June Gilkerson

Gilkerson case may be part of NBC series

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Researchers for the popular NBC-TV program "Unsolved Mysteries" have contacted Midland police about broadcasting a segment on June Gilkerson's disappearance, and investigators hope the show may lead to discovery of her body.

Researchers have asked police for information about the highly publicized case, according to police spokesman Cpl. Jim White.

"They wouldn't say they would do it, but they want to look at it," White said. "It is an interesting case."

If the show is broadcast, it would not be aired until next season, he said.

Ms. Gilkerson, 24, disappeared the morning of Nov. 8, 1986, and has not been located. Investigators have said they believe she was killed shortly after her abduction.

Compromise urged on UTPB issue

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant City Editor

The sense of urgency for local consensus on four-year status for the University of Texas of the Permian Basin did not vanish with the end of the special legislative session Tuesday night, according to a key proponent of a compromise.

The proposal drafted by the UTPB Development Board last week and forwarded to State Reps. Tom Craddick of Midland and Gary Watkins of Odessa set forth middle ground on the questions of timing, location, facilities and curriculum for a four-year UTPB with a presence in Midland, development board chairman Ron Fancher told reporters this morning.

Fancher would not comment on any moves toward compromise by the two lawmakers, "but I can tell you, we are still talking about issues of concern and remain positively hopeful," he said.

The compromise draft calls for full four-year teaching status to begin at the Odessa campus on Sept. 1, 1991, simultaneous with the opening of a facility with 20 to 25 classrooms with space for support personnel in Midland, funded 50 percent by local monies, with matching funds from the UT Board of Regents, Fancher said.

The four-year school would have the same admission standards as other schools in the UT System, with its curriculum subject to the approval of the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board, added Fancher, who is president of Texas Commerce Bank in Odessa.

Craddick called the initial copy of the draft he recevied from the board last week "unacceptable." Among the changes he made before sending it back to Fancher were deleting any reference to leasing a facility in Midland and specifying the proposed building site adjacent to the Midland College campus, he said.

Told of the development board's promotion of a draft including the specific building information, Craddick said, "If it's something Midlanders and Midland College can get behind, then I'm for it."

Watkins said that construction of "a building that serves no real purpose or meets no need," is the barrier to his support of the development board draft.

He called the draft "just another version of the Midland bill presented in May."

Watkins said that he would agree to a UTPB presence in Midland through leased facilities, but that construction of a new building is unwarranted. "I'm waiting for Midland leaders to come up with a real compromise," he said, "not just a change of semantics."

Craddick and other Midlanders have questioned the level of commitment represented by an agreement to teaching in Midland only in leased facilities.

Soviet geologists arrive in Basin

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

The warming of relations between Americans and Soviets extended to West Texas Tuesday when a group of Soviet geologists were welcomed to the Permian Basin.

"We are fortunate to have our friends here today," said Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas in greeting the delegation of 10 and their interpreters.

Thomas told the group it was a "special privilege" to have them here because the Permian formation is named after the Permian in the Soviet Union.

Odessa Mayor Don Carter said Midland and Odessa oilmen looked forward to sharing their oil and gas experience with the group.

Speaking with the local media after the greetings, the leader of the Soviety geologists, Aklim Mukhamatzianov, explained through interpreter Don Boydstun that the group had already seen and learned much since its arrival in the United States.

All members of the group are professional engineers and geologists many of whom studied in Moscow, and are interested in U.S. oil technology, particulary automation.

Senate approves workers' comp bill

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — After nearly a year of bitter legislative battle, a sharply divided Texas Senate Tuesday evening sent the governor a workers compensation reform bill.

Opponents said the reforms would leave injured workers at the mercy of a workers compensation bureaucracy, without adequate recourse to jury trials on appeals, but supporters said the reforms will increase benefits to injured workers by $300 million and stabilize insurance costs that have tripled in five years.

"This is a very happy day for Texas," said Democratic Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who said he was "extremely proud" of the reform bill, much of which he wrote after similar efforts failed in two previous sessions.

"We have adopted a bill that gives workers a better break and business a brighter future," Hobby said after the 18-13 vote approved the revised bill with one day left in the second special session.

"Never in 16 years have I encountered a more divisive, difficult issue," Hobby said.

"I respect the views of those who opposed Senate Bill 1. Even more I respect the courage of those who tried to find a solution to the problem under the most difficult circumstances," he said.

Hobby cited senators Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville and Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo, who got House leaders to agree to seven compromise amendments over the weekend. "They ended the deadlock," he said.

Sen. Steve Carricker, D-Roby, also changed his vote from Friday's 17-14 rejection of the Hobby-styled bill.

House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said he expects the bill, which the House approved Monday, to stabilize rates, but he cautioned businesses against expecting immediate rate relief. "This system didn't deteriorate overnight and it's not going to be repaired overnight," he said.

Republican Gov. Bill Clements applauded the bill, which he was expected to sign into law today.

"The 'Hobby Bill' is, without a doubt, a bipartisan plan for true and comprehensive reform of our workers compensation system," Clements said, adding that it is "the most significant piece of legislation to come out of the Legislature in the past 20 years."

Clements said the bill would enhance workplace safety, reduce unnecessary litigation and apply objective standards to impairment schedules.

"In passing this reform package, the Legislature has made great strides toward dismantling a system that has critically affected injured workers and our state's job-creating climate," he said.

Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, whose district includes Midland County and who had consistently supported the Hobby version, said the finished product was a good deal for employers and employees and he was optimistic it would bring business insurance rates under control.

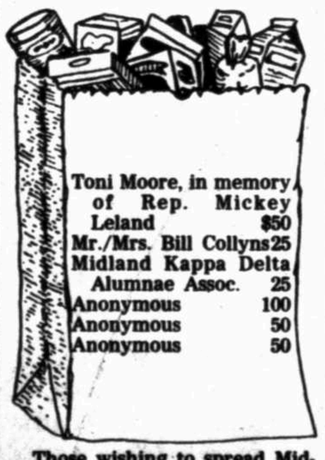

Sims also said the system needs more legislative oversight. "Hopefully, the Legislature will pay much more attention to it than we have in the past," he said.

Leaders of the Democratic coalition that pushed a version more acceptable to organized labor and trial lawyers did not give up without a final blast at the reform package and the three senators who broke from the group.

Midlander in custody for allegedly killing man asleep at restaurant

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A 69-year-old man who slept in a Lee Street restaurant because he was afraid of being burglarized at home was robbed and brutally stabbed to death early today in the eatery. Police have a 19-year-old Midland man in custody in connection with the murder.

The man, who is expected to be formally charged with the killing later today, was arrested without incident at 9:30 a.m. at a home at 1209 N. Keith St. by members of the police SWAT team, spokesman Jim White said. He was booked into city jail on a charge of murder, but will not talk to officers.

"As far as I know, he doesn't have anything to say to anybody," White said.

District Attorney Al Schorre declined to say if capital murder charges would be filed.

"The case is still under investigation," Schorre said. "Once all of the reports are completed we will review the charges, and may consider adding to or changing them."

Schorre said the man, who is on parole from state prison, likely would have at least $100,000 bond set. A request has already been filed with the state to revoke his parole, the prosecutor said.

"That will hold him pending resolution of these charges," he said.

Orvel McDaniel, 100 S. Mineola, Apt. F, was found by officers just after 1 a.m. lying in a pool of blood inside the Seafood Place restaurant, 208 N. Lee St. McDaniel, who was found on a mattress, had been stabbed twice in the back, and a 12-inch butcher knife was found protruding from one of his eyes, investigators said.

Officers found his empty wallet nearby, and signs of a struggle.

Police do not know who discovered the body, but at 1:07 a.m. dispatchers received a report of a disturbance at the restaurant.

"It was a woman. She called and reported some type of disturbance, then hung up," White said.

When officers arrived, the business was dark and locked. One officer flashed a light inside, spotted the body, then broke down the door and called paramedics. But McDaniel was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of Peace Keith Jobe.

A padlock usually used to lock the business was found on a table inside the restaurant, and a color television set had been left on, according to officers.

The owner of the restaurant had told McDaniel he could stay overnight. Witnesses told police the man's apartment had been burglarized last month and he was afraid of another.

Investigators credited a routine "FI," or field investigation, with the suspect's arrest.

At 12:01 a.m., Officer Rene Flores stopped a man who was walking near the intersection of Cowden Avenue and Whitaker Street — less than a mile from where McDaniel's body was found.

Flores noticed the man had bloody clothes, but the man claimed he had been robbed and beaten. After he was identified and photographed, the man was released by the officer.

Clear skies forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Clear skies are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport, with the low in the middle 20s and winds from the northwest under 10 mph.

Thursday is expected to be sunny and warmer with the high in the middle 50s and winds continuing from the northwest at 10-20 mph.

Tuesday's high of 45 was 34 degrees cooler than the record high of 79 set for that date in 1937. The overnight low of 15 was one degree warmer than the record low of 14 set for this date in 1985.

STATE

Cold Arctic air combined with clear temperatures to drop temperatures below freezing as far south as Kingsville in South Texas early today.

But temperatures in the Lower Rio Grande Valley did not dip low enough to harm the Valley's multi-million dollar citrus crop. At 6 a.m., temperatures dipped to 33 at McAllen and 34 at Brownsville. Much of the citrus crop is in groves located between the two cities.

The Arctic air mass remained strong over Texas although the cold front that brought it crossed the state almost two days ago.

A warming trend is expected over the entire state Thursday, but forecasters are warning that the next cold front may roar into the state by Friday.

Skies were kept clear because of a surface area of high pressure centered off the lower Texas coast and a trough of low pressure stretching from the low rolling plains into the lower Pecos valley.

Forecasts called for increasing clouds over South Texas tonight. There is a slight chance of rain in South Texas Thursday. The rest of the state will have clear to partly cloudy skies tonight and Thursday.

NATION

Frost continued to sock the Midwest today while a storm system in the Southeast spewed rain from northern Florida to the mid-Atlantic coast and snow from South Carolina to southern New England.

No end to the bitter weather was in sight for the Midwest and Great Plains. Lows of 30 below were forecast today for northern Minnesota.

At 2 a.m. EST today, it was 1 below zero in Bismarck, N.D., 4 below in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., and 5 degrees above zero in Chicago.

The National Weather Service predicted accumulations of two to four inches in Tennessee before the snow ends today.

Freezing temperatures should extend deep into the heart of Texas by this morning. A freeze warning was issued for south-central Texas and the middle Texas coast.

About 10 inches of snow fell by early today in Virginia's Powhatan County, just west of Richmond, and the city had up to 6 inches of snow. Many schoolchildren today were enjoying their fourth straight day off.

Snow advisories were in effect today for northern Delaware, most of Maryland and much of northern and western Virginia, including the Washington, D.C., area.

Snow blanketed the Black Hills area of western South Dakota, where the town of Rochford received 8 inches of snow.

Tuesday's official low for the Lower 48 states was minus 28 degrees at International Falls. Thirteen cities in the central part of the nation hit record lows — including 5 degrees below zero at Kansas City, Mo.; 12 degrees in Abilene, Texas; and 8 in El Paso.

Temperatures above 50 degrees were confined to Arizona, California, the northern Pacific Coast region, Texas' lower Rio Grande Valley and the area from the central Gulf Coast to the southern Atlantic Coast.

Cold causing drop in donations

Associated Press

Snow fell early today in the Carolinas and Tennessee, and the cold was so bitter in the Plains that only penned-in polar bears seemed to be enjoying themselves and the Salvation Army bell ringers reported a drop in donations.

"People don't want to stop and dig in their pockets for change," said Salvation Army Lt. James Castor in Kearney, Neb.

The second snowstorm to hit Virginia in five days produced scores of accidents on slippery roads. At least two people died.

About 10 inches of snow fell by early today in Powhatan County, just west of Richmond, and the city had up to 6 inches of snow. Many schoolchildren today were enjoying their fourth straight day off.

Snow fell from South Carolina to upstate New York. In the Midwest and Great Plains, temperatures were expected to remain bitter through the weekend.

Polar bears at the Henry Doorly Zoo in Omaha, Neb., reveled in the cold, swimming in a pool that a pump kept from freezing over.

"They're insane," zoo director Lee Simmons said. "Never mind the freezing temperatures, they're out there swimming!"

The Peoria Rescue Mission, a homeless shelter in the Illinois city, reported a rush of people seeking a place to sleep with lows of 5 below zero predicted this morning, and up to 3 inches of snow.

Lows of 30 below were forecast in northern Minnesota, where in International Falls temperatures never crept above minus 2 below all day Tuesday. Sub-zero temperatures were forecast for most of North Dakota as well.

GILKERSON

Midlander Kenneth Wayne Parker, 43, was convicted in June 1988 of two counts of conspiracy to commit kidnapping and is serving consecutive life sentences in a maximum-security federal penitentiary in Leavenworth, Kan. His appeals have been exhausted but his court-appointed attorney, Tom Morgan, has maintained Parker is innocent and has vowed to have him released using "post-conviction remedies."

Morgan, who could not be reached for comment today, also has claimed he has discovered new evidence connected with the case.

According to testimony at Parker's trial, he and an accomplice, David Alderink, planned to kidnap 27-year-old Susan Lindsay, take her to Mexico and sell her into prostitution. When the attempt to find her failed, Alderink's lover Ms. Gilkerson was picked as a substitute victim. Alderink, now 23, pleaded guilty to his involvement in the abduction and is serving a 20-year state prison term for aggravated kidnapping.

Wayne Speck, the San Antonio-based assistant U.S. Attorney who prosecuted Parker, said Ms. Gilkerson's mother, Juanita Willis, wants the show broadcast.

"I have talked at great length to Juanita Willis about the situation, and I respect her continuing hope that June might be alive," Speck said. "At the same time I know that David (Alderink) was convinced by Parker that she is dead. I wasn't there, but I know David believed Parker when he saw the note."

In a confrontation that was staged and videotaped by police, the two men met on Nov. 24, 1986, two weeks after the woman disappeared, according to testimony at Parker's trial. Parker showed Alderink a note that said "she was cremated, cost $15,000, over and done with," the younger man testified.

Parker has not been charged with killing Ms. Gilkerson.

Midland District Attorney Al Schorre, who acted as a special prosecutor at Parker's trial, doubts the broadcast will do any good.

"There is nothing really for the public to respond to at this time," Schorre said. "We are still interested in the recovery of the body. Theoretically, he (Parker) could have removed the body down toward the Del Rio area."

Schorre said any benefit national publicity might generate would be outweighed by a flood of false tips.

Speck also said he doubted the show would lead to discovery of any new information about the case.

"My answer is based on what Parker told Alderink, that he had cremated the girl," the prosecutor said. "Alderink is convinced that's what happened."

But Ms. Willis, who lives in North Carolina, has a right to ask that the show be broadcast, Speck said.

"She would like no stone unturned in trying to find her or her daughter's body," he said. "She has been so hurt by this.

"Until she sees the body, she will continue to have some hope that June is alive."

Police Detective Sgt. B.G. Johnson, who worked on the Gilkerson case, said airing a segment on "Unsolved Mysteries" "won't hurt anything."

"There is a possibility that someone might know something that we don't know about," Johnson said.

Investigators and prosecutors say they are sure Parker knows Ms. Gilkerson's whereabouts, but they have no plans to try and interview him again about the case.

"Most of those people (who would interview him) I think he hates, and wouldn't talk to anyway," Schorre said.

Said Speck: "You bet, you can do anything you want to do, but he is still not going to give you the time of day. I am confident that the investigation by the Midland Police Department was thoroughly professional and disclosed the true perpetrators. I am a prosecutor, not an investigator, and I have not explored the possibility of talking with Parker.

"But I am certain I am probably last on the list of people he would talk to and it would probably be a futile trip."

"I don't know," Johnson said of the possibility of interviewing Parker.

"I asked his attorney prior to the appeals if I could talk to Parker after the appeals were through," Johnson said. "I haven't been contacted by Mr. Morgan to see if he would or if he even has talked to Kenneth. But I don't know that it is ruled out."

Johnson said Ms. Gilkerson's body likely is in Midland County somewhere.

Those involved in the case — regardless of the involvement of the television program — merely hope for the sake of the Gilkerson family that the body is found soon.

"I certainly empathize with that family, who still have an unresolved question," Schorre said. "I think about it," he said of the woman's fate. "I think about it."

SOVIETS

Mukhamatzianov — who is leaving the tour early because he is a member of the Soviet Congress — pointed out that a number of American oilmen had visited his country to see what the Soviets had to offer. Asked what that was, he replied "Come and see."

The Soviet visit to the Permian Basin was arranged under the "People to People Citizen Ambassador Program" established by President Eisenhower in 1956. Cameron Hightower, who is accompanying the group, said the program was established as a private effort so people of different countries could meet outside official boundaries.

One of the hosts of the program is Anadarko Petroleum Corp., which will host a luncheon for the delegation Thursday at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

Scotty Alcorn, division geological engineer with Anadarko, explained that his company is participating because it is interested in international exploration and saw this tour as a way to make contacts with the Soviets in terms of future negotiations for joint ventures or concessions.

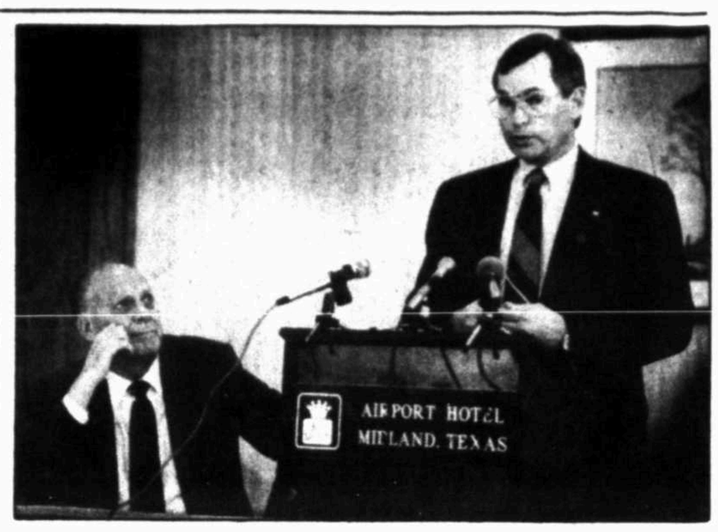

"The Soviet Union is interested in entertaining foreign interest in searching for oil and gas in their country," he pointed out, adding that he will be giving a presentation on competitive oil prospect generation to the group.

Following breakfast with the mayors of Midland and Odessa this morning, the group was to travel to Goldsmith to tour Phillips' petroleum gathering and processing facility, then to Mobil's Pegasus waterflood field. After returning to Midland, the group will be honored with a "Vendor's Night" dinner at Midland Center.

On Thursday, the group will tour Shell Oil's Denver Unit in Denver City, have lunch with Anadarko officials and tour the company's offices. They also will attend a Mexican Fiesta given by the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

The group leaves for home early Friday morning.

Visitors are Mukhamatzianov, general director, Tataria Oil; Alexandr V. Lobovkin, vice president, Scientifc Technical Society; Rom A. Khramov, general director, Orenburg Oil; Dmitri Gorynov, senior engineer, Mangyshiak Oil; Naif Kamalov, general director, Emba Oil; Ori Vorzhinin, senior engineer, Tumen Oil and Gas; Nail Kalimullin, senior engineer, Komi Oil; Ampir Sytrlanov, senior engineer, Bashkiria Oil; and Vitali Lasnicht and Sergei D. Mironov, senior engineers, Ministry of Oil and Gas.

UT Board of Regents member Bill Roden listens as University of Texas Permian Basin Development Board chairman Ron Fancher explains his group's efforts at finding a middle ground on four-year status for the Odessa school, while addressing Midland's desire for a UTPB presence.

UTPB

If Watkins and Craddick "sign off" on a single bill, indications are that the five hurdles to enactment of four-year status can be cleared, according to other speakers at this morning's press conference.

UT Board of Regents member Bill Roden and Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board member Frank Cahoon, both Midlanders, agreed that the boards on which they serve would likely approve any compromise provided both cities are behind the idea, as evidenced by the cooperation of the local legislators.

Gov. Bill Clements has said he would only allow consideration of a four-year UTPB bill in future special sessions if consensus was apparent between Midland and Odessa factions. The next special session, expected in March, could tackle several education issues, including school funding.

Odessa businessman Steve Late challenged the local lawmakers to "shape a new Permian Basin," in the same way President Bush and Soviet Premier Gorbachev are working together to "shape a new world."

"Our economy stinks and it's not getting any better," said Late, former two-term president of the Odessa Chamber of Commerce and a co-owner of Broncho Chevrolet-BMW.

"We've got to change our goals" in regard to UTPB, he added. The potential payoff of the university with the support of both cities and the entire area "is too great," to cling to the idea of four-year status in Odessa only.

COMP

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, said the final bill was little improved from the version the Senate rejected Friday.

In the key areas of benefits and dispute resolution, he said, the bill is not much different from the version Rep. Richard Smith, R-Bryan, filed in January. "This ain't nothing but the Smith bill warmed over," he said, but he refused to credit Smith.

"He didn't win it. We surrendered it," Parker said.

Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, denounced the bill as "evil, mean and wicked." He said it will make it harder for injured workers to find attorneys and will create a workers welfare system.

Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, chairman of the task force that recommended the reforms, attributed the criticism to a basic difference in philosophy, but he noted the reforms would increase the minimum compensation rate by 56 percent and move it from among the lowest in the nation to among the highest.

"You may not like this bill. You may not like a lot of things in this bill, but please don't go out and say this bill does not increase benefits for injured workers," Glasgow said.

He also said it will reduce discrimination against women and minorities by providing more objective standards.

The system also encourages employers to provide coverage for their workers, with provisions for self-insurance for large companies and deductibles and pool plans for smaller companies.

A safety section, which was not part of the original House plan, would set up programs in the new agency to monitor and penalize hazardous employers and set up safety programs.

Parker said he wants reforms, but not the version that got through the Legislature. He was concerned that lawmakers would not be able to fix problems if workers get short shrift.

STABBING

When McDaniel's body was found, officers noticed the large amount of blood at the scene and were contacted by Flores. Officers went to the Keith Street address listed on the FI card, but a woman refused to let them in and refused to wake the suspect, police said.

According to an affidavit for the suspect's arrest warrant, at about 5:30 a.m. the woman left the house carrying a bag.

"The owner of the residence left the house carrying a large black bag," the affidavit states. "Officers stopped her and found inside the bag a white sweat shirt with blood on it and a black jacket with blood on it."(The woman) said that (the suspect) told her to get rid of the clothes."

Flores said the garments in the bag matched the clothes the man was wearing at midnight.

The woman, 26, has been jailed on a misdemeanor charge of tampering with evidence, police said.

When Flores questioned the man an hour before the body was found, the man had 60 $1 dollar bills with him.

Acquaintances of McDaniel today told police he often carried a large roll of dollar bills with him.

Court of appeals sets aside Brandley's conviction

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals today set aside the capital murder conviction of Death Row inmate Clarence Brandley, saying the former high school janitor didn't receive a fair trial.

"I'm trying to hold back the tears," Brandley said after being informed of the court's ruling by an Associated Press reporter at the prison in Huntsville.

"It's made my Christmas. It's been a long time. It's something I didn't think was coming," said Brandley, who has been on Death Row for nearly nine years.

A black man whose case has been tinged with allegations of racially influenced prosecution, Brandley was convicted in the 1980 rape-slaying of Cheryl Fergeson, a 16-year-old white girl, at Conroe High School. The killing took place during a volleyball tournament.

His first trial ended with a hung jury. An all-white jury found him guilty in a second trial.

The appeals court, in a 6-3 opinion, said the state's investigative procedures in the Brandley case produced a trial that lacked "the rudiments of fairness."

The court ordered Brandley released to the Montgomery County sheriff for a possible new trial.

"Due process of law is the cornerstone of a civilized system of justice. Our society wins not only when the guilty are convicted but when criminal trials are fair; our system of justice suffers when an accused is treated unfairly," said the majority opinion written by Judge David A. Berchelmann Jr.

"The principles of due process embodied within the United States Constitution, must not, indeed cannot, countenance such blatant unfairness," the court said.

Dissenting from the opinion were judges Michael McCormick, W.C. Davis and Chuck Campbell.

"There is absolutely no evidence which remotely tends to ... show that he is not guilty," said the dissent authored by McCormick, the court's presiding judge.

But the majority disagreed.

"The violent end to Cheryl Fergeson's young life is both senseless and tragic. The end of a life so full of promise is a loss not only to her loved ones but also to our society as a hole," the majority court opinion said.

Glen Grant, co-owner of Houston's Willowbrook Feed and Garden, plays Santa Claus to Murphy the rabbit. The feed store's owners began the tradition of being Santa Claus to pets last year.

Feed store Santa Claus takes his licks without 'paws' for thought

HOUSTON (AP) — Santa Claus once again is posing for portraits this holiday season, but at one recent stop his chair was just a bale of hay, and the "little ones" could only offer a hearty lick or a wag of their tail as thanks.

At the Willowbrook Feed and Garden center, the waiting line for St. Nick was filled with dogs, cats, a couple of rabbits and even one bird. Some of the small ones shivered in their owners' arms, while the larger ones waited in an unruly line.

For most, it was their first time to sit with Santa.

The center's owners' started the pet portraits with Santa last year, and many pet owners showed up with their animals again last Saturday for a 1989 portrait.

"We figured a lot of people think of their pets as their children, and would like to get their picture made with Santa if they had the opportunity," said Glen Grant, co-owner of the store.

Grant and co-owner Jack Haire took shifts on the bale of hay, while Haire's wife took the pictures and a niece squeezed a squeaky toy to get the pet's attention.

Haire estimated they took about 400 pictures this year, up from the 140 they snapped last year. The owners will return this Saturday to pick up their pets' pictures, which are free.

Former Plainview coach gets life for man's murder

CONROE (AP) — Former Plainview Tennis Coach Jon David Weatherred will spend his life behind bars for the capital murder of a Houston-area medical supply salesman.

Weatherred, who was found guilty Dec. 6 of killing his ex-girlfriend's fiance, was sentenced to life in prison Tuesday by the six-man, six-woman jury in state District Judge Lee Alworth's court.

Weatherred could have been sentenced to death.

Weatherred, 31, was sentenced a year to the day after former girlfriend Pamela Beene found her fiance William Ralph "Bill" Strawn shot to death in her home in The Woodlands.

Ms. Beene, 31, had shared a stormy romance with Weatherred when she lived in West Texas. She left there after the summer of 1988 to be closer to her parents and begin a new teaching job in Conroe.

During the trial, Ms. Beene testified she had asked Weatherred to request that she stay, but he refused. She continued dating him until she met Strawn, 35, and the couple planned a wedding in early 1989.

Ms. Beene testified she tried to break off with Weatherred, but he became abusive to her on the phone and threatened to find out who she was dating.

Weatherred maintained he was in the Plainview-Lubbock area on the day of the shooting.

Defense attorney Daniel Hurley told jurors last week that Weatherred had paid a man $200 to have Strawn "roughed up" or "run off" from Ms. Beene, and that he had tried to get friends to lie about his whereabouts on the day of the slaying.

"Jon Weatherred made some big mistakes," Hurley said in his closing arguments last week.

"But it was never his purpose for Bill Strawn to be killed."

Prosecutor Rick Stover, however, said Weatherred "made mistake after mistake after mistake that ended in the murder of Bill Strawn."

Rustling ring broken

ROCKWALL (AP) — Authorities say they have cracked a ring belived to have stolen hundreds of cattle in Oklahoma and northern Texas.

One person has been arrested and four others are being sought, said Rockwell County Sheriff Jacques Kiere.

Lonnie Cleo York, 32, of Winnsboro, was being held in the Rockwell County Jail in lieu of $40,000 bail on a charge of theft or $750. He is accused of taking a cow from a Rockwall County rancher on Oct. 16.

Lubbock JP reinstated after confusion

LUBBOCK (AP) — Bill Ross is a justice of the peace again after he inadvertently resigned by announcing he intended to run for county judge.

County commissioners reinstated Ross Monday, after four days of controversy over whether Ross really had quit.

Ross announced at a news conference last Thursday morning that he was running for the Republican nomination for county judge, the county's highest elected office.

Hours later, in an afternoon news conference, Ross renounced his candidacy after learning of a clause in the Texas constitution that says a county official with more than a year left on his term cannot announce for another public office without forfeiting his post. Ross' term as justice of the peace expires Dec. 31, 1990.

There was disagreement over whether Ross really had officially announced his candidacy for county judge. Some suggested the announcement wasn't official until Ross had paid his filing fee or hired a campaign treasurer.

But Charlotte Bingham, an attorney with Lubbock County's district attorney's office, told commissioners Monday that Ross' candidacy was official when he announced it to reporters. His resignation was effective then, she said.

Ms. Bingham said she consulted with the secretary of state's and attorney general's offices and concluded that it would be legal for commissioners to reinstate Ross by appointing him. The vote was 3-2. Ironically, both Republican commissioners voted against appointing Ross, and all three Democrats voted to reinstate the Republican.

Before the vote, County Judge Rod Shaw asked Ross if he was a candidate for county judge.

"Well, judge, that's kind of a tough question right now," Ross answered. "As far as I'm concerned, I'm not."

Ross would not say whether he plans to announce his candidacy after the beginning of 1990, when he could retain his post as justice of the peace while campaigning for county judge.

Shaw, who is retiring at the end of this term, broke a 2-2 tie by voting to reinstate Ross.

Insurance board ponders auto rates

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Insurance opens its annual automobile insurance rate hearing today, with recommendations before it that range from a 2.3 percent decrease to a 12.8 percent increase.

The board's staff has recommended an average 6 percent increase in auto rates, which would cost drivers an extra $234 million a year.

The insurance industry is seeking a 12.8 percent increase, citing rising bodily injury claim costs. But the state attorney representing insurance consumers is recommending a 2.3 percent rate cut.

The consumer counsel's office, in its proposal, handles the industry's expenses and investment income in a different manner than the staff or industry.

"We calculate that they (insurers) are able to earn enough in investment income to sustain a loss in underwriting," said Ron Bordelon, deputy public counsel for insurance. The office also uses actual expense figures, rather than the industry's budgeted expenses, he said.

While acknowledging that bodily injury claim costs have risen, Bordelon said those costs are offset by a drop in physical damage expenses. The industry did not agree.

The state's return to a 65 mph speed limit on designated rural interstate highways is contributing to a 21.6 percent rise in bodily injury losses, said Grant Dostert, chairman of the Texas Automobile Insurance Service Office.

U.S. officials praise convicted drug lords' sentences

MEXICO CITY (AP) — U.S. officials are hailing the stiff sentences handed to a pair of Mexican drug lords convicted of masterminding the torture-slayings of a U.S. narcotics agent and his pilot.

"My heartfelt congratulations go to the government of Mexico and its judicial authorities for their decisive and correct action," said John Lawn, head of the U.S. Drug Enforce Administration in Washington.

Rafael Caro Quintero, 37, and Ernesto Rafael Fonesca Carrillo, 56, were convicted Tuesday of masterminding the 1985 murders of DEA agent Enrique Camarena and his Mexican pilot and sentenced to 40 years in prison.

