Clinton prepares to bomb

President's ready to take action against Serbs

■ White House voices both hope, skepticism over reports that Bosnian Serbs were withdrawing heavy equipment.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton notified Congress Friday he was prepared to order bombing by U.S. warplanes in Bosnia, even as administration officials expressed some optimism that air strikes could be averted.

All heavy weapons found within a 13-mile exclusion zone around Sarajevo that have not been surrendered to the U.N. by 7 p.m. EST Sunday "will be subject to NATO air strikes," Clinton told lawmakers.

The president planned to speak this morning to give a status report on whether Bosnian Serbs are fully complying with the deadline.

Meanwhile, the administration welcomed Russia's role in pushing Bosnian Serbs to move their artillery and said 400 Russian troops that might join peacekeeping efforts would be put under the control of the United Nations.

Officials: Suspect in state scandal commits suicide

AUSTIN (AP) — A fired state employee accused of running a prostitution ring from his office at the Department of Human Services returned to his former workplace Friday and killed himself, authorities said.

James A. Bunch, 46, was found dead of a gunshot wound to the head in the parking lot of the building where he had worked for 23 years before being fired on Tuesday, said police Lt. David Parkinson.

"We have recovered a weapon that we believe was used in the suicide," Parkinson said. "We have recovered some written material from Mr. Bunch's vehicle. We are not able to release the content of that material. But we believe it has information that backs up our finding (of suicide)."

Parkinson refused to characterize the material as a suicide note. He also declined to identify the weapon, although officers at the scene said a .38-caliber pistol was found near Bunch's body.

Bunch's death came three days after being arrested and as speculation intensified about the 400 or so clients of Aimes Escorts, a business Bunch allegedly ran for two years' using a state computer and telephone, according to authorities.

Police confirmed that a state legislator was among the clients listed but declined to identify the occupations of others.

Deputy Chief Ken Williams said the investigation into the alleged prostitu-

IRS audit

Report cites lax financial management at Internal Revenue Service

By Dave Skidmore
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The agency responsible for keeping track of Americans' money is having trouble managing its own, congressional auditors say.

The General Accounting Office said its first-ever audit of the Internal Revenue Service disclosed "fundamental deficiencies that significantly impaired its ability to properly monitor, account for, and report on use of its operating funds."

"The irony of it is if it were taxpayers with similar records, they would probably be given a hard time," said Gregory M. Holloway, the GAO's director of civil audits.

The audit, required under a 1990 law designed to improve the federal government's money management, covers the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1992. It was performed while the IRS was in the midst of replacing its accounting system with a new one.

"In some ways this is old news," said IRS Chief Financial Officer Morgan Kinghorn. "We now have (the new system) in place. It's nearly 90 percent complete and it will, over time, eliminate every problem" mentioned by the GAO.

"The old system was designed years ago. . . . It just was simply not auditable and it was not designed to be auditable," he said. "My guess is we'll have a clean opinion next year."

However, the GAO's Holloway said, "Clearly, improvements are being made, but I don't think they've fully arrived yet. There are still some problems there."

The IRS, an arm of the Treasury Department, is the nation's largest revenue collector. This year it expects to process tax returns from 117 million Americans.

Yet, according to the GAO, the IRS system for administering its own money was so bad that auditors were unable even to review 64 percent of the IRS' $6.7 billion budget in 1992.

Reno orders harassment probe

By Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Janet Reno ordered Justice Department mediators into their first case of anti-gay harassment and threats — in a tiny south Mississippi town where residents led by Baptist ministers are trying to close a feminist camp run by two lesbians.

Two mediators from Justice's Community Relations Service arrived Friday in Ovett, Miss. — population 400 — after Reno wrote a gay-rights group, "I consider the threat of violence in Ovett to be real."

Reno's order was the latest sign of the Clinton administration's sensitivity to gay issues. Earlier in the week, President Clinton wrote a letter opposing state and local referenda designed to block gay civil rights.

Last year, on Clinton's nomination, the Senate for the first time confirmed an openly gay official — Roberta Achtenberg, for a housing post. But Clinton angered as many gays as he pleased by watering down his plan to end the ban on homosexuals serving openly in the military.

'The situation in Ovett has clearly been dangerous since the time a dead dog was hung on the Hensons' mailbox and town meetings were held denouncing the women and pledging to drive them from town.'

task force director

Last month, Reno ordered the FBI to investigate after Wanda Henson, 39, and Brenda Henson, 48, who set up Camp Sister Spirit on a 120-

Parliament members urge Hosokawa to act on trade

By Eric Talmadge
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO — Fearing a trade war with the United States, Japanese politicians urged Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa on Friday to cut Japan's ballooning trade surplus by revamping the domestic market.

The heated session in Parliament reflected a growing sense of urgency after Hosokawa's summit with President Clinton last week collapsed over the two countries' failure to reach an agreement on several trade disputes.

The United States announced Thursday that its trade deficit with Japan had shot up nearly 24 percent last year to a record $59.3 billion. The previous record was $56.3 billion in 1987.

"We cannot sustain these current account imbalances. The rest of the world cannot," U.S. Ambassador Walter F. Mondale said Friday. Mondale, who is widely respected in Japan for his tact, added that Japan is "a closed market."

In Parliament, lawmakers from both the conservative opposition and Hosokawa's ruling coalition said the time has come for sweeping changes in Japan's market — something Washington has pressed for for years.

"The easygoing approach we've taken so far just won't work," said Shigeru Goto of the Socialist party, a coalition member. "Japan should take drastic action to open markets and ease regulations."

Senior opposition leader Michio Watanabe, a former foreign minister, needled Hosokawa to "get on with it, fast as you can."

Hosokawa returned from Washington saying the United States was pushing Japan to move too fast, but threats of U.S. sanctions and fears of a trade war have moved him to action. The United States is Japan's biggest export market.

On Thursday, Hosokawa said the government was working on a plan that would address four key U.S. complaints.

Colombian rebels stage violent attacks; oil workers strike

By Steven Gutkin
Associated Press Writer

BOGOTA, Colombia — Leftist rebels launched a campaign of violence throughout Colombia Friday, attacking an American school in Cali, setting fire to four buses in Medellin and ambushing an army patrol in the country's oil refining center.

Meanwhile, about 5,000 workers of the state oil company Ecopetrol went on strike to protest the arrests of two union leaders accused of belonging to a leftist rebel group.

The leftist rebels of the National Liberation Army launched their campaign of violence to protest the presence of about 250 American troops in Colombia.

The U.S. soldiers are scattered around Colombia building a naval base, a school and a clinic, maintaining U.S.-built radar systems, and training Colombian soldiers.

Rebels detonated a small bomb Friday at the American School in Cali, Colombia's third largest city. The blast shattered glass and slightly damaged the building's facade, but no one was hurt.

In recent days the rebel group has bombed three Mormon churches, a Coca-Cola bottling factory and other U.S. interests.

It also abducted two American missionaries, Timothy Van Dyke, of Towanda, Pa., and Stephen Welsh, of North Platte, Neb., on Jan. 16. There has been no word on their whereabouts.

Guerrillas were also active Friday in the country's second-largest city, Medellin. Urban rebels known as Bolivarian Militias set fire to four buses and blocked traffic in at least eight city neighborhoods.

Officials in Medellin said the attacks were to protest a preliminary peace accord signed earlier in the week between the government and armed vigilante squads in the city.

Cesar Carrillo, president of the state oil company's workers' union, said Friday's strike would last 24 hours but could be extended indefinitely if the two activists are not released. Alvaro Solano and Freddy Pulecio were arrested last week on charges of rebellion.

As the strike began, leftist rebels ambushed an army truck in Barrancabermeja, Colombia's main oil-refining town, 155 miles north of Bogota, an army report said. The rebels exploded dynamite alongside the truck as it passed on a highway, injuring seven soldiers, the report said.

For years authorities have accused the union of having links to the National Liberation Army, which has been fighting the government for more than three decades.

But union leaders say the accusations are attempts to discredit them.

An Ecopetrol spokesman said most of the company's refining and production activities would not be affected by the strike because of mechanized operations and the presence of about 6,000 non-union employees.

However, if the strike continues indefinitely, production may well suffer, said the spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

U.S. soldiers shoot two Somalis

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — American soldiers shot two Somali gunmen, apparently killing at least one of them, during separate incidents near the new port in Mogadishu, a U.S. Army spokesman said Friday.

In a third incident, a hand grenade and a land mine exploded at the compound of a British mine clearing company involved in a labor dispute with Somalis in northwest Somalia, a U.N. spokesman said. No injuries were reported.

There has been escalating violence and banditry in Somalia as U.S. and other Western forces are gradually withdrawn from the Horn of Africa nation, where they were deployed to ensure aid deliveries to Somalia's starving.

Col. Steve Rausch said an American sentry at the main gate to the port fired one round Friday afternoon, apparently killing a Somali manning a heavy machine gun mounted in the back of a pickup truck.

He said the pickup sped away, but that the gunman was hit in the head and apparently killed. The Somali did not fire and no American was injured.

Thursday night another American sentry at the port fired a single round at a Somali who aimed a rifle at the checkpoint from the back of a pickup truck.

He said the gunman was hit in the chest, the pickup sped away, and it was not known if the gunman was killed.

The sentry post later came under light sniper fire, but no one was injured and the sentries did not return fire, Rausch said.

Businessman hijacks Chinese plane to Taiwan

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — A Chinese businessman wearing a military uniform and wielding a knife and fake explosives hijacked a Chinese domestic jetliner with 130 people aboard to Taiwan on Friday.

Lin Wenqiang, 35, from China's southern Fujian province, was accompanied by his wife, two sons, aged 9 and 11, and mother, the police said.

The plane returned to China four hours after it landed at Taipei's international airport. Lin's wife, sons and mother were returned home aboard the aircraft.

Vice Justice Minister Lin Shyihwu said Lin's family was returned to China because they were not involved in the hijacking and were given the same treatment as other passengers.

He said the decision would help curb hijackings.

The state radio quoted Lin as saying he plotted the hijacking a year ago and had "no regrets even if my family members were sent back."

He said he donned the military police uniform borrowed from a friend to get past airport security.

Lin carried a glass bottle stuffed with tissues which he claimed were explosives and put a knife to the captain' neck, officials said.

The hijacking was the first from China to Taiwan this year and the 11th since April. All the previous hijackings ended peacefully, with the hijackers remaining in Taiwan for trial and the planes, crew and passengers returned to China within hours.

The epidemic of air piracy has bedeviled attempts by China and Taiwan in their efforts toward detente. The two do not recognize each other and China regards Taiwan as a renegade province.

Talks have bogged down over a number of issues, including jurisdiction over hijackers. China wants them returned immediately for trial, but Taiwan has insisted that each case be judged individually.

Taiwan officials quoted Lin as saying he hijacked the Boeing 737 belonging to China's Southwest Airlines because he was irritated by bureaucratic problems over his application to establish a company.

Train stampede kills 40 in China, news reports say

HONG KONG (AP) — More than 40 people died and 44 others were injured in a stampede of people at a crowded train station in southern China, Hong Kong news reports said Friday.

Both the South China Morning Post and the Tin Tin Yat Pao said the stampede occurred Tuesday in the city of Hengyang in Hunan province.

Quoting reports received by Hong Kong residents from relatives in Hunan, the South China Morning Post said the victims were among large crowds of people who were trying to return to the southern city of Canton after spending the Chinese New Year holidays in villages in the province.

Canton is the capital of Guangdong province, China's richest province, which borders Hunan.

Tin Tin Pao said about 10,000 people were in the station on a rainy night Tuesday, and about 3,000 of them were trying to board a freight train that had been converted to passenger use to handle the large throngs.

The stampede started when a man tried to pick up luggage he dropped on a pedestrian overpass at the station. Those behind did not stop and piled into each other, and many were trampled, it said.

Today cloudy, high near 65

Staff Report

Today's forcast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a high near 65 and west winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be mostly cloudy with an overnight low between 35 and 40, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Sunday should be mostly cloudy with a high in the lower 60s.

After an overnight low of 52, Friday's high reached 74, compared to the record high for that date of 85 set in 1986. The record low was 19 set in 1936.

STATE

Despite recent sunny skies and warm temperatures, possible thunderstorms are looming in the forecast for most parts of Texas.

Cloudy skies and mild temperatures in the 50s and 60s continued across North Texas Friday afternoon, ranging from 56 in Stephenville to 64 in Lufkin.

A wind advisory also was in effect for most of North Texas by Friday afternoon. Conditions were hazardous for boaters, large vehicles and workers on construction sites.

Winds gusted in most areas of North Texas at speeds of about 20 to 40 mph. today will be mostly cloudy with a chance of thunderstorms. There will be decreasing cloudiness by midday in the west. Highs will range from the 60s up to 75.

A strong pressure gradient across South Texas resulted in breezy conditions across all of the area Friday afternoon. Winds were south to southeast at 20 to 30 mph and gusting along the coast and the Rio Grande. Gulf moisture pouring into the area produced cloudy skies.

The forecast for South Texas calls for mostly cloudy skies and a chance of showers or thunderstorms. Today highs will be in the 70s.

Partly cloudy skies will hang over West Texas today. Highs will be in the 50s and 60s.

NATION

A combination of snow and rain fell from the Pacific Coast to the Rockies on Friday and strong winds swept through the Plains.

Seventeen inches of snow fell in the Wastach Mountains in Utah, with 5 to 7 inches in and around the Salt Lake City metropolitan area.

In the Sierra Nevada, 2 to 4 feet of snow was reported in the Lake Tahoe-Truckee, Calif., area and nearby ski resorts.

One to 2 feet of snow fell in the higher Sierra foothills of the northern Sacramento Valley.

Nine inches of snow was reported in Summitville, Colo., and 8 inches fell in the northern mountains of New Mexico.

In the nation's midsection, strong winds blew through Oklahoma, Kansas, northwest Arkansas, parts of Texas, and eastern Nebraska. Winds gusted to 52 mph at Salina, Kan., 51 mph at Enid, Okla., and 49 mph at Grand Island, Neb.

The strong southerly flow raised temperatures into the 60s and lower 70s as far north as the central Plains, the middle Mississippi Valley and the Ohio Valley.

High-temperature records were set at a few cities across the Great Lakes region, including Flint, Mich., where the high of 56 topped the 1949 record for the date by 1 degree. Other cities with records for the date were Houghton Lake, Mich., where the high of 51 broke the 1949 record by 3 degrees; Muskegon, Mich., at 52, breaking the 1961 mark of 50; and Youngstown, Ohio, at 59, breaking the 1949 record of 58.

It was wet and windy across Florida. More than an inch of rain fell during a six-hour period in Miami.

ORDER: Clinton tells Congress he's prepared to bomb

(From 1A)

The White House voiced both hope and skepticism over reports that Bosnian Serbs were withdrawing their heavy equipment from hills around the Bosnian capital.

"The test will be their actions on the ground," White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers said. "The test has not changed."

Neither will the NATO deadline, she and other administration officials emphasized.

Top national security officials met at the White House Friday on the situation and, later, Clinton sent congressional leaders formal notification that he might use U.S. force in Bosnia.

"More than 60 U.S. aircraft are available for participation in the authorized NATO missions," Clinton said in the notification.

The notice was "consistent with the War Powers Act," Clinton said. That law requires the president to notify Congress any time he sends or intends to put U.S. forces in action.

"Recent heavy weapons fire in the Sarajevo area has resulted in a continuing heavy loss of life as well as serious injuries among the civilian population," Clinton said.

A senior administration official, briefing reporters at the White House on the condition of anonymity, said between 50 and 100 pieces of Serb artillery in the demilitarized zone have been turned over to U.N. control and other equipment is leaving the area.

But the official said reports from the ground were inconclusive on whether Bosnian Serbs were intending to fully comply with the NATO ultimatum. He said more should be known by this morning.

At the Pentagon, Defense Secretary William Perry said the United States was "cautiously optimistic" about developments.

Of the Russian involvement, Perry said: "We, among other nations, have been requesting the Russians to assist, whatever they can do to help the Serbs comply with the NATO directive."

Other administration officials also praised the Russian efforts. "Obviously we welcome anything that gets the Bosnian Serbs to comply with the conditions," said an official who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

But officials also said it was important that Russian troops sent as peacekeepers be placed under U.N. control and not be used to protect Serb artillery positions. Washington has received such assurances from Moscow, the officials said.

Russian President Boris Yeltsin promised to send peacekeepers to Sarajevo if the Serbs — historical allies of the Russians — comply with NATO's demands.

Perry and Gen. John Shalikashvili, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, are to meet Sunday with their NATO counterparts in Aviano, Italy, one of the key bases for alliance aircraft that would conduct bomb strikes.

U.N. officials reported progress toward removing the weapons, although snow-choked roads slowed the pullout from hills around Sarajevo.

Joe Sills, a spokesman for Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali said the removal of Serbian heavy weapons was "moving ahead at a very good pace."

At the State Department, spokesman Mike McCurry said, "We will be watching very closely this weekend what the Serbs are doing to comply because they know exactly what they have to do, they know what will happen if they don't comply."

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, called the withdrawal of Serb weapons "heartening" although he added, "The difficulties we've had in carrying out an agreement in the past have to make you a little bit skeptical."

"But so far so good; they seem to be pulling back those guns," Hamilton said on NBC.

Hamilton also lauded Moscow for its role.

But the idea of Russian soldiers serving as peacekeepers was not as enthusiastically welcomed by Bosnia's Muslim-led government.

Bosnia's acting ambassador to the United States, Sven Alkalaj, said in an interview on Fox television: "The deployment of Russian troops on the position held by Serbs is not so good news, because we know that Russia openly sided with the Serbs."

Still, Alkalaj said, "I'm glad to see that large convoys of Serbian artillery are pulling back to the limit proposed and determined by NATO ultimatum."

PROBE: Reno launches anti-gay harassment case

(From 1A)

acre former pig farm outside Ovett, received a handwritten threat in the mail. Mailing such a threat could be a federal offense. They also have gotten telephoned threats and have locked the camp entrance, a lavender cattle gate.

The couple, who consider themselves married, have about 20 women in residence helping rebuild the farm. They want to hold workshops on sexual harassment and abuse and women's legal rights.

"The situation in Ovett has clearly been dangerous since the time a dead dog was hung on the Hensons' mailbox and town meetings were held denouncing the women and pledging to drive them from town," said Peri Jude Radecic, director of the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force, which began seeking Reno's help in December.

