TxDOT opts against I-27

HERALD Staff Report

The Texas Transportation Commission has decided against constructing a controlled access freeway south of Lubbock.

The decision, reached Thursday in Abilene, effectively kills any hopes of extending Interstate 27 south from Lubbock, a plan eagerly supported by several West Texas communities including Big Spring.

The decision came after the commission heard the results of a $2.3 million study of West Texas transportation needs compiled by HDR Inc., a consulting firm.

While plans for an interstate extension were killed, the commission will study the possibility of constructing a four-lane divided highway in selected West Texas corridors.

One of the corridors being considered for the possible expansion is the area south of Lubbock.

First Southwest gets bid for BSISD's bonds

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

First Southwest Co. outbid four other investment houses and was awarded $12.52 million in bonds from the Big Spring Independent School District.

Proceeds from the bonds, recently approved by local voters, will be used to construct a new junior high school and air-conditioned five BSISD campuses.

First Southwest, a Dallas firm that also advised the school district during the recent bond election, will charge the district $11.206 million in interest -- with an effective interest rate of 5.55 percent -- for the 25-year payout on the bonds.

In comparison, Rauscher Pierce Inc., the next lowest bidder, would have charged the district $11.211 million in interest with an effective rate of 5.53 percent.

Other firms submitting bids were Nation's Bank, Dane Bosworth Inc. and Merrill Lynch.

One factor attracting the firms to the local issue was its AAA rating, the highest in the industry. The high rating was achieved because the bonds are backed by a guarantee from the multi-billion-dollar Texas Permanent School Fund.

Because First Southwest advised the district on the bond issue, it had to take steps to avoid conflict of interest, starting with receiving special permission from the board to submit a bid.

"Our bidding was done by our desk in Dallas," First Southwest officer Vince Vialle said. "We had no input whatsoever."

"This is really standard procedure in the industry," he said of his firm's advisor/bidder status. "There's ways you could skirt the laws, but if you did, the other firms would find out. There would be legal ramifications ... and this bid is just not worth it."

BSISD officials now must wait two or three weeks for the state

Rudy Izzard again vowing local offices

By JOHN H. WALKER
Managing Editor

Rudy Izzard, Republican candidate for Texas' 17th Congressional District seat currently held by Charles Stenholm (D-Stamford), once again brought his message to Big Spring, addressing supporters Thursday in the Howard County Court Room.

As he did at Monday's candidate's forum sponsored by the Concerned Women for America, Izzard pledged to open a district office in Big Spring if elected.

"This is a big district and I know that people out here sometimes feel that they are out of the loop. I want to change that. I think opening an office six hours a day, say, from 10 in the morning until 4 in the afternoon five days a week, would give people the opportunity to voice concerns and to stay in contact with me.

"That's important," he said.

He said that the main district office would be in Abilene but that other offices would be located in Big Spring, Mineral Wells and San Angelo.

Izzard, a San Angelo dentist/rancher, spent most of his hour-long visit discussing agricultural issues and misconceptions regarding his opponent.

"He'll (Stenholm) tell you that if his party regains control of the House, he will be the chairman of the Agriculture Committee," Izzard said. "That's not the case ... he's not the ranking Democrat and is not in line for the seat."

As Izzard claimed, Stenholm would not be the ranking

Fall's temperatures fall, surprise local residents

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

Ready or not, fall is here and Jack Frost made himself quite welcome in many West Texas homes this morning for coffee and conversation.

The season's first cold front was a welcomed change for some, but quite a surprise for others, and Big Spring residents traveling this weekend should pack accordingly.

According to National Weather Service Meteorologist George Matthews, the first cold spell last year hit on Sept. 22 and dropped daytime temperatures into the 40s.

But Matthews said despite a slight chance of precipitation, this cold front should not be as severe as last year's first blast of cold air.

The present cold front moving through the area arrived late Thursday and is expected to last most of the weekend. However, Matthews said the front is only producing a slight chance of thunderstorms, about 20 percent.

"This weekend's cold spell will drop temperatures into the low to mid 40s at night and produce daytime highs around 65 degrees with north winds 10 to 20 miles per hour and gusty," Matthews said.

"Most of the precipitation should remain north of the Permian Basin on up into the Panhandle and into Kansas."

The Panhandle forecast includes cloudy skies with a chance of rain and rain mixed with snow, but no significant accumulation is expected. Otherwise, clear skies are expected with lows from the lower 30s to the lower 40 with highs in the 60s, increasing to low 70s and 80s Sunday and Monday.

Matthews said the extended forecast for the Permian Basin includes partly cloudy conditions and lows from the upper 40s to the mid 50s tonight. Saturday will be partly cloudy with highs in the 70s.

"The chance of precipitation remains at 20 percent for the weekend," Matthews added.

Enterprise Challenge announcement set for Oct. 10

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

The dream of owning a business came true for one, two, three or maybe four Big Spring residents Thursday, but the winner or winners of Moore Development's Big Spring Enterprise Challenge Program won't be announced until the group's annual meeting Oct. 10.

Of the potential entrepreneurs entering the challenge and submitting business plans, four were selected as finalists and made their presentations to three judges at the Dora Roberts Community Center Thursday.

The Big Spring Enterprise Challenge, sponsored by Moore Development For Big Spring Inc. and the Business Development Center (BDC) at Howard College, is a new program designed to assist entrepreneurs in launching a new small business or expanding an existing small business.

Grants totaling $30,000 will be awarded to the winner or winners of the challenge.

Moore Development Executive Director Danette Toone said this amount could go to one business or to several depending on the merits of the business plans submitted and the personal interviews conducted.

Each entrant was required to request a specific amount of funding and fully justify that request.

According to Toone, one of the main reasons for the program is that Moore Development will no longer be looking at start-up businesses.

"We did not want to leave them out," she said. "With this program, we think we're going to get the cream of the crop."

The idea is to make the program an annual event focusing on basic businesses.

Basic businesses are defined as businesses that primarily export products or services outside the Big Spring area, thus, bringing new money into the local economy.

Under the rules of the challenge, entrants were required to document that at least 75 percent of their company's sales would be outside Howard County. Several examples of a basic business include manufacturing, distribution, warehousing, headquarters, aviation maintenance, air cargo and food processing.

Entrants into the challenge could submit plans for either a start-up business or an existing small business with $1 million or less in annual sales.

Local retail or service businesses were not eligible to compete for the grants.

Three out of town judges, who were not affiliated with Moore Development or the BDC, judged the plans.

Judges were from the Texas

College officials receive copy of harassment lawsuit

By STEVE REAGAN

Staff Writer

Howard College officials confirmed today they have received a copy of a lawsuit filed against the school by a former employee.

Jane Hernandez, who worked at the college fitness center in 1995, filed a sexual harassment suit against the college Sept. 6 in the U.S. District Court in Abilene.

College President Cheri Sparks said today officials received a copy of the lawsuit Wednesday. On the advice of legal counsel, she declined additional comment on the matter.

Hernandez claims in the lawsuit that, while employed at the center, she was sexually harassed by Chris Cole, then a morning supervisor at the center.

"... Cole continually asked Hernandez to have an affair with him and she repeatedly told him no, that she was happily married. On one occasion, Chris Cole even attempted to take Hernandez's sweatshirt off by force," the lawsuit states. "Chris Cole began retaliating against Hernandez as a result of her refusal to respond to his sexual advances. (He) changed (her) schedule, reducing her work hours and, when confronted with this, became very hostile."

The suit goes on to state Hernandez then complained to Jerry Dudley, general manager of the center, on Jan. 24, 1995, about the harassment and retaliation, but the college "failed to take effective remedial action, which resulted in Hernandez being constructively discharged on Feb. 7, 1995."

Hernandez seeks a return to employment at the college and unspecified punitive and compensatory damages.

Democrat.

According to Congressional records, Californian George Brown ranks ahead of Stenholm on the agriculture committee and will be the ranking Democrat in Congress following the retirement of Texan Kika de la Garza.

Izzard added that he felt Stenholm's agriculture committee claim was a moot point, anyway, because he did not think voters would return the Democrats to power in the House.

He said a seat on the Agriculture Committee, which is expected to be chaired by Rep. Larry Combest of Lubbock, had been committed to him and that he looked forward to representing the district's agriculture issues.

The former San Angelo city councilman told the group he was concerned that rural America was "losing out."

"You look at these small towns that have meant so much to our country and you see empty downtowns and empty buildings. I don't have a magic answer to the problem, but I believe it is something on which we need to work."

He said one thing he thought could help was to ensure that the most advanced technology was available to the agriculture communities.

"We must make sure the latest technology in areas such as genetics, breeding, market analysis and research is available to our agriculture community," he said.

Izzard also expressed concern over the disappearance of the locally-owned bank in smaller communities.

"We need to ensure adequate financing opportunities for our rural communities. These decisions regarding financing should remain at the local level," he said.

He said that while ownership of what had traditionally been a local bank might have passed to a holding company in another part of the state, or in another state, there should be a way to incorporate local input into the decision-making process.

attorney general and comptroller to sign off on the deal before actual transfer of funds can occur. Vialle estimated the transfer date at Oct. 24.

Once funds are in hand and final architectural plans are in place, construction of the new school can begin. Assistant superintendent Murray Murphy said that could take place early next year, with air-conditioning installation to occur next summer.

Officials hope to have the new school ready for students by the 1998-99 school year.

In other business, the board learned that $300,000 in delinquent taxes owed the district have been collected in the past year.

Drew Mouton, who heads the delinquent tax-collection effort for every county taxing entity except Coahoma ISD, said this has been the single largest year in collection for all the entities since he contracted for the service.

On the Border, agents and aliens dubious of immigration reform

McALLEN (AP) — It's 7:30 on a weeknight in this town along the Mexican border, and while most families are clearing away the dinner dishes, Ramiro de Anda and Leo Laurel are leaving for work.