"There is no chance of these sentences being reduced," Attorney General Enrique Castillo de Alvarez said.

Fernando Arias, a spokesman for Alvarez, said Caro Quintero and Fonseca would have to serve a total of 74 and 53 years respectively because of other drug-related convictions. There is no parole in drug related cases.

Lawn said the stiff sentences are "tantamount to life imprisonment" and send a stern warning to other drug kinpins.

"My heartfelt congratulations go to the government of Mexico and its judicial authorities for their decisive and correct action...(sentences are "tantamount to life imprisonment."

— John Lawn, head of DEA

He said it shows that "no matter how wealthy and powerful their infamous trade has made these narcomurderers, they are not beyond the reach of justice."

Don Hamilton, spokesman for U.S. drug czar William J. Bennett in Washington, also praised the convictions and the sentences.

"It's certainly nice to see people like Caro Quintero off the streets," he said. "I think the United States and Mexico will both be the better for it."

The Camarena case badly strained relations between Mexico and the United States in its early stages because Mexican authorities allowed Caro Quintero to escape to Costa Rica.

The United States virtually shut down the border at one point by searching every Mexican and vehicle trying to enter the United States.

DEA acting Deputy Administrator Terrence Burke said in Washington that he personally informed Camarena's widow and sister of the convictions.

"It was good to be able to call them with good news for once," he said. "They were very pleased that this action was taken by the courts of Mexico."

Caro Quintero was a middleman for Colombian cocaine cartels smuggling drugs to the United States. His story and the Camarena killing were the subject of a book and television movie in the United States, both called "Desperados."

He and Fonseca were tried earlier this year.

The convictions and sentences were announced Tuesday by Judge Tomas Hernandez Franco of the 4th Criminal Court in Guadalajara, a major drug trafficking center where Camerena was based.

He was kidnapped there on Feb. 7, 1985. His pilot, Alfredo Zavala Avelar, was abducted a few days later.

Their bullet-riddled, tortured bodies were found on March 5 in shallow graves on a ranch 60 miles southeast of Guadalajara in Jalisco state. Alvarez, the attorney general, was governor of Jalisco at the time.

Guadalajara, 350 miles west of Mexico City, is the state capital.

Both Camarena and Fonseca are multimillionaires whose assets include ranches, aircraft, luxury cars, houses, apartments, hotels and businesses which the government is in the process of confiscating.

Caro Quintero and Fonseca were also sentenced Tuesday on several other kidnapping, drug trafficking and weapons charges related to the Camarena case. The sentences, which will be served concurrently, add up to 116 years for Caro Quintero and 144 for Fonseca.

Caro Quintero was sentenced to 34 years in another drug case earlier this year and Fonseca was given 13 years. These sentences will run consecutively to those in the Camarena case.

Ten other men were sentenced to the maximum term of 40 years for taking part in the killings, and 13 other men received lesser sentences for their involvement in drug operations run by Caro Quintero and Fonseca.

Indian minister's daughter released

SRINAGAR, India (AP) — Kidnappers today freed a senior Cabinet minister's daughter they had held for six days after the government met their demand and released five jailed Moslem militants, officials said.

Rubaiya Sayeed, 22, was released two hours after the prisoners went free, thereby ending the first crisis of the 12-day-old government of Prime Minister V.P. Singh, state-run television reported.

The chairman of the militants' organization warned of future kidnappings unless the government "behaves."

The television flashed a news bulletin saying "Rubaiya Sayeed Freed," interrupting a cricket match between India and Pakistan.

Ms. Sayeed's father is Home Minister Mufti Mohammad Sayeed. She was kidnapped at gunpoint on Friday in Srinagar, the summer capital of Jammu-Kashmir state and a popular tourist resort, and the separatist Kashmir Liberation Front claimed responsibility.

Militants had threatened to kill Ms. Sayeed, a medical intern, unless their five jailed comrades were freed. The release followed haggling over the site of the swap and the safety of the prisoners.

The five were released at an undisclosed site in the city, culminating five days of negotiations between the government and the front, said the police officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

About two hours after the militants were released, a dazed Ms. Sayeed was dropped at a friend's house and then taken to her home. Later, she was to be flown to New Delhi for a reunion with her family.

"By the grace of the Almighty and the blessings of millions of my countrymen, Rubaiya has a new lease on life," a relieved Sayeed said after hearing his youngest daughter was safe. "Our ordeal of anxiety and agony has ended. Their prayers and good wishes have restored our child to us."

Sayeed, unshaven but smiling and wrapped in a brown shawl, condemned his daughter's captors.

"There is no bravery in attacking a girl. It is cowardly. You don't need guns and swords to attack a girl," he said. "They have lost the sympathy of the people in the state, in India and the world."

Among the freed militants was Abdul Hamid Sheikh, a top leader in the Kashmir Liberation Front, police said. Sheikh, who was arrested last month after being wounded in a clash with police, was taken by ambulance from a Srinagar hospital to the site and turned over to his organization.

The other four were identified as Noor Mohammad Kalwal, Mohammad Altaf Bhat, Sher Khan Azad and Javed Ahmed Zargar, officials said. All had been arrested on suspicion of subversive activities during the past year but no charges had been filed.

As news of the swap spread throughout the city, 3,000 people filled the streets, setting off firecrackers, waving Pakistan flags and shouting anti-India slogans.

In Pakistan, Amanullah Khan, chairman of the militants' group, said India had made "a wise step" and he hoped the government would adopt "a similar wise attitude toward the future of Kashmir and leave Kashmir honorably instead of waiting until it is shunted out and humiliated by Kashmiri freedom fighters."

Asked whether the swap would encourage the front to launch a campaign of kidnappings to secure its demands, Khan said: "It depends on how the Indian government behaves ... because they compelled us to take this step."

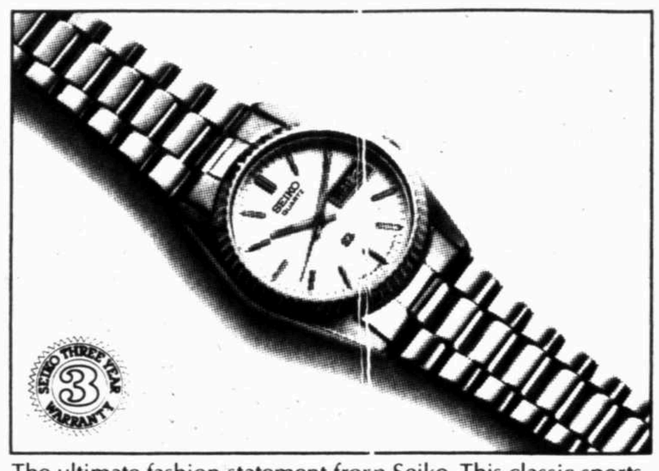

The Kashmir Liberation Front, which wants Jammu-Kashmir to either become independent or part of Islamic Pakistan, commands a large following in the Moslem-dominated Srinagar.

The front, formed in 1965, has often attacked the government and sponsored successful strikes in Jammu-Kashmir, the only Moslem majority state in the predominantly Hindu India.

At India's request, the government of Pakistan had appealed to the militants not to harm Ms. Sayeed.

Moslems make up 64 percent of the state's 5 million people, but comprise just 11 percent of India's 880 million people. Hindus account for about 80 percent of the population.

Soviet premier's plan still bans private property

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Nikolai I. Ryzhkov, spurning the demands of progressives, offered an economic reform plan today that continues the ban on private property and generally maintains central control of the economy.

The 2,250-member Congress interrupted the premier's nearly two-hour speech with applause only once. About half the deputies clapped when Ryzhkov declared that "the state is the owner of the means of production."

Ryzhkov's speech displeased progressives who pushed unsuccessfully on Tuesday to have the Congress take up legislation to liberalize private property ownership, and to consider lifting the Communist Party's monopoly on power.

Such deputies insist that Communist ideology must be divorced from economic policy if the country is to pull itself out of a grave economic crisis.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev successfully defeated attempts to address such broad ideological questions and got the agenda he wanted for the 10-day congress that opened Tuesday — a focus on the government's economic reform program.

But Ryzhkov's speech appeared more conservative than the reform plan unveiled last month by his deputy, Leonid Abalkin. That plan called for urgent measures to lift state controls on some prices, sell off some unprofitable state enterprises and lay the groundwork for a type of stock market.

Ryzhkov spoke at length about developing a "socialist market" economy that the state would control, but he gave few details.

He offered no specific proposals on letting market forces dictate prices, which are artifically low because of state subsidies on many goods.

Because of consumer fears that easing price controls will result in exorbitant prices, the government will discuss compensation for price increases beginning next year and only afterwards draft the reform, he said.

The premier also said the government would begin relying less on centralized planning in a second stage of reform beginning in 1993.

But his report appeared to contain nothing to give Soviets an incentive to work efficiently.

"We have to leave free to the market only that part of production that would not lead to unbalancing the economy," Ryzhkov said.

The official Tass news agency said Ryzhkov rejected demands for private property ownership.

He repeated previously announced plans to shift more production from heavy industry to consumer goods and to improve technology.

The reforms that Gorbachev began when he rose to power in 1985 are now being outpaced by changes in other East bloc nations.

In Moscow, many progressives said the government should, instead of releasing yet another economic report, offer specific legislation that the Congress could immediately take up.

They also criticized the ruling Communists for refusing to back the legalization of private property, which many economists consider crucial to ending chronic consumer shortages and industrial inefficiency.

"If we want a free economy, free from unnatural influence, let enterprises be enterprises without any ideological violence over them," said one deputy, Sergei Stankevich.

Human rights activist Andrei D. Sakharov, who had called for a two-hour general strike Monday to press for elimination of the Communists' constitutionally guaranteed leading role, urged the Congress on Tuesday to take up all parts of the Soviet Constitution that inhibit economic reform.

But Gorbachev on Tuesday dismissed that idea as too general, and cut him off when he tried to elaborate.

In a series of key tests on the opening day of the Congress, moves to broaden the debate were shot down. A bid to put the Communist Party's constitutional status on the agenda did best.

It received 839 votes, but 1,138 deputies voted against it. Yevgeny Yevtushenko, one of the country's best-known poets, called the result a "noble defeat" because 87 percent of the deputies are Communist Party members.

Addressing the Congress on Tuesday, Gorbachev said the economy needed "drastic reform," and that there so far had been no improvements.

Key pieces of economic legislation would liberalize property ownership rights and allow farmers to pass their interest in state-owned land on to their families.

Opposition at odds over Czech leader

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Opposition leaders, trying to keep a remarkable string of political victories intact, are locked in a standoff with the Communists over whether to make leading dissident Vaclav Havel the new president.

The presidential tussle is the latest battle for a popular opposition movement that in three weeks got the Communists to oust old Stalinist hard-liners and relinquish the party's 41-year monopoly on power.

Under the constitution, Parliament must elect a president within 14 days. That would be Dec. 23, two weeks after hard-liner Gustav Husak was forced to resign to satisfy the opposition.

The opposition is pressuring for quick decision. But Vasil Mohorita, a member of the Communist Politburo, said opposition leaders agreed during negotiations Tuesday that 14 days isn't enough time to choose a president.

Some Communist lawmakers want the choice to be made by public referendum. But the opposition, hoping to keep its momentum while it can, is pressing for a quicker decision.

Many opposition figures favor Havel, an playwright and oft-jailed dissident who is the emotional rallying point of the reform movement.

After discussions by constitutional lawyers from all parties on Tuesday, Mohorita said it might take from 45 days to 60 days for an election to be held, whether in Parliament or by a vote of the people.

Parliament was expected to resume debate today on the process.

Mohorita is a senior Communist who negotiated with the opposition the coalition government chosen last week. The Cabinet was the first to make Communists a minority in the government in four decades.

Mohorita conceded that Havel "represents something and in no way can we underestimate his position in society."

"What we are trying to find is the least complicated agreement," he said. He said the Communists were aware that "If Mr. Havel was not elected by Parliament, that would also create tensions. That's why we're in negotations."

But Havel, who was being denounced as an isolated, anti-Socialist dissident only a month ago, is apparently difficult for many Communists to accept as president.

Central Prague is plastered with posters pushing Havel's candidacy, and about 500 demonstrators stood outside Parliament shouting support for him Tuesday as deputies entered the Parliament building.

Mohorita said the Communists sought the quick solution to the impasse because "we are more or less facing a constitutional crisis," a reference to the 14-day deadline the constitution mandates.

Deputy Anton Blazej, speaking on behalf of the Communist deputies who dominate the 350-member parliament, proposed amending the constitution to allow for a presidential referendum within a month. It failed to pass.

Civic Forum, the opposition movement Havel has guided through the past three weeks of crisis, strongly rejects a referendum.

It said that although the idea seemed "enticingly democratic," it in fact would mean swiftly amending a constitution for the second time in less than three weeks, and could lead to a presidential campaign leaving the country "more divided than united."

The government instead should press ahead with free elections, the group said in a statement. Then, a new, freely elected Parliament would choose a new president.

"We are not concerned with whether Havel would have a better chance" in Parliament than in a referendum, said Civic Forum spokesman Lubos Dobrovsky. "We are concerned with democracy having a better chance."

Last week, Civic Forum indicated there was virtual agreement with the Communists that the president should be a Czech and non-party member, balancing the Communist premier, Marian Calfa, a Slovak.

Traditionally, top posts in Czechoslovakia have been divided between Czechs and Slovaks.

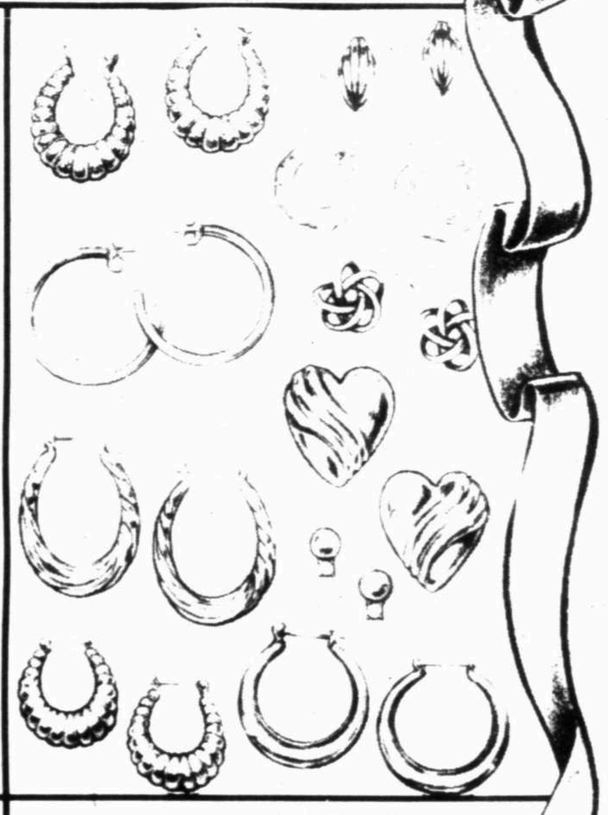

Alexander Dubcek, 68, the leader of the 1968 "Prague Spring" reforms that were crushed by a Soviet-led invasion, also is a candidate for president.

Others are Ladislav Adamec, who resigned as Communist premier last week after failing to reach an agreement with the opposition; and Cestmir Cisar, a "Prague Spring" leader who like Dubcek was expelled from the Communist Party in 1970 but has retained many Socialist ideals.

Three more blacks die in fighting

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Three more people have been killed in factional fighting between rival groups of blacks, bringing the death toll this month to 71, authorities said today.

In Inanda township near the port city of Durban, police said officers fatally shot a youth after their vehicle was attacked, a mob burned a man to death and another man was stabbed to death.

Police also reported more violence related to a six-week strike by more than 20,000 black employees of the state transport company, which runs rail and harbor operations nationwide. Five coaches were set afire and a constable was thrown to his death from a moving train near Kathlehong, east of Johannesburg.

South African Transport Services said it fired 2,477 more strikers, raising to 15,094 the number dismissed during the strike. The strikers are demanding an increase of their minimum monthly wage from $225 to $560.

The anti-apartheid Democratic Party said 13 of 71 reported killings around Durban since Dec. 1 have been in Inanda and 37 in nearby Ntuzuma. Several dozen other blacks have been killed elsewhere in Natal Province this month in an escalation of a political power struggle that has claimed about 2,500 lives in three years.

"A perception in some of the townships that the legal system has failed victims of the violence has given rise to people taking the law into their own hands," said Roy Ainslie, who heads an unrest monitoring group for the Democratic Party.

The main combatants are the United Democratic Front, a nationwide anti-apartheid coalition, and Inkatha, 1.5-million member political group headed by Zulu leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi.

Both groups oppose apartheid, but they have been battling each other for supremacy in Natal since late 1986.

The United Democratic Front, which is aligned with the outlawed African National Congress guerrilla movement, favors protests, strikes and sanctions to pressure the white-led government.

The relatively conservative Buthelezi does not support such measures and has been criticized by the front for participating in the black homeland system. Both groups concede they do not have full control of all their supporters.

Ainslie said the recent escalation of violence appears linked to attempts by Inkatha supporters to recruit new members in neighborhoods controlled by the United Democratic Front.

Criminal gangs with no political ties also have been taking advantage of the chaotic atmosphere in the townships, Ainslie said.

Hundreds of residents in the townships have fled their homes, and some are living with white friends or employers in Durban.

In a separate development, Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu was scheduled to visit the Crossroads shantytown outside Cape Town, where five people were killed and about 150 homes burned Sunday night in a local power struggle.

Mandela, de Klerk meet about possible black-white negotiations

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Jailed black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela, whose release is expected within weeks, met today with President F.W. de Klerk about the prospects for black-white political negotiations.

The meeting, announced by the Justice Ministry, was Mandela's second with a South African president this year. He met with President P.W. Botha on July 5, also at Tuynhuis, the presidential office in Cape Town.

The Justice Ministry said Mandela had requested the meeting and that de Klerk "welcomed the opportunity." It said further talks were expected next year.

The meeting "fitted in with Mr. de Klerk's program to consult with the full spectrum of political opinion concerning the mutual future of all South Africans," the statement said.

Mandela, leader of the outlawed African National Congress and the country's best known black leader, has been imprisoned since 1962 and is serving a life sentence for sabotage and plotting to overthrow the white-led government.

De Klerk, who took office in August, says he wants to end racial discrimination and extend political rights to South Africa's 28 million blacks within five years.

However, he opposes black majority rule and a one-man, one-vote system. He envisions some type of mechanism that will give whites veto power on major policy decisions.

At today's meeting, de Klerk and Mandela discussed "ways and means to address current obstacles in the way of meaningful dialogue," the Justice Ministry statement said. "Followup talks in the new year are envisaged."

The ministry said no further details about the substance of the talks would be released.

Justice Minister Kobie Coetsee and Constitutional Development Minister Gerrit Viljoen attended the meeting, the statement added.

All prominent black leaders, even conservative ones, say Mandela's release is a precondition for negotiations with the government. Most black leaders also are demanding the release of other security prisoners and the lifting of the 3½-year-old state of emergency before any talks begin.

Mandela, 71, is not likely to be released this year, but government sources have been quoted as saying he probably will be freed before Parliament convenes in early February.

De Klerk, since succeeding Botha, has ushered in several reforms that have eased political tension.

He has permitted huge anti-apartheid demonstrations, ordered desgregation of whites-only beaches, and proposed the repeal of the Separate Amenities Act, which permits the segregation of many public facilities.

Seven of Mandela's ANC colleagues were freed Oct. 15 in what was seen as a trial run for Mandela's release. There has been no upsurge in unrest related to their release and frequent appearances at anti-government meetings.

Mandela is held in a suburban-style staff residence at Victor Verster prison farm outside Cape Town and has been meeting regularly with a wide range of anti-apartheid activists.

Nazi war crime law may be changed

LONDON (NYT) — The House of Commons voted overwhelmingly to recommend changing British law so Nazi war criminals living in Britain can be prosecuted.

By a vote of 348-123 that crossed political lines, members of Parliament made the recommendation to change the current law, under which war criminals cannot be prosecuted for crimes committed abroad at a time they were not British citizens. The Conservative government must decide whether to introduce legislation to put the recommendation into effect, but that is considered highly likely.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher voted Tuesday for the measure, as did Neil Kinnock, leader of the opposition Labor Party. An inquiry commissioned by the government in 1988 concluded there was enough evidence to prosecute four men for their reported involvement in the massacre of thousands of Jews. One of the four has since died. It also identified 75 others who should be investigated further.

Judge, prosecutor killed by alleged drug traffickers

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Suspected drug cartel assassins killed a judge, a prosecutor and a bank official, part of a rise in bloodshed as traffickers seek to stop the extraditions of narcotics figures to the United States.

The three slain late Tuesday night were the latest victims in Colombia's 3-month-old war between drug smugglers and the government, police said.

The traffickers have said they would continue their campaign of bombings and assassinations unless the voters are allowed to decide whether to continue the policy of extraditing drug traffickers to the United States.

The government of President Virgilio Barco has said it will not let up on its crackdown on Colombia's powerful cocaine cartels.

Meanwhile, the Colombian city of Cartagena was chosen as the site of a drug summit in February that is expected to be attended by President Bush.

Bernard Aronson, assistant U.S. secretary of state for inter-American affairs, told a news conference in Bogota on Tuesday that the U.S. government had accepted the Caribbean port city, about 680 miles north of Bogota, as an acceptable site.

Presidents Barco, Bush, Jaime Paz Zamora of Bolivia and Alan Garcia of Peru are to attend the summit. Colombia, Peru and Bolivia all receive U.S. aid that is tied to the progress of their anti-drug efforts.

Ever since Barco declared an anti-narcotics war after a leading presidential candidate was assassinated on Aug. 18, Colombia has undergone a wave of killings, including a bombing last week that claimed 63 lives.

Officials also blame drug barons for the bombing of a Colombian jetliner on a domestic flight Nov. 27 that killed all 107 people aboard.

Gabriel Jaime Velez, 38, a prosecutor who handled cases against suspected drug traffickers, was one of the three people killed Tuesday, police said Tuesday. He was killed in the town of Envigado, six miles from Medellin, the home of the country's most powerful cocaine cartel.

Edgar Henao, 55, an engineer with the Inter-American Development Bank, was killed in Venecia, 37 miles southeast of Medellin, police said.

San Francisco registers changes as AIDS epidemic grows

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Evidence of the AIDS epidemic is everywhere in this city, from the political coalitions formed to battle the lethal illness to the millions being spent to care for its victims.

Most residents know of someone who has AIDS. The health care system is saturated, local officials are pleading for federal funds and the gay community has rallied as never before.

San Francisco has the nation's highest per-capita incidence of AIDS. Authorities expect that by the end of the year more than 24,000 residents will have been infected with the virus. Of 7,416 people reported with full-blown AIDS, 4,827 have died.

Eight years after AIDS began to cut its deadly swath across San Francisco, changes are apparent.

Instead of organizing to get government "off our backs and out of our bedrooms," gay activists have launched a powerful movement to make government work for them.

"We realized that government did have a role to play in our lives," said Ron Braithwaite, president of the Alice B. Toklas Lesbian and Gay Democratic Club.

As gay men and lesbians work together on AIDS, they are forging an alliance some believe will exert unprecedented influence.

"It has made us politically stronger, wiser and better organized than we have ever been," said Jean Harris, an aide to Board of Supervisors President Harry Britt and chairwoman of the Gay and Lesbian Caucus of the California Democratic Party.

The city has become an international model for low-cost, patient-oriented AIDS care that relies on an enormous base of volunteers, but the cost of the epidemic is daunting.

Total AIDS spending this year is estimated at $115 million, according to mayoral aide Susan Ehrlich. Most of the $80 million from the private sector will come from private health insurers, the city will add $7.6 million, and state and federal government will provide the rest, she said.

And officials expect an additional $30 million will be needed when the city formally endorses early care programs for people without symptoms.

And officials expect an additional $30 million will be needed when the city formally endorses early care programs for people without symptoms.

The city's AIDS Office has 75 employees and a budget this year of $25 million, including state and federal funds, to coordinate more than 200 different AIDS organizations and service providers. When it was established in 1983, the office had one director, a secretary and $150,000.

At San Francisco General Hospital, AIDS care will cost between $15 million and $20 million this year, executive director Phil Sowa said. The 20 beds designated for AIDS patients are always full and 20 overflow patients are hospitalized in different wards, he said.

A crisis looms in the city's inability to provide sufficient post-hospital care at skilled nursing facilities and board-and-care homes, he said.

Many speak of the "talent drain" as the city loses so many people in their prime. The impact can be devastating.

"Who would've thought I'd be reading the obits at 40? Every day," said Scott Smith, former lover and business partner of Harvey Milk, the city's first openly gay supervisor, who was slain in 1978 along with Mayor George Moscone.

Smith said he can't bear to replace his outdated address book "and leave out all the names that wouldn't move into the new one."

AIDS also has politicized a new generation of activists who scrutinize anything having to do with the disease.

Organizations like Stop AIDS Now Or Else have staged controversial protests like blockading the Golden Gate Bridge and disrupting the glittery opening night of the opera season to call attention to demands for faster action on drug testing and increased financing for AIDS care and research.

"I think AIDS is one of the new exciting things to be radical about," said Eric Rofes, executive director of the Shanti Project, a volunteer-based AIDS agency that serves 1,200 a month.

In the gay community, AIDS prevention and education remain a top priority.

Some credit AIDS with triggering a trend toward long-term, committed relationships between gay men, while others say the health crisis simply speeded up a process that began before AIDS.

"I believe that without AIDS, the picture would look very similar in terms of more coupling and more (adopted) children," said Rofes.

Public health experts worry that their greatest challenge in the gay community now is keeping the "safe sex" message alive.

Researchers have noted a slight increase in the number of gay men who are engaging in unsafe sex again, despite the high risk. About half of the gay men in the city are believed to be infected with HIV.

Having saturated their own community with prevention information, gays are forming alliances with other high-risk groups, including intravenous drug users.

Fighting AIDS also has united gay men and lesbians.

Although some doubt the durability of the alliance, Harris points to Britt's domestic partnership legislation as a byproduct of the AIDS epidemic and a signal of future struggles.

The proposal, which was narrowly defeated by city voters in November, would have recognized unions between unmarried live-in lovers who register with the city, and would have extended visitation and bereavement-leave rights to city workers.

The proposal had strong backing from gays in the age of AIDS who had been denied hospital access to their dying lovers or were turned down when requesting time off to attend funerals, Harris said.

Large corporations have developed AIDS education programs and provide referrals for employees seeking counseling or other services.

But many small businesses cannot get affordable health coverage, according to Scott Lauge, president of the Small Business Network of San Francisco.

UTPB issue ripe for compromise

The University of Texas of the Permian Basin's Development Board deserves a pat on the back for jumping into the fray over four-year status for the Odessa school.

Realizing the importance of moving the issue off high-center, the development board has drafted a compromise version of legislation which would expand the Odessa campus to full four-year curriculum while creating a presence for the school in Midland.

UTPB's Midland presence would take the form of a building with 20 to 25 classrooms on part of the 25-acre site adjacent to the Midland College campus.

The board, with members from both cities, fronted the idea in hopes of bringing the area's two state representatives — and their constituents — together behind a single bill.

With the adjournment of the latest special session of the Legislature, another opportunity for compromise has been squandered, but a sense of urgency remains in developing a dually accepted plan that can be presented during the next session, whenever that may be.

The remaining differences, while apparently minor on the surface, represent a significant gulf in the thinking between some factions of Midlanders and Odessans.

The time has come to realize that not every eventuality can be legislated out of existence or provided for adequately. After all the foreseeable bases have been covered, the 'i's dotted and 't's crossed and the concerns of both camps addressed comes the time for an ultimate action.

That leap of faith requires something that doesn't come easily to longtime residents of either city — TRUST.

An elusive commodity, trust is the bridge that can carry the promise of UTPB's four-year potential to realization.

Midland's role as a full-fledged partner in a four-year university must be ensured through whatever legislative measure can be worked out. In turn, the motives in that role must be accepted at face value.

A presence of the school in Midland is not the first step toward shifting the entire campus 20 miles east, merely tangible evidence in a partnership that can allow the university to flourish with both cities' efforts squarely behind it.

Likewise, a commitment by Odessa to Midland construction should be welcomed even if an ironclad guarantee can't be delivered. If a compromise can be worked out locally, indications are strong that the necessary executive and legislative steps can be taken at the state level to realize a shared vision.

Once that hurdle is cleared, the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board and the University of Texas Board of Regents will maintain the upper hand in school operations and in seeing to it that both parties live up to their side of a compromise agreement.

It behooves both cities and the entire West Texas region to address the matter of four-year status as a positive issue, rather than getting bogged down in divisiveness.

The time has come to move ahead together to make a two-city Permian Basin university thrive.

Give us old bank names

Herewith a suggestion to all the Midland banks who have named-changed 14 times and spent lots of dollars in getting us to memorize unmemorable logos.

Give us all a New Year's gift by going back to your old names. We can't keep your genealogies straight — and we have a lot of residual good will to confer if only we knew who you are. Your profits would be just as usable to your owners if earned under those grand old names such as First National, Midland National, and Commercial Bank. Somehow they don't sound quite as cutesy as some of the modern ones.

Come on, folks. Fire your politburos and get back to fundamentals. Give us all a happy 1990.

Board decision endorsed

I am a lawyer practicing in Odessa. A large part of my practice comes from representing employees injured on their jobs.

I endorse the decision of the Industrial Accident Board to reduce attorney's fees at the board level from twenty-five to fifteen percent. The decision may provide more money to injured workers and reduce litigation. If an injured worker is property represented by counsel, the decision should not make that person more vulnerable to the insurers at the administrative level of worker's compensation.

For me, most expense and, increasingly, more effort is expended preparing a compensation claim for trial after the Industrial Accident board has made an award. Therefore, the reduction in fees for claims resolved through the board is bearable.

One proposal being considered by the legislature is the statutory reduction of the twenty-five percent attorney's fee effective even where the claim must be prepared for trial. A Plaintiff attorney's expense in preparing a compensation claim for trial is considerable, besides being a gamble. Such a statutory reduction would serve to starve Plaintiff attorneys out, and leave claimants to fend for themselves against insurance adjusters and insurance lawyers. Ironically, insurance companies appeal, by far, the greater number of Board awards to the district court.

Legislation which eliminates or even compromises on injured worker's right to trial by jury and/or right to hire an attorney on a contingency fee basis is unconscionable and will not lower insurance rates even a fraction of a percentage point. Who among you, business owners, has been guaranteed a premium drop effective the day after your employees get scammed out of their opportunity to retain counsel when making a compensation claim?

U.S. urges Syria to expel terrorist Jibril

WASHINGTON — President Bush is about to issue an ultimatum to Syria — throw terrorist Ahmed Jibril out of the country or lose diplomatic ties with America.

Intelligence sources tell us that U.S. officials believe it was Jibril who arranged to blow up Pan Am flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, last Dec. 21, killing 259 passengers, most of them Americans.

Syrian President Hafez Assad has given refuge to Jibril, a Palestinian. But if Assad wants to stay in the good graces of the Bush administration, Jibril has to go.

