Legalize drugs?

A wide range of political figures including conservative William F. Buckley have suggested one way to reduce America's crime rate is to legalize drug use. Military tanker explodes while being serviced for electrical problems; 6 die

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A military tanker jet being serviced for minor electrical problems exploded and burned Friday at Mitchell International Airport, killing six ground crew members.

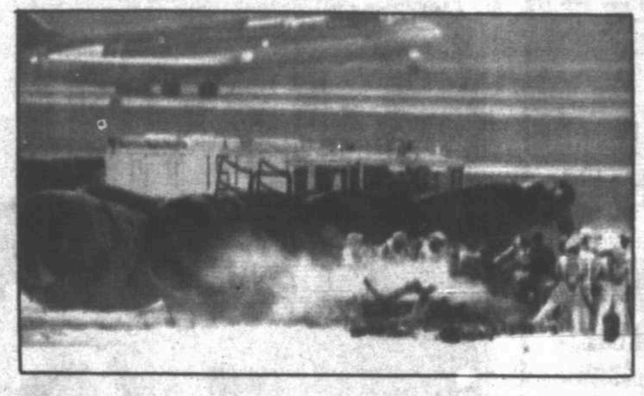

The fire spread too fast to give anyone a chance to rescue the workers aboard the Air National Guard KC-135, said Col. Eugene Schmitz, commander of the 128th Refueling Group.

The cause of the fire was under investigation.

Pilots and other personnel scrambled to move three jet tankers away from the burning plane.

"The debris was flying around and there was smoke and fire," said Lt. Col. Chuck Hardesty, vice comander of the unit, who

Clinton team plans 6-year defense cuts

■ Guard, Reserve to lose 127,000 jobs; some units to disband, reorganize under new reduction plan, Pentagon announces.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Army National Guard and Reserve will lose about 127,000 jobs over the next six years and some units will be disbanded as the nation's backup combat and disaster relief forces reorganize, the Pentagon announced Friday.

"We're here to talk about closing an old chapter in the history of the Army and opening a new chapter that will help us meet the challenges of the post-Cold War world," Defense Secretary Les Aspin said in outlining the changes.

Aspin said that although the Guard and Reserve will get smaller they will be more tightly focused on specific wartime and peacetime missions and will benefit from what Army leaders called a new partnership with active-duty forces.

Aspin said his plan is supported by all the key players in the military, although it remains to be seen whether the Congress will accept it. During the Bush administration, the Congress killed numerous efforts to reduce the reserve forces, mainly because of the job impact in many congressional districts.

In a sign that Congress may be more willing to go along now, however, Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D-Miss., chairman of the House Veterans' Affairs Committee, said even before Aspin's announcement that he could accept the plan, in part because deeper cuts proposed under President Bush had been averted.

The Bush administration had suggested cutting the Army Guard and Reserve to 563,000 by 1999 but met resistance from Montgomery and other supporters of the reserves in Congress.

The Clinton plan is to reduce the Guard to 367,000 and the Reserve to 208,000 for a total of 575,000 by 1999. The Guard currently is at 422,700 and the Reserve at 279,600. The administration plans to cut the active-duty force to 1.4 million from 1.7 million.

"I would prefer no cuts at all, but we don't have that choice," Montgomery said in a statement.

He said most armories will not have to close if the Clinton plan is adopted.

"Every state will be affected in some way if this reorganization plan is approved," Montgomery said. "But the bottom line for the National Guard and Reserve is that the cuts could have been much deeper."

Deborah Lee, assistant secretary of defense for reserve affairs, said no decisions have been made on which individual Guard and Reserve units will be closed over the next six years. She stressed that some reductions will be achieved by not replacing people who leave on their own, rather than by firing people.

Ruling on school-finance reform plan pleases MISD board member

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

A Midland Independent School District board member said he is pleased by a state judge's ruling earlier this week on a school-finance reform plan.

Gary Willis, who is also a member of the Texas Association of School Boards Special Committee on School Funding, said he is pleased with the judge's decision that will require the richest school districts to share some property wealth.

Willis said he is optimistic about the judge's ruling. He said the decision is beneficial for school boards to plan budgets.

"It makes planning more certain for school boards . . . with the judge saying it is equitable and constitutional," Willis said.

Family, friends mourn loss of abducted girls as sense of fear in suburbs looms

By Connie Farrow
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — A day after her body was found among the broken glass and old tires of a vacant lot, 10-year-old Cassidy Senter was remembered Friday as a smiling fifth-grader who loved to ride her pink bicycle and write stories.

The discovery of Cassie's body Thursday came less than two weeks after another girl, 9-year-old Angie Marie Housman, was found dead.

The sense of fear in the city's suburbs was palpable, with police investigating reports of three other attempted abductions since November. The kidnapping and slaying of 12-year-old Polly Klaas in California added to the anxiety.

A fourth attempted abduction report turned out to be a hoax, and yet another reported abduction Friday was apparently a false alarm.

After they found Cassie's body, investigators formed a task force. On Friday, police said there were similarities in the killings, but backtracked from statements that there was a definite connection.

As police searched for evidence, the girls' friends and family mourned Cassie and Angie, who never knew each other.

They were from neighboring suburbs northwest of St. Louis. Both were snatched in daylight as they walked down familiar avenues near their homes.

They were typical youngsters who loved music and giggled without cause.

Arab laborers die in West Bank; violence threatens peace

JERUSALEM (NYT) — Eye-for-an-eye killing continued unabated in the Israeli-occupied territories Friday as three Arab laborers were shot to death on a West Bank road in what seemed to be a revenge attack by Jewish settlers.

According to Israel Television, the militantly anti-Arab Kach movement, founded by Rabbi Meir Kahane, took responsibility. A caller to Israel Radio said settlers had carried out the attack to avenge the killing of a settler and his son by Palestinian gunmen earlier in the week.

Seven Arabs and Jews have been killed and at least that many wounded in the territories over the last week in a bloody prelude to the start of a gradual Israeli troop withdrawal and shift of authority to the Palestinians, scheduled to begin Monday in the Gaza Strip and in the West Bank town of Jericho.

It seems increasingly unlikely that this deadline will be met except for a few gestures by Israel — perhaps evacuating an army post in Gaza or releasing Palestinian prisoners — to show that it is serious about following through on the September agreement with the Palestine Liberation Organization on introducing Palestinian self-rule.

Negotiators are still mired in disputes over security arrangements, including who will be in charge of the borders between Gaza and Egypt and Jericho and Jordan.

In an attempt to narrow the differences and to show the talks are still on track, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and PLO chairman Yasser Arafat will meet Sunday in Cairo. It will be their third encounter in the last three months, an event that now seems almost routine and yet would have been inconceivable only a short time ago.

In Tunis, where he received Secretary of State Warren Christopher — another example of rapidly altered relations in Middle East politics — Arafat did not concede that the negotiators may miss the start of the withdrawal on Dec. 13, a date that he has called "sacred" but that Rabin says is only a target.

Of the meeting with the prime minister, Arafat said, "we hope that we will clarify together and we will overjump all the obstacles we are facing."

Similarly, Rabin told a television interviewer Friday night: "I have faith in the agreement, and, more than that, I have conviction in the vital need to take steps to arrive at the beginning of a solution to the problem between us and the Palestinians."

But even if the political leaders come to terms, it will take as long as a week to translate the agreement into workable arrangements, said Nabil Shaath, the chief PLO negotiator.

Underlining the complexity and importance of the disagreements, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said in Jerusalem that he had told Arafat in Spain on Thursday that "there is no chance of an Israeli compromise" on security matters.

The high level of violence in the territories in recent days is hardly likely to persuade Israeli leaders that they can relax their concerns. At a time when they and the PLO are supposedly talking about peace, their agenda has been dominated by tit-for-tat killings, most of them concentrated around Hebron in the West Bank, a long-standing flashpoint between Jews and Arabs.

All the attacks this week have been carried out by Jewish settlers and militant Palestinian groups not under Arafat's control, leading Rabin and other senior officials to charge that they are the work of militants intent on torpedoing the peace talks.

"We are in a special situation because the agreement is already signed on the principles, but the details are still being worked out and the forces and the societies have not been separated," Lt. Gen. Ehud Barak, the army chief of staff, said in an interview published Friday in the newspaper Yediot Ahronot. "So any Yaacov or Mustafa can resume the conflict."

Israeli officials disclosed this week that, at a time when they were to begin withdrawing their forces in the territories, they had appreciably bolstered troop strengths in a show of force that some press critics complained had come too late.

Analysts: Voter apathy hovers as Russian elections draw near YAROSLAVL, Russia (NYT) — Standing behind his pushcart outside the central market in this old Volga River city, Alex is a jumble of contradictions.

The most obvious is that he is selling ice cream to shivering passers-by amid a swirl of snow.

But perhaps the most disturbing contradiction, as historic elections in Russia on Sunday draw near, is that Alex, 26, declares defiantly that he will not vote. Despite expressions of concern about his own well-being and that of his young family, Alex will not participate in the selection of his nation's first democratic legislature and a referendum on Russia's first post-communist constitution.

He is not alone.

National surveys and anecdotal evidence indicate that this city of 700,000 about 175 miles northeast of Moscow has not cornered the market on turned-off voters and may be all too representative of Russia as a whole.

Apathy may be the biggest trend to emerge in the campaign that followed President Boris Yeltsin's dissolution of the last communist-era Parliament and the bloody siege that ended a legislative holdout in early October.

Despite disinterest and disgust, there will be an election Sunday, and there will be winners.

Christopher meets with Arafat at PLO villa

TUNIS (NYT) — The secretary of state came calling on Yasir Arafat Friday, and the symbolism of Warren Christopher's arrival at the headquarters of an organization the United States once labeled terrorist was not lost on either man.

"It's wonderful to see you at your headquarters in Tunis," Christopher told the Palestinian leader before entering the crumbling villa that the Palestine Liberation Organization calls the seat of its government.

Arafat smiled and noted that the organization would soon be moving. "Next time in Jericho," he replied. That city in the Israeli-occupied West Bank will be governed by the Palestinians under the agreement they signed with Israel in September.

The meeting was part of what senior administration officials describe as a campaign to help transform the PLO chairman from armed revolutionary to civil administrator.

Asked by reporters about its significance, Christopher said afterward: "This is a new day in relations between the United States and the PLO. After a long period in which there were many restrictions, I now feel free to come here to meet with the chairman of the PLO and have constructive discussions about very serious problems."

In a gesture of friendship, Arafat presented Christopher with a wooden box inlaid with mother-of-pearl and inscribed with the Lord's Prayer.

Friday's meeting, on the last working day of Christopher's Middle East trip, was the second in five days between the two men. American officials said Friday's session had been far more productive than their earlier encounter in Amman, Jordan, on Monday.

During Monday's meeting, Arafat took up much of the time railing about the pressures he was facing, senior State Department officials said. One official paraphrased Christopher as telling him bluntly: "I understand your problems. But it doesn't do you or me any good to discuss them. What you and I can do is to solve the problems to get the money to flow and try to change the situation on the ground."

Friday, the American side focused on three points, aides to Christopher said.

First, he formally notified Arafat that Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin of Israel would meet with him in Cairo on Sunday to discuss whether fulfillment of the Israeli-PLO accord on Palestinian self-rule in Jericho and the Gaza Strip could begin as scheduled on Monday.

A senior administration official quoted Arafat as telling Christopher, "We want to go in and see if we can get it done" on Monday as scheduled.

Arafat, who earlier this week said the Dec. 13 date to begin carrying out the accord was "sacred," was less certain Friday, telling reporters: "I hope that implementation will go forward. I hope we will have an opportunity to implement in the same time that was agreed on."

Feminist finds life rugged in '93 Croatia

By Stephen Kinzer
N.Y. Times News Service

ZAGREB, Croatia — The ornate turn-of-the-century Gradska Kavana on the central square is one of those cafes that define the style of Central Europe. The lives of nations, and sometimes their fates, are played out at such places, and the relationships between regular patrons are dense and multilayered.

Like many Croatian intellectuals, Slavenka Drakulic considers the Gradska Kavana a second home, and on a recent morning she made her way to an outdoor table with the confidence of a regular patron.

She noticed an old acquaintance, a man she has known since she was a teen-ager, and acknowledged him with a smile and a wave.

The man ostentatiously turned his back, letting Miss Drakulic know that he is among those who consider her a virtual traitor to her homeland.

One cannot imagine a self-possessed figure like Miss Drakulic losing her poise, and the rebuff had no visible effect on her.

"I'm more popular outside Croatia," she said with a shrug after ordering a Coca-Cola. "I'm known here, but I'm not popular. We are living through a moment when if you're attacked in the press, people don't want to talk to you."

A founder of Croatian feminism, Miss Drakulic, 44, has become something of a literary and political sensation beyond the Balkans.

Two collections of her essays have been widely translated and are selling briskly in many countries, including the United States.

She has become a favorite guest on television and radio talk shows, reaching a level of international celebrity beyond what anyone here could have imagined a few years ago. Her writings and public appearances have made her perhaps the world's best-known Croat after President Franjo Tudjman.

The contrast between the two could not be greater. Tudjman is a dour, patriarchal nationalist who is uncomfortable outside his Balkan habitat. Miss Drakulic is vivacious, outspoken, freewheeling, cosmopolitan and fiercely individualist.

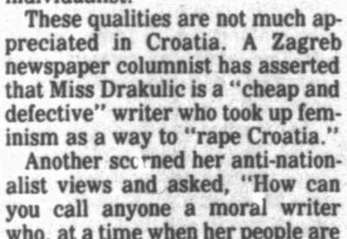

These qualities are not much appreciated in Croatia. A Zagreb newspaper columnist has asserted that Miss Drakulic is a "cheap and defective" writer who took up feminism as a way to "rape Croatia."

Another scorned her anti-nationalist views and asked, "How can you call anyone a moral writer who, at a time when her people are suffering the most terrible tragedies, cannot identify with their interests either emotionally or intellectually?"

Partly to escape what she considers a psychologically oppressive environment, Miss Drakulic now spends only part of her time in Zagreb. But she denies being a subversive.

"I don't like to be pushed into the category of 'dissident,' because I don't think I am one," she said. "I am only reacting against a society that does not value the individual."

WEATHER WATCH

Forecast calls for cloudy skies, 60s

Today's forecast calls for increasing high clouds with a high in the upper 60s and south winds 10-15 mph, according to a National Weather Service spokesman.

Tonight should be partly cloudy with a low near 40. Sunday should be windy and partly cloudy with a high near 70.

After a low of 38, compared to the record low of 15 set in 1989, the temperatures rose to 68 degrees. The record high for the date was 82 set in 1933.

STATE

Skies generally were clear Friday across Texas, with temperatures ranging from the 50s in the Panhandle to 90 degrees in far South Texas.

A cold front pushed into South Texas in a line south of Galveston and Corpus Christi inland to north of McAllen.

But elsewhere, abundant sunshine and drier air allowed the mercury to climb into the 80s. Temperatures ranged from 73 degrees at Junction to 90 degrees at Kingsville.

Today's forecast calls for fair skies with lows in the 40s and 50s. Highs will be in the 70s.

Skies were mostly sunny over North Texas Friday. Winds were northerly at 10 to 20 mph with some higher gusts. Temperatures were in the mid-60s in the northwest to the mid- and upper 70s in the southeast.

Today's forecast for North Texas calls for fair skies with highs in the 60s.

West Texas skies were sunny Friday. The wind was mostly easterly at 5 to 15 mph. Temperatures ranged from 57 degrees at Dalhart to 76 degrees at Sanderson.

Today's forecast calls for fair skies becoming partly to mostly cloudy at night. Lows will be mostly in the 30s. Highs generally will be in the 60s and 70s.

NATION

Rain fell over much of the United States on Friday, but the weather was warm enough in several areas to set high-temperature records for the date.

Rain fell across the Atlantic coastal states, the upper Ohio Valley, the Tennessee Valley, the eastern Gulf states and the northern Pacific Coast.

Snow was scattered over Michigan, changing to rain in some areas. Marquette, Mich., got an inch of snow during the same six hours.

High wind warnings were posted over many of the Pacific states Friday, and winter-storm warnings were issued for west-central Nevada and the eastern Sierra Nevada range. A weekend storm was also expected to bring heavy rain to northwest California.

MISD: Official praises judge's ruling

laws have been found unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, beginning in 1989, when it ordered lawmakers to even out funding available to school districts of differing property wealth.

"I am convinced that (the law) is constitutional and perhaps our last hope establishing the system of public education our (forebears) believed essential to the preservation of our liberties and our rights," State District Judge F. Scott McCown of Austin said in his ruling.

"This lets us (school board members) plan better because now we'll know the amount of money the state will send us," Willis said.

He said the school board has had difficulties planning the district's budget for the past 10 years because it wasn't told how much funding the state would allocate for the district.

"This provides certainty in the budget-planning process," Willis said.

Willis said he was glad the judge ruled that the equity law is constitutional; now he is concerned about the adequacy of the funding.

The school board member said the state only sends about 30 cents for every $1 the school district spends in the budget. He said just 10 years ago the state provided more than half of the money MISD spent.

Willis said this demonstrates how the state is not providing adequate funding.

"This means local taxpayers are being asked to pay two-thirds of the bill for our children's education," Willis said. He said he didn't think that is adequate.

MISD recently joined about 200 other school districts in a lawsuit against the state seeking a better way to fund the education system.

The judge said lawmakers must also come up with an equitable way to pay for school facilities, including buildings and equipment. In the past, he noted, such expenditures have been made "almost solely from local tax dollars and almost solely by borrowing."

The judge gave lawmakers until Sept. 1, 1995, to deal with the funding of facilities. If state legislators don't provide a plan to fund this aspect, no school board in the state will be allowed to issue bonds.

McCown said he would order a halt to the issuance of new school bonds based on a local wealth level all school districts don't have access to.

Willis said while MISD has no immediate plans for a bond program, the need may arise in the future and it is not right for local taxpayers to shoulder the entire burden of paying for the facilities.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

was pink — she was clad in a pink polka-dot sweater the day she vanished, leaving behind a wailing personal alarm she was carrying.

"Cassidy had a smile that would light up her whole face," said Jan Tennikait, principal at Garrett Elementary School in suburban Bridgeton. "She was friendly and outgoing, and was a good friend."

Angie vanished Nov. 18 as she walked home from her school bus stop. Her body was found nine days later in a wildlife preserve in St. Charles County, about 20 miles from her home in St. Ann.

Cassie disappeared Dec. 1 while walking to a friend's house to help hang Christmas lights. Her body was found in St. Louis, about 10 miles from home.

Christmas was a favorite holiday for Cassie, who loved to sing and had been practicing for her role as narrator in her school's holiday program, "An All-American Christmas," next week.

"She was one of the most dependable students we knew," Tennikait said. Cassie had attended Garrett since she entered the first grade in 1988.

Cassie had shown remarkable strength last spring when her family's home was destroyed by fire, Tennikait said. The student council raised money to help with moving expenses.

Since then, Cassie and her mother, Rhonda Senter, had been living with a friend in a brown split-level home in the same neighborhood in Bridgeton.

Jeffrey Rea, who lives next door, recalled how the strawberry-blond girl pedaled her pink bicycle around the neighborhood.

Barely 5 feet tall, Angie had blue eyes, brown hair and a cheerful personality, said her mother, Diane Bone.

She lived for the weekends, when her mother would allow her to wear makeup and paint her finger nails. Sundays also were treasured for her visits to church with her great-grandmother. Her favorite song was "Jesus Loves Me."

ARMY: Pentagon announces defense reductions

(From 1A)

Gen. J.H. Binford Peay III, vice chief of staff of the Army, told reporters the main benefit of the changes will be making the Guard and Reserve forces more ready for warfighting. He acknowledged that it won't be a smooth change.

"There will be some initial short-term turbulence" within the reserve forces as personnel cuts and changes in specific units are carried out, he said.

In addition to reducing the Guard and Reserve, the Clinton plan aims to reorganize the reserve forces so that the Guard is more tightly focused on preparing for combat and remaining ready to respond to domestic civil emergencies. The Reserve will be more oriented toward combat support missions, such as providing military police, transportation and medical services, during wartime, although it also will retain some combat missions.

The Reserve, for example, will give to the Guard 4,400 positions in aviation, but the Reserve will retain about 2,000. Likewise, the Guard will give to the Reserve some of its combat engineer, medical and transport positions.

Several Army leaders tried to put the best face on what clearly was a painful decision to give up some manpower they fought to preserve.

"None of this is easy, but it's what is best for America," said Gen. Gordon Sullivan, the Army chief of staff.

Officials expect new wave of AIDS in gay capital

By Jane Gross
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Here in the gay capital of America, where the decade-long AIDS epidemic has spread not just death but also despair, public health officials say there are ominous signs of a second wave of AIDS infection.

Many gay men, saying they are numb with loss, fatalistic about their own survival, unwilling to face a measure of sexual deprivation and eager for the attention showered on the sick and the dying, are again practicing unprotected anal intercourse. Experts say this behavior is increasing the infection rates.

"It's hard to say if this depresses me more or scares me more, but it sure doesn't look good," said Ron Stall, a behavioral epidemiologist at the Center for AIDS Prevention Studies at the University of California at San Francisco, who was one of the first to chart the trend.

The conclusion Stall and others have drawn comes from a combined reading of epidemiological data, which shows a rising infection rate, and behavior surveys, which show a worrisome level of unsafe sexual behavior.

These experts, whose findings have been collated by the San Francisco Health Department, and some leading homosexuals then turned to focus groups and other in-depth interviewing techniques to seek an explanation.

Among every 100 uninfected gay men here, there were 18 new infections in 1982, a rate that dropped to less than 1 in 1985. That has nudged back up to 2 out of 100 now, and is twice that high among men younger than 25. That increase, which may seem negligible, is viewed as alarming by health officials and is the clearest sign of a corresponding increase in unsafe behavior.

Various recent surveys of sexual practices, by the city's Health Department, the market research firm Communications Technology and others, confirm those fears.

The surveys indicate that one of every three gay men in San Francisco is engaging in unsafe sex, primarily anal intercourse without condoms.

Many public health experts here say that a partial explanation for the surge in unsafe behavior is that many AIDS educators in San Francisco declared victory prematurely and left the field after many gay men here made public health history early in the epidemic by changing their behavior, virtually overnight.

But in a city where virtually everyone knows that anal intercourse without a condom spreads AIDS, lack of information does not fully account for the phenomenon.

"It's not an education problem here, so something else must going on," said Tom Moon, a therapist with a largely gay practice. "You hear people say, 'If you have all the facts and are still doing this, you're just stupid and you deserve what you get.' Well, what that leaves out is psychology. People have emotional lives. They're not just information-processing machines."

Moon gazed from the window of his therapy office in the Castro District, where pastel-colored Victorian houses and rainbow gay liberation flags brighten a neighborhood where death and disfigurement have become banal.

"Depression is now a community norm," he continued. "The joke here is that we should put Prozac in the water supply in the 94114 ZIP code."

Some leaders of gay rights groups and AIDS experts lately have pierced the silence on this subject and convened focus groups to explore why gay men are letting their guard down and what to do about it.

"It's not enough to tell a guy to put on a condom," said Dana Van Gorder, an aide to City Supervisor Carole Midgen and a leader of that effort. "You have to make him want to put it on."

Van Gorder said that despair had moved him to engage in risky sex in recent years and that it was therefore a "personal" crusade to design new community-based prevention programs that reckon with the mental health problems of gay men in the second decade of the AIDS epidemic.

Van Gorder said he had studied public health models, including anti-smoking campaigns and efforts to curb teen-age pregnancy. Then he consulted experts in suicide prevention, and their advice rang true.

"We need to give guys more meaning," he said, "so they'll commit to wanting to live."

Ask the therapists here to explain relapses into potentially lethal sexual practices and they talk of accumulated grief, trauma and survivors' guilt.

Gordon Murray, for example, said his clients often fantasize about joining friends and loved ones, who have died one by one.

"One of the ways of dealing with grief is to join in with the dying and dead," said Murray, a therapist in the Castro. "It's like the Indian widow who throws herself on the funeral pyre."

In surveys about sexual practices, some men said that they did not use a condom because they wanted to enhance their pleasure, or they were under the influence of alcohol or drugs, or were swept away by passion.

The younger men, who have been most exhaustively surveyed, further report a sense of youthful invulnerability, a belief that AIDS is the plague of an older generation and not their own.

But in more free-flowing conversations, men in all age groups tell a more complicated story of dark emotional, cultural and existential forces that erode their resolve to shun dangerous sex.

Many in this city, where nearly half the gay men have HIV, the virus that causes AIDS, say that they believe infection is unavoidable.

A man at a recent safe sex forum led by the Stop AIDS Project agreed. "It makes you feel like what's the point," he said. "Eventually you're going to get it, so why resist? We're surrounded."

With homosexual identity and AIDS so intertwined, particularly in gay enclaves like the Castro, some men said they were attracted to the idea of getting sick because it would deepen their sense of belonging.

A 32-year-old airline mechanic, recently infected, said in an interview that "I thought if I was HIV-positive I'd be so much gayer." He added that "people are looking for the red badge of courage, and you get that when you convert" from being HIV negative to carrying the virus."

Some who are uninfected look at those who are sick and see their lives transformed with new meaning. At the Stop AIDS meeting, one young man described his admiration for a friend in such circumstances.

"He's got so much more focus now," the man said. "It almost in my mind makes it like a good thing that he has it. And I find myself wanting it."

helped start and move one of the planes.

Hardesty said there was an initial explosion about 7 a.m. followed a few minutes later by two more explosions.

The airport remained closed for about an hour.

The KC-135, a military version of the Boeing 707, is used for in-flight refueling of other planes.

It was being serviced at a section of the airport where the unit is based. It had only a fraction of its normal load of fuel at the time of the explosion, Schmitz said.

The plane had last flown Thursday, and had minor electrical and avionics system problems that were being repaired in preparation for another flight, Schmitz said. The problems included a burned-out beacon light and a broken switch.

"All of a sudden we hear a boom and the house is shaking. Then I saw flames and a lot of black smoke, billowing black smoke," said Zona Ukasick, who lives across the street from the Air National Guard installation. "I thought it was a building with oil barrels that had exploded."