That month, 250 people turned out in Ovett to hear speakers express fear the lesbians would recruit their daughters or denounce homosexuality. "It's taught against in the scriptures," said Ray Thornton of the Baptist Ministry Association of Mississippi.

Last month, 350 people gathered in nearby Ellisville at a meeting organized by the Rev. John Allen, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Richton, who said, "We are being invaded by activists with a radical agenda: ... people who are different and want to change our community." Donations were collected for a lawsuit aimed at closing the camp.

Radecic applauded Reno for overcoming a legal obstacle to using the Community Relations Service, which is authorized by law to enter disputes based on race, color or national origin, but not those arising from sexual orientation or religion.

Reno signed an order Thursday limited strictly to the Ovett case, transferring the civil-rights division's legal authority to advise any citizen on any civil-rights topic to the Community Relations Service.

"Her decision was made on the facts of this case alone," said Justice spokesman Myron Marlin.

Reno wrote Radecic, "The intolerance and bigotry demonstrated by some of the people of Ovett has no place in this country."

The low-profile Community Relations Service has worked to calm violent racial and ethnic riots from coast to coast since it was set up by the Civil Rights Act of 1964. It works in schools and public housing in many cities.

Recently, it has worked on disputes over fishing by Vietnamese immigrants in the Gulf of Mexico, between Italian-Americans and American Indians over Denver's 1992 Columbus Day celebrations and the wrangle between black basketball coaches and the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

"We're meeting local officials and representatives of Camp Sister Spirit to try to assess what we can do to help," said service spokesman Ron Tomalis. He said the service can mediate the drafting of written agreements, provide conciliation to open communication and train groups in resolving disputes.

The service, which will spend $9.9 million this year resolving conflicts, provides the "biggest bang for the buck in the building," former Attorney General John Mitchell said in 1981 when advising incoming Attorney General William French Smith about the Justice Department budget, Smith aides recounted.

AUDIT: Report finds lax financial management at IRS

(From 1A)

In the 36 percent of the budget the GAO did examine, "tests identified significant control weaknesses that affected the IRS' ability to comply with laws governing the use of its budget authority."

According to the report, issued last week, Treasury Department regulations require the IRS to reconcile its cash accounts with Treasury records each month, much as bank customers reconcile their check books with their monthly bank statements.

Yet, rather than tracking down the causes of discrepancies, the IRS sometimes simply changed its financial statements to reflect the same account balances as Treasury's records. At the end of fiscal 1992, there were unresolved differences of $63 million.

The GAO also found that IRS managers did not have up-to-date and reliable information on how much of their appropriated funds were available to spend at any given point. Account balances were updated only monthly, rather than as transactions occurred.

Fifty-nine percent of all payments for goods and services checked in the audit were made either too late, forcing the IRS to pay penalty interest, or too early, resulting in lost interest income, the GAO said. The IRS spent $673,000 for interest on late payments in 1992.

40 percent of the payments tested weren't supported by proper documentation and might have been inappropriate, and 1.5 percent were duplicate payments, the GAO said.

IRS "officials were not aware of the duplicate payments until either we or the vendors notified them," it said.

In one case, 23 overpayments totaling $175,000 have been made to a single vendor since 1988 because IRS personnel mistakenly approved amounts for payment that were actually amounts the vendor owed the IRS.

"Overpayments continued even after IRS' procurement personnel and the vendor brought them to the attention of supervisors responsible for approving the payments," the GAO said.

In another case, a $29,949 payment to a vendor was approved without evidence the services had been performed and four months after the vendor wrote the IRS to ignore its invoice because most of the services listed hadn't been rendered.

Under its standing policy, the GAO declined to identify the companies involved.

In a letter to the GAO, IRS Commissioner Margaret Milner Richardson said her agency recognized deficiencies in its accounting system several years ago, installed computer software for a new system in 1991 and put it in force throughout the IRS starting in 1993, just after the period audited by the GAO.

Kinghorn, the chief financial officer, said the new accounting system now allows managers to "go into the financial system and know the balances in any region to the penny" and it makes it possible to reconcile IRS statements with the Treasury's. Early and late payments to vendors have been reduced sharply, he said.

KILL: Suspect commits suicide, officials say

tion ring would continue.

"Even though the primary suspect is deceased, we will continue to investigate because we continue to receive information that there were other persons involved in the operation of that business," Williams said.

He said the probe is focusing on people who may have operated the escort service. But he added that clients may also be prosecuted if they are found to have had sexual encounters with juveniles or extensive business with the service.

While the Travis County medical examiner's office ruled Bunch's death a suicide, Williams said it is a police formality to investigate the death as a homicide.

"We will investigate it thoroughly to make sure that there was no possibility that anyone else was involved in this," Williams said.

"We had not received any threats threatening him," he said.

Parkinson said Bunch's body was discovered just after 7 a.m. Friday in the parking lot of the Human Services office complex by an employee arriving at work. Tests revealed that Bunch likely shot himself around 5 a.m., Parkinson said.

"It's been my experience that when people ... take their own lives, many times they do it in an area that is familiar to them, whether that be their home or their business," Parkinson said. "I don't know what message people relay when they do that."

Williams said a police interrogation of Bunch after his arrest on Tuesday didn't indicate that he was distraught or suicidal.

Bunch had been charged with aggravated promotion of prostitution, punishable by up to 10 years in prison upon conviction. He was released from jail Wednesday on a $5,000 bond.

Bunch's former co-workers were visibly shaken.

"I have no idea what the motivation was," said Mike Jones, a spokesman for the state Human Services department. "All of our staff is still in a state of shock about the whole incident. We are just an agency of about 17,000 people and most of us come to work every morning and just do our jobs."

A jittery Bunch spoke briefly with The Associated Press on Thursday, saying the case had been exaggerated.

"I want to cooperate. I want to help. But you need to talk with my attorney. I'm sorry I can't help more," Bunch said.

Alleged Nazi-war criminal wins freedom because of bad heart

By Frank Bajak
Associated Press Writer

BERLIN — One of Germany's last Nazi war crimes trials ended Friday with freedom for a 90-year-old Latvian who as a police commander in occupied Latvia allegedly ordered the massacre of more than 170 civilians.

After four years on trial for murder, Boleslav Maikovskis' heart was deemed too weak for another court appearance and the case was closed. The former Mineola, N.Y., resident had last been in court in December.

"It is a development we don't welcome at all, but with such an old man one must reckon with it," said Klaus Schacht, chief prosecutor in a Dortmund office specializing in war crimes cases from World War II.

Maikovskis was not in court when an expert medical witness testified that "his heart was in such bad shape even the slightest excitement could cause it to stop," said Muenster state court spokesman Klemens Thiemann.

The defendant, who has denied the charges, could not be located for comment. Originally held in a prison hospital after his arrest, he has been free since the fall of 1992.

The court will now decide if Maikovskis is entitled to monetary damages for his trial costs and three-year imprisonment. Even if Latvia wanted to extradite him, it would have little chance due to his poor health, Thiemann said.

The Los Angeles-based Simon Wiesenthal Center, which hunts Nazi criminals, criticized the decision, but said nonetheless the proceedings against Maikovskis "have had the effect of exposing his heinous crimes to post Holocaust generations."

"Maikovskis' heart gave out long ago — starting the day he volunteered to participate in Nazi Germany's killing machine . . .," the center said in a statement.

Maikovskis commanded a pro-Nazi police force that collaborated with the Germans. He was accused of ordering the burning of the Latvian village of Audrini in January 1942 and the mass killing of its more than 170 residents, mostly children, women and old people. Maikovskis was also charged with ordering the hanging of a Jewish man from Audrini in May 1942.

Questioned about his life in Latvia when his trial began in 1990, Maikovskis described himself as a fighter for Latvian independence and said he had joined a pro-German group long before Latvia was occupied by Nazi troops.

He said he withdrew with German troops to Germany in 1944 and was allowed to emigrate to the United States in 1951.

Bosnian Serbs fight snow to beat NATO deadline

By Julijana Mojsilovic
Associated Press Writer

PALE, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Bosnian Serbs struggled with chest-high snow Friday to try to beat a NATO deadline for pulling heavy guns from around Sarajevo.

With less than two days left before NATO bombs could strike Serb positions, evidence of a Serb withdrawal was mostly indirect. It was unclear how much was being withdrawn, how fast, and to where.

"We will try to withdraw all of our weapons by 2400 tomorrow," Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic said after meeting with the United Nations' top official for former Yugoslavia, Yasushi Akashi.

That would beat the NATO deadline of midnight GMT Sunday (7 p.m. EST) — 1 a.m. Monday in Sarajevo — for the heavy guns to be withdrawn or put under U.N. supervision. The Bosnian Serbs have been besieging the capital city for 22 months.

The Clinton administration has warned the Serbs there will be no extension of the deadline.

Karadzic said Serb convoys with heavy guns had started their withdrawal but were slowed by the snow, some of it freshly fallen.

Akashi, who later met with U.N. and NATO military commanders in Zagreb, Croatia, said Karadzic agreed to allow full freedom of movement for U.N. patrols in a 12-mile exclusion area around Sarajevo.

"Some significant number of heavy artillery and mortars have been withdrawn from the exclusion zone," Akashi said. Weapons not withdrawn would be grouped at seven sites and placed under control of armed U.N. troops starting midday today, he said.

Akashi stressed that time was running short, but added, "I think we are on the right track."

Little activity was visible Friday on the snow-clogged roads winding through the Serb-controled hills around Sarajevo.

One convoy of four Bosnian Serb trucks, three of them towing cannons, was spotted about a mile west of Pale, the Bosnian Serb headquarters east of Sarajevo. They were moving relatively fast away from Sarajevo, but it wasn't clear where they were headed.

Joe Sills, spokesman for U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, said in New York that the removal of Serbian heavy weapons was "moving ahead at a very good pace."

He said the Muslim-led army was also complying with U.N. demands to hand over weapons to U.N. monitors. "It is important that the military situation be frozen and that no party take advantage of the situation," he said.

NATO wants the guns at least 12 miles away from Sarajevo, which has been quiet under a cease-fire. But the Serbs would still be free to move their weapons to other spots in Bosnia where there is still fighting, and their long-range artillery can hit targets up to 25 miles away.

Lt. Col. Bill Aikman, a U.N. spokesman in Sarajevo, said that if weapons are left behind, "we will have physically checked them." He did not specify if that meant rendering the guns harmless by removing certain parts.

Another U.N. spokesman, Lt. Col. Richard Pernod, said U.N. troops had collected 90 weapons from both sides.

Bosnian Serb TV said 30 pieces of weaponry had been removed from Serb-held Lukavica, near the Sarajevo airport, on Friday. A source close to the Bosnian Serb army said weapons were being moved to "where it suits us best."

Determining the Serbs' movements was difficult because of the snow, the small number of U.N. monitors, uncertainty over the number of guns the Serbs had on the hills, and terrain.

The Serbs are believed to have about 500 heavy artillery pieces. The Muslim-led government has far fewer guns but more infantry.

The Serbs' withdrawal was likely in response to the intervention of Russia, a traditional Orthodox Christian ally, which urged the Serbs to comply with the NATO demand and avoid airstrikes.

Yugoslavia's Tanjug news agency quoted a Bosnian Serb colonel, Tadija Manojlovic, as saying troops were complying with orders to withdraw, "in the interests of peace and not because of NATO's ultimatum."

Sources close to Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, who has ambitions for a Greater Serbia that would include parts of Bosnia and Croatia, said he convinced the Bosnian Serbs to withdraw.

The sources in Belgrade said Milosevic had won a promise from Russian President Boris Yeltsin not to abandon the Serbs. Moscow also pledged to redeploy 400 Russian peacekeepers in Croatia to the Sarajevo area.

In Athens, Greece, Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev urged the Bosnian government not to exploit the withdrawal of Serb heavy weapons, and said peace talks could be held next week.

U.N. officials hoped the demilitarization of Sarajevo might be extended to other areas of Bosnia, where the situation remains tense and unstable.

More than 200,000 people are dead in Bosnia's war. Fighting broke out when the republic's minority Serbs rebelled and occupied 70 percent of the country after a Muslim-Croat vote for independence from Yugoslavia.

POLICE REPORTS

Robbery

Police said a 15-year-old male has been arrested and charged in connection with a robbery of the Friend's Convenience Store at 312 N. Midland Drive.

The juvenile — who was picked from a photo lineup by one of the store's clerks — was charged with one count of aggravated robbery, according to police reports.

There were robberies committed on three consecutive days: Jan. 26, 27, 28, according to the report.

According to police, the juvenile was implicated in all three robberies, as well as in two thefts from individuals on Feb. 16 at the Furr's Supermarket at Midland Drive and Illinois Avenue, and on Feb. 17 at the Albertson's store at Midland Drive and Wadley Avenue.

The juvenile is currently confined to the Culver Juvenile Detention Center. Further charges are pending, according to police officials.

Possession

ODESSA — Agents of the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission and officers of the Odessa Police Department arrested four people for drug possession and liquor-law violations, according to a report.

Search warrants turned up large quantities of beer and liquor with an estimated value of $500 and quantities of marijuana and "crack" cocaine with an estimated value of $2,450, according to the report.

Arrested for liquor violations were Howard Lee Montgomery, 68, and O.C. Draughn, 62; arrested for possession of marijuana was Tina Denise Shaw, 25, and arrested for possession of cocaine was a 14-year-old male juvenile, according to a report.

Delivery

After several months of investigation, members of the Permian Basin Drug Task Force arrested two people in Midland for delivery of a controlled substance to an undercover investigator, according to a report.

Calvin Riggs, 30, was arrested for delivery of marijuana and Raymundo Mancha, 35, was arrested for delivery of cocaine, according to a report.

Both arrests were the result of sealed indictments handed down by a Midland grand jury.

Friday

Burglary of a building: A window was reported broken at Rapid Oil at 1101 Andrews Highway and $25 worth of automotive fluids was taken. The incident was reported at 7:29 a.m.

Attempted burglary of a residence: A window was reported broken in a home at 4509 Watson Court. No items were reported missing. It was reported at 4:05 p.m.

Council approves limited smoking ban

AUSTIN (AP) — The City Council has adopted an ordinance that will prohibit smoking from 6 a.m. to 2 p.m. in dining areas in all restaurants and bars.

But smoking will be allowed in those places after 2 p.m. in areas that are separately ventilated, the ordinance states.

The measure approved Thursday falls short of an initial attempt by Mayor Bruce Todd and council member Gus Garcia to ban smoking in all public places.

"I don't think this ordinance goes far enough," council member Brigid Shea said. However, she said, "I'll hold my nose and vote for it."

The ordinance, approved on a 4-2 vote, takes effect April 3.

Debbie Grote of the local American Lung Association chapter said the ordinance is "a baby step" toward a total ban on smoking.

Gordon Fowler, owner of La Zona Rosa cafe and live music club, said the measure "makes the live music people pretty happy. It is a step for health, but it is something we can step into easily."

Other provisions of the ordinance include:

- After 10 p.m., smoking is allowed in separate areas in restaurants and bars.
- By March 15, 1996, smoking areas must have separate ventilation systems and filters or the dining area must become smoke-free.

Students to receive book, planner about trees, environment

Staff Report

Each student in the Midland Independent School District is receiving either a "Trees are Cool in More Ways than One" coloring book or a month planner, thanks to a grant received by Keep Midland Beautiful from the Texas Forest Service and Urban Forestry Council.

Each coloring book contains information about trees, recycling and caring for the environment. The monthly planner contains helpful tips, the school calendar and important dates to remember.

Matching the grant monies were the Reporter-Telegram, which printed thousands of the books, and Champion Paper, which donated the newsprint.

Jo duFo, a local artist, did the art work for both the coloring book and the monthly planner, and distribution to the schools was done by the Junior League's Opportunity Knocks committee and Keep Midland Beautiful board members.

Anyone wishing copies of either the coloring book or the monthly planner should call Keep Midland Beautiful at 688-4195.

Baby sitter receives prison sentence for killing infant

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — A baby sitter who killed a 10-month-old boy by hurling him across a room after he pulled her hair was sentenced Friday to up to 25 years in prison.

The parents of Kieran Dunne repeatedly referred to Ann Franklin as a "monster" and a "liar" as they spoke at her sentencing.

"Ann, we don't know how you can live with yourself," Peggy Dunne said. "You knew he was our very heart, our soul."

After months of denial, Franklin, 26, pleaded guilty to manslaughter on Dec. 10.

Franklin said she had finished smoking marijuana and went to put Kieran in his crib on Feb. 25, 1993, when he pulled her hair. She said she "got annoyed" and threw him across the room, smashing his head against the floor.

"If I could change places with him, I would," Franklin said Friday. "I am haunted day and night by memories of baby Kieran."

The boy died March 3, the day he turned 10 months old.

Franklin was scheduled for trial in January on a second-degree murder charge before she pleaded guilty in exchange for a promise of a maximum term of eight and one-third to 25 years.

Westchester County Judge J. Emmett Murphy, who approved the plea bargain, described the killing as a "moment of violent wickedness."

Judge orders rape suspect to custody after telling him to find girlfriend

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — A judge ordered a rape suspect taken into custody Friday, three days after releasing him with this advice: Get a girlfriend.

Criminal Court Judge Doug Meyer said he changed his mind after dozens of people called his office Friday to complain.

Mental health specialists had urged Meyer not to release Vincent L. Cousin, who once said voices told him to rape. Cousin was jailed last week because he stopped taking medication and attending counseling sessions.

Meyer released Cousin on Tuesday, pending a March 9 hearing. The judge refused Assistant Public Defender Cynthia Lecroy-Schemel's suggestion to appoint a guardian until the hearing.

"I don't think he needs it, really," Meyer said at the time. "I think what he needs — he needs a girlfriend, because if he doesn't, he's going to have bad dreams again.

"We'll let you arrange a dating service or something," Meyer told Lecroy-Schemel.

He turned to Cousin and said: "You need a girlfriend, don't you?"

Cousin was arrested in 1989 and charged with aggravated rape, aggravated sexual battery, robbery and burglary. He was accused of raping a Chattanooga woman and forcing her 5-year-old daughter to watch.

Two state mental experts said he was insane and Cousin was found innocent by reason of insanity in 1990. He was ordered to undergo outpatient mental treatment at Fortwood Center at Chattanooga.

Cousin stopped taking medication and attending counseling sessions last year. Last month, Richard Amy, a Fortwood counselor, wrote a letter to Meyer saying Cousin was dangerous and urging that he be "located and picked up as soon as possible."