The U.S. ambassador to Syria, Edward Djerejian, will conduct the negotiations with Assad. The bottom line will be that Assad must turn Jibril over to the United States for prosecution, or, at the very least, kick him out of Syria. (One source says an initial message of this nature was delivered to Assad on Nov. 30.)

Iran contracted for the "hit," in retaliation for the accidental downing of an Iranian airliner by the USS Vincennes on July 3, 1988, in the Persian Gulf. All 290 passengers on that plane were killed.

Iran hired Jibril and his Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine — General Command. He was paid at least $2 million and possibly as much as $10 million, according to Central Intelligence Agency sources.

Jibril needed the cash badly because his traditional patrons, Assad and Libya's Moammar Gadhafi, cried poverty when he asked for his 1988 stipend of $20 million plus. Jibril needs money to keep his 500 terrorists supplied with food and weapons for raids on Israel.

But Jibril isn't in the terrorism business just for the cash. He hates Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasir Arafat, and uses acts of terrorism to embarrass and stymie him. Jibril has tried on many occasions to murder Arafat. He loathes any sign that Arafat may be making peace with Israel or the United States. Several weeks before the Pan Am bombing, Arafat had officially recognized Israel's right to exist and had opened talks with the United States. The Pan Am bombing was Jibril's way of frustrating those negotiations.

The CIA and British intelligence now believe Assad either knew about the bombing beforehand or was an accessory after the fact to protect Jibril. For several decades Jibril hasn't made a move without Syrian permission.

Iran has denied any complicity in the Pan Am bombing. Last May, in an exclusive interview with us, Jibril also declared that he is innocent. His long-winded denial was full of holes. Knowledgeable State Department sources say Jibril's admission in that interview of his affection for Iran hastened the U.S. government conclusion that he was responsible for Pan Am 103.

The unresolved question is whether Assad knew about it. State Department sources tell us that it's not imperative to prove that Assad knew. All they plan to do is lay out some evidence before Assad in Damascus and then insist that Jibril be extradited or banished.

Assad is generally not a man to be bullied, but U.S. diplomats think he will fold this time. He is isolated from the world community and economically strapped. The Soviets have secretly served him notice that they can't continue to support him in the style to which he has become accustomed. He needs to make friends with the West and he can't afford to have a wart like Jibril on his nose.

Assad promised publicly last March that those responsible for the bombing would be punished, but he said he thought it "highly improbable" that Jibril was guilty. Assad said he needed proof.

His defense minister, Gen. Mustafa Tlas, needed no proof to recklessly charge last January that Israel blew up the plane by duping an American GI into carrying the bomb thinking he was smuggling $500,000 worth of diamonds.

AMATEUR NIGHT — Sources in the Drug Enforcement Administration have a theory about why Washington, D.C., has experienced a bumper crop of drug-related murders in the past two years. Amateurs are battling over drug distribution. In New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, organized gangs already control the streets. Gun battles aren't necessary to determine who distributes the drugs. But Washington is relatively new to the drug business and the amateurs are still fighting their turf battles.

Worrywarts consider end of one superpower

WASHINGTON — "Two minutes to midnight" was the symbol used by scientists worried about a world approaching nuclear war.

The hands of their analog clock have been moving counterclockwise as the threat recedes; it seems almost to be morning in the world.

William Safire

Does this international unclenching of fists mean that all our strategic worrywarts have relaxed?

Nope; we pay them to consider the downside of every uplift. I ran into one on the street in front of the office.

"For the first time," he gloomed, "we face the possibility that one of the superpowers will disintegrate."

Met by an incredulous look, he pressed on:

"The momentum in Eastern Europe may well lead to Baltic independence, a move for secession in the Ukraine and Moldavia, ethnic fighting in Armenia and Azerbaijan, more Georgian riots, strikes, hunger, repression and a split in the army — at least grant the possibility of civil unrest and civil upheaval, if not actually civil war."

I agreed to entertain that violent scenario as a remote possibility: 5 percent, tops.

"One chance in twenty, then" — these types calculate rapidly — "of disintegration. At that moment of extreme tension, which faction in the Soviet Union would control the nuclear weaponry? Whose finger will be on the button?"

No easy answer; I recalled that during the '60s and '70s, Leonid Brezhnev's distrust of the military led him to put a safety catch on his nuclear trigger: the Red Army's Strategic Rocket Forces controlled the missiles, but the warheads were under the command of the KGB.

Subsequently, according to the 1987 Brookings book "Managing Nuclear Operations," the party-army-KGB control went through the Politburo's Defense Council — the Communist Party's general secretary at its head, with the Red Army chief, KGB chairman and others at his side.

Perhaps that is still the Soviet command control.

At Brezhnev's funeral, films showed Yuri Andropov followed by a man carrying a satchel presumably containing nuclear release codes — just as we have an officer close to the U.S. president carrying "the football." (He was aboard Mr. Bush's bobbing dinghy at Malta, but his Soviet counterpart was nowhere to be seen near Mr. Gorbachev on the Gorky.)

"Suppose Gorbachev is forced out," worried my interlocutor, "or forces other factions out, or suppose the occupation troops get in a firefight with indigenous troops. Who then controls the capacity to launch a strike?"

At moments when a superpower leader is tottering, his associates think about chains of command.

I recalled suspenseful days approaching the Nixon resignation, when it was reported that Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger interposed himself between the commander in chief and the rest of the armed forces.

Jim is an investment banker with an office upstairs in my building. I went up to find out what happened when times were tense.

"It was not Nixon's style to phone the Joint Chiefs and order them to do this or that," the former Pentagon chief and CIA director related.

"I was concerned that perhaps somebody in the White House might presume to act in RN's behalf, so I called the Pentagon and told the Joint Chiefs that I was to be informed immediately about any communication from the White House."

If extraordinary caution was exercised in a democracy, where the passage of power is publicized, surely a system of transition restraints would be needed in the Kremlin, especially when collective leadership no longer holds sway.

I tossed out a thought: Wouldn't it be a confidence-building measure for both superpowers, in negotiating the Start treaty reducing nuclear missiles, to reveal to each other their nuclear command and control procedures?

Jim chewed that over and nodded.

"In view of the mutual desire for an arms treaty," he said slowly enough for me to write it down, "we really ought to learn enough about their command procedure so we can have confidence in its control, and they can have confidence that we have confidence in their command and control capability in times of crisis."

Our negotiators in Geneva have the whip on their backs to produce documents for the next summit talks, but the world would be safer if this interchange of triggering information could be added to the agenda.

Verifiable control assurances would not substitute for the end of the dangerous occupation of Eastern Europe, but it would push that nuclear clock back further toward the cold dawn.

Help, there's a filthy picture at the gallery

I was passing an art gallery the other day and went in to see what was going on. There were only three people in the gallery, including the guard. I glanced over the seascapes and then strolled into the next room where I couldn't believe my eyes. On the wall for all to see was a giant oil painting of a nude lady, eating an avocado. The title of it was "Bare-breasted Woman Contemplating Her Indoor Swimming Pool" by Locomanni.

Art Buchwald

I was so horrified that I ran to the door screaming, "Help, filthy pictures, pornography, dirty, dirty, dirty." It didn't take long for my cries to be answered. People started to pour in from everywhere, many of them pushing me aside to get to the painting.

The mob stared in disbelief and then looked at the nude some more.

One man bellowed, "Call Jesse Helms."

Another said, "Call the vice squad."

Still another yelled, "I don't care who you call, but call somebody."

Visitors who couldn't get into the room were shouting to those already there, "Move out. We want to see the filthy pictures and be shocked, too."

The guard attempted to keep order. "I can't understand it. Nobody's been in this gallery for years. Now everyone wants to get in."

"You can't believe obscene art unless you see it for yourself," I told him. "Is it true that this show was sponsored by the National Foundation for the Arts?"

He replied, "Beats me. I only work here. I don't have nothing to do with what they put on the walls. You think that Mr. Helms is going to get me fired?"

"I hope so. He says that anyone who abets and encourages the dissemination of life-like human bodies on a wall, with taxpayers' money, is showing contempt for him and North Carolina."

A Fine Arts Mounted Policeman pushed through the crowd. "There it is," an aide said, showing him the painting.

"Oh, my God. It's a nude with no clothes on," the Arts official gasped. "We didn't know. We gave the money because we heard it was going to be an exhibition of North Carolina tobacco butts. They didn't tell us they were going to display pictures of harlots."

The guard asked, "Are you going to shoot it?"

The mounted cop answered, "No, we're not permitted to shoot paintings that we don't own. However, we can ask for the foundation money back if we have a reason. Let me see the catalogue."

We all gathered around him as he riffled through the pages. "This is awful. The program attacks every great American senator connected with the art world. We're going to demand a refund of our $10,000 immediately."

The taxpayers in the gallery cheered.

"Hang the curator," someone yelled.

"Run all art perverts out of town," a bag lady shouted.

The police official turned to me and said, "Thank heavens you discovered this masterpiece before any children came here on their Christmas vacations. It's a citizen's duty to report pornography whenever he sees it."

I responded modestly, "Or (ital) thinks (unital) he sees it. You people can't be everywhere."

Someone rushed in and spoke to the guard, "The line is six blocks long and getting longer. Everybody is afraid that you will take the dirty, filthy picture down before they can get a look at it."

Cyprus becoming key Mideast listening post

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The United States, the Soviet Union and China are building large new embassies in Nicosia, adding new emphasis to Cyprus as a key Middle East listening post.

The divided island in the eastern Mediterranean has more foreign diplomats, intelligence agents, foreign soldiers and journalists than larger Arab capitals.

Its importance as an intelligence-gathering base grew as Westerners fled war and terrorism in Beirut.

"Cyprus really is on the crossroads," said Vladimir A. Chizkhov, first secretary at the Soviet Embassy.

"It's a small country but definitely its role is greater than its size, because it's on the threshhold of the Middle East, and, of course, it is also the location of the Cyprus problem."

Cyprus has been divided since the Turkish army invaded in July 1974, to keep the island, which has a Greek majority, from uniting with Greece.

The Turks seized the northern third of the island, which the Turkish Cypriot minority declared a breakaway republic in 1983. Only Turkey recognizes it.

While Greek Cypriot newspapers have described the new Soviet embassy as a "palace," the U.S. Embassy under construction right across the street is called a "fortress."

The $30-million American building is designed mainly to be secure against attack. Some walls are nearly three feet thick. Set well back from the street, the building is surrounded by a high concrete wall and a double fence.

Direct access is impossible. Visitors must enter through a gate away from the main building, then make a sharp turn left and pass through another gate.

Metochiou Street, on which U.S. and Soviet embassies are situated, has gained the nickname "Microwave Alley" because of the potential for the two superpowers to spy on each other.

The graceful, colonnaded entrance to the new Soviet chancery is in sharp contrast to the American building; only minimal security is in evidence.

The new Chinese embassy is done in pagoda-like architecture.

Nicosia also has an Israeli Embassy and a mission of the Palestine Liberation Organization. Israeli Mossad secret service operatives move about the island along with senior PLO figures, and Libyan and Syrian agents.

Iran opened an embassy recently. Canada set up an immigration office to deal with the flood of Lebanese and Iranians seeking visas.

International news organizations, including The Associated Press, have set up Middle East listening posts in Nicosia as well. One of their tasks is to monitor Iran's television and radio broadcasts.

Cyprus has excellent telecommunications and airline links with the region.

Man entertains retirees with his art of square-dance calling

NEDERLAND, Texas (AP) — James Powell was born with rhythm and timing. And that's just for starters.

He also was blessed with a smooth set of pipes that mesh the patter of square-dance calling with the easy vocals of western swing.

"The singing is what separates the great callers from good ones," he says. "And either you got it or you ain't."

Powell talks about the art of square-dance calling during a break from leading the Groves Promenaders in a senior center show. Usually the Promenaders pay Powell for his services, but the only pay he receives from entertaining senior citizens is the joy on their faces.

Back on the dance floor, Powell, 68, spins a record, flirts with the audience and beckons his dancers back. The Promenaders are retirees, not much younger than their audience, but in Powell's hands they are spry. Spinning, swirling and sashaying, the ladies reveal amazingly lissome legs under yards of lace.

"I love the music and the way the ladies' skirts move," says Janet Kares, watching from a front-row seat. "And they look like they are having so much fun."

The dancers don't miss a move, producing the smooth, sandy sound of sliding feet.

"I didn't think we had so many young people," W.R. Turbeville says, joking from the sidelines.

Grover Austin, 74, smiles at the notion he and fellow Promenaders are fast on their feet. "Well, we're not dead yet," he says.

Powell eases up a bit on the next dance, doing Hank Williams proud with a gentle rendition of "Your Cheatin' Heart." The idea is to lure some of the audience into dancing a waltz. But these folks prefer watching the pros.

Erect and graceful, promenador Ray Goutierez, 80, waltzes his wife Gert, 76, lightly across the floor. Married for 57 years, the Goutierezes began square dancing 12 years ago. "We've been dancing all our lives," Gert says.

Her husband says the secret to square dancing lies with the ears. "You have to listen to the caller and not follow the other guy," Ray says.

Powell says great dancers are like great callers: they are born. "And some of them just never get the hang of it."

Powell has about 4,000 different calls he can mix and match as he pleases. "You can call for a week and not use all of them," he says.

And if he sees an eager dancer second-guessing him, he slips in a surprise. "I like to throw 'em a kind of curve so they'll start listening in again."

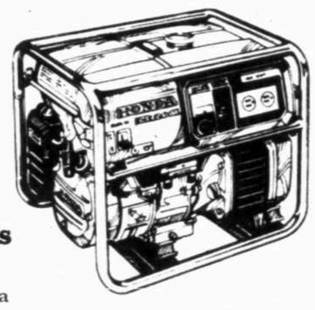

The tenor learned the singing part of calling as a member of a quartet delivering country tunes back in the 1950s.

"We're gonna finish up with a patter 'cause it's gonna be short," Powell tells his zestful dancers. "Patter is what the callers do that can't sing," he teases.

Powell says he volunteers his time at area senior centers to spread a little happiness. "Just getting people up off their behinds and dancing or if they can't get up, maybe it's just getting them to wiggling a toe or nodding up and down, or tapping a cane, and you know you got to them," he says. "If I can make one person happy then I know I've done something."

Clements says Bunton to design judicial plan

By RICK BROWN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements said Tuesday a federal judge probably will change the at-large judicial election system in nine counties, including Midland and Ector, making a spring special legislative session on the issue unnecessary.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton of Midland is considering an interim plan that would apply only to the nine counties until 1991, said Clements, who met with the judge for about an hour Monday.

Bunton ruled in November that judicial elections in the counties — which also include Dallas, Harris, Bexar, Tarrant, Travis, Lubbock and Jefferson — are illegal because they dilute minority voting strengh.

The election system they share, in which judges are elected in countywide, partisan, at-large voting, is the same throughout the state.

In 1991, the Legislature will overhaul the statewide judicial election system through redistricting, but the state may appeal the temporary plan, Clements said.

"If the interim plan is disruptive to the judiciary, it should be appealed," said Clements. "It is imperative that before a disruptive system is implemented — even a temporary one — that the U.S. Supreme Court be allowed to review the matter."

Clements said state leadership will refrain from presenting its own interim system to Bunton, who is gathering suggestions for alternatives and may issue a ruling before Jan. 1.

"I suspect that he already has his own plan in mind," the governor said.

Clements met with Bunton in Pecos Monday, afterward saying he wanted to appoint a task force to develop alternatives that would undergo legislative debate in late spring.

The meeting was "hopefully productive," the governor said. Bunton had given the Legislature until Jan. 3 to fashion an alternative.

During the special session that ended Tuesday with approval of a worker's compensation bill, lawmakers devoted a few committee meetings to judicial selection, but endorsed no legislation.

Clements, who controls special session agendas, had said he would not open the session to any other issue besides worker's compensation.

House Speaker Gib Lewis said Tuesday that the judicial selection issue has divided the Legislature nearly as much as workers compensation, which took 11 months to resolve.

With disagreements between political parties and even among factions that successfully challenged the system, the Fort Worth Democrat said, "If I had the answer, I'd have already laid it out on the table."

Lewis held out a slim hope that a task force with four members each appointed by him, the governor and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby would have enough time to develop a consensus on the issue.

"Most judges would like to see legislative action take place in the Legislature," he said, but he acknowledged that the panel would not hold substantive meetings until after Jan. 1.

Clements, who has dealt with judicial orders on state prison overcrowding, school finance, mental health, and other issues, said he is "not one to welcome judges' plans."

But he noted that Bunton specifically mentioned the Mississippi Legislature, which was faced with almost the same situation on judicial selection and took four years to find a solution.

"I'm not going to wait for such a long, drawn-out process,' " Clements quoted Bunton as saying.

The governor said he "made it clear" to the judge that he, Lewis and Hobby support a "merit-election" system in which local commissions appoint judicial candidates who then submit to "yes-no" elections.

However, none of the three will formally send such a proposal to Bunton for consideration as an interim plan, the governor said, explaining that the judge "understands the plan full well."

"Probably what he is going to do is put a plan on us, so to speak," said Clements, "and then it will become a matter" of appealing.

GOP chairman seeks ruling on return of filing fees

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland County Republican Party chairman Bro Seltzer wants the secretary of state to decide whether district judge candidates can get their filing fees back if a federal judge bars 1990 judicial elections.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton has indicated he will wait until Jan. 3 — the day after the filing deadline — to decide whether he will prohibit primary elections for district judges in nine counties, including Midland and Ector.

In a Nov. 8 ruling, Bunton said the present at-large method of electing state district judges in the state's nine largest counties dilutes the voting strength of blacks and Hispanics in violation of the Voting Rights Act.

Bunton had given the state until Jan. 3 to fashion an interim alternative and threatened to bar judicial elections if the Legislature failed to act.

Seltzer said several local candidates for district judge want to know if their $1,200 filing fees could be refunded should Bunton halt the primary or general elections.

"They believe it's unfair for them to have to provide the greatest portion of the local primary dollars when they may not be allowed to run for that office. I agree," he said.

The most recent primary and runoff election carried a price tag of about $5,500 for the Republican Party and $6,500 Democratic Party, according to elections administrator Bettye Calvert. She said the difference was based on the fact that Democrats ordered more ballots.

Filing for a place on the primary ballot opened Dec. 3 and closes Jan. 2.

The Election Code prohibits filing fee refunds to candidates unless:

- The candidate dies;
- The candidate is declared ineligible;
- The candidate's application for a place on the ballot is determined not to comply with the requirements as to form and procedure that it must satisfy for the candidate's name to be placed on the ballot.

Ann McGheehan, an attorney in the secretary of state's office, said an answer to Seltzer's question is expected in about two weeks.

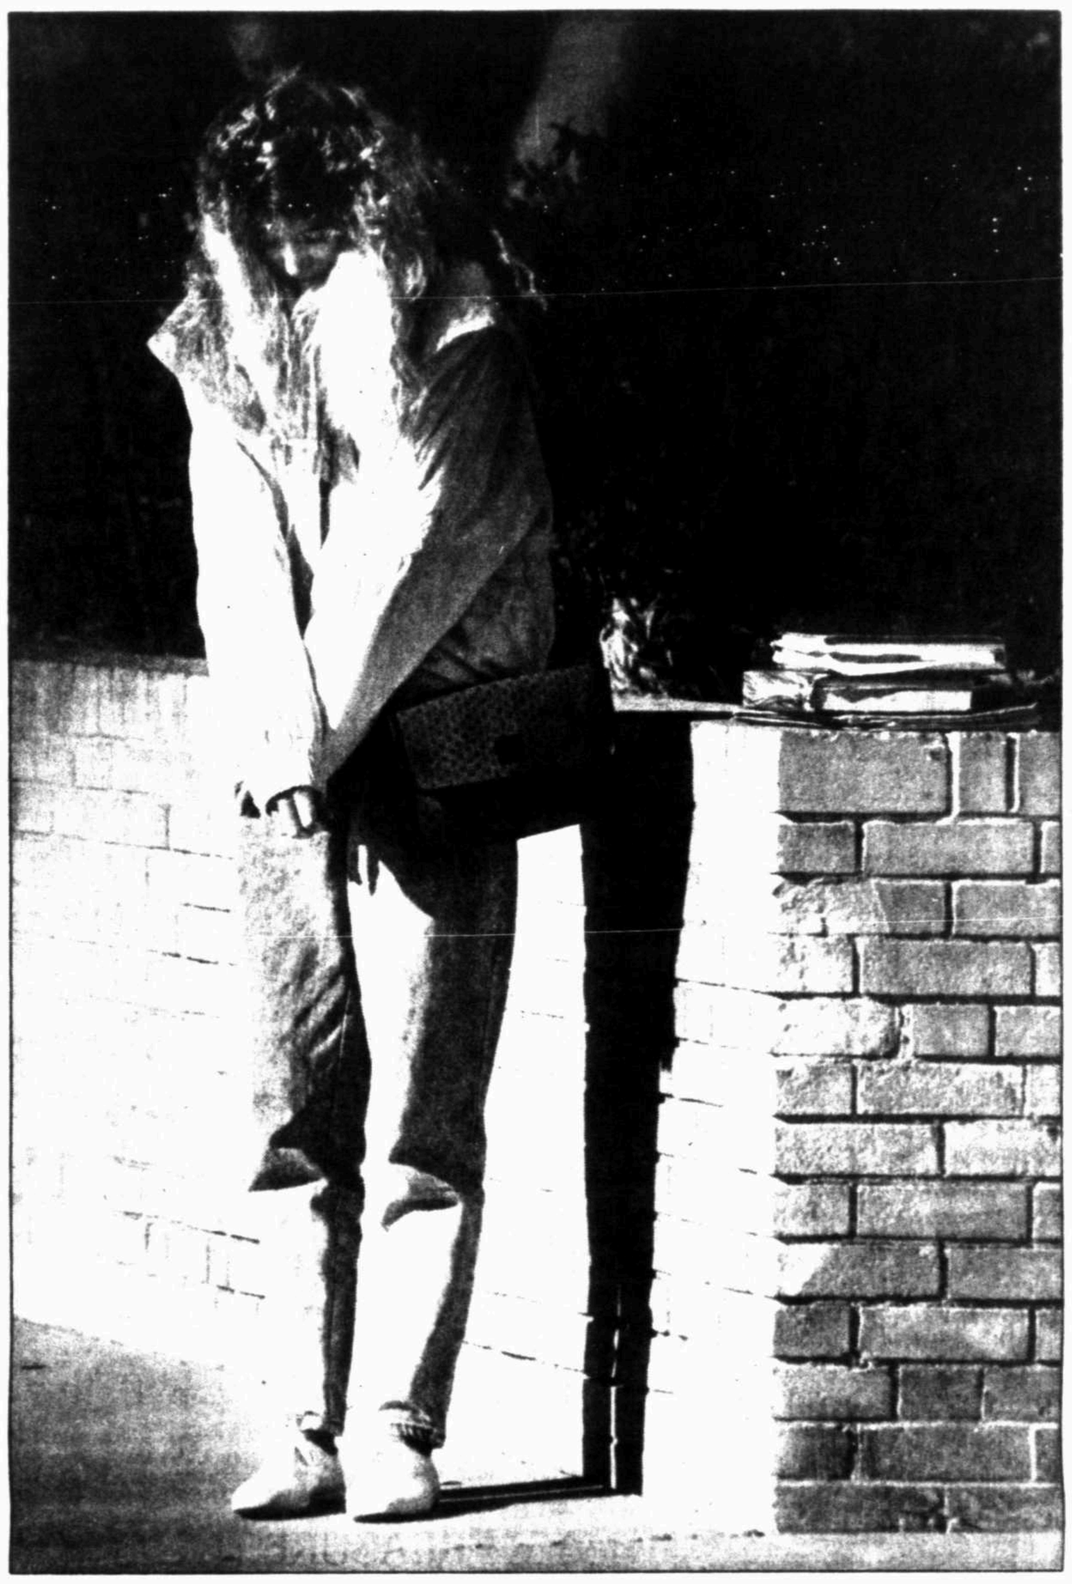

The other affected counties include Harris, Dallas, Travis, Tarrant, Bexar, Lubbock and Jefferson.

There are two state district court races appearing on the Midland County ballot in 1990.

Seltzer said the issue also could apply to county court at law races if minorities file suit attacking the at-large method of electing judges to statutory county courts at law.

Seltzer said it's likely that Midland County would be included in such a suit, and that an injunction or restraining order will be a requested remedy to prevent the future election of judges to those courts.

The filing fee for a candidate for Midland County court at law judge is also $1,200.

Need to Read hopes bee spells success

From Staff Reports

Employees of Midland businesses and corporations will test their spelling talents for a good cause early next year in the first corporate spelling bee for literacy, J. Murphy Horton, president of Midland Need to Read, said today.

The bee, which will benefit Need to Read, will be held Feb. 23, 1990, at Midland Center. The Midland Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the event and underwrite expenses.

Beginning this week, Need to Read board members will contact leading local firms, Horton said. These visits, which were preceded by letters earlier this month, are expected to draw a slate of three-person teams to compete for the honor of being named Midland's best corporate spellers, with trophies awarded to the winning teams.

Between 12 and 15 teams will battle for the title from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Midland Center. Conducted much like the annual student spelling bee — except that team members may collaborate on spelling — all team members will receive T-shirts and lunch the day of the bee.

Proceeds will benefit Midland Need to Read, which now has more than 120 one-on-one tutoring pairs, in addition to several classes, all taught by volunteers. Need to Read trains tutors, then matches them with adults who need to enhance their reading skills in order to improve their lives and those of their families.

Funds will come from corporate sponsorships of $500 each. Participating companies are encouraged to bring their own cheering squads of company employees. Lunch tickets for the event will be available for $6 each, which will cover the meal's cost.

In addition, the literacy organization is hoping corporate spelling teams can help raise additional funds by collecting pledges from friends and co-workers for every round they complete successfully.

MISD board rejects Freeport tax exemption

By DAVID MORRIS
Staff Writer

The Midland Independent School District board of trustees joined with the city and county Tuesday night in voting to refuse the Freeport tax exemption approved by Texas voters in the November election.

Ron Stegall, chief appraiser for the Midland taxing district, told board members at their meeting Tuesday that the exemption could mean a $110 million reduction in the MISD tax base.

At the current tax rate, that translates into a loss of about $1.14 million, MISD business manager Don Furgeson said.

The Freeport amendment exempts goods marked for export from the state from ad valorem property taxes.

Local taxing entities have the option to refuse the exemption but must do so before Jan. 1, 1990, or it goes into effect automatically. Taxing bodies which refuse the exemption initially may allow it later.

MISD Superintendent Joe Baressi recommended that the board refuse the exemption, at least until the State Legislature resolves the Edgewood vs. Kirby school finance issue next spring, which could alter how much state money the local district receives.

The state supreme court ruled the state's current school financing system unconstitutional in October.

"I think it would be irresponsible of me to recommend granting an exemption of this magnitude without knowing the results of the special legislative session," he said.

Board president James Fuller said he was concerned that disallowing the exemption would discourage businesses from locating in Midland, but agreed that the board could review its decision after the effects of school finance reform are known.

Baressi said he hoped the community would support the board's action.

"We as a school district want to be cooperative with the Chamber of Commerce and the community in general to attract new business to Midland," he said.

The school board also voted to give credit-granting status to the MISD alternative school, which currently serves as a "dropout recovery" program for high school students who already have quit school.

MISD Instructional Services Director Maridell Fryar said the board's vote will allow high school students who are at risk of dropping out to receive remedial instruction at the alternative school and have it count toward a diploma.

School to start earlier; More days off planned

By DAVID MORRIS

Midland students will have to hit the books a week earlier next year, thanks to a newly approved school calendar.

The Midland Independent School District board of trustees approved the 1990-91 calendar Tuesday night, which calls for classes to begin on Aug. 27 instead of after Labor Day, which has been customary.

MISD Superintendent Joe Baressi said he anticipated more student absences during the first week of school because of the early start, but MISD spokesman Ted Miller said there are advantages to the plan.

"It allows for more flexibility during the school year itself as far as holidays and in-services are concerned," he said.

The calendar approved by the board received the most votes from MISD employees from among three possibilities.

Like the first day of classes, spring break will come earlier next year, too. Spring break is scheduled for March 4-8. Students also will have two days off prior to Easter weekend.

This school year's spring break is scheduled for April 9-13, the week before Easter.

"Last year there were some ministers in town who were unhappy that our spring break coincided with Holy Week," Miller said.

The Rev. Russell Ritchel Jr. of First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave., said he is pleased by the change.

Farmers hang on, hope rains come for next year's crops

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

STANTON — West Texas farmers who suffered severe crop losses due to the 1989 drought may be able to recoup most, much, or some of their losses through farm loans and still hope for a better "next year."

But farmers' hopes go beyond those loans, including Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) loans, which must be waged against next year's crop.

"Right now, we are very dry coming into another crop year," said Ronnal Bruton, FmHA county supervisor. "We desperately need a rain now to have underground seasoning for next year's crop."

Meanwhile, farmers may apply for loans, both commercial loans, which carry higher interest rates than FmHA loans, and the government loans.

"As a general rule, a farmer must have suffered at least a 30 percent loss of production to be eligible for a FmHA emergency loan," Bruton said. The FmHA emergency loan carries a 4.5 percent interest rate, while FmHA regular loans are keyed to 9.5 percent. Commercial loans range between 12.5 percent and 14.5 percent, he said. Application for FmHA emergency loans may be made until July 17, although farmers "should apply as soon as possible," Bruton said. FmHA is a credit agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA).

In computing any loan amount, the farmer must weight that against any income he may have received from insurance and disaster payments from the U.S. Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

Farmers may be eligible for loans of up to 80 percent of their actual losses, or the operating loan needed to continue in business, or $500,000 "whichever is less," Bruton noted.

But most farmers' operating expenses are "down below" $200,000, he said.

"This has been an exceptionally bad crop year," which Bruton was tempted to liken to the outset of the seven-year drought of the 1950s. "It's been a rough year," he said.

"We just did not have any rain to amount to anything," Bruton said. "And then we got the early freeze. The few people who did have good cotton, well, that early freeze just killed them."

Aside from the dearth of rain, many farmers were beset by hail and damaging freezes in late September and late October.

"It froze a lot of the cotton that was just going to make," Bruton recalled. The cold froze "that boll before it opened up. And once it does that, that boll will rot," he said. "It not only causes cotton to have a poor quantity, but the quality was very poor, also."

Midland County farmer Vernon Chandler suffered losses pegged to the 1989 drought.

"This year brought back memories of the '50s," said Chandler, who farms in the Warfield community southwest of Midland. His son, Brian Chandler, operates a farm in Martin County. "It was hot and dry in the summertime, about the same (as the 1950s). "I just hope we don't do it again next year."

Chandler started farming full-time in 1951 in Midland County. "That was when the drought started."

But Chandler recalled a more recent drought: 1983.

"It was even worse in '83" than this year, he said. "In this country, that's just the way it is. Some years are dry. You have to prepare for it — expect it."

Chandler borrowed money from the FmHA years ago.

