The materials have been sent to county headquarters and will be dis-with a final voting to move the quarters to a more spacious location in the room across the hall from the

FER FURNISHES 200 JOBS FOR TECH STUDENTS

LUBBOCK, Aug. 2.—Texas Technological college will receive federal and during the next school year which will enable approximately 200 students to earn one-third of their expenses by part-time employment.
This grant from the Federal Emergency Relief administration is a continuation of the plan of furnishing employment to needy students to carry on their college work,
and is not in the nature of a loan.
The number of jobs is determined on the basis of twelve per cent of the number of students enrolled in the college on October 15, 1933.

Such jobs will be open only to students who can clearly qualify under four heads:

Need.—The student's financial status shall be such as to make impossible his attendance at college without this aid. Th' provision will be strictly construed.

The students shall be of good character and, judged by the usual methods of determining ability employed by the college, shall possess such ability as to give assurance that they will do high grade work in college.

At least 50 per cent of the funds allotted to the college shall be paid to students who were not regularly enrolled in any college or university during January, 1934.

Jobs shall be allocated between boys and girls in proportion to the enrollment of each in the college.
The hourly rate of pay shall be such as is commonly paid by the college for the type of service rendered but not less than 30 cents an hour. No student shall work more than 30 hours in any week or more than eight hours in any day. Students shall be permitted to earn an average of $15 per month, but not to exceed $20 in any calendar month.

Forms for making application for these jobs can be obtained from the president's office, or from the office of Mr. Cecil Horne, director of student employment.

Survivor of Garibaldi's Thousand Recalls Dangers of the Expedition

By FRANCESCO REA
United Press Staff Correspondent
ROME, Aug. 2.—A tall, erect, snow white-haired and white-bearded gentleman, with steady step, firm voice and bright smile. This is the picture of Egidio Sivelli, 91 years old,
the last survivor of Garibaldi's
"Thousand." Until recently, Sivelli had a comrad in the ranks of Professor Francesco Graziadei.

The latter died here June 9, at 93, and so Sivelli is now the last living member of that legendary expedition, which has filled the hearts of many generations of Italians, and had a considerable weight in the events which led to the unification of Italy.

Sivelli was 17 when, after fleeing his home, he set his feet aboard one of the two absolute vessels, which were about to sail with the "Thousand" in the attempt to reach Sicily clandestinely, and wrest the island from the Bourbons, and declare its annexation to Italy.

If it had not been for a lad of 14, the son of a widower, who had nobody in the world to whom to entrust the boy—Sivelli would have been the youngest member of that expedition.

After the landing with the
"Thousand" in Sicily, Sivelli, through a mistake of an officer, was left with a handful of volunteers, to

3 MILLION TO BE ASKED FOR TEX. DURING SEPT.

FT. WORTH, Aug. 2.—B. E. Giesecke, chairman of the Texas relief commission, today called a meeting of the commission to draw up an appeal to the federal government to supply all of Texas' relief needs for the month of September.

It was estimated funds needed for that month would approximate three million dollars.

Giesecke called the meeting for August 13. He said a request to the government would be made because even if additional "bread" bonds were authorized now, it would take 45 days to make the money available for the intended purpose.

Yesterday Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson announced she would ask the legislature to meet in special session Aug. 27 to authorize the sale of $9,500,000 in additional relief bonds.

9-YR.-OLD BOY SAVES MOTHER FROM ATTACK

KILGORE, Aug. 2.—A 9-year-old boy today saved his mother, Mrs.
May Johnson, from attack, and possibly death, at the hands of a negro house-breaker.

The negro entered the home while
Johnson, oil-field worker, was away.
The boy awoke to find the negro holding Mrs. Johnson on the floor with his knees while he choked her with his hands. The lad took a rifle from a closet and held the muzzle against the negro's back. The negro released Mrs. Johnson and fled.

Ranger Geo. Johnson and local officers were conducting an intensive search for the negro.

HINDENBURG GERMAN IDOL DIES AT 2 A.M.

BERLIN, Aug. 2.—Adolph Hitler became sole dictator of the German people today on the death of President Von Hindenburg.

Hitler's cabinet made him president-chancellor absorbing all the powers of both offices. He has control of the powerful Reichswehr army whose members are to take an oath of unwavering loyalty to him.

Hitler thus has greater sway than any dictator on earth. He is expected to seek office for life as "Reich leader for the German nation and people". A referendum will be held for the people to ratify his ascendancy.

The president-chancellor's bold assumption of power was considered a decisive blow at potential opposition. The conviction was general that only revolution could upset him although there is no organization in Germany at present inclined to start one or strong enough to do so.

Hitler will speak to the nation
on Monday at services for Hindenburg here. Then he will fly to Neu-deck where Hindenburg will be buried Tuesday at Tanenberg, the site of historic victory over the Russians in the World war.

FAMILY AT BEDSIDE WHEN GREAT MAN PASSES AWAY

NEUDECK, East Prussia, Aug. 2.—
Hindenburg is dead.

Soldier, statesman, and the one solid rock to which Germany clung in the swirling seas of post-war change, he passed into eternity today at 9 a. m. (2 a. m. CST). Leaving his people a legacy of courage and hope which exemplified his 86 years of life.

The president died with his family
at his bedside and all Germany waiting mournfully for the inevitable.

The world awaited the news with apprehension, speculating on the effect of Adolph Hitler's ascendancy to supreme control of the German people and the German army.

Von Hindenburg had been dying for months. Uremia sapped his massive frame but to the end the hero of Tannenberg fought as he had fought all his life pitting his old age against encroaching death.

Hindenburg will be given a burial befitting a great soldier under the Tannenberg memorial here in Neu-deck which marks the spot where in August of 1914, he rolled back the Russians and saved Prussia.

Messages of condolence and sympathy poured in from all nations of the earth. Diplomats and military leaders alike characterized him as a great general, a strong leader, for peace, and a fine German patriot.

UNIVERSITY IS RECIPIENT OF VALUED GIFT

AUSTIN, Aug. 2.—One of the finest displays of petroleum production equipment in the United States will be presented to The University of Texas' department of petroleum production engineering by the Humble Oil company, according to an announcement made at the office of the board of regents this week. The total value of the gift will be between $25,000 and $50,000 and it is said that the only display which will compare with it is a similar set of equipment at the University of Oklahoma.

