-Alaska

Requires 4 or more years of broad exploration experience, preferably in Alaska, in frontier areas, or in several basins. The ideal candidate will possess leadership abilities as well as top technical skills and will become a project team leader in our Alaskan exploration effort.

Geologist/Geophysicist-Appraisals

Requires 5 or more years of broad exploration experience, preferably in Atlantic Coast, international or frontier areas. The Appraisal Department is responsible for analysis of frontier domestic projects and long-term international review work. Your regional review work will be the cutting edge for Sohio's exploration strategy.

Stratigraphic Seismologist

Requires 2 or more years of experience with a strong emphasis on the latest seismic technology. You will work on the development of Sohio's vast U.S. hydrocarbon reserves.

Seismic Mapping Project Leader

Requires 4 or more years of industry experience and supervisory experience. You will lead a team of 7-10 programmers in a seismic mapping project: top down software design, data base organization, technical computations of velocities and depths, gridding and contouring, and system documentation.

Computer Applications Geophysicist

Requires 2 or more years of experience in the application of computer techniques to exploration. You will use your skills in computer mapping, data bases, and exploration modeling to analyze and process exploration requests.

Our compensation and benefits are competitive and our housing assistance policy is sensitive to today's housing market. If you'd like to join the Sohio adventure, send your resume to Frank Wood, Sohio Petroleum Company, #1036, 100 Pine Street, San Francisco, CA 94111 or call him at (415) 951-8429.

"ON CALL" EQUIPMENT OPERATORS

"ON CALL" is both a State of Mind and the way most of our service employees live, because that's the way it has to be. When you're the "PACESETTER" in oilfield service, you have to be ready to go anywhere at anytime in order to meet our customers needs.

That is why we are looking for hard working, dependable people to hire on as EQUIPMENT OPERATORS. If you're not afraid of tough, dirty, outdoor work, then here's what we offer people WITH OR WITHOUT experience.

- A good job that guarantees $15,700 + to start
- The opportunity to learn a necessary skill
- The chance to grow with a dynamic, growing company
- A full line of Company Paid Benefits including a Dental Assistance Program
- A relocation assistance package will be offered to Odessa, Texas
- And the prospect of being part of an industry that is so important to our nation's growth, prosperity and safety

How to Qualify: If you are 21 years of age or older, able to pass our physical examination, have a good driving record and are able to relocate, we'd like to see you.

Interested individuals are urged to attend our meeting at 7:00 p.m., Monday, January 11, at the Holiday Inn located at 4300 W. Highway 80 in Midland. Our representative Jerry Sims will give full details of our work, and will schedule interviews for the day after the meeting. Limited to the first 40 applicants. No phone calls, please. We are an equal opportunity employer, m/f.

15 Help Wanted

Jan Jeffers began our management program in September 1976. Since that date, Jeffers' career has progressed steadily including management of 3 different units, the most recent, opening a new unit in Hutchinson, Kansas. She is just one example of the tremendous opportunities at Furrs Cafeterias.

..."THE WORK IS HARD, BUT THE GOALS ARE REALISTIC AND THE REWARDS ARE FANTASTIC"...

Furrs Cafeterias, Inc., is now expanding its management team to keep pace with the rapid growth of our cafeteria chain. This growth ensures that opportunities as assistant managers, cafeteria managers, and higher level positions will be available.

We are hiring qualified candidates into our Management Training Program, and we want men and women who will put forth maximum efforts toward a rewarding career with us. Candidates should be willing to relocate occasionally during their career.

The starting salary for manager trainees, based upon background and experience, has a range from $12,000 to $14,400 per year; this figure is based upon a 50-hour work week, with premium pay for any hours in excess of 50. As your career progresses and your responsibilities grow, you can expect a rapid growth in earnings. Assistant managers can earn from $19,000 to $28,000 per year, or more. Cafeteria managers can earn from $25,000 to $75,000 per year, or more.

Benefits include group medical plan, fully funded pension plan, special manager's life insurance program, paid vacations, and free meals while on duty.

We are an Equal Opportunity Employer M/F

Furrs Cafeterias, a subsidiary of K mart Corporation, is one of the nation's largest cafeteria chains with over 80 units in prime locations throughout 8 southwestern states. Corporate growth plans call for an approximate 25% annual increase in the number of cafeterias over the next 3 years. Our management opportunities are for real. So if you want to work hard where your efforts will really pay off, Furrs Cafeterias has the program for you.

Construction Engineers & Superintendents

Weekend Interviews in Denver

You don't develop the finest personnel in the construction industry by giving them "entry-level" responsibilities. You let them pull their own weight from the beginning — solving problems, making decisions and meeting all the challenges that come with working for a world leader.

Right now we have opportunities at our coal-fired power plant construction project in Colstrip, Montana for personnel with a degree or equivalent experience in fossil and industrial plants in the following specialties:

ENGINEERS
- Piping/Mechanical
- Electrical
- Subcontract

SUPERINTENDENTS
- Piping

MANAGEMENT OPPORTUNITIES

THE TIME IS RIGHT!

Since our first seafood shoppe in 1969, Long John Silver's, Inc. has grown to over 1100 restaurants. We are the largest fast-service seafood restaurant system in the world. And there's more! In the next five years, Long John Silver's, Inc. plans to double the number of company-operated restaurants. Our growth means hundreds of new management and supervisory positions for career-minded individuals like yourself.

The time is right to consider a career with Long John Silver's. If you have restaurant management experience or seek an entry-level position in management, then explore employment opportunities with a leader in the restaurant industry.

Consider these important facts about Long John Silver's:

Training at Long John Silver's, Inc. is an on-going process. Our management program was the first in the industry to be accredited by the American Council on Education. We offer basic and advanced management courses leading towards supervisory development. And you can take pride in the fact that you're being trained by the best.

Advancement through achievement is a tradition with our company. Given Long John Silver's, Inc. commitment to opening several hundred new restaurants, promotional opportunities will be limited only by your individual ambitions and goals.

Compensation at Long John Silver's, Inc. is commensurate with experience and education. And we include assistant managers in the bonus program. Last year we paid out over $3,000,000 in management bonuses.

La Florecita — Fighting for survival

Midland is booming. Unemployment is down, the economy is up. Nurseries and day care centers are packed.

Why, then, is La Florecita Day Nursery on Midland's east side fighting for survival?

According to Sandra Phillips, La Florecita's Executive Director, the nursery, which is licensed to care for 30 children ages 2-6, has had its enrollment fluctuate between a high of 21 children and a low of eight children since April, 1981. "When you take in eight children and you are staffed for 30, you are spending more than is necessary," she said.

"We have a real dilemma because we know we have the lowest rates in the city...(we) can't understand why every nursery in the city has a waiting list and we can't even fill our enrollment,"said Mrs. Phillips.

La Florecita is now moving from their old location at 1411 Orchard Lane to their new location at the Latin Free Methodist Church, 411 S. Terrell, with the hope that this move will help ease their financial burden and also allow them to care for more children. Mrs. Phillips said the nursery currently has 20 children enrolled and she hopes the enrollment will rise to 36 children in the new building. "We're hoping this move will give us better access to people who work downtown."

Mrs. Phillips said the nursery was founded in about 1955 because the then-principal of De Zavala Elementary School found that too many of the students at De Zavala were missing school in order to stay home to care for younger brothers and sisters. In 1958 the nursery moved to the building at 1411 Orchard Lane, where it remained until the current move. La Florecita was founded "basically so older children could continue to go to school, their parents could work, and the (smaller) children would be taken care of," said Mrs. Phillips.

She also said the nursery will try to increase enrollment during the next year. If they are successful, they will have another year to look for a building large enough to house 100 children. "The only way we can be an economical nursery is to serve at least 100 children." At the present time La Florecita "does not have the facilities to provide (for infants)...and we must survive for two years to get to the point (to be able to take infants)."

At this point La Florecita is "fighting for survival" Mrs. Phillips said. The nursery is trying to build up its board of directors, the governing body that "sets policy, (establishes) working committees...has the ability to amend by-laws—basically does what an owner would do." She said each January the nursery holds its Annual Board Meeting, which is open to the public, and "anyone who shows up is a potential board member... We need pople who are going to be able to come to board meetings on a monthly basis and give of their time."

The Meeting for 1982 will be at 7:30 p.m., January 18, 1982, in the Community Room at Commercial Bank. The public is welcomed.

AAUW Outstanding Girl selected

Laura Wolf

Laura Wolf was honored recently as the Outstanding Girl of the Month by the Midland Branch of the American Association of University Women. The award was presented at a mother-daughter luncheon meeting of the Les Toques Blanches interest group.

Miss Wolf, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Wolf, is a senior at Midland High School, where she ranks first in her class of 5.15 with a grade point average of 4.512. She has received three academic letters, is a National Merit Scholarship semi-finalist, is president of the National Honor Society, second vice president of the Junior Classical League and is a member of the a cappella choir. She was a member of the MHS speech team two years and participated in the state speech tournament.

Miss Wolf has been a member of the Pickwick Players of the Midland Community Theatre six years, serving on the board two years. She has been involved in more than 20 Pickwick productions. She also has been a Symphony Deb two years.

She has been employed part-time as a receptionist at Olin Mills Studios and as a teacher at Kandy Kane Day Care Center. She attends St. Nicholas Episcopal Church and has helped with vacation church school there.

This summer, Miss Wolf plans to tour Europe with a group of MHS students before entering either Randolph Macon College or Smith College in the fall to seek a liberal arts degree.

The Midland Branch selects an outstanding senior girl from a local high school each month of the school year. To be eligible for the award, the girl must maintain at least a 3.5 grade point average and be actively involved in family, home, community, church and school activities. Nomination forms are available from AAUW members.

Keeping on top of stepladders

By AL CARRELL

Over the years that the column has been running, lots of folks have sent in tricky ways to alter a stepladder. After all, ladders are plain vanilla. One time I tried to do all the things you readers had suggested to improve a stepladder and applied them to one little ladder. The result looked like one of those crazy inventions Rube Goldberg would have come up with. I still get letters with ideas for ladders and thought maybe you'd like to do some things to your ladder. Use one or all of the ideas, but be sure that whatever you do, you don't weaken the ladder or attach something that would make it dangerous for you to use.

Dear Al: I have drilled several holes in the top step of my stepladder. The holes are of several different sizes to hold screwdrivers, pliers, the hammer and other tools. I just drop the handle in the appropriately sized hole instead of dropping them on the floor. — C.F.

Dear Al: So often the things we put on the top step of a stepladder will roll off or get knocked off. Not with my ladder because I glued some quarter round molding all the way around the perimeter of the top step. — W.J.T.

Dear Al: The fold-out paint shelf on a stepladder can be much more useful if you attach a wire bike basket to it. Most of these baskets will still allow the shelf to fold up with the ladder. — R.E.G.

Dear Al: I keep a large rubber band cut from an inner tube around each end of the top step of the ladder to hold tools. Just slip the tools under the stretchy band, and it'll hold 'em in place, and yet let go easily when the tool is needed. — K.Y.

Dear Al: Although a ladder isn't all that heavy to carry, it's much easier if you add a handle on the side. Pick the ladder up and determine its center as far as the balance of weight. Then add a large screen door handle. — F.R.

You can also add a screen door hook and its screw eye so that the ladder can be held shut in place. This way, it can't come open while you're toting it around.

Dear Al: A broom holder clip for the wall can be mounted on the side of your stepladder and will serve as a hammer holder. Better than taking a chance of knocking it off the ladder. — G.T.B.

Dear Al: A towel rack can be mounted on the back of the top step of a ladder to hold paint rags. It's handy. — W.P.

Dear Al: You know those metal toothbrush holders for the bathroom wall that also have a place for the glass? I attached one to the side of my stepladder as a small tool holder. The holes for the brushes hold tools, and the glass holder holds a glass with nails, screws or whatever you're working with. — T.A.

His exploits read like headlines

By STEWART TAGGART
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In the last 20 years, Morris Lichtman has foiled muggings and stickups, disarmed a gun-toting woman, and even brought in a murder suspect who would surrender to no one but him.

Lichtman, 50, who drives a night delivery truck for the New York Daily News, has received 17 commendations for bravery in a city where bravery can be deadly.

"Some people are just afraid to get involved," he says. "Not me. And once these guys are caught, I go in and testify against them. I feel I have to. A lot of people are afraid of retribution and get scared out of it."

Williamsburg, the Brooklyn neighborhood where Lichtman lives, is a place seemingly eons away from the fashionable streets of Manhattan. Gutted buildings line many streets, and renewal seems only a distant dream. It is a mixed neighborhood of Hasidic Jews, Italians, and Puerto Ricans which Lichtman describes as "the United Nations of Brooklyn."

Lichtman often spends his free time helping out at the 90th precinct, the police station nearest his house.

"He's a concerned citizen," says Capt. John Hill, commanding officer of the 90th precinct. "He's also a super (police) buff. Sometimes he puts in as much as 40 hours a week around the precinct helping out."

One wall in the community affairs room at the precinct station is covered with newspaper clippings detailing Lichtman's exploits, as well as photographs of the plaques and awards he has won from four different city mayors: Robert Wagner, John Lindsay, Abe Beame and Edward Koch.

"We need more volunteers like Morris Lichtman," a spokesman for Koch quotes the current mayor as saying. "He's performed brilliantly, we're in his debt."

Koch has given Lichtman two commendations. The latest was in June 1981, after Lichtman helped foil an armed robbery.

Lichtman was born in Williamsburg, and, says Hill, "He knows everybody. If we want somebody for questioning, he'll do his best to get the word out."

Lichtman once helped bring in a reluctant murder suspect.

"There was this one kid, a gang member, who was wanted in connection with a murder and he knew the police were looking for him," Lichtman recalls. "He came to me, I've known him since he was a kid. He was scared, he wanted to surrender but he was afraid the police were going to beat him.

"We talked and agreed to go in (to the precinct house) together the next day. Sure enough, the next day he showed up right on time and we went in."

"He is maybe one person in 100 that is willing to help," says Mary Dulke, 77, who was once thrown to the ground by two men who took her purse. Lichtman helped police chase and apprehend the suspects. "Nobody wants to get involved or interfere. If they see something happen, they'll go on their way. We could use more people like Lichtman."

Lichtman works nights, and that's when most things happen, he says. One night especially sticks out in his mind.

"I pulled up to a light right near a delivery spot around 5 a.m., and out of the blue this woman walks up in front of the truck and points a gun at me," he remembers.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

A growing problem solved

DEAR HELOISE:

My young boys wear winter pajamas with feet. Their feet seem to grow faster than anything else, so the pajama feet, if not worn out from running around the house, are outgrown before the rest of the pajamas.

Several times I've just cut the feet off and hemmed the cuff, but then I had to listen to complaints about cold feet.

While cleaning out a bureau drawer I came across several pairs of socks with the tops stretched out.

On the way to the garbage with them I began to get the picture. So I got the pajamas, cut off the feet just above the elastic, and stitched on the socks.

They may look a little strange but now their pajamas have a lot of growing room.

The boys love their recycled "jammies," and we all love you! — Martha Barth

Thanks for the ray of warmth on a cold, wintery day! — Heloise

HINTS FROM HIM

Dear Heloise: Now that snow shoveling time has come, clean off that ol' shovel good and give it a coat of wax. Candle, canning, or any kind works.

Heat the shovel slightly — it helps get a smoother coating.

The snow won't stick to the shovel — it'll just slide off like sleds and little boys down a hill.

Try it. Makes shoveling lots easier and a little less like work. — G.W. Norcross

SHOWER TO BATH

Dear Heloise: If you have only a shower and want to give your small child a bath, put one of those small plastic pools on the shower floor.

There's usually enough lip on the floor to keep it in place, and the pool is flexible enough to fit the space. — Joey Latterman

Davaris

LEFTOVER POTATOES

Dear Heloise: Don't throw away that dollop of leftover creamed potatoes!

Refrigerate covered until the next day. Add one whole egg, enough flour to equal the potatoes, and one teaspoon baking powder.

Mix and drop by spoonfuls into hot oil. Remove when brown. Makes a quick addition to the next meal. — Carolyn Butscher

FAST FROST

Dear Heloise: If you use one of the popular canned frostings, you may find that it is difficult to spread.

To solve the problem, leave the can of frosting on the top of the stove while the cake or cupcakes are baking.

The heat will make it more s-p-r-e-a-d-a-b-l-e. Just don't set it to the back of the stove where it gets pretty hot. — Ann

CLEANER STOVE

Dear Heloise: After purchasing a new stove or after cleaning up the one you have, remove the knobs over the glass dials.

Cover the openings with an appropriate sized faucet washer and replace the knobs. The cost is minimal and the washers keep the inside of the glass clean.

On some stoves, the glass or metal around the knobs does not fit flush around the knob stem. This allows grease, film and grime to work its way around and under the knobs, getting behind the glass.

Your stove will look nice and clean much longer. — Dorothy Miller

Resolve to send a super hint to Heloise, P.O. Box 32000, San Antonio, TX 78216. She can't reply to your letter but she will be reading it carefully as she searches for great hints to share with her readers.

Doing nothing the thing to do

PORT WASHINGTON, N.Y. (AP) — When moving into a house, new or old, the first thing to do for decoration is to do nothing.

Eta Wright, an interior decorator here, says, "Wait one month and decide upon a basic color you love, not just a color which is in fashion. Then stick to using three basic colors throughout the house."

Not too much

STREAMWOOD, Ill. (AP) — When caring for indoor houseplants, using too much water can be just as harmful as too little, says the maker of Garden Scene planterware. Too much water causes plant roots to rot.

"Watering houseplants once a week is a general rule, but this varies according to the setting and the plant," says Richard Husby, marketing manager.

The correct procedure is to soak the plant thoroughly, then let the soil dry out before the next watering.

Town trying to shed its sudsy image

By DON BENSON
Associated Press Writer

CENTRAL FALLS, R.I. (AP) — When you've got a reputation for having more barrooms per square mile than any other town in the world, it's not an easy thing to live down.

The problem with this city of 17,000 is that it measures just 1.2 square miles, and contains 48 places where a person can buy a drink. A "barroom at every corner" is how residents often characterize their town.

City officials have tried for more than two decades to rid Central Falls of that image, but with little success.

Before 1955, when the city passed an ordinance prohibiting the issuance of new liquor licenses, there were 67 establishments offering alcoholic beverages.

"You could stumble out of one spot and fall into another without touching the sidewalk back in the old days," recalled Raymond W. Desmarais, a 74-year-old native.

Some buildings even had more than one bar inside, Desmarais said.

Yet despite the desire to reduce the number of bars here, James V. Gillan, chairman of the city's board of liquor commissioners, admitted there is not much that can be done unless a particular club is convicted of liquor law violations.

"We are not by any means trying to put anyone out of business," Gillan said. "We just don't take a man's license off the wall for no reason at all. (But) if there are violations ... that's a different ballgame."

In the last five years, Gillan said, only four bar owners have lost their licenses.

Under the 1955 ordinance, when a license is revoked it is torn up and not reissued. However, when a bar is sold, the liquor license may be transferred.

Edward P. Beard, a former congressman who recently purchased a bar in Central Falls, said the opportunity to make money in the business is not affected by the large number of competitors.

"The town has always had a tremendous capacity for alcoholic beverage (consumption)," Beard said. "Its nickname is 'Sparkle City.'

"There's a thirst here, even with 48 drinking establishments, that's difficult to quench."

