Reagan readies for talks with eye on Panama

By BARRY SCHWEID

HELSINKI, Finland — President Reagan made quiet preparations today for his summit talks in Moscow — a first-in-a-lifetime venture already clouded by failure in a U.S. effort to oust Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, the military ruler of Panama.

There were no appointments on his schedule as the 77-year-old president tried to adjust to the seven-hour time change and get over the 4,450-mile flight from Washington.

Just before Air Force One landed, Reagan received a telephone call from Secretary of State George P. Shultz with the disappointing news that Noriega had rejected a deal for him to step down in exchange for almost certain dropping of drug-related charges against him in Florida.

"I don't feel weakened," Reagan assured reporters after his post-midnight landing. But he seemed disappointed — and at a loss on what he might try next to force out Noriega.

Shultz had stayed behind to supervise the negotiations held in Panama between Michael G. Kozak of the State Department and Noriega.

Apparently, the general's aides had given the impression the deal would go through, but Noriega turned Kozak down and the emissary was ordered home.

"It seemed for a time as if he had some plan ...," Reagan said of Noriega, his voice trailing off, "but evidently he changed his mind about this."

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. diplomats began a round of consultations with Latin American governments today in a search for new options on bringing about the departure of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega from Panama, a State Department official said.

Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams said U.S. ambassadors were instructed to seek advice from the presidents and the foreign ministers of their respective countries.

Abrams spoke to reporters after a closed-door meeting of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to discuss the failed administration attempt to negotiate Noriega's resignation as defense chief and his departure from Panama.

"We begin today a round of consultations with democracies throughout Latin America," Abrams said. "Cables went out last night instructing our ambassadors to see the presidents of their host countries today and the foreign ministers and to tell them what happened in detail and to ask for their advice in helping us move forward."

Lightning splits tree; Rain, small hail noted in county

By JULIE HILLRICHS

Lightning zeroed in on a northwest Midland residence Wednesday, splitting a tree in half and causing minor electrical damage to a house.

Flowering plants were blown from the ground when lightning struck near the Robert Conner residence, 2824 Frontier Drive, about 10 p.m. Wednesday.

The house sustained minor electrical damage, but there were no reports of injuries, a Midland Fire Department spokeswoman said this morning.

"We saw the flash," said Beri Lunsford, 2825 Frontier Drive. "At first we thought something hit our house."

The lightning split the tree, stripped most of the bark from its trunk and blew plants from a flower bed that encircled its roots, Lunsford added.

The National Weather Service recorded .35 inch of rainfall at Midland International Airport during the past 24-hour period, bringing the monthly total to 2.06 inches — .1 of an inch above the monthly average of 2.05 inches for May, the weather service reported.

Assistant Fire Marshal Lon Dominguez stands near the back door at 1905 English Drive. The door, which was locked with a double-cylinder deadbolt, blocked the escape of a 53-year-old woman who perished in the fire, fire officials said. The death has renewed debate over the locking devices.

Did lock lead to fire deaths?

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A woman killed in a searing fire last weekend was trapped when she could not find a key to a high-security deadbolt which was locked from the inside, Midland fire officials said Wednesday.

The woman, 57-year-old Ella Mae Andrews, likely would have survived if she had found the key to the double-cylinder deadbolt on the back door at 1905 English Drive, where she lived with her 85-year-old mother, Myrtle Bell Galloway, officials added.

Ms. Galloway also perished in the fire, which broke out early Sunday morning at the two-bedroom brick home they were renting.

After several inspections of the charred, sooty remains of the kitchen area where Ms. Andrews' body was found, and a careful check of the door, it appeared clear the woman was trapped inside, Fire Marshal Jerry Petree said.

"It looks as if she was in bed, then got up and tried to get out," Petree demonstrated at the scene. "But she could not get through the door, and so we found her here."

Sadly, the front door — also equipped with a double-cylinder deadbolt lock — was not locked, Petree said.

"Unfortunately, she went through the wrong door," he said.

The fire probably was ignited by a single candle late Saturday or early Sunday in the southwest bedroom of the home where the two women slept, the investigation has concluded.

The blaze likely smoldered for several hours before Ms. Galloway, who was deaf and could not speak, and Ms. Andrews, who was deaf and on crutches at the time, noticed the smoke, Petree said.

Ms. Galloway's body was found in the bedroom, fire Inspector Lon Dominguez said.

The death of Ms. Andrews has renewed debate about the relative safety of the double-cylinder deadbolt.

Crime prevention specialists advocate use of the device for two reasons. On a glass-paned door equipped with single-cylinder deadbolt, a burglar can shatter the pane and with a reach inside and a twist of the wrist unlock the deadbolt. Double-cylinder devices keyed from the outside and inside prevent that.

Also, most burglars who break in through windows unlock a door so they can escape with larger goods, such as television sets and stereo equipment. If a burglar cannot open a door locked from the inside, he can only take what will fit through the window.

Crime prevention officers say they always warn of the potential fire hazard — similar to that of burglar bars — and that the key should be left in the lock or nearby when the home is occupied.

"We stress that heavily, always," police Sgt. Lalo Camarillo said. He added that officers who conduct home security surveys are instructed to write a follow-up letter.

Teen-ager's fatality blamed on Houston home's burglar bars

HOUSTON (AP) — After a 1973 burglary, Patricia Green had burglar bars installed on the doors and windows of her one-story home.

About 3 a.m. Wednesday, her 15-year-old daughter, Nicole Rene Green, died in her bedroom as fire gutted the house. Neighbors said they tried vainly to pry and smash through the burglar bars as they heard her screaming for help inside the house.

"The bars were definitely a factor in her dying," arson investigator William Sammons said. "If there weren't the burglar bars, she could have just opened the window or the door and gotten out."

Nicole was alone in the house while her mother worked her night shift as a nurse, but she managed to dial the 911 emergency number and then call her mother before the fire spread too far.

"She was saying, 'Mama, Mama, the house is on fire!' and I just told her to get out," Mrs. Green said. "The phone just went dead. I guess there was just too much flame."

Mrs. Green said keys to the burglar bars were in the house.

Colorado City shooting stirring civil rights controversy

COLORADO CITY (AP) — The shooting of a 27-year-old Colorado City man by a part-time police officer has sparked controversy among neighbors and civil rights advocates in this usually quiet West Texas town.

Scores of concerned citizens met with representatives of the U.S. Department of Justice and minority rights groups for nearly three hours Tuesday night to discuss remedies for alleged civil rights violations, the Big Spring Herald reported.

Part-time officer Billy Ray Williamson shot and killed Sammy Gomez May 13 when the officer arrived at Gomez's grandparents' home to arrest Gomez on aggravated sexual assault charges.

"Nothing I say — nothing anybody can say — is going to bring the victim back," said Richard Sambrano of the Justice Department's community relations office in Dallas. "But sometimes a tragedy like this can unite a community, keep the same thing from happening in the future."

Sambrano was in town to instruct Colorado City police and Mitchell County Sheriff's Department officers Wednesday in how to avoid using excessive force or committing civil rights violations of prisoners.

Colorado City Police Chief Bobby Sparks said a warrant had been issued for Gomez's arrest in connection with the aggravated sexual assault of a 19-year-old Colorado City woman. The woman was assaulted repeatedly between 11:30 p.m. May 11 and 4 a.m. May 12 in a car parked in the same block as the Gomez home.

Sparks said four officers were dispatched to arrest Gomez because the suspect had a prior conviction for assault on a police officer and was considered armed and dangerous.

Police allege Gomez pulled a knife on two of the four officers and refused to stop advancing or to drop the knife. Williamson then shot Gomez.

Marcario Gomez, the dead man's father, told Sambrano that Williamson had threatened the younger Gomez for eight years. The dead man's aunt, Jessie Gomez, said she witnessed the shooting, but did not see her nephew pull a knife on the officers.

Williamson was not suspended from the police force following the incident and a grand jury failed to indict him for the shooting.

"We're not here to condone what Sammy Gomez had done, or was accused of, or to say whether he was innocent or guilty," said Oscar Ortiz, president of the newly organized Colorado City chapter of the League of United Latin American Citizens.

Arizona judge sentences teen-aged mother to life on birth control

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A teenager who left her infant sons alone for three hot days was ordered to practice birth control for the rest of her child-bearing years by a judge who rebuked her as a "child having children."

Other terms of a lifetime probation given to Debra Ann Forster prohibit her from seeing the two boys as well as a daughter she later bore. She must also provide weekly reports to the probation office on her birth control use.

Ms. Forster, 18, pleaded guilty in April to two counts of felony child abuse for leaving her two sons alone in an apartment, without food or water, for three days last May. She could have received 30 years in prison.

The boys, William and Scott, respectively 18 months and 6 months-old at the time, were hospitalized eight days for malnutrition, lesions caused by a rash and dehydration.

Scott was close to death from dehydration when he was found, the police said. Both have since recovered.

Temperatures for the three-day period ranged from 100 during the day and 73 at night; the average was 87 degrees, the National Weather Service says.

The children were found by Ms. Forster's estranged husband, Bill, who called police. Authorities removed the children from the house and Ms. Forster was arrested hours later when she showed up at the Mesa Police Department.

Judge Lindsay Ellis Budzyn said the sentence was the only way she could make sure the woman would not hurt other children since society offers little or no support for potential abusers.

"We don't have a lot of help out there for people," the Maricopa County Superior Court judge said in an interview Wednesday, a day after issuing the sentence.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Showers hit several parts of state

Associated Press

Much of the Texas hill country, Rio Grande plains and southern parts of West Texas were hit by showers and thunderstorms early today.

It was mostly cloudy over much of the High Plains, low rolling plains, and the hill country south to the middle Rio Grande plains. Fair to partly cloudy skies were common elsewhere.

A weak ridge of high pressure was over North Texas. The return flow from this ridge was sweeping gulf moisture upslope into West Texas, contributing to the precipitation in the area, the National Weather Service said.

Winds were south to southeasterly across the western part of the state, while east to southeast winds breezed the south. In North Texas, northeast to east winds prevailed. Wind speeds were generally light at less than 10 mph.

Temperatures overnight were in the 50s and 60s in the west and northern sections of the state. In the south, readings were in the 60s to the 70s. Readings ranged from 56 at Amarillo to 75 at Laredo.

Thunderstorms were expected to continue through tonight in West Texas, with a few thunderstorms possibly severe. Showers or thunderstorms also were possible in the Rio Grande Valley.

NATION

Showers and thunderstorms dampened the southern and central High Plains and the southern Atlantic Seaboard today after storms dumped heavy rain on sections of South Dakota.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms fell on the northern Rockies, the northern High Plains, New England and the Florida Keys. Fair skies prevailed over much of the nation's eastern half and the Southwest.

Frost and freeze advisories were posted for extreme western Maryland, western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, western New York state, lower Michigan and the eastern third of upper Michigan.

Midland statistics

FORECAST

Tonight: Partly cloudy, with a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms — a few possibly severe. The low will be near 60 degrees and winds will be from the southeast at 5 to 15 mph. Friday: Partly cloudy, with a 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms. The high will be in the mid-80s and winds will be from the southeast at 10 to 20 mph and gusty.

Plant would supply Cap Rock's power

DALLAS (AP) — Panda Energy Corp. of Dallas has announced an agreement to build a plant to provide nearly half the power needed by Cap Rock Electric Cooperative, which serves 13 West Texas counties.

Under terms of the contract announced Thursday, Panda will build, own and operate a 35-megawatt cogeneration facility that will supply steam for an industrial user and energy to Cap Rock, which is based in Stanton.

According to a Panda news release, the plan could mean lower rates for Cap Rock customers because the energy produced by the new plant will be cheaper than that now sold to the cooperative by Texas Utilities.

The $24 million plans is expected to be ready within three years.

"This cooperative will now be able to enjoy the advantages of receiving cogenerated power, such as no plant maintenance, lower rates, better operating efficiency, that the larger generating utilities are enjoying," said Al Erwin, a spokesman for Panda.

Electric cooperatives such as Cap Rock do not produce their own power. The new plant will provide approximately 40 percent of the electricity needed by Cap Rock to serve its customers in the West Texas counties of Andrews, Borden, Dawson, Ector, Glasscock, Howard, Irion, Martin, Midland, Reagan, Sterling, Tom Green and Upton.

Erwin said the agreement is the first of its type involving a Texas electric coperative and an independent energy producer.

SHOOTING

"We're not here just because he was Hispanic," Ortiz said. "We're here because we feel his civil rights were violated."

Sambrano said he had scheduled his training visit before the shooting because his office had received other civil rights complaints.

Sambrano said those complaints include a Filipino priest who was jailed for 11 hours without being allowed to make a phone call, and a young man who was handcuffed and allegedly maced while he was in jail.

Wright ready to face his accusers

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Facing accusations of political and financial corruption, House Speaker Jim Wright says he's ready to "put it all on the table and get it behind me" if the House Ethics Committee wants to investigate him.

Meanwhile, Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said he would formally ask the ethics panel to launch the investigation into Wright, the Fort Worth congressman who is the highest-ranking elected Democratic official in Washington.

Among questions placed before the panel by both Gingrich and Common Cause president Fred Wertheimer:

— Was Wright in violation of federal law when he pocketed profits of nearly $55,000 from the private 1985 publication of a slim book of essays, "Reflections of a Public Man"?

— Did Wright exert improper political muscle as House majority leader in 1986, and early last year as speaker, when he interceded on behalf of at least four Texas businessmen in their efforts to halt crackdowns against them by federal savings and loan regulators?

Wright would become the first House speaker in this century to face such a probe if the committee of six Democrats and six Republicans decides to undertake at least a preliminary investigation.

That decision will not be reached at least until next month, and perhaps not until July, according to information provided by John F. Davison, an Ethics Committee counsel.

The speaker stopped just short of calling for an official investigation of himself, in a letter hand-delivered by a Wright aide to Julian Dixon, D-Ill., the ethics chairman, late Tuesday.

But in the letter, Wright said he "will cooperate fully with any examination you may desire to make of these matters."

Wednesday, Wright told reporters he would expect any such examination to be resolved in a "prompt and specific" way. He and other Democratic leaders hope to have the matter settled before the third week in July, when Wright is to serve as chairman of the Democratic national convention in Atlanta.

Gingrich has been threatening for months to haul the matter of Wright's ethics before the Dixon panel. But nothing heated up until Wertheimer of Common Cause, the liberally oriented public interest group, last week urged Dixon to move ahead with an investigation of the speaker.

Steadfastly ignoring Gingrich in public, Wright's letter to Dixon addressed itself to questions raised by Wertheimer.

Concerning his actions on behalf of S&L operators in Texas who were facing "excessive and unfair" penalties from regulators at the Federal Home Loan Bank Board," Wright wrote, "at no time... did I act improperly or violate any rule of the House."

Meanwhile, in his annual financial statement required of all House members and made public on Wednesday, Wright indicated his total 1987 earnings were between $168,311 and $176,808. That included his salary of $115,000 as speaker.

The disclosure form listed Wright's assets at between $155,000 and $435,000, and his liabilities in the range of $105,000 to $220,000. Also in 1987, he transferred investments valued between $140,000 and $385,000 into a qualified blind trust.

Wright's financial statement showed no 1987 income from "Reflections of a Public Man," the book published by William Carlos Moore, a longtime political ally of Wright's from Fort Worth.

STORM

However, local farmers this morning reported as much as 2 inches of rainfall in rural areas west of the city, Midland Farmers Co-op Superintendent Mark Traweek said.

Near Greenwood, the rainfall totals varied between .10 and .30 of an inch, and small hail pelted sections of south Midland County near Rankin Highway. There were no reports of damage, Traweek said.

Wednesday's showers were the first since last week's violent round of thunderstorms rocked Midland County, causing thousands of dollars in hail damage to cars, houses and gardens.

NWS spokesman Eddie Brite said abundant moisture from the south, cool dry air from the southwest and a slight push from the north combined to create the series of thunderstorms that extended from Lubbock to McCamey.

Although there was no threat of tornadoes in the area, Brite said there were unconfirmed reports of golfball-size hail near Monahans.

Midland Police Department spokesman Cpl. Jim White said he was unaware of any weather-related automobile accidents.

Area farmers, who are midway through the annual cotton planting season, have been "planting pretty hard since the fields dried up enough to get in," said Traweek.

"Some of the cotton planted before the last rain was washed out, so they had to go in and replant," he added.

Tonight's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies and a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms — a few possibly severe. The low will be near 60 degrees and winds will blow from the southeast at 5 to 15 mph.

On Friday, skies should be partly cloudy, with a 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms. The high is forecast in the mid-80s and winds should blow from the southeast at 10 to 20 mph and gusty.

Wednesday's high of 86 was 15 degrees cooler than the record of 101, set on that date in 1953. The overnight low of 59 was 11 degrees warmer than the record of 48, set on this date in 1950.

SENTENCE

But Alice Bendheim, an American Civil Liberties Union attorney, called it "an incredible sentence," and doubted it would hold up under constitutional pressures.

"I'm sure Judge Budzyn thought it was a sentence that fit the crime but we have a system that doesn't allow such an intrusion into private life," said Ms. Bendheim, who is on the ACLU's national board.

As the judge pronounced the sentence she told Ms. Forster, "Your case represents the epitome of what's wrong with our society: a child having children."

"I know I did something wrong, and I have to pay for it," Ms. Forster replied. "I'm sorry."

On Wednesday, the judge characterized Ms. Forster as a young woman of average intelligence who is emotionally immature.

SUMMIT

Asked what he might do next, Reagan said, "That's going to take some studying and consultation."

Evidently, any serious planning will have to take a back seat to the Moscow summit and Reagan's first visit to the Soviet Union, beginning on Sunday.

In any event, Fitzwater said: "No other negotiations are planned. No agreement has been left on the table."

Fitzwater said U.S. economic sanctions against Panama would remain in place.

Earlier, Fitzwater seemed to expect a positive outcome in the negotiations. "'We can hear something at any time," he told reporters aboard Air Force One.

Under the proposed deal, Noriega would have left Panama this summer and not returned until after elections were held in May 1989.

The president also was hoping for word from Capitol Hill that the Senate had ratified his treaty to abolish U.S. and Soviet nuclear missiles in the range of 300 miles to 3,400 miles.

Another key aide, Howard H. Baker Jr., the White House chief of staff, stayed behind to oversee maneuvering by Senate Democratic and Republican leaders to choke off debate and bring Reagan's only nuclear arms control agreement to a vote before the president opens talks with General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Sunday.

If the administration's strategy is successful, Baker will fly the ratified pact to Moscow on Saturday so Reagan and Gorbachev can have a formal exchange of the documents.

The Supreme Soviet, the nominal parliament, endorsed the treaty on Monday and sent it to the Presidium, the highest executive body, for ratification. Viktor P. Karpov, head of the foreign ministry's arms control office, said the Soviets should not ratify the treaty before the United States.

Reagan had hoped to make a far more significant treaty to cut U.S. and Soviet long-range nuclear weapons the centerpiece of his fourth and probably final summit meeting with Gorbachev.

But negotiations in Geneva were unable to resolve differences over his program for a space-based defense against Soviet ballistic missiles and how to verify cutbacks in elusive mobile missiles and cruise missiles carried aboard fighter planes and warships.

PANAMA

Republican and Democratic senators hailed the collapse of U.S. efforts to negotiate Noriega's departure, and the country's anti-Noriega ambassador said today the United States should let Latin Americans solve the problem.

"A lot of people are not upset that it fell apart," said Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., the morning after Secretary of State George Shultz told a hastily arranged news conference that Noriega had rejected U.S. proposals for his resignation as defense chief and his temporary departure from Panama.

But Kerry said, in an interview on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," that the negotiations to oust Noriega hurt U.S. foreign policy "and also sent a terrible message with respect to our ability to do something about the narcotics traffic."

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., on "CBS This Morning," urged the administration to start working with Latin American leaders on the matter and said no options for dealing with Noriega should be ruled out.

Dodd urged Panamanians to "keep pressure on General Noriega to realize that he's not safe when he leaves his country and not secure at home either."

FIRE

"We strongly recommend inserting the keys back in your locks or have a key close to your bed," a portion of the letter reads. "This is in order that you can leave the house in an emergency, such as a fire or explosion."

Despite the warning, the owner of the lock must be held accountable for its use, officers say.

"You have a responsibility to know how to operate it," police spokesman Cpl. Jim White said. "Just like with a smoke alarm or burglar bars."

Keith Turner, crime prevention officer for the Midland County Sheriff's office, agreed and said the devices are safe if used properly.

But fire officials are still stung by the most recent deaths, and feel that people are unaware that they may be locking themselves inside their own homes with no escape.

"Cops, when they do their crime prevention talks, they are mainly interested in the safety of property, material things," Dominguez said, walking through the blackened remains on English Drive.

"But we are interested in lives."

White said he disagreed with that assessment, and insisted the warning crime prevention officers give residents is all that can be done.

In the bedroom where the fire started, a key charred on one side was found. Dominguez picked up the key, walked to the back door and tried it.

"It fits," he said, standing in the spot where Ms. Andrews' body was found. He shook his head.

"This is the first time I can remember this happening in Midland," said Petree, a firefighter since 1971.

"There's nothing against the law about it (double-cylinder deadbolts). But you don't realize you are locking yourself in."

As Petree walked through the bits of scorched bedding matted on the floor of the house, he said he has mixed feelings about moving for an ordinance to outlaw the devices.

"There are hundreds of homes here in town that have them (the locks)," Petree said, standing under a broken light fixture twisting in the wind. "I don't know if making them illegal will do anything to prevent this from happening again.

"But everybody thinks it happens to other people, it doesn't happen to me."

Senate moves closer to treaty approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate negotiators have cleared a major hurdle en route to approval of the U.S.-Soviet treaty banning middle-range nuclear missiles, setting up almost certain approval of the first arms-control treaty to be ratified in 16 years.

The chamber's Democratic and Republican leaders expressed hope that remaining disagreements over conditions to be attached to the accord could be ironed out at meetings today.

"We're not there yet, but we've made a good deal of progress," said Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va.

A key to progress on the treaty was the decision on Wednesday by the leading opponent of the pact, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to drop his delaying tactics. Helms said he did so in the face of a probable vote by the Senate to shut off debate.

"That was the end of it," Helms conceded in a floor speech. "I've had no illusions about defeating this treaty. The American people are beginning to understand that this is a dangerous treaty."

Helms' concession ended more than a week of delay and raised hopes that the accord could be approved in time to be shipped to Moscow so that President Reagan could formally exchange ratification documents with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev at the summit meeting that begins Sunday.

The primary remaining issue did not affect the treaty itself, but the modified conditions under which the Senate would grant its consent.

Democrats sought to attach a condition stipulating that any attempt by a future president to reinterpret the treaty would have to be approved by the Senate in order to become effective.

Backers of the change have said it is an attempt to preserve the Senate's constitutional power of advise and consent on treaties. The debate stems from a dispute with the Reagan administration over its attempt to reinterpret the 1972 Antiballistic Missile Treaty to permit more latitude in developing Reagan's Star Wars missile defense.

That treaty with the Soviet Union was the last arms-control pact to win Senate approval.

The treaty on intermediate-range nuclear forces, which Reagan and Gorbachev signed in Washington on Dec. 8, requires elimination within three years of U.S. and Soviet nuclear missiles with a range of 300 miles to 3,400 miles. It would result in the elimination of 867 U.S. missiles in Europe and elimination of 1,752 Soviet missiles.

While the treaty is regarded as militarily insignificant because it leaves most of both sides' nuclear arsenals intact, it holds potentially great political significance as a model for a follow-up treaty to provide for deep cuts in long-range nuclear missiles.

As leaders wrangled throughout the day Wednesday in an effort to clear remaining procedural hurdles, the Senate approved a pair of relatively mild amendments to the accord and overwhelmingly defeated two others.

On a voice vote, the lawmakers approved a non-binding provision urging negotiators in future talks on reductions in long-range missile arsenals not to give up the U.S. right to maintain stocks of conventionally armed air- and sea-launched cruise missiles.

And the Senate urged the president to keep human rights in the forefront of U.S.-Soviet relations and "insist on sustained and demonstrable human rights progress." That language was added on a voice vote.

Helms was rebuffed in an attempt to add a provision stipulating that if either side provided "materially misleading or false data," the other side would be free to withdraw from the treaty. The amendment failed on a vote of 89-9.

And Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., failed on a 69-28 vote to win an exemption from the ban for conventionally armed cruise missiles. Hollings argued that keeping such missiles in the allied arsenal would help offset Warsaw Pact superiority in conventional forces, but opponents pointed out it would be impossible to verify that the missiles were not nuclear-tipped.

Forms give glimpse into House members' incomes

WASHINGTON (AP) — House members last year took trips to such faraway places as Cyprus and Ireland and as near as the Oprah Winfrey Show in Chicago. They made speeches, toured defense plants and wrote magazine articles. They got gifts of golf sweaters and boxes of chocolates.

These and thousands of other details were listed in the latest round of financial disclosure forms filed by more than 400 members of the House of Representatives and released on Wednesday.

In general, members' incomes towered over the average American's. Most representatives' incomes topped the $100,000 mark last year, with fees from speech-making and article-writing adding substantially to their $89,500 annual salary. A handful reported making under $100,000, while more than a dozen reported assets and income over $1 million.

The median family income in the United States is $31,526.

The forms also offered a glimpse into the workings of Congress.

For example:

— Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Texas, a member of the Appropriations defense subcommittee, reported receiving money for speeches from several defense companies, including Lockheed, Boeing, Rockwell, Northrop, TRW, Aerojet, General Electric, LTV, Singer and McDonnell Douglas.

— Pennsylvania Rep. Bud Shuster, the second-ranking Republican on the House Public Works and Transportation Committee and the senior GOP member of the surface transportation subcommittee, reported receiving air fare from the Outdoor Advertising Association for a trip to Los Angeles. The association also paid him a $2,000 honorarium for a speech.

In 1986, Shuster led a fight on the House floor against taking down billboards on the nation's highways without "just compensation" to the owner. The administrative aide to Shuster, Ann Eppard, said Wednesday that Shuster was not so much defending the outdoor advertising industry as the right to compensation if one's property is seized.

— Rep. E. "Kika" de la Garza, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, received honoraria from a number of food and textile groups, including the National Milk Producers, Chicago Mercantile Exchange, Amstar Sugar Corp., Grocery Manufacturers, Western Cotton Shippers, Monsanto, National Cotton Council and the American Farm Bureau Federation.

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, reported earnings of at least $168,000, although that did not include royalties from his book. Published reports have said that Wright was paid royalties of 55 percent from his book, "Reflections of a Public Man," far above the 10 percent to 15 percent authors normally receive.

Noriega's rejection of plan haunts president at crucial time

By STEWART POWELL
Hearst Washington Bureau

An Analysis

WASHINGTON — The 11th hour demise of a carefully crafted White House plan to oust Panama's Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega threatens to haunt President Reagan for the remainder of his term — and to shape the battle for his successor.

The embarrassing rejection of the accord by Noriega, commander of the Panamanian Defense Forces, came at a particularly sensitive moment for the president.

Administration aides repeatedly hinted on Wednesday that a deal had been struck. But it unraveled with Reagan enroute to Finland to prepare for his Moscow summit with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

The summit, scheduled to begin on Sunday, will be Reagan's fourth with Gorbachev, and aides had hoped it would be the culmination of the Reagan presidency.

But the demise of U.S. efforts to negotiate the removal of Noriega from power because of his reputed ties with drug traffickers immediately showed signs of dominating preparations for the summit, at least at the outset.

Upon his arrival in Helsinki and shortly before meeting Finnish President Mauno Koivisto, Reagan was peppered with questions about the setback in Central America.

"My policy (to remove Noriega) hasn't changed," the president insisted. He discounted suggestions that the development undercut his strength as a negotiator with Gorbachev, saying, "I don't feel weakened."

Back in Washington, an aide on the National Security Council sought to portray the administration's inability to force Noriega from power in the best possible light: "The fact that (negotiations ended) means it is unlikely that there will be any demand for immediate decisions from Moscow on Central America."

The setback, with Noriega rejecting a deal in a final meeting with State Department envoy Michael G. Kozak, forced the administration to abruptly abandon a policy of negotiation that has been pursued for months.

The United States now has to end highly public negotiations with Noriega over terms for his departure, State Department officials conceded, in favor of tedious cooperative efforts with a variety of Central American and Latin American countries.

The laborious process undoubtedly will slow the effort to remove Noriega from power.

Said Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams: "This particular negotiating effort...failed to get him out of power. And so obviously we all need to get together and reflect...and that's the first step."

The end of negotiations, with the United States withdrawing its envoy, assures that administration dealings with Noriega will remain on the front pages of American newspapers through the summer as presidential contenders George Bush and Michael Dukakis battle for their party's nominations.

Bush last week broke with the Reagan administration policy, insisting that if he were president, he would not negotiate with accused drug dealers, such as Noriega, whether on U.S. soil or overseas.

On Wednesday, Bush remained hopeful that Noriega would depart. Campaigning in Lakehurst, N.J., he said: "I'm convinced Noriega will be out of power...We'll have to go back and figure it out."

