OIL BOAT FIRE TURNS RIVER INTO FLAMES

$300,000 Damage Done By Explosion in Chicago.

CHICAGO, July 19.—(AP)—A terrific explosion of gas and oil on board a barge of the Texas company anchored in the North Branch of the Chicago river at noon today caused damage estimated at $300,000 and incited a near panic among residents of the congested district bordering the river.

The barge and tug alongside it were destroyed, several nearby factory buildings were damaged and flaming gasoline turned the river into an inferno that threatened to consume docks and bridges and spread even greater destruction over a wide area.

Homes Destroyed

A number of homes and small stores were slightly damaged by the blast and flying debris. Jacob Jabersek, a watchman aboard the barge was at first reported killed, but later was found unhurt and said that he had not been at his post when the blast came.

It is believed that oil spilled on the dock became ignited by a fire built by boys on the river bank and spread to the barge.

DAYTON RESTS AND GOES TO CHURCH SUNDAY

Last Full Day of Trial Looms Up Monday.

READY TO ARGUE

Attorneys on Both Sides of Scopes Case to Unloose Oratory.

DAYTON, Tenn., July 19.—(AP)—In sharp contrast to the turbulence of last Sunday when a week-end recess in the Scopes trial was marked by cancellation of church services, severance of church connections and open air speaking, the court and town today were "at ease" in fact.

A large crowd gathered on the courthouse lawn and picknicked in front of the combination band stand and speaking platform but it was an audience without an orator.

None of the Dayton pastors occupied his pulpit today, services being conducted in several churches by visiting evangelists.

Bryan on a Ride

William Jennings Bryan motored to Pikeville, 20 miles from Dayton, "across the mountains," to address a gathering of Tennesseeans. Other members of prosecution council awaited the word to deliver their speeches to judge and jury.

The defense attorneys were reported today ready to make their speeches in summing up after spending hours in the preparation of statements of scientists to be introduced in the record to show what the experts would have testified had they been permitted to occupy the witness stand.

The task of reducing statements of scientists to writing was not completed tonight and stenographers were still working overtime in an effort to have them ready for the record at the opening of court tomorrow afternoon.

Clarence Darrow, the "grandfather" of defense counsel, as he has described himself in court, went to Chattanooga to deliver a lecture at a theatre this afternoon. He was accompanied by all his associates except Arthur Garfield Hays, who remained in Dayton to speed the making of statements.

Last Day of Court

Tomorrow may prove to be the last full day of court. After the question of the excluded scientific testimony has been disposed of, speeches will be made, a total of nine or ten being on the program. It was understood that each side would have four hours for argument. The speeches will probably not be completed tomorrow, but there should be little oratory carried over to Tuesday.

With the judge's charge the only remaining detail before the case is given to the jury, a verdict should be returned some time Tuesday. Although the defense has admitted that it has no hope of a favorable verdict, constant observers in the courtroom were not so sure.

FRENCH COMBATING RIFFIANS

FEZ, Morocco, July 19.—(AP)—Increasingly hard Riffian attacks, after the lull in the fighting, are being met by the tired French troops with great persistency. The troops are heartened by the arrival of Marshal Petain.

The aviation arm of the French service is steadily growing in importance. Yesterday forty aerial bombardments were carried out by the aircraft which in an almost constant stream flew back and forth from Fez to the front, 50 kilometers (31.57 miles) away, where Abd-El-Krim's men, from Ain Aicha to Ain Maatouf, were making what were believed to be preliminary assaults for their final drive for Fez.

VACATION FIRST, THEN PACT

Reichstag Fail to Show Proper Interest in Summer Politics.

BERLIN, July 19.—(AP).—Summer politics, as represented by Germany's reply to Aristide Briand, the French foreign minister, in connection with the proposed security pact, finds popular interest jaded and the curiosity of the members of the reichstag obscured by yearnings for a summer vacation.

The Luther government's reply to M. Briand's questionnaire will reach the French government Monday and while its contents will be familiar in most of the chancelleries of Europe, the same night, official publication of the document will be deferred until Wednesday.

Pa and Ma Find Things a Little Different Than They Were Once

EARLY one Sunday afternoon not more than six or seven months ago Pa Jones stuck his nose through a crack in the front door and took a frosty slant at the thermometer on the porch.

"By golly, folks; it's four degrees above zero. I wish that blankety-blank-blank weather man would give us some weather a respectable guy could live in."

The wind was whistling in from the north plains. It rattled the windows and shook the eaves. Up overhead a dull, leaden sky glowered down with an icy leer. Occasionally a vagrant flake of white sped past a window pane.

PA and Ma cleared off the dinner table and set about the cleaning-up process. Out in the kitchen the hot water heater and cook stove were running full tilt, but even at that a frigid draft filtered in beneath the door sill and Pa, with a snort of disgust, gathered up an armload of the Sunday morning papers and crammed them under the chattering planks.

He finally dried all the plates and cups and saucers and pans and kettles that Ma slid under the hot water faucet. Then, when she had finished cleaning the table, shooed her into the parlor, turned out the kitchen fires and closed the door between it and the dining room.

"Now you kids stay here in this room or in the big bedroom," he directed as the turbulent little Joneses scattered from in front of the blazing heater. "We can't burn all the stoves in the house. The gas bill last month nearly ruined me, and it wasn't anywhere near as cold as this'ns been. We'll just have to stay right here in front of these two fires and keep as warm as we can. Bill, you come out here and shut the door right quick after I get through. I'm going to the garage and throw some more sacks over the radiator of the flivver. I done drained the water, but I'm afraid she'll freeze up anyhow."

Bill and Pa made for the kitchen and Pa ducked out into the roaring gale. The lock on the garage door was obdurate and his frosted fingers were numb, blue and aching before he got the cranky hinges into action.

"Dammit! Of all the weather I ever saw! Four above zero. Hope—whut th'."

TWO small icicles dangled down from beneath the radiator shell. Pa frantically hoisted the hood, his fingers aching still more, but there wasn't any visible damage in the vital parts and he dropped the tin roof and fled for the door again without taking trouble to lock the hood.

He scraped his fingers on a protruding nail and broke one of the ten commandments half a dozen times before the garage was shut up tight again—and then he remembered he hadn't thrown that extra sack over the radiator at all.

He stood debating a moment, wondering whether it ought to be done or not.

"Pa, oh Pa; you get in this house this minute. You'll catch your death of pneumonia."

Ma Jones, wild-eyed and authoritative, decided for him and announced results from the back porch whither she had traveled when Pa's rumpus with the Ford was delayed.

"Let 'er freeze," Pa growled as he raced for the back steps. "It won't be warm enough before the first of August to drive it anyhow."

The rest of that afternoon and the early evening hours were of the lazy, meditative kind a storm-bound family always knows. Pa smoked cigars and read the Literary Digest; Ma darned some socks and patched a hole in Bill's pants; Bill and the other kids scrapped and fussed and got an occasional irate order from Pa for their pains.

Supper was a piece-meal affair composed of odds and ends from dinner and washed down with some hot cocoa Ma made on the little lectric stove she hooked up in the dining room.

BY 8:30 the whole family was in bed. Bill and the other kids squealed and protested when Ma thrust them in between sheets that were crisp and cold and which raised the goose-flesh on arms and legs. Pa made a last round of the house. He saw that all the windows were fastened and tested once more the cut-off to the water supply. He shut it the first time right after dinner, mindful of a plumber's repair bill he owed from the last freezing spell.

Then he rolled in.

"Four above zero," he remarked drowsily to Ma. "Can you imagine such a thing here?"

We spare you the picture of Pa and Ma yesterday. But for your information, the official weather reading was 111 degrees—the hottest by two degrees that this summer has brought.

Draw your own conclusions as to how Pa and Ma and Bill and the other kids spent the day.

LYRICS OF LIFE
By Douglas Malloch.
Quinine Days.

Among the old things that men praise,
The castor oil and quinine days
Deserve some mention, seems to me.
A lot of people now agree
The old days really were the best.
Perhaps they were, but there's the test:
How many of you fellows spoil
For those old days, for old days' sake,
When you were privileged to take
A tablespoon of castor oil?

Or, if you have no appetite,
Perhaps, for castor oil tonight,
How would a dose of quinine do,
The dose they used to hand to you?
They placed some quinine in a spoon,
"Now, take it down, and mighty soon,
The taste still lingers like a dream
From those old days of which you boast.
If things of old you like the most,
How would a little quinine seem?

The world is moving pretty fast.
No doubt some things that could not last
Were very fine. But some new things
Are just the old, without their stings.
The old were good, yet don't regret
The new—they may be better yet.
The world is learning easier ways
To live, to take its medicine,
To make life happier than in
The castor oil and quinine days.

LONDON, July 19. (AP).—The coming week is expected to see a decision on the British navy, which the more sensational press asserts is likly to involv a ministrial crisis. This would come about, in his press opinion, possibly through the resignation of W. C. Bridgeman, first lord of the admiralty, and the sea lords, including Admiral Earl Beatty, in the event that the admirality's demands for new construction are unduly cut down.

Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, desires to keep the estimates at a low point, and the admiralty wants a cruiser building program extending over a period of years.

That a conflict of opinion exists within the cabinet is self-evident; otherwise it would be needless to defer to the fag end of the parliamentary session a decision of such importance. But it is believed that a compromise will be found which will eliminate a ministerial crisis.

Lloyd George's epigram in the course of his speech in Thursday's debate in the house of commons—"what we want at this moment is not fast cruisers, but slow spenders"—finds extensive echo throughout the land.

The admiralty's demand is said to be for a program of new construction extending over the next five years of a large fleet of 10,000-ton fast cruisers costing from 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 pounds a piece, in addition to the replacement program sanctioned by the Washington conference.

Germany Takes Plan Of Dawes Doubtfully

DUESSELDORF, Germany, July 19.—(AP)—While the Dawes plan in its first year of operation served somewhat to ameliorate the finapcial and economic situation in Germany, it is the opinion of Duesseldorf chamber of commerce it will not prove a panacea for all the ills from which Germany is suffering and that it is incapable of offering an absolute guarantee of reconstruction.

In a report on the situation the chamber asserts that during the 12 months the plan has been in effect it has failed to re-establish productivity, as it was intended to do. The report claims that Germany's commerce is suffering from heavy taxation and other imposts and the opinion is advanced that a complete debacle in business will occur unless conditions are alleviated. It is pointed out that owing to the high cost of production German commodities cannot compete in foreign markets.

Fable of His Progress in Art and Music—By George Ade

The Air-Brush Likenesses of Grandpay Wilkins and Aunt Hester were, It Struck Him, the Real Peruvian Doughnuts.

Once there was a Tike who had not been born with a Silver Spoon in his Mouth. Out in the Town of Paisley where Orville first opened his Eyes expecting to find the Light of Day and discovering only a Kerosene Lamp, it was about an even Bet that any favored Infant born with an expensive Food Implement tucked into his Face would learn that he had drawn a Knife instead of a poon.

It was a Settlement which believed in brimstone Hell up to about three Years ago and is still sore at the Theory of Evolution but friendly to Whiskers. It is hardly surprising that Orville, in his life-long Endeavor to emotionally comprehend all that is Worthy in Art and Music, got away, as you might put, to a Bum start, with a two-ton Weight attached to each Ankle.

If he believed, at the Age of 6, that the large Bills advertising the Forepaugh Show were the Last Word in Art and that "Jaybird," as rendered by the local Sheepskin Band, was the ultimate in Music, it must be remembered that Ideals are always controlled by immediate Contracts and that very few Persons who pay large Income Taxes ever heard of "Parsifal."

By the time that he had come to the age of 10, Thanks to the broadening and widening Influence of our Free School System and the golden Opportunities which beckon to every Lad born in the Land of the modified Free and the Home of the ostensibly Brave, Orville had learned that a Work of Art does not command Respect unless it has a Gold Frame. Once in a while he would be permitted to enter that Holy of Holies known as the Front Room, which was kept sealed most of the time but would be opened when they had Funerals, formal Parties or a Visit from the Presiding Elder.

