Medicine.

I know it's rather sticky stuff, I don't just like its looks myself;
But have you ever figured why your mother keeps it on the shelf?
She doesn't keep it there for looks, for taste, nor certainly for smell;
No, mother keeps this medicine for just one thing—to keep you well.

For children, I am sad to say, don't always eat the way they should;
They eat too fast, they eat too much, they eat the things that aren't good.
And lots of times they're not to blame, there's lots of ways of getting sick,
So here's the bottle, here's the spoon—now be a man and take it quick.

For when you take your medicine, whom do you really take it for?
Perhaps you think it is for me, perhaps it is for Mother more.
But have you ever figured why your mother keeps it on the shelf?
You aren't taking it for her—you're taking it for just yourself!

SHEP AND HUFF BACK PLAN FOR SOFTER WATER

Both Citizens State They Are Ready to Help Out Commissioner Curd

TO BE GREAT SAVING

Mayor Shepherd Thinks There Should be No Opposition

Mayor R. E. Shepherd and R. E. Huff, the latter defeated by Shepherd in the last mayoralty election, entered strong endorsement of Public Utilities Commissioner P. B. Curd's plan, as announced exclusively in the Record News Tuesday morning, to attempt an agreement with irrigation district No. 1 to insure a permanent supply of soft water for Wichita Falls by which, according to water department official's estimate, would entail a savings of $538 annually.

Here's what they say:

MAYOR SHEPHERD—"I am heartily in favor of securing a soft water supply for the city. Hard water is costing the citizens lots of money both directly and indirectly. Immediate steps, as Mr. Curd has suggested, should be taken by the council to get together with the irrigation district board and see if it is not possible for the city to acquire the district's lake interest in Lake Wichita and thus be assured of soft water. I feel that there should be no difficulty in working this out as all of the directors of the irrigation board are prominent public spirited citizens and large property owners, deeply interested in the welfare of the city. I believe that a pipe line or similar conduit will have to be installed to take the place of the present open canal which is obsolete as a city water carrier."

R. E. HUFF:—"I endorse Mr. Curd's stand in trying to get a soft water supply as long as possible before using them. Lake Kemp is worth the money it has cost just because it insures an ample supply of water. The cost of hard water is very great and not realized because people do not stop to think about it. Every citizen with the interests of the city at heart should support Mr. Curd's efforts to get soft water."

Rogers Promises to Come Back to Okla. And Vote for Self

BARTLESVILLE, Okla., July 14. (AP).—Will Rogers, Broadway cowboy actor, says he has not voted in Oklahoma for years, but that he will be glad to come back and vote for himself if he is entered next year in the race for governor.

In a telegram today to J. S. Leach, editor of the Bartlesville Enterprise, referring to a recent report that he was being "boomed" for governor, Rogers said:

"I haven't voted in Oklahoma for years because you never had the right man up for me to vote for. Put me up for governor and see how quick I'll come home and vote for myself. That's what Bryan used to do and look where he is today. If any campaign funds have been raised kindly send some on now. I have two democrats here in New York I can bring out with me. Yours for a better governor's mansion."

"MOIST" TREATY TEST JAILS

The mask for horses and mules consists of a cheese cloth bag which covers the nostrils and upper jaw only, as the animals do not breathe through the mouth. No protection for the eyes is necessary, as it is said tear gas does not affect horses and mules. The mask is carried in a satchel on the breast harness when not in use.

DAYTON, Tenn., July 14.—(AP)—The third day of the Scope's evolution trial ended amid stormy scenes here late Tuesday without the jury who will try the young school teacher having been sworn in and before Judge John T. Ranlston had announced his decision on the defense motion to quash the indictment.

"It was a stormy day," the judge remarked as he left the bench, from which he had a moment earlier warned news reporters of possible contempt of court proceedings because of publication of stories intimating the judge would deny the defense motion to quash. A committee of newspapermen was appointed to investigate the premature publication.

EMPTY PISTOL SHELLS FOUND IN HOUSE LOFT

Whitfield Still Declares He Knows Nothing of Wife's Death

TO PUMP OUT WELL

Effort Will be Made Today To Find Lost Pistol

Finding of two empty cartridges carefully wrapped in a newspaper and hidden in the loft of his Pine street home; and statements of a woman living on Clay street that she heard a man say "I wish my wife would either hurry up and get well or die," were the two most important developments Tuesday in the official investigation into the death of Mrs. Bess Whitfield. The woman was found Sunday afternoon with three bullet wounds in the head, her body stretched beneath a mesquite thicket east of the ball park. Her husband identified her Monday morning at the Merkle undertaking parlors and through a day of questioning Monday stoutly asserted he knew nothing of how his wife came to her death. He maintained the last he saw of her was Saturday night when she retired at 10 o'clock.

Of Same Caliber.

The locating of the cartridges came after county officers had thoroughly searched the small house in the 200 block on Pine street where the Whitfield family had lived since coming to Wichita Falls a week ago Monday. They were of .32 caliber, the same, it is said, as the shots which pierced Mrs. Whitfield's head in three places. Their discovery led to a decision to pump out the well at the place today in an effort to find the gun known to have been in the home. The last Whitfield saw of it, he says, was Saturday night when his wife thrust it into a small opening in the wall above the head of her bed. He has consistently denied any knowledge of where the gun is at this time.

HEAT WAVE IS BROKEN WHEN RAIN APPEARS

North Texas, Southern Oklahoma Swelter in High Temperatures

SHOWER IS BRIEF

Wichita Falls Gets Benefit From Cool Snap At Night

A series of typical midsummer showers induced by a terrific heat wave broke over various parts of North Texas late Tuesday afternoon and brought welcome relief from boiling temperatures.

The rains, according to reports from surrounding sections last night, were of the hit and miss variety. The heaviest rainfall seemed to be south of Wichita Falls, communities in both a southeasterly and southwesterly direction reporting brief but very severe downpours. Telephone and telegraph lines from here to Seymour and here to Olney were reported out of communication by the rain and heavy winds accompanying it.

A Cooler Evening.

This city enjoyed a cool and pleasant evening Tuesday after the hotest day of the year. The thermometer maintained by the Wichita Falls Electric company observation station touched 100 late in the afternoon following a blistering, scorching day of unshaded sunshine and searing winds.

HOTTEST SPOT IN TEXAS.

DALLAS, July 14.—Highest temperatures ever recorded in Texas at some points were experienced today during a sudden heat wave which suddenly swept the state, followed immediately by cooling showers. North central and central Texas experienced the highest temperatures, though the heat zone seemed general throughout all the central part of the state from Red river to the Gulf. The highest reading was at Wichita Falls where the official register was 109.

Thermometer readings ranging from 105 to 109 prevailed in north and central Texas. At Denton and Austin 108 degrees was reached.

It was the warmest day thus far in 1925 and beat by two degrees the hotest day of July, 1924, when 107 was the best the sun could do.

It was no surprise when, about 5:30, heavy black clouds rolled in from the north. By 6 o'clock a whistling sand storm was fogging through the streets and a little later big raindrops began to spatter. The lowering temperature came with remarkable suddenness. A north wind with a "feel" o frain swept in and the thermometers hit a toboggan.

The wind, reaching gale-like proportions, did some damage to the south in blowing down sign boards. A number of these were reported littered along the Seymour road between here and Holliday. The roof of the woman's bath house at Lake Wichita was also somewhat damaged by the wind.

General Near Here.

The heat wave was general over northern Texas and southern Oklahoma. It was 105 at Frederick at 4 o'clock and 105 at Waurika a short

Synthetic Love

By Hazel Deyo Batchelor

THE STORY SO FAR—

There was something strange about Enid Austin. She had a mysterious air that at the age of 23 had attracted Ronald Corley. They had become engaged and two days before their marriage Ronald and Coralie Brainerd, Enid's friend, eloped. Enid is left to bear out her humiliation and makes a resolve that never again will she trust a man.

The Corleys return to town where they take up their home. Ronald loves his wife but still watches for Enid. At the age of 26 Enid meets Lucien Grant. After a headlong romance on Grant's part they are married, Grant for love and Enid because she wants a home of her own. She makes up her mind not to love Lucien but has little trouble deceiving him until on his honeymoon he asks her the point blank question, "Do you love me?"

Now to go on with the story.

"You are demonstrative by nature and I have always had a certain reserve to overcome. You must be patient with me."

Instantly he was tender with her, delighted to be generous.

"Of course I'll be patient with you, darling. But Enid, you do love me. Tell me that you do, let me hear you say the words."

"Of course I care for you," she said quickly, and although it was not exactly what he wanted to hear, he pressed her no further.

When they had made their plans for the honeymoon, Lucien had wanted to accept Peter Burton's offer of his Adirondack camp. It was just what he wanted. He visualized Enid alone with him in the mountains. He thought of the long silent nights when the moon sprayed silver through the trees and the scent of pine everywhere. But when he had come to Enid with the project, she had shaken her head.

"O, no, Lucien, I don't want to go camping. Let's go to some gay place. We'll be so much happier of we have something to do. You'd find me a poor companion in the forest primeval. I've never fished nor done anything of that kind, and you'd really be bored to death with me."

And so because there wasn't anything in the world that he wouldn't do for her happiness, he told Peter regretfully that Enid preferred a gayer place. She wanted a trip to Europe, and suggested it, but Lucien told her that just at present he couldn't take the time away from business. So they had compromised on a fashionable mountain resort and were on their way there now.

After her casual response to his eager question, Enid withdrew herself from his arms, and opening her hand bag took out a powder case and carefully passed the puff over her smooth skin. Then, with a bright smile at him, she curled up in the corner of the seat with a new book. A moment later she was as oblivious of him as though he did not exist.

