COURT OF CIVIL APPEALS DISSOLVES GROESBECK INJUNCTION
SEVERAL KILLED AND MUCH DAMAGE IS DONE BY TORNADOES
JUDGE TAYLOR MAKES NEW ACCUSATIONS AGAINST MAYFIELD

OKLAHOMA OIL FIELD AND COLORADO TOWNS DAMAGED BY STORMS

By United Press.

Storms sweeping over the middle and the southwest today, took a heavy toll in life and property.

Blizzards, cyclones and tornadoes were reported from the Rocky Mountain region into Oklahoma. Two were killed and four injured in a storm which swept Carr Crossings, north of Sugar City, Colorado. A cyclone which struck Drumright, Oklahoma, and surrounding towns, took a heavy toll of lives, according to reports.

Four were reported killed at Roxana camp alone and unconfirmed reports placed the number of dead at other points much higher.

Heavy snowfall was reported in portions of Colorado, Utah, New Mexico and Arizona, tying up traffic and demoralizing communication.

KANSAS CITY, MO., Nov. 4.—Cyclones sweeping through the southwest tonight took a toll of more than a score of lives, according to unconfirmed reports.

Ten persons were known to have been killed in Colorado and Oklahoma by a twister which wrecked houses ,toppled over oil derricks and caused probably a loss estimated at more than $1,500,000.

Heavy rains, hail, sleet and electrical manifestations also were reportable from the Rocky Mountain region, Oklahoma, Kansas and western Missouri.

First reports of cyclone disturbances came from Carr Crossing, Colo., where two persons were killed and four probably fatally injured. The storm broke there shortly after day break and leveled houses.

DENVER, Nov. 4.—Two persons dead, two missing, several injured and property damage upwards of $50,000, was the toll reported tonight in the wake of a series of tornadoes and thunder storms which gripped southeastern Colorado today.

The damaged area was the center of a sleet and snow storm which hit the Rocky Mountain states last night and reached the height of its severity late today. Blizzardy conditions prevailed in most western states tonight and heavy snowfall, with lower temperatures, were reported almost generally.

Wire communication south and west of Denver was demoralized, telephone and telegraphic companies reporting most of their lines out of commission.

Two lives were lost at Sugar City, Col., in a tornado which swept near that city early today, it was reported. Another tornado struck that place this afternoon and caused property damage amounting to several thousands of dollars, according to reports. No injuries were reported.

Nearly a score of hodges and barns were reported demolished east of Limon, Col., and residents of that town are searching for Carl Harmon, a rancher, and his wife, who were reported missing following the destruction of their home. Several persons were injured at Limon.

PUEBLO IS COMPLETELY ISOLATED FROM WORLD

PUEBLO, COLO., Nov. 4.—Pueblo has been completely isolated from the rest of the world for the past six hours. All long distance telephones and all telegraph lines have been down because of a severe blizzard which struck this region at noon Saturday. Meagre reports of a tornado at Ordway and Sugar City, Colorado, two points on the Missouri Pacific railroad 50 miles east of here, have not been verified as it is impossible to get into communication with those places.

In Pueblo electric wires and telephone lines were broken by the heavy coat of sleet that clung to the wires causing them to snap in the wind.

SNOW IS REPORTED AT POINTS ON THE SANTA FE

AMARILLO, TEXAS, Nov. 4.—Snows from La Junta, Colo., to Colorado Springs, and from Lamar, Colo., to Raton, New Mexico, were reported to the general offices of the Santa Fe railway here tonight.

Rain falling in the section between Lamar and Newton, Kansas, was expected to turn to sleet, it was said.

NEBRASKA TOWN IS STRUCK BY TORNADO

LEXINGTON, NEB., Nov. 4.—A tornado struck Lexington late this evening, cutting a wide swath through the southern part of the town. No injuries were reported. Union Pacific trains were held up and many barns were demolished.

SEIZE THREE VESSELS IN CONNECTION WITH FORECLOSURE SUITS

HOUSTON, Nov. 4.—The United States marshal had under seizure today three vessels on the Houston ship channel seized in connection with foreclosure suits filed in federal court by District Attorney Holden in the name of the United States shipping board. Warrants for the seizure were issued Friday.

The three ships are the tug Barwick the tug Bay Port and the barge Bluffton. They were sold to the National Oil company a New Jersey corporation in 1920 and 1921.

Sale of the vessels to satisfy the mortgages is being sought by the district attorney.

TROOP BOY SCOUTS CAUGHT IN STORM

PUEBLO, COLO., Nov. 4.—A troop of eight boy scouts under the direction of their scout master left Pueblo this morning for a hike. Nothing has been heard of them since the storm broke about 2:30 o'clock. Men on horseback have left Pueblo in an effort to reach a ranch house where some persons believe the boys may be safe and try to locate them. A blinding snow storm swept the region into which the boys went and there are some fears expressed for their safety.

DRUMRIGHT, OKLA., Nov. 4.—Four persons are known to have been killed, 50 were injured, some seriously, and many are missing as the result of a tornado which struck in the oil fields just southeast of here early tonight.

The storm came in a northeasterly direction. It missed the town of Drumright. All the damage reported was to houses and property on the oil leases.

The known dead:

JOE JENNINGS.

MRS. JOE JENNINGS.

Fourteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Jennings.

—— DOBBS, a boy 15 years old.

Several automobiles filled with physicians departed at once for the storm area from here and Oilton. The total darkness which covered the oil field as a result of the destruction of electric lighting equipment is hindering the work of rescue parties.

More than 20 houses of oil workers on the Roxana, Prairie, Pure and Gypsy leases were wrecked and oil rigs and pumping machinery strewn about for miles.

The Jennings family was living on the Roxana lease. No trace of their house has been found. Their bodies were picked up a quarter of a mile away.

A heavy downpour set in immediately after the tornado passed, and is continuing, adding to the difficulty of bringing in the injured.

Two of the injured brought here were identified as Frank Hurst and Mrs. Fannie Hurst, both of whom lived in a grocery store on the Roxana lease, where the storm first struck.

After striking southwest of Drumright the tornado raised and descended near Mannford, about 25 miles northeast of here. An oil worker named Wall, aged about 30, was killed on an oil lease near Mannford.

EYE WITNESS TELLS OF RACE TO ESCAPE CYCLONE

TULSA, OKLA., Nov. 4.—W. B. Richards, a Tulsa attorney, with his wife, and Dr. C. K. Roberts, dentist, were returning from Shamrock to Tulsa, saw the funnel shaped Oklahoma cyclone this afternoon, and escaped from it by driving at top speed for several miles.

"We left Shamrock about 5 o'clock and started for home in the midst of a terrific wind storm," Richards said.

"When we were about a mile and a half out of Drumright I looked back and saw the clouds pushing toward the earth and the water coming down in sheets. We heard terrific thunder crashes as we started up a long hill and could see the characteristic funnel taking shape back near Shamrock. The huge black clouds were swirling around the top of the funnel and the sharp lighted colored point was reaching closer to the ground and seemed veering toward the east. I was driving, and from then on we averaged 50 miles an hour, even around the turns. When we topped the next hill I looked back again and saw the bottom of the twister crossing the road and apparently going toward the north. We could see one oil tank blazing in its wake.

"From that hill we could see hundreds of derricks in the rich Cushing field lying directly in the path of the twister. Scores of houses could be seen dotting leases as flashes of lightning would reveal the entire country. We saw numbers of rigs blown down, and one flash revealed trees and twisted wreckage lying in the wake of the deadly funnel.

"Fearing that the cyclone might veer east and overtake us, we did not relax speed but kept on as fast as the car would go. The things we saw were occasional glimpses as we topped some of the higher hills between Drumright and Sapulpa.

"When we were half toward Sapulpa we passed cars headed for Drumright. We tried to signal them to turn back, but they kept on.

"After the twister had passed, apparently headed in a northeasterly direction toward Olive and Mannford, the rain increased and came down in blinding sheets so that we could see little more.

"We came on into Sapulpa, and there started some relief parties out toward the storm's path. Then we came on into Tulsa."

FARMER IS INSTANTLY KILLED BY TORNADO

ELDORADO, KAN., Nov. 4.—Claude Sherman, a farmer, 45, was instantly killed here today at his home five miles southeast of here, when a small tornado swept his farm. Sherman's skull was crushed when a small outbuilding collapsed. Other property on the farm was damaged.

LETTER TO KANSAS 'MOVIE' MEN PUTS PEP IN CAMPAIGN

REPORTED SPECIAL FAVORS PROMISED IN RETURN FOR SUPPORT.

APPEAL IN BEHALF OF THE REPUBLICAN TICKET

Stationery Carries Name of Candidate As Counsel of Organization.

TOPEKA, KAN., Nov. 4.—Kansas political circles were set agog here tonight when the Topeka State Journal printed a letter being sent out by the Kansas Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Kansas, Inc., urging theatre owners and managers to get behind the candidacy of W. Y. Morgan, R. J. Hopkins and C. B. Griffith, republican candidates for governor, secretary of state and attorney general.

The letter also carried the name of Hopkins as "general counsel and legal adviser" for the organization and gave the theatre men to understand that they can expect special favors from these three candidates if they were elected.

The letter urging the election of Morgan, Hopkins and Griffith said:

"Run slides of Morgan, Griffith and Hopkins.

"Make talks in your theatres in their behalf.

"Work like hell and they'll work for us.

"We've too much at stake to take chances—We're betting on winning horses."

C. J. Peterson, secretary of the democratic state committee, when he saw the letter said:

"This letter alone is enough to beat all three of these candidates. It is unbelievable that the attorney general of this state when sworn and paid to enforce the laws with impartiality would become private attorney of the movie trust."

Republican state headquarters issued a general denial for Morgan, the republican candidate for governor, and declared that he has made no promises to any one.

Attorney General Hopkins when asked regarding the letter of the movie men said:

"I am not getting any pay from the organization for using my name as its general counsel and legal adviser on its stationery."

HOWARD BRACKEN BEING TRIED FOR MURDER OF MEANS

DURANT, OKLA., Nov. 4.—The trial of Howard Bracken, charged with the murder of R. C. Means of Tulsa, continued in district court here today with the examination of state's witnesses. Means' body, with his head crushed, was found lying near his abandoned automobile on a lonely road near here last spring.

Miss Eeuna McAlester testified that she saw Bracken driving Means' motor car through here shortly after the slaying is alleged to have taken place. She identified the automobile.

The state charges that Means' body was in the tonneau of the automobile at the time Miss McAlester saw the machine, contending that Means was slain between Calera, south of here, and Durant, and that in their attempt to get away the slayers stalled the automobile on the lonely road where it was found, dumping Means' body out.

Means was returning to his home in Tulsa from Dallas at the time he was slain. Robbery is alleged by the state to have been the object which led to the attack on him.

Harry Zack, charged jointly with Bracken with the murder, has not yet been brought to trial.

GOVERNOR OF THRACE HAS ASKED MEN TO ORGANIZE TO ASSIST GENDARMERIE

By Associated Press.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 3.—Shakir Bey, the new governor of Thrace, has issued a proclamation in which he invites the Moslem male population to form into bands owing to the insufficiency in numbers of the gendarmerie. The Turks have begun the application of the confiscation law regarding abandoned property and have seized stocks of alcoholised liquor.

Another proclamation made public today demands the giving of information concerning individuals guilty of mistreatment of Moslems or treason during the period of Greek occupation.

TOY KINGDOM OF FORMER EMPEROR IS MAKING MERRY

STAGE IS SET WITH REGAL POMP FOR WEDDING SUNDAY.

EXILED EX-MONARCH IN A BUOYANT MOOD

Outside There Is No Crowd of Loyal Subjects Gazing in the Castle.

DOORN, HOLLAND, Nov. 4.—Wilhelm Hohenzollern, erstwhile emperor of Germany but now ruler of Doorn House, marshaled the splendors of his toy kingdom around him tonight as the stage was set with regal pomp and circumstance for his marriage tomorrow to Princess Hermine.

The exiled kaiser was in a buoyant mood as he made the rounds of his castle on the eve of his wedding, seeing that the furniture was arranged and the decorations in place.

Princess Hermine arrived at Doorn House this evening her automobile rushed through gates amid the booming of flash lights then brakes were jammed on as the car halted beside the porter's lodge, which she entered.

The bride to be, whose trousseau is collected in 10 huge chests where they were brought over the Dutch border without being pried into by inspectors, has an appointment with her ex-regal fiance tonight—they were to dine in a cozy tete-tete—alone at last, while guests made merry in other rooms of the castle, and servants scurried about making last minute preparations. Inside Doorn House was an atmosphere of royalty. The table prepared for the wedding for tomorrow was covered with costly damask cloth with a handsome centerpiece bearing the initials "W. I. Wilhelm Emperator Rex."

Deference due a king was accorded the "all highest." Guests looked upon it as a royal wedding.

But the ex-kaiser's little kingdom ends at the walls of his estate. Outside there is no crowd of loyal subjects gazing in the castle. The motion he once ruled thought so little of the event that only one journalist was sent to report for a newspaper.

Most of the assemblage outside were foreign correspondents and movie operators, who guarded the gates and took long shots at the house from points of vantage in the castle.

PRISON BOARD IS ORDERED TO MAKE FINANCIAL REPORT

HOUSTON, TEXAS, Nov. 4.—A full report of the finances of the Texas prison commission, not later than November 20, was ordered by District Judge J. D. Harvey here this afternoon in a hearing of the mandamus proceedings of the Houston National Exchange bank against the prison commission, seeking to compel the commission to pay a debt of $112,000 owed the bank.

The debt was the outgrowth of the sale of a Fort Bend county cotton oil mill to the prison commission several months ago.

The bank had interests in the cotton oil mill to the amount of $112,000.

After the sale of the mill the prison commission failed to pay the bill, claiming that other debts owed by the commission took priority over that of the bank. The bank then instituted mandamus proceedings to compel the commission to pay the $112,000 debt before all others.

The report was ordered upon request of attorneys of the bank who claimed they could not complete their case unless they had the financial report.

TWO YEAR OLD CHILD IS IN A SERIOUS CONDITION FROM DRINKING KEROSENE

DALLAS, TEXAS, Nov. 4.—Virginia Riley, aged two, was in a serious condition here tonight from drinking a cup of kerosene oil.

The kerosene was on a table in the kitchen. While the child's mother wasn't looking, she drank it.

Election Bulletins

Will be displayed from The Times building Tuesday night.

The leased wire of the Texas election bureau is being installed for receiving returns from over the state on the Mayfield-Peddy contest.

The Associated Press will carry the returns from other states.

The Times radiophone will also be used to receive returns which will be bulletined directly to the crowds in the street through an amplifier. It is also probable that musical programs from broadcasting stations in St. Louis, Kansas City and Davenport, Iowa, will be received.

The usual preparations for bulletining the returns as rapidly as they are received are being made.

"OIL MEN HAVE TO KICK IN" CANDIDATE ACCUSED OF SAYING

PEDDY SPEAKER SAYS COMMISSIONER TOLD M'NAMARA THAT AT ARCHER CITY.

MAKES OTHER CHARGES IN SPEECH SATURDAY

Deplores Effort of Klan to Dominate Texas Politics; Is Heard By Crowd of 500.

"Well, Mac, how are you getting along with the collection of campaign funds down here with the oil men?"

"Pretty slow, Mr. Mayfield. The money is coming in awful slow."

"Listen, Mac; you tell those ——fellows that if they don't kick in and send me to the United States senate that I'll be in the railroad commission for the next four years and that there will be damn few oil wells drilled."

The above conversation took place in a cafe in Archer City, between Earle B. Mayfield, candidate for United States senator, and Mike McNamara in the presence of Attorney Joe Dickey of Henrietta and is detailed in an affidavit made and signed by Attorney Dickey which has been forwarded to be read in the district court at Groesbeck, according to Judge R. E. Taylor, who addressed an assemblage of 500 people at the Wichita theatre Saturday night. The address, which was made at a George Peddy campaign meeting, was sensational in several particulars.

Judge C. L. Bass, in the absence of Attorney T. R. (Dan) Boone, delivered the introductory address in which he detailed a letter written by General Felix H. Robertson of Waco, the last living major general of the confederate army, which he wrote in answer to one written him by the Ku Klux Klan.

Says Fraud Assists Pledge.

Judge Taylor opened his address by saying "I am a democrat. I have fought, bled and died with democracy. I've closed my office doors and went all over the state of Texas and stumped for various candidates for what I thought was just and right. I believe in democratic principles. I believe in a government of the people, for the people and by the people, and I am against a pretension of a government which breeds unrest and strife.

"I believe that I can break a contract within the sanctity of the law when it is shown that fraud has been perpetrated, so don't tell me a man hasn't the right to break a so-called pledge where government, society and common decency is at stake and when it is shown that fraud has been perpetrated.

"Earl Mayfield perpetrated a fraud on us, he perpetrated a fraud on you and even on the poor Ku Klux Klan. Even Billy has something to say about this; you know Billy, he's the man that helped rob a train and then squealed on the rest of the bunch that was with him. Billy says that both he and Earl went all over the state telling that they were Ku Kluxers and now Earle gets up on the witness stand and under the sanctity of an oath tells that he is not a member of the Ku Klux.

Mayfield and K. K. K.

"I want to vote for an honest man, one who believes in government by the people and not one who believes in a tar and feather brigade. When Earle swore that he was not a K. K. K. I believe he committed an act of perjury and I am not going to vote for a perjurer."

Mr. Taylor referred to the testimony that Mayfield gave with reference to the fact that he had been in a klan meeting but three times and that it was later proven that he had visited a klan meeting three different times in the city of Dallas and was introduced each time as a member.

"I wasn't so astonished at that," Mr. Taylor continued, "but what I am about to tell you will make you shudder in your seats.

"I want you tell your good preachers about this tomorrow. I have already told mine. I also want Earle to know that I am telling you this.

Candidate and Whiskey.

"You know Earle went around telling the poor innocent preachers that if they heard that he, Earle, drank liquor that they should give it the lie. I told them when I first

ELECTRA WOMAN IS UNDER $15,000 BOND ON MURDER CHARGE

MRS. IDA BELL TELLS WHY SHE SHOT G. A. DE MOSS SEPTEMBER 27.

SAYS UNKEPT PROMISE OF MARRIAGE CAUSED IT

Also Declares She Was Attacked In Room; Examining Trial Is Held Saturday.

"You won't ruin anyone else's home." Mrs. Ida Ball said after she had shot G. A. DeMoss on the porch of the Electra hotel at Electra on the evening of September 27, 1922. "He was beautiful, and I admired him," she said at another point in her testimony.

Mrs. Bell, who stands charged with the murder of G. A. DeMoss, took the witness stand and told the story that led to her shooting the man with whom she had become infatuated and against whom she was later embittered.

A letter she had found in his pocket and then an alleged attack on her in her room caused the shooting, she said.

Justice of the Peace R. V. Gwinn bound the women over on the murder charge to await the action of the grand jury under a bond of $15,000.

Mrs. Bell's statement with reference to the remark made immediately after she had shot DeMoss and which is admissable in the trial of the case, being regarded as part of the res gestae, was corroborated by the testimony of another witness, Irvin Cunningham, who was sitting on the porch at the time DeMoss was shot.

Eye Witness Testifies.

J. T. Wofford, proprietor and owner of the Electra cafe, was the first witness to take the stand. He testified as to the happening just preceding the shooting and subsequent to it.

When he heard the two pistol shots, he said, he saw DeMoss fall to the floor. He testified that DeMoss said "Boys, call a doctor." He also told that he had taken the gun from the hands of the defendant and that she then sat down on a bench and said "Call the law for me."

Cora Cowley, chambermaid at the hotel, told of two instances when she saw the deceased at the bedroom door of the defendant. She also told of an occasion when Mrs. Bell had gone with her into the room of DeMoss when he was absent.

Johnnie Bell, aged 10 years, son of the defendant, told of his awakening the night before the day of the shooting and discovering DeMoss in his mother's room, choking her and beating her. He said that he began crying and that DeMoss then departed and while leaving the room said something "about killing mamma the next night." He said that was the only time that he ever saw DeMoss in his mother's bedroom.

Defendant Takes Stand.

Mrs. Bell, the defendant, took the stand at 2 o'clock. She was cool and composed.

"My name is Mrs. Ida Bell. I am 27 years old. I was married 12 years ago.

"I met DeMoss in the Daugherty

An appeal was sent to Washington, Thursday, by the state commission.

DECISIONS FAVORABLE TO MAYFIELD ON ALL ISSUES BEFORE COURT

By JACK R. HORNADAY,
United Press Staff Correspondent.

DALLAS, Nov. 4.—The fifth district court of civil appeals here late tonight reversed the judgment of the district court at Groesbeck and dissolved an injunction issued there restraining the printing of general election ballots bearing the name of Earle B. Mayfield, democratic senatorial candidate. A motion for rehearing was filed immediately by attorneys supporting Peddy.

Decisions favorable to Mayfield were handed down on all the motions before the court. The decisions were handed down at 11:10 p. m.

Hearing on the motion for a rehearing was set for Sunday morning at 9 o'clock.

In dissolving the Groesbeck injunction, the court held it was brought properly, but too late. The main point set forth in the court's eight page opinion was that the Groesbeck injunction, while temporary, would have the effect of a permanent injunction, because of the closeness of the election.

Chief Justice George Seargeant announced from the bench motion for rehearing might be filed not later than 9 o'clock Sunday morning, when the court will have a session to act. When the motion for rehearing was filed, the court submitted it immediately. It will pass on the motion Sunday.

Motion of Peddy attorneys for injunction against the Tarrant county district court mandamus requiring election officials of that county to print Mayfield's name on the ballot was overruled. The court commented, however, that it did not agree with the Fort Worth judge who issued the writ and that a written opinion would be handed down Monday.

The court overruled a motion of the appellees to dismiss the Groesbeck appeal on the grounds of defects in the transcript, after permitting Mayfield's attorneys to perfect the document. Delay in obtaining documents from Groesbeck was principally responsible for the court's laleness in handing down its decisions tonight.

GROESBECK HEARING IS BROUGHT TO SUDDEN END

GROESBECK, TEXAS, Nov. 4.—The proceedings in the Groesbeck temporary injunction suit, the latest one seeking to keep Earle B. Mayfield's name off the general election ballot as candidate on the democratic ticket for United States senator, ended rather abruptly today when Judge A. M. Blackmon sustained a motion by Defense Attorney W. B. McLean of Fort Worth that the proceedings be stopped.

It happened right after noon, following a conference between Judge Blackmon, Mr. McLean and Plaintiff Attorney Richard Mays. When court convened Mr. McLean moved that the proceedings stop. Saying that he believed the case was now in the hands of the court of civil appeals at Dallas, the appeal instituted yesterday by Mayfield and Secretary of State Staples lifting it from the Groesbeck court to the appellate court.

After rifling at least one of the two tills in the store, the slayers carried a bank book, a money sack and a large purse to the back yard and set them afire. They failed to burn and finger print experts are taking impressions which may give the only hope of identifying the murderers.

A little dog was found perched on Brownsfield's chest when the morning customer called.

STILL IN EFFECT DECLARES ATTORNEY

DALLAS, TEXAS, Nov. 4.—"The Groesbeck injunction is still in effect, Attorney General Luther Nichols, chief counsel for the forces fighting to keep Mayfield's name off the ticket, declared shortly after midnight, following dissolution of the injunction by the appelate court here.

"The motion for rehearing pending before the appellate court makes the injunction effective now. If the motion for rehearing is overruled Sunday morning, the case will be carried to the state supreme court on writ of error. Until litigation is finally disposed of Mayfield cannot legally have his name on the ticket."

KANSAS VAGRANCY LAW APPLICABLE TO I. W. W., SUPREME COURT HOLDS

TOPEKA, KAN., Nov. 4.—Kansas tonight had a new weapon for attacking I. W. W. organizers.

The state supreme court in upholding the Kansas vagrancy law, ruled that the measure could be applied to keep organizers out of the state.

The decision was in the application of a writ of habeas corpus by John Clancy, arrested under the vag act while working as a harvest hand. I. W. W. literature was found in his pockets. The case was carried to the supreme court after Clancy's conviction.

The court in another important case today, held that concerns have a right to protect property by obtaining injunctions against strikers. The decision was in the case of the Crane & Co., and was appealed from Shawnee county.

MAN AND WOMAN MURDERED IN STORE AT CLINTON, IOWA

CLINTON, IOWA, Nov. 4.—Slain in what is declared to have been the coldest blooded double murder and robbery in the history of Clinton county, Homer Brownsfield, aged 48 years, and his wife, aged 38 years, were killed in their store six miles west of here this morning. Brownsfield had been shot through the head and instantly killed, it is believed. His wife, who had attempted to escape, was pursued and clubbed about the head with an iron bar. She was still breathing when a chance customer discovered her but died within a few minutes after a physician arrived.

In an effort to hide the evidence of their crime, committed between 8:30 and 10 o'clock last night, it is believed, the murderers jolted the gasoline lamps from their hangings. For some reason the lamps did not set fire to the store.

After rifling at least one of the two tills in the store, the slayers carried a bank book, a money sack and a large purse to the back yard and set them afire. They failed to burn and finger print experts are taking impressions which may give the only hope of identifying the murderers.

A little dog was found perched on Brownsfield's chest when the morning customer called.

AVIATOR CHARGED WITH VIOLATION OF FEDERAL PRO LAW

SAN ANTONIO, Nov. 4.—Lieut. Leland S. Andrews, of Kelly field, was arraigned before United States Commissioner E. L. Edwards Saturday afternoon where he gave bond for appearance at the federal court to be convened at Laredo, November 13. Lieutenant Andrews is charged by a complaint which was filed at Laredo, assisting, concealing and transporting smuggled liquor. His detention was brought about by an incident, about 100 miles north of Laredo, October 22, when an army plane landed on an isolated spot near where five sacks containing bottled liquor were hidden. After being questioned by federal officers, he and the sergeant with him, were permitted to fly the machine back to San Antonio.

PROTEST AGAINST RECENT ACTION IN M'NAMARA CASE

WICHITANS SEND MESSAGE TO RAILROAD COMMISSION CHAIRMAN.

CRITICISE COURSE OF SUPERVISOR HASSELL

Attest Good Reputation and High Standing of Man Who Was Discharged.

A telegram protesting against the discharging of Mike McNamara, oil and gas supervisor, and criticising the course of J. W. Hassell, chief supervisor, as "highly improper" was sent Saturday night to Allison Mayfield, chairman of the railroad commission.

A number of signatures were appended to the message, which follows:

"We desire to register with the railroad commission of Texas, a vigorous protest against the action of Mr. J. W. Hassell, chief of the oil and gas division of the railroad commission, whereby he has undertaken to discharge Mr. Mike McNamara, as deputy supervisor of the oil and gas division of the railroad commission. We base our protest upon the published reply to Mr. Hassell to the published demand of Mr. McNamara for reasons for his discharge.

"It is apparent from that reply that the only specific cause assigned for the discharge is that Mr. McNamara went from his district to Corsicana to testify that he had mailed a letter containing $200 in currency to Mr. Earle B. Mayfield, only after Mr. Mayfield had testified to the untruth of Mr. McNamara's deposition stating that Mr. McNamara had sent the $200 to Mr. Mayfield in a letter.

"From published reports, it appears that 11 of the jurors believed Mr. Mike McNamara's testimony, and as the jury did not find that Mr. Mayfield's testimony as to the $200 was true, it seems highly improper for Mr. J. W. Hassell to decide the conflict of facts in favor of Mr. Mayfield and against Mr. McNamara in order to find a reason for the discharge.

"The high reputation of Mr. McNamara for honor and integrity and fidelity to duty in this community, where he resided until recently, lead us to believe that his discharge is wholly unjustified and is intended to affect the result of the general election for United States senator next Tuesday.

Oklahoma Also Confronted With Election Muddle

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 4.—Election officials are nonplussed over an unprecedented situation which has set political circles buzzing with curiosity as the time for the general election draws near. A republican candidate for justice of the peace in the Oklahoma City district has disappeared as completely as if the earth had opened up and swallowed him.

Local newspapers which have begun a search for him say that three men in the city bearing the name of the missing candidate all deny any aspirations of a political nature and officers of the state election board so far have been unable to gather any information which might clear up the mystery.

J. M. Anderson is the name of the nominee but the J. M. Anderson at the address given the election board at the time of filing of candidates denied he is a candidate for any office and says that he is devoting all his time to the plumbing business.

Another J. M. Anderson at a different address asserts emphatically that the thought of running for office has never entered his mind and that he had never participated actively in any political campaign.

Still another J. M. Anderson, this one a negro, positively denied any ambition to hold office and declared that he is not a candidate for justice of the peace.

NEW ORLEANS NEGRO IS GIVEN LUCRATIVE POST BY PRESIDENT HARDING

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 4.—Walter L. Cohen, negro republican politician, today appointed by President Harding as comptroller of customs at New Orleans, received one of the most lucrative federal offices in the south. The salary attached to the office is $5,000 annually. Cohen assumes the position held by Major A. W. Newlin, known before the new tariff act went into effect, as the naval officer of the port of New Orleans.

Cohen has been a figure in republican circles in Louisiana for almost 30 years. He had held other federal positions, at one time being registrar of the United States land office at Baton Rouge. The offer of a federal position in Washington was declined by Cohen some time ago.

NEW CAFETERIA SOON TO OPEN HERE CONSTRUCTED IN KEEPING WITH BIG TOWN IDEAS

A cafeteria that is declared by those who have visited it to rank with any to be found in the country will be added to the list of Wichita Falls eating places this week, when W. I. Cameron opens his new place on Eighth street.

Mr. Cameron, who has been conspicuously successful in the restaurant business here, believes that his new establishment is "big town stuff" in every sense; he planned and built it with the idea that Wichita Falls was entitled to a place equal to the very best of its kind.

Seats for 200 patrons are provided in the new cafeteria, without crowding. They turn to the right on entering and pass down to a U-shaped serving counter, where, by inspecting the dishes on both sides, meals may be planned before buying. At the inside end of the "U" is the checker's desk, whence patrons pass to the big dining room.

Back of the scenes is the elaborate equipment that will provide dishes promptly and efficiently. There is a big roomy kitchen that contains practically all the late inventions in labor-saving devices. A refrigerating plant, ample steam-table capacity, and a wide expanse of stove space have been provided.

The cafeteria is in white tile practically throughout, and the spotlessly clean appearance that it presents will be rigidly maintained Mr. Cameron says. He has given careful attention to ventilation and freedom from smoke and smells.

The exact opening date is not yet known, but it will probably be before the end of the week.

NO DISSENSION IS TAUGHT IN BIBLE, SAYS EVANGELIST

On the subject "Can We Understand the Word" last night Foy E. Wallace Jr., addressed his audience. He at the beginning laid down two propositions to disprove that world-wide sentiment, "we cannot understand things alike."

"First, if men can not understand the word of God alike, then God did not intend for man to understand His word, and worte the word so man could not understand it. On the other hand if God did intend for man to understand His word and then was unable to write it so man could understand it, God lacks in wisdom. Both of which propositions are untrue because God's word is plain and simple."

To disprove these propositions and to prove that men can understand God's word and understand it alike the 1 Cor. 1:10, Rom. 15:4, and other scriptures were read showing that all men should be of the same mind and the same judgment.

"All men should walk by the same rule. There must be agreement. All men are commanded to agree. Men cannot agree unless they understand alike. Hence, men are commanded to understand alike. Every word spoken by Christ and by divine writers was spoken for harmony. There is no dissension taught in the Bible," he said.

The minister then showed that the disagreements among men are not over the things taught in the scriptures, but over the things man teaches that are not in the scriptures. It was shown that men do not disagree over the names in the Bible, but over mangiven names not found in the Bible.

"Hence, it is over the opinions men formulates and not over the statements of the Bible that men disagree," he said.

There will be preaching at 11:00 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. today. At the night service the subject will be "Seeking the Old Paths." There will be two services each day all through this week, and all are invited to attend.

"OIL MEN HAVE TO KICK IN"-MAYFIELD

heard it that they should deduct at least four foddies because I myself saw him drink that many.

"But now listen, this is what I want to tell you. Earle came down to Henrietta and wrapped himself up in his cloak of hypocrisy and won a lot of votes down there. Earle was talking to a few of his friends when he was down there and Earle said, 'Boys, I need some whiskey.'

"One of his friends said 'Why Earle, I can't get you any whiskey; all we can get down here is corn.'

"Then Earle replied, 'That's the kind I'm used to. Get me some.' And they did.

Says Mayfield Klansman.

The speaker then launched an attack on the socalled 100 per cent Americans. In his discussion he stated emphatically that Earle Mayfield was a member of the klan.

"I was in Washington, D. C. four weeks ago and there I spoke to some of the prominent figures in political circles. I want to tell you friends that we are the laughing stock of the country to permit an invisible empire tell us who to vote for. One of my good friends asked me, 'Taylor aren't you ashamed to live in a state where the socalled 100 per cent Americans knock down a little girl with the butt of a gun when she attempts to defend her father from a tar and feather brigade?' I told him I wasn't ashamed of it as much as I was afraid of it."

He then told of the Imperial Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan who dictates how the voters shall vote down here in Texas. The speaker said that at present Clark was under indictment in Georgia for using the mails to defraud and under a charge of transporting whiskey in the state of Indiana.

Menace of Klan Rule.

"Two governments can't exist in one country," the speaker said, "and I'll tell you friends if the klan prevails, our government with its constitution, its declaration of independence and its sacred bill of rights will crumble.

"Earle Mayfield did not become the candidate of the democrats for United States senator. He became the candidate of the Ku Klux Klan and the pledge is not binding.

"My good friend John Kay and I were in Austin the other day and while standing at the depot Charley Black told us of an incident that occurred that I can't tell you here tonight. I'd like to hold a meeting for men only and tell them all about it. But you good ladies can go home and know that it is something that Earle did while his wife lay in the hospital passing through that sanctified stage of motherhood.

"Unworthy of Klan Vote."

"Why friends, Earle Mayfield is unworthy of the vote of even a Ku Klux Klansman."

The speaker then devoted fifteen minutes to relating the qualifications of George Peddy. He said that nothing had been said against the candidate.

"No man can run for any political office in Texas in this day and time for thirty days and have nothing said about his character unless he is a good man. And even Earle hasn't said anything about him.

"You can repeat every word I have said here tonight because it is the truth and I can back it up, and friends I am going to the polls next Tuesday and cast a vote for George Peddy for United States senator."

The audience was a most attentive one and Mr. Taylor's speech was interrupted repeatdly by hearty applauses.

PREMIER FLYER OF AMERICA HOLDS THREE WORLD RECORDS; ALTITUDE, TIME AND DISTANCE

By FRED G. JOHNSON
United Press Staff Correspondent

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 4.—Fighting adverse conditions and with the breaks against them, Lieutenants John MacReady and Oakley Kelly descended in a smoking airplane at Fort Benjamin Harrison today with the world's non-stop flight record to their credit.

MacReady is now America's premier flyer. He holds three world records. Sometime ago in a specially heated plane he soared 34,563 feet into the air for a record.

Only a month ago at San Diego, accompanied by Kelly, MacReady, circled the city for 35 hours 18½ minutes for the duration record.

The machine in which today's flight was made, was standard in every way with the exception of extra gas, oil and water tanks.

Wind, rain and fog failed to check the plunging plane on its mad dash from coast to coast. A little leaky water pipe on the radiator which cooled the giant engine, brought to an end one of the most daring attempts to conquer the air ever attempted.

MacReady and Kelly left San Diego at two minutes to six Friday morning. They plunged eastward until forced to land near here shortly after 9 a. m. today. The actual flying time was 25 hours, 17 minutes.

They covered 2100 miles. This outdistanced the previous record of 1926 miles made by Alcock and Brown, the British flyers, who fought their way across the Atlantic.

The aviators' clothes, begrimed with grease, eyes blood shot and their faces seared by wind and rain, staggered from the cock pit today and muttered simply, "engine trouble."