Still, critics assert that Bush remains potentially tarnished by the affair. They say the vice president served in an administration that, for months, pursued a policy of negotiation with Noriega and then he abandoned that policy as polls showed Americans increasingly opposed.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., touching on likely Democratic themes in the fall, said the collapse of negotiations illustrated the pitfalls of a bad policy.

"This administration negotiates with the darndest people," Cranston said, "Iranian terrorists and Panamanian drug dealers...I think we should have an administration which doesn't negotiate with people like that."

The administration's inability to secure favorable results in the case of Noriega may revive the portrait of incompetence and naivete raised by the Iran-contra affair.

Four raids took place in late April, including one that prompted a U.S. Marine search party inadvertently to fatally wound one of its own.

Democrats blast Reagan over Noriega

Associated Press

Democratic presidential rivals Jesse Jackson and Michael Dukakis met in debate but turned most of their fire on the Reagan administration over dealings with Panama's Manuel Antonio Noriega. Republican George Bush, meanwhile, said the breakdown of talks aimed at dislodging Noriega "doesn't depress me."

All three presidential contenders were campaigning today in states holding primaries on June 7. Bush was in New Jersey, while Dukakis and Jackson were in California.

As the two Democrats debated in San Francisco Wednesday night, Jackson, who released a five-year budget blueprint this week, urged Dukakis to spell out his spending plans.

"The governor is laying out a budget of promises but not a budget of numbers," Jackson said.

Dukakis replied that his experience as governor of Massachusetts has taught him that it was a "serious mistake" to lay out a detailed budget plan so far in advance, because the revenue picture can change drastically.

Jackson also pressed his rival on policy toward South Africa. Dukakis advocates putting pressure on the apartheid regime through economic sanctions; Jackson wants South Africa declared a terrorist state.

But the two found little to differ about when it came to Noriega, and they made certain to bring Bush into it.

Dukakis attacked Bush's call for the death penalty for drug kingpins. In light of the Noriega affair, he said, "I don't know of anything phonier than that kind of policy.

"It's the height of hypocrisy for people in the administration to be advocating the death penalty for drug pushers while they are doing business with Noriega and funneling aid to the Contras through convicted drug dealers," said Dukakis, who opposes the death penalty.

"George Bush must answer, how much did he know about Noriega and drugs, and when?" Jackson said. As for drug traffickers, he said: "Do not deal with them and give them sanctuary and put them on the CIA payroll."

Bush has been treading a fine line on the Noriega affair. He has acknowledged that the controversy was probably partly to blame for his slide in the polls against Dukakis, his likely November opponent.

"We're behind. I'm the underdog. You've seen that in the polls," Bush said at a campaign stop in Lakehurst, N.J., on Wednesday.

The vice president signalled last week that he disagreed with President Reagan's handling of the matter. But he did it discreetly, refusing to even mention Noriega's name.

When Secretary of State George P. Shultz announced Wednesday that talks aimed at getting Noriega out had collapsed and no new ones were planned, Bush responded: "The fact that we haven't solved this doesn't depress me.

"I don't want a bad deal," he said, coming as close as he has yet to publicly criticizing the administration's apparent readiness to drop drug charges as part of a deal to get Noriega out.

"I want a good deal...We'll have to go back and figure it out," he said, expressing optimism that the military leader would eventually go.

Aides said last week that Bush had urged that the negotiations with Noriega be suspended. But on Wednesday, he stressed his unity with Reagan rather than his differences, saying he and the president share the "policy objective of getting Noriega out of power."

Bush was taking the offensive on another controversy, calling for an independent counsel to investigate possible ethics breaches by Democratic House Speaker Jim Wright. The Democrats have made Attorney General Edwin Meese III and his legal woes a campaign issue.

"If they're going to talk about Ed Meese, how about talking about...the speaker?" said Bush. Wright has denied he violated ethics rules.

In another development, Bush's campaign communications director, Peter Teeley, announced he was quitting his post but would stay on with the campaign in some capacity. Teeley said he had not been given sufficient access to be an effective spokesman for the campaign.

Meanwhile, Dukakis and his aides have been sounding more and more confident that the June 7 contests will give the Massachusetts governor the number of delegates needed to nominate.

Dukakis is far ahead of Jackson in the delegate race. According to the latest AP count, he has 1,687 to Jackson's 983, of the 2,081 needed to nominate.

Ambitious health insurance bill clears major legislative hurdle

WASHINGTON (AP) — A catastrophic health insurance bill providing the largest expansion of Medicare in the program's 23-year history has cleared a major legislative hurdle.

The compromise agreed to late Wednesday by a House-Senate conference committee must win final approval from both chambers, but that is a foregone conclusion given the broad support that the basic measure received last year when it cleared the two houses in different versions.

Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen told conference committee members that he will recommend that President Reagan sign the legislation, even though it is considerably more ambitious than the measure proposed by the administration more than a year ago.

The basic framework of the legislation has been in place for months: providing protection for America's 31 million Medicare recipients against runaway hospital and prescription drug bills accumulated during acute illnesses. But House and Senate negotiators have worked since February to iron out the details.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, whose Finance Committee shaped the Senate bill, called the compromise "a landmark piece of legislation...that will bring peace of mind to millions."

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee as well as the conference committee, praised Bowen for his protracted role in overcoming some objections within the administration to win presidential support for the Medicare expansion.

"You are the linchpin who launched us on this crusade," Rostenkowski told Bowen, a physician and former two-term governor of Indiana whose first wife died after a long battle against cancer.

Bowen made catastrophic health legislation his top priority when he was appointed to head the Health and Human Services Department a little more than two years ago and was there when the final compromise was struck.

In fact, it was a surprise Bowen maneuver — dropping his opposition to a respite care provision for homebound beneficaries — that removed the last stumbling block to compromise.

Bentsen couldn't believe his ears when Bowen offered the compromise.

"That's a hell of a deal," the Texan exclaimed. Later, he told Bowen: "You're timing was excellent. You are a great negotiator."

The big knot that had kept the legislation tied up was loosened last week when a conference committee task force agreed on provisions of a historic outpatient prescription drug benefit.

The compromise legislation provides for Medicare coverage for hospital stays lasting up to 364 days; a first-day deductible still will be charged. Medicare now pays full hospital bills for only 59 days a year.

Regarding doctor bills, Medicare now pays no more than 80 percent of approved charges, no matter how high they run. Under the catastrophic health provision, Medicare will pay 100 percent of allowable fees after an individual has incurred $1,320 to $1,400 in out-of-pocket expenses.

The exact level of that deductible has yet to be determined, along with several other details such as the precise additional premiums that will be assessed to pay for the new program.

As for prescription drugs, Medicare now covers just a handful of particularly expensive drugs, such as anti-rejection medication for organ transplant patients.

Under the expansion, Medicare will pay half of drug costs in 1991 after a $600 deductible is met, with the government share rising to 60 percent in 1992 and 80 percent in 1993. However, the deductible is expected to rise each year to keep pace with rising drug costs.

The drug benefit, and all other additional benefits are to be paid for by additional charges to Medicare enrollees. The charges will be a blend of flat monthly premium increases deducted from Social Security checks and an additional, sliding-scale supplemental premium that will be charged to the estimated 40 percent of the elderly with enough income to make them subject to federal income taxes.

Catholic school educators study outside programs

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Catholic educators, still facing a retreat in parochial school enrollments, are looking toward a future in which religious education programs outside school loom even larger.

Indeed, at a week-long symposium on the future of Catholic education that ends today, most of the discussion centered on programs that reach out to children and adults outside the traditional school structure.

There was virtually no debate at the Catholic Education Futures Project sessions about how to stem the erosion of parochial schools, which lost 110 more schools and 103,000 students last year alone. There are now 2.6 million students in 8,992 Catholic schools, down from a peak of 5.6 million in more than 13,000 schools in 1964.

Even before adjourning, the nearly 300 educators at the conference had decided against trying to finish writing a "vision statement" on their church's educational mission for the next century.

Instead, they planned to leave only with a list of what most felt were the most important elements of Catholic education. The actual writing of the final document was left for a later date to representatives of the 22 church groups at the meeting.

Only a quarter of the educators at the symposium are involved in parochial schools. Others work with young adults, converts, college students and Catholic children from public school.

Historically, the public school child who attended weekly religion classes "was considered a second class citizen," said Bishop James Malone of Youngstown.

But now, archdioceses around the country are installing paid, full-time directors of religious education, like Janet Kayser, a laywoman who runs the programs for St. Thomas Parish in Crystal Lake, Ill.

"When the topic of Catholic education comes up, there's too much emphasis in thinking it means only schools," said Kayser, who has 650 students in her programs.

In some places, she said, "there has been a real injustice in balancing" between the needs of the school and the religious education program.

The Rev. Thomas Lynch, pastor of St. James Church in Bridgeport, Conn., said only 280 of the 2,900 families in his parish send children to the parochial school, but the school, with a $530,000 budget, consumes half the parish revenues.

Lynch is trying to rename the school the St. James Center for Religious Formation to stress some of his parish's prayer classes, scripture study and other educational activities, but he admits his parishioners "get nervous" about such a change.

Lynch said Catholic schools must emphasize the teaching of faith "just as much as geography, math or anything else." There is no reason to operate a parochial school that "smells like and looks like the public school except for maybe a course in religion and an amorphous Catholic environment," he said.

Twenty-four jurors chosen to serve in Mecham trial

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Evan Mecham's defense attorney says he's surprised that lawyers were able to find enough acceptable jurors for the ousted governor's criminal trial.

A 24-member panel was made final Wednesday after two days of juror questioning in Maricopa County Superior Court. This afternoon, prosecution and defense lawyers were to eliminate six members each to assemble the final eight-member jury with four alternates.

Opening statements were scheduled for June 2 in the trial of the former governor and his brother, Willard, on charges of concealing a $350,000 campaign loan.

Mecham defense lawyer Michael Scott said he was surprised that enough acceptable panelists were found because of the extensive publicity surrounding the case.

"I really didn't know what to expect," Scott said.

The jurors and alternates are to be sworn in Friday, Superior Court Judge Michael Dann ruled.

Mecham could face up to 22 years in prison if convicted of all six felony counts of perjury, willful concealment and filing false documents. Willard Mecham, who was his brother's 1986 campaign treasurer, faces three similar counts and up to 9½ years in prison if convicted.

The former Republican governor was removed from office April 4 when the Senate convicted him on two unrelated impeachment counts.

Maine canner picks business in weeds

AP Laserphoto

Adrian R. Wells takes a recent stroll between rows of cultivated dandelions in Wilton, Maine.

WILTON, Maine (AP) — Let the rest of the country attack the stubborn weed with trowels and poisons. Adrian R. Wells prefers to grow his dandelions by the acre, then put them in cans so people can eat them.

Wells, who owns a canning company that has been in the family for four generations, plans to ship 1,000 cases of dandelion greens this year from his little cannery in the western Maine foothills.

Wells, who hates to see a thriving dandelion go to waste, talks about the plant with fondness, respect and knowledge. The roots, he explains, can be made into herbal tea; the bright, yellow blossoms can be pickled or made into wine and jelly; the leaves are excellent cooked or served fresh in salads.

"And the stem, you use that to siphon gas out of someone's car," Wells deadpans. He admits he has grown weary of offers of dandelions from homeowners plagued by the hearty, prolific weeds.

Wells sees dandelions' tendency to grow back after being snipped, a trait that frustrates gardeners, as another plus. Five days after the last batch of foot-high dandelions was harvested, new shoots appeared.

Wells' W.S. Wells and Son cannery was founded 102 years ago by his grandfather, Walter Scott Wells. The barn-size factory also packages beans and cans beet greens and a vegetative delicacy known as fiddleheads.

Fiddleheads, named for their deep-green stems that are gracefully curled a couple of inches from the ground before they sprout into ostrich ferns in swampy, northern woodlands in late spring, make up the bulk of the products bearing Wells' Belle of Maine label. His only competition comes from canners in Canada, where fiddleheads also are popular.

While fiddleheads are best known to New Englanders, who gather them with ritualistic zeal in late spring, they have a few scattered devotees as far away as California. Wells, 52, also ships fiddleheads to fashionable restaurants in New York and Philadelphia, "and I do a whale of a business in Boston."

The Four Seasons restaurant in New York serves 300 pounds of fresh fiddleheads a week in the spring, and features a soft shell crab and fiddlehead combination as one of its "signature dishes," said purchaser Bob Menge.

"It's a unique type of vegetable — I don't even know if you call it a vegetable," said Menge. "It's got a wonderful flavor to me, sort of between a string bean and asparagus."

Wells loves to eat fiddleheads, even though he can't quite pin down what gives them appeal.

"There isn't that much flavor to a fiddlehead," said Wells, who likes them salted and slathered with butter or served in one of his wife's fiddlehead quiches. "To me, it tastes like a fiddlehead."

Wells' company also pickles fiddleheads and dandelions.

The harvest is now in full swing. While Wells cultivates and harvests the monstrous dandelions that grow in neat rows on his land, he hires up to 200 pickers, from children to a woman in her 70s, to gather the young ferns from secret patches all over Maine, and in parts of Vermont and New York.

Wells compared fiddlehead pickers to sport fishermen. "When they find a good spot, they keep it a secret."

This season, Wells expects to can at least 1,200 cases plus ship 15 tons of fresh fiddleheads to market. As the canning season peaked in late May, some cannery workers had been on the job for nearly 20 straight days.

Pat Stanley, who trims the stems and cleans a brown, flaky skin from fiddleheads before they are washed, blanched and canned, said she has been working "pretty near seven days a week."

Adrian R. Wells Jr., the 22-year-old manager of the plant and the fourth generation of the family of canners, said he had just finished working 22 straight 14-hour days when his wife gave birth to their first son.

"I'm tired as hell," he said as he loaded armfuls of fiddleheads into a bin for cleaning.

NATION IN BRIEF

Passenger jets come close to mid-air collision

WASHINGTON (AP) — Investigators are trying to determine why two jetliners flying in opposite directions with 286 people on board were assigned the same altitude, bringing them within 300 feet of colliding head-on over the ocean north of Puerto Rico.

The Federal Aviation Administration confirmed the Monday evening incident, which involved a Pan American World Airways Airbus-300 and an American Airlines Boeing 727.

Both pilots said in near-collision reports that they had no time to take evasive action as the two aircraft passed wing tip to wing tip in clear weather about 550 miles north of Puerto Rico in the so-called Bermuda Triangle.

The triangle is a region in the Atlantic Ocean where ships and aircraft are reputed to have disappeared since the 1940s.

The jets both were believed to be cruising at better than 500 miles an hour with a closing speed of more than 1,000 miles an hour. Neither pilot reported seeing the aircraft until they were about to pass each other.

Mechanic kills himself

DENVER (AP) — A flight mechanic who stole a private jet and killed himself after a 1,600-mile joyride was "upbeat" until the moment his radio went silent, says the pilot who talked him through a safe landing.

"I was shocked," said Bob Cunningham, who helped his former coworker, Mike Christiansen, 24, land the plane at Stapleton International Airport on Wednesday. "The thing that stays in my mind is that he did take his life after all that."

Within minutes of the relatively routine landing, police, FBI agents and emergency crew members who approached the twin-engine Learjet 36a found Christiansen dead at the controls of a gunshot wound.

"As the crash crew and law enforcement personnel approached, he was ordered to lock his brakes," said Stapleton spokesman Richard Boulware. "They heard a noise and when they looked in the cockpit, they found him dead. Things happened really fast."

Swaggart says he's healed

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Television evangelist Jimmy Swaggart says he has been through a "struggle so intense I despaired of my life and prayed for God to take it."

The Pentecostal preacher who heads the Baton Rouge-based Jimmy Swaggart World Ministries spoke to a larger-than-normal crowd of about 1,500 people who showed up Wednesday night for Bible study at the Family Worship Center.

His sermon was animated and loud, and he walked into the crowd, touching people, hugging children and shaking hands.

"The bondage of sin can be broken instantly by the power of God," Swaggart said. "You're looking at a healed man. Glory!"

Swaggart returned to the pulpit after a three-month hiatus from preaching that began after he tearfully confessed in church Feb. 21 to a "moral failure." He was defrocked by the Assemblies of God church after an admitted prostitute claimed liasions with him.

Swaggart said Wednesday night that although many people were trying to destroy him, he is healed of all his problems, sins and wounds.

Lingerie thief fined $500

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — A man accused of tricking 50 women into giving him their underwear has been fined $500 and ordered to undergo psychiatric treatment.

"I wasn't like this before," David Sanders, 38, told Circuit Judge Joe B. McDade at sentencing Tuesday.

Sanders had pleaded guilty to two counts of misdemeanor theft. The judge ordered a year's probation as well as the fine and counseling.

Sanders telephoned the women and said he was going to use the underwear to play a practical joke on their boyfriends or husbands by dressing an inflatable doll in the lingerie, said Verne Dentino, assistant Peoria County state's attorney.

The women agreed to leave their lingerie in brown bags outside an apartment building where Sanders picked them up.

Incendiary device found

BOSTON (AP) — Police today removed what appeared to be an incendiary device from a Department of Health and Human Services office down the hall from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's at a federal building downtown, authorities said.

The Massachusetts Democrat was in Washington at the time, said a spokesman at his U.S. Capitol office.

Bomb squad officers took the device to Moon Island in Boston Harbor for possible detonation, said police spokeswoman Jill Reilly.

British firm banking on extended maternity leave to keep workers

By MAGGIE JACKSON

LONDON (AP) — Eight years ago, Britain's largest bank discovered it was being hurt because more and more women managers were leaving to have babies and not coming back.

That's when National Westminster Bank became the first of a number of British institutions to take a radical step. It offered maternity leaves for as long as five years.

Open mainly to young executives, NatWest's pioneering "career breaks" program also is open to men, but the emphasis is on women and could help revolutionize Britain's tradition-bound working world as a labor shortage looms as the economy soars.

The programs have been criticized, however, as too limited.

"Career break programs are very much geared to managerial and professional occupations," said Carole Truman, a research fellow and author of a study of career breaks.

"They're still very few and far between, but it may have opened the door to enabling people to take a more flexible approach to work."

Zeena Gooch, a 30-year-old NatWest assistant manager who recently returned from five years off, says that without the program she may never have come back.

"You lose your confidence when you're away...and you're out of touch," she said.

Companies offering career breaks include several other banks, as well as Esso UK PLC, a computer company, and six government ministries.

But overall, Britain is behind others on national leave programs, childcare facilities and flexible working hors.

"In terms of a range of options...we're lagging far behind other European countries," said Bronwen Cohen, head of policy at the government-funded but independent Equal Opportunities Commission.

Under a 1976 law, only about half of working women qualify for maternity leave, Ms. Cohen said in an interview.

Only women who have worked at least 16 hours a week for the same employer for two years, or at least 8 hours a week for five years, can get their jobs back after 40 weeks off. The government is considering raising the limit to 20 hours a week.

In France most pregnant workers get maternity breaks for as long as two years and in Spain three years, Ms. Cohen said. The European Economic Community is studying a three-month parental leave as a legal minimum for all 12 member nations. Britain is an EEC member.

The U.S. Congress is considering legislation to create a national 25-week leave. Only 20 to 25 U.S. states have legal maternity leaves, averaging two months, according to the Congressional Committee on Women's Issues.

When British women quit their jobs to have children, most don't return to the same company, studies show.

The Equal Opportunities Commission found 20 percent of non-working mothers stayed home because they wanted to care for their children, but two-thirds said they quit working for lack of childcare or flexible work hours.

When they return to work, usually after five years, they often must take lower-paying, lower-status or part-time jobs, Ms. Truman said in an interview.

Ms. Gooch said that without her bank's program, "I would have had to start again or come back as a cashier."

Ozone depletion sending a warning

The world has new reason to worry about the upper atmosphere. The hole in the ozone layer above the South Pole may have a mate above the North Pole. Now both the top and the bottom of the fragile Blue Planet may be flashing warning signals to the human species.

An investigation at the South Pole has narrowed the suspects in this ozone-depletion caper to the likely culprit: a group of chemicals called chlorofluorocarbons, compounds that did not exist until the 1920s, when humans concocted them. In truth, they are wonder chemicals: Air conditioners and refrigerators rely on their cooling power, and half the nation's new houses rely on their insulating capacity. The compounds serve as ingredients in foam cushions and in the plastic foam cartons for fast foods. And as a liquid, the chemicals clean microchips.

But the versatile chemicals also work their way up to the stratosphere, where they attack the ozone shield which keeps much of the sun's harmful ultraviolet rays from reaching the planet's surface. Without the shield, skin cancers and cataracts would soar dramatically, and other untold havoc would befall life forms.

True, the North Pole finding is tentative; scientists need to verify that the crater of depleted ozone exists and is not merely from natural causes. But if it does, the ramifications are awesome. W.F.J. Evans, the Canadian researcher who made the tentative finding, says both holes could be serving as sinks, down which ozone over the entire planet flows into non-existence.

Some positive steps have been taken in an effort to avert catastrophe. Thirty-one nations, including the United States, have signed a treaty to cut down on the production of chlorofluorocarbons. The leading CFC manufacturer, the Du Pont Co., has even agreed to cut back at a much faster rate than the treaty requires. The treaty wants a 30 percent reduction by 1998; Du Pont is aiming for a 95 percent reduction by the year 2000. That's a laudable stance on Du Pont's part.

But questions remain. Will the cutbacks come fast enough? Can industry come up with suitable substitutes for key uses of CFC in time?

In any event, more steps need to be taken. For one, the countries must ratify the treaty; so far the United States has done so, but most others have not. For another, the timetable for the cutbacks must be speeded up. And other companies should follow Du Pont's lead.

A panel of scientists warned earlier this year that the ozone layer was thinning at a much faster rate than expected. Making those warning lights stop flashing apparently is critical to the future of the world. Mankind must attempt to do exactly that.

Crusade would make suing difficult

WASHINGTON — America's business barons have flip-flopped in their crusade to make it harder for consumers to sue them over unsafe products.

Jack Anderson

For years, the manufacturers have trotted out the high cost of liability insurance as exhibit "A" in their case to change the way courts judge product-liability lawsuits.

Now some members of Congress want to call their bluff by finding out whether insurance rates would shrink if it were harder to sue manufacturers. Suddenly, the corporate types aren't so eager to talk about insurance.

Congress has watched million-dollar CEOs pout because their liability insurance premiums doubled and tripled. All this because consumers dared to take the companies to court when they were maimed or otherwise harmed by a faulty product.

The manufacturers grinned from ear to ear last year after Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., took their whining to heart. Dingell proposed the Uniform Product Liability Act of 1987 and began an aggressive campaign to push the law through his Energy and Commerce Committee. Not one consumer group backed the bill then. Not one consumer group we could find backs the bill now.

Big business wants a bill that will make it so difficult for consumers to sue that they won't even bother climbing the courthouse steps. That bill is still being debated in Dingell's committee.

But this week, some clever congressional upstarts are expected to gum up the works. These congressmen want to commission a study of how the new law will affect insurance rates. Reps. Al Swift, D-Wash., Edward Markey, D-Mass., and Thomas Tauke, R-Iowa, are scheduled this week to propose an amendment to Dingell's bill that would require the study of insurance rates.

We can't predict the outcome of such a study, but judging from the reaction of big business, it doesn't bode well for the argument that changes in product liability laws will poke a hole in ballooning insurance rates.

In a mad dash to pre-empt the study, four key business organizations co-signed a letter to several congressmen dated May 10 in which they did some frantic backpeddling: "Our objective in seeking enactment of (the bill) is NOT to obtain an automatic 'reduction' in insurance rates and premiums," says the letter, obtained by our associate Stewart Harris.

The letter came from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the Business Roundtable, the National Association of Manufacturers and the Product Liability Alliance.

"As consumers of commercial liability insurance, we believe that federal insurance-data collection is both unnecessary and counter-productive to the objective of this legislation," the letter continues.

It sounds like they don't want to be bothered by the facts. Yet officials with these business groups were eager to talk about rising insurance rates last year in hearings on the need for product-liability reform.

The U.S. Public Interest Research Group pored over hundreds of pages of testimony and found several statements by executives who blamed insurance costs when they lobbied for the bill.

The flip-flop happened so quickly that the business lobby in Washington, D.C., hasn't had time to notify the troops in middle America. Congressional aides tell us they are still receiving mail from small-business people who say the bill will save them from high insurance premiums. The lobbyists themselves used that argument to sway small-business people into joining the crusade for product-liability reform.

At its best, Dingell's bill irons out the differences in product-liability laws from state to state. But consumer advocates say it goes overboard to protect companies from lawsuits. For example, the bill would virtually let manufacturers off the hook if they used the best technology available at the time the product was made. Another provision makes drug companies immune from punitive damages if the Food and Drug Administration approved their products.

MAKE-BELIEVE MOZZARELLA — A battle is brewing in Washington over the labels on frozen pizza — should they, or should they not announce in big, bold letters if the cheese isn't the real McCoy?

Consumer advocates argue that the typical pizza buyer assumes the cheese on a frozen supermarket pizza is real. But some manufacturers use imitation cheese mixed with real cheese.

The Food and Drug Administration thinks the buyer has a right to know if the cheese is fake and that the $15-million pizza industry should announce imitation ingredients in large print. But the Department of Agriculture figures that as long as the cheese is 75-percent real, a listing about imitation cheese belongs in the fine print along with the other ingredients.

The General Accounting Office recently investigated the debate over fake cheese and pronounced it typical of the departmental squabbling that has led to inconsistent food-labeling policies. "The result is uncertain consumers and buying decisions that send confused signals back to the industry," the GAO said.

MINI-EDITORIAL — It is one thing to memorialize the spot where Abraham Lincoln was killed. It is another thing altogether to turn the Texas School Book Depository into a tourist attraction. Dallas is doing just that, building an elevator and charging admission to take tourists to the window where Lee Harvey Oswald stood to murder John F. Kennedy. They've dressed it up as an important historical museum, but deep down, the idea is macabre. Lincoln's death is history, but Kennedy's death is still a painful memory. Someday it may be all right to sell tickets, but not now.

Don't derail charity

Despite periodic Congressional efforts to close them, there are still a number of loopholes through which charitable organizations can run ordinary, for-profit businesses without paying federal taxes on the proceeds. And while the amount of lost federal revenue is not great, the unfair competition for other businesses that do have to pay taxes can be serious indeed.

Since 1950, Congress has required taxes to be paid if a non-profit organization "actively" runs a business "unrelated" to its charitable purpose. But that leaves a lot of room for fudging; charities now sell discount airline tickets, mail-order clothing and so on, claiming that that's "related" to their artistic or educational purposes. They also avoid taxes by making their income from unrelated businesses "passive" rather than "active" — as when a university, for instance, arranges things so it doesn't run the oil company it owns but merely accepts all its profits (untaxed) in the form of dividends. That loophole was only partially closed in a 1969 tax reform.

Now that Congress is once again considering these problems, it's being urged by some to forgo the piecemeal approach that seems always to leave another opening for tax avoidance and instead simply require all charities to divest themselves of profit-making subsidiaries and to pay taxes on all profit-making activities. But clean as that solution might sound, the protests of the non-profit organizations should be heeded.

The kind of blanket tax rules that would offer the fewest opportunities for abuse also would cut deepest into the funding for activities that all sides say they want to promote. Besides, there are real public advantages to a finer-tuned approach — to allowing, for instance, a non-profit hospital to own a profit-making pharmacy if it's in a rural area where no other pharmacy would ever be established.

It is thus good that Congress is trying to craft legislation that distinguishes troubling tax abuses from acceptable fund-raising, and which closes the charities' loopholes only to the extent required in fairness to their business competitors. It's also welcome that the Reagan administration, after toying with the idea of broad prohibitions, recently announced its support for Congress' more detailed approach. This will undoubtedly be messier, but it also will be better than either ignoring clear abuses or indiscriminately slashing the charities' financial lifeline.

Games officials taking sport out of sports!

Daddy, can we watch baseball on TV?"

"That's a good idea. You'll learn fairness and sportsmanship from it."

Art Buchwald

"Daddy, why is the manager jumping up and down and waving his arms in front of the home plate?"

"Because he thought his man was safe when the umpire called him out. The manager is very angry, and well he might be."

"Look, Daddy, the manager is butting the umpire in the stomach with his head. Is he allowed to do that?"

"The manager was provoked, and while you're not supposed to butt an umpire, you just can't stand there when he calls one of your players out at home plate. Umpires have been getting away with murder lately, and somebody has to say to them, 'Enough is enough. If you can't call a game right, you have to expect to get hurt.' "

"Will the official change his mind after he's taken so much punishment?"

"No. And that makes the manager hopping mad. It doesn't matter what kind of case he makes, the ump will just stand there and shake his head. That is why for a baseball manager life is so unfair."

"Why do they have umpires if they're always getting baseball managers mad at them?" "It's an old tradition and no one wants to be the first to break with it. Most fans hate officials and if they had their druthers, they would keep them out of the ball park."

"Why is the umpire pointing toward the tunnel?"

"Because he's kicking the manager out of the game for ramming him in the stomach. Since umpires wear shiny black suits they think they can send managers to the showers any time they feel like it."

"The manager doesn't seem to want to go."