For a time he sat and watched her. She wore a traveling costume of soft tan wool. In the afternoon sunlight, there were red glints in her brown hair, and her skin looked almost transparent. How lovely she was, and she was absolutely his own. She had asked him to be patient with her and he would. He would be so tenderly considerate of her that she could not help responding to him. The time would come when she would discover undreamed of possibilities hidden in her soul. She had told him that she was not demonstrative, but after all, how could she know? He would teach her the meaning of love, and some day her reserves would fall from her and he would look directly into her heart.

CHAPTER VI
Cross Purposes

It was on their way to the diner that night that a strange thing happened. They were making their way forward. Lucien concious of the fact that many eyes followed them as they passed ,when suddenly a golden-haired child ran out from one of the sections and came toddling down the aisle toward Enid. With a throaty little gurgle she caught Enid around the knees and smiled up into her face. It was a pretty scene, and there were sympathetic smiles on the faces of every one around.

Enid stooped and picked the baby up in her arms. For the moment she held the soft little body close, snuggling her face in the fat little neck in a way women have. Then she made her way down the aisle and delivered the child over to her mother.

As she passed on into the diner, which was the car just ahead, she was concious of an extraordinary feeling of exilariation. She felt tender, too and strangely softened. For the first time she realized that she, too, might have a little girl as lovely as that. Strange that she had never before thought anything about children. They had never appealed to her in any way. And yet because she had held a strange child in her arms an unexpected tenderness had arisen in her.

There was a soft little smile on her lips during dinner. She talked and laughed with Lucien, totally unconscious of the fact that eyes were turned in their direction, that admiring looks were leveled at her. After all, she was used to being admired. He unusual type made her conspicuous anywhere. Lucien felt his heart swell within him at the thought that she was his wife, that she had given herself to him, that he was to have the privilege of protecting her for the rest of his life.

Afterward in their stateroom Lucien lighted her cigarette for her. She used and ivory holder cudiously carved and obviously antique. It suited her to perfection. He loved to watch the graceful movements of her hand as she waved the smoke out of her face. Everything she did was beautiful every movement one of exquibite grace. She was one woman out of a thousand and he had won her.

But even while such thoughts were coursing through his mind, he realized vaguely that he was letting himself care too much. She was so much in his thoughts that everything was related to the background, and it was a dangerous thing to care for any one like that. Suppose something happened to take her away from him! It would break him up, the very thought of such a thing was horrible.

"The train is due about 11:30 isn't it?" she asked turning to him suddenly. "I'll be glad to get there. Even a short time on the train makes me feel cindery and wind-blown. Oh Lucien you don't know how glad I am that you didn't insist upon taking Peter Burton's camp. It's so much nicer to be going to civilization than away from it. And you were so generous to give me my way."

Impulsively her fingers stole into his. It was the first voluntary caress that she had ever given him, and her slingh est touch was sufficient to stir him.

8 HOUR DAY IS ANNOUNCED BY STANDARD OIL

Outlying Fields However Will Continue With 12 Hour Shifts

NEW YORK, July 14.—The Standard Oil company of New Jersey announced an eight-hour day, effective tomorrow, for its Mid-Continent oil fields.

Since the first oil well was drilled in this country in 1869 a 12-hour day has been in effect.

Drillers who received $1 an hour, or $12 a day, will now get $1.25 an hour, or $10 a day. Tool handlers who received about 83 cents an hour, or $10 a day, will receive $1 an hour, or $8 a day.

As work in the oil fields is carried on night and day, the eight-hour day means three shifts instead of two. The additional shift will require employment of 500 men besides the 1,300 now employed.

John D. Rockefeller Jr., who controls the company, has long been opposed to the 12-hour day in any of the interests with which he is connected, but A. F. Corwin of the industrial relations department of the company denied that Mr. Rockefeller had suggested the eight-hour day.

"We expect Mr. Rockefeller will be pleased with this development," Mr. Corwin said.

The 12-hour day will remain in effect in the outlying districts where camps have to be built for wrokers. Mr. Corwin said that men in such cases preferred to work extra hours rather than be idle, but the percentage of men employed in such camps was small.

It is presumed that other companies in the midwest field will follow the action of the Standard Oil company and that the eight-hour day will become universal in the oil fields. The production of crude oil in the Mid-Continent field for the Standard Oil company is supervised by one of its largest subsidiaries, the Carter Oil company. All employes of this organization and other producing units of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey will be affected by the order.

Houston Pastor Not To Preach in City

Hodges of Los Angeles, Cal., delivered an interesting sermon with his text from the 13th and 14th verses of Revelation, to a good crowd. Rev. Joe W. Bikley of the Graham circuit preached Tuesday night. Although the absence of Rev. Cook's son is regretted the meeting is making great headway and will progress with assistance available.

Texhoma-Burnett

On their "E" lease located in T. & N. O. survey, section 2, Wichita country, Texhoma has an oil sand at 1,635 feet on which casing will be set to test. This well is located 300 feet to the east of their No. 2, producer.

Kentucky-Wilson

Bailing dry with but a show of oil on their No. 1 Wilson, in the Burns-Maxson & Kentucky pool on the Archer City road, the Kentucky Oil Corporation are drilling deeper. Sand in this test was drilled into at 1,405 feet.

Humphries-Bass-Anderson

Located in the north half of section 49, Meade Pasture sub-division, south Archer county and to the north of the Norday pool, Humphries-Bass have a water well from sand drilled into at 1,430 feet. Casing will be pulled and the test drilled deeper.

Shaw-Rathke-Mills

To the north of Maer-Staniforth's new producer in the Mills pool in section 2,428, T. E. & L. survey, Baylor county Shaw-Rathke are testing sand drilled into at 1,420 feet and which gives promise of making a 30 barrel well. To the west of this on their No. 3, sand was topped at 1,422 feet and has the makings of a small well, but is showing a great deal of water.

Empire-Anderson

On the Anderson farm to the east of their No. 1 in the Norday area, the Empire Gas & Fuel are drilling in after being shut down waiting for cement to set. Sand was topped at 1,417 feet and after drilling one foot had a few hundred of fluid in the hole. This well which is nearly dead in the middle of large production, will almost without question make a good producer. Empire's No. 1 went on the pump day before yesterday for better than 300 barrels initial production. To the east Perkins Cullum have placed their No. 1 on the beam and it is showing up for 350 barrels.

OHIO OIL CO. GETS WELL IN CADDO PARISH

First Producing Well In The Trinity Brought In Monday

SHREVEPORT, La., July 14.—First oil production in the Trinity, the fourth producing horizon of the Pine Island Caddo Parish district, was obtained Monday by the Ohio Oil company, in their No. 17 E. K. Smith in the northwest corner of the northeast of the southeast of section 12-21-15. After making three heads the hole is standing 1,000 feet in 38 gravity oil from 3,317 feet.

Company officials were loats to make an estimate of its probable production though a good well is apparent from the above facts. It will be swabbed today to determine whether it will flow. Bottom of the hole is in lime rock and opinion is that it has struck a crevice. The new discovery producer was drilled from the surface and was not an old hole deepened from either of the upper production horizons, operations beginning about April 10.

Location is approximately one mile north by east from the Dixie Oil company's No. 43 Robert Shaw in 13-21-15 completed last November as a 45 million foot gas well. At 3,623 feet the discovery well, which has prompted the deeper drilling in Pine Island that has resulted in the completion of two more Trinity gassers and the Ohio producer, the Dixie well, is also making approximately 200 gallons of gasoline daily from the drips and is pushing gas to Little Rock, Ark., 200 miles away and to intermediate points under its own head. Ohio Oil company a few months ago took over the Eagle Bend Oil company properties of E. K. Smith and is embarking on an extensive drilling campaign for production in all four Pine Island horizons, the present well being one of the earlier completions.

This well is to the south and east of the Plains Production company's No. 1 Kilcrease which is still maintaining its remarkable production as was well shown when it filled a 250 barrel tank in three hours after being shut in for a few hours day before yesterday. Dallas Girl Brings It Hot or Cold To Thirsty Office Men

DALLAS, July 14.—A young woman who yesterday did a "land office" beer sale business in one of Dallas' most imposing sky scrapers, is being sought today by police. She casually strolled into numerous offices and frankly announced she could deliver consignments of beer in six-bottle lots, with or without ice. Orders, many given half seriously, were quickly filled by a youth who appeared with "beer on ice" and bills for the consignments.

Transactions were completed so quickly few of the buyers got a good description of the woman except that she was "beautiful and of apparent good education."

AD CLUB TOLD OF $2,000,000 TEMPLE STORE

Robert Moody Gives His Ideas on How to Sell Merchandise

The story of how he built up a $1,500,000 a year business in a town of 1,000 people afforded an interesting talk before the Wichita Falls Advertising club yesterday noon by Robert Moody, president of the B. & O. Cash Store of Temple, Okla.

Coming to Temple in 1906, Mr. Moody stated that he and his brother purchased a small store for $1,350, the owner to remain with them until all the payments had been made. Today the store occupies a full block, is a two-story brick fireproof building, employing 70 people in the fall and winter. Every state in the union is on the sales list of the company, 20 per cent of whose business is through the mails.

How He Did It.

Questions from the members found out how he did it.

Two per cent of money taken in is spent each year in advertising. The company puts out a weekly circular and a monthly paper, to be changed to a monthly catalogue. These are mailed each month to people on the mailing list. Over 50,000 monthly circulars are published and distributed each month. In January over 100,000 were distributed.

The store always backs up its merchandise. Nothing is sold but what is guaranteed.

