Sinking of Soviet ship kills at least 79

MOSCOW (AP) — At least 79 people died when a Soviet passenger liner plunged to the bottom of the Black Sea in 15 minutes after being rammed by a freighter, and 319 were still missing more than a day and a half later, a maritime official said today.

Deputy Merchant Marine Minister Leonid Nedyak said 836 people were rescued after the cruise liner Admiral Nakhimov went down about midnight Sunday after it was struck amidships by the cargo vessel.

He said 29 people were hospitalized.

There were 1,284 people on board, according to official reports.

The rescue operation was continuing, Nedyak said. He did not provide details on the condition of those hospitalized.

Divers, helicopters and surface vessels were searching the disaster site for more survivors, maritime ministry official Igor M. Averin told The Associated Press earlier today.

All those aboard the cruise ship were Soviets, he said.

The official government newspaper Izvestia said the rescue operation was being carried out by a fleet of ships and small boats off the port of Novorossiysk, where the 61-year-old liner sank.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said the ship was resting on the bottom at a depth of 142 feet.

Foreign radio monitors said they did not hear a distress signal after the liner and the Soviet freighter Pyotr Vasyev collided.

Weather conditions were calm when the collision occurred eight nautical miles off Novorossiysk, Averin said.

Averin said he did not know how quickly the ship sank, or what danger there was for passengers who had already retired to their cabins for the night.

Asked whether the freighter or the passenger ship was considered to have caused the collision, Averin said a government commission headed by Politburo member and First Deputy Premier Geidar A. Aliev was in Novorossiysk to investigate.

"Usually a collision at sea is a result of a clash of opinions between two people, just like in a marriage," Averin said. "In a marriage you can't find a single person guilty, like at sea."

Averin said civilian and military helicopters, divers and other vessels were involved in continuing rescue operations to try and find survivors. He did not specify how many people were involved in the rescue operation.

The choice of a senior Soviet official like Aliyev to conduct the government inquiry indicated the accident could be extremely serious.

Soviet media on Monday carried only a brief statement from the Communist Party Central Committee and government on the accident, the second sinking of a Soviet passenger liner in seven months.

OPEC countries begin cutbacks

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Oil production cutbacks were reported in Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Ecuador and some other OPEC members Monday in compliance with an agreement by the cartel to reduce output as a means of driving up prices.

The authoritative weekly Middle East Economic Survey said Saudi Arabia, the world's leading oil exporter, had reached agreement with its customers on reducing production from the August levels of about 5.5 million barrels a day to a new quota of 4.35 barrels.

Saudi Arabia and the 12 other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries had abandoned quotas set by the cartel, which aggravated an existing oil glut and drove prices down to around $10 a barrel, less than one-third the levels of late last year.

According to the report by the weekly, which is based in Nicosia, Saudi Arabia is expected to pump less than the allowed 4.35 million barrels a day in September and October, the period in which the cutbacks are to be made.

All OPEC members except Iraq agreed to reduce output in those two months to the 16.1 million barrels a day the cartel produced in October 1984. That would be more than three million barrels a day less than the combined production in July of this year.

Kuwait said Monday it had reduced production by 44 percent, from 1.6 million barrels a day to 900,000 barrels.

Ecuador said it will put into effect an announced reduction in oil production but did not say how much would be cut from its daily output. Press reports said it would be 45,000 barrels to 100,000 barrels per day.

Since 1984, Ecuador has increased production in order to increase income during a period of falling oil prices and it reached a maximum of 300,000 barrels a day earlier this year.

Mansour al-Freih of the state-run Kuwait Petroleum Corp. said it will not tolerate non-compliance by other members.

"Any such violation will mean the accord, reached by OPEC oil ministers on Aug. 5, will become null and void," he said in a statement carried by the official Kuwait News Agency.

Kuwait was the first member country to endorse an Iranian proposal for cutbacks at the OPEC ministerial conference in Geneva.

The news agency said Algeria and Indonesia also had reduced output. Abu Dhabi, the leading oil producer in the United Arab Emirates, announced its plans to do so last week.

Did heart attack lead to crash?

CERRITOS, Calif. (AP) — The pilot of the small plane that collided with an Aeromexico jet suffered a heart attack before the accident, and authorities said 18 people were killed on the ground in addition to the 67 victims on the planes.

The latest report of fatalities today in the Los Angeles Times included 15 people in a single house.

In another development, officials disclosed late Monday that the air traffic controller guiding the jetliner when it collided with a private plane Sunday was apparently distracted by a third craft nearby.

Los Angeles County fire spokesman Capt. Garry Oversby told the Times that the dead included 67 people aboard the two planes and 18 residents of the neighborhood devastated by flaming wreckage of the crash.

Fifteen of the victims on the ground were in one home, apparently at a party, Oversby said. Found in the same home were the bodies of three of the jet's passengers, he said. The bodies of three other people who had been on the ground were found in a second house.

Previously confirmed deaths included 64 aboard the Aeromexico DC-9 and three on Piper Archer.

The air traffic controller will take a drug test today "not because there was any indication (drugs) are involved, but as a matter of routine," John Lauber, a National Transportation Safety Board investigator, said Monday.

"It is a fact that (the third craft) took the attention of the controller during the time he was dealing with Aeromexico," Lauber said.

When the controller returned to deal with the jetliner, he got no response.

"Clearly we have to answer the question as to why the Piper aircraft was apparently within the terminal control area of Los Angeles airport without a clearance," Lauber said today on the "CBS Morning News." "We also have to ask why the crew of Aeromexico failed to see that aircraft. We have to ask why the controller didn't spot that aircraft and call it out to the Aeromexico crew."

He stressed it was "much to early" to draw any conclusions from the reports of the heart attack, the third airplane and other evidence.

The crash in the Los Angeles suburb of Cerritos was the worst U.S. air tragedy since 137 people were killed Aug. 2, 1985, when a Delta Airlines L-1011 TriStar crashed while landing at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

The Piper's pilot suffered a heart attack moments before the collision, Bill Gold, a spokesman for the Los Angeles County Coroner's Office, said Monday.

Lauber said he had no indication if the heart attack could have led to the collision.

"That, of course, is a significant finding that we will be pursuing extensively," he said. "There isn't much at this point we can say about it, other than to note it with great interest and we will pursue."

Officials were not able to determine the severity of the heart attack, but said it did not kill the pilot. He was decapitated in the collision, Gold said.

The coroner's office did not identify the pilot, but Robert Kirkpatrick of Spokane said the coroner's office notified his former wife, Suzanne Kirkpatrick of Spokane, that her father, mother and sister were in the small plane.

Kirkpatrick identified the pilot as William Kramer, his wife as Kathleen Kramer, and the daughter as Caroline Kramer. Ms. Kirkpatrick declined comment. Kramer had recently moved to Los Angeles, Kirkpatrick said.

Steady rains blamed for Dallas bus mishap

Associated Press

A steady rain during the morning rush hour was blamed for a bus wreck that injured more than a dozen people in Dallas today as sections of North Texas remained under a flash flood watch due to record-setting downpours over the holiday weekend.

In the West Texas town of Big Spring, city officials were still trying to assess the damage caused by more than 5 inches of rain in two hours over the Labor Day holiday.

Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport reported 1.87 inches of rain over a 24-hour period through Monday, breaking the previous record of 1.69 inches set in 1927.

Light rain was expected to continue over the area, with 2 inches or more predicted by early today.

The flash flood watch, which included the Dallas-Fort Worth area, Sherman, Greenville and surrounding areas, was finally lifted about 9 p.m. Monday. The National Weather Service predicted totals exceeding 5 inches for some areas by today.

A Dallas Area Rapid Transit bus crashed into a bridge abutment during this morning's rain, injuring 12 to 18 people, Dallas police said. Police spokesman Hollis Edwards said the bus was on a thoroughfare headed toward downtown when it slammed into the concrete abutment.

In West Texas, rainfall amounts ranged from one-half to 4 inches and several roads were closed due to rising water.

A sheriff's department dispatcher in Kimble County, southeast of San Angelo, reported State Highway 377 south from Junction to Rocksprings washed out in several places. Law enforcement officers also monitored the roadways between Junction and Menard, where a Department of Public Safety trooper reported water running over U.S. Highway 83.

In Guadalupe County east of San Antonio, the sheriff's department reported wind damage to buildings at Marion and a motorist on Farm-to-Market 1044 reported marble-size hail at about 8 p.m.

No serious damage or injuries were found.

San Antonio pair among crash victims

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A prominent San Antonio couple who detoured to California to visit an ailing relative rather than returning directly home after a business trip to Mexico was among the victims of the Aeromexico crash in a Los Angeles suburb.

Stanley Stein, 55, a real estate developer, and his wife, Sandy Stein, 39, a real estate broker, were among the 64 passengers and crew aboard the Aeromexico DC-9, which plunged into a Cerritos, Calif., neighborhood Sunday after colliding with a single-engine Piper Archer.

Mrs. Stein had phoned her parents in Jacksonville Beach, Fla., just days before she left for Mexico. She did not mention her planned trip.

So on Sunday afternoon, when Faye Lightburn watched news footage of the crash, she had no idea her daughter and son-in-law were dead.

The news did not come until late Sunday, when Mrs. Lightburn's brother called from Sacramento.

The Steins had scheduled a detour to Los Angeles, where they planned to catch a connecting flight to Sacramento, Calif., to visit with a relative who is gravely ill with a heart condition, said Jesse Leon Lightburn, Mrs. Stein's father.

"When the plane didn't arrive in Los Angeles, they started checking," Lightburn said. "They told us Sunday night they were 99 percent sure they had been killed."

The Steins were the only Texas residents on a list of victims released by the airline Monday evening.

The family did not get official word from Aeromexico officials until Monday, Mrs. Lightburn said. The airline promised to handle all funeral expenses, she said.

The Lightburns said they were not angry at the airline.

"What bothers me is that some jerk can get into a Piper and just cut off the back of a DC-9," said Lightburn. "They need more controls."

The DC-9 was on its approach to Los Angeles International Airport when it was struck by the small plane. The three people on the private plane were also killed, and 15 others are missing and presumed dead in the demolished homes on the ground.

A coroner's spokesman said later Monday that the man believed to have piloted the small plane suffered a heart attack minutes before the collision.

Hobby says special session 'essentially over'

AUSTIN — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby Monday declared the special legislative session essentially over, saying that without action on the state's $3.5 billion deficit, Texas is "about to become a laughingstock."

The 30-day session officially ends at midnight Thursday, but Hobby said the House-Senate impasse over spending cuts and taxes has so solidified that no resolution will come by then.

Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis said Gov. Mark White will call another session if this one ends in failure.

"It might be that time ran out on this special session now, but I think we'll be right back in and be able to solve the problem in the next two weeks," Lewis said.

Speaking to reporters in Beaumont, White said he remains hopeful that lawmakers will complete their business on time.

If they don't, he said he would give them some time off before calling them back to Austin.

John Odom, White's chief legislative liaison, conceded that the 1.25-percent sales tax increase the governor favors would be "very, very difficult" to pass by Thursday.

Odom said he will spend the rest of the week visiting with lawmakers, making "an assessment of whether there is any validity ... of coming back for another 30 days, and if so, when."

The speaker maintained that his Band Aid plan of cutting state spending and delaying some scheduled payments will keep the state solvent until lawmakers can address the full budget during the regular session that begins in January.

Hobby, who wants a tax increase, commended Lewis for "a superb job," but pointed to a report from Treasurer Ann Richards that shows his plan will not work.

"We're just about to go over the cliff," Hobby said. "Our checks are about to bounce. Texas is about to become a laughingstock.

The credit rating of the state is just about to take a dive from which it won't recover for a decade or more. Those are fairly serious problems."

Lewis did not agree with that assessment, saying he won't consider "revenue enhancement" until he is convinced his program will not work. "I don't like being the heavy guy," he said.

"I'm very deep in my convictions that before I'll sign off on taxing the people of this state, I want to make sure that they are getting the best value for their tax dollar. I'm not about to be run over and buffaloed by a bunch of selfish individuals who want it for their own self interests."

Asked who those "selfish individuals" are, Lewis said they are people who want "more money in their pork barrel."

Official Trap Map of Texas offers tourists fuzz-busting tips

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A San Antonio businessman says he's come up with a product entrepreneurs catering to Texas tourists have thus far overlooked — a map showing the state's speed traps.

The Official Trap Map of Texas shows drivers 44 locations which it says are likely to have radar traps.

The map includes designations for different areas such as "highly patrolled" and "rigidly enforced."

J.D. Boggus, president of Trap Map, Inc., told the San Antonio Express-News that the map encourages drivers to stay within the speed limit.

"We could be making the highways safer," Boggus said.

Boggus said his company was not trying to predict where speeders would be in the most danger of a visit from the law.

"We're not going to say you are getting a ticket if you speed in these (radar-detecting) areas; but they are designated because if you speed in these areas you stand a better chance of receiving a ticket," he said.

Boggus said the idea for the map came from a combination of things.

"Due to the decline of the oil business in Texas, the next (source of revenue) to look at was tourism," he said. "I asked myself, 'What could tourists use in Texas?' "

"We're not going to say you are getting a ticket if you speed in these (radar-detecting) areas; but they are designated because if you speed in these areas you stand a better chance of receiving a ticket," he said.

Boggus said the idea for the map came from a combination of things.

"Due to the decline of the oil business in Texas, the next (source of revenue) to look at was tourism," he said. "I asked myself, 'What could tourists use in Texas?' "

Speaking to reporters outside Lefortovo Prison in Moscow is Ruth Daniloff, wife of an American reporter detained on espionage allegations.

Retaliatory allegations denied

MOSCOW (AP — A Foreign Ministry spokesman today denied the KGB had jailed an American reporter on accusations of spying to retaliate for the arrest of a Soviet national in New York, and said the newsman was caught red-handed "like in a bad spy movie."

Spokesman Gennady Gerasimov told a special news briefing the KGB state security police were investigating U.S. News & World Report correspondent Nicholas Daniloff, who was detained Saturday, and would turn the findings over to judicial authorities.

He did not say how long Daniloff would be held without being charged in Moscow's Lefortovo Prison, and declined to speculate on what charges might be filed against the 52-year-old correspondent.

At one point Gerasimov said the case would "go to court," implying a decision to try Daniloff had been made. But he later said the judicial authorities would decide whether to put the reporter on trial.

"As I understand it, Daniloff was caught red-handed with a sealed envelope, opened in his presence, which contained secret documents," he said.

Asked who authorized the arrest, Gerasimov said only, "He was detained by workers of the Committee for State Security (KGB)."

Daniloff's wife, Ruth, said Monday after her second meeting with her imprisoned husband that she was told the investigation would last 10 days.

The chairman of the U.S. news weekly, Mortimer B. Zuckerman, met today with a senior Kremlin adviser in an effort to help Daniloff. But the adviser, Georgy Arbatov, told reporters the reasons for Daniloff's detention were "none of my business."

Daniloff has told his wife he was grabbed by eight KGB agents and photographed after a Soviet acquaintance handed him a closed packet later found to contain secret maps and photographs of Soviet military installations.

Daniloff said he was told the package contained newspaper clippings.

Asked if the material in the package was enough to convict Daniloff on espionage charges, Gerasimov today told reporters:

"The materials he possessed fully showed his complicity in espionage activity. This is a classic type of situation, like in a bad spy movie."

He insisted the detention was "a separate case" from the Aug. 22 arrest in New York of Gennady F. Zakharov, a Soviet U.N. employee charged with buying secret information from an undercover FBI agent.

Gerasimov was asked about statements by Daniloff's wife that the reporter was framed.

"Nobody forced him to go there (to the meeting)," he said. "He didn't have to have a secret meeting."

Gerasimov said Daniloff was caught in "very suspicious circumstances," which he said included walking in a park that he described as being on the outskirts of the city.

The Lenin Hills park where Daniloff was detained is 10 minutes' drive from the Kremlin and a five-minute walk from Daniloff's apartment.

Asked if simply meeting a source in a park is considered suspicious, Gerasimov said, "Of course not, enjoy your stay here."

Gerasimov suggested it was possible that the man who handed Daniloff the packet was under surveillance, but could not say what happened to him.

Daniloff has been in Moscow 5½ years and was to leave this week on a monthlong trip retracing the steps of a Russian ancestor jailed in Siberia in 1825. He then was to return to the United States for reassignment.

Arbatov, a member of the Communist Party Central Committee and head of the U.S.A.-Canada Institute, a Kremlin think tank, explained his meeting with Zuckerman by saying, "He's an old friend, he came to visit."

Arbatov declined to say after the meeting whether the Central Committee had been consulted about Daniloff's detention.

Zuckerman, in a telephone interview with ABC's "Good Morning America," described Daniloff as "a pawn in some Soviet game they're playing with the United States."

He contended the arrest was designed to establish "some kind of leverage" regarding Zakharov. He said Daniloff was "being treated very well ... and on that score we are relieved and happy."

Zuckerman told the network he would be allowed to meet with Daniloff on Wednesday. He also said he would meet with "a senior official of the foreign ministry."

Daniloff's 16-year-old son Caleb arrived at the institute midway through the meeting with a telex for Zuckerman.

Jeff Trimble, who arrived Aug. 22 as Daniloff's replacement, said the telex detailed measures being taken in Washington to win Daniloff's release, but declined to give further details.

Mrs. Daniloff said her husband was "very subdued" Monday, but "greatly heartened when I told him about the kind of press coverage he was getting."

Daniloff is allowed to exercise once a day in what she called "a sort of cage" on the prison roof and otherwise spends his time reading a Russian-language collection of works by French author Victor Hugo that was left in his 8-by-10-foot cell, she said.

With Daniloff in the cell is "this character, (Soviet) physicist person," she went on. "I think he (Daniloff) understands very well the role of this gentleman in the cell with him."

In Santa Barbara, Calif., White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes on Monday said President Reagan was angry over Daniloff's arrest, and had asked U.S. officials to do everything possible to secure his release.

U.S. will continue summit plans despite arrest of journalist

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — The Reagan administration says it will press ahead with planning for a superpower summit despite U.S. unhappiness over the arrest of an American journalist in Moscow.

"Things seems to get done in periods leading up to a summit and we think it's important that we meet," White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Monday.

At the same time, Speakes said Reagan was angry over the arrest of the reporter, Nicholas Daniloff, correspondent for U.S. News & World Report.

"I think the president is clearly disturbed and concerned and has asked officials in the administration to do everything possible to secure (Daniloff's) immediate release," Speakes said.

Daniloff, 52, was apprehended Saturday for what the KGB said was an act of espionage. The reporter told his wife he was jumped by eight KGB agents when a Soviet acquaintance handed him a package that turned out to contain two maps marked "top secret."

The United States has rejected the charges and demanded Daniloff's immediate release.

The Washington Post, in today's editions, quoted a spokesman for the Soviet Foreign Ministry, Gennadi Gerasimov, as saying Daniloff would be put on trial for espionage after the investigation is completed. The spokesman also linked the case to the arrest of a Soviet official in New York last month on spy charges, the newspaper said.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Peter Martinez refused comment on the Post report.

"Incidents like this, which clearly have no basis in fact, cannot help U.S.-Soviet relations," Speakes said.

While saying the United States views the matter very seriously, Speakes said, "However, on the same question, we believe that a summit is a potentially important event and we will continue to pursue our discussions with the Soviet Union on summit issues."

He said one of the summit issues is human rights, and added that Daniloff's detention falls into that category "in its broadest sense."

Senior U.S. and Soviet arms negotiators are to meet in Washington later this week to continue talks aimed at paving the way for a summit later this year.

In addition, Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze are to confer in Washington on Sept. 19-20 to discuss the timing and agenda for a summit, the second between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

"There's been no change in the schedule as far as our meetings with the Soviets this week or in the Shultz-Shevardnadze meeting date," Speakes said.

"We believe that the arms control discussions and discussions on regional issues, human rights issues, bilateral issues and the Shultz-Shevardnadze meeting are very important steps in U.S.-Soviet relations," the spokesman said, adding that the administration has "always felt that a summit is an excellent opportunity for leaders to get together and discuss important issues that divide our two countries."

Daniloff's detention follows the arrest in New York of Soviet physicist Gennadi F. Zakharov, a United Nations employee, on spy charges.

Asked if the United States might exchange Daniloff for Zakharov, Speakes replied, "I don't know of any plans for a swap."

The New York Times reported Monday that the administration had ruled out a swap and said the United States was prepared to retaliate against the Kremlin unless Daniloff were released promptly.

"There have been no decisions made specifically about our future course of action, although we do leave our options open," a senior administration official said, speaking on condition he not be identified.

He said the person quoted in the Times' account "was clearly speculating and pretty well speculating in isolation."

Speakes refused to say what action — if any — the United States would take.

"I'm not going to speculate on our course of action."

Town's colorful past marked by neon

EDITOR'S NOTE: Curiosity, fed by Texas' sesquicentennial celebration, led Walter Putnam, an editor in the Dallas bureau of The Associated Press, to take a close look at a West Texas Town with the same name.

By WALTER PUTNAM

PUTNAM (AP) — Even if your last name isn't Putnam, this town has a certain allure at night, its neon lights beckoning in soft rays of reds and blues, glimmering in the West Texas twilight along Interstate 20.

By day, it's but a small cluster of buildings left from the time when the highway cut through, a town that has lived through boom and bust in ranching and oil. At one point it dreamed of becoming a mecca of tourism — "The New Carlsbad of America."

Putnam, population 110, now has another attraction. It's the only place to buy liquor in the 60-mile stretch between Ranger and Abilene. To many it's the watering hole of the West.

Larry King, author of "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" and other tales, spent the first 13 years of his life in Putnam, decades before the liquor sales began.

"It had been dry forever," King said in a telephone interview from his home in Washington. "It had always been a staid and dry and preacherful place."

Geographically, Putnam can be defined as lying along the Texas & Pacific Railroad 30 miles east of Abilene. On a north-south line, it's located where scrub oak stands are replaced by mesquite for the next 300 miles west.

The town first was called Catclaw, for a native bush that grows in rocky hills and makes the terrain look like a scene out of the Old Testament. It also was briefly known as Breman, but that was changed in 1881 because of the similarity to Bremond, another Texas town.

In the early 1900s, developers sought to take advantage of the railroad and local mineral wells, billing Putnam as "The New Carlsbad of America."

The Carter-Holland Hotel opened March 20, 1910, with 50 rooms near the two mineral wells with bubbling water that promised to be "Dame Nature's own prescription for suffering humanity."

The mineral water business never was as kind to Putnam, however, as oil. By 1920, the area's first oil wells were drilled.

In 1925, 40 businesses crowded around the town square and the population had swelled to more than 1,000, up from an estimated 250 in 1890. Some say it even reached about 5,000 before the boom was over.

Then came the Depression, and by 1940 the town had dwindled to about 500 people. During World War II, the government offered people an opportunity to move their houses to cities like Fort Worth and Abilene, where the defense industry offered jobs, said LaVerne Rutherford, the postmistress and a cousin of Larry King's.

In the mid-1960s, Interstate 20 divided the town in half. The once-grand hotel was leveled. The springs were covered and the square plowed under.

The town's gravel streets now connect to a paved road that passes under the highway. To the north of I-20, there's a single strip of stores, many of them bearing neon signs advertising beer and wine.

Alcohol sales, which began about a decade ago, have helped keep the town from drying up completely, said Ida Mae Waddell, the peace justice.

"It gives us revenue to do what we never had — for the fire department, sidewalks, a redo of city offices," she said.

King, whose father was a blacksmith here, chronicled the town's demise in his essay "Requiem for a West Texas Town."

'Young Einstein' fights back from head injury

AUSTIN (AP) — Shelah Riggins, who reached the state finals in last year's high school physics competition, has been described by his Pflugerville High School math teacher as "a young Einstein-type character."

Today, the 16-year-old cannot remember where he is or why. Doctors hesitate to say when, or if, he will fully recover.

Twelve days ago, Riggins was seriously injured when his head hit the pavement after an 18-year-old man threw him down, investigators said. The incident reportedly followed an argument triggered by a scratched car door.

Within 24 hours, Riggins had narrowly escaped death from a blood clot pushing against his brain, doctors said.

Barry Bates was charged with aggravated assault on Riggins, said Detective Gary Cutler of the Travis County sheriff's office. Bates, who is free on his own recognizance, reportedly was arguing with one of Riggins' friends.

"We understand Shelah was trying to calm (the suspect) down," Cutler said. "And the guy lifted him up under the arms and threw him, according to witnesses. (The suspect) outweighs him by 40 or 50 pounds."

Emergency surgery saved the youth's life, but how fast or how completely he will recover is unknown, said his mother, Susan Beck.

"He doesn't even know he's in the hospital," Ms. Beck said. "He can't remember anything that happened. I asked him if he knew where he was and he said, 'The police station.'"

Ms. Beck said she reminds Riggins about what happened and where he is.

"What they're (doctors) telling me is that he has no short-term memory," Ms. Beck said. "And who knows what we're looking at on time to regain that."

Doctors say Riggins, who had a 96 percent grade point average, must remain hospitalized another month and will require extensive therapy afterward.

Vernagene Mott, who has taught Riggins math the past two years, described him as "a young Einstein-type character."

"He's the kind of kid who could start college tomorrow and be OK," the teacher said. "He's just really sharp. I would tell him once how to do something, and he would remember it and then come back later with a quicker, easier way to do it."

SESSION

Lewis also rejected the notion that his anti-tax stance is politically motivated, saying he would prefer to be "dove hunting today rather than be down here."

The speaker said he is working on a plan for cash management notes to help Richards avoid writing hot checks.

That plan, first proposed by Richards, would allow the Treasury to borrow money for long enough to cover low points in cash flow, repaying it later with interest.

Because the loans would be repayed before the end of each two-year fiscal period, Lewis said the cash management notes are not a form of deficit financing and contrary to Texas' pay-as-you-go philosophy.

But a Treasury official said the state's debt may have become so deep as to make the notes impossible to sell.

Meanwhile, a House-Senate conference committee met throughout the day trying to iron out $320 million in differences in their respective budget-cutting bills.

The 10 men made slow progress through most of the executive agencies, with members on both sides predicting another impasse when the panel reaches higher education.

Lightburn told the San Antonio Light that the Steins owned two condominiums in Acapulco, Mexico, but he did not know if they were visiting either on their latest trip. They boarded the plane in Tijuana, Mexico, records show. The Steins also owned a condominium in Port Lavaca, Texas, he said.

"They were away on business quite a bit," said Stein's mother, Goldye Stein of San Antonio.

Stein owned property in San Antonio, Port Lavaca, Colorado and elsewhere in the United States as well as several cities in Mexico, said his brother, Dennis Stein of San Antonio.

Stein also owned a San Antonio shopping center, and the Stein family owned several Speed auto specialty businesses in San Antonio and held the contract for laundry service for Fort Sam Houston.

Mrs. Stein is survived by Colin Martin, a 15-year-old son from a previous marriage. The boy lives with his father in Charleston, S.C.

CRASH

The Piper pilot's log, found among its wreckage in a schoolyard playground, indicated he had 231 flight hours since January 1980, said Lauber, who said that was a relatively low level of experience.

Preliminary transcripts from the traffic control center didn't indicate the Piper's flight path because the pilot apparently never made contact with controllers there, Lauber said.

Just before the crash, the controller handling the Aeromexico jetliner's approach became aware of a third plane in the area, although it didn't appear to be in danger of crossing the DC-9's path, Lauber said.

"Immediately following that exchange, the controller tries to make contact with Aeromexico to give him a left turn," a routine landing instruction, Lauber said.

During the next 2½ minutes, the controller tried to contact the jetliner eight times without success, he said.

"At that point, the controller asked an incoming flight to look for any evidence of a problem and that's when they spot smoke both in the sky and on the ground," Lauber said.

Investigators have identified 32 witnesses to the crash, 11 of whom have been questioned. Most indicated the planes were flying generally toward each other when they appeared to make simultaneous left turns, Lauber said.

The initial impact apparently came at the DC-9s left wing, and the Piper then tore into the jet's horizontal stabilizer, causing it to flip upside down. Witnesses have said the jetliner plunged to earth in that position.

SHIP

The official announcement, distributed by the Tass news agency, said only that the 17,053-ton Admiral Nakhimov "collided with a cargo ship not far from Novorossiysk" and sank "on the night of Aug. 31."

"Rescue measures have been taken," the official news agency said. "The necessary assistance is rendered to those affected. There has been loss of life."

Lloyd's registry of ships, published in London, says the ship had berths for 870 passengers. A Soviet citizen who sailed on the Admiral Nakhimov in 1971 said extra passengers were accommodated on fourth-class deck chairs on the uppermost of its four decks.

A Western naval attache in Moscow said the Admiral Nakhimov, originally named the Berlin, was built in Germany in 1925 and sank once before, in 1945. It reportedly served as a Nazi hospital ship during World War II.

The attache said he did not know how the vessel sank earlier, but that it had been raised and rebuilt by a company he identified as Warnowwerft, whose location was not known.

Adm. Pavel Stepanovich Nakhimov was a defender of Sevastopol during the Crimean War of 1854-55.

The vessel named for him became the flagship of the Black Sea cruise fleet in the 1950s. Most recently, it is said to have been used for the six-day run between the Soviet Black Sea ports of Odessa and Batumi.

On Feb. 16, the Soviet cruise ship Mikhail Lermontov struck a reef off New Zealand and sank. Reports at the time said 792 passengers and crew were rescued and the only death was of a crew member.

Soviet officials blamed the accident on a New Zealander acting as pilot, but the government newspaper Izvestia reported Saturday that the Mikhail Lermontov's captain was fired.

Gadhafi vows to divide world into 'liberation camp, imperialist camp'

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Libya's Col. Moammar Gadhafi, arriving for the non-aligned summit, vowed to do his utmost to divide the world into two factions, "the liberation camp and the imperialist camp," official Libyan radio said.

The radio, monitored in London late Monday, said Gadhafi had come to express solidarity with the people and government of Zimbabwe and to place his resources at the disposal of Africans struggling against the apartheid racial policy of South Africa.

There was no independent confirmation of Gadhafi's arrival, and no immediate indication whether Zimbabwe had assented to Libya's request to provide 1,500 bodyguards for Gadhafi, which Libya had said was necessary "in view of the American aggression and continued threats aimed at the leader."

