First-day-of-school blues

The first day of school is a traumatic experience for most youngsters. Five-year-old Allison Miller needed a few extra moments of comfort from her mother Susan this morning as she faced her first day of kindergarten at Bonham Elementary School.

Wonder and a little fear fill Day One

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

There were many large eyes attached to little bodies that walked into Patricia Rex's kindergarten class at Bonham Elementary School this morning

A few of those eyes had giant tears which spilled out onto freshly scrubbed cheeks, but most of the eyes were clear and wide with amazement.

It was the first day of school, the first day of 13 years of education and the first day for many of these children to be with a roomful of strangers without their parents for any amount of time.

"Sometimes we have one or two children that cry," Mrs. Rex, a third-year Midland Independent School District kindergarten teacher, said with a laugh, "but usually it's the mothers that cry.

"When the children do cry, we just give them a little extra-special attention," she continued. "It's just the initial shock of telling mama 'bye.' "

Or the initial shock of mama telling her child "bye."

"If you cry, you're going to make Mommy cry," Allison Miller's mother said to her. As Allison wiped a few tears away with the back of her tiny hand, her mother implored with a slight tremor and a big hug, "Don't make Mommy cry."

The kindergarten room was crowded with over 25 new students plus many parents and many teddy bears who waited patiently in their designated chairs and perched on desk-tops to welcome the children and speed them on their way to a "Beary Good Way to Start School."

Nathan Lee stood next to the oversized teddy bear that sat at the front of the room smiling as his mother took a quick picture. Sybil Bisbee, her blond hair pulled into two tiny pigtails, stood quietly looking at her fellow classmates with large eyes while her mother whispered in her ear. A quick nod from Sybil and a loving pat on her bottom from her mom sent her toward the group of children sitting on the rug.

Although projections for kindergarten class enrollment were high at Bonham, they weren't as high as the actual enrollment, according to Mrs. Rex. Last year she said she had 25 students in her morning and 23 in her afternoon class. This year, she sighed, pre-registration figures warned her she would have 29 in the morning class and 36 in the afternoon.

While Home Economics Cooperative Education (HECE) students from the high schools are employed as aides in all MISD kindergarten classes, Mrs. Rex said her high school aides would be late on the first day so volunteers from VIPS (Volunteers in Public Schools) would be helping throughout the day.

"We'll have a whole staff of VIPS out here today to help give directions and that type of thing," Mrs. Rex explained. "And (VIPS member) Pat Evans will be helping in the kindergarten class during the day."

Starting at about 8:20 a.m., the students were greeted at the door by Mrs. Rex; their large eyes wandering shyly around the room and back again to their new teacher. They then proceeded to Mrs. Evans, who asked them their names before pinning colored paper bear name tags on them.

Parents wandered around the room with their children, pointing out the bright bulletin boards to their silent child and talking quietly to them before sending them to join the group of students who gathered on the floor to listen to Mrs. Evans' story.

"I love you. Have fun and remember where to wait for me. In front of the school — don't cross the street," Nathan Lee's mother told him.

Nathan nodded obediently and

Jaruzelski begs for no protests

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The government, preparing for protest demonstrations on Solidarity's anniversary, today ordered vodka rationing and newspapers followed up on Premier Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's plea for Poles not to demonstrate Tuesday.

Newspapers said the Trade Ministry was limiting vodka, Poland's favorite drink, to a half quart per Pole per month. There was no indication of how long the order will be in effect. Liquor rationing had recently been lifted and Poles who could afford it could buy any amount.

In another effort to keep crowds out of the streets Tuesday, the second anniversary of the signing of the Gdansk accords in 1980 that recognized workers' rights to independent unions, Polish Television said it will air highlights of the Polish team's play in the World Cup soccer games in Spain earlier this summer.

Newspapers said Poles should avoid street protests, which underground Solidarity leaders are calling for in order to demonstrate the suspended union's strength.

The Banner of Youth said young people, by staying home, could show support "for common reason, for work, for our economic and political sovereignty, which can be strengthened by common effort, not in street fighting." The Communist daily Trybuna Ludu said authorities could not "retreat" from enemies of socialism trying to "throw us off the chosen road of agreement into the blind alley of confrontation. At stake in this game is the future of Poland and her truly socialist shape."

"Martial law can be liked or disliked, but it is a law which must be respected," Jaruzelski told cadets at a military school in Poznan, western Poland, on Sunday. "Disturbing this law will not be tolerated."

Jaruzelski reiterated a promise to end martial law by the end of the year if the country is calm.

"This (calm) situation is made by people. May people deprived of reason not hold Poland back again. May Aug. 31 not be stained by excesses and irresponsible demonstrations," he said.

The Foreign Ministry summoned Western correspondents and warned them against distortion in their reports on events related to Solidarity's anniversary. Some reporters took the meeting, the first like it in at least two years, as a signal that their coverage could be limited or that they could be expelled.

At the same time, the military prosecutor's office said 27 people had been arrested Saturday for distributing leaflets calling for pro-Solidarity demonstrations. The arrests were the most reported in one day for months, but it was not clear whether they had all occurred in Warsaw.

The hardline army newspaper Zolnierz Wolnosci (Soldier of Freedom) reported that Polish and Soviet troops "were improving their skills" in joint military exercises around Warsaw.

Solidarity may be fighting for its life

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Two years after its birth in a maelstrom of strikes that brought sweeping concessions from the communist government, the Solidarity union is fighting for its life.

The union, suspended and driven underground in the martial law crackdown last Dec. 13, is urging defiant mass demonstrations on Tuesday to mark its yecond anniversary, despite sharp warnings from the martial law regime.

The confrontation is shaping up as a major test of nerves in which the government may try to break the spirit of solidarity, while the union's fugitive leaders test just how tough the government intends to be.

"I don't think this will be a final showdown," one Polish journalist and longtime union observer said. "I think one reason for the protest action is a desire to check just how steely the nerves are, or the extent of the authorities' reponse."

Some observers believe that any major demonstrations Tuesday could give the martial law regime an excuse to withdraw official recognition of the independent union, which remains in effect despite the martial law suspension and the internment of Solidarity leaders.

Solidarity was registered by the government in November 1980, after being launched in August of that year as a result of strikes that swept the nation.

In recent weeks, the state media has stepped up its campaign against Solidarity "extremists," and commentators now speak of rebuilding Polish unions from scratch rather than reviving the Solidarity federation as it was before the suspension.

Trybuna Ludu, the Communist Party's national daily, has suggested that new unions be built from the membership of Solidarity as well as the branch and autonomous unions, its rivals during strikes and protests last year.

The branch and autonomous unions, generally considered loyal to the government, sprang up after Solidarity had succeeded in sapping workers away from the old, pro-government and uncritical Central Council of Trade Unions.

"Nothing final is going to materialize from all this," the Polish journalist and union observer said.

Arafat leaves Beirut, enroute to Greece

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — PLO chairman Yasser Arafat, his Palestinian legions driven from their shattered Beirut enclave by Israeli troops and scattered through the Arab world, boarded a converted Greek car ferry today and sailed for a new home in exile.

Two American warships escorted the Atlantis out of the Beirut harbor while Arafat, who vowed to carry on the fight against Israel "until we win," stood on deck in his familiar black-and-white checkered kaffiyeh headress, smiling and flashing a victory sign with his hand.

Lebanon's state radio said Arafat was heading for an official visit to Greece at the invitation of Socialist Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou before going to the Tunisian capital of Tunis. But Arafat and his spokesmen have not said where the guerrilla leader will set up his new base after leaving Beirut, his stronghold for the past 12 years.

Arafat's chief spokesman, Mahmoud Labadi, who left with the PLO chairman, said earlier the ship might stop at Larnaca, Cyprus, on its way to Greece.

Nine warships from the U.S. 6th Fleet and the French Navy were cruising off the harbor as the single-smokestack, luxurious-looking Atlantis put to sea. Lebanon radio said American ships and one French frigate were to escort the ship to its destination.

A throng of well-wishers jammed the port area and a party of at least 30 people, including bodyguards with their faces obscured by kaffiyehs that left only slits for their eyes, accompanied Arafat aboard the ship.

A delegation of Lebanese leftist leaders and former Moslem prime ministers boarded the ship with Arafat to say farewell, but left 15 minutes later. The ship, which appeared to be a well-appointed passenger craft, then set sail.

As it put to sea, 11 cannon salvos boomed in the background, followed by four other rounds to salute the departing guerrilla chieftain as he left his Israeli-surrounded west Beirut redoubt.

"I am leaving the city, but my heart is here," Arafat had said earlier.

He arrived in a black Mercedes under escort by French legionnaires and was greeted by a scene of chaos at the U.S. Marine-controlled port that has been the disembarking point for all but 1,000-2,000 of the PLO fighters trapped by the Israelis in Beirut.

Despite veto, Reagan confident he'll win over Congress

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — He lacks the votes now, but President Reagan believes winning his newest spending showdown with Congress is "difficult but do-able," a White House official says.

"We start from a position that we have started from many times before, and that's behind," White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said after Reagan ignored advice of Republican congressional leaders Saturday and vetoed a $14.2 billion supplemental appropriations bill.

The measure carried funds for military pay, emergency relief for Lebanon, the administraton's Caribbean Basin foreign aid program and a variety of domestic programs for the remainder of the current fiscal year.

The extra money is needed to pay for items which were added to the fiscal 1982 budget and for items that cost more than originally estimated. The fiscal year ends Sept. 30.

In a sternly worded veto message, Reagan accused Congress of trying to sneak through "unwarranted spending increases" he had previously vetoed.

The president said the bill "would bust the budget by nearly a billion dollars. It provides an unacceptable total of $918 million in unrequested and unwarranted increases" in programs for college students, the elderly and the disadvantaged.

In vetoing the bill, Reagan took the unprecedented step of diverting Social Security and income tax withholding money from military paychecks to help come up with the money needed to meet Tuesday's payroll for the nation's military.

Speakes said Reagan expects Congress will act quickly and pass a new supplemental appropriation before the next military payroll Sept. 15.

Without supplementary appropriations, some federal agencies will be unable to meet payrolls and some programs will have to end. In the past, such situations have lasted only a few days until Congress approved more money.

Democratic leaders in Congress lashed out at Reagan's veto over the weekend and promised an attempt would be made to override.

Sen. Alan Cranston of California, the Democratic Whip, said it would be "difficult to get the two-thirds vote in both houses necessary to override the veto, but I do not deem that to be 'mission impossible.' "

NASA officials worried veto could delay launch

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — President Reagan's weekend veto of a $14.2 billion supplemental spending bill may delay the next launch of the space shuttle, officials say.

About 3,400 workers — or half the work force — at the Johnson Space Center are employed under the civil service and space center spokesman Steve Nesbitt says preparations for the shuttle's launch Nov. 11 could not continue without them.

The Kennedy Space Center, in Cape Canaveral, Fla., would shut if forced to lay off its 2,100 civil service workers, said spokesman Hugh Harris.

The supplemental bill Reagan vetoed Saturday would have provided money to cover cost-of-living raises and promotions not included in the president's original budget.

In addition to the space center, the veto could affect 27 government offices and the salaries of 3 million military personnel.

Reagan said the supplemental bill exceeded his domestic programs request by nearly $1 billion.

Midland man killed in wreck

One Midland man is dead and another is in serious condition following a far westside motorcycle accident early Sunday morning.

Killed was Robert Wayne Adkins, 23, of Route 4, Katie Lane. He was the driver of a 1977 Suzuki that went out of control and struck a guard rail and a fence along Loop 250 a half-mile north of Interstate 20 about 5:30 A.M. Sunday.

In serious condition with multiple fractures at Midland Memorial Hospital this morning was 25-year-old Richard J. Pitts of 121-D North Glenwood, a passenger on Adkins' bike.

According to police, Adkins was southbound on Loop 250 and lost control of the motorcycle on a curve. He died of multiple head and internal injuries. Services are pending at Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Chinese expected to approve reforms

PEKING (AP) — The Communist Party Congress meets this week for the first time in five years and is expected to put its seal of approval on the liberal reforms carried out by Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping.

With the emphasis on modernizaton and stability, the 12th Party Congress will put an end to the worship of the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung and, according to foreign observers, vindicate Deng.

Deng, 78, twice purged for opposing Maoist policies that promoted ideals of class struggle and persecuted intellectuals, is believed firmly in control of the government.

The congress convenes Wednesday for the first time since August 1977 and is expected to follow the blueprint for reform set by Deng in a major speech to the Politburo in August 1980.

Composed mostly of Deng supporters, it probably will make sweeping changes in the party constitution and organizaton, then trim its 39 million members by calling on each one to re-register in what some observers say would amount to a purge of leftists.

Half the members entered the party during the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution — now denounced as a disaster masterminded by leftists, many of whom lacked even a primary or secondary school education.

The congress, as previously reported, will abolish the posts of chairman and six vice-chairmen.

Deng is expected to resign as vice chairman, but will continue to play a crucial role in party affairs. He is expected to head a party committee of elderly advisers and a new state military commission under the National People's Congress, not the party's central committee.

The Congress also will elect a new central committee and a new discipline inspection commission and strengthen the party secretariat, now run by Hu Yaobang and Premier Zhao Ziyang.

Hu, one of Deng's closest associates, will retain the party's highest post as general-secretary.

The council of elders is expected to include most of the current, elderly members of the Politburo. Its creation is regarded as a tactic to eliminate not only the elderly and infirm but those who oppose the policies of Deng.

It is not known who will be elected to the Politburo or whether it will have a standing committee. But abolishing the posts of chairman and vice chairmen would in effect abolish the standing committee of the Politburo.

Andrews man dies in traffic accident

ANDREWS — An Andrews man died when his car went out of control and rolled on top of him near here early Sunday morning.

Pronounced dead on arrival at Permian General Hospital in Andrews was 21-year-old Jesus Isidro Vela.

According to the Department of Public Safety, Vela's 1978 Ford was southbound at an apparent high rate of speed on U.S. 385 a mile south of Andrews when it left the road about 2:30 a.m. Sunday and rolled one-half time.

Vela was partially ejected and suffered crushing injuries. His body was taken to the Singleton Funeral Home in Andrews. Services are pending.

Local man in serious condition after being stabbed in fight

A man was in serious condition at Midland Memorial Hospital this morning after a fight late Sunday night at Hogan Park.

Gregorio S. Collazo, 19, of 1402 Belmont, suffered stab wounds to the back and right side during a fight with another man on the parking lot of a ballfield at the eastside park about 11:45 p.m. Sunday, according to police. An investigation is continuing.

The theft of $11,000 worth of construction equipment, including a $7,000 laser level, resulted in the arrest of two transients who were tracked down by a police dog.

The theft occurred about 2 a.m. today at the Heritage Center office complex under construction at Loraine Street and Michigan Aveune. The suspects, a 46-year-old man and a 16-year-old youth, both from out of town, were tracked by a police dog and were found lying on some cardboard in a vacant lot at Loraine and Colorado Street shortly afterward. The construction equipment was found in some nearby bushes, according to police. Formal charges are expected to be filed sometime today.

A 12-year-old girl who was shot in the face Saturday night remained in serious condition in the critical care unit of Midland Memorial Hosptial this morning.

Kristina Lynn Guentert of 4809 Teakwood Trace underwent three hours of surgery after being hit with an apparent stray bullet as she stepped from the family car on the parking lot of the Taco Plaza restaurant, South Big Spring Street and West Dakota Avenue, about 10:45 Saturday.

The bullet damaged several teeth and lodged near her spinal cord, according to her father, 35-year-old Joseph J. Guentert. Although police are still investigating the incident, it is believed gunfire erupted about five blocks from the restaurant after a pickup truck ran into a house at 1200 W. Dakota Ave., a minute or so before the girl was hit.

Crime aganist ordinary citizens increases in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Robbers are turning their attention to ordinary citizens walking the streets as more and more businesses tighten their security measures, police say.

Lt. Allen Tharling said the number of people "beaten, stabbed, pistol whipped or shot" has sharply increased in the past month.

Fire breaks out in Dallas hospital

DALLAS (AP) — Dense, acrid smoke from a three-alarm fire filled a 12-story hospital today and forced evacuation of dozens of frightened patients, including many from cardiac care units.

No injuries were reported, but authorities hurried to move patients and accompanying medical equipment to safe areas of the private Medical City Dallas Hospital, fire officials said.

All but one elevator in the hospital ceased to operate during the emergency.

The fire, reported at 12:09 a.m. today, sent smoke billowing up from the first-floor storage closet through a dirty linen chute to most floors, said Dallas Fire Department Arson Captain Don Howard. The cause of the blaze has not yet been determined, he said.

The smoke was first reported on the 12th floor — a cardiac care facility — and patients were moved to lower floors, Howard said.

Smoke continued to fill the 349-bed hospital and rescue personnel and nurses hurried to protect patients on the fifth floor up from the smoke, officials said.

"We actually didn't get very many of them moved out, but the nurses are helping them up there," Howard said. "We'd have brought them all down here if the elevators were running."

At least 50 patients — most of them clad in bathrobes and several clinging to wheelchairs and intravenous fluid bottles — congregated in the first-floor hospital lobby after walking down from higher floors.

"I smelled the smoke and I thought maybe my cigarette wasn't out real good. Then I went to the hall and it was filled with smoke," said one 10th-floor patient from Dallas who asked not to be identified.

"The smoke was so bad I had to run and get a wet towel to go back down the hall," he said. "I was walking down the 10 flights and I came upon this lady trying to get down holding an IV bottle in one hand and the railing in the other. So I helped her down."

Fire and emergency vehicles line the street behind Medical City Hospital in Dallas early this morning after a three-alarm fire broke out in the ground floor of the 12-story facility. Smoke and fire spread upward through a laundry shaft, causing evacuations of the upper floors. According to fire department officials, there were no reports of injuries.

Hospital patient Ed Baker of nearby Richardson said a nurse warned him of the fire, but told him not to leave his seventh-floor room.

"I smelled a little more of that acrid smoke and said to myself 'I'm getting out of here,'" Baker said.

Fire officials enlisted the aid of bystanders and hospital orderlies to handle the patients. Patients were moved from the fifth, seventh, ninth, 10th, 11th, and 12th floors, but no accurate count of the number of patients moved was available, officials said.

Thomas David Gaddy said he and a friend were driving by the hospital, located about five miles north of downtown Dallas, as fire-fighting vehicles were racing to the building.

"I went and asked the first chief I saw what I could do and he said do whatever you can to get the people out," Gaddy said.

"I got up there and I couldn't breathe so I borrowed a hit off the nearest fireman's oxygen," said Gaddy, a Brookhaven College student. "Then I ran down the stairs warning people on every floor."

More than 60 Dallas firefighters with 15 major pieces of equipment responded to the alarms at the hospital.

Ingrid Bergman dies of cancer at age 67

LONDON (AP) — Academy Award-winning actress Ingrid Bergman, whose roles ranged from Humphrey Bogart's lover in "Casablanca" to the tough-minded prime minister of Israel in "Golda," has died after an eight-year battle with cancer. She died on her 67th birthday.