The store refuses to knock its competitors. It is the belief of Mr. Moody that business goes where it is invited and stays where it is treated right. He says that he doesn't want business if he can't hold it.

The management has always taught employes to sell themselves before to try to sell their merchandise.

Mr. Moody always believes that the customer is right. Sometimes he admits that this policy has cost him a little money—but in the long run it gains friends and patrons.

Fads Lose Out.

Several interesting facts were brought out in speaking of the mail order business.

The store makes no effort to keep up with fads, stylish clothes that will not go out of style before they are worn out, is the policy of the owners. In ladies' shoes especially Mr. Moody stated he found it profitable to advertise shoes of good quality and material.

In connection with hot checks, Mr. Moody stated there was never any difficulty. In case a check sent in by a customer was turned down by the bank, a polite letter would be sent to the patron, reminding him that the government insisted on taking a hand in hot checks that were sent through the mails. The money was always forthcoming.

The mail order business is run upon a strictly cash before delivery basis.

The club adjourned following the address, not to meet again until the first week in September.

Thief Takes Clothes For Wife and Baby And a Bank for Self

SAN ANTONIO, July 14.—The stork has visited the home of the "bungalow burglar."

This is the deduction of city detectives, which is believed to account for the burglary of Mrs. Oscar Beck's home.

Elated with the success which greeted his efforts in building and furnishing a home as well as stealing a wife, the "bungalow burglar" ventured forth Monday night to dress the new arrival.

He took three baby dresses and one dozen "unmentionables." As a gift for the mother he took a traveling bag, five silk gowns and four pairs of shoes. He also took a savings bank.

A FUTILE AND MISCHEVIOUS ACT.

Postmaster General New has announced that, regardless of certain increases in postal revenue, there is an indicated deficit of $40,000,000 on postal operations for 1925. The postmaster general does not argue the matter but simply puts the blame on congress. He asserts that the deficit "is due, of course, to legislation passed by the last congress affecting both pay and rates." It is not just clear that the postmaster general will use the deficit as an argument for higher rates, or as one for the retention of present rates. He wished, however, for more excessive postal charges ,and it would seem logical for him to insist that now, with a deficit in sight, these charges should be applied.

But the public will see the matter in a wholly different light. It will recall that $40,000,000 was the amount first mentioned in congress as necessary to cover the wage advances to postal employes. In the final framing of the measure increasing rates this figure was considerably raised. Yet now there is to be a deficit as large as the original estimate of increase made in congress. This means that the country has suffered all the inconveniences of revised postal rates to no purpose. Since congress and the postmaster general working together have been guilty of an act so futile and mischevious as the new rate measure, they can hardly ask the indulgence of the people for further experimentation with rates which should have been let alone in the first place. It would be much better to accept a postal deficit than to persist in a course which has been shown to be a wrong one. With a surplus on general revenues, such a deficit cannot be serious. But it is obvious that grave consequences may attend further tampering with the carrying charges on letters, papers and magazines, our circulating mediums of information.

THEY REMEMBER RILEY.

Sentiment isn't dead in Indiana. James Whitcomb Riley hasn't been forgotten. Sixty years ago he used to go swimming in Brandywine creek. Now the citizens of the neighborhood have purchased 40 acres of land for $12,500 and it is to be known as part of the Riley memorial park at Greenfield.

The tract includes the swimming hole used by Riley and his chums and about which he wrote his famous poem, "The Ole Swimmin' Hole."

It is a mistake that the Hoosier state has made abject surrender to the flinty influence of the almighty dollar. He hasn't forgotten Riley; he has not forgotten "The Ole Swimmin' Hole."

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

A Hard Lesson.

To the fairminded, well intending young persons, it is a bitter thing to discover that the world is not all kindness and consideration.

The golden rule is still more honored in the breach than in the observance, and probably will be for many hundreds of years to come.

In many a business organization one must fight his way up against the opposition of those who seek to hold jobs by keeping others out of opportunity.

Often the very fact that a young person has ability arouses the jealousy of those who are in a position temporarily to influence his or her future, and who do their utmost to prevent him or her from getting a chance.

But this is the way of the world.

If there were no selfishness, no injustice in it, it would be paradise, not the earth, and all work that we have been sent here to do would be accomplished.

And it is comforting to remember that despite this injustice and unfairness, and pettiness, people start from very small beginnings and rise to very high places.

For ability and industry in time enforce recognition, and there is no power that can hold them down in the end.

The person who is so appalled by the meanness he finds in the world is really unfitted for its struggles and battles.

He must take into consideration the fact that we are still a long way short of the millenium, and that there is bound to be discouragement and trouble, and tyranny today, as there has been since the physically strongest took charge of things and made their intellectual superiors bow to their wills.

We have reached a point today where this can no longer happen.

The man of brains rules the man of muscles.

People of integrity and honesty rise to high places.

The crafty and self-seeking gradually sing to their rightful level.

Just at this time of year thousands of young folks who are just out of colleges are finding out that life is not the path of roses that they may have imagined.

They are meeting with opposition, many of them are denied the chance to do the work that they can do.

Some of them will be soured and discouraged, and wonder what is the use of it all.

But if all the young people on the threshold of life had decided that the game was not worth the cande, we should still be using caves for sleeping places, and waiting for our meals until a wild animal came within the reach of our slings.

Opportunity is far more plentiful and varied than it ever was

Cox Has The Stage Again—No Land Like America, Ask Constantin—Every Cause Has a Leader—What Roosevelt Owned.

JAMES M. COX of Ohio is holding the center of the stage once more. He is a wealthy newspaper publisher. He served the people of Ohio as their governor three terms. He was the democratic nominee for president in 1920. William Jennings Bryan said that he was the candidate of the brewers and that the beer keg had been made the platform of that year.

Cox made a masterful campaign. He advocated the League of Nations and ably championed many of the Wilson policies. But his political throat had been cut by Bryan before the campaign started. Cox was overwhelmed at the polls and Warren G. Harding was elected president of the United States.

James M. Cox is a thorough sportsman. He never whined, sulked or grunted. He accepted defeat gracefully and in 1924 he did all in his power to bring about a democratic victory. Now he is preparing to run for the United States senate against Frank B. Willis, republican, whose term of office expires in the year of 1927.

W. J. B. fought for the nomination of William Gibbs McAdoo in 1924. Now will he go to Ohio and seek to defeat Cox in his race for the senate. W. J. B. is growing old, but he is as full of fight as ever. He has been a citizen of Nebraska, a citizen of Texas, a citizen of Florida, a citizen of Tennessee, but the entire continent is his forage ground.

If Cox should be elected to the senate in 1926, would he be a candidate for the democratic nomination in 1928? A buzzing bee never dies.

EUGENE CONSTANIN came to America from France 43 years ago. He was penniless when he landed. His first work was swabbing the decks of a steamer. He landed in the oil fields of the southwest. He accumulated millions. Now the agents of the federal government are asking him to pay $500,000 back taxes. These agents say that he overlooked the half million in his income tax payment for the years of 1920 and 1921. He enters a sweeping denial. There is no land like this.

WHERE ever there is a cause there is a leader. Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska was asked to lead the independent hosts of America, or Erather to step into the place made vacant by the death of Robert M. La Follette. Norris declined. He said he did not believe in a third party at this time, but expressed the hope that the American voters in the future will not permit themselves to be boynd by oked party ties.

Norris is a straddler. He calls himself an independent, but he never deserts the republican organization.

Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania is ready to take the place of La Follette as the leader of the independent thought of America. He is a Roosevelt republican and was one of the close friends of that immortal leader who was a gallant soldier as well as a wise statesman. Governor Pinchot is to be a candidate for United States senator next year. He will seek to defeat George W. Pepper, now a senator and one of the big republican bosses of Pennsylvania.

Pinchot defeated the big bosses of his state three years ago and it as the first defeat the bosses had sustained in many years. Pinchot is the original champion of the conservation of the resources of the nation. Now he says that powerful trusts are stealing the water ways of America and creating a power trust that in time will become one of the greatest monopolies that the world has known.

He says that the power trust stretches all the way from the Niagara river to the Rio Grande river in Texas and from Shady Hook to the Golden Gate. Gifford Pinchot ill be 60 when his term as governor expires in 1926. He has been a political reformer all his life, he is the possessor of a large fortune and never knows when to quit. Republican bosses say that should Pinchot win the senatorship next year he will be a candidate for the republican presenditial nomination in 1928, backed by the independent republican voters of the 48 states. Pinchot is an ardent pro He is one of the original champion of the ballot for women. His forebearers fought in all the wars for American independence. He is responsible for the national parks of America. He is the man who fought the land hogs, the water hogs and the mineral hogs in the far west and Alaska when William Howard Taft was president. He is not an organization republican. He does not believe in the spoils system. He does not believe in the rule of big business if big business employs the methods of modern brigands.

Mark Sullivan says Governor Pinchot is going to make a speaking tour of the west and north. Many years ago in his youth and when Teddy Roosevelt was the idol of the people Gifford Pinchot was a prime favorite with the voters of the west and the northwest. He backed the Roosevelt program to a finish and the Roosevelt program won.

There is no telling what may happen in American politics in the years to come. Pinchot may cause trouble for President Coolidge and the republican leaders next year and in the presidential year. This time he is fighting the rum power and its allies and he is sending out warning that the power trust must be checked on it will secure control of the water ways of America.

Pinchot has a parmount issue that concerns the people; William Jennings Bryan has a paramount issue that concerns himself, wins for him the center of the stage and places money in the Bryan pocket. Thrift is his other name.

Cancer.

