Alaskan Pipeline Cuts Oil Imports

AUSTIN (AP)-The Alaskan pipeline is beginning to have an effect on crude oil imports into the United States, chairman Mack Wallace of the Railroad Commission noted today.

Wallace said at the statewide oil allowable hearing that imports were 7,741,000 barrels per day for the four-week average of Feb. 3, a million fewer barrels per day from a year ago.

The reduction, he said, "is due primarily to Alaskan production being able to reach the lower 48 states."

The commission routinely set the allowable for March at 100 percent, with some exceptions, including an 86 percent allowable for the huge East Texas Field.

Nominations by major buyers of Texas crude oil totaled 3,575,638 a day for March, a decrease of 8,502 barrels a day from February.

Here are the major nominations for March, in barrels per day, with any changes from February in parentheses:

Amoco 325,000 (down 2,000)
Atlantic Richfield 170,000
Chevron 66,380
Cities Service 105,000
Continental 54,500
Diamond Shamrock 36,000
Exxon 670,000 (down 3,000)
Gulf 140,000
Marathon 49,670
Mobil 345,000
Phillips 115,000
Shell 243,000
Sun 136,700
Texaco 130,000
Union of California 95,000.

Negotiators Prodded

WASHINGTON (AP)-President Carter is prodding negotiators and meeting with a dozen governors in a double-barreled effort to deal with the increasingly disruptive 73-day coal strike.

Carter called bargainers from both sides to a rare White House session Wednesday night in an attempt to get the strike settled before it seriously harms the country.

Officials said the session, which lasted slightly more than an hour, went smoothly and that talks would resume today at the Labor Department. However, sources who asked not to be identified emphasized that large differences remain.

The session, the first nighttime labor talks at the White House in a decade, established ground rules for today's bargaining.

Recipient Improving

HOUSTON (AP)-A Texas oil field worker was reported in critical but slightly improving condition today after receiving Houston's first heart transplant in eight years.

The 21-year-old man also received a kidney in the four-hour double transplant operation early Wednesday.

The Texas Heart Institute and St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital would not reveal the name of the recipient whose medical problems were said to have started with an abscessed tooth.

The name of the donor was not released by the hospital but the Houston Post identified her as Leona Singleton, 38, of Houston who died in nearby Methodist Hospital from severe brain damage.

It was the 22nd heart transplant to be performed at St. Luke's but the first since Sept. 25, 1969. None of the recipients lived more than 16 months. Since then Dr. Denton A. Cooley, head of the Heart Institute, has concentrated on the development of a mechanical heart.

5th Suspect Arrested

HOUSTON (AP)-The FBI reported today the arrest of a fifth suspect in connection with an alleged plot to kidnap the son of Houston business magnate Kenneth Schnitzer.

Robert R. Frank, special agent in charge of the Houston FBI, said authorities have arrested Armando Luna, 51, of Houston, aboard the commercial vessel Valley Forge in Sewaren, N.J.

C-C Board Discusses Banquet, July 4 Plans

Plans for the annual chamber banquet, industrial development and the annual July 4th celebration highlighted the regular meeting of Snyder Chamber of Commerce directors Wednesday evening.

John Cameron, chamber president, appointed committees to select recipients for two awards to be presented at the chamber banquet on March 3, and Roy Kidd was reappointed to head the July 4th committee.

Mrs. Edith McKanna, who received the award last year, will serve on the committee to select this year's McLaughlin Award recipient. This award will go to an outstanding local citizen associated with the oil industry. On the committee with Mrs. McKanna are Dalton Walton and Cameron.

Morris Light, who received the Winston Award last year, will serve on the committee to choose this year's recipient, along with Ernest Sears and Milton Stephens. The Winston Award is presented each year to the Scurry County resident making the greatest contribution in the field of agriculture.

The McLaughlin award was established in honor of the late C.T. McLaughlin, oilman, rancher, banker and philanthropist, and the Winston award was established to honor the late Wade and Harrie Winston, pioneer ranchers, registered Hereford breeders and civic leaders.

Two other major awards will be presented at the banquet this year. They are the William A. Vestal Award for community development and the conservation award by the ASCS. The Vestal award, presented each year by the city government, honors the late William A. Vestal, who was serving as mayor at the time of his death in 1976.

Plans also were discussed for observance of Texas Industrial Week, April 1-7, and for participation in West Texas Chamber of Commerce's annual Washington Reception set for March 6 in the nation's capital. The board voted to pay the registration fee of anyone from the local chamber who attends the event in Washington, which is held each year to enable people from West Texas cities and towns to visit with legislators and officials in various federal agencies.

The board approved a program of work and an organizational chart and discussed plans for the community goals session held today at the Snyder

PLAQUE PRESENTED — Anita Anderson was presented a plaque from Phillips Petroleum Co. at a meeting of Snyder chamber of Commerce directors Wednesday for winning first place with her free enterprise project in area Distributive Education Clubs of America competition. Making the presentation were John Cameron, left, chamber president, and Dr. James Tulley, who headed the chamber committee which provided free enterprise education materials for local schools. Miss Anderson credited these materials with making a major contribution to her winning project. See another picture on page 10. (SDN Staff Photo by Jo Ann Nunley).

Student Is Honored For Free Enterprise Project

Snyder Chamber of Commerce directors got a report on another highly successful project at their meeting Wednesday afternoon.

They were told that material provided by the chamber for teaching Snyder High School students something about the free enterprise system is making an impression.

One of the highlights of the board meeting was the presentation of a plaque to Anita Anderson, a distributive education student at SHS, who won first place honors in area competition in a free enterprise project. She credited the materials provided by the Chamber of Commerce with making a major contribution to her winning project. The plaque was sponsored by Phillips Petroleum Co.

Miss Anderson now will be entered in state-wide competition at San Antonio.

She is employed as a DE student at Munden's.

Her free enterprise project included an essay and a list of activities designed to inform students about the free enterprise system. She also enlisted the cooperation of Mayor John Fagin, who, at her request, proclaimed Jan. 15-25 "Free Enterprise Week" in Snyder.

In addition to Miss Anderson's first place award, two other students earned high honors in the area competition, which involved schools in Texas from Brownwood to El Paso.

Susie Mayes placed second in the student-of-the-year competition and third with her studies in marketing project. Trina Lawler placed fourth in the area in advertising services.

Picked up from the mail:

Despite all of the traffic during the deer, quail and dove seasons, hunters spend more hours nation-wide hunting rabbits than any other animal.

This bit of information comes from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, which also reminds that Texas is fortunate to have five different varieties of rabbits among its wildlife. There are three species of cottontail, and jackrabbit and the swamp rabbit found in the Lone Star State. The Panhandle-Plains region has two types of cottontails--the Audubon and Easter--and of course the jackrabbit.

The University Interscholastic League, which sponsors various contests for public school pupils in the state, ranging from football to poetry interpretation, is going to continue keeping boys and girls on separate athletic teams, and they are doing it because they believe it is necessary to keep programs available for participation by both sexes, according to a recent news release.

An Ohio court ruled recently that a girl could play on a boys' football team. But Texas UIL people believe that the girls athletic participation would be nil if all teams were open to students of both sexes.

It is not difficult to see which group would suffer most if boys were allowed to play on girls' teams and girls allowed to play on boys' teams, says the UIL. Therefore, they believe that separation of girls' and boys' athletics is essential to the survival of the girls' programs. At present there are eight UIL programs for boys and seven for girls playing through to state titles. At present, an eighth activity for girls--softball--does not play past the district level, but if sufficient interest develops, it probably will be extended to a state championship each year also.

Roads Still Iced Over In Some Areas

Mist and light drizzle fell over the Snyder area early today, as temperatures hovered around the freezing mark.

To the north, advisories were issued to travelers as icing conditions made roads and highways hazardous. Streets and roads in and around Snyder were free of ice, but the light precipitation kept them slippery.

The State Department of Highways and Public Transporation reported an ice cover on roads in Dickens, Motley, Lubbock and Briscoe Counties, and also in the Amarillo area. Ice on bridges was reported in Wheeler and King Counties.

Fog reduced visibility in some areas, and a fresh winter storm threatened to spread more freezing precipitation and cold temperatures.

The official thermometer at the Snyder water plant never got above the 32-degree mark Wednesday and it was 31 degrees at 7 a.m. today. There was some icing in trees and shrubbery and on rooftops.

carter's strange war

It has been just about a year since President Carter told Congress the nation's energy situation had deteriorated to the point where it had become the moral equivalent of war. This dramatic characterization of the problem has not been matched with action.

Opinions differ concerning the explanation. One view is that the petroleum industry's lobby has sold influential Senators on the validity of its claim that the Administration program is based on the concept that the end of dependence on oil and natural gas as a major source of energy is in sight and rationing scarcity is in order.

Another view is that the Administration loaded its program with tax legislation, social change and expansion of government regulation at the expense of seeking increased production and development of alternate sources of energy.

