GOVERNOR CALLS SPECIAL SESSION TO VALIDATE BONDS, AND SAYS SHE WILL RESIGN AFTER THAT MATTER IS DISPOSED OF

Mrs. Ferguson has withdrawn from the race for the Democratic nomination for governor of Texas and has announced that she will pay her election bet, made with Dan Moody, by resigning after a special session which she called yesterday had disposed of the road bond matter.

Dan Moody, assured by her withdrawal, and apparently by a majority of votes, of the nomination and consequently of the election, demanded that Mrs. Ferguson resign at once, in accordance with the terms of her bet.

The bet, offered by Mrs. Ferguson at Sulphur Springs, and immediately accepted by Moody, was that if Mrs. Ferguson led Dan by 25,000 votes in the first primary, he, Moody, would resign his office as attorney general, and if Moody led Mrs. Ferguson by one vote, she would resign.

DAN MOODY INSISTS THAT SHE QUIT OFFICE AT ONCE; SHE WITHDRAWS FROM RACE, CONCEDEING ELECTION

GOVERNOR CALLS SPECIAL SESSION TO VALIDATE BONDS, AND SAYS SHE WILL RESIGN AFTER THAT MATTER IS DISPOSED OF

Mrs. Ferguson has withdrawn from the race for the Democratic nomination for governor of Texas and has announced that she will pay her election bet, made with Dan Moody, by resigning after a special session which she called yesterday had disposed of the road bond matter.

Dan Moody, assured by her withdrawal, and apparently by a majority of votes, of the nomination and consequently of the election, demanded that Mrs. Ferguson resign at once, in accordance with the terms of her bet.

The bet, offered by Mrs. Ferguson at Sulphur Springs, and immediately accepted by Moody, was that if Mrs. Ferguson led Dan by 25,000 votes in the first primary, he, Moody, would resign his office as attorney general, and if Moody led Mrs. Ferguson by one vote, she would resign.

Ferguson's Statement DALLAS, July 26.—Governor Miriam A. Ferguson is violating the will of the people of Texas by remaining in office until the expiration of the proposed special session of the legislature, Attorney General Dan Moody declared in a statement at Austin tonight.

"In compliance with an agreement heretofore made and bowing to the will of the people, expressed at the polls on Saturday July 24, 1926, I desire to say that I shall resign the office of governor upon the happening of the matters hereinafter referred to which I hope will be not later than November 1, 1926."

The matters referred to are validation of road bonds by a special session of the legislature called for September 13 and investigation of state departments. The statement continued:

"I also withdraw from the race for the office of governor in the democratic primaries. The returns are not yet completed and it is not known whether a run-off primary will be necessary or not. Be that as it may, however, I have determined that the lead of the opposition is so decisive that I would be doing violence to my own interests as well as to the interests of the people were I to further insist upon my candidacy and I have no desire to further embroil the people in a further campaign. I had hoped that I would be relieved from the duties of the office at an earlier date than herein stated. But in justice to myself and to my friends who have elected me, as well as the completion of unfinished departmental matters, I will not resign until the incomplete matters of the office are disposed of."

The governor stated that "just as soon as the legislature shall meet and dispose of the matters referred to in my proclamation I shall at the earliest possible moment resign the office of governor and retire to private life."

The governor's decision to keep her election wager with Moody followed conferences throughout the day with former United States Senator Joseph Weldon Bailey.

DRUSE INSIST THEY SLAUGHTERED FRENCH COLUMN, AND GIVE ALL DETAILS; FRANCE DENIES REPORT

JERUSALEM, July 26.—Rebels Druse tribesmen, through their headquarters officers, reiterate that 1,800 French soldiers have been killed in ambush near Damascus, and call French officials reports of their losses "ridiculous."

The rebels' headquarters recounts how the ambush occurred, admitting that it was possible because of discovery of French plans at Gouta. It was decided to concentrate rebel forces at Gouta, where a force of 6,000 would be assembled against the French column.

The Gouta section is an extensive plain thickly covered with trees where forces may hide unnoticed. There is an abundance of water and guerrilla warfare is easily carried on.

The column of French troops from Damascus proceeded to a point where the rebels were entrenched. The Druse tribesmen immediately opened fire. Forced back, the French troops were caught in the first ambush and those who retired further were caught in another. The remnants of the regiment went on to Damascus, according to rebel advices.

Arab sources further claim that French authorities have suppressed all news of the Damascus district and that communications out of Damascus have been interrupted since Thursday.

BEIRUT, July 26.—French authorities categorically deny reports from Jerusalem telling of an overwhelming loss of life in the ambush of a French column from Damascus.

The revival at Levelland which is conducted on the old style evangelistic manner by Rev. George R. Fort and brother, Joe Fort of Temple, reached a high mark Sunday with 200 or more present for Sunday school. The Baptists gave a co-operative spirit and gained some additions to their church. The Rev. Joe Fort of Temple very ably and reverently presented the theme, "Christ's Relation to the Church," at the 11 o'clock hour. Homer T. the son of Joe Fort, at 2:30 presented the text, "Cast Your Burden on the Lord and He Will Sustain You." So impressively did he speak that when he made his call some 15 or 20 additions were made to the church. A number of visitors from Lubbock were present and enjoyed the spirited atmosphere of the day's services.

THE WELL-GROOMED MAN

Summer Suitings
"SYL" Says—
That with the warm weather having arrived at last, one thinks of the summer season as really open, so our ratteration is focused upon the proper attire for the heated season. One of the main things to consider is comfort. Keeping this in mind, one will do well to look over the light weight suitings being shown in the shops this year. Two of the most used materials are the tropical wool eds and Palm Beach cloths. These come in the new shades of tan, grey, and blue. Tan is particularly smart this summer. In my drawing today I am showing an attractive ensemble in shades of brown. The smart three-button, single-breasted lounge coat is of flannel in a neutral dark brown, and is made with broad shoulders and the prevalent wadded lapels. As in the newer models, the coat is slightly longer, and is cut high under the arms. The trousers are of very light tan, called biscuit, cut full and made with turn-up cuffs. The bow tie and handkerchief are brown with yellow

Homemade Sherbet Is Now In Favor

Practice of making ice creams and sherbets in their own kitchens has come into wide favor with the modern housewife. Home made ice cream or sherbet, is not only more economical, but it gives an excellent opportunity to the home manager of displaying individuality in her desserts. Both of these frozen desserts are particularly adapted to the needs of individuals of all ages, since they give fine types of nutriment for the repair and upkeep of the body. It is easy to learn to operate an ice cream freezer, and fruits and milk or evaporated milk, which makes a finer textured product than ordinary market milk because of its high solid content, are easily obtainable. The appended carefully tested recipes give an idea of what may be accomplished at a minimum cost:

Banana Ice Cream
6 very ripe bananas (black skins), 1-2 cup lemon juice, 2-1/4 cups sugar, 2 cups evaporated milk, 2 cups coffee cream, 1-8 teaspoon salt.
Scrape off the outside surface of peeled bananas, mash and rub thru a sieve. Add the rest of the ingredients in the order given and stir till all are well blended. Let stand for 30 minutes so that all the sugar may dissolve. Freeze in a 1-6 salt-ice mixture.