"It just saves you money on your interest," he said. "That sure makes a lot a difference. It cuts your expenses down some and comes in pretty handy." And for the expenses of "interest and rent," Chandler noted, "you don't get anything for that."

This year, Chandler's production was a third to a half of his average crop yield.

CALENDAR

"I think we were asking our families to make a choice between going out of town and involving their children in one of the highest weeks of the religious year," he said. "This schedule shows that the board is taking seriously the fact that some people want to take their faith seriously."

Next year's early start will not mean a much earlier finish. The last day of classes will be May 30, compared with June 1 for this school year.

The big payoff will come in the form of more time off during the year.

Vacations are scheduled for Labor Day, Columbus Day and the two days before Easter weekend, in addition to the customary time off for Thanksgiving, winter break and spring break.

Peary biographer poles apart from critics

WACO (AP) — The Texas biographer of Admiral Robert E. Peary says he hopes a new report showing Peary reached the North Pole will be the final word in the 80-year controversy.

Nonetheless, Waco author John Edward Weems, a Peary biographer, isn't sure everyone will be convinced.

"There are still people who think Hitler is living in South America, Elvis Presley is alive and so forth," Weems said Tuesday. "Everybody will never be completely convinced about anything, actually ... but I would say this report ought to be the final word."

The debate over whether Peary missed the pole took a turn in Peary's favor Monday when the Navigation Foundation released data showing Peary was where he said he was on April 6, 1909: at "the top of the world."

The 240-page study, sponsored by the National Geographic Society, disputes claims Peary actually got no closer than 121 miles. The foundation said its report will "perhaps put an end to the long process of vilification of a courageous American explorer."

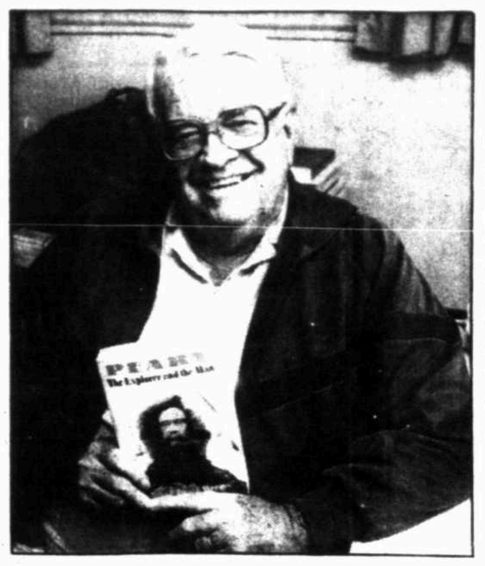

Weems is the author of the 1960 book "Race for the Pole," which examines the controversy over whether Dr. Frederick A. Cook reached the pole a year before Peary; and the 1967 follow-up, "Peary: The Explorer and the Man."

He was the first author to review Peary's personal papers and said he has more than 4,000 pages of notes from his 2-year study.

"If he didn't get to the geographic North Pole, he certainly got close enough in my estimation to claim he was the first man there."

The Navigation Foundation study was spurred by claims from Baltimore astronomer Dennis Rawlins, who says navigational readings he found on a slip of paper in Peary's documents put Peary, at best, within 121 miles of the North Pole.

The figures Rawlins used were the serial numbers from a navigational instrument, not navigational coordinates, said Charlene Stafford of Maryland, wife of Peary grandson and retired Navy commander Edward Peary Stafford. That finding was included in the Navigation Foundation report.

John Edward Weems poses with a book he has written about Admiral William Peary's journey to the North Pole. Weems, who lives in Waco, is one of several historians who support Peary's claim to being first at the North Pole.

Weems said he intends to read the Navigation Foundation report when he gets a chance, but is hard at work on his 11th book, an account of tornadoes in Texas. In addition to Peary and the weather, Weems has written books on Texas history and naval history.

Retired cop's claim to Ruby gun takes others by surprise

DALLAS (AP) — Contenders in a legal battle for ownership of the gun used to kill Lee Harvey Oswald professed amazement Tuesday that a retired Dallas policeman has come forward to say he was the one who bought the gun — not Jack Ruby.

Retired detective Joe Cody of DeSoto said Tuesday he purchased the .38-caliber Colt Cobra Ruby used to kill Oswald two days after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. And, Cody says, his purchase was no secret.

But, Jules Mayer, the executor of Ruby's estate, says he has never heard of Cody and contends that Ruby bought the gun.

"I know when Jack bought that gun," Mayer said Tuesday.

Mayer questioned why Cody has kept silent in the 22 years since Ruby died in a Dallas hospital on Jan. 3, 1967. "I know nothing about Joe Cody and nobody else seems to. If he was so enthusiastic about the gun why has he waited 23 years to come forward?"

But Cody says there was no secret. It was common knowledge, he said, that he purchased the gun for Ruby, whose nightclub he and other officers used to frequent.

Cody also says he immediately informed his superiors about the gun purchase and that he was questioned by the FBI.

"It's no secret," he said Tuesday. "Right after Ruby shot Oswald, I was subpoenaed to the court to testify I bought the pistol for Jack Ruby."

Cody said that he and Ruby went to Ray Brantley's gun shop on Singleton Boulevard in 1961 or 1962 and that Cody bought the $62.50 gun for Ruby, to save him $8 in taxes.

Ruby wanted the gun for protection, Cody said, since he habitually carried $1,500 or $1,800 in cash and found purchasing a safe too expensive.

The gun purchase was registered in Cody's name, he said, and then Ruby refunded him the money.

Cody said that if possession of the gun were awarded to him, he would turn it over to Ruby's heirs.

"I don't want that attorney (Mayer) to have it. If they'll give it to me I'll just turn around and hand it to the family," he said. "I'd rather the family have it. It's Jack's gun."

Cody said he has talked with Ruby attorney James Simons of Austin. Simons could not be immediately reached for comment Tuesday. Dallas co-counsel Doug Larson said he was unaware of the latest events.

Both Mayer and his attorney, Peter Bargmann of Dallas, said Cody's claim will not complicate their upcoming court battle with Ruby's heirs.

"My opinion is the estate has been the owner of the gun for 22 years, since Jack died," Bargmann said.

MISD

The object "is for students to work for credits by mastery" rather than by the amount of time spent in class, she said.

Students who are behind will be able to "catch up" at the alternative school and, ideally, graduate with their class from their regular high school campus.

Ms. Fryar said the alternative school would not become a diploma-granting school.

Most of the students currently attending the alternative school are dropouts studying to earn their GED, or General Equivalency Degree, Ms. Fryar said.

She said she expects the credit-granting program to service about 30 students a day when it gets under way in January, in addition to students involved in the existing dropout recovery program.

She said the new program will not need additional district money.

Baressi said no new teachers will have to be hired for the program.

"I think we can staff it well with our existing high school staff," he said.

In other business Tuesday, the board chose the Fort Worth architectural firm of Terry H. Harden to plan a proposed $8 million junior high school.

Auxiliary services director Wilson Heidelberg said plans for the new school will be submitted to voters for approval in a bond election tentatively scheduled for next spring.

Harden's firm designed De Zavala, Parker, Santa Rita, Scharbauer and Bush elementary schools.

CROPS

In Martin County, the overall production was a two-thirds loss, said Bruton, who handles the FmHA program for Martin, Midland, Howard, Glasscock, Upton, Crane and Ector counties. The loss was down by 300 pounds per acre, he figured.

Last year, Martin County, which takes in the strong cotton communities of Stanton, Lenorah, Tarzan and Grady, experienced a bumper crop: about 150,000 bales.

"This year, we will be lucky if we make 20,000 bales," said Nestor Hernandez, county executive director for the ASCS Stanton office for Martin County. The drought and the early freezes made severe inroads into the cotton yield.

Most of Martin County is dryland farming.

In West Texas, some cotton gins, including Myrl Mitchell's Four Way Gin at Lenorah, did not crank up. In a friendly agreement, Mitchell's customers took their harvest to neighboring Smokey Greenhaw's Lenorah Gin.

"Even our Glasscock County farmers, who are on irrigation, were hurt so bad because of early hail, and they had to replant," noted Bruton. "And once they got through replanting, they got this early freeze on that cotton that hadn't really matured. They needed a late freeze or at least a normal freeze. It didn't happen. They lost a tremendous amount of their cotton."

Prior to 1989, West Texas farmers had three "decent years," noted Bruton. "We had an outstanding year (in 1987)," Bruton said, and 1988 "was a very good year. Farmers also fared well in 1986.

"So, we hit three decent years — two real good production years, but the prices weren't great, but they were OK," he said.

However, 'the problem" that, along with the drought, is the farmers' nemesis is old debt. "They are still trying to come out of the years from '81 through '86. They are paying off those debts," he said.

"The problem is most all of that profit they received went into paying off old debts," Bruton said.

And when profits are good, another problem crops up: "You pay income tax. And you create a debt when you make a good profit."

The early to mid-1980s were "pretty bad crop years."

Bruton said that that most area gins — those that operated in 1989 — are processing 4,000 to 5,000 bales each. Last year, those gins processed 15,000 to 20,000 bales each.

The Midland County Farmers' Cooperative cotton gin turned out about 21,000 bales in 1988 but is expected gin only 9,500 bales this year.

Since most of the cotton has been harvest, the farmers' next move is to protect their land from wind erosion and to prepare for the 1990 crop year.

"Right now, there's not anything you can do with that land out there to keep it from blowing (because of the dryness)," said Bruton. "You can't grow anything; you can't plant a cover crop. It's too dry. You can't plow it and turn it over and make it hold.

"The best thing to do is stay out of it (the field) and hope we get some rain or some snow and get in there and do something with it," Bruton said. Farming is "a tough business. You've got to have a lot of stamina."

Henry David Thoreau published "Walden" in 1854. The book described his experiences while living in a small cabin near Walden Pond in Massachusetts.

Lee High presents 'Man Who Came to Dinner'

From Staff Reports

The Lee High School Theatre Arts production, "The Man Who Came To Dinner," will be presented at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday in the Lee auditorium.

The comedy — written by George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart — revolves around an egotistical radio celebrity, Sheridan Whiteside, (played by Todd Giese), who falls and breaks his hip on the doorstep of the Stanleys, a family living in a small Ohio town.

Originally, the Stanelys are proud to host such a celebrated guest, and thought they'd only be having him for dinner, not as an addition to their household. They soon find out that the man's bad temper and arrogance are extremely maddening. The longer he stays, the worse it gets.

The hot-tempered guest almost ruins the lives of the two teen-agers in the house, as well as upsetting the rest of the family, his nurse, his secretary, a local reporter, and even his famed friends who stop by to visit.

Horace Griffin is the director for this play.

Among the large cast, the leading characters are: Maggie Cutler, Sheridan Whiteside's secretary (played by Tori Stutes); Mr. and Mrs. Stanley, the frustrated hosts (Brent Sanders and Jessical Davis); Lorraine Sheldon, a world famous actress (Jessica Lesser); Banjo, a mischievous member of the Marx Brother fairsome (James McNew); and Beverly Carlton, another actor (Matt Rose) and Sarah, the Stanley's cook (Kelli Holland).

Tickets may be purchased by contacting Horace Griffin at 689-1621.

STATE in brief

Bryant to drop out of contest

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. Rep. John Bryant planned today to announce that he will drop out of the Democratic primary race for attorney general, a campaign aide said.

In scheduling news conferences for Austin and Dallas, an aide who asked not to be identified said Bryant would leave the race to state Rep. Dan Morales of San Antonio and Houston lawyer John Odam.

Incumbent Attorney General Jim Mattox is running for governor.

The Dallas Morning News, quoting associates of Bryant, said the Democrat would seek re-election to Congress. The associates did not give a reason for Bryant, 42, to drop out of the race.

Bryant was first elected to the 5th District seat in 1982.

The decision follows speculation Saturday by state Republican Party Chairman Fred Meyer that Bryant might seek re-election and Mattox might seek re-election to avoid the risk of running for governor.

Leftovers become gifts

DALLAS (AP) — A creative twist has turned one company's leftovers into another's Christmas offering.

Posters featuring drawings of 30 downtown scenes, including Dallas, have been cut up and turned into jigsaw puzzles, each with more than 500 pieces.

Don Scott, who produced the U.S. cities puzzle series for Buffalo Games Inc. of Buffalo., N.Y., said the posters were acquired from a bankrupt company in Canada.

Scott said he does not know the identity of the artist who painted the downtown scenes. But it is clear the posters sat around for awhile, according to the Dallas Times Herald. Dallas' tallest building — the NCNB Plaza — is missing.

The puzzles sell for about $15.

SSC boosters honored

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has honored three Texans for helping to lure the superconducting super collider research project to the state.

Recognized by the governor for their efforts were Peter McIntyre and Russell Huson, both physics professors at Texas A&M University, and George Mitchell, a Houston businessman who chaired early state efforts to coordinate supercollider activities.

Texas was chosen for the $4.4 billion physics research project.

Statue stolen from church likely melted down, sold

DALLAS (AP) — Vandals who used a blowtorch to cut a 2-ton metal sculpture from its rock pedestal in a church's garden probably melted it down later for its copper content, said the doctor who commissioned the statue.

Valued at several hundred thousand dollars, the sculpture has been a fixture on the grounds of First United Methodist Church for almost 25 years, Dr. George Boswell said Tuesday.

The theft of the 5-foot-high sculpture from First Methodist is the latest in a series of troubles to befall the institution, from which former minister Walker Railey resigned after his wife was left comatose in a choking attack.

The sculpture, "Moment of Decision," was stolen sometime over the weekend. Commissioned in 1964, the work depicts Jesus confronting Roman soldiers in the Garden of Gethsemane.

"It was irreplaceable. The theft is terrible and it just breaks our heart, but there's nothing we can do," said Boswell, who with his wife commissioned the work and presented it to the church as a tribute to their three daughters.

"With the encroachment of the city onto its sacred art, the paradox of all this is that the church is directly across the street from the Dallas Museum of Art and I'm concerned about the fine statues there," said Boswell.

He said he has talked with DMA officials about his concerns. Boswell has also attempted to contact the work's sculptor, Bill Jamison, about the theft.

"He doesn't know yet," said Boswell. "There were seven pieces in the sculpture — the cross, the Christ figure and five soldiers — and each one would not be that hard to haul away."

Some of the pieces were pulled from a 2½-ton rock pedestal while others were cut away with a torch, he said.

"It cost us about three times the average annual income at that time just to commission it," said Boswell.

Surprise arrival

DeLois Gocha holds her newborn baby girl, Klarkak, at a Dallas hospital Monday. Ms. Gocha, who was unaware she was pregnant, gave birth at a Dallas shelter for the homeless early Monday morning.

Woman gives birth at shelter for homeless

DALLAS (AP) — Workers at a homeless shelter, unaware that a female resident was in labor, considered kicking her out before she gave birth on a vinyl mat in the crowded facility.

Delois Gocha, 32, said that at first, she didn't know she was pregnant. She and her new 7-pound 1-ounce daughter, Klarkak, remained in Parkland Memorial Hospital today.

The child was born at 3:25 a.m. Monday at the Austin Street Shelter, where about 300 homeless people had bedded down for the night.

Described as a large woman, Ms. Gocha said she didn't even realize she was pregnant until her labor.

"I got real wide around the waist. I just felt real different, that's all," she said of the months before her delivery.

She said she woke up screaming at about 3 a.m. Shelter Director Harry Dailey said the staff didn't respond at first because Ms. Gocha, a shelter resident for two years, had screaming episodes in the past.

Poetry 'just what the doctor ordered' for modern author

By MICHAEL MORAN
Associated Press Writer

RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Poet Robert Frost won four Pulitzer Prizes and the adoration of millions by traveling "The Road Not Taken," as one of his poems relates.

But ask a poet or scholar who most influenced poetry in the 20th century and the likely answer will be William Carlos Williams, a physician whose clear, modernist cadence broke centuries of convention.

"He was one of my strongest influences," said Allen Ginsberg, the bard of the beat generation. "He was part of a group that was the most important thing to happen to American poetry in this century."

In retrospect, Williams — not Frost — "took the one less traveled by." He chose medical school and private practice over the bohemian life of his contemporaries. Indeed, scholars attribute Williams' medical training — his eye for picking details from the mundane — with distinguishing him from lesser poets.

His books of poetry include "Collected Poems" and "Pictures From Brueghel," for which he won a Pulitzer in 1963. He also wrote critical essays, plays, novels and short stories.

His verse gained international recognition in 1913 for his second collection, "The Tempers." His contemporaries — Gertrude Stein, Ernest Hemingway and schoolmate Ezra Pound — fled what they saw as the oppressive, capitalist climate of early 20th century America. But Williams chose to remain in the United States. In tiny Rutherford, a rural town on a knoll rising above the empty New Jersey meadowlands in view of the growing Manhattan skyline, he turned his observations of common life into innovations.

Langdon Hammer, an associate professor of English at Yale University, said Williams' work elevated American poetry to the forefront of the modernist movement of the early 20th century, displacing the more formal British school.

"He has a status like that of Yeats or Elliot," said Hammer.

Ginsberg first met Williams while working as a reporter for a left-wing Paterson, N.J., labor paper.

"I cooked up some excuse to interview him because I had heard him recite at the Museum of Modern Art," Ginsberg said. "It opened my eyes immediately. His poetry was simply an intensified form of speech."

Ginsberg recalled sending Williams a letter with some poems after the interview. The doctor sent them back, telling him to go back to his notes to find the raw versions — the less refined, more natural drafts.

Not long afterward, in 1957, Ginsberg published his classic poem, "Howl."

Williams lived in Rutherford from his birth in 1883 until his death in 1963, treating the poor and middle-class families of surrounding towns and the gritty mill city of Paterson about 10 miles to the north. The city would be the subject of the five-volume epic poem "Paterson," written between 1946 and 1958.

Williams also left his mark on medicine, eventually becoming chief of staff at Passaic General Hospital and a recognized pioneer in pediatrics, one of the first doctors to make it his specialty.

His son, Dr. William Eric Williams, lives and practices medicine in the same home his grandparents purchased in the late 1880s. Dealing with the legacy of his father, spending endless hours with English professors and biographers, and answering the same questions from journalists time and again, has taken a lot out of him, he says.

"For 75 years I've been communicating with artists, scholars, reporters and writers about my father," he said in a brief interview. "I can't get my own work done and I've just had to stop giving my time away."

But surprisingly, in a state where the ultimate tribute may be getting one's name on a New Jersey Turnpike reststop, Williams' reputation has remained obscure beyond scholars and other poets.

"It's almost like we haven't figured out what place he holds in our history," said John Dollar, a retired Fairleigh Dickinson University professor who used to read to Williams after the poet's vision was impaired by a stroke in the late 1950s.

In the Rutherford Public Library, Williams' books, photographs and paintings clutter a tiny room dedicated to the poet, but it is locked and dark most of the time.

Dollar and a handful of other former acquaintances and fans help gather artifacts from the poet's life. "We don't know quite what to do with this room," Dollar said. "I'm afraid it's fallen into disarray."

Williams' greatest talent was his ability to draw meaning from common things, scholars say. Pound wrote him many times imploring him to leave Rutherford for Europe.

Composition on a typewriter — considered an eccentricity and even reviled by some critics at the time — cultivated in Williams an interest in the physical shape of the verse as well as its sound and message.

Cookbook features tasty buffet menus

NEW YORK (AP) — "In Good Taste: A Southern Cook's Collection of Occasional Buffet Menus" features eight thematic buffet menus including a Sunday Night Supper and a Christmas Buffet.

The 112-page cookbook, published by E.B. & Co., a small Tulsa-based publisher, was written by Joan Downs of Wichita, Kan., and edited by her daughter Elaine Burkhardt of Tulsa ($25).

Downs chose the buffet theme, she says, because of the Southern tradition of "serving great portions of Southern taste and hospitality" from the sideboard, a relaxed style of service for varied fare. The cookbook's 150 recipes represent a collection gathered from years of family entertaining and traveling.

E. Alan Long, food editor of Northwest Arkansas Morning News, says, "It's a relief to find a cookbook that addresses good taste without being overly influenced by popular health-conscious dictates. The recipes call for ingredients that you can find at most any good grocery store, yet the dishes are sophisticated in a down-home way."

Throughout the recipe sections, the traditional cookbook "notes" or "tips" have been treated as mother-daughter conversations betweeen Downs and Burkhardt.

These "conversations" share specific advice on recipes, recall events associated with food and entertaining, teach technique, or give the address of a vendor for a specialized product, such as the Georgian Vidalia onion or enrobing chocolate for strawberries.

The hard-cover cookbook is designed with a top spiral so that the cookbook can stand upright, making it easy to use; to get to the next page, you just turn the cookbook around.

Only 1,000 copies of the cookbook were printed, although Burkhardt and Downs are looking for a publisher to help them break into the national market. In the meantime, another cookbook is nearing completion, the authors say.

The following recipe for angel food pie was published in 1944 by Better Homes and Gardens. Edna M. Shemwell was a well-known Kentucky cook.

ANGEL FOOD PIE
A LA SHEMWELL

Boil together exactly 10 minutes:
1 cup sugar
1½ cups water

Add 4 rounded tablespoons cornstarch dissolved in cold water. Stir, and cook over medium heat until thick. Stir constantly.

Add to the mixture:
1 tablespoon orange extract
¼ teaspoon salt

Let custard cool. Stir occasionally to keep from forming a thickness on the top. Beat 3 egg whites at room temperature until real stiff. Gradually add ½ cup sugar, and beat until very stiff. Fold custard into beaten egg whites. This fills a 9-inch baked pie crust (recipe follows).

Top with whipped cream and slivered curls of chocolate over the top. Makes 6-8 servings.

PIE CRUST
½ cup chilled shortening
1½ cups flour
¼ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
3 to 4 tablespoons ice water

Cut shortening into dry ingredients. Make a hole in the middle, and add enough ice water to make stiff dough, about 3 to 4 tablespoons.

Mix with fork. Do not handle more than you can help. Roll thin on lightly floured tea towel, and bake on bottom of pie plate in the middle shelf of the oven at 400 degrees F until light brown. Prick dough with fork before baking.

Holiday cookbooks for giving, getting

By MARY MacVEAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Learn to cook, read about others who cook. Add an ethnic cuisine to your repertoire. Perfect your dessert techniques.

Whatever the desire, this season there are plenty of enticing new cookbooks, many of which would make welcome holiday gifts. Among them:

■ "The New Basics Cookbook," by Julee Rosso and Sheila Lukins, Workman Publishing, 849 pages, $29.95.

A cookbook for the 1990s, from the former owners of the Silver Palate, recognizing efforts toward healthier eating. Similar in bright, peppy style and focus to their two previous, very popular, cookbooks. Recipes from those books are marked. Many inviting recipes, often suited for entertaining.

■ "The Way to Cook," Julia Child, Alfred A. Knopf, 511 pages, $50.

Child's seventh — and, she says, last — book. A blend of classic technique and freestyle American cooking, aimed at a generation for whom cooking may mean frozen food in the microwave.

An effort to restore good home cooking. Full of color photographs showing technique. Recipes are grouped unconventionally by technique, so, for example, pork and veal chops are together rather than pork chops and pork roast. Croutons for fish soups are with soups, not breads.

■ "La Varenne Practique," Anne Willan, Crown Publishers, 528 pages, $60.

WILLAN, FOUNDER and president of Ecole de Cuisine La Varenne in Paris, has written a full cooking course for serious students. Considers ingredients and French technique, from chopping onions to boning a rabbit and plucking a bird. Clear, detailed, a fine reference book.

Contains 2,500 color photographs, more than 400 recipes. Glossary of terms, descriptions of cooking equipment, chapter on microwave cooking.

■ "Cooking with Herbs," Emelie Tolley and Chris Mead, Clarkson N. Potter, 297 pages, $40.

This pretty coffee-table book, with more than 300 color photographs of food and herbs and the lands where they grow, focuses on herbs in this country and Europe, in home kitchens and those of famous chefs such as California's Wolfgang Puck and New Mexico's Mark Miller.

■ "A Passion for Chocolate," Maurice and Jean-Jacques Bernachon with translation and adaptation by Rose Levy Beranbaum, William Morrow, 398 pages, $22.95.

Author of the popular 1988 book, "The Cake Bible," Beranbaum turns her attention to chocolate, working with recipes from the Bernachons' famed chocolate business in Lyons, France. Beranbaum's scientific approach to baking is as evident as her love for it.

Color photographs and long, detailed recipes for such confections as almond meringue layer cake with chocolate buttercream filling and a glaze of bittersweet chocolate and honeyed almonds. There are cakes and cookies, mousses and ice creams, candies, drinks and chocolate decorations. Even brownies of which Beranbaum says everyone who has tasted them "proclaims them the best."

■ "A Piece of Cake," Susan G. Purdy, Atheneum Publishers, 498 pages, $24.95.

NEARLY 400 recipes, many collected during Purdy's travels throughout Europe, from simple breakfast cakes to a Dobostorte, a stack of thin layers filled with chocolate buttercream and topped with a caramel glaze. Clear, straightforward recipes from a cooking teacher; histories of many cakes; notes on special ingredients and equipment. A serious baker's book that also gives comfort to armchair cooks.

Chapters are divided by styles — pound, fruit, coffee and tea, layer, elegant, charlottes. Following are dozens of frostings, icings, glazes and fillings and recipes for special dietary needs.

■ "Perfect Pastry," Nick Malgieri, Macmillan, 338 pages, $24.95.

From a top teacher, filled with background and technique from poaching fruits to puff pastry to marzipan. A full chapter on decorating, and detailed explanations of ingredients and equipment.

Recipes include Viennese meringue torte, croquembouche, pear and port tart and bourbon pecan cake. Recipes highlight techniques, and Malgieri often includes variations.

■ "The Art of Russian Cuisine," Anne Volokh with Mavis Manus, Collier Books, $14.95.

A food writer in Moscow before she came to the United States, Volokh wants to rescue the "magnificent" Russian cuisine from near-extinction. She traces the roots and influences of cooking methods and specific dishes such as Charlotte Russe and recalls the days before the Russian Revolution when extravagance meant that even the horses drank champagne.

WITH THE current American fascination with things Soviet, this book is an intriguing guide to the place of food in the culture as well as a comprehensive cookbook.

■ "Bistro Cooking," Patricia Wells, Workman Publishing, New York, 291 pages, $22.95.

Comfort food French-style from the author of "The Food Lover's Guide to Paris" and "The Food Lover's Guide to France." Take this book to France as a guide to the country's bistros or recreate at home more than 200 dishes like chicken stew with fennel and saffron, grilled country bread with pesto and smoked trout and chocolate mousse.

Wells clearly is in love with this hearty, uncomplicated food, food to eat out in a "homey, welcoming small neighborhood restaurant" or to serve to family and friends at home.

■ "Iron Pots and Wooden Spoons," Jessica B. Harris, Atheneum, 195 pages, $19.95.

Harris looks at the connections between African, Caribbean and black American cooking.

Recipes include Jamaica chicken run down, pepper grits souffle and Tanzanian bean ugali. Each recipe includes its country of origin, and notes with each explain the dish's history or its connection to a similar dish from another part of the world. For example, there is giambo from Curacao, callaloo from St. Lucia, calalou aux crabes from Guadeloupe and seafood gumbo from New Orleans. All of them depend on okra, which, Harris explains, originated in Africa.

■ "Madeleine Kamman's Savoie," Madeleine Kamman, Atheneum, 432 pages, $24.95.

An in-depth look at the food of the French Alps from a longtime teacher and television food show host who spent many childhood summers in a Savoie village. Dishes range from simple slow-cooked farm foods like pot-au-feu to restaurant fare such as snow pea and chanterelle soup or braised trout in walnut sauce.

BUT THIS is not strictly a cookbook, with substantial space devoted to geology, history, weather and environment, the population and its way of life and the history of the region's food.

■ "The Mediterranean Kitchen," Joyce Goldstein, William Morrow, 328 pages, $22.95.

Goldstein, owner of a San Francisco restaurant that successfully blends robust California and Mediterranean food, says she wants in this book to share "feelings of sensual pleasure, well-being and timelessness."

The recipes make you want to run to the kitchen and start cooking. Among them: chicken liver croutons, fresh tuna pate, grilled leeks with walnut cream vinaigrette, Greek chicken pie with a filo crust and chocolate apricot torte. Also includes wine suggestions from Goldstein's master sommelier son, Evan.

■ "Miss Ruby's American Cooking," Ruth Adams Bronz, Harper & Row, 334 pages, $19.95.

From the owner of a New York City restaurant where the menu changes regularly to focus on different regions of the country. Bronz considers herself a "culinary patriot," out to teach Americans how to appreciate American food.

She presents dishes from 18 regions, including elegant ones like dill pancakes with Pacific smoked salmon and caviar to simple ones like iced cucumbers. There are 14 recipes for corn, including spoon bread and corn and shrimp soup. Plenty of history and anecdotes make good reading.

■ "Betty Crocker's Christmas Cookbook," Prentice Hall Press, 192 pages, $14.95.

MORE THAN 400 recipes, ideas for food gifts and entertaining. Such classics as roast turkey and giblet gravy, mashed potatoes, buche de Noel, fruitcake and steamed pudding.

■ "Martha Stewart's Christmas," Martha Stewart, Clarkson N. Potter, 128 pages, $18.95.

Stewart does Christmas, of course, on a grand scale. Her recipe for Christmas pudding, for example, is for 10 puddings each serving 10 to 15 people. (It's a little short on information about how to store them and present them as gifts.)

Filled with beautiful color photographs of her home in Connecticut, this book moves chronologically from the day after Thanksgiving through Christmas dinner. As with Stewart's seven other books, this is about a style of living, and there are directions for pomanders and wreaths, decorating and homemade gifts as well as recipes for cakes and puddings, cookies and cassoulet for 100 party guests and roast duckling for 10.

■ "The Complete Book of Food," Carol Ann Rinzler, Pharos Books, 425 pages, $14.95.

A NUTRITIONAL, medical and culinary reference book with more than 300 foods presented alphabetically with detailed information on buying, cooking and storage; dietary cautions and nutritional benefits; and medical uses.

Some examples: The skin color of a banana is an indicator of its starch-sugar ratio; cooked oranges lose most of their vitamin C; salting pork before it is cooked can make it stringy and tough; tea contains natural fluorides.

■ "Microwave Gourmet Health-style Cookbook," Barbara Kafka, William Morrow, 623 pages, $22.95.

The author of the controversial "Microwave Gourmet" turns her attention toward using the microwave to get slim and healthy, including tips on dieting and stocking a kitchen to stay that way and sample menus even for parties.

Recipes include beef filet with spinach and mushrooms, risotto with lamb and dill, fennel soup, creamy baked shrimp with peppers and mango mousse. Each lists calories and nutritional ingredients.

■ "Luncheonette," Carol Vidinghoff and Patricia M. Kelly, Crown Publishers, 97 pages, $8.95.

Recipes from the days when luncheonettes were a big part of American life, originally published in 1940, for such treats as Miami Flips, Imperial Malted Milkshakes, the Bachelor Sundae. Vidinghoff's color illustrations bring to mind the charms of spending an afternoon at a soda fountain.

