Presidential hopefuls clash in spirited debate

Key issues are taxes and trustworthiness

Bill Clinton

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — President Clinton and Bob Dole clashed vigorously over taxes and trustworthiness Sunday night in a spirited prime-time debate over who was the better man to lead America into the 21st century.

"I think the best thing going for Bob Dole is that Bob Dole keeps his word," the Republican challenger said in a 90-minute debate critical to his hopes of launching an October comeback.

"It is not midnight in America, senator: We are better off than we were four years ago," Clinton said in making his case for a second term.

The Democratic incumbent and his Republican challenger stood just a few feet apart on a red-carpeted stage, challenging each other again and again in a showdown that ushered in the final month of the White House campaign.

Clinton took credit for an economy that had created more than 10 million jobs, for cutting the deficit by 60 percent and for vetoing Dole-backed Republican budgets he asserted would have cut $270 billion from Medicare and another $30 billion from education.

Looking ahead, Clinton said his $100 billion in tax credits targeted to making college more affordable were far more responsible than Dole's "$550 billion tax scheme."

"We have the right approach for the future," Clinton said.

Dole forcefully disagreed, and accused Clinton of running a campaign designed to scare elderly Americans. "I am trying to save your Medicare, just as I rescued Social Security," Dole said.

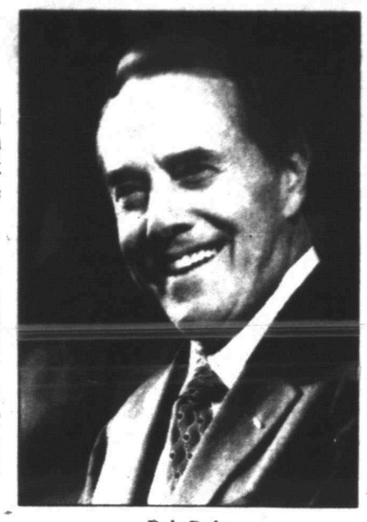

The former Kansas senator told the viewing audience, "If I could not cut taxes and balance the budget at the same time I would not look you in the eye tonight."

Clinton was called the debate's winner by six of seven high school and college debate coaches from around the country who judged it for The Associated Press. The seventh called it a tie.

Dole lost points in the judges' views by failing to respond adequately to Clinton's charge that his plan for a 15 percent tax cut would result in deep cuts for social spending, especially Medicare.

Entering the debate, Clinton was ahead by a dozen points or more in most national polls and in surveys from the major Electoral

175 expected for conference

Trade show to be featured

More than 175 people are expected to attend the 10th annual West Texas Turfgrass Conference, which begins Tuesday on the campus of Western Texas College.

About 150 people attended last year's conference, and a trade show this year is expected to draw even more, organizers said.

The three-day conference is co-sponsored by the West Texas Golf Course Superintendents Association and the WTC Golf & Landscape Technology Department. The theme of the conference this year is "Staying In Touch With Today's Technology."

Guest speakers will include Gary Brooks with Rhone-Poulenc Ag Company; Dan Gilmore with Jacobsen-Textron; Billy Henderson with the Texas Department of Agriculture; Dr. Wallace Menn, Dr. Richard White and Dr. Mike Merchant with Texas A&M University; Dr. Mike Wade with Tarleton State University; Max von Roeder of Von Roeder Seed; and Jim Judah, WTC ag professor.

Sessions will cover weed control, new insecticides for turf and ornamentals, landscape plants for golf courses, the importance of soils and maximizing equipment acquisitions through leasing and financing.

There will also be a panel discussion and sessions on laws and regulations for continuing education units.

On Tuesday, the conference will begin with a golf tournament at the college course, followed by a barbecue in the diesel building.

The trade show will be open from 6 until 8:30 p.m. and again Wednesday from 3 until 7 p.m.

Sessions will be held all day Wednesday and through noon Thursday, when the conference officially concludes. The conference will be followed by a 1 p.m. meeting of the Turfgrass Academic Advisory Council of Texas in the GLT Department.

The West Texas Golf Course Superintendents Association currently has 250 members.

IN TRADITION — Many of those attending the White Buffalo Festival took part in traditional Indian dances, held at various times throughout the day Saturday. The festival was well attended and organizers expect an even larger crowd for the 1997 event, scheduled for Oct. 3-4. (SDN Staff Photo)

Board appointments, ordinances on agenda

Board appointments and ordinances — including one on first reading that would ban on-street parking along 30th Street — are among the items facing Snyder City Council in a meeting set for 6:30 today at City Hall.

30th Street is currently undergoing a widening project from College Avenue to El Paso Street and plans do not allow for parking on the road. If passed, the ordinance will go into effect following the second reading by the council in November.

Items of new business to be considered by the city include accepting the resignation of John Fagin from the Development Corporation of Snyder board and naming his replacement, the reappointment of Roy Baze to the DCOS, and appointments to the city's board of electrical examiners.

Three ordinances will be considered on second reading, including one that sets a minimum $35 fee for citizens using the city dump truck to dispose of trash at their residence. In the past, citizens had been able to utilize the service without charge.

The other two ordinances deal with updating the code book for the city and a zoning change in the 2000 block of 27th Street.

Also, the council will consider a resolution designating the signatories for the city as required by the Texas Department of Commerce and consider awarding the grounds maintenace contract for the city.

Also, recently retired animal control officer M.L. Chandler will address the council regarding animal control.

Blood drive coming Tuesday

Scurry County residents will have an opportunity to help their neighbors when the Texas Blood Institute holds another drive here Tuesday.

The drive is set for 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. in the First Baptist Church Family Life Center.

"Snyder continues to offer fantastic support for our community blood program," said Cheryl Keefer, marketing specialist at TBI. "We are grateful to these fine people for their support in helping us assure a safe and adequate blood supply."

Last year, the citizens of Scurry County donated more than 600 units of life-saving bloods through local drives.

In appreciation for blood donations, each participant will receive coupons for a sundae from Dairy Queen, a malt or milk shake from Sonic, a medium drink with the purchase of any dessert at Whataburger, a small soft drink and order of Potatoes 'Ole from Taco John's, food from McDonald's, a medium drink with any food purchase from Wal-Mart, a medium drink with a meal purchase from Long John Silver's and a $1 savings at Golden Corral.

To be given away by random drawing are seven $5 gift certificates from Rudy's, Jaramillo's and Spanish Inn; seven coupons for one six-inch or two four-inch sandwiches from Subway; a $3 discount on every full service car wash from Tod's Auto Detailing Shop; and a Sunday buffet for two at The Shack.

Every fifth donor will receive a six-pack of cola and every other donor will receive a coupon for a regular order from Gill's Fried Chicken.

Orange juice will be furnished by Cogdell Hospital Auxiliary, fruit drink by TBI and cookies by Lawrence IGA.

Senior Center VIVA volunteers have been making reminder telephone calls.

Donors are reminded that they are required to show identification before donating blood. Acceptable identification can be a driver's license, birth certificate, Social Security number or UBS donor card.

Donors must be at least 17. For information, call Martha Schiebel at 573-8626.

