Democrats prepare budget amendments

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Democratic leaders said today they are readying amendments to a Republican package of spending cuts after President Reagan's nationally broadcast appeal to Americans for "making your voices heard" to back the proposal.

The 1986 budget plan, which includes limits on Social Security cost-of-living increases and the elimination of many popular federal programs, was to undergo its first test in the GOP-run Senate later today.

Democrats, who say they have been shut out of the negotiations up to this point, said today they are ready to make their moves.

"It's a compromise between Senate Republicans and the president, so at some stage we feel like we would like to be in on the compromise, and that process will start today," said Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla.

The Republican plan faces an uphill battle in both houses of Congress, in part because of Democratic perceptions the proposal isn't fair.

"I have found no sentiment in the House of Representatives on either side of the aisle to support that Senate-presidential compromise," said the House Budget Committee chairman, Rep. William Gray, D-Pa. "What we've got to do is share the burden with everybody. I don't think you can fence off any area, including Pentagon spending, from the budgetary scalpel of austerity as he's doing in his plan."

But Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., said Reagan's speech on the eve of the start of Senate debate on the plan "raises the odds."

"It was a good, tough speech, just what we wanted," Dole said. However, he said that, as of now, he still lacks enough commitments for its approval — a vote he said was not likely to be taken for at least 10 days.

Speaking from the Oval Office, Reagan said: "Please tell your senators and representatives, by phone, wire or mailgram, that our future hangs in the balance, that this is no time for partisanship."

The White House said that in the first 40 minutes after Reagan's address, the White House logged 546 telephone calls expressing support for the president's stand and 128 calls voicing opposition, according to deputy press secretary Rusty Brashear.

Reagan said the plan, which would cut $300 billion in federal spending over the next three years, "not only deserves your support, it must have your support to pass."

Many senators of both parties have voiced reservations over some of the more sensitive elements of the package — including the limits on Social Security and proposed elimination of programs like Amtrak rail passenger service, the Jobs Corps and loans for small businesses.

"We stand at a crossroads. The hour is late, the task is large, and the stakes are momentous," Reagan declared. "I ask you to join us in making your voices heard in the Senate this week and later in the House."

Today's Senate vote would permit the plan negotiated by the White House and key Senate Republicans to be formally debated as a package — a vote that Senate and administration officials said was important both symbolically and procedurally.

Nicaraguan aid halted by House

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Democratled House, after two days of bitter debate and dramatic votes, has left President Reagan's policy of aiding Nicaraguan rebels in a shambles, killing all active proposals for resuming U.S. assistance this fiscal year.

Despite presidential lobbying, the House on Wednesday defeated a Republican alternative for $14 million in non-lethal aid by two votes, 215-213. Republicans then joined with liberal Democrats to kill a moderate Democratic alternative, 303-123.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said he hoped the bill's defeat would give both the leftist Nicaraguan government and the Reagan administration a "good little breathing spell that might give both sides (the United States and Nicaragua) a cooling-off period."

But Reagan declared that he had no intention to give up and planned to "return to the Congress again and again to seek a policy that supports peace and democracy in Nicaragua.... Our friends in Central America look to us for help against totalitarianism."

■ Pravda calls action "defeat" for Reagan

The president added that the House vote "damages national security and foreign policy goals."

House Republicans said they might try to revive aid to the rebels before the current fiscal year ends Sept. 30 and would definitely seek approval of Reagan's request for $28 million in military support for the rebels in fiscal 1986, which starts Oct. 1.

UTPB funding restored by House

From Staff and Wire Reports

AUSTIN — Full funding for the University of Texas of the Permian Basin was restored during floor debate on the House appropriations bill on Wednesday with an amendment supported by the lawmaker who last month suggested the school be abolished.

Under the budget bill tentatively adopted by House members, UTPB will receive $7.2 million in funding for the 1986-87 fiscal years, which Rep. Tom Craddick, R—Midland, said restores funding to the original level.

The House Appropriations Committee voted on March 25 to shut down UTPB and Texas A&M University at Galveston; and sell the campuses to raise revenue for the state. The proposal to close the schools was offered by Rep. Paul Colbert, D-Houston, who said Wednesday he did not want to make "an across-the-board whack at higher education."

however, Colbert said legislators "ought to take a closer look" at institutions of higher education to see where cuts can be made."

Gov. Mark White, House Speaker Gib Lewis and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby have proposed a "blue ribbon commission" to evaluate higher education in Texas, including a determination if UTPB and other universities should be abolished.

During consideration of the appropriations bill Wednesday, funding for Texas A&M University at Galveston was quickly restored, but funding for UTPB hit a temporary snag when Rep. Paul Moreno, D—El Paso, brought up a house rule stating an amount cannot be added to the budget unless a like amount is subtracted from the budget.

Moreno said he announced the rule to chastise Rep. Kelly Godwin, R-Odessa, who voted against a fee bill on Monday which will raise $106.4 million for the state. "Here's a guy who knows his university (UTPB) has been in trouble," Moreno said, "and he votes against the fee bill."

Moreno said the fee bill, criticized by some as a tax bill in disguise, will help all the universities in the state, adding Godwin "wants to have his cake and eat it too."

Godwin later expressed surprise at Moreno's point of order, which resulted in lawmakers huddling behind the speaker's podium for more than two hours in working out an acceptable amendment.

Godwin said he voted against the fee bill because "UTPB was not in the appropriations bill at that time" and because "it was a tax increase and the voters in Odessa would not support a tax increase without appropriations for UTPB intact."

Under the amendment, co-sponsored by Craddick, Godwin and several others, funds appropriated to "general academic components" of the University of Texas System were reduced by $1.5 million in fiscal 1986 and $7.2 million in fiscal 1987, and added to UTPB's budget for the 1986-87 biennium. The amendment received approval by unanimous consent.

Latest heart implant patient dies

By STEVE SWIFT
Associated Press Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Jack C. Burcham, a retired train engineer who pinned hopes for an extended life on an experimental artificial heart, died 10 days after his implant when a large amount of blood in his chest cavity inhibited his heart's pumping, his doctors said today.

Dr. Allan M. Lansing, medical spokesman for the Humana Hospital Audubon implant team, said Burcham's condition had deteriorated rapidly beginning late Wednesday afternoon. He died at 9:48 p.m. after his left lung filled with blood, Lansing said.

Doctors initially did not know the specific cause of death, he said, but an autopsy identified a large "jelly-like" clot around the artificial heart.

The upper chambers of his heart were remnants of his own natural organ. The lower chambers were made up by the plastic and metal device.

"The cause for the sudden deterioration was compression of the upper left chamber of the heart by the blood clot within a confined space," Lansing said, adding that the condition is known as cardiac tamponade.

Sixty-two-year-old Jack C. Burcham, of Le Roy, Ill., the fifth and oldest recipient of a permanent artificial heart, survived the shortest amount of time — only 10 days — with the device.

The condition normally would show up much earlier than it did in Burcham's case but the rigidity of the plastic-and-metal heart masked the problem for a while, Lansing said.

The source of the bleeding is still not known, Lansing said.

Burcham, 62, of Le Roy, Ill., was the fifth and oldest recipient of a permanent artificial heart. He had suffered kidney problems since before the April 14 implant and was put on dialysis twice this week to cleanse his blood, Lansing said.

Burcham also had had difficulty when doctors discovered that the Jarvik-7 was too large for his chest during the implant surgery, and he suffered severe bleeding the day after the operation.

He was the second artificial heart recipient to die, but his time with the device was the briefest. Three men with Jarvik-7 hearts — William J. Schroeder and Murray Haydon in Louisville and an unidentified man in Sweden remain tethered to machinery that drives the device with puffs of air.

Lansing said Burcham's kidney problem "was aggravated by the stress of the operation and the need for transfusions" after the excessive bleeding.

The kidney function was stable early Wednesday "but not satisfactory" Lansing said. He was placed on dialysis in the afternoon but doctors noticed substantially decreased breathing sounds from the left chest late in the afternoon and dialysis was stopped, he said.

X-rays showed "a good deal of fluid had accumulated on the left side," Lansing said.

Jail going to the bats?

From Staff Reports

Mildland County Sheriff Gary Painter made a startling discovery the day after he shipped 14 inmates out of the County Jail to less crowded West Texas jails.

He has other company in the belfry.

"We've got some bats in jail, real live bats," the sheriff said.

Several of the dark nocturnal flying mammals on Wednesday were captured by jail trusties, dumped in buckets and covered.

Bats have been living in the downtown courthouse's upper-level crevices for several years and occasionally sneak into an office, hallway or courtroom.

Until now, none had been jailed.

"They managed to filter into the jail," Painter said.

He said he tried to get exterminators to visit the courthouse on Wednesday, "but they didn't want to come out last night," he said today.

"They (the bats) weren't really any trouble," he said.

Ocean incineration plan opposed

By DAVID SEDENO
Associated Press Writer

BROWNSVILLE — Environmentalists hoped thousands of South Texas residents would join them and state-elected officials today to voice opposition to proposed ocean burning of toxic wastes in the Gulf of Mexico.

"I think that will be the only thing that will affect the decision," said Sue Ann Fruge of the Gulf Coast Coalition for Public Health. Ocean incineration "has the scrutiny of the nation," she said.

The coalition has had the most vocal opposition to the burning of toxic wastes. In November 1983, more than 6,000 people attended a public hearing to voice their opposition. The Environmental Protection Agency delayed the granting of permits to companies wishing to burn toxic wastes in May 1984 so that more studies could be conducted.

Among those scheduled to testify at the all-day hearing today were Gov. Mark White, Attorney General Jim Mattox, area state legislators, members of the coalition, students, and officials from Chemical Waste Management Inc., which owns two ships that burn toxic wastes.

"There's a misconception. This is ocean incineration, not ocean dumping," said Bill Brown, director of marine affairs for Chemical Waste Management. "It's very easy to oppose something because it's a big ship that's carrying a lot of waste."

The Brownsville hearing is the third in a series of public hearings being conducted across the country on proposed ocean incinceration.

Environmentalists have complained the EPA is not making the public aware of hearings or making available the agency's background reports on ocean incineration.

Opponents also protest a proposal to grant 10-year permits to companies to operate ocean incinerators. They contend that the technology has not been properly tested.

EPA officials, although saying they are neutral on the issue, have said their reports conclude ocean incineration poses no greater risk than land-based incineration, but also said continuing research is needed.

Federal officials are considering at least two ocean incinerations two sites, 200 miles off the Texas-Louisiana coast and one off the Delaware-New Jersey coast.

On Wednesday, Mrs. Fruge and community leaders addressed a rally at Texas Southmost College and the group of about 50 walked 10 blocks to another rally.

Along the way, marchers, some wearing gas masks and carrying placards, chanted, "No more PCBs."

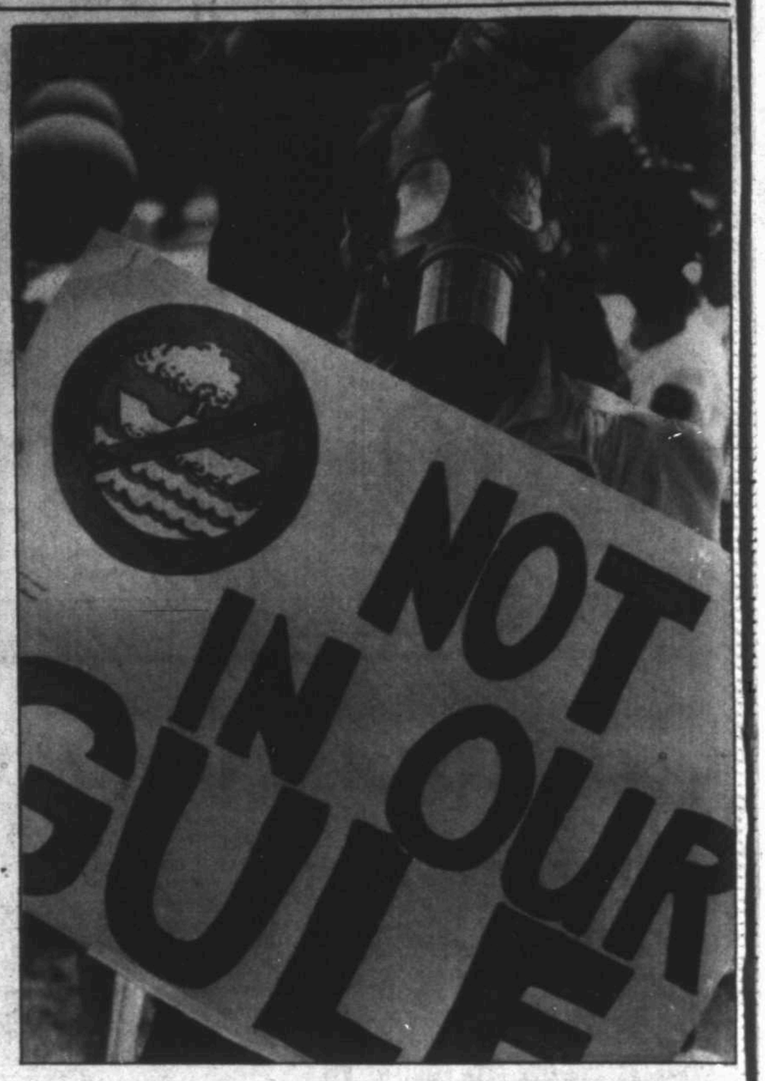

PCBs — polychlorinated biphenyls, once used as electrical coolant until manufacture of the substance was banned in 1977 — are only part of what's proposed to be burned at sea.

Mrs. Fruge said the proposed ocean incineration issue has unified Rio Grande Valley residents.

The coalition has newspaper advertisements telling about the public hearing and also has hit the airwaves.

A television commercial shows a family of four on the beach and the theme of the movie "Jaws" begins.

Students of Texas Southmost College march through the streets of Brownsville, rallying against a plan to burn toxic wastes on ships off the coast of Texas. The march was staged in anticipation of today's hearing on a request by Chemical Waste Managament to burn PCBs in the Gulf of Mexico. The students dubbed themselves "Burn Busters."

Fiddlers not only bonus for winning Pulitzer Prize

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — A fiddle band played in the newsroom and the publisher announced $250 bonuses after the Fort Worth (Texas) Star-Telegram captured the Pulitzer Prize for public service for revealing a design flaw in helicopters that led to the deaths of nearly 250 U.S. servicemen.

The Philadelphia Inquirer and Newsday of Melville, N.Y., each won two Pulitzers for journalism Wednesday. The prize for drama went to the Broadway hit "Sunday in the Park with George," whose music and lyrics were written by Stephen Sondheim with a book by James Lapine.

The Star-Telegram's reporting by Mark J. Thompson ultimately led the Army to ground almost 600 Huey helicopters pending their modification, the Pulitzer board said. The helicopter, a mainstay of the Army's fleet, was plagued by a design problem called "mast bumping," which occurs when the rotor tilts too far and strikes the mast that attaches the blade to the craft.

At the Star-Telegram on Wednesday, champagne flowed, a country music band played in the newsroom, and President and Publisher Phil Meek announced $250 bonuses for everyone on the editorial and circulation staffs.

Newsday won the award for international reporting for a series on hunger in Africa and the commentary award for columns by Murray Kempton, 67.

The Inquirer was cited for investigative reporting by William K. Marimow about attacks by police dogs on more than 350 people. More than a dozen officers were removed from the K-9 unit, the Pulitzer board said.

In 1978, Marimow was part of a team that won the public service Pulitzer for an Inquirer series on police brutality.

The newspaper's Larry Price won a Pulitzer for feature photography for his series of pictures from wartorn Angola and El Salvador.

The award for fiction went to "Foreign Affairs" by Alison Lurie. "The Good War: An Oral History of World War II" by Studs Terkel won the prize for general non-fiction, while the biography prize went to "The Life and Times of Cotton Mather," by Kenneth Silverman.

Ms. Lurie said she was so sure she wouldn't win that she took the phone off the hook in her London flat Wednesday and watched television.

The history award was won by "Prophets of Regulation" by Thomas K. McCraw, and the poetry prize by Carolyn Kizer's "Yin."

Two music awards were announced. One went to "Symphony, RiverRun," by Stephen Albert. A special citation was awarded to William Schuman, winner of the first Pulitzer Prize for music in 1943.

Albert's reaction was guardedly optimistic because, he said, "the Pulitzer allows you to be more selective in the commissions that come your way" but "a lot of people haven't done too much after winning a Pulitzer."

Each prize, with the exception of the gold medal for public service and Schuman's citation, carries a $1,000 award.

The Pulitzer for general news reporting went to the Virginian-Pilot and Ledger-Star of Norfolk, Va., for articles by Thomas Turcol exposing an allegedly corrupt economic development official who later resigned.

The St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times also won a Pulitzer for investigative reporting by Lucy Morgan and Jack Reed on alleged corruption in the office of Pasco County Sheriff John Short, who was turned out of office by voters.

Short was indicted by a grand jury and is awaiting trial.

The Pulitzer for editorial writing went to Richard Aregood of the Philadelphia Daily News for editorials on a variety of subjects.

The Pulitzer for the new category of explanatory journalism was won by Jon Franklin of the Baltimore Evening Sun for his series about the science of molecular psychiatry.

In another new category — reporting on specialized subjects — the Pulitzer went to Randall Savage and Jackie Crosby of the Macon (Ga.) Telegraph and News for their examination of academics and athletics at two Georgia universities.

The Des Moines Register's Thomas Knudson won the award for national affairs for a series on the occupational hazards of farming.

Alice Steinbach of the Baltimore Sun won the prize for feature writing for "A Boy of Unusual Vision," an account of a blind boy's world.

Howard Rosenberg of the Los Angeles Times won a Pulitzer for his television criticism, and Jeff MacNelly of the Chicago Tribune won for his cartoons.

MacNelly won Pulitzers twice before, in 1972 and 1978, for his editorial cartoons for the Richmond (Va.) News-Leader.

The Pulitzer for spot news photography went to the staff of the Orange County Register in Santa Ana, Calif., for what the Pulitzer board termed "exceptional photographic coverage of the Olympic Games."

Stan Grossfeld of the Boston Globe also won in feature photography for his pictures of the Ethiopian famine and illegal aliens on the U.S.-Mexican border.

Both the feature photography winners had won previous Pulitzers. Grossfeld won last year in the spot news category, and Price won in the spot category in 1981 for the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

House Minority Whip Trent Lott, R-Miss., said the Republicans voted against the Democratic alternative, even though it contained $10 million for Nicaraguan refugees, because it would have extended a flat ban on U.S. support for military actions in Nicaragua into the future.

"You might as well send (the rebels) a love letter and tell them they're on their own," said Lott in dismissing the Democratic plan that had cleared the House in a preliminary vote, 219-206.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., who led Democratic efforts to defeat the president's plan, predicted that the Republicans would try to attach aid to the Contras to other legislation this year.

O'Neill said that before the vote, he received a call from Reagan, who wanted the speaker to release members who had pledged him their votes.

O'Neill said he told Reagan that House members are always free to vote as they wish and added: "I sincerely believe you're not going to be happy until you get into Nicaragua."

Democrats, who have suffered a string of defeats at Reagan's hands, were jubilant as they dealt the president the biggest foreign policy setback of his second term.

"We broke the law of averages — we won one," said Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass., a House Foreign Affairs Committee member.

On Tuesday, the Senate approved Reagan's original plan to provide $14 million in military aid to the rebels, but the House rejected it, killing the Senate measure and setting up Wednesday's showdown votes on the Democratic and Republican alternatives.

Reagan launched his drive to win renewed U.S. aid to the Contras this month despite Republican advice that he lacked the votes to resume military aid. Reagan pressed the issue anyway, depicting the Contras as "freedom fighters" battling a communist, totalitarian state.

The Democratic alternative would have provided $10 million in humanitarian aid for Nicaraguan refugees, including Contras living outside Nicaragua, and $4 million to enforce a possible peace settlement.

Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., a sponsor of the plan, said it would give the leftist Sandinista government a chance to meet its commitment of a more democratic society, with the knowledge that Congress could resume aid to the Contras if no progress is made.

"What it does is call their bluff," Barnes said, adding that the Republican plan would have simply continued the war by providing "logistical support for an army."

If the Democratic alternative had survived, it would have gone to the Senate and left the Republicans a vehicle for trying to develop a compromise more to their liking. But House Republicans, apparently angry over the narrow defeat of their own proposal, chose to oppose any legislation.

The budget previously approved for UTPB allocated $5.7 million for the school for fiscal 1986 and nothing for fiscal 1987.

Godwin said the reduction in funding for the UT System components would not affect any school in the system, since the money was not earmarked for specific projects.

After full funding was restored to UTPB, Moreno said, "I got my point across."

Although funding for UTPB had remained in the Senate version of the appropriations bill, Craddick said he was glad it was put back in the House version of the bill because "this way you're assured it's going to be in the final bill."

HEART

Burcham's blood pressure began falling about 8:30 p.m., and doctors detected blood in the lungs and saw that Burcham was having more difficulty in breathing.

There was rapid deterioration of his condition in the 30 minutes before his death.

Implant surgeon William C. DeVries, who was attending a heart conference in downtown Louisville Wednesday evening, was called to the hospital about 9 p.m. and said he was in Burcham's room of the coronary care unit about 15 or 20 minutes before doctors turned off the key that controlled the life-support machinery.

At the time of his death Burcham was hooked not only to the heart's drive system but also to a respirator that controlled his breathing.

DeVries said everyone in the room was "really saddened when we found there was nothing more we could do."

Asked how he felt at the time, DeVries recalled a comment made by Burcham just before the implant operation. "I remember him saying, 'You put the heart in and I'll take care of it,'" DeVries said.

Family members at the hospital called Burcham's eldest son, Jack B. Burcham, Wednesday night to tell him of his father's death.

"I don't think it had anything to do with the (artificial heart) operation," the younger Burcham said in a telephone interview from his Le Roy, Ill., home. "I really feel that dad was probably too weak" to have survived.

DeVries had said four days before the implant that he considered Burcham to be the strongest of his four artificial-heart candidates. On Friday, Humana Inc. spokesman Bob Irvine had described Burcham as being "right on the normal track now. His kidney function is returning to normal."

But the younger Burcham said he believed his father's condition was not as strong going into the transplant as doctors had indicated.

He said that he did not think the implant was a waste and that he believed the program should continue.

Burcham suffered a near-fatal heart attack Oct. 9 while working on the roof of his house.

His condition began to deteriorate after that, and on March 28 he was readmitted to St. Joseph Hospital in Bloomington, Ill., with congestive heart failure. The implant was considered after he failed to respond to aggressive therapy and medication.

But doctors encountered problems during the operation.

Burcham's chest was too small for the mechanical pump, so doctors spent almost six hours removing cartilage and implanting it in his irregularly shaped chest cavity.

Burcham was rushed to surgery the next day to stem bleeding from stitches connecting the heart to the aorta. By then he had lost 42 pints of blood.

His kidneys, weakened by a massive heart attack in October, were strained by the series of blood infusions, and he was put on dialysis on Monday and Wednesday to cleanse his blood. Earlier this week doctors said his kidney condition was not life-threatening. He had remained in critical condition and had to use a respirator after the implant.

Burcham's wife of 42 years, Lavonne "Jinx" Burcham, told reporters two days after the implant that Burcham had been "motivated by his love for life and for his family."

Barney Clark, the first recipient, lived for 112 days before dying on March 23, 1983, while Schroeder, the second and longest-living recipient, on Wednesday spent his 151st day with the device.

Haydon, 58, of Louisville, remained at Audubon hospital still hooked to a ventilator that aids his breathing. Schroeder, of Jasper, Ind., is recuperating at an apartment near the hospital.

A man who never has been officially identified received the Jarvik-7 at Karolinska Hospital in Stockholm, Sweden, on April 7.

Dallas hospital plans to start performing heart transplants

DALLAS (AP) — Officials at Methodist Medical Center say they will begin performing heart transplants by early summer, and cardiologists at the facility are monitoring the progress of three potential candidates.

"None of those is quite ready for transplant," said Dr. Lonnie Whiddon, who plans to perform heart transplants at the hospital. "Somebody could come along before those."

No Dallas hospital currently schedules heart transplants. Officials said the closest medical centers that perform the operation are in Houston.

Dr. Richard Dickerman, director of transplantation, said cardiologists are following the cases of potential transplant candidates.

While most staff members and equipment are in place, "expertise (must be) sharpened up a little bit" before Methodist begins performing heart transplants, Whiddon said.

Art shows effects of alcoholism

STATE

DALLAS (AP) — One drawing by an elementary school child depicts a kneeling boy with tears streaming down his face.

"Please stop," the caption reads.

The woeful work of art is part of a collection of several hundred drawings and paintings by children of alcoholics.

"They all show sadness, loneliness and fear," said Migs Woodside, founder and president of the New York-based Children of Alcoholics Foundation Inc., the sponsor of an exhibition now touring the United States.

Art is "a way of letting their feelings show without betraying the family secret," she said. "That way they can't be condemned for drawing a feeling."

The collection, which arrived in Dallas Wednesday for a one-month stay, is intended to educate the public about alcohol abuse through the feelings of children.

Entitled "The Images Within: A Child's View of Parental Alcoholism," the works are meant to make people aware of the 28 million children of alcoholics in the United States — seven million of whom are under the age of 18, Mrs. Woodside said.

"One out of every eight Americans is the child of an alcoholic," she said.

The artworks are painfully personal.

A series of five pictures drawn by a 47-year-old whose parents are alcoholics shows a "day in the life" of a drinking parent and a child. The pictures show a dejected child administering to a dependent parent.

The exhibit includes art by children in New York, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Minnesota and Texas, said Mrs. Woodside. The artists range in age from 6 to the 50s and are involved in therapy programs designed to help them cope with alcoholic parents, she said.

"We don't feel the need to treat the adults in order to treat the children. And in some cases parents follow their children into therapy," she said.

Studies show that children of alcoholic parents are four times more likely to become alcoholic adults than their peers whose parents are not alcoholics, she said.

Lucas appears before federal grand jury

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Convicted killer Henry Lee Lucas, who now says his confessions to hundreds of slayings were false, appeared before a federal grand jury for four hours Wednesday, then was released to the custody of state officials.

Federal authorities refused to say why they wanted Lucas to appear before the grand jury, and his attorney Guy Cox said he could shed no light on the matter.

Lucas, whose statements led to the clearing of about 200 slayings nationwide, was returned by car to Waco, where a McLennan County grand jury is investigating the authenticity of some of the confessions.

Cox said the investigation, which Attorney General Jim Mattox has joined, will continue Thursday.

Mattox had sought a court order barring Lucas from having to appear in San Antonio. But U.S. District Judge Ed Prado and the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals denied his request Tuesday.

Cox, who was not allowed in the grand jury room during Lucas' appearance, said his client told him "he was fairly treated. He seemed to be very pleased and had no problems."

Cox said he could not confirm reports the federal grand jury was investigating allegations Lucas' civil rights had been violated during a state investigation.

Assistant state Attorney General Reed Lockhooff said the U.S. attorney's office never communicated with him and never said what the grand jury investigation was about.

"They didn't talk to us. I would have loved to have talked to them," he said.

On a national television program earlier in the day, Lucas said that he gave phony confessions in an alleged multi-state crime spree because of the way he was treated while jailed in one Texas county.

"I confessed because of the treatment I received in Montague County," Lucas told the ABC Good Morning America program. "I was put in what they call a cold cell and I was deprived of every right I have.

"I asked for an attorney. I couldn't get one. I was harassed for nine months. I lost all kinds of jobs because of it and I made up my mind that...people weren't going to walk on me."

Lucas was held in Montague County in 1983 when he was charged with the 1982 murder of Kate Rich of Ringgold, Texas. It was then that he began confessing to scores of other killings. Lucas was convicted of the Rich murder and sentenced to 75 years in prison.

U.S. Attorney Helen Eversberg of the Western District of Texas would not confirm reports that the federal grand jury is investigating whether Lucas' civil rights were violated.

Lucas was ordered transferred to San Antonio over the objections of Mattox, who hoped to open a statewide probe into Lucas' confessions.

"We are convinced there are cases that Lucas has not committed despite his confessions," Mattox said Tuesday.

On Tuesday, Lucas alleged that Texas Rangers and other law enforcement officers aided his confessions by providing crime scene information.

New service lures fishermen

SIMMS (AP) — An East Texas entrepreneur is luring fishermen to his grocery store with a new service that sells bait 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Called Vend-A-Bait, the service caters to fishermen who hunt for nightcrawlers, minnows, goldfish, crawfish, leeches, waxworms, liver, catfish bait, shad fillets, shrimp and more, said Virgil Burkett, who owns Burkett Grocery.