Caramel Nut Ice Cream
Caramelize one cup of sugar by putting it in a saucepan over the fire and stirring constantly until the sugar has melted and is the color of maple syrup. Add slowly one-fourth cup of boiling water and cook until all the sugar has dissolved and the mixture is thick. Add this to one and one-half cups of evaporated milk which has been put in a double boiler over the fire to scald. Add to this the beaten yolks of two eggs and cook until it thickens. Add one-half teaspoonful of gelatine which has been soaked in one tablespoonful of cold water for five minutes. Cool, add one teaspoonful vanilla and three-fourths cupful of chopped nuts. Chill and fold in one cupful of heavy cream which has been whipped until stiff. Last fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Freeze in a 1-6 salt-ice mixture.

Orange Cream Sherbet
2 cups orange juice, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla, 1 cup boiling water, 2 cups sugar, 2 egg yolks, 1-8 teaspoon salt, 1 cup evaporated milk, 1 cup cream.
Boil the sugar and water for five minutes, then pour syrup on the well beaten egg yolks, stirring vigorously to prevent lumping. Return to double boiler and cook two minutes longer. Add orange and lemon juice, vanilla and salt. Cool and add the evaporated milk and cream that have been chilled and whipped until stiff. Freeze in a 1-6 salt-ice mixture. Makes 1-1/2 quarts sherbet.

Ginger Ice Cream
2 cups boiling water, 1 tablespoon flour, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 cup sugar, 1 egg, 3 cups evaporated milk, 2 cups cream, 1-2 cup ground Canton ginger, 2 tablespoons ginger strip from Canton ginger.
Mix sugar, flour and salt and add to the well-beaten egg. Pour on the boiling water slowly, stirring to keep smooth. Cook at least five minutes over boiling water. Add the Canton ginger that has been cut fine in a food chopper and the ginger syrup. Cool, then add evaporated milk and cream. Freeze in a 1-6 salt-ice mixture. Paek in a 1-6 salt-ice mixture and let stand to ripen. Makes 1-2 gallon ice cream.

Ice Cream Chocolate
2 squares bitter chocolate, 3 tablespoons sugar, 1-4 cup water, 2 cups figures. The hat illustrated is one of the new leghorns, with a crown and yellow band. I might add the tallthough many of the more conservative men in New York are having the traditional white flannel trousers made up, biscuit and sand shades are newer and certainly more practical.

To the Voters of Lubbock County

I wish to take this means of thanking the people of Lubbock county for their support and encouragement given me during the recent primary, and although I lost the race for re-election as District Clerk, I am a true Democrat and bow to the will of the majority with all good grace.

During the past five and one-half years, I have tried to serve you well as Clerk of your District Court and custodian of all District Court records, and I trust that in another line of work I may be able to continue my humble efforts on behalf of our city, county, state and nation. I have no intention whatever, of leaving Lubbock, which in my opinion is one of the best towns in the world.

On behalf of my opponent, Miss Flora Green, who incidentally is to be Lubbock's first woman District Clerk, I bespeak for her a continuation of your cooperation, with which I have been favored in all court matters, and I know that with this, she will make the county a public servant of whom the people will be proud.

Again Thanking You, I am—

The seam is trimmed to one-quarter of an inch at the stitching line; the seam allowance is clipped every two or three inches to avoid tightness, pressed open when the ruler is put against the end seam and pushed through. SMITH'S MANAGER REFUSES TO TELL NAMES OF CONTRIBUTORS TO SLUSH FUND IN ILLINOIS PRIMARY PROBE

By EARL J. JOHNSON
United News Staff Correspondent
CHICAGO, July 26.—After learning that at least $200,000 had been spent in the Illinois senatorial primary, the senate "slush" committee today butted its head into a flat refusal by Colonel Frank W. Smith's successful campaign for the republican nomination.

Allan F. Moore, whose work prior to the April election, was largely responsible for Smith's victory over Senator William B. McKinley, told Senator James A. Reed, chairman of the committee, that he did not care to give the names of all of the contributors.

"All right," said Reed, "you are excused temporarily but I want you to ask Mr. Smith if he wants to take the responsibility for refusing to disclose contributors to his campaign."

To Consult Counsel

Moore said he would consult counsel about it but expressed the opinion that the committee was powerless before his to disclose the names. This may have the effect of throwing the entire inquiry into a fight between the committee and Smith's henchmen.

Otherwise the first session of the committee's investigation into Illinois politics was smooth sailing for both Reed and Robert M. Afollette, the only other committeeman present.

Through the examination of Smith, Moore, Samuel Insull, the multi-millionaire utilities magnate, George Brennan, the democratic senatorial nominee and Cester Willoughby, Senator McKinley's secretary, Reed accounted for more than $300,000, which Senator Caraway charged on the floor of the senate, was spent in behalf of the senatorial candidates.

Insull Contributes

Insull was revealed as the heaviest single contributor to the campaign funds of both the republican and democratic nominees. This, he said, was because of his opposition to the world court.

Smith and his manager estimated that the republican campaign cost approximately $250,000 and Insull said that he gave more than $125,000 of this amount.

Brennan said his campaign cost $20,841.42 and that of this amount, Insull gave $15,000.

Willoughby told the committee Senator McKinley had given him between $50,000 and $55,000 for his campaign.

Colonel Smith, who was released from a hospital only a week ago, following an operation, was the first witness of the day. He read a statement attacking Senator Caraway's slush charges but Reed directed it stricken from the record. Smith estimated that his campaign cost $750,000 but knew only in a general way where the money came from. He said he had not paid much attention to the financial end of the campaign leaving that in the hands of Moore, his manager.

Reed then called Moore. The manager at first seemed willing to tell all he knew about the campaign costs. He said Insull gave $100,000 in three cash payments, that he (Moore) contributed $75,000 and that there were two other large contributions, one of $15,000 and the other of $20,000.

"Who gave those?" Reed asked.

"Those contributions were made to me in confidence," Moore said.

"When a man is running for public office the money he receives is not in confidence," Reed said.

"We'll settle that right now," Moore said.

When Moore refused to disclose the contributors, Reed began questioning him about his method of handling the money and learned that Moore kept it all in his personal bank account and had no record of receipts or disbursements. "I was holding the sack," Moore said.

Samuel Insull said Moore had underestimated his contributions. He then told of paying Moore $125,000 in cash and of spending another $25,000 in a campaign against the world court, which was the principal plank in Smith's platform.

Insull was not questioned about his motives. Reed ignored the charge that Insull had given heavily to Smith in payment for favors extended to his interests when Smith was on the state public utilities commission.

The utilities magnate also told of giving $15,000 to the "dripping wet" campaign of George Brennan, the democratic senatorial nominee, and later Brennan confessed this, saying that the contribution paid almost three-fourths of all his expenditures.