One of the last of Hollywood's legendary figures, the Swedish-born Miss Bergman died here Sunday, her daughter, Pia Lindstrom, said in New York.

Miss Lindstrom, a journalist, said she was flying to London today. Miss Bergman's three other children also were reported en route here.

Funeral arrangements were being handled by Harrods. "It will be a very quiet, family affair," said Alfred Jackman, Harrods' funeral director. "After cremation her ashes may be taken back to Sweden."

Miss Bergman rocketed to fame as Humphrey Bogart's co-star in the movie "Casablanca" in 1943 and made a stunning Hollywood comeback after quitting the movie capital in the late 1940s because of criticism over a love affair with an Italian film director.

She had been suffering from cancer since 1974 and had undergone two mastectomy operations.

Her former husband Lars Schmidt, last of her three husbands, was with her when she died, said London theatrical agent Sue Hyman, who made the announcement of her death here today.

Miss Bergman lived in Cheyne Gardens, in London's Chelsea district.

Looking back on the string of brilliant films that brought her three Oscars, her three marriages, three divorces and her fight with cancer, Miss Bergman wrote in her 1980 autobiography, "I have always thought that I will go on acting and acting and acting....You need never give up."

Miss Bergman's Academy Awards were for best actress in "Gaslight" with Charles Boyer in 1944 and "Anastasia" in 1956, and for best supporting actress for "Murder on the Orient Express" in 1974.

She was born in Stockholm on Aug. 29, 1915. Both her parents had died by the time she was 12 and she went to live with an uncle and spoke later of how her lonely childhood led her to acting.

Ingrid Bergman

A 5-foot-8 beauty, with deep blue eyes, she quickly became a leading lady in Swedish films before producer David O. Selznick invited her to Hollywood in 1939 to co-star in "Intermezzo" opposite Leslie Howard.

Her sweet, innocent image was scandalized when she met and fell in love with Italian director Roberto Rossellini in 1948, while still married to her first husband Swedish brain surgeon Petter Lindstrom.

She left Lindstrom and in 1950 gave birth to an illegitimate son by Rossellini, whom she later married.

The affair created an uproar at a time when public morality held considerable sway. She was denounced from pulpits and in the U.S. Senate as a "leap, chiselling female." Movie studios shunned her and despite a decade of triumphs, she quit Hollywood in 1949.

She returned 10 years later, when attitudes had changed, and the cream of Hollywood gave her a rapturous welcome at a plush movieland party. She went on to more successes in movies and on the stage in New York and London.

Recalling the scandal, she said later: "Some sections of the press tried to kill me. But I am hard to kill."

She summed up her career in a 1968 interview: "A very beautiful life."

Phoenix policeman kills fellow officer, holds up store

CAMP VERDE, Ariz. (AP) — A police officer killed a fellow officer, held up a store, stole a sports car and holed up at a rugged campground where he was holding out today surrounded by dozens of deputies, authorities said.

Phoenix Police Officer Thomas Hernandez, Jr., 31, calmly continued to hold police and sheriff's deputies at bay through the night and into the daylight hours 85 miles north of Phoenix.

Hernandez

He smoked cigarettes and polished the stolen car with his T-shirt before starting negotiations to surrender himself, his semi-automatic weapons and possibly 3,000 rounds of ammunition, police said.

At one point, Hernandez traded 100 rounds of ammunition for a Coke, then refused to drink the soft drink, police said. At another point, he exchanged some kind of rifle or long weapon for fruit punch.

Authorities said Hernadez' roommate, Officer Raymond C. Shaar, 40, was shot in the back and killed some time between 1 a.m. and 3:30 a.m. Sunday. The shooting occurred at a house in Phoenix the officers shared with a third policemen, Officer Jim Wilson, who was not home at the time of the killing, police said.

At 3:15 a.m., a man fitting Hernandez' description drove a late model van into a northwest Phoenix convenience store, demanding cigarettes and gasoline from clerk Dale Porter, police spokesman Sgt. Brad Thiss said.

The robber said "he didn't want to hurt me, but if I didn't do what he said, he'd blow the whole place away," said Porter.

Officer Brian Holmer gave chase in a police car after spotting the van. But the van's driver stopped and fired, hitting the patrol car many times, Thiss said.

The van then began chasing Holmer, continuing to fire, until Holmer's engine conked out, Thiss said.

Sgt. Conrad Schilling, arriving as a back-up, also was fired on, and police lost the trail, Thiss said.

But at 6 a.m., police found an abandoned van registered to Hernandez that fit the description of the suspect vehicle. At 7:54, they were told a man fitting Hernandez' description had entered the suburban Scottsdale home of John and Nola Sullivan, and demanded the keys to their 1981 Corvette.

Sullivan said a glassy-eyed gunman slipped into their kitchen, pointed what looked like a .30-caliber carbine to Sullivan's head and said, "This is serious business," before making off with the family car.

The car was later spotted 85 miles north of Phoenix in the Coconino National Forest by Yavapai County Sheriff's Deputy Ken Ingerham.

The Arizona Department of Public Safety and sheriff's deputies surrounded the car at the Clear Creek Campgrounds southeast of Camp Verde.

Police said a team of trained negotiators was flown in to negotiate with Hernandez, a divorced father of two, and a state helicopter hovered over the holed-up man until darkness fell.

Several times as he was being watched, Hernandez got out of the car and walked around it. He took off his T-shirt and dusted the car, according to an unidentified sheriff's deputy who watched the scene through binoculars.

Shaar

Shaar's body was discovered lying on his bed with gunshot wounds to the back by Wilson around 11 a.m. Officers reacted with disbelief to word of the slaying.

Hernandez, who joined the department in April 1972 as a narcotics officer, left in December 1978 and returned in July 1979 as a foot patrolman, was described by fellow officers as cool, macho and smart.

However, he "seemed to think that the department was kind of down on him," one officer who did not want to be identified told The Arizona Republic, saying Hernandez had recently received a written reprimand.

Hernandez "has severe personal problems in the area of marital problems and financial problems we were not aware of," Police Chief Ruben Ortega told a news conference.

"Based on what we've learned about his personal problems, they may have pushed him to the point of doing whatever he's done."

Ortega said Hernandez recently was divorced, but the chief could not provide a date and said he did not know the name or the whereabouts of Hernandez' former wife.

First day of school filled with fear, awe, wonder watched his mother walk almost to the door before he broke into a run to grab one last hug. She laughed and he returned to the group smiling.

"We want them to feel real good about themselves and real good about school so that they'll think school is a fun place to be," Mrs. Rex said. "Hopefully, that feeling will carry over as they go into first grade."

When the group was assembled and the parents gone, Mrs. Evans asked all the children with pink bears to stand up. Then came the yellow bears. Then the blue ones. While the list went on, quick and furtive glances down at name tags reminded students which color bears they were wearing.

And soon, the glances weren't so furtive and the silence was broken by the singing of "If You're Happy and You Know It" and "The Bear Went Over the Mountain," and the sound of clapping and quick responses to the numerous and constant questions thrown out by a smiling and laughing teacher and volunteer aide.

"It's important to eat a good breakfast and get lots of exercise, right?"

"Right," came the unanimous response.

"How many games can you think of that are good exercise?"

"I know one — Pac-Man," offered one respondent.

"That is such a straight line — are you sure you haven't gone to kindergarten before?"

"I went to preschool last year," Marty Myer volunteered with an apologetic smile.

After rules and magic numbers (Number 1 means sit Indian-style, Number 2 means clasp your hands in your lap, Number 3 means sit up straight and Number 4 means smile), and the difference between "inside" and "outside" voices were introduced and explained, the children formed a train to begin their tour of the classroom.

Past the Counting Table and the Reading Table, past the Mini-House and the water fountain and sink and past the Discovery Table, the children "choo-chooed" their way around tables and desks, crayons and scissors, into an academic life full of many future surprises.

Weinberger plans trip to Tel Aviv

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, one of the Reagan administration's strongest critics of Israel, plans a fence-mending stop in Tel Aviv as part of a Mideast trip beginning Tuesday.

Weinberger also will visit the 800 U.S. Marines standing guard in the port of Beirut as part of the multinational peacekeeping force that is overseeing the evacuation of Palestine Liberation Organization fighters from that city.

He also plans a two-day stop in Egypt, Israel's partner in the Camp David peace process, before returning to the United States.

Weinberger, however, will make no effort to restart the stalled Palestinian autonomy talks between Israel and Egypt.

The British Transglobe Expedition ship "Benjamin Bowring" sits at anchor in the Thames River, near Greenwich, England, on Sunday. The ship carried two British explorers, Sir Ranulph Fiennes and Charles Burton, the first men to complete the circumnavigation of the globe by way of both the North and South Poles.

Explorers traveled by land, sea, ice

LONDON (AP) — A British explorer home from a three-year, round-the-world trip through both the North and South Poles expects his biggest problems will be conversation and avoiding being knocked down on the roads.

"I'll probably find it difficult to get used to talking to people at first. The main problem will be trying not to get run down by the traffic," said 40-year-old Charles Burton.

He was a leading member of the British Transglobe Expedition, which made history by circumnavigating the world longitudinally, traveling by land, sea and ice.

In the last stage from the North Pole, Burton and expedition leader Sir Ranulph Fiennes, 38, were on a drifting ice floe for 99 days, before being picked up by their support vessel, the Benjamin Bowring.

The explorers and other members of the 40-strong expedition who travelled over parts of the route, went through Europe, Africa, Australasia, the Pacific and the Northwest Passage, as well as the polar icecaps.

The expedition came to an end Sunday where it began, at Greenwich Pier on the Thames River in east London, where the Benjamin Bowring tied up. A spokesman called the 35,000-mile expedition "the last great journey left on Earth."

Prince Charles joined the ship for its procession up the river and took a turn at the helm. Crowds of people and pleasure boats welcomed the ship.

Fiennes, a former army officer, commanded British troops who helped Sultan Qaboos Bin-Said of Oman put down a revolt. The ship flew the flag of his old regiment, the Special Air Services, the elite undercover unit.

"The best moment of the trip is now, just being back in England, sailing up the Thames on this beautiful sunny day," said Fiennes, an Etonian whose family motto is "Look for a brave spirit."

Asked to pinpoint the worst moment of their travels, Fiennes and Burton said they could not — "There were too many."

"We didn't know what to do the first time we met a polar bear," said Burton.

"They are 10 feet tall and we had heard so many different stories. Some people said they were friendly, but they can also eat people."

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
©1982 Tribune Company Syndicate, Inc.

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠6 ♡Q82 ◇KJ10762 ♣AK3
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?

A.—If you have any reasonable alternative, avoid making a takeout double of a major suit opening without four cards in the other major. With fewer than four cards, you certainly don't want partner to take out to the major on a weak four-card suit, but that will be his natural inclination. On this hand, for example, hearts will be the right contract only if partner can bid them freely. Therefore, you should not double. An overcall of two diamonds describes your hand adequately for the moment.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ54 ♡83 ◇AKQ1076 ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	?

What action do you take?

A.—This time you don't want to lose the spade suit, so double — you want to offer partner an inducement to bid a four-card spade suit, if he has one. More than likely, an overcall of three diamonds would end the auction. Don't worry about partner responding to your double in clubs. If he does, you can correct to diamonds at the same level — your hand is good enough for this action.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠7 ♡KJ8652 ◇93 ♣K1054
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?

A.—You know exactly where you want to play the hand, so why waste time? Jump to four hearts, showing a distributional hand with not much in the way of high cards. Three hearts is wrong. If you jump to three hearts and then correct to four hearts over partner's rebid of three no trump, you are showing slam interest.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ84 ♡8 ◇93 ♣AKJ872
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one heart. What action do you take?

A.—You would like to make a takeout double in an effort to induce partner to bid spades. Unfortunately, he is more likely to respond two diamonds. You would then be forced to bid three clubs, and you are not quite strong enough for that action. Be content with an overcall of two clubs.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ9 ♡Q762 ◇AKJ4 ♣102
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—With club weakness and such good support for partner's suit, it would be wrong to sign off with three no trump. Partner almost surely has a five-card spade suit (with four clubs he would have opened one club; with four hearts he would have rebid two hearts; and he didn't raise diamonds), so you should tell him about your excellent support. Jump to four spades, though three spades is a reasonable alternative since it is forcing on this auction.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ82 ♡KQJ872 ◇A ♣A6
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—There is a tendency to leap into Blackwood, but you should try to resist it. What happens if you learn that partner has an ace and two kings? If he does not have the king of spades, you might be bidding a grand slam on a finesse, and that is not a paying proposition. The solution is to start a cue-bidding sequence with four clubs. That way, you should get to learn which kings partner has, and at what level the contract belongs.

The PLO doesn't die

Just because the Palestinian Liberation Organization's terrorists are being evacuated from Lebanon is no reason for the world to cheer in anticipation of a peace settling in the Middle East in coming years. The evacuation has not altered the nature of the organization; it has merely prolonged its life and scattered it in the wind.

The PLO remains what it always has been — a loosely knit group of child-killers and cutthroats committed to the destruction of Israel. As long as the organization remains on that course, peace will not come and the United States' role in the Middle East cannot be diminished.

The evacuation of the PLO from Lebanon is an important step because Lebanon was suffering destruction from the Israelis, destruction that, although regrettable, was completely understandable. After all, from its Lebanese base the PLO terrorized Israel.

But experience shows that a new wave of terrorism will be coming from the PLO. In September 1970, King Hussein's troops clashed with PLO guerrillas in Jordan and succeeded in closing all but a few of the terrorist organization's bases. But that did not stop the PLO's killing. During the fighting, a secret Palestinian terrorist arm called Black September was set up. It later claimed responsibility for the murder of Jordanian Prime Minister Wasfi al-Tal in Cairo on Nov 29, 1971, and the massacre of 11 Israeli athletes at the Olympic Games in Munich in September 1972, among other things.

One indication that the terrorists will continue to take their toll is the way they have fired their weapons into the air while being loaded aboard ships to be evacuated. That's seemingly harmless, but at least one television network reported recently that those bullets fired into the air are falling back to the earth and striking innocent bystanders.

No, this is not the end of the PLO. If anything it merely solves one immediate problem and marks the beginning of what is likely too be a major wave of terrorism in the volatile Middle East.

Calling Castro's hand

During the mid and late 1970s, successive American administrations tried repeatedly to improve relations with Cuba. More specifically, they tried to persuade Fidel Castro that he had much to gain by loosening his ties to the Soviet Union and by ending attempts to spread Marxism via subversion and force of arms.

Castro's contemptuous response was to escalate Cuba's military involvement in Africa and to step up aid to Marxist guerrillas in Central America.

Clearly, tougher signals need to be sent to Havana, and to Moscow, about the potential costs of subverting non-communist countries, most especially those in this hemisphere.

The U.S. Senate recently did just that by passing a resolution warning Cuba that the United States intends to stop Castro-inspired subversion by "whatever means necessary, including the use of arms."

The resolution, passed easily on a 69-27 vote, puts Castro on notice that the Senate stands behind the Reagan administration's efforts to bolster non-communist governments threatened by Cuban-aided insurgents. The resolution's unequivocal language — "... whatever means necessary, including the use of arms." — also tells Havana that the Senate would likely support more direct action against Cuba if that became essential.

The one discordant note in all this was the timidity displayed by Sen. Charles Percy, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Percy worried aloud that the resolution's blunt wording could provoke Castro and, in effect, induce him to challenge the United States directly.

Shackling U.S. policy in Central America and the Caribbean with fear of what Castro might do if he hears cross words from Washington would amount to handing Havana a blank check.

Castro has no business trying to export totalitarianism in this hemisphere or anywhere else. Absent a demonstration of resolve by the United States, he will not be deterred from continuing to do so. And that, rather than a stiff warning from the Senate, could lead to the direct confrontation Percy is so eager to avoid.

Better that Castro is warned in time, and in no uncertain words, that continued subversion threatens U.S. security and won't be tolerated.

Another View:

A drain on Medicare

One of the tasks of the administration's new Advisory Council on Social Security will be to study the looming problems of the Medicare trust fund which, though healthy now, is being depleted at a rate that signals trouble in the near future. Medicare outlays increased by 21.5 percent last year, significantly faster than the 16.5 percent increase in the overall national health bill, mostly because of the 17.5 percent hike in hospital bills. At that pace, according to Social Security trustees, Medicare funds will run short in five years if the economy remains stagnant, and by the early 1990s even if the economy recovers.

Already the administration and Congress have tried to slow the drain, approving $12.8 billion in Medicare cuts over the next three years largely by reducing hospital payments. But as the nation's aging population grows, simply curbing the rate of increase in hospital and other medical costs probably won't be sufficient to maintain Medicare's economic balance.

The newly formed advisory council will need to examine such questions as whether Medicare should be funded principally, as it is now, from Social Security payroll taxes, or partly or wholly from general revenues, as some propose. A more fundmental question that hasn't been thoroughly explored is whether the formula for allocating payroll tax revenues to Social Security's three trust funds may require revision; revenues for the old age and survivors fund have fallen seriously behind payouts, while the Medicare and disability funds enjoy surpluses.

It's encouraging that the advisory council is going into the Medicare situation now, so that something constructive can be done before that program reaches the kind of crisis besetting the pension fund. The council's work should be coordinated with the current study by the president's National Commission on Social Security Reform, since what happens to Medicare will have impact on the overall retirement program.

However, it seems clear that without major changes in the nation's health delivery system — particularly without more effective methods of controlling health care costs — permanent solutions for Medicare's problems are likely to remain as elusive as those for the trouble-ridden Medicaid program for the poor. For now, the best hope is to devise politically acceptable expedients to see Medicare and the rest of Social Security through the short term. The longer-range problems of both retirement benefits and health care call for restructuring not only Social Security but the way this nation assures its citizens of all ages adequate, affordable health care.

Conte-Proxmire tangle takes a comic turn

WASHINGTON — The rules and customs of Congress prohibit one member from disparaging another. Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., would like to make an exception of Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis.

Jack Anderson

Conte possesses a refreshing contentiousness, a rousing hatred for a fellow legislator and all his works that evokes nostalgia in these tepid days of the bland politician.

The irrepressible Conte resents having to operate under what he calls the "Marquess of Queensberry rules" that govern congressional debate. He simply can't bring himself to refer to Proxmire as "the honorable gentleman" or "my distinguished colleage," as parliamentary protocol requires.

The two of them tangled over a $75-a-day tax deduction that Congress voted for itself last year. Conte was an unabashed advocate of this backdoor pay raise. But the parsimonious Proxmire raised such a howl over it that he succeeded in killing it.

Conte began lambasting Proxmire on the House floor as only a man deprived of a tax break can lambaste. From the thronelike leather chair behind the marble rostrum, the presiding referee cautioned that House rules prohibit such personal attacks on members of the Senate.

The unrepentant Conte complained about the sissy rules, but obediently omitted direct references to Proxmire. Instead, he referred to a certain "Mr. X" — which, of course, everyone knew meant "Proxmire."

At one point, Conte produced a bag of peanuts on the House floor and proposed an alternative to Proxmire's famous Golden Fleece Award: a "Nut of the Week Award," with guess-who as the first honoree.