In any case there has been universal disregard of need of the urgency implied in the President's message to Congress. If we were in a war situation and went about the job of winning it with as much confusion as we have approached the energy problem the enemy would have won long ago. So the declaration that the nation's energy crisis is the moral equivalent of war must have been no more than a figure of speech.

wrong prescription

Disturbing to thoughtful people of all ages, political affiliation and ethnic background is the fact that in spite of persistent efforts to correct the imbalance in the rate of unemployment among black and white youths not only remains but seems to grow worse with passage of time.

President Carter proposes to meet the situation by setting up special grants to pay the cost of training young people, particularly blacks, in the skills they must have in order to obtain jobs. This is a commendable step, but it leaves basic causes of the problem completely untouched.

Greatest single barrier is the high minimum wage. Leaders of both political parties have been listening to union lobbyists and social activists. This results in pressure on Congress to continue escalation of the minimum wage.

There is an allowance in the law for apprenticeship periods. But employers know the only way to stay out of trouble with the U.S. Department of Labor is to give beginners the same rate of hourly pay as experienced workers receive. It's a problem of economics conflicting with political expediency. In that kind of situation politics wins and youngsters in need of jobs lose.

tax money to create

Your money is being used to create.

No, I can't say that.

I was going to say your tax dollars are being used to breed bastards -- but we don't use that word any more.

Out of pity for the unfortunate offspring of our anything-goes society, we are using only the word "illegitimate" for babies born out of wedlock -- and some think it's unfair to such babies to label them at all.

Yet it does seem, does it not, that we had fewer of each in the days when we were willing to call dirt what it is and junk what it is -- and sin what it is.

Marlene Stucky can talk now.

When she was an employee of the department of social and health services in the state of Washington she didn't dare.

But she got so fed up with the appalling abuses of our government's welfare system that she quit. Now she can recite some of the circumstances -- and experiences -- that caused her to reach the stomach-turning point.

For examples:

Unmarried mother, age 20 and on welfare, has had two babies at taxpayer expense.

Pre- and postnatal care for both was paid for -- at a cost of some thousands of dollars -- by you.

Plus subsequent living allowances for all three.

She's pregnant again. And you will pick up the bills again. The father is unknown.

When state welfare people suggested that this young mother should learn some marketable skill she replied, "I never liked school and I still don't."

So she and her illegitimate offspring -- and probably additional ones -- will be supported indefinitely -- by you.

Miss Stucky suggests that the state of Washington provide contraceptives and instructions for their use to any female, 14 or older, along with a written understanding that in any future pregnancy any and all maternity expenses will be borne by the mother or nearest relative.

State lawmakers have promised to think about it.

The case which triggered Miss Stucky's resignation involved a 23-year-old mother of three illegitimate children.

After these three illegitimate children, this welfare mother reported herself unable to get pregnant.

Now she and her current boyfriend wanted a baby and she could not have one and -- sit down for this -- the department of social and health services authorized and paid for expensive medical tests to diagnose her problem. It was learned that she needed extensive surgery.

So that surgery and subsequent hospital care -- amounting to $4,300 -- was billed to you.

And the woman and her current boyfriend -- they are unmarried and he is chronically unemployed -- are now the illegitimate parents of her fourth welfare baby.

And you will continue to support this "family" indefinitely.

my turn

by john long

Even the normally insensitive people I work with are beginning to notice the new me.

A person can go for only so long before falling into the rut of routine. I am not old enough to have fallen into very many ruts, but last month I noticed myself slipping into one. I resolved to do something about it.

I began by giving up smoking and losing some weight. None of my coworkers even noticed it. After two years of enduring often uncomplimentary comments on my cigars, they didn't even know I quit until I told them.

They did notice it when I got my hair cut, however. But by then it was too late: my feelings were already hurt.

And, before this latest cold snap, I even began doing a little jogging. I have also thought about buying a bicycle and pedaling around Snyder for even more exercise.

Now I have begun reading comtemporary literature. Heretofore I have read the works of Twain, Dickens, and Doyle, but have sadly neglected many of the more recent writers.

I have never been a big man and I am now quite skinny. Before I am through with my diet and exercise, I am going to appear almost emaciated. Last night I passed the time by fiddling with my collar bones and counting my ribs.

Surprisingly, none of the changes during these past few weeks were among my New Year's resolutions. Actually, I haven't even begun to work on my New Year's resolutions. I suppose that will be my next project.

It is William Cowper who is credited with coining the expression that variety is the spice of life. Cowper, incidently, was purportedly locked up three times in his life for insanity. It makes one wonder about the value of variety.

Still, I have reached the conclusion that periodic change is for the better. It promotes intellectual development and exposes one to new ideas. It lifts one above the rut in which he finds himself and places him on another level ... that will ultimately lead to another rut, I guess.

congress hears voices

WASHINGTON, D.C. -- As has been pointed out in the space before, certain types of legislation have a germination period before finally being enacted into law. It took twelve years for Medicare and Medicaid to finally get on the books.

A number of proposals for various types of social programs have been around for years and will be around for a few more. One of these which has, at various times, come up for a vote has been the so-called "Consumer Protection Agency." In the beginning, this was the title. A later version was called the "Agency for Consumer Protection." Finally, the legislation to create the new agency was entitled "Office of Consumer Representation." The country was done a favor last week when the bill with this latter title was defeated. The result of turning down this proposal by a vote of 227 to 189 was a defeat for the Carter Administration, the leadership of the House of Representatives, the crusader-Ralph Nader, and an assortment of consumer groups.

The measure was supposed to protect the consumer against something or the other, even though we have the Consumer Product Safety Act and a half dozen other offices in various agencies which are supposed to do this very thing.

As a matter of fact, this new agency, aside from imposing another costly bureaucratic layer on the people of this Country, could be harmful to consumers by increasing the cost of doing business and driving up prices. It would have created additional Federal red-tape and tied up Government decisions in the Courts.

It is to be concluded that the majority of the members of the House of Representatives finally heard the voices of the American people who are weary of too much Government, too much protection and too much of what other people think is good for them. It is a victory for the Nation that this legislation was defeated. Hopefully, it will stay in the deepfreeze for quite a time to come but, of course, this idea seems to have more lives than a cat and could crop up again under another name.

Other bills which should be put to rest, the fate of which has yet to be determined, are still on the burner. Among these is President Carter's "welfare reform" which has been approved by a subcommittee. Anything called "reform" is attractive to a lot of people because it suggests something better than what we have. The reform bill by the Administration would add, by the year 1982, when fully effective, $21 billion to existing welfare programs. It proposes to give outright cash grants to recipients to take the place of what we now have, including food stamps.

Another bill approved last week by a subcommittee commits the nation to work towards full employment. This is known as the Humphrey-Hawkins bill which has been discussed here before and is expected to be up for a vote in the next two to three weeks. No one can really know how much it will cost the taxpayers for make-work to reduce unemployment to 4 percent by 1983. An amendment to also set a goal for reducing inflation by the same percent by 1983 was rejected.

This all suggests that to spend and spend has a greater appeal than to do those things to reduce inflation and balance the budget.

WASHINGTON-(NEA)-The presents are ready, all neatly wrapped and ribboned, awaiting the celebration of Mason Daniel Miller's birthday. But the packages are a little dusty now, and the toys may seem inappropriate.

Mason, you see, is going on 9, and the presents in the closet of a Washington town house were purchased for his 5th birthday by his father, Arnold I. Miller, and assorted other relatives.

Mason never had a chance to open them. In June 1974, his mother whisked him away from the Washington area and dropped from sight, making Mason and his father the victims of a phenomenon that has reached crisis proportions in this country: child-snatching.

Arnold Miller has spent nearly four years and more than $20,000 in a fruitless search for his son. Through friends and a fluke, he learned last year that his ex-wife, Toby, divorced him in Atlanta the year after she snatched Mason and won a court order there granting her custody of the child. She told the court she had no idea where the boy's father was, although Miller was right where she had left him when she took off with Mason.

Miller's anguish, unfortunately, is shared by thousands of other parents each year. Crumbling marriages and soaring divorces rates contribute to anywhere between 25,000 and 100,000 child-snatching cases annually, depending on whose estimates you accept.

There is no effective legal remedy against a parent who simply runs off with his or her child. Custody orders of one state are unenforceable elsewhere, and many youngsters are abducted before a divorce and custody decree has even been granted.

Parental child "stealing" is specifically exempted from federal kidnapping statutes, and no federal agencies-the FBI, IRS or the new Parent Locator Service of HEW-are empowered to help locate missing victims. State and local authorities shun these cases too, refusing to become involved in "domestic" matters.

But Congress, at long last, may be ready to crack down on child-snatching-thanks, in large measure, to the unrelenting efforts of Children's Rights, Inc. of Washington, the organization Arnold Miller founded the year after Mason was taken.

The massive revision of the federal criminal code which the Senate has just passed and sent to the House includes provisions to make parental child-snatching a federal offense punishable by as much as 6 months in prison and a $10,000 fine.

It would also allow use of HEW's Parent Locator Service, originally set up to track down fathers of children on welfare who fail to make support payments, to trace youngsters abducted by a parent. The FBI could be used as a last resort.

