Library reaps windfall

Gifts catapult expansion fund to $1.1 million

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Members of the Friends of the Library demonstrated their ardent support of the proposed expansion and renovation of Midland County Library by tendering a $1.1-million check to the Midland County Commissioners' Court Monday.

The gift, originally envisioned at $600,000, was seeded by a $300,000 challenge grant by the Midland-based Abell-Hanger Foundation.

A major windfall — $500,000 — that catapulted the $600,000 goal to $1.1 million came in two recent gifts of $300,000 and $200,000 from an anonymous Midland donor.

"It is one of the most important events in the history of this county," said Nicholas "Nick" Taylor, a Midland lawyer who is chairman of the Library Advisory Board.

County Librarian Sandra Wegner said 1991 "has been a bang-up year" for the library.

"This is probably one of the most important days in the history of the library," she said. "It's really exciting. We've had a lot of good public support."

Taylor said the outpouring of gifts proved that the library, which had its beginning in the basement of the 1930-built Midland County Courthouse, is of "enormous importance to this community.

"It is one of the unique and great assets of this region," Taylor told the commissioners in a courtroom that was packed by Friends of the Library members, library supporters and members of the Advisory Board.

The challenge-grant project was accepted by Midland artist and past Friends president Max Perry last year when the Commissioners' Court issued $1.15 million in certificates of obligation to expand and renovate the library.

Taylor, who emceed the $1.1-million gift ceremony, described Perry as "the heart and soul" of the chal-

JAZZING IT UP

IN TUNE WITH West Texas

Innovative music style lacks forum

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

Given the chance, most local jazz musicians would welcome the opportunity to play for a live audience.

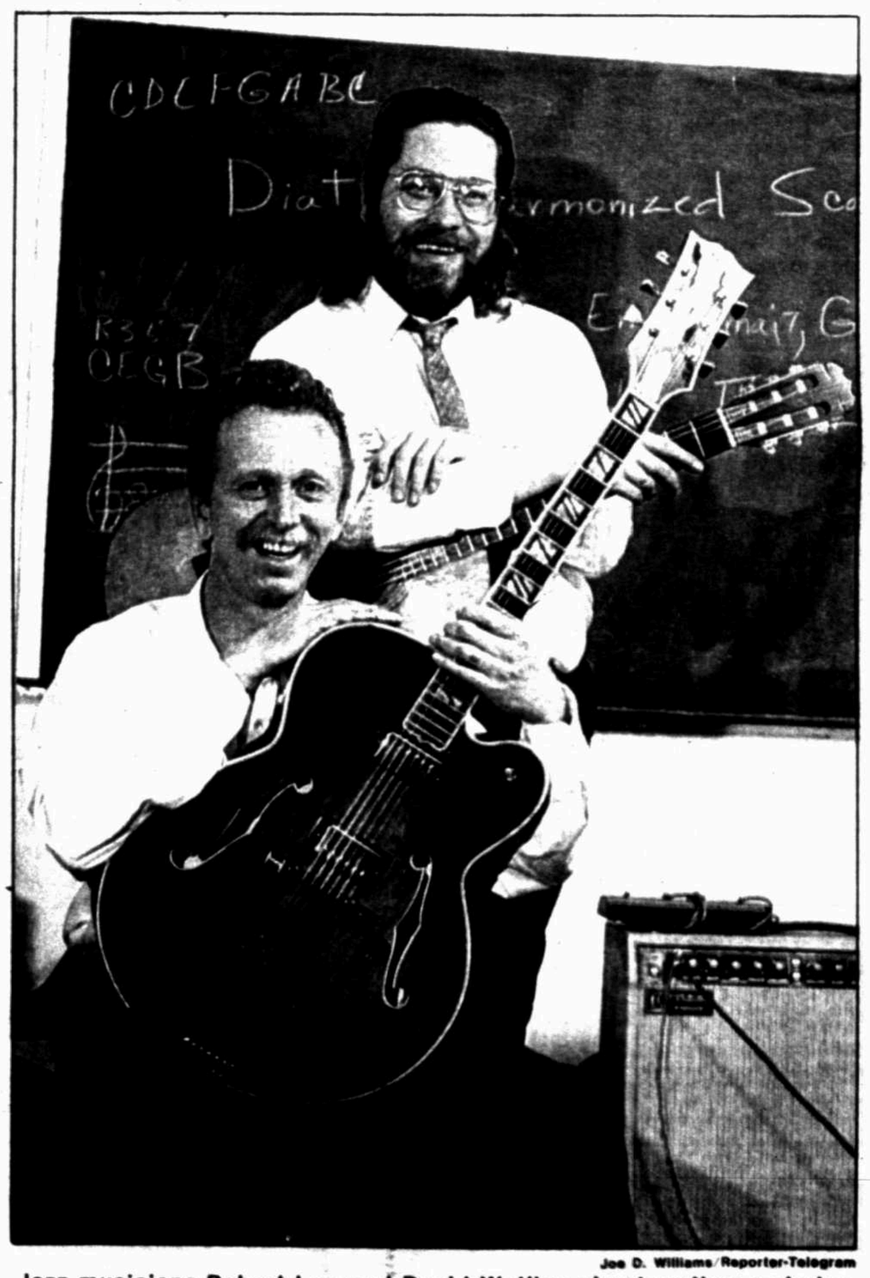

As it is, most do it in the privacy of their own homes.

"One of the things I'd like to try is get a club owner who would be willing to let these musicians come in a play jazz," said Odessan guitarist Robert LaCroix, a member of the trio Risky Bizness.

LaCroix and Midlanders James Love and Don Burns play a variety of music, but includes fusion, which interfaces the elements of jazz and rock together.

Although the group has played only once together at Barnaby's in Odessa, according to Love, the people who were there seemed to enjoy it. "I think there are people out there who seek out quality music. Jazz is a continual, evolving art form ... the technique today already pales in

For R&B's Hunter, the thrill remains

By Chris Van Wagenen

ODESSA — When Long John Hunter plays, his audience is awed by his one-handed guitar antics.

"It's just one of those things I do. I just clown around, but it knocks the ladies out. Guys come up to me and say, hey, will you do that guitar thing again. Put it in my old lady's lap."

Hunter, who's pushing 60, still gets a thrill out of playing the crowd, but admits he's slowing down.

When it comes to rhythm and blues, the Odessan is a good example of everything that's right with a live performance.

Still playing with the Walking Catfish, a group organized a few years ago by Murray Meese, now lead singer for The Shades, Hunter learned the guitar on his own.

"I can't read a note the size of the building, but I can hear it. All these years, I've never been out of work. Oh, there may have been some times when I didn't work as much as others, but I still worked."

Hunter, who has cut two albums in his lifetime, began playing in 1954 after following his mother to Beaumont from a little town in Arkansas.

Panel seeks $1,000-a-child credit on tax

■ Commission recommends improvements in children's health care, education, moral training.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — A federal advisory commission whose members span the political spectrum announced Monday that they had reached a fragile consensus to support tax cuts and an increase in government spending to improve the lot of children.

The chief recommendation was for adoption of a $1,000 income tax credit for each child in America.

The panel, the National Commission on Children, estimated that its proposals to combat children's poverty and to guarantee access to health care for all children would cost more than $50 billion a year, or $267 billion to $293 billion over the next five years.

More than 70 percent of the total cost would result from one proposal: tax relief for families with children, through the $1,000 tax credit. Low-income families owing no taxes could obtain a cash payment equal to the amount of the credit under the proposal.

The panel was headed by Sen. John D.

Kuwait's fires blacken sands with 'oil rain'

WASHINGTON (NYT) — A new type of pollution, oil rain, is coating the desert sands of Kuwait because of fires set by retreating Iraqi troops, but U.S. scientists say the chances are slight that smoke from the fires will have global climate effects.

A preliminary analysis indicates the smoke in huge black clouds that hang over Kuwait and much of the southwestern coastline of the Persian Gulf is not rising high enough to travel outside the region, members of a team of atmospheric chemists who visited the area said Monday.

That will keep the global effects of the over 500 fires still burning in Kuwaiti oil fields to a minimum.

But the smoke contains so much unburned crude oil that "Kuwait is being painted black" by droplets that settle

State to mull issue of 'caller ID' rights

Caller ID is a service aimed at protecting phone customers against abusive calls. Subscribers of the service are provided with a digital screen on their telephones that Bonnie Thornton grieves.

It was just another park picnic — then all was lost

By Nancy Shulins

PANAMA CITY, Fla. — In a voice ragged from too many cigarettes and too little sleep, Bonnie Thornton describes each dead child the same way: "Extra, extra special."

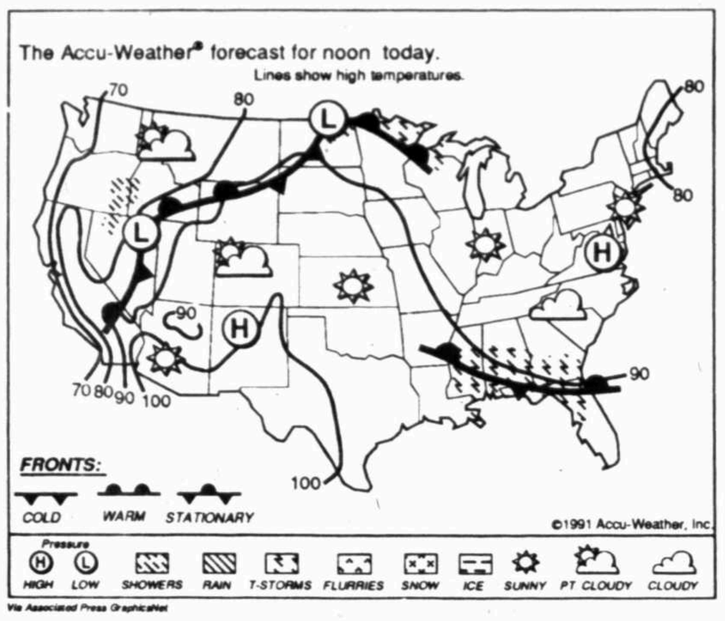

It never occurred to him that a picnic in the neighborhood park could be dangerous. He took them there all the time.

"Stay out of the water until I get back," he told them that Sunday. Just another picnic in the park.

But in the time it took him to put meat on the grill for their lunch and remove sandspurs from a 4-year-old's shoe, all was lost. Five children, ages 3 to 15, drowned in the Intracoastal Waterway.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Via Associated Press GraphicsNet

Sunny skies, 101 on tap

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high near 101 and south to southeast winds 10 to 20 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be fair with a low around 70.

Wednesday is expected to be sunny with a high near 100.

After an overnight low of 67, Monday's high was 95 compared with the record high for that date of 108 in 1990. The record low for today's date was 57 set in 1940.

STATE

Skies were mostly sunny across West Texas Monday while scattered showers developed over much of the North and South.

Temperatures remained warm in West Texas with El Paso and Wink reporting 3 p.m. readings of 102 and 101 degrees respectively. Elsewhere temperatures were in the 80s and 90s.

Winds blew mainly from the south to southwest at 10 to 20 mph with a few higher gusts in some areas.

Strong thunderstorms developed in the eastern part of North Texas, with the heaviest activity occurring between Sulphur Springs and Longview. Some small hail was reported in Upshur County.

A low pressure trough over East Texas combined with afternoon heating and a moist atmosphere to generate more storms. Meanwhile a ridge of high pressure building over West Texas kept the rest of North Texas rain free.

Storms developed in South Texas near Kingsville and Cotulla. South and southeasterly winds continued across the region mainly at 5 to 15 mph.

Skies were clear to partly cloudy throughout North Texas, except near the thunderstorms. Winds blew from the south at speeds near 10 miles an hour.

North Texas temperatures at 3 p.m. were in the low to mid-90s, but cooler in areas near the showers. Corpus Christi was the cool spot Monday afternoon, reporting a 74-degree reading.

NATION

Thunderstorms with hail and strong winds swept across the northern Plains on Monday, and temperatures threatened to rewrite some records in the West.

Locally heavy rain, hail and strong winds pounded parts of the Dakotas during the morning. Golf ball-sized hail pelted Reeder, N.D., Mott, N.D., and an area near Lemmon, S.D.

Scranton, a town of about 400, needed a front-end loader to remove hail from one intersection. Some 3.5 inches of rain and marble-size hail fell in about an hour, the National Weather Service said.

"There's still hail and drifts laying around here yet. We had a lot of hail," resident Annie Tysver said. "Our gardens are just sticks."

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

lenge-grant victory and "a hard worker."

Friends president Forrest Underwood presented the $1.15-million check to the Commissioners' Court.

The two major fund sources — the county-issued certificates of obligations, and the Friends challenge-grant money — bring the library project to $2.25 million.

The downtown library, built in 1957, is to be doubled in space.

"I'm gratified, of course, because I told members of the Library Advisory Board for years that we had to have an upgraded library," Commissioner Durward Wright said.

"And there wasn't enough support in the community for tax dollars because we (the commissioners) were committed, out of necessity, to tax dollars for a new jail."

Wright said he subsequently challenged the Library Advisory Board members, who are members of the tax-exempt Friends group, to seek a "combination of public and private-sector monies to achieve our ultimate goal.

"They succeeded beyond our wildest dreams," said Wright, who, during most of his more than 20 years as a commissioner, has worked toward a new or expanded library.

The group that "ultimately performed" in meeting the library-expansion challenge was the Friends of the Library, Wright said.

The Friends and the Library Advisory Board were committed to meeting the Abell-Hanger Foundation challenge grant, Taylor said. And fulfilling that commitment inspired the gifts from the anonymous donor.

"This is evidence of what makes Midland a unique community," said David Smith, the Abell-Hanger Foundation executive director, who was accompanied by the foundation's president, R.M. Leibrock.

Smith said the foundation directors "want to take our hats off" to the library's supporters, including the 400 people who donated gifts.

Individual gifts, Perry had noted, ranged from $5 to $300,000.

The $300,000 anonymous gift was added to the Abell-Hanger Foundation challenge grant, said Perry, and the $200,000 gift is to built a 6,232-square-foot bay to the library addition.

"We are ready for groundbreaking to begin," Smith said.

Construction is to get under way this autumn under the monitoring of the commissioners and Midland architect Lawrence "Larry" Connolly.

The 34-year-old two-tier library's 27,000-square-foot facility will be renovated in the project. It will double in size with the addition of 26,000 feet of space at the back of the existing building.

Wright said that a new Midland County Museum, now in the basement of the library, would be built onto the library, but not with Friends funds.

RIGHTS: State to consider allowing 'caller IDs' displays and automatically stores the phone number of an incoming call.

(From 1A)

But groups such as the American Civil Liberties Union worry that the devices may violate privacy rights if the service isn't restricted.

The group has reported what it considers the questionable use of similar technology in Canada, where an anti-abortion group used a similar system to locate pregnant teen-agers who telephoned an 800 number.

Since the technology was first marketed four years ago, 14 states have approved the service.

Phone companies and caller ID manufacturers say the service is like an "electronic peephole," allowing customers some security before they answer a call.

Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. is already testing the devices in Oklahoma, charging between $50 and $130 for the equipment. The monthly charge for the service is $6.50 for residential customers and $8.50 for businesses.

But because caller ID units are comparable to "trap and trace" devices, other states have been reluctant to allow phone companies to offer the service. Such devices are legal in Texas only when used by telephone companies or law enforcement authorities.

The commission tentatively approved rules in April that severely restrict the use of caller ID in Texas, forcing phone companies to reconsider whether the service is even worth offering.

Under the PUC rules, a phone company could only offer the service if all calls made to phones equipped with caller ID units are automatically blocked, meaning the incoming number could not be shown on the display unit. Numbers could be unblocked only at the caller's request.

So far, phone companies have been reluctant to file requests at the commission asking to provide the service.

"We probably won't offer the service if the rules stay the way they are written," said Bob Digneo, spokesman for Southwestern Bell, a company that wanted to begin offering the service as early as next year.

"(The restrictions) would make it unlikely that people would want to purchase the service," Digneo said.

Phone companies and other groups are trying to change the PUC's rules on caller ID. The commission may reconsider the caller ID rules as early as this summer to respond to public comment and open debate on the issue.

Martin Wilson, a staff attorney at the commission who drafted the rules, says they were written restrictively to allow the agency to expand and debate what is and isn't a privacy violation.

The wide difference of opinion on the issue is readily apparent in the numerous comments filed at the commission on the caller ID rules.

"My wife and I have four kids, and it seems that we receive harassing calls throughout the night on some occasions. I do not feel that someone should have the right to call and invade my privacy without my knowing who they are," wrote Bill Ware, an Amarillo bank vice president, to PUC Chairman Paul Meek.

The blocking requirement would make the service useless, Ware continued. "Caller ID should be offered without blocking, otherwise, why bother at all?"

Meek said he is sympathetic to people who want the caller ID service and he expects that the commission will change the published rules to make them less restrictive.

"I didn't agree with what was published. You have to look at caller ID like it was a front door," Meek said. "I for one am going to have caller ID on my phone."

But some groups say offering caller ID without the automatic blocking could cause problems for law enforcement agencies and crisis hotline operators who rely on information from anonymous callers.

"Individuals seeking the assistance of a crisis intervention center may forgo making the call out of fear that their telephone, and ultimately, their identity, would be known," wrote John Laakso, an attorney with the Office of Public Utility Counsel, an agency that represents the interests of consumers at the commission.

FIRES: New type of pollution coats desert sands back to the ground, said Dr. Lawrence Radke, of the National Center for Atmospheric Research (NCAR) in Boulder, Colo., co-leader of the scientific team.

(From 1A)

At a news conference, Dr. Radke and other scientists agreed that the immediate effect of the clouds of smoke, which reach over 1,000 miles downwind, is to cool the region.

By dimming the sun's light, the clouds caused the temperature to drop 7.5 degrees Fahrenheit below normal during May in Bahrain, 250 miles southeast of Kuwait.

Later, the scientists said, when the fires are out and the smoke clears, the Persian Gulf climate could well swing to the opposite extreme because the blackened earth will absorb much more of the sun's heat than the highly reflective desert sand.

With funds from the National Science Foundation, the National Geographic Society and the Defense Nuclear Agency, 18 scientists spent much of May and June flying over and through the smoke plumes in specially-equipped aircraft.

"This is as close as I'd like to get to hell," said Dr. Peter Hobbs of the University of Washington, the other co-director of the scientific expedition.

He noted that oil equal to half of America's daily imports is burning in the 500 Kuwait fires, causing a plume of smoke to drift south over the Persian Gulf and Saudi Arabia.

If the same smoke plume had originated in Manhattan, he said, it would reach the Florida peninsula, where it would be several hundred miles wide.

The scientists said they were surprised by how much unburned oil remains in smoke from the well-head fires — enough to coat planes with a slick, black film when they fly through the clouds — and by the fact that much of the material in the smoke clouds had a chemical attraction to water.

This "hydrophilic" property is generally causing the smoke to fall with rain and therefore keeping it from reaching the stratosphere, where it would quickly spread around the globe, said Dr. Radke.

PICNIC: Family outing becomes Bonnie's burden

(From 1A)

Three were his sister's. One was his girlfriend's. Bonnie, 35, had been a second father to them all. The fifth was a friend who'd been playing with them on a sandbar.

Bonnie had left them scratching their names in sand and building a castle. None could swim, but the water appeared calm and shallow. It wasn't even up to their knees.

Now, in addition to grief, Bonnie carries an added burden: He feels responsible.

At night, while others are sleeping, "I lock myself in a room and cry hard. It hurts so bad, I'm breathless. I still see them there in the back seat of the car. They were always there."

Tonia Thornton, 15, his sister's oldest, had big dreams. "We planned to go to college together," says Bonnie's daughter, Tracey Arts. "She was going to have twins, be a lawyer, and have a Mustang convertible, so her hair could blow."

Keiona, 7, wanted to teach, like Gay Uzzell, the second-grade teacher she hugged every day after school. "She was concerned about others' feelings, unusually so," Ms. Uzzell said.

Jamal was an imp. "He left a mark on everybody." Bonnie remembers the time the 3-year-old left the water on in his uncle's trailer. "Flooded the whole shebang."

Monique Fennell, 9, known as "Bumper" for her habit of gently bumping her head against the back of her chair as she watched TV, loved horror movies. "She got good grades," Tracey said, "and she was the sweetest one in her family."

And then there was their friend, Zephora Cromartie, 12, a snub-nosed beauty with soulful brown eyes, a shy smile and an off-center braid.

On June 9, Earl Gilbert Park had been crowded, but nobody saw the children go under. Perhaps because of the traffic on a nearby bridge, nobody heard any cries.

Signs warn against swimming without a lifeguard; officials in Parker, where the tragedy occurred, are considering stricter measures. "I don't care if they close it down," Bonnie said.

Barbara Dinse, the Red Cross Aquatic Director for Bay County, believes 80 percent of county residents are non-swimmers, despite the water that surrounds them. Including the children, nine people have drowned this year.

Just before school ended, Ms. Uzzell brought up water safety. "I said, 'What if someone gets in trouble in the water?' Several students suggested jumping in and saving them. Then I asked how many could swim. Of 21 students, six could swim. 'If you can't swim and you jump in, what could happen?' "

"You can't do that," Keiona Stanley told her teacher. "They might drown you, too."

Neither she nor her sister was comfortable in water, but Jamal loved it. Relatives say the girls would have jumped in in a heartbeat to save him. The rest may have followed, to help or to join what may have looked like a game.

"One bounced ahead, probably the 3-year-old, causing one or two others to go in after them," said Sheriff's Lt. Jerry Girvin. "We think the other kids panicked and went that way, too."

Though the water seemed calm, there were other factors: a strong outgoing tide, a brisk wind, a swift current, and a sudden drop of perhaps 25 feet, Girvin says. "Lots of people could have done different things. If the uncle hadn't gone over the hill. If the kids hadn't disobeyed — if, if, if."

Cubia Thornton, Bonnie's sister, lost three of her four children to the bay. "It wasn't his fault. Nobody blames him," she said.

At first, "I didn't want to talk to him," said Kenneth Stanley, Keiona's father. Then Wiley McQueen Jr., Bonnie's and Cubia's godfather and minister, gently intervened. Now, Stanley's no longer angry.