Armed with flashlights and binoculars, pistols and handcuffs, the two men hop in a Ford Bronco and head toward the dimming sun.

"I'm ready to rock 'n' roll!" hoots De Anda, who at 42 has been a Border Patrol agent for 13 years. He has been back in the field for only four months now, after eight years preparing cases against aliens and smugglers.

At 51, Laurel is the veteran of the pair. He has worked all of his 27 years with the Border Patrol on the line, as it's called, and grins sardonically at his partner's enthusiasm.

"When I was at his time in, I thought I could change the world," Laurel says. "Now I see the reality."

Reality is another night on the front line in the battle against illegal immigration. As Congress finishes work on legislation aimed at aiding in that fight, these men watch from afar and simply wait for the changes.

But reality is, they don't think those changes — including nearly doubling the size of the Border Patrol to 10,000 agents — will stop the men and women they see every night from illegally entering the United States.

"They could put a million agents on the border, and it wouldn't stop immigration," says Laurel. "It's an economic thing. They've got nothing to lose."

Even De Anda, the optimist, agrees that this latest effort won't work. The main problem is the legislation lacks new sanctions against U.S. employers who hire illegals, he says.

"That's what they're coming for. They'll get a dish-washing job that pays more than a high-tech job in Mexico," he says. "You can catch illegal immigrants all day long and take them back, but they're going to keep on trying. What's better than the land of milk and honey?"

The Bronco lurches along a levee running parallel to the Rio Grande, which apart from the Border Patrol serves as the only barrier between Mexico and the United States. On the horizon, the lights of Reynosa, Mexico, guide the agents along on their mission as the sun disappears.

De Anda turns off the engine along a bluff and grabs a pair of binoculars. He and Laurel descend, wading through the mesquite, and reach a clearing next to the river where the water is about 50 feet wide.

De Anda scans the riverbank on the Mexican side and spots a pile of driftwood stacked neatly, waiting to be used as a ferry to freedom. The spot is a popular crossing point for drug smugglers and aliens.

"It's actually pretty peaceful out here right now," Laurel says. "Sometimes it's real peaceful — sometimes."

Lawyer claims baby killed in accident was not human

CORPUS CHRISTI — A man can't be prosecuted for manslaughter when the victim was a baby who was still in its mother's womb at the time of the accident, a defense lawyer claims.

The attorney, Anne Marshall, claimed in a court motion filed Thursday that a baby whose delivery was forced by a car accident was only 7 1/2 months into pregnancy and was not a human under legal definitions.

Ms. Marshall asked that an intoxication manslaughter charge be dropped against a Corpus Christi man.

The motion alleges that the indictment of Frank Flores Cuellar, 49, failed to state an offense because Krystal Zuniga was "in utero and thus not a person." The child died after the delivery.

According to Texas law, a "person" means an "individual" which is defined as "a human being who has been born and alive," the motion states.

New standards proposed for nursing home administrators

AUSTIN — New standards believed to be the toughest in the United States have been proposed for Texas' 2,700 nursing home administrators.

Under the standards proposed Thursday, the nursing home managers would be subject to 24 specific requirements ranging from keeping a sufficient number of workers to advertising services in a truthful manner.

"It looks like we have something with teeth in it," said Ramona Kennedy, vice chairwoman of the Texas Board of Nursing Facility Administrators.

The nearly 100,000 residents in Texas nursing homes would be better protected if administrators follow each of the proposed rules, Kennedy said.

"Our main objective, of course, is the health and safety of the residents," Kennedy said.

Committee hears testimony on initiative, referendum

AUSTIN — Depending on who you talk to, initiative and referendum represent the best and worst parts of democracy.

Proponents of giving citizens the right to pass and repeal laws on their own say initiative and referendum are gaining favor in Texas because people are fed up with their elected government.

"People are dissatisfied and think that government is not listening to them," Waggoner Carr, former Texas attorney general and House speaker, told the state Senate Interim Committee on Initiative and Referendum Thursday.

"Giving the citizenry a way of making laws or repealing laws is a healthy way to relieve that feeling of dissatisfaction or revolt," said Carr. He headed a group called Texas 13 in the early 1980s that supported initiative and referendum but dissolved without support from state leaders.

Opponents say initiative and referendum end up being tools for well-funded, special interest groups to railroad legislation into law that benefits only those who can afford the process, which includes gathering hundreds of thousands of signatures to get an issue on the ballot.

Conference examines gap between police, blacks

HOUSTON (AP) — Lawrence Boze remembers being pulled over by police earlier this summer for having a broken taillight and detained for 90 minutes while officers questioned him and tried to determine if he was a criminal.

"This happens to a black man day in and day out," Boze said. "It's hell to be a black man in America."

What officers didn't know was Boze, a Houston attorney with no outstanding criminal warrants, is president of the National Bar Association, a group of 18,000 black lawyers around the world.

He and other leaders of black organizations huddled with police chiefs from around the nation Thursday at a Rice University conference to discuss strained relations between blacks and police.

The sentiment was that there has been little improvement in harmony between police and blacks in the nation's cities since the turbulence of the 1960s and there's no simple solution in sight.

"The nature of the problem is something that we've been avoiding and must face head-on," Boze said. "Race does matter in America."

"The police often were seen and still are as representing the still-dominant white society,"

Ira Harris, a former Chicago police administrator and now executive director of the National Organization of Black Law Enforcement Officers, said.

"We know that there is no quick fix, no overnight fix to resolving this problem. But at the same time it's an attainable goal to improve it."

Racism and the perception of racism continues to polarize law enforcement and blacks, conference members said during the daylong discussion organized by the university's James A. Baker III Institute for Public Policy.

"We come together today to develop a strategy to close that gap that has been emerging between the police and African American community," Lee Brown, the former national drug czar, a former police chief in New York, Atlanta and Houston and now a Rice sociology professor, said.

"What we really are talking about is changing a culture or subculture, however one defines it," David Walchak, president of the International Association of Chiefs of Police and chief of the Concord, N.H. Police Department, said. "And that is a long, arduous and difficult process."

The police chiefs told of improvements in recruiting practices, community police techniques intended to bring officers closer to the citizens they serve, quick discipline against biased or racist officers and moves to require officers to live in the communities where they work.

But leaders of various black organizations told of their own experiences or of their family members being stopped by officers and detained at length or ill-treated for minor reasons or no reason at all.

Inmate transfers to Texas jails to ease overcrowding

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Wisconsin prisoners will start heading for rented jail cells in Texas in about three weeks as part of a plan aimed at easing crowding of state prison space, officials say.

As many as 700 prisoners eventually will make the state-paid journey to Texas. Wisconsin's prisons currently are about 3,000 over their rated capacity.

The Legislature's Joint Finance Committee on Thursday approved spending $3.8 million on an expanded transfer program sought by Republican Gov. Tommy Thompson.

About half the inmates will be jailed in Hood County and three other counties southwest of Dallas-Fort Worth.

Hood County Sheriff Rodney Jeanis promised to recruit other Texas counties to accept additional inmates from Wisconsin.

The state will pay the Texas counties $39.36 per day per prisoner — compared with about $55 to $60 a day it costs to maintain a convict in Wisconsin prisons.

Plans called for sending the first 80 prisoners around Oct. 15.

"Many other states want the beds we are seeking," Corrections Secretary Michael Sullivan told the committee.

Sullivan said California is shopping for 3,000 jail cells, and Wisconsin might have lost space to that state if the contract hadn't been approved.

Wisconsin's prison system currently has about 12,300 inmates, about 3,000 more than existing prisons were built to hold. Thompson has said the inmate population could rise to 20,000 within three years.

"We are out of beds in the Wisconsin prison system today," Sullivan said.

In 1996, state prisons have received a monthly average of 162 more new inmates than they parole. Without approval of the prisoner transfer, 700 inmates would have to be paroled before prison officials think they are ready, Sullivan said.

Coggs said there was not enough crime prevention built into state plans.

Under the contract with Hood County, Wisconsin will send Texas only medium security inmates who have no history of violence or escape attempts in prison, and have no special medical problems.

Unique attractions highlighted at state fair

DALLAS (AP) — Phillip Collins is counting on inquisitive visitors at the State Fair of Texas.

Collins, education and exhibit consultant for the African American Museum, is showcasing a Duke Ellington exhibit at the fairgrounds. He's hoping people who are strolling through the fair will wander in.

Weather permitting, visitors to the fair that begins today may number more than 3 million this year, said spokeswoman Nancy Wiley. Last year, "23 days of perfect weather" brought a record 3.6 million visitors, she said.

This year, the touring Smithsonian exhibit, "Beyond Category: The Musical Genius of Duke Ellington," was chosen for its broad appeal, Collins said.

"Everybody knows Duke Ellington. Everybody likes Duke Ellington," Collins said. "He is an American musician, an American composer. He's beyond the color line."

The multimedia exhibit incorporates music, CD-ROMs, manuscripts, and instruments to present the life and music of the jazz musician. New visitors and word-of-mouth, Collins says, help the museum develop an audience for the rest of the year.

Ellington's exhibit will join a roller coaster and thousands of butterflies as attractions at the fair, which runs through Oct. 20.

The Looping Star is the first roller coaster at the State Fair since The Comet was bulldozed in 1989. The coaster, fresh from Spain, has three trains that reach top speeds of about 40 miles per hour while going through two dips and a loop.

On Wednesday afternoon, Joe Bixler of Pinfari — the company that owns the coaster — was working on the cars amid the smell of spray paint.

"I guess I've grown up in the amusement business," Bixler said. "It's in my blood. Every day's different."

Bixler and an assistant were rebuilding cars. They'd been working for six days, disassembling the cars, cleaning them, and re-assembling them. Bixler said he was making sure the safety features were working.