Court OKs proclamation, routine items

Mostly routine items were considered by Scurry County commissioners this morning as they took action on eight new items of business.

In recognition of October being Domestic Violence Awareness Month, the court passed a proclamation recognizing the efforts of those involved in reducing domestic violence. Dee Wilson, Noah service area director and Noah board member Tom Holcomb met with the court concerning the proclaimation.

Perry Westmoreland, Snyder EMS director, met with the court in regards to purchasing a new chassis for an ambulance.

Westmoreland said by purchasing just the chassis and mounting the old ambulance body on it, the county could realize a savings of $35,000 to $40,000 over the purchase of a complete new ambulance.

Bids on the chassis will be opened in November with delivery expected sometime after the first of the year.

Also, the court selected the engineering firm of Hibbs and Todd of Abilene to oversee the construction on the improvements for the Hermleigh Water Works.

Candidates to speak at community college

Candidates for State Representative of District 70 are scheduled to speak to Western Texas College students and the public is invited to hear them.

Scott McLaughlin, R-Big Spring, will address the public at 10:45 a.m. Tuesday in the Fine Arts Theatre.

His opponent, incumbent David Counts, D-Knox City, will probably speak sometime next week, said Jack Price, government professor. Date and time will be released as soon as they are confirmed.

Ticket sales end Tuesday

Area residents who are planning to attend the Keith Collier Appreciation Day luncheon are reminded that ticket sales end at 5 p.m. Tuesday.

Col. Dudley Thomas, newly-appointed commander of the Texas Department of Public Safety, will be the featured speaker. The luncheon will begin at 11:30 a.m. Thursday in the county coliseum.

Tickets are $6 each and are on sale at all Snyder financial institutions, the chamber of commerce office and at the Snyder Daily News.

Collier is retiring at the end of this year after 32 years as Scurry County sheriff.

ASK US

Q—Isn't the chamber banquet held during the White Buffalo Festival? Why was it not held this year?

A—The chamber banquet was held in conjunction with the festival a couple of years ago, but has since been moved to the spring. The next one is March 13.

Austin, Las Vegas are tops in growth

NEW YORK (AP) — What do Las Vegas; Austin, Texas, and Boise, Idaho, do better than the megacities of New York, Philadelphia and Los Angeles?

They're better at producing new jobs, and a survey in Forbes magazine says that's because they have lower taxes, wages, office rents and other costs of doing business.

"There's no mystery: Business creates jobs, and business goes where — other things being fairly equal — costs are low," said the article, "It's the costs, stupid," appearing in the Oct. 21 issue of Forbes.

The survey found that Las Vegas gained 162,000 jobs, a 38 percent net increase, from January 1990 to July 1996, ranking it No. 1 in job creation among 36 cities. Its business costs were 10 percent below the national average, according to the magazine, which hits the newsstands Monday.

The magazine said low taxes were a key factor in Las Vegas' lure. "With lower taxes, everything else becomes cheaper, too: wages, rents, energy costs."

The Austin-San Marcos metropolitan area in Texas tied with Boise, Idaho, for second place in the jobs sweepstakes. The magazine said each area posted a 34 percent gain in jobs over the January 1990-July 1996 period. And their costs of doing business were under the national average. The net increase in employment was figured after deducting any job losses.

At the bottom of the scale was Philadelphia.

The survey calculated that the City of Brotherly Love actually lost jobs, down 6 percent overall, during the 1990-96 period, and that its costs for businesses were 10 percent above the national average.

Other job losers were: Hartford, Conn.; Los Angeles; Honolulu; San Francisco; New Haven, Conn.; and New York. Employment gains during that period were offset by the number of jobs that left the regions.

Again, the survey found that all those cities, especially New York, were pricey for businesses. New York's costs were 42 percent above average.

Among the winners, the Fayetteville-Springdale-Rogers metro area in Arkansas saw the number of jobs climb by 30 percent over the 5½-year period as did the Provo-Orem region of Utah. Their business costs were below the national norm, the magazine said.

Salt Lake City posted a 27 percent gain in jobs, while Albuquerque, N.M., was not far behind at 26 percent for the same period.

Green Bay, Wis., and the McAllen-Edinburg-Mission area of Texas each showed an overall increase of 23 percent in employment, according to Forbes. Seven areas scored employment gains of 21 percent over the period. They were: Elkhart-Goshen, Ind.; Fort-Myers-Cape Coral, Fla.; Orlando, Fla.; Raleigh-Durham-Chapel Hill, N.C.; Reno, Nev.; San Antonio, and Springfield, Mo.

Rounding out the list of low-cost cities were the Portland, Ore.-Vancouver, Wash., region with a job increase of 20 percent, and the Florida metro area of Tampa-St. Petersburg-Clearwater, with 19 percent more jobs than in 1990.

The cost data was compiled by Patrick Howie of Regional Financial Associates Inc., of West Chester, Pa.

Big oil merger is discussed

NEW YORK (AP) — Three of the world's biggest oil companies — Texaco, Shell and Saudi Aramco — are talking about combining U.S. refinery and marketing operations that account for 15 percent of U.S. gasoline sales.

The deal would combine assets valued at more than $10 billion, the Wall Street Journal reported today. It would create two companies and retain the Texaco and Shell names at service stations.

Shell Oil Co. and Texaco Inc. confirmed today that talks were under way but said no decisions have been made.

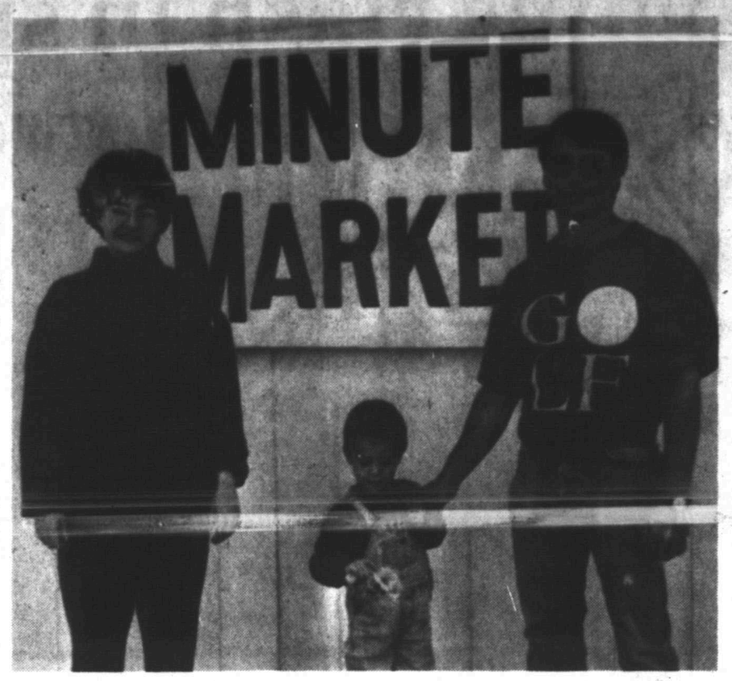

A merger would combine operations of Texaco with Shell, the U.S. unit of Royal Dutch/Shell Group, one of the world's largest publicly traded oil companies, and Star Enterprise, a joint venture between Texaco and Saudi Aramco, the state oil company of Saudi Arabia.