All that was left of the plane was the tail and a portion of the left wing. The rest was charred rubble.

The bodies were removed from the cockpit area. Witnesses said the fire appeared to have started near the center of the plane, Schmitz said.

Dental records were being used to identify the six victims, all military men, Schmitz said. The names weren't immediately released.

Rightist wins growing support in Russia

By Deborah Seward
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Vladimir Zhirinovsky marched up to the lingerie counter in Moscow's biggest department store, held high a bra and announced that if he were elected to parliament, underwear would be cheaper.

The sales clerks were shocked and the customers delighted. For Zhirinovsky, it was just another antic in the generally leaden campaign for parliamentary elections on Sunday.

Zhirinovsky's buffoonery, provocative television appearances and message of a strong and rich Russia are winning him supporters and worrying his competitors.

In fact, Mikhail Poltoranin said his Federal Information Center believes Zhirinovsky's Liberal Democratic Party is in second place, behind the leading Russia's Choice reform bloc aligned with President Boris Yeltsin.

Americans shouldn't be fooled by the name, Liberal Democratic Party, as it's really a party of extreme right-wing nationalists bordering on fascism.

"He's the only one capable of getting Russia out of this mess. He's tough and he's clever and that's what this country needs," said Marina Yakovleva, a commercial bank employee who plans to vote for Zhirinovsky.

Part clown, part demagogue, it is hard to know when Zhirinovsky is bluffing and when he is dead serious.

An ultranationalist, Zhirinovsky appeals to the millions of Russians frightened by chaos, an explosion in crime, falling living standards and powerlessness and insecurity.

His election promises range from the frightening to the absurd, but by the time Zhirinovsky has finished his rapid-fire, almost hypnotic delivery, many in the audience, even some opponents, believe he can make them come true.

For Zhirinovsky, the collapse of the Soviet Union was a huge mistake that he would reverse immediately by forcing all the independent republics into a new Russian empire.

A special hatred is directed toward the three Baltic states of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, which spearheaded the drive for independence that caught fire in all the former Soviet republics.

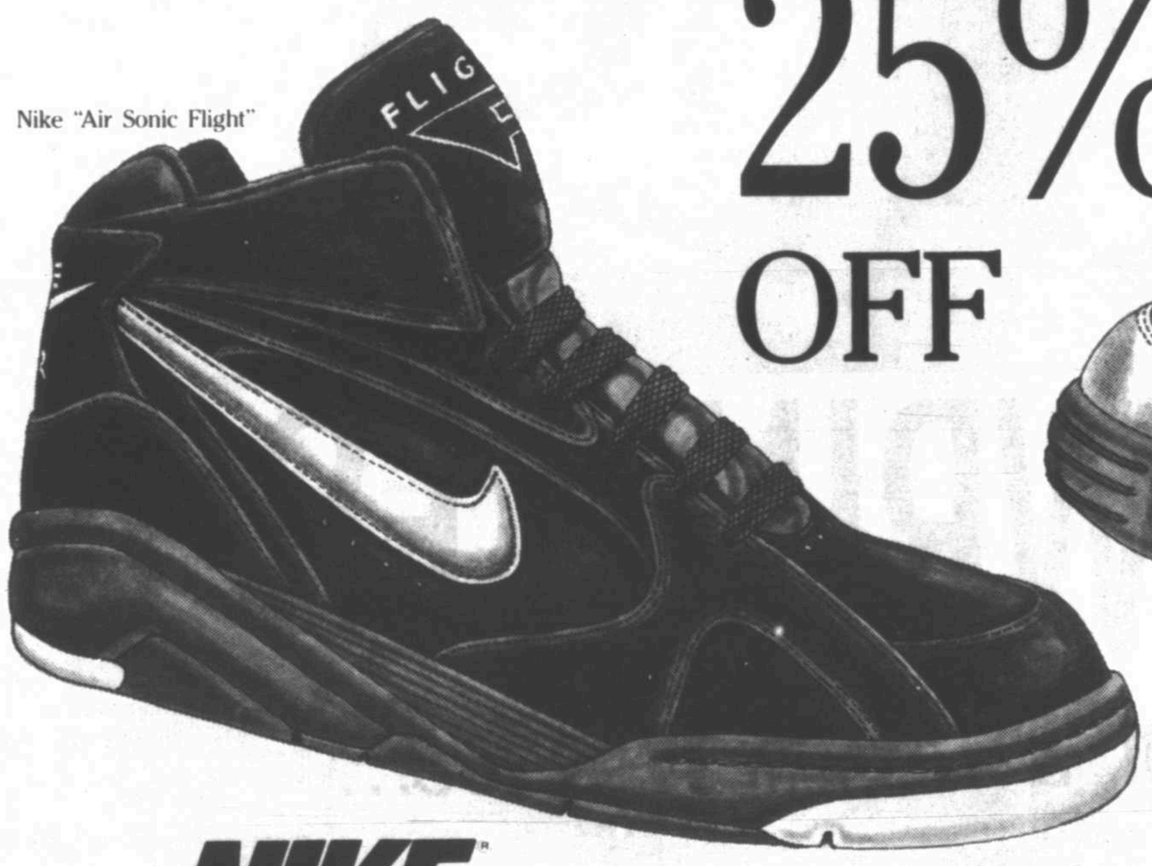

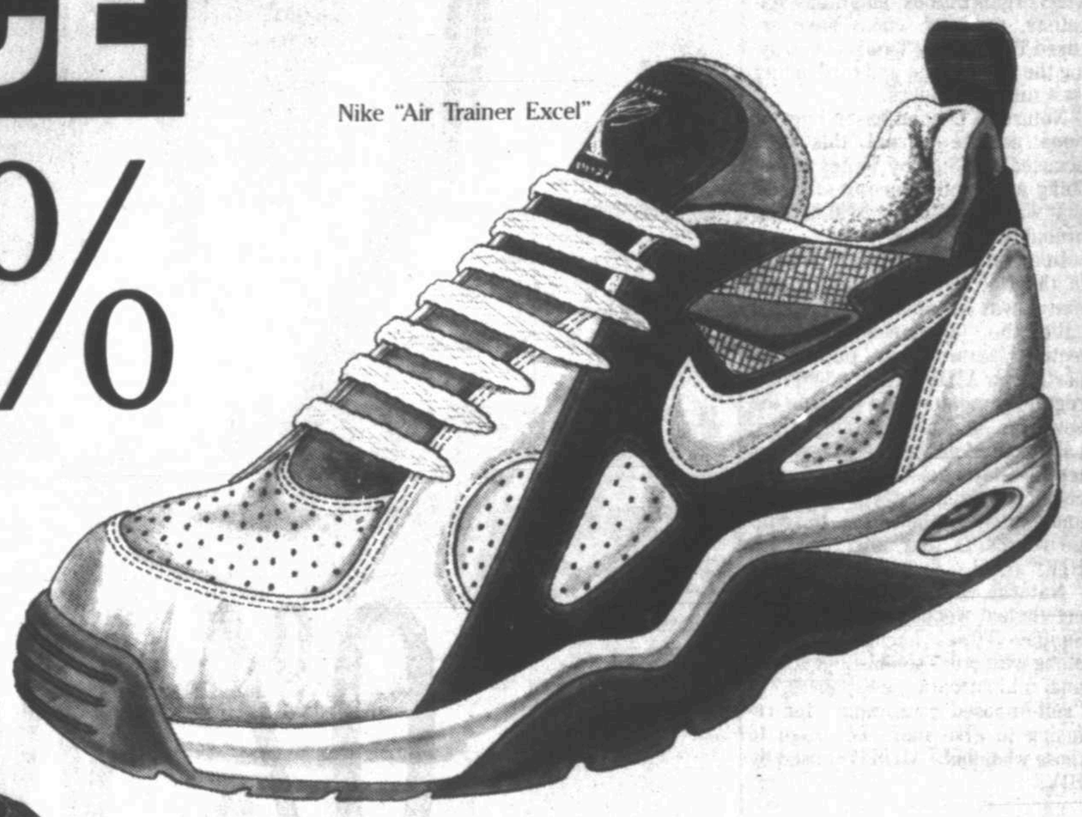

This week, Zhirinovsky warned the Baltic states that if they discriminated against ethnic Russians, he would impose economic sanctions so tough they would collapse in two weeks.

Vietnamese harvest war-era metal to survive

By Bruce Stanley
Associated Press

GIO LINH, Vietnam — Farmers in Vietnam's poorest province are fighting to survive their worst drought in 80 years by scavenging live American ammunition remaining from the Vietnam War.

Eight months of withering heat destroyed most of this year's rice crop for some 350,000 residents of Quang Tri province in central Vietnam. Two months of rain followed, but came too late.

Many families face possible starvation. To survive they pick up scrap metal left from the war, including unexploded bombs and artillery shells that have maimed and killed scores of farmers.

Quang Tri province straddles the former demilitarized zone that once divided Vietnam into a communist North and a pro-American South. As the scene of some of the war's fiercest battles, including Khe Sanh and Hamburger Hill, Quang Tri was a military junkyard when the war ended in 1975.

"I don't care what type of job it is, I'll do anything I can," said Nguyen Thi Doai, a scrap metal trader in Gio Linh, 280 miles south of Hanoi. "At least when I do this business, I can reduce the amount of junk left over from the war."

Doai and her husband started last month to buy metal from local scavengers and sell it to foundries. Their front-yard scrap heap is one of two in Gio Linh that started operating after the drought began in January.

One of Doai's suppliers is Nguyen Thi An, a rice farmer who said this year's crop failure forced her to work full time in the metal trade. As An spoke, she emptied a gunnysack containing rusty shards and a battered shell casing onto a set of scales in Doai's shop.

An buys scrap from another trader, who in turn purchases directly from the "diggers." She earns up to dong 5,000, or the equivalent of 47 cents a day. As the drought got worse, more people started scavenging, and now the best spots in the district have been picked over, An said. She hears that some diggers have been maimed or killed.

One metal casing in good condition sells in Gio Linh for the equivalent of $2, more than three times the price of other scrap. Local authorities say they warn people to contact local military experts instead of trying to defuse live shells themselves.

But doctors at Quang Tri hospital in Dong Ha, the provincial capital, know the cost for scavengers made desperate by drought.

In a typical year, the former U.S. field hospital treats about 100 patients mutilated by exploding ammunition, says Dr. Huynh Xuan Tin, chief of the intensive care unit. In the first nine months of this year, Tin says he has already seen 115 cases.

An additional 60 people have died on the spot after touching off explosions, he estimates.

"In most cases, the patients didn't want to tell us they were looking for scraps," Tin said. "Maybe they're ashamed of their poverty . . . They just do this to escape hunger."

Farmers in Quang Tri were struggling even before high temperatures, devastating southwesterly winds, and a 48 percent reduction in rainfall caused rivers and wells to dry up during the first eight months of this year.

"Quang Tri is about the most desolate province I've seen in Vietnam," said Jim Monan, who visited the area in September as a consultant for the aid agency Oxfam Hong Kong.

Furthermore, deforestation from the war has reduced natural water supplies, and salt water spreading inland from the coast has made much of the farmland sterile.

The average annual income in Gio Linh is about $204, making it one of the country's poorest districts, says Pham Quoc An, vice-chairman of the local People's Committee.

The recent drought wiped out 70 percent of Gio Linh's August and October rice harvests, leaving some 6,000 people close to starvation, and that number could rise to 24,000 by next May if secondary crops of sweet potatoes, peanuts, and other vegetables also fail, he said.

For the entire province, effects of the drought were worse still. Quang Tri lost 86 percent of its rice crop and 70 percent of its secondary crops, according to an official report prepared in August.

London paper's series on AIDS upsets many

By William E. ScHmidt
N.Y. Times News Service

LONDON — As the fattest and most popular of London's so-called quality Sunday broadsheets, The Sunday Times has come to relish a reputation as Britain's establishment iconoclast, a newspaper committed to challenging the conventional wisdom.

But the newspaper's latest crusade — a series of prominently displayed articles boldly arguing that the AIDS epidemic in Africa is a myth and strongly suggesting that HIV is not the way the AIDS infection spreads — has provoked bewilderment and anger among some government health officials, AIDS organizations, and many scientists, some of whom have accused The Sunday Times of betraying the public trust and misleading its 4 million readers.

Nature, a London-based international science journal, this week accused The Sunday Times of pursuing a line of reporting on AIDS that was "seriously mistaken, and probably disastrous."

In an unusual two-page editorial in the Dec. 9 issue, Nature said that it was so alarmed by what it called the "unbalanced" and "selective" nature of the paper's reporting on AIDS that it would now regularly monitor and critique the coverage in The Sunday Times, partly out of concern about the potential damage the paper was causing by leading young people and adults to believe they have little reason to fear infection with HIV.

Nature's broadside followed an article last weekend in which The Sunday Times accused Nature, along with other scientific journals and mainstream newspapers, of "self-imposed censorship" for refusing to give more coverage to those who doubt AIDS is caused by HIV.

The Sunday Times's series of articles — with headlines like "African AIDS plague 'a myth,' " and "AIDS: the plague that never was" — are drawn, in part, from the theories of a group of scientific skeptics who have dissented from the widely accepted view that AIDS is spread by HIV infection.

Dissident theories on the putative cause of AIDS, including those of Dr. Peter Duesberg, an American molecular biologist, have been widely debated over the last decade and dismissed by most government and research organizations as scientifically unsound.

The newspaper has also carried reports based on interviews with two medically trained charity workers in Tanzania, recanting their previous belief that AIDS represented a health threat in Africa of epidemic proportions. The workers said they had evidence that far fewer people than believed were infected with HIV and reported that many believed to be ill with the virus were now fully recovered.

Nanny admits she fatally injured infant

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (NYT) — A 26-year-old nanny admitted in court Friday that she had fatally injured the 10-month-old infant in her care by hurling him violently to his bedroom floor after he tugged at her hair.

After insisting for months that she had played no role in Kieran Dunne's death on March 3, Ann Franklin told a starkly different story this morning about how the baby had fractured his skull a week earlier.

Her eyes red with tears, her voice a whisper, Ms. Franklin made her first public admission of guilt in a crowded courtroom that included her parents, somber and drawn, who sat an aisle away from Kieran's father and mother, who occasionally sobbed audibly.

The infant's mother, Peggy Leahy Dunne, is more than seven months pregnant with her second child.

Ms. Franklin's comments came as part of a plea bargain, accepted Friday morning by Westchester County Judge J. Emmett Murphy, in which she agreed to plead guilty to first-degree manslaughter, a lesser charge than that of second-degree murder she had faced.

Under the agreement, the nanny from Rye, N.Y., who faced 15 years to life in prison if convicted of murder, would be eligible for release after serving at least 81/3 years, but not more than 25 years, in prison, prosecutors said. She remains free on bail until Jan. 6, when she must surrender to authorities. Her formal sentencing will be Feb. 17.

Standing unsteadily between her lawyer and a private investigator hired to assist her case, Ms. Franklin told what happened about 5 p.m. on Feb. 25; how Kieran had pulled at her long, red hair as she placed him into his crib after changing his diaper.

"I got annoyed and angry," she said evenly. "I shook him away from me and I swung him and threw him down hard."

Asked later by Maryellen Martirano, chief of the Westchester District Attorney's child abuse bureau, how far across the room she had tossed the infant, Ms. Franklin first said, "it was far," before agreeing to the prosecutor's characterization that it was about six to seven feet.

Asked what part of the infant's body struck the floor first, Ms. Franklin, clutching a crumpled tissue in her folded hands, said quietly, "His head, I believe."

Ms. Franklin said that moments before she changed the infant in his second-floor bedroom at the Dunne home, she had been smoking marijuana in the first-floor laundry room, although she did not link her reaction to the influence of the drug.

Ms. Martirano told reporters after the hearing that no evidence of the drug was found at the scene.

POLICE REPORT

Possession

ODESSA — The Permian Basin Drug Task Force, acting on a tip, arrested four Odessans Thursday night on charges of possession of marijuana, according to task force Commander Tom Finley.

Finley said officers conducted a search at a residence at 1501 Zenetta St. about 9:30 p.m. and seized a quantity of what officers believe was marijuana with a street value of $175.

Officers arrested Harlan Dever Martin, 23; Lonnie Pate, 17; James Roczniak, 23; and a juvenile, he said. All suspects were charged with possession of marijuana and taken to the Ector County Jail, according to the report.

The juvenile was released to his parents due to lack of space in the detention center, Finley said.

The task force also served another search warrant at about 5 p.m. Thursday at 212 W. 47th St., Finley said. The warrant resulted in two arrests of Odessa men.

Brian Phillip Borden, 35, and Joe Paul Abernathy, 20, were arrested and charged with possession of marijuana and taken to the Ector County Jail, he said. Officers seized what they believed is marijuana with an estimated street value of $425.

Finley said a search warrant was served at 505 Union St. at about 9 p.m. Thursday.

Emanuel Thomas Minguela, 39, of Big Spring was arrested and charged with possession with intent to deliver a quantity of what officers believed to be marijuana with a street value estimated at $375, he said.

Minguela was taken to the Big Spring City Jail.

Clinton meets with labor leader Kirkland

WASHINGTON (NYT) — President Clinton met with labor leader Lane Kirkland at the White House Friday in an effort to repair a relationship frayed by the North American Free Trade Agreement and to enlist his support for the administration's health-care plan.

In the end, the president seemed to have been only partly successful.

After meeting alone for 45 minutes in the Oval Office, a session arranged at Clinton's behest, the two men declined to speak to reporters. But their associates said they had agreed to end the bitter public debate over the trade agreement, which had pitted the Democratic president against one of the bedrock constituencies of his party, and to try to work together in areas of mutual agreement like health care.

Still, the AFL-CIO, of which Kirkland is the president, said it would be up to the labor federation's individual member unions to decide whether to carry out its threat, delivered in the heat of the debate over the trade accord, to punish congressional supporters of the pact in the 1994 elections — something many union officials insisted Friday they still intended to do.

Ever since winning a crucial House vote on the agreement three weeks ago, Clinton had been seeking a face-to-face meeting with Kirkland, who first took a two-week trip to Europe and then put the president off until Friday.

The two leaders had a lot of hatchet-burying to do, and the fact that they finally did get together suggested a mutual interest in doing so.

Although still angry with Clinton, organized labor needs his backing for its priorities: worker retraining programs, occupational safety improvements and a bill that would bar the hiring of permanent replacements for striking workers.

Asked Friday afternoon whether the meeting had enabled Clinton to win any promise of support for the health care proposal, a senior labor official said: "We've been for health care since Harry Truman, and we're still for it. But there are still some technical details to be worked out before we give our backing to the Clinton plan."

Candidate makes stop in Midland

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

With billions of dollars to be invested in the Texas economy and budget expenditures of $70 billion, Texas treasurer candidate David Hartman maintains his investment and banking experience will be crucial to the office.

Hartman, a Republican, announced his candidacy for state treasurer Wednesday and has since been traveling around the state, discussing reasons for his interest in the office. Hartman spoke Friday morning at Midland International Airport.

Hartman, 57, is a banker in Austin. With a master's degree in business administration, Hartman was Gov. Bill Clements' choice to serve on the Special Committee on Organization of State Agencies, he said.

Hartman will be running against appointed incumbent Martha Whitehead, as well as fellow Republican candidate Teresa Doggett.

Shepherding $16 billion in future federal investments and blocking attempts to instate a state income tax are Hartman's greatest concerns, he said. "I'm running to serve as the taxpayers' watchdog in order to prevent a state income tax," he said.

Hartman was strongly critical of his opponents in the election, berating their abilities throughout his speech.

"If the voters want an unqualified political appointee who doesn't want the job and doesn't care whether we have a state income tax, then my Democrat opponent would be their choice.

"On the other hand, if the voters want a taxpayers' watchdog who is qualified as a banker and professional investor to prudently invest their money and who is strongly opposed to a state income tax, David Hartman will win the race for state treasurer next November," he said.

Some in the state Legislature have suggested, as a way to cut the state budget, doing away with the treasurer's office all together, Hartman said. This would remove a check on increased state spending, he said.

In the past, state spending has grown faster than the Texas economy, which is a violation of Section 22 of the Texas Constitution, Hartman said. "As treasurer, I will not sign the checks for unconstitutional expenditures," he said.

Hartman has never before run for an elected office, he said. He has, however, been deeply involved in the Republican Party in Texas, and has worked to get other Republican candidates elected, he said.

U.S. officials meet N. Koreans for nuclear talks

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Clinton administration officials met with North Korean diplomats Friday and presented a slightly more flexible proposal for breaking the deadlock over Pyongyang's nuclear program, American officials said Friday.

One administration official said the latest American proposal contained a number of new "nuances."

But the Clinton administration said that it had not altered its basic stance that North Korea must agree to unimpeded inspections of nuclear installations it had officially disclosed to the International Atomic Energy Agency, and to resume talks with South Korea on a nuclear-free peninsula.

"We went back to them and reminded them that we want full IAEA inspections of their nuclear sites and a resumption of the dialogue with South Korea, and we'll see," said Dee Dee Meyers, the White House press secretary.

Mid-level Clinton administration officials presented Washington's proposal in New York Friday in a meeting with North Korean diplomats. The administration conferred with South Korea and Japan before meeting with the North Koreans.

The administration does not want to negotiate a broadening of economic and diplomatic relations with North Korea until it meets Washington's conditions on nuclear inspections and on negotiations with the South.

North Korea had earlier offered to allow international inspectors unimpeded access to five relatively minor nuclear installations. But the monitors would not be allowed to inspect the nuclear reactor or nuclear reprocessing facility at Yongbyon, the two most critical installations.

Instead, North Korea offered to allow the agency to replace the film and batteries in its surveillance cameras at those installations. North Korea also said it was willing to negotiate the possibility of additional access.

Leaders of Britain, Ireland discuss text for peace

BRUSSELS, Belgium (NYT) — British and Irish leaders discussed the text Friday of a proposed joint statement to encourage peace in Northern Ireland but said they needed to meet again before Christmas to try to finish it.

Prime Minister John Major of Britain and his Irish counterpart, Albert Reynolds, met for an hour at a European Union summit meeting and agreed that lower-level officials had made progress since the last time the two leaders talked on Dec. 3. Irish officials gave no details.

In a joint statement made public after their talk, the prime ministers said that they wished "to bring the exercise between the two governments to a successful conclusion."

Irish officials said this could take place in London next week.

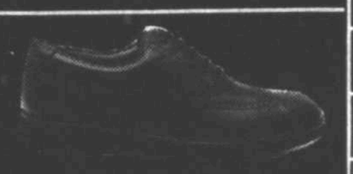

The two governments are trying to encourage negotiations between parties representing the Irish Republican Army, which has been fighting for more than 20 years to expel the British from Northern Ireland and merge it with the Irish Republic.

The IRA is predominantly Roman Catholic. Northern Ireland is largely Protestant. Leaders of the Protestants see continued union with Britain as essential to their security.

Mandela, de Klerk receive Nobel prizes

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Setting aside their differences for a day, a beaming Nelson Mandela and F.W. de Klerk accepted the Nobel Peace Prize on Friday and promised to keep working toward a democratic, nonracial South Africa.

The nine Nobel laureates in literature, medicine, physics, chemistry and economics took their bows at a ceremony later in Stockholm, Sweden, having revolutionized their fields by unlocking genetic secrets, discovering a new kind of star, explaining history or writing poetic novels about race.

Toni Morrison became the first black American winner of the Nobel Prize in literature. She and the eight others received their honors from King Carl XVI Gustaf at Concert Hall, then headed for a glittering banquet at the City Hall.

Mandela, the black African National Congress leader, and de Klerk, the white president who freed him from prison, received long, enthusiastic applause from an audience of 2,000 people when they were presented with their gold medals and diplomas.

The laureates stood beside each other in silence, smiling and holding the medals for the crowd at Citv Hall to see.

"Five years ago, people would have seriously questioned the sanity of anyone who predicted that Mr. Mandela and I would be joint recipients of the 1993 Nobel Peace Prize," de Klerk, 57, said in his Nobel lecture. "And yet both of us are here before you today."

"We are political opponents. We disagree strongly on key issues and we will soon fight a strenuous election campaign against one another. But we will do so, I believe, in the frame of mind and within the framework of peace that has already been established."

The two rivals also shared the equivalent of $790,000 for the prestigious award. But Mandela, 75, said it cannot be measured in money.

"It will and must be measured by the happiness and welfare of the children, at once the most vulnerable citizens in any society and the greatest of our treasures," he said.

"The children must at last play in the open veld, no longer tortured by the pangs of hunger or ravaged by disease or threatened with the scourge of ignorance, molestation and abuse, and no longer required to engage in deeds whose gravity exceeds the demands of their tender years."

King Harald V and Queen Sonja were in the Oslo audience that watched approvingly as Nobel Committee chairman Francis Sejersted presented the awards.

The prizes awarded in Stockholm:

■ Morrison, 62, of Princeton University, received the literature prize for focusing on the experiences of blacks in the United States. Morrison "has given the Afro-American people their history back, piece by piece," Swedish Academy Secretary Sture Allen said in introducing her.

Congressional leaders speak at trade talks

GENEVA (AP) — As contentious world trade talks bounced from one stumbling block to another, negotiators heard Friday from perhaps the ultimate stumbling block: the U.S. Congress.

Two influential Democrats warned that a new General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade will be acceptable only if it is politically palatable in the United States. President Clinton recently fought a tough battle to get a free trade package with Canada and Mexico, and GATT could be an even harder sell.

Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee, and House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt said they would take a firm stand against "dumping," or exporting goods into America below cost.

The United States has angered other nations by insisting it retain its right to impose penalty taxes on goods dumped into U.S. markets.

The GATT deal is intended to expand the global economy by some $200 billion per year by lowering duties on imported goods, opening access to international markets and creating a fairer set of ground rules for world trade.

Administration commits FBI on gay policy

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Clinton administration committed the FBI to ban discriminating policies against homosexual employees or applicants in resolving a lawsuit filed by a gay agent who was fired.

