Palestinian delegation gives up negotiating efforts

By The Associated Press

A Palestinian delegation many regarded as the best hope for winning freedom for the U.S. Embassy hostages in Tehran gave up its efforts today and left the Iranian capital, a Palestine Liberation Organization official announced in Kuwait.

Word of the PLO's apparent failure to end the 9-day-old impasse came as Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime and the Moslem militants holding the embassy and 98 hostages reaffirmed their determination to face down the United States in the tense confrontation.

Tehran Radio said the Iranian people, heeding the call of the student militants, began a five-day hunger strike today to press the Iranian demand for the extradition of the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi from the United States.

The official radio, monitored in London, also reported that Khomeini's Revolutionary Council had met and discussed the possibility of U.S. military intervention or economic reprisals to end the embassy standoff.

In another move, Iran's new foreign affairs chief, Abolhassan Bani Sadr, summoned all foreign ambassadors in Tehran for a meeting today and urged that their governments pressure the Carter administration to extradite the shah, an Iranian Foreign Ministry spokesman said.

PLO sources reported over the weekend that the three-man delegation sent by PLO leader Yasser Arafat was engaged in intense talks at the Foreign Ministry with Iranian officials and representatives of the students.

But Salah Khalaf, No. 2 man in Arafat's Fatah guerrilla group, told reporters in Kuwait today that the delegation had left for Damascus, Syria.

He said the PLO envoys had told the Iranians that "despite the fact that we side with the Iranian revolution on any confrontation or battle, and despite our high regard for the Iranian revolution, we believe America cannot be fought through occupation of its embassy but rather through a serious and radical confrontation."

Khalaf did not say how the Iranians responded to the PLO's efforts.

It was not known whether the three

Tehran ambassadors from Moslem countries — Pakistan, Syria and Turkey — who PLO sources said took part in weekend negotiations were still pursuing them.

The hostages are 62 Americans and 36 non-Americans — believed to be mostly Pakistani and Indian employees of the embassy. Foreign diplomats who saw them Saturday said they appeared to be in good health.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the Carter administration continues to hope that efforts by nations, individuals and agencies would have a cumulative effect "that would impel Iranian authorities to release the hostages."

"I have no prediction to offer you on the time of release, nor do I have any expectation on this at all so far as tomorrow, or the next day, or whenever," said Carter.

Meanwhile, Syrian troops drove about 40 demonstrators from the grounds of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, Lebanon, Sunday, and police in Washington, D.C., drove several hundred anti-Iranian demonstrators away from Iran's embassy in the U.S. capital.

Train fire forces evacuation of over 200,000 Canadians

MISSISSAUGA, Ontario (AP) — Firefighters this morning reported they had contained a potentially disastrous fire aboard a chemical-loaded train that derailed over the weekend and forced the biggest peacetime evacuation in Canadian history.

Authorities had urged 220,000 residents to flee a 60-square-mile area of this city in Toronto's western suburbs because of the spreading smoke and sickening fumes. Police said they believed most complied.

The greatest threat was from an upended car filled with 90 tons of liquid chlorine that lay only a few feet from some of the eight burning cars of propane gas. But by late this morning fire officials said the nearby cars had been coated with ice, though some flames still licked from cracks.

Poisonous chlorine was leaking slowly and vaporizing, but Ontario Environment Ministry official Maris Lusis said the amount would have to be 100 times greater to pose a serious health threat.

The remaining fires at the site were contained, said city Fire Chief Gordon Bentley.

"It's a very, very lazy dormant flame," he said. "We are completely happy with the situation as we see it at the present time."

But it was not known when the evacuated residents might be able to return to their homes, and chemical experts said the fires could continue until Tuesday.

No deaths or injuries were reported in this city 10 miles west of Toronto, but police, firemen and evacuees complained of nausea, headaches and watery eyes from the fumes which spread more than six miles. There were no reports of damage to nearby buildings.

The evacuation began early Sunday. It was expanded during the day as the fumes and smoke were carried by the wind. Late Sunday night 3,000 residents of Oakville, 10 miles to the south, were urged to evacuate.

There was no estimate of how many thousands heeded the Ontario Environment Ministry's recommendation that residents of a 60-square-mile area flee. A police spokesman said he believed the majority complied, and Dennis Amyot, regional director for Emergency Planning Canada, said it was the biggest peacetime evacuation in the country's history.

Ontario Premier William Davis said it was proceeding smoothly.

Most of the evacuees took refuge with relatives in the Toronto area. Schools, shopping centers and the International Center near the Toronto airport were opened for those with no place to go. Five federal agencies and the Red Cross helped care for them, supplying sleeping bags, blankets, warm meals and transportation and gas masks for the hundreds fighting the fire.

"We always hear of it happening down in the States or somewhere else but not in your own backyard," said Reg Dickie, a courier driver who left his home half a mile from the accident scene.

"We left in such a hurry that our supper was still on the table," said Al Levian, a warehouse owner.

About 1,000 patients from local hospitals and nursing homes were among those evacuated. The seriously ill were transferred to Toronto hospitals and others were moved to private homes.

Investigators said 25 of the 106 cars in a freight train derailed just before midnight Saturday in an industrial area of Mississauga, apparently after an axle on one car broke.

Lack of love sometimes 'unbelievable'

Runaways flee homes for wide variety of reasons

Editor's Note: This is the final segment of a two-part series on runaway children.
By MELANIE MILLER
Of The Pampa News

It might happen this way: The teenager comes in late one night — about two a.m. — and his parents, worried and upset, raise their voices, maybe even slap their child. The next afternoon the teenager is gone, along with some of his favorite possessions.

Another teenager becomes a runaway. Another child joins the ranks of the over 500,000 teenagers, aged 12 to 16, who run away from home in this country each year. Some are found soon, usually at a friend's house; others, more determined and perhaps angrier, take off for the big city and are never heard from again.

Detective R.J. Howell, juvenile officer for the Pampa Police Department, has been handling runaways since being named to that position Oct. 1. In that six-week time period, he's had about 20 runaway teenagers here.

"Our runaway figure here is not as high as it is for other towns the size of Pampa," Howell said.

"But we have a lot of cases that are never even reported."

He said some parents think their children will come home when they get hungry — because that's what happened when they've run away before.

"They're forgetting that there may come a time when they don't come home — something could happen to them," Howell said.

He believes that most cases with runaways involve family problems or home pressures.

"There's usually a lack of discussion at home," he said. "The way they talk to their parents — their language — is unbelievable; there's just no love between the parent and the child."

Some parents will call the police department saying their child has run away, but they (the parents) won't help the police look for him. Howell said. He's also had cases where the parents did not want their children back — they told the police to keep them.

"We've had to threaten them that they are responsible for their child until he or she reaches 18," Howell said.

A child must be missing at least 24 hours before he can be reported as a runaway. In addition, a parent has to file a report that the child has run away before police can look for him.

"With most of our cases, the children have gone to a friend's house with the friend fully aware that the child is a runaway," Howell said. "It's a Class B misdemeanor to harbor a runaway."

Police seldom "arrest" a child for being a runaway, unless his behavior "indicates a need for supervision," as the Texas Family Code says. (Texas children can also be arrested for conduct that is considered "delinquent," such as murder, rape, burglary.)

The officer who finds the runaway has four options: let the child go with a warning; release him to his parents; take the child before a juvenile court or take him to a detention facility.

In 1977, of all the referrals to the Texas juvenile court authorities, 44 percent of those were for conduct indicating need for supervision. Many of these children are considered "status offenders" because the acts they have committed would not be considered crimes if they were adults.

This includes running away. Of all the 1977 referrals for status offenders, runaways comprised 17.1 percent, by far the largest division for such offenses.