The board of regents of the university has voted to accept the gift, which came to the university partly as a result of the good work and efforts of F. B. Plummer, professor of petroleum production engineering.

According to J. R. Suman, vice president of the Humble Oil company proposes to select from different oil fields in the Gulf coast region a large amount of typical production equipment, including a complete production unit—derrick, draw works, drill, etc.—and a complete pumping unit. They have in mind to install at the University of Texas an exhibit which will illustrate the progress of developments in oil production methods from the earliest type of equipment used at Spindletop to the present highly developed and efficient machines. The equipment will be gathered and transported to Conroe where the Humble company has large machine shops. There they will re-condition and paint the equipment to put it in good shape and then haul it by truck to the university.

SISTER MARY'S RECIPES

BY MARY E. DAGUE

NEA Service Staff Writer
PARTICULARLY in summer are delicious and inexpensive meals possible. The appetite demands less substantial food and the markets offer vegetables and fruits at minimum prices.

Whatever is most seasonable should be the basis of the dinner. Plenty of vegetables, a little meat and a dessert—and the menu is complete.

A stuffed vegetable dinner furnishes an interesting meat flavor with little or no tax on the food allowance. It's amazing how many vegetables lend themselves to interesting concoctions with well seasoned stuffings of meat or nuts or cheese combined with bread crumbs, macaroni or rice. Cabbage, eggplant, tomatoes, green peppers, cucumbers, summer squash, potatoes and onions are attractive and of increased nourishment when served stuffed and baked.

Stuffed Eggplant

One eggplant, 1 cup left-over meat or fish, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tomatoes, 1 1-2 cups bread crumbs, 1-2 teaspoon minced onion.

Cut eggplant in half. Cook in boiling salted water until tender but not soft. Remove center, leaving as thin a shell as possible without danger of breaking, and chop flesh. Add meat, salt, pepper, tomatoes which have been peeled and coarsely chopped, minced onion, 1 cup bread crumbs and butter which has been melted. Mix lightly and moisten with one or two tablespoons hot water if necessary, but remember the tomatoes will furnish considerable moisture. Fill shells with mixture, cover with remaining crumbs

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Chilled apple sauce, cereal, cream, crisp broiled bacon, muffins, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON: Hot bouillon, summer vegetable salad, baking powder biscuit with raspberry jam, milk, tea.

DINNER: Fruit cup, stuffed eggplant, creamed radishes, pineapple and cabbage salad with pimento dressing, pears with chocolate sauce, milk, coffee.

and dot with bits of butter. Put into a buttered dish and bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.).

Stuffed Cucumbers

Two large cucumbers, 1 cup cooked fish, 1-2 cup cooked mushrooms, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1-8 teaspoon celery seed, milk to make moist.

Pare cucumbers and cut in halves lengthwise. Scoop out seeds and sprinkle inside with salt. Invert and let stand ten minutes. Combine rice, mushrooms, melted butter, parsley, salt, pepper and celery seed and add milk enough to make mixture moist. Serve with hot carrots. Fill cucumbers with mixture and cover with buttered crumbs. Put into a buttered baking dish, add a few tablespoons water and bake in a moderate oven for forty-five minutes, until cucumbers are tender. Serve with tomato sauce.

You can stuff and bake carrots, too. Bake them covered until tender, then remove the cover and brown the tops of the stuffings.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Anyone who wants to know what becomes of famous men should come here and take a look.

Most of them seem to be working in the government now. Two or three already are more celebrated than their dads. Just as a far from complete list—

Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace has the job his father once had in a Republican administration. Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau's father was Wilson's ambassador to Turkey.

Big, youthful Charles Elliot, secretary of the National Planning Board, and Thomas Elliot, a lawyer in one of the emergency agencies, are sons of Harvard's great former president, Charles Eliot, enthusiastic New Dealer who works with the National Emergency Council and helped develop the housing program, is the son of the inventor.

Young Franklin K. Lane, Jr., whose dad was secretary of the interior, has been named to the new air policy board. Dr. Worth B. Daniels, son of Ambassador-to-Mexico Josephus, is on the local board of Public Welfare. The father of Director Joseph H. Choate, Jr., of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration was ambassador to Britain for McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt.

In NRA you find young, blond Robert Straus, son of the ambassador to France, holding a high executive post alongside that of Kilbourne Johnston, son of General Johnston himself. The late E. H. Clegg, who provided the blueprint for the current law, stood until cool and then chill for several hours. Serve with or without a garnish of whipped cream.

Harriman Rumsey of the Consumers Advisory Board.

In the Senate there are Bennett Champ Clark and Robert M. La Follette.

PERHAPS you've heard those erroneous backstairs yarns that the administration is overladen with Jews. Their existence gives point to the sad story of a legal chief in one of the bigger emergency agencies, himself a Jew, and an Irish Catholic subordinate who heads one of his sections and has selected 13 Jews for his staff of 18.

Jews are a small minority in other sections. The chief keeps reminding them of the Irishman, sometimes as follows:

"This 'Palestine football team' of yours looks like hell! Hasn't the Catholic church ever produced any good lawyers you could hire? It must have—or it wouldn't have lasted so long."

But this kidding does no good. The section head is a grim hater of racial and religious prejudice and insists on showing it—even if that does slightly embarrass the boss.

THE Russian palace on Sixteenth street never seems to run out of caviar, vodka and various other delicacies which help make its functions the best among those of embassies here. Somebody asked little Ambassador Troyanovsky what the czar and his family did. The diplomat replied that caviar and vodka were not luxuries in Russia, that his country inherited an embassy and had to fix it up, that Russians loved beautiful places and things and hoped to make them available to all the Russian people. BOOKS AND SLIDES

NEW YORK.—Henry Louis Gehrig, now rolling toward his 145th consecutive game, makes all other baseball iron men appear to have been made of putty.

The best record was Everett Scott's 1307. Gehrig's may never be broken. Nothing stops the Yankee first baseman. He has played with broken and chipped bones, bad tonsils and colds, and bounced right back after being knocked out by pitched balls.