Makes 2,100 Miles

They refused to be comforted when told that official Washington announced they had flown 2100 miles—the greatest distance an airplane has ever made without a stop.

The flight started at a little after dawn when the plane circled over the sleeping city of San Diego and winged its way east.

As the ship crossed the mountain passes the aviators encountered a swirling storm and head winds which buffeted the frail craft and checked its speed. The cold was terrific.

"We ate most of our chicken sandwiches and drank the coffee."

MacReady said: "Of course neither of us slept at all. We needed two heads and two pairs of eyes."

Swooping down from the mountains a fog set in through which they cut blindly. Relying on the compass they lost their bearings and did not know their position when they came out of the gray blanket.

Cylinder Missing

One of the cylinders of the engine began to miss fire. A spark plug was cracked. After a consultation the interpid aviators decided they could still make their goal despite the decreased speed.

Night settled down and only occasionally lights of isolated farm houses twinkled below, with now and then a cluster which told the airmen of some sleeping desert town.

"I knew something was wrong. We weren't making the speed we should," MacReady said.

All through the long night the men attempted to find the trouble. An occasional bit of smoke indicated that the cooling system was out of commission. The night was one of terror. Squalls of wind rocked the ship and rain blotted out the twinkling lights below. The smoke from the heated engine increased.

"There was nothing to do but keep on," MacReady declared.

"A landing would have meant a bad crash, we could not be able to see ground 20 feet away."

Locate the Trouble

At the first faint streaks of dawn, the aviators found the jacket on a water pipe in the radiator was cracked and the water was leaking away drop by drop.

The plane plunged over Belleville, Illinois, hidden by a thick curtain of fog.

The plane was first reported today over Terre Haute, 70 miles from Indianapolis.

"We decded just after we left Indianapolis that the game was up," MacReady said. "We kept along for a few miles and then turned her nose back toward Fort Benjamin Harrison.

"She was smoking badly. We were afraid at any minute she might burst into flames.

"When the buildings of the post came into view we sent her into a long spiral.

"It was tough luck but we would have made it if it had not been for that water jacket."

When the officers at Fort Benjamin Harrison saw the plane shooting down in a mass of smoke they thought it was ablaze and grabbing fire extinguishers, ran to the field.

MacReady and Kelly immediately borrowed another plane and flew to Dayton to make an official report of the flight.

321 Arrested for Alleged Violations Of Prohibition Act

AUSTIN Nov. 4.—During October 321 persons were arrested in Texas charged with violation of the national prohibition act, according to the monthly report of David H. Morris, federal prohibition director for Texas. Fifty-two illicit stills and 27 illicit still worms were seized, as well as 203 gallons of moonshine whiskey, 728 gallons of beer, 790 gallons of grape wine, 5,771 gallons of corn meal mash. Eighteen automobiles, valued at $8,925, were seized for transporting liquor. The total appraised commercial value of property seized and destroyed was $4,235.

The large number of arrests and seizures are largely due, Morris said, to the cooperation that the federal government is receiving from peace officers of the cities and the counties of Texas.

OPERATORS STILL WATCHING ARCHER OIL DEVELOPMENTS

ANOTHER GOOD PRODUCER IS ADDED DURING WEEK; MANY NEW TESTS.

BURNETT ROYALTY SHARE IS SOLD FOR $500,000

Rain Fails to Entirely Relieve Situation at Electra; Much Trading at Nocona.

Archer county developments furnished the week's best news in local oil circles, with the completion of another good well in the Mankins pool and the starting of a number of additional tests.

Electra's completions were few, and operations are still slowed up for lack of water.

Another big deal was announced late in the week, with the purchase by the Tidal Western Oil corporation of C. W. Johnson's 1-32 royalty in the Burnett ranch, for $500,000, this being the third recent deal of proportions of six figures or more.

A number of good wells with small extensions to the productive areas in Stephens county and completions in Archer and Young counties were the only developments in an otherwise quiet week in the north center Texas district. In Electra and other Wichita county pools, with the exception of Texhoma company's No. 7 Waggoner making 100 barrels from the 1600 foot sand and the No. 3 of Hockaday-Shaw lease B Waggoner completed in the same pay and swabbing 75 barrels, no completions were reported.

The rains of the early part of the week failed to bring much relief to the district as the baked condition of the country soaked up the rain as fast as it fell. Despite this handicap Electra has at the present time in the neighborhood of 500 drilling wells with a like number waiting on water.

During the week many locations have been made by individual companies while the larger producers are going along with their program. The Magnolia company is at present putting down three tests, and a derrick is up for their fourth on the recently purchased Harvey property in section 81, block 5, of the Waggoner lands. Nos. 12, 13 and 14 are drilling at different depths.

Moore and McKenna are also drilling their Nos. 5, 6 and 7 on the Waggoner tract. On the Burnett tract the Empire Gas and Fuel company is drilling five tests and is expecting to complete one or two early this week. Cap McDanniel and others are drilling their fourth well on the Grace Jennings land and a derrick is up for the No. 1 of L. P. Hammond test on the same tract.

In the Gladiolus pool the Griswold Oil company is showing the usual activity, drilling four tests, Nos. 21, 22, 23 and 24 on this acreage. The United Producers' No. 2 Grace Jennings tested out a sand at 1860 feet, but passed it up and will drill deeper.

Production fell off around 800 barrels, according to the week's pipe line reports, many pumping wells being shut down on account of the water situation.

Good Completions in Archer.

The north half of Archer county continues the center of attraction for the oil men in this section, the greatest amount of activity being shown in the vicinity of the Freeman-Hampton wells near Mankins and the surrounding leases. Fifteen locations for tests were made during the past week. With several producers and a score of drilling wells this district has a lively appearance.

The White Oil company's No. 1 on the Kemp-Kemper, which came in flowing at the rate of 300 barrels from the 1700 foot sand about two weeks ago, is still producing 175 barrels natural and was put on the pump Saturday. On the Ferguson tract of 20 acres, Dilday and Knight are bailing their No. 2 from the 1575 foot pay.

In the Texhoma-Goss section of the county the Maxon company on the W. H. Taylor land brought in the best completion for the week, their No. 2 well making 125 barrels from the 1600 foot sand. The Texas company also is progressing along in a satisfactory manner on tests in the Chance tract to the southwest. Two completions are reported by the Texhoma company on the Goss tract with a combined production of 150 barrels daily. Altogether this county has 21 drilling wells with seven rigging up.

Activity Around Nocona.

Montague county passed a quiet week in oil circles. The excitement that followed the bringing in of the big gasser by the Texas company has fallen off to some extent and the town of Nocona is getting back to normal after enjoying the sensations of a small boom. A number of leases have changed hands and the real estate business is still brisk. Several locations have been made in the vicinity of the Lomona tract and in the territory surrounding the Petroleum Producers on the Maddox farm and that of Lynn Boyd and others on the Dr. Potter land. The latter is reported to have entered a gas pocket in the neighborhood of 1800 feet, but kept on drilling and is in blue shale at 1810 feet.

Other tests in the county are the new test of McBride and associates on the Lee Crenshaw farm, who have built a derrick and are rigging up. S. L. Fowler and others are drilling at 2160 feet in their test on the Fowler tract. Another test which is attracting attention is that of the Raymond Oil and Gas company on the Summerour land which is down to 1805 feet waiting on fuel. Shocker and Bass also have a derrick up on Mrs. Croxton's farm for a test.

Three tests are being drilled in the vicinity of Gainesville, one by the Big Indian Oil company on the R. W. Davis tract which is fishing for tools at 400 feet. The test of the Red River company No. 1 Whaley-Jones land is shut down for water at a depth of 1300 feet. J. W. Anchoos No. 1 Betty Gunter in Nevels Bend has passed through several promising formations and has reached the depth of 1350 feet.

Pioneer and Eastland.

A few completions in the Pioneer and Eastland pools and a general resumption of drilling made up the week's contribution to the north central district from Eastland county. Drilling operations which have been curtailed to a great extent in all parts of the county are once more showing signs of life, especially programs of the larger producing companies which has been shut down for the past few weeks. Although lacking any great amount of new or flush production the last few weeks, the runs have kept up without any noticeable losses, this week's production being in the neighborhood of 24,000 barrels daily for the entire county.

The county's best well for the week was reported from the Pioneer section by the completion of the Drury Oil company in block 33 townsite, making between 750 and 800 barrels daily from the usual depth. The Jacobs well of the Pioneer syndicate, located about two miles northwest of Rising Star, is attracting the attention of operators in this section of the field by the encountering of a grey lime at 2,200 feet. It has been bailing considerable free oil with very little salt water.

Several important tests are being put down in the territory surrounding the city of Eastland and toward the Stephens county line, one of the more interesting being the Mook-Texas, located about two miles north of town on the Garrett land in a section which has so far not received a thorough testing out. The casting has been set at 2,280 feet and will be drilled the next day or two.

The tests of the Gordon Petroleum company on the Bonds and Canudle tracts are progressing along in a satisfactory manner. With the recent rains the fear of water shortage has passed.

Big One in Stephens.

The completion of the Humble company's big producer in the Curry pool and a number of small wells finished in the Eliasville area were developments of importance in the Stephens county fields. Not satisfied with furnishing the biggest producer for the week this county took the lead in showing the greatest gains in production, its gain for the week being 2,500 barrels daily over the figures of the previous week, a total of 35,900 barrels daily. Drilling which has been cut to almost nothing is again showing recovery in all sections from the Palo Pinto to the Eastland county lines. The Ibex field, which has been dormant for nearly a year, is again attracting attention by the performance of the Landreth Oil company's No. 2 well on the Witty tract, which picked up the sand at 3,600 feet with a spray of oil and a heavy gas pressure. The well is in semi-wildcat territory and will extend the field north to some extent.

The sensation of the year in the Breckenridge field is that of the Humble Oil company's No. 2 on lease B, Curry pool, which came in flowing at the rate of between 2,500 and 3,000 barrels from the lime at 3,195 feet. The bringing in of this gusher has stimulated drilling in the Curry field and several new wells are to be drilled, one by the Walker-Caldwell Production company in section 18 on the company's A. J. Jones tract, lunatic asylum state lands, which will be an offset to the big well.

Eight miles southwest of Breckenridge the new well of Pardee & Son company, completed Tuesday with a production of 50 barrels, has increased and is good for 150 barrels daily.

The construction of another big gasoline plant by the Roeser-Pendleton interests in the Curry pool is under way, making the second owned by this company in this part of the county. This one is located on the Shipley tract in the southwest part of the pool and will be able to handle 9,000,000 cubic feet of gas per day from the six units. The cost of the new plant is approximately $250,000.

GASSER IN YOUNG IS DRILLED DEEPER, MAKES 200 BARRELS

GRAHAM, TEXAS, Nov. 4.—The Penn Cities McGarr No. 2 Hughes, the big gasser which has been producing 15,000,000 cubic feet at 2572 feet, was drilled two feet farther in this week and is now producing 200 barrels of oil at 2575 feet.

Colcord and Weakley No. 2 Kisinger came in this week for 150 to 200 barrels at 2512 feet. This well is north of the Brazos river, offsetting Penn Cities to the east.

Fred B. Foster and company found the sand in their No. 2 Parsons at 3943 feet. The well is gauging 25 barrels of oil an hour. The bit just scratched the sand and it is believed that when fully drilled in it will be as good as the old Foster Mahaney No. 1 across the road 300 feet, which came in last June and has up to date produced more than 100,000 barrels of oil.

The big Foster gasoline absorption plant got under way for the first run Wednesday night. This plant has a capacity of 4,000 gallons of gasoline per day. It is well equipped with all modern appliances throughout.

Col-Penn Production company are drilling on their No. 1 Rhodes at 2780 feet. The well has a heavy gas pressure and has made several flows. Storage is being set and pipe line connections rushed. The well has every appearance of being a good producer and will extend production one and one-half miles northeast from Bunger and will open up quite a lot of development in that immediate section.

On next Tuesday go to the polls and write George Peddy under the printed words "Candidate for United States Senator" in either column of the ballot. — (Political Advertisement.)

RABBIT BREEDERS TO MEET TUESDAY; HAVE SALES PLAN

The Wichita Falls Rabbit Breeders association will hold its regular meeting Tuesday night, November 7, in the office of Judge Joe Akin, 1011 City National bank building.

The public is invited to attend the meeting and learn some of the things and progress made by the breeders of the rabbit which has made the local market popular as well as profitable to owners and raisers.

At the last meeting a marketing committee was appointed to take care of all marketable rabbits the membership may be able to furnish.

The association also will be able to take care of all furs, and has a tanner who will tan all hides so they may be marketed and made up into fur garments. Starting with a membership of four members, and in its short space of existence, the association has increased its roll to 50 members.

Through the efforts of the local breeders a market has been created here at home both for meat and fur, the demand being greater than the supply. New business of importance will be disposed of, and constitution and by-laws are to be voted on and adopted at this meeting. William L. Smith is president and T. N. Dewberry secretary and treasurer.

Negro Drinks 14 Bottles of Pop, And Wins His Bet

A certain Wichita Falls negro is ready to meet all comers in a pop-drinking contest.

He is Howard Deckar, porter at Saturday morning he consumed 14 bottles of pop, one right after the other, setting what is believed to be a record. Sporting statistics are not very clear on such contests, but 14 bottles is believed to be a new high mark.

Howard was staggering slightly as the contents of the 12th bottle disappeared. Rallying brilliantly, he put the 13th one away, and then with a supreme effort he swallowed the 14th. But that was all.

The pop was consumed on a bet, Howard having wagered two to one that he could make it 14.

At present rate of increase the world's population will reach four billion in 1914.

Silent Salute to War's Dead to Be Feature of Observance Everywhere.

Impressive simplicity will mark the local observance of Armistice day here next Saturday.

A very brief program at the court house will be the only public feature. It will close at 11:00 o'clock, at which hour all Americans are expected to face the west and stand silently for one moment.

This feature of the observance, this silent tribute, will be observed everywhere. It is probable that some signal will be given to mark the beginning and end of the 60-second period.

The armistice went into effect at 11:00 a. m. on November, 1918, and for that reason the hour has a real significance.

TECHNICAL CLUB TO HOLD MEETING ON TUESDAY EVENING

The first regular meeting of the recently organized Wichita Falls Technical club will be held Tuesday evening, starting at 6:30, and will be in the form of a luncheon at the Wichita club. Members are free to bring their women folks, it is announced.

Dr. A. H. Douglas, city chemist, will read a paper on "Water, Its Chemistry and Treatment," and J. B. Auto Thieves Squeal On Each Other and Many Are Convicted

"The adage 'There is honor and honesty even among thieves,' is a most striking example of irony," states Harry D. Bishop, local representative of the department of justice, who returned Saturday from Amarillo, where he attended federal court during a three weeks' session.

His comment on the old proverbial saying came as the result of a slashing sweep made of a ring of automobile thieves. Eleven arrests were made and seven were prosecuted, all within the short time of 10 days.

A confession was first secured from a 20-year old youth who told countless weird stories of escapades while engaged in the theft of automobiles. His story led to the arrest and prosecution of the remainder.

Four of the eleven were arrested in Amarillo, two in Tucumcari, New Mexico, one in Clovis, one in El Paso and one in Albuquerque. It required the expenditure of $200 in telephone bills to perfect the arrest of these men.

The activities of the alleged ring led them into the states of New Mexico and Texas and even into old Mexico.

The boy who made the confession before the grand jury stated that he had realized between $150 and $200 from stealing ten automobiles.

He told of having stolen a Ford coupe and a Ford sedan in a town near the border in New Mexico. He said that the automobiles were driven into a woods nearby and the bodies of the two cars exchanged. The sheriff of the county found the two automobiles and stored them in a garage.

The boy and the other man with him watched where the cars were stored and that night broke into the garage and restole them. The two cars were delivered to a third party who promised to split when the cars were sold. The boy said the cars were disposed of, but that he never got a cent.

He also told of an incident in another city. He said that he and his companions discovered that a man had brought a stolen Essex roadster into town. They found it and stole it from the original thief who then offered a reward of $250 for its return. One of the members of the gang then telephoned the original taker that he had found it and demanded the reward upon its return. When the car was returned the first thief refused to give the reward, stating that he didn't have it. The car was restolen that night from him. Four of the members of the boy's ring then approached the original thief and told him he would have to give a bill of sale to the car. This was done. The car was then turned over to one of the members of the boy's organization for disposition, but somebody else stole it from him.

Mr. Bishop stated that when the eleven men arrested were brought into court at Amarillo every one of them wanted to "squeal off" on the other. One of the men arrested and sentenced to two years in the federal penitentiary was a practicing attorney in New Mexico. Evidence produced at the trial showed that the ring secured bills of sale from him.

Mr. Bishop succeeded in recovering 21 automobiles as the result of this investigation.

CARPENTER WRITES OF THRIFTY HOUSEKEEPING IN FRANCE

TELLS HOW THE FRENCH MEET THE HIGH COST OF LIVING IN THEIR CITY OF APARTMENTS

How Landlords Make Money Out of Grease Spot and Scratches. The Handling of Servants. What Cooks and Maids Get and Their Fortnightly Day Out. Marketing on a One Cent Commission. Economies Brought by the War. Elevators Which Run Only One Way. The Baby Cupboard and the Judas Slit.

(Carpenter's World Travels, copyright 1922, by Frank G. Carpenter.)

PARIS, 1922.—This letter is for women only. The men who read The Times are supposed to skip it and pass on to the editorials, market reports, or sports. It deals with housekeeping arrangements in France after the war, with how the French buy their groceries, the cost of living, the position of servants, and the thousand and one little things of home life wherein they differ from us. It is made up from my own observations and from talks with American women who have long lived in Paris.

F. G. Carpenter

In the first place, nearly all the people of French cities dwell in apartments. With few exceptions there is no such thing as the individual house. Even the rich are confined to one floor, although this may be made up of gorgeous parlors, bedrooms, and all the other quarters of a fine residence. Such apartments have an infinite number of rooms equipped with large mirrors, and walls decorated with stucco designs which often surround panels of satin or silk.

The furniture is more elaborate and less substantial than ours. Indeed, I tremble whenever I sit down on one of these gilt-framed, spider-legged chairs for fear it will collapse and bring me to the floor. And then the upholstery. The colors are so delicate that I feel like spreading my handkerchief over the place where I sit. The French woman's ideal of a well furnished parlor is that it should have a great deal of furniture, including many lamps and bric-a-brac of all shapes and sizes, filling every inch of available space on piano, table, and mantel. As I look around me in one of these homes I am reminded of the terrified darky who was out plowing when the Charleston earthquake occurred. He dropped to his knees and cried out: "Oh, Lord, come quick, dis am no place for children."

One of the difficulties in renting an apartment in Paris is to have the proper record made of the furniture. Not only every chair, sofa, and table, every bit of bed linen and china, and even the smallest kitchen utensil must be put down but one should note the bric-a-brac item by item, and give the condition of each piece at the time of the renting. The taking of an inventory of the smallest apartment usually lasts several hours, for every scratch on a chair, every worn space on the upholstery, and every spot on a cushion must be itemized, or upon giving up the apartment a heavy fine will be charged for this damage supposed to be done by the tenant. If the clock is in running order, it must be marked on the inventory en-marche which means it is going, and the same is true of every bit of machinery.

A careful American housekeeper has told me her troubles in settling with her landlord on leaving. She had rented a furnished apartment. Her servants were excellent, and consequently there were practically no damage that the agent could find. He went over the inventory, examining every dish, knife, fork, plate and spoon. He snooped around under the furniture, running his fingers along the polished surface looking for scratches. Suddenly he spied a magazine lying on the sofa. "Ah," said he as he threw up his hands, and rushed across the room. He lifted up the magazine, thinking he would find a big grease spot beneath it. Alas, there was nothing, and his face fell in despair.

In fact, I am told some landlords look upon scratches and grease spots as financial assets. They are slurred over, and damages collected from one tenant after another who omit to note them in leasing the apartment.

Courting the Janitor

In addition to the rent, a fixed sum is charged for cleaning the apartment. This is often left out of the lease, but it equals five per cent of the rent, and is a large part of the janitor's wages. Indeed, the janitor gets very little out of the landlord excepting his lodgings. The French janitor is quite as powerful and dictatorial as his brother of the United States and it is well to keep on his right side. He can omit to deliver your letters, he can say you are out when visitors come, and you are obliged to have him turn on the light in the hall when you ring the bell upon coming in late. That matter of light is another economy. At night the lower front door of every French apartment building is as dark as a pocket and the electricity is so arranged by a mechanical device that the lights burn only long enough for you to get to your floor. This is about three or four minutes. The janitor turns them on at your ring; they go out of themselves.

Everything in the way of machinery is on the most skimpy basis. Americans claim that the pipes of the plumbing are too small, and that they are always out of order. That is the case in this room where I am writing, which costs me six dollars a day. The electric current is weaker than in America. In many apartments one cannot use an electric iron and an electric heater at the same time.

Everyone Wants a Tip

And then the tips! There is a continual drain of francs and sous. Everytime your doorbell rings you had best get ready a fee, for some one will expect it for the alleged service he has performed. The boy with a telegram or the postman with a special delivery letter will want at least twenty-five centimes, or two cents and a half at present exchange. The grocery men will expect a ten cent tip, and the messenger from a big department store should have the same. At New Year's every one who has served you in any way during the year, I might say, comes to the door of the house and frankly asks for a present. Moreover, they get it. This is true of the man who sweeps the street in front of your house, the mechanic who greases the elevator shaft, and the girl who delivers the milk, as well as the janitor and all his family connections. Every mechanic who makes repairs must have his tip, and the taxi driver is cross unless one adds ten per cent to the amount shown on the meter.

Two Hours For Lunch

The hours for meals are different from those of America. In France business starts later and the people rise later. The average Parisian shop is not open before nine or ten o'clock, and most shops are closed from twelve until half past one or two. This is for luncheon, a very important meal because the first breakfast of coffee and is so little. Almost every French business man of affairs goes home to his lunch. This is so even if he works in a bank or commercial establishment. He expects two hours off at that time, but when he comes back to his desk at two thirty he works there until well after six. This makes the dining hour late, and in even modest homes the family seldom eats dinner until half past seven o'clock. Our help would consider this a hard custom, but the French servants do not expect to be through with their work until around ten o'clock. The people say the long lunch hour gives them a chance to have a visit with their families, but the American residents here miss the long evenings and the time we have for exercise in the late afternoon.

It is quite common in stepping into one of the small shops of Paris not closed at noon to see the entire family, lunching in room at the side. The business of such stores is often run by the whole family. The wife does not think herself too good to keep the books or wait on the customers, or in fact to manage the shop when her husband is out, and the children of over school age help, too. In fact the whole life of the family is bound up in it as a cooperative enterprise and in it they live the greater part of their home life. The French women are capable, and many a war widow is running the shop formerly kept by her husband. I would say also she does it well.

The Cook Does the Marketing

The servant problem hardly exists for an American housekeeper living in France. Wages are not high from her point of view, and the servants expect to work for what they get. The general servant is a live institution. She often does the cooking, cleaning, and bedmaking for a family of three or four persons. She blacks the shoes, mends the linen, and presses the suits of her master and mistress. She thinks she is well treated if she has a half day off every other Sunday, and she expects no time for herself during the week.

The chambermaid does all the mending and sometimes makes dresses for the ladies of the family. She gets a commission on the clothes bought by her madam. One of these chambermaids may do up a whole house, serve the tables and take care of the children. Not uncommonly she will dress her mistress' hair, making up the complicated toilet so much desired by the French.

The French cook does the marketing, and she counts upon this because of the commission she gets from the dealer. Before the World War she received one sou per franc or one cent out of every twenty cents paid for the foodstuffs she bought. After the war the dealers were rather tardy in giving this rate, but it still exists more or less.

Here are some notes I made last Sunday morning while watching the servants going to market: The streets are full of women and girls, most of them without hats and all plainly dressed. Each has a basket and net bag in her hand. Wagons of green stuff move through the streets. The provision and grocery stores are open, and many of the streets are lined with stands surrounded by customers. The usual marketing time is from nine to eleven o'clock and even before nine one sees some of the servants returning. The market is their chief meeting place. They like to go at the same time every day, for it is there they chat with their friends. The amounts bought at one time are small. A bunch of red carrots, a white cauliflower, a dozen potatoes, a little meat, and the ever present bottle of ordinary wine may be all that fills the net bag of the buyer.

I have asked as to wages. They are considered excessive just now, but they are nothing compared with those received in the United States. I reduce them to American money, estimating ten francs to the dollar. A cook gets from fourteen dollars a month to thirty dollars per month. The latter wage is paid only by the rich and the male or female who runs the kitchen is expected to make fancy cakes, desserts and elaborate dishes. In a household of four or five persons of moderate means where there is some entertainment the cook's wage is about seventeen dollars a month.

Queer Housekeeping Arrangements

Many of the housekeeping details are different from ours. An important one is the lack of ice in summer. Only the very rich have ice boxes, and there are but few ice wagons making deliveries every day. The ice for my baby granddaughter is bought from the butcher, who charges five cents a pound. My daughter tells me that many French families keep the baby's milk fresh by leaving it in running water or in the cellar if they have one. All milk is boiled the moment it is brought into the house, and such a thing as giving a baby fresh uncooked milk is not known.

I am interested in the washing arrangements of Paris. Most of the people living in these apartment houses have such small quarters that there is no room for a laundry. For this reason the people are forced to send out their solid linen, and the prices are surprisingly high. For a family of two the laundry bills may be as much as six or eight dollars a week, this excluding the fine things washed by the cook. The laundry of the baby is always done at home. The washing done outside looks well at first, but the laundresses put a powder into their water that rots the clothes as it cleans them.

Some American Housekeepers in Paris try to reform the habits of the French servants, but it is wiser to let them do things their own way. For instance, the dishes from the breakfast of coffee, rolls and jam, which you have upon rising, are left to be washed with the lunch dishes of the middle of the day. It is hard to convince servants why this should not be, and there are others of our customs which they will not adopt. They would rather get down on their knees and put superfluous elbow grease on the hardwood floors than stand up and use a long-handled polisher. They insist that the latter does not give a good polish.

Since the World War, the cost of living has been steadily rising, and the large number of French families who are dependent upon fixed incomes from houses or bonds have great trouble to make ends meet. They have cut their living expenditures in half, but their apartments are on long leases dating from before the war and they make a good show. One sees types of this class everywhere on the boulevards. A man will carry a cane over his arm although his well brushed clothes are shiny and his blackened shoes down at the heel. Nevertheless, to use a common expression, he puts on a good front and buckles his belt a bit tighter.

I heard a story today from an American woman who has a servant that came from a family which was well-to-do in 1913. She gave up the place because she did not have enough food to keep soul and body together. The family had an elegant apartment in one of the most exclusive sections of Paris. The building was of white stone, and the neighborhood contained many of the nobility. They had rented the apartment before the war and the furniture of their better days enabled them to keep up appearances. The trouble now is the lack of money to spend upon food. Their meals are almost Larmecidal, and the menu never varies. For luncheon each person has a slice of meat about two inches wide and three inches long with some rice or potatoes. For supper, or dinner as it is called here, they have a soup and a vegetable. They have no dessert. They never taste the bits of cheese of which the French are so fond and rarely eat any of the better green vegetables. One daughter of the house who is supposed to be anaemic is given a slice of meat in the evening but the others have none. The girl said the servants had even less to eat and could not endure it. Nevertheless this family dwells in surroundings as beautiful as those of people of ten times its income.

Elevators Like Snails

Among the surprising economies of the French home is the elevator, or the lack of it. The American Embassy is in a fashionable apartment house in an excellent location. The American who calls upon our ambassador is lifted from story to story in a dinky little elevator not as big around as a hogshead, with two seats in the corners. It will not accommodate more than two persons at one time.

My daughter rented last summer the apartment of a Bombay princess who lived in the suburbs of Paris. The princess had gone to a watering place for the health of her husband and the flat was let furnished. It was on the fourth floor of a magnificent house, but the round elevator was actually no bigger than a flour barrel. When two persons got in they seemed to be almost embracing. I always looked twice before I entered.

This elevator was operated by a pushbutton; but that is nothing, for even at some Paris hotels where they are charging six dollars and upwards a day for rooms the elevators are run by pushbuttons and the guest does the pushing. In the ordinary apartment house the elevators go only one way, and that is upstairs. You are supposed to walk down, for this saves the "juice." In many apartment houses there are no elevators, and six-story buildings are now going up with nothing but stairs to the various floors. I am on the fourth story of my hotel here in Paris and I have timed the elevator going up. It takes just two minutes or thirty seconds per floor. At the same rate it would take one hour to go to the ton of the Woolworth building and back.

Cupboards for Babies

There are many other curious features of these French apartment houses. One is that the renters often install their own gas and electricity, the landlords insisting that the pipes be put outside the walls least the tenant takes the fixtures with him or sells them to the incoming tenant. In most cases the heating arrangements are bad. Steam and hot water heat are unknown to many a French household, and some apartment houses are still built without electric lights.

The cheaper dwellings are like pigeon coops in comparison with ours. They are small flats in which cupboards have been built into walls to save room. The door to the cupboard looks as if it leads into another room, but upon opening it you will find a bed within, and here sleep the children. The floors of these apartments are good and they are often kept shining with iron shavings which looks like excellent.

Just one more item about these French homes. This relates to a feature which I first saw at Lyons but which I am told is quite common throughout the country. It is what has been nicknamed the "Judas slit." This is a little brass plate about the size of a playing card with slits a sixteenth of an inch wide cut across it. This card is tacked over a hole in the door in such a way that the person within can peep through and without being seen can tell who is knocking before she decides whether or to be at home or not. If she does not want to receive she slips away and the servant at her side gives word that she is not at home. I do not know that this is less honest than the Judas kisses which our ladies give to unwelcome callers or the honeyed tones they send over the telephone wires.

Frank G. Carpenter

Next Sunday's letter will be "A Billion Dollar Repair Bill," the amount spent in rebuilding the battle-scarred regions of France. Mr. Carpenter tells of the mines pumped out and working again, the new factories, and the new homes being built.

The markets of Paris are important social centers, for there the cooks, who work longer hours with fewer afternoons off than in America, count upon meeting their friends every day and picking up the latest gossip.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Nevertheless, whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule; let us mind the same thing.—Philippians 3:16.

If any little love of mine
May make a life the sweeter;
If any little care of mine
May make a friend's the fleeter;
If any lift of mine may ease
The burden of another,
God give me love, and care, and strength,
To help a toiling brother.

FOR A SQUARE DEAL IN TAXATION.

The Democratic state convention at San Antonio had its shortcomings and its sins of omission and perhaps of commission, but nevertheless it did adopt a platform calling for many constructive things.

One of the demands of the convention platform is for more equality in taxation in different sections of the state.

The newer and more progressive communities in the state have paid and are paying a disproportionate share of the state revenues due to the fact that they find it necessary in order to raise funds for county improvements to place a higher valuation upon their property than do the older settled or backward communities. The same valuations are used for both county and state taxes with the result that these newer and more progressive communities pay more than their share in state taxes.

The situation has always existed in Texas, but it has not been until the last few years that West Texas counties which are adversely affected have awakened to a realization of what was happening to them.

The Amarillo Tribune discusses the matter at length, saying:

"The only remedy for this condition is to take the equalization of taxes out of the hands of the local authorities and vest it in a state board of equalization or a tax commission. It is just as important that taxes should be equalized as between counties the same as it is as between individual taxpayers of the same county.

"Some years ago in a certain Texas county one of the big oil companies had huge storage tanks in one of their fields within a few hundred yards of the county line. The company objected to the valuation placed on the tanks and their contents, so the tanks were moved across the county line because the commissioners of the adjoining county agreed to give the oil company a lower valuation. So the oil company pumped its oil out of wells located in the first county across the line and stored it in tanks in the adjoining county.

"This occurrence illustrates the absurdity of our system of taxation. There would be no advantage to moving property from one county to another if the valuations were the same in both. But as long as our taxes are handled as they are now, we have a fine opportunity for juggling and graft.

"Texas is one of the few states in the Union that still follows the old haphazard method of leaving it to each county to fix its own taxable values. It would be just as sensible to permit each individual taxpayer to decide what amount of taxes he shall pay. We know what would happen if each taxpayer should fix the amount he is to pay the government. The same thing is happening in Texas as between counties. The only variation is that the western counties with their small wealth are building courthouses, school houses and roads and they need considerable money for local needs, and when we tax ourselves to meet these local needs we pay the state of Texas handsomely for the privilege of making the improvements.

"The Panhandle-Plains chamber of commerce will in the next few weeks undertake to arouse the people of this section on the tax question with the view of pledging our legislators to work for a change in our tax laws when the legislature meets in January.

"We ought to let our representatives and senators understand that we are going to demand a square deal and that we look to them to lead the fight in the legislature. Thousands of dollars can be saved in every West Texas county by adopting a system of taxation that will compel East and North Texas counties to bear their proportionate share of the burden of supporting the state government and the state school system. It is a fight for a square deal in Texas."

INCREASING NUMBER OF DEATHS FROM AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS.

There are nearly five times as many deaths from automobile accidents as there are deaths from railroad accidents in the United States.

In 1921 in the registration area comprising 34 states there were 10,168 deaths from automobile accidents. In 1919, the last year for which figures are available, there were 2138 deaths from railroad accidents in the whole United States.

The number of deaths from automobile accidents is increasing annually, due, no doubt, to the increased number of automobiles in use, while the number of deaths from railroad accidents is decreasing, largely as a result of a campaign of education and of greater efforts on the part of the railroads to protect their passengers, their employes and the public.

The increase in deaths from automobile accidents and the decrease in the number of deaths from railroad accidents is illustrated in the figures for the years 1917, 1918 and 1919 for which data is available for comparison. Deaths from railroad accidents number 3,199 in 1917, 3,419 in 1918 and 2,138 in 1919. Deaths from automobile accidents numbered 6,724 in 1917, 7,525 in 1918, and 7,968 in 1919.

In 1920, a total of 9,103 were killed in automobile accidents. In 1921 the number was 1,065 more, the total being 10,168. The death rate per 100,000 population was 11.5 compared with 10.4 in 1920. California led all the states in the death rate from this cause, while in cities of 100,000 or more population Los Angeles led. The California rate was 24.4 per 100,000 population. Connecticut was second with 16.5 and New York third with 15.4.

The largest increase in the rate per 100,000 for the states was in California with 3.3 more than in 1920, while New Hampshire showed the biggest decrease in the rate, it having been 2.8. Twenty-six of the states showed increases seven decreases and one, Pennsylvania, showed no change in its rate.

New York state registered the largest number of deaths with 1,632, an increase of 222 over 1920, while Delaware had the smallest number with 17, a decrease of 52.

These figures are a challenge to the American people. The automobile is taking too great a toll of human life. In the streets of our cities and along the country highways it is leaving the dead and the maimed in its path in numbers that must cause serious thought.

There must be serious study of methods to lessen the number of automobile accidents. Better and safer traffic rules must be devised. There must be a stricter enforcement of these rules. And there must be a campaign of education such as has been carried on by the railroads of the country. Some one has got to get back of such a campaign and punch it. Could not the automobile manufacturers do this as a service to humanity and with advantage to themselves?

In Wichita Falls Police Commissioner Fitts and his department have done some good work in the installation of traffic signs and in the promulgation of new traffic rules and in their efforts to enforce regulations that exist. They have shown that they are studying traffic problems and are putting forth their best efforts to make life on our streets safer.

They are pulling wires to get a monopoly on wireless.

TODAY'S TALK

REFRESHING

The silliest, weakest, most useless, and most hobgoblined mind in the world is that of the one who takes all his opinions from others.

His is the mind already sold to the meanest bidder.

Such a one may be, in the words of Stevenson, "a docile citizen," but "he will never be a man."

So that to meet one whose opinions and ideas flow from a fertile and open mind, is like coming into a cool patch of woods, beside some fresh flowing stream, after having suffered heat and dust across the wide plain.