On another occasion, Conte referred to Proxmire's battle against baldness a few years ago. He noted that Mr. X had "deducted his hair transplant and the Internal Revenue turned it down."

At a recent Appropriations Committee meeting, Conte produced a list of $2,151 worth of travel expenses Proxmire had charged to the government for trips around Wisconsin. "Would it be out of order to call him a cheap, irresponsible demagogue?" Conte disingenuously asked Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., the committee chairman. "Yes, it would," Whitten replied, amid chuckles from the members.

Conte told my associate Peter Grant that he thinks Proxmire is hypocritical for fighting the congressional tax break while charging home-state travel expenses to the taxpayers and taking in more than $20,000 in speaking fees last year.

Proxmire declined to retaliate at Conte's level of personal vilification. But he got in a sly dig of his own, implying that his opponent was merely a victim of henpecking. House members "were really unhappy about losing that tax break," he explained. "They didn't like it, and their wives didn't like it. He is taking it out on me."

Proxmire pointed out that members of Congress already earn more than 99 percent of Americans earn and don't need a tax break. "I hear senators saying, 'I have two or three kids in college and I'm having a hard time making ends meet,'" he said. "Well, welcome to the club."

Proxmire also defended his home-state travel expenses, noting that he stays only in the cheapest hotels and fixes his own meals rather than eating in restaurants. As for the hair-transplant tax deduction, he claims that his accountant had filed this claim without his knowledge. As soon as Proxmire learned about it, he withdrew it.

Conte, meanwhile, tried to limit the amount of money senators can earn from speaking engagements. He was beaten.

Then he introduced a measure to prevent members of Congress from claiming automatically the $75 maximum per diem for travel, but limiting them to the actual expenses they incur. This is a practice Proxmire follows anyway.

Meanwhile, there is nothing that produces as much exhilaration as an old-fashioned, protracted political vendetta.

EMBARRASSMENT OF RICHES: Not everyone is suffering from the recession. The National Conservative Political Action Committee's problem is taking in too much money. NCPAC has actually had to give money back to contributors whose zeal for conservative causes exceeded their regard for federal campaign laws.

In fact, NCPAC officials informed the Federal Election Commission, from January 1980 to November 1981, they had returned $20,000 in illegal contributions from overeager donors.

The law prohibits any individual from giving more than $5,000 a year to any one political action committee. But, as I first reported two years ago, NCPAC fatcats keep trying to evade this legal limitation through various subterfuges.

A favorite trick was simply to rearrange the name — from John Doe to Doe John, say — and give twice.

NCPAC reprogrammed its computers to catch contributors who had gone over the limit. But a few still managed to sneak through.

My reporter Eric Koli checked FEC documents and discovered that two people had violated the statute in 1980 and another two had pulled it off in 1981. NCPAC was found guilty of two violations of the campaign law.

The committee could have been fined $5,000 for each violation, but the FEC let NCPAC off the hook. It would have cost more than the fines to have taken NCPAC to court, and the violations weren't that serious anyway, the FEC explained.

Over the past four years, NCPAC has been found by the FEC to have broken the law nine additional times. Again, the ultraconservative committee could have been fined a total of $45,000. Instead, it has paid only $3,000 in fines.

Footnote: No comment from NCPAC. It refuses calls from my office until I apologize for calling the committee ultraconservative.

INSIDE REPORT:

Weinberger comment upsets George Shultz

WASHINGTON — The first covert signs of bureaucratic strain between Secretary of State George Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger followed Weinberger's forthright Aug. 23 comment over NBC's "Today" show that a Palestinian state next to Israel would be no "threat" to Middle East peace and security.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

That departs from the supercautious Shultz line, uttered the previous day on "Meet the Press," that he could not even endorse the concept of Palestinian self-determination, which he called the equivalent "of a Palestinian state." "I'm not going to bite on that one," he said.

Weinberger, often the burr under the saddle of former Secretary of State Alexander Haig because of his extemporaneous foreign policy comments, upset old colleague Shultz with his Palestinian-state formulation. He saw no reason there could not be "proper guarantees and cross-guarantees" for Israel and a Palestinian state living side by side.

Some friends of both Shultz and Weinberger say that despite years of close association in the Nixon/Ford administrations and later at Bechtel — with Shultz always top dog — they bear little love for each other. Whatever the love level, last weekend lowered it.

REAGAN'S SALES PITCH

President Reagan pulled out all the emotional stops in selling his tax increase bill to recalcitrant Republican House members, even invoking the memory of her dead husband to one congresswoman who had taken his place.

"John would have wanted you to vote for this," Reagan told Rep. Jean Ashbrook of Ohio. She was elevated this year to complete the term of Rep. John Ashbrook, who died in the midst of his campaign for the Senate. In fact, John was a conservative stalwart who put conviction ahead of loyalty, running a symbolic campaign for the 1972 Republican presidential nomination because he felt President Nixon had strayed from conservative principles. His widow voted no on the tax increase.

A footnote: The greatest heat in the presidential hotbox was applied to Rep. Trent Lott of Mississippi, the House Republican whip. Lott attended Rep. Jack Kemp's original meeting of tax rebels but wound up supporting the tax increase vigorously after presidential pressure was applied.

PROMISE OR THREAT?

In an unpublicized conversation several weeks ago with a top Israeli political figure, Bashir Gemayel, the new but beleaguered president of Lebanon, bantered about his plans for Major Haddad, the Christian Phalangist leader in southern Lebanon backed by Israeli money and arms.

Asked what he would do about Haddad after he was elected president, Gemayel said that was a secret, then added that he "might send him to our embassy in Washington as the military attache."

Some American officials worry that Haddad may prove to be as much a problem for Gemayel, who is also Christian, as he has been the past several years for the outgoing Lebanese government. Haddad's armed forces have greatly expanded since the Israeli occupation of southern Lebanon, the territory along the Israeli border in which Haddad's power was based on Israeli support. Sending him to Washington, these U.S. officials believe, might not be a bad idea.

REAGAN-KEMP REUNION?

In the heat of the House debate on the billion-dollar tax-hike bill, White House chief of staff James A. Baker III sent a note to chief antagonist Rep. Jack Kemp, leader of conservative Republican anti-tax-hike forces, with this postscript: "When are you and Joanne going to play tennis with me and Suzy?"

The come-on, obviously, had no impact at all on the course of Kemp's anti-tax battle against President Reagan and Baker. But Baker followed it up with a phone call from Air Force One as he was leaving with Reagan for the California vacation last week. Kemp was also headed for the Los Angeles area to see son Jeff (with the Los Angeles Rams). Over the phone, Baker hardened the tennis invitation, adding that Reagan wanted to have a long and early talk with Kemp.

PIPELINE PANIC

U.S. failure to bring its European allies to heel in the great Siberian gas pipeline battle has persuaded some hard-liners in the Reagan administration that the U.S. should find a graceful exit that would let the French, British and other Soviet suppliers of American-licensed pipeline equipment go ahead and deliver the equipment to the Soviet Union.

Reaganite insiders believe that this soft approach would lead to U.S.-European rapproachment on other crucial matters involving future East-West trade. A graceful backdown by Reagan, they think, would set a new mood in Europe for greater cooperation.

But backing down, even from the apparently unwinnable legal position that confronts him in France, is not always Reagan's style. And the hard-liners pushing quiet retreat agree they could be dead wrong: Retreat might solidify, not weaken, European resistance to punishing Moscow's Polish clampdown with economic sanctions.

CHARLEY REESE

Prosperity's debt house will collapse

Suppose you awoke one morning to discover that the world was not at all what you thought it was, that you had been an unwitting actor in a carefully constructed play on a gigantic set. It would be a shocking experience.

Charley Reese

I have begun to believe in recent weeks that we have indeed all been players on a stage and that the world really isn't the way we've been programmed to believe it is.

For example, we have been convinced, most of us, that we are very prosperous; but are we? Think for a moment. What do we really own? Let's take a typical lower-middle class family. They don't own a home. It's mortgaged. They own the debt; the creditor effectively owns the house. Ditto the car and often several of their appliances.

Chances are their health insurance comes from the job and so does their pension. Thus, they are entirely dependent on maintaining their cash flow in order to meet their debt schedules. Often, by the time a debt is retired, the item has been used up. I submit to you that such people, even though they live in a three-bedroom, two-bath house in the suburbs and think of themselves as prosperous, are in reality not much different from the coal miner or the tenant farmer or the medieval serf. They are not economically free and therefore are not really politically free.

Typically, a family who "buys" a $42,000 house at 8.5 percent (which is no longer possible) will have paid $140,000 by the end of 30 years, if they survive that long. They will have paid $42,000 for a house, that probably cost $15,000 to build, and $98,000 in interest and taxes. But at no time during that span would they have known real security for, if at any time their cash flow had been interrupted, they would have lost everything.

Another illusion we've been sold is that money equals wealth. Thus, we measure both poverty and prosperity by income. But money, especially a fiat currency like ours, is not wealth; it is only a medium of exchange. Moreover its real value is measured in purchasing power not by its denomination.

Real wealth consists of the ownership of things like land and the means of production such as tools.

Let's take that family again; only this time, let's say they own their home and their car free and clear. Instead of the suburbs, they live in the country and have an extra acre of land on which they can grow food.

Now you see, they are truly independent. They can still work, but if need be, if they lost their jobs, they could sustain themselves on their own land.

This was the original American dream. This was America prior to the 1880's, when finance capitalism took root and conned Americans into leaving the land for the cities and the factories. It was a mistake.

Today, we have a phony world built on the false prosperity of debt. The private and public debt in the United States is absolutely staggering and could not be paid off if the next three generations worked all their lives.

Ultimately, most of it will be liquidated in a crash. What we have to do is make sure we don't re-start the same old system, but instead return to the original American dream of a nation peopled by farmers, artisans and small businessmen.

To do that, we will have to change our goals from "getting ahead" by making more and more money to building a good life based on independence. Instead of worrying about land reform in El Salvador, we'll have to start thinking of ways to get Americans out of big cities and back into small towns and onto the land. Instead of worrying about world trade, we will have to concentrate on the American economy. Instead of foreign aid, we'll have to concentrate on domestic aid.

It won't be easy but at least we now know that the prosperity promised by finance capitalism built on debt is a false prosperity.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Aug. 30, the 242nd day of 1982. There are 123 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 30, 30 B.C., Queen Cleopatra of Egypt committed suicide, probably by taking poison — although legend says it was by having an asp bite her.

On this date:

In 1645, American Indians and Dutch settlers worked out a peace treaty at New Amsterdam, which is now New York.

In 1730, Benedict Arnold made a secret promise to the British to surrender the American fort at West Point, N.Y.

In 1945, Gen. Douglas MacArthur arrived in Japan at the end of World War II to set up an occupation headquarters.

Arafat leaves Beirut amid chaos

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Amid chants of "revolution until victory," PLO chairman Yasser Arafat surged through masses of supporters today to board the ship that took him from the city that had been his stronghold for a dozen years.

His departure was supposed to have been a disciplined military ceremony — a review of an honor guard and presentation of flags. Instead, it was a scene of choas as Arafat left aboard a coverted Greek car ferry, the Atlantis.

Led by truck-loads of French Foreign Legionnaires, Arafat's black Mercedes limousine rolled into the western entrance of the U.S. Marine-controlled harbor just before 11 a.m. (4 a.m. EDT)

Stepping from the car, Arafat saluted the Palestinian and Lebanese flags held by an honor guard, but that was as far as any official ceremony got. He immediately disappeared into a sea of chanting supporters and journalists before entering the harbor gate.

With rifles and television cameras waving in the air, a huge mob moved slowly toward the port. The PLO leader's bodyguards and Palestinian soldiers struggle in vain to hold back surging, pushing and shoving journalists.

As the crowd pushed toward the entrance, guerrillas chanted "Revolution until victory," and "Palestine is Arab."

It was almost impossible to see Arafat in the crowd. Only an occasional glimpse of his face and kaffiyeh appeared as he walked alongside Lebanon's top leftist leader, Walid Jumblatt.

When asked earlier where he was going, Arafat said, "To Palestine, where else. But mind you, wherever I go my heart stays here."

He said west Beirut had defeated Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon like the Palestinian city of Acre, now Akko in Israel, withstood a two-month siege by Napoleon Bonaparte in 1799.

"Napoleon stood at Acre's gates but he could not enter it. Sharon also stood at Beirut's gates but could not enter it," Arafat said.

Hours before Arafat's arrival, two platoons of Fatah guerrillas lined up at the port entrance, preparing for a departure ceremony. Nine other men, each representing a different Moslem Lebanese military faction, stood in the formation carrying the flags of their parties.

Originally, it had been planned to present the Arafat with the flags and he was to review the small Fatah contingent of his own PLO faction, the largest of eight groups in the umbrella organization.

U.S. Marines and Lebanese army soldiers stood guard around the port entrance while legionaires and Moslem militiamen took up positions around the road in the buildings.

But advance security precautions went down the drain the moment Arafat arrived on the scene and he was immediately besieged by a crowd numbering in the hundreds.

In spite of all the evident weaponry, there was no shooting in the port area itself, in marked contrast to the wild shooting that had made previous PLO departures ear-splitting demonstrations. North of the port area, Mourabitoun militiamen fired occasional bursts from automatic weapons.

Arafat arrived at the port after visiting Jumblatt, and Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan. At Jumblatt's home, Arafat spoke in Arabic to Jumblatt and his followers. At one point, a small boy in fatigues was brought in and saluted Arafat, who returned the salute, then kissed and hugged the boy.

Arafat then drove to Wazzan's office. Five minutes before arriving, a Lebanese army guard's rifle accidentially discharged and everyone in the prime ministry building, including Wazzan, rushed to look from the windows. They apparently were concerned someone may have attempted to shoot Arafat.

Wounded PLO fighters arrive in Greece

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Hundreds of screaming, shouting supporters greeted 147 wounded Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas as they arrived in Greece today aboard a West German hospital ship.

As the hospital ship Flora docked at the port of Piraeus at 8 a.m., 1 a.m. EDT, cheering Palestinians on deck made victory signs and waved Greek and Palestinian flags knotted together. Many on the dock shouted "Victory to the Palestine Liberation Organization."

The first disembarking PLO fighter, identified as Ali Nishi Abdullah lifted a bandaged arm in a victory sign as Greek ambulance men carried his stretcher down the gangplank.

The dockside took on a festive air as the crowd of 500 shouted "down with Zionism, down with imperialism." A band of Palestinian girls in traditional costumes played bagpipes and danced. Some held portraits of PLO chairman Yasser Arafat and Greek Premier Andreas Papandreou.

A government spokesman said Sunday that Arafat is expected in Athens soon, perhaps at the end of this week.

Virus may link MS, Hodgkin's disease

HOUSTON (AP) — An epidemiologist says an infectious virus may be the common link between multiple sclerosis, Hodgkin's disease and testicular cancer.

Dr. Guy R. Newell, director of cancer prevention at the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute, said the three diseases may be caused partly by an enviromental factor such as an infectious virus instead of a genetic abnormality.

Newell outlined his theory over the weekend at the Seventh Annual Urologic Oncology Seminar.

About 400 testicular cancer patients being treated here will be evaluated and the data compared with similar studies of MS and Hodgkin's disease cases, said Newell.

Karmal accuses U.S. of agression

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Afghanistan's president has accused the United States of preferring to keep Soviet troops tied down in his country rather than creating conditions permitting them to leave, the Press Trust of India reported today.

President Babrak Karmal also declared in a Kabul interview with executives of the Indian news agency that his Soviet-backed government is in full control against the Afghan insurrection and that growing numbers of rebels were laying down their arms and trickling back home, the agency reported.

"It is the international reaction, especially U.S. imperialism, which is provoking the crisis in this region and not letting the Soviet troops return to their country," Press Trust quoted Karmal as saying. "They want to keep the situation like this."

Karmal came to power in Afghanistan in a Dec. 27, 1979, coup marked by the intervention of an estimated 85,000 Soviet troops.

"These troops will stay in Afghanistan until the time an international guarantee is given to us that all interference and aggression from outside and provocation will cease," Karmal was quoted as saying.

The Press Trust said he claimed the United States, Pakistan, China, the NATO allies and "reactionary Arab regimes" are training "bandits" in 80 camps in Pakistan who are then sent back to Afghanistan.

He accused Pakistan of falsely claiming that from 2.5 to 3 million Afghan refugees are in its territory so as to draw economic and military aid from the West, Saudi Arabia and other countries.

The actual number of refugees is 600,000 to 700,000, Karmal said.

Other Afghans abroad, Karmal said, are people who normally go abroad to work in Pakistan, Iran and the Gulf countries and nomads who traditionally shift across the Afghan-Pakistan frontier.

U.S., Texas peanut crops expected to be smaller in 1982

COLLEGE STATION — The 1982 peanut crop in Texas and the United States will be down sharply for several reasons, including the new federal peanut program, poor weather conditions and last year's bumper crop.

Peanut acreage is down 13 percent from last year, according to Johnny Feagan, economist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Texas peanut producers have experienced a very difficult year in 1982," he said. "The peanut program reduced acreage, poor contract prices discouraged additional plantings, and adverse weather destroyed some plantings and delayed others," he said.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimated that 1.3 million acres of the legume will be harvested in 1982. The Texas peanut crop will cover about 225,000 acres. Currently, about 1.4 billion pounds of peanuts are in storage.

New crop prices likely will be about $550 per ton.

First woman to head 4-H Council

COLLEGE STATION — Cynthia Orms, a 17-year-old Marshall High School senior, has become the first girl to head up the Texas 4-H Council in the Council's 30-year history.

As Council chairman, she will be representing the Texas 4—H program in major events and activities across the state. More than 150,000 youths in Texas are members of 4-H.

Other Council officers are Lonnie Howard of Abernathy and Cleet Griffin of Lamesa, vice chairmen; Beverly Kuebel of Spring Branch, secretary; and Trey Powell of Rankin, public relations officer.

Symposium to suggest mesquite uses

LUBBOCK — Ranchers interested in expunging their rangeland of mesquite and making money at the same time may learn how in a Mesquite Utilization Symposium at The Museum of Texas Tech University Oct. 29 and 30.

"This symposium culminates five years of Texas Tech research specifically on uses for mesquite," according to Dr. Robert C. Albin, associate dean of the Texas Tech College of Agricultural Sciences. "In no way do we advocate growing mesquite for beneficial use. Rather, the symposium will show ways to defray the costs of cleanup and control of mesquite."

Registration for the symposium will begin at 7:45 a.m. Oct. 29. Cost of participating in the symposium is $30 and includes meals.

Seminars aid in handling estate taxes

COLLEGE STATION — Farmers and ranchers will be offered insight into handling estate taxes in the "How to Lower Your Estate Tax Burden" seminars Sept. 21 and 22 at the Texas A&M University Research Center in El Paso and Oct. 21 and 22 in Waco.

"Of major importance is how every farm estate will be affected after the recent estate tax law changes," said Dr. Wayne Hayenga, Texas Agricultural Extension Service economist. "The best tax planning of the past may be the worst under the new law," he said.