The other day in Detroit (knows!) His speech had been right down their alley. He had by could whip hand as ship-valued upon Joe McCarthy to permit him to take one turn—his first as a leadoff man—and singled to launch a four-run rally.

Gehrig spent the following afternoon "bunting" balls against the left field fence.

triples Follow Kayo

HUNGRY Lou performed for several weeks this season with the bone of his big toe chipped. Knocked unconscious for 19 minutes by a pitched ball in an exhibition game at Norfolk, he banged out three triples the next day at the Yankee Stadium.

Five minutes were required to bring Gehrig to when Earl Whitehill beamed him in 1933, but he finished the contest.

Gehrig was commencing to believe that he was to go on and on without another mishap of any kind when that happened, for he slipped through the 1931 and '32 campaigns without a scratch.

Handicapped to .379

GEHRIG suffered most in preserving his phenomenal record for durability in 1930, when he chipped a bone in his left elbow in the first game of the grind, and played throughout the entire season with a sore arm. To make matters worse, he broke the little finger of his right hand in the last two weeks.

The throbbing whip and proud pinky handicapped the husky German to such an extent that he hit only .379. It was just as well for enemy pitchers that he wasn't all in one piece.

Gehrig submitted to two operations that fall. The "mice" were removed from his precious throwing arm, and an attempt was made to straighten the little finger. The latter remains crooked, and Hungry Lou stuck in there throughout 1929 with bad tonsils, which he lost no time in losing with the sound of the closing gong.

Yanked for Merkle

GEHRIG hurt his right shoulder badly in bumping into the shade of the Boston dugout in chasing a foul in 1926, and had to be treated by a physician daily to remain in the thick of things in July, 1927.

Gehrig has participated in every game played by the New York club since the late Miller Huggins assigned him to first base in June, 1925.

"The start of my record came close to being held up late that season," beams Hungry Lou. "Hug was not yet convinced that I could hit left-handers, so started Fred Merkle against Whitehill in Detroit. But I got in when a right-hander finished for the Tigers."

"I blessed right-handers in my early days. Now I blast both right and left-handers."

Strike Dooms Cattle by Hundreds

With cattle, sheep, and hogs dying of hunger and thirst by hundreds in pens of the Chicago stockyards, pickets of 800 strikers of the stock handlers' union, demanding wage increases, are shown here at the yards' main entrance, keeping close guard and preventing relief measures. Demand for immediate U. S. intervention was made, as violence halted efforts to feed and

CARD OF THANKS

There are many things that one can feel and say
after an election, but none as sincere as the words:
"Thank You!" You have shown by your vote that you have approved of my serving you as your District Attorney, and at the same time have impressed upon me more fully the duty I owe Eastland County in seeing that the affairs of this office are carried out efficiently and diligently, and that the offenders are brought before the courts. I take this means of extending to all, whether they voted for me or not, my wholehearted cooperation, and I am sure that the people will help me accordingly. I pledge you faithful service, and want to express my grateful appreciation.

GRADY OWEN

Mrs. Cooper Appreciates Splendid Vote Received

To the Voters of Eastland County:

I wish to express to you my grateful appreciation for your splendid support given me in the July 28 primaries, which enabled me to be one of the two to contest the election in the August Run-off election. I am appealing to you for your continued support and pledge you a faithful discharge of the duties of the office of Treasurer of Eastland County should I be nominated and elected to the office. My one aim is to serve the county in a manner that will reflect credit upon my administration of the office, thereby proving myself worthy of the confidence you have reposed in me by your splendid support.

Sincerely,

Mrs. (Frances) Thornton Cooper

WHY NOT THE LAWYER?

"Why not censor the lawyers?" asks the Cleburne Times-Review, in answer to a resolution adopted by New York attorneys to urge the national bar association to support censorship of the press in dealing with criminal cases.

The New York attorneys proposed that a censorship be enforced on sordid details of crime stories and alleged tendencies to try cases in the papers, with citations for contempt of court as the punishment for violation of censorship.

"We think the lawyers should attend to their own failings before trying to go around and tell newspapers what to do," the Times-Review said.

"The lawyers must remember that they are the ones responsible for the filthy stuff coming out in evidence. Many times their case rests on just how black they can paint the dead persons or the one who claims to be wronged."

"A contemporary says he thinks that part of the oath taken by a witness to 'tell the whole truth' should be stricken out. We agree with him. A witness can't tell the whole truth. Many lawyers won't let him. They only want their side told."

"The newspapers do what they can to tell the whole truth and give both sides of the question. Many lawyers certainly do not."

"The lawyers should attend to their own affairs and let the newspapers take care of the business."

The editorial was under the caption "Why Not Censor the Lawyers."

TOM CONNALLY GIVEN ANOTHER TERM

Sen. Tom Connally has been given another term of six years by the democratic voters of Texas. His majority may go beyond the 150,000 mark. It was a remarkable campaign in the closing days of the battle for ballots. Connally started late but he won heavily when the showdown came. Joseph Weldon Bailey, Jr., had made a speaking campaign covering the vast Southwestern empire. In his race for congressman-at-large young Bailey overwhelmed Cyclone Davis and won by the largest majority of all the winners who contended for the three seats offered as the prizes in the political contests of two years ago.

Long before the current results had been announced Bailey wired his congratulations to the winner, and thanked the democrats of Texas who had cast their ballots for him in his unsuccessful race for the seat once held by his distinguished father in what was known in other days as "the American House of Lords." It was a battle of the "ins" largely against the "outs," but Connally swept the field and will continue to be the junior senator in coming time—unless Morris Sheppard should be voted out in 1936.

GOV. OLE OLSON.

Acting Gov. Ole Olson of North Dakota is a dirt farmer. He is the creation of the supreme court of North Dakota. He is just as spectacular as Bill Murray ever dared to be in his earlier years of swinging the big club of power. This North Dakota dirt farmer statesman has proclaimed a moratorium on every form of debt where the debtor shows inability to pay. It is said to be the most sweeping moratorium order ever issued by the governor of an American commonwealth. Olson's proclamation is designed "to protect the farmer against foreclosure, the small business men, homeowners and extends to a suspension of payment on conditional sales contract. Provision is made for application to the courts for any creditor "who feels himself injured."