A Zimbabwe government spokesman, who declined to be identified by name, said Gadhafi was expected to attend today's session of the non-aligned movement's eighth summit, a gathering of mostly Third World nations that has already sharply criticized the United States for its policies in southern Africa and Nicaragua.

"As for the non-aligned conference, I will do my best to surmount this movement and to abolish it completely," Libyan radio quoted Gadhafi as saying upon arriving in Harare Monday night. It did not elaborate on the meaning of his statements.

"I will also do my best to divide this world into two camps only — the liberation camp, and the imperialist camp, as in actual fact there is nothing else in the world but these two camps," Gadhafi was quoted as saying.

On Monday in Tripoli, Gadhafi called President Reagan a "madman" and threatened to form an international army to "fight America everywhere."

Gadhafi's speech and a military parade by 18,000 soldiers jogging in battle dress was part of Revolution Day celebrations marking the 17th anniversary of the Gadhafi-led military coup that ousted King Idris on Sept. 1, 1969.

In speech after speech at Monday's opening of the non-aligned summit, ranging from Zimbabwe Prime Minister Robert Mugabe to Fidel Castro of Cuba to Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua, the United States was depicted as one of the world's prime villains.

Ortega, the Nicaraguan president, said his Central American nation has been the target of U.S. "aggression, intervention and interference" in the form of Contra rebels financed by Washington.

Chile suspends magazines' publication

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Bracing for a week of unrest, Chile's military rulers have temporarily suspended the publication of two lively dissident magazines in a crackdown on public criticism.

Police detectives with judicial warrants raided distribution centers of Cauce, a muckraking Social Democratic journal, and Analisis, which mixes radical leftist views with sharp political humor.

They seized all 25,000 copies of each weekly that were to reach newsstands this week.

Analisis was also barred, under a wide-ranging national security law, from publishing for the next two weeks.

"This is a disguised state of siege, an attempt to strangle opposition media that are financially weak," said Patricio Acevedo, editorial secretary of Analisis.

The government seized copies of Cauce on Sunday after jailing its editor on charges of slander against the armed forces. No reason was given for the Monday night action against Analisis.

The press crackdown was a clear sign of Chile's annual political turmoil leading up to Sept. 11. That is the anniversary of the bloody 1973 coup that ousted Marxist Salvador Allende's elected government and brought President Augusto Pinochet to power.

Both magazines have played up calls by a Communist-Socialist coalition for a national strike Thursday and Friday to wear down Gen. Pinochet's government.

The 70-year-old army commander, citing a left-wing terrorist threat, has called a rally Sept. 9 to seek support for prolonging his authoritarian rule.

Between Aug. 6 and 21, state security forces unearthed 10 scattered arsenals containing 80 tons of weapons — including 3,115 automatic rifles, 114 rocket launchers and 1,979 hand grenades — that Pinochet said were meant for a Communist-led September offensive.

While the news dominated government-guided newspapers and broadcast media, some radio stations and magazines owned by opposition groups questioned the official claims that so many weapons were unloaded from Soviet fishing vessels along northern Chile's Pacific coast.

WORLD in brief

Lebanese meet for talks

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Christian and Moslem Cabinet ministers met for the first time in nine months today and issued a call for a prompt, comprehensive and stable cease-fire to end the civil war that has claimed more than 100,000 lives.

Prime Minister Rashid Karami, a Sunni Moslem, said his 10-member Cabinet also agreed on writing a new national covenant to embody political reforms that would guarantee peaceful co-existence between Lebanon's Moslems and Christians.

Karami, 65, told reporters the Cabinet has asked a security committee representing the principal warring militias to "enforce the new truce under the direct supervision of the command of the Beirut army garrison."

The Cabinet meeting to launch a dialogue aimed at national reconciliation got under way at 9:45 a.m. at a race track in the no man's land along the Green Line that slices Beirut into Moslem and Christian sectors. It ended two hour later.

Karami said another session was scheduled at the same site Friday.

Lake's victims asphyxiated

YAOUNDE, Cameroon (AP) — U.S. scientists studying the eruption of volcanic gases that claimed more than 1,700 lives said Monday the victims died of asphyxiation related to respiratory or cardiac failure.

In the first written report to the government, the U.S. forensic pathologists also largely ruled out the possibility of seismic or volcanic activity as the cause of the deadly gas that spewed out of Lake Nios on Aug. 21.

Their preliminary report said the the cloud of gas contained large amounts of carbon dioxide and hydrogen sulfide gas. It said "the gas cloud probably changed character as it moved away from the lake, probably due to the oxidation of the sulphur compounds."

The sulphur compounds combined with water droplets in the air to form acids that burned many of the survivors on the face, arms, trunk and legs, according to the report.

But it said "virtually all survivors should recover fully with no disability."

Balloonists set new record

ALMERE, Netherlands (AP) — Three Dutch balloonists set a new transatlantic crossing record today when their helium-filled Dutch Viking plunged into a wheat field here 51 hours and 14 minutes after liftoff from Newfoundland.

The hard but accurate landing by professional balloonists Henk Brink, 44, his 31-year-old wife Evelien, and Dutch fighter pilot Willem Hageman, 39, about 12 miles east of Amsterdam marked the first successful Atlantic balloon crossing by Europeans.

It was also the first balloon journey across the Atlantic by a woman.

The two previous trans-Atlantic balloon flights were made by Americans.

Gorilla strokes five-year-old boy who fell into zoo's pit

ST. HELIER, Jersey (AP) — Levan Merritt, 5, was too eager to see the Jersey zoo's gorillas and fell into their pit Monday. When patriarch Yambo and his family gathered around in sympathy, Levan screamed so loud he scared them away.

Steve Merritt, Levan's father, said he had lifted the boy up to the wall for a better view and then turned away to pick up his other child. When he turned back, Levan had fallen 20 feet into the pit, Merritt said.

While the Merritts and dozens of other people watched at the zoo on this English Channel island, Yambo reached out and gently stroked the child's back and the rest of the gorilla family crowded in to watch.

By Jeane Dixon
Wednesday, September 3, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You should let family members get to know you better. They will be surprised by what they learn and become much more supportive. A long-sought goal moves within reach. Music plays an important role in your life. Guard against overindulgence where food and drink are concerned. Love intensifies.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Actress Anne Jackson, actress-dancer Valerie Perrine, Kitty Carlisle, the Los Angeles Raiders' Darryl Byrd, actor Alan Ladd, baseball's Eddie Stanky, golf's Dave Eichelberger, actresses Irene Pappas and Eileen Brennan, auto designer Ferdinand Porsche, country music star Hank Thompson and cartoonist Mort Walker.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Finish up old projects before starting new ones. Emotions run high at both work and home. New gains come from putting in overtime.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Business success could be linked to who you know. Make the most of a golden financial or social opportunity. A parent-child relationship will be tested in a unique way. Show more affection.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) New investments and proposals meet with good luck. An eagerly-awaited check arrives. Remember the lessons of the past when planning for the future. Finance and friendship do not mix.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Paying attention is important for business success. A foe may try to throw obstacles in your path but they boomerang in your favor! An authority figure gives you some excellent personal advice.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Artistic and creative ventures are favored today. Terminate a floundering business or personal relationship. Profits rise when you take decisive action.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Act confident. Others take you at your own estimation. Inside information helps you make profitable investments. A great day for cementing new alliances. Avoid promising more than you can deliver.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Do not allow a forceful person to hurry you. Go over important documents with care, looking for hidden clauses. An excellent day for joining forces with mate or business partner. Curb extravagance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Although marital differences may be unavoidable, a compromise is possible. People who work for you prove very helpful. You are able to advance a special cause.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Avoid taking risks with your money; curb impulse buying. Postpone making an important decision regarding a partnership with an attractive member of the opposite sex.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You are excellent at dealing with things that require sudden, extra effort. Surprise a friend with money or a carefully-chosen gift. You find yourself feeling much more romantic now. Reveal your hopes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Evaluate your chances for success before accepting a new responsibility or job. It might be better to stay put, doing what you know you do well.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) A show of strength wins you the attention you need now. Reading holds special appeal for a child. Laughter is the best medicine. Emphasize the positive.

Even seemingly simple contracts can be complicated by a lack of entries to one hand or the other. Before adopting a plan, make sure you have the entries to carry it out.

In the North-South style, an opening bid of two no trump showed 21-22 points. Even so, North had ample for his raise to game.

West led the top of his sequence, and declarer could count seven fast winners. Since two more could be developed in clubs because of the nine in dummy, declarer looked no further than his nose. He won on the table and led a club to the ten, losing to West's queen. Had the defender automatically returned a spade, all would have been well, but he found the nasty heart shift.

Declarer won in hand and led a crafty jack of clubs, but East was awake. He took his ace and returned a heart, and declarer found dummy's good club had withered on the vine — declarer's 10 of clubs was a stumbling block.

The sure line is to forget about the club finesse and make certain of two tricks in the suit. Declarer should win the first trick in hand and lead the king of clubs. Now he is a tempo ahead and there are still two entries in dummy. Suppose East wins and shifts to a heart. Declarer takes his king and leads the jack of clubs to force out the queen. Dummy wins the heart return, the 10 of clubs is cleared and there is still a spade entry on the table for declarer to get over to cash the nine of clubs for his fulfilling trick.

Perforated eardrum forces soprano to cancel appearance

J. Sutherland

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A perforated eardrum has forced Australian soprano Joan Sutherland to cancel tonight's gala performance with Luciano Pavarotti.

But the show will go on with Pavarotti singing a program of arias and duets with American soprano Madelyn Renee.

The "Silver Jubilee Concert" marks the 25th anniversaries of Miss Sutherland's American recital debut and of Pavarotti's professional opera debut in Italy.

Miss Sutherland, who developed an ear infection while in Hawaii, suffered a perforated eardrum when her plane landed at San Francisco International Airport, said San Francisco Opera spokesman Scott Horton.

Emerson Buckley will conduct the San Francisco Opera Orchestra at the Oakland Coliseum concert.

Ron Reagan

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President and Mrs. Ronald Reagan had to get up early during their vacation, but they didn't mind. They watched their son, Ron, as guest host on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

"Mrs. Reagan said this morning she thought he was great. He was just wonderful, amazingly poised, really very good, and we were impressed," White House spokesman Larry Speakes said of Ron Reagan's appearance Monday.

ATLANTA (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter has begun moving into his new office in the $27 million Carter Presidential Center near downtown.

The first presidential library was completed for Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1940. Carter's is scheduled to open on his 62nd birthday, Oct. 1.

There will be 26 million library papers and a museum. From his new office, Carter will command several organizations established to continue fighting for his causes: human rights, the environment, and resolution of international conflicts.

"I did not want a monument to me," Carter said of the 30-acre complex at Copenhill, from where Union Gen. William T. Sherman viewed the Battle of Atlanta.

Prince Charles

BOSTON (AP) — Prince Charles arrives tonight for a four-day U.S. visit during which he will help celebrate Harvard University's 350th anniversary and play polo in Chicago.

The heir to the British throne on Wednesday plans to visit Lowell, one of the nation's oldest industrial communities, where he will tour Wang Laboratories to see the latest computer technology.

He then goes to Boston to attend a special state conference on youth employment, visit the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and stop at Burberry's, a British clothing store.

After a reception given by the British Consulate, Charles will be guest of honor at Harvard's 350th Anniversary Dinner in Memorial Hall on Wednesday night on the Cambridge campus.

On Thursday, the prince will be the featured speaker at the anniversary celebration. He will attend an afternoon seminar at Harvard's Graduate School of Design.

Charles later flies to Chicago, where he will attend a Polo Ball to benefit the city's Field Museum of Natural History and the Salisbury Cathedral Spire Trust in England. The trust is seeking to restore the historic British structure.

On Friday, Charles will stop at the Marshall Fields department store in Chicago for a ribbon-cutting ceremony and a tour of a promotion of British merchandise. Later, he will meet students at the Whitney Young High School.

Just before returning to England, Charles will join in a game of polo at the Oak Brook Polo Club.

RANCOCAS, N.J. (AP) — The Powhatan-Renape Indian nation is completing plans to build one of the country's few museums owned and operated by native Americans, the leader of the 8,00-member tribe says.

Construction of the $1 million, two-story museum will begin once the plans are approved by state and local officials, said Chief Roy Crazy Horse.

The museum will house thousands of Indian artifacts, some 10,000 years old, and will offer craft demonstrations, classes and cultural programs.

The museum will be built on the 350-acre wooded reservation here with money raised by the Indian nation, Crazy Horse said recently.

He declined to say how the money would be raised, but that construction should start by early next year.

NEW YORK (AP) — Original Yippie Abbie Hoffman is showing no signs of easing his radical ways even though he turns 50 in two months.

Hoffman's newest venture, a radio program called "Radio Free USA," begins Friday on the New York City FM station WBAI.

"It will be the latest in high-class subversion, satire and entertainment," Hoffman, a 1960s radical and a founder of the Youth International Party, whose followers were called Yippies, said Sunday.

The program will be aired for two hours each week on the New York City station.

On the first program, doctors will tell listeners how to beat urine drug tests, he said. Future topics will include saving Halloween and people under 30 you can trust, Hoffman said.

He said future guests will include authors Isaac Asimov, Kurt Vonnegut Jr., Erica Jong, Hunter Thompson, Norman Mailer and Jello Biafra, lead singer of the Dead Kennedys rock group.

John Tuggle

NEW YORK (AP) — John Tuggle, who fought his way onto the New York Giants roster only to be stricken with cancer after one year in the NFL, died Saturday. He was 25.

A fullback from the University of California, he was the last man taken in the 1983 draft, but made the team in training camp and carried for 49 yards and one touchdown in his only season.

Conditional aid

One might assume the United States supports and promotes democracy around the world. Assume again. In reality, some countries get more pressure than others.

Take Pakistan, for instance. There, the United States supports the heavy-handed military regime of Gen. Mohammad Zia ul-Haq and his handpicked prime minister, Khan Junejo.

The U.S. government views Pakistan as strategically important — enough so that the country is to get $600 million in American military and economic aid this year alone. Pakistan is next to Soviet-occupied Afghanistan and allows millions of Afghan refugees to take shelter along its border. In fact that may help explain why Washington seems so silent in the face of Pakistan's latest bout of political repression.

Zia has been promising a gradual return to democracy, and in fact, lifted martial law last year. But Benazir Bhutto, the charismatic woman who's trying to envigorate the political opposition and force the regime to hold elections, has tested the regime's true intentions. Zia and Junejo responded by jailing her and hundreds of other government opponents. That doesn't bode well for restoring democracy in the immediate future.

Bhutto is the daughter of former Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, Pakistan's first freely elected prime minister. Zia overthrew him in 1977, and Bhutto was hanged two years later. Now, his daughter has returned to Pakistan to lead his followers.

U.S. officials probably fear that if Benazir Bhutto comes to power in Pakistan, she'll reduce ties with the American military. But she's not the only opposition leader, and the repression of internal dissent is likely to cause more mischief in the long run. The U.S. government should condition its foreign aid on a promise that Zia will schedule elections soon.

Military life changing

As recently as 13 years ago, the U.S. military offered a personnel picture which, except for the numbers, uniforms and equipment, had hardly changed in a century.

The lower enlisted ranks still consisted for the most part of young, single males. Their training routines, their duties and their daily lives were supervised by officers and non-coms who were predominantly white.

With the end of conscription in 1973, the character of the services, particularly the Army, experienced profound upheavals. Voluntary enlistment and improved pay and educational opportunities brought more blacks and other ethnics into the military along with a new phenomenon — women and married couples.

Coping with this transformation has taxed the ingenuity of top leaders. The new presence of women and married couples especially raised problems of discipline and housing.

To the credit of the services, however, their desegregation programs, both in terms of race and gender, have won the praise of university sociologists and women's groups as an "American success story." In short, the programs have so proved themselves that more and more young people are seriously pursuing lifetime military careers.

Even West Point, long regarded as a bastion of old-line militarist thinking, has embraced change. And surprisingly, according to the academy's new commandant, Lt. Gen. Dave R. Palmer, the current enrollment is "very patriotic," showing "dedication, eagerness for challenge and willingness to accept discipline."

Obviously the morale and competence of our armed forces has never been higher and, thanks to the adaptability of their leaders, appear destined to remain that way.

Another View:
Contras, go home!

President Reagan's crusade to save Central America, and perhaps the world, from Nicaragua has hit another embarrassing snag. The Central American nations that he says need protecting from the Sandinistas refuse to let U.S. advisers train Nicaragua's contra rebels on their territory.

On Tuesday the government of El Salvador, to which the administration has given more than $2 billion since 1981 to help defeat an insurgency that Reagan insists is masterminded by Managua, said that it would not lend its territory to "any destabilizing opposition force." And a government spokesman said that that particularly means the contras. Earlier Panama, where there are several U.S. military installations, and Honduras, where the current contra camps have been a barely hidden secret for several years, also announced that they would not allow their territory to be the base for an expansion of Reagan's war.

We do not expect this setback to deter the administration, of course. U.S. officials are likely to use the considerable economic leverage that they have in Central America to force their reluctant allies to reconsider. They may find that money talks most persuasively in Honduras, which has received only half as much aid as El Salvador and wants more. Our only hope is that Reagan has the good taste not to try to foist the contra training bases on poor Costa Rica, which prides itself on not having an army and where even the suggestion of active involvement in the crusade against Managua will cause serious political controversy.

In the meantime, outsiders might well ponder why the Central Americans are so willing to publicly rebuff their would-be savior. Could it be that they do not share Reagan's illusions about a war against Nicaragua? Could it be that they do not consider the Sandinistas the dire threat to international security that Reagan claims they are? Could it be that they doubt that the contras can overthrow the government in Managua? Or could it be that they realize that the $100 million that Reagan will give the contras next year is only the start of a longer, wider war in the region — a conflict of which they really want no part?

Whatever the answers, the refusal of three of four of Nicaragua's neighbors to let the anti-Sandinista forces train inside their borders should give Reagan cause to wonder about the wisdom of his course in Central America.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1666, the Great Fire of London broke out. The fire claimed thousands of homes, but only a few lives, in the several days that it burned.

In 1789, the United States Treasury Department was established.

In 1864, during the Civil War, Union General William T. Sherman's forces occupied Atlanta, one day after the Confederates retreated.

In 1901, Vice President Theodore Roosevelt said in a speech at the Minnesota State Fair, "Speak softly and carry a big stick."

In 1924, the Rudolf Friml operetta "Rose Marie" opened on Broadway.

In 1935, a hurricane slammed into the Florida Keys with 200 mph winds, claiming 423 lives.

In 1945, Ho Chi Minh declared Vietnam an independent republic.

In 1963, Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace prevented the integration of Tuskegee High School by encircling the building with state troopers.

JACK ANDERSON

Fired worker claimed overcharges

WASHINGTON — The whistle blower is our principal protection against the designs of public and corporate wrongdoers. He tries to protect the public from fraud and inefficiency; yet more often than not, his reward is retribution.

Jack Anderson

This is what has happened to Patrick Crosby, who was hired by Hughes Aircraft Co. in 1981 to design sophisticated computer systems with military possibilities. Crosby was fired last year, ostensibly because he failed to do his job. But Crosby says he was fired because he was a whistle blower; he says the company set him up for dismissal by giving him an impossible assignment.

While whistle blowers who work for the federal government have a tough enough time, those who work in private industry have it even worse. Their protection against retaliation by the higher-ups they expose is virtually non-existent.

Crosby's criticisms went to the very heart of a defense contractor's mission: to provide top quality for a fair price. Crosby complained, in writing, that Hughes had quality-control problems on high-tech computer systems where quality is absolutely essential, and he accused the company of charging the taxpayers for expenses that weren't directly related to its Pentagon contracts.

At least one Hughes executive has admitted under oath during an administrative law hearing that mischarging may have occurred. Crosby also complained about quality control in memos and reports that he sent to company brass.

Although he had been getting high job-performance ratings, Crosby's persistent nagging evidently didn't sit well with company executives. They began collecting information provided by self-described private investigator Jim Rosoff, who befriended Crosby and then informed on him to Hughes management for reasons that are unclear.

A Hughes spokesman told our associate Donald Goldberg that Rosoff was not hired by the company, and had no contract with Hughes. Indeed, there is no evidence that the company ever paid Rosoff a dime for his information on Crosby.

But company documents obtained by the Government Accountability Project — a Washington-based nonprofit group that helps whistle blowers and which is now representing Crosby before the Labor Department — leave little doubt that company executives listened carefully to Rosoff. For example:

— A Hughes security official told one of his gumshoes to telephone Rosoff. According to an internal company memo dated Jan. 7, 1985, Rosoff warned the company that Crosby had retained an American Civil Liberties Union lawyer. "Crosby is dangerous as he is working with an activist," Rosoff said, according to the memo.

In the same memo, Rosoff was quoted describing Crosby and a friend as "odd balls," "political activists" and "queer as three-dollar bills."

— Several weeks later, according to a memo that went to at least half a dozen Hughes officials, Rosoff called the company security people to warn them that Crosby had aroused some interest on Capitol Hill. Rosoff said "he would see 'us' (Hughes) next week and give a deposition (against Crosby) if it was still wanted," according to the memo.

— A memo dated Feb. 11, 1985, described how Rosoff said he had begun "to play games with Crosby's head" by lying to Crosby about his situation at Hughes and by telling him that the company knew he was an informant.

— Rosoff had dozens of telephone conversations with Hughes officials between December 1984 and March 1985, when Crosby was fired. During this time, according to Crosby, Rosoff had tried to persuade him to resign from Hughes.

Footnote: Rosoff could not be reached for comment.

CRIME WATCH: An internal FBI report gives a rare inside look at the G-men's attempts to crack down on the "Japanese Mafia," known as Yakuza. The FBI is investigating Yakuza operations in New York, California, Hawaii and the Pacific Trust Territories. While Japanese authorities estimate the Yakuza take in $5 billion a year in Japan, there is no estimate on the haul being made in the United States. The FBI's report complains that Japanese officials are strangely reluctant to share criminal intelligence information in an effort to crack down on the Yakuza.

Which to admire? Briber or the one bribed

NEW YORK — President Reagan has come out of the closet about his goal of overthrowing the Sandinista government of Nicaragua. But his hope to use the so-called "contras" to do it looks more and more like an idea whose time will never come.

Tom Wicker

Reagan admitted in an interview with the Mexican newspaper Excelsior that unless the Sandinistas established democracy in Nicaragua, the "only alternative" would be for the contras "to have their way and take over." Taking over, even in Reagan administration doublespeak, can only mean a new government in Managua.

But Reagan is wrong about the "only alternative." He has another option if the contras can't do the job for him — and not even the U.S. military believes that they can. He can send in U.S. forces, and even though the administration denies any thought of doing so, which Reagan do you believe? The one who clearly wants the Sandinistas thrown out of power? Or the one who says he'll never, no never send in the Marines?

But even as the president spoke openly about a takeover by the contras — he called them "freedom fighters" -but that doesn't make them so — a new and predictable difficulty reared its head. No nation in Central America has as yet agreed to allow U.S. "advisers" to train the contras on its soil.

The advisers are to be paid for out of the $100 million in U.S. taxpayers' money that Congress foolishly has agreed to send the contras. If the very word evokes bad memories of the 12,000 "advisers" that America sent to teach reluctant South Vietnamese how to fight for what were then perceived as U.S. States interests, it should; for that earlier "adviser" program, like the one for Nicaragua, also began with only a handful of men.

The first three nations to refuse to accept the advisers were Panama, Honduras and El Salvador. The latter two have been the most reliable allies in the region; the United States makes heavy military and other investments in each. Panama, though not so amenable, has long been host to a U.S. military establishment.

That these nations want no part of the contra training program suggests how forlorn is Reagan's hope that these terrorists, organized and managed by the CIA, actually can destroy the Sandinista regime and take its place. Those closer to the scene know better.

The attitudes of Panama, Honduras and El Salvador suggest, also, that only Washington thinks that bringing military pressure on the Sandinistas is the right way to make them negotiate some kind of settlement with their neighbors. In the region, such pressures are believed, rather, to push the Sandinistas further into a fortress mentality, causing them to continue expanding their already sizable armed forces and to crack down harder on civil liberties and opposition elements that they think hinder their defense efforts.

That's why none of Nicaragua's neighbors want to be perceived in Managua as aiding the United States and the contras. They don't believe this $100 million effort can either oust the Sandinistas or cause them to cry "uncle" — as Reagan once fatuously wished out loud. They fear, instead, that a continuing contra war will make the Sandinistas more hostile and stronger militarily, probably with the help of Cuba and the Soviet Union, hence more of a threat to surrounding countries than the president claims they are now.

But the administration, finding no host country eagerly awaiting the advisers, naturally has set out to buy one. A new aid package for Honduras is being negotiated, and Washington is hinting that if the booty is increased sufficiently, Honduras will see the light and accept the advisers.

This displays not only a sour cynicism about allies in general but a lack of self-respect. Is the briber any more to be admired than the bribed? It shows scant regard for a neighbor country already too nearly converted into a puppet state. And if the cooperation of Honduras actually can be bought, how long and at what price will that country stay bought?

But if Honduras or another Central American host can't be bought, the administration apparently intends to have its advisers train the contras in this country. Imagine that: the world's strongest critic of state-sponsored terrorism bringing foreign nationals to its own territory to teach them how to overthrow a legal government.

Does anyone suppose the tricks and tactics to be taught will somehow have nothing to do with those of terrorism?

Situation in Palestine based on fact, not myth

From time to time it is well to separate the facts from the mythology and propaganda that enshrouds the Arab-Israeli conflict.

The first point to keep in mind is that the nation-state and those neat lines you see on modern maps of the Middle East are relatively new concepts in that part of the world.

Charley Reese

This is significant because there never was ever an Arab state called Palestine nor, until relatively recent times, were there any Arabic-speaking people who thought of themselves as Palestinians.

Palestine is a name the Romans applied to the Jewish provinces after conquering them and stifling the last of the revolts. Thus, Westerners, whose civilization evolved from Roman civilization, called the area Palestine.

After the fall of the Roman Empire, however, that area was at different times included in the various Eastern empires that rose and fell, but it was never in those empires a distinct entity. For a long time, it was considered by Arabic-speaking people simply to be Southern Syria.

After World War I, when the Ottoman Empire — which had controlled the area for 400 years — bit the dust, British and French politicians drew the lines you now see on the maps. The British created modern Palestine as a League of Nations mandate territory. It originally included what is now Jordan.

The British justification for creating the mandate was to establish a national home for the Jewish people — the so-called Balfour Declaration. Naturally, the British government was pursuing its own aims and not especially interested in either Jews or Arabs. It didn't take the British long to discover that their economic interests lay with the Arabs, not with the Jews. They sliced off four-fifths of the original Palestine and called it Trans-Jordan and blocked all Jewish immigration into it.

The pertinent point is this: The notion of homeless Palestinians is a myth. Some people who consider themselves Palestinians are in fact homeless but a majority of them are not.

Those Arabs who lived in and continue to live in that part of Palestine now called Jordan are obviously neither homeless nor without a country. Those Arabs who chose to remain in the area that became Israel — there were about 250,000 of them — are not homeless and never have been. Numbering now about 600,000, they are Israeli citizens living right where they have always lived.

Those Arabs who lived in what we now call the West Bank, except for a small number in refugee camps, are not homeless and never have been. They, too, are living right where they have always lived. The only thing that has changed is the government — first the Turks, then the British, then the Jordanians, now the Israelis.

Some Arabs living in British Palestine did flee during the War of 1948 and again some did in the Six-Day War in 1967 and became true refugees. Since even the 1948 war has never ended — only a cease-fire agreement was signed — no permanent settling of their status has been possible. Only Jordan was willing to grant citizenship to the refugees. Those who ended up in Syria, Lebanon, or Egypt were deliberately kept by those governments in a refugee status.

To complicate the picture further, about 750,000 Jews from Arab countries moved to Israel, most of them being deprived of their property by the Arab governments in the process.

In the meantime, however, as much to the dismay of Arab governments as to the Israeli government, a Palestinian nationalistic feeling has developed. While it may be true that 50 or 60 years ago, many Arabs in the area did not think of themselves as Palestinians, most certainly do today. Nationalism is a product of how people think of themselves, not a product of legalism or geography.

Solutions can never come from myths; they must be based on facts. That will not be possible, however, until people who hate Israel stop exploiting the Palestinian issue and murdering those Palestinians who want genuine solutions.

Forty-eight people die in holiday traffic mishaps

Associated Press

Traffic accidents over the Labor Day weekend killed 48 people, exceeding the official prediction for the holiday, the Department of Public Safety said today.

DPS spokesman David Wells blamed the high death count on rainy weather, three accidents that caused multiple deaths and an unusually high number of one-vehicle accidents.

The agency had predicted 43 people would die in the 78-hour period, which ended at midnight Monday.

Traffic accidents killed 52 people over the Labor Day weekend last year in Texas.

"We had three accidents that caused 11 fatalities," Wells said today, noting in particular a South Texas accident that killed six people.

"We had more single vehicle fatalities than we normally see," he said, adding that 25 were killed on one-vehicle accidents.

Excessive speed and rain-slick streets also contributed to the count, Wells said.

Among the fatalities were:

— Michael Carl Douglas, 13, of Houston, who died in a three-car accident at 4:30 p.m. Monday on Farm to Market 521 in Arcola in Fort Bend county. He was in a vehicle that was struck by a horse trailer that detached from a pickup truck.

— Helen Herbert Cockrum, 52, of Waco, who died in a two-car accident at 5:20 p.m. Monday in Corsicana. She was a passenger.

— Phillip Wayne Adams, 32, no hometown available, who was killed when the pickup truck he was in spun out on a rain-slick street in Irving.

— John D. Corley Jr., 19, of Houston, who died when the car he was driving went off the road an struck a culvert on State Highway 59 in Harris County about 10:30 p.m. Monday.

Two people were killed about noon Monday when their car flipped twice and struck a rock fence in Balch Springs. Linda Hicks, 24, of Balch Springs, and Gayla Hale, 16, of Dallas died in the crash, Wells said. Two other persons were injured.