"The auditory hallucinations which he has obeyed in the past and that tell him to rape will probably return," Amy said.

Cousin was arrested Feb. 11. Prosecutors asked Meyer to commit him to a mental institution. Meyer would not.

Judge doesn't drop Kevorkian charge

By Julia Prodis
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT — A judge refused to dismiss the last remaining charge against Dr. Jack Kevorkian on Friday and ordered the self-styled death doctor to stand trial in the assisted suicide of a man with Lou Gehrig's disease.

Detroit Recorder's Court Judge Thomas E. Jackson said he wasn't bound by previous rulings that Michigan's blanket ban on assisted suicide is unconstitutional. Three other charges had been dismissed by other judges.

Trial is set for April 19.

Kevorkian, a retired pathologist who advocates physician-aided suicide for the terminally ill, said a trial would be a "farce." He has been present at the deaths of 20 people since 1990.

"Nobody's going to trample my rights," he said after Friday's hearing. "This trial is a touch of the Inquisition."

Kevorkian is charged with helping Thomas Hyde commit suicide last summer. He faces up to four years in prison and a $2,000 fine if convicted in the case.

Defense laywers want to introduce as evidence a videotape of the 30-year-old Hyde — who could barely speak, swallow or move — asking Kevorkian to help him die.

Wayne County Assistant Prosecutor Tim Kenny is trying to block introduction of the tape.

"Certainly, it's an emotional tape that generates a lot of sympathy for the defense," Kenny said.

Regulators scramble for new review of Arkansas S&L

By Richard Keil
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The government's savings and loan cleanup agency is scrambling to conduct yet another review of the failed Arkansas S&L that has dragged President Clinton into controversy.

The Resolution Trust Corp.'s goal this time, regulators say, is to determine whether the S&L, which had numerous signs of problems, should have been closed earlier than 1989 and whether anyone else can be sued now for its failure.

The review is driven by the transformation of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan from a relatively small failure in the multi-billion dollar S&L debacle to the subject of a politically charged investigation of the Clintons' financial dealings.

"The concern is that maybe they missed something the first time around," said one RTC official working on the new investigation, who spoke only on condition of anonymity. "A close look is being taken at everything that was done then, based on everything that we know now."

Regulators have had an on-again, off-again interest in Madison and its owner, James McDougal, who also was business partner with the Clintons in Whitewater Development Corp., a money-losing real estate venture.

Shortly after the S&L's failure, which cost taxpayers at least $47 million, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., the RTC's predecessor, sued an Arkansas accounting firm, accusing it of negligence in Madison's failure.

The FDIC contracted with the Rose Law Firm, where Hillary Rodham Clinton and No. 3 Justice Department official Webster Hubbell then worked, to handle the lawsuit. It was eventually settled for $1 million.

The RTC resumed interest in the S&L in 1992, conducting a more detailed investigation through its Kansas City regional office into Madison's demise.

Agency investigators uncovered what they alleged was a check-kiting scheme that drained the thrift of money for the benefit of prominent Arkansans, including the Clintons.

The Clintons and McDougal have repeatedly said they did nothing wrong in their business dealings. RTC investigators have stressed the Clintons are not a subject or target of the probe although they may have benefited from some transactions.

The RTC drafted nine criminal referrals recommending possible prosecutions and forwarded them to federal prosecutors.

Those referrals were still being reviewed by Justice Department prosecutors when special counsel Robert Fiske was appointed to conduct an independent investigation in January.

Fiske's investigation, now getting under way in Little Rock, Ark., will focus on criminal matters.

The RTC, meanwhile, is focusing on two tasks: copying and forwarding tens of thousands of its relevant documents to Fiske and reviewing its own work to see if it missed any potential civil claims.

When the latest review began, the RTC was racing to meet a Feb. 28 deadline to file any remaining lawsuits in the case. Congress, however, intervened and extended that deadline by nearly two years.

Appeals court refuses to keep Packwood diaries from Senate panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court refused on Friday to keep Sen. Bob Packwood's diaries from the Senate Ethics Committee while he appeals the panel's subpoena.

The order means Packwood's diaries could be turned over to the committee as early as Tuesday.

Packwood "has not satisfied the stringent standards required for a stay pending appeal," said a three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit.

The order left intact a 15-day timetable set by U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson on Feb. 7 for transfer of the diaries to the committee for its investigation of allegations of sexual misconduct, witness intimidation and obstruction of the inquiry.

"We don't have any comment at this time" on the appeals court's order, said Packwood's press secretary, Bobbi Munson. His lawyer, Jacob Stein, was in a conference and could not be reached for immediate comment, an aide said.

Packwood's lawyers say the ethics committee's subpoena violates the senator's right of privacy under the Constitution's Fourth Amendment as well as his Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination.

In an order initialed by Judges Harry T. Edwards, David B. Sentelle and A. Raymond Randolph, the court said it would expedite Packwood's appeal. Argument was scheduled for May 12.

Stein argued before Jackson that the challenge to the subpoena would be meaningless if the audio recordings and transcripts were given to investigators before the appellate court ruled.

Senate lawyers said in court papers this week that Packwood's refusal to cooperate with the committee threatened Congress' self-policing powers. They said they "never before needed to issue a subpoena to a senator."

The ethics panel is investigating allegations that the senator made unwanted sexual advances to more than two dozen women, used his staff to intimidate witnesses, solicited job offers from lobbyists for his wife and obstructed the probe by altering the diaries.

Packwood initially gave the committee his diaries, but cut off access to diaries from 1989 to the present after the panel found segments that showed lobbyists and businessmen offered his wife a job during their divorce proceedings.

The ethics committee then subpoenaed the diaries on Oct. 20.

The Justice Department also is investigating the job offers. Packwood denies he solicited them.

Packwood turned over the diaries and tapes to Jackson on Dec. 16.

Jackson appointed former federal appeals court judge Kenneth W. Starr as a special master to supervise the transfer of the diaries.

Agency to audit shredders

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission said Friday it is auditing companies paid by the state to shred waste tires in a recycling program.

The commission also said members of the Texas Environmental Enforcement Task Force — which includes the commission — executed a search warrant last week at the Cleveland office of one company, Safe Tire Disposal Corp., as part of an investigation. Cleveland is in Southeast Texas.

The search warrant's contents are sealed by court order, according to the commission. The warrant was granted by a federal court in Beaumont, commission spokesman Glenn Lewis said.

Lewis emphasized that no charges have been filed against the company. However, the commission said it is considering civil action against the Cleveland Safe Tire facility, including withholding payment for January claims.

A woman who answered the telephone at Safe Tire's Cleveland office referred The Associated Press to company headquarters in Ardmore, Okla. A telephone call there was not immediately returned.

"There has always been a concern that the program works as it's designed to work," Lewis said. "It's only prudent to make sure that you get what you pay for."

Task force members participating in last week's search include the commission, Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's criminal investigation division and the FBI, with assistance from the Texas Department of Public Safety and Texas Department of Agriculture.

The task force was created in 1991 by Gov. Ann Richards. Its other members include the U.S. Justice Department, state attorney general's office, Texas General Land Office and state Railroad Commission.

Lewis said Safe Tire has four separately registered tire-shredding facilities in Texas. There are 23 registered waste tire shredders in the state.

Under the commission's waste tire recycling fund program, qualified companies are paid to shred waste tires from a state fund, which is generated by fees on new tire sales.

The program is meant to do away with illegal waste tire dumps through the payments to shredders, who ultimately must find markets to recycle the material.

Since the program began in April 1992, almost $46 million has been paid to shredders, accounting for almost 54 million waste tires, according to the commission. The commission said half of the 606 illegal tire dumps that existed in Texas in 1992 have been cleaned up.

More than $4 million has been paid to the Cleveland Safe Tire facility since the program was started, Lewis said.

Sheriff's Association endorses candidate

Staff Report

Jeff Norwood, a candidate for Midland County judge, said the endorsement of his candidacy by the Midland County Sheriff's Association will be a "tremendous boost" to his campaign.

"I am proud to have the support of the law-enforcement community in Midland County," Norwood said Friday afternoon in front of the Midland County Law Enforcement Building.

Midland County Deputy Sheriff Rusty Hill, who is president of the Midland County Sheriff's Association, said the association represents the rank and file of peace officers within the county and is affiliated with the Texas Conference of Police and Sheriffs.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Forget someone who has a negative attitude and get on with your life. Sympathetic to a fault, you need to avoid anyone who has a chip on the shoulder. You are better at managing money than you think! Stick to what has worked for you in the past. A change of residence is possible by fall. An older person could prove less difficult to approach than anticipated. Lay your cards on the table. Honesty wins you assistance.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Jeff Daniels ("Gettysburg"), actress Justine Bateman, singer Smokey Robinson, tennis player Hana Mandlikova.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Smooth relations and good publicity are not automatic. Strive to get on the same wavelength as VIPs. Stop looking for pat answers and miracle cures for family problems.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Even if romance is bumpy today, the future looks bright. Seek the personal freedom that has eluded you in the past. Clarify your goals for those in a position to help you attain them.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do not give in! You will wind up in the driver's seat if you persevere. A business decision will eventually work to your advantage. Invest time and money in a child's education.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do not let financial considerations or physical limitations keep you from socializing. Enjoy the company of your friends and circulate as much as possible.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A good day to bring your accounts up to date or make household repairs. Beautify your home environment. Family members will be happy to pitch in and help.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your drive and vitality help you get what you want this weekend. Do something that will clarify your position regarding a community matter. Get-rich-quick tips rarely work.

2 Live Crew pulls usual 'nasty act' for nightclub

CINCINNATI — The group 2 Live Crew decided not to be as nasty as they wanna be.

The rappers known for their graphic lyrics appeared at a nightclub early Friday, but just did some talking. Leader Luther Campbell said police had threatened to arrest them and the audience if they performed their usual act.

"We don't want you all to go to jail," he said. "We don't want anybody to get hit in the head."

The group left after about 10 minutes after some fans began climbing on stage.

Record stores in Cincinnati stopped selling the 2 Live Crew album "Nasty As They Wanna Be" in April 1990 after the Hamilton County sheriff threatened obscenity charges.

In October the same year, a Florida jury acquitted the group of obscenity charges, although a Florida record store owner was convicted of similar charges for selling their album.

VATICAN CITY — Pope John Paul II may head for New York in October for a visit to the United Nations.

"It is not firm. It's up to him to decide," a Vatican official said Friday.

The pope wants to speak to the U.N. General Assembly, an assembly official said. He addressed the body during his first U.S. trip in 1979.

The pontiff has made three trips to the United States, most recently last August for the church's World Youth Day rally in Denver.

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Conducting orchestras makes Bobby "Don't Worry, Be Happy" McFerrin nervous.

"I can probably count on my hand the number of times I've been that nervous," he said, recalling his debut at the podium with the San Francisco Symphony in 1990.

Now, he leads 20 to 30 orchestras a year, including the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra on Friday night.

McFerrin's interest in conducting goes back to high school. He studied at Tanglewood and even had a podium built in his San Francisco home to get accustomed to the conductor's space.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Garth Brooks has the jitters about his first European tour.

"Their concept of country music is outdated," he said. "I'm worried how they'll accept me, if they accept me at all."

Brooks kicks off the tour March 30 in Dublin and winds up in Spain in late April. In the meantime, he's playing places like Providence.

The superstar known for a raucous brand of country told reporters Thursday before a show that he refuses to charge more than $17 or $18 a seat for a concert.

"It means a crowd with a good attitude," Brooks said. "People get mad when they have to pay 30, 40 bucks and that makes it harder to reach them."

LAS VEGAS — The soap opera continues: La Toya's husband accuses her family of hiring extra security to keep her away from "The Jackson Family Honors" concert. Ticket prices are slashed from up to $350 to as low as $50.

It seems that songs are taking a back seat to the tortured Jackson family saga as they prepare — sans La Toya — for their musical salute Saturday night at the MGM Grand Hotel.

Michael, who recently settled a child molestation lawsuit, is scheduled to present "lifetime achievement awards" to his good friend Elizabeth Taylor and record mogul Berry Gordy.

Michael will not perform solo but will join the family in the show's finale, "If You Only Believe," to reflect that the parents "have the courage and the strength to believe in their children and their talent," Jackson family spokesman John McLaughlin said Friday.

But maybe not all their children.

On Thursday, a spokeswoman for La Toya told The Associated Press the family had hired extra security to keep the estranged sibling away from the concert.

BERLIN — Sophia Loren received a lifetime achievement award at the Berlin Film Festival Friday and said the secret of her success was being "very much in love with my profession."

Ms. Loren made her first appearance at the Berlin festival in 1954 when she was about to hit the world's cinema screens with "Women of the River" in 1955. Forty years and almost 70 films later, she is still a glamorous magnet for good movies by good directors.

Next up, she told a news conference, is director Robert Altman's new project titled "Pret-a-Porter." Filming starts in March in Paris. She has a "very good quality role," she said, with Marcello Mastroianni.

"I can't say anymore. It's forbidden," the 59-year-old actress said.

Friday evening she received a Golden Bear, the top prize of the annual Berlin festival, for her career achievements. It was given at a gala showing of the Italian-produced film for which she won the 1961 best-actress Oscar, "Two Women."

Haywire ATM doubles withdrawals

By Beth J. Harpaz
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — You put the card in, you take your money out. But what if the machine makes a mistake?

That's exactly what happened to tens of thousands of Chemical Bank customers using cash machines earlier this week.

"I always wondered about this sort of thing happening," said Stephanie Twinn as she left a Chemical branch on Friday. "Everyone relies on these so much."

A malfunctioning computer software program doubled all withdrawals and transfers made at Chemical Bank automatic teller machines in New York state for about 12 hours starting Tuesday night.

Chemical examined the system after customers began to complain and all errors were corrected, said bank spokesman Ken Herz. The bank promised to pay all fees involving checks bounced as a result of the glitch and to write letters for anyone whose credit rating was hurt.

"This was completely our fault and we take full responsibility for it," Herz said.

ATMs have been available since the early 1970s but came into widespread use in the early 1980s. There are now more than 85,000 ATMs in the United States, with about 8 billion transactions yearly, said Speer & Associates, an Atlanta financial consulting firm.

Banking and consumer experts agreed that the type of problem experienced by Chemical is rare.

"This is a fluke," said Dave Lott, a Speer vice president. "That's not to say it hasn't happened before and won't happen again. But this is an isolated situation. The error rate for ATMs is really very low."

The printed record of transactions spit out by the machine was accurate, but the computerized posting of withdrawals and transfers was automatically doubled.

Only those people who checked their balance — and knew what it should have been — would have realized there was a problem.

Davidian lawyers get self-defense provision

By Kelley Shannon
Associated Press

■ More state news/4D

SAN ANTONIO — Attorneys for 11 Branch Davidians accused of murdering federal agents succeeded Friday in getting a judge's instructions to jurors to include a self-defense provision.

Defense lawyers were delighted. Prosecutors weren't.

"If they can get self-defense . . . for killing these agents, then we are at a deadly crossroads in this country," prosecutor Bill Johnston said.

Later, outside the courtroom, defense lawyer Douglas Tinker agreed "we're at the deadly crossroads."

"But it's the other direction," he said. "It is so frightening that the government can do what it did in this case. I am convinced that we are in a police state in this country."

Lawyers met with U.S. District Judge Walter Smith outside the presence of the jury Friday. After hearing legal arguments, Smith agreed to include self-defense in instructions he will read jurors before closing arguments begin Tuesday.

"If these defendants don't have the right to self-defense, then we wasted six weeks of trial," said defense attorney Joe Turner, praising the judge's charge to the jury.

The Davidian defendants are accused of murder and murder conspiracy in the deaths of four agents of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms during a gun battle at the Davidian compound Feb. 28, 1993, near Waco. The shootout erupted when 76 armed agents arrived to serve search and arrest warrants to doomsday prophet David Koresh on weapons charges.

Six Davidians were killed in the firefight, which led to a 51-day standoff. That ended April 19, when the cult compound was destroyed by fire. Prosecutors claim the inferno was set in a mass suicide pact orchestrated by doomsday prophet David Koresh. Koresh and 78 followers died during the blaze.

The defendants could face up to life in prison if convicted.

A key portion of Smith's jury instructions state that if a defendant was not an aggressor and believed he or another was in "imminent danger of death or serious bodily harm," deadly force can be used in self-defense.

Jury convicts assault suspect who was taped

ATHENS (NYT) — A black man who was beaten and shot by two white law officers during a videotaped traffic stop was convicted Friday of assaulting them — offenses that could earn him 20 years in the state penitentiary.

Lorenzo Colston, 28, a Dallas security guard and former University of Houston student, stared at the floor as the judge read the findings of the jury. The jurors — one black woman, six white women and five white men — deliberated 11 hours before returning the verdict.

Months earlier, a Henderson County grand jury found the officers, Texas Department of Public Safety Trooper Bryan Barnhart and Sheriff's Deputy Jim Langford, faultless for their conduct during the Sept. 29 traffic stop.

The punishment phase for Colston is set for Monday morning in the courtroom of state District Judge Jack Holland.

Meanwhile, a Dallas spokeswoman for the FBI confirmed Friday the agency has launched an "independent investigation into the case for possible civil rights violations."

Marjorie Poshe said any decision to prosecute the officers would be made by the U.S. Department of Justice's Office of Civil Rights. A spokesman there was unavailable for comment late Friday.

Students stage walkout over racial T-shirts

TYLER (AP) — A group of students at Robert E. Lee High School staged a second tense, but peaceful, walkout Friday in their dispute over racially offensive T-shirts.

Tyler Police Capt. Robin Roberts estimated 200 students left their classes at 9 a.m., with many returning for second period. Principal Eddie Milham put the walkout number at 80.

It was the second day in a row that pupils at the school of 2,500 staged protests.

Principal Eddie Milham said the students left their classes and stood in the school's courtyard, with a group of white students on one side and a group of black and white students on the other.

Said student Clifton Oliver, 15, "The teachers made it a black and white thing."

"If the teachers hadn't said anything about the T-shirt, none of this would have happened."

Thursday, hundreds of students staged a lunch-hour protest because a white student was forced to remove a T-shirt that school officials declared racially offensive. Police were called after shoving and pushing broke out.

Wednesday, student Alan Daigle wore a shirt emblazoned with a rebel flag that read, "It's a White Thing; You Wouldn't Understand."