Nothing remarkable about the Olson program. There are many candidates for office in Texas "who beat Olson to the plan." They have proclaimed from the housetops and in the highways and byways a similar program to that announced by the North Dakota dirt farmer and big ace, temporarily at least, of the non-partisans in the North Dakota state.

IOWA DEMOCRATS

Iowa democrats held their state convention in Des Moines. They endorsed the Roosevelt recovery program. They pledged their unqualified support "in the valiant fight he is making to secure a more equitable distribution of the national income." They commended the state congressional delegation for the support of the recovery program. They further commended the national administration for making corn loans possible. They resolved that agriculture should be placed on a parity with other national industries and "that the farmer is entitled to cost of production plus a reasonable profit."

Iowa is one of the great agricultural states of America. Iowa is one of the great corn and hog producing states. Iowa is one of the great cattle-for-the-market-fattening states. It appears the Iowa democrats and the republican converts of 1932 are going all the road for F. D. R. and his New Deal legislation. Well, the real showdown will come in November, and the ballots will tell the story.

28,024,000 Acres of Cotton in United States; Smallest Acreage Since 1905

One important point in the cotton situation has been cleared up during the last month, and that is the acreage planted to cotton in the United States, according to Dr. A. B. Cox, director of the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research in his monthly report on the cotton situation. According to the Federal Crop Reporting Board the number of acres in cotton June 1 was 28,024,000. This is the smallest acreage planted to cotton in the United States since 1905.

"The big if in the cotton situation now is, what will the government's estimate of yield be August 8?" Dr. Cox explained. Consensus of opinion now is that the crop will be under ten million bales and some place it as low as 8 1-2 million. The prospective low yield is due partly to excessive moisture in some eastern states, especially North Carolina and Alabama, but more especially to one of the severest droughts and periods of high temperatures in Texas and Oklahoma in the history of these states.

"All information coming in from foreign countries confirms earlier indications that foreign cotton-producing countries are taking advantage of United States forced reduction of acreage to increase their acreage. As a result, world acreage will be increased this year over last."

Prospective shorter supplies of American cotton continues to widen the parity between American mid-land and No. 1 Comoro. Two years ago the price of No. 1 Comoro was about 90 per cent of the price of American middling in Liverpool. Last year it declined to about 80 per cent, and now it is about 70 per cent. This increasing spread between the price of American cotton and foreign growth, especially Indian and Egyptian, is causing widespread substitution of other growths for American cotton. This is especially true in the Orient where Indian is taking the place of American cotton.

"In other words, 'Uncle Sam' again finds himself playing Santa Claus to the other countries of the world because other growths of cotton can be substituted for American. In 1929-30 he held millions of bales of cotton to dispose of their cotton at good prices. Last year and this he has assumed full responsibility for reducing the world's supply of cotton, and the process has given the rest of the world an opportunity to sell greatly increased supplies at advancing prices."

"It is generally admitted that the 1929-30 program proved a boom-rang to the cotton growers. The burning question now is, can the United States prevent the American cotton farmers from paying dearly for the temporary relief in the way of some prices advance and rental payments gained through forced reduction of cotton production? To date no cotton policy has been advanced to accomplish this most desired objective."

In his monthly balance sheet of cotton supplies, Dr. Cox showed that there were, on July 1, 8,403,000 bales of cotton in the United States compared with 9,216,000 June 1; 9,241,000 July 1 last year; and 10,239,000 bales two years ago. Stocks in European ports and afloat to Europe of American cotton totaled 1,273,000 bales on June 29 this year compared with 1,443,000 a year ago, or a decline of 370,000 bales. There has thus been a decline in the balance of cotton in the United States and afloat to European ports of 1,208,000 bales since July 1 last year.

"Based on average relations between changes in the supply should cause an advance in the index price of about 345 points over the price last year," he explained. "When the index price is converted to present price levels and corrected for the spinner's margin, the indicated price for New Orleans Middling spot cotton is above 15 cents. The price calculations based on percentage change indicate a price of 14.41 cents."

SOPHIE KERR'S SUPERB LOVE STORY "STAY OUT OF MY LIFE!"

By Sophie Kerr

BEGIN HERE TODAY
JANE KERRY comes to New York determined to show her town, Marburg, and especially AMY JACKSON, that she can make a success of her life. Amy has been her best friend until now. AMY JACKSON broke the engagement. Jane had forced upon him and married Amy.

In New York Jane obtains a position in a real estate office and soon is making a large income. She has an affair with ROBERT THORPE, a married man, and when he offers to bear the expense of their child she contemptuously dismisses him. Amy takes the baby, named NANCY, promising never to reveal its parentage.

When America enters the World War Howard enlists in the aviation corps and goes to a training camp in Texas. His mother comes to stay with Amy and little NANCY. Amy confides to MARY JACKSON that she is expecting a child of her own.

Months pass and Amy's son is born. Howard arrives home for a week's leave.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXXVII

HOWARD felt better next morning though he was still sniffling and shivery and exasperated by it. "Such a dumb thing to happen—I didn't realize how chilly it was outside yesterday. I'll buy me a dozen extra handkerchiefs before I get on the train and throw them away."

"And do take care of yourself, Howard," begged Amy. "When you get to this new camp don't try to do too much until you're over this. Stay in your quarters and keep warm. Miss Terry says that's the best thing to do. And don't write me any letters saying you're all over it unless you are!"

He telegraphed when he reached the camp that his cold was better, that he had mountains of work, that there was no likelihood of overseas orders immediately.

Miss Terry had packed her uniforms and departed. Amy was almost at her full strength. Nancy was home again. Howard Second was a pound and a half heavier, and the early April sunshine was bringing a thin promise of spring in Marburg. In New York Jane Terry was sitting in her office, frowning over a bill of costs for repairs in a building under her management, when Mrs. Andrews came in agitatedly to say that there was an aviation officer outside who "seems to be sick or something."

He's acting very strangely," behind her, flushed and staring, Howard Jackson staggered and almost fell on the threshold.