Friday's tentative settlement of Frank Buttino's lawsuit came a week after Attorney General Janet Reno prohibited the FBI and other Justice Department agencies from discriminating on the basis of sexual orientation. Buttino was fired in 1990 after 20 years with the FBI.

The settlement goes further than Reno's order in that it also forbids discrimination on the grounds of "homosexual conduct among consenting adults in private."

"I look at this as a victory for all Americans who believe that any kind of discrimination is wrong," Buttino said at a news conference.

He said four FBI employees, including one agent, have disclosed their homosexuality and kept their jobs since he filed his lawsuit.

He said he also knows of other gay employees who now "can be honest and not fear losing (their) job."

New FBI guidelines, which are being implemented independent of the settlement, specify that applicants generally should not be asked about their sexual orientation or conduct.

Buttino's lawsuit went to trial a week ago, but the trial was suspended Thursday.

Justice Department spokesman Carl Stern said the administration had reached an "agreement in principle" and planned to sign it within two weeks. Final approval is required from U.S. District Judge Saundra Brown Armstrong.

Buttino, 48, will not get the reinstatement he sought, but will get partial restoration of his pension rights and $53,000 in legal fees.

The FBI, which denounced Buttino throughout the case as a liar who was unworthy of a security clearance, also agreed to issue a statement praising his record as an agent.

Buttino, who spent most of his career in the FBI's San Diego office, had consistently high job evaluations and a number of sensitive assignments, including the investigation of a corrupt fellow agent. But his own security clearance was withdrawn in 1990 and he was fired soon afterward.

Governor OKs law to protect homosexuals

BOSTON (AP) — Gay people have new protection against discrimination in public schools through a measure Gov. William Weld signed into law Friday.

"We hope that the bill's passage here is going to signal a whole new frontier in the gay rights movement," said David LaFontaine, who heads the Governors Commission on Gay and Lesbian Youth.

Some school systems have gay rights policies, but no other state has adopted such a law, which flatly bans discrimination against gays in schools, said the group Parents, Families and Friends of Lesbians and Gays, which is based in Washington.

In 1989, Massachusetts became the second state, behind Wisconsin, to enact a gay rights law that banned discrimination against homosexuals in housing, credit and employment.

"The governor feels schools should be places where students can learn. No one should be discriminated against based on their sexual preference," said Virginia Buckingham, a Weld spokeswoman.

Weld made a low-key announcement of the bill signing at a news conference on another issue. LaFontaine said some gay youth who worked in support of the legislation were disappointed he didn't hold a formal ceremony.

LaFontaine, also political director of the state Coalition of Gay and Lesbian Civil Rights, said the law will open all school activities to gay students.

He also said harassment cases could be taken to court.

"Gays will be able to sue school systems that are failing to protect their safety, and it's the rare school system at this point that is a safe place for gay students," LaFontaine said.

Many students have been prohibited by principals and school districts from organizing gay and lesbian student groups, he said.

"We're going to be making a big push to encourage students to go to their senior prom this year," LaFontaine said. "We're going to attempt to make a legal case that when a school teaches health or sex education they're obligated to include gay and lesbian issues."

Doctor Kevorkian faces charges during court appearance

Supporters applaud as self-styled right-to-die advocate enters packed courtroom. Observers describe his appearance as unshaven, weak from hunger strike.

ROYAL OAK, Michigan (AP) — Dr. Jack Kevorkian, unshaven and appearing weak from a jailhouse hunger strike, was wheeled into court Friday to face a charge of helping a 72-year-old woman commit suicide.

Supporters applauded as the self-styled right-to-die advocate entered the packed courtroom, hunched over in his wheelchair and wrapped in a gray blanket.

The 65-year-old Kevorkian dismissed questions from reporters about his 11-day-old hunger strike and how he was feeling with a wave of his hand.

Chants of "Free Jack now" from outside the courtroom nearly drowned out lawyers as District Judge Daniel Sawicki opened the hearing to determine if there is enough evidence to try Kevorkian in the Oct. 22 death of Merian Frederick.

The chants quieted after about 10 minutes.

Kevorkian already faces similar charges in two cases in Wayne County.

The Rev. Kenneth Pfifer, testifying in return for immunity, told how he, Frederick's son and daughter-in-law, and Kevorkian watched for the 30 minutes it took for Frederick to die by breathing carbon monoxide.

Pfifer, a minister at First Unitarian Universalist Church in Ann Arbor, said he had counseled Frederick through much of her ordeal with Lou Gehrig's disease. He also attended a videotaped meeting with Kevorkian at which she expressed her desire to die.

Under questioning from Oakland County Assistant Prosecutor Errol Shifman, Pfifer told how he and Rick and Ola Frederick brought the woman to an apartment Kevorkian rents next to his own.

Frederick walked up the stairs, went inside and sat on a couch, Pfifer said. Kevorkian supplied a canister of gas, a mask and tubing, he said. Frederick placed the mask over her face and pulled a string to release a clamp on the tubing, starting the flow of deadly gas.

"What happened then?" Shifman asked.

"We waited for the gas to take effect and her suffering to be over," Pfifer said.

Pfifer covered his face and cried when shown pictures of Frederick's body on the couch.

Under cross-examination from Kevorkian's attorney, Geoffrey Fieger, Pfifer would not say whether Frederick told him in counseling that she wanted to die, saying that was privileged information between himself and a parishioner.

But Pfifer later told Fieger he knew Frederick wanted to end her suffering and was particularly discouraged because she could not speak or hold up her head.

Rick and Ola Frederick also planned to exercise their Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination if called to testify, said their attorney, Dan Devine Jr. He said prosecutors' offers of immunity were too vague.

Kevorkian has been subsisting on juice, water and vitamins since he was jailed on a $50,000 cash bond Nov. 30. He reduced his juice intake this week to about 2 ounces a day, Fieger said. Doctors who examined him Thursday said he was weak.

Administration plans to ease logging rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration announced plans Friday to ease logging restrictions near the threatened northern spotted owl.

The move won praise from the timber industry, but environmentalists warned the plans could push the bird toward extinction.

The government will focus recovery efforts for the threatened owl on national forests and other federal lands, making it possible to relax protective guidelines on state and private lands in the Northwest, Assistant Interior Secretary George Frampton Jr. said.

"The vast majority of suitable owl habitat that remains in the region is on federal land," Frampton said at a news conference.

Marv Plenert, regional director in Portland, Ore., for the Fish and Wildlife Service, said the plan would free "significant" amounts of private timber for harvest.

The administration hopes to complete an environmental impact statement on the proposed regulation and formally propose it in March when President Clinton presents a federal judge in Seattle with a comprehensive protection plan.

Logging has been banned across most federal lands with owls in Oregon, Washington and Northern California since U.S. District Judge William Dwyer found government harvest plans to be illegal in 1991.

The timber industry commended the government's move.

"Relief for state and private landowners in the region is vital to avoid a worsening of the severe social and economic impacts already occurring," said Mark Rey, vice-president of the American Forest & Paper Association.

Environmentalists were critical, saying protection of private lands as well as public lands is necessary because only remnants of the old-growth ecosystem have survived the post-World War II logging boom.

"If the federal lands look like a mangy dog, a lot of the private lands look like a skinned chihuahua," said Frances Hunt, forestry resource specialist for the National Wildlife Federation.

Kathleen McGinty, director of the White House Office on Environmental Policy, said the easing of protection on private lands is possible because Clinton has developed the comprehensive plan to protect the owl and old-growth forests on federal land.

Clinton said in July his plan would drop federal logging levels in the region to about one-fourth of the annual average of the 1980s.

Under the proposed new rule, premium protection of the bird's habitat would remain in effect on state and private lands in 10 "areas of special emphasis" most important to the owl's survival, McGinty said. That includes Washington's Olympic Peninsula.

Logging restrictions on private land, part of the Endangered Species Act's protection of the owl dating to 1990, may be further relaxed if landowners develop their own conservation strategies, Frampton said.

He said the administration already has secured a commitment from Weyerhaeuser Corp. to develop a habitat conservation plan for the owl on 100,000 acres of the company's lands in southwest Washington.

Frampton said the administration wants to waive federal protection of the owl on private lands in California because California's laws already provide as strict or stricter protection of the bird.

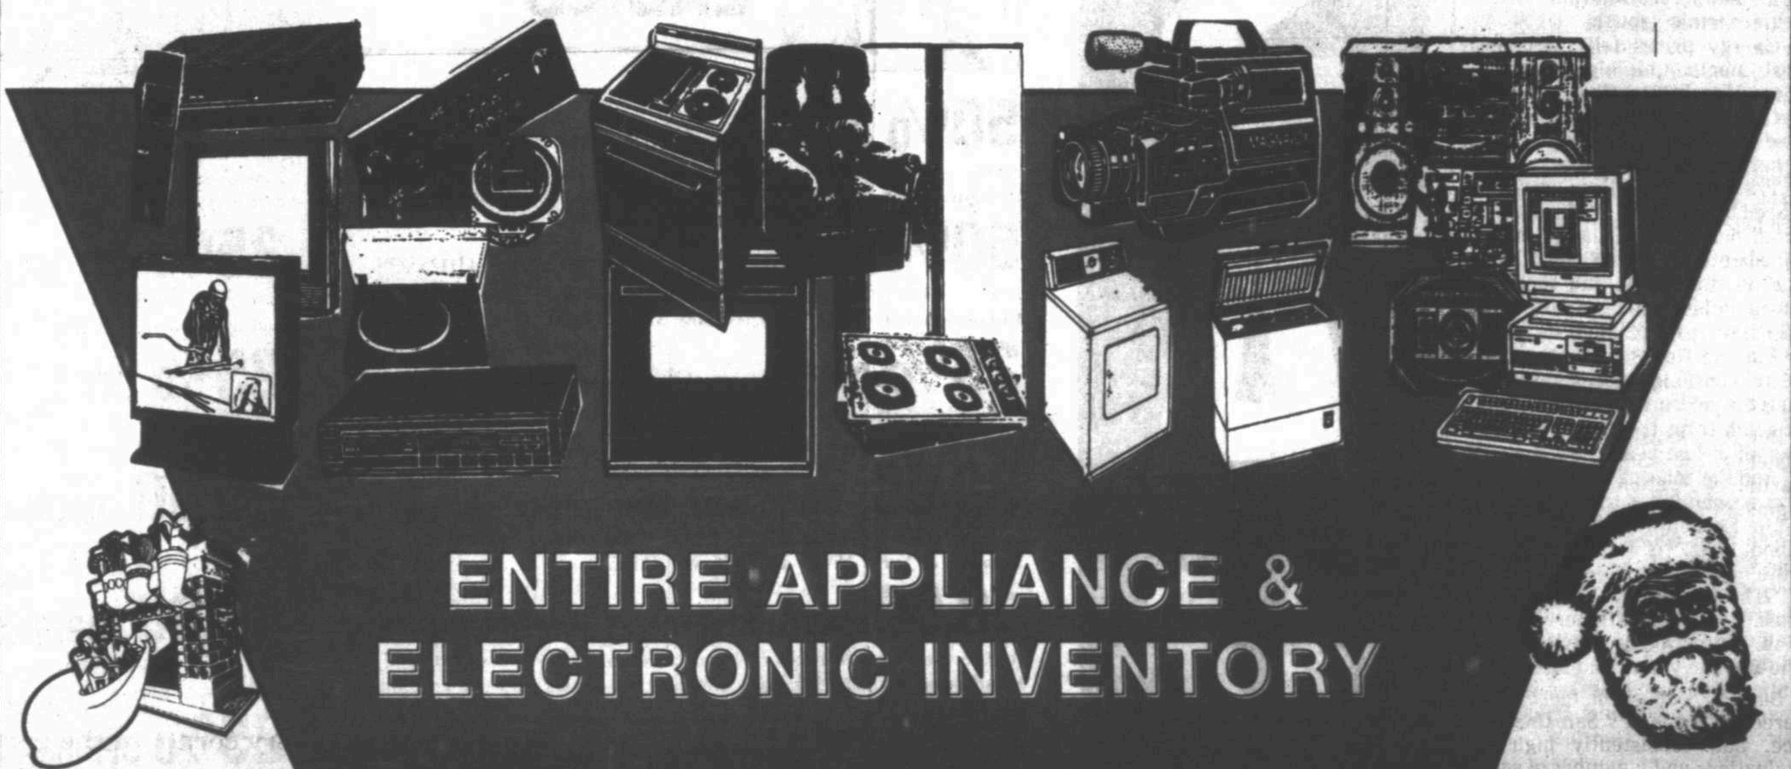

In Oregon and Washington, the proposed rule would forbid logging on federal and state lands within 70 acres of a known owl nesting site. In addition to the 70-acre circle, in the 10 special emphasis areas land owners also would be required to maintain 40 percent tree cover.

Otherwise, logging would be allowed on the private and state lands where they once were prohibited in an area as large as 1,000 acres around the nest.

Scientists produce record energy levels from atomic fusion

PLAINSBORO, N.J. (AP) — Hours after producing the world's most powerful controlled fusion reaction, scientists nearly doubled their own record.

The successes Thursday and Friday raised Princeton University researchers' hopes of someday harnessing an inexhaustible, clean source of energy, and of getting the money to build more-advanced experimental fusion reactors.

About 500 visiting scientists and staff at the Princeton Plasma Physics Laboratory here were on hand when its experimental fusion reactor generated the first record — the equivalent of 3 million watts of power — just before midnight Thursday.

They clapped and cheered just as loudly Friday afternoon during three more successful experiments, the last of which produced 5.6 million watts, said Dale M. Meade, deputy director of the lab financed by the federal Energy Department.

"This is the one we really wanted," Meade said, adding that the lab's scientists were "busy validating the data and seeing what we can do to make the number even bigger."

The project's goal had been to reach the 5-million-watt level by the start of the scientists' Christmas break on Dec. 17. In the next nine months, the scientists expect to increase the output to 10 million watts, enough to power about 3,000 U.S. homes.

That's still less than half the 24 million watts needed to run the reactor. Previous experiments have consumed several times the energy they produced.

Besides boosting the reactor's output, the scientists have much to learn from the physics of each reaction. That will help them design more advanced reactors, potentially leading to commercial fusion reactors by the year 2035.

"What people are doing here is not for themselves or their children. It's for their children's children. It's a chance to leave a legacy," John Willis of the Energy Department's office of fusion energy said in congratulating the lab's staff.

Many spent decades — even entire careers — doing the research leading up to these experiments.

Project scientists compared the achievement to the Wright brothers' initial flight or the first time humans rubbed sticks together to make fire.

"We're trying to replicate the sun here on Earth," Meade said. "What we have is a piece of the sun and it's confined in a (magnetic) field and it's producing fusion energy."

Fusion, the process that powers the sun, is a reaction in which lightweight atoms, such as hydrogen, are squeezed together at high temperatures to fuse, releasing energy in the process. The researchers' goal: harness more energy from the reaction than the millions of watts needed to run the mammoth reactor.

On Friday afternoon, laboratory workers and Energy Department officials gathered around monitors each time the experiment was repeated successfully. Cameras inside the reactor showed the darkened interior suddenly glow brightly — from the tremendous heat energy — and then gradually fade.

Each experiment in the lab's Tokamak Fusion Test Reactor lasts about five seconds, including the one-second burst of fusion power. The experiments use different mixtures of special isotopes, or forms, of hydrogen. The temperature inside the reactor reaches 300 million to 400 million degrees Celsius.

The reactor's output far exceeds the previous record, the 1.7 million watts produced Dec. 9, 1991, by the Joint European Torus, the machine's chief rival near Oxford, England. Despite the competition, scientists from that lab and others around the world have collaborated with those at Princeton.

Fusion is the opposite of fission, which involves breaking apart very heavy atoms, such as uranium. Fission is the process that powers nuclear reactors.

Scientists argue that fusion energy will be desperately needed by the time it is practical and can compete economically with polluting energy sources such as oil and coal.

Declining oil prices restrain U.S. inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sharp decline in international oil prices restrained U.S. inflation to a modest 0.2 percent in November, and analysts predicted even better price news ahead despite improving economic growth.

Energy prices fell 1.3 percent last month, the biggest decline since March 1991. That helped offset a 0.4 percent rise in food costs and a 0.3 percent increase in all other goods and services.

The energy declines were produced by a drop in crude oil prices from nearly $19 a barrel in mid-October to just over $14.50 a barrel earlier this month and should restrain inflation to near zero for the next few months, analysts said.

For the first 11 months of this year, consumer prices have risen at a 2.8 percent annual rate, down a notch from the 2.9 percent rate for all of last year.

And the consensus forecast of 51 top economists surveyed by Blue Chip Economic Indicators of Sedona, Ariz., is for a 2.9 percent rate next year.

"The bottom line is ... you're basically looking at 3 percent inflation. That's where we've been for the last two years, and that's probably where we'll be for another year," said economist Donald Ratajczak of Georgia State University.

Despite the favorable price outlook, economists are becoming increasingly convinced the Federal Reserve will nudge short-term interest rates higher early next year just to make sure price pressures do not rise.

"The Fed really has to be focused on the long term," said economist Martin Regalia of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. "Even at 3 percent, inflation isn't good enough for them."

In the meantime, lower energy prices should act like a tonic for economic growth, giving businesses and consumers money to spend on other goods and services, analysts said.

"This good news on inflation is also good news for consumer buying-power," said economist Sung Won Sohn of Northwest Corp. in Minneapolis. "Every dollar decrease in the price of crude oil puts $7 billion to $8 billion in consumers' pockets."

In a separate report, the Labor Department said Americans' inflation-adjusted average weekly earnings have climbed for two consecutive months, up 0.3 percent in November and 0.7 percent in October.

In November, gasoline prices fell 1.8 percent, the biggest decline in six months, after jumping 4.5 percent in October because of an increase in federal excise taxes. Fuel oil declined 0.6 percent and electricity, 0.8 percent. Natural gas was down 1.7 percent, the largest decline since April 1990.

The index for meat, fish, poultry and eggs increased 0.5 percent, a reflection of higher feed prices after the summer's floods in the Midwest. Vegetable prices jumped 5.3 percent, but fruit costs fell 0.5 percent, led by an 11 percent drop in oranges, the steepest in two years.

The price of new cars was flat last month after a 0.4 percent increase in October. Airline tickets jumped 4.1 percent and have been advancing at a 15 percent annual rate so far this year.

Inflation in medical care, a perennial problem, is a milder this year. Medical prices rose just 0.2 percent in November. They've risen at a 5.5 percent annual rate so far this year, compared with 6.6 percent for all of last year.

Gore to ask Kazakhstan to dismantle missiles

Administration believes progress in Kazakhstan might influence Ukrainian nuclear weapons policy.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Al Gore is to leave today on a weeklong trip to prod Kazakhstan to dismantle nuclear missiles and to set the stage for next month's U.S.-Russia summit in Moscow.

The vice president also will celebrate the invitation for Russia to join the international space station consortium and visit Kyrgyzstan in Central Asia to applaud the former Soviet republic's market reforms.

After a stop en route in Germany to visit with American troops, Gore travels to Kazakhstan, where the parliament is scheduled to vote next week to endorse the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty. After that vote, the parliament is to disband and let President Nursultan Nazarbayev rule the oil-rich Central Asian nation by decree until new elections in March.

A senior administration official, speaking on condition on anonymity, said there were "encouraging signs" parliament would endorse the treaty in time for the Gore-Nazarbayev meeting Monday. Also, the official said the administration was hopeful for progress on a timetable for warhead dismantling.

Kazakhstan has endorsed the nuclear arsenal reductions called for in the Start I treaty, but administration officials say Nazarbayev has slowed the pace toward dismantling the country's 1,400 warheads, holding out for a Clinton promise to host a summit next year.

The officials said Nazarbayev wants to meet with President Clinton in Washington early next year, not long after Clinton's Moscow summit with Russian President Boris Yeltsin. A decision on that appears to hinge to speeding the pace toward dismantling.

"I'm very optimistic and of course a visit like this can serve many functions, one of which is to drive the process in both countries by which disputes are settled and agreements are reached and problems are solved," Gore said in an interview, sidestepping details of the last-minute negotiations. "We think that we're going to have some significant progress to talk about when we get there."

The administration believes progress on the nuclear front with Kazakhstan could influence discussions with Ukraine, alone among the former Soviet Republics with nuclear weapons in not endorsing the Start I treaty.

Two weeks ago, Clinton warned Ukraine it will not get U.S. economic aid until it withdrew new conditions on embracing the agreement.

"Making progress with Kazakhstan and doing it with class will put further pressure on Ukraine," said Spurgeon M. Keeny Jr., president of the Arms Control Association. "It will undercut a lot of their super nationalists and people who are trying to engage in horse trading with nuclear weapons."

In Moscow, Gore will spend three days in sessions of the commission he co-chairs with Russian Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin to explore joint ventures in space, high technology, oil, gas and other energy exploration, business investment and environmental projects.

Three Clinton Cabinet members, the No. 2 Defense Department official, NASA's administrator and other senior officials will join those talks, designed to produce several agreements for Gore to sign as well as make progress on further accords for the Clinton-Yeltsin summit.

"The process is designed to put the unsolved problems before our commission so that we can get them out of the way before the two presidents meet," Gore said. Topics of discussion will include the proposal to end the practice of aiming nuclear weapons at major cities in both countries, disbursement of a U.S. aid funds for warhead dismantling, and Russian legal and economic reforms considered critical by potential major U.S. investors.

Parent killer's court case goes to jury

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lyle Menendez's murder case went to a jury Friday after a prosecutor denounced him and his brother as "spoiled, vicious brats" and "monsters."

Separate juries considered the evidence against the two in their parents' 1989 slayings. Closing arguments in Erik Menendez's case were scheduled Monday. If one jury reaches a verdict before the other, Judge Stanley Weisberg has said he won't release it until the other verdict is completed.

Prosecutor Pamela Bozanich accused Lyle of using his dead parents' wealth to get "the best murder defense daddy's money can buy." She said her own father was the victim of parental abuse and led a productive life without committing murder.

"For all those children who were severely abused and who became useful members of society, this defense is an offense," Bozanich said.

"Don't assume that just because people have money they can't do violence," she said. "If these defendants came from South Central Los Angeles we'd have had no trouble believing them capable of violence."

Lyle's jury adjourned after about four hours of deliberations and was sent home for the weekend.

The brothers testified they killed their millionaire father, Jose Menendez, 45, and mother Kitty Menendez, 47, in self-defense after years of sexual and psychological abuse.

Prosecutors are seeking the death penalty.

On Thursday, Lyle sobbed in court as his lawyer told jurors to consider his pain and urged an involuntary manslaughter verdict.

In her rebuttal Friday, Bozanich told the jury that Lyle, 25, and Erik, 23, were trying to elude conviction by portraying themselves as irresponsible children.

"He's trying to act as a child, a baby," she said. "He's an adult and he planned out this crime."

Bozanich posted a picture of Kitty Menendez in life beside a blood-spattered closeup of her body in death.

"This is Mrs. Menendez before she married," she said, pointing to the first picture. "And this is Mrs. Menendez after she married and bore these two monsters."

Acknowledging that the Menendez family was "not an Ozzie and Harriet family where everyone was happy," Bozanich said the parents gave the brothers the privileges of wealth.

"The parents were willing to support them while they were spoiled, vicious brats," she said.

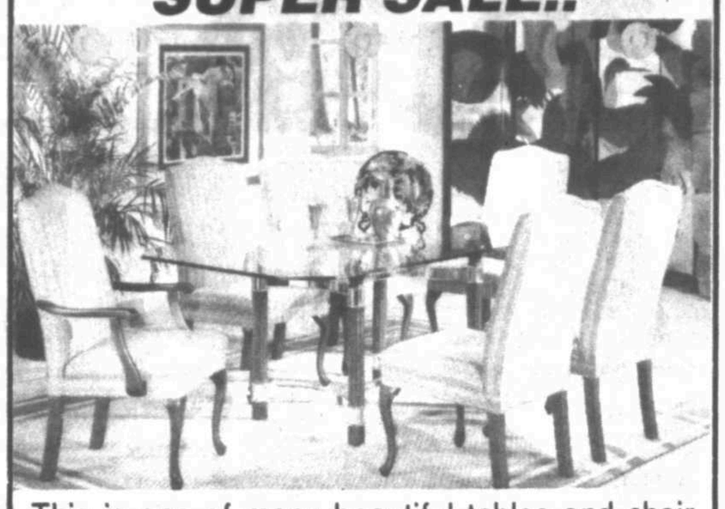

Addressing the central defense theme of child abuse, Bozanich said, "You know what, it doesn't matter. Do you really think child abuse justifies murder? Not all abused children kill their parents."

Denver police: 2 out of 3 young blacks may have gang ties

By Dirk Johnson
N.Y. Times News Service

DENVER — Using a variety of criteria, from a youth's choice of clothing to tips from informants, the Denver police have compiled a roster of suspected gang members so vast that it could include two of every three young black men in the city.

Police officials say that only a small percentage of the 6,500 names on the list could be considered "hard core" gang members and that many of these young men, in fact, have never been arrested.

Reports of the list's existence have touched off outrage here among civil rights leaders, who say it is preposterous to assert that two of every three young black men in Denver belong to a gang.

"They ought to call it the black-list," said the Rev. Oscar Tillman, a senior official of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in Denver. "This is harassment. It's not a crackdown on gangs; it's a crackdown on blacks."

Blacks represent only 5 percent of the city's population but accounted for more than half of the names on the police list. Hispanic residents, who represent about 12 percent of Denver's population, accounted for about one-third of the list. Whites, who represent 80 percent of the city's population, accounted for less than 7 percent.

A racial breakdown of the list was disclosed earlier this week by The Denver Post. Police officials said the list is a useful investigative tool, but declined to discuss in detail how they use it.

James Joy, the executive director of the Colorado chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, said that being identified as a gang member carries important legal consequences, since it could be used in court against a defendant facing criminal charges.

For instance, the suburb of Aurora, whose police department uses the Denver list, has a law that provides for stiffer penalties when a person is convicted of a gang-related crime.

Police point out that most big-city police departments compile gang lists of some kind. The list's racial imbalance simply reflects the reality of gang composition in Denver, said Detective David Metzler, a spokesman for the Denver police.