The "thirst" in Central Falls apparently dates back to the Industrial Revolution when almost every one of the textile mills that prospered in this northern Rhode Island town stood next to a tavern where people congregated before and after work.

One of the poorest communities in New England, Central Falls still is a largely industrial town, with factories surrounded by two and three-story wooden frame houses along narrow streets.

"The town just would not be the same without beer trucks rolling up and down the street," Beard said.

There isn't much objection to the bars in the city, said Police Chief James F. Galligan. That's one reason there are so many, he said.

"If you walk to Notre Dame Church, you'll go by four bars on Broad Street," Desmarais said.

He and others recall the days when the drinking establishments had a reputation for trouble, particularly on the volatile West Side, which had the heaviest concentration of bars.

Decorating mistakes

PORT WASHINGTON, N.Y. (AP) — The three most common mistakes when decorating a living room are: trying to fill up all the spaces; not having a color scheme; and lacking sufficient furniture groupings for conversation.

Designer Eta Wright also says there is good clutter, such as showing off a collection of some kind, and bad clutter.

"Bad clutter is a mishmash that should be avoided," she says.

Make a chest

By ELLEN APPEL
Copley News Service

It's easy to turn a plain, unfinished chest into an Early American look-alike. All you need are dyes from the supermarket, a utility knife, and stenciling supplies.

The stenciled chest was found in homes throughout the Colonies during America's early days. In those days, furniture was simple in shape, but elaborate in color and pattern.

The designs were simple, and therefore simple to reproduce on your own American chest. Here are the directions:

MATERIALS: Unfinished chest, utility knife, paper, waxed stencil paper, tracing paper, carbon paper, stencil brush, watercolor brush, masking tape, pencil, rubber gloves, clear furniture finish such as polyurethane or varnish, dye colors. Recommended dyes are Rit Royal Blue No. 29 and Scarlet No. 5.

NOTE: If you have an old chest that is already painted, the dyes won't adhere to the wood. As an alternative, give the chest a new coat of paint, and then use spray paint, instead of dyes, for stenciling.

DRAWING THE DESIGN: 1. On plain paper, copy the designs that are illustrated here, or draw your own combination of flowers, hearts, fruits and borders. 2. Decide which areas of the design will be red and which will be blue. (On the chest shown, the eagle is blue; hearts and border, red.)

MAKING THE STENCIL: 1. Trace designs onto tracing paper. 2. Using carbon paper, trace portion of designs that will be blue onto 1 square of stencil paper. 3. Trace portions of designs that will be red onto another square of stencil paper. 4. Using the utility knife, cut designs from stencil paper.

PREPARATION: 1. Place furniture with surface to be stenciled parallel to floor. 2. Center first stencil on door, drawer or wherever stenciling is desired. Tape stencil at corners. 3. Mix two tablespoons of dye with an equal amount of water. Test intensity of color on bottom of chest (where test will not show). Adjust intensity as desired.

STENCILING: 1. While holding stencil tight against chest with one hand, paint chest with other hand. 2. Always paint from cut edge of stencil to center of design. 3. Leave small details, such as the eagle's eye, unpainted. When entire design is finised, fill in these details with another color. 4. Remove first stencil. Let first dye dry. 5. Repeat process with second stencil and second dye.

HINTS: 1. When painting, use as little dye as possible on your brushes. 2. Use small watercolor brush to paint details and small areas such as the eagle's head. 3. To reuse stencils on another part of the chest, blot edges with a paper towel to remove any wet dye that remains.

FINISHING: 1. Let dye dry throughly. 2. Cover chest with a coat of varnish or polyurethane.

Lose extra pounds by fooling your body's 'satiety hormones,' professor advises

By DON CARTER
Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE — Want to enjoy feasting without having all those goodies end up on your waist?

Try fooling your body's "satiety hormones" which signal the "full" feeling to your brain. Start with a high-carbohydrate dessert, eat slowly, and finish with the meat or protein course.

That strategy is proposed by Stephen Woods, a University of Washington psychology and medicine professor who specializes in obesity. His research has exploded a lot of old myths about eating and fatness.

The feeling of being "stuffed" that makes you want to quit eating is commonly attributed to a stretched stomach. Not so, Woods learned. You feel full when the insulin in your brain reaches a certain level. The insulin's effect is triggered by a number of "gut" or "satiety" hormones released by the intestines.

Explaining his theories, Woods says: "My research, and that of others, has shown that the amount of fat we carry is rather precisely regulated. If the weight gets below the normal level, you automatically overeat; if you get over that point, you tend to eat less."

Genetics "play a big role" in establishing an individual's fat level, he says, and there is some less-conclusive evidence that fat babies grow into fat adults.

Woods believes that future research will show more about "how to manipulate the signals ... the brain could be made to believe you're fatter than you are."

But current knowledge is sufficient to use a number of tricks to "feel full earlier," Woods says.

"One thing is to eat more slowly," he continues. "Studies show that fat people eat faster. Most of the hormones aren't released in the stomach, but in the intestines — and it takes more time for the food to get there if you eat more slowly, you'll feel satisfied with less food."

Another strategy for eating less is cutting out the drink before dinner. "Ethanol simulates the appetite," he cautions.

The next bit of advice backs up those millions of mothers who've told children, "No, you can't have candy right before dinner because it'll spoil your appetite."

Instead of meaty hors d'oeuvres, Woods suggests that those who do want to spoil their appetites try eating a piece of pure carbohydrate such as a piece of candy about 10 minutes before the meal. He explains that meat and other proteins are largely digested in the stomach, whereas the carbohydrates get to the intestines to trigger the hormones much sooner.

"I know most of us aren't going to start beginning our meals with the chocolate mousse," he laughs, "but there are things that can be done to reverse the order." He suggests that a fruit salad would be an appropriate first course to limit the appetite.

The professor cautions that his system "is only going to work for an individual meal — perhaps a particular target meal you know will tempt you to eat excessively." He explains that the brain, although temporarily fooled, will make you want to eat more later to maintain your "fat level."

He expects future research will establish that every food or combination of foods has an individual "fingerprint" on the manner and speed with which it triggers the "full-feeling" hormones of the body — giving dieters a greater range of tricks to fool mother nature.

Woods' research thus far has turned up no miracle ways to lose weight. "The only trick is to eat less," he says.

Although exercise "does a lot of other good things for the body," Woods says, "it won't take weight off . . . you have to diet as well." He explains that when you burn up calories with exercise, "the brain will fight to control your body weight and you end up eating more." You can lose weight if you continue eating the same amount you ate before you started exercising, he assures, "but, of course, that would be the same as a diet."

Space workhorse

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — A communications satellite, built to last three years, is celebrating its 15th anniversary as a workhorse in space, saving lives and expanding the world of information.

ATS — Applications Technology Satellite — was built by Hughes Aircraft here for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for the "express purpose of bringing practical benefits to mankind from space technology."

The satellite returned the first wide-angle pictures showing the full-disc earth through its spin-scan cloud camera, helping meteorologists track storm fronts across the Pacific Ocean. It also provided a channel for color-television transmission and demonstrated the ability to link several ground stations simultaneously.

Its scientific instruments were turned off in 1969. Today it provides the people of the Pacific regions with a link for communications from medical emergencies to classroom instruction.

Crystallized

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — An auction sale of rare pieces donated by nine of the world's top crystal and glass manufacturers raised more than $50,000 for this city's Crippled Children's Nursery School.

The sale, which kicked off the Halls International Crystal Event, attracted 650 prospective purchasers whose admission price also was given to the school, along with 10 percent of all other crystal sales on that opening evening of the affair.

Following the auction, more than $600,000 worth of museum-quality crystal was put on display, free to the public, at Halls Plaza including a "crystal castle" composed of hundreds of individual goblets.

Wives are Washington's Unknown Soldiers

By BETTY CUNIBERTI
(c) 1981, Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — They are Washington's Unknown Soldiers, the wives of the president's closest advisers.

In public they are known for their rustling evening gowns, their interest in art and their smiling pictures on the society page.

Then these elegant women go home, and Secret Service agents go with them, packing along walkie-talkies and guns, because the lives of the elegant women and their famous husbands are believed to be in serious peril 24 hours a day, everywhere they go.

Their children go to school with Secret Service agents. The children are believed to be in danger too.

Things most people take for granted — reasonable amounts of privacy, safety and sleep, and living within a thousand miles of home — are abruptly forfeited.

TWO MEMBERS OF the president's famed troika of power, Edwin Meese III, counselor to the president, and Michael K. Deaver, deputy chief of staff, have brought their wives and families to the highest level of Washington from a place that is as far removed in life style as it is in miles: California.

Ursula Meese, from San Diego, and Carolyn Deaver, from Sacramento, have many characterisics in common: an interest in skiing, a record of travel and a history of jobs.

But what is remarkable about them is the strength with which they cope.

Half the marriages in America fail, mostly under ordinary circumstances. Their circumstances are extraordinary.

"You better not come to one of these jobs," said Michael Deaver, "unless you have a good marriage to begin with.

"YOU TAKE THE primary pressure of just trying to raise a family and keep a home. Then you add on top of that the public part, and the fact that I'm seldom at home, and when I am, I have no time, because the phone's ringing all the time.

"We get up in the morning and there's a camera crew in the front yard. The lack of privacy is what worries her most, especially now."

In Washington, when a top aide says "especially now," he knows he does not need to explain what he means. The phrase refers to the unspeakable, to reports of Libyan hit squads in the country supposedly ordered to assassinate the president and his top advisers. The possible methods of assassination reported in the newspapers include shooting down their airplanes, blowing up their cars or spraying a presidential entourage with bullets — the latter of which has already been done by an American. And the administration is not yet a year old.

When President Reagan, Press Secretary James S. Brady and others were shot outside the Hilton Hotel here last March 30, bullets whizzed within inches of Mike Deaver.

Early reports of the incident were sketchy.

"I'd heard it on the radio and knew that Mike was always two feet ahead or two feet behind (the president)," said Carolyn Deaver, "and with a spray of bullets, it (her husband being hit) wouldn't have been unlikely.

SHE GOT HER 6-year-old son, Blair, out of school, and when they arrived home she received word that her husband was not hit.

But when the television replayed the sickening scene over and over, her 6-year-old thought the bald man lying motionless on the sidewalk was his father.

"I knew it wasn't Mike, but Blair thought it was, she said. "He kept saying, 'Are you sure?' He stayed in there all afternoon. I couldn't get him away from it."

The assassination attempt, she said, "took a bit of the glimmer off everything. What had been really a euphoric kind of high ... it really made you stop and think hard about lots of things. You suddenly, I guess, feel very vulnerable."

Is advising the president a job worth dying for? Has that decision been made, the way soldiers make it?

They are questions she doesn't really answer.

"I DON'T THINK of it as a soldiering kind of job," Carolyn Deaver said.

Does Ursula Meese fear for her husband's life?

"No," she said. "Having all this security around probably makes me feel more secure. It's probably more likely to be hit by a truck."

When Carolyn Deaver talks about the assassination attempt and the Libyan hit squads, her soft, high-pitched, little-girl voice does not quiver. There is no lump in her throat, no dramatics of any kind. Ursula Meese manages to even chuckle about the constant presence of the Secret Service officers who have been assigned to them since the Libyan hit squad reports, saying it's "just like you added people to your family."

But it's not just like that.

It's not anything like that.

THESE ARE LITTLE white lies you tell to the press, to your children, and probably to yourself. It is the only way to cope.

Of course, they fear for their husbands' lives.

What they have to do is keep a lid on the fear, bury it deep in the subconscious.

Nancy Reagan said recently that the way she copes with the danger is "You try to put it in the back of your mind," a feat she is able to accomplish, she said, "from time to time."

And that is the way it is done. If you really think about it, you'll go crazy.

"I think you always have that (fear) in your background, that you know that's a possibility every day," Ursula Meese said. "You can't waste your energy worrying about that. I think my daughter thinks about it more than we do."

OF THE LIBYAN hit squad threat, Carolyn Deaver said, "I'm sure it's somewhere in your mind, but I don't dwell on it. You just have to keep going in as normal a way as you can. You can't grind to a halt. We're just a little more aware."

When Secret Service protection was assigned to the family, Carolyn Deaver recalled, "I was a little horrified, really. I had assumed it would only be for Mike."

Nonetheless, she and her children, 6-year-old Blair and 11-year-old Amanda, "are not frightened."

"It's positively amazing. But I think television has immuned them to apprehension."

If the threat of assassination seems somehow unreal, the complete change in life style is all too real.

For the Deavers, the specter of political intrusion into their lives is so keenly fel that Mike Deaver made it very clear when he accepted the job that he would be staying only a year and a half.

LAST WEEK, when he was interviewed for this story, that original year and a half seemed to have swelled to a full two years.

"I want to stay through the 1982 (congressional) elections," he said.

The possibility of not coming to Washington at all with Reagan "was certainly a consideration we talked about," Carolyn Deaver said. "But I think it would have really been too bad to miss it."

When they will leave, she said, "is really Mike's decision."

Even though he said right from the start he would not stay the full term, Mike Deaver was still unaware of the enormity of the adjustment that lay before him and his wife.

"I don't think we ever dreamed," he said, "that the visibility would be as high.

"YOU JUST LEARN to live with it, knowing it will just be a short period of time. You rationalize all this by saying it's important for me to be here. But that's easier for me to say (than Carolyn)."

Carolyn Deaver kids her husband about "reaching rock star status."

"I don't feel jealous of Mike. But I give him a bad time," she said. "Every time our friends call they say, 'Oh, we just heard about Mike, we just saw his picture.' It is really getting to be quite something. I'm now the wife of Mike Deaver.

This is not as big a problem for Carolyn Deaver as the simple, overwhelming lack of privacy.

"I think the telephone is one of the real instruments of disruption, because you can't turn it off," she said. During an interview at the home the Deavers rent in a posh section of Northwest Washington, Carolyn Deaver let the ringing phone go unanswered several times.

"Mike comes home," she said, "and there are calls that come, sometimes in rapid succession and so it's difficult to sit down together and have a dinner with the children or read a story to them. With the kind of communication he has to keep open, he was to wear a pager, and it's difficult when you want to take your children to the Air and Space Museum or a movie to always have this interruption.

"IT'S A LITTLE harder to relax, I guess. You don't have time for friends who have been friends for years. You're so busy doing everything else, there's little time left for just yourself."

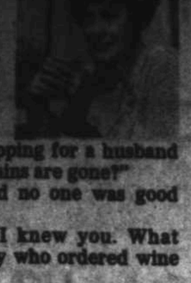
Generation riptides



By ERMA BOMBECK

I'm a mother who is a victim of generation riptides.

I swim in the traditional waters where a child is married at the age of 18, has a baby at 19 and a life-constricting mortgage by 21.

But a funny thing happened to me on my way to the next generation. I encountered a tidal wave of freedom and independence that made sense. So, I also support the current waves that question why you have to be married before you're 30 or more.

I'm a contradiction and I know it. When my grown children can't support a seven-year-old car and feed themselves at the same time, I'm glad they're not married. When they blow a half week's salary on a Rolling Stones concert, I'm glad they're responsible only for themselves.

When they reach a new plateau of accomplishment and realize they've done something they never thought they could do before, I share their pride.

But there are other days when they have only to walk in the front door to know on which waters I'm sailing.

"Hi, Mom."

"It's the end of the month. Why aren't you out shopping for a husband before all the bargains are gone?"

"You always said no one was good enough for me."

"That's before I knew you. What about that nice boy who ordered wine with the dinner?"

"He was shallow, insensitive, crude, chauvinistic, married and bragged about setting fires."

"No one's perfect."

"He said you should lose about 20 pounds."

"You were lucky the creep was convicted. So what about the other nice fella who loved Barry Manilow?"

"He thought ERA stood for Earned Run Average."

"And that nice boy who lived at home with his mother?"

"He thought ERA stood for a detergent."

"Why are you punishing your mother? Is it because I am short and you don't like short people? Is it because I never got up in the mornings to get your breakfast? Are you persecuting me for post-dating checks for the tooth fairy? Why?"

"Let me guess, Mom. You saw someone's new grandchild today, right?"

That kid's too smart to be married.

How holding in emotions affects looks

By TRISHA YEAGER
Copley News Service

Just as negative emotions can limit our beauty, vitality and self-expression, so can the inability to express our feelings.

In response to a recent column on beauty and emotions, I received this letter:

Dear Trisha: The person who wrote in about being overly emotional is lucky. I have the opposite problem. I can't express my emotions, good or bad.

I would like to be able to get more excited anfd be more exciting. Any advice? — H.Z.

Dear H.Z.: I once met a woman who said almost the same thing. Susan was tall and thin, her ashen hair blending quiescently with her even-toned complexion, brown eyes and one-piece taupe pantsuit.

She once described her appearance as being so drab that only the sharpest eye could have picked her out of a lineup of telephone poles on a rainy November day.

Susan attended the first three sessions of my "Beauty: It's an Inside Job" class and never said a word. During the fourth session, as we were discussing beauty and emotions, Susan spoke up.

"My emotions are as flat as my chest," she said wryly. "I never get mad, I seldom cry and I don't ever remember having an attack of the giggles."

As she spoke, the rest of the class sensed her need. They began drawing her out and offering suggestions. One woman commented that just as emotions influence actions, actions influence our feelings. She suggested that Susan try acting the way she wanted to feel.

"Choose to feel vibrant," she counseled. "And then act that way. That includes dressing the part, too!"

The rest of the class joined in, overlooking Susan's ill-concealed doubtfulness, and by the time we adjourned she was neatly outfitted with a unique assignment: Besides acting out her emotions, she was to seek new situations that might evoke emotional responses. At the same time she was to focus more closely upon her feelings — even describe them in writing — as a way of increasing her emotional sensitivity.

As I watched her leave, I'll admit I had reservations about the whole thing. Susan had reluctantly agreed to give the experiment a try, but I wondered if she would — or even could.

She missed the next class, but showed up the following week wearing a bright plum blouse that seemed to reflect her mood.

"Well, I finally made the neighbor's dog growl!" she announced dryly and punctuated her statement with a snort.

No one dared comment and Susan continued: "The first week was awful. I tried following the class's directives, but I felt like such a phony! Only she-- stubbornness kept me going.

"I tried to set up situations in which I might fe something. I even went to a convalescent home a talked with the patients. But I was nervous a uncomfortable so I left. When I got home, there w the neighbor's dog standing in my driveway, waggi his tail mockingly. On impulse, I flung my arn around and yelled, acting like I was really mad. Tl dog thought I was playing.

"The next day I tried it again. I kept at it until final I got the dog to growl!" Susan's voice beamed wit pride.

"And that did it! I unloosed a lot of stuff inside me. came to realize that by suppressing my negative em tions, I was also dampening my ability to feel goo things.

"Oh, by the way, I went back to that convalescent home. And I think I've made a new friend."

Susan smiled shyly, and those of us close to her were warmed by her nearly incredible loveliness.

Please send your questIonsabout beauty to Trisha Yeager, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper. Questions of general interest will be answered in this column. Volume of mail prohibits individual replies.

Lots of fountains

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — When spring comes this "city of fountains," daffodils and tulips will bloo at the foot of the $100,000 "Raintree Thicket," a ne fountain in downtown Kansas City.

Claiming more fountains than any other city outsic Rome, Kansas City now boasts 48 major fountains an dozens of smaller ones, says Harold D. Rice, presider of the City of Fountains Foundation. The foundatio which helps underwrite Kansas City's long-standin love affair with fountains, strives to fund at least on major fountain each year.

