1985 to see increase in FDIC foreclosures

From Staff Reports

While there will be no change in method of the FDIC's operation in Midland, there will be increased activity in 1985 as far as foreclosures and suits filed are concerned. And planned sale of loans and properties in the near future could total more than $100 million, reducing total FDIC-held assets by at least 10 percent.

That was confirmed Wednesday by Stanley A. Clark Jr., new managing liquidator for the FDIC's Midland office which is responsible for the liquidation of assets acquired by the FDIC following failure of the former First National Bank of Midland.

The FDIC here also holds assets of two other area banks which failed — National Bank of Odessa and Metro Bank of Midland — although more than 80 percent of the $1 billion-plus in assets is the result of FNB's collapse.

"In any liquidation there is a basic process you go through and after 15 months the time has come," Clark said of companies and individuals for whom all efforts to date "just won't work or who won't work with us" in resolving their problems. "After all, our job is to liquidate loans and we must get on with the job. There will be more foreclosures and more suits this year than in 1984. We can't avoid it."

"I just wish everyone could pay and we wouldn't have to be here."
— Stanley Clark Jr.,
FDIC Managing Liquidator

The local FDIC office is in the process of preparing for major bulk sale of bankable loans, Clark said. Including oil and gas properties, real estate and automobiles, the sale could yield between $100 million and $150 million, thus reducing the FDIC's holdings here by approximately 10 percent. Interest in the planned sale, expected to be the end of January or early February, is strong, according to Clark, and is coming from investors in Italy and New York City, among others.

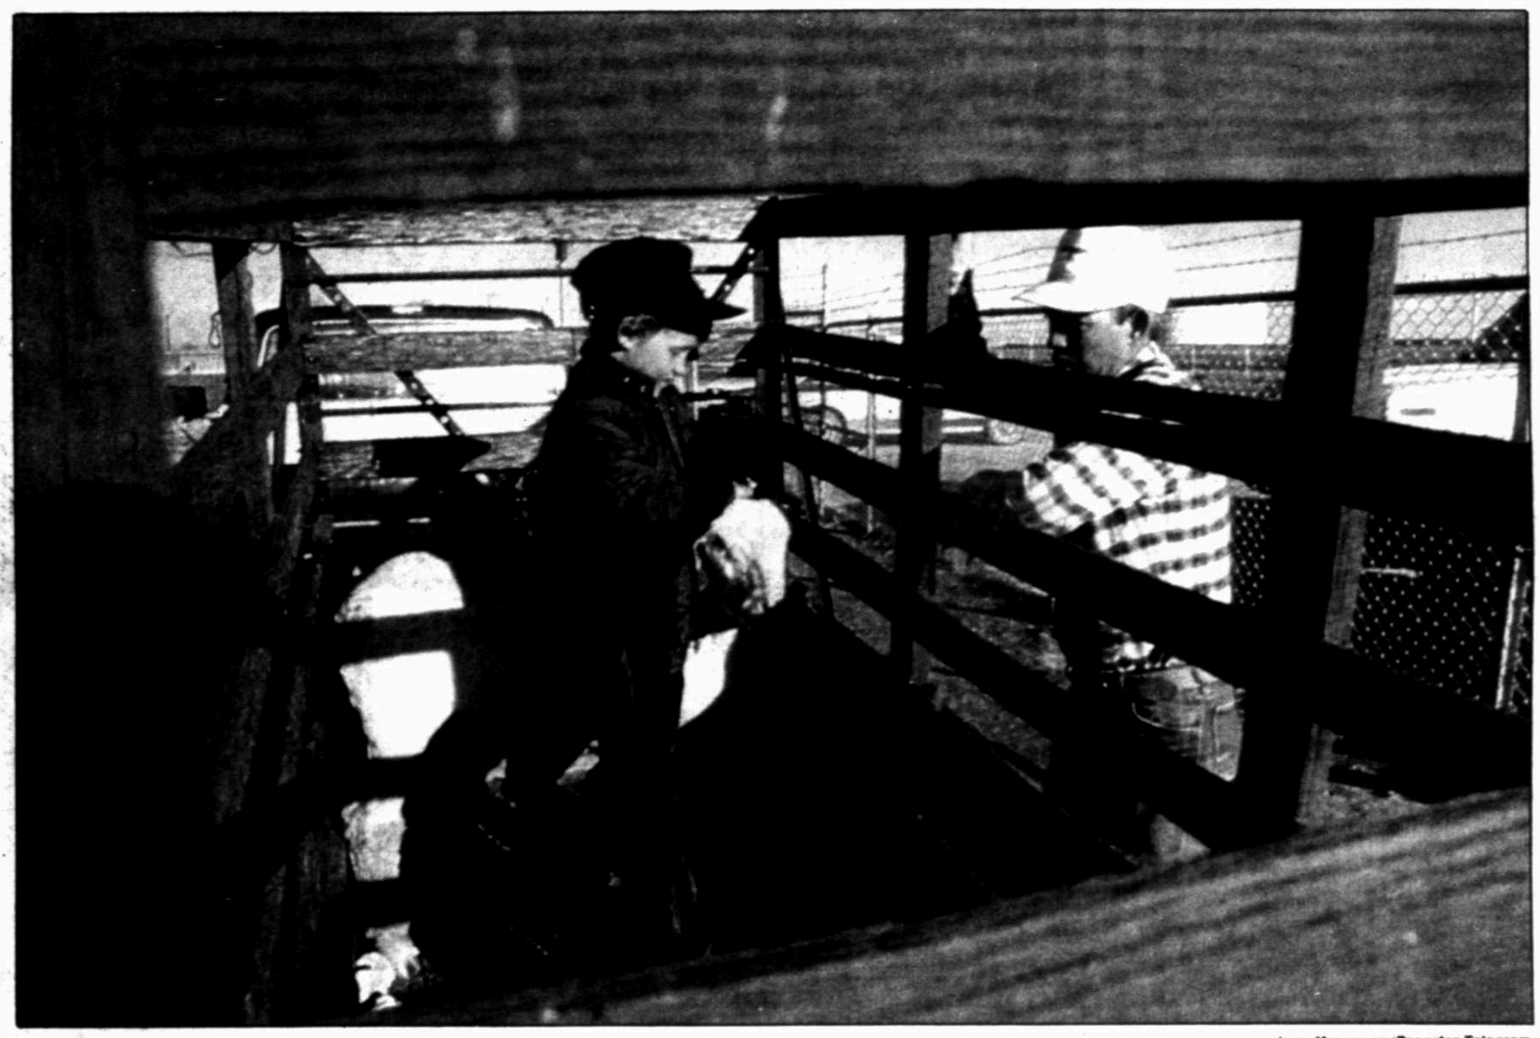

On a more positive note, Clark, who succeeded Thomas R. Procopio as chief liquidator for the Midland-based operation, said, "We're recasting loans, renewing loans, collecting additional collateral, working out agreements with customers for their basic living expenses, in some cases restructuring entire debts in order that the FDIC eventually would be paid.

"Some of these credits are very large and there has been a great deal of cooperation from those people. In addition, participating banks, both upstream and downstream, are working with us," Clark said.

Most creditors have been very cooperative, Clark added. "The majority of problems we have encountered is not a lack of cooperation with us but a simple result of the boom and bust. I just wish everyone would pay and we wouldn't have to be here," he said.

Clark estimates he probably will be in Midland three years but said the liquidation site would remain from six to 10 years, in his opinion, with litigation extending far beyond that.

Reagan ready for dialogue, new relations

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, expressing his willingness to attend a U.S.-Soviet summit if it would help advance the new arms control talks, says 1985 should be a year of dialogue and better relations between the two superpowers.

While celebrating a new agreement to begin fresh negotiations on nuclear and space weapons, Reagan told a news conference Wednesday night the two countries' differences "are many and profound" and predicted the new talks will be difficult.

"It's also my hope that as 1985 unfolds," he added, "this year will emerge as one of dialogue and negotiations, a year that leads to better relations between the United States and the Soviet Union."

He said, however, that he intends to press ahead with research on a space-based anti-missile system, although the "Star Wars" plan will be "on the table with everything else" when the bargaining begins in the new round of talks agreed to by U.S. and Soviet negotiators this week in Geneva.

Asked if now might be the time for a summit meeting with Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko, Reagan said, "To have a meeting just to have a meeting doesn't make any sense."

■ Pravda story sounds hopeful — Page 3A

■ Plans for arms talks examined; Related story — Page 5A

But he added, "In the next month or so, we're all supposed to get together and find out when the negotiations can start and where. If, at any time, a reason arises in which a summit could be helpful in that or in any other matters and a carefully planned agenda created ... I'm perfectly willing."

Replying to a question about whether the success of the Geneva meetings and the resumption of arms talks might lead to a new era of detente with the Soviet Union, Reagan said, "I think that there will be other things talked about other than just weapons ... We very definitely are trying to arrive at a position in which we can settle some of the other bilateral and regional issues and trade matters that are at odds between us."

London blast blamed on gas leak

Associated Press

LONDON — An explosion, possibly caused by leaking gas, wrecked a luxury apartment house in south London today. Officials said four bodies were found in the rubble and seven people could still be trapped.

An elderly woman was heard pleading for help and pulled from under the wreckage, but officials said there was little hope for the others believed buried.

One of several connected three-story buildings in the Manor Fields apartment complex on Putney Hill was demolished in the blast, which occurred at 7:20 a.m. South Eastern Gas said a resident had called to report a gas leak before the explosion and a utility van was en route to the complex when the explosion occurred.

The blast touched off a fire that burned for two hours before it was extinguished, said a spokesman for the London Fire Brigades.

Police and firefighters dug through the rubble with small shovels and bare hands in near-freezing cold, fog and snow flurries. Shortly after noon, one of them heard a woman's voice.

"She was pleading for help," said Barry Powell, a doctor at the scene who talked with her. "She said that she's well, but she's terrified and would like to be rescued as soon as possible."

The elderly woman was removed from the wreckage at around 1:40 p.m. and taken away by ambulance.

Police sealed off the area, fearing that there might be another explosion or that adjacent structures might collapse.

Yard need 'weeding?'

Firefighters help toss tumbleweeds

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

When Mary Pliska returned home from work shortly after 5 p.m. Wednesday, some unwelcomed guests were waiting for her.

They had climbed up the pecan tree in her front yard and eight feet up into the pine tree in the back. They had crowded into her yards, blocking the driveway.

Winds, which the National Weather Service said rose to almost 50 mph at 12:45 p.m., had piled tumbleweeds up to the eaves in both the front and back of her house, hiding both doors.

And when she finally pulled enough away to get in and call for help, no one wanted to come over.

"I couldn't get anybody out here," the life-long Midlander said. "Luckily, I had a rake out here that I use to come out and rake up cans and bottles and papers people throw out here. The city won't do it."

Ms. Pliska, who said she had lived at the house on County Road 60 North for five years, said she'd never suffered such trauma from tumbleweeds before.

"They were even on top of the house," the 25-year-secretary for Lone Star Steel Co. said. "It took me about 20 minutes before I got into the house. And then I started calling."

The city wouldn't send a dump trunk out to the area, which was annexed about a year ago, after 5 p.m., she was told. And no one else seemed to want to pay overtime to someone to help.

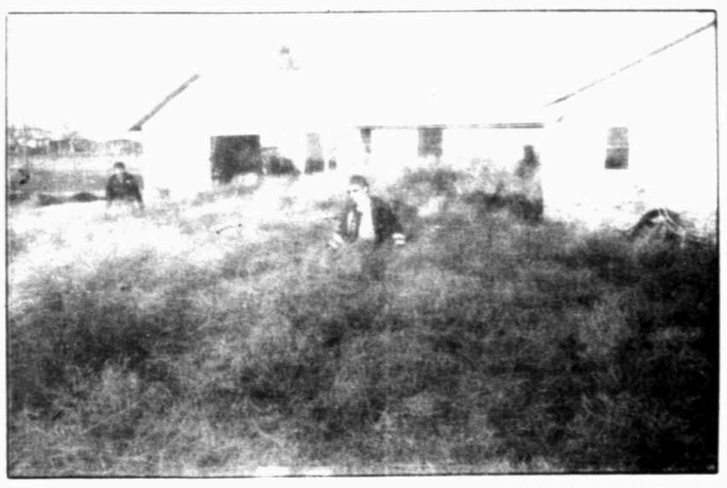

"Finally, I got someone with the city who told me to call the fire department. And these two boys came out."

The two "boys," paramedics David Gordon and Cliff Balzer, had to leave at 6 p.m. when they were called to a medical emergency. But as they pulled away in their ambulance with the lights flashing and the sirens wailing, they promised, "we'll be back."

Firemen Randy Norton and Ricky Taylor drove up in a fire truck to join in the tumbleweed toss.

"Our main concern is getting it away from the house," Norton said, acknowledging the dried weeds were a definite fire hazard.

Pulling the pounds of tumbleweeds to the southside of the house, Norton said with a grin, "Tomorrow when the wind blows again, it'll be in Stanton and Odessa and Monahans will be here."

Sales tax rebate checks climb in Midland, Odessa

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Midland and Odessa continued their climb up the economic scale with the sales tax rebate checks sent them earlier this month by State Comptroller Bob Bullock's office.

Midland's check was for $550,922.65 as compared to the $420,910 received in January 1983, which is a 30.89 percent increase.

Odessa's check fell slightly below Midland's with $512,025.74. Last year, the city received $469,269.16, which was 9.11 percent below this year's rebate.

The sales tax rebate is the 1 cent charged by cities and collected by the comptroller's office along with the state sales tax. The penny is sent back to the cities about two months later. The January checks reflected sales made in November.

The Comptroller's Office compiles the figures according to the calendar year, while Midland and Odessa financial offices keep tallies according to a fiscal year that starts in October.

For the three months in fiscal year 1984-85, Midland had received $1,961,503. With January's check the fiscal year figure will be pushed up to $2,512,425.

Midland Finance Director Troy Gifford last month had estimated January's check to fall in the range of $575,000. Gifford was out of his office and unavailable for comment Wednesday.

Freezing weather, bursting pipe blamed for fatal fire in France

Associated Press

GRANDVILLIERS, France — A water pipe that burst in subfreezing temperatures has been blamed for a fire that killed 24 residents at a hospital for the elderly and sent scores of others stumbling into a bitter cold morning.

Officials theorized that the intense cold — temperatures dropped to 4 degrees Fahrenheit — had caused the pipe to burst, spraying water on electric wires and creating a short-circuit that flared into a fire.

The first sign of trouble early Wednesday was a nurse's observation that water had stopped flowing in a toilet. Checking the problem, a maintenance man noticed smoke coming from the attic.

Minutes later, flames burned through the roof of the state-run hospital in Grandvilliers, 60 miles northwest of Paris. The roof of the wing housing 88 elderly people collapsed, taking the second-floor down with it.

Dazed residents, many pulled from their beds, were rushed out into the snowy courtyard, most inadequately dressed for the short walk to undamaged sections of the hospital.

But staff and firemen from Grandvilliers and nearby towns could not save 18 men and six women who were found dead in their charred beds, most believed dead from asphyxiation.

"The fire spread very quickly," said Marie-Louise Lafargue, 82. "You could see flames everywhere and you would have said the building was made of paper."

"Everything happened so quickly," said Elia Baudiquer, who will be 89 next month. "They (the firemen) just couldn't do anything more."

Cafe owners and bakers served hot drinks and croissants for the survivors and helped comfort them. "The solidarity of the local people was incredible," said a fireman.

It was the worst such disaster in France since 32 people died in a fire set by an arsonist at a home for the elderly in Saint-Jean-de-Cosne, near Dijon in central France, in April 1980.

President Francois Mitterrand, with three ministers, flew by helicopter to the scene, delaying a Cabinet meeting.

Government spokeswoman Georgina Dufoix, who is also minister for social affairs and who accompanied Mitterrand, said the president wanted to "judge the extent of the catastrophe, see how aid was being organized, and pay homage to the victims." Mitterrand did not speak to journalists at the scene but talked briefly with some of the survivors.

The hospital was built in 1920, and officials said it met all the current safety regulations.

The building which burned was completely renovated in 1975, including the electrical wiring, and was regularly inspected by the regional fire safety committee including the mayor of Grandvilliers, with fire extinguishers being checked every two month, city officials said.

Man dies from injuries in Juarez gas explosion

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Hospital officials in this border city said a 25-year-old man has died from injuries he suffered in a gas line explosion on Sunday.

The victim was identified by Juarez Medical Center nursing supervisor Josephina Escobedo as Jose Guadalupe Pena Lopez of Juarez.

She said Pena Lopez died about 10 a.m. Wednesday.

The noon blast on Sunday injured 27 people, including Pena Lopez, razed a two-story building and damaged at least 13 shops in a downtown business district of Juarez, a city of 1 million across the Rio Grande from El Paso, Texas.

Nine people injured in the accident, which officials said was caused by a gas leak, remain hospitalized.

Iraq claims ship attack

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq claimed that its jet fighters attacked and hit a ship today near Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal in the Persian Gulf.

Gulf shipping sources in Bahrain and Kuwait said there was no independent confirmation that a vessel had been attacked.

An Iraqi military spokesman, reading a communique over the state radio, said the attack took place at 11 a.m.

Freighter towed to Iran

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A Greek freighter stranded near the Persian Gulf war zone for seven months in a dispute between owners and crew over pay was towed to Iran today after the Iranians agreed to settle the pay claims, the British captain said.

"The Iranians gained their $4 million worth of steel, which I kept intact," Capt. Peter Hampton, 49, of the Teviotban, told The Associated Press after disembarking from the ship.

He said the Iranian Ministry of Metals paid him and his 11 crewmen $110,000, the back pay he says the Greek owners of the ship had refused to pay.

The crew included six Sri Lankans, three Ghanaians and two Turks.

France wants shuttle aid

PARIS (AP) — France wants its European allies to join it in building a manned space shuttle, the head of the French space agency says.

Frederic d'Allest said France would introduce the proposal at a meeting of the 11-nation European Space Agency scheduled Jan. 30-31 in Rome.

Polish captain testifies

TORUN, Poland (AP) — A secret police captain charged with organizing the kidnap and murder of a pro-Solidarity priest said today he believed at first his superiors sanctioned his actions but later decided he had been "cheated."

The officer, Capt. Grzegorz Piotrowski, testified at his trial that he only intended to abduct the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko to frighten him and that the clergyman was killed when the scenario of the abduction did not go according to plan.

Piotrowski testified for a fourth day in the 9-day-old trial in which he and three other security officers are charged with the October abduction and killing of Popieluszko, one of the most outspoken anti-government priests in Poland's Roman Catholic clergy.

Vietnamese pull back

BAN SANGAE, Thailand (AP) — Vietnamese troops pulled back into Cambodia from Thai territory today, defusing a 24-hour confrontation over the location of the border that came close to armed conflict.

"There is no more problem here. As you can see, everything is quiet," Maj. Gen. Salya Sriphon, the Thai eastern task force commander, told reporters.

DILLARD'S WELCOMES THE AMERICAN EXPRESS® CARD

Pravda 'hopeful' about arms talks

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, center, walks from his plane in Moscow Wednesday on arrival from talks in Geneva. Anatoly Dobrynin, wearing glasses, Soviet ambassador to the United States, is in the background.

By CAROL J. WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW — The Communist Party newspaper Pravda expressed hope today that new U.S.-Soviet arms control talks will be successful, but said the outcome depends on American willingness to forge agreements.

"One would like to hope that the American side will display realism this time and join the Soviet Union in the search for effective solutions aimed at ridding mankind of the threat of nuclear war," Pravda commentator Tomas Kolesnichenko wrote.

The agreement to resume U.S.-Soviet arms control talks was announced in Geneva, Switzerland late Tuesday after meetings between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and the Soviet foreign minister, Andrei A. Gromyko.

The Pravda comment and references in the Soviet media to the Geneva talks essentially repeated positions stated before the Shultz-Gromyko meeting took place, insisting that progress depends on American actions.

The Soviets walked out of arms control talks in Geneva a year ago after Britain, West Germany and Italy began deploying new medium-range NATO missiles.

There has so far been no public comment by Soviet officials in Moscow. Gromyko, who returned to the capital Wednesday, was expected to brief the 10 other members of the ruling Politburo today at the regular meeting of the Kremlin leadership.

The Soviets will brief their six Warsaw Pact allies at a summit next week in Sofia, Bulgaria.

Meanwhile, U.S. officials spread out to the Western European capitals to brief government leaders and NATO officials on the talks.

America's allies welcomed the agreement to resume negotiations and expressed relief that the superpowers were communicating again.

Italy's respected La Stampa newspaper declared: "The nightmare of non-communications is ending."

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said after a meeting with U.S. national security adviser Robert McFarlane that she warmly welcomed the agreement. But she said negotiations will be difficult.

McFarlane flew from London to Rome today to brief Italy's premier, Bettino Craxi.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany welcomed the Geneva agreement "with great satisfaction and guarded optimism," Bonn government spokesman Peter Boenisch said.

"The German people, who live on the borderline, the boundary between East and West, have a pre-eminent interest in this," said Boenisch.

Many Western commentators said both sides compromised in the Geneva agreement. But some said the Soviets, who once pledged not to talk to Washington again while the U.S.-made NATO missiles were arriving in Europe, had yielded more than the United States — which agreed reluctantly to negotiate on space-based anti-missile weapons.

"The political will to reach an agreement was there," commented Brussels' La Libre Belgique newspaper.

Nicaragua's president takes office

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Daniel Ortega, a hardened guerrilla fighter, takes office today as Nicaragua's first president since the leftist Sandinista National Liberation Front fought its way to power in 1979.

Ortega, 39, coordinator of the ruling junta for the past five years, was elected president Nov. 4, along with a 96-member National Assembly that was sworn in Wednesday.

The government takes office confronting not only the challenge of U.S.-backed insurgents but the worst financial crisis in Nicaragua's history.

The country is suffering from shortages of many basic commodities. But Ortega said in a New Year's message that 40 percent of the 1985 budget will be devoted to defense, and Nicaraguans face more sacrifices in their daily lives.

Also taking office is a Cabinet reorganized by Ortega to place more emphasis on defense.

Sixty-one of the assembly delegates who took the oath Wednesday for six-year terms were Sandinistas, and the rest represented minor opposition parties.The assembly's first principal task is writing new constitution.

The main opposition group, the Nicaraguan Democratic Coordinate, boycotted the November elections, contending there were inadequate provisions for a fair campaign. The United States called the elections a farce.

They were the first elections since the Sandinistas ousted President Anastasio Somoza, ending his family's 42-year dynasty.

The foreign ministers of the four Contadora nations arrived in Nicaragua on Wednesday for the inauguration after drafting proposals for resolving differences that block agreement on their regional peace plan.

The National Weather Service forecasts snow and snow flurries through Friday from the Midwest to southern New York and the Chesapeake. Showers are expected for the eastern Gulf and southeastern coastal states.

Sharp drop in temperature forecast for Permian Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders will want to dress warmly Friday as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport expects temperatures to drop sharply.

Forecasters are calling for fair skies tonight, becoming partly cloudy near midnight. Lows in the upper 20s will increase to highs in the mid-30s Friday. Tonight's five to 10 mph easterly winds will shift to the northeast Friday at five to 15 mph.

Wednesday's high of 62 was 17 degrees below the record set in 1948. This morning's low was 18 degrees above the record of 5 set in 1962.

STATE

There was sharply contrasting weather across Texas this morning, but not for long.

A cold front pushed into South and East Texas early today, and temperatures plummeted as it made its journey southerly and easterly toward the Gulf Coast.

At 4 a.m., it was a frigid 19 at Amarillo and a balmy 65 at Brownsville, but meteorologists with the National Weather Service said unseasonably cold temperatures soon would grip the entire state.

Colder temperatures are in prospect over the next several days.

On Saturday, lows should be only 2 degrees in the Panhandle, 9 at Odessa, 12 in the Big Bend, the weather service said.

In North Texas, lows near 20 are expected by Saturday, with the day's high only about freezing.

For South Texas, the lows Saturday are projected to be in the 20s and lower 30s, with highs in the 30s and 40s for all except the Rio Grande Valley, where highs are expected to be in the 50s and 60s.

Showers and heavy thunderstorms were reported about 1:30 a.m. near Tomball and Conroe, north of Houston. The storm moved southeast at 15 to 20 mph, missing Houston to the west on its trek to the Gulf.

NATION

A winter storm pushed across the Midwest today, frigid cold chilled the Northeast and a combination of freezing rain and snow dipped into the South.