Additional information on the seminar may be obtained by contacting local county agricultural extension offices or Hayenga in the Department of Agricultural Economics, Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas 77843 or by calling TAEX at 713/845-2226.

Roping, barrel race to benefit ranch

SAN ANGELO — The third annual Mason County Benefit Roping and Barrel Race to benefit the West Texas Boys' Ranch will be held Sept. 10, 11 and 12 on the Mason County Fairgrounds in Mason.

The event will include the rodeo contests, dances and a barbecue supper, and the Old Fiddlers' Contest.

Additional information on the benefit may be obtained by telephoning 915-429-6319, 239-5485 or 949-1936. Those interested in the rodeo phase of the event may call 265-4245.

TAEX appoints pest control manager

COLLEGE STATION — Dr. Layne J. Westover has been appointed data manager for pest management of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

He will be giving statewide leadership in developing computer programs for use in integrated pest management and other TAEX educational efforts, according to Dr. Daniel C. Pfannsteil, TAEX director.

Westover's background is in computer science and entomology.

Kerrville ranch to hold horse sale

KERRVILLE — Shelton Ranches will offer more than 100 registered American quarter horses for sale at its third annual production sale Sept. 25 at ranch headquarters four miles south of Kerrville off U.S. Highway 173.

Shelton established a quarter horse breeding program at his Comanche Trace Ranch near Kerrville in 1978. Today, Comanche Trace boasts a broodmare band of more than 200 proven mares and championship-quality foundation stallions.

"We're proud of what we've built and developed at Comanche Trace," said Shelton.

The sale will begin at noon. Brunch will be available at 11 a.m.

Breeding syndicate shares available

KERRVILLE — The Exclusive Conclusive Syndicate, which is based on the breeding potential of world champion quarter horse Conclusive, soon will offer 65 shares for purchase at $50,000 per share. Total syndicate worth will be $3.25 million.

Shares are being offered to breeders dedicated to quarter horses with halter ability.

The Exclusive Conclusive Snydicate was inspired by the Super Syndicate Ltd., which was spearheaded by Kerrville rancher Robert R. Shelton and which is an ambitious $31 million breeding and marketing organization to promote the progeny of seven outstanding quarter horse cutting stallions and to build top-dollar purses for the professional sport of cutting.

Offering The Exclusive Conclusive Syndicate are Shelton, Robert S. Finger of Houston and Jerry Wells of Purcell, Okla.

DIRT, SQUIRT AND QUIRT

Extension agent program's been source of good information

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent — Agriculture

With this week's column, I complete more than thirty years of writing Dirt, Squirt and Quirt. DSQ was originated by an early-day county agent, V.G. Young. Originally it was strictly a farm and ranch news section. Dirt was selected as part of the name as being symbolic of the cropland farmer; squirt represented dairy farmers, who at one time were a major part of the county economy, and quirt, the livestock producer.

As Midland grew, more and more urban and suburban citizens began to call the Texas Agricultural Extension Service for educational information. I now use the column to transmit farm, ranch and gardening news. I might have added another S for Spade — to symbolize the gardener.

The original mission of TAE was to "disseminate practical and useful information in the fields of agriculture and home economics." This has been my basic goal as an Extension agent.

I have received many comments and thanks over the years for the information offered in DSQ. I sincerely hope it has been useful. Certainly I know I have not had all the answers. We all have crop failures from time to time. But the research information available to us from the land-grant university system in this country and delivered to the local level through the county agent system is valid and non-biased.

The activities held this past week in my honor have been overwhelming. I appreciate very much the many honors and expressions of thanks and good wishes for success in retirement and other ventures.

Although my successor has not been named I'm sure it will be done soon. You can continue to expect good information from the DSQ column as well as from other activities designed to reach people with solutions to agricultural and horticultural problems. You can continue to look to the County Agent "for practical and useful information...."

The second annual Midland County Pecan Tour is set for September 11.

Tour participants will meet on the parking lot, Midland Farmers Cooperative, South Fairgrounds Road, at 1:30 p.m. Transportation will be pooled, if desired, and the tour will proceed to Gardendale for the first stop.

At stop one, the Alco Irrigation Co. plant will be toured to see pecan irrigation and production equipment.

The second stop will be at the M.S. Davis Orchard southwest of Midland to observe equipment, large and small, for the commercial grower, the small home orchard and even the one- or two-tree grower.

Results of summer pruning and training of young trees will be shown and discussed at my place on Cotton Flat Road.

The small orchard in a suburban setting will be viewed next at the Art and Marge Shaw home in Ridgeheights.

Final stop will be at David and Kathy Harris' orchard south of Spraberry (Ed's Trading Post). A barbecue will be served at the Harris Orchard with members of the Midland Pecan Growers Association preparing the meal.

The general public is invited to attend the tour. Marge Shaw, secretary-treasurer of the association, asks that all planning to attend call the Extension Office, 682-0315, by September 9 and make reservations.

Agriculture Department report analyzes competitors' increased wheat production

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON — The American wheat farmer's four biggest competitors — Canada, Australia, France and Argentina — have "considerable potential" for expanding grain production at a time the United States is trying to cut back its acreage, says a new Agriculture Department analysis.

In fact, the report says, their output "may increase faster than that of U.S. producers during the 1980s." Three of the four have additional land that can be planted to wheat, while France — which has a limited crop area — will have to rely on improving yields.

The Reagan administration ordered acreage curbs on wheat, feed grains, cotton and rice grown in 1982 in an effort to slow down the growth in U.S. stockpiles.

Further acreage controls were announced on July 14 for the 1983 wheat crop, and officials are studying what to do about the other crops, particularly feed grains — corn, oats, barley and sorghum.

To be eligible for price support loans, target price payments and related benefits, farmers must reduce their acreages on what they would normally plant.

SOME CRITICS SAY that the government's restraints on American farmers place them at a disadvantage in the world market, while leaving other countries free to boost production to take advantage of any price improvements.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block, when he announced the 1983 wheat program in July, said that despite the acreage cutbacks "we have plenty of wheat" for all customers and that "I don't think that we can be accused of necessarily backing off from the market."

The analysis was prepared by Alan Maurer, Ron Trostle and Allen Johnson of the department's Economic Research Service. It notes that the four countries account for about 45 percent of the world's wheat exports, slightly more than the U.S. average share.

"The agricultural policies in all four countries are now geared to expanding production and exports," the report says. "If successful, they will affect U.S. wheat trade, world wheat prices and the income of American farmers."

In 1981, the U.S. wheat crop totaled a record of 76 million metric tons, or nearly 2.8 billion bushels. A metric ton, which is the unit in world trade, is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat.

The report, using average figures which span three world crop years, 1979-80 through 1981-82, says that U.S. wheat output averaged 66.2 million metric tons annually during the three-year period.

Comparatively, Canada produced 20.3 million; Australia, 14.5 million; Argentina, 7.9 million; and France, 22 million — a total of 64.7 million metric tons.

"THE COMBINED wheat outturn of these four countries rose at an annual average rate of 4 percent during the last decade, reaching 72 million metric tons in 1981," the report says.

"Expansion of harvested area — 3.1 percent a year — accounted for most of this growth. Wheat yields showed only a small increase despite improved technology, displaying considerable year-to-year variations due to weather."

During the current decade, wheat production in the four countries is projected to expand about 3 percent annually, reaching a total of 80 million metric tons by 1990 — approximately the same as the projected U.S. output for that year, the report says.

"About half this increase is expected to come from area expansion, achieved through diversion of improved pasture and land currently planted to competing crops," it says. "Inadequate moisture will be a limiting factor, but could be offset by applying new production technology."

The report shows that in the period 1960-69 the four countries collectively accounted for 47 percent of the world's wheat exports, compared to 36 percent for the United States and 17 percent for other countries.

In the period 1970-74, the four countries had 43 percent of the wheat trade, compared to 37 percent for the United States and 20 percent for the remainder.

IN 1975-80, THE four had 48 percent of the wheat trade; the United States, 42 percent; and other countries, 10 percent.

"The market shares held by Canada and Australia stayed relatively constant, while Argentina's share fluctuated significantly" because of large changes in production and wheat inventories, the report says. "France's exports, supported by export subsidies, have grown faster than any other country's."

Some observations by country:

CANADA

"Wheat production will increase to about 28 million metric tons by 1990. Wheat acreage may expand 10 percent to 15 percent, but further growth in production will depand more on yields."

AUSTRALIA

"Wheat exports are fundamental to Australian agriculture, accounting for 20 percent of the country's total farm exports in recent years." About 80 percent of the harvest enters the world market.

ARGENTINA

"Argentina's share of world wheat exports ranged from 2 percent to 11 percent during the last two decades. This volatility stems not only from large year-to-year changes in production, but also from shifts in government taxation and exchange-rate policies."

Army announces policies on women

By TIM AHERN
AP Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army is promising that women will play an increasing role in its ranks, even though it has lowered the goals for female enlistment and barred them from 23 more job categories.

The changes result from a 1½-year study of women in the Army that started after the number of female enlistees rose steeply in the late 1970s and field commanders began complaining that combat readiness was being hurt.

Under guidelines announced Thursday, women will be excluded from 61 of the Army's 337 occupational specialties, compared to only 38 categories currently.

Certain jobs are closed to women because the Army says they could lead to combat, thus violating the long-standing Army policy barring women from combat.

In addition, the Army said it plans to limit the number of enlisted women to 70,000, or 10.5 percent of the total force, by 1987. Currently, there are 65,000 enlisted women, or 9.3 percent.

Since the study began, the enlistment ceiling has been set at 65,000. The new limit — 70,000 — is less than the Carter administration's ceiling of 87,000 women by 1986.

Lawrence Korb, assistant secretary of defense for manpower, said none of the 1,400 women now in the 23 jobs that will be added to the off-limits list will be forced to leave their specialties.

And he predicted that as a result of the changes, women "will play an increasing role" in the future Army. Among other things, he said the new policies will likely lead to lower attrition among women, who had been quitting at a rate about 14 percent higher than that of men.

Maria Elena Torralva, who chairs a Defense Advisory Committee on Women in the Services, agreed that the "role of women will be increased."

"The message we got from the Army (during a briefing about the study) is that no woman would be denied a job that she is capable of performing, aside from the combat exclusion rule," she said in a telephone interview from her office in San Antonio, Texas.

The study, which will be released in final form next month, began after the influx of women into the service several years ago. Throughout most of the 1970s, there were only about 12,000 enlisted women in the Army, with most of them confined to nursing and clerical jobs.

But in 1977, the Carter administration greatly expanded the number of occupations open to women because of fears that not enough men would enlist in the all-volunteer army.

Increasingly, more women were sent into the field, prompting complaints from some field commanders.

For example, some commanders said female stretcher bearers were weaker than men and thus less able to lift the stretchers above their shoulders, said Brig. Gen. Ronald W. Zeltman, who headed the review.

Zeltman's group divided Army jobs into five different classes, depending on physical demands.

One finding showed that 64 percent of the enlisted jobs fell in the most strenuous category, or very heavy, in which more than 100 pounds must sometimes be lifted and 50 pounds must frequently be hoisted. Of the enlisted women, 42 percent are in that category, he said.

The Army will increase its female officer corps from 9,000 to 13,000 in the next five years, and the number of non-commissioned officers will rise from 16,000 to 18,000, according to the study.

By contrast, the Navy has 35,000 enlisted women, or 7.3 percent of its total strength, and a five-year goal of 45,000, or 8.6 percent.

Back to "yawn" school — As the first day of classes began in Parsons, Kan., today, Judi Rodriguez, age 6, had a little trouble adjusting to the early hours as she gave a big yawn during class. Judi, a first-grader at McKinley elementary school, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eliseo Rodriguez.

Halston to show fashions

The Fall 1982 collection of designer Halston will be presented at Julian Gold in Midland Sept. 1 — 2 from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. both days. Informal modeling of these designer creations will be held. Barbara Cohn, Halston's personal representative, will be in the store to answer questions and assist in the showing of the fashions.

John Ingram, manager of Julian Gold, said Halston has taken a linear approach to fall dressing. He has designed evening dazzlers, herring bone coats and suits with studded accents, a classic coat linear in three quarter length to be used over his suits, and also a cape coat accented with studs, and many similar features accented throughout the line.

Healer says he is 'human mechanic'

By BURR SNIDER
Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Lauren Berry, the healer, is certainly not much of a one for holistic la-de-da. He smokes like a chimney, drinks like a fish and answers like a sailor. But there are people who say that Berry is one of the great healers working in this country today.

"Some doctors call me an occult," says Berry, with a laugh. "I'm no occult and I have no secrets. My job is to fix people. I'm just a mechanic."

To Berry, a licensed physical therapist, the body is an engineering problem, and it can be "fixed" by physical manipulations based on sound engineering principles. "The muscles are the main machinery of the body," Berry says, "and that's what I work on. Where the muscles go, the bones will follow."

A few weeks ago, Berry, who is probably in his mid-60s (no one seems to know his exact age, and he's not telling), went to work on me. I'm 40 and in reasonably good shape, but like a lot of Americans, I have a lower back that is going on 92, and not a healthy 92 at that.

Berry didn't waste much time with pleasantries. I told him my lower back hurt. "I can see that," he said, and he told me to get undressed and to walk up and down in front of him. He gave me a cursory once-over, and then got me on his work table, lying face up. While an assistant pinned my shoulders flat, Berry raised my legs up toward my abdomen until I was lying in a crouched fetal position, then he bent my legs way over to the left so my thighs were perpendicular to my body.

"Take a deep breath and release it," he instructed. Suddenly he pushed downward on my knees, twisting my lower spine with such force that I let out a yell. This procedure is called a "fifth lumbar correction," and although I've had it done to me plenty of times, nobody ever twisted me like Berry did. He then bent my legs over to the other side and did the same thing again. Again I yelled to high heaven.

"That back has been out a long time, but I think we got it back in," he said. He told me to walk around the block a couple of times and come back.

While I was walking, my back still hurt, but I noticed a subtle difference in the way my feet hit the ground. I felt as if the pads on my feet were striking the ground more squarely, providing me with better support. It wasn't like undergoing any physical epiphany, but it felt pretty good.

When I came back from my walk, Berry stretched my neck in various configurations. That was it. About 15 minutes had elapsed. Cost: $40.

"If a guy hurts, he hurts," he explained. "He doesn't want to hear a lot of crap — he wants to feel better. You're going to feel like you got hit by a truck tomorrow, but I think you'll be all right."

The next day my lower back was sore, but not much more than it usually is. The following week my back still hurt some, and still does, off and on. I can't tell you that Berry instantly took care of my problem, but I think he helped me some, and I still have that nice feeling of enhanced balance that I experienced right after the session.

People have been coming to Berry since he was 6, when he met a retired Finnish physician osteopath who lived across the streetfrom his boyhood home in East Oakland.

Most of Berry's energy thee days is spent in teaching people his methods, so this type of medicine won't die out. My friend Alexander tells me he's seen Berry do some amazing things in class. Once, Alexander says, Berry treated a three-day-old baby whose head had been horribly disfigured by forceps during delivery.

"Lauren was swearing about 'the butcher' who'd done this awful thing with forceps when he could have used his hands," Alexander told me. "The baby's head was maimed to the extent that one eye was directly above the other. Lauren took that little head in his huge hands and slowly began reshaping it until things started lining up. Virtually in minutes we watched him work away the damage that doctor had done. It was an extremely emotional moment, and we all had tears streaming down our faces when it was over, even Lauren."

"Aw hell," said Berry when I brought it up, "all I did was push the baby's head along the lines of the sutures on her skull until things moved into place. All you have to do is look at things and you can figure them out. That's no secret."

Maybe that's Berry's secret: No secrets.

DEAR ABBY

Woman's recipe for fantasy: add a little color

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: "Cooled Off in Coos Bay" wrote to say her husband was no longer physically attractive because he had gained so much weight. Your answer: "Pretend he's Robert Redford, Burt Reynolds and Paul Newman all rolled into one."

Thanks, Abby, but as an Afro-American lady, I am not physically attracted to these men. Would there have been any harm to have included ONE black male? Or did "Cooled Off" identify herself as a white female? More to the point, did you simply make the assumption?

Billy Dee Williams, Howard Rollins, Leon Kennedy, Reggie Jackson and Robert Hooks (to name a few) carry just as much appeal for a large segment of your readers as the three Caucasian idols you so readily mentioned.

I, for one, am tired of hearing the "classic" American beauty described as "blond and blue-eyed," and please do not point out that Reynolds is not blond, as this is hardly my point.

Discrimination, no matter how slight, cannot be called by any other name, and it is attitudes such as the one displayed in your column that it thrives on.

I am appalled by your lack of consideration, and think you owe an apology to a very large group of your readers. I hardly expect you to print this, but I hope you got the message ... or did you? — BROWN & BURNING

DEAR B. & B.: I got the message, apologize, and plead guilty as charged for reasons of thoughtlessness and insensitivity, NOT discrimination.

May I add my own recommendations to yours? How about Sidney Poitier, Harry Belafonte, Lou Rawls, Richard Roundtree, Robert Guillaume, Fred Williams and Bobby Short for openers?

DEAR ABBY: My 17-year-old son just told me that his girlfriend is five months pregnant. She's 16, and they are both very immature for their ages. My son still plans on going to college next year.

We don't know what to do. The girl is just a child herself and doesn't know what she wants to do about the baby. We know very little about her parents. They're divorced, and she lives with her mother.

Who should make the decisions in a case like this? Something has to be done, but we don't know what. Can you help? — IN SHOCK IN ARLINGTON

DEAR IN SHOCK: This is a family matter. Your son, his girlfriend and both your families should meet with a professional counselor — a clergyperson, or someone who has had experience in advising families who have found themselves in this predicament. The wishes of the youthful parents-to-be should be respected, but cool heads — rather than heated emotions — should prevail.

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to Sam's wife was all wrong. Sam was over 70 and in a nursing home, and his wife was worried that her friend, Emma, was getting too chummy with Sam. You said, "Don't worry, it's probably just an innocent flirtation — Emma is not about to steal your husband out of a nursing home."

Well, don't be so sure. After working for two years as a motel clerk near a nursing home, I can tell you that some of our best customers are senior citizens! One darling gentleman who was at least 80 used to check in alone every Friday afternoon. Half an hour later his "girlfriend" (in her 60s) would drive over in her own car and join him.

Another couple, both in their 80s, used to arrive in a cab, check into a room, and about an hour or so later, he'd order a cab to take them back to the nursing home where they were both residents.

Steelworker feels economic crunch

MIDLAND, Pa. (AP) — Laid-off steelworker Harold Taylor left the depressed Ohio River Valley 13 months ago for a "guaranteed" job in Texas. Two jobs later and 50 pounds lighter, he's decided that if he's going to starve he might as well do it at home.

He says he learned there are no such thing as guaranteed jobs these days, so people like him have to "weather the storm" of economic hardship.

"Things are going to get better," he shrugged. "I don't think they can get any worse."

Taylor, 40, a father of two, was laid off 13 months ago from the Crucible Stainless Steel and Alloy Division in this Steel Valley town between Pittsburgh and Youngstown, Ohio. Colt Industries is closing the plant Oct. 15.