"Those little fishes are laying in there as comfortable as can be," Burkett said.

He said Vend-A-Bait, a converted sandwich machine, began offering five kinds of bait — including live worms, goldfish and minnows — two weeks ago in Simms, 12 miles southwest of New Boston.

Jimmy Gauntt of DeKalb, stopped by the store Wednesday for some bait on his way to fish at Anderson Creek.

Gauntt fed a few quarters into the machine and was dispensed a plastic bag containing a dozen minnows.

One crane lost in fall migration

AUSTWELL (AP) — One of an 85-member flock of endangered whooping cranes was killed and another was lost during their annual fall migration to Texas, wildlife officials said.

This year's flock was the largest since the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service began counting the endangered birds in 1937, said Frank Johnson, manager of the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge.

The flock lost a chick — one of 15 young whoopers making the trip — that wandered off and settled in a rice farm with a flock of sandhill cranes, Johnson said.

But Johnson said wildlife officials did not try to retrieve the bird.

"They're pretty shy and if you try to catch one, they may go into shock and die," Johnson said.

Another crane was killed by a predator bird, officials said.

The flock was making its annual trip to the Aransas Refuge from summer nesting grounds in Wood Buffalo National Park in Canada.

Five whoopers were still at the refuge last week while the remaining cranes headed north to Canada via Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, and the Dakotas, Johnson said.

There were only 14 of the large birds in existence in North America in 1942. Today 149 whooping cranes live in captivity and in two flocks, including the Texas-Canadian birds and an experimental flock established in the West.

Florida, Georgia and Michigan are being considered as sites for a second experimental flock, officials said.

Although the whooping crane population is increasing, the species is still in danger of extinction, officials said.

In 1981, scientists began a three-year tracking project to study the birds' migratory patterns.

Hughes called 'perfect judge'

DALLAS (AP) — U.S. District Judge Sarah T. Hughes, best known to the public for her swearing in of President Lyndon B. Johnson, was a distinguished jurist who was not afraid of tough legal decisions, associates said.

Mrs. Hughes, who swore in Johnson after President John F. Kennedy was killed in Dallas in 1963, died late Tuesday at Presbyterian Hospital. She was 88.

"It was the greatest sadness to learn of Judge Hughes' death. I have known and admired her since my university days in the '30s when she was a young Texas legislator," former first lady Lady Bird Johnson said.

"Lyndon and I enjoyed her friendship and were so proud of her and the service she gave to Texas," Mrs. Johnson said.

When Kennedy was assassinated, Johnson called for Mrs. Hughes to give him the oath of office. The hastily assembled ceremony took place at Dallas Love Field aboard Air Force One as Jacqueline Kennedy, in a blood-splattered suit, stood by Johnson.

Lois Swan Jones, an aide to Mrs. Hughes, said she felt the judge would like to be remembered for more than just the historic ceremony.

"I'm sure she'd like to be remembered for swearing in Lyndon Johnson, but she'd also like to be remembered for some of her good judicial decisions," Ms. Jones said.

Judge Tom Reavley of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals remembered trying his first case of any consequence before her in 1949, when he was an assistant district attorney in Dallas and she was a state district judge.

"I'll never forget her conduct in that trial," Reavley said. "She was my idea of a perfect judge. She knew the law. She ruled promptly. She represented the proper mix of courtesy and authority.

"Incidently she made the right ruling in that case. I won," Reavley said.

Another 5th Circuit judge, Jerre S. Williams, called Mrs. Hughes "one of the most distinguished trial judges in the nation."

Budget won't require tax hike, speaker says

AUSTIN (AP) — The $36.4 billion two-year state budget scheduled for final approval by the House today can get Texas through the next two years without a tax hike, says Speaker Gib Lewis.

The House has cut where possible, spent where mandated and skimped throughout. A 135-11 vote on Wednesday gave tentative approval to the 1986-87 spending plan.

"We addressed the needs for the next biennium and certainly this will cut off any need for a tax increase," Lewis said. "I think this might not be what everyone wants, but I think it's what everyone can live with."

Though some still fear a tax hike is needed to balance the budget, Lewis is confident the $106 million fee hike bill and a college tuition increase of about $280 million will pay the way.

The final appropriations bill will be penned by a House-Senate conference committee. The Senate version is still undergoing committee scrutiny.

Spending for the current biennium is $32.4 billion, about 12 percent less than the House recommended for 1986-87. But the proposed budget is 3.2 percent less than current spending when inflation and growth are figured in, according to budget analysts.

Declining oil prices and expensive court-ordered reforms in state prisons and mental health care have contributed to this year's budget crunch.

"There were severe cuts made in some areas," said Lewis. "We addressed the priority issues, such as the social problems of this state, the prison system which we had to address, the mental health and mental retardation facilities — and at the same time we tried to restore adequate funding to higher education and public education."

The Department of Corrections spending would increase by 17 percent to $842 million for the two years. The Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation budget, $1.2 billion for the two years, includes $64 million for additional staff required in a federal court order.

The package includes a possible 3 percent per year pay hike for the 180,000 state employees. The raises are contingent upon passage of seven revenue bills.

Odessa couple sues hospital for malpractice

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Doctors at Madigan Army Medical Center left a bleeding, pregnant woman waiting and walking for seven hours before they admitted her to a delivery room, lawyers have charged in U.S. District Court.

Because of the delay, U.S. District Judge Jack E. Tanner was told, the daughter of then-Army Sgt. and Mrs. Ruben Trevino was born mentally and physically disabled.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Christopher Pickrell, who defended the federal government in the $13 million lawsuit filed by the Trevinos, responded that "an act of God" — a twisted umbilical cord — deprived the fetus of oxygen.

The oxygen loss caused brain damage, despite a "fast, fast" delivery on Nov. 3, 1981, by Madigan doctors, he said.

Trevino, 27, since has left the U.S. Army and works for General Tire & Rubber Co. in Odessa. His wife, Rachel, 27, teaches school in Odessa.

The non-jury trial of their lawsuit alleging medical malpractice began Monday in Tacoma.

Phillip Godwin, of Odessa, one of the lawyers representing the Trevinos, said in his opening statement that Mrs. Trevino "should have been admitted immediately" and placed in bed when she first appeared at Madigan at noon Nov. 3, 1981. Instead, Godwin charged, "She was sent on errands, told to wait her turn."

Godwin said Sophia was born with permanent brain damage and impairment of motor development, speech and the ability to express herself. She has a mixed type of cerebral palsy involving impairment of her arms and legs known as atonic quadriparesis.

He said she never will develop reading skills beyond the fourth-grade level, if that, and will require expensive care and advocacy all her life.

Kohl insists cemetery visit proceed

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, rebuffed by West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl when he pleaded for a change in plans, will go through with his visit to a German military cemetery, White House officials say.

A senior White House official, speaking privately, said Wednesday night that Reagan had appealed directly in a telephone conversation with Kohl to cancel the cemetery visit but that Kohl was adamant they should go.

While the cemetery visit is definitely on, the White House says, plans for a wreath-laying ceremony at Bitburg are still being discussed with the West German government.

Chief of Staff Donald Regan, acknowledging that the administration has been "roughed up" by the controversy over the visit, said Wednesday that conversations with the Bonn government continued after Reagan and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl reaffirmed plans for the event.

Regan declined to say whether the president tried to persuade Kohl to cancel the visit. But another administration official, speaking on condition he not be identified, confirmed that Reagan made such a plea last Friday and said Kohl insisted that the visit proceed as planned.

The visit to the cemetery at Bitburg, continuing to dominate other issues at the White House, was the subject of persistent questioning by reporters at a briefing called by Regan to outline the president's televised address on his budget.

Would the president go to Bitburg?

"At the current moment and as near as I can see for the foreseeable future, yes, the president is going to Bitburg."

Was the White House trying to put pressure on the West German government to change the plan?

"We have been in touch with the German government over the past three wees abthe visit to Bitburg."

Had the president himself asked Kohl to cancel the visit?

"I don't think I would want to comment in a briefing on the budget about a conversation between two heads of state."

When was the last time the administration was in touch with Bonn on the issue?

"We have been in touch with the German government since the Kohl conversation."

Seven young volunteers to be cited by Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A junior social worker, a pioneering young librarian and an 18-year-old who collected cereal box tops for the Statue of Liberty facelift campaign are among seven youths to honored by President Reagan for their "spunky" volunteer efforts.

The honorees, who also include a 10-year-old tutor and a teenager who organized an anti-drug, anti-alcohol campaign for her classmates, were to meet the president as part of the observance of National Volunteer Week.

"These are kids who have shown incredible spunk," White House spokeswoman Pat Kearney said Wednesday. "They have all been pretty amazing in their own right."

Some 200 youths representing volunteer organizations around the nation also were invited to the ceremony, scheduled today in the White House Rose Garden.

Among the seven to meet Reagan is Trevor Ferrell, 12, of Gladwyne, Pa.

Queen's police officers moved

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The 18 top-ranking officers of the 106th Police Precinct in Queens were ordered transferred Wednesday night as the city widened its investigation into charges that prisoners there had been tortured with an electric stun gun.

At the same time, Mayor Edward I. Koch said he had asked Attorney General Edwin Meese 3d and other federal officials to open a separate inquiry into the charges of brutality at the precinct.

The transfers, which involve the precinct's entire command structure, and investigations came after three men complained this week that officers had jolted them with electric shocks from a hand-held stun gun. Each of the men said that their bodies had been burnt by the shocks and that they had been forced to confess to having sold small quantities of marijuana.

A sergeant and a police office were arrested Monday and accused of using a stun gun to assault one of the men, Mark Davidson, an 18-year-old student who had been arrested for selling $10 worth of marijuana.

Koch, at a City Hall news conference, said more arrests of officers was expected. He announced that a lieutenant at the precinct, who was in charge of guarding against brutality and corruption by officers, and an officer were suspended on misconduct charges.

Koch also said he would immediately ask the City Council to ban the sale and possession of electric stun guns.

At the City Hall news conference, John J. Santucci, the Queens district attorney, said a lack of cooperation by some officers in the precinct was impededing his investigation into the brutality complaints.

"There is a difficulty in getting people to come forward and talk to us," Santucci said in an interview after the news conference. "There is some degree of a blue wall of silence, the so-called code of silence.

"But there are cracks in the wall, some penetration, and some officers have come forward to tell us things."

A spokesman for the Legal Aid Society, which represents indigent criminal defendants in the city, said two more men have told society lawyers that they too were recently subjected to stun gun attacks in the station house. Patricia A. Bath, director of public information for the society, said the agency was "looking into the charges" before forwarding them to the district attorney.

Sergeant Richard A. Pike and Officer Jeffrey Gilbert of the 106th Precinct were arrested Monday on charges of assault in the second degree. Pike, who is 40 years old, was the head of the Street Narcotics Apprehension Program unit at the Precinct. Gilbert, 30, was a member of the unit.

Both were charged with second degree assault against Davidson, who testified at a court hearing Tuesday that Gilbert held him while Pike applied some 40 shocks to the ~~teenager through his clothing~~.

Davidson said the attack occurred on April 17 in a room on the second floor of the precinct station house.

At the news conference, Koch was asked if the torture charges and other recent allegations against the police, including fatal shootings and the hit-and-run death of a pedestrian, indicated a growing pattern of police brutality.

"It is not systemic," the mayor replied. "These cases are individual in nature."

Koch said that although Santucci had the authority to bring state criminal charges against officers, he had asked Meese and the U.S. attorney for the Eastern District of New York, Raymond J. Dearie, and the FBI to undertake separate inquiries. He said he had done so because there is no state statute to prosecute persons for civil-rights violations; federal prosecutors can bring such charges in federal court.

"I am outraged and disgusted by the allegations and evidence of misconduct concerning certain police officers in the 106th Precinct in Queens," Koch said. "This case shocks the conscience."

Koch emphasized that there was no evidence the transferred officers were involved or had knowledge of the torture incidents. "They are, however, supervisors who must be held accountable for incidents of this kind which occur under their command," he added.

Police officials said they were unable to recall a similar shake-up in which all of the highest ranking supervisors in a precinct were removed.

Police Commissioner Benajmain Ward identified the policemen who were suspended without pay as Lieut. Stephen Cheswick, 45 years old, and Officer Loren R. McCary, 24.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♡.

Don't let the looks of a hand beguile you. Relatively simple looking contracts at a low level can require very tricky play. Consider this example.

South's opening bid of one no trump gets passed all round. West makes his normal lead of his fourth-best heart. Plan the play.

South has six fast tricks and a 4-4 club fit. Obviously, that is the suit which is most likely to yield a seventh trick. However, before you go about your business you must be careful about your play to the first trick. If you hold up one round routinely, the defenders can continue a heart and remove an entry to the dummy that you might need later on. So play low from the board and win the ace in your hand.

If clubs break 3-2, you have no problem. So you have to think about 4-1 distributions. If West has four clubs to the ace, there is no way you are going to make a second trick. If East has four clubs to the ace, you can guarantee two tricks in the suit by leading twice from the table toward your hand.

However, that will not work if East has four clubs the West has the singleton ace. Can you protect against that distribution as well? Yes. How? By leading a low club from your hand at trick two!

As the cards lie, that fetches the ace. But let's assume that only low clubs appear. West wins the trick and continues with a heart to dummy's king. Now you lead another club toward your hand and put in the king when East plays low. If West wins the ace, you win two club tricks by playing the queen next. If the king wins and West shows out, re-enter dummy with a diamond and lead another club. It's just a matter of technique.

Back surgery sidelines Winger

Winger

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Actress Debra Winger, who had to drop out of the movie "Peggy Sue Got Married" because of back problems, is recuperating at home from surgery but won't be back to work soon, a spokeswoman says.

"She's swimming — very light — it's mostly just wading," Pat Kingsley said Wednesday. "She is doing some walking to strengthen her leg muscles because she was in bed for two months.

"I think it's a matter of four to five months before she can go to work again."

Ms. Winger, 29, an Academy Award nominee for "An Officer and a Gentleman" and "Terms of Endearment," ruptured a disc in February while hiking in New Mexico, where she also has a home, Ms. Kingsley said.

The actress, who also starred in "Urban Cowboy" and "Mike's Murder," was replaced in "Peggy Sue" by Kathleen Turner.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pop megastar Michael Jackson has a new pet project — selling stuffed animals that children buy for $22 apiece, earning them a chance to win a trip to the singer's home and helping contribute to charity.

Children 3 through 15 who buy any of 10 varieties of the animals called Michael's Pets will automatically be entered in a drawing for an expenses-paid trip to have lunch with Jackson, spend the afternoon in his backyard zoo and visit Disneyland, publicist Norman Winter said Wednesday.

The bow-tied toys, named after the singer's menagerie, will include Mr. Tibbs the Ram, Louie the Llama, Michael the Chimp, Muscles the Snake, Ozzie the Ostrich, Rodney the Rabbit and Spanky the Dog, Winter said.

They are expected to be available in stores by early May and will have "Pet-igree" adoption papers that the owner can send in to receive a Michael Jackson thank-you note and a license number, he said.

He said $1 from the profit on each animal will go to a children's charity.

Six winners will be chosen in May 1986, Winter said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Wally George "looks like a Frankenstein monster" after a man accused of drunken driving slammed into his car, but the host of "Hot Seat," a TV talk show, plans to go on the air anyway, a spokesman says.

George, 49, was driving producer Merrie Pisano, 27, home Tuesday when his car was hit from behind, sending it spinning into a wall, California Highway Patrol Officer Matthew Bishop said Wednesday.

The other driver, Brian Blakelock, 22, was booked for investigation of felony drunken driving, Bishop said.

George suffered a broken nose, cuts on his face, a broken left wrist and torn ligaments in his shoulder and back, said manager Harry Stewart. He was treated and released from Daniel Freeman Hospital in Marina del Rey.

"He wants to go on camera to show himself," Stewart said. "...He wants to use this as an example of what can happen. He wants to launch an anti-drunk-driving campaign as a result of the accident."

Ms. Pisano was treated and released after complaining of chest and back pain, Bishop said.

The nationally syndicated "Hot Seat" typically involves strident shouting matches between the conservative George and liberal guests, with the audience booing and cheering.

Eastwood

WASHINGTON (AP) — Actor Clint Eastwood arrived for a Pentagon meeting surrounded by fans but left with his current film project, about the exploits of an Army sergeant in recent wars, wrapped in secrecy.

Eastwood, in a 20-minute meeting Wednesday with Michael I. Burch, assistant secretary of defense for public affairs, discussed the possibility of getting official backing for the film, but Burch said no decisions were made.

Eastwood is exploring different script ideas "and he asked me not to discuss it," said Burch, whose duties include conducting reviews of movie and TV scripts to determine if the Defense Department will lend assistance.

The Pentagon is reimbursed by producers when it does help. A refusal can mean extra expenses for a movie-maker, who must find military props elsewhere.

Eastwood got Pentagon help for the 1982 production of "Firefox," in which he played a retired Air Force pilot who stole a new Soviet fighter.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John P. East, R-N.C., was in satisfactory condition Wednesday at Bethesda Naval Hospital after being admitted on Saturday, an aide to East said.

East's administrative assistant, Palmer Stacy, said in a written statement that the senator was admitted "for further observation and treatment." East underwent surgery for a blockage of the urinary tract earlier this year.

East, who is confined to a wheelchair as a result of polio, was in satisfactory condition, Stacy said. Stacy's statement provided no other details and a receptionist in his Senate office, Linda Daniel, said no other details about his illness were available.

A press spokesman for the hospital, Lt. C.D. Updegrove, did not immediately return telephone calls about East's condition.

DALLAS (AP) — Sarah T. Hughes, the federal judge who administered the oath of office to President Lyndon B. Johnson after President John F. Kennedy's assassination in 1963, is dead at age 88.

A funeral service was scheduled for 11 a.m. Friday at St. Matthews Cathedral in Dallas.

Lois Swan Jones, an aide, said Mrs. Hughes, who had been appointed to the bench by Kennedy, died about 11 p.m. Tuesday at Presbyterian Hospital in Dallas.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kent Smith, an actor whose stage, film and TV work spanned four decades, died Tuesday of congestive heart failure. He was 78.

Smith's work on Broadway included "Measure for Measure," "Sweet Love Remembered," "The Best Man" and "Ah, Wilderness."

Fading nobility

If you've ever had the feeling that today's society is pushing aside that which is beautiful, noble, moral, altruistic and virtuous in deference to that which is couched in the belief of living for today, you're not alone.

In fact, a recent edition of National Review noted that "Almost every generation of mankind has produced high ideals of virtue, beauty and truth, and has held them up to the young as patterns to be followed, goals to be sought. Our own post-World War II Western, 'Christian' civilization is virtually unique in destroying ideals and in presenting the young not with heroic examples but with deliberately and aggressively degenerate ones.

"Our culture is still nominally theistic, even Christian. But in fact the society no longer believes in God. As Francis Schaeffer began to proclaim thirty-odd years ago, the Christian base is gone. Individuals still believe, of course, and there are many congregations of deeply committed Christians. But society as a whole has lost its vision of the 'house of the Lord.'"

Sadly, that view of life in 20th Century America may be all too accurate. As the article went on to point out, "... the climate of unbelief has created the culture of corruption. Dallas and Dynasty make sense only in a world in which there is no thought of God, of justice, or of judgment."

Certainly there still are outstanding examples of individuals — even communities — that mirror all that is noble, virtuous and good. But there are many examples around of nobility in decline, regrettably.

Perhaps, as the article noted, the old-time Western movie was a little naive in stressing that the evil that men did, they also paid for, but the fact must be stressed that when society is not concentrating on that which is good and moralistic and noble, those virtues are not sought but allowed to perish.

A society wallowing in the mud-pit of degeneration is one that has no hope of ever creating anything better.

Another View:

Brazil feels pain

The death of a popular political leader is always painful to a nation and its people. But the passing of Brazil's President-elect Tancredo Neves is especially poignant because his countrymen had put so much hope in his recent selection as their first civilian president in 20 years.

The 75-year-old Neves earned a reputation as an honest and principled politician. It was characteristic of him that, after being elected president by Brazil's Congress, Neves said that he would not serve his entire six-year term. Instead, he announced that he would step down within four years so that direct elections could be held to choose his successor.

But Neves was never able to take office. In a stroke of terrible irony, he was taken ill the night before his March 15 inauguration. Rather than take his oath of office the next day, he was forced to submit to the first of a series of painful operations. Although it appeared for a time that Neves might recover, his condition only worsened over the next few weeks as Brazilian doctors tried ever-more-desperate measures to save his life. His death ended a long vigil that left an entire nation emotionally drained.

Now Brazil's political leaders must begin the process of carrying on without Neves. If they do not act with maturity, the next few weeks could be more traumatic for Brazil than the last month was.

In accordance with Brazil's constitution, Vice President-elect Jose Sarney was sworn into office March 15 as interim president, and is now entitled to serve out Neves' full term. But Sarney does not command the popular support that Neves did. His selection as vice president was the result of a delicate political deal worked out between Neves supporters in the Democratic Movement Party and a breakaway faction of the military-backed Social Democrat Party, of which Sarney had been a member. Many Neves supporters are now appalled at the prospect of a six-year Sarney presidency, and are demanding new elections as soon as possible. But it is doubtful that the Brazilian military will allow another round of voting.

Thus it becomes the responsibility of Brazil's political leadership to try to work out a new arrangement that will keep the government functioning under Sarney, but also allow for the eventual election of a new president supported by a majority of Brazil's people.

This will not be an easy process, of course, but it is necessary if the new civilian government is to begin working out the financial mess — including a foreign debt of more than $100 billion — left behind by Brazil's generals. But if Brazil's politicians can pull it off, it will be the greatest tribute that they can pay to the memory of Neves — a signal to the entire world that while democratic political leaders may pass from the scene, democracy itself remains a strong, viable form of government.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, April 25, the 115th day of 1985. There are 250 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Five years ago — on April 25, 1980, day 174 of the Iranian hostage crisis — the White House announced an attempt to rescue the captives had failed, and that eight U.S. servicemen had died in the fiery collision of two aircraft. President Jimmy Carter told the nation the decision to attempt the rescue was his, as was the decision to abort. He said, "The responsibility is fully my own."

On this date:

In 1859, ground was broken for the Suez Canal.

In 1898, the United States declared war on Spain.

In 1901, New York became the first state to require automobile license plates. The fee was one dollar.

Ten years ago: President Gerald R. Ford spoke at the 150th anniversary celebration of the Yale Law School in Connecticut. He called for mandatory prison sentences for those convicted of violent crimes.

One year ago: David Anthony Kennedy, the 28-year-old son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, was found dead of a drug overdose in a Palm Beach, Fla., hotel room.

Today's birthdays: Supreme Court Justice William Brennan is 79. Jazz singer Ella Fitzgerald is 67. Movie director-writer Paul Mazursky is 55. Former Harlem Globetrotter Meadowlark Lemon is 53. Actor Al Pacino is 45. Actress Talia Shire is 39.

Thought for today: "We have enough religion to make us hate, but not enough to make us love one another." — Jonathan Swift, English satirist (1667-1745).

HHS checking into expenses

WASHINGTON — Defense contractors aren't the only ones who charge the government for personal expenses like kennel costs and cocktail parties.

Investigators for the Health and Human Services Department turned up more than $1 million in questionable Medicare charges from a single rehabilitation center in 1982-83. They included legal fees for the company president's divorce, his country-club tab and health-insurance premiums for his mother.

Jack Anderson

According to a memorandum written by the Health and Human Services inspector-general to another department official, this information will be presented soon to the U.S. attorney in Scranton, Pa.

The company under investigation is Allied Services for the Handicapped, parent corporation of the George T. Walters Institute of Rehabilitation Medicine. The Walters facility is the largest in Allied's network of more than a million people in northeastern Pennsylvania.

Allied's Washington attorney told our associate Tony Capaccio that the company "is confident and hopeful (that a) fair result will be reached and announced soon."

On his advice, Allied executives declined to comment, including President and Board Chairman Walters.

The Health and Human Services memo written by IG Richard Kusserow stated: "Our review has shown that Allied officials have exhibited a remarkably extravagant flair for spending taxpayers' money. Government reimbursement was used as payment for unallowable expenditures which were directed ... toward enriching (Allied) officials, their families and their associates."

The attorney for Allied told our associate: "The fact that you are the recipient of a leaked, so-called 'draft report' suggests the document's inaccuracies, its author's bad faith, and that unbiased prosecutorial authorities are unpersuaded by the agency's approach."

The IG's memo makes no judgment on the quality of care at the institute.

Here are the highlights from the IG's memorandum:

— "The administrator (Walters) charged the institute a total of $6,679 for payments to an exclusive country club," the memo states. "He also charged the institute for expenses such as: (1) cable television — $647; (2) parties held in private residence — $6,104; (3) his mother's Blue Cross and Blue Shield premiums — $697, and (4) legal fees associated with his divorce — $688.

"The practice of charging the institute was apparently so ingrained that he even charged the institute $2.99 for sanitary napkins for his wife."

— The department's auditors questioned $84,447 in expenses for executives and their wives that were charged to the institute, which in turn would charge Medicare-Medicaid. These included seminar trips to San Francisco (one of them on cost containment), New Orleans, Honolulu, China and Switzerland. The IG conceded that some of these expenses "were connected to some degree with hospital administration," but added: "It appears obvious to us, however, that attendance at some seminars was motivated more by the location of the seminar rather than the subject matter discussed."

— Salaries totaling $967,246 went to five Allied executives, including $214,251 for Walters. His salary, the memo noted, was 93 percent more than that received by his counterparts in 14 Scranton-area hospitals.

— Fringe benefits totaling $568,850 were also questioned. They included Individual Retirement Account contributions, deferred compensation plans, executive pension-plan contributions and $23,266 paid to Walters for unused vacation time, "which was contrary to institute policy," according to the memo.

THE OMBUDSMAN: John Harter is a veteran diplomat who decided to fight.

After 30 years in the Foreign Service, he was at his desk in Geneva in September 1983 when he was called by the State Department in Washington and told he had 23 days to pack up and leave. He had been "selected out" — forced into early retirement — because he had not been promoted in the period of time decreed by department personnel policy.

Harter was stunned — and furious. He had just enrolled his 16-year-old son in school in Geneva, in anticipation of a normal tour of duty there. He decided he'd challenge the "selection out" system, and he did.

Harter has taken the State Department to court, presenting evidence that his personnel file was in such a mess — including missing efficiency reports — that he would have been promoted were it not for the many errors. That would have kept him from being selected out.

The department rejected Harter's claim, and even refused to grant him a prior administrative hearing at which to present his evidence of error and unfair treatment. Under the rules, failure to be promoted is one of the major criteria for being selected out.

Harter has appealed all the way to the Supreme Court, which will decide this week if it will hear the case — the first of its kind to reach the court. Harter argues that his constitutional rights have been violated by the State Department's failure to give him a fair hearing before separating him from service.

GEORGE F. WILL

'Ruckus' still needs to be fought

WASHINGTON — In 1972 Jonathan Will, with a nice sense of family tradition, was born on May 4, his father's birthday. So in a few days he will attain the status of teen-ager, with all the prerogatives pertaining thereto. A wit has written that adolescence was first considered a phase, then a profession and now is a nationality. Jon's acquisition of citizenship in that nation comes on the heels of a recent ruckus here about people like him.

George F. Will

He has Down's syndrome, a genetic defect involving varying degrees of mental retardation and, sometimes, serious physical defects. When he was born we were bombarded with advice and information, much of it mistaken. Even 13 years ago there was more certitude than certainty in the prognoses, most of which were too pessimistic.

It is said we are all born brave, trusting and greedy, and remain greedy. I am pleased that Jon has been like that — like the rest of us, because it was depressing to be told, repeatedly, that children with Down's syndrome "are such happy children." That implied sub-human simplicity, a mindless cheerfulness of the sort racists once ascribed to blacks. Jon, like the rest of us, is not always nice or happy. Indeed, he has the special unhappiness of having more complicated feelings than he has the capacity to express. He certainly has enough problems without being badgered by bureaucrats telling him to quit avoiding the central issues of his life.

Recently two officials of the U.S. Department of Education resigned after stirring a storm with interesting metaphysical and political thoughts. One official was a woman who readers of this column met in 1983 when she was saying that a "key reason" for declining academic achievements is that the government has been catering to groups such as the handicapped "at the expense of those who have the highest potential to contribute positively to society." This struck me as a frivolous analysis of a complex phenomenon and a dangerous subordination of individual rights to calculations of social utility.