A Lot of Oil

It was in this Sanctuary of Sea Shells, Hair-Cloth and Anti-macassars that Orville was permitted to study the Crayon Portraits of his Deceased Relatives, whereupon he realized that Everything which he had previously admired in the way of Art was crude, aborignal and without any real Message. The air-brush Likenesses of Grandpaw Wilkins and Aunt Hester of Chillicothe were, it struck him the real Peruvian Doughnuts.

About the same time, responding to his Cutural Environment and subtly influenced by the Entertainments at School Hall every Friday Evening, he began to assimiliate such Musical Achievements as "Molly Darling," "Little Bunch of Lilacs," and "Come where my Love lies Dreaming." At that time he was too Young to comprehend the Impropriety of the Suggestion contained in the last Title.

One has only to read the Catalogues advertising our Higher Institutions of Learning to know that it is the Campus Life which encourages the adolescent Yap into a self-confident Man competent to throw Trolly Cars off the Track or handle policemen.

If you assume that after Orville matriculated at Old Atwater all of his Concepts concerning the True, the Beautiful and Good were metamorphsed, then you are right, for once. He was 18 and wearing the Watch Chain big up on the Breast Bone and had been on an Excursion to Mammoth Cave, Ky., so it is little Wonder that even the President of the College could not tell him where to get off.

He had now definitely escaped from all the cramping Influences of the Crayon Portrait and was reveling, for the first time, in the larger and more inspirations! Sphere of the Oil Painting. At the home of Mrs. Butterworth, where he roomed in the College Town, there was a notable Painting which challenged his Attention the first time he saw it.

It had been done by an Artist at the Indiana State Fair in a little over Two Hours. It bore no Title but there was a Wisconsin Lake in the Foreground with a Sail Boat scudding before a Breeze, which for some Reason, did not affect the Surface of the Water, Beyond where the Himalaya Mountains, wrapped in Eternal Snow. It was the sort of Painting which no one could look at without feeling Different and Mrs. Butterworth knew it was an Original because she stood right there and watched the Artist slap it on.

Tubercular Art

In the Room which Orville occupied there were other Evidences of the Late Victorian Influence which banished the Godey Fashion Plates and Wax Flowers and inaugurated the Revolution, which finally led up to the Golden Age of Rotogravure Sections and Artificial Fruit.

The Period to which we refer had somewhat escaped the Trammels of cardboard but had yet advanced to the Dignity of Pyrography, which means putting Floral Designs on a Piece of Wood with a hot Poker.

One of the Best Things in Orville's Room was a study in Still Life called "A Yard of Pansies," because it was three feet long and showed about 1,000,000 Pansies in the Glory of Full Bloom.

Then there were two Companion Pieces which will be recalled by all Connoisseurs who date back to the Era of Congress Gaiters and E. P. Roe. These two Prints were called "Fast Asleep" and "Wide Awake" and in turning them out the Printer use whatever Colors he had the most of. The First showed a curley-haired Tot in deep Slumber and the Second revealed the same Blue-haired Infant sitting up and laughing gaily. The only Note of Sadness in these famous Specimens of Pictorial Art was occasioned by the Fact that the Child had a bright Red Spot on each Cheek, suggesting a possible Temperature of 102 and indicating that the Little One was already claimed by Tuberculosis.

It was during the Undergraduate Career that Orville began to take his Music seriously. Not until he learned the Possibilities of the Guitar and coulde xecute "Sebastopol," "The Spanish Cavalier" and "Star of the Evening" did he find in the Higher Type of Compositions the Solace and Uplift which are derived from any good Book of Instructions.

For the first time the hidden Beauties of "The Bohemian Girl" were revealed to him. It was a Far Cry from "Jaybird" to "The Battle of the Prague" but he was destined to climb even higher.

He got his first half-Nelson on what is really Hot Stuff after he moved to the City and married a Lady who had been taking Chautauqua Courses until she couldn't hold any more. She was out to Capture Culture or else wrassle it to Death. It was She who put him next to Van Dyck, Rembrandt, Baugnereau and Corot. Up to the time he met Minnie he had always supposed that Velasquez was the Name of a Cigar.

Col. Bo'e of the Art C r
About the time she first put the Halter on him and led him to the Art Institute, he might have been seen in a Parquette Seat on a Friday afternoon, with a Funny Look on his Face, trying to keep up with a Symphony in G Minor. During this quick-change Period, while he was in breathless Pursuit of Italian Opera and the modern Dutch School, he got to be an awful Liar. Whenever he was asked if he liked Something he would always answer "Yes."

Minnie started in to get all of the Paisley and Atwater out of Orvie's System. It was a hard Tussle to convince the poor Gourd-Head that Tunes are vulgar while Fugues are something to be enjoyed rather than endured.

To this Day, Orville will begin buying Tickets for "No, No, Nannette" as soon as Minnie leaves Town, but while she is in the Watch Tower he is letting on to be worried because there are so few Performances of "Die Walkure" during the Grand Opera Season. A lot of well-to-do People have nearly starved to Death in recent Years because they couldn't get their Wagner.

Orve can now pronounce the Names of the most of the Pieces played by the Philharmonic Lads who wear Specs and to prove that he is a True Lover he buys Tickets for Everything. Little do those who hear him touting "Gotterdamerung" suspect that at one time he put Resin on his Thumb so that he could pick the G-String for Hours at a Time.

He has gone so far in Art that sometimes he finds it difficult to keep up with Himself. Every kind of Landscape is Tarsh and Pre-Raphaelitism is something that he had and got well of. But he can now interpret a Cubist Puzzle even when the Darn Thing is held upside down. And that, we take it, is about two strokes better than Par.

Moral: Unless Heaven has been done over lately, both the Choir and the Golden Ornaments are going to be criticized.

RIVER FAULT BLAMED FOR JAP TREMOR

Scientific Explanation Given For Earthquake In Islands

TOKYO.—A scientific opinion on the recent earthquake in the Tajima region of Japan which took several hundred lives, has been submitted to Governor Hiratsuka of Hyogo-ken by Dr. Nakamura of the Tokyo Imperial university, the leading seismologist of the empire. In his report, Dr. Nakamura stated:

"The existence of an earthquake belt running from Aomori, in the northeast to the neighborhood of Sabae town, in Fukui prefecture on the Japan sea coast, has been well known, but in this zone no strong shock has ever been recorded. On the southwestern Japan sea coast, including Inaba, Hoki, Idumo, Iwami and Oki provinces, also no disturabnce of importance has taken place since the establishment of Tokyo university.

"I am inclined to attribute the origin of the recent destructive quake to a deep fault below the mouth of the Maruyama river, as mentioned by others who have inspected the Tajima region. There might have been a local dislocation of strata near Kumihama, in Western Tango province, and any immediate destructive shock is hardly conceivable in the vicinity of the river mouth mentioned. Anyhow, a sounding of the sea bottom near the river mouth might furnish valuable data."

Valuable Collection Of Art Treasures To Be Sold at Auction

TOKYO, July 19.—(AP)—The collection of art treasures in the possession of Marquis Katsunosuke Inouye, former ambassador to the court of St. James, is to be sold at public auction in September. The collection was made by the late Marquis Segai Inouye and is known among connoisseurs as one of the finest in the country. Its estimated values is between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 yen.

Among the many rare articles in the collection is a carving by the celebrated Choin representing "Fudo, the god of fire. It was to this image, according to the tradition attache to it, that Emperor Kameyama offered prayers for victory when the land of the Mikado was invaded by the Chinese some 600 years ago. This carving alone is valued at 150,000 yen.

Another rare work of art is a painting by Haku Shi-kei. It is the most valuable work of a Chinese artist in the collection. It is an unusually large picture showing the figure of Buddha mounted on an elephant. There are many other fine paintings by Japanese masters such as Motonobu, Sesshu and Tannyn. The collection comprises 2,000 pieces including paintings, carvings, pottery and laquer work.

German Merchant Fleet Is Growing

HAMBURG, July 19.—(AP)—The growth of Germany's merchant fleet since the world war is reflected in the usually reliable Danish statistics on the proportionate merchant tonnage of various maritime countries to their population.

In the list Germany is near the bottom with 30 British register tons for each 1,000 inhabitants, but gets some consolation out of its low standing from the fact that what there is of German shipping is of first class order. Having lost so much of its shipping as a result of war settlements, Germany was obliged to make up these lisses with new vessels, so that nearly 53% of the present merchant marine consists of ships less than five years old. The low percentage of the country's merchant fleet was conspicuously shown in 1924 in the port of Hamburg, when the German flag was represented by only 37% of the entire traffic of the harbor.

The Danish statistics o.. proportionate tonnage places Norway first with 832 tons to each 1,000 inhabitants; England second with 402 tons and Denmark third with 289 tons.

BOND REVIEW

NEW YORK, July 19.—(AP).—Signs of weariness were evidenced in last week's bond market, which was marked by colorless trading. With prices drifting irregularly lower despite a relaxation of money rates, investment dealers were inclined to believe that the market has passed its peak for the present and could only be aroused to fresh activity through a drastic alteration in the money outlook.

In this connection, prospects for sustained ease were held to be less favorable and Wall street watched closely for any indication of a definite upturn in the trend. Re-curring periods of temporarily tightened trade convinced traders that a broader demand for funds existed in interior manufacture and ... which was likely to turn the flow of funds away from Wa... s...
the first time in many weeks r
were heard of a prospective increase in the New York federal reserve rediscount rates, but as usual they proved groundless.

Arrangements were completed during the week for the first loan ever floated by the commonwealth of Australia in the United States— a $75,000,000 bond issue underwritten by J. P. Morgan and company. Terms of the financing, which had been eagerly awaited by the financial district during several weeks of negotiations.

Other foreign financing in prospect for this week includes a $10,000,000 25-year 6 1-2 per cent loan for the city of Cologne, Germany, which will be sold at a price of about 88. Following Berlin, Cologne is the second German city to borrow in New York this year. The award of a new Danish refunding loan, which will scale down present interest charges from 8 to about 5 1-2 per cent, is expected at an early date. Several New York banking roups are competing for the business, which probably will total $30,000,000. A rise in Danish kroner to the highest point in several years was linked with the government's financing program.

Offerings already in sight ensure a marked expansion in the volume of business over last week, when the total of new bond issues was only about $44,000,000, a sharp drop from the $112,000,000 of the preceding week.

Excellent Roads, Fair Roads, Not So Good Roads, Await Autoist On Trip from Wichita to Louisiana

Black Roads May Give Trouble in Rain; Paved Roads May Give Trouble if Cops See You Speeding

Wichita Falls motorists returning from New Orleans report a fair road most of the way with little difficulty encountered in any stretch of any length.

Clay county presents the roughest spots to Fort Worth; there is pavement from Fort Worth to Waco, 50 miles of good road to Bremond and then fifty miles of fair road as far south as Bryan. There is a stretch of pavement between Bryan and College Station with the road rather rough through Navasota and Hempstead. There is pavement north of Houston and east about a third of the way to Beaumont. A stretch of black dirt road in here gives some trouble when it rains, but from a point 24 miles west of Beaumont to New Orleans there is one long stretch of either pavement or good gravel road that permits almost any speed.

There are four ferries in the trip, one at the Neches at Beaumont, one at the Sabine pass at Orange, at Berwick Bay at Morgan City, La., and at the Mississippi just before reaching New Orleans.

Louisiana is patrolled much more thoroughly than is Texas by speed cops looking for road law infractions, and there is little hesitancy in imposing fines. Most of the speed cops in Texas have been pulled off while the fee system law under which they have been functioning is tested for legality.

The trip from Wichita Falls to New Orleans via Houston and Beaumont is nearly a round 900 miles.