Howell said most of his cases involve children who have a step-parent they can't get along with. Many of the children have been abused, although the parents claim nothing is wrong at home.

"When I get a case like that, I contact the Child Welfare office so the family can get counseling," Howell said.

But like other officials in Gray County who deal with runaways, Howell can't really pinpoint the major reason teenagers are running away.

"There's almost always home pressures," he said. "But there's school pressures, too. So they run away — and they really think they can make it on their own."

Iranians living in United States feeling backlash

By The Associated Press

Whatever their politics, some Iranians say they don't find life in the United States easy today. Angry Americans are shouting at them, shunning their businesses and — in rare instances — acting out U.S. frustrations with violence.

The slogans in recent days have been bitter — "Rape All Iranian Women," "Nuke Iran," "Get The Hell Out of America."

And while some have marched in support of Moslems holding 62 Americans hostage in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, other Iranians who do not support the takeover are feeling a hostile American backlash.

"We get quite a bit of calls and we don't know who's calling us," said an Iranian businessman in California, who asked not to be identified. "They tell us to get out of the United States or go to hell or something like that."

Since the takeover:

—Some Iranian-American businessmen in California have changed the names of their stores to remove the word "Iran."

—Three Denver teen-agers went out to "find some Iranians to hassle," police said. Before the night was over, one of the teen-agers was dead and two were wounded.

—Muhammad Mobarez, who lives in Southern California, has organized the Association of Iranian Communities Worldwide "to help Iranian people in America bring to the public a different view of Iranians than the street fighting."

The Iranian students who seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran last week are demanding the return of the deposed shah, now in New York for cancer treatment. The shah, who fled Iran in January during a revolution led by the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, is under a death sentence in that country.

"They should not hold the Americans. It is wrong," said a student at Connecticut's University of Bridgeport, who identified himself only as Davood. "The shah is crazy but what they are doing puts the Iranian students in the United States in the middle."

"We are afraid of being deported. We are afraid for our families in Iran. No one in studying now. We sit by the radio and television all days for the news," he said.

"The people in this country have been told that Khomeini is a killer. No one understands that it was Khomeini who got us our liberty," said Mehrdad Bonakadar, a student at Wentworth Institute of Technology in Boston.

To other Iranians, the issue is not a political one.

"My neighbors aren't as friendly as they once were," said a California man whose company name contained the word "Iran." Ata Farman, who renamed his Beverly Hills restaurant from House of Iran to Golestan Restaurant, gestured at the nearly-empty dining room.

"Business has been terrible since this business started in Tehran," he said.

Deportation takes time

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter wants the government to move swiftly to deport Iranian students who are in the United States illegally. But the Justice Department says that will take at least several weeks.

"The president expects the Justice Department to move on this without delay," White House press secretary Jody Powell said Sunday.

But a Justice Department official said deportations will not begin until December at the earliest.

"We are certainly not going to see any actual deportations within the month," said the official, who did not wish to be identified. "It will take a little longer than that."

The order to deport Iranian students who are not in compliance with the terms of their entry visas was given Saturday by Carter.

The action was intended to discourage Iranian student demonstrations out of fear for the safety of the approximately 60 American hostages being held at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

The president is known to believe that protests here, especially if they are violent, may escalate tensions and further endanger the captives.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Covering Commandment.

Congress intrigued with another tax

Sen Russell Long and Rep. Al Ullman, who preside over congressional tax-writing committees, are intrigued by the idea that the United States should levy a value added tax. This form of taxation is employed in many European countries, and there are plausible arguments for using it here in lieu of some levies in our clumsy and complicated federal tax system.

VAT deserves a hearing in any discussion of tax reform, but Long and Ullman need to convince us they are looking at it for the right reasons. Are they interested in making the federal tax system more equitable and less of a drag on economic growth? Or are they interested only in finding a new source of tax money for federal budgets which are chronically running in the red?

VAT is sort of a national sales tax. It would be levied on the value of goods at each stage of their manufacture and distribution. When an item finally is sold to a consumer, the VAT levies would be reflected in its retail price.

The best case for VAT lies in the argument that the present tax system, especially the federal taxes on interest, dividends and capital gains, puts too great a burden on the "supply" side of our economy. The value added tax would put more of the burden on the "consumption" side.

Reducing taxes on the supply side would stimulate savings and investment, thus increasing the efficiency and productivity of American industry. This in turn would help control price inflation and make American goods more competitive on the world markets.

From that standpoint, a shift to VAT is worth considering. But Long, for one, is cozying up to VAT for quite another reason. It would produce enough new federal revenue to cover increasing costs of Social Security which otherwise will have to be met by another stiff increase in payroll deductions next year — an election year.

Others in Congress see VAT as a handy means of balancing the budget without making any cuts in federal spending. The tax would be a gold mine for Washington. A 5 percent value-added levy would produce $75 billion a year. A 10 percent levy $150 billion.

Two ground rules suggest themselves for the congressional debate on the value added tax. First, it should not be viewed simply as a means of shifting the future financing of Social Security from workers and their employers to the general taxpayer.

Second, imposition of VAT or any new tax must be equalized by a reduction in other taxes. Neither the temper of the American taxpayer nor the health of the economy will benefit by a juggling of taxes which adds up to a net increase in the federal tax burden.

The value added tax is taken off the shelf every time Congress gets in the mood for "tax reform." If it can have a positive economic effect as a break-even substitute for other taxes now on the books, Congress should consider it. But if congressional spenders are taking it up as a means of squeezing more money out of Americans through a new tax hidden in the price of goods and services, VAT belongs back on the shelf.

U.S. arms to China?

The Carter Administration is in its customary disarray over foreign policy, this time on the question of possible arms sales to Red China. It is apparent that Defense Secretary Harold Brown, the Joint Chiefs of Staff and some of Jimmy Carter's security affairs assistant — presumably including national security affairs assistant Zbigniew Brzezinski — favor consultations with the Chinese on the mutual threat posed by the Soviet Union.

President Carter seems to agree. Otherwise, he would not have authorized Brown's trip to Peking later this year or early in 1980. In confirming news reports of the trip, White House aides specifically noted that Secretary Brown would meet with China's defense minister Xu Xiang-gan.

White House confirmation of Brown's travel plans coincided neatly with what surely was the planned lead of a Defense Department study recommending that the United States bolster Peking's conventional military capabilities. The study did not formally propose weapons sales or technology transfer to China but both possibilities were cited.

Enter Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, who seems preoccupied these days with keeping Moscow contented at almost any price. Vance appeared horrified that the United States would even consider selling arms to China.

"We have no intention of changing our policy. We are not going to sell arms to the Chinese," he said.

Ominous growth of government

Growth in the size and power of government has been a part of American life for decades. A Census Bureau report shows that in the five years between 1972 and 1977 what had been steady growth rate accelerated rapidly, resulting in a quantum leap toward big government.

This expansion brings into view a reality that has been slowly emerging and is now very much a fact of life. American is now under the domination of the public sector, something that was not true only 20 short years ago.

Twenty years ago the private sector dominated the United States. This nation had always been the land of the entrepreneur. Intellectuals who agonized over the social problems that then existed called for an expansion of the public sector. With the election of John Kennedy their advice was followed with vigor.

The creation of government programs sped up. Programs started under the so-called Great Society of President Lyndon Johnson continued to grow under the Republicans, who allegedly favored the private sector. Figures now tell us this growth in government power began in snowball in 1972. Much of it has been hidden by the inflation which has been experienced simultaneously with, and because of, the growth of the state.