In the worst single crash of the weekend, six people died when their car flipped over in a canal in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

According to Mercedes police, a 1977 Mercury carrying six people failed to negotiate a curve on Farm to Market Road 491 in the South Texas town, struck a cement railing and came to rest upside down in the water-filled canal about 10:45 p.m. Saturday.

Labor Day festivities continue despite rain

Associated Press

Rain spoiled many of the outdoor events around Texas as residents took Labor Day off for relaxation, but it didn't keep the Texas Legislature from continuing work on the state's fiscal crisis.

The state's labor organization took advantage of the holiday Monday to criticize the government for not imposing the import restrictions they say are needed to help the state's downtrodden economy.

It didn't rain on the parade at the Kimble Kounty Kow Kick, but it rained out the washer pitching and cow chip-throwing contests scheduled at Junction.

"Our state's economy cannot prosper on microchips and hamburgers," said Texas AFL-CIO Harry Hubbard said. "We need oil and gas production and refining, as well as other heavy industries. To rekindle the fire in these economic sectors, import restrictions are absolutely necessary."

Hubbard told a crowd of construction union members at a picnic near the South Texas Nuclear Project near Bay City that Texas unions began a Buy American-Curb Imports campaign two years ago.

"A lot of business people now see we are right," he said. "They now have to convince the Reagan administration or we have to work together to gain a two-thirds vote in Congress to override the president's veto."

Hubbard said the Reagan administration "is using free trade to hold down American workers' wages in an effort to control inflation."

Russ Latham and his wife Linda, under the plastic tarp, fail to let rain dampen their spirits at the Kimble Kounty Kow Kick Monday in Junction. Rain did force organizers to move the Kow Kick, Junction's annual Labor Day celebration, indoors.

The Texas Senate sent to Gov. Mark White a bill that would legalize pari-mutuel gambling, if voters approved the idea in November 1987. Backers say the measure could bring needed revenue into the state treasury.

Although lawmakers are trying to balance the state's budget, which faces a projected $3.5 billion deficit, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby predicted Monday that another special session would be needed to tackle the problem.

Most Texans took advantage of the holiday weekend for fun and relaxation before returning to work and school.

An estimated 100,000 people spread along the banks of the Trinity River in Dallas Sunday night to hear singer Ray Wylie Hubbard and watch a fireworks display. However, the threat of rain altered the schedule and forced the fireworks to go off an hour early.

"We had $30,000 worth of fireworks," said show spokeswoman Mary Brown. "And when it started to drizzle we knew we couldn't afford to do it tomorrow or next week. So we moved it up to 8:30."

Most of the state had some rain Monday. Scattered showers and thunderstorms dumped heavy rainfall over some areas. Temperatures were unseasonably cool, mostly in the 60s and 70s Monday afternoon.

Heavy rain put an early end to the annual Kimble Kounty Kow Kick at Junction, but not before participants had enjoyed eating, socializing and several of the scheduled competitions.

The rain started at noon, increased to a storm by 2 p.m. and slowed to a drizzle by 5 p.m. when most of the participants had left. Rainfall amounted to 1.83 inches.

The Kow Kick consisted of arts-and-crafts booths, various contests and the third annual Great Kimble County River Race.

Participants dined on sausage on a stick and German tacos, Polish sausages wrapped in tortillas.

The Old Fiddlers Contest was moved to the Senior Citizen Center because of the rain.

The washer pitching and cow-chip throwing competitions were rained out.

The 29 entrants in the third annual Great Kimble County River Race paddled the 16-mile course from Telegraph to Junction on the Llano River in a driving rain.

Labor Day also was the first day that 19- and 20-year-old Texans were not able to drink legally. A state law raising the drinking age from 19 to 21 went into effect at 12:01 a.m., forcing many young people to take their last legal drink Sunday night.

Auto rally will test knowledge of history

Associated Press

The rally will begin Oct. 11 in Plano and finish with an awards brunch in Dallas on Oct. 18. The competition questions based on historical points of interest along the road.

An auto rally will put drivers on 3,500 miles of Texas highway, but the ultimate destination is to educate participants on the state's heritage during the Texas Sesquicentennial.

The Texas Heritage Excursion Rallye is offering more than $35,000 in prizes, including $5,000 to the top driver, for visiting Texas landmarks.

So far, 22 people have signed up for the event this fall, and organizers hope for about 200 drivers, said Jane Power, the rally's chairwoman.

"No event of the Sesquicentennial has tried to teach Texas history, and that's why we're doing it," Ms. Power said.

One of the drivers is Mamie Byers, of Carrollton, who already has obtained a sponsorship from two Dallas-area vehicle dealerships.

"I'm an adventuresome soul, and I love Texas," she said. "I thought this would be an wonderful opportunity to explore Texas. I'm very excited about it. I think this is going to be a once-in-a-lifetime experience."

Competitors will be challenged to reach destinations by a certain time and will be penalized if they are off. When the participants reach their hotel each day, they will be quizzed on the points of interest along the route.

"It's not made for the person who's experienced at it," Ms. Power said. "It's open to all people. It's not designed to appeal to those who do it for money."

Among the sites located on the trail are Washington-on-the-Brazos, San Jacinto and Goliad. The route travels through areas such as the East Texas Piney Woods, the lower Rio Grande Valley, the Hill Country near New Braunfels and Big Bend National Park.

Each entrant must pay a registration fee of $1,275. The event is sanctioned by the Texas Sesquicentennial Commission.

Drug cases spark need for sixth grand jury

DALLAS (AP) — The number of federal drug cases being filed in the Northern District of Texas is growing so heavy a sixth grand jury is needed simply to keep up with the load, U.S. Attorney Marvin Collins said.

"We were and are operating at a high rate of efficiency, but the caseload is such that another special grand jury is needed to handle the increased volume of narcotics cases," Collins said.

Collins, who said drug trafficking was the 100-county area's most serious problem when he took his post 14 months ago, said the number of cases involving drug dealers and users is straining the capacity of the district's current five grand juries.

The additional grand jury, which would deal mostly with drug cases, would be established in October or November, Collins said.

It would give prosecutors an increased ability to take away the two things that keep drug dealers in business — assets and their personal freedom, Collins said.

Under federal law, accused individuals can be jailed without bond if they are considered a danger to the community.

"Drug dealing is one item that creates the presumption of danger to the community," Collins said.

Before the pretrial detention law was passed, major drug violators could be released on bond, permitting some to increase their illegal activities in order to pay their lawyers and stockpile money, Collins said.

"We cannot detain everyone, and many are not deserving of it," he said. "We tend to use pretrial detention for the big alligators. When the leader is locked up, the rest are like a bunch of alligators and take what is left because the individual in jail is no longer in control."

Collins said he plans to ask for funding for the grand jury, estimated at about $10,000 annually, after the new federal budget goes into effect Oct. 1. The plan would have to be approved by a federal judge.

"I am confident that a judge will approve the request and have no reservations in asking," he said. "My only reservation is the timing."

Nation's first hospital for AIDS research opens

HOUSTON (AP) — The nation's first hospital devoted totally to the treatment and research of AIDS is scheduled to open its doors to patients today, officials said.

"What I hope people realize, the objective of this hospital is to try to find answers. It's a research institute," said Dr. Peter Mansell, the hospital's medical director who also has headed the AIDS research program at the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute.

The 137-member staff at the Institute for Immunological Disorders has undergone special training to help patients with AIDS, as well as their families and friends. The hospital will be able to accommodate 150 patients.

Officials at the facility don't know when the first patient will be admitted, but about 50 outpatients will be taking part in a continuing study when the institute opens.

Joseph Stanley will be one of those outpatients. He will go through a routine monitoring just as he has every few weeks since joining the study in May.

Stanley, 29, doesn't have acquired immune deficiency syndrome and has not shown any symptoms of the disease, but has tested positive for carrying the AIDS virus. He's part of an experimental study of the anti-viral drug ribavirin.

"I do not have the disease," Stanley said. "I am symptom-free. The virus is in my body, but it's not active...This was my contribution to the AIDS crisis."

About 100 people, all outpatients, are in the ribavirin study, which began in April at M.D. Anderson. It's the first study being transferred to the new institute from M.D. Anderson.

"If people want investigative treatment, like it or not, they're going to have to come here," Mansell said.

Patients, however, have to be referred by a physician, just as they must to get into M.D. Anderson — whether for AIDS or cancer treatment.

M.D. Anderson recently was named as one of 14 medical centers to receive a federal contract for an AIDS Treatment and Evaluation Unit, Mansell said.

Although M.D. Anderson will administer the five-year, $5.8 million contract, the testing of drugs available for study will be handled at the institute, he said.

The institute is housed in north Houston in the building of the now-closed Citizens General Hospital.

Horse breeders eagerly await legalized betting

BRENHAM (AP) — Horse breeders in Texas are eagerly awaiting the legalizing of pari-mutuel betting in the state, a move they say could earn them millions of dollars.

"The part that the state will get from racing is negligible," said Dick O'Malley, who raises horses in this German community 70 miles west of Houston. "The important part is the money spent on stud fees, construction, salaries and income for agribusinessmen."

Horse breeding is already a thriving concern in Brenham, along with North Texas and the Hill Country, where breeders have taken advantage of good weather and favorable terrain to locate in numbers.

The three prime breeding regions will share as much as $712 million in income from horse farms and related businesses if pari-mutuel wagering is established, said Andy Welch, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Agriculture.

The Texas Senate on Monday gave final legislative approval to a bill that could legalize pari-mutuel gambling on horse and dog racing. The bill now goes to Gov. Mark White.

Citing a report on horse racing, Welch said the off-track effects of racing would be staggering.

More than 9,000 jobs would be created in industries as varied as ranching, transportation, building horse trailers, horse shoeing and supplying riding equipment, he said.

The three breeding regions already have a natural advantage from approval of a pari-mutuel bill because the industry and support facilities are already in place, said Bill Thane, Washington County extension agent.

"As tight as dollars are nowadays, it's unlikely someone would start up from scratch just to be near a track," Thane said.

Legalized betting will draw more investors into the horse breeding business and more tourism to the areas where tracks are located, breeders say.

"This area is destined to be the Lexington of Texas," said O'Malley.

Flooding possible

From Staff and Wire Reports

The National Weather Service has issued a flash flood watch for tonight for the Permian Basin. There is a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms with locally heavy rains possible. The low will be in the middle 60s with winds out of the southeast at five to 10 mph.

The possibility of rain increases on Wednesday to a 40 percent chance. Under mostly cloudy skies, th high will be in the lower 80s with southeasterly winds at five to 15 mph.

Monday's high of 83 was 21 degrees below the record high set for that date in 1959. This morning's low was 12 degrees above the record low of 56 set in 1968.

STATE

Torrential rainfall caused flash flooding in two North Central Texas counties early today, prompting the National Weather Service to issue flash flood warnings for the counties.

The counties covered by the flash flood warning were Comanche and Johnson. Forecasters said local authorities reported street flooding and other flash flooding in Comanche and Cleburne.

The showers and thunderstorms were being triggered by a stationary warm front located across Southeast Texas extending westward into the south part of the Texas Hill Country.

Drizzle and fog was reported early today across most of West Texas and scattered showers and thunderstorms were reported over southwestern portions of North Texas, western portions of South Texas, eastern portions of West Texas and along the New Mexico border. Scattered showers, light rain and drizzle were over East Texas.

Forecasts called for a flash flood watch generally east of the Pecos River in the Permian Basin and Concho Valley and west of a line from Rockwall to Lampasas in North Texas through tonight.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 60s and 70s. Highs Wednesday will be mostly in the 70s and 80s.

Early morning temperatures were in the 60s over northern and western portions of the state and in the 70s in southern portions of the state. Extremes ranged from 60 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains of Southwest Texas to 83 at Corpus Christi.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 61 at Amarillo, 69 at Wichita Falls, 71 at Fort Worth, 74 at Waco, 75 at Austin, 73 at Houston, 77 at Brownsville, 72 at San Angelo, 64 at Lubbock, 69 at Midland and 66 at El Paso.

Septien survives rookie challenge

IRVING (AP) — Max Zendejas, who engaged in a head-to-head battle with veteran Rafael Septien for the Dallas Cowboys' kicking duties, was one of four players cut by the club to get its roster to the 45-man NFL limit.

"If he had kicked better, I don't know what would have happened," said Septien. "The good thing was that I knew I could still kick. Any team would have been happy to have me kicking for them ... I guess."

Septien said he wasn't sure until Monday that the Cowboys still wanted him after eight seasons.

"But Max did not perform to the caliber that they expected, and I think that helped me to stay here," Septien said.

Zendejas, who was expected to give Septien a run for his job, instead made two of six field-goal attempts and did not kick off well Saturday against Houston, the Cowboys' final preseason game.

"The opportunity was there, but he just didn't get the job done," said Coach Tom Landry.

Zendejas, who played collegiate football at Arizona, was the club's fourth-round draft pick this year.

THE COWBOYS Monday also placed linebacker Chris Duliban, a 12th-round pick from the University of Texas, on injured reserve, said spokesman Doug Todd.

Duliban re-injured a shoulder Saturday night during the Cowboys' 17-14 loss to the Oilers.

Also cut were linebacker Garth Jax, an 11th-round draft choice from Florida State; defensive lineman Kurt Rueger, a 1985 sixth-round pick from Gustavus Adolphus; and defensive lineman Bob Otto, a free agent.

Cowboys' linebacker Garth Jax made this tackle in a preseason game with the Steelers, but failed to make the final cut Monday.

McLemore to get shot with California Angels

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Pitchers Ray Chadwick and Urbano Lugo were among seven minor league players called up Monday by the California Angels Monday, including former Midland Angel Mark McLemore.

Also called up from Edmonton, Alberta of the Pacific Coast League were infielders Gus Polidor and utilityman Darrell Miller. The Angels also purchased the minor-league contracts of right-handed pitcher Willie Fraser and outfielder Mark Ryal.

Fraser was the club's No. 1 draft choice, from the 1985 draft.

In separate moves, California reactivated left-handed reliever Terry Forster prior to Monday's game with the Baltimore Orioles and on Sunday recalled outfielder Devon White, another former Midland Angel.

In all, three former Midland Angels from the Class AA Texas League will spend the final month of the season with the big league club, trying to hold onto first place in the American League West pennant race. California has had a farm team in Midland for just two seasons.

White will be eligible for post-season play because he was added to the roster before the first of September.

McLemore played one-and-a-half seasons in Midland at second base where he became one of the most popular local players. In 1986 he was hitting .316 before he was summoned to Triple A Edmonton. Despite playing just the first half of the season, McLemore was second in the Texas League with 38 stolen bases.

McLemore's stolen base total tied the Midland club record set in 1985 by White.

Chadwick, who also spent some time in Midland in 1985, was 0-3 in four starts with the Angels this season before being optioned to Edmonton. Lugo, who was 8-6 for Edmonton with a 4.66 earned-run average after undergoing off-season elbow surgery, is joining the Angels for the first time this season. He was 3-4 with California a year ago.

Miller started the season with the Angels, batting .209 with no homers and 3 RBI in 23 games before being optioned to Edmonton on May 31. At Edmonton, he batted .307 with eight home runs and 31 RBI.

Dickey, Coffman top surprise cut list

Associated Press

Two original members of Miami's "Killer B's" and the Green Bay passing duo of Lynn Dickey and Paul Coffman were among the casualties Monday as NFL teams made their final cuts to get down to the 45-player opening-day limit.

Another veteran, San Francisco running back Wendell Tyler, was placed on injured reserve and Kansas City cut its top pick of last year, running back Ethan Horton.

The victims in Miami were end Kim Bokamper and safety Lyle Blackwood, fixtures in a defense that sometimes had as many as nine players whose names began with the letter B. Miami also cut Jay Brophy, a part-time starter at inside linebacker for two years.

The cut didn't surprise the 31-year-old Bokamper, who was blamed in part for the Dolphins' failure to stop the rush last year, when they surrendered more than 500 yards in two playoff games.

"I told my wife before training camp that it was a touch-and-go situation, so I've prepared myself for this," he said. "I've got a family waiting and I played long enough to set myself up financially."

Blackwood, 35, may be back with the Dolphins later this week if his brother, Glenn, a safety currently bothered by a thigh injury, is put on injured reserve.

Oilers cut Baker, Stensrud

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers reduced their roster to the 45-man NFL requirement by cutting seven-year veterans Jesse Baker and Mike Stensrud, a team spokesman said.

Thrs on Monday also cut running back Stan Edwards and defensive tackle Lynn Madsin, said Oilers spokesman Chip Namias.

The Oilers acquired the 6-foot-5, 271-pound Baker as the second pick during the second round of the 1979 draft after he played for Jacksonville State. He was the team leader in sacks all seven years he was with the Oilers. His 15½ sacks during his rookie year lead the AFC and established a club record.

Stensrud, a 6-foot-5, 280-pounder from Iowa State, was the first pick of the second round in 1979 for the Oilers. He has played as defensive end and middle guard, and played in 93 consecutive games.

The club also placed guard Mike Kelley on the injured reserve list because of a neck injury, Namias said.

Houston still has not reached a contract agreement with quarterback Jim Everett, the club's No. 1 draft pick, the spokesman said.

The Oilers, who are undefeated in exhibition play, open the regular season Sunday in Green Bay.

Horton, the 15th player and first running back taken in the 1985 draft, was a major disappointment for Kansas City. He gained just 146 yards in 46 carries and failed to solve the Chiefs' long-standing running back problem.

The Chiefs also cut linebacker Calvin Daniels, who started every game the last two seasons.

Dickey and Coffman were part of a purge in Green Bay that has removed more than 20 of last year's Packers from the team's roster.

"What I'm trying to do with this football team is get a fresh start," Coach Forrest Gregg said. "This team has been sitting on high center for a long time. We are taking a risk."

Green Bay has finished 8-8 four of the past five years.

The 36-year-old Dickey, who asked midway through last season to be benched, had retired, then was re-signed during training camp. He passed for 23,322 yards in a 15-year career that began with Houston. He holds many Packer records and is second on the team's career yardage list behind Bart Starr.

Coffman, 30, was a two-time Pro Bowl starter who caught 49 passes for 666 yards last season. His best season was 1983, when he caught 54 passes for 814 yards and 11 touchdowns.

The 31-year-old Tyler, who signed a two-year, $1 million-plus contract, has been bothered for two seasons by knee injuries. He was deemed expendable when the 49ers obtained Joe Cribbs from Buffalo.

San Francisco also waived third-string quarterback Mike Moroski, leaving Joe Montana and Jeff Kemp to run the team. Montana has been bothered by a sprained ankle.

But Denver cut its only punter, Jack Weil, along with third-string quarterback Scott Stankavage. There was a chance one of the two would be re-signed after the Broncos put players on injured reserve.

New Orleans waived oft-cut quarterback Babe Laufenberg, picked up just last week from Washington, along with tight end Larry Hardy, an eight-year veteran.

Astros snap back into shape, 6-4

Associated Press

The Houston Astros have maintained a seven or eight-game lead in the National League West for several games, but Denny Walling hadn't liked what he saw.

Walling recently said the Astros looked "shabby and ugly," but after they rallied from a 2-0 deficit with four runs in the sixth inning and beat the Chicago Cubs 6-4 Monday, he was in a better mood.

"This was a good, solid effort," said Walling, who keyed the four-run sixth with a two-run double. "This was good, Astros' type of baseball. We've been in close games all year long."

The Astros were trailing 2-0 going into the sixth when Walling doubled in two runs and scored the lead run on a sacrifice fly by Kevin Bass. Jose Cruz followed with his sixth homer and a 4-2 Houston lead.

"The first five months we scored in the late innings and we haven't done much of that in the last few games," Walling said.

Davis to rejoin Astros

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston has regained the talents of first baseman Glenn Davis, who leads the Astros in homers and runs batted in, after he suffered a back injury.

Davis rejoined the team Monday night in Chicago after being given a clean bill of health.

"The X-rays were negative and he at present is en route to Chicago and will join the team and be available for Tuesday's game against the Cubs," a spokesman said Monday.

Davis suffered the lower back injury Sunday before the Astros lost to Pittsburgh 8-2. He took batting practice and said he felt fine until he went into the dressing room just before the start of the game.

Away from spotlight, area gears for football

They don't play under the same media spotlight that shines over the giants of District 4-5A in Greenwood, Rankin, Lamesa and other Permian Basin area towns.

But you can bet they line up each Friday with the same intensity as the Midland Lees and Odessa Permians. It's just their ups and downs are not chronicled on a daily basis — except in the local grapevine.

No, the media descends on these areas just once or twice each fall.

The first sighting usually comes in mid-August after the first week of drills. A "media day" is arranged for out of town writers, photogs and TV people.

As a convenience, local boosters and the town weekly are on hand for program photos and other odds and ends. This goes on for all of 45 minutes. Then it's on down the road to the next stop for most.

But once the touring writers leave, the townsfolk stay behind and root, root, root for their football team.

In small hamlets like Crane, McCamey, Stanton and all over West Texas and the state, citizens are readying to stand by their football teams with the opening of the regular season Friday night.

AND THIS year, as any other, West Texas will certainly have its share of champions to boast about in classes 1A through 4A.

That's when the Big Lakes and Iraans usually report their second media sighting of the fall season.

But each week, there is a mini-drama unfolding in these towns all over the Basin as the path to the playoffs takes unexpected twists and turns.

And each week in this space we hope to bring you a little piece of that drama as it unfolds. And there should be some drama.

For starters, that ever-bulging community just east of the Tall City is stepping up into a new classification, the third in three years for the Greenwood Rangers.

Helping the Rangers make the move into Class 3A is Maurice Hodges, a veteran of more than a few West Texas football wars. But Greenwood will have its hands full in District 4-3A.

Perhaps at the top of the list of preseason favorites in that district are the Golden Cranes of Crane, striving to make a name for themselves in a new district. The Cranes are ranked near the top of most preseason polls in Class 3A, but in West Texas that means little.

Crane coach Rickey White is going to have his hands full just getting out of District 4-3A with another potential powerhouse in Kermit the residing champion. Crane starts its trek toward the top with a home game with District 2-4A's Fort Stockton.

WHILE IN Fort Stockton, the Panthers also welcome a new coach to turn its fortunes around. Ken Herring, Permian assistant for 13 years, will try to pick Fort Stockton up out of the basement, but there are a lot of rungs to climb before a playoff spot is visible.

Hoping to be right in the midst of that struggle are the Andrews Mustangs, coming off an up and down 1985 season.

David Visentine returns his largest cadre of lettermen including leading rusher David Criswell and all-state candidate Mike Moisant at tight end. The Mustangs travel to Hereford for the 1986 debut.

Monahans returns two of the district's top rushers, however, and could be a strong contender to dethrone Sweetwater, the coaches' pick to defend its district crown.

Lamesa will be looking for new offensive weapons after graduating Kenneth Williams, but the Tors will return to the warpath Friday with a home game with Levelland.

THIS YEAR Permian Basin area grid watchers have two Class 2A district to keep tabs on. The first contains the eastern half of the area, District 6-2A, with Reagan County, Stanton and Rankin of local interest.

And once again, Reagan County looks like a favorite for a return trip to the playoffs. The Owls will line up a potent backfield consisting of three returning juniors. Look out in 1987!

The Owls won't open their season until Sept. 12 at Greenwood, but Stanton, with high hopes of making a playoff run, draws a home date with Seagraves Friday in its opener.

In the southern Class 2A district, a pair of Basin schools look like favorites in District 5-2A. Both playoff-goers last year, McCamey, 8-2A champion, and Iraan, 6-A champs, will go toe-to-toe for the crown in this one.

But before they can, they both will travel halfway across the state to such district competitors are Presidio, Marfa and Van Horn.

Iraan and Rankin will collide Friday night in a rematch of both playoff teams from Class 6A last season.

IN CLASS A, Garden City joins a district that reaches deep into the Heart O Texas with Menard, Bronte, Eden and others. The Bearkats are hoping to make news with a tough defense in their season opener with Paducah at home.

So the races should be tight and the level of play well above average. If you get a chance, take a look at what is happening elsewhere in the area some Friday evening. If the drive is too great, don't despair. We'll give you a chance to catch up on it right here.

Ronas Ryon romps to Ruidoso Futurity win

By PETE HERRERA

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — Ronas Ryon, with enough horse sense to overcome human error, lived up to his credentials with a spectacular victory in the world's richest quarter horse race.

The 2-year-old colt won the 10th and most lucrative race of his brief career on Monday when he outran dangerous Lil Bit Shiney in the $2.5 million All-American Futurity.

The race, which netted $1 million for Ronas Ryon's owners, was filled with drama, mistakes and redemption for 41-year-old jockey Jerry Nicodemus, who less than a year ago was thinking of retiring.

In beating what was called one of the best fields in the 28-year history of the race, Ronas Ryon ran virtually the entire race without benefit of a whip.

Nicodemus, who ended a 16-year Futurity victory drought in a most unlikely fashion, lost his whip shortly after the field of 10 left the starting gate.

"Fifty yards out I got the whip tangled in the reins and lost it," Nicodemus said. "I hand-rode him in and he runs so good on his own, he didn't need the stick."

It was a case of Ronas Ryon making good on trainer Arnold Simmons' faith in the colt.

"He is a horse who refuses to be ignorant," Simmons had said prior to the race.

BUT FOR a moment Monday, Simmons had reason to worry.

"I thought when Nick dropped his stick we were beat," Simmons said.

Instead, Ronas Ryon broke on the lead, matched strides with Lil Bit Shiney, who was running on the outside, then accelerated to the wire to win by three-quarters of a length.

Ronas Ryon's only defeat occurred last month in a consolation race at the Rainbow Futurity.

Simmons, a former pre-med student turned trainer, said he knew the colt would be difficult to beat on a dry track.

"We keep him at a level that he feels so good he can't stand himself," Simmons said. "He is simply a pleasure to train."

A BROKEN leg suffered last November at Los Alamitos racetrack in California almost prompted Nicodemus to retire. When he took over the riding assignment on Ronas Ryon in June, the cast was assembled for Monday's drama.

"I was beginning to wonder if I would ever win this race again," Nicodemus said.

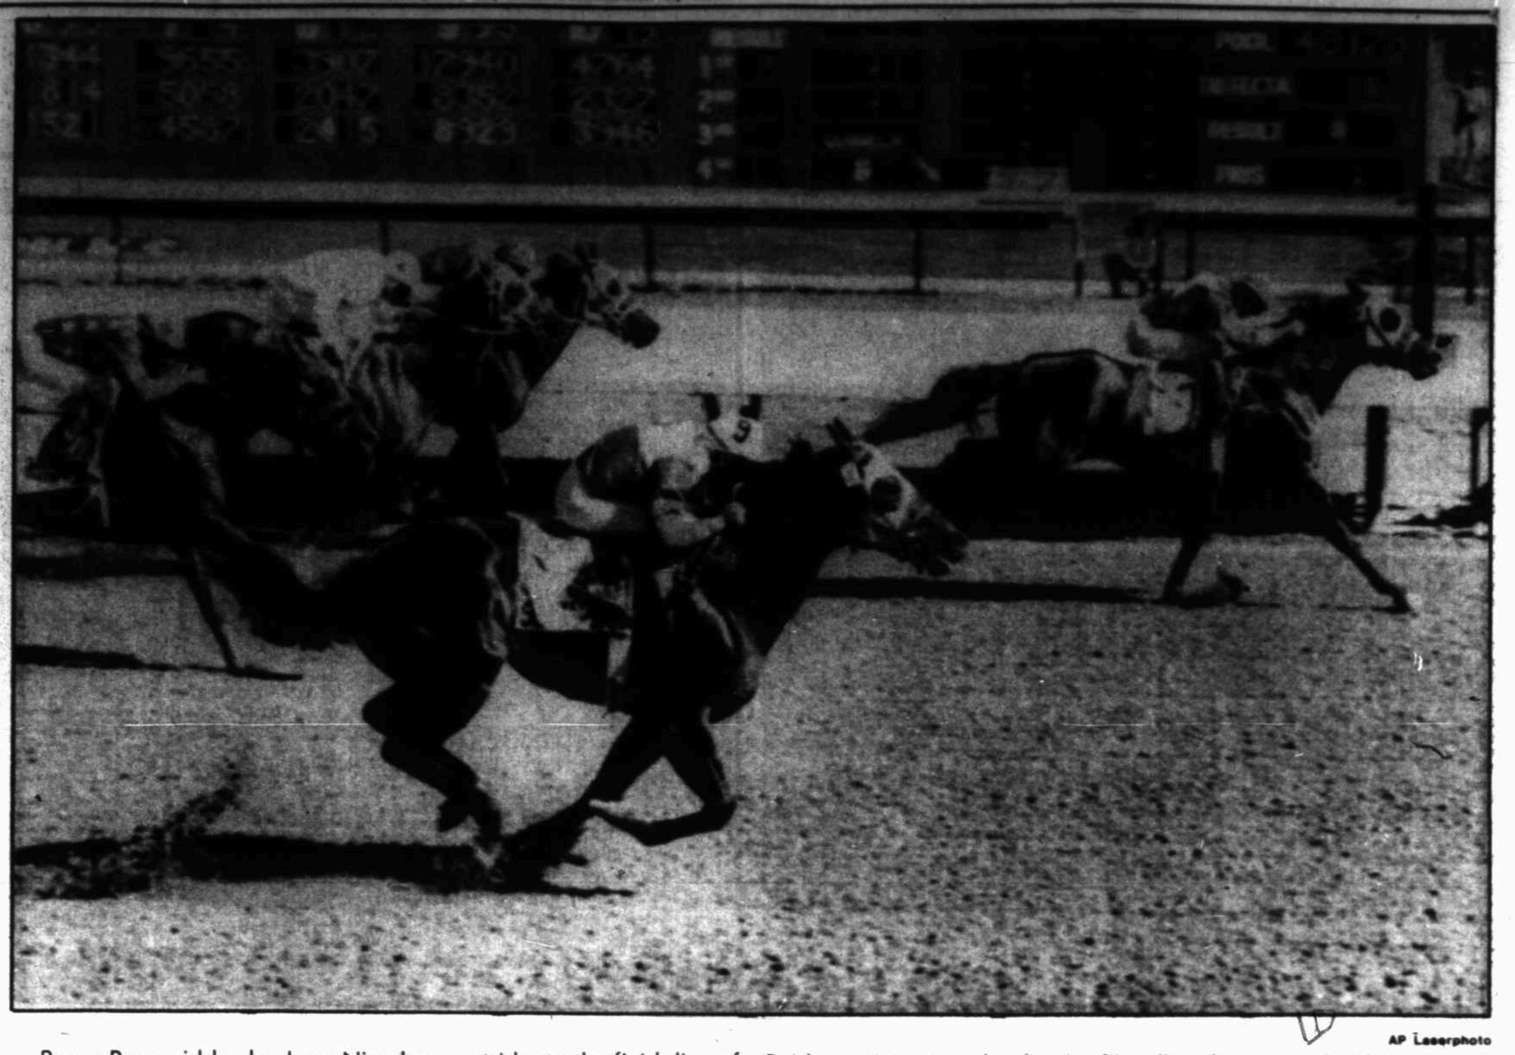

Ronas Ryon now has earned $1,289,845 for the Florida partnership of Sarge Darder, Ben Benham and J.F. Plummer.

