Education news

In a recent survey readers rated education as one of the topics on which they wanted more information. The result is "Education," the latest in a series of new pages. It begins Sunday in the Reporter-Telegram. This week's centerpiece feature will spotlight a pilot program that's gained not only strong support from students but from parents as well.

Crossing the line?

A state district judge in Amarillo Monday ordered a woman to speak English as well as Spanish to her 5-year-old daughter while raising her in the home. Not teaching her daughter English at home, Judge Samuel C. Kiser said, amounted to child abuse, relegated the child to "the position of housemaid" and would put the girl at a disadvantage in her English-speaking kindergarten class.

Cityline Community Pulse

Should a judge have authority to demand that English be taught in the privacy of the home? Or is the judge in this case overstepping his bounds? Call Cityline at 560-2400, Category 7655. If you feel Kiser's decision was correct and a judge should be allowed to instruct people on what to teach their children at home, press 1. If you feel he was incorrect in making such a ruling, press 2. You will also have a chance to leave your comments after your vote is cast. We ask that you leave your name, but that is your option. The non-scientific poll will remain open until noon today. Results will appear in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram.

Odd couple

HONOLULU — They're commemorating the end of a war here Saturday. But Sept. 2, 1945, was a beginning, too — for an odd-couple partnership of two peoples who together are leading the world into the 21st century, bickering all the way.When he casts a memorial wreath into Pearl Harbor on Saturday, President Clinton will be at the watery crossroads of history, the place where a Japanese surprise air attack opened World War II for America. But if he looks around, he'll see history turned inside out. Story on page 7A

Big Spring hospital loses superintendent, expects funding cuts

By Jeff Lightfoot
Reporter-Telegram Correspondent

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring State Hospital is without an official superintendent as of Thursday and could be without some funds in the near future.

In spite of these changes, Ed Moughon, assistant superintendent, said, "I don't see a significant impact in the way we will provide services to our consumers."

Robert von Rosenberg completed 32 years of service at the hospital Thursday. He had held numerous positions, including rehabilitation counselor, director of the Hospital Improvement Program, director of the Substance Abuse Program and assistant superintendent.

Dr. Ray Tatum, who has been with the hospital for more than 28 years, is to be the acting superintendent. He is director of the Quality Oversight Department, which oversees certification for the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals, Medicare certification, and the quality improvement efforts of the hospital.

'I don't see a significant impact in the way we will provide services to our consumers.'
— Ed Moughon

The target date for selection of a new superintendent is Oct. 1.

"The Texas Department of MHMR has appointed a Community Screening Team made up of individuals representing (the 56 counties that the Big Spring State Hospital serves) and one of the superintendents from another state hospital," Moughon said of the selection process. "They will be interviewing applicants Wednesday. They will make their recommendation to the director of State Operations and he and the State Commissioner will make the final selection."

The absence of an official superintendent should have a minimal effect, Moughon said.

"Since Dr. Tatum has been here so long he is well aware of the day-to-day operations of the hospital... The

Shaken Simpson defense shifts gears on Fuhrman

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson's shaken lawyers changed strategies Friday, attacking the judge's limitation of the Mark Fuhrman tapes as "incoherent" and springing more witnesses to depict him as a racist liar.

Attorneys Johnnie Cochran Jr. and F. Lee Bailey introduced the latest defense weapon — witness accounts of the former detective's use of racial epithets and possible involvement with Nazi symbols — during a contentious hearing held while unhappy jurors were again left waiting.

Tactical changes were being made even as attorneys spoke during the hearing. At one point, Cochran confided, "we stand before you having had very little sleep."

NATO to give peace chance, halts strikes

■ After three days of raids, Serb, Croat, Muslim leaders agree to sit down, talk peace.

Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — NATO gave peace a chance Friday and three nations grabbed for it. Hours after the alliance suspended three days of blistering raids, Serb, Croat and Muslim leaders agreed to sit down and talk peace.

U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke, who led an intense diplomatic push even as NATO was bombing the Bosnian Serbs, said preliminary peace talks would begin late next week in Geneva.

The foreign ministers of Bosnia, Croatia and Yugoslavia — representing Bosnia's rebel Serbs — will meet with American and European negotiators to discuss how to divide Bosnia among the warring ethnic groups.

"It will be a short conference, which we hope will change the momentum of war into a momentum of peace," Holbrooke said Friday night.

He hoped the meeting would "lay the groundwork for the international peace conference that will be held later at the highest levels."

After 500 missions, NATO warplanes stopped hammering the Bosnian Serbs before dawn Friday, when it appeared an agreement might be near, officials said. NATO cautioned that the flights could resume at any time.

The four-year war has been marked by many peace talks, and all have failed. But State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns in Washington said the latest round stands a better chance because of recent Serb defeats.

"The situation has changed fundamentally," he said.

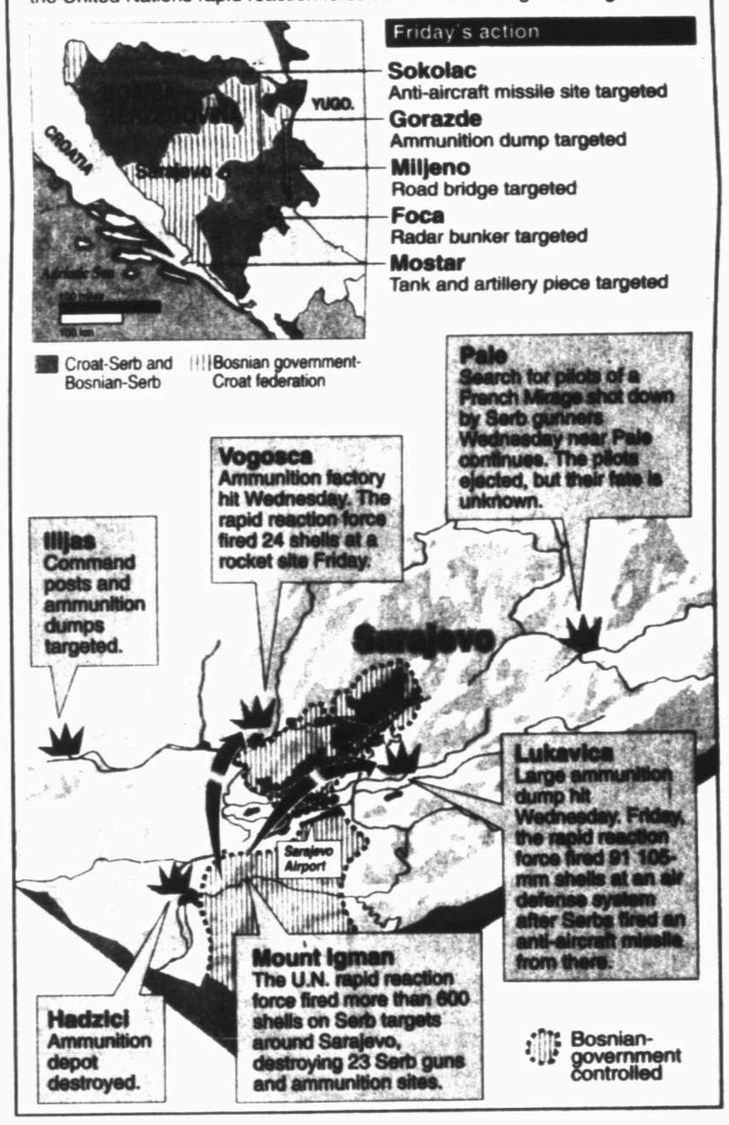

Rebel Serbs took large swaths of Croatia and Bosnia in 1991 and 1992 after the two republics seceded from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia.

But the rebels were driven out of their Croatian stronghold a month ago and have suffered their first defeats in

Commission to review operations in order to stay on top

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

With three new and energetic members leading the agency, the Texas Railroad Commission has begun a complete review of its operations, the first in its 104-year history.

Barry Williamson, senior member and chairman of the commission, visited the Midland office Friday to review reorganization efforts.

Calling the commission the best run and with the best reputation of any state agency, Williamson told Midland employees that "we won't continue to be the best unless we continually improve ourselves."

Williamson said the commission's districts around the state can expect to be given more authority and more autonomy because at least one level of senior management in Austin will be eliminated.

The new direction is one that Mark Henkhaus, director of the commission's District 8 — which includes the Midland and Lubbock areas — is glad to see.

"I think this is a step in the right direction," he said. "I like the goals, I like the mission statement."

He said giving more independence to the districts will be helpful, allowing employees to be of more service to their communities and the industries they work with.

Restructuring the agency began in July with a retreat in Georgetown that was attended by the three commissioners and their staffs. Three division directors — including Henkhaus — were invited to discuss the project and help structure the review.

"I felt honored to participate," Henkhaus said. "I was glad to offer my input. I have been with the commission 12 years and seen a number of changes."

From this retreat came a new mission statement for the commission: To serve Texas through stewardship of natural resources and the environment; concern for personal and community safety; and support of enhanced development and economic vitality.

The commission has identified five targets for action

Cap Rock Electric celebrates co-op's freedom from rate regulation, reviews

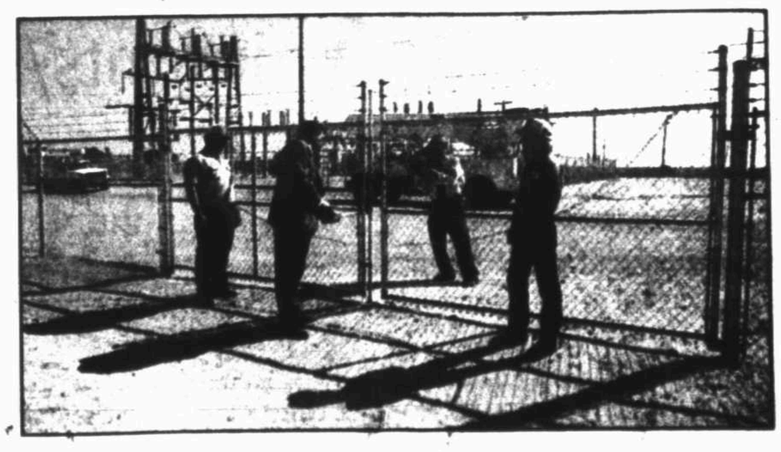

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

"Our company and our industry has been laboring under the chains of regulation for more than 20 years, and now it is over," said Rusty Jones, chairman of the board of Cap Rock Electric, as he stepped forward and cut the chains from an electrical substation east of Midland.

The symbolic chain-cutting was Midland-based Cap Rock's way of celebrating the fact that the state's member-owned co-ops were freed by the Texas Legislature to set their own rates without undergoing a costly Public Utility Commission review. Cap Rock will soon be the first electric cooperative in Texas to be deregulated.

Jones said deregulation of the state's cooperatives, which were brought under the jurisdiction of PUC

Grace Jones

STANTON — Services for Grace Loveless Jones, 87, of Stanton are to be at 11 a.m. Monday at the First United Methodist Church of Stanton with the Rev. Curtis Cadenhead, pastor, and Rev. John Taylor of Dallas officiating. Burial will follow at the Evergreen Cemetery under the direction of Gilbreath Funeral Home.

Mrs. Jones died Thursday in Stanton.

She was born Feb. 27, 1908, in Hill County.

She was a graduate of Denton High School and earned a bachelor of science degree in homemaking from the College of Industrial Arts (now Texas Women's University) in Denton.

Mrs. Jones taught two years in Bardwell and moved to Stanton in 1930. In Stanton, she was the first teacher of the homemaking department, which received state affiliation in its third year. She later taught the third grade for 3 1/2 years.

During World War II, she taught for a year at the military base in Amarillo.

Mrs. Jones was a member of the Stanton Study Club, the Music Club and a charter member of the Beta Kappa Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma. At the First United Methodist Church, she served two years as Sunday School superintendent, a term as president of the Women's Scociety and regularly taught Sunday school.

In 1933, she established the Martin County Community Fund.

She married Calvin Bracket Jones on Aug. 28, 1932, in Denton. He preceded her in death on Aug. 7, 1986.

Survivors include a sister, Viola Carter of Lubbock and many nieces and nephews.

Pallbearers are to be her nephews, Irvin Milburn Atkins, James Walter Carter, Curtis Marvin Loveless, John William Loveless, John Calvin Jones, Paul Allen Jones and Creed Coffee Jr.

STANTON — Services for Mildred Hasting Meek, 74, of Stanton are pending with Gilbreath Funeral Home.

She died Friday at a Midland hospital.

Battle brews over new telecommunications law

DALLAS (AP) — MCI Communications Corp. plans to ask state regulators to allow it to offer local telephone service to Texans without building its own phone network, escaping requirements in a brand-new telecommunications law.

"The law was clearly written to discourage Southwestern Bell's most viable potential competitors," Neal Larsen of MCI's government affairs department told The Dallas Morning News in Friday's editions.

"I don't have any intention of letting them get away with it if I can help it," he said.

Legislators who developed the law say the request, which MCI is expected to file as early as next week with the Public Utility Commission, is contrary to their intent.

A spokesman for Southwestern Bell, Texas' dominant local telephone company, called the plan by the $13 billion-a-year long-distance company "unfortunate."

"It doesn't surprise me that MCI will try to litigate" what it couldn't win in the Legislature, said Jon Loehman, managing director of regulatory affairs for Southwestern Bell in Texas. But he said he thinks MCI will fail.

MCI officials believe the new legislation, which took effect Friday, leaves an opening to lease and resell local service, much as long-distance competition started in the 1970s.

The measure allows companies to offer local service by leasing time on existing telephone lines, but only if the company carries less than 6 percent of the long-distance calls made within Texas in the past year.

Lawmakers have said they believe that AT&T, MCI and Sprint would be excluded by the provision, forcing them to spend millions of dollars to build their own networks.

But MCI says that by its count, it fits under the cap.

An MCI victory would be a blow to Southwestern Bell, which hired numerous lobbyists this year and contributed nearly $300,000 to state lawmakers from political action committees in the 12 months that ended in March, according to state records, the Morning News reported.

Wall Street analysts have said the requirement for big long-distance companies to build their own networks is a big part of making the new law favorable to Southwestern Bell.

Anyone having information concerning these incidents should contact the Police Department at 685-7108 or Crime Stoppers at 694-TIPS.

Lawsuits flood courts before reform deadline

AUSTIN (AP) — The state's new civil justice laws began kicking in Friday, with backers voicing the hope they will reduce the number of lawsuits.

But that wasn't the case the day before the deadline. Courts across Texas were flooded with lawsuits filed by lawyers wanting to make sure their clients wouldn't be covered by the new tort reforms.

In Houston, harried deputy clerks received more than 1,000 new cases before the 5 p.m. closing Thursday. On a typical day, about 200 would have been filed.

District Clerk Charles Bacarisse said his staff had braced for the avalanche, but still were amazed at the numbers.

"The volume is close to overwhelming," he said. "We've pressed everyone available into action. The early shift has stayed late, and the late shift came in early — we're doing everything possible to expedite this."

In Fort Worth on Thursday, District Clerk Tom Wilder kept his office open past closing time, saying, "I've got people literally standing in line with cardboard boxes."

A comprehensive group of "tort reform" laws were passed by the 1995 Legislature and most began taking effect Friday.

The laws are designed to make it harder for people to sue. Restrictions are put on where a case may be tried, punitive damages are limited and penalties are imposed on those who file frivolous lawsuits.

Reform advocates hailed implementation of the changes, with one group branding the state's previous civil justice system as "the Lone Star lawsuit lottery."

"People have long been troubled by the perceived unfairness and imbalance of the legal system. There is so much greed and gaming involved. These lawsuit reforms will help put an end to much of that," said Jon Opelt, executive director of Houston's Citizens Against Lawsuit Abuse.

Some lawyers were less enthusiastic.

In Dallas, lawyer David Small gestured to a lengthy line of lawyers and messengers waiting to file suits before the tort reform deadline and said, "You see what the Legislature has created.

"This has precipitated a lot of lawsuits, although the intent is to free up the jury docket. It's going to have the opposite effect," he said.

Today mostly sunny, mid-90s

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies, a high in the mid-90s and south to southeast winds 5 to 15 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be mostly clear with a low in the lower to mid-60s.

Sunday is expected to be sunny with a high in the upper 90s.

After an overnight low of 63, Friday's high was 92 compared with the record high for that date of 104 in 1959. The record low for today's date was 56 in 1955.

STATE

A cold front headed for Texas stalled out in Oklahoma, leaving a ridge of high pressure to preserve hot, fair conditions over most of the region Friday.

Light and variable winds did little to cool off temperatures in the upper 90s that approached 100 degrees along the state's northeastern border. Sherman and Fort Worth both reported 99-degree temperatures under clear, haze-free skies.

Some rains in the eastern part of the region cooled off parts of Texas that otherwise would have baked under clear skies and sunshine.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered across the western half of south Texas last Friday afternoon, dumping rain in the Hondo area. The rains depressed temperatures in the area.

Rains should decrease for south Texas over the weekend, meaning hotter temperatures over the Labor Day break.

The high pressure kept things stable in the Panhandle and west Texas, which had temperatures in the low to mid 90s Friday afternoon. The sun should shine all weekend across the north and west parts of the state as well.

NATION

Storms with heavy rain barreled Friday across the Tennessee Valley, the central Plains and parts of the Gulf states.

Severe storms began in midmorning and continued during the day in the Tennessee Valley, causing minor flooding and wind damage.

A low pressure system in the Gulf of Mexico spawned storms across central Florida. Other systems caused scattered storms in the central Plains and the deep south of Texas, with the worst just off Padre Island.

Continued dry weather and pleasant temperatures covered the Northeast, while parts of the Rockies and the Great Plains had highs in the 90s.

The highest reading Friday in the lower 48 states was 101 at Blythe, Calif. Thermal, Calif., had a heat index of 121. West Yellowstone, Mont., had the lowest temperature at 27.

Topeka, Kan., got the most rain: 1.8 inches.

Hurricane season continued to be busy in the Atlantic, with two hurricanes and a tropical storm well out at sea.

Hurricane Iris was drifting away from land and Tropical Storm Karen was losing its punch, but Hurricane Luis continued to roar, blowing 130 mph winds at midday. By afternoon, Luis was about 1,070 miles east of the Leeward Islands in the eastern Caribbean, moving west-northwest at about 12 mph.

Forecasters expected the storm to maintain its current track over the next couple of days.

Iris was about 530 miles southeast of Bermuda, drifting north with sustained winds near 105 mph. Karen, barely hanging on with steady winds of 40 mph, was about 685 miles east-southeast of Bermuda, moving northwest at about 21 mph.

ATTACK: O.J. defense switches gears on Fuhrman

cut to the bone the defense proposal to play scratchy tape recordings on which jurors would hear Fuhrman spewing racism and advocating police brutality.

Such a man, the defense argues, was capable of planting a bloody glove to frame Simpson, and Simpson's attorneys wanted jurors to hear Fuhrman's words for themselves.

They also wanted to use the tapes, made during 16 hours of interviews with an aspiring screenwriter from 1985 to 1994, to show jurors that Fuhrman lied when he testified that he hadn't used the word "nigger" in the past decade.

Cochran said the defense was preparing a motion for reconsideration of the ruling, but meanwhile had turned its attention to the new witnesses.

"The message is the defense is not going to roll over and die," Loyola University law professor Laurie Levenson said. "They're going to get Fuhrman any way they can."

Ito tried to plow ahead with testimony, but the strategic shifting made it impossible.

Prosecutor Christopher Darden complained bitterly that Ito was "jamming" the government to proceed even though he wasn't prepared to cross-examine one surprise witness.

"You're being jammed because I've got a jury that's going nuts," Ito snapped.

Ito, worried that the jury is at the breaking point after 7 1/2 months in sequestration, gave the panelists a lengthy apology at the end of the court day, explaining that complex legal matters had delayed testimony until after the long holiday weekend. The break means seven days will pass without jurors hearing from a witness.

Someday, when the trial is over, Ito said, "You'll find out what the big deal was — or wasn't."

He also apologized for a rough outing to Santa Catalina Island that left some jurors seasick.

"The jury, I'm told, are not happy campers," he told lawyers earlier. "Apparently, they came back from Catalina barking at the seals."

Simpson, charged with the June 1994 murders of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman, was involved in the decision-making in court. He often huddled with his legal team, which was out in force following the judge's much-awaited ruling.

Cochran held his tongue about the ruling until late in the hearing.

"With all due respect, there are some parts that are incoherent," he said, echoing a word used by Ito to describe the defense's first motion seeking to introduce the tapes.

Ito ruled that only two of 61 references in the tapes could be heard by the jury, both of which include the word "nigger." Forty-one references included that word, 18 talked about police misconduct and two centered on Fuhrman's attitude about the Simpson case.

Cochran complained that the approved statements were the most innocuous. One is barely audible, he said, and the other survives only in transcript form because the tape was erased.

Cochran suggested the defense would decline to use those because they are not representative of Fuhrman's rabid racism depicted on the recordings.

An annoyed Ito told Cochran: "You ... can walk down the street ... to go to the Court of Appeal if you don't like the ruling."

At first, it appeared that the defense would call one of its new witnesses immediately. But in a flurry of moves, the prosecution opposed the production of the witness, then later demanded that the witness either testify Friday or never.

The defense had proposed calling Roderick Hodge, a black man arrested by Fuhrman, to attack the detective, but backed off when the judge threatened to lop other witnesses from the defense lineup if their stories duplicated each other.

Cochran, after conferring with Simpson, opted to wait until Tuesday and call Kathleen Bell, whose testimony has been seen as crucial to the attack on Fuhrman. Bell has said Fuhrman told her of his hatred for interracial couples and suggested he would often stop them for no reason just to harass them. She said he also advocated genocide against blacks.

Another woman, Andrea Terry, apparently corroborates some of Bell's account.

But the defense expanded its witness list, elaborating on more incidents aimed at attacking Fuhrman.

Bailey said witnesses would say:

■ In 1987, Fuhrman befriended a woman and her roommate, went to their apartment and boasted about beating blacks to "relieve his tension."

■ The same year, Fuhrman arrested Hodge after previous hostile contacts with him. On the way to police headquarters, Fuhrman told Hodge: "I told you I'd get you, nigger."

■ Lucienne Coleman, a deputy district attorney, told her superiors that Fuhrman had discussed Ms. Simpson's breast enlargements with another detective, Andy Purdy. Coleman also said Fuhrman scrawled swastikas on Purdy's locker after the officer married a Jewish woman.

■ Coleman said Purdy kept a log of his contacts with Fuhrman but destroyed it because he didn't want to be involved in the Simpson case. She said she told Simpson prosecutors, who dismissed the account as defense propaganda.