Episcopal Church Faces Precedent In Bishop's Election

NEW YORK, July 19.—For the first time in its 140 years of existence the Episcopal church in the United States is facing the election of a presiding bishop who will be the democratic choice of its entire membership. The election will occur at the forty-eigth triennial general convention to be held in New Orleans on October 7 to 23.

Stand on Par.

In rank and dignity, if not in titular standing, its choice will stand on a par with the Archbishop of Canterbury, ranking head of the church in England; and he will be charged with the exacting and onerous duties of ecclesiastical as well as administrative headship of the independent American church.

For ten years after the organization of the church in 1785, its presiding bishop was elected by the house of bishops. In 1795 a change was made, under which the office devolved upon the senior bishop in the American succession. Then in 1919 the general convention created the national council of the church and enacted that upon the expiration of the term of office of the then presiding bishop his successor should be chosen by the house of bishops, with the concurrence of the house of deputies, to serve for a term of six years.

Presiding Bishop.

The intention of the convention was that the presiding bishop thus elected should become the head of the national council, thus combining the ecclesiastical with the administrative function. But, since the venerable Daniel Sylvester Tuttle of Missouri was then the presiding bishop, and as his advanced age precluded him from assuming administrative duties, the canon was so worded that no election for his successor was to be held during the period of his life. Rt. Rev. Thomas Frank Gailor, bishop of Tennessee, was elected president of the council and re-elected at the triennial convention of 1922. A year later Bishop Tuttle died, but the general convention not being in session, the aged bishop of Dallas, Dr. Alexander C. Garrett, succeeded him by the seniority rule. Upon Dr. Garrett's death six months later, Rt. Rev. Ethelbert Talbot, D. D., bishop of Bethlehem, succeeded to the office, also by right of seniority. With the coming triennial convention, the first since Bishop Tuttle's death, the first formal election of a presiding bishop by both houses of the convention deriving direct from the church membership will take place.

More Truth Than Poetry

THE ONE HUNDRED PER CENT AMERICAN

I always have longed to sail over the sea
To Italy, Holland and France,
There is something extremely alluring to me
In these far away lands of romance;
But never as yet have I furrowed the foam
Through these marvellous countries to fare;
One urgent objection has kept me at home,
There are too many foreigners there.

For weeks upon alien faces to gaze,
To listen to alien talk,
Amid alien customs and alien ways,
To loaf or to motor or walk—
Was something I thought of with pangs of dismay
And so, though I'm forty—and more,
I've never as yet had the courage to stray
From the folk of my own native shore.

But now that in Paris they've built a hotel
Where nothing but English is heard,
And only my own fellow countrymen dwell,
My wandering spirit is stirred.
I think I shall try to arrange my affairs
Take a couple of fortnights or so,
Bid goodbye for a while to my worries and cares,
Put some things in a suit case and go.

And if Holland and Italy follow this plan,
If the landlords in each place guarantee
Not to trouble a diffident traveling man
With strangers he'd rather not see—
If I can be sure of American food
And do as Americans do,
And natives are never allowed to intrude,
Perhaps I shall visit them too.

THEY PAY BETTER

Hereafter a lot of the old home towns will give up country fairs and begin holding evolution trials.

Oil Tanker Visits Port Arthur Twice Twenty-Five Years

PORT ARTHUR, Texas, July 19.—The tanker Atlas, formerly owned by the Standard Oil company, which was the first oil carrying ship to load out of this port more than 25 years ago, visited here again the other day for the first time in a quarter of a century. The ship, now owned by Italian interests, loaded out a cargo of refined oil under quite different conditions from those existing whwen it first visited here over two decades ago.

Under command of Capt. Tom Fenlon, now marine superintendent for the Magnolia Petroleum company at Magpetco, near Beaumont, the Atlas loaded out a full cargo of 15,000 barrels of crude oil 25 years ago direct from a pipeline brought from the old Spindle Top oil field to a terminal here. A barge towed by the Atlas loaded out more oil than the tanker, 20,000 barrels to be exact, and together they sailed to the Standard Oil refineries at Bayonne, N. J.

The Atlas, then still in command of Capt. Fenlon, was the first tanker with a barge in tow to navigate the Straits of Magellan at the southern tip of South America, making the 14,000 mile voyage from New York to San Francisco with full cargoes of refined oil in the tanker and barge. The trip consumed 78 days.

TEXAS TEXTILE MEN ARE ORGANIZED

Texas textile men have an organization of their own—the Texas Cotton Manufacturers' association.

Clarence R. Miller is the president of the association. At a recent meeting the Texas association voted to make a strong bid for the 1926 convention of the American Cotton Manufacturers' association, which held its 1925 convention at New Orleans in April. The location for the next convention will be determined by the board of governors of the national association in November.

The Texas association voted to appoint a committee on statistics to co-operate and colloborate with Texas cities and towns interested in establishing cotton mills. There are now 25 mills in Texas and that many cities are interested in obtaining textile plants. Those who read the newspapers are aware that Mexia's first cotton mill started operations a few days ago.

J. K. Hughes, a big oil operator, is president of the concern which has a hundred local stockholders. With 5,000 spindles and 136 looms, this is the first unit of what is expected to grow into $2,000,000 cotton mill in a few years. It turns out duck and osnaburgs consuming more than 4,000 bales of cotton a year. Incidentally, this plant was financed by Mexia capital, it employs 200 persons and the tenant houses are furnished employes at a minimum rate. It has a weekly payroll of $2,500.

Senator Morris Shepherd not long ago declared that every pound of Texas cotton manufactured into cloth in the New England and southeastern states is a reflection on the intelligence and economic efficiency of the people of the great state of Texas and gave it as his opinion that Texas first should manufacture most of its present annual crop into cloth before increasing the production of the fleecy staple.

It is his contention that after we obtain the point where we manufacture a fair proportion of our home grown cotton into cloth for use by the 5,000,000 Texans, we should then look for increased cotton production. Every community, according to the senior senator, should have a cotton mill owned and controlled by the farmers and merchants of the community; the community mill should necessarily be small and all of the stock should be owned by these farmers and merchants and by the workers in the mill. Texas is moving onward.

PRESIDENT HINDENBERG'S OATH

Field Marshal Von Hindenburg is president of the republic of Germany. This was the oath of office taken by this warrior of 79 called to the highest office in the gift of his people:

"In the name of the Almighty, all-knowing God, I swear to devote all my energy to the welfare of the Georman people, to increase their prosperity, to protect them from injury, to preserve the constitution and laws of the commonwealth, to perform my duties conscientiously and to deal justly with all, so help me God."

President Von Hindenburg, the statesman, may bring peace to Germany and to Europe. It is possible for a man who was a brave soldier to become the savior of his country as a civic leader of his people. He made his record as a soldier. He has his record to make as a statesman. He may give the lie to his critics before his term of office shall have expired.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

Old Age in Youth.

A man is old when he no longer can do his work well.

While he is competent he is young.

Men of eighty are still at the heads of great corporations, or like Gladstone, are still leaders of nations.

Such men are not old.

They will not be old till they slip and falter at their work.

This is the reason that young men should be warned against choosing for careers any task which depends wholly on physical prowess.

The professional athlete is an old man at forty—for with a few very rare exceptions, he can no longer remain in anything like championship form.

The muscles and smews give way far sooner than does the gray matter in which the mind has its being.

Then comes tragedy.

Young men win the cups, or the money prizes, and take the fame that was so dear to those who came before them.

Great successes can be won on the athletic field by very young men, if they happen to be born with strength and agility and the combination that enables the one to supplement the other.

It is a wonderful thing for a boy in his early twenties to become one of the world's greatest golfers, or cricketers, or tennis players.

Young Americans who have a talent for baseball have earned fame and incidentally a great deal of money before they passed their majority.

I have known many of them. I know of but two who really made anything of themselves after their eyes and limbs refused to co-operate satisfactorily.

The college youth who goes in for athletics ought to be told by his elders not to take them too seriously.

They are good if they cultivate the fighting spirit, teach them also to get and keep in good physical condition.

But the lad who is tempted to follow sports too long, or to adopt them as a calling will be to all intents and purposes an old man at forty—far past his prime, and forced to seek about for some very ill-paid means of earning his own living.

Far better for a boy to learn a trade and follow it than to seek to make his bread by what to others is recreation.

A trade is useful and it imparts a knowledge of mechanical principles and incidentally of certain business rules that may prove invaluable.

Many a carpenter and mason has become a builder and from a builder become a capitalist.

We know of no prize fighter who ever kept a fortune or no golf professional who did not wish late in life that he had taken up some other career.

The best recipe for perpetual youth that we know of is to depend on the brain, which if well cared for ought to retain the full vigor of youth till the body refuses longer to support it.

man population—Rebuilding lost millions. Revising the Episcopal prayer book—Old methods disturbing—A vetern of New York democracy.

GERMANY has a population of 62,500,000, excluding the Sarre region, the population of which is estimated at another 750,000. Thus the population of Germany is about the same as it was in 1908 whereas at the outbreak of the war it was 68,000,000. Germany lost 7,000,000 by the cession of various territories under the terms of the peace treaty, another 2,750,000 by deaths during the war and 2,500,000 through a decreased birth rate during the war period. But for the war Germany would now have a population of about 75 million.

Nevertheless the population is steadily increasing while that of France is steadily decreasing. Berlin has a population of 3,900,000 and is the second largest city of Europe. Germany has a city of a million, four cities that each have more than 600,000 and one city that has more than 500,000. It must be true that France has an undying fear of the growth of Germany or rather the growth of the population of Germany. Germany today is the most powerful and the most populous of all European nations.

Germany was stripped of vast territories at the close of the war. Germany lost its world trade during the war. Germany lost its army and navy by the terms of peace, and all her colonial possessions were ceded to others when the division of war plunder took place. Germany invited the wrath of the gods of war of nearly all the nations of the earth and the wrath fell upon the German people. Germany had no merchant marine after the loot had been divided. In eight years Germany has built a powerful merchant marine and is fighting for the commerce of the world.

France has had a very low birth rate for the past forty years. Germany has a very high birth rate. Intelligent Frenchmen realize what a low birth rate means. It means decay. Germany has a high birth rate and the Germanic country was not ruined by the war. This is why France demands that the powerful nations of the earth, the United States and England, shall sign a compact pledging support to France should the Germany of tomorrow ever threaten an invasion of the French republic.

Incidentally, France owes the United States government four billion dollars. France has promised to fund this huge war loan just as England has funded it and is paying interest twice a year on the billions she borrowed from the United States, when the sword threatened to place all Europe under the control of the kaiser. There are well informed European statesmen who say that Germany will never again ppeal to the sword but that in the years to come the economic power of Germany will be a weapon which will make the Germany of the future more powerful than the Germany of the kaisers. Most of the wars of the future will be trade wars. They are now. Where will they end?

AN EPISCOPAL COMMISSION is revising the prayer book and will propose many changes to the triennial general convention to be held at New Orleans next October. Bishop Charles Lewis Slattery is chairman of the commission and he has announced in advance that the revision report is a purpose to put the Episcopal church in touch with present day life. There will be a demand fo sex equality. There will be a demand that the word "obey" shall be romeoved from the marriage service. There will be a demand for the elimination of the rubric, which forbids the use of the burial service over suicides and omission from the Good Friday prayer invoking mercy and any reference to Jews, Turks and infidels.

All the great religious denominations appear to be disturbed, restless, dissatisfied with old methods and forms and the more zealous ones appear to be seeking a road in ordr to get away from the past. There is a mighty row on between the modernists and the fundamentalists. There is a mighty row on between the champions of evolution and those who believe in the Bible story of creation. Now why should these so-called issues be dragged into the political arena? They are headed in that direction. William Jennings Bryan is the apostle of those who do not believe in evolution. He would have made one of the most wonderful preachers the world has ever known. But why drag religion into politics?