A winter storm warning was issued for northern Ohio, where up to 8 inches of snow was forecast.

A winter storm watch was issued for the mountains of Georgia, northern South Carolina, much of North Carolina, western Maryland, western Virginia, West Virginia and east Kentucky.

Airborne auction departs DFW

By SUSAN ASCHOFF
Associated Press Writer

GRAPEVINE — More than 2,800 pounds of Texas bull ambled through Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, but its journey stopped short of the plane and what was billed as the first-ever airborne cattle auction.

"Macho," current sire of the King Ranch herd, stayed behind in the concourse while 310 breeders, ranchers and guests climbed aboard a United Airlines 747 Wednesday for the "World's First Airborne Cattle Sale."

There was no cow flesh on the plane. Instead, passengers bid on interests in prize Santa Gertrudis cattle by watching videotapes of the animals.

The high-dollar auction enroute to Hawaii was to publicize technological advances in breeding.

But the sendoff boasted more showbiz than science.

"Macho" posed with women dressed in jewels and long silk gowns.

Ranchers in cowboy hats and boots hollered greetings from 20 feet away.

Airline passengers gawked, and restaurant workers snuck off the job for a quick peek at the brick-colored bruiser pawing the carpeted concourse.

"Nebraska's cattle country, too, but they would never think of this," said John W. White, president of Nebraska Wesleyan University in Lincoln, Nebr., watching the bull as he waited for his Seattle flight.

"That's Texas," White said.

King Ranch herdsman Beto Maldonedo guides "Macho" through the United Airlines terminal at DFW.

"This bunch is a lot of fun," said Calvin Hodge, who owns Hodge Properties Farms on the Brazos River. "That's a very good reason to raise Santa Gertrudis cattle — the people."

As they waited for their flight to Hilo, Hawaii, passengers snacked on pastries and coffee. The handful of women in gowns and evening pajamas were dressed for an inflight fashion show and auction.

The big attraction, however, was the cattle sale sponsored by Santa Gertrudis Breeders International. The auction sold interests in semen from seven prize bulls and embryos from two donor cows. A single lot of calves was also for sale.

"We videotaped all the animals for the auction. But they're well-known" by the passengers because they are prizewinners, said Steve Harrison, chairman of the trip's organizing committee and owner of Bee Creek Ranch in Meridian.

"The focus of the sale is the high technology of embryo transfer," Harrison said.

Through science, a prize cow can produce dozens of eggs for transplant to "recipient mothers," said Dr. Robert Morris of the Ozark Valley Farm in Mountain Home, Ark. A prize bull's semen is also valued for its genes.

The semen and embryos are used to improve the cattle herds of the buyer.

One passenger estimated an embryo would not sell for under $10,000 at the auction. Harrison declined to estimate the dollar level of sales. "Macho," a full-grown bull not on the sale block, could command more than $1 million, he said.

The 32 breeders participating in the event raise the only cattle breed developed in the United States. The Santa Gertrudis is a cross between a Brahman and Shorthorn.

After years of trial and error, the first perfect bull was named "Monkey" on the King Ranch in South Texas. His head now hangs at Texas A&M University, a monument to "the first bull to turn out right," said Hodge.

Threats kept boy from contacting parents

By CHRISTOPHER CALLAHAN
Associated Press Writer

SCITUATE, R.I. — A 13-year-old boy who was missing from his California home for nearly two years saw his photograph on television during a movie about missing children, but was told he would be locked away if he tried to contact his family, police said today.

Bobby Smith, who was reunited with his father Wednesday after being found in a Providence apartment, saw his photograph last April during the movie "Adam," said Lt. Richard Wheeler.

The youth, who was missing for 21 months, wanted to call home, but was told by David R. Collins that "he would spend the rest of his life locked up somewhere" if he tried to telephone, he said.

"The boy was hoodwinked into believing that if he tried to get back to anyone he knew he would be locked away for the rest of his life," said Wheeler.

Collins, 55, was being held on charges of first-degree sexual assault and being a fugitive from justice.

Meanwhile, Wheeler said police were investigating whether Collins, who had "several" snapshots of other boys, was involved in other missing child cases.

The photographs were being sent to the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, in Washington, D.C., to see if they matched pictures of other missing children, said Wheeler.

Bobby, who was found Monday, joined in a tearful, silent embrace with his father on a snow-covered field behind Rhode Island State Police headquarters on Wednesday.

"I went from day to day," said Robert C. Smith, 43, who flew from his Long Beach, Calif., home after learning his son had been found. "I never lost my faith."

Police took a statement from the boy and took him to Family Court in Providence, where a judge released him to his father after making sure the youngster wanted to go home. The two left for New York, and planned to return home today.

At a news conference Tuesday inside the police barracks, Bobby appeared shy as he faced cameras and questions, but said he wanted to go home and see his mother.

Doris Smith, in a telephone interview from Long Beach, said she believes Bobby, who disappeared in April 1983, met Collins while playing video games.Collins lived just a few blocks from the Smith family, but the parents did not know him.

Parker's bill would 'clarify' some educational reforms

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — The chairman of the Senate Education Committee says he thinks disqualifying a high school athlete for a full semester for not making his or her grades "is too long," but he doesn't want to tamper too much with the new education reform law.

Sen. Carl Parker said Wednesday he would introduce a bill that would correct and clarify education reform measures adopted in an historic summer special session.

On grades, Parker said, a week-to-week review would be better and "would go a long way to soften the blow there."

Parker, D-Port Arthur, said although his bill would open public education to "everybody's theory," it's important that the Legislature not back off from reform.

The Legislature on June 30 adopted a $2.8 billion education bill which tracked many of the recommendations of H. Ross Perot's Select Committee on Public Education.

Since the bill was signed into law by Gov. Mark White, there have been widespread reports of teacher, parent and student dissatisfaction.

Parker said Wednesday he had heard a measure would be introduced this year "to repeal everything we did" on school reform, but he added, "I do not think it will get a great deal of support."

FDIC

In addition to liquidation of assets, FDIC activities here involve resolving lawsuits filed against the failed banks and suits filed against the FDIC.

As a result, Clark foresees a time when "there will be no assets to disburse but there will still be lawsuits."

Clark, 47, a native of Muskogee, Okla., became managing liquidator here effective Jan. 6. Prior to being assigned to Midland, he served in the Southwest Area Liquidation Office in Dallas, having joined the FDIC in 1960 as a bank examiner. He became a commissioned examiner in 1964 and a senior bank examiner in 1966. In May 1970 he left the FDIC to become senior vice president of the Bank of El Paso and returned to the FDIC in 1973 as a bank examiner in the Memphis region.

He was named assistant regional director in Minneapolis in 1979 and moved to Dallas as chief review examiner in 1981. He became assistant regional director in Dallas in 1982.

He was one of the first two FDIC managers selected in May 1984 to participate in a new executive selection and development program designed to create highly qualified managers for the FDIC's prime areas of activity.

Of his appointment in Midland, James A. Davis, director of the Division of Liquidation, said, "Mr. Clark is an experienced manager who will significantly strengthen the division's management team. We are glad to have such a capable individual running this major liquidation office."

Council to discuss TESCO building

From Staff Reports

The city council will meet in special session in council chambers Friday at 2 p.m. to consider buying the old Texas Electric Service Co. building at the corner of Texas and Colorado streets.

Jack B. Wilkerson Jr. has proposed selling the building to the city for $1.1 million. It has been appraised at $1.8 million. The city would issue certificates of obligation to finance the deal if the council decides to make the purchase.

The purchase is being considered to provide extra office space if the municipal government should outgrow city hall in future years. Until then, the city could rent out the space, it has been proposed.

REBATE

Bullock reported that statewide payments are up more than 15 percent over last January's checks, "mostly because of the new items brought under the sales tax by the Legislature last summer."

But he cautioned city governments not to expect similar increases for the rest of 1985 and cited reduced oil revenues as a reason.

"The cuts we've had to make in expected state revenues are coming from the slump in the oil industry and reduced receipts from oil companies aren't yet reflected in these payments." He added that sales taxes from a disappointing Christmas retail season statewide are due in payments next month to cities.

REAGAN

Ending his first formal news conference in six months, Reagan backed away from reporters and nearly fell off the low podium in the White House East Room before regaining his balance. In other topics covered during the wide-ranging 32-minute session, Reagan:

—Appeared to exempt Social Security cost-of-living increases from his blanket promise during the fall campaign never to reduce or alter benefits to beneficiaries of the retirement system.

—Pledged continued support for anti-Sandinista guerrillas in Nicaragua, saying the people there "are governed by a group that took over by force" and adding there is "no retreating from what we feel are obligations there in Central America."

—Dismissed long-range economic projections as inaccurate and unecessary, saying, "Frankly, I pay no attention to them."

—Reiterated his opposition to a tax increase to bring down the deficit, saying that "would set us back in the very thing that we have accomplished in these first four years and intend to carry on, and that is an economic expansion."

The president also denied that a move by Senate Republicans to write their own budget nearly a month before he submits his spending plan to Congress showed he was walking away from his deficit-reduction effort.

"I don't mind if they want to do what they are doing. ... Maybe they've got some ideas we hadn't thought of," Reagan said.

He added that his goal remains keeping overall federal spending for next year at the same level it is this year.

The president said "I just don't believe" critics who say that goal cannot be accomplished if Reagan keeps to his opposition to increased taxes and deep reductions in the Pentagon buildup.

Asked if he would "feel a little lonely" because some of his top aides are leaving office or changing jobs, Reagan said, "Well, of course, I will miss anyone of those — we've been a fine team. But it came as no great surprise to me. I said from the beginning that I wanted people to take these positions in government, but I was not setting any time limit as to how long they had to stay."

Correction

A headline in the Midland Reporter-Telegram Wednesday incorrectly stated Pamela Gallick, 4405 N. Garfield, found an intoxicated, snoring man asleep in her bed when she returned home from work Tuesday night. The man, who was charged with criminal trespass, was found asleep between her bed and a sliding glass window.

Also, reports indicated the two children in the apartment both were those of Ms. Gallick's sister and roommate, Margaret Gallick. Each woman has a child.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

Cost-of-living increases may be exempted

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is hinting he might exempt Social Security cost-of-living increases from his blanket campaign promise not to cut benefits from the government's retirement and disability program.

Asked at his nationally broadcast news conference Wednesday night whether he still considered the annual Social Security cost-of-living adjustments untouchable, Reagan said, "I never specifically mentioned that. I did say, however, that I would resist anything that would reduce the payments and the benefits."

The cost-of-living adjustments are designed to keep Social Security payments in line with inflation, and there have been suggestions in Congress that those payments might be frozen to hold down rising budget deficits.

The president said during the news conference that if he was faced "with an overwhelming bipartisan majority in both houses" of Congress favoring such a move, "I would have to look at that situation and what I was faced with with regard to a possible congressional mandate."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes was asked whether that meant the president would want to see such a move pass Congress by a two-thirds majority, a sufficienct majority to override a veto. "I would think so," Speakes replied.

But the House majority leader, Rep. Jim Wright, D-Texas, said today that the House "would be no party" to any move to cut Social Security cost-of-living benefits.

Interviewed on the NBC-TV "Today" show, Wright said the president "seems to be under some strange illusion...that an overpowering congressional mandate is going to force him to break his promise to protect the cost-of-living adjustments for the Social Security recipients.

Reagan objects to everyone calling system 'Star Wars'

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Someone else may have been the first to use the phrase, but on the night President Reagan presented his futuristic missile defense system to the nation, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy tagged it "Star Wars."

To the president's obvious dismay, the term stuck.

"I wish whoever coined that expression would take it back again," he groused at his news conference Wednesday night. "It gives a false impression of what it is we're talking about."

Can't do that, Mr. President. Even your own guys call it "Star Wars."

And no wonder. The official name attached to the plan is "Strategic Defense Initiative." Even Darth Vader would cringe at that.

Kennedy struck swift and sure on March 23, 1983, when the president had barely concluded his nationally broadcast speech.

The senator complained of the "misleading Red-scare tactics and reckless Star Wars schemes of the president."

By the next day, Star Wars was a household word. On Capitol Hill, it was and is Star Wars. Scientists call it Star Wars. In the Pentagon, they call it Star Wars — except perhaps in the presence of Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, who doesn't.

Ahem, Mr. President. Even Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, the genial director of the project, has been known to call it Star Wars.

Strategic Defense Initiative sounds like a new stamp being issued by the Post Office. Or a new neurosis.

And SDI isn't much better. SDI sounds like something invented for the "Mission Impossible" gang to infiltrate.

Part of the real SDI is research on an electromagnetic rail gun that shoots out high-speed bullets. At a congressional budget hearing, a reporter got a look at its code name.

Would you believe Project Jedi?

The Jedi Knights, of course, are the good guys in moviemaker George Lucas' Star Wars trilogy. Luke Skywalker, a white hat if there ever was one, was a Jedi knight.

So, sorry, Mr. President. Star Wars it is and Star Wars it will be.

But what's in a name?

Reagan says 'Star Wars' won't be used in bargain with Soviets

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Even with new negotiations about to start, President Reagan isn't giving up the search for a foolproof defense against a Soviet missile attack.

He rejected the suggestion in his Wednesday night news conference that the $26 billion "Star Wars" program could be offered as a bargaining chip to gain Soviet concessions in limiting nuclear weapons.

But in line with his own call for flexibility, the president acknowledged there is no way to be absolutely certain the Soviets are living up to arms control accords.

"Absolute verification is impossible," he said. In practical terms, the statement means he might approve an agreement even if procedures against cheating are not airtight.

And, significantly, Reagan said he would be willing to hold a summit meeting with Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko to work out a treaty curbing nuclear weapons.

An Analysis

"If, at any time, a reason arises in which a summit could be helpful in that or in other matters" he would meet with the Soviet leader, Reagan said.

But on the embattled Star Wars program he stood his ground against Soviet charges that it could lead to the militarization of outer space.

Reagan said it was humane to seek "a weapon that might destroy nuclear weapons" rather than to threaten massive retaliation if attacked.

In fact, he objected to the Star Wars description because it sounds like an offensive and madcap weapons system. The administration calls the program a Strategic Defense Initiative.

Reagan held the news conference, his first in almost six months, mostly to celebrate the agreement Secretary of State George P. Shultz reached Tuesday with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko to resume negotiations to reduce nuclear arsenals.

"I believe a more stable peace is achievable through these negotiations," Reagan said as he urged all Americans to support the talks.

While seeking the presidency in 1980, Reagan attacked all major U.S.-Soviet arms control agreements and was particularly harsh in condemning the 1979 Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty.

Reagan claimed it was "fatally flawed" because it was difficult to verify whether the Soviets were complying with treaty provisions.

Critics of arms control agreements generally condemn verification procedures as inadequate. Defenders of the agreements say it's more important to curb the nuclear arms race than to head off every possible marginal violation.

Even though Reagan again accused the Soviets of cheating, he did not take the position that a treaty should not be signed unless it was possible to track Soviet activities perfectly.

It's unlikely Nixon will have role in arms talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon received greetings from President Reagan on his 72nd birthday, but he didn't get a job offer.

At his news conference Wednesday night, Reagan was asked if he was about to name Nixon as a roving ambassador or to give the former president a role in the arms talks with the Soviet Union.

"Well, he's never suggested that he had any interest in such a thing," Reagan said. "No, we've made no such plans."

Energy, Interior agencies may be merged

Hodel

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he "ain't talking," but administration sources say he has chosen Energy Secretary Donald P. Hodel to head the Interior Department and wants to merge the two agencies.

The Hodel choice already is final, and White House personnel director John S. Herrington is "the only name on the list" to move into the Energy Department post, administration sources said Wednesday.

Reagan, however, has not made a final decision on Herrington, one source said. And the president was playfully mum Wednesday night when asked to confirm the Hodel report at his nationally televised news conference.

"I ain't talking," Reagan said in answer to a question. "I'll tell you when we've made a decision."

The 49-year-old Hodel, a former utility executive and undersecretary at Interior for the controversial James G. Watt, would succeed William P. Clark, who announced last week that he would return to his California ranch in March.

Word that Hodel would assume the Interior post followed by a day Reagan's announcement that Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, would switch jobs with White House chief of staff James A. Baker III.

One senior White House official insisted Wednesday that Reagan had not chosen successors to Clark or T.H. Bell, who resigned last month as secretary of education. The appointments, however, were likely within a few days, the official said.

Reagan probably would try to make the merger idea more marketable on Capitol Hill by portraying it as a way to cut the burgeoning federal budget deficit, according to an Interior official who spoke on condition that he not be identified. Others who mentioned the upcoming changes also asked to be anonymous.

Another Interior official said nuclear weapons manufacturing and a few other responsibilities of the Energy Department probably would not move with Hodel to the new post but would be parceled out instead among other agencies.

Herrington, a lawyer from Walnut Creek, Calif., lacks expertise on energy issues, having joined Reagan's 1980 campaign as an advance man, or traveling political organizer.

Herrington's mission at the Interior Department would be to provide political leadership for the merger, "making sure that nobody over there tries to thwart this thing," the official said.

Reagan urged abolition of the Energy Department in his 1980 campaign. In 1982, however, the idea died on Capitol Hill amid doubts over whether it could produce budget savings.

The Energy Department was established in 1977 to centralize certain responsibilities of the Atomic Energy Commission, the Federal Energy Administration and the Interior Department.

As undersecretary, Hodel spearheaded Watt efforts to step up energy exploration and development through resumed leasing of rights to mine coal on federal land and drill for oil in coastal waters.

That brought criticism of Hodel from environmentalists. But department officials say Hodel often aided the volatile Watt by acting as a peacemaker, path-smoother, damage control officer and moderator.

At the Energy Department, Hodel has stressed a need for nuclear power while preserving conservation programs and subsidies.

Environmental groups gave generally muted but unfavorable reviews to the choice of Hodel as energy secretary.

John McComb, Washington lobbyist for the Sierra Club, said the group views Hodel as a "competent manager with a one-sided, pro-development bias."

William Turnage, president of the Wilderness Society, said Hodel's appointment would be "another unfortunate step backward."

Merging the two departments, Turnage said, "would be a most unfortunate step, and one we would vigorously oppose because it would complete the president's attempt to subordinate conservation and the environment to all-out development."

Charles Callison, director of the Public Lands Institute, an arm of the Natural Resources Defense Council, said that "as far as Interior's policies go, I think we're not going to see anything very different from Mr. Watt. I'm slightly depressed, considering the lands and resources the department presides over."

Police apologize for ransacking wrong house

ATLANTA (AP) — The people who kicked down Elizabeth Allen's door and ransacked her house also left her a note — signed by the police, apologizing for serving a search warrant on the wrong address.

"At first, I thought somebody had broke in," Mrs. Allen said Wednesday. "They did this past June, and I thought the same thing happened again.

"And then when I found out the police had done it, I couldn't believe it. It was unreal."

Officers with a search warrant broke into Mrs. Allen's house, thinking it was that of her daughter and son-in-law, who live next door, said Sgt. W.J. Kleckley of the narcotics division.

"It was the wrong address, but the person named in the warrant was her daughter," Kleckley said. "It's not something that was done intentionally. We've already apologized."

Mrs. Allen said she called police and "one officer said, 'Didn't you get our note?' I told them I hadn't even been into the house."

When she got into the house, Mrs. Allen found the kitchen ransacked, with cannisters of flour, meal, and coffee on the counter. Light bulbs lay broken on the floor and cigars belonging to her husband were strewn across the counter.

Clean clothes had been scattered across the bedroom, the bed covers were stripped and the tank tops on the toliets had been removed, she said.

On her kitchen table, she found the note. It read:

"I, Detective G.C. Antuna hit a warrant on your house tonight. No one was home. Our office will contact you about the door."

Two workmen came to the house Wednesday and patched up the hole in her door where the deadbolt lock had been so she could lock the door, and she said she was promised the door would be replaced today.

A city crew will assess the damage to the house and help clean up, said spokeswoman RhondaCopenny.

Couple pleads in murder

CINCINNATI (AP) — Former "most-wanted" fugitive Alton Coleman has pleaded innocent to charges he robbed and strangled a 15-year-old girl during a six-week crime spree through the Midwest.

Coleman, 28, and his girlfriend, Debra Brown, both of Waukegan, Ill., were arraigned Wednesday on charges of aggravated robbery and murder in the death of Tonnie Storey, whose body was found in an abandoned house here July 19.

Ms. Brown, 22, who is challenging her transfer from Dayton to Cincinnati, declined to make a plea on her attorney's advice. Common Pleas Judge Simon L. Leis entered a plea of innocent for her. The couple was held without bail.

Judge won't deport Iranian

CINCINNATI (AP) — A judge said he decided not to deport a 28-year-old student convicted of two misdemeanor thefts because the son of a former Iranian official would probably have faced death in his homeland.

Hamidfounooni Fard, a doctoral engineering student at the University of Cincinnati who pleaded no contest to charges he stole books and beef, is the son of a former official in the government of the shah of Iran.

"I decided a term in the workhouse was bad enough," Hamilton County Municipal Judge Mark Painter said Tuesday after granting Fard's request over the Immigration and Naturalization Service's objection. "We didn't need to send him back to the Ayatolluh (Ruhollah Khomeni), too."

Suit accuses discrimination

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — The owner of a small motel says a Justice Department civil suit accusing him of regularly putting black lodgers in the back "is just not fair."

Roy Blazic, who with his wife, Vera, owns the Capri Motel, said regular black guests always ask for the same rooms at his 50-room motel and said three blacks stayed in front of the motel last weekend.

The lawsuit filed Tuesday also says black guests were denied use of the Capri's swimming pool and lobby. It asks the court to order the Blazics to provide all customers equal lodging and services regardless of race.

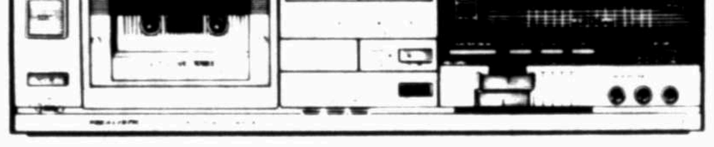

Park named as landmark

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — The designation of People's Park, where police clashed with students protesting the Vietnam War, as a city landmark "is mostly symbolic, but it is real important symbolism" says a city official.

The University of California is still trying to decide what to do with the land. While the city council's action Tuesday night does not prevent its development, it sends "a message to the university that the people are not forgetting about People's Park," said Landmark Commissioner Ken Stein.

Prisoner thinks date with death 'just not fair'

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A Texas prison inmate scheduled for execution next week in the slaying of an undercover narcotics agent says he deserves the same punishment as the man who fired the fatal shots — life in prison.

Doyle Edward Skillern, 48, of Houston, has been ordered to die Wednesday for the Oct. 23, 1974, shooting death of Department of Public Safety trooper Pat Randel near Beeville in South Texas.

Skillern was convicted of capital murder in 1975 under the state's "law of parties," which makes a non-triggerman as guilty as the actual killer.

"The law says I'm criminally responsible for the actions of another person. That's fine, but give me the same sentence," Skillern said during an interview Wednesday at the Texas Department of Corrections' Ellis Unit, which houses Death Row.

"It's just not fair," he said. "I wish someone would explain what's fair about it to me, to my family, if they can explain it at all."

Charles Sanne, 50, claims he shot Randel in self-defense while trying to sell the officer 1,000 Quaaludes. He received a life sentence and will be eligible for parole in June.

Skillern, who was waiting in another car at the scene, got the death penalty.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin has been asked to stay Skillern's death date, his fifth since 1981. The Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles also is expected to decide by Friday whether to commute Skillern's sentence to life in prison.

Skillern was allowed to work in the dental lab with general population inmates last year until the program was abandoned by a new prison administration.

One of the lab supervisors wrote a letter to Gov. Mark White, asking for leniency. In the letter, supervisor Ernie Hernandez said, "It is my sincere belief that this is a salvagable human being and certainly worthy of a commutation."

Skillern said he realizes there is "a chance" his court-ordered punishment could be carried out. But he said he has been "mentally prepared for years" and hopes no one mourns his death.

House approves rules giving speaker increased power

AUSTIN (AP) — Despite objections of a lawmaker who said he was the only one with guts enough to speak up, the Texas House has approved rules that give increased power to Speaker Gib Lewis.

El Paso Rep. Paul Moreno complained that the House was "moonwalking."

"You know what moonwalking is. That's one step forward and two steps backward," he said Tuesday. "We are going back to a system of government where one person controls this body."

The House gave voice vote approval to rules that tighten Lewis' control of the appropriations process by allowing him to appoint members of budget and oversight subcommittees that review agency spending.