Ronas Ryon covered the 440 yards in 21.48 seconds, the third-fastest time in the history of the race. Eastex, the 1984 winner, set the record of 21.41 and 1985 futurity champ Mr Trucka Jet matched it.

Lil Bit Shiney, trying to give trainer Hugh Tucker his first victory in an All-American, earned $343,500 for second. The colt is owned by Lodie and Shelly Stapleton of Bellaire, Texas.

Biddy Bye, a filly who has yet to win a race, earned $153,500 with her impressive third-place finish. It was the fourth third-place finish for Biddy Bye, who went into the race with earnings of just $751 after posting the slowest time among the 10 Futurity qualifiers.

Some Power Play, a colt who had never finished worse than third in seven previous races, was involved in a collision with other horses at the break and never was a factor, finishing ninth.

Ronas Ryon, ridden by Jerry Nicodemus, strides to the finish line of the All American Futurity quarter horse race at Ruidoso Downs, Ruidoso, N.M., Monday for the $1 million first prize. Finishing second is Lil Bit Shiney (forground).

Ronas Ryon, going off as less than the favorite for the first time in his career, paid $9.80, $4.20 and $3.80. Lil Bit Shiney returned $3.40 and $3, while Biddy Bye paid $8.40 to show.

Jet OJ, ridden by Barbara Waters, the first woman jockey to ride in the Futurity, finished fourth. After that came Marthas Six Moons, Will Be Easy, Jet Go Chick, the top qualifier from the trials, Bunny Rockette, Some Power Play and Sompinlikaglass.

Texas Southern nips A&M

HOUSTON (AP) — Freshman Dan Espinoza kicked a 22-yard field goal as time expired to lead Texas Southern to a 38-35 college football victory over Prairie View A&M University Monday night.

Pitt mistakes hand it to Terps

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The coach was new, the strategy was different but the result was disappointingly familiar for the University of Pittsburgh.

The Panthers, debuting under new Coach Mike Gottfried, choked on their own mistakes and a disastrous kicking game Monday night to lose to Maryland 10-7 on Dan Plocki's 29-yard field goal with 2:10 to play.

Pitt, a winner only eight times in former Coach Foge Fazio's final 25 games, has shifted its offensive emphasis from running to passing under Gottfried.

But the Panthers, constantly pressured into mistakes by a physical Maryland defense, could reach the scoreboard only once although fifth-year senior quarterback John Congemi completed 23 of 45 passes for 258 yards.

"This was a real gutty performance," said Maryland Coach Bobby Ross, whose team was part of several investigations after the drug-related death of former Maryland basketball All-American Len Bias in June.

Both teams failed to score in the first half as Pitt kicker Mark Brasco missed three field goals.

"I felt we dominated the whole game," Congemi said. "We did everything we wanted to do on offense but get the ball in the end zone. It was a tough loss."

MARYLAND'S DEFENSE throttled Pitt's running game, limiting the Panthers to 89 yards on 30 carries as junior tailback Charles Gladman was limited to 24 yards on 10 carries. Gladman ran for more than 1,000 yards as a sophomore.

Maryland's defense forced a critical Pitt fumble late in the third quarter that the Terps turned into their only touchdown, then turned back the Panthers again in the game's final minute after Pitt had driven to the Terps' 29.

Congemi was dropped for a nine-yard loss on a third-down play before being pressured into a fourth-down incompletion that turned the ball back over the Terps, who then ran out the final few seconds.

"It's a great start for us with a great deal of meaning," Ross said. "It helps our confidence. Defensively, we had it, but offensively we're young."

THE LOSS continued a string of frustration for Gottfried, who also failed to win in his first game in three previous coaching assignments.

Congemi, contained for 3½ quarters by a big-play Maryland defense, rifled a 32-yard scoring pass to Reggie Williams on a second-and-15 play with 5:12 to go to rally Pitt to a 7-7 tie.

Pitt had failed to score in the first half despite a 13½-minute edge in time of possession, as Brasco missed field goal attempts of 41, 29 and 53 yards.

Tommy Neal, who had given Maryland a 7-0 lead with a one-yard scoring dive midway through the third quarter, had runs of 14 and five yards, and Dan Henning hit Ferrell Edmunds for 13 yards and Azizuddin Abdur-Ra'oof for 15 to set up Plocki's winning kick.

Maryland's first score came after a turnover.

Gladman fumbled at the end of a 32-yard pass play when he was drilled by safety James Brown, and linebacker O'Brien Alston recovering at the Maryland 45.

The officials had initially ruled that Gladman was down before fumbling, but reversed their ruling after a conference.

Henning, playing his first game as a college quarterback, hooked up with Vernon Joines on a 24-yard completion on a third-and-6 play to the Pitt 1. Neal leaped into the end zone two plays later, with 2:15 to play in the third quarter.

Maryland, 9-3 last season, failed to get a first down in the second quarter and crossed midfield only once in the first half.

Texas prep sensation finds niche

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma State football coaches had little to smile about after their 34-23 loss to Florida State in the 1985 Gator Bowl.

It was a game that saw the Seminoles shred a proud Oklahoma State defense for 569 yards in total offense. Tailback Thurman Thomas had just 97 yards rushing on 26 carries, and Coach Pat Jones was handed his first non-Big Eight Conference loss.

But there was one shining star. It came in the person of split end Hart Lee Dykes, who caught eight passes for 104 yards and a touchdown.

It couldn't have happened at a better time.

Dykes, the most sought-after player in the country his senior year in high school at Bay City, Texas, had been a bust during most of his freshman season. He had injured an ankle and missed several games, catching only 16 passes for 205 yards.

His Gator Bowl performance helped him forget the bad times, however, and become eager once again to play football.

"I wanted to prove I could play at the collegiate level," said the 6-foot-4, 205-pound Dykes. "I'm going to use that game as a base and go from there."

Jones said Dykes' Gator Bowl effort "is an indication of his kind of ability. We missed him last year, even as inexperienced as he was."

What they missed was Dykes' tall frame going up in traffic to make catches, as he did time and again during spring drills. They missed, simply, his big-play ability.

"Late in the spring it was almost like men going against boys," Jones said.

In four spring scrimmages he had 13 catches for 226 yards. At one stretch, Dykes caught six passes and all six went for touchdowns ranging from nine to 45 yards.

"I really enjoyed the spring," said Dykes, who has not missed a workout this fall. "I know that without practice, I won't get any better."

Oklahoma State offensive coordinator Larry Coker says "people don't realize how good Hart Lee was last year because he was injured," but Dykes would just as soon forget.

"I really don't even like to think about that year," he said. "I'd never been injured before, except in the seventh grade when I broke my leg. But that was it. I went through high school without any type of injury."

He noticed an unusual twinge in his ankle during practice one day last season, and the nagging injury stayed with him. Doctors told him if he would stay off it, the ankle would not have to be placed in a cast and it would heal properly.

"I couldn't just stay idle. I'd play basketball a lot," he said. "But before the Gator Bowl I stayed off it three or four weeks and it felt fine."

Now Oklahoma State coaches are keeping their fingers crossed that Dykes will stay healthy this season. His pass-catching ability can't do anything but help the running game led by Thomas.

NFL Cuts

Among the players cut by San Diego were veteran linebacker Ronnie Washington, picked up in a trade with Atlanta, and two former USFL players, defensive end John Walker and cornerback David Martin.

Veteran quarterback Gary Danielson, who broke his left ankle last Thursday, was placed on injured reserve by Cleveland, while the Browns cut running back Greg Allen, their second-round draft choice last year. Allen spent most of last year on injured reserve.

Cincinnati waived three veterans, tight end M.L. Harris and safeties James Griffin and Jimmy Turner.

Detroit acquired linebacker Shelton Robinson from Seattle for an undisclosed draft choice and cut two veterans, safety Alvin Hall and tight end Dave D'Addio.

The Chicago Bears cut three veterans, tight end Pat Dunsmore, defensive end Tyrone Keys and center Tom Andrews, along with third-round draft choice David Williams. Williams, the second-leading receiver in NCAA history with 245 catches, was beaten out by fifth-round draft choice Lew Barnes.

Indianapolis cut placekicker Raul Allegre and kept Dean Biasucci, who stepped in two years ago when Allegre was injured. The Colts also cut quarterback Blair Kiel.

The Pittsburgh Steelers signed fullback David Hughes, cut by Seattle last week, and traded the rights to quarterback Cliff Stoudt to St. Louis. Stoudt had played for Birmingham of the USFL for two years. Pittsburgh also cut John Goodman, a five-year defensive lineman, and four other players.

A Cardinals spokesman said Stoudt was scheduled to sign a contract with Pittsburgh on Tuesday.

The New York Giants waived three veterans, defensive end Dee Hardison, offensive lineman Conrad Goode and wide receiver-kick returner Phil McConkey. They also placed running back George Adams and place-kicker Ali Haji-Sheikh on the injured reserve list.

In addition to making the Stoudt deal, the Cardinals waived punter Carl Birdsong and quarterback Rick Melvor. They also re-signed rookie kicker Evan Arapostathis to handle punting and kickoffs.

Tampa Bay waived wide receivers Ed Scott and Herkie Walls and activated former USFL defensive back Vito McKeever.

The Washington Redskins on Monday waived three veterans, including offensive lineman Ken Huff, released one rookie and placed another on injured reserve.

Raphel Cherry, once considered a hot prospect after starting five games at strong safety last year, was released after attempts were apparently made last week to trade him. Cherry was a fifth-round draft choice in 1985.

Defensive end Tom Beasley, a nine-year veteran who signed with Washington as a free agent in 1984, was placed on 24-hour waivers. Rookie Ron Tilton, a 250-pound guard, was released and receiver Clarence Verdin was placed on injured reserve.

The Los Angeles Raiders released 14-year veteran linebacker Brad Van Pelt and Jack Squirek, another linebacker who was one of the heroes of Super Bowl XVIII. In reaching their 45-man limit, the Riders also cut reserve offensive lineman Dwight Wheeler.

Wilkison shakes Chesnokov, lone American in quarters

U.S. Open

By PETER ALFANO
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — The occasional shouts of "Come on, Chesnokov" did not influence Tim Wilkison. The Grandstand crowd was solidly in his corner. Wilkison wasn't fooled by Andrei Chesnokov's blond hair, wispy Borg-like whiskers and two-fisted backhand from the baseline, either, all as distinctively Swedish as a Volvo.

No, this was a tennis match between the United States and the Soviet Union, and Wilkison was doing his best to stress love over politics even though he had earlier called the match "Rocky IV." He pretty much accomplished his goal on Monday, limiting Chesnokov to five games in a briskly played 6-0, 6-2, 6-3 victory that enabled Wilkison to advance to the quarterfinals of the United States Open.

"Obviously, when you play a guy from the Soviet Union, you try to low-key it," Wilkison said. "I know the fans were cheering me because I was playing a guy from Russia but also because I'm fairly exciting to watch. I fall down sometimes and things like that."

Wilkison is ranked No. 31 in the world, a middle-level player who has been on the tour for almost 10 years and is accustomed to playing a minor role in a tournament like the Open. But he has emerged as a favorite among the fans at the National Tennis Center, not only because he is the last American male, but because of his spirited play and work habits.

The 26-year-old from Asheville, N.C., wears a baseball cap and tucks a hand towel into his tennis shorts, the way a quarterback drapes it over his belt to keep his hands dry. He plays with the volume turned all the way up on his game, rushing the net, sliding on the asphalt court in pursuit of a passing shot, clenching his fist in celebration after hitting a winner.

THE LONGER the rally, the stronger Wilkison appeared to get. He prides himself on conditioning, a practice he began when younger when he would awake at 6:30 a.m. and practice his strokes against a wooden backboard in his backyard.

Chesnokov is 20 years old and ranked 46th on the computer. He is the best young player in the Soviet Union and rising fast, but he appeared overwhelmed by Wilkison and intimidated by the surroundings. Although he denies having copied the baseline style and demeanor of the Swedes, Chesnokov does a pretty good impression of them.

"He plays a little like Mats Wilander," Wilkison said. "When he is playing well, he can hit the ball harder from the baseline than Wilander. But he played really fast today, he was rushing himself."

Wilkison also set a fast pace, although he appeared more purposeful. He broke Chesnokov in the first game of the match, again in the third, and once more in the fifth. Chesnokov's problem was his serve. He made only 49 percent of his first serves and Wilkison jumped all over the second serve, following it to the net for numerous easy volley winners.

Wilkison had only one ace, but accuracy is often more important than speed. He made 71 percent of his first serves and was able to keep Chesnokov on his heels well behind the baseline. That also set him up for drop shots and short groundstrokes that Chesnokov vainly tried to reach.

"This was an unbelievably good match for me," said Wilkison, who upset fifth-seeded Yannick Noah in his previous match.

Wilkison's success has made him a favorite of the news media and the fans, and Wilkison looks as if he is enjoying the attention. He understands that the ride can end in the next round, when he plays Stefan Edberg of Sweden, who is seeded fourth. "Emotion can take you only so far," Wilkison said. "It's great, but it won't bother Lendl or guys like that."

IN OTHER feature matches, Edberg beat Dan Goldie, 6-3, 6-2, 6-2, and top-seeded Ivan Lendl defeated the last American seed Brad Gilbert, 7-5, 6-1, 6-2. While Henri Leconte beat Aaron Krickstein of Grosse Pointe, Mich., 6-3, 7-5, 6-4.

Half the remaining women are Americans. Martina Navratilova and Lloyd won Monday afternoon. Navratilova swept past No. 11 Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina 6-4, 6-2, while Lloyd briefly struggled before eliminating No. 14 Catarina Lindqvist of Sweden, 6-2, 2-6, 6-2.

Also left are fifth seed Pam Shriver of Lutherville, Md., who beat No. 15 Kathy Jordan, 6-4, 6-4; and eighth seed Bonnie Gadusek of Largo, Fla. who beat No. 13 Stephanie Rehe of Highland, Calif., 7-6 (8-6), 4-6, 6-2.

In other Monday matches, Steffi Graf of West Germany, seeded third, beat Raffaella Reggi of Italy, 6-1, 3-6, 6-0; Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia, seeded seventh, beat No. 12 Zina Garrison of Houston, 6-4, 2-6, 6-4; and No. 9 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria beat No. 6 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany, 6-2, 2-6, 7-6 (7-1).

Reds looking for Power to boost them to pennant

NL Roundup

Associated Press

While every baseball team wants some power in their lineup, the Cincinnati Reds have pinned their pennant hopes on putting Power in their starting rotation.

Ted Power, who made 229 consecutive relief appearances until Manager Pete Rose recently put him into the starting rotation because of injuries, won his first game as a starter since 1983 on Monday night. He pitched six innings of one-hit ball, and the Reds went on to beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-5.

It was the 11th victory in the last 14 games for the second-place Reds, who stayed seven games behind Houston in the National League West.

"This is just kind of fun, that's all it is to me," Power said of his role. "I'm filling in for somebody. I'm trying to hold the store down for as long as I can and give our guys a chance to score some runs."

Power, 5-6, retired the first 17 Pirates until he gave up a pinch-hit homer to Benny Distefano in the sixth. Power was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the seventh, and the Pirates rallied from 4-1 and 6-2 deficits to make the game close until John Franco got the last six outs for his 23rd save.

"That was very exciting," Power said of his no-hit bid. "I'm not going to deny it. I knew what was going on. That's the closest I've ever come to a no-hitter, at least in the big leagues."

Power had just one save this season before being supplanted by Ron Robinson as the main right-handed reliever. He went into the rotation on Aug. 22 because of Mario Soto's shoulder problems and John Denny's sprained wrist.

"The difference between being a starter and a reliever is when you're starting, you know that if you give up a run in the first three innings you're going to go back out there and pitch," Power said. "This has given me the opportunity to build up the confidence I probably lost when I wasn't pitching well."

With the Reds leading 6-2, the Pirates chased Robinson with a walk and three hits in the eighth before the right-hander could retire a batter. Rafael Belliard had an RBI double and Mike Diaz a pinch-hit, two-run single before Franco stifled the rally.

Nick Esasky hit a two-run homer for the Reds.

Mets 5, Giants 2

New York pushed San Francisco further out of the NL West pennant race behind the strong pitching of Sid Fernandez and Roger McDowell.

Mookie Wilson broke a 2-2 tie with an eighth-inning single and Howard Johnson added a two-run single as insurance for the Mets, handing the Giants their fourth consecutive defeat and knocking them nine games behind the Astros.

Fernandez struck out a career and NL season-high 14 batters, but he left the game for a pinch-hitter after seven innings and 122 pitches. Roger McDowell, 13-7, pitched two shutout innings for the victory.

"I had three pitches going for me ... change, curve, and fastball," said Fernandez, who was criticized by Manager Dave Johnson last week for being 15 pounds overweight. "When I needed the strikeout, I got it. I was always able to put a little someting extra on the pitch."

Mets catcher Gary Carter made his first appearance after two weeks on the disabled list and had two hits, including an RBI single.

Phillies 5, Padres 4

Philadelphia won its sixth straight game, beating San Diego when Von Hayes doubled home a run in the eighth.

Hayes, who also tied the game 4-4 with his 12th homer in the fifth, now has 35 doubles to lead the NL. The game-winning hit was a blooper off reliever Craig Lefferts, 7-6, that dropped between shortstop Garry Templeton and left fielder Carmelo Martinez, who had homered earlier for the Padres.

Lefferts retired the first two batters in the eighth before walking Gary Redus, who stole second and went to third on an error by Padres second baseman Bip Roberts.

Juan Samuel and John Russell also homered for the Phillies.

Expos 7, Dodgers 6

Tom Foley's bases-loaded bloop single knocked in the winning run for Montreal with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning against Los Angeles.

Tim Raines, who earlier hit his ninth homer, led off the ninth with his third hit, a double, off Ken Howell, 5-9. After an intentional walk, a sacrifice and another walk, Foley hit a pitch from Dennis Powell just past the edge of the infield for the winning run.

Jeff Reardon, 7-8, was the winning pitcher after blowing an opportunity for his 29th save when he allowed a game-tying homer to rookie Ralph Bryant in the top of the ninth.

Cardinals 5, Braves 2

St. Louis scored four runs in the ninth inning to overcome Atlanta.

Jim Acker, 3-4, took a three-hitter and a 2-1 lead into the ninth, but he surrendered four consecutive hits with one out, starting with a single by Andy Van Slyke and a game-tying double by Terry Pendleton.

John Morris then singled in the go-ahead run and Ozzie Smith followed with a triple, knocking out Acker. Reliever Paul Assenmacher got Tito Landrum to hit a ground ball, but second baseman Glenn Hubbard's wild throw home allowed Smith to score.

Ray Soff pitched the eighth inning to win his first major-league decision, while Todd Worrell earned his 30th save, tops in the NL.

Hubbard and Bob Horner homered for the Braves.

King's 63 ties course record, takes Rail Charity Classic

LPGA

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — It took the best Betsy King could do to win her second consecutive $200,000 LPGA Rail Charity Classic, tying the course record with a final-round 63 and then defeating two players in a four-hole playoff.

King sank a six-foot birdie putt on the fourth hole of a sudden-death playoff Monday, claiming the $30,000 first prize in her second victory of the season.

"I thought 62 would be enough to win," King said. "I came pretty close."

Cathy Kratzert and Alice Ritzman finished tied for second in the three-day event.

King, who started the day seven strokes behind the leaders, made the putt for the victory after falling short on a 50-foot eagle putt.

Kratzert, one of the second-round leaders, and Ritzman, who was one stroke off the pace after 36 holes, joined King in the playoff after the three registered 54-hole scores of 11-under-par 205.

Kratzert had a final-round 70, while Ritzman came in with a 69.

The three birdied the first three playoff holes before reaching the decisive par-5, 481-yard 13th hole.

King's drive went 230 yards down the middle of the fairway, and then she hit a 4-iron to the middle of the green, before missing the eagle putt.

"I played well," she said. "I needed to play well."

King, who shot a 6-under-par 30 on the front nine, had nine birdies and no bogeys in her round Monday.

Her front nine score was a career best for nine holes, she said, and after that, "I thought I had a chance to win."

King has won three of the four playoffs she has participated in during her career, and now has seven career victories and earnings of $1,066,921. It was her second victory of 1986 and brought her winnings for the year to $258,897.

Ritzman had a one-stroke lead going into the 54th hole but bogeyed to set up the playoff.

She went well past the hole on a chip from the fringe and missed a 15-foot putt that would have given her a par.

"It burned the hole," she said of the missed putt.

Kratzert, who was tied with Laurie Peterson for the lead after 36 holes at nine under, and King both parred the final hole of regulation.

Kratzert was 13 under par and had a four-stroke lead after the seventh hole of the final round, including an eagle on the par-5 sixth, but stumbled to finish tied for second.

"I'm very disappointed," she said. "But when someone shoots a 63 on you, you don't really lose it."

King matched the course record set by JoAnne Carner in 1980.

Judy Dickinson was alone in fourth at 206 after a final-round 67.

Peterson had a final-round 72 and finished in a tie for fifth one stroke further back with Kathy Postlewait, who had a 68 Monday.

'Greenhorn' QB to back up Stafford

AUSTIN (AP) — Possible Texas backup quarterback Shannon Kelley was moved to wide receiver Monday as the Longhorns started preparing for their Sept. 13 season opener against Stanford, Coach Fred Akers said.

A Saturday night scrimmage convinced Akers that Donovan Forbes, a redshirt freshman from Baytown Sterling, should be backup for starting quarterback Bret Stafford, the coach said.

"Donovan was moving ahead and we want to get our better football players spread out," Akers said. "We talked with Shannon, and he was eager for a chance to play."

Last year, Kelley shared backup duty to Stafford with Todd Dodge as a redshirt freshman, playing in only two of Texas' 12 games.

The former all-district player at Houston Memorial had not played wide receiver before Monday's practice.

But Akers, whose converted quarterback-receivers include such Longhorn standouts as Donnie Little, Herkie Walls and Bill Boy Bryant, was pleased with what he saw.

"HE HAS good speed, is a good athlete and is a good competitor. He wants to be somewhere where he can play for us," Akers said.

Running back Edwin Simmons, troubled with lower back spasms, still made most of the practice. But freshman hopeful Eric Williams of West Orange Stark was not so fortunate, missing with a broken bone in his hand that may keep him out for a month, team officials said.

The Bears open the 1986 season Saturday against Wyoming in Laramie.

Earnhardt takes Gatorade 200

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt posted a 5.72 second win over Morgan Shepherd in the rain-delayed finish of the Gatorade 200 NASCAR Busch Grand National Series stock car race.

Earnhardt led 50 of the 76 laps run Monday.

The race was started Saturday at the Darlington International Raceway, but was stopped by rain after 71 of the 147 laps were completed — just three laps shy of being official.

Ninth-inning Ranger homers don't faze Gedman, Bosox

The Toronto Blue Jays had beaten the Cleveland Indians 5-4 earlier in the day, but Rich Gedman wasn't worried.

In fact, he thought "So what," because the American League East-leading Boston Red Sox had a 6-2 bulge over the Texas Rangers with two out in the top of the ninth inning.

That's when Red Sox reliever Steve Crawford served up consecutive pinch- homers to Oddibe McDowell and Darrell Porter before Boston held on to beat the Rangers 6-4 Monday night.

The victory kept the Red Sox 3½ games ahead of the Blue Jays in the division, while Texas failed to take advantage of a California loss and held at 5½ back in the AL West.

"With a 6-2 lead, two out in the ninth and nobody on base, we were going right at them," Gedman said "So what if they hit two homers in such a situation? They still had to hit two more just to tie."

Crawford went 3-2 on Scott Fletcher before retiring him on a grounder to end the game. Crawford came on in the seventh inning to save the game for Bruce Hurst, who struck out nine and allowed five hits in the first three innings before settling down.

Two of the earlier hits were Texas homers by Pete Incaviglia and Larry Parrish. Tony Armas had a three-run double for Boston, and Jim Rice added a solo homer, giving him 13 this season, all with the bases empty.

AL Roundup

Blue Jays 5, Indians 4

Lloyd Moseby hit a bases-loaded single through a five-man infield with one out in the ninth inning, scoring Willie Upshaw and leading Toronto to its ninth consecutive victory.

Cliff Johnson and George Bell of Toronto and Cleveland's Carmen Castillo and Cory Snyder each hit two-run homers to produce a 4-4 tie after six innings.

In the ninth inning, Indians Manager Pat Corrales sent right fielder Snyder into the infield, just to the third base side of second, in an effort to stop the winning run. But Moseby foiled the strategy with a game-winning base hit to left.

Orioles 9, Angels 3

Eddie Murray hit a three-run homer in Baltimore's five-run third inning as the Orioles ended California's seven-game winning streak. Scott McGregor allowed 11 hits over eight innings and raised his lifetime record against California to 19-7.

A's 9, Yankees 8

Jose Canseco became the first 100-RBI man in baseball this year with a two-run homer in Oakland's five-run second inning, and the A's held on to beat the Yankees with the help of Mike Davis' eighth-inning solo homer. The homer gave Canseco 101 RBI.

Davis' homer gave Oakland a 9-6 lead, and New York scored twice in the ninth to pull within one run. One of the Yankees late runs scored on Willie Randolph's bases-loaded grounder, and the second scored when second baseman Lenn Sakata threw away the potential double-play relay.

White Sox 4, Royals 0

Floyd Bannister pitched his first shutout and fifth complete game of the season, beating the Royals with a seven-hitter for his 100th career victory. Carlton Fisk drove in one run and scored another for the White Sox.

Bannister raised his lifetime mark against the Royals to 14-6, giving him more victories over Kansas City than any other team.

Fisk doubled and scored Chicago's first run in the second inning, and he drove in the White Sox' final run of the game with a ninth-inning single.

Tigers 6, Mariners 5

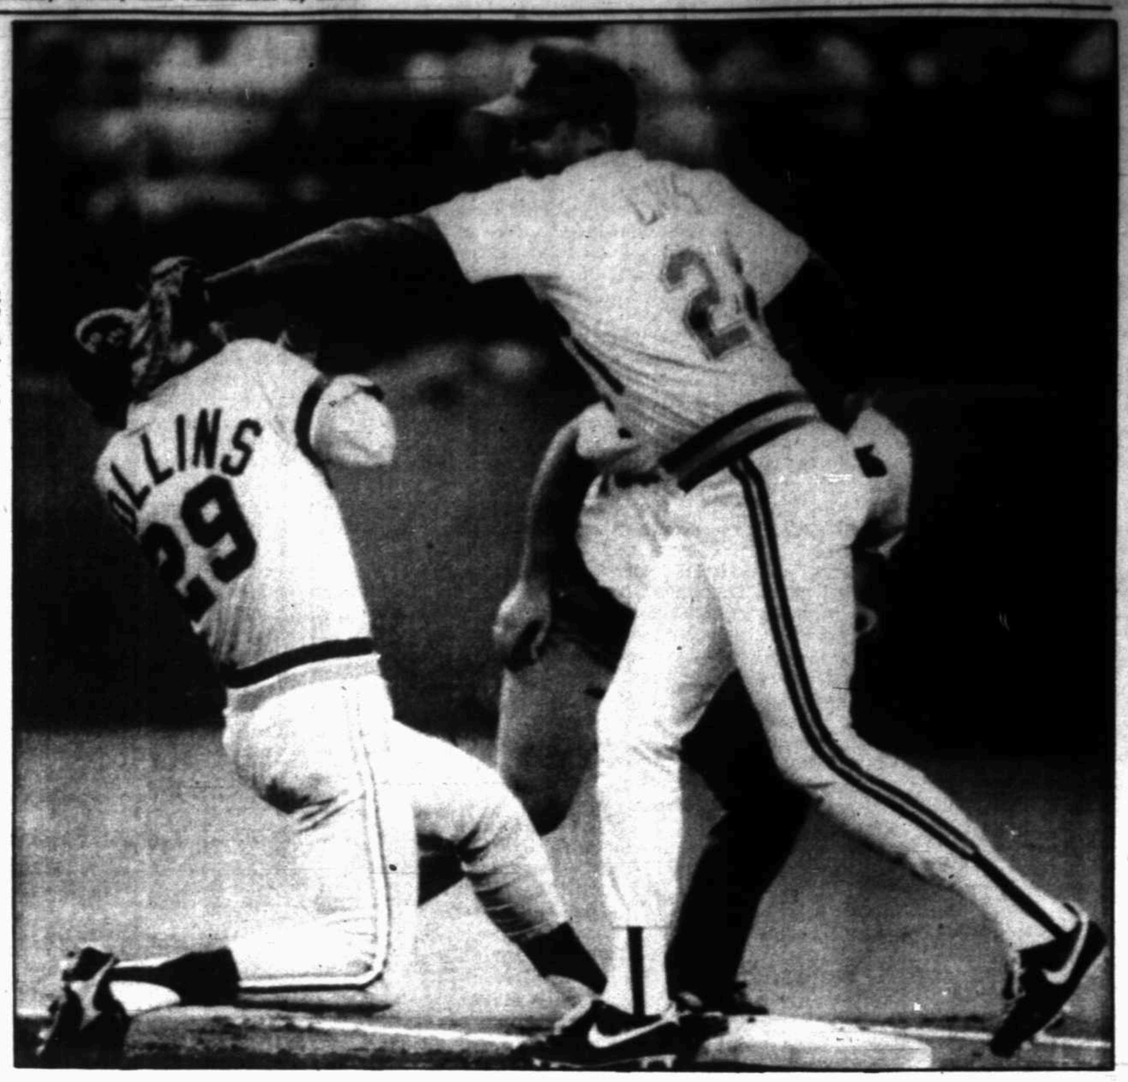

Alan Trammell hit two solo homers, and Lou Whitaker hit a two-run shot to lead Detroit over Seattle and help the Tigers end a four-game losing streak. The Mariners lost despite getting three home runs from Jim Presley.