ALSO SUCH old-time advice to soda jerks as: "Sundaes should be served daintily, since nothing helps more to increase the volume of business, as well as the demand for sundaes, than dainty service."

Holiday foods can be part of healthy diet

By KAY SEVERINSEN
and BOB GONKO
Copley News Service

How did the anniversary of Jesus' birth become an excuse for overeating?

Should we change our carols to "Gloria in Excess Deo" and "A-weigh in a Manger"?

But do calories really count when we are so busy shopping, wrapping and partying?

There is a difference of opinion on holiday dining — should we watch our caloric intake or should we adhere to old adage, "Eat, drink and be merry for tomorrow (the tomorrow after New Year's Day) we diet."

"Often the results of holiday dinners and celebrations are extra pounds which need to be dieted off after the new year," observes Cindy Teggart, a registered dietitian.

"Smart cooks," Teggart says, "look for ways to reduce the excess fat and sodium which, by helping people avoid a post-holiday diet, can be considered a sort of holiday gift.

"Fat is a major contributor not only of flavor, but also of calories," she says. "The fat carries the flavor, but the cost of that flavor is unneeded calories."

However, fat can be reduced without altering the flavor and finished quality of the food.

Although self-basting turkeys are easy to cook and generally tasty, they often have added fat and sodium. Teggart recommends purchasing a fresh or frozen turkey that is not self-basting.

Another calorie-cutting tip is that spices can make sweet foods taste sweeter, even if they are low in sugar.

Today we offer you an array of desserts — some easy on the calories, others go-for-broke decadent delights. All are delicious.

First are the guilt-free seasonal foods. Equal Nog, for example, substitutes skim milk for cream and brandy and rum extracts for liquors. A 4-ounce serving tallies 110 calories. Cranberry Oat Bran Muffins are rich in fiber and are only 117 calories per muffin — but don't slather them with butter.

CNS Photo

Even those stalwart souls who never cast a glance at the dessert cart indulge themselves during the holidays with treats like these.

EQUAL NOG

1 cup non-fat dry milk powder
½ cup warm water
24 packets artificial sweetener
1 teaspoon brandy extract
½ teaspoon rum extract
2 eggs
2 cups skim milk
½ teaspoon nutmeg

Yields 8 (4-ounce) servings at 110 calories per serving.

Combine first 3 ingredients in blender. Blend on high for 5 to 10 minutes or until smooth and creamy. Add extracts and eggs; blend until well mixed. Add skim milk and blend until smooth and creamy. Refrigerate until chilled. Pour into punch mugs and sprinkle with nutmeg. Use within 4 days.

CRANBERRY OAT BRAN MUFFINS

1 cup whole raw cranberries
2¼ cups oat bran
1 tablespoon baking powder
¾ teaspoon salt
Sweetener to equal ½ cup sugar
¾ cup skim milk
2 eggs
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 cup unsweetened applesauce

Yields 10 muffins at 117 calories per muffin.

Heat oven to 425 degrees. Grease bottoms only of medium-size muffin tins or line with paper baking cups. Coarsely chop cranberries (food processor recommended). Combine oat bran, baking powder, salt and sweetener. Stir in milk, eggs, oil, applesauce and chopped cranberries. Spoon batter into muffin tins. Bake 16 to 18 minutes or until golden brown.

(Most supermarkets carry oat bran, a hot cereal, in the oatmeal section.)

GINGER SPICE COOKIES

COOKIES:
¼ cup vegetable oil
3 tablespoons diet margarine
1 tablespoon skim milk
1 egg
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon ginger
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
1½ cups all-purpose flour
TOPPING:
12 packets artificial sweetener
½ teaspoon cinnamon
GLAZE:
12 packets artificial sweetener
½ teaspoon cinnamon
2 tablespoons boiling water

Yields 36 cookies. Three cookies have 122 calories.

Beat together oil and margarine. Add milk, egg and vanilla and beat well. Combine dry ingredients, then blend into liquid mixture. Roll out into ⅛-inch thickness and cut into 2-inch rounds. Place cookies on baking sheet sprayed with non-stick coating. Bake at 375 degrees for 7 minutes. Add topping or glaze while warm.

For topping: Combine sweetener and cinnamon in plastic bag. Place warm cookies in bag and shake to coat.

For glaze: Combine sweetener and cinnamon in boiling water. Brush over cookies while warm.

And now for those rich, mouth-watering indulgences that you'll dream about next January when you have gone on your yearly weight-loss regimen.

Bete Noire (black beast) is an elegant but easy dessert for chocolate lovers.

Beaten well, the cake has a thin, crispy top with a creamy smooth inside, tasting like a chocolate truffle. Beaten just until it is mixed, it has a smooth top, easier for glazing with the panache given here.

It can be served hot out of the oven, warm with whipped cream or cooled and glazed.

BETE NOIRE

8 ounces unsweetened chocolate
4 ounces semisweet or bittersweet chocolate
½ cup water
1⅓ cups sugar
1 cup unsalted butter, room temperature, cut in small pieces
5 large eggs at room temperature

Preheat oven to 350 degrees with rack in center of oven. Butter 9-inch cake pan, not springform, and line bottom with buttered waxed paper or parchment.

Chop both chocolates into fine pieces and set aside.

Combine water with 1 cup sugar in heavy 1½-quart saucepan and bring to rapid boil over high heat. Cook about 2 minutes. Remove from heat and immediately add chocolate pieces, stirring until completely melted. Then add butter, piece by piece, stirring to melt completely.

Place eggs and remaining one-third cup sugar in bowl and beat with electric mixer until tripled in volume for crunchy crust cake. Or, mix only until sugar dissolves for a smooth top, which is better for frosting.

Add chocolate/butter mixture to eggs and mix to incorporate completely. Do not overbeat; it causes air bubbles. Spoon into prepared pan. Set pan into larger pan. Set both in oven and pour hot water into larger pan.

Bake for 25 to 30 minutes. Let cool in pan for 10 minutes and then run sharp knife around sides to release cake. Unmold onto platter, remove waxed paper and invert onto serving platter. Glaze when cool with Chocolate Panache (recipe follows).

Chocolate Panache: Scald ½ cup heavy cream. Remove from heat and add 5 ounces semisweet or bittersweet chocolate, cut in small pieces; stir very gently until smooth. Cool slightly and pour over cake, rotating cake to coat evenly. Refrigerate cake until glaze sets.

Mincemeat Pudding is an English Christmas dessert tradition dating back to Henry VIII. In Victorian times, lucky charms and coins were mixed into batter. What tokens one received foretold one's fortune for the next year.

MINCEMEAT PUDDING

1 cup bottled mincemeat or 9 ounces condensed
1 cup orange juice
1 teaspoon orange rind
2 large eggs
½ cup dark brown sugar
1 tablespoon dark rum
½ cup fine stale bread crumbs
1 cup flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
¾ cup chopped pecans or walnuts

Combine mincemeat, juice and rind in small saucepan. Bring to boil and simmer, stirring occasionally for 2 minutes. Allow to cool.

In large bowl, beat eggs well; beat in sugar and rum and stir in mincemeat and bread crumbs. Into bowl, sift flour and baking powder; stir in nuts.

Turn batter into well-buttered 1-quart steamed pudding mold and cover tightly with lid. Set mold on rack in kettle with tight-fitting lid; add enough hot water to reach two-thirds of the way up sides of mold and steam pudding covered over moderate heat for 1 hour. Let stand on rack for 15 minutes; uncover and invert onto serving plate.

Serve warm with Rum Butter (recipe follows). Can be made days ahead of time and reheated by steaming or microwaving. Can also be steamed in 16 individual half-cup molds.

Rum Butter: Cream together ½ cup unsalted butter, ¾ cup sifted confectioners' sugar, 2 tablespoons dark rum, 1 tablespoon orange rind and ½ teaspoon nutmeg.

(From Gourmet magazine.)

Apple Pita is a traditional Serbian sweet, served on special occasions.

APPLE PITA

1 box filo dough
½ cup butter, melted
½ to ¾ cup oil added to butter
Warm water
Bread crumbs
2 cups sugar, mixed with 2 teaspoons cinnamon
3 pounds tart apples, peeled, cored and grated
1 lemon, grated
Confectioners' sugar

Oil 9x13-inch baking pans (2 or 3 may be needed).

Take out 1 sheet filo, sprinkle with a bit of butter/oil mixture; lay another sheet on top of first sheet, sprinkle with water; take another sheet and lay on top of second one, sprinkle with butter; repeat 1 more time for a total of 4 sheets (ending with butter on the last filo).

Sprinkle bread crumbs over ¾ of top of filo; follow that with a bit of sugar/cinnamon mixture. Gently spread some apples on top; sprinkle grated lemon, cinnamon sugar and then bread crumbs.

Brush edge of dough with water; roll like jelly roll; gently transfer to prepared pan; brush with butter; pierce top a few times with fork.

Repeat above procedure until ingredients are used up. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes or until golden. Cool; cut into pieces; dash with confectioners' sugar. (Can be frozen but do not bake prior to freezing; increase baking time 15 to 20 minutes.)

Cherry Pita: Follow recipe for Apple Pita but substitute canned cherry pie filling (2 large cans) for apples.

Low-fat tips make nutritious eating tastier

NEW YORK (AP) — Let 1990 begin on a healthy note with the following low-fat tips from the Doral Saturnia International Spa Resort in Miami.

■ Eat a low-calorie snack, such as a piece of fruit, to curb your appetite before you dine.

■ Buy fresh ground turkey instead of ground beef, or buy 85 percent lean ground beef.

■ Substitute non-fat yogurt and skim milk when appropriate.

■ Avoid one large meal a day. Instead, eat small, frequent meals and eat more in the earlier part of the day.

■ Eat starches such as boiled potatoes, beans and pasta, but remember to avoid heavy creams and sauces.

■ Order steamed vegetables.

■ Remove skin from chicken — and eliminate 50 percent of the calories.

■ Replace high-fat desserts with sorbet, fruit or decaffeinated capuccino.

■ Drink 6 to 8 glasses of water daily.

The following recipe for Pumpkin Custard is from the kitchens of the Doral Saturnia International Spa Resort:

PUMPKIN CUSTARD

1 pound Butternut squash
1 cup water
¼ cup canned evaporated skimmed milk
3 egg whites
½ cup dark brown sugar
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon ground cloves
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground ginger

Peel fresh Butternut squash and remove the seeds. Cut into 2-inch pieces and place in a steamer basket over the 1 cup of water. Steam for 15 minutes until the squash is tender.

Place the cooked squash in a food processor with the remaining ingredients and puree until smooth.

Portion the custard filling into porcelain souffle cups, filling each with 2 ounces. Bake in a bain-marie for 35 minutes at 350 degrees F. Cool before serving. Makes 13 servings.

How many cooking days until Christmas? Enough to make several batches of this delicious sauce. Be sure to include a card with the sauce giving reheating directions.

CHOCOLATE HAZELNUT SAUCE

3 squares (3 ounces) semisweet chocolate
¼ cup margarine or butter
1 5-ounce can (⅔ cup) evaporated milk
½ cup sugar
3 tablespoons hazelnut liqueur

In heavy medium saucepan melt chocolate and margarine or butter over low heat, stirring frequently. Stir in milk and sugar. Cook and stir over medium heat about 5 minutes or until mixture is slightly thickened and bubbly. Remove from heat. Add liqueur; stir until smooth. Cool slightly. Pour sauce into pint jar. Cover and chill up to 1 month.

To serve, in medium saucepan cook and stir over low heat until heated through. Or, transfer sauce to a microwave-safe bowl; cook on 100 percent power (high) about 1 minute or until heated through. Serve over ice cream. Makes about 1½ cups.

DEAR ABBY

Godparents were ready but are not now willing

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Several months ago, we lost a very dear friend to cancer. (I'll call him Joe.) My husband and I had become very good friends with Joe and his wife about two years prior to Joe's death. Three months before Joe died, his wife had a baby boy, and my husband and I were asked to be the baby's godparents. We felt honored.

After we had become the child's godparents, Joe's wife confided (to me) that during her marriage with Joe, she had carried on an affair with another man, and she was sure that this other man is the father. Joe later confided to my husband that he doubted he was the father of this new baby, because he had caught his wife "in the act" with her longtime boyfriend.

Abby, my husband and I agreed to be godparents to the child of Joe and his wife — NOT the child of Joe's wife and her lover.

Is there any way we can get our names erased from the church's registry as being the godparents of Joe's widow's child? Please check into this matter, as we are desperate.

Sorry we can't sign our names. This is a very small town. — UNWILLING GODPARENTS

DEAR UNWILLING: According to a spokesman for the Los Angeles Diocese, you cannot have your name "erased" from the baptismal certificate. You acted in good faith when you became godparents to the child. Please stay close to him, and try to be good friends to the little fellow regardless of who his parents are. He will need a positive influence in his life.

DEAR ABBY: I will be getting married very soon for the second time. We both have children from our first marriages. My son is very close to this wonderful man, and I wonder if it would be proper for my son, who is in elementary school, to give me away.

It will be a small wedding with only family and very close friends.

My son and I have lived alone for several years, and I think he would love the honor. Thank you for your help. — SECOND TIME AROUND

DEAR SECOND: There is no reason why your son can't give you away in marriage. I think it's a lovely idea. All good wishes to you and your wonderful man.

DEAR ABBY: For the last three years, my husband and I have allowed our 24-year-old, college-educated daughter to live at home without paying a dime. She has plenty of money to eat out, take vacations and go shopping — you should see her clothes and shoes! They have filled the guest closet until there is no room for anything else.

I told her about a year ago that it would be nice if she helped with the electric bill or telephone bill, and I got a long sob story about how hard it was for her to make her car payments. We could rent her room for a good sum.

Abby, she has a job that pays her very well. I am no longer working, and her father would like to take it a little easier, as he worked hard all his life. Please advise us. — TIRED IN IDAHO

DEAR TIRED: Tell your 24-year-old, college-educated daughter that the free ride is over, and she will have to pay something for living at home. Be firm. Do not hesitate to tell her that you need her financial support, and if she has a problem with that, she can start pricing other accommodations. (Soft parents find themselves hard up.)

"How to Write Letters for All Occasions" provides sample letters of congratulations, thank-yous, condolences, resumes and business letters — even how to write a love letter! It also includes how to properly address clergymen, government officials, dignitaries, widows and others. Chocolate's popularity, varieties are growing

NEW YORK (AP) — Chocolate's popularity in the United States is hitting new heights, with consumption topping 11 pounds per capita in 1988.

Chocolate boutiques are booming as established chocolatiers and entrepreneurs compete to capture their share of the $100 million specialty market. The introduction of ever more exotic — and delicious — varieties of chocolate has fueled the explosive growth in this market.

WHITE CHOCOLATE

Virtually unknown in the United States 10 years ago, white or ivory-colored chocolate is a stylish confectionery choice today. Unlike milk or dark chocolate, white chocolate does not contain the cocoa part of the bean; it is therefore not classified as chocolate in the United States. Instead, cocoa butter, milk solids, sugar and vanilla are the key ingredients in most white chocolate products.

Restaurateurs are now serving white chocolate mousse and souffles with fruit sauces; home bakers are topping cakes and cookies with white chocolate shavings.

Why the passion for white chocolate? For some, white chocolate's appeal lies in its coloring. Ivory is perceived as lighter, smoother and more delicate than other varieties of chocolate, and chocolate lovers are turning to white chocolate as a sweet alternative to traditional milk and dark varieties.

LIQUEUR-FLAVORED CONFECTIONS

The demand for liqueur-flavored confections is on the rise. Grand Marnier, Amaretto and rum-flavored liqueurs are currently among the most fashionable fillings.

The competition is intense to create combinations that satisfy the sophisticated consumer's taste preferences, while complying with state liquor law requirements. Most states have traditionally limited the alcohol content in liqueur-flavored chocolate to no more than 0.5 percent. Chocolatiers are also experimenting with non-alcoholic liqueur confections.

MAIL-ORDER CHOCOLATE

"The Chocolate Catalogue," from Karl Bissinger French Confections in St. Louis, features a variety of handmade chocolate products, from Christmas Oreos to French Truffles and Chocolate Molasses Puffs, all of which can be ordered by mail.

UIL's 'Super 5A' playoff plan draws mixed reviews

Associated Press

A proposal to expand the Class 5A high school football playoffs to 96 teams and create a so-called "Super 5A" playoff plan has drawn mixed reactions from high school coaches.

The State Board of Education is expected to approve the plan next month, University Interscholastic League officials say.

The plan, which could mean hundreds of thousands of dollars in revenue to individual schools, moved closer to approval Tuesday when the state's 5A superintendents voted 160-57 to ask the state board to endorse the two-tiered 5A playoff plan. The UIL legislative council already has approved it.

Under provisions of the plan, the top three teams in each of the 32 5A districts would make the playoffs. The two largest schools, regardless of record, would advance to a 64-team, Super 5A playoff.

The smallest school would play in the regular Class 5A playoff. Under the current 5A playoff structure, the top two teams in each district advance to a six-round tournament.

The plan will be used for the 1990 season if it is approved in January.

The plan, proposed by the North Side Independent School District in San Antonio, was developed in large part as a solution to a lack of balance between enrollments of 5A schools, which range from 1,300 students to nearly 4,000.

"The average enrollment is about 2,000 students, so you're looking at probably a half-million kids who will be affected by this," UIL Athletic Director Bill Farney said. "So many schools are frustrated by the megaschools such as Converse Judson, Plano and Harlingen, and this is an effort to address that problem.

"This is not a cure-all and does not address all our problems, but at least the (UIL) legislative council felt it was an attempt at a solution."

Critics claim the plan, by including nearly 40 percent of the 5A schools, would dilute the importance of the playoffs.

Some coaches said it would also penalize smaller schools by not allowing them to compete against the top schools.

"The thing I don't like about it is that it's degrading to schools like Lake Highlands," Lake Highlands coach Mike Zoffuto said. "If you finish first, it's degrading to be pushed down."

"I'm not goir g to be completely satisfied with our program until we're competing with the Planos and Plano Easts, the Odessa Permians every year," Zoffuto said.

Plano coach Tom Kimbrough said he approves the plan.

"It gives more teams a chance," Kimbrough said. "I think everyone feels the same way."

Arlington coach Mike O'Brien didn't like the plan, which he considers to be a compromise for those who wanted creation of Class 6A for the large schools.

"I know I voted against it because right now we have a system that is good," O'Brien said.

Greenville Athletic Director Gary Callaway, whose one-school town has an enrollment at the lower end of Class 5A, favors the plan.

"I'm for letting as many schools in as possible," Callaway said. "I don't think they solved the size problem. Because it (5A) is such a large classification, the small schools won't end up in the playoffs."

Chap parquet passes first test

By BILL PRICE

It may look as smooth as butter, but it's parquet.

And while the the slick new addition to the Chaparral Center, a wooden parquet floor replete with green paint, was officially christened Tuesday night with a Midland High-Greenwood basketball double header, the fans on hand may have thought they had seen a similar sight somewhere else. Like the "Gah-den" of Boston.

After splitting the two games, the Rangerettes downed the Lady Bulldogs 56-46 and the MHS boys whipped the Rangers 72-61, not a discouraging word was heard from the participants about the floor.

"It's really nice. I like it a lot better than the old Tartan surface. The wood has a little more spring to it," said Scott Melzer, the senior Bulldog guard who led all scorers in the boys game with 21 points.

"I think it's beautiful. I like wooden floors a lot better anyway - always have," said Greenwood boys coach Robert Chaney.

WHAT CHANEY did not like was the outcome of the boys game, which dropped the Class 3A Rangers to 4-7 for the season.

The Bulldogs, now 8-5, went on top early and held a 17-10 edge going into the second quarter. By the time 6:22 was left in the half Greenwood was behind by nine points at 21-12, forcing Chaney to call a time out. The Rangers returned to floor, went on a 10-2 scoring rampage and eventually trailed at the half by only four points, 31-27.

The second half began the same way for Greenwood, which tied the game at 33-33 then took its first lead of the contest, 39-38, about midway through the period. Ranger David Dublin scored all 12 of his points in the third quarter after being shut out in the first half.

But the Greenwood lead was short-lived, as the 'Dogs woke up and finished the quarter strong with Melzer scoring a two- and a three-pointer, Rodrick Hickey sinking two baskets and Eric Johnson converting a three-point play.

Melzer added six points in the fourth quarter as MHS outscored the Rangers 20-14 in the last eight minutes to secure the win.

Tim Flowers and Chuck Boecking were high scorers for Greenwood with 15 points apiece, and Cody Mebane added 10. Hickey finished the game with 16 for the Bulldogs and Michael Wright scored 12.

"Their press hurt us at times and they played well in spurts," Chaney said. "Coming into the game, we felt we had to be patient on offense and defense, and did that well at times. But we didn't make the big plays and they got too far ahead for us to stay with the slower game."

MHS coach Jack Stephenson was not especially impressed with the 'Dog win, but said he will take any kind of win he can get.

"We did what we needed to win. There's not much else to say about a game like that. Robert (Chaney) did a good job. His kids played well," Stephenson said of the Rangers, who boasted a defined height advantage over MHS. "They got some rebounds, but that wasn't the issue at hand. They executed well."

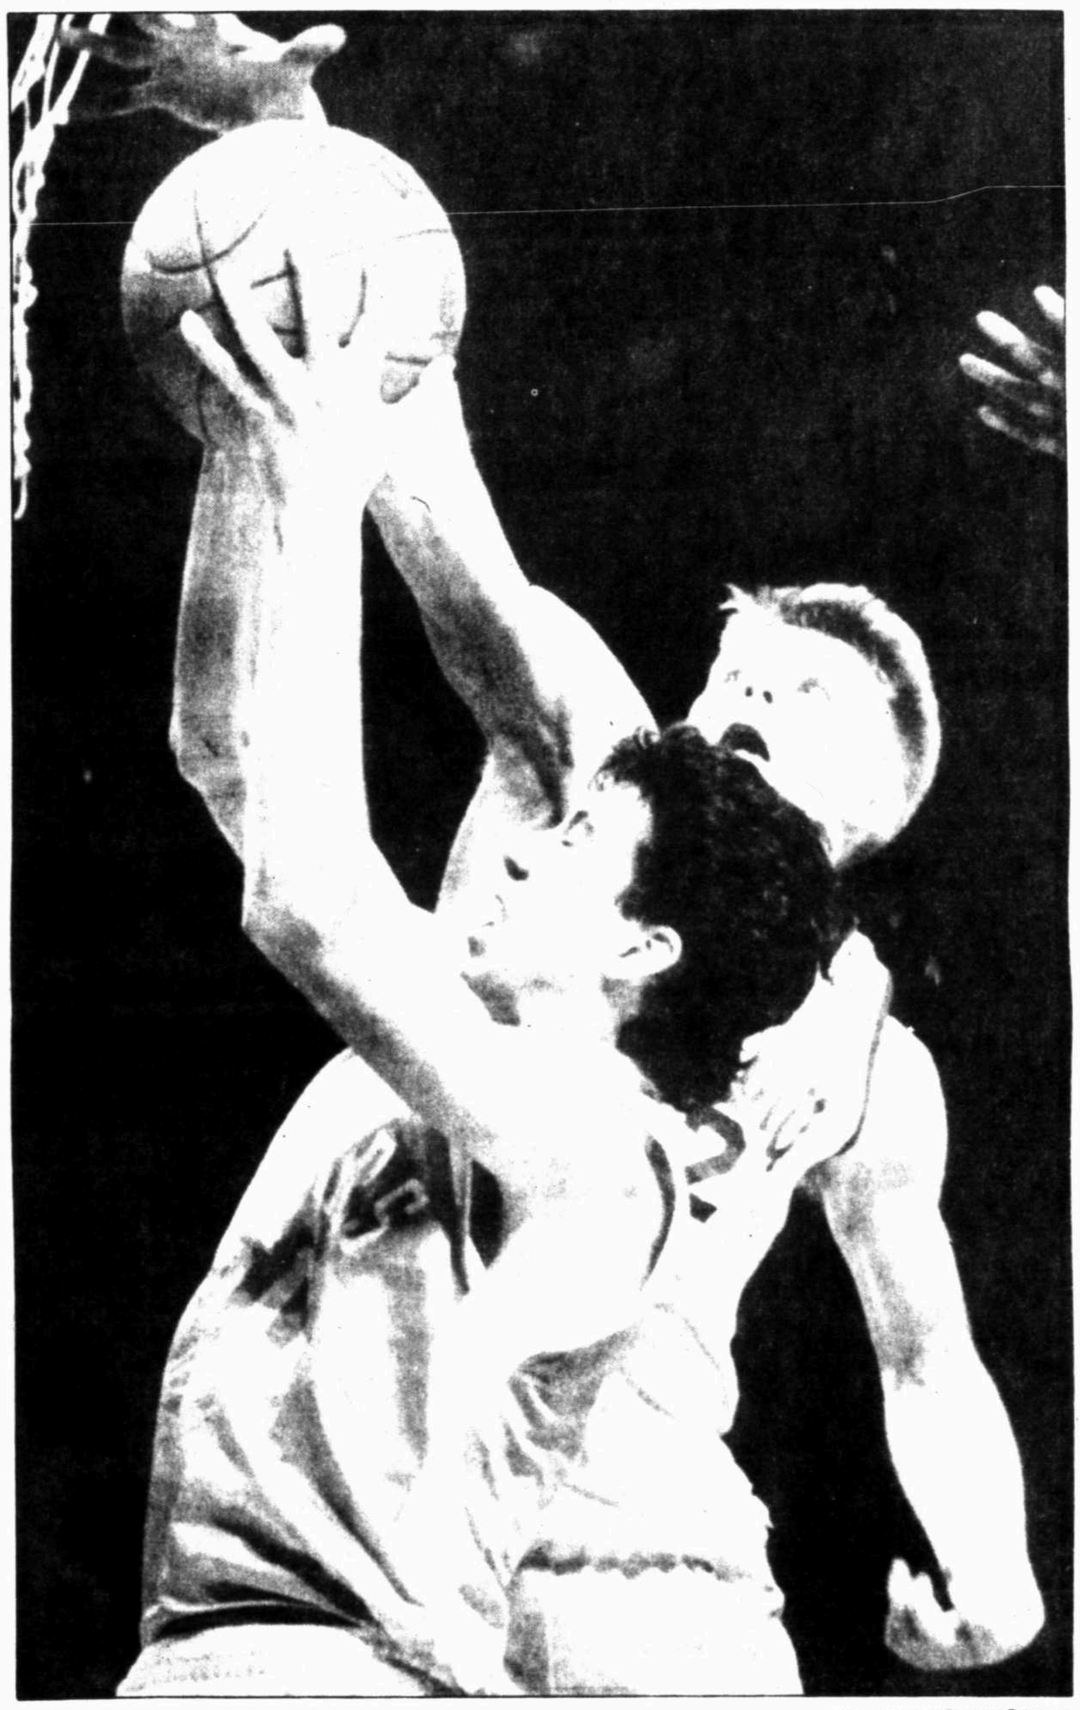

IN THE girls game, early action pointed to a MHS rout of the Rangerettes. The Lady 'Dogs opened up a 6-0 lead and seemed to be coasting after one peroid with a 12-6 advantage.

But Greenwood's Shelley Mackey led the Rangerette resurgence in the second quarter. Mackey, who finished with 17 points to top all scorers, was good for seven points in the period. Greenwood ended the half on an 8-2 burst and led at intermission 24-22.

The third quarter, however, proved to be the Lady 'Dogs' downfall as MHS managed but eight points in the period while the Rangerettes put 16 on the board.

Kendra Underwood (14) and Monica Myers (13) also scored in double figures for Greenwood, while MHS was led by 11 points from Effie Freeman and 10 each from Robin Landreth and Angie Johnson.

Westerners shake Rebels in fourth

By JIMMY PATTERSON

It was Midland Lee's turn to have a good quarter. The Rebs had been cold in the first and third quarter, but had looked good in the second quarter. So naturally, one would think Lee would have rose to the occasion and pulled off a win in the fourth.

But NOOooo.

The Rebels were forced into taking bad shots and repeatedly sent successful Lubbock High free throw shooters to the line as the visiting Westerners handed the Rebs a 55-44 defeat at Rebel Gym.

Lubbock High hit 7-of-8 free throws in the final 60 seconds to increase its lead from six to the final 11 point margin.

"We didn't have any choice, time was running out," Lee head coach Paul Stueckler said of the Westerners' missing just one from the free throw line in the final minute, thus ensuring the Rebs' defeat.

The Rebels were 0-for-7 from beyond the three-point line in the fourth quarter, 0-for-8 for the game.

With less than four minutes remaining in the fourth quarter, Lee was within just three points, but following a layup by Jaret Williams Lubbock High slowed the game down considerably. Neither team attempted another shot until 1:34 remained.

Turnovers played a crucial role for both teams' successful runs. In the second quarter, when Lee outscored Lubbock 18-9, the Westerners had five turnovers, including three straight when the Rebs went on a 10 point run. In the final half, Lee had 13 giveaways as opposed to just five for Lubbock. For the game, the Rebs racked up 17 turnovers, Lubbock 14.

"It was so bad, I don't have a whole lot to say," Stueckler said. "We had (Mike) Connally on a running play at one point and he walked. We had the ball at half court and turned it over. We did things we shouldn't have done."

Oilers' goals firmly set for next two games

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers have a dual goal the next two weeks — winning their first division title and securing a home-field playoff advantage.

They're trying to take matters one step at a time.

"I want to win the division this week so we can get it out of the way," wide receiver Ernest Givins said. "When we win the division, we can concentrate on the last game and earning the home-field advantage."

The Oilers (9-5) could clinch their first outright division title if they beat Cincinnati on Sunday or Cleveland in the Astrodome Dec. 23.

"We know being division champs is within our grasp, but it doesn't stop in Cincinnati, because we still have the opportunity to win the home-field advantage," fullback Alonzo Highsmith said.

The Oilers have the second-best record in the AFC behind Denver (10-4). If they finish with the second-best record, the Oilers would be guaranteed of hosting at least one playoff game.

Houston should be prepared for any situation over the remainder of the season.

They've shut out Pittsburgh 27-0 and been shut out 34-0 by Kansas City.

They've lost on the road, but they've also won on the road in bad weather, contrary to their road image.

"We've been in every situation possible," Highsmith said. "You don't like to lose games, but you can benefit if you learn from them. This team, we've been through every situation possible this season.

"At some point or another in the season, somebody has written us off."

The Oilers held off Tampa Bay 20-17 while Cincinnati and Cleveland were losing Sunday, projecting the Oilers into position to clinch the title against the defending AFC champion Bengals.

The Oilers won't need to seek out motivation for the rest of the season, guard Bruce Matthews says.

"This is an AFC Central game, and that's motivation enough," he said. "Besides, I'd be happy to clinch the division anywhere."

The Oilers have won five of their last six games against the Bengals but cornerback Steve Brown doesn't think the Oilers will be easy winners.

"I'd rather be playing Detroit, because having to go to Cincinnati makes it tougher," he said. "The Bengals are a good team, but it can be done. We have to do everything within our power to make sure we win the game."