CELEBRATE: Cap Rock leads way to deregulation in 1975, would save the co-ops millions of dollars in legal and consulting fees.

Eric Craven, director of Governmental Affairs for Texas Electric Cooperatives, said other cooperatives will follow Cap Rock's lead and vote to deregulate.

"I think we already have about 15 who have indicated an interest in deregulation," Craven said.

"It's a new day for the electric industry in Texas. The Berlin Wall is down. It's a free market," said Steve Collier, Cap Rock's vice president for Government Affairs, and a longtime supporter of deregulation.

"I think the thing that pushed Texas into the ranks of deregulation was the new political climate in the country that is calling for less government, decentralization of government and turning control over to local entities."

Collier was careful to point out that even though the industry is being deregulated in rate-making, it will not be totally deregulated. "The Public Utility Commission will still have some oversight on rate-making and jurisdiction in other areas."

Previously, the PUC regulated rural electric cooperatives in terms of rate-making, term and condition of service, certification of facilities — usually when public lands and eminent domain were involved — and access to transmission.

Under the provisions of SB 373, member-owned co-ops will be exempt from the rate-making review that has been a source of long delays and costly legal fees.

David Pruitt, president of Cap Rock, said the last rate review that allowed Cap Rock to raise rates 5 percent and collect an additional $2 million a year, had cost the co-op $350,000 in legal and consulting fees.

He said Cap Rock was proud of the role it has played in the deregulation and that savings would be passed on to the consumers.

"Deregulation will let us react quicker in a rapidly changing market," Collier said. "Our members can make simple decisions about what they want to charge themselves."

Barry Williamson, chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission, said at a Cap Rock luncheon that he was delighted that the PUC was moving in the direction of deregulation.

"It is the right thing to do to move responsibility back to the local people and out of the hands of an agency in Austin."

Of the 900 electrical distribution cooperatives nationwide, only 30 percent remain regulated, and if all the rural electric cooperatives in Texas decide to deregulate the number of regulated cooperatives would drop to 22 percent. Texas is one of only 17 states that still regulates rate-setting for co-ops.

All a cooperative must do to become exempt from the rate review is to have a majority of its members vote for deregulation and the PUC certify the election.

"Cap Rock members have been voting since July, and so far we are running 10-1 for deregulation," Collier said. "Assuming the PUC certifies the results of the election and we expect they will, Cap Rock will be the first electric cooperative in the state to unregulate."

Leslie Kjellstrand, director of public information for Texas Public Utilities Commission, says she expects other cooperatives to follow suit.

She said deregulation would make co-ops more responsive to their members and even lower rates.

"We studied the issue and found deregulation to be generally positive for the consumer and that's why we supported it," Ms. Kjellstrand said. "It will give the members more say in the cooperatives they own, and prices may even go down."

According to industry data, approximately one of 10 Texans is served by a rural electric cooperative.

At the same time Ms. Kjellstrand said it put more responsibility on the back of the members, but there were plenty of safeguards. She said if members don't approve of cooperative actions they will have to organize other members, initiate petitions and take other measures to correct the situation. "They might even vote to regulate themselves again."

BEST: Commission to undergo review of operations

this year as a result of the restructuring effort.

The first item of action was to implement PRIDE, a new work philosophy. PRIDE stands for Productivity, Responsibility/Responsiveness, Integrity, Dedication to the Team and Enthusiasm for Serving.

Second is an employee package. The commissioners have given top priority to studying pay, work incentives, flextime and other issues important to the agency's employees.

Texans can expect to see more publicity from the commission as a result of the third item — enhanced communication with both the employees and the public.

"It's time for the premier agency in Texas to let the public know how well we're doing and how well industry is meeting our rules," he said.

A natural gas strategy, the fourth item, is a key one for Williamson, who said that two years ago Texas received more income from gas production than from oil production.

Williamson would like to see the state — which contains a large chunk of the nation's natural gas reserves — develop both its resources and natural gas markets. This includes a review of existing regulations and working with the Legislature to improve laws dealing with natural gas.

Plans also include sponsoring a national-level natural gas conference, to be held in Houston.

The final item — improving the organization structure — has meant a streamlining of the agency, with the focus on senior management. A committee headed by Commissioner Charles Matthews will review the agency from head-to-toe, zeroing in on the tasks to be done, the people needed to do them and the framework best suited for the job.

Williamson said these moves will benefit the agency's employees, the industries they work with and the public, making information more accessible and improving service through innovation and increased autonomy.

"No other state has an agency with the awesome responsibility the Railroad Commission has. Texas produces 30 percent of the nation's oil and 26 percent of the nation's natural gas. The expertise, the industry and the resources are here in Texas, and this is where not only the nation but the world turns for leadership," he said.

TALKS: NATO halts strikes, pushes for peace

(From 1A)

Bosnia over the last several months. Bosnian Serbs have been beset by feuding between political and military leaders.

On Wednesday, after a Serb shell killed 38 people in the Sarajevo "safe area," NATO launched its largest offensive ever in an attempt to knock out the extensive military installations that have allowed Serbs to control 70 percent of Bosnia and keep the capital under siege for 40 months.

The alliance called off the airstrikes without the Serbs meeting a key demand — a withdrawal of heavy weapons from around Sarajevo. The U.N. rapid reaction force in the mountains near Sarajevo continued to hammer Serb positions, targeting an air defense system and a suspected rocket site.

NATO and U.N. officials said the airstrikes could resume at any time, depending on how well the Serbs comply with U.N. demands.

A Western diplomat in Sarajevo said the bombing stopped to show Serbs that the West wants peace.

"The idea is to bomb them to the negotiating table — not to scare them away from it," said the diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

President Clinton, in Hawaii to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the end of World War II, called the agreement a positive step forward.

"But much remains to be done," he said. "Our own negotiating team will continue its work to bring the parties together. And ... no one should doubt NATO's resolve to prevent the further slaughter of innocent civilians."

While cautioning that tough negotiations lay ahead, Holbrooke said all sides had agreed to divide Bosnia between the Muslim-led government and its Croat allies on the one side, and the Bosnian Serbs on the other.

They agreed to use as a starting point a U.S. plan to give the Serbs 49 percent of the country and the Muslim-Croat federation the remainder.

"At this point everyone has agreed at the principle of 51-49, but everyone's 51 and everyone's 49 are different, and that's what these negotiations are going to be about," Holbrooke said.

"The toughest issues are over land. That's what the war has been about."

Sources close to the talks, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Serbs want all of eastern Bosnia, which borders on Serbia, something the Bosnian government strongly opposes. Serbia is the major component of what remains of Yugoslavia.

Both sides also are seeking access to the Sava River in the north, along the border with Croatia, and to the Adriatic Sea to the south.

Friday's breakthrough came after intense negotiations between Holbrooke and Yugoslav leader Slobodan Milosevic, who as president of Serbia will lead a negotiating team with the Bosnian Serbs.

ABSENT: Hospital loses official, funding

operation of the hospital should continue as it has before."

Another change that the hospital faces at this time is anticipated cuts in state funding. The preliminary numbers are that the hospital will receive about $900,000 fewer dollars from the state for next fiscal year. The estimation of escalated costs for the hospital due to increased operating expenses, increased medication costs and higher nurses' salaries — in order to be competitive — is $300,000. Combined, that will produce a $1.2 million impact on the hospital, Moughon said.

"We actually are prepared for less funds," he said. "This is the number we have been working on in estimates for the past year. Unless we're surprised, we anticipate that we can deal with our funding cuts through our planned vacancies.

"For the last 12 months we've been restructuring the hospital in anticipation of these cuts, so when we found vacancies we would take the opportunity to see if we could shuffle and retrain folks to take over more duties. If the numbers stay where they are, we're OK."

The anticipated funding cuts and corresponding restructuring equates to about 50 positions that have been phased out at the hospital.

"I think the hospital, though it's trimmed down, is still very, very stable. We're doing everything we can to not impact the direct services to our consumers."

In the face of all this change, Moughon, who has been at the hospital for seven years, is very optimistic about the hospital's future.

Carlos the Jackal all but forgotten after one year

PARIS (AP) — When the steel doors of a Paris prison slammed shut behind Carlos the Jackal, he was regally puffing on the finest Cuban cigars — Cohibas, the $200 boxes favored by African dictators.

A year later, he's nervously smoking cheap French Gitanes, the dime-store cigarillos that stain teeth and smell up the subways.

Twelve months of solitary confinement have separated the once-flamboyant Carlos from his riches and the public spotlight in which he thrived as the mastermind behind two decades of bombings, hijackings and assassinations.

France, its attention focused on stopping a new wave of bombings, hasn't even bothered so far to put him on trial, using laws that could allow another year of pre-trial detention.

"The worst thing for him is to become a nobody, so France is punishing him that way," said Xavier Raufer, a professor of criminology at the University of Paris.

"What he did, what he knows, happened decades ago. In the world of terrorism, he's Jurassic."

The global gun-for-hire who by his own count killed 83 people now sits in an isolation cell in the maximum-security La Sante prison in southern Paris. Gone are the blaring headlines and glaring television lights that announced to the world on Aug. 14, 1994: They finally caught Carlos.

He was seized in Sudan and whisked in chains the next day to France, which in 1992 had convicted and sentenced him in absentia to life in prison for the killing of two French counterintelligence agents in 1975. By law, France must retry him now that he's in custody.

The French government also plans to try Carlos for the New Year's Eve 1983 bombings that killed five people and wounded 50 others at Marseille's main railroad terminal and on a Paris-to-Marseille express train.

And Carlos faces charges stemming from a March 1982 train bombing that killed five people and wounded 15, and an April 1983 bombing in Paris that killed a pregnant woman and injured 63 others.

The 45-year-old Venezuelan-born terrorist, whose real name is Ilich Ramirez Sanchez, has been linked to the massacre of 11 Israeli athletes at the 1972 Munich Olympics, a 1975 attack on OPEC headquarters, and the 1976 hijacking of an Air France jet to Uganda.

AP LASERPHOTO

Venezualan born Carlos 'The Jackal', an international terrorist whose real name is Illich Ramirez Sanchez, is seen here on a Khartoum street in Sudan last year.

But French authorities, preoccupied with two summer bombings, have pushed the Carlos case aside.

"The big thing was to catch him," said a judicial source, speaking on customary anonymity. "Everybody knows that Carlos is going to spend the rest of his life in a French jail. Nobody's in a rush."

Earlier this month, a judge renewed Carlos' committal order, meaning the French government can hold him for a second year without actually starting any of the four trials pending against him.

Carlos' claims that he was "kidnapped" in Sudan by French agents have largely gone ignored.

"He was a big fish, but not anymore," said Robert Kupperman, a terrorism expert with the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington. "Nobody's concerned about his rights. Nobody has any great love for Carlos. Nobody cares."

The isolation is taking its toll on the self-proclaimed revolutionary known for his violent temper.

Carlos already is on his third lawyer, the first two having quietly left the case for reasons they won't discuss. Last month, he lost Jacques Verges, the Parisian F. Lee Bailey notorious for unsuccessfully defending the infamous Nazi Gestapo chief in Lyon, Klaus Barbie.

Ariel Merari, a terrorism expert at Tel Aviv University in Israel, thinks Carlos is going through lawyers like M16 clips because he — like his bombs — has a short fuse.

"He's not a very stable person, mentally speaking," Merari said. "He's really wild. He's a hot potato. It probably makes him not the best client for any lawyer."

On Thursday, Carlos complained that he was under tight surveillance and being deprived of basic rights and visits from staff of the Venezuelan Embassy. On Friday, he again asked an anti-terrorism judge for his freedom — a request that was swiftly denied.

While he does hard time, his wife and his mistress are far away.

Carlos disclosed in a communique Thursday that his 26-year-old Jordanian mistress vanished after his arrest and hasn't been heard from since. His wife, German radical Magdalena Kopp, reportedly has sought refuge in Venezuela with Carlos' wealthy family.

An ocean away, Carlos sits in a cell he may never leave except for occasional court appearances.

"In terms of being a terrorist, he's finished," Merari said. "Carlos only has historic value these days."

Canadian couple sentenced in landmark four month murder trial

TORONTO (AP) — After enduring four months of the most gruesome, explicit evidence ever presented in a Canadian courtroom, jurors convicted Paul Bernardo of first-degree murder Friday in the sex slayings of two teen-age girls.

Their decision brought to a close a sensational murder trial that has riveted Canadians this summer.

The eight men and four women on the jury deliberated for seven hours before also finding Bernardo guilty of kidnapping, forcible confinement, aggravated sexual assault and committing an indignity to a body.

He received concurrent life sentences on the first-degree murder charges. Sentencing on the other charges will be discussed at a hearing Sept. 15, which will also deal with dozens of rape charges against Bernardo relating to attacks around Scarborough, Ontario.

Defense lawyer John Rosen said he will recommend that his client appeal.

Bernardo admitted that he and his then-wife, Karla Homolka, abducted Leslie Mahaffy, 14, and Kristen French, 15, during separate episodes in 1991 and 1992 and abused them sexually for days while videotaping the acts at their home in St. Catharines, Ontario.

But he testified that he was not present when either girl died, and his lawyer blamed the deaths on Homolka. Bernardo was the only person to testify in his defense.

Relatives of the teens burst into tears Friday as the jury foreman said "guilty" to each of the nine counts.

Bernardo, a 33-year-old former bookkeeper, looked at the foreman without expression as the verdicts were announced and refused an opportunity to speak before his sentence was passed.

Videotapes depicting Bernardo raping, degrading and humiliating French and Mahaffy were played repeatedly during the trial.

Courtroom spectators could hear, but not see, the tapes. Some people in court daily took to covering their ears to block out the girls' anguished screams.

Mahaffy's concrete-encased body parts were dumped in a lake near St. Catharines, Ontario. French's nude body was left in a wooded area near the lake 10 months later.

Homolka, 25, struck a deal with the government to testify against Bernardo and plead guilty to manslaughter in the slayings. She is serving a 12-year prison term.

She testified that Bernardo strangled the girls with an electrical cord.

Homolka's plea bargain also grants her immunity in the case of her sister, Tammy, 15, who choked to death on her own vomit Christmas Eve 1990 after the couple drugged and sexually assaulted her.

Homolka, who says she was battered into submission, testified Bernardo used her participation in Tammy's death to blackmail her into helping fulfill his depraved sexual fantasies with other girls.

Her plea-bargain agreement — which was not revealed publicly until the first day of the Bernardo trial — became a central part of proceedings. Bernardo's lawyer Rosen has contended that Homolka misrepresented her role in the deaths of Mahaffy and French to protect herself.

A publication ban on Homolka's trial created the unusual situation in which American media could print details of the trial but Canadian media could not without facing legal penalties.

Families of the victims broke a long silence and talked to reporters outside the courthouse Friday.

"Only the trial is over — Leslie is still not coming home," said Dan Mahaffy, her father. "We ... have been through hell during the past four years and know there are many more months ahead of us."

"As always, our final words (are) for our daughter," said Doug French, who sobbed and hugged his wife. "With the trial over, Kristie, you can't be hurt any more. We love you."

Parliment of Georga has approved new presidency

TBILISI, Georgia (AP) — Georgian leader Eduard Shevardnadze was one step closer Friday to his long-held dream of a strong, executive presidency after parliament overwhelmingly approved an election law.

Lawmakers voted 158-2 in favor of elections for the newly created post of president. The elections are slated for Nov. 5.

Shevardnadze, now the chairman of parliament, had announced Wednesday that he would run for president. His declaration came a day after he narrowly survived a car bombing outside his offices in the parliament building.

No other candidates have stepped forward, and it is believed Shevardnadze would easily win.

Shevardnadze has led Georgia since 1992, trying to stabilize a country wracked by civil wars, crime and economic collapse since it won independence from the Soviet Union in 1991.

He has fought for an executive-style presidency, but some critics fear a slide toward authoritarianism. Few forget his iron hand as the republic's first secretary of the Communist Party from 1972-1985.

Shevardnadze later became Soviet foreign minister under Mikhail Gorbachev, earning wide regard during that period of liberalization.

On Friday, investigators continued trying to find the culprits behind the bombing.

Authorities removed crates of weapons and ammunition from the parliamentary offices of lawmaker and warlord Dzhaba Ioseliani, but refused to say whether the arms haul was linked to the blast.

An aide to Ioseliani was arrested Thursday in the bombing and a search of the aide's office turned up several thousand rounds of ammunition, machine guns and pistols, and $16,000.

Ioseliani, who helped bring Shevardnadze to power in 1992, is leader of the powerful paramilitary force Mkhedrioni (Horsemen). But he has seen its strength whittled away by Shevardnadze in recent months.

Speaking to lawmakers at Friday's parliament session, Ioseliani again denied involvement in the bombing, claiming the blast was being used to crack down on Shevardnadze's political opponents.

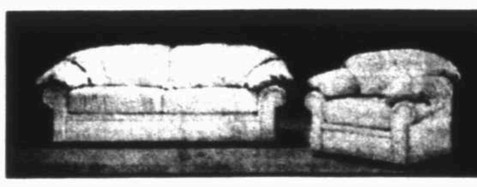

"No one can make me believe that this terrorist act was aimed at Shevardnadze," said Ioseliani, demanding an independent parliamentary investigation.

Rain doesn't stop women's world fair

HUAIROU, China (AP) — It was a world's fair for women with a muddy touch of Woodstock.

The women didn't seem to mind a downpour, but their Chinese hosts did. The rain washed out their Tibetan display tent. Compounding their embarrassment, Friday was a major anniversary of Chinese rule in the Himalayan territory, and security guards waved umbrellas to block photographers from taking pictures of the disarray.

The 19,000 delegates attending this biggest-ever women's gathering soldiered on through slippery mud and ankle-deep puddles.

They flocked to a hall to hear leaders of their organizations call for gender equality, and to hundreds of workshops in the huge array of tents and pavilions set up in the Beijing suburb of Huairou.

Although they come from all over the world, borders seemed to melt away in a happy glow of sisterhood.

Every workshop drew a rainbow of races and nationalities. Swedes and Fijians listened to a Sudanese describing how the failure of democracy in her country had set back women's rights.

In the "elderly women tent" a Chinese woman explained the problems widows have remarrying.

"Their children object. It embarrasses them and they lose face," she said.

Penny Young of Concerned Women for America listened to Russian women describing the issues facing working women after the collapse of communism.

In Soviet times, they said, 90 percent of women worked. Now, an opinion poll says 40 percent would rather stay at home and raise kids.

Laurie Geschke of Real Women of Canada chimed in with an opinion poll saying 77 percent of Canadian women put family above career.

Young and Geschke want the rights of non-working women to be strengthened in the declaration to be adopted by the U.N. Fourth World Conference on Women, which opens Monday in Beijing.

Ms. Young believes the women's movement has gone too far. She cited a Kenyan physician who had told her that "in her clinic she had children dying for lack of penicillin, but plenty of diaphragms."

In another tent, the subject was "breastfeeding as a feminist issue." Women said restrictive work arrangements, social stigma and false information are denying them a choice in how to feed their babies.

"People say political change empowers women. ... Well, we say breastfeeding empowers women too," said Penny van Estrick, a Canadian speaker.

Elsewhere, women in T-shirts reading "Grandmothers for Peace," were discussing nuclear disarmament.

"We need to issue a proclamation of condemnation of nuclear weapons, nuclear testing, everything. Otherwise we will leave this meeting with nothing but a pile of garbage to show for it," said an American woman.

"You'll have to speak louder," a listener said. "Some of us don't hear too good any more."

Ursula and Leah Retherford of Hawaii are among dozens of mother-daughter pairs at the gathering.

Leah Retherford, newly graduated from college, said the draft resolution before the conference seeks merely to preserve women's gains instead of advancing them.

"They're saying, let's keep countries from backsliding. If that's their attitude, not a lot is going to be done," she said.

Ursula Retherford said her feminism was "not quite as radical as Leah's," but the stories she had heard at the gathering about the oppression of women made her "realize that we need to be a bit more radical."

The non-governmental organizations sponsoring the Huairou gathering will be addressed by U.S. first lady Hillary Clinton on Sept. 6. High-profile Americans already in Huairou on Friday included feminist pioneer Betty Friedan and actress Sally Field, who is with the Save the Children delegation.

There are even a few male delegates, including Charles MacCormack, president of Save the Children.

Asked how he felt to be a member of possibly the tiniest minority at the conference, he said: "I think it does us good, because we're not accustomed to not being in control of things."

Passengers of Sri Lanka ferry safe, but rebels continue detention

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — All 136 passengers aboard a ferry seized by Tamil separatists have been taken off the ship and are safe, but the rebels are refusing to free some of them, officials said Friday.

The passengers, including 15 children, were visited by members of the Red Cross, said Mohammad Junaid, a top government in Colombo, the capital.

Junaid refused to give other details of the Red Cross visit or say under what circumstances the passengers left the ship.

The rebels refused to release some of the passengers, and were holding the ferry's eight crew members, said Douglas Devananda, a lawmaker aligned with a rival Tamil group that is helping the military fight the Tamil Tiger guerrillas.

The rebels claimed that some members of Devananda's group were aboard the ferry, but Devananda said that was not true.

"They are trying to justify hijacking the ship by saying that my people were on board," he said.

The guerrillas placed several conditions on the release of the passengers, a senior government official said on condition of anonymity. The official did not specify the rebels' demands.

The 125-ton ferry Iris Moana is anchored 175 miles northeast of Colombo.

Tamil Tiger rebels halted the ferry off the northeastern coast on Tuesday. That action drew two navy gunboats to the scene, which the rebels sank, leaving 21 sailors missing and presumed dead.

Since then, warships and aircraft have stayed away from the ferry, fearing raids could endanger the passengers and crew. It was unclear what the military planned to do now that the passengers are off the ferry.

In Colombo, police said Friday they had discovered a plot by rebels to blow up the city's World Trade Center, a 37-story building that will be the tallest in the Sri Lankan capital once it is completed.

For 12 years, the rebels have been fighting for a homeland in the north and east, claiming Tamils suffer discrimination at the hands of the majority Sinhalese, who control the government and the military. More than 36,000 people have been killed.

Modern Hawiian islands show many Japanese traits

HONOLULU (AP) — They're commemorating the end of a war here today. But Sept. 2, 1945, was a beginning, too — for an odd-couple partnership of two peoples who together are leading the world into the 21st century, bickering all the way.

When he casts a memorial wreath into Pearl Harbor on today, President Clinton will be at the watery crossroads of history, the place where a Japanese surprise air attack opened World War II for America.

But if he looks around, he'll see history turned inside out.