Jack Morris pitched a seven-hitter for his 16th victory, walking four and striking out 12 in his 11th complete game.

Twins 9, Brewers 3

Gary Gaetti drove in five runs with two homers, pacing the Twins over Milwaukee and helping Minnesota end a three-game losing streak. Neal Heaton gained his first victory at home since being traded to the Twins from Cleveland on June 20.

Gaetti hit his 28th homer, a two-run shot, to give Minnesota a 3-0 lead in the fifth. Tim Laudner added a solo homer two outs later. Gaetti hit a three-run homer during a five-run eighth inning.

Tough times for team of '70s

By ALAN ROBINSON
AP Sports Writer

PITTSBURGH — The 1980s haven't been so kind to the "Team of the '70s."

Not only have times changed for the Pittsburgh Steelers, so have their faces.

Mark Malone is at quarterback, not Terry Bradshaw, who led them to a record four Super Bowl championships in six years.

Mel Blount has long since retired, free agent rookie Chris Sheffield starts at cornerback.

Remember Franco and Rocky?

Steelers' fans have found them hard to forget with players named Morse and Hooper as running backs.

It has also been hard to forget a few other names like Lynn Swann, Joe Greene, L.C. Greenwood, Jack Ham and Jack Lambert.

The Steelers have won but one playoff game in the last six seasons; their record the last 2½ seasons is a nondescript 18-21.

Despite playing in the AFC Central, perhaps the weakest division in the National Football League, the Steelers were 7-9 in 1985, their first losing season in 14 years.

AND THEIR problems are likely to continue this season. The team has made no major player acquisitions other than drafting first-round pick John Rienstra, an offensive guard from Temple.

The Steelers' best defensive back, Dwayne Woodruff, will miss the season because of knee surgery, further weakening a defensive secondary that has been increasingly exploited by opposing quarterbacks. In 1½ seasons as a regular, Malone has reminded few of Bradshaw. Defensive ends Darryl Sims and Keith Gary, first-round draft choices chosen to strengthen an ineffective pass rush, have been major disappointments.

Some have even dared to whisper what was once considered ludicrous — that perhaps Chuck Noll, in his 18th season as Steelers' coach, should find another line of work.

"Somewhere along the line, we lost that right frame of mind you need to win games," Woodruff said. "It's easy to have the right attitude when you have championship years, but when you have problems, you work on attitude. Maybe we forgot how to do that."

"There are times the last few seasons when we needed to be motivated more," said wide receiver John Stallworth, one of just three remaining veterans from the four Super Bowl teams. "Maybe the motivation was not there all down the line."

CHANGING TIMES have altered the way NFL teams scout college players, an area where the Steelers were preeminent. They built their most dominating teams almost exclusively through the draft; not a single player on their 1979 team had ever played for another NFL team.

The days when the Steelers could comb infrequently scouted campuses like North Texas State, Southern and South Carolina State to stockpile talent are gone. Scouting is computerized. Every NFL team but the Los Angeles Raiders belongs to scouting combines which distribute voluminous player data to their various clients.

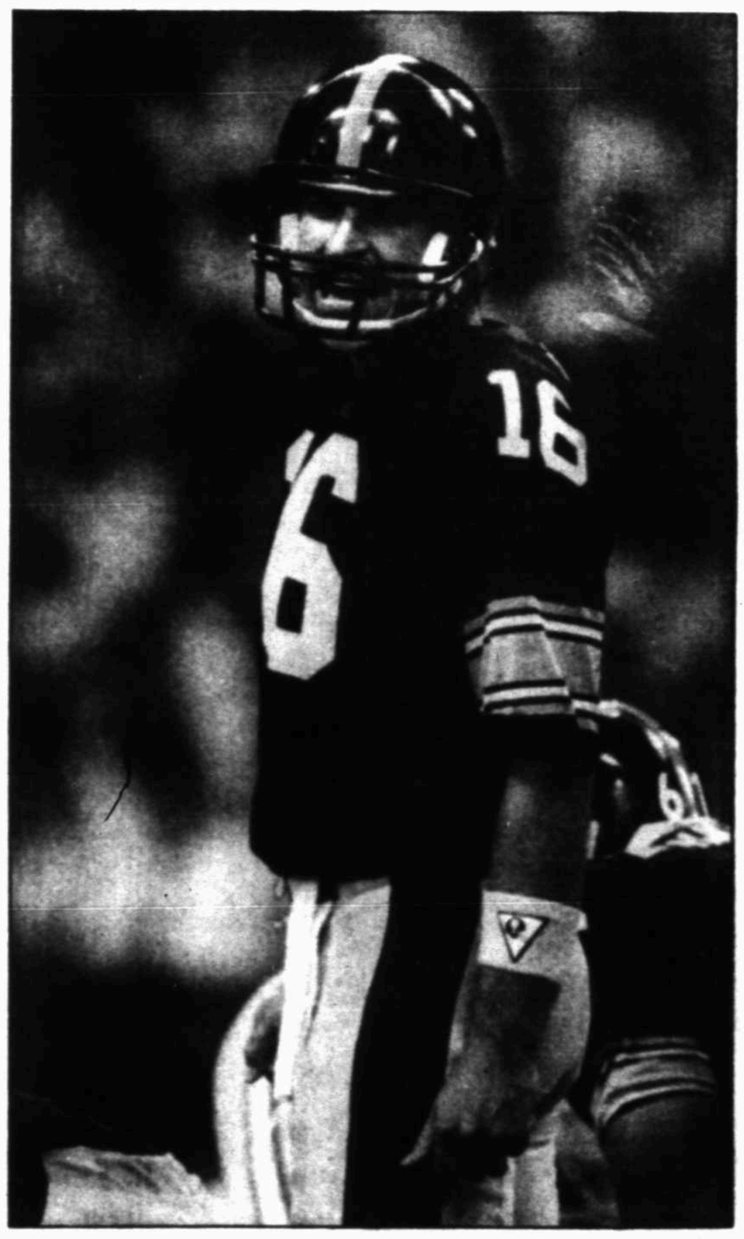

The NFL draft, once held in February, is now staged in late April or early May, minimizing the possibility a team can camouflage a hidden talent. Although the rules have changed, the Steelers have balked at altering their long-standing methods of player procurement.

Trades are nearly non-existent; the Steelers have swung only 10 deals in Noll's tenure as coach. And while the Dallas Cowboys (Herschel Walker) and the Washington Redskins (Kelvin Bryant) were astutely securing NFL rights to top United States Football League players, the Steelers refused to budge from their long-standing policy of drafting only college players.

NOLL, WHO has coached his team longer than all but three coaches in NFL history, disagrees with those who charge the Steelers are unwilling to keep up with the times.

"People say we're predictable," he said. "But look at the Chicago Bears. They didn't fool anybody last year, everybody knew what they were going to do but they still did it.

"If someone's losing, they say, 'Oh, they're predictable, we know what they're doing.' You don't win games by being unpredictable, you win them by being better than the other guy."

Pittsburgh, winner of four Super Bowls in the 1970s, has handed over the reins to quarterback Mark Malone, here facing Dallas in a preseason game, with limited success.

Shreveport takes opener with Jackson

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Charlie Hayes' two-run home run in the second inning triggered the Shreveport Captains' attack on the Jackson Mets and backed the seven-hit pitching of Charlie Corbell in a 7-0 Texas League playoff shutout Monday night.

Corbell struck out four and walked one as he pitched a complete game in the first of the best-of-three series. He added a fourth-inning RBI double to the Captains' effort.

The winner of the best of three series will face Western Division leader El Paso.

U.S. second in Aerobatics with help from Midlanders

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The United States Aerobatic Team placed second behind the Soviet Union but ahead of France in World Aerobatic Competition in South Cerney, England, in August.

A 36-point spread out of a possible 16,000 points separated the United States Men's Team from the Russian Men's Team.

"We'll be back fair and square in 1988," said Midlander Paul Erdmann, transportation officer for the U.S. Aerobatic Team. "They (the Russians) beat us fair and square."

Aerobatics are precision aerial maneuvers performed by skilled pilots in aircraft which are built for high performance and stress. The pilots place their aircraft through loops, rolls, spins, hammerhead stalls, 360-degree turns and other maneuvers within a 1,000-meter (about a 3,300-foot) cube of airspace. The World Aerobatic Competition is the Olympics of flying.

The 1988 World Aerobatic Competition will be held near Calgary in Alberta, Canada.

"We're capable of beating them (the Russians) there," Erdmann said. "They're good, but we are going to beat them. We'll come back with more sophisticated aircraft."

The U.S. Men's Team, which includes world-class pilot Gene Beggs of Midland-Odessa, in 1984 in Hungary won the biennial championship for the fourth time since World Aerobatic Competition was launched in 1960.

"Everybody had the same problem, which was inclement weather," Erdmann said of the 1986 competition. The flying weather was marred by low clouds and drizzle — "typical English weather. It was just lousy weather we had to contend with."

About 25 men's and women's teams from the United States, Russia, France, Czechoslovakia, Austria, Australia, Canada, Hungary, Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Norway, Spain, Switzerland, Belgium, and Great Britain competed in the championship event. The biennial contest is governed by the International Aerobatic Commission of the Federation Aeronautique Internationale of Paris, France.

Russians won first, the United States placed second, and France came in third in both men's and women's competition.

The Soviets flew the powerful Russian-built monoplane, the Sukhoi Su-26. The aircraft is powered by a 430-horsepower nine-cylinder radial engine. The Americans flew less powerful biplanes and monoplanes.

"The Russians sewed it up in 'big iron' — that big machine," Erdmann said of the Su-26. "It wasn't a Singer, either. It sounded like a Grumman Bearcat or a F4U Corsair (World War II fighters)," Erdmann said.

The Russians' Su-26 aircraft was built by a government-owned fighter-plane manufacturer, Sukhoi, Erdmann said. The American aerobatic aircraft are either home-built or are built through private enterprise.

"The judges were overwhelmed by the powerful Sukhoi," Erdmann said. "But we're not going to cut them (Russians) any slack next time. We are going after them with 'big iron.'" He said the American aerobatic pilots will be converting to more powerful monoplanes to fly in world competition. "And we'll do it (win) without government support."

Following is the placing of the U.S. team members:

U.S. Men's Team: Kermit Weeks of Miami, Fla., came in second in his biwing Weeks Solution. A Russia aviator placed first.

Henry Haigh of Michigan placed seventh in his SuperStar monoplane.

Harold Chappell of Michigan placed 10th in a biplane.

Clint McHenry of Miami, Fla., placed 15th in the Extra 230 monoplane.

Gene Beggs, a Southwest Airlines pilot based in Midland-Odessa, placed 23rd in his 230-horsepower biwing Pitts S1-T.

U.S. Women's Team: Julie Pfile of Albuquerque, N.M., placed second in world competition. A Russia aviatrix placed first.

Debbie Rihn of LaPorte, Texas, placed sixth.

Patti Wagstaff of Anchorage, Alaska, came in seventh.

Linda Meyers of Miami, Fla., placed ninth.

Whiteside wins MCC club title

From Staff Reports

Steve Whiteside added his second club championship in two years Monday, but this one was at Midland Country Club.

Last year, Whiteside won the Green Tree CC club title, but Monday he defeated Randy Geiselman by a 4-3 margin to take the 1986 MCC crown.

Geiselman had a big win in the tournament, producing a 3-1 victory over defending champion Craig Campbell.

Whiteside won victories over Robert Caudle, Frank Powell and Kelly Cox on his way to the MCC final against Geiselman.

Steve Lindgren won the consolation championship prize with a 5-4 win over Robert Caudle in the match play tournament.

John Carey won first flight honors while Charles Coffman took the second flight.

Third flight honors went to Larry Foster while Jack Matthews won in the fourth flight.

Buddy Redden's two-day net score of 132 won the 36-hole medal play division and Chris Huff's net 64 took the 18-hole medal play competition.

18-Hole Medal Play: 1. Chris Huff, net 64; 2. Wilbur Rocchio, net 68.

From Staff Reports

Jerry Mobley, who had lost the lead to Alan Williams on Sunday, came back with an even-par 71 Monday for a three-day score of 213 to win the title of club champion at Green Tree Country Club.

Defending champion Steve Whiteside elected not to defend his title and went over to win the Midland Country Club crown and now Mobley reigns for a year at Green Tree.

Williams balooned to a 78 Monday and settled for second place, six strokes behind Mobley. Dennis Sledge was third with a 220 total while Jay Isaacs was fourth with a 223.

Neil Howard's 72 brought him from behind to defeat two-day leader Kent Finley, who faltered badly on the final day with a 78, losing his brief moment in the sun.

Bill Davis was a five stroke winner in the first flight with a 230 while Gary Dones took the second flight by five strokes with a 233.

Dale Daniel won the third flight with a 238, nine strokes over the field, and Chester Farmer took the fourth flight with a 257, one stroke better than Al Somers.

In the fifth flight, Steve Dickerson came out of the bogs of Mississippi with a 262 to win by an amazing five strokes and Kevin Moore was an eight-stroke winner in the sixth flight with a 261.

Championship Flight: Jerry Mobley, 71-213; Alan Williams, 78-219; Dennis Sledge, 77-220; Jay Isaacs, 72-223.

President's Flight: Neil Howard, 72-220; Kent Finley, 78-222; Barry Halverson, 76-231; Steve Brown, 80-237.

First Flight: Bill Davis, 77-230; Mike Roye, 83-235; Gary Stoltz, 79-237; Lynn Hesseltin, 80-238.

Third Flight: Dale Daniel, 77-238; Ed Gee, 85-247; Jack Mussett, 83-243; Hal Wood, 87-251.

Fourth Flight: Chester Farmer, 91-257; Al Somers, 84-258; Bob Newton, 84-262; Ralph Green, 89-262.

Sixth Flight: Kevin Moore, 89-261; Doc Hanley, 100-269; Bill Rhotenberry, 94-272; Jerry Pawelek, 95-273.

Noah cruises to RHCC crown

From Staff Reports

Doug Noah became the new club golf champion at Ranchland Hills Country Club Monday with a final round 74 that gave him a three-day score of 221.

Noah could almost skate to victory on Monday. He won the championship by 13 strokes after a first round 76 and a second round 71.

Mark Thomas placed second with a 79-79-76—234 while Jamie Winkel was third with a 78-75-83—236.

In the first flight, Joe Smith took top honors and was followed by Bill Jonson and Marice Hood. Harold Clark took consolation honors.

Kirk French won the second flight and was followed by Ray Reid and Doug Thomas while Don Farris won consolation.

Bill Nolan won the third flight while Henery Maxwell and Mike McConchey followed. Lonnie Arnold was the consolation winner.

In the fourth flight, Ken Maxwell took first place while Joe Younger and H.W. Bailer followed. Jeff Longbotham won the consolation prize.

In the Red Heart flight, Glen Pierce took honors while Larry Phillips was second.

Pari-mutuel gambling bill nears finish line

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A bill that legalizes gambling on horse and greyhound racing in Texas approached the finish line at the governor's desk Monday as the Senate approved House changes.

"Hot dog, thank you!" Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris, R-Dallas and sponsor of the bill, said after the voice vote that cleared the bill through both chambers.

Texans could be placing pari-mutuel bets in 1988 if voters approve the bill in a statewide referendum in November 1987 and in local option elections, Harris said.

A "change of attitude," some of it due to the ailing economy, enabled the bill's passage after frequent failures in the past, he said.

The House and Senate approved betting bills last week, but sponsors were unable to gain the necessary votes to place the issue before voters on this November's ballot.

Harris' Senate Economic Development Committee, though, has scheduled a hearing today to discuss a separate bill regarding a statewide referendum on pari-mutuel wagering.

Much of the hour-long floor debate focused on a section of the bill that leaves open a possible court challenge to the referendum, which may prevent Gov. Mark White from signing the legislation.

"I want a bill that truly speaks for the will of the Legislature and does not contain any tricks," said Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, who tried to send the bill to a House-Senate conference committee for further study.

Washington said he was concerned the bill could become law without the referendum if a court rules the referendum portion of the bill unconstitutional before the statewide vote can be conducted.

But Harris said that won't happen. "I am saying we will have a referendum in 1987," he said.

White has said he will sign the bill only if it provides for a statewide referendum, protection against organized crime and local options for voters to decide if they want a track.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who supports pari-mutuel wagering, said Monday he "would not be surprised" if the governor vetoes the bill.

Supporters say legal gambling on horse and dog racing could eventually bring in as much as $200 million annually for the state's coffers. But opponents complain the bill will foster crime.

In other Senate action Monday, a bill moving Texas presidential primaries from May to March essentially died in the Committee on State Affairs.

Sen. Don Henderson, R-Houston, was able to delay the bill for 48 hours, thereby killing it since the special session ends Thursday. A similar bill is pending in the House.

"Basically, they are trying to radically change an election law of this state which affects both major political parties...in the last three days of a special session in this hasty manner," Henderson said.

Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville and sponsor of the bill, said he will reintroduce the measure that "will put (Texas) in the front seat of presidential politics" in the anticipated second special session.

"A presidential candidate is going to have to come to Texas and listen to our ideas and incorporate them into his platform," Edwards said.

The bill would join Texas with other southern states in a regional Super Tuesday primary on the second Tuesday of March or on the following Saturday in presidential years.

So far 12 southern states have created spring primaries designed to give the South more clout in selecting presidential nominees.

The committee approved a bill sponsored by Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, that allows seniority to dictate the order of state employee layoffs.

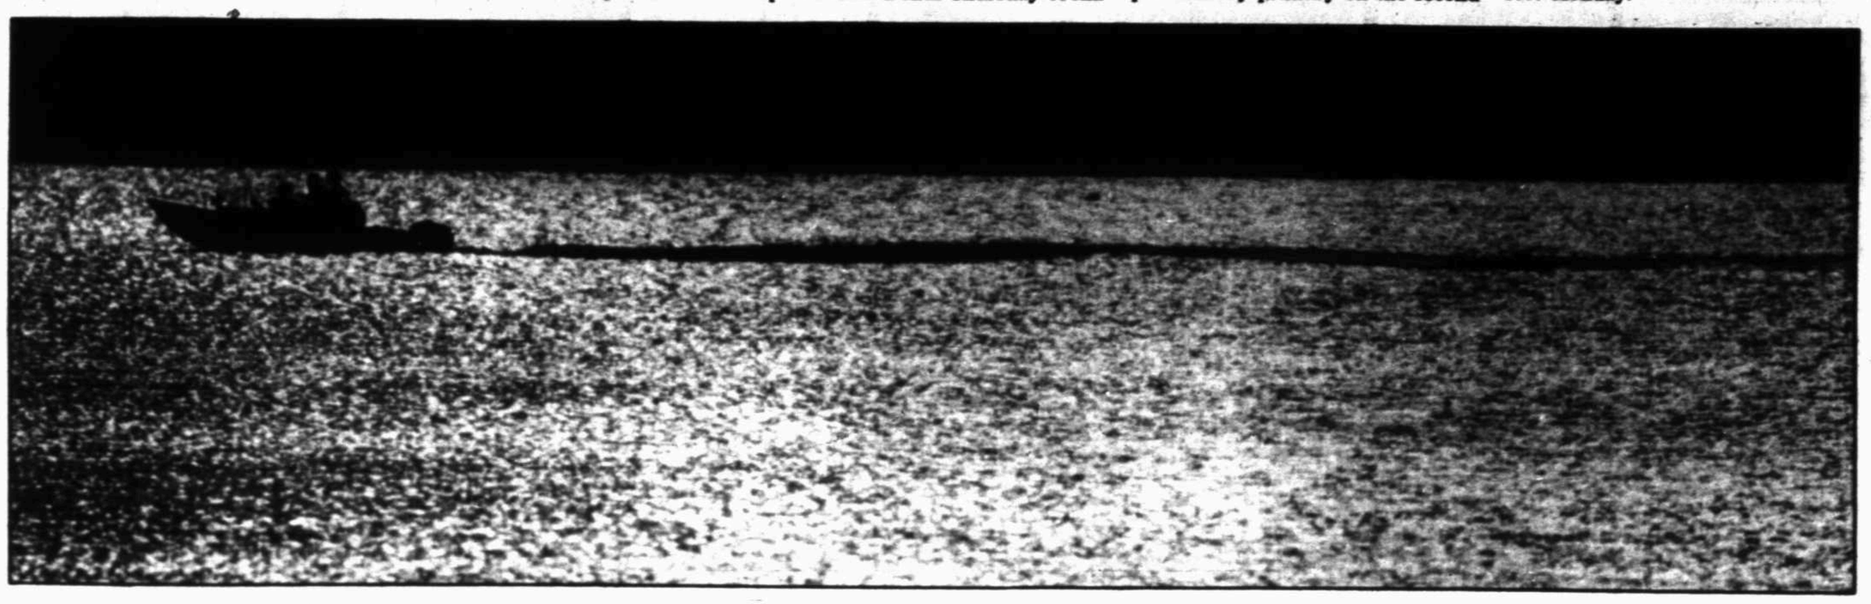

"This provides the proper mechanism for handling employee layoff procedures," said Gary Hughes, executive director of the Texas Public Employees Association.

Also Monday, the governor announced he signed a bill that takes away a 3-percent pay raise for state employees that would have taken effect Monday.

Do whispered negotiations violate Open Meetings Act?

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Whispered deliberations among House and Senate budget negotiators exclude the public from an open legislative meeting, a co-author of the Texas Open Meetings Act said Monday.

Despite continued protests from members of the news media and other spectators, the 10-man conference committee spent most of Monday morning's two-hour meeting huddling and speaking in whispered tones. The microphones in the meeting room were not turned on.

"In my view it would come very close to a violation of the (Open) Meetings Act, particularly if it appeared to be a calculated effort to exclude the public from hearing what they were saying," said Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena and one of seven co-authors of the original 1967 law.

"Obviously access is a very key question."

Conference Committee Chairman Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, said the private discussions help move the delicate budget talks along.

"It's easier to negotiate quietly, because I'll make an offer (to the five senators) I haven't even talked to my people about," Rudd said.

Sen. Grant Jones, D-Temple and chairman of the Senate conferees, said the negotiators often are not willing to publicly support a compromise without knowing how their colleagues will react.

"It's, as far as I'm concerned, almost necessary in the conduct of negotiations for us to caucus," Jones explained to the audience before the beginning of the afternoon session.

The Open Meetings Law states that, except for 12 specifically designed circumstances, "every regular special or called meeting or session of every governmental body shall be open to the public."

Those exceptions include personnel matters, discussions of real estate transactions, grand juries and pending litigation. They do not include budget discussions.

The law defines "a meeting" as "any deliberation between a quorum of members of a governmental body at which any public business or public policy over which the governmental body has supervision or control is discussed or considered."

It goes on to define "deliberation" as "a verbal exchange between a quorum of members of a governmental body attempting to arrive at a decision on any public business."

Brooks said the law applies to all legislative meetings, including conference committees. Section 2 (b) of the law states: "In this Act, the Legislature is exercising its rulemaking powers to prohibit secret meetings of the Legislature, its committees, or any other bodies associated with the Legislature, except as otherwise specifically permitted by the Constitution."

The Constitution makes no mention of conference committees.

Brooks said the touchy negotiations over a 1984 tax bill led House and Senate leaders to reach a back-room agreement without a conference committee.

"They had no conference committee because they couldn't have closed deliberations," he said.

"That's the reason they made an illegal end run around the Open Meetings Bill, so they could meet in private and cut their deals."

City Council may form citizens' panel on streets

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The City Council is considering forming a 12-member citizens' commission on the streets, said Mayor Carroll Thomas.

"The streets are our greatest asset and if you poll citizens on what they are most interested in, it's streets," Thomas said.

The mayor is asking the council to form the street commission at next Tuesday's council meeting, he said.

The commission would advise the council and staff on street issues, Thomas said.

"It would be strictly advisory. It would consult with the professional staff and select the own things it would want to study.

"I think it would be a help to the staff and council to have an individual citizens' committee of qualified people," Thomas said.

Mechanical and civil engineers would serve on the commission, he said.

"We certainly hope to have some mechanical and civil engineers. I wouldn't restrict it to those. As far as traffic circulation goes, you don't have to be an engineer."

About one-fourth of the calls he receives from citizens involved streets, Thomas said.

"I think they are a high priority item with the citizens. It would be a good move to get citizens involved," he said.

Public Works Director Fred Baker said he didn't want to comment on the commission until it is formed by the council.

But Baker said, "If you've got more eyes out there, it probably does help. Until we got our streets inventoried, the people that dealt with the streets didn't travel on all the streets."

Thomas said he would like the commission to organize into several subcommittees studying traffic regulation and different methods of street construction.

"I'm interested in traffic light synchronization. I think that's one of the things they need to study," said Thomas, who made a campaign promise to synchronize traffic lights.

Thomas said the traffic engineer is attempting to synchronize some lights now, but to completely synchronize the city's system would cost about $500,000.

Commission members would be appointed by the council, Thomas said.

City worker accused of stealing money

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A 32-year-old City of Midland employee was arrested early today for allegedly stealing money from a city parking meter last week.

Midland Police Det. Sgt. Chris Becker said the man was arrested about 8 a.m. at the Municipal Service Center on Midland County warrants of burglary of a coin-operated machine and criminal mischief under $200.

The amount taken from the meter has not been determined, Becker said.

According to Becker, the man, who worked in the city's traffic division, somehow obtained a key to open parking meters.

City Manager James Brown said today he knew there was "a problem" with a city employee, but did not know about the arrest.

Brown said he did not know how he could have obtained a key.

"The keys for those machines are checked out of the public works office," Brown said. "No one is allowed to keep them."

Brown said the city has at least one meter man that empties the meters. He did not know how many employees may have access to the keys.

Becker said the man was observed by witnesses last Thursday allegedly emptying a meter in the 500 block of W. Ohio Ave.

So far police have no evidence of any other incidents involving the man, Becker said.

Seventy-one-year-old clown was 'born into the circus'

By MICHELLE STEIN

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — There is orange paint in Mel Hall's flattop, in the bristles framing his face.

"Makeup," apologizes Hall, fingering the orange stripe. "I guess I didn't get it all out."

No problem. Within the hour, he is on a royal blue folding chair, squinting into a magnifying mirror, smearing a fresh layer of paint onto his softly folded face.

The orange blends right in.

The eye-assaulting checkered pants are another story.

"I'm a clown," Hall says. "I can get away with it."

He calls himself Happy the Clown, and he works at the International Wildlife Park.

Twice on weekdays, three times on weekends, he tells dumb jokes and performs silly magic tricks.

Then the 71-year-old climbs on his unicycle.

Seven feet up in the air.

"I have to watch out for bumps," Hall says.

Serious stuff for a senior — except that this clown comes with experience.

He was born in the circus.

"I was born in a Top Wagon, which is what you'd call a Gypsy Wagon, in Kentucky...," says Hall. "My dad, Robert Hall, was a ventriloquist. My mother, Kay, was a contortionist."

Hall learned to ride a unicycle at age 12 when his father lopped two wheels off a tricycle.

"I used cut-off broom stick handles for balance...until I could get the hang of it," Hall says.

He had lots of practice. His family traveled in a Model T truck — 8 feet by 14 feet — throughout Illinois and Missouri, spending a week in each small town.

At every stop, the Halls sponsored a Popular Lady Contest.

"It was a penny a vote," Hall remembers. "Every time a customer bought something, he bought votes."

Competition often was fierce — to the Halls' benefit. In Depression years, they might make $70 on contest night.

The Popular Lady got a wristwatch, the runner-up got an Indian blanket.

Hall stayed with the family act until he was 20, when he went to South Texas. There, he and a friend performed at nightclubs and the skating rink, "passing the hat" for profits.

"I rode my unicycle and my friend, he was a Golden Gloves boxer," he remembers.

As his act improved, so did Hall's engagements. Soon he was performing in nightclubs throughout the country, amazing audiences on his unicyles — which reached up to 9½ feet in height.

His greatest stunt was riding the unicycle upside down, his hands pushing the pedals, his feet high in the air.

"Upside down — that got a lot of talk," Hall said. "It wasn't as fancy as the quick stuff I did right side up, but upside down is what they talked about when they went home."

Eventually the act make it to Loew's Theater on Broadway in New York City, where he performed his unicycle act in tails, one week each summer, three years in a row.

He worked with Bob Hope, Jimmy Durante and Mickey Rooney and was a featured performer in the movie "Sensations of 1944," starring Eleanor Powell and W.C Fields.

"I worked with Mickey in Hawaii," says Hall, pulling out a picture of a small guy on a unicycle. "See, that's Mickey on the unicycle. And that's me right next to him."

Soon after filming "Sensations," Hall met his wife, Aurelia, performing in the Pollack Shrine Circus. Two years later, they married and had the first of four children.

It would be the children who upstaged Hall's career.

"As soon as they could walk, I began teaching them how to ride the unicycle," Hall says. "I used the free-enterprise system of bribing. If they practiced, they got on ice cream or got to go swimming."

The bribery paid off. Ervin, the oldest son, mastered the wheel at the age of 2 and was written up in "Ripley's Believe It or Not."

"I got letters from people wanting to know whether it was true," Hall says.

When Ervin was 5, he and his sister, Carmen, 3, and Jimmy, 2 — who also were proficient on the unicycle — went on the road, with mother, Aurelia, as chaperone.

They called themselves the Hall "Whiz Kids."

"They all rode out on their unicycles and the people went crazy," Hall says. "They were written up everywhere they went."

Five years later, at age 40, Hall retired his unicycle to work on his children's act, which now included his youngest daughter, Jeannine.

It would be 25 years before he rode again.

"I was living in Beaumont...and the fellow who produced the Shrine Circus there asked if I would clown for him," Hall says. "I told him I didn't know a thing about clowning.

