Wichita 'Regular' Democrats Oust Bolters From Committee

Knew Wichita Falls—
Air Circus—
Won't Be Long—
Other Horses —

Manager Jim Galloway and his Spudders return home today, while Horrace Robbins and his pennant fund committee renew their work for the $7,500 to be given the Wichita Falls team PROVIDED it wins the playoff with Houston. Those who look only on the commercial side, as well as the real fans, should remember that participation in the Dixie series will be worth far more than $7,500 to Wichita Falls.

In a telegraph office of a little New Mexico town last week this writer was asked by a clerk if "Wichita Falls has wire service at night." Another worker in the office answered the question with the declaration "I don't know if they have telegraph service down there, but they sure turn out baseball teams."

An air circus at a local field attracts 12,000 persons on Labor day according to a story in the morning paper, an indication of the growing interest in aviation. But it is quite likely that the days of the average air circus are numbered. The public is becoming more interested in performance, safety and utility of airplanes than in freak thrills and fake accidents, however well executed.

Indications are that the airplane will soon take its place with the automobile in public service and utility. And the display of news models of a popular car, or the opening of a new automobile agency, draws a greater crowd in the average town than could any automobile race unless the Indianapolis speedway could be moved from point to point.

C. H. Kraft, vice-president of the Kraft-Phenix Cheese company, pays a visit to the local plant and declares himself well pleased with the success of the operations so far, all of which is very well, but Wichita Falls should give serious attention this fall to increasing the supply of milk which comes to the plant. Other towns are turning covetous eyes toward the Kraft plant, and Kraft officials could not be blamed if they listen to these cities if the Wichita area cannot supply milk sufficient to operate the plant here at capacity.

Residents of other sections of the state, more experienced in dairying than those of this area, know the value of a steady market for unlimited quantities of milk. They would give much for the opportunity presented Wichita farmers.

Judge P. A. Martin dismisses the special venire called in the Tom Shook case, for the good reason that Mr. Shook is no longer in these parts to stand trial. Which should remind newspaper readers there have been a half dozen or so jail breaks this year, due, it is claimed, to a large pillar in the jail behind which prisoners may hide.

An old saying declares it does no good to lock the barn door after the horse has been stolen. Perhaps not for that horse, but in case of the county jail, we have other "horses" we would like to keep and they are continually getting away. If county officials can't remedy the construction of the jail, The Record News sees no reason why officers can't guard the door of the jail with a machine gun whenever it is necessary for the jailer to enter.

15 MEMBERS EXPELLED BY COUNTY BOARD

Precinct Chairmanships Declared Vacant By Committee

REGULARS CONTROL

New Delegates Ordered Named to State Convention

The forces of the constitutional, anti-Smith, pro-Hoover "Democrats" were routed at a called meeting of the Democratic county executive committee at the courthouse Tuesday afternoon when Hoover sympathizers on the committee were expelled from membership.

The fight which ended in a complete victory for the regular Democrats was led on one side by Joe B. Hatchitt, Edgar Scurry and F. W. Fischer and on the other by J. W. Nicholson, C. C. Hudson and J. R. Chatham.

Words and threats of court action were handled back and forth. The action of the committee in expelling the bolting members was characterized by Mr. Hudson as "high-handed assault of the Democratic party."

Editor Gets Hot

In a plea that the committee seek to restore harmony the Iowa Park man took exception to heckling and dared "any man within reach of my fists to dispute my being a good Democrat."

J. R. Ogle, chairman of precinct 20 before the meeting, declared that the committee had no right to expel him and other members and said, "I will not recognize your action if you do."

But the steam roller was not to be halted. The forces favoring the Democratic party's presidential candidate held the whip hand and applied it.

Fifteen members of the committee who failed to sign a resolution indorsing the candidacy of the presidential nominee of the Democratic party were ousted by a vote of 24 to 13 and their places on the committee were declared vacant. The 15 precinct chairmanships thus vacated will be filled by appointment by Chairman Scurry, and the revamped committee will meet at the courthouse Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

The delegation to the state convention selected on August 4, which is headed by Mr. Sartin, avowed supporter of Herbert Hoover for president, was denounced in a resolution offered by Mr. Hatchitt. The resolution, adopted by a unanimous vote of the committee after the dissenters had been expelled, pointed out that the county executive committee had failed, in accordance with the law, to prescribe the manner in which delegates to the county convention should be selected.

Bolters Scorned

Because of this failure of the committee, the resolution set out, the county convention of Wichita county on August 4, "was dominated by Republicans and other party enemies."

"In a deliberate attempt," the resolution continues, "to betray and humiliate the Democracy of Wichita county and to embarrass the party at large such assembly named as the chairman and spokesman of its proposed representation to the state convention a political apostate, faithless alike to party honor and party principle, and then, as now, attempting for a price the betrayal of the Texas Democracy into the hands of the Republican corruptionists."

It was further resolved by the committee, by unanimous vote, that a new list of delegates to represent Wichita county at the state convention be drawn up and that the state executive committee be requested to recognize this delegation as "the

Fishermen Find Part Of Airplane Motor

BOSTON, Sept. 4. (UP)—A piece of a motor, which may be part of an airplane engine, was brought to Boston by fishermen who said they hauled it from the ocean bed southeast of Cape Cod.

The find brought expression of the belief the final resting place of Mrs. Wilson Grayson's amphibian plane, Dawn, had been found, but a superficial examination of the motor part failed to confirm the theory.

Wichita Falls Radio Station Scores Triumph in First Work

Telegram and Telephone Calls Pour Into KGKO From Fans Over Nation; 100 On Initial Program

KGKO, the National Security Life Insurance company radio station atop the Perkins-Snider building, went on the air Tuesday night with its opening program which included 100 artists and which was received well in all parts of the country despite high static, according to a swarm of telegrams.

The upper floor of the building was jammed all evening with curious crowds coming and going.

Many Give Approval

Immediately after the final test period from 7:30 to 8 o'clock, R. E. Shepherd, the former "singing mayor" of Wichita Falls, introduced Zack and Glen, permanent artists at the station, and J. M. Gilliam, the business manager. He then sang the first number to be given over the station. It was "The Holy City."

Almost at once, the studio telephones began to ring and telegrams to come in. There was such a rush of calls that many local people sent telegrams when they were unable to get the station on the telephone. The telephone call from the greatest distance was from Denver, and was received soon after the station went on the air.

Wednesday night will be silent night at the station, it was announced during one of the intermissions. This is in keeping with the practice of other stations in this territory so that local receiving sets

25,000 HEAR ROBINSON IN CISCO ADDRESS

Public Careers of Smith And Hoover Contrasted In Speech

HITS CHURCH CRITICS

Old-Time Friend Presents Speaker to West Texas Audience

By GORDON K. SHEARER

CISCO, Texas, Sept. 4. (UP)—Carrying his campaign to sell Governor Alfred E. Smith to the South, into West Texas, Senator Joseph T. Robinson, vice presidential candidate, here tonight contrasted the public careers of Smith and Hoover and answered Smith's religious critics.

Fully 25,000 people, who had descended upon this small West Texas town in trains, wagons and automobile caravans, heard the nominee deliver his address in the stadium of the Cisco high school. Mrs. Clara Driscoll Sevier, of Austin, national Democratic committeewoman, welcomed the candidate to Cisco, and to Texas in the introductory speaking program. Senator-elect Tom Connally of Marlin introduced Judge Eugene Lankford, life-long friend of the nominee, who, in turn, introduced Senator Robinson.

This year's campaign, Senator Robinson began, revolves more about the characteristics of the nominees than the party platforms.

"It is the purpose of this address," he said, "to clear the confusion and misunderstanding that has resulted from misrepresentation respecting the ability and fitness of Governor Alfred E. Smith to serve as chief executive of the nation.

"Not since the days of Andrew Jackson has there appeared in the political arena a greater leader than the Democratic nominee, Governor Alfred E. Smith. He has demonstrated the same fighting qualities that made 'Old Hickory' beloved among his followers and feared by his partisan foes.

Hoover's Skill Doubted

"It is not believed that Mr. Hoover's skill as an engineer or his long residence in foreign lands have made him familiar or sympathetic with the institutions which underlie this government. As secretary of commerce in the administrations of President Harding and Coolidge, Mr. Hoover has not demonstrated leadership; for as an adviser of the president he has been indifferent to the chief problems by which these presidents have been embarrassed. As to his speech accepting the nomination few were acquainted with his views of any of the questions discussed in the Republican platform.

"It is true that throughout his career, until the present campaign, Governor Smith has been engaged in state politics as distinguished from national politics. It should be recalled, however, that the general duties developing upon the chief executive of a state like New York and analogous to those that must be performed by the president of the United States.

Lauds Smith's Record

"Four terms as governor of New York have given Governor Smith a training far superior to that of any nominee presented by either party during recent years. Throughout his four terms, Governor Smith

SEARCH FAILS TO FIND BODY OF A. H. WARD

Victim Slips From Deck Of Speed Boat Into Lake Depths

WATER 22 FEET DEEP

High Waves Force Rescue Workers to Abandon Night Search

Ambrose H. Ward, 24, of Wilson, Okla., was drowned in Lake Wichita shortly before midnight Tuesday night when he slipped from the deck of a speed boat and disappeared into the lake waters.

Search for Ward's body had been abandoned early Wednesday morning, when high winds whipped the lake into choppy waves. Members of the Wichita Falls police department will begin dragging the lake this morning in an effort to recover the body.

Slipped From Boat

According to Ward's companions on the boat, the Oklahoma man slipped from the deck of the boat. No outcery was heard, and no trace was found of the man after the accident. The boat toured the waters, from 22 to 30 feet deep in that area, for more than an hour in an effort to rescue Ward, or recover his body. The party then returned to shore and telephoned to John McIntyre, night police sergeant, for assistance. Officers Fred Fountain and Homer Johnston of the police department and Blackie Wilson of the constable's department answered the call, but were forced to abandon efforts to locate Ward's body by the high water.

Ward and his friends chartered the speed boat, "Lady of Wichita Falls, shortly after 11 o'clock, according to lake attendants. The party also included E. L. Dressler, who was driving the boat at the time of the accident, and John D. Pace, employe at the lake, and friend of Ward. The boat is owned by J. S. Dressler, father of the man driving the craft.

Wife in Europe

Ward is from a prominent Oklahoma family and reputed wealthy. He attended high school in Wilson, and later attended Kemper military academy. He is survived by his wife, who is now in Europe on a tour, and by his father, B. F. Ward, of Wilson, Okla.

Mike Baxter of Wilson, Okla., and Mr. Ward had left Wilson on a pleasure trip to El Paso. They stopped in Wichita Falls Monday. Mr. Baxter had not gone out to the lake with his friend.

Under the supervision of county and city officers, grappling hooks for dragging the lake were being made at the blacksmith shop at Call field. The hooks will be completed by daylight, officers said.

Mathews' allegedly was stakeholder for a bet on the Mayfield-Connally race, part of which was put up by Adams. When Adams sought to collect the bet he found the money had been paid to an order bearing Adams' name, but which he denied signing.

ROBINSON FLOORS AL'S RELIGIOUS CRITICS IN CISCO ADDRESS

25,000 HEAR DEMO NOMINEE

Cisco Host to Arkansas Senator

has frankly asserted leadership. Through his fearlessness and energy he has secured the passage of many reform measures. He is the most independent and progressive governor of the present generation His sympathies are with the masses of the people—the plain people who need the protection of government."

Turning upon Governor Smith's attackers, Senator Robinson said that it is not likely that "those who for hire, or for the gratification of animosity, have sought to influence their fellow citizens by publicity of falsehoods, will respond to any influence but the righteous resentment of their fellow countrymen. The masses are entitled to know the truth; they are willing to hear it and act upon it."

Not 'Catholic' Governor

Quoting at length from comments of New York state newspapers, Senator Robinson continued: "To those who fear his preferment will mean priset control of the governor. Let it be said he has never been a Catholic governor of New York. Governor Smith has been an American governor. He is too just to submit his high office to the domination of any clique or group. His religious creed, as applied to government, is as soundly American as any Methodist or Baptist ever professed. Those ministers who are dividing their congregations by political attacks upon him from their pulpits should be reminded that Governor Smith's cabinet is composed of nine Protestants, two Catholics and one Jew, and that substantially the same proportion runs throughout his official appointments.

"It is doubtful if another candidate has appeared during the present generation so well endowed by nature, so admirably qualified by experience to occupy the exalted place—the highest office in all the world—that of president of the United States."

Escorted by Bands

Bands playing "Dixie" escorted the Arkansas senator through this wonder city that has developed in the great oil fields of Texas. Ten gallon hats attested the pilgrimage of cowmen, from the plains to hear the first national candidate of a major political party make a campaign speech in West Texas. Crowds packed into the football stadium erected for a state championship high school football team by enthusiastic townspeople.

Apparently content that the two speeches in Texas have effectually stopped a budding Hoover boom, Senator Robinson left tonight for Tennessee.

Announcement was made of the changes in his Kentucky itinerary, substituting Owensboro and Louisville and Paducah for Henderson.

The complete text of the address of Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic nominee for vice president, here tonight follows:

The national campaign now in progress is different, in at least one material aspect, from other recent political contests. While a number of sharp and important issues are presented by the platforms of the Democratic and the Republican parties, the intensest interest of the voters is manifested with respect to the characteristics of the nominees for president.

Tells Purpose of Address

It is the purpose of this address to seek to clear the confusion and misunderstanding which has resulted from misrepresentation respecting the ability and fitness of Governor Alfred E. Smith to serve as chief executive of the nation. It is assumed that while some may be prejudiced because of misinformation, the great majority of those who hear my remarks are ready and willing to abandon unfriendliness to the Democratic national ticket which they have been prompted to take because of inaccurate knowledge and from no deliberate purpose to do injustice. It is not likely that those who for hire, or for the gratification of animosity, have sought to influence their fellow citizens by publicity of falsehoods, will respond to any influence save the righteous resentment of their fellow countrymen. Undoubtedly, the masses are entitled to know the truth. They are willing to hear it and to act upon it. It is the assurance that fairness and charity will prevail and be reflected in the ballots of the many millions who constitute the electorate of this nation, that induces me to make references to the head of the Democratic national ticket which, it is believed, will arouse the interest and draw the support of those who desire to be governed by facts, rather than rumors.

Not since the days of Andrew Jackson has there appeared in the political arena a greater leader than the Democratic nominee, Governor Alfred E. Smith. He has demonstrated the same fighting qualities that made "Old Hickory" beloved among his followers and feared by his partisan foes.

No doubt you have heard the assertion that his experience has been limited to state affairs and for this reason he is not well qualified to deal with national problems.