Technically, G-forces should keep riders in place on a loop, Bixler said, but shoulder restraints make sure people follow rules and have a "safe, happy, time."

Bixler, who's worked 25 years in the industry, has a theory on why people like roller coasters. It lets them "test the edge" without too much danger, he said.

"There's obviously a thrill," Bixler said. "People are thrill-seekers."

Also making their debut at the fair are Zebra Long Wings, Orange Long Wings and other brightly-colored butterflies.

In its second year, the butterfly exhibit at the Horticulture Center will include 28 different species native to the Southwest — about 3,000 butterflies — flying around an enclosed area kept at a constant 80 to 85 degrees and close to 80 percent humidity.

The orange, yellow, striped and even lime green creatures feast on 250 types of plants from the African plant collection or rotting bananas, plums or grapes left out for them.

OUR VIEWS

We salute:

Each Friday, the Herald salutes individuals and groups from our community and area who have been recognized for special achievements or accomplishments.

We recognize these special people for working to help make our region a better place to live, work and play.

This week we salute:

• RUTH EDMONDSON, 15-year volunteer librarian at St. Mary's-Episcopal School for her service and dedication. In her honor, the school's new library will bear her name.

• CONCERNED WOMEN for AMERICA for their organizing and sponsorship of Monday night's candidate's forum.

• SCOTT McLAUGHLIN, RUDY IZZARD, MONTE HASIE, TIM LAMBERT and GARY WATKINS — all candidates for state and national offices key to Big Spring and Howard County — for their attendance and participation in the forum.

• Six Big Spring and Howard County veterans, who represented our community at the 10th National Veterans Golden Age Games.

They included:

• JAMES McDIFFITT, gold medal in bowling;

• LLOYD LINDSEY, gold in both wheelchair bowling and shuffleboard;

• WALLACE RINGO, gold in visually impaired dominoes, silver in visually impaired horseshoes and bronze in visually impaired shuffleboard;

• ELMER SMITH, bronze in croquet;

• GARY KISTLER, bronze in shuffleboard, and

• AL SCOTT, who competed in shuffleboard and freestyle swimming.

Is there an individual or organization in our community that you feel should be saluted? If so, please send us their name and why you think they should be recognized. We must have your name and telephone number and you must provide it in writing.

Patients should have option of using local pharmacy, if desired

TO THE EDITOR:

The week of Sept. 16-20 was known among community pharmacies across the nation as the "High Noon for Your Local Pharmacies" campaign. The purpose of this event was to highlight the valuable patient care services provided every day by community pharmacists. Unfortunately, managed care is placing these services in jeopardy.

Managed care is increasingly taking away the consumer's right to choose their own pharmacy, thus, severing long standing relationships with their local pharmacist whom they have come to know and trust. These patients are being coerced into using either mail order pharmacies hundreds of miles away or high volume dispensing outlets that process hundreds of prescriptions at assembly line speed. This approach is putting patients at a real risk. They no longer have access to a highly trained pharmacist who counsels, monitors and as appropriate, intervenes in their medication therapy.

The rationale behind this trend is the never ending search for lower costs and higher profits for the insurance companies. However, studies have shown that pharmacist counseling and intervention in drug therapy saves money by preventing costly emergency room and hospital stays resulting from a patient who does not take their medicine as prescribed or who accidentally mixes non-compatible medications. Yet, most health insurers refuse to provide coverage for vital pharmacist care services in their health benefit packages. That's why the High Noon campaign will continue in a drive to enact Pharmacist Care Laws in every state, including Texas, to require insurance plans to cover pharmacist care as a core health benefit.

Consumers deserve nothing less than quality pharmacist care. It saves money. It saves lives. That's why there ought to be a law.

Thanks to Wal-Mart for helping BSPD

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to thank the manager of Wal-Mart Supercenter, Tim Diehl, for his gracious contribution to the Community Services Division of the Big Spring Police Department. Mr. Diehl donated to the Community Services Division a computer to assist in the work of our office. This computer will not only be used to help our activities, but to ultimately help our office serve the community more efficiently and with better quality. Our office is responsible for the following programs that are in our community today: B.S.H.S. resource officer, Adopt-A-Cop, Dare, Neighborhood Watch, Crime Prevention and DFYIT. It is such a blessing to see a large business that maintains its personal contact with the community and is willing to help in anyway possible. This is mostly made possible by the management of the store. So again, Thank You for your graciousness and generosity.

Shredded millions still a mystery in Alamo City

Sometimes you just can't win for losing, which is why I can sympathize with the three San Antonio street cleaners whose dreams of massive riches were ripped to shreds — literally.

They found millions of dollars Tuesday morning while they were sweeping a section of Interstate 35. Unfortunately, the money was in about that many pieces. It was shredded currency.

One of the would-be millionaires, Harry Arline, ran his fingers through the now-useless fortune. "I wish they would've called me before they cut it up. I would've found a way to spend it," Arline said.

Authorities say they have no idea where it came from. Officials at the Federal Reserve Bank say it's unlikely, but the debris could have been from a load of shredded out-of-circulation bills.

Regardless of where it came from, it was one of a number of interesting tales related on The Associated Press wire during the past few days. The one's about money are always fun, aren't they?

Of course, I really gave up thoughts of ever finding any real money when I learned the truth about the tooth fairy.

Then again, there was a story out of Durham, N.C., this week that dealt with the price of teeth. Only the tooth fairy never had to pay out this kind of money. Then again, the dental sprite has never been sued by a kid.

Marcus Ingram, who was six years old when he lost a baby tooth in a 1992 car accident, was awarded $7,500 for his injuries Tuesday by a judge.

All that seemed somewhat reasonable until it was learned that to get the award, Marcus had to sue his mother, Rita, who was driving the car. Oh, yeah, he also had to sue her insurance company.

The lawsuit, the story noted, was a formality "commonly observed in such matters to protect the interests of children."

The $7,500 will go to Marcus, his doctor and, of course, his lawyers.

I can't help it ... you just can't write one of these things without an animal story or two — even if you have to search all the way to Lithuania in finding them.

Seems there was this wounded elk that somehow found its way into an empty fourth-floor apartment in Vilnius and was terrifying neighboring residents before it was shot to death by police.

Just imagine how terrified the poor elk was!

The elk took refuge in the apartment after being wounded by hunters in a forest near the Lithuanian capital.

Police tried to drag the huge beast out of the apartment, and when that failed, they tried to find a wildlife specialist to tranquilize the elk.

Unable to find one, they put the beast out of its misery.

In the "You Done Quit Preachin' and Started Meddlin' Dept.," the traditional bratwurst-eating contest in Sheboygan, Wis., is being called "unhealthy and gluttonous."

After a contestant "got sick" midway through this year's competition but refused to quit, former Guy Attorney Clarence Mertz started a drive to persuade the local Jaycees to cancel the contest.

Mertz is circulating petitions seeking an end to the summer event.

But then there's John Paolovitz, a former bratwurst-eating champion — my kind of guy — who plans to put as much energy into fighting Mertz's plan as he does into stuffing his face with meat every year.

Paolovitz, who plans on banging on neighborhood doors for signatures, was one of a handful of people who gathered for a rally over the weekend around — you guessed it — a picnic table.

This year's contest winner ate a record 61 1/2 double-bratwurst sandwiches in 15 minutes. That is 13 brats and six rolls. The old record was 51 1/4 double sandwiches.

This week's "Attaboy Award" goes to the Florida State University student who picked up the Gov. Lawton Chiles' Visa card lying on the Capitol grounds and turned it in, even though he thought it was a practical joke.

"I thought somebody would come out and say HA HA," said Christian Kelley, who found the credit card during a sight-seeing trip. "I thought they had them planted all around the Capitol."

Kelley asked his girlfriend Lori Marsden, if he was reading the name on the card correctly. She assured him he was so they went to Chiles' office to return it.

The governor, who hadn't known the card was missing, invited the two in for a chat. He said he had reached for his sunglasses while leaving the Capitol to walk his dog, Giddy, and the card must have slipped out of his pocket.

Chiles is notorious with his staff for misplacing his credit card and other items. As he pointed out to an aide Monday, "It was the first time I lost it all week."

He's just lucky it wasn't found by those street cleaners from San Antonio ... the frustration might have been too great.

Probe of Gingrich widened, giving Democrats new campaign material

WASHINGTON (AP) — An ethics investigation of Speaker Newt Gingrich is ranging beyond potential tax violations, giving Democrats new campaign fodder in their drive to recapture the House.

The broadened investigation approved Thursday will now scrutinize the reliability of Gingrich's statements, examine his use of non-government personnel and facilities and dig deeper into his relationships with tax-exempt organizations.

With increasing numbers of Democratic House candidates making the probe a campaign issue, veteran party members tried to seize immediate advantage of the latest development.

House Minority Whip David Bonior, D-Mich., urged the Republican caucus to demand that Gingrich step aside as speaker until the investigation is completed, a request certain to be disregarded.

The House GOP caucus chairman, John A. Boehner of Ohio, attacked "the campaign engaged in by the left, led by David Bonior, ... to destroy the ethics process and to politicize" the investigation.

The probe is under control of a House ethics subcommittee, two Republicans and two Democrats, who said Thursday the expansion resulted from new information discovered during the current inquiry.

The panel was authorized by the full ethics committee last December to investigate whether a college course taught by Gingrich was a political activity that violated tax laws.

The decision also expands the work of James M. Cole, the veteran former U.S. prosecutor hired as an outside counsel. When he is finished, the subcommittee can decide to formally charge Gingrich with violating ethics rules or can recommend dismissal of the case.

The full Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, five members from each party including the subcommittee members, signaled approval of the expansion — unanimously approving public disclosure of the decision.