On the western flank of the U.S. Navy anchorage, a Japanese resort and golf course now spreads over the horizon. To the east, a Japanese-owned shopping development anchors the Aloha Tower landmark. And up and down Waikiki Beach, half the tourists, many of the hotels and dozens of other businesses are Japanese.

A half-century after its surrender, Japan's U.S. foothold stretches far beyond Hawaii — to Manhattan sushi bars and the Japanese Chamber of Commerce in Memphis, to Toyota and Honda plants in the U.S. heartland, to the pitcher's mound at Dodger Stadium, where Hideo Nomo's fastball catches batters by surprise these days.

And across the Pacific, the American hold on an old foe can be seen in the Coke machines and Tokyo Disneyland, in the Ivy League degrees and the 45,000 U.S. troops stationed there.

From mortal enemies to close friends to fierce competitors, the two nations have built what Mike Mansfield, former U.S. ambassador in Tokyo, calls "the most important relationship in the world, bar none."

Individualistic, diversified America, homogeneous, tradition-bound Japan: Like a wildly dissimilar stepbrother and sister, they quarrel, they confound each other, but they are forever joined by fate.

In this case, the odd couple has produced history's greatest cross-ocean trade — $144 billion in 1993. Some 4.5 million travelers journey from one to the other each year. They are each other's biggest foreign investors. Together they account for 40 percent of world GDP and for 300 of the Fortune 500 biggest international companies, many of them linked in joint ventures.

"The degree of interdependence is incredible now," said John K. Wheeler, vice president of New York's Japan Society. "It would be difficult to untwine these two economies."

Here in Hawaii, they're double-twined.

"We can't avoid it, because the tourist industry here is so heavily Japanese," said Seiji Naya, Hawaii's economic development director. In fact, he said, "we want more Japanese investment."

In 1945, such a prosperous partnership would have seemed impossible.

After the Sept. 2 surrender, a devastated Japan was desperate just to feed itself. The United States supplied aid, advice for restarting the economy, and a democratic constitution. The Japanese supplied the hard work.

In the 1950s, Japan's tinny toys and cheap blouses won it a reputation for shoddy goods. When Toyota shipped its first car to America in 1957, it was laughed off the California freeway — it topped out at 35 mph.

But hard work, skill in planning and marketing energy gradually paid off for Japan. The Cold War helped, too: The United States kept its market wide open to Japanese products to tie the defeated enemy more tightly to the Western camp, and Japanese industry became a major supplier for the U.S. wars in Korea and Vietnam.

By the 1980s, Japanese exports had turned into a worldwide flood, much of it inundating America. Japan's surplus of exports to America over imports from America hit $66 billion in 1994.

The chronic U.S. trade deficit colors the two countries' views of each other. Americans accuse the Japanese of commercial collusion and protectionism to keep their trade advantage. Japanese dismiss the Americans as whiners who have lost their business spark.

But recent trends belie the stereotypes. American exports to Japan actually doubled in the past decade and now add up to more than U.S. exports to Britain and Germany combined. The Big Three U.S. automakers, meanwhile, have learned production lessons from Japan and won back market share.

On the other side, the bursting of Tokyo's "bubble" — of overpriced stocks and real estate and undercapitalized banks — has exposed the Japanese as normal, mistake-prone business people, not financial supermen.

Friction may always trouble the U.S.-Japanese partnership, said Japanese diplomat Shotaro Oshima, a veteran "America hand." But it cannot slow it down.

"The two economies are so interdependent, there will always be issues," said Oshima, economic minister at Japan's Washington embassy. "But the expansion of cooperation is just tremendous — so many joint ventures."

In one of the latest, IBM and Toshiba announced plans last month to build a $1.2 billion plant in Virginia to produce the next generation of computer memory chips.

NLRB sides with laborers in strike

DETROIT (AP) — The National Labor Relations Board alleged Thursday that the strike against Detroit's two newspapers was the result of management's unfair labor practices. If the ruling is upheld, striking workers would be entitled to their jobs back when the dispute is settled.

NLRB regional director William C. Schaub Jr. also threatened to issue a complaint against Detroit Newspapers, the agency that runs business operations for The Detroit News and the Detroit Free Press, for bargaining in bad faith with Detroit Typographical Union Local 18, one of the six unions that have been on strike since July 13.

The NLRB has lodged two previous complaints during the strike: One charges management unlawfully broke an agreement it would bargain jointly with the unions on economic issues; the other alleges The Newspaper Guild local refused to bargain on a company proposal offering alternatives to overtime.

Hearings before an administrative law judge are pending on the complaints.

About 18 unfair labor practice charges have been filed by management and unions — most by the unions — since 2,500 workers walked off their jobs over salaries at the Gannett Co. Inc.-owned News and Knight-Ridder Inc.'s Free Press.

"We were surprised that the labor board would take this position before all of the union charges have even been investigated," Frank Vega, president and chief executive of Detroit Newspapers, said in a statement.

"We continue to believe we have bargained fairly and appropriately with all of our unions and expect to be vindicated when the litigation is completed."

Free Press Executive Editor Heath Meriwether said the company will appeal the NLRB charge. "It's a hell of a leap," he said. "It's not an unfair labor practice until it's proven to be and it's fully litigated in the courts."

Teamsters negotiator Frank Kortsch called Schaub's allegation "hugely significant."

"When the NLRB makes an assertion like this, 97 percent of the time that assertion is upheld at every level to which it is appealed," Kortsch said.

■ More national news /12A

Guild spokesman Joe Swickard said the board's comments may encourage some who crossed the picket line to go back on strike by easing fears they might lose their jobs.

"It takes the hammer out of their hands. This hammer has been threatening workers with the loss of jobs," he said. "The decision today is a giant stride toward the goal line."

If Schaub's allegation that the strike was caused by management's unfair labor practices is upheld, the papers would not be able to permanently replace striking workers. Management has hired 1,000 replacement workers.

During the strike, the newspapers have published a joint edition, produced and distributed by managers, replacement workers and strikers who have crossed picket lines.

The six unions have been meeting on and off with Detroit Newspapers since a federal mediator arranged talks Aug. 16.

Phoenix pawnbroker says he was rooked

PHOENIX (NYT) — A former pawnshop worker has sued Phoenix police, claiming his life veered into the rough over a set of golf clubs.

The lawsuit, which seeks more than $1.1 million in damages, accuses police of violating the civil rights of Alex Gonzalez by making false accusations involving the Ping clubs.

Although the charges were dropped, Gonzalez, 30, said Thursday that fighting them cost him more than $50,000 in legal fees.

Gonzalez, now the owner of Pawn Outlet, a secondhand store, said the charges also cost him a $52,000-a-year job at a Phoenix pawnshop.

In addition to financial losses, Gonzalez said he suffered humiliation and emotional stress.

"I would come home and see my wife cry," Gonzalez said.

"She was afraid I would be going to prison, even though she knew I did nothing wrong."

The lawsuit was filed Monday against Phoenix; Leonard Lukasik, a pawnshop detective with the Phoenix Police Department; and James J. Finnerty, a former pawnshop investigator who now works at a west Phoenix pawnshop.

The suit accuses police of discrimination and malicious conduct, claiming Gonazlez was singled out for prosecution because he is Hispanic.

Sgt. Mike Torres, a spokesman for the Phoenix Police Department, declined to comment on the lawsuit. Lukasik and Finnerty also refused to comment.

The lawsuit says the problems began Jan. 11, 1994, when Gonzalez was employed as a vice president and general manager at Central Pawn Brokers in Phoenix.

A customer came to the store and offered to sell a set of clubs, the suit says. A "hold" tag was placed on the clubs, and they were stored until a determination could be made whether they were stolen.

Jerome Froimson, Gonzalez's lawyer, said the pawnshop was advised by the police pawnshop detail that there was no record of the clubs having been stolen.

However, the suit says, Finnerty and Lukasik went to the pawnshop eight days later and accused workers there, including Gonzalez, of trying to sell stolen golf clubs.

Gonzalez was indicted June 2, 1994, by a Maricopa County grand jury on felony charges of theft and trafficking in stolen property.

The charges were dismissed April 3 by Judge Thomas O'Toole of Maricopa County Superior Court at the request of Kevin Rapp, a deputy county attorney, who advised him there was "no reasonable likelihood of conviction," court records show.

Sweep uncovers food stamp swindle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Because of lax oversight, liquor stores with no food on the shelves, video outlets, a pizza restaurant and even an out-of-business coin-operated laundry are trafficking in millions of dollars worth of food stamps, federal investigators found in a recent nationwide sweep.

The black market for food stamps is thriving in part because federal regulators have authorized scores of questionable businesses to accept food stamps and redeem them for cash from the U.S. Treasury without checking whether the store is a legitimate grocery, investigators found.

The investigators, with the Agriculture Department's office of inspector general, based their findings on inspections of 5,162 authorized stores in seven urban areas in July and August.

They targeted stores that tend to be involved in trafficking — small, independently owned businesses — and found 858 that were obviously not eligible to redeem food stamps and another 450 whose eligibility was questionable.

Those stores had redeemed more than $42 million in food stamps between April 1994 and March 1995, according to the investigators' report, obtained this week under the Freedom of Information Act.

A top investigator said the problem is far larger.

"Hundreds of millions of dollars are trafficked through these types of marginal stores," said Craig Beauchamp, the assistant inspector general for investigations at USDA, which runs food stamps.

Food stamps, the government's largest welfare program, provided nearly $23 billion in benefits to more than 27 million Americans last year.

The precise extent of trafficking by recipients and stores is unknown, although a USDA study put the figure at $815 million in 1993.

A sampling of the investigators' findings:

—A pizza restaurant redeeming more than $3,500 a month in food stamps.

—A health food store approved to accept food stamps that was empty except for three shelves of vitamins.

—A "store" whose food supplies included a cooler containing an open carton of buttermilk and an open package of bologna, a couple of boxes of cereal and a few other items, some of which were also open. The location was redeeming more than $1,400 a month in food stamps.

—A liquor store, its only food item a dozen small bags of potato chips locked behind a panel of bulletproof glass. The store was redeeming more than $700 a month in food stamps.

—An out-of-business coin-operated laundry that redeemed $16,500 in food stamps between April 1994 and March 1995, and continued to redeem food stamps in May and June 1995.

Efforts to crack down on trafficking generally target stores because only authorized retailers can get full food stamp coupon redemptions from the government through the banking system.

In a typical scheme, the authorized business buys food stamps from recipients at less than face value, generally 50 cents to 70 cents on the dollar, and then gets cash for the full amount at a local bank. Stores also may purchase the stamps from a third party, such as wholesalers, route drivers or drug dealers, who exchange cash and contraband for the coupons.

To become an authorized retailer, a store must sell an ample variety of foods for home preparation, including perishables. Stores also may redeem food stamps if more than half their total sales are in staple foods.

However, investigators said USDA's Food and Consumer Service has approved stores as authorized retailers without first visiting to check whether they meet these regulations.

Yvette Jackson, deputy administrator for the food stamp program, said the Food and Consumer Service has begun disqualifying some of the stores identified by investigators and will take action against others as information becomes available.

She said the agency also is sending regulators to check stores that tend to be involved in trafficking before authorizing them, as well as to already approved stores.

Some 210,000 grocery stores are authorized to redeem food stamps.

The investigators visited businesses in Washington, D.C.; St. Louis and St. Louis County, Mo.; Alameda County, Calif.; selected areas in Cook County, Ill., the Manhattan borough of New York City; Dade County, Fla.; and Dallas and Tarrant counties.

Justice served: Edible head of Ito is latest O.J. trial spinoff

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The latest spinoff from the O.J. Simpson trial lets Judge Ito set for seven hours, and metes out just desserts to everyone.

The product? The Eat-A-Ito, a life-sized gelatin mold in the shape of Superior Court Judge Lance Ito's face.

The instructions call for three 6-ounce packages of peach-flavored gelatin and nonfat or skim evaporated milk.

After setting, a mixture of red and blue food coloring serves as "black" paint for hair, eyebrows, beard and mustache.

Dark-rimmed glasses — not edible — are included.

The molds are made by SKS Sibley Co. of El Segundo, which also makes gelatin molds shaped like human brains.

They sell for about $10.

■ Former Dallas mayor, TI founder dies

DALLAS — John Erik Jonsson, a founder of Texas Instruments Inc. said Friday to also have set the standard for Dallas mayors, has died of natural causes. He was 93.

Jonsson died at his home late Thursday night, said Robert Breckenridge, a field agent for the Dallas County medical examiner's office.

Jonsson was mayor of Dallas from Feb. 3, 1964 — some two months after the Kennedy assassination — until May 3, 1971. He was appointed mayor to fill the unexpired term of Earle Cabell, who resigned to run for Congress, then was elected to three full terms.

Gov. George W. Bush was among the leaders who mourned Jonsson's passing Friday.

"Dallas is the great city it is today thanks in large part to Mayor Jonsson," Bush said.

Former mayor Annette Strauss remembered Jonsson as a man who "truly left his mark on Dallas," while current Mayor Ron Kirk said his death "is a great loss for Dallas.

■ Texas women sue maker of Norplant

SAN ANTONIO — More than 2,300 women have filed lawsuits in four South Texas counties against the maker of the birth control implant Norplant and against several doctors and clinics.

The women claim that after receiving Norplant they suffered from symptoms and health problems including stroke, massive weight gain, severe headache and erratic menstrual bleeding.

Plaintiffs' attorney Frank Herrera alleges the women weren't properly warned of potential health risks and side effects, that the implants weren't properly tested before approval and that many doctors weren't properly trained to implant them.

"My view is the manufacturer miscalled it," Herrera said. "Because it was targeted to low-income minority women, they didn't think they were going to be able to organize and fight back."

The lawsuits were filed Wednesday in Bexar, Starr, Hidalgo and Zavala counties. Many of the plaintiffs live outside those counties.

Named as defendants are American Home Products Corp. and its subsidiary, Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories, the manufacturer of Norplant.

■ Residents file lawsuit to stop landfill

EDINBURG — A landfill north of Edinburg that handles waste from several cities and some Mexican assembly plants is jeopardizing an aquifer directly below it, a new lawsuit alleges.

"Everybody out there is concerned because we rely on that fresh water," Ramon Garcia, attorney for about 100 plaintiffs from northern Hidalgo County, said Friday.

The lawsuit, filed Thursday in Hidalgo County District Court, claims that operators of the 94-acre C&T Landfill-Edinburg have been negligent by failing to protect the groundwater from contamination.

"That's not true," said Wes Mahaney, district manager for Republic Waste Industries Inc., the owner-operator of the landfill and a key defendant in the case.

Mahaney said the landfill, off Farm-to-Market 1017 west of Linn, is in compliance with state and federal laws. Groundwater monitors have not detected contamination, he said.

Also named as defendants are a handful of "maquiladoras," the Spanish name for mostly U.S.-owned assembly plants in Mexico. The maquiladora defendants ship solid waste back across the border to the landfill, the lawsuit says.

■ State jobless rate jumps 0.7 percent

DALLAS — The state's unemployment rate jumped seven-tenths of one percent to reach 6.7 percent in August as 61,000 more people were forced to look for work, the Labor Department said Friday.

The measure had been relatively stable for several months. The July unemployment rate was 6 percent, while the June rate was 6.3 percent.

Bill Luker Jr., regional economist for the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics, said the jump was the first notable monthly increase in the Texas unemployment rate since March.

Compiled from Reporter-Telegram wire services.

Legal troubles plague state legislators

AUSTIN (AP) — For a combined 24 years, Betty and Lane Denton helped make law as state representatives from Waco.

Now the couple, married for 32 years, find themselves on the wrong side of the law, with criminal sentencing dates two weeks apart later this month.

Lane Denton, a House member from 1971 to 1977, was found guilty Friday of theft and misapplication of funds while heading a nonprofit organization in 1988 and 1989.

He faces up to 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine on each charge. Sentencing by state District Judge Jon Wisser is scheduled for Sept. 21. Denton's attorney, Jim Sawyer, said he would appeal.

The case went to the jury Wednesday afternoon, after 11 days of testimony by prosecution witnesses. Denton's lawyers declined to present any witnesses.

As the verdict was read, Denton stood without expression next to his daughter, DeAnn, and his wife, who pleaded no contest in August to tampering with a government record in a separate case.

Denton was accused of misappropriating more than $67,000 in 1988 and 1989 while he was executive director of the Texas Department of Public Safety Officers Association. He was fired in January 1990 following an audit of the organization.

Prosecutors alleged that he covertly funneled the trooper group's funds to a fledgling public relations company owned by New Orleans architect John Chrestia, who testified that he set up the company at Denton's request.

Chrestia, who faces no criminal charges, also testified that he had been Denton's lover. Sawyer said the prosecution's decision to bring out the relationship will form the basis of Denton's appeal.

"The evidence that came before this jury was so inflammatory that I think it makes it tough for the fairest people to return an even-handed verdict," Sawyer said. "There was no precedent for allowing any evidence about the relationship between the defendant and John Chrestia. If I'm right, we will get a new trial."

Prosecutor Gail Van Winkle said the verdict isn't tainted.

Denton's attorneys said prosecutors produced no evidence that Denton personally profited from the arrangement with Chrestia's company. They further argued that the troopers got their money's worth from the public relations company.

Denton sued the officers association in 1991 for $8 million, alleging he was wrongfully fired. The case is pending.

Mrs. Denton is to be sentenced in her case on Sept. 8. She faces up to a year in prison and a $2,000 fine on the Class A misdemeanor charge of tampering with a government record.

Eager Texans begin concealed gun course

By Stefani G. Kopenec
Associated Press

EULESS — The new law allowing citizens to carry concealed handguns had just taken effect Friday when nine people seeking permits settled into their seats for the beginning of state-required instruction.

The class in a second-floor motel meeting room cranked up just after midnight. Some ten hours later, after an all-night lesson fueled by coffee, all the participants learned they had passed their 50-question exam with flying colors.

"You all have a lot to be proud of," said instructor Terry Grisham, president of the Arlington-based "Good Guys" handgun training and licensing business.

"I would wager that you're the first concealed handgun class in Texas to pass the classroom portion of the test," Grisham said. "I know you're going to do just as well at the (gun) range."

While Texans could begin applying for handgun permits and taking firearms training courses — both in the classroom and at the range — on Friday, the actual carrying of concealed guns won't be allowed until Jan. 1.

Among the students eager to get started with the process was state Rep. Bill Carter, a sponsor of the bill that ended Texas' 125-year-old, right-to-carry ban.

"I think everybody in the class has a better appreciation for personal responsibility, additional personal responsibility, that comes with a license," the Fort Worth Republican said after more than nine hours of instruction in the new law, the use of deadly force, nonviolent dispute resolution and safe firearms handling practices.

"I think that everybody will be even more confident of their ability to understand and react properly under any given circumstance," Carter said.

The Texas Department of Public Safety, which oversees implementation of the law, estimates that 200,000 Texans will apply for handgun permits. So far, more than 30,000 people have mailed in postcards requesting application packets.

Suzanna Gratia, who became an outspoken advocate for the right to carry after she watched her parents killed by a gunman in the 1991 massacre at a Luby's Cafeteria in Killeen, said she, too, plans to get a handgun permit. She and her husband start classes Tuesday.

Steve Hollingsworth, a 45-year-old computer programmer who attended the Euless course with his 67-year-old father, said he planned to carry a gun in his car and while walking in areas he deems dangerous.

"When I was in college, I was about 19 years old, I was beaten up on the streets of Arlington," he said. "I'm sure a handgun would have protected me."

Mom disagrees with police theory in daughter's death

GALVESTON — Diane James was a 45-year-old loner, her mother says, who worked for the Internal Revenue Service and lived with her cockatiel, Sunshine, in a mobile home filled with books.

Vera Knauss disagrees with a police theory that her daughter climbed into the trunk of her car in the August heat, took pills that induce sleep and read romance novels until she died.

"She had too much going for her," Ms. Knauss said Friday. "She had a real good job, she had an almost new mobile home, she had an almost new car and there was just no reason that she would do anything like that.

"And besides, she was claustrophobic. If you're going to do something to yourself and you're claustrophobic, you're not going to crawl into the trunk of your car."

But Galveston police are looking at the admittedly unlikely scenario because of evidence found in the trunk of Ms. James' 1994 Plymouth Acclaim. They also point to a paper trail that indicates she was not kidnapped but left her hometown of Austin, 200 miles west of the island city where she died more than a week ago.

"There is a possibility that she may have participated in her death," Capt. Leo Singleton said. "But we're not absolute."

Police say Ms. James checked into a Galveston motel about 5:20 p.m. Aug. 21, the day she was reported missing. She was seen eating alone and checked out at 10 a.m. Aug. 23.

Taking work home pays off for comet finder

By John Fleck
Associated Press

SIXTEEN SPRINGS CANYON, N.M. — The "observatory" from which astronomer Alan Hale discovered what could be the comet of the century doubles as a basketball court.

As dusk settles over this remote mountain valley in southern New Mexico, Hale's 8-year-old son, Zachary, dribbles on the concrete apron stretching from the garage.

In the twilight to the south, Jupiter, the brightest object in the sky aside from the moon, begins to twinkle through the blue dusk, and Dad halts the basketball game by wheeling out his telescope.

Somewhere out there, still obscured by the fading light of day, 450 million miles from Earth, is comet Hale-Bopp.

The distant fuzzy blob has caused astronomers the world over to take notice in the weeks since July 22, when Hale and Arizona stargazer Thomas Bopp first spotted the comet that bears their names.

Hundreds of observations have flooded in to the International Astronomical Union, a clearinghouse in Cambridge, Mass., that collects and distributes data on comets.

It is the farthest from Earth that any comet has ever been discovered, University of Chicago astronomer Pat Palmer said while he pored over the latest information on Hale-Bopp's orbit.

To be visible from so far away, it must be bright.

"That's one reason people are enthusiastic," Palmer said in a telephone interview.

On his concrete driveway, Hale pulls the cover off the end of his telescope and points it toward Jupiter.

As long as the telescope is out, he says, he might as well point it at something.

Through the big Meade Instruments' eyepiece, four of Jupiter's moons are visible, shimmering dots of light strung out in a line.

It is that "might as well point it at something" attitude that got Hale his comet.

Hale, a Ph.D. astronomer for whom star-watching is a hobby as well as a profession, was out in the driveway observing already known comets, collecting data on their brightness.

With time to kill until the next comet rose, he pointed his telescope toward a cluster of stars in Sagittarius known as M70 and saw a fuzzy blob where no fuzzy blob was supposed to be.

He checked his star charts to make sure it wasn't supposed to be there, sent a message by electronic mail to the International Astronomical Union informing it of the discovery, then woke up his wife, Eva.

After she came out to look, she went in and woke up Zachary.