Hoover's Record

Under our political system the nominees of the major parties are usually men of bread experience. Occasionally candidates have been chosen whose political activities have been restricted to subordinate positions. Neither party has ever chosen as leader one better equipped by nature and by training to fill the office of president than the candidate of the Democratic party in this campaign. It is proper to compare the histories of Governor Smith and Mr. Hoover in so far as these may throw light on the qualifications of the two men as rival candidates. It is not believed that Mr. Hoover's skill as an engineer, or his long residence in foreign lands, have made him familiar or sympathetic with the institutions which underlie this government. The renown which he enjoys is attributable largely to his leadership in food control and in the management of Russian, Belgian and flood relief.

As secretary of commerce in the administrations of Presidents Harding and Coolidge, Mr. Hoover has not demonstrated leadership, for as an adviser of the president he has been indifferent to the chief problems by which these presidents have been embarrassed. A cabinet member is not a mere head clerk; he is primarily chargeable with the policies of his department and with aiding his chief, the president, in the proper solution of all problems of great national importance.

Prior to his speech accepting the nomination of the Republican party for president, few were acquainted with Mr. Hoover's views on any of the questions discussed in the Republican platform. The reason for this is that secretiveness of disposition which has been developed through a long private business career. Many of the leaders of the Republican party combined to "stop Hoover," that is, to prevent his nomination, because they claimed he is not well grounded in a knowledge of our constitution, and has no well defined convictions on political subjects. They raised the question of his eligibility on account of citizenship and declared that Mr. Hoover lacks the political training essential in a successful president of the United States.

ADD ROBINSON . . . . . .

Scores White's Attack

While not a member of the legal profession, his labors in the state constitutional convention were so valuable that a great New York Republican, Mr. Elihu Root, pronounced Mr. Smith as the best informed man in the convention.

The effort of Mr. William Allen White and others to discredit Governor Smith's achievements as a legislator are illustrative of the desperation of the opposition who realize that unless the public confidence in his integrity and ability is undermined, the governor's frankness and clear-mindedness will certainly confuse and defeat his opponents.

Public men ought to be held accountable for their acts, but they ought not to be slandered! When an officer does his duty, efforts to asperse his character should meet with political resentment by all fair-minded citizens. Mr. White's partial retraction of his slanderous charges, and his retraction of his retraction, and his half-hearted apology are fair samples of the processes that are being employed to arouse prejudice against the Democratic nominee.

It is true that throughout his career, until the present campaign Gov. Smith has been engaged in state politics as distinguished from national politics. It should be recalled, however, that the general duties devolving upon the chief executive of a state like New York are analogous to those which must be performed by the president of the United States. Four terms as governor of New York have given Governor Smith a training far superior to that of any nominee presented by either party during recent years. His experience has been broader than that enjoyed by the immortal Woodrow Wilson when first called to the presidency. It is much more comprehensive than that of either Mr. Harding or Mr. Coolidge.

Independent and Aggressive

Throughout his four terms Governor Smith has frankly asserted leadership. Through fearlessness and energy he has secured the passage of many reform measures, some of which were referred to in my address yesterday at Dallas. He is the most independent and progressive governor of the present generation. His sympathies are with the masses of the people—the plain people who need the protection of government.

His record empraces a hundred triumphs accomplished for their benefit. His support and improvement of the public school system of New York is a separate story which proves him a great champion of popular education. Prison reform; safeguards of the public health; the improvement of agriculture; the establishment of effective cooperative marketing for farm products; the elimination of politics from the state highway department; the display of business sagacity in the purchase of building sites; the fearless selection of appointees for merit; the championship of equal rights for women workers; the protection by statue of women and children employed in factories from unsanitary and unsafe conditions; constant loyalty to the general public interest and defiance of the selfish influences which have sought to cripple nad embarrass him; his insistence that the natural resourses of the state be retained for the comfort and profit of the citizens; the reduction of taxes; the abolition of needless state offices; the issuance of bonds for the construction of charitable institutions and the personal supervision of state charitable institutions and the personal supervision of subordinate executive offices demonstrate the high standard of public service which he has established as governor and which he may be expected to maintain if chosen president.

The Rochester Herald of March 1, 1924, said:

"To be unapproachable by interests that have need of servants in high places may have its disadvantages at times, particularly when money is needed for campaign purposes, but to have only that sort of reputation in the sight of men through years of self-sacrificing public service is well worth the price, as Al Smith's tremendous 'vote getting' powers have shown."

The New York Times on April 4, 1924, said:

"He is now striving, as he has long been striving, to put in the constitution measures that make for the reduction of the cost of government, and that responsible and effectual government which are the imperative needs of this generation."

Another great newspaper, the New York World, on April 13, 1924, said:

"In this lies Governor Smith's strength. The people feel that he is earnest. They know that they cannot point to one single case where as governor he has urged action by the state for any reasons except honest conviction, fortified by experience, that it would prove to be for the general interest."

The Sun, a Republican paper, on April 1, 1925, contained this compliment:

"Among all these outstanding figures none has shown himself a greater leader and harder fighter than Al Smith. He has gripped the imagination of the people and won their enthusiastic endorsement by putting through the reform measures which they wanted and which seemed absolutely blocked by a hostile legislature."

As to Religion

To those who fear his preferment will mean priest control of the governor, let it be said that he has never been a Catholic governor of New York. Governor Smith has been an American governor. He is too just to submit his high office to the domination of any clique or group. His religious creed, as applied to government, is as soundly American as any Methodist or Baptist ever professed. It comprehends freedom of conscience for all men; equality of all churches and sects before the law as a matter of right and not as a matter of mere favor; the absolute separation of church and state and strict enforcement of the constitutional provision that congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof. Those ministers who are dividing their congregations by political attacks on him from their pulpits should be reminded that Governor Smith's cabinet is composed of nine Protestants, two Catholics and one Jew, and that substantially the same proportion runs throughout his official appointments.

No effort has been made to exhaust the evidence of Governor Smith's exceptional qualifications to serve as president. It is doubtful if another candidate has appeared during the present generation so well endowed by nature, so admirably qualified by experience to occupy the exalted place—the highest office in all the world—that of president of the United States.

NOMINEE ADDRESSES RANGER CROWD

Special to The Record News.

RANGER, Texas, Sept. 4.—Several hundred people today heard Arkansas' favorite son, Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Democratic vice presidential nominee, delivered his first Eastland county address. Standing on the observation platform of his private car, Senator Robinson talked to the crowd of Ranger residents for 15 minutes. The street was blocked by people and automobiles. Robert Earnest, Ranger high school boy, presented Senator Robinson with a reply to a letter that he wrote the boys' Sunday school class last Sunday.

Robinson was introduced by Mayor John W. Thurman. In his short speech to the crowd he defended Al Smith's religion and he declared him to be the greatest man the world knows today. He congratulated this town on the spirit of West Texas that it represented. The train stopped here for lunch.

duly accredited delegation from Wichita county."

New Delegates Ordered

A committee of four, composed of R. E. Huff, Fred Spurlock, A. Lohoeffner and Mr. Hatchitt, was appointed to prepare a list of delegates to the state convention at Dallas next Tuesday. This committee was ordered to report to the county committee at the meeting next Saturday.

The fireworks at the meeting Tuesday afternon began immediately after Mr. Scurry had called the the roll of the committee. Raymond Myers had been selected temporary secretary.

Although Mr. Sartin, erstwhile Wichita county leader of the Constitutional Democrats, and at present state manager of the anti-Smith "Democrats," was present for the meeting, he was without proxy and took no part in the discussion.

Mr. Nicholson, chairman of precinct 17, and avowed supporter of Mr. Hoover, took the initiative for the minority forces. His first attempt to secure recognition of four committee members was squelched by the chair.

The opening gun of the battle of words was fired by the county chairman.

"It has come to my attention," Mr. Scurry said, "that members of this committee have said they would not support the nominee of the party. A man cannot serve two masters. He can't be a Democrat and run and work for the Republicans. It is my hope that my information is in error and that every member of this committee will support the nominees of the party from Gov. Alfred E. Smith to Frank Morgan."

Mr. Fischer, apparent floor leader of the party regulars, suggested that the secretary call the roll, "in order that we might know which persons in the room have voice in the affairs of the committee."

The roll call revealed the absence of C. O. Simmons, chairman of precinct 2, and E. W. Barr, chairman of precinct 35. Other members of the committee were marked present either by principal or by proxy.

The roll call was stopped when B. A. Berry's name was called as chairman of precinct 3, and Mr. Nicholson protested that "P. A. Berry" did not live in precinct 3, and "had no right to the chairmanship." Mr. Berry's right to the chairmanship of precinct 3 was recognized by the chair and the roll call was resumed.

Test for Members

Mr. Fischer then presented a resolution pledging the committee members individually to vote for and actively support the candidacy of Governor Smith.

"I have heard," Mr. Fischer began, "that a number of members of this committee have pledged their support to the Republican party's presidential nominee. I could not believe these rumors." (Laughs from the spectators.)

"I cannot believe that American citizens would offer their names as members of the Democratic party organization in this county and at the same time seek to destroy the party.

"In order to convince the voters of Wichita county of the fallacy of these rumors, I want to submit a resolution for the signatures of members of the committee, showing that all of us are behind the nominees of the party."

After a motion of Mr. Nicholson's to table the resolution was defeated by a vote of 25 to 12, the resolution was submitted. Fifteen members of the committee failed to sign the resolution.

Mr. Fisher then offered a motion for removal of the 15 precinct chairmen. The motion carried after much discussion.

Mr. Hatchitt presented his resolution asking that the actions of the county convention of August 4 be repudiated and that a new slate of delegates to the convention be prepared.

Meet Again Saturday

Prior to adjournment a committee made up of Ed Howard, Mr. Fischer, W. P. Smith and J. M. Martin, passed a resolution pledging the executive committee to support the party presidential nominee. The resolutions committee also asked that the chair read "the record you have of B. D. Sartin's Republican activities prior to his residence in Wichita county."

In reply to this request Mr. Scurry told members of the committee he held the yearbook of the University of Kentucky for 1914 in which B. D. Sartin's picture was shown with a group called the Republican club. Previously Mr. Sartin had denied that he had ever been aligned with the Republican party.

Following adoption of the resolution endorsing Smith the committee adjourned until 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Those who failed to sign the resolution presented by Mr. Fischer and who subsequently were expelled from further membership on the executive committee were:

C. O. Simmons, precinct 2; W. B. Corlett, precinct 4; M. L. Tittle, precinct 14; J. W. Nicholson, precinct 17; Charles H. Smoot precinct 18; J. R. Ogle, precinct 20; J. D. Cooper, precinct 26; W. R. Hill, precinct 27; J. R. Chatham, precinct 28; J. H. Minter, precinct 30; N. M. Matthews, precinct 31; J. N. George, precinct 32; E. C. Knox, precinct 33; D. E. Hooks, precinct 34 and E. W. Barr, precinct 35.

Mr. Simmons and Mr. Barr were not present at the meeting and were not represented by proxy. A number of those expelled were not at the meeting but had given their proxy to others who refused to sign the resolution.

Skin eruptions successfully treated from within

SKILLED physicians recognize the appearance of pimples, boils and other skin eruptions as being an indication of an abnormal condition of the system.

This is why so many thousands have been enabled to free themselves of these unsightly blemishes and painful skin annoyances by taking a course of S.S.S.

You owe it to yourself and friends to give S.S.S. a trial. It helps Nature build rich, red blood—those vitalizing elements in the blood that build and sustain the body.

In building rich, red blood cells, S.S.S. improves the processes by which the body is nourished.

"I suffered from impure blood—was weak, and I had lost so much weight, I didn't look natural. I had pimples and was also bothered with a breaking-out that itched terribly. I also had boils one after another. I tried different kinds of remedies, but nothing did me any good until a friend advised me to take S.S.S., which I did. This was some time ago. Now I feel well, and I am getting along fine. S.S.S. stopped the itching and it cured me of boils. I advise all weak and run-down people to give S.S.S. a trial. It clears up the skin and makes you strong and fills you with energy."—Mrs. J. W. Barker, 1337 Walnut Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

—purely vegetable

When your system is filled with rich, red blood, you don't have that tired, languid feeling when you awake in the morning. Instead, you feel, refreshed, ready to meet the world.

Your appetite is keen—you enjoy work or play—your skin is clear, cheeks naturally rosy.

All this because rich, red blood builds and sustains the body.

All drug stores sell S.S.S. in two sizes. Get the larger size. It is more economical.

AN INVITATION

THE new Packard Standard Eight is here. We cordially invite you to call and see this long-rumored car. It introduces ten additional and beautiful new models into the Packard line.

You will find the new car somewhat smaller and lighter in weight than the famous Packard Custom Eight—but powerful, fast and luxurious.

It includes every refinement and improvement made possible out of a long experience in building cars with straight-eight motors, together with a number of important inventions among which is the new and exclusive Packard Shock Absorbing System.

This system is a combination of Packard and European inventions and positively makes the Packard car not only the easiest riding car in the world but also the safest to drive—for the dangers of front wheel shimmy and steering whip have been absolutely eliminated.

We want you to drive one of the new cars and put the Packard Shock Absorbing System to any test your ownership would ever call for. We know that you will buy no other car once you experience the comfort and safety features it offers.

Packard owners and those who hope to become Packard owners will be delighted to see that the distinguished beauty of Packard lines has been preserved. Fundamental beauty can be but refined, and this Packard has done. No tributs has been paid to passing vogue for Packard cars far out-live any vogue that lasts but a year or two.

Depreciation is largely a matter of appearance, and in this respect Packard has once more protected the interests of those who have bought as well as those who are to buy.

When may we see you? Any interest you show in our new cars will be most courteously considered. We do want you to know of their new features and in particular of the shock absorbing system which, together with the most luxurious upholstery ever used in Packard cars, makes each in truth—The Restful Car.

The Packard Standard Eight is offered in two wheelbase lengths—126 and 133 inches. The prices range from $2495 for the luxurious five-passenger Sedan to $2835 for the Sedan-Limousine (prices at the factory).

We will apply the value of your used car against the first and monthly payments on a new one, if you prefer to buy out of income as so many do. And like many, you may find that the value of your used car will equal or exceed the amount of the first payment, leaving your largest cash outlay the amount of any one monthly payment.

LANDSLIDE FOR HOOVER SEEN

George Moses Gives His Opinion

By GEORGE H. MOSES
United States senator from New Hampshire and vice chairman of the eastern advisory committee of the Republican national committee.
(Copyright, 1928, by Universal Service)

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—I expect Herbert Hoover to have an unprecedented majority in the electoral college. In several states I expect to see no pluralities such as those which Harding recorded in 1920 or which were given to Coolidge in 1924.

We are confronted this year by a scenic set of political machinery which is novel to us. Our opponent is alert, adroit, and for the first time since 1892 affluent. This year, in a greater measure than at any time in the last 16 years, the Democrats possess that hope which springs eternal in the human breast.

