Wichita Falls Pastor Flays 'Monkey Bill'

The Rev. Moreland Says Religion Has Nothing To Fear From Seekers After Truth

Describing its purpose as "nonsense," the Rev. Patrick D. Moreland, pastor of the Grant Street Methodist church attacked the anti-evolution bill now pending before the Texas legislature, when he made a radio address over Station KGKO Sunday

The Rev. Moreland ascribed the fight to "bickering" on the part of opposing denominational factions in the legislature. Opposing these tactics, the pastor brought out the need of tolerance, asserting in his address that "religion is in no danger because of the honest seeking of the scientists after facts."

Interpretations Differ

"This bill," said the Rev. Moreland, "seeks to settle a theological question rather than a scientific one. It is, in reality, sought by a theological faction whose interpretation of the Bible differs from that of other equally honest interpretations, by other theological groups.

"I am opposed to this bill because it puts religion upon the defensive Neither the Bible nor religion is in danger because of the honest seeking of the scientists after facts. Jesus said, 'My people perish for want of knowledge.'

"Let the white light of truth prevail. We have nothing to fear from the truth.' Gamaliel said, 'If this be not of God, it shall fail.' There are many theories of evolution. The materialistic concept of the world is older than any theory of evolution.

Nothing New

"We have always had the materialists who sought to explain the universe in that way. There is nothing new in his argument, but it is nonsense for denominations to bicker and legislate against each other over a theory of how the world was made. What does it matter if it took God six days, six hours, or 6,000,000 years. He made it, and it is here.

"This bill, if passed, will bring scorn upon our state, which will be made the butt and ridicule of every newspaper in the world the day following its adoption."

Air Passenger Routes To Panama Planned

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 (US)—Regular air passenger service between the central and western sections of the United States, through Mexico to the West Indies, Central America and the Panama Canal Zone will be started within the next few weeks, it was learned today. This will come as the result of the linking of the Pan American Airways, Inc., and the Compania Mexicana de Aviacion, now flying Mexican air mail.

King George's March Towards Health Steady

LONDON, Jan. 27. (US)—King George, while showing little change in his general condition today, maintained the slow but steady progress he has been making for several weeks.

Because of the illness of Sir Stanley Hewett, Lord Dawson of Penn was the only physician to visit his majesty this morning.

Dallas Man Fatally Injured in Accident

DALLAS, Jan. 27 (AP)—Pinned beneath his automobile when it overturned last night near here, Jimmy Simpson, 24, of Dallas, received injuries which caused his death before he could be brought to a hospital here.

EACH CLUE ON MISSING YOUTH PROVES FUTILE

Newspaperman Lost Week Unaccounted for After Wide Search

RANSOM CLUE HELD

350 Officers Ponder Two Theories as Autoist's Story Is Heard

LAREDO, Texas, Jan. 27 (AP)—The nation's Mexican border patrol and immigration officers, joining the local constabulary in a vast search for Harry Williams, "missing" young Laredo newspaperman, today mulled over two related and somewhat sinister clues as to his disappearance.

Two Theories Held

More than 350 officers, with long knowledge of the border from Arizona to Brownsville, Texas, held two theories. One, that Williams had been taken for the son of A. L. Kitselman, Indiana millionaire, was kidnaped by bandits seeking ransom and later beaten and released after discovery that he was not related to Mr. Kitselman. The other concerned the possibility that he had been "doped" and attacked for some purpose and subsequently thrown from an automobile to find his way out of the surrounding lonely, semi-wild country.

American immigration and border authorities joined the hunt Saturday on the order of Carl White, first assistant to the American labor secretary.

Friends Search Fails

The 24-year-old reporter disappeared unaccountably more than a week ago. Legal aid was not asked until friends had exhausted every resource in a private search for him.

Belief that he may have been victim of thugs who thought him kin to the wealthy Indiana man was backed by the fact that Williams formerly lived in Muncie, Ind., and often had been seen about with Kitselman.

On the other hand, the second theory gained some plausibility upon the report of a Laredo merchant that he had tried unsuccessfully to "pick up" a youth about Williams' age on a highway 30 miles north of here last Sunday night. This man, the merchant said, apparently had been dulled with narcotics or thrown from a motor car.

Father of Japanese Empress Dies in Tokio

TOKIO, Jan. 27. (US)—Prince Kuni, father of the Japanese empress Nagako, who had been critically ill for several days, died today at Atami palace. The empress who left Tokio early today was present at her father's bedside when he died, with her mother and other members of the imperial official household.

Prince Kuni, who was 56, was a member of the Japanese supreme war council. His death caused the postponement of the celebration of the fifth anniversary of the wedding of the emperor and empress which was to have taken place at the palace today.

Hoover Said to Favor Time Clause in Bill

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27. (AP)—Herbert Hoover was represented today by Chairman Britten of the house naval committee as favorable to retention of the time limitation clause in the naval construction program which President Coolidge is insisting that the senate eliminate.

His statement came on the eve of a vote in the senate on the battle between the president and naval bill proponents over elimination of this provision, requiring a start on the 15 cruisers within two years.

Armed Men Rob Woman Proprietor of Store

CHICAGO, Jan. 27 (US)—Disregarding the baby in her arms, two armed men held up Mrs. Josephine Luisia, delicatessen store owner, as she was walking home and, tearing open her coat, robbed her of $140, the Saturday's receipts.

Suffers Relapse

PARIS, Jan. 27. (UP)—Marshal Ferdinand Foch, who has been ill of a heart attack recently, suffered a relapse today. The marshal had been reported well on the road to recovery and, although it was indicated that his condition is not grave at present, the attack this morning set him back considerably.

DUCKETT TRIAL OPENS TODAY

Youth Faces Fight in Seymour District Court

Special to The Record News

SEYMOUR, Texas, Jan. 27.—Trial of George Duckett, of Newcastle, charged with murder in connection with the fatal shooting last summer of Charlie McDaniel, Archer county deputy sheriff, will be called here at 9 o'clock Monday morning. The trial is being conducted here on a change of venue ordered by former Judge E. G. Thornton when the case first came up in Archer county last August.

Mr. McDaniel was shot in an attempt to prevent the robbery of the First State bank in Dundee in July, 1928. Duckett was arrested 10 days later by Sheriff W. G. Bralley, Warren W. Belcher, deputy sheriff and S. O. Ham, state highway officer, all of Wichita Falls. The arrest was made in Duckett's home in Newcastle. Duckett denied any connection with the affair.

Counsel for the defense moved for a change of venue last August, alleging the defendant could not receive a fair trial in Archer county, where feeling for the slain man ran high. Judge Thornton granted the motion and set the trial for Jan. 28 in Seymour.

Attorneys expect to spend most of Monday morning in disposing of preliminary motions and the selection of a jury. Sheriff Bralley and Mr. Ham do not expect to be called as witnesses before Tuesday. Mr. Belcher, who is in a Wichita Falls hospital recovering from an appendicitis operation, will not be able to appear.

East Texas C.-C. Favors Road Recommendations

DALLAS, Jan. 27. (AP)—The recommendations of Governor Moody's highway committee of seven were approved by the board of directors of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce at its meeting here today.

"The committee offers a practical expedient and just solution," the directors agreed. "They vest in the legislature discretion to finance future construction promptly and adequately as need may arise or as conditions may vary."

AL AND HERBIE IN SAME TOWN BUT DON'T MEET

However, Meeting Is Likely If They Determine Correct Etiquette

EACH HOLDS BACK

Al Takes Squint at Victor's Abode While Problem Solves Itself

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 27 (UP)—The defeated Democratic candidate for president, once more plain "Al" Smith, breezed into Miami this morning in campaign style and temporarily stole the spotlight from his successful rival, President-elect Hoover, who is in seclusion again on Belle Isle across Biscayne bay.

Now that both are in this neighborhood, the resort populace is asking "will they meet?"

So far as could be learned tonight, there have been no advances from either side.

Question of Propriety

No one seems to know whether Hoover should invite Smith to visit him, taking the initiative as victor in the recent political contest, or whether Smith should take the first step and call upon the president-elect. But it is acknowledged that the situation will work itself out and that Smith and Hoover will meet for the second time in their lives in the luxurious estate which now is the president-elect's home.

Lawrence Richey, in charge of Hoover's executive offices here, said that no arrangements had been made for such an event. Smith and and Hoover met once before when they spoke from the same platform in New York during a Red Cross drive in 1921.

Smith saw the Hoover winter home this afternoon—a fleeting glimpse as he sped by in an automobile for the LaForce golf course, his passage being accompanied by the deafening roar of a half dozen motorcycles on which a police escort was riding.

Crowd Greets Al

The former New York governor's entry into Miami was triumphant and dramatic, with a revival of the campaign fanfare.

A huge crowd swarmed and swirled about the station when his train arrived his morning.

"Al" expressed a desire when he saw the crowd to get away from the formalities of a reception and to go immediately to church. He did so while the reception committee tried vainly to disentangle itself from the crowd.

Chairman John J. Raskob of the Democratic national committee and Smith's close friend, William F. Kenny, came here from Sarasota with him.

Hoover Plans to Fish

Unless Smith and Hoover meet Monday or Tuesday, the meeting must be delayed until the end of the week, as the president-elect is planning to leave Tuesday night or Wednesday morning on another fishing trip off the upper Florida keys, to be gone until Friday night.

Col. Horace Mann is expected to confer Monday with the president-elect regarding the future of the Republican party in the south and about the immediate problem of southern patronage, in which it is understood he seeks a controlling voice because of his organization activity for Hoover in the south during the campaign.

Pig Iron Thieves Slug Watchman and Flee

CHICAGO, Jan. 27. (US)—"I'm getting hungry. I want to eat."

Valentine Gorsky, watchman kept up his cry of hunger as the three armed men held him prisoner while they plundered the warehouse of the Steel Sales corporation.

"I want to eat," insisted the watchman.

"That'll cure your appetite," one of the bandits said as he hit Gorsky with the butt of his pistol.

When Gorsky awoke, the men, a company truck and $1,200 in pig iron were gone.

10 Rebels, 3 Soldiers Slain in Encounter

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 27. (UP)—Ten rebels and three federal soldiers were killed in a five-hour battle near Laquemada, on the southern Pacific coast, the newspaper La Prensa's correspondent said tonight.

Rebels dynamited the railroad track between Colima and Manzanillo in an abortive attempt to wreck a passenger train at about the same time, according to advices from the latter town.

Slayer of American Missionary Determined

BASRA, Irak, Jan. 27. (AP)—It has been learned that the leader of the Japan tribesmen who killed the Rev. Henry A. Bilkert, an American missionary, last Monday, was Ibn Kafhetin. He recently was deposed from the chieftaincy of the tribe by Ibn Saud, ruler of Irak, and the present chief of the tribe, Sheik Naif Ibn Kalab, therefore is blameless for the ambush of the American party.

Evelyn Nesbit in Club When Dry Raid Occurs—Result, She's Jailed

NEW YORK, Jan. 27 (US)—Evelyn Nesbit, once the wife of Harry K. Thaw, was arrested early this morning when federal prohibition agents entered Joe Ward's Swanee club.

The club was crowded with "whoopee makers" when a man posing as a "prominent Hartford, Conn., real estate operator" unexpectedly revealed himself as a federal dry agent. Four other agents immediately reinforced him.

Besides Miss Nesbit, four others were arrested. They were Joe Ward, a widely-known Broadway figure; Harry Cohen, a waiter, charged with selling liquor; Harry Altman, doorman, and George Smith, a waiter.

Miss Nesbit protested indignantly when taken with the others to the police station. She was even more indignant when placed in a cell pending arrival of a bondsman.

It was an hour later that all were released in bail by Magistrate Rosenbluth. The bail calls for appearance of Miss Nesbit and the others before a United States commissioner tomorrow.

Cohen was charged with selling the liquor. The others were charged with "acting in concert" with him.

LOVE CRUSH

Heavyweight Crushes Her Frail Escort As Cars Collide

DALLAS, Jan. 27 (AP)—Ruben Jones, 33, negro, today was a candidate for a new type of auto accident insurance. Either that or he must find a less stout companion for pleasure rides.

Jones and his 200-pound "heavy" were taking in the sights today when their flivver collided with another.

The crash itself did little damage, but Jones was trapped between his buxom companion and the steering wheel when the machine fell over. They took him to a hospital and treated him for sprains and severe chest bruises.

KAISERIN SICK DURING PARTY

Hermine Secluded by German Measles

By WILLIAM HILLMAN
Record News Special Wireless

DOORN, Jan. 27 (US)—"Your imperial majesty's health and happiness."

Seventy glasses were raised around the luxurious festive table in a flower smothered room of the Dutch castle today as the king of Saxony gave this simple toast to the once powerful German emperor, celebrating his 70th birthday in exile.

Princelings of the Hohenzollern family, several former ruling princelings of Germany and a number of personal friends of the former kaiser were the only ones to gather at the dinner at noon today around a table placed in the room where the former Kaiserin Augusta Victoria died.

Princess Ill

Garlands of flowers hung everywhere, decorating every nook. And in the very next room the former kaiser's wife, the Princess Hermine, lay ill in bed, unable to attend the birthday ceremonies. She was stricken with a light attack of German measles, it was learned, and not with the grippe as was officially reported. It was first thought that the princess had the hives, but a fever developed. Her fever was very light, however, and she is in no danger, but her absence cast a shadow on the celebration.

And while the ceremonies were going on inside, the castle was besieged outside by an army of newspapermen and photographers and a great crowd of the inhabitants, as well as Germans who have come from the border cities of Germany hoping to catch a glimpse of the former emperor.

Exile More in Evidence

On his 70th birthday the ex-kaiser seemed more in exile, more cut off from the world today than at any time during the 10 years he spent at Doorn, when he was always at least able to wander through the little Dutch village, unmolested and unfollowed. But people traveled many miles to see him today, the crowd swelling during the afternoon with arrivals from all parts of Holland and more from Germany.