Each of us has a mind of his own, with a dictating soul source that is as true as the path of the sun. But it must be given its say. This stubborn sense of right that ever so often rises to spur us into our best and wisest way, is a thing as divine as the stars.

It is no wonder that the very gods of time make way to honor such intrepid "misunderstoods" as Emerson, Thoreau and Whitman. For they light up entire ages.

Our self-assertion must bear its own consequences, but insofar as it is expressive of the sincere urge of our soul voice—let it face the judgment of either rabble or high court and stand or fall by its merit.

Have no fear outside the thorne room of your heart!

Know—and know that you know, because you are accepting the honest expression and thinking of your innermost best self—or else remain silent until you do know.

I believe that the great God takes away the loneliness from many a human being, who has made himself a hermit for truth, by coming often to keep him company.

So, never mind, my friend. Be yourself in the grandest way you know, and you will refresh every last one of your kind.

TAKE ME BACK

Take me back to sunny Texas
'Neath the Lone Star's silvery rays,
Where the song birds trill the gladness
Of the golden Autumn days.

Where the cotton fields are browning
And the Bob White calls his mate,
Where the zephyrs and the moonlight
Are a part of man's estate.

Where stalk the dauntless spirits
Of the heroes of the South,
Sainted martyrs of the Alamo
Who died at the cannon's mouth.

Take me back to sunny Texas,
'Neath the peaceful harvest moon,
There beside the shimmering Brazos
With its rocks and sandy dunes.

Where once there glowed the camp fires
Of the trail herds going North,
Where youth with prideful manhood
Into life was setting forth.

Let me live my life in Texas
In the land where heroes stood,
Not bought with gold and silver,
Paid for with Spartan blood.

Let me gaze on those wide prairies
Where the stillness is of God.
When the final call is sounded
Let me sleep beneath its sod.

"MOONSHINE"

The country's best "moonshine" liquor is made around Peoria, Ill., according to John W. Fonner, government chemist. He should know, having analyzed nearly 26,000 samples of "white mule" in the last few years.

Even at that, Peoria's "moonshine" is a poison. Customers of bootleggers should remember this: All whiskey is "moonshine" in the raw state, before years of aging in wood. In the old days it took a very unscrupulous bartender to sell "green whiskey," even triple-distilled. Seven-year-old was the safety line.

HEREDITY

Fonner, government chemist, says the reason the best "moonshine" liquor is made around Peoria, Ill., is because that section had so many big distilleries before prohibition.

Distilleries, most of them, have shut down. But the art of making liquor lives on as part of community knowledge. Through succeeding generations it has become almost hereditary.

Possibly a few generations will produce some excellent home-brewers in our community. But present samples make this extremely doubtful. Liquor-making machines to join the lost arts.

MISTAKE

A postage stamp honoring Columbus is issued by the Leeward Isles of the West Indies. The stamp shows the discoverer of America standing on deck, sighting land through a telescope.

Columbus would not recognize the picture, for he died over 100 years before Zachariah Haussen, spectacle maker, devised the first telescope maker, devised the first scope. The discovery was made by his children. They noticed that two lenses, held apart, made a church steeple seem nearer.

SELLING

The "Made in Germany" trademark is having a hard time regaining its pre-war standing.

Economists, analyzing Germany's foreign trade for the first three months of 1922, find her exports only a third as much as before the war.

This will please people who fear German competition. But it makes payment of the indemnity more difficult. In the long run, at least three-fourths of the balance of the indemnity can be paid only in goods—exports.

ANCIENT

A warship used 2200 years ago by the Vikings will soon be placed on exhibition at the national museum, Copenhagen, Denmark.

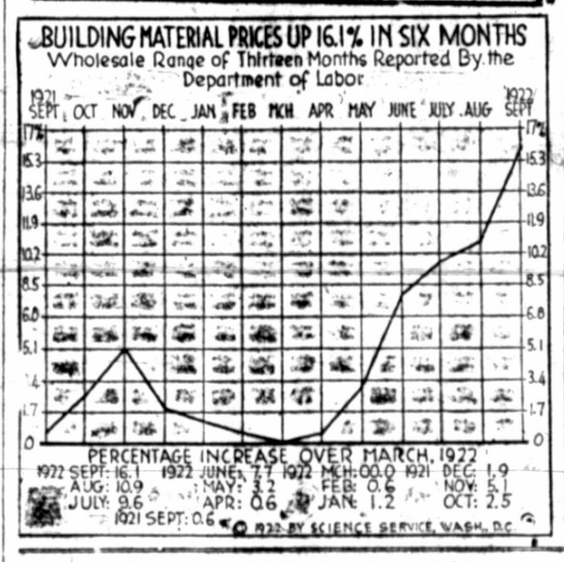

This ship, dug out of a bog, is so small that it is being shipped in 15 large packing cases. It was 41 feet long and less than seven feet wide. Manned by 10 oars, its ancient crew, like other early explorers, had admirable curiosity as well as courage. Compare their craft with a modern steamer and you have a picture of how man has progressed in 22 centuries.

FOLKS BACK HOME

Sketches by J. H. STRIEBEL

Uncle Gus

Uncle Gus leaned against the counter with his thumbs hooked in the armholes of his waistcoat, and puffed with great enthusiasm upon a fragrant cigar. "Git one out o' the case," said he, "an' smoke it on the house. I'm feelin' popular an' liberal.

"Day before yesterday my liver was out y' fix or somethin', and I got to thinkin' about how much folks here in town talks about the neighbors. I got plum' disgusted with 'em. An' when I passed folks comin' down town, it looked like they was all mad about somethin' an' didn't like me much.

"But this mornin' I got up feelin' spry as a cricket an' got to thinkin' about what fine folks my neighbors is an' how I'd miss 'em if they was to go 'way, an' comin' down town ever'body grinned at me right cheerful like they thought a heap of me, an' now I'm about to think the' ain't a mo' popular man in town than I am. I believe it kind o' pays to love folks. Get another seegar. Stick one in yo' pocket."

Aunt Het

"I reckon Pa loves me just as much as he ever did, but I notice he don't never come back to the kitchen to hug and kiss me unless he's had a drink of liquor."

Concerning Winners

The man who says he doesn't care what people think of him is a liar or a fool or both. If he is rich, he may not care whether people think him rich or poor. If he is handsome, he may not care whether people think him handsome or homely. If he is wise, he may not care whether people think him wise or foolish. But if he is sane and normal, he wants people to like him.

The first thing required of the man who would have people like him is that he shall like people—not that he shall slap them on the back or become a chronic handshaker, but only that he shall feel a genuine interest in them and an affection for them. His liking for folks will advertise itself by means of a ready smile and a kindly light in his eyes. He will not fear or snub fellow morals, for we do not fear or snub people we like. He will simply be honest and natural—human.

Nearly all people are born human, but many of them outgrow it in the effort to be considered superior. They pose, strut, sneer, ridicule, bluff and envy. And if they get little affection along the way, it is because they deserved little and give little. It isn't difficult to get blood out of a turnip if you will put blood in it.

THE GIRL AND THE BUTCHER BOY

The girl across the street has made a discovery that will serve her well when at last she and Hiram, the butcher boy, are one. She has discovered that men, like small boys are most easily handled by indirection.

Wednesday night the first number of the lyceum course was here—a young lady reader, fashionable, clever and pretty, and Hiram felt his position as a member of the lyceum committee placed him under obligation to take her to the county seat in his ancient filvver after the entertainment.

He said as much to the girl across the street as they walked to the schoolhouse, and she, affecting indifference, gave full permission and added that in order not to delay him unnecessarily she would ask Arthur Hill to take her home.

"I selected Arthur," she told Daughter next morning, "because he is pretty and Hiram despises him. But I didn't have to ask him to take me home, because when we got there Hiram saw another member of the committee and got him to take the reader to Brazeville, and he was awfully gentle to me and kissed my hand three times on the way home. I think men love you lots more if they are a little afraid of losing you."

The Feminine Peril

When I was a boy I lived in a prairie town that had little acquaintance with the delights of wickedness. Courting consisted in walking home from prayer meeting or choir practice, and the "nice" girls wouldn't keep company with a boy who smoked. As I remember it, all of the good-looking girls were "nice," and as a result the boys of the town eschewed the weed and chewed bum by way of dissipation. At the time, this proof of feminine power appeared to contain no menace; but I look upon it now with fear and trembling.

When the king was the state and subjects were mere pawns, human heads at times left human bodies with great abruptness. When the church was the supreme power and none dared question its authority, there were dark ages and darker deeds. Now that organized labor is in the saddle, there is a tendency to be a bit unreasonable. Mankind isn't to be trusted with too much authority.

What, then, will happen to us when the ladies realize how helpless we are—when they organize and refuse to bear children, or cook, or sew on buttons or so much as smile upon us until we shape affairs to please them? Heaven help mere males when the female of the species decides to take charge of the works.

THE MASTER PAINTERS

MUSSOLINI, ITALIAN LEADER, IS WORLD'S YOUNGEST PREMIER

By NEA Service.

ROME, Nov. 4. — One of the world's youngest political leaders today is conferring here with King Victor Emmanuel on the formation of a new Italian cabinet in which he will act as premier and besides will take on his youthful shoulders three separate portfolios.

He is Benito Mussolini, 38—before the war a leader of Italian socialists and now head of the most bitter anti-radical body in the world, the fascisti.

Mussolini's political career started when he fought his way to the leadership of the Italian socialist party. He became editor of their newspaper organ "Avanti." That was immediately before the outbreak of the world war in 1914.

When the war came German socialists voted as a bloc to support the fatherland in its military adventures. When Italy entered the lists on the side of the allies, Mussolini wished his followers to give the same support to Italy.

Broke With Socialists.

The Italian socialists refused. Then Mussolini broke with them. He enlisted in the army.

The ex-socialist leader came back from the front after the armistice covered with wounds and medals and bearing in his heart a bitter hatred for the Italian radicals who had failed their country in its time of need.

He found Italian industrial and economic life upset. Unemployment was rife and Italy's great economic safety valve — emigration to the United States—had been cut off.

These conditions had prepared a fertile spawning ground for bolshevist propaganda. Agitators many of them inspired by funds sent from abroad, were at work in all of Italy's industrial centers and were gaining many converts.

Then the germ of the fascisti organization was born in Mussolini's mind. He began banding together his former army comrades in political groups, sworn to oppose the red flag both at the voting booths and through "direct action" with sticks, stones or rifles.

BENITO MUSSOLINI.

By the beginning of this year Mussolini had organized 700,000 young men, all ready to do his bidding.

In answer the political extremists called a general strike. Mussolini defeated the strike by putting his 700,000 followers into the jobs the strikers had quit.

This intensified the bitterness between the bolshevistic elements and the fascisti. Open fighting broke out. At the king's request Mussolini this summer demobilized his forces to aid in restoring order. But he did not "demobilize" his political power.

Youth Steps Into Breach.

When premier after premier failed to establish a cabinet that could last, Mussolini came forward and now will try to stand where older and better trained political leaders fell.

Mussolini is the son of an iron worker. But he is versed in music, art, and literature and speaks several languages.

He has been a school teacher, editor, writer of stories, a roving laborer.

The name of his organization—fascisti — comes from the Latin word "fasces," bundle, which originally referred to the bundles of rods carried by the old Roman lictors.

Mussolini's advent to power is certain to have a far-reaching effect on Italy's international relations.

His first step probably will be abrogation of the treaties between Italy and Jugoslavia partitioning the Adriatic coast. Mussolini also wishes to annex Malta, it is reported, a thing which would involve Italy in a grave controversy with Great Britain.

BABIES

The average baby at birth weighs eight pounds. One is born, weighing only one pound, in London, England.

This seems a marvel. More marvelous is the doctors' predictions that the baby will live. Not many years since its death would have been a certainty. Science has to its credit many admirable achievements, but nothing more so than what it has done for saving the lives of babies.

BREAKS SPEED RECORD

By KITCHEL PIXLEY.

MOGADORE, Oct. 4.—Ornery old Seth Beardsley, constable, has been to the busy city marts and back in two hours, which beats the record of anyone from this town who has tackled the busy city marts with his natural appetight for red-eye whetted up by two months of deseris wished onto this town by a visitin' enforcement officer.

Seth went into a Market street eatin' house run by a man named Cafe and read on the bill of fair.

"Guests please report any Inattention by the waiters to the Casheer."

When he comes to settle for his feed, Seth steps up to the beautiful blonde girl by the cash register, puts on his silly goo-goo grin and says:

"Does they pay you attention enough?"

The police is tryin' to discover what she threw, but when Seth come to and the ambulance men asked how automobeel had hit him, he said:

"It don't make one dam bit o' difference. Put me up standin' and facin' toward Mogadore." And, the turnpike bein' paved, Seth breaks all return trip records by tall runnin."

Fog, One of the Most Stubborn Problems Which Science Now Hopes to Conquer

By S. S. Irving

BIG Bill Edwards, ex-champion snow shoveler of the world, could reach thumb and forefinger into some indexed corner of his brain and fetch forth for you the precise commissionary figures of the exact municipal cost to New York of sitting up and kicking off an eight-inch overnight blanket of refrigerated eiderdown.

But it is not so certain that Sir Oliver Lodge, up there at last in his own earth-gazing observatory among the stars, could of his astral wisdom compute the yearly cost on land and sea, in lives and limbs and property, of man's most silent, stealthiest enemy, fog. Yet perhaps some day Sir Oliver will send a writing; which should not be a matter for too great amazement, remembering that in the years when his strange spirit wore the armor of the flesh he was wont to joust with "London particulars," as the sulpho-tar-loaded visitants are adverted to by the natives when their city-in-the-sea is worst besieged.

You have heard of that river called Monongahela? She has the hard luck to have made her bed at the feet of Pittsburgh, and there must she lie. Fog is her nightgown, and often she wears it slatternly through till noon. The other week some laboratorial scientists, who are messy fellows anyhow, went out in boats and sprayed organic oil upon Monongahela's bosom, which did not really matter in a way, because she never keeps it clean. Yet for some fool feminine reason (streams, like the sea, are of the gender, y'see) she became so outraged by this oily profanation of her person that she—held her breath. And her nightgown of fog, thinking her dead, and unwishful of becoming her shroud, gathered its pearly folds and sped away, leaving but a wisp or so of lace upon its mistress' nudeness in the dawn.

AND the scientists? They were merely men. They chuckled. And put back for shore. And said among themselves as they withdrew, "Very satisfactory. Quite so. We shall try again—with much more oil."

Now, to switch into the lingo of the Weather Bureau, which bless God is frequently a language to be understood of the average mind, fog is a surface-cloud caused (1) by the mixing of two bodies of air of unequal temperature, one or both of which has a high vapor content, and (2) by the cooling of a body of moist air to a temperature lower than its dew point. During nighttime in warm seasons fog may form over rivers and lakes by the continued evaporation of the warm water, even though the cool overlying air is saturated.

"That is comprehensible, quite," I said to George W. Mindling, meteorologist, acting weather observer for the Philadelphia District in the vacational absence of Observer Bliss. "But just how did the specified oil dissipate Monongahela's fog?" And he said it was like this:

The broken terrain in the Pittsburgh region is full of 'draws,' or canyons, as they call them in the West. These miniature, narrow valleys are sinks for strata of the cooler air. The floor of one of these valleys is occupied by the Monongahela, whose water is warmer than the overlying air. There results an evaporation, and fog forms. Then enters the second causation: the "mixing of two bodies of air of unequal temperatures, one or both of which has a high vapor content"; the water-saturated, warm river-fog meets and mingles with the descending cooler air as it settles in the river's valley—and you have a sort of double fog in one. The spraying of the river surface with oil stopped evaporation—exhalation—of the stream, and the commingling of the water's warm breath with the valley's cool air ceased; and the fog broke up and went away in a huff.

As an experiment it was a scientific demonstration and a success. Whether the spraying can be employed upon a scale large enough to free such a considerable area as Pittsburgh and its environs of river fogs is yet to be proved. Nor does the experiment attack the problem of non-river fogs. Still, inasmuch as any fog is the beloved boon of the atmospheric filth of the Smoky City, the oil-bearers of the Monongahela have achieved an applaudable start.

THE seas, of course, are the fog's greatest amphitheatres of disaster, but that does not mean the gray enemy has not its heart-breaking hippodromes on land. The claims departments of all the great rail lines could assemble with the cemetery offices of the world and play a game of records whose counters would be graves.

There is a one-time city editor of Tacoma, Washington, who could look over their shoulders and prompt, from the memory of a Fourth of July morning off whose face a wet blanket of fog was lifting—one of those weird fogs out of whose blinding grayness of the night men emerge ghostly into some lighted bar with yard-long ropes as of silvered Christmas-tree tinsel clinging to their garments.

On an outer edge of the city sprawled that murderous spawn of incompetent engineering then called the De Linn-street grade, a mile-long hill of wicked acclivity upon whose narrow roadway were the standard-gauge rails of a suburban electric line. At the foot of the hill the tracks turned in a sharp curve on to a wooden bridge that spanned a ravine eighty feet deep. The death-setting was as perfect as though it had been planned.

Early in the morning of the celebration day a huge suburban-type car, so packed with city-bound Fourth-of-Julyers that men and boys clung in clumps to the hand grips, topped De Linn-street grade and started down, air-brakes applied. A third of the way down the wheels began to slip and slide on the fog-drenched rails. The motorman instantly threw on all of the air, locking the wheels. The huge car answered by transforming itself into a sled—a sled which each second took on accumulated velocity.

Half way to that frightful curve at the bottom of the hill those who clung to the hand-grips loosed their hold and fell tumbling along the right-of-way, some badly injured. Inside the car the jammed passengers fought madly for exit, and fought in vain. Frantically the motorman freed and applied, freed and applied the brakes to check the plunge. It was no use; the fog-wet rails might as well have been greased. The car flashed to the bottom, swaying like a drunken ship that goes down some mountainside of a sea.

Now you may explain this as you like—I cannot: That dizzy car "took" the almost right-angle curve, shot screaming out onto the bridge 100 feet, rose obliquely into the air from perfectly straight rails, crashed through the frail bridge-guard, turned completely over in mid-air, struck a side of the ravine embankment, and went hurtling, crashing, splintering, rending, to the gully floor, and lay still—a dark dot of wreckage discernible in the lifting fog from the death-bridge eighty feet above.

Newspaper men lived in the improvised morgue and in and out of the hospitals for days. Fifty-four of the passengers killed outright is the recollection of one of them, with many more than that number injured, some of whom died from hour to hour and day to day. A mob with ropes chased and tried to lynch a maintenance-of-way officer of the car company, and its general manager rescued him with drawn pistol. Fog plus crazy engineering.

Many inventions have been brought up, division after mechanical division through generations, in assault upon the floating ramparts of fog upon the land. Exploding cartridges cased upon rails have warned trainmen of imminent curves, stations, signals and other matters of the right-of-way which enginemen must be made aware of; this is one of the oldest of weapons in the unending fight against the great gray foe. One of the newest, now in stage of proposal, is for high aerial landing depots for airships, both passenger and freight, and mail-carrying. One connection is to anchor into the landing-platform, upon very tall skeleton-mast, electric-lighted mirrors which shall throw gigantic lateral beams to the four stations of the compass and a kindred beam to the zenith. The lateral beams may pierce the fog in rotating flashes, lighthouse style, to avoid blinding the pilots who approach; but the zenith beam would be a steady flood-light—a vast, pallid spear thrusting up and through the fog. The danger of dreadful casualties resultant of airship collisions in fogs extending to, say, several hundred feet above the earth's surface is obvious, and precautionary problems cannot be left for consideration until the day when the sky is criss-crossed with hundreds of aero lanes.

Yet, too frequent and terrible though they be, the ravagings of fog on land seem few and frugal of fatalities when one turns his eyes to scan the bitter annals of the oceans. In any Episcopal church—the church cradled by England, chief of maritime nations—you may listen of a Sabbath morning to this hymn of supplication: it is a rite—

Eternal Father, strong to save,
Whose arm doth bind the restless wave;
Who bidst the mighty ocean deep
Its own appointed limits keep,
Oh, hear us when we cry to Thee
For those in peril on the sea!

Perhaps the lilting prayer has time to reach the throne; or perhaps we read in next morning's news that somewhere, in that churchly hour, somewhere on the fog-bound bosom of "old ocean's gray and melancholy waste," it was—a dirge. Who knows?

It is variously estimated by maritime exchanges that from forty to sixty in every one hundred peace-time collision disasters at sea attended by loss of human life are chargeable to fog. Read here some random scraps of evidence against the stealthy monster:

Brest, France.—From ninety to one hundred persons perished last night when the Peninsular and Oriental Line steamship Egypt, 8000 tons, sank off the Island of Ushant after collision in the fog with the French freight steamship Seine * * * The collision occurred within twenty-two miles of Armen lighthouse. The dinner-gong was about to be sounded aboard the Egypt. Many of the passengers and most of the crew were on deck. The shock threw persons into the sea; others jumped, and a number went down with the ship, which sank in twenty minutes * * * London, —"If it had not been for the Lascars among the crew rushing for the boats, all the women on the Egypt would have been saved," is the declaration made in a signed statement by * * *

Halifax, N. S.—Five hundred and sixty-two passengers and ship's crew of the French Line steamship La Bourgogne were drowned between 5 and 6 o'clock this morning when that vessel collided in a dense fog with the British iron sailing-ship Cromartyshire, sixty miles south of Sable Island, which lies one hundred miles off Halifax. The prow of the Cromartyshire penetrated La Bourgogne's side three times. On the decks there ensued a mad fight for place in such lifeboats as had not been smashed. Captain Deloncle lived up to the best traditions of the sea; he went down with his ship, after he and his officers, aided by many men among the passengers, had battled in vain to save the boats for the women and children. Of the 163 survivors, only one is a woman * * *

Wilmington, Del. — Sixty-two persons lost their lives when the steamship City of Athens, New York for Savannah, was rammed and sunk by a French cruiser off the Delaware coast at 1 o'clock this morning. Both vessels were displaying running-lights because of the heavy fog. All of the passengers were in their berths when the bow of the warship plunged into the side of the 2300-ton coaster. Fire broke out, then, in one of the holds, but the flames were quickly quenched by inrushing water. The wireless operator was able to send out only one S O S call, for the City of Athens sank in four minutes; he is believed to have been trapped and drowned in the wireless house * * * There was no time to lower away the lifeboats. Many of the passengers perished in their cabins * * * The French cruiser launched boats immediately and turned its searchlights upon the waters, where men and women were struggling for their lives. Sixty-eight persons were picked up by the warship and brought into port * * *

Quebec.—The Canadian Pacific Railway's transatlantic steamship Empress of Ireland was rammed in a dense fog and sunk by the German collier Storstad, at 2 o'clock yesterday morning, with a loss of 964 lives, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence at a point thirty miles off Father Point. The liner was bound from Quebec for Liverpool. She carried 1487 persons, of whom 955 were passengers. One hundred and eighty miles out from Quebec the Empress sighted the collier, and signals were exchanged. Immediately a heavy fog closed down, and the Storstad rammed the liner amidships. The Empress went down in fourteen minutes. Many of the passengers had no time to quit their berths * * * There were boats enough for 2000 persons, but only four of them could be launched * * * Two wireless calls for help were sent out by the Empress, then her radio plant ceased to work. More than 400 struggling women and men were taken from the water by the Storstad's boats, and of these twenty-two died of injuries * * * Only 209 bodies have been recovered * * *

Liverpool.—The White Star Line steamship Titanic, on her bridal voyage from Liverpool to New York, collided with an iceberg, in a fog, at 10:30 o'clock last night (Sunday), 1600 miles due east of New York, and sank four hours later. Of the 2206 persons on board, 1503 perished. This established the most serious fog-collision disaster in marine history, if not the most serious of all disasters at sea. The ship was making speed of twenty-two knots at the moment of the collision, though her captain had been warned of icebergs in the lane he was following.

A NEW weapon of the decks against the remorseless, murderous fog has been added to the long list whose forebear is the simple fisheman's conch, into whose shell he still blows the deep breath of his lungs and sounds a little blast that prays: "I'm just a chip o' the coast—don't run me down." An honest prayer, but never sure of granting; yet here and there off the Florida reefs, or along the northern banks, it may still be heard, mourning somewhere away in the impenetrable gray mystery that clings against the face of a dead ocean and takes no heed of gongs that clamor and whistles that shriek and huge ship's sirens that bellow hoarsely, sullenly. "'Ware me. I am H-E-R-E! H-E-R-E!" from unseen decks, and are answered from unseen decks, "W-H-E-R-E? W-H-E-R-E?"

The new weapon, lately perfected and installed on many Government and the more important passenger and freight carrying vessels of this and other countries is the radio compass. Recently it was displayed in demonstration tests aboard the United States lighthouse tender Tulip, in conjunction with the (also new) three radio fog signals located on Ambrose Channel light vessel, Fire Island light vessel, and at Sea Girt Light Station, N. J. It is judged to be a far-forward step in accuracy of distance-and-direction discovery, beyond the efficiency of the submarine bell and its competing companion, the submarine telephone and sound-amplifier.

THE radio compass as installed on the Tulip was developed by the Bureau of Standards, and the plotting system by which a navigator uses it in, one might say, liaison with the radio fog signals bids fair to give to him for the first time an accurate means of taking, in a fog or other time of low visibility, bearing of invisible lighthouses and lightships which he may use as a leading mark or for location by cross-bearings or successive bearings; and he should, says the Lighthouse Service, be able to do this independently, as he uses his magnetic compass for bearings on visible objects. It should be stated in this connection, the service suggests, that the Navy Department has established radio compass stations on shore, which are in successful operation in locating vessels by a method the reverse of that used on shipboard.

On the days of the Tulip's demonstration tests that vessel steamed from the Battery, New York, about 9:30 in the morning and proceeded to Ambrose Channel light vessel, returning in the afternoon. When abreast Coney Island Point, outward Bound on the first day, the tests were begun and the method of operating the radio compass was explained. When the outer entrance to Ambrose Channel was reached a bearing was taken from Ambrose Channel light vessel, and the Tulip steered this course for the light vessel and made it somewhat on the starboard bow, being set a little by the current. Arriving at the light vessel, the Tulip was stopped and cross-bearings on Sea Girt light station and Fire Island light vessel were taken and the bearings plotted; these were found accurate within two degrees.

The Tulip then proceeded to a position about two miles southeast of the light vessel and swung ship and took a set of pelorus readings and simultaneous radio bearings on Ambrose Channel light vessel, illustrating the method of calibrating a radio compass on a ship. In all, thirty bearings were taken, and then compared with the previous calibration. It was found the greatest difference was but three degrees, with an average difference of one and one-half degrees.

In the next day's (similar) tests the Tulip at the entrance to Ambrose Channel took a radio bearing on Ambrose lightship, and the tender was put on this course—and made the lightship dead ahead: no fraction of a degree of deviation. This test was especially interesting because the morning was foggy and the direction-finding was exact.

THIS radio-compass direction-finding apparatus is now being manufactured and installed upon a large number of vessels of this and foreign countries. The cost of equipping a ship is moderate, considering the great additional safeguard afforded navigators in foggy or storm-obscured weather. Also, the cost to the Lighthouse Service of installing radio fog-signal stations is less than for the present first-class fog signals; and the radio fog-signals, working in the main automatically, can be operated by the present personnel of the Lighthouse Service stations.

Burnishing Up the Silver Lining

A Careful Patient

A WOMAN whose throat had troubled her for a long time grew impatient at the slow progress she was making and made complaint to her doctor.

"Madam," said the physician. "I can never cure you of this throat trouble unless you stop talking and give your throat a complete rest."

"But, doctor," objected his patient, "I'm very careful what I say. I never use harsh language, or anything of that kind."

Resources of Culture

A DISTINGUISHED lecturer once told a story of an engagement he had made to deliver a discourse in one of the towns of the West on the subject of the "Beacon Lights of Civilization."

"I reached the place," he said, "a little behind time and went directly to the hall. A large audience had assembled. I was introduced in due course by the president of the literary society under whose auspices I was to appear, and laying my manuscript on the desk before me I opened it and waited a moment for the applause to subside. Imagine my horror when I found that I had accidentally brought along the wrong lecture—one on the 'Wonders of Modern Electrical Science.'"

"What did you do?" asked one of the group to whom he was narrating the incident.

"I went right ahead," he replied. "The audience didn't know the difference."

Wedding Note

"NOT long ago," says a metropolitan newspaper man, "I ran across a country paper which contained this paragraph in regard to a local wedding:

"'The bride wore a lizard-green silk on whose cheek blossomed the flush of dawning womanhood.'"

Narrow Gauge

NOT long ago there was a collision in Maine in which no one was injured.

A certain old chap, who does handsome work with the fiddle at country dances, is "great on time," but unless he is argued with he will play "The Girl I Left Behind Me" from 8 o'clock till 12 for every dance except the Virginia reel.

Some of the old dancers were on the floor and between dances one of them went up to the fiddler, who sat rubbing rosin on his bow.

"Uncle," said the dancer, "all the folks on the floor want you to play old 'Speed the Plow' for the next dance. Can't you give it to them?"

The old man, tucked his rosin into his vest pocket.

"I should like to 'commo'date ye fust-rate," he said, "but there's suthin sing'lar 'bout that tune of 'Speed the Plow. Jest as soon as I 'Speed the Plow' 'long a little ways I run right into 'The Girl I Left Behind Me.'".

What Struck Him

LIKE the dyspeptic who said that the only food he ever liked was the food he couldn't get, a certain Patrick—a soldier in the late war but now a family servant—seems to have been especially susceptible to what may be called negative impressions. This son of Erin brought an honorable scar or two from France.

Once he described his part in a battle, and when he had finished was asked by some one.

"What struck you most forcibly when all was over and you looked back to it?"

"Ah," said the old servant, reflectively, "I think, sir,"—with simplicity—"that what struck me most forcibly, sir, was the shells that missed me!"

Whiter Than a Shirt

INVENTORS have a power of abstraction which serves them a good turn on some occasions and is liable to betray them into strange statements on others.

"So you think you have perfected your little machine at last, do you?" asked the lawyer of his dreamy-eyed client.

"Yes, it's all right now; there's not a flaw in it," said the inventor. "But I can assure you, sir, that when I came to making the final test I was scared. I happened to see my face in a mirror when the thing was safely over, and it was as white as your shirt, sir. In fact," he added, bending an impartial gaze on the lawyer's shirt-front, "it was whiter—considerably whiter, I should say."

The following committees were appointed by Captain Boden: To procure speakers, preachers and singers, Dr. W. P. Martin; band and music, J. W. Williams and D. S. Blue; erection and decoration of platform, E. D. Treadwell; closing of the business houses for the day, B. H. Alexander; to arrange the line of march, A. B. Thomas; publicity, Dr. J. M .F. Gill. A fine musical program has been arranged. Subject of sermon, "The Baptism of Jesus." Your presence will be appreciated.—John D. White, minister.

Salvation Army Drive

The first report of the drive made recently for the 1923 budget for the Salvation Army shows about $2,000 raised, which includes a block of land given by J. G. Hardin, near the Hardin baseball park. It is thought there will be some more subscriptions turned in yet. It was estimated that $4,000 would be needed to carry on the work for next year.

Lions Club Dinner

About the usual number was out to the Lions club dinner at Mrs. Callie McDonald's boarding houhe Friday night. Mrs. J. C. Albright from the Woman's Civic club discussed sending a delegate to the satte federation of clubs at Houston which convenes for four days commencing Tuesday. As the local unit has been organized a little over a week they were not able financially to send a delegate and yet it was thought that much good could be gained by getting ideas from other clubs. The Lions club voted to stand their share of the expense of sending a delegate if the Rotary club and chamber of commerce would each pay a third. It was thought the expense would be about $75.

Mrs. Albright also favored the Lions with a couple of well rendered songs that were certainly appreciated.

Charter Commission Meets

Ten members of the recently elected committee to frame a city charter for a commission system met at the Shrine club rooms Friday evening. Dr. W. P. Martin was chosen chairman; W. R. Hill, vice chairman, and W. S. Dickson, secretary. The secretary was instructed to secure some sample charters and a meeting was called for next Wednesday evening at 8:00 o'clock at the city hall.

Buy-It-In-Burkburnett Banquet

Every business man should plan to attend the "Buy-it-in-Burkburnett" banquet to be held at the Y. M. C. A. on Tuesday evening, November 14. The dinner will be served by the ladies of the Woman's Civic federation and Secretary Spense should be notified as soon as possible the number of plates each wants. An excellent program is being arranged and should be of great benefit to Burkburnett.

Electra News Budget

Bridge Club Thursday

The Thursday Afternoon Bridge club was entertained by Mrs. Paul Green. Her home was beautiful in its Hallowe'en decorations which were artistically interwoven in the color scheme. Club prize went to Mrs. H. E. Morrow, while Mrs. Sam Cummings won guest prize. A delicious luncheon of fruit salad, sandwiches, pineapple pudding, cake and coffee was served to Mesdames G. R. Davidson, S. B. Marchant, Ed Schlaffke, H. E. Morrow, C. R. Miller, M. O. Turner, R. H. Watson, W. H. Chaffie, Sam Cummings, Mat Chaffie, Charles McClure and G. T. McGann.

Delightful Bridge Party

Mrs. Frank LeBus and Alfred Johnson were hostesses at a delightful bridge party Wednesday at the home of the former on Wichita street. Hallowe'en decorations brightened the interior of the home and the color scheme was carried out effectively in the decorations and refreshments. Mrs. Mat Chaffie won high score.

Quiet Hallowe'en

Chief of Police Jim Taylor declares that Hallowe'en this year was the quietest he ever saw. A few spooks were to be seen, and sounds as of ghosts occasionally reached the ear. However, not a thing was found upset Wednesday morning. Much of the orderliness is credited to the rain and mud.

Need More Houses

The greatest need of Electra is more homes, according to John Brownlee, president of the Security National bank. "We are greatly in need of good rent houses that will be let at a reasonable cost," Mr. Brownlee declares. "Electra is the livest town I have seen in all northwest Texas, and despite the building of a hundred homes since June 1, many more are needed."

To Begin Farm Survey

W. F. Daugherty, of the department of farm management of the state experiment station, and P. K. Whipple, professor of farm management in the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical college, will begin a survey of farms in this section next week. The work will start in the vicinity of Harrold, six miles west of Electra, and will include farms around that place and Oklaunion. Both of these communities have agricultural high schools and the farmers are unusually progressive in their methods.

These experts hope to get a number of farm records from which suggestions may be made and conclusions drawn as to better farm management. This is said to be the first survey of its kind undertaken in this section.

Hallowe'en Social

Nearly a hundred young people enjoyed a Hallowe'en social at the Methodist church Tuesday night, despite the inclement weather. This is the first entertainment given under the leadership of Mrs. F. Sawmiller, who has charge of the social work of the society. Rev. W. H. McCulloch of Wichita Falls was honor guest and took charge of the games and amusements. After a delightful hour playing, ginger snaps and lemonade were served.

Miss Scheurer Hostess

Miss Dixie Schuerer was hostess at a delightful Hallowe'en party at the home of Mrs. M. D. Goldsmith Saturday night. The rooms were cleverly arranged with witches and hobgoblins, and hung with festoons of black and orange. Hallowe'en refreshments were served to Joel Snow, Clyde Crass, Theo Uhry, Herman Gibson, Paris Smith, Misses Dixie Scheurer, Juanita Ross, Bonnie Wilson, Annabelle LeBus, Texas Kettle, Lola Crass and Byrd Dunn.

Entertains Bridge Club

Mrs. J. T. McDannald was hostess Friday afternoon to the Primo Bridge club. The house was beautifully decorated in a color scheme suggestive of Hallowe'en. Mrs. M. D. Goldsmith won high score. Refreshments were served to Mesdames S. C. Hyter, E. M. Friend, J. H. Harris, B. V. Magee, I. K. Williams, C. E. McDannald, E. E. Merkt, A. S. Haaf, M. D. Goldsmith, G. D. Esell, Homer Jones and Ed Campbell.