The combined companies would become the largest marketers of petroleum products in the country. Work on the alliance will continue for the next few months, Texaco said in a statement.

A statement from Shell said the company believes joint arrangements "would be positive for customers, employees and the future of U.S. downstream operations," a reference to oil refining and marketing.

Shell has almost 8,800 gas stations in the United States, with 7.5 percent of U.S. sales. Texaco has about 14,000 stations and about 7. percent of the market.

The companies have more than 23,500 employees in refining and marketing operations. The merger could save the companies money through layoffs of administrators and shared environmental research, the Journal reported.

Cottons owners of Minute Market

William and Shari Cotton are the new owners of Minute Market.

Make that Cotton's Minute Market & Laundry.

"We're pretty excited about it," said Shari.

The couple opened the store on Tuesday after purchasing it from Lou Cox just one day earlier. Mrs. Cox, who opened the store with her husband, Walter, in 1973, sold the business after deciding to retire.

William, a 1984 graduate of Snyder High School, likes to point out that the business is "hometown owned and operated."

Store and laundry hours are 7 a.m. until 10:30 p.m. seven days a week. The Cottons are considering opening an hour earlier.

A fresh coat of paint and a few other changes are upcoming, but the Cottons don't plan much renovation. They like the atmosphere the store reflects.

"We carry all the things that other convenience stores carry, but this is more like a neighborhood store," said Shari. "It's a real friendly atmosphere."

As a result, the store carries a few specialty items, such as Mexican bread, tabloids and special magazines which customers in the area have come to expect.

Of course, the store offers the usual convenience store items — bread, milk, canned goods, chips, a wide assortment of drinks, hot and cold deli sandwiches, candy, cooking oil, some spices, toiletries, medicinal supplies, tobacco products, oil for the car and much more. Customers needing laundry items such as soap and softener will find a wider variety than most other convenience stores carry, the Cottons noted. They accept the Lone Star Card.

William said the couple plan to keep all the items they presently carry, plus add lotto games.

A window connecting the market and the laundry makes it easy for the Cottons to respond if a customer has a problem with a machine or needs change.

"The laundry is always attended, and most people feel more comfortable knowing that," Shari pointed out.

In addition to the market and laundry, the couple own the building next door, which is leased to Shandra Tate and operated as The Hair Works, a beauty salon.

William and Shari have lived in Ira for almost five years. Shari is a native of Louisiana. William is a Snyder native, the son of Tommy and Sue Cotton.

They have two boys, three-year-old Seth and six-month-old Jared.

Cotton's Minute Market & Laundry is located at the corner of Avenue F and Coliseum Drive.

Boy's hysterectomy is focus of probe

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A $10,000 bill for a runny nose. A hysterectomy performed on a 16-year-old boy.

Those bogus bills were among two examples of insurance fraud by foreign doctors that has prompted an FBI investigation, the Los Angeles Times reported Sunday.

Foreign doctors are bilking U.S. insurance companies by submitting fake bills with the consent of the insured, or by inflating bills, according to the FBI.

A San Diego-based task force is looking into rings of Mexican clinics who falsely bill for procedures such as $17,000 emergency appendectomies on Americans, the Times said.

"It's a game and if you're not watching it, it's a very lucrative game," said Louis Lovato, an investigator for Blue Shield of California.

In Pakistan and Bangladesh, huge bills have been submitted for emergency surgery allegedly performed on Americans, the newspaper reported. The claim for the teen-age boy's hysterectomy was submitted from Iran.

Catching false foreign claims is often difficult. Sometimes the insured is taking part and backs up the false claim. And because insurance companies tend not to share information, fraud schemes can operate over a wide range of companies before they are stopped.

"It's very difficult to know how much of this there is, because every insurance company operates as its own little fiefdom," said George Tellichet, an assistant U.S. attorney in Houston.

Private insurance companies are not the only targets of fraud, the Times reported. Medi-Cal, California's insurance for the poor and disabled, has been hit because it covers emergency medical care in Mexico and Canada.

In one case, Medi-Cal was billed $10,230 for five days of hospital treatment given a 10-year-old girl with a cold in Tijuana. The girl had actually been examined for 20 minutes and given antibiotics, the paper reported.

"It's unbelievable," said Norma Hilding, the girl's mother. "We never stayed in any hospital."

Glenn Lewis earns CAA

LUBBOCK — Glenn Lewis of Snyder was selected by Lubock Christian University to receive the Congregational Ambassador Award.

Thirty-six incoming freshmen were chosen to receive this honor. Lewis is a member of the 37th St. Church of Christ.

The award is given to students based on their spiritual maturity, academic achievement, service to the community, leadership in extracurricular activities and potential for continued success. The recipient must maintain full-time student status and a cumulative GPA of 3.0 while enrolled at LCU. In addition, the student must score a minimum of 20 on the ACT or the SAT equivelent.

The award is comprised of grants/or scholarships totaling $3,500. The award is renewable for four continuous academic years if qualifications are maintained.

Each recipient of the CAA participates in at least three recruiting events for LCU during the year. This is done to provide the student with the opportunity to further develop their leadership skills.

Fox enters news market

NEW YORK (AP) — Dispensing with formalities, the Fox News Channel signed on today with a crisp "Good morning" to become cable's third all-news source.

First story: Sunday night's presidential debate.

First live remote: correspondent Gary Matsumoto from Rome, reporting on health problems besetting Pope John Paul II.

First pair of co-anchors: Allison Costarene and Louis Aguirre, who sat at glass-top tables against an eye-pleasing pastel backdrop as they greeted any of 17 million cable subscribers who might have been among the charter audience.

A few minutes before that 6 a.m. EDT kickoff, Roger Ailes, chairman of Fox's news division, was rousing the troops in the newsroom of FNC headquarters in Rupert Murdoch's News Corp. building.

"You set?" he called over to one cluster of staff members. "Too much laughter over there," he mock-chided another group — "act nervous!" No one did.

As FNC joined CNN and MSNBC in cable's all-news alphabet soup, it fulfilled Murdoch's dream of plugging a TV-news operation into his global media empire — a dream he's already spent more than $100 million to realize.

You Can Run, but You Can't Hide From the IRS

DEAR ABBY: Will you please answer this question: What happens to someone who does not file an income tax return?

I say the consequences are serious, but my friend Katie doesn't think so. A dinner rests on your answer.

DOROTHY MACKENZIE, MONTEREY, CALIF.

DEAR DOROTHY: Katie owes you a dinner. I called Mary E. McGuire, EA, president of the National Association of Enrolled Agents (tax experts), who explained:

"When the IRS determines that someone has failed to file a tax return, that person is sent a reminder to file one. If the request is ignored, the IRS will take the information they have and prepare a Substitute for Return (SFR).

"The taxpayer is then billed for the amount shown on the SFR, plus interest and penalties dating from the time the return should have been filed. These penalties and interest accumulate until the tax debt is paid.

"If the bill is ignored, the delinquent taxpayer's salary will be garnisheed and a lien will be placed on his or her property.