Girl Novice Plans New Endurance Flight

NEW YORK, Jan. 27. (US)—Veteran flyers at Curtiss and Roosevelt fields today were listening skeptically to the plans of a girl novice, who plans to take off at midnight tomorrow night for an endurance flight.

Miss Elinor Smith, daughter of Tom Smith, Freeport actor, declared she would take off from Roosevelt at 12 o'clock tomorrow night for a sixteen hour solo flight. She said she would use a small biplane with 90-horse-power engine.

Tariff Revision Study To Be Resumed Today

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27. (AP)—With a room full of briefs and thousands of pages of oral argument recorded in support of import duty readjustments, the house ways and means committee starts tomorrow on the second half of its task of determining how American industries, including agriculture, may benefit through tariff revision. The committee is about to conclude hearings on farm products.

RAIDERS TAKE BIG WILBARGER WHISKY PLANT

Bralley and Gant Join With Vernon Sheriff In Huge Seizure

THREE MEN ARRESTED

Raid Follows Days Spent In Getting Information On Big Still

Surrounding an immense plant hidden along the banks of Long Creek in Wilbarger county, Sheriff W. G. Bralley, working with a deputy and with Wilbarger county officers, Sunday afternoon arrested three men and seized one of the biggest whisky manufacturing plants ever captured in Northwest Texas.

Two copper stills, estimated at 500 gallons each, 3,800 pounds of sugar, 1,000 gallons of chops for mash, and five 1,000 gallon concrete mash vats were included in the equipment seized.

Fire Under Stills

A great fire was blazing beneath one of the stills and the three men, all from Electra, were engaged in the work of making the run when the officers made the arrest. At the word of command from a Wilbarger official, the men turned to run, making their way almost into the arms of Sheriff Bralley, concealed in the brush. Seeing themselves surrounded, they offered no further resistance. They were placed in the Wilbarger county jail at Vernon. Charges will be filed in the state courts Monday, Mr. Bralley said.

The seizure was made about 4:30 Sunday afternoon, after several days of reconnoitering by Mr. Bralley and Charlie Gant, deputy sheriff

Poorly Concealed

The officials were seeking to make sure they would get the men with the plant, the sheriff explained. The still was located in the southwest edge of Wilbarger county, constructed in the open air, and concealed only by a sparce growth of timber.

Mr. Bralley said each of the 1,000 gallon concrete vats was overflowing with mash ready for the run. The whole manufacturing outfit will be moved into Vernon by Wilbarger county officials, he said. The stills, vats and supplies together make one of the most extensive and elaborate plants ever uncovered in this section.

Meningitis Fatal For Wichita Girl

Holly C. Hemme, 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Hemme who live eight miles northwest of town, died of spinal meningities at a local hospital Sunday evening. She had been ill since Thursday.

The death of the little girl is said to be the second from the disease in the city within a week.

The body was removed to the Merkle undertaking establishment pending the completion of funeral arrangements.

The survivors, in addition to the parents, include a brother, Billy, 15, and a sister, Evelyn, age 11.

Slayer of Police Chief On Way to Huntsville

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 27 (AP)—Pete McKenzie, to be electrocuted March 23 for killing Chief of Detectives Sam Street of San Antonio, was en route to the Huntsville prison today after Sheriff Newton, sensing the possibility of a demonstration at the railway station here, had sent McKenzie to Sequin under guard there to board a penitentiary-bound train.

Corsicana Man May Die of Car Injuries

MAHAN DEFIES OUSTER MOVE

State Attorney in 100th District Won't Resign

Special to The Record News

CHILDRESS, Texas, Jan. 27.—Commenting on a petition understood to be in circulation seeking his recall, District Attorney James C. Mahan of Wellington said here today that he had not been officially informed of the existence of the petition, but, even if rumors to that effect proved true, he "would not resign from" his office.

Begins Second Term

Mr. Mahan on Jan. 1 took the oath of office for his second term as district attorney of the 100th judicial district, comprising Hall, Childress, and Collingsworth counties.

A month previous he had resigned his office, and was succeeded by David Fitzgerald, whom Mr. Mahan described as his close personal friend. Mr. Fitzgerald, the prosecutor said, willingly turned over the office to him (Mahan) on the first of the year, and there could be no ill feeling between the two men which could have influenced the petition said to be in circulation.

Petition to Moody

The petition, said to be addressed to Governor Moody by the Hall County Ministerial association, deals with Mr. Mahan's recent "conduct" in office, it was understood.

Association officials in charge of circulating the petition said it had been given pastors of churches in Turkey, Newlin, and Lakeview in Hall county, and that copies had been sent to county seats of other counties in this district.

The petition was drawn up at a recent meeting of the Hall County Ministerial association, in the course of which, it was said, Mr. Mahan's qualifications for public office were discussed.

Aimee to Go Before Investigators, Today

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 27. (US)—Just who was the financial and managerial "boss" of Angelus temple before hostilities parted Aimee Semple McPherson and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, is expected to be one of the points developed tomorrow when the state legislature's committee resumes its investigation of the celebrated $2,500 "good will offering" Superior Judge Carlos S. Hardy accepted.

Tomorrow's first witness before the committee, which is conducting the inquiry to determine if grounds exist for impeaching the veteran jurist, will be Mrs. McPherson.

INJURED PILOT AND SICK GIRL ARE RESCUED

Ice Blanketed Rockies Resound With Stories Of Human Valor

FLIER BADLY HURT

Spends Night in Howling Storm With Companions Helpless

DENVER, Jan. 27. (AP)—Woven into commonplace weather reports from the snow-harried Rocky mountain regions where blizzards have blown for days today came tales of heroic rescues and struggles. There too was the usual plight of winter-hounded animals and livestock, cut off from food by heavy snow and unsheltered from icy winds, but human kindness was on hand where suffering fellows needed succor.

A thrilling and dramatic story of hectic experiences while marooned in the Ruby mountain wilds of Nevada was recounted at Salt Lake by two passengers of the Boeing Air transport plane, forced down in a blinding wind and snow storm east of Elko, Nev., Thursday.

Pilot in Hospital

Frank Barber, Oakland, Calif., the pilot, was taken to a hospital in a semi-conscious condition when he arrived here this morning by train from Elko. He suffered concussion of the brain and sat for 24 hours in the fuselage of the plane. His companions, also injured, were too weak to aid him.

There came the story of sacrifice and suffering by Salmon river cowboys and stockmen who pushed through snowdrifts 10 feet deep to take an 11-year-old girl to a surgeon.

Marcie Arama, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Arama, stockman of the Salmon river country, was stricken with acute appendicitis Thursday. The nearest surgeon was at Cottonwood, Idaho, 30 miles away, Arama started with his daughter in a covered sleigh. They battled through a blizzard all day, but were forced to turn back.

Friends Respond

The father then telephoned his friends, living in the sparsely settled mountain country. They responded on horseback, gathering all available horses in the country and brought them along.

With cowboys forcing the horses ahead of them, a start was made again Friday morning. Cowboys drove the animals through the snow, 10 feet deep. Progress was slow, almost by inches at times, but near nightfall the caravan reached a more sheltered road in Rice creek valley, where fresh horses, sent from Cottonwood, awaited it. Late last night Cottonwood was reached and the girl was operated on this morning. It was believed she would recover.

Town Isolated

Another Idaho report said Burley, Idaho, was isolated due to the heavy snowstorm raging in the southwestern part of the state for several days. Efforts to open roads to traffic were out of the question at present.

Another arctic blast from the north chilled Montana last night, enveloping most of that state in blizzard like weather and hurling the mercury to sub-zero.

Washington reported a heavy snowstorm moving southward today with no end to the cold wave in sight.

Springlike weather prevailed in most of Colorado, and in Oklahoma and some parts of Texas.

Austin Woman Killed By Pastor's Automobile

AUSTIN, Jan. 27. (AP)—Mrs. F. E. Lacy was killed tonight when struck by an automobile driven by the Rev. W. L. Hankla, assistant pastor of the First Methodist church.

Mrs. Lacy had attended the First Presbyterian church, and, after visiting a nearby bakery, was on her way home.

The Rev. Hankla said he did not see Mrs. Lacy.

City Council to Name New Member And Study Water Problem Tonight

Continuation of last Monday night's discussion on the Wichita Falls city water problem with the possibility of calling a water bond election, and the filling of the place of Alderman A. W. King, whose resignation was announced several days ago, face the Wichita Falls city council when it meets Monday night in the council chambers of the Memorial auditorium.

No intimation of who will be named by the aldermen to succeed Mr. King has been given. His term was to have expired in April, and in the absence of his announcement for re-election R. O. Harvey and Roy Daniels announced as candidates for it.

What effect, if any, the change in aldermen will have on the possibility of calling a bond election was not indicated. Last week Alderman J. H. Patton placed before the council the condition of the city water and water supply. The proposition of calling a water bond election was discussed but action was postponed for a week.

Most Divorce Pleas Are Carefully Screened Excuses for Criticism

It Isn't the Big Issues That Appear in the Divorce Court That Cause Most Matrimonial Failures—It is the Little, Unkind Criticisms That Make Life Seem Worth While

Nine times out of ten the question of why marriage is a failure could be answered by one word:

Criticism.

Of course, in order to get a divorce a husband or wife has to accuse the party of the other part of some heinous crime. A woman can't go into court and say: "I've stood my husband's knocking everything I do until I can't bear it any longer, and I'll either kill him, or myself, if I have to listen to him finding fault with the coffee one more time."

A man can't say: "Judge, my wife has nagged me for 20 years about everything I do and don't do, about the way I sit down and rise up, and my taste in neckties, and the way I drive a car, until she has gotten on my nerves so that I would rather die than live with her another day."

None the less, the allegation of unfaithfulness, or drunkenness, or cruelty, or whatnot, that is officially put forth as the reason why the marriage bond should be broken, is more often than not just a smoke screen behind which hides the real explanation of why a couple fail to hit it off together, and another marriage goes into the discard.

It wasn't the big offenses they committed against each other. It was the little, carping criticisms that kept them always irritated, and their vanity raw and sore, and made them so discouraged that they got to the place where they asked themselves what was the use in trying to please a person who wasn't going to be pleased with anything they did, anyway, and why go on with a marriage that was all kicks and no ha'pence? The only answer to this conundrum seemed to be the divorce court.

After all, most men and women are pretty decent citizens. Not many men are roues. Not many women are vamps. Nor are there many men who are brutes, nor many women who are shrews. The average youth and maiden who get married are honest, and sincere, and kindly. They are in love with each other, and when they plight their vows at the altar they honestly mean to do their duty and to make each other happy.

How comes it, then, that so often they get disillusioned with each other, and disgruntled with matrimony, that they sit up in sullen silence when they are alone together, or else engage in verbal battles in which they hack each other to pieces and leave wounds that never heal?

It is because one or the other, or both, indulge in perpetual criticism of the party of the other part, and criticism is the headliner among all the domestic vices. It has broken up more homes and alienated more husbands and wives from each other than all the combined immortality, and intemperance, and failure to support, and temper, and nerves, and extravagance, and bad housekeeping in the world.

For a woman may forgive a man for an occasional sidestep, but she can't forgive his wondering every morning at the breakfast table why she can never learn to make bread like his mother used to make, and why she can't make the children behave better, and why she can't keep house without running up bills.

Likewise a man can overlook his wife's not being a good manager, nor a blue-ribbon cook, and being too fond of bridge parties and the movies, but the thing that gets him is to have her always harping on his little faults and weaknesses, and reminding him of what a poor, weak, miserable creature he is.

All husbands and wives know exactly how little they relish being criticized by the partners of their bosoms. They know that it makes them feel as if they had been stabbed to the heart by the hand they trusted, and that had turned out to be the hand of a traitor. They know that the hurt rankles in their memories and makes them bitter and resentful. And yet they keep on doing it.

There are plenty of households in which the only music is the discord of the anvil chorus, and in which husbands and wives are at each other, hammer and tongs, all the time. There are plenty of wives who never hear a word of praise. Their husbands will gobble down a thousand good dinners without comment, but let there be a little too much salt in the soup, or the roast be overdone on the thousandth and first, and husband is right there with some scathing criticism of the meal.

There are plenty of women who pinch every nickel until the buffalo howls in agony without ever getting a commendation from Friend Husband, but let them buy one high-priced hat and husband shrieks to high heaven about their wastefulness.

There are plenty of women who never give their husbands the glad hand for toiling like dray horses to support them and give them luxuries, and for sticking to the hearthstone like the house cat, and for rolling the perambulator, but who never weary in pointing out to husband his defects in grammar and manners, and finding fault with his smoking too much or wasting time on the golf links, or reminding him of how poor his judgment is.

There would be some justification for husbands and wives criticizing each other if it did any good; but it doesn't. Its only effect is to hurt feelings and slow the individual down.

No wife is going to break her neck trying to please a husband who is going to hand her a knock instead of a bouquet no matter what she does. No husband is going to work himself to death trying to achieve things for a wife who tells him plainly that she doesn't think he amounts to much, anyway. It is praise and appreciation that inspire us to do our best. Criticism takes the last bit of heart out of us and makes us slump.

The worst of husbands and wives criticizing each other is that it destroys their children's respect for them. A child naturally takes its parent's valuation of each other, and if Johnny hears papa call mother a fool, and sees that mother regards papa as a poor, weak failure, he feels that he is not called upon to listen to the advice of a Dumb Dora or be guided by the admonitions of a ne'er-do-well.

So if you want to be happy though married, cut out the criticism. Nobody marries to get a critic on the hearth, and it is because many find one there that they take to stepping out with salve-spreaders, who are not married to them and therefore don't feel that they have a right to tell them of their faults.