"She said 'Daddy found a new comet,'" Zachary recalled, "and I said, 'Oh no, Daddy and his spacey stuff.'"

So how big a deal is this comet?

Apparently, a big deal to comet watchers.

The International Astronomical Union, which usually has to go begging for observations to help plot a new comet's orbit, has been deluged with data on Hale-Bopp's location and brightness.

Small icy bodies that orbit the sun, comets come into view as they get close enough for the sun's rays to illuminate them so they are visible from telescopes on Earth.

The icy core itself is so small — generally only a few miles across, through Hale-Bopp could be as much as a hundred — that it is rarely directly visible. But a cloud of gas burned off by the sunlight surrounds the comet as it nears the sun, creating the familiar fuzzy blob and tail that are a comet's signature.

Astronomers discover new ones yearly. In recent years, with organized professional comet-finding efforts, as many as 12 new comets a year have been found, but Hale-Bopp was only the second discovery this year.

There is no way to tell whether Hale-Bopp will turn into the comet of the century, so bright it will be easily and spectacularly visible with the naked eye.

But it clearly has the potential.

The excitement about Hale-Bopp is that it is so bright so early in its approach to the sun — brighter than any other comet has been at this point, several astronomers said.

It is far brighter, for example, than was Halley's Comet at the same point in its 1985-86 approach toward the sun.

But astronomers shy away from the question of how bright Hale-Bopp will become, saying comets are notoriously difficult to predict.

"Whether this will be the comet of the century, where at suppertime you can step out on the back porch with a martini and go 'Oh, wow,' I don't know," said Warren Offutt, a Cloudcroft-area astronomer who took some of the first pictures of Hale-Bopp.

"With comets you just have to kind of stand back and watch and wait," said Howard Brewington, a hard-core comet hunter who lives near Hale in the Sacramento mountains east of Cloudcroft.

But it is becoming increasingly clear that Hale-Bopp will be bright enough to offer astronomers a good, clear view and therefore a scientific bonanza.

"We have this feeling that we're just long overdo for a truly great comet," said Palmer, who uses New Mexico's Very Large Array radio telescope to study comets.

Hale has long hunted for comets, a tedious search of the sky for unexpected blurs that comet hunters call "sweeping." But it was serendipity that finally earned him his name on Hale-Bopp.

The 37-year-old astronomer and his family built their new home in the mountains partly because its high, clear air and dark skies were ideal for sky-watching.

"This was a response to the real cruddy job situation," he says.

But for Hale, there is no line between vocation and avocation, between profession and passion.

He points to the star Antares, appearing above the background light as dusk fades away.

"A lot of this is hobby," he says, turning the telescope around to point toward the bottom edge of Sagittarius, where Hale-Bopp appears to hang in stillness. "I'm an amateur astronomer who also decided to make a professional career out of it — or at least try to."

Finding a comet — any comet, let alone one with such promise — cannot but help his nascent career.

Biography on famed painter profiles elephant

By Luna Shyr
Associated Press

PHOENIX — The latest biography of a famed modern painter isn't about Picasso, Kandinsky or Matisse.

It's about an 8,500-pound elephant at the Phoenix Zoo.

Ruby, an Asian elephant, has sold about 250 paintings but there are still 115 people waiting, possibly up to five years, to own a pachyderm canvas.

In the meantime, New York-based Delacorte Press has published a hardcover biography on Ruby aimed at teen-agers. It's filled with pictures of her paintings, of Ruby as a baby, having a bath and, of course, putting paintbrush to canvas.

Zoo photographer Dick George wrote the biography, entitled "Ruby: The Painting Pachyderm of the Phoenix Zoo," after a writer for Smithsonian magazine pulled out of the project.

"Ruby has a purpose in mind when she paints; it's not a random physical action," George said.

Ruby's acrylic renditions, best described as abstract, have fueled discussion about elephantine intelligence and color perception. She's selective with colors and some paintings appear to be influenced by what she sees before taking brush in trunk, George said.

During the creation of "Fire Truck," paramedics in blue uniforms pulled up near Ruby's exhibit in a red fire truck with yellow and orange flashing lights. The medics were helping a man who had collapsed and shortly after they left, Ruby applied bold strokes of red, yellow, orange and blue to a canvas, George's book reveals.

John Moffittt, owner of about a dozen Rubys, said his favorite painting has colors he thinks Ruby picked up from the clothes he wore as he watched her paint.

"One thing you can't say when you enter (Ruby's exhibit) is 'paint' because Ruby goes crazy, like when you say to a dog, 'Do you want a Milk Bone?'" said Moffittt, a resident of Pasadena, Calif.

A longtime elephant buff, Moffittt called the Phoenix Zoo in 1990 and found out Ruby's works weren't up for sale, so he offered to donate $500 to the zoo in exchange for a painting.

Today, proceeds from the sale of Ruby paintings, and lithographs and T-shirts based on them, have funneled $450,000 into the Phoenix Zoo Conservation Fund for endangered species, George said.

Each elephant creation costs $1,000 to $3,000, but that could increase if plans to breed Ruby are successful, leaving her less time to labor on her masterpieces, George said.

Oil your joints

Can taking fish oil help alleviate the symptoms of rheumatoid arthritis? Yes, it can relieve tender joints and morning stiffness, according to numerous excellent studies from Europe, the United States and Australia, says Joel M. Kremer, M.D., a leading researcher on fish oil and arthritis at Albany (N.Y.) Medical College. There's even evidence some patients can discontinue conventional drugs used to treat arthritis called NSAIDS when they take fish oil.

In a new study, Dr. Kremer found that patients with a 10-year history of rheumatoid arthritis had fewer tender joints after taking fish oil for 30 weeks than while taking either the NSAID, diclofenac or a placebo oil. He says at least four other studies show that some individuals with rheumatoid arthritis may be able to reduce or discontinue NSAID medications while taking fish oil.

How much fish oil is needed? "Between 3 and 5 grams a day," says Dr. Kremer. That's at least 10 typical fish-oil capsules, each containing 300 mg. There's no greater improvement with higher doses, he says. Consult your physician for further advice.

Cancer antidotes

There are several things you might eat or take that would help ward off colon cancer. For example, calcium, vitamin D, beta carotene, curcumin (a constituent of curry spices), tea and less dietary fat, says Martin Lipkin of New York's Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center. Dr. Lipkin is especially keen on calcium as a preventive. He says there is much evidence that calcium can depress colon cancer risk and even recurrence in patients who have had colon cancer surgery.

If you eat a typical Western-style calcium-deficient diet, you may be more vulnerable to colon cancer, he says. For example, in one study mice were fed a Western-style diet low in calcium and vitamin D for a year — equal to 40 years in human terms. They developed tiny growths in their colons — called polyps — that are the foundation of cancer. What's remarkable is the nutritional deficiency alone set the stage for cancer; the animals were not exposed to any cancer-causing chemicals.

What's the right calcium dose? At least 1200-1500 milligrams as a possible preventive for healthy people, says Lipkin. The average American gets about 800 milligrams now.

Vitamin B cure

If you have too much of a protein called homocysteine in your blood you are much more apt to have artery clogging, strokes and heart attacks. Some researchers say homocysteine is as or more important even than cholesterol at fostering cardiovascular disease. Yet, the amazing fact is, you don't need powerful drugs to reduce homocysteine. A few B vitamins will do the trick.

In a new study in South Africa, 100 men with high homocysteine were given 650 micrograms of folic acid, 400 micrograms of B-12 and 10 milligrams of B-6 every day for six weeks.

The results were dramatic. When the men took all three vitamins, their homocysteine levels sank 50 percent. Of the single B vitamins, folic acid was most effective. It put homocysteine down 42 percent. Alone, B-12 suppressed homocysteine 15 percent and B-6 alone had no effect.

Unfortunately, inexpensive homocysteine tests are not widely available — they should be soon — so you can't tell if you're at risk. In the meantime, taking B vitamins at such doses, or in a multi-vitamin pill, can do no harm and may save your arteries.

Old toothbrushes

CHICAGO (AP) — Some 4,000 years ago, ancient Egyptians were aware of good oral hygiene. Early toothbrushes, called chew sticks, have been found in Egyptian tombs dating to 3000 B.C., according to the Academy of General Dentistry, which describes them as pencil-sized twigs with one end frayed to make them soft and fibrous. Egyptian dentists or physicians created toothpaste from powdered pumice and strong wine vinegar and brushed it on with chew sticks — which are still in use in some parts of the world.

Snuggle therapy helps premature infants thrive

By Carolyn Poirot
Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Jane McCasland became an advocate of kangaroo care the first moment her tiny daughter's soft bare chest snuggled up against her own.

Rebecca Kathryn "Kate" McCasland was 5 weeks old and still weighed less than 3 pounds. She was on a ventilator, with a feeding tube down her throat, a temperature probe stuck to her leg, surrounded by monitors, in the neonatal intensive care unit at Harris Methodist Fort Worth. She had been having a terrible day — until she made skin-to-skin contact with her mother for the first time.

"They said she had been very agitated all evening, and they just couldn't get her to settle down," McCasland called. "They put her in the middle of my chest, and her heart rate went from over 200 down to 165, and she settled right down and went into a deep sleep. ... They had to pry her little body away from me."

Kangaroo care is the nickname given to the practice of mothers — and fathers — holding diaper-clad premature infants beneath their clothing, skin to skin. It was introduced in Bogota, Colombia, in 1983 to relieve overcrowded neonatal intensive care units (NICUs) and promote parental attachment.

It is used extensively in Western Europe and is becoming popular in this country, although neonatologists have been reluctant to subject very small, preterm babies to any stimulation. Very premature babies traditionally are kept in a warm, quiet and often dark isolette, where all their energy can be directed toward growth and development of their premature lungs and other organ systems.

Paul Pulizzo III, who weighed exactly 1 pound when he was born June 8 at Harris Methodist Fort Worth, 12 weeks early, was considered too small for kangaroo care when his mother first approached doctors and nurses about it. So Georganne Pulizzo went to the special NICU at 2 o'clock every other morning, when the nurses weighed her baby and changed his sheets, just so she could hold him — all bundled up — for the minute or so that he had to be out of the isolette.

AT 2 A.M. July 13, with his doctor's permission, Paul's nurse took the blankets off and placed the tiny baby with his cheek and chest between his mother's breasts — skin to skin. His respiration improved; his temperature went up. At 1 pound, 8 ounces, Paul was big enough for kangaroo care.

"I was very, very nervous this morning, but he went to sleep and was just perfect," Pulizzo said the afternoon after she held the baby skin to skin for the first time. "I was trying to be as still as possible, but he was looking around all happy, and then he just snuggled right up and went to sleep."

It was also the first time she felt her baby move. "He started to hiccup, and it was really neat just to feel him hiccup against me," the new mother said. "He was born so tiny, I never really felt him move inside me before he was born."

Pulizzo said she was especially eager to try kangaroo care because she had heard it can combat oxygen desaturization, and Paul's immature lungs often leave him desaturized — that is, with too little oxygen circulating in his blood. Sure enough, while she held him, the glowing probe, bandaged to his foot to monitor oxygen saturation, indicated that the supplemental oxygen he receives through his respirator could be turned down to 24 percent, the lowest it had been in more than a week.

STUDIES SHOW that with kangaroo care, babies warm up to normal temperature, often require less oxygen, assume more normal heart beat and breathing, and gain weight faster, said Alicia Lang, an NICU nurse at Harris.

She learned about kangaroo care while working in Tampa, Fla., with neonatal nurses who trained at the University of Florida College of Nursing, where Dr. Gene Cranston Anderson, the "mother of kangaroo care" in this country, taught. "The potential that kangaroo care has for health promotion, parental involvement and cost containment is clear," said Anderson, who in 1991 published an overview of all the known research on skin-to-skin care in the Journal of Perinatolgy.

Premature babies given skin-to-skin care were found to cry less, stay warm enough, have regular heart rate and respiration, and sleep more soundly, said Anderson, who is now with Case Western Reserve Medical School in Cleveland, Ohio, and is in the process of publishing an update to her earlier report.

Most research has been done on larger, stronger premature babies weighing 3 to 5 pounds and breathing on their own, but the most recent survey showed that 70 hospitals in this country are now also offering such care to smaller babies on respirators, Anderson said in a telephone interview. "This has really caught on in the last year and a half," she said. "It's normal and natural."

NOT ALL very premature babies immediately thrive on kangaroo care, however. "Some just can't tolerate anything — the light, the noise, the touch," said Lang of Harris Methodist. "They may be able to handle them one at a time, but not all at once when they are this little. Then we wait."

Georganne Pulizzo had to wait a month to hold her son skin to skin; even then he was the smallest infant his doctor had ever had on kangaroo care. Since then, Paul's respiration and weight gain have been good, and maybe even a little enhanced by the care, said Dr. Michael Stevener, the baby's neonatologist.

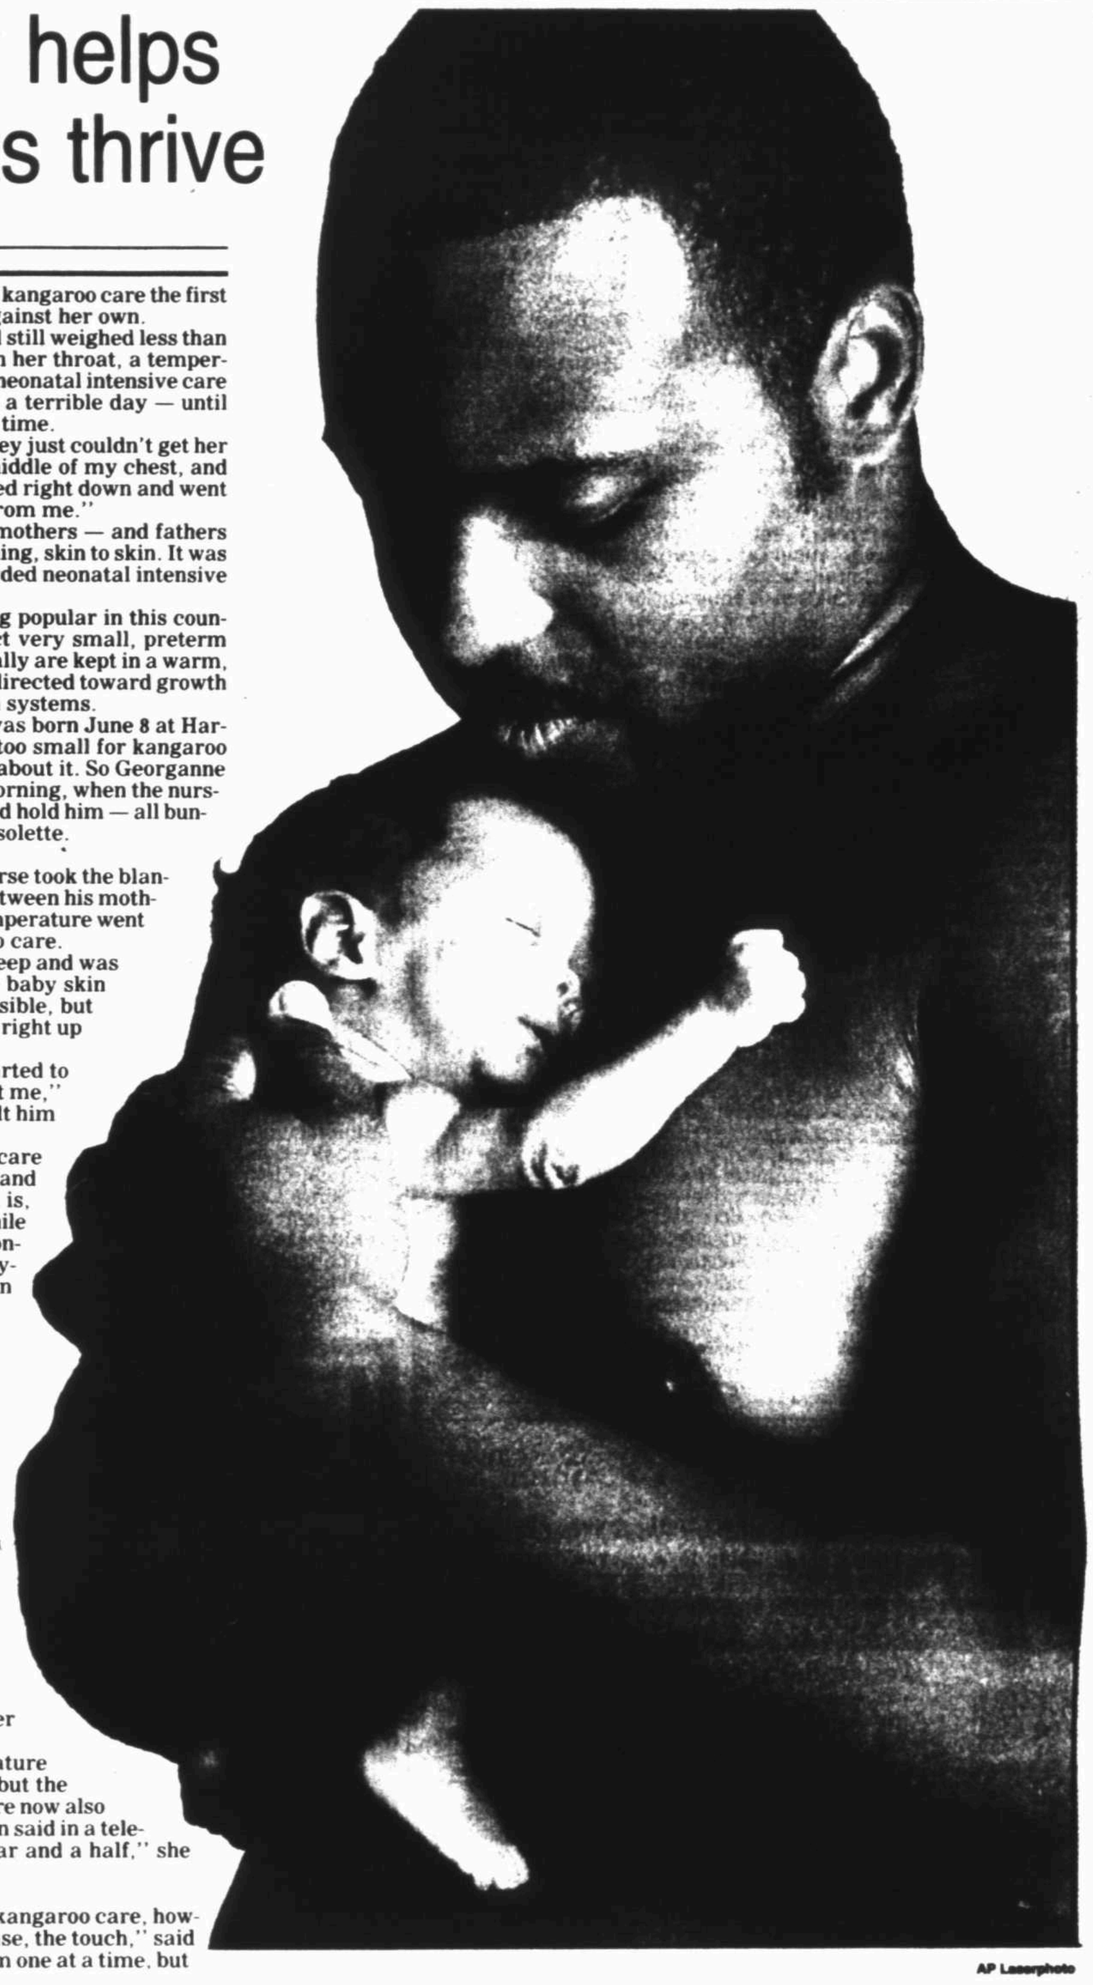

"Skin-to-skin care is not written about very much in our more scientific journals, but it's pretty easy for us to buy off on the whole concept," Stevener said. "Increasing maternal and father contact with the baby is a positive thing, especially during stressful times in ICU. I don't know what it does for bonding six months down the road, but the benefits, in the hospital, are real and easy to see."

For the fragile babies, the most unsettling moment of skin-to-skin care is getting from the isolette to the mother or father, Lang noted, but with the warmth, the smell and the sound of the parent's heartbeat, they normally calm down quickly.

Some parents are too nervous about the monitors and tubes to handle their tiny infants, but McCasland said she felt comfortable in the NICU — and so did her daughter. At times, Kate became so relaxed during her early kangaroo care that she stopped breathing, her mother note. "I would thump her lightly on her chest to startle her so she would remember to breathe," McCasland said. "She seemed to say, 'Mom's here, let's chill out.' "

Doritha Cunningham, a detention officer with the Denton County Sheriff's Office, said she felt intimidated by all the tubes and monitors the first time she held her baby daughter, Destiny, but the skin-to-skin care gave her and her husband time alone with the baby, time to develop closeness as a family.

"I WAS AFRAID of what not to touch, but I got up my nerve," Doritha Cunningham said. Destiny weighed 2 pounds, 3 ounces and was 1 month old at the time. "I had held her all bundled up for just a minute a couple of times earlier, but when I felt her skin against mine, it was wonderful. She seemed to calm down and get real relaxed. I could tell by watching the monitors that she enjoyed it."

Anthony Cunningham of Denton holds his 4-pound, 9-ounce 13-week old daughter, Destiny. Destiny is cared for by her daddy during the night after he gets off work around 11 p.m.

The Cunninghams took Destiny home on the Fourth of July, and now hold her kangaroo style practically all the time. "I keep my blouse open and her snuggled up to me," Cunningham said. "When she's not nursing, she's cuddling. At night, if she starts to cry, all you have to do is put her on your chest and she mellows back and goes right to sleep."

Doritha Cunningham said she loves to watch her 6-foot-tall, 250-pound husband caring for the still-tiny infant.

Anthony Cunningham, a deputy sheriff and the sergeant in charge of detention for the Denton County Sheriff's Office, cares for Destiny when he gets off work each night. "She loves lying on Daddy's chest. She usually looks around and smiles for a while and then falls asleep," he said. "It's definitely rewarding to me."

He said he was surprised that they were allowed to hold the baby while she was still so small and fragile in the intensive-care nursery, but he wouldn't trade the experience.

AND THE medical specialists say they, too, are coming around. "We are just getting started with this. It will be interesting to see how it all turns out," said Dr. Richard Sidebottom of Fort Worth Neonatal Associates, who specializes in high-risk pediatrics. "It certainly has some advantages. It helps the mother and baby feel close to each other. I have a little trouble believing the babies don't get cold or that they grow faster."

Sidebottom said he was shocked to see a baby as small as Paul Pulizzo, who gets cold every time anyone opens his isolette, warm up when his mother holds him, but he has seen it happen.

"It's going to take a while to sort all this out," Sidebottom said. "I hope it works."