Why not confine politics to the discussion and settlement of governmental question and economic issues? Perhaps it is the heat. Perhaps the dog day period in summer is having something to do with the case. As for the word, why should it be kept in the service? Woman doesn't have to obey. She is a fullfledged citizen. She has all the rights under the law that man holds. She isn't a slave. She obeys when she sees fit. She has a brain, a heart, a soul, a mind.

There was an old civilization shot away on Flanders field. There is a new civilization here. There are millions of people who are not aware of it. There are hundreds of leaders or near leaders who will not admit it. They were born without vision. They are unable to interpret the handwriting on the wall. They love the past. They would have the laws of the past ages govern the people of the coming ages.

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

By MARY BLAKE.

Cancer—July 20th.

Today's planetary aspects are not directly adverse, but they do indicate that caution and prudence should prevail, and that failure must inevitably result for any hazardous enterprise undertaken under such auspices. They do not decry legitimate and conservative effort. On the contrary, the indications point to success in any such lines of endeavor, especially in those matters related to finance or banking. In the evening, the aspects become overcast and presage a predisposition to quarrelsomeness, jealousy and bad temper. Under such circumstances, poise and self-control are more than necessary, if untoward results are to be avoided.

Children born today will enjoy, regardless of sex, very similar physical advantages, and will be, so far as health is concerned, quite normal. More trouble can be anticipated from accident than from sickness. In disposition and temperament, they will be diametrically different. A boy will, with growing years, develop remarkable strength of character, and will be sincere to the point of quixoticisms, while displaying a notable aptitude for study and painstaking work. A girl, however, will display a strong tendency to be sly and deceptive. With weakness of resolve as an outstanding characteristic. Much good can be accomplished by timely correction in early girlhood, and disciplinary measures—no matter how untasteful they may be—must be employed if this girl is to be saved from a womanhood of uselessness, frivolity and selfishness.

If today is your birthday, you are exceptionally studious and possess a retentive memory. These two attributes, in harmonious combination, make of you a brilliant conversationalist, and you have an aptness for are, however, not very deep, and rather hold your ground, and by doing so, cause offense, you are always willing to yield gracefully. You have a large circle of friends, and are much sought after, but not much reliance is placed on your judgment. You may advocate a cause or a principle, but are never willing to fight, or to suffer, for it.

In your married life, the indications are that you will be happy, given your reluctance to assert yourself or maintain your rights. You are too easy going, too lacking in driving power, to ever achieve a marked success in any field of endeavor.

Successful people born on this date are:

Alfred Owen, educator.
Alexander L. Holley, metallurgist.
Augustin Daly, dramatist.
Frederick J. Stimson, lawyer and author.
Josiah H. Penniman, educator, dean of the faculty, University of Pennsylvania.
Amos Tuck French, banker.
Victor Dowling, New York judge.

IRRIGATION

ONLY AN EASEMENT AT LAKE KEMP.

A law book we have defines an easement as being "A right which one may acquire over the land of another for some special purpose such as for air, light, way or drainage."

A road or street may be run through a man's property but under ordinary conditions the public does not acquire title to the land except as the road is used. If, for a certain number of years the owner of the land keeps the public from using it by fencing it up or otherwise they have no further right to it and he can use the land as he sees fit. The public only had an easement.

A railroad runs its lines through the country. In many states they have no title to the land except to run trains over it and for other related activities. They have an easement, a right of use so long as they use it.

In most states when acquiring land which is to be flooded and turned into a reservoir by building a dam an easement is all that is obtained. The right to flood and hold water on it.

The dam may break, or it may take years to fill the reservoir. If the dam is not repaired the owners of the land resume using it without any payment to the owners of the easement. If the reservoir never fills they do not cease using their land at all even though they have been paid handsomely for the easement.

An easement is all that the Irrigation District Board acquired from Mr. Waggoner for Lake Kemp. Just the right to flood a portion of his land with water. He still has all his oil rights and all other rights as well.

Through a Woman's Eyes

THE PEOPLE WHO "JUST KEEP COMING AND GOING."

A short time ago Tom Lee was just a negro boatman on the Mississippi. Now he is a hero. For when the steamer Norman sank Tom saved thirty lives. When a collection was made to buy him a house, Tom wanted to know what it was all about. He had done nothing extraordinary, he thought. "I just kept coming and going," he said. "until I saved everybody I saw in the river. Then I went to the sand bar and built a fire."

What would we do without the people who "just keep coming and going?" They may not set the world on fire; they do not get their names in the papers or illustrated supplements, but it is they who supply the power that makes the wheels go 'round. They may live unheard of, and die unknown unless something like a sinking ship or other great emergency brings them to the fore; but to those within their sphere of beneficence they are the source of life.

The mother who gives her days to ministering to the wants to her family is one who "just comes and goes." Without flash or flurry, unheralded and with no claim to the greatness that is hers, she "just comes and goes"—and transmutes the best that is in her into the stuff of future generations.

The teacher whose work is in the circumscribed sphere of the classroom, her return only what in the fullness of her devotion she herself make her efforts yield—she, too, "just comes and goes." Yet some of the world's greatest minds have attributed their first stimulus and their later achievement to the submerged "school marm" who modestly just came and went.

All the workers, the drones, the cogs in the wheels, the "small fry" who labor and sweat in the vitals of things, who tend the fires and grease the wheels and keep the works going in the powerhouse of daily living—they are the unknown great who "just keep coming and going."

The men and women in the Hall of Fame are our benefactors, it is true. They are responsible for much of the world's beauty and growth; but they are only the skyrockets and magic lanterns which here and there throw a brilliant, gleaming flash across the skies, compared to whom the men and women who, in the pursuit of duty and the daily task "just keep coming and going" are the billions in candlepower that light and heat and warm the earth!

That First Dance.

Yesterday I received a rather pathetic little letter from a girl who told me that she was nineteen, had to on nde cainheecmfwyppaoiippdii never had a beau and had only been to one dance in her life.

At that one dance, she said she had had the most awful time of her life. Even now the memory of it stung her so that she couldn't bear to think of it.

Now a boy from another city had come to her town and he had asked her to go to a dance with him. She did want to go so badly but oh, how she feared the ordeal of unpopularity.

Her pride would not allow her to show this boy just how unpopular she was in her own home town. And so she flatly refused his invitation, because she didn't have the courage to take a chance.

Which was a very bad move on her part, indeed. For her only hope of overcoming this terrible fear of parties and dances and ballrooms is to get used to them as much as possible.

If the boys don't like her now, they will certainly never learn to like her while she sits quietly at home and refuses to go to dances.

She must make the plunge, and even though she may have a few awful minutes, if she really wants to be popular she'll have to endure them.

Remember this—that the first dance is usually the worst unless, of course, you happen to be one of those girls who are born popular.

You can usually comfort yourself after a very unsuccessful evening with the assurance that you'll never have such a frightfully bad time again.

The next time you appear at a dance, there will be sure to be some on there who will remember you from the last dance—and if you are even passably attractive, he'll probably ask you for a dance—simply because he saw you there before.

Whereas the brand new girl who's never stepped out before is sure to have a hard time acquiring partners, no matter how attractive she is.

When you first start going to dances you mustn't think to yourself: "Now if I don't have a good time tonight, I'll know that I'm doomed to be a social failure. There will be no use in trying to be popular if I fail tonight."

You must realize that the first dances are usually stepping stones, and that if you don't lose courage, if you keep accepting invitation and making the best of everything that comes along, gradually you'll build up a quiet popularity of your own.

Gradually more and more boys will notice you and begin asking you out. It's something that happens so often and so surely I can almost guarantee it.

The main thing is to get an invitation, and once you get it don't you think of refusing it.

Never mind about your pride. If the boy who takes you to your first lance thinks you are a "flat tire," some day he'll change his mind.

Don't expect too much of the rather trying first dance. Grin and bear it and time will bring its reward.

HOW IT STARTED

The "Crucible' of Life.

Constantly in speech today, as well as in literature, we meet with the expression the "crucible" of experience or the "crucible" of affliction or of life.

The term is used in the figurative sense, a crucible being a vessel in which metals and ores are melted or pulverized. In other words, it is a melting pot where a metal is tested and tried, where gold is separated from dross.

So a severe trial which tests human mettle and from which one emerges chastened and wiser, is spoken of as "going through the crucible" of the experience.

Huge Mail Booze Peddling Concern Brought to Light

NEW YORK, July 19.—The names of thousands of persons in 70 cities of 29 states, who were customers of a huge mail order bootlegging establishment uncovered in a raid here last night, have become known to prohibition authorities through seizure of the concern's books.

United States Attorney Buckner said that the books is a list of 20,000 orders for liquor, and that many of the customers were prominent in the political, social and professional life of their communities.

None of the names will be made public at present. The orders, Mr. Buckner said, indicate a wholesale and retail trade extending from New York to the Pacific coast.

Frederick Boy Made A Marine Corporal

FREDERICK, Okla., July 19.—Promotion to the rank of corporal in the marine corps has been given to Robert Edgar Harris, son of Mrs. Minnie Harris of Hollister, near Frederick, according to a government report just issued.

Corporal Harris joined the marine corps at Fort Worth, Texas, several months ago and was assigned to duty at San Diego, Calif. Later he was transferred to the marine detachment at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, the naval base of the Pacific fleet. When certain men of that post were recommended for promotion recently, Corporal Harris was one of the marines selected.

CHAPTER XXI

Coralie at Home.

Ronald was among the first to discover that Enid and Lucien had separated. He carried the news homt to Coralie.

He found her in the bath room giving Junior his bath. The place was, as usual, in the wildest disorder. Water was splashed on the tiled floor, bath towels were flung in every direction. Junior stood on the bath mat while his mother patted talcum all over his body. He was laughing and rosy and grinned at his father from under his thatch of wet hair. Ronald smiled back as he mopped his forehead with his handkerchief. The heat in the small room was stifling.

"Nearly finished?" he asked Coralie, backing toward the door.

"In just a few moments, dear. Junior should have been in bed before this but Miss Maynard has been here sewing, and she stayed later than usual. You know how it is."

Ronald didn't know how it was. He couldn't see why Coralie wasn't able to run things according to schedule. Why was she always late, why was everything constantly in chaos? A man did like to come home to an establishment that was run with some system.

However, he said nothing. It was always difficult to speak to Coralie about such things. She never argued. She always admitted her faults and was so genuinely sorry for them that it seemed cruel to reprove her. In some ways she was very little older than Junior.

Tonight he was more than ever impatient with her. He wanted to talk to her, to tell her his news, and tonight of all nights he wanted her free to be with him. Why wasn't she dressed and waiting for him in the living room? It did seem to him that with two servants she could manage better than she did.

He went downstairs to the library and sat down with a newspaper. Overhead he could hear Coralie walking about, settling Junior in his crib. He could picture her bending over the children, her blue eyes shining, her face flushed. Coralie was a darling, but—

When at last she came downstairs, he saw that she had made no attempt to freshen herself.

Her gorgeous blond hair was ruffled, she was still flushed from the beat of the bath room and she hadn't even stopped to powder her nose. Her dress was an old fashioned one of pink linen. It was tight for her and was badly crumpled. Of course, nothing could dim Coralie's radiancy, but tonight she looked dowdy, almost unkept. She must have seen herself reflected in Ronald's expression, for she said apologetically:

"I didn't stop to fix up. I thought you'd rather have me come down as I was than wait for me to dress."

"Do you have to wear such old fashioned duds?" Ronald asked evenly. "That dress looks as if it came out of the Ark."

Coralie laughed good naturedly.

"But, darling, what's the use of wearing anything decent when I am giving Junior his bath? Besides, Miss Maynerd has been fitting me this afternoon, and I had to wear something that was easy to slip off."

"Why can't Hilda put the children to bed?"

"This is Hilda's afternoon off. Besides, I love to do it, Ronald. I want to keep near to the children. I hate putting them off on the servants."

Ronald, who was usually even tempered, felt himself growing more and more irritable. He was ashamed of himself and yet he could not seem to help it. He found himself inventing excuses to quarrel with Coralie, to find fault with her, and her very sweetness made him all the more unreasonable.