"If it's proven that the individual is unable to pay the tax, the IRS may mark the case 'uncollectible.' However, should the IRS learn that the taxpayer has become able to pay the delinquent taxes, they'll be back on your doorstep again.

"Although a few people have been sent to jail for failure to pay, the IRS usually tries to work with taxpayers to resolve the problem."

My advice to people who may be tempted to ignore their tax returns: Resist the temptation and pay the tax when it is due. If you can't pay it all in one lump sum, in most cases the IRS will set up a schedule of payments to help you.

DEAR ABBY: Hey! This is a little sister in Virginia Beach. I am 13 years old and I totally agree with the teen driving contract you printed.

I know how my sister drives when our mom is not in the car, so I'm glad Mom read the contract and made my sister sign it.

I just wanted to say thanks.

LITTLE SISTER

DEAR LITTLE SISTER: How nice of you to let me know. It is gratifying that people of all ages appreciate the importance of the teen driving contract.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column, a reader objected to the perfumed ads in magazines. I sympathize with her, especially in view of her allergies. Abby, I am sure she is a nice lady with high ethical standards. However, she was out of line to assume that anything that was perfumed came from (or belonged to) a "house of ill repute."

This reminds me of the two gentlemen in adjacent chairs in a barbershop. As the barber started to sprinkle something on the hair of one of the men, he stopped the barber, saying, "Don't put any of that stuff on me — my wife will think I've been in a parlor of horizontal entertainment!"

The man in the chair next to him said to the barber, "Well, you can sprinkle some on me. My wife has never been in one of those places."

Ex welfare recipient works at putting people to work

ORANGE, N.J. (AP) — Rocco Meola sits at his cluttered desk, paging through want ads and financial publications. He's looking for jobs — lots of jobs.

Meola wants employers with high worker demand and low requirements for education and experience to move people off the welfare rolls into the working world. His diligence has paid off for hundreds of people like Sonia Concepcion.

A 27-year-old high school dropout from Puerto Rico and mother of four, Concepcion was on welfare for a decade before coming to Meola's First Occupational Center of New Jersey.

She had few job skills but she did have a driver's license. After completing the center's six-week course to earn a commercial license, she began driving a school bus part-time for $9 an hour.

"I'm going to be able to buy my girls what they want and need and be able to pay my bills and not have to wait for the welfare check to pay them," Concepcion said.

"I don't like to be on welfare, but sometimes you can do nothing else and you have to stick there until you get an opportunity, like I did."

Meola's center is a success story as the nation undergoes wrenching welfare reform, ending six decades of open-ended assistance to the poor. Last August, President Clinton drastically changed the welfare system, signing into law a lifetime limit of five years on welfare benefits and a requirement that able-bodied adults go to work after two years.

The center had a long tradition of working with the developmentally disabled and physically handicapped when it expanded its program in 1993 to train welfare recipients for jobs.

"We work with the toughest group of people on welfare — the people considered unplaceable, who don't have a high school education, don't have work experience — and I'm still getting them a job in eight weeks and that's like magic," said Kris Retlin, the agency's program coordinator.

The agency targets its training toward three jobs it knows are available — home health aides, commercial drivers and boiler operators. It is looking to expand into other areas such as security and warehouse work.

"I think we've made believers out of people," said Meola, president and chief executive of First Occupational. "Especially when you say you can ... find jobs for $10 or $12 an hour."

First Occupational has enrolled 275 people since 1993 in its three welfare-to-jobs programs. Of them, 28 washed out, 86 are still being trained and 161 graduated. All but one of the graduates are working.

Debate continues on school rules or common sense

WASHINGTON (AP) — Suspended: A 13-year-old honor student in Ohio for having Midol at school. A first-grader in North Carolina for a kiddie smooch.

Two co-eds at a Roman Catholic high school in Florida refused to remove "pro-choice" stickers from their cars and were suspended, as was an Anderson, S.C., boy who wore a jacket to school with a Confederate battle flag on back.

Buffeted by lawsuits and lesser criticisms, many school administrators have begun following to the letter school rules on weapons, clothing, drugs and potentially offensive behavior. Many want to ensure their students respect differences among classmates. Others are trying hard — too hard, some say — for "political correctness."

"They're going and getting all strict now because there's all this crime," said Robert Evans, a senior at Archbishop Carroll High School in Washington.

Many educators agree with the Washington 17-year-old. They say removing students from school is not the first choice for discipline, but officials have become quick to suspend in response to public anxiety over school safety.

"You may see that we are cracking down more to be sensitive to what the public wants," said Carole Kennedy, principal at New Haven Elementary School in Columbia, Mo., and president of the National Association of Elementary School Principals.

Some educators also fear lawsuits filed by parents alleging their child's right to free speech or expression has been violated or the school did too little to protect their child's safety, said Gwendolyn Gregory, deputy general counsel of the National School Boards Association.

They read about the jury in San Francisco that awarded $500,000 to a student on finding that school officials ignored her complaints about a sixth-grade boy's almost daily barrage of vulgarities, lewd insults and threats. The jury ordered the school district to pay 93 percent of the award; the boy's family, $27,000; the girl's former principal, $6,000.

In response to inquiries, the U.S. Department of Education issued policy guidelines in August for peer sexual harassment. Norma Cantu, the department's assistant secretary for civil rights, said harassment that "creates a hostile environment" is a federal offense, covered by a law prohibiting sex discrimination in educational programs and activities. Thus, she said, a school can be liable for failing to respond appropriately to a pupil's complaint of sexual harassment by a classmate.

From north of the border

You probably think this column is about a Canadian — logical, but inaccurate. Many foreign players attended the Summer Nationals last August. One was Gerald Haase from Scotland, north of what used to be my English border. He showed me this deal but asked me not to name the declarer.

True, one spade wouldn't be the choice of many players over here, but they do that sort of thing in Britain.

After South balanced with two hearts, for North to jump to game was the work of a moment.

West started with the ace and another heart. (Yes, the diamond king is a more effective opening lead here.) Declarer overtook dummy's heart jack with his king to play a club to dummy's eight. After winning with the ace, East returned his last trump to dummy's queen, stopping any diamond ruffs in the dummy. Instead, South ruffed a club in his hand, but the jack didn't drop.

Now declarer needed three dummy entries, two to establish the clubs and one to reach them. So, all three of dummy's spade honors had to win tricks. Declarer continued with the spade king to dummy's ace, just in case East had a (most unlikely) singleton jack. Next South ruffed a club with his last trump. Then he played a spade to dummy's 10! A club was conceded to West's king, but South had 10 tricks: three spades, four hearts, one diamond and two clubs.

Note that if South starts with a low spade to dummy's queen, West can defeat the contract. When South leads his second low spade, West inserts the jack, killing the third entry.

Who was this skillful declarer, do you think?

Bride takes plunge!

DREXEL, Mo. (AP) — Talk about taking the plunge. The bride wore white satin, a striped leather helmet and black polyester jump suit.

Terri Essex said she'd always wanted to try skydiving, but never got around to it until her wedding day Saturday, when she leaped from an airplane 10,000 feet above her wedding party.