The change is minor compared to some made two years ago when Lewis became speaker. House members in 1983 gave Lewis greatly expanded powers, including the ability to yank committee chairman.

"It amazes me that this body can sit here and take rules changes without any fight whatsoever," said Moreno, the only House member to speak against the changes.

He said colleagues had told him they agreed with him, but did not want to buck the speaker and possibly wind up witn an unwanted committee assignment.

"What makes a committee assignment so precious?" Moreno asked,

After the brief session, Lewis scoffed at Moreno's complaint.

"Mr. Moreno's made those comments for the last 10 years I've been here," he said.

The new rules set up two new committees — a panel on science and technology and a panel to oversee state agencies.

The money-conscious House also approved a rule change to do away with full printing of congratulatory resolutions in the daily journal. Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, said that could save $300,000 over two years.

Also Wednesday the House voted 138-6 to suspend the constitutional rule that bars floor debate for 60 days. Theoretically, the rule guarantees careful consideration in committees before legislation moves to the floor. The 60-day rule was left intact in 1981 and 1983, and some members complained it created a logjam near the end of the 140-day session.

Lewis favored suspension of the rule, but somehow his vote showed as a "no" on the electronic tote board.

Senator proposes bill to eliminate teacher tests

AUSTIN (AP) — Calling one-time competency tests for teachers an insult to the profession, Sen. John Sharp has proposed a bill to eliminate the tests.

On Wednesday, Sharp, who favors an evaluation process, said if judged incompetent, a teacher would have to enroll in test preparation programs.

The education reform bill approved last year requires that all teachers pass a one-time competency tests by June 30, 1986.

Sharp, D-Victoria, said the judicial system is predicated on the belief that a person is innocent until proven guilty, and in this case teachers are pinpointed as being guilty without cause.

Sharp's bill would allow for the substitution of an acceptable test such as the National Teachers Exam or the Graduate Record Exam as proof of competency.

His bill has been endorsed by the Association of Texas Professional Educators, the second largest education organization in the state.

"We do not believe that an incompetent teacher should be employed in a classroom in Texas, but a one-time paper and pencil test cannot deliver an accurate assessment of who is and is not competent," said Mike Hardin, association president.

Special visitor

It isn't every community in this country that can claim to be the former home of the current vice president of the United States or that can attract the vice president to the kickoff for a centennial celebration.

Midland can, though, and it was with unreserved pleasure that Centennial Commissioner Martin Allday announced Wednesday that Vice President Bush will be in Midland Feb. 27 to address those in attendance at a rally intiating the countdown to the community's centennial celebration, a big portion of which will be held July Fourth at the Centennial Plaza in downtown.

Of course it's exciting anytime a community's residents can band together to recognize their common heritage — to laud the glory of days gone by and to envision the future open to them. Midland's simply will be a little extra special because of the manner in which it will be kicked off next month.

Vice President Bush and his wife, Barbara, lived in Midland from 1948 until 1959 and although they now call Houston home, Bush has been quoted as saying if he is anything today (and his record of public service attests to the fact that he is), it's because of what he learned as a young man in the Tall City.

Midland residents undoubtedly are pleased to be remembered in such a favorable light by a man of Bush's stature. We're proud that the values taught and held here are regarded in such high esteem.

It's particularly fitting that Vice President Bush will mark the start of the city's centennial celebration. It will give the event a note of extra special historic import.

Special thanks are due many individuals for their part in getting Vice President Bush to be in Midland for the Feb. 27 event. None deserves more praise than Allday, who in addition to his post as a Centennial commissioner is a close friend of Vice President Bush.

Faith in future

Three more signs of the nation's economic times add up to bright prospects for 1985. They include robust activity in the construction business, automobile sales and factory orders.

— Construction of factories, offices and shopping centers climbed 1.1 percent in November. That is an annual spending rate of $322.2 billion (B), which the United States Commerce Department said was an increase over the October rate of $318.2 billion (B). This latest gain was the best since the August upsurge.

— November also brought good news about factory orders for manufactured goods. Commerce Department officials said they rose 4.3 percent during that month for the biggest increase in 17 months. The agency reported a volume of $193.8 billion (B), or $8 billion (B) more than the October figure.

— The dramatic rebound in the automobile industry continues apace. It got started in 1984 when production lines turned out 7.6 million cars, or nearly 14 percent more than in 1983. The outlook for 1985 is even better. Auto makers have announced they plan to build 790,540 units during January, or a whopping 17.9 percent more than the 670,353 produced in January of 1984.

These are just a few of the areas of economic action that point toward a healthier and happier new year. The momentum that began in late 1982, and which gathered steam in 1983 and 1984, is an auspicious omen for continued economic growth in 1985. It speaks volumes for the nation's faith in its future.

Another View:

Performance first

Pundits and other Washington observers seem to be getting themselves worked up about a reshuffle in the State Department which promises to drop some notable conservative ambassadors by the wayside.

They wonder: is Reagan going to make a dramatic turn to the left in his second term?

Amid all the speculation, focusing as it does on our own penchant for putting politics first as the focus of all analysis, we may be overlooking the obvious: the motivation of a president who cannot run for office again. He can now afford to eschew a political strategy in favor of pure, unadulterated performance.

Political appointees to ambassadorships are not notoriously skilled, especially when compared with a truly professional corps of foreign service officers who have been trained for the task.

It may simply be that entering his second term, no longer running for president, Reagan and his secretary of state have looked at those past political appointees, and at their performance to date, and decided that some have done a lousy, amateurish job.

Maybe they just want somebody in those jobs who can do them.

The only thing wrong with that explanation is that it provides no excitement, no fodder for the Washington gossip mills, no fun for the commentators.

It makes you wonder if the pundits watching Washington do not politicize decisions in their reporting and commenting to us more zealously than the politicians themselves actually do in making their decisions.

The political figures with responsibility actually do have to worry about the skill and performance of people as well as their politics. The pundits don't.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On Jan. 10, 1776, American revolutionist Thomas Paine published his influential pamphlet, "Common Sense." In his call for independence, Paine wrote, "Everything that is right or reasonable pleads for separation."

On this date:

In 1834, historian Lord Acton was born in Naples, Italy.

In 1861, Florida seceded from the Union.

In 1870, John D. Rockefeller incorporated Standard Oil.

In 1917, "Buffalo Bill" Cody died.

In 1920, the League of Nations was established as the treaty of Versailles went into effect.

In 1928, the Soviet government ordered the exile of Leon Trotsky.

In 1946, the first General Assembly of the United Nations convened in London.

Also in 1946, the first manmade contact with the moon was made as radar signals were bounced off the lunar surface. The returning echoes took 2½ seconds to reach Earth.

FEMA wants to wage war

WASHINGTON — The Federal Emergency Management Agency has commissioned a $100,000 study on how to wage economic warfare.

The private contractor, who conducted the study with substantial input from agency officials, proposes a series of new federal task forces and committees. Their purpose would be to implement a "coherent, organized and effective" federal program should the United States go to war with economic weapons. Naturally, FEMA will be in charge.

Jack Anderson

FEMA, an obscure federal agency that is supposed to prepare for natural and man-made disasters, has been criticized for attempting to grab more power than it is due. Director Louis Giuffrida has been assailed by none other than Attorney General William French Smith for trying to create an "emergency czar" role for his agency.

Washington officials question FEMA's authority to direct economic warfare. But a FEMA spokesman cited a 1962 executive order, which apparently gives the agency the claimed jurisdiction.

The spokesman insisted that "economic warfare" wasn't the agency's name for the phenomenon described in the study. FEMA prefers the term "economic defense" to define the methods of "denying adversaries U.S. resources."

But my associate Donald Goldberg has obtained a draft report of the study, and it clearly states that FEMA has "activated a pilot program to identify the ... elements of a federal offensive and defensive economic-warfare program."

The inch-thick report does not advocate any particular method of waging economic warfare; rather it recommends implementing measures on a case-by-case basis. For instance, the section titled "Offensive Economic Warfare Actions" reads as if it were written by a CIA bureau chief in Latin America. It includes these possibilities:

(1) "Currency and exchange-rate restrictions and-or manipulation"; (2) "Manipulation of gold, silver and other precious metals sales or stockpiles"; (3) "Economic espionage"; and (4) "Misinformation on products, statistics, patents and so forth."

The uninitiated might think some of those would constitute "dirty tricks" unworthy of the U.S. government. But the FEMA study is not so squeamish. It identifies (without advocating) a number of other techniques under the heading "Dirty Tricks," including:

— "The use of propaganda and false information includes measures such as publishing false information of economic failures and-or successes (i.e., disinformation)."

— "Economic disturbance and aggravation includes counterfeiting currency, fomenting labor strikes and dissent."

— "Covert, illicit and illegal actions include bribes, the stealing of technical secrets and providing a safe haven for terrorists who are hostile to the enemy."

— "Infrastructure sabotage and destruction includes measures such as industrial sabotage."

The authors of the FEMA study evidently knew what the customer wanted for his $100,000. One of the recommended systems for waging the economic-warfare program is an inter-agency committee supervised by an inter-agency policy board. The members of both panels would be chosen by — who else? — the director of FEMA.

Footnote: Agency sources say the draft study is still being evaluated, and there's no evidence that FEMA plans to pursue the subject. This would make it just another $100,000 boondoggle. Officials of the firm that did the study declined comment.

NICARAGUA UPDATE: I'd like to think it had something to do with a column I wrote several months ago reporting that Nicaraguan Indian rebels led by Steadman Fagoth had tortured and executed Sandinista government prisoners. Maybe not, but Fagoth sought out my reporter Jon Lee Anderson a few days ago to announce with great excitement that he was about to exchange 23 Sandinista captives for five Indian prisoners.

He told my reporter that he now has given orders to "respect prisoners," and he even expressed regret that 17 other Sandinistas in the group that engaged his Indian fighters in combat had been killed — in battle, not afterward, Fagoth stressed.

— I've already reported on the presence of anti-Castro Cubans in Costa Rica, and how they have irritated the Nicaraguan rebels by trying to fight their own anti-communist war against the Managua regime. One of these militant Cubans, Felipe Vidal, explained that he was now trying to form a genuine anti-Sandinista Cuban group allied with the Honduras-based, CIA-backed Nicaraguan Democratic Force.

Arms control process 'sterile'

GENEVA — Sensible U.S. officials have been swimming against the riptide of media attention and the consequent flood of expectations that engulf the semi-summit. They have stressed that this was the first chapter — the preface, really — of a story on the scale of "War and Peace" or, perhaps it would be more appropriate to say, "Don Quixote."

George F. Will

But it actually may have been the fourth act of a three-act play. Between the signing of SALT II in the summer of 1979 and this winter, the arms-control process may have sputtered out.

That is unalarming. The process has been sterile, coinciding, through 16 years, with an unprecedented Soviet buildup. Kenneth Adelman, director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, notes that in the years of most intense "dialogue," 1970-76, there were five summits, and the Soviet-sponsored conquest by communists of five countries — South Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia, Mozambique and Angola. (Ethiopia and Afghanistan followed in the next two years.) If arms control is — as Jimmy Carter said and Richard Nixon seemed to believe and Ronald Reagan may be coming to believe — the "centerpiece" of U.S.-Soviet relations, it is a purely ornamental centerpiece.

More than 12 years have passed since an arms-control agreement was ratified by the United States. The inequalities of SALT I ignited the skepticism that was to prevent ratification of SALT II. SALT I limited but neglected to define, "heavy" missiles. At Vladivostok, the runup to SALT II, the two sides agreed to certain numerical ceilings, but neglected to decide whether cruise missiles or the Soviet backfire bombers counted against the aggregate.

When arms-control enthusiasts are described as destitute of achievements but not of certitude, they reply, with certitude, that the 1972 ABM treaty was a great achievement. It effectively killed, at least for the United States, ballistic missile defense. But the Soviet Union is brazenly violating it with a radar installation so gargantuan that it probably had to be planned before the ink was dry on the treaty.

However, it is arguable that a traditional aim of arms control — enhanced safety through more stable deterrence — may be a by-product of the exhaustion of the arms-control process. The argument is as follows:

SALT I and SALT II did not "limit" arms. Those agreements were snapshots of the evolving strategic balance. But arms agreements do not halt an arms race. Rather, they re-direct competition toward uncontrolled areas of weaponry. (Sen. Pat Moynihan notes that the naval treaties of the 1920s gave rise to the pocket battleship — the punch of a battleship crammed into a smaller hull.)

Today, certain weapons are apt to be unlimited because of verification difficulties. They are apt to be small because improved accuracy makes a large payload unnecessary for the destruction of many military targets. Being smaller and mobile, they are hard to count and keep track of. But the qualities that make these weapons hard to control with verifiable arms agreements also make them hard to destroy with a disarming first strike. So, as Adelman says, mobile ICBMs and cruise missiles may be less verifiable but more stabilizing because they ease the fear that in a crisis a nation must "use them or lose them." Such precarious "stability" at high force levels is far from ideal, but maybe the best that can be hoped for in relations with a Soviet regime bent on amassing offensive power.

A French observer says the Soviet Union's tactic is to do what it wants to do and use negotiations to stop what the United States wants to do. Today the Soviet Union wants to magnify its advantage in offensive systems while stopping U.S. progress toward a strategic defense.

But Ronald Reagan is an American in every fiber of his being. That means he believes that something is technically possible until it is proven otherwise. And he is a moralist. Both characteristics fuel his belief in the possibility and desirability of some defense against ICBMs — the desirability of "defending lives, not avenging lives."

Note the word "some." Reagan, as is his wont, has oversold strategic defense, suggesting that it can provide an impermeable "shield" that could in no place be overwhelmed by the multiplication of Soviet offensive systems. A sufficient argument for strategic defense is that it would provide some real defense (the Soviets could not be sure how much) to some of the U.S. retaliatory capability. Thus it would enhance deterrence by radically complicating the calculations and multiplying the uncertainties of any Soviet leader contemplating a first strike.

Given the barrenness of the arms-control process, it is odd that an objection made against strategic defense is that such defense might make arms-control agreements unattainable. But an oddity of our age is this: The sort of persons most eager for ratification of the meaningless treaty "outlawing" genocide are apt to be ardently opposed to strategic defense systems. But such systems would move us away from deterrence based on the threat to incinerate millions of civilians, a strategy that is, strictly speaking, genocidal.

ART BUCHWALD

'Losers' singing in rain!

Well, everyone seems to be back in town, not only the winners, but the losers in last November's election. The victors have taken their seats in the House and Senate, and the losers have taken theirs in one of Washington's 100,000 prestigious law firms.

Art Buchwald

Ex-Congressman Turtleback is one of the losers, if you call making $350,000 a year with Tort & Tort a losing proposition.

"I thought you'd go back to Wistful County after you lost your seat," I said.

"You ever been in Wistful County?" Turtleback asked me.

"Can't say that I have," I admitted. "All I know about it is what you said on the floor of the House — that it was America's biblical Garden of Eden."

"I'm not on the floor anymore, and Wistful County is the pits. I'm not just saying that because I lost the election after serving the people there for 20 years. It was the pits when I first came to Congress, and it's the pits now."

"Did you ever practice law before you got elected to public office?"

"No, and I don't intend to practice it now. I'm going to be the rainmaker at Tort & Tort."

"What's a rainmaker?"

"The fellow that makes it rain new business on the firm because of the people he knows. I may be out of office but I still have friends who owe me a few favors."

"Then you're going to be an influence peddler."

"Never. My job is to provide advice and consent to the private sector which can't operate under the oppressive laws passed by a vindictive anti-business Congress," he said. "Clients will come to me, not because of the influence I still wield, but because of my expertise in getting around the overbearing rules and regulations I demanded when I served the people."

"I can see where Tort & Tort would want you to be a partner in their firm," I said. "Will you also provide lobbying services?"

"You can't be a rainmaker in Washington if you are not willing to stand up for the things your clients believe in. The reason ex-congressmen and ex-senators are in demand by Washington law firms is that we have access to our former colleagues on the floor, not to mention the use of the congressional dining rooms and the gym. It's amazing how much law you can practice when you're doing Jane Fonda exercises with the chairman of a House or Senate committee."

"And they don't treat you any differently because you are no longer a member of Congress?"

"They treat you better, because now that you're with a big law firm you are a potential source of funds for their future political campaigns."

"What about the administration? How do they look on you?"

"Kindly. If you were a former Republican congressman, they want to make it up to you for losing your election. And if you were a former Democratic congressman, they are so delighted that you are no longer in opposition that they'll go overboard to show they don't hold grudges."

"You can't say Washington doesn't take care of its own."

"Had I known then what I know now I would have lost an election 10 years ago," he said.

The phone rang and Turtleback picked it up. "Willy, how are you? How are things at Wistful Tools? ... You don't say? The Navy refuses to pay you for the Snail Darter tool kit? ... They claim you overcharged them by $10 million? No problem, Willy, we'll not only get your money, but we'll get an apology from the Pentagon." Turtleback hit the Tort & Tort timer on his desk and then said, "Tell me the story."

After 20 minutes he hung up and winked at me. Then he broke into song: "I'm singing in the rain, singing in the rain. What a glorious feeling da de, da da da."

U.S., allies say Vietnam colonizing Cambodia

By DENIS D. GRAY

An Analysis

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The United States and its allies are painting an increasingly grim picture of what they say is a major effort by Vietnam to colonize Cambodia and grind its ancient culture into extinction.

Perhaps more insidious than the presence of about 160,000 Vietnamese troops in Cambodia, official statements claim, are economic, social and demographic moves by Vietnam to subjugate its weak neighbor.

"Beyond the continued warfare, the Khmer people now face the possibility of an end to their homeland, except as a name on the map, and the extinction of an ancient culture," said U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Paul Wolfowitz in a speech in September in Washington.

Vietnam strongly rejects such charges, saying it remains in Cambodia to help defend and develop its "fraternal ally."

Vietnamese troops invaded Cambodia in late 1978, toppling the Khmer Rouge regime and installing a pro-Hanoi government in the capital, Phnom Penh.

Since then, Hanoi's troops have borne the brunt of the fighting against a growing Cambodian resistance, including the Khmer Rouge and two non-communist guerrilla movements. Most combat takes place along the Thai-Cambodian border, where Hanoi's war machine now is battering camps of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front.

U.S. Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Armitage said in a September speech in Washington that as many as 300,000 Vietnamese may have settled in Cambodia in the past five years, more than half of them in and around Phnom Penh. A year ago, the State Department put the number of Vietnamese settlers at between 150,000 and 200,000.

Officials in Phnom Penh told The Associated Press earlier this year that there were 70,000 Vietnamese settlers in Cambodia, all of whom emigrated for economic and family reasons and not as colonizers. Vietnamese Ambassador Ngo Dien said that whatever the figure, it was far below the half-million Vietnamese who lived in Cambodia before 1970.

The Vietnamese, centuries-old enemies of the Cambodians, were expelled in large numbers by the U.S.-backed regime of President Lon Nol and after 1975 were viciously set upon by the Khmer Rouge.

This reporter observed substantial numbers of Vietnamese mechanics, tailors, market vendors, prostitutes and others in Phnom Penh earlier this year. Those interviewed said they came to Cambodia voluntarily because the living was easier than in Vietnam.

Vietnamese fishermen, dressed in traditional black pajamas and conical hats, were seen at Cambodia's Great Lake, one of the world's richest inland fishing grounds. The area had a considerable Vietnamese population prior to 1970.

About a year ago, U.S. diplomats said privately they doubted the Vietnamese settlers represented any organized colonization of Cambodia. The State Department said only that the influx "raises serious questions about Hanoi's long-term intentions toward Cambodia."

But the more recent Washington view is far different, either because of actual changes in Cambodia or for policy reasons.

"Vietnamese colonization continues unabated," Armitage said. "Vietnam's domination of the Heng Samrin regime is complete. As was the case 150 years ago, the Vietnamese occupiers have assaulted Cambodian culture and values."

Armitage and Wolfowitz said that Vietnamese settlers often receive priority in business matters, are given the best houses and are granted special fishing rights at the Great Lake.

Vietnamese advisers control the civilian administration, the two officials said, and violations of law by settlers are handled by Vietnamese authorities.

The Vietnamese language is required study for children and Cambodian officials, Armitage and Wolfowitz said, and Vietnamese settlers are encouraged to intermarry with Cambodians.

And there are repeated reports of mistreatment of Cambodians by Vietnamese soldiers, the officials said.

Similar if not stronger accusations have been leveled by officials of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, which opposes the Vietnamese occupation of Cambodia.

Some Western analysts say they are concerned about Vietnam's continued presence in Cambodia, but maintain it is almost impossible to determine Hanoi's ultimate goal.

Western journalists have been able to travel quite extensively in Cambodia, although often under controlled circumstances.

Private conversations with many Cambodians reveal a deep resentment, sometimes hatred, of the Vietnamese. But few, if any, journalists have been able to substantiate the most serious charges, especially those related to intermarriage, which does not seem widespread, or extensive brutality by Hanoi's troops.

It does appear that Vietnamese troops are destined for a long stay in Cambodia.

Vietnam has staged three partial troop withdrawals from Cambodia, the most recent in June of this year. But Thai officials and others have said Hanoi is merely rotating its troops, not reducing their numbers.

Former pilot now leads India

By TINA CHOU

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, whose party swept the Indian elections, is a soft-spoken former commercial pilot who once shunned politics but later earned the nickname "Mr. Clean" for his pledges to rid India of corruption.

Gandhi, 40, was named leader of the country's 730 million people hours after his mother, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, was fatally shot on Oct. 31 — by two of her Sikh bodyguards, according to the government.

His Congress Party won a landslide victory in parliamentary elections. Gandhi, India's youngest prime minister, has pledged to build a "clean government" committed to battling corruption, inefficiency and laziness.

In the two months at the helm of the party, he has set about streamlining the party, bringing in his team of "computer boys" from private industries, who are expected to become his Cabinet members.

A self-effacing man, Rajiv Gandhi shunned politics for years while his mother groomed his younger, aggressive brother, Sanjay, to succeed her.

Rajiv Gandhi, is said to have detested politics, enjoying a quiet life as a pilot for the domestic Indian Airlines, until he was pushed into the political fold following the death of Sanjay in a stunt plane crash in 1980.

Gandhi, a mechanical engineer educated at Cambridge, is married to an Italian woman, Sonia, and has two children. He is said to be fond of classical music, photography and dogs and enjoys fiddling with computers.

He agreed to enter politics because his mother needed help, and he figured that as a dutiful son he should help her.

Gandhi resigned from the Indian Airlines in May 1981, and the next month, was elected to fill his brother's seat in the parliament of northern Uttar Pradesh state.

In February 1983, he was elected as a general secretary for the Congress Party, becoming the most powerful person in the party after his mother and taking charge of most organizational work.

A few days after he became prime minister, he was elected party president and soon called parliamentary elections, apparently thinking his party would win on a wave of sympathy over his mother's slaying.

His election victory was helped by the failure of opposition parties to unite in one challenge to the ruling party.

Exercise may help youths to lower blood pressure

Dear Dr. Solomon: When I was in high school and college and I would have my annual physical examination, the doctor would invariably tell me that my blood pressure was too high. When I left college three years ago, I started on a regular exercise program, including jogging three times a week. Now my blood pressure is normal, and I attribute it in large part to my physical conditioning. What I would like to know is why doctors don't recommend exercise for teen-agers who have high blood pressure? Or doesn't my experience apply to younger individuals? — Carey, Anaheim, Calif.

Dear Carey: You assume that the decrease in your blood pressure is due to your exercise program, and you may very well be correct. But there have also been other changes in your life (for example, you no longer have the presures of school to contend with) that may account for the decrease.

Nevertheless, it does appear that exercise may enable younger people to lower their blood pressures. A six-month study of 25 teenagers conducted at the Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis, showed that all had reduced blood pressures after exercise training.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father has been told that he is developing a cataract, but the doctor said there is no rush to do anything about it. At what point should a cataract be operated on? — Leslie, Alexandria, Va.

Dear Leslie: It is really not possible to pinpoint a specific time at which cataract surgery can be said to be indicated. To a great extent, the best time for surgery depends on the individual patient. For example, some cataracts develop very slowly and may not interfere with vision to any significant extent. Such patients may go for years — in fact, for life — without requiring cataract surgery.