"Are you tired tonight, dear?" Coralie asked after a minute. "You seem so quiet. Was there anything in particular that you wanted to tell me? I thought from the way you acted that you had some news. Please don't be cross with me, dear. I know I'm a flutter brain and not nearly good enough for you, but I do love you."

CHAPTER XXII

Ronald Tells the News.

"It strikes me," said Ronald a bit acidly, "that it might not be a bad idea for you to keep near to me, as well as the children. With two servants in the house, Coralie, I can't see any reason why you shouldn't be dressed and waiting for men when I come home at night. Surely the children needn't occupy all your time and thought."

"I'm sorry," Coralie murmured. You're quite right. "It's just that I am such a bad manager."

Her pink mouth drooped like that of a child who has just been scolded. In that mood she was usually irresistible, but Ronald had worked himself up into an irritation that he could not master, and he did not go over to her and take her in his arms as he would have done ordinarily.

"You say you're sorry, but you never do anything about it."

He would have said more, but at that moment, the cook appeared in the doorway with the information that dinner was served. Ronald and Coralie went into the dining room in silence.

When Hilda was out, dinner was sketchier than usual. It was Hilda's place to attend to the pretty non-essentials, the lighted candles, the noiseless removing of the plates at each course, the flowers in the center of the table, an dso forth.

Mary, the cook, did not pretend to be a waitress; she knew none of th arts of serving. Tonight there were no flowers, no lighted candles. Mary stamped in with the soup plates, and set them down none too gently. The soup itself was hot and good, but Mary had not carried it carefully, and it had slopped over the side of the plate.

In disapproving silence, Ronald dipped his spoon into the rich golden liquid. There was not a word spoken between them until the course was finished.

Mary brought in the roast lamb, but had to be summoned because she had forgotten the mint sauce.

The vegetables were on the table to be passed after Ronald had carved the meat. This he did in sullen silence, but as he was about to pass Coralie her plate, he caught her eyes fixed upon him so wistfully, that in spite of himself, his face relaxed into a half smile.

Instantly Coralie was radiant.

"Darling, have you forgotten the news? I know you had something special to say."

Ronald waited until he had helped himself to meat and vegetables before he spoke. Then he said rather dramatically.

"Enid and Lucin have separated."

"O, Ron, not really!"

"Yes, it's quite true."

"O, poor Lucien. I do feel sorry for him."

"Why, poor Lucien; why not poor Enid?"

"Because Lucien is mad about Enid. He would never in the wide world leave her unless she wanted him to do so."

"How do you know that?"

"How do you know? Why, any woman would know that. I just know, that's all."

"You don't think then that Enid loves Lucien?"

"I don't know."

"You must have some opinion."

"I don't know about Enid, Ron. She's wonderful, but I feel that she's cold. She smiles beautifully, but somehow, I never feel that the smile comes from her heart."

Ronald was silent. Suppose Coralie was right. Women had that peculiar thing known as intuition. And if she did happen to be right, and Enid were not in love with Lucien—a wave of exulation swept over him; his heart leaped. He was suddenly glad, fiercely glad. And yet if any one had asked him the reason for his strange gladness, he would have found it impossible to tell why.

CHAPTER XXIII

Ronald Makes a Call.

Ronald began to dally with the idea of going to see Enid. After all he had a perfect right to call on her. They had once been engaged to be married, he was an old friend. Besides he had an idea that Enid might like to see him.

Ronald had a simple direct mind. It had never occurred to him that during these years Enid might have borne him a grudge. He had thought in the very beginning, that she might be angry, but she had thoroughly disarmed him by her charming manner toward him. She had apparently forgiven, both Coralie and himself, but what he did not understand was Enid's subtlety. She had never really forgiven either of them, but her pride had forced her into playing a role. She could be charming without the slightest forgiveness in her heart if it suited her purpose to be so.

The thought of calling on Enid, followed him about. He could not get it out of his mind, and at last he left the office early one day, and took a taxi up to Enid's apartment.

There was a raw chill in the air, and in Enid's charming living room, an open fire burned in the grate. The large room with its open piano and large easy chairs was restful. There was a delightful air of informality about it without any confusion. This was the kind of a place a man would love to come home to after a tiring day at the office. Why didn't Coralie have the knack of giving a home personality? Enid's furnishings were no better than the furnishings in the Corley home, and yet the place seemed different from any other. Enid had an eye for color. There was a piece of Oriental tapestry in gold and purple over the fireplace, the dancing flames were reflected in the copper coal scuttle, and a dull blue bowl on the piano held several crimson roses. The whole place had an atmosphere of its own, it reflected Enid's personality even to the fragrance that seemed to hang in the air.

Enid came into the room and Ronald stood up to greet her. She smiled at him, that bright, hard smile of hers, and he felt that she had never looked more beautiful.

She wore a loose dress of a dull red material. Above the rolling collar, her heart-shaped face seemed cameo-like, and her violet eyes were mysteriously shadowed.

"Ronald, how nice of you," she said lightly. "It's been such a depressing day, and it's so refreshing to have an interesting caller."

"I hardly think I deserve that last," he said with a short laugh.

"Oh, but I meant that. Shall we have some tea? Nora makes the most entrancing little sandwiches, and I have some rum, unless you prefer a whisky and soda."

It was delightful, thought Ronald, to lie back in his easy chair and watch Enid's slender fingers handling the delicate china. It was delightful to listen to her talk, she had so many little ways of expressing herself, so many graceful little gestures.

They were having their second cup of tea before Lucien's name was mentioned, and then Enid brought up the subject herself.

"Of course you know that Lucien and I have separated."

"Yes, I had heard so."

"I hope people aren't gossiping about us. We havent quarreled or anything like that. We just aren't suited to each other and are being sensible about it."

"I understand, Enid. As a matter of fact, I don't think there is a man living who is worth you."

Enid laughed. "What an extravagant compliment, but I'm sure there was a time when you didn't feel that way."

Ronald felt the blood hum in his temples. It was the first time that Enid had ever referred to the past, and it made him vaguely uncomfortable. He had a sudden impulse to tell her what was in his heart, but he restrained himself because he felt that it would not be fair to Coralie.

CHAPTER XXIV

Hearts of Two.

Ronald stayed longer than he had expected. In fact, when the little French clock chimed 6, he was startled into the realization that he had missed the 5:50 train. The next train left at 6:35 which meant that he would not reach home until 7:30.

For the first time since he had been married he chafed at the inconvenience of living in the suburbs. It was absurd that the railroads didn't make it more convenient for the suburbanites. One was always hurrying through things in order to catch a train.

Tanner Outfit Punishes Three Hurlers To Beat Beaumont, 11 to 5

SPUD VICTORY JUST ANOTHER OVER TRAILERS

Jim Roberts Comes Back After Demise of Day Before to Win.

By BLONDY CROSS.

There isn't much to say about the Sabbath day encounter at the Harvey Emporium. The Spudders won, of course, Jim Roberts, who took to flight Saturday in the second round before a surprisingly enthusiastic rush act staged by the subterranean crew, carried through to a matter-of-fact sort of victory. Spudder bludgeons played a base hit sonata on the offerings of three Beaumont pitchers, and Roberts plugged along tranquilly behind a heavy lead, blanking the cellar habitues for six couplets, but giving up a tally in the seventh and four in the eighth.

Eighteen wallops to virgin territory including doubles by Callaghan and Query and a homer by Golvin, were used very economically by the domestics in the compilation of an 11-5 victory.

The Spudders with exception of a permissable error by Dorman waged a more or less colorful defensive game. The infield performed like a high-powered piece of perfectly lubricated machinery with Golvin enacting a pair of lace collar snares on difficult ground balls. Two double plays served to cut down potential threats by the dungeon dwellers. Distel, Turgeon and Golvin combined on one speedy double murder in the third, and Roberts worked with Turgeon and Golvin in the sixth to cut away a pair without any breathing space between outs.

Cal and George.

Distel and Callaghan worked up an unique situation with the willow in that each poled four safeties, pairing base blows on all four occasions. If you don't grasp the idea let us put it simpler: Distel singled four times. Distel is followed by Callaghan in the batting order. Now on each occasion that Distel hit a single, Callaghan, who was next up, hit safely, too.

George and Cal bingled in the opener. A wild pitch and forceout of Callaghan at second on ground ball hit by Williams, sent Distel over for a score. McNeil, the starting pitcher for Beaumont, went out in the second under a driving attack and Lefty Foreman struggled to the altar. Dorman and Query singled. Roberts sacrifice bunted. Distel singled to center, scoring them both. Exit McNeil. Enter Foreman. Callaghan doubled to right. Williams aviated to port and Distel checked in from third after the catch. Bodie singled between short and third to score Cal. Turge singled to left, but Walt whiffed. That made it 5-0.

Turgeon walked in the fifth and Golvin slapped one over the leftfield fence. The drive was high, but didn't hit the turf outside the park until it had traveled nearly half a block past the fence. Query, Distel and Callaghan bingled in this round, but couldn't get over. Dorman and Roberts flied out. Query was cut down at the plate on Cal's clout.

Golvin opened the seventh with a single. Dorman and Query went out, and Roberts doubled to left center, scoring Walter. Distel and Callaghan singled again and Williams followed with another base blow to score two more. Turgeon got on in the eighth when short kicked his bounder. He scored when Query doubled to right.

Query Hit Three for Three.

Having rested up the past two days with Beaumont the Spudders are in great shape for the three-game San Antonio series which begins at the plant this faternoon. Osborn, Morgan, Wheeler, are the pitcher Skipper Tanner hopes to fling at the Bears in the order named, barring, of course, mishap.

Mr. Gray, the eccentric, wishes to recall that today is "ladies' day." Every Monday is.

The Passing Hour

By William B. Ruggles

THE PLAINT

Before me is a crowded desk—
Outside the call of road and sky—
Beside me other wage slaves toil—
I wonder if they long as I
For all that lures and calls beyond
The urge of duty's sickening goad—
A fishing pool somewhere I know,
The summer sky, the open road.

Here is the daily bustle's grind—
Here is the daily bustle's grind—
Here is the sound of clicking keys—
But just outside the window's square
The wondrous out-of-doors one sees:
The wage slave grits his teeth in wrath
And turns to tasks he may not shirk,—
When all that lies just there outside—
Who in heck invented work?

"TALK pennant" is Ty Cobb's advice on winning a baseball championship. But how does the manager of the Detroit Tigers know about it?

THE sporting writer breathed a prayer
Of thanks upon the summer air:
With the Dempseys back upon our shore—
He writes that Jack will fight once more.

THE heavyweight champions from Sullivan to Jack have supplied the living wage for more space fillers than any other profession. They are good for two columns daily in advance of a scheduled fight and two columns daily when not scheduled to fight on why they will or will not.

Joe Wanted to Stay

ONE of the reasons why Fort Worth's formidable veteran pitching staff—and for that matter the rest of its club—remains together is that the team itself as a unit wants to stick around. Certain conditions have helped. The team was first formed in the wake of the war and largely made up of old players who would not be expected to lure major attention, and the Double A leagues were automatically barred from taking any of them over by their own withdrawal from the draft and consequent ineligibility to draft from Class A.

Kraft, through the years that his bug bludgeon was cutting a swath through the Texas pitching ranks, would have been rich picking for some club in the Pacific Coast, American association, or International league—but they could not draft.

Joe Pate presents the unique case of wanting to remain in a Class A minor. Pate was drafted by the Philadelphia Americans in 1921. Meanwhile, Paul LaGrave had arranged a "cover up" sale to an American association club, from which the American league could not draft. Brother Landis, delving into the case, fined everybody concerned for the cover deal but ultimately disallowed the draft on Pate's personal assurance to him that the deal was arranged with his knowledge and consent because he preferred to finish out his baseball string in the Panther line-up. And Josephus is still there.