Protesting students said the shirt was the direct result of a shirt worn by black students that read, "It's a Black Thing; You Wouldn't Understand."

Navy pilots escape after 2 jets collide

ORANGE GROVE (AP) — Two Navy training jets collided while flying over rough South Texas brush country, but all three aviators ejected safely before the planes crashed and burned.

The T-2C Buckeyes crashed Thursday morning about 15 miles northwest of Orange Grove.

"It's not that miraculous the pilots ejected safely, lived and are in good condition," Navy Cmdr. Pat Jacobs said at the crash site. "All the systems worked."

The pilots were picked up by helicopters from Naval Air Station Corpus Christi. They were flown to nearby Corpus Christi Naval Hospital, where they were treated for cuts and bruises.

WITH LETTERING PEN AND A PAINTBRUSH, THEIR WORDS AND PICTURES ARE KNOWN WORLDWIDE.

Ken Brown is said to be the most published lettering artist in history. His calligraphy, conservatively estimated, has been reproduced over 100,000 million times on artprints, books, magazine covers and articles, how-to kits, brochures, newspaper features, and on the barrels of calligraphy markers that have been in production for the past 11 years.

Gail, his wife, is running a close second with her watercolor paintings that accompany many of the pieces hand-scripted by Ken. Her intricate designs and finely detailed florals add a special dimension to the calligraphy.

The Browns began their life together in mid-1961. Ken began courting Gail just after he had completed two years of college and an architectural design class at Oklahoma State University. They had grown up 11 miles apart in southeast Oklahoma...he in Hugo, she in Soper...yet they had never met until Ken left OSU.

Ken Brown's introduction to lettering in the architectural design class became a life-changing experience. At the end of that 1961 spring semester he returned to his hometown and began working at the local radio station, wondering just what to do with his life.

In an effort to attract her attention, and hold it, after being introduced to Gail Ferguson that summer, Ken used his newfound skill of calligraphy to send fancy, colorful envelopes to the young lady who was a bank teller in Hugo. It worked, although Gail says the lettering wasn't all that big a deal to her. They began dating steadily and married 8 months latter.

During their engagement, Ken lived in Irving, Texas, near Dallas, working at the Frito-Lay company as a detail draftsman for the engineering division. He kept his lettering skills sharp by spending lunch hours and coffee breaks doing calligraphy. But this wasn't idle practice. He sent his daily love letters, exquisitely hand-scripted and in the most beautifully addressed envelopes the local post office had ever seen.

After their wedding in February Ken continued to practice calligraphy during his spare time. The grocery list, the rent checks, the letters home to his parents and friends were all minor works of art.

Ken's first commission, in 1968, was for an exclusive men's club in Dallas. He was paid $270.00 for lettering two giant documents that were framed and hung in the club. At that point he realized he had developed a very marketable skill. Ironically, an architectural firm learned of Ken's lettering ability from a local art supply store and contacted him for the calligraphy job.

By Christmas of 1969 Ken had become quite involved moonlighting his calligraphy. By day he was a television producer/director at WFAA, the ABC affiliate in Dallas. By night, he was an extremely busy calligrapher doing work for businesses and individuals all over the Dallas area.

During the previous 7 years, Gail had worked in several banks and as an apartment leasing agent, yet she had never picked up a paint brush in the whole time they had been married.

In the spring of 1970 an Irving crafts shop owner noticed Ken's work and suggested he letter something profound, add some artwork in the background, and mass produce it for sale in his store. At that time, the art of decoupage was popular. It involved gluing a decorative art print on a board, burning the edges, and applying multiple coats of clear varnish.

Ken selected an inspirational piece to do in calligraphy, hired the artist at the tv station to provide the artwork for the background, and then asked a print shop to make a few copies for the crafts store. The store ordered 1000 copies on the spot. It was at that moment, Ken realized he had devoted 9 years to a hobby that was about to pay off handsomely.

After hiring the tv artist to do 3 more illustrations for other pieces of calligraphy, Gail offered to do the artwork. Needless to say that came as a pleasant surprise to Ken. Together, they decided on a poem entitled My Kitchen Prayer for which she would do a charcoal sketch of an old wood-burning cookstove in the background of the calligraphy.

In the month of April, 1970, Ken and Gail produced 5 more designs together. There were no vibrant colors. The artwork and calligraphy were printed in plain brown ink on tan parchment paper. Still, with the professional hand-lettering and accompanying art, the prints were attractive and unlike anything else in the shop.

The crafts store bought 1000 of each new design as quickly as they were printed. It was both profitable and exciting to Ken and Gail, realizing they were publishing their own designs that would be distributed to other crafts outlets all over north Texas.

Over 8 years had passed since their wedding day and Ken was just learning about Gail's marvelous talent. Through high school, Gail had enjoyed creating sets for plays and other projects, but her art interests and activities stopped after graduation.

By the fall of 1972, the art and calligraphy Ken and Gail were producing left little time for sleep. She was leasing apartments during the day and doing artwork and shipping print orders at night. Ken's tv job was beginning to get in the way of his calligraphy.

After much deliberation, they both quit their 'day jobs' and began devoting full time to their fledgling art business in the spare bedroom of their tiny apartment. By placing a small ad in a national crafts retailing magazine, they began to get orders from all over the United States. Local high school girls were hired to work 2-3 hours each evening packaging prints. The Browns' apartment home began to look like a mail-order sweatshop.

Gail's early artwork was pen and ink and occasionally, a piece done in charcoal. In 1983 she began experimenting with watercolor. It was a painful transition, but she finally developed a technique and crated a dozen designs that were combined with Ken's poems and quotations. Their first order for prints in full color was The Legend of The Dogwood Legend Tree, a piece that sold over a million copies over the next 11 years.

Now, 22 years after first combining their talents on My Kitchen Prayer, Ken and Gail have a shipping facility in Hugo, Oklahoma, and their main offices in McKinney, Texas. They've produced hundreds of designs whose reproductions have spread worldwide. They have plaque manufacturers who purchase their prints in Australia, England and Canada. They've taught and demonstrated their skills in Norway, Alsaka, and South America and they receive orders from all over the world through their ads in national magazines.

In addition to selling their printed reproductions, Ken has written a calligraphy instruction book and claims, after teaching calligraphy 17 years, anyone can learn....even with no talent. He is totally self-taught and years ago developed a method he says works even for people with poor handwriting.

Ken must be right. He wrote, produced, and hosted 26 half hour programs called Ken Brown's Calligraphy for Everyone for Public Television. These programs have aired in virtually every part of the country since 1983. According to Ken, millions have seen his tv series and his daily mail, filled with fancy envelopes done by those learning his method, confirms his claim.

As they begin their 25th year creating words and pictures that touch the hearts and emotions of so many people, Ken and Gail are expanding their horizons to reach even more people across the United States. They've produced a special collection of their watercolor and calligraphy works called Thoughtful Moments™. These beautiful messages and paintings will be seen weekly on the church page of our newspaper.

The Browns tell us that people look forward to the new message and design in the paper each week. Many clip the verse or scripture and put it on the refrigerator or in a scrapbook. Some people include a copy in their correspondence while others mail them on to relatives or friends in hospitals and nursing homes.

One of the best parts of our new Thoughtful Moments™ feature is the willingness of the Browns to give away some of their printed designs. They've asked us to tell our readers that each week they'll offer a different packet of samples. They'll happily send three colorful items, including 2 inspirational prints and a laminated prayer card, free, to anyone who requests them. You must include $1.00 for postage and handling and send your request to FREE PRINTS, Gail & Ken Brown, Box T22, McKinney, TX 75069.

Let the Browns hear from you and tell them what you think of Thoughtful Moments™. We'd also like to hear your comments here at the paper so we and the sponsors who support the special page will know if you want us to continue with the feature.

NOTE TO THE EDITOR:

This story should raise reader awareness for the new Thoughtful Moments™ feature. Many of your readers and sponsors may already be familiar with Ken & Gail's work through television and their designs that have been used by manufacturers of wall decor.

Chancellor ices T-Birds

■ Senior Julie Chancellor pours in 28 points as the Lady Bulldogs advance to region quarterfinals.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Whatever got into Midland High's Julie Chancellor Friday night, it definitely wasn't the shoes.

The senior guard, decked out in MHS' brand new uniform, got the Lady Bulldogs off to a great start early, scoring 22 points in the first half on her way to a game-high 28. Midland High went on to defeat El Paso Coronado 72-48 Friday night in the Odessa Permian Fieldhouse for its second straight Class 5A girls area basketball title.

The win sets up a rematch with Lubbock Monterey in the regional quarterfinals at 6 p.m. Tuesday at Chaparral Center. The Midland High boys, who finished second in District 4-5A, will play Monterey in a bi-district contest at 8 p.m. following the girls game.

Midland got its 30th win for the season to just three losses while Monterey defeated El Paso Hanks 47-34 Friday at Chap Center to improve to 25-10. Midland defeated Monterey 58-51 early in the season at the Tall City Classic in the same gym. Coronado, the 1-5A runnerup, finished the season with a 20-9 record.

It must have been the new uniform because Chancellor has played in the same shoes all season.

The new uniforms were supposed to be for the entire season but they were not received in time. But Chancellor said she and the rest of the team weren't too superstitious about the new garb, which has been christened with MHS' first playoff win this year.

Chancellor came out and nailed her first two shots — three-pointers — and that set the tone for herself and her teammates.

"It helps me if I come out and hit my first couple of shots," Chancellor said. "I get a lot of confidence from that. But I was wide open."

The Lady T-Birds were concentrating on leading scorer Amy Alcala and it seemed to work as the junior was held scoreless in the first quarter. But Coronado forgot about Midland High's second leading scorer and Chancellor scored 14 points to lead the Lady Bulldogs to a 16-8 first quarter lead which was never seriously challenged.

"Amy's a lot more of a playmaker than I am," Chancellor said. "She can create her own shots where I'm better off if I'm open. When they started playing tighter on me, it started to open things up for Amy and

Low has taken high road

■ Sean Low was Midland Lee's sixth man last basketball season. Today he is a one of the team's top producers and a team leader.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland Lee senior Sean Low has traveled a rugged road in two years — from a sixth man off the bench last year to one of District 4-5A's leading stars this year.

■ Basketball playoffs

Low has had to grow up in a hurry, climbing from a role player to one counted on for major production and leadership. It was a lot to expect under the circumstances.

"I think Sean was looking forward to the role we had for him before the season, but I didn't think Sean would have to carry this big of a burden. We had two starters who ended up not playing for us and Sean was the closest thing to a returning starter we had coming back," said Lee coach Jon House.

But the results have been spectacular as the Rebels grabbed third place and back-to-back playoff appearances for the first time since 1975. Low was a huge reason with his 20-point scoring average. Lee will meet Lubbock Coronado at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Texan Dome in Levelland in bi-district action.

Finally, a golden memory for Jansen

Dan Jansen skates to a time of 1:12.43 for a new world record in the men's 1,000 meter race Friday in Hamar, Norway.

■ U.S. speedskater Dan Jansen makes up for years of frustration to win his first Olympic prize: a gold medal for his record-breaking 1,000 meter race.

By Lary McShane

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — The record fell. Dan Jansen didn't.

The world's fastest speedskater finally lived up to his billing in an Olympic race, surviving a near-spill to erase a decade of heartache in 1 minute, 12.43 seconds — a world record in the 1,000 meters and his first gold medal after seven bitter misses.

"It's unbelievable," said Jansen, who cried tears of joy Friday after years of disappointment. "I'm so happy. I've waited so long. Finally, it's here."

His long wait over, Jansen was cheered raucously by his family, his competitors and his newfound Norwegian fans. His wife, Robin, sobbed after Jansen's world record flashed on the board.

pulled back his hood and clutched his head — this time in exultation, not disbelief.

After his victory, Jansen took a victory lap carrying an American flag and his 9-month-old daughter Jane, named after his sister who died during the 1988 Games, when all of America began following the speedskater's career.

Six years later, in his final Olympic race, they saw Jansen take home the gold.

While Jansen picked up his medal, the U.S. picked up some respect in two other events. The luge team, bouncing back from its disappointing start, posted its best finishes ever in the two-man, and the Americans copped their best-ever finish in the women's biathlon — a 14th.

There's a chance at a surprise U.S. medal in the Nordic combined, where 17-year-old Todd Lodwick was in fifth place after the ski jump. Depending on Saturday's cross-country race, he could surpass the U.S.' best previous Nordic combined finish: ninth place by Rolf Monsen in 1932.

Cowboys repeat; their fans don't

DALLAS (AP) — It was to be a year of repeats, in all but one respect.

While the Dallas Cowboys have laid claim to back-to-back Super Bowl championships, their fans Friday didn't duplicate the parade pandemonium of a year ago. That episode tainted the sweet taste of victory and gave the city a black eye.

Under mostly sunny skies, some 60,000 to 70,000 fans — albeit loud and enthusiastic — peacefully celebrated with the world champion Cowboys. Supporters waved pennants, flags and homemade signs to show 'Da Boys their appreciation.

Police reported about 20 arrests for offenses including minor assaults and drug possession. However, the number was up only slightly from the daily average of 15 in the downtown area, they said.

Although the crowd was nowhere near the 400,000 who turned out last year, some players felt the emotion was just as strong.

"I think when you go down the streets and all the people are screaming and yelling, it's kind of like being on the football field," defensive tackle Tony Casillas said. "It kind of gets your adrenalin going, and you enjoy that because that's what it's all about."

Quarterback Troy Aikman and Super Bowl MVP Emmitt Smith may have been no-shows at the NFL Pro Bowl, but they didn't disappoint Friday.

Standing atop flatbed trucks flanked by scores of police, the players waved, tipped their hats and blew kisses to the masses.

Some fans excitedly screamed or ran alongside the trucks. Others were content with a snapshot or video.

One spectator, 19-year-old Tony Torres, stood thumping a sign reading "Emmitt For President" to the beat of a marching band. As the blockbuster running back passed, Torres repeatedly shouted for the star's attention, but Smith apparently didn't hear.

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones praised the fans before the start of the hour-long parade.

"The people who ought to be out there in the street being honored are the Dallas Cowboy fans," he said. "How 'bout those fans."

Security was tight for the event with officers walking on either side of the flatbed trucks. Riot-helmeted mounted police rode in a second row, nearest to the crowd.

More than 1,300 police officers lined the two-mile route, which was cordoned off with interlocking steel barricades.

After last year's event, city officials were roundly criticized for not providing adequate crowd control. Then, nearly 75 people were arrested and about 50 people were injured when a fight broke out among groups of mostly truant youngsters. Officials have been planning this year's event ever since.

"I think we've demonstrated to the community that we can stage an event of this magnitude and make everybody feel safe," Dallas City Manager John Ware said after the parade. "That was the challenge to us and I believe we met that challenge."

Dallas City Councilman Chris Luna called the crowd numbers good, not great.

"I think after last year, there were a lot of people that were very nervous and scared about coming downtown and chose to watch it on TV," he said.

Some spectators were wary about attending the parade.

Oilers could trade Moon to make cap

HOUSTON (AP) — Quarterback Warren Moon may be traded to help the Houston Oilers meet their salary cap, while reserve quarterback Bucky Richardson may leave for the Canadian Football League to get more playing time.

The Oilers aren't expected to keep both Moon with his $3.2 million salary and backup Cody Carlson, who will earn $3 million next season.

The Oilers offered Richardson a one-year minimum salary of $168,000 on Thursday, prompting him to listen to an offer from the Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Canadian Football League.

"It's something I have to consider seriously because they're willing to make me their marquee player and pay me a substantial amount of money," Richardson said. "I'm not closing any doors. It's something I have to look into."

With two years of NFL experience, Richardson cannot negotiate with other NFL teams.

Hamilton is preparing to offer Richardson a two-year deal worth $1 million as the Tiger Cats' marquee player.

Richardson has been the Oilers' No. 3 quarterback since he was drafted in the eighth round out of Texas A&M in 1992. He has seen little playing time behind Moon and Carlson.

With Moon likely to be traded, Richardson could have a chance to earn a backup job with the Oilers, although a Moon trade likely would mean the Oilers would bring in another quarterback to compete.

"I want to play football," Richardson said. "Canada might give me the best opportunity to do that. I don't know what's going to happen, but we are going to listen to them. They're a viable option."

Former starting running back Lorenzo White, a Pro Bowl pick two seasons ago, expects to have a new team next season.

"It is sad," he said. "I'd like to be here but business is business. My thing is, I'm going to do what makes me happy."

The Oilers have made qualifying offers to seven restricted free agents including five at the lower level of $298,000. Those players are cornerbacks Steve Jackson and Darryll Lewis, offensive lineman John Flannery and Kevin Donnalley and safety Mike Dumas.

All Pro safety Marcus Robertson, who finished the season on the injury list, received a $647,000 qualifying offer and Gary Brown, who replaced White in the Oilers backfield, received a $866,000 offer.

Browns sign Testaverde to $24 million deal

BEREA, Ohio (AP) — Vinny Testaverde signed a $24 million, six-year contract Friday and said he wants to finish his career with the Cleveland Browns.

The contract vaults Testaverde to 10th among NFL quarterbacks. His agent, Mike Azzarelli, declined to say whether any of the contract is guaranteed.

"When I came here a year ago I had no expectations of what's happening today," said Testaverde, who signed with the Browns last March 31 after six seasons in Tampa Bay. "I feel great because it shows the tremendous amount of confidence this organization has in me. It makes my confidence grow even more and I look forward to winning a championship with this team. I can't speak about the defense, but I think we have the people on offense now to do that."

Testaverde had the best season of his professional career in 1993, completing 130 of 230 passes for 1,797 yards, 14 touchdowns and nine interceptions. His 85.7 rating was sixth best in the NFL.

The Browns were 7-9 overall in 1993 and 5-5 in games Testaverde played. He generated 19 of the 31 touchdowns the Browns scored offensively.

The signing came the day teams had to be at or under the $33,805,000 salary cap, but it does not upset the Browns' salary structure, personnel director Mike Lombardi said. In effect, it replaces the money the Browns originally budgeted for Bernie Kosar, Lombardi said.

Kosar was released last Nov. 8 after 8½ seasons as the Browns' quarterback.

Testaverde said he will maintain his home in Tampa, but he also said he'll be at the team's training complex more frequently in the offseason to work with offensive co-ordinator Steve Crosby now that the Browns have shown the multi-year, multi-million dollar commitment.

The contract he originally signed last March would have paid him $1.4 million in 1994 and expired after the next season.