Tuesday's session will probably bring a show down between Chairman Reed and Moore in the question of disclosing the names of all contributors. Smith had the backing of the Anti-Slush league and it is presumed that Reed wants to learn through Moore what part the "drys" played in his campaign.

Other witnesses who have been sworn in and who are expected to appear Tuesday are State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, his political henchman, Charles W. Barrett, Roy O. West, secretary of the republican national committee, former Mayor William Hale Thompson and Edward H. Wright of the Illinois commerce commission.

Armenian Girls To Weave Rugs

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 26.—Two little Armenian girls, expert weavers from Beirut, Syria, have just arrived in Philadelphia to demonstrate rug-weaving at the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition. These children, who are twelve years old, directed the weaving of the oriental rug which is now on the floor of the East Room of the White House, which was presented to President Coolidge last year in token of the gratitude of the children of the Near East for American help.

The life stories of these little girls are tragic. Vartouhi Hovsepian, 12, is slightly the elder of the two, was deprived of her father when she was six years old by the thrust of a Turkish sword. She and her mother and two little brothers accepted the protection of a wealthy Turk in their native city of Harput, which is in the interior of Asia, only to witness the death of the boys by native troops. The mother in desperation carried Vartouhi to Dr. Henry Riggs, of Boston, Mass., director of the Near East Relief orphanages at Harput, and at the time of the exchange of populations, following the Smyrna disaster, she was one of the 26,000 children evacuated out of Turkey into Syria and other countries.

Her companion, little Gulenia Kehayan, was five years old when her father, who had been forced into the Turkish army, was dead. Her mother's death followed soon after. Gulenia was taken to the city of Merzine by an aunt, who later was forced by poverty to give her to the Near East Relief in Harput.

Both of these girls are products of Near East Relief care and training. They have been fed, clothed and housed for six years; they have received an elementary school education; and they have been trained as experts in one of the oldest and finest crafts in the world—rug weaving—traditionally an art of their people for centuries. They have traveled four thousand miles to show to the American people who visit the Exposition, how American money has prepared two little rug weavers not only to earn their living but has helped to preserve an ancient art whose extinction was threatened during the terrible days of massacre and deportation.

Little Vartouhi, through an interpreter, had some opinions of her own to express.

"Gulenia and I are only two," she says. "There really have been thousands of us, 100,000 I think, some of us in Syria, lots of us in the Russian Caucasus and still more of us in Greece. And America has taken care of us all and is teaching us all trades, just like Gulenia and me. I wish you could see the boys who do the silver filigree in Beirut, and the girls who make our lovely Armenian and Syrian embroideries."

In answer to a question, she spoke rapidly, her eyes shining with bravely held-back tears. "Am I glad to be in America? Of course I'm glad. I came as a duty, because we must show our benefactors what we can do and they can't all come to Syria. America has saved me, and I want her to see that I am grateful."

Vartouhi and Gulenia, dressed in their native costume, will be assigned to a large booth in the Palace of Education during the period of the Exposition, and then will return to Syria, although several offers of adoption already have been made to officials of the organization under whose auspice they are here. They are in the personal care of Mrs. Pearl Larson, of Chicago, a Red Cross nurse who speaks their language fluently.

Their setting will be like a bit of their adopted Syria transplanted, for the architecture of the booth will be in Syrian style, yellow stucco, stenciled in blue and gold, with oriental archways decorated with stripes of brick red. A feature of the display will be an exhibition and sale of rare Armenian pottery—specimens of another art nearly lost to present-day civilization, for the people of Kutahia where the pottery originated, were practically wiped out during the war and its manufacture has only recently been revived by an Armenian exiled from his native village to Jerusalem. Fine hand-embroidered linens, which represent still another branch of Near Eastern art, made by refugee women in the industrial centers of the Near East, will also be exhibited at the Exposition.

U. S. CHILDREN'S BUREAU HAS EXHIBIT AT SESQUI PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 26.

A baby fashion show, a model nursery, a model playground, educational motion pictures and a children's clinic in operation are among the interesting exhibits of the Children's bureau of the United States Department of Labor at the Sesqui-Centennial international exposition at Philadelphia.

The playground, 3 by 5 feet to scale, is equipped with swimming pools, tennis courts, baseball diamonds, swings, ladders and flying rings. In the baby fashion show are baby dolls in genuine costumes of the 18th, 19 and 20th centuries borrowed by the exposition through the courtesy of the National museum. In the model clinic, a glass enclosed room constructed within the exhibit pavilion, children under the age of six will be weighed and given free medical examination as a demonstration of the value of such clinical work in the normal development of children.

A motion picture, "Well Born," will show the essentials of prenatal care and a film, "Posture," showing the importance of this subject to the child's health will be shown. This film has been produced under the direction of Dr. Armin Klein of the Massachusetts general hospital.

ARMOUR & COMPANY ORDERED TO DISPOSE OF CREAMERY STOCKS

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 26.—Armour & Company of Chicago, is required, in an order issued by the Federal Trade commission, and made public on July 21, to divest itself in good faith of the stock in Eau Claire Creamery company, of Eau Claire, Wis., and the Pacific Creamery company of Tempe, Ariz. The order states that no stock or property of the two companies now owned by Armour shall be sold or transferred to anyone having an interest in the Armour company.

The commission, further in this case, announced its dismissal of those portions of the complaint charging Armour & Company with acquiring and owning capital stock of the Harold L. Brown company, Inc., Loudon Pocking company, A. S. Kinimonth Produce company, and Smith, Richardson & Conroy.

John F. Nugent, a member of the commission, dissented from the dismissal of the complaint involving these companies, with the exception of Harold L. Brown company, Inc., it was announced by the commission.

The commission states that it found that Armour & Company obtained control of the business and property of the Eau Claire Creamery company and of the Pacific Creamery company, which resulted in eliminating and suppressing competition in the sale of butter between the respondent and Eau Claire Creamery company, and the sale of canned milk in the states of Arizona and California between the respondent and the Pacific Creamery company.

NEGRO IS JAILED FOR COLD CHECKS

COMES FROM AMARILLO AND SWINDLES LUBBOCK, IS IN CHARGE.

"White folks, if you will jes git me out o' this here jail, I'll work for you the balance of my life to pay you back."

Above are the words of a negro prisoner to an Avalanche reporter, and there is no doubt in the mind of the reporter but that the negro meant every word. The prisoner claims to be an Amarillo dweller, but he has managed to get into serious trouble. In that city he gave a number of worthless checks, it is charged, though he claims to have given them in good faith.

Citizens of that city began crowding him and he came to Lubbock to borrow money from his brother to pay off the checks, he claims. However, he got in bad as soon as he landed in this city. He began playing with worthless paper, officers say.