"I got no grudge with Bonnie," he said. "If he could turn back the hands, I know he would."

Bonnie loomed large in the lives of his sister's children in part because she'd had them out of wedlock. Though their fathers spent time with them, "I was always the babysitter," said Bonnie.

Later, McQueen says he is worried. Everyone seems to be pulling together, but he doesn't trust it, any more than Bonnie trusts the calm waters of the Intracoastal Waterway.

Each sees the turmoil below the smooth surface.

"I'm worried about later on. I hope nobody will ever say to Bonnie, 'If it weren't for you, my kids would be alive.' I hope not, but it could happen."

Rockefeller IV of West Virginia, a potential candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination who has made health care and the needs of children a central theme in his speeches around the country.

Many of the recommendations made by the 34-member panel, like those for additional spending on prenatal care, education and social services, are similar to proposals that have been made over the last 15 years by liberal Democrats, including Marian Wright Edelman, president of the Children's Defense Fund, who is a member of the commission.

But the report also emphasizes a theme that is sounded often by conservatives, the importance of moral values, and it says that schools are "too often silent on critical moral and ethical issues."

The panel also laments what it describes as a "steady onslaught of advertising, violence and sex that pours forth from the family television." In its report, the panel urges parents to join in letter-writing campaigns and boycotts to protest television shows, music and advertising deemed "damaging to children."

After the report was made public, Barbara Bush invited the commission members to tea, but the official response from the White House on Monday was tepid.

President Bush's press secretary, Marlin Fitzwater, said there were "many good things" in the report, but he said: "Big-ticket items for any purpose are going to have a very tough time being enacted. The fact is the money's not there."

The report was adopted unanimously on May 1, with the understanding that nine of the 34 commissioners would write a separate chapter dissenting from the majority views on health care. That chapter is included in the final report.

The majority would require employers to provide health insurance for employees and their children or to pay a new tax to finance coverage under a public program.

The dissenters, including two Bush administration officials, said that proposal would lead to "skyrocketing health costs and health care of poorer quality."

■ Johnny Carson's son killed in car crash

CAYUCOS, Calif. (AP) — Entertainer Johnny Carson's son was killed when his car went over an embankment on a rural road, authorities said today.

Richard Wolcott Carson, 39, was thrown from his 4-wheel-drive vehicle in Friday's accident, said Officer Russ Johnson of the California Highway Patrol.

Carson was driving on Cayucos Drive when he was apparently distracted and the car went over a 124-foot embankment, Johnson said.

The narrow roadway is a service road adjacent to Highway 1 near the beach community of Cayucos, 180 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

Johnny Carson could not be immediately reached through his attorney or the "Tonight Show" at NBC's Burbank studios.

Richard Carson was one of three Carson adult children.

Johnson said the hilly, scenic area overlooking the ocean is popular with artists.

"It appears as though he was taking photographs. There was camera equipment alongside the road," he said. "It appears his attention was just diverted. He wasn't traveling at a high rate of speed or carelessly."

Carson's vehicle landed on its top in a concrete culvert, Johnson said. Carson apparently died instantly of internal injuries, he said.

■ Gore wants formal probe of alleged deal

WASHINGTON — A Democratic senator called Monday for a formal investigation of persistent allegations that the 1980 Reagan-Bush campaign cut a deal with Iran to delay release of 52 American hostages until after the presidential election.

"Some deals should never be made, whether arms for hostages or hostages for elections," said Sen. Al Gore, D-Tenn., who ran unsuccesfully for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination and is considered a possible candidate in 1992.

Gore said he would introduce a resolution calling for an independent commission to investigate whether William Casey, then Reagan's campaign manager, met with Iranians in Europe in the summer of 1980 and conspired to hold up the hostages' release to gain advantage in the November election.

Gore became part of a growing group of congressional Democrats who believe the allegations must be investigated by a body with authority to subpoena evidence and place witnesses under oath.

■ Court rules sources may sue journalists

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court ruled Monday that a news organization can be held liable for damages if it breaks a reporter's pact and reveals the identity of a confidential source.

"The First Amendment does not confer on the press a constitutional right to disregard promises that would otherwise be enforced under state law," the court said in a 5-4 ruling.

In a case involving Minnesota's two largest newspapers, the court warned that the Constitution's guarantee of free expression does not mean news organizations are specially shielded from statutes not directly dealing with mass communications.

The ultimate result of the ruling will be less information available to the public, said Jane Kirtley of the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press.

"It's a terrible decision," she said, and will bring more litigation and "strained relationships between sources and reporters."

Army document: Reverse homosexual ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Army document proposes reversing the service branch's longstanding ban on homosexuals, saying there is no proof they pose any greater risk to security or morale than heterosexuals.

However, Army spokeswoman Capt. Barbara Goodno said Monday the policy "remains unchanged." The document was drafted by an action officer 18 months ago and has not been approved by the department, she said.

The unsigned and undated document was released by the Justice Department in its defense of a lawsuit by Joseph C. Steffan, a homosexual who is challenging his 1987 dismissal from the U.S. Naval Academy.

Steffan was dismissed six weeks before graduation based on his statement that he is a homosexual. He was not accused of homosexual conduct.

All branches of military service ban homosexuals.

The Army document, which is not official, suggests ending the ban in that branch of service, provided that homosexuals "exercise appropriate restraint and discretion with regard to their sexual behavior."

"Current research has not identified that homosexual personnel are any greater security risk than are their heterosexual counterparts," it said, adding that regarding issues of discipline and morale, "clearer distinctions are being drawn between sexual orientation and sexual behavior."

Goodno said the action officer, who she did not identify, drafted the document on the premise that a court might rule the ban on homosexuals in military service was unconstitutional. However, courts have upheld the policy and the document has not received further action, she said.

Steffan's lawyer, Sandra Lowe of the Lambda Legal Defense and Education Fund in New York, said she believes the document still is significant.

"This is an admission that they have been discriminating on the basis of no evidence," she said. "I think it is an admission on their part that it is time to change the policy, that the policy is based on no evidence at all and simple prejudice."

Justice Department spokesman Joseph Krovisky confirmed the document was released by his agency, but said he did not know when it was written or by whom.

The Army's traditional policy states, "Homosexuality is incompatible with military service. The presence in the military environment of persons who engage in homosexual conduct or who, by their statements, demonstrate a propensity to engage in homosexual conduct, seriously impairs the accomplishment of the military mission."

The policy says the presence of homosexuals in the military harms discipline, morale, trust among service members and the ability to assign them to places where they often must live and work in close quarters with little privacy.

The Army rule mirrors Defense Department policy relating to all branches of the military.

In 1988, the Pentagon rejected a draft report by its Personnel Security Research and Education Center that recommended reconsidering the ban on homosexuals in military service. The report concluded that there was no evidence that homosexuals were a greater security risk or more liable to blackmail than heterosexuals.

A Pentagon official wrote at the time that the report went beyond its mandate to consider the security risk posed by homosexuals in military service.

Lawrence Korb, a senior fellow at the liberal Brookings Institution and a former assistant defense secretary for manpower, installations and logistics, said he had read the newly released Army document. While there is no indication that it reflects a change in Army policy, he said he too considers it important.

"In my view, this is the beginning of the end of the policy," Korb said.

Northrop settles whistle-blower case for $8 million

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — Northrop Corp. has agreed to pay $8 million to settle a lawsuit by two of its former employees who said the company falsified tests on parts for the Air Force's Cruise missile.

The settlement, which has been agreed to by Northrop but is still awaiting the approval of the Justice Department, comes 16 months after Northrop pleaded guilty to criminal charges in the case.

It is one of the largest settlements to date in a flurry of lawsuits by employees who have reported wrongdoing by military contractors.

There have been dozens of such suits in recent years by whistle-blowing employees. The suits have been filed under the Federal False Claims Act, which gives plaintiffs who can prove the Government has been defrauded a share of any proceeds from a settlement or judgment in the case.

The Cruise missile case was filed against Northrop in 1987 by Leo Barajas and Patricia Meyer, both employees at Northrop's plant in Pomona, Calif.

They charged that Northrop and some of its executives had improperly tested guidance devices called flight data transmitters and had deliberately reported false results to the Air Force.

The suit by Barajas and Ms. Meyer was the basis for much of the subsequent criminal case against Northrop. In the criminal case, Northrop pleaded guilty to fraud charges related to testing irregularities in both the Cruise missile program and an unrelated aircraft-parts program. The company paid a $17 million fine.

After the civil suit was filed, Northrop voluntarily closed the Pomona plant and dismissed a number of employees it said were involved in the improper testing.

The plant manager, Clarence Gonsalves, pleaded guilty to criminal charges last year and was sentenced to three years in prison and fined $10,000.

Many of the cases filed under the False Claims Act are still working their way through the courts, although several large ones have been settled in the last several years.

In one, the Voi-Shan subsidiary of Fairchild Industries agreed to pay a settlement of $14.5 million.

Lawyers involved in whistle-blower litigation said there had a number of settlements in excess of $10 million.

In the Northrop case, Barajas and Ms. Meyer together will receive from 15 percent to 25 percent of the $8 million settlement.

A close encounter of a nude kind

WASHINGTON — Glazed-eyed lawmakers accustomed to lobbyists peddling tax breaks, fertilizer subsidies and other gimmicks got a little relief last week.

The nudists came to call.

They actually had their clothes on when they descended on Capitol Hill, but the 100-plus members of the Naturist Action Committee had a simple goal: They want the federal government to post signs on federally owned beaches warning unsuspecting sun-seekers that they're about to enter a "clothing-optional recreation area."

"The signs are just a way of telling people, 'Hey, you may encounter naked people on this beach,'" said Kevin Kearney, legislative director for the committee.

Nude beaches on federal property include Baker Beach in Golden Gate National Park in San Francisco, Fire Island in New York, and Padre Island seashore in Texas.

"I think they enjoyed talking to us," Kearney said of their lobbying visits. "The thing with our issue is that it's not boring, people are interested in it."

"The only problem was, who would go the office of Jesse Helms," said Kearney, referring to the conservative North Carolina Republican senator.

■ Did you hear the one?

WASHINGTON — There are Bush jokes and there are Quayle jokes but there aren't many Bush-Quayle jokes. Here's one.

Shevardnadze

Former Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze was the first foreign Oval Office visitor after President Bush returned from his treatment for an overactive thyroid. The Soviet wanted to find out how sharp Bush was so he said, "Mr. President, here's a riddle for you. Who is the son of my father who is not my brother?"

Bush thought for a moment and said he didn't know.

"It's me," Shevardnadze replied.

After a hearty laugh, Bush picked up the phone and called Vice President Quayle: "Dan, I've got a riddle for you. Who is the son of my father who is not my brother?"

Quayle replied, "I'll get right back to you, Mr. President," and called Defense Secretary Dick Cheney.

"Why, that's obvious," Cheney told Quayle, "it's me."

The vice president called Bush back and said, "I have the answer, Mr. President. It's Dick Cheney."

Bush shot back: "No, you idiot, it's Eduard Shevardnadze!"

■ Rich man, funny man

WASHINGTON — What if you're one of the richest men in America, bear the name of a great robber baron, went to prep school at Phillips Exeter, graduated from Harvard (twice!) — and are asking coal miners, farmers and other ordinary Americans for their vote?

Well, if your name is John D. Rockefeller IV, you try to try to defuse the "rich man issue" with little jokes about your wealth. Then you hope that your audience won't hold it against you that your family's fortune derives from the old Standard Oil trust or that your relatives used to run Chase Manhattan Bank.

Rockefeller, a Democratic member of the U.S. Senate from West Virginia, has been traveling to key primary states to help him make a decision on whether he should seek the Democratic presidential nomination next year. He often begins his speeches with a Rockefeller joke, as he did recently after Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, introduced him to the University Athletic Club in Iowa City.

"Tom Harkin and I have a great deal in common," Rockefeller told his audience. "As kids, we both enjoyed playing with blocks. He played with A, B and C. I played with 42nd Street, 43rd Street and Madison Avenue."

Another joke Rockefeller tells on himself is a good news-bad news story that begins with his good news: he has high name recognition among Iowa voters.

"The bad news," Rockefeller continues, "is that one-third of the people think I'm the banker who foreclosed on their farm, one-third think I run the oil company that raised the price of gasoline, and one-third think I'm the guy who sold Manhattan to the Japanese."

Violins, please.

— Charles J. Lewis

■ Mingling with the folks

WASHINGTON — President and Mrs. Bush have a habit of quietly slipping down to the White House fence to greet stunned tourists.

Bush

Mrs. Bush said in a recent interview that she and the president took a poll during one recent sunset visit to the South Lawn fence. "There wasn't an American in the crowd," she said, adding that the tourists were from "Germany, everyplace, Japan."

Mrs. Bush

That night the Bushes were walking their springer spaniels, Millie and Ranger. Mrs. Bush made another visit late one night following a state dinner. She was wearing her evening dress and running shoes.

Despite Mrs. Bush's efforts to mingle with common folk, she hasn't been to a supermarket in years. She was surprised to learn recently that supermarket delicatessens now stock baked chicken and salad bars, enough for a "complete meal," she said. "I really don't shop," she confided.

— Matthew C. Quinn

■ One-on-one with Dan

WASHINGTON — It wasn't easy, but Rep. Ray McGrath, R-N.Y., a member of the House and Ways Committee, refused to give in to a full-court press lobbying effort recently by the panel's all-powerful chairman, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski.

As a practical joke, Rostenkowski, D-Ill., decided that McGrath should name his newborn son Dan, and printed and distributed buttons to committee members reading, "Friend of Dan McGrath." McGrath got one that read, "Father of Dan McGrath."

But McGrath named his son Peter Joseph.

"Ray thought one Dan in his life was enough," said a McGrath spokesman.

Club must admit public

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — A trendy Los Angeles nightclub must stop refusing admission to people who are not dressed "cool" or lack the proper club image and admit the general public, a state judge has ruled.

Administrative Law Judge Milford A. Maron ruled that the Vertigo nightclub must post a sign stating its open admission policy.

The ruling issued Friday in Los Angeles was the result of an Alcohol Beverage Control Board complaint.

HUNTER: R&B artist still dazzles the audiences went to this club called The Raven. I had never been to place like it in my life. It was $1.50 to get in and I just about had a fit."

(From 1A)

But Hunter paid the money and heard a blues guitarist.

The player was B.B. King and the night was one that changed Hunter's life forever.

"I saw all these people screaming and hollering. And I thought, if he can do something with the guitar, so can I. I've been playing ever since. I've played with some top ones too — Aretha Franklin, Big Joe Turner and James Brown. I've been halfway around this country."

Hunter has traveled the better part of 30 years, but these days he stays within a calling shot of his home.

"I just kind of got tired of it. I stayed out there for a lot of years and even went out on my own. Not big time or anything, but I had a pretty good circle I traveled in."

Hunter said he tried to copy King's style for awhile, but eventually got away from it. "I'm pretty much Long John these days, but I know I thought there was no music like what B.B. King played."

Long John got his stage name from a club manager because he was tall and skinny.

While he still can play the blues, Hunter said he has steered more toward rock 'n' roll from the 1950s and 1960s.

But the R&B element is inescapable, especially in his haunting rendition of "The House of the Rising Sun."

Hunter said his guitar playing and showmanship have slowed over the years, especially after a night in Juarez, Mexico, when he leaped from a balcony onto a stage.

"When I first started, I did a lot of stupid things. . . . I don't know what prompted me to do that. I think I scared half the people to death, but I was young and stupid then."

Hunter, who doesn't drink or smoke, said if he's matured as a musician, it's only because he finally has learned to deal with people in clubs who always ask the same questions.

"How long have you been playing? Or, how did you learn how to do that?," Hunter said. "I've gotten better about that now, but I used to run and hide."

Hunter said he still is amused at his audiences whenever he begins playing his guitar with one hand. "Anyone can play the guitar with one hand, but they think it's amazing. Most musicians just don't do it."

The father of three, Hunter said none of his children play music. "They haven't seen me play a whole lot, but when they do, they just love it. I just don't have a chance to see them that often."

Hunter said he plans to play another three years, then retire. "I don't want to be an old granddaddy on stage. When you get older, you just get where you want to sit around and get fat," he said, joking.

JAZZ: Players love the art form, but it lacks a forum

(From 1A)

comparison to what's coming."

While there are no forums for today's artists and their music, that's not the case where "traditional" jazz — from swing to bop — is concerned.

Each year, nationally renowned jazz professionals come to West Texas for the Odessa Jazz Party and the Midland Jazz Classic.

Ralph Sutton, a jazz pianist, who appeared at Odessa's party in May, said he enjoys the opportunity to play for an audience that appreciates good jazz music. "Jazz is something that's accepted all over the world and that's because it's the only original thing to come out of this country."

That's the point of both jazz festivals — to expose others to the beginning of the jazz era that made stars of the likes of Duke Ellington, Jack Teagarden, Joe Turner, Woody Herman and Stan Getz.

Traditional jazz artists, unlike contemporary players, also receive strong backing through the West Texas Jazz Society, whose goal has been to educate young people about jazz as well as to expose others to the music through a series of yearly headliner concerts.

In April, the society brought in Ken Peplowski and Dan Barrett, two traditional jazz musicians, who performed before 1,500 fifth graders at Midland High School as part of a morning clinic.

"Whenever we bring these professionals in, we make it a point to reach these young people," said Mrs. Jeri Hubbard, the society's president. "If other areas did as much as Midland and Odessa, jazz would have a completely new image."

And image is a problem.

Despite all their efforts, attracting new listeners is a continual, on-going effort, particularly in an area where audience loyalty is split between country and rock.

Odessan Margaret Gillham, another society member, said there has been talk of incorporating the music of blues artists with jazz performers who visit the area because of its resurgence among the young.

Gillham said one problem jazz faces — particularly traditional jazz — is that many people look at it as "old folks" music. "But a lot of the musicians we bring in are in their 30s."

"We're making some headway. We've just been so encouraged with the impact we've had on the grade-school kids." They look forward to the clinics, she said. "I think they approach it with a more open mind."

Odessa businessman Ernest Schur, who organized this year's jazz party, said he thinks traditional jazz is coming back, but admits it must compete with other musical interests.

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Mark Lowe, who operates Mainstream Music in Odessa, shows a guitar to Bert Whitaker. Lowe also plays electric bass with the Dow Jones Average and the Rob Hunt Trio.

"I think what we need to do to promote jazz is to get the music departments of the schools more interested in it and playing it. Certainly, the parties here and in Midland have done a lot to acquaint people."

Bobby Crues, organizer of this year's Midland Jazz Classic, Oct. 3-6, said limited radio availability of jazz complicates exposing people to the music. KMND 1510-AM is the only area station with regularly scheduled jazz programming.

"And that's the only radio jazz around, other than some occasional programming by the two public radio stations. A lot of them (stations) probably approach it from a cost basis."

Dr. Donald Grant, director of Midland College's jazz ensemble, said jazz, in general, is enjoyed by a select few.

"Speaking as someone who has something to do with music education in this area, jazz is neglected because it's not available. If you wanted to go out for an evening of listening, it's just not possible to find a club that features a jazz group."

Grant gives credit to both cities for making the attempt, but he added that he's aware that the audience in attendance is not young.

"While there are those of us who enjoy big band and the classics, there are also those who would like to hear a little more on the contemporary side . . . artists like Spyro Gyra, Chuck Mangione and Wynton Marsalis."

Grant believes Marsalis is probably the most likely bridge between classic and contemporary jazz for today's younger audiences. "He's one who has the talent, ability and understanding of what takes to broaden an audience's taste."

Just what jazz is or what it should be is debated by local artists themselves. Jim Ross and Carvel Mills, members of the Dow Jones Average, a traditional jazz quartet, believe today's artists need to get back to the core.

"If Carvel and I were young today, we would be playing differently, but we still would understand the basic idea . . . harmony will always be the structure all artists fall back on. It is the mathematics of music," Ross said.

Added Mills: "As we progress, there will always be new innovations, new electronics and gadgetry that enter the picture, but it all comes back to the mainstream . . . basic big band-type jazz."

Many younger artists say that while they can appreciate that, they're interested in playing music that today's generation can relate to.

"It's like Howard Roberts, the famous guitar player, once said, 'People don't know what they want, they want what they know,' " said Midland guitarist Robert Lee, who along with partner David Watkins, mixes a little jazz in each week at Venezia restaurant where they regularly play.

Lee said it's a musician's job to bring to bring an audience to new heights. "Right now, there's myself, David and a few others in Odessa trying to do some things. If we had a jazz station . . . it would make all the difference in the world. As it is, avant garde jazz just isn't big here."

Lee's partner Watkins said he wishes there was a forum available for artists who love to play jazz. "I like it because it forces you to think on your feet. Improvisation is essentially the art of composition."

What Watkins likes best about it are the "neat little accidents" that can happen while a performer is playing — unlike any other musical form.

Risky Bizness' Love said that although styles of jazz vary, there's no reason to expose the public to one and not the other.

Love, who works with snythesizers and teaches a course at Midland College, said he sees one form of jazz as an outgrowth of another. "I don't want to drive any wedges between the young and old, but jazz didn't stop with the swing era of the 1940s."

The problem with all jazz, according to Grant, is that society is "musically functional." In other words, people like being comfortable with what they know.

"But Woody Herman used to say, 'If you don't move forward, you might as well not perform,' " Grant said.

Of course, making that appeal hasn't been easy, as demonstrated at one concert held in Midland a few year ago.

Maynard Ferguson performed at Midland High School, but hardly a soul showed up. "You could have chosen your seat. It was vacant. His band featured guitar, rock and fusion media. . . . You don't see him with his big band that much anymore," Grant said.

LaCroix said part of the problem is the word jazz itself. "There's a misnomer about what that word means. Jazz to to some people means music of that (traditional) era, but jazz is a certain rhythm and harmonic concept . . . a certain style, the way it's played."

He compared it to new country vs. traditional country. "Some people said after Hank Williams died that country music had ended, and that's the same with jazz. I don't think jazz is a definable word. The word I like to use is improvisational music."