I think that hope is futile. My actuarial mind finds no element in this year's problem to warrant me in looking for an overturn sufficient to make this country Democratic.

I do not seek to analyze the reasons which this year are producing such an unexampled crossing of party lines. A variety of causes leads voters to forsake their prior political predilections. I cannot evaluate—that is a word which I ought to use, I suppose, since my candidate, Herbert Hoover, is an engineer—the relative strength of the hegira from the two parties respectively. I believe the Republicans will benefit from it more largely than the Democrats, who will make their gains chiefly from the deluded wets who expect Governor Smith to smite the rock of the 18th amendment and to cause copious streams of alcoholic refreshment to flow therefrom not later than Nov.

Plenty of Time

There is ample time, I believe between now and Nov. 6 to prove to the thinking members of that group that there is nothing doing. But there never will be time enough for our opponents to reconvert those Democrats who feel that their party was ravished at Houston and who intend to wipe out the stain which they believe has been put upon the party escutcheon.

The real issues of this campaign are not to be found in the platforms of the parties, nor even in the acceptance speeches of the candidates. New political methods and new political points of view arising from the slackening of partisanship cause elections nowadays to turn chiefly upon the personality of the aspirants, and the final verdict is reached upon a scrutiny of the abilities, the training, the equipment and the qualifications of the candidates.

I think that within a month we shall find the country discussing not so much the platforms adopted at Kansas City and Houston, nor wet and dry, nor Tammany and anti-Tammany—save as these elements enter by implication into the problem—but discussing two men, Herbert Hoover and Alfred E. Smith.

Admires Smith

No one can have a greater admiration—of a kind—for Governor Smith than I do. But there is nothing in his career to awaken this admiration which I cannot equal or excel in the career of my candidate. And I am no more than an average voter. In consequence, the reaction of the study of these two men in my mind will be produced in the minds of other voters who will constitute a majority of the electorate.

Therefore, I feel certain of Hoover's election. But to elect Hoover will be only half, a victory if we do not elect a Republican congress to march with him in these immediate days when great economic problems must be taken up and solved by legislation. The Hoover landslide, which I confidently anticipate, will carry the house of representatives with him and we should certainly gain nine seats in the senate now held by Democrats. This will give us an unshakable control of the senate and assure Mr. Hoover of a solidarity of support which has been lacking to Republican presidents of the last six years.

I am not unmindful of the hopeful boasting with which Democratic leaders now indulge themselves; but I am sure that election day will bring them to a state of chastened melancholy.

Imposing Array of Women Will Take Stump for Alfred Smith

NEW YORK, Sept. 4. (US)—More than one thousand women will soon be on the stump for Alfred E. Smith, according to Mrs. Mary T. Norton, chief of the Democratic national speakers bureau.

While many will talk over the radio, hundreds will tour their respective states in motor cars.

Among the women orators will be Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Nellie Taylor Ross, former governor of Wyoming; Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, Mrs. John Harmen Amen, daughter of the late President Cleveland; Lillian Wald, Annie Mathews, Mrs. Carroll Miller, Jean Norris, Mrs. Daniel O'Day, Mrs. Martin Vogel, Mrs. William H. Goode, Mrs. Vanderbilt Webb and Mrs. John Blair.

"Our women are not only prominent in politics but include society women, professional women, social workers and actresses. Nearly all are accustomed to platform work. Each state will furnish at least three motor cars to aid in fulfilling speaking engagements. Eighteen states have been chartered. The remainder of the 48 will be chartered long before election day. Campaign literature will be distributed by girls en route."

Work Predicts Maine Will Go Republican

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4. (UP)—Maine will go Republican by a majority as large or larger than four years ago in the Maine primary to be held Monday, Sept. 10, Chairman Hubert Work of the Republican national committee predicted today. He has just returned from conferences with Maine leaders.

"Two issues make a particular appeal to the voters of Maine," he said, "the tariff and prohibition. Maine was the home of Dingley; it recalls his valiant work for the protective policy and protective tariff legislation, and is wedded to the protective principle. Maine also is one of the oldest prohibition states, and that issue is as effective today as it has been any time in the past."

Vets for Smith Fight Appointed by Allen

NEW YORK, Sept. 4. (AP)—Maj. Gen. Henry T. Allen, commander after the armistice of the American forces on the Rhine and now head of the National Organization of World War veterans for Governor Smith, issued at Democratic national headquarters today a list of former soldiers throughout the country who will be his lieutenants in this campaign.

"The object of our activity will be to espouse the cause of aggressive democracy as expounded by the Houston platform," General Allen said.

For Oklahoma—James Hatcher, Chickasha, and James F. Rollings, Tulsa; for Texas—John C. Townes, Houston; Capt. Bufort Jester, Corsicana, and Frank McGee, Fort Worth.

FARM CREDIT IS HEALTHIER

Agrarians in Better Shape to Use Incomes

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
NEW YORK, Sept. 4. (US)—American farmers will be in position to apply a larger proportion of current income to new purchases than in any previous year since the post-war deflation.

Even in sections where crop conditions have been satisfactory for the last three years, prudent agrarians used a substantial part of their income to liquidate outstanding, overdue bank loans. The most efficient farmers have this season reached a stage where they are out of debt, and can utilize current income to purchase farm machinery, automobiles, radios and general merchandise.

Accordingly the passing of the period of excessive frozen loans in agrarian districts not only marks a return to healthier credit conditions, but also signifies an enchantment in buying power.

Reports to this column from well informed bankers in the key agricultural districts indicate that such a trend is widespread.

Rutter's Opinion

Commenting on new tendencies in the Pacific northwest, R. L. Rutter, president of the Spokane and Eastern Trust company, in a message to this column, said: "Conditions in the inland empire, of which Spokane is the center, are exceedingly good. You are perhaps aware that for three consecutive years our wheat farmers had better than average yields and received above average prices for their products. This enabled them to pay off their debts and become heavy potential purchasers of manufactured products, making business in the towns and cities exceptionally good.

"This year, our wheat crop is just above the normal, although the price is a little below what it has been. Our apple crop is unusually large and a large amount of labor will be required to take care of it. Livestock men are feeling happy over the high prices which they obtain. Their animals are going to market in splendid condition and bringing net returns that are encouraging. Our mines are humming along as merrily as ever. Lumber is the only thing that is dragging, but as only a comparatively small percentage of our income is from lumber, we are experimenting no ill effects from that quarter.

"Our merchants report sales as good. Some of them tell us their volume is running as high as 50 per cent above last year. The fall business should still further increase this volume as our people are in shape where they can afford to spend money freely."

Another reliable listing post in that region is W. L. Thompson, president of the Pacific Coast Joint Stock Land bank, at Portland, Ore., who declares: "It is our opinion that the buying power of this district will continue good the remainder of this year, provided the lumber industry maintains its present status. The Northwest is vitally affected by the lumber operations, both in pine and fir. For the past 90 days the large manufacturers have been controlling their output, which has resulted in better prices."

Slender Lines of Dress Replaced

LONDON, Sept. 4. (UP)—The opening British autumn fashion exhibition at the Olympia revealed that the willowy form has gone forever and in its place has come the "bollowy form."

The long-triumphant boyish, slender, straight figure has faded out before the new ideal—graceful feminine lines.

There were radical changes to be seen at the exhibition and there is every indication that short skirts and slim waistelines will go the way the "boyish bob" is supposed to have gone to oblivion.

Practically all modes show longer skirts and frocks with pronounced waistelines. Not a single skirt exhibited showed the knees of its wearer.

The most popular colors for fall and winter costumes were indicated as reddish purple, brown purple, gunmetal, peridot green and tawny.

CHASE TRIES TO TRIP SMITH

Says Al Was Wrong About Wilson's Dry Veto

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4. (AP)—In an open letter to Governor Smith, William Sheafe Chase, superintendent of the Inter-National Reform federation, today charged the Democratic presidential nominee with having depicted inaccurately in his acceptance speech the prohibition record of the late President Woodrow Wilson.

The governor was declared by Dr. Chase to have misrepresented the "motive of Mr. Wilson in vetoing the Volstead act." Governor Smith, he added, owes to himself and the people of the country "to set forth accurately," the views and public record of Mr. Wilson.

Wilson in vetoing the Volstead act based his disapproval, Dr. Chase declared, on legal methods laid down by the measure rather than the principle of prohibition.

Chicago Terrorism to Be Probed Further

Proper Way to Write a Love Letter Is Don't—So Says Dorothy Dix

The Silly Effusions That a Young Girl Writes to the Man She Is In Love With Make Her An Object of Ridicule to Others, and Are Sure to Cause Her Tears of Mortification and Repentance.

I have a note from a young girl in which she asks me how to write a love letter.

To this I can only reply, with all the fervor of which I am capable that the only proper way to write a love letter is not to write it at all.

Believe me, daughter, there is nothing in after years that you will recall with such deep and abiding thankfulness as the fact that you stayed your hand when tempted to write gush and mush to some callow and conceited youth. The love letter that he looked for and that never came has saved many a girl tears and mortification.

To tell your love, to talk sentimental twaddle, is bad enough, heaven knows, but it is not in the same class with the folly of writing it; and if girls could only realize how unmaidenly, how indelicate, how actually vulgar their words of endearment look on paper, they would no more think of pinning the 12-page effusions they now dash off to any Tom, Dick and Harry, khom they happen to fancy at the minute, than they would deliberately bespatter themselves with mud.

The absolute abandon with which girls and women write compromising letters is one of the amazing vagaries of the feminine temperament. They have no hesitancy about telling a man in a letter that they are pining for his society finding life a howling desert without him, and sending him a million kisses.

Mr. Barrie, in one of his delightful books, confesses that he can never write the word "darling" without blushing violently and twisting his legs around the table for support. These intrepid young ladies, however, have not the slightest hesitation in calling a strange man "darling," "dearest," "precious heart," a hundred times in one missive. I was once privileged to peruse a billet doux in which the writer required three entire lines across the paper to get in all of the terms of endearment she felt it necessary to use.

Love letters are bade enough, in all conscience, when they are really the heart's outpourings, and when the writer is brimming over with emotion for which she must find a vent or burst; but strange as it is, half the time the girl who perpetrates these incriminating documents is not really in love at all. She is merely writing love letters because she thinks that it is poetical, and romantic, and she fancies herself in a poetic and romantic role.

As a matter of fact, a woman's passion for writing love letters can only be compared to a drunkard's thirst for drink. She always has a craving for it, and the instant she dips her pen in ink she is off on a sentimental jag. She can't stop. She knows she is writing too much. She loses her head, and no more realizes the import of what she writes than the drunkard knows what he is saying when he weeps maudlin tears against a lamp-post.

The danger of writing love letters is so obvious that it seems unnecessary even to speak of it. Many men are dishonorable enough to exhibit their sentimental effusions frfom girls as a proof of what havoc they make among the fair sex. Many other men—in fact, all men—are careless about letters, and, indeed, why should they be more careful of a girl's dignity than she is herself? At any rate, even the man who los too much of a gentleman deliberately to show a girl's letters, leaves them around in old coat pockets, in bureau drawers, in desks, and in other places where any prying eye that chooses may read.

If any girl believes that the man who receives her effusions burns them up, or locks them away in his safety deposit box, she had better disbuse her mind of that illusion at once. The chances are that, even if the man doesn't display her letters to his friends, the chambermaid at his boarding house and the offic eboy at his place of business have perused her tender secrets with gusto.

Nor is there any telling into whose hands such letters will fall. Once upon a time I was personally acquainted with a dear, sweet, good little girl, who had a considerable facilitiy with the pen and could write love letters that fairly sizzled with their warmth. Of course, the temptation to indulge herself in an emotional debauch was too much for this little sister, and every time she got on corresponding terms with a man she would be betrayed into writing him tender, soulful things that she didn't mean, and which the man knew she didn't mean, but which would have mortified her to death had they been made public.

Now it chance dthat among my little friend's correspondents was a man who turned out to ba blackmailer, and it took several thousand dollars and a lawyer to get these billet doux back to the writer's father and keep her out of a hideous scandal. For the things girls write in their silly, gushing innocence look mighty sinister and compromising when they are published on the front page of a newspaper.

Why any mother lets her aughter correspond with men passes my cmoprehension. No girl should be permitted to write regularly to any man to whom she is not engaged, with the wedding day set and close at hand.

For the temptation to write sentiment is more than the average flapper can resist, and it is a mother's duty to stand over her with a big blue pencil and edit her correspondence, and thereby save her from making a fool of herself.

Don't write love letters, daughter. Men will respect you more for not doing it, and you will save yourself from bitter humiliation and tears of regret.

CHIC CHERIE

(Copyright, 1928, King Features Syn. Inc.)

Latest Fashions

Cherie is one of the ladies who take the fashion news seriously and Cherie has heard it said that this is going to be a suit season—that's why she and Dina are trying on blouses. There's no use trying to buy a suit until one has decided on the blouses, of course, the blouse being the more colorful and decorative part of the costume. Ernest is silent whether with amazement or disgust no one will ever know because he won't be asked. The blouse Cherie is wearing with such nonchalant grace is metallic cloth in several shades of brown and gold. (That would mean a brown velvet suit) Dina's blouse is white crepe de chine with half a collar and a bow (meaning, of course, a suit of tweed).

If Cherie buys this blouse of marron crepe satin with its appliqued front of the crepe side, she will buy a suit of cashmere or kasha or such. If Dina buys the blouse she is wearing she will want a suit of velvet, certainly. Nothing else would look so well with a blouse of sheer patterned metal cloth with its stripes running diagonally and filled in with half a dozen different colors. The blouse Dina holds in her little hot hand is black chiffon with woven bands of sheer black velvet. You'll notice that there's great variety in the necklines and neck finishings, that the sleeves are still quite plain, although we were given to expect they'd be fancy, and that trimmings are simple.

James O. Hale And Miss Thomason Wed

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Velma Thomason, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Thomason, and James O. Hale, which took place Saturday evening at 9 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents. The ring ceremony was read by Dr. Nat F. Grafton, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, in the presence of relatives and intimate friends.

An improvised altar was formed in the living room with cut flowers arranged in heart shape and carrying out a color scheme of pink and blue. Cathedral candles were on each side. Attendants were Miss Ruth Thomason and Joe Bailey Howard.

Preceding the ceremony Misses Gene Fisk and Frances Phillips sang "At Dawning," accompanied at the piano by Miss Lorene Tucker, who also played softly, "I Love You Truly," while the ceremony was being read.

The bride wore a gown of Alice blue georgette with trimmings of flesh chiffon with slippers and hose to harmonize and carried a shower bouquet of tube roses and bridal wreath. Miss Ruth Thomason wore a flesh colored crepe gown with cream lace trimmings.