Dutch Hoffman, who sought to be declared a free agent after the 1922 campaign on a technicality, and young players who have fallen victims to the clubs' finely developed peonage system through two or three years of Fort Worth-Paris-Okmulgee existence, are the only cogs in the Cat machine that have sought to get away.

NATIONAL league magnates vote to retain the lively ball. They will also keep the turnstile and the gate admission.

IT DEVELOPS that the song for which Sam Riddle purchased Friar's Carse was $1,000. Most of us would like to warble a few ditties at that rate.

THE games are very scarce indeed
In which at last class does not tell—
But when this class is off its feed,
With betting folks, it raisesell.

Nine Tenths Is Possession

THE chances of American loss of the Davis cup trophy can be figured as worth ninety per cent over those of any challenger, in spite of gloom recurring annually over the defense. You cant' get away from the fact that possession is nine-tenths of the value of defending the trophy.

Imprimis, the team does not meet the field—but only the winner in the challenge round.

Secondly, no overseas journey being involved, nearly all of the ranking tennis players of the defending country are usually eligible for play.

The Davis trophy does not travel often. There are reasons.

Macks Beat Browns In Fifteen Rounds

ST. LOUIS, July 19.—(AP)—Fifteen innings of play against Philadelphia, shattered the Browns' winning streak of six games by the score of 12 to 8, here today. Playing Manager George Sisler ran his total of consecutive hits up to 20 games when he singled in the fifth. He also got a homer. A single, a walk and Lamotte's error gave the Athletics the lead in the third, but Lamotte atoned for his mistake when he scored Rice with a double, serving to tie the score. The ninth inning tie was a result of Simmons' drive over the left field fence.

Cats Get Five Hits But Wallop Houston

FORT WORTH, July 19.—Fort Worth went back into a tie with the Houston Buffs by winning the second and final game of the series here today, 5 to 3. Lefty Johns allowed the Buffs but 6 hits, but two doubles in the second produced two runs, while Hollohan's homer in the seventh made it three. Dock Smith's homer with one on in the fifth, after one run had walked in in the second, put the Cats in front and four walks and an error in the seventh pushed around the winning scores. The score:

BANKERS CINCH LAST HALF BY 3 TO 2 SCORE

Refiners Beat Sisters By 10 to 1 Count in First.

In the Twilight double bill Sunday afternoon the Texhoma club took the long end of a wild seven-inning battle, 10 to 1. The final seven inning bout of the evening gave the Security Bank nine a dead cinch on the last half of the league race, by defeating Ludlam and Riggs, 8 to 2.

The first game was a slow and long-drawn out battle with but few points of interest. The hitting was by Hershal Johnson and Rabbit Gordon, both of these poled out a four bagger, while Rabbit also smashed a three-base blow.

Slim Trout was in rare form and held the hard-hitting American Refiners to only two hits, both singles, by Red Rounsaville and Dudley Skeen. Johnnie McMahon went wild on the paths and pilfered three sacks. Gerard Boone, another Texhoma teammate was close behind with a pair.

Tank Horton, peppery little American Refinery catcher, returned to the game despite his split hand which he received last Sunday by a foul tip off the bat of T. V. (Monty) Montgomery. Horton was thought to be out for the rest of the season, but he broke the dope and returned to the game.

The fielding feature of the first game was Hershel Johnson's great one-handed stab of Ronie Glidewell's liner over short. Johnson had to go up in the air and stab the ball with one hand. Johnnie McMahon robbed Christian of a real bingle in the sixth when he took his drive after a hard run with the ball. McMahon had to take the ball over his head and while still on the dead run.

The second game was the telling game of the half and gave the Security Bank a chinch on their entrance in the play off. Gabe Harris was on the hill and going great when a line drive off Hank Shaw's bat injured his hand and forced him from the mound. "Oklahoma Lee" Courtney finished the game.

Sid Stanfield and Hank Shaw led the hitters of the afternoon with three hits in four tries. The Clothiers battled hard but a three-run lead piled up in the fifth proved to be too much to overcome.

Bashara, Ludlam and Riggs rightfielder, was taken from the game in the third when he became ill through not being used to the heat. Bonie Ray Walker took his place in rightfield.

John Patterson made a nice peg to the plate on Hank Shaw's single to left. Bashara was on second and tried to score on the hit. Patterson cut the ball loose and Abe was out by a wide margin.

CHAMPIONS IN BOTH LEAGUES GIVING GROUND

Philadelphia and Pirates Barely Able to Hold Meager Leads.

NEW YORK, July 19.—(AP) — Champions of 1924 in the Major Leagues were on the mat, but their shoulders are far from pinned, while Pirate and Mackmen are clutching desperately for unbreakable holds.

It would seem that this almost unprecedented struggle would last throughout the season, for already it has gone on for weeks, first one and then the other being underneath. The Giants' mighty muscles were bulging for a time during the past seven days and they released themselves from the Pirate's grip, only to be grasped again twenty-four hours later.

The Philadelphia threat released himself to gain the advantage over the Senators only after a long drawn struggle.

Win Seven; Loose One.

Philadelphia's reign in the American circuit is a matter of three percentage points over Washington, while Pittsburgh urles the National ten points over New York. The Athletics, carried the attack to their enemies through secen successive conquests only to be downed by the Browns of St. Louis on Saturday by a 6 to 2 score.

George Sisler's third place St. Louisans cemented their position gained during the week in a sensational drive.

Both Chicago and Cleveland won half of their contests, maintaining their positions in fourth and sixth places respectively, while the Yankees their pitching staff crumbling, could gain only two victories in eight opportunities and the Red Sox of Boston were successful only once. Detrot won three out of four.

There was nothing in the National organization to match the American accomplishments in the mater of hits, with Philadelphia totaling 117 and Cleveland 112. Nor could the National meet the Red Sox record for the seven days of 28 errors.

Pirates Show Best.

By its showing during the week, Pittsburgh deserved to remain in the lead, for the Pirates outhit all the rest and scored more runs. But seventeen errors were turned in to the record of four games won and four lost, while the Giants gained a matter of half a game with four victories and three defeats.

Cincinnati, which kept the Giants out of a tie for the leadership, when the Cuban, Luque, pitched a clever game on Saturday, had the largest margin of victories with a record for the seven days of four and two.

The Browns of the American League took home run honors with 11.

The week's major league record of games won and lost, runs, hits, errors opponents' runs, and home runs, including games of Saturday, follows:

BEAUMONT, July 19.—Jack Stansbury, veteran infielder, and Anthony Murray, recruit infielder recently signed by the Exporters as a free agent, were today released by Manager Andy Woehr in Wichita Falls. At the same time Woehr announced signing Catcher Mancuso, formerly with Longview of the East Texas League.

Labor Session With Mexico Is Postponed

WASHINGTON, July 19.—(AP)—A conference between Mexican labor leaders and officers of the American Federation of Labor, originally arranged to be held in Washington, July 23, to consider Mexican migration to the United States, has been postponed until late in August.

William Green, president of the federation, announced today that the postponement had been agreed upon because Louis N. Morones, secretary of the Mexican government department of commerce and labor, desired to participate and could not come to Washington until the latter date.

"It is believed that the government of Mexico is opposed to the immigration of its nationals," Mr. Green said, "and will be receptive to come method that would prevent it by agreement with the United States.

"Mr. Morones is the outstanding representative of labor in Mexico and as a member of President Calles' cabinet, has done much to suppress communist propaganda in the country."

Another Revolt In Lisbon Is Subdued

LISBON, July 19.—(AP)—Another military revolt broke out in Lisbon early today but was quickly suppressed and the leaders were arrested. Nnlike the revolt in April, the movement was checked without the firing of a shot.

In April the revolt many were killed and still more of the mutineers were wounded. Today the government authorities and royal forces took such quick action that the affair lasted only a few hours. By 10 o'clock in the morning, Captain Baptista, leader of the uprising and four other officers had already surrendered. The cruiser Vasco Da Gama supported the revolt, which was affected principally by units commanded by the officers arrested after the revolt of April 18, and who recently escaped from the San Junio prison.

PITIFUL DRAMA THINKS CAL OF SCOPES' TRIAL

President Airs Opinion of Case at Church in Swampscott.

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., July 19.—(AP)—The Scopes evolution trial was described by President Coolidge at church today as the "pitiful drama exemplifying the division among Christians."

"It is with very poor grace," said the Rev. Charles H. Beale, who delivered the sermon at the Tabernacle Congregational church in Salem, "that we church people criticize statesmen for not getting together when we ourselves cannot act in unison."

The pastor's pointed declaration on the evolution trial was brief and while he did not declare himself before the president as a modernist, he gave every substantiation to his statement that he was a "progressive preacher." Mr. Beale preached for many years at Milwauke, Wis., and now is retired, serving during the vacation period at the summer church of the president.

Otherwise it was a quiet day for the executive. After church he and Mrs. Coolidge spent the time at their summer home on the Atlantic coast.

Tomorrow the president opens a week he expects to devote to the consideration of important government problems. Senator Curtis of Kansas, the republican leader, comes to the summer white house in the morning for a conference with him which is expected to continue for several days.

In addition to a general discussion of the legislative program for next session, Mr. Coolidge is expected to take up with the senate leader a study of the tax and agricultural problems. Mr. Curtis is a member of the finance committee which will handle the next tax reduction bill when it comes to the senate and is also well acquainted with the farm situation in the middle west, in which the president is closely interested.

Clay Court Doubles Title Goes to Team From Western Coast

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 19. (AP).—Harvey B. Snodgrass and Walter K. Wesbrook, Los Angeles, won the national clay court tennis tournament duobles event here today, taking their first leg on the United States Lawn Tennis Association's new trophies. The score was 6-1, 6-2, 6-1.

William T. Tilden II and Al Wiener, his young protege, of Philadelphia, reached the final round of the doubles by eliminating Robert and Howard Kinsey of San Francisco, defending champions. The score was 1-6, 5-7, 8-6, 6-1, 7-5.

Three sets of the match were played yesterday. The Kinsey brothers won the first two, while Tilden and Wiener captured the next, darkness ending the play. Today's victory was the first ever gained by the eastern pair over the Californians.

After a short rest, Tilden and Wiener opposed Harvey Snodgrass and Walter Wesbrook of Los Angeles in the doubles final. The Californians opened the play with a rush and won the first set.

The second set was like the first, Snodgrass and Wesbrook winning, 6-2. Tilden put more effort in his play but began to tire. Wiener became erratic.

Tilden was under a great strain as the third set started. He was almost completely tired out because of his singles match against George Lott, Jr., Chicago and the semi-doubles contest.

The Californians played cautiously. Wesbrook had his ground strokes working smoothly while Snodgrass was getting his volleys across in perfect form. Snodgrass and Wesbrook took the first four games and the fifth was won by Tilden and Wiener. The western team won the next two games, taking the set 6-1 and the match. The final score was 6-1, 6-2, and 6-1.

Week's Homer Lead Is Held by Browns

CHICAGO, July 19.—(AP)—The St. Louis Americans led both major leagues in the race for home run honors during the last week, the Sisler men bagging eleven homers, which had considerable to do with their ascension to third place. Third place in the league standing. Ken Williams Brown outfielder, bagger two four-baggers, and took the lead in the American league with a total of 22 for the season.

The St. Louis Cardinals led the National league with a total of six homers for the week, Rogers Hornsby getting two and retaining his undisputed leadership of both leagues, with a season's total of 24.

Babe Ruth annexed another circuit clout to make his season total nine.

DEPUTY SHERIFF LOSES CAR.

Waco Thief Takes Auto of Visiting Travis County Officer.

WACO, July 19.—In open defiance of the law passed by the last legislature and objected to by numerous peace officers, someone searched without a warrant a touring car belonging to Deputy Sheriff J. O. Caldwell of Travis county, who visited here Saturday.