She wrote a response, just now circulating, in which she said (as the sympathetic Wall Street Journal phrased it) that, "We are on Earth not mainly to promote our secular equality but to use our varying Earthly circumstances to perfect ourselves morally."

Nice try, Journal. But what she really said was:

"They (the handicapped) falsely assume that the lottery of life has penalized them at random. This is not so. Nothing comes to an individual that he has not, at some point in his development, summoned. Each of us is responsible for his life situation." And, "There is no injustice in the universe. As unfair as it may seem, a person's external circumstances do fit his level of inner spiritual development....Those of the handicapped constituency who seek to have others bear their burdens and eliminate their challenges are seeking to avoid the central issues of their lives."

Jon avoids making his bed, but is hot to confront central issues of his life, such as why the Baltimore Orioles start slowly. His father is trying to fathom how Jon "summoned" chromosomal problems.

Sen. Lowell Weicker, chairman of the appropriations committee that deals with education, got very exercised about what the woman wrote, but Weicker probably gets exercised about oatmeal, "Gilligan's Island" reruns and rainy Tuesdays. Everything gets Weicker wrought up, and this issue would have done so even if he did not have a son with Down's syndrome.

The woman resigned as did another education department official, who favors repeal of, among other things, PL 94-142. That law guarantees handicapped children a free, appropriate public education. To millions of handicapped persons and their parents, it is as important, substantively and symbolically, as the Voting Rights Act is to black Americans. The official who advocated repeal was betraying a President who supports it.

The two resignations detonated the Wall Street Journal's editorialists. They issued another denunciation of us sinners who live within the Washington Beltway. The Journal said the two officials were victims of "the usual crazed antibodies," meaning "the Beltway white cells" in a "feeding frenzy" to destroy Ronald Reagan and red-blooded conservatism.

The strain of manning the ramparts of right-wing purity may be getting to the Journal. We inside the Beltway no doubt have shortcomings unknown in south Manhattan, which the Journal considers the perfect place to take America's pulse. But we know some things, including these:

Reagan opposes weakening PL 94-142. He has enough problems without being saddled with supporters who define conservatism in terms of dismantling such protections and who associate conservatism with crackpot metaphysics about (hey, cheer up, Ethiopians) the perfect justice of the universe.

If the Journal can believe that America does or should want such conservatism, then the Journal can believe anything — for example, that budget cuts and economic growth are going to balance the budget. The Journal believes that, too.

Robinson qualified

I am writing this letter as a concerned parent regarding the school board runoff election Saturday. I feel that it is so important to have a balanced school board with all factions represented. We have men representing several backgrounds including law and accounting, but we need the viewpoint of a woman, mother and former schoolteacher. Betsy Robinson is all of these.

She has worked hard to get a comprehensive background for this job. She has visited all of our schools, talking to teachers, administrators, parents and students, and has even visited Austin to learn more about the legislative aspect of education. She has the time and is tremendously interested in our schools.

Betsy favors more promotions within the school system for qualified personnel. She would like to encourage open communication between teachers and the school board. She would be easily available for teachers, parents and interested persons to confer with her.

All Midland County voters are eligible to vote in this election, even if they didn't vote in the previous election. The school board needs a woman's viewpoint. Please realize how important your vote is and vote in your precinct this next Saturday.

Unwanted pets face bad death

We want to say a few words to the people that dump unwanted animals out in the country. You are most likely condemning that animal to a slow and miserable death. Most people already have all the animals they want.

We have chased two stray dogs away from our house, in two days, that were looking for food. We work to keep our animals fed and cared for — we don't intend to care for others' unwanted animals also.

There are more and more cases of rabies these days. We won't take a chance that others' unwanted animals may have been exposed to a rabid animal and, in turn, expose our animals.

We have seen stray animals chased off with rocks, shot at (sometimes killed instantly, sometimes wounded and taking days to die), hit by vehicles and last but not least, starved to death.

If you care at all, don't subject your animal to a possible slow and painful death. Take it to one of the animal shelters where there is a chance it will be adopted, and in the meantime it has food, water and shelter. If it has to die, let it be a quick death.

Fat cat attitude getting costly

I see by articles published recently in the Reporter-Telegram that the double wording used in state and national elections has now reached the local level.

Whatever happened to the idea of simply revamping the existing jail to meet Texas Jail Commission standards or building a new jail? Now it seems we are to have the "privilege" of voting for a $9 million job, or a $3 million job with the possibility of another $25 to $50 million in "minor" fringe benefits thrown in.

I don't know what kind of money our county officials have, but I hope there are enough other people in Midland who are tired of this "fat cat" attitude and will speak up for a bond election to either bring the existing jail up to standards or build a new one without all these other projects included. Possibly there is more than one taxpayer who is fed up with the big-time spending attitude of this bunch. Anyone else?

NATION IN BRIEF

Ex-Teamsters president to be under house arrest

CHICAGO (AP) — A judge is considering placing former Teamsters President Roy L. Williams under house arrest after the ex-union leader convicted of conspiring to bribe a senator is examined at a federal prison hospital.

U.S. District Judge Prentice Marshall said Wednesay that Williams, 70, who suffers from emphysema and heart problems, must report May 22 to the prison hospital in Springfield, Mo., to determine whether he can survive prison.

Marshall said he was unsure about the legality of the house arrest suggested by defense lawyers as an alternative to the provisional 55-year term imposed after Williams' 1982 conviction with four other men.

GM recalls cars, trucks

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. is recalling 1.8 million midsize cars and small trucks to modify brake systems because of a problem that may lead to a loss of rear braking action and has caused at least nine accidents.

The recall affects 1978-80 Chevrolet Malibu and Monte Carlo, Buick Century and Regal, Pontiac LeMans and Grand Prix and Oldsmobile Cutlass models. It also affects 1982 model Chevrolet S-10 and GMC S-15 trucks, GM said.

GM said Wednesday that excessive enlargement of a mounting hole in a backing plate could allow the wheel cylinder to rotate, possibly leading to a failure of the rear brakes.

Woman must surrender

CHICAGO (AP) — A woman described as a modern "Ma Barker" who allegedly supplied guns and pantyhose masks for a suburban bank robbery must surrender on Friday to begin serving a five-year prison term, a federal judge said.

Helen Allen, 50, was sentenced Wednesday by U.S. District Judge Charles P. Kocoras, who told a courtroom audience including 10 of Mrs. Allen's 11 children that he would be "doing an injustice" if he did not send her to prison.

Mrs. Allen, 50, was convicted Feb. 15 on charges of conspiracy and armed bank robbery. Her son, James Allen, 34, of Hammond, Ind., was sentenced to 37 years in prison Wednesday on a bank robbery conviction.

'Squeegee kids' may be in BALTIMORE (AP) — Inner-city kids could become licensed windshield washers under a proposal by Mayor William Donald Schaefer, who is trying to defuse controversy over a planned ban on the "squeegee kids."

Schaefer suggested that the police commissioner and city solicitor draft regulations for the children who dash out at intersections to clean windshields after the city council voted along racial lines to ban the activity.

He asked Wednesday that a final vote, set for Monday, be postponed. All 11 white council members voted Monday for the ban; all seven black members voted against it. Most of the "squeegee kids" are black.

House against drug wars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying the primary purpose of the U.S. military is national defense, House officials gave a cool reception to city and state leaders urging that the armed services get more involved in the war against "terrorist" drug-runners.

"I'm not sure America's ready to have soldiers going through luggage at ports of entry," Rep. William Hughes, D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on crime, said Wednesday. "We've got to walk a fine line and make sure that whatever we do is balanced."

Elie Wiesel talks tough

WASHINGTON (AP) — Elie Wiesel, the concentration camp survivor who received a congressional gold medal last week from President Reagan, says he "resented" an effort by a White House aide to persuade him tone down his criticism of the president's planned visit to a German war cemetery.

Marshall Breger, the White House liaison officer for the nation's Jewish community, acknowledged Wednesday that he asked a friend of Wiesel, Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., to persuade the noted Holocaust writer-philosopher to temper his comments.

Four convicted of bombings

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Abortion was on trial, not four young people who were convicted for the Christmas Day bombings of a clinic and two doctors' offices, a prosecutor said.

"It was evident to anyone who sat in the trial that abortion was the real issue in the case," U.S. Attorney W. Thomas Dillard said after Wednesday's verdict. "It goes without saying we are pleased."

The verdict on abortion was that its opponents can continue to picket and write letters to political leaders, but cannot take the law into their own hands, Dillard said.

The verdict on Matthew Goldsby and James Simmons, both 21, was guilty on all counts. Each was convicted on one count of conspiracy, three counts of making pipe bombs and three of bombing the three buildings where abortions were performed.

Koch compared drug trafficking to terrorism, noting that one kilo of opium leads to 200,000 bags of heroin.

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Glasscock, Upton, Reagan, Crane, Gaines, Andrews, Dawson, Borden, Martin and Howard counties: Tonight...a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. Lows near 60. Wind south 20 to 30 mph and gusty decreasing to 15 mph by morning. Lake wind advisories will be required early tonight.

Rain may hit Basin by Friday

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders will want to grab their umbrellas before heading out the door Friday as rain could fall on the Midland area, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Forecasters are calling for a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms through Friday as a low near 60 tonight warms to a high in the middle 80s Friday. Winds will be from the south at 20 to 30 mph and gusty tonight, decreasing to 15 mph by morning. Southerly winds will continue Friday afternoon increasing to less than 30 mph, and becoming gusty.

Wednesday's high of 87 was eight degrees below the record high set in 1943. This morning's low was 25 degrees above the record of 39 set in 1937.

STATE

A low-pressure mass moving across western sections pumped humid air from the Gulf of Mexico into Texas today, and brought the chance of thunderstorms later.

A high-pressure ridge over East Texas weakened as the moist air advanced northward. Skies remained generally fair, although some low clouds had formed along the lower Rio Grande Valley.

Winds were light and variable at 5 to 15 mph along coastal waters and the southeast, and south to southeast, except for 25 mph winds clocked in the northern Panhandle.

Temperatures ranged from the 50s and 60s in most sections to 70 degree readings in the deep south. Extremes were 56 degrees at Longview and 73 degrees at McAllen.

A slight chance of thunderstorms was expected through Friday for North and South Texas, with widely scattered storms east of the West Texas mountains.

NATION

Rain was mixed with snow in parts of Colorado and Wyoming today while thundershowers carrying hail rumbled across the Plains and fog halted some Great Lakes shipping.

Showers were spread from Georgia to southern North Carolina, across the upper Ohio Valley, through the mid-Atlantic Coast states and across Minnesota and eastern North Dakota.

A strong high pressure system off the central Pacific Coast pushed high winds gusting to 45 mph across southern California.

Billion Dollar National Floorcovering Sale begins Friday

Now is the time for spring cleaning; finding that "just right" new look for your home or office.

And for those who are even remotely considering buying new floor covering for their domain, the opportunity of a lifetime is now.

For the first time ever, thousands of carpet stores throughout the United States will take part in a 10-day, nationwide sale: "The Billion Dollar National Carpet and Floorcovering Sale and Sweepstakes". The event is scheduled to run from April 26 through May 5, 1985.

The idea originated at the Retail Floorcovering Institute, whose membership includes most of the major carpet retailers in America. The purpose of the sale is to focus attention on carpet during the Spring, when many people shed the Winter "blahs" by redecorating their homes.

Although the promotion will emphasize price and value, fashion is also a major factor in the customer's carpet buying decision.

Many carpet retailers regard the changing styles of floor covering as one of high fashion; floorcovering styles must change often in order to keep up with changing trends in home furnishings.

Scott Welmaker of House of Carpets in Midland, has seen a more fashion-conscious trend among his local customers.

"Midlanders seem to have a bit more sophisticated taste than the norm," Welmaker said.

"I have noticed that many of our customers enjoy the rich surface finish of the Saxony textures, in popular coral and rose tones," Welmaker continued.

Floyd Miller, owner of Mid-Tex of Midland and Permian Basin Sweepstakes Chairman, made an interesting comparison in differing fashion trends.

"Although we do maintain a certain pace to stay abreast of changing styles in home furnishings, we don't see nearly the changes in floorcovering styles that merchants in the retail fashion apparel market see," Miller said.

"It seems that many of my local customers usually tend to select from the beige tones in a plush Saxony carpet weave," Miller added.

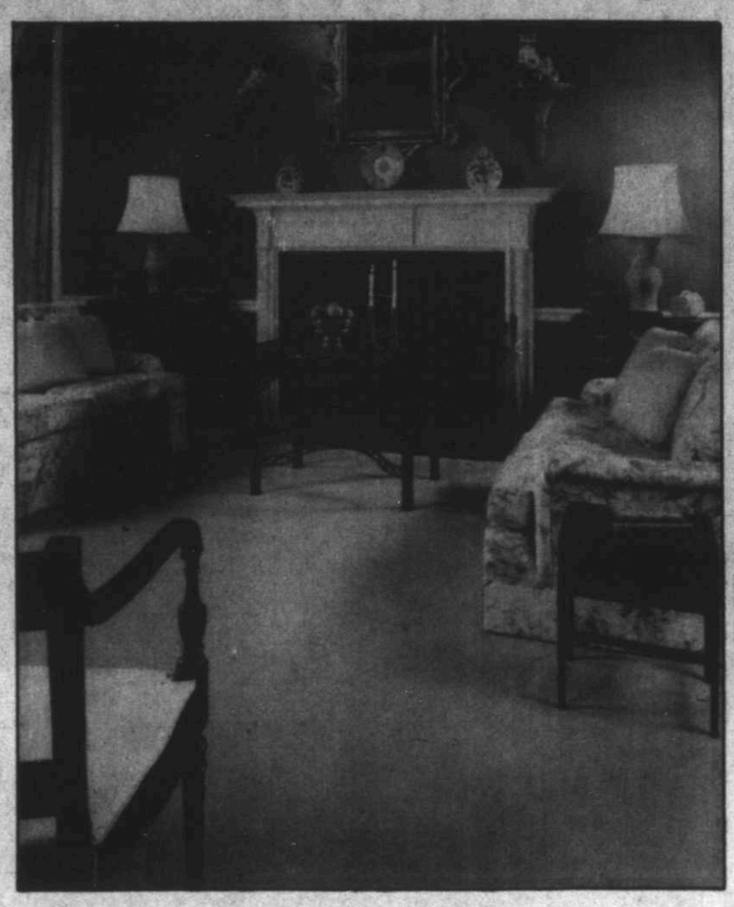

Both merchants agreed on two points of concern to the local consumer.

"From years of experience, I can see that in the Permian Basin area we have fewer problems with carpeting because of less moisture than homeowners in other areas," Miller explained.

"And by choosing the plushier Saxonies, the consumer can enjoy a longer-wearing, more durable carpet," Welmaker said.

Welmaker added, "Customers will see all of the newest colors, textures and style types in a wide range of qualitites at this upcoming industry-wide event. Price may be the motivating factor that will bring people into the stores, but we believe that fashion and quality will continue to be the most important influence in making the final selection."

Miller concluded, "Whatever the motivation, the feeling throughout the industry is that there has never been a better time for consumers to buy than during "The Billion Dollar National Carpet and Floorcovering Sale."

When selecting carpet always keep in mind the use and amount of traffic of the room in which it will be used.

Shape, texture and an interesting setting pattern combine to make this ceramic tile entry beautifully practical.

Cleaning prolongs life of carpet

When you make any investment, you want to protect it, and a home furnishings investment is no different. You should take care in selecting items for your home, since you will be using them every day. It's important to you that they continue to look good and last.

Carpeting is a major investment and one of the most visible design elements in the home. The best way to protect the appearance and prolong the life of your carpet is to clean it regularly.

When dirt particles are trampled deep into carpet pile, they tear the fibers and ruin the look. Vacuuming on a regular basis is the most important thing you can do to protect your carpet, according to "The Complete Book of Carpeting," a booklet published by the Du Pont Carpet Fibers Division.

Carpet care

Carpet should be lightly vacuumed (three passes with the machine) twice a week and receive a thorough vacuuming (seven passes) once a week.

Don't worry about vacuuming too much—it will not harm your carpet. In fact, it's best if the vacuum has a beater bar to agitate the pile and bring the dirt up to the surface for easy removal.

If your carpet starts to look dull, it's probably time for a shampoo. Most carpets need shampooing every one to three years. If you are a do-it-yourselfer, products and equipment for thorough cleaning can be bought or rented.

There are four basic methods of all-over carpet cleaning: Steam cleaning, wet shampooing, aerosol foam sprays and powder sprays.

Steam cleaning is the do-it-yourself method closest to a professional job. The process employs a high-pressure jet sprayer that distributes hot detergent solution deep into the carpet pile, then immediately sucks up the dirt and water. These machines can be rented at many large supermarkets.

Steam cleaning is especially good for shags and deep piles because it doesn't crush the carpet fibers. However, it's a slower process than other methods, and the equipment costs more to rent.

Wet shampooing is probably the most popular do-it-yourself method of deep cleaning. The carpet is wetted down with liquid detergent, then brushed in with a rotary brush machine (also easily rented).

This method involves more work, however, and is more prone to problems than steam cleaning.

If the water-detergent solution is allowed to stay on the carpet too long, it can cause mildew, damage to the backing and damage to the floors underneath.

For lightly soiled carpets, an aerosol foam spray or a powder spray will do the job. Both are applied to the carpet, sponged or brushed in, allowed to dry and vacuumed.

Stain removal

If you have a spot stain on your carpet, it should be removed before general cleaning. Attend to stains as soon after they appear as possible. The faster you treat stains, the better chance you have of getting rid of them.

Different stains require different treatments, but the first step is always to blot or scrape up as much of the spill as possible before treating the stain.

If it's an oil-based stain, like asphalt, butter, crayon, lotion or ink, apply a commercial spot remover (follow directions on label carefully), blot, wash with detergent and rinse with clear water. Always blot excess moisture before allowing the spot to dry.

For deep stains, like blood, catsup, chocolate or egg, first use a detergent and then ammonia. Next, apply more detergent, rinse with clear water and blot.

Need a cleaner?

Detergent and vinegar will remove stains from beer, coffee, berries, candy (sugar) and fruit juice. "The Complete Book of Carpeting" describes removal methods for these and many other stains.

If you have a stain that you can't remove yourself, or if you decide your carpet needs a professional cleaning, check with your friends to find a reputable cleaner who is up-to-date on the latest procedures and chemicals. Get a few estimates before you make a final decision.

If your carpeting can be moved, it's best to have it cleaned at the plant. It will dry much faster there, lessening damage to the backing.

If your carpet is wall-to-wall, you'll probably have it cleaned in your home. Professional cleaners use the steam cleaning or wet shampoo methods similar to the do-it-yourself methods.

Carpet colors reflect changing styles

Fashion influences carpet trends

Color in home furnishings, while related to high fashion, has a definite cycle of its own. The menswear browns and taupes worn through the winter may not appear in home decorating plans until two or three years from now. But that hardly means that design in the home is lagging behind.

Twice a year at regional markets, carpet mills introduce new qualities in updated color lines which reflect styling changes influenced by fashion and decroating trends.

The five new color groups introduced for 1985 are grey, apricot, green, pink and blue.

While romantics who favore today's country look may gravitate to pretty pastel-hued pinks and blues, conservatives who prefer traditional English or French styles may opt for the neo-neutral beiges and greys. Deluxe darks, such as hunter green and navy, appeal to masculine psyches, as well as those with a flair for dramatic modern silhouettes. The trendy young modernists who like minimalist decor will relate to crayon bright pinks and aqua, while the sophisticate may prefer the subtle deco look in silvery-mauve and amethyst.

Whatever your color personality, the carpet industry has fashionable shades and hues to enhance the beauty of your home.

What determines quality of carpet

In general, carpet quality is determined by "performance", or how well a carpet will maintain its original apearance, given normal maintenance. The inherent characteristics of the fiber and the carpet construction are the key determinants of performance.

There are three key words to help consumers judge the quality of a carpet:

1. Density: The amount of face yarn in a carpet. "The denser, the better" is an old truism about carpet that hasn't changed. When comparing samples of the same fiber type, bend the carpet and note how close the individual tufts are to each other and how much of the backing is exposed. Press down on the pile with one finger and see how easy or difficult it is to penetrate to the backing.

2. Twist: The binding of the yarn around itself. Twist is put into the yarn prior to carpet manufacture. One way to judge the twist level of various carpet samples is to look closely at the cut ends of the individual yarns. They should be neat, well-defined and not blossoming open at the ends.

3. Heat-Setting: It refers to the heat or steam treatment that keeps the twist in the yarn permanent. Heat-setting enables yarn to hold its twist through use and cleaning. Most nylon and polyester cut pile carpets are heat-set. However, some other carpets, such as high quality velvets which are densely constructed, do not need the twisting and the heat-setting.

A beautiful quality carpet will make your home a more appealing place to live. So as you shop for carpeting for your home or office, become a more educated consumer which will enable you to purchase the best quality carpet at the lowest price.

Select carpet functionally

When you walk into a room, you are usually made aware of the room's purpose by the furnishings, accessories and other decorative elements.

When you are selecting carpet for your home, one of the first things you should think of is the purpose of the room in which it will be used and how much that room is used by you and your family.

Different rooms require different kinds of carpet, and the higher a room's traffic volume, the more durable the carpet must be.

Halls and stairways generally see a lot more traffic than other areas of the home. A wise choice is a carpet that hides footprints and cleans easily. Look for a densely tufted, low-pile carpet for these areas.

If you have active young children, then you know that their rooms are also high traffic areas. Dense carpet with a level loop texture (yarns tufted in loops of the same size) bear up well under hard wear and resist scuff marks. Because dirt tends to stay on the surface of loop carpet, it's also easy to clean.

Ceramic tile countertops for stamina and style

Ceramic tile is tops for counters when it comes to use and abuse. It will take constant activity from a gourmet cook and 20 years from now the tile will still look beautiful. It won't blister, scorch, or burn; so is perfect near the stove or cooktop to take hot pans right from the burner or oven. That's why you see ceramic tile trivets used as hotplates.

American Olean ceramic tile will take plenty of action during food preparation—it won't stain, and most tile resists scratching, so cooks can go to work right on the counter. Ceramic mosaics, Primitive Encore matte glazes, and Crystalline glazes work best on counters. Clean up is easy—even grease will wipe up quickly with detergent and water. No waxing or polishing ever with ceramic tile in the kitchen.

Design With Tile For Style

Pastel colors are cheering up gloomy interiors all over the country, and American Olean has beautiful colors to enhance the theme. Pink, green, and almond work well together. You can create hundreds of designs with ceramic tile just by combining sizes, shapes, and colors. Two contrasting squares make a checkerboard, or run a striped border, or create a contemporary grid with small tiles and dark grout. Use solid pastel and scored pastel tile for an elegant plaid countertop to set the color scheme for the open plan of a kitchen/dining and living area. Repeat the same pastels in wallcovering, draperies, and other furnishings to unify small living spaces through color.

Counter Important In Small Home Plans

Houses are smaller and more efficient these days. Areas which serve multiple activities often feature a countertop as a dual purpose divider. Smart designers are using ceramic tile counters to set the style for open spaces. When located near the stove, counters are used for open spaces. When located near the stove, counters are used for preparing food, and then for serving the family. Between meals the counter serves as a gathering place for people, school books, and snacks. Quality ceramic tile is the countertop surface to choose for natural beauty, and years of service.

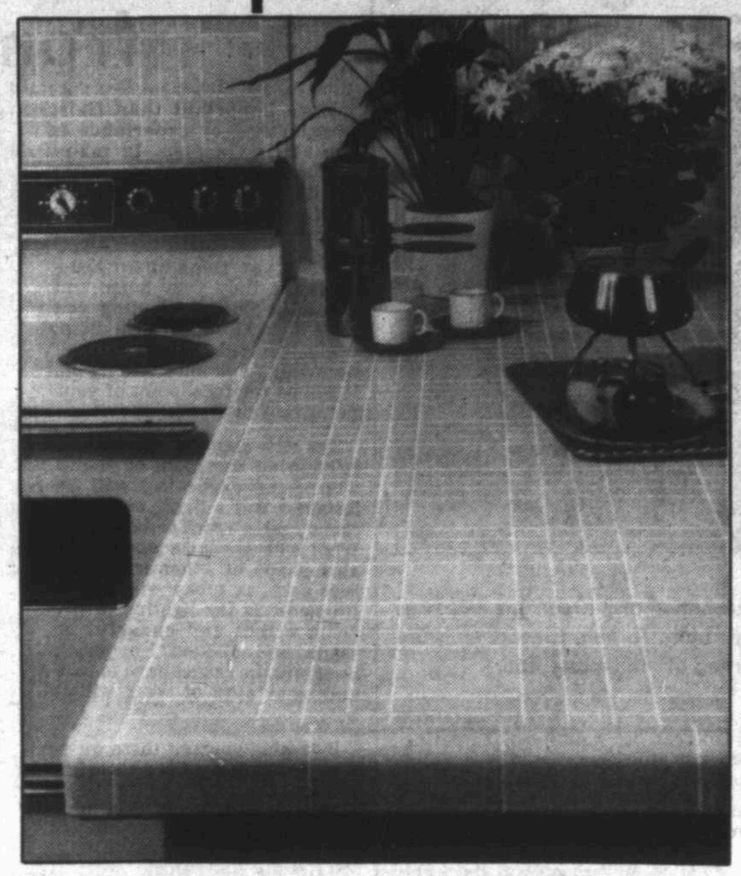

Tiled Cook's Island Center of Attention in New Great Kitchens

When kitchens are the focal point of the home, (and when haven't they been?) a large ceramic tile island can make the kitchen work better. An island provides space preparing food, serving, and has room for helpers to join in.

With stove top elements as part of the counter, the island becomes the hub of activity as we socialize, relax, eat, and cook in today's great kitchens.

Today's homes are smaller, yet we are using the spaces wisely. Tiled countertops and cook islands are great answers depending on your plan.

Improvements in the construction and design of modern freezers have resulted in a substantial savings in the energy they use. A power-saving heater control switch allows you to save power in low humidity by switching the control to "off".

Ceramic tile creates a kitchen area that can stand up to the rigors of daily family living -- beautifully.

Ceramic tile shapes in two colors are combined to create a durable, easily maintained kitchen that becomes a design element in this home.

Solutions to typical carpet problems

Your new carpet offers you years of both beauty and service. To be sure you receive full value in both these areas, it is important that you become informed about your carpet and its care.

Here are a few helpful tips on keeping your carpet beautiful:

Shedding: Don't be alarmed if you find balls of fluff on your carpet's surface or in your vacuum cleaner. They are just loose bits of fiber and lint left in the carpet during its manufacture. This does not indicate that your carpet is defective and it will not affect its life or beauty in any way.

Sprouting: Whenever your carpet "sprouts" a loose tuft above the surface of the carpet, simply snip it off even with the other tufts. Do not pull any long or loose ends out of the carpet.

Shading: Shading is what seems to be a change in color in various parts of the carpet. This is caused by light being reflected in different ways as pile fibers are bent in various directions. This is not a defect but a characteristic of plush carpet. Shading is generally caused by foot traffic and can be minimized by sweeping or vacuuming the pile all in the same direction.

Rippling: Humidity may cause wall-to-wall carpeting to ripple temporarily. If the ripples persist in a dryer atmosphere, it may be necessary to have the carpet professionally.

Static Eletricity: Increasing the moisture in the air will reduce the static buildup. As the carpet is used, the amount of static will decrease. Also, chemical anti-static products may be applied to the carpet.

Crushing: Pile crushing caused by heavy traffic or furniture may be minimized by vigorous brushing. Depending upon the carpet fiber, persistent indentations may be caused by passing a hot steam iron no closer than six inches over the area. Be sure not to press down the iron.

Missing Tufts: A single tuft may be snagged or worked loose from the carpet. Never pull out a loose tuft. You may cut it off and let the surrounding yarn fill in the space or have a professional replace it.

Matted Carpet: Matted carpet does not necessarily need to be replaced. Vacuuming and dry cleaning helps restore matted carpet.

Coffee Stains: When a spill occurs and is thick, remove as much as possible with a spoon or spatula. Then blot the spot with a towel, absorbing as much as possible. Finally, cover the spill with paper towels to absorb any remaining moisture. If the stain persists, dry cleaning is necessary, and this will remove the stain permanently.

Tips for buying carpet

Consider the total value of the carpeting and not just its initial purchase price. Comparison shop the different brands carried by your carpet retailer and look for good construction at a reasonable price per yard. Remember, a less expensive carpet is no bargain if it doesn't meet your family's needs.