"Of course, he doesn't. No one likes to be sent to the locker room in the middle of a game. But do you think the ump cares? Fuhgeddaboudit. An official will throw you out of the game these days for nothing more than calling him an illegitimate child."

"Why doesn't the umpire allow the manager to explain his side of the story?"

"Well, if the manager told his side of the story, the umpire might have to reverse himself in front of everyone in the park. It would be a public humiliation. Also, umpires hate managers because they make more money.

"Baseball is not the only sport being ruined by officials. Look at hockey. You can't even hit someone in the stands with a hockey stick without a referee making a federal case out of it. And basketball is no better. All a coach has to do is throw a chair across a basketball court at the opposition's cheerleaders and some stuffed-shirt referee will be all over him for unsportsmanlike conduct.

"Tennis used to be a gentlemen's game until every linesman started picking on John McEnroe for no reason at all. Now they won't even let him open his trap without fining him. That's what's wrong with sports. No one is free to do what he wants any more."

"Do you think this baseball game will ever start again?"

"It's hard to tell. I believe the manager is demanding an apology, and that could take a little time."

"The fans look like they are on the manager's side."

"Why shouldn't they be? The umpire is lucky they haven't lynched him yet. Mark my words, the officials are trying to gain control of the game so they can appear in TV commercials. It's no wonder the managers feel the cards are stacked against them. Any umpire can send a manager to the showers, while the only defense the poor, helpless baseball managers have is to kick sand in the umpire's face."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, May 26, the 147th day of 1988. There are 219 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 26, 1868, the Senate impeachment trial of President Andrew Johnson ended with his acquittal as 35 senators voted guilty and 19 not guilty on each of the charges against him, falling one vote short of a required two-thirds majority.

On this date:

In 1521, Martin Luther was banned by the Edict of Worms because of his religious beliefs and writings.

In 1805, Napoleon Bonaparte was crowned king of Italy.

In 1865, arrangements were made in New Orleans for the surrender of Confederate forces west of the Mississippi.

In 1907, actor John Wayne was born Marion Michael Morrison in Winterset, Iowa.

In 1913, Actors' Equity Association, the actors union, was organized.

In 1940, the evacuation of Allied troops from Dunkirk, France, began.

Five years ago: President Reagan condemned the killing the day before of U.S. naval officer Albert Schaufelberger in El Salvador, but said the death would not change U.S. policy toward that country.

One year ago: Former PTL leader Jim Bakker told ABC's "Nightline" he had made a "terrible mistake" in turning control of the ministry over to the Rev. Jerry Falwell, and accused Falwell of misleading him.

Today's birthdays: Actor Robert Morley is 80. Actor Peter Cushing is 75. Singer Peggy Lee is 68. Actor James Arness is 65. Sportscaster Brent Musberger is 49. Opera singer Teresa Stratas is 49. Singer Stevie Nicks is 40. Actor Philip Michael Thomas is 39. Country singer Hank Williams Jr. is 39. Former astronaut Sally K. Ride is 37. Actress Genie Francis is 26.

Thought for today: "It's incredible how much intelligence is used in this world to prove nonsense." — Friedrich Hebbel, German author and dramatist (1813-1863).

GEORGE F. WILL

Pace of summitry follows policy unraveling

WASHINGTON — Since 1917, the Soviet Union has been a nation in which, in Orwell's words, yesterday's weather could be changed by decree. (And was, as a way of explaining agricultural failures without reference to communism.) Now fundamental change is said to be afoot. But the criterion of such change should be an altered — reduced — status of the Communist Party. No such alteration is apparent.

George F. Will

In fact, Mikhail Gorbachev is affirming the party's monopoly on interpretation by his use of today's two talismanic words. "Perestroika" (restructuring) means what the party says it means, and "glasnost" (openness) means freedom to criticize critics of perestroika. This, as French scholar Alain Besancon notes, is the meaning of Gorbachev's dictum that "criticism must be conducted in the spirit of the party."

On this summit eve, the crucial question is not "What does Gorbachev want to do to the Soviet Union?" but "What does he want to do with the Soviet Union?" Of course he wants a more productive, efficient economy. But to what end, and at what cost to discipline imposed from above?

Suppose the Soviet aim is unchanged. Suppose it aims to detach Germany from NATO in order to detach Western Europe from the United States in order to achieve victory in the irrepressible conflict between two irreconcilable social systems. Would Gorbachev's behavior be different than it is?

Would he not encourage the West, with its technological virtuosity, to relax? Would he not encourage this by deemphasizing peripheral objectives, such as Afghanistan, and encouraging, on ostensibly moral grounds, the shift of military competition from nuclear weapons to conventional forces? The general stigmatization of nuclear weapons, in which President Reagan has participated, leads to the prospect of conventional war fought in Germany.

Besancon argues that the recent re-orientation of Soviet military doctrine toward non-nuclear forces coincides with a longstanding predilection among some Communist theorists. They argue that nuclear weapons distort the working of the laws of history that govern changes in the correlation of forces.

The triumph of communism is supposed to come through competition and conflict, the outcome of which is to be determined by broad attributes of rival social systems, attributes that determine their abilities to marshall forces. But nuclear weapons enable any country possessing them to resist intimidation, destabilization and conquest and to exercise influence disproportionate to its "real" social weight.

Gorbachev's genius is in orienting Soviet policy, in pursuit of unchanged aims, toward the exploitation of what Besancon calls "spontaneous Western tendencies." One of which is wishful thinking, a tendency of Ronald Reagan when dealing with domestic (remember the promise of self-financing tax cuts?) as well as foreign policy.

Reagan is the ninth U.S. President to meet with a Soviet leader. He is doing so for the fourth time. Remember four years ago when Walter Mondale labored to make much of the fact that Reagan was the first President since Franklin Roosevelt to go through a term without meeting the Soviet leader? Four years ago many people considered Reagan a keeper of the Cold War flame. Time flies.

Seven and a half years ago Soviet Ambassador Dobrynin — now advising Gorbachev in Moscow — welcomed the Reagan administration as, potentially, a reprise of the last conservative Republican administration, that of Richard Nixon, the architect of detente. Reagan's administration has fulfilled that potential.

By making arms control every bit as much the "centerpiece" (President Carter's word) of U.S.-Soviet relations as it was under Nixon, Ford and Carter, the Reagan administration generated the essence of detente — the soothing thought that the Soviet Union is a normal state seeking a modus vivendi. This led, inevitably, to the two emblematic events of the late Reagan era: the collapse of the contras and the unleashing of the Commerce Department to do business-better-than-usual with Moscow.

The pace of summitry — four summits in two and half years — is not unrelated to the unraveling of what was once thought to be Reagan's foreign policy.

'Wildflower man' a maverick who made most of life

By RICK SMITH

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — Every spring, when wildflowers bloom along the roadsides and in fallow fields, I think about him.

He was one you never forget: An individual. A maverick. A tall, skinny, scrappy, four-star, dyed-in-the-wool, white-bearded, capital C Character.

I met Carroll Abbott only once, eight years ago come June.

I never forgot the conversation we had, sitting next to the swimming pool at the now-gone Villa Capri Motel in Austin.

He spoke easily, freely. He had spent his life as a writer, a talker, working first as a newspaper man, later as a public relations man and political consultant for Texas politicians such as Preston Smith and John Connally.

He was 53 then, and didn't mention that he already was battling the cancer that would eventually kill him.

Years later, ravaged and nearly bald from radiation therapy, he would tell another reporter: "My breath is short; my time is short; my hair is short."

As I look back over my notes, I read between the lines about his concern with death and unfinished business.

But on that afternoon, as he soaked up sun and sipped good Schlitz beer, he didn't talk death. He talked life. He talked wildflowers.

For the finale of his career, Abbott championed the Texas wildflowers. He established a wildflower sanctuary at his Kerrville home and regularly traveled to Washington, D.C., Austin, anywhere he was needed to testify on proposals to protect endangered plants.

"THE WILDFLOWER Man," people called him.

Or maybe they meant the "wild, flower man."

You decide.

In bits and pieces, from a June long ago, I give you the sometimes contradictory, cantankerous, always wonderful Carroll Abbott:

— "I like what I'm doing and I'm doing it without apology. I'll bet that you couldn't take 10 so-called successful businessmen — not in Austin, anyway — and have them answer, yes to: 1. Do you like what you're doing? 2. Do you feel comfortable in what you're doing? And third, do you really feel like you're doing something?

"I can say yes to all of those."

— "I'm aware. And I've found it's damn near overpowering what I can do. It's perplexing to me that people chose to live in ruts of their own making."

— "You're not responsible for anyone else but you. If you screw this one up, no one is responsible but you. Be you all the time and forget about the world."

— "Don't do good. Do yourself. Very few people can say that."

— "When you go into the closet of your mind — yourself — and start rambling around, there's no one there but you.

"You sit down with those dreams dreamed, dreams lost and dreams yet to be dreamed and say, 'God almighty! I don't have enough years to do all that! So why am I worried about what others think?' "

— "GOODNESS is today."

—"I was so beat up with the mores of life and social customs that I went emotionally bankrupt. Except I really did believe I was something. Not something good. Not something great. Not something extra special. But that I was something. And I survived.

— "I'm a survivor. Turn me upside down naked in Philadelphia and I would make out. I got street smarts, Indian blood, natural cunning and 45 inches of calluses from being hurt. There's not a place you could take me where I would not react successfully. But it might take time."

— "I want nothing more than the freedom to be able to do what it is in me already to do. Nothing more than that."

— "I've been in jail. I've done hard time. I wouldn't want that to happen to anyone else. And I'm not really delighted that it happened to me. But it did. It's senseless to run away from that. It's also senseless to say that's the total account of me."

— "I'm not sure I would greet fame, were it a person, with open arms."

— "I've come a long ways but sideways."

— "I don't think age is useful except on funeral notices."

— "If you set out to make a million dollars, I hope you don't. I think it would be very cumbersome."

— "I like living. I'd like to live as long as I can. I would like to contribute as long as I can. I think that's what makes life worthwhile. We need to contribute, not accumulate achievements."

— "I HAVEN'T accomplished what I've set out to do, but I have made the public aware of the need to save the wildflower. Now a bunch of people are working on it.

"I'm one stallion standing up and snorting and snarling and saying, 'OK, what we ought to do is save the wildflowers of Texas.' Now people really do know about the need, but, better, they know how to go about it. That was my accomplishment."

Latin American school enrollment up since 1950

Enrollment in primary and secondary schools in all Latin American countries has increased dramatically since 1950, says the Inter-American Development Bank.

Combined enrollment jumped 6.8 times between 1950 and 1985, from 13 million to 89 million. This, while the population aged 6 to 18 increased from 46 to 117 million.

'Little Colonel' marches her way through life

By RUTH RENDON

Hobby

HOUSTON (AP) — Oveta Culp Hobby — the "Little Colonel" — used to make cabinet-level decisions in Washington, where she would zip around town in her government-issue powder blue Cadillac. Now, more than 40 years later, the 5-foot-4 woman wields a quieter form of clout as a giant in the communications industry.

At 83, the former cabinet member and organizer of the 200,000-member Women's Army Corps could be content to sit back and reflect on her accomplishments as a pioneer in helping women attain equality.

But Mrs. Hobby sits instead as chairwoman of the executive committee of H&C Communications, the company that has evolved since 1932 when she and her husband, former Texas Gov. William P. Hobby Sr., took over The Houston Post.

The success of the company, along with the sale of The Post in 1983, put Mrs. Hobby high on the Forbes Magazine list as one of the 400 richest people in America. Her assets, listed at $800 million, are double those listed in 1985 and make her the richest woman in Texas.

Mrs. Hobby lives by herself in her Houston apartment, spending most of her day reading, says her son, Texas Lt. Gov. William P. Hobby Jr.

She rarely goes out. When she does, she needs the assistance of a cane to walk.

"SHE'S ALWAYS been interested in art and has had a fine collection," most of which she has given to the Museum of Fine Art in Houston, her son says. She also has a keen interest in Rice University, to which the Hobby Foundation regularly contributes.

Mrs. Hobby, who declined repeated requests for interviews, once said competing in careers mostly dominated by men was the easiest thing in the world.

"All you have to do is just be equal," she said. "And don't go into whatever you're doing with a chip on your shoulder. I've always found that if you're prepared and if you go in on a specific mission, you'll generally get a hearing. You may get help and you may not. But you do get a hearing. And that's really all you can ask for, isn't it?"

Said Ed Hunter, a former managing editor for The Post, "As far as equality, she was an early pioneer. She felt very strongly about it."

Oveta Culp, named for a character in a romance novel, was born Jan. 19, 1905, the same date her two children would later be born. She was the second child of seven children born in Killeen to Isaac Culp and Emma Hoover Culp.

Her love for politics started as a teen-ager when she learned to prepare legal briefs for her attorney father. At 14, she followed him to the state Legislature in Austin and returned with him each time he was re-elected.

In 1926, at age 21, she was appointed parliamentarian of the Texas House of Representatives and later wrote "Mr. Chairman," an authoritative textbook on parliamentary law.

SHE SUFFERED her first and only political defeat in 1930 when she ran for the Legislature from Harris County.

When she met her future husband, he had already served as a Democratic governor of Texas.

Times, however, were not good.

His first wife had died, an insurance company he owned had failed and although he was president of The Post, he was on the verge of bankruptcy.

"It would have been very easy for Will to have taken bankruptcy," Mrs. Hobby said. "But we weren't going to do that."

The two married Feb. 23, 1931. He was 53. She was 26.

Mrs. Hobby's son followed in his parents' political interest by being elected Texas lieutenant governor in 1972. Her daughter, Jessica Hobby Catto, pubs. That Washington Journalis tially closed in a

In 1939, th s purchased Houston radio hursda KPRC and The Post from Jesse Jones, who also owned the competing Houston Chronicle.

Mrs. Hobby was in the national spotlight in 1941 when at the start of World War II, she became chief of the women's interest division of the War Department's Bureau of Public Relations. Later she helped organize the WACs and was made a colonel.

SHE ALSO added her fashion flair to the WAC uniforms by issuing billed caps known as "Hobby hats."

When she resigned in 1944, she became the first woman to receive the Distinguished Service Medal.

After the war she returned to Houston to help her husband run The Post and his newest acquisition, television station KPRC.

In 1953, Washington called again. This time it was President Dwight Eisenhower who named her head of the Federal Security Agency. The agency was elevated to cabinet status and renamed Health, Education and Welfare.

The cabinet appointment made her only the second woman to serve in a presidential cabinet, following Frances Perkins, who was Secretary of Labor for President Franklin Roosevelt from 1933 to 1945. No other women served in a cabinet until 1975.

When Hobby was asked if he thought his wife was the smartest member of Eisenhower's cabinet, he replied, "Course she is. And if she weren't, she'd have them thinking she was."

Mrs. Hobby resigned her cabinet post in 1955 to return to Houston to care for her ailing 77-year-old husband. He died nine years later.

She remained in Houston, where she tends to business.

H&C Communications, which stands for Hobby and Catto, bought the Galveston News, Galveston Tribune, and the Texas City Sun in 1963, but sold them three years later. They also bought Nashville's WLAC-TV — now WTVF — in 1975 and owned four other television stations. The company now controls six television stations including KPRC and KSAT in San Antonio and others in Nashville, Tenn.; Daytona Beach, Fla.; Des Moines, Iowa; and Tucson, Ariz.

Heart surgeon rocks to different beat

By JANE MARLER DEES

Doug Sehres/Reporter-Telegram

Dr. Connie Hutton relaxes in his favorite operating room at Medical Center Hospital in Odessa. The heart surgeon recently performed his 1,000th cardiac procedure and will celebrate tonight at Midland Center with singer B.J. Thomas and more than 1,000 of his friends.

ODESSA — Dr. Connie Hutton, affectionately known to his close friends as the "Disco Doc," is not an average cardiac surgeon.

A passerby in the surgical area at Medical Center Hospital may hear rock music emanating from his favorite operating room, No. 3, as he stitches up a heart.

"I like to close to INXS," Hutton said of the popular rock group.

He is down from a high of two packs a day to smoking a mere four Merit cigarettes a day, and he points out he lifts weights and plays raquetball.

When he isn't treating one of the estimated 20 surgery patients he sees each month, he helps run Wild Bunch Productions, an entertainment agency, with his friend, Midlander Danny King.

And it was at a charity event for Hutton's favorite cause, helping abused children recover from their trauma, the surgeon met Grammy-award winning vocalist B.J. Thomas.

Tonight Thomas will help about 1,100 of Hutton's closest friends celebrate the surgeon's 1,000th open heart procedure, performed this March at Midland's Physicians and Surgeons Hospital.

The party tonight at Midland Center is a far cry from Cranfills Gap, the tiny north central Texas town near Waco where he was born 43 years ago.

Hutton's dad named him "Connie" after the star baseball player, Connie Mack.

Hutton — who was valedictorian of his senior class — cited the influence of his family doctor in his decision to go into medicine.

After graduating from the University of North Texas (formerly North Texas State University) with a bachelor of arts degree in biology, he headed to the University of Texas at Galveston to study medicine.

While interning later at the University of Oklahoma (he acknowledges a conflict rooting for both the Longhorns and the Sooners), he decided to become a mender of broken hearts.

"I knew I wanted to be a heart surgeon the first time I touched a beating heart," Hutton said Wednesday. "And I still get the same feeling now...it's just an electrical sensation."

That feeling stems from his awe of the human body, Hutton said. "The original designer sure knew what he was doing."

He came to Odessa in 1979 to start a private cardiac surgery practice because he felt there was a need.

In fact, facilities lending themselves to his cardiac discipline were as desolate as the area itself, he acknowledged.

During the nearly 10 years he has practiced cardiac and thoracic surgery here, he has seen the area grow to contain everything needed to perform almost any sort of cardiac procedure.

Performing heart transplants should be left to the large metropolitan teaching facilities, Hutton said, adding that he has no desire to do one.

Unlike many famous-name heart surgeons — the Cooleys and DeBakeys of the world — Hutton performs every phase of the heart surgery himself, he said.

Some cardiac surgeons, lacking the necessary personal touch, have everything done prior to their entry into the operating room and come in, cut and sew a little and leave, he explained.

"I do everything from start to finish. I like to even close the skin," he said.

The pride he takes in stitching up a chest stems from his desire to leave a good mark on the patient. If someone else closes and "it looks sloppy on the outside, people will think it probably was sloppy on the inside."

Given the life-giving organ on which he operates, death can, of course, rear its ugly head.

"I've never gotten used to having a patient die on the table...especially when I was doing pediatric cases," Hutton said. "People put their trust in you, and when things go wrong in my field, it's the final event.

"It's a personal loss and I feel empty inside," Hutton said, adding that he will go back to his office and "rehash the entire case."

Two mentors at OU taught him attitudes that he follows in his daily practice to this day.

Dr. Ron Elkins, chief of cardiac surgery, brought out the best in him, he said. "He taught me that when you went into a case, make sure you know what you're doing."

Dr. Randy Williams, chief of the OU surgical department, is one of the greatest physicians Hutton has known.

Williams taught him about dealing with death.

"If you can't stand it, get out of the kitchen," the surgeon remembered of the professor's advice.

The stress of having a patient die can take its toll on the physician's own heart as much as cholesterol, smoking or lack of exercise, he explained.

"Hiram Melton (his first patient) was stressful," Hutton recalled of the first-day operating jitters he faced.

"But it's an awesome feeling now. When I'm sewing coronaries on I'm probably relaxing.

"I love it," he said...from his heart.

New GISD superintendent says some changes in store

Tim Outlaw

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

Curriculum updates and teacher pay raises are in store for the Greenwood school system, according to new Superintendent Tim Outlaw, who this week filled a position resigned under pressure by former Superintendent Sam Martin.

Neither Outlaw nor the Greenwood Independent School District board president, James Brooks, would comment on Martin's resignation, which was tendered during a May 2 board meeting, a week before trustee elections May 8.

Outlaw, 37, said he was unsure what kind of work Martin would undertake, adding that he didn't "have much contact" with the former superintendent.

Brooks said: "The board's got a policy that they don't discuss that," referring to Martin's resignation.

Greenwood residents are "not wondering what happened," Brooks said. "If they were, they'd call me," he said.

The board president referred to a letter of recommendation drafted after Martin's resignation which mentions several curriculum and policy changes the former superintendent helped implement.

Read by administrative secretary Linda Smith today, the letter says: "The board and Mr. Martin came to realize that they differed on goals for the district and methods to achieve those goals and that a change would be mutually productive.

"Mr. Martin reached an amicable settlement of his contractual status with the district on May 2, 1988," the letter continued.

Repeated telephone calls this morning to Martin's residence were not returned to the Reporter-Telegram.

Outlaw, who started Monday as superintendent, acknowledged entering a potentially difficult situation. "It would be difficult except for the fact that the people have treated me royally," he said, alluding to parents, teachers and other administrators.

The new superintendent has 14 years experience as an educator. He served as principal of Greenwood kindergarten through third-grade classes during the current school year and assistant principal of kindergarten through sixth-grade classes last year.

Greenwood schools are located about 10 miles east of Midland and hold classes for about 1,300 students.

Outlaw said he was unaware the superintendent's job would become open before Martin's resignation and added that he did not seek the position prior to the May 2 board meeting.

During recent board meetings to prepare next school year's budget, a teacher pay raise of between 5 and 7 percent already has been deemed a necessity, Outlaw said.

As part of the salary changes, the district's pay scale will be altered to better fall in line with the state scale, he said. Greenwood professional employees will be paid about 12 percent above the state average.

Outlaw said he will institute no major policy changes initially; however, "There will be some changes in the system as we move along," he added.

Among those changes will be updates to the district's curriculum, he said. A curriculum needs assessment study is still under way, making a detailed rendering of changes "premature," he said.

Brooks noted the district's budgetary process has just begun, but added that a tax rate increase may be necessary to make up an estimated $25 million drop in district valuations.

Greenwood property owners currently pay $1.43 per each $100 of valuation.

Friends of Nature Center offer summer programs

From Staff Reports

Friends of the Nature Center this summer will conduct a series of short programs and short courses that delve into the "wild side" of life — from birds to reptiles.

The series will be held in the Sibley Environmental Learning Center in Midland's Hogan Park.

In addition, the Friends of the Nature Center, which supports and promotes the Sibley Center, is looking for people to become "part of our naturalist program," said Faye K. Beery, Friends publicist.

"While you are learning about ponds, deserts, and people, we will be teaching you how to help children discover the world of nature," Ms. Beery said.

A learning-teaching session will be held at 7 p.m. today in the Sibley Center. And those interested in attending the session may telephone 689-8507 or 689-7906 or just show up for the session.

And those budding naturalists who are interested in an educated "walk on the wild side" may attend the short programs for children and adults in June and the short courses for children in July and August.

"Classes include lectures on birds and reptiles, art in nature, aquatic ecology, and a class for the very young on 'Babies and Beasties,' " Ms. Beery said.

The short programs for adults and children include:

— "Birds, Birds, Birds" on June 4 and June 7 will include common Midland songbirds and birds of prey, such as hawks and owls.

— "Fibers, Features and Fun" on June 14 will illustrate the "art in nature."

— "Scales and Tails" on June 21 will focus on reptiles.

— "Mini-Ponds" on June 28 will offer a glimpse into the Sibley Pond.

Short courses for children include:

— "Aquatic Ecology" on July 11, 13, and 15 and again on July 25, 27, and 29 will explore the flora and fauna in and about Sibley Pond.

Permian Basin High School to graduate 7

From Staff Reports

Permian Basin High School will graduate seven seniors during commencement exercises tonight at 8 p.m. at Midland Country Club, thus ending a "most successful and exciting year," according to Bryan Parnell, school administrator.

Midland College President Jess Parrish will give the keynote address before an estimated 100-150 relatives, friends and other guests.

Last August, PBHS moved to a new facility at 401 W. Wadley Ave., with a modest enrollment that more than doubled by the end of the academic year.

Recently, PBHS received for the second consecutive year the highest possible rating a high school can receive from its accrediting body — the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. It is the same evaluating group that accredits public schools and Midland College.

Parnell attributed the increased enrollment and programs to the new school building and the present faculty "who make things as positive as possible for the students."

He added, "With rare exceptions, a student immediately shows marked improvement in his/her school work due to the 100 percent attention to the individual which is the method in the one-to-one program found at Permian Basin High School."

ClayDesta Communications links new THEnet system

AUSTIN — (SWN) The creation of a 3,000-mile academic computer network involving ClayDesta Communications that links 34 Texas universities, colleges, research institutes and health centers was unveiled here today at a luncheon attended by state officials and representatives of participating institutions from across the state.

The Texas Higher Education Network, or THEnet, links tens of thousands of Texas students, professors and researchers and ranks as the largest state academic computer network in the nation, according to William Bard, director of the University of Texas System Office of Telecommunication Services, which oversees the giant system.

Bard said THEnet benefits Texas colleges and universities by linking them to each other, giving them access to important national data bases and providing access to the Cray Supercomputer at the University of Texas at Austin for the first time since the Cray's purchase in 1985.

"In size and distance covered, THEnet is certainly the largest state academic system in the country, and in terms of sophistication ranks with networks in Michigan and New York," Bard said.

Speaking at the THEnet luncheon were Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Dr. Kenneth Ashworth, Texas Commissioner of Higher Education, Dr. Perry Adkisson, chancellor of the Texas A&M University System, Dr. Charles Warlick, executive director of Academic Information Systems of the University of Texas System, and Clayton W. Williams of Midland, owner and founder of ClayDesta Communications, which sponsored the luncheon. ClayDesta, with its high speed digital fiber optic and microwave network, is the primary telecommunications carrier for THEnet.

ClayDesta began installing interface devices in the spring of 1987, and recently completed a major component of the network — the linking of the UT System with the Texas A&M System.

Acts of enduring love surround us in our daily lives

Todd

Love is all around. It endures.

And whether it is based on blood kinship, trusting friendship, or brotherly love, this plane called love is precious.

Yesterday, I witnessed one of the most touching acts of love I have ever been privileged to observe: the love of one sister for another.

The setting was in the post-wedding, pre-honeymoon stage. And moments before the bride, Mary, was about to depart with her beloved bridegroom on her new life's journey, her sister, Ann, lovingly addressed her new brother-in-law, Patrick.

"Remember," she cried out amid tears, "I shared a bedroom with her before you did."

That, my friends, was a brilliant rainbow, a spectacular sunset, a magnificent ray of light.

There was a giant embrace of purity to it, and the loving words seemed to affirm supreme goodness in the human heart and soul.

And, as I reflect, there have been many of those rainbows, filled with love, and cloaked with a wide range of emotions and concerns — from frowns to smiles.

Thank God for the spirit of love. Here's a sampling:

— Grandmother dumping more food onto grandson's plate before he can reply to her query, "Want some more?"

— Grandfather doctoring grandson's swollen arm after wasps, unsettled after their shaded abode was bothered, struck out against their young attacker.

— Grandfather admonishing the grandson to stop "jacking around" with his life.

— Daddy resoundingly lowering the boom, via the razor-strap, after the son was found disobedient and rebellious.

— Daddy's idealism.

— Mother's love, forgiveness and her silently consoling her son.

— Brother saying a kind word to his sibling.

— Another brother seeking advice.

— A friend saying, "take care," "have a good time," or "good night."

— A gentle embrace by a friend.

— An overnight stay with aunt and uncle.

— Breaking bread with friends.

— Giving thanks together.

— Sharing life's experiences with others.

— The counsel of spiritual and lifestyle advisers — both sought and unsought.

— Discussing innermost feelings and ideas with friends.

— Eating chocolate-coated ice cream with a friend and aficionado of sweets.

— Discovering extra quilts about you on a cold winter's night.

— A friendly talk along the running, hiking and cycling trails.

— Fresh bathwater in the old No. 3 tub.

— Laughing.

— Musing.

— Reflecting.

— A telephone call just to chat.

— Hangar flying with friends.

— Savoring with friends a gorgeous event, be it sunrise, sunset, music, bird songs or the silence of an evening breeze.

— Recalling, with fancy fables, days of yore.

— Commentary on this day.

— Speculation with another on what's to come.

— A kindly word and smile.

Love, my friends, is all about.

James A. Woodward

Graveside services for James A. Woodward, 71, of Midland, will be 3 p.m. Friday at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Officiating will be the Rev. Rex M. Horne and the Rev. P.J. Tyler.

Woodward died Wednesday evening at a Midland hospital.

Woodward, the son of Don and Maude Woodward, early-day settlers in southeastern New Mexico, was born July 23, 1916, in Lea County, N.M. He was reared and educated in New Mexico, and was self-employed in Lovington, N.M., for a number of years before completing several foreign assignments.

During the 1960s and 1970s, Woodward worked in several locations in North Africa and Australia, while employed with Namco International of Dallas and Globe Universal Sciences in Midland.

He moved to Midland in 1967 and retired shortly after that.

Woodward was a familiar figure during the past few years at Carver Cultural Center in Midland, which encourages the interest and education of elementary-age school children in all people around the world.

He was a 32nd degree Mason, receiving his degree along with his father and two brothers in Santa Fe, N.M., in 1946. He was a member of Crestview Baptist Church in Midland.