Another variable is the extent to which loss of vision affects the patient's way of life. The question is: Does the decreased vision as the result of the cataract prevent the patient from doing anything that he or she considers to be important? The answer to this question will be different for different patients.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I never used to have heartburn until I became pregnant. Is this something that also affects other women? — Mrs. J.B., Montreal

Dear Mrs. B.: It is estimated that more than one-half of all pregnant women experience occasional heartburn, and that about one-fourth have daily heartburn.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Populist's son not upset by election loss

WASHINGTON (AP) — The late Wright Patman, long-time chairman of the House Banking Committee, spent 47 years on Capitol Hill as a crusading populist.

Bill Patman, a 20-year veteran of the Texas Senate, followed his father's footsteps to Congress, but left quietly last week after only two terms.

Patman, 57, lost the first election of his career to 29-year-old Republican newcomer Mac Sweeney.

Sitting in his nearly empty congressional office the day before his successor was sworn in, Patman said he didn't want even to think about making another run for Congress.

"I just think that at this point I'd rather not give that too much thought," he said.

"I'm looking forward so much to the retirement that I hate to think about getting back into active campaigning and really feel like I should just go ahead and catch up on things that I want to catch up on, put aside all things for running for any political office."

Patman, who represented the 14th Congressional District in Southeast Texas, was one of three Democratic incumbents defeated in a Reagan landslide in Texas.

Tom Vandergriff of Arlington is leaning toward running in 1986 to regain the seat he held for two years. Jack Hightower of Vernon, a 10-year veteran of Congress, will open a law office and stay in Washington.

Patman seems to genuinely look forward to settling down in Ganado and devoting full time to upgrading his Beefmaster cattle herd.

"I've enjoyed these four years and appreciated the chance to be up here," Patman said. "Being in Congress has been a great experience for me — and certainly heightened my appreciation for what my father did up here during his 47 years."

Patman had his own legislative career, but the move to Congress brought inevitable comparisons with his father.

"He was well-liked by everyone from the guards to the elevator operators, the people who worked with the pages, the doorkeepers. I really cherish his memory, and many of the people up here do," Patman said.

Because of his name, Patman said, "a lot of people gave me the benefit of the doubt, I'm sure, really accorded me a status that I hadn't really earned."

Patman's wife and daughter, both named Carrin, have been as much a part of his career as any politician's family.

"Poor thing. She took it pretty hard," Patman said of his daughter, "Little Carrin," an attorney with a Houston law firm. He said he hoped she would get into politics herself some day.

But "Big Carrin," still bustling around her husband's deserted suite of offices on the last day, laughed. "Not if her mother can help it," she said. "At least she got to see this side of it."

The family plans to spend some time together, taking trips to Europe and Australia. Patman said he also wanted to roam South America, going back to places he only glimpsed when he was a young diplomatic courier.

"We've been at this for at least 24 years and the pressure's been enormous," Patman said. "Lots of apperances, lots of work nighttime, daytime, weekends, holidays. Every moment was either obligated or we were missing something.

New sheriff orders deputies to take it off

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — It was a bad day for fat deputies when the new sheriff came to town. He put them all on a diet.

Franklin County Sheriff Earl O. Smith said he was putting overweight officers on diet programs to trim their fat, then placing them in fitness programs to keep it off.

"It'll make them more alert, fast-moving deputies," said Smith, who says he practices what he preaches by working out regularly on weight-training machines. The sheriff, who took office Sunday, stands 5-foot-8½ and weighs 175 pounds.

The order to lose weight got a mixed reaction from deputies who were sworn in earlier this week at the department's patrol bureau.

"It's no big deal," said Lt. James Karnes. "I've done it before."

But Deputy Howard Gibson wasn't too happy about the new order.

"I can't lose weight," said Gibson, who claims 282 pounds on his 5-10 frame. "Once before, they did this, and I got down to 201 and had to see the doctor."

Five teams tied for first in 4-5A boys race

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

While the District 4-5A girls race has settled down into leaders and chasers, the boys are about as closely packed as any league can be.

Of the eight 4-5A boys teams, five are tied for first place after three games at 2-1: Midland Lee, Midland High, Abilene High, Odessa Permian and San Angelo.

One game back rests Odessa High and Abilene Cooper at 1-2 while Big Spring is alone in last at 0-3.

Friday night, when the last buzzer sounds, at least four of the leaders could still be on top with only Midland High or San Angelo dropping off the pace. They are the only two leaders to meet. Tipoff is at 8 p.m. at Chaparral Center.

"I'm not surprised when you hear that one team beat another in this league," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson. "I like our chances (against San Angelo), but it's not going to be easy."

In other 4-5A games Friday night, Midland Lee is at Big Spring, Abilene Cooper at Odessa Permian and Odessa High at Abilene High.

Midland Lee coach Paul Stueckler agrees with Stephenson about the difficulty of his team's game even though the opponent is different.

"Even though Big Spring hasn't won very many games this year, you have to be ready to play when you go to a district ball game," said Stueckler, who remembers some recent troubled times for his Rebels. "For example, we were 3-27 a couple of years ago. That year Odessa High was the champion and San Angelo was second and we took them both into overtime even though we wer 3-27.

"I was talking to (Permian coach) Charlie Pattillo and he said, 'Big Spring has a lot of athletic ability but they just haven't been able to put it together yet.' They do have a lot of ability."

BOTH MHS and Lee also have a lot of ability on their teams.

The Bulldogs have three players near or above the double figure scoring average for the season and one player has come into his own during league play.

Darrell Davis finished pre-district play with a 25.2 per-game average and has increased it to 26.4 after three 4-5A games on the strength of a 33.3 district average.

Elvin Mackey is scoring at a 12.4 click for the year, 11.0 in league while Matt Sears is 9.7 and 8.0.

Gil Brassard, scoring 6.3 points a game in pre-district, is now shooting at a 7.4 pace overall, improving his average in district play where he's hitting 13.3 points per game.

While Davis is tops on the 4-5A scoring list, San Angelo's Brian Ross is a player the Bulldogs have to stop, averaging 23.0 in league play. Then there is Ottoway Perryman to consider, 14.0.

Stephenson considers the Bobcats to be "a lot like Odessa High. San Angelo beat Odessa by three points on a three-point play at the buzzer. It's easy to see that this will be a very important game for both of us."

Especially considering the winner is still tied for first.

THE REBEL basketball team was strengthened at the end of Lee's football season with the addition of three football players, two of which have returned to the starting roles they held a year ago: Anthony Dickens and Tyrone Thurman.

Jake Young also joined the squad after football and Stueckler considers him "one of the most improved players on the team. He's growing every day and getting better inside with each game."

Dickens plays a key role in Lee's inside game while Thurman handles the ball as a point guard.

Three Rebels are scoring in double figures this year led by Brian Marczynski with 18.4 overall and 18.3 league averages. Raymond Morney has improved his overall average in league play to 11.5 while scoring at a 15.0 pace while Derek Westbrook is 11.3 and 10.2.

The Steers also have three players to defense though their scoring average isn't as prolific. Benard Williams is the top gun with a 13.0 league average while Billy Cole is coming on at 9.0 and Mike Leuschner is scoring 8.0 a game.

IN GIRLS action this year, Midland Lee resumed its yearly role as a pace-setter in District 4-5A, moving into first place Monday night with a 46-41 victory over previously unbeaten Odessa Permian.

The Rebels are unbeaten at 5-0 while the Panthers are alone in second at 4-1. Midland High and San Angelo are tied for third at 3-2.

The Rebels have been playing defense with a rabid tenacity while slowing improving their offensive attack. Friday they'll go after their sixth 4-5A victory when they host Big Spring, 2-3, at 8 p.m. at Lee Gym.

Lewis named male Athlete of Year

AP Laserphoto

Carl Lewis, winner of a record-tying four track and field gold medals, was named AP male Athlete of the Year.

NEW YORK (AP) — Now, Carl Lewis says, "It's time to go out and have some fun this year."

"Last year, there was a lot of preparation, a lot of pressure, a lot of tension," Lewis said, referring to the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics.

Despite all those concerns, Lewis was ready for the quadriennial Games.

He was entered in four events — and he won them all.

That accomplishment not only enabled him to match the late Jesse Owens' modern-day Olympic track and field record for golds, but it helped earn Lewis The Associated Press' Male Athlete of the Year award, which was announced Wednesday.

It was the second successive year that he had won the award — only the third athlete to receive it two consecutive years. The others were golfer Byron Nelson in 1944-45 and tennis player Don Budge in 1937-38.

Lewis was an overwhelming choice. He received 46 votes in balloting by a group of national sportswriters and broadcasters.

Quarterback Dan Marino of the Miami Dolphins, who set National Football League records with 5,084 yards passing and 48 touchdowns, finished a distant second with 24 votes.

He was followed by quarterback Doug Flutie, the Heisman Trophy winner from Boston College, with 17 votes; intermediate hurdler Edwin Moses, winner of Olympic gold medals in 1976 and 1984 and unbeaten in 109 consecutive races, with 15 votes, and running back Eric Dickerson of the Los Angeles Rams, who set an NFL rushing record with 2,105 yards, with seven votes.

Lewis will receive the award at the Tampa Sports Club banquet at Tampa, Fla., Feb. 21. Mary Lou Retton, the heroine of the United States women's Olympic gymnastics team and The AP's Female Athlete of the Year for 1984, will be honored at the same banquet.

The 23-year-old Lewis, winning the same events as Owens did in the 1936 Berlin Games, captured the 100-meter dash in 9.99 seconds, the 200-meter dash in 19.80 seconds, the long jump at 28 feet, one-quarter inch and anchored the U.S. 400-meter relay team to a world record clocking of 37.83 seconds.

Before the Games, Lewis' adviser, Joe Douglas, had predicted that if his client won golds in all four events, he should be able to cash in as much as Michael Jackson, the millionaire pop singer.

Despite his success at the Games, however, Lewis' image was tarnished somewhat when he took only two attempts in the long jump, and was booed by the huge crowd in the Los Angeles Coliseum. So the kind of money that Jackson — or even Retton — has earned since the Olympics has not flowed toward Lewis, but he is not upset by it.

"I'm not in a rush to make a lot of money," he said.

"I want to work on my acting career, my future," said Lewis, who has signed for only one commercial endorsement since the Games, with Suntory, a Japanese drink company. "I'm not worried about making money now.

"People can write what they want that Carl Lewis can't get endorsements. If I worried about that, I'd go crazy. As long as I'm happy — and I am — that's what's important.

"I've been offered some of the same endorsements that Mary Lou Retton has gotten," he continued. "I could have taken them.

No. 4 Ponies rip Baylor, 95-63

SWC Basketball

DALLAS (AP) — The next Southwest Conference test for the No. 4 ranked Southern Methodist Mustangs comes Friday night in College Station against a rapidly improving Texas Aggie team and Coach Dave Bliss just hopes guard Butch Moore will be ready.

Moore, the catalyst of the 11-1 Mustangs, fell hard to the floor and was stepped on by teammate Larry Davis Wednesday night in a 95-63 rout of Baylor.

Mustang trainers at first feared broken ribs. A later diagnosis revealed a painful bruise.

"Doctors say he should be able to play by Friday," said Bliss. "He has a painful swelling in the ribs."

The Aggies served notice they are ready for the Mustangs by whipping highly respected intersectional opponent Marquette 77-69 in Houston at The Summit.

In other SWC games Wednesday night, Houston defeated Texas Tech 83-74, Texas downed Rice 65-53, and Arkansas beat Texas Christian 67-59.

Bliss got more than one injury scare. His other guard, Carl Wright, had to be helped off the floor.

"Carl hurt his knee but was able to come back and played well," said Bliss. "When two guys like that go down, your heart stops."

SMU made the Bears pay dearly for their freshman-dominated lineup.

"We've got more experience than Baylor and we took advantage of that," said Bliss.

It was Baylor's worst defeat ever in Dallas and tied the all-time biggest margin.

Jon Koncak, Terry Williams and Carl Wright each scored 14 points for the Mustangs. Freshman Eric Johnson had a game-high 17 for the Bears.

"(Baylor Coach) Jim Haller is just a little inside help away from having a really neat team," said Bliss. "He's got some good athletes and they create a lot of excitement."

Haller said the Mustangs simply outmuscled his Bears.

"We just got a good licking by the No. 4 team in the nation," said Haller. "SMU just destroys you when you take the ball to the basket and that's been our game. We've got five brand new players as starters.

"We have some young people who I think were in awe of Mr. Wright and Mr. Koncak."

Koncak had four blocked shots and seven rebounds as SMU extended its SWC record to 3-0. Baylor is 0-2.

After meeting the Aggies in G. Rollie White Coliseum, SMU travels to Greensboro, N.C. to play the North Carolina Tarheels in a nationally televised game Sunday afternoon.

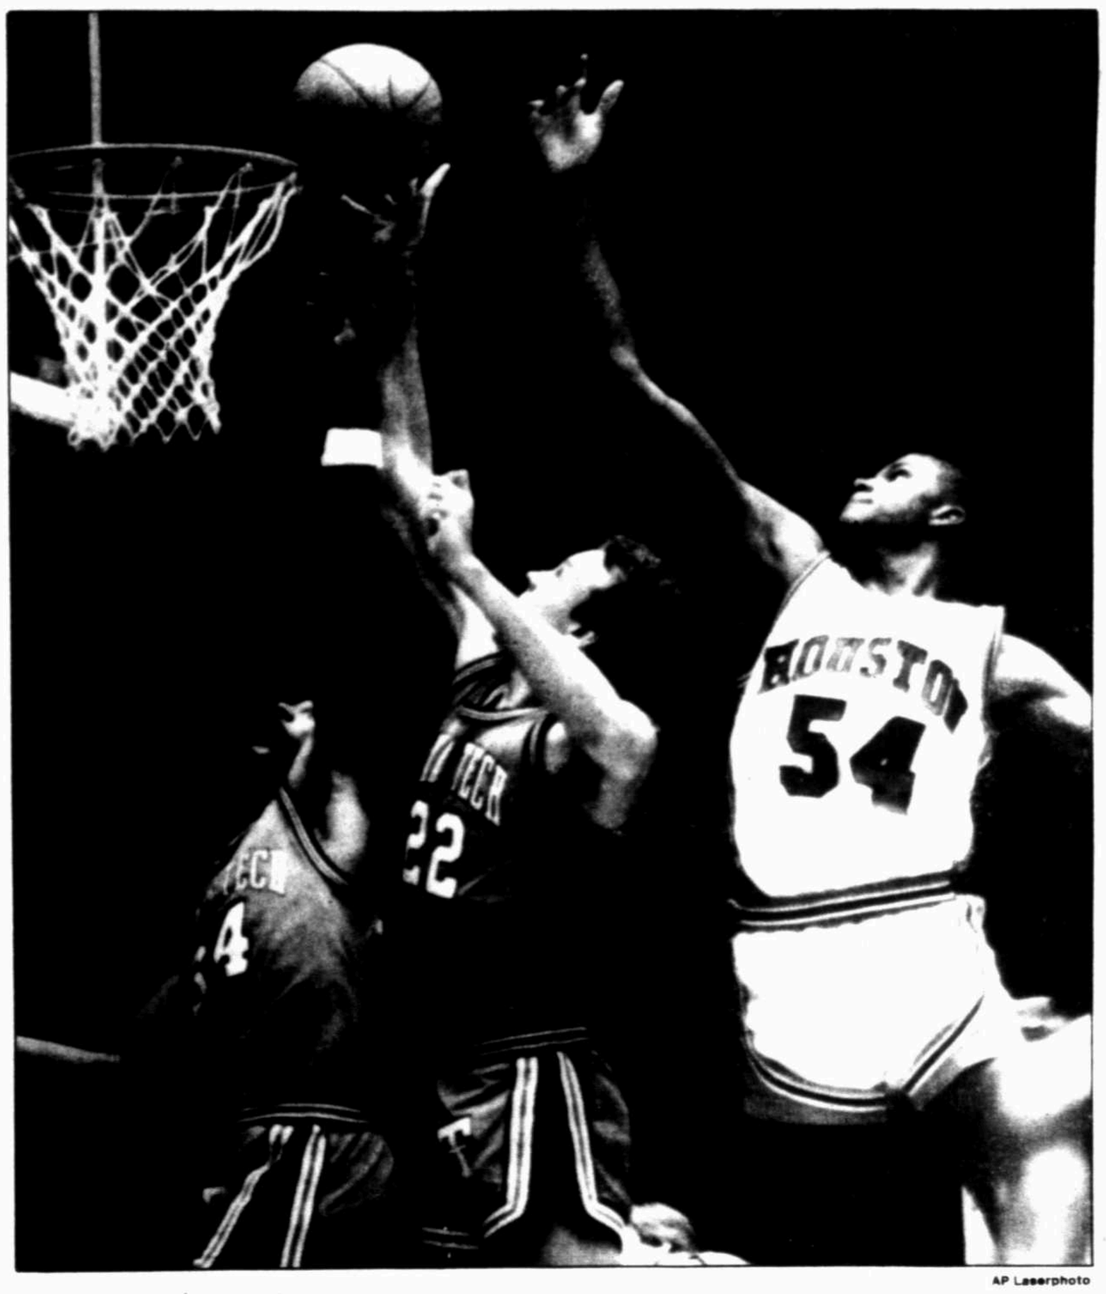

TEXAS A&M'S Jimmie Gilbert led a second half rally before fouling out with 6:30 to play and Don Marbury scored scored 19 points to lead the Aggies over Marquette.

Also in Houston, center John Brownlee came off the bench to score 29 points as the Longhorns defeated the Owls.

Texas Coach Bob Weltlich said Brownlee "gives us a big lift off the bench. I'm not programmed to distinguish between bench players and starters. We like to play a tough inside game, and this year with the size we have we have the chance to have an inside game."

HOUSTON'A ALVIN Franklin scored 24 points as the Cougars won their SWC home opener 83-74.

Texas Tech Coach Gerald Myers blamed first-half shortcomings for the setback.

Hope, Ford can't distract Mahaffey

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — It was no surprise to John Mahaffey to encounter confusion and cameras, a happily-shouting gallery romping through the desert sunshine, laughing at the one-liners of a legendary comedian.

"I knew what to expect. It helps to have been in that position before. The thing to do is put your concentration on the point of attack. Not try to concentrate all day long, but just when you're in the address position," Mahaffey said.

And Mahaffey, the defending champion and a two-time winner of this event, shut out the distractions of playing with the host comedian and former President Gerald Ford well enough to compile a 6-under-par 66 and share the first round lead Wednesday in the $500,000 Bob Hope Desert Classic.

"I was determined to enjoy the day. No matter what I shot, I was going to enjoy it. And I did. You know, they're humans, just like you and me. A lot more talented but still just humans," said Mahaffey, who also had played with Hope and the former president as the defending champion in the 1980 Hope Classic.

He got his share of the top spot in the kickoff event of the 1985 PGA Tour by making birdie on each of his last two holes at Bermuda Dunes, each time hitting a short iron less than 10 feet from the cup.

"I hope it's just a continuation of last year," Mahaffey said. "Financially, last year was my best on the Tour, and I was playing well at the end of the year. I finished second in the last tour event I played, and I played a lot over the offseason. I just hope it continues."

Mahaffey, a former PGA champion, shared the top spot with Craig Stadler, Doug Tewell and Gil Morgan. Stadler, a former Hope champion, and Tewell each played at La Quinta, while Morgan was at Tamarisk.

The group at 67, a single shot off the pace with four rounds to go in this 90-hole, five-day marathon, included Cal Peete, Mark O'Meara, Lanny Wadkins, Fred Couples, Bob Wrenn, Chip Beck and Tim Simpson.

O'Meara, Wadkins and Simpson played at Bermuda Dunes. Wrenn, who got into the tournament as an alternate, and Beck were at Indian Wells. Couples played at Tamarisk. And Peete, the 1984 Vardon Trophy winner, got around La Quinta without a bogey.

Arnold Palmer, a five-time winner of this title, had a 70 at Bermuda Dunes, one shot better than Jack Nicklaus, who played the same course.

The format calls for the pros to play one round on each of the four courses, each day with a different set of amateur partners, before the field is trimmed for the pros-only finish Sunday at Indian Wells.

Everett throws in victory for Lamar over Marshall

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Jerry Everett scored 16 points Wednesday night, including eight free throws in the final 90 seconds, as Lamar posted a 75-67 college basketball victory over Marshall's Thundering Herd.

The Cardinals, 5-6, led by only two, 52-50, with seven minutes remaining but cashed in on 15 of 17 foul shots in the final two minutes to ice the win.

Freshman guard Skip Henderson topped all scorers with a career-high 29 points, including 16 in the second half. Fellow freshman Tom Curry added 14 for Marshall, 7-8.

"We didn't quit. We played hard but we made some mistakes toward the end that hurt us," said Marshall coach Rick Huckabay, who was booed by a handful of Thundering Herd fans at the beginning of the game.

Huckabay said he didn't want his players to foul Everett, a 6-foot-5 guard who hit eight of eight foul shots in the final seconds.

In all, five Cardinals scored in double figures. Puntis Wilson, Karl McCauley and Anthony Todd backed up Everett with 12 points apiece, while James Nance added 11.

Ranger baseball coach resigns

RANGER (AP) — Jack Allen, who led Ranger Junior College to two national junior college baseball titles, has resigned as head coach after 22 years.

Allen, 49, compiled a 814-399 record and led his teams to National Junior College Athletic Association titles in 1973 and 1978. His teams also won 11 conference titles, eight regional championships and four state titles.

Eighty-six of his junior college players went on to sign contracts with major-league baseball teams.

Allen, 49, said Tuesday he was resigning for personal reasons, but would not explain further.

Harris helps Tulsa romp Sooners

Associated Press

Wayman Tisdale was billed as the star attraction, but it was Steve Harris who stole the show.

Harris scored 35 points, had seven steals and five rebounds Wednesday night in leading Tulsa to a 104-89 romp over No. 8 Oklahoma in an often-acrimonious battle for college basketball supremacy in the Sooner State. Unranked Tulsa improved its record to 10-2 while condemning Oklahoma to its fourth loss in 14 games, and also kept All-American center Tisdale out of the record books.

Tisdale needed 32 points to set a Big Eight Conference career scoring record but fell six short against a Tulsa defense that surrounded him every time he touched the ball.

Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs, who drew a pair of technical fouls in the first half, felt his team got a raw deal from the three game officials.

"We could've shot a thousand free throws tonight," Tubbs said. "I think we had a hole dug for us."

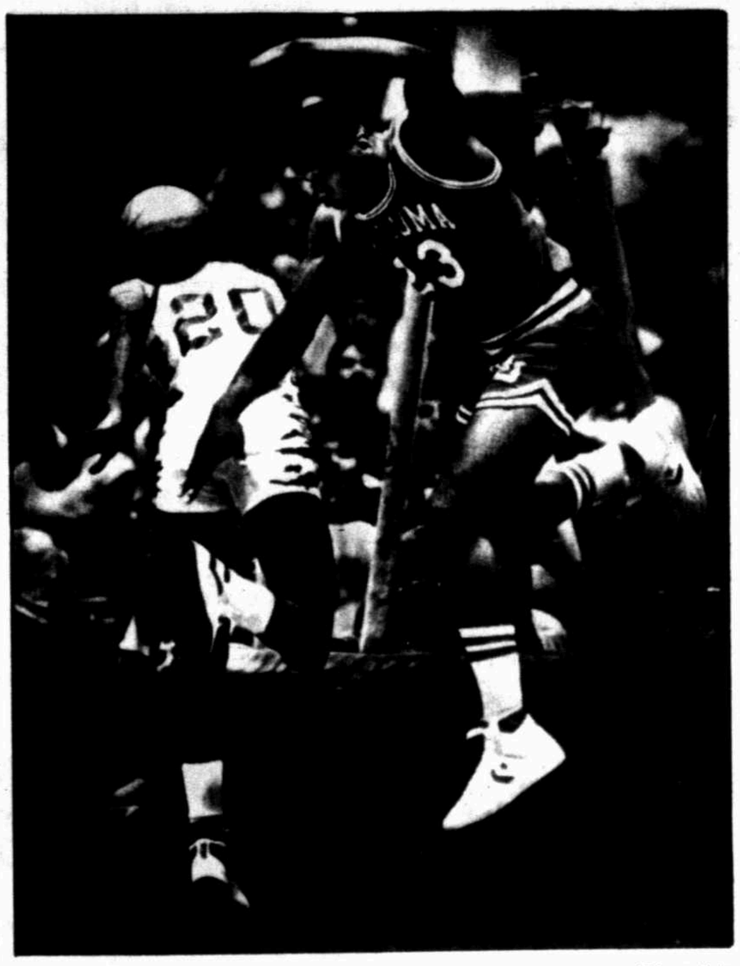

Tulsa Coach Nolan Richardson chose to avoid discussion of the officiating, and instead heaped praise on Harris, who "scored so many points you forget what he's doing. I thought he was going to score 50."