Of course there is no way to find out just how it all came about, but he passed a worthless check for $8, a local merchant charges. He claims another negro gave it to him to cash and promised him a dollar if he cashed it. The "other" negro is still missing, but officers are hot on his trail and say he will soon join his partner in the county hoosgow. The cold checker was arrested by members of the police department, but later transferred to the county.

A white man was also arrested Monday afternoon on a charge of giving worthless checks. He will also be turned over to the county, it is thought.

Bloody Stiffs Made Baylor Grid Famous

WACO, Texas, July 26.—In all of the history of Baylor University since it was established under the independence of Texas and at Independence, Texas, there has never been an organization in that institution that was as queer, unique and mysterious as the "Bloody Stiffs" back a decade ago.

Baylor does not have secret orders now, but they surely had one in those days. The Bloody Stiffs, like the first Ku Klux Klan, was organized for a definite purpose and when that purpose was completed the organization died.

The Bloody Stiffs decided at one of their meetings who was to make the football club and any one who did not have the favor of the Stiffs had no chance of getting anything except a crippled leg. This was made possible since every man on the team was a member of the organization. When a boy came out for the team that looked pretty good he was elected into the Bloody Stiffs and notified later of his election.

Only members of the organization could letter on the football club since the Bloody Stiffs usually stripped any one out for the team that did not belong to the organization. Strange to say, this was the best thing that could have ever happened to the athletic situation at Baylor at that time. Baylor ranked about last in the conference until the Stiffs organized and made it impossible for any one except a man to letter at Baylor University in athletics.

When the organization had placed Baylor on a level with other universities in Texas, it died away. No one knows who founded it. There is one man at Baylor now who is thought by his friends and enemies to have been the originator. That man is John X. Strocker, librarian and curator of the Baylor Museum. Mr. Strocker knows a lot of who he has the joke in the Baylor boys for he only laughs when the name Bloody Stiff is mentioned.

Power Men Romp All Over Barbers

The Texas Utilities got rather wild yesterday and ran over the boys of the striped pole, 21 to 1. It was a comedy of errors, the team scoring 19 runs in the first two frames. Miller made the lone tally for the Barbers when he walked and scored on an attempted double play.

After of the Utilities pitched a no hit game, the second in the city this year. Tubbs was high man of the plate, hitting 2-2. Game was called in fourth inning.

Says Students Like Foreign Languages

AUSTIN, July 26.—Hostility of the American college student in taking a foreign language is very soon removed after the student once plunges into the course and completes his first few lessons, declares Dr. Maxey Marston, vice rector, University of Paris, France, who taught French in the first session of the University of Texas summer school.

Students in the American universities have a much more difficult time attempting to master French than do French students learning English because of the fact that France is so close to England that many of her students have a good knowledge of the language of that country before they begin on the real study of it.

But the American student, once he has gotten over his plunge into a foreign language, goes forward with surprising intensity by his attempt to master the language, Dr. Marston finds.

Dr. Marston, who is head of the French department of Rice Institute, has taught in only one summer school at the university, or in the United States. He has always spent his summers in France, and after the close of the first term of summer school at Austin, plans to leave for Mexico City where he will teach until Rice Institute opens in the fall.

"I am very favorably impressed with the University of Texas summer school," he declared. "I find that the students are very earnest in their work and very responsive to the assignments of the instructors. This is because of the southern temperament of the students, I suppose. But it certainly does make for better work on the part of both the teacher and the student."

"Perhaps I should not compare the University students with those of other schools, but I believe that southern students are just a little more responsive and human than students at other schools in the United States. They are always pleasant, in spite of the hot weather."

RENEWED CONTROVERSY OVER DARWINISM EXPECTED AT BRITISH SCIENCE MEETING

By C. P. WILLIAMSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON, July 26.—Possibility of a revival of the old controversy over Darwinian theory follows the announcement that Julian Huxley, grandson of the famous Thomas Huxley, will address a section of the British Association for the Advancement of Science at Oxford on August 4.

Huxley's address will stress the general biological effects of inheritance upon the specific appearance of humans.

It is recalled that it was at Oxford in 1894 that Thomas Huxley reopened the old wounds over the theory. The president of the association at that time was the Marquis of Salisbury, whose address on Darwin's theory, together with Huxley's stinging reply, revealed that the old controversy, though in a modified form, was still very much alive.

In 1890, A. Vernon Harcourt, Huxley and Hooker became involved in their famous debate over the theory with Wilberforce, but it was not until the association met again at Oxford in 1904 that the controversy came seriously before the body.

Second in importance only to the Royal Institution as a scientific body, the association has long been noted for its first revelations in the world of new discoveries in all fields of science.

The first public demonstration of wireless telegraphy was made before the association by Sir Oliver Lodge.

TRAMPS ROBBING OKLAHOMA HOSTS

ASK FOR BED THEN MAKE OFF WITH THE FARMER'S BELONGINGS.

MUSKOGEE, Okla., July 26.—A new phase of the thieving game has been uncovered by Muskogee peace officers, prompting them to seek three white men who have relieved country farmers of several hundred dollars worth of clothing.

Knocking at the farmhouse door, the leader of the trio asks if he and his buddies may sleep in the hay mow over night. If a good natured farmer is "hit up," he'll offer them the use of his "guest room." If he tells them to go ahead and occupy the barn, they go in the front door, but out the rear and on down the road seeking another who may fall victim to their tale.

If permitted to sleep within the house, the men manage to awaken during the wee sma' hours of the morning and make off with valuable articles of clothing. A note is left on the pillow thanking the unlucky farmer for the bedding and wearing apparel.

T. A. Ford, living south of Muskogee, is the latest victim, losing several hundred dollars worth of clothing early this morning. Other farmers reported similar operations several days ago. The men apparently came from the south and are headed northward.

Control Birth to Avert Famine

By RANDALL GOULD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

PEKING—If China's present rate of population increase continues at its present rate, 300,000,000 inhabitants of the "Flowery Republic" or one-half the present world population.

The one alternative to this would be a voluntary restriction of the population increase, in the view of many close observers. In short, birth control among the Chinese masses.

Walter H. Mallory, secretary of the China International Famine Relief Commission and author of "China, a Land of Famine" which will be published in book form soon by the American Geographical Society, has come to strong advocacy of birth control in China as a result of several years of close study of the country.

"All the work of modern sanitation surgery, medicine, will only increase our problems in China unless there is a conscious effort to lower the birth rate," says Mallory.

"What is the use of saving a man from death from cholera today, only to see him die of starvation tomorrow? We are doing all we can for China in every way, yet that is precisely what we must see occur if the death rate decreases materially and the birthrate remains at the present level.

"We are spreading modern ideas of sanitation, we are teaching methods of controlling the spread of disease, preventive medicine and modern surgery are helping save lives—but all this will mean only increased misery if we are to see our work go to overcrowding still more a country already overcrowded. We should save lives, yes, but there should be a lower birthrate to correspond, otherwise calamity is ahead.

"I view this problem with genuine concern. Modern science will do China a poor favor if it adds to her problems without helping to solve them. And one solution would be adoption of birth control methods.