In the five years between 1972 and 1977 the Consumer Price Index went up 45.4 percent. The total income of American government went up a whopping 72 percent. Had the government's income increased only as much as the cost of living, as indicated by the CPI, there would be more than one hundred billion dollars per year creating jobs in the private sector.

Moreover, income taxes collected in that five-year period increased $104 billion, up 87.4 percent. This was accomplished by permitting inflation to push people into even higher tax brackets. Tax indexing could have kept the population paying the same proportion, but evidently the people who make the laws wanted us all to pay a higher proportion of our income to government.

A recent study calculates that the American worker is a third less productive on the job than his grandfather was 50 years ago. As government expands, and levies the taxes necessary to finance that expansion, the American worker loses his incentive to produce. As corporations are more heavily taxed, there is less money to invest in productivity.

All this adds up to the experience that as individuals we are becoming poorer. This is a new sensation for Americans who over the years have known an increase in wealth unmatched in history.

Why are we becoming poorer? Simple: the average worker is not keeping up with the increase in the cost of government. The basic nature of our nation is changing as a result of this proliferation of the public sector. To some degree we all are now being told what to do by the bureaucracy; even those who work for the bureaucracy are at the mercy of other branches of it.

Those of us in the private sector are working to pay for that bureaucracy the majority of our working hours.

Complaints are heard about the arrogance of some governmental agencies. And why not? They now have the power, and they know it.

America's recent history has meant more than just a loss of productivity and freedom. American is losing its humanitarian inclinations. One of the excuses for all this government was the condition of the poor. Today many people who would care about the problems of their poorer neighbors leave such things to government. Women who used to take in the neighborhood children for a nominal fee now watch television and wait for the establishment of a government day care center. People who do try to raise money for a worthy cause find not only the public's money drained, but also the public's willingness to get involved dissipated.

A change is taking place in the nation's intellectual circles that gives reason for hope. Twenty years ago it was anti-establishment to advocate an expansion of the public sector. Today the public sector is the establishment. This has resulted in growing interest in the free market as a solution to problems. Milton Friedman's Chicago school of free market economics prevails in many institutions of higher learning. Even the hardcore anti-government Austrian school is earnestly being examined after years of being ignored.

This should give us hope, but it will be a long road back and the trends are still going against us.

A modest proposal for SALT II

By James Kilpatrick

The President of the United States invited a dozen senior correspondents to breakfast with him one morning last week. His pleasant purpose was to feed us on bacon and eggs, to water down the Cuban non-crisis and to sell us a nice bill of goods.

As our leader explained how a status quo that had been wholly unacceptable had now become altogether acceptable, my sleepy eyes seemed to glaze. The drowsy mind wandered. As in a dream, I hear President Carter say:

"Gentlemen and lady, and here he bowed to Meg Greenfield of the Washington Post. 'I have invited you here this morning to brief you upon a modest proposal on arms limitation that I will send to the Hill within the next hour. Mr. Powell will give you the text of my message when we conclude.'"

The Los Angeles Times hunched forward in expectation. The Washington Star produced pen and notebook. The New York Times looked grave. Three columnists creased their noble brows. The president smiled fleetingly, and began.

"You should first be advised," said the president, "that I am withdrawing SALT II altogether. The arms limitation treaty is now as dead as last year's Congressional Record. You may discard your copies of the proposed treaty and toss out the various analyses you have been interpreting so profoundly."

The stunned correspondents sat frozen in disbelief. A network commentator interrupted to ask if the president had disclosed his astonishing decision to the Soviet Union. Again Carter smiled.

"Cool it, Rod," he said in his disarming way. "You'll get the whole story. You should know that I spent more than an hour on the hot line last night with President Brezhnev. I had phoned him to get his approval of my statement on the Cuban business, but we fell to talking about SALT. I do not intend to release a verbatim transcript of our conversation — I am saving that for my memoirs — but I can give you the substance."

"I remarked that the treaty will authorize each of us to have 2,250 launchers, heavy bombers and air-to-surface missiles next year, and I added, simply in passing, that we both truly could get along with half of that number, or less. I must quote to you Mr. Brezhnev's precise response: 'Jimmy,' he said, 'you took the words right out of my mouth.'"

"It seems appropriate to pursue the point. I commented, rather casually, that even one-fifth of our existing nuclear weapons would blow the Soviet Union to smithereens. I remarked that it was no secret that we had missiles perfectly targeted on Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev and the baltic states. He replied with some warmth that with just one-tenth of his existing strategic arsenal he could wipe out Washington, New York, Baltimore and John Connally's ranch."

"Leonid," I said, "why don't we scrap this troublesome treaty? Why don't we fellows stockpile what you think is necessary, and we will stockpile what we think is necessary, and we will both save a great deal of money. He snapped at the idea. He remarked that maybe I could now abandon the Goofy. I thought the translator had misunderstood, but Mr. Brezhnev said he was referring to the Goofy Racetrack for concealing missiles. He said it must have been designed by that dog with the floppy ears."

"Well, we chuckled a bit over that, and I said, yes, I certainly could put the $30 billion to better uses. We could beef up our Navy, buy the Marines some new trucks and provide the Air Force with enough airplanes to intimidate the Cubans. We could stop chiseling on our officers and enlisted men by nibbling at their commissary privileges and dependent benefits. We could modernize our conventional equipment, the better to meet real problems instead of fictitious ones. He said, 'Jimmy, I couldn't have put it better myself.'"

"The upshot was that within minutes we reached a clear understanding to abandon 85 percent of our strategic weapons, and to make our own unilateral decisions hereafter. Jody will give you the text. I will now accept questions..."

When the president said "accept," the word triggered a renewed awareness of cooling coffee and congealing eggs. Carter, I realized, was telling us earnestly that the difference between a combat unit and a non-combat unit lies in a Soviet assurance that a combat unit will not function as a combat unit. And alas, my eyes glazed over again.

Today in history

Teddy saved Carter

by ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON—You would think the Carter people would be terribly upset that Teddy Kennedy is getting into the presidential race. Not all of them. One astute Carter supporter told me:

"This is the best thing that could have happened to us."

"How's that?"

"Well, look what was happening before Teddy went to see his mother, and got her permission to run. Carter was sinking in the polls—all the Washington pundits were writing him off, and the cry in the land was 'Anybody but Carter.' We were very upset by all this, but we couldn't do anything about it. We had Rafshooned the President for a year, and it got us nowhere. Money was drying up and many of us were prepared to start working on the Carter presidential library in Plains, Ga. Then Teddy decided he had to save the country and we were off and running."

"But you had Jerry Brown to run against," I said.

"At the beginning we thought that would be sufficient, but Brown blew it and beating him meant nothing. We're very disappointed in Gov. Brown. We were hoping he would give us more opposition."

"Are you trying to tell me that you Carter people are not worried about Kennedy?"

"Well, you always have to be worried about a Kennedy," he said. "But you must be very pragmatic in politics. Before Teddy, we were faced with a terrible prospect. Carter had to run against himself and you can imagine what that meant. Last time he ran against Washington, and that's how he got elected. The President wanted to do it again, but we explained he was part of the problem. We had no issue until Teddy decided to make his move."

"When you spell it out that way it does make sense."

"We couldn't have planned it better if we had wanted to. We can now go to people who never cared much for the Kennedy's and say, 'If you don't give us money, Teddy will take away your three martini lunch.' That's all it usually takes."

"I thought Carter was against the three martini lunch, too."

"He is, but as with most things no one pays any attention to him. If Teddy wants to do away with the lunches people will start taking it seriously."

"I do," I admitted.

"The beauty of it all is that now that Teddy is in the race the media is all excited. When Carter had no opposition it was hard to get him on Page 19. Now when Teddy makes a speech the media expects Carter to answer him. If Carter won't respond, Rosalynn will. The contest between the two of them has wiped out all the Republican candidates."