"Right now, we have a Parent Locator Service that will bring back the dollars but not the child. Some sense of priorities, huh?" says Miller.

Finally, the bill would require that custody decision be made by a court in the state where a child has had his or her home and make them enforceable elsewhere as well.

This isn't the first time Congress has tried to tackle the child-snatching crisis. Reps. Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla., and Hamilton Fish, R-N.Y., among others, already have bills pending in the House Judiciary Committee that address various aspects of the problem.

In the past, however, the Justice Department has opposed making child-snatching a federal offense, complaining that to do so would overburden the FBI and other federal authorities.

The Senate version, combining criminal and civil approaches to the problem is the best legislation offered to date. If the Carter administration is as concerned about family life as it claims to be, the Justice Department should quit dragging its heels and press for swift enactment of the measure.

new law dissected

NEW YORK (AP)-The new Social Security law, which President Carter said "evolved after very careful and long preparation," is being dissected by critics just as carefully but much more swiftly.

The critics' common theme is that the law, which sharply increases payroll deductions to support benefits, might not have been so "wise" as the president deemed it at the Dec. 20 signing.

The reason for so thinking isn't only the huge increases in deductions to support benefits. Critics point out that it might also result in a relatively smaller contributions to retirement income. Yes, smaller.

"Millions of workers whose pensions are tied to Social Security may find their private pension benfits substantially reduced," says the public accounting firm of Coopers & Lybrand.

In some private plans, C&L explains, a company may provide a benefit of, for example, 1.4 percent on each year's earnings over the Social Security wage base.

Under the old law, a salaried employee receiving $40,000 a year-with a $20,400 Social Security wage base-had excess earnings of $19,600, and received a pension benefit of $274 a year.

But, it explains, under the new law, the same employee would in 1980 find his Social Security wage base had jumped to $25,000, leaving him excess earings of just $14,000.

That, of course, would mean a drop in his accrual benefit from $274 to $197, a decline of $77 or 28 percent.

So-called "stepped up" plans also would be hurt. In these, an employee receives benefits of perhaps 1 percent up to the SS wage base, and maybe 2 percent on each year's earnings over the base.

"Every plan that coordinates its benefits or contributions with Social Security must be reviewed now," said the accounting firm. And, it notes, thousands of the 600,000 existing plans are so tied.

The firm of Kwasha Lipton, an international actuarial and employee benefits consultant, is now circulating a detailed "special bulletin" in which it cautions that the new law means lower benefits for some.

Those likely to be hurt, it states, are employees born after 1916 whose benefits begin after 1978. "Social Security benefits will follow a dramatically different course than under prior law," it observes.

Under both laws, it calculates, a person age 65 who retires in 1978 at a salary average of $20,000 over the final five years on the job will receive as a Social Security benefit 31.9 percent of that amount.

But in future years, this consultant estimates that retirees will receive a much lower percentage of final pay under the new law than under the old.

For those retiring in the year 2018, it estimates, the width of the gap could be on the order of 51.2 percent under the old law, 34 percent under the new.

The principal impact of the December law, it concludes, is to produce lower benefits for employees born in 1917 or later and an increase in taxes.

Private consultants aren't the only ones having doubts.

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, just a few weeks after passage of the bill, told the Joint Economic Committee that the entire business of Social Security, including financing, might be reconsidered.

But the biggest criticism of all is likely to come from employees and employers, both of whom are by law required to pay huge increases in annual maximum taxes beginning in 1979.

In that year the maximum rises to $1,403.77 from this year's $1,070.85. In 1980 the maximum moves up to $1,587.67, and then it jumps to $1,975.05 a year later.

Potatoes are good teamed with snap beans. Peel and dice the potatoes and cut the beans in small pieces; cook together in a small amount of salted boiling water until tender. Dress with butter and garnish, if you like, with crumbled, crisply cooked bacon.

The student took his ace of hearts, cashed the ace of spades, entered dummy with a diamond and led a spade from dummy.

This way of playing trumps was the correct safety play. It guarded against losing two trump tricks unless it turned out to be an impossibility, as it was in this instance.

West took his two spades and led hearts. Eventually, it was up to the student to decide which way he should finesse for the queen of clubs. He guessed right and turned happily to the Professor to ask. "Good play! Wasn't it?"

"Fairly good play," replied the Professor. "You did take the safety play in trumps, but you wound up having to guess about the queen of clubs. Correct play would have eliminated the club guess."

What the Professor meant was that the student was right for the first two tricks.

But at tricks 3, 4 and 5 he should have cashed dummy's ace and king of diamonds and then ruffed the last diamond.

The next play would be the low heart. Either opponent could win, but would have to lead a club to take South's finesse for him, give South a ruff and discard or sacrifice a trump trick.

Miss Bennett Weds Valentine's Day

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP)-A shipboard marriage would have been nice, but the captain said he couldn't, so actress Joan Bennett and retired writer David Wild settled for Valentine's Day vows instead.

Miss Bennett, star of such motion pictures as "Little Women," "Moby Dick," and "Father of the Bride," and Wild said they planned to marry three weeks ago on a Norwegian-American cruise in the Carribbean, but the captain said he could only marry Norwegians.

They were married at the Westchester County Courthouse here, with eight friends watching.

It was Miss Bennett's fourth marriage. Her last ended in divorce in 1962.

ENVIRONMENTAL STUDY — Sally Thornhill, left, introduced Mr. Erwin Pavlic, district conservationist for Soil Conservation Service, who presented a film on the outdoor classroom at a school in Lubbock to the Amitie St. Study Club recently. Nancy Martin, second from right, and Bessie Abrahams, right, were hostesses for the meeting.

On Health Care Plan

Sen. Kennedy Wins A Behind-Scene Battle

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, a long-time champion of national health insurance, appears to have won a behind-the-scenes battle with the Carter administration to get the president's health care plan before Congress this summer.

In the process, Joseph A. Califano Jr., secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, was undercut by the White House. Califano "got sandbagged in the service of the president," as one of his aides put it.

The Massachusetts Democrat drew the skirmish lines more than a year ago at Califano's confirmation hearings in the Senate. At the time, Kennedy extracted from the incoming secretary a schedule that put national health insurance on the administration's agenda early in 1978.

Less than four months later, in May 1977, the senator thought he detected some slippage in the schedule and told a United Auto Workers convention in Los Angeles that health insurance was "in danger of becoming the missing promise in the administration's plans."

The forum had been carefully chosen. The UAW had founded the Committee for National Health Insurance and had been a key supporter of Kennedy's far-reaching national health plan, under which the federal government would pay for health care for all Americans.

The day after Kennedy's appearance, Carter flew to Los Angeles to address the UAW convention and restated his plan "to submit legislative proposals early" in 1978.

Kennedy said he was pleased with Carter's statement, and the issue faded into the background while the administration struggled with other issues, such as an energy policy, welfare reform, tax revision and the Panama Canal.

At an Oct. 27 news conference, Carter said, "I was thinking the other day about what new major innovative proposals might be forthcoming next year and the year after. I can't think of any. I think we have addressed all of the major problems already."

Then, in December, Califano began sending out subtle signals that the health plan might have to await more guidance from the states.

Instead of complaining again publicly, Kennedy sought out UAW President Douglas A. Fraser, and together they called on Carter to tell him privately that they wouldn't stand for further delay.

The president, apparently realizing that national health insurance legislation had little chance of passage without labor support, reaffirmed his commitment.

Kennedy apparently was promised that the principles of the administration proposal would be completed in March and specific legislation would be submitted to Congress in time for Kennedy to hold hearings on it before adjournment in the summer or autumn.

Last week, Kennedy reportedly was setting a bill before his subcommittee by then.

Teen Wants To Do Same as Her Peers

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Thanks a lot for asking that mother who didn't want her 12-year-old daughter to start shaving her legs to please reconsider. You said, "How a girl feels about herself is very important." You're right, Abby.

I'm 13 and my mother won't let me shave my legs. Just about every girl in school shaves her legs, and some even slip behind their mothers' backs to do it.

I don't want to go against my mother, but I wish she'd let me shave. When the kids at school laugh and make fun of me, I pretend I don't care, but I do. Can you put in a good word for me?

HAIRY

DEAR HAIRY: If you want to shave your legs because all the other girls do, it's not a good enough reason. But if you're really "hairy," ask your mother to take a good look at your legs and to please be reasonable.

What a pity that when a girl reaches the age where her legs need shaving, her mother is at the age where SHE needs glasses.

DEAR ABBY: May I answer the woman who gets angry and upset when her husband "ogles" the girls?

She is making a big mistake to criticize him for it.

My husband is like hers—only he's 72. He not only "ogles" the girls, he always has a compliment for waitresses and checkout girls. No matter what they look like, when he tells them they're pretty, they light up like a Christmas tree!

Why shouldn't men of any age enjoy looking at girls? As Oliver Wendell Holmes said when someone asked him how old a man had to be before he stopped looking at girls, "You'll have to ask somebody older than I am, son. I'm only 82."