FORT ELLIOT STORY WRITTEN

Student Contest Winners Are Announced

Special to The Record News

MOBEETIE, Texas, Jan. 27.—The winners of the History of Fort Elliot contest in the Mobeetie high school have been announced as Ina Bell Meadows, first, Estelle Short, second, and Jane L. Long, third. Miss Meadows was awarded the prize of $10 given by President A. M. Bourland, and Manager Homer D. Wade, of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, which was offered in line with the interest and desire of the regional organization to perpetuate the history of old army forts.

Second and third prizes were offered by local men, Mr. Wade fixing the rules and regulations.

Fort Elliot, now only low ridges formed by the crumbling adobe walls was established on June 15 1875, to protect the inhabitants of the Panhandle against Indians. It was named for Major Elliot who had been killed in a fight with Cheynne Indians.

Because the fort was easily accessible to the Indians the government at Dodge City, Kan., from whence the four companies who kept the fort were sent, found it necessary to keep Kawa Indians for scouts. The medicine man of these Indians was instrumental in keeping the Apaches, Cheynnes, and Comanche Indians from attacking the fort when most of the men were away.

Before the building of the railroad into the Panhandle in 1898 Mobeetie was an important trading post of the plains, and was the scene of the organization of the county, the holding of the first court, the establishing of the first school, and the first dime of tax money paid into a Panhandle county treasure. Here the first furrow that upturned Panhandle sod was run, while nearby old Fort Elliot stood as a symbol of the protection of the government.

Record News Daily Pattern Service

"TAILORED SIMPLICITY FOR TOT"
Pattern 1611

Practical togs for the children's play-time are most essential. Design 1611 is a simple, tailored frock fashioned of printed percale or gingham that is serviceable and smart. Pleats on either side of the front create fullness. These are stitched part way to hold them neatly in place.

A cotton wash fabric in a cherry pattern of red and white will be adorable for bloomers and dress.

The collar and pockets, rounded in cunning fashion, are made of white pique which is also used for cuffs and bloomer bands. A color scheme of brown and tan is chic for youngsters.

May be obtained only in sizes 2, 4, and 6.

Size 4 requires 2¼ yards 36-inch material and 1½ yards trimming.

This model is easy to make. No dressmaking experience is necessary. Each pattern comes to you with simple and exact instructions, including yardage for every size. A perfect fit is guaranteed.

Patterns will be delivered upon receipt of 15 cents in coins carefully wrapped. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, style number and size wanted.

Our latest fashion book will be sent upon receipt of 10 cents in coin. Address all mail and orders to Record News Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

Film...remove it

from teeth twice daily

The Film that is found by dental research to discolor teeth and foster serious tooth and gum disorders.

Film discolors teeth and then destroys them. Dentists urge a special way to remove it.

DENTAL science in studying the commoner tooth and gum disorders finds their chief source to be a coating on teeth known as film.

Run your tongue across your teeth and you will feel this film. It absorbs stains from food and smoking and turns white teeth dull. It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays.

Film hardens into tartar. Germs by the millions breed in it. And germs, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Dentists urge the special film-removing dentifrice called Pepsodent.

First, Pepsodent curdles film, then removes it in gentle safety to enamel. No other way will make teeth as sparkling white. Write for free 10-day supply to The Pepsodent Co., 1104 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, or ask your druggist for full-size tube. Do not forget.

Poultry Development Takes Lead In Frederick After Hotel Is Assured

Leaders Turn to Agriculture After Successfully Completing Plans for Modern Hostelry

By C. W. ROGERS
Record News Staff Correspondent

FREDERICK, Okla., Jan. 27.—With the campaign to raise $200,000 for the construction of a modern 60-room hotel successfully completed and the newly completed creamery in operation, the Frederick Chamber of Commerce is engaged in the formulation of plans for activities to be concentrated upon for the remainder of the present year.

Among those announced are: a poultry colonization project similar to that of the Charles Weeks plan recently adopted at Wichita Falls and the Nichols plan instituted at Oklahoma City in 1927, to be financed by local capital; completion of a cow census of the county and formation of bull circles, which local bankers have expressed a willingness to finance.

Poultry Development

Particular interest will be taken in development of the poultry industry, which is regarded as equally important as dairying.

Announcement is made that a committee has been appointed to consider selection of a secretary for the chamber to succeed E. E. Napper, resigned. Mr. Napper has been engaged by the Red River Creameries company, Inc., to act in the capacity of director of development. In connection with Mr. Napper's new appointment, it was said that during his recent absence from Frederick he was in conference with committees in three other towns which are making effort to secure the establishment of creameries by the Red River company. One of these towns, it was said, was in the south plains rerion of Texas. Capital of the company has been increased by $75,000. Plants owned by the company are now in operation at Waurika and Frederick in Oklahoma. Gilbert Fraser of Waurika is president.

Moore Accepts Post

J. D. Moore, active vice president of the National Bank of Commerce of Frederick, reconsidered his decision to decline his election to the presidency of the chamber after pressure exerted by a committee of citizens. J. C. Johnson, realtor, is first vice president of the chamber.

The chamber is giving complete support to the work of L. H. Beaty, county farm agent, and Miss Susan B. Gray, home demonstration agent of Tillman county.

An agricultural short course sponsored by the Frederick Chamber of Commerce, will be held at the Frederick high school auditorium, Jan. 28 and 29.

Lectures on modern farm practices, farm diversification, horticulture, dairying, poultry and hog raising will be given by authorities supplied by the International Harvester company, including H. S. Mobley, superintendent of demonstration farms at Montgomery, Ala. and Dewing Moore, L. [illegible]th, graduate horticulturist from the University of Illinois: John M. Hannon, graduate college of agriculture, University of Illinois.

T. M. Jeffress of the bureau of agriculture of the M.-K.-T. railroad will tell of the increasing magnitude of the poultry industry along the "Katy" lines, in Oklahoma and Texas, in particular.

J. L. Newland, editor the Frederick Leader, will discuss matters affecting the welfare of the community.

Miss Grace Marian Smith, writer and lecturer formerly connected with the United States department of agriculture, will discuss subjects of interest to women.

Lectures will be illustrated by moving pictures. Music will be supplied by the high school band and orchestra and the Lions club quartet.

It is announced that at every meeting there will be something for everybody, whether farmer, banker, merchant, teacher or housewife."

The school of instruction in cull[illegible] sets held through last week under the auspices of the Frederick Leader ended Saturday. Intimation was made preceding the course that secrets would be imparted relating to "how to win your hen or hold the one you have." Maids and matrons in large [illegible] were in attendance each day.

HAD TO WORK TOO HARD

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Gave Her Strength

Mt. Carmel, Pa.—"After my second baby was born I had to work too hard and be on my feet too soon because my husband was ill. After his death I was in such a weakened and run-down condition that nothing seemed to help me. I am starting the fourth bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and feel a great deal better. I am much stronger and don't get so tired out when I wash or work hard. I do housekeeping and dressmaking and I highly recommend the Vegetable Compound. I am willing to answer letters."—Mrs. Gertrude Butts, 414 S. Market St., Mt. Carmel, Pa.

FEATURES OF THE NEW FORD

SERVICE

"IT HAS always been our belief that a sale does not complete the transaction between us and the buyer, but establishes a new obligation on us to see that his car gives him service. We are as much interested in his economical operation of the car as he is in our economical manufacture of it.

"For that reason we have installed a system of controlled service to take care of all Ford car needs in an economical and improved manner. We wish all users of Ford cars to know what they are entitled to in this respect, so that they may readily avail themselves of this service."

Henry Ford

Safety

ONE of the outstanding features of the new Ford is its mechanical, internal-expanding six-brake system.

This is unusually reliable and effective in action because the braking surfaces of all six brakes are fully enclosed. There is no possibility of mud, water, sand, road dirt or grease entering the brake mechanism or getting between the bands and drum and impairing brake performance.

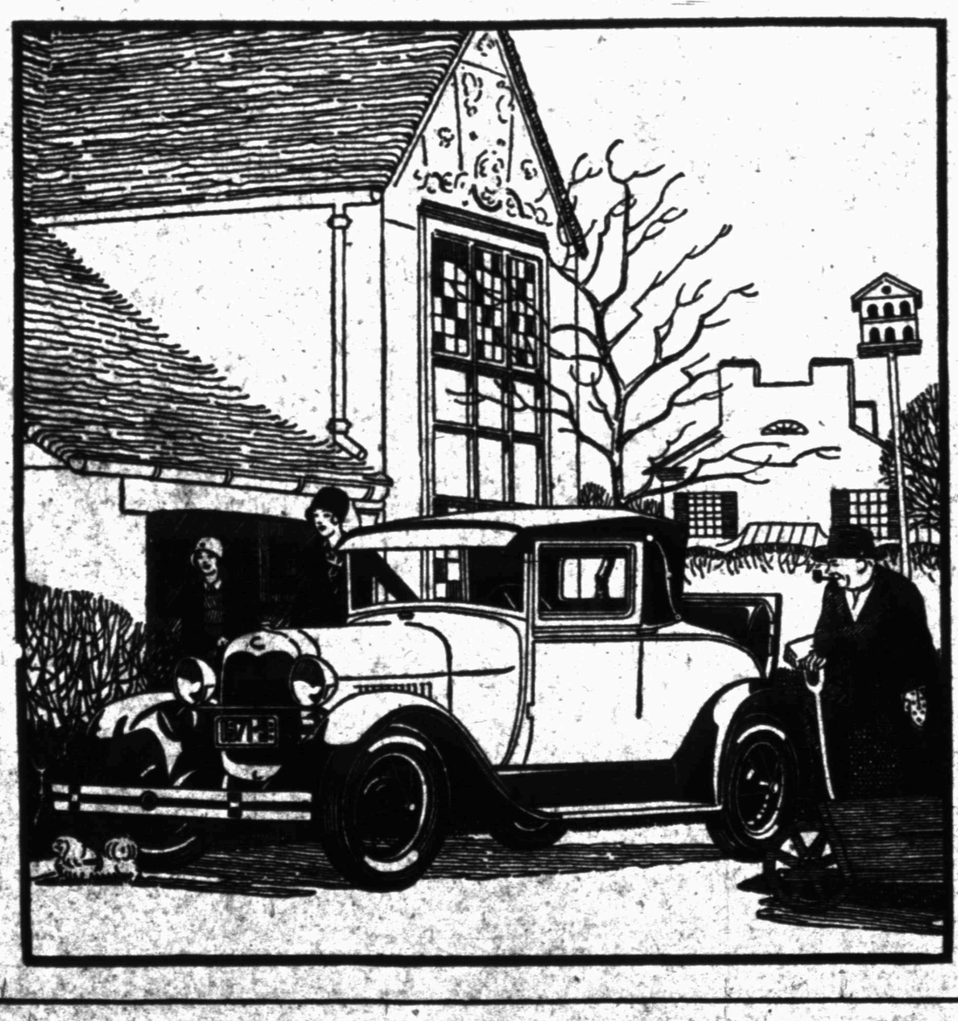

The use of steel forgings wherever there is a possibility of wear in the chassis of the car, the sturdy steel body construction, balance, ease of operation and control and a Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield are other important safety features.

Comfort

You have a feeling of mental comfort in driving the new Ford because you are sure of its mechanical reliability. No matter how long the trip or rough or devious the roadway, you know it will bring you safely, quickly to the journey's end.

Physically, too, you will feel fresh and relaxed in the new Ford because it is such a roomy, comfortable car. Seats are wide and deeply cushioned, with backs designed to conform to the curves of the body.

Even on comparatively rough stretches, there are no hard bumps or jolts, nor exaggerated bouncing up and down. The four Houdaille hydraulic shock absorbers and transverse springs take up or absorb the force of every unevenness in the road before it reaches the body, frame and chassis of the car.

Reliability

The new Ford is reliable in performance because of its carefully planned simplicity of design and the enduring quality that has been built into every part.

Throughout, it has been made to give you many thousands of miles of pleasant, enjoyable motoring at a minimum of trouble and expense. From every part of the world come letters from Ford owners commenting on this reliability, and giving specific data on unusual performance.

Thousands of the new Fords have been driven more than 50,000 miles in the past year. Some, used night and day, have passed the 100,000-mile mark. There is no telling how far they will go. The average life of the Model T was seven years. We believe this new car will do better than that.

Economy

The new Ford is an economical car to own and drive because of the low cost of operation and up-keep. It averages more than 20 miles per gallon of gasoline and the cost of tires and oil is also low.

Low first cost, the security of a fair trade-in value, the availability of Ford dealers, and close supervision of service are additional reasons for the economy of the new Ford.

The cost of new parts is also low because of the established Ford policy of doing business at a small margin of profit.

Beauty

The new Ford is distinguished by its quiet simplicity of line and air of sturdy strength. Without being extreme, it has struck a new note in motor car designing. A particularly pleasing feature is a choice of beautiful colors in all body types without additional cost.

The upholstery is of woolen material, rich and luxurious, yet long-wearing. Fenders are heavy and gracefully contoured. Instrument panel—door handles—window lifts—interior trimming and finish—all reveal a quality of material and a careful workmanship unusual in a low-price car.

Ease of Control

Another outstanding feature of the new Ford is its ease of operation and control.

The steering wheel answers to the touch of a finger. Gears shift silently, smoothly. Brakes take hold quickly, firmly even on rain-swept pavements. Quick acceleration and alert speed are especially appreciated in traffic and emergencies. A space little longer than the car itself is all you need for parking.

All of these things simplify the mechanics of motoring and add a great deal to the joy and comfort of motoring. Particularly to a woman, they mean driving without strain or fatigue.