"The Republican campaign managers are going up the wall trying to get space for their people. The media are treating the Carter-Kennedy confrontation like the Super Bowl. You can't believe what it's done for the morale of our people."

"I feel sorry for the Republicans. It looked for a while as if the big dogfight would be in their party. Let me ask you something. Suppose Teddy gets the nomination? Won't that make you feel bad?"

"Not as bad as if Carter got the Democratic nomination and got clobbered by the Republicans. If Teddy beats us at least we can go down with dignity. But without Kennedy, Carter could have been beaten by himself—and that's a terrible way to lose."

Texas senators calling for strong response to takeover in Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both Texas senators have called for strong action in response to the takeover of the American Embassy in Iran. "If we are to be subject to this sort of international intimidation, I can think of no better reason to mount whatever effort is required to secure this nation's energy independence," Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, said.

"There is no way we can send back the shah," Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said. "We cannot bow to this kind of blackmail. Americans would be hostage around the world."

Bentsen proposed severing diplomatic relations and cutting off arms sales to Iran. He also said any Iranian students who demonstrate illegally in the U.S. should be deported.

Tower said the Iranian situation "shows the disdain with which this administration is held. We must appear especially vulnerable to a government which is currently supplying a significant portion of our energy requirements."

He said the Carter administration should act quickly, but responsibly, to free the hostages.

Mahon at Johnson bash

Former Rep. George Mahon, who represented a large hunk of West Texas in Washington for decades until his retirement last year, was among the partygoers at a bash Tuesday night in honor of the late President Lyndon B. Johnson's election win exactly 15 years ago.

"We hear entirely too much about the Vietnam disaster in my opinion," Mahon said in an interview. "I think it's very unfortunate that Vietnam has not been placed in the proper context, and of course, Johnson had a very difficult role to play."

Mahon and his wife maintain a Texas residence but have spent most of their time in Virginia since his retirement. Mahon said he remains busy.

"I'm glad to be relieved of the pressure that I had as chairman of the appropriations committee for 14 years," he said.

Strauss comments on Krueger

Robert Strauss was asked to swear in Bob Krueger as the new ambassador-at-large for Mexico, but the State Department apparently decided he did not have the proper credentials.

Abelardo L. Valdez, the nation's new protocol chief, took on the job of administering the oath at the ceremony Tuesday.

Strauss, suffering from laryngitis the day after word was out about his new job as head of President Carter's re-election campaign, offered some observations on Krueger's career anyway.

"I don't think Robert Krueger is ever really going to return to private life," Strauss said about the former Texas congressman who lost a tight race for the Senate last fall. "So, Mister Ambassador, I'm going to support you walking or riding to any job you want."

Strauss is from Dallas, Valdez from Floresville and Krueger from New Braunfels.

Civiletti meets with Hispanics

Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti met Wednesday with 15 Hispanic leaders, including Texans Ruben Bonilla, Dr. Hector Garcia, state Rep. Ben Reyes and Adelfa B. Callejo.

The group should become the official Hispanic advisory committee after the time consuming requirements to form it are finished. Civiletti decided to form an advisory committee after Hispanics actively opposed his nomination last summer.

Bonilla, of Corpus Christi, is the national head of the League of United Latin American Citizens. Garcia, also of Corpus Christi, founded the American G.I. Forum. Reyes is from Houston and Callejo, an attorney, is from Dallas.

Among the other leaders invited to the "ad hoc" meeting were Pablo Sedillo, chairman of the Forum of National Hispanic Organizations in Washington; Vilma Martinez, president of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund in San Francisco; and the Rev. Jose J. Gallego of Chicago.

Setting up the formal advisory committee was one of the topics on the agenda.

Courthouse bill to White House

The bill that would name the federal courthouse in San Antonio after slain U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. is on its way to the White House for the president's signature after passing both the House and the Senate.

Wood was killed as he left his San Antonio apartment last May. Benisen had sponsored the bill in the Senate. Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Texas, sponsored a similar proposal in the House.

The official name of the building would be the John H. Wood Jr. Federal Courthouse.

Frost on spending task force

Rep. Martin Frost, D-Texas, is one of three members of a House Rules Committee task force that will study ways to limit government spending.

Kissinger on Embassy siege

U.S. needs to prevent recurrence

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger says after the crisis in Iran is over, the United States should come up with a plan to insure that it never happens again anywhere in the world.

"We must develop a policy to prevent this and convey to other countries they are not free to violate the diplomatic immunity of Americans and Americans cannot be picked up and held hostage with impunity," Kissinger said during a weekend visit to Texas.

"At any moment there are tens of thousands of Americans around the world who are subject to blackmail of this nature," Kissinger said.

The former secretary of state said he did not know how long the crisis would last, but said the United States must not "let itself be blackmailed" by militant Moslems holding U.S. hostages in Tehran.

"If we once accept this position we will never be able to do what is right," he said.

"I would hate to think we are without recourse," said Kissinger, who was here to attend a fund-raiser Saturday for Sen. John Tower, R-Texas.

However, Kissinger declined to say what he thinks President Carter ought to do about the present crisis.

"I believe that in a situation that is this sensitive, outsiders should not offer tactical advice. There is only one man who can handle this crisis, and that is the president of the United States," Kissinger said.

"While Americans are in Iran, I don't want to offer any remedies other than support of the president."

Kissinger said he visited the cancer-stricken, deposed shah Saturday morning in New York. He said they did not talk about the crisis in Iran other than to express "mutual regret."

Kissinger said it was a "debt of honor" to offer asylum and medical treatment to the man he said stood by the United States in every crisis during the last 30 years.

"If we have reached a position where foreign governments can arrest American diplomats because the United States extends medical treatment to a leader who for 37 years has stood by the United States, then we have reached a sad state in world affairs," he said.

Performed autopsy in 1963

Doctor would not protest exhumation of Oswald's body

SEATTLE (AP) — Despite an author's claims to the contrary, the body in Lee Harvey Oswald's grave is that of the man accused of assassinating President John Kennedy, says the doctor who performed the autopsy on Oswald.

"There is overwhelming circumstantial evidence that it was Oswald," said Dr. Earl Rose, chief medical examiner in Dallas in 1963 when Jack Ruby shot Oswald. But Rose said he would not object to exhumation of the body to verify the identity.

"It's the American way, to explore every possibility," he said.

Rose, in Seattle on Saturday to attend a meeting of the National Association of Medical Examiners, said Oswald's wife and mother identified the body.

British lawyer-author Michael Eddowes has written a book in which he claims the Russian secret police substituted a look-alike for Oswald when Oswald was in Russia prior to the Nov. 22, 1963, Kennedy assassination. The writer was granted permission to see Oswald's medical, dental and X-ray records.

Eddowes also has filed suit in Fort Worth, Texas, asking that Oswald's remains be exhumed to recheck the identity.

Rose said he measured Oswald, took fingerprints and X-rays and took full length photographs of the corpse.

"I received the body after surgery had been done in an attempt to save Oswald. I was to check the cause of death and also any possibility of police brutality, which by the way, I did not find," Rose said.

"There was some talk that Oswald could have been saved. I certainly don't think there was any chance. The bullet had severed two major vessels, the aorta and the vena cava, and the liver and spleen were damaged."

"He had bled heavily, mostly internally. I recovered the missile and turned it over to police."

He said there is some controversy about the height he reported and that he did not find a scar from a mastoidectomy — removal of a projection of the temporal bone behind the ear — which others claim Oswald had.

"I could have overlooked the scar, possibly it was under the hair line. As to the height, which I understand is disputed by about one inch, I could have been mistaken. How do you arch the foot when measuring a body?"