The new fountain is made of stainless steel and is th focal point of a three-quarter-acre urban pocket parl Designed by Missouri architects William Severson an Saunders Schultz, the fountain stands 18 feet high an is 25 feet in diameter.

DEAR ABBY

Widower thankful he took vaction with wife

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Remember this?

"Dear Abby: I work for a travel agency and love it. But the one aspect of my job that saddens me is seeing so many widows booking tours, hoping to meet others in the same circumstances.

"The most common remark I hear is, 'How I wish my dear departed husband could have lived to take this trip with me! He worked so hard all his life, and just when he could have relaxed and enjoyed life, he dies.'

"So, Abby, tell your readers not to put off those vacation trips too long. Take a trip, and make some memories — together. — MEMORY-MAKER IN MILWAUKEE"

"DEAR MEMORY-MAKER: Thanks for a timely reminder that it's always later than we think. Women, urge your men to enjoy the fruits of their labor now! And if they resist, tell 'em it's no time for a widow to see the world alone on her husband's insurance money."

Abby, your readers might appreciate a follow-up story on the above article that appeared in our Philadelphia Bulletin several years ago.

Hazel, my wife of 42 years, cut it out and showed it to me. Because it made sense to us, we took a long-dreamed-of Caribbean cruise — something we always wanted to do, but never found the time.

Abby, we had the time of our lives! And I'm glad we went, because Hazel's health began to fail last year, and after a long and painful illness, a merciful Lord took my beloved wife home to her eternal rest. I found this clipping in her Bible. Thanks for the memories, Abby. Sign me ... HAZEL'S MAC

DEAR ABBY: My fiance has been working in another state for the last three months. He's 31 and stands 6-foot-1. He came home a few days ago, and when we hugged hello I noticed that he seemed to have "shrunk." He told me that he thought I had grown taller. I'm 25 and have been 5-foot-4 since the age of 14. After a lot of kidding around about it, we decided to measure each other to find out whether he had shrunk or I had grown, and we were surprised to find that I am now 5-foot-5 and he is still 6-foot-1.

Abby, I thought people stopped growing after they reached the age of 21. Is it possible that I could have grown at my age? My clothes still fit and I don't feel any taller. I am on the pill. Would that have anything to do with my growing taller? My whole family has called me "Shorty" for years, so please sign this ... SHORTY NO MORE

DEAR SHORTY: It is indeed possible to continue growing after age 21. And the pill has nothing to do with it.

DEAR ABBY: Who started that old superstition, "Thirteen at a dinner table is bad luck"? – WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Probably the hostess who had service for 12 in her good dishes, silver and stemware, only 12 placemats and napkins in her company linen, and a dining room set with only 12 chairs. She planned a lovely sit-down dinner for 12, then a guest called her at the last minute and asked if she could bring a friend.

(Do you have questions about sex, love, drugs and the pain of growing up? Get Abby's new booklet: "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know." Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd, Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.)

Check before sealing tile

By GENE GARY
Copley News Service

Q. When quarry tile is installed, normal cleaning is with a neutral base soap, such as Hillyards Super Shineall or Fels Naptha Soap.

When sealing any quarry tile, the manufacturer should be checked for recommendations. Two manufacturers, American Olean and Summitville, do not recommend any sealer on their quarry tiles. Normal cleaning with a nuetral base soap is all that is needed. If their tile is resealed, they will not warranty their product.

If an acid is used, it should be sulfamic acid and used only after the quarry tile has been saturated with water with a ratio of one pound of sulfamic crystals to five gallons of water.

Testing done by the Ceramic Tile Institute in in Los Angeles shows the only sealer that has worked successfully on all quarry tiles is Watco. However, this is a very technical application and manufacturers' instructions need to be followed closely. Most quarry tiles are not recommended for sealing. — Gregory I. Mowat, ceramic tile consultant, executive director of Ceramic Tile and Marble Institute of San Diego.

A. Thank you very much for this information, Mr. Mowat. He sent in this letter in response to a recent column that suggested a somewhat different treatment for preserving the finish of quarry tiles, old information which we gleaned from our files.

Q. Our window sills show signs of damage in spite of the fact we try to keep them protected with frequent coats of paint. Do you have any suggestions for a protective finish? We are now in the process of sanding them down to the bare wood. — Art McG.

A. Exterior window sills probably take more punishment from the elements than any other part of the house. Sun, rain and temperature changes destroy their finish long before paint on siding or trim shows any sign of age.

Let the sills deteriorate too long and you will end up having to replace the cracking, rotting wood. To repair a sill before it reaches that unhappy state, first fill all surface cracks. Use an elastic caulking, rather than the hard-drying type, so the wood remains flexible. Trim with two coats of oil-base primer and finish with house paint.

If a sill is already badly deteriorated, or if it takes more than a normal beating from the weather, you can cover it completely with a fiberglass process that waterproofs the wood for many years. The process, in two parts, calls for a special mastic and reinforcing fiberglass fabric. Unlike conventional crack fillers and caulking compounds, it dries to a finish that is pliable at all temperatures. Cracks are bridged rather than filled, so caulking is not squeezed out when a crack shrinks shut.

Also, the mastic seals the surface to keep out the moisture.

Brush on the mastic with an ordinary paint brush. Next, cut a piece of fiberglass to fit and roll smoothly over the mastic. Let this dry until it is tacky. Then brush on another coat of mastic. The final coat should dry several days before the finish painting.

Test tube babies have no greater risk of serious birth defects, doctor says

By JOANN RODGERS
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — Couples having a test tube baby undergo no greater risk of bearing an abnormal child than those who conceive naturally.

"Nature's rate of serious birth defects is about 2 to 3 percent," according to Dr. John D. Biggers of Harvard medical school's Human Reproduction Laboratory. A review of animal experiments and other research suggests "there is not a high likelihood of any increased rate" of abnormalities among test tube babies, he said.

Biggers added that, to date, only one of the 19 test tube infants born had a birth defect, a heart abnormality which has been treated. Moreover, there is no evidence that his laboratory origins contributed to the defect.

Test tube babies are children born after an egg is taken from a woman's ovary, fertilized with sperm in a glass lab dish, then transferred in the early embryo stage to the woman's womb for nine months of pregnancy and birth.

America's first test tube infant, Elizabeth Carr, was born Dec. 28 in Norfolk, Va.

In a report to the American Association for the Advancement of Science here, Biggers said more than 100 women whose egg carrying tubes cannot perform normally have become pregnant with in vitro fertilization and embryo transfer.

The first was in England in 1978 and resulted in the birth of Louise brown.

Dr. Leroy Walters, director of the Kennedy Institute for Bioethics at Georgetown University, reported that of the 19 documented births 12 were in Australia, six in England and one in the United States. A 20th, in Calcutta, has not been verified but probably took place, Biggers said.

The Harvard scientist also said that in vitro fertilizations are not yet as efficient as nature in producing full term pregnancies, but the success rate is improving.

In normal reproduction, of every 100 eggs exposed to sperm, only 84 will become fertilized and only 30 will produce a child.

The fertilization rate in the laboratory is "just as efficient," Biggers said, although implantation and full-term pregnancy is not. "That is where the improvement can come and is expected to come soon." After that, "we cannot expect to do better than nature itself."

In the Australian series of test tube procedures (the largest), the pregnancy rate is 10 percent.

Both Biggerrs and Walters noted the ethical opposition to in vitro fertilization is based on concern for the fate of test tube embryos that are not implanted.

But they said even in nature, fertilized embryos die and that in cases when more than one egg is fertilized at a time, all but one are almost always aborted. "In vitro fertilization and embryo transfer are very close to natural reproductive methods," said Walters.

"The only difference would be if the scientist saw a grossly abnormal looking embryo in the lab and let it die without transferring it," Walters said. "But such an embryo would probably not survive in nature either and letting it die would be a decision similar to what is done when severely abnormal infants are born with little chance of survival."

In the U.S. alone, there are 600,000 women who could potentially benefit from in vitro fertilization. They would not be taking unreasonable risks, Walters said, and as success rates improve, the $4,000 to $8,000 price tag is likely to fall. He predicts there will be increased pressure to make the procedure available to all who need it, whether they can pay for it themselves or not.

That means private and public health insurance could one day cover the procedure.

Local teens to compete in upcoming pageant

Four more finalists from Midland have been announced for the Annual 1982 Miss West Texas National Teen-Ager Pageant to be held in the El Paso School Auditorium in El Paso April 16-18.

They are Lisa Subisaretta, Helena Foret, Erin Shelly and Leslie Metts.

Miss Shelly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Shelly, is 15 years of age. She is interested in acting, music, dancing and modeling. Her sponsor is Westside of Midland.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene H. Foret are the parents of Miss Foret, 17. She enjoys playing tennis and the piano and reading. Her sponsor is Tracer Laboratory of Midland.

Miss Subisaretta, 17, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Subisaretta. She enjoys dancing and tennis.

Miss Metts, 16, is the daughter of David Metts and Mrs. Patricia Netherland. She is sponsored by Talk It Over Counseling Service and Robert Netherland. Her hobbies include horseback riding, art, music and acting.

The Miss West Texas National Teen-Ager Pageant is the official regional finals to the Miss Texas National Teen-Ager Pageant to be held in June.

Each contestant is required to participate in the Volunteer Community Service Program of the National Teen-Ager Pageant. This program teaches teen-agers to share and to participate in school and civic affairs.

The winner of the pageant will receive a cash scholarship, other prizes and will be fully sponsored to compete in the Miss Texas National Teen-Ager Pageant to be held at Texas Christian University. Contestants will be judged on scholastic achievement-leadership, poise-personality and appearance.

Peanut festival annual event

DOTHAN, Ala. (AP) — What's called "America's Nuttiest National Festival" takes place here every year when the Georgia, Alabama and Florida Peanut Commissions stage the National Peanut Festival.

Among the events are a peanut recipe contest, which in 1981 attracted 8,000 entries; a pageant that attracts daughters of peanut growers from the tri-state area vying for college scholarships; a Little Miss Peanut copetition for second-graders; and an annual parade.

Bike helmets

NORWALK, Calif. (AP) — Only a small portion of the nation's 105 million bicycle riders wear protective helmets, according to a bicycle-helmet maker.

Figures gathered by Bell Helmets for 1980 show that about 75 percent of more than 1,000 fatally injured bicyclists died of head injuries. The figures also indicate there were more than 500,000 bicycle accidents serious enough for cyclists to require hospital emergency-room care. Meanwhile, the study reveals that one-half of one percent of all American bikers wear protective headgear.

Although wearing a helmet cannot prevent an accident, it can reduce the risk of head injury, according to Bell.

Safety paper

BURLINGTON, Iowa (AP) — Americans write more than 37 billion checks a year, or 140 million checks every business day.

Safety paper is used for nearly all checks, because it is deterrent to alteration and counterfeiting.

Georgia-Pacific's La Monte Division has a safety paper plant here which can produce 14,600 tons of the sensitive paper a year.

Lifestyle guidelines

The following are suggested guidelines for publication of stories in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram.

Information for our Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday, or two days before publication in a daily paper.

Engagement announcements must appear at least four weeks before the wedding date. Wedding stories must be submitted within a week of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials should include the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. The Reporter-Telegram has forms for engagement and wedding announcement stories.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons living within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

Only the bride's picture will be used with both the engagement and wedding announcement.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of pictures and stories.

Take care when gathering fabrics

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

You wouldn't think gathers could be all that big a deal, right? You wrinkle up the fabric to fit another piece of fabric and you stitch.

Well — it isn't that easy. Badly done, gathers are as noticeable as lipstick on a shirt collar (although not as life-threatening).

Set the stitch length on your machine to a stitch just long enough to be pulled — no longer. Loosen upper tension slightly. Make two rows of gathering stitches, one on each side of the seamline (at one-half and three-fourths inch).

At one end of gathering, insert a pin at right angles to the stitching. Wrap the thread ends around pin to secure. From the opposite end gently pull on bobbin threads to work in gathering. When gathered to the right length, insert a second pin to secure these thread ends. Now, nothing can go anywhere while you work.

Work with the gathers until they are evenly distributed and neatly in place. Pin at right angles to stitching.

Hand-baste on the one-half-inch line. Do not remove gathering stitches yet. Machine-stitch on the seamline, having the gathered section toward you. Keep a hand on each side of presser foot to prevent overlapping or pleating. Stitch slowly and you'll be all right. Remove gathering stitches.

If you are gathering a long area (such as the top of a skirt), do not make the gathering stitches all in one piece. Break them up into sections. Much easier to work with and much less chance of breaking your thread.

Another way to gather: Lay a length of pearl cotton, dental floss, embroidery thread or two strands of regular thread along the line to be gathered. Over this cord, narrow zigzag. Gently pull on each end of cord to gather. Works great for easing in a sleeve also.

Wallpaper can 'stretch' very small area

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. We have a very small dining area just off our kitchen in our new condo.

The whole apartment is painted off-white and so the kitchen-dining area is without personality and seems very unattractive. I would like to give the space a visually pleasing touch but I am afraid that wallpaper would close in the walls even more than they already are.

Do you have some suggestions? — T.R.W.

A. Wallpaper doesn't necessarily make a space look smaller visually. If you carefully choose the pattern and apply the wallpaper liberally to walls, cabinets and even laminate matching fabric to window shades for large windows or sliding doors, you can create a pleasing continuity that visually enlarges your room.

Look for a paper pattern that you feel blends with your kitchen appliances, cabinets and counter tops in the kitchen and continue the kitchen paper right out into the dining area.

One of the deeper colors may be used for an accent color and a very light one for the ceiling color.

Q. We have moved into a new home which has tall vertical windows across one wall where one L of our sofa will sit. Wood beams extend from floor to ceiling framing these four windows. We have bought a new camel-colored, simulated-suede sofa. Our carpeting is gold.

We want to stay with very subdued, natural colors in this room and desire a very tailored look. What would be a good choice for window treatment if we want some minimal amount of privacy in the evening but none in the daytime? We have a lovely country view we wish to take advantage of.

Also we need to buy a lounge chair. What color would you suggest? — P.C.

A. A very excellent window treatment for your tall windows would be woven shades in tones of tan, gold, putty and dark brown. These could be recessed between the beams to give a built-in look.

These shades gently fold under as you pull them up. Open, they would allow you to enjoy your view and closed, they would give you considerable privacy. Woven blinds are available in a wide variety of colors and textures so that you can choose just what best ties your room colors together. The textural contrast of the blinds with the suedelike finish of your sofa would be good.

For your lounge chair, a dark chocolate brown would be pleasing — in a soft, slightly textured wool or blend.

Q. Our avocado carpeting is still too good to replace but I am very tired of the avocado and gold color scheme in our living room.

I want to buy a new sofa and some new chairs but I must work around the avocado carpeting.

What new color scheme might I establish? What color should I repaint my gold walls? I also will need new draperies. — M.N.

A. A very fresh and charming color combination becoming more popular is green and pink or green and shrimp and pink.

Why not off-white walls, a sofa of flowers of greens, pink and salmon, matching draperies in the floral print, and a pair of chairs in a small stripe or woven fabric of green and salmon.

Accessorize with lots of green plants and the salmon shade as well.

Handy hints can make sewing easier and faster

By BETTY KINSER
Copley News Service

Save this list. It may save you tons of time and lots of work.

Things to make your sewing easier.

1. Glue a new fiberglass tape measure to the front edge of your sewing table. After a while you will lose track of the number of times you use it with each sewing project. Handy as all-get-out!

2. Fold down the top edge of a small brown sack. Tape to the side of your sewing table. Now — remember it is there each time you have a little piece of thread in your hand that you are tempted to just let fall on the floor. When you trim seam allowances, remember it is there. When you are ripping out a seam, remember it is there. It will soon become your handiest catch-all

3. Stop by the hardware store and buy one of those little "nuts and bolts" 12-drawer cabinets. Very inexpensive and just the thing for holding snaps, needles, butons, hooks, and — well, the list is endless. Make this little cabinet doubly handy by hanging it on the wall right above your machine.

4. Keep doing it until it becomes habit — cut thread at an angle. This pointed end is much easier to thread through a needle and will not split easily.

5. Beg a bolt board from your fabric shop and use it to insert in pant legs for pressing. Be sure the board is smooth with no bumps or wrinkles. (beggars can be choosers).

6. Hang your pins around your neck. Stitch ribbon or cord to a small pin cushion and tie it around your neck.

Doctor advises patients to get second opinion

By VINOD CHHABRA
Hearst Feature Service

ALBANY — Ellen was waiting in her gynecologist's office for what was supposed to be a routine checkup when she discovered a small lump in her left breast. "The doctor told me I had another lump on the right breast, too," she recalls, "and he told me that I'd better see a surgeon without delay."

And the doctor's tone of urgency, his refusal to answer any questions, indicated that something was seriously wrong.

She had had a cyst removed six years earlier. At that time the surgeon had told her that if the biopsy indicated it was malignant, he would have to perform a radical mastectomy. In each case, as it happened, Ellen had nothing to fear, even though, while waiting for the surgeon's decision, she was terrifed by the thought that she had cancer. But when Ellen inquired about possible alternatives to removing the entire breast, the surgeon admonished her for reading too many women's magazines.

Experiences such as Ellen's aren't rare. At least she dared ask the physicians questions about the diagnosis and prescribed treatment. There are all too many patients who show all the symptoms of being a "totally passive," a dangerous ailment in itself that afflicts too many Americans, according to Dr. Keith Sehnert, former director of the Center for Continuing Health Education at Georgetown University and an advocate of teaching patients to be more assertive, more inquisitive and more responsible for their own health care.

There are many physicians who are worth your time, money and trust, says Sehnert. And then, he adds, there are those who can definitely prove dangerous to your health. Doctors are so often treated as semi-dieties, the kind of image soap operas promote, that many patients will never make the distinction.

All that has got to change, according to Albany pediatrician Anthony F. Mastrianni. "It's extremely important that the patient and physician communicate. Patients should ask questions and the doctor should address them.

If you get a patient who just keeps saying, 'Yes, doctor,' " he adds, "chances are you've got a patient with a lot of unanswered questions. I'm all for physicians and patients being on a first-name basis. I don't want patients to say: 'He may be a fine doctor, but I can't talk to him.' "

Family physician Bruce Bagley says, "People who can't communicate with their doctors should drop them."

The doctors advise patients to ask their friends and neighbors about their doctors when looking for a new physician. Patients should look first for competence, then character and compatibility. Is the doctor condescending and always in a rush or is he patient and understanding? Most important - does he explain everything in plain English?

"Instead of communicating with doctors, patients turn to magazines for their information," says gynecologist Katy Irani. They may be helpful, but "in many cases they mislead and alarm. Each individual case is different, and there are so many variables involved that no magazine article can sum up what you're looking for."

And, say the doctors, attitudes are changing among physicians about second opinions, too. Instead of being affronted, more and more doctors welcome requests for second opinions. "Chances are the second opinion will be the same," Mastrianni says, "but the patient is concerned and a second opinion can be very reassuring."

Second opinions are not only reassuring, they also benefit patients — and they are valuable to doctors, too.

Museum presents women's series

NEW YORK (AP) — A series of exhibitions, programs and events, "Images of Jewish Women," is being held at the Jewish Museum, running through March 14 and including films, lectures, discussions and readings by major women writers, filmmakers and scholars.