Smooth Speed

Everywhere you go, you note the alert, capable performance of the new Ford. You can judge its acceleration by the way it gets away in traffic. A smooth stretch on the open road gives a revealing measure of its speed. The way it climbs the hills in high is an indication of its abundant power.

The new Ford will do 55 to 65 miles an hour, which is probably faster than you will ever need to go. Far more important is the way it rolls along at 35 and 40 and 45. This is your average driving speed and you can maintain it smoothly, easily, comfortably for hours in the new Ford.

Herbert Kaufman's
HENRY AND HISTORY

Daily Editorial

UNCLE SAM, the automobile industry's silent partner, expects to pocket about three-quarters of a billion dollars for his share, in 1929.

General Motors, of course, will contribute heaviest in the whack-up; but Henry Ford, whose favorite authors should be Hans Christian Anderson and the brothers Grimm, must pay the largest individual chunk of taxes.

He doesn't read fairy tales, although he occasionally composes one; as witness his declared conviction that the ancients were familiar with electricity, used telephones, traveled in planes and knew all about radio.

Mr. Ford is so busy making history that he doesn't have time to study it, and thereby muffs most of the thrills it might supply him.

Yesterday would gladly furnish facts and figures with which to measure the significance of his fortune.

Values are relative — established by contrast.

All one-eyed men should take the advice of the proverb and visit "the country of the blind.".

Mr. Ford is aware that he can "live like a king," but since he hasn't bothered to investigate how kings usually lived, he cheats himself of some very flattering comparisons.

For instance, there was Charles VII of France, who sometimes went hungry, and often cadged a joint of mutton or a spare cold fowl from neighboring pantries.

And the Roman Emperor Aurelian, compelled to deny his wife a coveted silk dress because the material was too expensive.

Charles II long hadn't a penny to spend or a change of clothes.

Louis XVIII once taught music in a New York boarding school. And the second Napoleon pounded the streets of London as a uniformed bobby.

REALMS were frequently in such financial plight that Crown officers had to make personal touches from Tom-Dick-and-Harry to meet the payroll.

Far from returning such over-collections as the recent treasury refund to U. S. Steel, total state revenues didn't reach twenty-six millions in a whole generation.

As late as the seventeenth century, the British national debt of $15,000,000 seemed "an overwhelming burthen to the country."

What fun it must be for Mr. Ford to imagine himself in such days, and with his means—at a time when "it was necessary for the chancellor of the exchequer, with hat in hand, to go up and down Cheapside and Cornhill, attended by the lord mayor and by the aldermen, to make up a sum by borrowing a hundred pounds.

A picture well worth remembering when the British government presents its next tax bill to the English Ford company.

A movie actress's weddin' is nothin' more or less'n a change o' venue. The late Tex Rickard got as good press notices as anybuddy, for it don't make no difference in this country what your business is if you're successful.

It won't be long now until we know what Hoover eats for breakfast, and what time the clock is wound and the cat kicked downstairs.

One western newspaper, in a headline over a story about the birth of a fourth set of twins to the same parents, said "Deuces Wild."

Alienists testified that a college boy who killed a man in a holdup was suffering from an inferiority complex. Oh, well, all right!

Pupils with colds were barred from schools in Trenton, N. J., during the flu epidemic. What a grand chance for a vacation!

Maybe if New York would arrange to remove unemployed actors from the streets the traffic situation wouldn't be so bad.

On Saving and Killing

EVERY now and then something happens to prove that the human race has almost unlimited capacities for sacrifice and self-forgetfulness.

Unfortunately, however, this great capacity can be put to work for a destructive purpose quite as easily as for a constructive one.

During the recent rebellion in Afghanistan, when the semi-barbaric armies were marching on the capital, it looked as if foreigners living there were going to be put in great danger. So a group of British army aviators undertook to remove them to safety.

A huge military bomber, capable of carrying two dozen passengers, and two smaller planes were flown to the capital from a base in British India. In a week they had carried a great number of foreigners, mostly women and children, out of frenzied Afghanistan to the safety of British territory.

The feat went almost unnoticed in the daily press, but it was as thrilling as anything aviators have done in years.

Atrocious weather made flying dangerous. To complete the trip the aviators had to soar high over the Himalayas, where the least mishap would mean death. Snow storms and high winds complicated an already perilous assignment. The flyers wore themselves to the point of exhaustion and risked their lives over and over again.

A story like that makes good reading. One likes to think of those young Englishmen, accepting such tasks without thought of their own safety, ignoring all danger in order to get a group of helpless women and children to safety. It proves once more the courage and unselfishness that are inherent in the human heart.

But there is another way of looking at it, not so encouraging. The same bravery and loyalty that sent those flyers over the Himalayas on their rescue mission would send them, in time of war, to dare even greater risks in order to spread death and destruction. They would take their lives in their hands—not to carry women and children to safety, but to carry bombs that would fall on defenseless towns and blow women and children to bits.

The spirit of the flyers themselves would be precisely the same. They would be sustained by exactly the same combination of faithful courage and willingness to sacrifice their own lives for the sake of an intangible ideal. They would go out to kill with just the same nobility of purpose that they went out to save.

That doesn't apply to aviators alone, of course. It holds good all along the line. Our finest, noblest emotions are what made war possible. The navy divers who won the Congressional Medal of Honor for their bravery in trying to save the men on the sunken S-4 would risk their lives just as gallantly, in time of war, to send men to the bottom forever.

Our hearts, it must be, are greater than our heads. We have within us the capabilities to bring about something very close to the brotherhood of man. But we don't know how to use them. Until we learn, there isn't much hope of real progress.

Chicago, Georgia and Crime

THE legal quirks and psycho-medical theories that once proved so impressive to a Chicago jury don't seem to mean quite so much in Georgia.

After Leopold and Loeb killed little Bobby Franks—"just for a thrill"—they escaped hanging because of a bewildering assortment of tales about abnormality, subnormality, congenital mental disabilities and what-not.

In Georgia a young collegian named George R. Harsh—like the Chicago pair, rich and clever—took to committing holdups "just for a thrill." In the course of one holdup he and a companion shot a man to death.

The crime was much less atrocious than that of Leopold and Loeb. The same sort of defense was put up. Alienists told of all sorts of crossed wires in the young collegian's brain.

But it took a Georgia jury only a short time to vote the death penalty. Harsh is sentenced to electrocution March 15.

Chicago might send someone down to Georgia to see how it's done.

A STEADY HAND AT THE HELM

It is a source of congratulation to the citizens of Oklahoma that in the present turmoil at the statehouse, there is a man of the caliber of William J. Holloway to take the helm of the ship of state and steer in a safe and conservative course, until the senate determines the merits of the accusations which the house of representatives has brought against Governor Johnston.

Acting Governor Holloway, during the time that he served in a similar capacity while Governor Trapp was absent from the state, displayed the quiet dignity that one likes to see in such an official. He attempted to take no advantage of the absence of the governor to the benefit of himself and his friends, as some others had done. He had none of the airs of the usurper, but rather the modest demeanor of a man who wanted to keep the affairs of state moving along smoothly without trying to make a spectacular reputation.

PERSONAL TO GOVERNOR JOHNSTON

Folks, Johnston and his crew of political artists are as dead as hoop skirts, bustles and many another useless bits of ancient favorites. They may not know it, but we believe that is right, beyond a shadow of a doubt. The Times-Democrat may yet lose in this war and if it does it won't be the first fight it has lost, but "you can tell 'em, governor, we ain't got the heart—" we doped this one out correctly, and our "kind of folk" instead the folk the door slamming lamb talked about, are in control.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—"Park avenue—here we are 'The Gateway to New York.' This is it, all right. Now the Ambassador's along here, we ought to come to it soon."

The two young ladies from Schenectady started up town.

"All the movie stars stop at the Ambassador. That's where I sent a letter to May McAvoy, and Lillian Gish always stays there—you know, they say she's nervous. Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford stayed there too, but Tom Mix didn't because he had Tony. Maybe this is it we're coming to now. Oh, no; this is the Park Lane."

"Park Lane? I never heard of that."

"Oh, May, you stupid. I've heard of that a million times, and the Ambassador's right next to it. Jane Johnson told me that. You know she was in New York six months and lived right near Park avenue, Lenox or Lexington, or something like that; and she said the Ambassador was the next hotel to the Park Lane. It must be across the street, though, because this takes up the whole block. Well, this must be it; it doesn't look so swell, though, does it. My, it's yellow brick; it doesn't look like anything else along here. I suppose it's so exclusive it has to be different. Look, you can see in the windows. That's very modernistic to have just plain chairs and tables. The tables are all squared off—everything is square and angles in modernistic stuff. Oh, no, look, these are checker boards on top of the tables, because here are two men playing checkers at this window. Queer they keep their hats on, isn't it? Probably though this is a men's cafe sort of on this side. I don't see any women. I wonder if we'd dare go and walk around the lobby. We're coming to the door, but there's no doorman or awning; shall we go in?"

They walked over to the bronze sign on the building by the door.

"Oh, gee, we must have made a mistake. This sign here says Railroad Y. M. C. A. Gosh, May, who cares for the Ambassador; let's go back to that cafeteria we saw in the station and get some eats."

The White Wing undoubtedly was married. He had watched his better half in an emergency sweep the dust under the edge of the rug. This makes an excellent disposal plant until such time as the vacuum cleaner is hitched up.

The White Wing also was sweeping streets for the first time. He had swept up a nice little collection of cabbage stalks, mud, rotten oranges and bananas and having swept them up there remained the question of disposal.

The New York streets are not carpeted, but near the sidewalk was a large round hole, ample room to hold any quantity of sweepings. And the lid was off as well. Smilingly the White Wing pushed the small mountain of rubbish over the ledge and gazed around at the nice clean street.

Then an angry voice made itself heard over the roar of the traffic. It grew louder and louder until a man's flushed, indignant face appeared over the rim of the manhole. "Who the—what the—" but the White Wing was down the other end of the street by this time collecting together another little pile of rubbish and looking for another open manhole with a telephone lineman working somewhere in the depths.

The law is a dignified profession. But sometimes when it is taking itself most seriously the mere layman wonders. Recently a visitor to the Woolworth building, where the United States district courts which have overflowed from the old post office building are held, passed by an open door to a court room where a group of extremely solemn looking counsel were arguing a case.

A large important looking member of the bar was opening the case. His weighty accents rang through the room.

"Your honor," he was saying, "a lollypop is a candy on a stick."

"Some people named Backus," Gertrude told me, "used to live in a house on one side of us, and on the other side lived a family who had a little 4-year-old girl. The Backuses once bought a new rug of vivid green. The neighbors were called in and were loud in their praise of it. The next morning the little girl in question called at the Backus residence and asked to see the rug. Surprised, but nevertheless flattered, that so small a child should desire to admire the new possession, Mrs. Backus led the way to the front room.

"The little girl thrust her hands in her coat pockets and critically surveyed the new floor covering for a few moments.

"'Huh,' she said finally. 'It doesn't make ME sick!'"

The VICARION

The Astounding Story of an Invention Greater Than the Movies

Copyright by Gardner Hunting

By Gardner Hunting

Serialized by Ledger Syndicate

In the year 1928 Radley Brainard has invented the Vicarion, a device with which it is possible to re-create scenes out of the past. The invention is a sensational success, with all the theaters installing it in place of motion pictures. Complete Illusions, Inc., which at that time controls all the improvements on the movie, faces ruin, but when Ferdinand Mortimer and Jerry Ballard, heads of the company, call on him, Brainard refuses to make terms.

Brainard's records of the past are contained in "bombs," which hold liquid air and while he is projecting one of the "bombs," which was unmarked, he sees a beautiful gossamer-clad girl, with whom he falls in love, although he is engaged to Phyllis Norman. During the first demonstration of the Vicarion, with Phyllis and her family looking on, a strange man staggers in the studio. He is unable to tell who he is and Brainard names him Van Winkle, and makes him his aide.

Brainard calls in the operator who made the unmarked record, but gains no information from him. He orders Van Winkle to investigate the making of the bomb. Brainard projects one of the three remaining bombs containing the woodland scene in which the girl with whom he is infatuated appears and decides the records were made by Jeffry Honer, a criminal whom he has employed. Honer dies of fright while listening to the voice of his dead brother which Brainard projects by means of the Vicarion and Honer's secret of the "bomb," which contains the "sunrise nymph" passes into the hands of Mortimer and Ballard.

Thousands of things were promised that had not yet been recorded simply because there was a limit to physical means. Radley terrified Phyllis one day by smilingly asking her whether she would prefer to witness human sacrifice at Stonehenge, or the burial of a Neanderthal man! These were not now to her meaningless words; she had just looked at what he told her he believed to be a torch-lit group of Christian refugees in the Roman catacombs.

Questions were asked in congress Phyllis heard Radley make an oral answer in his private office in Santa Monica, which was sent in a three-inch ball to be released in the senate chamber at Washington It consisted of an introduction to a little series of scenes which accompanied it, and which showed senators the means of relieving scenes in committee rooms and hotel conferences. There was an instant outburst of bluster from several sources, in which the word censorship was again prominent. One fire-eating gentleman wired Brainard an incautious, open, personal rebuke. Brainard wired back to him, "Heads or tails; are you censoring me or am I censoring you?" A nation-wide laugh went up—but Phyllis wondered whether people laughed from a sense of humor, or a sense of relief at seeing just where Brainard's attention was centered.

Aunt Relief said she hoped Radley would at least respect the reputation of the family. And when Phyllis did not reply with immediate reassurance, her face went blank.

"Why, you think he will, don't you?" she queried. "Why, I couldn't go on living if I couldn't conceal my past!"

Van Winkle ventured an epigram. "One's past, like roots, might better remain buried," he said. He even joked a bit about it. "I'm rather fortunate just now than otherwise," he decided; "Brainard might show up utterly disgraceful things in my career and I never know it!"