"I really look for great things coming up this season," Testaverde said. "We're not just looking to be in the playoffs. We're looking to win the championship this coming year. We had an opportunity to do it this year, but because of some of the distractions that occurred throughout the season, things didn't work out the way we wanted them to. One of the areas we'll be working on in training camp is (inside the 20-yard-line) and putting more points on the board."

Testaverde, 30, was chosen by Tampa Bay as the first player in the NFL draft in 1987. He won the Heisman Trophy in 1986 after throwing for 6,058 yards while throwing 48 touchdown passes at the University of Miami.

NFL free agent list is growing

NEW YORK (AP) — The list of NFL free agents is getting longer before it gets shorter.

While the league office released its list of 389 unrestricted free agents, many teams were unleashing even more by cutting loose their own players to make more room under the $33.8 million per team salary cap.

The shakedown was likely to continue before players began jumping teams — the first signings are likely to be re-signings of a team's own free agents.

In fact, general managers and personnel directors, who met for 3½ hours in Indianapolis last week will be schooled next week during a one-day meeting in Orlando on just how much of that money can be used for salaries and how much has to be set aside for other things.

"I can't tell you how much we're going to spend and nobody else can tell you how much they're going to spend," says Washington general manager Charlie Casserly, who may cut quarterback Mark Rypien among others to open up salary cap room. "But for every dollar you spend, you'll have to subtract a dollar."

"We're going to have to walk before we can run with this," said general manager George Young of the New York Giants, who currently have between $10 million and $11 million to spend on 23 roster slots — not counting money taken out for rookies, bonuses and injured reserve.

That $11 million figure is about standard, although it varies from almost nothing to around $20 million for teams like New England, Cincinnati and Tampa Bay, have-nots who will be forced to spend at least $30 million to meet the minimum salary cap.

But even those teams weren't ready to jump.

"We've been getting ready for free agency," says Patrick Forte, New England's director of football operations. "But a lot of it is going to depend on how teams will react to keeping their own players and what their choking point will be."

That means watching the big guys, like the two-time champion Dallas Cowboys.

Dallas has 35 players under contract for $27 million, giving the Cowboys just under $7 million to spend on their own players and any new ones they might want to sign. That figure can be increased if teams cut their own players and either let them go elsewhere or re-sign them for less.

"We'll look at everyone we have under contract that way," said Jerry Jones, the Cowboys' owner.

The attrition began in earnest on Thursday in Indianapolis, where the Colts cut nine players, including three of their best — linebacker Duane Bickett and wide receivers Reggie Langhorne and Jessie Hester. Bickett had been the "franchise player" and was due to make $2 million next year. Langhorne, who led the AFC with 85 receptions, was due to make just over $1 million.

But all three are 30 or over and their salaries contributed to a payroll of between $38 million and $40 million, well over the cap.

San Francisco, another team with salary cap problems, cut a group of second-line players whose salaries added up to about $2 million. But the 49ers may have to pare more they wants to sign players the players they wants, such as Green Bay linebacker Tony Bennett.

More are sure to follow.

Six birdies lift Clements

Associated Press

■ Golf Roundup

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. — Lennie Clements, not yet a winner in a 14-season career, birdied his last six holes for an 11-under-par 61 and the third-round lead Friday in the Bob Hope Classic.

"At the end, I was basically unconscious," Clements said. "At first, I didn't even know I'd birdied six in a row. I just kept hitting fairways and greens and making putts."

Clements scored 12 birdies and a bogey in his course-record round at La Quinta, one of four desert resort courses used for the first four rounds of the 90-hole tournament sponsored by Chrysler.

He made most of his move with a a 29 over back, including that finishing string of six consecutive birdies. The score has been bettered only 11 times in PGA Tour history but was not entirely unexpected.

"You know that the potential for a low score is out there," Clements said, pointing to a record 35-under-par total by Tom Kite in this tournament a year ago, a 62 by Scott Hoch on Thursday and a 64 with a double bogey by Ronnie Black on Wednesday.

"The golf course is in absolutely perfect condition," he said. "You can't shoot 61 on a course that isn't. If you can keep it in the fairway, you have a chance to get it close, and if you're on the greens, you're not going to see any spike marks."

Clements took full advantage of the situation, hitting 16 greens in regulation and missing only two fairways.

He completed 54 holes in 197, a distant 19-under par, and held a one-shot lead over Hoch, who shot a 70, also at La Quinta.

It was another two strokes back to Jay Delsing and John Huston, tied at 200. Each had a third round 66, Delsing at Indian Wells, and Huston at the Arnold Palmer course at PGA West.

Keith Clearwater and Guy Boros, son of former U.S. Open and PGA champion Julius Boros, were next at 201. Clearwater shot 70 and Boros 68, both at PGA West.

While the overall scores were exceptionally low, as they usually are at this event, some of golf's bigger names had their difficulties.

Playing in extremely strong winds at PGA West, Ben Crenshaw pumped three shots into the water on his ninth hole, eventually 3-putted and scrawled a score of "13" on his card for that hole. He went on to a 86, the high round of his career.

Corey Pavin, a winner last week in Los Angeles, shot a 76 at Bermuda Dunes and, with a 216 total, faces the need for major improvement Saturday if he is to qualify for last round play Sunday. A score of about 7-to-8-under par is projected as the probable qualifying cut.

The Challenge

NAPLES, Fla. — Jay Sigel, who has two U.S. Amateur championships and a record nine Walker Cup appearances, found the leader board Friday in his third tournament of the season.

Sigel posted a first-round 7-under-par 65 to claim a two-stroke advantage over George Archer's 67 in the IntelliNet Challenge. Sigel's round equalled the lowest single-round par 72 score of the Senior PGA Tour's season.

"I didn't throw anything away today," said Sigel, who bypassed a PGA tour career to build a successful Philadelphia insurance business and a celebrated amateur career. "I've done that in some of my rounds. My scoring hasn't been that good, but today it was better. I was more comfortable. I hit a lot of good shots and hit it close to the hole an awful lot."

Eight players are tied at 4-under after rounds of 68: Gary Player, Jim Colbert, J.C. Snead, Dick Goetz, Al Kelley, Dick Rhyan, Walt Zembriski and Tommy Aaron.

Second-round leader Scott Hoch hits his approach shot to the second hole at the La Quinta, Calif., Country Club Friday in the third round of the Bob Hope Classic.

The eight-birdie, one-bogey round was Sigel's best golf of his three-week professional career. His previous low this year was a pair of 70s.

Sigel began Friday with a string of four straight birdies on the second hole with a short chip to one foot on the par 5. He added birdie putts of 8, 13 and 14 feet to make the turn at 32.

On the back nine, Sigel had 15- and 4-foot birdie putts and another from inside one foot before suffering his only bogey. On the 14th hole, his tee shot found a flower bed and he had to chip out. He then came back with a birdie on No. 16 with a 7-iron to eight inches.

The 54-hole event carries a $500,000 purse with $75,000 going to the winner.

Hawaiian Ladies Open

EWA BEACH, Hawaii — Betsy King is one good round of golf away from her sport's highest honor.

King needs one more victory for her 30th career win, the number that brings entry into the LPGA Hall of Fame.

With a 68 in Friday's second round of the Hawaiian Ladies Open at Ko Olina Golf Club, King had the best score of the day and moved within one shot of first-round leader Val Skinner and Marta Figueras-Dotti, both at 6-under 138.

King joined Jane Geddes and Nina Foust at 139. Kathryn Marshall shot 69 to move to 140. Three shots back are Muffin Spencer-Devlin, Dana Dormann, Tracy Kerdyk and Japanese pros Akiko Fukushima and Yuko Moriguchi.

Chicago loses at home again

Associated Press

■ NBA Roundup

CHICAGO — Bryant Stith scored eight of his 28 points as Denver started the second half with a 21-9 run that lifted the Nuggets to a 109-84 victory over the Chicago Bulls on Friday night.

It was the second straight loss at home for the Bulls after they won 17 consecutive games at Chicago Stadium. The Nuggets won their first game there since 1984.

The 25-point defeat matched the Bulls' worse loss of the season. They fell to San Antonio by the same score on Nov. 24.

Scottie Pippen paced Chicago with 18 points, while Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf and Reggie Williams each had 18 for Denver.

The 21-9 burst at the start of the third period gave the Nuggets a 75-56 lead with 5:51 left. Williams added nine points in the quarter as Denver held an 85-70 lead after three periods.

In the fourth quarter, Chicago managed just 14 points on 6-for-18 shooting as the Nuggets continued to pull away.

Shooting a dismal 30 percent in the first quarter, compared to 68 percent for Denver, the Bulls trailed 32-20 entering the second period.

The Nuggets got their lead biggest lead of the half, 48-34, with 4:03 left on LaPhonso Ellis' dunk.

But Chicago countered with a 13-6 run to trim the deficit at 54-47 by halftime.

Bucks 106, Hornets 99

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Ken Norman scored 25 points to lead six players in double figures as Milwaukee broke a three-game losing streak with a victory Charlotte.

Norman also grabbed a season-high 18 rebounds as the Bucks won for the first time in six tries on Charlotte's home court. Milwaukee improved its road record to 9-17; the Bucks are 6-19 at home.

Both teams played without their starting centers. Frank Brickowski missed the game for Milwaukee with a hyperextended right knee, and the Hornets were still without Alonzo Mourning, who is recovering from a torn left calf muscle.

The remaining Milwaukee starters, joined by Vin Baker, more than took up the slack, building a 12-point lead and repelling a pair of Hornets rallies.

Hersey Hawkins, who led Charlotte with 28 points, capped an 11-0 run with a 3-pointer at the 4:53 mark in the third period, giving Charlotte a 64-62 lead. Jon Barry came back with a 15-footer for the Bucks, and the teams traded the lead three more times before Lee Mayberry's two 3-pointers gave Milwaukee the lead for good.

Magic 124, Sonics 93

ORLANDO, Fla. — Shaquille O'Neal made 16 of 19 shots, scored 38 points and grabbed 20 rebounds, leading Orlando to a rout of Seattle.

The win was the third straight for the Magic, who were embarrassed by the Sonics in a 24-point loss on Dec. 14 — a game in which O'Neal was ejected for committing a flagrant foul on the Sonics' Shawn Kemp.

The Sonics, who have the NBA's best record at 36-12, had a five-game winning streak snapped at Miami on Thursday night. They fell behind the Magic by 28 in the first quarter and never got closer than 19 the rest of the way.

Kendall Gill led Seattle with 20 points, but Kemp, the Sonics' All-Star forward, was held to only three on 1-for-9 shooting. Detlef Schrempf had 16 points for the Sonics.

Orlando shot 58 percent and scored a team-record 40 points in the opening quarter, while Seattle missed 19 of 25 attempts and struggled defensively. The Magic exploited a 17-10 rebounding advantage to set up several easy fast-break baskets.

Cavaliers 85, Timberwolves 78

MINNEAPOLIS — Mark Price and Brad Daugherty combined for 11-for-31 shooting, but Cleveland's bench players outscored Minnesota's reserves 34-4 as the Cavaliers handed the Timberwolves their ninth loss in 10 games, 85-78 Friday night.

Price made just four of his first 13 shots from the field, but hit three of his last four down the stretch and led the Cavaliers with 17 points. Reserve forward Chris Mills scored 14.

Isaiah Rider led all scorers with 22 points for the Wolves, who were playing without point guard Micheal Williams, who was placed on the injured list earlier in the day with a sprained right wrist. Chris Smith scored 13 points in his place.

Cleveland began the fourth quarter with six straight points to take a 68-63 lead, its first of the second half. The Cavaliers held the Wolves without a basket until Rider's 3-pointer with 6:13 to play brought the Wolves to 71-68.

Reserve Tyrone Hill then scored six straight points for a 77-68 lead, Cleveland's biggest of the game.

Nets 113, Bullets 110

BALTIMORE — Kenny Anderson scored a career-high 42 points, including the game-winning layup over 7-foot-7 rookie Georghe Muresan with 7.5 seconds left, as New Jersey beat Washington.

Anderson shook off an 0-for-6 start from the field and scored 18 points in the third quarter as the Nets won their fourth consecutive game.

New Jersey rallied from a 13-point deficit despite a career-best 31 points from Bullets rookie Calbert Cheaney, who scored 30 points in a victory over Minnesota on Thursday night.

Kevin Edwards added 19 points as the Nets eclipsed the .500 mark (25-24) for the first time since the season's third game.

Suns 113, Lakers 96

PHOENIX — Charles Barkley scored seven of his 32 points in a 1:39 span late in the game, stifling a Los Angeles Lakers rally and leading Phoenix to a victory.

Barkley put back a missed free throw by A.C. Green with 4:25 left, giving the Suns a 98-90 lead.

After Oliver Miller's rebound and a strong outlet pass resulted in a three-point play by Dan Majerle, Barkley stole a pass and was fouled, hitting both free throws with 3:38 remaining. Fifty-two seconds later, Barkley's 3-pointer put Phoenix up 106-92.

Big names make Eurocard quarters

Associated Press

■ Tennis Roundup

STUTTGART, Germany — Boris Becker, Goran Ivanisevic, Stefan Edberg and Sergi Bruguera won quarterfinal-round matches in the Eurocard Open on Friday.

Becker, who has slipped to No. 14 in the world after a bad year last year, defeated top-seed and fellow German Michael Stich 6-3, 7-6 (7-4).

The victory sent Becker against Ivanisevic in Saturday's semifinals.

Ivanisevic outlasted Henri Leconte of France 6-1, 5-7, 6-4.

Edberg defeated fellow Swede Magnus Gustafsson 6-3, 2-6, 6-3, and Bruguera beat Arnaud Boetsch 6-3, 6-2.

Becker was wildly cheered by the Stuttgart crowd as he walked off the court waving. The Becker-Stich match the main attraction for the 7,000 fans who crowded into Stuttgart's Hanns-Martin Schleyer Hall.

Becker has now defeated Stich five of the eight matches they have played on the ATP tour.

Paris Women's Open

PARIS — Julie Halard, the lone Frenchwoman remaining in contention, won Friday to join top seed Martina Navratilova in the semifinals of the $400,000 Paris Women's Open.

The eighth seed, Halard defeated Wiltrud Probst of Germany 2-6, 7-5, 6-4, and will face No. 5 seed Katerina Maleeva of Bulgaria in Saturday's semifinals.

Maleeva beat Laurence Courtois of Belgium 5-7, 6-3, 6-2.

Navratilova defeated No. 7 Sabine Appelmans of Belgium 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, and will play Georgia's Leila Meshki, the No. 6 seed who earlier Friday dumped Caroline Vis of the Netherlands 6-0, 6-1.

"I'm ready for anything now," Navratilova said. "I know this court well now after running all over it tonight.

"I hit a lot of my half-volleys too early today. When I was leading 3-1 in the second set I just fell asleep. She played better and better, and I had some trouble coming back in the end."

Halard at one point was down 2-4 in the second set, two games from losing her match.

US Indoor

PHILADELPHIA — Paul Haarhuis of the Netherlands ended Jim Grabb's best run since a nine-month injury layoff with a 7-6 (7-5), 5-7, 6-3 victory Friday in the quarterfinals of the Comcast U.S. Indoor.

Haarhuis broke through Grabb's service in the 16-point sixth game of the third set and won the final game at love on four straight errors by Grabb.

"He stayed back a lot and put a lot of pressure on me from the back, whereas I thought at the beginning I just have to keep him back, because he likes to come in, come to the net," Haarhuis said. "He really surprised me with how well he played from the baseline."

Other quarterfinal matchups Friday had No. 8 seed Jaime Yzaga of Peru against Jacco Eltingh of the Netherlands, No. 2 Jim Courier against No. 7 Andrei Chesnokov of Russia and No. 3 Michael Chang against Jonathan Stark.

AP Laserphoto

Sweden's Stefan Edberg returns a shot during his match against Magnus Gustafsson at the Eurocard Open tournament Friday.

Haarhuis and Grabb broke each other's serve three times in the first set before a 26-point 11th game that Grabb finally won after the score reached deuce 11 times. Haarhuis rallied from 1-4 in the tie-breaker mostly because of Grabb's errors and won the 1-hour, 17-minute set when Grabb hit a backhand out of court.

In the second set, Grabb fell behind a service break in the second game, but evened the match in the seventh game with a cross-court passing shot.

Grabb and Haarhuis then traded service breaks in the eighth and 11th games in a series of sharp exchanges that had the crowd cheering. Grabb lost only one point in the 12th game and the set ended when Haarhuis hit a backhand into the net.

"I still played some bad points today," said Grabb, who returned to the tour Jan. 3 after surgery last April to reattach cartilage in his right shoulder. "I didn't serve terrifically. I think those are things that are still going to come. I just have to be patient with that stuff."

Haarhuis, who turns 28 Saturday, is in his sixth year as a pro but has yet to win a tournament in singles. He eliminated Jimmy Connors in the first round.

Rice long jumper takes third straight title

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — When you're among the world's best, a conference meet offers little challenge.

World-class long jumper Kareem Streete-Thompson of Rice learned that Friday as he easily won his third straight Southwest Conference indoor title with a leap of 26 feet, 7¼ inches — a personal best.

"I felt I was in control," Thompson, a junior, said. "Everything was clicking today."

Texas athletes won the other two events Friday, the first day of the two-day meet, as the two-time defending champion Longhorns earned 24 points to lead Houston by four points.

■ SWC Indoor

Texas' women's team, seeking its 10th straight first-place finish, heads into Saturday trailing Houston 28-17.

The marquee event Friday was the men's long jump. But the competition basically was between Thompson and the tape measure, something he delicately admitted by noting his "worst" jump — 25-1 on his second attempt in the prelims — was 10 inches longer than the second-place finisher's best leap.

But the meet is over for Thompson because he was disqualified from the 55-meter dash for a false start in a semifinal heat.

The other jumping event was dominated by Houston as the Cougars finished 2-3-4-6 in the high jump.

Texas' Richard Duncan won, pushing defending champion Kenneth Bigger of Houston to second. Both cleared 7-1, the same height Bigger won at last year.

Duncan won because he missed fewer attempts.

The 5,000 meters was won by Texas' Kamiel Maase, a junior transfer from The Netherlands.

Houston was dealt a major setback when Sam Jefferson pulled up lame in his 200-meter preliminary heat.

Texas' Nicole Devonish edged Dawn Burrell of Houston in the long jump by virtue of a better second-best jump as each tied at 20-1½.