"He told me just to go out and wave at the kids and smile."

Hall did as told — and it worked. When he added the unicycle to his act, the smiles got even bigger.

The circus performer was back in business.

San Antonio officials named to 'all-pro' team

NEW YORK (AP) — A magazine for municipal officials has named the mayor and city manager of San Antonio, Texas, as part of its "All-Pro City Management Team."

"Our city's fiscal health is critical to the quality of life and we are honored to be chosen," said Mayor Henry G. Cisneros. He was named City & State magazine's "first team," on Monday, while City Manager Louis J. Fox made the "third team."

There were two winners from Indianapolis, Comptroller Fres Armstrong and Mayor William Hudnut III. New York City also claimed two winners: Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin, on the first team, and Mayor Edward I. Koch, on the third team.

DEATHS

Norman L. Stapp

Norman L. Stapp, 59, of Midland, died early Monday at a local hospital.

Services will be at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday at Bellview Baptist Church with the Rev. G.A. Magee officiating. Masonic graveside services will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park.

Stapp was born Oct. 2, 1926, in Breckenridge, where he spent his early life. He graduated from high school in Grandfalls and then entered the U.S. Army during World War II. He served in the South Pacific. After his discharge, he returned to Grandfalls. He married the former Evelyn Lewis there in 1946. They lived in Wink for three years and then in Andrews before moving to Midland in 1958. He worked for American National Insurance Company and later was with several automobile agencies. He later established his own business, Automotive Specialties. He was a member of Bellview Baptist Church; Midland Masonic Lodge; and was Commander of Knights Templer.

Three Texans in custody after drug lab raided

MANSFIELD, La. (AP) — Three Texas residents are in custody today after a raid on an apparent drug laboratory in an out-of the way house netted drugs with a street value of more than $1 million, DeSoto Parish authorities say.

Robert Loera, 42, Ramon Gabriel, 42, and Joni Anne Doherty, 30, all of Austin, were arrested in Monday's raid in the Hunter Community, 12 miles south of here, following a six-month investigation, Lt. Robert Davidson of the DeSoto Parish Sheriff's Department.

Davidson said the investigation began in March when an anonymous tip drew attention to the large number of cars with out-of-state license plates at the Hunter house.

"The residence is on a dirt road in an obscure area," Davidson said. "Without the help of a concerned citizen, we probably never would have noticed anything suspicious."

Davidson said the raid began at 1 p.m. Monday when Ms. Doherty, who had left the house with her two sons, ages 11 and 2, was stopped at a police roadblack.

He said police found more than six pounds of suspected methamphetamine, hidden in a box of disposable diapers in the car trunk. He said Ms. Doherty was taken to jail and her two sons were turned over to the state.

At 2 p.m., Davidson said, officers converged on the house from the front and the rear.

"As soon as everyone drove up, the two males ran out the back door and ran to where we were," Davidson said.

He said amphetamine was being produced at the time and a search of the house turned up 30 gallons of liquid amphetamine and two one-gram packages of brown heroin.

Davidson said the street value of all the drugs confiscated was more than $1.1 million. Seized in the raid, he said, were the house, one acre of land, $500, two cars, a rifle and more than two truckloads of laboratory equipment and other items.

He said photographs showing sexual acts being performed with juveniles also were confiscated.

All three suspects have been booked on charges of possession of methamphetamine with intent to distribute, the laboratory manufacture of methamphetamine, possession of drug paraphernalia and continual criminal enterprise.

Loera and Gabriel were booked on charges of pornography involving juveniles.

Doherty was booked on two counts of contributing to the delinquency of juveniles.

Fifteen-month-old girl dies after being bitten by dog

DALLAS (AP) — A young Dallas girl died after the family's pet dog bit her when she fell out of a window into her back yard, police say.

Homicide investigator Bob Alexander said Sarah Faye DeMoss, 15-month-old daughter of Donald Ray DeMoss, was bitten several times on her throat Monday by a medium sized dog.

The girl's father told investigators the dog, part pit bull terrier, came to the family's home as a stray four to five months ago. A small mixed breed puppy kept in the yard with the other dog may also have bitten the child, he said.

Officers said they believe the girl fell through a screen covering her bedroom window. It appeared that the two dogs had been jumping up to the girl's window and had captured her attention, Alexander said.

The girl's mother found the child in the yard about 11 a.m. Monday, Alexander said.

"There's nothing to indicate that the dog had been vicious," investigator J.J. Coughlin said. "It looks like it was just a tragic accident."

Both investigators said the dog, believed to be between 1 and 2 years old, was friendly when they went to the family's home Monday night.

"You can pet the dog," Alexander said. "The dog was probably just playing. They obviously didn't feel like the dog was a threat."

A spokesman at Methodist Central Hospital said the child died several hours after after the accident. An autopsy was pending today.

About $10,000 in jewelry taken from local residence

From Staff Reports

Police Roundup

The Midland Police Department is investigating several burglaries that occurred over the holiday weekend.

Jewelry valued at nearly $10,000 was reported stolen from a Midland residence sometime between Thursday and Monday.

The victim, Angelo Peperone, 3600 Trinity Dr., told police a diamond stud ladies' bracelet valued at $3,000, a ladies' diamond ring valued at $3,000, an 18 karat gold ladies' bracelet valued at $2,000, a mens' watch valued at $125 and a pair of binoculars valued at $75 were stolen.

A 12-inch television set valued at $400 was reported stolen from a residence Monday. The victim, Frankie Joe Franklin, 1200 E. Pennsylvania Ave., told police the theft occurred sometime between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m.

A videocassette recorder valued at $600 and a cable box valued at $250 were reported stolen Monday from a residence in the 100 block of W. Dormand Ave. Janie O'Neal told police the burglary occurred sometime between 3 p.m. and 11 p.m.

Almost $90 cash and an AM-FM cassette player valued at $40 were reported stolen Monday from Curl N Swirl in the Town and Country Shopping Center.

According to reports, the building was entered through a west door.

A set of stereo speakers valued at $160 was reported stolen from an automobile parked in the 5200 block of Tremont Avenue. Reports said the burglary occurred sometime Sunday between 1:30 a.m. and 8:30 a.m.

In other reports, the Midland County Sheriff's office is investigating the theft of a radar detector from the cab of a tractor trailer.

Jerrold Pope, who reported the burglary, told deputies the detector, valued at $250, was taken Monday morning while the truck was parked at Warfield Truck Stop on Interstate 20.

Deputies are also investigating the theft of a lawnmower engine valued at $600 and a lawn edger valued at $325.

The items were taken from a residence on County Road 1130, one-quarter mile north of Highway 80. Reports said the items were taken sometime between noon Friday and 6 p.m. Sunday.

Free rent, other gimmicks lose favor in rental market

HOUSTON (AP) — Offers of free rent, appliance giveaways and other gimmicks are losing favor as quick cures for Houston's soft apartment rental market, officials say.

The trend is not because vacancy rates have improved much from April when they were reported at near 17 percent, said William A. Harper, executive vice president of the Houston Apartment Association.

The trend is due to a growing perception that such offers just don't pay off.

"I think the owners have found out that the more you give away, the greater the risk you'll attract someone who won't meet the terms of the lease or abide by the rules," Harper said.

Now, he said, owners are concentrating on keeping current residents.

"Of course, there are still some incentives used to attract the first-time renter," Harper said. "But I think some of the more dramatic things you saw a few months ago are not being used."

In the past, some complexes offered up to 90 days free rent, free video recorders, microwave ovens and other appliances to attract renters.

But, Valerie Patton, a manager for the Apartment Selector locater service, said that, while the incentives are fewer and more conservative, there are still plenty of them around.

"You don't see as many big giveaways, but somebody is always giving away something, usually free rent," she said.

Probably the most extravagant promotion these days is a contest where a 10-year free rent deal is being offered to visitors of 23 apartment complexes containing 10,000 units managed in the Houston area by Johnstown American Companies, she said.

Nurse's death upsets nursing home

DALLAS (AP) — The beating death of a nurse by a nursing home patient over the weekend has prompted the institution to consider monitoring patients more closely in the future.

"It was just a tragic thing that happened," said Sharlene Crisp, administrator of the Cliff Towers Nursing Home. "It upset everybody."

Laura Oliver, a 26-year-old nurse who was eight months pregnant, died Sunday after giving birth to a stillborn baby. Officials said she was assaulted by a patient at Cliff Towers where she worked.

The Dallas County medical examiner on Monday ruled the death a homicide caused by a rupture of the spleen and liver.

Employees at the nursing home said a patient accused Mrs. Oliver of taking his camera and kicked her in the stomach and hit her on the back. The patient's camera was later found in his room.

Ector County commissioners meet

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Ector County Commissioners today will hold the first of two public hearings concerning the reallocation of federal revenue sharing funds.

Commissioners will consider redistributing some $870,000 in federal funds in an effort to balance the 1986-87 budget. The second public hearing is set for 5:30 p.m. Thursday at the courthouse.

One area expected to be scrutinized by Commissioners will revenue funds allocated to the Ector County Coliseum. Indications are about $221,000 of the original $275,000 remains unspent.

In other action, commissioners are expected to review the 1986-87 budget for Medical Center Hospital as well as consider final approval of a contract with The Software Group for a computer software package.

MC fall semester classes begin

From Staff Reports

Fall semester classes at Midland College began today, with an enrollment increase of 11.6 percent.

When official registration closed Aug. 27, there were 3,002 students enrolled for credit courses.

That's 313 more than the 2,689 who had registered at the same time last year.

Late registration opens Tuesday in the Office of Student Services, Administration Building.

Full-time students must register no later than Sept. 9. Part-time students, taking less than 12 hours, must be registered by Sept. 17.

For information, call 685-4501.

SCS offering tree seedlings to forestall wind erosion

From Staff Reports

Midlanders who wish to protect their land from wind erosion may obtain windbreak tree seedlings through the Midland Soil and Water Conservation District, according to Dick Hagelstein, district conservationist.

The district is taking orders for the windbreak-tree seedlings in its continuing efforts to reduce wind erosion.

The trees, both hardwoods and conifers (evergreens), will be delivered in late February 1987, Hagelstein said.

"Trees are to be used to protect farmsteads or any rural or suburban area that may be subject to wind erosion," Hagelstein said. "The trees are for windbreak planting only and are not to be purchased for re-sale."

The conservation district will provide information on how and where to plant the trees.

Hardwoods to be made available to Midlanders include Russian olive, pecan, Burr oak, desert willow, Green ash and Skunkbush sumac. Conifers include Afghanistan pine, Arizona cypress, Austrian pine, Ponderosa pine and red cedar.

Hagelstein said the sale price for the seedlings "is very reasonable."

Hardwoods, which mature to a height of 20 to 25 feet, will sell for $40 for 100 seedlings. Conifers will sell for $30 for 30 seedlings.

Those who wish to plant windbreak trees may want to consider installing water systems to ensure survival of the trees, Hagelstein said. He said that the conservation district can design trickle systems and will have information on water systems available when the trees are delivered in the last week of February 1987. Orders should be made "as soon as possible" due to the short supply of some species.

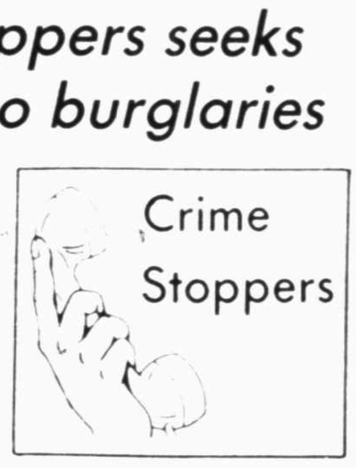

Order forms may be obtained by telephoning the U.S. Soil Conservation Service Office at 684-8722 or by visiting the office at 1348 S. Fairgrounds Road.

Crime Stoppers seeks data on two burglaries

Crime Stoppers is seeking information about two burglaries of a Midland residence.

On Wednesday, May 7, between 8 a.m. and noon, burglars entered the Osborn residence at 2713 West Kentucky by breaking out a window on a back door, reaching in and unlocking it. Among the items taken were a Pioneer stereo, a Hotpoint microwave oven, and a metal tool box containing tools, brand names Snap On and Craftsman, valued at $3,000.

Three months later, on August 7, the residence were burglarized a second time. This time, burglars entered through the garage by cutting a padlock with bolt cutters. The burglars were unable to get into the house, but stole a Sears Craftsman tool cabinet filled with hand and power tools.

Crime Stoppers will pay a $1,000 cash reward, this week only, for the arrest and indictment of the persons responsible for the burglaries.

Crime Stoppers can be reached in Midland at 694-TIPS, and in Odessa at 333-TIPS. Callers do not have to reveal their identities.

City agency offers 'wet workout'

From Staff Reports

The City of Midland Recreation Division will initiate a "Wet Workout and Lap Swim" class beginning Monday, Sept. 8 and ending Thursday, Dec. 18.

The class will be held Monday through Thursday, 10-11 a.m. and the city pool located at North A St. and Wadley. A sign up for the class will be held at the pool Sept. 2 and 3, from 10 a.m. to noon.

For more information, contact Debbie Stone at 697-6995.

Louisianans bagging big roaches

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — It started as a tongue-in-cheek ploy to lure customers, but Ronnie Dyer says it could develop into a interstate challenge to find a Louisiana roach larger than any boasted by neighboring Texas.

"They're bringing them in bags, alive, dead, even imitations," said Dyer, owner of Drusilla Hardware here.

Dyer launched his a televised appeal to Baton Rouge area residents to bring in their bugs for his Big Roach Contest to drum up business during a slump in the Louisiana economy. His pitch: roach spray is something you can't live without, and something you have to buy somewhere.

CRIME STOPPERS
694-TIPS

Crime Stoppers pays cash rewards for information leading to the arrest and indictment of felony crime offenders. Callers DO NOT have to reveal their identities.

Crime Stoppers personnel are available 24 hours a day. Regular office hours are 8:00 a.m.-5:00 p.m., Monday-Friday. After 5:00 p.m. Weekends, and holidays, you can leave a message at 694-TIPS. Messages are checked hourly and are confidential.

Or you can reach Crime Stoppers personnel by calling pager number 560-0022 from a TOUCH TONE telephone. After you hear 3 high pitched beeps punch in the telephone number you wish to be called back at then push the # sign and hang up.
Your call will be returned as soon as possible. Remember, calls are confidential and you do not have to reveal your identity.

Hummingbird Nest and Eddie's Sugar Cube offering fall classes

As everyone is getting ready for all the activities that come with Fall, things are certainly buzzing at the Hummingbird Nest and Eddie's Sugar Cube, 2000 N. Big Spring. New stock is arriving in both shops and classes are being scheduled. Whatever your interest is - floral arranging, cake decorating or candy making - you'll find something to suit your fancy at these two shops.

Sandy Hayes, owner of the Hummingbird Nest, announces that she is planning floral design classes. Holiday decorations will be the focus of the sessions with wreath decorations and bow tying being emphasized. Now is the time to call Sandy at 685-1123 and sign up for a class.

Whether you want to make your own decorations or have Sandy custom-design an arrangement for you, you will be glad to hear that a whole new array of wreaths, baskets, hats, containers and other decorations have just arrived.

Sandy can design an arrangement for a particular season. After you've enjoyed it and another event is on the horizon, she can rearrange the decoration to meet your new needs. There's just no limit to the creative things she dreams up. Large brim hats in a wide variety of colors, she says, can be decorated and really brighten up a door, bedroom or kitchen this fall.

Wreaths, she says, are always appropriate for the front door, though the style may vary from season to season.

Baskets can be used for silk flower arrangements or other special arrangements such as baby baskets for a baby shower, junk food baskets for teenagers or someone in the hospital. Sandy will help you design a special basket.

The Hummingbird Nest will have ceramic pumpkins for Halloween decorations and football helmets and other whatnots for silk mums.

Do you have a flair for fashion? You'll love the hand-made collars for ladies and smocked baby dresses.

For the man in your life, the shop has turkey tail fans with beards. They even have a female one with a beard (This is very rare - only about 5 percent of the females have beards.). Hunters, you'll be glad to know these can be custom made.

Of course, the Hummingbird Nest still has quilts, porcelain dolls, ceramic containers, a large doll house, antiques, French hand sewn pillows, depression glassware, Cabbage Patch kids with cabbage beds in green and purple.

Eddie Brooks of Eddie's Sugar Cube is also geared up for the fall. She has a variety of classes scheduled including:

Cake Decorating I Tuesdays 7-9p.m.
$25 6 weeks starting Sept. 9

This beginners class will include border, roses, sweetpeas, five petal flowers, figure piping and how to bake a level cake and frost it. You will actually get to practice in class.

Cake Decorating Mondays 1-3 p.m.
$25 6 weeks starting Sept. 22

Same as above

Candy Making Wednesday 7-9p.m.
$7.50 October 1

This will be a demonstration class. Included will be molded and painted types, peanut butter cups, chocolate covered cherries, pecan turtles, tiger butter and more. Recipes and samples will be given out.

Candy Making Tuesday 7-9p.m.
$7.50 November 4

Same as above

Gingerbread House Class
Nov. 18, Dec. 2

The first class will be dedicated to patterns and instructions on how to bake the house, Your house will be assembled at the second class.

Midland College Class
November 12, 7-9p.m.

Eddie will be teaching one class at Midland College. This particular course needs to be registered for at the college.

To sign up for the classes to be offered at Eddie's Sugar Cube call 685-1231. Eddie is glad to announce that class participants will enjoy a 10 percent discount on supplies during the weeks the classes are meeting.

She certainly has all the supplies anyone could possibly need. You will find over 30 cake pans to select from, ranging from basic round and square to hexagon and heart shaped to characters such as Holly Hobby, Ziggy and R2-D2. Many new Wilton novelty pans and Wilton books will be in soon.

Need to bake a wedding cake? Eddie has everything you'll need including fountains and porcelain bride and groom sets.

More candy molds are being added to the wide selection of candy making supplies which includes, white and dark chocolate, mint molds, sucker molds, food coloring and more. You'll like the sucker molds and sugar lay-ons ordered especially for Halloween.

Don't miss out on all the fun at 2000 N. Big Spring this fall. Stop by Eddie's Sugar Cube and the Hummingbird Nest this week.

The two shops are open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Tuesday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday. The shops will be open at other times by appointment.

Eddie Brooks (left) of Eddie's Sugar Cube and Sandy Hayes of the Hummingbird Nest have added a lot of new things to their store at 2000 N. Big Spring. They've also planned a variety of classes to start soon.

J.J.'s Etc. is now open!

J.J's Etc., located next to J.J.'s Fitness Center in the Town and Country Shopping Center on Midkiff, offers tanning in comfort and a colorful variety of exercise suits. They are open Monday thru Friday, 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Saturday, 9 a.m. till noon.

Sewing Machine Supply has new location in Village Shopping Center

Catherine Claggett, owner of Sewing Machine Supply, is proud to announce that the shop is now in its new location at 2320A W. Wall. Stop by during their big celebration sale!

Sewing Machine Supply has moved and is now open in its new location! Midland's dealer for Singer, Husqvarna Viking and New Home machines is still located in the Village Shopping Center but is now at 2320A W. Wall, next door to Greens Restaurant (facing Wall). Get in on the celebration this week, and you'll be glad you did!

Owner Catherine Claggett says that just take this ad in when you visit their new location, and you will recieve a free gift.

If you need a machine repaired, now is the time to have it done. Sewing Machine Supply offers in-shop repairs and with this article you get $7.50 off your repair work.

That's only the beginning of the celebration. Sewing Machine Supply still has the same fine lines they've had in the past and all their machines and cabinets are on sale now. Most of their machines are 25 to 50 PERCENT OFF. They have machines, starting as low as $169.95. Savings have never been so great!

Mrs. Claggett says they have been overstocked and want to sell the machines they have in the store. Don't wait, she says, when they reorder the prices will have to be higher because their cost is rising.

With all the tremendous bargains, now is a great time to start a Christmas layaway. (Christmas really isn't that far away.)

One of the machines you may want to consider is the New Home Combi. This handy little machine is a sewing machine with buttonhole and stretch stitch on one side and an overlock on the back side. It's two machines in one, regularly priced at $899, now only $750. You have to see it to believe it! The economy of it - the space saving features - they're unbelievable.

Sewing Machine Supply also has all sorts of parts and accessories for Viking, New Home and Singer. There are many, many sewing accessories, all-wood cabinets. Sewing Machine Supply even offers the little extra things, like expert scissor sharpening.

If you're looking for a gift but just can't decide what to get, a gift certificate from Sewing Machine Supply may be just the thing you need.

Be sure to go by Sewing Machine Supply's new location at 2320A Wall.

Alicia King, owner of Country Charm, offers home-made candy, cakes and cookies, as well as hand-crafted items. A candy making class is planned for October 7. Call or go by 4313-B W. Illinois to sign up.

Country Charm has down-home sweets and hand-made crafts

Country Charm, located at 4313-B W. Illinois, is one of Midland's newest and most charming little shops. Just a peak through the windows and you'll know where Alicia King's shop gets its name. Candy making supplies and hand-crafted items fill the shelves and you'll probably smell fresh baked cookies, cakes or candy. It's a step into the good old days in the country.

Alicia always keeps some kind of her delicious candy, whether it be fudge, peanut brittle, marshmallow fudge or another old-fashioned favorite, in a glass case. You'll want to take some home with you, but that's only the beginning of the tempting treats at Country Charm.

Alicia will bake and decorate cakes for all those special occasions - birthdays, anniversaries, holidays, retirement parties, just about anything you can imagine. Country Charm will even cater your wedding reception.

One very special thing that Alicia makes is Cookie Bouquets. They're cute and tasty. It's a perfect way to cheer someone up. Country Charm will deliver the bouquets in baskets. Balloons can even be attached. If you prefer, a dozen "long stemmed" cookies can be delivered in a box.

The delicious candy you find at Country Charm can be special ordered to meet your needs. If you prefer to make your own, you'll want to find out more about the candy making class to be offered October 7 (Tuesday) from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. Alicia says it will cover the basics of candy making.

Are you too anxious to wait until October? Well, stop by Country Charm. Alicia is always glad to try to answer your questions. Candy making supplies including Nestle's chocolate, food color, sucker molds and sticks, molds for mints and more are always in stock.

The many hand-crafted items look as good as the treats taste.

Quilts with wooden racks add a bright, yet nostalgic touch. Ducks in every style and size surround original Cabbage Patch kids at this store.

If there's a baby in your family, you'll love the selection of hand-made bibs, teddy bear lamps, comforters and other baby items.

Amish dolls, special wooden placemats in the shape of hearts, "Big Mouth" pencil or toothbrush holders, decorative wreaths and hats, porcelain dolls and hand-painted switch plates will add a warm touch to any home.

Remember the decorative door stops that were so popular in years gone by? Country Charm has some of the cutest ones you'll ever find.

Scented pot holders add to the nice aroma when you place a hot pan on them.

Oh, the selection goes on and on - hand blown glassware from Pennsylvania, wooden tater boxes, bread boxes and trash can holders, decorative magnets, paper towel holders, basset hound banks, elegant photo album covers and more beautiful hand-made items fill the shelves at Country Charm.

The store is open Tuesday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Saturday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Call soon if you would like to participate in the candy-making class.

Play up eyes with stylish sunglass silhouettes

By KAREN CALDWELL
Copley News Service

If there is one thing designers agree on this fall, it's the importance of sunglasses.

This fall, trends are following many themes, among them "Soviet Chic," "Western" or "Out of Africa."

Throughout these themes, one accessory has been a constant — eyewear. The fall '86 sunglasses message is stronger than ever before.

Sunglasses for fall and winter? You bet. It's a good idea to wear sunglasses year-round, according to Benson Optical, a nationwide optical retailer. Water, sand and snow reflect ultraviolet rays and both temperature extremes and wind can cause eye discomfort. Polarized lenses reduce glare on roads, snow and water.

While some designers are opting for juxtapositions of whimsical and colorful accessories against the dark clothes these three looks demand, others are conveying the seriousness of their message with an overall uniformity.

Russian-influenced silhouettes in monochromatic tones of taupe, brown, black and gray are being labeled "Soviet" or "Security Chic." This idea of dressing militaristically is becoming the most innovative fashion trend and is fostered by famous designers such as Karl Lagerfeld, Kenzo Takada, Valentino and Yves Saint Laurent. These cossack looks include double-breasted coachman coats, peplum suits, gray flannel pants and turtleneck sweaters.

THE MILITARY look has been spotted on the runways of Paris and Milan with dark shades as accents to set this mood. The classic gold frame, dark lens aviator was commissioned by the U.S. Army Air Corps 50 years ago and seems an obvious match with this military look, according to a Ray Ban sunglasses spokesman.

The "Lone Ranger Rides Again" Western look features silver metallic cowboy boots, rhinestone studded saddle-stitched denim jackets, trumpet-flared skirts and suede-fringed jackets. Liz Claiborne, Freego and Comint are just a few of the designers joining in for this futuristic celebration of denim and leather. The accessories: the bolo tie, turquoise cuff links, silver buckle belt and the classic aviator-shape leather-trimmed sunglasses to block the glare of all those studs and stones.

The "Street Safari" look returns again, this time influenced by the Oscar-winning "Out of Africa." In the urban jungle, hunting-style vests, pants and jackets with pockets, zippers and snaps galore come in subdued tones of toast, khaki and beige and take on a new seasonless feeling. This look is popularized by designs of Banana Republic, Hunting World and British Khaki. The accessories on the runways are few: the straw safari hat, the leopard print belt and tortoise frame sunglasses. No matter what the shape, be it the tortoise wayfarer style, tortoise-trimmed aviator or traditional tortoise classic sunglasses, the tortoise is the hunter's best camouflage.

Sunglasses are big fall news outside these three themes, too.

Willi Smith showed his fashions with rhinestone-studded sunglasses; Milan models pulled their hair back in ponytails and donned dark shades; and Adrienne Vittadini chose dark glasses to accent her leopard and tiger print tops.

MANY OF the sunglasses frames, like the classic aviator, are available for prescription glasses as well. No longer viewed as corrective hardware, the latest eyewear is textured, colored and styled in ways once reserved for jewelry, handbags and shoes.

Today's eyewear selection covers the gamut from traditional preppy to faddish new wave. Together with diverse designs, the vast spectrum of colors available make it equally easy to match frames to an outfit as well as the occasion. The resulting look is novel without being trendy; coordinated without being contrived. It is a look that has become synonymous with a heightened sense of style.

"You, as a wearer, only look through your glasses — everyone else looks at them," says Lee Anderson, executive vice president of Benson Optical. "We're seeing a new appreciation for eyewear as facial ornaments that can conceal or reveal, create a new look or energize an old. Today's optical options clearly make it easy to put together a wardrobe of glasses as varied as your lifestyle."

What about contact lens wearers? Many have the option of changing the color of their eyes to coordinate or contrast with their new looks for fall with tinted contact lenses.

"They're a natural complement to today's wide range of choices in fashion, look and lifestyle — especially for people who aren't satisfied with their present eye color," said Dr. Charles Slonim, an ophthalmologist of Tampa, Fla., and assistant clinical professor at the University of South Florida College of Medicine.

There are even colored lenses available without correction for people who want to enhance or change their eye color for pure cosmetic appeal. The lenses shade only the iris, the colored portion of the eye.

No matter what trends and designers you choose to follow, the fall/winter '86 fashion season's offerings portray imaginative themes from which to update your clothing and accessory wardrobe and make a unique statement that reflects the times.

Sunglasses for fall and winter to match themes

Successful makeovers should easily transform looks

By KAREN CALDWELL
Copley News Service

Magazine editors know a surefire way to draw readers into the pages of their glossy tabloids ... makeovers.

Who can resist seeing the "before" and "after" photos of a teacher, executive or homemaker? It's comforting to see someone "ordinary," not a model or movie star, transformed into an attractive, classy and sometimes even glamorous person in just a few short steps. If it's possible for them, it's possible for us, right?

Many people seek makeovers to reflect inside changes — like losing weight, a new job, divorce — on the outside as well, according to Judith Waters, Ph.D., in a Glamour magazine article. Waters is an associate professor of psychology at Fairleigh Dickinson University.

"We want to fit in," Waters said in Glamour. "We make changes in response to our perceptions about what is needed to succeed in a particular place." Makeovers are popular because they involve makeup and hair, both relatively easy changes for a person to make.

Glancing through a full-page spread of makeovers, one often wonders how long the person maintain their "new look." Did they really feel comfortable once they got home? What about at work or around friends? Were the expert's techniques too difficult to imitate at home?

Waters says makeovers have lasting results to the degree that they reflect internal change: people change from the inside out, not outside in.

"Most of the time if you look into a physical change, it's because you're already thinking about changes — thus they seem to emerge magically, after a makeover," she said.

If you're considering a makeover, make sure yours includes a lesson where the expert demonstrates the best way to gain control of your image through cosmetics. You must understand how and why makeup is used or applied, or else it's like being given a tool without the instruction manual, the Glamour article said. Communication is crucial in order for the expert to deliver a look you'll want to keep.

For a successful makeover, the way you look afterward must seem "better" to you, or the changes will surely be temporary.

Where do you go for a makeover? If you're not one of the lucky ones selected by a major magazine for a makeover, take heart. Look instead to cosmetologists and makeup artists who offer makeovers. Some department store makeup counters give partial or full makeovers, and big-name cosmetic manufacturers often send representatives to retailers to give free makeovers and tips to customers.

You can also pick up good tips by following the advice of the experts in magazine makeovers.

Maybe you just want to give your makeup kit a makeover. It's possible to add dozens of new hues to your existing collection without spending a bundle. According to The New York Times Magazine, models and makeup artists, whose beauty kits include hundreds of products, do much of their shopping at drugstores, discount stores and beauty-supply houses. They rarely equate price with quality and have no qualms about blending two or more inexpensive products for a range of colors.

Try mixing lipstick colors together for an array of new colors or create your own foundation by mixing light and dark hues of base to achieve your skin tone. If your skin is dry, thin the mixture with moisturizer. Thicken the foundation with talcum powder, the article said.

Don't be afraid to substitute applicators when necessary; many cosmetics look a lot better when they're applied with makeup brushes instead of the enclosed applicator.