Cleveland (7-6-1) is in second place in the AFC Central Division followed by Cincinnati (7-7) and Pittsburgh (7-7).

Cowboys' Christmas wish list begins with linemen

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys' Christmas wish list begins with linemen and Coach Jimmy Johnson also has his sights set on a large running back.

The list additionally includes a receiver and perhaps a tight end. Of course, fans would have liked a few more victories from the hapless Cowboys, 1-13.

"We need to bring in a couple of defensive linemen," said Johnson.

With six draft picks in the first three rounds next year, the Cowboys believe they can fill their biggest need, an outstanding defensive lineman, through the draft.

For other needs, the team can turn to Plan B free agency and trades.

The team's record matched last year's franchise-high for most losses in a season. The Cowboys, if not for choosing quarterback Steve Walsh in the supplemental draft, would have the second consecutive No. 1 pick in the draft for the first time in franchise history.

"One thing we need, one thing we will look for in the off-season is a big running back," Johnson said.

The team hopes to get a running back with a second- or third-round draft choice. But Johnson does need a generous Santa to handle his 1990 shopping list.

"We can win games next year, but we do have mismatches with some playoff teams," Johnson said Tuesday. "Physically, right now we are not better, and physically, we are not better than most of the teams we play. I just look forward to the day when we have the upper hand."

The Cowboys are giving a Christmas gift of their own to the Dallas-Fort Worth area. The NFL team is donating 10,000 tickets to its Christmas Eve game against the Green Bay Packers to agencies that serve children.

The tickets will be distributed to local agencies by Art Reach and the United Ways of Dallas and Tarrant counties.

"In the spirit of the season, we want to use this opportunity to give something back to the community and express our appreciation to the fans for their support," Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said.

Flames spill No. 25 Michigan State

Associated Press

College Basketball

For Illinois-Chicago coach Bob Hallberg, it was a moment to remember. For Michigan State's Jud Heathcote, it was 40 minutes to forget.

"I don't have any answers right now, just a lot of questions," Heathcote said after the 25th-ranked Spartans lost their first game in seven starts, 65-57 to undersized Illinois-Chicago.

In the only other game involving a ranked team on Tuesday night, No. 18 St. John's beat Fordham 68-60.

Michigan State came into the contest confident it would have no trouble muscling the Flames, and the Spartans did enjoy a 48-21 rebounding margin.

"The only way to make up for rebounding is tough defense," Hallberg said. "We have to force turnovers in order for us to win."

It was a formula that worked. The Flames' aggressive defense forced 24 turnovers and took command of the game.

"These are the moments you remember as a coach," said Hallberg, whose team is now 4-2.

The Spartans didn't do much in their own behalf, particularly in the second half when they shot 29 percent from the field, missing all six attempts from 3-point range and five of eight free throws.

"We need to start working on the little things," Heathcote said. "We need somebody who can come in and do those little things it takes to help us win."

Illinois-Chicago pulled ahead to stay on one of its four second-period 3-pointers.

"Brian Hill hit the key shot for us to break the tie in the second half on a 3-point bomb," Hallberg said. "It certainly turned our game around."

Hill scored 17 points, including 12 from 3-point range.

Corwin Hunt led the Flames with 19 points.

Michigan State started off strong, with 6-foot-6 guard Steve Smith scoring the game's first five points. Yet by midway in the first half, the Spartans were down by as much as 13 points.

Michigan State managed to cut the deficit to 34-32 at the half on Ken Redfield's 35-foot shot at the buzzer.

In the second half, the teams traded baskets until a slam dunk by Matt Steigenga of Michigan State tied it at 39 with just under 15 minutes left.

The Flames went on a 12-4 run, but Michigan State battled back to tie it again at 52-52 with five minutes left. That's when Hill's 3-pointer broke the tie and the Flames never trailed again.

Smith, who was averaging 24.5 points coming into the game, scored 16 for the Spartans before fouling out with three minutes to play. Redfield also had 16.

"This is the best job we've done all year, as far as doing what we have to do to win," Hallberg said.

No. 18 St. John's 68, Fordham 60

St. John's got 19 points apiece from Boo Harvey, Billy Singleton and Malik Sealy in posting its 21st consecutive victory over Fordham (4-3).

Still, the Rams appeared to have a chance to end that streak when Andre McClendon tied the game 48-48 with 12:29 to play. But Singleton scored the next four points and St. John's (7-2) went on a 7-0 run. Fordham got no closer than five points the rest of the game.

Dan O'Sullivan led Fordham with 18 points.

Other Games

Victor Alexander scored eight of Iowa State's 16 points in overtime and finished with a career-high 30 as the Cyclones (3-3) edged Drake 117-114 in the highest-scoring game ever played by either team. The victory snapped Iowa State's three-game losing streak, although they blew a 17-point lead in the final 6½ minutes of regulation,

Coppin State (5-2) upset Maryland 70-63 as Reggie Isaac scored 24 points and Larry Stewart tallied six of his 18 points in the final 90 seconds. Coppin led by as many as 17 points in the first half and held the lead until Teyon McCoy's 3-point basket put Maryland (4-3) on top 60-59 with 2:35 left in the game. The two teams then traded the lead until Larry Yarbray's free throw put Coppin State ahead to stay 64-63.

Georgia Southern presents problems for Lumberjacks

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — Gary DeLoach's eyes already have grown weary from watching game film of the Georgia Southern Eagles.

The Stephen F. Austin defensive coordinator has studied every move, tendency and formation concerning the Eagles' offense heading into Saturday's NCAA Division I-AA national championship football game at Statesboro, Ga.

SFA is 12-1-1 and Georgia Southern is 14-0.

DeLoach has watched and winced the film of last year's game between the two teams when quarterback Raymond Gross rushed for 161 yards to lead the Eagles to a 27-6 victory.

His conclusion?

Either the Lumberjacks contain the 6-0, 175-pound Gross, along with 5-8, 222-pound sophomore fullback Lester Efford, or Saturday afternoon promises to be one of the longest of DeLoach's career.

"He rushed for over 100 yards against us last year and we had a senior-dominated defense," remembers DeLoach. "Their fullback is a good one. They lost their starting fullback to an injury (Joe Ross) and he (Efford) comes in and rushes for over 100 yards" in the Eagles' 45-15 victory over Montana in the semifinals.

"Those are not the only threats they have either," DeLoach said.

Gross, a junior, has rushed for 983 yards and thrown for 1,356 yards out of a wishbone.

"We can't afford to let him get wide," DeLoach said. "When they run the option, we may have only one man on the pitch. When he passes, we want to make him stay in the pocket. He throws better when he scrambles."

Gross threw for a season-best 180 yards on a 7-of-10 showing against Montana. Gross and Efford run behind one of the smaller offensive lines the Lumberjacks defensive front will have faced all season.

While SFA averages 277 pounds per man in its front four, the Georgia Southern offensive line checks in at 248 pounds per man from tackle to tackle.

Eagle center Sammy Twiggs, a two-year letterman, weighs only 219 pounds — 12 pounds less than SFA weak safety David Whitmore.

The Eagles have averaged 31.6 points and 395 yards of total offense.

Fight wakes up slumping Lakers

Associated Press

NBA Roundup

The fight was a split decision. The game was no contest.

The Los Angeles Lakers, sluggish until they started slugging it out, beat up the Charlotte Hornets 103-89 Tuesday night.

"It gave us some incentive," James Worthy, who scored 27 points, said. "It's a shame it takes something like that, but at least we got the win."

That's more than the Lakers got in their last two tries, when they blew fourth-quarter leads in losing to Orlando and Washington. The host Hornets lost their eighth straight.

The turning point in the Lakers-Hornets game came with 10:53 left in the second quarter. Worthy went in for a shot and Charlotte's Stuart Gray and Kenny Gattison went up to block it.

Worthy and Gray began pushing and, after they were separated, Gray tried to punch Byron Scott. Michael Cooper intervened and shoved Gray into a row of photographers on the baseline. Gray got up and tackled Cooper as players on each side ran onto the court.

"(Gray) made a hard foul on me and I turned around and gave him a hard look," Worthy said. "Then he pushed me and I pushed back. That's when Michael came in. He's always comes in in those situations. He's our bodyguard."

Referees Paul Mihalak, Ronnie Nunn and Pete Quinn conferred for five minutes and then announced that Cooper, Worthy and Gray were ejected. Moments later, the officials said Worthy wasn't out, after all.

"We didn't throw James Worthy out," Mihalak said. "When I went to the table I said 'Cooper,' and 'Worthy' came out inadvertantly. It was my fault."

Lakers coach Pat Riley thought so.

"I didn't think it was a very fair trade-off, Worthy and Cooper for Stuart Gray," he said. "Paul said he made a mistake. I didn't say anything to him. I was just very upset that we were going to lose two key players. I didn't think that was right. James never did throw a punch."

Cooper and Gray each were given double technical fouls and Worthy and Scott each received technicals.

When play resumed, Worthy scored 13 points in the second quarter, sparking an 11-0 burst that put the Lakers ahead 54-48 at halftime.

Magic Johnson added 27 points for the Lakers. Dell Curry scored 23 points and Kurt Rambis, playing against his former team, had 15 rebounds for Charlotte.

The Hornets shot 39 percent from the field, the 13th straight time they've been under 50 percent. Rex Chapman, their leading scorer, was just 3-of-20.

Rockets 105, Suns 83

Akeem Olajuwon scored 25 points, got 20 rebounds and blocked nine shots as host Houston beat Phoenix and ended a four-game losing streak.

Otis Thorpe had 24 points and 14 rebounds and Buck Johnson added 22 points for the Rockets, who went ahead to stay with four minutes left in the first quarter.

Tim Perry scored 15 points for the Suns while Tom Chambers, the NBA's fifth-leading scorer, was held to 12.

Bulls 105, Mavericks 97

Michael Jordan scored 41 points and Chicago beat visiting Dallas for its fifth victory in six games. Jordan got 40 points for the fifth time this season.

Jordan, leading the league with a 32-point average, scored 21 in the fourth quarter. He sparked a 15-8 run as the Bulls pulled away from an 84-81 lead.

Chicago went ahead to stay 3½ minutes into the game. The Mavericks lost their third straight game, their longest losing streak of the season.

Hawks 102, Spurs 94

Veteran Moses Malone shut down rookie David Robinson and host Atlanta stopped San Antonio.

Malone scored 24 points, Doc Rivers had 21 and Dominique Wilkins added 20. Robinson, plagued by early foul trouble, playing sparingly.

The Hawks took the lead for good at 85-84 on Kevin Willis' basket with 7:19 remaining.

Pistons 121, Nuggets 108

Detroit gave Denver its first home loss of the season, overcoming a 16-point deficit in the second quarter behind Joe Dumars and Isiah Thomas.

The Nuggets are 9-1 at McNichols Arena. New York is the only remaining home unbeaten.

Mark Aguirre hit 12 of 15 shots and scored 29 points for the Pistons. Dumars had 26 points and Thomas 24.

Reserve Walter Davis led the Nuggets with 27 points. Detroit's starters outscored Denver's 107-52.

Golden State led 66-50 at halftime. The Kings got no closer than 82-72 in the second half.

Pacers 113, Timberwolves 112

Indiana continued as the NBA's surprise team, surviving a wild finish in overtime to defeat visiting Minnesota.

The Pacers (12-5) did not get their 12th victory last season until the 52nd game, on Feb. 24.

Chuck Person, who had 31 points, had a basket with five seconds left for a 113-109 lead. Pooh Richardson of the Timberwolves countered with a 3-point shot with 1.8 seconds remaining.

Trail Blazers 99, Clippers 92

Terry Porter scored 22 points, including four during a 10-0 run late in the game, sending Portland over the visiting Clippers.

Portland led throughout the fourth period until Gary Grant's 20-footer put the Clippers 85-84 with 3:46 left. With Porter and Kevin Duckworth hitting two baskets each, the Trail Blazers then scored the next 10 points for a 94-85 advantage with 1:12 to go.

Tom Garrick scored 20 points for Los Angeles. Clyde Drexler had 17 and Duckworth 16 for Portland.

Bucks 106, Magic 103

Jay Humphries made two foul shots with six seconds left as Milwaukee held off visiting Orlando.

Paul Pressey scored 20 points for the Bucks, including four in the final 39 seconds.

Jerry Reynolds of the Magic missed a 3-point shot at the buzzer. He finished with 26 points.

Nets 97, 76ers 82

Pardee, Dooley to coach Blue-Gray All-Star Classic

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — The Blue-Gray All Star Football Classic has lined up Bill Dooley of Wake Forest and Jack Pardee of Houston to coach the South team, while Rich Brooks of Oregon and John Gutekunst of Minnesota will handle the North squad.

Charles "Fats" Jones, executive director of the 52nd annual game, announced the coaches Tuesday for the Christmas Day game, which will be broadcast by ABC at 11 a.m.

Dooley, a native of Mobile, will handle the South offense and will be assisted by his offensive coordinator, Marty Galbraith. Dooley has been in college coaching for 23 years at North Carolina, Virginia Tech and Wake Forest, where he assumed the top job in 1987. His 148 victories rank him among the 10 winningest active college coaches.

Pardee will coach the South defense and will be assisted by Houston's defensive chief, Jim Eddy. Pardee, who has been a "Coach of the Year" in the National Football League, United States Football League and Southwest Conference, led Houston to a 9-2 record this season and saw quarterback Andre Ware pick up the Heisman Trophy.

Brooks will handle the North offense, along with Oregon assistant coach Mike Bellotti, and is making his second appearance at the all-star game, having coached the North in 1986.

Gutekunst, Minnesota coach since December 1985, will lead the North defense, with the help of Minnesota defensive coordinator Dick Biddle.

"It has become a tradition for our head coaches to bring their top assistants with them," Jones said. "The pro scouts love the idea because it allows for better overall coordination and it gives the linemen more individual instruction and a better chance to learn the system."

Jones said the two teams will be announced later.

The game is sponsored by the Montgomery Lions Club and has raised more than $2.3 million for humanitarian services.

Postema's umpiring dream dies with walking papers

By JIM LITKE
AP Sports Writer

Pam Postema never wanted to be a cause, and now she won't be a big-league umpire either. Stalled at the threshhold of Triple-A for seven tumultuous years, she has been handed her walking papers by baseball.

"I got my evaluation and the only thing it said was that I ejected too many people," Postema said in a telephone interview Tuesday night from Phoenix, where she was back at her offseason job driving a UPS delivery truck. "That, and that my attitude went downhill at the end of the season.

"It's too bad. I would have been good for the game. I have a lot of integrity and I wouldn't have embarrassed anybody, that's for sure.

"I could understand it if they said I wasn't good enough, or I wasn't strong enough on the balls and strikes, or I couldn't handle the bases, or whatever. But this was just outrageous, and it tells me they've got to be reaching."

Postema, 35, came into the business in 1978 as only the third woman umpire in professional baseball, and four years later became the first promoted past Double-A.

She always insisted she cared not for pioneering the womens' cause, but neither did she let her gender get in the way. Postema's tenure in the game was marked by many of the incidents common to members of the fraternity — she was spat on, cursed at and had a collarbone broken because a young catcher mishandled a fastball — and a few that were not. One night, someone left a frying pan waiting for her at home plate and occasionally she was the victim of sexual innuendo.

But she kept her cool throughout. Her departure robs baseball of one of its more colorful and feisty arbiters and leaves 29-year-old Theresa Cox, who worked last year in the Arizona Rookie League, as the only woman umpire in the game.

"I liked the game, I liked umpiring and I really thought it should be my life. That's why I stuck it out," Postema said. "And I still think I can do the job as well as anybody.

"I'm bitter right now and I don't want to brag, but if I couldn't make it, I don't see how any woman can."

Postema's prospects for a ticket to the big leagues seemed strongest in the last two years, when she worked spring training games under the watchful eyes of Ed Vargo, a former umpire who is director of umpire supervision for the National League.

Vargo was out of his New York office Tuesday and could not be reached for comment. Postema said she was informed that officials of both the National and American Leagues decided during the recent winter meetings that she was judged unsuitable for the majors this season.

Because it was the third straight year she fell into that category, she was given her release to make room at the Triple-A level for another prospect. A half-dozen other Triple-A umpires, all of them men, were similarly released in recent weeks.

"The job of minor league umpire is in no way intended to be a career," said Randy Mobley, who heads the American Association circuit, in which Postema worked 144 games last season. "It's a means to an ends, the end of which is to become a major league umpire."

Ed Lawrence, director of the major leagues' Umpire Development Office, did not comment directly on Postema's situation. But when asked what his office looks for in a big-league umpire, he replied: "The No. 1 thing is handling situations" — what the rest of us call arguments.

"That deals directly with one's maturity," Lawrence said. "Very close behind that is consistency in calling balls and strikes, and handling the plays at the bases. Then technique, voice and so on.

"But handling situations is at the top of the list, showing force without being arrogant," he concluded. "Because the umpire holds the ultimate weapon of rejection."

Postema conceded the news did not come out of the blue. And she was well aware that openings at the big-league level were few and far between because umpires no longer have a mandatory retirement age and those who have suffered the deprivations of the minors — low pay, abusive ballplayers and demanding schedules — are reluctant to step down once they've hit the comparatively plush big time.

"I never regret anything I say or do, because at the moment, I really believe it," Postema said. "It's the way I've lived my life and always have. I endured a lot, but it was a great experience that I'd never want to take back."

NCAA penalizes N.C. State cagers

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Jim Valvano says he will stay on as North Carolina State basketball coach, and players on his team accepted blame for the sanctions imposed on the program by the NCAA.

"I told you a long time ago and I'll say it again — being part of the problem, being part of the solution was always important to me," Valvano said Tuesday after the program received a two-year probation that included a ban from postseason play next spring. "I have a commitment to young people here and to the department."

Violations included the misuse of complimentary tickets and sneakers, the NCAA said.

The NCAA did not impose harsher penalties, including a ban from television, because the school undertook its own corrective and punitive actions, Charles Smrt, director of infractions for the NCAA, said.

"This is not a typical major infractions case that we usually deal with," Smrt said. "This is not a case where there's academic irregularities. This is not a case where there are cash payments ..." to athletes.

The NCAA investigation, sparked by allegations of wrongdoing detailed in the book "Personal Fouls," said that in the four years examined "there were as many as 650 erroneous designations" of tickets intended for players' families and that "an excessive number of shoes were issued with little or no effort to keep track of the shoes."

Tickets were sold or exchanged for merchandise valued up to $150, the NCAA said. Shoes, valued at $75 a pair, were traded for shoes and apparel of equal value at a local sporting goods store, the report said.

According to the players, it was their own errors in judgment and their own continued abuse of the rules that led to the sanctions.

"We're the cause, not anyone from past teams," sophomore forward Tom Gugliotta said Tuesday night. "It was our own negligence.

"We were unaware, or weren't too concerned about how we were treating the ticket policy, so we suffer for it. ... We never thought we were in any kind of trouble. I don't think people intended to do it.

"But the NCAA did what it had to do. We think the NCAA treated us fairly, that they were fair penalties."

The NCAA punishment was announced Tuesday by N.C. State interim chancellor Larry Monteith, who was joined at a news conference by Smrt.

Of the six violations uncovered in the NCAA investigation, two were deemed to be serious — the selling and misuse of complementary tickets and the sale of athletic shoes.

N.C. State sources told The News and Observer of Raleigh that an NCAA official informed the school that the Committee on Infractions may not have ordered the 1990 tournament sanction, only the two-year probation, had there not been repeated violations. Sources said violations had continued after the investigation was begun.

Asked about the ticket violations, junior guard Cris Corchiani said: "We can't condone what we did. We're the ones to blame.

"We made mistakes, and we'll have to pay for them. All we can do is try and learn from our mistakes."

Neither Gugliotta nor Corchiani would say whether they were guilty of breaking ticket rules. The NCAA also did not identify the players involved.

The coach maintained he had no knowledge of any violations.

"We did not have any individual in any level of our department who intended to violate any rule, but we did not have in place the proper procedure to ensure that no rules would be violated," Valvano said.

Monteith said there were no plans to fire anyone, including Valvano. But he declined to give Valvano a vote of confidence, and Valvano said he wasn't surprised.

"This is a matter on which Dr. Monteith and I have continuing discussions," he said.

Becky French, the university's counsel, said the violation was not sufficient to void a contract provision under which N.C. State would be obligated to pay Valvano $500,000 if he was fired.

The Atlantic Coast Conference may choose to bar N.C. State from the league tournament, which determines the ACC's automatic representative in the NCAA Tournament field.

The NCAA also agreed to adopt several of N.C. State's self-imposed penalties, including tighter controls over tickets and shoes, shuffling personnel in the athletic department and curtailing recruiting and basketball scholarships.

The one-year restriction on NCAA Tournament play represents a departmental financial loss. But it does not present the same loss that would have resulted from a ban on television income or a sizable fine.

Valvano said he hoped his team, which is 6-1 and ranked 16th, would be able to weather the probation.

Yankees obtain Tim Leary in trade with Reds

NEW YORK (AP) — Tim Leary is ready to come back to the hustle and bustle of New York.

"LA gets tired after a while," Leary said. "The fans are so dead."

Win or lose, Leary won't find quiet in Yankee Stadium, where he will be pitching next season following a trade on Tuesday. The Cincinnati Reds, who got Leary from Los Angeles last summer, sent the right-hander to New York with outfielder Van Snider in exchange for outfielder Hal Morris and right-hander Rodney Imes.

Leary, 8-14 in 1989 with a 3.52 earned-run average, joins Andy Hawkins and Pascual Perez as definite starters as the Yankees try to rebuild their pitching staff. New York's team earned-run average of 4.50 last season was second-worst in baseball, trailing only the Detroit Tigers.

Leary said he isn't apprehensive about coming to the Yankees, whose constant turmoil was a reason that top free agent pitchers Mark Langston and Mark Davis turned down George Steinbrenner's millions and signed elsewhere.

"There's always that unknown factor," Leary said from his home in Los Angeles. "You read and hear about the controversy going on. That's something I'll get to see firsthand. I'm just looking forward to pitching. The other stuff doesn't really bother me."

Leary, a 31-year-old right-hander who is joining his fifth team, has a 45-56 lifetime record. He was 17-11 with a 2.91 ERA in 1988 as the Dodgers won the World Series, but was just 6-7 by last July 18, when the Dodgers traded him to Cincinnati with Mariano Duncan for Kal Daniels and Lenny Harris. Leary went 2-7 in 14 starts for the Reds with a 3.71 ERA.

"It gets real defeating when you come out of a game losing 2-1 and the chances are 90 percent you're going to get a loss," Leary said.

He lost 13 games as a starter last year and the Reds and Dodgers scored just 17 runs in those losses.

"The key thing in Leary's case is they didn't score a lot of runs for him," George Bradley, the Yankees vice president for player personnel, said. "Our scouting reports indicated he's truly a much better pitcher than his record. We see him as a 15-game to 17-game winner, easily."

Leary was a star at UCLA when the New York Mets picked him in the first round of the June 1979 draft.

Dean Higgins recorded a hole-in-one Sunday at Mission Dorado with a 150-yard shot with a seven-wood on the No. 4 hole.

REBELS

Lubbock was led by Clayton Duncan's 19 points and 10 rebounds, high marks in both categories for both teams. Lee's Bo Blackburn, who impressed Stueckler with his defense, also had 10 rebounds and showed he was not at all intimidated in playing underneath against the taller opposition.

Lee was on the short end of the stick at the end of the first quarter, trailing 15-12. But two Lubbock turnovers later, Lee took a 16-15 lead just 29 seconds into the second quarter. The Rebs proceeded to go on a 10 point roll and at one point led 22-15, their biggest lead of the game. The Rebs led 30-24 at halftime. Lubbock High then outscored Lee 15-9 in the third to force a 39-39 tie going into the fourth quarter.

Lee's only double-figure scorer was David Meade, who had 12 points. Normally-reliable Greg Crowe was handled effectively by the Westerner defense; with a 17.3 point per game average before Tuesday, Crowe was held to just 7 points against Lubbock.

The Rebels, now 6-6 on the year, next face the 4-7 Greenwood Rangers at 6 p.m. Friday at Chap Center.

In junior varsity action, Herb Crisp sunk a layup with 14 seconds left in the game and came up with a crucial rebound 11 seconds later to lead the Rebel JV to a 45-44 win over Lubbock. The Reb JV now stands at 5-4 on the year.

MHS

The MHS girls went to 5-5 in their final non-district game of the season. The Lady Bulldogs will open District 4-5A play Friday when they travel Odessa High. The Bulldogs will also be on the road Friday when they play a non-district affair at Big Spring.

The Rangers will play Midland Lee at the Chap Center at 8 p.m. Friday, while the Greenwood girls host their annual tournament Thursday through Saturday at the Greenwood gymnasium.

Bush budget based on bright note

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration will base its next budget on an optimistic economic forecast showing moderate growth, lower inflation and unemployment holding steady, administration sources say.

The sources, who spoke on condition that their names not be used, said the administration is expected to forecast that the economy, as measured by the gross national product, will expand by 2.6 percent next year.

That GNP figure, based on growth from the fourth quarter of this year through the fourth quarter of 1990, is significantly higher than the outlook of most private economists, many of whom are looking for weak growth of around 1.9 percent next year.

The administration sources said the GNP forecast has not received final approval from President Bush, but they said the number is unlikely to change significantly.

The administration's economic outlook, which will be formally released on Jan. 22 along with its 1991 budget proposal, is prepared based on information supplied by economists at the Council of Economic Advisers, the Office of Management and Budget and the Treasury Department.

The administration's last formal review of the economy, released in July, also projected economic growth of 2.6 percent for 1990.

The sources said the predictions made in July on inflation and unemployment would be very close to the figures used in the next budget.

In its July review, the administration forecast that inflation, as measured by the Consumer Price Index, would rise 4.1 percent in 1990 following a 5 percent increase this year. Through October, consumer prices were rising at an annual rate of 4.6 percent.

The administration's July forecast predicted unemployment will average 5.4 percent in 1990. That prediction is also viewed as optimistic by many private ecoomists given the fact that the unemployment rate has already risen to 5.4 percent with higher joblessness expected in the months ahead as the current dramatic slowdown in growth spreads through the economy.

While stressing that the final decision on the forecast has not been made, Michael Boskin, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, said, "It is safe to say that because the economy has performed fairly closely to what we were forecasting back (in July) ... that unless something radical changes, it is unlikely that the macroeconomic assumptions would change very much."

Through the first three quarters of this year, the economy expanded at an annual rate of 2.9 percent.

OIL INDUSTRY

BP forms new oil company

HOUSTON (SWN) — A new Houston-based independent oil company has been formed, TEX/CON Oil & Gas Company, President and Chief Executive Officer William J. Johnson announced today.

The new company and staff are being formed out of BP Exploration Inc. TEX/CON will be comprised of all of BP Exploration's onshore exploration and production and natural gas gathering, aggregating and marketing activities in the lower 48 states.

TEX/CON is governed by a board of directors with BP holding a majority of the seats; otherwise, TEX/CON will operate independently of BP.

Johnson said the decision to set up an independent company makes sense in today's domestic competitive environment.

"The cost structure and operating philosophy of an independent is much more appropriate for conducting business in the lower 48 states," said Johnson. "One can't operate effectively here with the systems, procedures and corporate culture required to manage large assets in Alaska and the North Sea. Independent from BP, TEX/CON will be low cost and quickly responsive to changing business conditions.

"We have a very flat management structure designed for quick decisions and a lot of interaction between management and employees at all levels," Johnson added. "Our cash flow is strong and our employees experienced in our operating areas, so when opportunities are identified we can move on them quickly and decisively."

The name TEX/CON is derived from its home state, Texas, and its area of operations, the continental United States.

TEX/CON will be in the top 10 percent of domestic independents by any yardstick, Johnson added.

The company will concentrate on developing new oil and gas reserves in the continental United States, "which is an area we think still has a lot of potential for low-cost, efficient operators," Johnson said. "Also, we'll

Oryx loses $191 million package in BP deal

DALLAS (AP) — Oryx Energy Co.'s previously announced purchase of $1.3 billion worth of oil and gas properties has been reduced by $191 million as existing partners have exercised rights to purchase the holdings.

Oryx announced in September it would buy the North Sea and other holdings of British Petroleum Co. PLC.

Tuesday's announcement said partners in properties in Colombia, Italy, Dubai and one section of the North Sea have pre-empted Oryx for those properties.

About 80 percent of the remaining properties are located in the North Sea, with the remainder in Indonesia, Ecuador, Gabon and Italy. Oryx estimates that proved and probable reserves are 356 million equivalent barrels.

"The properties that were taken out represented only a small part of the total transaction," Oryx Chairman Robert P. Hauptfuhrer said. "Strategically, we're getting the balanced, worldwide portfolio that we set out to acquire."

Juke box hotel planned for Times Square

N.Y. Times News Service

A $300 million hotel designed to look and light up like a giant jukebox has just opened in Times Square, where the idea for the building first took root in the mind of its architect almost 50 years ago.

The Holiday Inn Crowne Plaza-Manhattan, a 46-story hotel on the west side of Broadway between 48th and 49th Streets, is the second major hotel project to go up in the area in four years, while two others are under construction and two more are being planned.

The 770-room hotel is the flagship of the 25-unit Crowne Plaza chain, a division of the Holiday Corp., which founded Holiday Inns.

The new hotel certainly is different, in a pattern that some American architects are calling the Wurlitzer look.

"The Wurlitzer Co. designed a jukebox that imitated the design of the buildings that went up around Times Square in the 1930s and 1940s, and now I'm imitating Wurlitzer," said Alan Lapidus, the architect of the Holiday Inn Crowne Plaza-Manhattan.

A graduate of and a former teacher at Columbia University's School of Architecture, Lapidus said:

"I grew up in Brooklyn, and it used to be a big thing for me as a little boy to come into Times Square at night, step out of the subway at 42nd Street and be visually overwhelmed by the art moderne buildings and their lights, and my design seeks to re-create my reminiscences of that time.'

And the concept may be gathering momentum: Another hotel in the Wurlitzer style owned by the Marriott Corp. opened in San Francisco in October.

"I think people long for the good old days when buildings made us smile, so I deliberately chose to use pink and burgundy on the outside of the Crowne Plaza as a happy way of inviting people to come inside," Lapidus added.

Responding to design mandates of the city Planning Commission for the area, and with the image of the Times Square glitz of years ago in mind, he ringed the facade with giant banks of multicolored lights, a promotion that will cost more than $100,000 a year to maintain and operate, said Michael Silberstein, the new hotel's managing director.

Silberstein said that the property had already begun to attract business travelers and tourists, even before its opening on Dec. 1, and that 12 hours after opening "we had 129 reservations for New Year's Eve without advertising."

Silberstein said his marketing strategy was to attract a mix of business executives coming to the new office space being developed in midtown, people attending conventions

Marathon raises posted to $19.75

From Staff and Wire Reports

Crude oil futures approached the $21 per barrel mark this morning, rising 29 cents from per barrel from Tuesday's close to rest at $20.94 for West Texas Intermediate Crude.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange Tuesday, petroleum futures prices finished mixed with wholesale home heating oil rising as crude oil and gasoline declined.