Nothing very encouraging can be said about today, according to the planetary aspects, for, although they are not favorable, they are not, on plexing. They do not encourage resthe other hand, so adverse as perolution or decision. On the contrary, they denote suspicion and mistrust. They do not indicate keenness of either mind or intellect; rather do they presage doubt and lack of understanding. While such influences predominate, it would be inexpedient to attempt to do anything of importance, and caution and judgment both counsel that as few decisions as possible should be made today, and only routine matters receive your attention.

Children born today, be they boys or be they girls, will enjoy very similar physical conditions, while being, even after making due allowance for sex difference, very dissimilar in character and disposition. So far as their health is concerned, this will be quite up to normal, and any slight ailments from which they may suffer will be of little or no consequence. The girl will possess a reserved nature, and be rather disposed, at times, to sullenness. She will also take full advantage of the privileges that her sex affords her. The boy, on the other hand, will be open, frank and above board in everything. He will be oblivious to trifles and always self-contained, and, with ambition, will have the necessary ability and energy to attain the goal of his desires.

If today is your birthday, you are gifted with remarkable intuitive and psychic power. As a natural consequence, your judgment and foresight are at times uncanny. Your perception is exceptionally keen, and, to back it all, your imagination is very vivid. You are somewhat nervous and disposed to worry and fret, as you generally foresee more trouble than happiness. On the whole, however, you are good tempered, affectionate and kind. You have a very strong sense of humor and a keen wit, and are always willing to participate in the fun and amusements of your friends and intimates.

In your home life you are the center of attraction and the object of much admiration and affection.

Successful people born on this date are: Thomas C. Platt, senator; Edward Abbott; Thomas Fell, educator; Benjamin Ide Wheeler, educator; Richmond P. Hobson, naval officer; Franklin Knight Lane, ex-secretary interior.

HOW IT STARTED

Giving Him a "Thrashing."

"I'll give you a thrashing," says the irate father to his insubordinate son. It may be going out of style now, but it was the accepted formula of a generation ago. Anyway the word "thrash" is still used as a synonym for beating or whipping.

The expression is figurative, coming to us from the lexicon of the farm and the wheat field. The reference is to the method of beating grain to purify it of waste which was called "thrashing" from which we have the modern "threshing."

It is easily comprehensible that when the object of the beating happened to be an obstreperous boy or farm hand instead of a stalk of wheat the word should have been appropriated to describe that form of chastisement.

IRRIGATION

Conditions in 1921.

To get the proper understanding of the condition which surrounded the making of the much criticised contract between the irrigation district and W. T. Waggoner, for the lands now flooded by Lake Kemp, it is necessary to review the situation as it stood when the contract was made.

For twenty years or more Mr. Kemp had been working to get irrigation for the lands in the Wichita valley. Finally Iirrigation District No. 1 was formally organized Dec. 20, 1919. Nothing more of importance was accomplished for almost two years except that the people of Wichita Falls voted a bond issue for $4,500,000 secured by all the property in the city. The money secured from the sale of these bonds was to be used in the building of the proposed project.

In the fall of 1921, however, it was decided to see if matters could not be brought to a conclusion. The Kauman-Emmert Co., and the American Trust Co., both of St. Louis were making tentative offers to buy the bonds and the district officials felt sure enough of the negotiations terminating favorably so that on Nov. 15, 1921 they entered into a contract with the Callahan Construction Co., of Dallas, for the building of the two dams and the main south side canal.

The bonds however, were not sold until Dec. 2, 1921, when the two St. Louis firms bought them at a considerable discount.

The situation then was something like this. The contract for the building of the reservoirs had been let. The bonds had been sold. The contractor was ready to start work any time. But the district had not yet obtained title to the right to flood the lands which the waters must cover as soon as the river was dammed.

Frederickan Parks Car and Forgets It; Memory Refreshed

FREDERICK, Okla., July 14.—Like the absent minded college professor who came into his hotel room one evening, washed his face and hands in the basin, threw the water in bed and jumped out of the window, John Blanton, in the employ of the Consumers Oil company, drove one of that concern's service trucks up in front of a local bank, double parked, went in to get some change and walked back to the station, forgetting the truck and leaving it standing in the street.

The stunt also caused considerable worry to Officer E. M. Jones who sat in the car more than half an hour waiting for the driver to return.

When told of the stunt, Blanton remarked that he had forgotten about the truck and just walked back to the station where he is manager.

He tendered a check for $7.50 in payment of his fine.

to make the blood throb in his temples, to make him want to take her in his arms.

"I've been sitting here thinking how glad I am that we are not going to bury ourselves in wilderness," she went on brightly. It struck Lucien as he looked at her that there was always a hard metalic brightness about her manner. He had never seen her tender or moved by anything, and more than once he had heard her say that she despised sentiment.

And then suddenly he remembered the incident of the little girl in the next car. Enid had picked the child up tenderly and held her close. Of course she had sentiment, only she was reserved and different. She was not really cold and hard, only intensly conservative and she would not always be that way with him.

He resolved to banish all gloomy thoughts from his mind, to be happy in her love as he wanted her to be happy in his. He lifted her hand suddenly and touched his lips to the soft palm. Nothing could ever come between them, nothing in all the world.

LHAPTER VII.

Honeymoon.

During the next few days Enid found herself growing increasingly nervous. Never in her life that she could remember had she been nervous. She had always been wirily strong and able to bear anything. She had always laughed at the idea of nerves, but there were times now when she longed to scream aloud; she felt somehow that to scream would bring her a certain amount of relief.

She had never before known what it was to live in close quarters with any one, to have some one knock on her door and walk nonchalantly into her room, to have Lucien throw himself into a chair beside her dressing table and watch her as she dressed her hair. She grew to resent his very presence in her room, although she repressed her feelings and forced herself to be agreeable.

The repression, however, was beginning to tell on her. When Lucien came toward her she clenched her hands. She dreaded his touch, his fingers cupping her chin, the touch of his lips. She wished that he were not so tender with her, not so considerate. In spite of her coldness, it brought her a sense of discomfort to know that he loved her so much.

Lucien, with all the ardor of a man in love, sought ways of being alone with her. He tried to avoid meeting people. Enid shuddered when she thought of how much worse it would have been if they had gone to the Adirondack camp, and all the while she was growing more nervous and more erepressed.

She was finding it difficult to sleep. She would toss from side to side and then some time toward morning would fall into a heavy doze from which she found it difficult to wake. In the morning she would feel heavy and listless. Even after a cold shower her head would ache, and she would feel entirely unlike herself.

One day after a particularly bad night, she pleaded a headache and said she was going to her room to try to sleep. She looked tired. There were heavy shadows under her violet eyes, but she made a valiant effort to retain her hard brightness and smiled at Lucien's worried look.

"I'm not sleeping well. All I need is a nap, and I'll be all right by dinner time."

He watched her walk across the lobby toward the elevator, a slender figure with a proud carriage. It seemed to him as his eyes followed her that if anything happened to Enid his life would be over. She seemed like a part of him, something that he could not live without, and it was with a heavy heart that he joined a party of people who were going to play golf.

Enid went to her room, and, taking off her dress, wrapped herself in a negligee. It was delicious, this feeling of freedom. She was actually going to have an afternoon to herself; she could revel to her heart's content in being alone. She could fall asleep with the feeling that Lucien was not anywhere near her, and almost as soon as her head touched the pillow her eyelids drooped and she was asleep.

She dreamed of the past. Ronald was back in her life once more and she was wildly, deliriously happy. They were alone, and he was telling her how beautiful she was. His face was close to hers, there was a smile on his lips and his eyes were gay. The dream faded and Lucien's arms were reaching out for her, holding her. She felt suffocated, she wanted to scream out to Ronald to save her from Lucien. But Lucien held her, he would not let her go even though she beat against his breast with frenzied fists.

"I hate you," she cried out. "I've always hated you. Couldn't you see how I dreaded to have you come near me?"

She awoke suddenly to find that it was not a dream. Lucien was here! He was holding her in his arms and she was struggling to free herself.

His face was close to hers, and, still half asleep, she had a mad impulse to strike it.

"I hate you," she gasped. "I hate you, I tell you. Let me go!"

CHAPTER VIII.

Awakening.

As if from a great distance, Enid heard Lucien's voice speaking to her, and as the heaviness of sleep rolled away from her brain, she forced a smile to her lips.

"Oh, she gasped, "I must have been dreaming. I remember that I was trying to get away from someone. Did I say anything foolish?"

Lucien's clasp of her hand loosened, and she had dropped back among the pillows. She was searching his face now with bright eager eyes, and quite suddenly she was afraid.

With an effort that was almost impossible to conceal, she put out a conciliating hand toward him.

"What is it, Lucien? Surely you know that I was dreaming, that I didn't know what I was saying. You startled me, coming in like that. Tell me what I said."

"You said, 'I hate you, I hate you; let me go!'"

Enid moistened her lips nervously.

"Did I? How absurd! Dreams are funny things, aren't they? Strange. I can't seem to remember what I was dreaming about."

As a matter of fact, the dream was as vivid in her mind as if it had been an actual experience. Again she saw Ronald's face, gay, bright and laughing. Again she remembered the serenity, the peace of mind that had entered and his presence had blotted out Ronald's laughing face. He had come between her and Ronald, and when she had tried to get away he had held her close.

A sob welled up in her throat, and she closed her eyes. Two tears forced themselves from beneath her lashes and rolled down her cheeks. It was then that Lucien spoke.

"Enid ,there are times when I feel that you do hate me. I am not an imaginative man, but I could swear that you meant what you said. You looked right into my eyes, and you shrank from me. Either you were awake, or you were dreaming about me."

"Enid, there are times when I feel "What utter nonsense you are talking, Lucien. You say you're not imaginative, and then you say I hate you because you woke me out of a bad dream."