It will feature exhibitions by two women artists. One is "June Wayne: The Dorothy Series," 20 lithographs drawn from letters, old photographs and recollections of the artist's mother, Dorothy, who emigrated to America from Russia just after the turn of the century.

The other, "Between Holy and Profane: Xerography by Dina Dar," is an exhibition of 21 color prints collaged from fabrics, flowers, Jewish ritual objects and portraits of the artist's family.

Inner-city schools that work

By MARK FRAZIER
(Special from Reader's Digest)

At age 10, Michael Ridley could not read. In view of his "serious learning problem," Chicago school officials told his worried mother that he would be placed in a class for the mentally handicapped.

This was just over two years ago. Today Michael reads five grade levels above his previous scores. How did it happen? Credit goes to Westside Prep, an independent school where scores of once "backward" black children have become eager learners.

In Washington, D.C., a parochial school called Our Lady of Perpetual Help has shown how children from impoverished families can advance rapidly in the most adverse circumstances. Students in the 99-percent-black school test one to three years ahead of their counterparts the same age at the public school across the street.

In East Palo Alto, Calif., a sharecropper's determined daughter, tired of seeing children fall prey to crime and academic despair in the public schools, joined forces with other low-income parents to form a private elementary day school. Its strict emphasis on basic skills has since allowed it to make an unprecedented offer: full tuition refund for any child who fails to learn to read in the first year.

In Brooklyn, N.Y., P.S. 91 experienced a shift in composition from majority white to overwhelmingly black and Hispanic over the past 15 years - the sort of change that typically produces turmoil and lowered scores. Yet, because of steps taken by the school's dedicated administrators and teachers, reading scores rose ABOVE national norms during the same period. America's inner-city public schools are clearly in awful shape. Since 1965 - and despite soaring amounts spent on education - student performance on standardized math and reading tests has deteriorated by 10 percent. Black youngsters have been particularly hurt. By some estimates, four out of 10 black 17-year-olds are today functionally illiterate.

But even in the face of such alarming facts, more and more inner-city schools CAN work - at a cost far below that now doled out by taxpayers. Any community where parents and taxpayers perceive room for educational improvement should consider these steps, all based on methods developed by outstanding inner-city educators around the country:

— FOCUS ON BASIC SKILLS. In a fit of unthinking humanitarianism, public schools throughout the country have relaxed demands that students thoroughly learn the basics of grammar, spelling, composition and arithmetic. Casualties of this "progressive" approach are now leaving our high schools completely lacking in the survival skills necessary for a productive life. A first move toward repairing the system is to increase the proportion of the school day devoted to mastery of these fundamental skills.

— ESTABLISH DISCIPLINE. Even one or two disruptive students in a class can make it impossible for dedicated teachers to reach the interested ones. In successful inner-city schools, such individuals soon learn that they will be subject to disciplinary measures, including suspension or expulsion.

— ENSURE CHALLENGE. Virtually all successful inner-city schools rely on formal or informal groupings according to ability. Although attacked by progressive educational theorists on the ground that it stereotypes some students for life as slow learners, the concept of tracking yields results far superior to those attained when teachers lecture to a classroom where students range widely in ability. — AVOID GIMMICKS. Successful inner-city schools put a premium not on how many degrees in "educational theory" a teacher has, or on how much he or she knows about audiovisual equipment and teaching machines; what counts is the ability to impart needed skills to the children.

Nor is a well-staffed bureaucracy necessary to the educational process. Inner-city parochial schools in Chicago spend one-tenth the amount per child on administrative costs as do the public schools - and their pupils score higher.

— ENCOURAGE CHOICE. Allowing families greater latitude in the selection of schools for their children - the goal of tuition tax credits and similar measures - would force mismanaged schools to shape up or lose students to more effective educators.

Those who hope for sudden political changes in the way our public schools operate may be in for a long wait. Vote-conscious politicians are reluctant to alienate the National Education Association or the American Federation of Teachers, whose more than 2 million members have tipped many political races.

Yet the failure of our public schools is driving more and more parents to take matters into their own hands. As their example spreads, more than stereotypes about disadvantaged students are likely to crumble. Parents everywhere may benefit from the heartening message of the courageous new educators: that, at lower cost, schools CAN do far more.

Arthritis gives warning symptoms

ATLANTA (AP) — The average arthritis sufferer waits more than four years before seeking treatment for this serious and potentially crippling condition, according to the Arthritis Foundation.

"It is the nature of arthritis symptoms to come and go unpredictably, so if the pain goes away for a week or a month people with arthritis think the problem has gone away. They also attribute the aches to something else, like overexertion," says Dr. Frederic McDuffie, the Arthritis Foundation's senior vice president of medical affairs.

"Some people mistakenly believe that nothing can be done about arthritis. However, something can be done," says McDuffie. "Early treatment consisting of medication, exercise, and sometimes surgery, can prevent crippling and permanent damage. Therefore, it is critical to heed certain warnings and consult your physician immediately."

Symptoms to look for, says McDuffie, include redness, pain and swelling in the joints — especially at night and in the mornings; inability to move arms and legs properly; tingling sensations in the fingertips, hands and feet; and joint pain in combination with unexplained weight loss, fever, weakness or fatigue.

They once snickered at this dreamer

By ARNOLD HAMILTON
(c) 1982, Dallas Times Herald

ELK CITY, Okla. — When Robert Hefner III suggested in 1959 he could drill and produce deep gas in the Anadarko Basin of Western Oklahoma, geologists and explorationists snickered.

They thought Hefner, a brash young geologist from Oklahoma City, was a dreamer. His plans, inconceivable. Even if drilling technology improved, permitting exploration below 15,000 feet, there probably was no gas. The pressures, they believed, were too great: the gas would burn or be crushed by a lack of pore space in rock that far beneath the surface.

Not many doubt Hefner anymore.

The millionaire geologist, managing partner and co-owner of GHK Corp., not only has proven his hypothesis that the Anadarko Basin contains vast, untapped supplies of deep natural gas, he also has proven he could develop the technology necessary to tap it, economically.

And now, in a wheat field south of Elk City, he is drilling a natural gas well that could shatter the world's depth record held by the Soviet Union.

Hefner is shooting to drill below 35,000 at the Robinson 1-1 well, using a $12 million Parker Drilling Co. rig designed, if necessary, to reach 50,000 feet — almost 10 miles. The Russians drilled an experimental well in Siberia to 35,371 feet. Begun last June, the Robinson already has reached 13,000 feet. It is scheduled for completion in June 1983.

Another Hefner well, the Duncan 1-34, sitting inside the Elk City limits, is targeted for 29,000 feet and could hit 33,000 feet. When it was begun in January 1981, it was considered a longshot to set the world's depth record, because the Russian well was then at 32,808 feet.

The Robinson, drilled by the world's largest land rig, will cost an estimated $22 million — or $20,000 daily — to complete. Translation: The depth record will be secondary to the production of natural gas, said Bob VanDonge, GHK drilling expert.

It was only after passage of the federal Natural Gas Policy Act, which decontrolled prices on newly produced gas and left regulations on old gas, that Hefner, other explorationists and geoloists could afford to tap natural gas in the rich Anadarko Basin, beneath Western Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle, and chase world depth records.

In 1977, before the law was enacted, only about $500 million was spent in the U.S. on deep drilling. But in 1981, $3 billion was poured into natural gas exploration and production in the Anadarko Basin alone. Nationally, an estimated $8 billion was spent last year on deep drilling.

And the investment returns are unprecedented.

For example, a well drilled to 15,000 feet today costs an estimated $6 million to $9 million. Contracts signed last summer in Western Oklahoma reveal prices for deep gas averaged more than $10 per 1,000 cubic feet of gas over the life of a well. Considering a well can generate as many as 50 billion cubic feet of gas reserves, the investment return could be $500 million.

The Robinson, VanDonge said, could produce 5 million cubic feet of natural gas a day. At the going price of $7.50 per thousand, he said, the return on the well would be $37,500 daily, meaning the Robinson could pay out in 587 days.

"It's very possible a (well) like that could produce 20 years, but it's not really something anyone can put a finger on," he said.

It was not always so lucrative.

When Hefner drilled his first deep well to 24,550 feet in 1969, the cost was 30 percent of the Robinson; yet 13 years later, he said, it stillhas not paid out despite the discovery of "a reservoir of high quality gas . . . a reservoir just like one at 4,000 feet.

"It was a financial and economic disaster because of price controls."

But it proved something to Hefner. Something professionally, something personally.

"That first well taught me a lot of things: one, that what we really called the oil industry didn't know much about natural gas, that they didn't know what a good gas well was, that they only knew what a profitable one was. But what we also learned was that three wells just like (that) would produce as much energy as two nuclear plants operating in that day," he said.

"We also discovered that 40 wells that size were equal to the annual output of the entire (Tennessee Valley Authority) system — the nuclear, hydro and coal, altogether — the whole ball of wax."

But doubts persisted. Hefner doubted himself, at times. Geologists and explorationists continued to doubt his methods.

"I had one brief period where I had a lot of debts, I was spending a lot of my partner's money, we had a lot of creditors," Hefner said. "I really began to wonder: if all my colleagues don't believe in what I'm doing, how could I be right? Maybe I am irresponsible to spend this money on things that everybody says can't be done.

"From a financial standpoint, it got worse once we proved we could do it."

Hefner said his doubts were short-lived. He turned his efforts to the deregulation of deep gas, discovering natural gas pricing enmeshed in Washington politics. He spoke before congressional hearings. He wrote articles for oil and gas industry magazines.

When the gas policy act was adopted, Hefner said, the Anadarko Basin exploded. Boom towns have become commonplace.

Elk City has almost doubled in size; housing starts are at an unprecedented high. Like in boom towns of previous eras, commodities are expensive: Regular gas sells for $1.40.9 a gallon, food is 30 percent higher than in Oklahoma City, 100 miles to the east. Motels are filled during weeknights with roughnecks, who drive in from Kansas, Texas and throughout Oklahoma to work. Elk City's most prestigious motel, a modern Ramada Inn, is booked solid and no longer accepts reservations. Roughnecks are sleeping in their cars and in tents in city parks. In Sentinel, 40 miles southeast of Elk City, "concerned" residents are buying mobile homes, parking them on their property, and charging the homeless $500 a month rent.

"Oklahoma is the hottest drilling spot in the entire world," said Hefner. "The Anadarko Basin still has enormous, vast, untapped amounts of resources — of the frontier scale, actually.

"People are always talking about Alaska, but we certainly take no back seat to Alaska."

Hefner said he estimates between 60 trillion and 300 trillion cubic feet of natural gas remains untapped in the Andarko Basin between the depths of 15,000 and 30,000 feet. Only 60 trillion is a certainty, but even that is one-third of all the proven natural gas reserves in the United States.

Natural gas production not only is an economic boom for the basin, Hefner said, but also for the entire country "because it allows our economic system to consume more domestic resources. It does a multiplicity of things for everybody.

"Very basically, it helps in the creation of domestic jobs. There is an economic explosion that ripples through the entire (gross national product). The only place that domestic steel is doing well is in production of steel drilling pipe. We're keeping them alive with the massive demand for tubular steel. And they still can't meet our demand; we're forced to import about 25 percent of our steel, primarily from Japan," he said.

The West Texas Geological Society will meet 11:30 a.m. Tuesday at the Midland Hilton.

Howard Renick, president of Indesco Corp., will talk about, "Today's exploration capabilty of electrical method survey's."

PBGC starts new semester this week

The Permian Basin Graduate Center will start the spring semester with four classes beginning this week at the PBGC building, 105 W. Illinois.

"Practical Geophysics for Geologists — I" will be offered Tuesdays and Thursdays, Jan. 12-28 from 7-10 p.m.

Edwin C. Woodruff, American Quasar Petroleum Co., will instruct.

This is a practical interpretation course on applications and limiatations of geophysical tools. Only one mathematical equation will be presented. Seismic interpretation with a review of theory and field techniques will be offered. Interpretation will be discussed with each student. It will be a workshop-type presentation and will also include mapping practices.

Registration fee is $185.

"Principles of Oil & Gas Law" will be offered on Tuesdays, Jan. 12 through Feb. 9, from 7-10 p.m.

Corby Considine, Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe & Dawson, will be the coordinator.

This five-session course is designed for geologists, petroleum engineers, independents, landmen, accountants, brokers and others who need to understand more legal aspects of the petroleum industry. Topics to be covered include oil and gas leases, rights of property, common title problems, regulation of investment in oil and gas, and oil and gas taxation.

Registration fee for the course is $160.

"How to Manage People at Work" is scheduled for Thursday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Marion Kimberly, counselor-consultant, will instruct.

This seminar is designed for new managers, men or women, moving inton management positions, or those with unresolved "people problems" within their organizations.

Registration feet is $85.

"Geological Assistants Workshop" is slated for Mondays, Jan. 11 through Feb. 1, from 7-10 p.m.

Delbert Windle, Blair Energy will coordinate the course.

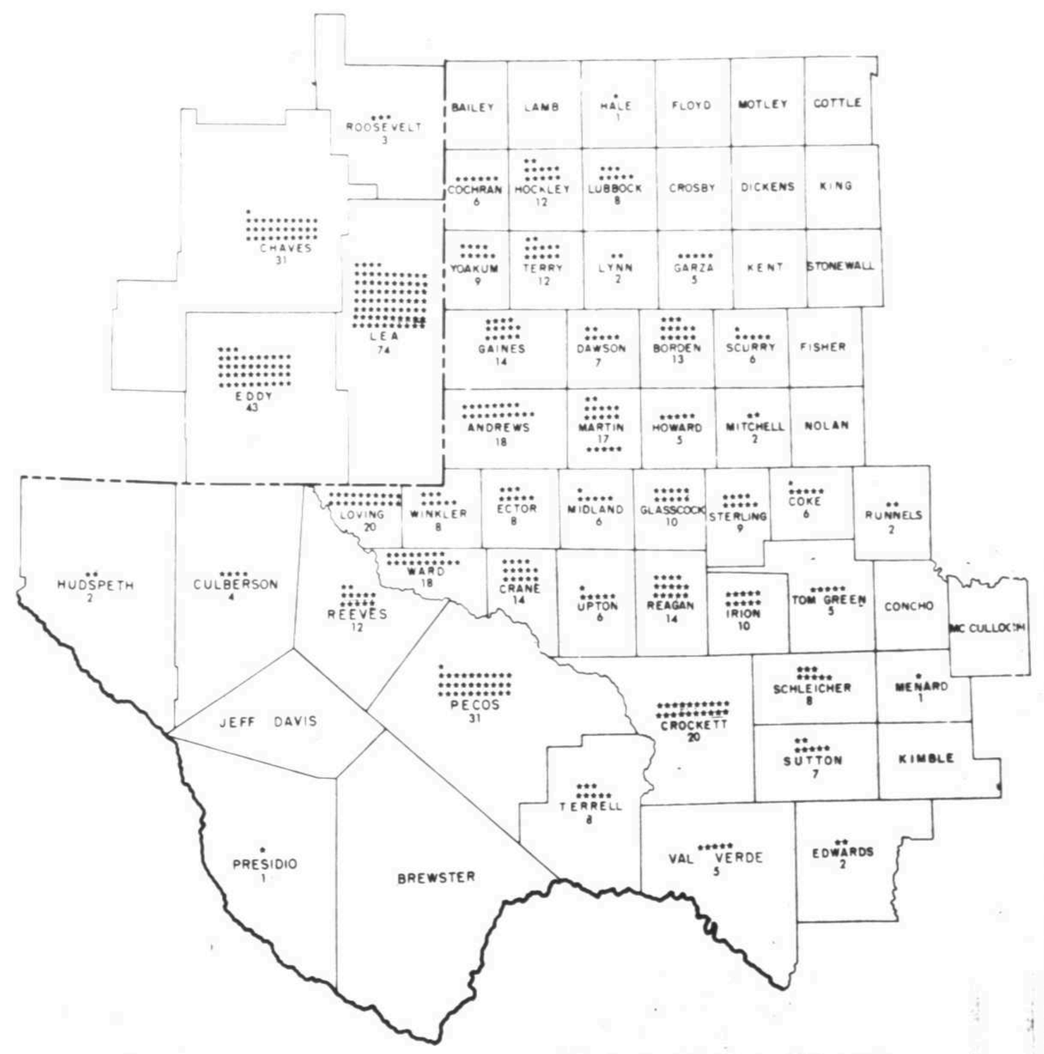
The course is designed to train persons to assist exploration and production geologists in accumulations of geological data and to work with and prepare exhibits.

Registration fee is $125.

For registration or further information, call 563-2311.

Permian Basin rig count reaches new high

Where the rigs were last week



The Permian Basin rotary rig count reached a new record high, as the first full week of the new year lapsed. According to a survey by Reed Rock Bit Co. 525 rigs were making hole in the region Jan. 8, up from 521 a week earlier. That's more rigs working the Basin than any time since 1957, when 515 rigs were tallied.

One year ago, Reed counted 385 rigs making hole in the Permian Basin and surrounding areas.

Nationally, 4,467 rigs were turning to the right Jan.4, the International Association of Drilling Contractors reports. The number is sharply down from the Dec. 28 count, when 4,530 rigs were added up.

Of all the rigs in the nation, 1,373 were land rigs cutting formation in Texas. Another 162 were working New Mexico. Almost all the New Mexico rigs were working the four Permian Basin counties, in the southeast corner of the state.

The national rig count January 5, 1981 was 3,337.

1981 was supposed to be Canada's big year

By STANLEY MEISLER
(c) 1982,
Los Angeles Times

TORONTO — In the view of many analysts, 1981 was supposed to be the year that Canada finally found out if a great oil bonanza really did lie beneath its remote and forbidding Arctic region. But the year has come and gone with the question still unanswered.

Nonetheless, that uncertainty has not diminished the oil companies' public show of optimism. Nor has the federal government betrayed any loss of faith. It seems as determined as ever to encourage oil exploration in the Arctic. Environmentalists believe that the oil companies and the federal government are so eager to continue the hunt for oil that they are heedless of the fragility of Arctic life.

The uncertainty was supposed to have been cleared up in November when Dome Petroleum, the main explorer in the Beaufort Sea, described the results of its 1981 drilling as "positive confirmation of major oil potential on Dome interest land." Dome published estimates from consultants that between 1.8 billion and 4.5 billion barrels of oil lay at its Kopanoar structure in the Beaufort Sea, and between 2 billion and 5 billion barrels of oil lay at its Koakoak structure in the sea.

But there was some hesitation by others about placing too much significance on those estimates. Jennifer Lewington, the respected energy writer of the Toronto Globe & Mail, concluded that the results, "though indicating large oil potential, leave doubt whether the discoveries are large enough to warrant commercial production."

Jeff Sallot, another Globe & Mail reporter, said a few weeks later, "The dream of Beaufort oil ... seems almost as elusive today as it did 20 years ago when northern exploration began."

Under Canada's year-old National Energy Program, which has irritated American investors and officials because of its bias in favor of Canadian oil companies, the federal government is encouraging exploration of the Arctic and offshore Newfoundland through subsidies. Those subsidies are more generous to Canadians than to foreigners, and the federal government subsidizes 80 percent of the exploration costs for a Canadian company like Dome.