Rockie pitcher injured

Associated Press

Kent Bottenfield of the Colorado Rockies was the first player to get hurt this spring.

■ Spring Roundup

Bottenfield, 25, broke a bone in a freak accident. After bunting against a pitching machine, he walked away and was accidentally struck by another ball placed in the machine by a coach.

"I was finished bunting but somebody thought I was still bunting," Bottenfield said. "I was walking out of the cage, and they put another ball in and it hit me on the back of the hand. It was just an accident. I probably should have been paying a little more attention."

Because the injury is to his non-throwing hand, Bottenfield isn't expected to miss any mound work. He will be unable to catch the ball or take batting practice, however, for at least two weeks.

Outfielder Darryl Strawberry, rehabilitating a back injury that sidelined him for most of the past two seasons, worked out Friday as the Los Angeles Dodgers started up at Vero Beach, Fla.

He was joined by catcher Carlos Hernandez (shoulder surgery) and outfielders Mitch Webster (knee surgery) and Billy Ashley (shoulder), and infielder Jeff Treadway, a non-roster invitee.

Philadelphia, the defending National League champion, had its first workout of the spring at Clearwater, Fla. Twenty-three pitchers, six catchers and a handful of position players practiced for three hours, the team's first gathering since Joe Carter's three-run homer gave Toronto an 8-6 victory in Game 6 of the World Series.

"Everyone is healthy and in shape and very eager to work," Phillies manager Jim Fregosi said.

Four pitchers in camp are 6-foot-6: Toby Borland, Roger Mason, Ben Rivera and David West. Tyler Green and Tommy Greene are 6-foot-4.

"Perhaps we should take on Michael Jordan and the White Sox," Fregosi joked.

At St. Petersburg, Fla., Rick Sutcliffe was happy to be in camp with the St. Louis Cardinals, even though he'd only get a $250,000, one-year contract.

Pirates need better pitching

Associated Press

Pittsburgh manager Jim Leyland says the Pirates' pitching has to improve this year.

"Everybody says pitching is 75 percent of baseball, or 90 percent, or whatever. Well, they're right," he said. "Pitching is the key to a good team, and ours wasn't good enough last year."

The Pirates posted a 4.77 ERA last year and finished with a 75-87 record for fifth place in the National League East.

Red Sox

Boston has named B.J. Baker at its first strength and conditioning coordinator.

Baker, who has spent the past seven years as an athletic trainer at Harvard, will supervise weight training programs for the Red Sox, devise a warmup and stretching program and oversee off-season conditioning.

He will work with Red Sox players when the team is in Boston, and will help minor leaguers and injured major leaguers when the team is on the road.

Rockies

It didn't take Howard Johnson's long to find his lost home run swing.

After hitting a ball over the fence during a spring training workout with the Colorado Rockies Thursday at Tucson, Ariz., Johnson was smiling.

"I've been working on my swing all winter," said Johnson, a free agent who spent the past nine seasons with the New York Mets. "Normally, I'm a slow starter in the spring, so this is a good starting point."

Johnson is coming off two injury-marred seasons. His best year was 1991, when he led the National League with 38 homers and 117 RBIs, while collecting 34 doubles and stealing 30 bases.

Cubs

Manager Tom Trebelhorn is trying to fill a tough spot in Chicago — replacing Jim Lefebvre as manager of the Cubs.

■ Baseball Notes

"Jimmy had a lot of support here and I realize that," Trebelhorn said. "But the job is mine now and I will work very hard to gain the loyalty of everyone in the organization."

Lefebvre was fired after the Cubs finished fourth last season in the National League East. They were 84-78, finishing above .500 for only the second time in 22 years, but wound up 13 games out of first place.

Cardinals

Gregg Jefferies never wanted to go to salary arbitration. Now he's glad he did.

"They didn't give us much choice," Jefferies said Thursday after an arbitrator picked his $4.6 million request instead of the St. Louis club's offer of $3.7 million. "... They didn't want to negotiate at all."

Only Ruben Sierra, awarded $5 million in 1992 as a member of the Texas Rangers, has received a higher award in arbitration.

Jefferies made $2.65 million in 1993 when he hit .342 with 16 home runs, 83 RBIs and 46 steals. It was his best year, but he didn't think he'd win at arbitration.

Reds

Pitchers and catchers got right to work when Cincinnati opened camp, with coach Ray Knight conducting a lengthy session on bunting.

"We aren't going to have the problem that we had last year in failing to lay down a sacrifice," Knight said. "This is the easiest part of the game, and we are going to teach them if it takes all day every day we are here."

The drill was intended to set the tone for the Reds' camp, which manager Davey Johnson has said will be demanding.

When practice began, Johnson said the workout might have to be limited to 1½ hours because of wet fields. But the sun appeared and Johnson kept the 17 pitchers and five catchers an extra hour.

Money buys confidence for Baltimore

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — If nothing else, money can buy confidence.

That was the atmosphere Friday as 26 pitchers and catchers began workouts for the Baltimore Orioles at Twin Lakes Park.

"You can sense a confident feeling," Ben McDonald said. "In each of the last two Septembers we were a half-game behind, but we didn't have the horses down the stretch to bring us home."

That was before Peter Angelos bought the team for $173 million, and shelled out another $42.85 million for free agents Rafael Palmeiro, Chris Sabo, Sid Fernandez and Lee Smith.

The centerpiece is Palmeiro, who hit 37 homers with 105 RBIs for the Texas Rangers last season.

Sutcliffe just wants to win

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Rick Sutcliffe, signed to a minor league contract with the St. Louis Cardinals, has made his money in baseball and now just wants to win.

"I've earned $20 million," said Sutcliffe, the oldest pitcher in the Cardinals camp. "I've kept a bunch of it. Money isn't important to me now. But winning is all important."

Sutcliffe was signed by the Cardinals after Baltimore gave up on him because of the knee injury he sustained last year. The 37-year-old right-hander says the knee is rehabilitated.

"My knee is healthy now and I feel I have the arm of a 32-year-old," Sutcliffe said. "I checked the Cardinals thoroughly. Deep down I wanted to stay in Baltimore. But now that I'm here, I think we can win. This club has good defense, a good outfield."

Sutcliffe started 8-2 for the Orioles before the injury.

Jansen has his moment

By Terrence Moore
Cox News Service

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — You wonder if the Olympic gods are embracing Dan Jansen too tightly right now, but you know you have to give Jansen his moment. It took only 72.43 seconds Friday for the fastest skater on the planet to prove for the first time on Olympic ice that his reputation for swiftness wasn't a myth.

You were moved when Jansen's wife burst into tears after her husband scooted to the finish line in a flash after 1,000 meters. You tingled when those from other countries leaped and clapped with joy throughout Norway and congratulated anybody they could find from the United States. You definitely felt an extra burst of red, white and blue when Jansen took his victory lap while holding his nine-month-old baby girl.

You know something is missing, though, but you also know that this definitely is Jansen's moment. If nothing else, nobody ever moved 1,000 meters on skates faster than Jansen did Friday before a noisy following inside the arena and elsewhere. Plus, nobody ever felt each syllable of "The Star-Spangled Banner" more than Jansen did when he wore his ticket out of infamy around his neck. He even saluted the American flag at the end of the National Anthem, and he followed that by matching his wife, Robin, along with hundreds of others, tear for tear.

There also was that moment inside the moment when Jansen appeared to glance past the arena's ceiling toward the heavens in acknowledgement of Jan Jansen Beres, his sister who died of leukemia during the '88 Games. Jansen even named his daughter Jane in honor of his sister, and it was enough to propel Jansen's moment that much deeper into Olympic lore.

As for his ticket out of infamy, you call it a gold medal. But Jansen thought about the falls and the slips during his previous Olympic races, and he called his gold medal "a relief."

"It's over, and I finally got a happy ending out of this," said Jansen, an emotional wreck later, when 10 years featuring three previous Olympics with exactly no medals flashed before his wet eyes. "I definitely knew I was capable of doing this, but I didn't know how the ice was. I am just so . . . so relieved right now. Finally, I feel like I've made other people happy instead of having them feel sorry for me."

The world grieved with Jansen during the '88 Games in Calgary, where he skated in the 500 within hours after his sister died. He fell during that race, and he fell later during the 1,000. He simply bombed in both events four years later in Albertville, and then there was his slip this week along the way to an eighth-place finish in the 500. He also slipped Friday, but it wasn't enough to ruin his chance for a moment.

Still, you have to wonder if Jansen's moment only pushes him deeper into the "Underachievers Hall of Fame." After all, Dan Jansen should be Bonnie Blair, his female contemporary who begins her quest Saturday for a record-tying fourth Olympic gold medal among American women when she takes the ice in the 500 meters. Like Jansen, Blair lives in Milwaukee. Like Jansen, Blair competed in her first Olympics a decade ago was a teenager back then (Blair at 19, Jansen at 18). Like Jansen, Blair has ranked among the favorites for the past three Olympics.

Unlike Jansen, Blair has produced. In fact, Blair has created moments comparable to Jansen's only moment several times through the years. In Albertville, Blair took the 500 and the 1,000. Four years before that, she took a gold in the 500 and a bronze in the 1,000. So impressed were the folks in Champaign, Ill., where Blair was born and raised, that they named a street after her. Admirers on the island of St. Vincent in the West Indies even placed her likeness on stamps.

Blair isn't finished yet, either. Before the Olympic flame dies this year, she might own more gold medals in the Games than Evelyn Ashford, Janet Evans and Pat McCormick, all American women, all standing between Blair and the ultimate level of greatness. You call it being peerless.

You wonder if Jansen ever will reach such a level, but then you shrug. You just think about Jansen's moment.

Torvill, Dean put end to long Olympic hiatus

By George Vecsey
N.Y. Times News Service

HAMAR, Norway — Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean — or Torvill and Dean as they have earned the right to be called — made their Olympic comeback on Friday night, merely 10 years after their last appearance in the Winter Games.

Taking advantage of a special reinstatement of professionals to so-called amateur skating, the legendary ice-dance pair earned a third-place ranking after the compulsory portion.

Oksana Grichtchuk and Yevgeny Platov of Russia and Maya Usova and Alexander Zhulin, also of Russia, the current world champions and silver medalists from the 1992 Games, respectively, were tied for first after the first night.

The competition continues on Sunday night and concludes on Monday, with the more significant freestyle dancing.

The lone American couple in the event, Elizabeth Punsalan and her husband, Jerod Swallow, were 14th after the first round.

They were competing two weeks after Punsalan's father, Dr. Ernesto Punsalan, was murdered in his home outside Cleveland. His son, Ricardo, age 20, who had been released from a psychiatric hospital, has been charged with committing the crime.

Swallow said they lost points when he caught a rut in the ice and had to put down his skate an extra time to catch up with his wife. But the couple seemed thrilled just to be on the ice in the same group with Torvill and Dean and the other leaders.

"You just want to skate over to the side and watch them," said Swallow, who comes from Detroit.

"It gets the adrenaline going," Swallow said of skating with the leaders.

Punsalan and Swallow seemed relaxed by the presence of nine family members and a major restaurant excursion Thursday night — "moose stew," Swallow said with approval. The couple was pleased when their tiny single rooms at the Olympic village were located across the hall from each other.

Blair digs for gold again

HAMAR, Norway (AP) — The stare, the glare.

The look in her eyes tells you speedskating is all business for Bonnie Blair. Serious business. She's going for gold again — record gold.

If the speedskater successfully defends Saturday in the women's 500 meters, her four career gold medals will tie her for the most by an American woman.

And she could very well come away from these Games with a record fifth gold and a total of seven career medals.

"But I don't think about that stuff," Blair said. "I can't have that mindset. Too many things can happen. If you start expecting to win, you're just not going to stay at that level."

There are worse things than expecting to win.

Dan Jansen has dominated the men's sprints nearly as long as Blair has led the women's field and had no Olympic medals to show for it until Friday, when he won the gold in his last race and fourth Winter Games.

Five-time Olympic champion Eric Heiden said Jansen noticeably tightens in the Olympics.

Blair seems to toughen when she has the world's attention, almost daring other skaters to take her medals from her.

They rarely do.

Blair is 9-1 at 500 meters and 9-0 at 1,000 meters this season and she dominated the world sprint championships in Calgary in her final pre-Olympics meet last

RANGERETTES: Greenwood out of playoffs

(From 1C)

back to Clint at the Pecos gym.

Greenwood, the District 6-3A runnerup, ends its season at 18-12 while Clint improves to 21-6 and will face Decatur on Tuesday at a site and time to be determined.

Greenwood will spend the offseason thinking "What if?."

The Rangerettes shook off a sluggish first half and an 11-point halftime deficit to take a 32-30 lead going into the fourth period after holding Clint to just one point in the third period. But Greenwood failed to convert on numerous opportunities down the stretch.

"They gave us every chance in the world," said Greenwood coach Alan Wooten. "They missed their free throws down the stretch, but we couldn't make the plays offensively."

Clint made just 2-of-8 freebies in the final period, and missed the front end of two one-and-one opportunities, but the Rangerettes could only come with four Tricia Ross free throws in the final 3:30 of the game.

"We did the same thing on Monday," said Clint coach Don Barry, referring to his team's collapse in the second half after leading by 11 at the break. "We had a big lead on El Paso Hanks in a practice game and they came back.

"We're a very young team, we start a sophomore and freshman. We also play in a weak district and we haven't had any competition the last 10 games of the season. Our lack of conditioning really showed against their press."

Greenwood's trapping half court defense is what caused Clint to shoot 0-6 and commit nine turnovers in the third quarter as Greenwood scrambled back into the game after a first half that saw them get outrebounded 25-12. In the second quarter, the Rangerettes made just 2-of-11 field goals and had only three rebounds.

"We missed a lot, a lot of critical shots in the first half," said Wooten. "We just got too far behind. I think we played very well in the second half."

Greenwood carved out its largest lead of the night, 34-30 with 7:40 to play after a Pallanez jumper. Clint evened the score on a Shelly Bramblett basket and Yvette Barrios layup.

Ross sank a baseline jumper with 3:54 to play to put the Rangerettes back on top 36-34.

Clint wemt on an 8-2 run over the 2:34 to take a 42-38 lead on a Mari Martinez basket.

Greenwood resorted to fouling Clint down the stretch, but could not score, despite the Lady Lions missing the front end of four 1-and-1's in the final 17 seconds.

JANSEN: Harding answers questions

(From 1C)

its second game in Lillehammer — the first time they'd lost twice in the same Olympics since 1960, when the Americans took the gold.

And in a delicious twist of Olympic irony, last week's defendant — the United States Olympic Committee — played host to the plaintiff, Tonya Harding, at a news conference for 1,500 journalists.

The Hamar rink was kinder to big-name skaters Friday than it was a night earlier, as 1984 gold medalists Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean of England placed third in the first portion of the ice dancing. A near-stumble in the waltz cost the couple, and Dean was not pleased.

"No," he snapped at reporters when asked for a comment on T&D's performance.

Their comeback after 10 years away from the Games came 24 hours after Brian Boitano, Viktor Petrenko and Kurt Browning bumbled their routines and fell out of medal contention.

World champions Maia Usova and Alexander Zhulin of Russia and countrymen Oksana Gritschuk and Evgeny Platov were tied for first after the compulsory dances, which account for 20 percent of the total score. The original dance on Sunday is 30 percent, while Monday's free dance accounts for the other 50 percent.

Not even the Harding-Kerrigan soap opera could draw attention away from Jansen, who walks away a winner. The 28-year-old from Greenfield, Wis., was at a loss for words; in the past, he had only talked about what went wrong.

Jansen's performance raised the U.S. medal total to five — three gold, two silver — and was the first American medal won away from the skiing venues. The Russian hockey team may be stumbling, but the rest of their squad is thriving: They still lead in overall medals with 13 — five gold, five silver, three bronze.

Italy is next with 10 (3-3-4), while host Norway has nine medals (5-3-1), tying the Russians for most gold.

The action at the Harding news conference was supposed to involve skating questions.

It didn't.

Harding was asked why anyone should believe anything she says. She was asked about her topless photos, her ovarian cyst, her relationship with Nancy Kerrigan, her troubled background and ex-husband Jeff Gillooly.

She dodged some questions and answered others, never losing her cool, sitting alongside representatives of the same organization that asked her to stay in Oregon for the opening ceremonies.

STANTON: Herm's 27 leads Lady Buffaloes

(From 1C)

The Lady Buffs overcame a lack of intensity to defeat Anthony 71-35 here Friday night and move into the area round of the Class 2A state playoffs.

Stanton, now 28-3 overall, will advance against either Jim Ned or Goldwaithe. If the Lady Buffs face Jim Ned, they will play in Sweetwater on Tuesday night, if it's Goldwaithe, a site and time is to be determined.

Anthony ends its season at 20-8, but the smaller Lady Wildcats went down swinging.

Stanton jumped out a quick 10-3 lead in the first period, but Anthony, on a 9-0 run in the final 2:55 of the period, led 12-10 after one period. The Lady Wildcats shot just 20 percent in the first half, missing primarily uncontested layups and could manage just seven points in the period.

"Anthony is a much improved team from a year ago," said Stanton coach Frank Riley. "They are fundamentally much better than last year and they came out playing tough.

"We started very slow. We had to develop our intensity. We have to learn that you have to play hard when you press and we didn't do that early."

Stanton used Anthony's poor shooting to go on a 25-2 run over a 6:47 stretch from the end of the second period through the start of the third period, extending an 18-17 lead with 2:05 in the half to a 43-19 cushion in the third quarter.

"The first half was embarassing," said senior guard Laura Herm. "We didn't take them seriously and they have a few players who can score. The attitude in the lockerroom before today's game and the Wall game on Tuesday was totally different. It was embarassing.

"Coach always tells us that we walk a fine line and at half he said, 'Tonight we were walking the wrong side of the line,' that we were not playing like a playoff team."

Herm and junior post Sande Bundas took the game over in the second half, combining for 20 of the Lady Buffs' final 24 points.

Stanton's defensive pressure forced Anthony into nine turnovers in the decisive third quarter.

Herm led the way with 27 points and Bundas scored 22.

Anthony, which started just one senior, was led by junior forward Patti Silva with 11 points and guard Mari Martinez with 10.

everybody else."

Alcala did get uncorked in the second quarter and the Lady Bulldogs put the game away, outscoring the T-Birds 12-2 to take a 28-10 lead with 4:40 left in the first half. Alcala scored eight points in the second and finished with 13. She also had seven assists and five steals. Chancellor also scored eight in the second as the Lady Bulldogs maintained the 18-point margin for a 38-20 halftime lead. ing after being fouled on made baskets.