"Why are you crying?" he countered, quickly.

"Because of the dream, I suppose. I'm not really awake yet." She sat up suddenly and ruffled up her hair. Her cheeks were very pink and her eyes unnaturally bright. That mysterious quality about her was more than ever present, and it struck Lucien suddenly that she would never be entirely his. There was some kind of a barrier between them, something that kept them apart. Perhaps if she confided in him, if she told him the truth and he could get to the bottom of things, they might effect an understanding.

"Enid," he asked suddenly. "Why did you marry me?"

She was awake now, awake and once more herself.

"Because I wanted to. I never do anything unless I want to do it. Why are you becoming so tragic, Lucien? You take things much too seriously."

"I take my love for you seriously. It means more to me than anything else in life. You hold in your hands more power than you realize. I have never loved any other woman but you."

"Well, you have me, haven't you?"

"No, I haven't. There's something between us, something that I don't understand. You shrink away from me when I touch you. There's something in your eyes that I can't fathom. I want you to answer a question. No quibbling, just yes or no. Do you love me?"

He seized her by the arms and drew her toward him so that her violet eyes were within an inch of his own. Unless she dropped her lashes, she could not avoid his glance.

"Do you love me?" he repeated evenly.

She drew a long breath. "Not as you love me. I don't believe in love of that kind, it's too disturbing."

CHAPTER IX.

The Truth at Last.

"You don't love me," he repeated slowly. "I thought not. And now would you mind telling me just why you married me?"

"Because I wanted to, I told you that before. I liked you and you seemed to want me. Besides I wanted the things that go with marriage. I wanted a home of my own and a man of my own, and perhaps some day a child of my own. Does that seem unfair to you?"

With a quick little movement she eluded his grasp, and swung her feet over the edge of the bed. Anything to be away from him, to be out of reach of his graep. She could not seem to breathe when he was near her. It was as if he sapped her vitality.

She flung herself into a chair, feeling strangely breathless. His questions, his persistence in this tirade of his were making her intensely nervous. Besides he was making a mountain out of a molehill. After all, she had married him. He had what he wanted.

"I suppose it never struck you that you might be doing me an injustice," he said in a voice so quiet that it was somehow strangely omnous. What did you think marriage was? Nothing more than a pleasant companionship? Didn't it ever strike you that you might owe me more than a friendly liking, that I wanted and expected love from you and response?"

His dark eyes seemed to blaze at her. She had never seen his chin set so sternly, or his mouth so tense. His face was very white, too, as though he were in the grip of an intense emotion. She wondered curiously what it would be like to feel as deeply as that.

"If I had not been blinded by my love of you, I might have seen all this in the beginning," he went on after a moment. "I felt your coldness, your unresponsiveness, but I flattered myself by thinking that once I had passed beyond the barrier of your reserve I could reach your heart. Now I see that you have no heart. You don't know what love is; you're too selfish to spend yourself in giving to another. You're one of the women incapable of anything but a kind of synthetic love, a substitute for the real thing."

His anger was carrying him beyond himself. He was hardly conscious of what he was saying, but his scorn was having its effect upon Enid, for, white to the lips, she drew herself out of her chair and stood facing him.

"So you think I'm incapable of anything but synthetic love?" she flung at him. "You think I don't know the meaning of the real thing. You're wrong there; quite wrong. I did love a man once. I loved him with all my heart. He was the one thing in the world that mattered to me, but he didn't want me. He married another woman. After that, something froze up in me. I didn't feel the same about life or people. I lived on the surface of things. Then I met you and you wanted me. I liked you and I didn't see why I shouldn't marry you."

"Even with the knowledge that you couldn't bear me to touch you?" he retorted. "Even with the knowledge that my kisses were distasteful to you? What manner of woman are you, anyway? I don't believe you ever cared for any one in all the world but yourself."

His voice broke and quite suddenly he flung himself across the room toward her.

"But you're mine," he said, fiercely, catching her up in his arms, "and whether you love me or not, you're married to me."

She closed her eyes before the onslaught of his lips and, then quite suddenly opened them again.

"You're right," she said breathlessly. "I always shrunk from your touch. I can't bear to have you near me. Your kisses are loathsome to me. Now that you know the truth, perhaps you won't force your attentions on me."

THE LAST DRINK

Though baby's cheeks are smooth as silk,
And sparkling are his eyes,
To let him make his fare of milk
Is neither right nor wise.
For milk is rich in proteids
And doctors in alarm
Say feeding it to growing kids
May work all sorts of harm.

Though gentlemen past ninety years
Quite rugged, hale and strong,
Still stick around this vale of tears
And drink milk right along—
We hear that many doctors think
And, more than that, contend,
That this insidious lacteal drink
Will get them in the end.

Of every other beverage
We've lately been bereft,
We've reached the melancholy stage
When only milk is left;
And now when it's our sole support,
The doctors tell us flat
That our existence will be short—
Unless we cut out that.

Well, let 'em tell us what they will,
Our joy in life has fled;
If milk is going to make us ill,
We'll have to go to bed.
All other tipple we've eschewed,
And sullenly we plan
To stick to the one form of food
We had when life began!

Spudders Flop Steers In Series Final For 5-2 Victory

TOP O' MORN STUFF
By BLONDY CROSS.

HEH, HEH, HAW!
Straw hats and raincoats,
Comical styles;
No wonder the female
At the he-male smiles.
* * *

It didn't rain soon enough down in Cowtown to save the Sports from the usual massacre nor to retain the second position in the percentage column for sole occupation by our proud Spudders. As a result the Feline crew and Tanner outfit are neck and neck this morning on the heels of the Houston Buffs.

* * *

However Old Man Jupe was kind enough to lay off the tear ducts until after the Spudders had branded the Steer.

* * *

Steer (Webster's Unabridged): A young male of the ox kind.
And ox-like they were subjected.

SPUDDER CHORES.
We no sooner corral one herd
And brand 'em hard and true
When the foreman gives the word
There's still a stiffer job to do.
* * *

Houston, leading the league temporarily, at least, after planting all four hoofs with well directed shoves squarely into the midriff of the hitherto tumultous San Antonio Bear, treks into the domestic play grounds this afternoon for a series of three.

* * *

Buffalo (also Mr. Webster's): A ruminant mammal of the ox family. Make ready the yokes.

YEAH, MAYBE.
Houston's Buffs seem pretty tough,
If you judge by San Antonio play,
But maybe the Buff won't be so rough
When our Spudders jump him today.

Ho, hum, another crucial series.

Looks like Littlejohn and Osborn in the opener.

What with all these bovines to be handled, Mr. Tanner should, figuratively speaking, start himself a ranch, or a packing house.

* * *

Which reminds us that Fort Worth has its packing house perfumed ozone, all right, all right, but Wichita Falls has its oil refineries. Very subtle.

* * *

Serve Bob Osborn up to the Buffs today, Dick Morgan Thursday and Rip Wheeler Friday. Ought to win 'em all with that trio on deck for duty.

* * *

Our lofty Spudders have proved quite adroit with the branding irons, anyway.

BOVINES TAP ROBERTS FOR FIVE SAFETIES

Domestics Rout Brown In Two Innings Of Attack

By BLONDY CROSS.

Big Jim Roberts, recent Spudder hurling addition, stopped Dallas dead Tuesday in the series final and won his second start with the Tanner squad, 5 to 2. Roberts was liberal with base hits to the extent that he gave up five in the first five innings and then no more. One of the blows was a homer by Miller.

The Spudders massaged Curley Brown, Steer southpaw, quite briskly in the opening cantos, and Pence, a right hander, was rushed into the breach at the start of the third.

Wichita Falls connected for ten base blows with Turgeon, Dorman, and Jonnard taking the lead. Turge annexed a pair of bingles in four visits to the platter. Dorman hit a double and a single. Jonnard poled a pair of one basers. Callaghan clipped a triple.

Parry O'Brien, Steer center gardner, enacted the greatest play of the season in the second when he romped back to the left center boards and robbed Distel of a homer. The ball should have cleared the fence by a two-foot margin, but O'Brien jumped high, hooked the top of the wall with his meat hand, pulled up still further, and speared the soaring pill with his left.

Start Early.

The Tanner gang bore down in a hurry, grabbing a couple of markers in the opening round. Callaghan walked. Distel slipped a single between third and short, sending Cal to second. Williams bounded to the box, forcing Callaghan at third, Distel making second. Bodie singled through second, scoring Distel. Williams loped to third, slid on late, but Brovold who took the throw from the outfield lost the ball momentarily. Carl blared for the plate, but Brovold recovered and chunked him out. Bodie drew up at third. Turgeon singled to center, checking Ping in. Golvin grounded out to the pitcher unassisted.

Miller opened the Dallas second with a lusty non-stop sock far over the left center boards. Roberts cut down on the rest. Kearns and Brovold were taken care of by the infield. Billings walked, and Brown popped out to Dorman.

With one away in the second Jonnard singled to right. Roberts hoisted out to the same territory, and then Callaghan slammed a zipping drive to right center that hit the turf just back of the infield and sped on to the fence for his three-bagger. That brought the score to 3-1 Spudders. Distel followed with the home run drive that O'Brien beat him out of.

Pence relieved Brown at the beginning of the Spudder third. The Tanner crew menaced furiously when Williams opened with a single and Bodie walked, but ineffective navigation of the runways halted advance for this stanza. Carl was cut down while attempting to abscond with third. Turge forced Ping at second, and was later thrown out when he tried to steal second.

The Spudders counted another in the fourth. Golvin grounded out to second. Dorman doubled to right center. Jonnard walked. Roberts hit to the mound. Pence fielded, and threw to second. Bauman and Gross were standing within four feet of the bag, but the pill went on through to center field. Dorman scored.