MABEL

DEAR MABEL: And as the old vaudeville comics used to say, "A woman is as old as she looks, and a man isn't old until he quits looking."

DEAR ABBY: What business do YOU have telling people they should telephone the hostess (within a day or two) to thank her for a party?

When my guests say, "Goodnight and thank you," that is enough for me. I don't need to have a telephone call from each guest the following day, repeating their "thanks."

The day after a party I have plenty to do, putting things back and cleaning up the place. I certainly don't need to spend hours on the phone receiving repeated thank-yous!

A lot of people take your word as gospel, Abby, and if YOU say it's proper etiquette to do something, people are going to do it. Please take back what you said about telephoning the hostess the next day to thank her again.

I had a party Saturday night, and by Monday I had a...

CORN ON MY EAR

DEAR CORN: Forgive me, but I also said, "The super-gracious guest writes a note, which is less of an intrusion than a telephone call."

CONFIDENTIAL TO MY READERS: If you have written to the Salvation Army requesting that they try to locate a missing relative, please be patient and do not write again. The requests are being processed as rapidly as possible.

Getting married? No matter how little you have to spend or how unconventional your lifestyle, it can be lovely. Send for Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Enclose $1 and a long stamped (24 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

'I'll Be Back,' Says Muhammad Ali, But For Now Spinks Is Champion

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)- "I'll be back. I'll be the first man to win the world championship three times," said Muhammad Ali, today a 36-year-old challenger for the heavyweight title.

Ali has backed up his boasts many times. But maybe an era really has ended.

Leon Spinks, the 24-year-old with just seven previous pro fights, stripped the title from Ali Wednesday night after applying pressure for 15 rounds. Ali was reeling at the final bell and Spinks gained a split decision.

It was a stunning upset matching Ali's triumph over Sonny Liston when he won the heavyweight title for the first time in 1964 and his knockout of George Foreman when he won it for the second time 10 years later.

"I tried hard," said Spinks and he certainly did, overcoming Ali's advantages in size and experience with grim determination. He never lost his cool as so many of Ali's opponents did in the past. He never was awed.

"I thank God," the new champion said. "God's the main man. Lord knows I tried hard.

"I'll give Ali another chance."

"I gave the best I could," said Ali. "I knew he was a good fighter. It was a close fight. He was the aggressor. It could have gone either way."

Judge Art Lurie scored it 143-142 for Ali under the 10-point must system and when his decision was announced, Spinks' handlers looked stunned. But then the announcer read off the cards of Harold Buck, 144-141, and Lou Cabat, 145-140, and announced, "the new heavyweight champion of the world, Leon Spinks."

The question mark before the fight was Spinks' ability to go 15 rounds against a man of Ali's size and vast experience. The longest Spinks had fought previsouly was 10 rounds and one of those fights, against Scott LeDoux, ended in a draw.

"What surprised me was his strength and stamina," said Ali, who wilted before the brawling Spinks in the final three rounds and who looked much older than 36 at the end.

Ali, trying to make Spinks punch himself out in the early rounds and picking his spots with jabs, hooks and an occasional right lead, still was in the fight after 12 rounds - he was leading on one card and even on another.

But then Spinks who weighed 197¼, 27 pounds less than Ali, and who was at a four inch reach disadvantage, landed several good hooks and left-right combinations to the head in the 13th round. Spinks' trainer Sam Solomon said he thought Spinks had Ali going in that round but that he was foiled by his inexperience.

Spinks swarmed all over Ali in the 14th and hurt the former champion with a left hook mid-way through the round. At the end of the round, Ali's left eye was swollen.

The final three minutes were toe-to-toe all the way, with both fighters staggered. Ali was punching desperately but he couldn't keep Spinks off and just before the bell he appeared ready to go down.

Ali won the heavyweight title in his 20th pro fight by stopping an aging Liston in seven pounds on Feb. 25, 1964, when Spinks was 11 years old. The only title bout he lost before Wednesday night - he was stripped of the crown in 1967 for failure to accept military draft - was on a decision as a challenger to Joe Frazier March 8, 1971.

It would be an incredible feat to win it again.

Sign Athletes From New York To Colorado...

SWC Coaches Trod Country For Talent

By The Associated Press

Ohio, Colorado, New York, Kansas, Alabama, and Oklahoma proved fertile recruiting grounds Wednesday for Southwest Conference teams-particularly the University of Texas - on national letter-of-intent signing day.

The only bluechipper that remained unsigned in the state of Texas was massive 280-pound lineman Maceo Fifer of Kerrvile, who failed to sign with West Texas State as expected, putting the Longhorns and Southern Methodist back into the picture.

Texas Coach Fred Akers, seeking to replace Heisman Trophy winner Earl Campbell at tailback, flew to Youngstown, Ohio to sign Antony J. Jones, who rushed for 1,200 yards and was named to four different high school All-America teams.

Jones was in Austin last weekend where he met Campbell.

Southwest Conference champion Texas overcame pressure from Gov. David Boren and Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer to sign speedy running back Rodney Tate of Beggs, Okla.

Switzer went on a statewide radio show Monday night to encourage Sooner fans to send Tate telegrams. He got 40 to 50 mailgrams.

"He (Boren) called me last night and asked me how I was and encouraged me to play at OU," said Tate.

Texas outlasted Southern California for Jones.

Texas Tech signed Randy Page, a 58 per cent passer from Oklahoma City Southeast. Tech Coach Rex Dockery was on hand personally to do the honors.

Arkansas went to Littleton High School in Colorado to sack Chip Beard, a wide receiver, and lineman Steve Korte. Alfred Muhammed, a 240-pound lineman from Youngstown, Ohio also signed with the Razorbacks. Coach Lou Holtz outbattled Bear Bryant for the services of highly regarded running back Thomas Brown of Montgomery, Ala.

Willie Wright, a 185-pound running back who had signed an SWC letter with Texas Tech, was signed by the Sooners. Wright, who also had been recruited by Texas, rushed for 1,490 yards last year for El Paso Burgess and averaged 22 yards on punt returns.

Southern Methodist landed in Ohio quarterback, Bill Price of Centerville.

North Texas signed another highly regarded running back, Carl Mitchell of Pasadena, who had considered Texas A&M but never signed a letter of intent with the Aggies.

Coach Emory Bellard of the Aggies bounced back by signing John DiGirolamo, a 240-pound lineman from Elmont, N.Y. and lineman Lynn Maughmer of Houston Milby.

Tech invaded Kansas to sign 260-pound offensive guard George Smitherman of Independence-Community College.

Western Texas College Cagers To Host South Plains In County Coliseum, 6 p.m.

Area fans can see all the excitment they want tonight at Scurry County Coliseum when the Dusters and Westerners host South Plains beginning at 6 0'clock.

Tonight's double-header marks the first time since Jan 14. that both WTC teams have played back-to-back games at the Coliseum.

Revenge could be on the line for both local college teams, however keeping a hold on the conference lead will be the major driving effort.

The Dusters, ripped 87-60 by South Plains earlier this season, can grab at least a share of the WJCC lead by winning tonight and next Thursday against Howard County College. The girls, 14-8 for the season and 7-2 in league play, are one game behind Howard County.

Meanwhile the Westerners, sole occupants of the men's conference peak, will be working to keep that honor, and repay a 71-70 debt handed to them by the South Plains in Levelland in mid-January.

The Westerners are 22-6 for the year and 11-4 in league play.

South Plains comes into tonight's game with a 7-2 record carried by the women, and a 6-9 record posted by the men.

The visiting women's team welcomed back four girls which went to the national tournament last year, making South Plains perhaps the top-talented squad in the conference.

Starting for the Dusters will be Jo Beth Mitchell in place of an injured Gay Lea Lunday, Karen Williams and Cindy Luttrull at the forwards and Cathy Minton and Jackie Rose at the guard spots.

The Westerners will open with Reginald Reid and Joe Mendoza at guards, and Robert Brown, Melvin Patridge and Jon Moorehead at forwards.

Tickets for the twin-bill are $2 for adults and $1 for students. Senior citizens are admitted free.

The WTC stage band was expected to add instrumental highlight to the contest, as well as perform during half-times and between-game intermission.

Lopez KOs Koeti In 6

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)- "I have to admit it was a much easier fight here than it was over there," said a jubilant Danny "Little Red" Lopez after he successfully defended the featherweight title against David Kotei a little more than a year after he took the championship from Kotei in Ghana.

Lopez retained his championship Wednesday night at the Las Vegas Hilton Hotel Pavillion when the referee stopped the fight at 1:18 of the sixth round in the scheduled 15-round title bout.

Lopez, who weighed in at 126, the featherweight limit, took over midway through the second round when he landed a solid right to the face of the 125-pound Kotei.

Willis Inks Grid Pact With West Texas State

Dickey Highlights SWC Track Meet

FORT WORTH (AP)- Last week Curtis Dickey ran on the boards for the first time in his life at the Oklahoma City Indoor Meet and clocked the third best recorded time in the 60-yard dash.