Following the ceremony an informal reception for the bridal party, relatives and a few friends was held at the home of the bride's parents, after which they were honorees at one given by W. J. Howard and Joe Bailey Howard.

The couple are well known and popular in the school set, both having attended the local high school. They left for a visit with relatives and friends in Tennessee and Kentucky following the ceremony, and will be at home at Paducah, Ky.

The new Buick is the new Style

More than handsome···more than luxurious···a wonderful new type of motor car beauty··a thrilling turning point in body design
It will be imitated, of course! The new, the fine and the beautiful always inspire emulation. But so great is the cost of building the magnificent new Fisher bodies for the Silver Anniversary Buick that imitation will be possible only to much costlier cars, and even these will find difficulty in following where Buick leads!
$1,500,000 has been expended in manufacturing the dies alone for the new Buick bodies; and the gracefully curving side panels which form one of their distinguishing characteristics represent the most expensive steel paneling work employed on any automobile in the world!
But it is not in the matchless grace and beauty of exterior design alone that the Silver Anniversary Buick eclipses other cars. The velvet mohair upholstery in the closed models—the hardware and fitments—the many appointments of luxury and convenience—are all of the richest quality; and the bracing of the bodies, which imparts strength and durability and freedom from squeaks and rattles, is the most efficient and effective known to motor car practice.
In dashing beauty—as in fleet, powerful performance—the world holds no equal for the Silver Anniversary Buick with Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher.
It is more than handsome, more than luxurious—it marks a thrilling turning point in body design. And the motoring public, buying in such tremendous volume as to force the great Buick factories to work day and night to supply the demand, is elevating it to the prominence of a vogue!

NEW PRAISES AIR SERVICE

Immense Development of Field Reviewed

Editor's Note:—Gigantic expansion of the air mail service, with night flying airways and total mileage surpassing that of all Europe was revealed today by Postmaster General New whose work in establishing Uncle Sam's air mail as a thorough success has blazed the way for the unparalleled growth of commercial aviation. His article follows:

By HARRY S. NEW
Postmaster General
(Written expressly for Universal Service and the Record News)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—Never in the world's history has time been so important an element in the transport of mail as it is today. The overland mail saved weeks over the Panama route to California and the pony express cut days from the stage coach schedule. But the air mail has reduced the factor to hours. And it is the airplane which will hold sway until some faster means of communication is at hand.

The air mail has proved itself. It has justified the months and years spent in experimentation. It has at last struck the chord of popular favor and its days of struggling and pioneering are over.

American capital is being invested and invested generously in the new industry. Almost daily new projects are being launched and new organizations formed. The battle is on for control of the American skyways just as the railroads fought a few decades ago for control of rail routes.

Slow Development

American capital had been unusually slow in visualizing the future of commerce aeronautics. It looked askance upon the air lines of Europe which, while spreading rapidly and apparently efficiently, were depending for maintenance upon heavy governmental subsidies.

Air routes in America, fostered by the postoffice department, were developing slowly, groping their way toward self-support without the aid of the subsidy that never has and never will find popular favor in this country.

But with a number of air mail contractors showing that they are not only holding their own but that some of them are making a profit, the leash has been cut and the restrained capital is eagerly pouring into the new enterprise.

The five cent air mail rate which became effective Aug. 1, is the stimulant that the air mail has needed. With only three cents difference over the regular mail postage American business, and the average citizen, writing to Aunt Julia or Cousin Henry are both rejecting the added expense in favor of speed.

Mail Increases

So great has been the demand for the faster service that air mail contractors, especially in the west, are being given more mail than they can conveniently carry. In some instances passenger traffic has been crowded off because the mails must go first. The Chicago-San Francisco air line, has ordered 25 new passenger planes and a number of much larger planes than those now in use for the exclusive handling of mail. The new mail planes will have a capacity of 1800 pounds—just short of a ton—and a cruising speed of 120 miles an hour. Other companies are following suit.

Aviation is advancing so rapidly in America that almost before a plane is in the air a larger, better, and faster one is being laid down in the factory—and needed before completion of construction.

Planes are being produced in the United States at the rate of 500 monthly, or more than two and one-half times as fast as last year. The total production last year was slightly in excess of 2300 planes.

Lighted Airways

The United States now has 7,698 miles of lighted airways for night flying, with 5308 additional miles in prospect during the present fiscal year. America far exceeds Europe in this respect, as well as in the total of air mail mileage and, within three years, bids fair to take the lead in passenger transport.

Indicative of what is to come in the transportation of mail by air was the shipment of the Reo Motor company of Lansing, Mich., on Aug. 21, of some 10 tons of mail matter. This was the largest single air mail shipment ever made. Eighteen planes were required to carry this load to Chicago where it was distributed over various other air mail lines for transportation throughout the country.

The postmaster general has received letters from numerous concerns ranking among the largest in the country announcing their intention of using the air mail wherever possible to expedite orders of customers and in communication with field forces and branch offices.

Many Wichitans Rejoice at Rescue Of Cramer, Advisor On Airport Here

Joy was expressed Monday by many Wichitans over the rescue of Parker Cramer, one of the heroes of the Hassell-Cramer expedition that came to an end on the Sukkertoppen ice arm near Mount Evans, Greenland.

Mr. Cramer is known here better as P. D. Cramer, inspector of the aviation division of the U. S. department of commerce. As an inspector his headquarters were at Houston.

He has many personal friends here and has been entertained by C. W. Cahoon Jr., Fulcher Armstrong and others.

Roy French, former pilot of the Wichita Falls Air Transport company, received his pilot's license from Cramer.

R. M. Browning took his first tests under Cramer.

Cramer was the first government man to view Kell field, the present municipal field, and to approve the idea of the location and the terrain, long before it was announced or made public that the location was under consideration.

He was introduced at the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce by Mr. Cahoon, and at one time addressed a session of the officers and directors of the chamber on airports.

OH, THESE WOMEN ! ! !

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, Sept. 4. (US)—A snappy little girl in a 57th street beauty parlor said proudly that she had given 13 "finger waves" that day and had six more appointments coming. "And I love my work, that's why I do it well, and people ask for me," she said proudly.

"I tell you it takes women to do beauty work on women," said the girl, shaking her head and looking very serious. "Men don't worry about their customers. They think women are silly over their looks anyway, but women know how important it is."

There aren't any more grandmothers, in the old fashioned sense of the word. And of course no more knitting, and now there aren't going to be any more wars.

But the divorce courts will continue to do more than their quota of business.

Saw some little pink silk petticoats in a glass showcase in a big department store.

"Oh," I said with surprise, "I didn't know anyone wore them!"

The clerk, sniffing the air and raising her eyebrows, said: "Huh, they came back strong this season Everybody is wearing them."

But I could have started a lively argument on that score. I have just gone through a windy week in which the tiny pleated, thin silk skirts of the girls were hoisted daily above their rolled garters, and I want to say right now that what revealed was not petticoats, but little silk panties sparse like trunks.—If the girls are wearing petticoats, it's the mail order trade.

I might add that when the silk skirts blow, no one stops even to look that way,—the doctors who write columns about the immoral influence of the short skirt notwithstanding. The kind of people who act or speak in an unseemly manner over one of these short skirt exposes, are not worth writing columns about.

A woman psychologist of London says that men are contented because they are easily pleased with homely things.

Y-e-s—they are! When you see a man with a "homely thing," he doesn't look either pleaser or happy.

"Social success passes for happiness with many women," says the same doctor. It is happiness for many. I know one who lost her husband and children because social success meant more to her than they did.

I knew another woman whose husband always stayed home and whose sons, even after they married, were always glad of the opportunity to get back to mother's house. I was having luncheon at that home one day when a woman phoned who was that day giving a luncheon for this very woman, and she wondered, it being an hour late, why she didn't appear.

The reason she didn't, was that she was having such a good time at home with her family, that she forgot it. She lives in Denver!

Mesquite Brush Used To Combat Boll Worm

BALLINGER, Texas, Sept. 4. (AP)—Mesquite brush now is playing a part in the fight against the boll worm.

C. W. Lehmberg, county agent, says the thorny brush, when tied to the front of the cultivator, rubs against the cotton stalk and together with the plowing, keeps the worm agitated so he cannot work. The scheme was tried to good effect by R. L. Bates, a farmer of the Novice community, according to Agent Lehmberg.

CHURCH PLEA IS RENEWED

Strained Relations With Italy Attract Comment

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 4. (UP)—Questions of finance and the last rumblings of the "religious revolution" held the attention of the nation tonight after the unanimous sympathy expressed for President Calles' declaration that militarism has ended in Mexico.

The strained relations between Mexico and Italy also were widely discussed in diplomatic circles as a result of the president's reference to the situation in the important opening address to congress Saturday night.

The Italian minister, Gino Macchioro Vivalba, declined to comment on the part of President Calles' address referring to the tense situation existing in regard to diplomatic relations, but the full text of the address has been sent by cable to Rome where it will be given close scrutiny.

Catholics Bring Plea

Catholics presented to congress today a memorial asking for a reform in law pertaining to religious institutions. It was signed by 138 prominent persons.

The petition asks for the same constitutional reforms which Bishop De la Mora recently outlined in an interview with correspondents here.

It especially emphasizes the necessity for liberty in educational institutions.

In order to establish true religious liberty in Mexico, the petition said, three steps are necessary. First, that legal existence of personally distinct denominations be recognized; second, that separation of the church from the state be recognized and that the state, consequently, should not legislate in regard to religion; third, that separation should be based, not on system of hostility, but on a basis of friendly cooperation.

Practically the same memorial was presented to congress two years ago but was not acted upon.

People Support Calles

Newspaper comment today emphasized the fact that the nation is firmly behind the president's declarations and the newspaper Universal said "renunciation of President Calles' suggestions would be an inexcusable disgrace."

The religious rebellion has been suppressed except in six states, according to a report published today.

The finance ministry reported that during the current year the treasury had not paid anything on the nation's obligations because the payments were held up pending results of an attempt to reach a new agreement.

CHANNEL PORT TO BE DREDGED

Galveston to Have Deepest Harbor on Gulf

GALVESTON, Sept. 4. (AP)—Memories of the past when ships were unable to come to the docks because of shallow water are were compelled to unload cargoes into lighters while anchored well out at sea are recalled here with beginning of dredging work which will give Galveston channel the greatest depth on the gulf coast west of the Mississippi river.

More than half a century ago, before railroads became important factors in transportation between Texas and the older sections of the United States, virtually all the commerce of the Southwest moved through Galveston, then a small but thriving island port.

Full-rigged sailing vessels and ships in which "tea kettle" boilers were only incidental to the white spread of canvas aloft brought to the Southwest through Galveston all the manufactured articles, foodstuffs, clothing and supplies consumed in the fast-growing territory. And with Texas cotton stowed in their holds these vessels sailed back to New England or to European countries.

Ships Couldn't Enter

Years after the war between the states the depth of water over the bars across the channel leading to Galveston harbor was only from eight to twelve feet, and fully loaded ships could neither enter nor leave port.

At the behest of Galveston and southwestern shippers, seeking an outlet for their agricultural products, the federal government was prevailed on to aid and a stone jetty was thrown up into the gulf to restrain the tidal sweep from silting the channel. Later the government selected Galveston as the point for building a new deepwater harbor between the Mississippi and the Rio Grande and the present jetty system was developed.

A depth of 25, and later of 30 feet, was attained, the latter having been sufficient in recent years to handle the largest ships trading in the gulf. But with larger ships being constructed and heavy deadweight cargoes of grain, cotton and sulphur moving from Galveston, a new project depth of 35 feet for the outer channel and 32 feet along the waterfront has been adopted and more than $600,000 appropriated for the work. The new depth will make it possible for almost the largest vessels afloat to load here.

Six Months Required

Four million yards of material will be removed from the channel along the waterfront to reach the depth of 32 feet, with an additional overdepth of two feet being allowed to care for silting. The work probably will require six months or more. The material is being pumped chiefly on Pelican Spit, a small island fronting Galveston channel and it is expected the grade of the land will be raised several feet, making available several industrial sites. The remainder of the material is to be pumped behind the new East End seawall on Galveston island. The work is being done under contract by a dredging company under supervision of army engineers.

Port Officials To Meet at Galveston

HOUSTON, Texas, Sept. 4. (AP)—More than 100 port officials from all sections of the United States and Canada are expected to attend the seventeenth annual convention of the American Association of Port Authorities here Nov. 12-14, the local arrangements committee has announced.

At the convention, several speeches are to be presented by outstanding port authorities of the United States, including one by Dr. Boris Stern of the United States Bureau of Labor statistics. His paper will deal with productivity and industrial equipment in United States harbors.

Robert T. Thackera, chairman of the United States intercoastal conference, also will have a paper on what steamship interests expect of port officials, and John Nicholson, director of traffic for the United States shipping board, another on free zones.

Gulf coast officials on the program include Port Director E. C. Allin of Houston; F. W. Parker, general manager of the Galveston Wharf company; Port Director H. J. Luhn of Lake Charles, La.; Shelby Wiggins, director of the Beaumont board of dock and wharf commissioners.

On Nov. 15 the convention will recess for a one-day trip to and tour of Galveston.

Frats to Be Kind To Green Rushees

AUSTIN, Sept. 4. (AP)—Through their governing body, the inter-fraternity council, fraternities of the University of Texas this year have forbidden themselves the former custom of pre-rushing, hiding out of rushees and indiscriminate breaking of engagements by rushees.

The rushees, as the students who are considered for fraternity membership are called, are the center of attraction during the annual rush week which begins on Sept. 17 this year.

The usual procedure of a fraternity during rush week is to impress the innocent freshmen of the glories accruing from membership in that club. Penalties have been provided for violation of any of the regulations, such as loss of right to initiate for a stated period or levying of fines on the offending fraternity.

VETS TO MEET WITH LEGION

36th Division to Assemble At San Antonio

GREENVILLE, Texas, Sept. 4. (AP)—The annual reunion of the 36th Division association will be held at San Antonio, October 8 to 12 with the national American Legion convention, Col. Hal C. Horton, president, announced here today.

The reunion had been scheduled for November 11 at Fort Worth, but by unanimous vote the change was made. The 1929 meeting will be held in Fort Worth, Colonel Horton said.

The 36th division comprised Texas and Oklahoma national guardsmen in the world war.

New West Texas Road Route Inspected

COLORADO, Texas, Sept. 4. (AP)—A logging committee for the Panhandle-Rio Grande Highway association has completed a tour of the proposed route from Del Rio, through Sonoro, Christoval, San Angelo, Sterling, Colorado, Snyder, Clairmont, Jayton, Spur, Dickens, Matador, Turkey, Estelline, Memphis and Pampa.