IN OTHER games involving ranked teams, Mark Alarie scored 22 points and Johnny Dawkins had 18 in second-ranked Duke's 87-63 thumping of East Carolina; No. 4 Southern Methodist won for the 12th time in 13 starts by ripping outmanned Baylor 95-63; Dave Popson hit a jumper with seven seconds to go and Curtis Hunter added two free throws to give No. 5 North Carolina a 75-74 squeaker over Maryland; No. 6 Memphis State bombed Tennessee State 90-57 behind Willie Becton's 19 points; and Steve Woodside struck for a career-high 21 points in No. 20 Oregon State's 59-54 defeat of Oregon.

Tulsa led most of the way against Oklahoma and, in fact, threatened at times to turn the game into a rout. The Hurricane blew to 50-30 lead five minutes before halftime and rebuilt the margin to 20 in the second half before Oklahoma rallied in the late going.

The loss was the fourth for Oklahoma in as many games at Tulsa, a place Tubbs figures isn't ideal for balanced officiating.

"Hey, I've been here before. Would you come back? I don't think I'll be back," said Tubbs. "They have a standing invitation (to play at Norman, home of the Sooners). See if they have guts enough to come. We don't have to ever worry about coming over here again."

Oklahoma's Wayman Tisdale has a mid-air collision with Tulsa's Steve Harris after Tisdale slam dunked the ball Wednesday in Tulsa.

DUKE, 11-0, held a 45-35 halftime lead over East Carolina, a margin that didn't sit well with Coach Mike Krzyzewski. But he was pleased with Duke's play in the second half, during which his club sank 20 of 31 shots.

"I was not pleased with our effort in the first half," Krzyzewski said. "There were two things — East Carolina's defense and our being so impatient."

East Carolina Coach Charlie Harrison wasn't sure where to rank Duke — "we haven't played (No. 1) Georgetown yet" — but he did realize what happened Wednesday night.

"I do know we played a very good team in front of a hostile crowd," he said.

MARYLAND HELD a 55-50 lead over North Carolina, but the Tar Heels scored seven straight points to take a 57-55 edge with 9:09 to play and the two teams slugged at each other the rest of the way.

Maryland, 11-4, led 72-69 with 36 seconds remaining, but Kenny Smith canned a 15-foot jumper to set the stage for Popson's go-ahead jumper.

"We just missed free throws and let them back in the game," said Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell. The Terps hit only four of 11 in the second half and missed nine of 21 for the game.

Popson and Brad Daugherty had 14 points each for balanced North Carolina, 11-1, while Len Bias had 23 points for Maryland.

A rout of Tennessee State was just what the doctor ordered for a Memphis State team wracked by illness, said Tiger Coach Dana Kirk, who used all 11 players in the first half.

"It was by design in the first half that everybody played," said Kirk. "We got a chance to relieve some of our starters, including those who were ill."

MEMPHIS STATE, 10-1, cruised to a 42-19 lead at the half and enjoyed a 75-31 cushion with 7½ minutes left in the game.

Oregon, 7-9, challenged Oregon State throughout, pulling into a 47-47 tie with less than seven minutes remaining. But the Beavers got a jumper from A.C. Green and two free throws apiece from Woodside and Darrin Houston in establishing a five-point lead inside the final minute.

Oregon State's 13th consecutive victory over Oregon improved the Beavers' record to 12-1.

Junior forward Kenny Walker scored all but four of his 28 points in the second half in leading streaking Kentucky to a 57-45 victory over Mississippi. Kentucky, 8-4, has won seven straight after its worst start in 58 years and sits atop the Southeastern Conference with a 3-0 record.

Terry Coner scored 22 points in Alabama's 79-67 defeat of Louisiana State in a battle of SEC powers. Alabama is 10-3 overall and 2-2 in the league while LSU slipped to 9-3 and 3-2.

Brad Sellers scored 22 points against his old school to help Ohio State to a 99-88 victory over Wisconsin.

Tech's Smith to miss spring due to grades

FOOTBALL — Texas Tech's leading rusher last season, Timmy Smith, will not be able to return to school this spring because of low grades, university officials said.

Smith, who just completed his sophomore season, was placed on academic suspension for the spring semester, said Tech academic counselor Clint Ramsey. To be eligible for the 1985 season, Smith must pass 13 hours of summer classes at Tech, Ramsey said Tuesday. Smith, from Hobbs, N.M., will miss spring football drills. He gained 711 yards on 164 carries and scored four touchdowns for the Red Raiders...

Chuck Knox of has been named NFL Coach of the Year by the Sporting News for leading the Seattle Seahawks to their best record ever, 12-4. Knox was selected in a poll of NFL coaches announced Wednesday by the weekly publication. He is the only coach to win the honor three times with different teams. Knox received the award in 1973 with the Los Angles Rams (12-2) and in 1980 with the Buffalo Bills (11-5).

The Seahawks finished second in the American Football Conference West and also earned a spot in the playoffs for the second time since Knox has been the team's coach. Seattle topped or equaled 50 club records and 35 individual records this season.

TSN also selected Jim Wacker of Texas Christian University as College Football Coach of the Year for leading the Horned Frogs to their first winning season since 1971. The publication chose Wacker for this year's honor after the team posted an 8-3 regular-season record and gained a berth in the Bluebonnet Bowl, TCU's first bowl appearance since 1965. West Virginia beat TCU in the bowl game.

In 1983, Wacker's first year at TCU, the Horned Frogs had a record of 1-8-2. In 1984, however, the team set a school record for the most points scored (362) and ended their season fifth in the nation in rushing. Wacker's 14-year collegiate record is 113-45-3, including his 9-12-2 mark at TCU...

Former Dallas Cowboys receiver Drew Pearson said he would rather stay with his broadcasting career than come out of retirement. "Coming back is a long way from being solid in my mind. A long way," Pearson told the Dallas Morning News Tuesday.

A local television show Monday indicated that Pearson might be considering a NFL comeback. "Some of my comments may have been misleading," Pearson said. "The whole thing got twisted. I'm not trying to come back. The Cowboys may not want me," Pearson said. "I haven't talked to anybody at the Cowboys."

Pearson, 33, ended an 11-year career with the Cowboys when he retired July 14 after he was injured in a March 22 automobile accident. Although Pearson said he misses playing when he watches a Cowboys game, he is more interested in his career as a sports commentator with CBS...

BASKETBALL — Larry Micheaux, who has bounced around the NBA after a standout career at the University of Houston, is back home in the pros with the Houston Rockets.

The Rockets said Micheaux agreed to a two-year deal Tuesday after completing a 10-day tryout. The 6-foot-9 Micheaux joined the Rockets on Dec. 28 and Houston could have signed him to one more 10-day agreement or a regular contract. He was drafted in 1983 by Chicago, which immediately traded him to Kansas City. He was cut by the Kings in preseason this year and Milwaukee then picked him up as a free agent before releasing him after 18 games...

East German swimmer opts off flight home

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A world-class member of the East German swimming team told authorities he did not want to return to his homeland and stayed behind when his teammates left the airport here, an official said Wednesday.

Jens-Peter Berndt, 21, appeared Monday at the office of Leroy Hansen, director of Will Rogers World Airport, and said "he did not want to return to East Germany and wanted to stay in America," said airport spokesman Tom Morton.

Morton described Berndt as "very cooperative and courteous. And I think he's also pretty courageous. He did express apprehension and anxiety about his decision. But he seemed determined to follow through."

Morton refused to say what reasons Berndt might have given for his actions.

"We feel that perhaps if you could talk to Peter, he could better explain his reasons," the spokesman said. "He gave us two reasons, but we feel that he would be better qualified to tell them to you than we would."

Berndt, a former world-record holder in the 400-meter individual medley last year, competed with the East German team at a meet over the weekend at the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville. Also attending the meet were teams from Czechoslovakia, the People's Republic of China and the Soviet Union.

During the meet, Berndt was second in the 200-meter backstroke, second in the 200-meter individual medley and won the 400 individual medley.

Following the event, the East German athletes traveled by bus to Tulsa, where they took a flight to Oklahoma City and were scheduled to board an Eastern Airlines flight to Atlanta, Morton said.

"The team and coaches went ahead and boarded the flight and it left on schedule, but Berndt remained in the airport offices," the spokesman said.

Airport officials contacted the local office of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, which dispatched a van to the airport and transported the athlete to its downtown offices.

Immigration officials on Wednesday would neither confirm nor deny the incident. A spokesman told Oklahoma City television station KOCO that standard procedure would be for the request to be passed on and reviewed by the State Department.

Morton said he had no idea of Berndt's whereabouts. "We haven't seen him since the door of the van closed," he said.

Instead having a couple of girls doing most of the scoring as in years past, Lee has several who have contributed but none averaging in double figures.

Becky White is the top shooter with an 8.3 average while sister Diane is scoring 6.7 and Tina Swinney, Denise Hatch and Roz Eaden coming in at 5.9 each.

With the gap between first and third starting to spread, neither Midland High or San Angelo can afford to lose Friday but a loss to one is guaranteed as the Bulldogs travel to San Angelo for an 8 p.m. game at SAHS Gym.

Midland High has the only Tall City girl with a double figure average this year in Denise Lanz at 13.9. Diedra Knapp is holding steady at 8.5 while Tina Knight is scoring 7.4.

In other 4-5A games Friday, No. 2 Odessa Permian travels to Abilene Cooper while Odessa High hosts Abilene High.

"But making commercials takes a lot of time — about two or three weeks sometimes. Endorsements also take a lot of work. You can only do so much. When I start tapering off in competition, maybe I will start accepting some of those offers. But that won't be for at least one or two years.

"Right now, I'm financially comfortable."

Lewis said he also should feel quite comfortable competing this year, because he won't have to worry about the Olympics.

Indoors, he plans to compete in four meets — and possibly five. He will long jump at the Wanamaker Millrose Games Jan. 25 at New York, and sprint in the Dallas Times Herald Invitational Feb. 2 at Dallas, the Los Angeles Times Indoor Games Feb. 8 at Inglewood, Calif., and the Vitalis-U.S. Olympic Invitational Feb. 9 at East Rutherford, N.J. The other possibility is the USA-Mobil Indoor Track and Field Championships Feb. 22 at New York.

Outdoors, his schedule is not set, but he said he plans to take a shot at world records in the 100, 200 and long jump.

"The main thing will be to shoot for (Bob) Beamon's record (of 29 feet, 2½ inches) in the long jump," said Lewis. "I think I can break it, because I won't have any distractions this year."

Lewis' best long jump is 28-10¼.

"I also think I can improve on my 200 time and bring my 100-meter time down," he said.

PUBLIC NOTICE

In accordance with the Public Utility Regulatory Act and the Rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas, AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc. (AT&T Communications) gives notice to all of its Texas customers that a new procedure for long distance billing was made effective on an interim basis on August 6, 1984 in Docket No. 5800.

The procedure referred to is "Rate Period Specific Billing" and it applies to all message telephone service (AT&T Long Distance calls) including non-REACH OUT Texas calls within the State of Texas. This new procedure effects all AT&T Long Distance customers. All intraLATA long distance calls and all interstate long distance calls are currently billed using this procedure.

Under this procedure, customers are billed a specific charge for long distance calls according to the rate or rates in effect throughout the time of each call. If a call begins in one rate period and extends into a different rate period, the customer will be charged whatever rate is in effect for each portion of the call.

For example, if a customer places a call at 4:58 p.m. on a weekday and talks for ten minutes, the first two minutes of the call would be charged at the full weekday rate which extends from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. The remaining eight minutes of the call would be billed at the evening rate which extends from 5:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. and includes a 25% discount. If Rate Period Specific Billing were not in effect, the entire call would have been billed at the higher day rate. Calls which extend from the evening rate period (25% discount) to the night and weekend rate period (40% discount) or from the night and weekend rate period (40% discount) to the day rate period (no discount) would also be billed according to the actual minutes of use during each rate period.

AT&T Communications anticipates a minimal increase of approximately .02% in its revenues or approximately $250,000 annually.

A complete copy of the "Rate Period Specific Billing" tariff is on file with the Texas Public Utility Commission.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Duck hunting best in cold, wet, foggy weather

Good days for duck hunting are generally bad days for people.

In West Texas, or any other place for that matter, the best days to locate and bag several of the Canadian visitors are marked by cold, wet and foggy weather. Exactly the days when sleeping late has its greatest appeal.

But as Jan. 20 and the end of the season draw closer, duck hunters will become more like beggars than choosers. We have less than two weeks of hunting left, and from what Ducks Unlimited forecasts, they will be the best two weeks.

West Texas sits toward the west of the central migratory flyway for ducks and geese, and the area draws its share of birds as cold weather freezes water in Canada, North Dakota, Nebraska, Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle, forcing ducks further south for cover and food.

When they finally reach us, they don't stay long, since the area isn't blessed with much water. But on the water they do find, the ducks congregate en masse.

I've had two moderately successful encounters with them so far this year — one a beautiful, blue-sky day and the other wet and nasty.

I'll explain why I prefer the wet and nasty.

The first day was in December. Two friends and I drove to the Pecos River near McCamey to jump shoot the ducks. With binoculars, we spotted a huge slick of them in a bend of the river about 200 yards away. Our plan was to creep as close to them as we could, sprint the last 30 yards or so and shoot as fast as we could. By surprising them, we hoped they would jump up in front of us close enough for a shot.

The best laid plans of mice and ducks hunters often go astray, as we found out. Pintails, flying about 100 yards directly overhead toward the bend, saw our movement and wheeled away from the main body of quackers screaming. This aroused the more nervous ducks on the edge of the group, which then began circling and whistling.

The mallards got up next, and we knew we were finished. Their deep quaaaackquaquaquacking alerted the rest of the ducks, and moments later all of the ducks exploded off the water. We were still crouched under bushes too far away to shoot.

Hunting in our shirtsleeves that day, we bagged nine ducks, mostly small widgeon and gadwalls.

BUT A few days later, we switched locales and improved.

The improvement wasn't as much a matter of where we hunted, but in what.

The second day we went out, we drove to a spot on the Mohanans Draw where effluent pooled in a smelly basin. We didn't go back to McCamey because a combination of darkness and fog lay on top of the mesquites like smoke in a room where politicos meet.

We heard the ducks on the water when we stopped the pickup and loaded our shotguns, so we knew there were quite a few of them. We crept through the brush as quietly as possible and came to the edge of the water. This small pond was covered with ducks of all sorts — mallard drakes and hens, gadwalls, pintails, widgeons, some cross-bred ducks and unbelievably, a canvasback.

I scooted back through the brush and told my friends what I saw in binoculars, cautioning them about the last location of the canvasback. Since the duck is worth 100 points, none of us wanted him. We fanned out and moved back to the water.

This time, the shooting was better. Each of us got two ducks on the first rise, which we collected by casting a Zara Spook topwater lure past the ducks and pulled them back to the bank.

We then hid ourselves in brush around the bank and waited, making sure we didn't look up and alert any ducks by showing our white faces. The ducks kept coasting in on the fog, unaware we were there. Before 9:30 a.m., we had 270 points of ducks (without the canvasback), cold toes and growling stomachs.

I think back on that day and hope the rest of January is as nasty and wet as we can stand.

Scoring trophies

Buck DeVane, of Marathon, Fla., is one of the many Texas hunters who needed to know about Boone & Crockett trophy scoring this past white-tailed deer season.

DeVane, who was hunting at Texotic Wildlife, Inc., near Mountain Home, shot a 30-point, 39-inch spread deer Nov. 23. The buck scored 228 points for the book, well above the 195-point minimum for nontypical bucks.

"There are five main factors which have to be considered in scoring a set of antlers," Horace Gore, white-tailed deer program leader for Texas Parks and Wildlife Dept. said. "These are inside spread, numbers of points or tines, tine length and beam circumference at the base of the antlers."

"Of the 240,000 bucks taken annually in Texas, only two or three would qualify for the B&C record book," Gore said.

Until DeVane shot his deer, the largest nontypical head was a 49-pointer shot in McCulloch County in 1892, and that rack remained the largest nationally until a recent entry from Missouri bumped it to second.

Roadrunner meet set

The High Sky Bass Club will hold a roadrunner tournament Saturday.

Claude Bass, HSBC tournament director, said the competition will begin at 7 a.m. and run through 7 p.m. He expects 30 members to fish.

"They can fish any lake in Texas as long as they get back to Big Three Tire for weigh-in at 7 p.m.," he said. This tournament will be the first HSBC competition run under a new guest rule, Bass said. In the past, club members had to fish with other club members. The new rule allows a member to take a guest to one tournament.

"We're trying to get new members and break them in the right way," Bass said. "Any member can take a guest once. He can take another guest the next time, but can't take the same one twice."

In the January 1984 roadrunner, Colorado City and Oak Creek lakes were the most heavily fished, Bass said, with deep running crankbaits being the top lure choice.

December's HSBC tournament winner, Bud Baker, will try to repeat his last 1984 win. He took the December roadrunner tourney with a 5.60-pound black bass from Colorado City Lake. He fished a deep diving perch-colored Rebel crankbait.

Bob Kirby took second with a 3.51-pound fish, and Fred Nobles was third with a 1.51-pounder.

Virginia Wade won the women's division (1.45 pounds) and Jeff Denton took the youth division with a 1.56-pound black bass.

Humane hunting: Tree racoons but don't kill

By PETER BRADT
Wichita Falls Times

SPANISH FORT (AP) — Competitive racoon hunting may be one the more humane forms of hunting — no animal is killed.

Instead, racoons are chased up a tree, then left alone. The winners receive trophies.

Coon hunters say in this sport, they are more interested in training a good hunting dog.

Recently, coon hunters from as far away as Wyoming converged on this hamlet for a competition hunt and, to say the least, competition was fierce and friendly.

Glenda Clark of Fort Worth went to Spanish Fort with only one dog, Wolfenbarger's Blue April, and didn't plan to hunt.

"We came because it was the closest place from the house and she needs a best of show," Ms. Clark said.

There are actually three different contests at a coon hunt. There is a "bench show," where the six breeds of coon hound are judged on confirmation and breed purity, a treeing competition, where a caged racoon is lifted above the dogs.

The dogs score on the number of "chops," sudden closures of their jaws, which they do in 30 seconds. Then there is the hunt itself.

Points are scored for the first strike — the first dog to find the scent of the coon and bark. Tracy Morgan of Fort Worth said the dog's owners can recognize the baying of their own dogs.

"When you spend a lot of time training a dog, you get used to the sound it makes and the variations of the bark that mean differnt things," Morgan said.

Morgan said 100 points are scored for the first strike, 75 for the second, 50 for the third and 25 for the fourth.

As with the strike, the first dog to tree a raccoon receives 100 points. Morgan said the pitch and intensity of the dog's baying changes when the coon is treed.

"There's no mistaking the sound," Morgan said.

At Spanish Fort, the hunters went out in "castes" of four.

Jim Cox of Mountain View, Wyo., hunted at Spanish Fort. "I come down and spend the winters here. I was born and raised in this area."

Cox who placed third in the hunt, said he hunts coons just for the fun of it.

"I like to listen to those dogs work. You just turn 'em loose, they pick up the scents of the coon and trail it 'till it quits," Cox said.

Sid Underwood represented the United Kennel Club, the sanctioning body of the hunt, and served as the bench show judge. He said the UKC's policy is to promote both working dogs and good looking dogs.

"When we judge a bench show we look for conformation, strength and endurance. The dogs have to have those qualities to trail, tire and tree the coon," he said.

"Coon hunting is a subculture in this country with more than 1 million people involved. The U.S. Fish and Game Service says more than $300 millions is spent annually on coon hunting," he said.

USF&WS to make move toward reducing lead shot

ATLANTA (AP) — After four years of studying nontoxic shot, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is set this month to make some new moves to reduce the amount of lead shot used by waterfowl hunters.

Observers expect the service to come out this month with a first specific proposal, involving zones where lead shot would be banned for the protection of eagles and other birds of prey.

They also expect some sort of proposal aimed at developing criteria for those zones.

Those proposals grew out of meetings last year at Wye Mills, Md., between various conservation and hunting groups, Undersecretary of the Interior Ann McLaughlin and the Fish and Wildlife Service.

The Fish and Wildlife Service was an early supporter of proposals to ban lead shot, the age-old favorite of hunters, because spent shot lying on the bottom of marshes formed a bed of poison for bottom-feeding birds.

Birds of prey, including the bald eagle, the national symbol, die from eating waterfowl dead or dying from lead poisoning. The predators take prey that is easiest to catch and birds weakend by lead poisoning make choice targets.

Each year, an estimated 2 million to 3 million ducks and geese die from eating lead shot pellets, according to the Audubon Society. Studies have ranked lead poisoning fourth among the causes of death for bald eagles.

But in 1981, under Interior Secretary G. Ray Arnett, who had opposed bans on lead shot in California when he was chairman of the Department of Fish and Game under then Gov.-Ronald Reagan, Interior changed its emphasis. Research and informational efforts were curtailed.

A 28-minute film showing the effectiveness of steel shot for hunting was not released. Fish and Wildlife Service publications describing the advantages of steel shot were ordered withdrawn or destroyed — although some got distributed despite the order.

Arnett said, in a 1983 interview, "I'm not opposed to steel shot."

"I'm just not convinced that lead poisoning is as serious a malady as some people believe."

In 1978, Congress barred the Interior Department from banning lead shot in any states which opposed the ban. The number of states varies annually, but is diminishing.

In fact, some states are taking the lead in banning lead shot.

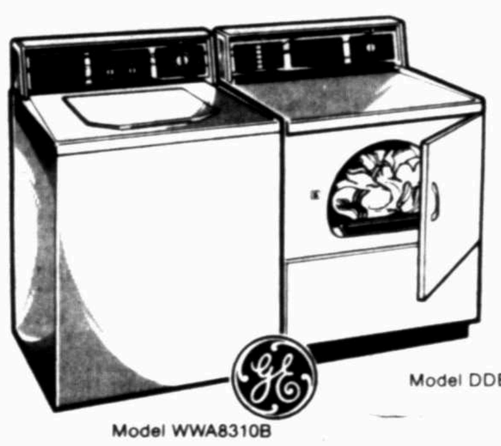

Nebraska has approved a statewide ban on the use of lead shot for waterfowl hunting. Moves to institute such bans are underway in Iowa, New Jersey, Kansas and New Mexico.

In Wyoming a proposal is under consideration which would ban lead shot for all shotgun hunting.

Dollar down, gold increases

LONDON (AP) — The dollar edged lower in early European trading today on word of lower interest rates. The price of gold was back above $300 an ounce.

Dealers explained the dollar's weakness by noting a ⅛ of a percentage point drop in Eurodollar deposit rates — the interest investors earn on dollars deposited in Europe — as well as a cut by one American bank in its prime lending rate.

They also cited profit-taking toward the end of a week in which the dollar hit record highs against the British pound and French franc and was near its peak against the Italian lire.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell to a closing 253.60 yen from Wednesday's 255.00. Later, in London, the U.S. currency was quoted at 253.90 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Wednesday:

–3.1460 West German marks, down from 3.1550.

–2.6440 Swiss francs, down from 2.6462.

–9.6505 French francs, down from 9.6775.

–3.5540 Dutch guilders, down from 3.5675.

–1,937.00 Italian lire, down from 1,941.12.

–1.32015 Canadian dollars, up from 1.32000.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.1419. On Wednesday, sterling hit an all-time record trading low of $1.1380 during London trading before rallying to finish at $1.1438.

The dollar's weakness turned to gold's advantage, dealers said.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $304.10 a troy ounce, compared with late Wednesday's $301.25. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $304.

OPEC strains could prompt higher oil prices

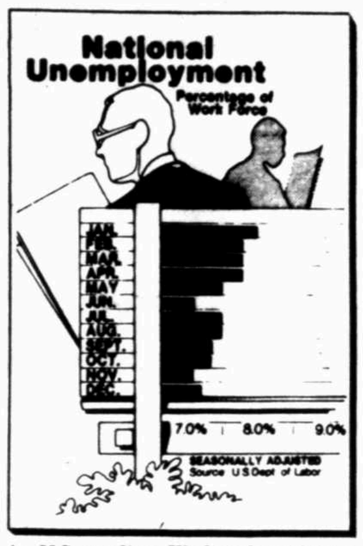

By The Associated Press

OPEC will be hard pressed to block the slide in oil prices because growing financial problems already threaten the stability of two-thirds of the cartel while the United States is fighting a small increase in the number of its unemployed citizens.