The Texas Aggie halfback with the sprinter's speed could threaten Houston McTear's world record 6.11 seconds tonight in the Southwest Conference Indoor Track and Field Championships - now that he has all that experience.

Dickey sizzled to a 6.17 clocking in the preliminaries and took the finals medal with a 6.18 time.

The 200-pound Dickey and salty 130-pound middle distance whiz Niall O'Shaughnessy of Arkansas via Ireland were the headline performers at the Tarrant County Convention Center.

Olympic sprinter Johnny Lam Jones of Texas was missing because of a pulled hamstring muscle suffered in the Cotton Bowl game.

Coach John McDonnell said O'Shaughnessy, who stunned the field to win the 1,500 meters at the United States Olympic Track and Field Invitation in Madison Square Garden, would concentrate on the 1,000 meters then come back and anchor the two-mile relay.

"This isn't an individual meet ... we need the points," said McDonnell.

Houston is the defending champion but the Texas Aggies are expected to provide some stiff competition.

Greg Caldwell of Houston tied for second in the high jump and the Cougars won the team champipnship by 43 12 points to 43 for Baylor. Texas A&M had 41, Texas 38 12 and Rice 35.

C-City To Fight For Title Tonight

SWEETWATER – Colorado City and Abilene Wylie are scheduled to fight for the District 6-2A basketball championship here tonight.

The 7:30 contest will mark the third time this year the two teams have battled, with each squad noting a win in the series.

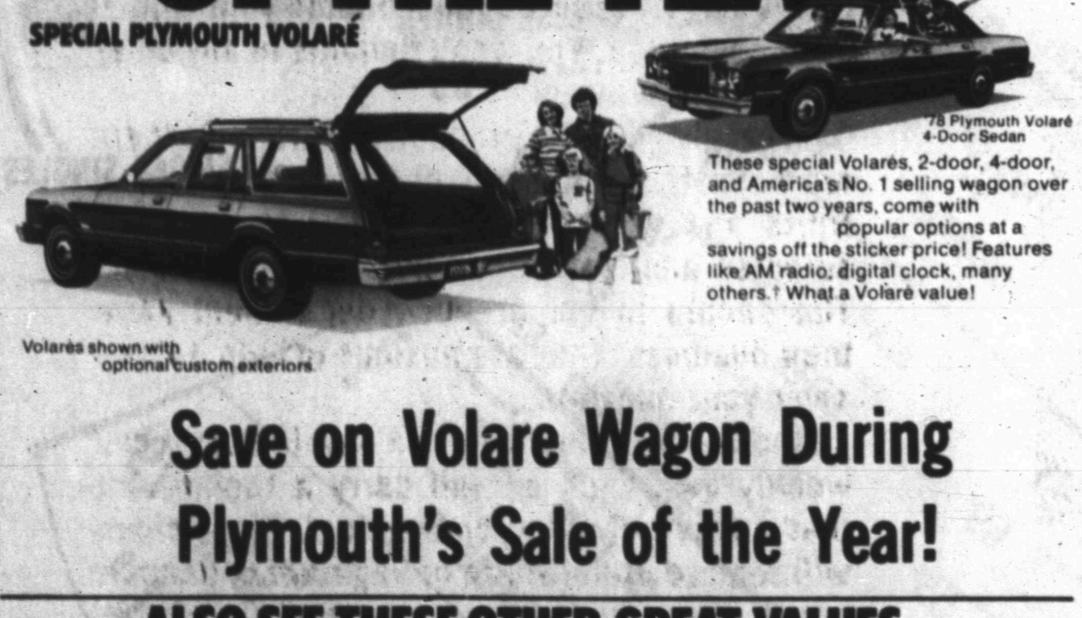

Wylie, winner of round-one 6-2A, whipped the Wolves 61-51 earlier in the year, while Colorado City stopped the Abilene bunch 75-55 enroute to the second -round title.

The Wolves, coached by Mike Hart, have been particularly impressive in the second half of district play, taking Merkel 54-52, Ballinger 66-59, Stamford 64-42, Coahoma 74-54, Winters 68-57 and Wylie. Colorado City last won district in 1968, and advanced through bi-district and regional before losing in the state playoffs.

Tonight's winner is scheduled to play the victor in Friday's Denver City-Tahoka game.

Upsets 12th-Ranked Texas 79-77 In Waco...

Baylor Solves Hog-'Horn Problem

By The Associated Press

There is no need to fret anymore about having to use a coin flip to determine whether Arkansas or Texas gets the bye to the finals of the Southwest Conference post-season tournament, says Texas Abe Lemons.

The Baylor Bears took care of that Wednesday night by stunning 12th-ranked Texas 79-77 in Waco and giving top-ranked Arkansas sole possession of the SWC lead for the first time this season.

"It solves a lot of problems for Arkansas," said Lemons. "It had to end sometime. It's too bad the Baptists don't drink in public. It'd be a nice night for them to celebrate."

But the Razorbacks, who have a 12-1 SWC mark compared to Texas' 12-2 slate, aren't home free. They must travel to Dallas tonight to play Southern Methodist, journey to Houston Saturday to take on the hot Cougars and host third-place Texas Tech next week.

The Hogs and the Longhorns had traded losses to each other and appeared to be headed for identical 15-1 SWC ledgers this season. SWC officials voted to use a coin flip as the method to decide which team got a free trip to the finals.

Both Lemons and Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton claimed it would be unfair because the losers in the coin flip would have to win three games to get back where they started.

Jim Vaszauskas calmly canned two free throws with eight seconds remaining and Vinnie Johnson, the SWC's leading scorer, collected 29 points to spark Baylor's upset.

"I have never had a feeling like this before. This is the greatest thing to happen," gushed Baylor Coach Jim Haller, whose Bears are battling SMU for fifth place and the home-court advantage in the tournament's first round.

"I didn't have them ready to play," said Lemons. "I don't know what I did wrong. When your team takes the floor and is not ready, that's the coach's fault."

Also Wednesday night, Cedric Fears and Cecil Rose combined for 37 points, including the final five points of the game, to propel Houston over Texas Tech 81-77 in Lubbock.

Willie Foreman, Vernon Smith and Rynn Wright combined for 54 points and Texas A&M's pressing defense forced Texas Christian into 36 turnovers as the Aggies whipped TCU 88-72.

Ref Trio Trial Run Approved

COLLEGE STATION (AP)-The proposed three-man team of basketball referees got a trial run Wednesday night at the Texas Christian-Texas A&M Southwest Conference game, and the experiment drew applause from officials and coaches alike.

Although the Aggies drew 27 of the game's total 45 fouls en route to a 88-72 victory, A&M Coach Shelby Metcalf said having an extra official was an improvement.

"It gets all areas covered, and the officials don't get caught out of position," he said.

TCU Coach Tim Somerville had some reservations, but he said a three-official policy would be "good for the league."

"They were trying to prevent a fight or an outbreak, and they overdid it at first," said Somerville. "They just need to learn how to rotate and work together."

The officials saw several advantages to having an expanded crew, including better coverage, greater ease in controlling the bench, more experience for younger referees and a intimidation factor.

"I think the three-man crew is a deterrent to foulir.g," said Bob Straface.

BARNEY'S BEEF & BEER STEW

My stew recipe will take the chill right out of your bones on a cold winter's eve. Now, the beef is the main ingredient - so be sure you get the best (at Piggly Wiggly, of course). The beer will add gusto and bring out the superb flavor of the beef. You'll find this recipe tastes even better the second time around.

- 2 lbs. boneless stew beef cut into 1 inch cubes
- flour for dredging
- salt & pepper to taste
- ¼ cup vegetable oil
- 6 medium onions, sliced
- 1 clove garlic, finely chopped
- 1 12-oz. bottle of beer
- 1 T chopped parsley
- 1 bay leaf
- ¼ t thyme

Combine flour, salt & pepper. Dredge the meat in seasoned flour. Heat oil in skillet; add onion & garlic. Cook until tender but not brown. Remove onions from skillet. Add meat & brown, adding a little more oil if necessary. Return onions to the skillet. Add the remaining ingredients. Cover and cook over low heat until meat is tender, about 1¼ hours. Serve hot with boiled potatoes and a salad.

Dayan Protests Plane Sales Plan

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)-Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, in a tightly planned one-day visit today, is registering his country's protest over proposed U.S. warplane sales to Egypt and Saudi Arabia.

Dayan also is promoting peace negotiations during a nine-hour schedule that crammed in talks with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, a brief courtesy call on President Carter, a news conference and a meeting with members of Congress.

Israel is hoping its friends on Capitol Hill will block the arms sales.

The administration, having proposed for the first time to sell jets to Egypt and to equip Saudi Arabia with 60 of the world's best fighters, now appears eager to paper over Israeli vexation over Carter's decision.

But even if administration minds are made up, Dayan is still conveying his government's concern that the sale of 50 F-5E Tigers to Egypt and F-15 Eagles to Saudi Arabia would pose a peril to Israel's security and threaten to tip the Mideast arms balance in the Arabs' favor.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin told the Isareli parliament on Wednesday that there was "a crisis" in U.S. relations, but he reaffirmed his support for a peace settlement.