People said that Brainard had no conscience—that he was growing "as hard as nails," "as adamant," as other flinty things. They whispered of forms of debauchery that drew crowds suspiciously to certain places. Phyllis could only look at his tightening mouth and almost fiercely bright eyes, and wonder how much was true. They called him the ghost-maker. He answered that people make their own ghosts; it wasn't his fault if they walked. And he went coolly on solving his mammoth manufacturing problems of which she overheard only an occasional hint.

She saw that when blows were struck at him, however, he invariably struck back. When his retaliations could be seen and traced, she sometimes wept over them in the certainty that he had lost all vision but that of empire.

Holding the Strings

But when the blows he struck were evidenced only in results, in the collapse of attacks against him, in official resignations, in mysterious transfers of authority, in abrupt termination of careers, in lamely explained deaths!—it was then that the girl lived in a nightmare, face to face with a hideous vision of ruin.

Her nervous collapse in the first shock of fear seemed of small account now. It was like the first pain and blood of a childish bruise. Changes were being wrought in herself that she could see were not of the passing sort. The glimpse she had had of her own girlish loveliness of a few months ago served to emphasize the hollowing of her fevered cheeks and the haunting things shadowing her eyes—mere surface evidences of what went on within.

But no one noticed her. Her mother seemed to be living in a kind of golden haze. Perhaps it was happiness—she found it at the Boamar. Phyllis discovered that she was living again in the days of her girlhood there, and the struggle of her parents with poverty long ago. There might be pathos, but there was not outright tragedy, in her mother's case. Her father, who had been the personification of seasoned sense, kindliness and quiet philosophy, had become nervous, hurried, impatient, quite intolerant of questioning or curiosity as to what were his pursuits. John was openly a sneering cynic—unapproachable, and not posing in the least. And Carol's once amusing, if startling, frankness was becoming ribaldry. All of them were absorbed, each in his own way, by vicarious living. And Relief Brainard, mostly free from her occasional vague apprehensions, was like a pigtailed youngster at the circus. As to servants—Charles retained most of his placid superiority to the common considerations of men, but he had troubles uncounted with his staff.

Yet Phyllis herself went daily, nightly, to see what people were seeing. It was impossible to do otherwise; there was no other life about her—and no human mind was capable of stifling the impulse that constantly renewed itself. More and more she knew that it was a reaching out after a greater share of life—an intensification of life—that drove her, like every one else, on and on. Yet often and often she recalled what Van Winkle had said about the soullessness of those living, walking beings of yesterday whose company they courted. His remarks nowadays, however, were mostly humorously turned. One day he said, "You can judge a world, too, can't you, by the company it keeps?" And meant it as a joke.

Of course, all pretense that Brainard himself did any censoring of what was shown either publicly or privately was dropped. Phyllis knew from observation that he selected his aids with care and that he kept his sharp eye on general evidences of what they did; but she could not analyze the standards on which his selection of men or materials was based. She asked him one day if he had not sacrificed all his own freedom to this captivation of others. He laughed and asked her what she would call freedom. He laughed at everything—but rather as a man laughs at satire than at fun.

He laughed at a story that suddenly obtained currency one day of a gigantic conspiracy to steal his whole plant from under him by a concerted coup of his enemies. He asked Phyllis how she thought it could be done, when by spending an hour in his studio he could know what men met whom and what they said and wrote to each other. He defied alike law and the lawless. He could call a police inspector in and ask him to do a thing the other dare not refuse. He held a balance of power, not merely in legislatures, but in the decisions of individual legislators. He had no need to bribe jurors who might hesitate over the expedient course. He feared neither the hatreds nor the consciences of men. He commanded abject allegiance.

"I hold the string on which men dance, Phyl, he said in all seriousness.

"It can't be done, Radley," she told him, quite past any display of mere emotion.

"I know it can't," he answered; "but I'm doing it."

She could only look at him. He looked back at her; and then with sudden curious attention he said:

"You're getting thin, Phyl."

She wondered if the thing that crossed his eyes at the instant was a consciousness that he held the string on which she danced.

That night the whole front of the first three floors of the Bonmar was blown out by an air bomb dropped from a plane in a pitch-black sky. The explosive had undoubtedly been intended for the court in the heart of the building—and had missed by luck!

Ballard Takes a Hand

"There's no use beating about the bush, Brainard. I'm here to listen to your terms."

Jerry Ballard sat by Brainard's south window looking like a whipped man.

"I know what you want," he said, and held out a sealed envelope. "Here it is."

Brainard was becoming accustomed to shocks. But as he looked at that square of white, despite all his preparation for such a scene, he dared not take his hands from his pockets; he was afraid they would shake.

"What's this?" he asked, nodding toward the envelope Ballard held, and making no move to accept it.

"It's what Honer left me, telling me it was a lost index you were anxious to have. Is that frank enough for you?"

"Yes," said Brainard, taken by surprise. "But—what is it?"

He set his teeth to keep down the tremor in him; and then realized that Ballard's gray eyes were calmly scanning him, and relaxed his jaw.

"Well—" Ballard began, and stopped. Yes, he would stop with that. He would let it be thought he knew what the lost index represented. But if he did, would he be here now at all?

Brainard allowed himself to smile. Then he shook his head. "Keep it," Ballard," he said. "You've got nothing I want." And he saw the little muscles about Ballard's eyes twitch.

"Better look at it, hadn't you?" the other man asked. "Honer may have been lying. Of course you know he knew he could hold us up. We wanted to get you."

"That sounds natural enough," returned Brainard, "if it had come from anybody but you." The very nerves of his wrists were knotting with the desire to reach out for that envelope now resting on his enemy's knee. But—was Ballard too candid, or just candid enough, for a big man who knew he was beaten? Did Ballard know he was beaten? Was there a subtle trick here somewhere? A trick to learn whether or not Brainard did care what that envelope might contain!

"Of course you know what brought me here," went on Ballard. "We can't let you run those records. I'm told you've promised to release to The Empress and other theaters this afternoon."

"Oh?" Brainard smiled. "But of course I can't let you tamper unscathed with my employes—poison 'em, for instance."

Ballard grinned. "I don't know what you mean by that," he replied, "but I might understand easily. I would have poisoned any of 'em I could reach in the dark if I'd thought it would touch you."

"I know you would. That's why I think you did."

"Yes? Then you haven't fastened it on me yet?"

"No." This game of frankness was not an easy one to play with craft. Ballard seemed suddenly to have realized that a man could have no reserves with Radley Brainard, and might as well not try. But Ballard was far more astute in matters of craft than Brainard would ever be, and Brainard had sense enough to know it. In the matter of power, however, it was different—or it looked different. This was clearly a duel in which he must choose his own weapons.

"But if you are not guilty in this instance, why do you mind my running that stuff at the Empress?"

"Because," Ballard answered easily, "it is an implied charge which will convince half the people who see it that I am guilty and which I have no means of answering."

Not a completely convincing reason. But Ballard rose from his chair and laid the envelope in his hand upon Brainard's desk.

"If you don't mind," he said, "I prefer not to be in a position to fight you, Brainard. That should convince you. If there is anything in this envelope you want, I want nothing to do with it. I'm through. If Mortimer wants to fight you, he may. But not me! I'm going to retire and ask you to furnish me the means to enjoy a peaceful old age in the cherished and regretted frolics of my youth!"

The determination to be cautious wavered slightly in Brainard. Ballard seemed to be taking it exactly as Ballard would, if he were surrendering. But would Ballard give his conqueror anything he might suspect that conqueror wanted, even for the reason he stated? Would he admit his own impulses to ruthless methods? Why did he not now take Brainard at his word and destroy that envelope and its contents? Obviously he wanted Brainard to open that envelope. And behind an exterior he hoped was frigid Radley Brainard was frightened at the desire that rose in waves in him to snatch at the prize he coveted as he had coveted nothing else in his life!

But what would be the natural thing for him, Brainard, to do, if, as he had told Ballard, he was indifferent to what that envelope contained? If his reactions to the envelope were what interested Ballard, Ballard might be quite as much interested if Brainard did not open it as if he did. Why should not Brainard open it? Why not show a natural curiosity naturally? Could it be done, in his state?

Trickery

He took the thing up in his hand at last, watching himself with a sense of looking on from a distance. "Let's see what the thing is," he said, and tried not to clear his throat. "If it's an index, we'll make a record from it and look at it. Then we'll both know what it was that Honer thought I wanted."

Ballard nodded, smiling. Brainard felt that the stroke had been a happy thought. He would do just as he had suggested; and Ballard would never know what it meant to him! He could open the envelope now. He could open the envelope! He could open the envelope! In a moment he would know the index—the index! He could think no further.

He slowly tore off an end of the white square. Deliberation! He must be deliberate! With his diaphragm shaking, he laid the torn thing down and took out a cigaret. He lighted it, watching to see through the match flame whether his fingers trembled. It was suddenly like a desperate clinch with his enemy. There were Jerry Ballard's cool gray eyes; if that man should learn what this thing meant to him—if he should learn—if he should see the shaking nerves! He felt suddenly as bare before Jerry Ballard's eyes as if he had been stripped. Could he kill Ballard? Could he kill him, if Ballard learned the damnable secret of his—of his slavery?

But he was not thinking clearly! What a mistake it was to allow himself to become so tired! Suppose Ballard did learn his secret, now that the index was here in his hands. It would no longer give Ballard any power!

He picked up the thing again and took out a folded sheet of paper. Then he held it in his hand while he flickered aside his first gathering ash. He was drawing every breath consciously, trying to breathe it deep. Where in all the annals of time, from this moment back to creation's first Saturday afternoon, was his Dawn Maiden's hour? In a moment he would know! In a moment! In a—

He opened the sheet of paper in his hand. His eyes blurred. He brushed his hand across them; for his life he could not arrest the gesture. Then he stared. It was as if he had wiped out his vision! The page he held before him was blank!

The rising flood of reaction in him was irresistible. Something within him caught at it and tried to check it. Something within shouted warnings in his ears. Ballard was watching him! But his mouth went dry, and his eyes hot. Sweat started out around them, and in his palms. The room swam about that blank sheet as its pivot, and all else became as blank—empty! And Ballard was watching him!

With the last strength that was in him, slowly he laid the sheet of paper on his desk. He raised his eyes to where he thought that Ballard might be.

"Honer was fooling you," he said. And cleared his throat.

Ballard came into his vision, as scenes of The Vicarion were wont to materialize out of the mists. He was putting on his hat.

"Oh, no," he was saying; "Honer didn't fool us. That was what I came here to find out. Now I know."

"You know—what?"

"That you would sell your soul to know what is in the envelope Honer did leave with us. Of course I haven't shown you that."

STOCK-A-DAY

AHUMADA LEAD COMPANY

The Ahumada Lead company through subsidiaries controls mining property located in the state of Chihuahua, Mexico. The company purchases lead-silver ores, ships them to the American Smelting and Refining company's smelter at El Paso and sells the refined metals through the United States Metal Selling company. Through its subsidiaries it has interests in over 1,700 hectares of land.

Earnings have been irregular. Gross income increased sharply in the latter year was attributed not only to low prices but to the depletion of ore bodies above the water level. Net income in 1927 was $200,400 or 17 cents a share. This compared with $1,066,728 in 1926 and $1,493,732 in 1925. The amount of refined lead produced was 29,206,756 pounds in 1927 as compared with 35,589,172 in 1926 and silver production suffered similar declines.

There is no funded debt. Capital stock outstanding consists of $1,192,018 in share of $1 par value. Dividends were paid at the rate of 7½ cents a share quarterly from 1926 to April 4, 1927. None has been paid since. Extra dividends have been paid from time to time. In 1927 these extras totaled 12½ cents a share.

As of Jan. 1, 1928, total current assets were $348,528, current liabilities $56,438 and net working capital $292,088. Book value applicable to the capital stock, including $108,000 Mexican legal reserve, amounted to $1,084,173 or $1.66 a share. Output in the first nine months of 1928 amounted to 19,122 tons of ore or 9,054,647 pounds of lead and sales of lead for the same period were 10,834,058 pounds.

Surgical Exploration

Surgical technique has improved a great deal during the past few years. During the years of the war both young and experienced surgeons gained a great deal of valuable knowledge because of the stern necessity of operating as efficiently as possible with speed, and were encouraged to take chances when their wounded patients were hovering between life and death. Much good came from this, especially in a better understanding of bone surgery and in the revised technique for handling those wounded by shot and shell. Along with the war surgery, there has also been an improvement in the use of anesthetics and in major surgery to correct organic and functional defects.

The clever surgeon can today take out a stone filled gall-bladder with a lessened percentage of fatalities. There is however, a limit to the amount of surgery necessary, and a growing distrust in the minds of the sick and afflicted who have held high hopes for a cure through an operation and yet have been disappointed. The constant criticism which I hear from patients is that they think surgeons are only interested in the money they can make from a case. While there is doubtlessly as large a percentage of dishonest physicians as there is among any other profession, it seems to me that the fault lies in the surgeon being too optimistic about the results he expects to achieve with his operation.

Causes of disease are seldom removed by surgery, but usually only the results which have come from improper living. It may be necessary to remove a gall bladder so filled with stones that it resembles a bag of marbles, but many infected and "sick" gall bladders have been removed where correct eating and hygienic habits would have brought about a satisfactory cure. It is all too painfully true that an operation frequently stirs up more trouble.

The "exploratory" operation is often used to try to find the cause of the patient's illness. Searching for causes of disease with a knife is often as dangerous as looking for a gas leak with a lighted match.

It is, indeed, a rare case that cannot be diagnosed by our modern laboratory methods without resorting to exploratory surgery.

This article is in no sense a criticism of the conscientious surgeon, but a plea that the layman will practice the most healthful rules for living, have a periodic diagnosis made whether suffering from symptoms or not, and be able to keep away from the necessity for an operation as long as possible.