Mrs. Malloy Entertains

Mrs. Alex Malloy entertained Friday night with bridge. Those partaking of her hospitality were Mesdames Ed Campbell, J. H. Crisp, J. T. Boyd, H. M. Wearby, R. M. Magee, E. E. Werkt, A. L. Williams and J. L. Stahl and Miss Ruth Simpson. Music and dainty refreshments were the concluding features of a delightful evening.

ELECTION BALLOTS TO BE DISTRIBUTED BY CONSTABLE HERE

SHERIFF NOT ASKED TO DO SO, BUT WOULDN'T HAVE DECLINED.

NAME OF MAYFIELD REMAINS ON TICKETS

Selection of Precinct Officer to Distribute Ballots Causes Some Comment.

The official ballots for Wichita county were distributed and locked up in the various precinct boxes Saturday morning and turned over to Frank Morgan, constable of precinct No. 1, to distribute. Mr. Morgan was given charge of distributing the election boxes in all precincts in the county.

Sheriff Fred K. Smith was asked whether he had declined to distribute the election boxes in view of the temporary injunction order issued from the district court of Limestone county. He stated that he had not declined and would not have declined had he been asked to perform a duty which is paid for as ex-officio fees. He stated that he had received no order with reference to the injunction from official sources, and for that reason would have delivered the boxes.

County Clerk W. T. Harris said upon inquiry that the boxes had been given to Constable Frank Morgan of precinct one to deliver because he had as much right to deliver them as any other officer.

In answer to further inquiry, Mr. Harris said that after the boxes were ready for distribution that "we didn't see the sheriff, and Frank Morgan happened to come along and so we just gave them to him to deliver."

Sheriff Smith stated that he had been in the office practically the entire morning and that when he wasn't there his chief deputy, F. E. Johnson, had been in the office.

GETTING READY FOR HIGH SCHOOL PLAY DECEMBER 1 AND 2

Work has begun on the annual high school play to be given at the Wichita theater December 1 and 2. So successful have the last two plays given by the high school that it was decided to select another John B. Rogers production for this year. "Oh, Oh, Cindy!" a Rogers production calling for a cast of over 300 characters, has been selected for the performance this year. The first play ever staged here by the John B. Rogers Production company "Katchy Koo" was given by the high school students two years ago; last year another hit by the same company, "All Aboard" was given. Both plays proved a remarkable success and plans were made to make the high school play an annual event.

A director from the producer's headquarters in Fosterio, Ohio, has been secured and will arrive in the city this week and begin rehearsals. Committees are at work on the cast and everything is in readiness to begin work as soon as the director arrives. Those in charge of the play are elated over the prospective success of the 1922 performance and nothing will be overlooked that will make the play up to the standard of the two previously produced by the students here.

PROMINENT EAGLE TO SPEAK BEFORE LOCAL FRATERNITY

Judge Thomas E. O'Donnell, a prominent figure in the Fraternal Order of Eagles and well known throughout the United States as a forceful speaker will deliver an address before the members of the local Aerie No. 1889 F. O. E. on Friday night, November 10.

The local fraternal organization is planning an elaborate program for the occasion and is making a united effort to secure an one hundred per cent membership attendance.

J. E. Barry, W. P. of the local organization states that Mr. O'Donnell will relate in a most interesting manner the benefits that have been and will be derived by holding membership in his organization. He will also explain in detail the old age pensions which are a part of the benefits derived from membership.

NORTHWEST TEXAS CONFERENCE MEETS IN PLAINVIEW 1923

EXPECTED TO CLOSE QUANAH MEETING ON SUNDAY NIGHT.

REPORT SUBMITTED ON HOSPITAL PROPOSITION

Strong Plea Is Made For a More General Observance of Sabbath.

Special to The Times.

QUANAH, TEXAS, Nov. 4.—The selection of Plainview as the place for the 1923 meeting, and the hearing of the reports of the various boards and committees featured the last matters of business to come before the thirteenth annual conference in session here this afternoon.

The conference will probably close with the reading of the list of appointments tomorrow night.

"The hospitals in this country have been too long left in the hands of the Catholics by the Protestants, and it behooves us to get busy on a larger scale," declared S. W. Hayne in making the report for the hospital board to the conference. On his recommendation the conference adopted the resolutions endorsing the Golden Cross society, and a big hospital for the Northwest Texas conference within the next few years was indicated in the report of Rev. Hayne.

The setting aside of all of December as a month in which the Methodist orphanage at Waco would be stressed and the setting aside of December 17 as a day when special appeals would be made for the orphanage, followed the report of the committee on orphanage.

Urging that the special and athletic life of the students in the schools be safeguarded, and making a number of recommendations, the report of the board of education was read by Rev. S. L. Culwell of Haskell.

McMurray College will be opened by September, 1923, according to the report, and the conference voted to refuse the request of Southwestern University and Texas Woman's college that the conference resume relations with these institutions. Appropriations of $2500 for S. M. U., $8,000 for Clarendon college and $1500 for McMurray college were made.

Pleads Sabbath Observance.

Both the committees on the state of church and on Sabbath observance pleaded for a stricter observance of the Sabbath in their reports adopted by the conference. Hunting and fishing and similar activities were characterized as forms of Sabbath desecration, but games of certain kinds, and forms of wholesome amusements were given the okeh by the conference. The custom of desecrating the Sabbath that was declared to be growing in this country was deplored. The conference urged the people to return to the paths of the fathers, and pastors to pray more in their studies and laymen to pray more at home. A committee in each church to fight Sabbath desecration was recommended.

The conference pledged anew its fight on the liquor traffic, following the report of Comer Woodward of S. M. U., chairman of the board of temperance. The report of M. M. Beavers, chairman of the committee on evangelism, showed the conference is at present enjoying a big revival spirit.

Refuse to Reissue Credentials.

The feature of the morning session was the refusal of the conference to restore the credentials of O. P. Kiker of Dallas, former pastor of Lubbock.

About six years ago the credentials of Mr. Kiker as a Methodist minister were taken away, and a request to this conference to restore these credentials was refused.

Both Plainview and Slaton were presented as possible places to hold the 1923 conference, and Plainview was chosen by an overwhelming majority. The conference will probably close with the appointments Sunday night. Memorial services will be held Sunday afternoon.

German Oil Tanker Makes Prohibition History for Texas

HOUSTON, Nov. 4.—As the Oberschlesien, German tanker loaded with oil for Holland and freed from seizure, made ready today to clear the port of Houston, her crew little realized that she had made prohibition history for the southern federal district of Texas.

From the efforts of officers to stop alleged rum running in the Houston ship channel, culminating in the recent raid on the tanker, came the following decisions by Judge J. C. Hutcheson:

A foreign ship is foreign territory just as an American steamship is American territory and courts should go slow in interfering with what the visiting seamen consider their rights.

Federal court in this district will not, at the behest of dry officers overturn a "clean liquor bill" given a ship by customs officers.

Prohibition officers, if possessing a search warrant, have a legal right to raid a foreign ship even though custom officers have not yet inspected the vessel.

Judge Hutcheson acquitted Captain H. Knickmann, but convicted Karl Peterson, third engineer, on charges of having illegally imported, transported and possessed 260 quarts of liquor seized on the ship. He ordered the return of eight bottles of liquor found in the captain's cabin.

A fine of $500 which is about 1,800,000 marks, was assessed against Petersen.

Says There's Kick In Honey for Man Seeking Sensation

OCONOMOWOC, WIS., Nov. 4.—There's a kick in honey for the person seeking a new sensation, Dr. S. B. Fracker, Madison, secretary of the American Honey Producers league, told bee men from a dozen states here at the closing session of their conference. Asserting that the decrease of alcoholic beverages had led to a greater consumption of sweets, Mr. Fracker said that honey was the most energizing sweet.

BIDS FOR TEXT BOOKS RECEIVED TO DECEMBER 4

AUSTIN Nov. 4.—Bids for state text books for pbulic schools will be received to December 4 according to a proclamation issued by Governor Neff following the meeting of the text book commission today. Bids will be received on approximately 20 different books used in the Texas schools and upon text books not adopted by the state commission.

ELECTRA WOMAN IS UNDER $15,000 BOND

hotel in Electra on May 12. I shot him on September 27. I remember it well.

"DeMoss came to the hotel from Fort Worth and immediately after he met me he began making love to me.

"I told him I was married, but he answered that he didn't care if I was, that my beauty was his at any cost. I left that hotel in order to get away from him. I told my husband I did not like the hotel. We went to the Electra hotel.

Tells of Attentions.

"We had been there probably two weeks when he moved over and he came to the dry goods store where I was at work and told me that he just had to move over where I was."

The defendant told of incidents when she was forced to excuse herself from the deceased in order to give the proper attention to customers.

"I told him he was going to cause trouble by bestowing devotions upon me," she told the court, "but he said, 'Trouble, hell, I'm going to be with you.'

"That night at the hotel he came to my room," she continued. Her counsel, Attorney R. E. Taylor, called a halt at this point and asked the judge to excuse the children from the court room. The children and a number of ladies left.

Says Promised Marriage.

"He was beautiful and I admired him," the witness told. "I shunned him as long as I could. He told me that he was going to make me quit my husband. He said he would marry me. * * * His influence was just stronger than my will." Then she added, "I believed him when he said he would marry me."

She old of how she had become infatuated with him during the next three weeks. DeMoss prepared to leave for Fort Worth. She ironed some shirts for him by request and delivered them to his room on the same floor of the hotel. While in the room she said he asked her to promise that she would quit her husband for him.

"I promised him I would," she said.

He returned on Saturday, she testified, and he came to the store where she was at work and told her that he had returned to the Electra hotel.

"That night he came to my room," she told, and then added, "That was the last night he was in my room until the Tuesday night of the following week, which was the night before the day on which I shot him."

Tells of Finding Letter.

On Monday morning following the Saturday night, she said, she went to DeMoss' room. It was on this visit that she found the letter.

"I found a letter in his coat. I opened it." The witness hesitated a moment and then said, "It was from a woman in Fort Worth. She signed her name 'Lettie.'"

She told that the contents of the letter revealed that DeMoss had visited the woman the two weeks while he was gone. The letter advised her, the witness said, that DeMoss and the woman were preparing to be married.

"They were going to California to be married, the same place where he and I planned to be married," she said.

She went to his room that night at 8 o'clock, she continued, and there advised him that she had found the letter and had read it.

"I called him a beast," she testified. "He had lied to me. I told him he could not marry two women at the same time. I told him I was through with him. I cried and left his room.

Asked to Be Forgiven.

She then told of having sent word to him on three different occasions, once by letter and twice by a young man, to come to her and forgive her for the harsh things she had said about him.

"I told him in the letter that he should come to me and forgive me and that we would then go ahead and carry out our plans. He did not come."

On the following Saturday night she told of meeting DeMoss on the porch of the hotel. She led him into the lobby where she asked him if he still intended to marry her.

"He said 'No,'" she said, "and then added that he had never intended to. He said his standing was too high to marry a woman with a child. I told him I was absolutely through with him."

On Tuesday night, the day beforr the killing, she said she was awakened between 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning and saw DeMoss standing beside her bed. She said she sprang to her feet and asked him what he wanted in there.

She then described his attack on her in which he threatened her life, but gave her until Wednesday night to make her decision.

How She Got Pistol.

On Wednesday afternoon she went into the room or a woman next door to get a deck of cards. She told that she saw a .38 automatic in the drawer. She picked it up and stuck it in her belt.

"I took it for protection for that night," she told the court.

At 6 o'clock that evening when DeMoss walked in on the porch she said that the attack of the night before flashed into her mind. She said his presence made her nervous and so she shot him.

"I fired two times," she told.

BLAZE AT SEYMOUR SATURDAY MORNING DOES $5000 DAMAGE

SEYMOUR, TEXAS, Nov. 4.—Fire of undetermined origin at 10 o'clock this morning gutted and practically destroyed the frame mercantile building belonging to Dr. J. A. Richardson, located on North Washington street. The building was occupied by Lee Brasseal with plumbing goods and C. D. McKeehan with electrical supplies. The total loss will probably reach $5,000 and was only partially covered by insurance.

The local fire department did most excellent work in saving other adjoining buildings with a stiff wind blowing.

REMARKABLE GROWTH OF SENTIMENT IN GEORGIA AGAINST "LYNCH LAW"

ATLANTA, Nov. 4. — Sentiment against lynching has shown a remarkable growth in Georgia, recently, according to a report of Dr. T. J. Woofter, secretary of the Georgia committee on race relations.

The report showed that during this year there have been twenty-two indictments against alleged lynchers and four convictions carrying penitentiary sentences. Fifteen cases are still pending, besides a number of damage suits growing out of injuries and losses inflicted by mobs.

Emphasizing this year's record, the report showed that during the 37 years ending with 1921, there had been 430 lynchings in Georgia and only one indictment.

SMALL GOLD COINS THOUGHT TO BE AMONG FIRST EVER MINTED ARE BROUGHT TO UNITED STATES

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Thirty small gold coins, believed to be among the first ever minted and possessing a value estimated at more than $1,000,000, were brought to the United States yesterday by George Horton, American consul general at Smyrna who is on leave of absence.

The coins were entrusted to Mr. Horton's care after being unearthed in April by American archaeologists working in the buried ruins of Sarls, the ancient Lydian capital in Asia Minor. When Mr. Horton was forced to flee from the flames that swept Smyrnia the gold coins and his records were among the few things he was able to save.

The coins are of the mintage of Croesus, the last king of Lydia, and the first great international banker whose name has been a symbol of wealth for nearly 2500 years. They were coined some time between 561 B. C., when Croesus ascended the Lydian throne, and 546 B. C., when he was captured by Cyrus, the Persian monarch. They were unearthed in the ruins of a tomb and were thought by searchers to have been hidden by a wealthy Lydian when Sarls was besieged.

They are regarded by archaeologists years because previously but five of the same coinage were known to be as one of the greatest discoveries in in existence. They are in the British museum. On one side of each coin is a bull's hea dand on the other a lion's head. They are round and four are somewhat worn as evidence that they had been in circulation. They are pure gold.

George Peddy is a real democrat; so write his name upon the official ballot next Tuesday as candidate for United States senator.—(Political Advertisement.)

Wichita County Is Fifth in State In Number of Autos

In 1906 there were approximately 48,000 automobiles in the United States, less than four times the number in Wichita county in 1922.

By 1919 the number had increased to approximately 500,000, and in 1921 to 9,221,000.

From 1915 to 1920 the increase was at the rate of 1,300,000 per annum. In 1920 there was an increase of 1,666,495.

Texas has increased from 194,720 in 1917 to 489,428 up to October 1, 1922, according to the records of the state highway department. The records show 194,720 registered for 1917; 250,201 for 1918; 328,665 for 1919; 424,176 for 1920; 469,937 for 1921, and 489,428 up to October 1, 1922.

Wichita county now ranks fifth in Texas in the number of motor vehicles registered during the first nine months of 1922, the registrations in this county numbering 11,808.

Dallas county is first with 36,773, Harris second with 32,573, Bexar third with 29,360, Tarrant fourth with 22,948. McLennan county is sixth with 11,808.

Indications are that there will be registered in Texas between 510,000 and 520,000 cars for 1922, approximately 50,000 more than was registered for 1921. It goes to show that there have been 50,000 new automobiles sold in this state since January, 1922, or the counties are becoming more rigid in their enforcement of the highway law.

Motor traffic into Canada last year increased by 600 per cent.

ENGLISH ANTI-THEFT DEVICE

D. D. Cyle, member of the Institute of Automobile Engineers of England, has invented what he calls a "tampproof" device to prevent theft. It is attached to the gear box of the machine and locks the brakes and gears. It is also a safety device, in that it will keep a car from rolling backward down hill.

THE MOTORISTS' PROBLEMS'

By WILLIAM H. STEWART, JR.

Motor Department: Please give formula used by the state motor vehicle department for figuring horsepower of motor cars. Also that used by the car builders. If I increase the size of the water jacket of my motor, will that reduce the tendency to heat in hard service?—J. K.

The A. L. A. M. formula is used. Namely, square the cylinder bore and multiply by the number of cylinders. Then divide by two and one-half. This is also used by manufacturers to a great extent. Tendency to overheat will be reduced by enlarging the cooling system. Perhaps a larger or more efficient radiator would overcome your trouble. Would suggest that you try this first.

Motor Department: Could you tell me what the difference is between a high tension distributer and a timer?—C. O.

The high tension distributer takes care of and distributes the high tension or secondary current to the various cylinders at timed intervals. The timer simply interrupts at timed intervals the primary current. The primary current is obtained from a generator or storage battery and this is stepped up to a high voltage current by means of the induction coil. The timer and distributer are necessary in order to have the spark delivered to the respective cylinders in the proper firing order at the proper time.

Motor Department: Please tell me what is meant by the word "ground" in connection with the electric system on a car. I understand that rubber and wood are insulators and cannot see how a current can pass from the engine to the ground, or why it would be advisable to have it do so.—H. R.

This is a technical use of the word to mean that the current finds its way back to the battery through the engine or frame, one terminal of the battery being fastened to the frame near the battery. The term comes from the use of the earth by the telegraphers who run the current into the ground and so let it find its way back to its source.

Motor Department: I have an old Chalmers car. When it is running on magneto it will jump continually and lose power, while it runs fine on the battery. Please give me the cause and remedy which I assure you will be appreciated.—Reader.

Clean circuit-breaker points, file them smooth and see that they open not more than 1-64 inch. Clean distributer inside and out. Try car again. If trouble continues the magneto must be sent to a service station. Perhaps the magnets are weak and need remagnetizing.

Motor Department: I own a Buick and find that the rear right wheel splashes oil on the brakes and wheel. I have taken it off and put new felt washers in, but it does no good. Please let me know how to fix same and what you think is the trouble.—S. M.

Would suggest reducing the amount of lubricant used in the rear axle. Also would advise that you use a heavy non-fluid grease. If the felt washers at the end of the axle housing or within the rear hub are properly installed, the grease should not work out to the brakes.

Motor Department: I have a Ford car which I wish to put in cold storage for the winter. Please give me directions for care of the radiator, so as to prevent freezing.—Owner.

Open the drain valve under right corner of radiator, which drains the entire cooling system. Jack up left front wheel a few inches to drain that side of water to get rid of any moisture. Leave the drain valve open.

Motor Department: My engine sputters and misfires when I start it up and later runs all right. What is the cause of this?—Reader.

The trouble is undoubtedly due to a cold engine. The gasoline and air are chilled and do not mix properly. After the engine is heated the gasoline vaporizes more readily, affecting a better mixture, consequently the engine does not miss explosions. Go over the hot air pipe carefully to see that it does not allow cold air to enter and chill the air coming from the hot air stove on the exhaust manifold.

Motor Department: Please tell me how I can stop my engine from backfiring at the carburetor. It fires a few times after starting and then doesn't backfire until it is thoroughly warmed up. When quite hot it fires all the time. Have just had carbon cleaned and valves adjusted.—Owner.

Backfiring when starting is due to a cold engine and cannot be avoided in cold weather. One or more valve lifters are probably adjusted too close to the inlet valve stems. The space should be about two thicknesses of newspaper. When the engine heats up the valve stems expand and push the valves off their seats, allowing the flame to work back into the inlet manifold. Better readjust the valves.

Motor Department: I took the wires off my generator, but failed to mark them. How can I tell which is the positive and which is the negative wire?—Novice.

Run engine so that generator will produce current. Place ends of wires in a glass of water with a little salt or soda in it. The wire giving off bubbles is the negative wire. Be careful to connect so that current from the positive of generator will enter positive of battery.

Motor Department: What makes my transmission brake jump when it takes hold? I have had it tightened recently, but it is not improved. Every time the brake pedal is applied it jumps and shakes, making a very disagreeable thumping noise.—L. N.

If the lining has only recently been applied it needs wearing in. Possibly a slight touch of grease will give it a smoother action. Do not put on much as it will make it slip without holding at all. Also apply the brake and then tap the band with a hammer to insure a better fit of band to drum. Perhaps the band was warped when the lining was installed.

HELPFUL HINTS

You may have occasion to wash down your engine with a mixture of kerosene and gasoline, which, of course, is an excellent fuel for fire. Before proceeding with the work, be sure to disconnect the battery and note that all electrical contacts are dead. If this is not done you may cause a short circuit and incidentally experience the thrills attending a well fed fire.

Do not neglect to inspect your car occasionally, no matter how busy you may be, as your life may depend on some part easily overlooked. The most important part is the steering gear. See that every nut is properly secured, and take out any looseness shown by too much play of the steering wheel.

Jack up both rear wheels, put on the emergency brake part way, and test each wheel for equal resistance. Tighten up the loose side so that the resistance is equal, but do not set the bands up far enough to drag on drum. Have some one set foot brake for you, or wedge a block of wood against the pedal to hold it.

Remove front wheels during the season and put grease on inside bearing. Do not set bearings up so tight that they will bind. Inspect spring shackles and king bolts to see that they are not wearing through. Make sure that they are well oiled.

Get under the car and locate all the grease cups and oil holes that you have been neglecting. Note particularly the brake connections, as they frequently wear through from neglect. Inspect steering connections to see that they are tight and well greased. Give the universal joint a twist to see if it is too loose and load it up with grease.

"Cutting In" Is Dangerous.

When overtaking another automobile on the road, pass to the left and do not pull over to the right until entirely clear of the car. The purpose of this is to prevent this dangerous practice of "cutting in," which has been the cause of many accidents.

KNOWLEDGE FOR CAR OWNERS.

A grinding or humming sound in the differential is usually the result of worn gears.

The muffler should be be taken apart and thoroughly cleaned at least once a season.

Never allow soapy water or soap to remain on the painted surfaces of a car.

Window curtains made of celluloid or pyralin cannot be cleaned after once becoming discolored.

Always return the choke to its normal position as soon as the motor will take it.

If you have a cracked hub-cap, pack thoroughly with grease and cover with canvas or other heavy cloth until the cap can be replaced.

A grease gun that is expected to function properly should never be thrown in the tool box with the rest of the repair equipment.

Litherage or red lead can be used with success to stop leaks in gasoline feed lines.

The effect of a permanent frosting may be secured by coating the inside of the lens with orange shellac.

The twisting and pounding of a loose radiator will often cause the core seams to open, unless the radiator is securely fastened to the frame.

Creaking wheels are many times caused by the drying out of the wooden spokes. A few drops of kerosene oil allowed to work into the spoke joints will restore them to their proper condition.

In removing a cylinder head, carefully break the gasket seal. The gasket can be separated from either cylinder head or the block by using a thin bladed knife or a hacksaw blade that has been ground.

When working around the car, especially when oiling, extreme care should be exercised to protect certain parts. Keep grease away from the upholstery, door handles, steering wheel, control lever, cushions and dozens of other spots.

When a motorist desires to be certain if his clutch is slipping he can make a simple test which will give him positive information. First run the engine at about twenty miles an hour, but not faster than twenty-two, then set the emergency brake tight. Shift the gear to high, and gradually engage the clutch. If the motor stalls the clutch must be given immediate attention.

MOTORCYCLE NOTES

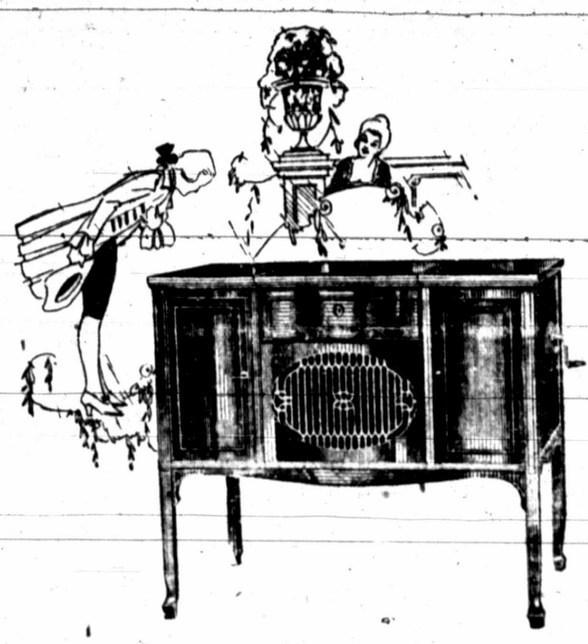

A spark-gap contrivance will not give an increase of power and economize gasoline. The most that it will do is to enable a plug that has a tendency to oil or soot up to carry on its good work far longer than usual without cleaning.

If the tap to the gas pipe leaks, grind it in. The grinding in of a tap however, is a delicate business, resulting in harm if carelessly done. The safest plan is to use the finest of powder for that purpose, to give no more than half a dozen turns to the plug, and to push the plug gently in all the time you are revolving it.

Those who study economy may like to know that, provided the cam-gear is sound, it is a simple matter to retread a worn tire, using one of the bands sold for the purpose. First, wet the tire thoroughly in warm water, then clean it well with gasoline, rough it all over with a file, and finally give it two good coats of puncture solution, with a quarter hour's wait between the two. At the same time, solution the band.

MOTOR WEAR CAUSE OF LOSS OF POWER

A worn condition of the different working parts of the motor is one of the principal reasons for lost power, because the explosive force partially escapes before the exhaust valve naturally opens.

COYOTES OUTCLASS CAMERON AGGIES FOR A 34 TO 6 VICTORY

Chewning Flashes While Entire Squad Displays Fast Play

By SPIKE COOPER.

The Coyotes outclassed the Cameron Agricultural school of Lawton yesterday at Athletic park, smothering them beneath an avalanche of touchdowns for a count of 34-6.

Exactly 12 minutes after play had started, Kenley plunged across the Oklahoman's goal for a touchdown and Shaw immediately booted a drop-kick squarely between the uprights and Wichita Falls had added another victory to her credit, though none knew at that time that the game had been won.

With a crushing offense which wilted the Lawton forwards, the Coyote backs led by Chewning, Kenley and Stringer blasted away for short but steady gains which could but terminate as the last kalsomine mark had been crossed.

Visitors Start Strong.

The visitors threw a scare into the crowd when they came back and counted a touchdown shortly after Kenley had plowed through right tackle for the first marker. An attempted pass for score after touchdown was grounded and the one-point margin held by the Coyotes was sufficient.

There were numerous bright spots through the game, and although the Coyotes baffled and battered the Oklahoma aggregation, the fight of the "cross-the-river" lads should have prevented so large a score but for fumbles at critical times, a seeming fault of the teams from the neighboring state.

L. Rhodes, plunging back, was an effective offensive threat, tearing through the Coyote line repeatedly or brushing the tackles in a series of plays which often advanced the ball half the length of the field. Hilbert, the light member of the Oklahoma backfield, circled the ends on several occasions, running to the secondary defense for neat gains. In the Oklahoma line, Weddle and Shuman were outstanding, but the experience of the Coyote opposition held the visitors at a safe distance.

Captain Walker played his accustomed defensive game, and as play after play was called over his position, carried the opposing line out of the way at will. Baldwin showed a tower of strength alongside the captain, and few were the Cameron gains through this side of the Wichita first line defense. Shaw solved the Cameron play as it started and his end was never circled, while he stopped advances behind the line time and again.

Chewning Leads Offense.

But climaxing the Coyote victory was the terrific driving of Chewning, diminutive halfback, who tore off long gains with regularity from the start of the contest. It seemed he was unstoppable and as he circled the ends or brushed past tackles almost before the play started, the Oklahomans could not gain secure hold of the fast-flying legs, and although thrown two and three times on a single play, the midget marvel bounced to his feet and continued until three, four or five Black and Gold clad jerseys smothered him to the mud.

Kenley drove holes through the line whenever called upon and as the Cameron team would brace for a desperate stand, the fullback was already to deliver the necessary yardage. Abetted by Stringer's plunging and circling, the Coyote backfield presented a wonderful offense.

Only on two or three occasions did Jones permit a showing of the reserve play that can be called into use in case of emergency. One of the most spectacular plays of the afternoon came on a wide spread formation when Moore passed perfectly into the arms of Kenley for a 12-yard gain.

As the score mounted Jones began to run in his reserve strength and as the game closed, not a member of the starting team was on the field.

All Men Play.

Curtain, Beach, Jenkins and Moore continued the example set by the starting backs, while in the line McGee, Copeland, Gates and Hughes held the Oklahoma backs as did the original forwards.

One can pick a winning squad from the sidelines at any time during the game. An even dozen capable backs are begging and fighting for places and the game yesterday demonstrated more clearly than ever the wealth afforded. After Chewning, Stringer, Kenley and Deems had been taken out, there was no difference perceptible. Curtain tore round the ends as did Chewning; Beach ripped the line to shreds while Jenkins did a bit of both. Taylor, Moore and Mackechney all performed in satisfying style.

Then the ends. Shaw, Cameron, Kiker, Bracken, Smith and Waggoner, the select of a dozen, make competition keen. There is little to choose between and wherein a coach is justified in substitution is merely a question of physical endurance.

Line Fortified.

The line is fortified with Coffey, Baldwin, Howle, Copeland, McGee and Hughes with West and Harris as center. The showing of McGee, bear-like guard, yesterday eased an anxiety for Jones, for the big fellow has come through after hard work and he showed he can deliver. The stands cheered wildly when Coffey went in near the end of the game, showing the big fellow they were with him and appreciated his effort.

Yesterday's game served as a barometer for what followers of the Red and Black can expect from the team in the game next Saturday against the decision winner of the North Side-Cleburne dispute.

LAFAYETTE END SENT HOSPITAL FROM FIELD

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Left end Berry of LaFayette's football team was taken to a hospital this afternoon after sustaining injuries when he tried to tackle a runner near the end of the third period. His mother and father, who were spectators at th game, were summoned.

KANSAS MOVES UP IN CONFERENCE RACE

Sooners Go Down 19-3 Before the Crushing Attack of Jayhawker Machine.

LAWRENCE, KANS., Nov. 4.—Kansas university made a strong bid for second place in the Missouri Valley conference standing here today, defeating Oklahoma university 19 to 3.

The first victory in four years the Jayhawkers made the most of their opportunity and pushed over two touchdowns in the last few minutes of play after having the game safely tucked away.

After playing a scoreless first period Oklahoma opened up in the second quarter and forced a score when Bowles made a placement kick from the 37 yard line.

The Jayhawkers retaliated a few minutes later when Higgins recovered a Sooner fumble on the 20 yard line and McAdamson the next play got away for a 30 yard run through a broken field on a fake formation. Wilson kicked goal.

The Kansans played on the offensive in the third period and neither side registered. The game settled into a punting game with Kansas kicking whenever the ball came into their territory. Oklahoma put up a stubborn defense but was smothered in every attempt to shash down the field.

HARVARD HAS EASY TIME WITH FLORIDA

Make-Shift Team Rolls Up Score On Entry From Far South, 2 to 0.

HARVARD STADIUM, Nov. 4.—A Harvard football team, some of them regulars, some subs, scored 24 points on the University of Florida today, while they held the southerners scoreless. In the early periods Florida's defense was broken down continually, but as the game wore on the southerners stiffened and at the close were playing their strongest game.

Twice in the third period Harvard went down to threaten another touchdown, but each time the Florida players rallied and turned them back. Harvard set out again just before the end of the period for another drive. A touchdown was registered at the opening of the last period, Praffman, substituting for Harvard, ran around Florida's right end for the touchdown. He kicked the goal.

Finals: Harvard 24, Florida 0.

Jacksboro Loses To Seymour Squad

SEYMOUR, Nov. 4 — Seymour High school defeated Jacksboro High, 21 to 6, on the local gridiron. Features of the game were Stallings' line plunges for Seymour, Morris and Harvey's defensive work, Lowery and Foster's blocking Jacksboro' punts and Seymour's break up of Jacksboro's air attack. The visitors were unable to complete a pass or threaten Seymour's goal.

Illini Kicks Way To Big Victory

URBANA, ILL., Nov. 4.—Two drop kicks by Coutche, one from the 48-yard line, gave the University of Illinois a 6 to 3 victory over Northwestern university today. Penfield kicked Northwestern's field goal in the first period from the 28-yard line. First downs were scarce on both sides as the lines appeared evenly matched, and forward passes brought most of the gains registered by both teams.

Austin High Sends San Antonio Out

AUSTIN, Nov. 4.—Austin high school defeated Breckenridge high of San Antonio here today, 14 to 6, in the interscholastic league football race. Austin high has not been defeated this season. Brackenridge met its first defeat today.

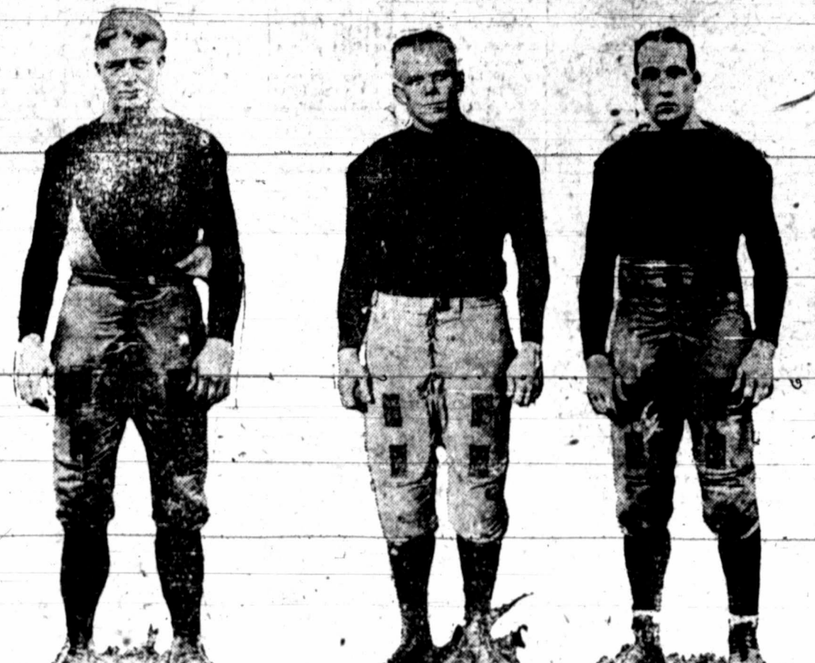

MOTHER VOICES HER RELIEF AT THE NEWS

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 4.—Mrs. Benjamin MacReady, mother of Lieut. John MacReady, when informed that her son and Lieut. Oakley Kelly had been forced to land at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana, before the successful termination of their attempted non-stop flight from coast to coast, expressed only relief at the news.

"All I can say now is that I'm so glad it's over," she said. "So glad that they are safe."

Mrs. MacReady had spent the night close to a telephone, following her son's long flight with eager interest as successive dispatches showed the big monoplane drawing nearer and nearer to its goal.

MUSTANG OFFENSE TROUNCES ENEMIES

Pirates No Match For Rejuvenated S. M. U. Club; Passing Piles Up Score.

DALLAS, TEXAS, Nov. 4.—Playing a better offensive game than they have shown so far this season the Mustangs defeated the Southwestern Pirates 46 to 13 here Saturday afternoon.

The Mustangs outclassed and outplunged the Georgetown aggregation and with the excellent passing of Stollenwerck and Reisor along with the pass-snatching Malone and Bedford combination, won easily for the Pirates.

The passing of Crump was successful in that it scored the only two touchdowns for the Southwestern team, both touchdowns were made in the last half. One was made on a pass to Foster and the other to Aiken.

TULANE MEETS FIRST DEFEAT THIS SEASON

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 4.—In one of the most thrilling gridiron contests played here this year, the University of North Carolina defeated Tulane by a score of 19 to 12. It was Tulane's first defeat this season.

GOAL TO GO.

EMPORIA, KAN., Nov. 4.—J. L. Larson and N. S. McDonald, University of Oklahoma students, were not in the Kansas university stadium this afternoon rooting for Oklahoma to beat the Jayhawkers. Instead the students are in the Lyon county jail awaiting money from home to pay $10 fines assessed against each of them for stealing rides on a train. The men were arrested in Emporia last night. They admitted trying to "bum their way" from Lawton, Okla., to Lawrence.