"In Denver, we happen to have a problem with black gangs and Hispanic gangs," he said. "There are some whites here who belong to the Crips and Bloods. And if their numbers grow, we'll keep track of them, too. It makes no difference to us what the race of gang members are."

In deciding who to put on the list, police say they look for more than one of the following: people who flash gang signals, dress in the colors and insignia of a gang, have been arrested in the company of gang members or are known to associate with gang members. Some of the information is provided by informants. The list is not public.

"We don't just drive down the street and see a guy with a Raiders jacket and put him on the gangster list," Detective Metzler said.

If a person on the list has no contact with police for two years, his name is downgraded to "inactive"; after five years without police contact, his name is removed.

Critics of the list note that belonging to a street gang is not a crime, and that the criteria for being included are too subjective.

"A lot of these kids will say they're in a gang when they're not, just because they think it's cool," said the Rev. Tillman. "I don't know why they automatically assume a black kid is telling the truth when he says he's a gang member. They don't believe us when we say we're innocent."

Joy of the ACLU described the police's use of the list as "objectionable but legal," reminiscent of McCarthyism, when people were punished for associations with left-wing groups and figures.

The Denver Post disclosed that 3,691 blacks are on the gang list, a number equivalent to two-thirds of the black males between the ages of 12 and 24 in the city.

The percentages cannot be considered precise, since it is not known how many of those on the list live outside Denver. But police officials say city residents dominate the list.

In an interview with the Post, Mayor Wellington Webb, who is black, did not dispute the racial composition of the gang list, but said, "There's a lot of work that needs to be done."

Commuter train murder suspect appears in court

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — Funerals and wakes began Friday for victims of the Long Island Rail Road slaughter and the accused gunman, protected by a bullet-proof vest, was in court to have a lawyer appointed.

Authorities, concerned about revenge attacks, insisted that Colin Ferguson wear the vest. Handcuffed and shackled during the 10-minute hearing, he craned his neck to hear his new attorney, Anthony Falanga.

Ferguson, 35, remained in jail without bail, accused of killing five commuters and wounding 18 Tuesday night shortly after a train arrived in Garden City.

The gunman was subdued by three passengers after squeezing off more than 30 shots.

"I think it is quite obvious a psychiatric exam is required here," Falanga told reporters. Ferguson's next court appearance was scheduled for Dec. 17.

No death threats have been made against Ferguson, authorities said, but courthouse security was tight. Metal detectors were used to screen all visitors.

A private funeral was held Friday for slain passenger Richard Nettleton, 24. Wakes began for three others: Mi-Kyung Kim, 27; James Gorycki, 51; and Dennis McCarthy, 52. The body of Marita Theresa Magtoto, 32, will be sent to her native Philippines for burial.

Ferguson's Brooklyn landlord, Patrick Denis, said Ferguson was divorced in 1989. Ferguson married Audrey Warren in 1986. She declined to discuss their marriage with reporters, but police Sgt. Williams Cocks said Warren told them "she hasn't seen him in four years."

Woman wants criminal record expunged

DALLAS (AP) — Joyce Ann Brown, who spent nine years in prison before an appeals court set aside her 1981 conviction of armed robbery, wants to set the record straight.

Ms. Brown has asked a State District Judge Mark Tolle to strike her criminal record from federal, state and local law enforcement agencies and from court records. The judge said he would rule on her request Dec. 17.

Ms. Brown, an administrative assistant to Dallas County Commissioner John Wiley Price, spent nine years in prison before the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in 1989 set aside her conviction for the armed robbery of a Dallas fur store.

Ms. Brown has always maintained she was wrongfully convicted because she was a victim of mistaken identity. She spent "nine years, five months and 24 days" in prison, she said.

She said she wants her record expunged for several reasons, including the possibility that she may someday run for public office. She said she also doesn't want to have to reveal her conviction on a job application.

Assistant District Attorney April Smith, however, argued that in order to have the record erased, Ms. Brown must prove that a grand jury based its indictment of her on false information, something she hasn't done.

Ms. Brown's lawyers, Kerry Fitzgerald and Jack Strickland, disagreed, saying they had proved all necessary elements under state law to have the records removed.

The lawyers asked that four charges, all filed in 1980, be taken off Ms. Brown's records: the aggravated robbery indictment and three indictments that the Dallas County district attorney's office eventually dismissed. Those include a capital murder indictment, a capital murder re-indictment and a charge of aggravated promotion of prostitution.

The capital murder charges relate to the robbery, in which the owner of the fur store, Rubin Danziger, was killed as his wife watched.

Ms. Brown was convicted of aggravated robbery in the case, partly on testimony of Ala Danziger, the victim's wife. Ms. Brown's co-defendant, Rene Taylor, pleaded guilty to capital murder and was sentenced to life in prison.

Ms. Brown maintains that she didn't participate in the robbery but that a woman who resembles her did.

The state's highest appeals court set aside Ms. Brown's conviction in November 1989, ruling that prosecutors had failed to tell defense lawyers that one of their witnesses had previously been convicted of perjury.

The case was sent back to district court to be re-tried, but the Dallas County district attorney's office announced in February 1990 that it didn't have enough evidence to retry Ms. Brown and state District Judge Ron Chapman dismissed the 1980 robbery charge.

Ms. Brown's case was highly publicized while she was in prison. She was featured on CBS' "60 Minutes" and in numerous newspapers and magazines. She has written a book about her experiences.

District attorney orders new forensic tests

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Bexar County district attorney has ordered new forensic tests in pending criminal cases handled by former chief crime serologist Fred Zain, who has been accused of fabricating evidence.

"A lot of folks are running around like chickens with their heads cut off," District Attorney Steve Hilbig was quoted as saying in Friday's San Antonio Express-News.

"We need to develop facts. We need to check the cases Zain did and see if there is a pattern and go from there," Hilbig said.

West Virginia authorities allege Zain fabricated or misrepresented evidence in as many as 134 cases between 1985 and 1989, the year he left the state police serology unit.

Zain has denied wrongdoing.

He was fired earlier this year from the Bexar County Medical Examiner's Office after a complaint from a local law enforcement agency.

Until the results of new tests are available, Hilbig said, he wouldn't know what effect Zain's work would have on Bexar County cases.

Crestview choirs to present holiday concerts

Staff Report

The children's choirs of Crestview Baptist Church will present "Arch, the Angel" at 6 p.m. Sunday at the main auditorium, 3300 Thomas Ave.

The 97-voice children's choir will don a host of angelic costumes as Archibald Edward Angel discovers that his assignment to the S.S. division does not place him in the "Secret Service."

Instead, Arch finds himself in the middle of the "Sing and Shine"

■ More religion/1B

division, otherwise known as the Christmas division.

Also, at 7 p.m. Wednesday, the youth choir will present "For Unto Y'all — A Cowboy Christmas" in the Student Center on the southwest corner of Kingsway Center, formerly Dellwood Mall.

"For Unto Y'all" is an "Old West" allegory that relates the story of the birth of Christ in a whole new setting. The angel Gabriel will become a six-gun totin' masked man dressed in white, and Mary and Joseph will travel across the Wyoming Territory as the 65-voice youth choir takes the stage.

Writer and arranger Robert Sterling said of his work, "When I was a kid growing up in Texas, about the only thing better than cowboys was Christmas ... So I guess it's not so strange that now, as a grown-up, I would somehow try to put Christmas and cowboys together."

In addition "A Festive Christmas" will be presented at 6 p.m. Dec. 19.

This holiday program is built around Christmas carols, "including familiar tunes often associated with Christmas and famous carols that are not sung as often," said Ty Morris Jr., minister of music.

The 65-voice choir will be joined by a 20-piece orchestra and 15-voice children's ensemble for the event.

There will be no admission fee. For more information call Crestview Baptist Church, 694-7701.

FUMC's 'Ding-a-Lings' are to perform program on bells

Staff Report

Marian Reeder and Monta Jo Johnson on handbells, accompanied by Carol Hall on keyboards are to present the third program in the 1993 series of Lunch Hour Concerts for Advent and Christmas at First United Methodist Church, at 12:05 p.m. Wednesday at the church sanctuary.

These 30-minute concerts are presented by the church as a Christmas gift to the citizens of Midland and surrounding areas and are especially designed for those working in downtown offices.

Concerts always feature local artists.

A light lunch will be available at a nominal cost in the Fellowship Hall of the church a half hour before and after each performance. Concert goers are invited to join in the lunch fellowship.

Mrs. Reeder, Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Hall are longtime Midland residents who also have been active in the music ministry of First United Methodist Church.

Known as the Texas Ding-a-Lings, they have presented concerts in Texas as well as across the United States. They play four octaves of Malmark bells.

A nursery will be available for infants, toddlers and preschoolers.

No admission is charged.

Woman to go on trial for husband's murder

BEAUMONT (AP) — The widow of a slain Port Arthur lawyer was returned to Beaumont Friday where she stands accused of hiring her lover to kill her husband in 1986.

Tami Kaylo-Reed Cohen, 31, arrived at the Jefferson County Airport at 1:55 p.m., said Denise Bottcher, a spokeswoman for the Jefferson County district attorney's office. Ms. Cohen was arrested Thursday in Pittsburgh, Pa., just hours after a Texas grand jury returned a murder indictment against her.

After a scheduled arraignment before Justice of the Peace Harold Engstrom, Ms. Cohen was to be taken to the Jefferson County Jail where she will remain pending a $500,000 bond.

The indictment is the second returned against Ms. Cohen in the Sept. 29, 1986 death of her husband, Robert Reed, 44.

In November 1986 both Ms. Cohen and Mitch Roy Little, 34, of Port Arthur were indicted on capital murder charges. At that time, Ms. Cohen was accused of hiring Little to kill her husband for more than $200,000 in insurance money.

District Attorney Tom Maness in January 1987 dropped the charge against Ms. Cohen, citing insufficient evidence, and downgraded the charge against Little to murder.

Then, in June 1987, Little was convicted of murder and sentenced to life imprisonment. He will be eligible for parole in 2006.

Ms. Cohen moved to Forest Hills, a suburb of Pittsburgh in 1988 and was a caseworker for the state welfare office.

New evidence, according to Maness, reopened the case this year.

Maness would not comment on the nature of the evidence.

State wants to clean up compound site in Waco

AUSTIN (AP) — The state sought a court order Friday to clean up the site of the Branch Davidian compound where religious cult leader David Koresh and more than 80 of his followers died.

The area is contaminated with lead from munitions, untreated sewage, diesel fuel and household waste, according to a motion filed in McLennan County by the state attorney general's office.

There also may be unexploded munitions, according to the state, which is intervening in a property dispute over the site to be allowed to clean it up. Nine individuals claim ownership or other property rights to the abandoned compound, according to the attorney general's office.

"We have absolutely no claims with regard to the property dispute in question," Attorney General Dan Morales said. "But when the health and safety of the citizens of Texas are threatened, we feel it is necessary and proper to act swiftly to abate this public nuisance."

Border Patrol to build steel fence

EL PASO (AP) — The U.S. Border Patrol plans to build a 1.3-mile steel fence in southern New Mexico to curb illegal immigration, says the agency official who devised a human wall to cut off undocumented immigrants' access to West Texas.

The 10-foot-high steel-plank fence would be located south of Sunland Park, N.M., and just north of the Colonia Anapra region of Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, Border Patrol Chief Agent Silvestre Reyes said Friday.

"It covers an area that is heavily trafficked right now, both by aliens and that has been used for narcotics smuggling," said Reyes, head of the agency's El Paso Sector, which covers part of West Texas and all of New Mexico.

Reyes is also the creator of a border blockade which uses agents strung out along a 20-mile section of the Rio Grande in the El Paso-Juarez area to stop illegal immigrants.

The blockade has cut apprehensions from about 1,000 daily to about 150 daily since being initiated Sept. 19, indicating illegal crossing attempts are also down substantially, patrol officials say.

Reyes said the fence is an extension of the agency's heightened enforcement efforts.

He said requests for federal environmental impact studies around Sunland Park have been filed. Construction could begin next year if the plan is approved by the Border Patrol's parent agency, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, Reyes said.

He estimated the project will cost about $100,000 to $120,000.

Plans also call for installation of spotlights and surveillance cameras in the area.

"We're building on what is already being done in California and what is going to be done in Arizona," Reyes said. There is a 14-mile steel border fence south of San Diego and a four-mile fence at San Luis, Ariz. Similar barriers are planned or proposed at the Arizona border cities of Nogales, Naco and Douglas.

Reyes also said a new 13-mile extension project for the concrete-lined Rio Grande canal in the El Paso-Juarez metropolitan area will further strengthen the border.

Two security fences will parallel the southern bank of the extension. Another will run along the north side of the new canal, which is expected to cost up to $35 million.

"We take advantage of things that are already in place," Reyes said.

Austin fails to pass ban on smoking

AUSTIN (AP) — The Austin City Council will appoint a task force to recommend a no-smoking ordinance after failing to muster enough votes for one that would ban puffing in restaurants, bars and other public places.

Members of the Austin Restaurant Association had lobbied against the ordinance up for consideration Thursday, saying it would cost them customers. Mayor Bruce Todd also toughened the measure by adding bars to the list of places where people could not light up.

The vote was 3-3, with one member absent.

Council member Ronney Reynolds said restaurant and bar owners should be given the opportunity to pose a compromise.

"I have never smoked a cigarette in my life. I am not a friend of the tobacco industry. And I am very interested in having a total ban on smoking in public places," Reynolds said.

"But this ordinance was just proposed last week. And we need to have input on what effect it will have on us," he said.

The council approved a task force to study the ordinance and try to work out a compromise that can be supported by restaurant and bar owners.

It will include members of health organizations and supporters of the ban, along with representatives of bars, restaurants and the East Sixth Street entertainment.

Silent night... hungry night.

During this holiday season, hundreds of families in the Permian Basin face the grim possibility of having little, if any, food to eat.

To those families, the colorful sights and smells of Christmas are darkened and grayed by hunger. As in years past, volunteers from Memorial Hospital and KNFM Radio are asking for your generous donation of food to benefit the Permian Basin Food Bank.

The collection area will be in front of the Abell-Hanger Medical Pavilion, 200 Andrews Highway.

The food drive begins at 3:00 p.m. December 13.

Because we care, we'll work all night until 10:00 a.m. December 14th to accept your donation of food.

You can bring joy and brightness to some special people this holiday by giving generously.

Jail officials post bail after arrest in beatings of two prisoners

FORT WORTH (AP) — Two jailers have posted bail after being booked on suspicion of violating the civil rights of two inmates in the Tarrant County Jail.

Todd Hamilton, 32, and Dale Motes, 44 — members of a special team responsible for putting down unruly inmates — were suspended about three weeks ago.

Hamilton and Motes, were placed on paid leave after jail officials reviewed videotapes of an incident involving a 40-year-old inmate Oct. 21 and an incident involving a 28-year-old inmate Nov. 18.

Whenever the jail's Primary Emergency Response Team is activated, one of the four to six officers involved carries a video camera to tape the incident for the protection of everyone's interests, said Chief Deputy Hank Pope, who oversees the operation.

On Nov. 21, jail warden Maj. John Smedley said, jail administrators became aware "through some sources and regular jail procedures" of alleged civil rights violation of two inmates in the jail.

It was while reviewing the videotape of the Nov. 18 incident that he discovered the Oct. 21 incident, Smedley said.

Smedley said Hamilton slammed 40-year-old inmate Neal Sharkey, who was "mouthing off," into an elevator, kneed him in the thigh, slapped him in the back of the head and used a metal baton to apply excessive pressure to a spot behind Sharkey's ear.

A sergeant who saw it all but made no effort to intervene was later placed on administrative leave, Smedley said.

In the Nov. 18 incident, inmate Tony Blacklock complained that Hamilton "shook down" his cell while he was taking a shower and that he was beaten after he complained about it.

An officer at the scene said he held Blacklock while Hamilton punched the inmate in the face and told investigators of seeing Motes kicking Blacklock in the face and upper body while the inmate was on the ground.

Repair crew frees Hubble from shuttle

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The Hubble repair crew sent the refurbished telescope back into space Friday to conduct "many, many more years of science" and then took a presidential call of thanks.

President Clinton congratulated the seven Endeavour astronauts on "one of the most spectacular space missions in our history."

"You made it look easy," Clinton said.

The last remaining goal of the record-breaking, spacewalk-studded mission was reached early Friday when Swiss astronaut Claude Nicollier released the Hubble from the end of the shuttle crane 369 miles over South Africa. Its new golden solar wings shimmered in the sunlight as Endeavour slowly backed away.

"That was a very special moment to see it on its way, ready, open for business," flight director Milt Heflin said.

During the mission, which cost $629 million and came after a series of embarrassing problems for NASA, the astronauts conducted a record five spacewalks. They installed 11 new Hubble parts, including guidance and power systems and mirrors designed to correct the telescope's nearsightedness. The crew encountered few obstacles, and all were surmounted. The last was a telescope data-relay problem that delayed Hubble's release by three hours.

The final and most important outcome, however, won't be known for two months. That's how long it will take NASA to focus and align Hubble's new instruments and determine whether the telescope can clearly see the more remote objects in the universe.

NASA launched the $1.6 billion Hubble in 1990 with a primary mirror that was ground too flat along the edge. The defect left Hubble nearsighted and unable to answer astronomers' most pressing questions, such as the age and size of the universe. It also left NASA scrambling to fix Hubble's vision during what should have been a routine service call. Among other things, the astronauts also had to replace shaky solar panels and failed gyroscopes.

Police release Marshall teens linked to slaying

MARSHALL (AP) — Two of the five teen-agers arrested in connection with the Thanksgiving carjacking and slaying of a 16-year-old girl have been released.

Prosecutors say the two, ages 14 and 16, knew nothing about the carjacking or slaying of Susan Van Orden when they got into her car with three other teens that night for a trip they wanted to make to California.

Kendrick Deroy Allen, 17, of Karnack, has been charged with capital murder in the beating death of Van Orden, his neighbor and former classmate.

Also being held in connection with Van Orden's death are two juveniles, ages 15 and 16, whom authorities are trying to have certified as adults.

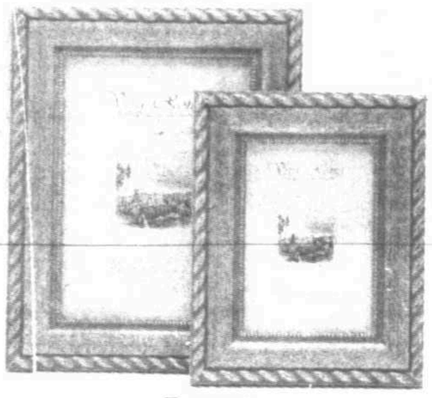

District Attorney Rick Berry said the two juveniles who were released Thursday "were not involved in taking the car or the murder. They were just running away to California."

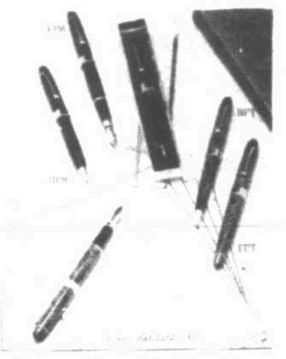

Van Orden was killed after she agreed to give Allen and two others a ride around 10 p.m. when she got off work at a Marshall What-a-Burger restaurant.

Police said once the three youths got into the car with Van Orden, they forced her to drive them to a secluded street dead end, where they shot her once in the left arm and then beat her with the rifle after it became jammed.

Pleas begin for mother accused of killing infant

HEREFORD (AP) — Former nurse Tanya Thaxton Reid did not smother her infant daughter in 1984, Ms. Reid's ex-husband testified Friday.

Raymond Reid said he never suspected Ms. Reid caused their baby's death or frequent breathing problems.

The couple divorced in 1989 after Ms. Reid, 36, was convicted in Iowa of endangering her young son.

She was indicted in March and extradited to Deaf Smith County from the Iowa prison where she is serving a 10-year sentence.

Prosecutors rested their case Thursday after presenting a series of witnesses who told their suspicions that Ms. Reid cut off air to 8-month-old Morgan Reid and her brother, Robert, when he was 3. The trial began Dec. 1.

Morgan died Feb. 8, 1984, at an Amarillo hospital. Her autopsy showed oxygen deprivation.

The Reids' oldest child, 13-year-old Kimberly, testified Friday that her mother never abused her.

But Dr. Jerome Skurka testified for the prosecution that he had suggested Ms. Reid seek counseling while he was treating Morgan in Chicago.

"I stated my concerns that the apnea episodes occurred only when Morgan was with the mother," Skurka said. "I was concerned about the pattern."

Dr. Randall Alexander of Iowa City said he believes Ms. Reid suffers from Munchausen Syndrome by Proxy, a psychological disorder in which she hurt children to get attention.

Deaf Smith County district attorney Roland Saul asked Alexander, who has studied child abuse, what he thinks caused Morgan's death.

"The oxygen supply to the brain was cut off. ... She was suffocated," Alexander testified Thursday.

Judy Simmons, the state's final witness, testified her infant son was healthy until she left him in 1974 in the care of Ms. Reid, then a teen-ager in Dumas.

"Tanya told me Scott had stopped breathing and she called an ambulance," Ms. Simmons said. The babysitter was lauded as a Dumas hero for saving the baby, she testified.

Defense attorney Charles Rittenberry said his client's children suffered from a genetic illness that caused their seizures and breathing cessations.

Authorities seize more than two tons of cocaine in raids

HOUSTON (AP) — Authorities announced Friday the arrest of six suspects and recovery of 4,500 pounds of cocaine worth more than $2.2 million, after four seizures this week.

U.S. Customs Service agents led the investigation which included assisting officers from the Drug Enforcement Administration and Houston Police Department.

The first seizure was made Tuesday, netting 29 pounds of the illegal substance.

A second seizure was made Wednesday and 231 pounds of cocaine was found.

Churches plan holiday events

■ First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave., is presenting "Carols and Choruses" at 7:30 p.m. Sunday.

The musical event features selections from favorite masterworks of the Christmas season and familiar carols about the Nativity.

The Agape Ringers Handbell Choir, Chamber Orchestra, soloists and the 60 voices of the Sanctuary Choir of First Presbyterian Church will be part of this musical celebration. They will be accompanied by organ and harp.

Then, at 6 p.m. Dec. 19 in the Lynn Hall "O Come All Ye Faithful to the Round Table Carol Sing" will be held.

This event is sold out every year and those attending are advised to purchase their tickets early. Tickets are $5 for adults and $3 for children ages 3-11. Children ages 2 and under are free.

The evening includes dinner, singing, fun and fellowship.

Tickets will be on sale Sunday following the 8:15 and 11 a.m. worship services.

A nursery will be provided, call the church office for reservations at 684-8424.

Also, Christmas Eve Services will be at 5:30 and 9 p.m. Dec. 24.

■ Midland Lutheran Church, 2705 W. Michigan Ave., will present the Sunday School Christmas program at the 10:30 a.m. Advent Communion Service on Sunday.

The third candle of the Advent Wreath, the shepherd's candle, will be lit by the Richard Knottek family.

"Go, Tell It On The Mountain — A Faith Sharing Event" directed by Kathy Fritz and Marylin Boomer, will feature the Youth Choir and Handbells and the Joyful Singers.

Youth instrumentalists included in the program are Jody Nicholson, Shawnie Fritz, Amy Boomer, Melanie Martin, Brian Knottek, Jamie Nicholson, Susan Rodgers, and Mariesa Cooke.

The weekly Advent Devotion will continue on Wednesday evening at 7 p.m. A light supper will be served for a nominal charge beginning at 6 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall.

The public is invited to share in the Advent Season. For more information contact the church's minister, the Rev. Ronald Meyer, 694-1373.

■ Hope Lutheran Church, 2003 N. "A" St., will tell the story of preparing for the coming of the Messiah at its 8:30 and 10:30 a.m. worship services Sunday.

The story will be told through Scripture reading and music to highlight the meaning of Advent, the time of preparation for Jesus' birth. The adult choir directed by Leabeth Quinn, music director, will lead the singing.

At 4 p.m., the Sunday School Christmas program entitled "The First Christmas Gift" will be presented by the children in the sanctuary. Wrapped "thank offering" gift boxes — which have been used to collect money in thankfulness to God for the many blessings received this holiday season — will be brought to the Christmas program and offered as gifts to be given to Christ Lutheran School in Odessa to help with their expenses.

All are welcomed to attend the Sunday morning worship services and the Sunday School program. For more information, contact the church office at 683-1936.

■ The Christian Church of Midland, 2608 Neely St., is presenting a special Christmas presentation at 10:45 a.m. Dec. 19.

The Adult Choir and "His Way" Teen Choir will present "Festival of Carols." The Christmas story is told through narration and an entire worship of celebration of carol singing, with congregational participation.

"The rich textures of traditional carols mixed with colorful new songs make this a delightful presentation for all to enjoy," said a release from the church.

Also, at 6 p.m. Dec. 19, the Rainbow Kids Choir will present "A Wordbirds Christmas."

"This fun musical gives a new and interesting way to celebrate the birth of the King of Kings," the release said.

In addition, a Live Nativity Scene will be on display from 7 to 9 p.m. Dec. 17 and 18. All are invited to attend.

■ Trinity School's 36th annual Christmas Service will be conducted in the School's Beal Gymnasium, 3500 W. Wadley Ave., at 10 a.m. Friday.

The service will include remarks by the Rev. Allen Whitman, former rector of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity in Midland and current chaplain of Trinity School. Lessons will be read by the Ranking Scholars of grades seven through 12 and the head of school.

Carols will be sung by the various school choirs. The community is invited to attend.

■ The Choristers of Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, 1412 W. Illinois Ave., will present the 11th annual Candlelight Carol Services at 5:00 and 7:00 p.m. Sunday.

The service includes traditional carols from around the world. St. Luke's UMC choir to sing John Rutter's 'Magnificat'

Staff Report

John Rutter's "Magnificat" will be presented at 5 p.m. Sunday at St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3011 W. Kansas Ave.