"Jane," he stammered, "I'm very sick. My side, it struck me like a knife—in the street. And my head—" he caught at her desk for support, but his hands slipped and he collapsed before it. The two women, panic-stricken, tried to lift him into a chair, but he was too far gone. They managed to straighten him, but he lay insensible on the floor.

"He's burning up with fever!" said Mrs. Andrews. "I'd better notify the military authorities, or the police—they'll get him to a hospital."

Jane was on the floor beside him, holding his head. "You order a private ambulance," she said violently. "I'll take him to my apartment and call a doctor there." Then, as she met Mrs. Andrews' blank astonishment, she added: "The hospitals are such death-traps—and he's a relation—a distant cousin."

In the ambulance she held him again. Once he opened his eyes and, seeing her, tried to explain, muttering, drawing his breath hard. "Phone the camp, please—don't let Amy know I'm so sick—that cold—hung on—and hung on—" and then his words became delirium.

How he had found her she did not know or care. She had him now and in the short ambulance ride she had time to map her course. How lavishly, how tenderly she would take care of him, nurse him back to health and strength. And he would be so grateful. . . . they would begin all over again. He would come back to her. . . . she built it up into a satisfactory drama, herself the gracious, radiant heroine.

He did not return to consciousness while they took him into her apartment, undressed him and got him into her own bed, and she began to be more and more alarmed about him. It was hard to find doctors, but at last one came, a dour man who at first examined with horror, but also with authority. "This man's got pneumonia, one of the worst types, I should say. He's pretty far gone, too. I'll order oxygen and try to find you a good nurse, but they're scarce as sin. You ought to have two or three—"

"Get everything you need. The money doesn't matter," broke in Jane.

"—but even then—I don't believe he's got a chance—not if it's Number Three. You'd better notify his superior officers right away—"

As she listened to him her spanned drama of rescue and reconciliation crashed in panic. As the doctor hung up the phone she clutched his arm. "Do you really mean—that he's going to—to die—that he hasn't a chance?"

He looked at her with a little more humanity. "He cannot live unless by some miracle—four days, taken and it's not true—I'm mistaken and it's not true—"

"But it's not Number Three," Jane cried. "You must make him live!—I tell you, it can't be, that he should die—like that—"

"You won't help him by making a scene," he replied roughly. "Be quiet. We've got to work."

As she stared, still combative, the understanding of what she had done rushed over her. She hung up her arms in a frantic unwillingly expressed her complete character.

"Oh, my God," she cried. "What nuisance have I wished on myself!" It was Jane soon discovered far worse than she could ever have imagined. The picture of herself as a ministering angel faded in the small of disinfectants, the dismal paraphernalia of a hospital room superimposed on a dead living place nurses who used as an errand girl and demanded the impossible, from Howard's blunt color told her nastily that if she had her head and taken him to a proper place he might have died. While Howard himself lay in the oxygen tent and fought for breath. TO THE VOTERS OF CISCO AND EASTLAND COUNTY

I am thankful from the depths of my heart for the splendid vote that Cisco and surrounding country gave me in the election Saturday. A last report was circulated in every voting box in the county that I had no chance to be elected, that I was opposed to the common schools and that my home people would not support me. Such a report, circulated too late for people to investigate, led too late for people to vote. The report came to Cisco early Saturday morning, but it had no effect on the people of my home box. The vote in Cisco indicated that the report was false and untrue and given for no other purpose than to get votes. I am not opposed to the rural schools, and reports to that effect are given out by people who are looking for votes. I am in favor of the people having their say about their schools and being given a chance to build up their schools instead of tearing them down. Some people misunderstood my idea about placing the children above the 5th grade out of the small schools. My idea in this statement is simply to place the children in the upper grades in crowded schools where the teacher is unable to teach all in the larger school. It is not my plan to require this in all schools but only in those schools where conditions demand some grouping. If a school is able to teach these upper grades, permit them to do so.

I am very happy indeed to be in the finals in this race and I hope that each of my friends will become active from now until and on election day to off set any last minute campaign rumor such as was circulated the last days before election in the first primary. I want to again thank my friend from the depths of my heart for the wholehearted support given me last Saturday—Adv.

$65,000 Villa Will Become Conservatory

EDINBURG, Tex., Aug. 2—The $65,000 Italian villa built by the late "millionaire sheriff" A. Y. Baker of Hidalgo county during the height of his power is expected to become a conservatory of music under direction of Edinburg Junior college, it was announced here.

Members of the conservatory faculty were announced by R. P. Ward, president of the college, and will include Dr. F. W. Chase, who will instruct in piano, organ and music theory; Ruth M. Owings, speech and dramatics; Henri Piller, violin; and Ivar Skougard, voice.

Edinburg consolidated independent school district was awarded the palatial and famous "House that the Sheriff Built" as the result of lengthy litigation involving the Baker estate. Mrs. Lena S. Baker, the widow, and the now defunct Edinburg State Bank & Trust company, county depository, while Baker was in power.

In July, 1932, Judge Fred Bennett of the 93rd civil district court entered an agreed judgment between all parties in possession of the school district. The title was clouded at the time by an attachment by the United States government, which sought to satisfy its claims against the Baker estate for $131,000 in allegedly unpaid income tax. At last reports the government had offered to accept $500 for its interest in the property.

"The House That the Sheriff Built" is one of the best known in South Texas. Built in 1930 while the late sheriff and Mrs. Baker were touring Europe, part of its luxurious furnishings came from the continent. The villa occupies an entire city block at the south edge of Edinburg.

The home is finished with tan stucco and is trimmed with ornamental white stone. The roof is of red tile.

After the death of Sheriff Baker, just before the 1930 elections wiped his political organization from power, the family moved to San Antonio, leaving the mansion in the hands of a caretaker.

Chi Lad is Youngest Manager in Pro B.B.

MONESSEN, Pa., Aug. 2—A Chicago youth who isn't old enough to vote, but has two years of organized baseball experience, probably is the youngest manager in professional baseball.

He is Wally Laskowski, 20, manager and catcher of the Monessen Indians of the newly organized Pennsylvania State association, a six-team league.