Rain forest herb brings new hope to patients suffering from chronic fatigue

DALLAS (SWN) — Chronic Fatigue Syndrome is a mysterious malady which has devastated millions of Americans over the past decade, seemingly with little hope of recovery, until now.

Many sufferers are now feeling they have experienced substantial relief in a nutritional supplement made from an herb found in the Brazilian rain forest.

According to the exclusive distributor, Worldwide Nutrition, the rain forest herb works to strengthen the body while enhancing the immune system.

Users report it relieves the symptoms associated with Chronic Fatigue Syndrome, including extreme fatigue, depression, muscle and joint pain, low libido, impaired concentration, loss of memory and many others.

In a recent KDFW-TV news report, Sherry Bennett, a young Dallas woman said she "spent nine months in bed" with Chronic Fatigue Syndrome and has struggled with depression and fatigue for seven years.

She goes on to say that within two weeks after taking these supplements, she began to feel results.

Today, she has traded depression for hope. "It's like you have butterflies hatching inside you," she said, "waves of energy."

In another news segment on Chronic Fatigue Syndrome, a Detroit television station featured a heavyweight boxer and a diminutive school teacher, both felled by CFS, both returned to their former lives by this natural supplement therapy, which sells under the brand name PFAx.

The young boxer said, "It's not like it sort of worked...It got rid of the problem entirely."

The cause of Chronic Fatigue Syndrome remains unknown. But this nutritional therapy for the immune system points toward hope for people who have long lived without it.

Women warned about heavy drinking

N.Y. Times News Service

Women's hearts are more sensitive, at least when it comes to damage wrought by chronic alcohol abuse.

Research in the past decade has documented women's greater susceptibility to alcohol damage of the liver and brain, but a new study is the first to show that chronic, heavy drinking takes a greater toll on women's hearts.

Women make up 30 percent of the nation's estimated 8.1 million alcoholics and one-quarter of alcohol abusers, according to the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism. Alcoholic heart damage takes the form of cardiomyopathy, a gradual weakening of cardiac muscle distinct from the vessel blockage that causes most heart attacks.

The effect may not be limited to hearts. Among 55 alcoholic women in the study, done in Barcelona, a higher proportion suffered microscopic damage in skeletal muscle than among a group of 100 alcoholic men — even though the women had a far lower estimated lifetime consumption.

In sum, women alcoholics suffered at least as much damage to both heart muscle and skeletal muscle as men, even though their lifetime alcohol consumption was about 40 percent lower.

The researchers, who work at the University of Barcelona and Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia, estimated lifetime consumption through interviews that attempted to gauge drinking habits through five different periods of subjects' lives — a method alcoholism experts consider reliable. The results appeared in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Mary Dufour, deputy director of the National Institute on Alcoholism and Alcohol Abuse, said in an interview that the study adds force to the federal agency's advice that women limit themselves to one alcoholic drink a day — no more than 12 ounces of beer, five ounces of wine or 1½ ounces of distilled spirits. That's half the recommended limit for men.

New techniques are used in removal of some kidney stones

By Dr. Michael Grasso III
Associated Press

Treatment of kidney stones is changing.

Three decades ago, shock wave therapy revolutionized the treatment of kidney stones. Now there's a move to use it less frequently, spurred by advances in technology and economics.

Before shock wave lithotripsy — the word means "breaking stones" — the treatment for the often agonizing pain of kidney stones was removal by surgery. Today, surgery is rare. The usual procedure is to break up stones with shock waves.

Now, in a number of cases, shock wave treatment is being replaced by flexible endoscopy, which allows urologists to see kidney stones, break them up with powerful laser beams and remove the fragments.

Shock wave lithotripsy is still widely used. But there are circumstances in which the endoscope is preferable.

One is in the case of very large stones, an inch or more in diameter. The problem with shock wave therapy is that big stones tend to break into big pieces, which don't clear easily from the body.

Another indication for use of the endoscope is when a stone is wedged tightly in the ureter, the channel through which urine flows from the kidney, causing swelling and accumulation of fluid. A third indication is an infection associated with the presence of stones.

One American in 1,000 is treated annually for kidney stones. The stones usually form in people 30 to 50 years old. Stones form in the kidney and then start working their way down the ureter.

Perhaps half of all kidney stones — those two-tenths of an inch or less in diameter — can pass without problems. Larger stones can cause a variety of symptoms, including pain in the back and flank, chills, fever, and blood in the urine.

About 80 percent of stones consist of calcium oxalate. Perhaps one in 20 consists of uric acid. Uric acid stones can be dissolved by dietary measures and drug treatment. The others are broken up to facilitate clearance of the pieces.

The idea is to break bigger stones into little stones that can pass through the ureter. The first application of that idea was shock wave lithotripsy, which originated in Germany. The technique uses an electric spark to generate a shock wave in water. The shock wave is focused through the skin on the stones. The stones absorb energy and break into fragments. Originally, shock wave lithotripsy was done under general anesthesia. Newer equipment has reduced the amount of anesthesia that is required.

The success rate for shock wave lithotripsy varies depending on the stone composition, size, location, and the type of shock wave generator employed. Some patients undergo repeated sessions.

The technology of the flexible endoscope means that a thin fiberoptic wire can be threaded up into the kidney through the ureter. Laser pulses are beamed through the wire, breaking up the stone. The endoscope can also be used to remove the fragments.

The newest kind of laser literally vaporizes stones, so that removal is no problem. The amount of anesthesia required for a treatment depends on the patient's tolerance. Some patients are sedated, some get general anesthesia.

Because the greatest advances in endoscopy have come in just the past two years, the most advanced techniques aren't available in all medical centers. They are rapidly becoming more available, as urologists are trained in the new technology.

Dr. Michael Grasso III is an associate professor of urology at New York University School of Medicine.

Short postpartum stays cause concern

By Joyce Valdez
N.Y. Times News Service

PHOENIX — Dazed and exhausted after delivering her first baby, Shannon Fellenz felt a wave of panic as she left the hospital cradling a tiny bundle that weighed less than the flour sack she kept in her pantry.

Had someone offered her more time in the hospital that day, she would have accepted it as eagerly as a winning lottery ticket. Nevertheless, the new mother and her 4-pound, 13-ounce infant were sent home after 24 hours.

It was a rather typical stay for an extraordinary life experience.

"I thought he was awfully tiny to bring home, especially with me being a new mom," recalled Fellenz.

"I was three weeks early (delivering), and my mom wasn't here to help."

The "OB Express," insurance coverage that shuttles women and newborns in and out of hospitals in 24 hours or less, is being pelted by critics.

One-day hospital stays are typical these days, to the dismay of many medical experts, lawmakers and mothers.

FELLENZ RECENTLY had her third baby, and she discovered that not much has changed since her oldest was born three years ago.

She would have welcomed even a few more hours in the hospital to brace for the challenge of caring for a newborn and two toddlers.

"I didn't have any rest during this pregnancy, and I didn't get any rest in the hospital," she said as the 3-year-old wailed in the background.

Her first two developed jaundice shortly after coming home, and she was worried that the newborn would develop the same problem.

Many complications such as jaundice and dehydration aren't always evident within the first 24 hours of birth.

"Some awfully small kids are being sent home. I think they're taking a big risk in lot of cases."

The trend could be fodder for stand-up comedy: "Welcome to our maternity drive-through. You want fries with that?"

'Maybe it's (early discharges from the hospital following childbirth) something we ought to look into. I think a lot of women don't want to be there (in hospitals) that long, but if women and infants are being sent home when their doctors feel they really should stay, then that's something we need to look at.'

— Rep. Susan Gerard (R-Ariz.), chairman, House Health Committee

Phoenix neonatologist Glenn Waterkotte isn't chuckling: "It should be OK to have an extra day in the hospital. It shouldn't be such an impossibility."

Postpartum stays have dropped from 3.9 days in 1970 to 2.4 days in 1993 (a figure that includes some complicated vaginal deliveries), according to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The average for Phoenix-area women is 24 hours for a vaginal delivery with no complications and 72 hours for a Caesarean section.

Several C-section patients, such as Heather Larson of Mesa, have reported speedier discharges.

"I had to have people literally help me out of bed for the baby's 5 a.m. feeding because I couldn't get up," said Larson, who was discharged about 26 hours after her C-section in early August.

THE AMERICAN College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists is against "arbitrary time limits on hospital stays that do not take maternal and infant needs into account."

It called the practice "a large, uncontrolled, uninformed experiment that may potentially affect the health of American women and their babies."

The American Academy of Pediatrics, meanwhile, is expected to issue more stringent guidelines on early infant discharge and follow-up care in the October issue of "Pediatrics."

On the legislative front, Congress and several states are trying to ensure more reasonable hospital stays.

The Senate may consider legislation that would force insurance companies to cover hospitalization costs of women up to 48 hours after vaginal child birth and 96 hours after C-sections.

Although Arizona's Legislature has not formally taken up the issue, at least one key legislator is sensitive to women's complaints.

"Maybe it's something we ought to look into," said Rep. Susan Gerard, a north-central Phoenix Republican who chairs the House Health Committee.

"I think a lot of women don't want to be there (in hospitals) that long, but if women and infants are being sent home when their doctors feel they really should stay, then that's something we need to look at."

EARLY DISCHARGES have not resulted in major problems for the vast majority of women and babies, maintains Dave McIntyre, president of the Arizona Association of Managed Care Plans, which represents major insurance companies doing business in the state.

"You want to make sure people aren't being released too early and inappropriately, but on the other hand, you don't want them to stay longer than necessary," he said, adding that mandated stays could drive up costs at a time when consumers are demanding more affordable medical care.

McIntyre, whose wife is expecting their first baby in a few weeks, said that many women don't want to stay longer than 24 hours.

First-time mom Victoria Williams, for one, couldn't wait to go home with her new baby girl despite a difficult labor.

"We actually left the hospital earlier than 24 hours," the Phoenix-area woman said.

"I'm the kind of brand-new mother who read every book on pregnancy and parenting that I could find. We even took two Lamaze classes. I was ready."

Not all mothers are as well-read as Williams, unfortunately.

And although overworked nursing staffs do their best to educate mothers, 24 hours often isn't enough time, especially if the woman is exhausted and in discomfort.

Waterkotte, the neonatologist, is especially concerned about the unwed, teen mother whose lack of experience and support could jeopardize her infant's health and safety.

FOR SUCH mothers, he recommends increasing hospital stays by one day for each year under 19 so nurses can have more time to work with the young woman.

A 16-year-old, for example, would be permitted to stay a minimum of three days.

But he opposes legislative mandates because, for a lot of women, 24 hours is fine.

A cheaper alternative to longer stays, Waterkotte said, are follow-up home visits by health-care professionals, a common practice in European countries.

A mature mother may only need one visit the first month after delivering, while a 16-year-old may require half a dozen.

When to send a woman and newborn home should be an individualized decision that takes into account medical factors as well as her readiness to care for a baby, Waterkotte said.

"Most of the time early discharge is safe," he said, "but we can't be so rigid. ... This is not a situation where one size fits all."

Little-known blood clotting disorder can be serious too

By Jane E. Brody
N.Y. Times News Service

Most people know of the inherited bleeding disorder hemophilia. But von Willebrand's disease, a far more common clotting disorder, is little known.

Hemophilia afflicts one man in 10,000, but von Willebrand's may affect as many as one in 100 men and women, often causing frequent nosebleeds, bleeding gums, easy bruising and excessive menstrual flow.

Unlike hemophilia, it is not usually life-threatening.

More than 95 percent of people with von Willebrand's disease never know they have it.

Some have no recognizable symptoms, but others accept their annoying symptoms as normal, particularly if a parent had similar ones. Yet, the failure to diagnose von Willebrand's disease as a cause of very heavy menstrual bleeding, or menorrhagia, can result in unnecessary tests and procedures, including repeated dilation and curettage procedures and hysterectomy, none of which get to the root of the problem.

AT THE ANNUAL meeting of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists this year, an expert committee urged colleagues to think of this condition and test patients for it when the complaint is menorrhagia. But doctors must realize that von Willebrand's disease is also a potentially serious problem for men who, like women, can bleed excessively after a traumatic injury or operation, including tooth extraction.

"Every primary-care physician and those who work in emergency rooms should be alert to this disease," said Dr. Jeanne Lusher, a hematologist who is director of the hemophilia program at Wayne State University School of Medicine and Children's Hospital of Michigan in Detroit.

"If any patient is having mucous membrane bleeding, von Willebrand's disease should cross their minds as a possibility."

Like hemophilia, von Willebrand's disease is hereditary. Hemophilia is caused by a recessive gene passed on to sons by a mother who carries the gene on one of her X chromosomes. (Boys inherit only one X chromosome and only from their mothers.) Although two recessive genes are usually needed for a characteristic to be expressed, in hemophilia the recessive gene is expressed in male children because there is no normal dominant gene to oppose it.

The gene for von Willebrand's disease is a dominant gene, so only one is needed to cause it. In addition, it is carried on an autosome (a nonsex chromosome) and can therefore be transmitted to sons or daughters by either parent.

THE GENE involved in von Willebrand's disease specifies the production of a protein, von Willebrand factor, that circulates in the blood and is critical to the initial stages of clotting.

Produced by cells that line blood vessel walls, the protein acts like glue, forming a plug of blood platelets to seal off blood flow. It also helps to stabilize factor VIII, the clotting protein often missing in hemophilia.

The von Willebrand gene is expressed to different degrees in different people, causing everything from no symptoms to potentially fatal ones. Various factors, including a person's A, B or O blood type, can affect the level of von Willebrand factor that is produced, said Dr. Bruce Ewenstein, a hematologist at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston. A parent with the gene may have no symptoms, but a child who inherits it may have serious problems.

Ewenstein added, however, that the level of von Willebrand factor in the blood rises with age, so symptoms in children often lessen as they get older.

Exercise and stress can temporarily increase blood levels of this factor, and pregnancy typically results in a temporary doubling or tripling of the factor in blood, he said. Thus, he added, when a doctor tests for von Willebrand's disease, its existence may sometimes be missed.

In more than 95 percent of cases, the person has only one gene for the condition, but it can suppress production of von Willebrand factor dictated by the normal gene.

FOR THOSE unfortunate enough to inherit a von Willebrand gene from both parents, bleeding problems can be much more severe and sometimes fatal if not properly treated. But even if only one abnormal gene is present, in some ethnic groups, like Scandinavians and people from Northern Italy, the condition tends to be much more severe than in others. In fact, the disease was first discovered in 1925 by a Finnish doctor, Erik von Willebrand, in a severely affected young girl who died soon after menarche, having suffered fatal bleeding with one of her first menstrual periods.

The disorder was later found to have many different subtypes, now grouped in three major categories. In Type 1 disease, which accounts for more than 80 percent of cases, von Willebrand factor is normal both in structure and function but is produced in subnormal amounts. In Type 2 disease, which accounts for about 15 percent of cases, the factor occurs in normal amounts but is defective. In the rare Type 3 cases, none of the factor is produced at all.

A blood test can determine the presence, quantity and normality of von Willebrand factor. Hematologists recommend that the test be done for any adolescent girl or woman with very heavy menstrual periods (the kind that typically require two dozen pads or tampons of any size a month) when there is no apparent cause (for example, use of an IUD or a growth in the uterus) and especially if other symptoms of von Willebrand's disease, like easy bruising, are present or there is a family history of clotting problems. Since levels of von Willebrand factor can vary from time to time, laboratory tests may have to be repeated.

UNTIL RECENTLY, there were only two direct treatments for the disorder: administration of blood products, which carry the risk of introducing a hidden viral infection, and the much safer intravenous injection of a synthetic hormone, desmopressin acetate, which mimics the action of the natural antidiuretic hormone vasopressin.

The drug is now available as a nasal spray, Stimate Nasal Spray, a prescription product produced by Armour Pharmaceutical Co. of Collegeville, Pa., which patients can take at the onset of menses, after a minor injury or before undergoing dental work or any minor procedure that involves bleeding.

In patients who can produce von Willebrand factor that is structurally and functionally normal, desmopressin acetate sets off its release from storage sites in blood vessels.

Within two hours, blood levels of the factor become normal and can stem excessive bleeding. A second or third dose of the factor, given a day or so apart, may sometimes be needed. Then the body needs time to produce more factor before another dose can be effective.

Dr. Lusher, who conducted extensive tests of desmopressin acetate, said it could help the vast majority of von Willebrand patients, those with the Type 1 form of the disease. She called it "a very safe drug," especially if patients curbed their fluid intake when using it, since it inhibits the production of urine and can result in water overload.

Meeting needs of 'latch-key kids' can be challenge

By Dr. Hap LeCrone
N.Y. Times News Service

Meeting the physical and emotional needs of children when both parents work or the single parent works outside the home is often difficult, but is a very important task.

Learning to provide children with the security they need and keep them from feeling less important than our work can be achieved with careful planning.

■ First consider the child's point of view, how they accept the working parent and what is important to them.

The idea of one or both parents working outside the home is not new or unique to the children of today.

Estimates are that more than half of the families have either both parents or the single parent working outside the home. For the most part, children accept this.

Having parents and lifestyles similar to their peers is important. No child wants to stand out in the crowd as being the "oddball" or different.

■ Although many children are accepting of their working parents, they still want their individual needs to be met.

They are aware that some parents successfully balance the responsibilities of home and career by careful use of time.

■ They don't want to be excluded from discussions about the work of the parent.

They want to hear about their parents' duties and responsibilities. What is their weekly schedule going to be? Why must they devote extra time outside of the workday to their job? What is frustrating about the job? What do they think about their boss? Why? What does their boss think about them? Why?

Children want to know what their parents like about the job, and what they dislike.

The by-product of these parent-child conversations could be the beginning of ideas about career choices.

■ Most children, especially by the time they reach early adolescence, realize the difference between hard-working parents who feel a commitment toward their vocation and those who are workaholics.

Children resent this exclusion from their parents' lives and expect parents to sometimes reschedule and change priorities for them.

Children need time for special family rituals and observances. They need time for parents to listen while they discuss their hopes and dreams.

Over the years I have heard many parents say they woke up one day to realize the children were almost grown up. Sadly, they lamented the fact that they hardly knew them.

■ To keep emotional stability in the household, parents should make every effort to come home and begin family interaction on a positive note at the end of the day.

Hitting the front door with constant complaints of how terrible the day was and how unfair life is creates an air of pessimism in children and can lead to negative stereotyped thinking.

Parents should find something positive to talk about during the first few minutes at home. Discussion of problems or unpleasant situations can come later.

Study requested

N.Y. Times News Service

Two decades ago the federal government promised pilots anonymity if they reported near-collisions and unsafe aviation practices. The Aviation Safety Reporting System has since amassed a treasure trove of data on how to prevent disaster.

Reasoning that the same idea might work in health care, Dr. John Biglow, a Massachusetts General Hospital resident in anesthesiology, proposed that the American Medical Association study a similar system for reporting medical errors.

"It would have cost nothing, and I was asking only for a study, not the implementation of a new system," Biglow said. Nonetheless, the proposal was voted down during the AMA's recent annual meeting.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your finances will show significant improvement. Continue to keep a close eye on spending. Accepting a promotion or new job this winter could mean a move to another city or state. Although telling old friends goodbye will be difficult, good things are in store! Do not reveal too much too soon when cultivating new contacts. Emphasize your strengths, not your weaknesses. By next spring, the family circle expands to include at least one new member.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: football great Terry Bradshaw, tennis star Jimmy Connors, actress Linda Purl, defense attorney Robert Shapiro.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You find a way to help someone without making an issue of it. A friendship thrives. Let relationships become your "means to an end." An exercise session proves invigorating.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A long-delayed project can be completed if you roll up your sleeves and get to work. Do not spell out your future romantic plans. Postponed promises should now be fulfilled. Entertain at home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your concern for an old friend is warranted. Take action no matter what others may say. A lucky break comes through a former employer or schoolmate. Show more affection with loved ones. Plan special treats.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Alliances or negotiations may suddenly bog down. Discuss a difference of opinion calmly, and things will change for the better. The financial outlook is bright.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Make this a lighthearted, easy-going day. Be choosy about the company you keep. Solitude is preferable to someone who only wants to talk about their problems. Write a letter to a faraway relative.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may lack the clout you need to get something done. Use charm instead! By afternoon, the scales tip in your favor. Teamwork helps you turn a tidy profit. Compromising resolves a parent-child conflict.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Everything seems to come together today. Someone joins forces with you to tackle a tricky legal or financial problem. Be diplomatic if asked your preferences in food or music.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You and your romantic partner have something special. Avoid squabbling over minor issues. The social scene is livelier than ever. Believe in a hunch.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Group activities will probably provide more enjoyment than one-on-one encounters. The more people you see today, the more laughs you will have.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your sincerity shines through, winning you widespread affection. Kindness and candor will help you make a relationship last. Romance plays a role in an exciting drama. Do not be timid about expressing your views publicly.

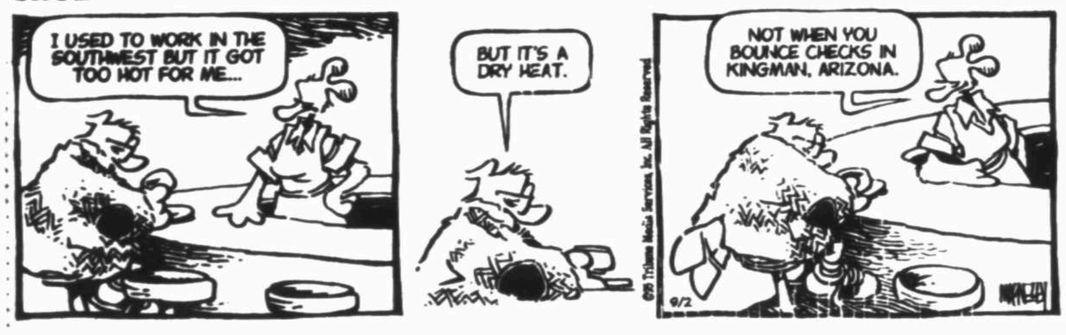

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Someone who sweeps you off your feet could have an eye on your money. Stay alert! You will soon reap rewards from a long ago investment. Examine sales merchandise for flaws before making a purchase.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You are able to attract valuable support today. A business or romantic partner is willing to give you final say. Nip family problems in the bud by asking probing questions. Young children confide their fears.

Gospel singer Sandi Patti hopes confession is really good for soul

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Confession, it is said, is good for the soul. It remains to be seen if it's good for the gospel singer Sandi Patti.

Patti admitted having an extramarital affair with the backup singer she just married.

Patti, 39, who holds five Grammy awards, said the affair began in 1991, about 17 months before her divorce from then-manager John Helvering. She and Don Peslis, 34, married on Aug. 6.