Survivors include his wife, Opal E. Woodward of Midland; two daughters, Yvonne W. Johnson of Midland and Rita Sorrels of Kingsland; one son, Edwin B. Woodward of Odessa; one brother, A.D. Woodward of Prairie Grove, Ark.; six grandchildren; three great-grandchildren; and numerous nieces, nephews, aunts and cousins.

Honorary pallbearers will be Cecil D. Lee, Harold D. Lee, C. Marion Shields, Neal Hill, Thomas James, Woodrow Wickman, Dr. Gregory W. Bartha, Dr. James A. Corwin and Dr. David L. Watkins.

The family requests memorials be directed to the Carver Cultural Center, c/o Midland Independent School District, or to a favorite charity.

Freda L. Davis

ERICK, Okla. — Funeral services for Freda L. Davis, 77, of Erick, are scheduled for 2 p.m. Friday at the First Christian Church with Stan Rumbaugh officiating. Burial will follow in the family cemetery.

She died Wednesday at a Sayre, Okla., hospital.

She was born June 30, 1910, to C.B. and Lola Lowrimore. She married Edward T. Davis May 28, 1932. Following their marriage, the couple lived in Erick. She was a member of the First Christian Church of Erick and the Kappa Delta sorority.

Survivors include her husband of Erick; a daughter, Geoganna Dorney of Erick; a son, E. Turner Davis of Midland; a sister, Mattie Blackley of Okemah, Okla.; seven grandchildren and five great-grandchilren.

Michael Smither

Services for Michael Smither of Midland are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Thursday afternoon following a drowning accident at Colorado City Lake.

Man convicted of illegally using dead man's credit card

LUBBOCK (AP) — A federal jury convicted an ex-convict of illegally using a credit card he found on the body of an 84-year-old man he had befriended.

The verdict against Eddie Wayne Roberson was returned Wednesday. U.S. District Judge Sam Cummings did not set a sentencing date.

Roberson was convicted of unauthorized use of an access device in connection with more than $6,000 worth of purchases charged to Jack Doherty's MasterCard account.

Doherty's burned body was found in a Lubbock Dumpster on Jan. 19.

The defendant testified during the trial that Doherty died of natural causes on Dec. 12 and that he drove to Lubbock with the body in the trunk of Doherty's car. Roberson testified he left the body in the trunk for three days before putting it into a Dumpster in north Lubbock and setting it afire.

Roberson was no-billed by a Lubbock County grand jury in connection with Doherty's death, but he faces a state misdemeanor charge of abuse of a corpse for the way he treated Doherty's body.

The expenditures made by the defendant did not fit the testimony made by Roberson regarding how distraught and upset he was after Doherty's death, Assistant U.S. Attorney Roger McRoberts said. The charges included airplane tickets, motel expenses and bar bills, including a $170 bar tab one night at a Lubbock nightclub that features topless dancers.

Roberson's defense that he had Doherty's permission to use the credit card was challenged Wednesday morning by the introduction into evidence of a note written by Doherty before his death. Police found the note in Doherty's apartment on Jan. 29.

The note read, "To whom it may concern: I am going with a man I don't trust. I suspect him of taking money out of my pocketbook while I am asleep. His name is Eddie Roberson."

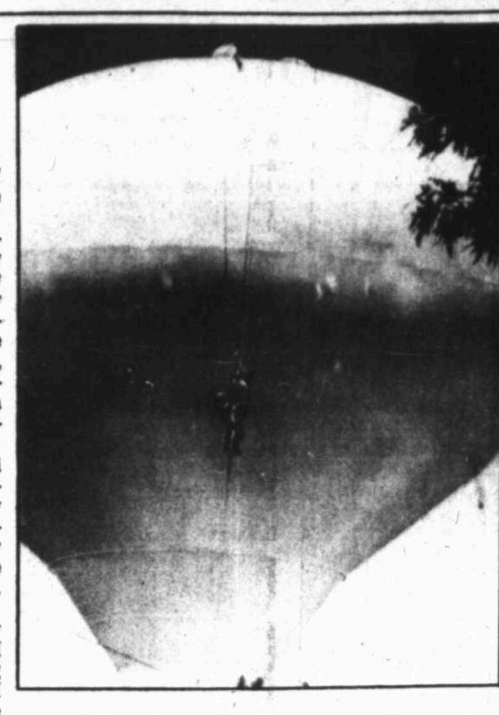
"As competitive as Texas schools are in sports, there's an even more important competition facing Texas higher education today and that's for federal and private research and development dollars," said Williams, owner and founder of ClayDesta Communications.

"THEnet helps give Texans the edge in the arena, since access to national data bases is a big factor in awarding these contracts," he noted.

THEnet, made up of an estimated 500 separate computers of various sizes and power, allows professors, researchers, students and others at participating institutions to exchange voice and data communications faster and easier than ever before. In the near future, THEnet will provide interactive video communication between Austin, San Antonio, Houston and Bryan/College Station.



Walter Coodey is rescued by firefighters Wednesday from a 100-foot-tall water tower in north Harris County, north of Houston. Coodey was on a scaffold painting the water tower when the scaffolding gave way, leaving him hanging by a safety harness from the tower. He dangled there for more than an hour before being rescued.

Painter rescued after hanging from water tower for an hour

HOUSTON (AP) — It took more than an hour for rescuers to reach a painter left dangling from a 100-foot water tower after he apparently lost his footing when the scaffolding gave way, officials said.

Walter Coodey was repainting the water tower in north Harris County when the accident occurred. He was wearing a harness device that prevented him from falling to the ground, officials said.

Two firefighters from the Ponderosa Volunteer Fire Department climbed to the top of the tower and one of them repelled to the side to reach Coodey.

One of the firefighters was able to lower the painter to the ground by attaching the two harnesses together.

Coodey was taken to Northwest Medical Center, where he was reported in stable condition with cuts and bruises.

College student killed trying to jump on train

DALLAS (AP) — A college student was killed early today when he attempted to jump onto a moving train but slipped and fell under the wheels near the West End Market Place in downtown Dallas, police said.

Thomas Allan Rubel Jr., 24, of Nacogdoches, died about 1:45 a.m. as a Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad Co. yard engine going 5 mph was pulling several boxcars through a train yard, police said.

Witnesses told police Rubel, his girlfriend and another friend were walking westbound near the train yard when Rubel ran from the group and attempted to climb onto the train. As Rubel climbed between two box cars, he slipped and fell.

Officer Greg Evans said Ruble, a student at Stephen F. Austin, was with a crowd and apparently tried to get across the tracks while a train was coming.

"He fell underneath the wheels," Evans said. His body was dragged 50 feet and was severed at the waist by the train's wheels, police said.

Man killed in car chase

TEXARKANA (AP) — A Louisiana man with a history of mental problems was killed in a car chase which began after he fled a service station without paying for the gas he pumped.

A Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman said James Gay Jr., 45, of Natitoches, La., was killed Tuesday when his car crashed into an auto repair shop four miles west of Texarkana on U.S. 82.

Service station owner Ron Patterson jumped into his pickup after Gay left the station without paying $12 for the gas be pumped.

Patterson said the two vehicles bumped three times and reached speeds of up to 65 mph when the chase left the city limits. At one point during the chase, Patterson grabbed Gay at a stoplight and asked for the money, but Gay sped away.

Gay's mother, Mary Lee Gay, of Natitoches, said she thought her son was going to the barber when he left home at 8 a.m. She did not know why he drove to Texarkana, but said he had a history of mental disorders and was unemployed.

Chances slim for tax hike

AUSTIN (AP) — Chances are slim that the Texas Legislature will enact another tax increase or a major tax reform bill next year, the chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee says.

"There are only so many times the people in the Texas establishment can stand up and say 'be a statesman'...and get people (legislators) to totally disregard their constituents," said Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen.

Schlueter said he had "counted heads" on the issue of taxes, saying lawmakers next year will be more inclined to give in to constituents' wishes than those advocated by special interests.

The Legislature has approved three major tax increases since 1984, and Schlueter said Texans experiencing a declining in their incomes don't want to see higher taxes from the Legislature again in its 1989 session.

The Legislature in 1984 approved $4.6 billion in new taxes to fund school reform. In 1986, it enacted about $900 million in higher taxes to temporarily pump additional money into the state treasury when oil prices began to fall. Last year, a record $5.7 billion tax hike was passed.

Parnell also noted that summer school enrollment has begun to fill the schedule at PBHS. Summer school will run from June 6 through July 22. Classes meet five days per week during the seven-week session. Students use the summer session either to "catch up" or "get ahead," Parnell said.

Parnell also said a sizable increase in enrollment for the 1988-89 school year is expected.

PBHS is the only private, non-sectarian, one-to-one, alternative learning high school in Midland and one of only three in Texas. The other two are in Dallas and Houston.

County medical examiner probed for selling bones

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The chief medical examiner is the target of a district attorney's investigation into allegations he improperly earned more than $100,000 for harvesting bones from the dead for resale, the San Antonio Light reported today.

The Light said it learned of Bexar County Chief Medical Examiner Dr. Vincent DiMaio's sideline business from a source who provided documents detailing the sale of hundreds of bones since 1983.

The bones, which were obtained from bodies taken to the county morgue, went to the non-profit Bone Bank Foundation of San Antonio, the newspaper said.

At the foundation, the bones were cleaned and chopped into pieces and freeze-dried to be used for future transplantation, mostly for back, dental or reconstructive surgery, the newspaper reported.

Survivors gave their consent, thinking the bones were "gifts of life" to the foundation, but DiMaio charged up to $200 a bone for the harvesting, the Light reported.

DiMaio could not be reached for comment late Wednesday and a secretary in his office today said he would be out of the office until next week.

The investigation by the Bexar County District Attorney's office focuses on whether DiMaio legally could charge the fees since he was extracting the donations on county time, using county facilities and employees, a source outside of the district attorney's office told the Light.

The newspaper said invoices it obtained indicate the foundation paid DiMaio up to $10,000 per month for bones, but none of those payments went to the county.

The county has a formal agreement with the Bone Bank Foundation to be paid $25 for every donor to cover basic harvesting costs, but the documents indicate the county receipts are minimal compared with the thousands in consulting fees paid to DiMaio's firm.

NCC gives Brouwer vote of confidence

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Rev. Arie Brouwer, general secretary of the National Council of Churches, got a vote of confidence Wednesday from a committee reviewing allegations made by a resigning staff member.

J. Richard Butler, who led the organization's Church World Service program, resigned Sunday, saying he was angered over new policies that gave more power to Brouwer.

The Church World Service Unit Committee, which investigated Butler's claims, Wednesday reaffirmed Brouwer's position in the National Council of Churches, said council spokesman Martin Bailey.

"We stand behind the General Secretary as chief executive officer of the council," the group reported. "The General Secretary has given his full energy and commitment to implement recommendations of the presidential panel and the decisions of the governing board designed to move the council toward becoming a community of communions."

Sheriff's officers probe burglary

From Staff Reports

Midland sheriff's officers are investigating the burglary of a residence which netted burglars items valued at more than $1,000.

According to reports, a Suzuki four-wheeler valued at $900, clothes valued at $150, and $20 cash were stolen from a residence near the northwest corner of County Road 140 West and CR 1200 S.

Reports said the burglary occurred Wednesday between 8:45 a.m and 6:30 p.m.

Top chefs cook up feast for charity

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paul served up his shrimp creole, Brad grilled some steaks, and Maida brought her favorite brownies. Fifteen more people crowded into the kitchen, baking hors d'oeuvres, heating soup, tossing salads, whipping up more desserts.

Whoa, folks! Too many cooks!

But wait a minute. These are not ordinary cooks. They are 18 of America's finest chefs and, in their rarified world of toques and wire whisks and $300 pots, they know better than to spoil the broth.

The chefs and their helpers from Boston to San Francisco and from New Orleans to the Michigan lakeshore thronged the vast kitchen of the Capital Hilton Hotel this week to prepare a "gourmet gala" of their specialties for 750 guests.

Proceeds from the $250-a-plate benefit went to the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation, which is celebrating its 50th anniversary this year. The chefs were chosen by Pierre Franey, food columnist for The New York Times.

The banquet hall was no place for dieters.

For starters, there was dungeness crab and smoked salmon rolled in chive and pepper-flecked pancakes with horseradish cream, a creation of Kathy Casey, the 27-year-old Seattle sensation with spiked blonde hair.

After seven other hors d'oeuvres and Jeremiah Tower's spicy lentil soup, there were steaming bowls of Paul Prudhomme's shrimp creole from New Orleans followed by filet mignon with morel sauce and pasta by Bradley Ogden of San Francisco and a spring salad by Jasper White of Boston, featuring grilled leaks stuffed with goat cheese.

Groaning diners then faced choosing from a half-dozen desserts guaranteed to bust the calorie meter. There were chess pies, lemon and white chocolate tarts with rum sauce, bread puddings with Michigan dried tart cherries, strawberry shortcake, brownies, cookies and ice cream.

Among the chefs are several who quit successful careers in other fields to pursue their love of cooking.

One is David Liederman, who said he "went to sleep" after practicing law for three months. "When I woke up I decided I liked the food business better," said Liederman, who became a cookie mogul in Manhattan and now operates Chez Louis restaurant in New York and a specialty food business.

Another is Harlan Peterson, who gave up a promising career designing automobiles for Ford Motor Co. in Detroit when he got serious about his after-hours hobby of cooking. "I had a glamorous job at Ford but I felt like a small cog in the machinery," he said.

Peterson apprenticed at a lakeshore inn at Ellsworth in northwest Michigan, and opened his own Tapawingo Restaurant there in 1984. He specializes in such indigenous foods as whitefish, trout, game and sauces using morel, the locally grown mushroom favored by serious chefs.

Maida Heatter of Miami, who brought 25 boxes of her famous "Palm Beach brownies" for the gala dinner, abandoned a successful career as a fashion illustrator and artist to care for her ailing father, former radio commentator Gabriel Heatter, at her home.

To help keep her creative juices flowing, Ms. Heatter persuaded her husband, Ralph, to quit his job as an airline pilot and open a restaurant in Miami Beach. The deal was that she'd supply him with brownies, which she'd been baking since childhood.

They made headlines by selling elephant-meat omelets during the Republican National Convention in Miami Beach in 1968. Ralph got out of the restaurant business in the mid-1970s but Maida's reputation as a dessert expert flourished.

She prepared the desserts for President Reagan and six other allied leaders at the 1983 economic summit in Williamsburg, Va. At the urging of food critic Craig Claiborne, she has written five best-selling dessert cookbooks and just completed a sixth.

"I love to cook," says Ms. Heatter, a serenely elegant, white-haired woman. "Nothing else has given me such satisfaction as taking something out of the oven and it's perfect."

"Cooking is very therapeutic for many people. People who can't cope, who go to shrinks and take pills, write me that when they get into the kitchen they are happy."

When it comes to the West Texas economy, auto dealers like Jack Sherman and Steve Late know what it means to have the support of their Permian Basin customers.

Their success depends on the number of West Texans who buy the vehicles they sell. And they, in turn, invest their resources back into the local economy as major purchasers and employers, and personally through community service and civic endeavors.

Over $334 million in retail sales alone leaves the Midland-Odessa area each year. If just 30 percent — $102 million — were spent locally, it would have a substantial positive impact on our economy.

So get in gear — "buy West Texas" and help get the Permian Basin on the road to recovery.

Bishop College wins another reprieve, seeks to shore up fiscal responsibility

DALLAS (AP) — Bishop College has to convince creditors and the Southern Baptist Association it is fiscally responsible, a lawyer said after the school won a reprieve from liquidation.

Wednesday, U.S. District Judge Robert McGuire gave the predominantly black school until June 3 to devise a plan to pay its debts.

Bishop attorneys had filed a motion Tuesday to quash a March order from McGuire that would have changed the school's bankruptcy status from Chapter 11 reorganization to Chapter 7 liquidation Wednesday, a move that would have closed the 107-year-old school.

McGuire said he would set a hearing on the college's reorganization plan for creditors for the week of June 27, with a confirmation hearing set for the week of July 25.

The plan would take effect Aug. 15 and school officials promised they would raise enough money to pay for the entire 1988-89 school year. Officials said without that money in hand, Bishop will not open in the fall.

"In order for the community to regain confidence, we need to show we are fiscally responsible," said Trip Finley, a Bishop attorney. "But we not only have to convince our creditors, but also the Southern Baptist Association." He said Bishop will be reevaluated by the association this fall for its accreditation.

In March, McGuire ruled the college could remain open on the condition officials raised at least $50,000 every two weeks. The ruling further stipulated that without a substantial change in the college's finances, Bishop would be ordered to liquidate its assets to repay $20 million owed approximately 400 creditors.

School officials say Bishop has raised more than $617,000 in two months and has pledges for nearly $158,000 more.

Finley said it will take between seven and 10 years to repay all of the school's debts, depending on negotiations with two of the school's larger creditors, including the faculty members.

"We plan to pay back all of the post-petition obligations (before the new school year starts), but want a moratorium on the pre-petition obligations," Finley said.

The college has failed to meet Chapter 11 obligations to keep all bills current, said George McElreath, the U.S trustee overseeing the case. But he conceded that the school had complied with the $50,000 bi-monthly payments since March and officials seemed willing to work out the remaining debt.

Judith Swift, who represents the Faculty and Staff Committee, said she was concerned that faculty members had not been paid about $500,000 in back salary and wages.

But Finley said a $125,000 payment to the salaries was made Wednesday and that school officials hoped to pay another $122,000 — the school's usual payroll — from the next funds received.

Bishop College has accrued about $600,000 in debt since the college filed a bankruptcy petition 13 months ago.

The college already owed $20 million in previous debts, officials said.

Some of that has been offset by large grants and gifts, including $202,000 from the U.S. Department of Education Tuesday, more than $231,000 from a ministers conference held on campus in April, nearly $86,000 from three Baptist conventions and $98,000 from other donations.

The school also has nearly $158,000 in pledges and expects $150,000 in student financial aid from the Department of Education, Roberts said. The money will be used to pay the remaining $497,000 in post-petition debts, including faculty salaries.

Finley said the school has instituted a "Seven Year Renaissance Plan" to raise funds at some 3,000 churches for the school. 'In two weeks, we've raised $86,000 and have pledges for another $158,000 — and that's only from 900 churches. We expect to hear from the other 2,100 churches, as well."

STATE

Clements unsure how debts will be handled

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says he's not certain how the state will proceed in dealing with financial problems left over from the now-defunct Texas Conservation Corps.

"I don't know how those financial problems are being pursued at this particular point," Clements said Wednesday after the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported state officials estimate the corps still owes nearly $100,000 in back wages, $179,000 in other unpaid bills and $500,000 in withholding taxes.

Officials of the Texas Department of Commerce, directed by Clements to examine outstanding debts of the job-training program for disadvantaged young adults, said the accounting contains the best information they could compile from incomplete and somewhat disorganized records.

The conservation corps, a live-in work program pattered after the Depression-era Civilian Conservation Corps, was shut down in February amid allegations of mismanagement and unanswered financial questions still under investigation.

The 18- to 21-year-old corps members, who joined the program to obtain job skills, "were driven back to their homes around the state, confused and unpaid," the Star-Telegram said.

Financial summaries, obtained by the newspaper under the state's Open Records Act, list presumably unpaid wages and salaries for 115 program participants and 36 staff members, the newspaper reported.

SWT students, faculty plan protests of firing

SAN MARCOS (AP) — Students and faculty protesting the firing of Southwest Texas State University President Robert Hardesty are planning a rally, letter-writing campaign and possible court action.

"I can guarantee our opinions will be expressed. The governor's going to hear from us," said Lee Brandt, an SWT senior who is student body president, Wednesday.

But as Brandt and others planned their strategy at a town meeting in a San Marcos cafe, Gov. Bill Clements told an Austin news conference that he had nothing to do with the firing of Hardesty by the Texas State University System board of regents.

Hardesty was fired last week by a 5-4 vote of the regents, with Clements' three appointees to the board voting to oust the president.

Hardesty had been a friend and political ally of former Gov. Mark White, a Democrat who defeated Clements in 1982 but then lost to the Republican in a bitter 1986 campaign. Hardesty has said his firing was "purely political."

"I don't know Mr. Hardesty. I've never met him. If he walked through that door, I wouldn't know him," Clements said. "I have no feelings about it whatsoever."

Clements said six of the nine TSUS regents were appointed by White and insisted that should demonstrate the lack of politics in the decision.

"If the regents deemed it appropriate to replace the president, that is what they're there for. He's not the only president to leave his post."

But Jody Dodd, a SWT junior who organized Wednesday's meeting, said that "it's very difficult to deny it was political."

"They haven't given any legitimate reason why it's happened, except to say they wanted to change the university's reputation as a party school." Ms. Dodd said. "President Hardesty has done more to end that image than anybody else."

The meeting was called to form strategy to protest Hardesty's firing, as well as the board's ban on the distribution of contraceptives at student health centers that belong to the university system, said Ms. Dodd.

About 50 people attended the San Marcos meeting, including students, faculty and state Rep. Anne Cooper, R-San Marcos; Ms. Cooper's Democratic election opponent, Libby Linebarger; and Ms. Cooper's predecessor, former Rep. Bob Barton.

Groups were formed at the meeting to work on legislation to get student, faculty and alumni representation on the board of regents; investigate whether the regents' meeting conformed with all requirements in the Texas Open Meetings Act; start a letter-writing compaign; and plan an Austin rally to protest the regents' action.

Also discussed was the possibility of getting a court order to delay Hardesty's firing until after the Senate meets in January and decides whether to confirm the appointment of George Worth of San Antonio as a regent. Worth voted to fire Hardesty right after being appointed by Clements.

Kenneth Margerison, president of the Texas Faculty Association and a SWT professor, said Hardesty's firing raises "disturbing questions" about the future of higher education in Texas and shows the need to make certain that regents know about the universities they govern.

The vote by the TSUS regents to fire Hardesty "seemed totally oblivious to Hardesty's accomplishments, the level of his support at Southwest Texas and across the state, and the new concern in Texas for improving academic quality in our colleges and universities," Margerison said.

UT 'courting' Pan American University, president says

EDINBURG (AP) — Pan American University President Miguel Nevarez says his school is involved in a "courtship" with the University of Texas.

"The reason I put that term (courtship) in there is we are working with the University of Texas system's office on joint programs," Nevarez said.

But there also have been hints of an eventual merger, in the weeks going into the initial hearing of the Legislative Joint Committee on Higher Education in South Texas today in Austin.

Meanwhile, Steven Altman, president of Texas A&I University in Kingsville, says Texas A&M University is showing interest in his school.

The Legislature last year directed the state's largest university systems to study ways of improving higher education in South Texas.

"I feel that our board would be very receptive to any indication from Pan American that they would be interested in becoming a part of the UT System," Jack Blanton, chairman of the UT Board of Regents, said Wednesday.

UT has been interested in working with Pan American for several years, although it still wants to cooperate with other South Texas schools, Blanton said.

Pan American and UT are discussing cooperative degree programs in engineering, health care and business, he said.

"We feel like Pan American's whole direction is similar to the other schools in the UT System," he said, and added that UT is "not into agriculture," an important component of A&I and A&M.

Home ownership vanishing dream

Average house too costly for families with children

By KIRSTIN DOWNEY
Copley News Service

CNS Graphic

Somewhere along the line, Margie Hamer made a big mistake.

Maybe it's because she grew up in a big family. Surrounded by brothers and sisters, she assumed she would have children of her own. She never really thought of it as an economic decision.

Maybe it's because she married for love. Her husband works in a shipyard; he's not a high-paid professional.

Maybe it's because she believes her husband and her three children are happier when they have more of her time. Margie remembers the joy she felt as a child when she came home from school and her mother was waiting in the kitchen with a special snack. So Margie never pursued a fancy career. She works part time as a cashier because she has to, but she doesn't much like it.

But Margie knows that somewhere she made a mistake. She must have. Why else is she 32 years old and living with her family in a rented two-bedroom apartment? Why don't they have a house of their own?

Sometimes Margie has a sinking suspicion that maybe her children had something to do with the fact she and her husband don't own a home. That they may, in fact, never own a home.

"We went ahead with the children so we went without the house," Hamer says now. "You used to be able to buy a house and make it on one income. That's no more. You can't make it on one income — and it hurts."

MARGIE REALLY made only one mistake. She got born too late to get both a house and children. At 32, she's a product of the second wave of the baby boom — the group that didn't get there in time.

"If you have more than one child, the costs get so great you really can't afford a house at that point," says Mickie Constantino, a real estate broker who specializes in working with first-time buyers.

"I still see young people having children, but a majority of them coming to me who are able to buy homes have only one or none. I rarely see more than that."

What's going on here? Why are Margie's decisions suddenly wrong? She made the same choices as her parents. But why do those choices condemn families to living in rented apartments now? Or condemn home owners to childlessness?

Take Linda and George Atchison, for example. Income about $100,000 a year. They have a comfortable home in Los Altos, Calif., with a not-so-comfortable mortgage payment of $2,000 a month. Nice house, so only one child.

Or Eric and Tricia Rasmusson. Income about $50,000 a year. Cute baby, so no house. They rent a two-bedroom apartment.

"If we were going to wait to buy a house to have a kid, we'd have to wait awhile," says Eric Rasmusson, 27. "I didn't want to be one of those 45-year-old Little League dads."

Or talk to Mabel and Charles Neibling — though you'll have to call long distance. They wanted it all: children and a shot at owning their own home. So now they live in Concord. Concord, N.H.

THAT'S THE choice most young couples are facing up to now.

That's the rule for an area whose labor force grew by 39 percent from 1976 to 1986, but which made no plans for where the workers would live. That's the underlying equation for an area that chose to become a big city but doesn't want to house people like a city.

Let's run through the numbers. Take a couple in their late 20s, recently married, both working and earning an income of $43,100. They want to buy a house, and they're willing to sacrifice to do it. To buy a modest three-bedroom house at about $140,000, they'll need about 13 percent up front for the down payment and closing costs, or about $18,200. (Of course, they're more likely to need 20 percent down because of tighter lending restrictions imposed in the past few years and because they're competing for the few available houses with cash-flush couples who are second-time buyers. But let's be optimistic here.)

According to accountant Leonard Williams, it would probably take the couple about five years to save that sum, assuming normal car expenses, no college loans, no major illnesses and no family obligations. Pretty unlikely, Williams says, because cars need to be replaced and family members need a bailout from time to time.

But let's assume that all goes well. Let's also assume prices rise only moderately and there still are single-family homes available in that price range five years from now. Day care, of course, will add another $400 to $500 a month per child because the family will need two incomes to make the mortgage payments, so let's assume they decide to wait to have kids.

BUT NOW a double whammy comes into play. The couple delayed having children because they needed two incomes to buy a house and make the payments, and then they learn the rest of the equation.

Infertility. Now that they have their house, nature doesn't cooperate. In a study by the National Center for Health Statistics of childless couples over the age of 35, all of whom tried to conceive, 25 percent had failed to do so by the end of a year.

In short, for lots of couples under 35, the pieces of the puzzle — home ownership and a couple of kids — just don't fit these days.

One reason young adults are getting squeezed out is that people who already own houses are doing a good job of making sure young families stay out of the neighborhood. Nothing riles these home owners more than the prospect of so-called affordable housing in their community.

Smaller lots? Duplexes with small yards? No way. Hurts property values. Not in my neighborhood.

"Politically, neighborhood resistance to moderate-income housing has forced the building industry and land-use process to serve existing home owners or people who make a lot of money," says Tom Cook, housing analyst for the San Francisco Bay Area Council, a business-sponsored public policy group. "The whole land-use process is basically working for only 20 percent of the population."

And even that percentage may be too high, because it assumes the buyers have a 20 percent down payment, which mostly means those who already own houses and are trading up.

THE PROBLEM is not just a Bay area phenomenon. For the first time since the Great Depression, home ownership rates are declining in the United States, dropping from 65 percent in 1980 to 63.8 percent in 1986. For those under 35, the decline in home ownership is even more marked, falling from 61.7 percent in 1974 to 53.6 percent in 1986.

Housing experts say there are some steps, both personal and political, young people can take to improve their situations.

The first step is to accept the situation and start planning for the future as soon as possible. "It's 1988," says Mickie Constantino. "It's not 1968 or even 1987. We have to live the 1988 way and not think about what could have been. Live with what will be." Here are a few things Constantino says young couples should do to "live the 1988 way":

Live as cheaply as possible. Find a Spartan $500-a-month one-bedroom apartment and put the cash you would pay for more pleasant accommodations into a savings account earmarked for a down payment.

Avoid car payments. If you have to buy a new car, purchase something inexpensive and dependable.

Buy only what you can pay for with cash on hand. If you must charge something, spend only as much as you can pay off the next month. Protect your credit, and save as much money as possible.

Renters should also start making political leaders aware of their plight, housing activists say.

FOR ONE thing, they should campaign for affordable housing to be built in local communities. That means talking to local politicians about the problem and taking an active role. When an affordable housing project is proposed, most cities inform only adjacent property owners of the proposals. Nearby renters are not informed. And when the developer and the local home owners square off against the project, there often is no voice on behalf of those who would hope to live in the new houses.

"Support local efforts to build affordable housing," says Buck Bagot, executive director of the Non-Profit Housing Association in San Francisco.