You will find it interesting and profitable to learn all you can on the subject of scientific dietietics, the value of exercise, and the real good which comes from constructive mental therapeutics. If you continue to study and practice what you have learned, you can thank yourself for the results—your busy doctor will thank you for giving him less work to do—and you may later on thank me for calling your attention to better ways of healthful living.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Kidney Diseases

Question: W. E. S. asks: "Is there any disease of the kidneys that causes them to rot away? If so, is there any possible cure?"

Answer: If the kidneys are forced to overwork in throwing out poisonous substances, they will sooner or later break down and degenerate as they do in such diseases as nephritis and pyeletis. Have a diagnosis made in your own case, and then find out how to stop injuring your kidneys.

Lump on Neck

Question: A. M. writes: Several years ago I fell on my head and evidently dislocated somothing at the back of my neck. The cartilage has thickened there, causing a bump. Would friction wear this away? I have been to an osteopath with very little success. It is not painful, merely unattractive. I would appreciate your advice."

Answer: The protrusion you have felt at the base of your neck is no doubt due to the natural extension of the spinous processes of the seventh cervical vertebra. I find that many patients have noticed this on themselves and think it is something unnatural. It seems more prominent in some people whose necks are not well rounded, whether they are too bony or have a padding of fat over this part of their spine.

Nervous Breakdown

Question: L. O. asks: "Is there any cure for a nervous breakdown? If so, what is the best known remedy?"

Answer: The first thing to do is to find the cause of what you call a nervous breakdown. As soon as this cause is removed your breakdown will be broken up and you will not know where it has disappeared.

Two Black Crows

MORAN AND MACK

MORAN: Big Boy, you is got to talk English as she is spoke or get a new chef.

MACK: Two cackle berries.

MORAN: What's that?

MACK: Two eggs. Also a cannibal sandwich.

MORAN: What's that?

MACK: Raw hamburger. Draw it in th' dark.

MORAN: I don't git yo'.

MACK: It's coffee without cream.

MORAN: That's easy. We AIN'T got NO cream.

MACK: Well, give 'em coffee WITHOUT somethin'.

MORAN: I'll give 'em coffee without MILK.

MACK: He likes it without CREAM.

MORAN: I kin give 'em tea without LEMON.

MACK: He'd rather have beer without a decimal point.

The Two Black Crows have just discovered that their Lunch-Wagon has wheels but ain't going nowhere. Big Boy doesn't feel comfortable in any wagon unless there is a gong on it.

Frederick Building to Be Completely Remodeled

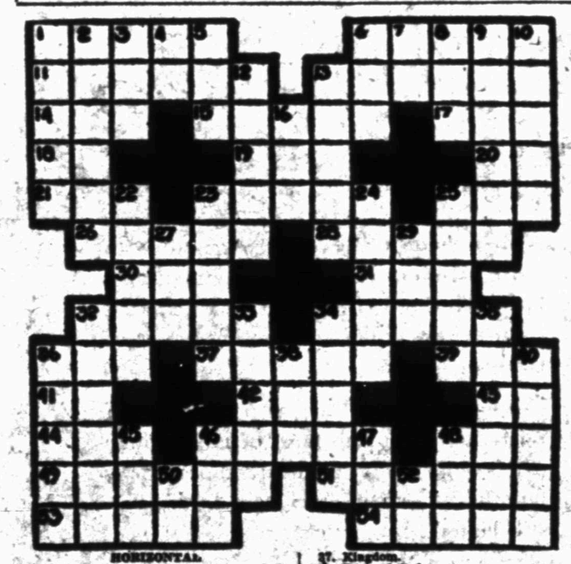

(By Staff Correspondent)

FREDERICK, Okla., Jan. 27.—The Reynolds building, at Grand avenue and South Main, is to be remodeled and converted into a modern office building. Plans were accepted several weeks ago for reconstruction of the front of the Kelly hotel. Construction has begun on the building to be occupied by the Knight-Whippet district sales agency. Cost is estimated at $11,000.

TROTSKY AIDES HE'D

LONDON, Jan. 27. (UP)—Exchange telegraph dispatches reported today that 250 alleged supporters of the exiled Russian leader, Leon Trotsky, had been arrested in Moscow in the present soviet campaign against the Trotsky secret organization. Sixty of those held were said to be Red army officers and 20 of them well-known communists.

WICHITA FALLS WINS POLO CHAMPIONSHIP OF SOUTHWEST

BLUE JACKETS BEAT ABILENE

Handicapped 6, Locals Rally And Score 14-9 Victory

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 27. (AP)—Overtaken, tied and beaten, the Abilene Eagles were erased in finals for the low goal championship in the sixth annual Southwestern Mid-Winter Polo tournament here today by the Blue Jackets from Wichita Falls, who surmounted a six-goal handicap to score a 14 to 9 victory before a crowd estimated at 5,000 persons.

While Cecil Childers, ace of Eagle malletmen, and Horace Robbins, high goaler for Wichita Falls, tied to beat out each other for high scoring honors, Capt. Boyle collected seven goals, half the winners' total.

Childers Held Scoreless

Childers failed to score at all but Robbins got two goals, these in the last two periods.

The backs of both teams harried the two rival scoring aces and neither had a chance, but this proved Abilene's undoing, for while riding herd on Robbins, they were forced to let Boyle, an unhandicaped player, run amuck.

The playing of Robbins, despite the closeness of his opponents' guarding, was a beautiful example of superb polo, and though he was held to two goals, he was a leader in the play of the Blue Jackets.

Jackets Handicaped 6

Robbins, C. H. Featherstone and Lieut. Borden, all were handicaped 2 each. Capt. Boyle and Lieut. Borden are from Fort Sill, Okla.

While the score was 14 to 9, Abilene only negotiated three goals, as they gained six through the handicap. Scoring:

Wild Bill Mehlhorn Shoots Record 277 To Win San Antonio Open Golf Meet

Champions of the Southwest

Sweeping aside all opposition, the Wichita Falls Blue Jackets won the polo championship of the southwest by defeating Abilene yesterday in the finals at San Antonio. Playing under a handicap 6 yesterday the Blue Jackets won by a score of 14 to 9, limiting their opponents to three goals in actual play.

SHARKEY WIN IS NO UPSET

Christner Just An Old Guy Who Can "Take It"

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1928, Universal Service, Inc)

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—The don't-be-surprised boys may now retire to their igloos for the balance of the semester. Their most recent don't-be-surprised enterprise was in the nature of a complete bust.

"Don't be surprised if this Christner flattens the terrible Sharkey man," they were around saying. "Don't be surprised if Christner hits that guy on the whiskers, and knocks him bow-legged. Don't be surprised."

Well, I would have been surprised. Greatly surprised. And so would the don't-be-surprised boys, though doubtless they would have been able to conceal their surprise better than me, and would have been shrilling:

"Didn't I tell you not to be surprised? Didn't I tell you?"

The don't-be-surprised boys are always around prior to any sports event don't-be-surprising us within an inch of our lives. They pick out the short end of a 100 to 1 shot as a possible winner on the don't-be-surprised basis, as they picked Christner to beat the terrible Sharkey man the other night.

They Tire Damon

It costs them nothing. If they put over a don't-be-surprised winner once every two or three years that seems to be sufficient satisfaction to them. The cheapest prophecy, and one with an escape at either end is that old "I wouldn't-be-surprised-if" thing.

The don't-be-surprised boys make me very tired, indeed. Still, I suppose they are merely suffering from some form of disease.

The don't-be-surprised boys were among the heartiest and most sincere of the boosers at Madison Square Garden Friday night when they saw one of their best don't-be-surprised things of the season go glimmering with the award of the decision over Christner to the terrible Sharkey man.

The don't-be-surprised boys seem to take the fact that Sharkey didn't knock out Christner as a moral victory. I didn't think the Sharkey man figured to knock out Christner, but I did think Sharkey figured to give the old ex-rubber worker from Akron a jolly good shellacking, and that's exactly what he did give him.

However, I was don't-be-surprised all week by don't-be-surprisers that I know never saw Christner in action. They were taking him off his knockout of the tin-chinned melancholic dane, Knute Hansen. They were stabbing, as we say at the club.

They Were Surprised

Now Christner impressed me as a willing, game old galloper, with a dangerous punch against any guy who can't take 'em. But a punch of a nature that shouldn't land on a fellow who knows anything about the finer points of the sour science. Even so, he landed his best punch ka-zip on the Sharkey's man chin, and what happened? Did any of the don't-be-surprised boys see Sharkey cave? And were they, by any chance, surprised that he didn't?

The Sharkey chin isn't the stoutest chin in all the world, either. It collapsed under a punch from Quentin Roll Over Rojas for the county, and it give way for a sp—l under a swipe from the right duke of one Orlando Riverberi, a party that you perhaps never heard of. The Sharkey man was on the floor from the smash for some seconds. Moreover, the wallop that the Manassa Mauler hung on that chin up at the Yankee Stadium didn't reinforce it any.

So then I cannot believe that the stolid looking ex-rubber worker, with the bald pate, is the puncher I was warned by the don't-be-surprised boys. He is just a gallant old warrior who is always trying, and for that he has my respect in a day and age when half the exponents of the sour science don't even try.

He was pretty lucky to get on top in Madison Square Garden and get the kind of money he did. There are a score of better fighters scattered around the country who never get that sort of a break, and who probably never will.

Rickard Quit Boxing Promotion For Several Years After Reno Go

Jeffries-Johnson Fight Financial Success Despite Handicaps And Established Tex as Greatest Impresario

By JACK LAWRENCE

(Copyright, 1929, by the New York American, Inc., and Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 27—In last week's chapters of the life of Tex Rickard, the man of ballyhoo, I described his first venture into the fight racket. It was the Joe Gans-Battling Nelson battle for the lightweight championship of the world, held at Goldfield, Nevada, in September, 1906.

Rickard, then deeply interested in the exploitation of Nevada mining properties, conceived the idea of staging the fight as a publicity stunt for Goldfield and Tonopah. He had no idea that it would return a personal profit to him. In fact, he figured on being in a financial position to underwrite a loss.

With $5,000 of his own money and $25,000 pledged by prominent mining men of Goldfield and Tonopah, he plunged into the promotion of the fight. And when it was all over he discovered that he could meet all expenses and gather in a profit of $13,000 without ever having put up a dollar in actual cash.

His Trouble Started

But four years were to elapse before he was again to take the helm in putting on a major prize fight. With his northern saloon and gambling house in Goldfield and his various mining investments in Nevada, Rickard gave no thought to the boxing game until the Jeffries-Johnson controversy reached a boiling point late in 1909. Even then Rickard was not enthused because he had a premonition of all sorts of trouble in staging a battle between a white and a black for the heavyweight championship of the world. His premonitions proved to be well founded.

It was the persuasive arguments of a coterie of wealthy Nevada mining men with whom Rickard had been associated that finally moved him to go after the big battle. They told Tex that they would back him financially for anything he needed. As in the case of the Gans-Nelson affair at Goldfield, Rickard's backers in the Jeffries-Johnson project never had to put up a dollar.

The fight, probably the most sensational and picturesque in the history of professional pugilism, paid handsome returns to both the fighters and the promoters, despite the fact that the launching of it was met with the most discouraging setbacks for Tex Rickard. Probably anyone but Tex Rickard would have abandoned the enterprise when, after investing something like $50,000 in San Francisco, where he was assured the contest could be held, he was informed by the governor of the state that it could not be staged in California.

Banned in California

When this ruinous edict was tossed into his lap Rickard had erected an arena in Frisco at a cost of $35,000 and had invested another $15,000 in other incidental expenses, such as the printing of tickets. A total of $300,000 worth of these had been sold when the governor informed Rickard that he would have to take his prize fight elsewhere.

The action of Governor Gillette of California was a victory for the army of performers who had been trying to prevent the battle from the moment it was announced that the match had been closed. No fight in history had ever raised such a storm of protests from reformers and social organizations.

Tex Rickard, with his set and emotionless face, took these reverses without a whimper and staged the fight in Nevada, July 4, 1910. It was a huge success and established his name as the greatest boxing promoter of all time.

Once again he was to drop out of the game for a long period, not to take a prominent part in it until he brought Jack Dempsey and Jess Willard together at Toledo for the heavyweight championship of the world.

How Rickard marched on to the million-dollar gate will be told in this week's installment of his biography.

H. SMITH'S 281 TAKES SECOND

Willard Hutchinson Cops Third With 282

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 27. (AP)—Wild Bill Mehlhorn of Fennimore, N. Y., broke two records here today to win the Texas open golf championship with a total of 277 strokes for the 72 holes.

Horton Smith of Joplin, Mo., was second with 281 and Willard Hutchinson of Pasadena, Calif., third with 282.

Mehlhorn's total is the lowest ever scored in the tournament and he shot a 66 on the first round today to establish a new course record. Other scores:

(By The Associated Press)

Arkansas university and Texas university, leaders of the Southwest conference basketball chase, held aloof during the past week while the other teams played among themselves, the most significant event being the 23 to 15 victory of Southern Methodist university over the Aggies Saturday night at Dallas.

The win hoisted the Ponies' stock and gave promise of a possible three-cornered fight between the Mustangs, Aggies and Texas university for runnerup honors.

Baylor university carved out its first conference victory Saturday night over the Rice institute Owls. The Baptists had to go an extra five-minute heat to do it, 41 to 38.

Steers Play This Week

This week will see the Texas Longhorns come out of their seclusion and make their first real bid. Games with Rice and Texas Christian university should give a good line on the Longhorn basketeers. Should any of the two quintets trip up the Orange it will toss the capital city boys down into the general melee and awaken interest in an otherwise drab campaign.