Laskowski says he was born May 6, 1914. He made his start in baseball by captaining the Board of Education entry in the Chicago playground league—played first base as his team won the championship—1929, played first for the Chicago American Legion nine. Became a catcher in 1930, playing for Lake View high school; was a regular in his freshman year. Transferred to Lane Tech in 1931 and helped win the scholastic championship of Chicago. Tried out with Galveston in the Texas league in 1932. Too green, the Texas league, and he was shipped to the Waterloo team of the Mississippi Valley league. Sold to Peoria in the same league. Caught in 1935 games batted 296. This year was with Toledo in the American association. Toledo sent him to Zanesville, of the Middle Atlantic league, when the club needed a catcher. Manager Buzz Wetzel asked him if he wanted to manage Monessen before the new Pennsylvania league opened. He did.

Communist Hall Wrecked in Wake of Strike

As the general strike crisis subsided, groups of furious men, reportedly including union strikers and their sympathizers, ransacked San Francisco raiding and wrecking Communist headquarters and halls. The barred arrangement at the rear of this hall is a baseball rack like those at carnivals, where Communists threw baseballs at figures representing William Green, A. F. of L. chief, Ed Vandeleur, head of the San Francisco Central Labor Council, Ed McGrady, federal conciliator, and others.

Ft. Worth Woman Says Feet of "Big Foot" Wallace, Indian Fighter, Were Not Big

FORT WORTH, Aug. 2—The feet, famous in Texas annals, enamored by his own account of a picturesque but bloody fight with an Indian of equal bulky size.

In 1842 Wallace was with a part of the Frontier Battalion hunting Indians on the head waters of the Llano river. One evening the smoke of an Indian camp was sighted. Wallace obtained permission of the captain to scout the camp.

Up two hours before dawn the next day, Wallace was making his way alone up a narrow canyon. Head bent low, he rounded a corner in the canyon and bumped heads with an Indian evidently bent on scouting the Frontier Battalion.

In the narrowness of the canyon, their guns were useless. They engaged in a hand-to-hand combat, each trying to get to his knife. The Indian was Wallace's equal in stature. His body was covered with grease, giving him a decided advantage.

Finally Wallace knocked him against a canyon wall. The Indians head struck an obtruding rock and for an instant he was dazed. Wallace thrust his knife into the Indian.

"The moment he felt the cold steel, he threw me off as if I had been a 10-year-old-boy," Wallace wrote years after the incident. "He sprang upon me before I could rise and drew his own knife."

"I tell you boys, I often see that Indian in my dreams, grappling me by the throat with his left hand, his glittering butcher knife raised in his right, his two fierce eyes gleaming like a panther's in the dark."

The Indian swung his knife. It whistled past Wallace's ear. The big Indian slumped forward with the knife-thrust, a death dealing blow. But the blood had blinded the Indian. His aim was amiss and the knife sank in the ground beside Wallace's head.

"I threw him off of me and he tumbled to the bottom of the canyon, stone dead," Wallace wrote. "I looked at him for some time and said to myself: 'Well, old fellow, you made a good fight and if luck had been with you, you would have taken my sign. I'm going to give you a decent burial."

Then Wallace did a thing rare to the frontier. He buried the Indian.

AUSTIN, Aug. 2 — C. C. McDonald, third man in the last democratic primary, proposed here Tuesday that all his supporters stand together in the runoff primary, August 25, and swing the election to their choice between Allred and Hunter.

"I have a personal choice in the runoff," he said, "but I will surrender it if necessary to vote with my supporters in order that we may all stand together, for we hold the balance of power and can elect either one. I will not attempt to dictate to my supporters but will let them dictate to me."

FER FURNISHES 200 JOBS FOR TECH STUDENTS

LUBBOCK, Aug. 2 — Texas Technological college will receive federal aid during the next school year which will enable approximately 200 students to earn one-third of their expenses by part-time employment. This grant from the Federal Emergency Relief administration is a continuation of the plan of furnishing employment to enable needy students to carry on their college work, and is not in the nature of a loan. The number of jobs is determined on the basis of twelve per cent of the number of students enrolled in the college on October 15, 1933.

Such jobs will be open only to students who can clearly qualify under four heads:

Need—The student's financial status shall be such as to make impossible his attendance at college without this aid. This provision will be strictly construed.

The student shall be of good character and, judged by the usual methods of determining ability employed by the college, shall possess such ability as to give assurance that they will do high grade work in college.

At least 50 per cent of the funds allotted to the college shall be paid to students who were not regularly enrolled in any college or university during January, 1934.

Jobs shall be allocated between boys and girls in proportion to the enrollment of each in the college. The hourly rate of pay shall be such as is commonly paid by the college for the type of service rendered but not less than 30 cents an hour. No student shall work more than 30 hours in any week or more than eight hours in any day. Students shall be permitted to earn an average of $15 per month, but not to exceed $20 in any calendar month.

Forms for making application for these jobs can be obtained from the president's office, or from the office of Mr. C. H. Horne, director of student employment.

Survivor of Garibaldi's Thousand Recalls Dangers of the Expedition

By FRANCESCO REA
United Press Staff Correspondent
ROME, Aug. 2 — A tall, erect, snow white-haired and white-bearded gentleman, with steady step, firm voice and bright smile, he was the picture of Egidio Sivelli, 91 years old, the last survivor of Garibaldi's "Thousand." Until recently, Sivelli had a comrad in the person of Professor Francesco Grandi.

The latter died here June 9, at 93, and Sivelli is now the last living member of the legendary expedition, which has thrilled the hearts of many generations of Italians, and had a considerable weight in the events which led to the unification of Italy.

Sivelli was 17 when, after fleeing his home, he set his foot aboard one of the two obsolete vessels which were about to sail with the "Thousand" in Sicily. He went clandestinely, and wrest the island from the Bourbons, and declare its annexation to Italy.

If it had not been for a lad of 14, the son of a widower, who had nobody in the world to whom to entrust the boy—Sivelli would have been the youngest member of that expedition.

After the landing with the "Thousand" in Sicily, Sivelli, through a mistake of an officer, was led with a handful of volunteers, to a position which was supposed to have been evacuated by the Bourbon soldiers.