Oil prices extended their decline as the investment firm of Salomon Brothers Inc. released its report Wednesday. Prices of crude oil for future delivery fell between 5 cents and 13 cents on the New York Mercantile Exchange, with the contract for delivery in February dropping to $25.31 a barrel.

The U.S. civilian jobless rate, meanwhile, edged up 0.1 percentage point in December to 7.2 percent, the Labor Department reported.

And the dollar slowed from its record-setting pace, declining against most other major currencies in U.S. trading Wednesday after a mixed showing in Europe.

The OPEC study by Graham Bishop and Paul Miotok, oil analysts at Salomon Brothers, asserted there will be "a progressively greater risk of a decline in the price of oil as the financial pressures of the weaker members of OPEC intensify."

Oil prices, which fell about $2 a barrel in 1984, are expected to fall $2 to $4 more by the end of 1985, Miotok said at a briefing.

He predicted that West Texas intermediate crude, the major U.S. grade of oil, would range between $24 and $26 a barrel by the end of this year, levels last seen in 1979. As recently as October, U.S. oil companies were paying $30 a barrel to buy West Texas Intermediate crude.

But the study said that while the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries was in difficulty, falling oil prices should help to hold down inflation, reduce interest rates and stimulate economic growth among industrialized non-communist nations.

The study predicted substantial OPEC trade deficits continuing through 1986 and said it is unlikely demand for oil or economic growth will rise sharply enough in this decade to rescue OPEC from its financial problems.

The study said the deficit in OPEC's current account — the excess of its imports of goods and services over its exports — widened from $23 billion in 1982 to an estimated $67 billion in 1984, and would grow to $116 billion by 1986.

"The poorer countries now account for more than half of OPEC's production, and their financial positions have eroded dramatically," the study said. "Although they have ample capacity to raise output to solve these problems, this would aggravate pressures on oil prices."

The uptick in America's unemployment rate came as the number of jobless people outpaced the creation of 340,000 new jobs in December, the Labor Department said.

The department also revised its jobless figures for November to 7.1 percent from the initially estimated 7.2 percent and changed October's reading to 7.3 percent from 7.4 percent.

"The pace of new jobs (in December) was clearly surprising," said Joseph Carson, a senior economist at Merrill Lynch & Co. "The economy ... is becoming more broad-based. I think those numbers suggest both wage and salary income and production will come in pretty strongly in December and will carry over into the first quarter."

But concern was expressed in Congress over an unemployment rate that has hovered between 7.1 percent and 7.5 percent since the middle of 1984.

"There has been no improvement since June," said Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., senior Democrat on the Joint House-Senate Economic Committee. "We seem to have bottomed out at an unemployment level of about 7.2 percent. In my view, the outlook is not that good."

Texas jobless rate rises to 6.2 percent

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas unemployment rate rose to 6.2 percent during December, and analysts say the increase appears to be the result of Christmas season jobs that weren't as plentiful as had been expected.

The jobless rate had been 5.7 percent in November, and the federal Bureau of Labor Statistics reported Wednesday that December was the first time since August 1984 that the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate topped the 6-percent mark.

John Kruse, an analyst with the Texas Employment Commission, said the increase ran counter to the trend for previous Decembers.

"Over the last several years, the average tendancy was for unemployment rates to go down a little bit in December," Kruse said.

"While, this year, the holiday shopping season did push total employment up as expected, unemployment also increased. Apparently, a lot of people were looking for temporary seasonal work and didn't find it," he said.

Bryan Richey, an economist with the Bureau of Labor Statistics, said the jobless increase was not considered statistically significant. He agreed that less Christmas hiring appeared to be the reason for the jump.

"What I think we're seeing reflected here is the disappointing sales in retail trade," Richey said.

"I don't know whether this is a function of our targets being too high or of moderation of consumer spending. But when the exact numbers are available later this month, I think we'll see that retail employment was not as substantial as last year," he said.

Kruse said the figures also appeared to reflect some seasonal layoffs, particularly in the clothing industry. "Apparently a lot of manufacturers had cutbacks because there were not as many seasonal orders as expected," he said.

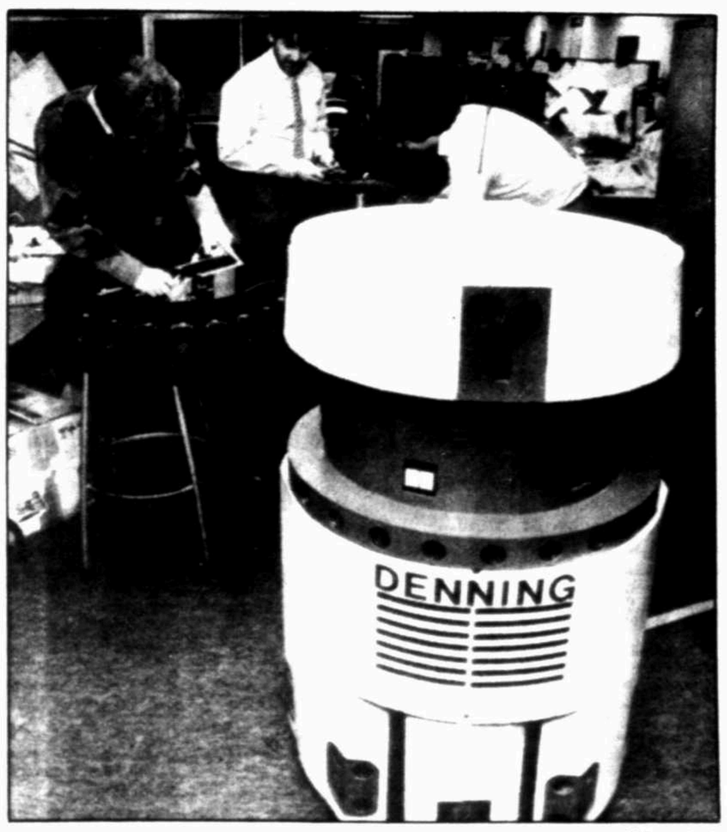

Although the number of people out of work increased by 44,000 in December, the total number of people employed in the state also rose, up 43,000 to 7,580,000.

"On a whole, if you look at the year, it's really been a pretty good year," Richey said.

During 1984, the number of jobs in the state increased by 400,000 and the number of people unemployed dropped by 100,000, Richey said.

For the year, the unemployment rate dropped by 1.5 percentage points.

"We've had a deceleration of growth largely due to the fortunes of the oil industry, and this (the energy slump) is probbably going to continue for some time," Richey said. "But despite energy, we've been able to post some fairly impressive gains."

Nuke station receiving fuel despite protest

WINTERSBURG (AP) — Crews working around the clock continue loading fuel into the Palo Verde Nuclear Generating Station's unit, despite the efforts of a protest group.

Arizona Nuclear Power Project spokesman Dan Canady said that 121 of 241 fuel assemblies were loaded by 5:25 p.m. Wednesday, meaning the process is more than half completed.

Technicians loading the fuel had not run into any problems, Canady said.

Fuel loading of Unit 1 began Monday at the plant 50 miles west of Phoenix and is expected to continue into late next week.

ANPP spokesman Brad Parker said the fuel loading was "slightly ahead of schedule" but that the latest word from ANPP managers was that the process still was expected to last a total of 10 days.

Several hours were lost Monday when a worker's headset microphone fell apart, but the loading was continuing without problem on Wednesday, Parker said.

In downtown Phoenix Wednesday, about 60 people attempted but failed to form a human chain by linking hands around APS' headquarters building in a protest against Palo Verde.

As in a previous protest, the number of demonstrators in attendance was insufficient to circle the building and they settled for marching around it several times while singing.

The $9.3 billion, triple-reactor plant is owned by a consortium of utilities of Arizona, California, New Mexico and Texas utilities, including Arizona's Salt River Project and Arizona Public Service Co.

The loading process involves transferring the fuel assemblies, each made up of 236 fuel rods filled with thousands of small pellets of uranium, to the reactor from an adjacent storage building.

Once the loading is completed, the plant will begin producing low levels of nuclear power for testing. The facility is not expected to begin operating commercially until sometime late this year.

Aviation administration orders Bandeirante inspections

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration is ordering new inspections of the Embraer 110 Bandeirante, but stopped short of grounding the 19-passenger commuter plane as recommended by a federal safety board.

The FAA said Wednesday night it was ordering all operators of the Brazilian-made aircraft to check for possible structural weaknesses in the tail sections of most of the planes "within the next 18 flight hours."

FAA spokesman Dennis Feldman said the planes that were modified to strengthen the tail sections under an agency order last summer are exempt from the additional inspections.

FAA officials could not say how many of the twin-engine Bandeirantes had been modified, but various estimates have put the number at about 20 percent of the 130 planes owned by U.S. commuter airlines.

The National Transportation Safety Board, which is investigating a crash of a Bandeirante in which the tail section broke apart, urged the FAA to ground most of the planes so that inspections could begin immediately.

But Feldman said the FAA decided against grounding the plane "to give the airlines flexibility to schedule the inspections with minimal disruption to flight schedules."

Feldman said the "airworthiness directive" requiring the inspections was being sent to the planes' operators today.

Safety concerns over the aircraft surfaced last month when a Bandeirante belonging to Provincetown-Boston Airline crashed near Jacksonville, Fla., after the tail section broke apart, killing all 13 persons aboard.

Austin seeking nuclear power plant sale buyer

AUSTIN (AP) — After six weeks of negotiations, Austin may have a buyer for the city's 16 percent share of the South Texas Nuclear Project, Mayor Ron Mullen says.

Mullen said he will talk to the unidentified company again on Friday after discussing the issue in a closed session with the city council on Thursday.

"This company represents the only choice I know to sell the project," Mullen said. He declined to identify the company and emphasized that discussions were preliminary.

Austin has been trying unsuccessfully to sell their share of the project since November 1981 when the voters authorized the council to get out of the project.

The nuclear plant in Bay City is 60 percent completed but is costing more than five times the anticipated cost. The current estimated cost of the power project is $5.5 billion, with operation of the first nuclear reactor scheduled for 1987.

The city has already invested about $560 million into the project, not including interest.

Mullen said he didn't know if a ruling by the state Public Utility Commission on Tuesday would have any effect on the selling attempt.

The commission refused to allow Houston Lighting & Power Co., the project's managing partner, to include construction-related costs of the project in its rate base.

The project's two other partners are the City of San Antonio and the Central Power & Light Co. of Corpus Christi.

Hanna appointed lobbyist for independent oil, gas producers

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Former state reprsentative Joe Hanna of Breckenridge has been hired as a full-time lobbyist by the North Texas Oil and Gas Association.

Hanna, 63, served on the House Energy Committee from 1970 to 1984, and was its chairman for 10 years.

"We have found the right man for the job," said Ed Spragins, NTOGA president. "There is a real need for increased lobbying by independent oil and gas producers."

The new lobbyist said he will "reach for the obtainable" and try to prevent any further erosion of the industry's ability to search for oil.

Spragins said NTOGA will encourage other independent oil and gas associations in the state to help pay for Hanna's effort. He declined comment on Hanna's salary.

Hanna, a Democrat, was a member of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission for 12 years. He owned and operated Stephens County Abstract Co. for 20 years.

Superfund cleanup discussed in Odessa

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Texas Department of Water Resources officials will be in Odessa tonight to discuss anticipated action on the second of two area sites proposed for Superfund cleanup of chromium contamination in water wells.

The Odessa Chrome II site, located in northwest Ector County outside the city limits, is one of about 800 sites in the country on or proposed for the Environmental Protection Agency's national priorities list.

This qualifies the sites for funds from the $1.6 billion earmarked in 1980 by the federal government to clean up hazardous waste sites or spills of hazardous materials.

No Midland sites have been proposed for the program, but chromium contamination was found in November by the TDWR near the city's Industrial Loop.

The meeting is set for 7 p.m. today at the Ector County Courthouse.

The Chrome II site follows the Odessa Chrome I site in the process leading to study and clean-up. Both sites are on the northside of the county.

Each has $500,000 set aside already for study of the chromium contamination found in water wells in the late 1970s. A survey of 38 wells in the Chrome II area found eight with levels above the standards set by the EPA for drinking water, according to Greg Tipple of the TDWR.

The highest level found was about 2 milligrams per liter of water. The EPA interim primary drinking water standard is .05 milligrams per liter, according to Tipple.

The contamination in the Chrome II area was found at several small businesses, according to Bill Colbert of the TDWR. The site covers a seven-block tract between U.S. Highway 385 (Andrews Highway) and Washington Ave.

Colbert said the TDWR had attempted to get businesses and residents in this area provided with city water when the contamination was found, but were unsuccessful when the residents declined to apply for annexation into the city. Instead, they get their drinking water from private sources.

They have been instructed not to use their water wells, said Tipple.

After the studies have been completed and EPA has approved recommendations from the report, TDWR will design, then begin the clean-up process. Tipple said the method used depended on results of the studies.

One alternative would be to drill wells in the area, pump out and treat the water to remove the chromium contaminants, said Tipple.

In some cases, the source of the contamination must be cleaned up, but an investigation has been unable to find the source in this case, said Tipple.

The two Odessa sites are among 244 proposed for inclusion on the Superfund list. Another 538 are already on the list, with the EPA currently considering another four, according to Colbert.

The $500,000 earmarked for the two sites covers the study, but not clean up, said Colbert. Federal legislators will be considering reauthorizing the Superfund bill, which provides for funding through excise taxes on manufacturers of petrochemicals, in the upcoming session.

TDWR District Supervisor Bill Lockey said in November that the Midland site, a vacated business south of the railroad tracks and U.S. 80, might be suggested for the Superfund if the source of the contamination could not be traced.

Since that time, tests done by the state lab showed the sample (found to be contaminated by an Odessa lab) to have no significant levels of contamination. More tests are scheduled.

How many googols in googolplex?

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

"How did the Star Trek crew manage to travel from galaxy to galaxy in a matter of one television hour?" asked a fourth-grade student in Midland public schools' gifted and talented program.

"They cheated," answered Neil Tyson.

And "how many 'googols' are in a 'googolplex'?" another pupil asked.

"A googol zeros are in googolplex," he answered, to a roar of laughter from approximately 50 students present Wednesday during an astronomy demonstration by Tyson.

The hour-long demonstration featured Tyson, a doctoral candidate in astrophysics at the University of Texas at Austin. He used a variety of unconventional teaching methods to describe noted astronomical theories associated with the likes of quasars, pulsars, the Milky Way galaxy and Einstein's "escape velocity" theory, attributed to what astronomists now call the "black hole".

Held at the Carver Cultural Center, the program was sponsored by the Junior League of Midland and the Midland Independent School District in connection with the Young People's University.

It was one of several in a series of lectures designed to promote thought among fourth, fifth and sixth-grade students assigned to MISD's Gifted Education in Midland program.

"Do any of you know who Albert Einstein was?" Tyson asked the youngsters. He then proceeded to answer his own question saying, "Well, he was a really smart man.

"The theory that everything that goes up must come down is a lie," said Tyson.

"Einstein proved that anything traveling less than seven miles per second will never return. That's what happens in a black hole. The excape velocity in a black hole is even greater than the speed of light. Light won't even escape the black hole. So don't go near it," Tyson warned the students.

Prompting such questions as "What's outside of space?" Tyson also mentioned unproven astronomical theories concerning the "white hole" and the "nothing nothing" theory.

"Somewhere out in space, we believe there is a white hole," said Tyson, who proceeded to strut about the room chanting, "The white hole is connected to the black hole..."

He answered, "If space is nothing. Then what's outside of space must be nothing nothing."

MPD officers try not to shoot unless it is 'absolutely necessary'

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

It happens on "Hill Street Blues" all the time.

Many a Thursday night, someone in an emotional turmoil enters the precinct police station and pulls a gun on a crowded room of officers before he or she is shot. Or a child is shot by an officer who mistakes the youngster for an armed burglar.

"They have more killings in their police station than we do in Midland," said Midland Asst. Police Chief Maj. Sid Corley.

Even excluding "Hill Street" and Clint Eastwood movies, a lot of death by use of excessive force is depicted in filmed police dramas.

"The last time I used a gun was to drive a nail in the wall," said Lt. Earl Luckey.

Despite attempts by the National Association of Chiefs of Police to adopt a guideline developed in 1978 on unnecessary use of excessive force by police officers, the Midland Police Department has functioned under an informal in-house rule.

Don't shoot unless absolutely necessary.

With few situations arising that require the use of deadly force, however, the department has kept the number of police-involved shootings and deaths to a minimum.

Preventive programs similar to those suggested by the association, which also is attempting to eliminate the movie depiction of the police officer as a "killer with a badge," have been established by the MPD to curb violence.

The last police-inflicted fatalities in Midland were recorded almost 10 years ago. Four occurred within a 12-month period.

But one officer "is still carrying lead in his chest" from the last, according to Corley.

— A man was killed after police responded to a call at a convenience store where a man was dragging his wife across the street with a knife, police said. When the officers arrived to assist the woman, her husband pulled the knife on one of the officers. The man was shot and later died on the operating table.

— A second incident in 1975 occurred at an eastside bar. Police making a routine walk through entered the bar and a man fired a round of shots on the wall next to the officers. He was shot and killed.

— A third incident took place in the early morning hours at a bus station downtown. Police had received reports of a naked man who was smashing windows at the station. When the patrol car arrived, the man started breaking out the windows of the vehicle. He was killed.

— A man wanted in connection with the kidnapping of a Midland woman was found hiding in the attic of her house in the northeast section of town. When officers arrived, the man shot five times at the officers, hitting one officer twice. The police returned fire and the suspect's lifeless body was pulled from the ceiling, which had caved in.

— And in 1977, police detectives were involved in a shootout in front of a motel on West U.S. Highway 80 with two brothers, one of whom eventually surrendered to police.

When a detective approached the man to arrest him, the suspect's brother stood up and was about to shoot the officer in the back, police said. The man was shot by another officer.

Police don't take killing lightly, according to the National Association of Chiefs of Police. "Our study began when we encountered the problem of a police officer who is involved in a shooting and the trauma he or she suffers as a result of having to take a human life," according to Gerald Arenberg, executive director of the police chiefs' association. "The community does not understand that many of these officers suffer the torments of hell even when the shooting is by the book and no choice is left to them."

The association earlier this fall sent out copies of the guidelines developed in 1978 after a survey of police officers of all ranks and departments was taken. The guidelines, which the association urges all officers to sign and make part of each personnel file, state that "the community is pulling the trigger when an officer fires his weapon and they must share the responsibility since the authority and the power comes from the citizens." The guidelines continue: "No other person on this earth is given such life and death authority and decisions are made under the most adverse conditions in seconds."

Although no formal departmental program for coping with the loss of life is available, the MPD attempts to avoid those situations through preventive instruction.

With controversy continuing over police using stun guns and dehabilitating gasses, the MPD for the time being is sticking to more conservative training methods.

GOP women plan to 'Stay Alive in '85'

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Government is a logical place for women, according to the president of the Texas Federation of Republican Women, who noted that women are beginning to take the reins away from men. As an example, said Barbara Campbell of Dallas, no winning Republican candidate last fall would have beaten their opponents if it hadn't been for the women running those campaigns.

Mrs. Campbell was in Midland Tuesday and Wednesday to speak to the two local Republican women's groups and to begin planning for the state convention that will be here in late October. That convention will draw 800 delegates and alternates. Bringing the number up to 1,000 for the two-day event will be the women's spouses, guests and speakers.

Although plans are in the conceptual stage, Mrs. Campbell said she is musing over the theme of "Staying Alive in '85."

"WE WANT TO offer membership things they want to do. They gave to us in the last general election with their money and volunteer hours. This year we are going to offer the women so many things that they will want to stay active (in TFRW) to benefit from them."

TFRW reached a record membership last year of almost 10,000 in 164 clubs, each meeting an average of 10 times a year, she said.

It wasn't difficult last year to attract new members — there was the presidential election, two state conventions and the national convention in Dallas. "Our whole object this year will be trying to stay alive," said Mrs. Campbell, and that includes looking ahead to the state elections in 1986.

"We're getting much more sophisticated in the things we're learning and doing," she said of the organization. "We're definitely past the stage of stuffing envelopes and licking stamps."

Instead, these women are learning how to run campaigns, how to take professional polls and, in increasing numbers, how to run for public offices.

Next week, Mrs. Campbell will be attending a polling school sponsored by the National Federation of Republican Women and operated by a professional pollster.

"WE ARE TAUGHT how to conduct the polls, how to ask the questions, how to make the calls and how to get whatever is required for that particular candidate," said the 52-year-old Dallas woman.

Things in my life getting better, or at least different

Things in my life must be getting better. At least they've really changed.

I came to Midland 10 years ago on a bus; a wife was in pursuit. I was packing a suitcase, which, I suppose, contained virtually all of my worldly possessions. I had deserted family, friends and, in a sense, myself.

I was a lost soul hunting for a place to roost. I was not smiling inside.

Now, exactly why I was on that bus, why the wife was in pursuit and just why my material goods had been reduced to a suitcase are situations that, for now, I'd like to leave in the mysterious but not inexplicable past. My life was not in a happy state of affairs. It wasn't even satisfactory, but, I'd have to say, it must have been bearable; I'm still around.

I will throw this in, though: In my haphazard search for Utopia and euphoria in 1973 and 1974, I fell — or plunged — into a frenzy and came up touched with a bit of insanity. I can comfortably say now that I'm not cured, am still affected by flashes of insanity and have found Midland to be a decent city with the foibles and blessings and the high, middle and low classes which typify cities across America.

Midland, of course, is not altogether typical. I found that out posthaste. The dominant themes of conversation seem to be oil and skiing and a little bit of culture, whether that be reflected in fashion or in the theatre. In Midland, there is no theater; it is always theatre. And I have not yet shared in the wealth of oil (except indirectly by way of my elusive paycheck, which isn't exactly a bonanza) and have not yet joined in the fun and hazards of skiing. Occasionally, though, I put on airs, wrap up in my finery, pick up my English walking stick, and, if I'm particularly blessed, get the favor of a lady and head out on the town. If things are better than I sometimes think I deserve, I get enraptured and intoxicated by the events and company of the evening but not by the curse of the drink, which like the bus, the wife and the suitcase, are now apart from me and have disappeared into the irretrievable past. Thank You, Lord.

Ten years ago, I was still foundering and flopping around like a wino gypsy, a wanderer, who was looking for the underside of a bridge to call home.

Today, I don't do that.

I have a delightful place I call home, an adobe mini-house, and don't have to wonder where I'm going to fellowship or to sleep. The bank and I own a most reliable sardine-tin car. I have no wife but claim three cats and have more goods than I could fit into a mess of suitcases. I am the sole owner of my dear old pal, the 1966 International Harvester Scout, which traveled through many of my romances and adventures, including the pitfalls. My beloved IH Scout had been ravaged and violated — stolen in Chicago — in 1974, and that's why I was on the bus and afoot when I happened into Midland in December 1974. Scout and I are together again, and he's patiently waiting on me for his restoration.

Meanwhile, here am I enjoying the fellowship of my Midland friends. I'm leading a reasonably comfortable life and am just wondering what other changes are forthcoming. I think I'll stick with living and find out.

Midlander arrested, charged with burglary

From Staff Reports

A 23-year-old Midland man, arrested Wednesday afternoon on charges of unlawful carrying of a weapon, was charged this morning with burglary of a habitation after items found on him were identified by the victim of a recent burglary.

The man, who gave police an address in the 1100 block of East Illinois Avenue, was arrested at the corner of Missouri Avenue and Lee Street after he ran from police. During booking procedures, officers said the gun, a .380-caliber Llama automatic, matched the description of a gun stolen in a burglary of the Bob Mobley residence, 1210 E. Oak.

Police said this morning Mobley came to the police station where he identified, through serial numbers, the gun and jewelry as his.

The man is expected to be formally arraigned on both charges today.

Reports indicate $4,123 worth of items were stolen during the burglary, which took place between Sunday and Tuesday.

Midland police are continuing investigations into eight auto burglaries reported Wednesday and early today.

Mike McWhorter, 5117 Belaire, told police $1,435 worth of items were stolen from his 1981 Ford Ranger pickup while it was parked in his driveway between 5:30 p.m. Tuesday and noon Wednesday. Entry apparently was gained by breaking a vent window.

Taken were $750 worth of stereo equipment, $1,435 worth of tools and a $40 camera.

Three residents of the Countryside Apartments, 516 Loop 250, told police their vehicles, parked in the apartment complex lot, were burglarized at about 1:30 a.m. today.