The work will be performed by the church's Chancel Choir and members of the Midland-Odessa Symphony. Vivian Moss, a local musician and voice teacher, will be singing the soprano solos.

She is an adjunct voice teacher at Midland College in addition to having her own home studio.

The work will be directed by Bert Bostic, the church's minister of program and music.

First performed May 26, 1990, in Carnegie Hall, by Maria Alsatti, the Manhattan Chamber Orchestra and participating choirs in a Mid-America Productions concert, conducted by the composer, "Magnificat" — or the canticle of the Virgin — comes from Luke 1:46:55. It consists of 12 verses, including the Doxology at the end.

From the 15th through 18th centuries, the "Magnificat" was frequently set for voices or for organ. Aside from an English 14th-century setting, the earliest composers of the "Magnificat" were Dunstable, Dufay and Binchois. Each of them composed the entire text, including the Doxology at the end, using one or the other of the "Magnificat" tones.

After 1450 it became customary to compose only the even numbered verses, the others being sung in plainsong.

Later composers of the "Magnificat" include Schutz, S. Bernard, R. Ahle and J.S. Bach, who composed it as a cantata.

Former member of rock band to present concert, preach

Staff Report

Fenholt toured the United States, appearing before crowds of up to 100,000 for each performance during "Jesus Christ Superstar." He then went on to recreate the role of Jesus, opening on Broadway. He sang the role of Jesus on the original recording.

In December 1984 Fenholt joined Black Sabbath; he left the group in May 1985.

Since then, Fenholt has performed concerts and presented altar calls throughout the world. He and his wife, Reeni, appear nationally on a weekly television show. the show is available to more than 47 million homes in the United States as well as via satellite throughout the world.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION IS IMPORTANT TO UNITARIANS

Do you want your child to learn a sense of right and wrong without a sense of fear or guilt?

Do you want your child to seek truth with understanding and tolerance of other religions? If you have been looking for religious education based on reason and example, not dogma or fear of "eternal damnation," we may be of interest.

Bad habits must be broken

Whoopi's 'Sister Act' sequel fails to live up to the original

By Todd Camp
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

Nuns have been a source of Hollywood humor for years. They've been on the Broadway stage in Dan Goggin's hit musical "Nunsense," on the tube with the airborne antics of Sally Field as "The Flying Nun," on the screen in dozens of film incarnations including "The Trouble With Angels," "Nasty Habits," "Nuns on the Run" and, of course, last year's "Sister Act."

There's no argument. Nuns are funny. So what's wrong with "Sister Act 2: Back in the Habit?" One thing: Not enough nuns!

All the familiar faces have returned: Whoopi as a Las Vegas headliner who once again disguises herself as a sister, Kathy Najimy as the hilariously perky Sister Mary Patrick, Mary Wickes as the sour-faced Sister Mary Lazarus, Wendy Makkena as the timid Sister Mary Robert and the wonderful Maggie Smith as Mother Superior.

But once the sisters convince Deloris Van Cartier (Goldberg) to get back in the habit and help transform a hellish classroom full of punks into a heavenly choir, the kids take over and the nuns become set dressing.

It should have been called "Class Act" instead of "Sister Act," but that title had already been taken.

The first film had Deloris dodging her

LOS ANGELES — Before Beavis and Butt-Head, we had Wayne and Garth.

You remember Wayne and Garth, don't you? Those two lovable live-at-homes with their very own public access TV show emanating live from the basement of Wayne's home in Aurora, Ill. Those perennial teens of "Saturday Night Live" fame who enriched the language with such expressions as "Party on" and "Not!"

'Geronimo': Noble, but a bit too polite

By Dolores Barclay
AP Arts Editor

A part of American history that will always live in infamy is the white man's systematic destruction of the Indian. It has taken the American film industry the better part of its own history to try to make some sense of it all.

Unfortunately, the majority of movies served up between the 1920s and now have been "romantic" shoot-'em-ups that painted a one-sided vista of the American West: good, hard-working cowboys vs. evil, crazy Indians.

A few films, such as "Dances With Wolves," "Broken Arrow," "A Man Called Horse" and "Windwalker," attempted to portray Indians more realistically and tell the story of the West through their voice.

Now comes Walter Hill's epic, "Geronimo: An American Legend." It is a noble effort, but any impact it may have had is dashed by an overdose of political correctness.

The story of Geronimo, a great Apache leader and warrior, is told through the voice of a young, white soldier, making the screenplay by John Milius and Larry Gross just another tale of how the West was "won" by strong, brave white Americans.

The movie is not Geronimo's story, despite a mesmerizing performance by Wes Studi ("The Last of the Mohicans," "Dances With Wolves"). Nor does it chronicle how Indians were forced to give up their ways of life, lose their homes, their families and their freedom.

Rather, "Geronimo" is the slow-paced story of a few sympathetic white men with morals and their relationships with the Chiricahua leader.

After his people and his family are murdered first by Mexicans and then by whites, and their land stolen, Geronimo declares war on the whites. He matches

'Sleepless' will keep romantics up nights

■ Video Reviews

If you can let go of your common sense for a couple of hours and allow yourself to believe that, yes, it is possible for a woman to fall in love with a man simply because she hears him on a call-in pop psychology radio show, then "Sleepless in Seattle" can be a warm, gentle, engaging story.

But Nora Ephron, the pen behind "When Harry Met Sally ..." and "Sleepless" does demand a lot of viewers when she asks them to believe an unhappily-en-

NBC announces programming changes

NBC, once the proud "Peacock Network," now, just "Those guys who plant encendiary devices to make trucks explode so they can get higher ratings on their news magazine shows" recently announced a couple of programming changes.

Patterson

Effective Jan. 6, the network is pulling the rejuvenated "L.A. Law." It's only for a month, NBC says, and the show will return in February. When it does, it will be up against the prime time telecasts of the Winter Olympics.

"Law" will be shelved so the network can feature four episodes of "Homicide: A Life in the Street," a series that was shelved itself after a short stint last season.

Robin Williams will make a guest appearance on the first of the four new "Homicide" programs. Williams, whose movie "Mrs. Doubtfire" is thusfar the holiday season box office biggie, will play a straight role in a storyline about a man and his family who become crime victims while vacationing in Baltimore.

In addition to the month-long pre-emption, "Law" went two weeks without being aired earlier this month while we were handed a Mariah Carey special and the memorable Laugh-In Christmas Special.

These guys never learn, do they?

NBC finally gets itself a string of quality "L.A. Law" programs, and what does it do? It sits the show eight out of 10 weeks in December and January.

Finally, "Law" ditched the dumb bedroom storylines and returned to its roots of compelling courtroom drama. Finally, the critics were through panning the show and were again singing its praises. Finally, ratings were back up as a result.

The addition of strong characters Debi Mazar, who plays legal assistant Denise Ianello, and attorney Eli Levinson (played by Alan Rosenberg), has boosted the show's appeal. Mazar and Rosenberg continue the roles they began in the cancelled NBC series "Civil Wars." Mazar is the displaced Brookylnite who is strong-willed enough to find her way around LA; Levinson, the neurotic cousin to Michael Tucker's Stuart Markowitz, who has recently emerged from a nervous breakdown, but is building his life again.

The show's producers also added Alexandra Powers, who plays fundamentalist Christian attorney Jane Halliday. So far, her character has been neither weak nor particularly strong, although with Arnold Becker lounging in the same office, one wonders about any future sexual tensions that might arise.

Guns n' Roses make Manson a wealthy man

N.Y. Times News Service

By including a secret track of a song by Charles Manson on its new album, Guns n' Roses has borrowed a little of the ghoulish allure of a cult killer. Lots of bands thrive by talking a violent game — advocating sacrifices to Satan or killing police officers, for example — but this is the rare time when a band's actions will actually help a murderer.

The band's decision to include the song "Look at Your Game, Girl" — recorded by Manson in the late 1960s when he was trying to launch a folk-rock career — means the jailed cult leader could earn hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Manson is serving a life sentence in California for his part in the 1969 murders of the actress Sharon Tate and six other people. His followers slashed their victims to death and scrawled slogans like "Kill the Pigs" on the walls in blood.

The song is not mentioned on the album's liner notes; it simply begins 30 seconds after the 12th track ends.

Originally, the song was on a demonstration tape Manson sent to record companies before he became notorious. The tape was made into an album entitled "Lie" by Awareness Records after he went to jail in 1970. Awareness, not Manson, copyrighted the song, but as the first to record it he can claim ownership.

Guns n' Roses' album, "The Spaghetti Incident?," on which the group does its versions of songs by seminal punk bands like the Sex Pistols and Fear, debuted at No. 4 on Billboard's charts and had sold 190,000 copies before the controversy began.

Manson could earn $60,000 for every million albums sold. The band's last, a double album, sold 27 million copies.

The responses to the 13th track have been furious, and the band said it is considering dropping the song from future pressings.

"The fact that Charles Manson would be earning money from the fame he derived committing one of the most horrific crimes of the 20th century is unthinkable to me," said David Geffen, the chairman of Geffen Records, which released the album.

Sharon Tate's sister Doris, who heads a group that lobbies for victims' rights, said: "Doesn't Axl Rose realize what this man did to my family?"

In a statement released through Geffen Records, Rose criticized people who think he's glorifying Manson by using the song and by wearing T-shirts with Manson's face on stage.

At the end of the statement, Rose says he'd thought the song had been written by Dennis Wilson, a member of the Beach Boys who drowned in 1983. However, in his rendition of the mid-tempo ballad with acoustic guitar and syncopated congas, Rose ends with a sigh and says, "Thanks, Chas."

Be assured of no silent nights

You have to be a real grinch not to like Christmas carols. But you don't have to be St. Nick to dislike the way carols are sometimes interpreted by pop artists.

It seems that every country or pop star who's not performing death metal is required to record at least one Christmas album. (Actually, give those death metal folks time and they'll probably come around. Anyone remember Spinal Tap's "Christmas With the Devil?")

Usually, what you wind up with is Christmas carols, augmented by more strings than you'd hear in five symphonies, frequently punched up by bells and choirs ... usually of the children's variety.

That's fine, if you like that kind of stuff. But occasionally, artists try to push the envelope, and that's where this year's list comes in. Among the new Christmas albums, these 12 stand out by keeping true to the season's spirit ... and to their own spirit, too.

12 CDs of Christmas

(Ratings are from 0 to 4.)

■ Alan Jackson, "Honky Tonk Christmas," Arista: Here's the one essential album for country fans this Christmas. It's the best since George Strait's "Merry Christmas Strait to You" several years ago because of its merry humor, despite subjects like "Please Daddy (Don't Get Drunk This Christmas)" and the one about the guy wrapping up his ex-wife's wedding ring as a gift to himself. Why does it work? Because Jackson relies on the inherent jolliness of Stuart Duncan's fiddle, plus mandolins, steel, banjos and swing rhythms for the mood. ★★★½

■ Vince Gill, "Let There Be Peace on Earth," MCA: For lovers of sing-along, mellow Christmas tunes, there could be no better combination than Gill's silver-bell tenor (and no, that tune isn't on this album) and classics like "What Child Is This?" and "Do You Hear What I Hear?" There are so many of those slow-paced tunes that the album drags some in the middle, but it's forgivable. This is the album to put on while wrapping, baking or addressing Christmas cards. But beware: The album is dedicated to Gill's late brother and his self-penned finale, "It Won't Be the Same This Year," is honest and beautiful, but mighty hard to get through. ★★★

■ Lorrie Morgan, "Merry Christmas from London," BNA/BMG: Morgan chooses Christmas to make a quantum stride toward breaking out of the country-only genre, and this album, complete with the New World Philharmonic Orchestra and Singers, certainly succeeds in that regard. Morgan's voice is sumptuous and full, and soars with the assemblage on traditional works (a Christmas medley of "The First Noel," "Silent Night" and "Joy To the World") and even "My Favorite Things" from "The Sound of Music." And you can't get more mainstream than duets with Andy Williams on "Little Snow Girl" and Johnny Mathis on "Blue Snowfall." But the final cut, "Ave Maria," is Morgan's life's triumph (so far), sung joyfully, reverently in Latin. It works, but even if it hadn't, Morgan's attempt marks her maturity as an artist. ★★★

■ Boyz II Men, "Christmas Interpretations," Motown: The neo-doo-wop Philly group's tribute to the season ranges from upbeat numbers like "Let It Snow" (an original, not the "weather outside is frightful" carol) to the bleakness of "Why Christmas?" and "Cold December Nights." As such, it's much more a concept album about Christmas than simply a collection of songs celebrating the holiday. That the Boyz are in fine voice should go without saying. ★★★

■ Aaron Neville, "Aaron Neville's Soulful Christmas," A&M Records: Neville's voice alone makes this worth picking up. He could sing the ingredients for a fruitcake and still sound angelic. But the album is prone to yule-disc pitfalls: "O Holy Night" is overproduced, and sometimes Neville is too reverent. But the occasional Plas Johnson sax solo ("The Christmas Song") or N'Awlins strut ("Louisiana Christmas Day") more than makes up for the flaws. Line like these, from "Such a Night," also shine: "Out in the driveway, I heard such a clatter/I dimmed all the lights and put on Clyde McPhatter." ★★★

■ Ren & Stimpy, "Crock O' Christmas," Nickelodeon/Sony Wonder/Epic: To paraphrase film critic Leonard Maltin's great review of the bomb movie "The Navy Vs. the Night Monsters": 1) Look at the title; 2) examine the artists; 3) beware the songs like "Cat Hairballs" (to the tune of "Jingle Bells," you sing, "O'er the rug I go/with a mouth all full of fuzz/Burying your shoe/'neath a pile of scuz") and "Cobb to the World"; 4) don't say you weren't warned. The most surreal, gross Christmas album ever (well, if you don't count the Partridge Family's). ★★★★

■ Various artists, "A LaFace Family Christmas," Virgin: The "La" in "LaFace" is executive producer Antonio "L.A." Reid; the "Face" is his partner Kenny "Babyface" Edmonds, and the family is made up of artists under their tutelage. Consequently, this hip-hop-/New Jack compilation runs the gamut, from McArthur's straightforward "Have Yourself a Merry Little Christmas" to OutKast's "Player's Ball," which you have to listen to real close to recognize as a Christmas song. TLC and Toni Braxton are the best-known names here, but everyone puts their stamp on these songs. ★★★

■ Bruce Cockburn, "Christmas," Columbia: Cockburn, a singer-songwriter who sounds like a sweeter-voiced (and -tempered) Warren Zevon, has been around for about 20 years and should be at least as famous as, oh, James Taylor. His Christmas album is a good place to start learning about him: Musically and lyrically eclectic (songs include "Iesus Ahatonnia," a Huron Indian carol dating from the early 1600s, as well as staples like "Silent Night"), it's a shining example of a disc that goes off the beaten Christmas-album path. ★★★★

■ Gloria Estefan, "Christmas Through Your Eyes," Epic: This is the kind of Christmas album that separates the elves from the grinches. It's guilty of all the Christmas-album sins: Overproduced (strings and children's choruses), underpersonalized, and loaded with the type of sentiment you could pour on a popcorn ball. Only two songs break the mold: a big-bandish "Let It Snow, Let It Snow, Let It Snow" and the Hispanic-inflected "Arbolito de Navidad." Pop corn indeed. ★½

■ BeBe & CeCe, "First Christmas," Capitol: For the uninitiated, BeBe & CeCe are the brother-and-sister Winans, superstars of Christian music. That is why it might surprise you to learn that the first two songs here are the secular carols "Jingle Bells" and "Silver Bells." The revelation among this mix of traditional hymns, carols and original songs is a reinterpretation of the Five Stairsteps' "Ooh Child" as a hymn to the Christ child. Just in case you don't get it, they follow it with "For Unto Us (A Child is Born)." Overall, though, the disc tends to drag: could be the length, could be the slow tempos, could be both. ★★½

■ Harry Connick Jr., "When My Heart Finds Christmas," Columbia: Harry's at his best celebrating a season full of rich emotion. He goes for a jovial "Sleigh Ride," and gives his signature Big Band sound to "Let It Snow, Let It Snow, Let It Snow." A children's chorus backs him up on a festive "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer," and he captures the party mood on "It Must've Been Ol' Santa Claus," one of several songs he wrote. Another of Connick's compositions, "When My Heart Finds Christmas," is sweet and full of longing, and his "I Pray on Christmas" has a distinctive gospel sound. ★★★

■ David Foster's "The Christmas Album," Interscope Records: Foster does almost all the new arrangements on this CD, which brings together a variety of well-known vocalists, some of whom you wouldn't find together otherwise. Overall, it's a sumptuous, if mellow, product. The hands-down favorite is "O Holy Night," splendidly delivered by Michael Crawford, better known as the voice of Andrew Lloyd Webber's "Phantom." A lovely surprise is Vanessa Williams' "Go Tell it on the Mountain/Mary Had a Baby," with a gospel arrangement and a tent-revival ending. Tom Jones puts his strong soul spin on "Mary's Boy Child," and Wynonna Judd delivers a robust "Blue Christmas." Too bad the same can't be said for Tammy Wynette's "Away in a Manger," rendered laughably awful as she drops her g's ("the cattle are lowin'" and "no cryin' he makes") — and, even worse, offers one verse in her speaking voice — which was never meant to be associated with anything holy. ★★½

SISTER: Supporting players wasted

gangster boyfriend as part of a witness relocation program. This time she has to outsmart the priests in charge of St. Francis High and the streetwise students who aren't as dumb as they look.

It's formula stuff from then on. Whoopi's Sister Mary Clarence shakes up the sisters, the fathers, the students and the neighborhood. There are a half-dozen musical numbers, including a killer opening number set in Vegas with Deloris doing a 22-song medley of tunes concocted by Marc Shaiman. In true Hollywood fashion, the inner-city punks all happen to sing like angels and, of course, everybody lives happily ever after ... except the audience.

Fans of the first film could go either way, pleased with the new direction or perturbed at the lack of nunsense. Despite some terrific tunes and engaging performances from both Goldberg and newcomer Lauryn Hill as a young lady with a chip on her shoulder, "Sister Act 2" doesn't hold a candle to its predecessor.

Supporting players Najimy, Wickes, Michael Jeter and James Coburn are wasted mercilously, and if you haven't figured out the ending during the first 15 minutes, then you just haven't been paying attention. Director Bill Duke is capable of better, particularly after his more captivating creations like "A Rage in Harlem" and "Deep Cover." Unfortunately, "Sister Act 2" comes off as sloppy filmmaking, a bad habit worth breaking.

Darryl Hannah back in big way

NEW YORK (AP) — Is the world ready for a 50-foot feminist? How about an ENRAGED 50-foot feminist?

Are you paying attention yet, guys? Ready or not, Rush Limbaugh's worst nightmare comes to cable's HBO on Saturday night, when Daryl Hannah stars in "Attack of the 50-Ft. Woman."

As improbable as it sounds, this comedic remake of the schlock 1958 science-fiction thriller has a roguish charm and a comfy B-movie feel. What's different is that the 1993 version is a parable about feminist awakening.

Science fiction and female rage! Neat idea, huh?

PATTERSON: NBC's 'Law' bumped off

(From 1C)

"Law" has had some knockout storylines this season. Some of their best ever. A mental patient charged with killing his social worker, in which Max Perlich, as the patient, put in a sterling performance. A woman who became addicted to a shopping network just because it made her feel good to watch the UPS truck drive up every day. And "Law's" take-off on fugitive Katherine Power, in the season's best plot line.

But, if you're a fan, your last opportunity to see "Law" until Feb. 3 will be next Thursday. An NBC publicist says the show will then return uninterrupted through the May sweeps. The same spokesman for NBC has assured that the program is a strong candidate for the fall schedule.

In addition to the "Law" news, the network has announced that effective Jan. 7, the family drama "Against The Grain" will be no more. In its place, NBC will run a new series entitled "Viper."

"Viper" is described by network promotional material as being set "in the near future, in a major metropolitan city being terrorized by a powerful criminal syndicate known as the Outfit.

"The community puts its hopes for a peaceful future in the Viper — a revolutionary sports car that transforms from cruiser to steel-armored pursuit vehicle — and the three men behind it.

"Dorian Harewood stars as Julian Wilkes, a physically disabled technological wizard who reworks a stock roadster into the ultimate, computerized, steel-plated defense force. James McAffrey stars as Joe Astor, a savvy former criminal (this is where it gets good ...) whose memory is secretly replaced with a "law-abiding" identity."

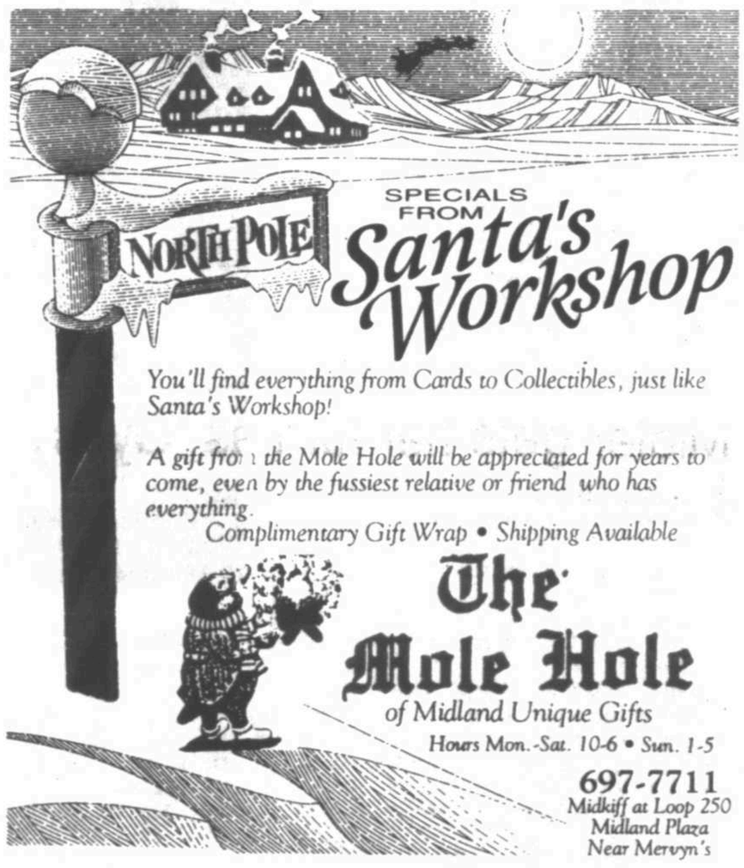

And you wonder why NBC's ratings are starting to bite the dust ...

N.Y. Times News Service

ADDAMS FAMILY VALUES: Marginally funnier than the first "Addams" movie, which ain't very. A baby and Joan Cusack as its homicidal nanny are the new additions here, but the only inspired comedy comes from 13-year-old Christina Ricci, who turns Wednesday's sojourn at summer camp into a dementedly clever coming-of-age satire. Anjelica Huston, Raul Julia and Christopher Lloyd don the usual, arch masks. Barry Sonnenfeld directs again, his comic timing still off, decimated by hyperactive pacing. PG-13. Rating: ★★½

THE BEVERLY HILLBILLIES: They look like the Clampetts. They act like the Clampetts. But the cast of this big-screen remake of the beloved '60s sitcom just ain't funny like the TV show clan was. There's one inspired exception: Lily Tomlin's assistant banker Jane Hathaway reaches a height of comic gooniness that is nearly extraterrestrial. Penelope Spheeris ("Wayne's World") directed in a manner that redefines the concept of broad. PG. Rating: ★★

CARLITO'S WAY: A surprisingly restrained — for them — gangster melodrama directed by Brian De Palma and starring Al Pacino. He's a Puerto Rican drug dealer trying to go straight in mid-'70s New York. Sean Penn is terrific as Carlito's weasily, coke-fried lawyer, while Pacino is less good, but more tolerable than usual, playing a relatively reasonable man. De Palma keeps a lid on the cinematic pyrotechnics, too; thus his masterful final chase through Grand Central Station packs all the impact it deserves to. Dramatics are strictly urban western superficial, but it's still the most satisfying movie either principal has made in years. R. Rating: ★★★

THE GOOD SON: A generally uninspired "Bad Seed" thriller, though notable for presenting cute movie kid Macaulay Culkin as a sociopathic killer and continuing director Joe Ruben's ("Sleeping With the Enemy," "The Stepfather") subversive obsession with deadly relatives. Culkin doesn't really perform as much as look the part — there's a dead quality in his sparkling blue eyes that's perfect for projecting amorality and malice. Elijah Wood is the good cousin who, of course, the grown-ups won't listen to. R. Rating: ★★½

JURASSIC PARK: Steven Spielberg's dino-spectacular is not the religious experience many expected, but it's a pretty good, sci-fi chase movie. Something goes wrong at an island amusement park whose main attraction is genetically engineered, live dinosaurs. The big lizards, realized by a superb combination of full-sized robots and computer-generated graphics, have infinitely more charisma than their underwritten human prey, played by Sam Neill, Laura Dern, Jeff Goldblum and Richard Attenborough. PG-13. Rating: ★★★

MRS. DOUBTFIRE: Robin Williams in drag sounds a lot funnier than he turns out to be in "Mrs. Doubtfire," the production debut of Williams and wife Marsha Garces Williams. Overly long and sentimental, the story of an out-of-work San Francisco actor who disguises himself as an elderly British matron so that his ex-wife (Sally Field) will hire him to baby-sit for their three kids never makes much of its opportunities for comedy (although Harvey Fierstein does shine in a teensy role as Williams' cheerful gay brother). Overstated direction by Chris Columbus ("Home Alone") doesn't help any; better rent "Tootsie" if you're looking for a good cross-dressing time. PG-13. Rating: ★½

MY LIFE: A home movie grafted onto a disease-of-the-week thing, it's tedious times two. Michael Keaton plays a publicist who, striken by inoperable cancer, videotapes his life for his unborn child. Keaton injects some blessed humor into the proceedings, but otherwise the film oscillates between drably generic platitudes and ludicrous schmaltz. Bruce Joel Rubin, the Oscar-winning writer of "Ghost," has his directing debut. Nicole Kidman is — what else? — the perfect wife. PG-13. Rating: ★★

THE NIGHTMARE BEFORE CHRISTMAS: Tim Burton's puppet-animation musical is a clever comedy of misperception. The dedicated ghouls who stage Halloween every year take over Christmas with the best intentions, but with macabre misunderstanding of the holiday's subtleties. Although you never get past the fact that you're looking at puppets, they're always great to look at, sort of like Dr. Seuss characters putting on a German Expressionism exhibit. Danny Elfman (Oingo Boingo, "The Simpsons") wrote the show tunes. PG. Rating: ★★★

A PERFECT WORLD: Clint Eastwood directs Kevin Costner as a 1960s escaped convict and himself as the Texas Ranger who isn't overexerting himself to catch the criminal. The movie is mostly about Costner's character driving back roads and bonding with his hostage, a fatherless 8-year-old boy. Definitely eccentric, and not Eastwood's best, but it contains some of his best directed moments and turns into a thoughtful meditation on child rearing and the ways we justify killing. R. Rating: ★★★

THE PROGRAM: Well-acted but superficial, stereotypical account of a season in the life of a college football team. Craig Sheffer's risk-taking quarterback, Omar Epps' self-improving tailback and each of their teammates have their obvious little problems to solve, while James Caan's Don Jamesish coach just has to get to a bowl game or lose his job. Caan's is the most interesting character, ethically compromised against his will. But the movie, disappointingly, doesn't focus on him. R. Rating: ★★

RUDY: A true-life sports story that doesn't have an honest moment in it. Sean Astin plays the puny, dumb, working-class kid whose only goal in life is to dress out and sit on the bench for one Notre Dame football game. It takes years, inordinate effort and a lot of pain, but the conclusion is never in doubt. Rudy's sense of priorities, however, always are. One-dimensional acting and equally flat writing doesn't help, though you could give it points for modesty and efficient, if soulless, manipulation. David Anspaugh ("Hoosiers") directed. PG. Rating: ★★

THE THREE MUSKETEERS: Alexandre Dumas' 17th-century adventure classic is loosely adapted for younger swashbucklers with cuddly Chris O'Donnell ("Scent of a Woman") as a milquetoasty D'Artagnan tagging along with smirking Brat Packers Charlie Sheen, Kiefer Sutherland and Oliver Platt. Handsome sets and costumes, lots of swordplay, Tim Curry's oily Richelieu and a perfectly cast Rebecca De Mornay as the treacherous Milady de Winter occasionally liven up the proceedings, but grown-ups should consider staying home with the video of Richard Lester's funner and bawdier 1974 version. PG. Rating: ★★

WAYNE: Party sequel not all that bad

their 1992 feature, "Wayne's World," fattened Paramount Pictures' coffers to the tune of more than $120 million.