Emergency stop

DALLAS (AP) — Traffic was halted on a major freeway for a time Sunday night by an unusual obstruction — a burning airplane.

The pilot, George Reynolds, told police he and his son, Jeff, were on a return flight from Houston when the plane's engine failed.

Reynolds, 45, told officers he was able to regain power briefly, but when the engine quit a second time he began looking for a place to land.

"He saw an open spot with no traffic on R.L. Thornton Freeway (Interstate 20)," said police spokesman Ed Spencer.

TEXAS
 By The Associated Press
 A weak cold front stretched from Childress to near Marfa today as cloudy skies prevailed northwest of the line and in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Scattered rain was reported over portions of the Panhandle and the south plains during the night, but almost all precipitation had ended by daybreak.

Northerly winds blowing at 10 to 20 mph were reported in the Panhandle, and variable breezes prevailed elsewhere across the state.

Predawn temperatures were in the 30s north of the weak cold front and in the 40 and 50s elsewhere.

The forecast called for a chance of light snow in Panhandle and scattered showers in northeast portions of the state. Mostly fair skies with cool temperatures were predicted for the rest of the state.

FORECAST
 North Texas — Clearing west and central. Partly cloudy with scattered showers east. Fair and cooler tonight through Tuesday. Highs 50 to 58. Lows 30 to 35. Highs Tuesday mid 50s.

South Texas — Clear to partly cloudy with mild afternoons and cold nights through Tuesday. Highs 65 to 75. Lows 32 northwest to 50 near the coast. Highs Tuesday 58 to 70.

elsewhere. Lows will range from the 30s Hill Country to the 50s Lower Rio Grande Valley.

West Texas — Mostly fair with a gradual warming trend through Friday. Highs in the 50s and 60s. Lows in the 20s and 30s.

14 dead after boarding home fire

PIONEER, Ohio (AP) — Sprinklers could have saved the lives of 14 women killed in a fire that roared through a home for the aging and retarded, says the mayor of this Ohio town. But the owner, who died trying to save a boarder, apparently couldn't afford one, he says — and it wasn't required.

"They'll probably be crucified, the ones that are left," Mayor Bruce Kidston said of the family of boarding home owner Gladis Coats. "Gladis paid her bill this morning."

Twenty-eight people, ranging in age from 27 to 70, were living in the home when fire, perhaps started by a small boy, broke out early Sunday. Those who escaped were not injured, but more than a dozen died.

"Some of them were found in their chairs, some in their beds. Apparently, they were taken by surprise," said David Norris, Mrs. Coats' son-in-law and police chief for this northwestern Ohio town of about 950 people.

As townspeople and relatives took survivors into their homes, Kidston, a waterworks contractor, said a sprinkler system "would have saved lives, everything." He said he presumed the Coats "couldn't afford the $30,000 to $50,000 cost of a sprinkler system."

"My mother-in-law got rock bottom money," Carol Coats said. "She wouldn't ask for more money."

The home, called Coats Nursing Home, became a boarding house after state laws were changed in the mid-1970s to require sprinkler systems in nursing homes, said Dr. John H. Ackerman, head of the state Health Department. Most of the residents of the home were able to walk, thus avoiding the need for strict nursing home regulations.

Since the facility was not under state jurisdiction, no laws were violated by the lack of safety devices, Ackerman said. Kidston said no local fire regulations had been violated.

Mrs. Coats, in her early 60s, had escaped from the blaze, but ran back into the house to escort two people to safety. Her body was found at the bottom of a flight of stairs, her arms wrapped around a female boarder she was trying to carry out, Norris said.

Her husband, Gene, was hospitalized for shock, Norris said.

Kidston had said the fire was started by a 4-year-old boy who lived in an apartment connected to the two-story brick and wood building. But later Sunday, Norris said, "We may have been too hasty."

Mrs. Coats had telephoned that the boy set a couch on fire, but Norris said electrical and heating connections could have started the blaze. The state fire marshal's office, health department and highway patrol were investigating orders from Gov. James Rhodes.

Meanwhile, residents of the town set up a temporary morgue in an elementary school.

American median income shrinking

By The Associated Press

Americans are earning more and making less than they were 10 years ago.

That's the conclusion of a new study which shows that the after-tax, after-inflation median income for a typical family is smaller than it was in 1969.

The study was conducted by the Tax Foundation Inc., a non-profit research group with headquarters in Washington, D.C. The foundation said that from 1969 to 1979, the median income for all families with a single, full-time wage earner almost doubled, going from $9,277 to $18,467.

The group figured out how much federal income tax and Social Security would be due on the median income for a married couple with two children filing a joint return. It calculated that the after-tax income for the family went from $7,947 to $15,546.

Next, the foundation adjusted the 1979 figure for inflation, as measured by the Consumer Price Index, and it found that the "real" income — in terms of 1969 dollars — was only $7,800, almost $150 less or 2 percent less than it was a decade earlier.

These statistics don't even take state and local taxes into account and they have been rising even faster than the federal levies in most places.

Since then, federal income taxes for the family used in the foundation calculations rose 82 percent. Social Security taxes went up 142 percent, and prices increased 75 percent. It all adds up to an 8 percent drop in actual purchasing power since 1972.

Tax bracket creep is one reason that earnings don't keep pace with inflation — even when paychecks go up. As your income increases, so does the bite taken by the federal government as you are pushed into a higher tax bracket.

Several proposals have been made to cure tax bracket creep by a system called indexation which links taxes and the inflation rate. It's easier to understand if you look at some hypothetical figures.

Suppose your income $15,000 a year. Assume you pay 10 percent in taxes — $1,500 — for an after-tax income of $13,500. The Consumer Price Index goes up by 10 percent and so does your salary. You now earn $16,500 a year. Without indexation, you are automatically boosted into a higher tax bracket — let's say you pay 11 percent or $1,815. You are left with $14,685. Your 10 percent raise has just shrunk to 8.7 percent.

With indexation, your tax bracket would remain the same. You would still pay 10 percent — $1,650 on a $16,500 salary. You would be left with $14,850; your 10 percent raise would leave you 10 percent more money — enough to at least keep pace with inflation.

A Beef Fiesta featuring speakers, demonstrations and exhibits is scheduled Nov. 29 in the Heritage Room at M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Sponsored jointly by the Top O' Texas Cowbelles and the Gray County Extension Homemakers Council, the event will be from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Dr. Frank Orts, meats specialist with Texas A&M University, will speak at 9:35 on "What the Consumer Should Know about Beef." He will cut up a hindquarter to show the various cuts of beef.

At 10:45, Frank Brooks, meats specialist, and Terry Medrano, home economist, both associated with the Texas Department of Agriculture, will give a food preparation demonstration.

During the noon hour, a Beef Tasting Fiesta will allow visitors to sample some of the beef prepared in the morning sessions.

Educational exhibits also will be featured. If a person or group would like to set up an educational display, contact the Extension office at 669-7429 before Friday.

DR. LAMB

Lifestyle changes may help

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I recently graduated from college. I'm 22 years old and the past few months I've been bothered by irregularity of my heart, including what the doctors call tachycardia and bigeminy pulse, along with persistent muscle spasms and twitches and indigestion. My doctor listened to my heart, performed an electrocardiogram and did a number of blood tests, including a test of my thyroid and potassium and chemical profile. But everything was all right.

He has prescribed Librium and Norpace and chalks it all up to anxiety and stress. I'm still concerned. Should I be?

DEAR READER — Let me tell you something. Anyone who notices an irregularity of his heart, particularly if it disturbs him or occurs with rapid heart action, is concerned. It can be downright uncomfortable whether it's caused by anxiety and stress or whether it's caused by some disease of the heart.