William Hall of Apartment No. 2724 said the vent window on his blue 1984 Ford pickup was broken and a $120 stereo, $70 tool box and $250 worth of tools were taken. Damage to the window and the dash was placed at $300.

Lane Chaney of Apartment No. 1904 told police a white 1984 Ford pickup was burglarized and a $220 radar detector was taken. Damage t the vent window, which was broke was placed at $150.

Teresa Jimenez of Apartment No 2503 said her 1979 Chevrolet two door was broken into and a $37 AM/FM stereo unit and a coin purs were taken.

About $450 worth of items wer taken from an unlocked 197 Chevrolet pickup parked on th street at 3117 W. Michigan Ave According to Steve Butler of th same address, a $150 citizen's ban radio and $295 worth of stere equipment were taken. The bur glary took place between 10 p.m Tuesday and 9 a.m. Wednesday.

Shannon Belknap, 3703 W. Louisiana, told police his 1977 two-door Oldmobile Cutlass was burglarized between Tuesday night and Wednesday morning and a $120 worth o cassette tapes and a case were taken. Entry was gained by breaking out the driver's side window, which was valued at $150.

Ronnie Gilbreath, 1906 Western, said his four-door 1983 Oldsmobile Delta 88 was broken into and a .380-caliber pistol valued at $250 was taken between Dec. 18 and Dec. 26. The car was parked in the driveway.

A maroon and beige 1977 Chevrolet pickup belonging to Steve Cantrell of 420 Stoneybrook was broken into between Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons and $225 worth of tools were stolen. Also taken was a $50 tool box and $15 worth of cassette tapes. Entry was gained through an unlocked door, reports said.

In two other burglaries reported to police, Fred Smith of Triangle Liquor, 701 E. Texas, said the liquor store was burglarized betwen 9 p.m. Tuesday and 9:45 a.m. Wednesday. Taken were several bottles of Scotch and gin valued at $112.50. Entry was gained by cutting the tin siding on the northeast side of the building and breaking the sheet rock. Damage was placed at $400.

Jean Schroeder, 1004 Gulf, told police a storage shed in her back yard was burglarized between Nov. 22 and Dec. 20. Taken were $300 worth of rare coins and costume jewelry.

The pollster will be teaching 60 women from across the United States, with about five of them coming from Texas.

"We can do polls for a candidate for a reasonable sum," she said. What would cost $4,000 to $5,000 for a national pollster to do can be done for $400 to $500 by these trained women.

The national federation also holds campaign management schools for its members, who in turn go home and run local candidates' campaigns. "We are the work force in these campaigns," she said, citing a San Antonio woman who last November managed her sixth consecutive successful campaign.

In that case, she ran the state senate campaign for Cyndi Taylor Krier "who didn't stand a Chinaman's chance" against Democratic incumbent Bob Vale, said Mrs. Campbell.

The federation is looking for more women to run for office, according to Mrs. Campbell, but on a selective basis. "We would be logical about who we run or what positions we go after. We are more sophisticated in checking the areas to see where we stand a good chance. We are targeting areas rather than trying to run a complete slate. In the areas where we've targeted, we've done well."

That includes judgeships in Dallas, Fort Worth and Houston, and the county commissioner's court in Denton, where three of the five members are Republican women.

BUT THERE are areas where the Republican women can't crack the Democratic element, she said.

Two months after the November election, TFRW is starting to recruit female candidates for 1986, according to Mrs. Campbell. Once recruited and screened, these women will be trained for the campaign trail.

"Cyndi Taylor Krier said she didn't ask women to vote for her just because she is a woman, but because she has a talent to contribute to government alongside men," said Mrs. Campbell.

"We're finding qualified women who can stand on their own with the men. We want the best qualified person, but we feel a woman can be the best qualified person."

Looking at the next election's races, Mrs. Campbell said she believes the state Legislature "is a logical place for a woman to serve. It does cause problems for the family by having to live in Austin during the legislative session, but it's the same for men. There are four women from Dallas and Fort Worth who are serving in Austin. They all are career women and are married."

SERVING AS president of TFRW, a job she took over after the term of Midlander Lou Brown expired, has been a fulltime commitment and has meant leaving her job as a real estate broker. But politics has been in her blood since the day she was born, she said.

Her mother, now 89 and living in Santa Fe, N.M., gave birth to Barbara on election day 52 years ago and still complains because she didn't get to vote that year, said the daughter, laughing.

"I love this involvement and going around the state and meeting people. I'm so wrapped up in what's happening every day. It's hard not getting a salary after getting used to one. But I'm gaining so much from it in non-monetary ways."

She has to decide before October if she will seek another term as president. "They tell me that after one term you're ready to be put out to pasture."

But she is leaning toward that second term. "I want to keep at it as long as I am enjoying it this much."

Midland host to AA mid-winter conference

From Staff Reports

The 15th annual Midland Mid-Winter Conference of Alcoholics Anonymous will begin Friday in the ballroom of the downtown Midland Hilton.

The conference's registration will begin at 1 p.m. Friday, when the Midland-hosted hospitality rooms offering food and fellowship open.

Speaking at the 8 p.m. Friday session will be Jessie C., a member of AA, of Roanoke. Scotty A. of Midland will chair the meeting. Chairman of the night-owl meeting later that evening will be Evelyn K. of Lamesa.

Saturday's sessions will begin at 8:30 a.m. with a General Service Office breakfast. Chairman will be Willard M. of Amarillo.

Two speakers, a member of AA and a member of Al-Anon, will speak at the 10 a.m. Saturday session. They are George T., the Al-Anon member, of Middleton, Del., and Pete P., the AA member, of Dallas.

Al-Anon, an independent organization which works closely with AA, offers a program based on the same 12 principles as the AA program. Al-Anon is designed for those affected by alcoholism, whether they be relatives, employers, employees or friends.

FORCE

Workshops on cardiopulmonary resuscitation are in place and a program on defensive batons begins Friday. In recruit training, officers are instructed in unarmed defense, "a mixture of street fighting, judo and boxing," according to Sgt. Tom Hyde.

Handgun retention programs also are held and the first Friday after each shift change (every 28 days) is devoted to handgun proficiency training, Lt. Jim Colburn said.

In these sessions, each officer must score a 75 percent on the test. "If you miss, you keep coming back until you qualify. You're not supposed to get back on the streets until you qualify."

Crime Stoppers' tip leads to arrest of Midland man

From Staff Reports

Acting on a tip received through the Midland Crime Stoppers program, police Wednesday arrested a 25-year-old Midland man in connection with the robbery Saturday night of a southside liquor store.

Ivy Jones Jr., 208 Madison, remained in county jail under a $25,000 bond. He was formally arraigned at 3 p.m. Wednesday on charges of aggravated robbery by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

A second suspect in the robbery is being sought by police investigators.

According to Crime Stoppers Program Coordinator Sgt. David Cobos of the Midland County Sheriff's Office, the tip was the first received since the new term of offices started Jan. 1. The cooperative effort between the two law enforcement agencies took place "in only eight days," he noted, "and that's not bad."

The assistant manager and a clerk of McLoyd's Spirit's, 1807 Rankin Highway, said two men came into the store at about 8:30 p.m. armed with a .22-caliber pistol and a knife, according to police reports. The pair took $400 in cash and checks and an $18 bottle of creme liqueur before leaving the store. They were last seen running east from the store on Montgomery.

Lt. Jim Colburn of the police department said no weapon has been recovered.

Ivy was arrested at his house at about 2:30 p.m. by police on a warrant signed by Pine.

Craddick introduces open-container bill

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, has introduced legislation to ban open containers of alcoholic beverages in the "passenger portion" of a motor vehicle.

HB 216 defines the "passenger portion" as being "the area of the vehicle that is accessible to a person riding in or within five feet of the driver's seat."

It would be permissible to carry "an alcoholic beverage that is in its original container and has never been opened."

Violation of the act would be a Class C misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not to exceed $200.

Odessan's dash for freedom has trashy end

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Minutes after jurors found him guilty of aggravated robbery Wednesday, a 19-year-old Odessan made a dash for freedom which ended when a court bailiff found him in a nearby Dumpster.

Jurors in the 161st District Court found Leonard Davis, 19, Odessa, guilty of aggravated robbery about 5 p.m. Wednesday. When jailer Wayne Williams left him alone momentarily while moving him back to the jail, Davis ran from the third-floor judge's chambers and out of the courthouse, according to sheriff's office reports.

Williams, three deputies, District Attorney Eric Augesen and prosecutor Dennis Cadra took up the chase, with Williams finding Davis soon afterward hiding in a Dumpster about two blocks from the courthouse at 8th and Texas Ave.

He was returned to the jail without incident, but was taken to the county hospital at 11:30 p.m. Wednesday, after claiming to have swallowed broken glass. X-rays taken found no glass, according to reports.

Davis was found guilty of robbing the Endless Horizon's record store on Andrews Highway in Odessa. About $2,500 in cash and tickets to the Jefferson Starship rock concert were taken by robbers, who allegedly struck the owner in the head with a gun before escaping.

Sentencing for the robbery was scheduled for this morning, with the punishment ranging from 5 years to life in prison and up to a $10,000 fine. Capt. Gene Kloss said escape charges would be filed against Davis today, with punishment for this offense ranging from two to 10 years in prison and up to a $5,000 fine.

Text of Stacy Dam Case ruling listed

AUSTIN (AP) — Here is a transcript of Wednesday's Texas Supreme Court opinion on the Stacy Dam Case, known before the court as Lower Colorado River Authority et al. vs. Texas Department of Water Resources et al.:

"Opinion on motion for rehearing.

"We grant in part the motion for rehearing filed by the Colorado River Municipal Water District and withdraw our previous judgment of November 14, 1984. The application for a water permit was filed by the district on February 21, 1978, at which time the priority date of the permit attached. From that time, Colorado River Municipal Water District proceeded through the administrative and judicial channels to obtain the permit. Because an examination of authorities on the issues demonstrates that a remand is more appropriate than a reversal and rendition, we reverse the judgments of the courts below and remand the cause to the Texas Department of Water Resources pursuant to our power under the Administrative Procedure and Texas Register Act, Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 6252-13a, S 19 (e) (4) (Vernon Supp. 1984). See also, e.g., Railroad Commission of Texas v. Home Transportation Co., 654 S.W. 2d 432, 434 (Tex. 1983); Lewis v. Metropolitan S&L Ass'n, 550 S.W. 2d 11 (Tex. 1977). In all other respects, the motion by the district and he other motions for rehearing are overruled."

Proposed Lockheed space station would resemble string of pearls

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — A series of modules strung together like pearls on a string has been proposed for the nation's first permanent space station by Lockheed Missiles & Space Co., one of a group of companies competing for a $3.5 billion NASA contract.

Lockheed, teamed with TRW, Hughes and Bendix, on Wednesday unveiled a concept that could house six astronauts for up to 90 days in orbit. A full-scale mockup of parts of the proposed station was displayed publically at Lockheed's new building across the street from the Johnson Space Center.

Robert Marcellini, head of the Lockheed team, said basic elements of the space station could be placed into orbit with seven shuttle flights and that after only the third mission, the station could be inhabited by six astronauts who would help complete construction of the full station.

"Once the station is launched and deployed, it could be used indefinitely," said Marcellini. "Initially, it would have space larger than a 36-foot mobile home."

The station could be expanded with additional modules and eventually could support up to 18 astronauts at once.

The Lockheed concept starts with the launch of berthing ring, a framework of beams that supports a solar array power system. This is followed by a second launch that will put in place an interconnection structure, a framework where modules can be connected.

On the third launch, astronauts would connect a 36-foot module to the framework.

"This would be like a construction shack on the site," said Marcellini. A crew of six would move aboard the module on the fourth launch and start building the rest of the space station. Three more shuttle launches would be used to deliver the final parts of the space station.

Once it is completed, the station would have a cluster of interconnected modules on one end of a latticework of beams. In the center would be a large antennae. At the other end of the beams would be a large solar array which converts sunlight into electricity to power the station.

The habitable portion of the station would include the most elaborate crew quarters ever launched by the American space agency.

Each astronaut would have a private room. There would be a common room, used for entertainment, excercise and meetings.

"This is very important for morale," said Tom Fisher, a member of the module design team.

Another morale factor, he said, is the food. The space station would include fresh and frozen foods and each astronaut would be permitted to select his own food daily.

The station would include a zero-gravity shower, sleeping bunks attached to the wall, zero-gravity exercise facilities and individual windows to enable crew members to watch the world passing below.

Fisher said missions aboard the space station could last 90 days without re-supply. A "logistics module" then coud be sent up on the shuttle and docked to one end of the string of modules. Astronauts would then unload the supplies and store them in the station. The logistics craft would be returned to Earth by the shuttle.

A system of scrubbing the cabin atmosphere would clean and chemically reconstitute the breathing oxygen, said Fisher, making it necessary to resupply oxygen only rarely.

Water, food, some clothing and personal supplies would have to be resupplied, but the station will create its own electrical energy.

Fisher said the work stations, bunks and other facilities in the station are being designed to accomodate a woman as small as 4-feet-10 or a man as large as 6-feet-4 and anyone of any size in between.

Legislator says it's unlikely schools will be closed

AUSTIN (AP) — The chairman of the House Higher Education Committee says she doubts that the 1985 Legislature will close any state universities, although some lawmakers are talking about it as a money saving move.

"I don't think this Legislature will close any schools," said Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin. "I hope our response to the fiscal crisis won't come to that."

House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, earlier said some lawmakers were discussing closing two state universities and consolidating two others to help the state through its financial crisis.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock has estimated that state revenue for 1986-87 will fall about $1 billion short of the amount needed to fund government services at the 1985 level.

The schools mentioned for possible closing were Sul Ross State University at Alpine in sparsely populated West Texas, and the University of Texas of the Permian Basin in Odessa.

Although Lewis never endorsed the suggestions nor said which lawmakers were proposing the closings, Mrs. Delco got him to agree to a review of all state schools before any decisions are made.

CBS won't let anti-gay group use documentary

HOUSTON (AP) — The CBS Television Network has ordered an anti-gay group not to use a documentary in a campaign against a measure which would protect homosexuals from discrimination in Houston's municipal hiring.

Ann Morfogen, director of communications for the network, said opponents of a citywide referendum might "have edited the documentary to suit their purposes, and our material cannot be used in that way."

She said the Campaign for Houston, a group opposed to the two proposals facing Houston voters Jan. 19, apparently has made unauthorized copies of the show called "Gay Power, Gay Politics."

The documentary concerned San Francisco's gay community. Steven F. Hotze, director of the campaign, said it shows how "the entire moral and social fabric of San Francisco has been destroyed" by the gay population there.

Ms. Morfogen said no legal steps would be taken if the film were kept out of the campaign.

A cassette of the previously aired documentary was to have been shown Tuesday night at a rally of anti-gay forces. It was not.

"They do not want that movie shown ever again in Houston," Hotze told about 1,500 people. Hotze said the request had been made by CBS attorneys.

But he contended that Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire, who is favoring passage of the ordinance, "put the pressure on CBS to bring the anvil down on us."

CBS officials denied the allegation.

Texas towns still hoping their ship will come in HOUSTON (AP) — The leader of an effort to base a battleship task force in the Galveston-Houston area says he believes that area and three others are the frontrunners to become home to the USS Wisconsin.

But officials in other Texas towns say they're still optimistic about their chances.

John Focke, leader of the Galveston-Houston effort, said aside from his candidate, the race is among Corpus Christi, Mobile, Ala., and Tampa-St. Petersburg, Fla.

He said Navy officials have decided to make second visits to evaluate the availability of housing in the four areas.

A decision on the base is expected to be made later this year.

Seven Texas sites and at least a dozen others on the Gulf Coast submitted bids for the base of the Wisconsin and its five-ship support fleet. The base is expected to contribute its $50 million payroll to the community where it is put. Proposals from each of the communities were due in Washington last Friday.

Officials in Freeport said they remain confident because their harbor is only three miles from the open Gulf of Mexico and because the channel leading to the Gulf is slated for widening.

"We're ahead of everyone because we already have federal approval to deepen the harbor and deepen and widen our channel," E.S. Sansom, the head of the 16-member Freeport committee. "We have a family-oriented community, plenty of housing and we're used to change and can handle it."

Fort Worth police find body of girl

FORT WORTH (AP) — Suddenly the streets around the Texas Christian University campus don't seem so safe any more.

Remains found in a creek and lake on campus were identified Wednesday as those of 23-year-old Cindy Heller, who had been missing for almost three months.

Ms. Heller is one of three young Fort Worth women who have disappeared from the same area since the end of September.

"I feel more nervous here now than I did when I lived in Los Angeles," said Paula Henderson, who settled in Fort Worth a few months ago after traveling around the world.

A 24-year-old clerk in a bookstore near campus said she now keeps a loaded gun in the house.

"When I go home at 4:30 in the afternoon, I don't come out again," she said.

Ms. Heller's remains were found during a four-day search. On Tuesday, as the lake was being drained, her skull was found.

"It's Cindy Heller. She was identified by dental records," Fort Worth Police spokesman Doug Clarke said.

Clarke said police may keep searching the area for signs of the two missing women.

According to the Tarrant County Medical examiner's office, a preliminary autopsy showed that Ms. Heller was strangled.

Testers give new macaroni dinners limp rating

By LINDA ANDERSON

Persuading a finnicky preschooler to eat can be a daily ordeal. Many children that age seem to consider eating only a few foods. Insuring proper nutrition for them is sometimes difficult.

One meal young children seem to enjoy, however, is macaroni and cheese. The more unusual the macaroni shape, the better. And about the only cheese these kids will eat is good, old-fashioned, plain and versatile Velveeta cheese spread.

Kraft Inc., makers of Velveeta, has recently introduced a macaroni-and-cheese packaged meal called Velveeta Shells and Cheese Dinner. It sounded as though it was custom-made for the picky eaters in our house.

Shells and Cheese's price, ease of preparation and flavor was tested by the usual bunch of adults, children and teen-age testers.

It was prepared according to package directions without any additional cheese or left-over diced meat — just plain macaroni and cheese.

The 12-oz. package of this new product cost $1.29. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.) Label information claims the package makes four ¾-cup servings when prepared according to listed instructions. (This is OK, unless there are five people to feed.)

Label information also claims each serving (prepared according to package instructions) contains 260 calories, 20 percent of the protein, thiamine and calcium in the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance, 15 percent of the riboflavin and niacin, and 10 percent of the iron.

And although the cheese sauce contains, according to the label, "natural cheese (cheddar, Swiss)," the meal also contains sodium phosphate, sodium alginate and oleoresin paprika. (I don't know how accurate the statement is, but my old chemistry teacher said whatever contained sodium really contained salt.)

After package instructions were followed, the final product tasted just like ordinary macaroni and cheese, made from scratch. The only problem was that it didn't have enough cheese for the 4-year-old tester who didn't finish her share. The 1-year-old tester ate some and threw the rest on the floor. (I think the cat ate what was thrown on the floor, but he made no comment on the product.)

Shells and Cheese is "pretty good," according to one tester, but it is nothing special. Unlike many other macaroni and cheese dinners with powdered cheese in an envelope, Shells and Cheese features a cheesespread in a can, which means it melts more evenly than powdered cheese. (It tastes more like Cheese-Whiz than Velveeta though.)

But the picky pre-schooler was not impressed. The overall opinion was the Velveeta Shells and Cheese Dinner tasted no better than macaroni and cheese made from scratch, and it was not any easier to prepare.

Like the old saying, "If it's not broken, don't fix it." Homemade macaroni and cheese is quite tasty and it is not difficult to prepare. Why bother to look for something better?

CURIOUS SHOPPER

Secret of McDonald's french fries: Sugar

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. When I make french fries from scratch they never come out golden brown the way they are in fast-food places. My french fries are always light tan. How do they get them so dark?

A. McDonald's representative Beth Petersohn tells us that their restaurants spray their fries with a dextrose (sugar) solution. When you heat sugar it caramelizes and turns brown.

"This is done," says Petersohn, "usually from September to December, the months when the sugar is the lowest in the potatoes. The amount of dextrose which is added usually brings the sugar content to where it is in potatoes during the other months of the year."

McDonald's also used to put a pinch of sugar in their salt packets, but that practice was discontinued.

Q. I picked up a leaflet at the health-food store which stated the following: "Frozen vegetables can contain 100 percent more salt than fresh vegetables." We have been trying to cut down on salt but often eat frozen vegetables. Why should they have so much salt?

A. Packages of plain frozen vegetables, those without special seasonings or sauces, do not have added salt or a sodium compound. Jocelyn Walter, a registered dietitian with General Foods, states that if no ingredients are listed on the package other than the vegetables, you may safely assume that no ingredient is added.

There are two exceptions to this rule. In the processing of peas and lima beans, a small amount of salt is retained from a step in the processing, and a notation to that effect is on the package.

The statement you read in the health-food store leaflet is misleading. If fresh vegetables contain no salt, and a package of frozen vegetables contains just one grain of salt, that would be a 100 percent increase, but the increase would be insignificant.

Q. Why is there corn starch and gelatin in some brands of yogurt? I also noticed that in Yoplait's raspberry yogurt beets are used to color the product. What is wrong with the natural color of raspberries?

A. There's nothing wrong with the natural color of raspberries nor with the ancient method of making yogurt, which did not include starch, gelatin, beets and thickeners. It seems to be a common practice in the food industry to try to make something already good even better. So they add things to it, change its color and spend a fortune on commercials telling us that what we thought was good was really inferior.

Somebody along the way probably thought that yogurt was too drippy, so they added corn starch to make it thicker and gelatin to make it quiver like pudding. Then somebody else said the pink color was too light, too subtle. Rather than add more raspberries, which are expensive, they reached for beets, which are cheap and very effective in producing a deep red color.

If all these machinations turn you off, Yoplait still makes a natural yogurt without the additives.

Q. A friend saw me feeding small birds some white bread that I had left over and she told me that I should never do this because processed bread is bad for their stomachs and could kill them. She says the birds drink water after eating the bread, and this causes it to swell up inside them. Is this a fact?

Also, a local grocer throws loads of moldly bread out to gulls every morning. This bread is really green, and I was wondering if it's harmful them.

A. "There is no truth to the statement that bread swells up in the stomachs of birds when they drink water," states Barbara Linton, manager of information services at the National Audubon Society. "Nutritionally, however, white bread is not very good for birds. While birds love it, it is similar to children going for potato chips instead of vegetables."

Additionally, feeding gulls moldy bread will not harm them. They feast at garbage dumps and eat carrion as well as rotten fish.

For more information about feeding birds, Audubon has a delightful booklet entitled "Banquets for Birds" which they will send you for $1.60 prepaid. Write to Information Services Department, National Audubon Society, 950 Third Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022.

READER COMMENT: Mrs. Bernetta Lalli, Dunmore, Pa.: "You asked your readers a while ago to write in if they had any observations about lobsters making any noise when they are put live into boiling water. (One of the scientists I consulted in reference to this question stated that lobsters were unable to make any vocal sounds.)

Well, believe me when I tell you that I am one person who thinks that lobsters scream when put into boiling water! I had an experience a few years ago that I will never forget, and I still feel guilty about cooking that lobster.

As soon as the pot of water boiled I sank the live lobster into it, head first, and when I did it it made a small shrill cry that upset me very much. I'll never forget the sound it made and I don't think I ever will. This is a fact!"

Study links aspirin to Reyes Syndrome

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although a new study indicates a stronger link between aspirin and the often-fatal childhood illness Reye's Syndrome, the government's chief health officer says the connection is too tenuous to warrant emergency action.

Margaret M. Heckler, secretary of health and human services, said late Wednesday a new study by the national Center for Disease Control is not conclusive, but does "strengthen the fund of scientific evidence suggesting an association" between the pain reliever and the illness.

But, she said, the industry should include warning labels on all aspirin products and remove language now printed on children's aspirin bottles promoting the drug's use for relief of influenza discomfort.

In addition, she said, "I strongly urge parents to follow the advice of the surgeon general: in all cases involving children, including teenagers, a physician should be consulted before using aspirin in cases of flu or chickenpox."

But another official within the department put more emphasis on the pilot study, saying that scientists reviewing the possible link between aspirin and Reye's Syndrome felt the preliminary study was so important that they persuaded the CDC to publish it — an unusual step.

Institute scientists "were so impressed by the strength of the data, and considered it so persuasive, that they recommended release to the general public" before the full study was completed, the official said.

The study, which compared 29 children who contracted Reye's Syndrome with 143 children in control groups, found that taking aspirin for flu or chicken pox was associated with a 25 times greater risk of developing the illness.