The committee, under chairmanship of J. H. Greene of Colorado, is to report a definite route for the proposed highway. Mr. Greene said residents at points visited promised full cooperation. It is understood Mexican officials have promised to extend the road into Mexico to intersect a highway already leading to Mexico City.

"When the wicked man turneth away from his wickedness that he hath committed, and doeth that which is lawful and right, he shall save his soul alive."—Ezekiel xviii. 27.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—Of all the strange stories lived daily in and about New York, perhaps one of the strangest is that of the "barge children". They are the spawn of the harbor reared among the docks, uneducated and unknown. There are literally hundreds of barges in New York harbor, shifted from point to point and dock to dock by the tugs that puff eternally about the shipping. On each barge a man is stationed. He has a cabin in which he keeps house. Many of these men are married and their tiny homes are arranged in ship-shape at one end of the barge with clean white curtains in the Lilliputian windows and a row of flower pots on the sill. Frequently there is a string of clothes flying merrily from a line strung across the top of the barge.

The children of these families are not registered in any district. There is no way of checking up on them. The barges are shifting from one dock to another, from the East river to the North river, from Brooklyn to the Jersey river. And with them go the families that live on them. It has been estimated that there are in the neighborhood of 1500 children thus born and raised on barges. These barge children are raised without education. They attend no school. They probably see very little except the docks and the river front. New York to them in a place of smelly docks, distant buildings, and eternally flowing brown water.

One part of New York has recently acquired prominence. It is Harlem, the colored section, a city within a city. The negroes have gone far toward establishing their community on a completely independent basis. All the stores and theaters are negro owned and operated. Colored men and women fill the streets, dressed in the latest attire. They have their own night clubs. White people in search of a new thrill are continually invading the black districts. Harlem night clubs have come to be a fad.

The black man has achieved a new race consciousness and pride that is finding expression in many fields. His contribution to literature and music is one of the most valuable artistic contributions this country has made. I stood on a corner in Harlem not so long ago and listened to a colorful old negro lecture on the possibilities of his race. He adjured the group of listners to remember that they were negroes, to be proud of it, to patronize negro stores and organizations, to find their amusement and social activities among themselves. In scathing terms he denounced the traitors who descended to the use of anti-kink and who sought to associate with white folks. The listners were for the most part well-dressed colored men, who grinned in appreciation and drifted on up the street. The old parish who was delivering this soap box oration waved his arms and thumped majestically with his cane. His black face gleamed with the intensity of his utterance.

GRANDMA'S PLACE

The weeds have grown in grandma's yard;
The fence is old and torn.
The lawn is grown in knee-high grass,
The lawn once smoothly shorn.
Her cedars grow in ragged clumps;
Her garden's black and bare.
For grandma now has gone away;
No other seems to care.

And there's the trellis that she loved,
That once bore rambler rose,
All rotten; half has fallen down
In winter's icy blows.
The old brick walk she used to roam,
With grass is overgrown;
And there's the peach tree that she loved;
As dead and cold as stone.
Her clean back yard is choked with weeds.
That winds of time have sown.

But grandma now has gone away;
No human labors there
To keep the old place looking nice;
No other seems to care.

New Ways to Get Killed

HUMAN nature and human standards being what they are, the number of ways of getting into a fatal argument is almost infinite. But James Smith of Manchester, Ky., found one that seems to be unique.

Smith happened into a residence in the mountains in which a prayer meeting was in progress. Sitting down, he lighted a cigaret and puffed away. A tall mountaineer arose to remonstrate. Bitter words followed; and a moment later someone produced a shotgun and Smith was shot to death.

Getting killed on account of a cigaret is a new one. The little story helps to give a picture of what life among some of the isolated mountain towns of the interior is like.

800 Cigarets Apiece

RECORDS of the internal revenue department reveal that the American people in the past year smoked the astounding number of 100,000,000,000 cigarets—more than 800 apiece.

That seems like a perfectly enormous number of cigarets. At first glance one would think that the number must be away too high. But on examination it becomes more reasonable.

Figure it out. The average confirmed cigaret smoker consumes about a package a day—20 cigarets. Multiplied by 365, this becomes 7,300 cigarets a year. Divide 100 billion by this figure and you get not quite 13,700,000 as the number of steady cigaret smokers in the land.

And that, out of a total population of 120,000,000, isn't so bad.

More Work Per Man

GOVERNMENT reports aren't always the most interesting reading in the world, but now and then they contain statements that provoke thought.

The Department of Commerce recently issued a report on the nation's business for the first half of 1928. After pointing out that business conditions were good and that production was high, the report made this amazing statement:

"In manufacturing, the output per worker averaged about 43 per cent higher in 1927 than in 1919."

That one sentence contains implications of a whole new social and economic system. It will bear a good deal of pondering. Man's capacity to make things has increased enormously. The results will be of incalculable scope.

Franco-British Diplomacy

THE old pre-war habits of secret diplomacy and mysterious international "understandings" seem to have too firm a grip on some European chancelleries to be shaken off.

A case in point is the much-discussed "naval entente" between England and France.

All that is known of this agreement is what the British and French officials have let fall—disconnected hints, capable of varying interpretations. It is only natural, therefore, that some other nations should be growing suspicious and should find in this new entente, not a step toward armament reduction, but a new alliance that may lead toward anything but peace.

That is the chief trouble with secret diplomacy. If this Franco-British understanding is the inocuous, virtuous agreement its sponsors say it is, let them publish the full text. If they do not they have only themselves to blame if other nations misinterpret it and suspect the worst.

The Fires Within Us

Trying to trace the causes of human behavior is fascinating. What makes people do as they do? Why is such and such a man a good citizen for a score of years, and then, abruptly, an embezzler or a thief? What are the mysterious forces that fill the human heart, silently, year by year, until suddenly they cause an unlooked-for explosion?

The papers printed an interesting picture the other day; a picture of a California Chinese, Loy Yoeng, who had been a cook on a ranch. Loy had been well behaved and quiet enough for years; but one day, without any apparent reason, he went on a frightful rampage with a gun. Before he was captured and disarmed he had killed 10 persons.

The picture showed a rather slight, composed man of placid appearance. His face had an expression of quiet repose. Whatever his secret may be, it will never be betrayed by anything anyone can see in his eyes. Dumb, uncomprehending and puzzling, this stolid Chinese cook will never explain or protest. And we will never know just what made him fly into such a strange, incomprehensible fury.

It is easy enough to make conjectures. A Chinese cook on a California ranch can hardly have a very good time of it. Beneath his surface placidity he may suffer great woes and nourish grandiose schemes or revenge. Yet we cannot find out. In due time Loy Yoeng will be executed and forgotten; but before that happens we should like to know what ailed him.

His is an extreme case. Yet, basically, it is like all others. We never know what moves our fellow citizens. Locked in every man's breast there are struggles, defeats, disappointments and outlandish hopes enough to amaze us if we could see them. They ferment together and produce unlooked-for reaction; a Judd Gray helps a woman murder her husband, a Jesse Smith kills himself when at the height of worldly success—and all we can do is ask "Why?"

There are murky depths in human nature. Strange fires can smoulder in them and produce startling conflagrations and explosions. We can seldom understand just why people do the foolish, criminal, bizarre things they do. But we might at least bear in mind always that we do not know the whole story. We can reserve judgment and have, if not understanding, at least a measure of sympathy.

The FORBIDDEN DOOR — by Herman Landon

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

Old Wisthrop Martenet, famed but eccentric scientist, who died seven years before the story opens, was survived by Maxwell Martenet, his rather colorless son, who mysteriously disappeared and has been given up for dead for the last four years by Julia, his wife, and Hannan, his son, who inherited his grandfather's strength of character. On his return from abroad, Hannan is given a letter by Mr. Curry, the family lawyer, written by Old Wisthrop himself, warning the young man against Horace Peters, and finishing with the command, "Don't open the iron door until the clock stops." At Valhalla Notch, Old Wisthrop's mountain estate, a strange clock and an iron door guard the secret which Ernest Mallingham endeavors unsuccessfully to discover. His attempts to stop the clock by dynamite finally bury the house, with all its guests in a landslide. Viola Lang, pretty but mysterious girl, also tries to unravel the mystery. John Breck, the caretaker, Runty Duck, a guest, Kate Wynne, a maid, and Dr. Speck, a physician, all try vainly to penetrate the secret of the iron door.

A Meeting in the Dark

With a soft laugh Hannan hurried away as rapidly as his troublesome foot would permit. Once in the tangle of halls and corridors that criss-crossed the house, there was little danger that Mallingham would overtake him. The darkness was a thing in Hannan's favor, for he had an instinct for finding his way in unlighted places. He knew it must be daylight now, but no sun would shine through the windows of Valhalla Notch this morning. It was even a little doubtful whether he should ever see the light of day again.

An uneasy hush hovered over the house. Here and there voices were whispering. Now and then came the dreary monotone of footsteps restlessly pacing the floors.

Hannon opened a door and looked in. A candle was burning on the mantel-shelf. A tall, gangling, youngish man with red hair sat beside a black-haired girl. They were holding hands, but they were silent. Neither of them noticed Hannan. He smiled and walked away. Up a stairway he went, noticing that the air was thick with sand and plaster dust. He ascended another flight of stairs and turned toward the south wing. Now and then he stumbled over piles of debris. In these upper spaces there was a constant and ominous creaking and grinding, making him feel that a crash was imminent.

Suddenly he stopped and hugged close to the wall. A door had opened at the farther end of the hall, and now footsteps were coming toward him. From the character of the sounds Hannan tried to gain an impression of the size and weight of the person approaching. With darkness all around and his ears keyed to a high degree of acuteness, the sound of a footfall told a great deal. This person was small and light and evidently anxious to make as little noise as possible.

As the footsteps passed, he caught the faintest whiff of perfume. He waited, and a few paces farther on the footfalls paused. A door opened, then closed. For a moment he listened, then turned the knob noiselessly and tiptoed inside. It was very still in there; he could not even detect the sound of breathing. For a little while he stood still, all his senses reaching out and raking the blackness. Now a sound came, slight and elusive, but in an instant it registered a meaning on his brain.

"Don't shoot, Viola," he whispered.

A gasp sounded in the darkness.

"Pelly wanted to shoot me. Now it's you. Why do people want to shoot me?"

"Who—who is Pelly?" came in a quavering voice.

"Mallingham. I call him Pelly because I don't like him. I call you Viola because—because I do like you."

She caught her breath. "And who are you?"

"Hannan. I haven't seen you since the time we were in the taxicab. I don't see you now, for that matter. But just wait."

He struck a match and looked about the room. Every room at Valhalla Notch appeared to be equipped with a pair of candles, and so was this one. He lighted one of them, then approached the girl. She stood against the wall, looking half frightened and half amused. A pistol, a small and simple affair, hung limply from her hand.

"No pearl handle," Hannan remarked, examining the weapon. "Don't you know all heroines should carry pearl-handled pistols?"

"But I'm not a heroine."

"Yes, you are. You are stunning, and you are mysterious and full of surprises. You bob up everywhere. Like the wind you come and like the wind you go. What more can one expect of a heroine?"

"Oh, if that's all, I suppose I can qualify."

"You qualify with bells on," Hannan told her. He looked into her pale, delicately rounded face. Her eyes were smiling up at him, but there was a hint of dread in the hazel depths. "I was told you were ill!"

"I was. I had to have a doctor . . . But I'm better now."

Hannan looked deep into the hazel eyes. His own twinkled softly.

"Somebody told me you were on your way to a place called Intervale, but got lost in the storm. Is that true?"

"Doesn't it sound plausible? It was a terrible storm."

"It was a beautiful storm, because it brought you."

"I suppose it would be useless to ask your real reason for coming here?"

The brown head nodded emphatically.

"Who were you looking for when you passed me in the hall?"

"Somebody."

"For me, in other words?"

She looked up and fixed him with a mocking gaze.

"You are just a bit conceited, Mr. Hannan Martenet. I happened to be looking for Mr. Curry. I knew all the time where you were."

Hannan's face sobered. "I'm worried about Mr. Curry. Have you found any trace of him?"

"Not the slightest."

"And have you no idea what became of him?"

"No, not unless—" She faltered.

"Unless Mallingham killed him," Hannan finished for her.

She did not reply. The candle was casting a wavering glow on her pale face. The creaking of straining timbers was the only sound. Here, in the upper parts of the house, the gradual process of destruction sounded louder and more ominous.

"Viola," he whispered.

"Yes, Mr. Hannan Martenet?"

He looked at down at the pistol he was still holding.

"Call me Hannan," he commanded, making a playfully ominous gesture with the pistol. "Call me Hannan, or I shoot!"

"All right—Hannan."

"That's better." He returned the weapon to her. "I want you to tell me a little secret, Viola. You saw something very strange the night you came here. You and the caretaker were in the little hall off the library. Suddenly the door started to open. What else did you see?"

A shudder shook her slim figure. "I wish you wouldn't ask me that, Hannan."

"I must know. You saw some one—some one you knew. Who was it?"

"I'm not sure I—I knew him. I saw the face, only for a second, and then it was gone. It was too awful. Please don't ask me any more, Hannan."

"All right," said Hannan gently, seeing that the recollection, vague and fragmentary though it had been, distressed her. "There is just one thing we ought to be clear about. Do you suppose the person you saw, or thought you saw, is still behind the iron door? If so—"

"No, I'm sure he isn't. He couldn't be, because—" Another paroxysm shook her.

"There now." Impulsively, as if to soothe a hysterical child, he wound his arm about her neck. "I promise to ask no more questions for a while. Brace up, little heroine!"

She gave him a wan, tremulous smile. "Do you suppose," she murmured, "that we shall ever get out of this house alive?"

"I doubt it," said Hannan, and bent over quickly and kissed her. "There—I've lived to kiss you, anyway. Now let fate do its worst!"

A blush rose like a radiant bloom to her pale cheek. "You are a very presumptuous young man," she said reprovingly, removing his arm from her shoulder.

"And a fraud besides." Hannan brazenly confessed. "I stole that kiss under false pretenses. I'm sure everything will come out all right and that I'm going to live long enough to repeat the offense."

"And get your face slapped," she warned him. Suddenly she grew grave. "I wonder what you are thinking of me, Hannan. The way I took the letter away from you when we were in the taxi—"

"Very cleverly done! I envy you your light touch, Viola. Don't think I hold it against you, though. In the first place, you didn't get away with it."

"No," she admitted, a little ruefully. "I didn't."

"And in the second place I suspected that the thing you did wasn't half so wicked as it looked."

"And you still think so?"

"Now I'm sure of it. I'm so sure of it that I'm not going to ask you to explain. Better run along now and get some rest."

She shook her head wearily. "I don't want to go to my room. Whenever I lie down and try to sleep I hear those dreadful noises overhead."