Sometimes local interest can have immediate results. The city of San Mateo, for example, has turned over three acres of city-owned land to a nonprofit developer, who is building houses there for average-income San Mateo residents. The houses, which range in size from one bedroom to three, cost between $50,000 and $95,000, with down payments as low as 5 percent in some cases. Similar projects could easily be undertaken elsewhere.

'Tough-guy' slogan advertises tough chip

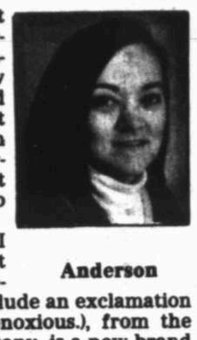
By LINDA ANDERSON



Anderson

On a recent trip to the supermarket, we discovered a new version of an old favorite product that had such an intriguing advertising slogan that we just had to check it out.

Krunchers! (I really hate it when food products' names include an exclamation point. It's so obnoxious.), from the Snacktime Company, is a new brand of potato chip with a — well, different — slogan: "No more wimpy chips!" I didn't know that wimpy potato chips were a national concern, but we checked them out anyway. The taste-testers and I sampled all three flavors of chips — regular, jalapeno and mesquite barbecue — for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

In addition to the controversial slogan on the front of the package, Krunchers! label advertising on the back of the package claims: "Tired of chips that put more bar-b-que taste on your hands than they do in your mouth?" (or "... that go mush when you bite 'em or go to pieces when you dip 'em?" or "...that say they're spicy but leave you cold?" depending on the flavor you are reading) "Chomp into Krunchers Bar-b-ques (or Jalapeno flavor), the extra thick and hearty chips bursting with big potato taste and a unique western, mesquite flavor (or "bursting with big potato taste" or "big potato taste and a real south of the border bite").

"Don't fool around with those weak-kneed chips anymore. Sink your teeth into Krrruuuunchers!"

No kidding. Sounds like they have Rambo writing their advertising copy. And I didn't add all those extra letters — the advertising department did that all by themselves.

By the way, the label also claims the chips are "cooked in peanut oil."

Price was comparable to most other chips. A 7-ounce bag has a suggested retail price (according to its label) of $1.59, but we bought ours on sale for $1.19 and I've seen it since for $1.09. (Prices listed are from local supermarkets. Prices at other locations may vary.)

The taste test was interesting to say the least. While everyone agreed that the "big potato taste" with whatever flavor we were sampling at the time was delicious, we also all agreed that the chips themselves were just too tough. Maybe it was the peanut oil. Maybe it was the anti-wimpy, macho-type attitude. But for whatever reason, the chips were almost too tough to eat.

If there was only some way to make the chips a little more edible, and at the same time keep the flavor intact, they would probably become favorites around our house. But, as one taste-tester put it, shoe leather isn't fun to eat, no matter how delicious the flavor.

Ex-smokers don't always gain weight

By MARIAN FARR

Farr

The question: Keep smoking or quit and gain weight? Many smokers believe they have to choose between the two, when they don't. Not everyone who stops smoking gains weight.

Research studies show that only about a third of the people who stop smoking actually put on and keep extra pounds.

Physiological changes brought on by stopping smoking have been shown to account for only three to four pounds of the weight people gain once they quit.

People who gain more than a few pounds have probably changed their eating habits as a way of coping with the physical and psychological symptoms of withdrawal from tobacco. For example, the craving for tobacco is often confused with a hunger pang, which leads to overeating.

Other withdrawal symptoms, such as depression, fatigue, tension and insomnia, can be sources of stress. Many people overeat as a way of dealing with their stress.

Overeating also may be the result of something as simple as ex-smokers not knowing what to do with their hands. Eating often becomes a substitute for holding a cigarette.

To ease the urge to overeat, the new non-smoker can keep low-calorie snacks around, get more exercise or find new activities that require use of the hands.

Don't make the mistake of many former smokers and panic at gaining weight and start smoking before giving their bodies a chance to adjust back to normal.

Giving up cigarettes is far healthier than adding a few pounds. You would have to gain 75 to 100 pounds to offset the health benefits a normal smoker gains by quitting.

DRMS lists surplus items

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Schmidt

According to the U.S. Defense Reutilization and Marketing Service, many newspapers around the country are running advertisements which tell consumers how they can purchase a government surplus Jeep for only $129. The advertisement tells consumers to send just $9.98 to an Atlanta address if they want information on how to buy these Jeeps.

The DRMS is responsible for the sale of surplus or excess government property and offers this same information at no charge.

Bill Collins, special assistant for public affairs for DRMS, says, "If you want to buy Department of Defense surplus property, the only way to do it is to get on the DRMS surplus bidders list." Collins went on to say that "the money sent to these companies that advertise information for sale is wasted. DRMS is constantly getting letters from irate people all over the country who feel they have been swindled by the companies that place these ads."

DEAR ABBY

Reader thinks she's found her ideal man

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Although I've never written to you before, I want to thank you for addressing one issue I had been struggling with a few years ago. A 17-year-old girl thought something was "wrong" with her because she was still a virgin.

I, too, had felt that way on several occasions. I'm a virgin who will turn 21 soon. I was dumped by more than one man because I wouldn't have sex. I plan to remain a virgin until I marry. I don't want to have to tell my husband about an illegitimate child, an abortion or herpes outbreaks.

I also want to thank you for the addresses of overseas servicemen. I wrote six letters and received three replies. One has become very special. He's "Andy" on the USS Coral Sea. He writes beautiful, deep, philosophical letters — three and four typed pages. We have come to know each other intimately through our letters.

Our similarities are uncanny. We agree on everything from premarital sex and abortion to kids, dogs and yogurt. Abby, he has helped me to understand that just because I had a bad childhood, I am not a bad person. He tells me I am a very special, beautiful person, and I believe him. If I never lay eyes on him, he has already helped me more than he (or you) will ever know.

Andy is due back in the States soon. And when his ship docks in Norfolk, I'll be there to meet him! Abby, if he turns out to be half as wonderful in person as he is in his letters, I would marry him tomorrow. — WALKING ON AIR

DEAR WALKING: He sounds too good to be true. Congratulations on an exciting beginning. Please keep me posted.

DEAR ABBY: Our family is able to eat only one meal each day together. It's supper. Our children are 8, 5 and 3 years old. My husband does not allow any talking at the table. He sits at the head of the table and barks commands at everyone. ("Sit up straight!" "If you must cough, leave the table!" "Just shut up and eat!")

It doesn't take much of this before we all lose our appetites.

I was raised in a family where the supper table was a place we could eat leisurely and share with other family members the events of the day.

I think my husband's attitude is wrong. He says the table is the place to eat and get it over with.

Please tell me, who is right? — DIFFERING IN GARLAND, TEXAS

DEAR DIFFERING: There is no right or wrong — only different preferences. I agree with you: The supper table is an ideal place for the family to enjoy each other's company while they eat.

Try to persuade your husband to lighten up a little, to be more patient and less demanding of the little ones. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: Do you know how I can get help for an emotional problem without having to pay an arm and a leg?

I called my church (it has a membership of more than 2,000) and they said they offered counseling, so I went there. I was well-treated by a very friendly counselor who gave me coffee and talked to me for 45 minutes. She said she would be glad to see me on a regular basis. I thanked her and started to leave when she chased me, asking if I wasn't going to pay her the $80 fee.

Abby, I make $200 a week, and told her from the beginning I couldn't afford to pay much. I sure can't go back there again. Isn't there some place I can get help? I get chest pains, feel like I'm choking and have anxiety attacks. Thank you. — NEEDS HELP

DEAR NEEDS: You did not have a meeting of minds. The people who referred you should have advised you in advance of the cost, and so should the therapist.

Call your county mental health services. You'll be charged according to what you can pay. People who are steadily employed can pay something, and they should — but $80 a session is too steep for your budget.

DEAR ABBY: Would you kindly define the phrase "immediate family"? I need to show the answer in writing. Thank you. — INQUISITIVE IN LONG BEACH

DEAR INQUISITIVE: In the legal sense, wife or husband, children, parents, brothers and sisters are all immediate family. But for exact information regarding the laws in your state, you should consult a lawyer.

Self-tanning products promoted

New York Times News Service

Sun-wary (or sun-starved) consumers are snapping up self-tanning products at a record rate, cosmetics companies report.

The active ingredient in these creams and lotions, dihydroxyacetone, reacts with the protein in the upper layers of the skin, imparting a yellow-brown color. The ingredient is harmless, according to the Food and Drug Administration; how good it makes you look is open to debate. Directions must be followed closely. The products will stain unevenly if the skin is not smooth, and they tend to collect in deep creases.

Clinique, one of the many cosmetics companies that market a self-tanning product, says a better way to tint the face is with another of its products, a bronzing gel makeup that washes off.

Self-tanning products, which Clinique recommends for areas of the body other than the face, "tend to intensify any uneven pigmentation and facial hair," Clinique's product literature says.

If a self-tanning product is used on the face, it should be kept away from the hairline, eyebrows and eyelashes, since it can temporarily darken gray or light hair. Men should avoid getting these products on a mustache or beard. Blemished skin may turn blotchy.

Using a self-tanner needs some planning. The product should not touch clothing until it dries completely. Wait at least an hour before bathing or swimming.

Full color will develop in about three hours.

The only warning from dermatologists: A simulated tan doesn't protect the skin from burning.

Ski manufacturers recall equipment because of lug failure

Copley News Service

Safety knows no season. Although the only skiing most of us are doing these days is the water variety, a snow ski manufacturer has just recalled some of its equipment.

Tyrolia Freizeitgerate of Austria, in cooperation with the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, has recalled 450,000 of its ski bindings.

Toe and heel lug breakage has been reported, which can cause serious injuries. To date, there have been reports of five injuries in the United States that may be related to a lug failure.

Seat belts provide measure of safety when used properly

Copley News Service

Seat belts have been called one of the most successful safety devices of the 20th century. However, to be effective, they must be used correctly.

The Journal of Trauma highlights the dangers of improperly worn seat belts and issues these warnings:

■ Wear the seat belt low across the pelvis. If the belt is worn higher (across the abdomen) and the car stops suddenly, the belt can cause serious internal injury.

■ Sit upright. If you slump, the belt can slide up the pelvis onto the soft abdominal wall.

■ Keep the belt tight. A loose belt offers little protection and may compound injuries. An occupant can be thrown forcefully against the belt, or can slide forward under the loose belt and suffer head or neck injuries from the shoulder strap.

■ Never wear the shoulder strap under your arm or across your neck. In a crash, wearing the strap under the arm can concentrate pressure on the abdomen, diaphragm and lungs.

Inspect used cars carefully

By MARSHALL SCHUON
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The question is one that every automobile shopper has wrestled with: Should I plunk down a large chunk of change for glitter and that new car smell, or should I scout the used car ads and take a chance?

The answer has always been difficult, but the Hertz Corp. has some statistics that might tip the balance if you are one of the millions who find themselves in that quandary every spring. Hertz sells as many as 80,000 of its rental cars each year.

According to its figures, the average used car costs $5,833, is 4.5 years old and has 41,140 miles on the odometer. In 1986, the last full year for which data are available, America's drivers bought 16,524,000 used cars, and the cost of ownership was 25.5 cents a mile.

That compares with 48.5 cents a mile for a comparable new car, and that 47 percent saving is obviously what makes a used car so attractive.

But how can you be sure you aren't buying trouble?

You can't. But you can certainly minimize the possibility by knowing what to look for.

FIRST YOU have to know what you want. If you are like most shoppers, you will be looking for a car that is 3 to 5 years old. There are a lot of good vehicles of that vintage, but it pays to be finicky, especially if the car looks as if it just rolled out of the paint shop.

Fresh paint can tell you some bad things. For instance, the car may have been in an accident, or saltwater may have ravaged the metal. It may mean the body simply received no care, and that provides a clue to the attention paid to its innards as well. New paint is easy to spot if you look for overspray on chrome and on the rubber around the doors.

See if the doors fit well. Badly aligned body panels are another indication of an accident. Ripples in the metal will tell you the same thing, so do your shopping when the light is good. Never mount your search for a car at night or in the rain, since both can make rust buckets look like silver streaks.

Rain also makes it impossible to spot puddles under the car. The puddles — which shouldn't be there — can come from the transmission, radiator, engine or brakes, and any leak can mean expensive repairs.

Check the tires. If the front tires show irregular wear, it is likely the car has bad ball joints or needs alignment or both. Irregularly worn tires on the rear may mean the same thing, since the seller probably switched them.

Start the engine and while it's warming up, cock an ear. The engine will be noisiest when cold, and any clicks, clacks or clatters ought to serve as alarm bells. Walk behind the car, and check the exhaust. If there is blue smoke, the car is an oil burner and may need piston rings or valve guides, both big-ticket items.

ONCE THE engine is warm, check the fluids. If the car has an automatic transmission, pull the dipstick with the engine running. If the transmission fluid smells burned, that means a problem.

The oil should be checked with the engine off. It ought to be fairly clean, and the dipstick should read full. If the level is low, the car may have bad rings or a leak that will be expensive to fix. If the oil is black, it probably means the owner didn't worry much about maintenance.

When you are satisfied that most things are up to par, take the car for a test drive. Pick a route that will give it a workout: curves, a stretch of bumpy street, a bit of highway to see how it performs at speed, a hill to test the engine.

Things to look for are looseness in the front end, springs and shock absorbers. The steering should feel sure, without much play. On a straight and level road, take your hands off the wheel, and see if the car maintains its course, indicating proper alignment.

If the car has a manual transmission, shift into low and ease away from a stop. Does the clutch chatter, making the start jerky and rough? Run through the gears. Are the shifts difficult? With an automatic, shifting should be smooth, without slippage. If the car is a front-engine-rear-drive model, check out the universal joints in the drive shaft by putting the transmission lever into reverse. A loud clunk means you will soon be shopping for parts.

Another important check is the braking system. Does the car stop in a smooth, straight line? Do the brakes shudder, squeal or pull to one side? At a dead stop, test for trouble by applying pressure to the pedal for a short period. If it sinks slowly to the floor, the hydraulic system has a leak. Check the parking brake by setting it and then trying to drive against it in low gear.

NEXT, MAKE sure the accessories work, particularly such safety items as windshield washers and wipers, lights, turn signals and horn. Roll all the windows up and down. Turn the ignition key to the first position. All the dashboard warning lights should come on, and they should go out when the engine is started. Pay particular attention to the oil light, which should go out quickly, indicating proper pressure inside the engine.

Angels create history

Washout forces Friday twinbill with Mets

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Mother Nature had no respect for Angel Stadium history Wednesday night, washing away a 9½-inning, zippo-zippo game between the Jackson Mets and the Midland Angels.

Not in the 17-year history of Texas League baseball action has a game ever gone into extra innings without a score crossing the plate in Midland, Texas. The Mets and Angels put an end to that record Thursday, but Mother Nature must have felt that something was all wrong with such statistics, twice dumping rain on the field, once for 41 minutes and finally for good.

It was the first game wiped out by rain this year, but with goose eggs on the scoreboard and resulting goose bumps in the stands, the game might as well not have been played at all.

All the statistics count as far as the Texas League is concerned, but the game doesn't. It now becomes part of a 6 p.m. Friday doubleheader, meaning that this game is officially extended seven more innings.

This game alone makes the Texas League rule seem ridiculous. This game should be resumed from the point of stoppage. That's what any fan would really like to see. To play it over, gives a superb effort by both teams an overall sense of futility.

The 0-0 outcome even came from unlikely mound sources.

Midland's Steve McGuire entered the game with a 1-5 record and a 6.16 ERA. He pitched nine scoreless innings of eight-hit ball and has little to show for it except for lowering his ERA.

Jackson's Mickey Weston was making his first appearance as a starter this year and he pitched six scoreless frames of four-hit ball. He was relieved by Shawn Barton, who Weston replaced in the starting rotation. Barton pitched three innings of shutout relief and was ready to take to the mound in the bottom of the 10th when the game was halted.

"I'm happy with the game. You don't get many chances at a shutout in this park," noted McGuire. "I naturally would have liked to get a decision, but I still think the team played well behind me. I had a couple of double plays behind me and (catcher Mike) Knapp called a great game."

Weston, who equaled his longest outing of the year, said, "I'm really excited about my outing since this was my first start this year. I've been struggling in the pen and the coaches made this move with me to help my motivation and I think it will.

"This is my third year in Jackson and I know all about this park. I knew I was going to be allowed to pitch only five or six innings, but when you have a scoreless game going in this park, you sure hate to leave."

Barton was hesitant to start the bottom of the 10th as the rain began to get heavier.

"I really didn't want to take the risk of pitching in that kind of rain. Just a little mistake and you end up losing. The Midland manager (Max Oliveras) came out and said he didn't want to the game to continue in that condition and that showed me a lot of class," said Barton.

Even the though the two offenses couldn't bring a run home, the game was anything but dull. Both teams had opportunities to win, but pitching and fielding always came to the rescue.

Rebs prepare for Maroon-White grid tussle

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Despite a spring in which Murphy's Law has reigned, the Midland Lee football team will show its stuff in the annual Maroon-White scrimmage tonight at Memorial Stadium.

The sophomores will take the field at 6 p.m., followed by the varsity at 7:30. Tickets are $1 for students and $2 for adults.

The scrimmage will feature game-type situations except on kickoffs and punts. About 70 varsity players will see action tonight, along with 64 sophomores-to-be in the early scrimmage.

The Maroon team will be comprised primarily of the top Rebel athletes, while the backups will generally play on the White team. Miller did say that four or five projected starters will see action for the Whites.

The Whites will be spotted seven points per quarter in an effort to make the game more competitive, Miller said.

It's been one thing after another for Lee head coach Earl Miller and his staff this spring.

"We'd been fortunate enough to have good springs in the past," Miller said. "But this year everything that could go wrong did."

At least five Rebels will not play tonight due to injuries incurred during spring practice, though Miller declined to name names. Also, the Rebel gridders were sapped by an outbreak of influenza that affected execution during spring workouts.

Miller said the injuries and illness caused an irrevocable disruption in spring workouts.

"We didn't exactly click right like we had in the past," the coach said. "We haven't gotten as much accomplished."

Despite all the obstacles, several Rebels have shined this spring. Miller is especially excited about an offensive backfield that includes quarterbacks Vince Henderson and Ty Chambers; fullbacks Gabe Vasquez and Quincy White, and tailbacks Farris Strambler and David Whiteside.

White was a starter at tight end last season. Linebacker Michael Pearson was the only other returning starter from last year's playoff team.

Offensive linemen Billy Parks and Chad Haney have also performed well, Miller said.

Defensively, halfbacks Blaine McAnally and Michael White have taken strides to shore up a graduation-wracked group that included University of Oklahoma signee Jimmy Fennell.

Other defensive standouts this spring have included tackle Charles Ellis and linebackers Vasquez and Reagan Young.

Chaps enjoy fine 2nd day at national net tourney

From Staff Reports

TYLER — A perfect second day in the National Junior College men's tennis tournament kept Midland at the top of the heap Wednesday in the five-day tournament hosted by Tyler Junior College.

All the wins were straight-set victories for the Chaps, who weren't pushed in any of their matches. Midland now has everyone in the quarterfinals, with second flight singles player Gilles Ameline in the semifinals. Midland and Palm Beach, Fla. are the only two undefeated teams remaining.

"This was exactly what we hoped to do in this round," said MC coach Joe Williams. "I was concerned about Johan Dysholm's toe (badly cut the night before the tourney began) but he had a relatively easy match. From now on we just have to win as many matches as possible to stay in the chase for the national title."

Dysholm beat Ian McKinley of Vincennes, Ind., 6-1 6-4.

Scott powers Lakers past 0-2 Mavericks

NBA

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Earlier in his career, Byron Scott was regarded by some critics as the weak link in the Los Angeles Lakers' lineup.

But Scott, in his fifth NBA season, has improved continuously and quietly has become the Lakers' leading scorer.

Wednesday night, Scott scored 30 points on 11-of-17 shooting to lead the Lakers to a 123-101 victory over Dallas and a 2-0 lead in the Western Conference finals.

The best-of-seven series now shifts to Dallas for games Friday and Sunday.

"My confidence level was high in the regular season and during the playoffs, it's skyrocketing. I felt so loose for this game," said Scott, who seemed plagued by self-doubt earlier in his career, particularly after he had some lackluster playoff games.

Scott, a 6-foot-4 shooting guard who's often overlooked in the shadow of point guard Magic Johnson, is the Lakers' leading scorer both in the regular season and the playoffs so far this year.

He has bolstered his game by becoming effective on drives to the basket.

He was hitting consistently from outside and on drives against the Mavericks in Game 2.

"Over the whole year, defenders have been playing me for the drive," he said. "The way I've been shooting the ball, they have to defend that, too.

"Now I can either drive or shoot it. They have to defend both. I have created more problems (for opponents)."

Scott's scoring is a problem Dallas coach John MacLeod would rather not have to deal with.

"He's another weapon for them," MacLeod said. "He's been having an All-Star season. He's been on fire, playing really well, since training camp.

"He's going to remember this year when he's old and retired. It's a banner year for him."

Said Lakers coach Pat Riley: "Byron had a career year last season, ands he's playing even better this year.

"Byron is a young player and if he keeps improving, he's going to be the best off (shooting) guard in the league, if he isn't already. Of course, that's not counting Michael Jordan. He, like Earvin (Magic Johnson), is in a special class."

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the Lakers' 41-year-old center, had 19 points and seven rebounds in the victory over Dallas.

James Worthy added 16 points and Johnson had 15 points and 19 assists.

Mark Aguirre led Dallas with 28 points. Sam Perkins had 16 and Rolando Blackman had 14.

The Lakers led 59-48 at halftime and stayed comfortably ahead in the second half.

Riley, saying the Mavericks' Reunion Arena is a tough place for visiting teams, tried to put the series in perspective.

Jordan swipes MVP honor

CHICAGO (AP) — While Michael Jordan wasn't around for the applause when he was named the NBA's Most Valuable Player, no one could doubt his presence during the regular season.

They had only to watch his high-flying magic on the court and look at the figures — a 35 point average, 259 steals, and 131 blocked shots for the Chicago Bulls.

Jordan was named the league's Defensive Player of the Year earlier this month, and on Wednesday he captured the MVP award with 47 of a possible 80 first-place votes from a media panel.

"He had a year that very few people — if any — in the history of basketball have ever had at both ends of the court," said Jerry Krause, the Bulls' vice president for operations. "I've been in the league 21 years, and I can't remember anyone ever having a total all-around year like he had."

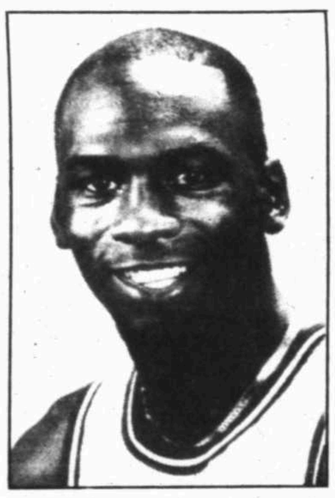
Jordan, only the fourth guard to win the MVP in the award's 22-year history, was golfing in the Carolinas and couldn't even be reached by his own team to be congratulated, Krause said.

But Jordan had made the MVP award one of his goals at the start of the season.

"I want to win, I want to have fun, and I want to entertain people," he said earlier. "I think I've done that. I'm illustrating more all-around skills this season."

"Last year Michael had to take five shots a game to beat the shot clock, and he's not doing that this season," Bulls coach Doug Collins said. "He's taking better shots and making the team better."

Former teammate Sidney Green, now a New York Knick, said he noticed a difference in Jordan this year.



Michael Jordan

"He is much more mature now — his court awareness and his shot selection," Green said. "The guys he played with, he respects the roles they are playing."

Jordan said that in some ways, he played better last year when he became only the second player to score 3,000 points in the season. This year, he wound up with 173 fewer points but 108 more assists, 19 more rebounds, 23 more steals and six more blocked shots.

"Individually, I played much better last year than this year," he said. "I can't say why awards would come now. Maybe it's because we won more games this year. I had more explosive games last year, but better all-around games this year. And I played better defense this year."

'Experienced' Celts fold in 2nd half

Pistons' bench keys Eastern Conference playoff win

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics, trying to reach the NBA championship series for the fifth consecutive time, played like a team with little experience in clutch situations.

"We showed no patience on offense once we got the lead," Boston coach K.C. Jones said after Detroit's 104-96 victory in Wednesday night's opener of the Eastern Conference finals. "We got back into the habit of trying to do everything in a hurry."

The Celtics led 61-54, their largest margin of the game, early in the third quarter, but the Pistons outscored Boston 26-12 in the next 10:17 for an 80-73 advantage. The Celtics managed to tie the score at 80-80, but they never regained the lead.

"We were coming down quick and fising it up," Jones said. "Our offense was helter-skelter. Our guys were firing up the first shot they saw. We pay for those misses."

Detroit, which has never made the NBA finals, shot 55.8 percent from the field. Boston, winners of 16 titles, shot 41.8 percent.

"They only scored 104 points," said Celtics forward Kevin McHale, who led Boston with 31 points. "If you can't score 104 points, your offense isn't that good. We shot 41 percent. If you don't make the shots, you're not going to win. It's simple mathematics."

Since McHale was 13-for-17 from the field, Jones said the Celtics should have used simple mathematics to get him the ball more.

"We didn't go to McHale," Jones said. "We fired up the first shot we had from outside. It was poor decision-making."

"They looked like they were a little tired," Pistons coach Chuck Daly said of the Celtics. "They came off a tough seven-game series against Atlanta."

Daly avoided questions about the Pistons' breaking their 21-game losing streak at Boston Garden.

"This year in the playoffs, a lot of teams are winning in other buildings," Daly said. "Each series in the playoffs is different. It doesn't matter what you did in the previous series or the regular season. All I've talked about is winning four games. This is just one game."

Isiah Thomas, who scored 35 points, and John Salley, a reserve forward who scored 10 in 21 minutes, echoed Daly's feelings.

"We can't be satisfied with a split," Thomas said. "This is the same group that came back from 3-1 down to beat Philadelphia (in 1981). It feels good to win, but we have to keep it in perspective. It's not the first to win one, it's the first to win four."

Game 2 of the best-of-seven series is scheduled for Boston Garden Thursday night. The third and fourth games will be at the Pontiac Silverdome on Saturday and Monday afternoons.

"This is the one we wanted," Salley said. "But we can't tell ourselves that we've accomplished what we wanted to do by winning one game in Boston. What we want to accomplish is getting to the conference finals."

Wild Robinson troubles Brewers

Associated Press

Jeff Robinson was so bad he was almost perfect.

The Detroit pitcher had a hard time finding the plate, and the Milwaukee Brewers had a harder time finding his pitches.

When the game was over Wednesday night, Detroit had a 4-3 victory and the Brewers had just one hit off Robinson and reliever Guillermo Hernandez, a three-run homer by Greg Brock.

"Robinson was wild," Brewers manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "Wild enough to be very effective until he got too wild."

In the first five innings, Robinson, 5-2, didn't give up a hit.

"I was so concerned at trying to throw strikes, I never had time to think about a no-hitter," Robinson said. "I think I was just wild enough (that) they couldn't sit in one place.

"They didn't know where it was going, and half the time I didn't, either."

In other American League games Wednesday, it was the New York Yankees 4, California 2 in 10 innings; Texas 5, Toronto 1; Minnesota 4, Kansas 2; Cleveland 5, the Chicago White Sox 2; Boston 4, Seattle 0; and Oakland 8, Baltimore 1.

Robinson started the Milwaukee sixth by walking Paul Molitor and B.J. Surhoff. One out later, Brock hit his third home run of the year into the lower deck in left. Robinson then struck out Glenn Braggs, but when he walked Rob Deer, Detroit manager Sparky Anderson called for Hernandez to come in from the bullpen.

"I knew if we were going to win it, he (Hernandez) was going to have to come in and put a stop to it," Anderson said. "He did. He had excellent control and he's throwing the ball hard again."

Hernandez finished up to earn his second save, walking one and striking out one.

"Guillermo's been doing that for the last month," Robinson said. "He's done the job every time they've given him the ball. When the money's on the line, he's done his job.

"He was awesome tonight. I was watching him tonight, and he was just incredible."

The Tigers scored three runs in the third off Juan Nieves, 4-4, then took a 4-0 lead in the fourth. Tom Brookens drove in two of the runs.

American

Yankees 4, Angels 2

Dave Winfield's 10th-inning home run led New York to its victory and a three-game sweep of California. It was the Angels' fifth straight loss.

Winfield's 10th homer of the season came with one out against DeWayne Buice, 1-3. The Yankees added another run on Willie Randolph's bases-loaded walk.

Johnny Ray's pinch-home run with one out in the ninth off winner Neil Allen, 1-0, made it 2-2. Joel Skinner had given the Yankees a 2-0 lead in the seventh with a two-run homer, his first.

Red Sox 4, Mariners 0

Roger Clemens held Seattle to just four hits and pitched his fifth shutout of the season as Boston defeated the Mariners 4-0 at the Kingdome.

Spike Owen's third homer of the season, off starter Mark Langston, 4-4, hit the left-field foul pole just above the wall. Wade Boggs walked to lead off the eighth and Dwight Evans followed with his second home run.