The State Department, meanwhile, reaffirmed "enduring and strong ties" with Israel and insisted that peace prospects were enhanced by the arms sale decision.

"Clearly, Israel and we differ on some issues," said a statement read by spokesman Ken Brown. "Part of that relationship, as is always the case between close friends, is a frank airing of differences.

"But these differences do not in the least detract from our common search for peace and the lasting commitment of the United States to the security of Israel.

Assistant Secretary of State Alfred L. Atherton, who soon may be endowed with the title of ambassador-at-large, will return to the Middle East next weekend and stay "indefinitely," according to U.S. officials.

Court Upholds Alimony Ruling

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP)-A divorced man has been ordered by the state's highest court to keep paying $160 a month in alimony to his former wife who is living "openly and notoriously" with another man.

Over a dissent that said the "grotesque" ruling would obligate a husband to subsidize his ex-wife's affairs, the Court of Appeals held 5-2 on Tuesday that state law requires alimony even for ex-wives who have moved in with other men.

Alimony payments in New York normally end only with the death or remarriage of a former wife, but this case turned on an obscure section of a 1938 law which allowed the cutoff of payments in instances where an ex-wife is living with a man and "holding herself out as his wife."

The court majority, led by Judge Lawrence Cooke, held that the woman must actually try to pass herself off as legally married to the man before she can lose her alimony payments. Such action would include applying for utility or bank accounts using his name and making statements to other people.

That interpretation is "unrealistic in terms of current social standards and practices," said the two dissenting judges, who held that it should be enough that a woman live with another man as his wife-sharing his bedroom, cooking his meals and sharing expenses.

At issue was the 1974 divorce of a Rochester couple, Ray and Anna Northrup.

He won custody of their children but was ordered to pay her $160 a month alimony. He stopped after two months, citing the fact that less than two weeks after the divorce she had moved in with a man named Ray Prentice.

Two lower courts ruled that Northrup had a right to stop alimony payments. But the high court reversed those rulings, holding that "there was no evidence that plaintiff ever stated to anyone that she was married to Prentice."

In his dissent, Judge Sol Wachtler called the decision a "narrow, technical and unrealistic" interpretation. "It is hard to imagine that the Legislature ever intended such grotesque result," he wrote.

"Today's decision leaves the courts powerless to relieve the former husband of the obligation of subsidizing his former wife's affairs no matter how unfair this may be under the circumstances," Wachtler wrote.

Sabotage Indicated In Alaska Pipeline Blast

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP)-A 20-foot length of fuse and a black stain on the snow are evidence in what state troopers say is the second attempt to blow up the trans-Alaska pipeline.

A sabotage attempt last summer did not even dent the $7.7 billion pipe, but on Wednesday a hole was blown in the 48-inch steel line.

Thousands of barrels of thick Prudhoe Bay crude oil-no exact figure was available-gushed over the tundra for hours. The 800-mile-long pipeline was shut down shortly after the spill was reported, and the flow was slowed to a drip late Wednesday.

An Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. spokesman said the line should be operating again in 24 hours. A "sleeve" was being welded over the hole in the half-inch-thick steel.

Asked whether he would describe the explosion as sabotage, state police Sgt. Larry Mix said, "I would describe it as somebody using an explosive device to blow a hole in the pipeline."

Morris "Jack" Turner of the Interior Department's Alaska Pipeline Office had said shortly after the leak was spotted: "There are some indications that it is sabotage. You have to suspect foul play."

No arrests were reported.

The oil was contained in an area 600 feet in diameter around an above-ground section of the pipe about six miles east of Fairbanks, Alyeska reported. The amount of oil lost was not known, but estimates of the peak rate ranged up to three barrels per second. A barrel has 42 gallons.

Clue at the spill site included a length of slow-burning fuse, a hole at the base of a depression in the pipe and a black stain on the snow. Alyeska said the hole was an inch in diameter, but the troopers said it was two inches.

Alyeska workers, state troopers and a military demolition team searched through the night for additional clues.

This is the fourth significant leak since oil began flowing from Prudhoe Bay to the Valdez pipeline terminal last spring. The previous leaks were attributed to human error.

Last summer, three Fairbanks men were charged in connection with a sabotage attempt that did little but shred the thick layer of insulation on the line.

Turner confirmed that the pipeline's highly sophisicated leak detection system had not picked up the spill. It was reported by a private pilot flying over the line.

Reports differed on when the leak was reported, ranging from noon to 3 p.m. Alyeska said the leak had almost stopped by 8 p.m.

Although the pipeline was shut down, Turner said the leak occurred in an area with a downward slope "so that it will tend to drain out, like a garden hose." The hole was about a mile from the nearest check valve, at Mile 454.5 of the line.

Turner said up to 20,000 barrels could spill out if the line emptied all the oil in the affected section.

The pipeline had been carrying 740,000 barrels daily. That rate was due to be increased to 1.16 million next month with the startup of Pump Station No. 8, which was destroyed last summer in an explosion attributed to human error.

2 Mishaps, Vandalism Are Reported

An act of criminal mischief and two traffic accidents were investigated Wednesday by city police.

Prentis Bass reported to officers that the front window down of his 2802 46th St. home had been shot out, possibly with a pellet gun sometime between Feb. 12 and Feb. 15. While no exact damage estimate was available, the cost was expected to run into the hundreds of dollars.

In a separate window breaking incident, police questioned a 10-year-old boy in connection with the destruction of some windows on a piece of road machinery owned by Grimmett Brothers Construction Co. The incident, which was reported to police Tuesday, caused an estimated $150 damage.

The intersection of 30th St. and Austin Ave. was the scene of a two-car collision yesterday at 11:21 a.m. Involved in the mishap were a 1966 Chevrolet driven by Tammy Lee and a 1976 jeep mail-truck driven by Harold Lockhart. Moderate damage was reported to each vehicle.

Moderate damage, was again reported to two vehicles that collided yesterday at the intersection of 25th St. and Ave. E at 1:19 p.m. The mishap involved a 1966 Ford pickup driven by Wanda York and a 1975 GMC pickup driven by Davis Lee Weaver, an employe of the Jack Burkett Co. of Graham.

'Friendly Bandit' Glad She Was Caught

DETROIT (AP)-She apologized to clerks for robbing their stores-she'd been beaten, she said, or her baby had died. Afterward, she called to make sure everyone was all right.

Police called her the "Friendly Bandit," and the woman they arrested says she is glad she was caught.

Rosemarie Wojtaszek, weeping while awaiting arraignment, said she resorted to robbing clothing stores because a bookmaker threatened her family over a $6,000 gambling debt.

"See, I got these beautiful kids at home and a wonderful husband and I didn't want to hurt them," she said.

Police said Mrs. Wojtaszek implicated herself in a string of robberies beginning Feb. 2-three clothing stores in Detroit and five in the suburbs-and they believe her.

After each of the eight cases, police said, store clerks noted how friendly, even apologetic, the woman was.

Mrs. Wojtaszek, 39 and the mother of five, said she was addicted to gambling and hated robbing stores. She said she wanted to be caught.

She was last Saturday, police said, after a woman wearing a red wig walked up to a clerk at a cash register in Fuhrman's Apparel Shop, pulled a gun and said: "My baby died. I need money."

The woman took $46, then demanded several articles of clothing, including three fur coats. While she gathered the clothes, a clerk called police. Mrs. Wojtaszek was arrested as she walked out the front door, police said.

On Sunday she was arraigned for the Saturday crime. On Tuesday, after talking to police, she was arraigned for the Feb. 2 robbery of a dress shop-the first of the "Friendly Bandit" incidents. Police said they may charge her in the other robberies, and she was being held in Wayne County jail on $150,000 bond.

In the Feb. 2 robbery, a middle-aged woman wearing a red wig got away with clothing worth about $350 after telling two elderly female clerks she had been beaten and needed money for an attorney.

Afterward she called to make sure no one was hurt.

"Those poor old ladies were so sweet to me," Mrs. Wojtaszek said Tuesday. "I never pointed the gun at them and when I got home, I was shaking like a leaf. I thought: 'Those poor old ladies. What if someone had a heart attack?' So I called back to see if everyone was all right."

Mrs. Wojtaszek said her gambling addiction started with a few football bets and quickly grew into bets of up to $1,000, placed with a bookie she refused to name to reporters.

Her husband, Herman, an auto worker, said the gambling losses amounted to $20,000 last year. He said he helped pay the debt and tried unsuccessfully to get his wife to seek help for her addiction.

Mrs. Wojtaszek said the bookmaker called a few weeks ago and demanded immediate payment of the outstanding $6,000.

"He told me: "Your kids might turn up missing, or we might put a bomb in your car. We know where your husband works.

"That's when I knew I couldn't stand it anymore," she said in a whisper. "When they began threatening my family, I had to do it."

Missionary Conference Is Set At Union UMC

Union United Methodist Church will begin its first annual Missionary Conference at 6:30 p.m. Friday.