"Then try the library," Hannan suggested. "The noises aren't so bad there, and you will find a comfortable sofa. I'll go with you part of the way."

Hannan blew out the candle and they left the room. Out in the dark hall he took Viola's hand and led her toward the staircase. They were halfway down when a common impulse made them stop and listen. Old Winthrop's clock was striking. The clear, melodious peals reverberated through the uneasy house.

"Eight o'clock!" Viola murmured. "And it's black as midnight. Wonder when we'll see the sun again."

"Oh, soon," said Hannan confidently.

They continued down the stairway as the eighth stroke of the clock sounded below, but suddenly they stopped again. Hannan's fingers closed convulsively about the girl's hand. Silent and quivering, they turned and stared into the darkness.

"What was that?" Viola whispered tensely.

Hannan did not answer. He strained his ears in the direction of the upper landing. A sound, small and vaguely disquieting, came out of the darkness, trembling weirdly against the noises of creaking and sagging timbers.

"Did you hear that?" came again Viola's timid whisper.

Another sound, slight, shapeless, but edged with horrible suggestiveness, floated out to them through the masses of darkness that lay heavily on all sides.

Hannan tightened his grip on her hand. A cold tremor was vibrating along his spine.

"Run down to the library and stay there," he whispered. "I'm going up to investigate. It probably doesn't amount to anything."

He ran back up the stairs, heedless of her whispered protests and the painful twinges in his foot. Viola's little pistol was in his hand, and he recalled what a trifling thing it was. An appalling sound was echoing in his ears, directing his racing steps. In the upper corridor he turned to the left. Ten past the room where he had found Viola, struck his shoulder against a corner as he made a sharp turn, and stopped abruptly before an obstruction.

It was a door. He felt a tight structure at his throat as he fumbled for the knob. The house seemed full of vague and yet terrifying omens of evil. His shaking hand closed about the knob, and then his body stiffened as from a fearful jolt. From the other side of the door came a horse, agonized shout.

"Oh! Don't—don't—"

A sharp sensation went like a shudder through Hannan's brain. Another cry came. The echoes rumbled among the shadows. Then, as he thrust the door open, a groan that stopped curiously in the middle.

He sprang forward, his reeling brain registering the light pat-pat of fleeing feet. Then all was still—ominously still. The darkness, cloaking untold horrors, was dread-inspiring. With a desperate effort he shook off a numbing stupor. He searched his pockets for a match. It seemed to take him an inordinately long time to find one. The little flame, fluttering weakly in an atmosphere heavy with dust, revealed a table, a disarranged tablecloth, a half-burned candle.

He lighted the candle, noticing that there were streaks of warm drip along the sides, so it must have been used recently. He looked down at the floor. Close to his feet was a huddled figure, lying face down and with one arm flung wide. His eyes caught a slowly widening patch of crimson on the hardwood floor.

He put the candle down. Gently he moved the figure so the face turned up. With a sharp start he stared into the hideously distorted features.

"Curry!" he exclaimed thickly.

Then he saw that there were still signs of life in the wasted face. The gray film of death was already creeping up over the lips and eyes, but the sunken orbs still held a wavering light. Hannan had a feeling that those feebly smoldering eyes were trying to give him a dying message.

"The door— Don't enter until—until—"

The feeble light in the dying man's eyes wavered, flickered and vanished. The chest heaved out a little, then settled back very slowly. The fingers twitched, the jaw quavered, and Hannan knew the end had come. For a time he knelt beside the dead man, watching the face turn a grayer hue in the light of the candle.

Then, very vaguely at first, two impressions entered his brain. First he grew conscious of a movement in the shadowed portions of the room. Then footsteps, light and furtive, sounded in the rear, warning him that somebody was stealthily approaching from behind. A thought stirred in his horrified brain. The murderer had not yet had time to escape. He was still in the room, and now he was creeping forward with a cautious and skulking tread which suggested that he hoped to reach the door and depart before Hannan should notice his presence.

Out of the corner of an eye Hannan glanced at the candle, then at Viola's little pistol which he was still holding. For a moment longer he listened to the stealthy footfalls, now turning toward the door. A resolution steadied his whirling brain. The murderer should not be permitted to escape. The death of Curry, loyal and devoted friend of the Martenets, must be avenged.

He sprang to his feet. In the same instant cursing his tardiness. The murderer had already perceived his purpose. He saw a foot dart out from behind, snuffing out the candle and plunging the room into darkness. He dodged instinctively, but not quickly enough. A sharp, savage thrust . . . a tearing agony in his shoulder . . . an overwhelming weakness . . .

He staggered and fell. He was sinking into a void animated by dim pictures and faint voices. Far off in the distance he thought he could hear a clock strike.

Committee to Solve Grade Crossing Evil

BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 4. (AP)—Beaumont's grade crossing problem is apparently in a fair way to be solved. A meeting has been called for Oct. 1, at which representatives of railroads will meet with the local committee, appointed to work out a plan for either elevating the streets at crossings, or construction of a viaduct through the city for the railroads.

With several railroads passing through the downtown section the grade crossing hazard has grown with the city.

Several months ago a committee was appointed to work out a plan for presentation to the railroads. This committee finished its work several weeks ago and the report of its findings will be made public at the meeting with railroad heads. Roads effected are Southern Pacific, Santa Fe, Missouri Pacific, and Kansas City Southern.

Sixteen conversions featured the meeting of Monday night, which brings the total to 181 for the nine days. Campbell Ray, evangelistic singer of Austin, is in charge of the musical programs, which are an interesting feature of the revival. The meeting will continue through this week.

MORE COTTON IN TILLMAN

Loveland Farmer Brings In First Bale

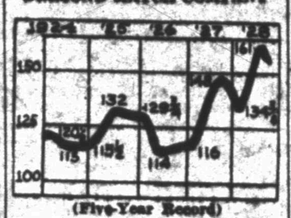

Special to The Record News.

FREDERICK, Okla., Sept. 4.—Most of the towns in the county received their first bales of cotton by Saturday night. About a dozen bales had been ginned in the various establishments which were ready for business. Frederick, Tipton and Davidson each received its first bale Monday, Aug. 27. On the following day M. A. Smith, residing 12 miles north of Davidson, brought in a 1,180-pound load of cotton to the Davidson Farmers Gin company of Davidson, which concern turned him out a 385-pound bale, which he sold for 18 cents a pound. He was given a $50 bonus by the Davidson business men.

The first bale was brought to Loveland last Saturday morning and ginned at the Farmers Gin company of that place. It was raised by W. E. May, who hauled in a load weighing 1,610 pounds. This was gathered from a field of 10 acres, May said. He planted Big Boll Ferguson.

Last year more than 2,000 bales of cotton were ginned in Loveland, but L. C. Plemons, manager of the gin at that place, says unless the season is favorable from now on, he does not expect this amount will be reached the present season. The recent heat and wind with lack of moisture has been hard on cotton, a great share of which was replanted late and the plant was necessarily soft.

CHEAPER TIRES FOR AUTOISTS

Defeat of British Rubber Plan Will Aid America

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4. (UP)—The dramatic move of Stanley Baldwin, British prime minister, in announcing that Great Britain's rubber production restriction act would be removed on November 1—eight weeks hence—gave definite assurance that America's 20,000,000 autoists would have cheaper tires.

However, few of the 20,000,000 who travel the highways of the United States realized it was a simple admission on the part of Great Britain of defeat in one of the most tremendous economic struggles ever waged between nations.

The restriction plan was Britain's move to dictate world rubber prices by her monopoly on rubber production.

The pressure of Britain's exhorbitant rubber price level had already caused American private enterprise to enter the field on a gigantic scale, but prior to Prime Minister Baldwin's announcement the removal of the act, American consumers who use most of the world's rubber supply were looking to 1929-30 with considerable anxiety.

GALVESTON, Sept. 4. (AP)—Condemning United States Senator Morris Sheppard's explanation of his support of Alfred E. Smith for president on the grounds that Governor Smith had not attempted to interfere with the operation of the Volstead act as "very feeble," Mrs. Claud de Van Waltz, state president of the Women's Christian Temperance union, said today the organization deplored Senator Sheppard's active support of the Democratic nominee.

"Considering the past record of Governor Smith on the prohibition question, which must be known to Senator Sheppard, his statement seems a very weak explanation," Mrs. Waltz declared.

Mrs. Waltz said that in her opinion Senator Sheppard was allowing his party loyalty to stand before his principles.

The W. C. T. U. leader said she had no direct reply from Senator Sheppard regarding her letter of last week condemning him for his support of the Democratic nominee and that the senator's published letter was the first information she had received as to how he had reacted to the accusation.

DUNLOP'S 40 YEARS

"WHAT OF IT? . . . Even if Dunlop has had the longest experience in tire-building, does that affect my car?

No. Not the mere fact of 40 years' experience. That might mean nothing. But, there is big meaning to you in the success of Dunlop's 40 years.

Such sustained success shows that Dunlop knows how to build maximum value into tires. The 26 million Dunlop tires now running form a world-wide evidence of Dunlop's superiority.

For 40 years . . . . year after year . . . . old friends have been sticking to Dunlop and new friends have been turning to Dunlop. These millions of motorists must be right. They have had experience in using Dunlops. They know.

As soon as you try a set, you, too, will know. You will find that Dunlop's successful experience means extra value to you.

SPUDDERS BALK AFTER WINNING STREAK AS STEERS WIN, 6-3

STEERS HIT SHORES HARD

Champs Due Back Home Today

By LARRY DAILY
Record News Sports Editor

DALLAS, Sept. 4.—Our Spudders lost a series today. A couple or three boots and ineffectiveness by Bill Shores cost the champions the pastime this afternoon, but there was no weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth on the part of Jeems Galloway's athletes.

Though they lost the ball game, which as pointed out the other day, happens to the best of regulated ball clubs, they smote the ball lustily. Also, there is no occasion to view the bobbles with misgivings for the future. A let-down in their scintillating play of yesterday when they trounced the Cats twice, was inevitable. And though the Wichita Falls club was charged with four errors, they were out there hustling for the ball game.

Which really is the important thing.

Shores yielded nine hits, three of which were combined in the seven innings with two bases on balls and an error to score three runs, and eventually win the ball game, 6 to 3.

The Spudders only got six hits off Leopold and Darrough, a pair of lefties, but they were socking the ball hard.

At that, Leopold chucked an excellent game until he was compelled to leave the contest in the seventh round.

Until he was hit on the hurling wing by a pitched ball, Darrough finished effectively by holding our nine hitless and runless the last two frames.

Lymie Lamb spanked a brace of blows, one for two bases and accounted for all the runs, driving in one and scoring twice himself.

Kallina Plays First Game

Ed Kallina played his first game in Spudder regalia in this championship season. The big fellow looked good on first base and whaled one of the hits.

The Spudders tallied two runs in the first inning. Benton strolled and went to second on a wild pitch and scored on Lamb's two-base smash down the left field foul line. Jenkins walked. Swenson singled to center, Lamb scoring and Jenkins going to third.

Dallas also counted in its half. Jeffries led off with a double to left and scored when Oglesby's grounder went through Turgeon.

Steers Tie Score

The Steers tied it in the second. Tate led off with a single to left. Leopold walked. Jeffries forced Leopold, Benton to Turgeon, but Pete's throw to first was in the dirt, Tate scoring.

Our nine went ahead in the third. Lamb singled to center, his second hit, and scored on Jenkins' two-base drive to the fence in center.

Turgeon's sparkling play on Gingiardi doubled after two were out stopped the Steers in their half.

Fitzgerald smacked a two-bagger in the fifth but two were out and it was unavailing.

Tom Makes Star Catch

Jenkins made a great running one-hand snatch to the foul line of Tate's drive and Benton threw out Mealey after a corking stop in the Steer half. Rosenthal went to the right-center fence in the seventh to rob Benton of a hit.

The Steers had their big inning in the seventh and tallied three runs. Morse singled to center. Oglesby sacrificed. Newman walked. Pierce beat out a hit to Turgeon, filling the bases. Tate walked to first and Morse walked home. Mealey singled to center. Pierce and Newman scoring.

Leopold Injured

Leopold was hit on his throwing arm by a pitched ball in the seventh and Darrough, another left hander, went to the hill in the eighth.

Dallas scored again in the eighth. Morse walked but was forced by Oglesby. Rosenthal beat out a hit to Swenson. Newman lifted to Fitz. Pierce singled to center, Oglesby scoring.

Claude Robertson, Beaumont manager, will join the Spudders tomorrow to act as reserve catcher for the rest of the year.

Herb Cobb will oppose the Steers tomorrow.

A few Wichita Falls fans saw today's game, including Alderman W. R. King.

Henry Gingiardi was banished in the fifth inning for protesting too vociferously when Umps Donnelly called a foul on a ball hit by the outfielder past Kallina.

Ken Mills, King of District One Fullbacks, Arrives at Coyote Camp

(The following is the fourth letter written to the Record News Sports Editor by Captain Harvey Black from the Coyote training camp at Craterville Park, Okla.—Editors' note.)

Craterville Park, Sept. 2.

Dear Larry:

We were called out a little early this morning. We had quite a bit more exercises than usual before breakfast.

At seven-thirty we started on an eight mile hike. We rambled over mountains and through valleys until 10 o'clock.

When we returned to camp we found visitors waiting. Mr. Welsch, Mr. Venson, Dr. Terrell, Mr. and Mrs. Hambrick, Mr. and Mrs. Lee and Kendrick King were with us for the rest of the day.

We have a new man in camp this morning. He is Kenneth Mills, all-district fullback last year, who will be with us for the remainder of the camp. Mills is expected to go great this fall. All of the men are doing good work.

Two large ends are out of practice on account of injuries, but will be ready to go Monday.

I must go to lunch, will write more tomorrow.

Yours,
BLACKIE.

Throws Dutch Henry Twice In Three Falls

By LOUIS T. HAMLETT

Joe Kopecky of Taylor, Texas, 156 pounds, took two falls out of three to beat Dutch Henry of Amarillo, 158 pounds, in the main event of the weekly boxing and wrestling card at Athletic park Tuesday night.

Dutch Mantell sat at one corner of the ring and coached Henry throughout the affair.

Kopecky took the first fall in 17 minutes with a double Japanese toe-hold. Henry won return honors with a shoulder strangle in five minutes. Kopecky took the third fall and match in eight minutes with a slam.

Kopecky sneaked up and threw Henry for the deciding fall while the latter was arguing with his coach, Mr. Mantell.

Johnny Owens of Wichita Falls, 147 pounds, won a technical knockout over Virgil Oden of Wichita Falls, 148 pounds, in the fourth round when Oden was knocked through the ropes and injuring his chest.

Henry Adams of Wichita Falls, 132 pounds, an amateur, knocked out Billy Daley of Oklahoma, 136 pounds, in the fourth round. Daley went down seven times before taking the count.