Wayne, Garth and the public access show have moved to an abandoned doll factory/"babe lair"; Garth (Dana Carvey) is maturing physically (Wayne puts it a bit more crudely); and Wayne's girlfriend, Cassandra (Tia Carrere), is getting ready to record an album with her rock band.

Of course, Wayne doesn't clue you in to the really noteworthy developments. Brandon Tartikoff, the former NBC chairman under whose tenure as Paramount boss "Wayne's World" was released, is no longer with the studio. Penelope Spheeris, who directed the first film, did not work on the second (newcomer Stephen Surjik does the honors).

Wayne's World 2

Wayne ..... MIKE MYERS
Garth ..... DANA CARVEY
Cassandra ..... TIA CARRERE
Bobby Cahn CHRISTOPHER WALKEN
Directed by Stephen Surjik. Produced by Lorne Michaels.
Rated: PG-13 (language, sexual situations).
Venue: Midland Park Mall Cinema.

Most importantly, Wayne and Garth basically have been eclipsed by Mike Judge's MTV cartoon buddies as the nation's reigning idiot adolescents.

Heck, next to Beavis and Butt-Head, Wayne and Garth are rocket scientists who indeed have enriched the language (as opposed to inspiring new ways of writing down dopey male giggling sounds).

Naturally, none of the above is any reason to ditch plans for a sequel to a certified blockbuster. So with the how-lowbrow-can-you-go route having been pre-empted, screenwriters Myers and Bonnie and Terry Turner have turned to more derivative humor, serving up a grab bag of pop-culture parodies.

The central reference is to Oliver Stone's "The Doors." Wayne dreams of a scantily clad American Indian (Larry Sellers) who leads him through the desert to Jim Morrison (Michael Nickles), who instructs Wayne to invest his life with meaning by holding a rock festival in Aurora.

What acts will come to such an event? Wayne wonders aloud. "If you book them, they will come," Morrison replies dreamily.

Awake, Wayne announces plans for Waynestock, an event that will showcase Aerosmith (who perform in the film's opening sequence), Pearl Jam, Rip Taylor and, of course, Cassandra, who is being wooed by her creep-extraordinaire record producer (Christopher Walken).

In the process of getting the show together and cultivating their respective babes, Wayne and Garth send up everything from "Mission Impossible" and the Village People to "The Graduate," "Body Heat" and every badly dubbed martial arts movie ever made.

The results are frequently funny but also irritatingly scattershot. Threads are picked up and dropped unceremoniously, most notably Garth's seduction by a crackpot sexpot (Kim Basinger) and a visit to England to hire celebrity roadie Del Preston (Ralph Brown).

GERONIMO: Hackman plays man of honor their acts brutality by brutality, and no human life is spared by either side. With his small band of a few dozen warriors, Geronimo takes on about 5,000 troops of the U.S. Cavalry.

Geronimo surrendered in 1886 after a five-year reign of terror fighting the government's attempt to subjugate all American Indians, but he never was defeated in battle by the Army.

The government had promised Geronimo and the men, women and children who followed him resettlement and land to farm. But the government reneged and shipped them off to federal prison.

"Geronimo" examines those last years of the Apache nation, focusing primarily on the ambivalence of a few good men.

Lt. Charles Gatewood (Jason Patric) has a tremendous amount of respect for the Indian but is given the thankless task of bringing in Geronimo, knowing he will be imprisoned. He later is banished to a distant post so he can't remind the Army of what it had done.

And there is the ambivalence of the film's narrator, Lt. Britton Davis (Matt Damon), the young officer who believes in honor and duty, and also is proud that he never killed an Indian.

Also high up on the morality scale is Brig. Gen. George Crook (Gene Hackman), a man of honor who ultimately is forced to resign.

Crook leads the Army's Geronimo campaign and is known as a friend of the Indian, a white man who can be trusted. He initiates Geronimo's early surrender, but all bets are off after his troops kill a medicine man who speaks out for freedom and Geronimo and other Indians retaliate by killing cavalrymen.

Finally, there is Al Sieber (Robert Duvall), a grizzled old coot who as chief of the scouts has spent years tracking Geronimo. He is committed to fighting so-called renegades, but a part of him has hidden sympathies.

Duvall, the guy who once told us about the wonders of "napalm in the morning," manages to squeeze out the best lines in "Geronimo." Sieber has been shot by bullets or arrows 17 times and lived to talk about it. When he's shot the 18th time, he says, "I love to get hurt."

And when hunting a group of bounty hunters who have slaughtered a peaceful Indian village, he sniffs, "They must be Texans. Texans are the lowest form of white people."

"Geronimo" might play in Peoria, but it's going to have a tough time in Dallas.

"Geronimo" is produced by Neil Canton and Hill with Michael S. Glick as executive producer. The Columbia Pictures release is rated PG-13.

VIDEOS: Sly's biceps on display in 'Cliffhanger' gaged Meg Ryan can fall in love with the widowed Tom Hanks even though they live 26 states apart. She in Maryland, he in Washington. But the "magic" of call-in radio and the "destiny" that only Hollywood can unashamedly dish out translates into one of those can't-go-wrong sappy endings that every romance lover will melt over.

"Sleepless" isn't bad at all, provided you keep repeating, 'it's only a movie ...' On the other hand, it won't make anyone forget Cary Grant.

Other recently released titles:

"Cliffhanger," starring Slyvester Stallone. If you enjoy peering on as Sly's biceps do the bulge while he hangs out like some mentally challenged orangutan on various scenic mountain ranges, this one's for you. If you have a problem with some of the worst dialogue to come in recent memory, avoid this one. Oh, I suppose it's tension-filled enough, but when you get right down to it, "Cliffhanger" is just another ludicrous shoot-em up movie that just happens to have some nice scenery.

"The Sandlot." There's something about baseball as a backdrop that normally makes for good movies (Tom Selleck's "Mr. Baseball" notwithstanding). When you mix in kids and what their enormous imaginations can concoct one innocent summer, you have a warm, fun movie that's good for the entire family.

"Dennis The Menace." OK, so I admit it, I laughed at this one. Why I laughed is another question. I suppose I could use my children as an excuse. Yeah, that's it. "Dennis The Menace" was roundly panned by critics far and wide, as well it should be. It was unimaginative, and almost plagiaristic in its not-so-subtle rip-off of the "Home Alone" movies. Despite that, Walter Matthau and Christpher Lloyd are just funny guys. It's far from the best movie ever made, but it's a good rib-tickler if you're in the right frame of mind and you let yourself laugh. Just ask any kid.

"Free Willy." Forgetting that Lori Petty acts like a fish out of water in her role as a killer-whale trainer, "Free Willy" was the surprise hit of the summer. It tugs at the heart strings, makes you laugh and has a "Save the Whales" theme to top it off. How could it go wrong? It can't. And it's just as good now that it's on video.

Other releases this week: Super Mario Brothers; Dragon: The Bruce Lee Story; Guilty as Sin.

Midler gets her turn as 'Gypsy'

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Three decades ago, Broadway star Ethel Merman claimed the musical "Gypsy" as her own. Now another divine Miss M, Bette Midler, is trying it on for size.

Midler stars as Mama Rose, mother of legendary stripper Gypsy Rose Lee, in a three-hour CBS TV movie (7 p.m. CST Sunday) of the 1959 stage hit that later became a film vehicle for Rosalind Russell.

"I've always wanted to play that part," says Midler, who co-stars with Peter Riegert.

"In the American theater, there's a couple of roles for women you grow into ... a part that people dream of playing all their lives," she says. "And this Rose was a dream of mine."

The score — including such gems as "Everything's Coming up Roses" and "You Gotta Have a Gimmick" — also enticed her, Midler says.

"I love those songs. One after another, every single one of them is a hit."

Perched on a chair in a Beverly Hills hotel suite, Midler looks every bit as chic as her surroundings. A black pantsuit shows off her newly slender figure, and she wears a fanciful mop of blond curls.

Logo-encrusted giveaways flood congressional offices

By Jim Drinkard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A typical congressional office displays some odd stuff: baseball caps from a farm group, beer steins from brewers, a plastic jet fighter plane — even a full set of trading cards picturing lawmakers like baseball stars.

They're all gimmicks used by interest groups seeking to set themselves or their causes apart, to attract attention among the crowds working the corridors of Congress.

The congressional trading cards are an example. A full set of the unique cards was dispatched last week to all 540 offices on Capitol Hill. Each card in the set features a photo of the lawmaker with name, home state and team (Democrat or Republican). The flip side gives background and lists committee assignments.

"It's a pleasant, goodwill sort of way to say thank you for your support of education," said lobbyist Dick VanderWoude of the National Education Association, a teachers union.

The holiday season is prime time for such giveaways. Bottles of wine, baskets of fruit and tubs of munchables flow into congressional offices.

The influx leaves some offices looking like flea markets for logo-encrusted bric-a-brac.

"Coffee mugs and baseball caps are the coin of the realm," says an aide. The attic is full of lucite paperweights, pen and pencil sets, and framed certificates and plaques that say, "In recognition of the congressman's exemplary work on the bill to make us richer," said the aide, who insisted on anonymity so as not to draw attention to his boss.

Washington's most recent hot issue, the North American Free Trade Agreement, drew its share of attention-getting gimmicks.

Warnaco, a large manufacturing company, sent each member of Congress a bright red tie with a large button reading, "Don't tie the economy in knots — Vote yes on NAFTA."

And Hershey Foods sent around to key congressional offices a 48-ounce, Family Size bottle of chocolate syrup. Instead of listing the ingredients on the back label, it listed reasons to vote for the trade agreement.

They're (gifts) all gimmicks used by interest groups seeking to set themselves or their causes apart, to attract attention among the crowds working the corridors of Congress.

Handgun Control Inc. attracted notice to the Brady bill, requiring a waiting period and background check for handgun purchases, by circulating full-sized cardboard cutouts of a police-style chalk outline of a dead body on pavement.

"We wanted a graphic reminder that they couldn't ignore," said Susan Whitmore, the group's spokeswoman.

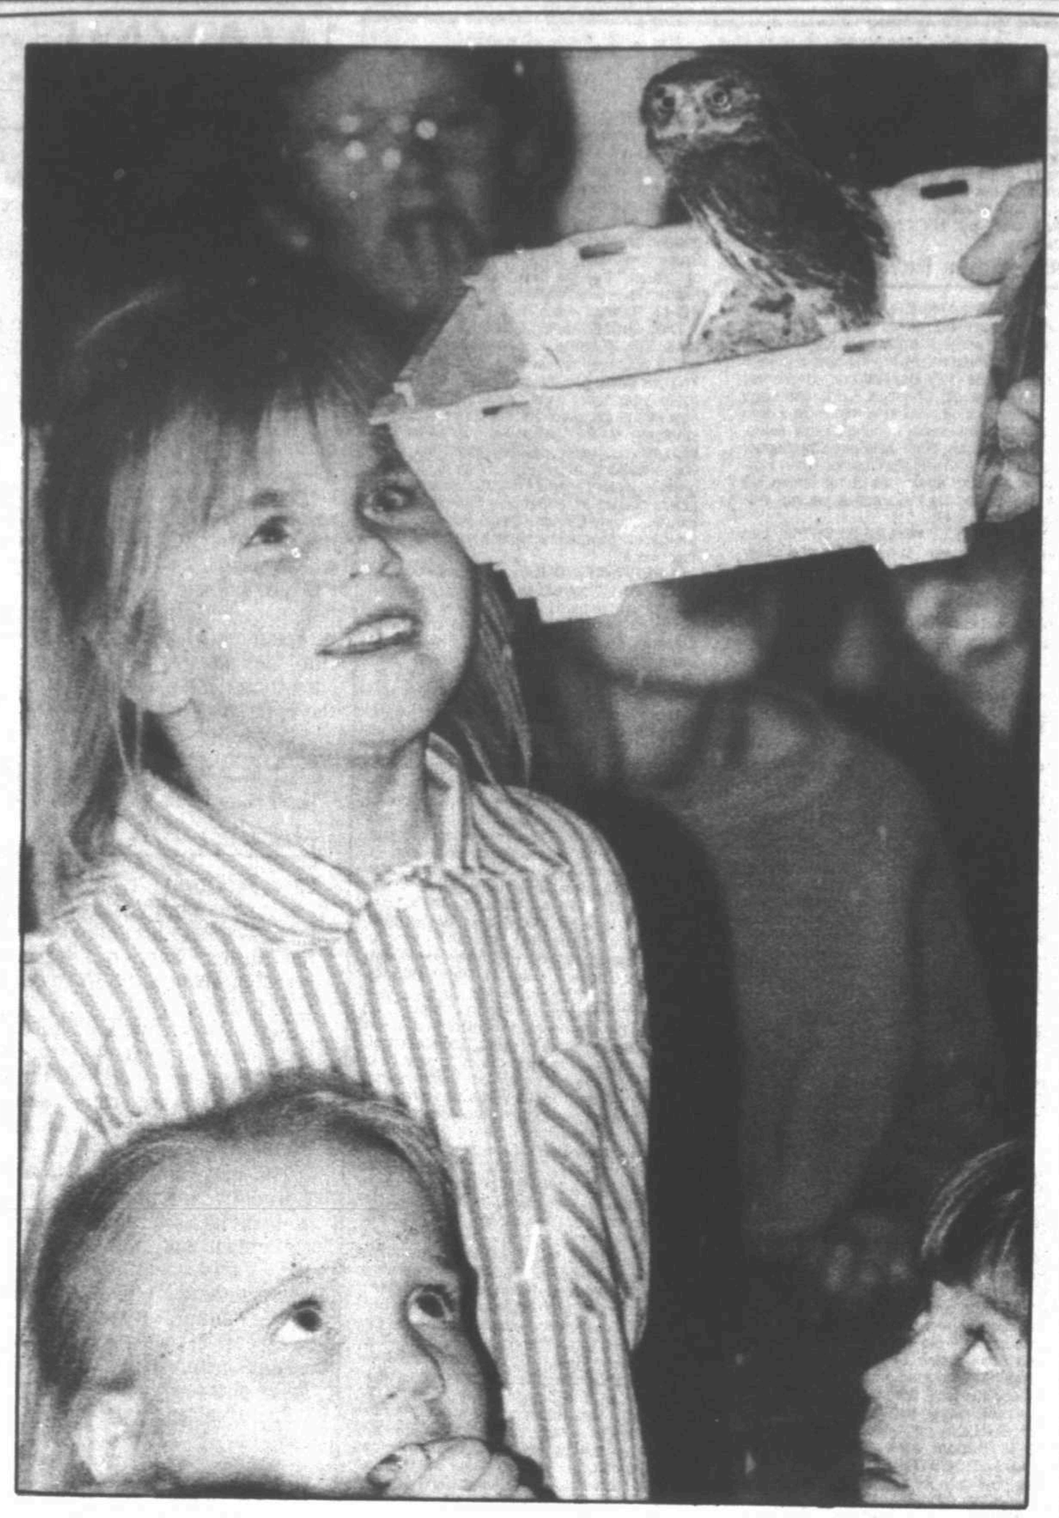

The NEA says its baseball-style trading cards have proven popular since they were first produced a few years ago.

"Members take them along when they visit junior high schools and give them to students interested in government," VanderWoude said. "One person was out collecting all the black members of Congress, and another was collecting all the Jewish members."

Not everyone finds them well received. Rep. Pat Roberts once took a batch home to his children, saying, "Look, kids, Dad's on a baseball card." But he added: "I found them later in the trash can."

Already this year, members have received 500 copies each of their own trading cards, and many are in circulation as novelties handed out to constituents, pages and fellow lawmakers. More than 200 individual sets were delivered last month, when NEA's board of directors was in town for a meeting and hand-carried them to congressional offices.

The cards have another use, as well: At the end of the year, lawmakers with a 90 percent or higher support record for the NEA's issues get their card preserved in a block of lucite.

Educators: Ethnic publications have place with college readers

By Lydia Lum
Associated Press

FORT WORTH — While the number of ethnically oriented publications for college readers may be few, many educators and students agree that the benefits of such journals are plenty.

"There is no less of a constituency for minority-issues magazines and newspapers than there is for 'U.S. News & World Report,'" said Curtis Polk, a race relations counselor at the University of Texas at Austin. "Minority publications are needed because they add various points of view. As long as you don't get your information from just one source — whether it's a minority one or mainstream — then that's good."

Angela Wright, an African-American who attends predominantly white Texas Christian University in Fort Worth, said that ethnic publications round out much of its newsstand selection.

"You just don't see many blacks in the mainstream magazines," said Wright, who is majoring in journalism. "If advertising integrated minorities into the pages, we wouldn't need our own magazines. But it can't change until we as a society address that."

With national circulations of more than 100,000, "Black Collegian" and "Hispanic Magazine" are two of the larger minority publications for collegians. Those magazines encompass careers, personalities and book and art reviews for black and Hispanic students.

Tim Wilks, a white student at Texas Wesleyan University in Fort Worth, said that he understands why specialty publications have a niche among his minority peers.

Anglos "have all kinds of magazines," Wilks said. "But a black person might read something, and say, 'Huh?' if they grew up in a different culture."

But Polk and others said that those journals are among only a handful of their kind. Most minority-oriented magazines are have a general interest across many age groups, they said.

"We've always had 'Ebony,' 'Essence' and 'Jet,' but if you ask the average person about magazines for younger blacks and other minorities, he would draw a blank," said Polk.

Randy Belcher-Torres, spokesman for "Hispanic Magazine" in Washington, said that one reason for the lack of ethnic-oriented publications aimed at twentysomethings lies in ad revenue.

Christmas shows off black dolls, heritage

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (NYT) — Alethea Churchman was having a ball. In the course of 15 minutes, the 4-year-old had had her picture taken with Santa, received a bunch of candy canes and won a Barbie doll as a door prize. She was spinning in circles so fast her mother could hardly contain her.

Alethea and her mother, Edith Churchman, had come to a black doll show directly from Sunday school to find something for Christmas.

"I want to expose Alethea to the ethnic toys that are out there," Mrs. Churchman said as she took Alethea's hand and they walked over to a vendor who was displaying Rastafarian dolls selling for $95.

But these dreadlocked dolls with their crocheted hats were just a few of the items being displayed at Linda Stewart's seventh annual black doll show. Victorian ladies, dozens of black Santas, contemporary glamour dolls, art objects, books and other items of black memorabilia were on display.

About 25 artists and craftsmen stood beside their booths in a room at the Meadowlands Sheraton Hotel. They came from as far away as Pittsburgh, Washington, D.C., and Philadelphia, and as close as Englewood, N.J.

Mrs. Stewart, the impresario of this show, doesn't care whether artists work in cloth, porcelain or plastic, but she does care about finding artists who promote a positive black image.

Her friend Malinda Saunders, an exhibitor from Washington, agrees.

"Black doll artists sprang up just to create dolls with a positive image and not ones that look identical to white people either," Ms. Saunders said.

C.V. Bush, who had come to the show from New Brunswick to look for a special doll for her 3-year-old daughter, Alexis, said she does not buy white dolls.

"Alexis can't relate to a white doll; she knows she's black and I wouldn't even think about buying anything else," Mrs. Bush said.

While Jasmine Cain, at 6 months old not much bigger than a doll herself, sat in a carriage, her mother Jayne Cain was trying to make a sale. Mrs. Cain, from Queens, had been up until 3 a.m. finishing the Christmas tree ornaments — angels in gold lame gowns — that were on display at her table and selling for $10.

Diane Kirby's arms were full of dolls, Christmas items and figurines she had bought.

She explained that she is out every weekend, traveling to shows, flea markets and yard sales.

Windmill collection is rancher's labor of love

By Glenda Cummings
Associated Press

STERLING CITY — Windmills are anything but uncommon in West Texas. But finding 20 of them jammed into one little space isn't commonplace.

People traveling down Texas 158 between Sterling City and Garden City often do a double-take. There, amid the desolate ranchland, looms a miniature metropolis of sorts.

Larry Glass' ranch headquarters boasts five houses, a couple of large barns and the usual compliment of smaller outbuildings.

There is a vast array of ranching equipment, rolling stock and stock trailers located near the barns.

That is not what grabs the traveler's eye from four miles away — it is the windmills.

Glass is happy to tell the story of his windmills, and in the process, displays a sparkling wit and personality that many of his neighbors never suspect.

"Personality . . . what personality?" he quips, just a little at his wife Lynda's expense. "My wife says I don't have any."

And with tongue firmly planted in cheek, Glass begins to relate the same "school of hard knocks" story that virtually every adult of his generation tells of poverty and character formed from a disadvantaged childhood, including his not having shoes until the age of 15 and walking five miles to school.

He tells that his family homesteaded the ranch 102 years ago, and therein belies his lengthy tale of woe.

He did grow up on the ranch, left home to attend Texas Christian University and there, he says, "graduated twice!"

"He tells me that having a bachelor's and master's in geology, he knows exactly what kind of rocks he throws at the cattle?" laughs Lynda.

Working for Pan American Oil Co. and tour of duty as a bomber navigator in the Air Force helped him make up his mind to return to home and ranch. The impression he gives is that he kissed the ground when he arrived home.

The Glasses have kept busy over the years bringing up their children and raising crossbred cattle, Rambouillet sheep and quarter horses.