Many people do have such findings and do not have any underlying heart disease at all. In many instances we don't know what causes these episodes. It sounds like you have had a very thorough and competent medical examination which should give you a lot of comfort in knowing that you don't have any serious illness, regardless of how uncomfortable the attacks may be.

Bigeminy really means that every second beat is premature so that you have two beats, a pause, two beats and a pause, two beats and a pause. All of these fall into the same category of what people call their heart skipping a beat except yours occurs every other beat. A tachycardia, of course, refers to rapid heart rate. Some people have these attacks with a sudden rapid beating of the heart which may persist for a period of time and then just stops as suddenly as it began.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 6-12, Heart Irregularities, Skipped Beats, Tachycardias, to give you more information on these disorders. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

As The Health Letter I'm sending you explains, individuals with your problem can often do things with their lifestyle that are helpful. This includes eliminating coffee, tea, colas and all drinks that contain caffeine. Caffeine is a drug. It stimulates the heart and stimulates the release of adrenaline. It can cause an increase in such irregularities of the heart regardless of whether the irregularities are associated with anxiety or with underlying heart disease.

We also know that cigarette smoking contributes to the problem as do digestive disorders.

Individuals who do not have any underlying heart disease and have occasional irregular beats often do better if they improve their level of physical fitness, particularly if they're relatively unfit to begin with.

DEAR ABBY

Strict background interferes with marrying 'tramp'

DEAR ABBY: I am a 32-year-old reasonably successful man—never married, but very much in love with a beautiful young woman with a Southern mountain background. My hangup is that I have a strict New England heritage, and am accustomed to dating girls who not even consider kissing a fellow on a first date. This girl I'm in love with admitted that she let every guy she ever dated have his way with her.

She says that all young girls "in those hills" were raised that way, and it wasn't until her family moved to a major city that she learned "right from wrong."

So here I am, a man who has always dreamed of marrying a virgin, in love with a girl who can't even remember when or how she lost her virginity. (She "thinks" she was 12 or 13.)

I would like to convince myself that I can forget her past and marry this ex-tramp and live happily ever after.

What are the odds, Abby? I am desperate for some professional advice.

SOUTHERN GENTLEMAN

DEAR GENTLEMAN: As long as you view this girl as an "ex-tramp," I would estimate your chances for a happy marriage are zilch. The poor girl has already been the victim of an amoral upbringing; spare her the added burden of a "holier than thou" husband.

DEAR ABBY: I feel kind of weird writing to you, but here goes. You see, there is this real cute guy at school who follows me in the hall, pulls my hair and socks me on the arm. He has tried to trip me, grab my jacket and shove me into the lockers. He kicked me on the bus once and hit me in the head with his books.

All the kids say he likes me. So why does he act this way? LIKES HIM IN ANAHEIM

DEAR LIKES: It's his way of making YOU notice HIM. If you react, you'll probably lose him. Ignore him and you'll drive him wild.

DEAR ABBY: I am 17, and I don't like to brag but I guess you could call me a "popular" girl. I have a good reputation and don't want to spoil it, but here is my problem:

After a fellow has taken me to a movie or a dance, and somewhere afterwards to eat, I hate to turn him down when he wants to make out.

I never go too far, but I feel sort of cheap afterwards. I guess it's because in a way I am really trying to "repay" him for what he's spent on me.

I'm not serious with any of these guys, Abby, they're just dates. But after a guy has spent his hard-earned money on me, how can I turn him down?

ALLENTOWN

DEAR ALLENTOWN: It's easy. All a guy is entitled to on a date is the pleasure of your company. And unless you want to lose your hard-earned reputation, don't feel obligated to give him his "hard-earned" money's worth.

If you need help in writing letters of sympathy, congratulations or thank-you letters, get Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for all Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif.

THE PEOPLE'S PHARMACY

Hair dye chemicals may need warning

By Joe Graedon

Q After reading your article on the potential cancer risks from hair dyes I got nervous and switched to a tint. Loving Care I would like to know if it contains any unsafe ingredients.

Since I color my hair regularly to hide the gray, could you give me a list of chemicals that may be hazardous so I'll know which products to avoid?

A Lots of people who wrote us were alarmed to learn that some of the common ingredients in hair dyes have been known to cause cancer in animals. And many people inquired specifically about Loving Care.

As far as we could tell, your new brand of hair color, Loving Care, does not contain any suspect chemicals.

Although the FDA has no authority to ban coal tar dyes from hair colors it can require a warning label. You may soon see the following caution on products that contain the ingredient 4-MMPD (4-methoxy-m-phenylenediamine sulfate): "Warning: Contains an ingredient that can penetrate your skin and has been determined to cause cancer in laboratory animals."

4-MMPD is not the only suspect chemical. The National Cancer Institute found other common ingredients in hair dyes which also cause cancer in animals.

The list contains some real tongue twisters. You almost need a degree in chemistry to pronounce some of these names, but since you asked, they are: 4-amino-2-nitrophenol, 2-nitro-1,4-phenylenediamine, 2,4-toluenediamine, Direct Blue 6, and lead acetate.

After further testing some of these chemicals may also require the kind of warning label soon to appear with 4-MMPD.

Many cosmetic companies have scrambled to eliminate 4-MMPD from their hair dyes because a scary label is the last thing they want on their products.

Unfortunately, there is some question about the safety of some new formulations. One substitute, 4-EMPD (4-ethoxy-m-phenylenediamine sulfate) closely resembles 4-MMPD in chemical structure; experts for Consumers Union believe that the new dye may pose as much danger as the original.

Whatever product you finally decide on, here are some guidelines you may wish to follow: try to use hair dyes as infrequently as possible, minimize the contact between the chemicals and your scalp, and use lots of water to rinse thoroughly after coloring.

Q I've been hearing a lot about the value of aspirin for preventing heart attacks and strokes. Both my parents died of heart attacks and my brother recently had a stroke.

I've got high blood pressure and have had several bouts of thrombophlebitis. I am worried and would like to start taking aspirin. What is the right dose to prevent clots?

A Scientists are struggling with the answer to your question. Nobody is certain exactly how aspirin works to prevent clots. They aren't even sure how effective it is in protecting against heart attacks and strokes.

Five major studies now in the works should soon provide some definite answers. In the meantime, one small investigation of hemodialysis patients suggests that a dose of aspirin as low as one-half tablet daily may help to reduce blood clots.

The researchers concluded, "Our results suggest that low-dose aspirin is effective, is of theoretically greater benefit than higher doses and will almost certainly be associated with less toxicity." They caution, however, that this anti-clotting effect does not prove aspirin will prevent deaths from heart attacks.

Even half an aspirin tablet could spell trouble for a few folks. Individuals with a bleeding ulcer or people with an aspirin allergy should be wary. Aspirin also interacts with many prescription drugs. You'd be wise to check in with your doctor before you start on a daily regimen.

TWEEN 12 AND 20

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.

Girls: I have been introduced to an excellent booklet "The Way We Are," that is being used across the United States and in Canada as a teaching resource in schools as part of a human sexuality program.

The booklet is designed specifically for teen girls and it candidly discusses female and male reproductive systems and answers to commonly-asked questions. If interested, a free copy can be obtained by writing to Johnson and Johnson Products, Inc., Room 210, River Road and Main Street, Highland, N.Y. 12528.

Dr. Wallace: I'm 13 and have a problem with my grandmother who lives with us because she can't live alone anymore. She constantly gets on me about my chores when it is none of her business. She constantly tells my parents lies about me then at night asks me to forgive her because she is afraid she won't wake up in the morning. I love my grandmother but she is an annoyance. — Eric, South Lake Tahoe, Calif.