"Teaching of methods of contraception should, in my opinion, be a department of the work of every Chinese medical institution. By this plan the birth rate might be cut down at the same time the medical men are lowering the death rate.

The problem is much less difficult than it appears," Mallory points out. If birth control can actually become a reality in China, while it takes centuries to build up a population even under the most favorable conditions, a population can be cut down within a single generation.

"If the people of China should be content to have just half as many children during the coming generation as they did during the last one," he suggests, "the population probably would be reduced by such a considerable proportion that the problem of maintenance would be very largely solved, even with a corresponding reduction in the death rate due to modern assistance in everyday life."

In spite of the fact that China's overpopulated condition renders birth control more necessary here than in any other part of the world, birth control in China on any extensive scale is at present "out of the question," Mallory admits.

"Birth control here at present can hardly be considered," he said, "its widespread adoption would be a task of such magnitude, because of the present attitude of the people, that years of strenuous work and a change of basic social concept on the part of the Chinese would be necessary. From present indications it is now merely a utopian dream."

Chinese ancestor worship creates an impressive need for male progeny. This, coupled with the low cost of

Helen Wills Starts Eye-Shade Craze

NEW YORK, July 26.—Clerks in New York's five and ten cent stores are saying "thank you" 300,000 times a week to eye shade purchasers because Helen Wills decided upon the simplest method of keeping the sun from her eyes, while she ran from net to the base line.

One can't stand on a Manhattan street corner and look any direction without seeing eye shades. It's such an inexpensive and East Side youngsters can fall in line. Champions Past and Present

By JOE ARCHIBALD

Twenty years ago Mrs. May Sutton Bundy won the highest tennis honors that America has to offer a woman, that of the National Women's Tennis singles championship. Today Mrs. Bundy is still a contender for that title, and although she has not succeeded in winning another national championship since 1924, she has proved more than once to be the nemesis of some of our present day women artists of the court.

Miss Helen Wills, the present women's national champion, and frequently referred to as the California hurricane, has with the possible exception of the famous Mlle. Lenglen, the nearest approach to a man's style of tennis. She is without question a hard player, being possessed of a driving serve that is delivered with a powerful forehand smash that keeps her foe on the base line. When hard pressed Miss Wills is apt to throw caution to the winds and has more than once given an exhibition of tennis that has yet to be equaled by any woman on an American court.

Miss Wills and Mrs. Bundy have recently crossed racquets, and although the little Californian star was the victor, Mrs. Bundy broke through her service twice and displayed flashes of her old form, a form that if able to be brought to life again consistently, would extend the present champion and make her play her rarest game if she would be declared the winner.

BLAMES DRY LAW FOR FRENCH HATRED

SAYS WINE SELLERS FEEVED AT LOSS OF U. S. REVENUE.

NEW YORK, July 26.—The Volstead act, which deprived France of one of its greatest sources of income, is the cause of anti-American demonstrations in Paris, in the opinion of Philip G. Peabody of Boston, an economist and philanthropist.

Peabody arrived Monday from Europe, convinced that the French regard the prohibition law as a hypocritical measure which ended a profitable source of American revenue.

The French, he said, considered American demands for debt settlements the result of the loss of liquor revenue in this country.

ONLY SIX DEAD IN BRIDGE COLLAPSE

RECHECK SHOWS ORIGINAL ESTIMATE OF THIRTEEN WAS IN ERROR.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., July 26.—Search of coal river at Whitesville, where a suspension bridge collapsed Saturday night, has revealed 80 persons into the stoney bed of the shallow stream, ended today. No additional bodies were discovered.

Major Robert E. O'Connor, commanding the state constabulary at Charleston, announced that the death toll was six and that 33 were still in hospitals, revising the original official statement of 13 persons in charge of rescue work that 13 had been killed. A recheck, he said, showed that some of those reported killed, had only been injured and were receiving treatment at their homes in the mining district.

About 60 men, women and children, watching Harry McLean, a carnival performer, touch a match to his kerseene-soaked clothing, were injured when the bridge collapsed.

Several, Major O'Connor said, were still in a critical condition.

Plan Get-Together Of Profs, Students

AUSTIN, Texas July 26.—A series of convocations during the fall term for freshmen students in the University of Texas is being arranged to promote a closer relation between the faculty and the students and to aid the latter in adapting themselves to the University life. With the convocations preceding registration of the new students it is thought that the freshmen will be materially aided in getting a start to work a profitable year in the University, according to V. I. Moore of the Student Life Staff. Attendance at such convocations will be made compulsory, Dean Moore said.

Of particular importance to the first year student are the extra-curricular activities. An effort will be made to supervise the outside activities engaged in by the student in order that work in his courses in the University will not be impaired. This phase of student life will be discussed during the convocations. Several talks will be made to the freshmen students in explaining the purposes and responsibilities of the honor system. Very few of the first year students have come from high schools where an effective honor system is maintained, and for this reason it is often hard for them to realize its responsibilities, Dean Moore said. The new students will also be made familiar with the discipline regulations of the University and the need of these rules will be explained to them, Dean Moore stated.

The figures of cost includes the dam, spillway and outlet works, but does not include features such as rights-of-way, roads and clearing reservoir site.

PREHISTORIC CAMEL DUG UP IN MONTANA

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 26.—Bones, dug up near Belgrade, Montana, have been identified by Dr. J. W. Gidley, of the United States National Museum, as belonging to a large camel which lived in the desert in that section from 1,500,000 to 2,500,000 years ago. It was announced July 19 at the Smithsonian Institution.

According to Dr. Gidley, the camel was larger than the modern Asiatic camel, but probably had similar long neck, long legs, and pads on his feet adapted to desert travel. It was a true camel, but had more teeth than is possessed by the modern 'ship of the desert.'

Camels, if they did not originate in America, Dr. Gidley explained at least had a great part of their development here. Numerous fossils from different geological ages have been found which show different stages in their development in America.

The large camel just identified lived in the geological period known as the Miocene. Camels have been found in nearly all parts of America from Florida to north of the Arctic Circle in Alaska, he said.

"Home Sweet Home" Model House

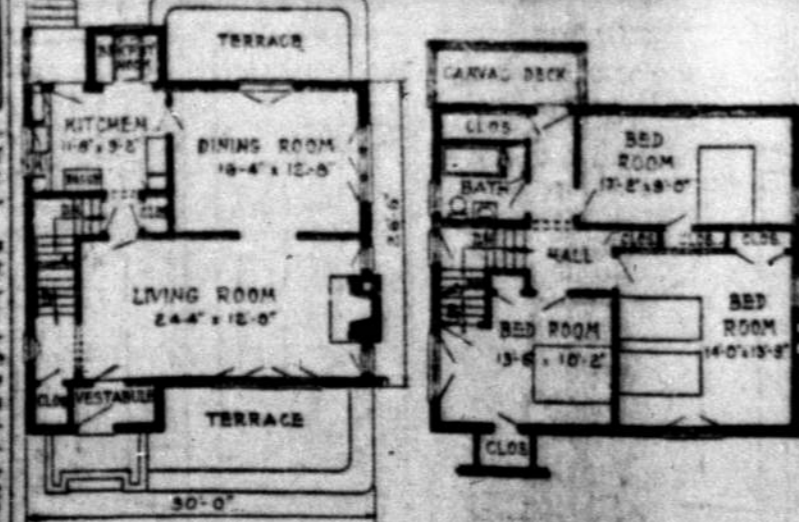

HALF-TIMBERED ENGLISH STYLE

This attractive house is the result of the Cleveland Federation of Women's Clubs' effort to construct a model home to encourage home-making and home-building.