In February, the week he got his final unemployment check, Taylor took a job in Liberty, Texas, with National Pipe and Tube Co. The subsidiary of National Steel Corp. made pipes in the oil-well drilling boom and guaranteed work without layoffs.

Taylor got a pair of $500 bonuses, a month's free housing and board. He jumped at the chance. His family stayed behind, planning to move down later.

"What did I have to lose?" Taylor said in a recent interview. "I was reluctant to leave. But with guaranteed no layoffs, I expected to work the rest of my life."

But the drilling boom went bust, and Taylor was furloughed May 1.

There still was no reason to fret, he thought. Houston newspapers had help wanted sections filling more than 100 pages.

He took another job as a millwright with St. Regis Paper Co. But again there was talk of layoffs and shutdowns, and Taylor decided to go home — one week before he was due to be furloughed again.

"In six months, it went from boom to bust, literally. It's like the bubble has burst," he recalled.

"I couldn't afford to pay my mortgage up here and be down there. If I'm going to starve, I might was well go back home and starve," he said after returning from Texas this month.

Aside from his vanishing jobs, Taylor had a rash of personal problems in Texas. By the time he was back, he had lost 50 pounds.

He brought his family to Texas in June, but two days before he was to complete the purchase of a house, he says, it burned to the ground, forcing the family to live through the hot summer in a two-bedroom trailer with no air conditioning. His German shepherd dog died two days after arriving in Texas.

Up North, his house originally was for sale at the appraised price of $42,000. Taylor ultimately dropped the asking price to $18,000 but still never found a buyer in the depressed housing market.

After the family moved, someone ransacked the vacant house. His mother, who lives two doors away, suffered a heart attack.

"It was like every day you wonder what's going to happen next," said Taylor, wearing a T-shirt and Lone Star belt buckle. "I finally said we're not living like this anymore. I felt like a gypsy. It wasn't the way I wanted to raise my kids."

Taylor received yet another Texas job offer, but he turned it down flat, because he was offered work as an electrician for a company that unloaded foreign steel at a Texas harbor.

"It was a matter of principle. Under different circumstances, I might have taken the job," he said.

Back at his home in nearby East Liverpool, Ohio, Taylor works at odd jobs, waiting for something permanent. He has two years of college and has attended trade schools, so he's confident of finding work.

"If worst comes to worst, I'll go somewhere else but just until something opens up here. There's no idea of picking up and moving my family again. It would be a last resort," Taylor said.

"Besides, I'm lucky. I've worked in the last six months. There are some real hard luck stories out here."

He moved to Liberty, Texas, for a 'guaranteed' job with National Pipe and Tube Co., which manufactures pipes for oil wells. After the oil boom went bust, he lost his job. He found work with the St. Regis Paper Co., but he soon lost that job too. Fifty pounds lighter, Taylor eventually returned to his home in East Liverpool, Ohio. He reasons if he and his family must starve, they may as well do it at home.

Nation's oldest miner respects coal mines

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Edgar Leslie, who has worked in underground coal mines for 62 years without a mishap, attributes his good fortune to a little luck and a lot of respect for the mines.

"You've got to be careful. Watching yourself, that's the greatest luck," said Leslie, who at age 79, is the oldest active coal miner in U.S. Steel Mining Co. Inc.'s Frick District in southwestern Pennsylvania.

He's also among the oldest working coal miners in the country.

"I had mines born in my veins," Leslie said from the Robena Mine near Uniontown, 40 miles south of Pittsburgh.

"Exercise and work do me good — I just keep on moving," he added.

Leslie took his first job in 1914 while he was in grade school. He worked as a mason's helper, counting bricks and repairing ovens that were part of a Fayette County mine.

He quit school six years later and took his first underground job at age 17. His pay was $3.80 a day.

Leslie worked at other area mines until 1944, when he began working at U.S. Steel's Robena Mine. He's been there since, currently working 40-hour weeks as a roof bolter.

Only once did he come close to hazard.

"I just had this feeling that I ought to walk out to the surface," he said. "No sooner did I get outside when the roof fell where I'd been working."

Leslie never told that story to his 76-year-old wife, Nellie.

"She wouldn't have let me go back to work," he said.

"I just love the mines," he said. "I like to ride the (mine) cars, and ride and ride and ride."

How does he keep up?

"I don't have any hard work any more," he snorted. "This is a modernized mine. The machines do all the hard work."

Kansas-town residents hide behind guns

IOLA, Kan. (AP) — After the third body was found, the rumors started whipping through this small eastern Kansas community like a wind-driven prairie fire.

Many residents now hide behind double-locked doors. Others keep large-caliber pistols handy. When they go out, which is seldom, they take their guns along, authorities say.

For Iola, a farming community of 7,000 residents, fear was born during the morning of Aug. 20.

Three boys attending the Allen County Fair found 15-year-old Gerald Short sitting in a shallow section of the nearby Neosho River. Short had been pistol-whipped and may lose his right eye.

Later that day, the body of his companion, 17-year-old Steve Mangus, torn with at least three small-caliber bullet wounds, was discovered in a rock quarry north of town.

THE TEEN-AGERS had been exhibiting sheep at the fair.

Six hours later and not far from the quarry, authorities found the body of Adeline Fisk, 59. She had been shot and may have been a witness to the earlier slaying, investigators said.

The next day, the badly decomposed body of 17-year-old Thomas Walsh, was found. He had been missing since July 28.

"The biggest problem we've got is the gossip and the rumors," said Mayor John Carder.

"Every night there are two or three more bodies found, supposedly," Carder said. His teen-age daughter left town to visit relatives, he added, and immediately rumors surfaced that she was either missing or dead.

"You see more lights on in houses at night and fewer kids on the streets," Carder said. "There's nothing wrong with locking your doors and knowing where your kids are. I think that's an intelligent reaction. The rumors and guns aren't."

"THE RUMORS are ridiculous," said Allen County Sheriff Ron Moore.

Once the stories of a killer on the loose began circulating, the sale of guns and locks soared.

The big calibers went first — .44-caliber Magnums, .357-caliber Magnums and .38s, all bigger bore weapons than the one believed used to kill Mangus.

Residents who didn't immediately purchase guns had only leftover .22-calibers to pick from in the nearly empty display cases at the half-dozen gun dealers in town. Gunshops in communities as far as 30 miles away reported dramatically increased sales of handguns and ammunition, much of it to Iola area residents.

Jim Mechling, owner of Otasco Hardware in Iola, sold more guns and ammunition in two days than in a normal six-month period.

"It's a close-knit town," Mechling said. "Everybody knew the people who were killed or knew of them.

"EVERYBODY probably knows the guy who did the killings, too."

People who never used to worry about locking their doors cleaned out the stock of 15-20 deadbolt locks at Diebolt Lumber and Supply Co., a large rural lumberyard and home handyman center. They did the same at other stores.

"I got up this morning and in addition to locking all the doors and windows and checking them twice, my wife had chairs in front of two of the doors," said Bob White, a local real estate agent.

Activity after dark has also dwindled. Business at private clubs and taverns is down, but the most noticable change involves teen-agers.

The shiny cars with loud stereos that cruised around the courthouse square on most summer evenings have been absent since the bodies were found. Local hangouts like the Sonic Drive-in restaurant and a renovated railroad car full of video games have been deserted.

"On a weekend we usually have 200-300 kids in here," said Larry Denton, night attendant at Crazy Cleve's Game Train. "Last weekend we barely had 100. It was like a couple of slow weeknights."

"OUR SATURDAY night show normally draws more than 100 kids," said Lou Bartow, co-owner of Iola's downtown twin-theater. "The day this all started we had 24 kids.

"I've been offering a 99-cent afternoon matinee and plan to continue because that's about the only time parents are letting their kids out to see movies."

Short gave authorities a description of his assailant but Moore won't say whether he has any specific suspect in mind. The sheriff expects the slayings to be solved.

Seven agents from the Kansas Bureau of Investigation have been assigned to the case. Along with sheriff's deputies, Iola police and officers on loan from other counties they have interviewed more than 100 people.

The memorial service for Walsh was Aug. 25. Seventeen-year-old Monica Cady attended the service. She would have been one of Walsh's senior classmates at Iola High School.

The deaths dampened end-of-summer celebrations like the county fair and Farm-City Days with its annual street dance.

Orthodox Jews are prevented from entering Ben Gurion Airport in Tel Aviv by protesting El Al staff workers earlier this month. The staff workers were angry at a decision to ground Sabbath and holy-day flights in Israel. El Al workers are resisting fiercely, and the tug-of-war is becoming a test of who rules Israel — the secular majority of the 12 percent who call themselves strictly orthodox.

Controversy over Sabbath threatens Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Jewish Sabbath, that sublime day of peace and reflection, threatens to tear apart the delicate seams that have held the Jewish state together for 34 years.

The Sabbath has been a divisive issue for as long as modern Israel has existed. It has even brought down governments, but never has it been such a storm center as today.

At immediate issue are the efforts by orthodox Jews to ground El Al, the Israeli national airline, on the Sabbath and holy days. El Al workers are resisting fiercely, and the tug-of-war is becoming a test of who rules Israel — the secular majority or the 12 percent who call themselves strictly orthodox, and whom the daily newspaper Haaretz brands "the ayatollahs of Israel."

Religious Jews revile El Al's Sabbath flights as flagrant violations of God's biblical commandment to "remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy."

THEIR REPRESENTATIVES in Prime Minister Menachem Begin's coalition have pushed through a government decision to ground El Al on Sabbaths and holy days starting Sept. 3. The decision is expected to cost the airline $40 million a year, mostly in the loss of charter flights.

The dispute grew this month when El Al workers blocked Ben-Gurion International Airport to orthodox Jews for two hours, singling them out by their beards and black robes.

Religious and secular Israelis alike were shocked. But while the religious called it "old-fashioned anti-Semitism," some non-religious observers saw it as symptomatic of a widening gulf between the two camps.

The secular Israelis claim the trouble stems from the growing clout of the orthodox religious parties which can squeeze Begin for concessions like the El Al closure by threatening to quit his fragile coalition.

ORTHODOX JEWS REPLY that in recent years Israelis have lost respect for the Sabbath. They point to the growing number of bars, movie theaters and restaurants operating between Friday dusk and Saturday dusk, when the Sabbath is in force.

Rabbis are campaigning to close Tel Aviv's Dolphinarium, a glittering entertainment and marine-life complex which draws thousands every Saturday.

Hardly a Sabbath passes without religious zealots hurling rocks at cars traveling a major Jerusalem thoroughfare near a religious neighborhood.

Clerical officials say that Sabbath work permits, originally issued to assure essential services, are being handed out to anyone looking for overtime work at triple-pay.

"The Sabbath, which used to symbolize love and peace in Israel, has become, in the Jewish state of all places, a bonfire of controversy that is turning Jew against Jew," says Rabbi Menachem Hacohen, a member of parliament.

NATHAN DUNEVITZ, a longtime campaigner against "religious coercion," says the time has come for secular Israelis to rally into an anti-clerical lobbying bloc.

One proposed solution is to set a five-day work week during which Sabbath would be observed religiously and Friday or Sunday would be a day of leisure on which secular Jews could do as they pleased.

The growing orthodox clamor for stricter Sabbath observance stems partly from Begin's own reverence for the Bible, and mainly from the ultra-orthodox Agudat Israel Party which guarantees Begin's majority in parliament.

The resentment of secular Israelis is fueled by other concessions Begin has made to the orthodox such as tightening abortion laws, exempting more religious men and women from army service and funneling large sums of state money into religious institutions.

Even a simple matter like daylight-saving time is a heated religious issue. Interior Minister Yosef Burg, who is religious, refuses to set clocks back an hour because it would interfere with prayer schedules.

SECULAR ISRAELIS FEAR that if El Al is grounded, orthodox Jews will be emboldened to demand the closure of other institutions like major factories. Next on the list could be Saturday soccer matches.

Many factors affect hair loss

Dear Dr. Solomon: Whenever I comb my hair, a lot of loose hairs come out. Does this mean that I will eventually be bald? — Kenny, Oklahoma City

Dear Kenny: Some loss of hair is normal. Hair follicles on the scalp go through a cycle that includes a growth phase and a resting phase, after which the hair is shed. An adult normally may lose as many as 100 scalp hairs a day.

Illness may also cause loss of hair as may pregnancy, crash diets or the use of anticoagulant drugs. Oral contraceptives and vitamin A have also been implicated at various times.

In brief, the answer to your question is that some hair loss is normal. But whether it is normal in a particular case would have to be determined by a physician.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My niece gave birth to a baby who was smaller than average. In fact, even while she was still pregnant the doctor told her that the baby was small. Does this mean that the baby will continue to be small even when he's an adult? — Connie, Cedar Rapids, Iowa

Dear Connie: Dr. Kathryn W. Kerkering, of the Medical College of Virginia, says that babies who had intrauterine growth retardation (the condition you appear to be describing) grow rapidly during the first three to six months after birth. They then slow down as they approach normal levels.

Dr. Kerkering explains that the accelerated growth is due to the fact that the infant drinks more milk for its weight than normal infants do. There is no need to alter feeding methods or the composition of the milk in order to achieve this more rapid growth.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have recently heard of a new surgical treatment for athletic knee injuries, called athroscopy. Is this an improvement over prior types of surgery? — Mrs. V.M., Los Angeles

Dear Mrs. M.: Over the past several years a new surgical instrument called the arthroscope tube has been developed. Through this arthroscopic tube, orthopedic surgeons trained in this procedure have been able to see and repair a torn knee cartilage or meniscus. This is now done through several half-inch incisions. Prior to this surgical development, physicians had to make an incision along a large part of the knee joint with a resulting slow recovery.

According to Dr. Harold Markowitz, Beverly Hills orthopedic surgeon who uses this procedure. "During the arthroscopic surgery only the piece of the knee cartilage that is torn is removed, while the cartilage remaining cushions the knee joint, thus allowing a more complete and rapid recovery. Today's patient is out of the hospital the same day as the surgery and immediately able to walk on the injured leg."

According to Dr. Markowitz, most patients can now resume full physical activities within 10 days following surgery. Though there seems to be advantages to this technique, each patient must be carefully evaluated by their physicians to see if they can benefit.

Vitamins may lower risk of birth defects

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal health officials are considering a study to see whether a vitamin regimen begun early in pregnancy would reduce the risk of two of the most common and severe birth defects.

Officials from the national Centers for Disease Control and the National Health Institute will meet next month to discuss the possibility of following up on a study in England that suggested that the use of multivitamin supplements may guard against neural tube defects, said Dr. Godfrey Oakley, chief of the CDC's birth defects branch.

A group of U.S. health experts who questioned the results of the English study has urged the CDC to conduct a more carefully controlled study in the United States.

Neural tube defects include anencephaly, in which a child is born without a brain, and spina bifida, a spinal malformation with symptoms ranging from none to paralysis.

"If it would prevent all neural tube defects, it would be a major, major step in preventing birth defects. But we don't know it works," Oakley said in a recent interview.

U.S. doctors commonly prescribe vitamins for pregnant women, but usually not until the second month, after the fetus's nervous system has begun to form, Oakley said.

The English study suggested the protective effect would be gained by taking vitamins for three months, beginning one month before conception, he said.

Earlier this month, a group of health experts met at the CDC and reviewed the study by Richard Smithells, professor of pediatrics at the University of Leeds in England.

In the study, 400 women who previously had children with neural tube defects started taking the vitamins before they became pregnant again. Those women gave birth to only three children with neural tube defects.

A second group of about 500 pregnant women who already had children with neural tube defects did not take vitamins. In that group, 20 children were born with the defects, Oakley said.

Hussein rejects idea of Jordan as Palestinian state

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — King Hussein of Jordan Sunday rejected declarations by Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon that Jordan is a Palestinian state and should become the permanent homeland of the Palestinian people.

Hussein, in a televised interview from the Jordanian capital of Amman, said that Palestinian territory must include land now occupied by Israel in the West Bank, Jerusalem and Gaza.

Hussein, who said that he does not rule out the possibility that the West Bank could be a separate Palestinian state apart from Jordan, said that his country has given the Palestinians a temporary home "awaiting resolution of their problem on their legitimate soil."

Sharon, during a three-day tour of the United States, has repeatedly said that Israel would never agree to a Palestinian state in the occupied territory of the West Bank and Gaza.

SHARON ALSO has stressed that he believed 75 percent of what is now Jordan was once Palestine. Thus, Jordan is the proper Palestinian homeland, according to what Sharon has claimed during numerous interviews and public appearances in New York and Washington during his visit.

He reiterated that view Sunday in appearances on both CBS-TV's "Face the Nation" and ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley."

"The majority of the Palestinians are living in Jordan," Sharon said on the CBS show. "Jordan, as a matter of fact, is a Palestinian state. So we are not planning to establish a Palestinian state. There is a Palestinian state."

In a separate interview on the ABC program, Hussein was asked about Sharon's view. "Jordan has, to its credit, always associated itself with the Palestinian hopes and aspirations, with the Arab cause," Hussein said.

THE JORDANIAN monarch also said that his country "has given Palestinians, awaiting resolution of their problem on their legitimate soil, the chance to feel at home here in Jordan as members of the Jordanian family."

But, he said, "This does not mean in any way that the issue is resolved. The issue has been, will be — until a resolution is reached — that of legitimate Palestinian rights on Palestinian soil under occupation by Israel: West Bank, Arab Jerusalem and Gaza."

As the Palestine Liberation Organization has been evacuated from Beirut over the last week, the focus in the Middle East is expected to shift — first to negotiations for removing foreign forces from Lebanon, then to a long-term solution of the Palestinian issue.

Sharon said Sunday that once Syrian and Israeli troops are removed from Lebanon, he believes Lebanon will become "the second Arab country to sign a peace treaty with Israel."

THE ISRAELI DEFENSE minister acknowledged that the new Lebanese president-elect, Bashir Gemayel, has not discussed such a treaty with Isreal — whose first peace pact with an Arab nation was under the Camp David accords with Egypt.

He also said that the presence of Israeli troops in Lebanon would help force the Syrians to negotiate the removal of their troops.

"We will have to stay in Lebanon as long as the Syrians are there," Sharon said. "That by itself may be a kind of pressure which will help encourage them to leave."

The mayor of Bethlehem, on the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River, and an ex-mayor of the city of Gaza said in a televised interview from Herzylia on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" that Israeli talks with Palestinians in occupied territories are "an illusion." They added that Palestinians talking with the Israelis are "actually nobody whatsoever — they are collaborators with Israeli authorities."

BETHLEHEM MAYOR Elias Freij and former Gaza Mayor Rashi Shawa, who said they also supported the PLO as the organization speaking for Palestinian peoples, rejected groups called the "Village Leagues," which have been talking to Israel about the Palestinian issue.

Freij, who said he was barred by the Israeli government from traveling to the United States for the television appearance, said that it is "an open secret" that the United States collaborated with Israel.

Soviets confident pipeline will be completed on time

By MARC ROSENWASSER
Associated Press Writer

IVANO-FRANKOVSK, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Alexander Pasechnick, a 27-year-old welder on the Siberian gas pipeline to Western Europe, has a message for President Reagan — the project will be finished, despite American efforts to stop it.