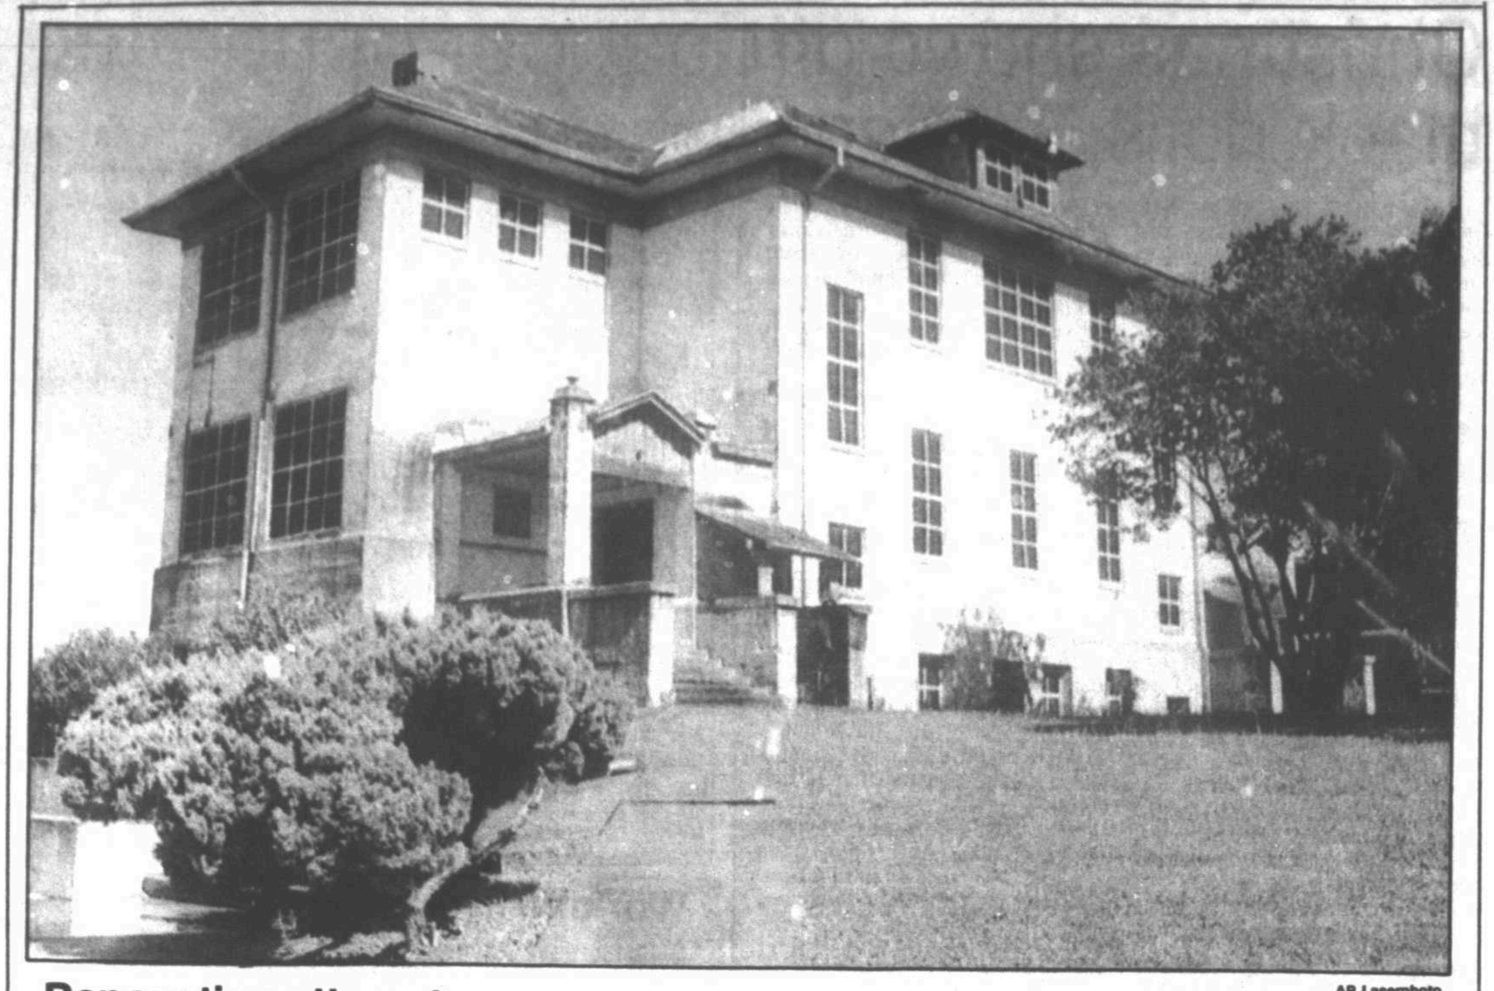

They somehow fit in the windmill collection.

"It started with a little broken down windmill, standing alone on some land in Dickens County," Glass explains. "After we had it repaired, we put it back up here, and it (collection) just grew from there."

Now there are 20 on display and two or three being repaired.

"More! More!" Lynda mouths silently, half-heartedly making jest behind Larry's back.

All but one of the windmills have been galvanized to help keep them from deteriorating in West Texas' often harsh summer and winter extremes. Several sit atop reproduced towers, the originals having been destroyed by weather, age or neglect.

Renovation attempt

Trustees at Houston-Tillotson College in Austin have given themselves five years to try to raise funds to renovate the Old Administration Building, constructed in 1913-14. The structure, shown in this 1993 file photo, is one of the few remaining examples of work by students and teachers at black colleges and universities and it may face demolition if attempts to raise funds are unsuccessful.

Artist's sketch of kidnapper generated thousands of tips

By Marsha Ginsburg
N.Y. Times News Service

PETALUMA, Calif. — The woman who drew a dead-ringer sketch of Polly Klaas' confessed kidnapper has never taken a drawing class, never asks witnesses about the crime, and most often comes into a case after a previous composite has failed to help.

After doing 7,000 sketches worldwide based on a unique system of psychological interviewing, Jeanne Boylan was nonetheless nervous when she was asked by the FBI and Petaluma police 12 days after the abduction to make up a new sketch.

Boylan, of Bend, Oregon, was in Petaluma Tuesday, the day that Richard Allen Davis was arraigned in the high-profile kidnapping and death of 12-year-old Polly. Boylan is expected to get a commendation from the director of the FBI.

Her sketch generated thousands of phone tips. Petaluma Sgt. Mike Kerns said the former psychology student was "a tremendous help to the investigation."

The initial drawing done by a San Rafael police officer pictured the suspect with bulging eyes, a headband, a full face and straight bushy hair. He was described as 6'3".

By the time Boylan was through interviewing Polly's friends Kate and Gillian, who were with Polly when she was abducted at knifepoint, she had him at 5'10 to 6'3", with deep set eyes and wavy, salt and pepper colored hair.

She was near dead-on in portraying his characteristics. "They were very accurate," said Kerns. "She did a wonderful job."

Most police departments have officers attend short training sessions on questioning witnesses and relying on a catalog of facial features. She says it's a poor system and is the reason composites often lack accuracy.

Boylan shuns the catalogs and also makes sure to interview witnesses separately. The original officer interviewed them together.

Boylan, who acknowledged she was happy with the drawing once she saw Davis, has typically worked with robbery and rape victims, and especially enjoys children. Their views of people's faces, she said, 'are so pure.'

This sets up a situation where if one girl remembers something that the other doesn't, it immediately invalidates and potentially intimidates them both, she said.

The nose put on the original police sketch, from a catalog, came after the girls said that none of the choices in the facial catalog were accurate. They were asked to select one anyway.

The headband description came after they were asked and shown pictures of various head gear, unduly influencing them, said Boylan.

Boylan interviewed each girl separately, asking what they would draw if they were to create a face like the man who took Polly. With Boylan drawing, the girls remembered the wavy hair, never mentioned a headband and described a nose that is far more similar to Davis' than the original drawing.

Boylan, who began her sketching career in 1978, never took formal drawing lessons. "I have no preconceived way of drawing. I can get diversity, and the choices are unlimited. I just piece it together. If I took art classes, I'd lose that."

She decided the suspect could be shorter than 6'3" — Davis turned out to be 5'10" — because she factored in that the girls were looking up at him from the floor.

"I get called in frequently to redo one, two and three week old cases," leaving her with "contaminated witnesses," said Boylan, one of about a dozen professional composite sketch artists in the country. She said the key is drawing memory out gently the way it was processed in — not piece by piece, but in a whole image.

There was so much hope that Polly was alive that Boylan was moved by public expectations. When one of the girls took a break, Boylan just "prayed my heart out," she said. "I literally asked God, if there was ever a time, let it be now — take this arm and make it happen."

"I thought she could be alive and this would make a difference."

Boylan produced two drawings but police circulated only one. FBI spokesman Rick Smith said both were representative of Davis and "assisted in the eventual arrest."

"The exposure was such that it kept things alive," he said. "The true test is when you finally come up with the guy. You want to make sure it looked like the drawing. It was successful."

Boylan, who acknowledged she was happy with the drawing once she saw Davis, has typically worked with robbery and rape victims, and especially enjoys children. Their views of people's faces, she said, "are so pure."

Her next big project is a trip to Bosnia, if she can get funding, to help masses of rape victims come up with composites to track down their assailants.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your creative side emerges now, be it in the professional or financial area. Good interpersonal skills are a tremendous asset in your career or business. If single, you could feel torn between two romantic interests. Stall for more time. Married couples may decide that a change of lifestyle will help them work out their domestic problems. A trip abroad gives you fresh insights regarding a longtime relationship.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: author Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn, actress Rita Moreno, singer Brenda Lee, film producer Carlo Ponti.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A financial tip from a reliable source could yield a bonanza. Do not fuss if unusual circumstances cause the cancellation of an important meeting. The delay will work in your favor.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Avoid starting anything new this morning. A real estate deal looks better than it really is. Although an older person promises to share their assets, there could be long strings attached.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Make certain you really need an advertised bargain before buying it. Also, purchase nothing through the mail. You need to investigate personally before parting with your money.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do not plan any activities far from home today. You need to stick close to your usual surroundings. Joyous happenings can occur in your personal life. Your loved ones want to please you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Repress the urge to write an angry or distraught letter to someone who has disappointed you. Allow a cooling-off period. Your dreams may be filled with scenes of exotic places.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may be surprised at how quick and affordable certain home improvement are now. If social plans are altered, it is probably for the best. A holiday party puts you in a festive mood.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An older person's love touches you deeply. You do excellent creative work! Do not let a shopping splurge spoil things. Take the time to write a short message on your holiday cards.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Over the next two days, success hinges on how well you hide your frustration or impatience. That may seem like a tall order, but your image will shine brightly in the eyes of prominent people.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Words spoken in haste will be repented at leisure. Good things do come to those who wait. Think how your present actions could affect the future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your working at a fast clip has a way of making projects pay off quickly. Fitting some reading, visiting or relaxing into your weekend will clear your mind. A newcomer's comments delight you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Letting your hair down today can be a big relief. A phone call or visit rekindles old memories. The weight of extra responsibilities fades as you get better organized. Clear away clutter.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Expressing your ideas in a private forum wins favor. Your charm and on-target instincts give you a lot of influence on people and situations. Open your heart to older family members.

TODAY'S CHILDREN have a cheery, breezy candor that endears them to people from all walks of life. Typically, these Sagittarians cannot be bothered about such mundane affairs as money management. Friends and family may occasionally be called upon to support their free-spirited lifestyle.

Chelsea's picture in papers makes father Clinton proud

WASHINGTON — President Clinton generally tries to keep his daughter, Chelsea, out of the limelight, but he said it was "wonderful" to see her photograph in newspapers rehearsing for a holiday ballet performance.

Chelsea, 13, takes classes at the Washington School of Ballet. She is one of four students sharing the part of Favorite Aunt in the Washington Ballet's production of "The Nutcracker."

The troupe has not announced which performances she will appear in.

The Associated Press photographed Chelsea and other troupe members Thursday during a rehearsal and the photograph appeared in newspapers across the country. Clinton liked it so much he requested and received copies from The AP.

BEIJING — Novelist Maxine Hong Kingston didn't visit her ancestral homeland until she finished several books about China and the Chinese-American experience.

"I believe there is a mythic China that exists in the imagination of all people," she told a group of Chinese writers on Friday. "A strong imagination imagines the truth. When I arrived in China, sure enough, it was the same as my imagination."

The writer of "Tripmaster Monkey," "Woman Warrior" and "China Men" is on her third visit to China. She asked one of China's most prolific writers, former culture minister Wang Meng, how he managed to produce so much.

His advice: Stay happy, stay out of government and drink Chinese tea.

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Humans are "wondrously different and marvelously alike," Maya Angelou said.

"Human beings are more alike than unalike," the writer said Thursday at Ohio Dominican College.

"Whether in Paris, Texas, or Paris, France, we all want to have good jobs where we are needed and respected and paid just a little more than we deserve. We want healthy children, safe streets, to be loved and have the unmitigated gall to accept love.

"If we are religious, we want a place to perpetuate God. If not, we want a good lecture every once in a while. And everyone wants someplace to party on Saturday nights."

People must become more courageous to ensure the survival of humanity, Angelou told students and faculty.

"We are acting too cowardly to survive. No one guarantees that our species will survive unless we begin to develop courage," she said.

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Janet Jackson canceled a concert because of a flu bug that spread among her dancers and musicians, the promoter said.

The concert at Memorial Auditorium in Buffalo was called off three hours before she was to appear Thursday night.

The show will be rescheduled for later this month or early January, said Monique Pate, a spokeswoman for the promoter.

Miss Jackson, the sister of entertainer Michael Jackson, left Buffalo after seeing a local doctor, Pate said. Some of her dancers and musicians had the flu before her, Pate said.

The tour began last week and Buffalo was Miss Jackson's fourth stop.

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Mental strength is more important than physical prowess. That's the word from Mr. T.

"If I couldn't read, if I couldn't comprehend, then I wouldn't be where I'm at," he told a middle school crowd Thursday. "A lot of people don't get jobs because they can't read."

The star of "The A-Team" television series was in Columbus to speak at two schools and give out awards to winners of an anti-drug poster contest.

WASHINGTON — Donning a Pittsburgh Steelers cap to transform himself into an average American worker named "Bill," Norman Lear searched for the meaning of life Thursday in a talk at a National Press Club luncheon.

"Let's try to imagine what's going on in the heart and the mind of the average American worker," Lear said to 150 members of the Press Club. Then, as "Bill," he continued:

"Inside, sometimes I feel like an empty room. You know what I find myself thinking about lately? Church. We used to go to church when our kids were little. Later, when so much else was going on in their lives and what was going on in church just didn't grab them anymore, we didn't press. To tell the truth, we stopped going, too. The wife and me talk about it all the time. We're missing something."

"Bill" confessed that he had dabbled with 12-step, self-help tapes in his quest to learn "what's it all about."

Switching back to his real persona, Lear criticized the press for ignoring a sea change in attitudes.

"Either through indifference or cynicism or because this is a story about the invisible inner life, most of the news media have ignored what could be the seminal story of our time," he said. "Culture has lost touch with the best of its humanity, the spiritual life of our species. At no time can I remember our culture being so estranged from this part of ourselves."

'Random kindness' gathers momentum

By Ben Hellwarth
N.Y. Times News Service

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Imagine this: You're at a cafe, waiting in line to buy a cup of coffee. It's the daily routine. Only this time something unusual happens — simple, but unusual. And nice.

As you place your order and reach for your wallet, the cashier informs you that you won't need to pay. Someone already paid for you.

But who? Why?

You'll never know. Maybe the holiday spirit struck. Or it could be that this chance encounter with generosity was one person's way of acting on that eight-word phrase that sounds like the ultimate New-Age battle cry:

"Practice random kindness and senseless acts of beauty."

By now you've probably seen the saying on more than a few bumper stickers.

Is it merely a '90s version of the "Have a nice day" slogans plastered everywhere during the Me Decade — with those ubiquitous yellow smiley faces? Or could this be the motto of a bona fide movement that seeks to challenge the notion that human behavior is hopelessly inhumane?

It may be a little of both.

The phrase has grown in popularity since it was first coined in 1982 and published in CoEvolution Quarterly, an alternative journal that has since evolved into the Whole Earth Review, based in the San Francisco Bay Area.

Almost a decade later, around the time of the Persian Gulf War, a woman noticed the phrase scrawled on a warehouse wall. She liked it, and jotted it down. Her husband, a Bay Area teacher, was also taken by the phrase, so much that he posted it in his seventh-grade classroom.

One of his students happened to be the daughter of San Francisco Chronicle columnist Adair Lara, who put the phrase in the newspaper.

The eight words then appeared as the subject of a December 1991 Glamour magazine editorial that was reprinted five months later in Reader's Digest, which sells about 28 million copies monthly in 17 languages.

Reader's Digest proclaimed: "Here's one underground movement you'll want to join."

In the meantime, several companies have produced buttons and bumper stickers, and at least a couple of little books based on the phrase have been published.

One of those books, due out this month, is co-authored by Anne Herbert, the Bay Area woman credited with coining the phrase. The illustrated 260-word hard-cover, "Random Kindness & Senseless Acts of Beauty" (Volcano Press, $14.95), is part poem, part consciousness-raising manifesto.

"Like true movements people pick up on a phrase and it just begins to reverberate," said Ruth Gottstein, publisher of Volcano Press, based in the small foothill town of Volcano, Calif., about 60 miles southeast of Sacramento.

"It's been sort of burgeoning; but what it's burgeoning into I don't know," Gottstein said. "People see meanness and craziness in the world and the book is an admonition that each of us is in control of a certain aspect of it."

Herbert believes her phrase made its way into the mainstream and gained popularity during the Gulf War because of the public's "denied agony" about American-led bombing raids on Iraq.

"I view the way the Persian Gulf War was covered as a massive denial of what war is and that left a psychological gap," Herbert, 43, said in a telephone interview from Berkeley, Calif. "So people are attracted to the phrase and the idea that there's a way they can respond to the world kindly," said Herbert, a writer, house-sitter and social change activist who would like it known that she is a lesbian.

"It's a very positive message that people really want at this point in history and they're ready for it," said Clay Colt, whose family business in Hampton, Conn., has found its "Practice random kindness" bumper stickers to be a top seller since they were first produced about a year ago. About 15,000 have been sold nationwide so far.

"I guess you could call it a movement, but people just like what it says and you don't have to join anything to do what the message is saying," Colt said.

"Movement" is probably too strong a word to describe what has developed since she first wrote the "kindness" phrase a decade ago "in a moment of real optimism," Herbert said.

"The importance of the phrase is that it takes people into their hearts and I would like it if when they went into their hearts they could figure out a way to affect the larger world outside."

New interactive game lets player catch the killer

N.Y. Times News Service

Former Los Angeles Police Chief Daryl Gates has helped create a personal computer game turning computer players into policemen trying solve a string of brutally realistic murders.

The package containing "Daryl F. Gates' Police Quest: Open Season" shows an assailant pointing a large-caliber hand gun at you, coaxing you to "Crawl inside the mind of a serial killer."

The release of the game by Sierra On-Line Inc. embarrassingly coincided with the 10-year sentence handed down in Los Angeles to Damian Williams, the man convicted of viciously beating truck driver Reginald Denny a year and a half ago in riots following the first verdicts in the Rodney King beating trial.

Gates was forced to resign as chief of the LAPD last year following criticism of his handling of the King beating case. A city commission later saddled Gates with much of the blame for the police department's inadequate response to the three day of riots in April 1992, the worst urban unrest in the United States this century.

A spokesman for Sierra, based in Oakhurst, Calif., said the company had not realized the sentencing would be Tuesday, and that there would have been no way to delay shipment of the game in any case. "We have been trying to get the product on shelves around the world," the spokesman said.

While the $69.95 game lacks the bloody action-graphics of such video games as this season's blockbuster hit "Mortal Kombat," it adds an unprecedented dimension of realism — thanks largely to Tammy Dargan, a former producer for the television program "America's Most Wanted," who produced and directed the software venture.

Most backgrounds were photographed on location in Los Angeles, giving players actual interior and exterior views of Parker Center police headquarters, City Hall, the morgue, the Los Angeles Police Academy and the battleground — South Central L.A.

Somalia: Some soldiers saw too much

By Mark Fritz
Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia — Capt. Drew Campi happily hovered in his helicopter to protect relief convoys, then found himself leading attacks on Somalis who killed his comrades.

Then, he cursed in rage when the faction leader he tried to find or shoot and learned to hate was shuttled to peace talks two weeks ago aboard a U.S. military plane.

Now, after two tours that spanned both ends of the yearlong mission to Somalia, he just looks forward to leaving this baffling place next month, when the withdrawal of U.S. troops will be moving full throttle.

"If you look at the humanitarian effort, maybe casualties were worth it," said Campi, the 28-year-old commander of a squadron of U.S. Army Cobra attack helicopters. "If you look at the other part, the sort of battles we fought, those deaths weren't."

Most U.S. troops visit Somalia for about four months and then leave, so they have a limited perspective on the evolution of the U.S.-led relief mission that began on Dec. 9, 1992.

But a relative handful saw Somalia in two pieces and some of them, like Campi, consider the first a noble crusade and the second its evil mutant twin.

The pivotal transition came when the United Nations took command of the operation in May and clan leader Mohamed Farrah Aidid aligned himself against it.

On June 2, Somali gunmen believed loyal to Aidid killed 24 Pakistani peacekeepers. The United Nations issued a warrant for his arrest, and Campi and other chopper pilots took part in a furious hunt for the warlord and his lieutenants.

A U.S. helicopter was shot down in September, and pieces of what Somalis said were the pilots' bodies were paraded through the streets. Another crewman was taken hostage and eventually freed.

"I was the first to get the call that a helicopter was down," said Capt. Michael Lewis, 27, a battle planner in Campi's unit, the Raven Task Force of the Army's 10th Mountain Division, from Fort Drum, N.Y.

"I think everyone expected there would be casualties, but when this happened it hit home for us," said Lewis from Albany, Ore., who also is on his second tour. "We went from a humanitarian mission to combat."

On Oct. 5, a firefight left 18 Americans and an estimated 300 Somalis dead. President Clinton ordered all the troops home by March 31. Aidid finally called a cease-fire.

Then a U.S. military plane shuttled Aidid to peace talks in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. Campi said it enraged the troops. He said he had fixated on Aidid as the enemy the way he did on Saddam Hussein when the pilot flew missions in Iraq.

"There was a tremendous loss of morale," said Campi, from West Long Branch, Va. "He killed U.S. soldiers."

Lewis disagreed. He said he understood the decision to make sure Aidid made it to the talks that many people believe, and fear, may be the last hope for the final success of this mission.

Few soldiers are happy with this shotgun marriage of humanitarian, political and military mission under the aegis of the United Nations.

If misery loves company, it adores the soldiers in the 516th Signal Company who have served two four-month tours.

The company based in Fort Huachuca, Ariz., which now provides long-range communications to the U.N. effort, is one of the key units that will have to be replaced when the Americans go home.

The calendar in the command tent of the 516th has all of December's dates correctly written. But each day is Monday; every day in Somalia is like a week that never ends, only begins.

"They filled us up with all this stuff about let's go feed the Somalis, feed the kids, disarm the bandits. It was a mission of mercy," says Sgt. 1st Class Thomas Butterworth.

"Now that's all gone," said the lanky 38-year-old from Vinton, Va. "There is a sense of frustration. What're we here for? And we're under the U.N. They're disorganized, slow. They don't know what they're doing."

But it would be a terrible loss if the operation that did so much good were to collapse, said Chief Warrant Officer David Coates, a Cobra chopper pilot from Task Force Raven.

Coates, who studied a 1935 book called "A Tear for Somalia" to better understand the nation's clans, flew choppers in Vietnam and worked as an operations officer in the Persian Gulf.

He spent 12 hours in combat during the Oct. 5 firefight and finds the "frustration level" higher under the cumbersome U.N. operation.

But he prefers to think about the fruit of his first four-month stint in Somalia even as he plays out the second.

'As I fly out there I see fertile fields where there were not fertile fields," said Coates, a Fort Wayne, Ind., native.

"To me, it's always been a humanitarian mission. The problem was the bad guys."

Public school offers lesson in health, social services

By Michael Winerip
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Carmelin Diaz, an eighth grader, got out of her second-period class Monday morning and walked down to the first floor at Intermediate School 218 to get her teeth cleaned.

In a half hour, she had all her plaque scraped off, flouride and sealant treatments, and X-rays. "OK, you're almost done," said the school clinic's hygienist, Evelyn Medina, diving into Carmelin's mouth one last time. "Now this is how you massage the gums, over here you do the gum line. Don't be afraid of a little blood. OK, you feel it? OK? OK."

Then Carmelin got a free toothbrush, an appointment to see the school dentist and a pass back to her community arts class.

When Carmelin is having trouble with her parents, she visits IS 218's social work clinic on the first floor next to the dental and medical clinics, where she is assigned to one of seven social workers.

Tuesdays, she arrives an hour before school starts for a class with the art teacher, Carole Goldstein, who is helping eighth graders prepare portfolios for their applications to the city's competitive arts schools. "In our school," says Carmelin, "you have everything you need outside of your house."

IS 218 in upper Manhattan's Washington Heights, one of the poorest and most violent sections of New York City, is a public school that rarely sleeps. From 7:30 a.m., when an eighth grader, Wellington Guzman, arrives for volleyball, to 3:30 p.m., when 400 sixth to eighth graders begin two hours of after school studies, to 7 p.m. when older teen-agers finish computer labs, to 9 p.m., when Consuela Viera, age 71, gets out of English class, IS 218 is open for business.

It is not alone. Creating comprehensive school-based health and social services has turned into a national movement in the last few years, says Janet Levy, a program director at the Danforth Foundation.

"You're now dealing with hundreds and hundreds of examples. The worst school building in the country is often the best building in a devastated community and until now, we've always locked it at 2:30."

The idea is not new. In the 1890s when Jacob Riis posed newsboys asleep at their school desks for his photographs, he was muckraking for school-based services.

Sine the early part of this century, the country has gone through periods when doctors, dentists and social workers have moved their offices right into public schools. But not since World War II has there been such a widespread push.

In Kentucky, an education reform initiative two years ago mandated that any school with more than 20 percent of its students on free lunches would have school service centers; more than 300 have opened there.

New Jersey started its statewide program in 1987, opening at least one of these school centers in each county. Iowa followed in 1989 and in California, several foundations have formed a partnership with the state to create school-based services.

Denver, St. Louis, Chicago and Miami Beach also have these schools, many of which stay open on weekends. The single biggest effort by a municipality has been New York City's Beacon Program, started by Mayor David Dinkins' administration, which now consists of 37 schools financed at $500,000 per program, using city, state and federal dollars.

Federal officials are looking to replicate the idea, which can take a wide variety of forms. Thanksgiving eve, Deputy Education Secretary Madeleine Kunin stayed for hours at the beacon school Public School 194 in Harlem, leaving at 8 p.m. — three hours before it closed.

But IS 218, (which is similar to, but more ambitiously financed than the beacons created by the Dinkins administration) stands out even among such very impressive schools, Ms. Levy says. "It's a phenomenal effort that will set the pace for the next stage of the movement."

The school, in a building that opened a year and a half ago at Broadway and 196th Street, is a partnership between New York and the Children's Aid Society, one of the oldest social welfare agencies in America.

Children's Aid runs the social services, health, before- and after-school programs at a cost of $1.25 million a year, paid mainly with grants from foundations and businesses.

"For us, it's a bargain," says Philip Coltoff, director of Children's Aid, which usually operates freestanding community centers. Coltoff says it would cost $10 million for his agency to open a center in Washington Heights — and he could not afford to make it as comprehensive as this new school program.

Being in the school means that 90 cents of every dollar goes to delivering services instead of the usual 65 cents, he said. The agency does not pay rent, utilities, insurance or maintenance which all are part of the normal cost of running the school. (Children's Aid recently opened a second program nearby at PS 5.)

The comprehensive program works out to $950 per student; when added to the $6,000 per student New York City spends on middle schools, the total is still far below per pupil spending in nearby suburbs.

It is a true partnership. Before and after school classes are created and taught by IS 218 teachers, who are paid an extra $20 per hour. (Naomi Smith, the building representative for the teacher's union, loves the program.)