Battling Sam of Wichita Falls, 153 pounds, won a technical knockout over Black Dummy of Austin, 153 pounds, when Dummy hurt his wrist in the first round and was unable to return for the second.

Curley Roberson and Little Boy Blue staged a fast four-round bout in the paperweight class.

Thomas, former state senator, will speak on the issues of the presidential campaign in an anti-Smith Democratic club rally in Bellevue park at 8 o'clock Friday night, it was announced here Tuesday at the club headquarters in the Perkins-Snider building. Kids May Wait Season To Use Wading Pool

The cement in the bottom of the Kiwanis club wading pool in Scotland park has been poured and is being allowed to harden before more work is attempted.

Doubt was expressed at the city auditorium Tuesday that the pool will be used this year as it is the custom to close these pools in practically all cities on Sept. 15.

BIG FOOTBALL GAMES LOOM

Intersectional Contests Feature Schedules

By FRED VAN DEVENDER

CHICAGO, Sept. 4. (US)—The colleges and universities of the United States, instead of confining their athletics more within the individual schools, as some educators advocate, are more and more branching out into intersectional rivalry.

There are 31 intersectional gridiron clashes on the schedules for this season. And all of these are of national interest. They range from September 29 to December 8, and embrace every section of the United State from Atlanta to Madison, and from Los Angeles to New York city.

Important Games Scheduled

The most important games on the schedules this season are Navy vs. Notre Dame, at Soldiers' field, Chicago; Army vs. Stanford at New York city; Notre Dame vs. Southern California at Los Angeles; Army vs. Nebraska at New York city; Navy vs. Michigan at Baltimore.

But these are only a few of the games. Small schools like Butler college of Indianapolis are playing teams with national reputations such as Tufts.

And the middle western schools, especially the University of Chicago and Notre Dame have their full share of intersectional games.

The first intersectional clash of import will be on September 29, when the University of Chicago plays a double header with Ripon, a small mid-western school, with the University of South Carolina, the feature attraction. Both games will be played at Stagg field. On the same date, Notre Dame plays Lovela, New Orleans, at Cartier field at South Bend.

On October 6, the University of Chicago plays Wyoming at Stagg field; South Dakota journeys to Durham, N. C., to play Duke university. Indiana plays Oklahoma t Bloomington. The Southern Methodists of Dallas, Texas, play the Army at West Point, and the two Loyolas, Chicago and New Orleans, play at Chicago.

Navy Plays Irish

Two big international games will be played on the card for October 13. The Navy plays Notre Dame at Soldiers' field here for the biggest clash, and Yale plays Georgia at New Haven. Other games of that date are Harvard-North Carolina at Cambridge and Nebraska-Montana State at Lincoln.

Notre Dame plays Georgia Tech at Atlanta on October 20, while Nebraska plays Syracuse at Lincoln. Detroit plays Loyola of New Orleans at Detroit. Another big clash of the day, although not intersectional is that of Harvard and the Army at Cambridge.

There are five big games on the schedule for November 3. They are between Chicago and Pennsylvania at Stagg field; Ohio State and Princeton at Columbus; Penn State and Notre Dame at Philadelphia; Army and Depauw at West Point and Wisconsin and Alabama at Madison.

The Pennsylvania-Chicago game is not new on the schedule, and neither is the Ohio State-Princeton struggle. The others are.

November 10 brings together the Army and Notre Dame at the Polo grounds in New York, and the Navy and Michigan at Baltimore. The Army-Notre Dame game is an old established contest, and Michigan and the Navy played last year at Ann Arbor.

Big Contests Nov. 17

Nov. 17 has some very good contests, but none which will cause newspaper and press association offices to be flooded with requests for the score. The schedule for that date calls for: Nebraska vs. Pittsburgh at Pittsburgh; New York and Notre Dame vs. Carnegie Tech at South Bend.

Northwestern, plays Dartmouth at Evanston on November 24, while Nebraska is taking the place of the Navy on the Army's schedule in the big battle of the day at New York city. The Navy plays Princeton rather than the Army.

November 24 is the official closing time for most of the large teams, but as a matter of fact the big games of the year will be played on the two Saturdays following.

In between on Turkey day, the only intersectional clash is between Tufts and Butler at Indianapolis, a rather minor affair.

On December 1, the biggest intersectional game of the year in the west will be played, when Stanford, a ranking team of the Pacific coast journeys 3000 miles to New York city and there plays the Army. It will, undoubtedly, be the classic contest of the year. It involves a team famous for its athletes on the Pacific coast, and in addition to the splendid team turned out by the Army, the game will have the added attraction of Army formality and splendor on the field.

Micks vs. Southern California

And as a final windup to the season, the second of the series between Notre Dame and Southern California will be played at Los Angeles. It will be a big affair.

In that game the Pacific stars will have the old score to settle, which was left undecided last year not only in the minds of Southern California but in the minds of the public as well. That affair has to do with the matter of a pass, thrown by Southern California, which was caught by Riley, Notre Dame quarter, and then, according to the referee, dropped, therefore incompleting the touchdown.

If the pass was actually dropped, then Southern California lost nothing, but if it was thrown down by Riley, after he had it in his possession, then Southern California was gyped out of a touchdown, and the game.

And that's the intersectional menu served up to the customers for September, October and November, on successive Saturday afternoons.

It is a very appetizing dish for the gridiron, at that.

FATAL SHOTS END FEUD OF FAMILIES OVER GIRL

Matamoras Merchant Shot to Death, Ending Quarrel of Six Years Resulting Over Broken Pact

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, Sept. 4. (AP)—Police of Matamoras, Mexico, today were seeking a man who last night fired five shots from a pistol into Refugio Cardenas, prominent Matamoras merchant, as he stood in front of the market house in the Mexican city.

Cardenas' death wiped out the last male member of one family of the Cardenas-Benavides feud, which has raged for six years and which has brought death to six members of the Cardenas family and several of the Benavides clan.

The feud was said to have originated over the mutual love of a member of each family for a girl. The two men agreed to stay from the girl, it is said, but one of them broke the pact.

The shots which caused Cardenas' death last night were fired from an automobile as it passed by the corner where he was standing.

The machine later was found abandoned. Cardenas lived long enough to tell officers who had shot him, they said today.

Cardenas' father was slain in much the same manner a year ago, when he was called to the door of his ranch home several miles from Matamoras and shot to death. A few days later an attempt was made to slay the son at the market place in Matamoras, but the attacker's bullets sped wide of their mark. Last night, however, he was killed at the exact spot where the earlier attempt failed.

Daylight Abductors Take $5000 Roll From San Antonio Bank Messenger

Bandits Attack Woman After She Picks Up Money Bag Hurled From Speeding Car by Victim

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Sept. 4. (AP)—Working in view of scores of pedestrians, two bandits late today kidnaped Leo Toepperwein, messenger for the Texas State Bank and Trust company, from West Crockett street, took him four miles outside the city limits on the Gonzales road and robbed him of $5,000.

While the bandits were speeding out a street, Toepperwein succeeded in hurling the bag containing the money from the bandit car. It was picked up by a woman passing by, but the bandits jumped from the car, and at the point of pistols, took the money away from her. They then sped on.

Four miles outside the city limits the bandit driver slowed the mad pace that the automobile, a large touring car, had been keeping and threw the bank messenger out in the roadway. He made his way to a nearby brick yard and telephoned back to his employers an account of the robbery.

The robbery was finely timed, according to police officials. The kidnaping, which occured less than three blocks from the central police headquarters, was at a time when a majority of the city detectives and most of the station officers were attending the funeral services for G. A. Duerler, San Antonio business man.

Automotive Dealers Vote to Join Buyers' Week and Anniversary Here

The Wichita Falls Automotive Dealers voted to join in the fall opening, buyers week and anniversary of Wichita Falls to be held Sept. 28 at a called meeting of the organization Tuesday night.

The automobile men also asked the tire accessory houses in the city to join with them in giving the automobile industry a good representation in the activities of the anniversary celebration.

Each dealer will decorate his showrooms for Sept. 28 and will have on display the latest models of the car he handles, it was decided.

President L. O. Brown appointed a committee composed of T. E. Edwards, E. S. Parmenter and Julian McFall to cooperate with the chamber of commerce in making arrangements for the celebration.

The dealers also voted to participate in the Record News-Times display contest beginning Sept. 24.

Newspaper Man Kidnaped After Collision With Borger Bandit's Car

BORGER, Texas, Sept. 4. (AP)—Witt Wells, city editor of the Borger Herald, was severely beaten, robbed of $40 and left beside the road three miles from the city by two men who kidnaped him in the heart of the business district last night.

Wells was forced into the automobile with the two men at the point of a pistol after he and a companion in another automobile had had a collision with the bandit's car. When, after an argument of several minutes, Wells started calling the police and taking the number of the bandits' automobile, one of the men thrust a pistol against Wells' body and forced him into the car.

Police, summoned by Wells' companion, pursued the automobile out of the city and found Wells lying beside the highway, beaten almost into unconsciousness.

This announcement had no sooner been made than a call was received from H. A. Gray Jr., who was listening over his set at home. "I find I can tune out KGKO by turning my dial only one point," he said. "The static tonight is terrible, and KGKO is the only station that is coming in without interference."

The equipment of the station is made on the newest radio patents, and the carrier wave is one of the sharpest used by any station. Because of the quality of the wave, it is one of the most easily tuned out of all radio stations.

Four Hour Program

The station is broadcasting on a power of 500 watts, the same as WFAA and WRR at Dallas, and is on the 222.2 meter band.

Among the artists on the opening program were Paul Seeds band, Zack and Glenn, Happy Jack Gross with his guitar, the Slaughter instrumental trio, the Bluebonnet trio, Maxine Crowson, Williams brothers, old time fiddlers, I. B. Thompson's Hawaiian quartet, Paul Seeds orchestra and R. E. Shepherd. The broadcasting lasted from 8 to 12 o'clock.

BETTY BRONSON

The public thinks of Betty Bronson as a big movie star, but in reality Betty is just a sweet little kid who knows more about butterflies than she knows about butter-and-egg men.

In 1924, when Betty was a movie extra, a world-wide search was celluloid "Peter celluloid "Poter Pan." Hundreds of tests were made, and one by one the aspirants were weeded down to fifty then ten. Screen tests of these ten were sent to Europe and exhibited before Sir James M. Barrie, the creator of "the boy who wouldn't grow up," and the author chose Betty to impersonate his immortal "Peter Pan."

"I like the story," Betty told me, "about the little boy who came home from school and said:

"'Dad, I got a whipping at school today and you are the cause of it!'

"'Why, how's that?' the father asked.

"'Well, you remember I asked you how much a million was?'

"'Yes.'

"'Well, a helluva lot ain't right!'"

Tomorrow—Vincent Lopez.

Four Injured In Electra Mishaps

planned on returning to Abilene to school this fall.

Miss Vivian Goodman, 15, suffered severe gashes in her forehead and bruises about the face and body when the automobile in which she was riding and a second car collided on the Wichita Falls-Electra highway just this side of Iowa Park about 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. She and her father, O. P. Goodman, were returning from Wichita Falls at the time of the accident.

Miss Goodman and her father were brought to Electra by a passer-by, and the girl was given treatment at a local hospital. Driver of the second automobile which figured in the collision did not stop after the accident and his identity was not learned.

BOWIE MAN HURT IN ACCIDENT

Special to The Record News.

HENRIETTA, Sept. 4. Hue Smith of Bowie was severely injured here tonight when struck by a car said to have been driven by Louie Koeth of Henrietta. Smith was rushed by ambulance to the Bowie hospital.

Smith had stopped his truck on the highway about two blocks from the business district when Koethe drove up behind him. Lights of another car approaching from the opposite direction blinded Koethe, it was reported, and he did not see Smith in the road.

Clyde Bentley, motorcycle officer who investigated the case, said the accident was unavoidable.

The prison population of England and Wales has decreased from 20,900 to 10,000 since 1878.

Goitre

This disease has been found in every country in the world, and many theories have been advanced as to its cause. For a long time it was supposed that the absence of iodine in food was responsible for this condition, and this idea is still being exploited by manufacturers in many parts of the country, but this cannot be the true cause of goitre since it is present in the female sex about six times as frequently as in the male, and both sexes presumably consume about the same amount of iodine. The fact that goitre is very prevalent in Switzerland and in other mountainous districts where people do not obtain much iodine in their drinking water or food, has been frequently used as proof of this statement. However, along the Jersey coast and in many parts of Japan, where iodine is plentifully supplied in both food and drinking water, goitre is frequently found. Excessive use of starch seems to be an important factor in producing enlargement of the thyroid gland.

It is a well known fact that the thyroid gland is slightly larger in women than in men, and this gland becomes swollen at various periods in a woman's life. In fact, many goitres in women originate and are associated with some type of female derangement; possibly one-sixth of the cases of women or about an equal number of the cases of men can be traced to toxic substances that accumulate in the thyroid gland and cause it to become enlarged.

The thyroid is one of the ductless glands that have furnished material for much research and probably more is known about the action of the thyroid than of the other ductless glands, such as the pituitary, adrenal, or gonads. This little organ, situated at the base of the throat in front of the windpipe, is shaped very much like two small kidneys, one at either side and connected together in front below the Adam's apple. Experiments tend to prove that it is a regulator of other glands, too much thyroid secretion speeding up, and too little causing a slowing down. A person affected with too much thyroid secretion will have a pulse of 130 or over, which is probably the most dangerous effect from the thyroid.

Nearly 5,000,000 people in the United States suffer from some form of thyroid trouble, and most of them are in the hyperthyroid or too much thyroid secretion class. It is one of the principal causes of heart trouble which claimed over 12,000 lives in California alone during a period of one year.

This friendly little gland can become your greatest enemy if it is irritated by toxemia. If your nervousness is increasing and your heart action more rapid, your little thyroid may be responsible.

There are many forms of thyroid derangement, but the two most common types are called simple goitre and exophthalmic goitre. The simple goitre is easily noticed as the thyroid gland becomes many times larger than normal. Even the layman can recognize this trouble by the enlargement in front of the neck.

In some of the mountainous districts of Europe, Japan and Oregon the enlargement of the thyroid may be so great that it hangs down like a large sack in front of the neck.

Most cases of goitre can be corrected by dietetic measures alone, and I will be glad to send anyone interested instructions for the treatment of this disorder if he will send me a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope, in care of this newspaper.

Surgical measures usually fail to bring lasting results in this disorder.

Questions and Answers

Question: D. W. R. asks: "Is there any cure for adhesions of the gall bladder besides an operation?"

Answer: Gall bladder adhesions can sometimes be broken up by manipulative treatment.

Question: Mrs. O. J. asks: "Will you please explain how to cook coddled eggs?"