"I admit that I have sinned and have made past mistakes," Patti said in a statement Thursday. "I have been seeking counsel from my pastor and my church council, and through this process I feel I have made significant progress toward wholeness, both personally and with the body of Christ."

Her label, Word Records, said it will postpone her Christmas album, " O Holy Night," because of the matter.

Patti's gospel hits include "They Say" and "I've Just Seen Jesus," and she has performed at Billy Graham crusades.

Last year, Michael English quit gospel music and returned six Gospel Music Association Dove Awards over the disclosure that he had an affair with another gospel singer.

SALT LAKE CITY — You've come a long way, babies. Rep. Enid Waldholtz has become the second member of Congress to give birth while in office.

Rep. Enid Waldholtz gives birth to her firstborn, Elizabeth.

The 36-year-old Republican gave birth to her firstborn, Elizabeth, on Thursday. The baby weighed 7 pounds 7 ounces.

Both mother and daughter were reported doing well. Mrs. Waldholtz had been in labor since Wednesday, when her doctor induced labor.

The path to maternity in Congress was blazed in 1973 when then-Rep. Yvonne Braithwaite-Burke of California gave birth to a daughter.

Waldholtz worked throughout her pregnancy. Her husband, Joe Waldholtz, is an unpaid aide in her office.

NEW YORK — To explore the dark side of TV anchorwoman Jessica Savitch, actress Sela Ward has to find the light side of her hair.

The brunette went blonde for "Almost Golden: The Jessica Savitch Story," which will be shown Monday on cable's Lifetime network.

The Emmy-award winning star of NBC's "Sisters" said it took four trips to the hairdresser and 16 hours to get her hair right.

"What we women go through," she said.

Savitch, who drowned in a 1983 auto accident at age 35, was plagued by cocaine abuse, insecurities and destructive relationships.

"I was thinking it's like the movie 'Speed,'" Ward said. "If she went under 55 miles per hour, her life would self-destruct."

AUSTIN — Gov. George W. Bush is taking another shot at dove hunting, hoping not to break the law this time.

Last year, the former president's son brought down an out-of-season bird called a killdee.

Gov. Bush to take aim again at doves, hoping not to break the law this time.

The 20-gauge mistake cost Bush a $130 fine and embarrassed him during his campaign against Gov. Ann Richards, though he also got a good laugh line out of it: "It's a good thing I wasn't deer hunting. I might have shot a cow."

He plans to take aim again on Sunday.

"I'm putting lead in the air," he said. "I hope it's a dove."

LOS ANGELES — Now joined in marriage, Leanza Cornett of "Entertainment Tonight" and TV newsman Mark Steines will be partners on the air. Or maybe not.

"ET" is hiring Steines, but Cornett's air time will be reduced, executive producer Linda Bell Blue said Thursday.

Ms. Cornett, a former Miss America who has been a backup anchorwoman and reporter with "ET" since 1993, will continue to cover such events as the Miss America pageant.

Steines recently worked as a sportscaster and reporter for KCAL in Los Angeles. They married in July.

Thoughtful Moments™

When I Quit

When I quit this mortal shore
And mosey 'round this earth no more
Don't weep, don't sigh, don't grieve don't sob;
I may have struck a better job.
Don't go and buy a large bouquet
For which you'll find it hard to pay.
Don't stand around me looking blue;
I may be better off than you!

Don't tell the folks I was a saint
Or anything you know I ain't.
If you have stuff like that to spread
Please hand it out before I'm dead.
If you have roses, bless your soul,
Just pin one on my buttonhole
But — do it while I'm at my best
Instead of when I'm safe at rest.

— Ben L. Bear

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Revival planned

Cottonflat Baptist Church is holding its homecoming and revival Sept. 10.

The revival will be led by Steve Hardin. Services will begin at 11 a.m. and will be followed by dinner on the grounds. Those attending are asked to bring a covered dish. Meat will be provided.

The afternoon service will begin at 2 p.m. Sept. 10.

Services begin Sept. 11-13 at 7 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

Guest to preach

The Rev. Alan Williams, chaplain at Memorial Hospital, will be the guest preacher at Memorial Christian Church during the 10:50 a.m. service Sunday.

His topic will be "Conqueror or Servant?" based on Hebrews 12:1-13.

Williams has served Memorial Hospital since January of 1994. He is a Lutheran pastor in background, but earned his doctor of ministry from Christian Theological Seminary, Indianapolis, Ind. His pastimes include beekeeping, playing the guitar, ham radios and helping with Emmaus Walks.

He is married and the father of three children, one who is married.

Due to the Labor day weekend, there will be no early worship Sunday. Guests are invited to hear Williams speak at 10:50 a.m.

Celebration set

Westside Church of Christ will celebrate its 40th anniversary Sept. 9-10.

According to the church's minister, Gary Montgomery, former members and families who have shared in the church life of this congregation are expected to return for these events.

The church was originally located at 3405 Bankhead Highway where the work and ministry began in 1955 with 40 adults present. Bob Pringle preached the first sermon, and Floyd I. Stanley Sr. was the first full time minister. C.E. and Kate Adams are the only original members still in attendance in this fellowship which meets on the west side of town.

Permanent facilities were first constructed at 3220 W. Illinois ave. and services were first held there on June 17, 1956. Many families contributed to the construction of that building by funding 1,000 bricks each.

Land was purchased at 4410 W. Illinois Ave. in 1976. The first phase of the current facilities was constructed and services first conducted May 21, 1978.

"Today, Westside continues to preach the gospel and set forth New testament Christianity in this community," said a release from the church.

Missions supported by this church reach Thailand, Honduras, Estonia, The Czech Republic and New Mexico. Local outreach continues with many ministries and programs including sponsorship of a weekly article in the Friday Midland Reporter-Telegram entitled "Focus for Living."

Activities Sept. 9 include a Men's Fellowship Breakfast at 8 a.m. and a reception at 7 p.m. for all former members and families. Sept. 10, Al Jolly of Hilltop Lakes, a former minister, will speak to the teens and adults at 9 and 10 a.m. Old fashioned gospel singing will be held at 2 p.m. with Don Mitchell in charge. A series of gospel meetings will continue with weekday services at 7 p.m.

The public is invited to attend.

Midlander returns

Donovan Darrell Bushman, the son of Darrell and Darla Bushman, recently returned home from a two-year mission for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Dublin, Ireland.

Along with proselyting and teaching the gospel of Jesus Christ, Bushman's missionary experience included serving as new missionary trainer, mission recorder, passport and visa specialist and as a zone leader over 18 missionaries.

"It was great," Bushman said of the experience. "I love Ireland and the Irish people."

As a former Lee High School athlete, Bushman enjoyed the experience of playing a baseball game against Northern Ireland's national team with a team of missionaries and winning.

Bushman plans to return to Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah, this fall. He is majoring in computer science.

Ministry began

Greg Fleming began a pulpit ministry with the North A Church of Christ this August.

Fleming earned a bachelor of science degree in elementary education from Lubbock Christian University in 1977, graduated from Sunset International Bible School and School of Missions, Lubbock, in 1983, and earned a master of science degree in biblical and related studies in 1993 and a master of divinity degree in 1994 from Abilene Christian University.

He moves to Midland after spending almost 12 years in ministry with the Church of Christ in Robert Lee.

Married in 1981, Fleming and his wife, Cindy, are the parents of a 10-year-old daughter, Whitney, an 8-year-old son, Collin, and a 6-year-old son, Tyler. The Fleming children are students at George Bush Elementary.

The new minister replaces Glenn Pemberton, who had been pulpit minister for the North A congregation during the last three and a half years. He has accepted a fellowship to pursue a doctorate in Old Testament at Iliff School of Theology, which is part of the University of Denver.

Guest to speak

The Rev. Dr. Gary A. Dill will speak at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave., from 3 to 6 p.m. Sept. 10 in Lynn Hall.

Dill, senior vice president of Schreiner College, Kerrville, will speak on "How to Chose a College." The 1993, 1994 and 1995 U.S. News & World Report's "America's Best Colleges in the U.S." placed Schreiner in the top quarter of Western liberal arts colleges in the nation.

The focus of this program is to give parents and students the tools for making a decision concerning their future and higher education.

"We will be exploring together how to choose a major and how to evaluate a college's educational opportunities for your area of interest," said a release from First Presbyterian.

"We will also help students ask the question of which type of college, large university or small college, best fits their needs."

Cost for dinner is $4. For dinner reservations call the church office, 684-7821, and ask for extension 38 and extension 37 for nursery reservations. For more information call Bob Kelly, youth director, or the Rev. Jim Houston-Hencken, associate pastor for Christian education.

Sermon topic set

"Cracked Cisterns" will be the topic of the Rev. Sidney Spain's sermon at Trinity Presbyterian Church Sunday.

The worship service will begin at 10:55 a.m. Sunday school starts at 9:30 a.m.

In addition to classes for children ages 18 months through senior high, adults will have a choice of two Bible study courses and the CLER Ministries adult study of human sexuality from a Christian perspective.

Ministry starts

Cuthbert Avenue Baptist Church has started operating a Bus Ministry each Sunday for Sunday School and church services.

The bus is for children and adults, including seniors. By calling 699-4139 or 684-7802 on Saturday afternoons, transportation arrangements can be made for the next day. The transportation includes picking up and returning the passengers.

The church also has a program of "Two by Two Visitation." Church members are available to visit prospective members and those without a church home.

Fellowship set

Trinity Presbyterian Church's Junior and Senior High Youth Fellowship "Water Getaway" in Colorado City will be Sept. 9.

Reservations for current and prospective members and their guests must be made no later than Monday by calling the church office, 682-2514, or Janice Clausen, 684-5746.

Also, Cub Scout Pack 222, sponsored by Trinity, is recruiting new members, boys in grades 1-5, and their parents. Membership is not limited to members of Trinity. Contact Larry Chadwell, 699-7460, Clay Garrett, 697-7636, or Tom Newbold, 684-4671.

Series offered

ODESSA — Don Palmer and Life Unlimited Church, 4224 E. Loop 338 and Highway 191, will be offering a series entitled "The Cleansing Stream" beginning Oct. 10 from 7 to 9 p.m.

The classes will meet every other Tuesday and conclude Jan. 23 with an all day session Saturday, Jan. 31.

Our Savior's Lutheran Church, 3309 Neely, will begin its Mother's Day Out program Sept. 5.

The program will be held from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday for ages 12 months to prekindergarten. For more information call Carolyn Welch, 520-2636.

New series starts

"Baby Boomers and God: Issues and Attitudes of a Generation" is the topic of a new series of programs at First United Methodist's Community of Joy, which meets at 10:30 a.m. Sundays at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

"Each program will explore the cultural pressures which have made Boomers what they are, why they are predisposed to certain types of responses and how their world view is shaped by the culture," said the Rev. Mark Alexander, associate pastor of First UMC and pastor for Community of Joy. "Topics such as loneliness, self-sufficiency, chronic disappointment and shattered dreams are highlighted. Also considered is the search Boomers are on for spirituality as evidenced by renewed interest in some type of relationship with God, angels and other things spiritual."

Dress is casual. The services include live music as well as short and lively dramas. For more information call Alexander, 682-3701.

Far Eastern religions fan to Bible Belt

AUSTIN (AP) — Nestled among the hills of this Bible Belt state, one of the largest Hindu temples outside India is being erected for an October opening.

The International Society of Divine Love, a nonprofit Hindu organization, has religious centers, or ashrams, all over the world. It also has temples elsewhere in the United States, but it chose Central Texas as its U.S. headquarters.

"We looked all across the country," said Priya Dasi, an American Hindu nun, who provides tours of the new temple. "I think the main reason (we chose this site) is the similarities, the way it looked like Northern India."

"We didn't choose Austin, we chose this property," she said, adding that Texans have made them feel welcome.

"Austin deserves recognition for being such a friendly and open place. We've experienced that," she said.

Set on about 200 acres southwest of Austin in north Hays County, the ashram — named Barsana Dham after the Indian city of Barsana — will include guest rooms, preacher's offices and classrooms as well as the main temple, a $2.5 million, 35,000-square-foot building called Shree Raseshwari Temple.

"Our whole idea of this whole property is that it would be a place for pilgrimage, not just a local church," Priya Dasi said.

The temple will serve Austin's nearly 1,000 Hindu families, who now have to travel to San Antonio for religious services. But the group expects Hindus from all over the country to come to the ashram for spiritual renewal.

The temple is being built to last more than 1,000 years by combining ancient and modern construction techniques. A 90-foot tower swathed in granite from Central Texas and topped by a huge gold-colored spire is designed to withstand tornado-force winds. Concrete walls were built using a slow drying process that increases the concrete's strength and minimizes cracking.

Nine Hindu artisans, called shilpis, have come from India to do intricate, cement bas relief detailing in the temple.

The ashram has already become something of a landmark in the Austin area. Priya Dasi said the center is flooded constantly with curious visitors. When they come, they are given information on the temple and the Hindu philosophy and allowed to wander the grounds.

On a slightly smaller scale, the International Buddhist Progress Society is planning to build a 20,000-square-foot temple complex on 11 acres of donated land in the hills northwest of Austin.

The society still is seeking donations to help pay for its $2.5 million project, which is planned as a traditional Chinese palace with a two-tiered roof, flying corners, marble floors and handcrafted woodwork detailing.

The Venerable Chueh Hu Shih, a Buddhist nun of the society, said the temple will be the first in Austin to accommodate a growing number of Buddhists.

The new temples are something of a testament to Austin's growth and to the growing number of immigrants from the Far East locating here.

Priya Dasi said the majority of the Hindu families in the area are either engineers for Austin's high-tech companies or doctors.

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Wichita's Kris Ralston dominated Angel batters Friday as Midland fell in Game 1 of the Western Division Playoffs 8-1. Ralston went the distance, allowing three hits and facing three batters over the minimum.

■ Wichita right-hander holds Midland to three hits in the Wranglers' 8-1 playoff win.

By Sean Wallace
Sports Writer

Midland waited 20 years for this?

The Angels hosted their first playoff game at Christensen Stadium in 20 years Friday night, but the party was spoiled by Wichita's Kris Ralston, who shut down Midland on three hits and pitched Wichita to an 8-1 win in the opening game of the Texas League Western Division Championship Series.

"This wasn't the way we wanted to start out, but it's only one game," said center fielder Michael Wolff, who went 1-for-3 with a double and the team's only run batted in. "We're just going to forget about it and come back tomorrow. Hopefully, we can win that one and then take two in Wichita."

The Wranglers lead the best-of-five series 1-0 with tonight's Game 2 at Christensen. After that, the series shifts to Wichita, Kan., for Game 3, as well as Games 4 and 5 if necessary.

"Ralston pitched a hell of a game," Angels manager Mario Mendoza said. "We'll just see what happends tomorrow (Saturday). We're going to take it day-by-day."

Ralston (1-0) kept the Angels off balance all night, mixing a blend of fastballs and off-speed pitches in allowing just three hits, and only one after the second inning. He went the distance, striking out eight and walking only one and retired 16 in a row at one point.

"This was my best performance this season, without a doubt," said Ralston,

Home playoff win eludes Midland again

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland is in its 24th year as a member of the Texas League and still does not own a playoff victory at Christensen Stadium.

As the Midland Cubs in 1975, the Midland TL franchise posted an 0-2 playoff mark at Christensen Stadium against Lafayette Some 20 years later, the Midland Angels let that loss record grow to 0-3 with an 8-1 loss to the Wichita Wranglers Friday.

The loss wasn't any better than the two suffered to Lafayette, thanks in large part to Wrangler hurler Kris Ralston, who turned in one of the season's best pitching performances seen in Midland.

Ralston tossed a nifty three-hitter in a park that gives up runs like a rolling Las

Flutie out for year

CALGARY, Alberta — Quarterback Doug Flutie of the Calgary Stampeders needs surgery to repair a torn elbow tendon and will miss the rest of the Canadian Football League season.

Flutie, the league's four-time most valuable player and its biggest star, said Friday he will have the operation on his throwing arm next week and would need four to six weeks to recover.

If further surgery is required, it could take him a year to heal fully.

"The thing that frustrates me the most is having to wait another year to win the Grey Cup," said Flutie.

"I hope to God the team wins it all. I'll be a part of it. I'll do whatever I can do to help out, but it's not going to be the same as being the guy pulling the trigger.'

The operation will be performed Tuesday in Los Angeles by Dr. Frank Jobe, who has repaired the elbows of NFL quarterbacks like Jim McMahon and Joe Montana.

Flutie had mused about resting the arm until late October and returning for the playoffs. That plan was scuttled after conferring with Jobe.

Storm win Arena

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — George LaFrance scored three consecutive touchdowns Friday night, leading the Tampa Bay Storm to a 48-35 victory over the Orlando Predators in the ArenaBowl.

LaFrance, selected the game's most valuable player, scored on a 57-yard kickoff return and caught 3- and 1-yard two touchdown passes. He broke his own championship record with seven kickoff returns for 127 yards and had seven receptions for 37 yards.

Jay Gruden completed 18 of 30 attempts for 209 yards and four touchdowns for Tampa Bay, which also won league titles in 1991 and 1993.

A crowd of 25,087 attended the game at the ThunderDome.

Optimism runs high at the Midland High Football practices nowadays and why shouldn't it?

Midland High had a 5-5 record in 1994 after two-straight 1-9 seasons in 1992-93. But not only is there the improved record but the confidence level has this team thinking about a better 1995.

"You hope you will build off that (the wins at the end of the season)," Midland High head coach Ronnie Reeger said. "This group has to do what this group has to do. Talentwise we're much closer than when we got here. I think they want to do better than the group ahead of them. It's a continual process."

With Midland High, who did split the District 4-5A title in 1988, as close as it has been talentwise to the rest of the district since Reeger's arrival in 1992, the coach will have his team focus on the mental aspect of the game. He says if the Bulldogs don't have their heads in the game, they will not be able to keep improving on the year before.

"Now is the mental time and we have to prepare players and coaches have to do a better job of getting ready for our 4-5A opponents," said Reeger, who is starts his fourth season with Midland High and has a record of 7-23 at MHS. "I think we have a chance, depending on how we prepare for football games. We've made some ground in some other areas, especially the physical part of it."

Rebels top Socorro in final tuneup

■ New Lee coach watches team outscore his former school 3-1 in the summer's last scrimmage.

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

VAN HORN — It was a reunion of sorts for new Midland Lee head football coach John Parchman as he took his Rebels against El Paso Socorro in the last of Lee's preseason scrimmages.

The Rebels, however, were in no mood to relive old times as Lee tamed the Bulldogs 3-1 here Friday night.

Parchman, who compiled a record of 21-18 in four years at Socorro, watched his Rebels take it to the Bulldogs early on with two touchdowns on the Rebs' first set of 20 plays.

The first score came when quarterback John Thurman hit wide reciever Israel Boyd on Lee's 10th play of the set. Thurman had a 32-yard scamper on an option right to move the ball into Bulldog territory, and then the senior signal caller completed his first pass to John Norman.

"Our passing game is a strong part of our offense," Parchman said, talking about the effectiveness of Lee's new I-formation offense. "We've got kids believeing they can catch the ball, and the pass blocking was good. So, we feel confident about that."

Upset hits Open as Pierce falls

By Steve Wilstein
AP Tennis Writer

NEW YORK — One set Mary Pierce felt as if she were swimming upstream, the next set she knew she was drowning in the biggest upset of the U.S. Open so far.

A Grand Slam season that began so spectacularly for Pierce, who broke through for her first major title in Australia, ended abruptly in the third round Friday when Amy Frazier beat the No. 6 seed 6-3, 7-6 (8-6).

Pierce sank under the weight of 46 unforced errors, more than double her 21 winners, and she let Frazier float virtually unperturbed toward to victory. In eight previous Opens, Frazier had gotten as far as the third round only in 1988.

When Pierce slapped the last ball long, then slugged a second ball in frus-

Aggies begin national title quest at home against LSU

COLLEGE STATION — Third-ranked Texas A&M wants to win the national championship this season and they'll have to be certain there are no Southern Methodist slipups.

The Aggies know they likely must go undefeated to have a chance at the national title. They'll begin the countdown today against Louisiana State at Kyle Field, where they defend the nation's longest home winning streak (26).

"We are just going to break it down every week," quarterback Corey Pullig said. "We have to win this ball game. I think we're mature enough to realize that to win the national championship, we've got to win every game."

The Aggies had a 10-0-1 record last season and then sat home on probation instead of claiming their fourth straight Southwest Conference championship.

A tie with SMU was the only blemish on their record.

They can have no such lapses this season and coach R.C. Slocum is there to see that they don't — especially against the Tigers.

"I see through all the haze and I see that as the same team that played us an even game last year," Slocum said. "They have more of their guys back than

Royals stay ahead of Rangers with win

The Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

ARLINGTON — Kansas City stayed ahead of Texas in the AL wild-card race Friday night because the Rangers can't beat Tom Gordon.

Gordon won his third game of the year against the Rangers as Gary Gaetti drove in two runs and Johnny Damon homered for the streaking Royals in a 5-2 victory, their sixth in a row.

The Rangers have lost five straight.

Kansas City led Texas by percentage points in the playoff-berth race going into the game. The Royals won three of four against the Rangers last weekend.

Gordon has won seven of his last eight decisions against the Rangers and three of four this season.

Mariners 4, Orioles 3

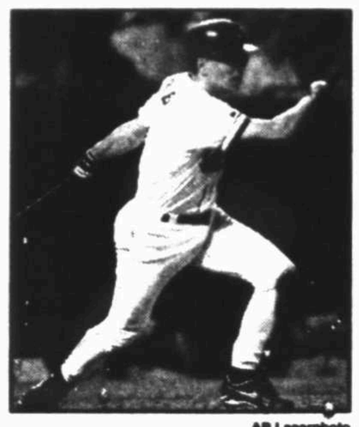

BALTIMORE — Joey Cora hit a rare home run and Dan Wilson also homered as Baltimore lost its sixth straight at home.

Twins 9, Brewers 5

MINNEAPOLIS — Chuck Knoblauch hit a two-run homer and drove in a career-high four runs as Minnesota continued to upset the AL wild-card race.

Indians 14, Tigers 4

DETROIT — Jim Thome and Sandy Alomar homered in a five-run fourth and Albert Belle hit a grand slam in the eighth as Cleveland won its season-high ninth straight.

Baltimore's Cal Ripken smacks a two-run double against Oakland Friday.

Red Sox 11, Angels 3

BOSTON — Roger Clemens pitched his seventh straight strong game and California took its season-high seventh straight loss.