The subcommittee said it hoped to finish its work by the end of this year — making it virtually certain the case will remain an issue through the November election.

However, the committee refused to meet the Democrats' principal demand of the last several weeks: immediate public disclosure of a summary of evidence prepared by Cole.

Gingrich and his allies contended the ethics committee process was working, rejecting Democratic outbursts that it had broken down because the original complaint was filed more than two years ago.

"I am confident ... the charges against me will be found to have been groundless," Gingrich said in a statement.

His spokesman, Tony Blankley, added that the expansion "does not mean the subcommittee has at this point made any determination" on charging Gingrich with wrongdoing.

Boehner said the subcommittee was only seeking "further information to clarify several things in the presentation made by the speaker. What we ought to do is allow this process to continue."

Senate Republicans push for 15-year prison terms in date-rape drug cases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republicans are pledging a concerted effort to send President Clinton a House-passed bill establishing a 15-year prison term for the use of Rohypnol and other so-called date rape drugs.

"We must put our minor differences aside and pass this bill immediately," said Sen. Paul Coverdell, R-Ga., a sponsor of the Senate version. "For with each day we delay action, we put more women at risk."

The House, 421-1, approved legislation Thursday making it a crime to possess Rohypnol and similar powerful tranquilizers with the intent to commit a violent crime, including sexual assault. The potential jail term would increase to 20 years when the victim is aged 14 or younger.

The drug, known as a "roofie," is a tranquilizer that has no taste, odor or color when dissolved in a drink and is 10 to 20 times more powerful than valium. In "roofie rape," victims who are slipped the drug become dizzy and disoriented and have trouble moving their arms and legs. Ultimately, they pass out and have little or no memory of what happens next.

"We simply cannot, in good conscience, stand by and leave our wives and daughters, sisters and mothers, vulnerable to these sexual predators," said Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., the bill's sponsor. "The only way to protect them is to guarantee hard prison time for these cowards."

But Rep. Maxine Waters, D-Calif., the only House member who voted against the bill, called it "haphazard" and "dishonest" election-year legislation that does not address similar use of other intoxicating substances, such as alcohol or cocaine.

Coverdell predicted the Senate would either adopt the House version of the bill or attach a slightly different version to budget legislation that must clear both chambers before lawmakers can leave town to campaign for re-election.

Separately, the House, by voice vote, approved and sent Clinton a Senate bill requiring the FBI to establish a national database to track felons convicted of sex crimes involving violence or minors. The database will include names, addresses, fingerprints and photos.

The bill requires released offenders to register with the FBI, which in turn is required to notify state officials when an offender moves. Community organizations and private groups could tap into the database via local law enforcement. Offenders failing to register would face up to 10 years in prison for repeat offenses.

Clinton, the weekend before the Democratic National Convention, pre-empted Congress on the politically popular issue by directing Attorney General Janet Reno to create the registry.

Rep. Melvin Watt, D-N.C., was the only lawmaker to speak against a similar House version, saying, "Once a person pays their debt to society, they ought to have the opportunity to put the offense behind them and move on."

House passage of the date rape drug bill follows a sharp increase in reported use of Rohypnol pills. Between 1985 and 1991, the DEA recorded three cases or less a year. This year, it reviewed 108 cases.

Although Rohypnol is illegal in the United States, it is used legally in other countries.

At low doses, Rohypnol can cause drowsiness, dizziness, lack of coordination, memory loss and stomach upset. At higher doses, it can cause comas, respiratory depression and death.

At a Senate hearing in July, a 35-year-old Florida mother of three, Lisa Celestin, testified that she passed out cold minutes after her attacker slipped a date rape drug into her drink at a nightclub. She didn't fully awaken until the next day and had no memory of how she returned home.

Democrats claim GOP alternative guts gun ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats are trying to derail a Republican alternative to the domestic violence gun ban proposed by President Clinton.

"They are insisting that we allow wife beaters to continue to have guns," Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle said Thursday. "And we will not accept that."

Rep. Bob Barr, R-Ga., drafted the alternative last week after the Senate voted 97-2 to extend the ban on gun ownership or possession by felons to include people convicted of misdemeanors involving domestic violence.

Barr's proposal would extend the gun ban to people convicted of misdemeanor crimes of domestic violence only if physical force was involved, and only if the person was notified of the gun ban when arrested, given the right to counsel and a trial by jury.

Barr's substitute was inserted in the final fiscal 1997 spending bill awaiting action this week, in place of the Senate-passed measure sponsored by Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J.

In response to Lautenberg's protests, Barr had agreed Wednesday to a change that would ensure his alternative covers people convicted of child abuse. Barr's original language had applied only to those convicted of physical violence against "intimate partners."

But Lautenberg said the change was "merely a fig-leaf" and would leave "virtually all wife beaters and child abusers with the ability to legally possess guns."

Lautenberg pledged to fight to remove the GOP language from the final spending bill, and he said the White House has promised support. The ban was first proposed by Clinton during his train trip to the Democratic National Convention last month.

But with Congress pressing toward adjournment, it was unclear how much support he would be able to muster.

Barr offered the alternative because he said Lautenberg's original bill was unconstitutional. States do not uniformly define misdemeanor crimes, he said, so Lautenberg's bill would violate the equal protection clause of the Constitution.

"I would have thought that Lautenberg would have thanked me rather than pillorying me for this," he said.

The American Bar Association issued a statement Thursday denouncing Barr's alternative, saying it makes

"broad exceptions that are unwarranted and the jury trial requirement makes it close to meaningless."

"The fact is in our system of justice, there is no jury trial in the great majority of misdemeanor domestic violence convictions," the ABA said. "Those matters routinely are held as bench trials before judges."

Lautenberg said the notice provision would exempt from the gun ban everyone previously convicted of domestic abuse and would make ignorance of the law a legal excuse for those convicted in the future.

"The language limiting the ban to offenders who've received advance notice thus completely guts my proposal," he said.

Barr dismissed the attacks on his alternative as "red herrings."

Israeli-Palestinian peace dissolves into deadly battles

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli police fired tear gas and rubber bullets today to disperse hundreds of Palestinian stone-throwers at the Al Aqsa Mosque compound, one of Islam's holiest shrines.

News of the confrontation triggered fresh gun battles between Palestinian police and Israeli troops in the West Bank.

Three Palestinians were killed in the clashes at Al Aqsa. Three more Palestinians and two Israeli soldiers were killed in the West Bank. Sixty-eight people have been killed in four days of Palestinian rioting over Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's decision to open a tunnel for tourists along the Al Aqsa compound. Today's fighting came despite repeated appeals for calm by Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat.

Israel radio reported that the Israeli army was moving tanks to the sites of the clashes, and quoted Palestinians as saying helicopter gunships were sighted in the skies.

The fighting has left the peace accords in tatters, and it was not clear when Arafat and Netanyahu would meet.

Throughout the West Bank and Gaza, tens of thousands of Palestinians staged protest marches after noon prayers at their mosques on the Muslim Sabbath.

Palestinians have been frustrated with Netanyahu's hard-line government, which has given no sign it would keep to the timetable of troop withdrawals and negotiations dictated by the peace accords.

Netanyahu defended his actions, but said he remained committed to negotiating peace agreements with the Palestinians. He said he spent some time with wounded soldiers and called it "a very sad day for Israel."

"Our hand is still extended in peace," he said.

Netanyahu said he was determined to quell the violence.

However, he said the Palestinians were guilty of grave violations of the accord. Arafat rebuffed Netanyahu's request for an immediate meeting, saying there was no point in holding talks unless the Israeli leader came with concrete proposals on how to fulfill promises in the peace accords.

However, Netanyahu spoke with Arafat repeatedly overnight, one Israeli Cabinet minister told reporters today.

Israeli radio said thousands of Muslim worshippers were rioting within the Al Aqsa compound today, and ambulances rushed to the area. Police ordered Jews to halt praying at Western Wall plaza that runs below the site's platform of the Muslim holy shrines.

Afghan rebels seize Kabul, execute former president

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Islamic guerrilla fighters seized control of Afghanistan's capital Friday after two days of heavy fighting and quickly hanged a former president.

President Najibullah, who had been in hiding for four years since losing power, was seized from a United Nations compound and executed.

His bloated and beaten body was hanging from a cement lamppost outside the presidential palace just hours after the guerrillas seized Kabul from retreating government forces.

Hanging beside Najibullah, who went by just one name like many Afghans, was the body of his brother, Shahpur Ahmedzi, who had been his security chief during the years that Najibullah ran a communist government.

Najibullah is not known to have ventured from the U.N. compound since April 1992.

The Taliban is a movement led by ex-seminary students who want to run Afghanistan according to strict Islamic law. The guerrillas met little resistance as they rolled into the city about 1 a.m. Friday from several directions.

The guerrillas immediately set up check points around the city and began stopping and searching vehicles.

Sporadic machine gun fire resounded but much of it appeared to be rebels celebrating their victory.

Witnesses said some rebels stopped at street corners and began using loud speakers to recite the Koran, the Islamic holy book.

The Taliban took over Kabul Radio and announced that the regime of feuding government factions was over.

"Afghanistan is the common house of all Afghans. No group can govern Afghanistan any more," it said.

Shortly before their arrival, some residents burned posters of President Bahraruddin Rabbani and his military chief, Ahmed Shah Masood.

The whereabouts of Rabbani and Masood were not immediately known.

Church of the Harvest is new place of worship in Big Spring

By KELLIE JONES
Features Editor

"The church without walls" is the motto of Church of the Harvest, a new Pentecostal place of worship. Tony Stewart is pastor and returns to Big Spring 10 years after he moved away. Stewart's father, Ron, built and pastored at College Park Church of God several years ago and the family now lives in Florida.