LaCroix said the problem that exists between what people view as traditional and progressive is the idea of a "rock element" creeping into the music. "It's louder, there's no question about that. And it has the element of today's technology. There's no denying that, but it's still improvisation."

Those interviewed for this series — particularly contemporary local artists — said they would welcome the opportunity to play at either jazz festival as a means of connecting the past with the present.

But gaining popularity — especially with what Grant calls the VH-1 audience, who no longer care about live performance, is unlikely. "Besides, the more creative musicians are, the more they're shunned by society."

Mark Lowe, who operates Mainstream Music in Odessa and plays electric bass with the Dow Jones Average and the Rob Hunt Trio, said it's a shame there's no audience to support jazz activity.

"It's unfortunate, because I think there are some good players out there who would do it just for the fun of it. There's just no place around here to go and see it."

Don't rush into frozen Antarctica

Antarctica: remote, forbidding, unspoiled and, except for some scientists, tourists and fishermen, uninhabited. Environmentalists would like to keep it that way — forever.

Others, tempted by the possibility of oil and mineral deposits, are loath to rule one-tenth of the earth's surface off limits to commercial exploitation.

Two months ago in Madrid, the 26 voting members of the 30-year-old Antarctic Treaty, including the U.S., tentatively settled on a compromise. It would prohibit mining for 50 years, after which the ban could be lifted only if all present members of the treaty concurred.

There is one big threat to final agreement — the U.S. government; forces inside the State and Interior departments oppose final ratification. They believe that the 50-year ban is too long and the requirements for lifting it too severe.

That position is risky, ecologically and politically. Viewed from afar, Antarctica seems a self-contained ecosystem, so distant from the industrialized world as to be irrelevant. Yet trifling with Antarctica's fragile environment could have profound global consequences.

The frigid waters of the Southern Ocean, for example, absorb carbon dioxide far more efficiently than warm waters elsewhere. Carbon dioxide is the main contributor to the so-called greenhouse effect — the feared warming of the earth's atmosphere.

Any warming of the ice cap and the adjacent waters by industrial activity would decrease the ocean's ability to act as a "sink" for carbon dioxide. A related danger is that oil spills and pollution would kill the photoplankton that play a major role in converting carbon dioxide into oxygen.

Antarctica's marine system is also unusually rich in nutrients. Because the Southern Ocean is a force in establishing global tides and currents, these nutrients supply much of the food chain. Scientists concede that some of their fears are speculative. But that is reason enough to provide far more time to assess the consequences of commerce.

In two separate measures last year, the House and Senate directed the administration to work toward an "indefinite" ban on commercial activity in Antarctica.

President Bush signed the measures and vowed to take a "leadership" role. For the administration to reverse itself now would infuriate Congress, damage Bush's credibility and anger allies — who set aside their own commercial ambitions in favor of the 50-year ban.

Multinational oil and mineral companies have shown little interest in Antarctica's inhospitable terrain. Perhaps in 50 years they will. And perhaps by then ways will have been found to minimize the impact of ports, towns, storage facilities, waste disposal sites, roads, airstrips and pipelines. But even in that unlikely event, the decision to invade Antarctica ought never to be made lightly or quickly.

Yeltsin win signals desire for reforms

Boris Yeltsin has won a mandate for radical economic and political reforms in Russia. His overwhelming victory as the first popularly elected president in the 1,000-year history of the Republic of Russia signals the likely end of strong central control in the Soviet Union and the emergence of its republics from the oppressive shadows of the Communist Party-dominated government in Moscow.

His greatest obstacle to accomplishing his radical reforms will be the Soviet military, which has a presence in nearly three-quarters of Russia's workplaces and absorbs a large share of the republic's economic output.

There have been no details on how Yeltsin proposes to accomplish his lofty goals. Success could be a long time coming, although he expects to show progress by the end of 1992. . . .

With the mandate he received from the people of the Russian republic, Yeltsin could play a key role in the peaceful internal demise of the Soviet empire.

Senators try to switch some highway funds

Mass transit advocates in the U.S. Senate are looking for a way to use part of the new $113 billion highway bill on trains and buses instead.

U.S. Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., is working on a bill to allow states to spend $42 billion of the highway funding on mass transit.

That means states like Pennsylvania and New Jersey could use billions in federal highway money for mass transit, while the Montanas of the nation could pave away to their heart's content.

It's hard to imagine who could oppose the compromise measure, but the highway lobby probably will.

Moynihan argues states should have more flexibility in deciding their transportation needs since the Interstate Highway System was officially completed last year.

We think that state officials are better suited than federal ones to determine their highway and transit needs.

Moynihan's bill at least gives transit officials the chance to make their case.

Taxpayers finance posh IRS seminars

WASHINGTON — The next time you pass a golf resort or honeymoon hot spot don't be surprised if the hotel marquee reads: Welcome IRS. Top managers of the Internal Revenue Service like the good life — and have no apparent qualms about taxpayers footing the bill.

Anderson

One group recently returned from a getaway at a golf resort in the Pocono Mountains, and last month IRS officials spent a week on the sunny shores of Maryland. Both junkets were labeled learning seminars — a euphemism that might flag any alert IRS agent if employed by an everyday taxpayer.

Our associate Scott Sleek has learned that just these two outings cost about $122,600, an amount that doesn't include travel expenses paid to the attendees. The IRS thinks its workers need nice scenery in order to learn. Agency officials told us that the sessions help the workers maximize the training they receive because they have no distractions and develop a team attitude.

The IRS apparently believes that hay rides, bonfires, water volleyball and body toning — all of which were included in the itineraries for the trip — are not distractions.

The most recent outing at the Poconos involved managers at the IRS' Philadelphia Service Center, who were there to learn about managing a culturally diverse workforce. Over two weeks in early June, the Philadelphia managers spent nearly three days on a rotating basis in the program, held at the Pocono Manor Inn and Golf Resort.

According to its own promotional material, Pocono Manor includes two 18-hole championship golf courses, outdoor tennis courts, volleyball, indoor and outdoor swimming, a sauna, a trap shooting range, a Nautilus fitness center, bicycle rentals, horseback riding and racketball.

Each of the 380 attendees was charged a government rate of $74.54 per night, costing the government about $88,000 excluding travel expenses. It's the fourth year in a row the IRS has held the program in the Poconos.

Last month, 100 internal auditors from the IRS's Washington office attended an educational outing at the Princess Royale All Suite Resort in the beachfront town of Ocean City, Md. The IRS said the participants were briefed on the agency's new modernized computer system.

The training ran May 20 through May 24, ending just in time to kick off the Memorial Day weekend. The government covered the $59 fee for each auditor plus meal expenses at a total cost of $34,600.

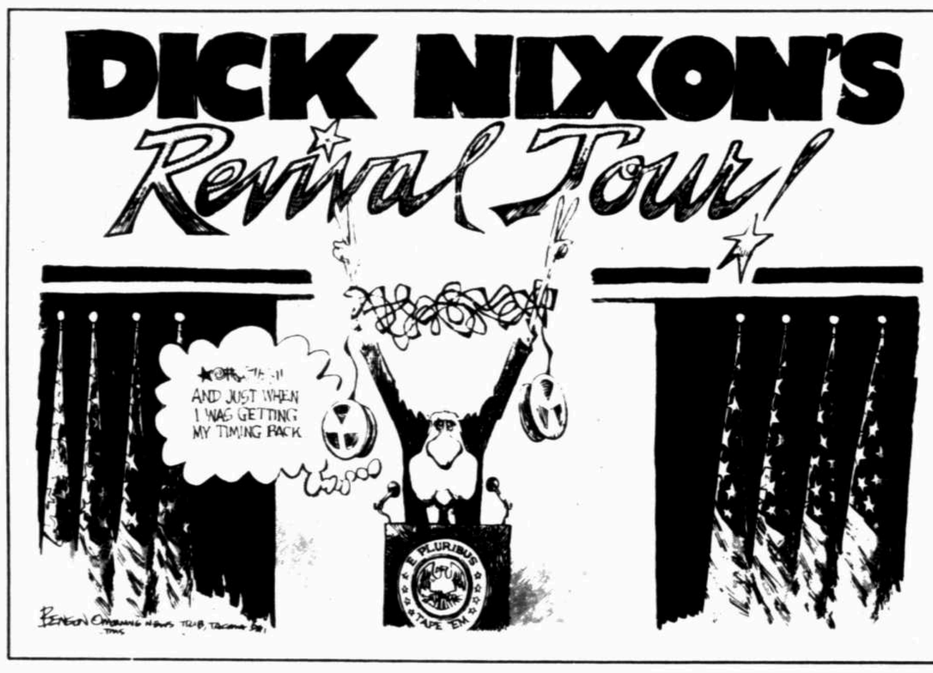

The IRS seems to enjoy luring its employees to cozy mountain or ocean-side retreats. We reported in April that the IRS put on an employee ethics seminar at a cozy resort in the eastern panhandle of West Virginia costing at least $124,500.

If the nation's tax collectors are supposed to be watchdogs for tax fraud and abuse, maybe they should realize that virtue starts at home. Federal funds are being needlessly spent on activities that could be conducted without views of green fairways and sandy beaches.

These expenditures were made at the very time that Congress kept many federal health officials from attending a recent AIDS conference in Italy. Lawmakers threatened to cut off federal funding for AIDS programs unless the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services slashed the number of scientists it planned to send to the conference from 300 to 100. Irate health officials argued it would hinder the exchange of vital information on how to combat the deadly plague.

The IRS's junketeering ways suggest it could use a dose of its own medicine: an audit.

CHARLEY REESE

Teachers know best; we need to ask them

A lot of people are talking about education reform and they don't know what they're talking about or they are talking about it as a red herring.

Education isn't a new fad or a complex process. Adults have been educating children for millennia. Right now, good solid education is taking place in huts and hovels as well as in modern classrooms all around the globe.

Reese

Right here in the United States there are thousands of excellent teachers who know exactly how to educate children. And one of the problems with so-called educational reform is that these are the very people no one wants to listen to. Frequently they are not allowed to speak publicly.

But, first, let's get rid of some of the red herrings.

Public education cannot reconstruct neighborhoods destroyed by the government's failure to adopt rational economic policies.

Public education is not responsible for the federal deficit, for the mismanagement of American business, or for the moral decline of Americans in general.

Public education is not responsible for the drug problem, for street crime, for gang violence, prostitution and the homeless.

Public education is not responsible for parents who abandon or never acknowledge their children, for parents and boyfriends who abuse or neglect children, or for a welfare system that promotes teen pregnancy and male irresponsibility.

What politicians and society in general have cleverly done is dump many of the problems they are responsible for onto the school system. One beginning of true reform will be when we start confronting politicians and saying on behalf of the teachers:

Look, they can teach a healthy, normal child and do a darn good job of it, but they are not psychiatrists, mental retardation specialists, social workers, policemen, physical therapists, medical doctors, sex therapists, public health workers, martial artists and substitute parents.

Furthermore, children with severe mental, emotional, and physical problems cannot receive the treatment they need in a public classroom and all you are doing by forcing them into it is making it impossible for teachers to educate the normal children.

As for you, Ms. Mom and Mr. Dad, if you don't have the gumption to teach your children civility and reasonably civilized behavior, don't dump your failures in the classroom. The whole key to education reform is to create conditions that will allow the good teachers already in the system to teach.

To be sure, there are faults to be found in the educational bureaucracy and teachers as a whole are no more likely to be uniformly perfect than any other collection of human beings.

Still, I think public education is better than it's being given credit for being. I think it is often made the scapegoat for problems it didn't create and can't solve. I think some of the standards by which it is being judged are faulty and not revealing of the true situation.

Most of all I think classroom teachers, not self-appointed spokesmen, need an opportunity to share their expertise and experience with the public.

To the business big shots and politicians who are now puffing out their chests and yakking about educational reform, I would like to say, on behalf of all the wonderful teachers who have been laboring in the classrooms for years, where the hell have you been? You politicians control the flow of funds and the rules of the systems and you business big shots control the politicians. You're flapping your lips about a problem you, not teachers, created.

And, Mr. Reformer, don't expect teachers to swoon. You guys haven't done such a hot job with business and government so it doesn't help your tattered credibility to pretend you know a lot about teaching.

Power of life, death rests with high court

Everybody on both sides of the issue knows Louisiana's anti-abortion law is headed for the U.S. Supreme Court for final adjudication. Such journeys have become conventional in the 18 years since the high court, in Roe vs. Wade, took to itself the power of life and death. A state moves to restrict abortion; the high court applying Roe gives or withholds permission.

Murchison

The journey of the new Louisiana law could have a different ending. The court could decide to inter Roe itself in the constitutional graveyard.

The new law, enacted over Gov. Buddy Roemer's veto, directly challenges Roe. It outlaws abortion except to save the mother's life, and in cases of rape and incest. Reaction, from Roe supporters, is predictably vocal and virulent. "This law strips women of their dignity and their rights," moans the New York Times. "Women will be butchered" is the exasperated prediction of Norma McCorvey, who was the Roe (a fictitious legal name) in the original lawsuit.

Can we pause for a few seconds? What is all this about? The presumptive "butchery" of women seeking abortions? Ms. McCorvey notwithstanding, that is the palest shadow of this enormous and complex affair.

I said that the court, in Roe vs. Wade, snatched from the states the power of life and death. Just so. The really crucial aspect of this power, however, the justices did not retain for themselves. They passed it like a basketball, over the heads of lawmakers and into the arms of pregnant women as a class.

The justices said to these women something no court ever had said to anyone: Here, you choose. You and you alone. Not fathers, not grandparents, not physicians or clergymen, certainly not the new, tiny mass of life in the womb. No, the mother must choose. The mother alone.

Is this not a shivery business, this handing over godlike power by edict of six members of one judicial body?

Though on the anti-abortion side myself, I have observed these 18 years past that there are honorable people on both sides of the issue. I observe also that many folk are queasy over the whole idea of deciding who is worthy to live and who is a useless encumbrance. On the one hand, an unwanted baby; on the other hand — a baby.

In democratic society, the power of life and death properly rests with the people, speaking corporately. This means, for better or worse, speaking through their lawmakers.

Legislatures are full of nerds and nuts — just like newspapers, banks, churches, law firms and everything else you can think of. This doesn't overthrow the premise that legislators alone represent the totality of the people, with all the people's ambivalences and contradictions.

Roe vs. Wade, which undercut this historic presumption, richly deserves to be overturned. Not that its overturning would mean the automatic extinction of the "right" to an abortion. It would mean only that states like Louisiana, desirous of restricting abortion, could do so. This is how things get done in a federal system like our own.

What about the "plight" of the mother seeking an abortion? Leave aside, if you like, the plight of the child she carries. Nothing prevents the mother from taking herself to a state where abortion clinics run flat out. Nothing, for that matter, impairs her right of resort to the moral or medical measures that prevent conception altogether.

Roe vs. Wade fosters the feeling, widespread in so many departments of life, that ours is a no-pain, no-consequences society; that whatever we want is ours by entitlement, with society obligated to fork over.

The notion that society has a responsibility to permit — even to pay for — the extinction of its smallest, most helpless members is rubbish we will be largely rid of the day the Supreme Court reverses Roe. May that day come soon.

■ Premier urges republics not to secede

LJUBLJANA, Yugoslavia — In a gloomy 11th-hour speech before the Croatian Parliament, Yugoslavia's prime minister appealed on Monday for Slovenia and Croatia, this country's two most prosperous republics, to halt plans to declare themselves independent on Wednesday.

The prime minister, Ante Markovic, who has broad support abroad but only scant popularity throughout this country, warned that further decay of the moribund, six-republic Yugoslav federation and unilateral moves by Slovenia and Croatia to break it up could lead to an economic and social catastrophe.

His comments echoed the dire warning offered by Secretary of State James A. Baker III, who, on a one-day visit to Belgrade last Friday, pleaded with the leaders of Yugoslavia's republics to hold together, suggesting that the current restive situation was reminiscent of the situation in the Balkans just before the outbreak of World War I.

■ Hardliners attack Gorbachev on Western aid

MOSCOW — Hardline members of the Soviet Parliament on Monday pursued their attack on President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's overture to the West, charging that Soviet moves were not being reciprocated from abroad.

Yuri Blokhin, a Soyuz leader who was attacked by name last week by Gorbachev, said at the news conference: "More and more conciliatory steps are being demanded from the Soviet Union. Our country is really showing its willingness to remove tension between nations, but there is no movement from the other side."

Invoking the cold-war specter of Western plots, Kryuchkov said that the West was seeking to undermine the Soviet Union by pretending to support perestroika, Gorbachev's plan for economic and political restructuring.

■ North Korea, U.S. agree on repatriation issue

PANMUNJOM, Korea — A U.S. senator announced here Monday that Washington has reached an agreement in principle with North Korea on the repatriation of the remains of American servicemen listed as missing in action in the Korean War.

The announcement, by Sen. Robert C. Smith, R-N.H., came after North Korea handed over 11 sets of remains thought to be those of American servicemen.

Washington has made settlement of the question of American servicemen still unaccounted for since the Korean War, numbering more than 8,000, a condition for better relations with North Korea.

Smith was speaking on the eve of the 41st anniversary of the start of the Korean War, after two days of talks with North Korean officials in this village on the frontier between North and South Korea.

He said they had agreed in principle to set up a joint committee to oversee the recovery and repatriation of the remains of missing Americans.

■ Clark Air Base damage totals $300 million

MANILA, Philippines — Mount Pinatubo was rattled by 124 tremors Monday, showering ash on two northern provinces, and officials said the first estimates showed Clark Air Base suffered $300 million in damage from the volcano.

The Philippines government sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said they were given the estimate by U.S. officials, who told them talks on a new lease for U.S. bases in the Philippines must wait until surveys are completed.

The lease on Clark and the other U.S. bases expires Sept. 16. Talks on an extension had bogged down before the eruptions over how much Washington must pay and how long the installations can remain.

Nearly 2,000 more Americans flew home Monday, U.S. officials said. Pinatubo's eruptions have blanketed the countryside with deep ash and forced the evacution of Clark, 10 miles east of the volcano, home to 15,000 Air Force personnel and dependents.

■ Last painter of rich Mexican era dies at 91

MEXICO CITY — Rufino Tamayo, the last of an extraordinary group of painters who defined modern Mexican art for the world, died Monday of pneumonia. He was 91.

A spokesman at the National Institute of Nutrition, where Tamayo had been under intensive care since he was hospitalized 10 days ago after coming down with pneumonia, said he died Monday morning.

Tamayo was a prolific painter whose works spanned more than seven decades. His early paintings bear some of the trademarks shared by muralists Diego Rivera, Jose Orozco and David Siqueiros, whose lavish works combined Mexico's indigenous roots with modern techniques.

Scandal rocks Japan's 'Big Four'

Calls for reform follow fall of brokerage chiefs; Dow, Nikei tumble

Associated Press

TOKYO — A scandal over dubious dealings by Japan's "Big Four" brokerage houses brought down the presidents of two of the world's biggest securities firms Monday and increased calls for industry reform.

The scandal sent a ripple through stock markets, with prices falling sharply.

At the center of controversy is the practice of compensating the firms' wealthiest clients for their losses, a cushion that smaller investors don't get.

News reports have alleged that the four houses failed to report millions in taxable transactions incurred in the course of paying the compensation.

Yoshihisa Tabuchi of Nomura Securities Co., the world's largest securities firm, and Takuya Iwasaki of Nikko Securities Co. resigned as presidents of their firms.

News reports also have accused those two companies of making millions of dollars of loans to an underworld figure and pushing up prices of a stock in which he invested.

The main index on Tokyo's stock exchange fell 2.1 percent Monday, and an additional 1.3 percent after opening Tuesday. One broker said the drop reflected disgust with brokerage practices.

U.S. stocks also reacted to the scandal. The Dow Jones average fell by 52 points, triggering the New York Stock Exchange's "uptick rule" that limited program trading by computers for the rest of the session.

Japan's business practices have attracted growing scrutiny in the United States, where an increasing number of leading Japanese corporations, from automakers to computer manufacturers, are establishing a significant presence.

On Wall Street, Tokyo securities giants like Nomura and Nikko have subsidiaries that trade securities and make investments like any other U.S. brokerage house.

On the Tokyo Stock Exchange, the average stock prices of Japanese brokerage houses fell 5 percent Monday, reflecting 'disgust that brokers are colluding with their best clients.'

Both Nomura and Nikko announced Monday that top executives would not receive their annual bonuses, which last year averaged nearly $83,000 for Nomura's top 40 executives.

Iwasaki bowed before reporters at a news conference, saying he hoped his resignation "will be some apology to the society and industry." Tabuchi was teary-eyed as he announced his resignation at a separate news conference.

Iwasaki and Tabuchi both were named vice chairmen of their companies, leading some to wonder whether the companies were doing anything more than playing musical corporate chairs to improve their images.

"How will the people outside view the change in their status?" asked the Asahi Shimbun in its Tuesday editorial. "Will not the people on the street think that they were promoted from presidents to vice chairmen?"

In the past, such resignations have not necessarily ended careers or brought about change.

The Mainichi Shimbun said government heads should roll also. "The responsibility of the Finance Ministry is great ... If the ministry remains unscarred, the government is too irresponsible and unfair," an editorial in the newspaper said.

Parliament has yet to consider election reform laws promised after a bribery scandal toppled the government of Noboru Takeshita in 1989. In fact, Takeshita is one of several tainted politicians who may soon return to prominence, perhaps winning his old job back.

On the Tokyo Stock Exchange, the average stock prices of Japanese brokerage houses fell 5 percent Monday, reflecting "disgust that brokers are colluding with their best clients," said Mike Morizumi, an analyst with Lehman Brothers.

The drop in the Tokyo market affects some Americans who have mutual funds that invest overseas. In addition, many large U.S. institutional traders hold investments in the Japanese stock market.

For several days there have been media reports alleging that Nomura, Nikko, Daiwa Securities Co. and Yamaichi Securities Co. offered hundreds of millions of dollars in compensation to cover stock and bond losses.

The reports said the four houses failed to report a total of $143 million worth of taxable transactions incurred while paying the compensation.

The mass-circulation Asahi Shimbun also has reported that Nomura and Nikko arranged loans worth $258.9 million for Susumu Ishii, ex-leader of the Inagawa-kai underworld syndicate.