Clemens, 7-2, posted his fourth straight complete game and sixth of the season. The major league's strikout leader with 107, Clemens fanned five Seattle batters and walked two. In his career, Clemens has 15 shutouts in his 67 victories.

Indians 5, White Sox 2

Cory Snyder's two run-scoring hits led Cleveland past Chicago. It was the Indians' 12th victory in thier last 15 games. The White Sox have lost nine of their last 10.

John Farrell, 5-3, allowed two runs on six hits, while striking out five and walking two for the victory. It was the 18th complete game of the season for Cleveland pitchers, compared to 24 for all of 1987.

Julio Franco singled in the first off John Davis, 1-2, stretching his hitting string to 14 games, the major leagues' longest current streak.

Twins 4, Royals 2

Bert Blyleven beat Kansas City for the 28th time and Dan Gladden tripled, doubled and singled, leading visiting Minnesota to a three-game sweep of the Royals. Blyleven gave up 10 hits in 7 2-3 innings. Jeff Reardon finished for his 10th save.

The Twins won their fourth in a row on the road, one short of the franchise record for consecutive victories on the same trip. The Royals lost their fourth straight game.

Rangers 5, Blue Jays 1

Geno Petralli had three hits and knocked in three runs to lead Texas over Toronto. The victory snapped a three-game Texas losing streak as middle reliever Jeff Russell, making his second straight effective start, gave up six hits over 7 2-3 innings. Dale Mohorcic relieved with the bases loaded to halt Toronto's rally and gain his fourth save.

Athletics 8, Orioles 1

Bob Welch allowed three hits in eight innings en route to his seventh consecutive victory as Oakland defeated Baltimore. Welch, 8-2, who got his first AL shutout with a five-hitter at Baltimore on May 14, struck out four and walked none.

L.A. no longer leery after shutout

Associated Press

The National League is starting to become a bit leery of Tim Leary.

Leary, troubled by a sore arm for most of his career, pitched a one-hitter Wednesday night and the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Philadelphia Phillies 4-0.

A line-drive single by Darren Daulton leading off the third inning was the only blemish in Leary's third shutout this season. Leary, 4-3, extended his scoreless-inning streak to 19 and lowered his ERA to 2.45.

"I went to spring training not sure where I'd end up pitching," Leary said. "I had to open the Dodgers' eyes."

He did that again in pitching the Dodgers back into first place in the National league West, four percentage points ahead of Houston.

In other NL games, Pittsburgh defeated Houston 4-3, New York beat San Francisco 6-3, St. Louis trimmed Cincinnati 6-0, Atlanta edged Chicago 2-1 and Montreal topped San Diego 6-2.

Mike Scioscia and Jeff Hamilton hit two-run homers, the first of the season for each, to support Leary.

Leary pitched his first career one-hitter and his fifth shutout in the majors.

"It was just one of those things. They hit everything at us," Leary said.

NL

Dodgers Tom Lasorda was more complimentary, as usual.

"We didn't play very well behind him. He could be right up there with the big winners," Lasorda said. "He has pitched extremely well."

Leary's main trouble came in the first inning. He cut the middle finger on his pitching hand on a pebble while facing leadoff batter Milt Thompson, and called the trainer to the mound.

"It was bleeding a little," Leary said. "They put some gooey stuff on it and closed the scratch. It didn't bother me after that."

Phillies manager Lee Elia was bothered by his team's hitting, and lack of it.

"I'd be embarrassed if I went out there every night and had my bats broken," Elia said. "We keep getting jammed and striking out. You'd think they'd have enough belly to correct it."

"We got beat by a guy with one pitch, a fastball. All night long again, no offense," Elia said.

Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt went 0-for-3 and is hitless in his last 18 at-bats.

Scioscia homered in the fourth and Hamilton connected in the seventh against David Palmer, 0-4.

Mets 6, Giants 3

Gary Carter and Kevin McReynolds each drove in two runs as New York beat San Francisco for the first time in five games this season.

Ron Darling, 5-3, gave up three runs in 7 1-3 innings and Randy Myers got the last two outs for his seventh save.

McReynolds, in a 1-for-19 slump, hit a two-run single and Carter followed with a sacrifice fly in the first inning against Mike LaCoss, 3-4.

LaCoss hit a two-run double and Kevin Mitchell homered for the visiting Giants.

Braves 2, Cubs 1

Gerald Perry singled home the tie-breaking run with two outs in the eighth inning as Atlanta won in Chicago.

The Braves took two of three at Wrigley Field and won their first series under new Manager Russ Nixon.

Reliever Rick Mahler, 5-4, won his fifth straight decision despite allowing Ryne Sandberg's tying single in the eighth. Bruce Sutter got his sixth save.

Cardinals 6, Reds 0

Larry McWilliams pitched a two-hitter and Tom Brunansky had a two-run homer, leading host St. Louis over Cincinnati.

McWilliams, 3-0, struck out eight for his first shutout since Aug. 1, 1984, and first complete game since June 16, 1985. It was his fifth career two-hitter and lowered his ERA to 1.46, second-best in the NL.

Mario Soto, 3-3, took the loss. Brunansky homered in the fifth, giving him 29 RBI in 30 games with the Cardinals.

Pirates 4, Astros 3

Bobby Bonilla and Darnell Coles hit consecutive homers and Jose Lind's single broke a 3-3 tie in the seventh inning as Pittsburgh beat visiting Houston.

With two outs, pinch hitters Sid Bream and Barry Bonds walked before Lind singled off Joaquin Andujar, 0-2.

Mike Dunne, 3-2, gave up five hits in seven innings. Jeff Robinson closed for his fifth save.

Bonilla and Coles homered in the fourth. Bonilla tied for the NL home run lead with 11 and RBI lead with 37. Coles hit his second homer and first since opening day.

Expos 6, Padres 2

Dennis Martinez ended his four-game losing streak with his first victory since April 24 as Montreal defeated San Diego.

Tom Foley hit a pair of RBI doubles and Tim Wallach had two hits, drove in two runs and scored twice.

Kemp demoted by Rangers

ARLINGTON (AP) — Steve Kemp, who climbed back to the majors this year after spending 1½ seasons in the minors, was taken off the Texas Rangers' roster Wednesday night and is being asked to return to Class AAA Oklahoma City.

Kemp was batting .222 in 16 games with two RBI for Texas.

"I know I can still play, but it's hard to get into any kind of groove when you've only had 36 at-bats," Kemp said. "If I would have had 150 at-bats with that kind of average, then I might think about retiring. But I know I can still hit."

Kemp, 33, has 72 hours to decide whether to accept the outright assignment. As a player with more than three years in the majors, he can refuse and become a free agent after he clears waivers.

"I'm disappointed," Kemp said, "but things tend to work out for the best. I'll talk to my agent tomorrow and have him see if there is any interest from other clubs."

Rangers manager Bobby Valentine said he would understand Kemp's decision either way.

"I'd love for him to go to Oklahoma City, and be ready for when we might need him again. It's too bad that there is no opportunuty for him now," Valentine said. "If he wants to continue playing and gets another Major League offer, I think he'd be foolish to go back to Oklahoma City."

Kemp made the club in spring training as a non-roster invitee. The 10-year veteran has a lifetime average of .279 with 130 home runs and 634 RBI in 1,168 games.

He drove in more than 100 runs with Detroit in 1979 and 1980 and has also played for the Chicago White Sox, New York Yankees and Pittsburgh. He was an All-Star in 1979.

Plodder accepts plight

By FRANK MORGAN

Morgan

There are plodders in the world, and there are speedsters. The names are self-explanatory. Enoch Morgan is clearly to blame for my being a plodder. I've been able to trace my ancestry back to him, and found his name listed in the 1790 census.

A resident of Cabarus County, N.C., he is shown as having four dependants under age 25. His name is signed in beautiful script with a flourish that suggests he was a man of some importance.

The census takers would have saved all runners a lot of trouble if they had included a column for plodder or speedster on the form. We would have then been able to look back at our ancestry and know what our destiny would be.

I used to think that if I trained hard enough, ate right, got plenty of sleep, and changed my socks daily, that I could become as fast as speedsters. I discovered this past weekend, however, that being a speedster is a matter of heredity. I am no more likely to become a speedster than I am to become the king of England.

Bob Jackson, from Jal, N.M., is a speedster. He won the Tall Town 10,000 Saturday. His 6-year-old daughter is also a speedster. She won her age group with a sub-eight minute mile. My own daughters placed second and third, but they were several minutes behind her.

STEVE STALLINGS holds the two-mile record for the Tall Town with a 9:56 set in 1983. Following in his father's footsteps, his 13-year-old son Jeremy ran a 12:06 two-mile last Saturday.

My own son ran 18:35 for the two-mile and finished next to last in his age group. He is destined to be a plodder just like his father. After the race, I asked my son how he did and he said that he ran well. In fact, he had run well. He set a PR by over a minute and managed to beat his best friend.

Displaying a philosophical wisdom beyond his years, he proceeded to tell me that he had accomplished his goal, and he could do anything he wanted if he just worked hard enough. He said that one day he will go to the Olympics. I beamed with pride knowing that he had been filled with the positive motivational training that I had given him. I also silently knew that the only way he is going to the Olympics is if he buys a ticket like the rest of us plodders.

The only way to break out of the cycle of being a plodder is to marry a speedster. Berry Simpson did that. So far, his son Byron appears to be a plodder, just like daddy, but Byron can unleash a devastating finishing kick that reminds you of his mother.

EVERY ONCE in a while I am allowed a brief admission into the land of Speedsterdom. Occasionally I find a low key race in Pecos or Ozona and I manage to sneak in and get third place in my age group. The only reason I do this is because the true speedsters are home watching Roadrunner cartoons. The cartoon is just like their lives. The plodders struggle and strive just like Wile E.Coyote, but with a simple beep-beep, the speedsters sprint on ahead.

I have resigned myself to being a plodder, but that isn't so bad. The speedsters never get the chance to reveal their innermost thoughts about the sport. They never get the feeling of accomplishment of directing a successful race. They never know the pure joy of out-kicking an opponent for 151st place. They never gain the self-confidence that comes from continuing a marathon at a nine minute pace.

Speedsters don't have it so good after all. Besides, somewhere in the book of Matthew it says that plodders will inherit the earth.

RUNNING NOTES: Cyndi Simpson's two-mile victory in the Tall Town was just one of 12 different age group records that were set. Brad Hawkins of Odessa set the record for the 13 to 19 category in the 10K with a time of 35:37. Brad was selected as the winner of the Permian Basin Roadrunners Club scholarships and will attend Odessa College in the fall.

While some races have been declining in the past few years, the Tall Town continues to grow. The 1988 edition had 305 registered runners.

Most area runners will be heading to San Angelo on June 4 for the Run in the Sun. The 8K race is sponsored by the San Angelo Road Lizards and is one of the area's best races. Peter Snell will be speaking at the pre-race seminar the night before.

The next race in Midland is June 25 when the second annual Midland Mile will be held.

Lansford likes leadoff spot for red-hot Athletics

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer

OAKLAND, Calif. — Carney Lansford, a leadoff man for the first time in his 11-year career, is feeling more comfortable in his new location in the lineup.

The .400 neighborhood will do that for a hitter.

"I'm getting used to it," says Lansford, who is hitting .397. Lansford went into Wednesday's game against Baltimore with a .400 average but went 1-for-4 in the Athletics' 8-1 victory over the Orioles.

"The thing I'm happiest with is that I'm getting on base for the guys behind me," Lansford said. "Mark McGwire and Jose Canseco are the keys to us scoring runs."

McGwire and Canseco are among baseball's home run and RBI leaders. Lansford became the major leagues' leading hitter last week, passing Dave Winfield of the New York Yankees, and has been pulling away from the field.

By reaching .400 in late May, Lansford threatened to wreck a reputation as a steady — .292 career average — but not spectacular hitter.

"I'm excited about it. But I can't fathom doing it for a whole season," the A's third baseman said. "I'm not going to even think about it. That would be putting too much pressure on myself."

Oakland manager Tony La Russa said, "Good hitters always hit. He's led the league in hitting (.336 in 1981 with Boston). This is not a fluke."

Lansford, who batted everywhere from second to sixth for the A's his first five years with the club, was penciled into the leadoff spot by La Russa on the final weekend of spring training this year.

"This is nothing far out. We've put power at the top but still have a lot in the middle of the lineup," La Russa said of the move. "The way I look at it, there are a lot of plusses to it. I believe in it."

Lansford had 19 home runs, his career high, in each of the last two seasons and was the A's cleanup hitter the final 33 games of last year. He also stole a career-high 27 bases in 1987.

The original idea was to use Lansford, a right-handed hitter, in the leadoff spot only against left-handed pitching. La Russa stuck with that policy for a while, but Lansford has been hitting No. 1 full-time since May 9 for the American League West leaders.

"I don't like to dislodge a player when he's hot," La Russa explained.

"I like Carney at the top right now. But he could be hitting like this anywhere," he added.

Lansford said he hasn't changed his hitting style as a leadoff man.

"But they're starting to pitch me differently," he notes. "I don't think I've seen a first-pitch fastball since Boston (last week). I used to see a lot."

But, as Orioles manager Frank Robinson said, "We're looking for any way to get him out. He's hitting good pitches and he's hitting bad pitches."

Lansford's spectacular batting numbers may add up to a career breakthrough — a spot on the American League All-Star team.

With outstanding third basemen like George Brett and Wade Boggs in the league, Lansford has never made the team, either through election by the fans or appointment by the AL managers.

"It's a crime," La Russa says.

"It's frustrating when a player works hard, performs and doesn't get the recognition," Lansford admits. "If I continue to play well, it would be great to be there.

"But what's important to me now is that this team continue to win games and, at the All-Star break, be as many games in front as possible."

Lansford also never has won a Gold Glove, the award for men voted best at their position.

"If I didn't win it last year, I will never win it," he said in spring training.

ANGELS——

In the Midland third with runners at first and second and two outs, C.L. Penigar lined hard to left to end one Angel threat. With Midland runners at second and third in the fifth with two outs, Weston got Jim Thomas to roll to first.

Midland's Tom Alfredson had bad luck twice. He struck out in the sixth to end the inning with Lee Stevens at third and he lined a ball up the gap in right-center that Jackson centerfielder Marcus Lawton ran down with a circus catch.

"I thought the ball in the eighth had a chance. I was hoping it would fall, but that guy (Lawton) can cover some ground," said Alfredson.

Lawton replied, "I didn't know if I could get it or not, but the farther I kept running the more I realized I had a shot at it."

If Lawton doesn't make that spectacular play, the game is over. But now they play it again.

"I've been told several times that I'm the one who forced us to play this one again, but I'll play seven more innings to avoid a loss anytime," Lawton said.

The Angels also had runners at first and second with two outs in the seventh when Jim Thomas hit another infield grounder and Midland got a leadoff single from Danny Grunhard to open the bottom of the ninth, but Knapp hit into a double play. Norm Carrasco also hit one to the wall in the eighth but Alan Hayden was there to make the catch.

McGuire faced Met runners as second and third in the second before getting Craig Shipley on a fly to center. McGuire also saw runners at first and third in the third before striking out Joaquin Contreras. McGuire gave up three of his eight hits in that inning, but the strikeout and a double play bailed him out.

Jackson also had runners at first and third with only one out in the sixth, but McGuire got Lawton to ground into a twin killing. In the top of the 10th, Kurt DeLuca got to second base with only one out, but Midland reliever Vinicio Cedeno got out of the jam as the rain began to build.

The two teams meet again at 7 p.m. today with Jackson's Blaine Beatty (3-3) getting the call against Midland's Tim Burcham (1-1).

CHAPS——

Midland didn't lose more than three games in any of their other singles or doubles matches. The Chaps are seeking their second NJCAA title and are hoping to make it a sweep for the tennis crowns this year as the MC women won their national tournament last week.

In matches today, Dysholm will face Gustavo Espinosa of Alvin, who upset North Greenville, S.C. standout Mike Baroni Wednesday. Other Chaps seeing action include Gilles Ameline, who will face Jonne Kilivarta of Palm Beach, Fla.; Amine Boustani vs. Carlos Gomez of North Greenville; Tommy Heiting vs. Johan Svensson of Tyler; Scott Randolph vs. Kiyoshi Ueda of Anderson, S.C.; Robert Antoun vs. Shea Whigham of Tyler.

Doubles pairings include Dysholm and Luke O'Loughlin vs. Martin Tenlen-Mike Castillo of McLennan in a rematch of the Region V finals won by the Highlander pair; Boustani-Randolph vs. Meeknashi Sundaram and Cliff Reuter of McLennan in other Region V rematch; and Ameline-Antoun face Nilsson-Svensson of Tyler.

Singles

1. Johan Dysholm (MC) def. Ian McKinley, Vincennes, Ind., 6-1 6-4; 2. Gilles Ameline (MC) def. Carl Whitehouse, Brunswick, Ga., 6-1 6-1; 3. Amine Boustani (MC) def. # Cooper raps Duncanville

ABILENE — Defending state champion and District 4-5A runnerup Abilene Cooper took another step toward a repeat trip to Austin with a 9-1 win over Duncanville at Hardin-Simmons University here Wednesday.

The Cougars, 25-7, will face Duncanville at 1 p.m. in Arlington, with a thrid game set for 4 p.m. Saturday, if necessary.

Cooper pitching ace Jason Satre, 13-2, boosted his record to 13-2 with a two-hitter against Duncanville. The Coogs supported him with a run in the first inning and two runs each in the second through fifth innings.

The Cooper-Duncanville winner will face the Plainview-DeSoto winner next week. Plainview eliminated Midland High from the playoffs recently.

University of Texas golfer Michiko Hattori hits toward the green in first day action of the 1988 NCAA Women's Golf Championship.

Pooley hopes for full recovery

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Don Pooley isn't so worried about defending his Memorial Tournament title as just getting through the first round.

"The question is, can I walk 18 holes?" said Pooley, still battling a nagging case of bacterial pneumonia that has kept him at home for the past five weeks.

The 13th Memorial Tournament started today at the Muirfield Village Golf Club with two of the principal participants — the defending champion and the host — downplaying their chances.

Jack Nicklaus, designer of the 7,104-yard, par-72 Muirfield layout and the Memorial's creator and host, isn't at the top of his game.

"My golf game is fair, at best," said Nicklaus, who has won two previous Memorials. "I haven't been playing much. ... The first 18 holes I had played in some time was on Monday."

The 103-player field includes nine of the top 10 and 18 of the first 20 money-winners on the PGA Tour.

The past two years, the rolling Muirfield course has been virtually defenseless after wet and windless weather prior to the tournament. Hal Sutton won two years ago with a record score of 17-under-par 271, nine shots better than the previous low. Pooley won a year ago with a 72-hole score of 16-under 272.

Neither Pooley nor Nicklaus expects those kind of numbers this year, after a dry spring and strong winds have left the greens hard and fast.

"Under these conditions, the tournament scores will go up," Nicklaus said. "I don't think you'll see the kind of scores we had the last two years."

PGA

Pooley, who finished second in 1986 to Sutton with a 13-under score, said, "With the weather conditions staying the same as they are now, I guess 8-under might win it. But if it rains and the greens get soft, it might take 16-under again."

Pooley spent two weeks in bed after coming down with pneumonia and his doctor says he's still two weeks away from being completely healthy. He hasn't played on the Tour in almost six weeks.

"I feel like an old man," Pooley said. "I'm not 100 percent — far from it. If it weren't the Memorial, I probably wouldn't be here.

"Physically, I'm in terrible shape. Mentally, I'm ready to go. ... Eight days ago I played nine holes, riding in a cart, and I was exhausted. I couldn't play more than nine. I had to go home and rest."

The pre-tournament favorite is Greg Norman of Australia, who won the Heritage Classic earlier this season and is coming off a victory in the Italian Open.

Scott Simpson, the reigning U.S. Open champion, and Larry Nelson, winner of the 1987 PGA Championship, should also contend.

The field also includes former Memorial winners Tom Watson, Hale Irwin and Sutton.

Recent winners on the PGA Tour in the field include Gary Koch, Curtis Strange, Bruce Lietzke and Lanny Wadkins, who scored his second victory of the season last week in the Colonial National Invitation.

Moody likes N.M. course

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Orville Moody says the combination of his driver and the Four Hills Country club course could make him a winner in this week's Sunwest Bank Seniors Golf Classic.

Defending champion Bob Charles and this year's leading money winners Harold Henning and Moody head the field for the $275,000 tournament.

The 54-hole tournament at the par-72, 6,723-yard Four Hills Country Club course begins Friday.

Moody, with one win and two second place finishes this season and earnings of $154,112, has played well on the narrow, tree-filled Albuquerque course that favors golfers who fade the ball.

"I like the course because you have to drive the ball well," Moody said. "I've been putting well, so maybe this is my week."

Charles, the left-hander from New Zealand, is coming off a win in last week's Commemorative Tournament in Scarborough, N.Y., where he scored a four-shot victory over Don Massengale and Harold Henning.

The victory, Charles' first this year on the Senior Tour, boosted his earnings to $124,455, good for fifth place on the money list.

Henning's runner-up finish in New York pushed him ahead of Moody on the money-winning list with $157,029. His lone win this year was at GTE Classic in Los Angeles.

Six of the top 10 money winners on the Senior circuit this year are entered, but some of the tour's bigger names — Arnold Palmer, Gary Player, Chi Chi Rodriguez and Bruce Crampton — are passing it up.

Larry Mowry, a second-year player on the Senior Tour who fired a course record 10-under 62 in last year's final round, also is in the field of 72 pros.

Alcott continues push toward LPGA Hall

LPGA

CORNING, N.Y. (AP) — Having overcome physical and emotional problems that caused her worst year as a professional in 1987, Amy Alcott is back in her accustomed spot among the LPGA's elite and aiming for two goals.

"I'm only three tournaments (victories) away from the (LPGA) Hall of Fame and there's no other player that's close to doing that," said Alcott as she prepared for this weekend's $325,000 Corning Classic.

The other goal for Alcott, the tour's leading money winner so far this year with $193,806 in earnings, is to remain one of the game's best.

"Just staying in contention every week, that's all that's ever important to me," she said, defining contention as "having a chance to win going into Sunday every week."

Last year, for the first time in her 13 years as a pro, Alcott failed to win a tournament. It was indicative of a slide that produced her lowest ranking ever (17th) and fewest earnings ($125,831) since 1978.

"I didn't talk about it because I'm a pretty private person," Alcott said. "People were asking me, 'What's wrong with you' when they're used to seeing me finishing in the top 10 every year."

Two reasons — one physical, the other emotional — were behind the uncharacteristic showing, Alcott said.

"My mother had cancer and I wasn't feeling quite well myself," she explained.

Alcott didn't want to expand on her mother's illness, but did talk a little about what was bothering her physically.

Swede paces Cowgirls to women's tourney lead

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — Eva Dahllof shot a 6-under-par 68 Wednesday to take a two-stroke lead and pace Oklahoma State to a first-round advantage in the NCAA Women's Golf Championship.

The Swede's 32-36 round left her two strokes ahead of Tracy Wright of Rollins College and Michelle Wooding of New Mexico on the first day of the 72-hole tournament at the New Mexico State University Golf Course.

Six-under-paris a record for the opening round of an NCAA women's tournament, said Steve Schott, New Mexico State sports information director.

Despite a stomach virus that had her doubting at first she could even complete the round, Dahllof birdied the first three holes. She birdied four more holes and bogeyed once.

Four players in the 102-woman field shot 3-under-par 71s; two shot 72s and four shot 73s. The top-ranked player in the country, Tracy Kerdyk of Miami, shot 38-39 for a 77.

Oklahoma State's first four finishers combined for a 5-under-par 291, ahead of Kentucky and defending champion San Jose State, both of which combined for 297.

The tournament was interrupted twice by high winds and rain.

Oklahoma St. slips to 7th in NCAA golf tourney

WESTLAKE VILLAGE, Calif. (AP) — Oklahoma State, which has won five NCAA golf titles 12 years, is not in good shape after the opening round of the 1988 championships.

The defending champion Cowboys are tied for seventh with Ohio State in the team standings, and Oklahoma State's Brian Watts, the defending individual champion, shot a 5-over-par 76 Wednesday at the 6,817-yard North Ranch Country Club.

"We didn't play very well," Cowboys coach Mike Holder said. "It's a tough course. You need to keep it on the fairway. And if you miss the fairway, you need to make it up on the greens. We didn't do that.

"It should be easier playing (today). We'll just have to play better regardless of the conditions."

Florida, meanwhile, took the first-round lead after sophomore Chris DiMarco and freshman Pat Bates fired 1-under-par 70s.

The Gators shot a team total 289, one better than 1988 Pacific-10 Conference champion Washington.

Tournament host Southern Cal was third at 291. Oklahoma was fourth with 293 and Georgia and Georgia Southern tied for fifth with 295s.

Ohio State and Oklahoma State each carded 296, South Carolina was ninth with 297 and Texas 10th with 298.

Individually, O.D. Vincent of Washington, Bryan Pemberton of Southern Cal, Jeff Hull of South Carolina and Ted Tryba of Ohio State tied for the lead at 2-under 69.

The highlight of the round came when freshman Kevin Kaminski of Temple shot a hole-in-one on the 180-yard No. 7. Kaminski used an eight iron for his second career ace. His first was in the Atlantic 10 Conference tournament last fall.

DiMarco and Bates of Florida were in a group of six golfers tied at 70, including Steve Flesch of Kentucky, E.J. Pfister of defending champion Oklahoma State, Paul Stankowski of Texas-El Paso and Jeff Wagner of Houston Baptist.

Owners find compromise for roster limit problem

NFL

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Roster sizes in the NFL are going up or down depending on how you view the league's limits for next season.

Owners voted Wednesday to allow teams to dress 45 players for games in 1988 and maintain a two-man inactive list. That's up from the league's normal 45-player limit, but down from the 50 clubs carried after last season's players strike.

"It has benefits in that's where you're possibly going to keep your third quarterback, or whatever," said Tex Schramm, chairman of the league's competition committee — a body that sought to keep 45 active players and a five-man inactive list.

"It appeared we could not get the 21 votes for the 45 and 5, so this was a compromise," Schramm said.

"Some people put it on economics ... and some said you just keep getting bigger and bigger and more and more and you don't need it," he added. "Some people just don't like to change."

Chemotherapy may control cancer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Doctors reported finding the first tentative evidence that chemotherapy may be able to help control lung cancer, the nation's leading cancer killer.

Four studies presented at a medical conference produce at least a hint that platinum-based drugs, combined with radiation and sometimes surgery, may help prolong patients' survival.

None of the research suggests anything close to a cure for lung cancer, but doctors are encouraged by any improvement in a disease in which survival is measured in months, rather than years.

"There is no effective therapy for the vast majority of patients," said Dr. Robert Capizzi of Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, N.C.

He said this makes the latest research, presented Tuesday at the annual meeting of the American Society of Clinical Oncology, potentially important.

"There is the possibility that drugs may, for some subset of patients, have important effects," he said. "We don't have a prescription to be offered to the masses. We have important new leads for controlled clinical trials."

About 150,000 new cases of lung cancer are diagnosed each year. The four studies were conducted on people with non-small cell lung cancer, which accounts for about three-quarters of all cases.

The most encouraging results were presented by Dr. Robert O. Dillman of the Scripps Clinic of San Diego.

Like the other studies, his was conducted on people whose cancer was too extensive to be removed surgically but had not spread beyond the chest. Typically, such people are treated with radiation, which slows but does not stop the disease.

He treated 240 patients with radiation and chemotherapy or with radiation alone.

He estimated that half of the patients receiving the combination would still be alive after one year, compared with one-third of those who got only radiation.

"Our study is the first to show that chemotherapy may help at all in non-small cell lung cancer," Dillman said.

While the treatment may represent an advance, he said, "this is not going to be enough. More clinical trials will be needed to improve survival in this disease."

Dr. Roscoe Morton the North Central Cancer Treatment Group in Rochester, Minn., conducted a similar study using different chemotherapy drugs. However, in this attempt, the drugs did not help people live longer.

"We were not able to influence the outcomes by chemotherapy in addition to radiation," he said.

The other studies used chemotherapy plus radiation to shrink tumors so they could be removed surgically.

Lung cancer most deadly cancer type

The most deadly cancer among men and women in 1988 will be lung cancer, accounting for 35 percent of male cancer deaths and 20 percent of all cancer fatalities among women. A significant percentage of deaths occur from breast cancer in women, prostate cancer in men and colon/rectum cancer in both sexes.

Length of hospital stays down

WASHINGTON (AP) — The length of the average hospital stay has dropped since 1980, creating both real and "false" savings, a researcher for the Department of Health and Human Services says.

The average number of days patients spent in hospitals declined from 11 percent to 15 percent in the early 1980s, said Dean Farley, deputy research manager of the Hospital Studies Program in the National Center for Health Services Research and Health Care Technology Assessment.

Although the decline has reduced health care costs for individuals, the government and insurers, "in a sense there's a false sense of savings," he said Tuesday.

"While patients are staying a shorter period in the hospitals they are going elsewhere and recuperating," he said.