Double Plays.

Billings led off in the fifth with a single. Pence hit to left center and the ball bounced over Williams' head for a two-bagger, scoring Billings. Roberts deflected a blistering punch at the box by Bauman, and Distel fielded for a put out at first. Pence went to third. Gross rolled to Roberts who tossed to Jonnard at the plate to head off Pence who was coming fast. The Dallas pitcher put on the brakes, and began a retreat for third, but Bubber ran him down, pivoted suddenly and with a bullet throw to Golvin doubled Gross off first.

Roberts passed the first two in the sixth chapter, but the Spudder inner works rallied to the cause with a lightning double play, Distel to Turgeon to Golvin. The next batter aviated to left.

The Spudders tabulated their fifth and final counter in the sixth. Dorman beat out a bunt down third base way, and went to second on single by Jonnard. Roberts laid down a perfect sacrificial effort, advancing both runners. Callaghan hit to Gross on short who threw for the plate, but Dorman slid in under the ball. Jonnard went to third. Callaghan started out for second, and Jonnard hoofed it for home. Bubber was run down, but Cal made third. Distel grounded out to short. That's about all.

The Passing Hour

By William B. Ruggles

WE HUMAN BEINGS.
(To Captain E. V. H., 28th Infantry, U. S. A. 142nd Infantry, TNG)

Six years ago, he helped the last advance
Go storming up the pathway of the Hun,
And when he saw recede the shores of France,
I heard him say that he was finished—done!

No more for him the Reveille at dawn—
No more Retreat, when fall the shades at night—
A free untrammelled citizen—to yawn
At florid colonels happening on his sight.

No sweaty OD shirt—no dusty way
To hike on trails that hourly grew more hard—
He was completely through! So yesterday,
I watched him drill his company in the Guard!

UENVO!
"Take my ball out, I'm through," I hear you say,
When things you find are breaking kind of tough—
But friends tomorrow happening out that way
Will see you hooking tee shots in the rough!

Rabbitt Maranville set out early to prove that he was a fighting manager.

The Cub boss had no umpire to pick on at that hour of night, so he started out to lick the entire city of New York.

Baseball magnates try to keep the hired band from fighting and fistic impressarios try to get theirs to scrap. And neither ever have any luck.

FALL WILL TELL.

THERE is really nothing new in the announcement that the members of the new Texas Conference will remain in the TIAA through the fall football schedule. That was presaged when the Conference was formed at Georgetown without the member colleges withdrawing from the old association. Their football schedules were already made up—they had nothing to gain by kicking over the traces.

Whether the new Conference will become an assured fact or its proponents will heed the plea of the old association for the good that they can do united depends however very largely upon that fall campaign to come.

The conference with five-members now, needs one more certainly and preferably three more to make a strong organization. It could worry along like its big Southwestern brother on seven. But it must have more than five, whether by Thanksgiving it can lure away enough surviving TIAA members to make up its required strength is one factor upon which the future of the new organization—and the old—rests.

It may be, though, that by Turkey Day, the Conference will see the wisdom of some such plan as that urged by Dr. Marcus of North Texas to retain intact the TIAA membership on a split state basis.

Don't overlook the fact that the TIAA has been a constructive factor in intercollegiate athletics in the section. It is too big a thing to see go by the board.

WHEN the New York state boxing commission refused to let Jack Kearns in to see Mickey Walker fight, the ripping noise in the offing was the tearing of the commission's pantaloons with the promoting fraternity. You can't bar a gent who is a cash customer in that state and leave any love left.

Youth Delivers.

WHILE nominations here and there on successful youth are being made, here are a few youngsters from nowhere in particular in the game who have drawn the spotlight of the Texas league this year by delivering Benge, Sam Houston normal youngster, with a regular berth with the Houston Buffs. No previous professional experience.

Barnes, Dallas sandlot left-hander, same club, same job, same experience.

'Neil, Beaumont, right-hander, one year out of class D company.

Cohen, Waco, shortfielder, Alabama collegian, no professional experience.

Benge, Barnes and Cohen have proven themselves assets to their club. O'Neal has not won a game for Beaumont—but few of the old timers have won much to speak of.

You might note that the entire quartet serve with South Texas clubs. North Texas teams prefer the ready-made pro.

There are a number of other youngsters new to class A, but with a year or so of lesser pro baseball behind them—Freddy Dorman of Wichita Falls, a real comer; Dewey Lyle of Waco, sticking at last after a couple of spring tries; Littlejohn of Houston and a few other nominees you might recall.

BESIDE the Stygian stream, they sat.
And eyed the ferried dames—
Two celebrated shades they were
Of different sorts of fames;
For one had christened Pullman cars
And one prize fighters' names!

ANY ONE who has ever rolled through the night in upper 10 on a Pullman bird of passage labeled the "Eucalyptus" or "Algonquin" can appreciate the nomenclature service of the person who named the junior lightweight champion Mike Ballerino.

There Is Still Jake Atz.

WELL, muses Mr. Jinx Tucker up Waco way, Fort Worth has taken on Pitcher Peters, but he will be of little use to them. He has hardly finished for Shreveport and even without him, Fort Worth has a capable staff.

From which, it may be deduced that Jinx is reckoning without the astute Jake Atz, who never lets Paul La-Grave part with anything for a Texas league discard without figuring where he will get value received.

Nearly anybody will concede that Gus Johns is of fair use to the Cats. But time was that the little southpaw rookie Wichita Falls found in St. Louis—the little fellow with the serious Teutonic map that occasionally breaks into a most seraphic grin—was regarded as only an ornament carried by the Spudders under the Texas rookie rule. Jake took in Augustus Francis off the waiver auction block—and he has won more Texas league games since than any body except Josephus Pate and Paul Wachtel.

There was Emory Rigney, Texas A. & M. collegian, who played a year for Ham Pat at Dallas. He was weak on a ground ball smacked to his left and all Pat could do with him was to shift him from short to third. Detroit offered him to Dallas in 1921 and Ham Pat declined the gift. Fort Worth took him—and after a wonderful year with Atz, "Trim" went up and stayed up.

The only signal failure Atz ever registered was on Gulfport Jack Ryan and you could not blame Jake as the Texas league sat on Ryan's case and neatly legislated his coffee ground spit-ball out of effectiveness.

Harlan Peters may not win a game for Fort Worth in 1925, but the chances are he will win 20 in 1926.

Ruth Hurt in Tilt With White Sox

CHICAGO, July 14.—(AP)—Chicago made it three out of four from New York today when Blankenship shut out the Yankees, 3 to 0, in a pitching duel with Shocker. Kamm's single and Schalk's double gave the locals a run in the seventh, while singles by Sheely and Falk and a triple by Hooper netted two more in the 8th. None of the visitors reached third base. Johnny Mostil, who had hit safely in sixteen consecutive games, failed to get a hit today.

Babe Ruth of the Yankees was compelled to leave the game in the first inning after he had attempted to catch a fly ball off the bat of Ike Davis of the Sox. Ruth fell just before he reacher the sphere and it went for a double. When he returned to the bench, it was revealed that he had strained his side slightly and was replaced by Bobby Veach. Ruth had one time at bat and struck out. It was announced that he was not seriously hurt and probably would be back in the line-up tomorrow.

Twilight Game Halted by Rain

Wichita Falls Electric and Ludlam and Riggs were rained out in the first inning of a scheduled Twilight league game Tuesday.

Eddie Kollman sent the Clothlers back in order in the first half of the first. The Electric company threatened in the first inning, but rain put a stop to their threats. Shipley hit down the third base line. Brown made a nice stop but threw poorly to first and Shipley was safe. Thurman sent Shipley to second when he beat out a bunt down the third base line. Shipley stole third when Whatley struck out. Thurman stole second with Bob Riley at the bat. The game was called at this point.

They made 11 of their 13 hits off him and stole seven bases. Yde went the route for the victors. the hearing and testify in behalf of Wichita Falls' claim for the building of the new railroad by the Fort Worth and Denver, which is to use Childress as an eastern terminal and reach Plainview, Lubbock, Silverton and Dimmitt.

Duncan Going.

T. P. Duncan, vice-president and general manager of the Wichita Mill & Elevator company, the largest grain concern in Northwest Texas, will also attend the hearing and point out the necessity of the new railroad and the benefit it will give the grain growers of the South Plains.

J. W. Liddell, traffic manager of the Texhoma Oil & Refining company, will also be a witness and represent the oil industry of Wichita Falls. At present refineries of the Wichita district find it difficult to make shipments into South Plains counties, being handicapped by more direct lines from Kansas and Oklahoma.

SCOPES

trial by establishing the unsoundness of the indictment and the unconstitutionality of the Tennessee statute which says that public school instructions shall teach no theory of evolution which denies the Biblical story of man's creation.

When the judge at length entered the court room after a recess of hours which he employed in writing his decision, he was met before he could make any announcement by the filing of a defense motion asking that the court's practice of opening the morning session of court with prayer be discontinued.

In addition, the motion asked and supported its request with a signed petition from churchmen outside Rhea county that if the prayer opening should be continued the court would permit some minister of beliefs other than those of fundamentalists to lead it.

At this juncture the court announced that he would not publish his decision on the quashing motion until tomorrow, explaining that he had been informed that certain news reporters or services had presumed to forecast the tenor of his ruling and had dispatched news reports to this effect. Declaring that if it should be established that the privacy of the court had been violated, he would immediately institute contempt of court proceedings against the accused persons. He called for a conference of representatives of the press and dismissed the court session overnight.