Choose a carpet fiber that suits your lifestyle. Nylon is the largest-selling carpet fiber on the market today and is responsible for about 85 percent of all carpet sales. It is made into carpets that are tough and long-wearing, as well as luxurious and attractive. Natural carpet fibers, which have been in the market longer and are highly respected, are not as durable as nylon.

A luxurious look for your bath can make the difference

Remember when the perfect bathroom had the clinical sparkle of a hospital? Well, sparkle is still important but now it's turning up in baths designed with a little self-indulgence in mind.

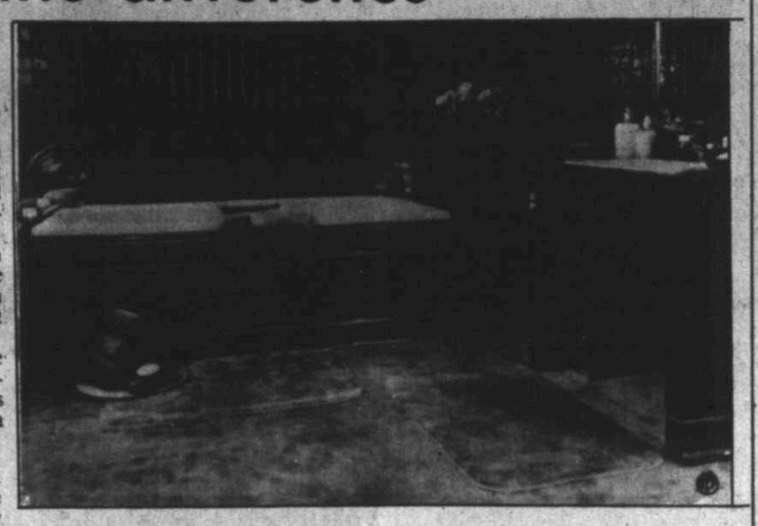

If you want to give your bathroom a more luxurious look, but don't want to pull out the fixtures and start all over, why not add decorative wall-to-wall carpeting or area bathrugs?

Taking their cue from the fashion world, bathrug manufacturers are showing how to make a bathroom beautiful without sacrificing comfort and practicality.

Bathrugs serve two purposes. The first is purely functional—they prevent slipping and sliding on wet floors or having to step out of the tub onto a cold, hard surface.

The second purpose is aesthetic. Bathrugs can soften the look of the room and add a bit of "pizzazz." They allow you to change the entire look of your bathroom without a large investment.

As consumers have begun to ask for more elegance in their bathrooms, the rules about decorating them have started to change.

The combination of wall-to-wall carpeting and area rugs enhances the elegant and luxurious look of this bath. To help prevent moisture damage and mildew, choose carperting of man-made fiber.

Patterns, both in bathrugs and towels, are gaining on traditional solid colors. As a result, the old rule that bathrugs and towels must be the same color is being disregarded, and coordinating colors of patterned fabrics are being used to brighten the room.

Solid colors are also changing. The bathrug best-sellers are appearing in many different, new and exciting shades.

Textures are also coming into vogue, with manufacturers mixing different fibers and multicolored yarns to create a strong textured look.

The most popular bathroom rugs are the high-pile saxonies, which look a lot like the pile carpets made for the rest of the home.

One of the current trends in bathrugs is to take them out of the bathroom and into the rest of the house. A few already on the market can be used in the bedroom as well as the bath.

Bathrugs are also used to alter the appearance of the size of the room. If you have a small powder room or bathroom where too many colors would look busy or very bright colors would be overpowering, try the textured-look rugs to give the room a more airy feeling.

Wall-to-wall bathroom carpeting, virtually unheard-of until a few years ago, is also good for giving a feeling of more space as well as a touch of luxury and elegance.

You can use wall-to-wall carpeting alone or with area rugs over it. Solid colors or muted patterns with a contrasting border will give your bathroom a dramatic, new look.

Because moisture is ever-present in the bathroom, be sure you check the fiber content carefully when shopping for bathrugs.

Also check the backing; rugs with backs well-covered in latex will last and keep their floor-gripping properties longer.

Armed with this information, explore the many beautiful styles and patterns on the market. The right bathrug will go a long way toward making your bathroom the beautiful and comfortable oasis you want.

Redecorating your home from the floor up

More important than flair, imagination, or experience is the ability to plan. In many instances, rooms lack character and appeal because they are an unplanned jumble of themes, styles and colors.

When you think about redecorating, study your home and carefully plan the feeling you want to create. When you do so, begin with the carpet you will be walking and entertaining on. It will be the focal point of your new living environment.

The first step in redecorating is knowing the room or rooms where the carpeting will be installed. Is it a living or dining room, family room or bedroom? What is its size and shape? Has it an L-shape or other irregularities such as a bay window or fireplace? Is the lighting in the room bright and cheerful or shaded and subdued? How much wear will the carpet have to take and what nind of wear will it be?

By asking yourself these questions, you and the floor covering salesperson can decide what type of carpeting will be appropriate for each room.

The living room, for example, is the showplace of your home. You want it to exude beauty. But it should also conform with your lifestyle. Does the family congregate in the living room to watch television or play games? Do they often carry food or snacks with them? If so, maybe you should stay away from the extra-light solid colors and choose a subtle print, a multi-color Saxony or a cut-and-loop style. In addition, be sure the carpet is soil and stainresistant.

Family rooms are normally beehives of activity, which contributes to the wear and tear of the carpeting. A stain-resistant tweed or multi-color pattern is recommended because it will help hide soiling. Also, if there is a cat in the family that loves to claw and pull at the carpet, do not use a loop pile, but stick instead, to a cut-pile texture.

Hallways and stairways are the highways of the home. They take some hard traffic. Allop pile or a cut pile would be best; and, as with the family room, a tweed or a soil-hiding pattern would help greatly. You should also remember that carpet gets more wear on the edge of stairs than any other location. Consequently, do not skimp on the quality of staircase carpet or cushion.

Bedrooms are low traffice areas where less expensive grades of carpet will serve. If you use a heavy pad, even a relatively inexpensive carpet will give a feeling of luxury to go with the comfort and warmth that are so important in bedrooms. For your children's bedrooms, select a dense, level loop or cut pile carpet that is easy to clean and will withstand the rough and tumble play of children.

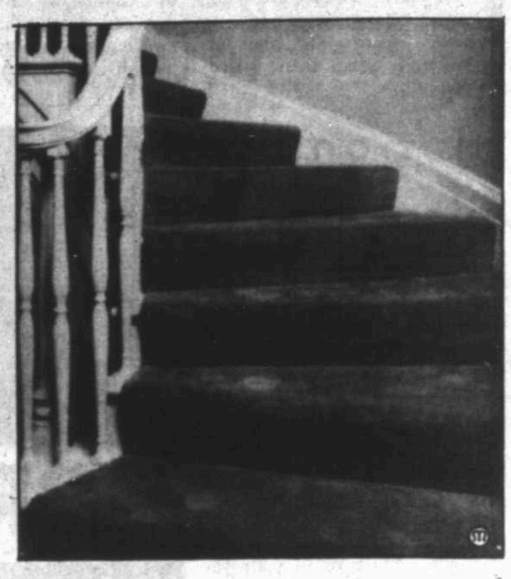

After the type of carpet has been selected for each particular room, the next step is to bring the carpet in line with the existing or future color scheme of the walls, draperies and furniture.

The final step is choosing the right lamps, pictures, plants and other accent pieces to enhance the decor of the room and give it that special touch.

Your home should be comfortable and appealing. The floor carpeting is the cornerstone in creating the most memorable, intimate and personal environment possible.

This dense pile, multi-colored carpet will wear well under heavy traffic and help hide dirt and food stains in this dining area.

Stairways and other heavy traffic areas require durable dense pile carpets. Man-made fibers make carpets more long-wearing,resist soil and are easy to clean.

Ceramic tile spices up kitchen and adds long-lasting durability

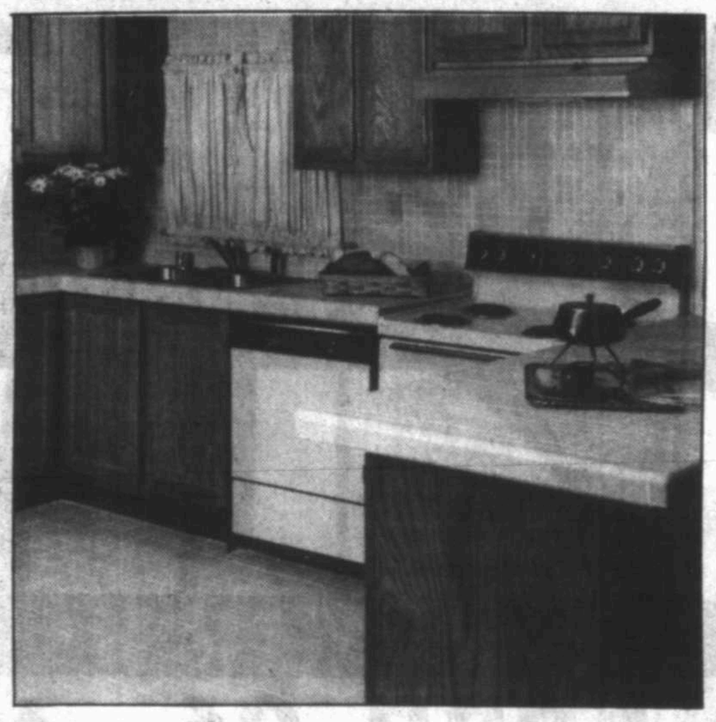

Busy in its design and busy with cooking, breakfasts, teenagers and pets, this kitchen was a confused jumble most days until a remodel streamlined things.

The owners took a practical approach to the improvement by selecting ceramic tile to renew worn surfaces. Old laminate counters were badly scratched and dull; floor were covered in a tiresome vinyl pattern which determined a never-to-be-changed color scheme.

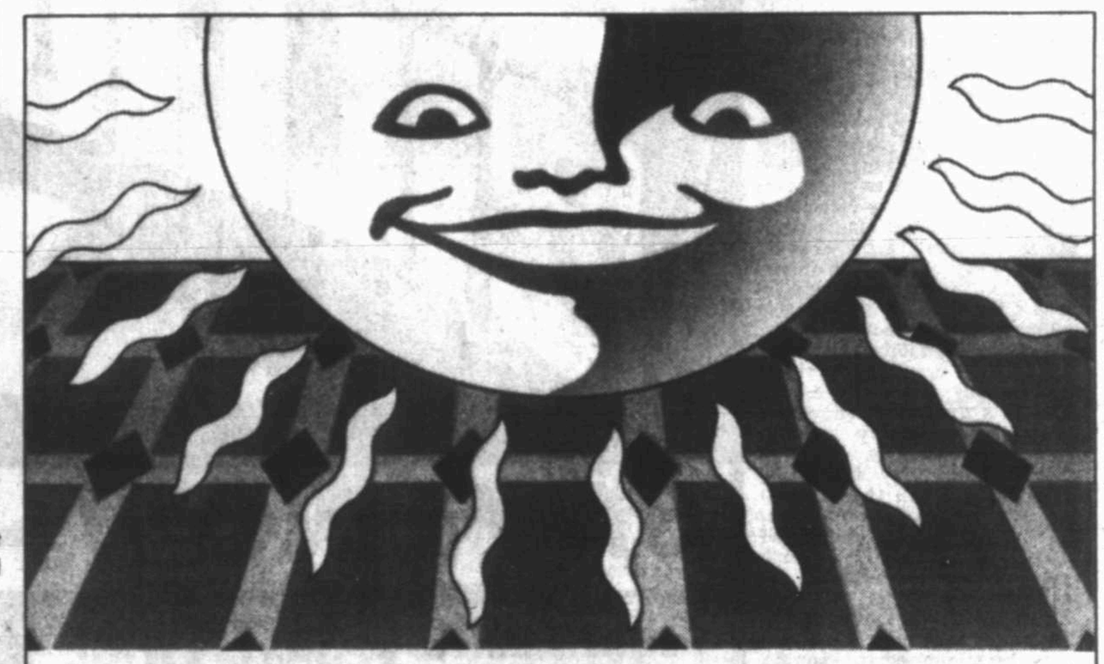

Countertops were greatly improved when ceramic tile was installed over the laminate. They are freshly tiled in creamy white ceramic tile which gives a sleek look. The finely textured matte glaze on the tile resists scratching and will not wear down in areas of constant use. There is no worry ablout scorch marks or burning with ceramic tile surfaces. Near the stove, pans may be removed from the oven or burner and placed directly on a tile counter to cool.

Durable, elegant ceramic tile was selected for the floor. The kitchen seems brighter now. Its buttery smooth matte finish will take all the traffic the kids and dogs care to give. A quick mop-up with water is all it needs to stay beautiful; no waxing - ever.

These pastel shades will never restrict the decor. Accessories can change with current trends for generations to come.

Tiled floor, backsplash, and countertop unify this small, efficient kitchen. Note that ceramic tile runs up to cabinets and around window.

Understanding texture of carpet

Bordering wall-to-wall carpet adds an interesting new dimension to room decor and enlarges the design possibilities of carpet. Borders of contrasting colors give this carpet a beautiful contemporary look and elegantly frame the formal dining room furnishings.

The texture of carpet determines its appearance and performance. Understanding texture will help you select the carpeting that best suits your needs.

There are three basic carpet textures:

Loop pile is how most carpet starts out. Varying or cutting the loop creates different styles and patterns.

Level loop pile carpet is made with tufted loops of the same height, left uncut. It has a tight, pebbly surface that can take hard wear, hiding footprints and furniture marks. Soil tends to stay on the surface, making it easy to clean.

Multi-level loop pile carpet is constructed of different height loops, creating a sculptured or patterned surface. The design of the carpet hides dust and dirt better than a level loop texture, but it is not quite as wear resistant.

Cut pile carpets have the top of the loop sheared off, creating some very luxurious textures:

Velvet or plush textures have an evenly cut pile, very similar to a velvet fabric. The yarns have very little twist and stand upright, with the ends blending together for a smooth surface. Plush carpets tend to show footprints easily and may also have a shaded effect, depending on how light hits the pile.

A saxony texture is similar to a plush carpet; however, the yarns have more twist, giving them a pinpoint definition. Each yarn is distinct and is heat-set to lock the twist into the yarn. Saxony textures are very popular due to their rich surface finish.

Frieze (pronounced free-zay) carpets are made of tightly twisted heat-set yarns that have an overall nubby appearance. They wear very well, hiding footprints, dirt and dust.

Cut and loop textures are a combination of cut-pile and loop-pile yarns. The shorter loops are left uncut, and the top level is sheared, creating a sculptured effect. Cut and loop is slightly less durable than multi-level loop carpets.

A tip-sheared texture has yarns of the same height, but some loops are cut. The effect is more luxurious than a level loop carpet, although it does not hide footprints quite as well.

Random shearing combines multi-level loop yarns, shearing off the tops of the highest loops. This combination texture is also considered very luxurious.

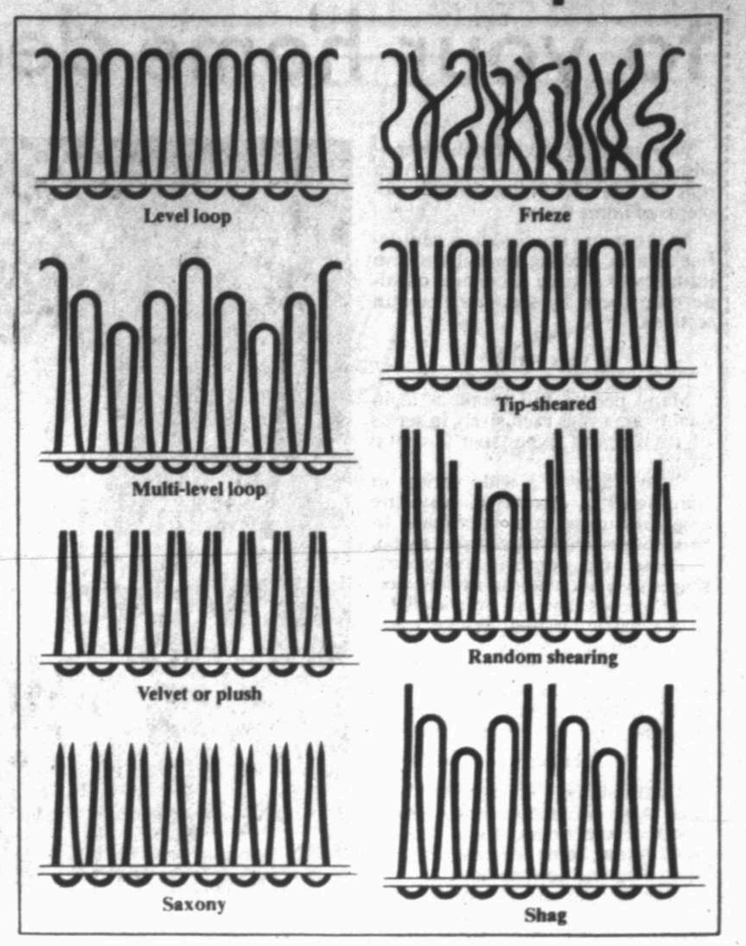

A shag texture has long pile yarns, either looped or cut.

Follow these carpet selection tips

Examine carpet color in the light in which it will be seen. Showroom lights often change the appearance of carpeting. Try to take a sample of the carpet home to get a better idea of how it will look installed. If this is not possible, at least take the sample to a showroom window or door to examine its color in natural light. Also, always take color samples of your room furnishings with you when you shop to help you coordinate colors and picture how everything will look together.

Check for fiber features that improve the performance of the carpet. As an example, carpets of nylon are stain and soil-resistant and feature a lifetime anti-static guarantee.

Choose carpeting with the amount of room traffice in mind. Short, dense piles and level loop carpets stand up well in heavy traffic areas like hallways and stairways, while plushes and velvets are better in low traffic areas like the master bedroom.

The many varieties of carpet weaves offer to consumers a wide variety of carpet textures and styles from which to select.

Carpeting unifies decor

According to many professional decorators, a home's interior should be designed for continuity. As the "fifth wall" of a room, the floor should connect all design elements of the room.

Floor covering can have a major effect on the environment of your home. The texture, patterns and colors of carpeting can add to the feeling of harmony and completeness of a home.

Further, coordinating the carpet color schemes of adjoining rooms will carry the feeling of unity throughout the home.

While your personal taste should play the major role in your selection of carpet, a number of other factors should be considered.

One thing to consider when choosing carpet color is room size. A sense of spaciousness can be created in a small room by using light carpet colors, such as white, oyster, beige or muted blues and grays. Further, wall-to-wall carpet also tends to expand the space of a room.

Painting the walls the same light color as the carpet and selecting or covering furnishings in fabrics of the same hue also make a room look larger. Vary the textures of the carpet, wall covering and upholstery to keep the room from looking bland.

Large rooms, on the other hand, can be made cozier by using a rich, deep-color carpet in a sculptured texture. Furniture can be covered in contrasting colors or patterns that complement the scale of the room.

Color can also add personality to a room and change the feeling of the space. A room without natural light can be warmed by bright yellows, oranges and reds.

Cool colors, such as blues and greens, can create a calm feeling in too-bright rooms.

Lively, vibrant colors are good for kitchens or playrooms, whereas pastels will add to the dignity of rooms used for more formal activity.

The amount of traffic an area receives should also influence your choice of carpet color. Stairways, hallways and entrance areas, which have a larger volume of people passing through, should be carpeted in darker colors that will hide soil tracked in from outside. Tweeds and pebbled or berber textures are also effective in hiding soil.

Stripes and patterns make good choices for kitchens and other areas where spills are likely to occur.

Check the lighting

It is important to look at the carpet you want to buy in the lighting of your own home. Take advantage of a shop-at-home service if your carpet dealer offers it.

If not, don't make any decisions until you have examined a sample in the room to be carpeted. The lighting of your room will usually differ from the showroom or store where you shop. Examine the sample both during the day and at night before making the final color choice.

But again, the bottom line in color choice is personal taste. While an expert's advice is handy when you're confronted with design problems, you yourself must be happy with the color selected because you'll be living with it.

Be sure to shop around and try to see as many colors as possible. Don't make impulse purchases and be sure to examine a sample of the carpet in the room where it will be used.

Careful selections

Carpeting adds warmth and life to a room. By carefully selecting colors that appeal to you and flatter the rooms, you will be creating an environment that will provide comfort and enjoyment for your family for many years.

Area rugs lend versatility to your home decorating

Want to give a room a make-over—without a major investment? Area rugs are one of the most versatile elements of home decor.

As the name implies, they can define an area, making it possible to give intimacy to a space or create a multi-purpose room by separating it into sections.

A wide variety

Many people still think of high-quality area rugs exclusively in terms of fragile and expensive Oriental wools.

Today, there is a wide variety of long-wearing, attractive, easy-care area rugs made from man-made fibers, such as Du Pont Antron® nylon.

These rugs come in every size, shape, style and color to fit your decorating needs. They are even available in the classic Oriental designs traditionally found in wools.

Unlike wool rugs, area rugs of Antron® stand up to heavy household traffic and out-perform less expensive polyester rugs.

Area rugs too!

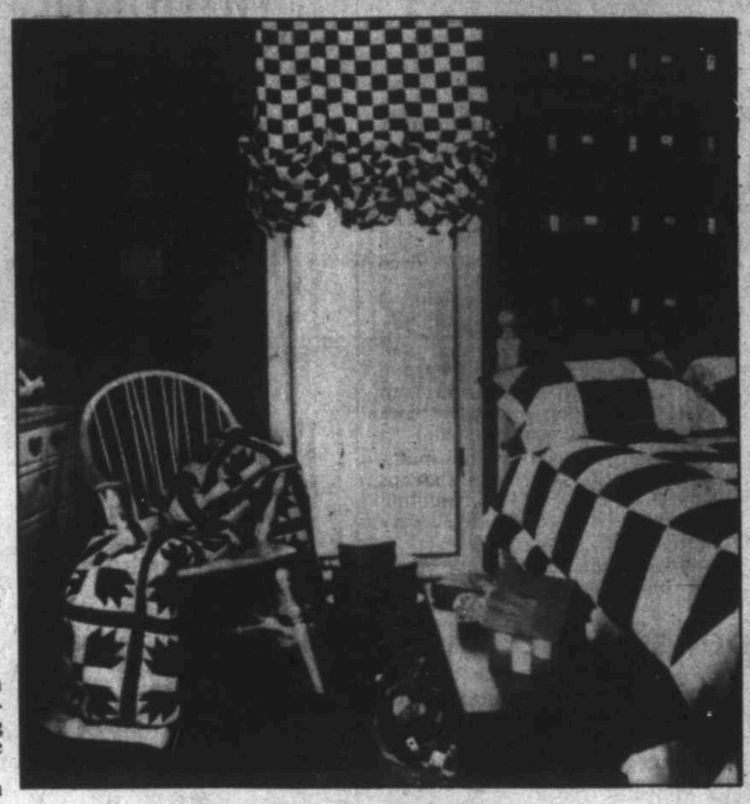

Traditionally, area rugs have been used alone or in sets to show off hardwood or tile floors, but a growing trend among home decorators is to use them over wall-to-wall carpets.

Teamed with carpet, they allow you to separate furniture groupings while keeping a beautiful "tied-together" look for your room.

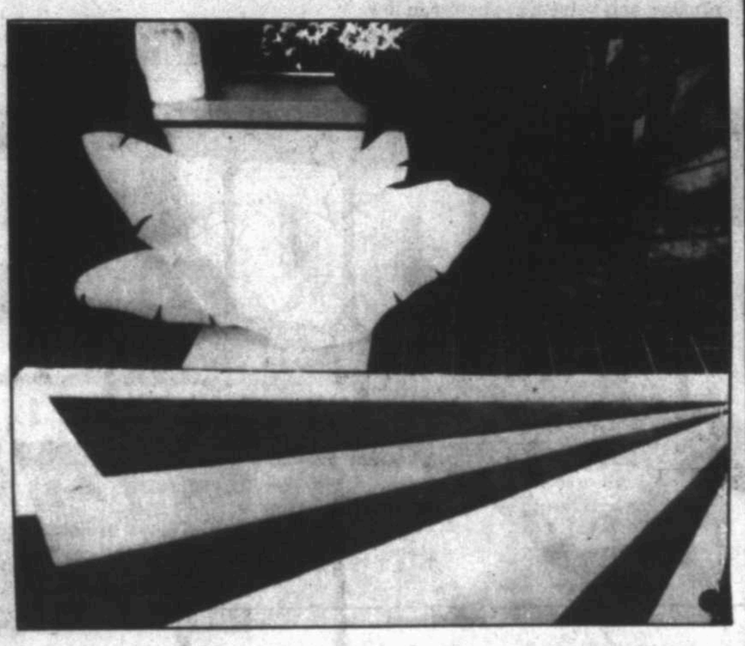

Area rugs may be just large enough to fit under a coffee table or almost fill a room. They can have bordered designs or be bound remnants of wall-to-wall carpeting —it's this flexibility that makes them a floor covering worth considering.

Get the facts

Talk to your carpet retailer; you'll find countless possibilities for changing your living space with area rugs.

Area rugs can help give a room a more stately appearance. This custom-made rug of nylon with its Oriental motif adds to this room's formal appearance.

A contemporary design in an area rug highlights the colors of the hallway's decor.

Carpet has advantages

Take a look at your carpet. Really take a good look at it. Upon observation you will discover that few products equal all that carpet offers. Carpet makes sense.

If all it had to offer were its beauty and comfort, it would be a worthwhile investment. But carpet offers much more.

Add its long-term performance and maintenance ease, its insulation value, acoustical properties, inherent safety and aesthetic flexibility, and you approach the ideal.

As you know, the ideal is a good deal!

The bottom line is that the carpet adds beauty and comfort to your home. Design motif has always been a large part of carpet appeal. Years ago, patterned carpet was limited to fine but rather expensive woven wool carpets. Today, improvements in yarn and tufting technology, printing equipment and techniques have made it possible to produce the intricate beauty of the finest woven patterns in economical tufted carpet constructions.

While design, color and texture contribute to a carpet's beauty, comfort is what makes carpet seem so luxurious. The comfort factor adds prestige to any home.

The practical benefits of carpet's comfort should be understood as well. It endures foot fatigue and is a highly efficient thermal insulator. Carpet keeps you warm.

But "warm" also has a positive psychological meaning. The color and textural beauty of carpet adds a "warm" feeling to an interiior.

Carpet triangles of contrasting colors give this living room an exciting new look.

Rich and elegant colors dominate today's home decorating scene

Color is the most flexible and exciting tool available to home decorators. And color is everywhere this year. It is evident in fabric, wallcoverings, bed and table linens and in carpeting. Color is no longer just for accent pieces. It dominates the decorating scene.

"Color sets the mood of a room," says Jean Peeples, manager of design for Galaxy Carpet Mills, Inc., one of the country's largest carpet manufacturers.

"Color is emotion and personality. It suggests serenity or excitement. Color can brighten a dark room or cool down a sunny one. Since carpeting is the major color influence in a room, it's the item that's usually selected first."

In the 1960's, decorating relied heavily on avocado green and harvest gold as the dominant colors. In the 1970's, color went monochromanic and the earth tones gained popularity–the beiges, rusts and warm golds, Galaxy's Peeples explains. For the 1980's, especially for 1985, everything is coming up subdued color, with jeweled tones gaining popularity.

In response to this trend, the carpet industry is expanding the color palette and adding new blues, greens and mauves to the spectrum.

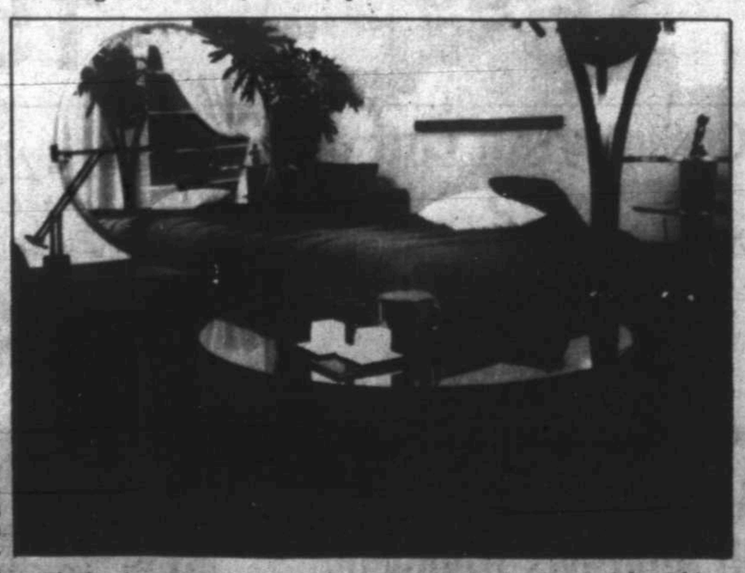

"We're seeing soft, clear colors that would have been unheard of a few years ago," says Peeples. "Consumers have grown tired of browns and dull beiges. Now the beige tones are warmer. There's a color revolution exploding in the carpet industry and a move toward sophistication."