The federal government obviously believes that a powerful Canadian-controlled oil industry can be developed on the federal lands of the Arctic and offshore, one that could overshadow the largely American-controlled oil industry in the province of Alberta. There seems little doubt that there are great reservoirs of oil off Newfoundland, and the government, in its policy, is gambling that there can be finds of equal size in the Arctic.

"If Ottawa is right," Toronto Star political columnist Richard Gwyn wrote a few months ago, "it will have brought off an economic transformation unequaled since the crash industrialization of World War II."

The first exploratory oil well was drilled in the Canadian Arctic on Melville Island in 1961. But the results were not extraordinary and interest sagged until the discoveries in Prudhoe Bay on the North Slope of Alaska in 1968 renewed hopes for Canada. In addition to continued drilling in the high Arctic, oil companies tried the Mackenzie River Delta near Alaska. When wells there failed to produce much, the oil men shifted their attention to the Beaufort Sea. Dome drilled its first exploratory Beaufort well in 1976.

At present, there are two main areas of oil interest in the Canadian Arctic: the Arctic archipelago known as the Queen Elizabeth Islands, a vast, almost unpopulated part of the world north of the 75th Parallel, and the Beaufort Sea, a body of water somewhat to the southwest that borders Alaska and the mainland of northern Canada and leads into the Arctic Ocean.

Ice, of course, is the main problem in both areas, and it is a formidable problem.

"There is scarcely a substance on earth," E.F. Roots of the federal Ministry of the Environment said several years ago, "that is so intractable, so unexpectedly complicated, so deceptively passive yet irresistible, and so frustrating to the man who wants to get on with a simple job."

The ice of the Arctic archipelago and the ice of the Beaufort Sea create different kinds of problems for drillers, and in neither case have the problems ever been encountered anywhere else. Unique techniques have had to be devised to deal with unique problems.

For most of the year, ice hardens between the islands of the high Arctic and, for all practical purposes, turns the archipelago into a single mass. During the coldest months, the ice is so thick that Panarctic Oils, the oil company operating there, supplies its bases by landing jet cargo planes directly on the ice.

To drill exploratory wells over the waters between the islands, Panarctic, 50 percent of which is owned by the Canadian government, creates ice islands. Its workers bore holes through the ice and then pump up the sea water from below to flood the surface.

Sec. Watt tries to steer a straight course

By ROLLA WILLIAMS
Copley News Service

Before the holiday season and the goodwill it engenders has completely vanished somebody should take a look at the fellow the environmentalists like to call the Grinch Who Stole The Wilderness. That fellow is James G. Watt, the secretary of the Department of Interior. He's controversial, but he hasn't stolen too much yet.

Everybody, it seems, has an opinion about Watt.

To California Sen. Alan Cranston he's a "puppet of the exploiters, a willing tool of the destroyers."

Congressman Mo Udall of Arizona says Watt's idea of wilderness is "a parking lot without stripes."

The Audubon Society, the Sierra Club, the Wilderness Society, and the Friends of the Earth see him as an enemy of what they stand for, and they want him out of office.

At the Outdoor Writers Association of America Conference last summer Watt came across as a firm administrator with a clear idea of where he is heading, a Reagan team player dedicated to energy expansion and multiple use of the nation's wildlife treasure.

He described his job as multi-faceted. He is the nation's chief environmental officer as well as its chief developer of public lands, chief protector of Indian rights, chief National Park ranger, chief coal miner in the West, chief developer of dams.

Obviously, if he starts developing campgrounds in National Parks, punching new roads into remote areas, he's going to make some backpackers and wilderness campers unhappy. He starts scratching for coal, environmentalists will scream. He puts up a dam, a wild river flyrod fisherman or a rafter or a canoeist feels put upon.

If treaty obligations guarantee Indians the right to catch 50 percent of the steelhead and salmon in a free-flowing stream, and if Watt protects that right, the fishermen will snarl.

Everybody yearns for clean solar energy, but nobody visualizes its realization in the near term, especially in the quantity one needs for living. Instead, we are dreadfully dependent on foreign oil — and held hostage to this need. The immediate solution, within the grasp of our technology, appears to be nuclear energy and coal and offshore drilling for oil.

It's Watt's job to see that we reach energy independence cleanly and safely, without damaging the environment. Watt says he accepts the challenge, formidable though it may be.

It's Watt's belief that environmental groups, like the National Wildlife Federation and the Sierra Club, take some of his quotes out of context to make him a bogeyman and, by this scare tactic, raise money for their causes. He certainly plays into their hands, early in the game, by being both highly visible and speaking in a language which begs for headlines.

OIL INDUSTRY NOTES

HOUSTON (SWN) — Texas General Resources, Inc., has reported its wholly-owned subsidiary, Texas General Petroleum Corporation, has increased its financing commitment from Marine Midland Bank, N.A. to $35 million. Terms provide for a two-year revolving line of credit convertible to a five-year term loan. borrowings are to be at the U.S. prime rate plus one-half percent or, at the option of Texas General, will be based on LIBOR (London Interbank Offering Rate).

The additional funds will be used to finance Texas General's oil and natural gas exploration and development activities in 1982, said John H. Whorton, chief financial officer.

Texas General, which is headquartered in Houston, is an independent oil and gas company.

HOUSTON (SWN) — Houston Natural Gas Corporation (HNG) has announced the formation of Carbonic Intrastate Pipeline Company, a wholly-owned subsidiary of HNG's liquid carbonic corporation.

The natural gas transmission company, chartered in the state of Louisiana, will initially supply gas to liquid carbonic's geismar plant, an intermediate industrial gas products installation on the Mississippi River near Baton Rouge.

In addition to serving the geismar facility, Carbonic Intra-State also will have the ability to serve other customers in the heavily industrialized corridor along the Mississippi River in Louisiana.

HOUSTON (SWN) — American Quasar Petroleum Co. and Conquest Exploration Company announced the closing of the Conquest Exchange Offer to the Can-Am Limited Partners in the Partnerships formed in 1970 and 1972 through 1977. Limited Partners representing approximately 89 percent of the exchange value accepted the offer and as a result some 12,500,000 shares with an exchange value of $187,500,000 were issued. In addition, conquest received cash subscriptions from exchanging Can-Am Limited Partners, American Quasar Petroleum Co. and American Quasar Shareholders for 1,750,000 Units of common stock and warrants at $15 per Unit representing approximately $26,250,000 of additional equity.

As a result of the Exchange Offer Conquest acquired net proved reserves totaling approximately 3.9 million barrels of oil and in excess of 90 billion cubic feet of natural gas. Conquest also acquired undeveloped leasehold interests in 819,000 gross acres or approximately 211,000 net acres, one third of which is located in the U.S. portion of the Overthurst Belt.

Conquest has an interest in six wildcat wells that are currently drilling on the exploratory acreage.

Dick Lowe, President of American Quasar and H.R. Hirsch, Chairman of Conquest Exploration expressed satisfaction with the level of acceptance of the Exchange Offer by the Cam-Am Limited Partners.

On December 23 Conquest announced that the Offering of Units had been opened to the public. The Units are being offered at a price of $15 each. Each Unit consists of one share of Conquest common stock and two warrants to purchase one additional share each. The exercise price of the warrants will be the lower of $15 or the average closing price of the common stock for the 20 trading days prior to April 15, 1982. Warrants will expire on January 15, 1987, but may be accelerated to expire as early as January 15, 1985, if the common stock closes at or above $25 per share for 60 consecutive days.

The public offering of Units will expire 5:00 P.M., C.S.T., January 12, 1982.

E. F. Hutton & Company Inc. is dealer manager of the Offering.

This announcement is neither an offer to sell nor a solicitation to purchase any security. The offering is made only by the prospectus, as supplemented, of Conquest Exploration Company dated November 6, 1981.

LAFAYETTE, La. (SWN) — Mid Louisiana Gas Company, an operating unit of Central Louisiana Energy Corporation, received a favorable ruling from the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals on December 23 which would allow the company to receive higher natural gas wellhead prices on approximately 40 percent of its current gas production, announced Gale L. Galloway, Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer of Central Louisiana Energy Corporation.

Mid Louisiana Gas currently produces about 10 billion cubic feet of natural gas annually from its own wells. At the present time, the company is receiving approximately 11 cents per MCF (thousand cubic feet) for that part of its gas produced from pre-1977 wells and sold to utilities for resale. The new court ruling would place that gas under rules of the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 (NGPA), thus allowing Mid Louisiana Gas Company to receive approximately $3.22 per MCF for that gas as stipulated by current NGPA pricing structures. Thus, all of Mid Louisiana Gas Company's production would be placed under NGPA rules rather than just a portion of it.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) had previously issued a ruling disallowing any such price increase, and Mid Louisiana Gas appealed the ruling to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Mid Louisiana Gas's parent company, Central Louisiana Energy Corporation, is a diversified energy company which, through its subsidiaries, operates natural gas pipelines and engages in oil and gas exploration and production, natural gas processing, crude oil refining, natural gas distribution and petrochemical operations.

Chambers oil discovery finaled

MIDLAND (SWN) — MGF Oil Corporation has completed a new field discovery from two Nodosaria sands of the lower Frio in Chambers County, Texas. The Barrow Ranch No. 1, located about 55 miles east of Houston, flowed at the rate of 1,106 barrels of oil and a million cubic feet of gas per day during a 3-1/2 hour test of the upper Nodosaria sand. Flowing tubing pressure was 5,579 psig through a 10/64-inch choke. The upper sand occurred at a depth of 10,832 feet with 18 feet of net pay indicated on the electric logs.

An additional 13 feet of net pay was encountered in the lower Nodosaria sand at a depth of 11,154 feet. The second zone flowed at the rate of 831 barrels of oil and 349,000 cubic feet of gas per day during an eight hour test, through a 10/64-inch choke with 4,427 psig flowing tubing pressure. The well was drilled to a depth of 13,081 feet, then plugged back to 11,315 feet.

MGF is the operator of the well and its 1981 public oil and gas limited partnership owns a 40 percent working interest. MGF, through its joint venture participation with the partnership, owns a 10 percent working interest in the 1,837 acre lease block. MGF Oil Corporation's net revenue interest, through both the partnership and the joint venture participation, is 18 percent. Other working interest owners are Xoil Energy Resources, Inc. with 30 percent and Brock Petroleum Corporation with 20 percent.

Plans for additional drilling on the prospect are currently being evaluated.

HOUSTON — MCZ, Inc., operator for a group including MCZ, Inc., Troy P. Wakefield, Andrus Resources, and others, has completed a 564-barrel oil well in the Kurten (Woodbine) field in Brazos County east of Bryan.

The well, the No. 1 Patranella Oil Unit, is located in the Stephen F. Austin survey, abstract 63, one mile east of Bryan.

Producing from perforations between 8,222 and 8,234 feet, it flowed at a rate of 564 barrels of 41 gravity oil per day and 359,000 cubic feet of gas, with no water, on a 14/64 inch choke.

Flowing tubing pressure was 1,322 pounds per square inch, and the gas to oil ratio was 636 to 1.

The group has also completed a gas well in the Kurten (Georgetown) field in Brazos County, one mile east of Bryan.

The No. 1 Sam J. Rizzo, located in the John Austin League, abstract 2, flowed 4,753,000 cubic feet of gas per day on a 24/64 inch choke.

It is producing from perforations between 9,091 to 9,231 feet.

Wellhead pressure was 1,665 pounds per square inch and the open flow potential was 8,075,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

SALT LAKE CITY — Commodore Resources Corporation, Salt Lake City and Denver, has reported a well in eastern Wyoming has been cased for oil and gas completion.

The well, Coquina et al No. 1, flowed both oil and gas on a preliminary drillstem test of the Frontier formation at a depth of approximately 12,500 feet. Casing was set for production testing which is expected to be completed in the next two weeks.

The company holds a 25 percent working interest in the project. The wellsite is in section 32, township 40 north, range 74 west.

••••

THE WOODLANDS (SWN) — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. today reported the completion of an oil producer in the West Kurten area of southern Brazos County, Texas.

The well, Doris Patterson No. 1, test-flowed 749 barrels of oil and 780,000 cubic feet of natural gas per day on a 12/64-inch choke with 880 pounds per square inch of flowing tubing pressure. Perforations were from 9,046 to 9,056 feet in the Woodbine formation.

Mitchell Energy is operator of the Patterson No. 1 and has an 18.5 percent working interest in it. The well is the company's first in the area. It offsets the discovery well by about a quarter of a mile.

Other interest owners include Continental U.S. Exploration Inc., 43.9 percent; Intercontinental Production Co., 22 percent; Roy Hogan, 6.6 percent; Prodeco Oil and Gas Co., 5.5 percent; and Ashton Resources Ltd., 3.5 percent.

Mitchell Energy has an interest in approximately 1,600 acres of leases in the West Kurten area and is undertaking additional drilling there. the company is one of the nation's largest independent oil and gas producers and has substantial real estate interests in the Houston-Galveston area.

DALLAS (SWN) — Lear Petroleum Corporation (NYSE) today announced completion of a significant confirmation well to its recent Anadarko Basin gas discovery in Caddo County, Oklahoma.

The Lear No. 1-18 Horn, completed naturally with no stimulation, flowed at a rate of 6.7 million cubic feet of gas per day on a 12/64-inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 6,300 psi. The well produced from the Springer formation from perforations at 15,419 to 15,424 feet.

The well flowed at a rate of 5.1 million cubic feet per day on a 10/64-inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 7,950 psi. Opened to a 14/64-inch choke, the well flowed at a rate of 8.3 million cubic feet per day with flowing tubing pressure of 5,600 psi.

Shut-in tubing pressure was 10,700 psi after 24 hours. Calculated absolute open flow of the well is estimated at 11.5 million cubic feet per day. Lear owns a 46 percent working interest and an approximate 39 percent net revenue interest in the well located approximately one mile southwest of the field discovery well, Lear's No. 1-17 Frost, completed in August and currently producing 2.9 million cubic feet of gas per day with flowing tubing pressure of 4,900 psi.

Lear anticipates that gas sales from the No. 1-18 Horn will begin within 10 days at an initial price of approximately $9 per MMBTU. Producer's Gas Company, a wholly-owned subsidiary, will deliver the gas to market through its Anadarko Pipeline System.

Lear is also involved in four additional offset wells currently drilling and two tests planned for this area of western Oklahoma. The company owns a 48 percent working interest and a 30 percent net revenue interest in the Lear No. 1-8 Entz, now drilling below 14,700 feet in Section 8-11-13W. Lear owns a 23 percent working interest and a 17 percent net revenue interest in its No. 1-19 Horn, drilling below 11,700 feet as a direct south offset to the Horn No. 1-18.

The company owns a 25 percent working interest and a 19 percent net revenue interest in the Hager No. 1-16 now being drilled by Champlin Petroleum Co. in Section 16-11-13W and an 18 percent working interest and a 13 percent net revenue interest in the Sylvester No. 1-21 which Amoco Production Co. is drilling in Section 21-11N-13W. Both tests are now drilling below 10,000 feet.

Lear Petroleum is engaged in the exploration for and production of crude oil and natural gas and in the operations of natural gas transmission lines.

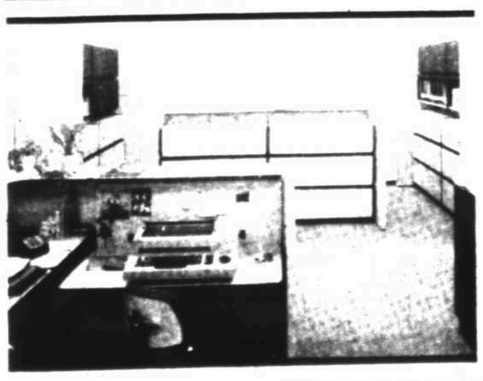
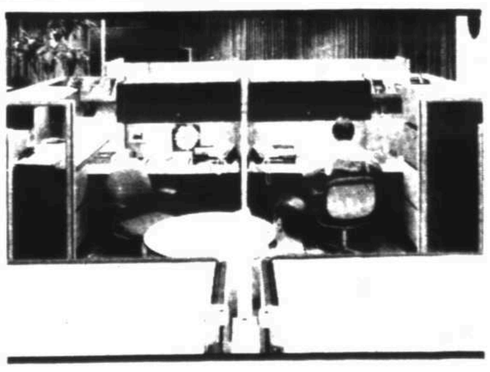
"At today's prices... can you afford to waste costly office space?"





Many companies think of their office facility as an expense, not an investment. And for many, that is exactly what it is. A big ticket item with little promise of return.

But there are ways to turn your facility into a manageable investment. A tool that not only helps people work more productively, and managers manage more effectively, but also proves less costly to operate.

Good Office Design Is More Than Good Looks

Our efforts have been concentrated on this fact: The environment people work should be designed around the work they do. By that we mean:

1. Custom tailoring your facility so that rather than having to adjust their work habits and styles to their work spaces, employees can perform at their best. With work surfaces, storage, reference and display immediately accessible.
2. Locating individual spaces so that people who work together have easy access to each other — and to crucial information resources. Because the primary reason for office environments is to support and forward communications activities.
3. Providing an appearance that reflects the lifestyle and identity of your organization, while at the same time recognizing the individual employee's need for a personalized environment.

Significant Life Cycle Cost Savings

We can help you to realize substantial cost savings over time.

1. Investment tax credits are the maximum, since the system components are qualified as tangible personal property with a useful life rated at seven to ten years.
2. Action Office system components can be depreciated over an asset life of only seven to ten years while fixed wall offices are normally depreciated over thirty to forty-five years. The components also qualify for the various accelerated depreciation methods — including the 200% declining balance method.
3. Property tax savings can be significant, since Action Office panels and components are classified as personal property, which depreciates. Conversely, conventional fixed wall offices are classified as real property which tends to increase in value and boost your tax base.
4. Meanwhile, by taking advantage of the vertical space in offices for storage and display, the use of Action Office work stations can reduce your floor space requirements by as much as 20%.
5. With proper planning, you can affect office reconfigurations for less than $1 per square foot, compared to an effective cost of over $20 per square foot for restructuring fixed wall environments. So that as your organization changes and expands, so can your offices — with as little cost and disruption as possible.

Good office design doesn't just cost, it pays. We have the means to get you moving in the proper direction.

Contact us for a comprehensive presentation and thorough discussion of your needs and goals.

Thanks for efforts

Several individuals devoted a lot of time and energy to selecting Paul Harvel to fill the vacancy created in the Midland Chamber of Commerce administration with the death last September of Fred Tyler. Those efforts appear fruitful. Harvel's credentials bode well for the chamber's future leadership.

When he and his wife arrive in Midland, Harvel will be following an outstanding chamber leader whose contributions to Midland's industrial and business communities are well known. Tyler was appreciated by all those who knew him and his commitment to the city's business interests.

As executive vice president of the Midland chamber, Harvel will be assuming a vastly important position. In fact, we can think of no other city in which such a chamber position is more important, more vital to the continued healthy business climate than Midland.

Those in the chamber who participated in Harvel's selection are to be commended for their endeavors. His accomplishments in chamber work to this point should have well prepared him for the challenges he will face in Midland — 13 years in chamber work, including time spent as general manager of the Little Rock, Ark., Chamber of Commerce, general manager and executive vice president of the El Dorado, Ark., Chamber of Commerce and that same titled position with the Greater Enid, Okla., Chamber of Commerce.

When Harvel arrives in Midland, expected to be prior to March 1, members of the industrial and business communities certainly will warmly welcome him and his family in true Midland fashion.