Mr. Caldwell parked his car on South Fourth street Saturday night and someone stole it. Yesterday morning Motorcycle Officer Buchanan found it on the edge of town, robbed of all four tires, but otherwise intact. All the deputy's baggage left in the car, had been searched thoroughly and his clothes and papers generally thrown about, but none was missing

BRYAN DEFENDS MONKEY LAWS IN LOUD TALK

Newspapermen Come in for Share of Attack.

PIKEVILLE, Tenn., July 19.—A brief but vigorous defense of the Tennessee anti-evolution law and of the culture of Tennesseans marked the appearance here today of William Jennings Bryan.

Speaking to several hundred Sequachie Valley citizens in an open air meeting 20 miles from the scene of the Scopes trial the fundamentalist chief began his address by expressing indignation "towards those who have maligned you—those who have come from another state to speak of you as bigots."

Berates Newspapermen.

He expressed the same feeling towards "some of the newspapermen who have spoken of you as 'yokels'."

"I wish that I could have dragged them here and placed them face to face with a humanity they cannot imitate," he declared.

"The world is discussing the Scopes case," he said. "It has gone far enough now for us to uncover a gigantic conspiracy among the atheists and agnostics against the Christian religion.

"The Christian religion is a revealed religion. It is the Bible they are attacking, but they have not the honesty to make their attack openly, directing their attempts toward what they say would be a reconciliation of evolution with the Bible. The brute standards they advocate would rob man of his high standards and drag him down to the brute basis. That is what they wish to teach your children. It would take from them that belief in the personality you have when you deny God.

Bloody Doctrine.

"Are you willing to allow your children, whom you have brought up to pray, taught in the schools which you support with your own money that the one big thing in life is to get what they can?

"The doctrine of the evolutionists is a bloody one. It teaches the survival of the fittest. All the testimony of all the evolutionists who ever lived is outweighed by the consolation of the twenty-third Psalm."

He concluded by comparing a stagnant pool, which he said represented evolution, "the center of disease and death," with a flowing spring, "giving forth all the time that which refreshes and invigorates."

"Christ can make every human being a living spring through which the goodness of God flows out to the world. The stagnant pool represents the life of those who believe they have come up from the brute."

Mr. Bryan was cheered enthusiastically by the audience as he spoke in the cool, natural amphiteater.

Soviets Have a Rare Percelain Collection

MOSCOW.—Soviet Russia claims to possess the finest collection of Russia claims to have the finest collection of porcelain and ceramic objects in the world. A special museum recently was organized in Moscow to accommodate the vast collection, which is made up chiefly of private collections appropriated after the revolution from the nationalized property of Russia magnates like Riaboushinsky, Oliv, Gudovitch, Morozov and others. Morozov's collection alone consist of nearly 3,000 articles.

To make the museum's collection representative of all classes of procelain art, magnificent examples of Sevres, German, Italian, English and Swiss porcelain were brought from the Hermitage to Petrograd. The splendid collection of Danish porcelain belonging to the Dowager Empress Marie also was added.

SMACKOVER IN SECOND PLACE; NEW TEST IN

North Louisiana Gets Heavy Play With New Completion

SHREVEPORT, La., July 19. — North Louisiana again took first position away from Smackover in point of interest during the week just closed when Ohio Oil companw got production at an entirely new and lower level and in an entirely new variety of formation in North Louisiana producing strata in their No. 17 E. K. Smith in 12-21-15 Pine Island district of Caddo parish. Also, it is 38 gravity oil and, swabbed for five hours, yielded at the rate of 250 barrels daily. It is at present a crevice well in lime rock at 3,317 feet, too deep and entirely different quality for Pine Island deep stuff (2,900 feet) and too shallow for the 3,600 foot and lower pay from which the Dicie 43 Robertshaw 45 million foot gasser in 13-21-15 is producing. East Texas finished the job when the Waskom gas district of Harrison county developed an estimated 30 million foot gasser in the shallow sand at 1,050 feet which caught fire, burned five days and was finished and closed in as a 20 million foot gasser without a drop of water after its experience, some experience.

Completions for the week showed a slight gain all along the lines except in production; 58 completions for the entire district, 43 well with an initial 18,543 barrels new production, eight gassers with 153 million feet and seven failures. This compares with 44 completions, 33 new wells with 27,865 barrels initial, six gassers with 60 million feet and six failures last week. Smackover gained 13 completions and 10 new wells but lost approximately 10,000 barrels in initial new production, having 31 new wells last week with 28,300 barrels initial against 41 with 18,364 initial this week.

Court Holds Guides Are a Necessity, Not Luxury in Germany

POTSDAM.—Six dollars is too much for any guide to charge for taking tourists through Sans Souci Castle and other sights of Potsdam, in the opinion of the court of appeals. Guides for tourists are not a luxury as held by the lower court whose decision was reversed, but a daily necessity and therefore cannot command fancy prices.

The case arose out of a difference some months ago between a party of Englishmen and a Potsdam guide named Max Schulz. The guide had charged 25 marks for taking the party around, whereupon the Englishmen appealed to the courts. The lower court believed that anybody who can afford a guide is rich enough to pay whatever the guide may charge. The state's attorney held, however, that Germany and especially Potsdam have every reason to encourage the traveling public, and that overcharges like these were calculated to make people shun Potsdam, thereby ruining its tourist business.

The higher court agreed with the state's attorney, reversed the decision and assessed a fine of 20 marks.

MARGET REVIEW

NEW YORK, July 19.—(AP)—A sustained upward movement took place in the week's stock market to the accompaniment of uniformly favorable trade news from the basic industries and optimistic predictions regarding the further expansion of business with the approach of fall.

Stock prices closed the week at the crest of a buying wave, with most of Wall Street's compilations showing the "averages" of representative issues at record high levels. Preparations for unusually heavy financing next week, including a $75,000,000 Australian loan, retarded buying operations in the bond market, despite the maintenance of easy credit conditions.

Pivotal industrial issues made strong showing under the leadership of American Can which mounted to a record high price at 208⅞ in response to reports that recapitalization was imminent. Southern railway was the strongest feature of the carrier group, mounting daily to new top levels. Improvement in second quarter earnings by the leading steel and oil companies laid the ground work for advancement in these shares.

Foreign exchange trading was featured by the rise in the Scandinavian currencies, Danish kroner reaching the highest level in three years, in anticipation of an early sale in New York of a $30,000,000 refunding issue.

627 Oil Tests In Mountains July !

CASPER, Wyo., July 19.—At the beginning of July there were 627 tests for oil and gas under way in the Rocky mountain region. This is a new high record for this territory. Of the total number drilling practically one-third were wildcats, indicating the intensive hunt now going on in the Rocky mountain states for new oil fields.

Of the 627 new tests 409 are wells actually drilling while 218 are either derricks at new tests or rigs that have been shut down for some time for some reason or other. The district showing the largest increase in new work is the Kevin-Sunburst field in northern Montana where there are now 29 new rigs up and 43 tests actually drilling.

In the month of June there were 165 well completions of which 45 were dry holes and three were gas wells, leaving 117 producing oil wells. These new oil wells registered an initial maximum daily production of 17,390 barrels. This completion record compares with 114 oil wells, 35 dry holes, three gas wells and 21,505 barrels of new production in May.

The following tables show the ten of drilling operations in the various fields of the Rocky mountain region for month of June.

COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, July 19.—(AP)—Weekly cotton—The cotton market advanced early in the past week and made new highs for the present movement on Tuesday when the October position reached 23.91, or 93 points above the close o fthe preceding Saturday and 161 points above the low points after the publication of the government report July 2.

The advance was due almost entirely to the continued drouth in the west, particularly in Texas, which induced many operators to believe that the next government report, July 23, and based on conditions existing on July 16, would show a deterioration in the average and some falling off in the indicated crop.

As the price approached the 24-cent level, some liquidation developed, possibly on the theory that the advance which had taken place discounted any deterioration in the crop that may have taken place.

A more decided check to bullish enthusiasm developed on Thursday when the government "pars" to be used in determining the indicated yield in the coming report when applied to the condition found to have existed July 16 and the intimated acreage. These pars were thought to have rather unduly increased and shook faith in a probale cutting down of the indicated yield.

This fear was somewhat allayed when local statisticians figured the average par for the entire belt showed little if any more than a seasonal increase.

On Friday liquidation increased owing to a desire on the part of longs to reduce committments in advance of the bureau and October dropped to 23.67, or 64 points under the highest on Tuesday. While there was a moderate recovery from this, the market at the close on Saturday continued to show nervousness over the impending government report, always an uncertain factor.

SKELLY WELL WATCHED BY OIL WORKERS

Casinghead Experiment Is Being Tried Out In Oklahoma

TULSA, Okla., July 18.—In many respects the Skelly Oil company No. 1 Ford, in the southeast corner of 7-15-6, north of Stroud, in Lincoln county, is a wonder well. At first reported producing from the Wilcox sand, the owners are now inclined to think that the Wilcox sand is still ahead.

The well started off nicely and kept increasing and attained a maximum of close to 1,000 barrels a day in production, then began to decline. Today it was doing better than 1,200 barrels a day, and along with the high gravity oil it is making considerable high test casinghead gas. This gas showed a recovery of three gallons per thousand cubic feet, so the gasoline department of the Selly company, efficiently managed by Emby Kaye, had a complete charcoal casinghead plant in the Burbank field that was not being used taken up and removed to the Ford well. Inasmuch as the oil and casinghead production was not known to be permanent, no permanent equipment was taken with the plant.

It was moved and set up and placed in operation within a period of seven days and Tuesday it manufactured 2,000 gallons of rich gas, and this will be increased to 2,500 and possibly more gallons a day.

Designers of the charcoal process are watching the Ford well experiment closely as the charcoal process was originally designed for lean gas, and as the Ford well is yielding rich gas and the fact that the process works shows the efficiency of the charcoal system.

Chattanooga, Okla., May Get Power Line

FREDERICK, Okla., July 19.—That another southwestern Oklahoma city will be added shortly to the list that is being served by the Southwestern Light and Power company, seemed probable Saturday when it was learned that the Chattanooga Chamber of Commerce has made the high line people a propostion for the extension of their lines to that city. The town of Chattanooga with a steadily growing population is in need of water and light power and it is thought that the proposition will be accepted.

MALLORY LINE

Magnolia Gets A West Texas Well

TULSA, Okla., July 19.—In many Magnolia Petroleum company acquired its first oil production in West Texas last week through the purchase of Morrison & Thompson's 125-barrel pumping well on the C. M. Adams land in the Westbrook field, Mitchell county, says the Oil Weekly in its current issue.

Consideration totaled $175,000 for 1,460 acres of proven and semi-proven leases, involving a cash payment of $125,000 and $25,000 to be paid upon the completion of a drilling well on the G. W. Womack land by the Morrison-Thompson interests. An additional $25,000 will be paid out of oil runs from the Womack well if production is obtained.

The Westbrook field is maintaining a daily average of 2,315 barrels of oil from 56 pumping wells, an average of 41 barrels plus per well. Crude is purchased by independent refiners at Colorado and El Paso.

Magnolia is drilling two other tests in Mitchell county and is the third major company to obtain production there, as the California company and the Tidal Oil company are already represented with pumpers.

REV. SWEETON IS SPEAKER AT KAY S. S. CLASS

Veteran Methodist Pastor Says Religion Is Best In World.

"The Christian religion," said Rev. J. M. Sweeton Sunday in speaking before the Kay Bible class, "is the greatest thing that God ever gave the world."

Rev. Sweeton, a celebrated Methodist preacher for over 50 years, is one of the best known in Texas. He was in the city Sunday and spoke to the Kay class at the Strand theatre. Two hundred and eighty-seven persons were present for the address which, in part, was as follows:

The Christian religion is the greatest thing that God, through His son, has ever given to the world. The thing that makes a man a new creature has divine power in it. No man can make himself over again, but it takes the divine one to do it. God accepts man as a co-worker with Him in the grand purpose of saving souls of men. We may work around, and manipulate, and use methods and means, and organizations and things like that, but God has reserved to Himself the one grand and important thing, that is the saving of the souls of men. He does that Himself. How is a man changed from nature to grace? Not by works of righteousness, which we have done, but according to His mercy He hath saved us. The motive of regeneration is the work of the holy spirit. No man can substitute anything for that.