At the same time, Marathon announced it has raised its posted price for WTI to $19.75 per barrel. Other local crude buyers are expected to match this increase.

Energy market analysts said a late round of selling defused a rally that had carried the January crude oil contract near its highs.

The contract for January delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of U.S. crude oil, fell 5 cents to $20.65 per barrel, erasing a portion of Monday's 22-cent increase. The February through April contracts posted larger declines.

The January contract for No.2 heating oil rose 0.35 cent to 67.30 cents a gallon on the New York Mercantile Exchange, adding to Monday's gain of 0.58 cent. But contracts for delivery during February through April fell by amounts ranging from 0.27 cent to 0.68 cent.

Among other refined products traded on the New York Merc, wholesale unleaded gasoline for January delivery, which sank 0.25 cent on Monday, dropped another 0.37 cent to 52.03 cents a gallon. Other contracts also closed lower.

Dollar falls in 'nervous' trading

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell today against all major foreign currencies in nervous European trading, dealers said.

Gold prices were mixed.

Dealers said they were flabbergasted by the dollar's tumble, which went beyond all expectations and has left most year-end trading strategies in shambles.

"There is a big uncertainty, people didn't expect that," said a dealer at a Munich bank. "The question is now whether there is any interest by the central bank to support the dollar."

Dealers said they had not seen any central bank intervention early today.

The market was waiting for this afternoon's release of November U.S. retail sales figures, traders said.

Even if the sales figures are better than their modest expectations, dealers said bearish sentiment on the dollar is likely to persist at least until the end of the year.

In London, the dollar fell against the British pound. It cost $1.6085 to buy one pound, compared with $1.6027 late Tuesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $417.25 a troy ounce, down from $417.50 bid late Tuesday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $417.10.

In Zurich, the bid price was $416.80, up from $416.75 bid late Tuesday.

Gold in Hong Kong fell $1.08 to close at a bid $414.73.

Energy stocks drive market rally

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market closed higher Tuesday after a late-afternoon rally led by the energy sector.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials gained 23.89 to close at 2,752.13.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by about 3 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 889 up, 639 down and 481 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board was 176.82 million shares, up from 147.13 million in the previous session.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 213.88 million shares.

Analysts said large shareblock purchases of oil and gas stocks were triggered by expectations of further gains following the rally of recent weeks. The broader market traded in narrow ranges until stock-index arbitrage program trading sent prices higher in the late afternoon, they said.

"It looks like a pretty big rush to the plate with oils," said Eugene Peroni of Janney Montgomery Scott Inc. in Philadelphia. "I think there's a perception that oil prices are going to be moving higher next year."

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Purchasing managers' optimism ebbs

NEW YORK (AP) — Purchasing managers of the nation's corporations think the economy will avoid a recession next year but optimism has ebbed to the lowest level since the early 1980s.

The economy will be weak in the first half of 1990 and improve during the remainder of the year, producing moderate growth overall, the National Association of Purchasing Management said in a forecast.

Inflation will ease further next year and should finish this year milder than previously expected, the report said.

National budget based on high growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration, striving to meet deficit-reduction targets without a tax increase, is preparing to base its upcoming budget on an optimistic forecast showing 1990 economic growth far higher than many private estimates, administration sources said.

The sources said Tuesday that the administration is expected to forecast that the economy, as measured by the gross national product, will expand by 2.6 percent next year.

Times Mirror predicts lower earnings

NEW YORK (AP) — Times Mirror Inc. says it is unlikely to have higher operating earnings this year, partly due to a weak advertising market for newspapers in the Northeast.

Separately, The New York Times Co. on Tuesday announced a $44 million charge against fourth-quarter earnings due to its investment in its forest products operation and estimated costs related to expected voluntary union staff cuts at The New York Times, its flagship newspaper.

Plant fined $3 million for safety violations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department is proposing $3.3 million in fines against a Philadelphia plant for 840 alleged safety violations, including failure to tell some workers that tests showed their hearing was deteriorating.

Most of the citations issued Tuesday to the Budd Co. by the department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration alleged violations either of noise- and hearing-related standards or requirements that employers keep detailed records of workplace injuries.

Valhi withdraws NL bid

N.Y. Times-News Service

DALLAS — Valhi Inc., a company controlled by Harold C. Simmons, the Dallas investor, said Tuesday it had withdrawn its offer to acquire its NL Industries subsidiary in a stock swap.

The Dallas-based Valhi said investment bankers for the Houston-based oil and chemicals unit had decided that the company could not support the exchange ratio offer in the Valhi proposal.

NL shares rose 12.5 cents each Tuesday, to $23.875, on the New York Stock Exchange while Valhi's also gained 12.5 cents each, to $16.375.

Valhi, which owns 66 percent of NL Industries, had offered NL shareholders 1.5 shares of Valhi common stock for each NL share.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Policy loan good move if interest rate is low

By BILL DOYLE

Q. In 1963, I took out a $10,000 life insurance policy and have been paying a $14.43 monthly premium ever since. In 1981, I started receiving my policy dividends by check, rather than leaving them with the insurance company, and I also borrowed the maximum amount — $2,548.98 — on the policy at 5 percent interest. The $2,548.98 was put into a certificate of deposit and remains there.

Over the 26 years I have had this policy, I have paid approximately $4,190 in premiums. Since 1981, I have received $1,146.20 in dividends and have paid approximately $1,000 interest on the policy loan.

I feel I have created a monster. Should I pay off the loan?

A. There's no good reason to do that, as long as the CD interest remains higher than the interest you pay on the policy loan. With interest rates where they are, we'll have to assume you're getting better than 5 percent on the CD. If interest rates in the marketplace plunge to the point where you would receive less than 5 percent by rolling over the CD when it matures, then use that money to retire the loan.

Doyle

Rather than create a monster, you made a smart move.

It's obvious you have what is called an "ordinary" or "whole" life insurance policy, on which the loan value and cash surrender value build up as you make premium payments.

Most policies of that type issued before interest rates shot up allow policyholders to borrow at low rates. The loan interest rates on newly issued policies are much higher.

Anyone who has a policy permitting borrowing at low interest should do exactly what you did and put the borrowed money to work earning higher interest.

One kicker. The loan you obtained will reduce the death benefit your beneficiary will receive when you join the choir silent. However, because you have the $2,548.98 tucked away in a CD, that will not reduce the total amount you leave behind.

Q. My son is to receive a settlement from an insurance company for injuries sustained in an automobile accident. The insurance company is offering a structured settlement in which the money would be received over a period of years. This is claimed to be tax free.

Is this type of settlement an advantage, or should he take a lump sum and invest the proceeds himself?

A. Unless your son is the kind of person who fritters the money away, my advice is to insist on a lump-sum settlement. Let's hope he will then have the good sense to invest the money to make more money for him.

If he accepts the money in installments, the insurance company will invest it and profit from the deal. That arrangement should increase the total amount your boy collects. After all, he would be entitled to share in the profit the insurance company makes by investing the portions of the settlement it would not yet have paid out.

My bet is your son can do better taking the lump sum and investing it himself. The lump-sum settlement will be free from income tax.

Q. I purchased a single-premium life insurance policy on my nephew with one payment of $30,000. It provided for an initial death benefit of $64,679, which increases as time goes on. The initial annual interest rate was 7.3 percent.

The insurance agent told me the interest was tax free. A friend of mine looked over the policy and thinks the interest is tax deferred. What do you say?

A. Your friend is correct. The interest that builds up on that policy is deferred from income tax until it is withdrawn. At that point, it becomes taxable as ordinary income.

Of course, if your nephew dies, the beneficiary will receive the policy's death benefit tax free. My guess is you are the beneficiary.

November retail sales biggest in four months

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales rose 0.8 percent in November, the biggest increase in four months, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said sales rose to a seasonally adjusted $144.6 billion in November after falling 1.3 percent in October after a 0.3 percent gain in September.

Sales had advanced 0.9 percent in August.

Retail sales account for about one-third of the nation's economic activity and are watched as a sign of the extent to which the Federal Reserve's policy of fighting inflation by tightening credit is slowing the economy.

Auto sales gained 0.5 percent in November. Sales for the first 11 months of 1989 increased 3 percent over the same period of 1988. Sales in the first 11 months of 1988 had gained 10.5 percent.

Car sales, which represent about 20 percent of total retail sales, declined 4.9 percent in October after rising 0.5 percent in September.

Excluding the automobile category, retail sales advanced 0.9 percent to an 11-month record of $113 billion.

Sales of durable goods — big-ticket items expected to last at least three years — rose 0.7 percent. Durable sales fell 3 percent in October after being unchanged in September.

Sales of building materials gained 2 percent.

and tourists.

The regular room rates are about $202 for the smallest single, and $228 for the smallest double.

"When all the six hotel projects in Times Square are finished, there will be more than 4,000 new rooms and 300,000 square feet of exhibit space, enough to accommodate large conventions, and that is going to benefit all the new hotels," he said.

The first to go up in 1985 was the Marriott Marquis, an 1,874-room hotel at Broadway between 45th and 46th Streets.

Two other hotels are to open next year: the 460-unit Embassy Suites atop the old Palace Theater at the southeast corner of Seventh Avenue and 47th Street, and the 638-room Hotel Macklowe at 145 West 44th Street.

The two in the planning stages are the 315-room Ramada Renaissance, which in 1991 would occupy the block bounded by Broadway, Seventh Avenue and 47th and 48th Streets, and the 324-room Hampton Inn, a franchise hotel, which would open in 1992 on the south side of 50th Street between Broadway and Seventh Avenue.

"In addition to conventions, we want to attract the business traveler who is headed for the new office buildings going up in the area, and we hope about one-third of our clientele will be foreign tourists," Silberstein added, pointing out that his hotel was designed to take advantage of the Holiday Inn's central Holidex reservation system.

William Zeckendorf Jr., who is a major partner in the Holiday Inn Crowne Plaza, said at the time the project was announced four years ago that the investors hoped to take advantage of the international reservations system of the Holiday Corp.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The sky is the limit where career progress is concerned. Greater financial security will be yours when you change jobs or move up the executive ladder. Promote original ideas in April. Once you gain public support, everything else will fall into place. Class reunions could lead to a renewed relationship in July. Travel in August or September gives you wonderful new insights.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Patty Duke, tennis player Stan Smith, astrologer Nostradamus, slugger Bill Buckner, comedian Morey Amsterdam.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Moneymaking ideas abound. Pursuing the right one will lead to a bulging pocketbook. Successful people come into your life. Renegotiate an agreement with your partner. Improved communication will mean a more rewarding home life.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A legacy comes your way when you least expect it. Drop-in visitors provide a change of pace and should be welcomed warmly. Cook up some holiday treats and freeze them.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Buying neighborhood property could be a worthwhile investment. A second source of income is highly desirable. A major career change seems imminent. Keep your wits about you to outsmart the competition.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can expect some fireworks over a financial idea. Seek experts' advice before signing contracts. Fulfill your obligations to the letter, proving how discreet and dependable you can be. Postpone romance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Dust off a long-forgotten creative idea and present it to higher-ups. Emotional confusion can be debilitating. Forget about past choices and concentrate on the future. Adventure beckons!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Unobtrusive teamwork is the key to your financial success. Smooth over differences of opinion to gain an associate's cooperation. A romantic interlude brightens your evening. Be cautious about unfamiliar places and people.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may feel restless now. A social event will give you a golden opportunity to meet new clients. Read the fine print before signing agreements. A telephone call will enliven your evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Know who to trust and who could cause you embarrassment now. Renegotiate an agreement or contract. Devising a better budget is on the agenda. A financial planner can help you build savings.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Someone close to you may be critical of your actions. Instead of closing your eyes to the need for change, realize that you must adapt. Pamper someone you may have neglected recently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Placate any dissatisfied associate in your usual inimitable style. Thoughtful gifts may do the trick. Devote any spare time to preparing for the holidays ahead. Be sure romantic partner agrees with your plans.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may not see eye to eye with someone about a financial matter. Listen to a more experienced friend. A former acquaintance may come back into your life. Get better organized at home.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Put yourself in a position to advance your financial interest. You can solve a family problem by doing more listening. Encourage your child's creativity. Romance improves if you are willing to compromise.

Opening lead: Five of ♠

In his Bols Bridge Tip, Terence Reese suggests that there are times when a simple falsecard may achieve a spectacular result for the defense. This is one of the hands Reese cites to illustrate the point.

After a simple auction, North-South reach a contract of four spades. Since a lead from any of the plain suits is unappealing, West chooses to lead a trump.

Let's see what would happen with routine defense. East's ten would force the king and declarer would cash the ace. When both opponents follow, declarer cashes the ace of clubs, crosses to the jack of spades and leads the queen of clubs. If East covers with the king, declarer ruffs and, since the ace of hearts is with West, another red-suit loser can be discarded on the jack of clubs. If East does not cover, declarer discards a diamond and, at most, he loses a trick in hearts, diamonds and clubs. Either way, the contract would be cold.

Now let's suppose East were to play the queen of trumps on the opening lead. Declarer wins and, if the trump queen were indeed singleton, there is a safer line to 10 tricks than relying on West to hold the ace of hearts. Declarer could cash the ace of clubs and then lead a trump to the eight(!), playing West for the ten. That allows East to gain the lead with the ten of spades and a diamond return dooms the contract.

With an unexpected trump trick in the bank, the defenders must come to three more tricks no matter how declarer maneuvers.

Bush invites Rep. Montgomery to White House for holidays

MERIDIAN, Miss. (AP) — President Bush invited Rep. G.V. Montgomery to spend Christmas with the first family because he wanted to make sure the unmarried Democrat didn't eat his holiday dinner alone.

"That's the kind of person he is," said Montgomery, 69, who has known Bush since the two came to Washington, D.C,. 23 years ago, as freshmen congressmen. "He was concerned that I didn't have a place to eat."

Montgomery said he had always spent Christmas with his mother, who died two years ago. He said he would join the Bushes at Camp David, Md.

NEW YORK (AP) — Turning 65 as a lame duck is the right way to do it, says Mayor Edward I. Koch, noting that it's hard to make enemies without making big decisions.

Koch

"I've never been as popular as I am in defeat," Koch said at a birthday party Tuesday in a restaurant near City Hall. "It's really quite interesting."

Koch lost the Democratic primary in September to David Dinkins, who went on to defeat Republican Rudolph Giuliani in the mayoral election.

"I'm not now doing anything more than acting as a caretaker," Koch said.

"Prior to that, I made major decisions every single day which involved millions of dollars and millions of people," he said. "And every time you make a major decision, you're going to alienate somebody."

"In the role of caretaker, I'm not alienating anybody. I don't have to make any major decisions."

Koch has said he will go on the lecture tour and appear in advertisements after leaving office Jan. 1.

LONDON (AP) — Rock stars will record a remake of Rod Stewart's hit song "Sailing" to protest the forced repatriation of Vietnamese boat people from Hong Kong.

Stewart

Guitarist Steve Hackett, formerly with Genesis, said the musicians include Brian May of Queen, Bonnie Tyler, Curt Smith of Tears for Fears, Mike Rutherford, Jack Bruce and the Sutherland Brothers, who originally recorded the song before it became a hit for Stewart in 1975.

"This will be a protest song, not a charity record," Hackett said. The song will be recorded during the Christmas holidays and released next year, and money raised from the recording will go to refugee charities, he said.

"I originally wanted to turn up at one of the refugee camps in Hong Kong with the boat people, but I thought it would be more productive if I galvanized the music industry into taking some action," Hackett said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Bette Midler says her own mom inspired her performance as Stella, an impoverished mother who raises an illegitimate daughter alone.

"I had a fabulous mother," Ms. Midler said in the January issue of Ladies' Home Journal. "She made me believe in myself and I used a lot of her in the film," a remake of the 1937 Barbara Stanwyck drama, "Stella Dallas."

"She was not a single parent like Stella, but we were poor and she was that generation of women, almost all gone now, who always put their family ahead of themselves. She worked hard and kept nothing for herself — nothing. Never a new dress or new shoes.

"She adored me, my mom, and I still have nightmares about her, because as a grownup, I didn't give her the time I should have. Now that she's gone, I have regrets."

Midler said she is devoted to life with her husband, Martin Von Haselberg, and their daughter, Sophie, 3.

"My daughter says, 'I want a baby, I want a baby.' So we're trying," said Ms. Midler. "I have no fear about doing this at 44." Especially since a fortune teller in Thailand last summer predicted a happy life, she said.

• • •

DALLAS (AP) — Tennis star Andre Agassi is well aware that many of his fans are a bit younger than those usually found at major tennis tournaments.

After an exhibition match with John McEnroe last week, Agassi said: "I'm surprised to see so many of my fans here. It's a school night."

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — Gary Collins will replace Robb Weller as host of ABC-TV's "The Home Show," with Weller leaving the daytime series to go into production.

Collins, whose former syndicated series "Hour Magazine" was canceled in 1988, will start work Dec. 28 on the ABC series, the network said Tuesday.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Indiana University basketball coach Bob Knight made an on-air threat to stop doing his radio show because it contained a beer commercial.

Knight, a critic of drug and alcohol abuse, became upset during Monday night's broadcast of "The Bob Knight Show" on WXTZ-AM. But a station spokesman said Knight would return as scheduled next week.

"He has a problem doing alcohol-type commericials on his show, and we can respect that," said Randy Harris, operations manager for WXTZ. "The advertising agency has agreed not to put those type of commercials on the radio show."

The beer commercials will continue during the station's coverage of Indiana basketball games, however.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — A giraffe barn on pop music superstar Michael Jackson's ranch went up in flames, but the animals were evacuated safely, authorities said.

Firefighters on Tuesday also kept flames from reaching a nearby animal compound and chimpanzee house at the ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains, northwest of Santa Barbara, officials said.

When firefighters reached the remote ranch, the barn was destroyed and the three giraffes kept there already were evacuated, said Capt. Charlie Johnson, Santa Barbara County Fire Department spokesman.

Jackson, whose menagerie includes a chimpanzee named Bubbles, ostriches, llamas and boa constrictors, was not at the ranch at the time, said a spokesman for the singer.

The blaze left an estimated $300,000 in damage.

The cause of the fire was under investigation, but it was believed to have been accidentally ignited, Johnson said.

Audience keeps jumping at monthly Antelope Jamborees

By RICHARD MIZE

ANTELOPE, Texas (AP) — They play both kinds of music at the monthly Antelope Jamboree — country and western.

OK, sometimes the show's sprinkled with a little bluegrass and gospel. But it's always done up right.

But more than the music draws people here.

This is the truth: J.C. Woodard and Mae Cantrell met in this Jack County community at the October jamboree on a blind date. The morning of the November show, J.C., 78, and Mae, 65, were married in Jacksboro. Then they went to Waco for another wedding. But they wouldn't miss the show here for the world.

"We got here just in time for the jamboree," said a beaming Mrs. Woodard, who didn't let go of her sweetheart's hand for a minute the whole evening.

And this is the truth: Frank and Margie Brechbuhler drove all the way from their home in Hugoton, Kan., for the November jamboree.

When they were planning their vacation, Mrs. Brechbuhler said, "We got the calendar out and said, 'Now, when's the third Saturday? That's when we're going to go. That's the jamboree.' "

"We've got some terrific stuff here. People just don't realize it," Gerald Likely of Wichita Falls said. "We have a lot of them who won't go pro on account of the way they live. They want to stay home."

The Brechbuhlers, like the Woodards, Likely and other fans of homegrown country-western and bluegrass music, packed the Antelope Community Center for the most recent jamboree to chat, have a cup of coffee and some homemade pie and listen to songs played and sung by the likes of the Jacksboro AARP Second Childhood Kitchen Band. They heard Cathy Brown of Burkburnett, who's won some awards for her music, and they heard Bonnie West of Loving, who's been playing for only three years and started out here.

They also got to hear some folks who didn't exactly have acts but who sat in on the four-hour show and played their hearts out. They got to say "howdy" to J.C. Light of Archer City, who played guitar and drums — at the same time.

They heard Ed White play a bass as big as a Yugo. White, who lives in Wichita Falls, is the daddy of Buck White and granddaddy of Sharon (wife of Ricky Skaggs) and Cheryl, the Whites heard on country radio.

For four hours, the fans, most of them senior citizens, almost quadrupled the number of people in Antelope, a town of about 65 on U.S. 281 17 miles northwest of Jacksboro.

Many of them make most of the North Texas bluegrass and country music circuit. There's a show every Saturday night, "to give people a place that's decent to come to," said Frank Baggett, secretary-treasurer for the Antelope Community Center. The show on the first Saturday of the month is in Jermyn; the second Saturday is in Petrolia; third Saturday, Antelope; fourth Saturday in Henrietta. There's a show once a month in Olney, too.

Depending on who you ask, the show here has been held every third Saturday, and on the fifth Saturday when there is one, for 22, 25 or 30 years. Since the school closed in 1972, it's been in the old auditorium, which was rented from the Jacksboro school district until residents bought it and made it into the community center.

"Anybody who wants to come and play and sing can come," Baggett said. "They just sign the paper down there and when your time comes up, you play. We've got people who've come up here (to play) since it started.

Don't even mention that you play and sing, even a little, unless you mean to own up to it. Master of Ceremonies Billy Joe Campsey, who's made the drive over from Postoak once a month for the past 10 years, will do his best to coax you on stage.

Mary Logan has been a helper at the jamboree since she moved here from Postoak 22 years ago. "Every time, we see new faces," she said. "They say, 'Well, we didn't know ya'll were having this.' "

Once they know, they usually return often.

"I've been making the jamboree — I haven't missed a Saturday night unless we were sick," said Doyle Moore, who lives "out in the country" just outside this very country town that boasts some homes, a post office, a car wash, a store and a couple of churches along Farm Road 175 about 45 miles south of Wichita Falls.

Moore and his wife, Cora, open the center and start making coffee and setting up about 3 p.m. on jamboree Saturdays. And he and a couple of other men take turns at the door taking the 50 cents admission.

"We stay out there and take care of that and these women stay in here and take care of the kitchen," Moore said.

And they do take care of the kitchen, said Woodrow Read of Graham, who's been coming out for the show for 15 years.

"Them's the best cooks in North Texas," Read said. "Those ladies back there who fix them pies, if you have a piece, you'll understand what I'm talking about."

Over the years, Campsey said, there's been hardly any trouble at the show — no fights and no drunks. "We don't even have any smokers out here," he said. "This has been a good place."

Moore, a self-proclaimed old-timer who has lived in the same house near here since 1910, said that's what makes the jamboree so special that it brings in close to 200 music fans from all over North Texas every month.

"We've all worked at it and we've all got along," he said. "That's they only thing you can do — everybody work together and be together."

Major American traveling exhibits listed

Associated Press

The Dallas Museum of Art has put together a major traveling exhibit of more than 150 works by 49 black artists of the 20th century.

"Black Art-Ancestral Legacy: The African Impulse in African-American Art" opened Dec. 3 and will run through Feb. 25 before moving on to the High Musuem in Atlanta, the Milwaukee Art Museum and the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Richmond.

The importance of African cultural traditions to the creativity of black artists in the United States, Jamaica, Haiti and the Bahamas is the focus of the exhibit.

"Unlike the American and European modernists who borrowed the forms of 'primitive' African sculpture early in the 20th century, African-American artists tapped into the wellspring of their ancestral art to produce a new synthesis of the African and the American," said Richard R. Bretell, director of the museum.

"When an African-American artist makes use of snake imagery, of woven patterns, or of repetitive images derived from dance, he is not merely 'borrowing' forms, but making a powerful statement about cultural continuity."

The exhibit features works by such artists as Richmond Barthe, Xenobia Bailey, Sargent Johnson, Ed Love, John Biggers and Derek Webster.

Lawmaker says Congress to override Bush on Chinese student bill

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

NATION

WASHINGTON — Rep. Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., said Tuesday she is confident that Congress will overturn President Bush's veto of a bill protecting Chinese students who do not want to return to their country after their visas expire.

Pelosi said the surprise visit of two high-ranking Bush emisarries to China last weekend has generated so much "outrage" on Capitol Hill that a vote to override Bush's action would go overwhelmingly against the president.

"If the vote were today, we would not even need a whip count," said Pelosi at a news conference at the Capitol. Party "whips" are members assigned to tally votes in advance of floor action.

Pelosi, who is taking the lead in the override effort, called the secret China visit by National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft and Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger "an unconditional surrender to the forces of tyranny."

Pelosi was chief sponsor of the measure that Bush sent back to Capitol Hill Nov. 30, saying he was "withholding approval" of it while, at the same time, issuing an executive order that would have the same effect.

The San Francisco congresswoman said she will call each of the 435 House members and ask them to stand firm when the bill comes up for an override vote. The Pelosi bill passed 403 to 0 in the House and was approved, without dissent, by voice vote in the Senate.

Pelosi said she expects a large number of Republicans to favor the override, which would require 290 votes if all 435 members were present and voting.

Rep. Bruce A. Morrison, D-Conn., chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on immigration, also called on other House members to "vindicate America's honor" by promptly rejecting the veto.

Morrison said in a statement distributed at the news conference that an override vote will be "the first item on my agenda" when Congress comes back to work Jan. 23. "We cannot let the Bush administration's craven kowtowing to the killers of Beijing speak on behalf of the American people," he argued.

"The Bush administration's secret diplomacy with China and deference to (senior leader) Deng Xiaoping are not the expression of America's true interests in the democratic aspirations of the Chinese people," he said.

However, in an interview, Rep. Lamar Smith, R-Texas, the ranking Republican on Morrison's subcommittee, rejected the charges that the Scowcroft-Eagleburger amounted to kowtowing.

He said he does not believe that the Bush administration "is condoning the actions of the Chinese government" in brutally putting down the student-led rebellion in Beijing last June. Smith also warned: "It's dangerous for Congress to micromanage foreign policy."

When Bush rejected the Pelosi bill, he waived for four years the usual requirement that foreign students in the United States on "J" visas (student resident permits) must return to their home country for at least two years before applying for permanent-resident status here.

Haiching Zhao of Cambridge, Mass., chairman of the National Committee on Chinese Students Affairs, joined Pelosi at the news conference to announce that many of the 42,000 Chinese students scattered at schools around the country would visit members of Congress in their home districts over the next several weeks, urging them to support the override.

Zhao said the override is necessary to "provide unequivocal assurances to Chinese students in the United States that they will not suffer reprisals for their pro-democracy activities in this country."

"The situation in China has not beer improved" since the June 3-4 massa re, said Zhao. "Thousands of young people are still being jailed and tortured without any open and fair trials. The government has started another round of suppression against intellectuals in Beijing and other cities.

"Taken together, the veto and the visit create a clear and present danger that the hard-liners in the Chinese government will now feel free to impose more repression and further reprisals against the democracy movement," he charged.

Hotel queen pleads for mercy, sentenced to prison

NEW YORK (AP) — Billionaire Leona Helmsley told a judge she was "in the middle of a nightmare" before he declared her unremorseful, sentenced her to four years in prison and ordered her to pay $8.8 million for tax evasion.

Mrs. Helmsley, portrayed as a regal perfectionist in advertisements for her hotel empire, sobbed and begged for mercy at her sentencing Tuesday.

But U.S. District Judge John M. Walker Jr. was unswayed, saying "naked greed" caused her downfall.

"You believed you were above the law and displayed no remorse or contrition," said Walker. "You bear the full responsibility for this scheme with all of its fraudulent permutations. ... You were at the apex of the pyramid of wrongdoing."

Besides prison, Walker imposed three years' probation and 750 hours of community service, recommending that she work at a Harlem home for infants born addicted to drugs. She would be eligible for parole after 16 months.

Walker also fined her $7.1 million and ordered one other penalty on the woman once said to have boasted to a maid: "We don't pay taxes. Only the little people pay taxes." She must repay close to $1.7 million in back taxes and bear the government's costs in bringing her to justice.

"No person," he said, "no matter how wealthy and prominent, stands above the law."

As the 69-year-old Mrs. Helmsley made her tearful appeal to the judge, her ailing 80-year-old husband, Harry, sat three rows away.

"I am more humiliated and ashamed than anybody can ever imagine that I've been found guilty of a serious crime," said Mrs. Helmsley, dressed in black. "I feel like I'm in the middle of a nightmare. ...

"A few years ago, I lost my only son," she said, adding that it "ripped me apart" when she saw photographs of his grave published.

"I beg you, don't let me lose Harry, too," she said. "Our whole life has been work and each other. Please don't. We have nothing else."

The Helmsleys, with a personal fortune of $1 billion, have $5 billion in real estate holdings, including 27 hotels and the Empire State Building.

Mrs. Helmsley was convicted of evading more than $1.2 million in federal taxes between 1983 and 1985 by billing personal expenses through the Helmsley business. She has appealed the Aug. 30 verdict that found her guilty of 33 counts of tax evasion, and she remains free on unspecified bail.

Groups call for boycott of 'degradable' plastics

WASHINGTON (AP) — The label "degradable" is surfacing on plastic products from trash bags to diapers, but environmentalists call it a marketing ploy that should be rejected.

Six environmental groups called Tuesday for a boycott of all degradable plastic products, contending there is no proof that the products will decompose in a landfill any faster than conventional plastics.

"Degradable plastics are a consumer ripoff," said Jeanne Wirka of the Environmental Action Foundation, a Washington-based environmental group.

Richard Denison of the Environmental Defense Fund accused manufacturers of "preying on the environmental concerns of American consumers" to sell trash bags and other plastic items.

"Degradable plastics may be good for profits, but they are bad for the environment," Denison said.

In recent months, an increasing number of degradable products — from trash and grocery bags to diapers — have cropped up on grocery shelves. Manufacturers contend the products made of a plastic compound will degrade in a relatively short time when left to sunlight and, in some cases, even in landfills.

The products include Hefty and Glad trash bags and several brands of diapers. Some supermarkets also are increasingly using degradable plastic bags for carrying groceries home because environmentally concerned consumers shy away from conventional plastic bags.

Biodegradable plastics are made by adding corn starch to the plastic polymer.

Archer Daniels Midland Co., which manufactures the corn starch additive, maintains that its use will cause the plastic to degrade in a landfill "within three to five years."

"The life of current landfills can be extended by 20 percent while achieving an operational cost savings of 30 percent," company vice president Martin Andreas said recently when describing the degradable plastic product.