Coronado coach Sylvia Alcantar said her team was simply outmanned by the ninth-ranked Lady Bulldogs.

"One thing, in El Paso we don't have is the press, and it's difficult to prepare for this aggressive-type fullcourt defense that teams like Amarillo and Midland play," Alcantar said. "Secondly, we were murdered on the boards. When we can't attack the boards, then we're not going to fare very well."

Midland outrebounded the Lady T-Birds 40-28 behind posts Elaine Rogers and Michel Ann Thompson. Rogers had a game-high 10 rebounds while Thompson finished with eight.

Midland also damaged any Coronado hopes by causing 16 of the Lady T-Birds 21 total turnovers in the second half. The Lady Bulldogs only turned the ball over eight times.

Defensively, the Lady Bulldogs shut down Coronado's star Erika Gutierrez. The senior and the only returner off last year's team, Gutierrez was held to 11 points on 5-of-20 shooting. She scored 33 points in her team's win over El Paso Eastwood in bi-district.

Midland coach Jim Raughton said that was the key to holding down the T-Birds.

"We knew we need to keep the pressure on her all the time," Raughton said.

LOW: Midland Lee senior spectacular in new offense, leadership role game up," Low said. "There was some pressure. Last year, I was involved with a good team (ranked No. 10 in the state at the end of regular season play), but I was coming off the bench.

"I hadn't been in this position since we had Martin (Lattibeaudiere, now starting at West Texas A&M as a freshman), David (Wilson, who is now playing for Midland College) and Ryan Tucker (now playing football at TCU), who was 6-5 and God knows how many pounds."

Even with the experience level low, this Low expected this team to be in the playoffs.

"I had a good outlook about the team going into the season," Low said. "I knew we would be here (playoffs) because we play harder than anybody in the district. In fact, we have to play harder, or we wouldn't be where we are now."

Low says this band of Rebels are an "overachieving team."

"We have to be overachieving because our tallest man (junior Daniel Hughes) is only 6-4," Low said. "We have no other choice, or we will lose. We can't win if we don't play a good game, but that has made it fun."

House says of Low and his Rebels, "He's not real big (6-2) or quick, but he has the heart and desire to excel. He's pretty typical of the type of players we have had at Lee the past couple of years.

"With no returning starters back and a JV team with a losing record, it is a credit to these kids that they are in the playoffs. In fact, we feel like we were two points away from playing for a district championship."

Low says that this has been a special season for him, and not just because of the numbers he has put on the boards this year.

"Coach House told us early in the season that a fan had said that we were the worst basketball team he had ever seen at Lee," Low said. "Well, I don't think we are the worst. We're in the playoffs and that sure means a lot to me."

Still, Low isn't taking the playoffs lightly. He knows the playoff road ahead is littered with huge obstacles, including Coronado Tuesday. Coronado beat the Rebels by five points in an earlier meeting at Chaparral Center this year.

"It takes three wins to get to the region tournament," Low said. "It's a hard road for us, be we want it. If we could get to the tournament, we would be playing in our house (Chaparral Center), before our fans. Anything could happen then."

On the more pressing matter of Coronado on Tuesday, Low said, "They beat us by five points here (61-56), but I think we can beat them. With no returning starters, we didn't have it together then. We're a much better team now. Also, I remember they had a great shooting night when they played us and you don't always get that. And we were still close to them."

Lee's "Low-riding" Rebs do have the opportunity to turn some heads with a couple of playoff wins. It could be an interesting run.

Kickin' up a flurry of success

Montgomery is country's newest sensation

By Jimmy Patterson
Special Projects Editor

■ Review

Country music years are starting to resemble Chinese years. Each year is known for something particular. And sometimes peculiar.

In 1991, China had the Year of the Sheep, America had the year of "Friends in Low Places." In '92, monkeys were big in China, but in America, we had Billy Ray Cyrus. In '93, China honored roosters, while we paid tribute to Vince Gill, and clucked at the mention of "Common Thread," the tribute to the Eagles (remember?).

It's the dawn of a new year in China, the Year of the Dog, to be more precise; in America, it's shaping up to be the Year of John Michael Montgomery. What a country. Or, "What country?" may be more appropriate to some old timers.

Montgomery is the most commercially viable country music star today, bar none. He's bigger than Vince, Billy Ray — and even Garth Brooks. At present, he's bigger than all three combined. That status may even hold until Vince decides to release his latest album, due later this year.

"Kickin' it Up," Montgomery's latest work, has been No. 1 on both the country and pop album charts for two weeks. His

Nick Nolte working OT these days

LOS ANGELES — Nick Nolte once played a teacher in a movie called, well, "Teachers."

Practically every role the beefy, macadam-voiced actor has essayed in his 53 years has left an impression on him, but that one seems to have struck particularly deep. Ask Nolte about any movie he has made, and he doesn't just give you an answer. You get a dissertation.

This year, Nolte is a walking university. His most recent release, "I'll Do Anything," instructed in parenting, actors' psychology and nonmusical musical comedy. "Blue Chips," opening Friday, offers courses on ethics and college basketball.

Reissues: Same stuff, new boxes

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Selling the same old thing in a shiny new package works for beer and detergent — and definitely pop music.

It seems just as fast as something falls out of fashion, along comes a format change or nostalgia fad that gives it new commercial life.

Just ask Craig Balsam and Cliff Chenfeld, two disaffected New York lawyers who are partners at Razor & Tie Music.

Finding legal life stifling, they quit law and found refuge in The '70s Preservation Society, a tongue-in-cheek organization with the serious goal of selling compilations of silly 1970s hits such as "Having My Baby," "Seasons in the Sun" and "Billy, Don't Be a Hero."

Their first compilation sold about 100,000 copies through humorous late-night television commercials featuring Balsam as a guy stuck in the decade of polyester.

"We had a strong sense that 1970s music was going to come back," said Chenfeld, citing the 20-year nostalgia cycle that made the '50s popular in the '70s, and the '60s a rage in the '80s.

"You know, all these people who are getting to our age (early 30s) and a little bit older are beginning to lose touch with pop culture and getting a little nostalgic for when they were kids."

Chenfeld said the duo thought '70s music as fun and frivolous. "And we thought there would be a lot of younger people who would hook into sort of that pre-AIDS, pre-crack kind of disco, top-40, more innocent-sounding kind of stuff."

Technology played a major part as well. The originals came out on vinyl records, cassettes or even 8-tracks. Much of the material had been deemed unworthy of CD release by the big record companies because they came from one- and two-hit wonders instead of superstars.

Even Rhino and Rykodisc — leaders in the CD reissue field — tend to stay with well-known artists (David Bowie, Frank Zappa and Elvis Costello in Rykodisc's case) or compilations of more exotic musical genres.

Razor & Tie has since marketed follow-up compilations focusing on such '70s niches as "Disco Fever," "Those Rockin' '70s" and "Easy '70s."

So disco fans can groove to songs like "Ring My Bell," "A Fifth of Beethoven" and "Y.M.C.A." Sentimental types can get dewey-eyed on "Easy

Tampering with history unconscionable

I read the news today, oh boy!

The Beatles? Together again? Let's not and say we did.

Patterson

The rumors, which do resurface every few years regarding a reunion of the supergroup, are flying high and heavy again.

As a kid, I was lucky enough to catch the last leg of the Beatles. When I went from listening to the Osmond Brothers to appreciating real music, "Get Back" was the Beatles' single of the moment.

By the time I began truly admiring their work, the Beatles were four grumpy old men whose minds were fried, and whose disdain for each other was sadly apparent (thanks to Yoko).

The Beatles were so unbelievably talented as songwriters and performers, though, that they could climb atop a wharehouse roof, play a concert and sound good. Grumpy, but good.

Ask anyone where they were when Elvis died and it rolls off the tongue immediately (I was, ironically, in a submarine sandwich shop). Ask people where they were when John Lennon was murdered and it may be a little more difficult for some memories to recall.

I had walked into my dorm room at college. I tossed the books on the bed, flipped on the television, and heard the tragic news that a nut with a gun and a Lennon fixation had mowed down one of the most gifted, prolific songsmiths the world has ever produced.

Fourteen years later, John Lennon is still revered. "Imagine" is as perfect a song today as it was for the anti-war generation it played to originally.

Fourteen years since Lennon died, and almost a quarter of a century after the group last played together, that ugly word "reunion" has cropped up again.

Let's just hope that talk is all it is. And let's just hope that those responsible for the rumors will come to their senses and realize that the Beatles are better left in our memories. And it is better to rely on those memories as we listen to various Beatles' works through the digitally enhanced technology of the '90s.

So with our memories, and our technologically clean sound on our CDs and our cassettes, we don't need a reunion, thank you very much.

Besides, most all the possibilities that have been mentioned as a substitute for John Lennon would make a re-gathering of the group laughable.

Lennon's kids, Sean and Julian have been talked about, but quite frankly neither could shine their dad's shoes, talent-wise.

Phil Collins is another possiblity. Oh sure, why don't they just ask David Cassidy or Michael Bolton or Snoop Doggy Dogg. If they're going to cast for Lennon's stand-in, at least let's get an artist who has a degree of sincerity.

The only replacement that's been discussed who would legitimize such a reunion is Eric Clapton. Clapton (or maybe Elton John) would be the only artist who could come close to Lennon, his artistry and his British roots. To consider anyone else is implausible.

Hopefully, though, Clapton will have enough sense to distance himself from such a project out of respect for Lennon's memory.

We simply do not need a commercially driven reunion. As L.A. Times columnist Phil Rosenthal recently wrote, "... history is to be remembered, not relived. As the maxim goes, only the condemned repeat it. As uninspiring as the '90s may seem compared to the '60s, we cannot afford to be that desperate."

The magical memory tour we have been on for over 25 years should not be tampered with. And to those who hope to disrupt musical history, remember just three words: Let it be.

Sequel to 'My Girl' has tone of intelligent sitcom

By Stephen Holden
N.Y. Times News Service

■ Review

From Elton John singing "Bennie and the Jets," to mood rings, to Richard Nixon declaring, "The president has nothing to hide," Howard Zieff's film "My Girl 2" is awash in 1970s nostalgia.

It is a measure of this family comedy's reflective good mood that even the embattled president's televised grimace seems more forlorn than forbidding.

"My Girl 2" is the appealingly sentimental sequel to one of the bigger hits of the 1991 holiday season. That movie followed the growing pains of Vada Sultenfuss (Anna Chlumsky), a smart, attractive Pennsylvania schoolgirl whose best friend (Macaulay Culkin) dies from bee stings in a freak accident.

All the significant principals, with the obvious exception of Culkin, are back for the sequel.

Dan Aykroyd and Jamie Lee Curtis reprise their roles of Harry and Shelly Sultenfuss, a tuba-playing undertaker and his adoring second wife, who is now pregnant. Two years have passed and Vada, 13, is going through the first stirrings of adolescence.

The new movie picks up a strand of Vada's history that the first one barely touched on. When the students in her English class are asked to research and file reports on people they admire but don't know, Vada decides to trace the background of her mother, Maggie, who died giving birth to her.

Because her father and Maggie married after a whirlwind courtship, even Harry is at a loss to provide much information on his first wife's background. Among a small box of mementos she left behind, the most mysterious item is a brown paper bag with a date scrawled on it.

At Shelly's urging, Vada flies to Los Angeles, her mother's hometown, for a five-day field trip. She stays with her Uncle Phil (Richard Masur), who runs an auto-repair shop and who lives with his longtime girlfriend, Rose (Christine Ebersole), and her adolescent son, Nick (Austin O'Brien).

Accompanied by Nick, who metamorphoses from pest to boyfriend, Vada sets about filling in the blanks of her mother's past with the help of an old high school yearbook.

"My Girl 2," like its predecessor, is a family movie that wants to seem very grown-up while maintaining the perspective of a still-innocent 13-year-old girl. Where the first movie forced Vada to face some jarring realities (a best friend's death, a grandmother's senility) and was heavily salted with mortuary humor, the atmosphere of the sequel is softer and more golden.

Among other things, the film is a nostalgic valentine to Los Angeles in palmier days when the city still wore the mystique of a laid-back, post-hippie lotus land.

This movie doesn't juxtapose the macabre and the sentimental nearly as aggressively as the original did. Janet Kovalcik's screenplay tells a coming-of-age story in straightforward dialogue, which, while deficient in laugh lines, largely manages to avoid stickier cliches.

The movie's female characters are strikingly richer than most of its men. Ms. Curtis' Shelly is the ideal stepmother: beautiful, patient and wise. Ms. Ebersole, as Shelly's spunkier West Coast counterpart, is correspondingly radiant. But nice as they are, their male partners are dull, domesticated schlumps. Why these perfect women would want to settle down with them is anybody's guess.

If the story takes some turns that seem far-fetched and contrived, the movie at least has the consistency of tone of an intelligent sitcom. It knows how to play the heartstrings without strumming too hard.

One key to that tone is Ms. Chlumsky's appealingly understated performance. A stronger, more focused personality here than in the original, Ms. Chlumsky's Vada is so good-natured and reasonable that she comes dangerously close to being a dreamy-eyed little princess.

It will be interesting to discover whether children and adolescents in the age of hip-hop and "Roseanne" can relate to her at all.

"My Girl 2" is rated PG (Parental guidance suggested). The story, although pitched for children and teen-agers, portrays adult situations

COUNTRY: Just like Grisham, Montgomery can do no wrong

(From 1D)

"I Swear," has been the No. 1 single for three weeks now. It is the love song of the year, and it's only February. If that weren't enough, last week he was chosen best new artist at the American Music Awards. This guy is the John Grisham of country music.

We're talking big. Not necessarily great, but big nonetheless. Sort of like Grisham. Right now, Montgomery can do no wrong.

"Kickin' it Up" is Montgomery's follow-up to last year's debut, "Life's A Dance." His sophomore effort has the potential to become one of the biggest sellers in country music history. It epitomizes the "new country" movement. If an alien from the fifth planet left of the sun visited Earth one day and wanted the scoop on "new country," you'd tell him to watch The Nashville Network — but first go buy the new John Michael Montgomery.

Just when it appeared the Kentucky native couldn't tug at the heart strings any more effectively than he did with "I Love the Way You Love Me" from his debut album, he comes out with "I Swear," a destined classic. Years from now, "I Swear" will have been sung at more weddings than Zsa Zsa Gabor and Mickey Rooney ever dreamed of attending. In fact, "I Swear" is such a perfect love song, it gives Liz Taylor perfect grounds for divorcing Larry Fortensky, just so she can marry again and have the song sung at her inevitable next ceremony.

"Kickin' it Up" does not stop at "I Swear" where memorable songs are concerned, though. This album has more hooks than a trout stream in summer. It could legitimately yield as many singles as there are cuts on the album. Won't happen, but it's possible. Pop had Michael Jackson's "Thriller" in 1981; new country has "Kickin' it Up" 13 years later.

The album has the perfect blend of partying bar themes and toned down love songs. After "I Swear" runs its course, we'll have "Rope the Moon" next, another tear-jerker. That will be followed with one of the disc's uptempo songs, likely either "Be My Baby Tonight," the album opener, or "Friday at Five," the required male-bonding party song.

"All in My Heart" is a touching waltz that is a near-equal to "I Swear" on the mush scale.

Montgomery is showing that he has staying power, and it would be surprising if there were a bigger country music story in 1994. While not for everyone, this guy has a sort of mass appeal that may snag some of the people who swear they'll worked out with the Boston Celtics for the past 17 years, according to publicity material.

CHIPS: Film shows pressures

(From 1D)

The film is not merely a celebration of James Naismith's invention. It also shows how the pressure to win can corrupt coaches, college administrations and student-players alike.

Coach Nick Nolte begins the film with an address to the troops that makes George C. Scott's Patton seem like a high school debater. Nolte tosses furniture, trashes lockers and excoriates his contrite players. Even though they play their hearts out in the second half, they lack the talent to save Nolte from a losing season after years of triumph.

The coach can't handle losing. Nor can the alumni, headed by a rich sleaze, J.T. Walsh. Reporters also hammer at Nolte, hinting of an alleged point-shaving incident in years past.

Nolte is determined to rebuild his basketball glory. He visits three of the nation's most promising prospects: a slum kid in Chicago (Anfernee "Penny" Hardaway); a farm boy in French Lick, Ind. (Matt Nover); and a New Orleans sensation (O'Neal). Blue chips all.

Other universities are hustling the kids, and Nolte fears he will lose them. He always has conducted a clean program, but he is tempted to abandon his principles and let the alumni sweeten the deals for the athletes to choose Western University (somewhere in California). His decision creates the movie's climax.

Nolte has the necessary dynamism to convey the ceaseless drive of a win-or-else coach. No star today could have played Pete Bell better. Superficially, Bell may seem to resemble Bobby Knight, who appears as himself in the climactic court battle.

Mary McDonnell conveys the human understanding of Nolte's ex-wife, the obligatory female role amid the macho crowd. The Shaq is an absolute delight as the sly Neon Bodeaux. Also outstanding are Cousy as the athletic director and Marques Johnson as one of Nolte's assistants.

Sports fans will have as much fun recognizing the basketball greats ("Hey, there's Tarkanian!" "That's Larry Bird!") as movie fans had picking out the stars in Robert Altman's "The Player."

Shelton's script sails along until the latter portions, when principle and expediency clash. Friedkin, who has endured a few losing seasons himself, rebounds with a fast-paced, sure-handed piece of work. One niggling note: Do all goals resound with the noise of a howitzer?

The Paramount Pictures release was produced by Michele Rappaport and co-produced by Shelton and Wolfgang Gates. Rated PG-13, mostly for language. Running time: 102 minutes.

Winona Ryder to play Jo in 'Little Women'

N.Y. Times News Service

Winona Ryder will play Jo in a version of "Little Women" that's set to start shooting this year. She told Entertainment Weekly that she decided to take the role because of Polly Klaas.

"I was trying to make the decision while all that stuff was going on (in Petaluma)," said Ms. Ryder. "And then I found out it was Polly's favorite book. I think it says a lot nowadays if you can make a movie that doesn't contribute to the misery of the world.

NOLTE: 'Blue Chips' was education, actor says

(From 1D)

lia Roberts, "I Love Trouble," required study of journalism, roughhouse Chicago-style. And in the spring, he begins working with James Ivory — the rather professorial director of "Howards End" and "The Remains of the Day" — on "Jefferson in Paris," the history and philosophy drenched story of the founding father's ambassadorial sojourn during the French Revolution.