"It's kind of like giving away the bride just by pushing her out the airplane door," said tandem jump instructor Pat Ensign, who accompanied the bride on her maiden dive.

"I'm more nervous about her coming down than I am about getting married," said groom Stephen Foster, on terra firma, squinting into the bright sky.

The couple had planned a no-fuss Las Vegas wedding, but when they couldn't arrange enough time for the trip, the bride's father, Danny Payne, suggested combining their nuptials with his annual fly-in barbecue.

Payne even gave the bride away. Sort of.

"When he opened the door and my legs dangled down, I said to my dad, 'I can't. I can't,'" Essex said. "He just squeezed my hand."

She jumped. A few minutes later, she was on the ground, her shaking hands peeling away the jumpsuit to reveal her wedding gown.

Essex and Foster exchanged vows, pausing twice for the deafening roar of departing planes, then headed into Payne's hangar for their wedding barbecue.

Is vegetable oil a valid therapy?

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: A friend had trouble urinating until he began taking capsules of pure pumpkin seed oil. His problem has now disappeared. The man is articulate and convinced me to try it. However, when I bought the capsules, there was nothing on the label to even tell me if all the 1,000 mg were saturated fat, and I had second thoughts about taking them. Does the oil shrink the prostate and aid urination, or is this a lot of bunk?

DEAR READER: I am not aware of any valid scientific studies showing that pumpkin seed oil affects the prostate. Even so, I don't reject the possibility of beneficial effects out of hand.

Most vegetable oils are unsaturated (and, therefore, healthful), so they are safe to use and usually won't increase serum cholesterol levels. If the pumpkin seed oil helps you, write me back with details, and I'll gladly research the topic more thoroughly and pass your experience on to other readers. In addition, you might consider seeing a urologist for a definitive diagnosis.

To give you more information on the prostate, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "The Prostate Gland." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please comment on clogged carotid arteries. I have a friend who has one completely occluded and the other 75 percent clogged. She went to two doctors; the first suggested surgery on both arteries and the second suggested no surgery at all. Can you explain this?

DEAR READER: As we age, we develop arteriosclerotic plaques in our arteries that not only reduce the circulation of blood but may also predispose us to thrombi (blood clots that form on such plaques).

The carotid arteries are major sources of blood supply to the brain. When affected by arteriosclerotic blockages, these occluded arteries can set the stage for a major stroke.

In your friend's case, one carotid is completely blocked, and the other is severely compromised. This situation is a time bomb; sooner or later, she may have a stroke.

Not being familiar with the details of the case, I hesitate to arbitrate the disagreement between the physicians who are involved in your friend's medical care. But I can say that surgery to remove arteriosclerotic plaque (and thereby re-establish a normal blood flow) should certainly be considered, especially if she has had TIAs (transient ischemic attacks marked by temporary confusion or weakness).

At the very least, she should — in my opinion — be taking one aspirin a day to prevent inappropriate blood clots.

To resolve this issue, your friend should consult with a neurologist. A third opinion is certainly warranted in this situation.

Lady Tigers move into 3rd place with two-set match over Estacado

LUBBOCK — The Snyder Lady Tigers moved into a tie for third place in District 2-4A here Saturday by taking a two-game match with Estacado, 15-7, 15-8.

Snyder and Estacado both have the same loop record at 2-2. Third place is more important this year since the top three teams advance to the playoffs.

The Lady Tigers got a very balanced scoring attack with four players getting six-points each. Raechele Wemken, Tiffany Garza, Shawn Purcell and Leila Helms accounted for 24 of Snyder's 30 points.

Joanie Wemken, Lila King and Amanda Huff all had two each to round out the scoring.

Garza knocked down 11 kills in the match. Raechele Wemken had five, Halea Huestis and Darla Blackwell one.

"Estacado was better than they have been in the past," said SHS coach Patty Grimmett. "Our offense and defense looked better. We stayed up and remained focused on the game."

The Lady Tigers will close out the first half of district play Tuesday when they host Plainview at the SHS gym.

In other action Saturday, the JV was victorious over Estacado, 15-9, 15-9.

Amy Ricks was high point with nine. Felsha Biggers added six, Shannon Hall five, Bradi Johnson and Erica Arellano each with four and Traci Eicke two.

Ricks and Arellano both served three aces, Johnson two and Eicke and Biggers one. Leslie Daniell had four kills, Arellano three, Johnson and Alicia Peoples two, Ricks and Starla Davis one.

The freshmen competed in the Lamesa tournament and came away with fourth place. The freshmen won the first match over Andrews, 15-4, 11-15, 15-13 before dropping two matches, the first to Denver City, 3-15, 15-5, 10-15, and then to Lamesa 15-8, 0-15, 9-15.

WTC Rodeo team has poor performance at Sul Ross

ALPINE — If you were to look at the first two rodeos and see how the Western Texas College men's rodeo team had done, and then look at the results of the team at the Sul Ross State University rodeo, you would have to think it was not a good outing.

The men's team left with a fourth place finish after scoring only 70 points. Going into last weekend's performances, WTC was averaging 292.5 points an outing and led the region by 232.5

Tarleton took the top spot with 397.5 points and at the same time took over first place in the region with 737.5. WTC is in second with 655.

The WTC ladies held on to third in the region by adding 70 points to its total. Tarleton won the women's division by doubling its season total to 620. WTC is 230 points behind at 390.

Individually for the men, Jeff Decker, sophomore from Perryton, was second in saddle bronc riding with 123 points. In the short go, Decker was second with a 69.

Miles Bell, sophomore from Plainview, was fourth in bareback riding with 141 points. Chad Maynard, freshman from Eastland, finished out of the money with 133.

Shanna Ferguson, freshman from Ovalo, took the top spot in breakaway with a 5.8 (2.7, 3.1). Three other ladies from WTC competed, but did not place. Mandy Younger, freshman from Grand Junction, Colo., had a combined time of 7.2; Chasity Rickman, sophomore from Hereford, 8.1; and Paige Burlesmith, freshman from Tatum, N.M., had a 3.3 in the long go, but no time in the short go.

Sophomore Tona Wright from Moriarty, N.M. rode to a third place finish in barrels with a 35.68 (17.96, 17.72). In goat tying, Wright had a 10.2 in the long go, but no time in the finals.

Jana McCloy, sophomore from Gruver, had a 9.8 in the short go, but no time in the finals. Rickman finished out of the money with as time of 29.2 on two goats.

In calf roping, Rusty Henard, sophomore from Tatum, N.M., had a combined time of 32.7. Ryan Weaver, sophomore from Calhoun, Ga., took a 7.9 in steer wrestling in the long go, but could not come up with a time in the finals.

In bulls, Jay Ross Bryant, freshman from Comanche, rode to a 77 in the short go, but was bucked off in the long go.

The next outing will be at the Vernon Regional Junior College rodeo beginning Thursday.

Watch out Florida, here comes No. 2 Ohio State

By The Associated Press

Don't look back Florida, Ohio State's gaining on you.

After consecutive victories over top-five teams, the Buckeyes moved into the No. 2 ranking in The Associated Press' Top 25 college football poll Sunday, and within 34 points of the top-ranked Gators.