Monday night the Longhorns will encounter the Rice Owls at Austin. Saturday they tackle the Horned Frogs at Austin.

Porkers Lead Scoring

Tom Pickell and Wear Schoonver Arkansas' great pair, did not have to play last week to maintain their leads over the individual scorers of the circuit. Pickell still has 91 points, scored in five games, and his tall playmate has 87 for six games.

Eury of T. C. U., with 50 points climbed into third place, followed by Lambert of Arkansas, 47; and Hess, Rice, 46. Other leaders:

Smith, Baylor, 40; Brown, S. M. U., and Webster, Aggies, 39; Caudle, Aggies, 37; Roberson, T. C. U., 33; A. Hale, Arkansas, 33; Johnson, S. M. ## TICKET 'SPECS' CONCERN JACK

Prospects of Profiteering Alarm Dempsey

MIAMI BEACH, Jan. 27. (UP)—Promoting a heavyweight championship elimination bout is not all beer and skittles, it seems.

Jack Dempsey, prime movers in the Sharkey-Stribling bout which is to take place here Feb. 27, today expressed himself as gravely concerned, not to say alarmed, over the possibility that certain unscrupulous persons may speculate with his tickets.

Suspicious of certain customers who have applied for reservations in blocks of 100 and 150, the ex-champion appeared to be greatly worried, but declared he would see that every investor is protected.

He shook his head and refused to name the customers who require so many seats.

"We do not wish to be placed in an embarrassing position in the event our investigation discloses that these reservations come from legitimate sources," he said.

Athletic Coaching New Reagan Course

An innovation in the curriculum of Wichita Falls schools will be inaugurated today at Reagan Junior high. Coach A. D. Beck of that school announced that today he will start a class of coaching instruction, with a credit to be given in the course.

The one-hour classes will embody instruction in football and basket ball, and will be personally conducted by Coach Beck.

Griffin, Traded to Omaha By Bears, May Not Report

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 27. (AP)—Francis (Pug) Griffin, informed tonight that he had been transferred from the San Antonio club of the Texas league to the Omaha Western league club in exchange for pitcher Earl Cash, said he was not certain he would play in organized ball this summer.

OUT OF DAVIS CUP PLAY

NEW YORK, Jan. 27 (UP)—With 27 nations already entered in the Davis cup tournament in 1929, it was announced today that Australia and New Zealand, which previously had participated, will not challenge this year for the cup held by France.

Bagshaw Remains At Washington U.

College Prexy Overrules Ouster by Students

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 27 (UP)—Enoch Bagshaw must remain as head football coach at the University of Washington, Dr. M. Lyle Spencer, president of the university, ruled tonight, concurring with the faculty athletic committee and refusing to ratify the ouster action of the student board of control.

The dismissal of Bagshaw would constitute a breach of contract, Dr. Spencer said, and is not warranted by facts which have been brought out by the eight-day discussion since the student board voted to oust their coach.

"I request that all the students end this discussion now," Spencer said, "and go back to their duties."

Smith Troy, student body president and leader of the Bagshaw ouster, was out of the city for the week-end and could not be reached to say whether the student anti-Bagshaw forces intend to carry on the fight.

Baer Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Standardized Opera

NEW YORK, Jan. 27—John D. Rockefeller Junior is now building a one-family garage on Fifth avenue.

He will pay $261,000,000 rent during the next 87 years.

When it comes to handling out long strings of ciphers, John is a Cruller machine.

We are glad that John took an 87 year lease.

We like to see a landlord wait.

Senior's junior claims that he is renting this property to build an opera house.

Looking over the wayside gasoline shrines in America we can state that John's idea of an opera house seems to be a filling station.

They all look like opera houses now.

The finest building in America is a gasoline trap on the Lincoln highway.

We stopped there for a gallon of advice one day while detouring through Pennsylvania.

Thinking it was the executive mansion, we asked:

"Does the governor live here?"

The man said, "Nope. But he would like to."

That man was the most sarcastic mechanic we ever saw. After we had fished around in our pockets to find something larger than a penny and smaller than a quarter he took the coin and wiped it off with a dust cloth.

We do not know what kind of operas will be garaged in junior's new theater.

But we do know that the chorus will be strictly limited to Standard oil proxies.

The Standard oil idea of grand opera may mean that Romeo will serenade Juliet on the balcony of a traffic tower.

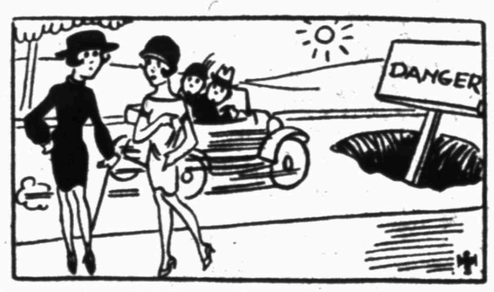

We will also discover that Othello did not really smother Desdemona.

All he did was to choke her carburetor.

And when Hamlet picks that skull out of the repair pit, he will say: "Alas, poor Yorick. His chassis is gone."

Substantial Reductions

in the prices of the

DODGE BROTHERS SENIOR

WHEN THE NEW Dodge Brothers Six was announced, at the beginning of the new year, at prices so low as to overshadow any previous Dodge Brothers accomplishment, its universal public acceptance marked a new peak of popularity even for Dodge Brothers cars.

Public recognition was quickly translated into an unprecedented sales volume with an attendant increase in manufacturing efficiency and economy which now favorably affects its companion car—the Dodge Brothers Senior—and permits substantial reductions in the prices of all Dodge Brothers Senior models.

The new lower prices at which the Dodge Brothers Senior henceforth will be sold are directly traceable to the established Chrysler policy of giving the public immediate benefit of every economy due to more efficient manufacturing methods, lower overhead costs and savings effected by the great unified purchasing power of Chrysler Motors.

Not only are these savings now passed on to the public in the form of much lower prices of all Dodge Brothers Senior models, but the cars themselves have been made still better.

Examine the Dodge Brothers Senior in your most critical mood. Scrutinize each small detail. Be most exacting in your inspection. For once you have subjected the Chrysler-built Dodge Brothers Senior to your most diligent and careful inspection you are certain to realize that never before has a car so large, so handsome and so fine been available at so low a price.

NEW LOWER PRICES: NOW $1495 to $1595, F. O. B. DETROIT

I Saw It Myself

By C. W. ROGERS
Record News Staff Correspondent

The head man on The Record News didn't instruct this writer to proceed to Lawton, but rumors heard in his peregrinations in the country to the east were responsible for a visit to the town whose most notable assets used to be soldiers and scenery. These it continues to hold.

Lawton's most recently developed asset is a dairying and poultry industry that has picked up with the speed of a bull market in Wall street. Last year Lawton produce buyers paid for poultry and cream the total sum of $1,286,000. These figures are from the statistical department of the Lawton Chamber of Commerce. Competent evidence to substantiate them is seen on the farms in this territory. The chamber of commerce is encouraging the industry with all the resources at its command.

Lawton's most imposing structure is its high school building, surmounted by a dome, almost as impressive at first glance as Oklahoma's state capitol. Observed on the campus was a considerable number of automobiles, some late models of costly design, and a few tin lizzies. Concerning these cars it was learned that they were driven by youngsters from the country surrounding Lawton. So long as the tendency of the new generation to demand the ultimate in everything extends to the ultimate in education their future is not to be contemplated with apprehension. A $1,500 car that whirls a youngster to an institution of learning like that offered by Lawton is a good investment. It supplies the answer to that question, "How are you going to keep them on the farm?"

The people of Southern Oklahoma are intensely agitated over the doings at the state house in Oklahoma City. Among the Democrats the insurrectos are bawling for the dethronement of the administration, the pacificos contend that the governor and his crew should be let alone and given a chance to accomplish something constructive, while the Republicans are of the conviction that the stabilization of Oklahoma lies only in a Republican administration. Out of all the talk there is practically unanimity of agreement that the highway department is a total loss as far as this section is concerned. Outside of the towns not one mile of paved highway has this writer observed in his travel via bus lines. Farmers and business men alike are clamoring for a system of paved highways.

From Lawton to Frederick and Frederick to Altus the highways are kept in good condition, through attention given them by the counties, it is said.

Frederick just now is in the middle of a red hot development campaign with a whole string of projects up its sleeve. The campaign to raise $200,000 for construction of a 60-room modern hotel has been completed and preparations are being made to start up the recently completed plant of the Red River Creamery company. Next week a two-day agricultural short course is to be held with lectures by high-powered agricultural experts. The chamber of commerce is swamped with work. The town almost was in hysterics the last fortnight during which time the secretary of the chamber was absent on business connected with the creamery project and the newly elected president, P. D. Moore, declined to serve, pleading the demands of personal affairs on his time. The chamber was practically without an active head. After a visit by a body of determined citizens Mr. Moore, who is active vice president of the National Bank of Commerce, deemed it prudent to reconsider his resignation. The chamber again is functioning efficiently. Frederick has all the ear marks of an up-and-coming town. One of these is a daily newspaper with morning and afternoon editions.

Between Frederick and Tipton in Tillman county along the highway leading to Altus is to be seen a stretch of farming country that should delight the beholder who appreciates farming on a business basis.

Farming along this stretch is on a big scale, apparently, and the evidences of application of business principles to farm management are apparent to the least informed. The residential structures are large, pleasing in design, painted and in good repair. Barns, in most instances from two to three times as large as the family residence, are eloquent testimony to the business judgment of the owners.

In this section cotton is king, but leading his retinue are the cow, the sow and the hen, contributing to financial stability.

Tillman county's hugh annual cotton crop is a tremendous resource but lots full of livestock, yards full of poultry and barns full of feed are mighty satisfying to contemplate.

Tillman County Cotton Yield 60,000 Bales

(By Staff Correspondent)
FREDERICK, Okla., Jan. 27.—Cotton production of Tillman county for the season now ending will approximate 60,000 bales, according to opinion expressed in the office of Robey and company, cotton merchants. This is about 65 per cent of normal crop, acreage considered, it was said. Total ginnings in Jackson county, it is estimated at Altus, will approximate a trifle less than 60,000 bales. The normal crop of Jackson county is around and above 100,000 bales.

NEW S. A. HOME PLANNED HERE

Dallas Official Confers With Wichitans

The Wichita Falls Salvation Army is planning the purchase of a site and the erection of a new and larger citadel here in keeping with the growing needs of the organization, it was revealed Sunday in connection with the visit to Wichita Falls of Brigadier and Mrs. David Main of Dallas. The brigadier is in charge of the Texas division of the army.

At a special meeting of the advisory board, of which Dr. F. R. Collard is president, the sale of the Salvation Army property at 1412 Eighth street and also of the present citadel property at 810 Seventh street, was discussed.

These two properties have an estimated value at $55,000, it was said. The sale of both places and the use of the money from them to buy another lot and erect a larger and more commodious citadel was discussed.

No plans for the proposed building have been drawn, it was said, and no estimate of the cost of the new citadel has been made as the plan is now in the formulative stage.

It was said that a larger building would allow for the proper handling of the Salvation Army work here that is said to have outgrown the present accommodations. Young peoples' work also would be housed.

Other plans for the local army include the organization of a troup of Chums, an organization for boys between 8 and 11, and a troup of Sunbeams, the similar organization among the girls.

Mrs. Main will remain in Wichita Falls until Tuesday and will reorganize the Home league, which is the woman's division in Salvation Army work.

The brigadier held services at the citadel Saturday and Sunday, and then left late Sunday for Amarillo. He was accompanied by Major E. E. Agnew of Dallas, divisional general secretary.

Wichitans Attend Dallas Scout Meet

Frank B. Creighton, local Boy Scout executive, Robert Flournoy and Walter D. Cline left for Dallas Sunday afternoon, where they will attend the regional conference of scout officials which opens Monday morning at the Adolphus hotel.

Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico are included in the region represented in the assembly of leaders at Dallas. A number of national and international officers, it was said, will be included in the list of speakers for the occasion.

A one hour program devoted to the Boy Scout movement will be given from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m. Monday, it was announced, over radio from station WFAA, Dallas.

KGKO Program

The Tesco Male quartet will contribute one hour of entertainment to the Monday night program at radio station KGKO, according to the program announced Sunday. A "potluck musical feast" is announced for the last hour, 9 to 10 o'clock.

The program follows:

7 to 8—Little Rovers' orchestra.
8 to 9—Tesco Male Quartet.
9 to 10—"Potluck Musical Feast."

Today { At the Theaters

MAJESTIC: (Musical comedy) Vincent Youmans' "Hit The Deck."
STRAND: (Sound pictures) Milton Sills, Dorothy Mackaill, Betty Compson, Douglas Fairbanks Jr., in "The Barker." Three vitaphone shorts. Pathe news.
OLYMPIC: Tom Mix in "Outlawed." Fox news. Comedy. On the stage: Tom Lewis and company.
MISSION: Zane Gray's "Avalanche." Comedy.
GEM: "The Avenging Rider." Comedy.

A double romance is wound up in a lot of action at the Strand theater this week in a talkie "The Barker." It is a carnival story that deals with the life of the road, the hula dancers, the sadness of the dressing rooms, the barker himself and the excitement which often attends such attractions on tours of small towns.

An all start cast is presented. It includes Dorothy Mackaill, Milton Sills, Betty Compson and Douglas Fairbanks Jr. along with a group of rather high calibre artists. Betty Compson is seen as a hula dancer.

Secrets of circus grafters are exposed. The cry of "Hey, Rube," the circus man's signal that a fight has started, is heard. All the sideshow freaks such as giants, fat ladies and midgets, are there.

"The Barker" is a First National picture based on the legitimate stage show of the same name by Kenyon Nicholson and should be a big hit in Wichita Falls.