In the conference which followed, Judge Raulston repeated his assertion and appointed a committee of five reporters who he charged to investigate the matter and report to him.

The committee newsman began the investigation at once and announced that a report of their findings would be made to the court tomorrow.

CLOSED BROKERS TO OPEN.

NEW YORK, July 14.—Dean Onaticia and company, brokerage house, will be able to resume business at the end of this week or the first of next week, William Unger, counsel for the firm, announced today. Plans which are now being worked out, he said, should permit dismissal of bankruptcy proceedings in both New York and Chicago courts.

Crops More Important Than The Next Governor's Race, Says Lynch

AUSTIN, July 14.—Except for a small drouth area about Austin, Texas crops are in excellent condition, with prospects of an excellent yield, Lynch Davidson of Houston, said here Monday. The bright crop outlook conditions extend all the way to Chicago, he said. He predicted a year of unusual prosperity and expansion throughout the country, and declared that money conditions are particularly "easy" in the financial centers.

"This is tremendously more important than any political situation," he declared when asked about the governor's race next year, in which he is a candidate.

Davidson was on his return to Houston from two weeks' visit to Chicago. He went to Round Rock Monday afternoon for an address before the Williamson county old settlers' reunion.

HEAT WAVE

time earlier. Altus reported 103. At none of these places did any rain fall.

Burkburnett got a cooling shower an hour before Wichita Falls did—a shower that brought relief from a temperature of 108 degrees. Electra, with 107 in the afternoon, benefited only slightly from a light rainfall. It was exceedingly hot there last night. Still further north on the Denver no rain fell. Vernon reported a blistering hot day and threatening clouds in the evening but little moisture had fallen. Avery light shower, preceded by a bad sand storm, came about 6 o'clock. It was 106 there in the afternoon.

Childress caught the heat and a little wind and sand but no rain, telephone reports indicated.

None at Henrietta.

At Henrietta a biting sand storm swept through the town, making a temperature of 108 degrees all the worse. The rain that struck Wichita Falls, however, veered off to the south and missed most of Clay county all together.

Archer City and Olney, southeast of here, were on the checkered squares marked "rain" by the weather man. Both of these towns were given a drenching. The Wichita Falls and Southern railroad reported its line down in that direction early last night. The telephone office also said it was having trouble establishing connections in that direction.

The same was true to the southwest on the Wichita Valley. Dundee and Seymour reported a sand storm and a heavy rain, with wire facilities hampered. Communication could not be established beyond Seymour. Towns along the Denver between here and Fort Worth seemed to be in the general line of the storm. Bowie was favored with a good shower and so was Decatur. Both of these towns reported exceedingly hot weather.

Extreme heat prevailed at Ringgold Nocona, Bonita and Gainesville on the Katy east but no rain had fallen at those points early last night.

Wednesday promises to be "generally fair" again, the weather man predicted last night, which means another day of stifling heat.

EMPTY PISTOL

was furnished by a woman whose name was not obtained at the district attorney's office.

She appeared voluntarily late in the afternoon and told officials that a week ago Monday a man and his family consisting of a wife and three boys, stopped at her home on Clay street and asked permission to cook a dinner there. This was granted, she said, and during the stay she engaged in conversation with the man. He said he was traveling for his wife's health and wished she's either get well or die.

Denies Statement.

The woman asserted that newspaper accounts of the killing and the description of the dead woman aroused her curiosity so she came to the court house. She was taken before Whitfield.

Whitfield flatly denied ever having had made such a statement as this, although he did not deny having stopped at the Clay street house to prepare a dinner. He also denied any knowledge of how the cartridges found in the loft of his home came to be there.

District Attorney Ben Allred, his assistant, George Anderson and Assistant County Attorney John Q. Humphrey, drew from Whitfield little additional information through a day of questioning Tuesday. Mr. Humphrey did the bulk of the examining. At the close of the day he had learned three things undeveloped in Monday's quizzing of the man: One, that on Thursday night of last week he chased a man from his home in the dead of night; two, that on midnight last Saturday he again found a strange man at his doorstep—a man whom his wife cursed and ordered from the place, and three, that he left Duncan, Okla., on orders of the police and that he had received a notice from the ku klux klan up there to "get out."

It was with an air of piety that Whitfield answered all questions. He interposed a "my friend" salutation in practically every answer and referred frequently to "my dear wife." He asserted confidently he some day expected to "meet her in heaven," and said he could face his God and her with a clear conscience.

GIRL WANTED TO DIE, THEY KILLED HER

Charges of Murder to Be Filed Against Two Youths

WATERTOWN, S. D., July 14.—(AP)—Byrle Healey, 17, Garden City, S. D., girl, whose charred body was found late yesterday in a burned straw stack near that place, was slain at her own request by Winifred Meek, 21, and Robert Lappier, State Attorney H. Hanson announced here today.

Hanson said that Meek and Lappier told him following their arrest that they met the girl in Garden City Sunday evening and drove her into the country, where she begged them to end her life. The alleged confession declares that Lappier struck Miss Healey over the head with a tire iron and that both youths then choked her with her scarf.

Placing the body in a strawstack the states attorney said, the alleged confession declared, the youths drove to Bradley to attend a motion picture show. Later, Hanson said, they returned and set fire to the straw stack to obliterate traces of the crime.

Hanson says he will prefer charges of murder in the first degree against Meek and Pappier.

CITY PAYS FOR SAND IN RIVER; HER'S ALREADY

Wichita Learns That Bed Of Wichita River Is Her Property

Learning that in the past it has been paying out perfectly good money for material that it had title to in the first place, the city is planning to claim its rights to the bed of the Wichita river which belongs to it by virtue of a recent act of the legislature.

Mayor Shepherd has learned that a municipality may control the bed of any stream flowing through it, this authority being vested in it by legislative decree.

A number of private concerns here are selling sand and gravel from the river bed and, at certain times in the past, have sold some of this to the city for its use. City officials believe that the city is entitled to some revenue from the river bed if any is being realized because of the sales of sand and for this reason action is being planned.

Free Bridge Falls Through as State Withdraws Help

Prospects for a free interstate bridge across Red river between Wichita county and Cotton county, Okla., went to low ebb yesterday afternoon when announcement was made here through Fred L. Haskett, assistant manager of the Wichita Falls chamber of commerce, that the state highway commission had "washed its hands" of the matter and cancelled the hearings to be held at Austin July 27.

Immediately upon receipt of the notice here, a special meeting of the chamber of commerce directors was called for this morning at 10 o'clock to discuss the matter and lay plans.

Announcement of the action of the commission came unexpectedly in Wichita Falls, officials here believing that the project would go through under the wing of the special act of the recent legislature making an exception in the case of the Wichita bridge. There is a state law and a recent opinion of the attorney general that no state funds may be used to build an interstate bridge.

New Air Mail Route Bids Are Called For

WASHINGTON, July 14.—(AP) Tentative schedule for the eight new air mail routes recently decided upon to connect with the transcontinental service were announced today by Postmaster General New in calling for bids by September 14 from prospective contractors. An average flying speed of approximately 90 miles an hour and six round trips a week were required. Bids for additional routes will be called for as fast as petitions are received and the feasibility of such proposed routes is determined.

TOKYO HAS SOFT GROUND.

Marshy Ground Interfering With Construction Work.

TOKYO, June 15.—The softness of the ground upon which Tokyo is built is interfering considerably with the reconstruction work now under day. Recently Dr. Kishi of the reconstruction bureau recommended that allo work on paved streets in the districts where the new subway is to be built be delayed until after the underground project has been completed. He based his recommendation upon observations made during the recent sewer construction.

In some places, it was found, the sewer excavations have caused the streets to sink more than a foot. Many houses and paved roads Dr. Kishi discovered, have been seriously damaged because of the settling of the earth.

TO MARK D. A. R. GRAVE

Plot Is One of Two Known of Real Daughters of Soldiers.

SPOKANE, Wash., July — The grave of a real daughter of the Revolution, Mrs. Isabel M. Johnson Savage Conway, in a local cemetery, is to be marked by the Erie, Pa., chapter of the D. A. R., relatives here have been informed. Mrs. Conway's grave is one of the only two resting places of daughters of soldiers of the American revolution of which the Erie chapter has record. The other is that of her sister, Mrs. Eleanor Hoppack, who is buried in Erie.

Mrs. Conway, who died here nine years ago, was the daughter of Phillip Johnson who fought in the revolution in the command of George Washington.

NOT GUILTY OF ASSAULT

Jury Frees Man Charged With Attacking Night Watchman.

A verdict of not guilty was brought in late Tuesday afternoon by a jury in the case of Estes Lloyd Kiker, on trial in the 30th district court on a charge of assault with inteng to murder. The jury was out for some time.

Kiker was alleged to have attacked J. B. Scarbrough, night man at the Holliday creamery last February and beaten him about the head with a hammer.

He was tried before a jury and Judge Vincent Stine of Henrietta, sitting in exchange of benches with Judge H. R. Wilson.

SHAM WAR AFFECTS CAFES

Honolulu Restauranteurs Forced To Learn Dish of "Ham And."

HONOLULU, July — The "battle of Oahu" may have been constructive and theoretical, and the winner may never be decided officially, but the 1925 maneuvers of the United States fleet already have had a definite effect upon the cuisine and culinary habits of the residents of the territory.

Some authority informed the professional and amateur restauranteurs of Lahaina, island of Maui, where the ships engaged in three weeks of minor maneuvers, that the fleet personnel subsisted entirely upon the favorite American dish of "ham and."

Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Wilson accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. D. N. Ritter will leave Wednesday for a visit in Christoval, Texas.

The Business Women's class of the First Baptist enjoyed a water melon and swimming party Monday evening at Downings. About 30 of the business women were present.