Furthermore, he added, "We will do it on time."

There have been suggestions in the official press of manpower and organizational problems on the 3,500-mile pipeline from Urengoi in Siberia to Western European distribution systems.

But, during a tour Friday for foreign journalists of Carpathian Mountain work sites about 115 miles east of the Czech frontier, workers and officials echoed Pasechnick's confidence that sanctions imposed by Reagan to stop the $14 billion project will fail and that gas will flow to Western Europe by January 1984 as scheduled.

"It may come as a surprise for you, but all this publicity about the pipeline has only helped us in our work," Viktor Kulijavzev, an official of the Ministry of Oil and Gas Construction, told reporters.

"I think all the polemics touched a nerve in the Russian soul," he said. "It brought out our patriotism. After the embargo was imposed, we had 20,000 applications from specialists who wanted to work on the project."

In retaliation for the Soviet Union's support of martial law in Poland, Reagan has barred American firms from supplying equipment to build or run the pipeline. The United States later extended the ban to European firms building key materials like compressor stations, rotors and turbines with American technology.

The main recipients of the Siberian natural gas are expected to be West Germany, France, Italy and Austria, and the Reagan administration does not want its NATO allies dependent on Soviet gas supplies.

The United States also wants to deny the Soviet Union an estimated $10 billion a year from gas sales — sorely needed cash that could be used to purchase grain and technology from the United States and other Western sources.

The Europeans already have begun disregarding the embargo, however, and in the western sector of the project, reporters saw workers using Japanese machinery and West German pipe.

But Western experts wonder if the Soviet Union can get enough of the Japanese equipment or produce enough at home to make up for the lack of American technology.

Workers here in the western Ukraine — and reportedly elsewhere along the pipeline route — are paid two or three times the average Soviet wage, fed at nominal cost, and provided with free, if spartan, housing.

When reporters arrived at the living area in the lush Carpathian foothills, there was sawdust next to wooden walkways that ran from one trailer to another, and the smell of fresh paint was detectable near signs posted at the camp entrance.

Still, the living area, which houses 250 workers, had a spotless, wood-furnished dining room, medical facilities, a sauna — and a cognac-and-coffee bar under construction.

Reporters were shown one trailer that was equipped with a furnace, a refrigerator and a television — but no toilet.

For putting up with such inconveniences, the welder Pasechnick said he is being paid the equivalent of $700 a month. Other less-skilled workers also are reportedly paid far above the Soviet average of $240 a month, and the gas ministry offers bonuses to crews that turn in the best performance each month.

Despite these incentives, the government newspaper Izvestia complained last week about a lack of skilled workers in an area in the Ural Mountains, which divide Soviet Europe from Soviet Asia.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda editorialized, meanwhile, that "It is necessary to insure the proper rhythm in supplying all construction sites and to root out decisively negligent management."

These are not said to be problems in the heart of the 140-mile westernmost sector visited by reporters at the invitation of the Foreign Ministry.

At two pipe-laying sites, giant Japanese-made bulldozers cleared the earth, Japanese back-hoes dug trenches, and black, insulated West German and Japanese-made pipe 56 inches wide was being laid by Japanese pipelayers.

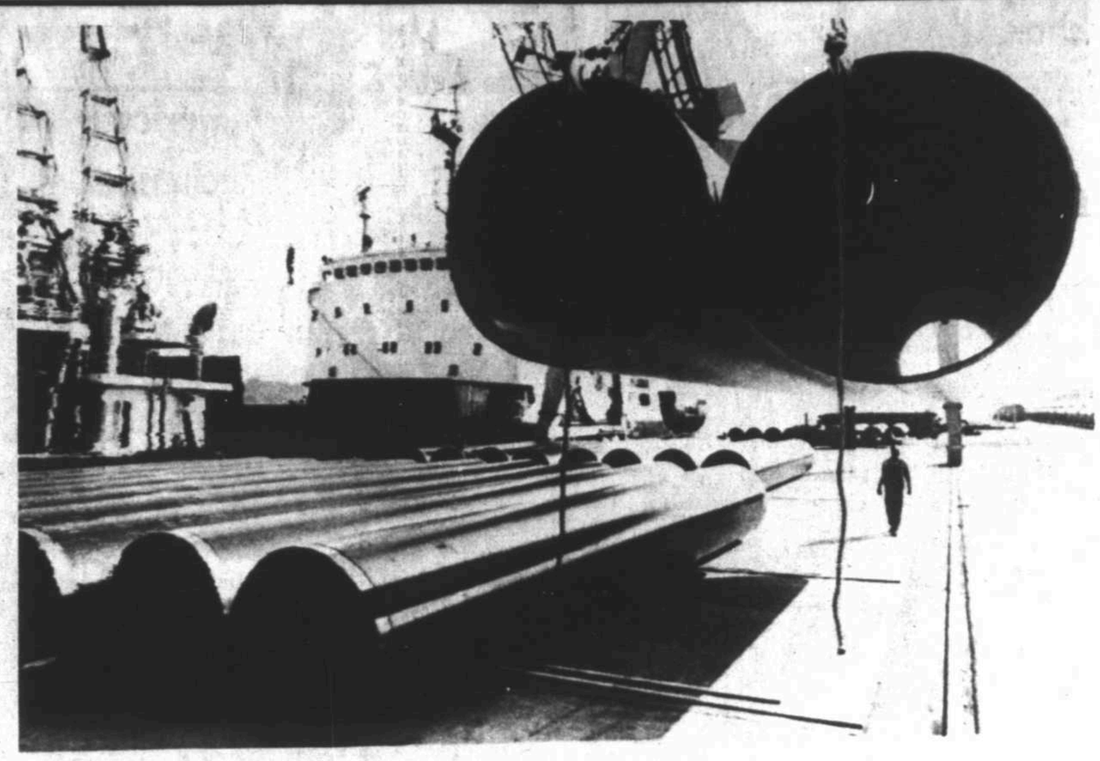
The only homemade equipment seen were trucks and small bulldozers dwarfed by the Japanese machinery.

"The Japanese were the winners here," said one worker, Sennick Gevorkyan.

The welder Pasechnick acknowledged that "It would be better if we had the American machines. They are very popular. Their quality is guaranteed."

No Europeans or other foreigners are said to be among the 950 workers employed in three main units in this district. But officials acknowledged that East Germans are building a site further east, and Western specialists probably will man foreign-made compressor stations.

Workers in the western district include welders, machine operators, other machine workers, welders, laboortedly is being laid at a rate of only 7-9 miles pns, pipe reportedly is being laid at a rate of only 7-9 miles per moipe reportedly is being laid at a rate of only 7-9 miles per month. In flatter areas, the pace is said to be significantly higher — more than 20 miles a month.



Pipe for the Soviet pipeline that will carry Siberian natural gas to western Europe is loaded aboard the Soviet freighter Pertominsk in Hamburg Monday.

BUSINESS HIGHLIGHTS

NEW YORK (AP) — Analysts say the recent slide in interest rate could have come to a halt because of an increase in the money supply.

The Federal Reserve Board reported Friday that the money supply spurted up $1.4 billion in mid-August, leaving money supply growth near the top of the Fed's target range.

"It's just one more factor that is going to bring a temporary halt to the fall of interest rates we've seen recently," said Maury Harris, an economist at the investment firm of Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis Inc.

Those declines have been substantial, sending interest rates to their lowest levels since 1980.

The Fed said M1, a measure of funds readily available for spending, rose to a seasonally adjusted average $454.9 billion in the week ended Aug. 18 from a revised $453.5 billion the previous week.

NEW YORK (AP) — Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., the nation's fourth-largest commercial bank, has lowered the interest rates on conventional mortgage and cooperative apartment loans by one-half percentage point.

Citibank, the second-largest bank, also announced Friday that beginning today it will offer a home mortgage on which the interest rate is adjusted every six months, based on changes in the rate at the government's weekly auction of six-month Treasury bills.

Initial rates for this variation on an existing type of Citibank mortgage are 13.5 percent, plus a 3.25 percent origination fee, for customers with both savings and checking accounts. For other people the rate is 14.5 percent plus the same origination fee.

Manufacturers Hanover's new rate on five-year balloon mortgages for customers with savings and checking accounts is 15.25 percent plus three percentage points.

NEW YORK (AP) — American Express Co., the travel and financial services company, will replace Manville Corp. in the Dow Jones industrial average, Dow Jones & Co.

Manville filed a reorganization petition in bankruptcy court Thursday.

American Express will be in the company of such non-industrial corporations as Sears, Roebuck & Co. and F.W. Woolworth Corp and its selection is a recognition of the importance of the service industry and financial services, American Express senior vice president Harry Freeman said.

Manville, on the list since the 1930s, will be suspended from trading on the New York Stock Exchange on Sept. 10.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government takes too long to decide whether cars should be recalled for safety repairs, and when a recall is ordered only about half the owners get the repairs, a new government report concludes.

The report by the General Accounting Office, an investigative arm of Congress, urged the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to speed up its investigations and develop procedures to get more owners to comply.

GAO investigators cited as examples six cases in which NHTSA investigations lasted 5½ to 7 years. When the recall was issued the cars involved were anywhere from 5 to 19 years old.

The Transportation Department, which includes the highway safety agency, acknowledged that some of the investigations could be done faster and said such a speed-up has been a top priority.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Commerce Department says its fourth-quarter base trigger prices for stainless steel round wire products will average 10.3 percent below prices for the first nine months of 1982.

The department said Friday the base trigger price, which sets a minimum price for imported steel, will drop from $2,515 to $2,257 a metric ton beginning Oct. 1.

It also said base trigger price changes for the costs of processing the wire products will vary from a decline of 21 percent to an increase of 69 percent.

In January the trigger price mechanism was suspended for most steel products when seven U.S. steel producers filed anti-dumping and countervailing duty petitions against steelmakers in 11 foreign countries.

In April the department reinstated the trigger price for stainless steel round wire and small cold drawn bar, using the prices set for the first quarter. Those prices remain in effect until Oct. 1.

The department monitors prices of these products for possible investigations if unfair sales appear to be harming domestic steel producers.

NEW YORK (AP) — Prospects for economic recovery are better in Europe and Japan than in the United States and Canada, the Conference Board said in a report released today.

The board said leading indexes in West Germany, the United Kingdom, France, Italy and Japan have registered positive, if modest, growth rates since earlier in the year.

The indexes in the United States and Canada have continued to decline, according to the business-sponsored research group.

Latest data show the leading indexes advancing at an annual rate of 5 percent in Italy, 4 percent in the United Kingdom, West Germany and France and 3 percent in Japan. Leading indexes have declined 6 percent in the United States and 8 percent in Canada.

New Englanders watch pipeline drama

Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Massachusetts manufacturers are warily watching the unfolding drama of U.S. penalties against the French subsidiary of Dresser Industries for defying an order against delivering equipment to the Soviets for a pipeline to Europe.

Few if any of the state's growing number of exporters are directly connected to the controversial construction of the 3,600-mile pipeline.

If President Reagan exercised his full legal authority, however, and took steps against the government of France for ordering the Dresser subsidiary to deliver the pipeline compressors as scheduled, that could have ramifications harmful to the entire New England region.

The big fear, a Boston-based Federal Reserve economist said, is that France would retaliate against U.S. importers — and the increasingly export-minded New England manufacturers would feel the pinch immediately.

"This is a political decision. But if a trade war develops out of this, it will hurt everybody," said Cary Lu, executive editor of the 300,000-circulation High Technology magazine based in Boston.

Business leaders are skeptical about whether trade sanctions actually can block export of most items. They are most fearful that if attempts are made to do so that the U.S. lock on high-technology markets overseas would be jeopardized–and that means many thousands of jobs in Massachusetts and northern California.

"At the moment, western European countries are heavily dependent on Massachusetts and U.S. investment in their economies," said William J. McCarthy, general counsel of Associated Indusries of Massachusetts.

"If we undertake unilateral foreign policy economic controls as the administration is attempting, the implications are serious for industry here," he said.

"We have the most active export promotion in the whole country," said John Rennie, president of Pacer Systems Inc. of Burlington, Mass., who directs trade issues for the Smaller Business Associaion of New England, Inc. (SBANE).

"Anything that adversely affects the international trade climate is worrisome," Rennie said. "If a pattern were set up where we were consistently at odds with our trading partners, then the climate could well turn very bad."

A year ago, a SBANE poll of 150 smaller companies in the state showed that more than $100 million in export sales, with at least 5,000 jobs tied to those sales, "and we're just beginning to tap the potential," Rennie said.

SBANE, of course, doesn't represent such regional giants as Wang, Digital, Raytheon or General Electric whose sales from exports are many times those of the smaller firms.

A 1976 Commerce Department analysis said at least $2.5 billion in sales from manufacturing done in Massachusetts came from exports.

"It has significantly increased from that–it's probably more than double," said McCarthy, whose AIM represents 2,600 manufacturers.

Dresser can and will supply Soviets

DALLAS (AP) — Dresser France, the international arm of Dallas-based multinational Dresser Industries, will be able to complete its contract for 21 compressors ordered by the Soviet Union for its Trans-Siberian gas pipeline, a company attorney said.

Dresser attorney Scott Nickson said Sunday the remaining 18 compressors ordered for the pipeline can and will be built for the Soviets in France without help from the parent company.

"Maybe they (sanctions imposed by the Reagan administration) have meaning in the political world, but they have no effect as far as stopping the pipeline project goes," Nickson said in Dallas.

The French government touched off an international political showdown last week when it ordered Dresser France to ship three compressors to the Soviets.

President Reagan had imposed an embargo of U.S. technology for the pipeline in retaliation for martial rule in Poland. Reagan also sanctioned Dresser last week becuase the administration charged that Dresser violated Reagan's order by shipping the equipment.

"We are in the middle of a squabble between two soverign governments. It's a position we are not enjoying, I might add," Nickson said.

Dresser France will supply 21 of the 120 compressors scheduled for use in the pipeline, he said. The others will be supplied by Italian and French firms.

The Commerce Department on Thursday suspended export licenses for goods that Dresser France might pass on to the Soviets. Dresser France appealed the order Friday, saying it was "unconstitutional and illegal."

That order from the Reagan administration will not affect the pipeline contract because no further help from the U.S. is needed by Dresser France. But the sanctions could delay others.

"They won't have any impact for that particular order. There's some others that will be impacted. We have energy conservation and energy transportation projects in other countries that Dresser France can't complete," Nickson said.

Dresser is no stranger to controversy. The company might not always look "patriotic" when caught in a political squabble, but one analyst says that's because Dresser has "vision."

Dresser chairman John V. James, obviously angry, said the export ban will "transfer thousands of jobs out of the country," because Dresser's foreign subsidiaries can make the products now manufactured in the U.S.

The company, he said, is an "innocent victim of a political power play."

Dresser itself is no slouch when it comes to playing with politics and power.

"What I think people don't know about Dresser is that it is very cosmopolitan," said Darwin Payne, a Southern Methodist University professor who wrote the authorized corporate history in 1978. "You tend to think of big business as being very insular and patriotic in the narrow sense. They have had a broader vision."

"We've got extensive military experience in our senior staff, which makes the president's cabinet look like a Boy Scout troop," James said. "But when we have these plants that are overseas, we've just got to be attentive to the needs of the host government."

For more than 30 years the Dresser has profitably dealt with regimes hostile to the U.S. — even doing business with the Soviet Union at the height of the Cold War.

But several times, the company's desire to make a deal clashed with U.S. foreign policy.

Dresser agreed in 1947 to build a $6 million gas liquifaction plant near Moscow, but the next year the Commerce Department ended the project by suspending all export licenses. Most of the work on the plant had already been completed.

Also in 1948, Dresser was denied licenses to export $12 million in oil field equipment to Romania and build a $5 million oil plant in Czechoslovakia.

In 1955, Dresser agreed to trade the Soviets oil drill bit technology in return for the right to produce a high-speed turbodrill with a rotary motor next to the drill.

The export license was denied because the Commerce Department said the deal would give the Soviet Union technology important to American security.

In 1976, Dresser reported to the Securities and Exchange Commission that it had made about $310,000 in questionable payments to foreign government officials, including $67,000 for inside bidding information. The SEC and the U.S. Justice Department investigated the company, which refused to turn over names of the people who made the payoffs.

The company bought newspaper ads and wrote stockholders in 1977 in a campaign for less regulation of American business overseas.

In 1978, Dresser proposed building a $144 million oil well drill bit plant on the Volga River in Russia, but the Pentagon objected that the plan again gave the Soviets vital technology. President Carter approved the Dresser plan, but then revoked the export license in December 1980.

That move cost Dresser $13 million, and the company charged it was revenge for James' support of Reagan in the 1980 election. In 1981, James was appointed to the president's Export Council.

James said last week that many Dresser executives were staunch Reagan supporters, but "I wouldn't want to ... guess how they feel now," adding that "some strong feelings" will be "reflected with our elected representatives."

Five men, two firms named in oil field fraud

LOCKHART, Texas (AP) — Five men and two corporations accused in a mutltimillion-dollar oil field fraud case have been named in indictments listing 130 separate charges.

Caldwell County District Attorney Jeffrey L. Van Horn said the indictments handed down Sunday involved the sale of 150 oil and gas well leases in the county during the last two years.

Most of the investors were not from Texas, he said.

"It was a big operation that ran well into the millions of dollars," he said.

Indicted were Robert Dean Burr, Wilmer Jean Burr, Harry John Peters, Wingate Battle III, all of Dallas, and William Bryan Thaxton of Luling, the American-Statesman said. The firms indicted were Lincoln Drilling Inc. of Illinois and J.R. Oilwell Inc. of Luling.

The Burrs face 25 counts each on theft through organized criminal activity, sale of unregistered oil and gas well leases, sale of the leases by an unlicensed dealer and fraud by misrepresenting "pertinent facts necessary to make a wise investment," Van Horn said.

Peters and Thaxton face 15 counts each and Battle was named in 10 counts on the same charges, Van Horn said.

Lincoln Drilling faces 25 counts and J.R. Oilwell Inc. faces 15 counts.

None of the five are in custody but are expected to surrender this week, Van Horn said.

The district attorney said the indictments were returned in an unusual Sunday session because that was the last day of the jury's term.

Midland College debuts art show series Thursday

Midland College opens its fall art exhibition series Thursday with a show featuring the works of Sara Gilstrap and Delmos Hickmott. The artists are being honored at a public reception from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Thursday at the Allison Fine Arts Building's McCormick Gallery.

The exhibit will remain on display through Sept. 30. Gallery hours are 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday.

Mrs. Gilstrap, a Midland art instructor for some years before moving to Oklahoma last January, is widely known in this area for her work in fiber, ceramics, jewelry and photography. Her MC show will include recent fibers and clay works.

She earned her bachelor of fine arts and her master of fine arts degrees from Oklahoma University, with additional studies at Tennessee University-Arrowmont and Texas Tech University. Prior to leaving Midland, Mrs. Gilstrap served as president of the Midland Arts Association.