All this erudite stuff from a guy who, as legend has it, learned to read as an adult.

"That's not true," Nolte said. "My reading really took off when I started doing stage work because I fell in love with the literature of the theater. Before that, I was a drifter, inspired by Jack Kerouac's 'On the Road' — obviously, I read that book."

Among other myths, according to Nolte: a college football career. "That one started after I made 'North Dallas Forty,'" Nolte said, referring to the 1979 adaptation of Peter Gent's NFL expose. "I went to Eastern Arizona Junior College, Pasadena City College — not Pac 10, Big 10 or any of that."

And not at all like "Blue Chips," in which Nolte plays basketball coach Pete Bell of fictional — but very UCLA-ish — Western University.

The film's roster of major players and coaches, some of whom act roles and others who appear as themselves, comprises a timeless dream team: Shaquille O'Neal, Bob Cousy, Bobby Knight, Anfernee "Penny" Hardaway, Matt Nover, Larry Bird, Marques Johnson, Rick Pitino, George Raveling, Jerry Tarkanian and many more.

The film was written by sports moviemaker extraordinaire Ron Shelton ("Bull Durham," "White Men Can't Jump") and directed by certifiable hoops fanatic William Friedkin ("The French Connection," "The Exorcist"). Pete Newell, the NCAA championship University of California, Berkeley, coach, designed the plays for the WU Dolphins; Indiana's Bobby Knight guided a faux Hoosiers team through the film's climactic game, and spent two weeks coaching Nolte on — what else? — coaching, prior to production.

It was all quite an education.

"It's an intense game," Nolte understatedly noted. "The best advice I got from Bobby Knight was a little note he wrote me before I started the film that said something to the effect of, 'Passion, commitment and honesty.' He said that's what you need to be a coach."

In the film, Coach Bell has more than enough of the first two qualities. But, although he abhors recruiting violations, he feels forced to bend NCAA rules following WU's first losing season. Pressured to attract blue chips — freshman supertalents who can reinvigorate the Dolphins — Bell turns his back on his own ethics when he looks the other way when a sleazy alumnus (J.T. Walsh) bribes the recruits.

While Nolte limited his research interviews with college coaches to the more technical aspects of the job, the complexities of Pete Bell's conflicts triggered philosophical musings on the morality of paying college players.

"I would imagine it's quite prevalent," he said of under-the-table payoffs. "But my concern, as we scanned the piece with Cousy and Knight, was the idea of a sanctuary in collegiate athletics for a period of time before you become a professional.

"What happens to kids when you put a dollar sign on their forehead? If the relationship is just an economic one, then we don't have a situation where (the coach) is concerned about the athlete's heart, wants, needs or humanness. I'm only interested because you're of value to me economically.

"So, there was a general feeling from a lot of coaches — and I know Billy Friedkin disagrees with this, and we all had debates about this — that there has to be a sanctuary period for a man of 18. A time and place where he can fail, where he can lose, he can win, he can find out about his emotions, find out who he is — before he's thrown out into the capitalist world and it's dog eat dog."

Speaking of cannibalistic capitalism, Nolte's other current release, "I'll Do Anything," takes place in the brutally competitive environment of Hollywood filmmaking. In the movie, Nolte's Matt Hobbs is an economic loser (the actor hasn't had a decent paying job in years), but a fine artist and all-around decent guy, even if he's just getting to know his estranged, 6-year-old daughter Jeannie (Whittni Wright).

Odd as it seems, this one required massive research, too. Though he has had his box office downs ("Who'll Stop the Rain," "Extreme Prejudice," "Lorenzo's Oil") as well as ups (the "48 HRS." films, "Cape Fear," "The Prince of Tides") since his first big success with the 1976 TV miniseries "Rich Man, Poor Man," Nolte has long been able to command large salaries when he wants to.

So Matt required another battery of interviews, this time with chronically underemployed colleagues of a certain age.

"Basically, what we were trying to learn was how do these actors — and how do actors in general — stave off bitterness," he said. "How do they take rejection daily and not become embittered people? Because they work in such an abnormal way — I don't think there's any profession that's so insecure.

"The other thing was to try to get at the core of why actors do what they do. I got all sorts of answers. Most of the time, they wouldn't be serious about it, so I got answers like, 'I knew when I was 5 years old that that's what I wanted to do' and 'I was chopping cotton with my father, and I looked up and said, "There's got to be a better thing to do."'"

"Then I got a wonderful one from an actress. She said, 'I'm an introvert, and the only place for me to be an extrovert in life is in my work.' So, there's something that she gets to fulfill for herself, and I think that's basically what actors are about."

The project also afforded Nolte his first professional singing and dancing experiences — although writer-director James L. Brooks jettisoned all but one of the picture's production numbers after test audiences overwhelmingly rejected them.

Typically, Nolte writes it off as a learning experience.

"You go to somebody like Twyla Tharp (the celebrated choreographer who designed "I'll Do Anything's" numbers) and you say, 'OK Twyla, we have to dance here.'

Twyla says, 'Shut up and don't ever use that word. It's not about dance. It's movement, OK? Follow me.' So, it grows organically out of that."

And the singing?

"I'm not a musical talent," Nolte readily acknowledged. "So, what way could I approach it other than total honesty?"

And the learning curve keeps rising. Nolte debriefed newspaperfolk (among them, Daily News columnist Dennis McCarthy) for "I Love Trouble." He's hanging out with history professors for the Thomas Jefferson project.

As long as there's a subject he hasn't embodied, Nolte's going to keep on studying. "It's just that I don't go in the molds," he said. "I suppose, early on after 'Rich Man,' I could have gone from young lead to young lead, the romantic type of thing.

"Bu I chose not to do that. I went off and did a variety of subjects: Vietnam ("Who'll Stop the Rain"), the Beat Generation ("Heart Beat"). It's to avoid boredom, and — just the bent of the type of actor that I am — the challenge. I consider every character a character. I don't just want to play myself in extended emotional situations."

Razor & Tie's success has made the big boys take notice.

Sony Records has come out with the Risky Business specialty label, a clever series of compilations inspired by Razor & Tie.

"I guess I came down to the Special Products division about a year ago," said Sony Vice President Harold Fein. "Something we've been doing for years is we've been licensing tracks to the Rhino's and Priority's (record companies) of the world. Why are we constantly giving away our best tracks to our competition?"

Releases so far have included some inspired ideas: "Rubber Souled" compiles Beatles songs performed by the R&B performers. You get the Bar Kays doing "Hard Day's Night," Al Green on "I Want to Hold Your Hand" and Ike and Tina Turner's "Come Together" among nine others.

"Blood, Sweat and Beers" is a fine survey of bar-band standouts from artists that include Southside Johnny and the Asbury Jukes, Joe Grushecky, Mitch Ryder and Nils Lofgren.

Other compilations survey modern heavy metal, acid rock, disco and protest songs. "Guilty Pleasures" is billed as pop kitsch, and "Oh, Split" as breakup songs. Risky Business frequently veers toward less familiar material than the hits favored by the Razor & Tie TV compilations.

"It would be very obvious on a record like 'Oh, Split' to take the J. Geils' 'Love Stinks,' but everybody's got that track," Fein said.

"We wanted to find something a little bit different, or something that's been maybe forgotten or left behind or whatever."

Fein said the future Risky Business releases would be inspired by ideas from Sony workers and even consumers.

"I have a file over here that is just filled with every goofy idea you could possibly think of."

Back at Razor & Tie, Chenfeld and Balsam are trying to stay ahead of the curve. They're marketing a contemporary country and an '80s pop collection, and expanding their reach into record stores by putting out reissues and even new material the bigger labels don't want.

"Actually, I think it's more convenient for them," Balsam said. "They just have to sign a contract, and they get a check. We do it, we make a profit for them."

Chenfeld cites The Partridge Family catalogue as a Razor & Tie success story.

"We have five (albums) out, and each one sells every week. In fact Arista (Records) has a very good attitude toward this," he said. "They have the 'Greatest Hits' out, so they are with us."

Razor & Tie also has albums out by Ian Hunter, Elliot Murphy, The Knack, Jules Shear and Rick Springfield. And they're thinking even further ahead, to a future where technology bypasses retail — and television mail order — altogether.

"I have a file over here that is just filled with every goofy idea you could possibly think of."

— Harold Fein, Sony vice president

Drug probe cites county judge, sheriff, clerk

By Josh Lemieux
Associated Press

LAREDO — A federal probe dubbed Operation Pickly Pear stung the Zapata County judge, sheriff and clerk with drug and money laundering charges Friday.

An informant posing as a drug dealer provided information leading to separate indictments of Judge Jose Luis Guevara, Sheriff Romeo Ramirez and County Clerk Arnoldo Flores.

The indictments, unsealed Friday, identify that informant as Ramiro G. Munoz Jr. Authorities said Munoz was a friend of the three public officials who has lived in the same rugged South Texas border county.

One indictment charges Guevara with arranging for airplanes carrying cocaine to land at the Zapata County Airport, and offering to use his badge as county judge to protect future shipments.

The sheriff is charged with allowing the informant to import marijuana from Mexico to the sheriff's private ranch in exchange for $20,000 in drug profits. The indictment also alleges that Ramirez provided information to Munoz about official drug interdiction activities.

Flores is charged with laundering $20,000 in drug money in exchange for a 10 percent commission, accepting drug money as payment for a stolen vehicle and possessing 13 pounds of marijuana with intent to distribute it.

The most serious charges are against Judge Guevara, 39, who is indicted with his 35-year-old brother-in-law, Miguel Angel Rivera. The two are charged with conspiracy, money laundering and possession with intent to distribute at least 500 grams of cocaine. The judge also faces additional counts of extortion.

Munoz acted as the informant in each case, but the three officials are charged in separate indictments and will be tried separately, Assistant U.S. Attorneys Nancy Herrera and Jose Angel Moreno said.

Citizen complaints in Zapata County played a large role in the two-and-a-half year investigation, Moreno said.

The county judge and his brother-in-law were arrested while at work in Zapata on Friday morning, Herrera said.

Federal agents arrested the sheriff when he showed up for an appointment at the FBI office in Laredo. Flores was arrested at a Laredo hotel, where he also had been given an appointment.

The four men appeared unprepared for the indictments. None had obtained an attorney before their first appearances Friday afternoon before U.S. Magistrate Marcel Notzon.

The defendants made no comments to reporters at the federal courthouse.

Notzon ordered Ramirez and Guevara held at the Webb County Jail on $250,000 bond each. Flores was released on a $150,000 unsecured bond. A bond hearing for Rivera was scheduled for Feb. 28.

Jurors deliberate during capital-murder trial

GEORGETOWN (AP) — Jurors deliberated for a second day Friday in the third capital-murder trial of Kerry Max Cook, who is accused in the 1977 slaying of Tyler secretary Linda Jo Edwards.

Cook, now 37, was sentenced to die in 1978 in the slaying of Ms. Edwards, 21.

He is accused of killing her during a rape or burglary. Ms. Edwards was beaten in the head with a small plaster statue and stabbed with a knife and scissors.

Cook spent 13 years on death row before his conviction was thrown out in 1991 by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

The appeals court overturned his conviction because a psychiatrist who had interviewed Cook did not warn him that their conversations could be used in court.

Cook's second trial, held in Georgetown in 1992, ended when the jury said it was deadlocked. The case was moved from Smith County because of the public attention it had received there.

Jurors in the latest trial began deliberations Thursday afternoon.

About five hours later, they sent a note to the judge saying they were divided.

Judge Robert Jones told the six-man, six-woman jury to keep deliberating until they were tired, then to return Friday, which they did.

In closing arguments Thursday, Smith County prosecutor David Dobbs told the jury: "The only reasonable deduction you can make from the evidence before you in this case is that Kerry Max Cook is guilty of the sick offense of the mutilation-lust murder of Linda Jo Edwards."

Defense lawyer Paul Nugent countered, "There is not one piece of scientific evidence that connects Kerry Max Cook to the crime."

While Cook's fingerprints were found on the sliding glass door to Ms. Edwards' apartment, he said, they were not found in the room where she was killed.

Coach gets charged with indecency

BIG LAKE (AP) — A middle school teacher and coach paid $50,000 bail and was released from jail after he was charged with three counts of indecency with a child.

Reagan County grand jurors also indicted Bode George "Rusty" Owens, 39, on one count of aggravated sexual assault of a child.

Bob Carruthers, superintendent of the Reagan County Independent School District, said Owens was placed on leave Thursday.

Two of the counts stem from alleged incidents a grand jury considered in 1989. No indictments were returned at that time.

But 112th Assistant District Attorney James Jepson said the current grand jury re-examined the 1989 evidence, along with information about two other incidents allegedly committed last April.

Jepson said the four cases involve four victims.

Aggravated sexual assault of a child is a first-degree felony, punishable by five to 99 years or life in prison and a possible $10,000 fine, Jepson said.

Indecency with a child is a second-degree felony that can bring a prison term between two and 20 years and a $10,000 fine.

Carruthers said Owens has taught history and coached football, basketball and track for about five years at Reagan County Middle School, about 70 miles southwest of San Angelo.

U.S. pecan grower's election becomes hard nut for federal authorities to crack

By Fritz Thompson
Associated Press

LAS CRUCES, N.M. — Last September, 5,000 of the nation's pecan growers voted on whether to continue a promotional program that seemed pretty simple.

Months later, the ballots remain uncounted and pecan growers are at each other's throats as the federal government works to untangle an astonishing 2,000 challenges alleging election irregularities.

Among the accusations: claims that deceased people cast ballots, that people with a single pecan tree in the back yard voted, and that growers who sold only for cash voted no because it would create a paper trail to their taxable profits.

At the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Washington, D.C., marketing experts are saying this is the most confrontational checkoff referendum on record.

After shepherding 14 similar programs into being, they say they've never run into this much trouble before.

The pecan growers voted whether to sign over a percentage of profits — a penny per pound for shelled pecans and a halfpenny for in-shell pecans — for advertising and research.

Collecting the money would be the responsibility of the buyers; they are charged with deducting the proper percentage from the sale price. They must do the calculations, fill out the forms and send the money to the Pecan Marketing Board, which decides how to spend it.

The checkoff would fund a carbon copy of other producer-financed advertisement ideas that have given a high profile to everything from beef ("It's what's for dinner.") to cotton to eggs to watermelons.

But one opponent of the checkoff calls the assessment a tax. He says the referendum will be rejected, passing by a narrow margin only in New Mexico and Arizona, while in Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia "it's going to lose big time."

"The challenges are a lowdown, rotten, dirty trick," says Texas producer Newell Atkinson, whose name appears on a Coalition Against Pecan Taxation flier opposing the checkoff. "And all those challenges came from people who could see they were going to lose when the votes are finally counted."

Proponents say they filed almost all their challenges because they question tactics used by growers who want to see the referendum fail.

"I can't tell you what motivated these challenges to the vote," says Ken Clayton, a marketing authority for the USDA in Washington. "And I would be a bit cautious about drawing any broad conclusions as to whether the industry supports the checkoff or not."

Clayton wouldn't speculate on how much longer it will take to clear the challenges and count the ballots.

"I'll tell you why there were so many challenges," says one New Mexico pecan grower who asked not to be identified. "It's because we think there were a lot of ineligible people voting — people who were persuaded by some farmers that the assessment is a tax and that the checkoff is not a good thing.

"There are farmers who have been selling their crops for cash and not reporting it on their income tax. If the checkoff goes into effect, there'll be a record and they'll get caught."

This "underground economy in the pecan business" exists to varying degrees nationwide, says Karin Davidson, a Las Cruces pecan farmer and president of the four-state Western Pecan Growers Association.

There are challenges against votes by people who appeared on the registration lists but who are dead and against non-commercial "back yard pecan growers" with one or two pecan trees who were persuaded to vote against the referendum, Davidson says.

Further protests over eligibility were lodged against husbands and wives who each cast a ballot for a single pecan operation.

New Mexico is the nation's third-leading producer of pecans, behind Georgia and Texas. Last year, New Mexico grew 36 million pounds of pecans worth $23.4 million.

Davidson says the checkoff was meant to make pecans more competitive with walnuts and almonds, which have their own assessments.

"There was no opposition whatsoever in the beginning," says Las Cruces pecan grower Paulina Salopek. "All of a sudden out of the clear blue here came this opposition. We didn't want that. We didn't want to tear this industry apart."

Her dismay is all the more acute because she chairs the congressionally authorized Pecan Marketing Board, which would administer the checkoff fund.

Preliminary collection of assessments has been in effect since 1991. The law provided for the 1993 referendum in which growers, grower-shellers and importers would vote to continue, terminate or suspend the program.

Atkinson insists the assessment is a tax: "If something is taken from you non-voluntarily, where you pay a $5,000 fine and spend five years in federal prison if you don't pay — if that is not a tax, I don't know what the devil it is."

Davidson disputes Atkinson's characterization.

"The assessment is not a tax and it's not a government program," she says. "The opponents are playing to the emotions of growers when they say it is a tax. The opposition is putting this kind of a spin on it, and unfortunately, bad news spreads faster than good news."

The federal rules and regulations on the pecan marketing program bureaucratically define a grower as "any person engaged in the production and sale of pecans in the United States who owns, or who shares in the ownership and risk of loss of, such pecans."

Davidson says that's too general.

"What is a pecan grower? I don't know. I don't know why they didn't do a better job of defining one," she says.

Atkinson seized on the rule to mean anyone who had one tree and sold one single pecan became eligible to vote.

Indictment claims fraud, money laundering

LUBBOCK (AP) — A 60-count federal indictment accuses a Brownfield man of scheming to collect $917,470.69 in fraudulent insurance payments.

Lonnie D. "Chick" Clark, 60, was arrested Thursday.

The indictment alleges that Clark was involved in mail fraud and money laundering to obtain money and property from 12 insurance companies.

Clark furnished the companies false information about his income and financial status, according to the indictment. He was issued at least 25 disability insurance policies, the document says.

Postal Inspector Linda Kirksey said Clark also failed to disclose liabilities including $2 million he owes the U.S. government for his role in a 1970s scandal known as "Cottongate," in which farmers received fraudulent agriculture payments.

This week's indictment allows the government to seize 10 vehicles, two boats and six sections of land in Andrews County.

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?
YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?
Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?
Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?
An initial $100 refundable deposit is required.