Stewart said the church's motto stands for several things including there are no denominational walls and they want to branch out beyond the brick walls of the building to reach the unsaved souls in Big Spring. The church is located at the corner of 14th and Goliad and had been vacant for a while. At one time it was occupied by the Gospel Lighthouse Church.

When asked what the difference was between the Church of God and other religions such as Baptist or Methodist,

Stewart explained, "Our worship times aren't as structured. We are more free in our praise and worship. There is freedom, newness and freshness. It's not traditional and we are open to do things differently."

The church had its first service Sept. 15 with 19 people in attendance and the following week, there were 52 at the Sunday morning service.

The music is fashioned after Hosanna-type praise and worship songs and the hymnal is titled "Hymns of the Spirit." The hymnals have been ordered so for right now, they use an overhead projector so the audience can see the words and sing along, explained Mark Barber, praise and worship director. Barber's main duties include being in charge of the music for the congregation and scheduling special musical guests. There is a keyboard, base guitar, a set of drums, piano and tambourine to add accompaniment to the singing.

Barber said the idea to start the church came from God. "He (God) laid it on my heart a few months back. I kept saying no and praying about it. I called Tony who is a friend of mine to talk about it and we prayed about it. I moved here to help my dad start a business," Barber explained.

Tony Stewart stands outside of the new church he pastors, Church of the Harvest, located at the corner of Goliad and 14th Streets. The church is affiliated with the Church of God and Pentecostal denomination. Service times on Sunday are 10:30 a.m. and 6 p.m.

Barber and Stewart attended Evangel College of Assembly of God in Springfield, Mo. together with Barber moving to Texas to attend Angelo State University and Stewart then went to Lee College in Cleveland, Tenn. The Tennessee town is the headquarters for the Church of God denomination and is the oldest Pentecostal group in the nation, celebrating its 110th anniversary recently.

His father, H.D. Barber, owns the go-cart track being built in the 900 block of Scurry scheduled to open the end of next month. Along with the track, there will be a restaurant, arcade and sand volleyball court that should be open by the first of next year.

Currently, service times on Sunday are 10:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. with plans to add Sunday School and Wednesday services at 7 p.m. Stewart said, "We also want to get involved in children's and street ministry and an outreach program called 'Feed the Children.' It's designed to provide food to the less fortunate in the area. Larry Jones is the head of the organization and it's in 38 countries. He has indicated he wants to put a warehouse here in Big Spring."

Many in the country music industry are active in 'Feed the Children' and Stewart said Garth Brooks recently donated 15 semi-truck trailers to the organization that is based in Oklahoma City.

"We want to promote God and Jesus. We want to show love to those in Big Spring," Stewart added.

Barber said they came up with the name of the church because "our focus is on reaching the harvest in Big Spring. The harvest being the unsaved loved ones, people from broken homes, people who need the Lord."

Churchill succeeded in his leadership because he was an exemplary leader. When he looked you in the eye, you knew you'd do what he told you to do because you knew he would never send you to do something he wouldn't do or had not done already. How many leaders make us feel that way today?

Flirty flag girl, campground scam

Scripps Howard News Service

Q: Do you see anything wrong with a flag girl on a road construction gang smiling and waving hello to motorists who whistle and make suggestive comments when I hold up my red flag? I'm on the job so, obviously, I'm not hustling for a date, but my boss is furious! He claims I'm flirting with the guys stuck in traffic (one driver did throw his name and phone number out the window) and that I should cut it out or be fired. I don't know what his beef is. I'm not coming on to the flagmen in our crew and my actions are harmless. It's a boring job with little money; so what if I try to jazz it up a bit? Right? — Flaggling Down Some Fun, Houston.

A: You're going to want to stuff your red flag down my throat, but I happen to agree with your boss. When you're on the road as a flag girl, you're working! Your actions reflect on the entire construction crew and, if they think you're out of line, then you're out of line!

Q: When a friend from the office asked me if I would like to split the cost of a cabin with her in the Canadian woods for a five-day vacation I said "Great! Just put the price of the lodging on my credit card and we'd divvy up the costs at the end of the week." Well, she went ahead and made arrangements for the two of us, but when we arrived at the cabin, the owner said, "Where's that whole gang of kids you're bringing? The place you gals rented sleeps 11."

Then the guy quotes us a price more than $40 a night higher than what we had been told on the phone. I was furious! It was already midnight; we had driven 10 hours and we had no place to stay. And, to make things worse, my friend was saying, "I simply can't pay any more than we contracted for. You're going to have to pay the rest." The way I see it, the owner of the campground pulled a fast one on my friend and she reneged on her promise to me. Even if there was a mixup on the arrangements, my camping buddy should have picked up half the tab. Right? — Nature's Gal, Portland, Maine

A: Not necessarily! that campground manager apparently pulled a bait-and-switch on you, counting on the fact that you would be too tired to argue when you arrived at the cabins. As for your friend, she obviously had only so many bucks for the vacation and the jacked-up price was just too much. I doubt if you'll get any money back, but, at least, you can complain to the Canadian Tourist Bureau, documenting your stay in the country. They put a fortune into their tourism promotion and count on thousands of Americans to visit each year.

Q: I was wandering the aisles of an outdoor farmer's market when I noticed some gigantic melons being sold by a beautiful young woman. I simply had to get closer, so I asked the Melon Maid if she would choose one for me. Truthfully, I didn't even take a feel of the fruit as I usually do in the supermarket. I figured the shapely miss would take care of me. Well, she sure did! That melon was overripe by at least four days. Why on earth would a responsible vendor (who needs customers to return every weekend) try to fool the public? — Martin in Grove City, Pa.

A: You're asking the wrong question! Did you ever hear the old expression, "Buyer

1948 Hyperion Club

Members of the 1948 Hyperion Club joined members of other local Clubs for their annual Hyperion Council Luncheon at the Big Spring Country Club.

An Election Year motif was reflected in table decorations featuring American flags and bright red pots of white chrysanthemums. Representatives from each of these clubs reported on their program plans for the year. Highlight of the meeting was a witty and informative talk by Linda Conway, associate vice-president for institutional advancement at Howard College.

Eighteen club members and one guest, Katie Lara attended the luncheon from the 1948 club. The October meeting will be held at the Dora Roberts Community Center.

Rainbow Girls

Miss Dawn Shober was installed Tuesday as Worthy Advisor of the International Order of Rainbow for Girls, Big Spring Assembly No. 60. The ceremony was at the Masonic Temple at 7 p.m.

Miss Shober is the daughter of Ms. Dolly Shober. Her term is dedicated to Mrs. Christine Riordan, a longtime friend. She chose as her theme "God's Plan" and her poem is "Rainbow Dreams." Her scripture quotation is Jeremiah 29:11 and her emblem is the dove. The hall was decorated in dark green and white, with the carnation as her flower.

Installing Officer was Miss Brandi Land, assisted by Kristi King, Installing Marshall; Allison Thomas, Chaplain; Doris Mason, Musician; and Adele Tibbs, Mother Advisor. The invocation and benediction was given by Mr. Al Tidwell.

New officers to serve with Miss Shober are Laura Rutherford, Worthy Associate Advisor; Allison Thomas, Charity; Jacqueline Musgrove, Hope; Leslie Hicks, Faith; Vanessa Adams, Chaplain; Traci Beltran, Drill Leader; Christina Roemer, Love; Victoria Patterson, Religion; and Lochie Musgrove, Patriotism.

Aging eyes

- (NAPS) - Learning to see the signs of aging eyes:
- Cataracts, glaucoma and presbyopia are all vision-related problems associated with the aging process.
- Cataracts impair more than three million Americans.
- Glaucoma is diagnosed in 95,000 new patients each year.
- Presbyopia is a condition caused by the hardening of the lens.
- Those with presbyopia may:
- Wish for longer arms as they strain to see the print while reading newspapers.
- Confuse small, printed numbers such as three and eight.
- Have trouble focusing on small items such as price tags and wristwatches.
- Presbyopes should take comfort in the fact they aren't alone. The condition is a natural, easily correctable part of aging and can be corrected with contact, progressive or bifocal lenses and reading glasses.
- It is important to have your eyes checked once a year.

Sadie the arson dog is the newest addition to the BSFD

By KELLIE JONES
Features Editor

She has the nose of a bloodhound, doesn't talk much, loves her partner and is a hard worker. Who is she? She's Sadie, the Big Spring Fire Department's new arson dog. Sadie is a yellow Labrador retriever recently acquired for the BSFD by a grant provided by State Farm Insurance.

Her partner and certified handler is Carl Condray, a firefighter with the department. The two were paired together Aug. 18 and went through five weeks of training so Sadie could detect hydrocarbons. Condray said hydrocarbons is a fancy word for petroleum products, accelerants and flammable liquids used to start a fire. The dog is able to detect the presence of even the most minute amount of hydrocarbons and its point of origin in a fire.

"With the amount of destruction and the volume of debris from a fire, it could take investigators hours or days to process the scene. Sadie cuts down the time firefighters are on the scene and lessens the time they are exposed to danger," Condray said.

Sadie is trained every day and is considered a passive response dog. When she finds an accelerant, she simply sits down on her hind quarters instead of pawing or barking. Condray explained it's a safer way of letting the investigator know where the flammable liquid is, especially if pawing could stir up explosives or start another fire.

During training Wednesday afternoon, one of the firefighters placed one drop of an accelerant on a piece of paper and put it in the yard at the fire station. Sadie was able to go right to it and wasn't distracted by the many leaves, wind and the sound of a camera flashing to take her picture. She is trained so well that Condray takes her outside before training and tells her to "take a break." This is her cue to go to the bathroom and she knows it's time to go to work.

During the training demonstration, Condray would say "seek" and Sadie instantly began sniffing the ground around her. She was in her work mode and didn't stop until she found what she was trained to do. Once she spotted the accelerant, she sat down and then Condray said "show me, Sadie" and she would put her nose down to the spot again. He then rewarded her with lots of love, praise and a small handful of food.