"We were received," said Sivelli in a recent conversation, "with a rifle volley which made a few casualties. We had to crawl on our backs through the furrows of a tilled field to escape more lead. I narrowly missed a bullet in the face. This was my baptism of fire."

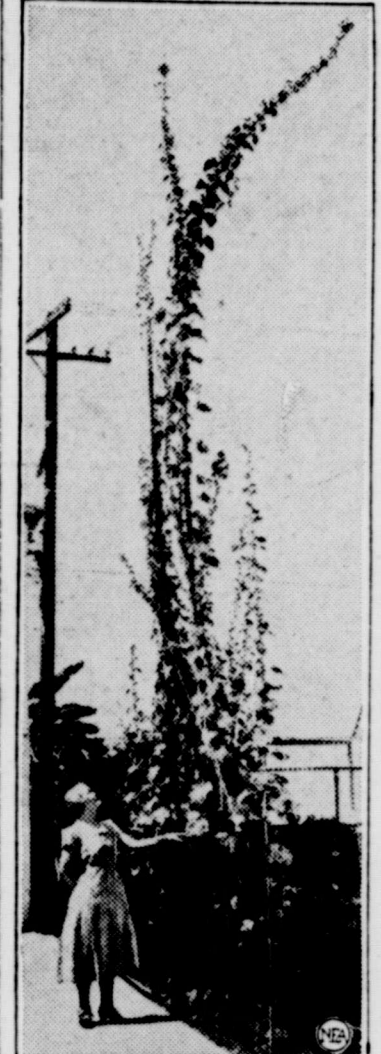

Sivelli took part in all the encounters in which Garibaldi engaged the "enemy" in Sicily, Calabria, and in the vicinity of Naples, especially the Volturro river battle, and returned to his hometown of Genoa when the Liberator gave up fighting and chose to live as a farmer in the island of Capraia.

Sivelli rushed to Capraia when he heard that Garibaldi was passing away, and was one of the few survivors of the "Thousand" who carried on their shoulders the coffin from the Liberator's house to the small piece of land nearby, which he had chosen as his burial place.

Until a few years ago he ran a small filigree plant, which he had inherited from his father and which he turned to his children. The business had been thriving until the depression set in.

3 MILLION TO BE ASKED FOR TEX. DURING SEPT.

FT. WORTH, Aug. 2 — B. E. Giesecke, chairman of the Texas relief commission, today called a meeting of the commission to draw up an appeal to the federal government to supply all of Texas' relief needs for the month of September.

It was estimated funds needed for that month would approximate three million dollars.

Giesecke called the meeting for August 13. He said a request to the government would be made because even if additional "bread" bonds were authorized now, it would take 45 days to make the money available for the intended purpose.

Yesterday Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson announced she would ask the legislature to meet in special session Aug. 27 to authorize the sale of $9,500,000 in additional relief bonds.

The lad took a rifle from a closet and held the muzzle against the negro's back. The negro released Mrs. Johnson and fled.

Ranger Geo. Johnson and local officers were conducting an intensive search for the negro.

HINDENBURG, GERMAN IDOL, DIES AT 2 A. M.

BERLIN, Aug. 2 — Adolf Hitler became sole dictator of the German people today on the death of President Von Hindenburg.

Hitler's cabinet made him president-chancellor absorbing all the powers of both offices. He has control of the powerful Reichswehr army whose members are to take an oath of unwavering loyalty to him.

Hitler thus has greater sway than any dictator on earth. He is expected to seek office for life as "Reich leader for the German nation and people". A referendum will be held for the people to ratify his ascendancy.

The president-chancellor's bold assumption of power was considered a decisive blow at potential opposition. The conviction was general that only revolution could upset him although there is no organization in Germany at present inclined to start one or strong enough to do so.

Hitler will speak to the nation on Monday at services for Hindenburg here. Then he will fly to Neu-Deck where Hindenburg will be buried Tuesday at Tannenberg, the site of historic victory over the Russians in the World war.

FAMILY AT BEDSIDE WHEN GREAT MAN PASSES AWAY

NEUDECK, East Prussia, Aug. 2 — Hindenburg is dead.

Soldier, statesman, and the one solid rock which Germany clung to in the swirling seas of post-war change, he passed into eternity today at 9 a. m. (2 a. m. CST). Leaving his people a legacy of courage and hope which exemplified his 86 years of life.

The president died with his family at his bedside and all Germany waiting mournfully for the inevitable.

The world awaited the news with apprehension speculating on the effect of Adolf Hitler's ascendancy to supreme control of the German people and the German army.

Von Hindenburg had been dying for months. Uremia sapped his massive frame but to the end the hero of Tannenberg fought, as he had fought all his life pitting his old age against encroaching death.

Hindenburg will be given a burial befitting a great soldier under the Tannenberg memorial here in Neu-Deck which marks the spot where in August of 1914, he rolled back the Russians and saved Prussia.

Messages of condolence and sympathy poured in from all nations of the earth. Diplomats and military leaders alike characterized him as a great general a strong leader for peace, and a fine German patriot.

TO THE VOTERS OF CISCO AND EASTLAND COUNTY

I am thankful from the depths of my heart for the splendid vote that Cisco and surrounding country gave me in the election Saturday. A last report was circulated in every voting box in the county that I had no chance to be elected, that I was opposed to the common schools and that my home people would not support me. Such a report, circulated too late for people to investigate, lost hundreds of votes for me. The report came to Cisco early Saturday morning, but it had no effect on the people of my home town. The vote in Cisco indicated that the report was false and untrue and given for no other purpose than to get votes. I am not opposed to the rural schools, and reports to that effect are given out by people who are looking for votes. I am in favor of the people having their say about their schools and being given a chance to build up their schools instead of tearing them down. Some people misunderstood my idea about placing the children above the 5th grade out of the small schools. My idea in this statement is simply to place the children in the upper grades in crowded schools where the teacher is unable to teach all in the larger school. It is not my plan to require this in all schools but only in those schools where conditions demand some grouping. If a school is able to teach these upper grades, permit them to do so.