These colors include persimmon, mulberry, salmon, peach, heather, plum, periwinkle and silver grey.

For decorating versatility, multi-tone carpets in the latest fashionable colors are available. Multi-tones are subtle, understated, tone-on-tone shades that offer the beauty and luxury of a solid color carpet with the easy maintenance of a multi-color.

Lighter shades are also enjoying a new popularity for several reasons. As living areas shrink, color helps create an illusion of space. By using lighter carpeting in a small room with pale walls, the room will appear much larger.

Another reason for the increasing popularity of lighter shades is modern technology. Today's advanced generation nylon fibers have built-in soil and stain-resistant characteristics that make carpet maintenance easier. Thus, fears about keeping lighter carpet clean and bright have been alleviated.

Platforms covered in carpet are used as both practical furnishings and exciting design elements in this bedroom setting.

Ex-bank president denies stealing Metro Bank funds

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Former Metro Bank President John Edward "Eddie" Thomas testified in his own defense early today in the federal trial charging him with nine counts of embezzling or misapplying more than $550,000 and five counts of making false entries into bank records between June 1981 and July 1983.

Thomas, 42, of Odessa, told the jurors in Federal District Judge Lucius Bunton's courtroom that he neither stole, embezzled nor bilked Metro Bank of the $550,000 for which he is charged.

Recalling specific instances, defense attorney Joe Smith asked Thomas, "In each and every one of these instances did you ever intend to defraud Metro Bank?"

Thomas replied, "No sir."

Smith continued, "If you were going to steal, embezzle or bilk from Metro Bank, is this the way you would do it?"

"No sir, not through my checking account," Thomas answered.

"Did you steal any money from Metro Bank," asked Smith.

"No sir," Thomas said.

A federal grand jury Jan. 21 returned its original indictment against the 42-year-old Thomas for six counts of embezzling or misapplying funds and five counts of making false entries. But errors in dates and amounts of money prompted a reindictment Feb. 22 on the nine counts of pilfering and misapplying more that $550,000 and making false entries on almost $1 million in 1981, 1982 and 1983.

In addition, he was charged with three additional counts of misapplying approximately $100,000 in Metro Bank funds for the operation of Santa Fe Crossing, a corporation which operated the Santa Fe Crossing Restaurant and Saloon in Odessa. The cafe later became Cafe Milan.

Thomas, president of Metro Bank at Midland Regional Airport from its inception in 1978 until he resigned on July 14, 1983, could be sentenced to up to 70 years in prison and fined up to $70,000 should he be convicted of the charges. The bank failed July 29, 1983.

During his testimony, Thomas said he did not misapply Metro Bank funds for the operation of Santa Fe Crossing.

"Did you go into that deal to bilk Metro Bank?" Smith asked Thomas.

"No sir," the defendent answered.

"Did you make a killing on that deal," continued Smith.

"No sir," Thomas repeated.

Concerning accusations in which Thomas is charged with embezzling $5,000 on a check issued by FTH Inc. payable to Metro Bank, the defendant said, "As I was leaving, I did cash Mr. Fink's check. It was made payable to Metro Bank and I left the bank."

"What did you do with the check?" Smith asked, to which Thomas replied, "I gave it to Mr. Fink."

"But Eddie Thomas did not get that check did he?" Smith asked.

"No, he did not," Thomas answered.

Witnesses for the prosecution concluded testimony Wednesday. During that testimony, Assistant U.S. Attorney Wayne Speck attempted to show the jury Thomas violated standard banking policies while at the helm of the bank.

Among the witnesses was Brooks Akins, a former Metro Bank officer, who testified loans made by Thomas to himself "were not reported to the bank's board of directors" and that severe "overdrafts were approved" by Thomas.

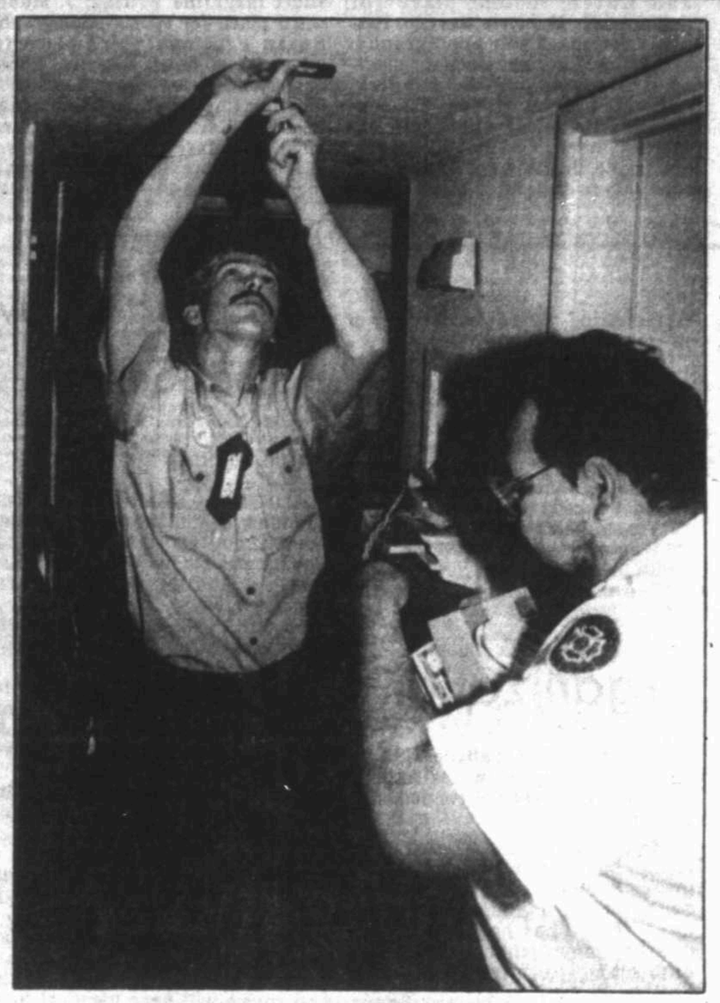

Akins specifically recalled a $416,000 loan made to FTH Inc., a company in which Thomas was a partner, which had been shown as "paid off" by a FTH check that was insufficient.

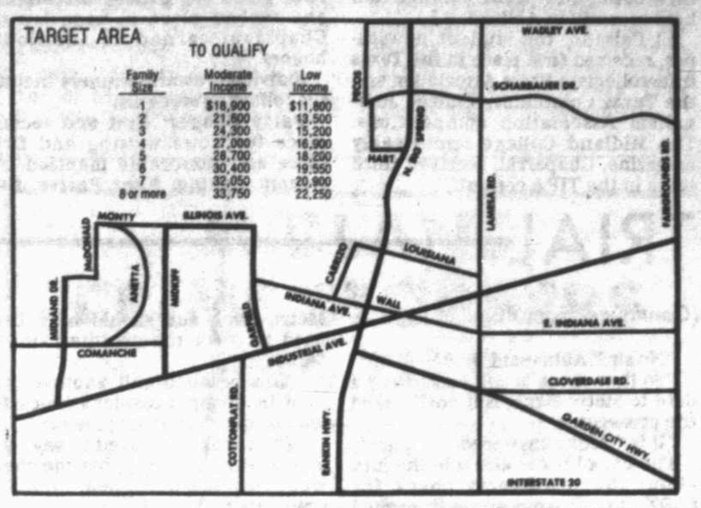

"Did the check clear the bank?" Speck asked.

"No sir," Akins replied.

"Did that check ever clear the bank?" Speck continued.

Paramedic Chip Balzer, left, prepares the bracket while arson investigator Lon Dominguez inspects a smoke detector before it is installed at no cost in a qualifying Midland home. City offers free smoke alarms

From staff reports

If the fire truck and ambulance don't draw enough attention, maybe the five clowning members of the Midland Fire Department will.

On the road Tuesday to install free smoke detectors in a targeted area, the group gave homeowners trouble about what was cooking in the kitchen as they assembled their ladder and tool box.

"You read the instructions," Paramedic Chip Balzer said, wobbling on the ladder.

"He can't read," quipped Reginald Rankin.

The scene with the fire truck and ambulance pulling up in front of a house is deliberate, according to fire officials. They want to draw attention to the fact that they have 3,000 smoke detectors available at no cost to homeowners living in a targeted area who meet financial requirements determined by volunteer organizations.

The warning devices, available through a community development grant, only are for those who own their own homes because state law requires smoke detectors to be installed in all rental properties at the owner's expense.

Simple applications are available at Casa De Amigos, Community and Senior Services, Our Lady of Guadalupe and the Salvation Army.

After installation, which only takes a couple of minutes, the battery-operated smoke detectors are the property of the homeowner.

"While we are there, we ask if they want a fire inspection of their house," Lon Dominguez, Fire Marshal's Office arson investigator, said Tuesday. "Just yesterday, we found some hazards like a wood-burning stove with a single jacketed pipe going through the roof." Without insulation, "it gets pretty hot," he said.

Worn extension cords and a water heater that vents into the attic were other problems cited, he said.

"I did five houses yesterday and all five agreed" to the free inspection, Dominguez said.

Because most fires occur during sleeping hours, the smoke detectors are placed between the kitchen and bedrooms.

"They are designed mostly to get you out of bed because most fire fatalities are from the smoke, not the fire itself," Dominguez said.

A 17-year-old California youth is being held without bond in connection with the shooting death and attempted robbery Feb. 10 of a Midland man.

James Barbour Sims last week was found fit to stand trial as an adult, according to a Los Angeles County deputy district attorney. The 17-year-old Pomona, Calif., youth was arraigned on charges of murder with malice aforesight and attempted robbery in connection with the death of 51-year-old Robert Vance Lockhart, 3413 Sinclair St.

Lockhart, who was attending a business seminar in Claremont, Calif., was found dead by his wife, Ann, outside the motel where they were staying.

The employee of Union Oil Co. had been shot once in the chest during an apparent robbery, Claremont police said. Sims was arrested the next afternoon.

"Specifically, the court found he was not a fit and proper subject to be treated by the court as a juvenile," said Gary Hearnsberger, who is assigned to special operations in the district attorney's juvenile division. "The murder itself I won't say was premeditated, but it was premeditated robbery. He had armed himself and he had himself masked like with a bandana. There were other things, like he was carrying a loaded weapon and he shot during the event."

Under California law, the court takes into consideration five specifics in determining whether or not a juvenile can be tried as an adult:

— The degree of criminal sophistication shown in the particular offense;

— The possibility of rehabilitating the defendant prior to the end of the juvenile court's jurisdiction, which is at age 25;

— Previous delinquency history;

— Previous attempts by the juvenile court to rehabilitate the defendant;

— And the seriousness and gravity of the circumstances of the present offense.

"I did advise the court of the nature of this particular crime and how it occurred," Hearnsberger said. "As far as his prior delinquency history, he has other arrests for theft-related offenses and other trials were pending. But, as far as I know, he didn't have any convictions."

A preliminary hearing has been set for May 22 in Division II, according to a spokeswoman in the court clerk's office.

The murder charge, called a capital murder in Texas when committed in the commission of another crime, is called a murder with "special circumstances" in California, according to Hearnsberger. By state law, there are 22 "special circumstances."

"If a person is charged with a murder that is committed in the course of robbery, that's a special circumstance and (the defendant) can receive the death penalty in California," Hearnsberger said. "However, because the suspect is under 18, in California he cannot receive the death penalty."

After the U.S. Supreme Court in the late 1970s overturned several death penalty cases, the California Supreme Court re-enacted changes in the law, Hearnsberger said. But in 1978, California voters voted the death penalty back in, prompting the legislation to eliminate persons under the age of 18 from facing the death penalty in murders with special circumstances, he said.

Attempts to contact Sims' attorney, John Sweeny of the Los Angeles law firm of Johnny Cochran, were unsuccessful.

S&L processes loans for south Midland

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Five housing loan applications for an area in south Midland are being processed by Petroplex Savings and Loan Association after an announcement in early February that 17 lots in a three-block tract were available for development at a lower interest rate.

Of the 17 lots, 13 have been sold with 11 going to homebuilders. The other two lots were used as sites to relocate two houses obtained by the Midland Housing Finance Corp. which will be for sale, according to Steve Davidson of the housing group.

On Feb. 8, spokesmen from south Midland, MHFC and Petroplex Savings announced a coalition to provide housing at a lower interest rate for persons who could qualify. Representing the south side were Bertha Starks, Jessye Johnson and Kitty Joiner, who had initiated the idea of developing the three-block area of vacant land into a showcase for revitalizing south Midland.

Working out the plan with the women were Davidson and Doug Henson with MHFC and Jana Porterfield with Petroplex Savings. The city of Midland allocated federal funds for putting in streets, curbs, gutters and water and sewer connections in that area.

Buying lots are Deter Construction, Castle Construction, George Webb III, Jim White Homes, S&W Homes, Inc., Hambrick Homes and Shorthorn Construction.

"The builders feel confident enough about this that they're willing to sign earnest money contract. They're saying, 'We're here. Come and see us. We're serious about this,'" Davidson said.

According to Davidson, MHFC structured an incentive program to help with closing costs if homebuyers could qualify for a loan otherwise. "Builders said they had people who met the requirements for a loan but they couldn't come up with the $2,000 in closing costs."

Mrs. Starks said the idea behind the project is to make the people responsible for their own loan. "They have to go to the builder and see what they want and then go to see if they can qualify. Our main thrust was to get the lending institution to loan money to build on this side of town. There had been the rumor that people couldn't get money to build on that side of town," she said.

After the initial announcement about the revitalization plan, Mrs. Starks and the other women got more calls than there were lots available, she said.

Of the five applications at Petroplex, all are for three bedroom homes with one or two baths and about 1,100 square feet, said Ms. Porterfield. The average loan is for $40,000. Four of the applications are from single people with children, she added.

"Lot sales have just recently taken place and we're off to a good start," she said. Ms. Porterfield suggested persons interested in a home on one of the lots should contact the builders involved. If the builder can design a house to fit the citizen's needs and money limitations, then that person should contact Petroplex about the loan, which could be as low as 8 percent. Handling the loan applications at Petroplex are Dolly Calhoun and Christie Ray.

Police continue search for escaped jail inmate

From Staff Reports

Midland police are continuing their search this morning for a 25-year-old city jail inmate who escaped Wednesday afternoon from a second-floor window with a rope made of bed sheets.

Federal prisoner Alejandro Rios Lopez, also known as Alejandro Rios Rodriquez, escaped during an exercise period wearing only his underwear, according to Jail Captain Roger H. Meurer.

The man had been serving a 179-day sentence since Feb. 7 for illegal entry into the country, according to Meurer, who said, "I don't know the circumstances of his arrest. We seldom do when they are brought to us by the U.S. Marshal. We only are charged with holding them safely."

About three or four prisoners have escaped from second-floor windows in the past, Meurer said. "But this is the first time we've ever had one leave from the exercise area, which is minimum security." He said the jail was short-staffed and, although there are usually two officers in the jail with one staying with the prisoners during exercise, there was only one officer Wednesday, who left the exercising prisoners for a short time.

Meurer said the windows are barred, but "somehow or another, they got the bars loose."

The man is alleged to have a brother and sister living in Midland and unconfirmed reports said his wife, who lives in Big Spring, was having a baby.

A spokesman in the U.S. Marshal's Office said it had not been determined whether charges of escape are filed automatically, or if they are filed when an escaped prisoner is apprehended. "But some kind of charges will be filed sooner or later," he said.

No mortal can haunt the grave, but it haunts us all

The way things are going, I'll probably be dead before I know it. But that will be all right, since I'll be unaware I'm no longer living. I hope it will be that way, but who knows? Who can haunt the grave? No mortal. Instead, the grave haunts us all.

I'm never aware I'm sleeping but am cognizant of having slept. Maybe death is similar. Perhaps I'll be awakened in the grave to a New World with which I hope I am immensely pleased. I trust we all will be. In time, we'll all find out, so the prospects of death aren't so dismal. It's somewhat of a journey, an adventure. Death and the hereafter are just inevitable, or so we are persuaded.

It's just disconcerting that life, which can be so wondrous, exciting and challenging, is so very perishable. Unless painfully reminded, we are virtually oblivious to the millions of souls who have died before us. We have the recorded legacy of a relatively few. Some were great in their talents, thoughts, industry, intellects and in their hearts; we cherish their lives and their gifts, which, I suppose, could have been their bids for immortality. The great composers, writers, artists, philosophers, poets, scientists, statesmen, explorers, theologians, inventors and industrialists live beyond their years. So do some of the dreaded despots. Their contributions were staggering but not equal on the scale of life or death. Do we not conjure up a rainbow of bright and drab images when we think of Bach, Hilter, Jefferson, Franklin, Emerson, Mussolini, Gandhi, Leonardo Da Vinci, Michelangelo, Confucius, Rembrandt, Einstein, Martin Luther, Lincoln, Lenin, Nero, Goya, Homer, Shakespeare, Socrates, Plato, Dante, Churchill, Roosevelt, Stalin, Tojo, Constantine, Henry the something or other, a William or two and Alexander and all the Caesars.

They all did some — good or ill — but certainly they weren't passive. But today we are unaware whether or not they are aware.

So, in the grave, we're all the same, oblivious, I suppose, until we are awakened, if indeed we are to live again or to perish forever. But we shall sidestep theology.

I don't know exactly where this discourse is going, for I am pondering beyond my limits. I know not what tomorrow will bring any of us, except it will bear the fruits of this day. Yesterday is long gone. Sometimes I long for the elusive past — long before my days on earth started their count. The part of the past I want is just the romantic instances; I don't want all of the turmoil, travail and boredom. I just want the good times.

Actually, what I'm getting at is unrelenting time: the curse of us all. So, we must go about God's business and get on with life and living. The future is always now. It can be nothing else.

TRIAL

"No sir," Akins said.

"So that check is still considered a debt to Metro Bank, is it not?" asked the prosecutor.

"It is," Akins answered.

The bank officer also told the jury about the third-party check for $5,000 that Thomas allegedly cashed shortly before leaving Metro Bank.

"He took the check to one of the tellers for cash before he left on a forced vacation," he said. "The check was from FTH, payable to Metro Bank and should have been used to cover the overdraft on the $416,000."

Akins recalled still another incident involving a cashier's check for which there was no payment.

"The check was issued to pay for a loan at Permian Bank, but the check went through unfunded," the witness testified.

"So it was just gone?" Speck asked.

"Yes sir," said Akins.

During cross examination, defense attorney Smith tried to discredit Akins asking, "Were you over any of the loans at the bank?"

"No sir," Akins replied.

"At any time did you institute loans for companies in which you had an interest?" he asked.

"No sir," said Akins.

"Did you ever have any personal overdrafts at the bank?" the defense attorney asked.

"Yes sir," Akins answered.

"Who approved your overdrafts?" Smith went on to ask.

"The same person who approved yours," Akins said.

Bill to create new court-at-law passes Senate

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A bill by Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, creating a new county court-at-law for Midland County passed the Texas Senate on the local and uncontested bill calendar today.

Craddick's HB 710 now goes to the governor's office for consideration, an aide said.

The measure, which provides for the creation of the court by next Jan. 1 at the latest, was passed by the Texas House of Representatives March 14 without objection.

HB 710 details provision regarding jurisdiction of the court, and requirements for the judge.

Salary for the judge would be at least 90 percent of the amount paid by the state to a district judge in Midland County.

The bill also amends existing law relating to the Midland County Court-at-Law, to provide that the two courts will have identical jurisdiction, and to allow for transfer of cases.

Texas Parent-Teacher Association Cultural Arts Contest winners are seated, from left, Karen Leung and Laura Renick, both of Lee High School; Goddard Junior High School student Erin Kelly, left rear; and Ken Amagasaki, also of Lee High School. The students will go on to compete in the national competition this summer.

Agencies probe fund-raising organization

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas attorney general and the Better Business Bureau say they are scrutinizing a campaign to raise $5 million for Ethiopian famine victims announced by a local talent agency.

The investigation began after organizations cited as backers of the drive by the Brochelle Agency Inc. disavowed any connection with the campaign.

Bill Beckhart, vice president of trade practices for the Better Business Bureau, said he has been unable to verify that Brochelle Agency has even planned any fund-raising events.

"I called (the attorney general) because when we see something that's loking to be pretty bad, we will ususally check with a law enforcement agency," he said.

Brochelle Agency officials announced plans for the USA for Africa in Dallas fund drive at a news conference last Friday.

They described a series of events — including a telethon, concerts, a "ball extravaganza," and a children's drive — to raise $5 million during six days in May. Brochelle representatives also said that several prominent Dallas corporations had pledged money.

Of the sponsors named last Friday, only the Dallas chapter of the NAACP said it is affiliated with the Brochelle effort.

Representatives of the Dallas Black Chamber of Commerce, the Dallas Chamber of Commerce, Southwestern Bell Telephone, Diamond Shamrock Corp. the Southland Corp., and the national USA for Africa Foundation in Los Angeles have said they are not connected to the campaign.

"Our foundation just heard about it this morning and we are investigating it," Wendy Ferris, a publicist for the national group, said Wednesday. "There has been, across the country now, what I would call enthusiasm gone astray."

Brochelle officials blamed disorganization and "miscommunication" for the uproar.

"We are genuine in this effort," said Lee Haynes, general manager of the agency.

Steve Gardner, assistant attorney general in Dallas, said he would meet with Brochelle representatives to discuss their drive.

Once the houses are built and the owners moved in, the three women behind the development won't stop their involvement. Mrs. Starks said they are planning to get the people organized into a neighborhood watch program and to motivate them to keep the property up. "We want to make this a showcase for the community," she said.

Part of the philosophy behind the home ownership, according to Davidson, is that the person owning the house "will have more affinity to it if they have their money in it.

"We've accomplished our goal," he said of MHFC's involvement, "to bring affordable housing to that area of the city that didn't have the opportunity before."

Jury awards family $2.325 million

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The family of a 26-year-old derrick operator, killed April 9, 1983, in a rig accident near Pandale in northwestern Val Verde County, has won an award of $2.325 million from the Delaware-based manufacturer of the rig.

A 161st District Court jury of five women and seven men deliberated about five hours this week to find unanimously in favor of the widow of Michael Hale, Helen, and his two small children and Hale's mother and father.

Attorneys representing the family, Roy Bell and Roger Jatko of Odessa, said the award is the largest ever made in such a suit by an Ector County jury.

Bell said the suit was filed against Pyramid Manufacturing Co., Pre Corp and Mid-Continent Supply of Fort Worth, the seller of the rig.

According to Bell, the jury found no fault on the part of Mid-Continent Supply, but fixed the fault on Pyramid and Pre Corp.

Hale died after he was struck by a piece of pipe while working on the rig for Tri-Service Drilling Co. The suit alleged the accident was caused by a defectively designed pipe stop that was supposed to hold back the drill pipe. Hale was hit by the pipe when it allegedly broke loose from the pipe stop on an adjoining ramp.

The jury verdict gave Hale's widow $750,000, each of the children $500,000, and $125,000 each to his mother and father.

According to Jatko, an additional $225,000 awarded Hale's estate will probably be passed on to the family eventually.

The trial, which began April 16, lasted about six days.

Fire marshal investigates suspicious fires

From Staff Reports

Midland Fire Marshal arson investigators are working with city police and county sheriff's officials today on two fires that reportedly "were suspicious."

Nine firefighters responded at 12:33 a.m. today to a blaze at the Associated Mechanical and Rent A Relic building at 2250 Warehouse Road, owned by Leroy Cobb, according to fire department reports.

The blaze, which destroyed the building and three vehicles, a boat and tools which it housed, possibly could have been started by arsonists, according to Midland Fire Marshal Jerry Petree.

"It appears suspicious to investigators," Petree said. "There is the possibility of a burglary or something and that the fire was started to cover it up. Until we find differently, we're investigating it as a suspicious fire."

About 3,500 gallons of water were used to extinguish the fire, reports said.

Arson Investigator Eric Metzger and Sheriff's Office Criminal Investigation Division Investigator Bret Grove are in charge of the case.

A fire which destroyed a $6,000 car early today also is under investigation by city police and arson investigators. According to police reports, a neighbor of Liz Fleetwood, 706 S. Clay, told police she heard a horn honk at 2:10 a.m. and, looking out the window, saw a man running on the northside of her residence. She then saw smoke coming from Ms. Fleetwood's 1982 Datsun B210, and called the fire department, reports said.

There is a suspect in the case, according to the fire marshal's office, and the investigation is being headed by Arson Investigator Lon Dominguez.

Resolution OK'd on dump site liability

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A House concurrent resolution providing for "strict liability" on the part of the federal government regarding any problems with a proposed high-level nuclear waste repository has passed the Texas House of Representatives.

HCR 123, introduced by Rep. Chip Staniswalis, R-Amarillo, requests the federal government to provide for "full indemnification for any state in which an accident or unplanned event occurs during the handling, packaging, transportation, storage or disposal of high-level radioactive waste."

The U.S. Department of Energy is currently considering locating a repository in the Texas Panhandle, either in Deaf Smith or Swisher counties. Other possible sites are in Nevada and Washington.

Liability for accidents and unplanned events involving the federal high-level nuclear waste program remains an unresolved issue, according to HCR 123.

Van Johnson, chairman of business studies, told police the equipment was taken sometime between April 18 and Monday. There were no signs of forced entry, according to reports.

Among the items missing were a video camera, color television set, camera tripod and case, reports said. The items may have been carted out on a mobile cart equipped with electrical attachments, also reported missing, according to reports.

About $1,150 worth of damage to a station wagon parked at a car wash under construction was reported by the car wash manager.

According to Waylon Jennings, manager of the Raindance Car Wash being built at 1103 Andrews Highway, Dallas contractor Joel Cotton had parked his 1983 Chrysler at the lot Tuesday. Entry was gained by breaking a door window, valued at $150, and $1,000 worth of damage to the dash and stereo was reported, according to police.

Steve D. Madden reported the burglary of a residence at 424-D W. Pecan in which about $875 worth of items were stolen. According to reports, the garage was entered between 1 a.m. and 5:30 a.m. Tuesday and a bike, tool boxes and tools were taken.

Randy Lee Lasley said his residence at Mac's Trailer Park at the intersection of Fort Worth and Hicks streets was burglarized between noon and 11:30 p.m. Wednesday. Entry had not been determined, reports said. Taken were a stereo, electric floor heater, eight packages of beef and pork and an electric hot plate. Total loss was placed at $288.

SBOE considers proposed grade assignment rule

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — A proposed rule that addresses the assignment of grades based on a student's knowledge of basic educational subjects and providing alternatives to social promotion is being considered for adoption by the State Board of Education.

Some 25 Texas residents commented on the rule during a public hearing conducted by the State Board of Education Committee for Students on April 11.

A new state law prohibits school districts from granting "social promotions" and requires that students be promoted or given course credit only if they achieve a grade average for a school year or a course of at least 70.

For those students who are consistently unable to be promoted because of poor academic achievement, the State Board of Education is required to adopt rules establishing alternatives to social promotion.

The proposed rule that the board will consider in May for first reading and filing authorization will require, beginning in the 1985-86 school year, districts establish procedures for students to demonstrate that they have mastered the "essential elements" in a subject or course. Students are to be awarded a grade of 70 or more in a course only if they can satisfactorily demonstrate their knowledge of the basic subjects.

An option provided in the rule will allow local school districts to continue using policies and procedures that relate grades to student ability in the 1985-86 school year if the district boards of trustees elect to do so.

However, all districts will be required to implememt the board rule for awarding grades based on mastery of essential elements, effective in the 1986-87 school year.

Included in the proposed rule is a restriction against retaining a student in a grade level more than one time or retaining a student more than a total of two times.

The rule provides that districts may place a student in a higher grade level if the placement does not disrupt or overly complicate instruction for other students.

A student may also be placed in a non-graded continuous progress class where he or she receives specially designed instruction that concentrates on English language arts and mathematics.

The proposed alternatives to social promotion will also allow district boards of trustees to develop and seek state approval of alternative plans if the options provided by board rules do not meet district needs.

Syria calls for guerrillas to step up attacks until Israel's withdrawal

WORLD

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — President Hafez Assad of Syria was reported today to have called on Moslem guerrillas to step up their attacks on Israeli forces to speed their withdrawal from Lebanon, which he called "Israel's Vietnam."