Hickmott, associate art professor at Odessa College, has been active in the Permian Basin art arena for more than 15 years.

He received his bachelor of science degree from West Texas State University and his master of fine arts from the Instituto Allende at Guanajuato, Mexico. His most recent showing was at the North Texas State Invitational. Hickmott's works on display at MC will be primarily drawings on paper.

Shows are planned and organized by Warren Taylor, chairman of MC's exhibition committee.

This year's schedule includes the juried Midland Arts Association's Fall Regional Exhibition, Oct. 8-29; selected lithographs from gallery artists represented by the Elaine Horwitch Gallery and photos by American photographer Russell Lee, Nov. 2-24; the Fall Semester Student Art Show, Nov. 30-Dec. 10; religious art from the Birdwell Library of Southern Methodist University including a rare Gutenberg Bible, Jan. 27-Feb. 6; an invitational exhibit of contemporary Midland artists, Feb. 8-March 3; paintings and sculpture by John Gibson and Mike Thornton as well as the Texas Fine Arts Association's national exhibition selections, March 6-31; MC's faculty art show, April 4-22; and the Spring Semester Student Art Show, April 26-May 6.

Registration for MCT Theatre School Wednesday to Friday

Registration for Midland Community Theatre's Theatre School will be held Wednesday through Friday at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Classes are open to those between the ages of 4 and 18. Directors for the school are Elizabeth and Michael Spicer, who will be available at the theater during those days to talk with prospective students and their parents.

Classes include creative dramatics, introduction to acting and play production.

Creative dramatics deals with improvisation, storytelling, mime and puppetry, with the class focusing on building poise and confidence for the students while introducing them to the art of theater.

Introduction to acting examines the emotions necessary for acting, with students learning to examine the emotions of characters in scripted scenes or improvisations, and then portraying those emotions in a similiar scene. The course covers the basic disciplines necessary to acting a role in a play.

Play production is an introduction to the many elements in staging a play, such as stage management, direction, acting and design.

Tuition is $45 per semester and $80 per year for children of members and $55 per semester and $110 per year for non-members. For more information contact the theater.

Police investigating apparent accidental death of officer

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Police say they are investigating the death of a 24-year-old off-duty policeman who was killed when a patrolman's service revolver accidentally discharged on a hunting trip.

Three companions of William J. Slaughter on the trip, all off-duty city employees, were suspended with pay pending the outcome of a police internal investigation, a spokesman said.

Slaughter died at 3:50 a.m. Sunday of a gunshot wound to the head at John Peter Smith Hospital, officials said.

Slaughter, 24, was shot in the head as he was riding in a Jeep along with three other off-duty policemen, according to a prepared statement.

Police said the accident occurred as Slaughter was returning with the other policemen from hunting rabbits south of Arlington in the vehicle driven by patrolman Christian Nussbaumer.

Sgt. Daniel Sustiare of the police internal affairs division said that off-duty patrolman Douglas Swantek's service revolver accidentally discharged when he lost his balance after Nussbaumer's vehicle lurched at an intersection.

Slaughter was first admitted to Arlington Community Hospital after he was found slumped over in his seat, said Sustiare.

He said the accident occurred at 1:08 a.m. The suspensions of Swantek, Nussbaumer and civilian jailer Keith Arterburn followed later Sunday.

Pickwick Players auditions Sept. 9 at Theatre Midland

The Pickwick Players of Midland Community Theatre will hold auditions for new members Sept. 9 at 4 p.m. in the Blakemore Room at Theatre Midland.

Auditions are open to those between the ages of 11 and 18, with no previous stage experience necessary. To prepare for the audition, the youth should memorize a one-minute monologue from a play, poem or story.

Those auditioning also will be expected to participate in a dance or movement routine with the others auditioning as well as join in a sing-a-long with the group.

The Pickwick Players present five or six live theatrical productions each year. The members, directed by professional directors, are responsible for all aspects of production. Some shows will include guest artists.

Pickwicks learn how to build sets, speak before an audience, sew costumes and work with lighting. They also travel to theater conferences to present productions or study new techniques. Last year the Pickwicks visited the Broadway stages in New York City.

For more information call Elizabeth or Michael Spicer, directors of MCT's theater school and the Pickwick Players, at 682-2544.

CDBG program update expected

An update on the rehabilitation program being conducted with money from the Community Development Block Grant for 1982 will be reviewed when the Housing Authority of the city of Midland meets at 2 p.m. Wednesday in City Hall Council Chambers.

Submitting reports should be Susan Howell, CD coordinator, and Horace Berry, rehabilitation inspector.

The board also will consider a list of chargebacks to tenants for costs incurred as a result of damage or abuse and a revision in the Broad Range of Income Policy used in selecting applicants from the waiting list when vacancies occur.

Payment of the bills and the statement of receipts and expenditures for July will reviewed.

Martin Luther King's widow, others commemorate march

ATLANTA (AP) — The mission of civil rights advocates extends around the world, Coretta Scott King told supporters at a ceremony commemorating her late husband's "I Have A Dream" speech.

Coretta King

"If we are true to the philosophy of Martin Luther King Jr., then we must understand our mission goes far beyond our neighborhoods," Mrs. King said at Saturday's ceremony at the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change.

The celebration commemorated the 1963 civil rights march on Washington that culminated in King's speech on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial about his dream of racial equality.

Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young, another speaker Saturday, said nuclear destruction is the greatest threat facing the United States.

Young, former ambassador to the United Nations and a veteran civil rights leader, said, "The cloud of nuclear destruction hovers over the entire planet.

"There can't be a balanced economy and an end to inflation...when we are investing our nation's great wealth and scientific ability in death and destruction."

Earlier, folk singers Pete Seeger, Dorothy Cotton and James Cotton entertained about 300 people at the King Center.

Rep. Wyche Fowler and two potential candidates for his 5th District congressional seat, Julian Bond and Reginald Eaves, sat on the stage, along with Bella Abzug, James Farmer and Whitman Mayo, star of "Sanford and Son."

LONDON (AP) — Britain's Prince Charles learned about more than ships in the Royal Navy — he also had his first experience in a red-light district and learned to cook his speciality, bread and butter pudding.

Prince Charles

"My first experience of things like red-light areas came when we had marvelous runs ashore in different places," Charles said in an interview recorded for use today on Radio Norfolk. "I also met very dangerous sailors who tried to mix your drinks all the time."

Charles, following a royal tradition dating back to his great-grandfather George V, served in the navy for five years beginning in 1971. He finished up in command of the coastal mine-hunter HMS Bronington and was promoted to the rank of commander.

"I was sad to leave the navy...But I also found it quite a relief in some ways to give up at that stage, when I hadn't actually run into anything or caused a disaster," said the 33-year-old heir to the British throne.

"I knew that if I did have a problem it would unfortunately be big news. Then I would go down in history as the person who crunched his ship here, there or everywhere," he said.

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — United Farm Workers leader Cesar Chavez says his 101-year-old father was his best teacher in labor politics.

"He was not a fighting man, but he was always very concerned about justice, in his own way," Chavez said of Librado Chavez, his father. "Any time there was a semblance of strike, he'd be the first to stop. And ours would be the last family to leave.

"In a way he was my best teacher," said the younger Chavez.

Librado Chavez' family and friends threw a party for him, and the state Legislature last week passed a resolution honoring him for "a lifetime fighting for freedom and self-respect on behalf of the people who labor on the soil to feed America and the world."

The celebrants marked Chavez' 100th birthday, because he was too sick a year ago for a party.

His five children, three of whom live near their father and mother, Juana, in San Jose, gathered for Mass on Saturday and dancing and dining in a church hall.

Librado Chavez was born in Mexico and migrated with his family to Arizona. For years, he lived in a San Jose Bario called Sal Si Puedes — meaning "Leave when you can." He still lives nearby.

NEW YORK (AP) — Philosopher Mortimer Adler, advocating sweeping changes in academic practices, has written "The Paideia Proposal: An Educational Manifesto" to describe his ideas.

The 79-year-old director of the Chicago-based Institute for Philosophical Research proposes a 12-year, single-track educational program with virtually no electives or vocational training, according to the Sept. 6 issue of Time magazine.

The idea, he says, is equal education for all.

Under his plan, fundamental knowledge of history, literature, languages, mathematics, science and the arts would be acquired through lectures. Reading, writing, computation and scientific investigation would be taught like athletics, through practice and coaching.

"An ideal — even a difficult one — excites everyone's imagination. To say it cannot be done is to beg the question," says Adler. "We've got to try."

After-school classes starting at YMCA

The Park Center YMCA will begin its fall after-school programs for children in grades kindergarten through sixth.

Program activities include swimming, movies and arts and crafts with snacks provided. Girl's gymnastics will also be offered.

Adult classes at Park Center and Washington Y will offer courses in karate, baton, macrame, women's fitness and nurses aides along with an olympic weight room. Also, the Y will offer adult leagues in co-ed volleyball, men's basketball and women's volleyball.

For more information contact James Sanders at 682-0533.

Arrest made

HOUSTON (AP) — A 29-year-old man was in custody today in connection with a robbery in which $27,000 in cash and checks was taken from a Wells Fargo armored truck, police said.

The man was arrested Sunday after a gunman held up two security guards as they picked up deposits from a southwest Houston grocery store.

Music under the stars set this weekend in Odessa

ODESSA — The longest playing West Texas honky-tonk is set for take-off Friday. At least it may feel like the longest for those who make the whole show.

Honky-Tonk Under the Stars begins Friday at 5 p.m. and shuts down Sept. 6 at 1 a.m., providing those who attend with three afternoons and nights of almost continuous music.

Of the event, promoter-organizer Ron Riley, who is also "one of the pickers on the bill," said, "We expect this to be the largest music event that the Permian Basin has ever seen. I have over 20 acts. None of them is low-class. Many are fine regional bands — Dallas, Austin, El Paso and Lubbock." Pausing, he added, laughing, "Some are cheaper than others."

The entertainment bill includes Ray Wylie Hubbard, Gary P. Nunn, B.W. Stevenson, Roger Young and the Yellow Rose Band, Ponty Bone and the Squeeze Tones, Obsidian, Fire Creek (formerly known as the Foster Davis Band), Armadillo Flats, The Duke Brothers and many others, Riley said.

"They are not all country bands," Riley said. "The word honky-tonk around here has come to mean any kind of music. We have five acts that are not country; they are rock, not the heavy metal, but more rock'n'roll and rhythm and blues."

Those interested in going need to know where to go. In this case, location is not as important as directions.

"Head south of Odessa 12 miles on U.S. Highway 385 — the Crane Highway — then go west at the Pleasant Farms sign and from there follow the signs," Riley explained.

"We will allow people to camp if they like." Riley tried to describe the camping conditions, moving from the statement, "the field's been cleared off mostly; some rough areas," to "free camping on natural terrain. Food and drinks will be available."

B.W. Stevens

Also on the open field is "an old honky-tonk" which was "moved from town." The honky-tonk has "a stage back of it and a dance floor," Riley said, adding "Voila, honky tonk under the stars."

Tickets, priced at $16 for the three days or $7 per day, may be purchased at Endless Horizons in Midland and Odessa and Suds Unlimited in Midland.

All proceeds from the aluminum cans collected at the concert will be donated to the Muscular Dystrophy Association. "We are MD-sanctioned although not promoted as an MD show," Riley said.

Concert time Saturday and Sunday is 2 p.m.

Friends of the Library starting book collection for October sale this week

Friends of the Library will be waging a campaign this week to collect additional books for its 15th Annual Book Sale to benefit the Midland County Public Library.

The sale will be held Oct. 8, 9 and 10 in the Midland County Exhibit Building.

"We've had a pretty good response so far," said Mary Mann, who, along with Mary Hughes, will be accepting books, magazines, records and other literary material in a concerted drive this week at the Friends' book collection center in the Lancaster House at 1705 W. Indiana Ave., directly south of the Museum of the Southwest.

Books may be brought by the Lancaster House from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

"We need a lot of fiction and paperbacks and encyclopedias, too," said Ms. Mann. "We'd like to have a lot more books."

The Octobor sale, which often is weighted by textbooks and National Geographic Magazines, features general, special-interest and technical books, magazines, periodicals and journals. Annually, the event offers about 20,000 volumes for sale at bargain prices.

It also features a garage-type sale sponsored by the Midland Genealogical Society.

"We'd appreciate it if everybody would donate books," said Ms. Mann, who suggested that Midlanders might delve into "early-fall" housecleaning and bring their surplus books by the Lancaster House.

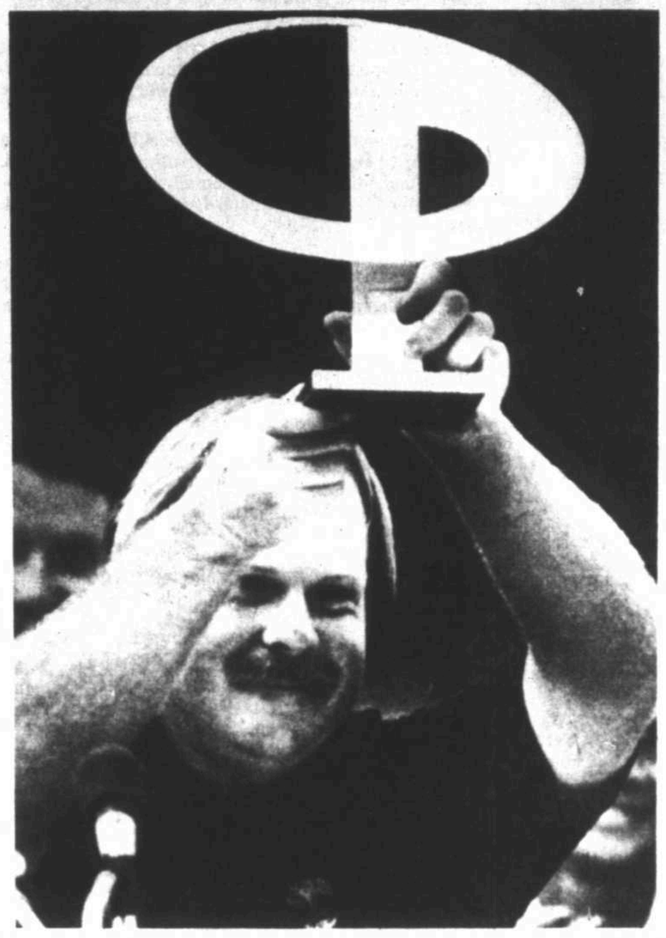
Stadler describes '82 as 'fantastic'



AP Laserphoto

Craig Stadler hoists the World Series of Golf trophy aloft at the award ceremonies Sunday at Firestone Country Club in Akron, Ohio after beating Ray Floyd in a sudden death playoff. Both men tied at 2-under par but Stadler parred the fourth playoff hole after Floyd took a bogey to win the trophy and the $100,000 first place check.

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Craig Stadler describes his year, laced with victories in the Masters and World Series of Golf and two other American titles, with one word: fantastic.

"This is very fitting to my year," Stadler said Sunday of his four-hole, sudden death triumph over Ray Floyd in the $400,000 World Series of Golf.

"I figured if I won here, it would make a fantastic year. It has," he said.

The pudgy 29-year-old Californian now has more victories, four, and more money, $428,101, than anyone else on the PGA Tour this year following his $100,000 payday.

Floyd, the PGA champion who surrendered his money-leading position in this elite event, did not take his dramatic loss lightly.

"You're supposed to be happy with second place," said Floyd, who started the cool day with a five-stroke lead. "I am very unhappy with second.

"I played my best golf in the playoff. I guess it was not meant to be."

Stadler conceded he was fortunate to win. He missed three of the four greens in the playoff while Floyd missed just one, the fatal 17th.

Tied at 71, they were in the same area, nestled in the high rough to the left of the green. Stadler knocked his chip shot to within four feet of the cup.

Floyd, with a tougher lie, chipped 12 feet past the hole. He missed the downhill, sidehill putt to save par. Stadler then tapped his in for his first World Series triumph.

"Ray had chances every hole," Stadler said. "I didn't play very well in the playoff. My short game came through. He made the first mistake. I just up my scrambling ways."

It marked the third straight playoff hole Stadler had missed the green, only to chip to within a few feet of the hole to stay with Floyd.

"Those chips get a little easier whe you have hit three of them that close to the hole," Stadler. "Besides, Ray had a difficult, little chip. He caught too much of the ball."

Stadler forced the playoff with a five-birdie regulation round of 65. Floyd matched par of 70. They were tied after 72 holes at 278, two strokes below Firestone South's par.

"There's really not much to say about it," said Floyd of his defeat. "Congratulations to Craig. He has to be commended for a great round of golf."

Cubs capture TL playoff berth

SAN ANTONIO — Midland clinched the Texas League Western Division second half title Sunday night by winning both games of a doubleheader here. The victories give the Cubs a 36-29 record in the second half and a 4½-game lead over the El Paso Diablos, the first half champions, and sets up a three-game playoff starting Friday.

In the first game against San Antonio, the Cubs came up with all the runs they needed in the first inning as Carmello Martinez hit a two RBI single and Mike Diaz a one-run single. The three runs were also the only ones Midland would get in the game as they went on to post a 3-2 victory.

San Antonio came back with one run in the third inning and another in the fifth with Dann Billardello picking up his 17th home run of the season.

Midland left fielder Joe Carter made a tremendous catch in the game that robbed San Antonio's Ed Amelung of a home run when he reached over the left field fence to snap the ball and keep what would have been the tying run from scoring.

Ed Moore, who can to the Cubs after Ken Pryce was promoted to the organization's AAA team in Iowa went 5⅓ innings to pick up his second victory of the season against no losses while Tim Millner went 1⅔ for his third save of the year. Tom Klawitter, 9-14, suffered the loss largely due to a lack of control as he walked 12 batters in six innings of work.

Carter was also the driving force behind the Cubs 7-3 victory in the nightcap. In the first inning he drove in two runs with the first of two triples and picked up his second in the sixth inning for another RBI. His 3-for-4 performance led the 11-hit attack. Don Chaney was the only other Cub with more than one hit as he went 2-for-3 for one RBI.

Tom Smith went the distance for Midland to improve his record to 4-5 while Chris Malden fell to 6-7 with 5⅓ innings of duty.

The San Antonio series concludes on Wednesday and the Cubs will have one day off to rest before playing for all the marbles in El Paso with a single game Friday night and a doubleheader on Saturday.

Otis' bat leads Royals over White Sox

Atlanta Braves beat Mets to retake NL West lead

By Associated Press

Amos Otis two-run double keyed a four-run first inning and Larry Gura won his 17th game as the Kansas City Royals won their sixth straight decision Sunday with a 7-4 win over the Chicago White Sox.

Gura gave up nine hits in 82-3 innings to improve his record to 17-8, while the Royals extended their American West lead to two games over California with their ninth victory in 11 games.

In addition to Otis' double, the Royals got two more runs in the first off LaMarr Hoyt, 14-13, on a single by Hal McRae, giving him 114 RBI for the season, and a run-scoring single by Jerry Martin.