Clemens, who was 3-3 with a 5.81 ERA before his surge, is 4-1 with a 2.22 ERA since it began.

Rangers somehow manage to stay in AL wild card chase

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Somehow, the Texas Rangers are still in the wild card race. And, if they get their acts together by this weekend, they can take a big step toward their first-ever postseason appearance.

Texas had recovered from a 10-game losing streak and opened a 3 1/2-game lead for the extra playoff spot as recently as the middle of last week.

Then the Rangers lost three of four in Kansas City and followed that by being swept in Minnesota by the Twins, the worst team in baseball.

The result is a 59-57 record, the same as Kansas City and Seattle. Milwaukee is one game behind and Oakland only two back.

The good news for the Rangers is that they can somewhat control their destiny — beginning with this weekend's series against the Royals. Texas also plays three games against the Brewers next weekend and it ends the season with seven of its final 12 games against the Mariners.

"What's required of us now is to see what we're made of as a ballclub, to see if we can get this turned around," center fielder Otis Nixon said.

To bolster their chances down the stretch, the Rangers played with their roster Thursday.

The most noteworthy addition was outfielder Candy Maldonado, a veteran of 35 postseason games and two World Series who can provide leadership and a solid bat off the bench.

He was acquired from Toronto for a player to be named. Texas also received pitcher Chris Howard from Boston for outfielder Jack Voigt. Howard may be sent to the minors.

The Rangers made a paperwork move involving Maldonado that will make him eligible for the postseason. Third baseman Luis Ortiz was sent down, then recalled as part of the roster expansion.

Also joining the team today under the expanded rosters are pitchers Jose Alberro and Mark Brandenburg, catcher John Marzano and designated hitter Sam Horn.

Texas' weird shot at the postseason has been reminiscent of the way last season ended.

When the strike killed the 1994 season, the Rangers had lost six in a row and were leading the AL West by only one game. Oakland and Seattle were charging, but the season's last day was the Texas' 72nd straight in first place.

That team, which finished 52-62, would have been the last-place club in either of the other two divisions. This year's model is better but imperiled just the same.

Identifying the sore spots might be easier than healing them. Texas hitters went 1-for-22 with runners in scoring position against the Twins, who had been allowing 6.3 runs per game until the Rangers came to town.

The starting pitching has improved, but nagging injuries to closer Jeff Russell and sluggers Juan Gonzalez and Mickey Tettleton pose serious threats in the season's final month.

"We've got to get (the hitters) to relax and take what the pitcher gives you," Rangers manager Johnny Oates said. "If they make a mistake, whack it. We're not even whacking their mistakes right now."

PLAYOFF: Wranglers take 3-0 lead in 2nd who has had at least seven strikeouts in his last three starts. "I had a really good fastball all night, but early on, I was getting some pitches up."

Wichita gave Ralston a 3-0 lead into the second when the Angels got to him for their only run of the game. Leon Glenn singled with two outs and came home on Wolff's double, cutting the Wranglers' lead to 3-1.

"I went to a full count on Wolff and stayed with my fastball in that situation and he burned me. I threw him a fastball and he hit it down the line for a double," Ralston said. "He's a pull hitter, he's a good hitter and I've had trouble with him all season. From that point on I've got to stay ahead of people and stay out of three-ball counts."

Ralston did just that. After Wolff's double, Ralston set down 16 straight Angels when Glenn finally reached on a walk in the eighth inning.

"I felt like I was able to throw two or three pitches in the strike zone, or at least, in the area code," Ralston said. "I just concentrated on keeping my off-speed stuff in the zone and moving my fastball around."

Wichita won the second-half race by eight games and showed why in the opener. The Wrangers battered three Midland pitchers for 16 hits. All but one player in the lineup got at least one hit.

Midland starter Korey Keling (0-1) had problems early, surrendering five runs in five innings to pick up the loss. The top six batters in the Wichita lineup accounted for 13 of the Wranglers' 16 hits.

Wichita's Kevin Long opened the game with a base hit off Keling and scored on a double by Ramon Martinez, who went 4-for-5 with 2 RBIs.

The Wranglers made it 3-0 in the second on Reuben Smiley's two-run homer. Third baseman Lino Diaz singled to open the inning when Smiley, who had hit only two home runs in the regular season, took Keling out of the park to left-center field.

Long, who went 2-for-4 and scored three times, and Martinez started a two-run rally in the fifth. With one out, Long singled, stole second and came home on an run-scoring single by Martinez. After a walk to Mandy Romero, Myers drilled a two-out single to center which scored Martinez and put Wichita up 5-1.

The Wrangers upped the lead to 7-1 in the seventh as Long and Martinez got Wichita going again. Long was hit by reliever Mark Ratekin and went to third on a single by Martinez. Romero singled in Long and Martinez scored on a sacrifice fly by Myers.

Romero finished out the scoring in the eighth when he hit a home run to left field, giving Wichita a seven-run lead.

ANGEL DUST — Game 2 of the series is tonight at 7 p.m. Willard Brown (9-10, 5.18 ERA) will be on the mound for the Angels. Brian Bevil (5-7, 5.64 ERA) will go for Wichita... Wichita starting catcher Sal Fasano did not play because of a strained hamstring. He is listed as day-to-day and might be available as a pinch-hitter... Long batted .323 against the Angels in 1995. Martinez was at .319.

Schourek beats Pittsburgh for 3rd time this year

The Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

CINCINNATI — Pete Schourek retired 16 Pittsburgh batters in a row as he beat the Pirates for the third time this season and led the Cincinnati Reds to a 7-1 victory Friday night.

Schourek (15-7) matched Atlanta's Greg Maddux for the National League lead by giving up five hits and two walks over 7 2-3 innings. He retired 16 batters in a row between the third and eighth innings.

Pittsburgh has managed just four runs and 14 hits off Schourek in 23 innings this season.

Astros 7, Marlins 3

HOUSTON — Jeff Bagwell, in his first game off the injury list, drove in the tying run in Houston's three-run seventh inning as the Astros rallied to beatFlorida.

Bagwell, sidelined since July 30 with a broken bone in his left hand, went 2-for-4 in his first game back. His night's work included a single in the three-run seventh that scored Brian Hunter, tying the game at 3-3 off reliever Richard Garces (0-1).

Cubs 7, Braves 5

ATLANTA — Jim Bullinger halted a personal three-game losing streak and Shawn Dunston singled in two runs to spark Chicago to a victory over Atlanta.

Ryan Klesko had two homers and knocked in four runs for Atlanta.

Bullinger (11-5) worked 6 1-3 innings, allowing five runs and six hits, in helping the Cubs win their first in four games in Atlanta this season. The Cubs are 3-7 overall against the Braves this season.

Cardinals 5, Rockies 4

ST. LOUIS — Ray Lankford's eighth-inning home run tied the score and Bernard Gilkey's single snapped it as St. Louis beat Colorado.

The Cardinals have taken four in row over the Rockies, including a sweep last weekend in Denver. St. Louis also has won 10 of its last 14.

Colorado's Dante Bichette homered and had three RBIs, topping 100 for the first time in his career.

Bichette had a run-scoring groundout in the fourth and hit a two-run home run off Mark Petkovsek in the sixth. He leads the league with 33 home runs and 102 RBIs and is batting .359 (28-for-78) his last 18 games.

Dawson shares lead, seeks first PGA victory

The Associated Press

■ Golf Roundup

MILWAUKEE — Marco Dawson, seeking his first PGA Tour victory, shot a 6-under-par 65 Friday to share the lead in the Greater Milwaukee Open with Richard Zokol.

Dawson had eight birdies, one of them on a 50-foot putt, for a two-day total of 7-under-par 135 at Brown Deer Park Golf Course. He started the day five shots off the lead. Zokol, the 1992 GMO champion, entered the second round with a one-stroke advantage and shot a 1-under-par 70 to stand even with Dawson. Robert Gamez was one shot back after shooting a 69 for 136. Curtis Strange, Joe Acosta and Peter Jordan stood at 5-under-par 137.

Franklin Quest Senior

PARK CITY, Utah — Ben Smith shot a tournament-record 9-under-par 63 on Friday to take a two-stroke lead over Larry Laoretti after the first round of the Franklin Quest Championship.

Smith, who set up six birdies with iron shots within 10 feet, led the tournament in 1988 when it was known as the Showdown Classic.

HOME: Wranglers already reached key goal

(From 1C)

Vegas slot machine. He once retired 16 Angels in a row and ended up facing only three batters over the minimum in his first complete-game outing of the season.

"For any pitcher to come in here in this park and throw a three-hitter is brilliant, outstanding, fantastic," said Wichita manager Ron Johnson. "That's some kind of good."

And Ralston (10-4) was also surprised at his success against the Angel lineup that proved to be mostly helpless against the righty.

"You don't expect to come in here and throw a three-hitter," Ralston said. "I just wanted to get a win and help take some of the pressure off the team. If you don't keep the ball low in this park, or be too fine, you'll give up a walk and a ball in the air, and then you are suddenly down by three or four runs."

Does Ralston consider this outing his best of the season?

"Without a doubt," he quickly says. "Even if I had a comparable game in the past, this one came in the playoffs. That makes it the best. You win when it's on the line and that makes it the best."

As far as Johnson is concerned, his Wranglers have already accomplished a key goal for the early part of the season.

"I didn't necessarily think we had to come in here and win the first game, but the one thing we didn't want to happen was to come away from here without a win," Johnson said. "We didn't want to go home (Sunday) and have to win three games. It was very important to win one here."

But Johnson doesn't feel that the series has completely tilted to the side of his Wranglers.

"Midland has such good hitters that you are kind of shocked to see what Kris did to them," Johnson said. "It scares me to think what they might do to us tomorrow (Saturday). We have to just keep playing the best we can. And I think we are a very tired team right now. We got up at 5:30 (a.m. Friday) and that might play on us more for the second game than this one."

The best Midland can now do is split at home before heading to Wichita. The two teams play again today at 7 p.m. at Christensen in Game 2 of the five-game series. The winner advances to the TL Championship Series (seven games) Thursday against Shreveport, the East Division champion.

Wichita now has won five of their last six games at Christensen Stadium, and the thing that hurt Friday was the fact that the Wranglers scored eight runs without starting catcher Sal Fasano, who terrorized the Angels here three weeks ago. Fasano has a pulled hamstring muscle.

And if Midlanders are still holding out hope after the lop-sided blow Friday, there is still that golden goose egg to grab hold of. In 1975, Midland lost both games to Lafayette as shortstop Mike Sember nearly got run out of town after committing six errors in the two games.

However, Midland came back to tie the five-game series at 2-2 in Lafayette before heavy rains hit and forced a cancellation of Game 5. The two teams were named Texas League co-champions.

And guess who brought those old Cubs back? Mike Sember hit three home runs against Lafayette. Oh, the stuff that becomes legendary.

The 1995 Midland Angels look like they may have to perform some legendary feats over the next few days in order to pull this series out of the fire.

REBS: Bulldogs rush for only 91 yards

(From 1C)

Thurman, who was 3-of-8 for 84 yards in the first 20 plays, got right back to work a few plays later when he hit speedster Antwan Alexander for 49 yards. The play set up Lee's running game inside Socorro territory. From there the combination of Alex Strambler and Stephen Hunter rammed the ball down Socorro's throat for four plays until Strambler scored for the first time on a 6-yard run.

The first team defense then took the field for 20 plays and proved to be every bit as dominating as it was against El Paso Eastwood here last week. The Rebels allowed just 33 yards and only one first down in Socorro's first set. The defense was especially solid on the ground, allowing 16 yards on 11 Bulldog carries.

For the scrimmage, the Bulldogs rushed for only 91 yards and passed for 62, and only 17 on the ground and 11 in the air on the first team defense.

"As we got into the game, we dominated," Parchman said. "They are a better team than Eastwood was."

Socorro of District 2-5A did score when its second team offense exploded with what proved to be a lack of depth from the Rebels. On the Bulldogs' second set, Socorro rushed for 61 yards and passed for 45 on the second team defense before Frank Lugo took the ball in from one yard out. The lack of Rebel depth is a big worry for Parchman, especially with the season one week away.

"We don't have any depth to speak of," Parchman said. "If we get anyone hurt, it will be tough for us. We have to work on getting second players who can play. We have to get better next week."

After both teams completed the set plays, the two teams went through a 15-minute game situation. Lee's defense forced a Bulldog turnover as Norman picked off a pass and returned it to the Lee 48.

Methodically, the Rebels worked the ball down the field with the run and pass. The drive ended on Strambler's second touchdown of the scrimmage, again on a 6-yard run. The eight-play drive included three plays of 10 yards are better with a Thurman to Boyd 15-yard reception and 10-yard runs by Thurman and Strambler as the key plays. Brian Evans hit the scrimmage's only attempted extra point.

The scrimmage ended as the Bulldogs went three and out on Lee's first team defense. For the scrimmage, Thurman was 5-of-12 for 108 yards. Strambler rushed for 70 yards on 11 carries. As a team Lee gained 148 yards on 33 carries.

Lee will open regular season play next week with a third El Paso team in as many weeks. The Rebs will host maybe the best of the El Paso teams (Irvin) at 7:30 p.m. at Memorial Stadium.

Andretti wins first Winston Cup pole

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — John Andretti won the first pole of his Winston Cup career on Friday, setting an event record in gaining the top starting spot for the Southern 500 at Darlington Raceway.

■ Southern 500

Andretti, the nephew of retired racing great Mario Andretti and cousin of Indy-car star Michael Andretti, had a lap of 167.379 mph on the 1.366-mile Darlington track.

"I'm so happy about Friday, I hope Sunday gets canceled," said Andretti, whose first pole came after 56 Winston Cup events. "I'm still so nervous about this that I keep thinking I'll wake up and they'll take it away from me."

Andretti's fast lap in a Ford Thunderbird bested Geoff Bodine's lap of 166.998 set last year. The track record of 170.833 mph was established by Winston Cup points leader Jeff Gordon in qualifying for the TranSouth 400 in March.

Ricky Rudd, trying to extend to 12 his string of winning at least one race a year, was second at 167.186 mph.

Dale Earnhardt, who has won nine times on Darlington's egg-shaped oval, was third on Friday at 166.501. Dick Trickle was fourth, followed by Gordon, TranSouth 400 winner Sterling Marlin, Lake Speed, Ward Burton, Bodine and Hut Stricklin.

Friday's session set positions 1-20 in Sunday's starting grid. Among those who will have to face Saturday's second qualifying session that sets positions 21-38 are the last two Southern 500 winners, Mark Martin and Bill Elliott. Martin was 22nd at 164.183 and Elliott was 41st at 161.228 after brushing the wall coming off turn two.

Elliott said his car was running fast in practice and he thought he had a good shot at the pole.

"It was up to me to give it all I had," Elliott said. "And it was almost too much."

Three drivers among the top 10 in points — Ted Musgrave, Rusty Wallace and Michael Waltrip — also did not get in on their first qualifying attempts.

Longhorns try to concentrate on opener

HONOLULU (AP) — John Mackovic is making sure his 18th-ranked Texas Longhorns are in Hawaii for a purpose, not to enjoy the bright lights of Honolulu and the sands of Waikiki Beach.

"We didn't talk about it very much simply because we wanted our team to understand that this is an important first football game and not just a trip to Hawaii," Mackovic said as his squad prepared for Saturday's season-opener against Hawaii.

Mackovic, in his fourth season as head of the Longhorns, wants to see his squad focused on the game and not be affected by the distractions that Hawaii offers.

"Even though Hawaii didn't fare well last year (3-8-1), I know Bob Wagner," Mackovic said. "He'll have his team well-prepared.

"We're going to have to be careful and not look beyond this game. It's important we get off to a good start and my coaches and I have been preaching that to the team since fall practice began."

Although Texas finished last season at 8-4, including a post-season upset of North Carolina, it was ranked 76th in the nation in rushing offense and 64th in rushing defense.

A spring injury to top returning running back Priest Holmes and the decision of quarterback Shea Morenz to pursue a professional baseball career hasn't helped, but Mackovic feels good about the replacements, both newcomers to the program.

■ Radio: KRIL (1410 AM) 11 p.m.

The third running back on the depth chart is redshirt freshman Wane McGarity, who was not on the 1994 roster.

"Wane and Shon give us the kind of speed you have to have to be successful in today's game," Mackovic said. "If Shon gets around the corner, it's a foot race."

Filling Morenz's spot will be swift James Brown, who won all four of his starts last year. He completed 80 of 115 passes for 1,047 yards and 12 touchdowns and also rushed for 127 yards and two TDs as a redshirt freshman.

Hawaii knows what it's in for.

Defensive coach George Lumpkin knows what the Rainbows will be up against — a big offensive line and quickness in the backfield.

"They're a very balanced team that wants to run and pass the football," Lumpkin said. "We haven't really seen their running backs because they're so young, but we know what their tendencies were last year."

The key will be controlling the line of scrimmage by the Rainbows' front seven.

"They're a big team," Lumpkin said. "One thing about then, with their size, they have athletic ability. They can run real well, which will match up with us pretty good because we have good speed.

"Unfortunately,we don't have their size. A lot of times, we'll play big teams like this, but with not this much athletic ability."

OPEN: Pierce can't explain inconsistency

(From 1C)

tration deep into the stands, she looked as glum and stunned as she did when she lost in the fourth round of the French Open and the second at Wimbledon.

"I am really disappointed," Pierce said. "I have to be honest. You know, for me losing in the third round is just unexpected. I really felt like I was playing well, working hard, and I felt like I was ready."

Pierce couldn't explain why she has days when she plays sublimely, all her two-fisted power under control, and other days when she whacks shots wildly.

"The first set was totally like I was swimming up creek," she said. "Nothing was working. I was missing all my shots."

She settled down a little in the second, but still had to keep playing catchup to Frazier, ranked No. 21 and doing little more than pushing the ball back from side to side and waiting for Pierce to hit it out.

"Part of my plan was to move her around," Frazier said. "She hits the ball so well and so hard and deep that, if she is set, she can hit winners from anywhere. Even when I was running her, she was still hitting winners."

Frazier left the tour for six months in 1993 and her ranking dropped as low as 81.

"It was just personal reasons," she said, declining to explain her absence in more detail or why she changed her mind to return to tennis after planning to go to UCLA a couple of years ago. But she certainly seemed surprised to think of where she was then and where she is now.

"I never would have thought when I was getting ready to go to school that a few years later this is where I would be," she said. "This is great, and I know I look forward to going back to school. I can't really explain it. It is just exciting."

If Frazier can get past No. 12 Natasha Zvereva, a 6-4, 7-6 (7-5) victor over Ann Grossman, she would play the winner of the Steffi Graf-Chanda Rubin match.

Graf, the top seed, breezed past Nathalie Tauziat 6-3, 6-3 and Rubin beat Gigi Fernandez 7-6 (7-5), 6-1.

No. 3 Arantxa Sanchez Vicario beat Maria Jose Gaidano 6-3, 6-0; No. 9 Gabriela Sabatini crushed Sabine Appelmans 6-1, 6-1; No. 14 Mary Joe Fernandez beat Katrina Adams 6-3, 6-1; and unseeded 14-year-old Martina Hingis beat Patricia Hy-Boulais 4-6, 6-1, 6-4.

The only upset among the men was Byron Black's 6-4, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3 victory over No. 9 Thomas Enqvist. In other matches, No. 3 Thomas Muster beat Mark Woodforde 4-6, 6-2, 6-2, 6-4; No. 5 Michael Chang beat Stefano Pescosolido 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4; No. 8 Michael Stich struggled to defeat Hernan Gumy 6-3, 1-6, 6-2, 2-6, 6-3; No. 14 Jim Courier beat Sebastien Lareau 6-3, 6-4, 6-4; and No. 15 Todd Martin stopped the comeback of Mats Wilander 6-4, 6-2, 7-5.

"I played three normal sets and two terrible sets," Stich said. "I went from playing aggressive to so defensive in the second and fourth sets and just let him back into the match."

A&M: 1990 Aggies last non-win at home

(From 1C)

The Aggies have won every game at Kyle Field since a 20-20 tie with Baylor on Oct. 20, 1990. Slocum is 6-0 in season openers as head coach and the Aggies are a 15-point favorite.

But Slocum isn't fooled.

"It was an even game last year and we lost 11 guys who signed NFL contracts," Slocum said. "If they were even with us last year with a couple of big plays making the difference, then you have to say they have the advantage going into this ball game."

The Aggies do return multitalented Leeland McElroy, whose 59-yard run late in the game propelled the Aggies to last season's 18-13 victory.

McElroy specializes in kick returns but he'll be asked to carry a bigger burden this season as the starting tailback. He's poised for the Heisman Trophy watch.

"I'm team oriented, I'm not a selfish player," McElroy said. "I had to play in spurts and I'm content with that. I'm more concerned with a national title than I am with the Heisman Trophy."

The game will be the LSU coaching debut for Gerry DiNardo, after four seasons at Vanderbilt.

LSU quarterback Jamie Howard begins the season at the Tigers' No. 3 all-time passer with 4,665 yards. He needs 2,257 yards to pass Jeff Wickersham (6,921) to move into second place behind Tommy Hodson, 9,115 yards.

DiNardo is expecting a big season from Howard since backup sophomore Melvin Hill isn't battle-tested.

"I'm looking for consistency and good decisions from Jamie," DiNardo said. "I want him to play knowing this is a long season. I told him, 'You didn't come back for this game, you came back for the season.'"

DiNardo has six true freshmen in his two deep chart and there are seven redshirt freshmen who will also play against the Aggies.

"This (game) can really help them (freshmen) develop," DiNardo said. "There will be tough times during the game, jitters. Hopefully for the ones who we'll let play, it will be good for them."

Freshman Kevin Faulk will start at tailback and he'll be backed up by redshirt freshman Kendall Cleveland. Faulk was surprised at getting the starting nod.

"It was really hard work, plus, Kendall had heat problems," Faulk said. "I guess coach really wanted to see what I was made of."

Michigan 'swoosh' peeves some alums

DETROIT (AP) — A small change in Michigan's football uniforms — Nike's trademark "swoosh" added to the jersey's left breast — has a few, but not many alumni grumbling.

"This is not just any uniform," said alumnus John Bacon, 31. "This is a classic uniform. It's not a billboard to be sold."

The university announced last October a seven-year, $7 million deal with Nike. Michigan's 22 teams get Nike apparel and equipment worth a total of $1 million a year for seven years — plus more money for scholarships in women's sports and a sports writing fellowship.

The deal was cut when athletic director Joe Roberson got fed up with his coaches doing their own endorsement deals with sporting goods manufacturers.

MHS: Bulldog backfield adds depth from last year's team. The offense returns four and will have to make up for the huge loss of Roy Coats and his 1,416 yards rushing in 1994.