Lebanese newspapers said Assad made the comments at a meeting of Lebanon's senior Moslem leaders in the Syrian capital Damascus at which he succeeded in persuading Prime Minister Rashid Karami to withdraw the resignation of his national unity government.

"South Lebanon has become Israel's Vietnam," Assad was quoted as saying Wednesday night. His remarks were published a day after Israeli forces withdrew from east Lebanon's Bekaa valley, where they have faced the Syrian army since Israel's June 1982 invasion.

So far the Syrians have made no apparent move to advance into territory abandoned by the Israelis. Israel has warned Syria not to move into areas evacuated by Israel.

"No effort should be spared to support the nationalist resistance until the Israeli enemy is driven out of all Lebanese territory," Assad was quoted as saying during the three-hour meeting.

Karami withdrew his resignation after the meeting."We cannot afford a government crisis while part of the country remains under occupation," he said.

Karami, 63, a leader of Lebanon's Sunni Moslems, resigned eight days ago to protest the takeover of west Beirut by rival Shiite and Druse militias last week in fighting that killed 40 people and wounded 170. Syria urged him to stay to avert a major political crisis.

Karami formed his government a year ago with the backing of the Syrians, who have become the power brokers in Lebanon since the collapse of the U.S. peacekeeping effort. Syria maintains 30,000 troops in east Lebanon.

The Damascus meeting also agreed to heal the inter-Moslem rift and hand security in Beirut over to the Lebanese army and police. But it was clear that the Sunni Mourabitoun militia, defeated in last week's fighting, no longer had an effective voice, leaving the prospect of further conflict.

Word of the agreement was greeted in Beirut with several hours of fighting between Moslem and Christian militias. There was no word of casualties.

The Israeli Cabinet agreed on Sunday to complete the withdrawal by early June .

Israeli tanks roll out of the village of Dahr Al-Ahmar in Lebanon's Bekaa valley Wednesday, part of the second phase of the withdrawal after a 34-month occupation.

Neves burial delayed for mourners' tributes

SAO JOAO DEL REI, Brazil (AP) — A steady procession of mourners filed past the body of president-elect Tancredo Neves late Wednesday, prompting his widow to delay the funeral so hometown residents could pay final tribute.

Bells tolled and townspeople sang hymns as Neves' flag-covered coffin arrived earlier at the 211-year-old St. Francis of Assisi church in this Portuguese colonial town, where Neves was born 75 years ago.

Neves' widow, Risoleta Neves, said the burial would not take place until every Sao Joao resident who wanted to was able to see Neves' body. The burial originally was scheduled for Wednesday afternoon in a small cemetery behind the church contaning the graves of Neves' mother and father.

The decision to accommodate all the mourners was intended to prevent a tumult like the one Tuesday in Belo Horizonte.

People in this mining and farming community of 53,000, 200 miles north of Rio de Janeiro, draped their houses with banners of the national colors of green and yellow, crossed by black mourning slashes.

Coyote attacks 2-year-old Canadian girl

JASPER, Alberta (AP) — A Jasper woman managed to wrest her screaming infant from a coyote that attacked the 2-year-old in their backyard.

Don Dumpleton, chief park warden at Jasper National Park, said Wednesday the young girl was playing with a 2-year-old neighbor girl in the backyard of a condominium complex when the coyote emerged from a ravine, grabbed the toddler and tried to drag her into the bush. The animal began chewing on the infant's head and throat, he said.

The little girl is in fair condition in a Calgary hospital, awaiting plastic surgery. Neither the girl nor her mother were identified.

Two coyotes were killed in the area shortly after the attack, he said, and the animals were sent to the laboratory for rabies tests.

Vu(c)kovich does in Chisox 3-2, Tigers 7-6

AP Laserphoto

Former Midland Cub Joe Carter slides across home plate with the winning run for Cleveland in the ninth inning as the Indians knock off the Detroit Tigers Wednesday.

Associated Press

Their names are spelled almost the same so it's not surprising that Vuckovich and Vukovich are often misspelled. Just so there's no mistake, it was Pete Vuckovich who tamed the Chicago White Sox and George Vukovich who did in the Detroit Tigers.

Pete, a 32-year-old right-hander who missed most of the last two years with shoulder problems, recorded his first pitching victory since his Cy Young Award season of 1982 Wednesday night by scattering six hits in seven innings as the Milwaukee Brewers defeated the White Sox 3-2.

"I never doubted that I'd come back from my arm problems. I just didn't know how long it would take. Right now, my arm feels great," said Vuckovich.

George, a 28-year-old outfielder, drove in three runs with three singles, including the game-winner in the bottom of the ninth inning, giving the Cleveland Indians a 7-6 victory over the Tigers.

"You don't become world champions by pitching around people. You go right at them," said Vukovich, who came into the game with a .209 average and delivered his winning hit after the Tigers pitched to him with first base open.

The Brewers and White Sox were tied on a two-run homer by Chicago's Harold Baines and a two-run double by Milwaukee's Charlie Moore. The Brewers won it in strange fashion in the sixth inning.

Mark Brouhard led off with a double against Chicago's Britt Burns and scored on Moore's apparent double to center field. However, the White Sox claimed that Moore failed to touch first base and the appeal was upheld by umpire Tim Welke, who called Moore out, nullifying his hit. Had it been the third out of the inning, the run would not have counted.

"Things are basically the same. I'm pretty much the same as I was then," said Vuckovich, whose last victory was a 4-3 triumph over Boston on Sept. 20, 1982. He then appeared in just three games in 1983 and missed all of last season after rotator cuff surgery. "There's no real difference other than I might be throwing a little harder now."

American League

Indians 7, Tigers 6

With the score tied, Joe Carter walked with one out in the ninth and moved to second on a wild pitch by Aurelio Lopez. The Tigers elected to pitch to Vukovich and he ripped a hard line drive to right, scoring Carter.

"There were two balls and two strikes on him and Vukovich is hitting .220 or so," said Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson. "I don't think he's Mickey Mantle or anybody."

Cleveland took a 5-1 lead against Walt Terrell in the fourth inning, including an RBI single by Vukovich. He rapped another RBI single in the seventh to make it 6-2, but the Tigers tied it with four runs in the eighth, including Larry Herndon's two-run homer.

The Tigers, who roared to a 35-5 start last year, have lost five of their last seven games and are 8-5 overall. The Indians, who have won six of nine, climbed out of last place in the American League East, passing the New York Yankees.

Athletics 6, Angels 4

Mike Davis continued to feast on California pitching, contributing to a pair of three-run uprisings.The A's jumped on Ron Romanick for three unearned runs in the first inning. After Angels' first baseman Rod Carew made an error on Dave Collins' leadoff grounder, Carney Lansford and Bruce Bochte followed with singles to score Collins. Dave Kingman's groundout and Davis' single produced the other two runs.

Dwayne Murphy's homer triggered Oakland's three-run third. Davis doubled and scored on a single by Donnie Hill, who moved to second as Alfredo Griffin grounded out to first and scored on Collins' single.

Red Sox 7, Yankees 6

Jim Rice hit his fourth home run of the season, breaking a 6-6 tie with two out in the seventh inning, and Tony Armas hit a three-run shot as Boston notched its fifth straight victory over New York this season.Yankee starter Ron Guidry had retired nine batters in a row after a shaky start before Rice homered into the bleachers in right-center.

Steve Crawford was the winner in relief of Al Nipper. Crawford went five innings, allowing only three hits and no runs. Bobby Ojeda took over in the eighth and Bob Stanley got the final two outs with a runner in scoring position for his third save.

Armas' homer off the left-field foul pole capped a four-run first inning.Mike Pagliarulo hit a two-run homer in the Yankees' second, and they erased a 6-2 deficit with four runs in the third, two on Don Mattingly's single.

Cards have a 'goodun' too, trump Mets' ace, 5-1

Associated Press

In a matchup of aces, the St. Louis Cards dealt the better hand.

"Andujar pitched just a little better," acknowledged New York Mets' Manager Dave Johnson after watching Joaquin Andujar best his own Dwight Gooden in a 5-1 Cardinal victory Wednesday.

Andujar pitched a five-hitter for his third victory of the season without a loss, while Gooden, last year's Rookie of the Year, had a 23-inning scoreless streak broken en route to his first loss in three decisions.

"He threw well," said Mets' first baseman Keith Hernandez of Andujar, a former teammate. "Joaquin's always an aggressive pitcher; he challenges the hitters, he's a power pitcher."

Until the Cardinals broke through against Gooden for two runs in the seventh inning, the Mets' ace right-hander had surrendered only three hits. But after Andy Van Slyke's RBI single snapped a scoreless tie and Mike Lavalliere's sacrifice fly, Gooden left for a pinch-hitter. St. Louis was able to score three insurance runs in the eighth before Danny Heep's RBI double ruined Andujar's shutout in the ninth.

In addition to his strong pitching, Andujar helped himself by bouncing off the mound to make three outstanding defensive plays.

National League

"He's always been a fielder," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said. "I told him he's got the greatest shortstop (Ozzie Smith) that's ever played. Let him go after the ball."

But Andujar was diving all around. He said, 'I don't trust him.'"

Expos 7, Phillies 6

Tim Raines scored twice and drove in two more with a pair of extra-base hits to lead Montreal over Philadelphia.

Raines lashed a run-scoring triple off Phillies starter John Denny, 1-2, to highlight a three-run fifth-inning rally. He drove in another run with a double in the sixth.

"I'm getting aggressive at the plate and I'm starting to find the holes," Raines said. "It's about time I got some ribbies because I've had the opportunities, but I just haven't capitalized on them."

Ozzie Virgil belted two solo home runs for Philadelphia, which also got solo ninth-inning homers from Garry Maddox and Mike Schmidt, his first of the year and 426th of his career, tying Billy Williams on the all-time list.

Reds 8, Astros 3

Dave Concepcion and Duane Walker belted home runs and Eric Davis used his speed to break a 3-3 ninth-inning tie as Cincinnati overcame Nolan Ryan's bid for his sixth career no-hitter to beat Houston.

Ryan, who has a record five no-hitters, had another with one out in the seventh when Dave Parker singled. Then Walker hit his first homer and Esasky later scored on an error to give the first-place Reds a 3-1 lead.

After the Astros tied it in the eighth on Jose Cruz' two-run single, the Reds won it with a five-run ninth.Davis drew a one-out walk off Frank DiPino, 0-2, stole second and was balked to third before scoring the tie-breaking run on Nick Esasky's fly ball.

Concepcion homered for one insurance run, Eddie Milner knocked in two more with a single and Manager Pete Rose drove in another with a single, his 4,110th hit, leaving him 81 behind Ty Cobb.

Dodgers halt Angel streak at three, 5-2

From Staff Reports

SAN ANTONIO — The Midland Angels had their three-game Texas League winning streak snapped by the San Antonio Dodgers Wednesday night, losing 5-2 despite a 12-hit attack.

Midland starter Don Timberlake, 0-3, went 6⅓ innings, giving up five runs on nine hits, including a solo home run in the bottom of the seventh by Dodger Larry See that gave San Antonio a 5-2 lead.

After the round-tripper, Scott Suehr was called on to finish the game, going the final 1⅔ innings in one-hit shutout fashion.

Of the 12 hits the Angels collected, eight came in the first four innings and produced both runs, including Tito Nanni's second home run of the year.

From there on, Dodger starter Shawn Hillegas, 1-0, settled down and didn't let an Angel beyond second base until the ninth inning when pinch hitter Juan Cruz opened with a double and went to third one out later on Mark McLemore's single.

Reliever Dave Eichorn was called in from the bullpen and retired the next two Angels to record the save, his second of the year.

The victory raises San Antonio's league-leading record to 8-6 while the Angels fall to 6-10.

The Angels and Dodgers meet tonight in the second game of the current road trip stand.

Mavs face tough task

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks must end the Portland Trail Blazers' 12-game homecourt winning streak tonight or their National Basketball Association season is over.

"It's down to one game for us now and a chance to see what we are made of," Dallas Coach Dick Motta said. "Last year, we did it against Seattle in a survival game. But Portland is a better team than Seattle was last year and in some ways we're not as good as we were."

Portland has won 18 of its last 19 at home, but forward Kiki Vandeweghe says the Trail Blazers can't afford even a hint of complacency.

"What we have to do is just go out and play the way we have been," he said. "We can't take anything for granted. They've got nothing to lose. They're going to come out hard ... We don't want to go back to Dallas."

The Mavericks have been beaten badly on the boards by Portland the last two games. The Blazers had a 51-39 rebounding advantage as they downed the Mavericks 122-109 Tuesday night to take a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five opening-round playoff series.

"We are bigger than they are," said Portland Coach Jack Ramsay. "I would hope we would be able to outrebound them. I was stunned when they handled us so well in the first game."

Dallas has no one to counter the size of Portland's 7-foot-1 rookie Sam Bowie in the middle. Bowie had 31 rebounds and seven blocked shots in the last two games, both Blazer victories. Both of his blocked shots Tuesday night came in Portland's crucial fourth-quarter surge.

"Sam has become a very dominant force in the middle," Vandeweghe said. "Any time anybody on the their team drives, they're going to have to contend with Sam Bowie."

Rolando Blackman of Dallas has 114 points in three games, but he had only two free throws in the fourth quarter Tuesday night. One reason may have been fatigue. He spent much of the night chasing Portland's Clyde Drexler. Often, the Blazers chose to spread the court and give the ball to Drexler, who wound up with a "triple double" — 20 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists.

"We wanted to make Blackman play a little defense," Drexler said. "We wanted to try to tire him out a little."

Blackman says the Mavericks need to boost their intensity in tonight's game.

"They are aggressive," he said of the Blazers, "more aggressive than we were."

Berra may be on way out if things don't pick up

NEW YORK (AP) — Reports that Yogi Berra's job as Yankees manager was in jeopardy surfaced again Wednesday night as New York suffered its fifth straight loss to the Boston Red Sox.

"I haven't made any decision, but I'm not going to be deterred," Yankees principal owner George Steinbrenner said before his team lost 7-6. "What I think is best for the team is what I'm going to do."

The loss was the seventh in 12 games for the Yankees this season.

Steinbrenner on Monday expressed his displeasure that only a few players showed up at an optional off-day workout. He was unhappy that Berra had not made the workout mandatory.

On Wednesday, he noted that the Yankees had made four errors in Tuesday night's game and Boston had scored two unearned runs, winning by one run.

"Don't tell me we didn't need practice on ground balls the day before," said Steinbrenner.

The Yankees owner also was said to be unhappy with a lack of discipline off the field.

Former Baltimore Orioles Manager Earl Weaver continued to be mentioned as a possible candidate for the Yankees' job, and the New York Times in Thursday's editions said Steinbrenner had spoken with him by phone during the first week of the season.

The newspaper quoted Steinbrenner as saying he had called Weaver on another matter, but the subject of Weaver's availability did come up.

Steinbrenner said that Weaver told him he "didn't have the heart right now" to come out of retirement. Steinbrenner said he asked Weaver "if and when I ever did make a change, would you be interested in returning?"

Langer seeks third straight at Houston Open

THE WOODLANDS (AP) — Three weeks ago Bernhard Langer was a face in the crowd on the PGA tour until he won the Masters tournament at Augusta, Ga.

Suddenly, he became THE face in the crowd, pursued by galleries and media. The pursuit only increased when he won his second tournament in a row last week in the Sea Pines Heritage Classic at Hilton Head Island, S.C.

Now that he's going for three in a row in the $500,000 Houston Open beginning today, he's learning what it feels like to be a "star."

"If someone else wins, that's okay," Langer said. "Everyone expects it.

"They didn't expect it from me. But I knew I had it in me. It was just a matter of time."

Langer will be among the favorites today when the tournament begins the first round over The Woodlands' Tournament Players Course for the first time. Previous Houston Opens have been played on the West course.

LANGER WILL be trying to become the first player to win three consecutive tournaments since 1978 when Gary Player won the Masters, Tournament of Champions and the Houston Open.

Player, who is in the field, thinks Langer has a shot at the triple victory.

"He's a great ball-striker and this course rewards that," Player said. "It's a tough course. It penalizes bad shots but Langer doesn't make many of those and he goes for the pins no matter where they are."

Langer ended last week's Sea Pines Heritage Classic tied in regulation play with Bobby Wadkins but parred the first playoff hole to capture the $72,000 first prize.

"You've got to be doing everything right to win three in a row," Player said. "It's a lot like surfing. When you're fighting the waves, it's no fun, but when you get up and you're riding the crest, nothing can stop you.

Langer didn't decide to go for the triple until Sunday when he told Houston Golf Association executive director Duke Butler he'd play here.

"I don't think anyone even expected me to win two tournaments in a row," Langer said. "But you can't think about that with 144 good players on the course and everyone of them capable of winning. You have to be at the top of your game all the time."

Thomas' 15-footer eliminates Nets

Associated Press

NBA Playoffs

Isiah Thomas knows just how the New Jersey Nets feel.

"Last year ended so fast that it was the worst feeling I've ever had in basketball," Thomas said Wednesday night after knocking the Nets out of the National Basketball Association playoffs by hitting a 15-foot jumper with two seconds left to give the Detroit Pistons a 116-115 victory.

"We were up so high and then went down so low," the 6-foot-1 point guard added, referring to one-point and overtime losses to New York that knocked Detroit out of the 1984 postseason. "I don't ever want that to happen again. I feel for the guys on New Jersey. It's a tough way to lose. I know, because I've missed shots like that at the end."

The victory gave the Pistons a 3-0 sweep in the best-of-five, first-round series and advanced them into the Eastern Conference semifinals against the Boston-Cleveland winner.

THOMAS MADE his game-winning shot from behind the basket and with the outstretched arm of 6-8 Buck Williams in his face.

"Isiah's last shot was only something a super talent like him can make," Nets Coach Stan Albeck said. "It's the type of shot we wanted him to take."

"I was there right on top of him, and Isiah made a great shot," said Williams, who scored 28 points to share game-high honors with teammate Albert King. "We played as hard as we could, but Detroit played better."

Detroit trailed 115-110 with 1:39 to play after Williams hit two free throws. But four free throws cut the deficit to one with 26 seconds left.

The Nets in-bounded the ball to Micheal Ray Richardson, who was trapped by Thomas and Long near the New Jersey bench.

"He was trying to call timeout, but he lost his balance and fell out of bounds," said Thomas, recounting how the Pistons got the ball back with 19 seconds on the clock.

After a timeout, Thomas circled the Nets defense, took advantage of a Terry Tyler screen on Richardson and fired in the fallaway jumper.

"I just shot the ball," Thomas said. "I think every kid dreams of dribbling down the final seconds and then scoring."

The Nets led 33-22 at the end of the first quarter, 63-58 at the half and 91-84 after three quarters.

Detroit led on eight occasions in the game, five times in the first three minutes and three times in the final seven minutes. None of its leads was more than two points.

In tonight's games, Boston is at Cleveland and Dallas is at Portland in series the Celtics and Trail Blazers lead 2-1.

On Friday night, Milwaukee is at Chicago, Philadelphia at Washington, Denver at San Antonio and Houston at Utah. The Bucks, 76ers, Denver and Utah each lead 2-1.

Jazz 112, Rockets 104

Adrian Dantley scored 29 points and Thurl Bailey added 22 to lead underdog Utah over Houston.

Dantley had nine points in the fourth quarter and Bailey 11 as the Jazz easily overcame an 82-80 deficit by outscoring the Rockets 32-22 in the period.

The Jazz also outscored Houston 39-16 at the foul line for the game and the Rockets' Twin Towers — Ralph Sampson and Akeem Olajuwon — both got into foul trouble. Sampson fouled out after playing 34 minutes and scoring 20 points, and Olajuwon finished with 26 points.

The Jazz are seeded sixth in the Western Conference, while Houston is third.

Bullets 118, 76ers 100

Washington outscored Philadelphia 30-13 in the third quarter to turn a close game into a rout.

Cliff Robinson, who saw no playoff action in his first five NBA seasons, scored 14 of his 21 points in the third quarter, giving him one more than the entire Philadelphia team for those 12 minutes.

"In the third quarter, we played incredible defense," Washington Coach Gene Shue said. "We did everything right, and got all the breaks we needed to keep it going."

"Everything they did was right, and everything we did was wrong," 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham said. "I can't think of a phase of the game that they didn't outplay us ... or outcoach us."

Gus Williams, held to 27 points in the first two games, led the Bullets with 28, while Jeff Ruland added 25.

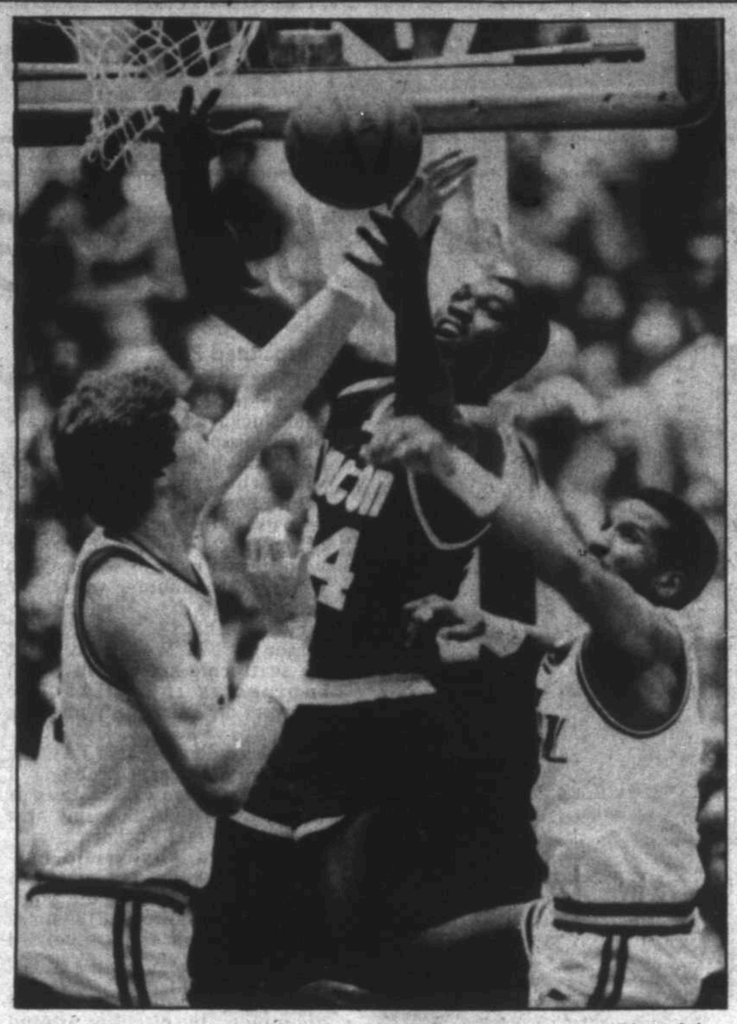

Moses Malone led Philadelphia with 17 points, but Andrew Toney, who scored 31 in Game 2, managed only eight on 3-for-16 shooting.

Bulls 109, Bucks 107

Chicago got 35 points from Michael Jordan, including seven points in the final three minutes and the game-winning baseline jumper with 17 seconds left, to stay alive in its series with Milwaukee.

Orlando Woolridge added 28 points for the Bulls, who won their first playoff game since 1981.

Jordan broke a 104-104 deadlock with 1:48 left. But Sidney Moncrief's three-point play gave Milwaukee a 107-106 advantage.

SF Austin edges SWTS for Gulf Star golf crown

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) — Individual champion Chris Young of Southwest Texas State ballooned to three-over-par Wednesday, enabling Stephen F. Austin University to beat the Bobcats by two strokes for the team title of the 1985 Gulf Star Conference Golf Tournament.

Young, whose 73 tied with two others for the first-round lead, tied the Mallard Cove Golf Course record with a 67 in Tuesday's second round. His 75 on Wednesday gave him a three-round total of one-under-par 215 — five strokes better than runnerup Dave Bowlan of Southeastern Louisiana.

Darryl Burtschell's third-place 222 gave Southwest Texas the second of its three spots in the top 10, but a fourth-place 223 by SFA's Joe Golden led a surge that put four Lumberjack players among the leaders.

The SFA performance gave the Lumberjacks a three-round total of 902 strokes compared with 304 for Southwest Texas. Other teams and their totals were Sam Houston State with 917, Southeastern Louisiana 923, Nicholls State 947 and Northwestern State 1001.

Young, Bowlan, Burtschell and Golden later were named to the all-conference golf team, along with Sam Houston's Jim Phenicie and SFA's Jimmy Squires, who tied for fifth with 226 apiece.

Abilene Christian holds onto Lone Star golf lead

ABILENE (AP) — Abilene Christian held on to the lead after the second round of the Lone Star Conference Golf Tournament Wednesday at Fairway Oaks Golf and Racquet Club.

Abilene shot a four-man score of 299 for a 36-hole total of 600, eight strokes better than Eastern New Mexico, which shot 302 in the second round.

East Texas State is third at 619 and Angelo State is fourth at 620. Texas A&I is fifth at 664 and Howard Payne is sixth at 682.

Lewis Wilks of Abilene Christian remained in the lead in the medalist standings with a 148 after shooting a 4-over-par 76 Wednesday. He is one shot ahead of teammate Chip Seltzer, who shot 73 Wednesday for a two-day total of 149.

The final round of the 54-hole tournament will be Thursday.

Arkansas' Hatfield finds running back in scrimmage

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield may have uncovered a diamond in the rough during a 90-minute scrimmage that featured 101 plays.

Don Eppinette, a walk-on halfback from Houston, led all rushers Wednesday with 53 yards on three carries. A 5-foot-9, 179-pound sophomore, Eppinette gained most of his yards on a 43-yard touchdown run against the second team defense. He spent most of the scrimmage with the second team offense.

"We always want to see hustle among our players, even among the lower team players," said Arkansas' second-year head coach. "I thought we had that today. I told all our players after the scrimmage to hang in there and keep playing hard because someday they'll make a contribution to this football team."

Holmes to face 'The Truth'

NEW YORK (AP) — Undefeated heavyweight champion Larry Holmes will take another step toward matching Rocky Marciano's perfect 49-0 record when he meets Carl "The Truth" Williams in a scheduled 15-round International Boxing Federation title bout, to be televised live May 20 by NBC Sports.

The network said the fight will be broadcast starting at 9 p.m. EDT. The site has not been determined, but promoter Murad Muhammad said it would likely be Las Vegas, Nev.

The 35-year-old Holmes, who is two victories shy of Marciano's mark, talked about retiring before he knocked down David Bey in the 10th round last month in Las Vegas. Afterward, however, he said he wanted to match the record too badly to quit now.

His 47-0 record includes 34 knockouts and 19 victories in title fights.

Williams, 25, of White Plains, N.Y., is 16-0 with 12 knockouts. He rebounded from a pair of first-round knockdowns by James "Quick" Tillis in his last fight Oct. 23 and relentlessly pounded Tillis for a unanimous decision after 10 rounds.

NBC had hoped to arrange a fight between Holmes and undefeated light heavyweight champion Michael Spinks for May 20, but Butch Lewis, who promotes Spinks' bouts, said the fighter would need more time to prepare for "the biggest fight of his life."

Palm Beach, Fla., promoter Ernie Letiziano, who signed Holmes for a Spinks fight, said he would try to arrange it for July when Home Box Office would be interested.

TREASURY BILLS

T-bills lowest in nearly two years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Treasury sold $9 billion in two-year notes Wednesday at 9¾ percent interest, a full point below the last issue and the lowest in nearly two years.

The discount rate understates the actual return to customers, 9.81 percent.

It was the lowest since May 2, 1983 when a two-year issue went at 9⅛ percent, or an effective yield of 9.61 percent. The discount interest rate was 10¾ percent on the last issue of two-year bills, April 1, for an effective rate of 10.86 percent.

Dollar goes up

LONDON (AP) — The dollar pressed on upward in early trading today, continuing a two-day surge with gains against almost all major currencies. Gold prices were mixed.

In London, the dollar rose against the British pound, which cost $1.2140, cheaper than late Wednesday's $1.2270.

– 2.6040 Swiss francs, up from 2.5840.

– 9.5250 French francs, up from 9.4750.

– 3.5250 Dutch guilders, down from 3.5325.

– 1.3675 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3608.

In London, the dollar was quoted at 1,984.00 lire, down from 1,986.50 at the close Wednesday.

In London, gold opened at $322.40 bid an ounce, down from $322.75 late Wednesday and showed little movement in later trading. London's five major bullion houses set the midmorning "fixing" at $322.40, unchanged from the opening bid.