Long a Hero.

The Apostle Paul has been a hero before us for a long time. We are in the Acts of the Apostles. Paul was the greatest man that has lived on this earth from the day of Jesus Christ. His logic is convincing. When he gets through, there is nothing to say, but "are" and "amen." I might add also that he was one of the bravest men that has ever lived. When we come to ask the question, what is bravery, or what is courage, I want to say that there is but one kind that is worth considering, and that is moral courage, and moral bravery. Animal bravery is all right in its place, I suppose, but man doesn't deserve much credit for that. Sometimes they call the man of animal bravery the greatest hero. Man sometimes inherits that. He gets it from his ancestors, it is not a matter of conviction with him at all. But, moral bravery is a matter of conviction. It forces a man to surrender all of his powers to that which is right, that which is truth, and he puts down himself and all that he has got as a gift to a cause which he believes to be right. Apostle Paul did that and all of the useful and great men that have followed Jesus Christ have done the same thing. They have left all, to follow Him. Paul consulted not with flesh and blood when he saw that light on the way to Damascus, but he went forth with the preaching of the gospel. He didn't wait for some syndicate, of some conference to meet and put hands on him and say: "Now Paul, we find you are right. Go right ahead," but turned right around and preached the gospel of Jesus Christ then and there.

I believe in the divine call to the ministry. I believe many have gone into the ministry with enthusiasm after a great revival, and I believe some have been petted and encouraged until they have gone into the ministry, by their admiring friends. I believe some have gone in because it looked to them to be a pleasing avocation. But, in saying this, I don't discount the ministry of the gospel. I believe that a true man of God, a true minister, is called of God, and I don't believe that anything can put him off of the track.

Driven From City.

Now, Paul and Barnabas left Iconium and went down to Lystra. You know, they had been up to Antioch previous to that time and they were driven out of the city because Paul's sermons had stirred up the whole city. I want to tell you that the true gospel of Jesus Christ will divide the congregation anywhere. It will divide the people of this city today, or any other day. Jesus Christ said He came not to send peace, but a sword, and the sword is an emblem of strife, of war, and so, when the gospel is truly preached, there will be an uprising of objection, because no preacher can stand in his pulpit and cry "peace" as long as there is sin in the city and in the community where he is. So, the gospel is a battle. It is a principle, and its followers are supposed to arrange themselves as soldiers of the cross against every phase of sin, and the preacher ought to be brave enough, when he goes into the pulpit, of carrying into it the language of the gospel.

So, they went to Iconium, and there objection arose right away. They went into the synagogue to preach. The people were divided, some for them, and some against them. The Jews came following on. I am afraid of enemies that follow after. But, Paul and Barnabas remained a long time, and won scores to the cause of Jesus Christ under their ministry.

Now, they have thrust them out, and they went from there to Lystra, about 20 miles away. There was no synagogue there in which to preach, but the people gathered in the streets of the city, and, after he had been preaching for several days, the Lord gave him a wonderful demonstration of His co-operation with him. Paul saw this crippled man sitting out before him and knew from the expression of his countenance that the spirit of God was at work on him. Paul was wise enough to see when it would be proper to propose to him, if he would believe that he would be restored to physical perfection, as well as religious life, and so Paul spoke to him in a commanding voice. He said: "Arise!" and this man sprang up and shouted for joy and went leaping and praising God. When they saw that, the people said that this was Jupiter and Mercurius, their heathen gods, and they began forthwith to make sacrifices with oxen and garlands. But, Paul and Barnabas ran out and said: "Don't you do this, because what we did was through the name and the power of Jesus Christ. We call upon you to receive Him. Don't you do this to us, because we are men like passion with you." Here is a point which needs to be considered. How often is it the case that a poor, helpless man is willing to take the praise and the flattery of a congregation, when the Lord has enabled him to do some meritorious and good work, rather than to discourage this and say: "Honor God for what He has done for you through us." It is nothing uncommon to read in the newspapers some article about a great revival, and the writer will throughout the whole article praise the leader of the meeting, and maybe the name of God won't be mentioned in the whole thing. Isn't it a fact that the man who does this is getting out of the sight of the cross?

So, we ought to reconsider these things and let God have the praise. What does poor, mortal man amount to, other than when he is in the hands of the Holy Spirit?

Brought a Storm

Now, that brought forth a storm. Paul was stoned by these enemies, and they thought he was dead and dragged him out of the city, but the few disciples who were with Paul and Barnabas stood around and looked on with compassion and sympathy, and probably administered unto him the best they could, and after a while, he got up. The next day they went to Derbe, and there God gave Paul Gaius, making the third bright star which Paul has received on his second journey or followers.

Now Paul turned back, with his followers and went back to Iconium. He was a great organizer, prayed with men, raised churches there that shone with brightness and bore fruit to the glory of God, in those stormy times.

Now, my friends, we ought to prize the Christian religion. It has cost so much. It has cost the blood of many who have esteemed it a joy to die for the religion of Jesus Christ. Then, think of the sacrifice of the Son of God, who came to this world and became poor, that we might become rich through Him; who labored and toiled, went from place to place and journeyed over the country highways of Palestine and Judea, and poured forth His message of blessing on those lost ones. Then, went to Calvary's cross and suffered and died there, that the world through Him might be brought to everlasting life. Christian religion is great. It is the most precious thing in the world. See how it works on humanity, takes the roughest piece and polishes it up and it becomes a diamond, so to speak. When Christ is enthroned in the human heart, it straightens the man up and gives him some estimation of himself. So, give us more of this great redeeming power in the world. It is the greatest kivilized force that is in the world and the greatest power to make the nations of the earth good, and mighty and forceful, and good in the eye of God.

PERSIA MAY CONTROL SUGAR

Country Considers Plan to Monopolize Sugar nad Tea.

BAGDAD, June 20. (AP).—Decision of the Persian government to put through a bill to empwoer it to take over the import and sale of tea and sugar in Persia as a state monopoly has aroused considerable feeling in commercial circles here.

The seriousness of the matter from the local point of view may be gauged from the fact that, except for cotton piece goods, a very large proportion of the considerable re-export trade from this country to Persia consists of tea and sugar. he buying arrangements in Europe and India have until now remained in the hands of Bagdad middlemen, Persian merchants not as a rule, buying further afield than this city. Presumably, the Persian government intends to make its own arrangements in Europe, and to cut out the Bagdad middleman altogether.

Blazers of Dakotan and Montana Civilization Are Given Signal Honors in Ceremony Near River

Indian Tribes Also Will Be Present in Three-Day Ceremonial Near State Lines.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 19.—Blazers of civilization's trail in the Dakotas and Montana, white pioneers of nearly two centuries past will be honored in ceremonies near the North Dakota-Montana line, which began yesterday and will continue through Monday.

Two men particularly will be singled out by a group of historians and state officials, making up the Upper Missouri Historical Expedition, whose names are written more clearly into the romantic history of the northwest.

First White Man

One of these men was Pierre De la Verendrye, a French-Canadian, the first white man to penetrate what is now North Dakota in 1738, and the other was David Thompson, an Englishman, who first mapped in 1797, the section Verendrye visited.

Joining in the ceremonies with the officials and historians are the remnants of 20 Indian tribes, stalking once more down phantom trails to the site of Fort Union, once the great trading post founded by followers of Verendrye.

Out of this congress of Indians, bringing together some 300 of the grizzled veterans of earlier days, historians hope to gain much new knowledge of Indian history in the northwest, and write anew the part they played.

Housed in their native tepees, the Indian gathering promises to be one of unusual color, for its members include representatives of the Arikara, Mandan and Hidatsa tribes, Sioux, Assinniboins, Crows, Piegan, Blood, and Blackfeet.

Taking a leading part in the ceremonies with the Indians is Major General Hugh L. Scott, retired, United States army, a member of the United States Board of Indian Commissioners and considered one of the foremost living authorities on the North American Indian.

The ceremonies of the historians and the Indians will take place on the banks of the Upper Missouri, near the boundary lines of North Dakota and Montana, about 20 miles west of Williston, N. D. There the Indian village will spread its picturesque teepees.

Governor A. G. Sorlie of North Dakota and Governor J. E. Erickson of Montana, are sponsoring the expedition, in co-operation with the historical societies of North Dakota, Montana, South Dakota and Minnesota.

First ceremonies were held at Verendrye, a western North Dakota town recently renamed from Falsen. There Governor Sorlie presided at special ceremonies in commemoration of the work of Verendrye and Thompson, and a monument to their memory was unveiled.

Today the expedition entered into conference with representatives of all the Indian tribes on the side of old Fort Union.

It was a little more than a score of years after Lewis and Clark made their expedition from St. Louis to the Pacific in 1804-06, that Fort Union became the center of fur trading activity for the entire region drained by the Missouri and its tributaries, extending west to the Rocky Mountains and north into Canada.

General Scott delivered the principal address at the conference with the Indians, and the ceremony included the raising of the United States flag on a giant flag staff erected on the exact site of the fort.

Other historical spots to be visited by the expedition are the old battle grounds of the Nez-Perces Indians and General Miles, 15 miles south of Chinook, Montana, and the farthest north spot reached by Captain Meriweather Lewis of the Lewis and Clark expedition, at Meriweather, Montana. A movement will be unveiled at the latter spot, erected in honor of Captain Lewis.

South Dakota Will Reopen Gas Fight

PIERRE, S. D., July 19. (AP).—South Dakota will reopen its gasoline war and fight to a finish, Governor Carl Gunderson announced tonight, following a hastily called meeting of the state gasoline board at the capitol.

This was the answer of the state to the recent one-cent a gallon increase placed on motor fuel by Standard Oil of Indiana and virtually all independent dealers.

Following the meeting, it was announced that the seven state-owned filling stations which were closed a few weeks ago, would be opened as soon as supplis of gasoline can be obtained. In addition to these, the state will open new stations at six places as rapidly as equipment can be installed.

U. S. COLLEGES SPORT MAD, IS PROF'S. BELIEF

English Teacher Says That The Stadium Is Only Building

LONDON, July 1. (AP).—That universities overseas have gone mad on sport is one of the notes made by Sir Ernest Bain, chairman of the finance committee of the Leeds university, who recently returned from a visit to universities in Canada and the United States. In a lengthy report he says in practically every university the stadium was pointed out with emphasis, the master of sport has a very comfortable position, and the tremendous emphasis placed on sport is causing university authorities in America grave anxiety.

"I heard of one case," he said, "where a town's butcher had been enrolled as a member of the university because he had exceptional ability as a footballer."

Dealnig with details of organization of the universities, he notes that in every American university the alumni are well organized and powerful, so powerful as to create difficulty in many cases, as they not only lay down conditions upon which gifts are made to the university but there is an active interference with teaching.

On the question of salaries, after detailing the amount paid to professors, he says it is significant that the individual responsible for sports in all the great universities receives a payment substantially higher than that of any academic member, even including the chancellor.

Tannenberg to Get Big German Memorial

KOENIGSBERG.—An imposing monument to commemorate the Hindenburg victory at Tannenberg is to be erected on the site of the battlefield. It will surround a smaller monument dedicated to the memory of the old Hindenburg regiment which now marks the scene of the battle.

The plan for the new monument was selected in a contest and was proposed by two brothers, Walter and Johannes Krueger. It will consist of an octegonal wall, 16 feet high and 265 feet in diameter, to encircle the present monument. Massive towers 49 feet in height are to be placed at each of the eight corners.

A memorial hall for each regiment which took part in the battle will be provided and the ground floors of seven of the towers will be equipped as museums containing relics of the battle. The upper stories of the towers are to be arranged as living quarters for Tannenberg veterans who will be caretakers and act as bulides of the battlefield.