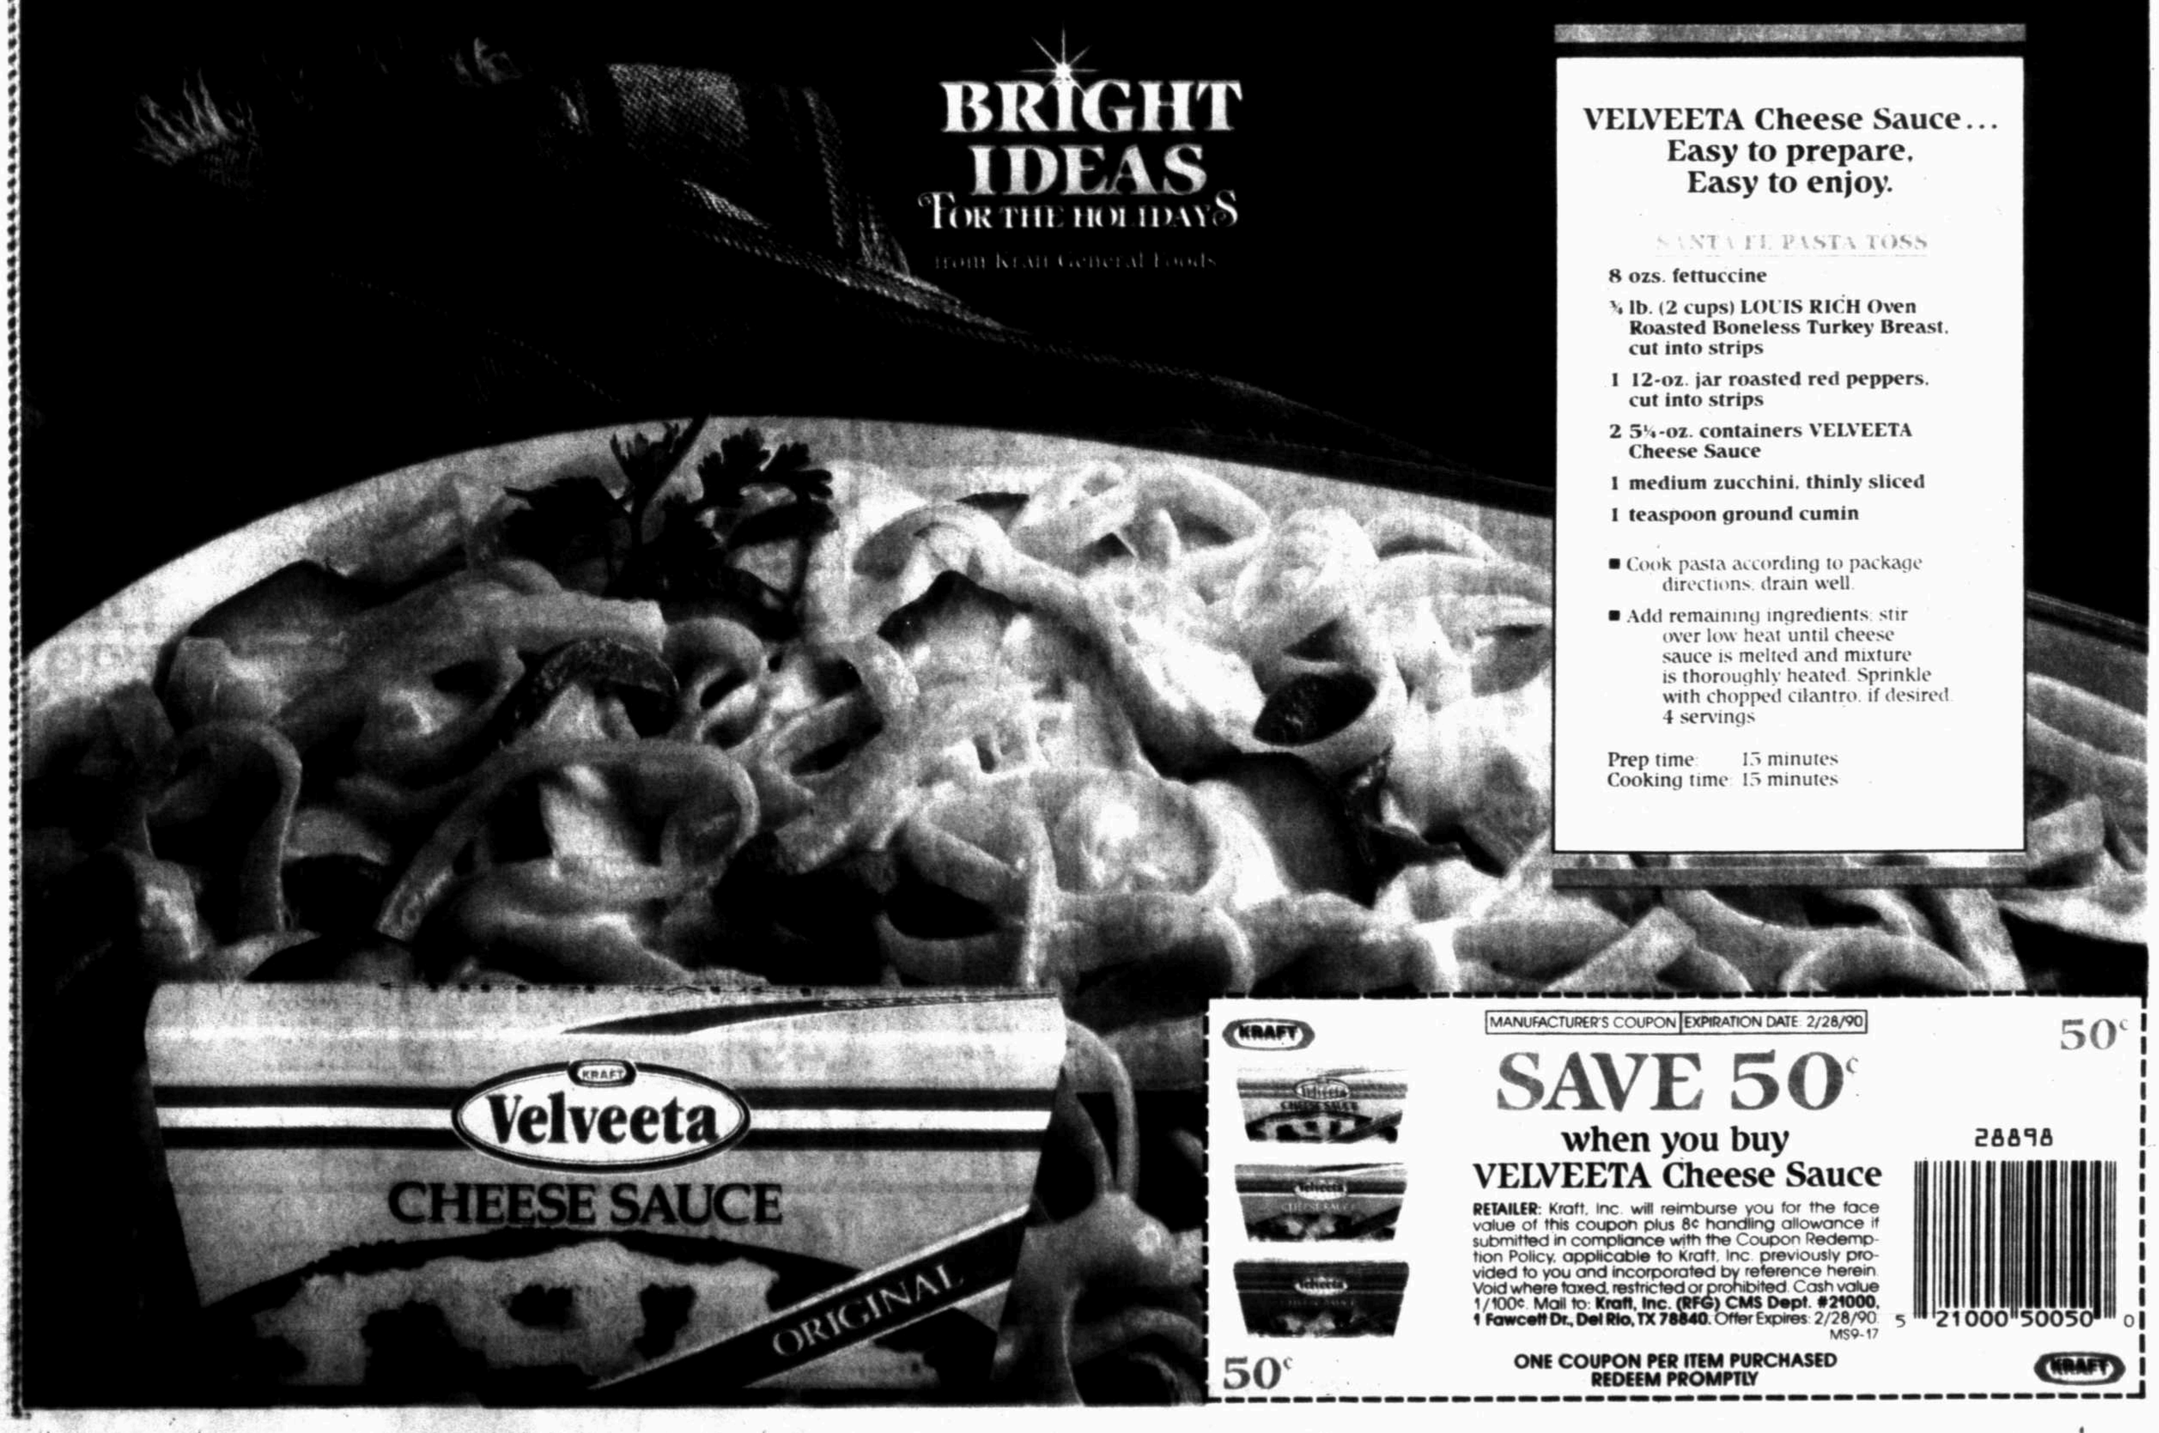

"They will not solve all our solid waste issues, but they have definite advantages if applied properly," said Tim Draeger, executive director of the Degradable Plastics Council, a St. Louis-based group made up largely of companies involved in the production or use of degradable plastics.

The plastics industry is divided on the issue.

"Degradability is not the solution to the solid waste problem," said Robert J. Barrett, general manager of solid waste management solutions at Mobil Chemical Co. in Pittsford, N.Y.

Julie Redden gets a kiss from her pet llama, Jessica, at her ranch near Kerrville, Texas, recently. The Reddens have 16 llamas as well as other exotic animals they raise.

Llamas provide 'shear pleasure,' Texas owners say

By MICHAEL BOWLIN

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — What do Wal-Mart founder Sam Walton, singer Michael Jackson and film star Kim Novak have in common besides celebrity?

They all have llamas as pets.

Walton, who has several of the sure-footed animals running loose at his estate in Bentonville, Ark., says his llamas are some of the best pets he's ever owned.

Michael and Julie Redden of Kerrville couldn't agree more.

"They're just plain lovable," said Mrs. Redden.

The Reddens, who moved to Kerrville from Oregon in January, have been breeding and raising llamas since the early 1980s.

"We went to a llama show in Oregon, got hooked, and made our first purchase at the show," Mrs. Redden said.

That purchase was three female llamas.

Within a month, the Reddens had increased the size of their llama herd to 10 females. Currently they own 15 female llamas and one male.

They raise the animals along with other exotics including ostriches, zebras, endangered ring-tail lemurs and black swans on their 30-acre Foots Creek Exotic Ranch outside Kerrville.

Though adult llamas weigh an average of 280 to 350 pounds, they are, by far, the easiest to care for of any domestic livestock, said Mrs. Redden.

"When they are moved, they usually just lay down and hum. ... They are not only excellent pets, but they are the best pack animals imaginable."

— Llama owner Julie Redden

ON THE AVERAGE, they eat about two percent of their body weight a day.

"A bale of grassy hay will last the average llama a week to a week-and-a-half," she said.

Standing only a little over five feet tall from head to foot, a llama doesn't require a very large living space.

"One acre will support three to five adults," she said.

They are long-lived, with an average life span of 20-25 years.

Like cattle, sheep and deer, llamas are multi-stomached ruminants that chew a cud. Adult animals are unusual in that they have a hard upper gum with no teeth in front, Mrs. Redden said.

The gestation period of a female llama is 345 days, she said. And when a llama gives birth, it's usually to one offspring weighing between 30 and 40 pounds. Female llamas are usually bred at 14 to 18 months, Mrs. Redden said, adding that eight days after giving birth they are bred again.

Llamas are members of the camelide family, she said. Their ancestors originated in the central plains of North America some 40 million years ago.

About three million years ago, the llamas migrated to South America, where they have remained. It wasn't until the late 1800s that private collectors and zoos reintroduced llamas back to North America, Mrs. Redden said.

Today, there are about 15,000 llamas in the United States and Canada, she said.

Llamas are considered communal animals, who use a common litter pile, which Mrs. Redden says is odorless and doesn't attract flies.

Because they are so docile, they can be easily transported from place to place. "When they are moved, they usually just lay down and hum," she said.

LLAMAS ARE extremely intelligent and versatile animals, Mrs. Redden said.

"They are not only excellent pets, but they are the best pack animals imaginable.

"Halter-breaking or teaching an animal to lead can usually be accomplished in two or three 15-minute training sessions," she said.

Training a llama to pull a cart or pack can be accomplished in a little less than two weeks, she said.

Extremely sure-footed and sturdily built, the llama can carry up to 100 pounds in one load, Mrs. Redden said.

"The U.S. Forest Service uses llamas in their operations," she said.

Show quality llamas are trained and entered in halter, obstacle and cart driving competitions throughout the United States, Mrs. Redden said.

Along with being fine pets, the animals are also a good investment.

"When we first got into the llama business, females sold for about business, females sold for about $6,500 each. Today, a female llama can run $10,000 and up," she said.

Recently, a show-quality llama sold for $170,000, she added.

Prices for male animals range from $750-$1,000 for a pet-quality llama to $5,000 and up for breeder stock, she said.

"Not long ago, a breeder male sold for $200,000," Mrs. Redden said.

Llamas are also a source of extremely fine and valuable wool, she said. An Ounce of llama wool, which is grease-free and odorless, sells for about $3.

Although shearing is possible, most llama owners comb the wool from their animals, she said, which leaves the guard hair and produces the softest wool.

MRS. REDDEN believes the U.S. llama industry still has millions of potential customers. "We have only seen the tip of the iceberg," she said.

Mrs. Redden warns potential owners that the pets are habit-forming. "If you have one, you will want two. If you have two ..."

And she's quick to dispel the notion that a llama will spit at anybody or anything it doesn't like.

"It is the most common question llama owners are asked, and it's simply not true," she added.

For the most part, the general public has only been exposed to llamas in zoos, Mrs. Redden said. Those animals have been annoyed by people teasing them and may resort to spitting as a defense mechanism, she believes. In their normal habitat, the animals usually only spit at each other when they are having turf battles at the feed bin, she says.

Watcher waits for others' ships to come in

MORGAN'S POINT, Texas (AP) — In a small corner office on the edge of Chambers County sits a pile of newspapers, a pair of field glasses, a cup of coffee and Charles Riggs.

Riggs is a 10-year veteran ship watcher, and it is his job to spy every deep-sea vessel that travels on the Houston Ship Channel and to log its name, flag, cargo, time of passing and destination.

"I'm 57, I used to do hard labor when I was young. I enjoy this. It's different anyway," Rigs said recently from his lookout station at Morgan's Point.

Sometimes the job is interesting, with several ships coming in from all over the world and lots of phone calls.

Other times, Riggs passes his 12-hour shifts by reading lots of sports sections and watching television. No matter the pace, somebody must remain in the tiny office overlooking the channel.

"There's someone here 24 hours a day except during a hurricane," Riggs said. "Then we vanish until its gone."

When Riggs spies a ship, he records its number and flag. With the number, he can find complete information about the ship, its cargo and destination from Lloyd's weekly shipping manual.

While the job may be subject to long waits, Riggs said the information he gathers is vital to subscribers of the business, Marine Exchange of the West Gulf, a subsidiary of the non-profit Houston Port Bureau Inc.

For example, shipping agents and ship chandlers use the information to gauge when and where they will offer their services.

Shipping agents contract with a ship to take care of its crew and ship while the vessel is docked. Ship chandlers are various vendors who appear on the docks when the ship arrives to try to sell services and goods such as laundering, groceries, clothing, dry stores and electrical goods.

"They offer anything you need to unload a ship or anything you need to survive on a ship," Riggs said.

With each ship that passes, Riggs calls subscribers that have contracted to receive information on that ship.

Certain towing companies also receive the information so they can have tugboats ready when a ship needs to be docked.

Riggs, a former cook on offshore drilling rigs, said he came to Texas from California about 20 years ago to bring a 60-year-old friend who wanted to work on Gulf Coast shrimping boats.

"I went out on the shrimp boat one time. It was cold and real rough. I was on my feet one minute and my head the next. That was enough for me."

"One time I saw a car drive right off into the channel. I saw a man trying to get out, but he couldn't get the door open so he rolled down the window," Riggs said.

The man and a woman, who crawled out the other side of the car, jumped off just as the car sank to the bottom of the channel, he said.

"They swam to shore and bought a pack of cigarettes ... and drove off in another car."

Quayle quotes Albert Einstein

NEW YORK (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle, whose academic accomplishments in college were less than stellar, says he likes what Albert Einstein once said about education.

"Einstein once defined education as 'that which remains when one has forgotten everything he learned in school.' I confess that I've always found this definition rather comforting," Quayle said.

"After all, for some of us, forgetting what we learned in school isn't all that difficult," Quayle said.

Quayle made his remarks after receiving an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from Yeshiva University at a dinner in a Manhattan hotel.

Boy Scouts, PTA battle over screening leaders

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The Boy Scouts and the PTA, two "apple pie" groups, can't agree on who's responsible for the "bad apple" scout leaders who sometimes lead to another American tradition — lawsuits.

The California Congress of Parents, Teachers and Students Inc., the state PTA, this fall told its local chapters to stop sponsoring Boy Scout troops and Cub Scout packs, after the national PTA and the Boy Scouts of America failed to agree on responsibility for screening leaders.

PTAs in some other states have taken similar action, officials said.

Of the 10,000 scout units in California, about 600, mostly Cub Scout packs, are currently sponsored by neighborhood school PTAs, according to Richard Parker, assistant director of the Western Region of the Boys Scouts of America.

PTAs and scout units have co-existed for 50 years, with parents from one group often deeply involved in the other. Scout troops also can be sponsored by other organizations such as church or civic clubs.

Concerned about lawsuits stemming from child abuse or other misguidance by scout leaders, the national scouts and PTA have been struggling to come up with a compromise since last year on new charter application forms written by the Boy Scouts of America. The forms place the responsibility for screening, selecting and approving local scout leaders on the sponsors.

"Who can better assess them?" asked Lee Sneath, a Dallas publicist for Boy Scouts of America.

But National PTA President Manya Ungar wrote in an October 1988 letter to state and local PTAs, "this responsibility could result in increased liability to PTA units, and possibly to their leaders, should some unfortunate situation develop involving the leadership of the local scout organization."

The two national groups began negotiations in mid-1988 that continued through this year. The Boy Scouts agreed not to change its charter arrangements with the PTA until July 1, 1989.

That deadline passed without a resolution, and the National PTA informed its state chapters that it was leaving the decision about sponsorship to them.

"We have nothing that says they can or cannot sponsor Boy Scout troops. That's up to the local units," said Tari Marshall, public relations director for the National PTA.

She said a few states have recommended that local units not sign charters.

The Illinois PTA advised its local units not to do so in October 1988, said Illinois President Gretchen McDowell. "Our liability insurance ¦ ut a waiver in so it will not cover any Boy Scout activity."

"We know it's a very difficult issue," she said. "My kids were Boy Scouts. It has nothing to do with a very fine organization, the Boy Scouts. It has to do with us accepting responsibility for their leaders."

She said other youth groups, such as Girl Scouts, recruit and train their own leaders and do not require sponsoring organization to accept responsibility for the leaders.

California PTA president Dorothy Leonard, who sent letters to local chapters advising them of the cutoff in September, said she plans to meet with Parker to try to resolve the problem.

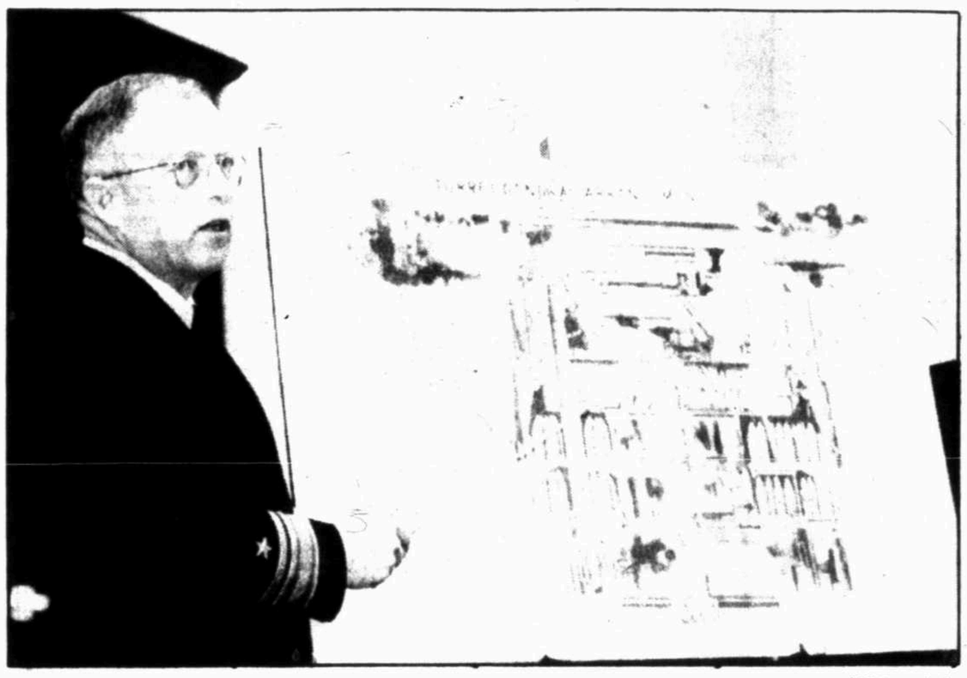

"We do have a problem, but we believe it can be worked out," Parker said recently.

But Marshall, of the Chicago-based National PTA, said meetings have been fruitless.

"Really, it's up to Boy Scouts to come back to us if they feel they want to make a change," she said.

Parker notes that the Boy Scouts of America carries liability insurance for all its registered leaders. But PTA officials are worried that courts might interpret the new charter forms as putting the onus on their organizations.

Parker said if a school's PTA won't sponsor a scout group, then a group of parents in the neighborhood could get together and sign the charter.

Testimony casts doubt on Navy's conclusions about Iowa tragedy

By STEWART POWELL
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Navy came under heavy fire Tuesday as congressional probers cast doubt on its conclusion that a lonely suicidal sailor ignited an explosion last April aboard the battleship USS Iowa that killed 47 crewmen.

Lawmakers also attacked the scientific methods used in the Navy's five-month inquiry into the disaster which critics contend has raised more questions than answers.

Chairman Nicholas Mavroules of the House Armed Services subcommittee on investigations said his staff has found "a substantially different picture from the one painted by the Navy."

"Not only does the underlying documentation (used by the Navy to support its conclusions) fail to support many of the findings, but in many instances the naval investigators' interpretation of the data is incorrect," said Mavroules, D-Mass.

Witnesses, under courtroom-style questioning by lawmakers, revealed for the first time that:

■ The Navy now believes that a chemical detonator rather than an electronic detonator cited in its original report set off the explosion in the open breech of a 16-inch gun.

■ The Navy and the Federal Bureau of Investigation disagree on whether evidence of a detonator was found at all.

■ Crucial evidence inside the devastated gun turret appears to have been contaminated or compromised in the first 19 days after the explosion and before criminal investigators took charge of the investigation.

Dr. Richard C. Froede, a pathologist working for the Army on a contract as medical examiner, said he believes the explosion was an accident rather than a deliberate murder-suicide, as the Navy had concluded. Nothing has been uncovered since the incident to change his view three days after the incident that the victims died of "accidental" causes, said Froede.

With the Navy inquiry coming under deepening congressional scrutiny, the leader of the investigation, Rear Adm. Richard D. Milligan emphasized that his controversial conclusions were "my opinion" representing "inferences and conclusions" from the facts uncovered by the investigation.

Milligan found that the explosion "resulted from a wrongful intentional act" that "most probably" was committed by Gunner's Mate 2nd Class Clayton Hartwig, 24, the gun captain at the time of the explosion.

Milligan expressed willingness to amend his report to reflect the Navy's current conclusion that the detonator was a chemical device rather than a store-bought electronic detonator, as first believed.

He said the Navy, despite the completion of its inquiry, still would examine any plausible explanation for the explosion. "If something should fly through the window, we'd jump right on it," Milligan told the subcommittee.

House members, in the first of three days of hearings into the Iowa inquiry, appeared to be building a public record of problems, contradictions and loopholes in the Navy inquiry as the basis for future congressional action.

Attorney Kreig J. Brusnahan, who represents Hartwig's family, told Hearst Newspapers the sailor's relatives are hoping the hearings generate enough evidence to enable Congress to vote next year on a resolution to clear the name of the family's only son.

Rep. Larry Hopkins, R-Ky., charged that the Navy's approach illustrated "a basic unfairness" in convicting a sailor who had no chance "to defend himself" with a report concluding that Hartwig "most probably" carried out a murder-suicide.

Even without a court hearing and without stating a "fact," Hopkins said, "posterity will always remember that according to the Navy what caused the Iowa explosion and the death of 47 sailors was Clayton Hartwig."

The hearing highlighted a dispute over the scientific basis for the Navy's conclusion that "foreign material" was inside the gun, indicating the presence of a detonating device.

Kenneth Nimmich, chief of the scientific analysis section of the Federal Bureau of Investigation Laboratory, said that "no conclusion can be drawn by the FBI as to the presence or absence of an initiating device in the items of evidence from the USS Iowa."

The Navy, however, through other tests found evidence of foreign material. Said Robert Fifer and Robert Lieb, specialists with the Army Ballistics Research Laboratory that reviewed the Navy tests: The Navy studies "in a scientific and incontrovertible way show that some kind of foreign device was present," but the identity of the device "will probably never be possible."

U.S. officials skeptical of agreement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bush administration officials say they doubt a new peace agreement signed by five Central American presidents will contribute to negotiated settlements to the conflicts in El Salvador and Nicaragua.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Tuesday the administration "remains to be convinced" that Nicaragua's leftist government will live up to its renewed promises to carry out democratic reforms.

"We're certainly skeptical," Fitzwater said, speaking hours after the five presidents ended marathon discussions in Costa Rica.

He said alleged Sandinista-sponsored violence at opposition campaign rallies has raised questions about the government's commitment to free and fair elections in February and its willingness to allow the safe return of Contra rebels from their Honduran base camps.

Fitzwater said the fact that Nicaragua agreed not to support the Marxist rebels in El Salvador was "encouraging."

He added that the administration also was pleased to see the invitation for the Contras to register to vote if they do so before a Feb. 5 deadline.

At the State Department, deputy spokesman Richard Boucher responded positively to the summit communique's comments on El Salvador, noting that it expressed support for the country's embattled government and called on leftist rebels to cease hostilities immediately.

But two officials, speaking privately, said they doubted that the communique would have a significant impact on the thinking of the FMLN rebels.

Sen. Chris Dodd, chairman of the Western Hemisphere subcommittee of the Foreign Relations Committee, said there is diminishing congressional support for Salvadoran President Alfredo Cristiani based on the perception that he is unable to control the Salvadoran military.

"If there were a vote today on aid to El Salvador, at the least aid would be cut off," Dodd said. There is a widespread impression in the administration and on Capitol Hill that the Salvadoran military was responsible for the massacre of six Jesuit priests a month ago.

The communique calls for the demobilization of both the Contras and the FMLN. Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega had asked for a Dec. 31 deadline for the dismantling of the Contras but his Central American colleagues rejected the request, U.S. officials said.

A member of the House Democratic leadership, Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., demanded that the administration "end all direct aid to the Contras — all aid, of any type."

"The administration can no longer live with the fiction that it is supporting the peace process while bypassing the Central American presidents," said Bonior.

NATION IN BRIEF

NASA delays shuttle launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA today said it has postponed for at least two days the pre-Christmas launch of space shuttle Columbia on a satellite rescue mission because preparations are behind schedule.

"They're still assessing a new date, but it appears the 20th is now the earliest," said Karl Kristofferson, a NASA spokesman.

He said a lot of minor difficulties had put launch crews behind schedule. NASA was expected to select a firm new date by Thursday.

During a 10-day flight, Columbia's five astronauts are to put a Navy communications satellite into orbit and recover a science satellite before it falls to Earth. The satellite has been in orbit nearly six years.

Loading of propellants for in-flight propulsion systems and auxiliary power units began a day late Monday because a faulty connector on an electronics box had to be replaced.

Once the fueling began, the launch pad had to be cleared of all non-essential personnel because it is dangerous. That prevented workers from making up lost time in other areas.

Work was running late even before the connector problem because of difficulties working with new systems on a mobile launch platform being used for the first time and with the launch pad, which recently underwent a two-year, $50 million refurbishment.

Ban on Soviet vodka lifted

HUTCHINSON, Minn. (AP) — It wasn't as dramatic as knocking down the Berlin Wall, but it was another sign of the thaw in East-West relations. This small town has lifted its 6-year-old ban on Russian vodka.

"It took six years, but the city of Hutchinson finally brought the Soviet Union to its knees," joked Barry Anderson, the city attorney.

The sanction was removed Tuesday night through a unanimous voice vote by the City Council.

It had been issued to protest the 1983 downing of a South Korean jetliner by a Soviet fighter pilot

"It's not a stunt. We take it seriously," insisted Councilman Michael Carls, who is also a high school government teacher. "It was first outrage over their denial of life to those passengers on the jet and today it's a feeling of pleasure over the extent of democratization over there."

The council's discussion lasted five minutes and did not end with a libation of vodka or any other beverage.

Hazelwood to have trial

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Exxon Valdez skipper Joseph Hazelwood did not qualify for immunity from prosecution by reporting his ship's grounding and oil spill and must stand trial on criminal charges, a judge ruled.

Superior Judge Karl Johnstone said Tuesday that all evidence gathered in the investigation except for Hazelwood's report will be admissible at his trial for the March 24 grounding of the tanker and the spill of about 11 million gallons of crude oil.

Hazelwood is to go on trial Jan. 22 for his role in the nation's largest oil spill.

He is charged with three felony counts of criminal mischief, plus misdemeanor charges of reckless endangerment, negligent discharge of oil and operating a vessel while intoxicated.

Johnstone rejected arguments by Hazelwood's attorneys that the seaman, fired by Exxon right after the disaster, was immune from prosecution because of laws protecting people who report spills.

Comaneci denies romance

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Former Olympic gold medalist Nadia Comaneci says she has a business relationship with the married father of four who helped her escape from Romania, not a romantic one.

"He's not my lover boy, he's my manager," she told the Sun-Sentinel in Fort Lauderdale during a telephone interview Tuesday.

The 28-year-old gold medalist, who has shared a hotel room with Constantin Panait for the past week, added: "It is all a big lie and you are very bad. ... (Panait) is just trying to help me. We are not lovers. Ask Constantin. He will tell you."

North can't recall details

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oliver North says he can't remember details of meetings with his ex-boss, former national security adviser John Poindexter, even though the now-convicted Reagan aide testified about those meetings at his own trial.

"It's difficult to get answers out of this witness," declared U.S. District Court Judge Harold Greene, who said he would give prosecutors the "widest latitude" in interrogating North.