In Zurich, gold opened at $322.50 bid, up from Wednesday's closing bid of $321.50, and was steady in later trading.

Analysts say oil prices to stay flat this summer

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Rather than heralding continued increases, the sharp jump in gasoline prices in March that helped push up the Consumer Price Index for that month may now be peaking, and gasoline prices are likely to remain substantially flat through the summer, analysts and oil company officials said Wednesday.

"There's too much crude oil on the world market, and that will continue to act as a brake on prices," said Lawrence J. Goldstein, executive vice president of the Petroleum Industry Research Council. "I don't expect major weakness in gasoline prices, but I don't foresee much further strength in them, either."

The Labor Department reported on Tuesday that gasoline prices surged 3.6 percent in March, pushing the overall Consumer Price Index up by 0.5 percent. Industry analysts pointed out, however, that the prices, although significantly higher than they were in January, are still as much as 1 cent less than what they were a year ago.

The rise in gasoline prices began in late February, and was the result of several factors, experts said, including the drawdown of gasoline inventories in anticipation that crude oil prices would decline further. But, they said, the rise in gasoline prices already appears to be tapering off.

Prices for crude oil, notably Brent North Sea crude, continued to soften on the spot market Wednesday, amid news reports that Egypt had lowered its crude-oil price, and that the Soviet Union would soon follow. Further, brokers in the futures market said there was major profit-taking in gasoline contracts because of a sense that supply on the West Coast was starting to outstrip demand.

Edward H. Murphy, director of statistics for the American Petroleum Institute, an industry association, said that the softening in prices is likely be intensified by the expected increase in oil products coming from new refineries in the Middle East. "They're going to put product into a situation already characterized by excess refining capacity," he said. "That's going to make it very difficult financially for numerous refineries here and abroad."

But some oil industry experts predicted Wednesday that a moderation of gasoline prices may be short-lived; prices of unleaded gasoline could swing sharply upward once the Federal order requiring a reduction in the lead content of gasoline takes effect July 1. They said that is likely to bring considerable price confusion to the domestic gasoline market.

According to Lundberg Survey Inc., which conducts biweekly surveys of prices at more than 17,000 gas stations in all 50 states, the average retail price for all grades of gasoline this month was $1.20 a gallon. That was higher than the $1.15-a-gallon average for January, but still below the $1.21 recorded last April.

"Industry conditions caused prices to decline sharply during last summer, contrary to the traditional expectations about the impact of the driving season, and that continued right up to last February," said Daniel Lundberg, president of Lundberg Survey. "The industry is just now recouping some of those lost margins."

Oil companies have also increased their wholesale prices to dealers.

For example, the Exxon Corp.'s wholesale price to dealers in the New York area for regular leaded gasoline is now 85.7 cents, up from 82.7 cents in January. However, it remains 1.1 cents below the May 1984 wholesale price of 86.8 cents, according to an Exxon spokesman.

Goldstein, of the petroleum research council, said the gasoline price rises that began in late February was not a response to consumer demand, which he said has been basically flat. Rather, he said, it resulted from the industry's reduction in refining, to 5.9 million barrels of gasoline a day in February, from 6.5 million barrels a day in December.

Projections of a flattening of gasoline prices were underscored Wednesday by a 30-cents-a-barrel decline in price for Brent North Sea crude, to under $27.20, and by a precipitous drop in the price of West Texas Intermediate crude on the futures market.

Austin bank lowers prime to 10 percent

AUSTIN (AP) — A bank which dropped its prime to the lowest rate quoted by an Austin institution and many others across the country during the last six years is taking a calculated risk, observers say.

Texas Commerce Bank-Austin lowered its prime interest rate from 10½ percent to 10 percent Tuesday.

The reduction puts it below the only other bank that has lowered its prime in recent days. Southwest Bank of St. Louis, Mo., dropped its prime to 10¼ percent on Monday.

The prime lending rate is the interest rate at which banks loan money to their most credit-worthy customers. The rate does not have any direct bearing on consumer loan rates.

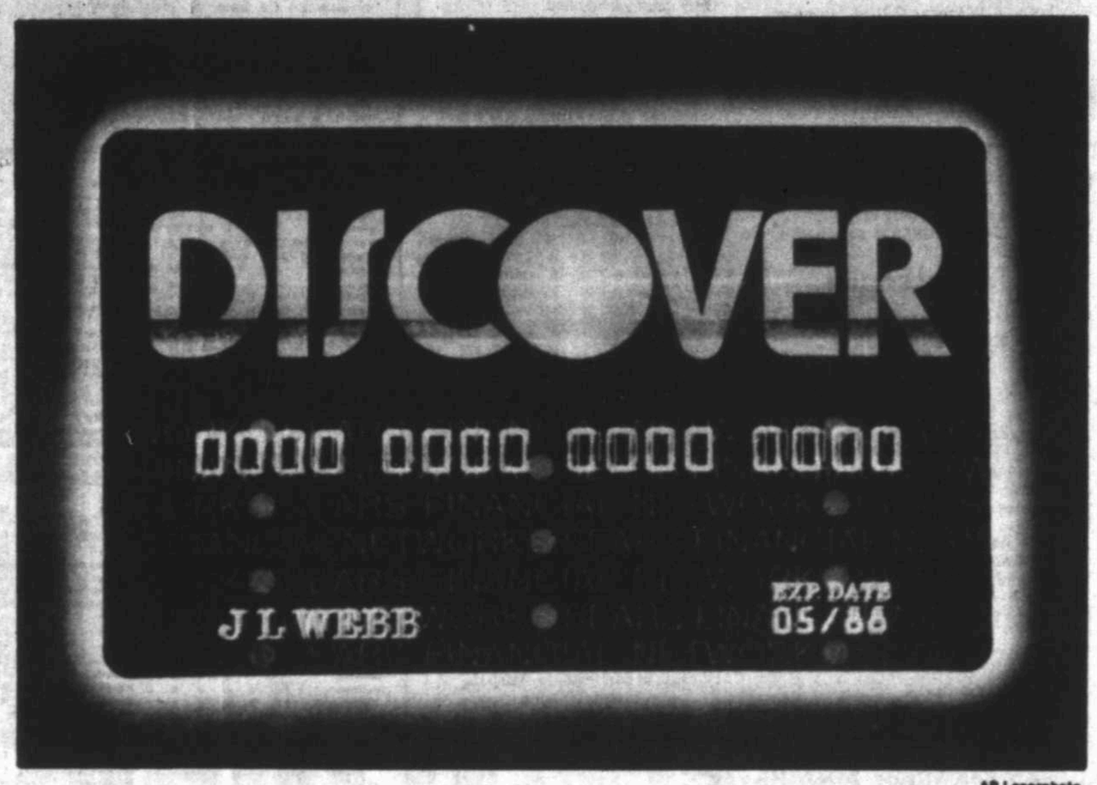

"They say when you cut the price, more people buy the product," said Robert Present, chairman of Texas Commerce Bank-Austin. "We're going to have the doors open and see how true that is."

Present said the bank decided to lower its prime in response to its lower cost of money both for rates for certificates of deposit and "fed funds" rates for overnight lending between banks.

Rocky Engemoen, senior vice president for investments at MBank Austin said, "They (Texas Commerce) have more than a 50 percent chance of being right."

By moving its prime rate lower than most of the nation, Texas Commerce can generate both publicity and customer good will, Engemoen said. The risk is that other banks may not follow suit or may drop their rate only to 10¼ percent.

"If you guess and guess wrong, at some point in time you're going to have to raise yours quietly," he said.

Sears, Roebuck & Co. unveiled its new "Discover Card" Wednesday. The card, which will offer a wide range of financial service features, will be available to consumers for the first time in an Atlanta, Ga. pilot later this year.

Pickens sues Unocal Corp. over stock buyback plan

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Texas oilman T. Boone Pickens Jr. has challenged, in a suit against Unocal Corp., the company's decision to exclude his investor group from a lucrative stock-buyback offer.

The chairman of Mesa Petroleum Co. of Amarillo, Texas, says his group is considering an attempt to tender its shares to Unocal in order to cash in on premium price offered for the stock.

"No decision has been made," Pickens said Wednesday when asked if the investor group will tender its stock to Unocal, according to Mesa spokesman Warren Vieth.

Pickens' group owns 13.6 percent of Unocal's stock and is offering $54 a share in cash for another 64 million shares, enough to raise its stake to 50.1 percent.

On Tuesday, Unocal said it would buy back 50 million shares of its stock, or 27.8 percent of its outstanding stock, with securities valued at $72 a share. It said Pickens and his partners would be excluded from the offer.

Pickens' group had accumulated its current holdings of 23.7 million shares of Unocal stock for $1.1 billion, or an average of $46.41 a share.

The lawsuit in U.S. District Court accuses Unocal, the nation's 13th-largest oil company and parent of Union Oil Co. of California, of "fraudulent, deceptive and manipulative practices" in violation of federal securities law.

It asks the court to enjoin Unocal from refusing to accept any shares tendered by the Pickens group and from completing the repurchase until the exclusion is lifted.

Unocal spokesman Barry Lane at the company's headquarters in Los Angeles said the company had no immediate comment on the suit.

Meanwhile, as the battle continued to rage, Unocal's stock was again the most heavily traded issue on the New York Stock Exchange, falling $1.62½ to close at $47.62½ a share.

In announcing its revised stock-buyback plan on Tuesday, Unocal removed an earlier condition that it would take effect only if the Pickens group, Mesa Partners II, succeeded in acquiring a controlling interest in the company.

Several other conditions remain that could abort the deal, including one that would allow Unocal to revoke the offer if it is challenged in court or before a regulatory agency.

Sears unveils its Discover Card

CHICAGO (AP) — Sears, Roebuck & Co. said Wednesday test marketing of its new multi-purpose credit card, announced in February, will begin later this year in Atlanta.

Sears, which has 28 million active credit card accounts, unveiled its new card Wednesday at a meeting of security analysts.

In presenting the card — black card with orange-and-gold letters — Edward A. Brennan, president and chief operating officer, said a pilot program would begin in the fall in Atlanta.

Donna C. Peterman, director of corporate communications for Dean Witter Financial Services, declined to disclose the fee for the card.

The card is to be issued through the Greenwood Trust Co. of Delaware, which is owned by Sears, and will be immediately accepted at Sears' 796 retail stores and more than 3,000 branch offices of its subsidiaries: Dean Witter Financial Services, Allstate Insurance, Coldwell Banker and Sears Savings Bank.

"I think it's a good move for Sears," said Stanley Iverson, a stock analyst in Chicago with Duff and Phelps. "It fits their orientation on financial services.

"And they'll be very aggressive at it," he said.

Iverson noted that the card has features that other general purpose credit cards, such as Visa and Master Card, don't have.

Sears disclosed few details of the services that will be available, but Iverson said it "ties in savings, brokerage, insurance, the ATM (automatic teller machine) service and financial planning."

The Sears Savings Bank already has set up a network of 100 automated tellers in the San Diego area, and the corporation said the card will be used in conjunction with its national videotext-home banking service, which is being developed jointly by Sears, IBM and CBS.

Cardholders also will be eligible to open individual retirement accounts at Dean Witter without paying a set-up fee, Sears said. And they will receive discounts from some merchants, although further details were not disclosed.

Credit card operations will be directed by the consumer banking division of Dean Witter, and will be headed by Raymond A. Kennedy, who is executive vice president of financial services and has been with the Sears credit operation for 36 years.

Brennan said Sears expects other merchants to accept the Sears credit card as well, but Mrs. Peterman would not say if any agreements had been signed. She declined to name any other merchants that might be considering an agreement.

She said Sears also is working to join one of the existing national networks of automated tellers.

A spokeswoman for American Airlines said American has agreed to accept the credit card during the test period, which is expected to begin in September. No long-term agreement has been signed, however, said Linda Johnson, manager of corporate communications for the Dallas-based airline.

P&G drops its controversial trademark

CINCINNATI (AP) — Jerry Falwell, Billy Graham and the archbishop of Chicago couldn't stop recurring "outrageous, vicious lies" about Procter & Gamble Co.'s links to Satanism, and the soap giant has decided to drop its century-old moon-and-stars logo.

"How it started originally we have no idea, and how it restarted we have no idea," P&G spokesman Bill Dobson said Wednesday after the company announced that it would phase out use of the logo on its products.

"The trademark itself won't change in any way," Dobson said. "It will continue to be used extensively as a symbol" on stationery and mailings.

The decision was prompted by frustration over an inability to quash a wave of rumors that first crested with 15,000 telephone calls from consumers in July 1982, said officials of P&G, which ranked 22nd on the Fortune 500 list of U.S. corporations in 1984 with sales of $12.94 billion.

The rumors say P&G put the trademark — showing a crescent man in the moon and 13 stars — on all packages as a symbol of its link with Satanism.

"We're referring to them as the outrageous, vicious lies and falsehoods," Dobson said. "It's just ridiculous."

The company says the stars on its 103-year-old trademark honor the original colonies.

P&G, which has a conservative, straight-arrow corporate image, fought back in 1982 with the help of the Rev. Billy Graham, Moral Majority leader the Rev. Jerry Falwell, Cardinal Joseph Bernardin, the Roman Catholic archbishop of Chicago, and columnist Abigail Van Buren.

The company also filed lawsuits against people who spread rumors — including a Minnesota nursing home's newsletter, a Georgia TV weatherman and a distributor for Amway Products Co. in New Mexico. The rumor died, only to spring back up in late 1984.

More than 14,000 people have called the company about the rumors this year, including more than 7,000 so far this month, Dobson said. In all, more than 100,000 consumers have called or written about the rumors.

"It's being spread by means of a one-page flyer that gets duplicated by people thinking they're doing a good deed by circulating these stories," Dobson said. "The thing snowballs very quickly.

"The problem has been that it resurfaced again and has started to take on a new life of its own once again in 1985 as it did in 1982. That has become a major distraction to us again, and for that reason we've taken the steps."

The latest resurgence comes primarily from New Jersey, New York and the Philadelphia area. It is essentially the same rumor as before — that a P&G executive went on a national talk show and said some profits go to Satan and that the logo is a symbol of the devil.

Company executives went to New York last week to launch their latest offensive against the rumors, setting up a special toll-free hotline and hiring two professional investigative agencies to help track down the rumor's source.

The trademark is featured on every P&G product, although the demands for more ingredient listings and other graphic changes have sometimes reduced the logo to a circle ⅛-inch in diameter.

Texas Senate passes liability resolution

AUSTIN — A concurrent resolution requesting the U. S. Congress to clarify that the federal government is liable for "full indemnification" for accidents occuring during the transportation and disposal of high-level nuclear waste has passed the Texas Senate.

The U. S. Department of Energy last year ranked a location in Deaf Smith County in the Texas Panhandle, along with sites in Washington and Nevada, among the top three sites nationwide being considered for a proposed high-level nuclear waste repository.

Another location in Swisher County, located just southeast of Deaf Smith County, is also being considered by the DOE for the repository site.

SCR 87, introduced by Sen. Bill Sarpalisus, D-Canyon, states there is a question what the federal response would be to an accident where clean-up costs exceeded $500 million as provided for under current law.

The Price-Anderson Act of 1957 provides that the federal government will assume strict liability for accidents involving nuclear waste up to $500 million. The act is up for reauthorization during the next congressional session.

The resolution passed the Senate quickly without debate.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Mesa reports jump in earnings

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Mesa Petroleum Co. Wednesday reported first quarter net income of $49.7 million, or 73 cents per share compared to 10 cents per share during the same period of 1984.

The increase is due to record-breaking domestic production during the quarter — the highest of any quarter in Mesa's 21-year history, said president T. Boone Pickens Jr.

A 19 percent increase in natural gas production and a 33 percent increase in natural gas liquids production resulted primarily from the company's acquisition last summer of 89 percent of the outstanding units of the Mesa Royalty Trust, Pickens said.

Through March 31, 1985, Mesa's revenues of $106.3 million topped 1984's first quarter revenues of $104.6 million by $1.7 million.

Cooper extends takeover offer

HOUSTON (AP) — Cooper Industries Inc. announced it has extended to May 2 its $65-per-share offer to buy out stock in McGraw-Edison Co.

Houston-based Cooper said it already had tendered about 93 percent — or 15.4 million shares — of McGraw-Edison's outstanding stock as of midnight Tuesday, the original expiration date.

The tender offer amounts to about $1.4 billion, including each of McGraw-Edison's 16.9 million outstanding shares and assumption of some $300 million in debt.

Last month, Cooper announced the buyout offer and reached a takeover agreement with officials of McGraw-Edison.

The Cooper offer caused another McGraw-Edison suitor, Forstmann Little & Co., to drop its $1.3 billion merger offer. Forstmann was offering $59 a share in a leveraged buyout.

Shell earnings down from 1984

HOUSTON (AP) — Citing reduced prices for oil and petroleum products, Shell Oil Co. reported 1985 first quarter earnings of $296 million, down $30 million from the same period in 1984.

"Earnings for this quarter were below our planning objective, but several factors point to possible earnings improvement in the periods ahead," said Shell President John F. Bookout.

But, he said, recovery in the industry will not bring the company's profits up to 1984 levels.

"The depressed earnings in the first quarter will make it difficult to exceed 1984's record earnings," Bookout said.

Earnings per share were 96 cents for the first three months of 1985, down 9 percent from $1.05 for first three months of 1984, officials said.

Chevron reports gas discovery

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — Chevron USA has reported that it discovered natural gas — the first ever discovered off Mississippi's coast — at an exploratory well in federal waters 14 miles south of Pascagoula.

In its announcement Tuesday, Chevron said it discovered the gas on a federal tract about four miles south of Petit Bois Island at a depth of 21,645 feet and in the same formation of sands that yieled gas off Alabama's coast.

Mississippi could stand to gain some money from the operation if a federal geologic evaluation shows that the gas produced at the well is part of a "common pool" extending into Mississippi territory.

The drilling rig, situated in about 60 feet of water in the Gulf of Mexico, flowed gas at a rate of 11.2 million cubic feet per day through a 52-64ths-inch choke during recent tests, according to Chevron and one of its partners, Union Oil of California.

The flowing pressure at the surface was 2,650 pounds per square inch, the companies said. The flow rate is only about half the rate reported by Mobil Oil and Exxon in earlier discoveries in Alabama coastal waters.

Chevron spokesman Brent Wood said that Chevron, its subsidiary Gulf Oil, Union Oil and Pennzoil, which are all involved in the $12.3 million exploratory project, have not worked out the details of production plans for the well.

Wood said the gas probably will be piped to Pascagoula for initial treatment, which is needed to remove water and minerals from the gas.

The well is located on one of three leased tracts adjoining Mississippi waters. The firms paid a total of $42.6 million in bonuses to the U.S. Department of Interior for the tracts.

Belo Corp. reports decreased revenues

DALLAS (AP) — A.H. Belo Corp., parent company of the Dallas Morning News, Tuesday announced a $10.2 million increase in revenues, but a decrease in net operating earnings for the first quarter ended March 31.

The Dallas-based media company recorded revenues of $85.7 million, up from $75.5 million over 1984's first-quarter revenues.

But the company's net operating earnings fell sharply to $2.4 million, or 21 cents per share, in the first quarter, compared with $7 million, or 61 cents per share, during the same period in 1984.

James J. Moroney, chairman and chief executive officer of Belo, said the increased revenues were related to the purchase last year of four television stations.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, in accordance with the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas, hereby gives notice of the Company's intent to implement a new schedule of telephone rates in Texas, effective May 6, 1985, unless otherwise determined by the Commission. The Public Utility Commission of Texas has received the application as Docket 6200.

While proposals as to specific rates vary, it is expected that the requested rate schedule will furnish a 10.5 percent increase in the Company's unadjusted test year intrastate revenues or a 9.7% increase in test year revenues as adjusted for test year customer growth and annualization of test year rate increases. The rate application seeks an annual increase of $323.9 million in revenues. All customers and classes of customers of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company within Texas will be affected by the proposed changes.

Most rates proposed for increase would increase by about 18.5 percent, including local exchange rates. However, there are some exceptions. For example, those customers residing in cities that will be reclassified into larger rate groups will experience local exchange rate increases greater than 18.5 percent. Also, the rate increases proposed for private line services in El Paso, due to a proposal to restructure such rates, are greater than 18.5 percent.

A complete copy of the new rate schedule is on file with the Public Utility Commission at Austin, Texas and with each affected incorporated municipality served by Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. The Commission staff has contended in the past that all rates are subject to change as a result of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company's rate application. This filing includes, but is not limited to, proposals to increase rates for local exchange service, intraLATA long distance, intraLATA interexchange private line service (which includes foreign exchange service) and to decrease certain access service rates.

Notice to Customers of Other Telephone Companies

This filing includes, but is not limited to, proposals to increase rates for intraLATA long distance and for intraLATA, interexchange private line service (which includes foreign exchange service) and to decrease certain access service rates. Changes in such rates would also affect customers of other telephone companies because such companies provide certain services in accordance with rates specified in Southwestern Bell Telephone Company's tariffs.

Notice to All Customers Concerning Access Charges and Certain New Service Charges

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, as a part of this filing, is also proposing to reduce certain access rates charged such customers as AT&T Communications, Inc., MCI and other carriers. The resulting reduction in revenues is proposed to be offset by revenues from two new service charges, late payment charges applicable to business customers only and for certain operator services such as busy line verification, plus stimulation of access service charge revenues. Since this portion of the filing, if granted, would have essentially a zero net revenue effect on Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company is proposing that this portion of the filing be expeditiously handled by the Commission and not await Final Order.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Aviso Público

En conformidad con las disposiciones de la Comisión de Servicios Públicos de Texas, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company anuncia mediante el presente aviso su intención de establecer un nuevo arancel de tarifas telefónicas en Texas, con vigencia a partir del 6 de mayo de 1985, salvo disposición en contrario de la Comisión. La Comisión de Servicios Públicos de Texas a registrado esta solicitud bajo el Docket 6200.

Si bien existe variación entre las propuestas en cuanto a las tarifas precisas, se anticipa que el arancel tarifario solicitado aumentará en un 10.5% los ingresos intraestatales no ajustados de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company durante el año de prueba, o sea, un aumento del 9.7 por ciento en los ingresos del año de prueba, después de realizar el ajuste por la expanción de los usuarios y por la anualización del aumento de tarifas para el año de prueba. El objeto de esta solicitud de tarifas es lograr un aumento anual en los ingresos de $323.9 millones. Los cambios propuestos afectarán a todos los usuarios y grupos de usuarios de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company en el estado de Texas.

La mayoría de las tarifas que resultarían afectadas por el propuesto aumento aumentarían aproximadamente en un 18.5 por ciento, incluyendo las tarifas de centrales locales. Sin embargo, existen algunas excepciones. Por ejemplo, los usuarios que residen en ciudades que se reclasificarán para formar parte de grupos tarifarios mayores experimentarán aumentos mas elevados del 18.5 por ciento. Por otra parte, los aumentos de las tarifas propuestas para servicios de línea privada en El Paso aumentarían en más de 18.5 por ciento, como resultado de una propuesta para reestructurar tales tarifas.

Una copia completa del nuevo arancel de tarifas se halla archivada en las oficinas de la Comisión de Servicios Públicos en Austin, Texas, así como en cada municipalidad incorporada afectada que tenga servicio de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. En el pasado, la Comisión ha sostenido que toda tarifa se halla sujeta a cambio toda vez que Southwestern Bell Telephone Company solicite nuevas tarifas. El registro de esta tarifa incluye, pero no en forma limitativa, las propuestas de aumentar las tarifas por servicios de centrales locales, de larga distancia intraLATA y por servicios de línea privada interLATA entre centrales (incluyendo servicios de centrales externas) así como las propuestas de reducir ciertas tarifas de servicio de acceso.

Aviso a los clientes de otras compañías de teléfono

El registro de esta tarifa incluye, pero no en forma limitativa, las propuestas de aumentar las tarifas por servicios de larga distancia intraLATA y por servicios de línea privada intraLATA entre centrales (incluyendo servicios de centrales externas) así como las propuestas de reducir ciertas tarifas de servicio de acceso. Los cambios en dichas tarifas también afectarían a los clientes de otras compañías de teléfono, puesto que dichas compañías proporcionan ciertos servicios de acuerdo con las tarifas especificadas en los aranceles tarifarios de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

Aviso a todos los clientes con respecto a los cargos de acceso y a determinados cargos nuevos de servicio

Al registrar esta tarifa, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company también propone reducir ciertas tarifas de acceso que se les cobran a clientes como AT&T Communications, Inc., MCI y otras compañías de larga distancia. La consecuente reducción de ingresos se piensa compensar por medio de dos cargos nuevos de servicio (cargos por pago atrasado que se aplicarían solamente a usuarios comerciales, y cargos por ciertos servicios de operadora, tales como verificación de línea ocupada) además de la estimulación de los ingresos por cargos por servicios de acceso. En vista de que, en caso de otorgarse esta parte del arancel tarifario registrado, su efecto real en los ingresos de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company sería igual a cero, ésta propone que la Comisión tramite dicha parte de la tarifa en forma expeditiva sin esperar la Orden Definitiva.

Toda persona que desee intervenir o participar en el presente proceso debe notificar a la Comisión lo antes posible. Las solicitudes de intervención, participación o información deben dirigirse a: Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Para obtener mayor información debe llamar a Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division, (512) 458-0223, o (512) 458-0227, o al (512) 458-0221 si requiere teletipo para personas con impedimentos de audición.

CURIOUS SHOPPER

Onions may help prevent tooth decay, heal wounds

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. My 86-year-old grandfather has all his teeth and they're in good condition. He says this is because all his life he has been eating raw onions. I've seen him eat onions like apples. Could there be something to this? P.G., Cos Cob, Conn.

A. I don't know if an apple a day can keep the doctor away, but an onion a day may keep the dentist away. Literature from the National Onion Association claims that of all the different herbs and plants, the onion is the most potent destroyer of germs.

It states that a Soviet scientist found "that a raw onion chewed in the mouth and throat for five minutes or so renders the lining of both mouth and throat completely sterile." It suggested chewing an onion during cold and throat infections. Research further shows that chewing a raw onion a day deters tooth decay.

Furthermore, pulping up an onion and placing it near a wound so that the onion's aroma will be in contact with it speeds up the healing of the wound. Apparently onions contain a mild antibiotic that helps fight infections.

Although I don't personally know anybody who eats raw onions like apples, the practice must be more prevalent than we realize. A National Academy of Sciences report states that a typical American is more likely to eat a raw onion than drink a beer. In a three-day period 8.4 percent of consumers will have a beer, while 8.5 percent will reach for a raw onion.

Q. I buy Paul Newman's spaghetti sauce and noticed on the jar's label that all profits from Newman's enterprise are donated to charity. Is this really true, and if so, which charities benefit from Newman's business? Fran Curtis, Jenner, Calif.

A. All profits from Newman's Own products, which include salad dressing and popcorn along with spaghetti sauce, do indeed go to charity. The money is doled out every six months, but there is no set list of charities because the company strives to benefit a wide spectrum of deserving causes.

Ursula Hotchner, vice president in charge of this company's public relations, supplied the names of 27 charities which have received donations in the past, and this is only a partial list. Among them are the City of Hope, New York Hospital Burn Center, Sloan-Kettering Institute, the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation and Little Sisters of the Poor.

I don't know whether this is a growing trend or not, but last year Ron Schultz, who packages spices in California under the T&N Spice label, turned the profits from his Christmas Spice instant tea to manufacturing and distributing medicine to children in underdeveloped countries.

The venture was so successful that Schultz is doing it again this year. Says Schultz, "We can show the world that capitalism can be intertwined with compassion."

Q. I have an electric stove and I let the water boil out of my enamel tea kettle by mistake. Some of the enamel got stuck to the coils. Is there any way I can get the enamel off the coils without having to buy a new unit? Lillian Malinoski, Dickson City, Pa.

A. Since your tea kettle was allowed to dry and all the heat was transferred to the kettle, the enamel on your pot reached its melting point and ran. Carol Smith, of General Electric's customer relations department, advises that if the enamel melted on the burner is not too severe it could possibly be removed by turning the burner on and allowing it to get red hot without anything on it.

The enamel residue may burn off if the accumulation isn't too great. Smith emphasizes that great caution must be used. She does not recommend turning the burner on if it has an excessive amount of enamel on it. More likely than not, Smith states, the burner will have to be replaced.

Q. We were sitting around the other night after dinner indulging in food trivia and thought of 10 people who have had a food or drink named after them. Here they are: Graham cracker, Caesar salad, eggs Benedict, Salisbury steak, beef Stroganoff, peach Melba, apple brown Betty, bananas Foster, Baby Ruth and bloody Mary.