"Hospitals are reducing their costs," he said. "Insurers and the government are saving money, but patients still need nursing care" and they usually get it from family members, he said.

The average hospital stay declined from 7.35 days in 1980 to 5.71 days in 1985, according to The New York Times, which reported on the findings in today's editions.

Farley said the decline has occurred even though hospitals are tending to admit patients who are sicker and who therefore stay longer. But for some specific medical conditions the length of stay has been shortened, he said.

He cited the example of women who used to be admitted to hospitals for stays of three to five days for normal delivery of babies now being discharged one or two days after delivery.

"The decline has been very substantial and what has happened is that people (who once were admitted for) relatively short stays aren't getting into the hospitals," Farley said. Instead, he said, they are treated as outpatients.

Studies show benefits of treatment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women with early stage breast cancer would benefit from treatment in addition to initial surgery or radiation therapy, the National Cancer Institute says, citing three studies that have yet to be published.

Such additional treatment — chemotherapy or hormonal therapy or both — has been the institution's formal recommendation for the past two years in cases involving more advanced breast cancer.

The NCI announcement Thursday shows the institute views the new findings significant enough to publicize before they are formally published in a medical journal or presented at a scientific meeting.

Women with early stage breast cancer — before it has spread to lymph nodes under the arm — have been regarded as having a relatively favorable prognosis after primary treatment, but it is now recognized that up to 30 percent have recurrences of their cancer, the NCI said.

"The richness of the clinical evidence from a variety of trials now shows that this outlook can be improved upon," NCI Director Dr. Vincent T. DeVita Jr. said.

A MATTER OF TASTE

The unpleasant tastes of bitter tablets can be minimized by placing the tablet on a specific area of the tongue. The tongue has taste buds for sweet and salty tastes on the front tip, for sour tastes along the edges, and for bitter tastes at the back. To help mask a bitter taste, place the tablet toward the front of the tongue since there are no bitter taste buds there. Tablets that taste too sweet could similiarly be placed near the back of the tongue where there are no sweet taste buds. In this way, unpleasant tastes are not given as great an opportunity to stimulate the taste buds that detect that particular taste.

SOUND ADVICE

By Orland Purcell, M.S., Audiologist

HEAR, HEAR

It is a fairly tricky task for parents to check their newborn's hearing ability. However, those parents with a history of childhood deafness may want to try. Naturally, a newborn is bound to be distracted by anything in its proximity. A loud hand-clap, however, at a distance of two feet from a resting baby should elicit a startled response. By the time an infant is six months old, she will begin fo localize sound with a turn of her head toward the noise source. At the age of one year and four months, this localization process should be quite specific. A three-year-old's hearing should be acute enough to detect a ticking watch. Of course, much more sophisticated electronic testing is available.

Hearing is a most precious sense that we possess. It is important to our well-being and enjoyment of living. AUDIO ACOUSTICS HEARING CENTERS, INC., 32 Village Court, offers the hearing instruments that can help many who suffer from hearing loss. If you have such a problem, we invite you to come and see what we can do for you. Tel. 682-5033. Open 9-5 Mon.-Fri.

HINT:
Parents should not try to scare children with loud sounds while "testing" for mild hearing loss.

TEMPEST IN A BOTTLE

Recent research shows a positive link between alcohol consumption in women and breast cancer. Researchers now believe that as few as three drinks per week can increase by fifty percent the likelihood of a woman developing breast cancer. Alcohol consumption by pregnant women in the first trimester has also been tied to serious irregularities in the unborn child. Heavy drinking among women also has a negative affect on a woman's ovulation, ovary size, hormone production, and menstrual flow. All these findings may have their basis in alcohol's concentration level in women. Because women have less body water then men, alcohol concentrates at higher levels in their blood stream. Thus, it takes a good deal less alcohol to do damage to a woman's body than a man's.

Although people may feel they are giving up the "pleasure" associated with alcohol, in the long run, the payoffs outweigh the cost. If you feel alcohol is causing you or a loved one health and personality problem, contact your physician for professional help. Contact the Medi-Help, Inc. at 805 W. Wadley @ A for personalized family health care services and preventive medicine. In-house lab and x-ray services also performed. Hours: 8-8, 7 days a week. Tel. 687-2704. Have a safe Memorial Day weekend!

HINT:
The risk of breast cancer posed by alcohol is greatest among slim, premenopausal women.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your exuberance will inspire others. Seize the brass ring when it comes your way! You enter this next year of your life with a clean slate. Talents you may not realize you have will display themselves at exactly the right moment. Your good luck carries over into areas of health, romance and long-term investments.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Bruce Weitz and Vincent Price, dancer Isadora Duncan, biologist Rachel Carson, authors John Cheever and Herman Wouk, "Wild Bill" Hickok, author Julia Ward Howe, Vice President Hubert Humphrey, diplomat Henry Kissinger, composer Harold Rome.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A very productive day lies ahead. Others will be open to your ideas and suggestions. You have your act together. A good day for expanding a relationship, fulfilling loved ones' wishes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Consider employment alternatives if you are unhappy about your work. Work pressures may be all that ail you. Check with a doctor to be sure. Travel is favored if you keep expenses down.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Make a big push to finish things this morning so you will feel really free this weekend. You could be a source of inspiration to someone you do not even know.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Humor is a valuable ally in establishing a new relationship. Things should go well for you now. Financial planning lets you increase investments or savings. Call loved ones or allies overseas.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An athletic event commands your attention. Regular exercise will help you feel and look better. Be direct and you will get what you want. Include the whole family in your decision-making.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Morning travel is not advisable as there could be mix-ups. Do not lose your cool. Take any rumors you hear about friends, organizational ties or romantic affairs with a grain of salt. Be realistic.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A sharp difference of opinion with mate will get the day off to a rocky start. Compromise! Instead of brooding over past mistakes, look for new ways to cut costs. Speed routine tasks.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your powers of concentration are at their peak. Tackle those tasks that require careful attention to detail. Come to grips with a challenging creative project. Home life continues to be joyful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Listen attentively to partner's advice. Catch up on paperwork and routine chores. An influential person is not available right now. Romance provides the brightest spot in your day. Be affectionate with loved ones.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An old friend supplies the information you need to put over an important project. If practical, share the glory and financial remuneration. Romance continues on a steady course.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You make long-range plans to ensure your financial security. Remember that family members need to know exactly where they stand. Romance will blossom if you make the first move. Be bold.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Check facts and figures very carefully before making a proposal. Protect joint resources by paying more attention to routine tasks. A discussion with your mate provides food for thought. Keep your own counsel.

A seventeen-year-old New Yorker, Brad Moss, became one of the youngest players to win a national title when he and his partner, Aaron Silverstein, also of New York, captured the Flight B Grand National Pairs at the Spring North American Championships, held in Buffalo. This hand, from the final session of the event, carried them to the title.

The power of the 4-3 fit was vigorously espoused by the late Alphonse "Sonny" Moyse, and has become known as the Moysian fit. North-South were using a 15-17 point range for their one no trump opening bids. North's two clubs was Stayman, looking for a four-card spade suit in his partner's hand, and four no trump was a quantitative no trump raise, not Blackwood. South's five hearts conditionally accepted the slam invitation and showed a concentration of heart honors, and North opted for the suit slam on the known 4-3 fit because of his ruffing value in diamonds.

Moss won the opening lead in dummy, cashed the king of hearts and ace of diamonds, then drew a second round of trumps with the ace, to which both defenders followed. After cashing the king of diamonds, declarer ruffed a diamond with dummy's last trump as East discarded a club.

A winning spade finesse put declarer in hand to draw the last two trumps, on which he discarded spades from dummy. East could safely part with a spade on the first round of trumps, but the last trump caused him grievous harm. He knew he could not let go of a club, so he tried a spade. Declarer's three of spades became an overtrick for all the matchpoints.

Ending of 'St. Elsewhere' shows it was just all in the mind of one beholder

NEW YORK (AP) — After a boldly existential ending, "St. Elsewhere" exists no more.

The show, which won a dozen Emmy Awards, concluded Wednesday night with a surprise conclusion revealing the entire six years of the critically acclaimed series as the fantasy of an autistic child.

"We've had the ending for a number of years," said Bruce Paltrow, one of the show's executive producers.

"We were looking for the metaphor for all of us to have created this fiction. To place the entire six years into the imagination of boy who could not communicate with the outside world, but had this staggeringly exciting inner life was we thought an excitingly existential end to the series."

When it made its debut six season ago, "St. Elsewhere" was part of a wave of creativity from MTM Productions that revolutionized stodgy network programming in the 1980s. "St. Elsewhere" followed "Hill Street Blues" onto NBC and was inevitably compared to the earlier show's groundbreaking style, overlapping dialogue and hand-held cameras.

But "St. Elsewhere" went beyond "Hill Street" in social satire. At times serious, at times hilarious, it took on politics, religion, AIDS, heterosexual and homosexual rape, cancer, drug abuse, the afterlife, corporate indifference, its own network and previous shows from MTM. One entire episode revolved around a male patient's insistence that he was Mary Richards from "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

The "St. Elsewhere" writers had wanted to go all out in the final episode, but prohibitive costs kept their script, a futuristic view of St. Eligius at the edge of apocalypse, from being filmed.

In the end, prohibitive costs knocked down not only the intended final episode but the show itself. "St. Elsewhere" was produced at a loss by MTM at a time when hour-long series are not selling well in syndication.

The show will be seen in reruns, but MTM will not release details of its syndication sales.

In an apparently personal, inside joke in the dialogue of the final script, Dr. Wayne Fiscus (Howie Mandel), says of his years at St. Eligius, "Grueling hours, bad food, egomania, death and moral confusion. It'll be hard to leave."

HOUSTON (AP) — State Rep. Juan Hinojosa, D-McAllen, has been selected for honors as the 1988 Texas Friend of the First Amendment.

Hinojosa will receive the award Friday from the Houston Chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi, during the annual Press Club of Houston's Excellence in Journalism awards program.

Chapter President Sandy Rivera said Hinojosa was selected for his efforts in amending the state Open Meetings Act in the 1987 session of the Texas Legislature. Similar reform attempts had failed in three earlier sessions.

Elvis

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Priscilla Presley says she's incensed over reports that her ex-husband Elvis Presley is alive and in seclusion.

Such claims by "supposedly reputable journalists," she said, are nonsense and harmful to herself and 20-year-old daughter, Lisa Marie, Elvis' only child.

Miss Presley, who was married to Elvis from 1967 to 1972, said Wednesday she was referring to KABC-TV's four-part series called "Is Elvis Alive?"

The report mentioned Atlanta author Gail Giorgio, whose book, "The Most Incredible Elvis Presley Story Ever Told," purports the King of Rock 'n' Roll may still be swinging. Ms. Giorgio claims she has an audio tape of Elvis speaking in 1980.

Presley died in 1977, four years after Priscilla Presley divorced him.

"It infuriates me that certain journalists have decided to exploit Elvis Presley's death merely for the sake of newspaper sales and higher ratings," Miss Presley said.

The Los Angeles station's news director, Terry Crofoot, said, "It isn't KABC's claim that Elvis is alive. It would be ludicrous for us to say that."

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Ryan White doesn't have his driver's license yet, but the 16-year-old AIDS victim happily accepted the keys to his own car as he was honored for his "ennobling" courage.

Ryan received the black 1987 Chevrolet Cavalier from the Indiana Independent Automobile Dealers Association on Wednesday.

"Ryan has shown that the ordinary things in life can be ennobling. He has the kind of courage that I think most of us would like to have," said the association's president, Fritz Kreutzinger.

"I just want to tell everybody thanks," Ryan said. When asked what he planned to do with the car, he replied, "Drive it. I'm going to go anywhere and everywhere."

Ryan, who contracted AIDS through blood products used in the treatment of his hemophilia, won a long legal battle to stay in public school after officials in Kokomo banned him from classes in 1985.

He has completed driver's education classes and plans to get his license June 9.

NEW YORK (AP) — Ivana Trump may have already made her fortune in the land of opportunity, but the transition from immigrant to U.S. citizen wasn't complete until she stood before a judge with 141 other naturalized citizens.

With her at Wednesday's ceremony was her husband, billionaire developer Donald Trump, who listened as Judge Charles S. Haight Jr. told the new citizens that "by your presence, America is vastly enriched."

"I'm very proud of my wife," a beaming Trump said. "I'm very proud of my country. It's a great country and that's where a great woman should be. Now they're both matched up perfectly."

Mrs. Trump, a 38-year-old Austrian-born, former Czechoslovakian national, came to this country 10 years ago after working as a model in Montreal.

Teresa

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Mother Teresa, the 77-year-old "saint of the gutters," gave a spiritual lift to AIDS patients during a visit to a day center opened by her religious order to help victims of the disease.

"The disease should not make us bitter or angry," said the Yugoslav-born Roman Catholic nun and founder of the Missionaries of Charity, which in October opened "The Center" in one of Oakland's most crime-plagued neighborhoods.

"We must accept (AIDS)...make use of it, not as a punishment, but as a thing that gives us peace," she said during the visit Wednesday.

Tenneco selling oil, gas operations

HOUSTON (AP) — Tenneco Inc., the 10th largest U.S. oil company, picked a favorable time to sell its oil and gas operations, analysts say.

"I think they see where they can liquidate some assets at decent values," said H.B. Juengling, a natural gas pipeline analyst for Howard Weil Lobouisse Friedrichs Inc. in Houston. "In 1986, the values just weren't there."

On Wednesday, the company announced it would be leaving the oil business by selling its oil and gas operations, instead concentrating on other industrial and pipeline ventures.

The company would not put an estimate on how much the sales might bring, but George J. Gaspar, an oil analyst with Robert W. Baird & Co. Inc in Milwaukee, believes the company has already courted some interested buyers.

"I would expect they've had a nudge already, and decided to go public with the announcement to solicit other bids to make sure they will get the most attractive price possible," Gaspar said.

The Houston-based company, which posted 1987 revenues of $14.8 billion, will use proceeds from the sale to help pay its hefty $8.5 billion debt, Tenneco spokeswoman Suzanne Thomas said.

"The new Tenneco will be a financially stronger and more focused company," said James L. Ketelsen, Tenneco's chairman and chief executive officer.

"With significantly reduced debt and capital expenditure needs, the company's earnings should improve materially, and its intrinsic value to shareholders will be secured and enhanced," he added.

Proceeds from the sale also may be used to repurchase shares of the company's common stock, depending on market conditions and total proceeds from the sale, he said.

The oil and gas ventures being sold are from the Tenneco Oil Co. subsidiary engaged in exploration, production, refining and marketing.

In 1987, it had sales of $3.3 billion and operating income of $233 million. The company's proved reserves of crude oil and natural gas liquids were 407 million barrels at the end of 1987. Natural gas reserves totaled 2.95 trillion cubic feet.

Economy expands robust 3.9 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy, helped by the biggest improvement in trade in eight years, expanded at a robust annual rate of 3.9 percent in the first three months of the year, far better than previously thought, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the gross national product, the broadest measure of economic health, performed far better from January through March than it had estimated a month ago.

At that time, the department put GNP growth at 2.3 percent.

About four-fifths of the improvement from that first estimate came from a narrowing of the foreign trade deficit, which shrank in inflation-adjusted terms at an annual rate of $16.7 billion in the first three months of the year.

This represented the sharpest narrowing of the trade deficit since a $24.8 billion drop in the first quarter of 1980.

The trade improvement had been estimated as a much smaller $3.6 billion last month, but that was before the government had data for exports and imports in March, a month when the trade deficit shrank sharply because of a record level of imports.

Icahn offers $13.64 billion for Texaco

NEW YORK (AP) — Takever strategist Carl C. Icahn is offering a record-breaking $13.64 billion for Texaco Inc., but the troubled oil mammoth says the proposal from its largest shareholder is a phony "bear hug" pressure ploy.

Icahn, who bought Trans World Airlines and has chased other big companies such as USX Corp., disclosed the $60-a-share offer late Wednesday in a letter to Texaco management.

He publicized the offer shortly after Texaco management scrapped talks with him over how to restructure following its emergence from bankruptcy-court reorganization last month.

Icahn has amassed a 14.8 percent stake in the nation's third-largest oil company, and has been seeking the most profitable way to exploit it.

Earlier this month, Icahn, who has said Texaco would be worth more broken up and sold, threatened a shareholder proxy fight to install five allies on its board. The company responded by suing him for alleged securities fraud.

They began peace talks about three weeks ago. Texaco President James Kinnear said the company terminated the discussions Wednesday because of what he called Icahn's unreasonable demands for special treatment in a restructuring.

"Texaco will not be bullied or cajoled into recommending to its shareholders a transaction that is not in their best interest or the best interest of the company," Kinnear said.

Of 243 Texaco shares outstanding, Icahn owns about 36 million, for which he paid an average $34 each or about $1.22 billion. Combined with the $12.42 billion he offered to pay for the rest, the total offer is worth about $13.64 billion.

If completed, such an offer would be the biggest in corporate history. The previous record was the 1984 $13.4 billion acquisition of Gulf Corp. by Standard Oil Co. of California, now Chevron Corp.

Icahn said in his letter that he would drop the proxy contest if management would allow other stockholders to consider the offer. He gave management until 5 p.m. Friday to think it over.

He provided few other details, but said part of his financing plan would include the sale of Texaco Canada Inc. and Caltex, two of Texaco's most prized assets.

Texaco spokeswoman Anita Larsen called Icahn's proposal "an illusory offer which so far as Texaco has seen."

Employment on upswing says official

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Employment and the economy is on the upswing in Midland, the Texas Employment Commission manager in Midland told the Midland Chamber of Commerce board of directors Wednesday.

Joe Hatcher told the board in a special report that 47,000 people were now employed in Midland and that only 3,000 were unemployed. "That represents about six percent of the workforce," said Hatcher. "We would like to get that down to three or four percent, which reflects only the people in between jobs."

He called six percent unemployment a "world of difference" from 1986 when the unemployment rate in Midland was 14 percent. In 1986 he said he only had 20 job openings, but today over 200 job openings were available at the Midland TEC office.

"Those are not all minimum wage jobs either," he added. "They are across the full employment spectrum from professional to minimum wage jobs." Hatcher noted that one problem still lingering in the market is that too many professionals are still underemployed, and many are retraining for other careers.

He said the unemployment fund which had been depleted during the downturn of 1986 and 1987 was now solvent and predicted if the economy continued on the upswing unemployment taxes would be lowered next year.

In other positive news Chamber membership was reported on the increase with 38 new members being added in the past month.

The Midland Jaycees reported that it was continuing efforts to move the Jaycee state headquarters to Midland from Grand Prairie and that it would soon launch a major capital project to obtain funds for construction of a major agricultural exposition center to be located between Midland and Odessa.

Economist urges more oil stockpiling

Sprinkel

DALLAS (AP) — The United States should stockpile more of its own oil to stymie possible political maneuvering by foreign suppliers, a national economic advisor told energy industry executives Wednesday.

"If oil prices remain low, we could be importing as much as 50 percent of our oil by 1990, and as much as 60 percent by 1995," said Beryl W. Sprinkel, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisors. "Much of this oil comes from the Persian Gulf, an area not known for its peace and tranquility."

Sprinkel told a national conference for energy executives that America can wean itself from dependence on the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries by using more domestic and Canadian fuel products.

A free-trade agreement signed by President Reagan and Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney will represent an important step in that direction, he said.

"The Strategic Petroleum Reserve currently has 545 million barrels of oil — we are aiming for 750 million barrels — and it is being filled at a rate of 50,000 barrels a day," he said.

"We are trying to double the fill rate because we think this stockpile is vital to our national security," said Sprinkel. "By the early 1990s, we plan to have enough stocks on hand to be able to release 4 million barrels per day for at least six months.

But John G. Jenkins, president of the American Energy Assurance Council, said the prospect of a real energy crisis looms in the not-so-distant future, even without interruption of foreign oil supplies.

The council — a coalition of 100 energy producers, environmentalists, consumers and public officials — will stage a national energy crisis simulation on Nov. 17-18 to stimulate formation of a sustainable long-range U.S. energy strategy.

In the war games-style simulation, council members will defend their constituencies in reaction to an energy crisis scenario. Members include 10 governors of mostly Western states, five heads of energy companies and four environmental group leaders.

Clements celebrates state's lower unemployment

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas economy is improving, and reports of lower unemployment rates in cities across the state prove it, Gov. Bill Clements says.

"Certainly, these headlines this morning tell it all. This is big news, really," the governor said Wednesday as he displayed to a news conference several newspaper headlines reporting the latest jobless statistics.

The governor noted that the new figures compiled by the Texas Employment Commission showed that jobless rates for April had dropped in all major Texas metropolitan areas.

Statewide, the April unemployment rate fell to 7.5 percent, the lowest level since January 1986, Clements said.

In the 1986 election campaign, Clements made "jobs, jobs, jobs" his central theme. He said the declining unemployment rates this spring show that his administration's efforts are paying off.

"For nearly a year now, we've been pointing to an economy on the mend and on the move. Our highest priority has been and now is in creating new jobs and new opportunities for all Texans. By the looks of it, we're seeing some real results," Clements said.

The governor said that while the trends are positive, much remains to be done to lift Texas out of the economic hole it fell into after oil prices began plunging late in 1985.

"We do have a long way to go. But we're getting there. We're making progress, and we're pressing on with our programs for economic growth," he said.

One of those efforts is promotion of the "maquiladora" twin-plant operations with joint factories in Texas and Mexico, and Clements announced Wednesday that a special governor's conference on maquiladoras would be held in Dallas June 1.

Clements said the idea of sharing production work on both sides of the border is good for the economies of Mexico and Texas.

"Some 34,000 new jobs will be created in Texas if we can capture just 25 percent of the maquiladora parts and supplies market," he said.

In Texas today, more than 12,000 workers are employed at 154 plants and businesses engaged in the maquiladora work, he said.

The program's effects are felt far beyond the Rio Grande Valley, he added.

"In fact, maquiladoras now buy supplies from or produce parts for plants in 36 Texas communities — 25 of them are located outside the border region in cities like Nacogdoches, Waco and Lubbock."

Clements said the upcoming conference would bring together representatives from local chambers of commerce, industry, plus delegations from the four Mexican states which border Texas. Gov. Jorge Trevino of Nuevo Leon also will take part, Clements said.

Joining the governor was H. Dane Harris, president of the Texas Association of Business, who said the twin-plant concept has had a proven record in putting people to work.

BUSNESS IN BRIEF

Sales of existing homes up 4.5 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of existing homes rose 4.5 percent in April, the biggest advance in 17 months, as buyers rushed to close deals before interest rates went up, a real estate trade group reported.

The National Association of Realtors said Wednesday that existing single-family homes were sold at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.48 million units last month, following increases of 2.5 percent in both February and March.

Nation's bank system getting better

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's commercial banks appear to be recovering from their worst year since the Depression despite mounting bank failures in the Southwest and continuing problems with loans to Third World countries, federal regulators said.

"The banking system as a whole is sound and getting sounder ...," Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Chairman L. William Seidman told the Senate Banking Committee on Wednesday.

In particular, the performance of farm banks, the sore spot of the industry several years ago, is slowly improving as agriculture recovers from its slump, Seidman said.

Business failures fall 10.1 percent

NEW YORK (AP) —Business failures declined by 10.1 percent in the first quarter over a year earlier as more farmers and retailers climbed out of the red, a report said.

Dun & Bradstreet Corp., a business-information firm, said Wednesday that 15,211 companies nationwide went under during the first three months of this year, compared with 16,924 in 1987.

American to purchase up to 100 757s

RENTON, Wash. (AP) — American Airlines announced it would buy up to 100 Boeing 757-200s to replace aging aircraft in its fleet, giving Boeing Co. its second multibillion-dollar order in as many weeks.

American officials said Wednesday they were ordering 50 757s for delivery between July 1989 and November 1991, with an option to purchase 50 more. The deal could be worth more than $4 billion to Boeing.

Blue Mountain gets victory over Hallmark

DENVER (AP) — A federal appeals court upheld a ruling temporarily forbidding Hallmark Cards Inc. from making greeting card designs resembling those of a small competitor, clearing the way for a full trial of the company's $50 million damage suit against Hallmark.

Blue Mountain Arts brought suit against Hallmark about two years ago, alleging that Hallmark's "Personal Touch" line of greeting cards is deceptively similar to their "AireBrush Feelings" and "WaterColor Feelings" lines.

Yugoslav workers quitting McDonalds

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The first McDonald's to open in a communist country has run into an unexpected problem: Trained employees are quitting because they find they have to work like Westerners and get paid like Eastern Europeans.

Since the U.S. fast food chain opened its outlet in Belgrade in March, 40 employees — about one-third of its workers — have voluntarily left their jobs despite a high unemployment rate in Yugoslavia.

OIL AND GAS DIGEST

Pelto, LCRA agree to exploration program

HOUSTON (SWN) — Pelto Oil Co., a subsidiary of Southdown, Inc. and the Lower Colorado River Authority (LCRA) have agreed to a $93 million, three year oil and gas exploration program to be effective April 1, 1988. Additional capital for development drilling and production equipment on exploration discoveries will also be borne proportionately by Pelto and LCRA. The program will be conducted onshore and offshore in the Gulf Coast Geological Basin, and Pelto will be the operator.

Mobil to begin developing North Sea field

NEW YORK (SWN) — Mobil North Sea Ltd., a unit of Mobil Oil Corp., has begun developing the Camelot Field in the North Sea's Southern Gas Basin, the company announced.

The 100%-interest Mobil field will produce an estimated 70 million cubic feet of natural gas daily from reserves estimated at 250 billion cubic feet.

Production is scheduled to begin the second half of 1989, just two years from spudding of the appraisal well that led to the decision to develop the field.

Initial construction and installation contracts of approximately $15 million have been let. Five production wells are planned from an unmanned, four-leg steel jacket platform in 15 meters of water.

Camelot straddles Blocks 53/1a and 53/2 about 30 miles northeast of Great Yarmouth. The gas will flow through a seven-mile pipeline to the Amoco-operated East Leman platform complex, where it will be processed before transmission to Norfolk. Amoco will provide in-field operating services to Camelot on behalf of Mobil.

Mitchell Energy reports two gas completions

THE WOODLANDS (SWN) — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. reported the completion of two natural gas wells in the North Personville Field, located in the Limestone County area of East Central Texas.

The new wells are the R.L. Renfro No. 2 and the Quinn Estate No. 2, both of which were given hydraulic fracturing treatments to improve their gas flow from the field's Cotton Valley Lime pay zone, a tight-rock formation. The R.L. Renfro No. 2 initially produced at a rate of 3.6 Mmcfd on an 11/64-inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 3,600 psi from perforations 10,983 to 11,174 feet. The Quinn Estate No. 2 initially flowed at a rate of 3 Mmcfd on a 12/64-inch choke with 1,990 psi of flowing tubing pressure from perforations 10,590 to 10,754 feet.

MEC Development Ltd., a partnership in which Mitchell is the operator and general partner, owns a 98.8 percent working interest in the R. L. Renfro No. 2, and a 100 percent working interest in the Quinn Estate No. 2.

Kern River, Whittier sign transportation pact

HOUSTON — Kern River Gas Transmission Co., a joint venture of units of Tenneco Inc. and The Williams Companies, Inc., has announced the signing of a letter of intent with M.H. Whittier Corp. of South Pasadena, Calif.

This marks another step toward construction of a proposed 837-mile natural gas pipeline from southwestern Wyoming to the heavy-oil fields of Kern County, Calif.

The letter of intent envisions an agreement for firm transportation by Kern River for Whittier of up to 3.5 Mmcfd. The Kern River line is expected to begin operation in 1991.

Enron completes sale of $100 million in notes

HOUSTON (SWN) — Enron Corp. announced that it has completed the public sale of $100 million principal amount of 9-5/8 Percent Senior Notes due June 1, 1993. The notes were underwritten by Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

Proceeds to Enron of approximately $98,995,000 will be used primarily for repayment of short-term debt. The notes were rated Baa3 by Moody's Investors Service Inc. and triple-B-minus by Standard & Poor's Corp.

GNP

Economists had been expecting an upward revision in the GNP report, but the 3.9 percent growth rate was far above most estimates. The consensus outlook had expected a GNP increase of 3.2 percent.

Analysts have had their troubles making economic predictions. Immediately following the Oct. 19 stock market crash, many analysts forecast the country would be in a recession early this year, triggered by consumer fears after the record 508-point drop in the Dow-Jones industrial average.

The strong economic growth has buried recession fears for this year, but now financial markets have become concerned that the economy may be expanding so rapidly that inflation will be rekindled.

But the new GNP report did not support any inflation worries. The revised report showed that an inflation index which measures prices of a selection of goods rose at an annual rate of just 1.7 percent in the first three months of the year, down from a 2.7 percent rate in the fourth quarter. It was the lowest rise in inflation since late 1986.

EMPLOYMENT

Jaycee Spokesman Matt Blair told the board that a first-class agricultural center had been identified as a major need and could bring funds into the community.

Blair said the Texas Jaycees had elected to keep its office in Grand Prairie at this time, but the issue of moving the state office to Midland would be addressed again next year. Although only three are employed in the state office, it does generate a sizable bank account and considerable correspondence, Blair noted.