Another major change at the chamber which should not go unmentioned is the promotion of Grant Billingsley to the newly-created position of general manager. Billingsley, who came to Midland in August 1975, and is currently the chamber's manager of economic development, has been a major force, along with Tyler, in helping build the business and industrial base now enjoyed in Midland. His efforts have been crucial and his successes show.

Billingsley will continue to bear economic development as one of his major responsibilities in his new position with the chamber. His performance in that capacity has been excellent in the past and we're sure it will continue to be in the future.

These two decisions should only strengthen the future of Midland's business life.

A meeting of minds

West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and President Reagan did not reach full accord on all issues, but they narrowed their differences.

An old saying has it that two observers of an elephant, like two witnesses to a highway accident, can come up with two different views, depending on their vantage points. Similarly in international relations, leaders of good will can differ as they view conditions from different political, military and geographical perspectives.

Thus it is that Washington and Bonn have appeared to be somewhat at cross purposes concerning the Soviet Union's role in the Polish crisis. President Reagan has bluntly criticized the Kremlin for its intervention in Poland. Chancellor Schmidt's attitude was more muted, so much so he was startled by the American decision to impose sanctions on Moscow.

This difference has been narrowed. A face-to-face meeting brought the president and the chancellor closer together as they shared perspectives. Mr. Schmidt supported Mr. Reagan, as attested by the following words of the joint communique:

"They both noted the responsibility of the Soviet Union for developments in Poland and expressed concern about the serious pressure it is bringing to bear against Polish efforts for renewal."

West German officials were unhappy about not being consulted by Washington prior to the announcement about sanctions. Both sides have agreed they do not want such a breakdown in communications to happen again.

Another conflict of national interests has concerned the continuation of talks on controlling European nuclear arms. Chancellor Schmidt has viewed continuance of the talks as of "overriding importance," while President Reagan has been keeping his enthusiasm under control. Here again the two minds met, and an agreement was reached to keep the talks going, with Mr. Schmidt understanding more clearly the reservations of Mr. Reagan.

Differences have indeed been narrowed, and the narrowing is the more significant because it was not accompanied by any make-believe statements claiming that all differences have vanished. Personal diplomacy once again has proved its value.

ART BUCHWALD

Don't believe what scales are saying!

I got on my scale the day after New Year, and discovered it was off by five pounds. Whereas I should have weighed 185 pounds, the scale, which had been guaranteed for 10 years, was wavering between 190 and 192.

Art Buchwald

"Someone has been playing around with this scale," I told my wife.

"Maybe one of the children jumped on it too hard," my wife said.

I urged her to try it, just to make sure I wasn't wrong.

"Not on your life," she said. "I never get on a scale after the holidays. It depresses me too much."

I called up Lester Shor. "What are you doing?" I asked him.

"Finishing up some cheesecake left over from the Sugar Bowl."

"Did you go to the Sugar Bowl?"

"No, but we had cheesecake and coffee at halftime because I once knew a kid who played for Georgia."

"Did you weigh yourself this morning?"

"I didn't get on the scale, but I kicked it once or twice."

"How come?"

"For the past few days I've been getting ridiculous readings. You know I've never gone over 195 pounds in my life. Well, the day after Christmas the pointer showed 201, and two days later 203 and yesterday 207."

"Where was the scale made?" I asked.

"Taiwan."

"That explains it. I heard there have been a lot of Chinese imports that were never properly adjusted."

"Let's go over to the Chevy Chase Racquet Ball Club. They have a digital scale from Switzerland which doesn't gain or lose an ounce in a year," Lester said.

"Okay, I'll meet you there in an hour."

We met in the locker room. I was finishing up a piece of fruit cake and Lester was biting into a chocolate-covered tangerine.

I stepped on the scale first and it lit up at "201.6."

"That's insane," I said.

Lester got on the scale and it showed "209.4."

He demanded to see the manager. "Sir, I pay $35 a month dues and the least I can expect for my money is an accurate weight reading."

The manager stood on the scale and it showed "145.2."

"It seems all right to me," he said. "That's what I weighed last week."

"What else could the man say?" I told Lester later as we stopped to have a pizza. "If he admitted the scale was off, his entre health club operation would be threatened."

Lester nodded his head. "There is no truth in scales any more. Even the ones made in Switzerland lie."

"The worst ones are located in doctors' offices," I said. "All of those are at least three pounds off."

"I tell you the only good scales left in America are the kind you find in drugstores that tell you your weight on one side of the card, and your fortune on the other, for a penny."

"I haven't seen one in a long time."

"That's because the scale cartels are buying them up and replacing them with ones that won't tell your weight unless you put in a nickel."

"You game for a dish of frozen yogurt?" I asked him.

"Why not? If you're not going to get a square deal from a scale there is no sense starving yourself all year long."

Rosenthal came by with a deep dish of cherry pie."

"Trouble at home?" Lester asked him.

"Yeh, I weighed myself this morning, and my wife took the scale's word against mine."

"If she did that to me," Lester said, looking at the cherry pie, "I would have put whipped cream and nuts on top."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Talks could be useful to counteract Soviets

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — President Reagan already has announced certain sanctions against the Soviet Union calculated to punish the Kremlin for its instigation and support of the military crackdown in Poland. He suspended licensing for the sale of sophisticated technology to the Russians, and postponed the negotiations for further shipments of grain the Soviets desperately need.

There is another weapon the administration can use to belabor the Kremlin over Poland, and the best way to use this weapon is now the subject of intense debate at the highest levels of the administration.

It is a propaganda weapon that presented itself in Madrid last month. Soviet and American representatives met behind closed doors to discuss the implementation of the 1975 Helsinki accords on human rights. The secret talks are scheduled to resume in Madrid on Feb. 9.

The president and his policy advisers are known to feel that the United States must make some dramatic move if it is to capitalize on the international propaganda potential of the Madrid talks. The only question is what move to make for maximum impact in the world's headlines.

A source directly involved in the high-level strategy meetings at the State Department told my associate Lucette Lagnado that there are three basic options being considered.

The first is an outright boycott of the Madrid talks when they resume next month. This would demonstrate U.S. displeasure at the Polish-Soviet repression in Poland. But it might also make the United States look a little foolish, because the multinational talks presumably would go on even if the U.S. delegates didn't show up. The United States would thus be unable to answer the Soviets' propaganda declarations at the talks.

A far likelier option, said to be favored by State Department experts, is to return to Madrid on schedule and use the talks as a forum in which to denounce the Polish military government and its puppeteers in the Kremlin. Judicious leaks to the press, presumably, would insure that the U.S. charges were brought to the world's attention.

There is still another possibility — a combination of the two basic options. In this scenario, the U.S. delegates would return to the talks on Feb. 9 and immediately beat the Soviets over the head on the Polish issue. Then, depending on the nature of the Polish-Soviet response — presumably a lame denial that human rights had been trampled on under martial law — the United States would dramatically move that the talks be suspended for several months until there was evidence that the military repression in Poland was being relaxed.

This third option, reportedly favored by the chief U.S. delegate to the Madrid talks, Max Kampelman, obviously would require the support of our allies to force postponement.

Obviously, suspension of the Madrid talks would have more than an immediate headline-grabbing effect. The United States — and its allies — would be obliged to justify the move out of, in Jefferson's words, "a decent respect to the opinions of mankind." This would require a public repetition of the U.S. charges on the Polish issue, along with the presumably unconvincing Soviet response. Result: a crushing propaganda defeat for the Kremlin.

The trouble with the Madrid talks last year, in the administration's view, is that they got little if any notice in the U.S. press. The sessions were closed to the public, and press attention was drawn to far more colorful events around the world than a group of diplomats arguing over human rights violations.

And that is indeed a shame. Records of the closed sessions show that the United States repeatedly indicted the Soviets, in forthright, pungent language, on its increased violations of the Helsinki accords in recent years.

Here are some highlights of the U.S. charges:

— Religious persecution of Soviet Jews has been widely chronicled. Less familiar, though, is the Kremlin's systematic persecution of its Christian population, whose faith has survived generations of official repression by the Communist government.

At one session last July, the U.S. delegation charged that "devout Christian believers of all denominations have faced years of persecution, imprisonment and systematic discrimination in employment." In the last three years alone, the United States charged, "at least 250 Christians ... have been imprisoned in the U.S.S.R." for trying to practice their religion. The persecuted sects include Baptists, Seventh-Day Adventists, Pentecostals, Russian Orthodox, Greek Catholics and Jehovah's Witnesses.

— In another session, Kampelman charged that the Kremlin's anti-Semitic campaign "has intensified," and that the latest outbreak "is an officially-sanctioned campaign, stimulated by state-controlled publication and exhibition of overtly anti-Semitic books, articles and exhibitions." Jewish emigration has been curtailed drastically.

— Many members of human rights groups have been summarily arrested and some interned in psychiatric hospitals. "No human rights group has been left untouched" by what the U.S. delegation described as a "systematic effort ... to destroy the entire human rights movement in the Soviet Union." The Psychiatric Watch Group, set up in Russia to check abuses of psychiatric medicine, and other monitoring groups in Lithuania and the Ukraine have been "decimated by arrests and trials," the United States charged.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Jan. 10, the 10th day of 1982. There are 355 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 10, 1928, Leon Trotsky was ordered into exile by the Soviet government.

On this date:

In 1942, the Japanese invaded the Dutch East Indies in World War II.

In 1966, India and Pakistan agreed to withdraw their armed forces to positions they had held before fighting the previous autumn over Pakistan.

In 1973, a tornado cut through a wide area of Argentina, killing at least 40 people and injuring 300 others.

And in 1979, the surgeon general of United States said there was "overwhelming evidence" that smoking causes even more death and disease than originally believed.

Ten years ago, a clash with police at a black militant rally in Baton Rouge, La., left two policemen and two young blacks dead.

Five years ago, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said no American president would ever let the Soviet Union gain strategic superiority.

GEORGE F. WILL

FX issue questions administration's break with Carterism

WASHINGTON — Here we go again.

China (like some NATO nations, and Saudi Arabia) is acting as though it is doing America a favor by having mutually advantageous relations with America. China says the American proposal to sell arms, and especially the FX advanced fighter, to Taiwan is "a severe test" of whether America "truly values" relations with China.

George F. Will

Even in the State Department there is no obsession as incorrigible as the obsession of some persons with placating Peking. In December, some members of that faction sent Secretary of State Haig the sort of awful memo he would reject with his famous testiness, were he not part of the problem at State. It concerned "how to move urgently toward resolution of the Taiwan arms sales problem in light of the Polish crisis."

Seizing upon Poland as a pretext for doing what this faction is determined to do anyway, they suggest sending a delegation of themselves to urge the Chinese to do unspecified things against Russia. But, they say, the delegation's success would depend on a "favorable" (that is, unfavorable to Taiwan) decision on the FX. By "removing the specter of the aircraft," America could prevent a "precipitous Chinese reaction" to even the sale of spare parts to Taiwan, which could "unravel" and "rupture" U.S.-China relations. There should be no sales "exceeding Carter levels."

These dispensable (but, alas, not dispensed with) Carterites now serving Haig are urging Carter's policies on Carter's successor. They must think President Reagan does not remember candidate Reagan noting that Congress, "reflecting the strong support of the American people for Taiwan," forced changes in Carter's proposed Taiwan Relations Act. Carter's proposal did not even mention defense cooperation with Taiwan. The final Act (Congress' preemptive leash on the State Department's appeasement reflex) committed America to providing Taiwan with defense arms "in such quantity as may be necessary to enable Taiwan to maintain a sufficient self-defense capability." This Act obligates the president and Congress to determine appropriate arms "based solely upon their judgment of the needs of Taiwan." That is, based only on Taiwan's needs, not at all on Peking's desires.

Opponents of the sale argue that even with the FX, Taiwan's air force (currently 390 combat aircraft) could be overwhelmed by China's 5,000 combat aircraft. But it is tendentious to disregard the fact that deterrence is a function of the potential costs of aggression. And it is perverse to argue that because Taiwan is vulnerable, America should make it more so.

China is too backward, economically, to cure its military weakness without the West's capital and technology. U.S.-China relations are rooted in that need, and in China's geography and culture (including ancient national and relatively recent ideological animosities that make it a counterweight to Russia). China is not apt to "rupture" relations with the United States in a fit of pique about an arms sale that is a matter of compliance with American law.

Candidate Reagan said: "I'm sure that the Chinese leaders would place no value on our relations with them if they thought we would break commitments to them if a stronger power were to demand it." Precisely right: By conforming to China's dictates regarding U.S.-Taiwan relations, America would prove that it is too pliable to serve China's interest in a cooperative balance of power against Russia.

Furthermore, the State Department's advocates of Peking's position are caught in a contradiction: If Reagan's refusal to allow Peking to veto American compliance with American law could cause an "unraveling" of U.S.-China relations, then those relations are too superficial to be important. The idea that selling FX might provoke a rapprochement between China and Russia implies, implausibly, that the split is trivial, and that U.S. policy controls China's internal power struggle.

The Taiwan issue waxes and wanes inversely with China's confidence in America as a partner against Russia. It waxes now in the wake of the Reagan administration's feeble response to Poland's crisis. Countering Russia is China's top priority, but if America is unserious about that, China probably reasons that it might as well gain ground on the relatively trivial issue of Taiwan.

Having sold to the uncooperative Saudis AWACS they did not need, Reagan will mock his past and undermine his future if he denies an ally aircraft it really needs. Peking recently failed to intimidate the Netherlands from selling two submarines to Taiwan, and then reduced its diplomatic representation in the Netherlands. America should be as unintimidated as the Netherlands, and should then see if Peking values relations with America as little as it values relations with the Netherlands. If Reagan does not sell the FX to Taiwan, he will have produced what he was elected to prevent: the continuation of Carterism.

Treasurer feels another term in his, state's best 'interest'

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — What does one give a man who earns a million dollars a day?

If the man is State Treasurer Warren G. Harding, what he'd like to be given is another four years in office.

Harding recently reported that interest earnings on state funds held in time accounts is approaching $1 million per day with over $300 million earned during 1981, a record amount.

"Texas government," Harding notes, "is big business."

Normally, the State Treasury isn't an agency which attracts a lot of attention.

In fact, it's been jokingly argued that the only qualification needed to be State Treasurer is to have a famous name.

Harding, of course, shares the name of a U.S. president; his predecessor shared that of a famous outlaw, Jesse James.

Harding was serving as Dallas County Treasurer when he was appointed by then-Gov. Dolph Briscoe to succeed James after the death of the long-time office-holder in 1977.

One state employee working in Washington, when told of Harding's appointment, commented that he'd seen a few quizzical looks by bank tellers when presenting his state paycheck to be cashed, with the signature of Jesse James at the bottom.

"It should be easier now that they're signed by Warren G. Harding," he commented.

Whether it's been easier or not for employees to get their checks cashed, Harding has been signing state warrants (or at least his name's printed on them) for over four years and three months now.

And, he says, "I think the office is being well run and well managed."

"I'm real proud of the modernization of the treasurer's office," Harding says. "We've put in modern, business-like procedures."

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Over the last 10 years, there have been several queries by legislators and legislative committees on whether the State Treasurer has been operating in a business-like manner — and in particular, whether he has been getting all the interest possible on state funds.

State funds are placed, until they're needed, in either time or demand accounts (corresponding to savings and checking accounts) at banks designated as state depositories.

Traditionally, those funds have been spread around the state to allow all the banks in Texas to participate.

Texas gets interest on the money in the time accounts — but James came in for criticism that the state had too much money in non-interest-bearing accounts, and that banks were being charged too little interest on the funds in interest-bearing accounts.

Shortly after taking office, Harding began efforts to improve the treasury's operations, and to get the state money interest on its funds.

Harding established an inter-agency task force in attempt to "pinpoint the state's cash needs" so that more money could be placed into time accounts.

And he has steadily increased the percentage of funds which have been in time accounts.

In May, 1977, before Harding succeeded James, just under 80 percent of the state's money was in interest-bearing accounts.

About a year later, Harding had the monthly average above 90 percent.

By the end of fiscal 1981, monthly averages were running as high as 98.7 percent.

Even the most persistent critics of the treasury's operations have admitted that Harding has improved the office's performances, but they still feel that some changes may be required.

Rep. Frank Hartung, R-Houston, point man for probing the office's efforts in several post sessions, would like to put the state's money out for competitive bids, rather than leaving the task of setting interest rates charged banks to the State Depository Board.

That board, which includes Harding, has been meeting more regularly during Harding's administration, to adjust rates up or down as market conditions change.

But Hartung still feels it would be better to be taking competitive bids — and he'd like to see a change in the law to allow the state's money to go into investments such as U.S. Treasury bills.

Harding and Hartung may renew their arguments in 1983, if they're re-elected.

And so far, no one has stepped forward to challenge Harding — perhaps because it's hard to run against a guy who can claim terrific identification, and to be making taxpayers a million dollars a day.

Social Security becoming political issue — as well as partisan wedge

By JOSEPH KINGSBURY-SMITH
National Editor, The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — Social Security now looms as a major political issue in the 1982 Congressional elections.

With President Reagan favoring new cuts in Medicare and Medicaid, and with his advisers urging long-term reforms that would sharply reduce future Social Security benefits, the Democratic leadership in Congress has decided this is too good an election issue to forego in the interests of bipartisan cooperation in seeking a solution of the system's financial crisis.

President Reagan appealed last September for establishment of a bipartisan task force to develop a plan to restore the financial soundness of the social security system, which on the current basis of funding and spending faces what the administration was warned could be the most devestating bankruptcy of a federal agency in history.

The Democratic Congressional leadership has agreed to participate in the task force, but the Republicans claim it has appointed members who are not going to help the Reagan administration solve the social security problem, at least not in this election year.

A source close to Senator William Armstrong, R-Colo., chairman of the Senate Social Security committee, told the Hearst Newspapers that House Speaker Tip O'Neill had refused to appoint to the task force Representative J.J. Pickle of Texas and Representative Dan Rostenkowski of Illinois, two Democrats known to favor a bipartisan approach to the problem.

Sen. Armstrong, the source added, intends to make one more try at getting biparisan cooperation but he has little hope of succeeding. He sees too much evidence that the Democrats have decided to make the social security problem an election issue this year.

Bumper stickers already appearing on cars read: "Save Social Security — Vote Democratic." Fund raising appeals for the Democratic National Committee have been found in envelopes resembling the ones in which the government sends out Social Security benefit payments.

The Republicans are preparing to accept the challenge of making social security an issue. They are going to accuse the Democrats of being responsible for the system's insolvency by approving excessive benefits for vote-getting purposes.

They also intend to accuse past Democratic administrations of mismanaging the system and misjudging its financial stability. A Republican party publication, First Monday, has already recalled that last October then President Carter proclaimed the Social Security system on a sound financial footing.

"A few years earlier," the publication said, "when Carter signed into law the largest peace-time (Social Security) tax hike in history, he said: 'Without this legislation, the Social Security reserve funds would have begun to go bankrupt...by 1979. Now this legislation will guarantee that from 1980 to the year 2030, the Social Security funds will be sound.'"

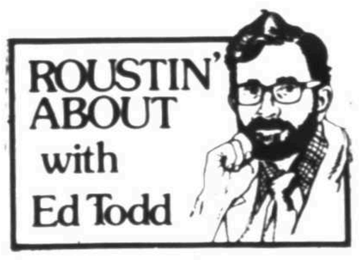
How wrong he was is evident in the fact that the Social Security administration's latest estimate for the current fiscal year deficit is $3.2 billion. SSA Commissioner John A. Svahn estimated that by the end of 1986 the deficit could be $80 billion on the basis of current revenues and benefit payments.