ALABAMA GLORIFIES SOUTH WITH GREAT VICTORY OVER PENN

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 4. — The University of Alabama made intersectional football history today when the southerners trounced the University of Pennsylvania, 9 to 7, in one of the most bitterly fought gridiron battles seen on Franklin Field in a long time. A touchdown and placement goal represents the score of the team from the south, while Pennsylvania's seven points were made on a touchdown and point after touchdown.

Alabama outplayed Pennsylvania throughout. The Quakers showed superiority in putting for distance and in forward passing, but in generalship, defensive work and the power to deliver the punch when the opportunity presented itself the southern team outclassed the home eleven.

Amarillo Tied by Pampa's Eleven

PAMPA, TEXAS, Nov. 4.—A field goal scored in the last minute of play permitted Amarillo to even the count at 9-9 here today in a great game which would have eliminated one team from the district race.

Due to the Childress win over McLean today, Amarillo will play Childress and Pampa the winner of that game for the district title.

The field today was heavy, following a hard rain and play was slowed up, but each team fought determinedly throughout.

Childress Wins Way Into District Finals

McLEAN, TEXAS, Nov. 4.—The McLean-Childress game played on the Childress gridiron today resulted in a score of 27 to 6 in favor of Childress, placing that team with only one game between it and the district championship.

The game started even and the teams were well matched but the breaks of the game favored Childress and several times McLean fumbled the ball near the goal line proving disastrous.

Childress star play was an off tackle buck, repeatedly used effectively. In the second quarter Childress made a forward pass which netted thirty-five yards.

Jeffries, Childress quarter, was easily the star of the day.

SYRACUSE TRIMS NEBRASKA WHEN OFFENSIVE LOOSED

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 4.—East triumphed over the west today by the margin of one field goal, Syracuse University defeating the University of Nebraska 9 to 6 in the hardest fought battle ever witnessed in Archbold stadium in years. The field was heavy and straight football predominated.

In the third period with the score 3 to 0 in favor of Syracuse, Thompson, Nebraska end, scooped up a Syracuse fumble and raced from midfield for a touchdown. Syracuse electrified the crowd in the final period by unleashing a powerful offensive, driving down the field from midfield the Syracuse backs ripped off consistent gains of three and five yards on every plunge. Anderson, the veteran halfback of the Orange squad, did most of the ground gaining on straight line plunges. With but two yards to go for the winning score he smashed across between the Nebraska center and right guard for a touchdown.

Honors were even for the most part throughout the game, neither Nebraska of Syracuse being able to make consistent gains on line plunges or end runs.

Syracuse scored early in the opening period on a 35-yard field goal kicked by McBride.

Horned Frogs to Shave After Win

FORT WORTH, TEXAS, Nov. 4.—Texas Christian University football players won the right to shave here this afternoon when they defeated the Oklahoma Aggies by a score of 22 to 14, brilliant punting by Kit Carson enabling the local eleven to win their initial contest of the year. Hasbrook was the outstanding Oklahoma Aggie player, the visitor's sensational halfback scoring their two touchdowns after brilliant broken field running and pass receiving.

Several days ago the local players pledged themselves to refrain from shaving until they had won at least one victory.

Centre Wins From Kentuck U. 27-3

LEXINGTON, KY., Nov. 4.—"Uncle Charley" Moran's Centre college Colonels triumphed over the University of Kentucky eleven here this afternoon in the twenty-seventh renewal of the annual clash between teams representing the two institutions. The final tally was: Centre 27, Kentucky 3.

Merchants Backing Gun Club's Biggest Program of Season

Wichita Falls is accepting the local gun club as one of the big assets of the city. The reputation of the minrod organization has rapidly spread throughout the country and investigation reveals no other club of the state which is as favorably known, either through personnel or accomplishment. One other club in the state boasts a larger membership, but none has equaled the 1922 record which will be climaxed in the Armistice day registered shoot to be held here Saturday, November 11.

Although eight registered meets had already been held during the current season, the American Trapshooting association did not hesitate to approve the program for what promises to outclass the successful two-day meet last spring when 50 gunners fired through the 200 target meet.

The Saturday program calls for six events of 16-yard rise singie targets and 24 pairs, a total of 204 targets.

Merchants Back Meet.

Through the effort of A. G. Deatherage, president of the club, and Hunter Dempsey, secretary, local merchants and professional men have added to the days' attractivity with $135 added money to be divided between the winners, and 16 merchandise prizes which total possibly $200. Although one of the youngest clubs of the state, the local organization boasts a record seldom seen. Not only in the fact that three to six squads shoot regular weekly practice meets, but a registered meet has been held every month since the current season opened. Other clubs consider themselves fortunate if two or three registered programs can be held during a season.

The courtesy and interest of the merchants, the chamber of commerce and individuals demonstrates the hold trapshooting is gaining here. In another season the club will likely outnumber any other in the state.

Much Added Money.

Entries are already being received from foreign fields, and in all probability shooters from Oklahoma and Louisiana will be here for the meet in addition to many from different parts of Texas.

Fort Worth and Dallas will likely send squads, as well as Vernon, Childress, Amarillo, Abilene, Ranger and Burkburnett.

The program begins at 9 o'clock Saturday morning.

Lyon Wins Weekly Event Over Traps

Only three squads of shooters competed in the regular weekly meet of the Gun club Friday and weather conditions prevented any high scores. A quartering wind into the targets sent them speeding or rising at impossible angles, and though several of the club leaders failed to show even good scores, they were satisfied with their work.

L. I. Lyon won the weekly prize with a 46, made possible by his second event when he smashed 24 hard targets. Deatherage likewise scored 46, but the club handicap gave Lyon the margin.

Deatherage was winner in doubles with 22, an exceptionally good score with conditions handicapping events as they did.

Club members are in high spirits over the prospect of the Armistice day program which has been made one of the most attractive meets of the year in this section of the country since merchants and individuals contributed and donated cash and merchandise prizes for the affair.

Scores for the Friday meet were: Lyon 46, Deatherage 46, Nabb 44, Pate 43, Gotcher 43, Leslie 43, Cooper 40, Jennings 39, Landon 37, Thornburgh 36, Dempsey 35, Tanner 35; Dodson 30.

In the doubles event: Deatherage 22, Pate 21, Greenburgh 19, Jennings 19, Lyon 18, Gotcher 15, Dempsey 14.

BAYLOR OUTFIGHTS AGGIES FOR A SENSATIONAL 13 TO 7 WIN

Bradshaw Features First Bear Victory Of Last 16 Years

WACO, TEXAS, Nov. 4.—Baylor's fighting bears came into their own this afternoon at the Cotton Palace, when their high powered 1922 model machine completely crushed the Texas Aggies under a 13 to 7 score. To say that the game was hard fought would be putting it mildly. It was the toughest battle that has ever been staged on a Waco gridiron, nothing barred. Baylor's brilliant offensive found an even match in Bible's touted defense for three long quarters, trumping the last minutes of play when Bradshaw dived over the last touchdown of the game. Incidentally, Captain Bradshaw played the game of his life. Cool under fire, aggressive on offense and an excellent broken field runner, Bradshaw outguessed and outgeneraled the Aggies. It was a mighty triumph of offense of Coach Frank Bridges.

Baylor scored in the second quarter after holding the Aggies four times on their own two-yard line at the close of the first period. The ball went over and the Bruins began a march up the field when the second quarter opened that shoved the Bradshaw score for the score of the game. Tanner's mighty plunge through the line for 35 yards put the ball within striking distance. Williamson skirted left end for fifteen yards, and plunges by Strickland and Tanner put the ball on A. and M.'s five-yard line. After one attempt, Bradshaw lunged over and kicked the goal.

The Aggies tied the count in the third quarter when two marvelous passes, Neely to Wilson, netted 50 yards. Four attempts were taken by the Aggies to go over and on the last try Knickerbocker lunged off tackle for the score.

Hannah kicked the goal for the tying point. The Aggie offense in this period was at its best. They rushed the Baylor line that held when the Farmers were within their 10-yard line. Twice Baylor held the Farmers for downs on their own five-yard line. The Aggies lost their last chance to score in the closing minutes of play when Baylor held three times for downs and Pittman blocked Neely's pass to Wilson. It was a wonderful piece of work on the part of Pittman.

Baylor scored the last touchdown of the game in the last five minutes of the game. A brilliant end run by Captain Bradshaw for 15 yards, slashes by Tanner for 11, a pass, Bradshaw to Pittman for 12 yards, and Bialleck's stab over tackle for eight, placed the ball deep in Aggie territory. Bradshaw plunged over for the last score of the game. The goal was missed.

The closing minutes of the game found A. and M. fighting hard for a score and it looked for a while that they would be successful, but their fizzle on the down with the ball on Baylor's five-yard line ended the game. Baylor had possession of the ball on their own eight-yard line when the game ended.

DALLAS FEDERAL RESERVE BANK RANKS FIFTH AMONG TWELVE OF INSTITUTIONS IN UNITED STATES

DALLAS, Nov. 4.—The Eleventh Federal Reserve District Bank of Dallas, which will celebrate its eighth birthday Nov. 16, now ranks fifth in the matter of state bank members among the twelve districts in the country, according to announcement by Charles C. Hall, acting federal agent for the district, to The Associated Press today.

The Eleventh District includes all of Texas, the northern half of Louisiana, seven counties in southeastern Oklahoma, the southern half of New Mexico, and five counties in southeastern Arizona.

The twelve district banks are: Boston, first; New York, second; Philadelphia, third; Cleveland, fourth; Richmond, fifth; Atlanta, sixth; Chicago, seventh; St. Louis, eighth; Minneapolis, ninth; Kansas City, tenth; Dallas, eleventh; San Francisco, twelfth.

Membership of member banks in the reserve districts show, according to Mr. Hall's records: Chicago, 1445; Kansas City, 1154; Minneapolis, 1021; Cleveland, 882; Dallas, 862; San Francisco, 826; New York, 800; Philadelphia, 714; Richmond, 627; St. Louis, 606; Atlanta, 528; Boston, 422.

The principal operations the past year in the Dallas bank, Mr. Hall announced, were as follows: $222,-734,810 in currency were handled in 47,098,293 pieces; 147,405 discounts and advances, amounting to $771,-950,758; $4,481,609,841 in checks handled, numbering 28,026,972; 14,-673 wire transfers, amounting to $146,230,000; 20,264 Victory notes, amounting to $2,028,150, were converted; 544,100 Victory notes, amounting to $82,517,450, were exchanged; 29,589 treasury notes and certificates of indebtedness were issued amounting to $61,110,100, and 26,926 redeemed, amounting to $42,-395,500.

Two Branch Banks

"Branches of the Dallas bank are located at Houston, opened August 4, 1919, and at El Paso, opened June 17, 1918, to serve the territory tributary to them," Mr. Hall declared.

"The entire force of the Dallas Federal Reserve Bank, when it was opened November 16 1914, was 25. With its fifteen officers and its 438 employes, the force of the bank here is now 453. The Houston branch has four officers and 62 employes."

Officers and directors of the bank besides Mr. Hall, the acting federal reserve agents, are: B. A. McKinney, governor and director; R. G. Emerson, deputy governor; R. R. Gilbert, cashier, and the following directors: John T. Scott, president, First National Bank, Houston; Howell E. Smith, president, First National Bank, McKinney; Marion Sansom, chairman, Agricultural Loan Agency, War Finance Corporation, Fort Worth; Frank Kell, Wichita Falls; J. J. Culbertson, Paris; W. B. Newsome, Dallas; and H. O. Wooten, Abilene.

The Dallas building, an imposing white structure of five stories, with a massive pillared entrance, was completed last year, costing, exclusive of the land on which it stands, $2,016,253.

The building is declared by engineers and financial experts to be a model in efficiency of construction and to contain every modern convenience for the operation of a large financial institution. The vaults are declared to be the last word in safe construction and the largest in the southwest.

Modern Improvements

A cooling system, said to be one of the few in the southwest, is operated in the bank and contributes very largely to the comfort of the officers and employes in the extreme hot summers of Texas. The windows are kept closed, summer and winter. The cooling system is a "washed air" process, and permeates the interior.

On the fifth floor, remote from the vaults and steel cages containing over a hundred million dollars in assets are a model kitchen, storeroom, dining room, all included in the cuisine department, and rated 100 percent by the health department.

About 250 employes take lunch daily in the main dining room. Lunch is served for 30 cents. The cuisine department pays no rent and the bank absorbs all other overhead. Three hours are allowed for lunch, between eleven and two o'clock.

A private dining room for the officers seats twelve. The room for the officers is separate from that of the employes only because of the business advantage of the linking of common interests and enabling all to "talk business" while "breaking bread," Mr. Hall commented.

A special advantage in having a luncheon in the building, he showed, is that every officer is available and can be reached immediately. The bank has a "tel-call" on every floor, each officer being assigned in a number. Therefore, if an officer is away from his desk he can be reached at once.

Countless invisible precautions against lawless molestation are in operation.

The building was designed by Graham, Anderson, Probst and White, architects, of Chicago. The general contractors were Geo. A. White company, of New York. Various subcontracts were let locally and in cities of the North and East.

FILIPINO IS HELD FOR DEATH OF GIRL IN APARTMENT FIRE

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—J. C. Quenzedo, Filipino, suitor of Beatrice Holm, was held tonight for the latter's death in a spectacular apartment house fire.

Quesado, according to police was seen running from the blazing building just before fire broke out in the basement.

The dead girl was found lying in a fourth floor window ledge after she helped her mother from the building.

Two persons, believed to have been in the building at the time of the fire, were still missing tonight. Forty were injured in the fire which drove 400 people from their apartments.

Police declared they were certain the fire was the work of a pyromaniac. The same building, they said, was "set off" two weeks ago and 23 others in the same district have been reported the past few weeks.

On next Tuesday go to the polls and write George Peddy under the printed words "Candidate for United States Senator" in either column of the ballot. — (Political Advertisement.)

Legionnaires Win From Acrher City

The American Legion five won over the Archer City delegation in a fast game Saturday night by a score of 16 to 13. Herrin at right forward was the star performer for the visitors and threw three goals in the first half. Wilson and Montgomery each had a goal to their credit at the end of the first half. Ferguson at right forward for the Legion pitched the first goal for his team. A field goal for Courtney and a foul goal by Breman, substitute for McCarthy, brought the score at the end of the first quarter 10 to 5 in Archer City's favor. The Legion five failed to score on the foul goals gained by personals against Montgomery, Herrin and Wilson.

Andrews was substituted for Montgomery, Hodges for Ikard and Huff for Wilson on the Archer City team at the beginning of the second half. Substitutions and changes continued throughout the game, but the local team came back strong. Fast work by Courtney and Breman and three personal fouls enabled the Legion team to gain 11 points over the visitors. A field goal by Herrin and a foul goal, a personal against Ferguson, was the only headway possible for the visitors during the second half.

Gaines Motors in Win Over College

Gaines Motor sales company basket shooters put on a real display at the American Legion hall Saturday night when they defeated the Junior college five by a score of 18 to 16. Every man on the Gaines team had at least one goal to his credit at the end of the first half; McLaurin threw three goals and Fisher two. Ferguson, at right forward, and Haney at center, threw the goals for the college team.

The college failed to count on the personal fouls against Gaines, the only one in the first period. The score stood 16 to 6 in Gaines' favor at the end of the first period.

McLaurin continued his star work for the Gaines team in the second half but the college team held the score to only one goal. Ferguson added two goals to the college team score during the second half. Of the five goals made by that team during the game, Ferguson pitched four. Bolton was substituted for Long at the end of the last half. The college team came back but were too long in warming up. Ten points to gain in the second half was beyond their limit.

OVERRULES MOTION TO PLACE FOUR MEN UNDER PEACE BOND

HENRIETTA, TEXAS, Nov. 4.—Judge H. R. Wilson this afternoon overruled a motion to put four residents of Newport, this county, under peace bond, holding that the preponderance of evidence was that they had not threatened bodily harm to W. N. South, aged farmer of the Newport community.

Judge Wilson presided at the hearing in the illness of the county judge. The four men, O. M. Shipp, G. B. Killian, T. P. Pickens and Will Vinson, were put under $250 bond each Friday on complaint of South, who declared that they had halted him in the road near his home and told him to leave the community "or they would break his —— back."

The four men denied that they had made any such threat toward South. M. A. Baker of Newport was put on the stand in an effort to impeach the testimony of Pickens, and told of a conversation with Pickens regarding South.

South's story was that the four had blocked the road with their car, forcing him to stop his team, and that they had then delivered the threat above quoted. They told him, he said, that he had been guilty of improper acts. Following the threats, South sold his effects and prepared to leave the community.

TWO INSTANTLY KILLED AND FOUR ARE INJURED

PUEBLO, COLO, Nov. 4.—F. E. Mossman and his seven months old infant were instantly killed and four persons were injured in an early morning cyclone and hail storm that struck Carr Crossing, 15 miles north of Sugar City. The injured are Mrs. F. F. Mossman, her two and a half year old son, and Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Stamps. Mrs. Mossman and her son are in a Rocky Ford hospital suffering from internal injuries. They are not expected to live. Mr. and Mrs. Stamps are not thought to be seriously injured.

As the Mossman dwelling crumbled, the father and infant were trapped and killed while the mother and son were tossed about with the wreckage and deposited helpless in the hall. They were exposed to the extreme cold and damp wind for three hours before aid arrived.

The cyclone, unusual for the vicinity originated southwest of Sugar City, 55 miles east of Pueblo at 5 a. m. Saturday.

NUMEROUS ISSUES INVOLVED IN STATE ELECTIONS TUESDAY

PARTY REGULARITY, WOMEN'S VOTE AND PROHIBITION INCLUDED.

SENATORIAL BATTLES OUTSTANDING FEATURES

Control of Congress Is Also at Stake In Coming Battle of Ballots.

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—Party regularity, the women's vote, prohibition and progressiveism have been some of the issues in the off-year election next Tuesday with control of congress the stake.

Outstanding features of the senatorial battle in the west are the contests of United States Senator James A. Reed, democrat, of Missouri, and R. R. Brewster; Senator Frank B. Kellogg, republican, Minnesota, Mrs. Anne Olesen, democrat, and Henrik Shipstead, farmer-labor; Smith W. Brookhart, republican, and Clyde L. Herring, of Iowa; Senator Charles E. Townsend, republican, Michigan, and Woodbridge N. Ferris, former governor; Albert J. Beveridge, republican, former senator of Indiana, and Samuel M. Ralston, former governor; and the muddle in Texas, where the names of Earle B. Mayfield, democrat, and George Peddy, independent democrat and republican endorsed, have not been printed on the ballots as the result of injunction and mandamus proceedings.

Senator Robert M. LaFollette, progressive republican, Wisconsin, was expected to have an easy victory.

Senator G. M. Hitchcock, democrat, Nebraska, is opposed by R. B. Howell, republican.

Representative Andrew J. Volstead, republican, Minnesota, seventh district, author of the prohibition enforcement act, is being fought hard by Rev. Q. J. Kvale, democrat and farmer-labor endorsed. One of the other principal prohibition outcroppings is in Missouri, where several wet republicans have said they would support Senator Reed, democrat, while certain dry democrats have declared they would follow Brewster.

Although Mrs. Olesen, the Minnesota democratic senatorial nominee, is a headliner among women candidates, a number of others are engaged in important races. Prominent among these are Mrs. Winifred Mason Huck, republican nominee to succeed her late father, Congressman at Large William Mason, and Miss Alice Lorraine Daly, nonpartisan league candidate for governor of South Dakota. Mrs. Luella Barton of Lincoln, Neb., is a prohibition candidate for congress.

TWO AVIATORS ARE KILLED IN ACCIDENT NEAR LAKE CHARLES

LAKE CHARLES, LA., Nov. 4.—The bodies of Lieutenant R. C. Millyard and Sergeant C. G. Zarlaus of Fort Bliss, El Paso, Texas, who were killed when their airplane, in which they were flying from Washington to El Paso crashed to earth at 10:30 this morning near Vinton, La., were resting tonight in a local undertaking establishment awaiting instructions from the commanding officer at Fort Bliss.

The airplane was demolished and the bodies of the two aviators badly mangled. The aviators are believed to have lost their way in the heavy fog and in attempting to make a landing probably misjudged the distance to the ground. A section foreman working on the Southern Pacific railroad track, who saw the accident, said the plane fell when it was about 50 feet from the ground. He stated that he saw Lieut. Millyard jump from the airplane just before it fell.

Steve Bige of the city water department, and Miss Grace Sprinkle, a telephone company employe, were united in marriage last Tuesday night at the home of Rev. Mr. Phillips. They will be at home at 1296 Travis.

Dr. and Mrs. Deacon of Iowa Park were visitors in the city Saturday.

Longhorns Run Up Big Scores Against Lighter Owl Team

By Associated Press.

HOUSTON, TEXAS, Nov. 4.—Before a crowd of 10,000 wild eyed football fans, the light Rice institute football team went down fighting by a score of 29 to 0 in their annual football game with Texas university here today. All the color and trimmings that mark the annual grid contest—the state and Rice bands, the squads of state university students dressed as cowboys, etc—were on hand at the beginning of the game.

Rice won the toss up and chose to receive. After making one first down Rice was forced to punt. Texas took the ball on her 45 yard line and commenced a steady march down the field for a touchdown, Garder carrying the ball.

After a few minutes of play Morley, playing half, carried the ball over for another touchdown.

The ball was advanced by a series of line bucks through the light Rice line. The rest of the game was but a repetition of the first plays. The state team elected to play straight football and the heavy backs gains at will through the Rice line.

Gardere at quarter and Morley at half, replacing Stacy and Robertson, regulars on the team who were out on account of injuries, started for Texas. Gardere time and again pierced off five to ten yards through the line or around end and Morley was particularly effective on line bucks.

Swarts and McGee played stellar ball for Rice. Swarts's 20 yard run around end was a feature of the game.

Rice was forced to kick practically every time she received the ball. During the last few minutes Rice tried desperately to complete a forward pass, but failed.

O. T. Gooding, branch manager of the Fuller Brush Co. here, and his assistant, C. L. Karges, have left for Dallas to attend the state convention of the company, to be held at the Jefferson hotel. All of the executives in the state will be there.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Foster of Henrietta were visitors in the city Friday. While here they were the guests of Mrs. C. C. Roach.

COTTON MARKET

New York Market.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—The cotton market showed continued strength and activity today with prices for all months making new high records on reduced estimates of the crop and reports of a generally strong situation in the spot markets.

December contracts sold up to 23.50 or 45 points net higher and closed at 23.48, with the general market closing strong at net advances of 31 to 47 points.

The market opened firm at an advance of 12 to 35 points on overnight buying orders brought in by the strength of yesterday. The advance met heavy realizing by old longs, while there was scattered southern selling and probably some local selling for a reaction. These offerings were very readily absorbed on a comparatively moderate decline, and after selling off from 23.42 to 23.16 for December, and from 23.12 to 24.85 for January, the market made new high ground in the late dealings. The buying was evidently stimulated by reports that a New Orleans authority estimated the crop at 9,500,000 bales, while bulls also found encouragement in the appearance of trade buying orders and the early decline, and favorable reports from the domestic goods trade. January sold up to 25.21 in the late trading, when the general list was 35 to 48 points above Friday's closing figures and something like 42 to 55 cents per pound above the low price touched on the reaction of late September.

Reactionary sentiment was more or less in evidence during the morning, but local brokers reported a very general demand from both trade and commission house sources. Manchester cabled that buyers of goods are slow to follow advances, but that there has been some improvement in the inquiry from both India and China. Weekend reviews of the cotton goods situation in domestic markets, indicated a comparatively small volume of business at first hands during the week, but a generally firm situation as to prices.

New Orleans Cotton.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 4.—The trading in cotton was along the lines of previous sessions of the week. High prices were sent to new high record markets for the season and the gains were well sustained, reactions amounting to only a few points. Highest levels were reached in the late trading when the active positions were at gains of 32 to 42 points; the close was 30 to 37 up. December touched 24.32 and closed at 24.75 cents a pound.

The opening was strongly higher on favorable week-end reviews of trade in general and a private crop estimate of 9,500,000 bales. After advances of 17 to 25 points set backs of about 10 points resulted from realizing by longs but a little later the advance was resumed, with the most pronounced strength in the late trading.

Buying of the second half of the session came to some extent from shorts who covered apparently because Monday's the only day left for trading before the census bureau issues its report on ginning to the first of November, the figures of which are expected to be bullish. Tuesday will be a holiday on account of elections and the ginning figures will be given out on the opening Wednesday. New longs buying was stimulated by telegrams from many sections of the belt stating that spot holders were either getting or refusing 25 cents a pound for their cotton.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—Wheat recovered some of Friday's lost ground in the final half hour of the short session today on week-end covering induced by advices of resumed buying for export. Corn and oats followed wheat for the most part, although the latter did not respond as readily to bullish sentiment. Closing prices were quarter to 1 cent up on wheat, with December 1.15⅞ to 1.15¾ and May 1.14 to 1.14⅝; ⅛ to ¼ up on corn; and unchanged to ⅛ cent down on oats.

Provisions finished 7 cents to 20 cents higher.

Wheat was without leadership for some time following the steady opening and it was anybody's market until insistent reports of foreign inquiry gave the bulls a slight advantage about the middle of the session. Cash prices were lower with the basis about unchanged.

In the last half hour shorts came in for evening-up buying and pushed all deliveries for sharp rallies. The market sentiment is sharply divided on the fundamental position of wheat, with about equal aggressiveness on either side.

Fluctuations in corn within narrow or limits than in wheat, with fair support developing on the breaks; but in the main the wheat movements ruled also in corn, where the mixed feeling quickly checked movements either way on the bulk of the trade.

Provisions sold up on commission house buying, steady hog markets, a firm cash demand and reports of a brighter outlook for exports.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—The market for coffee futures was a little easier today under scattered realizing, but seemed to be promoted by the rather unsettled showing of cables from Brazil. STOCKS AND FINANCIAL

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Profit taking by traders who had bought stocks during the recent reaction temporarily halted the upward movement of prices in today's stock market but there was unusually good buying of the copper shares, which have been lagging behind the rest of the list.

There were nospecial developments in the copper trade to account for the rise. It is a matter of almost general knowledge, however, that the statistical position of the industry has been steadily improving as the huge surplus of copper on hand after the war has been largely reduced and there has been a gradual increase in the domestic demand for the product. The price of the metal, due to the flood of imports from Chile and other South American counties, has held around 14 cents a pound.

All the active copper shares made good gains, the leaders being Utah, Inspiration and Federal Mining and Smelting preferred, each up 2½ points. Other strong spots were American Smelting, up 2¼; Anconda, up 2¼; Kennecott up 2; Chino, up 1⅝; Chile up 1¼.

Merchandising shares were strong in reflection of increased sales and expectation of heavy holiday trade. May Department Stores and Associated Dry Goods breaking through to new high records for the year.

Realizing sales were directed principally against the speculative favorites, Studebaker and Baldwin offered better resistance while Mexican Petroleum, which was down 4 points at one time, recovered all but 1¼. Standard Oil shares improved. California rising 1¼ points and New Jersey ¾.

Railroad shares, with few exceptions, lost ground. Losses of a point or more were noted in Delaware and Hudson, Lackawanna, Missouri Pacific preferred and Southern Pacific. Steel shares also were reactionary. United States Steel common and Bethlehem B dropping nearly a point and Crucible 1¼.

Total sales were 415,000 shares.

Foreign exchange rates were irregular with most changes of a nominal character. Demand Sterling sold just under $4.46 and francs checks were quoted just about 6.86 cents.

The clearing house statement showed a decrease of $14,140,000 in loans, discounts and investments, a decrease of $57,435,000 in the reserve of member banks in the federal reserve bank, an an increase of $447,000 in the reserve in the bank's own vaults. Net demand deposits decreased $14,562,000. Aggregate reserve totalled $509,975,000, making a deficit in reserves of $4,086,240 as compared with excess reserve of $51,176,020 last week.

The World's Greatest Moral Code

By WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

As a physician Jesus healed bodily diseases; as a teacher He pointed the way in which those who would follow Him can exhibit in their lives the change that has taken place in their hearts and make progress toward that perfection which is enjoined unto them.

"Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect."

The Sermon on the Mount—set forth in the sixth chapter of Luke and at much greater length in the fifth, sixth and seventh chapters of the Gospel according to Matthew—presents almost all of Christ's moral code—such a code as was never promulgated before and such a code as has not been formulated since.

This code, in itself, would be sufficient to set Christ apart from all mankind and put the stamp of the deity upon Him.

He did not have the privilege of associating with the wise men of His time and, if He had been in daily communication with them, He could not have gathered from them the wisdom that He embodied in His words, because they had no such wisdom to impart.

He could not have obtained this wisdom from the past, because it was not to be found, not even in the books of the law, with which He was familiar.

He proclaimed a new gospel and set up new standards by which men's lives should be regulated.

The Golden Rule

Take, for instance, one that has become known as the Golden Rule: "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise."

Confucius, whose words were accepted as the moral law by millions of people, stated his golden rule in the negative: Do not unto others as you would not have them do to you.

This enjoins against the doing of injury to others—it would prohibit injustice. That, of course, is to be commended; it is hard to calculate the suffering and loss that would be prevented if all refrained from doing to others that which they would not want others to do to them.

But the negative rule is not to be announced. There is a very wide gulf between refraining from wrong doing and doing good.

A letter of recommendation written according to the rule of Confucius would not be regarded as very helpful; suppose one would give a friend a recommendation like this: "I have known this man 30 years and have never known him to injure anyone." What impression would it make? It suggests that something is wanting. There is a reservation that would excite inquiry.

How different from the following: "I have known this man 30 years; he uses the Golden Rule in his daily life and does unto others that which he would have others do unto him.

A Doctrine of Action

Christ's doctrine is a doctrine of action—doing good, not merely refraining from injury. Benevolence is the keynote of Christianity.

When Christ's spirit enters into one—and how can he be otherwise a Christian—he goes about doing good. The Christian who withdraws himself from the world and is only interested in himself and his own welfare fails to appreciate the true character of Christ's teachings. "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work."

Christianity is not a lazy man's job; it is unceasing work, but work that is a pleasure because it brings joy to the worker.

But the Golden Rule is impossible unless one learns the secret.

Men will not do unto others as they would have men do unto them unless they have been initiated, so to speak, into the mysteries of the doctrine. It rests upon love and upon nothing else. We will not do good unto others in advance of favors to ourselves unless we have a reason for it, and Christ gives us the reason. Love is the cause.

Christ's reason is not a nice calculation based upon benefits received, such as Confucius taught. When asked if there was not some word that would cover all the relations of life, he answered:

"Is not reciprocity such a word?"

Reciprocity embodies the idea of mutual aid—balanced service—as if one could keep an account and make gifts received and benefits bestowed exactly balance.

All Inclusive Love

Christ did not teach the keeping of books in the doing of good. He not only inspires a love that despises selfish calculation, but a love that includes enemies in its far-flung lines.

"But I say unto you which hear, Love your enemies, do good to them which hate you, bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you."

Even cursing and persecution cannot offer a barrier to the love that Christ inculcates. No matter what another does or how he feels, love must not be chilled or turned away.

Christ goes into detail and uses for illustration the hardest case that can be found: "Unto him that smiteth thee on the one cheek offer also the other."

Even the hot blood that resents a physical injury must not be allowed to drown out love in the heart of the injured one; an unbrotherly act must not quench the spirit of brotherhood.

Some characterize love as unmanly when it is carried to this extreme; the term mollycoddle has been coined to describe one who will suffer without showing resentment.

Well, standards change. It used to be, even in this country, that the man who declined a challenge to a duel was branded as a coward; but a century has made a change, and now the man who sends a challenge is punished as a criminal.

False Standards of Honor

The same false standard of honor has led to wars without number. National insults have been paid for in blood—not the blood of the one who used the insulting language, but the blood of innocent persons. This false standard of honor among nations is destined to give way to Christ's Golden Rule.

Our nation has already entered into treaties with 30 nations, representing three-quarters of the world's population, whereby all differences and disputes, no matter what the cause, must be investigated before resort to war. Time must be allowed for the blood to cool and for the peace forces of society to be mobilized; time must be allowed for the separation of questions of honor from questions of fact.

This is a long step towards peace. It was the old form of diplomacy—shoot first and investigate afterwards—that plunged the world into the bloodiest of all wars.

Christ's code, and nothing else, will bring world peace. The song of the angels at Christ's birth—"On earth peace, good will toward men"—means peace to the individual, peace to the community, peace between states, peace between nations and peace throughout the world.

The peace rests on love at Christ taught it and on brotherhood as Christ exemplifies it.

Love's Best Proof

Christ not only tells us to love our enemies, but He explains to us how we can do so, namely, by forgiving them.

Forgiveness is the best proof of love. More than any other virtue it distinguishes Christ's teachings of men. As long as one cherishes resentment, he cannot love or even do justice.

Reference has been made to the teachings of Confucius; they are in marked contrast with the teachings of Christ on many points. When one of his followers asked him his opinion of the doctrine of rewarding evil with good, he replied:

"If you reward evil with good, with what will you reward good?" And then he announced the rule of "Reward evil with justice and reward good with good."

Christ understood human nature better than Confucius did; He understood it well enough to know that a heart which has hatred or resentment in it cannot understand what justice is. The heart must first be purged of illwill and then filled with love before it can hold the scales of justice.

One cannot obey the command, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," until he obeys the first and great commandment, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind."

We Can Control Our Love

Christ's injunction to love one's enemies teaches, by implication, a very important doctrine; namely, that love is under man's control.

The decision rests in that indefinable personality which we call man's will. It loves or hates. At its command the bodily agents help or harm.

If love were beyond control, man would not be commanded to direct it either toward God or toward one's fellows. Love can be extended, withheld, or withdrawn, according to that imperious power that rules within man's being.

This truth has a very practical application at this time when men, and even women, try to excuse sin by saying, "I am not to blame; I could not control my love."

Man can love God; he can love his neighbors; he can love even his enemies. If he can love his enemies, he ought to be able to love his wife in spite of the lure of so-called "soul-mates" and "affinities." Christ warns against the beginnings of evil.

It is Satan—the serpent—that bids one eat of the forbidden fruit, no matter in what orchard it grows. Christ's advice is plain, His wisdom unimpeachable.

The Great Teacher left nothing unsaid or undone; everything that the world needs for its moral welfare is found in Christ's teachings and in Christ's teachings alone.

THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT—TEXT OF TODAY'S BIBLE TALK BY MR. BRYAN
(Luke 6:27-38)

But I say unto you which hear, Love your enemies, do good to them which hate you.

Bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you.

And unto him that smiteth thee on the one cheek offer also the other; and him that taketh away thy cloak forbid not to take thy coat also.

Give to every man that asketh of thee; and of him that taketh away thy goods ask them not again.

And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.

For if ye love them which love you, what thank have ye? for sinners also love those that love them.

And if ye do good to them which do good to you, what thank have ye? for sinners also do even the same.

And if ye lend to them of whom ye hope to receive, what thank have ye? for sinners also lend to sinners, to receive as much again.

But love ye your enemies, and do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again; and your reward shall be great, and ye shall be the children of the Highest; for he is kind unto the unthankful and to the evil.

Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful.

Judge not, and ye shall not be judged; condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned; forgive, and ye shall be forgiven.

Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again.

Armistice Day and Thanksgiving Will Furnish Inspiration Now for Social Features of Coming Month

Armistice week, with Armistice day, Saturday, November 11th, at the very end of it, and Thanksgiving, with the frost-is-on-the-pumpkin tang in the air today and turkeys strutting back and forth over crepe paper napkins and score cards in the novelty shop windows, are already furnishing inspiration for the entertainments of the week and month. As Armistice day is the last day of this week, so Thanksgiving day is the last day of the month, and beautiful colour schemes are assured for all of November's social occasions.