If you're in the market for a change, why not consider a fragrance makeover? Try some of the new fragrances that catch your eye at the cosmetic counter, or make more of your own favorites by "layering."

Layering fragrances is based on the principle that as the day goes on, and one layer of fragrance fades, it is replaced by the next layer.

AT WIT'S END

'Friends' everywhere

By ERMA BOMBECK

The other night my husband and I were poised in front of the TV set to listen to the news.

A helicopter zoomed across the screen, a fireman performed a daring rescue, flood waters lapped at a second-story window and a deep voice announced, "The Evening News with Stone Rock and Wendy Wetlips."

Stone said, "Good evening, I'm Stone Rock."

Then Wendy said, "And I'm Wendy Wetlips, filling in for Cookie Scarftricks who is not here."

Then Stone said, "For tonight's top story we go to Dirk Boulder. Can you fill us in on what's happening, Dirk?"

Dirk said, "Thanks, Stone and Wendy. We're waiting for the final vote within the hour. Now back to you, Stone and Wendy."

Stone said, "Thanks, Dirk."

Wendy said, "Thanks, Dirk."

Dirk said, "You're welcome, Stone and Wendy."

Stone said, "Now to you, Wendy."

And Wendy said, "Thanks, Stone."

It was never that way with Walter Cronkite. We all knew Walter. He had the mustache and even if he had shaved it off, we were bright enough to figure that there would be no reason to run in a look-alike to tease us.

The way I figure this new wave of intimacy is it all goes with the selling of the anchorperson. For some reason it is important that we are on a first-name basis with the "team." The news means more if we believe they all live at the same boarding-house, eat together, play softball on Sundays, wash their cars and sit around with elderly people rapping and finding out what they're thinking. Someone figured if they had a hobby and a dog, they'd have more credibility. Anchorpersons want to be your friends.

I'll tell you the truth. I don't need any more friends. At the moment, I'm supporting a mother lode. There's the waiter at the restaurant who introduces himself the moment I sit down. There's the woman at the bank who presents herself by name and offers to be of any assistance. There's the salesperson in lingerie who gives me her card and says she'll call when the "flared legs" come in. There's the guy at the service station who asks me to mention his name when I call, and, of course, the stewardesses and captains on airlines. Maybe if one of them dies, I will replace them with an anchorperson, a weatherman or a sports announcer.

At the end of the newscast, it was like "lights out at the Waltons." Stone said good night to the sportscaster, Granite, who said good night to Stone and Wendy. Then the weatherman, Storm, said good night to Granite, and finally Dirk reported that they'd have to wait until tomorrow for a report on the vote before he said, "Back to you, Stone and Wendy."

Wendy said Cookie would be back tomorrow night.

I'm sure someone will point her out to me.

DEAR ABBY

Topless dancer suffers conflict between job, religion

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am writing because I need some advice about my present employment in relation to how I feel about myself spiritually.

You see, I am a topless dancer and I also consider myself to be a good Christian. I don't want to change my job because I am a single parent and make a very good living for myself and my family. Also, I love to dance. This job allows me to spend time with my children, take classes at the university, and live a respectable lifestyle. I will eventually get my degree and pursue a career.

I believe in God, and live a clean and virtuous life. I go straight home after work at the club and do not accept invitations from customers. Abby, do you think a person can dance topless and believe in God? — CONCERNED AND PRAYING

DEAR CONCERNED: Obviously, a person can dance topless and believe in God, because you do.

DEAR ABBY: A reader signed, "My Mother's Daughter," wrote to say that her mother had asked to witness the birth of her grandchild. Her daughter wanted her there, but the husband objected. He felt that the birth of a child should be a private moment between husband and wife, and he didn't want to share it with anyone. They agreed to abide by your decision, and you voted in favor of allowing the mother to be present.

Sorry, but I must disagree with you. I think the husband's wishes should take priority over the wishes of his mother-in-law.

There seems to be a trend toward inviting children, taking pictures and creating a social scene in the delivery room, which I find appalling. — HELEN IN OMAHA

DEAR HELEN: I expected some flack on my answer, and I got it. I heard everything from "You must be crazy" to "If the woman's mother wants to witness the birth of a baby, she can rent a VCR and a tape and see the whole thing in living color. She can also rent a tape of a 'conception' if she's interested."

My mail has been running 2-to-1 against my answer, but let's be fair and give both sides an airing.

DEAR ABBY: I am a retired midwife and, therefore, have shared in the joy of many a birth. Because the births I helped with were mostly home births, the couples were able to choose whomever they wanted to share in the experience.

I would tell the husband that because the wife was physically the one who was having the baby, I thought that she should have the final say about who should be present, as the more secure and relaxed she was, the easier her labor would be.

Over and over again I saw that the more loving support a woman had in labor, the more beneficial it was for her in every way.

My own mother was unconscious and alone when all her children were born, so attending the birth of my son, and holding him when he was just minutes old gave her something special indeed. As for me, having her there gave me strength and courage. I am glad my husband had no objections to having my mother hold my other hand and share with him the miracle of seeing a new life come into the world. — IN SUPPORT OF MOTHERS AT BIRTHS

DEAR ABBY: A reader recently defended smoking by listing a few smokers who lived to a ripe old age.

That's like naming five survivors of an airplane crash that killed 80 people as proof that crashing airplanes are safe!

If people want to smoke, that's their business. But if they want to use their medical insurance to pay for their self-inflicted illnesses, then it becomes MY business because they are driving my premiums up. — BILL HOWE, WAXAHACHIE, TEXAS

Glamour gives teens echo of yesterday

By CATHY LAWHON
Copley News Service

The critical shortage in fairy godmothers hasn't made a dent in the Cinderella stories for homecoming '86. Fashion designers catering to the increasingly sophisticated tastes of today's teen-agers have replaced the wand-wielding godmothers and the resulting gowns are enough to make any Prince Charming look twice.

Gone is the punk princess of last year. Stretch lace and an occasional ragged hem are all that remain of the Cyndi Lauper look.

This year, glamour reigns. It can be the sugary-sweet Southern belle, the sophisticated vamp or anything in between. But formality is the key. And that formality echoes an increasing respect for tradition among the young.

Within this feeling of refinement and formality are three distinct fashion looks, according to a spokesman for Eletra Casadei, one of California's most prolific designers of prom fashions.

The Cinderella or royal wedding look, with its tight bodice and big, full skirts, is the dress that all mothers wish for their daughters — pretty, feminine, traditional. The glamour girl influence is reminiscent of the style of Marilyn Monroe and Rita Hayworth. The look is skintight bustiers with skirts sometimes slit up the front or the back. And finally, there's the rock 'n' roll look — not quite the rebel deb of last season, but a more refined feeling that still incorporates uneven hemlines and cutout backs. Fabrics are shiny or metallic. Colors are sweet, minty pastels, icy whites or sophisticated black.

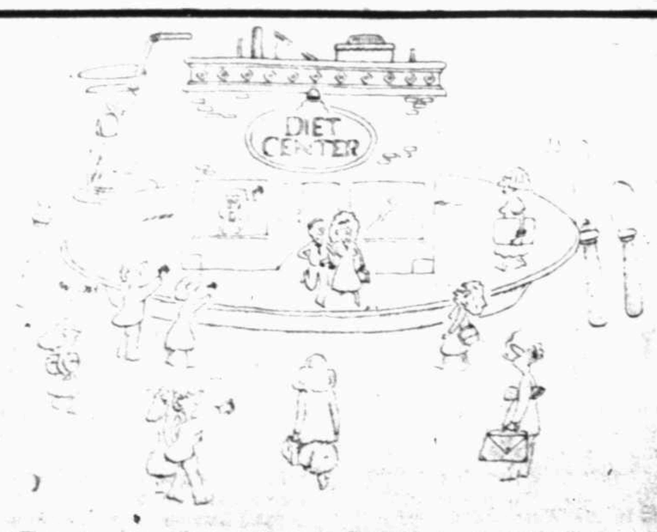

And the accessories? Go for the glitz with big, oversize rhinestone earrings, rhinestone necklaces, pearls or colored gemstones. There's nothing wrong with fakes, of course, if the family jewels are less than regal. And if the glass slippers seem a bit impractical, go with satin slippers dyed to match the dress.

Prince Charmings, too, are sticking with tradition this season.

"There are a lot of really wild and unusual colors and designs available," says Jean Gibson of Gingiss Formalwear. "But the guys don't seem to be going for that. They're going for very traditional, formal tuxes."

With this very proper look go some guidelines to help ease Prince Charming's transition from blue jeans.

- Shirt cuffs should show ¼ to ½ inch below the coat sleeve.
- Jackets should be buttoned while standing and unbuttoned while sitting. (There are no guidelines for kneeling at a date's feet with glass slipper in hand, however.) When wearing a vest or cummerbund, the jacket may be left unbuttoned at all times.
- Cummerbunds are more popular than vests. The cummerbund should fit over the waistband with pleats facing upward.

Gold gains

LONDON (AP) — Gold gained between $3 and $4 today in European trading rising on fears of a U.S. economic slowdown and the lure of hitting the $400-an-ounce mark, dealers said. The U.S. dollar was little changed.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $394.50 a troy ounce today, compared with late Monday's $391.75. At midmorning the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $395.50.

In Zurich, the bid price was $395.25, up from $391.50 late Monday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $6.04 to close at a bid $392.43.

Dealers began predicting it soon pass the $400-an-ounce mark.

"That psychological barrier acts as an attraction to gold to go higher," said a London dealer.

The price of gold has not risen above $400 an ounce since December 1983 and was under $300 dollars only 18 months ago. A traditional speculator's haven in times of international crisis, the metal topped $800 an ounce during the 1979 Iranian hostage crisis.

On Monday some dealers attributed the increase to fears of renewed U.S.-Libyan hostilities, signs of further U.S. economic sluggishness and rumors of heavy gold-buying by central banks.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.23 a troy ounce, up from Monday's $5.21.

Dealers said currency markets were quiet in the aftermath of the U.S. Labor Day holiday, but trading was expected to pick up later in the day with the publication of fresh U.S. economic statistics.

The dollar was hit by last week's announcement of a record U.S. trade deficit for July. Figures scheduled for publication today are U.S. construction spending and factory goods orders for July.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar gained 0.20 yen to close at 154.20. Later, in London, it was quoted at 153.95 yen.

Dealers said long-term expectations still were for a further decline in the dollar, which dipped to 152.55 yen on Aug. 20, its lowest since the late 1940s and down 37 percent from last September.

They said the dollar was boosted today by institutional investors buying dollars to finance foreign bond purchases, and by signs of a recovery in oil prices.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Monday:

-2.0280 West German marks, down from 2.0281

-1.6345 Swiss francs, down from 1.6358

-6.6465 French francs, up from 6.6450

-2.2873 Dutch guilders, down from 2.2882

--1,399.50 Italian lire, unchanged

-1.3875 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3865

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.4915, compared with $1.4900 Monday.

Survey finds better economy

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The economy improved considerably in August, according to the monthly survey of the National Association of Purchasing Managers.

The survey of nearly 250 companies in diverse industries indicated that some of the increase could be attributed to the reopening of plants that had been shut down during July for maintenance and vacations. The new data also indicated a significant increase in new orders.

The purchasing managers' composite index rose to 52.6 percent in August, after falling to 46.7 percent in July, from 49.6 percent in June, according to data released Monday. August was the fifth month of this year in which the indicators registered above 50 percent. Any reading over that figure is generally considered a sign that the economy is growing, while any figure below it indicates that the economy is declining.

The index reading was a full 10 percentage points higher than the number cited in rumors that circulated in credit markets late last week. The results of the purchasing managers' survey was one of several economic statistics that were rumored to have been leaked.

"The disturbing down trend of the last three or four months reversed direction in August as the economy returned to an expanding phase," said Robert J. Bretz, chairman of the association's business survey committee and director of purchasing and distribution at Pitney Bowes Inc. Because of the dramatic swings in the numbers, however, Bretz said he believed that "there has never been a period where the economy has seemed so erratic."

The report covers 21 industries in 50 states. While economists view it as an early reading on current economic activity, its importance has declined, along with the decline of the industrial sector's share of the nation's economy.

The new data showed that inventories have continued to decline, but at a lower rate than in the previous two months, and that employment remained at about the same depressed levels as June and July. Price increases were slight.

Bretz said the improvement in production largely resulted from the reopening of plants that had been closed in July for maintenance or for employee vacations. Of the 49 percent of the association members reporting summer shutdowns, 69 percent had indicated the closings would occur in July and 22 percent in August. "That indicates that a number of plants are still shut down, and nevertheless there has been a rebound," Bretz said.

Nearly twice as many member companies, or 28 percent, reported increased orders than the 15 percent that reported a decline in orders. Bretz said that was a strong turnaround from the previous month and suggested the prospect of a healthy production level for the next 30 to 60 days. "After the composite index, new orders is the most leading of all indexes we survey," Bretz said.

Production cuts could hurt economy

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (UPI) — Any attempt by the Texas Railroad Commission to boost oil prices by limiting production would make the state's dismal economic outlook even worse, a Texas A&M University economist warns.

"Texas simply doesn't have the clout it used to have in determining world oil prices," said Dr. S. Charles Maurice. "It wouldn't make any difference if we decided to cut back production by 10 percent. Every barrel we don't pump is another barrel they'd bring in from the Middle East.

"The price of oil would stay the same while the amount of revenue for our oil producers — and for the state — would only be reduced."

Independent oilman H.S. Bennett and retired lawyer W. Burrow Sr., both of Dallas, last month petitioned the commission to reduce the allowable production by 10 percent.

The three-member commission was given power to limit production during the 1930s when overproduction resulted in waste and low prices.

At that time, Texas was the world's largest oil producer and the commission, in effect, set world market prices.

Things have changed, Maurice said.

"What Texas produces is just a drop in the bucket compared to what the rest of the world produces," he said. "Saudi Arabia is the only country in the world that can affect the world oil price by itself.

"We wouldn't have any effect on the price of oil if we rolled back production. For that to work, Middle East countries would have to go along with it."

Factory orders gain 2.2 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders to American factories shot up 2.2 percent in July, the biggest increase since late 1984, the government reported today.

The big surge did not impress analysts, however, because most of it was in the volatile category of defense orders.

The Commerce Department reported that orders for manufactured goods totaled $196 billion in July following two months of declines. The 2.2 percent July increase matched the gain of December 1985 and was the largest since a 4.4 percent rise in November 1984.

However, without a big jump in demand for military hardware, orders would have risen a much smaller 0.5 percent, the same as June.

In a separate report today, the Commerce Department said that construction spending rose 0.5 percent in July to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $376.7 billion. The increase was the best since April.

The rise in factory orders included a 4.1 percent increase in orders for durable goods, items expected to last three or more years. This marked a slight revision from an advance report 11 days ago which put the increase in durable goods at 4.3 percent.

Orders for nondurable goods were flat in July following a 0.5 percent decline in June.

Orders for military hardware shot up 44.7 percent in July following a 14 percent decline in June. Much of this strength was centered in military orders for aircraft.

The closely watched category of non-defense capital goods rose 3.6 percent in July as civilian companies also increased their purchases of aircraft.

Orders for transportation equipment rose 21.9 percent with demand for aircraft accounting for over 80 percent of this increase.

Elcor reports earnings turn around

From Staff Reports

Elcor Corp. has reported a significant earnings turnaround for the fourth quarter and fiscal year ended June 30, 1986. "The momentum is continuing, and we expect to report substantially higher earnings in fiscal 1987," says Roy E. Campbell, president of Elcor.

For the fourth quarter, income from continuing operations was $1.2 million, or $.37 per share, as compared to a loss of $5.8 million or $1.67 per share. Net income was $2.4 million or $.68 per share, including a tax benefit carryforward extraordinary item of $1.1 million or $.32 per share, compared to a net loss of $9 million or $2.57 per share in the year-ago quarter. Sales were $32.4 million, compared to $31.7 million last year.

For the fiscal year, income from continuing operations was $4.0 million or $1.14 per share, compared to a loss of $7.4 million or $2.11 per share last year. Net income was $5.4 million or $1.53 per share, including a $2.5 million or $.72 pwr share tax benefit carryforward extraordinary item, compared to a net loss of $13.6 million or $3.89 per share last year. Sales were $115.3 million, compared to $129.0 million last year. Fiscal 1985 sales were higher because they included 12 months of sales from an asphalt roofing plant closed effective June 30, 1985, and four months sales of a roofing products distribution business which was sold effective Nov. 30,1984.

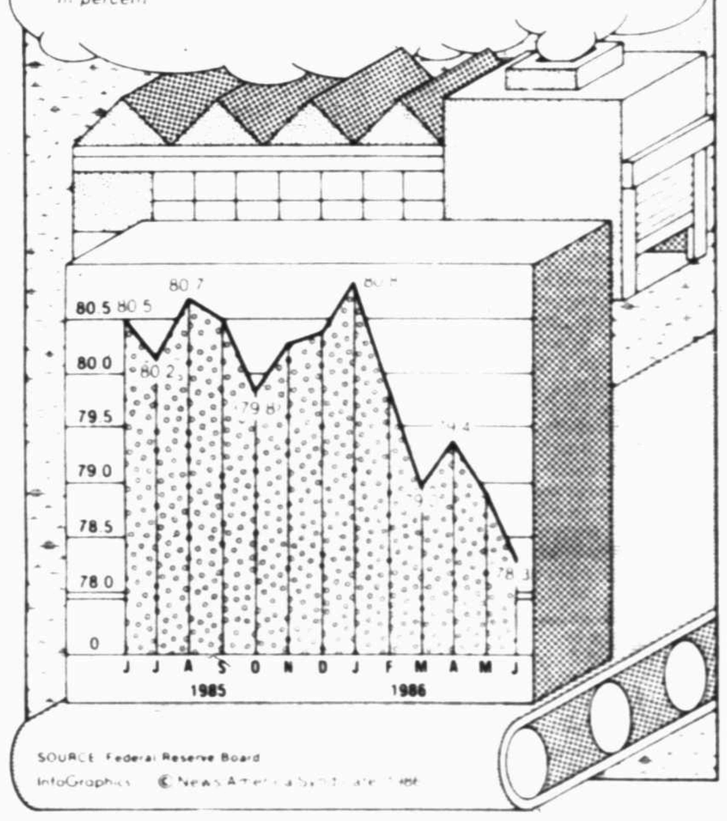

For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1986, Elcor adopted the LIFO (last in, first out) method of pricing inventories. The company had previously reported on the FIFO (first in first out) method. The new method is considered preferable because it more closely matches current costs with current sales in periods of price-level changes. As a result of a substantial reduction in product costs, income from continuing operations increased $524,000 or $.15 per share and net income increased $970,000 or $.28 per share for fiscal 1986.

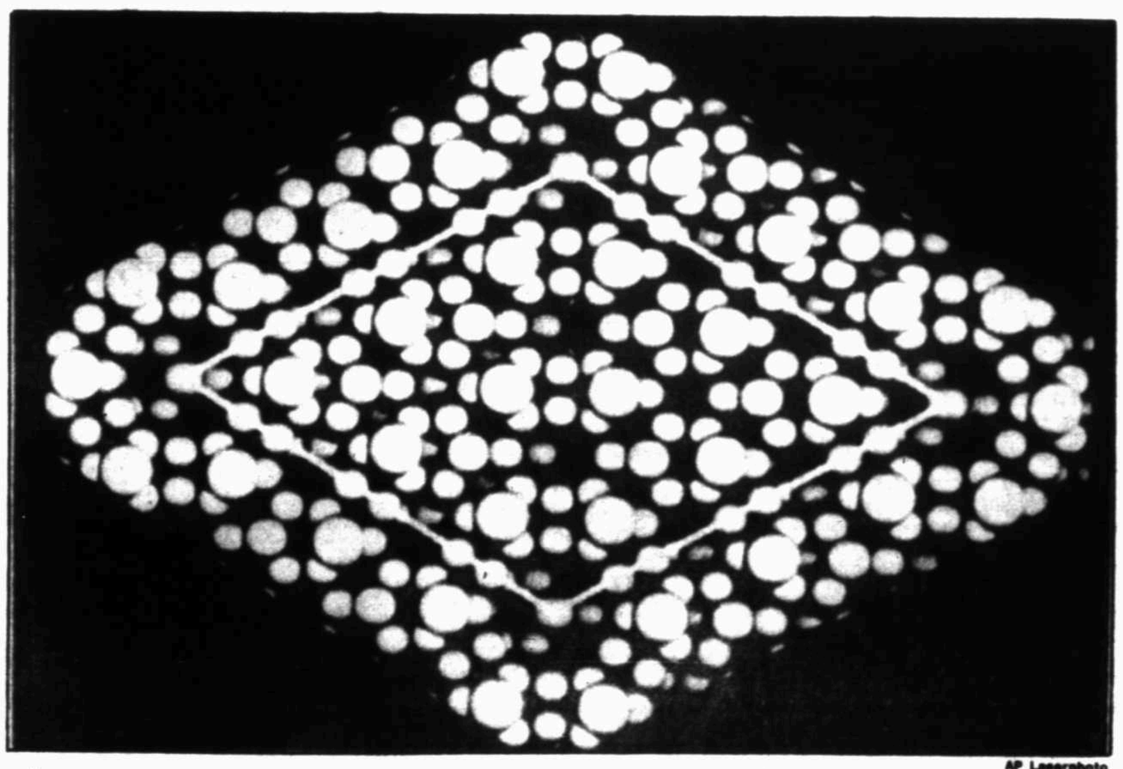

U.S. industry operating below capacity

Only 78.3 percent of U.S. industries' production capacity was used in June, the lowest monthly level in 12 months. The highest utilization rate in the past 12 months was 80.8 percent in January 1986.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

New home sales decline 5.6 percent in July

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of new single-family homes declined 5.6 percent in July, the fourth straight decrease for the housing industry, the government said.

In a report released Friday, the Commerce and Housing and Urban Development departments said new houses cost a record average price of $116,900 — up from $109,800 in June — and were sold in July at an annual rate of 658,000.

The sales pace marked a 28.8 percent decline since the March peak rate of 924,000 and was the lowest since the 637,000 of last October.

Farm prices for raw produce hold steady

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prices farmers get for raw products on the average held steady in August, despite record high market prices for hogs and broiler chickens, the Agriculture Department said.

The department's Agricultural Statistics Board said Friday that hog prices averaged $61.80 per 100 pounds of live weight, the most since the agency began records in 1909. The previous top was $61.30 four years ago.

Broiler prices at the farm averaged 45.9 cents per pound, live weight, up from 42.4 cents in July, the previous record level.

People Express won't declare stock dividend

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — People Express Inc. has announced that it won't declare the second-quarter dividend on its Series A $2.64 cumulative convertible preferred stock.

Company spokesman Russell Marchetta said Friday that the move was designed to conserve cash, following the airline's failure to sell its Frontier Airlines subsidiary.

People Express, which lost $132.5 million in the first half of the year, eliminated a major cash drain by placing Frontier under bankruptcy protection on Thursday. Frontier lost $10 million a month for the first six months of the year.

'Homespun quality' not enough to save Frontier

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Weathered ranchers, well-heeled oilmen, dungareed backpackers and vacationers in T-shirts were the stock in trade of Frontier Airlines.

The carrier, which was put into bankruptcy by its parent, People Express, not only catered to travelers in its own region but was often the airline that brought skiers, hikers, rafters and hunters into Stapleton International Airport in Denver to connect to some of the most beautiful and spectacular places in the nation, such as Jackson Hole, Wyo., and West Yellowstone, Mont.

It also flew into some of the starkest places, such as Midland, Tex., where oilmen sought their riches.

The airline was founded in 1946 by Ray Wilson, a barnstorming pilot, with two planes and a handful of employees. It gradually replaced the passenger train as the main form of transportation in the West and before its demise knitted together 55 cities in 22 states and Canada.

Even though it had grown to 4,700 employees, some said it was able to retain a homespun quality because many of the workers knew each other.

Richard C. Kardell, a pilot and captain of one of Frontier's Boeing 737 airplanes, said that unlike those of larger carriers, Frontier's routes were short enough so that one went out in the morning and usually was back in Denver at night.

"I know my mechanics and ground handlers," he said. He often flew with the same three crew members in the cockpit, which enabled them to develop an esprit missing at larger carriers.

The members of the five unions — made up of pilots, flight attendants, mechanics, ground handlers and reservation workers — also dug deep into their pockets to help the airline cope with the competitive pressures of deregulation.

Since 1983, when the airline began to have financial problems, they as a group have given up about 47 percent of their pay. They acted to enable the carrier to withstand the fierce fare wars that often began with distant carriers but which nevertheless swept over Frontier's routes.

The unions also tried at one time to buy the airline through an employee stock ownership plan by using $265 million paid by United Airlines for 25 of Frontier's Boeing 737s.

The effort failed, however, and the unions played an important role in enabling People Express to take over the airline last November. They supported Donald C. Burr, the chief executive of People, and opposed an offer by Frank Lorenzo, the chairman of Texas Air.

For a time, many Frontier workers and union leaders hoped that Burr could bring life and a coherent strategy to turn the airline around.

Even though Burr had expressed his abhorrence of unions, many union workers in interviews said then that they had an open mind and would give him a chance.

Burr had high hopes for Frontier.

In a past interview, he said that his vision was to create a "bridge" between People's hub at Newark International Airport and Frontier's hub in Denver by using huge Boeing 747s. Large numbers of leisure travelers would be able to fly from Newark to Denver and then connect to vacation spots.

Last February, People made a bold move and cut fares in the West, including a reduction in the fare between Newark and Denver from $99 to $69.

People's no-frill strategy backfired, however. People could not get heavy traffic on its aircraft, and many Frontier customers who were used to getting free drinks, food and baggage check-in balked at People's spartan approach.

Burr acknowledged in later interviews that the strategy had been "a disaster."

From that point, People had to begin to stem its own losses, and Frontier with its losses of $10 million a month became an albatross to Burr.

Banks nixed Hunt exploration plan

Tale of a financial marriage gone sour

New York Times News Service

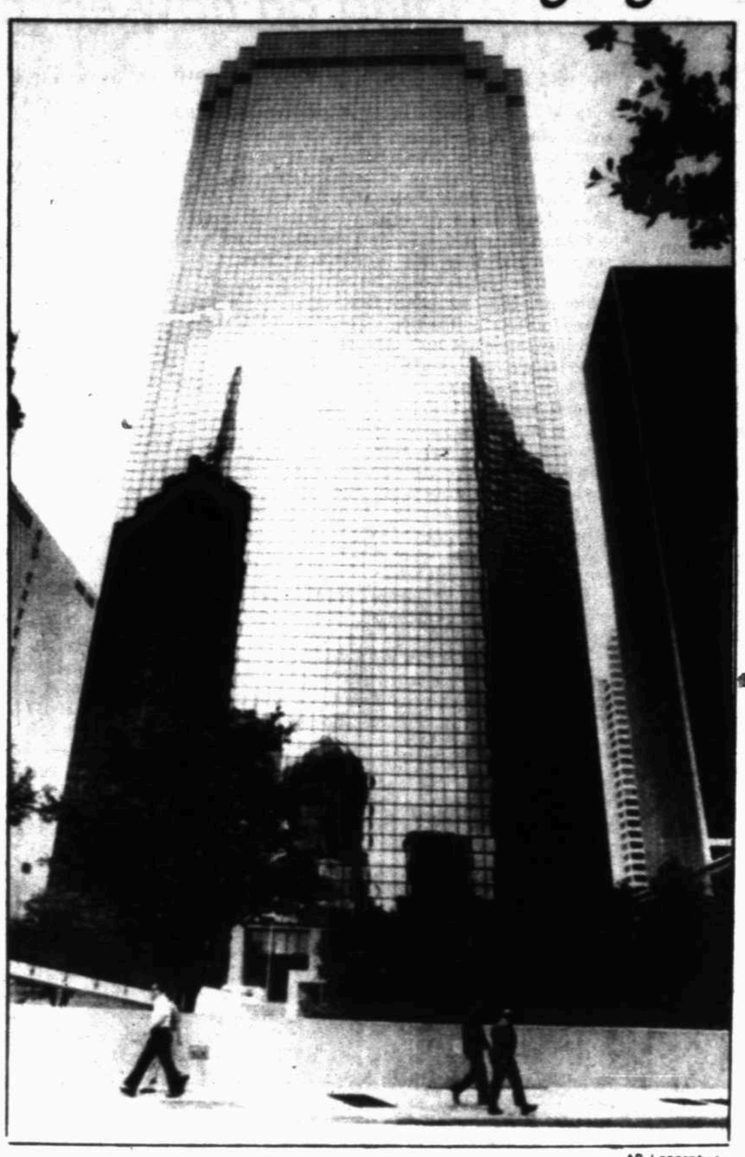

DALLAS — When crashing oil prices forced the Placid Oil Co. to default on a $1.2 billion loan last spring, the company's owners, the Hunt brothers of Dallas, were true to the brash gambling legacy of their father, H.L. Hunt: They told bankers that instead of paying them off, they wanted to sink more money into drilling for bigger-than-ever gushers.

What the Hunts saw as a sure thing, however, the banks saw as too big a gamble. The disagreement set off a chain of events, including the filing of bitter lawsuits, that led Placid, one of its subsidiaries and one of the Hunt family's core trusts to enter bankruptcy proceedings on Friday.

The confrontation between Placid and its lenders provides a glimpse, pieced together from court documents and interviews with lawyers and bankers, into the workings of the secretive Hunt empire. It also underscores how, as the odds turned against them this year, the brothers — Nelson Bunker, W. Herbert and Lamar — followed the family tradition of raising the stakes.

In addition, advisers to the Hunts say the case raises questions about whether the banks acted too hastily, and to their own detriment, in demanding loan repayment, thus forcing Placid to seek protection from its creditors. For their part, the banks deny that they acted prematurely.

The pressure on the Hunts could get worse in the short run as the banks intensify their efforts to extract money from Placid and from the brothers' other business and personal holdings. In any event, the filings under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Code are signs of the deep financial distress within one of the nation's great family fortunes, once estimated at more than $6 billion.

AP Laserphoto

One of the prizes at stake in the financial dispute between the Hunt brothers and their banks is the Thanksgiving Tower in downtown Dallas in which the Hunts own a 27 percent interest and which house a large portion of the Hunt businesses. Texas banks want to foreclose on the builiding.