Sadie is one of 200 canines in the United States and Canada trained as an arson dog and one of 70 certified by the Maine State Police Academy and their chemist. Sadie is also only one of five such dogs in Texas. Out of the 15 dogs in her class, she and seven others were considered "pound" dogs. The canine was a pet of a family in Illinois and when the mother returned to the work force, Sadie was fed a peanut butter and jelly sandwich and a pig's ear each day. The mother knew one of the instructors of the dog training academy and suggested Sadie would be a good candidate for the job.

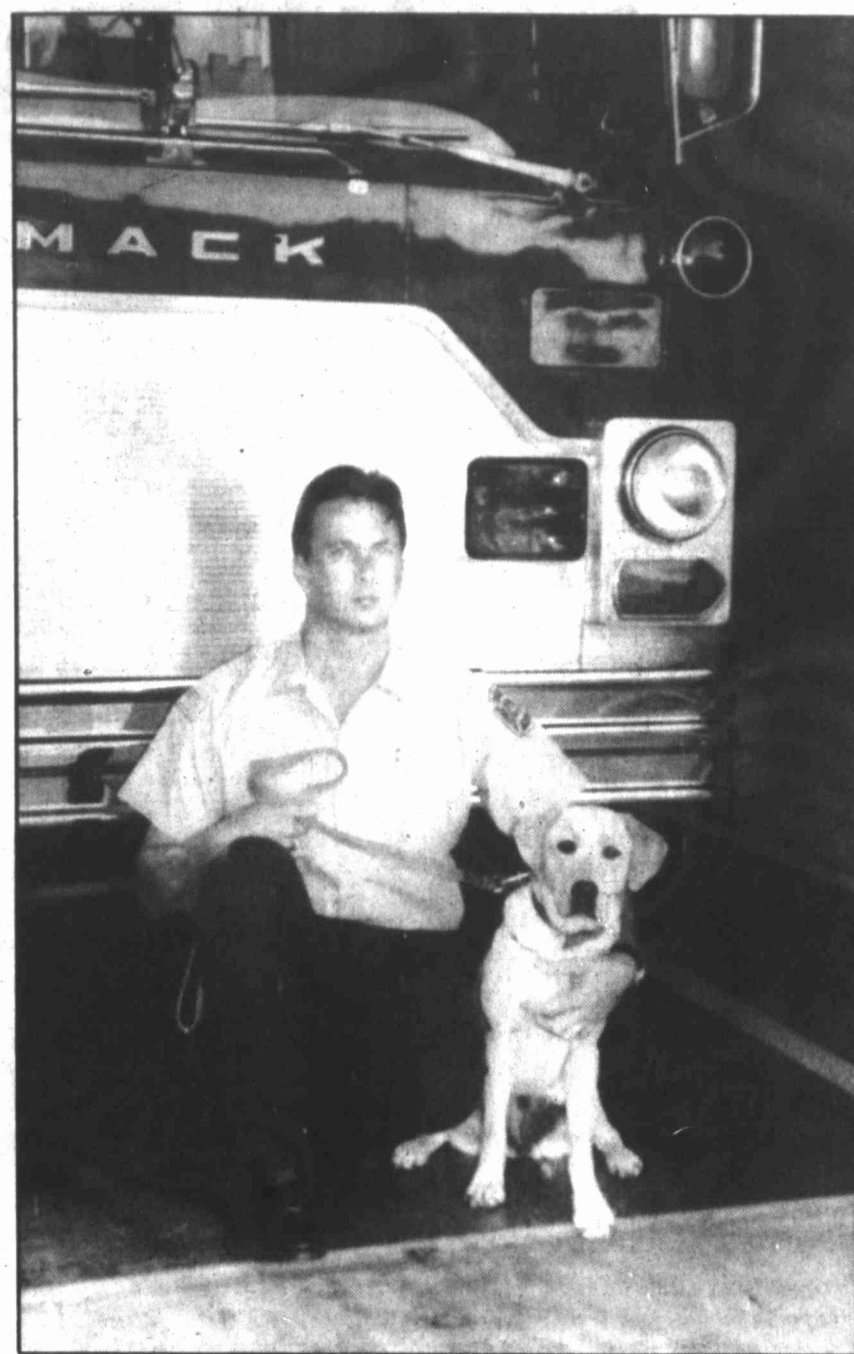

Condray emphasized Sadie didn't cost the city of Big Spring anything because his and the dog's training, hotel and airline tickets were paid for through a grant from the insurance company. The city did set up a contingency fund in case of emergencies. Numerous individuals and a physician in town also made donations toward getting Sadie to Big Spring. All of her food is provided free by PetSmart. She isn't just for the use of the BSFD. Condray said any surrounding town will be able to use her if necessary. "Sadie will help anyone with insurance because it will keep the costs down," Condray added.

During the first full week in October (Oct. 6-12), Sadie will be making the rounds at local schools to put on demonstrations for the students.

If Condray is sick or out of town, another firefighter has been trained to feed and water the dog but only Condray is allowed to handle and train her.

When Sadie isn't working, she is a family pet of both the Condrays and the firefighters.

Right: Carl Condray and Sadie pose in front of a fire truck at Fire Station #5. Below, Sadie sits down to indicate she has found an accelerant during a training demonstration Wednesday afternoon.

In the above photo, Carl leads Sadie around the grounds of the fire station looking for hydrocarbons during a training session.

CHURCH IN BRIEF

Deadline for church news is noon Wednesday.

Community Worship

Community Praise and Worship service will be Sunday night, Sept. 29. The service will begin at 6 p.m. at Wesley United Methodist Church. Everyone is invited and a nursery will be available.

First Church of the Nazarene

Saturday will be a day for children and parents alike to come to the First Church of the Nazarene and enjoy a "Harvest Festival of Fun." The festival will feature rides, prizes, food, games, and various booths, including a dunkin' booth and a clown make-up booth. Children have been receiving tickets at children's church during September, but tickets may also be purchased at 10 for $1 on Saturday. Children of all ages who are looking for a good time are cordially invited to come on out to 1400 Lancaster Saturday from 11 a.m.-1 p.m. for the "Harvest Festival of Fun."

Sunday is the second Sunday in the Fall Sunday School growth campaign, "Fall Fiesta for Friends." Sunday School growth campaigns are an opportunity for class members to spread the word that Sunday School is an important time for every member of the family to participate in fellowship and the study of God's Word. The theme this week is "Bring in the Kids" and special treats will be provided for children.

Sunday is also the date for September's "Enjoy Fellowship Dinner." Everyone who has visited the church in September or in recent months is invited to attend services Sunday morning and then stay for dinner afterwards in the Fellowship Hall. There will be plenty of good food to eat and an opportunity to get acquainted with members of the congregation.

Immaculate Heart of Mary Church

The Fall Festival Committee

for Immaculate Heart of Mary Church is working very hard to make this festival its most successful. Visitors are welcome and appreciated. The Fall Festival will take place Friday and Saturday. The fun begins daily at 5 p.m. in the school area, located at 1009 Hearn in Big Spring (off of Hwy. 87).

The Fall Festival Committee, has been working on having more variety than in the past. However, the traditional "Turkey Dinner" on Friday night and the traditional "Oriental Dinner" on Saturday night will still be featured. If a turkey or oriental feast don't sound appealing enough, various individual booths will feature treats such as fajitas and tripas, hamburgers, roasted corn, burritos and tamales and much more.

All ages can have a great time at the various game booths, including the football throw, darts, toy walk, pumpkin toss, and of course the cake walk. Cascarones (egg shells with confetti), train ride, painting, and a jumping balloon will small West Texas town and do "door-to-door" evangelism, meeting people, sharing faith with them and inviting them to church. I became enthused when that district superintendent said, "And the first 10 streets of the town are the ones I will walk." You see, that man was an exemplary leader as a Christian. He didn't just send us forth; he went alongside us.

This is the kind of leadership we desperately need today - leaders who will go into the trenches with the troops, so to speak, and set the honest tone of leadership. Our conversions would increase if our leaders set the pace for conversions. Our spirituality would increase if those who guide us would unfold their spirituality. Leadership, by example, sets the tone which produces the results.

If you're a leader, don't be afraid to open yourself to the power of exemplary leadership. Those of us who lead, and those of us who follow need it, from the highest to the lowest place. Set the tone - for others - with yourself!

First Assembly of God

The Ramos Singing Family had their start in this ministry of singing in the spring of 1994. Although Danny Ramos, the lead singer, started back in 1963 with a group called The Kings Three which later changed their name to The Galileans. Danny Ramos sang with this group for approximately 25 years. The Lord took them from coast to coast and to many television gospel shows. In that, era, The Galileans were one of the two groups that were of Hispanic origin traveling full time in this gospel singing ministry.