The Royals made it 5-1 in the seventh as George Brett, who earlier had singled for his 1,500th major-league hit, slammed a Hoyt changeup into the upper deck in right field for his 18th home run of the season.

In other AL games, Cecil Cooper drove in three runs with a homer and a single and Roy Howell lined a pair of RBI singles, leading the Milwaukee Brewers to an 8-1 victory over the Oakland A's behind Bob McClure's three-hitter.

Wade Boggs, Jim Rice and Dwight Evans hit homers that accounted for eight Boston runs, powering the Red Sox to a 9-3 victory over the California Angels.

Eddie Murray drove in two runs, including the sixth-inning tiebreaker, as Baltimore defeated Texas 3-2 behind Mike Flanagan's six-hitter. The victory was the Orioles' ninth in 10 games, while the Rangers have lost nine of 11.

Dave Winfield drove in four runs with his 24th and 25th homers and Lee Mazzilli belted a solo shot to back the three-hit performance of Tommy John as the New York Yankees posted an 8-2 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Designated hitter Randy Bush drove in two runs to boost the Minnesota Twins to a 6-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians and a sweep of their three-game series.

In the National League, Steve Carlton pitched a three-hitter and struck out 11 as the Philadelphia Phillies downed the Cincinnati Reds 3-1. The left-hander, 17-9, lost his shutout bid when pinch-hitter Rafael Landestoy belted his first home run of the season in the eighth inning.

Glenn Hubbard, Claudell Washington and Rafael Ramirez each drove in two runs to lead the Atlanta Braves to a 9-4 victory over New York, extending the Mets' losing streak to 13 games.

Andre Dawson slammed a two-run homer and Tim Wallach added a solo shot to help Scott Sanderson win his eighth game as the Montreal Expos defeated the Houston Astros 5-3.

Bump Wills knocked in two runs with three singles and a sacrifice fly to lead a 13-hit Chicago attack as the Cubs defeated Los Angeles 7-2, snapping the Dodgers' four-game winning streak and dropping them one percentage point behind first-place Atlanta in the National League West. Ferguson Jenkins, 10-13, posted his fourth straight victory and 274th of his career.

Jim Morrison blooped a two-run single and Jason Thompson hit a two-run homer, leading the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 4-3 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Rick Lancellotti capped a five-run third inning with his first major league hit, a three-run double, leading the San Diego Padres to a 9-4 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in the first game of a double-header.

In the nightcap, Doug Bair pitched 31-3 innings of hitless relief, striking out seven, and Padres third baseman Luis Salazar committed three errors to help the Cardinals to a 5-3 victory.

Packers 'Raided' by new LA franchise

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Raiders' first outing in their new home was successful on one count and not so successful on another.

The Raiders, with rookie Jack Squirek of Illionis and veteran Rod Martin spearheading a fine defensive performance, whipped the Green Bay Packers 24-3 Sunday night in their National Football League preseason game. But the Raiders' initial home contest in Los Angeles drew a crowd of just 40,906 to the L.A. Coliseum, which has a 70,000-plus capacity.

During the week prior to the game, there had been a substantial amount of complaining by potential Raider fans who were displeased with the seats they had been issued. Team officials said 54,268 tickets had been sold for the contest.

Still, Raiders' managing general partner Al Davis, who led the legal fight against the NFL for the right to move his club from Oakland to Los Angeles, was pleased with the team's debut.

"I think that we put on a great show," he said. "It's the start of a trek toward Pasadena (site of the 1983 Super Bowl)."

Even the many empty seats in the Coliseum didn't discourage Davis.

"It was great to see as many people come out," he said. "But we have a committment from a lot more people for season tickets and when we get organized, you'll see a lot more people here."

Chris Bahr kicked a 44-yard field goal as time ran out in the half and Frank Hawkins scored on a 2-yard run in the third quarter to put the Raiders ahead to stay. In the fourth period, Marc Wilson threw a 6-yard touchdown pass to Malcolm Barnwell, and Billy Taylor tallied on a 3-yard burst.

The only score by Green Bay, which had won its two previous exhibition outings, was Eddie Garcia's 49-yard field goal in the first quarter.

"I think we're beginning to come together better now," said Raiders' Coach Tom Flores, whose team is 2-1 in exhibition play. "I'm very pleased that we won our first game here."

Wilson, who took over for starter Jim Plunkett in the third quarter, completed five of 11 passes for 66 yards. Plunkett connected on 14 of 19 for 185 yards. Cliff Branch was the Raiders' top receiver with five catches for 94 yards.

Los Angeles rookie Marcus Allen, the 1981 Heisman Trophy winner at Southern Cal, continued his impressive showing in the preseason, carrying nine times for 41 yards and grabbing two passes for 15 more.

The Packers, effective defensively until the final quarter but struggling on offense, had just 205 total yards to the Raiders' 376. Four Green Bay quarterbacks were a combined 15 of 38 for 110 yards passing, and suffered two interceptions.

Gerry Ellis was the Packers' leading rusher with five carries for just 21 yards.

The Rams, the Raiders' new neighbors to the south and former occupants of the Memorial Coliseum, televised their game locally and, although it was a sellout, there were 14,470 no-shows to go with the announced crowd of 54,537 in Anaheim Stadium.

The viewers, in person and elsewhere, got a chance to see the man most likely to end the Rams' quarterback merry-go-round. Bert Jones, going the route, completed 11 of 20 passes for 179 yards (50 of them on one toss to Billy Waddy) in the victory over the Seahawks. "Bert threw well, we blocked well, we ran well," said Rams Coach Ray Malavasi.

The Giants finally beat the Jets after six consecutive losses — but it was a costly victory. Phil Simms, their No.1 quarterback who had missed portions of the past two seasons with shoulder injuries, suffered a knee injury when he was tackled by Joe Klecko and Abdul Salaam as he released a pass.

"I feel bad for Phil. It's a tragic injury for any athlete in the prime of his career," Brunner said. "I didn't even see it happen. I saw him throw the pass and then he was on the ground in obvious pain."

It's likely he'll miss the season. Scott Brunner will take his place and the Giants will go shopping for a veteran backup quarterback to go along with second-year man Mark Reed.

"We are still 75 percent sure he tore his medial collateral ligament completely and that there is some damage to the interior cruciate ligament," Coach Ray Perkins said. Simms will undergo an arthroscopic examination today that will show the extent of the damage. If it's serious enough, Simms will undergo immediate surgery.

Five field goals by Joe Danelo and a 55-yard punt return touchdown by Danny Pittman accounted for the Giants' points. The Jets, held to six first downs and 54 yards total offense, got three interceptions from Darrol Ray. He ran one in for a TD and set up a field goal with another.

The Browns won on Matt Bahr's 45-yard field goal with 4:44 to play after Ken Stabler, in his debut as the Saints' quarterback, rallied New Orleans to two touchdowns and a 17-17 tie. He entered the game with 5:07 remaining in the third period and hit 11 of 17 passes for 149 yards. "Kenny Stabler is certainly not dead," said Cleveland Coach Sam Rutigliano.

Two other quarterbacks had hot nights Saturday. Gary Danielson, who lost his starting job to Eric Hipple, came off Detroit's bench and threw three touchdown passes, two to David Hill, against the Bengals, and Terry Bradshaw completed 15 of 26 passes for 260 yards and a pair of TDs in Pittsburgh's romp against the Colts.

Earl Campbell ran roughshod through Tampa Bay's defense, rolling up 121 yards and a touchdown in the first half, then sat out the rest of Houston's victory.

In Saturday night's exhibitions it was the Los Angeles Rams 23, Seattle 13; the New York Giants 22, the New York Jets 10; Cleveland 20, New Orleans 17; Detroit 27, Cincinnati 23; Pittsburgh 37, Baltimore 15; Houston 21, Tampa Bay 6; Dallas 36, New England 21; Denver 27, Minnesota 17; San Diego 23, San Francisco 9; St. Louis 10, Chicago 3, and Kansas City 17, Miami 17 in overtime. On Friday night it was Atlanta 24, Philadelphia 21, and Buffalo 20, Washington 14.

Carner wins in Classic playoff

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — JoAnne Carner caught a cold playing an exhibition last week, but now she has both a cure and a way to pay her doctor bills.

Carner defeated Sandra Haynie in a 5-hole playoff Sunday to win the $165,000 LPGA Henredon Classic on the 6,191-yard, par-72 Willow Creek Golf Club course.

"I don't think I have a cold any more," Carner said after her victory. "It's happened a lot where a player who is sick plays well, but this is a first for me."

While Carner can use her $24,750 prize money to pay her medical bills, Haynie can use her $16,170 runner-up winnings to pay for swimming lessons — something she unexpectedly needed on the decisive fifth playoff hole.

Haynie's tee shot on No. 17, the final playoff hole, landed in a hazard area on the bank of a lake. When she took her second shot, she lost her balance and fell into the water. It was, for all purposes, an $8,580 fall — the difference between first and second place.

"I lost my concentration, composure, and a little bit of everything," said Haynie. "It's hard to concentrate when you're slopping up the fairway. I was wet up to my waist."

Carner, 43, from Palm Beach, Fla., who last week won the World Championship of Women's Golf in Cleveland, made a routine par on the hole. And when a soggy Haynie's third shot stopped on the fringe of the green and she two-putted for bogey, Carner had career victory no. 36.

"I didn't see her go in the water," Carner said. "I didn't realize she was that close."

Carner twice avoided defeat in the playoff, chipping in from 64 feet on the second playoff hold and hitting a 15-foot, par-saving putt on the fourth extra hole.

The playoff became necessary when they tied at 8 under par 280 after 72 holes. Haynie had begun the day with a two-stroke lead but shot a 74 while Carner finished an even par 72.

Kathy Whitworth, Hollis Stacy and Janet Coles tied for third place at 5-under-par 281. Whitworth and Coles shot final-round 68s while Stacy, a first-round co-leader, shot 71.

Patti Rizzo and Nancy Lopez tied for sixth at 4-under-par 82, Rizzo closing out in 4-under-par 68 and Lopez, a crowd favorite, shooting 71.

Miami Dolphins defensive end Doug Betters (75) wraps himself around Kansas City Chiefs quarterback Steve Fuller (4) to throw Fuller for a five-yard loss in sudden death overtime Saturday night in K.C. Miami linebacker A.J. Duhe (77) watches the sack as linebacker Ron Hester lies on the ground. The exhibition game ended ina 17-17 tie.

Two NASL playoffs need third games

Two North American Soccer League playoff series were extended to decisive third games as the Fort Lauderdale Strikers and Vancouver Whitecaps won Sunday night.

The Strikers' Berndt Holzenbein scored with just 19 seconds gone in overtime to beat the Montreal Manic 1-0, forcing Game 3 in Fort Lauderdale on Wednesday night. Branko Segota's shot struck the crossbar and Holzenbein knocked in the rebound from five yards out in front of a house full at Lockhart Stadium.

Strikers Coach Eckhard Krautzun said: "I think we had so many chances that we deserved to win. The overtime goal was a little bit lucky, but overall we played a good technical game. I'm very confident we can do it again Wednesday." Vancouver will visit San Diego Thursday to complete that series after the Whitecaps' scored a 1-0 victory Sunday.

Ray Hankin scored with less than nine minutes remaining. It was Vancouver's first win over San Diego in four games this season.Hankin, who led the Whitecaps in scoring through the regular season with 11 goals, took a long pass from midfielder Terry Yorath and directed the ball inside the near post from 10 yards, beating goalie Volkmar Gross at 81:41.

The other two series also stand 1-1, with Tulsa at the Cosmos on Wednesday night and Toronto at Seattle.

Lack of bargaining may force strike

CHICAGO (AP) — Representatives of the National Football League Players Association could put the heat on league owners in their contract negotiations today by setting a strike date.

Player reps and the NFLPA gather here to discuss the lack of bargaining progress and to decide what they want to do about it.

"I think there is a pretty good chance a strike date will be set," Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFLPA, said Sunday in a telephone interview from his Chevy Chase, Md., home. He said the most likely time for any walkout would be between now and the fourth or fifth game of the regular season, which starts Sept. 12.

The Association has asked for 55 percent of the gross receipts brought in by the 28 teams, including television revenue anticipated from a lucrative contract recently signed.

"We know the owners are about to put an offer on the table," Garvey said. "They've been talking to some of the players individually about it."

But, he said, some of the player representatives have been dissatisfied with the owners' refusal to bargain.

"They want to see what steps we can take to force bargaining," Garvey said.

Garvey discounted rumors that the Players Association may adopt some strategy aimed at forcing the owners into locking out the players.

"At tnis stage we're more interested in a conventional approach," he said. "If we go out, we'll shut it down."

There has been some talk of a more selective action, one or two teams going out or a half-dozen or so top players from each team refusing to suit up.

"These alternative approaches put too much pressure on a small group of people," Garvey said. "We believe it's a responsibility everyone should bear."

If the owners locked the players out, it would give the players clear legal freedom to set up an alternate schedule of games outside the control of the owners, Garvey conceded.

The association already has an agreement with Ted Turner's Atlanta-based SuperStation, WTBS, to broadcast an alternative schedule of games if it comes to that.

"We'd be ready to go within two weeks of a strike," Garvey said.

But he said, it's the association's position that the owners already have been guilty of unfair labor practices — refusing to bargain and other alleged infractions — so that if it comes to a strike, the association can argue it was forced to take that action.

U.S. beats Soviet nationals, 224-156

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Frank Comfort, coach of the U.S. swim team, says he wasn't surprised by his team's victory over the Soviet nationals in a three-day dual meet at the University of Tennessee.

But he said he was surprised at the 224-156 score.

"I think that after each day the possibility was there for a win," Comfort said after the meet ended Saturday. "I know that our people had no thought of slowing down."

The American men topped the Soviets 111-79, and the U.S. women outscored their opponents 113-77 during the outdoor meet in which no world records were set.

The Americans won nine of 10 events Saturday and eight of 12 events each day Thursday and Friday. U.S. men's and women's teams won all the relay events — 800-meter freestyle, 400-meter free and 400-meter medley.

"I DON'T know why Americans can do it, but we swim well time after time," Comfort said. "A lot of young people got a lot of experience over the past three days."

Soviet Coach Sergei Vaitsekhovsky, saying he was ready for an upcoming two-week vacation, said he wasn't too disappointed with his team's performance.

"Our team was going down after World Championships and your team was going up," he said. "I tried to keep them going up, but it was not possible. The American team was stronger than mine."

Mary T. Meagher, the U.S. women's team captain, topped the meet record of 1:00.40 in the women's 100-meter butterfly Saturday with a time of 1:00.19. On Thursday, she won the 200-meter butterfly in 2:09.50. The Louisville, Ky., 17-year-old holds the world record in both events.

ROWDY GAINES, 23, of Winter Haven, Fla., swam the 200-meter freestyle in 1:49.43 Saturday — topping the meet record of 1:51.19. The day before, he swam the 50-meter freestyle in 22.78. He holds the world's record in both events.

Karin LaBerge won two events for the U.S. team — swimming the women's 1,500-meter freestyle in 16:27.92 Saturday and the 800-meter freestyle in 8:38.18 Thursday.

The Soviet's top swimmer was Vladimir Salnikov, who Saturday continued his domina-tion of the 1,500-meter freestyle with a time of 15:09.77 — 11.22 seconds ahead of American Jeff Kostoff.

Salnikov on Thursday won the 800-meter freestyle in 7:54.88 — 5.08 seconds ahead of American Bruce Hayes. Sanikov holds the world's record in both events, and hasn't lost the 1,500 since 1977.

The USSR's Larisa Gorchakova also was a double winner, taking the women's 100-meter backstroke in 1:03.43 Thursday and winning the 200-meter backstroke Friday.

Navratilova needs U.S. Open to win grand slam

NEW YORK (AP) — Pilar Vasquez won the Canadian Open junior girls title in 1979 and reached the semifinals of the Italian Open junior girls tounament in 1980. Now she will be in the spotlight at the U.S. Open Tennis Championships, meeting five-time champion Chris Evert Lloyd in the first round.

America's premier tennis event, held at the National Tennis Center in Flushing Meadow, gets underway on Tuesday.

Despite her opening-round foe, Vasquez is a "lucky loser." She lost in the women's final qualifying round on Sunday, but, because of her world ranking, reached the main draw when eighth-seeded Sylvia Hanika of West Germany had to pull out with a sore shoulder.

A native of Lima, Peru, the 19-year-old Vasquez moved with her family to Key Biscayne, Fla., in 1977. She turned pro late last year and won her first tournament in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, as she played 24 tournaments in nine months in nine countries.

Although she got her chance in the U.S. Open when Hanika withdrew, she was paired with Lloyd, the No. 2 seed, because Bonnie Gadusek of Largo, Fla., was moved into a seeded position in the women's draw.

Gadusek, 19, originally was seeded 16th. But a Women's Tennis Association rule caused her to be replaced as the 16th seed by Zina Garrison of Houston.

Boros' swing sheer beauty

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Correspondent

One of the pleasures of the fast-growing Senior Golf Tour is that it gives us all a chance to stand on the sidelines and watch Julius Boros swing a golf club.

It's a thing of sheer beauty.

The name Boros is not exactly a household word — as in the cases of Hogan, Palmer and Nicklaus — but it is firmly etched in the memories of middle-aged disciples of the fairways and carved in concrete in the old sport's record books.

Even if you can't engrave the symphony of a swing, you can list the credentials and, in the case of "Ol" Moose," as his contemporaries were wont to call him, the statistics are impressive.

It was this paunchy New Englander of Hungarian origin who came out of 15 sand traps without loss of a stroke to break Ben Hogan's streak of U.S. Open championships in 1952 in Dallas. Eleven years later, he returned to The Country Club in Brookline, Mass., to prevent Jack Nicklaus' successful defense of his first Open title and beat Arnold Palmer in a playoff.

That's a pretty rough way to handle a trio of the game's immortals. But it represents only a corner of the fellow's portfolio. Since turning professional in 1950, Boros, spanning three eras, has scored 18 tour victories and won more than $1 million in prize money.

Now at age 62 he is one of the featured performers on the PGA Senior Tour, competing against such familiar pieces of golfing lore as Palmer, Don January, Sam Snead, Gene Littler and Bob Goalby, to name only a few.

Boros, winner of two U.S. Opens, is singled out because he is the special honoree at the next Senior Tour bash — the Merrill Lynch-Golf Digest's Commemorative Pro-Am Sept. 16-19 over the Newport (R.I.) Country Club.

It's the magazine's 32nd birthday party and Boros is picked because he best represents what has happened to the game in the three decades of the publication's existence.

Not many guys are able to say they looked Hogan, Palmer and Nicklaus in the eye and beat them.

The $125,000 event takes place on one of America's oldest and most historical courses — a Scot-like seaside links which was founded in 1893 and was host to the first U.S. Open and Amateur championships in 1895.

In those days, the tournament was held primarily for amateurs — or "gentlemen." The pros, whose status was similar to that of a gardener, were permitted to play as a gesture of charity — so long as they changed clothes in the shop and didn't enter the clubhouse.

Now the pros are the big attraction — celebrated athletes, many of them millionaires — and the amateurs are the spear-carriers of the sport.