It said the two brokerages pushed up the price of shares in the railroad company Tokyu Corp. after Ishii made huge purchases of its stock.

The government has been trying to discourage securities companies from offering compensation to important clients, a preferential practice that critics say discourages smaller investors.

Two years ago, the Finance Ministry instructed securities companies to stop the practice in all circumstances, even though compensation is only considered illegal if it is offered to woo clients.

Nomura and Nikko have said they paid compensation but did not promise it to the clients.

Mitsuru Hasegawa, a spokesman for the Finance Ministry, said investigations were under way. He refused to comment further except to say that the ministry can penalize wrongdoing through admonitions, suspension of business licenses or cancellations of licenses.

"The series of incidents reported so far will undermine investors' confidence in the stock market," Finance Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto was quoted as saying by Kyodo News Service.

He said he hoped the disclosures would serve to clean up the two companies.

Alicia Ogawa, a senior analyst at S.G. Warburg and Co., said the outcry "demonstrates that there's a kind of growing consciousness that some of the old rules are no longer acceptable."

Peter Tasker, a strategist at Kleinwort Benson, said the scandals would boost the effort to crack down on questionable practices. But he added: "You cannot change ... a culture overnight."

Iraq renews war of words with Saudi Arabia

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq renewed its war of words with Saudi Arabia Monday after a three-month break, accusing the Saudis of sabotaging Arab efforts to solve the gulf crisis by joining with the United States.

In a broadcast on Baghdad radio, Information Minister Hamed Yousef Hammadi denounced "those who betrayed and sought help from foreigners against their nation and against the principles of true religion."

He criticized Saudi Arabia's "efforts to ruin attempts to solve the crisis within an Arab framework and their total reliance on United States and Atlantic forces to strike Iraq."

Hammadi said he was responding to remarks made Sunday by Saudi King Fahd that "included false accusations against Iraq and its leader."

The broadcast was monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp.

At a meeting with pilgrim leaders in Mina near Mecca, Fahd insisted that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein had ample opportunity to reach a diplomatic solution to Iraq's Aug. 2 occupation of Kuwait.

The king denounced "those who tried to distort the facts of the events in line with their whims and objectives."

He also took issue with earlier claims by Saddam that American troops had desecrated Islamic holy sites in Saudi Arabia.

On Monday, Hammadi accused the Saudis of "mortgaging the region and its resources to the United States and Western interests," Baghdad radio said.

"Saudi Arabia only cares about what satisfies the U.S. administration and what fits American policy, even if it contradicts the interests of the Arab and Islamic nations," he said.

Hammadi noted that Iraq had stopped its "media campaign (against Saudi Arabia) three months ago out of its concern to heal the wounds" of the Gulf War. Still, he said, the Saudis "continue their transgressions."

After the Kuwait invasion, Saddam encouraged Muslims to seize the Islamic holy sites at Mecca and Medina from the Al Saud dynasty. Saudi Arabia responded by vilifying the Iraqi leader in the media.

How good is the census?

If court orders, 1990 census may become first ever to estimate population

By Tim Bovee
Associated Press writer

■ An Analysis

WASHINGTON — The art of census-taking used to be straightforward. The government went out, counted people, reported the results to Congress, and that was that.

The population numbers were considered final.

But no more. The Census Bureau's count of 248.7 million people living in America last year is anything but final.

It has become the starting point for a debate over what — if anything — to do to try to make it more accurate.

Big city mayors and other critics charge the census misses disproportionate numbers of poor blacks and Hispanics in big cities — the people hardest to count. As a result, they say, their communities are shortchanged of political power and federal money.

Because of the census' racial, ethnic and class distortion, they say, the numbers should be corrected. To make the figure closer to the true population, they want the government to use estimates.

Traditionalists acknowledge there may be a bias in the figures but say it is unintentional.

They say the constitutional requirement for an "enumeration" of Americans every 10 years means a count, not an estimate. They insist the government can't change census numbers without a constitutional amendment.

The government is under a court order to decide by July 15 whether to correct the census by adding in people presumably missed. Whatever the decision, the courts are likely to have the last word.

If the government decides to change the numbers, it will be the first time in the census' 200-year history that the population figures have been an estimate, not a count.

The corrected numbers would be produced through statistical sampling, the same techniques used to produce political opinion polls or Nielsen TV ratings.

CENSUS FACT

Population

U.S. population growth since 1790. Figures are in millions:

Year	Pop.	Year	Pop.

The census always runs into criticism. President George Washington deplored what he thought was the failure of the first census in 1790 to count everyone.

The 1990 census, however, is the first in which the technical capability is at hand to give critics what they want: A correction not only of the national total but of everything down to the smallest neighborhood and hamlet.

How good is the census?

Not bad, the Census Bureau says, for a count conducted in a vast nation of individualists who move around a lot and don't have to register their addresses with the government.

"In a country like the United States, where people are free and living arrangements are variable, it is very difficult to take a census," the official in charge of the count, Assistant Census Director Peter Bounpane, said in making a first assessment of the census' accuracy in April. "This is a very good job."

Still, the bureau estimates last year's count fell 5.3 million people short. That works out to about 100,000 people for each state, or nearly 2,000 people for each county.

Why did the census miss that many people?

One reason is because some did not fill out a census form.

Most people received their census forms in the mail. The Census Bureau bought address lists from commercial vendors and expanded them with information from the post office.

But it's hard to compile an accurate mailing list, since nearly one in five Americans moves each year.

If a residence wasn't on the Census Bureau's mailing list, the people living there didn't get a form and may not have been counted.

Some households got a form but didn't mail it back. Perhaps the form was too complicated, or everyone was too busy, or it just got tossed out with the junk mail. In those cases, people may have been skipped.

The Census Bureau sent workers out to be sure houses listed as vacant really were and to check up on people who didn't mail in a form.

If the census-taker found no one home, if the neighborhood was so dangerous the census-taker was afraid to enter or if the census-taker simply failed to do a proper job, people may not have been counted.

And some people may have been skipped because they simply didn't want to be counted.

In novelist Clifford Simak's fantasy classic, "City," the character Old Dave, confronted by a census taker, says, "We don't bother the gov'ment none. What call's the gov'ment got botherin' us?"

Is the census more accurate than it used to be?

Yes and no. Over the long run, the censuses have shown steady improvement.

Thomas Jefferson was in charge of the 1790 census. By his estimate, the 3.9 million people counted were about 5 percent short of the true population. In 1940, the error was about the same, the Census Bureau later concluded.

The bureau began using electronic computers in 1950 and from that point accuracy improved dramatically. The most accurate census so far was in 1980, when, it was estimated, slightly more than 1 percent of the people weren't counted.

Last year about 2 percent of the people were missed, the bureau concludes.

So in the short run, the census has gotten less accurate.

How would the census be corrected?

Right after the census was taken, the Census Bureau interviewed people in 150,000 households to see if they had been counted by the census.

Based on the survey results, statisticians calculated the corrected count.

There are several different ways of doing that. The Census Bureau chose one that its statisticians say is the most accurate. But Bounpane says that given more time, the agency might be able to produce a better correction.

How can the next census be made better?

By improving public participation. Census Bureau planners are looking at shortening forms and distributing them at schools and libraries as ways to get more people to take part in the census in 2000.

One goal of that research is to see whether administrative records could eventually replace the traditional census altogether.

That kind of system would make the U.S. census more like its counterparts in Western Europe, where all residents must register their addresses with the government. In Europe, governments then compare the census information with the address registry to ensure each is correct.

TEA: Year-round school's a reality

■ Odessa elementary school among dozens of others going to year-round schedule.

By Peggy Fikac
Associated Press writer

AUSTIN — At least two dozen Texas school districts are likely to try year-round classes in elementary and middle schools this fall, an assistant education commissioner said Monday.

The number may be as high as 50, out of 1,065 total school districts, said Julian Shaddix, Texas Education Agency assistant commissioner for school administration.

School districts across the state have expressed an interest, he said.

In the Permian Basin, Ector County Independent School District's Gale-Pond Alamo Elementary will try the year-round concept for the school year beginning Aug. 26, an ECISD spokesperson said.

Currently, only Conroe offers year-round classes.

There are financial advantages to using school buildings all year long, especially for fast-growing districts running short on space.

But most officials examining year-round school are attracted by the touted educational benefits of giving students several short breaks, rather than one long summer vacation, Shaddix said.

For example, experts say that students retain more information when they don't have a long layoff, and that attendance is better.

"That's what most of the districts in Texas are looking at it for. They believe that there are some educational advantages," Shaddix said.

Charles Ballinger, executive director of the National Association for Year-Round Education, cited several advantages to a year-round class schedule.

"We have less forgetting over the summer ... We don't do students any favors by giving them a long period of time away from school," he said.

Students and teachers have better attendance rates, and vandalism is down because schools are occupied for more of the year, Ballinger said.

Dropout rates go down in high schools in other states with year-round classes, he said. Shaddix said he does not know of any Texas school districts planning year-round high school classes.

"Tension between pupil and school is lessened because of those frequent breaks," Ballinger said. He and Shaddix participated in a conference on year-round education.

Ballinger said year-round classes also can help school districts better use their buildings, when groups of students are put on staggered schedules and take their vacations at different times.

"We're talking millions and millions of dollars of savings to the taxpayer," he said.

Parents at the conference who support year-round school said opponents often are loathe to give up the summer vacation tradition. They also may express concern about having a child in a traditional program in high school, and a younger child on a year-round schedule.

Kathie Wolford, who lives in the Conroe school district and has two sons in year-round classes, praised the program.

She quoted her nephew as to its benefits: "Just about the time your brain gets tired, you get a break."

Fate of windmill is up in the air

■ Midge and Woody Erskine disagree with local businessman's plan to tear down 60- to 70-year old local landmark.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

An apparently historic old windmill, a symbol of West Texas ranching country and a main subject of Western artwork, is creating a bit of flap in Midland.

Ownership of the 60- to 70-year-old windmill on Golf Course Road is being disputed by Midge Erskine, who holds that the weathered mill belongs to her and her husband, Woody, even though the lot on which it stands belongs to another owner.

"The previous landowner gave it to us because it was an historic landmark," Mrs. Erskine said Monday. "They wanted it to stay here as a landmark."

However, the adjoining vacant lot to the east and the next lot at 3302 Golf Course Road have been purchased by Midland entomologist-exterminator Dennis Baker.

"I do know that the windmill will come down," said Baker, "because it is a tremendous liability."

The windmill's wooden frame is rotting, he said.

He may restore the old windmill, but said the decision will be his as long as he owns the old windmill.

Baker said he has a "clear title to the property" and that the survey includes the windmill. But, he said, if Ms. Erskine "can prove" that the windmill belongs to her, "she can move it."

Otherwise, the windmill is "coming down" for safety's sake.

"I'm not out to tear down an historic monument," Baker said.

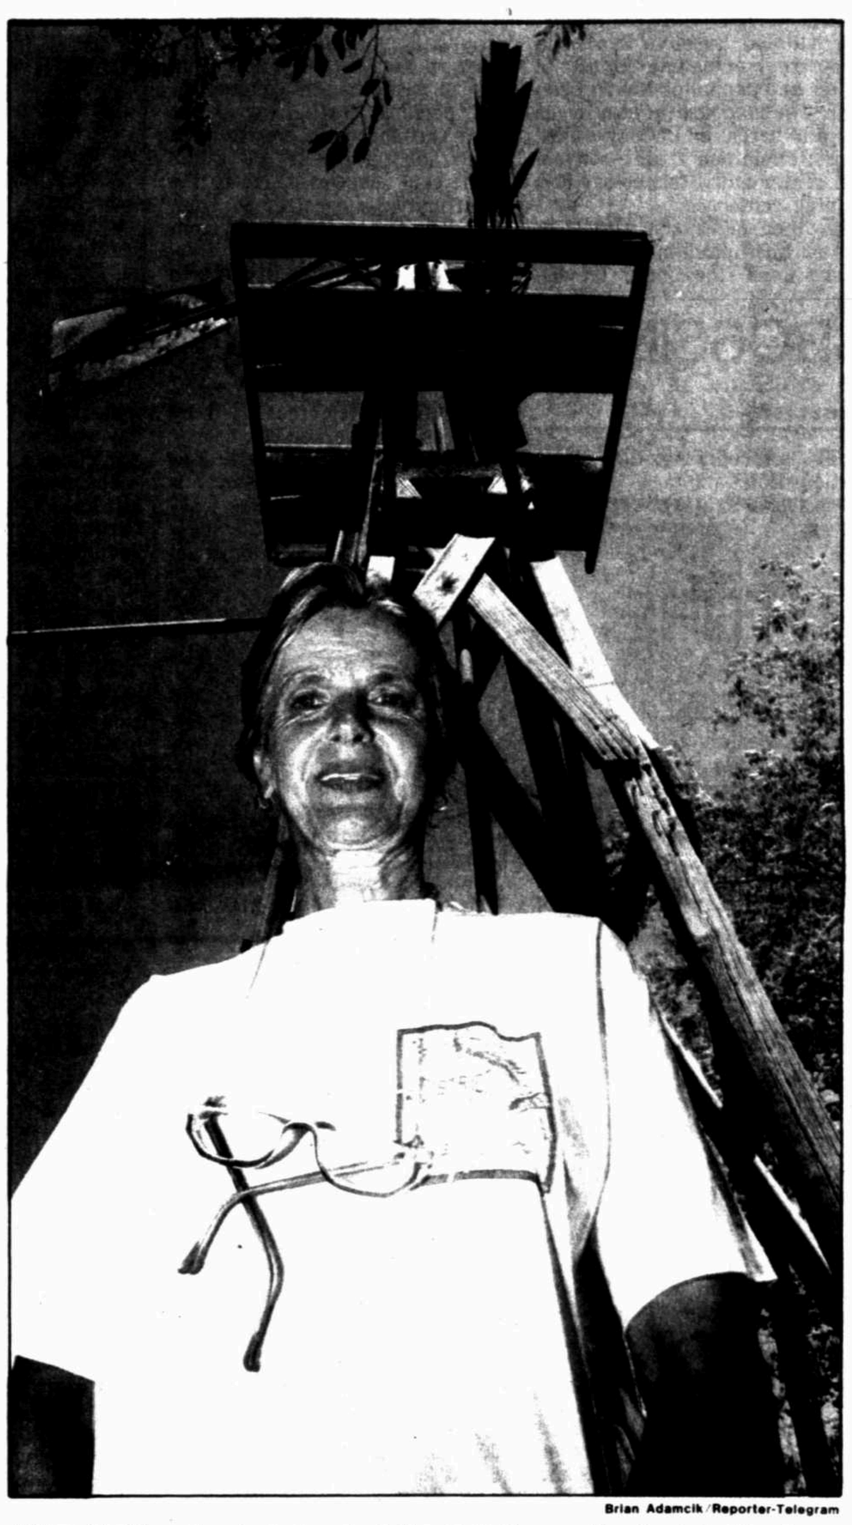

He said he wants to be neighborly to the Erskines, who operate the five-acre Eos Bird Sanctuary at 3306 W. Golf Course Road in an isolated "wilderness" parcel in the city. "They are good people," Baker said. "They do good things."

Mrs. Erskine, a federally licensed bird rehabilitator, said she and her inventor-geologist husband "happily" would move the windmill and tank onto their property and fence them in if Erskine ownership is verified.

She said she has proof that the windmill was assigned them in the 1970s by a neighbor at 3302 W. Golf Course Road.

And, Mrs. Erskine said, "nobody minded" that the windmill was on the vacant lot. "Everybody knew it was an historic landmark" that Midland and visiting artists have painted again and again, she said.

The windmill was built in the late 1920s "by a windmill-man who died some years ago in Big Spring in his late 80s," she said.

Future shock

The future arrives prematurely at Midland County's new jail

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Midland County Commissioners' Court, in a quandary over jail overcrowding, discussed building a $1.4 million addition to its year-old jail during its Monday meeting.

"We are going to be out of space in no time," said Midland County Commissioner Durward Wright.

The $4-million Midland County Central Detention Facility was built last year with bunks for 202 inmates in anticipation of future needs.

That future came far sooner than the commissioners had planned, due, in large measure, to the county having to board some Midland-sentenced state prisoners that the overcrowded state prison system has no space for.

The jail also takes city inmates now that the old City Jail is closed.

Earlier this month, San Antonio prison-efficiency consultant John E. "Jack" Dufficy recommended that the county build an additional 96-bunk jail addition, which would cost about $1.4 million to build.

"We read it, absorbed it, and didn't particularly like everything in it," Wright said of the $20,620 report.

Nevertheless, with the county's backlog of state prisoners, who apparently will serve out their time here rather than in the Texas penitentiary system, the county is losing federal prisoners and federal money, Wright said.

The federal government pays the county about $40 a day for each federal prisoner jailed here. And with decreasing room for federal prisoners, the county stands to lose about $1 million a year.

At $40 a day, the county would gross about $1 million a year on 65 federal prisoners, he said.

County Auditor Floyd Jarnagin said the state is planning to ex-

Midland County set for Aug. 10 election

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Voters in Midland and Andrews counties will face three propositions concerning homestead exemptions in elections Aug. 10.

All school districts in Texas will hold the same election that same day, according to Bettye Calvert, elections administrator for Midland County.

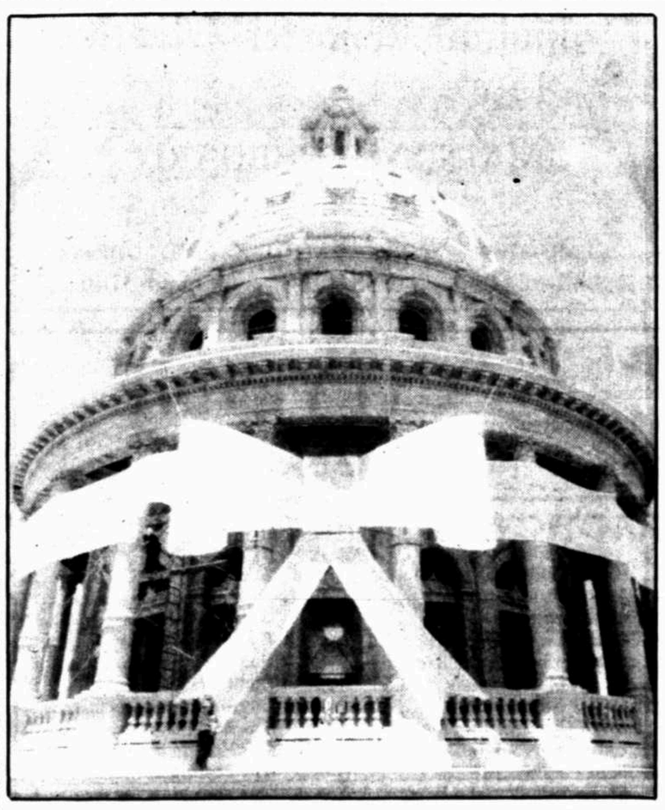

The County Education District (CED) has called the statewide election in anticipation of taxing districts combining under the state's new education funding reform law.

Lawmakers in April approved a new school-finance law that is designed to shift hundreds of millions of dollars in property tax revenue from wealthier to poorer school districts within new education taxing regions drawn largely along county lines.

The law, passed in response to a Texas Supreme Court order to even out funding available to school districts, also is estimated to cost $1.67 billion in new state aid over the next two years.

But in the regular legislative session that ended in May, lawmakers did not pass a state budget, which will include education funding. Faced with a deficit of $4.7 billion, state leaders put off the task until a special session that begins July 8.

City, county haggle over railroad crossing

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Like a boat running onto a sand bar, many a tractor-trailer became victim of the poorly sloped railroad crossing at Eisenhower Drive until it was closed last month.

Unsuspecting drivers tried to negotiate the crossing's steep grade, only to find their low-clearance rigs grinding to a sickening halt atop the rails.

Last month, the Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. closed the crossing for repairs, which concluded recently. However, the construction left the railings sticking above ground, leaving the crossing even closer to being untraversable.

Whether the crossing, which city figures show was used by hundreds of vehicles daily, ever reopens may depend on an agreement between city and county.

Although the surrounding area is part of the city, the railroad right of way falls under county jurisdiction, city officials said.

County officials are scheduled to meet today with city councilmen to discuss a compromise on which entity is responsible for rebuilding the crossing.

The estimated cost of expanding and resloping the crossing is between $40,000 and $50,000, said Gary Saunders, traffic engineering coordinator for the city.

District 4 Councilman Tom Johnston said he hopes the county will pay half the construction costs, with the city picking up the rest of the bill.

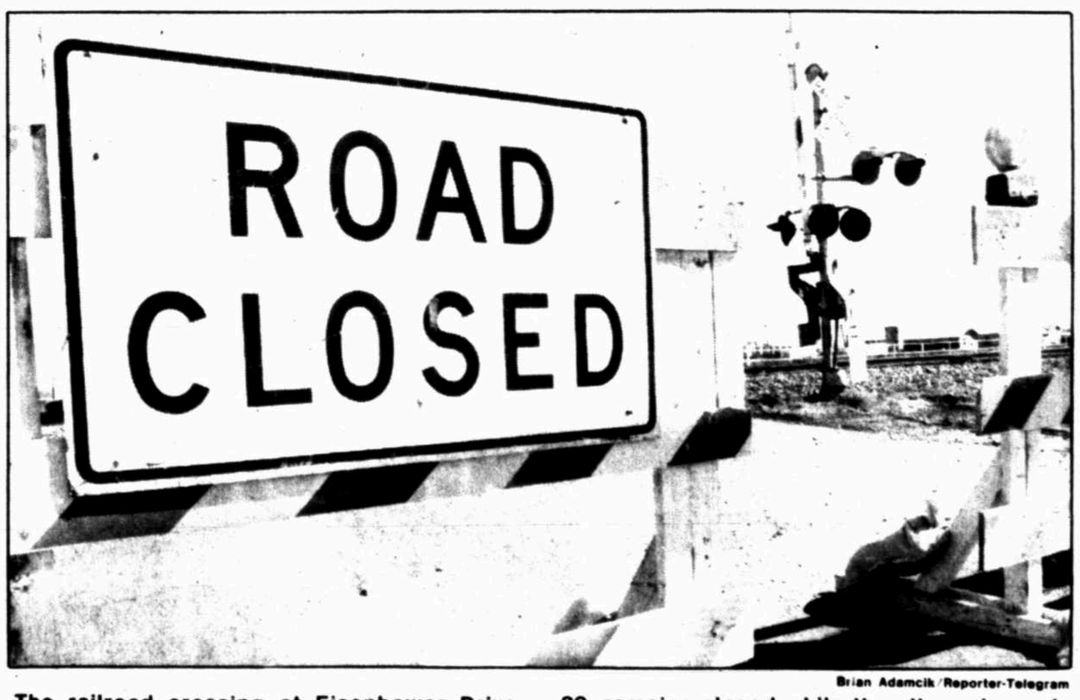

"The dilemma is who gets to fix the Eisenhower crossover," Johnston said, adding that the matter could become a fight over which entity is responsible for the crossing.