Eric: As people grow older they become more juvenile in their behavior. It has or will happen to all of us. As long as you and your parents realize this and do not take what Grandmother says seriously, there should be no family conflicts.

Don't get mad or argue with Grandmother. Instead smile and say, "I love you, Grandmother," whenever she does something to irritate you.

Write to Dr. Robert Wallace, TWEEN 12 and 20, in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

EXCEPTIONAL PART-TIME OPPORTUNITY

We invite you to investigate this rare opportunity. Far above average earnings. Gas allowance, bonus and incentive program. Company paid school and training program. New tension generated with arrest of mayor

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli government generated new tension in the West Bank by arresting an influential Palestinian mayor for deportation and announcing plans for more Jewish settlements in the occupied territory.

The arrest Sunday of Bassam Shakaa, mayor of Nablus, provoked the resignations of his town council and a group of other West Bank mayors, and touched off demonstrations and school and business strikes in the area inhabited by 700,000 Palestinians.

The Israelis offered no reason for Shakaa's arrest or imprisonment in a maximum security facility near Tel Aviv. No charges were filed, but the deputy defense minister said the government was preparing a list of offenses for the Israeli Supreme Court to justify his expulsion.

Shakaa's arrest came days after Maj. Gen. Dan Matt, the occupation chief of the West Bank, reported the mayor told him to expect more terrorist attacks like one in which 14 Israelis were killed last year as long as the occupation of Arab lands continued.

Deputy Defense Minister Mordechai Zippori said this was "the straw that broke the camel's back."

Shakaa defied a government order last June and led a demonstration against Jewish settlements in the West Bank. The charge against him for that violation was frozen as a gesture to the United States, but it was not dropped.

Shimon Peres, leader of the opposition Labor Party in Parliament, and other Israeli politicians expressed satisfaction with the government's action against Shakaa. But the Arab mayor of Hebron, Fahad Qawasmeh, said it was evidence of "a clear policy of intimidation."

Adding to the new tensions was the Israeli Cabinet's general policy decision Sunday to establish additional Jewish settlements and enlarge existing outposts in the West Bank, Gaza Strip and Golan Heights.

FOCUS

A Candidate Again?

As a movie actor from 1937 to 1964, Ronald Reagan appeared in such films as "Knute Rockne, All-American," "Santa Fe Trail," and "The Killers." He became involved in national politics when he campaigned for Barry Goldwater in the 1964 presidential election. He later served two terms as governor of California, and campaigned unsuccessfully for the Republican presidential nomination in 1968 and 1976. Reagan has often been mentioned as the frontrunner in the crowded field of current Republican presidential prospects. Tomorrow he is scheduled to announce officially whether he will be a candidate for the 1980 Republican presidential nomination.

DO YOU KNOW — Who succeeded Reagan as governor of California?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — Joe Clark is Canada's prime minister.

November 13, 1979

Your popularity and prestige are ascending. You'll have a strong influence on your peers this coming year. Many new acquaintances will come and go, but several will become lasting friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) No matter what we have, there is always someone who has more. If we permit this to bother us we only hurt ourselves, so don't let it worry you today. Find out more about yourself by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You might feel that someone prevented you from getting recognition you rightfully deserve. Even if this is so, keep your feelings to yourself. The truth will come out.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your pensive mood today could cause you to think that everything is against you. Wait until tomorrow; you'll see how wrong you were.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you discover today that someone you thought to be your friend really isn't, don't fret. The loss is theirs, not yours.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Something could happen today that might cause you to fear it will affect your reputation. Everything will blow over if you don't panic.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It's good to set high goals and want nice things, but don't kid yourself as to what can practically and realistically be done.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This is one of those days where all may not be what it appears to be. Investigate thoroughly before accepting anything important at face value.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) People don't generally mean to be unkind, but sometimes their small, selfish desires lead them astray. Don't judge too harshly loved ones who might fall prey to this.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Stick to your own way of doing things today if you want to be productive. Well-meaning person could mess you up with their suggestions.

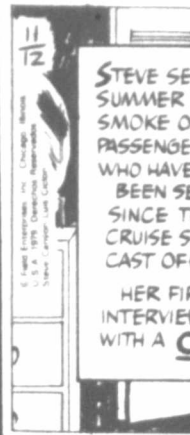

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you're not careful today, you could get caught up in the foolish pursuit of trying to keep up with the Joneses. Spend only what you have and for what you need.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A sense of well-being at home today with the family can be achieved if you don't let one member's sniveling ruin your mood. Tune this person out.

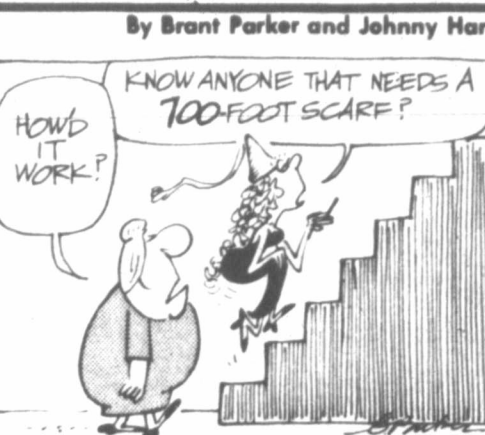

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your feelings could easily be hurt today, yet you possess the mental discipline to forget it. Utilize it. You'll enjoy the rest of the day.

HOUSTON OILERS wide receiver Ken Burroughs (00) hangs on to the ball and manages to bail over the goal line to score for Houston during the first half after catching a 55-yard pass from quarterback Dan Pastorini. Monte Jackson (42), defending for the Oakland Raiders, tries to strip the ball from Burroughs before he can score, but was unable to do so. The Oilers beat the Raiders, 31-17, in Houston Sunday.

Oilers roll past Oakland

HOUSTON (AP) — Prior to the arrival of Earl Campbell, the book on how to stop the Houston Oilers read the same each week: stop the Dan Pastorini-to-Ken Burrough bomb and you stop the Oilers.

Then Campbell came along last year and led the National Football League in rushing his rookie season and the cry became stop Campbell and you stop the Oilers.

Now the Oakland Raiders are ready to throw away the book and start over.

The Oilers took a page from their history book Sunday when Pastorini and Burroughs reformed the old demolition team for touchdown bombs of 55 and 35 yards en route to a satisfying 31-17 victory over the shocked Oakland Raiders.

The victory boosted Houston to an 8-3 record and kept them one game behind Pittsburgh in the tough American Football Conference Central Division race. Oakland dropped to a 6-5 record, their fifth loss in six road games this season.

Pastorini, with one of the worst quarterback ratings in the AFC, had been ineffective in mounting a strong passing game most of the season. But the Raiders felt the sting of Pastorini's judicious use of the forward pass. He passed only 13 times but completed eight for 208 yards and made each pass count.

"We thought we had to concentrate on stopping their running game and the passing game would take care of itself," said linebacker Phil Villapiano. "I thought we did a good job on Campbell, but we didn't know they were going to move the ball that well."

The Raiders didn't really stop Campbell, who rushed 107 yards on 32 carries and became the first player in AFC history to gain more than 1,000 yards in his first two seasons in the league. Campbell has 1,039 yards this season.

"I think we showed some people today that we have a few other offensive weapons we haven't used that much this season," Pastorini said. "We came out throwing so we could loosen them up. We ran the ball most of the time last week, and we knew we couldn't keep doing that or they'd start keying on us."

Pastorini wasted no time in reverting to Houston's old bombs away offense, throwing a long incompletion to tight end Rich Caster on the first play of the game.