How well they succeeded is easily seen in the excellent layout of the rooms and the sturdy construction of the house itself.

In choosing construction materials that they believed were basically good, the club members selected concrete masonry walls with an exterior covering of portland cement stucco. This construction assures the owner a fire-safe home and one that will not deteriorate with the passing of years. Maintenance, also, is at a minimum; an occasional painting of exterior woodwork is all the attention required to keep the home in perfect condition.

The interior arrangement, with the large living room, dining room adjoining the well-appointed kitchen and breakfast room, is all that can be asked. The three extra large bedrooms on the second floor have five spacious closets distributed at convenient locations and the bath, situated at the head of the stairs, is convenient to all.

Another feature of this model home is that it can be built on almost any city lot. A width of forty feet in almost any direction will accommodate the plan.

Government Meat Grading Service Commendation

WASHINGTON, July 26.—National interest is being shown in the meat grading service of the United States department of agriculture by commercial organizations who view the work as having a generally beneficial effect in improving the quality of meats. Commendations and requests for the service are being received by the department in large volume from numerous quarters.

The service was established in January, 1922, and limited at first to purchasers of meat, meat food products and poultry for the passenger ships of the United States lines. It was extended soon to include purchases for the "Laid-Up" fleets, other steamship lines, restaurants, and commercial interests later requested the service.

Practically no effort has been made by the department to sell the service to commercial interest, because of limited funds with which to do the work. Efforts in the initial stages were devoted largely to serving federal and state institutions, but the results were such that commercial concerns began to manifest interest in the work.

Car lot buyers of meat have found the grading service valuable in making purchases at long distances. Buyers for hotel supply houses have made frequent use of it when purchasing cuts of meats to be frozen for future use. In such cases the meats are graded and each cut stamped with the official grades. An official certificate is issued by the grader, showing the quantity and grade of each lot. Thus, each lot is easily identified and sales of frozen meats are made satisfactorily from storage without the necessity of a physical re-examination.

The greatest care is used in selecting men for the government grading work. No one is employed who cannot show that he has had a number of years of practical selling or buying experience, or both. He must possess, also, a high moral character and be above reproach.

Grading service for the most part is rendered at places of delivery, although some grading care made at coolers and branch houses. Where gradings are made at points other than point of delivery, meats are stamped with the grade. When graded at point of delivery, stamping is usually omitted.

Gradings are conducted also for railroads; generally these are for condition only. In such cases, railroads have no financial interest in the products but request official gradings merely for their own protection against claims. Railroad officials have told department officials that, so far, in all cases where an official certificate was issued on the condition of the contents of a car, settlements were made quickly and made without recourse to the courts.

In the case of gradings for restaurants the service is rendered after delivery to the restaurant and at place of purchase, according to the wishes of the operators. In some restaurant work, periodical examinations are made, usually two to three weeks apart. In such cases, restaurant owners buy meats on the department grades and the visit of the grader to the restaurants is in the nature of a check on the seller. Charges for the service are at the rate of $2 an hour for the grader's time, plus the individual or firm requesting the service. Although provision for grading regulations is made for appeals, to date no appeals have been received. Close supervision of grading work is maintained from the Washington office in order that the grader's ideas of the official grades may not vary.

The meat grading service for steamships is conducted mostly at the ship's side and generally a representative of the contractor is present on the pier at the time of loading. This was true especially during the experimental stages of the grading service and has tended to simplify and minimize grading problems by lessening probabilities of objections through a better understanding of the several grade requirements.

The meat grading service has virtually revolutionized the provisioning of ocean steamships operating out of the port of New York. Under the old system of purchase and sale, price was practically the only consideration and acceptances or rejections were influenced by the size of contributions to one or more employees of the purchaser. This had a decided influence in lowering the quality of products delivered and generally accepted. Meats of low quality were generally delivered on contracts calling for high quality meats.

The meat grading service of the department has eliminated all these undesirable features. Bids are on one basis and everyone has an equal opportunity. Contractors generally understand this and make their price on uniform quality basis.

The meat grading service has now become thoroughly established. Both sellers and buyers pay the cost of the service and consider it a good business investment.

The City of Prague, the capital of Czechoslovakia, has renamed one of its streets in honor of the United States, according to advices to the Department of State from American Minister Louis Einstein.

DAILY MARKETS

New York Finance

By United News.

NEW YORK, July 26.—If today's market can be accepted as fair proof, the period of readjustment has about ended for the time being.

Despite the fact that the total volume of sales was far below the million share level, prices snapped back sharply with the industrial showing a recovery of more than a full point and with rails very little behind.

General Motors again assumed market leadership while U. S. Steel was strong and higher despite the comparative lack of activity in the usual market leader.

There is no longer any question as to the status of General Motors among motor stocks on the big board. For a time Nash, Chrysler, Hudson and other motor stocks have provided a flash of pyrotechnics, but General Motors has always filled in the gaps and is again working steadily higher with the rank and file of automotive issues taking tone from the leader.

Thus when General Motors rallied more than three full points today, the list steadied. Incidentally one of the ticker services presented an analysis of General Motors today showing the company's earnings for the first six months of the year to be greater than the combined total of Hudson, Nash, Dodge, Willys-Overland, Packard, Studebaker and Chrysler.

Most of the market's rallying tendency was developed in the two closing hours as prices were subjected to further pressure during the morning session. However, this probably was due to an accumulation of selling orders over the week end.

When support was resumed it was found that the market was decidedly strong with few offerings available. Many short lines which had been put out last week when the market was extremely ragged were taken in during the last two hours today when the market turned abruptly on sellers.

Atlantic coast line shorts were treated to a run-in to the tune of near five points while DuPont added more than seven points to Saturday's closing price.

Call money held at four per cent again today with a moderate demand in the face of abundant offerings. The official report described it as a very quiet day.

ATTITUDE OF MINISTER TO CHINA APPROVED WASHINGTON, D. C., July 26.—The American minister to China, John Van A. MacMurray, is carrying out the traditional policy of the United States government toward China in his handling of the problems which have recently arisen, it was stated July 21, at the department of state.