The armistice celebration locally will probably be confined to the legion community program Saturday, but the social hostesses of the week will undoubtedly avail themselves of the international rainbow of colours validated as the armistice day colour scheme by the flags of the allies in the world war. And it will be safe to say that every gathering during the week where such a flag colour scheme is used will give more than a thought to the boys who fought under those flags for the freedom of the world four years ago.

Pretty Thanksgiving favors and decorations are already suggested in the show windows for use the whole month, and already a number of Thanksgiving parties have been planned. The Thanksgiving proclamation from President Harding was made Friday, and Governor Neff's is expected some time this week or next. Thanksgiving is one of the most beloved of all of the annual holidays, as it is the day on which, even more than Christmases, families are gathered together in reunions about the "festal board." It significance is a beautiful one to Americans, and many Thanksgiving days of the past are hallowed in the memory of those who recall the feast day spent with members of the older generation during their own childhood. There will be many such gatherings in Wichita Falls this year, as there are every year, while many Wichitans will journey to other towns and cities and back home to little villages to spend the day with mothers and dads.

FASHIONS

By LENORE

Here is another interesting model in which gold trimming plays an important part in giving life and attractiveness to a brown dress. It is a model imported from Patou. Brown kasha cloth is used, and you who are perhaps conservative may not like this, but the sleeves are made of white organdie, banded with gold galloon. The effect is extremely original, and pleasingly so. Of course, georgette may be substituted.

As the sketch indicates, the model favors the lines of the coat dress and make for slenderness, the effect in the back and at the sides being entirely flat, a favorite device this season. The waistline is finished with a fold of self-material intertwined with the gold galloon.

JUNIOR TRAVEL MEMBERS STUDY ALEXANDER POPE

The Junior Travel club held its regular weekly meeting Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock in the Kemp library. Pope's "Ode on Solitude" was read by Mrs. Chester Wynne, and a classification of Pope's work was given by Mrs. Napier. Mrs. Mack's excellent paper on "Pope the Pattern and Spokesman of Classicism" was read by Mrs. Duff in the absence of Mrs. Mack. Mrs. C. C. "PEANUT PARTY" FRIDAY FOR CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

A "peanut party" Friday evening at the E. S. Goodner home entertained very delightfully a group of 25 members of the Christian Endeavor of the Central Presbyterian church. The guests were kept wondering "what happens next" in the peanut world, and had to work fast to keep up with the peppy divertisements provided by the host and hostess.

The first game was a peanut hunt, in which Bertha Somerville and Shelby Read tied for honors and shared a peanut bar between them. Then a peanut race, in which Mrs. D. B. Read won and was presented a jar of peanut butter. The last and most exciting game of all was a peanut auction, a "purse" of 15 peanuts being provided each guest, who bid in interesting looking packages put up for auction by Mr. Goodner. Later these were all opened, and caused much merriment. The guests then provided a bit of entertainment themselves, giving sketches to represent the months of their births.

Refreshments of banana and peanut salad, peanut finger sandwitches, and hot chocolate and peanut candy were served.

Will Proceed With Haynes Memorial Fountain at Alamo

Work on the Kate Haynes Memorial Fountain at Alamo ward school is to be recommended at once and pushed to completion, according to announcement made by Mrs. W. S. Curlee at the Alamo Parent-Teachers Council meeting Friday afternoon.

Work on the fountain has been held up pending decision by the board as to the new school, but it has been decided that since the fountain will be movable, it will be erected at once and removed in a year or two if necessary. The erection has been held up a year, and the announcement by the committee chairman was received with approval by the council. It will take several months to complete the fountain structure, but the Georgia Marble company, which has the contract, has been notified to begin work on the carving at once.

Another feature of the council meeting Friday, which was attended by over 200 mothers, was the report of the committee in charge of the bags turned in by the children. This was to the effect that $113 was realized from the bags, and is to be used for a playground equipment benefit. The cafeteria report, which was heard with much interest, was to the effect that the receipts and disbursements of the cafeteria committee are still breaking even, and that between 250 and 400 children are fed daily at the lunchroom at an average expenditure of 15 cents. Milk is in demand and over 200 half pint bottles are sold daily to the children. Other articles on the menu, none of which sell for over 50 cents, include plate lunches of roll roast, creamed potatoes and hot roll, all for 5 cents, or a plate lunch of veal loaf, candied yam, and hot roll, for 5 cents; fruit salad is 5 cents and lettuce with thousand island dressing is 5 cents. Pastry, milk, etc., are all 5 cents each. This past term the receipts were $1327.55 and expenditures $1323.75, with a margin of $2.80 profit for eight weeks. This report is probably not duplicated in cost of school lunches anywhere in the state. The cafeteria was practically furnished through the generosity of local business men and school patrons, at a cost of $548.

A feature of the program, which preceded the business session, was Mrs. Luther Hoffman's talk on the "Practical Value of Art," which was very much appreciated. Mrs. J. L. Downing gave the devotional and the mothers were very much delighted with a solo by Ivan Murchison, a reading by Mrs. J. T. Harrell, and a piano soel by Mrs. O. J. McKnight. Mrs. L. R. Buchanan presided over the meeting.

Mrs. C. W. Reid, chairman of the Christmas bazaar committee, announced that the council will hold a bazaar just before the holidays, with gifts sold slightly above actual cost of materials.

The campaign for a 100 per cent membership was reported getting along fast, and the mothers expect to be able to report a full membership at the coming state meeting of the Texas Congress of Mothers.

ALATHEANS ENTERTAINED THURSDAY AT THE CHURCH

The Alatheans of the First Baptist Sunday school were entertained at the church parlors Thursday afternoon by members of group one of the class, of which Mrs. E. L. Smith is leader. The social meeting followed the business meeting, at which 100 calls were reported on sick and strangers.

The program included readings Miss Anita Walker and Mrs. Pearl Smith, music numbers by Miss Winnie Smith, Miss Higgins, Mr. Young, and Mrs. Ray Wilhite, and Hallowe'en contests and games, featuring a "get acquainted" game. During one of these contests Mrs. D. O. Johnson learned to call by name 15 mebmers whose acquaintance she had not previously made, while several other members did almost as well.

A delightful salad refreshment plate was served to the following members and guests: Mesdames Paul Morgan, D. O. Johnson, C. J. Milliron, George A. Patterson, J. W. McCormick, Lane M. Roseberry, Newton Huff, Neal Powers, R. G. Fuqua, C. L. Williams, W. J. Webb, Roy Burland, E. W. Wood, Roy Beach, H. C. Owens, J. M. Lindsey, C. L. Bradford, C. J. REBEKAHS AND I. O. O. F. TACKY PARTY MONDAY

The Rebekahs invited their brother I. O. O. F. members to celebrate Hallowe'en with them Monday night following the regular meeting of the Rebekah lodge, a "tacky" party being designated in the invitation.

A most entertaining part of the social was the clever impersonations given by some of the costumed members, and among others the Katzenjammer family was most amusing. Mrs. J. C. Hayes as "Ma" J. C. Hayes as der "professor," Mrs. J. L. Perry as Fritz, Mrs. Woolsey as Hans, and J. T. Martin the captain played very successful parts.

Old fashioned games and an interesting program of music furnished other entertainment, with a grand march led by Hans and Fritz past the judges stand. Prizes for the tackiest lady, Mrs. Ada McAda, the tackiest gentleman, Mr. J. C. Hayes, the prettiest lady, Mrs. Woolsey, the handsomest gentleman, J. T. Perry, were awarded and refreshments of coffee and pie were served to about eighty-five guests.

Cypher and Bachelor Club Balls, Business Women's Masquerade, and Luncheons and Bridge Feature Week

Hallowe'en is finally past, after beginning ten days before the date, continuing through the week and covering a period of two weeks with black cats, witches, pumpkin jack-o'-lanterns, and other decorations appropriate to the occasion.

Featuring the period were the big Cypher Hallowe'en ball at Kemp hotel Tuesday night, the Bachelor's club dance the night preceding, the Civic League Hallowe'en tea, the Business Women's masquerade at the club rooms Thursday night, and several beautiful class luncheons and bridge parties. Hallowe'en has never lasted so long before, in the history of the Woman's Page editor's experience, but it has never been justified in lasting so long.

The novelty houses must have set the sky for their limit this year in thinking of beautiful and original features for Hallowe'en decorations and favors, for every local diatributor of such things had shelves, bolts, boxes, miles, acres and bushels of them. The significance of the date, heretofore offering something of an inspiration for the majority of Hallowe'en parties, has wavered into the fairyland of goblins and witches instead of real spooks and departed spirits, and by taking unto itself a different channell has gained vastly in popularity. Anyway, with its general colour offering of yellow and black—pumpkin and witch—fitting in with the autumn colour scheme of yellows and reds, the Hallowe'en period is justified in stretching over as long a period as possible. It's a wonderful time to give a party, so long may its zenith survive.

Other Hallowe'en social features the past week at which more than 100 guests were gathered included the beautiful annual luncheon of the First Church Wesley Girls at Kemp Hotel, the Hallowe'en membership social at the First Christian church for the aid society members and their friends, the Epworth league Hallowe'en party at the Lank Thornberry home Tuesday evening, the Alathean Hallowe'en social Thursday at the First Baptist church; the Floral Heights Methodist mission anniversary party Monday, and the Rebekah-I. O. O. F. Hallowe'en tacky party Monday night. Scores of weekly bridge parties, small luncheons, and children's Hallowe'en parties helped fill the week to the brim with Hallowe'en festivals.

CYPHER CLUB HALLOWE'EN MASQUERADE BALL TUESDAY

The Cypher club masquerade ball at Kemp hotel Tuesday evening was a very delightful affair, with the dancers en costume for the Hallowe'en hop. Splendid music was a feature of the dance, furnished by the Peponians' orchestra. The musicians were in yellow and black domino suits, and the hall was decorated in black and yellow, with pumpkin lanterns and black cats, while apples were strung across the hall.

Miss Gay Gwynne and John Tancred Jr. led the grand march, after which Hallowe'en horns were distributed and carnival streamers wove a pattern of bright colors through the air and about the dancers. The host and hostess committee included Mr. and Mrs. Wylie Wyatt and Mesdames P. Y. Gwynne and A. Kahn, and the dancers included the following: Messrs. and Mesdames J. R. Stephens, B. B. Day, F. C. LITTLE VISITOR HAS A PRETTY PARTY WEDNESDAY

Little Miss Mary Jane Hayers of Oklahoma City, who is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Eli Morgan, was hostess at a pretty birthday party celebrating her fifth anniversary Wednesday afternoon of last week.

The house was attractively decorated for the occasion, and when the children were invited into dining room they found it a regular Hallowe'en retreat. The birthday cake with its five candles was the centerpiece for the table, and refreshments of ice cream, cake and animal crackers were served.

Before they were invited into the dining room games were played, and in the Hallowe'en contest little Elizabeth Fisher and Billie Jean Caskey won prizes. Favors of Hallowe'en horns were given, and the little hostess herself received a number of lovely gifts from her friends. The following children enjoyed the occasion: Elizabeth Fisher, Nettie Mae Baber, Billie Jean Caskey, Mary C. Miller, Charles Parker, Walter Morgan, Charles Miller, J. S. Pope Jr., John Tabor Burris, Charles Meadors and Bobbie Honea.

JAPANESE PROGRAM FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL SUNDAY

At the Central Presbyterian Sunday school this morning the children of the primary department will give a pretty little Japanese program, comprising readings and a Japanese playlet in costume. In the playlet the characters will be the spirits of Japanese children and Christian children, kindergarten children and school children.

FOR DINNER WEAR

The object of this hat is not to provide ventilation but to make an interesting setting for a pretty face.

It achieved what it started out to do, you'll note.

To a crown of black velvet is joined a brim of fashionable width composed of a coarse mesh of chenille.

It is designed for restaurant or dinner wear, and is the ideal accompaniment for a sleeveless frock of black velvet.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Woman to Woman Talks

LET'S STOP WORRYING AND BE HAPPY

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

"America's Most Popular Woman Writer for Women"

KATHLEEN NORRIS SAYS:

If only worries were tangible—visible burdens weighing 10 or 12 or 20 pounds—how quickly we would dispose of them!

Certain little Russian born tailor in one of our big cities shot himself and has taken in a dying condition to a hospital. He had no wife, no children dependent upon him, a flourishing little business, good health, and a bank account.

But he had seen, in a newspaper some months before, the figures of America's national debt, and brooding upon it, and worrying about it, and fretting at his own powerlessness to settle it, actually drove him to melancholy and to suicide.

His neighbors reported that he had been unable to discuss anything else for weeks: what was America thinking about—was she going crazy? He would bite his nails and tremble, and lie awake figuring out the interest at five per cent—and five and a half per cent—and at last he couldn't stand it any longer.

Most women's worrying doesn't carry them quite so far, and they don't think of it as being so fantastic and absurd as was the concern of the poor little tailor. And yet most of us pick up a neat little pack of worries every morning, as we dress and breakfast, and carry them about with us, cumbersome and heavy, all day long.

If Worries Were Tangible

If only worries were tangible—visible burdens weighing 10 or 12 or 20 pounds—how quickly we would dispose of them!

"Here!" we would say indignantly, "I'm not going to pack this brick, and this bag of tacks, and these bars of soap and these flat irons wherever I go? Where do they belong? I can't be bothered with them a minute longer!"

But, unfortunately, worries aren't visible and tangible. They are all the heavier, all the clumsier, because they not only can't be seen, but we so often feel that they must not even be faced or suspected.

Women worry themselves sick about their husbands, their children, their houses, and yet it is the code to answer the concerned question, "What's the matter, mother?" with a bright, "Nothing, dear!"

As a matter of fact, lots of us are rather secretly proud of the way we worry.

I get to thinking about Tom's business—and poor Mary's teeth, dear knows what they'll cost!" we say complacently, "and I just don't sleep!"

And we all add, quite untruthfully, "Wouldn't life be wonderful if only one didn't have the worries!"

Worrying Is Selfish

Yet 99 per cent of the worrying we do is entirely unnecessary, and stupid and selfish as well.

Selfish? Certainly. What could be more selfish than a woman I know who talks somewhat like this:

"Yes, the laboratory test was perfectly neutral; they say positively it's not cancer. But you know how doctors deceive you! And when I think—if I should be taken now, with the baby so young, and poor Billy obliged to live with his sister, and our dear little home not yet paid for—

"And then there's mother, too. She'd have to go to my brother in Nebraska, and she idolizes the baby—she'll never see her—

"I do try to be cheerful, I do try to keep up, but I just can't! And of course when I break down it nearly kills mother and Billy—"

"Don't worry about mother and Billy; think of yourself!" we say tenderly, not realizing that it is entirely too much thinking about herself that has brought up the whole problem.

Like tens of thousands of other women, this woman has an entirely imaginary growth, and instead of either living, or dying outright, she is dragging along enjoyably, eternally in the domestic spot-light, eternally praised for her heroism.

Cancer Worries

The cancer worries are legion. Healthy, happy busy little Mrs. Davis in the next block, is carried off with a few hours' notice with flu; courageous, useful Old Lady Baker drops dead while she is walking to the club; but Minnie Smith and her eternal and incurable disease go on forever.

Almost all the old ladies are the girls who had consumption, heart failure or cancer in the roaring seventies.

But apart from the sickness worriers, how many varieties of worriers there are!

Women who fidget and are nervous in theaters, on boats, in motor cars.

Women who are always alertly and anxiously watching for germs.

Women who are honeycombing the safe and sane old earth with pitfalls for their children.

You and I know hundreds of women whose minds are filled with a confusion like this, all day long and half the night:

"Oh, dear, he forget his commutation again—oh, dear. She's banging the breakfast dishes terribly this morning—she'll probably go. I don't care—I hope she does. He said the spot would come out—oh, dear, if it doesn't—right there in front.

"Fannie had a cough like that when she was going into scarlet fever— wonder if Baby ought to go to dancing class, with that cough? She'd probably get something worse.

She wants me on her silly committee—I may have sounded cold—I didn't mean to, but I simply haven't time. That spareroom closet—I ought to go over it before the Red Cross man comes.

"Examination of Conscience"

"If I scramble home after the meeting I can simply snatch my other hat—6:30 dinner, but they'll wait—my goodness—my goodness—my goodness—the ice card! Those chickens down there without any ice—"

And so on and on ad infinitem. So that when the inevitable outburst of nervous irritability comes, they can only say in apology:

"I'm so sorry. But I've got so much on my mind, and I'm so worried that I'm almost beside myself!"

In the church of the middle ages there arose a practice known as "the examination of conscience." It supposedly consists of a mental review of only the wrong doing of the day. But it is a marvelous thing when it is done simply as it stands: as an examination of consciousness, a few quiet minutes of study of the emotions, motives and acts of one's waking hours.

The good, the bad, the weak, the strong, the clear and the confused seconds pass in their turn, and the result is a spiritual clarity of thought that makes the next day much more a matter of deliberate selection, much less one of pell-mell blundering in the dark.

Four Classes of Worries

So faced, at the end of the tiring day, all worries fall into four classes.

1. The things one cannot possibly help; like the little business matter that went wrong in Bill's office, or the broken leg of a small nephew in Alabama, or the sudden cold snap.

2. The things that don't matter; like the tone of the car conductor who wouldn't take a perfectly good transfer, or the flabby pie that one served to unexpected guests, or the extra 15 cents on the gas bill.

3. The worries one should face simply and honestly; the hard "I was wrong—forgive me," that will smooth out some miserable misunderstanding; the difficult "I thought we could, but we really cannot afford it," or the hardest of all, to son or daughter, "It is impossible, dear. Daddy disapproves, and I will not help you to do anything without his knowledge."

And 4. The tiny residue of real worry, that will not down. But in this class come only things too big to be catalogued so—the grief that lives on and on; the daily contemplation of a character that is hopelessly weak; the needs of our dear ones that we may not relieve; the long-ago mistake that is bearing bitter fruit even today.

But here we have to remember that there is a God, and that there is a plan.

We knew that grief is one of the vital things of life, an accolade rather than a loss, and that they are blessed who have loved enough, and served enough, truly to mourn, and they will be comforted.

The character that is weak, no matter how close and how loved, cannot be helped by your complaints, your fears, and mine. Build about that character definite good, a strong belief in its ultimate success and happiness, and you will do all that earthly—and even a little bit that heavenly—means can do.

And the needs of our dear ones? How we would love to buy the cottage for mother, to set the shining motor car before Bob's door, and say, "Happy birthday!"

But the only real gift is love—whether it is expressed by the Hope diamond or by the unexpected rice pudding at supper.

Just to have one's bed smoothly made, and the room swept and aired, is a gift (at the end of a long office day) never to be forgotten, a gift beside which the listed jewels and silver and furs of New York itself would look only what they really are—a mountain of soulless junk!

Many and many a rich woman looks apathetically at her gifts on Christmas morning—the check, yes, and the mahogany table, yes, and the rug—really it is stunning, isn't it?—at the very moment that some lucky little shop girl in a flat a mile or so away is gasping, between laughter and tears:

"Oh, mother—you got me the umbrella, you darling! And Bob had my room papered—it looks like a different place! And Aunt Mary told me I could have her old bureau, and that she was going to come over and help you get Christmas dinner—I don't know why everybody's so wonderful!"

As for those long-ago mistakes, those silly, irreparable things we did when life was a reckless daisy meadow and any road seemed the right road—well, you and I are not the first to see our mistakes and have to pay.

But that is life. If you and I were perfect, we should long ago have been crucified between thieves.

We are human, we stumble, regret it, stumble again. If we are really going somewhere, learning something, growing all the while, then what of the little humiliation, the sense of material loss, the maddening conviction of stupidity that we have to bear?

Some of the greatest lives ever lived have been the retrieved lives, the histories of men and women who made their errors, paid the price, and went on all the stronger.

Only, don't worry about it.

Write down, today, the 10 things that worry you most. Put the list away, and take it out again, say next March.

You'll have one good laugh out of the silly business of worrying, at least!

You won't be able even to remember some of the 10. And of the others you will say with little Alice:

"Oh, pshaw! You're nothing but a pack of cards!"

This is one of a series of woman to woman talks on present day family and social problems that Mrs. Norris, American's best loved and most popular woman writer, is writing especially for this newspaper. Another talk will be printed next Sunday.

As a matter of fact, lots of us are rather secretly proud of the way we worry.

Ninety-nine per cent of the worrying we do is entirely unnecessary, and stupid and selfish as well.

The cancer worries are legion. Healthy, happy, busy little Mrs. Davis is carried off with a few hours notice with the flu; useful Old Lady Baker drops dead, while she is walking to the club; but Minnie Smith and her eternal and incurable disease go on forever.

Style Makers of France Will Bring Back Waist Line

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Paris style makers, having demonstrated that they can raise or lower women's skirts in France almost as easily as they manipulate a window shade, now are getting ready to bring back the vanished waist line, which went into the discard along with corsets.

This was the word brought back from France today by David M. Mosessohn, head of the Associated Dress Industries of America—word which he said leaked out at the conferences now being held to determine next spring's styles.

(Page Editor's Note—If the Paris style makers have as little success with bringing back the "vanished waist line" however, as they had lowering the hem line of skirts in America, there isn't much to worry about in the report for those who don't care for waist lines!)

Young Girls Need Care

FROM the age of twelve a girl needs all the care the thoughtful mother can give. Many a woman has suffered years of pain and misery—the victim of thoughtlessness or ignorance of the mother who should have guided her during this time.

If she complains of headaches, pains in the back and lower limbs, or if you notice a slowness of thought, nervousness or irritability on the part of your daughter make life easier for her.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is especially adapted for such conditions. It can be taken in safety by any woman, young or old.

Read How These Mothers Helped Their Daughters

Greenville, Del.—"I was under the impression that my eldest daughter had some internal trouble as ever since the first time her sickness appeared she had to go to bed and even had to quit school once for a week. I always take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound myself so I gave it to her and she has received great benefit from it. You can use this letter for a testimonial if you wish, as I can not say too much about what your medicine has done for us."—Mrs. Wm. S. Hughes, Greenville, Del.

Wauseon, O.—"My daughter always had backache and legache at certain periods and could not be on her feet. We read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound doing girls so much good so she began to take it. That is two years ago and she is a different girl since then, able to do any work she wants to do—and so well and strong. We recommend the Vegetable Compound to mothers with ailing daughters."—Mrs. A. M. Burkholder, Route No. 2, Box 1, Wauseon, Ohio.

BAPTISTS OF TEXAS ARE MAKING DRIVE TO COMPLETE THEIR QUOTA OF THE $75,000,000 ANNUAL FUND

DALLAS Nov. 4—With only two weeks in which to complete the drive for $1,500,000, which Texas Baptists are making as payment on pledges to the 75 Million Campaign, a group of prominent Baptist leaders throughout the state have issued an appeal calling upon the demonination to make the campaign a success.

Dr. F. S. Groner, general secretary of the Executive Board of the convention, reports that receipts this year are in excess of the receipts for the corresponding time in last year's campaign. The final results of the campaign will be made known at the meeting of the convention in Waco, beginning November 16.

The appeal, signed by leading Baptists of the state, is as follows:

All of this cooperative work, let us ever remind ourselves, is wholly dependent upon our voluntary cooperation. This state levies taxes for the carrying forward of its enterprises, Christ's cause is carried forward by the voluntary gifts of His friends. Everyone of us is therefore put upon his or her sacred honor, both in the sight of the people and in God's sight, to give our utmost loyalty and support to that cause in which are enwrapped the highest hopes and the supremest interests of mankind, both for today and for the long tomorrow.

God is setting his seal in a marvelous way to the work that is now done by our Baptist people. Their great program in recent years has been so startling in daring, and so wonderful in cooperation, as to challenge the attention of mankind around the globe. In the wake of such vastly enlarged program, new missionaries have gone forth by the hundreds, and new converts have confessed Christ and followed him in beautiful baptism, by the hundreds of thousands. Our Christian schools have all been strengthened and enlarged, and trained Christian students are being sent forth in every enlarging numbers to strengthen the churches and to bless the world. Our orphanage and hospitals have been greatly fortified and new ones built, so that God's grace is being gloriously exemplified by the ministry of healing. Our churches and all their agencies have been so vitalized and blessed by our enlarged program as to call forth devout thanksgivings from all our hearts. For Texas Baptists to be half hearted in such an hour as this, or to allow themselves to be diverted from the work of caring wisely and worthily for their present "Catch-Up Campaign," would be far worse than a tragedy—it would be treasonable to the incomparable trust committed to us by our Lord Jesus Crist, and treasonable to the highest welfare of souls for whom he died.

There are well known influences at work to divert Texas Baptists from their great campaign. For one thing, there is going on a state-wide political campaign, with an election soon to follow. We would not minimize the duty of Christions to be true to the high obligations upon them in the realm of civil government but we would from our deepest heartr adjure them not only to "Render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's," but also to remember to "Render unto God the things which are God's." God's people are to have the sense of perspective, the right viewpoint—they are to seek first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness. It is righteousness which always exalts a nation, while sin is ever a reproach and a waste to the people. If Christ's cause should be ignored, then nothing would be stable and safe in the social order. For a people to seek to build a civilization without regard to the will of God would be to build it on the shifting sands. Christ's cause is the one only hope and help for humanity, in all realms. That cause should be given the first place, every moment, in all our lives.

We would speak here briefly but frankly, concerning the well known and noisily aggressive and spectacular efforts, that are being put forth in Texas, not only to hinder the present campaign but also to cheapen and hinder the advancement of all the co-operative work fostered by our Texas and Southern Baptist Conventions. Texas Baptists will meet this opposition just as they have met such opposition before; that is to say, they will completely answer and expose the inaccurate and reckless stream of statements sent near and far, concerning our Baptist work and workers, and they will at the same time redouble their efforts to provide worthy gifts to care for the work. We send the frank word to our brethren and sisters everywhere, that while the opposition above referred to is both deplorable and inexcusable, yet the outcome of such opposition to Christ's cause will be what it has always been before—pitiful confusion and shame to those who have trifled with Christ's work, and greatly added triumph to the work itself. We will now remember Paul's great word: "But I would ye should understand, brethren, that the things which happened unto me have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the Gospel." We will also remember his faithful admonition to "Stand fast in one spirit, with one mind, striving together for the faith in the Gospel; and in nothing terrified by your adversaries; which is to them an evident token of peridition, but to you of salvation, and that of God."

The whole situation makes the most challenging appeal to pastors, deacons and all other officials in all our churches. God grant that every leader in every church in Texas may now lead the people in this campaign according to the will of God. And may the people in the churches, all the estates of all the people likewise make just that response to this campaign which shall be according to the will of God! Through every day and hour leading up to the Waco convention, let us all and each, by prayer, by personal testimony, by our best gifts, seek to fortify the campaign according to the will of God. And in the Waco Convention a few days hence, let us gather, the Lord willing, to take most faithful counsel with one another and with God how to win still more glorious victories in His name in the great days which are just ahead.

VERNON, TEXAS, Nov. 4.—The stockholders of the Wilbarger County Fair association expressed the belief that the 1922 fair which will be held in Vernon will be one of the biggest and best in the history of Wilbarger county. All of the stockholders at the annual meeting expressed themselves as favoring a permanent fair and are making plans to that end.

The following officers and directors were elected for the ensuing year: Lon Byars, president; A. M. Dourland, vice president; J. V. Townsend, secretary; Harry Mason, Adam Donges, Cecil Storey, W. S. Lundy, Joe A. Napier, T. C. Frost, W. T. Collins, E. P. Robertson and Fred Streit, directors.

Conspicuous nose pores grow larger if neglected

THE pores of your face are not as fine as those on other parts of your body.

On the nose, especially, there are more fat glands, and there is more activity of the pores. If these pores are not properly stimulated and cleansed, they clog up and become enlarged.

To reduce enlarged pores, follow every night this simple treatment:

WRING a soft cloth from very hot water, lather it with Woodbury's Facial Soap, then hold it to your face.

When the heat has expanded the pores, rub in very gently a fresh lather of Woodbury's.

Repeat this hot water and lather application several times, stopping at once if your nose feels sensitive.

Finish by rubbing the nose for 30 seconds with a piece of ice.

DO not expect to change in a week a condition resulting from long neglect. But follow the treatment persistently and you will reduce the enlarged pores and make them inconspicuous.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today. A 25-cent cake lasts for a month or six weeks.

Little Journeys to the Homes of Friends of CARDUI

Mrs. Vernie Webb
Light Keeper

OVER 2,200 years ago, Ptolemy II., King of Egypt, (the King who first had the Old Testament translated from the ancient Hebrew) erected, on Pharos, one of the islands of Greece, the first lighthouse known to history.

Today, there are so many lighthouses, all over the world, that we have come to look on them as commonplace and without much interest. Only the hardy mariner realizes their value, as he strains his eyes to look for the saving light, through the storm and fog.

In 1852, the Lighthouse Board of the U. S. was organized by Act of Congress, and the Lighthouse Service of the United States Government is now a part of the Department of Commerce.

Mrs. Vernie Webb, lightkeeper at the confluence of the Elk and Kanawha rivers, near Charleston, W. Va., is one of the comparatively few women lightkeepers in the employ of the U. S. Government While on a journey through this part of the country, I made the acquaintance of this interesting woman, and learned many facts about her work and daily life.

Some lighthouse keepers have to live in stern, forbidding, lonely structures, rising perhaps on a rock, out at sea, where fog almost continuously obscures the view, while wind and storm render the lonely spot a true prison, a place where strong men have been known to lose their minds; but this little woman has a pleasanter home, nestled on the bank of the river, looking down on a neighborly colony of houseboats, clustered on the stream, in a nearby nook, brightly painted, fitted with lace curtains, comfortably furnished, and decorated with flowers and vines—supplied, in brief, with all the comforts of more solidly built homes.

Into this cozy little nest I was cordially invited by Mrs. Webb, and spent some pleasant hours of bright, cheery conversation with her, taking away with me a vivid remembrance of the personality of one of the most earnest workers and conscientious people with whom I have ever come in contact.

For 11 or 12 years, Mrs. Vernie Webb, who loves the river, has lived here in comfort and happiness, part of this time having been spent in one of the pretty houseboats. The beacon light that she tends is simple but serviceable, being composed of a large lantern, affixed to three floating wooden crossties, built V-shape, and anchored near a wall in the river. This wall was built by the Government to deepen the channel and, at times, is hidden by the water, forming a dangerous bar, upon which any ship might easily be wrecked.

To this bar, rain or shine, snow or storm, Mrs. Webb must row from her home up the river, get the lamp and take it home, clean it and fill it, and in the evening take it back, light it and place it in position, as a beacon to river craft, who have come to depend on it for their safety during night navigation at this precarious spot. Formerly this work was done by a man, but when he moved away, Mrs. Webb applied for and obtained the position, which she has now held for over five years.

Floods and storms would long ago have daunted a weaker heart than that of this brave employee of the United States Lighthouse Service, but steadfastly she does her work, and brightly the little light shines every night, as a sign of her conscientious devotion to duty. In the interim she enjoys herself, womanlike, in attending to the household work of her attractive home.

Four years ago, a terrible ice jam occurred on the river, and when the thaw came and the ice broke up, a veritable avalanche of floating bergs and floes came sweeping down with the flood, tearing boats and barges from their moorings and doing great damage. During this time there was grave danger to the little boat upon which Mrs. Webb depends for earning her salary in looking after the light. Having no one to help her, she, herself, had to protect her boat from the floating ice, and for many hours she had to take her position on the boat, and fend off the grinding ice floes, which threatened the destruction of her property. Although almost exhausted, she stood fast until the danger had passed, and that same night the light was burning brightly in the spot near the dangerous bar, where it had burned continuously for so many years.

Life in the Webb cottage must be pleasant, indeed, when Mr. and Mrs. Webb are both at home. Mr. Webb, however, being a railroad man, is often away, and so two large dogs protect the place in his absence. There is plenty of work for a good home-maker around the little cottage, for Mrs. Webb keeps a cow, grows vegetables and flowers, and keeps everything spick and span, varying her household duties now and again by taking her "John-boat" on a trip to town, where she can do her shopping and perhaps drop in, for an hour or so, at the movies.

Regretfully terminating my interesting visit, I took with me a statement about Cardui, the woman's tonic, which Mrs. Webb gave me, covering information offered by her during our desultory conversation, and before my departure put into the form of a signed statement, with privilege of publication, for the benefit of other women.

Mrs. Webb, in her "John-Boat," rowing out to tend the Beacon Light on the Elk and Kanawha Rivers.

Mrs. Webb's Statement

I was taken sick and grew so weak and run down I could not do my work. I got so weak I couldn't row my boat. I was weak and nervous.

My work is to light the light in the river to keep the boats off the wall. I could not go out at all.

I fretted quite a good deal, so began to look for something to take. Some friend suggested CARDUI, and I found it all it was recommended. I began its use and in two weeks I was back lighting the beacon. I grew stronger. I owe my good health to Cardui. It built me up wonderfully.

Maids and Matrons Club

The regular meeting of the Maids and Matrons club was held this week with Mrs. D. B. Benson. The president appointed two committees. One, to have the club lot leveled up, the other, to have trees set out around the lot.

The program was a continuation of the study of Rudyard Kipling. "They" being the story on which two very interesting papers were written by Mrs. Donald and Miss Moore. Mrs. Galaway told of Kipling's debt to Bert Hart and Mark Twain and Mrs. H. T. Ayres discussed "Animals and inanimate objects as characters in Kipling's Tales." Mrs. Young concluded the program with a humorous reading.

Miss Wagne Millikin of St. Jo was a guest of the club.

"The Neighbors"

The Dramatic Art club of this city last Friday evening gave an entertainment complimenting the ladies of the several clubs of the city and their husbands or friends, extending an invitation to the clubs. The entertainment was in the nature of a one-act drama, "The Neighbors," by Zona Gale, one of the most popular of the modern day play writers.

The entertainment was given in the auditorium of the chamber of commerce and long before time for the curtain to rise the hall was filled and it was necessary to improvise seats. Of course, there was a hum all over the audience, as the several guests visited with each other, but this was changed immediately on the rising of the curtain to laughter.

The rendition of "The Neighbors" required only about an hour, but in that hour was crowded more good, wholesome enjoyment than one could imagine. The rendition was directed by Mrs. Mangum, and she had selected for the cast some of Bowie's most talented "actresses" and so well balanced was the cast that the audience almost forgot that they were witnessing a play, and felt more like they were looking into the home of these good neighbors, who were so much interested in providing for the arrival of a little boy who never arrived. Following is the cast:

Grandma—Mrs. H. R. Williamson. Mis' Diantha Abel—Mrs. D. E. Warren. Ezra Watkins—Miss Alberta Jameson. Peter— Miss Edrye Raines. Inez—Miss Mary Francis Waltman. Mis' Elmira Moran—Mrs. H. L. Turns. Mis' Trot—Miss Carolyn Crisp. Miss Carry Ellsworth—Miss Lena Giles.

Haskell
SOCIAL ITEMS.

HASKELL, TEXAS, Nov. 4.—Last Friday and Saturday there was the largest crowd in Haskell in its history.

The Fair exhibit building was very pretty with its artistically decorated booths but that in itself did not draw the large crowds, but the fact that the merchants each had something to give away at his booth, some hot biscuits and coffe or cakes and coffee, others samples of different groceries; one man gave away boxes of axle greece.

The rodeo was quite a drawing card.

The Parent-Teachers association, which, assisted by the business men of the town, put the Fair over, cleared something over $700, which will be used for the benefit of the schools, and they plan to make it an annual affair and have it on a larger scale.

After the lesson Mrs. Douglas of Hamlin, who has traveled extensively and visited the best art galleries in Europe, lectured on art and explained some of the pictures in the Elson art exhibit, which was in the building at that time.

Elson Art Exhibit.

Mrs. J. U. Fields was instrumental in bringing the Elson Art exhibit to Haskell for the benefit of the school children. The exhibit was placed in the library and Mrs. Fields and Mrs. Douglas of Hamlin explained the pictures. All the school children viewed them Thursday. They are good copies of the best pictures by the best artists and were enjoyed and appreciated very much by the children as well as the women.