While the long-term problem of funding the social security system by benefit cuts and new sources of revenue is unlikely to be solved this election year, it appears highly probable there will be further curtailment of some benefits. Cost of living increases for the retirement benefits scheduled to become effective July 1 may be reduced or postponed for several months. The retirement age for full benefits may be advanced from 65 to 68, but gradually.

New Medicare and Medicaid cuts appproved by President Reagan for submission to Congress in new budget proposals next month would reduce federal health care benefits, shifting some of the costs not only to elderly and needy patients, but also to hospitals, private employers and state governments.

Even though the Democrats may block or force modification of some of these proposed cuts, the era of welfare bounty in this country is nearing an end.

Gift of love not visible, but can be sensed, felt



The holiday season, like yesterday, might as well be a thousand years into the past. It's long gone and cannot be experienced again. Puff. It's gone with the wind.

But the aura of the occasion is not forgotten. Indeed, many occasions outside of war and lesser miseries are memorable. There's something special about every person's space in time. The time doesn't have to be a holy day, either.

Those indelible marks in time outlast the material gifts, which too often highlight the year but soon blend in with the other household goods. The true gifts are out of love and are not to be counted as if they were dollars in a bank.

It's the thought that counts — cliche or not — and if remembrance is wrapped by a goldmine, fine. Otherwise, just be grateful for the spirituality behind the gift.

Like yesterday, the gift of love is not visible, but it can be sensed and felt; sometimes it abounds, and sometimes it is scarce.

It can be soothing and comforting; it may spring you to joy or drop you into despair. Either way, it's a gift; like joy, despair will level off.

Giving is sharing, and sharing is giving. And too often we tend to forget that the one gift all creatures in mankind can freely give is just a pleasant moment in time. The potential is great, though the actual gift is so rare.

Pleasantries are not like water, or gold or silver or tin or bauxite or warm wool blankets on a cold night. They're limitless; yet, they on occasion may be rare and worth as much as light in darkness.

To experience a pleasantry is to go on a holiday. And that's a precious moment in time.

May all your days be holidays.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Bouquet of thanks

To The Editor:

The Midland High School Band returned from California having successfully marched in the Tournament of Roses Parade on New Years day in Pasadena. The experience for the students was unequaled in our careers as band directors. The opportunity to perform for literally millions of people was awesome and thrilling. Not only the band, but the entire city of Midland was put in the spotlight and the people in California loved it. It appeared that the state of Texas was very popular in California.

We are greatly indebted to countless people in Midland for their financial and loyal support. The entire operation could not have been possible without them. The Band Booster Club lead by Larry McIntosh rose to every occasion in raising the funds. Our projects chairman, Norman Womack, worked tirelessly to make the projects succeed. The fruitcake project chaired by David Schaefer was a hugh success. The help from Joan Baskin, her committee, Janice Archer and Ronny Kole involving the Spring Benefit was a highlight. Our thanks to the New Car Dealers Association for their contribution. The news media was most cooperative and helpful in spreading the news of this super event. Our police department could not have been more helpful. They allowed us to practice on city streets and donated their time and equipment as well. To all the generous people that found a way to help financially, we are grateful. There is not enough space here to list them. Various individuals, corporations and banks deserve our special thanks.

To the parents of these students, you can only be proud of their performances through the trip. There were 70,000 people at Disneyland for that parade and one and a half million at the Rose Parade. The band entertained these audiences superbly. The five and one half mile Rose Parade took its toll but we were still playing at the end. The hotel, bus drivers and other people were highly complimentary of the student's behavior. Most had never encountered a group with better manners and behavior.

A special thank you to the school board, school administration and faculty at Midland High School for their support. The entire project was made a pleasure because of these people.

Thank you Mayor Akin for declaring Dec. 28, 1981 as Midland High School Band Day in Midland. It was an honor for the band.

For those 42 parents who went as chaperons, we thank you for your indispensible contribution. Without you we could not have done it. We hope you catch up on your sleep.

Ask your doctor

To The Editor:

I would like to bring to your attention a very serious matter. Dr. Neil Solomon's column, a regular feature in your newspaper, carried a headline entitled, "Convulsions Not Serious in Young Children," on December 29, 1981 on Page 5B. People glancing at this headline would assume that any type of convulsion in young children is not harmful. If they were to read only the headline and not the rest of the discussion, they would be grossly misled. Convulsions in young children usually are a very serious problem, and as a rule of thumb, the younger the child that convulses, the more serious the problem and the more difficult it will be to control.

If one goes on to read the question and answer portion, one can also get the impression that as long as the child has a fever at the time of the convulsion, not much is to be made of this. Although a professional reading Dr. Solomon's answer may understand what he means by "febrile convulsions," the lay public may assume this to mean any seizure with fever. However, in many children who convulse with fever, the fever may actually unmask an underlying abnormality of the brain and serve merely as a trigger, rather than the underlying cause in the child with a familial tendency for a benign condition.

My advice to parents of children who convulse with fever for the first time is to bring their child to a physician for immediate assessment of the situation. Because this subject has been much written about and is familiar to medical doctors, they will be able to discern which child needs further investigation and therapeutic intervention.

Their birthright

To The Editor:

Nine years ago the Supreme Court made it lawful to kill unborn babies. The court departed from the Judaeo-Christian base of English law in making this crime lawful. Under the direction of Justice Blackmun, it went back to pagan Rome for the precedent of "paterfamilias" whereby the Roman father had complete control over his family — even to life and death.

Our modern pagans have established a "materfamilias," which allows the mother to take the life of her unborn baby at any time during the pregnancy. Of course, most choose to abort during the first trimester when the baby is tiny — but does his size in any way take away from his humanity?

Most women who get an abortion do so because 1) their boyfriend has deserted them 2) their families will not accept them 3) they simply don't want to take responsibility for the life they and another have created.

Isn't it ironic that a society that allows such freedom in sex (television, etc.) becomes puritannical when the product of sex makes his arrival. It's just another way of disclaiming responsibility for our personal acts.

Midlanders, please announce the fact that many childless couples are searching and waiting for a child to adopt. There are several local adoption agencies in Midland: Lutheran Social Services, Methodist Maternity Home (MAPLE House in Odessa); there is a local agent for the Edna Gladney Home in Fort Worth. For the girl who wishes to give her baby up for adoption, these agencies assure her of housing and medical care until the baby arrives. For the girl who wishes to keep her baby there are other homes and other agencies. For information on these, call Birthright.

Let's be Franklin

To The Editor:

Many ways to gain success and happiness are made available today proffering various methods directing one to success in business, in relating to others, in discovering oneself.

Mostly overlooked, however, is the personal advice of THE MOST SUCCESSFUL MAN IN AMERICA, whose influence was indispensible in obtaining freedom for the United States. He was successful in his personal life, so successful financially that he retired from the business world in his early forties, and successful in a most spectacular way as a public servant.

The man is Benjamin Franklin, unrivaled as America's greatest achiever. His list of accomplishments under the most difficult circumstances remain unequaled and continue to benefit mankind today.

Franklin left his methods for achieving success, wealth and happiness to posterity. They are written by his own hand from personal experience. And the fact that he gives them to us without cost may be why the advice is strangely ignored.

Nonetheless, it is fitting and proper for Americans to observe Ben Franklin's birthday, Jan. 17, recalling that he remains "MR. AMERICAN," symbol of serving the public, our only patriot to sign all four documents essential to the creation of a free and independent United States of America.

Support supported

To The Editor:

Please forgive my tardiness in expressing my personal appreciation for the editorial support by The Reporter-Telegram for the proposed water trust fund amendment in the recent general election.

Yours was one of the few newspapers in the state which recognized the overriding importance of the action sought without getting diverted into the various side arguments. The fact that yours turned out to be a minority viewpoint made it all the more gratifying to those of us believing so strongly in the issue. You are far ahead of your journalistic fellows in your visionary outlook on the water future for Texas.

We of course regret that we did not prevail at the polls, but I hope you will continue to speak on the urgency of meeting our state's growing water needs.

Same mistakes

To The Editor:

Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn, exciled Soviet writer, has warned that we, the U.S., must not make the same mistakes in dealing with Red China as it did in its actions toward the Soviet Union. "After World War II," he said, "the American administration, without any obvious need, gave away to Stalin all of Eastern Europe." Economic and technical aid from the U.S. helped Stalin to solidify his position in Russia during the 1930's. China is much in the same position now. He urged the U.S. not to arm China. "If you arm China, you will give China the very half where America is situated, and there nothing will help you."

We cannot continue to aid and assist our enemies and expect that all will go well with US. The aim of the Soviet Union and Red China is to put US six feet under. They hate US and their chief aim is to to overpower US. If the U.S. were overcome, many Americans would be put to death. To verify this comment just read what they say, the Communists do what they say they'll do. In fact they tell you exactly what they are going to do and then do it.

We should urge our congressmen to stop dealing with the Communists immediately. We ought to stop baling them out of economic, technological and other endeavors thus hindering their aim and goal to overpower US.

So gullible

To The Editor:

Lack of knowledge and distorted facts is destroying this country.

When I read the article in the Dec. 30 issue of The Midland Reporter-Telegram, "Court Ruling Marks Turning Point in Gun Control Campaign" by Sharon Cohen, A.P.W., I couldn't believe my eyes to think that the American people are so gullible.

A gun law that convicts a "resident" (law-abiding citizen) of possessing guns puts FEAR and NUMBERS on no criminal. Must we live in constant fear of our neighbors, police, rapist, thieves and whatever?

The way the Federal Judges are ruling today over state rights and constitutional issues, I wonder if a judge would uphold the individual right to "KEEP" and "BEAR ARMS" under the Second and Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and Article I, Section 23 of the Texas Constitution?

I must agree with Alan Gottbeb of the Second Amendment Foundation in Bellevue, Wash., — "a national DISGRACE."

Poland has her problems but we had better look in our own back yard.

A great place

To The Editor:

We have been residents of Midland now almost two years. We moved to Midland after my husband retired from M.P. Railroad in Big Spring.

To us this is the greatest city in Texas. The stores are so convenient, people so friendly and nice, and great police and sheriff departments. The city management is always working for a greater city.

Most of all we would like to give flowers to the teenagers. As managers of a mini-storage company here, we come in contact and deal with an awful lot of teenagers and twenty-one and two-year-old young people.

These are great, sweet kids. We find 99 percent trust-worthy, dependable and very well mannered.

Note of thanks

To The Editor:

Thank you for printing my many animal welfare letters. You will never know how much this helps the animals!

This week I received a reply to my letter to The Humane Society of the U.S. regarding my protest to them regarding the rabbit beatings in Idaho. I am asking you to publish the address of the governor of Idaho. This is the only avenue we can pursue at this time. If you are concerned please take the time to write a protest letter to The Honorable John V. Evans, Governor of Idaho, Boise, ID 83720.

Please remember if we don't speak out in defense of our animal friends no one will. Your letter will be important. Please write it today.

...ctured is a setting in the interior of the beautiful Lionel Daury restaurant, where French cuisine, fine wines and gracious service combine for memorable dining.

True French cuisine served in Midland

Lionel Daury, a true French chef, and his wife Patricia have brought the pleasure of French cuisine served in authentic surroundings to Midland in the form of the Lionel Daury restaurant, 20 Plaza Center, near the southest corner of Garfield and Wadley Streets.

Diners at Lionel Daury's may order from the standard three-course dinner menu offering choices of an appetizer, entree and dessert, plus wine, all for about $22 a person, Or, they may choose items individually from the a la carte section, where appetizers are listed from $4, entrees are from $12 to $15, and desserts are $3 to $4. The menu changes with the seasons.

The restaurant serves an early dinner from 6 to 7 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday. The menu features salad, steak maitre d'hotel, vegetable du jour, potatoes au gratin, chocolate mousse and wine. The special price on this dinner is just $18.00 per person. Reservations are requested for these early dinners and are recommended at any time, especially for parties of four or more. Call 683-1444 to reserve. While the early dinner is especially designed to complement your special occasions such as theatre, ballet and symphony, its hour is often simply a more convenient dining time.

The Lionel Daury restaurant now offers a very nice wine list, from their house wine up to the truly expensive wines. The restaurant is open from 6-9:30 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday. American Express, Mastercharge and Visa are accepted.

Daury's Bistro, adjacent to the restaurant, serves lunch only at this time. However, beginning March 1, it will be open for dinner as well, and the Lionel Daury restaurant will be closed for the entire month of March for vacations. So, make a note to have "supper at the Bistro" in March, after which you will want to see the new pictures and decorations the Daurys will be bringing back from France for the restaurant.

Another thing you will want to take advantage of is the Lionel Daury Fishmarket, also in Plaza Center. The market is open for lunch and in the afternoon. All of the fish is flown in from Massachusetts twice weekly, providing fresh fish for the market and the retaurant, alike.

No shortage of statistics for economy watchers

By CAROLINE ATKINSON
(c) 1982, The Washington Post

There is no shortage of statistics for economy-watchers. Indicators of the nation's economic health are published frequently by many different branches and agencies of the federal government and are reported in the business and financial pages of daily newspapers.

But how much can each of them tell the reader?

One of the best known and most avidly followed statistical series — the Consumer Price Index — is also one of the most confusing. Published monthly bythe Bureau of Labor Statistics in the Labor Department, the CPI actually measures the price each month of a basket of certain consumer goods and services bought in various parts of the country. It shows how their price has changed relative to previous months and years.

Many people call it "the inflation rate." But the CPI can be used to work out the inflation rate, or the rate of price increase, over one month, three months, a year, or any other time period. There is no one inflation rate given by each month's CPI index number.

Moreover, the CPI is probably not the best measure of inflation. It exaggerates the effect on the average person's cost of living of changes in the cost of owning a home, particularly changes in the mortgate interest rate. In addition, as its name suggests, it just shows the changing prices of consumer goods, not of all the goods and services produced in the economy.

The Producer Price Index, also published monthly by BLS, gives a guide to cost increases in the pipeline that have not yet hit the consumer. It shows average price changes for raw materials, intermediate production goods and wholesale manufacturing goods.

As well as being influenced by the cost of raw materials, the final prices that consumers pay are crucially affected by wage levels. BLS is also responsible for collating monthly figures on hourly and weekly earnings.

Another closely watched indicator is the level of unemployment. Each montha survey of households is carried out to determine how many people would like to work but cannot find a job. They are then subdivided by age, sex, race and state. Changes in the unemployment rate are an important indicator of the health of the economy. Low unemployment and low inflation are generally two key economic goals.

Supplementing the information on the state of the job market given by the unemployment figures is the employment report, gathered monthly from both the household survey and a payroll survey of firms.

Other important monthly data on the domestic side of the economy include the industrial production figures published by the Federal Reserve, and the leading indicators of the Commerce Department. The first series records the output of the nation's mines and factories, broken down by industry. It shows month by month which industries are growing and which not, and gives a good guide to output in the economy as a whole. However, the index does not cover the large service sector of the economy, producer of such things as restaurant meals and banking, nor the government sector.

The leading indicators are a composite of economic measures such as money supply, numbers of industrial layoffs, and raw materials prices, which is supposed to tell how the economy is likely to move in the future.

Lampshade Construction classes are coming up soon at Midland Stained Glass Center, 4313-A West Illinois. Start the new year creatively by calling 697-0322 to notify the center of your interest in this and other classes.

Stained glass classes to begin

It's "January slump" time once again, and Midland Stained Glass Center has just the right pick-me-up...classes in the art of stained glass construction.

Classes for beginners in stained glass techniques will be held on Tuesdays or Thursdays, at a choice of morning, afternoon or evening times, two hours to a session. They each run for four weeks during which time the participant will construct a panel from a purchased kit which includes the necessary tools and glass. There are several kits from which to choose. Day class times are set to conform to local Mother's Day Out programs.

Call Mary Richardson now at Midland Stained Glass Center to reserve a place in one of these classes, which are necessarily limited in size. First of the scheduled series begins January 14, so call as soon as possible, 697-0322.

An Intermediate Weekend Workshop for those who have a bit of experience or who have questions and need some help will be held on Saturday, January 30, and on the following Sunday, if necessary, to finish up.

You will have an opportunity to make your love a Valentine suncatcher in a Saturday session February 6. Choose from patterns modified for the occasion or from some custom designs Mary has created.

The Lampshade Construction Class is a big favorite with those who have already learned the beginner's techniques in working with glass. If you think you might be interested in joining this class please call or go by the center and let them know. The class will be arranged at a time most convenient for those who express the desire to participate.

Keep in mind that Midland Stained Glass Center, 4313-A W. Williams Company promotes Brose to operations manager

John R. Brose has been promoted to operations manager for the Williams Company, one of the Midland-headquartered Clayton W. Williams Jr. companies.

Brose, who was production manager, now is in charge of producing, drilling and engineering operations for the company. He has been with the Willams Company since February 1981.

Brose

Before joining Williams, Brose was with Williams Brothers Engineering Company, Tulsa, as vice president of operations in the firm's Oil & Gas Division.

He was with Shell Oil Co. 17 years before going with Williams Brothers. His tenure with Shell included eight years in Midland, six years in California and three in New Orleans.

He is a graduate of the University of Kansas with a B.S. degree in petroleum engineering.

District Exploration Manager

Santa Fe Energy, the nation's fourth largest independent oil and gas company, is looking for an experienced explorationist, preferably a geologist by training, to head our Permian Basin District. This position requires 10 + years experience, a minimum of 2 years in the Permian Basin. Supervisory or managerial skills, and experience in formulating exploration and business plans a must.

Because of the broad scope of our operations, Santa Fe Energy can offer highly competitive salaries, a liberal benefits package and opportunities for real professional growth. Change to the better today! Send your resume in confidence to:

RRC's Utility Division to move into other offices

AUSTIN — To allow more room in the Railroad Commission's Austin headquarters building for the increasing workload in oil and gas regulation, the RRC's Utilities Division is moving into another building.

The move is to be completed this weekend, and the GUD will operate out of an office building at 55 N. IH 35 in Austin beginning Jan. 4.

All gas utility-related hearings will be held at the new offices. Amended notices of hearing, which will include notification of any changes in time and place, will be sent to all parties in hearings that have already been scheduled at the old building.

The new GUD phone number is 475-0461. Division Director Jeffry Hill can be reached at 475-6282. The division's hotline number, through which accidents involving gas utilities and pipelines are reported, will remain 447-2171.

Through its Gas Utilities Division, the Railroad Commission approves rates for gas service in unincorporated areas of Texas. Although city governments have jurisdiction on rate changes within their corporate limits, appeals are made to the Commission. Public hearings on applications from utilities for rate increases are held before recommendations, based on evidence presented, are made to the Commissioners.

Wind power contract signed

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pacific Gas & Electric Co. has agreed to purchase wind power from what is to be the largest "farm" of giant windmills in the nation.

The mammoth utility announced the signing of the 30-year contract with Windfarms Ltd. of San Francisco on Thursday. The pact calls for the purchase of as much as 350,000 killowatts of electrical power.

Construction of the windmills — 200 feet tall with 300-foot diameter blades — is scheduled to begin late this year.

The first stage of the project calls for the construction of 21 wind generators over the next five years near the cities of Fairfield, Vallejo and Benicia, east of San Francisco.