A week after beating Notre Dame, ranked fifth at the time, Ohio State dominated Penn State and won 38-7 Saturday. The Lions (5-1), who were No. 4, fell to No. 10 in this week's poll, while Florida State, a despite a 34-3 win over Clemson, dropped to No. 3.

The Buckeyes (4-0) received 24 first-place votes and 1,609 points, while Florida (5-0) held the top spot with 38 first-place votes and 1,643 points from the 67 sports writers and broadcasters who vote in the AP poll.

After beating Notre Dame, the Buckeyes moved from fourth to third, and had just one first-place vote to 57 for the Gators and eight for the Seminoles. In this week's poll, Ohio State gained 23 first-place votes, while Florida lost 19 and Florida State four.

"It's been a long time since someone went to South Bend and beat Notre Dame and then came back the next week and beat a top team like Penn State," Buckeyes coach John Cooper said. "I'm happy we're No. 2 and happy for our players, but our position is you don't get too high and you don't get too low. Just be there when it's over."

The Seminoles (4-0) had four first-place votes and 1,557 points, while Arizona State (5-0) moved up to No. 4 after a 56-7 win over Boise State. The Sun Devils got one first-place vote and 1,471 points.

Two-time defending national champion Nebraska (3-1) advanced to two places to No. 5 with a 39-3 win over previously unbeaten Kansas State.

Michigan (4-1), ranked sixth last week, fell to No. 14 after a 17-16 loss to Northwestern (4-1), which jumped seven spots to No. 15.

Miami (4-0), preparing for Saturday's home game against Florida State, was sixth, followed by Tennessee, Alabama, Colorado and Penn State.

Notre Dame was 11th, followed by Louisiana State, North Carolina, Michigan, Northwestern, Washington, West Virginia, Auburn, Brigham Young and Virginia.

California (5-0) defeated Southern California 22-15, and moved into the poll at No. 21, followed by Kansas State, Georgia Tech, Wyoming and Texas.

Georgia Tech, a 13-7 winner over previously unbeaten Virginia, and Cal jumped into the poll for the first time this season. The Cavaliers fell eight spots to No. 20.

USC (3-2) and Utah (5-1), despite a 34-27 win over Texas-El Paso, dropped out of the poll.

Hanspard named offensive player of the week in Big 12

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Tech running back Byron Hanspard's school-record 287-yard rushing performance against Baylor was more than enough to make him this week's Big 12 offensive player of the week.

The junior from DeSoto, Texas, scored two touchdowns as the Red Raiders downed the previously unbeaten Bears 45-24 in Tech's homecoming game. He has six 200-yards-plus rushing performances in his last seven games.

On the other side of the line, Nebraska linebacker Terrell Farley won the laurels as Big 12 defensive player of the week as he spearheaded a Cornhuskers defense that helped shut down host Kansas State 39-3.

The Columbus, Ga., senior logged five tackles as Nebraska held the 12th-ranked Wildcats to 25 net yards rushing and sacked Kansas State quarterback Brian Kavanagh for four yards on the game's second play.

Rangers have taste for more postseason play

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Texas Rangers went farther than they've ever been before, and it left them with a taste for more.

"I told my guys that I thanked them for the journey and to start making a commitment for a bit longer trip next year," Texas manager Johnny Oates said after Saturday's season-ending loss to the New York Yankees. "I'm excited about the performance we had this year, and we really look forward to next year."

The West Division champions advanced to the postseason for the first time in the team's 25-year history. After winning the opener 6-2, the Rangers blew a 4-1 lead in Game 2, a 2-1 ninth-inning lead in Game 3 and a 4-0 lead in Game 4.

"We did everything we could to stay ahead because we didn't want to go into the seventh or eighth innings behind against their bullpen," Oates said. "Most teams can automatically go to a relief pitcher in the ninth inning, but we didn't have that luxury this year."

Mike Henneman, signed as a free agent, didn't turn into the stopper the Rangers needed.

Getting better relief pitching will be one of the Rangers big objectives in the offseason. Texas has 12 players potentially eligible for free agency, including center fielder Darryl Hamilton, shortstop Kevin Elster and pitchers Bobby Witt and Jeff Russell.

"We had the lead in every one of the games, but we couldn't put 'em away," first baseman Will Clark said.

General manager Doug Melvin proclaimed 1996 a successful season for Texas.

"We got one big monkey off our back by getting into the postseason," he said. "It was not like we were manhandled."

Texas finished 90-72, 4½ games against the Seattle Mariners, who won the division in 1995.

"We broke the ice by getting there," third baseman Dean Palmer said. "It would have been nice to go farther."

Texas was only out of first place for four days and led Seattle by nine games with 17 to play. But the Rangers lost a four-game series at the Kingdome and Seattle closed within a game on Sept. 20.

John Burkett threw a seven-hitter the next day, and the Rangers beat California 7-1 to get back on track. Burkett, acquired from Florida in an August trade, went 5-2.

"That's one thing that was impressive about this team this year," designated hitter Mickey Tettleton said. "The toughest losses didn't carry over, and there was never any panic. We came out of spring training with a quiet confidence and we kept it."

Texas saved its best for the toughest teams, going 7-5 against the New York Yankees, 8-4 against Cleveland and 10-3 against Baltimore.

Oilers finally pull one out

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Houston Oilers finally shook their tag as a first-half team.

The Oilers had the odds against them Sunday when they came out of the locker room at halftime trailing the Cincinnati Bengals. They had lost the last 11 times they were behind at the half.

It took a lot of doing — a career game by Eddie George, several fabulous returns by Mel Gray, a season-long kick by Al Del Greco — but the Oilers finally won one in the end.

Del Greco's 49-yard field goal in overtime clinched a 30-27 victory and taught the Oilers what it's like to play well at clutch time.

"We've just experienced what it's like to win a close game," said George, who picked up 152 yards on 26 carries. "I hope when we're in that situation again, we'll know how to handle it."

The Oilers (3-2) kept themselves afloat by rallying from a 10-point deficit in the second half. George's 45-yard touchdown run and Del Greco's 32-yard field goal tied it 20-all at the start of the fourth quarter.

The teams exchanged touchdowns and the Bengals (1-4) moved into position to win it, but Doug Pelfrey was wide right on a 40-yard attempt as time ran out in regulation.

Local bank fraud trial is delayed indefinitely

LUBBOCK — The trial for a Colorado woman indicted for fraud in 1994 along with two Snyder brothers is on hold in Federal District Court.

Heather Altschuler's trial, scheduled to begin this morning, has been put on hold indefinitely because a previously scheduled case is taking longer to hear.

U.S. Attorney Steven M. Sucsy, lead prosecutor in the Altschuler case, said he would not be surprised if the trial is moved to November, but has received no ruling from the judge.

Altschuler was indicted in October of 1994 along with Snyder brothers Arlie and Johonnas Eicke on 21 counts of conspiracy, wire fraud, mail fraud and interstate transportation of falsely-made securities.

Prosecutors had intended to try all three defendants at the same time, but Altschuler fought extradition after she was arrested in London, England, and only the Eicke brothers were tried together.