Answer: Place the unbroken eggs in a deep pan which is not standing on the fire, and pour over them boiling water. At least one quart of water should be used to each two eggs. Allow to stand for from five to ten minutes. When broken open the eggs should have a jelly-like constatency, but should at the same time be so well cooked that there is no transparent albumen which has not been coagulated. If the pan is covered, less time will be required to get the same effect, but it is possibly more desirable to have the eggs cook very slowly for perhaps eight to ten minutes, as in this way they are cooked through more thoroughly.

Question: Mrs. H. asks: "Would you advise x-ray treatment for diseased tonsils and adenoids? Is there any danger of drying up the glands of the throat by the x-ray treatment? A woman who has taken this treatment is troubled with a pus discharge from the throat. What might be the cause of it?"

Answer: X-ray treatment for tonsils or adenoids is a very dangerous method to use, as the other glands in the throat and even the brain itself may be injured. The toxic cause of enlarged tonsils will remain even if these glands are shrunk by the x-ray and therefore a patient may continue to have an excess formation of mucus or still be troubled with pus pockets in the throat. You would be interested in my article "Save the Tonsils." Address your request to me in care of this paper and I will be glad to send you the article free if you will inclose a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE (391) Our Presidents

General Harrison, Whig, who had won the memorable victory over the Indians at Tippecanoe, was rewarded with the presidency in 1841. With shouts and songs of "Tippecanoe and Tyler, too," he was elected, but lived only a month after he took office. John Tyler of Virginia, his vice president, succeeded him.

Tyler quarreled violently with leaders of the Whig party and with Congress.

During Tyler's term the young army officer, John C. Fremont, made three famous trips exploring the Rocky Mountain country.

Tyler greatly favored joining Texas to the Union, and in spite of the opposition of those who were against admitting more slave states, succeeded just before the end of his term, though Texas was not formally admitted until Polk's administration. During Tyler's term the Mormons were driven out of Illinois and headed for the west. (To Be Continued)

MIDWESTERN REVIEW

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 4. (AP)—(U.S.D.A.)—Further price gains of 20-25c were scored on native grain fed steers and yearlings around the 11-market circuit; the shortage of well finished natives resulted in packers displaying more interest in the better kinds of western grassers; western steers showing the effect of having been wintered or given a grain ration shared the upturn on natives; feeder buyers continued to display a keen interest in well bred straight grassers; choice beeves in Chicago scored 17.80, a new high level for the season; wintered and fed grassers at Kansas City were numerous at 13.50-15.00, the latter prices securing a four car train on 1300 lb. wintered Kansans, aggregate receipts were estimated at 59,800, as compared with 46,350 a week ago and 64,113 the same day last year.

Offerings of hogs around the loop were estimated at 76,500, an increase of 12,000 over last Tuesday, but 4,000 short of a year ago; shippers at most points filled their order at steady prices, but at Chicago a 10-15c advance was put into effect; packers failed to follow the full advance at Chicago and at St. Louis shaded values 10-15c; Chicago scored 13.35, the day's top and a new high level for the year.

Omaha scored a 25c upturn on fat lambs, but at the other classes ruled steady to strong; range lambs at Chicago realized $15.50; while on the Kansas City market $15.00 was paid for Colorado rangers; the supply was estimated at 71,300 against 87,955 a week ago, and 96,989 a year ago.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Sept. 4. (AP)—Opening advances in the cotton market here today promoted by unfavorable weather reports and relatively firm Liverpool cables, were followed by reactions under liquidation combined with local and southern selling. December contracts declined from 18.63 to 18.60 and closed at that figure with the general market closing barely steady net unchanged to 7 points higher.

The opening was steady at an advance of 13 to 22 points. Active months sold 22 to 25 points net higher in early trading on covering and trade or commission house buying, inspired by reports of rains in the eastern and central belts over the holidays, and the relatively firm showing of Liverpool. Demand was supplied by realizing while there also seemed to be extensive southern hedging in early trading. The market soon turned easier. Trading tapered off on the reaction and prices steadied up a few points after publication of the detailed weather reports showing heavy rainfall since the close last Friday. The bulges, however, met considerable cotton, and there was a renewal of southern selling in late trading which sent prices off to 18.81 for October and 18.58 for March, or back to nearly Friday's closing quotations. Closing prices were at the lowest of the day on most positions.

Two or three more private end-month crop reports were published. One made the condition of the crop 58.3 and indicated yield 14,041,000 bales. Another placed the condition of the crop at 58.3 and the indicated yield at 14,484,000 bales, while another report placed the indicated yield at only 13,990,000 bales. These figures appeared to be without appreciable influence on the market, which local brokers said was pretty much dominated by uncertainty of showing of the approaching government report.

Private cables said there had been American and continental buying in Liverpool combined with trade calling and covering on reports of rain in the south, and failure of the bullish features mentioned early to create a more general demand was supposed to account for realizing on liquidation in later trading.

Exports today 7,925 bales, making 333,031 so far this season.

Port receipts: 32,071. U. S. port stocks 515,923.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 4. (AP)—The cotton market was quiet here today because traders were not disposed to enter upon new commitments in advance of the government crop report due the end of this week. There were slight fluctuations with the close at an advance of 4 to 9 points.

In early trading the market advanced nearly $1 a bale on better Liverpool cables than due and private advices reporting [illegible] crop deterioration and much [illegible]. Prices then declined about $1 [illegible] on realizing.

[illegible] crop estimates were issued during the day ranging from 14,041,000 bales to 14,980,000.

December contracts, after advancing 29 points to 18.42, declined 20 points to 18.22 and closed at that figure, showing a net gain of 9 points for the day.

First trades showed gains of 17 to 19 points and the market continued to advance until October traded up to 18.35 and December to 18.42, 26 to 29 points above the previous close.

This bulge attracted realizing and some hedge selling and October dropped to 18.15 and December to 18.22, 20 points below the early highs.

In late trading prices dropped to the early lows on realizing and October closed at 18.15 and December at 18.22, showing net gains for the day of 5 to 9 points.

Port receipts 33,335, for week 102,979, for season 376,725, last season [illegible]. Exports 9,189, for week 51,513, for season 314,096, last season [illegible]. Port stocks 532,119, last year 1,130,139. Combined shipboard stock at New Orleans, Galveston and Houston 81,282, last year 55,387. Spot sales at southern markets 45,954, last year 37,861.

Advance in Money Rates After Call Of $25,000,000 Loans Halts Market

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Sept. 4. (US)—Calling of $25,000,000 loans and resulting advance in the rate to 8 per cent, from a renewal of 7½ held the stock market back today. Rails made a better showing than the industrials and buying in Public Service of New Jersey, Utilities Power and Light and other utilities, told of here last week, caused further advance in that group.

It was another "select market" in so far as the industrials were concerned with General Motors enjoying the greatest activity as professionals sold freely and met continued good support. Most recent favorites were held to narrow price ranged, but Linseed, Fox, Gold Dust and Electric Storage Battery enjoyed steady demand as they speeded into new high ground for gains of from 4 to 11 points. Kennecott and Magma Copper also registered new highs in an otherwise quiet copper group. Group work kept Barnsdall most prominent of a generally dull oil department.

Savage Arms was quietly picked up early in the day coincident with report that the western interests who hold a dominant position in Baldwin had taken over a block of the stock. It was believed that plan was under consideration to put Savage into the Baldwin organization as a result of the increasing demand for its peace time products. In order to get the fullest possible benefit from the properties as well as the strong asset position of Baldwin the new controlling interests recognize they must expand the operations of the company beyond the railway equipment field. Their buying, it is stated, has materially reduced the floating supply of Savage.

Continental Can gained over two points while American Can slipped off. It can be stated that activity in Continental in part was due to operation of Jesse Livermore who has returned to his first favorite, the stock market, as a bull. He renewed stock operations after a more than two years absence, following the June reaction. The Continential Can directors, it is expected, will recommend a two for one splitup within the next few weeks. Electric Storage Battery jumped over 7 points with expectation voiced that extra dividend would be declared at the next meeting of directors. Gold Dust and Linseed strength was due to knowledge of plan of the Gold Dust interests to secure control of Linseed.

Loose Wiles slipped as those most active therein lately turned their attention elsewhere as they were meeting too much competition in their Loose Wiles operation and had secured the volume desired. Chrysler, Hudson and other automobile stocks failed to follow General Motors higher. Briggs was lower also as it was learned that the Chrysler corporation was not considering acquisition of control such as has been widely rumored recently. Baltimore and Ohio enjoyed best demand in the railroad list along with Central and the other better grade stocks. Missouri Pacific held leading position among the more speculative issues coincident with report that a strong group, dissatisfied with the Williams management, were seeking control. Equipments were a little more active following report of big replacements of freight cars soon. Pressed steel Car was declared to have received a big order for metal cars from the Pennsylvania.

Manhattan Electric Supply passed its dividend after the close as forecast here several months ago. There is reason for worry about similar action when the Freeport Texas directors meet the next time.

Advance in the call rate to 8 per cent, was less than was expected in view of the big turnover taking place as a result of Sept. 1, disbursements. Easing of the rate is looked for over the next few days as this money finds its way to the stock market. Increase of $214,000,000 in brokers, loans in July and August, as reported by the stock exchange was just about as indicated by the reserve bank's weekly figures.

Grain

By THOMAS TEMPLE HOYNE

CHICAGO, Sept. 4. (US)—Grains dragged lower today and as they sank downward the markets appeared to grow heavier with support more and more sluggish. Wheat is heading into the heavy hedging period which may put pronounced pressure on the market toward the end of this week.

Corn, with prospects of fine, warmer weather, offers little incentive for buying by any but the most ardent bulls at the present level.

At the close wheat was down 1¼ to 1⅝; corn was down ⅛ to 2⅜; oats were off ⅛ to ¼; rye was ⅝ to 1¼ lower.

The idea of crop experts attempting seriously to estimate a corn crop admitted to be three billion bushels or more with great accuracy would make less seriously minded persons than grain merchants rock with laughter. It is like trying to estimate the coal output—even after it is known—in ounces.

The whole of crop-reporting for the purpose of predicting yields is merely a guessing game in which the guesses are usually of little value. But everyone has a right to guess, and my guess is that the corn crop will be the largest this country has ever grown.

Wheat opened off and never showed anything in the way of strength more than resistance to downward movement. That was not great enough to inspire confidence in the long side of the market.

The visible supply showed an increase of 3,774,000 bushels—more than half a million larger than the increase for the corresponding day last year.

Wheat appears as if it is definitely topping on to the down grade for a fair decline. It may not get well started until late in the week. But next week hedging is likely to be on in volume and there is no incentive that I can see for buying wheat for some time to come. Not, in fact, until the market has showed ability to absorb hedging, and until export business has begun to appear in sufficient volume to offset it.

Any strength early today in either wheat or corn is likely to meet with selling.

In the cash market wheat was unchanged to 1 lower; corn was 1 to 3 lower; oats were unchanged; rye was easy; barley was steady.

May McAvoy is in her last day at the Olympic theater in "A Reno Divorce," a picture you probably will enjoy. It is rather modern.

Not many girls have six brothers who are flyers, but Colleen Moore has. At least in the movies she has. This happens in "Lilac Time," the vitaphone picture which is to open at the Strand theater Friday.

Renee Adoree has been "borrowed" by Pathe from Metro Goldwyn Mayer to appear in "The Speiler" which is now being completed. Born in a carnival company at Lille, France, and a product of the French and European circus tent stage, Miss Adoree was obtained for this picture which will show her as a high diver with a carnival company.

Before signing off, we wish to give two little paragraphs to reprinting a portion of the review by Fleet Smith, New York movie critic, on Zane Gray's "The Water Hole" which opened there for its world premiere last week. This is particularly timely here as it is coming Wednesday at the Majestic. Says Mr. Smith:

"One other picture of the new fall list to rave about, while in that mood! It is "The Water Hole," a Zane Grey story featuring Jack Holt and Nancy Carroll.

"Here is that well-known species, the horse opera, with cowboys, gunplay, physical battle against hardships in the desert, just as you might have expected. But unexpectedly, here also is humor, freshness, originality of situation, cleverness, appeal not merely to the boys who stamp their feet for westerns on Saturday afternoon but to the adult audience. In the fall round-up of films, this youngster will certainly have to be branded with a big O. K."

Coolidge and His New Pet Pup Soon to Leave Brule for Capital

SUPERIOR, Wis., Sept. 4. (US)—Within 10 days, President Coolidge will be back in Washington. The middle of next week, in all probability, will find him at his desk there.

Plans were going forward for the executive's departure from his summer White House on the Brule the first of next week, bringing to a close a vacation that began the fifteenth of last June. Colonel E. D. Ainslie, assistant general passenger agent of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, arrived in Superior today to arrange the schedule of the special train that will take the large entourage back to the capital.

Mr. Coolidge is not expected to remain long in Washington, however. Within a week or 10 days after his return, it is expected he will take a trip to Plymouth, Vermont, remaining there at the scene of his boyhood days for a week or slightly longer.

He will take back to Washington with him the registration certificate of still another addition to the White House kennels, for today he was presented with a six months old English setter answering to the name of Palo Alto.

Palo Alto, the gift of Clare Wildner, of Superior, comes from the stock whose most famous dog was the champion, Mohawk. In four generations, his progeny have placed 418 times.

CABE OUSTER HANGS FIRE

Nicholson Has Right To 'Fire,' Claim

Although the matter of the discharge of J. T. Cabe, county juvenile officer, was presented to the commissioners' court Tuesday afternoon, the body refused to take any action in the controversy between Mr. Cabe and E. W. Nicholson, county judge.

The commissioners expressed themselves as believing that Judge Nicholson alone had the right to discharge Mr. Cabe if he wished to do so, since he had appointed him.

In addition to a discussion of the county juvenile officer the commissioners opened a number of bids and performed other routine duties.

Decision of the body on plans for remodeling the interior of the county jail was withheld until next Monday. W. G. Bralley, sheriff, advised the body that he had not been able to complete his plans for the work. Mr. Bralley, with the aid of plans and specifications submitted by various jail building concerns, is having prepared specifications for the work here on which bids may be asked by the commissioners.

Bus lines throughout the country carried 2,525,000,000 passengers last year.

GARY COOPER

Life at its most magnificent moments . . . in the most magnificent spectacle the screen has ever given you..!

TREMENDOUS SPECTACLE, when scores of fighting airplanes come to death grips in the skies . . .

Stirring romance in the glorious love of a maid of Normandy for a daredevil flier who goes up on his last trip in the face of new found love.

Powerful, gripping, awe inspiring! One of the most sensational and daring things of its kind. A year in the making—every kind of aerial thrill included in its circus in the clouds.

And smoked as "Smoky Sam"
In such a way your taste's allured?
The children chorused "HAM."