Dr. Harold Spann of Wilmore, Ky., will be the coordinator of the conference, with Dan and Barbara Lunow, missionaries on furlough from Iraian Jaya, Indonesia, and Mrs. Charles Graff, wife of the pastor of First United Methodist Church in Haskell, as guest speakers.

Rev. and Mrs. Graff are missionary candidates and will be serving in Quito, Ecuador, within the next year.

Services will begin at 6:30 each evening and at 11 a.m. on Sunday. Also, the missionaries will speak to the Church School classes at 10 a.m. Sunday. Any interested person is invited to attend one or all of the services, which will conclude with the 6:30 p.m. service Sunday.

Dr. Spann is assistant to the president for institutional advancement at Asbury College. He was formerly dean of students. A native of Kilgore, he is a member of the Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church. He served in pastorates in Texas, including First United Methodist Church in San Augustine for eight years before joining the college. He has served on a number of boards in various capacities and now preaches in revivals, camp meetings and missionary conferences across the country.

Dan and Barbara Lunow are living in Minneapolis, Minn., while on furlough. They will share experiences of their ministry in Indonesia.

Rev. and Mrs. Graff will be involved in a program of direct evangelism and church planting in the Quito area. She will have the additional responsibility of acting as mission hostess and leading women's Bible studies. He practiced law before entering the ministry, and she was a school teacher for nine years.

Muriel To Decide By Late April

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)-Minnesotans will know by late April whether Sen. Muriel Humphrey will seek election to complete her late husband's term in the Senate, she promised Tuesday.

"I want to do what I feel is right," Mrs. Humphrey said at a news conference. "I need more time for a proper decision."

Mrs. Humphrey, whose appointment to the seat of Hubert Humphrey expires when a special election is held in November, said her decision will be announced before the start of congressional district conventions of Minnesota's Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party on April 23.

Four years remain in the Senate term Humphrey was elected to.

C-City Board Rejects Check

COLORADO CITY--Trustees of the Colorado Independent School District refused to accept a check for $14,000 from Coastal States Gas Corp., which the company had submitted as payment in full for its taxes levied by the district.

The district's tax levy against the company is $24,000. Disagreeing with values set by the district, Coastal States submitted the check based on its own valuations.

Tax Collector J.S. Craddock Jr., said he had advised Coastal States that it had been placed on the delinquent list as of Feb. 1.

Mormon Will A Fake

Jury Decides Hughes Legal Texas Resident

By ROB WOOD
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP)-A probate court jury needed only 30 minutes and one vote to decide that the late Howard Hughes was a legal resident of Texas and that the so-called Mormon will was a fake.

After 10 weeks of testimony and the introduction of more than 1,000 documents, the three-woman, three-man panel met for about 90 minutes, including the time needed to get administrative matters out of way, to check briefly the evidence, and to announce its verdict.

Jurors said the vote was unanimous on the first ballot, and another legal step was taken to solve the puzzle of where the millions of dollars in the vast estate should go.

Texas Atty. Gen. John Hill said he doubted if the case would go through the federal courts because "all our evidence indicated that Hughes, if asked where his legal residence was, would have said, 'Houston.' That's where he was raised, that's where he made his fortune, that's where he paid his federal taxes, that's where he registered for the draft, that's where he was headed when he died and that's where he is buried."

Frank Davis, chief attorney for the temporary administrators of the estate, was not in the courtroom when the verdict was read.

Contacted later at his Houston law office, Davis said, "I was not present when the jury reported, but I am disappointed because I feel the evidence shows strongly that Mr. Hughes was not a legal resident of Texas."

The verdict by the jury, which included two persons who were not native Texans, could mean millions in inheritance taxes for the state.

Texas Comptroller Bob Bullock said he was pleased with the outcome and "there is no doubt that it will mean many millions of dollars."

He said the Hughes estate is now being audited by a private appraisal firm hired by the Internal Revenue Service.

"Obviously, this matter is going to be litigated some more. But there is no question now that Texas stands at the head of the line."

Hill said the inheritances taxes would be between $25 million and $150 million.

The co-administrators of the estate, William Lummis, 38, a cousin of Hughes; and Annette Gano Lummis, 89, an aunt, wanted Nevada ruled as the legal residence of the late eccentric recluse. There is no inheritance tax in that western state.

Frank Dallas, a member of the jury and a native Texan, told newsmen, "There just wasn't any evidence to prove that Mr. Hughes was not a Texan.

Jailer Post Created For Fisher County

ROBY--The Fisher County Commissioners Court has established the position of Fisher County Jailer and taken other steps to comply with new guidelines concerning jail conditions.

The post of jailer is due to be filled within the next 60 to 90 days, it was indicated. He will be classified as a sheriff's deputy and must be a certified peace officer.

The commissioners authorized the purchase of three smoke alarms for the jail, a high velocity smoke removal fan for the prisoner area, approved the purchase of a breathing apparatus and property storage locker for prisoners.

Also approved was establishing of a three-man reserve deputy force for the sheriff.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Degrees of depression

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you please send me your Health Letter on mental depressions? My wife is in a mentally depressed stage. She has been under a psychiatrist's care, but she quit going a year and a half ago. She eats a lot of sweets and drinks a lot of low-fat milk. She sleeps about 15 hours a day, which is not good. Your advice will be appreciated.

DEAR READER — I am sending you The Health Letter number 1010, Depression: The Ups and Downs of Life, as you requested. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, TX 78292.

As I pointed out in the letter I am sending you, there are several degrees of depression, from simple grief or disappointment to what is best called a reactive depression and the advanced form that qualifies as a psychosis.

It is very important that people with advanced depressions obtain adequate psychiatric help. A great deal can often be done for such people these days. There are medicines available that help control the acute discomfort that many of these people feel. Also, it is dangerous to fail to get good psychiatric help, as some of these people become so depressed that they may harm themselves.

I noted your address and would suggest that you try to get your wife to make an appointment with the University Medical Center in your state. After they have evaluated her condition they may refer her to someone in your area whom she will be willing to work with afterward.

Your wife may also need a careful medical evaluation to be certain she has no underlying medical problems that may be confusing the issue. She may be sleeping 15 hours a day for entirely different reasons. A more detailed history of her sleeping habits may show that she has narcolepsy and has real problems staying awake, but only a good evaluation will tell you. Usually depressed people do better if they are physically active.

DEAR DR. LAMB — If you have a fever, over 100, does it matter if you do any of the following: walk around barefoot, take a bath, wash your hair, take off most of your clothes, have lively and long telephone conversations? You are right — it adds up to a teenager. Apparently our doctor said those things do not matter at all and are old wives' tales. I was told by my mother that all of the above things are "no no's." Please advise.

DEAR READER — I hate to tell you this, but during mild illnesses such as a cold with a mild fever, none of those things really make any difference as long as the patient is comfortable.

When your body is hot, it is normal to want to enable it to use its normal cooling mechanisms and that implies uncovering it. In fact, as the fever goes up, the fever can become a problem in itself.

We do not even forbid jogging and exercise for adults who have mild illnesses.

Now, if your child had inflammation of the heart, as in rheumatic fever, that would be a different matter. Or if the patient had liver disease and needed bed rest, that is where she or he should stay. But for mild illnesses, washing the hair or even those long, lively telephone conversations won't hurt a bit — although some of these might be a strain on the parents.

Irving Says Publisher Gambled, Lost

NEW YORK (AP)-"Putnam gambled and lost and so did I," author Clifford Irving maintains in his response to a suit by the publisher G.P. Putnam's Sons, which seeks repayment of a $15,000 advance it gave Irving.

Putnam's contends it gave Irving the advance in July 1975, for a manuscript of a book titled "Those Girls" to be delivered by December of that year and that Irving failed to do so.

Irving maintains in a letter to his agent, Julian Bach, that the publisher rejected the first 166 pages he delivered in January 1976.

Bell Handles Most Of Education Matters

WASHINGTON (AP)- What Cabinet officer do you suppose deals most often with President Carter on education matters?

If your answer is Joseph A. Califano, Jr., the secretary of health, education and welfare, Carter says you're wrong.

According to the president, the correct answer is Attorney General Griffin Bell.

Carter made this somewhat startling disclosure at a private White House reception last week for officials of the National Education Association.

According to a guest at the affair, Carter recalled that as governor of Georgia he spent 20 to 25 percent of his working hours dealing with one or another facet of education.

He was quoted as reporting the proportion is far, far less now that he's president. In fact, Carter was further quoted, Bell brings more education issues to the Oval Office than does Califano.

The informant said the president attributed the situation to the legal complexities involved in many education questions, notably those involving racial integration and desegregation.

Lest anyone mistake him, Carter quickly added words of high praise for Califano, the party-goer reported.

Carter Counting On NEA Help

The reception for the NEA was one in a continuing series of White House social gatherings for groups ranging from Polish-Americans to Democratic Party fundraisers. NEA officials presumably were invited because Carter is counting on their help in trying to persuade Congress to create a new Department of Education.