They were found guilty on Aug. 11, 1995 in Federal District Court. Johonnas was sentenced to 71 months in a federal prison. Arlie was sentenced to a 38-month term but six more months were added when he failed to report to prison.

"Odd man out" thought debate interesting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ross Perot said Sunday the presidential debate that he was excluded from was "interesting to listen to," but neither President Clinton nor Republican rival Bob Dole talked about the real problems the country faces.

"It was interesting to listen to," Perot said on CNN's "Larry King Live." "My concern is that they never went to the core problems. The core problem is that we have two parties that control our government."

He also said neither candidate really addressed the country's financial situation.

"We are on a financial precipice that we cannot let the country fall off of," Perot said.

Perot appeared on the show shortly after the presidential debates between Clinton and Dole in Hartford, Conn. It is a favorite Perot forum, who declared his candidacy on King's show in 1992 and debated Vice President Gore on the NAFTA agreement in 1993.

Perot had predicted earlier Sunday that after going one-on-one with Clinton, Dole would regret that Perot was kept from participating in the presidential debates.

"Senator Dole will probably be missing me a lot. He would wish that there was a third person there because it's just one-on-one tonight, and that will be a tough game," Perot said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Perot, who lost a court battle to reverse the decision by the Commission on Presidential Debates that shut him out of the face-offs, took his case to the nation Sunday. He appeared on CBS and a 30-minute infomercial on ABC prior to the debates and on the King show afterward to answer the same questions posed to Clinton and Dole.

"They've done everything they can to freeze us out. We've got them bracketed tonight. That's one example of our strategy," said Perot, the billionaire Texan running at the head of his Reform Party.

Perot also insisted that he will stay in the race, regardless of his exclusion from the debates and his difficulties in buying television air time. "We will be in this race to the end because I want the American people to vote their conscience," he said.

The Texas billionaire appeared on a 30-minute infomerical on ABC two hours before the debate began. Sitting with running mate Pat Choate, Perot complained about his exclusion from the debates and the 120 days granted to the Federal Election Commission to review that decision.

"They could make a decision quickly, but they won't," he said.

Perot won 19 percent of the vote in 1992, when he appeared in the debates with Clinton and President Bush. But the debate commission ruled that he should not be allowed to participate this year because his national poll support is running in single digits and he doesn't have a chance to win.

Dole's campaign, which sees a strong Perot candidacy as more damaging to Dole than Clinton, embraced that decision.

Perot predicted in advance that Clinton and Dole would avoid discussion of the issues he sees as key, including how to overhaul entitlement programs such as Medicare and Social Security to prevent a financial meltdown in the future.

"We'll be talking about free candy for the people tonight," he said.

Perot said Dole's 15 percent tax cut plan was ill-advised at a time of financial crisis and criticized Clinton's deployment of troops in places such as Bosnia and Haiti, suggesting that a war tax should be imposed every time Americans are sent overseas so that all citizens share the sacrifices.

School breakfast numbers grow

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even as Congress was eliminating funding for new school breakfast efforts in the recently enacted welfare overhaul law, participation in the nutrition program was increasing, said a study released today.

During the 1995-96 school year, low-income students at a record 65,000 public and private schools were able to eat federally subsidized breakfasts, according to an annual survey by the Food Research and Action Center, an advocacy group on hunger and nutrition issues.

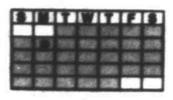

"The principals, teachers and families ... know what a difference a school breakfast makes," said Michele Tingling-Clemmons of the center. "Without school breakfast, many children would have to start their class work on an empty stomach."

Many low-income families have counted on school meal programs to ensure that their children receive needed nutrition during the day. Numerous studies have shown that kids who have eaten adequately before class find it easier to pay attention.

The survey found that in schools that offer both breakfast and lunch programs, many needy students use both. About 71 percent of the schools that provide lunch also serve breakfast, and nearly four in 10 — 39.6 percent — of the children who eat subsidized lunches also use the breakfast program.

With dash of wit...

Bombing trial judge calm

DENVER (AP) — First came the separate trials issue pushed by Oklahoma City bombing suspects Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols. Next, squabbles over prison food, evidence and the media.

With a dash of dry wit and the calmness of a kindergarten teacher, U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch considered them all last week, moving the Oklahoma City bombing case one step closer to a trial date — or dates.

Prosecutors and defense attorneys alike respect Matsch for his meticulous research and basing his rulings on facts, not emotion.

They expect no less of him on the most critical issue argued last week: Whether McVeigh and Nichols should be tried separately. Matsch took the matter under advisement, and is expected to set a trial date after he rules.

"Judge Matsch has been cautious," said Irven Box, an Oklahoma City attorney and TV trial analyst who attended the pretrial hearing. "Each side has been given every opportunity."

McVeigh and Nichols are charged with murder and conspiracy in the April 19, 1995, bombing of the Oklahoma City federal building, which killed 168 people and injured more than 500. If convicted, they could face the death penalty.

Prosecutors say most evidence will be admitted against both men and a joint trial would be more efficient and less traumatic for witnesses, bombing survivors and family members.

McVeigh and Nichols say it would be unfair to ask the same jury to listen to evidence admitted against each man and yet judge them individually.

One of the most critical issues centers on statements Nichols made two days after the bombing.

Nichols told FBI agents he and McVeigh were near the Murrah building three days before the bombing; and, on the day before the bombing, he lent McVeigh his pickup truck and cleaned out a storage locker at McVeigh's request on the day after.

Matsch has said the statements can be used against Nichols, but not McVeigh. That presents a constitutional question since McVeigh would not be allowed to cross-examine Nichols during a joint trial.

Matsch could order one trial and instruct the jurors to keep the evidence separate; order separate trials or seat two juries during a joint trial — one for each defendant.

Box predicted Matsch will separate the trials. "The whole question is not being able to cross-examine your accuser," he said. "To me, this is the hardest decision he's had to make."

Matsch also let the attorneys resolve a dispute involving Nichols' protest that prison officials were denying him high-fiber foods he needs for a medical condition following bowel surgery.

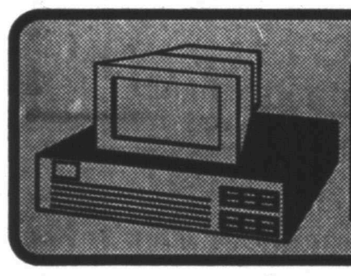

Matsch also refused to let McVeigh grant selected news media interviews.

In his handling of spectators, Matsch has controlled two courtrooms that are as different as night and day.

In the primary room, only those with proper credentials or badges are admitted. Spectators sit thigh-to-thigh on 10 hard, wooden pews — 11 per bench — with coats, purses and briefcases littering the floor. No one can leave or enter until Matsch orders a recess.

"We're all packed in where we can't really move," Box said. "The air's really bad."

In a room next door, two dozen people sit comfortably and listen to an audio feed booming from the courtroom. Most take notes; some read newspapers, stare into space or snooze.

Harley Bynum puts quality, care first

When it comes to quality, professional photography and framing there is no limit to what Harley Bynum can do.

The only Master Photographer in the area, Harley Bynum has been serving Snyder for 18 years.