County Commissioner Durward Wright said commissioners intend to make sure the crossing reopens, despite recent rumors that the county plans to leave it closed.

"Somebody has been telling everybody that the county was going to close the crossing," Wright said. "It's a crazy rumor.

"I told (Mayor) Carroll Thomas that if we have some responsibility that we'll work with the city. The

ELECTION: All state school districts involved

(From 1B)

In the meantime, counties are being combined in anticipation of the state budget.

Midland and Andrews County will form the Midland-Andrews Educational District.

"This will give the new County Education District the ability to tax a certain portion of the tax rate from both counties. It will generate money that the districts will share," said Don Furgeson, business manager for Midland Independent School District.

In the Aug. 10 election Midland and Andrews voters will decide on propositions that will affect only the new taxing district. Midland and Andrews county school districts will keep their current tax rates.

The first proposition calls for "the exemption of 20 percent of the market value of the residence homestead from ad valorem taxation," according to the ballot.

"MISD already gives a 10 percent exemption on the homestead portion," Furgeson said. "The CED is asking for 20 percent."

The second proposition is for the "exemption of $10,000 of the market value of the residence homestead of an individual who is disabled and of $10,000 of the market value of the residence homestead of an individual who is 65 or older from ad valorem taxation."

All school districts are required to vote on the first two propositions, MISD superintendent Joseph Baressi said. He said the CED must levy and collect 72 cents of every $100 of assessed value.

The third proposition calls for "the taxation of all tangible personal property, other than manufactured homes, that is not held or used for the production of income."

Implementing the third proposition — which would expand the tax base — might be a tax office nightmare, Baressi said.

"It would take the tax offices a considerable amount of time to identify all property," he said. "I would recommend voting against it."

The Aug. 10 election will also include two proposed constitutional amendments. Midlanders will vote "for" or "against" a constitutional amendment to "allow the voters of a county education district to adopt certain exemptions from the district's ad valorem taxation for residence homesteads and to provide for the taxation of certain tangible personal property."

The second proposed amendment is "for the issuance of general obligation bonds to provide educational loans to students."

The CED board will meet to discuss the impending election at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the MISD boardroom, 615 W. Missouri. MISD school board trustee George Staley will represent the Midland school district.

Richards: Good roads crucial to free trade

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — A free trade agreement will help Texas and Mexico, but improved roads and bridges will be needed, Texas Gov. Ann Richards said Monday.

"I am very interested in roads connecting the interior of Texas to the Mexican border," she said.

Richards visited the $33 million International Business Center in Monterrey, a leading industrial center and capital of Nuevo Leon state. The complex, known by its Spanish acronym of Cintermex, has an exhibition area, a convention center and a technology and training center.

She then had lunch with Monterrey businessmen, met with Nuevo Leon Gov. Jorge Trevino and spoke by telephone with President Carlos Salinas de Gortari.

At a news conference following the luncheon, Richards said she and Salinas discussed several border issues including immigration, the environment, health care, and the construction of more border bridges and roads.

"My concern is that we do appropriate planning so that the roads in Mexico and Texas coincide to easily handle commercial and personal traffic we expect from the economic growth of a free trade agreement" she said.

She said she would like to see superhighways constructed from Laredo to Corpus Christi and from Brownsville to San Antonio. A superhighway connecting Laredo to San Antonio from the new Solidarity Bridge is in the works.

Richards, fulfilling a promise made at last February's Border Governors Meeting in Hermosillo, Mexico, is nearing the end of a five-day trip to the four Mexican states that border Texas.

She arrived in Chihuahua on Friday, went to Coahuila on Saturday, visited Nuevo Leon on Monday and will head to Tamaulipas on Tuesday before heading back to Texas.

county is receptive to the idea of participation."

Johnston said the crossing, which runs between Industrial Avenue and U.S. Highway 80, is an important traffic tool used by truckers and workers of nearby businesses. Traffic at intersections on both sides of the crossover is regulated by traffic lights.

Saunders said a traffic study conducted last October indicated that as many as 1,110 vehicles a day traversed the crossing until it was closed.

The closest crossings are at Midkiff Road and at Loop 250. Driving through those intersections, Saunders said, became more dangerous after traffic was diverted from the Eisenhower crossing.

The city will have to conduct traffic impact studies at intersections along Industrial Avenue and U.S. Highway 80 if the crossing is not reopened, Saunders said.

FUTURE: Expansion to cost about $1.4 million

(From 1B)

pand its prison system and reimburse, to some degree, counties for holding state prisoners.

However, Midland County cannot plan its finances on "what should be done in Austin," he said.

Sheriff Gary Painter said that the state may set up regional "boot camps" to help alleviate prison overcrowding and to "teach him (the inmate) how to handle his business" and live a non-criminal life.

Meanwhile, inmates "are going to continue to increase" in number, said Commissioner Win Brown.

Building a jail-house addition, Wright noted, would hike the county's tax rate up less than a half cent to bring in $175,000 yearly until 2006 to pay off the indebtedness" of about $1.4 million.

"That's a shotgun estimate," said Brown. "We have done well in our cost per bunk." The new $4-million jail was built at a cost of about $20,000 per bunk.

But Brown said the new jail was designed to be expanded and the proposed 96-bunk jail addition ought to at least be doubled.

"That's not being wild in spending," he said. "That's looking down the road."

Currently, the county is paying off its bonded indebtedness for the $4-million jail. The payoff date is 2001.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Kidnap report

Staff Report

ODESSA — A 14-year-old girl told police she was kidnapped by three men about midnight on Saturday before waking up at an abandoned motel Sunday morning.

Michele Dawn Ruckman of Odessa said she was walking toward a telephone at the 7-Eleven at 8th Street and Grandview Avenue when her feet became entangled in an air hose, police said.

At that time a black Ford pulled alongside her, two men got out, grabbed her arms and threw her in the back seat, reports stated.

The girl told police she was disoreinted and didn't remember much after that.

She did recall passing a sign that indicated Odessa was 10 miles away and being slapped numerous times by one of the men.

Ruckman told police she fell asleep then woke up at an abandoned 2nd Street motel about 9 a.m. before going home and telling her mother who notified police.

The assailants were described as two Hispanics, about 23 and 30 years old, and a black man about 25 years old.

Fatality

ODESSA — A 7-year-old boy was killed when a blasting cap he was playing with exploded Sunday night, Ector County Sheriff's Office officials said.

Christopher Wayne Stokes was pronounced dead at 10:45 p.m. Sunday after being transported to Medical Center Hospital about 8:30 p.m. following the blast.

Stokes, who resided in the 11000 block of Hoffman Road in West Ector County, reportedly found the blasting cap while playing with friends outside.

The youngsters hooked the cap up to a battery. The device exploded while Stokes held it near his ear.

Arrest

Police arrested a 53-year-old man Sunday evening on a warrant for violation of parole, police said.

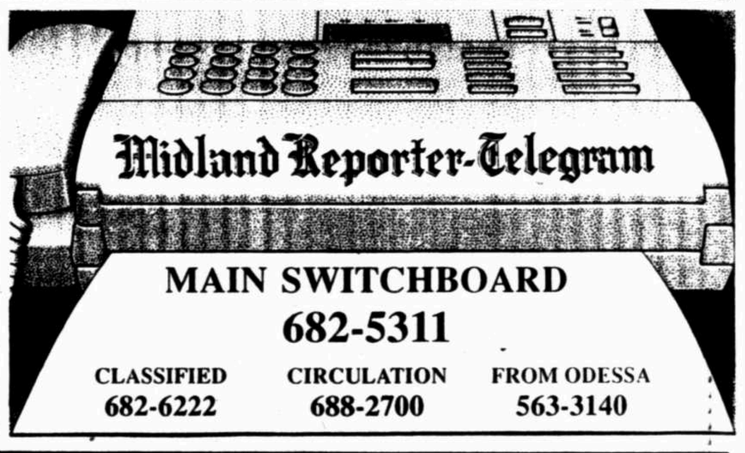

Wayne Elliot Biggs, who was on parole on a forgery charge, remained in jail Monday, parole and jail officials said.

Biggs was apprehended when police investigated a suspicious man in the 3200 block of Thomas Avenue about 8:10 p.m. Biggs was wanted on an outstanding warrant.

Welcoming the wolf at the door

By Steven Almond
Associated Press writer

EL PASO — Bob Phillips doesn't exactly dance with wolves.

It's more of a spontaneous paws-first hug. But if you catch it from just the right angle it could pass for a teetering fox trot. OK, make that a wolf trot.

"They tell me these guys are supposed to be dangerous," Phillips says, heaving a meaty wrist at the mouth of his unsuspecting partner. "C'mon fella, show 'em how vicious you are."

The canine wrinkles its muzzle, bears a pair of gleaming fangs, and begins licking unrelentingly.

"Some kind of menace you turned out to be," the Atlanta native barks, booming a belly laugh across the dusky desert surrounding his trailer.

A confessed wolf fanatic, Phillips runs a refuge for wolf hybrids on his fenced square of land, just a howl from Hueco Tanks — a place the barrel-chested Vietnam veteran has dubbed "Wolf Haven."

The haven is filled near to capacity with strays Phillips has taken in over the past two years, a crowded tribute to his passion for "rescue-and-recovery" work.

Two dozen charges, stowed in a string of hastily erected pens, serenade visitors with melancholy baying, eyes scrolling in unison to track any move.

As Phillips will tell you, each animal has its own heartbreaking history.

One cage houses Max, a sharp-sniffing one-time drug dog whose owner had a heart attack. Next door paces Medicine Dancer, a jumpy high-percentage hybrid Phillips rescued from an illegal shipment of animals that customs officials stopped outside Las Cruces, N.M.

Down at the end of wolf row is Cheyenne, a stunning white arctic wolf that runs in tight, nervous circles in her pen. The animal had been neglected for six months before arriving at Wolf Haven, Phillips says.

"That's another one whose master couldn't control him," Phillips sighs, swinging a forearm snaked with tattoos toward his newest tenant, Samson.

The giant Northern Timberwolf rests its paws sorrowfully in a basin of water. Like the rest of Wolf Haven's tenants, Samson is actually a mix of wild wolf and domestic dog, in his case husky. It's illegal in Texas to own pure wolves without a permit.

Ironically, many of Phillips' rescues come from the Humane Society, a group that strictly forbids putting wolf hybrids up for adoption.

"Without Bob Phillips, we'd have to put these animals to sleep the minute they walked in the door," says Cindy Gongaware, director of El Paso's Human Society. "It's marvelous to watch him work with the animals. He speaks wolf."

Indeed, the 48-year-old Fort Bliss information systems manager seems to relish the daily ritual of prowling his yard, scolding, training, even wrestling with the beasts until his T-shirt is covered with shed wolf fur.

Because the animals often have been abused — intentionally or not — much of his recovery work focuses on habituating frightfully timid beasts to human presence.

"When I started with that one, she'd just run when you came near," he says, nodding toward a young female lying in a corner cage, "Now she'll come up to you and say 'Hi.' "

Those with physical ailments he nurses to health. The ultimate goal is to send the animals to states with wolf populations in the wild, such as Minnesota and Montana.

"But in a lot of cases," he says, "you can't turn these animals loose because they've lost their hunting skills. They'd die out there."

And so, Phillips' line of cages extends monthly.

But Wolf Haven's wisecracking proprietor is matter-of-fact about the origins of his operation. He says he simply volunteered, one day two years ago, to take an unwanted hybrid. And kept volunteer-ing.

In fact, his yen for wolves stretches back to 1960, when he began training canines to assist handicapped people.

His interest peaked after a stint working with a wolf relocation program in California and Washington. He is still haunted by the vivid specter of watching a black wolf try to free itself from a steel trap by chewing its leg off.

A few months later, he enrolled in an intensive, eight-week wolf training program.

The establishment of his refuge and the attendant non-profit Wolf Haven Foundation sealed his commitment to the maligned species, which has been chased into extinction in most of the United States.

"It didn't take me long to figure out that people were telling lies about these animals," he says.

Like other wolf boosters, he refutes the species' big, bad image by citing its unretiring nature and uncannily human social relationships.

"Did you know that a male wolf will actually babysit pups?" he asks, scratching his bristly head in wonder.

Among the more glaring misconceptions Phillips battles is the notion that wolves — and their instinctual bloodlust — exist in opposition to man.

"The Indians had a symbiotic relationship to wolves. They followed wolves to track big game and made them sacred animals," says Phillips, who has paid tribute to the legacy by giving some his animals Native American names.

"Most of my paycheck goes to these guys," he explains. "Everything you see I bought the supplies for and built. Plus food and vet bills."

Food, by the way, doesn't just mean sacks of dog food. Chef Phillips regularly cooks up fresh vegetables for the wolves.

"Squash," he sighs, his hawkish eyebrows knit in paternal contentment. "They love squash."

Wolf Haven's accommodations eventually will include shade trees and permanent roofs that can withstand the brutal buffets that gust down from the Hueco Mountains.

He even has a rescue vehicle, a four-wheel drive cruiser with a rack of lights on the roof and Wolf Haven's emblem stenciled on the doors. That's right, the wolfmobile.

"These guys are my family," Phillips confides. "I don't have a wife anymore, and I never had kids. They're it."

But for all the love Phillips showers on his wolves, the outcast animals are prime suspects in a simmering controversy over wolf hybrids.

Canine advocates question the wisdom of trying to muffle the call of the wild within the mixed animals. In the face of surging demand and sales, the Humane Society and many veterinarians have decried hybrid breeding publicly. Some say the animals are time bombs whose aggressive instincts could explode at any moment.

Phillips insists that's nonsense, but still argues against raising hybrids as pets.

"These animals cannot be domesticated! The best you can do is to train them." The problem, he stresses, isn't that they're dangerous, but that they are naturally shy of humans.

DEAR ABBY

Good loving is octogenarian's secret for a good marriage

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Sex for seniors? Why not? That's right up my alley. I'm age 85, with a 71-year-old third wife, and we make love frequently. I lost my first two wives to cancer after almost 20 years with each.

Van Buren

I met my present wife when I was 79 and she was 64. She had been with the only man in her life — her husband of 37 years — so I should not have been surprised at her obvious lack of experience. Being "made love to" was new to her, as opposed to being an outlet for a man's desires. Once we got in tune with each other, we made love 10 times in nine days — once every day, and twice on Sunday. I kid you not.

We have slowed down somewhat since I was hospitalized for a month after surgery to remove a cancerous colon. It was a month after that before we could resume our lovemaking. Notice, I said "lovemaking," not having sex. There is a difference.

By the way, I met my third wife in church. After our relationship became serious, we toured Europe together. Different names on passports don't bother hotel clerks or anyone else when two people travel as a couple. After living out of a suitcase for six weeks, we knew we'd either love each other or hate each other's guts. We married as soon as our property sales were completed.

My secret for a successful marriage? Take your time. Sex is a quick roll in the hay. Making love is like an ocean voyage; half the fun is getting there. — OLDER BUT NOT TOO OLD

DEAR OLDER: You could write a book ... you certainly know what to do between the covers. Hooray for you!

DEAR ABBY: Could you please tell me if there is anything a man can do to color the gray hair on his chest? Are there any products on the market that can handle this problem?

The hair on my head is mostly dark brown with only a few gray hairs, but I am getting a whole flock of gray hairs on my chest. Hurry your answer, please. I don't want to look like an old guy on the beach. — MALIBU MALE

DEAR MALIBU: Ask your barber. He should know. If he can't help y head for the nearest store t t carries beauty supplies. Its shelves will be lined with "rinses" and "tints" that will solve your dilemma.

DEAR ABBY: Please say something about the widespread use of pacifiers. They are used mostly to pacify the parents who stick it in the child's mouth to keep it quiet.

Putting a plug in a child's mouth, whether it's a genuine plug or a bottle (when used as a pacifier), causes the child to associate comfort and relief of stress with oral satisfaction, which may lead later in life to smoking, overeating or alcoholism.

The child's instinct to suck is usually satisfied by breast or bottle when the child is hungry.

And don't you hate to see a child who is old enough to walk still sucking on a bottle? — BARBARA SNADER, CHILD DEVELOP MENT SPECIALIST

DEAR BARBARA: Yes. But the people who most love to see a child who is old enough to walk still sucking on a bottle are the orthodontists.

By popular request, Abby shares more of her favorite prize-winning, easy-to-prepare recipes. To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: More Favorite Recipes by Dear Abby, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. AT WIT'S END

Live each moment for all you think it's worth

By Erma Bombeck

I have a friend who lives by a three-word philosophy, "Seize the moment." Just possibly, she might be the wisest woman on this planet. Too many people put off something that brings them joy just because they haven't thought about it, don't have it on their schedule, didn't know it was coming, or are too rigid to depart from the routine.

Bombeck

I got to thinking one day about all those women on the Titanic who passed up dessert at dinner that fateful night in an effort to "cut back." From then on, I've tried to be a little more flexible.

How many women out there will eat at home because their husband suggested they go out to dinner AFTER something had been thawed? Does the word refrigeration have no meaning for you?

How often have your kids dropped in to talk and sat there in silence while you watched "Jeopardy"?

I cannot count the times I called my sister and said, "How about going to lunch in half an hour?" She would gasp and stammer, "I can't." Check one: "I have clothes on the line." "My hair is dirty." "I wish I had known yesterday." "I had a late breakfast." "It looks like rain." And my personal favorite, "It's Monday." She died a few years ago. We never did have lunch together.

Because Americans cram so much into our lives, we tend to schedule our headaches. We live on a sparse diet of promises we make to ourselves when all the conditions are perfect. We'll go back and visit the grandparents ... when we get Stevie toilet-trained. We'll entertain ... when we replace the living room carpet. We'll go on a second honeymoon ... when we get two more kids out of college.

Life has a way of accelerating as we get older. The days get shorter and the list of promises to ourselves gets longer. One morning we awaken and all we have to show for our lives is a litany of "I'm going to," "I plan on" and "Someday when things are settled down a bit."

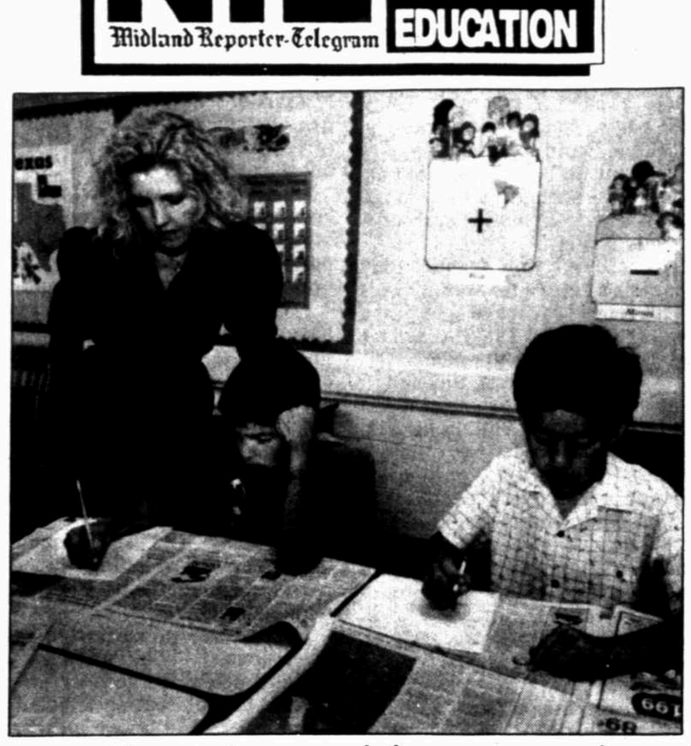

When anyone calls my "seize the moment" friend, she is open to adventure, available for trips and keeps an open mind on new ideas. Her enthusiasm for life is contagious. You talk with her for five minutes and you're ready to trade your bad feet for a pair of roller blades and skip an elevator for a bungi cord.

My lips have not touched ice cream in 10 years. I love ice cream. It's just that I might as well apply it directly to my hips with a spatula and eliminate the digestive process.

The other day I stopped the car and bought a triple-decker. If my car hit an iceberg on the way home, I'd have died happy.

Midlanders trust their cars on the inside and out to Chaparral Wash and Lube Center, located at the corner of Big Spring and Scharbauer.

Since opening in 1984, Chaparral Wash and Lube Center has enjoyed a well-earned reputation for the best car wash and oil change service in Midland. A strong commitment to meticulous attention and detail from long-time employees are Chaparral trademarks.

Measure the difference at Chaparral Wash and Lube Center, located in the center of the downtown—Claydesta business zone. It is owned by Leon Jeffcoat, a Texas Tech graduate and Midland businessman.

You'll see the difference right away.

The Chaparral Lube Center carries major brands of oil, including Pennzoil, Quaker State and Havoline. Prices for the oil change and lube range from $18.50 to $23.50. For those who prefer using Mobil One, the price is $36.50.

A free car wash is included with each oil change. If you are in a rush or if the clouds are threatening, you'll receive a car wash rain check voucher.

Also included with the oil change is a thorough examination under the hood. Your technician will check your battery, tires, belts and hoses. Your vehicle is also checked for important proper fluid levels, including brake, power steering, transmission and windshield washer fluids.

As a part of this service, these fluids are replenished, if needed. For an additional charge, your technician will install transmission oil, freon, light bulbs and windshield wiper refills.