Press dispatches from Shanghai reported criticism of Mr. MacMurray by British newspapers and American residents of China for his failure to take a strong stand in protesting Chinese violations of the Boxer Protocol of 1901. By this treaty foreigners are guaranteed the freedom of certain Chinese cities and constant access to the sea by the railroad from Peking to Tientsin.

Recently, however, all foreigners were blockaded during the Legation Quarter in Peking during the entrance of Chang Tso-Lin into Peking, according to press reports. The train

President Duggan Will Make His Initial Tour In August

LITTLEFIELD, July 26.—President Arthur P. Duggan of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce will make his first tour of West Texas during the month of August. His tour will take him through the recreational section of West Texas into the Davis Mountain section where he will attend the district convention to be held in Marfa on August 11. He will then swing west to El Paso and will go into New Mexico where on August 16 he will attend the New Mexico district convention of the organization to be held in Arteson.

Mr. Duggan plans to make speeches at different points along the route and will probably launch his campaign for equalization of taxes on this trip. He will be accompanied on the trip by Mrs. Duggan, by Homer D. Wade manager of the organization, and by E. H. Whitehead publicity manager of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

As tentatively planned M. Duggan and his party will start the trip at Big Spring on the morning of August 8. He will have a noon meeting at El Paso and will speak in El Paso in the afternoon and will drive to Marfa where he will attend the district meeting on August 11. He will speak in Alpine on the night of August 11. Fort Davis and Balmorhea will be on his itinerary for August 12. On Aug. 13 he will visit El Paso where he will swing into New Mexico and will visit Alamo-gordo on Aug. 14, and will spend Sunday in Cloudcroft. He will attend the district convention at Arteson on August 16 and the following day will attend the meeting of the Southern New Mexico Association at Carlsbad. It is probable that other points will be placed on his itinerary for the return trip.

Outlines Policies "To definitely outline a policy and make a complete schedule of activities at the beginning of any fiscal year is a difficult thing to do," said Arthur P. Duggan, president, West Texas Chamber of Commerce, when asked for a statement of his policies.

"However," said Mr. Duggan, "there are a number of matters of vital importance that will be taken up immediately, while there will doubtless be numerous others to arise during the course of the year's work. Of course, the program of farm diversification, as so ably carried on by my honorable predecessor, Col. R. Q. Lee, will be continued. I consider it one of the very most important of the very most important, and shall leave no effort un-done toward making it of wider effect."

Equality of Taxes "It is clearly evident that the time has arrived when the matter of a more equitable system of taxation should exist. Since announcing publicly a few weeks ago my interest in this important subject, I have received numerous commendatory letters from citizens in different parts of the state who attest their belief in the fact that this matter should be thoroughly adjudicated. I am aware of the fact that at many times nearly every year for many years past there has been some consideration paid this matter, and with some success; but it seems to me that with the concerted activity of the membership of this organization back of it some real tangible results can be obtained. In all probabilities, the East Texas Chamber of Commerce will be called upon to cooperate with our organization. Tax surveys, both of contrast and comparison, will have to be made, and I can not help but believe that when the citizens of every portion of the state become acquainted with the glaring defects, irregularities and inequalities, there will be a pressure mounted upon our legislators that prompt action toward an equitable adjustment will be made.

Irrigation is a subject of vital import to many sections of our territory. More information is needed regarding it and here of this system of crop production needs to be put into action. There are multiplied thousands of acres of fertile soil in our regional territory, lying barren and unproductive, but for the water, and which in numerous instances could be applied at reasonable cost. I have visited many of the large irrigated projects of our country, both those of the gravity and pumping kind, and I know somewhat of the greatly added wealth that would accrue to our part of the state through increased irrigation. As a preliminary step surveys, both of topographic and hydrographic nature, would have to be made, calculations of sectional rainfall, location of catch basins, water shed territory—all these would be important toward generating information in the matter.

Immigration is a big subject and one in which all of west Texas is mightily interested. It ought to be carried on during the coming year on a bigger scale than ever before. Millions of fine fertile acres lie out here awaiting the development of the thousands who are home-hungry. I believe a publicity campaign can be inaugurated during this year that will bring great host of new citizens within our borders.

"The conservation of oil and gas is a subject of growing importance to west Texas, and it is my belief that more stringent legislation is needed in this direction.

Favors Railway Extensions "The matters of railway rates and of highway transportation are big subjects for consideration. It is generally agreed that the interstate commerce commission is too conservative in its decisions on applications for permits of public necessity and convenience, and there ought to be some way of speeding up decisions in specific cases. Automobile transportation is as yet in its infancy, and while so, would be a good time to place it under state control, thus safeguarding the public along with other common carriers."

Industrial "In the matter of co-operative industrialism there is a large field for development. It is a known fact that many of the larger towns and smaller cities of our regional territory are capable of organizing with local capital various kinds of factory industries that would not only prove profitable from a business standpoint, but invaluable to the public at large. Today large quantities of farm products are being shipped in the raw state for hundreds of miles away, to later be returned to the point of origination in the refined state and sold at a much higher price than if prepared for market locally.

Educational "There are perhaps at least a half dozen matters along educational lines that should have the attention of the management and the endorsement of the membership. More may be said about this following the first meeting of the board of directors at Abilene the 12th of this month. At any rate I believe larger appropriations for the benefit of the state schools in our territory are in order. With the constant and rapid population growth of this section of the state, the increasing large numbers of young men and women seeking higher education, such action becomes paramount.

Standardization of Farm Products "Some steps should be taken toward the standardization of such farm products as poultry, eggs, fruit, etc. The grading of such when placed on the market would go a long way toward insuring better standard of production as well as better prices and greater satisfaction.

"These suggestions represent a few of the major matters of procedure of the organization. There will be numerous others that will come up for consideration and adjudication, together with host of minor matters of sectional and general import. I believe the organization this year is better than ever before. The present list of vice-presidents and of the board of directors can scarcely be exceeded. The men on the managerial staff are all highly experienced, and this group of men, coming from every section of the regional territory, giving their time and thought to the success of this great organization, should enable us to carry out of a bigger and better year than ever before."

"Sylvia"

By NINON ROMAINE

CHAPTER IV.

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters. Sylvia Wood, bride and art student living in Greenwich Village, begins the narrative of her love life on the order of her physician. She must omit no emotional detail, he tells her. The ordeal is a form of psycho analysis intended to lift a "trama" from the girl's brain which she has suffered in an automobile accident.

Memory pictures of gay dinners in Greenwich Village, and of quiet elegant suppers at Pierre's and the Plaza, and out in a big club house past Pelham Manor where she and Bob had been guests, were in Sylvia's mind, as she rested in her bed at the hospital. But none of them approached in pleasure this first dinner in her father's little home with Robert Wood for her guest on the evening of the day she first met him. After a little spell of reveries Sylvia Wood resumed her writing.

"I guess I must be a calculating person," she wrote, "because I remember I set our dining room table with the nicest things we had, treasures of linen and silver and china that had been mother's and which had not been used in many a day. I felt all excited, almost feverish, as I flew about the dining room and the kitchen, and then into the garden where I gathered a big armful of roses.