The Ramos Family will appear at the First Assembly of God on the corner of Fourth and Lancaster, here in Big Spring, Sunday evening, Sept. 29, 6 p.m. We welcome you to come to hear this versatile group which includes country, contemporary and Latin flavor style of music. Come and meet The Ramos Family, Danny, and Dora. They will bless your heart.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THE LIFE OF A PETTY KING

KINGS WERE NUMEROUS IN BIBLICAL DAYS. EVERY CITY HAD ITS OWN KING MUCH AS TODAY WE HAVE MAYORS TO CONDUCT AND OFFICIATE THE BUSINESS OF THE CITIES. HOWEIT, THE MODERN MAYOR MUST CONSULT THE CITY COUNCIL, ALDERMEN, ETC., THE BIBLICAL KINGS AND THEIR AURA OF ROYALTY ENABLED THEM TO ASSUME MUCH GREATER AND DICTATORIAL POWERS. WHEREAS MODERN MAYORS ARE CONCERNED WITH BUDGETS, UNION DEMANDS, TRADE AGREEMENTS, AND COMMERCE FOR THE CITY IN GENERAL, THE BIBLICAL SMALL-TIME KING WAS MORE CONCERNED WITH WHAT CITY HE WOULD MAKE WAR ON FOR THE PURPOSE OF PLUNDERING, TAKING SLAVES, AND ANNEXING TERRITORY. HIS NEXT CONCERN WAS WHAT ENEMY MIGHT ATTACK HIS CITY FOR THE SAME REASONS. ALL OF WHICH FORCED THESE ANCIENT KINGS INTO A SERIES OF ALLIANCES WITH THEIR NEIGHBORING CITIES TO FORESTALL SUCH A CALAMITY BEFALLING THEM. THE END RESULT WAS A MAZE OF COMPLICATED POLITICAL RELATIONSHIPS WHICH TODAY MIGHT TAKE A COMPUTER TO UNSCRAMBLE!

Steers seeking some luck against tough Snyder Tigers

By CLIFF NEWELL
Sports Editor

The Big Spring Steers meet Snyder tonight in another tough rivalry game.

What else is new? The Steers seem to have one of those every week. But what Big Spring needs is for Lady Luck to be on their side of the field when action starts tonight at 7:30 in Memorial Stadium.

"We could use a little luck," admitted Steer head coach Dwight Butler. "With a little luck, we could well have won our other two games."

But the Tigers seem to be just the type of opponent that can make things sticky for the Steers.

First of all there's their coach, David Baugh. He's the son of the Slinger, that is Slingin' Sammy Baugh, the original air wizard of the NFL. Dad may be bronzed in Canton, but David is carving out a fine career as a high school coach for himself.

"He does a great job," said Butler. "He's been in the business a long time."

Despite the family tradition, Baugh can do things besides pass.

"He adapts to his talent,"

Butler said. "Some years he's pass oriented. Some years he's run oriented."

This year the Tigers are run oriented, thanks to running back L.S. McClain, a 200-pounder who is extremely strong. Quarterback Russell Riggins is short and tough and likes to run, but he also has a strong arm.

"They run 56 formations," Butler claimed. "They're just all over the place."

Snyder looks tough on defense, too. Free safety Matt Fambro is "a great athlete," and tackle Chris Post (6-5, 250) is an all-state candidate. The Tigers may be toughest at line-backer, where hard-hitting Carl Beck and Tywayne Rivers reside.

Another factor in Snyder's favor is experience. Twenty seniors start for the Tigers.

"They're just the type of team that can give us fits," Butler said. "They're a little bigger than we are and they're real athletic."

Things have been up in the air for the Steers this season because of injuries in the backfield, but they're about to get settled fast.

"Tory's it," said Butler, referring to Big Spring's quarterback situation.

Yes, the sophomore now will have the starting job full time now that Jerrod Helms is out for the season with a broken collarbone. Things haven't been easy for Mitchell, who has already been hurt twice into the gap when Helms went out with injuries.

Yet Butler said, "Tory seems to respond to adverse situations. Once he gets comfortable, he really does well."

Mitchell led the win over Ballinger, and last week, when the Steers appeared to be going down the drain against Lubbock Estacado, he threw two touchdowns in the last five minutes to lead a die-hard comeback.

Another reason the Steers look stronger in the backfield is that Toma McVae is settling into the fullback position. He has proven to be a strong blocker, and he should develop as a receiving threat as the season progresses.

Of course, tailback Antwoyne Edwards is having a superb season. He has already rushed for 456 yards on 80 carries.

"He's taken off where he left off last year," Butler said.

See STEERS, Page 2B

Antwoyne Edwards maneuvers his way through the Lubbock Estacado defense. Edwards had 110 yards against Estacado and has already racked up 456 yards on 80 attempts this season. The junior tailback should be a major factor tonight against Snyder.

Rangers one game away from winning first title

ARLINGTON (AP) — The quarter of a century quest by the Texas Rangers to win their first AL Western division title is within reach tonight.

"We've worked all of our lives for this, not just this season," the Rangers' Mark McLemore said. "Just one more game, and we've done it."

The Rangers can give their long-suffering fans a September to remember with a win over the California Angels.

"This is the game we've been looking for," said the Rangers' Will Clark. "This is what we've worked so hard for."

The Rangers took advantage of shoddy California fielding to clinch at least a tie for a playoff spot with a 6-5 win Thursday night.

Texas can win its first division title by winning any one of its final three games or if second-place Seattle loses one of its four remaining games. The Rangers have a 3-game lead in the AL West over the Mariners, who lost 7-5 at Oakland on Thursday.

When Rusty Greer caught Gary DiSarcina's line drive to end the game, reliever Mike Henneman started yelling "one more ... just one more."

"This is what we've been waiting for," Henneman said. "This is what we've been wanting. This is what we've been working for. And we're ready to do it."

John Burkett (5-2) allowed seven hits and five runs in 7 2-3 innings. Henneman earned his 31st save, getting DiSarcina on a liner to left with runners at first and second.

"It was gut wrenching to watch those last two innings," Burkett said. "It's really great being with this team. I went from last place (Florida) to first place (Texas). This is a gutsy team. A lot of people were dogging this team saying it was going to choke. I don't think so."

Texas manager Johnny Oates said, "We'd like to win it tonight so we could have some time to rest some players. We haven't had a breath in two weeks. The emotion is building now. We need to win just one more."

Jim Abbott (2-18) scattered eight hits in eight innings, but was hurt by three Angels errors.

Trailing 3-0, the Rangers scored four runs in the third inning helped by two California miscues.

Ivan Rodriguez's RBI double scored one run and center fielder Darin Erstad dropped Greer's sacrifice fly ball as another run scored. Juan Gonzalez reached when third baseman Randy Velarde let a grounder roll between his legs, allowing another run to score. Clark's sacrifice fly made it 4-3.

Another error by the Angels in the fourth — California's third — gave Texas a 5-3 lead. McLemore was safe when Velarde booted his grounder, and stole second. He moved to third on Kevin Elster's infield single and scored on Hamilton's groundout.

Cross country meet here on Saturday

Jason Sanderson is Big Spring's top hope for honors at the meet here Saturday. Forty-seven schools are set to compete.

By CLIFF NEWELL
Sports Editor

An injury to standout Tonya Phifer has dampened Big Spring High School's hopes for its cross country meet here on Saturday.

But head coach Randy Britton still thinks his team will give a good account of itself when the running starts at 10 a.m. at the Training Course.

"We're still two runners from a really good team," said Britton. "But our kids are working hard and improving. As a coach, you can't ask more than that."

Still, things would have looked better if Phifer hadn't suffered a knee injury this week. She had been outstanding in the first two meets and had run the second fastest time in school history at the San Angelo meet two weeks ago.

"I'm not sure how long she'll be out," said Britton. "You never can tell with a knee injury. Tonya is a tough runner, but she's kind of injury prone."

The injury continued the hard luck trend for Phifer. Last year she suffered an ankle injury right after qualifying for the regional meet.

But Jason Sanderson is still around, and that gives Big Spring fans reason to cheer. He has finished in the top five in all three meets to date, and running at home should give him some extra incentive.

"Jason has a lot of ability. He just needs more confidence," said Britton. "He can win races if he wants to. He comes from a running family, and he knows what it takes to win."

"I'm too tough on Jason."

Probably too tough. But he's a good worker. He tries to be a leader, and we haven't had a lot of those types at Big Spring recently. The young kids can look up to him."

Another top notch runner on hand is Marco Torres.

Big Spring varsity boys competing will include Roy Ortega, Jason Canales, Jacob Leos, and Toby Molina.

Varsity girls set to run are Dawn Shober, Felicia Lara, Bridget Wilson, Maria Hinojos, and Crystal Epperson. There will be 47 teams in all running in Divisions I and II, and the field includes some outstanding runners.

In Division I (3A, 4A, 5A) boys, Sanderson has an excellent shot at winning. But he must get by Josh Vickers of Odessa Permian and Justin Haby of San Angelo Lake View.

Phifer had a great shot at winning Division I. Now it will probably be a battle between Channa Wright of Lake View and Angel Smith of Abilene Cooper.

In Division II (javee, A, 2A), the boys race is wide open, but the top spot in the girls division should be between Grady's Angela Welsch, Shawna Nichols of Sands and Tiffany Kujawski of Garden City.

In the team races, the Lake View boys are favored in Division I, while Division II is considered wide open. The leading teams in Division I are San Angelo Central, Lake View and Abilene Cooper.

Top contenders for the Division II team title are the Garden City and Jayvee teams from Abilene Cooper and San Angelo Central.

George to sit as Falcons travel to challenge 49ers

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

At least the Miami Dolphins and Buffalo Bills have byes this weekend, so their injured quarterbacks can rest.

San Francisco, Carolina and Chicago won't have their top passers on the field when they play Sunday. Neither will Atlanta, but that's by choice.

When the Falcons visit the 3Com Park — a house of horrors for them — it will be without Jeff George, who was suspended by coach June Jones. George was incensed about being benched last Sunday night and made it clear — on national television no less — by confronting Jones on the sideline.

Bobby Hebert goes instead of George.

"Some things that were said," Hebert said, "you wouldn't say to your worst enemy."

George, known for his coach-killing ways, said them. Now he will sit.

Hebert, however, has some recent success against the 49ers. Hebert came on for an injured George to throw two late touchdown passes to Terence Mathis as Atlanta rallied to beat the 49ers 28-27 in last year's regular season finale. The victory clinched a playoff spot for Atlanta and cost the 49ers the top seed in the NFC playoffs.