Those 21 generators are expected to produce about 250 million killowatt hours a year, equivalent to the annual electric needs of about 40,000 households served by PG&E.

The full amount covered by the contract would produce enough electricity for 150,000 homes each year.

The California Department of Water Resources has also signed an agreement which permits it to purchase some of the off-peak power generation — energy needed to meet the pumping requirements of the State Water Project.

"Windfarms' agreement with PG&E and DWR is a significant part of Windfarms' corporate goal to install 1 million kilowatts of wind energy generation before 1990," said Wayne Van Dyck, president of the firm.

Pipeline placed in service

A low pressure natural gas gathering system in north central Texas has been placed in service by Northern Gas Products Company.

The gathering system and 50-mile pipeline will transport gas from wells in Eastland and Comanche counties to the company's Lipan processing plant in Hood County, southwest of Fort Worth.

"Eight wells in Eastland County are tied to the system, says John Hon, the company's regional manager in Houston. Hon expects another 60 wells in Eastland and Comanche counties to be connected by the end of March.

Called the Punkin Center Pipeline, the new system has the capacity to move up to a 10 million cubic feet of natural gas per day. The gas is expected to yield 50,000 gallons of mixed hydrocarbons, including ethane, propane, iso-butane, normal butane and natural gasoline.

The line originates in southern Eastland County and passes through portions of Comanche and Erath Counties before terminating at the Lipan plant. The first 17 miles of line is 16-inches in diamteter to accommodate wells with less than 50 pounds pressure, says Roger Krantz, superintendent of the Lipan plant.

Northern Gas Products nompany produces ethane, propane, iso-butane, normal butane and natural gasoline. The company also fractionates mixtures of these liquids into commercially pure components.

Northern Gas Products is a part of Northern Liquid Fuels Company, a division of InterNorth, Inc., a diversified energy corporation based in Omaha, Nebraska. BUSINESS NOTEBOOK

Texas railroads more profitable than counterparts

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Coal, trade with Mexico, technological improvements and regulatory changes are helping to keep Texas railroads to operate more profitably than their counterparts in some other areas of the nation, officials here report.

Ed Kasparik of the Railroad Commission's Rail Planning Section says Texas operations are "by and large making money — although they might say not enough money."

Jimmy Banks of the Texas Railroads Association agrees that "most of the railroads operating in Texas are general optimistic about the future."

Railroads began operating in Texas in 1853, when the Buffalo Bayou, Brazos & Colorado constructed a 20-mile line from Harrisburg to Stafford's Point in Harris County.

Dr. Charles P. Zlatkovich, currently a professor of accounting and business analysis at Texas A&M University, in a book on the state's railroads, notes Texas still leads the nation in the miles of railroad lines within its borders — although that mileage has declined by 23 percent over the past 50 years, to 12,765 miles at the end of 1980 (from a peak of 17,078 in 1932).

But Banks notes that the decline in miles of track doesn't necessarily mean a decline in areas served.

"In many cases," he says, "it's elimination of duplication" — as in the instance of the Southern Pacific and Missouri Pacific lines, which combined parallel tracks serving the Rio Grande Valley.

Banks reports railroads are spending large amounts to improve roadbeds and tracks in Texas, including installation of continuously welded track — which comes in quarter-mile sections, instead of 39-foot rails used in the past.

Use of such track eliminates joints which are a source of wear (and which produces the clicking sounds as trains travel over the joints).

And, he adds, during the past fue years there have been "great strides" in improving railroad equipment.

Among those innovations are devices on diesel locomotives to make them use less fuel, and development of new types of lighter-weight railcars.

Another change has been increased coal-hauling traffic, which Banks notes has required "heavy duty roadbeds."

Kasparik also points to the growth of coal trains, commenting that such traffic "simply wasn't there five years ago."

In 1980, according to Railroad Commission figures, railroads hauled 268 million tons of freight within Texas, and had $2.064 billion in operating revenues — with net revenues of $304 million.

Part of that freight was headed for Mexico, with Kasparik noting that trade with Mexico "has been booming."

"That appears to be an area that is just going to boom from now on," he adds, since Mexico is investing heavily in improvements to its rail system as well as continuing its purchases of goods from the United States.

Many of those goods move through Texas, with Laredo being the busiest port of entry for exports going to Mexico by rail.

Those improvements to the Mexican rail system should eliminate some of the bottlenecks which have occurred at the border in the recent past, Kasparik says.

Grain shipments to Texas ports will continue to be a major part of rail shipments, he believes, along with "nonmetallic minerals" — such as sand and gravel, and limestone.

"A lot of Central Texas is being moved to Dallas and Houston," Kasparik comments, " and a lot of goes by rail."

Most parts of Texas can continue to expect rail service in the future, Kasparik believes, although some areas have had problems — particulary with the failure of the Rock Island lines, which operated 800 miles of track in Texas.

Musch of that track has been taken over by the Burlington Northern, but some aras are stilling facing problems with retaining, or re-establishing, service.

Texas recently added a new shortline railroad to the 20 already operating with the creation of the Texas Northwestern Railroad to serve the northern Panhandle area, Kasparik says.

Both Banks and Kasparik cite Federal legislation, which took effect last year as likely to benefit Texas railroad operations.

That effort to deregulate many aspects of the industry should alow more flexibiity for companies and enable that to continue operating profitabley, they feel.

Banks also argues that "rates haven't shot up as had been anticipated by critics" of the legislation, and feels that competition and new technology will help to prevent any great increases.

"Overall," Banks says, "our people are quite encouraged."

Electronic payments being used

NEW YORK (AP) — Partially for the convenience of retirees, but also to save companies money, more and more insurers are setting up systems to electronically transfer monthly pension benefits directly to individuals' bank accounts instead of sending checks through the mail.

Electronic funds transfer already is used extensively in the private sector to pay weekly wages and other benefits, and the federal government relies on the automated clearinghouse network to pay about one-third of all Social Security recipients as well as some of the military. The New York City Fire Department pension fund began paying benefits electronically as early as 1978.

But insurance companies have been moving to electronic payments only within the past year or two.

The Prudential Insurance Company of America, which sends out nearly $70 million a month in retirement benefits, is one of the latest major insurance firms to begin a pilot program to pay benefits electronically. The program, which began last month, is voluntary and so far has affected only 1,000 of Prudential's 320,000 benefit recipients.

Robert G. Macauley, director of group pension claims for the Newark, N.J.-based insurance giant, said Prudential decided to start converting its benefit-payment system so it could offer better service to retirees and save money for the company.

He said there occassionally are problems with the postal system delaying checks and there have been increasing incidences of retirement checks being lost or stolen.

AT&T break up — ending seven years legal skirmish

By STEVEN P. ROSENFELD
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The breaking up of the world's largest business, American Telephone & Telegraph Co., while bringing an end to seven years of legal skirmishing is just beginning a period of radical change for the communications industry.

AT&T's agreement with the Justice Department to give up its 22 operating telephone companies within the next 18 months frees AT&T to move into the unregulated field of information services as well as continuing its long-distance service and manufacturing and research arms.

Bell System officials declined to discuss plans for expanding into the growing fields of computerized information distribution and cable television systems. A reorganization plan must be filed with the government in six months.

AT&T will retain its renowned research facility, Bell Telephone Laboratories Inc., and its versatile manufacturing branch, Western Electric Co., and has been experimenting with providing news and other information on home television screens.

Such a system could also be used to allow a person to view electronic advertising and then place computerized orders for goods and services from his home.

Newspaper and television executives have expressed concern about competition for their business from AT&T.

AT&T also is becoming involved in data processing, and the long-distance network to transmit business information around the nation and the globe. Corporations are spending billions of dollars to automate offices.

Telephone service is also expected to be widely affected by the antitrust agreement.

AT&T has been faced with competition for its long-distance business, in part because some of its charges for toll calls have remained well above its costs of providing the service in order to subsidize the local operating units.

With the divestiture of local units, competition will intensify for long-distance business, and subsidies to local telephone companies are expected to drop.

That means local telephone charges are likely to rise dramatically, analysts agree. Telephone service could also deteriorate.

Joe Pace, senior vice president at National Economics Research Associates, a Washington consulting firm specializing in antitrust and regulated industries, says the impact of splitting up AT&T could be harsh.

"If they (rates) do go up sharply," Pace says, "a lot of low-income people may be forced to give up ownership of a telephone."

And, he adds, there are many questions to be answered about the future course of telephone service.

Pace says competition could blossom for local telephone service among former operating units of the Bell System, cable television systems and mobile telephone services.

Long-distance service within states, currently regulated by state agencies, will be taken over by AT&T, resulting in a nationwide shakeup in such rates, Pace says.

The nation's second-largest telephone utility, General Telephone & Electronics Corp., took a cautious stance on the AT&T divestiture.

"Any effort to restructure an industry in which a single entity has had an 85 percent share of the market is extremely difficult," said GTE Chairman Theodore Brophy.

And hours after the government announced the agreement to settle its 7-year-old battle with AT&T, it said it was dropping its 12-year-old effort to break up International Business Machines Corp., the world's leading data processing business.

Since the IBM suit was filed in 1969, the computer industry has experienced enormous growth, with competition abounding.

In other business and economic developments this past week:

—The Labor Department reported the nation's unemployment rate soared to 8.9 percent in December from 8.4 percent the previous month and 7 percent in July. President Reagan called the situation "tragic," adding, "There are going to be a few months of low periods, we can't help that." Reagan said he believes the economy will turn around by summer.

—The National Bureau of Economic Research, a business research group which is the recognized arbiter of determining when recessions begin and end, reported its data showed the eighth recession since the end of World War II started in July.

—Automakers reported sales of U.S.-made cars fell 5.3 percent in 1981, dropping to their lowest level in 20 years, while imports captured a record share of the market. Auto production fell about 1.5 percent last year, the nation's automakers reported, also sinking to the lowest level in 20 years. December production plummeted 25.2 percent.

—The United Auto Workers union said it will begin collective bargaining discussions in the coming week with General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. Officials of both companies, plagued by a two-year slump, have insisted for nearly a year that contracts must be reopened and labor cost concessions granted by the union to make the companies competitive with foreign automakers.

—U.S. Steel Corp. won control of Marathon Oil Co. in a $6.2 billion merger that created the nation's 12th-largest industrial concern. Mobil Corp. was the unsuccessful bidder, its second such setback in six months. Mobil failed last summer in an attempt to buy Conoco Inc.

—The U.S. Energy Department predicted that gasoline prices will rise by nearly 6 cents a gallon in 1982 from the 1981 average of $1.36 for all grades of the motor fuel. It said that oil imports, which fell in the last two years, will begin climbing again this year.

—The Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported that the average interest rate for new home loans fell to 17.54 percent in December from 18.16 percent the previous month. It was the biggest monthly decline for mortgage rates since July 1980.

The 1982 market gets off to troubling start

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened its new year with what appeared to be a broad, tidy advance. Some 900 stocks rose, and the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, an 88.99-point loser in 1981, posted a 7.52-point gain thanks to a last-hour thrust.

But while the Dow was rising Monday, other indicators showed fractional gains and the New York Stock Exchange's composite index barely managed to climb 0.09 point. "It just sat there like a dead fish," said Robert Stovall, senior vice president of Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

He and other analysts just did not like the look to the market, and the next day they saw why.

From the opening bell Tuesday prices fell broadly and steeply, with dozens of issues — led by the energy-related stocks — dropping a point or more. After two more days of lethargic activity, matters showed some improvement Friday after the Justice Department settled its antitrust suit against American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and dropped its 12-year-old antitrust suit against International Business Machines Corp.

After Tuesday's drop, many analysts cited renewed fears about higher interest rates, especially after economist Henry Kaufman of Salomon Brothers said that by this summer some rates could again hover near their record peaks as the Treasury finances bulging federal deficits.

Kaufman's remarks were unsettling but hardly new, many analysts noted. "He's been saying that for a year and a half," said Alfred E. Goldman of A.G. Edwards & Sons Inc. in St. Louis.

The problem was more than that, Goldman and others said. They believe the market suffers from substantial technical problems that were camouflaged the last few weeks of 1981 with talk of tax-loss selling and other factors said to be keeping most prices from rising.

"What greased the slide is that we ended 1981 with the bulls saying, 'Oh boy, as soon as we get past what we think is the end of tax-loss selling, we'll get into 1982 and it's going to be up, up and away,'" Goldman said. "When it didn't happen, and instead we started really sliding, they panicked.

"The one excuse they had for not having a good market since September was tax-loss pressure," he continued. "On Monday, the tax-loss selling was off, the market just wasn't in a position to take it (a rally) up and they had to dump."

Investment, brokerage firm completes merger

DALLAS — Rauscher Pierce Refsnes Inc., the leading Southwestern investment banking and brokerage firm, has completed its merger with Inter-Regional financial Group, Inc., (IFG), a diversified financial services company headquartered in Minneapolis.

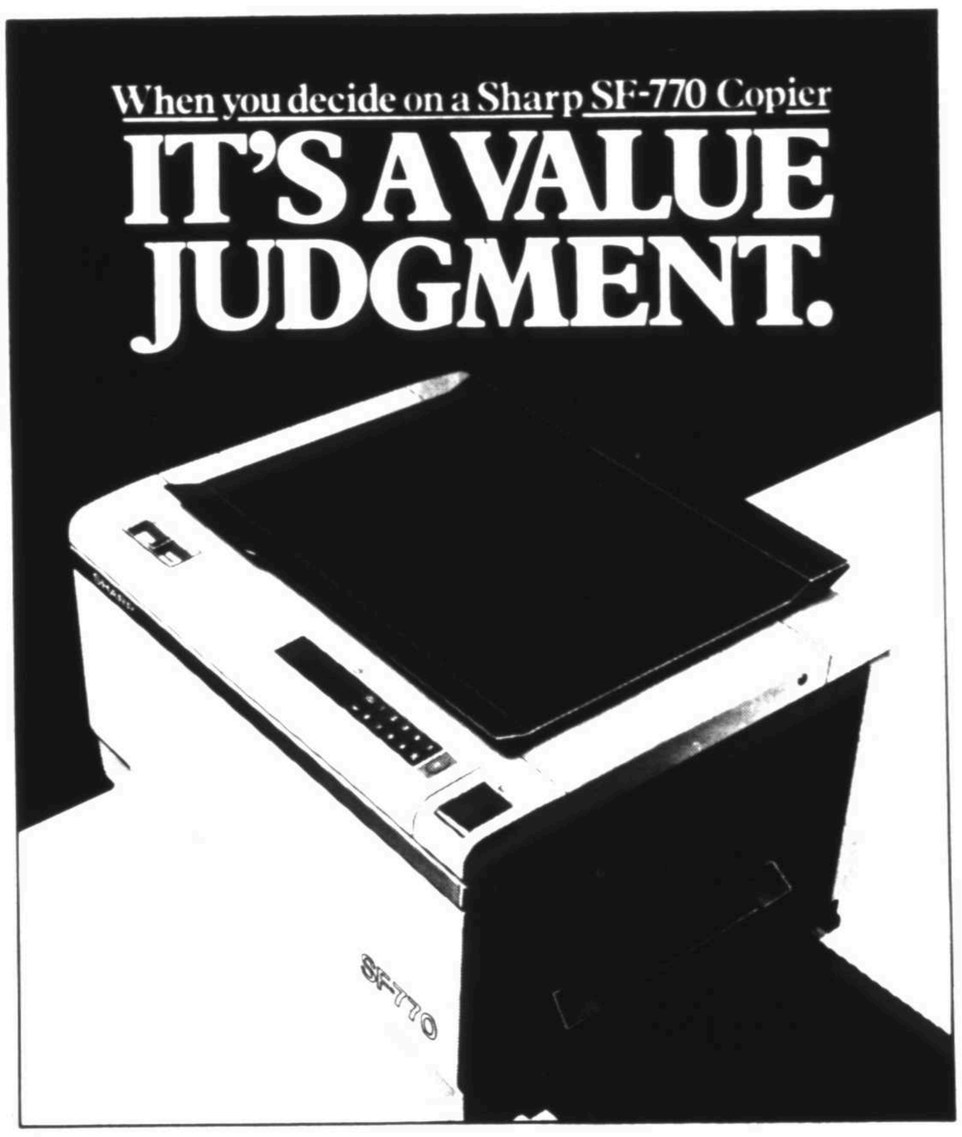
"We are quite pleased with the merger," said Chairman John H. Rauscher Jr., "for it provides RPR with the greater financial resources of a substantially larger organization, and yet affordes us the freedom to continue operating under the same management and same philosophy that have made our firm so successful."

The merger was effective on Dec. 31, folowing affirmative votes by shareholders of both corporations.

Under the terms of the merger, RPR shareholders received 1,270,781 shares of IFG common stock, and 232, 663 shares of IFG preferred stock valued at approximately $31 million.

Three RPR officers — Rauscher, Vice Chairman Joseph L. Refsnes, and President James L. Bayless — were elected to the expanded IFG board of directors.

When you decide on a Sharp SF-770 Copier
IT'S A VALUE JUDGMENT.



Matter of fact, as you read on, you can't help but see with your own eyes why our new Sharp SF-770 Copier is just more valuable, period.

Maybe that's because it's got more going for it, more raw potential, more features featured, than any other copier in its class.

Maybe it's our self-diagnosis.
The Sharp SF-770, with its own self-diagnostic capabilities, can tell you all by itself when it's hungry or thirsty for more paper or toner (dry toner, of course).

Or if something went down the wrong pipe (which is rare).

Point is, you know just how your copier is feeling at all times. That's because we believe in preventive medicine.

Maybe it's our split personality.
Paper-size-wise, that is. We can copy 11" x 17" or 8½" x 11" or even down to invoice size just by switching paper cassettes.

We can even be a 2-faced copier as well, because you can copy on both sides of our 2-sized paper. Double-duty!

Maybe it's our flip-top box.
The Sharp SF-770 doesn't clam-up on you when you've got a problem. Quite to the contrary.

If your copier is on the blink, our easy-to-service "clamshell design" makes the job a breeze for rapid repairs.

Maybe it's just because we're Sharp.
That's a good enough reason right there to look into a new Sharp SF-770 Copier. It gives you much more for much less.

And isn't that what value is all about?

"MANY WILL OVERPAY"

Most Taxpayers feel their return is done correctly and to their advsntage if they are not audited and they receive the refund show n on their tax return. This is not always true. The IRS does not check every return to see if the taxpayer took all legitimate deductions or if the taxpayer's financial circumstances have changed from year to year. H & R Block, using a thorough interview, makes the laws work for the client, Every return is then double checked for corrections in both math and theory.

This is the 25th year for America's largest tax service. Thge company was built on the $5.00 and up tax return and still today charges on $7.50 for a 1040A. The average fee last year in Midland was less than $25.00. H&R Block this year is instantly processing 1040's, which means the guaranteed 1040A return will be done in only one visit.

H&R Block does all types of income tax returns, not only the 1040A's but also business & farm returns are done at a modest fee.

H & R Block will make the laws work for you at any of their offices and outlying towns, including Odessa , Andrews, Big Spring, Crane, Ft. Stockton, Iraan, Kermit, McCamey, Monahans, Pecos, Rankin & Seminole.

Midland's offices are located at 114 Andrews Hwy. Tele No. 684-6741 Dellwood Plaza Annex, Tele. 697-3681; Sears Midland Park Mall, Tele. 694-2581.