Hallowe'en Party.

Class No. 6 of the First Christian church gave a delightfully planned party Tuesday evening in the basement of the church to the young people's classes of the other churches.

Jack o' lanterns and other decorations converted the room into a veritable spook land.

After a pleasant evening spent in playing games and doing stunts pumpkin pie and coffee were served to 85 guests.

Mrs. J. E. Bernard of this city has accepted the chairmanship of the Christmas seal campaign for Haskell county, which has been assigned a quota of $400.

Mrs. W. P. Garvin Dies.

Mrs. W. P. Garvin, wife of Rev. W. P. Garvin, former pastor of the Methodist church here a number of years, died at her home in Vernon Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Garvin was much loved here.

Dedication Service.

The Methodist people of the Whit's Chapel community have bought the Whit chapel school house and Rev. J. T. Hicks, presiding elder of the Stamford district, conducted the dedicatory service there at 11 o'clock Sunday. The people for miles around came and brought their lunch and at the noon hour there was a most delicious and bountiful luncheon served to the large crowd.

After lunch the young people enjoyed a singing until 3 o'clock, when Rev. Mr. Morris, the pastor, preached his farewell sermon. Altogether it was a most enjoyable and profitable day for every one.

The progressive people of this community are building an up-to-date school building about a mile south of the church.

He Is Looking 'Em Over Again

"Eight years of stomach and liver trouble reduced me to a walking skeleton. My skin was dried up and as yellow as a twenty-dollar gold piece. I was filled with gas and had severe pains in my right side. I could not think and had lost all ambition to do anything. Doctors' medicine did not touch me. My cousin advised Mayr's Wonderful Remedy, which snatched me from the grave. I have gained sixty pounds, eat like a hired man and am looking 'em over again." It is a simple, harmless preparation, that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Mack Taylor and druggists everywhere.—adv.

MOVIE CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK AT THE LOCAL THEATRES

A Woman's Woman Coming to Strand Starting Monday

News of paramount interest to motion picture theatre goers, is contained in the announcement by the management of the Strand theatre that the widely discussed and much-heralded photoplay, "A Woman's Woman," with Mary Alden in the leading feminine role, and supported by an all-star cast, has been booked as the feature attraction for three days, beginning Monday.

"A Woman's Woman" has been the cause of much comment wherever shown for the reason that it is a picture that tells an actually truthful story of that sort of inner home life that is to be found every day everywhere, whether it be in Main street, Gopher Prairie, or in the exclusive social circles of the bigger cities. And from all who have seen this remarkable picture come words of praise for production, story, star and cast, direction and photography. Patrons of the Strand, Manager Day declares, have a genuine screen treat awaiting them.

"A Woman's Woman" is a Charles Giblyn production, and a film adaptation of Mrs. Naibro Bartley's Saturday Evening Post story of the same title. Indeed, so closely does the picture follow the story that the screen characters have the same names as those in Mrs. Bartley's story. It tells the story of a woman, who after twenty years of married life finds herself facing a choice of two paths. Will she continue to accept the role of the unpaid domestic drudge, who has sacrificed everything for husband and children except her own personal ideals, which long have been submerged, or will she cease to be the homemaker, branch out and keep pace with the times.

Tony vs. Morvich

A similarity in the lives of Morvich, the great race horse, and of Tony, the famous horse owned by Tom Mix, the Fox star, who has been starred in his own right in a new Mix picture known as "Just Tony" and based on Max Brand's novel "Alcatraz," which comes to the Strand Thursday.

It will be remembered that when Morvich was a colt he was regarded as the most disappointing piece of horseflesh ever foaled. He had bad knees and his owner believed that making a race horse of him was impossible. But the whole world knows that despite bad knees Morvich became a world's champion.

So it was with Tony. He was an undersized, awkward, unattractive little fellow, and when he rambled around the stable yard on his ridiculous legs, everybody laughed at him. Poor little Tony seemed to be of no particular color and no particular good in the world.

But one day Pat Chrisman, pal of Tom Mix, was scouting for new horses to add to the Mix ranch. He saw Tony and marvelled at the intelligence of the little fellow, who followed Pat around like a dog, took apples and sugar out of his pocket and untied knots with his teeth. Pat is a horseman from his baldspot to his bunion and he saw possibilities in Tony.

Pat immediately told Mix to go out and take a look at the youngster. Tom saw all the good points that Pat did and others that Pat didn't see. The result was that Tom bought Tony and became not only his owner, but his idol. He trained the pony himself, with the assistance of Chrisman, and now Tony is the most famous horse in pictures and is loved by all Tom's great following of fans. The horse soon outgrew his ugly duckling stage and became a handsome chestnut color, with perfect limbs and a wonderfully intelligent head. Only recently Tony was posed as the model for a bronze statue symbolizing the early west.

JACK DOTY COMING BACK

Jack Doty, here last season with Lewis-Worth, is coming to the Palace theater with the Edna Park Players for an indefinite stock engagement, opening Monday, November 13, in "Fair and Warmer."

There has never been a funnier scene written than the one in which Billy and Bianney, the two central characters in the laugh riot, "Fair and Warmer," toy with Billy's "home brew" wagon until they see green elevators, skyscrapers and heaven knows what not. It lacks everything that can be made offensive in such episodes and includes every essential requisite to irresistible, wholesome comedy. The person who can sit through this scene without laughing has lost his funny bone. And it is only one in the farce that was admitted by Broadway critics to be the brightest of its kind produced in years.

Daring Horseback Leap Is Performed By William Duncan

Not since the days when he electrified millions with his daring in serial work has William Duncan "pulled" such a coup as that which occurs just preceding the finish of "The Fighting Guide," which will be shown at the Gem Tuesday—Riding directly into the camera, standing upright upon the back of his charging horse, Duncan plunges from his position upon the neck and shoulders of another rider.

Both men go crashing to the ground while the riderless horses flee away. Fortune and misfortune attended the filming of the remarkable piece of daring upon the part of the star.

Three attempts were necessary before the exact action required could be caught. Twice had the dangerous feat been attempted without the camera men catching the charging horses and men. In both these attempts no one was injured. On the third trial the action was perfect, but—William Duncan emerged with a badly twisted arm. The pain was intense, and for a time it was feared that the injury was serious. The services of a surgeon were engaged. Duncan was very ill at ease until the projection of the film proved that the third attempt had been all that a director could desire. There is a wealth of comedy in the production. Harry Lonsdale, a remarkable character man, was given an opportunity to bring into play his talents as the harassed English nobleman trying to get along in the western wilds without his homey comforts.

BROWNATONE

Viola Dana Will Be Attraction At Empress Monday

A photoplay which has been heralded as one of the season's best is coming to the Empress Theatre Monday. It is Metro's "The Five Dollar Baby" with the charming Viola Dana in the stellar role. Irvin S. Cobb wrote the story, which appeared some time ago in the Saturday Evening Post.

Miss Dana's newest characterization is that of a miss who has been adopted as a foundling by a pawnbroker, with whom she has been left. She appears in the play first as a tomboy of thirteen, causing havoc among children in New York's Ghetto, where the story has its setting. Later, she appears as a grown-up miss, with her boarding-school days behind her, and she promptly falls in love.

The life of the Ghetto is remarkably pictured in the photoplay. Harry Beaumont, who directed the picture, has introduced a number of types which provide much amusement.

Ralph Lewis appears as the Jewish pawnbroker in an exceptionally fine characterization. Others in the cast are John Harron, Tom McGuire, Otto Hoffman, Arthur Rankin and Marjorie Maurice. Rex Taylor adapted the story for the screen. John Arnold was responsible for the photography and A. F. Mantz was art and technical director.

Buster Keaton In "Cops"

Another laugh riot has resulted from Buster Keaton's efforts in his latest two-reel comedy production, "Cops." Police appear in this picture in numbers never attempted before, the entire force of a large city seeking to arrest Buster for alleged crimes.

The picture opens with Buster proposing marriage to a girl, who refuses him because he is not a business success. Buster promises to go out and become a big business man, going into the junk business.

Through a series of clever laughing gags, Buster aquires a dilapidated horse and wagon, and a load of furniture and junk. He starts through the streets of the city to dispose of his wares, running into many complications.

In the meanwhile the annual police parade is moving down the streets of the city. Buster drives his misfit outfit into this parade and moves toward the reviewing stand where the mayor and his daughter are sitting. The daughter is the girl Buster wants to marry. The parade stops for a minute near the reviewing stand and a bolshevik unloads a bomb from a rooftop, the bomb landing in Buster's wagon. Buster tosses the bomb into the street, where it explodes, wrecking the parade.

Buster is blamed for the bomb explosion and the police force starts after him. The rest of the picture has to do with the efforts of the police to capture Buster, who eludes them time after time through clever work that is certain to provide laughter.

"Cops" is the comedy feature of the program which opens at the Empress Thursday.

The picture moves very fast, is well connected and has all the necessary factors that go to make a great comedy.

The modern, high-grade express passenger locomotive can run at the rate of 112 miles per hour on a heavy-rail straight track, provided it is ballasted by a train behind it.

SAGE AND SULPHUR DARKENS GRAY HAIR

Brush this through faded, streaked locks and they become dark, glossy, youthful

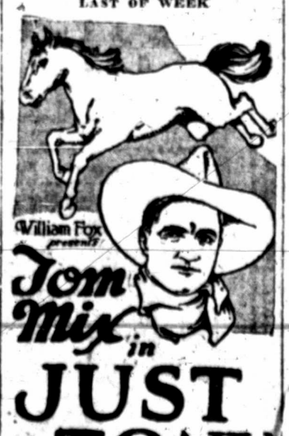

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounder, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Adv.

Chrales Ray At Olympic Monday For Four Days

"A Tailor Made Man," Charles Ray's first United Artists production, coming to the Olympic theatre next Monday for four days, is the most costly production ever made by this star and producer. Not only was no expense stinted in the case of settings, in research, and in every possible detail which tended to add quality and fineness to the production, but a cast of twenty-eight notable screen players, practically all of whom drew considerable salaries, tended to elevate the production cost.

Thousands of dollars were spent on the furnishings of the set representing the Stanlaw residence, and thousands more on the evening gowns worn, yet oddly enough, these were not the costliest scenes—but the scenes in the humble-appearing tailor shop were.

In film production, the element of time must always be taken into consideration. Many days were required in which to develop the tailor shop into a thing of actual realism, even after it had been built and completely equipped with the paraphernalia of the trade.

Being new, this shop had to be made to appear old; furthermore, it had to be appointed with a view to photographic composition; the practiced eye of Joseph De Grasse, the director, was quick to note flaws in this respect in the stage production. He is a painter, and believes that every setting must be subtly poetized to stir the artistic sensibilities of an audience. So, considerable time was expended in securing Rembrandt-like lighting effects; and the set was "redressed" with a view toward psychological suggestion. In this way a certain and necessary humid, dreary, and musty atmosphere was obtained.

Those who imagine that picturesque settings are easily gotten and that correctness of totality and detail require little thought or expenditure, would have had a genuine surprise had they visited this tailor shop set and noted each and every object.

IMPORTANCE OF MUSIC TO COMMUNITY URGED BY DAMROSCH

SAYS PART OF OUR INSTABILITY AND CRIMINALITY IS DUE TO A LACK OF REALLY GOOD MUSIC

Believes Phonographs and Wireless Broadcasting Are Good Influences But They Merely Spread Musical Enjoyment and Do Not Train Individuals Which Is What Counts. What we Need Is Something Which Will Take Actual Musical Training Into Towns, Factories and Homes. Experiences With American Troops in France. How Foreign Countries Do It.

By EDWARD MARSHALL.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Walter Damrosch, most famous of American orchestral conductors and composers, who organized the bands of the A. E. F. for Pershing at Chaumont, perfectly agrees with nearly every great neurologist that the greatest danger threatening America is nerve-degeneration. He says that the growing national tendency toward musical development may be a most effective antidote of this.

Indeed, it was the statement of the celebrated Dr. Max G. Schlapp that as the nation becomes permeated with love of music and some understanding of it, as some European nations are, that emotional instability which he, as official examiner of neurotic cases among child criminals in New York, has found to be increasing with amazing speed, may be checked.

"Emotion," said Dr. Damrosch, "is as necessary a part of the desirable human being as intellect. But emotion may be dangerous. Suppressed it means instability. One of the surest ways of changing emotion from a stabilizer and a refiner into an unstabilizer and a peril is to deny it normal means of outlet, normal stimuli to its expression.

"I absolutely agree with Dr. Schlapp. America must have more and better music, not as a satisfaction for the fads of long-haired enthusiasts but as a part of national efficiency. It would lower our crime rate and raise our success rate.

"And no efficiency is really efficient on this earth which does not contribute to human happiness. The unhappy man cannot be efficient.

"Music, I am sure, and I think the experience of European nations proves this, is capable of contributing more to the happiness of more people than any other of the arts. Par excellence it is that which can be developed for the simultaneous benefit and pleasure of great masses.

"Music stimulates emotion rationally. The object of all art is to refine emotion. In America, unfortunately, emotion frequently becomes hysteria, and certainly this is partly because the arts have not developed here so as to make emotion safe. Where there are no crowd enthusiasms there is likely to be mob violence and quacks and fads are sure to thrive. Without music religion will become fanaticism. As leisure increases these dangers increase. A nation which has not emotion cannot develop art for emotion is capacity for feeling and feeling begets art. But pent up emotion will destroy itself and many other things.

"Any people which has the possibility of developing music has the power of refining its inner life. Those without the possibility also are without the power. Such is the handicap of savage tribes. But primitive man yearned for music. His tom-toms and wailing chants prove that. If his sound expression grew his capacity for civilization grew. Otherwise it did not. Certain races evolved. They were those who went beyond the tom-toms and the wailing.

How Music Grew in Europe.

"In Europe the primitive chants were replaced by folk-songs with the development of man and his civilization. Instruments of delicacy as well as of power to make a noise grew as the conceptions of the song improved. Then came composers who took the impulse toward creating folk-songs and used them in the creation of a more developed music.

"The European art of music sprang from the ground. But came men like Beethoven, Mozart, Haydn and the multitude of their honorable fellows to refine and remold the utterly spontaneous expressions of the mass into symphonic forms.

"In this country we have no peasantry and no folk-songs save those of the negro who is, after all, not of our race. For that reason we suffer, somewhat, in comparison with the peoples of Europe who, in cultivating their modern music, have a rich and old musical subsoil in which to plant their seeds.

"Instead of that rich subsoil in Europe we have but a layer of artificially fertilized loam upon the surface which has been cultivated and enriched almost exclusively by our cultured people and very largely by professionals among them.

"Europe crashed because of her feudalism and in spite of her music. We may crash because of our industrialism and our lack of mitigating music. All our amusements are excitants. Music would be a stabilizer.

"We have musical possibilities but we lack much in universality of musical longing—and that, frankly, is a bad sign.

"One never hears an American farmer singing as he works out in his fields. American agriculture, with its earnestness and its machines, scarcely can produce the singing farmer, yet the European singing farmer had his great cultural influence. Some of the finest music in the world is based upon the European farmer's harvest songs.

"In Europe musical development began with the peasantry and worked upward. In the United States musical development begins with the rich and well-to-do and works downward through the economic scale.

Our Music Love On Female Side.

"And, unfortunately, the musical education which this implies, though it has been considerable, has been, so to speak, almost wholly on the distaff, or female side.

"Many daughters but few sons study music and not often with a very great enthusiasm. One finds many couples which reveal a musical cultivation of the wife but none of the husband. This oftener results in the measureable abandonment of music by the wife than it does in the birth of musical enthusiasm in the husband.

"So what development there is in the United States naturally, in accordance with the nature of the female, is emotional rather than mental.

"Many circumstances have tended in America to separate the sexes rather more widely than one finds them separated elsewhere, a part of this being due, doubtless, to certain characteristics of early education born of ignorant puritanism. It is a disastrous thing. The musical situation encourages it.

"Really music ought to link the sexes in community of interest, softening the male and giving him the quality of sympathy and understanding, and offering the female outlets for her more highly developed emotional centers which will be sure to prevent them from less natural and more harmful manifestations.

"The American man, who is proverbially good natured, spends his money freely on the American woman. He is glad to have her enjoy music and develop musical taste. If she wants it why of course she is to have it—if he doesn't have to listen to it.

"Among my personal acquaintance abroad are dozens of families where the cultivation of 'chamber music' at home is perhaps the most important influence stimulative of mutual home interest between husbands, wives and children. Such families are not numerous in America.

"Here the concert halls are crowded and the musical instructors find themselves well occupied, but among auditors and pupils are few men and boys.

Golf Our Only Trained Amusement

"About the only trained amusement in which both men and women now participate in the United States is golf and while that beyond doubt is health-giving it scarcely can be called cultural.

"We've got to stop to think of these things. How can there be family life without community of interest? How can there be home life without homes? If we had had more music perhaps we should have had a different type of home-building in our cities. Homes so built that outcry against pianos would not be justified also would be homes in which babies would not annoy the neighbors.

"The character of the present housing for what we may call our middle class in cities now makes the creation of a musical impulse difficult and the general dearth of housing of any kind will further handicap us.

"The middle class must be the real foundation of American cultural life. The American rich have so great a diversity of amusement that usually they do not develop fully or even very admirably along any special cultural line.

"In cities where the average family live in two rooms and a kitchenette, paying four times for these what similar families in England, France or Germany must pay for really competent home quarters, cultural development becomes almost utterly impossible.

"The situation in America with regard to music has become one calling quite as much for the genius of economics as for the ability to impart musical culture.

"It is the crowding and discomfort of our city flat-houses, their lack of privacy, the handicap which they present to the god-given impulse of self-expression which is transforming the American into a race of nomads, moving every year. Real contentment as well as musical development are impossible, no matter how many scientific conveniences the landlord may supply, in the cell homes in the great honeycombs which we call apartment houses.

"There is hope, however. We find a growing number of American women and even some men who realize that cultural development is one-sided and who urge their sons to take up music, but, of course, these men are greatly in minority.

"Speaking generally most of the American boy's leisure is devoted to sports, which, indeed, continually prove their usefulness. But exclusive sports development leaves the boy one-sided. And there you are.

"The boy who wishes to cultivate his musical taste and gather musical knowledge is looked on as a sissy unless he plans to find in music a means of earning livelihood and even then he is regarded as a somewhat doubtful character.

Producing Monotony in America.

"All this tends away from individuality. We are producing in America a terrible monotony for which we sometime shall be forced to pay a startling price if we do not correct the tendency.

"Observing this the late Lord Northcliffe half jokingly, half seriously, once denominated us the 'white Chinese.' We must beware of it.

"To some degree this tendency toward smug conventionality has been overcome, through years of effort, as far as music is concerned, but not entirely. We are on the right road, though, for recently good public schools (not private) have been encouraging the musical courses among boys as well as girls.

"I have had folk say to me in contradiction when I have advanced to them somewhat similar arguments that I must be wrong because nowhere in the world are operas and concerts more enthusiastically, even extravagantly patronized.

"It has been declared to me that this proves the existence of a great music-love in the United States.

"That is a fallacy. The mere listening to good music is a beneficial thing, of course, but it never will create a musical people.

"Americans must learn to actually express themselves in music. America, with its 100,000,000 people has only two stand operas, New York's and Chicago's; Germany has dozens.

"And again—in the crowds which throng to operas and concerts in America where are the men?

"In our towns and villages what young men of the best opportunities show interest in the local bands? Too often these are barber-shop affairs, rather looked askance at by the "better" people. In France, England, Austria, Germany and Czecho-Slovakia the town band is an eviable body into which all youths would like to gain an entrance.

"Young men in the United States must be encouraged to their natural urge toward playing instruments. I do not mean that they should be advised to choose musical careers. Far from it. Few can make a living out of music. Nearly all might add to life by knowing something of it.

"We should have a dozen times as many town bands, factory bands, club bands—all kinds of bands. They should not be the town bands of today. Even those we have are bad. They should be disciplined, headed by well-trained leaders with traditions which will insist that their groups shall sharpen their teeth, say once a week, upon some good, symphonic composition.

"I wish some great philanthropist would give the interest on, say, thirty million dollars.

"A million and a half a year would subsidize many town bands of the right sort, educating groups of youngsters, and through them promoting general musical taste in dozens of fine towns ranging from, perhaps, twenty thousand population.

"Such bands would cultivate the nation's interest in such instruments as oboes, bassoons and others not particularly popular as solo-instruments.

"Such bands would wondrously promote the study of good music, for the fund would offer prizes for town-band competitions, stimulate local governmental bodies to do likewise, and encourage music in the high schools and large industrial groups.

"Not before something of the sort has been accomplished shall we ever start toward growth into a really musical people; for all that I, and other people like me, can accomplish, is to help to cultivate the musical upper crust. We can have slight influence upon the mass.

"Until some movement of the sort is started and comes to a considerable fruition American life will lack completeness and the national development will continue in its dangerous tendency toward division of the sexes by widely separated interests and few mutual grounds of interest.

"In composition we do little because women, who monopolise our musical development, are not musically creative. Why this is the case I will not try to say but it is a fact generally recognized. It is as true in Europe as in the United States.

"Women are great singers but not necessarily great musicians. God gives them good vocal chords and time to study. He does not usually give them musical intellect."

I asked Mr. Damrosch what effect mechanical appliances such as the phonograph and wireless music broadcasting will have on musical development in America.

"I am not competent to say how much mechanical music will do for us," he replied, "but I am willing to admit that probably it has done much. It has the field almost to itself. But it is a pity that it should be the only means by which Americans may satisfy their natural musical longing.

"The trouble with such processes is that no material is delicate enough to record those overtones and undertones which mean so much to delicacy in music; and mechanical reproduction does not imply a study and an understanding of the art.

"Town bands are the answer, I am sure. While recently in France motoring, I stopped at Compiegne when suddenly I heard a splendid burst of band-music from a disused church.

"There eighty young men and boys were sitting in their shirt-sleeves practising on very good music. There were eighty members of them in this little town.

"I introduced myself and heard several numbers exceedingly well played. The band had been decorated for sheer merit by the government.

"France has dozens like it. They become important parts of the town life and the government sees to it that they are well trained to handle the best music. We in America have not one.

Our Town Bands Usually Bad

"We have town bands but they are usually very bad, as I have said. Their influence is not toward art but toward the barber-shop.

"We have, however, ability although we horribly lack training. For Pershing I examined two hundred applicants for bandmasters' commissions and found twenty worthy. We finally had to organize a school at Chaumont which was in operation from October 1918, to May, 1920. There was plenty of material. It accomplished much. You see we could do during wartime what in peace-time is impossible.

"I think each state should have a school for the education of town bands, and that there should be a central national school cared for by a national department.

"While I am not prepared to say that the nation is ready for a department of fine arts, with a secretary in the cabinet, as France, Germany and Belgium have, we certainly should have a bureau of music with a bureau chief who could guide us in a systematic musical development.

"It is preposterous that while the plumber, the farmer, the miner and all the others should have governmental representation the musician should have none. He is not recognized as any part of national life.

"Music here is passed by as a thing of no importance, whereas in 1920 my orchestra received government invitations to visit France, Belgium and Italy, as the guests of governments.

In France the famous Paris opera house was at our disposition. In Belgium the theater de Monnaie was turned over to us. In Italy the oldest musical society in the world took charge of our concerts and we were overwhelmed by government attentions.

"Such a thing would be impossible in our country because our government does not officially recognize painters, sculptors and musicians as members of important professions.

"The change must come or America must suffer far more heavily than those who pride themselves on being 'practical' can realize. Boys and men must be got into music. American women must help toward this important end.

"The fault of that which now we suffer from rests partly at the door of the musicians who are lazy beyond words. We have none now, who, as my father and Theodore Thomas once were, are willing to take on the work of pioneering with their orchestras through hard country where the profits must be small.

"We must have more music and a better kind. The jazz that we get now is a nerve excitant, not a soothing influence.

"It has rhythmic value and originality, but must be refined by being given something from the heart and perhaps from the head. It is now wholly from the nerves—the sensory system. And it affects the nerves. We must have music that will soothe and help us think."

AUSPICES

The Musicians' Club

Wichita Falls is most fortunate in securing this world renowned contralto, being one of the very few cities in the south which she will visit during her present tour

MADAME HOMER, America's greatest contralto who is to appear here in concert, Friday, November 17th, is fond of telling how cumbersome and unmanageable her voice was when she was a young girl and how she despaired time and again of ever being able to make it do her will. But the very qualities which made its training such a hard task are those which have made it one of the finest voices ever heard in this country, a true alto and yet one of enormous range.

The Milwaukee Journal had described the voice as "warm," mellow, lovely beyond compare, and so smoothly flowing from her lips.

A celebrated throat specialist of Boston was called in a few years ago to help Madame Homer through a slight cold she had contracted. He told a friend afterwards that he had seen the throats of many singers but none the equal of Louise Homer's. "Such beautiful fine, white vocal chords absolutely flawless and that magnificently arched sounding board," he said, "no wonder the woman has such a voice. She could not help it if she tried. I have never seen such a perfect vocal apparatus in my whole experience.

SOUTH SIDE DITCH LATERAL CANALS BEING SURVEYED

WILL DETERMINE SCOPE OF TERRITORY TO BE REACHED BY SYSTEM.

BIG FORCE WORKING AT BOTH DAMSITES

Dredge Continues Steadily In Operation—Canal Structures Getting Under Way.

Surveys which will determine the scope of the irrigation project are now well under way along the territory reached by the south ditch, where lines are being run for lateral canals that will reach land not directly under the main ditch.

When this survey is finished the area to be served by the south side canal will have been determined. A similar survey will be made along the north side canal later.

At the two damsites, a number of different parts of the project are receiving active attention. At the storage site, the work of the dredge, the construction of the gates and tower, and the excavation for the service spillway are keeping several hundred men busy. Although it will be 40 to 60 days before the spillway excavation is complete, pouring of concrete on some portions of the structure will be under way within a few days. The gate tower is almost finished, the pouring of concrete being completed Saturday.

With some interruptions, the dredge has continued to steadily pile up dirt between the two abutments, and is operating well up to schedule.

Work on the head-gate, through which the south side canal will receive water, is the chief feature of the work at the diversion dam. Along the south side canal, concrete structures are under way, with the two most important, at Camp Creek and Blackberry creek, already completed.

TRACTION COMPANY AND TRANSFER MAN SUED FOR DAMAGES

The Wichita Falls Traction company and F. H. Clisbee, local transfer and taxicab man were made defendants in a damage suit filed Saturday in the 30th district court by R. D. McCulloch, a traveling salesman who relates that he is a resident of Bexar county, Texas.

The plaintiff asks an aggregate judgment for damages in the sum of $5,955.

He contends that on January 12, 1922, he secured the services of a service car owned and operated by defendant Clisbee to take him to the superintendent of the asylum near the lake. While crossing Denver and Ninth street the petition recites, the automobile was crashed into by a street car owned by the defendant company and operated by one of its accredited agents.

The plaintiff alleges carelessness and negligence on the part of both defendants and contends that he suffered injuries by way of cuts and bruises which incapacitated him for seven weeks and that his average weekly wage was $100. He asks damages in the sum of $700. He also prays judgment for $5,000 damages and $100 for expenses and $155 for doctor's and hospital expense.

MIKE TUCKER HELD AT LAWTON; TURNED IN BY BONDSMEN

Mike Tucker, who was convicted on a statutory charge in the 30th district court during the June term of the 30th district court and sentenced to six years in the state penitentiary is being held in the county jail at Lawton pending the arrival of officers from this county.

The defendant gave notice of appeal following his conviction in the district court here and entered into a recognizance bond of $5,000. Three bondsmen were accepted by the court.

One of the bondsmen Friday ordered his arrest stating thta he wanted to be relieved from the obligation. Information was given the sheriff's office that the defendant was on his way to Oklahoma and word was sent to the toll keeper at the Red river bridge.

Friday night Tucker was placed under arrest at Lawton and the sheriff's office of this county was notified.

Wichitan Recalls How "Quail Hunter" Came To Receive That Name

Jack Kennedy, "the qual hunter," veteran train robber of Missouri, who was shot and killed Friday following an attempt to rob a mail train, was personally known to a number of residents of Wichita Falls.

C. B. McConnell, bailiff of the three district courts in this county, lived in Kansas City at the time that Kennedy had the sobriquet of "the quail hunter" added to his name. This name was applied to him back in the year 1899 when it was charged that he in company with Jesse James Jr., the son of the notorious bandit, Jesse James, robbed a Missouri Pacific train and secured $24,000.

This robbery occurred just outside the city of Kansas City where Mr. McConnell resided at that time.

The night of the robbery, and shortly after Jesse James Jr. had been placed under arrest and held in connection with the mail train holdup, two officers accosted Jack Kennedy on the streets of Kansas City. Kennedy at that time was equipped with a highpowered rifle, a belt full of cartridges and an extra box of them in his pocket and a brace of six shooters strapped to his belt.

He made no resistance when the officers approached him, Mr. McConnell said in relating the incident. He submitted to a search and when the officers inquired where he had come from and where he was going loaded down like a young arsenal, Kennedy replied:

"I've come from home. I'm going quail hunting."

The incident was regarded by the newspapers at that time as the feature of his arrest and from that day on, Kennedy's name was seldom if ever used without calling him "the quail hunter."

Mr. McConnell told about the arrest of a third party in connection with the Missouri Pacific, whose name he had forgotten. The third party made an oral confession, in which he implicated Kennedy, James and himself, but refused to sign a statement.

The week before the trial of the two men, the star witness for the government evaporated from the jail where he was also held a prisoner. No trace of the man could be found and his escape from the jail remains a mystery to this day.

Mr. McConnell stated that not a trace of the third man was found until a few years ago just before he died. At the conclusion of the trial which consumed a week, both James and Kennedy, "the quail hunter" were acquitted.

OUTLOOK FAVORS DEMOCRATS

PREVAILING POLITICAL MOOD ADVERSE TO PARTY IN POWER; VOTE TO BE ONE OF PROTEST

By MARK SULLIVAN
National Political Correspondent of the New York Evening Post and Wichita Daily Times.
(Copyright, 1922, by the New York Evening Post.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 4.—The most generally prevailing mood of the country will probably not be expressed at the election next Tuesday. Only in a few states or communities is there any opportunity for its expression. It is a mood that is equally distrustful of both the old parties. So far as it expresses itself by voting democratic, it will do so, not because it loves the democrats more, but for the satisfaction of expressing anger at the party that is in. It is a mood that is malcontent toward both the old political parties, toward all political leaders, and toward most of the other accepted leaders and exponents of public opinion. Wherever there is a third party, or a so-called radical running on one of the old party tickets, this mood will express itself joyously and heartily by voting for the radical. The most authentic result of next Tuesday's elections will be the degree of support given to socalled radical candidates, in all the communities where the campaigns of radicals have had any degree of organization or energy.

SULLIVAN

Part of this mood is resentment over economic inequalities. There is no angrier man in the country than the western farmer who has lost money this year, who must borrow money to pay his taxes, who in many cases must let his potato crop rot in the ground, because the price will not justify his digging them, and who at the same time sees the city hod-carrier and bricklayer, and the common laborer, getting anywhere from six to twelve dollars a day. And this farmer's suspicion that he is being exploited by some subtle and invisible combination is increased when, in many cases, he sees these prices paid for common labor in the building of roads, for which roads the money comes to a large extent out of the farmer's taxes. Wanton extravagance on the part of state governments and city and county governments, especially in the field of building automobile roads, is one of the clearest causes of the general feeling of distrust the farmer has against all politicians.

Pelletier Case

However, the economic aspect of this mood which the country is in has already been described by your correspondent at some length, and will be alluded to again. For the present it is the writer's wish to point out to the country as a whole several examples from different parts of the country of a most disagreeable kind of moral and spiritual ferment. The first example is the Pelletier case in Boston. Because it is so conspicuous an illustration of a kind of mood which appears sporadically in several different parts of the country, it will be worth while to describe the Pelletier case at some length.

Pelletier was the district attorney of Boston. Charges were made against him. The charges were very odious. They were to the effect that he had failed to prosecute a considerable number of crimes involving women, illicit relations—the sort of thing which the parties concerned are especially anxious to conceal. The charges against Pelletier went much farther than mere allegations that he had failed to prosecute these crimes. There were implications of the effect that the immunity of many of the criminals was due to the fact that they were represented by a lawyer who made somewhat of a specialty of this kind of case and who, politically and personally, had such relations with the district attorney that he was able to secure immunity for his clients. The charges against Pelletier, indeed were even worse than this. As it was expressed by the attorney general of the state: "The sword of justice was placed in his hands and he has made of it a highwayman's club." On these charges, Pelletier was given a trial before five justices of supreme court of Massachusetts. This tribunal found against him. It decreed "That the said Pelletier be and is hereby removed therefrom; and forejudged and excluded from holding or exercising the said office of district attorney." The tribunal also disbarred Pelletier. Now the point that led to the sensational aspect of next week's election in Boston is that Pelletier is a Catholic. He was one of the high officers of the Catholic organization known as the Knights of Columbus. After his removal from office and his disbarment, some of his friends set up the plea that he was a victim of religious persecution. There was nothing to this. Some of the most highly respected Catholics in Boston were among the judges who found against him. Thousands of Catholics were so affronted by the revelations about Pelletier's conduct that they made a protest which resulted in his resignation from his office in the Knights of Columbus. Every intelligent and unbiased person in Boston, Catholic and Protestant alike, had the most complete faith in the decision of the Massachusetts supreme court against Pelletier. Nevertheless, the unfortunate atmosphere of religious prejudice was such that Pelletier and his friends began to make alarming headway with their plea that he was a victim of religious persecution. It became apparent that he was going to try to secure vindication by running for re-election. There was no law in Massachusetts requiring that the prosecuting attorney shall be a member of the bar, and to meet the situation an act to this effect was passed by the legislature. Pelletier thereupon obtained the necessary 15,000 signatures to petition putting this act of the legislature to a referendum vote.

Two Questions Involved

Pelletier, running on the plea that he was a victim of religious prejudice, was able to get the democratic nomination for district attorney, and is now the formal candidate for that office. The spectacular fact, and the fact that is disturbing to every person who has a thoughtful regard for public affairs, is that at the election in Boston next Tuesday, the voters will pass on two questions; one, whether Pelletier shall again be district attorney; and the other, whether the occupant of the office of district attorney must be a lawyer.

These unhappy facts tell their own story. There is no doubt that Pelletier will be able to show a formidable following, and that amongst those who will vote for him will be a large number of women who, to a greater extent than the men, seem to have been moved by this disturbed and disgraced man's appeal for a vindication—an appeal made largely to sentiments that hang about religious prejudice. It is a somber thing that reflect upon their decent Catholic women, to whom the peculiar odium of the Pelletier charges should be deeply offensive, are so warped from their true instincts and better judgment by the complexities, of religious prejudice with which the case is colored. The growning mawkishness of the case is the campaign poetry in which Pelletier's plea for vindication is made.

"With the light of mercy shining in his ever-pleasant glance, he raises up the fallen, and he gives another chance.

"Oh, we know him and we love him for his manhood through and through;

"Honest, loyal, faithful, fearless—he's the truest of the true.

"You may search throughout creation, prosecujors far and near, but you'll never find another that will equal Pelletier."

Missouri Election

To go now to a wholly different section of the country, a point as far as 1200 or 1500 miles distant from Boston, we find another case of politics affected by prejudice and hate. In the Missouri election, involving Senator Reed, the Ku Klux Klan is active against Reed, and one of the chief motives of its activities is an echo of the Pelletier case in Boston.

Pelletier, before his disgrace, had been prominent in democratic national politics. As such he was a delegate to the democratic national convention in San Francisco in 1920. At the convention Senator Reed had one of his many fights for his political life, at the end of which fight he was prevented from sitting as a delegate. One of the men who stood by Reed in his fight at San Francisco was Pelletier. Therefore, two years later, when Pelletier was in trouble in Boston, he appealed to Senator Reed for help, and Reed, with characteristic loyalty to his personal friends, left his senate seat, journeyed from Washington up to Boston, and acted as Pelletier's attorney. It is because of Reed's association with Pelletier that the Ku Klux Klan in Missouri is now active and doing all it can to prevent the election of Reed.