Checking your car on a regular maintenance schedule at Chaparral Wash and Lube Center is good insurance against expensive trouble in the future. Owner Jeffcoat recommends a minimum maintenance schedule of every 3,000 miles or every three months. A reminder sticker will be placed on the inside of your windshield.

When you visit Chaparral Wash and Lube Center, not only do you get professional service, but you get personal service from people who care about you and your car.

A detail job includes spraying the engine to remove oil and grime, a thorough cleaning under the hood, hand waxing, carpet and upholstery shampooing, interior dash and door treatment and tire treatment. Not only are quality and service trademarks for Enchanted Gardens, but they are top priorities for owner Jim Gilland and his staff.

The nursery also enjoys a fine reputation for beautiful, sturdy indoor plants. "We probably have the largest selection of indoor tropical plants in West Texas," commented Gilland. Indoor plants are in stock at Enchanted Gardens year round.

Quality at Enchanted Gardens means that you get more plant for your money. Many of the five gallon plants could be stepped up to 10 gallon pots because of their size. A number of five gallon plants are three feet tall and up.

Tropical plants range from four to six inch pots all the way up to 21 inch. And the stock is very striking. For example, some banana trees are 12 to 14 feet tall.

New to Enchanted Gardens is its quality design service. "We have had a tremendous response so far," noted Gilland. Typically, the landscape designer can come out the day of the call and assess whatever landscaping needs you may have. Jobs usually begin one to three days later. "We make a big effort to keep up with our work."

Balled and burlapped trees under three inches in diameter come with a 90 day guarantee. All five gallon trees come with a 30 day guarantee. Installation and planting of shrubs and trees is available and increases the guarantee period.

Brenda Sosebee, manager of Enchanted Gardens, along with owner Jim Gilland, invites you in to see the fine selection of trees, bedding plants, shrubs and supplies. Enchanted Gardens is located on Loop 250, across from Midland Park Mall.

Of course, you can count on Enchanted Gardens for all of the gardening supplies you'll need. Choose from wicker baskets, terra cotta pottery, ceramic pots, gardening tools, fertilizer, insecticides, mulch, bark, potting soils, handmade porcelain dolls, garden supplies and landscape rocks, including many varieties of boulders, lava rocks and stepping stones. Enchanted Gardens is also a Toro distributor for sprinkler parts.

A full line of fertilizers, including Fertilome, is in stock. Enchanted Gardens recommends Fertilome for West Texas lawns and gardens. Although its cost is a little higher, it gives a more uniform feeding rate. Those interested in the Don't Bag It program are encouraged to try Fertilone Classic. Slower growing means less mowing!

Enchanted Gardens is here to help the homeowner out as far as landscaping needs and make Midland more beautiful. The store now offers volume discount rates for volume buying.

Also, Enchanted Gardens offers wholesale prices to contractors, landscapers and builders.

If you have driven by Enchanted Gardens on Loop 250 across from Midland Park Mall, you may not have realized that it is a much bigger nursery than "meets the eye."

Enchanted Gardens is a full-scale nursery with an amazing amount of space that you just can't see from the road — and the inventory just keeps going and going as you walk through the property.

Whatever your landscaping needs — be they large or small — Enchanted Gardens has the quality you want and the value you want, backed by the expertise of a friendly, knowledgeable and experienced staff.

Enchanted Gardens is open Monday-Saturday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sundays from 12 p.m. to 6 p.m. Visa and Mastercard are accepted. Please call 699-1413 for more information.

Celebrate July 4th holiday with Imperial Flag & Banner merchandise

With the Fourth of July quickly approaching, please take some time to stop by Imperial Flag and Banner for your business or family American flag. For a super selection of quality made American flags, Imperial Flag and Banner, 1613 S. Main, offers just what you need.

The most popular "Old Glory" items at Imperial Flag and Banner, said owner George Leach, are 3' x 5' United States flags and miniature United States flag desk sets. Many other sizes of superior quality nylon and polyester flags up to an impressive 20' x 30' United States flag are in stock.

Imperial Flag and Banner carries a huge selection of flag accessories, including Halyard rope in a variety of sizes, tassels, all sizes of poles, brackets, bases, snaps, balls and eagles (for outdoor poles), and stars, crosses and other religious symbols for indoor poles.

Quality and service are Imperial Flag and Banner trademarks. Permian Basin residents know to turn to George Leach for dependable service after the sale. After all, with the severe wind conditions we face in West Texas, eventually any flag will become torn or frayed. If you do not want to invest in a new flag, Imperial Flag and Banner can repair holes and tears, replace grommets, and even replace flag poles and ropes.

In addition to American flags, another popular choice are the welcome home flags Imperial Flag and Banner. This store offers plenty of 3' x 5' red, white and blue flags which can be displayed proudly at your home or business. When you hang this flag, you will show your support for the return of U.S. troops from Operation Desert Storm.

Another flag of special interest at this time in history is a bright yellow 3' x 5' Desert Storm "Support Our Troops" flag. As you prepare to welcome home a loved one or if you merely want to exhibit a show of support, remember Imperial Flag and Banner for a roll or a length of yellow plastic "Welcome Home" tape or a roll or a length of yellow ribbon.

Yellow ribbon bumperstickers and lapel pins and handsome wooden and engraved brass desk and wall plaques commemmorating Operation Desert Storm are just a small portion of the vast array of patriotic merchandise available at Imperial Flag and Banner.

History buffs will enjoy United States flags from the past, Texas flags, Confederate flags (up to 5' x 8' in stock) and others. A popular method of display is in the desk set or the miniature flag set.

If you have a large indoor flag for a church or a school auditorium, for example, Imperial Flag and Banner can fit your flag with a custom base. And Imperial Flag and Banner has even more patriotic United States flag items to fit your needs. Choose from license plate covers, patches, decals, stickers, lapel pins, balloons, belt buckles and buttons.

Impressive wooden bases are available for you to display and enjoy a complete set of miniature United Nations flags, a United States state flag set or a set of flags representing the Organization of American states.

If the flag you want is out of stock, it can be ordered and shipped to Midland quickly. Imperial Flag and Banner also ships across the country.

Another way of demonstrating patriotic spirit is to wear a handcrafted sweatshirt from Imperial Flag and Banner. Custom made 100 percent cotton shirts colorfully sport timely patriotic topics.

In addition to flags from around the world and patriotic items, Imperial Flag and Banner has earned a reputation for carrying a large selection of 3' x 5' and 3' x 10' premanufactured message banners for stores and businesses.

To promote special events, such as a garage sale or a grand opening, Imperial Flag and Banner has lines of attention getting pennants in a variety of colors, including metallic and safety glo. These come in lengths of 100 , 60' and 30'. Sports teams and apartment complexes often find themselves in need of a flag. Imperial Flag and Banner stocks sturdy nylon 3' x 5' blank flags in just about any color you could want.

Imperial Flag and Banner has the capacity to manufacture custom flags and banners with company logos and elementary school names. Professional quality kites and windsocks are in stock.

Other services include custom T-shirts for sports teams, alterations, dressmaking, tailoring and flag repair.

Imperial Flag and Banner is open Monday through Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Call 682-3562 for more information.

Imperial Flag and Banner owner George Leach, left, shows customer Tom Morgan some repair work on Morgan's Halyard (steel wire) flag pole rope. Morgan commented that the rope discourages and therefore reduces the theft of his flags.

Wimbledon a first day washout

■ Monica Seles and 26,000 drenched fans were the big losers on Opening Day at Wimbledon.

Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Monica Seles and 26,000 drenched tennis fans were big losers in an opening day Wimbledon washout that ended with a Centre Court bomb scare.

The lush lawns stayed covered and the balls remained canned, but the top-ranked Seles was out six-love-love-love — the $6,000 fine levied Monday by the Women's Tennis Association for going AWOL.

A dreary day of steady rain ended with the deepening mystery of the missing French and Australian champion and a bomb scare that evacuated the last optimistic fans lingering under umbrellas around Centre Court.

Wimbledon's no-refund policy cost the fans up to $26 each — more if they bought the tickets from touts. The only consolation for holders of Centre Court and Court 1 passes was the priority they receive to buy seats for next year's opening day.

Despite the familiar "Wimbledon weather," it was only the fifth time in The Championships' 114-year history that opening-day play was completely abandoned. The last time was 1987, and the furor over tickets that resulted led to the new policy that gave holders a chance to get following-year tickets, but still no refunds.

Stefan Edberg, the defending men's champion and top seed, sipped tea and ate scones in the warmth of the players' lounge while the weather ruined his opening match and 65 others.

Some players never showed up, others just sat around talking with friends or staring at the rain.

The showers began about an hour before the scheduled start of play and, except for a brief pause in the late afternoon, refused to fade. More rain was forecast for Tuesday, with periodic showers Wednesday and Thursday.

Thousands of fans, some of whom camped outside the white wrought iron gates all night, sat doggedly around the courts or huddled in the snack areas and shops until evening, hoping for a letup in the rain.

About 6:30 p.m., police cleared the Centre Court stadium for the second straight year to investigate an abandoned bag, which turned out to be harmless. A year ago, an IRA bomb exploded in a Conservative club in London on Wimbledon's opening day, and police took no chances during the tournament, checking out every unclaimed bag. That policy is still in force.

On Monday, 15 minutes after the bag was found to be harmless, officials yielded to the persistent drizzle and increasingly gray sky as they postponed and rescheduled all the matches.

Defending women's champion Martina Navratilova was slipped into the opening match Tuesday on Centre Court against Elna Reinach, followed by Edberg against March Rosset and Jimmy Connors against Veli Paloheimo.

The much-anticipated returns of Andre Agassi and Jennifer Capriati were put off until Wednesday.

Mats Wilander decided not to wait that long. The Swede, who won every Grand Slam event except Wimbledon in 1988, pulled out in midday because of a knee injury.

The alleged injury that troubles Seles is still unknown — at least to WTA and Wimbledon officials. Neither received any medical confirmation of her problem or an adequate explanation from Seles, her family or agent when she withdrew as the top seed three days before the tournament.

"I have not spoken directly with Monica, but I have been informed that her injury is not serious," said Gerard Smith, WTA executive director, who spoke with Seles' agent.

He said he's been "led to believe" that she is suffering shin splints and is not going to have surgery.

"We would like her to provide more specifics, absolutely," Smith said. "We have asked her for that, and that is why we have asked her for a medical certificate."

Spectators head to their seats on Court 14 at Wimbledon Monday, hoping to see first round action. However, a steady rain washed out opening day competition for the fifth time since 1877.

Injuries plague baseball

By Jim Donaghy
AP Baseball Writer

Any manager will tell you injuries are part of the game. It's just this season, the game seems to have more injuries than usual.

Do you recall the starting outfield for the National League in last year's All-Star game? It was Kevin Mitchell, Lenny Dykstra and Darryl Strawberry.

Word of advice, check the disabled list before punching the ballot this year.

There were nine no-hitters last season, and seven of the pitchers involved have been on the disabled list in 1991.

Some teams are having a particularly hard time keeping their players healthy. For the second straight year,

Who is NBA's No. 2 pick?

■ Former OC star Larry Johnson figures to be No. 1 in the NBA draft, but the New Jersey Nets still hold the mystery of No. 2.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The New Jersey Nets go into this week's NBA draft with the No. 2 pick and a front office divided on how to use it.

Willis Reed, Nets senior vice president of basketball operations, said Monday there's disagreement among the team's owners and coaches over whom to pick.

Anderson

Sources say team owners are leaning toward point guard Kenny Anderson of Georgia Tech, while coach Bill Fitch and his assistants apparently are favoring forward Billy Owens of Syracuse.

"Some of our owners may like Kenny," Reed said. "My coaching staff, we like other people.

"There were some owners who didn't like our pick last year, but we got Derrick Coleman and he went on to become Rookie of the Year. That's always healthy — people liking people for different reasons. We'll discuss the reasons and figure out what should be done."

Reed said the owners and staff will meet Tuesday to hash out their differences and decide who will be the pick.

There's no doubt what the Nets need: scoring and shooting.

New Jersey averaged 102.9 points per game, 19th overall, and shot 44.4 from the field, second worst to Denver's 44.0.

The question is who can best fill the Nets' needs.

"I like them both," Reed said, referring to Anderson and Owens. "I wish I could get Kenny Anderson, Billy Owens and Larry Johnson. Then we'd be playing in the championship pretty soon."

But it doesn't work that way. Charlotte apparently will make UNLV forward Johnson the draft's top pick. At least that's what coach Gene Littles said Saturday.

That leaves the rest of the player pool open to New Jersey, which has interviewed Owens, Anderson, Michigan State guard Steve Smith, Missouri forward Doug Smith and Georgetown center Dikembe Mutombo.

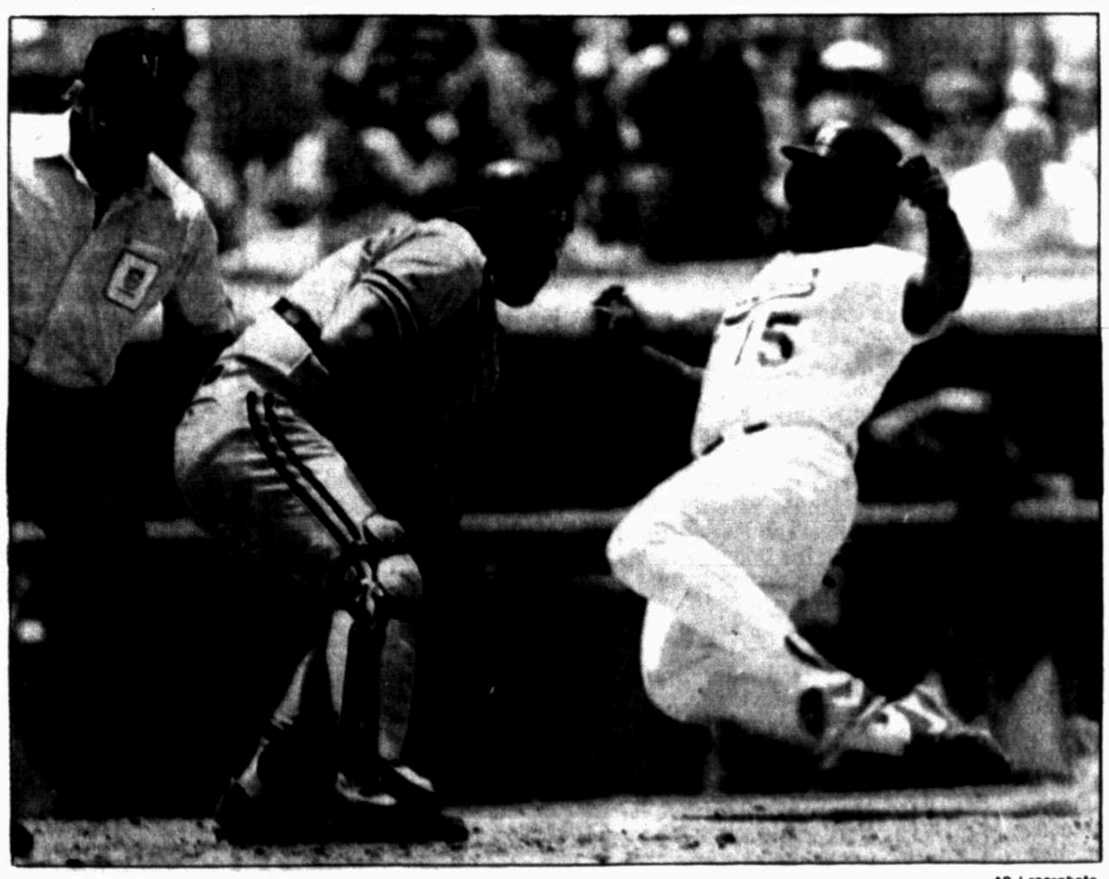

Fitch says Owens "can do it all." He averaged 23.3 points per game and joined Coleman, last year's No. 1 draft pick, in leaving Syracuse as the only players to score 1,800 points and grab 900 rebounds. A reunion probably would bode well for New Jersey.

"He was an NBA player on the offensive end last year," Fitch said of Owens. "I like him as a point forward and see him being able to handle it and even bring the ball up."

But taking Owens presents problems. He would have to share time at small forward with Chris Morris, the team's No. 1 pick three years ago.

Taking Anderson has its pitfalls, too.

The Georgia Tech sophomore, who averaged 25.9 points per game last season, 5.7 rebounds, 5.6 assists and led the Atlantic Coast Conference in steals with 89, would share the spotlight with Mookie Blaylock, the Nets' No. 1 pick two years ago. Anderson also has only two years of college behind him and, at 170 pounds, might have problems with the grind of the 82-game schedule.

The Pirates had their woes against the Dodgers over the weekend like on this play when LA's Chris Gwynn, right, scores against Pitt's Mike Lavalliere.

Dodgers calm after Buc series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If anyone knows how easily a one-sided season series against a playoff opponent can boomerang, it's Gary Carter of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

He saw it happen as a Met when New York beat the Dodgers 10 of 11 times in the regular season three years ago. Then the Dodgers beat the Mets in the National League playoffs en route to their stunning World Series victory over the Oakland Athletics.

So don't expect the easily excitable 18-year veteran to go overboard over last weekend's duel of division leaders at Dodger Stadium. Los Angeles won three of four games from the East-leading Pittsburgh Pirates.

"Sure, it puts a bug in their ear, and I think it's significant to let them know that we can play with them," Carter said. "But I don't think it's anything to concern anybody.

"It reminds me of '88 with the Mets. We dominated the season series against the Dodgers and they ended up beating us in the playoffs."

It may be premature to determine how the teams will match up in October should both finish first. Both Darryl Strawberry of the Dodgers and Bobby Bonilla were neutralized by injuries in the weekend series.

Bonilla has a career .319 average against the Dodgers. Strawberry — on the disabled list with a shoulder injury — has 34 career homers and 96 RBIs against the Pirates, his best totals against any NL team.

Because the Dodgers have a deeper bench than the Pirates, Bonilla's absense with a calf injury was more significant. Pittsburgh stranded 14 runners in scoring position, including seven in Sunday's 2-0 loss.

Erickson cuts 12th gun notch

Associated Press

AL Roundup

NEW YORK — Scott Erickson won his 12th consecutive decision by pitching a two-hitter Monday night as the Minnesota Twins rolled on with a 5-0 victory over the New York Yankees.

Jeff Johnson (1-3), making just his fourth big league start, retired the first 15 Twins in order, then tired against the hottest team in baseball. Minnesota, which lost to the Yankees 11-2 on Sunday, has won 22 of its last 24 games and leads second-place Oakland by 3½ games in the American League West.

Erickson (12-2) became the majors' first 12-game winner this season and has not lost in 13 starts since April 16. He allowed a single to Don Mattingly in the first and a leadoff double to Matt Nokes in the second, then retired 15 straight batters before giving up a leadoff walk to Kevin Maas, the Yankees' only other runner, in the seventh.

Erickson struck out six and walked one in his third shutout of the season and fourth complete game. He lowered his ERA to 1.39 and his winning streak is the longest since Bobby Witt of Texas won 12 straight last year from June 28 to Sept. 6.

Johnson, a 24-year-old lefthander, gave up three runs and four hits in eight innings. He walked one and struck out none.

Blue Jays 4, Indians 3

TORONTO — Pinch hitter Pat Tabler hit a sacrifice fly, scoring Devon White and giving Toronto a victory over Cleveland and a four-game sweep of the series.

White led off the inning with a double and, one out later, went to third on a single by Joe Carter. Tabler then pinch hit for DH Rance Mulliniks and hit the game-winning fly ball to left.

The Indians fought back from a 3-0 deficit to tie the score in the sixth inning when Jeff Manto's single scored Carlos Baerga.

Cleveland pulled within 3-2 in the fifth after Mike Huff reached on a two-out throwing error by third baseman Ed Sprague. Huff went to second on Jerry Browne's single, and Chris James doubled, scoring both runners.

Toronto starter Jimmy Key threw 97 pitches over six solid innings, giving up only one earned run before Duane Ward (1-3) relieved him to start the seventh. Jim Henke pitched the ninth inning for his 12th save in 12 opportunities.

Five of the nine hits that Indians rookie starter Charles Nagy surrendered were doubles. Nagy (3-8) gave up four earned runs, struck out five and walked three. He was replaced by Jesse Orosco with one out in the seventh.

White Sox 6, Mariners 2

CHICAGO — Frank Thomas hit a grand slam and added an a RBI double to lead Chicago to its fourth straight victory.

Thomas' eighth-inning grand slam was the first of his career and his 12th homer of the season. It came after the White Sox had loaded the bases against reliever Mike Jackson on a pair of walks and a bunt single by Robin Ventura and gave Chicago a 6-1 lead.

Greg Hibbard (5-6) allowed eight hits, three by Jeff Scahefer, and one walk in 7⅓ innings. He struck out one. Scott Radinsky relieved after Schaefer led off the eighth with his first major league homer to make it 2-1 and Harold Reynolds had a one-out bunt single.

Radinsky finished for his third save, allowing a ninth-inning run on Jay Buhner's RBI grounder.