Midland High will bring back a backfield with more more depth than last year's one-man show. Leighton King and Demitrius Lee will give MHS strong fullbacks while Jerome Eldridge, Michael Van Dyke and Jeffery Arnold head a long list who will run at tailback.

The Bulldogs have more quality players battling it out for the quarterback spot. Senior Jeremy Pinner and junior Russel Dunlavy are the two top contenders to replace Craig Coleman, who threw for 744 yards in 1994. Add in Ky Edwards and coach Reeger has many options when it comes to choosing a chief signal caller. That's important with Reeger looking to air the ball out a little more this season.

"They are all three good quarterbacks," said Reeger, who has a career coaching mark of 122-73-4. "We have to find out which one is going to do it. Everybody has something to offer."

The triumvirate will be throwing the ball to a group of eager hands. Those waiting to catch the ball are Merlin McAlister, Sammy Powell, Carl Hickey and tight ends Brendan Morris, Russell Marlow and Michael Brandt.

Protecting the QB's and making holes for the running backs is a bigger offensive line (especially on the right side) than MHS has seen in a while. Left Tackle Matt Cobb (180 pounds), left guard Rodney Knous (175), center Dickie Russell (236), right guard Wilson Roberts (224) and Ruben Mendoza (211) are the big five upfront. Jeff Ortloff (205) and Eric Reyes (240) provide depth to the starting five. Reeger hopes the bulk has the necessary quickness in order to make it effective.

"We'll be a little bigger and little stronger than we've been in the past," said Reeger. "Once you get bigger then you have worry about getting quicker. That's part of our question right now. Did we get bigger or did we get bigger and quicker? If we did both, we'll be okay, if not, then we'll have a problem."

Overall, the Bulldogs are very excited about what the team can do offensively.

"Everyone looks strong and we have the enthusiasm," said quarterback Jeremy Pinner. "Last year they focused and keyed on Roy (Coats). This year we have three running backs and they won't have anybody to key on. That will balance it out. We also need to establish a good passing game."

The Bulldogs can talk about doing it on offense but for the Bulldogs to be successful, the defense, which returns five starters, will have to step up and prevent the opponents from making noise of their own. The Bulldogs know that means stopping the run, especially once they get into district action.

"What we have to do is stop the run," said starting middle linebacker Marcus Carlisle. "This is 4-5A, and these teams have all these big and fast running backs, so what we have to do is stop the run."

Stopping the run starts with a strong inside rushing defense. Joining Carlisle (224), a returning starter, are inside defensive tackles Will Wilson (228) and Tom Paul Howard (218). On the outside of the defensive line, quickness replaces the bulk on the inside. Defensive ends Titus Boyce (171) and Sean Butler (148) and outside linebackers Ricky Cunningham (186) and Chris Vasquez (179) will be expected to contain the outside run and also put pressure on the quarterback.

The secondary is experienced, and athleticism reigns supreme here. Ky Edwards, a returning starter, heads the list. The left cornerback and backup quarterback will be joined by another guy fighting for signal calling spot, Russel Dunlavy (weakside safety). Ryan Connell will take the right cornerback spot and Michael Van Dyke is the strong side safety.

Demitrius Lee and Craig Noland will provide backup power in the secondary and Rusty Pendleton (279) and Ruben Mendoza (217) give more support at defensive tackle. Leighton King will give Boyce relief at end.

If there is a spot where the Bulldogs really have no worries it is on the special teams. David Leaverton, an unanimous all-district selection, is almost automatic from close in as he didn't miss an extra point and went 7-for-9 on field goals. His 38.7 yards per punt average and ability to boom kickoff through the endzone gives MHS an advantage in the all-important field position war.

Holder Jeremy Pinner and deep snapper Dickie Russell are just as automatic and will make certain Leaverton is able to do his job.

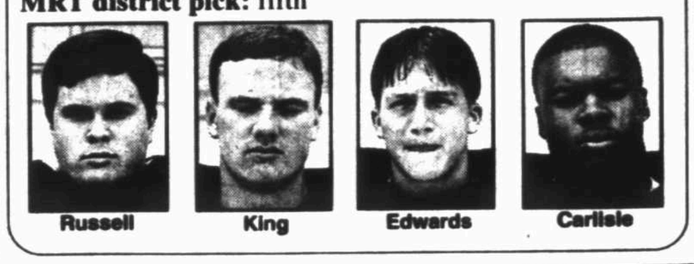

"Special teams is one-third of the football team," said Leaverton. "If you don't have good special teams, you're in trouble. Coach Reeger has done a good job with that. I think when we have a punt and we're in a hole, we're going to be able to get a good 50-60 yard punt to get us out and switch the sides of the field."

Midland High, who hasn't seen postseason action since 1951, will take its lineup into the Sept. 8 opener at Frienship High School. The Bulldogs will open up the District 4-5A schedule against Midland Lee at Midland Memorial Stadium on Sept. 29. The Bulldogs will follow the tough intracity matchup with a game versus Abilene Cooper and Odessa Permian. It is a stretch of games that will probably determine the fate of the 1995 Bulldogs.

MHS kicker cherishes chances

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

The field goal opportunity is the true test of a kicker. With nothing but pressure on all around, thoughts race through his mind a million miles-a-minute. It is the moment that Midland High's David Leaverton truly cherishes.

"I just love kicking. It's you and no one else," Leaverton said. "That's where you find out about a kicker — if they are mentally tough and if they can block every thing out and they've got to make the kick. I'll be up for the challenge."

Kicking the ball through the goal posts is something Midland High senior David Leaverton and his golden toe (excuse me, paw) have done better than anyone else in District 4-5A.

Last year, Leaverton, who ranked eighth among all scorers in 4-5A, lead all kickers in field goals made (7), longest field goal (49 yards), scoring for kickers (43 points), and percentage of extra points converted (22-for-22). In fact, Leaverton was 7-for-9 during the season in field goals attempted. With this success comes pressure and that is fine for Leaverton.

"It's good if you have high expectations and I have used that as an incentive," said Leaverton. "People are going to be looking at me for next year, and people are expecting a lot from me. I'm not going to let them down."

Leaverton, an unanimous all-district selection at kicker, also excelled outside field goal range. The senior kicked 45 percent of his kickoffs through the end zone and 70 percent were touchbacks. In all, the opponents average field position was the 20.5 yard line.

Leaverton also ranked second in punting average with a 38.7 average. The 17-year-old ranked second in 4-5A in punting with a 38.7 average, but his 45 percent success rate 19-of-42) of punting the ball inside the 20 might be more impressive than the average.

"He's done a good job for us," said Midland High head football coach Ronnie Reeger. "He's a returning all-district player. He's very consistent punter and very consistent kicker. It's all positive."

Leaverton does not only excel on the football field, but was also a member of the Midland High basketball team last season. Off the field, he is a standout in the classroom, ranking 55th in a class of 514. He is a Texas Scholar, National Honor Society member, and winner of the National Mathematics Award. Leaverton gives credit for his success to his belief in God.

"Everything I've got is from the Lord Jesus Christ and owe it all to him," said Leaverton. "I got to use what he gave me to the best of my ability. That's what I do with every aspect of my life. If I'm going to do something, I'll do it with everything, not just half way."

Right now, Leaverton has been offered a full scholarship from Rice University, where he would kick and punt for the Owls in the Western Athletic Conference. Some 14 others have expressed interest, including Texas, Texas Tech, Oklahoma and Oklahoma State. Though Leaverton wants badly to take his kicking game to the next level, he knows his job with the Bulldogs should come first.

"I have no idea where I want to go at this point," said Leaverton. "I owe it to these guys to keep my eyes focused on this season, and after the season, then I'll start looking at colleges. Right now, I've got Midland High to think about and that's what I'm going to do."

Knicks to get $1 million, draft pick from Heat for Riley tampering

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks will receive $1 million and a 1996 first-round draft pick from the Miami Heat as part of today's settlement terms on the tampering charge concerning former Knicks coach Pat Riley.

In return, the Knicks will withdraw their charges against the Heat and permit the Heat to pursue hiring Riley.

"I am pleased that the parties have been able to resolve this matter between themselves, and I believe that the agreement they have reached is a constructive one that will serve the long-term best interests of both teams and their fans," commissioner David Stern said in a statement.

Executives of both teams met with Stern for nearly eight hours Aug. 4, giving testimony on the case.

Cowboys named in airline ticket scheme

N.Y.T. News Service

IRVING, Texas — The names of at least two current and three former Dallas Cowboys have surfaced in an investigation of an airline ticket scheme, according to a television news report.

The report — made by the Dallas television station KXAS-Channel 5 — said that the current Cowboys Michael Irvin and Charles Haley and the former Cowboys Alfredo Roberts, Everson Walls and Ron Springs had purchased American Airlines tickets at either reduced prices from an agent for the company or were given the tickets by the agent.

A copy of the police report indicates that the agent is the focus of the investigation. It said that he has made as many as 116 fraudulent tickets in the past year and either sold or given them to various people, including these Cowboys.

A Cowboys spokesman said the the police have told the club that Irvin and Haley are not suspects in the case, but added that the investigation has just begun. The police also said it was possible that other Cowboys were given or bought the fraudulent tickets.

Irvin said: "I bought tickets from the agent several times. My feeling was they were legit. I don't know anything about the American Airlines system or how it works."

Fleming jailed for DWI

IRVING, Texas (NYT) — Cowboys wide receiver Cory Fleming, 24, was released from a Dallas County Jail early yesterday morning after he was arrested and charged with driving while intoxicated, police records show.

Fleming's blood-alcohol level was .15, according to the police report filed by arresting officer Kevin Mansell. The legal blood-alcohol level in Texas is .10.

Fleming was traveling on the northbound service road of Central Expressway near Park Lane when Mansell pulled him over on suspicion of DWI, the report said.

AUTOMOTIVE TODAY & Classified

Dear Doctor: I own a 1990 Jeep Wrangler with a six-cylinder engine and 80,000 miles on it. On a recall, the fuel sending unit was replaced. Within a few days I started experiencing the following: the engine starts fine and can be driven 8 miles, then stalls out. After waiting a few minutes, it will restart, run several miles, stall out and not restart. I have had it back to the dealership twice and they are unable to correct the problem. I took the Jeep to my own mechanic; he replaced the fuel filter and blew out the lines. The same problem still exists. I am a teacher and need my Jeep.
Cincerea L.

Dear Cincerea: Stalling problems can be difficult to locate, however, the problem should not be hard to find because your Jeep has a common pattern. The dealer should hook up a fuel pressure tester (taped to the outside of the windshield passenger side) and a tachometer. You test-drive the jeep along with a passenger. The passenger will monitor the fuel pressure and tachometer. Upon stalling, take note if fuel pressure is present, and if the tachometer is moving. Next, check the secondary side of the ignition. Spark has to be checked at the spark plugs.

Dear Doctor: Hoping you can answer a couple of questions regarding performance power chips for my 1990 Mustang 5.0 liter, with 46,000 miles. How much does a power chip cost? Will it harm my engine? Can I install the chip myself, and will it really increase power?
David B.

Dear David: Power chips do improve power and performance. They also void the warranty, and some increase emissions out the tail pipe. Altering emissions is against the law and subject to a large fine. Average cost $100-up. It is very simple to install, taking an hour or less. I have never heard of any computer power chip hurting the engine. Check with the local speed shop in your area for the different chips that are available.

Dear Doctor: I ordered a brand new Ford F150 4x4 pickup truck in December, 1993. During the first few days, I noticed some squeaking of the front bushings. In February, I had a snow plow installed. The front bumper bolts had a lot of rust on them. Around the truck there are traces of red paint. The color of the truck is black and gray. I believe the truck was repainted. The dealer said the truck has electro-plating. Next, the front hubs should be automatic. I do not believe this was a new truck.
C.M.A.

Dear C.M.A.: Rust will build up on unprotected bolts, nuts, and threads in a matter of four to six weeks. The red traces of paint are probably from the primer coat. As for the front four wheel drive hubs, check the standard list of equipment that comes with your truck. It seems that there has been a lack of communication between the dealership and you. A dry front rubber bushing is not uncommon with any manufacturer. I suggest you talk to the general sales manager about your concerns. I cannot see how you could get anything but a new vehicle when you ordered the truck you wanted. If the truck was not equipped the way you ordered it, you should not have taken delivery.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1989 Ford T-bird with 64,000 miles and have gone through five sets of brakes. From day one, I felt the brakes did not stop properly; I have to push down rather hard to stop the car. Once the car was recalled for a brake problem. The other problem is the transmission seems to slip when stepping on the gas pedal. Both problems have been checked frequently, but it never occurs when the car is in for service. Any advice would be appreciated.
Donna R.

Dear Donna: The recall on your T-bird had to do with front brake caliper and front stabilizer interference. There are many technician service bulletins on the braking system on your car. Everything from updated rotors and pads to shoes and installation procedures. I have seen a lot of front rotors that go out of round and cause a pulsation and vibration while trying to stop at 40 mph and higher. I suggest you go back to the Ford dealer get a copy of all T.S.B.S. If the dealer will not provide you with them, call some of the local repair shops in your area. Ask them if they have an Alldata or Mitchells on Demand data system. The shop can print out all the T.S.B.S. on the brake system for a nominal fee. You might also want to have an independent shop check the brake system for you, and that includes a road test. The automatic overdrive transmission and the braking system have different characteristics than that of older cars. The transmission should also be checked by a transmission shop.

All aboard the skylark

By Bob Plunkett
Special to the Reporter-Telegram

The sleek shape scooted past me on a parking lot overlooking beautiful Traverse Bay, Mich., and I had to wonder: What was that good-looking thing?

Close inspection of the label revealed a new Buick of compact proportions and coupe configuration with snappy low nose and airy wrap of windows defining a cabin designed for up to five passengers.

Nearby, I found the sedan variation.

It presented the same racy prow and high tail treatment but added two more doors for the convenience of backseat riders, then tailored the rear quarter of the roof to suit conservative tastes.

These two translations of a compact platform appear under the same nameplate as 1996 models by Buick, but each bears scant resemblance to its predecessor.

Skylark: It's never looked this good.

Stodgy comes to mind as the one-word image of prior renditions of Skylark, smallest label in the Buick fleet. Often overlooked by Buick shoppers in favor of bigger models rigged with more advanced systems, Skylark stood in the shadow of snazzy designs like Riviera.

For 1996, though, Skylark earns a chance to shine with that new exterior styling, engine innovations under the hood and an interior strategy which brings important safety gear plus special comfort fittings.

With these new systems, Skylark now takes its place in the Buick line as an affordable response to all those comPacts imported from Asia.

The fact that Skylark offers coupe as well as sedan editions means two distinct personalities show up beneath this badge, each with unique features.

Skylark, the coupe, looks more daring, even sporty.

Skylark, the sedan, looks dignified, and it behaves in a more traditional, conservative manner.

Although the platform for coupe and sedan remains essentially the same as used for last year's model, everything else changes, beginning with new exterior styling which concentrates on nose and tail elements.

Buick's designers pay particular attention to seat construction, with supportive elements designed not only to feel good upon contact but also later, down the road after hundreds of miles at one sitting.

Skylark benefits from Buick's attention to seating with new front seats, available as either sporty buckets or a bench split in 55/45 ratio.

Then note the instrument panel.

A new treatment was demanded to make extra space for the addition of a passenger-side air bag so all front passengers receive protection from frontal crash forces.

What about Skylark's go-power?

This also receives attention due to a new 4-cylinder base engine and improvements in an automatic transmission offered for both standard plant and optional V6.

Skylark's in-line four, a General Motors engine once called the Quad 4, sounded rough in earlier applications because it lacked balanced shafts to smooth out vibrations.

The latest one has a new twin cam on top, revised camshaft timing and increased displacement of 2.4 liters. These revisions smooth out the system considerably, while also increasing mid-range torque and enhancing the fuel economy numbers.

It still produces 150 horsepower, but torque improves to 150 lbs/ft at 4400 rpm and fuel numbers bump up for city/highway driving to 22/32 mpg.

Buick's 3.1-liter V6, delivering 155 hp, continues as an excellent low-cost option for base and Skylark Limited, but becomes a standard feature of Gran Sport.

Low-speed torque is substantial with this V6: Depress the accelerator and Skylark leaps to action.

Both engines connect to GM's electronic automatic 4-speed transmission, smoothest shifter in the industry.

Standard equipment on base Skylark starts with its front-wheel-drive format and an independent suspension system featuring MacPherson strut design in front.

Steering consists of a precise rack and pinion mechanism linked to power assistance. The brakes use discs in front and drums in back, with power equipment and links to anti-lock and traction controls.

The interior of Skylark's base model in coupe and sedan format contains an array of equipment often considered optional, such as air conditioning, power door locks, tilting steering wheel and stereo sound.

Skylark Limited adds power windows, cruise control, electric mirrors and 14-inch polycast wheels.

Skylark Gran Sport brings sporty hardware like bucket seats, tachometer, gran touring suspension components and big-16-inch aluminum wheels.

Remade from top to bottom, Buicks new range of Skylark sedans and coupes bear a vague relationship to their prior models. A new exterior design coupled with radical changes in passenger comfort and a new engine mean that the new Skylark really is new.

More doors, outdoors

The new, revamped Geo tracker offers four-door versatility in a light, compact package. The addition of two more doors is not the only bonus: the on-demand four-wheel drive provides plenty of traction and the redesigned interior gives new levels of comfort.

BOB PLUNKETT
Special to the Reporter-Telegram

Steep gravel slopes and muddy flats of a challenging off-road course carved from infield spaces at Wisconsin's Road American race track failed to daunt forward progress of the new sport-utility wagon, thanks to on-demand traction flowing from all four wheels.

This vehicle's engine, with four cylinders aboard and a single cam mounted on top, only generated 95 horsepower but its aluminum block compensated by paring excess weight.

The plant produced adequate torque in low range to keep 15-inch all-season radials rolling through all that loose gravel and gummy goo.

In the cabin, two high-back buckets stood in front of a 2-person rear bench, with space in the back for camping gear or luggage.

One more thing: This latest sport-utility, wearing the worldly badge of Geo, sported four passenger doors.

Seems the pint-size Tracker finally grew up.

Geo's midget sport-utility, produced in Canada in a joint agreement between General Motors and Suzuki of Japan, formerly carried only two doors in a wee version which conformed to hardtop and convertible formats.

It was an austere little thing but, as the no-frills marketing position implied, highly affordable.

Tracker remains affordable, only for the 1996 line Geo adds a big-brother Hardtop wagon with four doors, on-demand 4-wheel-drive and some interior perks to make this one feel comfortable while you're plowing through rough off-pavement territory such as the trail of dirt and mud at Road America.

Adding a 4-door wagon to subcompact Tracker creates a daunting array of sport-utility wagons for Chevrolet and its

Geo line of captive imports.

Both variations pack a power-assisted steering system of recirculating ball design, and both have power assisted brakes with front discs.

For safety, all Trackers this year receive dual air bags to shield front seat riders from frontal crashes.

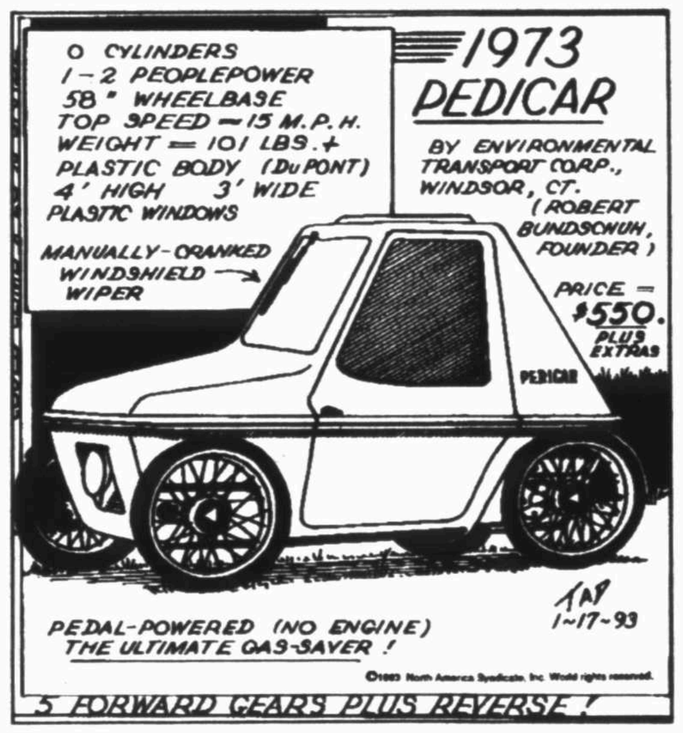

A concealed steel frame forms a protective safety cage around the passenger compartment, with front and rear crumple zones built into the chassis structure.

Daytime running lights, which consume less energy than full lighting and operate automatically with the engine, make Tracker more visible to other vehicles.

Inside, Tracker's spaciousness may surprise you.

Because of the wheelbase extension to create the 4-door edition, Tracker has more room for people. The tall stance of the Hardtop's superstructure sets up good vertical space too, with more than 40 inches of headroom, for instance, in front and back seat positions.

1973 Pedicar

Here's the most economical kind of car you could imagine: no fuel required, and no batteries needed— except to occasionally light the single headlight!

With pilot model fully developed and displayed in 1972, the Pedicar was slated to go into regular production in early 1973. Hopes were high for the project. It was publicized in an October 11, 1972 article in the Milwaukee Journal, as well as in Newsweek (December 4, 1972) and Popular Science (February 1973) to name a few sources.

The ultra-lightweight, plastic Pedicar came equipped with bucket seat, seat belts, safety reflectors, and a rear view mirror. A speedometer, radio, sunroof, and turn signals were optional. But the object was to keep the Pedicar lightweight, so only the bare essentials were included as standard equipment.

The Pedicar had a three-way pedal system. The driver could pump with one foot, use both feet alternately, or for "an extra surge of power," pump both pedals simultaneously.

In the June 1976 Popular Mechanics, a reader wrote to bicycle columnist Eugene A. Sloane to complain that the manufacturer of the Pedicar had not replied to his letters of inquiry. Sloane replied that the company had not remained in business for long, and added that he and his teenaged son had tried a Pedicar and were disappointed because they both had to put out much effort to pedal it just a few blocks.

Why had it been so tiring? Was the hoopla about the Pedicar being easy to pedal and "requiring little more effort than walking" just so much hot air? Or did Sloane and his son happen to try out a sample that was out of adjustment?

No one could build such a vehicle to sell for as little as $550 now, but a lightweight pedal car—scientifically designed and geared so it would require little more effort than pedaling a $100 bike—could be a hot selling item for, perhaps, $1500.