◇ ◇ ◇

There is real musical comedy in "Hit the Deck" at the Majestic theater Monday night, and the show should prove welcome diversion Tuesday and Wednesday will see the return of the movies when Dolores del Rio's picture, "The Red Dance," will continue its run. Vaudeville is billed for the Majestic as usual for Thursday and Friday.

◇ ◇ ◇

Dorothy Granger is making quite a hit with Tom Lewis and his musical tabloid company at the Olympic. Mr. Lewis, Ann Lewis, Bob Capers, Winnie Granger, Jimmie Moss, Dick Granger and Allen Fisher are among those who have won their places in the hearts of the Olympic fans. Tom Lewis, heading the organization, already has a world of friends in the city as he is not a newcomer in musical tab shows here. Judging by the good comments on Lewis and his company their stay in Wichita Falls should be a long one.

Owner Recognizes Coat, Negro Given Jail Cell

Solution of many petty thefts and house burglaries may result from the arrest of a negro man with a stolen watch and overcoat Sunday afternoon by G. W. Wright, city traffic officer.

The owner of the overcoat recognized it on the negro as he was walking down a street in the downtown section and called Wright to arrest him. When the black realized that he had attracted attention and that the officer was following him he boarded a street car and attempted to escape.

He left the car at Tenth and Scott in an effort to elude the officer but was soon overhauled and taken to police headquarters.

On investigation at the police station a wrist watch with the words "From Mary" engraved on the back of it, which the negro was wearing, aroused suspicion. The watch proved to be one stolen from Marvin Johnson, son of city officer Sid Johnson, early in December from his room in a local hotel.

Three Stolen Autos Recovered by Police

Three automobiles which were stolen Saturday night were recovered by the police Sunday. Two of the machines were stripped of all accessories and tires.

A Chevrolet roadster owned by Ethel Waxman of 1706 Travis was recovered by Fred Fountain, city officer, at a filling station on the Iowa Park road. The machine was stripped of its tires and numerous motor parts, Fountain said.

A Chevrolet coupe owned by J. R. Noble, 1301 Lamar avenue, was located late Sunday afternoon by Fountain and Elmer Thornton, in the 600 block on Lee street, where the thieves had left it standing.

A Ford coupe owned by Fred Morgan of 205 Oriole street was recovered Sunday morning by Chris Jensen, city detective. The car was stripped of its tires and several motor parts.

Grand Jury Names Filed With Clerk

Names of the men who will be summoned to serve as grand jurors in the April term of the 30th district court have been placed in the hands of Miss Eunice Jackson, district clerk, to be called within two weeks of the opening of the April term.

The 16 names were presented by the new grand jury commission, appointed by Judge Allan D. Montgomery. The commissioners are G. D. Anderson, O. C. Whitaker of Burkburnett and Ed Schlasske of Electra.

The final session of the January body will be held on Friday, Feb. 1.

MAN AND SON WIN DAMAGES

$10,000 Awarded J. L. Giles For Fatal Accident

R. E. Horton and his young son were awarded $10,000 damages from J. L. Giles Saturday in connection with the death of Mrs. Horton in an automobile accident in December, 1927.

A jury in the 89th district court gave $7,500 to the son, who is about three years old, and $2,500 to the husband. The case was tried before Judge P. A. Martin.

Mrs. Horton was killed when the car in which she was riding collided with a trailer attached to a truck belonging to Mr. Giles. A pole, protruding from the truck, went through the windshield of the Horton car and struck Mrs. Horton, according to the testimony introduced in the trial. The father and son asked $30,000 damages.

Musical Comedy "Hit the Deck," At Majestic Tonight

Monday night is the night that the Vincent Youmans' musical comedy, "Hit the Deck," will be at the Majestic theater. The curtain will rise at 8:20 o'clock, according to H. C. Federer, city manager of Dent theaters.

The company is carrying its own orchestra, according to the announcements, has a double octette of male voices and a large chorus of vivacious dancing beauties.

Vincent Youmans, composer and producer, is the producer of this show, as well as the composer of its music, the chief musical hits being "Hallelujah" and "Sometimes I'm Happy." Mr. Youmans' is best known to the American public for his show "No, No, Nanette" and his song hits "Bambalina," "Tea For Two," "No, No, Nanette" and "I Want to Be Happy."

"Hit the Deck" enjoyed a run of one year in New York and London and six months in Chicago and Boston. The cast is headed by Poly Mara, and includes Edward Garr, Sunny Dale, Katherine Bingham, Ernie Mack, Betty Benton, Rita Carita, John Robb, George Scully, the Mannequin four, Louis Landis, Dan De Leo and Butler Middleton.

Senior Fellowship Meets in Parish House

The devotional was led by Miss Betty L. Rugeley at the meeting of the Senior Fellowship of the Episcopal church Sunday evening in the parish house.

Miss Helen G. Gould had charge of the program which included violin solos by Homer O'Donohoo and Sam Jones, and a saxophone solo by Wilson Gray.

It was announced that a cabinet meeting will be held Monday evening at the rectory.

Judge Martin Fills Floral Heights Pulpit

Judge P. A. Martin occupied the pulpit in the Floral Heights Methodist church Sunday evening, delivering a lecture on "Christ in the Courthouse."

Judge Martin was asked to take the place of Rev. Ed Barcus, who was ill and unable to deliver the sermon.

AGREED AT LAST

Wife: It is strange that men always want sons. My father was always sorry that I was not a boy.
Husband: So am I.—Kikeriki, Vienna.

VERNON GIVES KGKO PROGRAM

Musicians Win Praise For Sunday Concert

Sunday was "Vernon Day" at station KGKO, when the choir of the Federated Presbyterian church of that city, under the direction of Miss Edith Crownover, presented during laymen's hour, from 4 to 5 o'clock, a program of sacred musical numbers which local radio officials declared one of the best ever broadcast here.

The response from radio listeners, not only in the Vernon community, but in Wichita Falls and the surrounding territory generally, was indicated by scores of telephone and telegraph messages commending the Vernon musicians. Special favorites on Sunday's program were soprano solos by Miss Crownover and violin selections played by Miss Kathryn Pierce.

The program included the following:

"All Hail the Power of Jesus Name", Hymn
The Choir
"I Cannot Always Trace the Way," Hymn
Ralph Binnion
"Rock of Ages" ..... The Choir
"Romance" ..... Wieniawski
Miss Kathryn Pierce, violin
"It Is Well with My Soul," "Abide With Me"
The Choir
"No Night There" ..... Selected
T. P. Lisman Jr.
Solo ..... Selected
F. H. Henderson
"When They Ring Those Golden Bells"
"The Holy City"
Miss Crownover
"Swedish Melody" ..... Wilhelmy
Miss Pierce, violin
"Now the Day Is Over" ..... Austin
The Choir

The personnel of the choir which sang here Sunday follows: Misses Edith Crownover, director; Enid McCarroll, accompanist; Francis Rhea, Marion Wynn, Mesdames C. W. Oliver, F. B. Elliott, Charlotte Still, Hubbard Colley, Hugh Thompson; Messrs. F. E. Henderson, T. P. Lisman Jr., Ralph Binnion, George A. Long, manager.

Following the Vernon program, Harry Hines of the First Christian church, delivered a short lay sermon, choosing for his subject, "Without a Vision the People Perish."

The 5 to 6 o'clock Bible class hour was taken by Rev. Patrick D. Moreland, pastor of the Grant Street Methodist Episcopal church, and a mixed quartet from the choir of that church. Rev. Mr. Moreland discussed the "anti-evolution" bill which was introduced into the Texas legislature a few days ago.

Tuf Nut Stockholders To Meet at C.-C. Today

A meeting of the local stockholders of the Tuf Nut Garment Manufacturing company will be held at 10 o'clock Monday morning in the office of James W. Chatham, industrial and traffic manager of the chamber of commerce, for the purpose of selecting delegates to the annual stockholders meeting of the company which will be held at Little Rock, Ark., on Jan. 30. The local plant will be able to report a very satisfactory business since opening last summer, it was said.

Death Claims Father Of City Food Inspector

James C. Davis, father of Henry W. Davis, city food inspector, died in a local hospital Sunday morning. The body was taken in charge by the Burris-Shepherd Funeral home.

Henry Davis is seriously ill with pneumonia and funeral arrangements are pending word from out of town relatives.

SMALL FIRE

Damage estimated at $50 was caused by flames which broke out in the home of B. D. Barnes, 1108 Amber street, Sunday morning. The origin of the fire coud not be ascertained, fire department officials said.

At the time of maximum sun spots the temperature of the air above the earth is often lower by one degree.

How Knute Rockne Inspires Men Revealed in Movietone Show Here

What goes on behind the scenes in the club house between halves of a crucial football game? What does a coach say to his men that so crystallizes their determination to win that they come back in the second half and completely upset the opposing team.

Those who have sat in the stands and wondered about this phase of football psychology will have opportunity to step "behind the scene" while Coach Knute Rockne of Notre Dame exhorts his men in the plot of the Fox Movietone production "Champions," which will be presented on Jan. 28 and 29 from 7:30 to 11 p. m. at Fritz Motor company, Scott at Eleventh.

The public is invited. The audience sees and hears the fiery Notre Dame mentor talk to the members of his 1928 squad just before sending them for the second half of an important contest.

One of the outstanding football "upsets" of the 1928 season was the defeat of the Army by Notre Dame. Gridiron critics watching the game agreed that Notre Dame played practically perfect football during the first half yet seemed to make little progress against the heavier, more experienced soldiers. At the start of the second half, the "Irish" came back with a spirit which admitted no defeat and scored two touchdowns to win.

What Rockne said to his men between halves to kindle the spirit which won the game is revealed in "Champions" for the first time. Appearing with Rockne in this production are several of the reknowned members of the "Fighting Irish," including Chevigny, whose touchdown beat the Army; Niemic, Law, captain-elect for 1929; Brady, Leppig, Collins and Ransavage.

American football has never produced a football coach more colorful, or more successful, than Knute Rockne. While other coaches might point their ambitions toward sectional conquests, Notre Dame each year meets the nation's best and travels from coast to coast in quest of national honors. Probably the best measure of Rockne's success is the fact that of the 109 games Notre Dame has played since he became head coach, the "Fighting Irish" have won 92, lost 13, and tied four.

It is significant that former Notre Dame players are now coaching in practically every section of the country and using the "Rockne system" with consistent success. The so-called system, however, is no secret, for each year Rockne conducts a coaching school attended by many of the foremost coaches of the country where the inner workings of this system are laid bare to any who seek them.

The plot of "Champions" is replete with action. Ann Pennington of "The Scandals," the Howard Sisters of "Whoopee," motor cars soaring around the Atlantic City speedway, presentation of the latest authentic Paris fashion creations by a Vogue fashion show, Flo Ziegfeld, the man who glorified the American girl—all are elements in its unique plot. The cast includes, in addition to those named above, such national celebrities as Eva LeGallienne, famous emotional actress; Quin Ryan, the voice of WGN; Ab Jenkins and Ralph Hepburn, racing drivers; Oscar Amundsen, relative of the famous polar explorer; Elinor Sherwin, artist's model, whose face has charmed millions of Americans from billboards all over the country, and several Ziegfeld follies beauties. Roxy's famous orchestra furnishes the musical scoring.

Ziegfeld Star

Betty Dunbris, one of the outstanding beauties of Ziegfeld's Broadway success "Whoopee," lends the enchantment of her charms to Fox's new Movietone production "Champions," to be presented on Jan. 28-29, at Fritz Motor company, from 7:30 to 11 p. m. Admission is free to the public.

C. A. Rogers to Speak At Kiwanis Luncheon

C. A. Rogers, local oil man, will be the principal speaker on the program to be presented Monday noon at the weekly meeting of the Kiwanis club by the "Good Will and Grievance" committee, under the direction of Grover Bullington.

Mr. Rogers will speak on "Good Will Resulting From Fellowship Within the Club." A musical program arranged by W. E. Young also will be given at the luncheon.

WOMAN DENIED WRIT BY COURT

Hospital Patient Remanded To Asylum

A Grayson county woman, seeking release from the Wichita Falls state hospital, was sent back to the asylum Saturday afternoon after a habeas corpus hearing in which she described the shooting of her husband in Sherman last October.

The commitment to the hospital followed shortly after the shooting, the evidence showed.

In her own statement to the court, the patient told Judge W. W. Cook that she had shot in self-defense, describing all the circumstances of the shooting.

The patient was represented on the stand by her sister, from Tarrant county, who told the court that she would take the woman to her own home and keep her out of Grayson, county and away from her husband, who was responsible, she alleged, for the commitment.

Both the sister and Dr. Charles W. Castner, superintendent at the hospital, testified that the patient is in the same condition now as she was at the time of her commitment. Since, by the judgment of the jury that she was a paranoiac and her condition is said not to have changed, Judge Cook ordered her taken back to the institution.

Special to The Record News

FREDERICK, Okla., Jan. 27.—L. H. Beaty, county agent, spent Tuesday laying lines and giving instruction for terracing. The farms of Sam McClung, R. E. Buckner and L. H. Campbell all of near Davidson were visited.

Judge Returns Children to Parents Who Promise to Forget Troubles

Drawn together by the fear of losing their three small children, an estranged couple appeared before Judge P. A. Martin Saturday and promised to forget their differences and re-establish a home if the court would give the children back into their care.

The children, two boys, nine and six, and a three year old baby girl, have been under the guardianship of J. A. McDonald, juvenile officer, during the past month. They were taken from their home in Burkburnett after their mother was put under arrest on a whisky charge. The father at that time was at Wink.

Threatened with the loss of the children, both parents made moves toward reconciliation, and Saturday morning saw a re-united family, with the children in their parents' arms, received the blessing of the court. The father will resume his position as head of the household and will take his family under his wing, move away from Burkburnett and start life anew, he promised the judge.