Miss Irene Swain is convalescing from a recent operation, and will be moved to her home on Grant soon. Miss Swain is an employe of the Wichita Produce company.

Rev. Theodore Marburger will speak at the First Baptist church Wednesday evening, July 15, at 8:15. The subject to be used for his address will be "Love, and How to Become a True Christian."

Dr. Walter J. Johnson, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church here, received word from many young people attending the Western Methodist assembly at Mt. Sequoyah reporting a profitable and pleasant time at the assembly.

LeRoy Moore, educational director of the First Baptist church, who is attending the North Texas Baptist encampment at Woodlake, is teaching a class there by the B. Y. P. U. method. The class is an unusually large one, having 75 members.

Mrs. A. L. Thornberry, a charter member of the Grace Methodist Episcopal church of this city, is still in the hospital pending a serious illness. It is reported that she is better, however, and is hoped to be at her home on Polk again soon.

Building permit totals for Tuesday got back to normal again and nine of them reached a total of $11,650. This was a considerable contrast to the figures of Monday when permit values mounted to more than $130,000. Most of the permits yesterday were for small residences and repair jobs.

Deciding that greater care shall be exercised in the future in the matter of issuing building permits where there may be a controversy over the type of building, Mayor Shepherd has ordered that hereafter all permits for erection of business structures in the residential sections shall be laid before the city council.

Mrs. Nettie Amote Roberts, wife of J. V. Roberts of this city, died at her home last night at 9:20 o'clock. Funeral services will be hel tomorrow morning at :30 o'clock from the Baptist church with Dr. E. F. Lyon, pastor of the church, in charge. Mrs. Roberts about two hours before her death had given birth to a little son, the first boy in the family. The mother seemed to be doing nicely and there was no cause for alarm. About 30 minutes before she passed away she complained of smothering spells. The physician had not left the house and was with her, but the end came a few minutes later. Mrs. Roberts was a member of the Baptist church. Her death is a distinct loss not only to members of her immediate family but to her wide circle of friends. Mr. Kester for years took an active interest in the workings of the chapter and much honor is due him for his efforts to make the chapter the splendid body it is today, it is said.

SHEPHERD IN A FIST FIGHT IN CHICAGO COURT

Former Chauffer Battles With Him Over a Past Bill

CHICAGO, July 14.—(AP)—William Darling Shepherd today began his legal battle to retain the milhon dollar estate left to him by his youthful ward, William Nelson McClintock, of whose murder he was recently acquitted.

Shepherd and his wife appeared in the probate court where his attorneys are attempting to probate McClintock's will over the objections of attorneys representing ten Iowa cousins of McClintock and Miss Isabelle Pope, his fiancee.

The court proceedings were enlivened by a fist fight between Shepherd and Louis Kles, Shepherd's former chauffeur, who met Shepherd in a corner and demanded settlement of a $55 bill. After striking at Shepherd several times he was arrested and probate judge indicated he would be held for contempt.

Shep and Cops' Boss Attend Dallas Meet

"Do you little boys see the little white spots?"

"All right, now the little spots are bull's eyes and the little boys must take their little guns and see if they can shoot the little bull's eyes. That's it—pop! Right in the middle. Whoa, wait a minute, you little fat rascal: you musn't point the little gun at oo's little head. It might shoot, you know. And say, you good looking little scamp over there on the end, quit singing so much; you disturb the other little boys.

Quiesser.

"Now then, let's all shoot together—one, two, three—go — bang! bang! bang! Fine you hit the target once, anybow."

Thus does the elementary class receive its baptism of fire—and thus do its two star pupils gain their first intimate peep into the rigors of that flashy little thing known as target practice.

Mayor R. E. Shepherd and Police Commissioner Frank Quiesser are in Dallas today attending a police convention attended by police executives from all over the state. Included in their diversions while in Dallas will be a target shooting contest in which all will be invited to participate. Prizes are being offered for the best shots in the state.

The two local executives drove down in Mr. Quesisser's machine. They expect to be back Thursday.

"Too Much Rouge" One Reason Why Women Fail In Business, Is Claim

WACO, July 14.—(AP) — Too much rouge, lack of woman's confidence in woman and lack of seriousness are among the nine reasons why women fail in business given by Miss Florence Sands of Dallas, national vice-president of the Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs.

A little rouge is a good thing, but too much is an abomination, while clothes need not be expensive, they must be well cared for, Miss Sands said under the head of personal appearance.

One of the greatest influences toward success or failure, said Miss Sands, is the home, and when both men and women, not women alone or men alone, "come to the place where they will give time and thought to the training of their boys and girls, to see that they are well grounded in the right kind of morals, business and personal principles, a greater per cent of our boys and girls will become successful men and women."

Nine Fundamentals.

The nine fundamentals of success given by Miss Sands are:

"Women Lack Confidence in Women: Women as a rule haven't as much confidence in the ability of women as they should have. Decidedly we need to cultivate confidence in the ability of women.

"Lack of seriousness: All too often women do not accept their business with enough seriousness and all women are measured by the inefficient, irresponsible type until the individual proves herself the exception. Lack of seriousness on the part of the mass is as a millstone about the neck of the individual.

"Lack of vision: So many women lack vision in business. Women are too prone to be satisfied with little success.

"Lack of initiative: Women haven't enough confidence in their own ability to act on their own initiative or judgment. They are not willing to assume responsibility—make a decision, or take a risk—and assume the responsibility. Women usually have good judgment and should not be afraid to exercise it. New workable ideas are worth money.

"Lack of outside interest: People are narrow enough no matter how many interests they have, but the broader our interests and experiences the broader are we, and the more efficient are we if those interests and experiences are rightly used.

Lack of Tolerance.

"Lack of tolerance or cooperation: Cooperation is the biggest thing in organization work; whether club work or office work; it is the same. No organization is highly efficient unless every member, from the president to the office boy, cooperates.

"Self control: Self-control is an art in which every individual should be an artist.

"Personal appearance: Too much rouge doesn't always improve ones personal appearance thought the use of a small amount is quite in good taste and good form. Personal appearance is no small matter in the life of a business woman or man. Clothes do not necessarily have to be expensive ones, but they must be in good taste and well cared for.

"Health: Health is by no means the least important of these reasons for woman's success in business. It is perhaps more important than all the others, for no person can be the most efficient or successful if in ill health. Women who are so often in the house much of the time, need to give much more attention to matters of health than they have in the past and the time to give attention to health is now."

Cornel Professor Hunts Texas Bugs

DEL RIO, Texas, July 14.—Dr. A. H. Wright of Ithaca, N. Y., professor of zoology in Cornell university, is here obtaining specimens of animal and insect life. He is traveling overland and carries a small laboratory and a limited library in his automobile, which is well equipped for camping purposes.

Dr. Wright has obtained a rare speciman of lizard, whose habitat is West Texas and New Mexico, and which was first discovered in 1905 by Dr. C. Hart Merriam of the United States Biological Survey. It is named sceloporus merriami for its discoverer. Another specimen of lizard is being sought by Dr. Wright. It is of the aligator variety, and is known scientifically as gerrhorrtus insernalis.

Dr. Wright is accompanied by Mrs. Wright. He expects to spend several weeks touring the Southwest, searching for specimens.

SWEDISH CROPS PROMISING

STOCKHOLM, July 14.—(AP)—Preliminary reports from the various districts of Sweden received by the agricultural department show that the crop prospect is better than it has been for the last 10 years.

The weather has been very favorable and consequently the work in the fields started much earlier than usual WWheat and rye are very forward.

With the continued favorable weather there is no doubt that it will mean a considerable decrease in the importation of foreign food stuff, especially in American wheat. The inprotation of American wheat has shown a steady decrease during the last 10 years.

IF SICK TODAY! TAKE NO CALOMEL

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Straightens You Up Better Than Salivating, Dangerous Calomel and Doesn't Upset You—Don't Lose a Day's Work—Read Guarantee

I discovered a vegetable compound that does the work of dangerous, sickening calomel and I want every reader of this paper to buy a bottle for a few cents and if it doesn't straighten you up better and quicker than salivating calomel just go back to the store and get your money back.

I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your sluggish liver to work and clean your 30 feet of bowels of the sour bile and constipation poison which is clogging your system and making you feel miserable.

I guarantee that one spoonful of this harmless liquid liver medicine will relieve the headache, biliousness, coated tongue, ague, malaria, sour stomach or any other distress caused dose of vile, nauseating calomel, besides it will not make you sick or keep you from a day's work.

Calomel is poison—it's mercury—it attacks the bones often causing rheuby a torpid liver as quickly as a matism. Calomel is dangerous. It sickens—while my Dodson's Liver Tone is safe, pleasant and harmless. Eat anything afterwards, because it can not salivate. Give it to the children because it doesn't upset the stomach or shock the liver. Take a spoonful tonight and wake up feeling fine and ready for a full day's work.—Adv.

KEY RATE OF HOUSTON GOES TO 28 CENTS

Insufficient Number of Fire Stations Given As Reason

AUSTIN, July 14.—(AP)—Houston's key rate was increased from 15 to 28 cents, effective July 15, because of insufficient number of fire stations the state fire insurance commission officially announced tonight.

The great growth of Houson, lack of fire fighting equipment, firemen, fire alarm boxes and low water pressure also are reasons given for the increase These fire protection features have not grown in proportion with the population, J. J. Timmins, state fire marshal said.

Increase of mercantiles of 13 cents, special classes of seven cents and special hazards of seven cents are recommended in the specific schedule, excepting on sprinkled, fire proof and semi-fire proof risks and all average rates.

The increase does not affect policies effective prior to July 15.