Can you think of 10 more? Chris Churma, Central Point, Ore.

A. Beef Wellington, Harvey Wallbanger, Tom Collins, Reuben sandwich, Sally Lunn bread, Trumanburger, Murphy potatoes, Mrs. Washington's pie, fettuccine Alfredo, Charlotte russe.

Now, can you think of 10 more?

Q. I read in the Animal Welfare Institute Quarterly that there is a company that makes, in addition to devices that cut off the beaks of chickens, a device to cut off the bills of ducks raised for meat. Why would anyone want to take the bill off a duck? Would you know? Taking the beaks off chickens is bad enough.

A. "I do not know why anybody would want to take the bill off a duck," says P.W. Hoadley, a senior vice president with Concord Farms, which raises ducks for meat. "In fact," Hoadley goes on to say, "I doubt very seriously whether anybody does. I genuinely believe that somebody is exaggerating what actually occurs in practice."

Part of the duck's bill is removed to prevent preening (a habit natural to birds for grooming purposes). Hoadley explains it this way: "Ducks raised intensively (in barns) have a tendency to pull out their own feathers during preening. This can leave areas of the back exposed to the extent that scratches can produce down-grading of the carcass when the birds are processed and packed. "The problem can be almost eliminated by trimming the end of the top mandible when the duckling is hatched. Approximately 1/16 of an inch is removed, and this prevents 'a good fit' between the top and bottom mandible to the extent that the bird cannot grasp and pull out feathers."

Bulk buys regulated by government

By MARIAN FARR

Scooping corn meal or rice from barrels at the supermarket may be a nostalgic reminder of the old country store. But like most things, even buying bulk food is more complicated than it was in grandma's day.

Today shoppers may have to struggle with a long-handled scooping device or plastic dispensing mechanism to get at your favorite bulk food. The apparatus is there for a good reason — to protect your health and safety.

The growing popularity of selling everything from trail mix to dried fruit, coffee beans and popcorn in bulk led food retailers to seek guidance from the Food and Drug Administration for applying sanitation law in their operations.

The objective in providing guidelines for bulk food sales is to control potential health problems such as the spread of communicable disease, outbreaks of food-borne illness and unintentional contamination of food. The FDA completed guidelines for handling bulk food in supermarkets earlier this year, and the effects are being seen in the grocery stores now.

The rules require bulk food to be dispensed from containers with close-fitting individual covers. Containers must be easily removable from the display unit for servicing, unless they can be cleaned in place without contaminating the food. The FDA ordinance also states that manual contact with the food by customers must be avoided either by mechanical dispensing devices such as gravity fed units, manual dispensers like tongs and scoops, or wrapping and sacking products.

Also, just because the food is purchased from bulk dispensers doesn't mean a consumer gives up his right to product information. The container should show either a counter card or manufacturer's label stating the name of the product and its ingredients in order of predominance.

To reduce the possibility of contamination, the rules suggest that retailers limit the depth of a bulk-food container to 18 inches and locate any containers with the opening at the top at least 30 inches from the floor. But retailers are not required to use these measurement standards as long as they avoid contamination of the food.

The FDA guidelines call for voluntary compliance by retailers and exempt wrapped candies, nuts in their shells and other protected items. So consumers will need to judge for themselves whether a bulk food operation seems sanitary.

New 'crunchy snack chips' earn mixed reviews

By LINDA ANDERSON

OK, OK, I admit it. I eat junk food. Without potato chips, peanut butter cookies and M&Ms, life would be too boring to even contemplate.

And I admit this addiction is not especially good, although probably healthier and more socially acceptable than smoking cigarettes and drinking beer.

Because empty calories make the world go around, trying all the latest junk foods as soon as they hit the supermarket has become a challenge.

Keebler has just introduced Tato Skins, the company's latest offering in "crunchy snack chips." The usual adult, teenage, preschooler and toddler taste-testers checked this new snack against their old favorite, potato chips, for taste, price and advertising accuracy. We chose cheese and bacon flavor. (We didn't even make it out of the supermarket parking lot before the teenage tester had ripped open the package.)

Label advertising claims the product is "crispy and oh so crunchy ... made with real potatoes and real potato skins ... flavor with whole baked potato appeal." It also says the snack comes in three flavors, cheddar cheese and bacon, sour cream and chives and baked potato, which "taste great with just about any meal ... fun at parties. Perfect with dips ... good right out of the sack."

An 8-ounce bag costs $1.39, the same as many other brands of regular potato chips. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

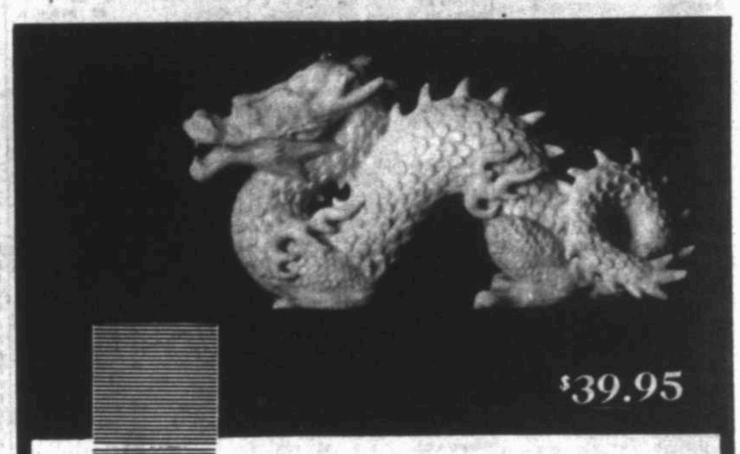

The chips are thicker than potato chips, and because of their uniform shape it is obvious they are not cut directly from potatoes.

This fact is verified through the label listing of ingredients. Dehydrated potatoes is listed first, followed by potato starch, vegetable shortening, corn (in potato snacks?), sugar, whey, cheddar and romano cheese solids, salt, dehydrated potato peel (finally!), buttermilk, and several chemical-sounding ingredients of unknown origin. Many ordinary potato chips are made of potatoes, vegetable oil and salt. Period.

The taste-testers gave the product mixed reviews. The younger tasters liked the snack, especially the toddler. She would eat them for breakfast if she could. The adults thought the chips were just "OK," nothing special, and were disappointed their reconstituted flavor. The teenager prefers her favorite barbecue-flavored potato chips.

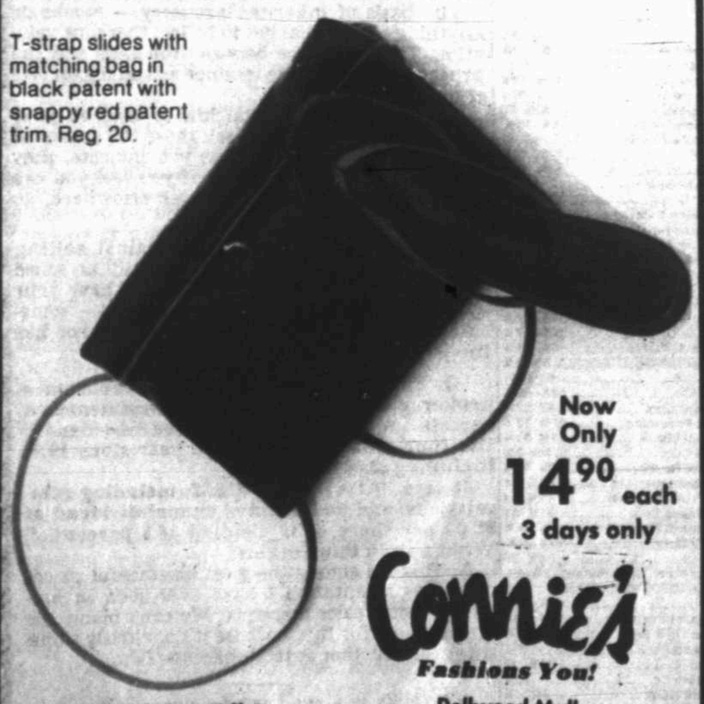

We may try the sour cream and chive flavor, but not very often. You can't fool a junk food connoisseur, and real potato chips should be made from real potatoes, real bruises and all.

DEAR ABBY

His forgetfulness no longer thorn in her side

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Here's how I cured my husband of forgetting special occasions such as my birthday, our anniversary, etc. We had been married only three years when I had a feeling "George" was going to forget again, so I phoned the florist and had him send me a dozen roses with a card that read: "From someone who loves you very much."

When George came home, I met him at the door with a big kiss and thanked him for the flowers. He didn't say anything, but he looked surprised. About half an hour later he picked up the card and read it, then he admitted that he had not sent the roses — but he demanded to know who did. (Yes, he was really jealous.) I burst out laughing and told him I had sent them to myself. He looked relieved. That was the last time George forgot my birthday. — SNEAKY IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR SNEAKY: Lovely. Read on for another "sneaky" gift-getting gimmick.

DEAR ABBY: We'd been married two years when my husband forgot both my birthday and our anniversary, which are only a week apart. I was hurt, and also angry, so the next day I went to the most exclusive ladies' store in town and bought myself an outfit that cost about three times as much as I usually paid.

That night, I modeled my new outfit for my husband and he said he liked it very much. I told him I was glad because since he'd forgotten my birthday and our anniversary, I would consider it his gift to me — then I gave him a big hug and dropped the bill in his lap!

Twelve years have passed, and my darling has never again forgotten. — HAPPY IN WISCONSIN

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Worried Sick," the bride whose parents are divorced, and whose mother threatens to stay away from the wedding if the father gives the bride away.

I faced the same situation. I felt that if I couldn't give my daughter away and escort her down the aisle, I would be publicly renouncing my parentage. But I didn't want to force my daughter to choose between her mother and me, so the problem was resolved this way: I asked the minister if it would be possible for the bride to meet her future husband at the back of the church so that he could escort her down the aisle. I reasoned that since they would be spending the rest of their lives together (hopefully), why not let them begin by walking down the aisle together?

The minister thought it was an excellent solution. — FATHER

U.S. government orders return of treadwear labels

WASHINGTON (AP) — Grade labels, allowing consumers to compare the tread life of tires before buying, should now be present on new tires being sold across the country, under government regulations ordered back into effect by a federal court.

Treadwear grading of tires began back in 1979 along with grades indicating how well tires stood up under high temperatures and rating their traction.

However, the treadwear grades were dropped in 1983 when officials of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration concluded the rating tests were unreliable.

The consumer groups Public Citizen and the Center for Auto Safety filed suit, and a federal court ordered the treadwear grades restored — and labels are now starting to appear again.

Under the court order, paper labels with the treadwear grades had to be placed on radial tires — the most commonly sold tires — starting on April 1. And brochures explaining the grading system must be available in dealer showrooms by May 1.

Tire manufacturers were given until Sept. 1 to change their manufacturing molds to begin including the grades directly on the side of radial tires themselves.

Labeling and brochures for bias ply and bias belted tires were required earlier, and the grades should begin being molded into some of those tires within a month or so.

The treadwear grades are numerical and are useful in comparing one tire to another.

However, they won't tell you exactly how much tread life to expect on a particular tire, since that varies greatly according to road conditions and how a tire is used. One driver might get much more use from a tire than another, who wears the tire out with rapid stops and starts or who fails to properly maintain the tire.

In general, the higher the number on the tire the longer the tread should last under the same conditions. For example, a tire graded 150 should wear 50 percent longer than one graded 100.

The trade magazine Rubber & Plastics News reports that most tires tested for the new labels have scored considerably higher than was the case before the ratings were suspended two years ago.

Improvements in tire technology may be the reason, and in the initial ratings some firms may have tended to undergrade their tires to make sure they were not accused of noncompliance with the law, the magazine quoted industry sources as saying.

Traction and temperature-resistance grades have remained on tires during the disputes over treadwear labeling, and will continue to appear. Both of the other grades are based on a letter system with tires rated "A," "B" or "C" for comparitive purposes. Those rated "A" have the best traction or temperature resistance, "B" is next best, and so on.

The Tire Industry Safety Council, meanwhile, has issued an appeal to new tire buyers to send in the voluntary registration forms to the manufacturers.

In the past, tire dealers sent in forms to the manufacturer, recording the name and address of people who purchased tires so they could be informed in the event of a recall or other problem with the product.

That is no longer done, however, by independent tire dealers. Some brand-name outlets and manufacturer-owned dealers still send in the forms, though.

In many cases, however, tire buyers are merely given a form containing the identification number of the tire, and the consumers themselves must fill in their name and address and send the form to the manufacturer.

While the percentage of tires recalled is small, only six tenths of one percent in 1983, that still amounted to 131,663 tires involved in recall campaigns during that year.

When a recall occurs a manufacturer usually offers the owner a free replacement tire, or repairs the defective tire at no charge. But that cannot be done if the manufacturer can't contact the owner of the tire.

Factory outlet sales rising

NEW YORK (AP) — Factory outlet sales of men's and boy's wear is expected to reach the $9 billion mark this year, up from $7.5 billion in 1984.

"The reason for this rise," says Marvin A. Blumenfeld, president of April-Marcus Inc., a merchandising consulting firm, "is that today people are more interested than ever in getting their money's worth, and there is good economy at these outlet stores."

Outlet stores are no-frill clothing stores than can charge less than regular stores.

'Directions file' useful

Associated Press

Whenever you're given driving instructions over the phone or through the mail, Family Circle magazine suggests you save them for a "directions file." Transfer the information onto 3x5-inch cards in an alphabetically divided file box. When you're ready to travel, just pull the appropriate card. It makes trips hassle-free and organized.

Arnaz says her new TV series 'intelligent, funny'

ENTERTAINMENT

Hearst News Service

Lucie Arnaz' new Tuesday night CBS television series, aptly titled "The Lucie Arnaz Show" and now in the middle of a six-episode tryout, is the first TV series Ms. Arnaz has done since she left her mother's show "Here's Lucy" in 1974 after six seasons.

In her series, Ms. Arnaz plays Dr. Jane Lucas, a psychologist, advice columnist and radio call-in program hostess who advises other people about their problems but can't find the time to work on her own. Tony Roberts, Karen Jablons-Alexander and Todd Waring also star in the series.

Ms. Arnaz, 33, says she initially didn't want to do another TV series. She says she wasn't "thrilled with what I was seeing on TV. I didn't see anything that made me wish I was doing it. I kept thinking maybe if I found a dramatic show I could make some statement doing that."

However, a former agent of hers who had joined Taft Entertainment called Ms. Arnaz to tell her that Taft had bought the rights to a popular British comedy called "Agony." Although Ms. Arnaz resisted, he finally convinced her to see a tape of the show. Much to her surprise, Ms. Arnaz says, she liked it. She found it intelligent and funny. More important, the characters were realistic.

"It talked about the way people really relate to one another. It took some chances and it didn't pull any punches."

Ms. Arnaz agreed to do the sitcom and had it put in her contract that she had to film the show in New York.

"It never became a fight. I really meant it. I said, 'I will not go to Los Angeles. If it's not going to be in New York, then forget it altogether.'"

Ms. Arnaz explains the reason she's so adamant about filming in New York: "My husband has two children from a previous marriage and we have joint custody agreements. It gets very complicated if I pick up and come here for six months." She and actor Laurence Luckinbill also have three children: Simon, 4; Joseph, 2, and Kate, 3 months.

MOT brings opera to general public

From Staff Reports

Although opera is defined in Webster's dictionary as "a play having all or most of its text set to music," most people would unfairly add to the definition, "boring." The Midland Opera Theater has done a great deal of educating to disspell the myth that opera is just an elitist art form, one that is tedious and unenjoyable.

"The appreciation of opera in Midland and Odessa has really come a long way since the Midland Opera Theater began," said Nancy Anguish, president of the Midland Opera Theater. "It certainly has been an uphill battle but we have persuaded a lot of people to open up a little and give opera a chance. My belief is that if someone just comes to a performance, they simply can't help being enchanted by the music, the costumes and the drama."

MOT has successfully hosted two public evenings of introducing the general public to opera through a picnic supper and entertaining programs with the help of local talent. MOT has also been responsible for bringing the critically acclaimed Texas Opera Theater to Midland for two well attended performances.

"By bringing a professional troupelike the Texas Opera Theater and even the Peking Opera to Midland we reached, entertained and 'infected' people with the Opera bug.

"I know we now have avid supporters of the opera theater, who five years ago would have sworn that they would not be caught dead listening to opera. Good music and theater combined is a wonderfully contagious form of good entertainment," said Mrs. Anguish.

The two performances of "Johnny Sneaky," which is based on Puccini's opera Gianni Schicchi, scheduled for Friday and Saturday is MOT's contribution to the Centennial Celebration.

Many people may wonder why the MOT took the risk to produce such a complicated opera using local talent.

"We wanted to do something really special for the Centennial and Gianni Schicchi lent itself perfectly to adaptation to the West Texas setting and the story of greedy relatives is timeless," said Michael Jordan, music director for the performances.

"We have the local talent both vocally and in terms of stage production to easily and professionally handle the opera. Unlike many cities of its size, Midland has a wealth of talented singers and musicians. We specifically wanted to make our contribution to the Centennial a local one. We chose the Yucca Theater to set the appropriate stage for our opera, and we wanted to showcase our local talent."

Cast members for the performances of "Johnny Sneaky" include Michael Jordan and Janice Archer in the lead roles. Elaine Berman, David Johnson, Danny Ellis, Samuel Gershwin, Gloria Kirkpatrick, Sharon Andrews, Marilyn Covington, Mary Overall and Shawn Gilstrap make up the rest of the cast. Walter Osadchuk will conduct the 30 members symphony orchestra.

Tickets are available at Midland Community Theater through Friday from 10 a.m.—5 p.m. Admission is $10 and does include the pre-opera entertainment provided by Ron Franklin and Jerry Tubb, a popular Midland duo.

Sitcoms popular again, thanks to Cosby

Hearst News Service

Up until last year, the Hollywood soothsayers said sitcoms were out. Now they're back in. We can thank Bill Cosby.

Family environments were once the goldmine from which comedies drew their glitter. More recently, the workplace has been a primary source of television yuks. Now the domestic setting is regaining its popularity. Again, thanks to Cosby.

Black characters always have been hard to come by on the tube, but measurable changes are in the wind. Quite a few upcoming series feature blacks prominently in their storyline. To whom do we express our gratitude? You got it.

Meanwhile, NBC is going to town with its Thursday night comedies. Overall viewership is up an astonishing 57 percent. Ratings have climbed significantly for "Family Ties," "Cheers" and "Night Court." Across the dial on CBS, "Magnum, P.I." has lost 12 percent of its audience. So NBC chief Grant Tinker and stars like Shelley Long, Ted Danson and Harry Anderson also can stand in line to say "Thanks, Bill." "The Bill Cosby Show," which starts off their evening schedule, is responsible for the improvements.

All this data comes clear from a reading of "Network Primetime Development," a report on pilot programs under way at all three networks from the Madison Avenue advertising agency, Young and Rubicam Inc. Y&R researchers examined the plot premises of 82 pilots ordered for the fall season, of which very few will make it to the air. Trends can be spotted in this fashion, and they found sitcoms to be the biggest. Cosby's hit series "has renewed network faith in comedy," they claim.

Within the half-hour comedy format, they noted several mini-trends: strong character relationships and realistic situations taking the place of silly plot gimmicks, more domestic comedies and the combining of comedy with drama in shows exemplified by CBS' popular new series "Crazy Like a Fox."

In the area of pure drama, law-enforcement themes are most popular. Cop and private-eye pilots now are in the works for stars like Robert Urich and Hal Linden.

Black characters are coming into fashion, a long-overdue development, as any of the many out-of-work black actors in Hollywood can confirm. Now under development are pilots starring Carl Weathers, Marla Gibbs, Flip Wilson and Gladys Knight.

"Hardware" shows like "Knight Rider" and "Street Hawk" are not being imitated, but soft science-fiction themes seem to be popular. ABC is looking at a series about a crime-fighting "test-tube human." CBS has ordered one concerning a robot with emotions. NBC may field a show about "extraordinary individuals who have superhuman powers."

Meanwhile, there's the new "Twilight Zone" on CBS, "Steven Spielberg's Amazing Stories" on NBC and an ABC series called "Shadow Chasers," about "two men in search of unexplained phenomena."

"Twilight Zone" and Spielberg's show also typify yet another trend — anthology series, both in comedy and drama. Also in this mold are a half-hour show with a different cast and setting each week to be hosted by George Burns, and a remade "Alfred Hitchcock Presents" on NBC (though some network officials deny that this is actually a pilot).

The already-existing turn towards strong female characters should continue, even to the point of a woman "Dirty Harry"-type cop featured in an ABC pilot and a brand-new "Mary Tyler Moore Show."

Man takes pleasure with new name

AUSTIN, Minn. (AP) — For 40-year-old Welcome Pleasure Freely, simple activities such as bike riding, roller skating and dancing seem to have more meaning now than they did a year ago — when he was Rex Robert Frink.

"It's the biggest present nature ever gave me," Freely said. "I'll always cherish it. My name makes me smile."

Freely, who said the idea for a new name came to him in a dream, acquired his new moniker last May after petitioning Mower County District Court Judge William Nierengarten for a name change.

Although he granted the request, Nierengarten warned Freely that he might have problems with authorities and others who did not take his name seriously.

Sid Caesar: Schmutz can ruin comic's act

Hearst News Service

It's the schmutz that gets to Sid Caesar. Anything else he can take.

Schmutz is Yiddish for dirt, and that, says Caesar, is what ruins many a potentially good comic's act. He was thinking specifically of Robin Williams and George Carlin.

"They have inventive minds," says Caesar, "but unfortunately they all rely on a crutch called schmutz. It takes away from creativity. It takes away from the incentive to be different and innovative. It's laziness. It's easy to get a laugh when you drop your pants, isn't it?"

Caesar never relied on scatology for a chuckle, but then he had little choice. His "Your Show of Shows" and "The Sid Caesar Hour" aired in the early '50s, when the mildest of double entendres were axed by network censors.

And yet as if to prove the point he would be making two decades hence, they were relentlessly, uproariously funny. While the first great television comic — Milton Berle — depended on tried-and-true vaudeville formulations, Caesar and Ernie Kovacs found new shapes for their humor, acknowledging that television was a different kind of medium.

Caesar, who this week was inducted into the Television Hall of Fame, believes it was his penchant for parody that put his show on the top.

"Satire was not even thought of when I was on television, and my main forte was satire," he recalls. Yet he warns against send-ups that are too heavy-handed.

"I see nothing wrong in being socially relevant; that's great, but that's not the main thing. Comedy's main message is to get you to laugh, not to make you think. The message you deliver is not to take yourself too seriously."

Caesar's technique for delivering that vital message was to play the put-upon soul with whom we all could identify.

"It's the guy you laugh with," he explains. "And I'm not saying laugh at. It's the guy who's in trouble. When it gets too crazy, you've got to start to laugh at yourself. What you're doing is you're facing reality. Once you face reality, it really doesn't scare you any more. I don't mean a life-or-death situation, but an everyday situation like you forgot the keys to your car."

Caesar's own reality became rather bleak at one point. His hobby was drinking and pill-popping, and it almost cost him his career. Caesar now confesses it was his boozing that cost him his show and his prominent spot in the American showbusiness arena.

At the time, though, "I blamed everybody but me. You're so paranoiac, you think the world is against you. Finally, I woke up to the fact that it was me."

Pravda: Reagan suffers defeat over Nicaragua

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Communist Party daily Pravda said today that President Reagan suffered a serious defeat over aid to Nicaraguan rebels and compared his conflict with Congress to the debate over the Vietnam war.

The House of Representatives voted Wednesday night to kill all U.S. assistance to the rebels. Earlier, the House rejected a compromise that would have limited Reagan's proposed $14 million in aid to non-military assistance.

Writing before the House vote to sever all aid, Pravda commentator Nikolai Kurdyumov said Tuesday's rejection of Reagan's proposal showed there was domestic resistance to his policies.

Reagan was defeated despite "a psychological attack on Congress, unprecedented arm-twisting of the legislators and intimidation," Pravda said.

It said many Americans now opposed Reagan's policy toward Central America and were comparing his actions to those of President Lyndon B. Johnson over Vietnam.

"Representatives of the Democratic Party warned during yesterday's debates in Congress about the dangers of involving the country in the morass of a Vietnamese-type conflict if aid continues to the counterrevolutionary gangs in Nicaragua," Pravda said.

Pravda carried several reports on Nicaragua today. The reports covered one-third of the newspaper's foreign policy page and included a cartoon of an Uncle Sam figure handing weapons to a bandit, then covering the guns with a cloth bearing the words, "humanitarian aid."

The coming visit of Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega was announced in a short Tass report printed on Pravda's front page.

Ortega confirmed Wednesday that he would be coming to Moscow in late April, but refused to disclose the date.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev is due in Warsaw on Friday for a Warsaw Pact summit.

The Nicaraguan leader was in Moscow last month for the funeral of Konstantin U. Chernenko and met Gorbachev then.

In another Soviet commentary on Nicaragua and the U.S. debate over policy toward Central America, the weekly newspaper Literaturnaya Gazeta charged that American troops in Honduras "practically participate in the undeclared war" against Nicaragua.

Commentator Vitaly Kobysh said the administration battle with Congress over Nicaraguan aid "looks simply ridiculous" because, he charged, the Central Intelligence Agency has hundreds of millions of dollars in funds which it can use without Congressional approval.

Panamanian ship sinks in Red Sea after hitting mine

LONDON (AP) — A cargo ship carrying 14,000 tons of iron ore sank in the Red Sea today, apparently after hitting a mine, and its crew has been rescued, Lloyds Shipping Intelligence Unit reported.

Lloyds spokesman Roger Lowes speculated the suspected mine may have been one of a series sewn last year in the Red Sea and the Gulf of Suez which hit and damaged a total of 19 vessels between July 9 and Sept. 20. None was sunk.

The sinking of the Mariner II came seven months after the last of the explosions in the Red Sea and the Gulf of Suez, the northwestern branch of the sea, was reported.

Lowes said the 16,270-ton Mariner II, a Panamian-registered vessel, went down in deep water after being hit Tuesday by what its Greek managers described as an "unknown object" which exploded.

"The object which exploded must almost certainly be a mine," Lowes told The Associated Press.

The 20 crew members were picked up by a Belgian container vessel, Rhein Express, and were taken to hotels in Jidda, Saudia Arabia, said Capt. Ioannis Lambrinakis of Commercial Marine Ltd., of Piraeus, Greece. He said the ship's captain reported all the crew — seven Greeks, three Sri Lankans and 10 Indians — were unhurt.

The Mariner II was sunk at the northern end of the Red Sea, 40 miles east of the Egyptian port of Safaga and 230 miles south of Suez, said Lambrinakis. He said the ship was on its way carrying 14,000 tons of iron ore from Bar, Yugoslavia to Hong Kong.

After last year's explosions, a multinational force, including minesweepers from the U.S., British, French, Egyptian, Dutch, Soviet and Italian navies, swept the area trying to track down the mines.

The search ended in October. "But obviously there could be areas that may not have been covered, and this could have floated into that vicinity," Lowes said.

The French found 10 mines but said they dated from the 1973 Mideast War and some from World War II. The British found one mine in Egyptian waters which the Defense Ministry in London said was a new type of Soviet mine. But it was impossible say who laid it.

The first ship hit in the series of explosions last year was a Soviet container vessel. The Soviets did not cooperate with the other nations conducting sweeps in Saudi and Egyptian waters, but sent three minesweepers, one helicopter cruiser and a destroyer to search off the coast of its ally, South Yemen.

The Egyptians accused Libya of planting the mines, saying it was probably done by the Libyan ship Ghat, which passed through the Suez Canal on the way to Ethiopia shortly before the first explosion.

The Egyptians had also accused of Iran of playing a role in the mine-laying, but later said Iran was not involved.

Underwear thief nabbed

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Police made an unusual haul as detectives arrested a man who had stolen hundreds of ladies' garments with a fishing rod.

Amsterdam police caught a 28-year-old man Wednesday as he was fishing ladies' clothes from a clothesline, according to police spokesman Klaas Wilting.

The man, who was not identified in line with police procedure, used a long wooden fishing rod with a hook, said Wilting, adding that a search of the suspect's appartment revealed an "astonishing collection" of ladies' wear.

Among other items, police found 186 bras, 174 ladies' slips, 59 nighties, 66 bathing suits and the same number of bikinis, along with several hundred assorted items of apparel such as dresses, slacks, shoes and boots.

The suspect confessed that he "got a kick out of women's clothing," according to Wilting.