So much for the Pelletier case in its wide ramifications. Go now to the other side of the country from Boston to find another case of religious prejudice coloring the politics of a whole state, and obscuring the tariff, taxation, foreign relations, and all other legitimate political issues.

Situation in Oregon

The voters of Oregon will pass next Tuesday on a proposal requiring every parent and guardian to send every child to a public school until the age of 16. The frank aim of the bill is to outlaw all private schools, including Catholic and Lutheran parochial schools.

In Oregon this proposal is put forward by a group of organizations called the "Federated Patriotic Societies." This group includes the Ku Klux Klan. That is not surprising. The klan is anti-Catholic everywhere. But it is more disturbing to find that among those behind this bill are the Masons. It appears that some two years ago the Ancient and Accepted Order of Scottish Rite Masons, southern jurisdiction, the Grand Lodge of Oregon, A. F. and A. M., and the Imperial Council of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved: That we recognize and proclaim our belief in the free and compulsory education of the children of our nation in public primary schools supported by public taxation, upon which all children shall attend and be instructed in the English language only without regard to race or creed as the only sure foundation for the perpetuation and preservation of our free institutions, guaranteed by the constitution of the United States, and we pledge the efforts of the membership of the order to promote by all lawful means the organization, extension and development to the highest degree of such schools, and to oppose the efforts of any and all who seek to limit, curtail, hinder or destroy the public school system of our land." It is in pursuance of this Masonic resolution that the present Oregon drive is being made against Catholic, Lutheran and other parochial schools. It has thrown the state into turmoil, and put religious prejudice above other political issues. The Ku Klux Klan came within a few hundred votes of winning the republican nomination for governor at the primaries this year. The compulsory education bill is opposed by the Catholics, by the Oregon and Washington district of the Evangelical Lutheran synod, by the Seventh Day Adventist church, by various Episcopalian and other private schools, and by a large number of Presbyterian churches and pastors. These organizations have gone formally on record against the bill in official pamphlet in which Oregon prints its proposed statues, together with the arguments for and against.

Lutheran Argument

The Lutherans, in their formal argument, say:

"There are some 12,000 children in private and denominational schools in the state of Oregon. If these children were forced into the public schools some 300 to 400 additional teachers and a corresponding number of additional schools would have to be provided and financed. The already burdensome tax rate would thus soar still higher. And who would have to pay the bill? You.

"We make our appeal to the common sense of every thinking American. And we ask that the professional agitator be made to turn to more worthy task. We ask that he be prevented from infringing upon the natural and inalienable right of parents to provide their children with a religious education that satisfies their ideals and their consciences."

The Seventh Day Adventists put a portion of their opposition in these words:

"We have no disposition to question the sincerity of the promoters of this measure; but we see many reasons which convince us that it is un-American and unconstitutional, and will not accomplish the end sought. This measure virtually involves a union of church and state. In this case the state exercises arbitrary authority over the church as was done in the days of the old Roman republic. Who wants a return to those cruel days? The adoption of this measure would trample upon the constitutional rights of parents."

One of the formal arguments of the Presbyterian churches and pastors reads in part as follows:

"It is based on the philosophy of autocracy that the child belongs primarily to the state; it is an unjustifiable invasion of a family authority and threatens ultimate the the guarantees of our American liberty."

There are merely two of many cases in which a most unhappy spirit of hate and mutual distrust between group and group dominates or affects the elections next Tuesday. There are similar cases in Oklahoma, in Texas, and in various other communities. In North Dakota, the Catholic who has the democratic nomination for senator is opposed by an organization which goes by the name, "Anax," which one supposes, is a condensation of "Anglo-Saxon."

A Successful Man

Among the notable professional men of this country who achieved great success along strictly legitimate lines was Dr. R. V. Pierce. Devoting his attention to the specialty of women's diseases, he became a recognized authority in that line.

Over fifty years ago this noted physician gave to the world a Prescription which has never been equaled for the weaknesses of women. Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., long since found out what naturally best for women's diseases. He learned it all through treating thousands of cases. The result of his studies was a medicine called Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This medicine is made of vegetable growths that nature surely intended for backache, headache, weakening pains, and for the many disorders common to women in all ages of life. Women who take this standard remedy know that in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription they are getting a safe woman's tonic so good that druggists everywhere sell it in both tablet and fluid form.

Send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Invalids Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., for trial pkg. Write for free medical advice.

For Your Service

After all, corporations are but reflections of the men directing them. Find the moving spirit, and you have the heart of the company, however big.

The picture is of R. A. Crawford, vice president and general manager of the Lone Star Gas Company. Mr. Crawford comes of a family who have written a large part of the natural gas history of the country. Two uncles and his father are leaders in big natural gas companies, and his family has made this business a study for a generation.

Started Reading Meters

Mr. Crawford's first connection with the gas business was reading meters. He has had active experience in drilling operations and field work, and a lifetime spent in the gas business qualifies him for his present place.

On Mr. Crawford's capable shoulders rests the responsibility for the work of supplying Northern Texas with gas. His record is one of careful supervision and intimate understanding of the system, and it is reflected in the understanding and good wishes of the many thousands dependent on us for the comforts of this fuel.

Mr. Crawford's home is in Dallas, and in his office centers the activities of 875 miles of pipe lines, with all the equipment and personnel. Every man of the hundreds of employees, and every part of the equipment is directed toward the one purpose of making the Lone Star Company as efficient as can be in the discharge of its duties to the public.

WHO'LL GET SECOND AUTO SEARCHLIGHT?

DODGE SEDAN TO FASTEST FLYER BY MANUFACTURER

SELFRIDGE FIELD, MT. CLEMens, Mich., Nov. 4—Just before departing for his home in San Francisco, Lieut R. L. Maughan, who won the Pulitzer trophy when he broke the world's speed record in the aviation races here last Sunday, was presented with another and wholly unexpected trophy. It was a new Dodge Brothers Sedan, given by Dodge Brothers, Detroit manufacturers, as evidence of their interest in the promotion of aviation.

The ceremonies were witnessed by Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, Brig. Gen. William Mitchell assistant chief of U. S. air service and other notables. Immediately after the presentation, General Mitchell mounted the plane in which Lieut. Maughan had lowered the world's record and proceeded to establish other records for straight fights.

The gift of the sedan is particularlx significent in view of the fact that it is the first car ever presented to an individual by Dodge Brothers.

Secretary Hoover commented on it as a "splendid example of the patriotism that the country needs if it is to maintain its superiority in the air."

General Mitchell was equally enthusiastic.

Mr. Bloomer, in his presentation address, said:

"It is our belief that an adequate air force, equipped and maintained to the highest point of efficiency, is absolutely necessary to the safety of this country. Because of this we rejoice in presenting a specimen of our own product to the winner of these contests, feeling that by so doing we are evidencing our respect and admiration in any way to your remarkable achievement."

Lieutenant Maughan departed immediately for his home in San Francisco, where the Dodge Brothers dealer, J. E. French, formerly of Detroit, is arranging for a huge reception when he arrives.

The owner of the car, a part of which is shown in the cut above will get searchlight No. 2 given away by the Daily Times. The owner is asked to bring his car or the tax collector's receipt for license numbers to the Times and upon identification will be given an order for a $15 searchlight which will be installed on the car free of charge.

Monday morning J. N. Swanson of Iowa Park brought his Overland automobile along with him and established the fact that he was the owner of the car, a picture of which appeared on this page last Sunday. He was given an order and within a half hour he drove away with his family with a big brand new searchlight perched on the front of his car.

He stated that he saw the picture and noticed that it was an Overland car. He immediately dispatched one of the members of his family to run out to the garage and see what the number of his car was. The result was that he realized at once he would soon be the owner of a big searchlight.

Who'll be number two.

ALL STEEL REO COUPE ON MARKET

A new all-steel coupe with the famous Reo T-6 chassis as a foundation has been announced by the Reo Motor Car company and a description of this closed model has just been received by Frank Quiesser of the Fritz Motor Car company.

"The body is of new design," says Mr. Quiesser. "Careful proportioning has produced an unusually roomy car which insures comfort and convenience to a high degree. Regular seating capacity for three is supplemented by a comfortable auxiliary seat. This seat has a left arm rest, the right one having been omitted so that the passenger can readily enter or leave his seat. When not in use this auxiliary seat folds completely out of the way, thereby giving additional floor space.

"Careful attention has been given to the driver's comfort and at the same time insuring freedom of action in the operation of the car. The auxiliary seat also is arranged to provide armchair comfort.

"A spacious package compartment behind the driver's seat is of the builtin design and is concealed by a hinged cover. The framework of the body is of selected hardwood and all joints are accurately filled, glued and screwed or bolted and with an outer covering of the best grade of steel. This new coupe is designed to fill a long felt want among motor enthusiasts.

"The top material is of special heavy canvas with coated waterproofing material and is fitted with metal drip mouldings to carry away any water that might drain off the top. Each door is hung on three heavy hinges. Adjustable rubber bumpers and a dove-tail arrangement prevent rattles and insure the true hanging of the doors under all conditions. Both of them have heavy double catches, eliminating accidental opening of the doors if not fully closed.

"Door and side glasses are set in heavy waterproof felt channels, while the rear glass is set in rubber. A crank regulator raises and lowers the door windows and the side windows are controlled by hand straps.

"The windshield used on the new Reo coupe is exceptionally large, affording an unusually clear vision. The upper half is adjustable while the lower section is stationary and when fully closed the windshield is absolutely leak-proof. A wiper is standard equipment.

"The interior is upholstered in best grade heavy body cloth, being of a dust proof shade with light blue striping. High-grade cushion springs and an abundance of curled hair and wadding are hidden features which produce easy riding qualities. The trimmings are in gray satin finish producing a pleasing and harmonious effect.

"A frosted dome light is controlled by a pull switch on the right door pillar.

"A carrying compartment in rear for larger articles such as suit cases, grips, etc., is provided. A cowl ventilator, conveniently located mirror above the windshield, a windshield visor, aluminum step plates and corrugated rubber matting on the running boards are a few of the features of this new model.

"The chassis and fenders are finished with standard heavy black enamel, while two finishes are standard for the body, the selection being optional with the purchaser. The body and hood can be secured in the flat Crane Simplex surface. Light gray below the belt and slightly darker gray above the belt or the new Reo coupe can be furnished with the regular high gloss varnish finish in Brewster Green under the body and black above belt."

HOW TO LOCATE AN ENGINE KNOCK

One of the simplest plans for locating engine knocks is to employ a short rod or even a screwdriver as an improvised stethoscope. One end of the stick is held between the teeth quite firmly and the other is brought into contact with the engine at various points until a point is reached where the noise sounds loudest and the ring is most clear. When this point has been located it is almost certain that the trouble will be due to some part of the mechanism adjacent to that locality.

Safety Attachments.

Mirrors on trucks and rear lights on horse-drawn vehicles are being sought for universal adoption in the United States. They are asked for the purpose of making the roads safer for motorists. Thirteen states require mirrors on trucks and only a few have any regulations for horse-drawn vehicles.

INCREASED VOLUME CAUSE OF CUT IN FORD CAR PRICES

"The revision in prices," said Edsel B. Ford, president of the Ford Motor company, "is the result of the increased volume of business which our company has enjoyed during the present year, and also to the fact that we now own and operate many of our own sources of raw material, which enables us to continue increasing the quality of our product and at the same time keep the price so low that Ford cars are in reach of everybody.

"Our production for 1922 is already in excess of a million, which has been an important factor in bringing down costs. Our present daily output is averaging better than 5,000 cars and trucks, which means a complete Ford or truck every 5½ seconds of each eight hour working day. It is in anticipation of this continued demand that price adjustments are again being made in order to keep in effect the policy of selling Ford products at the lowest price consistent with quality.

"Quality, as usual," said Mr. Ford, "will continue to be a prime consideration in the building of Ford cars. As our business has increased we have constantly increased our equipment and manufacturing facilities, so that this price reduction merely reflects the progressive methods which come as a result of increased volume.

"This reduction, which is the sixth since March, 1920, brings the price of the Ford touring car from $415, the price effective early in 1920, to the present extremely low level of $295, which is nearly 50 per cent less. Corresponding reductions have been made on all other types.

The new prices by types follow:

Touring	$295
Roadster	269
Chassis	225
Coupe	539
Sedan	595
Truck	380

Several French motorists are reported to be planning to cross the Sahara desert at its greatest width. Where will they carry the gasoline needed for such a trip?

WASTE MAY BE CAUSE OF HIGH PRICE OF "GAS"

High price gasoline may be attributed by some automobile owners to stock market manipulation or other suspicious practices, but perhaps the real cause is the waste accompanying the storage and sale of the fuel.

Investigation, by experts of the United States Bureau of Mines and engineers of a national asbestos manufacturing organization, shows that there is a wastage of 2,000,000 gallons of gasoline each day. That means an annual loss of more than 72,000,000 gallons of fuel. At 20 cents a gallon, the experts figure, the annual economic loss in the nation is $14,600,000.

Although this is scarcely 2 per cent of the amount of gasoline consumed annually in the United States, it is enough to run an automobile seven times back and forth between the earth and sun.

The cause of this great wastage, say the investigators, is the lack of heat insulated around the 775 tanks storing the fuel in various parts of the country. The oil in the uninsulated tanks is subject to evaporation from the day's heat and there is a resultant loss of some 6,000,000 gallons a month.

According to the experts, a 55,000-barrel storage tank holding gasoline will lose about 6 per cent of its contents in one year. A similar tank, storing crude oil, will lose about 3 percent from evaporation, and this 3 per-cent loss will be almost entirely gasoline.

This waste can be stopped, say these men, by insulating the storage tanks against the warmth of the outside air and the direct radiant heat of the sun.

CHICAGO LEADS COUNTRY IN FRANKLIN SALES

Chicago took first place honors among Franklin dealers in the matter of sales during the first nine months of this year, according to an announcement just made by Sales Manager S. E. Ackerman of the Franklin Automobile company. During the same period last year, Chicago was in second place.

Los Angeles was second in the race this year, San Francisco third, Pittsburgh fourth, and Boston fifth.

Aged couple of Bloomington, Ill., has toured 40,000 miles in the last two years.

SIX PRACTICAL TIPS FOR COLD WEATHER DRIVING

A motorist should have no more trouble with his car in winter than he does in summer, if he takes the right precautions. Cold weather operation requires just a few changes from summer running, and L. V. Newton, superintendent of the motor equipment department of Texas company, producers of Texaco petroleum products, gives the following six helpful suggestions to those operating motor cars in cold weather:

1. Use a good clear oil with a low cold test. It will flow at the first turnover.
2. A little alcohol in your radiator will prevent a frozen radiator, cause less inconvenience, and preclude cracked cylinder blocks.
3. A radiator cover will keep your engine and radiator warm. It also makes far easier starting and saves your shortage battery.
4. Drain your crank case more frequently in winter than in summer. Every 500 miles is a good plan.
5. Easy starting, even in coldest weather, will result from the use of volatile gasoline, because of its low boiling point.
6. There are more than 50 parts on your car that need lubrication. See that they get it this winter.

Better gasoline is being sold, say bureau of mines officials.

80 PER CENT OF AUTOS IN WORLD ARE OWNED IN THIS UNITED STATES

Pessimists and knockers and members of the Ancient Order of Gloom got a jolt when the 1922 automobile registration figures for United States came out, according to C. C. Randle, Goodyear service station dealer at 906 Scott avenue.

"Despite generally adverse business conditions and the fact that thousands of cars went out of service, the people of this country own 1,428,712 more automobiles and trucks now than they did a year ago, an increase of 15 per cent.

"It means just two things—one, that this country is a long ways from being broke, and two, that automobiles are not regarded by the people of this country as a luxury to be bought only in flush times.

"As a matter of fact, Americans bought within the past 12 months nearly as many cars as the rest of the world owns altogether. Statisticians figure that there are about 12,800,000 cars running in the world, all of which but about 2,000,000 are owned in this country."

Mr. Randle had collected some interesting figures in regard to automobiles owned. For example, Great Britain has about 497,000 cars, Canada 463,000, France 236,000, Germany 91,000 and the next one down the list is Argentine with 75,000.

There are only 12 states, his figures showed, out of the 45 in this country which do not own more cars than Argentine.

"Why, this state alone with a registration of 452,268 owns more cars than any foreign country in the world, except Great Britain and Canada.

"That means 452,268 cars and trucks carrying merchandise, supplementing the railroad service, carrying men back and forth to work, bringing the farmer and his produce into town from where he carries back the manufactured goods that he needs in his home or on the farm, enabling the working man to live out beyond the congested areas and own a little tract of land and still keep up his work in the city, performing in 101 ways various useful functions in the development and operation of a great industrial nation.

"New York leads the country in the number of cars, then comes Ohio with its rich industrial and agricultural wealth, then comes California the playground of the nation, then busy Pennsylvania and then the rich state of Illinois. Any one of these five American states owns more cars than any foreign country on the globe.

"Canada has only a few hundred more cars than Michigan, the state where so many automobiles are manufactured.

"Then come Texas, Indiana, Iowa, Massachusetts, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Missouri, Kansas and New Jersey, all of whom have more cars than France, the third largest car owning foreign nation.

"Nebraska, Florida, Oklahoma, Washington, Colorado, North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, Kentucky, Georgia, Connecticut, Tennessee, South Dakota, Oregon all run ahead of Germany, the fourth car owning foreign country.

"Alabama, Arkansas, Louisiana, Maine, North Dakota, South Carolina, Utah, West Virginia are all ahead of Argentine.

"Five states showed an increase of 100,000 cars in a year with Illinois just under the mark. In other words, California, Florida, Illinois, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania added more cars within the last year than any of the other countries, except Great Britain, Canada and France.

"In other words dealers in automobiles, tires and other accessories have the most wonderful market in the world for their goods right at their door.

"We in America have much to be thankful for in the industrial situation that this automobile survey discloses.

"The automobile is not merely the rich man's plaything in this country as it is in many of the foreign countries. It is the vehicle of democracy, of the plain people—the farmer, the tradesman, the factory worker, the office man, the small merchant, the professional man, even the teather and the preacher in thousands of instances, although these two groups have not always had their fair share of the world's rewards."

NEW DOUBLE JET CARBURETOR OF PEERLESS SUCCESS

The various units and special features of the new Peerless are being subjected to much close scrutiny and inspection by motorists everywhere, and by those affiliated with the automotive industry in a professional way. This is of course only natural, considering the lively interest displayed throughout the country on the advent of a new product by R. H. Collins and his associates.

The new Peerless double jet, or two-stage carbureter is attracting wide attention and favorable comment, both from the standpoint of permitting good fuel economy and from the ability it has to furnish sufficient gasoline for extraordinary power; this latter fact is accomplished automatically, without the necessity of special adjustments or attachments, and without impairing its economy of gasoline at the quieter speeds.

When the carbureter throttle is opened slightly for idling or for low speers, the gasoline is drawn from the float chamber through a primary jet into the mixing chamber. Here it is mixed with a sufficient amount of air to provide an economical fuel, and then proceeds through an inlet header into the cylinders.

As the throttle is further advanced, the flow of gasoline into the mixing chamber through the primary jet is augmented by an additional supply coming from a secondary jet, and an additional supply of air is also introduced. This secondary, or double supply of gasoline and air is not needed for ordinary speeds up to 45 miles an hour, and so of course the cylinders are not being fed with a greater supply of gasoline than is actually needed to attain this speed. It is said that this feature of conserving the supply of gasoline and not forcing the cylinders to burn any more than is actually necessary to produce the desired power, is largely responsible for the remarkable economy of the new Peerless, even though it is an eight cylinder car.

There is also an automatic pickup plunger controlled by suction in the intake manifold, and used for quick acceleration.

CARE IS NEEDED IN CONNECTING BATTERY

Care should be taken in connecting up any battery, wet or dry cells, with a good grade of insulated, rubber-covered wire, and see that the ends of the wire attached to the binding posts are scraped clean and bright.

USE THE WRENCH AT LEAST MONTHLY

Do not fail to put a wrench on every important nut and bolt on your car at least once a month. Nuts held by cotter pins may be passed by inspection, but those held by loose washers will need to be tried with a wrench. A loose part may easily wreck the car and cause loss of life.

NEW CLEVELAND SIX CLOSED CAR

"The announcement by the Cleveland Automobile company of their new 1923 models is one of the most important announcements of the year, partly because of the attractiveness of the new open and closed cars that are being introduced, and partly because of the startling low prices," said Mr. Moulder of Wilhelm-Moulder company, local Cleveland Six distributors.

"The first surprise is the new two-door sedan at $1295. This model is shown in the center in the accompanying illustrations. It has a metal paneled Fisher built body with comfortable seating capacity for five passengers and is the lowest price ever established in an all-metal car of this type on a six cylinder chassis. The body is upholstered in rich taupe plush with interior fittings of the finest of closed cars. The front seats are individual and tip forward to permit ease in entering and leaving the car. All of the plate glass windows are lowered or raised by automatic regulators. There is an extra rain and sun vision windshield and the model is a complete closed car.

"The other new closed model announced is the four-door five-passenger sedan at $1495. The body of this car is also built by Fisher and is finished with unusual richness. The color scheme of the interior is gray.

"We believe that these two new enclosed cars represent the greatest motor car values that have ever been offered in closed automobiles and the announcement, coming as it does at the very start of the closed car selling season, should make these models the most sought after of all closed cars.

"Another announcement of no less importance is the announcement of the new price of $995 on the new 1923 Cleveland Six touring car. Never before has a Cleveland Six sold for less than $1,000. The new touring is strikingly attractive and represents some marked improvements in design."

MOTORIST'S CORSET NOW THE VOGUE

For some time there has been an endeavor among auto outfitters to develop something which will take up some of the strain on back and stomach of drivers, particularly those using cars with a stiff clutch.

Now out of the Pacific coast has come an idea for a "corsetbelt." This is made of leather bands from six to nine inches wide so arranged as to support the abdominal muscles.

Legal Courtesy For Motor Cops.

"Pardon me, madam, you are traveling at a rate of twenty-five miles an hour, which is in excess of the eighteen mile an hour allowed by law. It is my duty to see your operator's permit and give you a card directing you to post collateral at the nearest police station." Those are the words that Washington cops must content themselves with after chasing speeders. The new law forbids "bawling out" and insists that the tone of voice be courteous.

Seventy per cent of all cars in use were bought at less than $1,000.

Buick Service Protects Buick Owners Everywhere

Buick owners everywhere recognize this blue and white emblem of authorized service as further assurance of dependable Buick performance.

Experience has shown Buick owners that "authorized" service means a conscientious, helpful interest in the continued and perfect operation of their Buicks.

Authorized service is a guarantee of skilled labor from mechanics of long experience on Buick cars, and that every new part is genuine, factory-made of the same high quality as the original unit.

It is an assurance that the establishment is conducted to serve Buick owners first, last, and always in the way that will continue the dependable performance built into every Buick car.

Paint this Fall and Save Money

WINTER is the most destructive season on paint; particularly if the paint has begun to wear off. Cold rains and snows find every little crack and cranny, and quickly start expensive damage.

If your house needs paint this fall, put it on; don't put it off. By waiting until next spring you will have to buy more paint and pay more for putting it on, to say nothing of possible repairs.

The right time to paint is right before your buildings need it—not afterwards. You don't let your crank case go dry before filling it with oil. Then why not use the same brand of common sense in painting?

And just as you use the best brand of oil, why not use the best brand of paint? We suggest that you paint this fall—now—with Lowe Brothers High Standard Paint.

NEW REO 4-PASSENGER COUPE

Never Has $1835 Bought As Much Closed Car Valve

All-steel paneled body, richly upholstered
Hardwood framework, braced with drop forgings
Mounted on the famous Reo Six-Cylinder Chassis

Just Plain Facts, Here, But They Speak Out Loud

NEVER have beauty, utility and mechanical goodness so effectively joined forces with economy as they have in this new Reo Coupe.

1923 is anticipated by its design of impressive dignity—by its never-grow-tiresome body lines and cord-tire-equipped steel disc wheels with demountable rims.

Under its richly finished paneling of sturdy steel is a rugged hardwood framework, fashioned and fabricated as only master coach-builders know how.

Over the wide, deep, springy seats is upholstering that makes instant friends by its appearance, and lasting ones by its wearing qualities.

Clubby coziness for four occupants, whether wide of girth or long of limb, is definitely assured by a clever seating arrangement. There's freedom of movement for all, with an extra measure for the driver.

Mechanical reliability that is institutionally Reo is built into the double-framed chassis, with the power units suspended in an inner frame which, in turn, is cradled within the outer one. Real shock-absorbing construction, this, with more-miles-of-car-service proving its soundness.

Fifty horse-power is developed in the six ground cylinders in which travel the carbon-proof aluminum-alloy pistons. And quietly carried to the drive wheels through a 4-bearing crankshaft, a 12-plate clutch, an amidship-mounted transmission and smoothly operating universal joints.

Beautifully finished in a rich shade of Cuban gray, light below the belt and slightly darker above. Optional: Reo blue or Burgundy. Fenders and running gear black enameled.

Auxiliary seat provides arm-chair comfort for the fourth passenger, and folds completely out of the way when not required.

The top is of sound-absorbing construction, muffling mechanical noises instead of accentuating them.

Door and side windows slide gently and quietly in felt-lined channels; rear window glass is softly embedded in rubber. Thus are window rattles eliminated.

Window curtains delicately match with the shade of upholstering, and are on spring rollers.

A neat parcel compartment behind the driver's seat, and an extra roomy one on the rear deck provide ample storage space for baggage.

The new style visor is of pleasing convenience; so is the cowl ventilator.

Step mats — corrugated rubber, aluminum framed—have self-contained kick plates and scrapers.

Parking lights on cowl harmonize in design with the new drum-type headlights. Of course there's a dome light inside.

Whiskey Running Into Canada by Americans in the Seventies Resulted in the Organization of the Famous Royal Northwest Mounted Police.

Drawing by CHARLES M. RUSSELL

Copyrighted 1911 by the Cheely-Raban Syndicate.

MOUNTED POLICE PATROL CAPTURES AMERICAN WHISKY RUNNERS.

One of the most famous of all constabulary forces that have been organized to establish law and order in new and lawless countries was the Royal Northwest Mounted Police of Canada, which two years ago became the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and was given the task of enforcing dominion laws in all parts of Canada, instead of only in the northwest provinces, as it had done for more than 40 years. It has been quite generally forgotten, however, that the Scarlet Riders of the Plains, as they came to be known, came into being as the result of an invasion of the Hudson's Bay Company's territory in Canada by American whisky runners and Indian traders, whose operations were a serious meance to the British traders and who were setting an example of lawlessness to the red men that the Canadian government refused to tolerate.

The story of the Northwest Mounted Police is an interesting one and it is intimately associated with the history of the Northwestern United States during the stirring days of the 70's when plains warfare and lawlessness were at their height. Curiously enough, in view of the prominence today of the prohibition issue along the Canadian border, whisky was the dominating factor in the events leading up to the organization of the Mounted Police and a subsequent invasion of settlers into the Northwest provinces that has, in the years since, transformed a great wilderness inhabited only by fur hunters and traders into a vast stock and farming country. Still more curious is the fact that the mighty Hudson's Bay Company, then enjoying the most gigantic monopoly of trade ever granted to a private corporation, brought about the organization of the Scarlet Riders by its demands for protection against American invaders, for the coming of law and order brought the new population that enormously curtailed the power and the scope of operations of the British fur traders.

It was in 1870 that the Fort Benton traders, who controlled all the Indian fur and buffalo robe trading in Montana, were surprised by the appearance of a United States marshal, one Harding, who announced he had come to put a stop to whisky trading with the Indians. The Hudson's Bay company in the north furnished whisky to the Indians quite freely in connection with their trading with them, and the Blackfeet, River Crows, Gros Ventres and other tribes that traded at Fort Benton demanded that if they could not get whisky at Fort Benton they would go north and trade their furs to the Hudson's Bay company. This situation threw consternation into the ranks of the Fort Benton traders.

The marshal showed at once that he meant business, however, by confiscating several stocks of whisky that he found there. Two of the Fort Benton traders immediately determined that, if they were to be shut off from Indian trading on the American side of the line, they would undertake the desperate expedient of invading the Hudson's Bay territory on the Canadian side. They therefore set out on horseback for Helena, the capital of Montana, where they bought a large stock of alcohol, which formed the base of trade whisky. Placing this on rafts on the Missouri river near Helena, they floated it down to the present site of Great Falls, where they had teams and wagons waiting to transport it to the Canadian line.

The American traders were Joe Kipp and Joe Thomas.

Three days later, just after crossing the north fork of Milk river, Kipp looked back and saw a lone rider following at a stiff lope. "It's the marshal," said Kipp, "and right here's where we stand him off."

Harding rode up and ordered Kipp to turn his outfit around and head for Fort Benton. Kipp said: "Marshal, you're just 20 minutes too late. We crossed the boundary line at the North Fork back there."

The marshal stormed and threatened. Kipp defied him. Finally Harding wheeled his horse and rode back on the trail. Later, when the boundary line was surveyed, the spot where he tried to arrest Kipp was found to be 300 yards south of the line on the American side.

Kipp went on north to Belly river and there built a trading post which the Americans named Fort Standoff, in commemoration of their experience with the marshal. While the place was being built the teams were kept busy hauling trade goods and provisions from Fort Benton, and with the coming of winter the Blackfeet, Piegans, and Bloods gathered on the Belly and Old Man rivers, according to an agreement they had made with Kipp. The country was black with buffalo, and by the time spring came the warehouse held 3,000 fine robes and more than 2,000 small skins, while the trade room was bare of goods.

The arrival of the Fort Standoff robes in Fort Benton caused great excitement. The season at Benton had been an extremely unprofitable one. Under the watchful eye of Marshal Harding, traders had been unable to make a move, and they lost no time in preparing to invade the north country, as Kipp had so successfully done. Before summer had well started, plans were afoot by others to do some trading north of the line during the coming winter.

The leader of the second expedition, John J. Healy, was one of the bravest and most picturesque characters of the northwest. He was later several times a Montana sheriff and later a leading trader in Alaska, where he made and lost a million dollars.

Following Kipp's arrival at Benton, some Red River halfbreeds came in and brought word that the factor of the Hudson Bay company at Fort Calgary had sworn vengeance against the American invaders of his territory and was going to clean out Fort Standoff.

Healy, therefore, was not willing to take any chances without proper protection when he and his partner, Al Hamilton, reached the junction of the St. Mary's and Belly rivers, they built a fort that was large enough to withstand any sort of assault that could be made upon it. The place was built upon the plan of Fort Benton; and cannons were mounted on the bastions, with plenty of grape and canister shot beside them in the shape of 25-pound sacks of trade balls. The total cost of the place was $20,000. Most appropriately, it was named Fort Whoop-up, in accordance with the owners' intentions of "whooping up" things in the north country.

This constituted a challenge that the Hudson's Bay company could not ignore, and representations were sent to Ottawa that resulted in the immediate organization of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. The first draft was made up largely of youngsters with a taste for adventure, with a sprinkling of soldiers of fortune from all parts of the British empire who were attracted by the lure of a new wilderness. Assembled and trained at Ottawa, they were sent to Duluth and from there to Moorhead, Minn., under special arrangements with the United States government, but with the stipulation that their arms should be boxed while on American soil. They crossed into Canada at Pembina, on the Dakota line, and two 9-pound cannon, drawn by six horses each. There were three troops.

The Mounted Police at once advanced against Fort Whoop-up. Healy decided that the force of Britishers was too strong for him, and after burying all of the trade whiskey in the ground in the center of the fort, he threw open the doors at the demand of the scarlet-coated horsemen. The British commander, Colonel Macleod, announced that he was there to see that laws were observed. The American traders, seeing that the game was up, gradually drifted back across the line.

When the Police Mutinied

The Mounted Police had a terrible time the first winter. Their uniforms wore out and their food ran short. Finally, 21 men mutinied and taking their rifles, started out on foot through the deep snow for the American line. Their leader was an old British soldier, George Frazier, who had served through the Crimean war in one of the English fusilier regiments, and went by the nickname of "The Old Fusilier." For several days they plowed through the snow, weak from hunger, forced to eat raw buffalo meat to keep body and soul together. Many of them fell in their tracks, but Frazier would beat them up and on again. Shortly after they left Fort Macleod their absence was discovered and an equal number of mounted police under the command of a Captain Crozier followed them, finally overtaking the deserters at Belly Butte, some distance south of Macleod on the Fort Shaw trail.

Crozier, when he came in sight of the traggling party of desperate men, did not know what to do. The deserters entrenched themselves on a hill in the snow and defied the officer to arrest them and take them back. He feared that if he tried to use force that some of the men under him might desert, also. Finally, he turned around and led his men back to Fort Macleod.

Captured in Montana

The deserters, forced on by Frazier, finally reached the blackfeet agency on the American side of the line, near where the town of Choteau, in Teton county, stands today, and there they were surrounded by a troop of United States cavalry from the agency and forced to surrender their arms. They obtained food, and scattered, few remaining in Montana.

There were various other disorders that winter, but with the coming of spring the force was properly outfitted and equipped, and during the following 45 years the Mounted Police became world-famed for efficiency and for a magnificent service record. The police established themselves in a country of wild men, white and red; a country of great distances and difficulties. They patrolled a pathless empire cut by torrential unbridged rivers, among Indians whose chiefs had won their place by war and theft and white men who hated law and enrouraged the reds to violence by their own conduct.

The duty of the police was to create in the minds of red men and white a respect for the law. Tact and patience, courage and endless persistence were their outstanding characteristics. There was neither bullying nor driving, but a steady pressure was maintained to educate settlers and natives to respect the laws. Many of the men in the service were and are of aristocratic British families. The new and enlarged force contains hundreds of veterans of the war in Europe whose breasts are covered with service ribbons gained in the hottest fighting in France and Belgium. In the Royal Mounted Police, however, former rank and family connections are forgotten and all men are equal. There has been only one mark of merit in the organization, and that has been gained by absolute fearlessness, loyalty to the service and an unswerving devotion to duty.

In the wildest days of the northwestern frontier the sight of one Scarlet Rider aroused more fear and respect in the breasts of male factors than a hundred soldiers would have done. That was because the members of the Police could not be bluffed. It was do or die with them. When General Sir Sam Steele, commander-in-chief of the Canadian forces in Europe during the war, was sergeant in the Mounted Police, a camp of hostile Cree Indians obstructed the building of the Canadian Pacific. Accompanied by only one man, Sergeant Steele rode into the camp, and while the Indians were shooting and shouting defiance, he rode to the lodge of the head chief and ordered him to move on. The chief, with defiant glare, refused to obey. Steele dismounted, brushed by the rigid figure of the Indian and jumped into the lodge entrance. With a kick he knocked down a lodge pole; then another and another until the skin lodge came tumbling to the ground. His audacity overawed the Crees and they broke camp at once.

Two mounted policemen controlled Sitting Bull and his band of hostiles after they had crossed the Canadian line following the Custer fight. Hundreds of Mounted Policemen died on the trail in the frozen north in pursuit of criminals. The Mounted Police have a tradition that their men never quit hunting a criminal and never forget a crime. But they also tempered justice with mercy, and their archives contain the records of hundreds of men who were corrected in errors of judgment or action, and were directed toward right paths. Comparatively they were few in numbers, but they developed enormous power that was exercised for good. The old westerners on the American side remember them with respect. In a sense Fort Benton, Montana, was once their headquarters, for a Fort Benton merchandising firm, I. G. Baker & Co., acted as official paymasters of the Police for the Canadian government, and in the 70's their saddles and much other equipment were made at Fort Benton. The Northwest Mounted Police always co-operated with the authorities of the law on the American side, and there was little friction between them.