Dr. Sidney M. Wolfe, director of the Health Research Group, said Mrs. Heckler's announcement Wednesday was too little, too late. He noted that 153 children have died of Reye's Syndrome since a CDC advisory committee first warned in 1982 of a possible link between Reye's and aspirin.

"It's not strong enough, and it comes very, very late," said Wolfe of Mrs. Heckler's action.

But the aspirin industry is promising no more than to consider the request, with initial skepticism of whether the new evidence proves anything.

Reye's Syndrome is a fast-developing sickness that occurs in children and teen-agers following a viral infection such as flu or chickenpox.

TPW meeting features designer

Award-winning commercial designer Darrell Dunton will speak at 2 p.m. Saturday at Admarc, 309 W. Pine in Midland. All persons involved in the media in West Texas are invited to attend this meeting of the Texas Press Women's Association.

Texas Professional Photographers Association will sponsor a photographic lighting techniques seminar presented by Dean Collins at 5 p.m. Monday at the Ramada Inn.

The seminar, conducted by the Professional Photographers of the Permian Basin Photographic Guild, is for professional photographers only.

Collins has lectured in the United States and Europe during the past six years and has spent much of his career as an educator of light theory and technique.

A national award-winning photographer, he began researching light theory on his own. At age 24, his awards exhibit brought him to the attention of Larsens Reflectasol who offered him a position to develop and present a series of lectures focusing on Larsens' lighting equipment.

Reservations for the four-hour seminar may be made by calling contact 683-6822 or 689-0791. Deadline for reservations is Saturday.

DEAR ABBY

Woman worried about grandson

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My daughter and her husband have two sons, ages 6 and 8. The 8-year-old (I'll call him Bobby) is constantly being spanked for throwing temper tantrums, talking back, hitting, not doing as he's told, etc. I strongly object to this kind of punishment and have told my daughter and her husband so. They resent my outspoken criticism and have asked me to stop interfering.

That's not all. They favor the younger boy and always have. He never gets punished when he clearly has it coming, which creates hostility between the boys.

When I visited the boys' school for parents' night, Bobby's teacher told me that he is well-liked and very well-behaved at school. She was amazed that he was a problem at home.

I know the parents love both their children, but I think they need professional help in raising them. How do I get this across without being told to "butt out"? Don't use my name. I'm already in the doghouse with them. Sign me ... DOGHOUSE GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: Since you have visited the boys' school, it would not be inappropriate were you to share your legitimate concerns with Bobby's teacher. She could involve the parents in some kind of dialogue and recommend professional counseling.

DEAR ABBY: Is it more important for a father to run every morning or have breakfast with his son? — SHEILA IN DEL MAR

DEAR SHELIA: A father who runs every morning will probably live to have more breakfasts with his son than one who doesn't exercise.

'Praying Mantis' lacks truly likable characters

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — There is no truly likable character in "Praying Mantis," a sophisticated, adult tale of murder and revenge starting tonight on public television's "Mystery!"

That violates an axiom of TV, and the program suffers because of it.

Which of the principal players is even remotely appealing? Vera, who plots with the spineless Christian to murder her husband, Paul, and then to kill Beatrice, who learns of their evil scheme? Or Beatrice, who foils their plan and concocts her own deadly vengeance?

The answer, of course, is neither, and the deep and odious immorality of the female adversaries makes it tough to warm up to this three-part thriller adapted from a novel by Hubert Monteilhet. There is just enough sex and intrigue to maintain interest, but don't count on any satisfaction in the end.

"Praying Mantis," from Britain's Channel Four, is a contemporary story situated in the "Mystery!" season between two light-hearted and stylish period productions based on stories by Agatha Christie: the preceding "Partners in Crime" and a sequence of six "Agatha Christie Mysteries" beginning Jan. 31.

"Praying Mantis" features Cherie Lunghi, familiar to "Mystery!" watchers from "The Manhood of Edward Robinson" broadcast last season, as Beatrice, Carmen du Sautoy as Vera and Jonathan Pryce as Christian. Pinkas Braun plays Vera's unfortunate, but no less culpable, husband, Paul.

Paul Canova is a professor at a French university, and Christian Magny is his assistant. Paul hires Beatrice Manceau as his secretary, and almost immediately they collapse into one another's arms.

Vera Canova is having an affair of her own — with Christian. She persuades the young man to murder Paul, to collect on the professor's million-dollar life insurance policy.

Beatrice, meantime, is lured (as part of the plot) into passionless love with Christian, and they are married. She quickly learns of the scheme to murder Paul, and tape-records telephone conversations in which Vera encourages Christian to shoot her husband. Beatrice discovers in the same way that she is to be killed, too.

Paul is enticed into a trap, and Christian blasts the man with three shots, as planned. Still following Vera's orders, he turns the weapon on Beatrice...

Christian is tried for murder but is saved by Beatrice, who lies on the witness stand to give credence to his defense — that Paul was slain in a moment of passion.

Beatrice now has Christian and Vera in her grasp. Armed with the recordings, which indicate premeditation, she is invincible, and cold-blooded in her desire for retribution.

"Malice is too weak a word," she tells Vera. "What's the word when you hear people plotting to kill you? Vengeance? A desire for revenge?"

Vera is the stronger of the two: "My dear," she tells Beatrice, "you frighten Christian, but you'll never frighten me."

Noted Czech pianist to perform Friday

BIG SPRING — The noted Czech pianist Boris Krajny will perform at 8 p.m. Friday in the main auditorium at First Baptist Church, 705 W. Marcy Drive, Big Spring.

Krajny is also performing as guest artist with the Midland-Odessa Symphony Tuesday in Midland and Jan. 17 in Odessa. Both concerts are part of the symphony's subscription series.

The Big Spring Piano Teachers Forum and The Cultural Affairs Committee, Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, are sponsoring the Big Spring performance. Cost of admission is $4 for adults and $2 for students. Tickets may be purchased at the door or in advance at Big Spring's chamber offices, Dunlaps and The Accent Shop, all in Big Spring.

Friday's program will include works by Beethoven, Franck, Chopin, Rachmaninoff, Scriabin and Smetana. In his appearances with the Midland-Odessa Symphony, Krajny will perform the Chopin Concerto in F Minor.

Krajny has been a prize winner in the International Piano Competition in Sydney, Australia, and the Queen Elizabeth Competition in Brussels. He is also the first prize winner of the International Competition in Citta di Senigallia, Italy, in 1977. In 1982, he became a Grand Prix du Disque Winner for his Supraphon recording with the Prague Chamber Orchestra.

Lunch 'hour' really isn't

NEW YORK (AP) — How long is the average workday lunch hour?

Exactly 49 minutes, 31 seconds, according to a nationwide survey of 100 top U.S. corporations.

Not only is that quite shy of 60 minutes, it's 54 seconds longer than the average employer allows workers to spend at lunch (48 minutes, 37 seconds).

You may think the average boss indulges himself a lot longer, allowing ample time for two martinis and numerous cigars.

Not so, says Marc Silbert of Accountemps, a supplier of temporary accountants, bookkeepers and data processors.

'Merchant of Menace' has new generation of fans

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — At 73, Vincent Price, "The Merchant of Menace," has found a new generation of fans because of his monologue on Michael Jackson's hit song, "Thriller," and the current film festivals and late-night TV broadcasts featuring his old horror flicks.

"You really feel ancient when they start showing retrospectives of your work," said Price. "That, and when you're in a wax museum. It all makes you feel as if you've been buried."

Back from the casket, Price's career received a boost from the spooky verse he performed on "Thriller." All it took was one day to tape his rap, and now kids are turning up at his lectures, where he performs a campy version of Jackson's trademark dance, the moonwalk.

"I'm finally famous," he told the newsletter for his alma mater, Yale University.

Price, the suave host of public television's "Mystery!" series, is also friendly with other rock stars, including Alice Cooper and members of the group Kiss. "They work late and get to see many of my movies on the telly," he said.

It was Price's work in Cooper's music video, "Welcome to My Nightmare," that interested Jackson's producer, Quincy Jones. "I think I might be the only one left who is identified with that kind of title," Price said.

About the enigmatic Jackson, Price said, "he couldn't be more adorable. I really don't know him very well. But he did send me a platinum album."

It might surprise some that Price was born and raised in St. Louis, Mo. Even as a kid he had a distinctive voice. His deep resonance gained a continental flavor when he was a young art student in England.

"To me, I sound like everybody else in Missouri," said Price. "I think I sound just like Harry Truman."

Price has appeared in more than 100 films, the bulk of them straight dramatic roles ("Laura," "The Three Musketeers"). He says his career direction took a turn toward the bizarre when actors like "James Dean and Marlon Brando came along and stopped speaking English."

His serious films and musical sojourns aside, Price's legacy will always be his horror movies, including "The Pit and the Pendulum," "The House of Wax" and the spoofy "Abbott and Costello Meet Frankenstein" and "Dr. Goldfoot and the Sex Machine."

"I'm not the least bit disappointed that I'm remembered primarily for my horror roles," he said. "We were all very serious about those pictures. Boris (Karloff), Basil (Rathbone), Peter (Lorre) and I knew we weren't doing 'Hamlet,' but we also thought we were doing marvelous entertainment."

Price says many of today's horror films are repugnant, not scary, substituting sex and gore for the good old-fashioned surprises and shockers.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, January 11, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actor Rod Taylor, "Hart to Hart" co-star Lionel Stander, golf's Ben Crenshaw, composer-author Mary Rodgers and singer-golfer Don Cherry share your birthday, as did American statesman Alexander Hamilton and early feminist Alice Paul. Success comes when you eliminate unnecessary expenses. Concentrate on streamlining business operations. Hi-tech investments deserve careful scrutiny. A child or young associate provides something that has been missing from your life. Go slow where a new romance is concerned; you could be on the wrong track. The ideal spouse will share your intellectual interests. You are particularly well-suited for literary work.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A career or financial venture begins to move ahead. Seek help with a domestic problem or unfinished work project. A Gemini figures in your plans. Show your affection openly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Guard against becoming involved with domineering people or you could have trouble in meeting a deadline. A one-man show works best for you! Refuse to let others call the shots.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your evaluation of a long-term venture is sound. A highly aggressive individual tries to influence your every decision. Stand up for your rights! Resist this invasion of your privacy.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Keep your relations with your co-workers on an even keel. Focus on group activities if a one-on-one relationship falters. A self-improvement project enjoys highly favorable influences. Socialize more.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Contact influential people who can provide the financial backing for a pet project. Sharing the credit with mate or partner will lead to new rapport. Socialize with those who understand your goals.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The business outlook is very bright this morning. Make the most of an unusual opportunity. You cannot afford to rely too heavily on your friends and social contacts. Stay home this evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An outsider will help you advance your ideas. You begin to see this ally in a romantic light. Mixing business with pleasure could be dangerous. Look elsewhere for love.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You get some very welcome news today. Afternoon brings new business or parental responsibilities. Others will follow where you lead. Move forward with confidence. Romantic partner admires your ingenuity.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your resourcefulness impresses someone in authority. A raise or promotion is possible. Be ready to give aid and advice to a teenager. Young people sense that you will give them a fair hearing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do not let your mate or friends set the pace where spending is concerned. Only you know what you can afford. Curb your social life in order to meet a work deadline.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A great day for artists and artisans. Your ties with those at a distance are in the spotlight. Others will be generous if there is a need to share expenses.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Make a strong effort to spend less and save more. A self-improvement project could lead to greater pay and prestige. Take part in a community project. New social contacts boost business.

WEST ♠ K J 9 8 6 ♡ A 8 5 2 ◇ Void ♣ Q 9 8 6		EAST ♠ 7 5 ♡ Q 9 7 3 ◇ K 4 3 2 ♣ J 3 2
	SOUTH ♠ A 10 4 ♡ J 4 ◇ Q J 9 7 ♣ A K 7 5

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 NT
2 ♠	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♠.

There were many examples of fine technique at the recent World Team Olympiad in Seattle. This one, by Paul Soloway of the U.S., ranks with the best of them.

After West decided not to open the bidding, the auction came round to Soloway in the South seat, who bid one no trump. (The Americans were using a 15-17 point no trump range.) Now West entered the auction with an artificial bid of two clubs, which showed at least nine cards in the major suits. North chose to ignore this bid and jumped to three no trump.

West led his fourth-best spade and Soloway won with the ten. The instinctive play would be to lead a diamond so that you can set up your long suit. However, Soloway realized that, since West had promised length in the major suits, the diamond finesse was likely to fail. East would then return a spade, and the defenders would have their suit established when declarer had only eight tricks.

To come to nine tricks, declarer was going to need a heart trick. Soloway realized that it was essential to get the heart trick immediately without letting East gain the lead. So to trick two Soloway led a low heart. West did his best by ducking smoothly. However, Soloway elected to play him for the ace nevertheless, since he had come into the auction over the strong no trump. He called for the king from the table, and when that held the rest was easy.

Declarer returned to hand with a high club and took the diamond finesse. Although that lost, the defenders could do no better than come to three heart tricks and the king of diamonds, so the contract was safe.

Shroeder loses 17 pounds, builds up his hospital walking program

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — William Schroeder has slimmed down from more than 200 pounds to 183 while recovering from his artificial heart implant and is walking the equivalent of two blocks a day through hospital corridors, officials said.

Schroeder will build up his daily walking program during his comeback from the three strokes he suffered on Dec. 13, hospital spokesman Bob Irvine said Wednesday.

Schroeder's weight has dropped partly because of water loss common after surgery. The 52-year-old Jasper, Ind., man weighed more than 200 pounds at one point after the implant.

He remains in satisfactory condition at Humana Hospital Audubon, where the operation was performed Nov. 25.

Wendell Cherry, president of Humana Inc., told a meeting of Louisville business leaders Wednesday that it's too early to determine the costs and benefits of the experimental implant program.

Afterward, Cherry said the procedure's biggest single cost involves the length of hospitalization.

Actress weds in Nepalese jungle

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pamela Bellwood has been riding high on the hit ABC prime-time soap opera "Dynasty" and when it came time to exchange wedding vows the 35-year-old actress showed up perched high atop an elephant.

Ms. Bellwood and photojournalist Nik Wheeler tied the knot in a colorful ceremony performed Dec. 30 by a Buddhist priest in a Nepalese jungle, her publicist said Wednesday.

"It was all planned quite quickly," said publicist Marilyn Heston. But it was not something the duo rushed into, coming after an eight-year romance, Ms. Heston said.

The bride, groom and best man arrived on elephants painted in the Nepalese tradition. Ms. Bellwood wore a rose-and-pink ball gown she bought at Harrod's in London on her way to Nepal. The gown was designed by the Emmanuels, who created Princess Diana's wedding gown.

The bride also wore a red veil and white wedding beads, traditional bridal garb in Nepal, Ms. Heston said.

She said it is the second marriage for both Ms. Bellwood and Wheeler, 42, a free-lance photographer affiliated with the SIPA photo agency.

LE MANS, France (AP) — Michael Jackson and his musical brothers are planning to take their highly successful Victory Tour overseas, and to ensure maximum publicity Michael will sponsor two cars in this year's Le Mans 24-hour race.

Jackson will put his money behind two Rondeau-Porsche racing cars in the classic race planned for June 16-17, team owner Jean Rondeau announced Wednesday.

Rondeau, a Le Mans native who in 1980 became the first driver to win the race in a car of his own construction, said Jackson was sponsoring the team to publicize a European tour by the Jacksons at an unspecified date.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Sean Connery, who slipped in and out of trouble as superspy James Bond, has suffered a partial setback in a $225 million lawsuit against the producer and distributor of the action films.

Sean Connery

The suit filed in June alleges that producer Albert R. Broccoli and two of his foreign production companies violated federal security laws by denying Connery the profits he was contractually entitled to receive from the films.

U.S. District Judge David Kenyon dismissed 12 counts of the civil suit in a written ruling Dec. 28, but left standing Connery's allegations that he was defrauded by Broccoli and the films' distributor, MGM-UA Entertainment Co. of Culver City, Calif.

Broccoli's London office said Kenyon's decision "in effect ends the ... litigation."

But Connery's attorney, Larry Stein, indicated that the issue may not be dead, saying, "We have received the opinion and we are analyzing it."

NEW YORK (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan and 13-year-old Christopher Barba have joined hands in the battle against cerebral palsy.

Mrs. Reagan was at the national headquarters of the United Cerebral Palsy Association on Wednesday for the unveiling of a videotaped message she made that will be shown Saturday during a national telethon.

"I think that's pretty good," said Chris, who has the disease, after watching Mrs. Reagan's message. The two then held hands while photographers snapped away.

"When you support work like this, you support humanity," the first lady says on the tape.

During her brief appearance for the media, Mrs. Reagan also presented a presidential proclamation making January National Cerebral Palsy Month to Leo Hausman, president of the United Cerebral Palsy Association of New York.

LONDON (AP) — Given the fact that he is the great-great-grandson of Charles Dickens, the family of the Rt. Rev. Michael Whinney probably had great expectations for him.

Whinney fullfilled those expectations on Wednesday when the Church of England named him the Anglican bishop of Southwell.

The 54-year-old Whinney says he found some of his famous ancestor's novels to be "somewhat long-winded," but added that he hoped he had inherited Dickens' passion for social justice.

Dickens portrayed characters from the lower economic strata of 19th century English society.

BURNET, Texas (AP) — Charles Berkeley Normann Sr., an artist whose paintings of important Texans are displayed in numerous state office buildings, was buried Wednesday in Burnet.

Normann, 81, of Austin, died Monday of kidney failure.

A native of Norway who immigrated to the United States at age 19 and moved to Texas in his early 20s, Normann probably was best known for a series of paintings of Texas heroes and for the murals adorning the walls of Scholz Garten in downtown Austin.

Normann's well-known work, "The Reading of the Texas Declaration of Independence," was displayed in the Hall of State in Dallas during the Texas Centennial and later at the San Jacinto Museum of History.

HENDERSONVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music singer Johnny Cash and his family had to leave their home for the night after a fire around a chimney caused minor damage, authorities said.

June Carter Cash and the couple's son, John Carter Cash, were at home when the fire was discovered about 7 p.m. Wednesday, said Lt. Jamie Steele of the Hendersonville Fire Department.

Firefighters quickly extinguished the blaze, which apparently began when a chimney fire ignited wood surrounding it, Steele said.

"Somehow, there was a crack in the masonry of the chimney and fire got through to some wood," he said.

Just Found and Released For Public Sale

GENUINE UNITED STATES GOV'T. SILVER DOLLARS

26.4% Annual Interest Guaranteed Last 10 Years

ALL COINS UP TO 100 YEARS OLD

UNITED STATES COIN RESERVE

U. S. Coin Reserve, a distributor of Government Currency is officially announcing the release of its famous collection of 3000 high grade U. S. Government Silver Dollars. Due to the market surge and tremendous demand from the American Public the Officers of the U. S. Coin Reserve have been forced to authorize the release of their last current stockpiles of silver dollars. Most of these 50 to 100 year old coins are Brilliant Uncirculated and include many from the Carson City Mint. Since this collection must be sold out completely in only one week we are offering these coins for $50.10 less than a major national advertiser! Only $34.90 each! Orders received later may not be honored due to volatile fluctuations in the precious metals market, and checks may be returned uncashed.

NO LOSE INVESTMENT

American citizens from all walks of life including Bankers, Lawyers, Doctors, Stockbrokers, Collectors and Investors are searching frantically for what is considered by experts the world over to be a No Lose Investment. Once thought to be plentiful 50 years ago investors are now scrambling to get their hands on the nearly impossible to find Gem United States Government Silver Dollars. Well-known brokers such as Salomon Brothers have published reports stating that for the last 10 years, rare coins have outperformed all other investments, tangible as well as financial. Silver dollars alone have had an annual appreciation rate of 26.4% despite fluctuations in the price of silver! It is a proven fact that smart investors, for the last 10 years, have been secretly hoarding these coins. They are sitting on a silver mine which they will not sell and already have at least 1000% overall appreciation! This is just the "Tip of the Iceberg" in terms of what is to come, for example the 1891-O is now worth $85 and is projected by experts in only 10 years to be worth approximately $1000! Even more startling is the fact that only 10 years ago this coin could be bought for $7-$10! This is a proven fact and documented in records of American History.

CONGRESS MELTDOWNS CREATE SHORTAGE

These beautiful pieces of American History were created by the millions at the United States Mint over a century ago. Although when one studies U. S. History it becomes obvious why these treasured relics are so rare today. In 1918 during WWI, Congress authorized the melting down of 350,000,000 (350 million!) silver dollars, after this regrettable event the value and scarcity of these coins increased dramatically. Also in 1980 when silver exploded to $50.00 per ounce, the private sector melted down millions more U.S. silver dollars leaving a decimated and widely scattered supply. Our staff of experts at the U.S. Coin Reserve has estimated that only 1% of the original mintage of uncirculated coins still exist. Most of these are not for sale but are being held by large investors until they are worth at least $1000 each. Remember that this treasured, historical silver represents some of this great nation's most illustrious periods in history, the frontier of The Wild West including the silver mines of Carson City, Nevada, Jesse James and rough stage coach travel, Henry Ford and the newfangled Model-T and lastly the Roaring 20's and the beginning of American Jazz Music. This is a once in a lifetime opportunity to invest in a piece of this country's most valuable resource, the UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT HISTORICAL SILVER DOLLARS.

LAST KNOWN GOV'T SILVER RELEASED

Through our national coin networks the U. S. Coin Reserve, a division of Verret Enterprises, a private corporation, has taken a major audit of the silver dollar supply of the entire United States. The results indicate that this famous hoard of 3000 Gems is the last known public collection of its size and quality available. NO other comparable collection is for sale anywhere in the United States. Also consider the fact that investments such as oil, diamonds, gold or silver bullion, represent commodities of unlimited supply. Through modern mining techniques the supply of these commodities never really runs out, but the highly collectible Government Silver Dollars have a LIMITED, FINITE and ever DECREASING supply.

GREENBACKS OBSOLETE?

Also the U. S. Treasury in an effort to stop counterfeiting of paper money is considering changing the design & color of our present paper money. This factor along with the astronomical Government Federal Deficit create the perfect opportunity to invest in "Hard Silver Money". The offering of this famous Last Known Hoard may represent the final opportunity for anyone to invest in this priceless Government Silver. Following the normal economic formula for supply and demand the U. S. Coin Reserve (Verret Rare Coin Analysts) projects that these U. S. Silver Dollars will easily be worth $1000 each in just 5 years time. This is an appreciation rate of almost 100% yearly!

STRICT LIMIT

Since our price of $34.90 each is an incredible one half of our full market value, we expect an avalanche of orders to come pouring in. Therefore, we advise you to get your order in early before the strictly limited supply at this price is sold. We offer a 4 day examination period for each order; orders returned within that time will receive a full refund. A limit of one hundred and twenty coins per order will be strictly adhered to! So, avoid disappointment. Act now!

REASONS TO BUY NOW

1. THE NEW YEARS INVESTMENT OF A LIFETIME.
2. National and World Economists state that Historical Gov't Silver is one of the world's best investments.
3. Based on the estimated 1% remaining coins only one family out of 125 can own any of these priceless U. S. Silver Dollars.
4. Rare coin analysts state that these Gem Gov't Silver Dollars could be worth $1000 each in only 5 years.
5. Gov't Silver coins, with permanent collector value are considered by many experts to be a much better investment than silver bullion with no collector value.
6. Each coin is U. S. Mint fresh and in a special airtight cache.
7. IN OUR OPINION, THESE COINS HAVE ONLY BEEN HANDLED BY BANKERS AND MINT PERSONNEL.
8. A LIMIT OF TWO HUNDRED COINS PER ORDER WILL STRICTLY BE ADHERED TO! SO, AVOID DISAPPOINTMENT. ACT NOW!

BEFORE YOU BUY A GERMAN IMPORT, TAKE A LOOK AT THE IMPORT GERMANS LIKE BEST.

Every year, West Germany's leading automotive journal, Auto Motor und Sport, invites its readers to vote for the world's best cars.

For each of the last three years, they've named the Saab 900 Turbo "the best imported car . . . under 2,500 cc." Each year, Saab's margin over the nearest competitor has been enormous.

We're deeply gratified at such high praise from drivers who constantly deal with high-speed autobahns, alpine switchbacks and $2.00-a-gallon gasoline. And we're pleased to be so highly regarded in a country that produces some of our nearest competitors.

So, if you're considering buying one of the cars that Germany exports, you should have a look first at one of the best cars Germany imports.