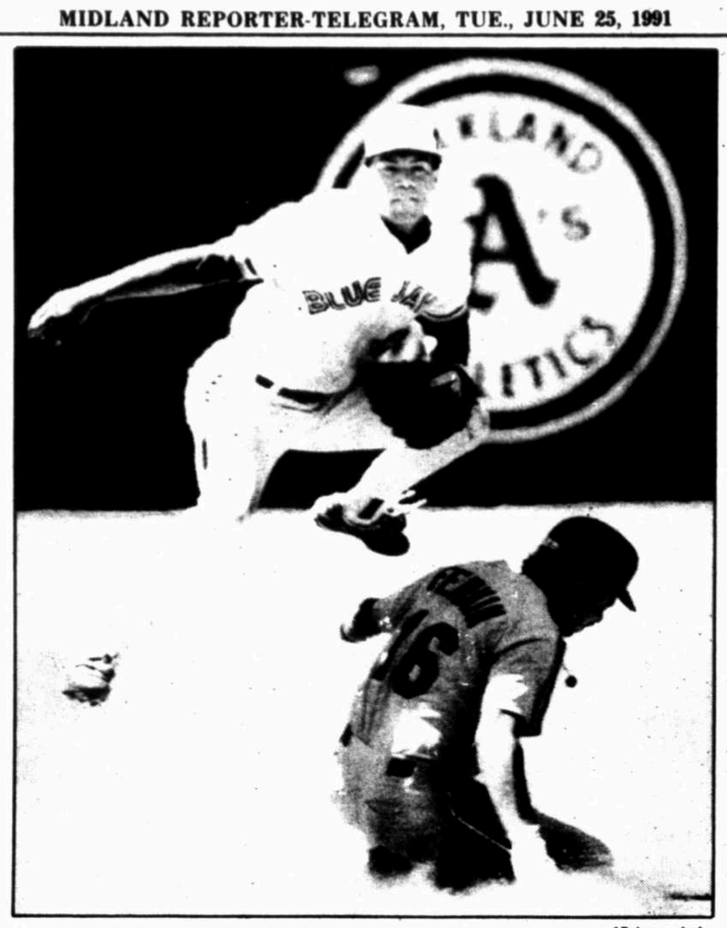

Angels 9, Royals 4

KANSAS CITY — Dave Winfield hit for the cycle for the first time in his career and went 5-for-5.

Winfield singled in the first and sixth innings, doubled in the third and hit his 14th homer of the season, a two-run shot, in the fifth. He completed the cycle with a triple in the eighth off infielder Bill Pecota, who was making his first big-league appearance as a pitcher, and scored on Dave Parker's single.

Winfield is the first Angel to hit for the cycle since Dan Ford in 1979.

Winfield, who did not hit his 14th homer last year until Aug. 3, also had a five-hit game in April against Minnesota and is batting .325 over his last 39 games. California is 10-2 this season in games in which Winfield homers.

Dykes reunion set in Coahoma

COAHOMA (AP) — In 1964, Coahoma High School needed a head football coach, so it hired a young assistant at San Angelo Central named Spike Dykes.

Yes, that's the same Spike Dykes who is the head football coach at Texas Tech University.

Coahoma hadn't been setting the woods on fire, although it was 4-5-1 the year before Dykes arrived, but most of the players were returning.

The Bulldogs caught fire under Dykes, going 10-1 the first year and 12-1 the next. The team hadn't been in the playoffs in 11 years until Spike came on the scene.

After the second season, Dykes called the team together and said they were special and that they ought to have reunions every 10 years. But something always got in the way until this year.

The 25th anniversary will be celebrated on Saturday with a reunion. Dykes has his bags packed. So do most of the players.

"That's the only time that I've ever applied for a job," Dykes recalls. "I was ready to try head coaching, so I applied at Snyder, Colorado City and every little bitty town around.

"Coahoma wasn't very picturesque, and I think Sharon (his wife) was crying when we were going across the railroad tracks, but she did that at every job I've taken. But those people turned out to be the warmest community I've been in."

NO WONDER. His Bulldogs averaged 36 points a game the first year and 43 the second. They averaged allowing about a touchdown a game, so it's easy to tell which team won.

It might not have been all coaching, because there was a lot of talent. All of his starters made all-district and 13 were offered college scholarships, most to small colleges. The Saturday Evening Post magazine even came to town and included the Bulldogs in an article comparing high school football in Texas and Pennsylvania.

Six of the players went into coaching. Others have been successful in other ventures.

What kind of a coach was the rookie Dykes?

"He scared me to death at half time of our first game and we were down only 7-0 to Rankin," said Eddie Wolski, a former assistant under Dykes at Midland Lee and now with the Texas High School Coaches Association in Austin. "He came in, kicked over some trash cans and told us to take off our uniforms, that we were an embarrassment to him, ourselves, the school and the community. Hey, we thought we were doing pretty good, but he told us differently.

"He said if we didn't score the first time we had the ball in the third quarter to just head on to the dressing room and he'd follow. I was afraid he was going to kill us."

To save the team's neck, Eddie McHugh, who is now a coach at Lee Freshman, took a pitchout and went around end on the first play of the second half for a 60-yard touch down, fueling the Bulldogs to a 24-13 win.

"After the game, he told us how much he loved us, that if we kept working hard, we'd have a season to remember for the rest of our lives," Wolski said. "Then he hugged each one of us, getting blood and sweat all over his white shirt.

"It that was the last time that year we were behind at the end of the first half."

Success begats success, and the fans rallied around the young coach and his players. Coahoma met Aspermont in the ninth game of the season for the District 6-A championship, and portable stands were brought in from Big Spring, 10 miles away. Many still had to stand, so the next year, a new stadium was built to seat 3,200 fans. It turned out to be too small.

FANS WOULD arrive at the stadium four hours before game-time just to get a seat, and when the playoffs rolled around, the Bulldogs played before 7,500 fans. The locals formed police escorted caravans that extended in excess of three miles behind the bus carrying the Bulldogs to their games.

Seagraves ended Coahoma's first unbeaten season under Dykes, 34-26, in bi-district, although the Bulldogs took a 20-18 lead into the fourth quarter and despite 205 yards rushing on just 13 carries by McHugh, who was injured late in the game.

"The boys didn't lose that game, coaching did," Dykes said. "A.D. Shaver (of Seagraves) outcoached me 7-1 and we still almost beat them with that 1."

The next year, Coahoma romped and stomped through the regular season and none of the games was really close. The Bulldogs bit Plains, 51-14, in bi-district, then ousted a Sonora team in regional that had allowed only 53 points in 11 games, 25-14.

White Deer ended the dream in the quarterfinals, 27-23, although at one time in the third quarter the margin was 27-7. The Bulldogs were deep in White Deer territory in the waning seconds, but an incomplete pass and fumble ended the threat.

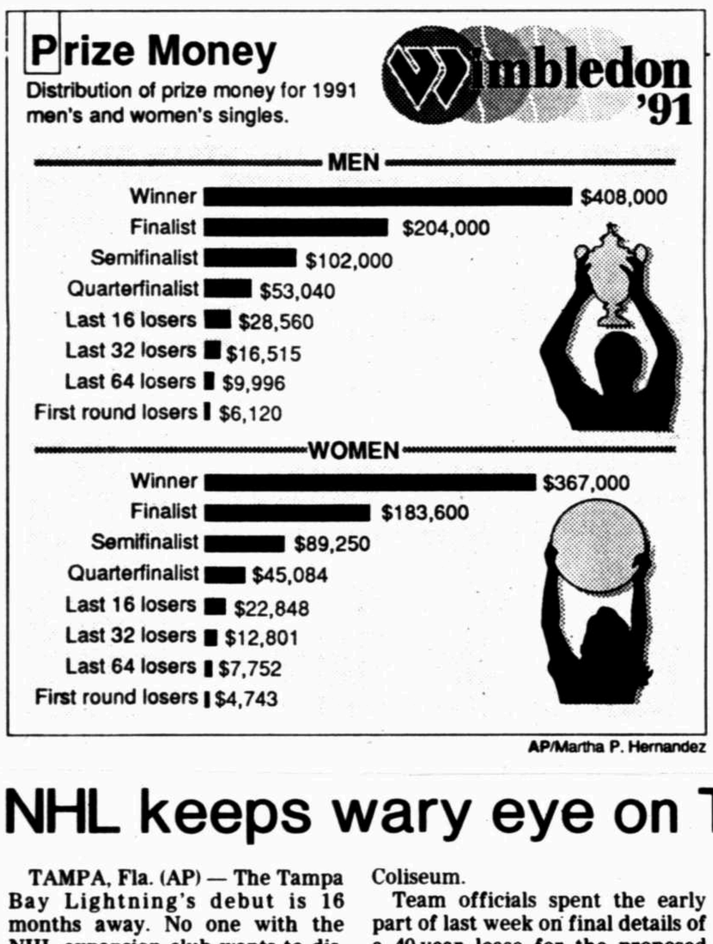

White Deer went to the finals before losing to Wills Point, 14-0.

"I was just dumber than a box full of rocks," Dykes said. "We should have won that game, too, but we had a lot of fun."

Vikings sign Walker

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (AP) — Herschel Walker agreed to a one-year contract with the Minnesota Vikings on Monday, ending months of sometimes acrimonious negotiations.

Vikings vice president Jeff Diamond, who negotiated the deal, would not say how much the former All-Pro running back will be paid. Neither Walker nor his Cleveland-based agent, Peter Johnson, could be reached for comment.

Padres win third straight

NL Roundup

ST. LOUIS — After throwing seven shutout innings, Adam Peterson felt good enough to come up with a new nickname for the San Diego Padres.

"We're the road warriors," said Peterson, who held the St. Louis Cardinals to three hits in a 4-1 victory Monday night. "Road, sweet road."

Jerald Clark homered and drove in two runs and Fred McGriff added a run-scoring single, his fifth RBI in three games, as the Padres won their third straight game and their major-league high 22nd on the road. They're 22-14 on the road and 15-20 at home.

"It doesn't matter to me one way or another, but it seems like the team plays a lot better on the road," Peterson said.

The Padres took three of four from the Cardinals for their first series triumph at Busch Stadium since July 1988. They were 1-5 at St. Louis in both 1989 and 1990. The Cardinals scored only 10 runs in the series.

"I don't want to take anything away from (Peterson) but we're not hitting," Cardinals manager Joe Torre said. "We're not aggressive.

"Tomorrow, we're going to forget batting practice."

Peterson (3-1) struck out four and walked two. The Cardinals threatened in the first when Ray Lankford tripled with two outs and out two men on base in the fourth, but Peterson struck out Pedro Guerrero to end the first and got Todd Zeile to hit into a forceout to end the fourth.

John Costello struck out two of the three batters he faced in the eighth and Craig Lefferts got the last three outs, losing the shutout on Felix Jose's two-out RBI single.

NHL keeps wary eye on Tampa Bay Lightning expansion effort

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The Tampa Bay Lightning's debut is 16 months away. No one with the NHL expansion club wants to discuss even the remotest chance their bid to bring professional hockey to Florida could go sour.

Nevertheless, skeptics aren't likely to stop questioning Phil Esposito until management meets several crucial deadlines between now and its inaugural season.

Among the concerns are whether the team will be able to pay its $50 million expansion fee and sell 10,000 season tickets by the end of this year. Another potential headache is the construction timetable for yet-to-be-built Tampa Coliseum.

Team officials spent the early part of last week on final details of a 40-year lease for the proposed arena. By Thursday, though, attention shifted from whether the 18,500-seat facility will be ready as promised in October 1992 to the revelation that Tampa Bay missed the June 15 deadline for making a franchise payment of $22.5 million.

Esposito, the team president and Hall of Fame center for the Boston Bruins and New York Rangers, was in Buffalo for the NHL Board of Governors meetings. He addressed the situation, which team officials attributed to a delay in the transfer of funds from foreign investors.

"There will be hockey here in '92. That's about all I can tell you," Esposito said. "I don't want people to worry ... We will be here and playing."

"We have the money ... Really, it's nothing to lose any sleep over," said Mel Lowell, Lightning vice president for finance. "We're fine."

The final $22.5 million installment of the $50 million expansion fee is due Dec. 15. Two weeks later is the deadline for meeting an unprecedented league requirement that expansion teams sell 10,000 season tickets.

Ottawa, which was also awarded a conditional franchise last winter, has already fulfilled that commitment. Tampa Bay's ticket sales haven't been as strong, in part because work on the Lightning's $97.5 million arena has yet to begin.

The lease agreement clears the way for the start and team officials think they'll see an increase in sales soon. More than 2,000 season tickets were sold within a month after the franchise was awarded, but less than 1,500 have been sold since then.

"A lot of people have indicated to me that they're going to buy season tickets, but that they're just waiting to see the building start going up," said Esposito.

Meanwhile, Esposito said he will ask that the team begin the first season on the road to give workers additional time to get the arena ready for hockey.

DODGERS: Weekend series isn't a message to Bucs

(From 1C)

"We're really not scoring runs or playing the kind of baseball we were playing earlier in the season," pitcher Zane Smith said. "We're looking forward to playing the Dodgers again when we're playing our best baseball. Then we'll see what happens."

Pitching dominated the weekend series, with the Dodgers outscoring the Pirates 10-8. Pittsburgh starters allowed seven earned runs in 25 innings, while Dodger starters yielded only four earned runs in 31 innings.

Two weeks earlier in Pittsburgh, the teams split a rain-shorened two-game set with each scoring four runs.

The bullpens are one reason the teams are 1-2 in the league in pitching. Dodger relievers are 7-4 with 20 saves. The Pirates are 10-3 with 22 saves — including Bill Landrum's 13-for-13.

Los Angeles has the only staff in baseball with an ERA under 3.00 and leads the majors in strikeouts. Pittsburgh pitchers have allowed the fewest walks. The staffs are tied for the fewest homers allowed with 37.

The major difference at this stage is hitting. The Pirates have been struggling for the past couple of weeks, while the Dodgers continue to gererate runs with Brett Butler in the leadoff spot, Juan Samuel among the league's top three in batting and Eddie Murray among the top 10 in RBIs.

"The Dodgers are hot right now and we're not, and that was really the difference in this series," Smith said. "I think this is going to make us a little more ready the next time we meet."

The Dodgers, meanwhile, will have no trouble getting up for the Pirates when they next meet in late August at Dodger Stadium. Pirates manager Jim Leyland made an off-hand remark after Sunday's game that no doubt will end up on a bulletin board somewhere.

"Their pitching staff is real stingy with runs," Leyland said. "The one thing they weren't supposed to do was catch the ball, but they caught everything we hit."

The Dodgers may be only seventh in the league in defense, but they are the second-best fielding team in the N.L. since May 8. They committed only one error in the four games with the Pirates.

Los Angeles made 33 errors in its first 25 games and started the season 12-13. But the Dodgers have committed just 18 errors in their last 43 games and are 30-13 over that span. Overall, they are 24-8 in errorless games.

Like Carter, teammate Brett Butler doesn't believe the outcome of the weekend series was anything to get excited about — even though it was treated like a playoff preview by the local media and the 183,390 fans who went through the turnstiles.

"We don't have to send a message to anyone," Butler said. "We just go out there each day with a cautious confidence, not arrogance.

"We're not trying to send a signal to the Pirates. We're just trying to win ballgames today and not worry about tomorrow."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, JUNE 25, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your finances should show decided improvement. Turn your back on negative people and concentrate on attaining a long-sought goal. Limited partnerships will enjoy unusual success in December and January. A family business could be brought back to life by February of 1992. An old flame will reappear early next spring. Tread carefully. Your family's happiness could be at stake.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: director Sidney Lumet, singer Carly Simon, actress June Lockhart, comedian Jimmie Walker.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A legal matter will be cleared up to your satisfaction. The atmosphere at work is conducive to teamwork. An associate shares information that could lead to higher profits. Be cautious.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Some information about a co-worker is confusing. An old friend could try to tap your resources. Lie low. An authority figure is working behind the scenes on your behalf.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A business matter is uppermost in your thoughts. Steer clear of questionable get-rich-quick schemes. An academic venture looks very promising. Keep up with recent developments in your field.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You and your partner are more in tune with each other now. Keep business and friendship strictly separate, and curb a tendency to spend more than you can afford. Do your entertaining at home.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Go ahead and mix business with pleasure if traveling today. Higher-ups could seem arbitrary. Do not despair if you must put a personal project on a back burner for a while.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Creative ventures promise the greatest rewards now. Stop scattering your energies and concentrate on one task at a time. Higher-ups may interfere more than you like. Be patient.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): With all the harmony around you today, it would be smart of you to focus on mutually profitable arrangements. Meeting someone in an unusual setting creates a special rapport.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.21): Confidential talks lead to important new alliances and financial opportunities. Be receptive to other people's proposals when making your own. Wine and dine a loved one tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You now have the time to think about a complicated situation. Joint assets will soon get a healthy boost. You or someone close to you comes up with a terrific idea.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Romance may have to take a backseat to your career now. Those in the arts gain wider recognition. A newcomer who shares your interests shows you how to really enjoy life.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your humanitarian instincts are aroused. Follow them and you will find a new outlet for your creative and artistic talents. A hobby could turn into a real bonanza.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You have the power to rally people together for a common cause. Plans you hatched in secret will bear fruit. Keep a low profile this evening. Give your loved ones more emotional support.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are thrifty but generous, unwilling to spend much money on themselves but always ready to help those in need. They have great empathy for others and invariably root for the underdog! Excellent money managers, these Cancerians should do beautifully in business. Home-loving and hospitable, they will enjoy entertaining their friends and having house guests. Good books, classical music and occasional travel keep these Cancerians in a happy frame of mind.

Opening lead: Queen of ◇

One of our pet peeves is the defender who falsecards at every opportunity. More often than not, the player succeeds in fooling partner rather than declarer, often with dire consequences. There are some falsecards, however, which cannot cost. The picture soon becomes clear to partner, but declarer can be taken in.

North-South conducted a standard auction to reach a normal three-no-trump game. With 28 points in the combined holding, that should have been an easy contract to fulfill. However, there was no ready source of tricks, and a wily West managed to lure declarer down the wrong road.

After ducking the opening diamond lead and winning the continuation, declarer decided his best chance lay in developing the club suit. But when South laid down the ace of clubs, West dropped the king. That could not possibly cost—the defenders were due to get only one club trick no matter which card West played.

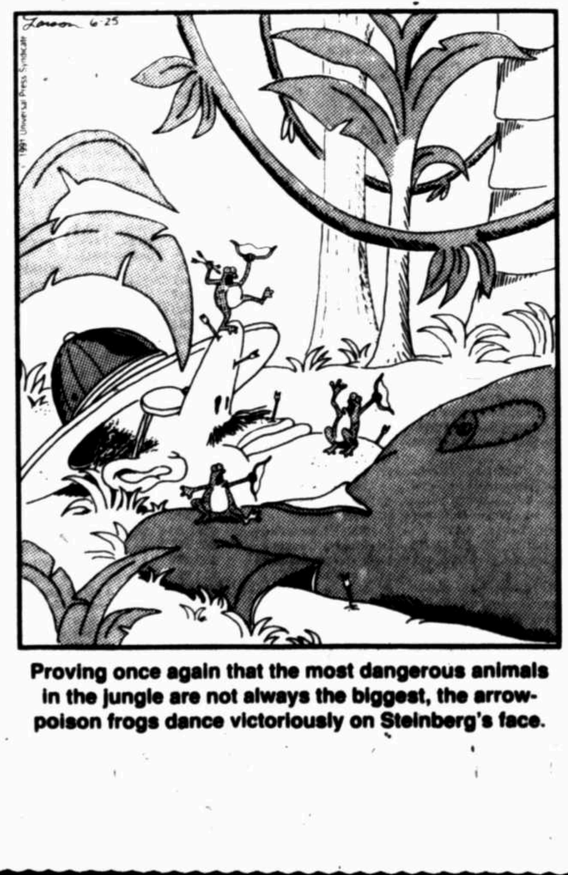

That was not the impression declarer received. Afraid that the club suit was not breaking and that playing a second club would would lose a tempo, declarer decided to look elsewhere. A finesse of the heart jack lost to the queen, and a diamond return forced out declarer's last stopper in the suit.

Declarer now crossed to the king of hearts and tried the spade finesse. That lost, and West cashed a diamond to complete the defenders' book, then carefully exited with a spade. When hearts didn't break, declarer had to concede down one.

You can argue that declarer should not have been fooled into taking the line of play that he did. However, once the king of clubs dropped declarer needed only one of two finesses in the major suits to succeed—far better odds than when he started.

Miss West Virginia believes luck had hand in her winning

SHINNSTON, W.Va. — Miss West Virginia Leah Lasker believes good fortune, like the kind you find on a bubble gum card, may have played a part in her winning the crown.

Her mother and younger sister were chewing gum to calm their nerves before the pageant Saturday when her sister's eyes grew wide as she read the enclosed fortune: "You will be Miss America."

"It was really kind of strange," Lasker said Monday. "I kept it in my shoe when I danced and during the evening gown and swimsuit competition."

There's also the fact that four is Lasker's lucky number. This was the fourth year she competed for Miss Mercer County and Miss West Virginia.

But Lasker, a third-year law student at West Virginia University, isn't chalking it all up to luck.

Winning required hard work, like practicing her dance routine eight hours a day for the month before the Miss West Virginia pageant.

A sense of humor also helped, she said.

"One of the judges was a tap dancer. That's your worst fear, that one of the judges is an expert in what you do," Lasker said. "She asked me what she should look for during my routine. My answer was, 'Remember, I'm in law school. My future is in my head and not in my feet.'"

LOS ANGELES — Actor George Kennedy, the late rock star Jimi Hendrix, and television's Mary Tyler Moore are among the 22 entertainers selected for stars next year on the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

Kennedy

"I am thrilled with the 22 who were chosen as they represent an excellent cross section of Hollywood's brightest stars, representing our classic as well as contemporary performers," said Johnny Grant, chairman of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce.

The star recipients were chosen from about 200 nominees by the five-member Walk of Fame Committee. After an honoree is selected, a sponsor pays the $4,800 cost of the star.

Moore

Getting stars for their film work are Kennedy, the late Bruce Lee, Frankie Avalon, Louis Gossett Jr., Tom Hanks, Dean Stockwell and the late Dr. Clarence Muse.

For television, star recipients are Miss Moore, Debbie Allen, Peter Falk, Jester Hairston, Nichelle Nichols and Edward James Olmos.

Recording artists receiving stars are Hendrix, Tex Beneke, the group Chicago, Dizzy Gillespie and Donna Summer.

Brock Peters and John Raitt will get stars for live theater, and sportscaster Jim Healy and traffic reporter Bill Keene will get stars for radio.

CAPRI, Italy — Nobel laureate Czeslaw Milosz was awarded the $10,000 Capri Prize for his life work at a weekend gathering of the world's leading poets.

A Polish emigre, the 80-year-old Milosz teaches at the University of California, Berkeley.

One of the stars of the three-day festival was Tahar Ben Jelloun of Morocco. He read his newly minted 600-verse poem about the Persian Gulf War. The poem honors the unknown Arab soldier, who's wrapped in a black plastic body bag, burned and buried in a common grave.