Another proposed capital project was announced by Keep Midland Beautiful Director Richard Wigzell, who told the board that Keep Midland Beautiful intended to request funds for a study to improve the railroad right-of-way which dissects Midland.

"Our situation is similar to Abilene's in that a railroad runs through town," said Wigzell. "We have studied the Abilene plan and feel Midland's right-of-way could use some attention." He added that Keep Midland Beautiful also planned to enhance the rights-of-way of city streets with landscaping and trees to improve the physical appearance of the city.

A negative note was added to the meeting by City Councilman Robert Rendall who indicated that development along Midland Draw could become a controversial issue in the months to come because of a Army Corp. of Engineers flood study report. He said Midland Draw was a flood zone and would be the number one issue addressed at the Council's annual planning retreat at Kerrville.

In other reports, Kay Bivens reported that a major needs assessment survey for Midland was set to be published later this summer, and that Community and Senior Services had joined United Way as a new agency.

The Permian Basin Bid Center reported that it now had all the military and federal bid regulations in house and would no longer have to rely on the Beaumont, Texas Bid Center for that information.

The Chamber Board also passed two resolutions. One endorsed the Buy West Texas First campaign which encourages local citizens and governmental agencies to shop at home whenever feasible. The other applauded the Midland Jaycees for fifty years of service to the community.

U.S. bonds simple gift for grandchildrens' future

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Contrary to what I have been told by lawyers, brokers and bankers, I have discovered a way to make sizeable gifts to my young grandchildren without going to the time, trouble and expense of establishing trusts or, even, using the gifts to minors laws.

I simply buy U.S. Savings Bonds. I have each bond put in my name "or" a grandchild's name, with my Social Security number on the bond.

I retain unobstructed access to the bonds. As long as I live, I can cash the bonds. I intend to do just that, if any of the grandchildren run wild and start taking dope.

When I die, each grandchild will become sole owner of the bonds bearing his or her name. No probate or other problems. Do you agree this is an easy way of making gifts — with safety strings attached — to grandchildren?

Doyle

A. Sure. It's clear you have thought out your plan very carefully. And it is a nice simple plan. Actually, you're making gifts of future interest, which your grandchildren will receive after you depart this earth. You could do the same thing for other people you like — relatives and non-relatives.

Just a couple of points.

When savings bonds are in co-ownership form, as yours are, either owner can redeem them. If some of the youngsters do go astray, it would be wise to keep the bonds out of their reach — so that they can't run to the bank, turn them in for cash and take off on a wild spree.

Those bonds will escape probate, as do all things in joint ownership. However, that does not necessarily mean there will be no "death taxes." Because you purchased them with your money, the bonds should be included in your estate for federal estate tax and state inheritance and/or estate tax purposes.

Q. As interest rates in general rise and inflation once again rears its ugly head, can you suggest any "safe" investment comparable to Series EE, U.S. Savings Bonds, which have a "floating" interest rate?

A memo from a friend in the U.S. Treasury Department states, "If the rate on five-year U.S. Treasury notes soars to 20 percent, EE bonds held for five years will yield a whopping 17 percent, with no ceiling on how high they could go."

What say you?

A. That memo from your friend is accurate, but it starts with a mighty big "if."

Interest on EE bonds, as well as the older E bonds, held for five years or longer accumulates at what the Treasury Department calls a "market-based rate." It is adjusted every May 1 and November 1 and is equal to 85 percent of the yield on marketable Treasury securities for the previous six months.

In the most unlikely event five-year Treasury notes yield 20 percent in some future six-month period, EEs and Es will accrue interest at 17 percent in the following six months. 85 percent of 20 percent is 17 percent.

However, even in the worst of inflationary times, five-year Treasuries have never yielded 20 percent. The high yield on Treasury notes barely topped 16 percent on July 24, 1981.

The market-based rate on EEs and Es for the six months ending Oct. 31 is 6.9 percent, down from 7.17 in the previous six months.

Q. Isn't it true that when a person buys a U.S. Savings Bond, he or she is increasing the national debt?

A. No. It's the other way about. Our federal government increases the national debt by selling savings bonds and U.S. Treasury securities. People who buy savings bonds are helping to finance the national debt.

The federal government has to keep selling savings bonds and Treasury securities because of the federal deficit — spending more money than it is collecting in taxes — and also because Treasury securities are constantly maturing and have to be refinanced.

Soviet security takes on legendary proportions

By CAROL J. WILLIAMS

MOSCOW (AP) — A few years ago, an oft-told story goes, a city traffic cop had somehow obtained a hand-held radar gun and decided to test it by clocking the speeding motorcade of then-Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev.

As the Communist Party chief's shiny black ZIL limousine, two others bearing bodyguards and a pair of Volga sedans flashed onto the horizon of Kutuzovsky Prospekt, the officer aimed the detector at the fast-approaching motorcade.

The radar gun broke as it crashed to the ground, dropped by the policeman who had been shot between the eyes by sharp-shooting secret police agents who guard the Soviet leader.

The story cannot be verified and may well be apochryphal, as radar traps are still rare in the Soviet capital. But the armed guards who ride in the leader's motorcade, with their gun barrels poised low in the open car windows, are reputed to be expert riflemen.

And the tale of the hapless policeman surfaces whenever talk turns to security around the Kremlin leader.

Protection of the current ruler or visiting dignitaries is more effectively ensured in a police state, where the untold legions of secret agents keep a close eye on known troublemakers and are less encumbered than their Western counterparts by rules protecting citizens' civil rights.

The risk of a terrorist strike against Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev or President Reagan during their May 29-June 2 meetings here is probably lower than in just about any other country of the world. But the measures taken to protect them will be no less visible than in the most dangerous spots on the globe.

Soviet founder Vladimir I. Lenin was wounded in a 1918 assassination attempt, inspiring development of a security force around the leader that strengthened during the nearly three decades that dictator Jos ef V. Stalin was in power.

WORLD

No other attempts on the life of the leader have been documented, although there have been rumors about several, including against Gorbachev.

Gun ownership has been forbidden here since the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution that brought the Soviets to power, and illegal possession of firearms carries a five-year prison term. Soviets are even prohibited from carrying hunting knives without special permits attesting that the potential weapons are part of a national costume or for actual use while hunting.

Secrecy surrounds most of the movements of the Soviet leader and his guests, with exact departure and arrival times for trips outside the capital kept secret from all but the uppermost echelon of power. When the official Tass news agency announces that Gorbachev will visit a Western nation, it usually specifies only in which half of the month the trip will take place.

The first indication that the Soviet leader has left the capital for his summer vacation is often the arrival of paving crews on Kutuzovsky Prospekt, the route regularly traveled by the leader to and from the Kremlin.

Traffic in both directions of Kutuzovsky is forced to the outer lanes when top officials or state guests travel the broad thoroughfare, while the privileged center lane is left clear for the VIPs. As the leader approaches, traffic lights along the route are switched to green by policemen who man the controls in miniature, glass-enclosed control towers overlooking the central streets.

Most of the meetings between Reagan and Gorbachev will take place within the heavily fortified Kremlin. Vehicles can enter only through two archways, with dozens of armed KGB guards in sight and others likely at the ready behind the historic fortress' crenelated russet walls.

If Reagan chooses to make an impromptu stop among the crowds of Soviets lined up along the streets to greet him, as Gorbachev did during his Washington stay, the president's own Secret Service agents will keep a wary eye on the flock of flag-waving welcomers.

One of Reagan's Secret Service agents was asked during the Washington summit whether the superpowers' two squads of bodyguards are able to work well together.

He replied that their work styles were so similar, "It's like they're working out of our manual."

Gorbachev's bodyguards often resemble Reagan's in appearance as well as demeanor. The tall, well-dressed men, with their trim haircuts and tiny earphones connected to two-way radios, are quickly identifiable during the leader's televised talks with Soviet citizens. They encircle Gorbachev and face away from him, silently scanning the crowd for suspicious movement.

Security has always been tight around the Soviet leader, but the net has pulled in even closer over the past two years.

Rumors of an assassination attempt spread through the capital after Gorbachev and his wife, Raisa, visited the southern Russian city of Krasnodar in September 1986.

Human rights 'touchiest' issue on summit agenda

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — During a speech several months ago, the U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union used a water glass to describe Soviet progress on human rights.

Holding the glass aloft, Ambassador Jack Matlock said that it would be inaccurate to view such a glass as half empty or half full.

"It's more like a glass that was dry and now has a little bit of moisture in it," he said.

The issue of human rights is one of the touchiest subjects on the U.S.-Soviet agenda, evidenced by a sternly worded defense of Soviet policies by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev during the December summit in Washington.

"What moral right does America have to assume the pose of the teacher?" the general secretary asked. He said that he told President Reagan, "You are not the prosecutor and I am not the accused. ... I am not on trial."

In an apparent attempt to soothe such touchiness, Reagan used one of his pre-summit speeches earlier this month to laud Gorbachev for taking steps to loosen the stringent restrictions on the practice of religion, freedom of speech, press and emigration.

In fact, the National Conference on Soviet Jewry reported last week that 1,086 Jews departed the Soviet Union in April, the highest monthly total in nearly seven years. Even though the figure has been rising for about a year, it falls far short of the 1979 levels, when the monthly average was about 4,000 departures.

As U.S. officials prepare to face their Soviet counterparts at the Moscow summit — the 10th session on human rights in 15 months — they point to such signs of progress, even as they warn that the basic system of repression has not changed.

"A few years ago, the entire process would have been simply unthinkable," Richard Schifter, the assistant secretary of state for human rights and humanitarian affairs, said recently.

He called such discussions "a good first step," but only the beginning of an effort to see that the Soviet Union abides by the human rights provisions of the Helsinki Final Act, which it signed along with the United States in 1975.

Besides pressing for movement in the traditional cases of divided families, divided spouses and blocked marriages, the administration also has on its human rights agenda the problems of political prisoners, emigration and religious freedom.

"You cannot speak of freedom of speech, freedom of assembly, freedom of association, freedom of the press being recognized in the Soviet Union, that is not the case. ... But sledgehammer tactics are no longer being used," Schifter said.

A technician adjusts a satellite dish as Moscow prepares for summit talks between U.S. President Ronald Reagan and Soviet General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev. In the background are the Kremlin and Saint Basil.

Freedoms are still severely limited but people are not being punished as harshly for alleged transgressions. While demonstrations are still broken up, he said, the demonstrators might be arrested for a while and released, rather than being sent to Siberia for several years.

Shifter said it also appears that the Soviet leadership "has basically given up on the deep commitment ... to conducting atheistic propaganda. That doesn't mean they have more respect for religion than they had previously, but they simply have decided that this just isn't working."

He described the human rights situation as "coming up to a better level from very, very far below, but nevertheless, there's a trend there and all we can say is we wish it would continue and perhaps accelerate."

Other experts have suggested that whatever change is taking place is partially due to the Soviet leadership's domestic concerns rather than reaction to outside presssures.

One administration expert, speaking on condition he not be identified, pointed to Gorbachev's overtures to the religious communities, in particular his meeting with a group of Russian Orthodox archbishops. The session apparently was held to show that his "glasnost" policy of increased openness included religion.

"That could very well be seen as an effort of the Soviet authorities to mobilize a very large portion of the population, which has been practically excluded from civil life for decades," the official said.

NATO ministers to review common costs

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — NATO defense ministers opened a two-day meeting today and planned to review how the allies share common defense costs and ways they can improve the alliance through arms cooperation.

On Wednesday, the alliance's European defense chiefs complained that some of the recent U.S. criticism about their contributions to the alliance was unjustified.

In a report, the ministers detailed their contributions to NATO, countering U.S. congressional criticism that Europe fails to pull its weight in the alliance.

Today, they had a chance to voice those concerns directly to Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci.

"Europe is taking a fair share of the burdens in the alliance," Dutch Defense Minister Wim van Eekelen, chairman of the meeting of the European ministers, said later.

The debate over who pays what in NATO stems from congressional efforts to curb U.S. defense spending.

Van Eekelen said the financial "burden-sharing" issue will be raised at the meeting of all defense ministers.

The Europeans' report said that of NATO's standing forces, Europe provides 90 percent of the troops and artillery, 80 percent of the tanks and combat planes and 65 percent of NATO warships.

It said 3.5 million European men and women are on active duty and 3.5 million are in reserve. By comparison, the United States has 2.3 million active duty troops and 1.5 million reservists, the report said.

At the full NATO meeting, the ministers are expected to formally ask Italy to accept the basing of 72 U.S. F-16 fighter jets that Spain is forcing off its territory.

The key problem is how the cost of transferring the planes and 4,000 soldiers and their dependents to Italy will be shared in NATO, van Eekelen said. The cost of the transfer has been estimated at $500 million.

Van Eekelen said in regard to U.S. congressional complaints that Europe is not paying its fair share in NATO:

"It's one of the perceptions that have grown steadily, but it is not entirely warranted. It is important that the true extent of the European contribution to the alliance be properly understood."

The Reagan administration has taken a less confrontational approach to the burden-sharing question than the congress and has said Europe does more for NATO than is generally believed.

In their report, NATO's European members agreed all allies must do more for NATO, in part by better managing their budgets.

They said they recognize "a stronger European defense effort is necessary in order to maintain the effectiveness of the alliance's deterrent strategy and to satisfy legitimate American concerns over burden sharing."

The United States spent 6.7 percent of its gross national product on defense in 1987 against an average of 3.3 percent for the European allies.

The Europeans argue the spending comparisons ignore unquantifiable burdens for them, such environmental damage from allied maneuvers and loss of income from real estate dedicated to military bases and other defense facilities.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Nicaraguan rebels prepare proposal

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The rebels are preparing a new peace proposal designed to bring democratic changes to Nicaragua and end their 6½-year-old war with the leftist Sandinistas.

Negotiators for both sides were set to resume their third round of high-level talks today in Managua, the Nicaraguan capital.

Alfredo Cesar, chief of the rebel delegation, told reporters late Wednesday, "We have come here to present a comprehensive proposal to the government for a global solution to the war."

The rebels, he said, were prepared to make a "special effort to achieve a definitive cease-fire."

But, he said, "I'm not optimistic because the government has not complied" with a preliminary peace plan worked out March 23 in Sapoa, a small village on the Costa Rican border.

The rebel delegation arrived Wednesday evening, ending a dispute over where the talks would be held.

Bombs rock Pretoria

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Two bombs exploded in downtown Pretoria today and injured several people, witnesses said.

The blasts in the South African capital coincided with celebrations marking the National Party's 40 years in power. President P.W. Botha's party, responsible for the country's apartheid legislation, has led the government since the whites-only election of May 26, 1948.

Witnesses said at least five people were hurt. Initial reports indicated that one or two people may have been killed, but there was no confirmation of fatalities.

Police confirmed the explosions but said they had no details.

The blasts occurred a couple blocks apart on busy downtown intersections, witnesses said. The first explosion was at 1:10 p.m. and the second blast came five minutes later, the witnesses said.

Troops to be withdrawn

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam will withdraw 50,000 troops from Cambodia by the end of the year and will pull out all its forces by 1990, the official Cambodian SPK news agency said today.

The Soviet news agency Tass, reporting from Hanoi, also reported the pullout announcement.

SPK quoted a communique from the Ministry of National Defense as saying the soldiers would be returning home from June to December.

Remaining troops will be placed under the command of the pro-Vietnamese Cambodian government, SPK said.

A 50,000-troop pullout would be by far the largest of six partial withdrawals Vietnam claims to have made since 1982.

Kerosene depot closed

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico (AP) — The state government said Wednesday a gas and kerosene depot in a residential area has been closed and would be moved because of an explosion and fire that forced evacuation of 100,000 people.

Spokesman Sergio Villarreal said at least 100,000 residents had to flee Tuesday as leaping flames threatened to ignite tanks filled with gasoline.

No one was seriously injured in the blast Tuesday at the depot owned by Pemex, the state oil monopoly. However, several firefighters suffered minor burns and Pemex employee Luis Alonso said he saw several car accidents caused by fleeing motorists.

Polish talks pending?

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Midway through the 15-day strike wave that ended this month, tentative agreement was at hand for the communist leadership's architect of economic reform to meet with Solidarity chief Lech Walesa.

But the promise of the first direct contact in six years between prominent opposition leaders and authorities went unfulfilled when Walesa joined a strike at the Lenin shipyard in Gdansk.

Now, there are signs such talks may actually be in the offing.

The "thread of dialogue" may actually have a better chance because of the strikes, Ryszard Wojna, a leading communist deputy in Parliament, was quoted as saying in this week's issue of the official newspaper Odrodzenie (Rebirth).

Senior communist leaders are encouraging talk of an "anti-crisis pact" by which the opposing camps would agree on and unite behind a program to breathe life into a lethargic economy.

Weapons bill considered

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Senate is one step away from passing a bill that would ban nuclear weapons on Philippine territory but allow port calls by nuclear-powered ships.

The bill, tentatively approved on Wednesday, is aimed at U.S. bases in the Philippines and some officials view it as a slap in the face of the Americans.

In another development, the military charged that six New Zealanders have been linked to communist rebels who staged an ambush in February in which a general's son and 10 other soldiers were killed.

The announcement followed military claims that foreign journalists may have paid communist New People's Army guerrillas to stage the ambush in Albay province in which Lt. Felix Brawner III and 10 of his men were killed.

Brawner was the only son of Brig. Gen. Felix Brawner Jr., who retired last month as the military commander for northern Luzon.

Korean students riot

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Students threw firebombs and rocks at an American bank today, farmers opposing U.S. imports battled riot police, and Prime Minister Lee Hyun-jai ordered a crackdown on anti-American protests.

Police said four people were arrested when 30 students dashed out of sidestreets and hurled rocks and about 10 firebombs at a branch in southern Seoul of the Koram Bank.

The bank, a joint venture between the Bank of America and Korean business groups, had not yet opened for business and had shutters over its windows and entrance. It was not damaged.

Discrimination studied

LONDON (AP) — New laws to combat discrimination of Roman Catholics in Northern Ireland's job market will force companies to report annually on how many Catholics and Protestants they employ.

But the measures the government proposed on Wednesday stop short of imposing hiring quotas from among the 40 percent Catholic minority. Northern Ireland Secretary Tom King said that would be "inflammatory."

An Israeli soldier escorts in an IDF supply convoy Wednesday as it heads for South Lebanon, where the Israel Defense Force provides limited air and ground support to anti-guerrilla efforts.

Israeli aircraft hit Shiite bases in southern Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli fighter-bombers and helicopter gunships attacked Shiite Moslem guerrilla bases in southern Lebanon today, hours after rocketing Palestinian positions near Sidon, police said.

Smoke billowed from the hills overlooking the southern villages of Lowaizeh and Mleekh as jets and gunships struck in three bombing, rocketing and strafing sorties starting at 8 a.m.

The Israeli army confirmed the new raid in a brief communique that said Israeli planes attacked targets southwest of Lowaizeh. The pilots reported accurate hits and returned safely to base.

Police in Sidon said they had no immediate report of casualties from the two villages about 15 miles north of the Israeli border.

On Wednesday, the two neighboring villages and the village of Soujud were attacked by Israeli-allied militiamen in a ground assault mounted behind an Israeli army artillery barrage.

Israeli news reports today said 40 guerrillas of the pro-Iranian Hezbollah were killed and about 30 wounded in those raids.

Hezbollah said 25 of its fighters were killed, 17 wounded and 20 were missing. Hezbollah's rival, the pro-Syrian Shiite Moslem Amal militia, said three of its guerrillas were killed and 10 wounded.

An Israeli army spokesman said five militiamen from the South Lebanon Army were wounded, one of them seriously.

Israeli forces reported no casualties.

Today's strike was Israel's 11th air raid on Lebanon this year. Fifty-two people were killed and 81 wounded in the previous 10 strikes since Jan. 3.

Four Israeli helicopter gunships struck at Palestinian guerrillas on Sidon's outskirts late Wednesday, killing two guerrillas and wounding four.

Police said a cluster of cement shacks belonging to Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat's mainstream Fatah faction took the brunt of the latest raid. Four shacks and three vehicles were destroyed.

The target was about 200 yards from Fatah's "cubs school" at the teeming Ein el-Hilweh refugee camp, where dozens of young guerrilla trainees were asleep. The "school" was not hit, police said.

Lowaizeh, Mleekh and Soujud were described as strongholds of Hezbollah.

Arab man attacks Jewish seminarian in market place

JERUSALEM (AP) — An Arab assailant sneaked up behind a Jewish seminary student in a perfume market today and stabbed him in the back, police said.

The victim was hospitalized and identified as the son of an Israeli government lawyer who handled land confiscation cases in the occupied territories. But authorities said they believed the attack was random.

Police said another Jewish man was stabbed to death later today in the predominantly Jewish neighborhood of Katamon, which borders an Arab village. Israel radio quoted police as saying they believed it was a criminal act not motivated by ethnic politics. The neighborhood is a poor area with a high crime rate.

The army lifted curfews imposed in parts of the occupied territories after Palestinians defied the restrictions and called a general strike to commemorate slain PLO leader Khalil Wazir.

Curfews remained in effect in a village and a refugee camp in the occupied West Bank.

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, meanwhile, said the 24-week-old Arab uprising has made peace more elusive, but reiterated that Israel must vigorously pursue negotiations with its Arab neighbors.

Since the Dec. 8 start of the uprising, 195 Palestinians have been killed and hundreds wounded. Two Israelis have died.

Witnesses identified the first stabbing victim as Chanoch Albeck. Justice Ministry officials said he was the son of Plea Albeck, who has handled land confiscation cases in the occupied territories for the government.

Panama's leaders critical of U.S. actions

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — A spokesman for Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega said Washington staged a "vulgar ambush" by hinting the U.S.-Panama crisis was ending then blaming the military leader for the collapse of negotiations.

Some Noriega associates said the talks were not over yet.

Panama's 67-member Legislative Assembly has summoned Noriega for a status report on the negotiations. Opposition parties said they would not attend. Noriega is scheduled to appear before the assembly this afternoon.

U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz said on Wednesday that a U.S. negotiating effort to induce Noriega, the power behind the civilian government, to go into exile this summer broke down and no further talks were planned.

"At the final moment in negotiations, Noriega would not carry through with the arrangements his representatives had negotiated," Shultz said. "No offers remain on the table."

A pro-government newspaper, La Republica, said the military was nervous about some of the tentative agreements.

Maj. Edgardo Lopez, Noriega's spokesman, called the situation a "vulgar ambush mounted by the State Department and Shultz" aimed at throwing Noriega off balance and regaining the lost American initiative.

Lopez noted that Noriega had said publicly there could be no agreement as long as American "aggression" against Panama continued and that the talks were "conversations" not negotiations.

A Panamanian government spokesman, Boris Moreno, said the United States "failed in an attempt to impose its demands, then tried to put out false versions of the events."

Moreno contended that Panamanian negotiators never agreed to discuss dismissal of U.S. drug smuggling charges against Noriega. He added that the sole Panamanian aim was to "cease economic aggression and military threats against the Panamanian people."

Key provisions of the proposed agreement called for Noriega's resignation in August as commander of the Panamanian Defense Forces, his departure from Panama and, in exchange, the dismissal of the drug smuggling indictments.

The goal was to remove Noriega from the Panamanian political scene as the country moved toward civilian-led rule with presidential elections in May 1989.

The United States has been seeking Noriega's removal since he was indicted in February by a federal grand jury in Miami on charges of taking at least $4.6 million in payoffs from Colombia's so-called Medellin cartel to protect cocaine shipments, launder money and hide drug smugglers from law enforcement officials.

Miami attorney Neal Sonnett, who represents Noriega on the drug indictments, said in Miami that he doubts the talks have ended.

"I have heard that only from the secretary of state and I remember hearing the secretary of state say that last March," Sonnett said on Wednesday.

La Republica said the critical issue was the presidency of Manuel Solis Palma, who took over after Noriega engineered the dismissal of President Eric Arturo Delvalle in February.

The United States still recognizes Delvalle as the nation's legitimate president. Delvalle has been in hiding since his ouster and there is an arrest warrant out for him.

La Republica said the military "rejected the points of conversation because they found no guarantee for the continuity of the constitutional mandate" of Solis Palma.

This simple garden tool is a firefighter. It can help you clear away brush and leaves that act like kindling around your home. And you.

So if you live near the forest, do a little raking. And that's not all. Landscape your home with a fire retardant plant like ivy. Use spark arrester screens on your chimney and vents. And put fire retardant material on your roof and underneath your house where it is exposed.

Because a forest fire burns more than trees.

50 LEGAL NOTICES

NOTICE OF PROPOSED CLASS ACTION SETTLEMENT

TO: All women who, since January 31, 1985, applied for, or were discouraged from applying for production, warehouse or driver positions with Sierra Spring Water Co.

This notice is being given by Order of the Court to women who may be members of a class of women affected by settlement of a lawsuit called VASQUEZ V. SIERRA SPRING WATER CO., No. CIV S-86-1272 LKK (E.D. Cal). The lawsuit claims that SIERRA SPRING WATER CO. ("SIERRA") discriminated against women in hiring production, and warehouse workers and truck drivers in its facilities throughout the United States since 1985. SIERRA has denied any wrongdoing and denies that it discriminated against women.

A hearing has been scheduled by the Court to consider the settlement, on June 30, 1988 at 4 p.m. before the Honorable Lawrence K. Karlton at the address below. If the court approves this settlement all claims by class members against SIERRA for sex discrimination in hiring will be finally resolved in accordance with the terms of the settlement.

IF YOU ARE A CLASS MEMBER, YOU HAVE THREE POSSIBLE COURSES OF ACTION AT THIS TIME:

1. You can decide to take no action, in which case you will automatically be included in the class. As a member of the class you will not be able to bring any separate court action against SIERRA based upon claims of sex discrimination in hiring.

2. You may comment on or object to the proposed settlement. If you wish to have your comments or objections considered at the settlement hearing, you must file them in writing, on or before June 23, 1988 with the Clerk of the Court at:

Clerk, United States District Court
650 Capitol Mall
Sacramento, CA 95814
Re: Vasquez v. Sierra Spring Water Co.
No. CIV S-86-1272 LKK

IF YOU DO NOT MAKE YOUR OBJECTIONS BY THAT DATE, YOU WILL LOSE THE RIGHT TO OBJECT. BOTH the envelope and the document inside MUST contain the case name and number. If you do so comment or object, you have the right to appear personally or through an attorney at the hearing described above to present your comments or objections to the court. Except with special permission of the Court, you will not be permitted to object or comment at the hearing, if your comments or objections are not received in writing by June 23, 1988.

3. If you do not wish to be part of the settlement, and thus wish to preserve your right to file your own lawsuit, you must file a written request (letter or postcard) to be excluded from the class with the Clerk of the Court at the address given above, no later than June 23, 1988.

DESCRIPTION OF THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT

The only complete statement of the terms of the proposed class action settlement is contained in the proposed Consent Decree itself and the papers filed in support of it, which you have a right to examine and/or copy at the above address.

1. SETTLEMENT CLASS

The proposed Consent Decree resolves the claims of all actual and potential female applicants and deterred female applicants who, at any time since January 31, 1985, have been denied employment by SIERRA on account of their sex for the job positions of production or warehouse worker or truck driver, excluding long-haul driver.

2. MONETARY AND INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

The proposed Consent Decree provides recruitment, hiring and promotion procedures, which SIERRA is required to follow. SIERRA is required to set aside a fund of $300,000 to be used exclusively for these purposes.

The proposed Consent Decree establishes a 30% goal for hiring of females in these job openings in California and a 25% goal for hiring of females in these job openings outside California. These goals will last 7 years unless SIERRA increases the percentage of women employed in class positions to 20%.

The proposed Consent Decree requires that SIERRA set aside a fund worth $200,000 for enforcement of the Decree. Every year it fails to meet the goals described above, a portion of the fund will go towards recruiting more women. Every year that Company meets the goals a portion of the fund will be returned to it.

The proposed Consent Decree imposes detailed reporting obligations to allow monitoring of SIERRA's compliance with the requirements of the Decree by plaintiffs' counsel.

The proposed Consent Decree will require SIERRA to pay $33,000 to named plaintiffs Vasquez, T.; Smith, S.; Butler, D.; George, R. and $67,000 to be divided between the following women ONLY: Canedo, Q.; Castanedo, M.; Drumheller, L.; Fryar, M.; Gayfield, K.; Helmhout, K.; Lopez, L.; Miranda, S.; Morales, R.; Neely, Y.; Nielson, M.; Rodriguez, A.; Salinas, I.; Sullivan, M.; Todd, L.

The proposed Consent Decree requires that SIERRA donate $50,000 to Equal Rights Advocates to be used to eliminate barriers to the employment of women in blue-collar jobs.

3. ATTORNEYS' FEES

The amount of costs and attorneys' fees to be paid to class counsel will be determined by the Court and will not be paid out of the sums listed above.

HOW TO FIND OUT MORE

If you have questions about the proposed Consent Decree, the settlement hearing or this lawsuit you may contact the attorneys who represent the class, Farnsworth, Saperstein & Seligman, 505 Fourteenth Street, Suite 1150, Oakland, CA 94612, (415) 763-9800. There will be no charge to answer your questions.