"First I spread the dragon lace tablecloth, a wedding gift to my mother on the table. I took it from her old cedar press. Then I took our three five-armed brass candlesticks placed one on the table, another on the mantel where it would catch reflections from the mirror, and the third on the buffet. The roses I placed in two bowls, the first a copper vase Daddy had picked up in Tunis, which I used for a centerpiece, and the other a lusterful black dish from China, which I placed in front of the open window.

"Then I jumped back into the kitchen to finish getting dinner. First I mixed some sauce for the shrimp cocktail and heated the soup, a potage which we have about three times a week; and strained it, sliced the cold roast beef, and garnished the platter with lettuce and parsley, and then I took the cold mashed potatoes, grated an onion into them and beat in three eggs, and cooked some potato patties in hot cooking oil. The central incident of the dinner was the strawberry shortcake in its sea of crushed strawberries and its little mountains of whipped cream.

"And that was all we had until Daddy, who had been amazingly moved by the beautiful way in which Bob Wood had played Schumann things on mother's old piano, suggested that perhaps Mr. Wood might care for some wine.

"I looked at Daddy. He had not suggested such a thing to anyone before in years. Bob, who had expected to be offered some home-made fabrication of dandelions or grapes, almost fell out of his chair when Papa returned from the cellar with a bottle simply covered with dust, carried tenderly in a little wicker cradle that had been on the shelf over the stairs ever since I could remember.

"It is almost the last of our Rose Chateau, a Burgandy of the wonderful vintage of 1908," he said, showing Bob the bottle. And I remember with what care my painter parent drew the cork and wiped the mouth of the bottle with a napkin not to shake the wine.

"I brought this from France in a more precious day," he explained as he poured a spoonful into his glass and tasted it, his whole being intent upon the little spot of his tongue the wine touched. Then nodding, he poured the wine into three glasses, and we all stood while he wished us a toast.

"I noted that Bob looked both my father and myself squarely in the eyes as he said: 'To your success and happiness and contentment,' and that pleased father too, because he holds it a lack of breeding to propose a toast without earnestness.

pleased him to know that Bob knew it too.

"Well there wasn't much of a variety that first day Bob Wood came to our home, but there was plenty of such food as there was and I was proud of my old patrician daddy, generally so silent; and I was proud too of the beautiful dishes and silver and our dining room, lighted only by the candles in the June night, the flames swaying gently in the breeze from the open window, illuminating fitfully the portrait of my great, great grandfather, the one who had been a member of the first Provincial congress in the Colony of Massachusetts, and which had been painted a hundred years before by J. G. Cole, and the other portrait, of my lovely mother, painted by my father in the first year of their marriage. Poor we might be but we were rich in the things that made for beauty and distinction once home was inside the walls of our home. And Bob was impressed.

"It occurred to me then in a fleeting thought that my father was playing some sort of a game, but until today I never really believed he was matchmaking. He liked big clean Bob Wood, and he knew Bob would be well-to-do some day, when he came into his half of his father's property at the age of thirty. And in short my old father was bent on making a match for his dowerless daughter, and he was doing it beautifully too. But I knew from the first minute that I could like Bob wonderfully if I had the chance.

"So after dinner when a big moon came and touched the river to silver, and Bob having finished his coffee, suggested that perhaps my Daddy and I would enjoy a motor ride in the moonlight. Daddy thanked him and made some excuse, but said I might go if I wanted to. And Bob just beamed. It was after 11 when we got back.

"And that was the beginning. The next night Bob and I went motoring again after he had taken me to dinner at the Country club. Bob's mother was in Europe, at Cange of Vichy then. I think and the boy felt the need of a home. That need of a home contributed to our courtship. So I became Bob's girl."

BOARD OF MEDIATION TO MOVE INTO NEW WASHINGTON OFFICE. WASHINGTON, D. C., July 26.—The United States Board of Mediation, recently created by the Watson-Parker Act supplanting the old Railroad Labor Board, will move into its new offices in Washington within the next few days, the secretary of the board announced July 26.

The board will occupy 20 rooms on the seventh floor of the Earle Building at a monthly rental of $984.26, and will begin to function officially in the next few days, the secretary added.

ONTARIO GOLD. TORONTO, Ont.—Gold production from the mines of Ontario is increasing at the rate of $5,000,000 a year, according to a report issued by the provincial department of mines.

"More than $200,000,000 of gold has been produced in Ontario since 1909," says the report. "Canada now ranks third among the nations of the world in the production of gold. The Transvaal of South Africa is first and the United States is second."

YOSEMITE TO HAVE HATCHERY FOR FISH

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 26.—A fish hatchery is to be established in Yosemite National Park, California, under a contract recently approved by the Department of the Interior.

This contract provides that the California State Fish and Game Commission may erect on 10 acres of land to be leased to the State the necessary buildings for the hatchery, including an aquarium for the display of an exhibition of the various species of fish life in the park. At the end of 10 years the present contract may be renewed, or the United States may purchase the hatchery at a fair price.

All plans for the building are to be approved by the Department of the Interior before construction is undertaken, and no alterations will be made in the completed building without the prior approval of the department.

Under the terms of the agreement, all fish produced at the hatchery from eggs obtained within the boundaries of the National Park are to be planted in the streams until such time as, in the opinion of the Secretary of the Interior, an adequate supply of fish is available. Then any surplus of fish so obtained may be planted in streams outside park boundaries. The fish are hatched from eggs imported from points outside

DESIGNATE ROAD TO STATE LINE

HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT APPROVES LUBBOCK-NEW MEXICO ROUTE

The highway to the New Mexico state line from Lubbock has been approved, according to County Judge Chas. Nordyke. The department sent notice to Nordyke the latter part of last week: "Designation of the following highway to be taken over for maintenance on July 1, 1927 recommended by Mr. Clegg, conditioned that same meet the requirements of the State Highway department, from Lubbock in Lubbock county through Hockley and Cochran counties to the New Mexico state line." The new highway will connect Lubbock direct with the New Mexico state line, the distance being only 75 miles. It will run straight west from Lubbock via Carlisle and Hurlwood.

PRODUCTION OF MATCHES AND PIPES DECREASES

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 26.—Two censuses of manufacturers issued July 21 by the Department of Commerce reveal a largely decreased production during 1925 of pipes and cigar and cigarette holders and a small decrease in the production of matches during the same year.

According to the 1925 census the establishments engaged primarily in the manufacture of pipes and cigar and cigarette holders reported a total output valued at $7,284,463. Of this amount, $7,128,246 was contributed by pipes, $83,136 by cigar and cigarette holders, and $73,079 by miscellaneous products. The total value of products shows a decrease of 24.9 percent compared with 1923, the last preceding census year. At the same time the department announced that the 24 establishments engaged primarily in the manufacture of matches during 1925 reported an output of 24,164,000 gross boxes, valued at $23,136,000, a decrease of 2.5 per cent compared with 1923.