I am very happy indeed to be in the finals in this race and I hope that each of my friends will become active from now until and on election day to off set any last minute campaign rumor such as was circulated the last days before election in the first primary. I want to again thank my friend from the depth of my heart for the wholehearted support given me last Saturday—Adv.

$65,000 Villa Will Become Conservatory

EDINBURG, Tex., Aug. 2—The $65,000 Italian villa built by the late "millionaire sheriff" A. Y. Baker of Hidalgo county during the height of his power is expected to become a conservatory of music under direction of Edinburg Junior college, it was announced here.

Members of the conservatory faculty were announced by R. P. Ward, president of the college, and will include Dr. F. W. Chase, who will instruct in piano, organ and music theory; Ruth M. Owings, speech and dramatics; Henri Piller, violin; and Ivar Skougard, voice.

Edinburg consolidated independent school district was awarded the palatial and famous "House that the Sheriff Built" as the result of lengthy litigation involving the Baker estate. Mrs. Lena S. Baker, the widow, and the now defunct Edinburg State Bank & Trust company, county depository, while Baker was in power.

In July, 1932, Judge Fred Bennett of the 93rd civil district court entered an agreed judgment between all parties in the litigation placing the mansion in possession of the school district. The title was clouded at the time by an attachment by the United States government, which sought to satisfy its claims against the Baker estate for $131,900 in allegedly unpaid income tax. At last reports the government had offered to accept $500 for its interest in the property.

"The House That the Sheriff Built" is one of the best known in South Texas. Built in 1930 while the late sheriff and Mrs. Baker were touring Europe, part of its luxurious furnishings came from the continent. The villa occupies an entire city block at the south edge of Edinburg.

The home is finished with tan stucco and is trimmed with ornamental white stone. The roof is of red tile.

After the death of Sheriff Baker, just before the 1930 elections wiped his political organization from power, the family moved to San Antonio, leaving the mansion in the hands of a caretaker.

Chi Lad is Youngest Manager in Pro B.B.

MONESSEN, Pa., Aug. 2—A Chicago youth who isn't old enough to vote, but has two years of organized baseball experience, probably is the youngest manager in professional baseball.

He is Wally Laskowski, 20, manager and catcher of the Monessen Indians of the newly organized Pennsylvania State association, a six-team league.

Laskowski says he was born May 6, 1914. He made his start in baseball by captaining the Board of Education entry in the Chicago playground league—played first base as his team won the championship—1929, played first for the Chicago American Legion nine. Became a catcher in 1930, playing for Lake View high school; was a regular in his freshman year. Transferred to Lane Tech in 1931 and helped win the scholastic championship of Chicago. Tried out with Galveston in the Texas league. In 1932, too green, was the verdict, and he was shipped to the Waterloo team of the Mississippi Valley league. Sold to Peoria in the same league. Caught in 105 games batted 236. This year was with Toledo in the American association. Toledo sent him to Zanesville, of the Middle Atlantic league, when the club needed a catcher. Manager Buzz Weizel asked him if he wanted to manage Monessen before the new Pennsylvania league opened. He did.

Communist Hall Wrecked in Wake of Strike

As the general strike crisis subsided, groups of furious men, reportedly including union strikers and their sympathizers, ranged through San Francisco raiding and wrecking Communist headquarters and halls. The barred arrangement at the rear of this hall is a baseball rack like those at carnivals, where Communists threw baseballs at figures representing William Green, A. F. of L. chief, Ed Vandeleur, head of the San Francisco Central Labor Council, Ed McGrady, federal conciliator, and others.

Ft. Worth Woman Says Feet of "Big Foot" Wallace, Indian Fighter, Were Not Big

FORT WORTH, Aug. 2—The feet of Big Foot Wallace, famous Texas Indian fighter, were not big, according to Mrs. Annie Grimes of Fort Worth, who knew Wallace.

Popular conception for nearly a century has credited the big fighter, whose battle with an Indian in a west Texas canyon is a gem of Texas history, with wearing shoes size 14.

"Big Foot used to visit in our home a great deal and his feet really were very small for so tall a man," Mrs. Grimes said. Mrs. Grimes is the widow of Ranger Lieut. A. C. Grimes, who served in the old Frontier Battalion.

There are two conflicting stories of how Big Foot got the name. Mrs. Grimes said that Big Foot, once explained to her how he came by it. Down near Austin an Indian with record-breaking feet was killed. In some way Wallace was given credit for the deed. Afterward he was labeled "Big Foot."

Another oft-told explanation is that Wallace was captured by Mexicans during the War of Texas Independence. He drew a white bean and was spared facing a firing squad. He was sent to Mexico City as a prisoner. There were no shoes in the city large enough for him, so he had to go barefoot until a pair was constructed.

Regardless of how Big Foot obtained the title, it is one of the most famous in Texas annals, enamored by his own account of a picturesque but bloody fight with an Indian of equal bulky size.

In 1842 Wallace was with a part of the Frontier Battalion hunting Indians on the head waters of the Llano river. One evening the smoke of an Indian camp was sighted. Wallace obtained permission of the captain to scout the camp.

Up two hours before dawn the next day, Wallace was making his way alone up a narrow canyon. Head bent low, he rounded a corner in the canyon and bumped heads with an Indian evidently bent on scouting the Frontier Battalion.

In the narrowness of the canyon, their guns were useless. They engaged in a hand-to-hand combat, each trying to get to his knife. The Indian was Wallace's equal in stature. His body was covered with grease, giving him a decided advantage.

Finally Wallace knocked him against a canyon wall. The Indians head struck an obtruding rock and for an instant he was dazed. Wallace thrust his knife into the Indian.

"I tell you boys, I often see that Indian in my dreams, grappling me by the throat with his left hand, his glittering butcher knife raised in his right, his two fierce eyes gleaming like a panther's in the dark."

The Indian swung his knife. It whistled past Wallace's ear. The big Indian slumped forward with the knife-thrust, a death dealing blow. But the blood had blinded the Indian. His aim was amiss and the knife sank in the ground beside Wallace's head.

"I threw him off of me and he tumbled to the bottom of the canyon, stone dead," Wallace wrote. "I looked at him for some time and said to myself: 'Well, old fellow, you made a good fight and if luck