"It's a problem because of the simple fact that he beat us last year," San Francisco defensive tackle Dana Stubblefield said. "He knows how to attack, where to attack. He knows where the weak spots are in the defense. I think he's more calm and more relaxed than Jeff George."

San Francisco will have Steve Young resting an injured groin, with Elvis Grbac calling signals. Grbac went 3-2 as a starter last season while Young was out with a shoulder injury, throwing for 300 yards in each of his last three starts.

"I've just got to get in the mindset again of going out there and just doing what I have to do to get a win for this club and get us back on track,"

Grbac said. Carolina, with Steve Beuerlein replacing Kerry Collins for the second straight week, is at Jacksonville as both 1995 expansion teams meet for the first time.

Chicago, minus Erik Kramer — 17-year veteran Dave Krieg starts — is home for Oakland.

Also Sunday, it's Denver at Cincinnati, Detroit at Tampa Bay, Houston at Pittsburgh, Minnesota at the New York Giants, New Orleans at Baltimore, Green Bay at Seattle, Kansas City at San Diego, St. Louis at Arizona and the New York Jets at Washington.

Dallas visits Philadelphia on Monday night.

Off this week are the Bills, whose Jim Kelly can take care of a hamstring injury; the Miami Dolphins, whose Dan Marino is out for about six weeks with a broken foot; the Indianapolis Colts and the New England Patriots.

"It is pretty ironic," said Beuerlein, who began last season as Carolina's No. 1 quarterback. But he lost the job to Mark Brunell, became a free agent and signed with the Panthers. Now he backs up Collins, last year's top draft pick for Carolina.

"I was excited about going to Jacksonville, but the way things worked it wasn't a fun year for me and I didn't have a lot of positive feelings about their role for me," he said.

Krieg is with his fourth team in as many years. He takes over for Kramer, who has a neck injury, and faces a familiar foe.

Krieg spent 14 years with AFC West teams Seattle and Kansas City. He is 11-8 lifetime against the Raiders, and of his 35,668 yards passing — eighth in NFL history — 3,969 have come against them.

"I know their philosophy very well, but the players they have now are not the same as when I played for Seattle," Krieg said. "I'll be fine once I get that first snap out of the way and not fumble it."

St. Louis also has a QB change, with Steve Walsh benched for rookie Tony Banks.

"It'll bring a lot more oomph to the offense," said Isaac Bruce, who caught 11 passes for 136 yards last week.

Baltimore nears playoffs after beating Blue Jays

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Texas Rangers and Baltimore Orioles are on the verge of reaching the AL playoffs.

The Rangers beat the California Angels 6-5 Thursday night to clinch at least a tie for a postseason berth, while the Orioles closed in on the wild card by downing the Toronto Blue Jays 4-1.

Texas can win its first division title with a victory in any of its final three games — or if second-place Seattle loses any of its four remaining games. The Rangers have a 3-game lead in the AL West over the Mariners, who lost 7-5 at O.

Baltimore can clinch the wild card with two more victories, or one more win and one Seattle loss. The Orioles have three games left at Toronto, while the Mariners have three games remaining against Oakland, plus a game at Cleveland on Monday if Seattle is still in playoff contention.

"We don't want to bank on anything before we accomplish it," said Orioles outfielder Brady Anderson, who hit his 48th homer Thursday night. "We haven't clinched yet, so you won't see any celebrating."

Boston was eliminated from the wild-card race despite its 5-3 win over New York. The Red Sox trail the Orioles by four games with three remaining.

"Our guys fought as hard as they could," said Boston manager Kennedy, whose team got off to a 6-19 start this season. "Our time will come. We will be there again."

The idle Chicago White Sox still have a very slim shot at the playoffs. For the White Sox to tie for the wild card, they must win their last three games at Minnesota, the Orioles must lose their last three, and the Mariners must lose at least one of their remaining games.

Orioles 4, Blue Jays 1

At Toronto, Cal Ripken hit a three-run homer and rookie Rocky Coppinger (10-6) took a three-hit shutout into the ninth before giving up a run. Coppinger allowed five hits and improved to 4-0 against the Blue Jays this season. Jesse Orosco and Armando Benitez finished up, with Benitez getting his fourth save.

Red Sox 5, Yankees 3

At Boston, the Red Sox rocked Jimmy Key for four runs in the first inning and beat the Yankees, who rested many of their regulars a day after clinching the AL East. Key (12-11) gave up RBI singles to Jose Canseco and Bill Haselman, and a two-run single to rookie Rudy Pemberton in the first. Mariano Duncan, who leads the Yankees with a .340 average, was hit on the left wrist by a foul ball and went to a hospital for X-rays.

Athletics 7, Mariners 5

At Oakland, the Athletics rallied to win with four runs in the eighth inning. After scoring three runs in the top of the eighth to take a 5-3 lead, the Mariners gave the lead right back. Three of the runs came off closer Norm Charlton (4-7), who forced in a run by walking Mike Bordick with the bases loaded and gave up a two-run single to Tony Batista. Oakland's Terry Steinbach hit an inside-the-park homer, making the A's the third team this season to top the old major league record of 240 homers in a season.

Butler expects his club's spirits to be good despite two close, disappointing losses.

"Our morale is good, real good," he said. "Our guys are growing up in a hurry."

"This is an unbelievable group to be around. Everything is positive with them. That speaks highly of our senior leadership."

Snyder has a bit of a mental hump to get over. They just missed beating highly-ranked Sweetwater two weeks ago, then couldn't get their morale up for Abilene Wylie last week.

Recent history sides with the Steers. Big Spring has won four out of the last five meetings, losing only in 1992 on a controversial officiating call.

High School, San Angelo Central, San Angelo Lake View, Snyder, and Pecos. Division II school competing will be Borden County, Garden City, Grady, Klondike, Marathon, Sands, Stanton, Abilene Cooper, Andrews, Big Spring, Lubbock Roosevelt, Midland Lee, San Angelo Central, San Angelo Lake View, and Odessa High.

will start Saturday's nationally-televised game against California. The game has been moved up from 7:35 p.m. to 12:05 p.m. EDT to accommodate FOX. ... Anderson's homer gave the Angels a franchise record 190 this season... Rodriguez has 47 doubles, two shy of the club record set by Rafael Palmeiro in 1991... Greer has hit safely in all five games since returning to the lineup after missing 15 games with a fractured rib.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY FOR SATURDAY, SEPT. 28:

Negotiation will become your forte this year. You discuss money, emotions and goals in a persuasive fashion. Family life offers many rewards in 1996. You also may buy a home or improve your present one. This will be enhanced by a relationship. You are more willing to be vulnerable than before. If you are single, your love life will probably be quite active. You feel as if you died and went to heaven. Don't count on stability for a while. If attached, your relationship will benefit from a new hobby that the two of you can share. The fun ignites sparks between you. TAURUS values you.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN (Never known of Fail)

O Most beautiful flower of Mount Carmel, Faithful vine splendor of Heaven, blesses mother of the Son of God, Immaculate virgin assist me in my necessity.

O Star for the sea, Help me and show me here you are my mother. O Holy Mary Mother of God Queen of Heaven and earth, I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart, to secure me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power.

O Mary conceived without sin, Pray for us who have resoured to Thee (3 times). Holy Mary I place this cause in your hands (3 times). Say this prayer for 3 consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you.

Your possessive streak prevents you from enjoying yourself fully. Work with unexpected changes from a friend. Maintain a sense of humor, and deal with an authority figure. Carefully check out an expenditure. Tonight: It's your treat. ***

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You work well with what transpires suddenly. There could be a shift in plans. You see why and how one event supports another. All this has a reason. A smile goes a long way in making what you want happen. Tonight: It's your call. ****

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) During the day, you are in your element. Make the most of the social nature of this period. Get involved in a community event. A flirtation becomes more; be sure of what you want. Another could be jealous. Broaden your horizons. Tonight: Take a night off. ***

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Focus on swift changes, and handle them effectively. Your fun, upbeat energy helps a partner overcome a problem. Confusion surrounds a key event. The unforeseen occurs with finances. Take care of yourself, and keep smiling. Tonight: Go out and about! ****

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You are in the limelight. Maintain a high profile, and be more visible. Complete a special project, or dig into a favorite hobby that you normally don't have time for. Partners are quirky yet funny. Humor is your strong suit. Tonight: Wherever you go, you are the main act! ***

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A loved one disappoints you. Don't let it mar plans with a special person. An offbeat day or jaunt helps you relax. Extricating yourself from routines lets you relate more easily. You paint a new picture of life. Tonight: Take a different approach. ****

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Talks prove provocative. You discover that someone cares a lot more than he has let you know. Do not become confused by what happens. Remain confident. Trust yourself with a money matter. Tonight: Go for a close encounter. ***

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Others have a lot to say that baffles you and forces you to regroup. Don't take anything too seriously. Someone is going through a phase. Make the most of a gregarious occasion, and socialize. You have no reason to be anxious. Tonight: The unexpected appeals. ****

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) No question about it, you need to put your feet up and relax. Much that goes on tests your patience; don't let anything trigger volatile emotions. Humor takes you far with a testy personality. Nurture yourself. Tonight: Be a couch potato. ***

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Sensuality and creativity are high. A phone call from a distance entices you to take off at the last minute. Toss caution to the wind: Opt for romance. Be careful how many risks you take. You might not be realistic. Tonight: Your partner gets a treat. ****

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) The unexpected occurs as you attempt to stabilize a personal matter. You stun yourself by your reaction. Instincts are off. Stay anchored with others. Change plans if you want. Trust that you are cared for, and do not let insecurity take hold. Tonight: Be spontaneous. ***

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Take care of money early in the day. You have misunderstood another. Once you gain perspective, you find there isn't a problem. Breeze through a favorite area of town, or check out a flea market. Visit with a friend. Tonight: Dine out. ****