"We are quality and service minded. One hundered percent satisfaction is always guaranteed," Harley said.

Earning the title of Master Photographer is no small accomplishment.

Of the thousands of photographers in Texas, only 53 have earned the degree given by the Professional Photographers of America.

Harley and his wife, Judy, can add a special touch to any photograph with specialty decorative matting and custom framing.

"Judy is skilled and trained in framing, and we have attended various seminars to keep up to date with the latest trends and styles in custom matting," Harley said.

Harley and Judy can custom frame just about anything, including photographs, documents and diplomas.

They also frame cross-stitch, wedding invitations, limited edition prints and posters of all sizes.

"We sell western prints here, or you can buy prints elsewhere and bring them in for framing," Harley said.

Individuals can also bring pictures they have taken in for framing.

If you have keepsakes, medals or any type of memorabilia you would like to display, Harley and Judy also do shadow boxes.

The studio carries a large selection of frames, including western, rustic wood, ornate gold and metal frames.

A variety of colors are available.

Best will close half of stores

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Best Products Co., a discount retailing chain that twice filed for federal bankruptcy protection, announced today that it will close nearly half of its stores.

Eighty-one of the chain's 169 catalog showroom stores and three of four distribution centers will close over the next several months. About 2,000 full-time employees and 2,500 part-time workers will lose their jobs.

A significant number of the targeted stores are in Texas, Colorado, Oregon, California and Washington state. The distribution centers being closed are in Denver, Seattle and Las Vegas.

Best Products, which specializes in jewelry and home furnishings, operates in 23 states. The closings will leave 88 stores in 17 states. The chain also gained a measure of fame from the offbeat architecture of some of its stores, which gave the illusion that walls were crumbling or peeling away from the rest of the building.

The company filed for bankruptcy protection in 1991.

Israel, Palestinians...

Talks end without accord

EREZ CHECKPOINT, Gaza Strip (AP) — At a dusty border checkpoint surrounded by fences and watchtowers, Israelis and Palestinians tried Sunday to rescue a peace effort bloodied by gun battles.

But they broke for the night without coming to an agreement on their main obstacle: whether to "adjust" the agreements signed by the two sides in 1993, as Israel wants. The Palestinians have refused to renegotiate the agreement.

Plenty of food had been taken into the meeting site in case the talks between Dan Shomron, Israel's former military chief, and Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erakat — with U.S. envoy Dennis Ross sitting in — lasted deep into the night.

But the session ended after only three hours, with both sides saying only that they were committed to the Israel-PLO peace accords. The talks were expected to continue Monday.

"We are determined to preserve the peace process and give it every chance. We will be able to put the peace process on track when we start implementing the agreements," Erakat said. "We are also determined to end all force of violence."

Shomron said the meeting was intended to "renew the system of trust that is a condition for progress."

The talks took place at the drab, military-style compound at Erez that embodies the unequal, frustrating relationship between Israelis and Palestinians.

Here, tens of thousands of Palestinian laborers used to cross daily into Israel looking for work. Israeli restrictions imposed after terrorist bombings began in 1995 have meant that only a fraction of the work force can enter even when the gates are open.

Concrete cubes the size of refrigerators are positioned on the road to guard against potential car bombers coming out the crowded, Palestinian-ruled Gaza Strip, where Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat has his headquarters.

Some of last month's gun battles were fought just two miles away.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher, who flew in for pep talks with Arafat and Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu before the meeting, took pains to show he understood Israel's security concerns.

But between meeting Netanyahu in Jerusalem and traveling to the Gaza Strip to see Arafat, he repeatedly urged "concrete results as soon as possible."

A White House statement drove the point home: "The president calls on the parties to conduct these discussions in a spirit of partnership and goodwill in order that tangible results are achieved as soon as possible."

An Israeli official said President Clinton had let both sides know at last week's summit in Washington that he expected results within 45 days.

Netanyahu, a conservative elected in May, was never happy with the deal signed by the previous government. Palestinians have accused him of dragging his feet on implementing the accord.

At a news conference with Christopher, Netanyahu said he accepted the need for speed but refused to be tied to a deadline.

Debate a lively one

College battleground states. The two candidates will meet again in 10 days, in another one-on-one encounter because of the controversial decision to exclude Ross Perot.

Dole was the aggressor throughout the night, asserting time and again that Clinton's conservative election-year rhetoric about curfews, school uniforms and welfare reform was at odds with a liberal record of giant tax increases and a giant government takeover of health care.

"I wouldn't want to be a liberal either — Mr. President — but you are stuck with it," Dole said.

Clinton shook his head at the label and called it the "golden oldie" of Republican presidential campaigns. He said that given his record of deficit reduction, paring welfare rolls and supporting the death penalty, "I just don't think that dog will hunt this time."

For all the sharp exchanges, there were several moments of laughter. "You can probably tell we like each other, we just see the world in different ways," Clinton said.

And indeed they did.

"I trust the people, the president trusts the government," Dole said.

Clinton said he trusted the people, too, but that the government had a critical role in areas such as protecting the environment, putting more police on the street and regulating tobacco sales to keep children from smoking.

Dole said the economy was not growing nearly as fast as it could, and that millions of Americans were feeling an economic squeeze. "Americans are working harder and paying higher taxes," he said. " ... I want the government to pinch pennies for a change instead of the American families."

Dole recalled Clinton's own admission that in 1993 he "had raised taxes too much." A bit later, Clinton recalled a decade-old quote from Dole's running mate, Jack Kemp, who said Dole "never met a tax he didn't hike."

With answer after answer, Clinton sought to portray Dole as bent on cutting or gutting vital government programs such as Head Start and student loans. He also criticized Dole's proposal to eliminate the Education Department. "I think my ideas are better for the future," the president said.

Clinton and Dole waged the debate on a stage at Hartford's Bushnell Theater.

County

Precinct 4 Commissioner Jerry Gannaway said the firm had been involved in the planning of the improvements and it was the firm he recommended.

In a related matter, the court appointed County Judge Ricky Fritz, County Auditor Eddie McHaney and Gannaway to be the signators for the project in Hermleigh. Checks to pay for the work can be signed by any two of them.

In other action, the court granted a sewer easement on county property just west of the Senior Citizens Center to the city in order for the state to make improvements to the bridge on 26th Street. The court also renewed the contract for attorneys to collect delinquent taxes for the same 15 percent that is currently being charged, appointed Shrunda Smith to the county welfare board and appointed ElWanda Nall to the county library board.

The court tabled action on closing a street and alleyway behind Allsup's in Hermleigh until the proposal has been properly posted for two weeks, and also tabled action on the posting of a 30 miles per hour speed limit in the McBeth Addition in the county for a two-week period.

A budget amendement in the amount of $16,927 was approved for capital improvements at Scurry County Coliseum.

Two line-item transfers were also approved. The juvenile probation office requested $500 be moved from travel to lease/rentals and a $125 transfer was requested in the general budget from general bookkeeping expense to public officials' liability insurance.

Fritz presided this morning. All commissioners were in attendance, to include Gannaway, C.D. Gray Jr., Roy Idom and Ralph Trevey.