"In this war, the Americans and allies counted their dead, buried them with flags and ceremonies. But what about the Arab dead?" said Jelloun, winner of France's most prestigious literature award, the Prix Goncourt.

"Also in death, some bodies are more important than others."

Other honored poets: Canada's Irving Layton, 79; Lithuania's Thomas Venclova, professor of Slavic languages at Yale University; Czechoslovakia's Ivan Wernich, who worked as a stone mason and night watchman during Communist rule; Spain's Rafael Alberti, at 89 the grand old man of Spanish literature; Attilio Bertolucci, 90, father of the movie director, Bernardo, and Joao Nunes Abreu, a lyric Portuguese writer from Madeira island.

NEW YORK — Al Pacino, Jack Lemmon and Alec Baldwin will star in the movie version of the Pulitzer Prize-winning play, "Glengarry Glen Ross," the producer announced Monday.

James Foley, whose latest film is the thriller "After Dark, My Sweet," will direct it.

Further casting will be announced soon, and filming is scheduled to begin Aug. 5 at New York City's Astoria Studios, Producer Jerry Tokofsky said.

David Mamet's play, which won the 1984 Pulitzer Prize for Drama, tells the story of small-time, cut-throat real estate salesmen whose ruthlessness, competition and conflict creates a climate of extreme desperation as they try to sell tracts of Florida land to gullible buyers.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was sharply lower this afternoon, tumbling in reaction to a Japanese securities scandal that depressed markets earlier in Asia and Europe.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 40.69 points at 2,924.87 with two hours to go before until the closing bell.

Volume at the Big Board was 93.51 million shares as of 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Declining issues outnumbered advancers by about 4 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 1,251 down, 313 up and 426 unchanged.

Today's decline followed lower stock prices in overseas markets, which were shaken by the news that the presidents of two huge Japanese securities houses were resigning after reports their companies arranged loans for a former organized crime boss. They also reportedly compensated top clients for investment losses.

Among actively traded issues, IBM was down ½ at 99⅛, General Motors was down 1¾ at 42⅜, Columbia Gas was up ½ at 17⅝, Boeing Co. was down 1⅛ at 45¾ and Pepsi Co. was down ¼ at 29¾.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks was down 2.56 at 204.31 At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was at 360.79, down 4.57.

Stocks were also moving lower for technical reasons, following a quick run-up at the end of trading Friday, when the Dow closed 11.62 points higher at 2,965.56.

Prices head lower

Oil prices started the week off on a losing note Monday on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

West Texas Intermediate for August delivery fell 25 cents to close at $19.98.

The move prompted local crude purchasers such as Permian Corp. and Texaco Trading and Transportation to lower their posted price for WTI 25 cents to $18.75.

Stocks plunge

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market finished sharply lower Monday as a Japanese securities scandal pushed down share prices around the globe.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials plunged 52.55 points to 2,913.01. The index's fall past the 50-point barrier activated a New York Stock Exchange rule that limits computerized program trading during periods of sharp price movements.

Faster computers

AUSTIN (AP) — Dell Computer Corp. on Monday introduced a new generation of computers using a faster microprocessor.

Designated the PowerLine series, the new family consists of six processor-upgradeable workstation and floor-standing computers, including two models that use Intel's 50 megahertz version of its 486 microprocessor.

Dollar falls

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell Monday against other major currencies in trading in Europe, hit by profit-taking after the U.S. currency failed to test whether the Group of Seven central banks would intervene.

Gold prices tumbled more than $5 an ounce in Europe.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 0.72 yen to a closing 139.77 yen.

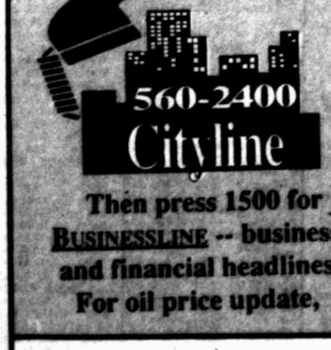

In London, the British pound jumped to $1.6425 from $1.6310 late Friday.

Other late dollar rates in Europe, compared with late rates Friday, included: 1.7845 German marks, down from 1.7990; 1.5335 Swiss francs, down from 1.5460; 6.0595 French francs, down from 6.1115; 2.0098 Dutch guilders, down from 2.0265; 1,328.00 Italian lire, down from 1,338.25, and 1.1427 Canadian dollars, down from 1.1428.

Gold fell in London to a late bid price of $361.20 a troy ounce from $366.80 per ounce late Friday. In Zurich, the metal fell to a closing bid of $361.00 an ounce from $366.50 late Friday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $2.17 an ounce to close at $365.92.

Silver bullion fell in London to a late bid of $4.29 a troy ounce from Friday's $4.45.

U.S.-made machine tools orders fall

Analysts interpret figures as evidence that nation remains in recession

N.Y. Times News Service

Orders for U.S.-made machine tools fell in May for a third straight month, dropping 19.6 percent from the April level, an industry trade group said in a monthly report released Monday.

The drop comes in spite of predictions by makers of machine tools and the industry trade group, the Association for Manufacturing Technology, that industry orders generally would improve as U.S. businesses began spending to upgrade their manufacturing plants.

Analysts interpreted the May figures as evidence that capital spending continues to show little sign of rebounding and that the nation's economy remains in a recession despite recent signs of recovery.

In its report, the association said new orders for machine tools fell to $155.8 million in May from $193.7 million in April. It was the lowest monthly new-order total since August 1987, when it was $142 million. New orders in May were also 24.5 percent below the level of May 1990.

For the first five months of this year, machine tool orders are down 13.6 percent from a year earlier.

Machine tools are used to cut or shape metal parts used in durable products like appliances, automobiles, aircraft and building components. The level of orders and shipments of machine tools is considered an important indicator of the health of U.S. industry.

"There seems to be a reluctance on the part of manufacturers to upgrade their facilities," said Richard O. Priebe, a spokesman with Cross & Trecker Inc., a large machine tool maker that earlier this month agreed to be acquired by a competitor, Giddings & Lewis Inc.

"Manufacturers seemed to be sitting tight right now," Priebe said. "It reflects a general weakness in the economy, and that caused manufacturers to delay their purchases."

Larry W. Hollis, an analyst with Robert W. Baird & Co., a brokerage in Milwaukee, said the May figures reflected weakness in the economy.

"In recessions, orders are generally slow," Hollis said. He added that the May report indicated that foreign machine tool makers, particularly those in Japan, "continue to make significant inroads in American market share." He added that foreign machine tool producers "now have about half of the domestic market."

Despite the weakness of new orders in recent months, Albert W. Moore, president of the Association for Manufacturing Technology, said he remained encouraged by recent data from the Federal Reserve showing two consecutive months of higher factory utilization.

"Conventional wisdom in our industry is that machine tool orders escalate when capacity utilization crosses the 80 percent level," Moore said.

"Manufacturers also have tigher control over their inventories now than in most downturns," he added. "With lean inventories, production will respond quickly to higher demand, in turn creating demand for the machine tool."

Eljer to begin negotiations with Jacuzzi

DALLAS (AP) — Eljer Industries Inc. said Monday it will begin negotiations with Jacuzzi Inc. over a $145 million buyout offer.

Eljer's board made the decision in a special meeting in Chicago late Friday after the company's stock plunged when it deferred a decision earlier in the week.

Eljer stock closed last week down $8.50 at $15 a share on the New York Stock Exchange, a 36 percent drop in value. The stock rose ⅜ to $15.37½ Monday.

Jacuzzi on May 7 offered $20 a share for Eljer, a Plano-based manufacturer of plumbing and other home construction products. The two companies are among the nation's top five whirlpool bath makers.

During a regular board meeting last Tuesday, Eljer learned an Illinois judge had ruled against the company in a dispute with an insurer over the timing of coverage on claims related to a faulty pipe system made and sold by an Eljer subsidiary.

"At Tuesday's meeting, the company had to defer consideration of the Jacuzzi bid because they just got word at the board meeting itself" of the court opinion, said Eljer spokeswoman June Filingeri.

"At same time they were really mindful that they needed to have even more information," she said. "Obviously they were aware people were waiting to hear about Jacuzzi."

Company officials discussed the offer with Roy Jacuzzi, president of the Walnut Creek, Calif.-based Jacuzzi. He said he was willing to "discuss all aspects of our proposal," Eljer said.

Jacuzzi also told Eljer he needed to learn more about the court decision and its potential effect on the company, Eljer said.

Eljer plans to appeal an Illinois federal judge's ruling that could have a "material adverse effect" on the company by exposing it to millions of dollars in claims from the troubled plumbing system.

The dispute involves Eljer's U.S. Brass Corp. subsidiary, which the plumbing system called Qest, and Liberty Mutual Insurance Co.

About five percent of the Qest systems installed in homes and businesses by U.S. Brass and other companies have resulted in leaks and damage that insurers have helped pay.

Compaq introduces new PC, speedier chip

HOUSTON (AP) — Compaq Computer Corp. said it would make desktop computers with the speedier microprocessor developed by Intel Corp.

Compaq also introduced options for advanced disk-drives that enables users to store large amounts of information quicker and more efficiently.

The company said Monday its latest model, the Compaq Deskpro 486/50L, uses Intel's 50 megahertz version of its 486 microprocessor, giving users 50 percent greater performance over the current 33 megahertz chip.

Megahertz, or million cycles a second, is a standard measure of processing speed in computer chips.

Intel announced the faster chip Sunday.

Compaq will make three models of the new computer. They will be available later this summer, ranging in price from $11,299, to $13,999.

They are also the first Compaq products to incorporate a high-performance 510-megabyte fixed disk drive, which has an average access time of 12 milliseconds.

The computers are designed for highly technical work. They will compete with workstations, common in science labs, that use a technology called reduced instruction set computing, or RISC.

Compaq is trying to recover from a stock slide that followed predictions that second-quarter earnings would probably fall more than 15 percent below those for the same period in 1990.

Bank-deposited CDs have FDIC coverage

By Bill Doyle

Q. I have been approached by stock brokers, financial planners and the like — none of whom is employed by a bank, savings and loan association or credit union — who say they can sell me certificates of deposit with Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. coverage.

Can they really do this?

Doyle

A. Sure. Most brokerage firms and many other financial outfits conduct what has become known as "deposit brokerage" business through which they put customers money into CDs issued by banks and S&Ls.

FDIC coverage applies only to CDs and other deposits at banks and S&Ls. Most CUs have coverage from the National Credit Union Share Insurance Fund, another federal agency and one in far better financial shape than FDIC.

Despite its well-documented problems, FDIC continues to provide rock-solid safety for deposits it covers. So, deposit brokers naturally stress FDIC coverage to customers and potential customers.

A deposit broker might sell you a CD issued by a bank in your home town or in some distant part of the country. If you sign up for such a deal, you'll get the CD's stated interest rate. Under no circumstances pay a commission or other charge to the deposit broker. He or she collects a fee from a bank or S&L for each CD sold.

Q. After seeing his advertisement for CDs paying higher interest rates than is available from local banks, I contacted a deposit broker and asked how this is possible.

I was told, "We buy CDs in the millions of dollars and therefore can get higher interest for you than you can do on your own as a private individual with less money to invest."

That seems to make sense. But is it true?

A. Yes. But there is more to the story.

It stands to reason that a bank or S&L is willing to pay higher interest on $5 million brought in at one time than on, say, 500 CDs transactions of $10,000 each. The latter would involve more time, energy and paperwork, all of which is expensive.

Deposit brokers keep track — usually on computers — of which banks and S&Ls pay the highest interest and send their customers' CD business there.

However, here is a kicker. Some of the banks and S&Ls offering high-interest CDs are on shaky financial ground and have to keep new deposits coming in, just to keep from failing — at least temporarily. All too often, that only prolongs the agony and the bank or S&L eventually goes belly up.

When that happens, as it has so often in the past, CD holders and other depositors are protected up to the limit of FDIC coverage. But they no longer collect high interest and have to find another place to put their money.

Q. A broker through whom I have purchased CDs in the past now wants to sell me a previously issued CD at a premium price of "103" — 3 percent over the CD's $50,000 face value. This CD pays exceptionally high interest and the broker explains the CD's yield — annual interest divided by purchase price — is higher than I can get by buying new CDs at face value.

I cannot afford to take any risk with my money. What do you advise?

A. Don't buy that CD for the simple reason it involves risk.

There's nothing wrong with buying most interest-paying securities issued when rates were high. The premium purchase price puts the yield in line with, and sometimes higher than, yields on newly issued securities.

But that "exceptionally high interest" you mention is a red flag of warning the bank or S&L that issued the CD might be in financial trouble. If it goes bust, FDIC will make good only the CD's $50,000 face value. You would be out the 3 percent premium — $1,500.

Question of luxury-tax repeal on hold

By David Crosson
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Efforts to repeal luxury taxes that are said to be costing Americans jobs have hit a snag on Capitol Hill.

The two congressional panels responsible for the tax laws — the Senate Finance Committee and the House Ways and Means Committee — have put a number of repeal proposals on hold, pending completion of a study by the General Accounting Office.

The GAO, a non-partisan investigative arm of Congress, has been asked to evaluate the impact of the taxes on employment in the industries they affect. The study, which will focus on the boat-building industry, is not expected to be completed until September.

The GAO also has been asked to assess whether the costs of collecting any of the luxury taxes might outstrip the revenues the taxes are expected to generate.

The levies were a last-minute addition to last year's deficit-reduction agreement and were advanced by congressional Democrats so the wealthy would be among those burdened by the accord's tax initiatives. The package already had included so-called "sin" taxes on liquor and cigarettes that are viewed as hurting middle-class and working-class people hardest.

Since the luxury taxes were imposed, manufacturers of private planes and boats as well as automobile dealers selling high-priced foreign vehicles have complained that the levies are costing Americans jobs.

The National Marine Manufacturers Assn., for instance, maintains that 19,000 jobs have been lost in the boat building industry as a direct result of the luxury tax.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kans., and Reps. Richard Armey, R-Texas, and Dick Nichols, R-Kans., have sponsored bills to repeal all of the new luxury taxes.

Responding to the complaints recently, Richard Darman, the director of the Office of Management and the Budget, reversed the Bush administration's position on the luxury taxes, saying the White House would not oppose their repeal if they are hurting an industry.

Reacting to Darman's declaration, a spokesman for Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., the chairman of the Ways and Means panel, pointed out that last year's deficit reduction accord requires that, if changes are made to it, revenue losses will be offset by new sources of income.

To date, none of the luxury-tax repeal measures that have been introduced in Congress have included suggestions for new revenue to offset the luxury taxes.

Even before Darman embraced the idea of repealing luxury taxes, the impact of the levies was being questioned.

At a Finance Committee hearing last week, the Congressional Research Service, which also conducts non-partisan investigations, released a report showing that luxury boat sales are not sensitive to price and that, for the most part, plummeting yacht sales can only be attributed to income declines among those who normally buy such vessels.

In short, the study said, the recession rather than the luxury tax is responsible for the bulk of boat building job losses.

If the GAO finds that the cost of collecting any of the luxury taxes is greater than the revenues that might be generated, the levies could be repealed without violating last year's deficit reduction accord.

Otherwise, however, any revenue losses that might result from the repeal of a luxury tax must be offset.

Glow of invincibility wears off U.S. weaponry

By Russ Britt
New York Times News Service

Hold the applause for those American-made weapons used in the Persian Gulf War.

Although the conflict has been over for four months, a comprehensive picture on how well the highly touted hardware really worked is just emerging.

And while the high-tech heroes of the war — the Patriot interceptor missile, the Tomahawk cruise missile and the F-117A stealth fighter — still get good grades, they may not have been as invincible as initially thought.

The Patriot, for example, was the key to keeping Israel out of the war by destroying Iraqi Scud missiles. But the Patriot often only deflected Scuds. Sometimes the Patriot would miss a target and hit the ground, causing its own damage.

Some say that the nature of war makes it impossible to get a fully accurate portrayal, with precise success rates and tallies of hits and misses. Service personnel in the heat of battle can't take time to assess results, and accurate damage reports are difficult to obtain inside enemy territory.

"It's more an art than a science in terms of assessments," said Roger Beaumont, professor of military studies at Texas A&M University. "We can't lose sight of the fact that the truth is always out of reach. We can only do approximations."

The war largely was viewed as a test for the weapons purchased over the last 20 years, but many of them did not get much of a workout.

That was particularly true of Army weapons that saw action only four days — the time it took to complete the ground war. The often-criticized M-1 Abrams tank and Bradley Fighting Vehicle barely got off the blocks when a cease-fire was announced.

The Army and Air Force, the two main service branches that were involved in the conflict, are compiling data for a number of reports assessing weapon performance. Other studies are expected from the General Accounting Office.

Those reports are expected to be completed later this summer or in early fall. Whether the assessments will be comprehensive is open to question.

During the war, Pentagon briefings sometimes featured Desert Storm commander Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf displaying footage of smart bombs taking out bridges and other important targets. Failures were not shown, even though Schwarzkopf himself said it took allied bombers 790 missions to take out 33 bridges.

"I called some of those films the Pentagon's greatest hits," said Gordon Adams, director of the independent research group Defense Budget Project.

But others say the reports will show the effectiveness of American weaponry. They acknowledge there may have been missiles that missed the mark, but those weapons still were several cuts above anything available in past wars.

"The simple fact is it was enough to win the war with low casualties on our side," said J.R. Wilson, the Western states group editor for Jane's Defense Weekly. "They destroyed enough to destroy the army."

Here is a look at the performance of several weapons that starred in the war, or were closely scrutinized because of past problems:

Patriot intereceptor missile: The Patriot was the most brilliant star on the Pentagon hardware list because of its high visibility. But it has received only mixed reviews in recent months for its performance.

Army officials point out that the Patriot intercepted 45 of 47 Scuds fired at Israel and Saudi Arabia, but critics say Scud warheads were not hit and often fell to the ground. Raytheon Co. of Lowell, Mass., builds the Patriot.

A total of 158 Patriots were fired at Iraqi Scuds, said Pierre M. Sprey, a former Defense Department official who testified recently before the House Armed Services Committee. Some Patriots returned to the ground to cause more damage, he said.

"The Patriot added to the casualties in Tel Aviv," Sprey said, adding that Isreali reports indicate only 20 percent of the Scuds were deflected away from defended areas and only one warhead was destroyed in midair.

Still, it's pointed out that the Patriot originally was designed for another mission — as an anti-aircraft weapon that travels with troops.

"It never was designed to protect a wide area, like a city," said Jay Kosminsky of the Heritage Foundation, a Washington, D.C., research group.

Most analysts are skeptical that the Patriot makes a case for the Strategic Defense Initiative, but they agree that improvements or more advanced theater missiles might be in order.

— Tomahawk cruise missile: The Tomahawk appeared to score impressive victories in the first hours of the war, when reports surfaced that it made 90- degree turns around buildings and hit strategic targets with pinpoint accuracy.

But as the war progressed, more reports indicated that Tomahawks missed their targets or were taken out by anti-aircraft fire, analysts said. As a result, data on the weapon appears to be incomplete.

Some analysts are particularly critical of what they consider vague Pentagon reports that show 80 percent of the $1.3 million missiles "caused damage." Since it was easy to keep an inventory of how many Tomahawks were fired and each was equipped with sophisticated electronic video gear, critics question why more details can't be gleaned.

"I'm sure every missile fired over Iraq hit Iraq," said retired. Rear Adm. Eugene Carroll, senior analyst for the research group Center for Defense Information. "I don't know how we did the damage assessment."

Supporters again point out that the Tomahawk never was available in past wars. Here, it provided the military with an option to inflict damage with no allied casualties.

The Tomahawk is built by St. Louis-based General Dynamics Corp. in San Diego and McDonnell Douglas Corp. in St. Louis.

— F-117A stealth fighter: The radar-evading plane has received high marks, based on the fact that none of the fighters built by Calabasas, Calif.-based Lockheed Corp. in the Los Angeles suburb of Burbank were downed.

While opinions vary on whether the plane's performance made the case for stealth technology, and the $865 million B-2 stealth bomber, it appears the F-117A proved its worth by slipping into Baghdad and taking out key command centers with laser-guided smart bombs.

The key question is how well the fighter eluded radar, its most important feature. Scattered reports of allied and enemy forces being able to track the plane raised some eyebrows.

Precise information may only be available from the enemy, analysts said. Many wonder if it could stand up against a more formidable opponent like the Soviet Union.

"With any luck, we'll never know," said Greg Williams, military analyst for the research group Project on Government Procurement.

— A-10 Thunderbolt: Also known as the "Warthog," this unusual-looking plane received very high marks.

The A-10 was used in various roles — tank-killer, Scud hunter and attacker of enemy air defenses and radar systems. It also shot down two helicopters with its cannon. In one instance, a Warthog was shot but made it back safely.

On the down side, Thunderbolt pilots were deemed responsible for firing on friendly forces in initial ground battles.

One of the older planes used in the war, the A-10 was supposed to be retired by the Air Force, but will remain in service. Chantilly, Va.-based Fairchild Industries built the A-10.

— Apache helicopter: One of the most closely watched systems, the Apache did extraordinarily well when it performed, many analysts said. The Army reported that the helicopters destroyed 500 tanks, 120 armored personnel carriers and various defense systems, vehicles and other aircraft.

The McDonnell Douglas-built Apache fired the first shots of the war, taking out Iraqi early warning systems with Hellfire missiles. That enabled other aircraft to bombard Baghdad in the war's first hours.

But many point out that the helicopter's main flaw, its tendency to break down, never was put to the test.

"What the Apache did it did well. No one knows how long it would have done it, though," said Lawrence Korb, former assistant secretary of defense under the Reagan administration and an analyst for the Brookings Institution in Washington.

Large numbers of maintenance crews were assigned to the gulf to keep the temperamental helicopter at a 90 percent-plus readiness rate, Korb said.

Army spokeswoman Maj. Nancy Burt said Apaches in the gulf held a high maintenance priority over those in the United States. As a result, the helicopters here were well below the Army's standard readiness rate of 75 percent.

But all helicopters including the Apache demanded 10 times the maintenance during the war as they would normally during peacetime, Burt added.