Pastorini didn't stop, however, and eventually set up Campbell's touchdown run with a 17-yard completion to Ronnie Coleman and a 27-yard shot to Mike Renfro. He hit Burrough on the 55-yard touchdown pass play in the second quarter.

Oakland quarterback Ken Stabler, who completed 21 of 35 passes for 239 yards, hit touchdown passes of 23 yards to Raymond Chester in the first quarter and three yards to Dave Casper in the second quarter to salvage a 14-14 halftime tie.

Oiler safety Mike Reinholdt got his 10th interception of the year and returned it 33 yards to Oakland's 18 in the third quarter to set up a seven-yard touchdown run by fullback Tim Wilson and the Oilers stretched the lead to 28-14 on Pastorini's 35-yard strike to Burrough.

Pastorini set up his second TD shot with a 36-yard completion to Renfro.

The two teams traded field goals in the fourth quarter with Jim Breech kicking a 32 yarder for Oakland and Houston's Toni Fritsch booting a 51-yarder. It was Fritsch's 16th field goal in 18 tries this season.

Harriers second at district

With Joe Murray and Mike Wheeler leading the way through sub-freezing temperatures and a steady snowfall, the Pampa Harriers finished second in the District 3-AAAA cross-country meet Saturday in Amarillo to qualify for region competition.

Tascosa captured the meet crown with 31 points, followed by Pampa, 45; Amarillo High, 51; and Palo Duro, 113.

Individually, David Williams of Tascosa took first with a 9:47 clocking, followed by Steve Jones, Amarillo High, 10:11; Murray, 10:12; and Wheeler, 10:16.

Pampa coach Charles Tindell changed the strategy for this meet, telling Murray and Wheeler to stay right on the heels of the talented Williams. In past races, Pampa runners had tried to set a pace and then sprint at the end without good results.

Also placing for Pampa were Don Braswell, 7th, 10:27; Denny Combs, 14th, 10:49; Neal Braswell, 17th, 11:06; Rick Kupcanus, 18th, 11:13; and Lane Howard, 24th, 11:26.

In the girls division Pampa did not enter as a team, but did place four individuals. They were Kerri Golden, 19th, 13:25; Christi Youngblood, 27th, 14:34; JoLynn Ellis, 28th, 15:06; and Nancy Martin, 29th, 15:12.

Top teams were Tascosa, 25; Amarillo High, 41; Caprock, 64; and Palo Duro, 115.

Tascosa's David Ann Lard was timed at 12:01 to finish first.

The top two teams and top five individuals qualify for the regionals.

Packers win tournament

The Pampa Packers defeated the Pampa Raiders, 19-7, Saturday night to claim the championship of the Optimist Club pee-wee football tournament held at Optimist Park.

The Packers had earlier defeated the Pampa Redskins, 20-0, in the first round and the Pampa Colts, 19-0, in the semi-finals.

Dumas had whipped the Pampa Rams, 27-0, and then Dumas had lost to the Pampa Raiders, 13-7, in other games.

Most valuable players were Taylor Newcomb, Packers, offense, and Ricky DeLeon, Raiders, defense.

Teams from Canyon and Perryton were unable to participate in the tournament because of inclement weather.

Kickers play vital roles in NFL

By HAL BOCK
AP sports writer

Alex Karras wouldn't have appreciated the goings-on in the National Football League Sunday.

Karras was the monstrous Detroit defensive tackle who frowned on place kickers trotting on the field at the last moment with clean, fresh uniforms to decide the outcome of games.

But those kickers turned around three NFL games Sunday. Washington's Mark Moseley and Mike Woods of San Diego booted last-minute field goals to secure victories, the Redskins edging St. Louis 30-28 and the Chargers topping Cincinnati 26-24. But Tom Linhart missed two usually routine extra points and that was the difference in the New York Jets' 14-12 loss to Buffalo.

Redskins 30, Cardinals 28

St. Louis erased a 27-7 deficit with three fourth-quarter TDs, but Moseley's 39-yard field goal with 36 seconds to play salvaged the victory for Washington.

The winning three-point come despite a bad snap from center which was salvaged by holder Joe Theismann.

Chargers 26, Bengals 24

San Diego hung on to its share of the American Conference West lead by overcoming an early 14-0 deficit to overhaul the Bengals. Woods kicked field goals of 22, 42, 34 and 32 yards, the last one with 19 seconds left, for the Chargers' victory.

The four field goals was a San Diego club record and Woods now has a string of six straight since his release by St. Louis.

Bills 14, Jets 12

Linhart, cut earlier by Baltimore after missing some short field goal tries, cost the Jets dearly against Buffalo. Both teams scored two TDs, but the Bills got the game's only extra points from Nick Mike-Mayer.

It finally comes down to Buffalo's kicker made his two and our kicker didn't, said Jets Coach Walt Michaels.

Bucs 16, Lions 14

Tampa Bay stayed two games in front of Chicago in the NFC Central, rallying in the final 31 minutes to erase a 14-6 deficit.

First Neil O'Donoghue kicked his third field goal of the game, a 28-yarder, and then Doug Nafzinger threw a 23-yard TD pass to Larry Tucker following Dana Nafzinger's recovered fumble for the deciding points.

"We didn't play well, but we won," said Bucs Coach John McKay.

Oilers 31, Raiders 14

Earl Campbell became the first runner in AFC history to rush for more than 1,000 yards in each of his first two seasons. The Houston star carried 32 times for 107 yards, pushing his season's totals to 245 for 1,039.

Dan Pastorini combined on TD passes of 55 and 35 yards with Ken Burrow to hold second-place behind Pittsburgh in the AFC Central.

Steelers 30, Chiefs 3

Terry Bradshaw threw three TD passes and Matt Bahr kicked three field goals as Pittsburgh won its fourth straight game.

"I just didn't have a good day," Bradshaw said. "I threw more dunks and bad passes today than I have all year."

Seahawks 29, Browns 24

Seattle, limited to minus seven yards in total offense a week ago, erased that memory with a 42-yard game against Cleveland as Sherman Smith rushed for three TDs.

The loss dropped Cleveland into third place in the AFC Central, two games back of Pittsburgh and one behind Houston.

Dolphins 19, Colts 0

Miami moved into a first place tie with New England in the AFC East, bottling up Baltimore while Bob Griese tossed TD passes of 18 and 14 yards to Nat Moore.

The Dolphins sacked Colt quarterback Greg Landry seven times with Vern Den Herder recording four of the sacks. "We've always been steady," Herder said. "Today, we were spectacular."

Broncos 45, Patriots 10

Denver rolled to a 38-7 halftime lead and just coasted against New England. The victory kept the Broncos tied with San Diego for first place in the AFC West and dropped New England into a first-place tie with Miami in the AFC East.

Craig Morton passed for two TDs and Denver turned two Patriots fumbles and a blocked punt into three other scores.

Saints 31, 49ers 20

New Orleans took over first place in the NFC West, rolling past San Francisco as Chuck Muncie rushed for 118 yards and three touchdowns. Archie Manning hit 15 of 21 passes for 153 yards for the Saints.

Bears 27, Rams 23

Virgil Livers intercepted rookie Jeff Rutledge's pass, setting up Walter Payton's winning touchdown, a 2-yard run with 1:12 left, as Chicago overhauled Los Angeles, which led 16-0 early.

Packers 19, Vikings 7

Terdell Middleton rushed for 135 yards and David Whitehurst passed for a pair of TDs in Green Bay's victory over Minnesota.

Stewart wins first

Pampa's high school rodeo club won first place in goat tying at Tascosa last weekend.

Miss Stewart also placed sixth in breakaway roping.

Jim Bridwell and Robbie Benyshek of Pampa took fifth in team roping.