Although Carter held a few similar receptions last year, the pace of entertaining has been stepped up since advisers recently began urging the president to widen the circle of those with whom he rubs shoulders and to whom he delivers brief speeches intended to win new friends for the administration.

'People' New

The Executive Office of the President has a new monthly newsletter for employees. It's called "People."

The three-page February issue, the first, contains such "hot" items as reports that James T. McIntyre, Jr., had been nominated to succeed Bert Lance as director of the Office of Management and Budget and that Special Trade Representative Robert Strauss had conducted trade talks in Tokyo.

Granddaughter Of Snyderite Spreads Health Information

Jina Richardson, R.N., community health educator for the Quay-Harding Counties Mobile Unit, is the subject of a feature story in the Sunday, Jan. 29, issue of the Quay County, N.M., Sun. Ms. Richardson is the granddaughter of Mrs. Josephine Randals of Snyder and the late R.J. Randals, and of Ira Riley, a former Snyder resident. The article, which follows, is an account of one of Ms. Richardson's weekly trips to Roy, N.M., in the mobile unit.

If Jina Richardson's supervisor had to compose a help-wanted ad to find a successor for the petite brunette RN, it would probably resemble a recruitment poster for an experienced foreign service officer to serve in Bolivia or Rwanda-Urundi. Among the requirements would be physical stamina, patience and the ability to converse in native dialect and relate to indigeneous customs.

At the same time, besides being knowledgeable in the medical field, the candidate would have to possess a keen understanding of the labyrinthine channels of government bureaucracy and be able to translate ponderous decrees and memoranda into concrete action. Her mission: to carefully build up a grass-roots health information network where none existed before.

"If I were from Albuquerque, this would be a nightmare," Mrs. Richardson remarked Monday morning as we boarded her Volvo for the 90-minute trip to Roy, where she was scheduled to address a women's group on the subject of prenatal care. The audiences at such meetings consist of women who are thought to be opinion leaders in their communities, as well as anyone else who's interested. Hopefully anything they might learn will later be passed along to their acquaintances through casual conversation.

JINA RICHARDSON, R.N.

"It helps that I grew up here, because I understand that one of the values in this part of the country is not telling anyone else what to do," she continued. She grinned as she recalled when one of the program's administrators in Albuquerque hatched a grand scheme for giving the area's cattlemen a course in ranch safety. He also suggested that the entire program could be speeded up by making the participants at her seminars promise to regurgitate their learnings at other meetings.

"Both of those were red flags," she laughed. "There's no way anyone is going to lecture ranchers on safety." She should know: her husband and father are both lifelong cattlemen. "I'm also not about to try to impose any kind of obligation on the people who are interested enough to attend the talks," she added.

(As a matter of fact, she's so appreciative of their attendance that she insisted on making the trip Monday in spite of a laryngitis attack that left her hoarse and nearly speechless. "It's to establish credibility ... I've got to get everyone used to the idea that I'm going to show up when I'm scheduled.")

However, notwithstanding Jina's dedication to her students and to the soft-sell principle, she still has to be careful not to overtly offend any of the people who control the Health Education program's pursestrings, if only for the sake of the project's survival. And in addition to anticipating and circumventing the bureaucrats' whims, while taking care not to offend the pride of her fiercely independent clientele, she also has to contend with the suspicions of other interest groups.

Some of the public health officials and school nurses in both counties, for example, periodically regard her as a threat to their own hegemony and must be reassured that such is not the case.

"I believe in it," she explained. "I'm excited by the idea of conducting health education through informal channels. I took the job because it was too unique to pass up, and I'd like to see it succeed." She added that the service she's trying to provide is definitely something her constituents need, by virtue of the fact that so much misinformation exists about most aspects of health care. She cited one facet of prenatal care as an example:

"A prospective mother should start planning for her prenatal nutrition needs five years in advance, and she should anticipate a weight gain during pregnancy of between 24 and 30 pounds, instead of the 10-15 pound gain that was recommended previously. Surprisingly few people are aware of that, and they run the risk of going on a damaging diet as a result."

Sure enough, when she administered a pre-lesson test a few minutes later to the six women who appeared at the Roy Senior Citizens Center for the presentation, all six answered incorrectly. When they shook their heads in disagreement with the correct response, Jina laughed and replied, "I thought you'd give me some flack on that; I should have xeroxed an article to show you." She welcomed the disagreement, however, maintaining that all the women will remember the incident better "because they have a stake in their answer."

The SUN-staffer, ever-suspicious of potentially frivolous government programs, also took the test in order to determine whether or not any really important information was at stake. He managed to pass it, but only because of good luck and years of experience at test-guessing in college. The test illustrated the extent to which both he and the audience were misinformed about such phenomena as Rubella, the correctability of RH negative blood problems, birth defects caused by toxoplasmosis, underweight and premature babies, and environmental factors which can cause birth defects.

After each woman corrected her own test, the group viewed two instructional films provided by the March of Dimes, both of which confirmed Jina's opinions on the weight gain and other questions. As the meeting concluded, she capsulized the objective of the entire Health Education Program with the remark, "This is our aim, to provide you with the information you need and then let you make up your own mind. Of course you have to have faith in your doctor, but you need to use your own common sense as well."

Blind Trucker Is CB Talked To Stop

EL DORADO, Kan. (AP)-A truck driver suddenly struck blind while driving on the Kansas Turnpike was "CB talked" to a safe stop by another trucker whose name he never learned.

Francis Gilmore, 43, or Grand Rapids, Mich., said he went blind as his 40-ton rig, carrying eight new cars, sped along the turnpike east of El Dorado.

"I knew there was a box tractor-trailer behind me," Gilmore recalled Wednesday night. "I started hitting my brakes, I was all over the road. He came on the radio and kept saying 'Take it easy, take it easy.'"

As the two trucks sped along, the other driver kept feeding instructions to Gilmore, who admitted he was panicky.

"I owe my life to that man, he was really calm, really beautiful," Gilmore said. "Get calm, just get calm. Go to your right, go to your left...you're getting up to the edge, you're on the shoulder," Gilmore recalled the trucker telling him.

Then the comforting words, "You're okay now. Just shut it down."

Gilmore asked the trucker to go ahead for help. That was the last Gilmore heard of him.

A Kansas Highway Patrol trooper took Gilmore to the office of an El Dorado eye doctor, Dr. K.B. Dellett.

Dellett said Gilmore had "a very uncommon" condition, but that an examination of his eyes showed nothing permanently wrong. He would not comment further on possible causes of the condition.

Dellett also said he believed Gilmore's sight might be restored in a week or a month, but there was no way of knowing. He added that Gilmore would likely undergo further tests.

Gilmore spent the night at a local motel, awaiting the arrival of his employer, Terry Keiger of C and J Transport, Lansing, Mich., who was to fly to Kansas today to return Gilmore to Lansing.

The lion and the lamb

By Karen Blaker, Ph.D.

DEAR DR. BLAKER — For five years I have been waking up about 2 a.m. and reading until I can fall asleep again. It doesn't bother me — but my wife is very worried about my sleeping "problem."

She is constantly on my back to see a doctor and get a prescription for sleeping pills. I think sleeping pills are dangerous, but she claims doctors wouldn't prescribe them if that were true.

I know when I get up at night I disturb her sleep because I can hear her moaning and groaning. Maybe that's why she is being so pushy about my getting pills. I'm mad at her — but maybe she has a point.

DEAR DR. BLAKER — My husband has had insomnia for five years. It doesn't seem to concern him — but I can't stand it.

He is such a grouch during the day. I think it's because he doesn't get enough sleep. I sleep nine hours every night and feel great. As far as I'm concerned, he must see a doctor — for HIS sake.

DEAR HUSBAND — You are the one making the good points. Your way of handling the situation is recommended by most sleep experts.

In fact, you may not have a sleep problem at all. You may merely need less sleep at this point in your life.

The experts also side with you on the issue of sleep medication. Although sleeping pills are sometimes effective, they often start a person on a treadmill of increasing dosages that lead to drug-induced insomnia.

One of every seven Americans suffers from sleeplessness. Although one in six has tried some type of sleep medication, few are happy with this method of treating insomnia.

And tell your wife that doctors (who are human too) tend toward the old and familiar. Every year they still write 19 million prescriptions for barbiturate hypnotics even though these sleeping pills have been rendered obsolete by pharmacological progress and sleep research.

DEAR WIFE — For your husband's sake, please understand that sleeping pills — and nagging, too — can be dangerous to health. Both can cause insomnia.

He might be grouchy during the day partly because of your pressuring tactics. How would you feel if he bombarded you with evidence that people who sleep over eight hours do so from boredom, emotional distress, laziness — or worse still — to avoid facing the day?

An insight from the animal kingdom may apply. Creatures susceptible to attack, such as rabbits and deer, sleep little and lightly, while lions snore their way through 16 hours of the day. Predators can afford to relax; the vulnerable must stay on guard.

Write to Dr. Blaker in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies, but questions of general interest will be discussed in future columns.