THE ORIGINS of the crisis date back to 1980 when Placid and the other cornerstone of the family wealth, the Penrod Drilling Co., borrowed almost $2 billion to rescue Bunker and Herbert Hunt when the value of their huge silver investments plummeted. The loans were restructured during the next few years, and although the companies occasionally had difficulty making payments, they were up to date coming into this year.

Then came the oil price crash. With its cash flow drying up, Placid on March 27, missed a $30 million principal payment to the consortium of 18 banks, led by Republicbank of Dallas. Placid still owed $773 million on the loan.

To head off foreclosure, the company tried to buy time. "Placid stands on the threshold of major additions to our producing reserves, and given the opportunity to proceed with these projects in a timely manner, the company would repay its debt and preserve its asset values," Walter Fraker, a Placid vice president, wrote to the banks.

The Hunts or their representatives told their lenders in a series of meetings in the spring in Dallas and in a flurry of correspondence that the solution to Placid's problems lay in oil fields in the Dutch North Sea and in a field called Green Canyon in the Gulf of Mexico off Louisiana.

If the banks would only give Placid a break on repaying the loan for a few years, they asserted, Placid could afford to go ahead with ambitious exploration and development programs at those sites that would leave the company swimming in oil revenues by the early 1990s.

PLACID TOLD THE banks that it could not both pay them and continue with the exploration and development projects. Placid acknowledged that if all the projects were stopped, it could pay the interest and maybe even the principal on the loans, but Placid argued that that would amount to a slow liquidation of the company since an oil company needs to replenish its reserves to survive.

On April 10, at a meeting in Dallas, Placid in essence asked the banks to bet their money on the company's ability to develop what it considered its best prospects, including Green Canyon. Like their father, H.L., who fought and gambled his way back from the brink of financial disaster several times, the sons went all out to persuade the banks to stick with Placid.

Placid said it had pared its list of exploration and development projects to those with the highest probability of success. Green Canyon, in particular, was emphasized as a project that had to be continued. While Placid proposed to slash its 1986 development budget by 15 percent, to $187.6 million, it said it wanted to raise spending on Green Canyon by 7.3 percent, to $92.1 million.

Placid developed detailed financial projections that foresaw a flood of revenues from new discoveries by 1990, enough to pay off all interest and principal on the loans by 1995 and leave the company with a cash hoard of $1.3 billion by the year 2000.

JOHN McMULLEN, a consultant for Placid who has since updated the company's projections, said that even if the banks' worst fears were realized and no new oil was found, Placid would still be able to pay its debts since it then would not spend the millions of dollars budgeted to develop the fields and get the oil out of the ground.

"A close analysis of the cash flows will show that if the exploration programs work out, you add 40 percent to the value of the company and you pay off the loans," McMullen said. "If it doesn't work out, they choke off their exploration and development investments, and the banks still get paid."

But such arguments failed to sway the banks.

On April 11, a day after hearing the Hunts' proposals, the banks gave their response: Placid would have to pay some principal on the loan — they wanted at least $50 million in 1986. They also wanted full interest payments and new collateral, including the Green Canyon field.

The bankers also indicated their wariness of the Hunts' claims by insisting that an independent engineering firm be hired to evaluate Green Canyon, according to sources close to the banks.

Placid had always expressed high hopes for Green Canyon. But oil industry analysts described the undertaking as a difficult one because it involves drilling in much deeper water — more than 1,500 feet — than the usual offshore well, which is typically in less than 500 feet of water.

"IT'S VERY expensive deep-water drilling,' said one petroleum geologist, who asked not to be named. "You have to show that the reserves are proved rather than possible. Banks tend to be very skeptical of just a few exploratory holes.

"Any miscalculations and you might end up with a major losing operation," he said.

In early June, the banks, citing what they called "the high degree of risk naturally associated with properties not yet in a proved producing status" listed specific terms for any rescheduling. The terms included higher interest rates and interest surcharges and additional collateral.

The demands infuriated Placid officials and the Hunts, sources close to the situation said. Less than three weeks after the banks suggested their terms, the Hunts filed suit against their lenders, accusing them of engaging in a conspiracy to destroy the Hunts' businesses.

"As the Placid banks know, their terms would require that Placid entirely drain itself of cash while abruptly terminating all or many of its drilling and development activities — an important and potentially lucrative aspect of its business," Placid charged in its suit. The banks' terms, the company said, "would place in jeopardy billions in potential future revenues."

While Placid cited the proposed restructuring terms as the major reason for the suit, some bankers suggest that Placid might have been motivated to go on the offensive by the results of the engineer's report on Green Canyon. The document reportedly was submitted to the company and the banks at about the time the suit was filed in late June. It gave a considerably less optimistic view of the field's proved reserves than the Hunts had suggested to the banks, according to sources close to the banks who asked not to be named.

Amoco adopts drug testing

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Amoco Corp. has added pre-employment screening and urinalysis to its policy of employee searches in the energy company's fight against drug and alcohol abuse, officials say.

Employees could also be searched if managers have reasonable cause to believe they are under the influence of drugs or alcohol, said Amoco spokesman Carl Meyerdirk in Chicago.

But no strip searches or other body searches will occur, he said Thursday in a telephone interview. He said the company maintains it has always had the right to search employees for such things as drugs or weapons.

The Chicago-based energy company investigated the legality of testing and employee searches before it began notifying its subsidiaries of the new policy July 1, he said.

Oil crunch halts Mexico high life

MEXICO CITY (AP) — People in many oil producing countries have been forced to give up affluent lifestyles since the bottom fell out of the international oil market four years ago.

But perhaps nowhere have suddenly raised hopes for a better future been as dashed as they were in Mexico, which now faces decades of hardship and deprivation.

Back in the days of the oil boom, Cicero's Bar & Restaurant in the capital's Pink Zone entertainment district was a fancy place where the wealthy used to have fun.

It's still an elegant place to spend an evening. But, like most places in Mexico since the boom went bust, it also has a touch of sadness.

Gone are the crowds of oilmen, bankers, politicians and American tourists who used to pack the huge bars from lunch-time to almost dawn. The main dining room for 110 people sits half empty on most evenings, its soothing old New Orleans decor meant for happier days looking forlorn.

No longer on the menu are imported delicacies like New Zealand lamb, salmon and trout from Oregon, and Alaska king crab. No one can afford them anymore. Besides, the government has ordered a sharp cut in imports.

Customers had to buy a bottle of French champagne before to be able to use the billiard room, decorated with "naughty" old Victorian halftint photographs. Usually it was Dom Perignon at 3,500 pesos, or $134, and they paid it without batting an eyelash.

Now, a rum-and-coke, or maybe even a tequila will do. A few bottles of Veuve Clicquot remain, but they cost 100,000 pesos, or $149 a bottle. That's a clerk's monthly salary.

Regular customers still come, "but instead of coming once or twice a week as they used to, they now come — let's say — once a month," maitre d' Miguel Bravo said in a recent interview. "Even the wealthy are forced to count their pennies in Mexico nowadays."

Counting their pennies even more closely at the lower end of the wage scale are Ofelia Leon, 34, and Felix Robles, 31, and their six children, aged 3 to 16. He runs a fruit stall in one of Mexico City's open-air markets, she works as a housemaid.

In 1980, at the height of the boom, they used to earn together 11,900 pesos a month, or $458 and "the money would stretch a long way. We even took a vacation every year," Mrs. Robles recalled.

"Now we can't even afford to go to the movies," she said, even though they make 155,000 pesos a month.

The peso, which had stayed steady at 26 to the dollar until February 1982, now is touching 700 on the free market and losing more value every day.

For most middle and lower class Mexicans, the combined effect of the peso devaluation and inflation — expected to top 110 percent this year — is the ability to purchase only half as much as they used to.

For instance, a subway ride that for years used to cost only one peso went up in July to 20 pesos.

As one of a few major producers that could guarantee deliveries to an oil-starved world, Mexico used to charge top dollar for its crude, sometimes as high as $38.50 a barrel when OPEC's benchmark was $34.

The money was rolling in so fast — an estimated $61 billion from 1976 to 1982 — that then-President Jose Lopez Portillo in a speech once told Mexicans to "get used to administering wealth" instead of the poverty to which they were were historically accustomed.

Mexico was such a good credit risk that foreign bankers elbowed each other for the privilege of lending it money. The foreign debt rose by $61 billion under Lopez Portillo, boosting the total to $82 billion.

Lopez Portillo used part of that money to build airports, power plants, and other giant projects, which he promised would help turn Mexico into a leading industrial nation by the year 2000.

He also spent another part on subsidies to keep food prices low and on government make-work projects to provide employment for Mexico's burgeoning population, which requires 1 million new jobs every year.

And, a lot was also squandered or drained away by corruption.

Workforce marks end-of-summer holiday

Associated Press

Americans honored the working man and woman by not working Monday, taking in the end-of-summer Labor Day holiday with activities ranging from hiking across the Mackinac Bridge in northern Michigan to choosing from 120 kinds of ice cream topping in Philadelphia.

Politicians marked the traditional start of the fall campaign season with handshakes and speeches, and union activists pressed their claims. But chilly weather put a damper on activities in the South, and in New York City the Labor Day parade was canceled when union leaders decided to give participants a day off instead.

In Philadelphia thousands of people came to the Delaware River waterfront for the first annual Ice Cream and Music Festival. Sundaes could be personalized with any of 120 toppings, to the accompanyment of a Latin jazz ensemble Masala and the 590th Air Force Band.

In Michigan, 50,000 hardier souls including Gov. James Blanchard and Republican challenger William Lucas, rose early to make the annual Labor Day walk beginning across the Mackinac Bridge. The walk has been a tradition since the five-mile span linking Michigan's peninsulas was opened in 1957.

Hardier still was Brendt Smith, a 27-year-old Warsaw, Ind., insurance salesman who was spending a chilly Labor Day swimming across 52 lakes to honor the memory of his father and to raise funds for the American Cancer Society.

Smith, whose father died of cancer three years ago at age 52, hoped to cover 16 to 18 swimming miles before the day was over.

"The water's great, it's just the air," he said in between lakes. "It takes your muscles into a tailspin." The temperature outside was 48 degrees when he began; the water was abot 75 degrees.

The chill also was felt by Steve Wozniak, 71, and Jim Quinn, 51, who completed nine miles of a planned 10-mile swim in the harbor of Buffalo, N.Y., each with his feet tied together with strips of inner tube. The Lake Erie water was too cold to go any farther, they said.

In Chicago, about 40,000 union members marched down Michigan Avenue in a parade headed by AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland, joining Gov. James R. Thompson, the first Republican to be endorsed by the state AFL-CIO.

Thompson criticized third party-candidate Adlai Stevenson, whom he faces in the November election, for not being present. Stevenson was in East Moline, but his supporters handed out leaflets in Chicago saying "Parades don't save jobs" and noting that the state had lost 500,000 jobs under Thompson's tenure.

Richard Trumka, the international president of the United Mine Workers union, served as grand marshal of the Labor Day parade in Princeton, Ind. The town of 9,000 has marked the holidy for 100 years, getting an eight-year head start on the national celebration approved by the U.S. Congress in 1894.

In Detroit, twin parades, one held by the Teamsters union, the other by other union groups, drew an estimated 165,000 participants and spectators.

But in New York City, the Labor Day parade was canceled in July. Thomas Van Arsdale, head of the New York Central Labor Council, said it was felt that "the members who participate and the people who do the work would welcome a day off." The New York parade was first held in 1882 and has been held intermittently ever since.

Instead, about 15 unions organized a concert by folk singer Pete Seeger and the International Ladies Garment Workers Union chorus in Central Park, where organizers estimated the crowd at about 1,500.

Labor Day was strike day for nearly 500 steelworkers in Bridgeport, Conn., who staged a walkout against Carpenter Technology Corp., the first at the plant since 1968.

"We will walk the picket line on Labor Day," union spokesman Edwin A. Gomes said. "We feel that is very, very appropriate."

In Tennessee and Georgia, Labor Day felt more like Thanksgiving Day, with drizzly skies and high temperatures in the 70s, the normal lows for this time of year.

Monday's outdoor "Rock 'N' Roll Revival" at Nashville's Opryland USA concert was moved inside the Grand Ole Opry House.

Satellites expanding civilians' world view

By DEBORAH MESCE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Satellites are giving the public a close-up glimpse of the world — including missile sites, ships and military bases — previously seen only by U.S. and Soviet intelligence officials.

The technology has been in the private sector since 1972 when the U.S.-owned Landsat satellite began delivering images from space, but a government decision to commercialize Landsat and the launch of the French-owned SPOT satellite in February are fueling a new industry.

"It opens up a whole new window of information on the world that we've never been able to look through before," said Mark Brender, ABC News assignment editor who heads a space committee of the Radio-Television News Directors Association.

Paul Stares, a Brookings Institution research associate who specializes in military uses of space, said the intelligence implications of the civilian surveillance can be expected to grow as its use increases.

"There's going to be more challenging of government sources than before," he said. "They (media) will be able to take photographs of alleged arms treaty violations...and see for themselves, and bring in a non-government expert and say, 'Is this really a treaty violation?' "

Since its inception, oil companies, geologists, foresters, crop forecasters and others involved in resource management have been Landsat's main customers because its give a broad view of the Earth, showing drought and vegetation patterns. The smallest object its sensors can distinguish is 100 feet by 100 feet.

SPOT can discern objects about one-third that size — about the size of half a tennis court, but even with SPOT pictures, the significant features sometimes have to be pointed out to the untrained eye.

The satellites, orbiting about 500 miles above the Earth, caught the public eye last spring by supplying the first news pictures of the Soviet Union's Chernobyl nuclear disaster, showing the destroyed reactor and scorched earth beside it.

More recently, The New York Times on Aug. 25 published SPOT photographs of the Soviet Union's Baikonur space center in central Asia. Analysts said the pictures show construction of support facilities for a space shuttle.

The New York Post in March used a Landsat photo of a Libyan air base, showing SA-5 and other anti-aircraft missile emplacements and runways to accommodate about 70 warplanes.

Television networks also have been broadcasting satellite-supplied photos of Soviet naval bases near Murmansk and the Soviet Union's main nuclear test site.

Such pictures previously were available only to U.S. and Soviet intelligence agencies from their spy satellites.

"The military can see tennis balls; the civilian cn see tennis courts," said John Pike, associate director of space policy for the Federation of American Scientists.

Telethon raises record $34,096,733

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The 1986 Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon raised a record $34,096,773 for the Muscular Dystrophy Association's fight against 40 muscle-destroying diseases, many of which are terminal and most of which strike children.

The figure surpassed the 1985 total by $915,000 and pushed pledges from 21 annual telethons past the $400 million mark.

Lewis predicted MDA would raise a total of $80 million to $90 million this year, including gifts from dozens of corporations, civic and professional groups.

"We won't go to the government for help," he said in an emotional appeal. "We don't want to ask for permission to save a child."

Lewis, who has been involved in the fight against muscular dystrophy for 36 years, vowed to search out other causes when a cure is found for the diseases.

"There are many ills in this world that need to be fought," he said.

One of the more poignant moments of the 21½-hour telethon came when singer Eddie Rabbitt issued an emotional appeal for funds by telling of the death of his 2½-year-old son, Timothy, in July.

"I became more focused about kids after I lost my own," Rabbitt said, his voice breaking. "Somebody has to take care of the children of the world."

He said the boy was born with a diseased liver and a transplant operation failed to save his life.

"He was a beautiful boy," Rabbitt said. "I quit the road and we (Rabbitt and his wife, Jeannine) lived in the hospital for most of two years. We devoted ourselves to Timmy."

Lewis said this year's goal was $1 more than the record $33,181,652 raised in 1985.

"One dollar more than last year, that's all I ever promise my kids," Lewis said.

President Reagan called Lewis near the start of the show and praised him for his fight against muscular dystrophy. Reagan also praised some 2 million volunteers who have worked for MDA.

The telethon, broadcast from Caesars Palace and carried by 200 stations across the country, began Sunday night and ended Monday afternoon.

Ed McMahon, Tony Orlando, Casey Kasem and Sammy Davis Jr. served as co-hosts with Lewis, who began the telethon on a single New York City station in 1966. That first telethon raised $1,002,114.

A galaxy of entertainers appeared, including Rabbitt, Bill Cosby, George Burns, Frank Sinatra, Amy Grant, Tom Jones, Pia Zadora, Maureen McGovern, Lola Falana, Julius LaRosa, Norm Crosby, Julio Iglesias, Shelly Berman and Buddy Rich.

Others included Charlie Callas, Jackie Vernon, Emanuel Lewis, George Peppard, Bart Conner, Mary Lou Retton, William Windom, Elliott Gould, Mr. T., Ted Shackelford, the Byrds, Petula Clark, Tom Dreesen, Gary Lewis and the Playboys, Bob Anderson and the Coasters.

Last year's telethon was watched by more than 98 million people, according to figures from the A.C. Nielsen Company.

Lewis spends much of his time throughout the year traveling the country, coaxing contributions from dozens of corporate sponsors and visiting muscular dystrophy victims.

The money raised from the show helps to fight 40 neuromuscular diseases by providing funding for research, patient services and public education. There are some 240 MDA-supported outpatient clinics around the country where patients receive medical care, physical therapy, orthopedic aids and counseling.

Lewis has consistently refused to say why he made the commitment to fight muscular dystrophy.

"Each man must choose the cause closest to his heart, and I've chosen mine," is his stock answer.

Some teachers begin school year on strike

Associated Press

More than 1,600 teachers in Michigan and Ohio voted to begin the school year today on strike, bringing to 63,000 the number of students nationwide affected by teacher walkouts.

The 930 teachers in Youngstown, Ohio, went on strike on Monday, two days before the start of classes. In Port Huron, Mich., 634 teachers on Monday night rejected a tentative contract by nearly 4-1 and voted to walk off the job today.

Instructors in four smaller Michigan school districts were also poised to stay out of school today, while teachers continued strikes in six districts in Pennsylvania, Illinois and Michigan.

In a Labor Day twist, meanwhile, employees of teachers' unions in Indiana and Ohio on Monday went on strike.

The Youngstown teachers struck after six hours of talks Sunday with a federal mediator failed to produce a new contract. The old contract expired at midnight Sunday.

Youngstown Education Association President Tom Krispli said Monday that Sunday's session was a waste of time. No new talks were scheduled.

In Port Huron, Mich., school officials delayed the start of school today by two hours.

"If the threatened teacher strike takes place, school will be canceled," said superintendent William Kimball. No new negotiations were scheduled, he said.

In the Mount Clemens district in suburban Detroit, 222 teachers voted Monday to strike today, the first day of class for 3,558 pupils.

Teachers were also expected to strike today in three other Michigan districts: Clintondale, Cass City and Niles, said Katie Keatts, a spokeswoman for the Michigan Education Association.

A strike by 55 teachers in the 1,050-student Harbor Beach, Mich., district continued with no new talks scheduled. That walkout began Aug. 25.

The 39-member bargaining team for the 38,000 teachers of the Indiana State Teachers Association in 286 school districts went on strike Monday against the teachers in a contract dispute.

"It's really bizarre," Steve Stewart, president of the striking Professional Staff Organization, said of the union striking the union. The action would probably slow negotiations, he said.

The Ohio Associate Staff Union, which represents 89 secretarial and technical employees at 28 offices in the state, went on strike at 12:01 a.m. Monday, one minute after their old contract with the Ohio Education Association expired.

Some of the striking clerical employees picketed a local union meeting Monday night in Painesville, Ohio, at which 155 teachers voted to extend their strike deadline to Sept. 15. Negotiators for the teachers' union refused to cross the picket line, and relied on messengers to communicate with the teachers inside the meeting.

Teacher walkouts continued in Champaign, Okawville and Berkeley, Ill., schools attended by about 10,700 students.

In Pennsylvania, 527 teachers stayed out of class in Bethel Park and Spring Grove, where about 8,700 students attend school.

Elsewhere in Michigan, languishing contract talks failed to prevent the scheduled start of classes today for 30,000 students at Wayne State University students, a faculty union spokesman said.

Bargainers for Wayne State and the campus chapter of the American Association of University Professors failed to reach a contract agreement Monday, officials said.

But the union's executive board voted to have 1,325 AAUP members attend classes today, spokesman Ted Kotila said. The executive board requested that a state mediator attend future talks, and it did not set a deadline for reaching a contract agreement, he said.

Spending grows in lobby effort to shrink cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The tax-overhaul process in Congress, where one line in the massive bill can mean billions of dollars to an industry, is continuing to escalate spending by a growing army of Capitol Hill lobbyists.

In their effort to influence action on taxes and just about every other issue coming before Congress, lobbyists sent at least $13.77 million in the first three months of this year, according to reports filed with the House clerk and the Senate secretary.

The heavy spending continued a sharp upward trend that began last year as Congress began a major rewriting of the income code at the urging of President Reagan.

The reported spending in the first three months of this year was $2.6 million more than the quarterly average of $11.16 million paid out by registered lobbyists since the start of 1983.

The first-quarter total was not the highest three-month outlay during the still continuing tax overhaul process. That was $14.1 million during July-September 1985 as the House worked on its version of the tax bill.

But that spending, the highest since The Associated Press began collecting such figures in 1983, will probably be exceeded this year. The Senate has passed its bill, and House-Senate negotiators produced a compromise that will go before both chambers in September.

Preliminary figures for the second three months of this year show $12.49 million being spent on lobbying. Because many reports are filed late, a final second-quarter total is not available. In the previous 13 quarters, the totals in late-filed reports ranged from $2.3 to $4.7 million.

The tax battle has also brought more lobbyists into the field. The House clerk's office says about 8,500 of them are now on the registration books, up from about 8,000 at the start of 1986 and about 6,000 a year earlier.

The case of the Blue Cross and Blue Shield Association illustrates how lobbying costs are pressed upwards by major tax legislation.

Until this year, lobbying expenses were relatively negligable for the association, which represents health insurance plans around the country. But in the first three months of 1986, it reported spending $520,488, the second highest total for the quarter.

The money was used to combat a House tax bill provision that sought to end the non-profit, tax-free status of the plans, a proposal that threatened to cost them an estimated $1.7 billion over five years.

The association rallied its own troops for the fight, paid $164,000 to a direct-mail specialist for computerized letters to citizens and even hired former Carter White House aide Anne Wexler, who was paid $18,720.

"It was the first time we've used outside help," said Charlotte Crenson, a spokeswoman for the association.

The lobbying effort was partially successful. The compromise legislation calls on the plans to pay $800 million over five years. "We worked this out with members of the (House-Senate) conference committee," Ms. Crenson said.

Did Blue Cross-Blue Shield get its money's worth? "I don't know," she said. "We'd rather have no tax at all."

Aside from the tax bill, the issue of gun control continued to draw heavy spending as Congress considered a bill — signed into law by President Reagan in May — to relax restrictions on interstate transportation of firearms.

The main group opposing the bill, Handgun Control Inc., reported spending $290,238 in the first quarter of 1986. This, however, was no match for the combined outlay of $743,703 by the Gun Owners of America, National Rifle Association and the Citizens Committee for the Right to Keep and Bear Arms.

The quarter's biggest spender at $876,693 was the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare, which has been among the top spenders since the start of 1985. The group says most of its money goes for direct mail urging citizens to oppose cuts in these programs.

Lobbying reports generally say little about direct contact with members of Congress. One exception for the first quarter was the report filed by the Uranium Producers of America.

This industry group listed among its outlay of $212,207 a $500 payment to Rep. Austin Murphy, D-Pa., on Jan. 31 for a speech to the group on Feb. 4. It is rare for an honorarium to be listed as a lobbying expense.

"We've taken the position that everything gets reported," said Peter Nickles, a Washington attorney representing the producers, who were pushing legislation to hold down their costs for cleaning up radioactive waste.

Other big spenders in the first quarter included Common Cause, $490,103; National Association of Letter Carriers, $269,436; Fiber Fabric and Apparel Coalition for Trade, $262,705; American Petroleum Institute, $253,085; Association for a Better New York, $233,613; and American Council of Life Insurance, $186,539.

Also, Variable Annuity Life Insurance Co., $164,443; Coalition Against Double Taxation, $153,565; National Association of Realtors, $143,718.

Deaver compiles documents supporting his B-1 bomber testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — Challenging allegations that he lied to a House subcommittee, lobbyist Michael K. Deaver has compiled documents that may support his contention he testified truthfully about efforts to sell the B-1 bomber.

The former presidential aide is using the documents in an attempt to convince an independent counsel that part of a subcommittee staff report — which accuses him of lying under oath — is inaccurate.

The documents were turned over to the court-appointed counsel, Whitney North Seymour Jr., and made available to The Associated Press by Deaver attorney Randall J. Turk.

At issue is whether Deaver told the subcommittee the truth by testifying he informed his client, Rockwell International, that he planned to lobby the director of the Office of Management and Budget for more sales of Rockwell's B-1.

The House Energy and Commerce investigations subcommittee voted 17-0 on Aug. 12 to adopt the staff report, which said Rockwell officials told the panel Deaver never informed them about his plans.

Deaver's documents consist of notes and a memo from three meetings between Deaver and Rockwell officials prior to the lobbyist's meeting with Miller.

The documents indicate that either the OMB or the name of its director, James Miller III, was mentioned each time.

Deaver met with Miller to lobby for more B-1 bombers last Feb. 27.

The subcommittee report was sent to Seymour, who already was investigating Deaver for possible violations of conflict-of-interest laws. Seymour was asked to expand his probe to determine whether Deaver's testimony also violated perjury and other statutes.

Deaver's documents only challenge one section of the report, dealing with his representation of Rockwell. They do not rebut other portions dealing with Rockwell and two other subjects. While the report says Deaver lied in all three areas, Turk has denied that Deaver offered any false testimony.

Deaver is the former deputy chief of staff to President Reagan. He left the White House in May 1985 to form the lobbying firm of Michael K. Deaver and Associates.

He immediately accumulated foreign and domestic clients, and began representing them before U.S. agencies. Federal laws restrict ex-government officials from lobbying before their former agencies, and from lobbying on subjects they handled as government employees.

The subcommittee on its own already has clarified its findings on Deaver's Rockwell testimony.

Panel chairman John D. Dingell, D-Mich., in a letter to the independent counsel several weeks ago, acknowledged that Deaver "may have suggested" to company officials — between August and October 1985 — that he should meet with Miller.

According to Dingell, the information came from a Rockwell executive who had read the subcommittee staff findings and called to clarify the company's position.

Now, Deaver has come up with three additional instances in which he contends a lobbying campaign at OMB, with Miller or with OMB executives was discussed with Rockwell representatives prior to the Miller-Deaver meeting.

Neither the subcommittee staff nor Rockwell officials would comment on Deaver's documents on grounds that the matter is under investigation. A Rockwell official in Los Angeles, Richard Mau, has confirmed that witnesses from Rockwell have testified before a federal grand jury convened by Seymour.

According to the documents, Deaver and an associate, Douglas Elmets, met in Deaver's offices with two Rockwell officials on Nov. 25, 1985.

NATION IN BRIEF

Donovan trial to begin

NEW YORK (AP) — Former U.S. Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan and nine co-defendants are heading to court more than two years after he became the first sitting member of a presidential Cabinet ever indicted.

But the prosecutors' office says the trial, scheduled to begin today, probably would be delayed for the third time by pretrial motions.

"If I was a betting man, I sure wouldn't want to bet on it starting Tuesday," said Ed McCarthy, spokesman for Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola.

"I would bet anything on it," said Theodore W. Geiser, chief lawyer for the Schiavone Construction Co. "It's a cinch to go."

McCarthy said prosecutors will oppose a bid by Donovan co-defendant Ronald Schiavone to be removed from the case because he suffered a heart attack. The dispute could force a hearing, stalling the trial.

Donovan is accused of stealing money for the Seacaucus, N.J.-based construction company.

Sakharov recovering

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov is recovering from a hunger strike, but his wife, Yelena Bonner suffers from problems with the arteries in her legs, Bonner's family says.

The family learned the news in a telephone call prearranged for the first Monday of each month.

Mrs. Bonner's family, ranging from her 86-year-old mother to her young grandchildren, sat around the kitchen table at their suburban home for nearly an hour, sometimes shouting into the phone in an effort to be heard by the couple in the Soviet city of Gorky, where they live in banishment.

The couple asked for coffee, the heart drug epinephrine and toilet paper. Mrs. Bonner said she has had to take nitroglycerine to help open narrowed arteries since she returned to the Soviet Union in June after six months with her family, but interruptions prevented the family from learning more.

Interruptions also marred the call when Newton resident Alexei Semyonov and Mrs. Bonner, his mother, discussed opening a bank account for the dissident couple.

Coalition buckles up

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Helen Brady said she would have been thrown through the windshield that prom night when a van hurtled over a hill and struck her car, throwing it across the road — except for the seat belt she was wearing.

"We were crossing two lanes of a four-lane highway when a van with one headlight came speeding over the hill," said Miss Brady, 17, of St. Joseph, Mo. "It (her car) spun around and ended up on the opposite side of the road. It was totaled. If I hadn't had the seat belt on, I probably would have been thrown though the windshield."

Miss Brady was among 194 survivors of automobile accidents who gathered Monday at the foot of the Gateway Arch to urge other Americans to buckle up.

The gathering was part of a safety belt campaign by the American Coalition for Traffic Safety called America Clicks Border to Border urging the rest of the nation to follow the example of the 26 states and the District of Columbia in passing mandatory seat-belt legislation.

Participants arrived in St. Louis via caravan and fastened a 600-foot safety belt during a riverfront ceremony.

'Schools in good shape'

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's elementary schools are "in pretty good shape" but still could stand major improvements, including more help from adults without children, U.S. Secretary of Education William J. Bennett says.

Bennett made that assessment in a report on elementary schools, "First Lessons," he was releasing today with an address at the National Press Club. He also was marking the start of the school year with a visit to a local grammar school, Amidon Elementary, that his department has taken under its wing.

Bennett wrote the 83-page monograph with advice from a study group he set up last year to take the measure of the 80,000 schools that 31 million children attend from kindergarten to 8th grade.

Bennett said elementary schools were overlooked in the spate of recent studies that sounded alarms about U.S. education.