And the seven Children's Aid social workers lift a huge burden from the school's two guidance counselors who would normally be overwhelmed in a building of 1,300 primarily poor, Spanish-speaking Dominican children.

With social workers to handle the worst cases of parental abuse, neglect, drugs and violence, the guidance counselors are amazed to discover they can do their job — academic and career counseling.

"As problems come up, there are actually enough people to deal with them," says guidance counselor Mary Rivera.

In city schools, serious problems are supposed to be referred out to social agencies. But often, such cases fall between the cracks. (Beryl Septimus, the school's other guidance counselor, says in nine years in city schools, he never had time to visit an agency he was referring kids to.)

At IS 218, the teacher who refers the child and the social worker who treats the child see each other several times a month. Says Melina Rosenblum, a social worker, "I'm always running into teachers in the corridors who give me updates or send me little pieces of paper."

It gets results. Daily attendance at this neighborhood school averages 89 percent; the District 6 average is 87. Last year IS 218 had just six suspensions, fewest among District 6 intermediate schools.

To improve coordination and make it a less intimidating place for children, the large school has been divided into four smaller "academies" of about 300 students, each with its own floor.

IU suspends coach

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Indiana University suspended basketball coach Bob Knight from Friday night's game against Tennessee Tech because of his conduct during the Hoosiers' game against Notre Dame earlier this week.
"It has been determined by Indiana University that coach Bob Knight engaged in unsportsmanlike conduct during the Notre Dame game Tuesday, Dec. 7," the university said in a brief statement.
The university's Athletic Department cited Big Ten regulations that hold each member of the school responsible for conducting themselves in a "sportslike manner."

Astros trade

SEATTLE — Eric Anthony, who never became the power hitter Houston hoped he would be, was traded by the Astros to the Seattle Mariners for pitcher Mike Hampton and outfielder Mike Felder on Friday.
Anthony, 26, batted .249 with 15 home runs and 66 RBIs in 145 games for the Astros last season. He ranked eighth among National League outfielders with a .988 fielding percentage.
Anthony was Houston's cleanup hitter and right fielder for the past 1½ seasons. He hit 19 home runs with 80 RBIs in 1992.
Anthony led the shortened Gulf Coast League with 10 home runs in 1987, led the South Atlantic League with 29 home runs in 1988 and the Southern League with 28 homers in 1989.

Lee struggles into semifinals

■ Arlington Martin, El Paso Andress collide in semifinals; Lee in semis in opposite bracket.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

It wasn't a pretty night at Chaparral Center as the first round of the Tall City Invitational basketball tournament got underway, but defending champion Arlington Martin was the best of some other so-so efforts as the Warriors moved into position to make another title run.

Midland Lee, El Paso Andress and Lubbock Monterey also made it into the championship bracket with wins Friday, but only Andress had an effort worth spending much time on.

In fact, Andress will meet Martin at 1 p.m. today in what could be the "real" championship game if teams perform as they did in the first round.

Lee (7-4) defeated El Paso Irvin (8-4) by a 57-54 margin as the Rebels twice blew leads of 15 points, and that didn't leave Lee coach Jon House in a real happy mood afterwards.

"We played to the level of the competition," House said. "We wouldn't go out and put somebody away. I was disappointed in the effort after the first six minutes of play. Irvin has won eight games and they did a good job of hanging around. We've still got a chance to get into the finals, but we won't get past Lubbock Monterey Saturday morning if we play another game like this one."

Sean Low led Lee with 17 points, but it wasn't close to one of his better efforts. Michael Nunn hit 10 points and D.C. Montgomery put the game away with 13 seconds left with two free throws for a 57-52 lead.

Irvin got 12 points from Omar Montoya, nine in the fourth quarter, as the Rockets made a run at Lee late. Lee never trailed in the game, however.

Andress (6-4), a team that already owns a victory over Lee this year, used a stingy half-court press to befuddle Midland High's guards in a 63-55 win. MHS was down by as many as 17 points in the game.

MHS scored only two points in the first quarter and Andress coach Roshen Amie thought that was a huge difference in the game as the Eagles owned a 10-2 lead early.

"Midland has a good team, but they turned the ball over to us and came out shooting three-point shots that didn't go," Amie said. "If they had hit some of those threes, we might have been in trouble. Our press has been good all year, but it was a little better today."

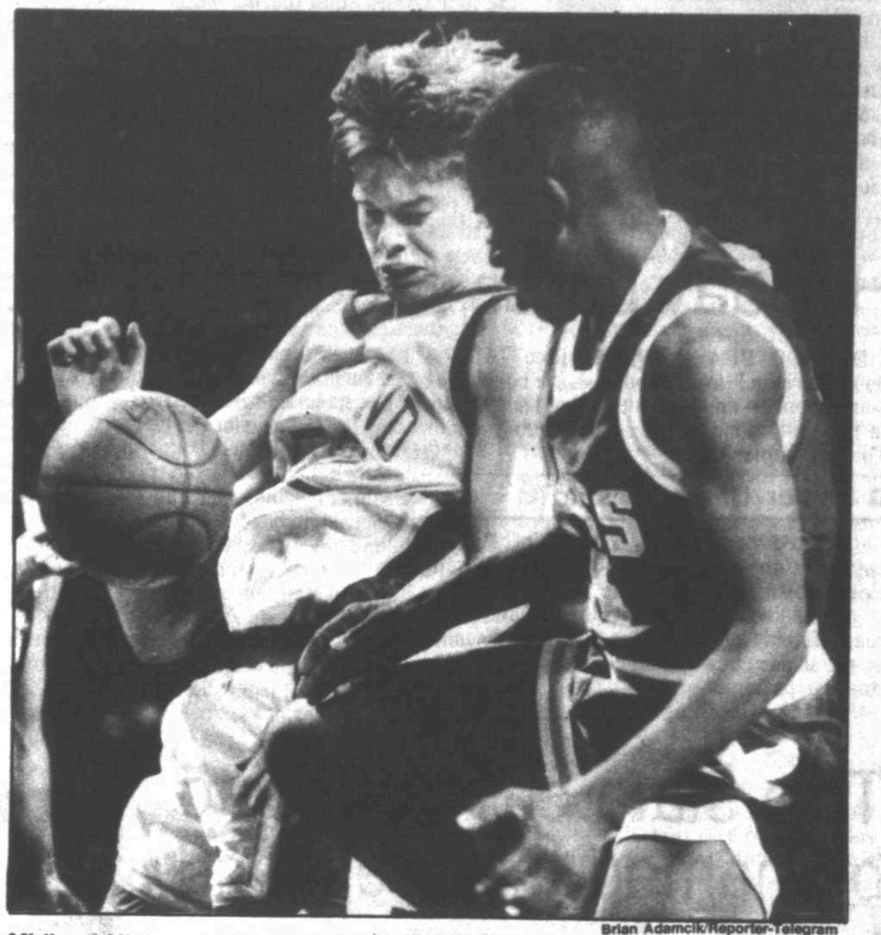

MHS coach Jack Stephenson said, "It's early in the season and we are going to get better. I made a lot of coaching mistakes."

Lanky 6-6 Andress post Jeremy Primozich hurt MHS inside for 20 points while Carl Jones had 19, but the big key may have been the defensive play of Jerry Hernandez, who had 10 points and numerous steals off the press.

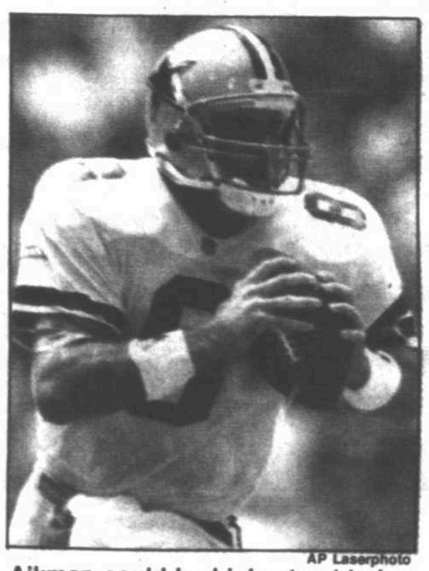

MHS got 16 points from Jumon Hailey and 15 from Donald Carter.

Martin (6-3) moved into position to hang a repeat title on the field with a

Aikman close to deal for big contract

By Mike Fisher

IRVING — A contract that could make Dallas Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman the National Football League's highest-paid player is likely to be reached within days, according to involved parties.

Terms of the negotiations were not revealed, but the sides are focusing on a six-year deal. Aikman wants to surpass San Francisco quarterback Steve Young as the league's top-paid player. Young has a five-year, $26 million contract.

Midland sets scoring record in win

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

Midland High's Lady Bulldogs set a school record for points Friday night with an 87-30 win over Class 4A Pecos. But considering the competition, the game probably won't be remembered as one of Midland's best efforts.

The Lady Eagles, now 1-9 on the year, were way overmatched by the talent, quickness and size of the Lady Bulldogs as they cruised to their 13th win in 14 games this season. Midland starts District 4-5A play Tuesday at San Angelo Central, the team that handed it it's first loop defeat last year.

Junior Amy Alcala and senior Julie Chancellor led the Lady Bulldog barrage with 22 and 26 points. Elaine Rogers' two free throws with 54 seconds to play gave Midland the record. The previous record was 85 points scored against Odessa High in 1985.

The 47-point margin was worse than when the teams first played in the Midland Tall City tournament this year. Midland won that game 65-21. Pecos scored one point in the second quarter and went 17 minutes without a field goal in a stretch that began in the second period.

"I know we're better than 47 points," Pecos coach Larnce Gardner said. "(But) the game got out of hand."

The Lady Bulldogs went out to a 17-5 first quarter lead and the game was never close. Pecos managed only one free throw in the third period and two field goals in the second half.

"We've got young girls — three seniors on the team and juniors and sophomores — playing and I still say we're a better ball club (than how we played tonight.)"

Pecos missed 10 free throws in the third quarter when it scored only one point. Martie Gomez looked to break the drought with a free throw with 1:09 left in the period, but a lane violation kept Pecos at no points for the quarter. They finally hit a free shot with 54 seconds left to keep from being shut

Lady Rebels take Tigers by tail, 57-41

■ Lee climbs above .500 for the first time this season with win.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

In what could only be described as a sloppy game by both teams, the Midland Lee girls put on a strong show in the second quarter and survived an ugly win over Snyder 57-41 Friday night in the Abell Junior High gym.

Lee, which is riding a five-game winning streak, improved to 6-5 overall and has a winning mark for the first time this season.

Lee clearly was the better of the two teams as the Lady Rebels took an 8-0 lead in the first quarter that would never be challenged. But that didn't stop the Lady Tigers from scratching and clawing their way to a respectable 16-point loss.

Snyder fought back to within 15-6 in the second part of the first quarter and pulled to within 15-12 by outscoring the Lady Rebels 6-0 to start the second quarter.

That's when the Lady Rebels decided to turn up the intensity.

With post Krissy Woodard finally hitting her mark, the Lady Rebels performed almost flawlessly from the 4:34 mark in the second quarter and jumped to a 36-14 halftime lead. Woodard had 10 of her 12 points in that period.

A tough Lee fullcourt press kept the Lady Tigers off the scoreboard for almost five minutes until hit from outside with 23 seconds left to pull Snyder to within 34-14.

That strong second quarter seemed to kill all of Lee's drive for the rest of the game, Lee coach Elise Kail said.

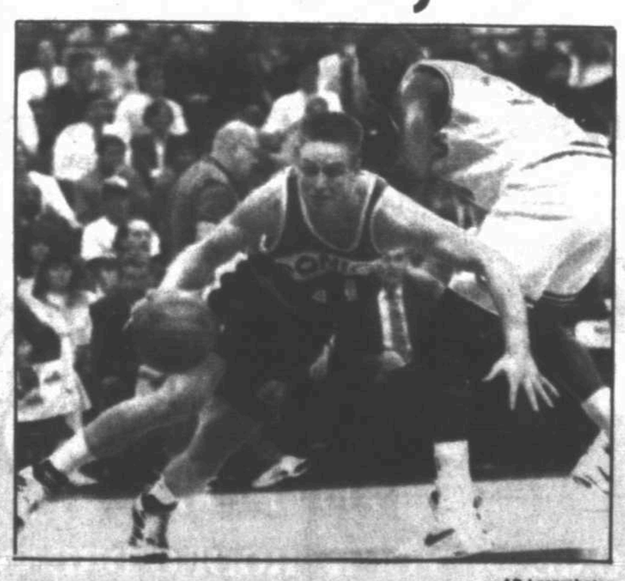

"We lost our intensity in the second half," Kail said. "There were a lot of situations that made us lose our intensity but we can't expect to compete for a district championship if we continue to do this.

"We've got to have the desire to smash an opponent when they're down, not be nice" Kail continued.

With nothing to lose and down by 22 points, the Lady Tigers seemed to steal Lee's intensity in the second half. Snyder outscored the Lady Rebels 11-6 in the first five minutes of the second half and narrowed the gap to 15 points.

Rockets, Sonics collide at Summitt

AP Laserphoto
Seattle forward Detlef Schrempf (11) has been a key acquisition for the Sonics as they have raced to a 16-1 record, the best start in franchise history.

■ Houston and Seattle meet in early showdown of West's best.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The retirements of Larry Bird and Magic Johnson not only cost the NBA two superstars, it cost the league its best rivalry: Boston Celtics vs. Los Angeles Lakers.

Now, the best matchups are between conference teams, and one of the best is the brewing battle between the Houston Rockets and Seattle SuperSonics, who meet tonight.

Six weeks into this season, Houston (18-1) and Seattle (16-1) are the best teams in the NBA. Both also are in the Western Conference, meaning they might meet in the postseason if either reaches the NBA final.

"The buildup is good," Houston center Hakeem Olajuwon said. "That's what the NBA is all about, games like this."

The teams met in the conference semifinals last season, playing a seven-game series in which each game was won by the home team. The Sonics capped it with a 103-100 overtime victory at the Seattle Center Coliseum.

But Houston fans still bemoan Seattle's homecourt edge last season and the Rockets are out to bring the playoff advantage to the Summit this season.

Sampras slams Chang in Cup match

MUNICH, Germany (AP) — Pete Sampras, who usually has trouble beating Michael Chang, mastered his American rival's newly found power game and won 7-6 (9-7), 6-3 Friday to reach the semifinals of the $6 million Grand Slam Cup.

■ Grand Slam Cup

Sampras compensation for the richest tournament in the world was $431,250.

"It is just a little extra Christmas money," Sampras said after his victory in one hour, 34 minutes.

Sampras, who won the inaugural tournament in 1990, raised his Grand Slam Cup career total to $2,881,250.

Although the winner's purse has been reduced from $2 million to $1.625 million this year, Sampras could end up with record earnings.

Sampras, ranked No. 1 in the world, also has earned a bonus of $500,000 for winning two Grand Slam titles this year — Wimbledon and the U.S. Open.

The Grand Slam Cup invites players with the best records in the four Grand Slam tournaments — the Australian, French, and U.S. Opens and Wimbledon.

If Sampras wins the tournament, he could earn $2.125 million. Sampras came into the event without much practice, having spent the previous two weeks playing a lot of golf in Florida.

In the last quarterfinal match, Petr Korda rallied to upset French Open champion Sergi Bruguera 4-6, 6-0, 6-4.

In Saturday's semifinals, Michael Stich plays Stefan Edberg, and Sampras plays Kodra.

Chang, ranked No. 8 in the world, still holds a 6-4 career edge over Sampras. Chang got $262,500, raising his Grand Slam Cup total to $2,712,500. He was a semifinalist in 1990 and runner-up the past two years.

Chang matched Sampras shot for shot in the first set, until an ace by Sampras set up a set point and Chang hit a forehand into the net in the tibreaker.

Chang made two errors in a row to drop his serve in the eighth game. He first sent a forehand long, then hit a wild volley when he should have let the high ball, which was going long.

Serving for the set, Sampras, who had a double-fault at 30-30, faced a break point, but saved it with an ace. He served another double-fault on his first match point, but fired his 14th ace to end the match.

Chang finished the match with four aces, but he also had more service winners than Sampras, 16-9.

"He is still a counter-puncher, but he is coming in more and mixing it up more and serving better," Sampras said. "He's changed his game for the surface and you have to give him a lot of credit. He's realized that in order to stay in the top 10, you have to be more aggressive."

Langham, Waldrop, Ward grab awards

Associated Press

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. — Quarterback Charlie Ward, who led top-ranked Florida State to an 11-1 record, won the Maxwell Award and the Davey O'Brien Award on Friday night.

The Maxwell Award is presented to the nation's outstanding college player and the O'Brien Award is given to the nation's top quarterback.

The senior from Thomasville, Ga., recieved the honor during the College Football Awards show at Disney World. Earlier Friday, he was named winner of the Davey O'Brien Award as the nation's top quarterback.

He completed 69.5 percent of his passes for 3,032 yards and 27 touchdowns while throwing just four interceptions.

Heath Shuler of Tennessee and Glenn Foley of Boston College were the other finalists.

Alabama's Antonio Langham won the Jim Thorpe Award as the nation's outstanding college defensive back.

Langham, who was declared ineligible for the Crimson Tide's last two games after it was revealed he signed with an agent following the 1993 Sugar Bowl, is Alabama's career interception leadwer with 19, including seven this season.

The other finalists were Texas A&M's Aaron Glenn and Notre Dame's Bobby Taylor.

Arizona nose guard Rob Waldrop won the Outland Trophy as college football's outstanding interior lineman.

Waldrop, a 6-foot-2, 275-pound senior, anchored the nation's stingiest run defense. Despite being double- and triple-teamed much of the season, he had eight sacks and 14 tackles for losses as Arizona allowed only 30.1 yards per game on the ground.

The other finalists were Notre Dame's Aaron Taylor and Auburn's Wayne Gandy.

SHEFFIELD, Ala. — While the other two finalists had the catchy names, it was Roger Graham who claimed the Harlon Hill Trophy as the top player in NCAA Division II football.

Graham, a junior running back from New Haven (Conn.), received the second highest vote total in the eight-year history of the award to beat out a pair of seniors: North Alabama running back Tyrone Rush and Mankato (Minn.) State's quarterback Jamie Pass.

Graham received 35 first-place votes and 160 total points in voting by the sports information directors at the Division II football-playing schools.

Hobday grabs two-stroke lead at senior tourney

DORADO BEACH, Puerto Rico (AP) — South African Simon Hobday shot a bogey-free 8-under-par 64 and took a two-shot lead Friday in the first round of the season-ending Senior Tour Championship.

■ Senior Championship

"I putted the bloody eyes out of it," Hobday said after one-putting nine holes on the Dorado Beach Resort course.

"Now I know what it's like to be Dave Stockton," Hobday said of the leading money winner on the senior circuit, long noted as one of golf's premier putters.

"I made everything I looked at ... All were right in the heart of the hole."

Hobday, who played most of his golf on the European and South African tours before joining the U.S. seniors in 1991, scored his first victory in the United States in June.

He pulled away from this elite field of the top 30 money-winners of the year with a card that showed no bogeys and no 5s. He birdied all the long holes and three of the four par-3s.

"Any time you birdie three par-3s, you're guaranteed a good round," he said.

Stockton, who leads the seniors with five victories and $1,115,944 in earnings, scrambled to a 66 and was tied for second with Larry Gilbert and Bob Murphy. Lee Trevino and Jim Albus were next at 68.

Defending champion Ray Floyd shot a 71 and George Archer, who won two of his last three starts, carded a 72.

Hobday had to struggle to save par on only one hole, the 16th, where he drove into a fairway bunker, couldn't reach the green and had to drop a 5-footer.

But that was almost routine for him in this round that was keyed by good putting.

He made a pair of 30-footers for birdies, dropped two others from 20-foot range "and got the ball close a few times."

Stockton, who needs to finish no lower than second in this $1 million tournament to beat Trevino's single-season money winning record, said his round was "the tale of two nines."

Two state champions to be named this weekend

PLANO — Converse Judson is back in the Class 5A Division I championship, looking for a second straight title and a chance to solidify its reputation as one of the state's true powerhouses.

A victory today could put the Rockets among the elite teams of all-time, making them sort of the late 1980s and early 1990s version of what Plano was in the late 1970s and much of the 1980s.

To do so, they'll have to beat this year's Plano squad, one that is tightly linked to 1986-87 Wildcats, Class 5A's last back-to-back winners. Five members of this year's Plano team have older brothers who played for those championship teams.

The Plano-Judson game kicks off at 12:07 p.m. today at Waco's Floyd Casey Stadium. It's be the first of two title games on the day and it begins several hours before semifinals in all five classes begin across the state.

Six-man finalists Dell City (13-0) and Panther Creek (14-0) meet in Big Spring to decide the other championship.

That game is one of three pitting unbeaten teams.

All four 4A surviving teams have unblemished records.

Defending champion Waxahachie (14-0) goes against Stephenville (14-0), and defensive stalwart La Marque (12-0) faces Corpus Christi Calallen (13-0).

The semifinalists have proven true the coaching adage "defense wins titles." Waxahachie, Stephenville and LaMarque finished 1-2-3 in defensive yards per game. Stephenville and Calallen were 1-2 in offensive yards.

The other Class 5A bracket, Division II, also offers interesting matchups.

Lewisville (13-0-1) tries to knock out defending champ Temple (11-3), a surprise semifinalist; and Aldine MacArthur (10-4) plays Victoria (14-0).

In 3A, Southlake Carroll (14-0) tries defending its title and keeping alive its mammoth win streak against Tatum (14-0). That winner will face the survivor of Columbus (12-1-1) and Cuero (11-2-1) next weekend.

The 2A title will come down to the winner of Saturday's game between Goldthwaite (12-2) and Pilot Point (14-0) against the winner of Omaha Paul Pewitt (13-1) and Wimberley (13-1).

In 1A, Sudan (12-2) faces Crawford (12-1) for the chance to play against the winner of Tenaha (11-1-1) and Bremond (13-0-1).

Should Judson (12-0-2) win, it likely won't be by the same margin as last year when the Rockets crushed Euless Trinity 52-0.

Plano (13-1) won't go down that easy, nor will the Wildcats allow that many points — even if Judson has Jerod Douglas, who gained 217 yards and scored four touchdowns last weekend in a 27-27 tie with Aldine Eisenhower.

"He is just outstanding," said Plano coach Gerald Brence. "He's easily the best back I've seen this year, but you can't get caught up in stopping him that you allow the other guys to beat us."

"When the pressure's on, he performs better," said Judson coach D.W. Rutledge. "He had a slow start with some injuries, and right now he's playing his best ball of the season."

The Wildcats also have been playing their best lately. Three of their four playoff victories were shutouts and they allowed Trinity to only 74 yards in a 12-0 victory last weekend, 262 below its average.

"When we started to put this defense together at the beginning of the year, our goal was to put the 11 best players on the field. We thought we'd have a great defense," Brence said.

A Judson victory would bring the school its third state title since 1988, the year Plano's string ended. The Rockets actually lost the championship game that year, but a court forced Dallas Carter to forfeit the title.

A unique link between the Judson and Plano dates to 1982 when Judson officials visited Plano to compare notes on how to handle split campuses for 9th to 10th grades and 11th to 12th grades. The system has made Plano the state's largest school with more than 4,000 students and Judson the fourth-biggest, with 3,700-plus student bodies.

Johnson settles out of court with AIDS accuser

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — Retired basketball star Magic Johnson and a woman who accused him of giving her the AIDS virus reached a private agreement that brought the dismissal of the woman's lawsuit.

U.S. District Court Judge Richard Enslen signed the dismissal order Thursday, saying only that lawyers on both sides requested it.

There was no indication in his order whether a financial settlement had been reached. Attorneys for both sides did not return phone calls Friday.

Johnson had acknowledged one sexual encounter, in June 1990, with Waymer Moore, a woman he knew from college.

The former Los Angeles Lakers star said he was unaware he carried HIV until shortly before announcing his retirement from the NBA in November 1991.

Moore, who discovered she had the virus in June 1991, contended that Johnson either knew he was infected or should have known he was at risk because of his admittedly promiscuous lifestyle.

Johnson's attorney, Howard Weitzman, told the Kalamazoo Gazette he would not reveal any details.

Moore, 32, refused to comment to the newspaper.

The lawsuit, filed in October 1992 in federal court in Kalamazoo, had been tentatively set to go to trial March 7, 1994.

REBELS: Lee advances in Tall City never-look-back 82-50 win over El Paso Eastwood, a team playing without former head coach Bobby Lesley this year for the first time since 1966.

From 1D

Martin possessess one of the finest guards in the state in D'Juan Baker, who didn't disappoint with 29 points. The 6-4 senior has signed with Top 25 power Oklahoma State, but that didn't keep some college coaches from showing up, including Midland College coaches Steve Green and Paul Steuckler.

The Warriors also have Ben Grieve, the son of Texas Rangers' general manager Tom Grieve, who was on hand to watch his son play Friday afternoon. Grieve, who has signed to play baseball at TCU, had six points.

Martin has losses this year to The Colony, Miami Northwestern and Jeff Davis of Montgomery, Ala.

"We took a couple of high profile losses last weekend in a tournament, but we've played pretty well," said Danny Husband, Martin head coach. "However, one game doesn't make a tournament and we have a habit of not showing up for some games. We'll just wait and see what happens.

Coaching for Eastwood this year is the long-time assistant of Lesley, Gary Pippen. Pippen joined the Troopers in 1967 and had been Lesley's assistant since that time.

"Bobby is enjoying life on the golf course," Pippen said. "He still comes around, but he's enjoying retirement. I thought I had him talked into one more year, but he just got up and quit one day."

Lubbock Monterey had an easy time of it against Class 4A Brownwood, winning 67-26, after a tight first quarter that saw the Plainsmen hold a meager 6-5 lead.

However, the Plainsmen (4-6) erupted for 22 points in the second period and the cold shooting Lions didn't crack double figures until late in the third quarter. Brownwood (3-7) scored only seven points in the first half.

Monterey's 6-3 junior Michael Lacy was the only player in the game to hit double figures, scoring 11 points with six in the fourth period.

Midland High will move to the consolation semfinals at 8 a.m. today against Eastwood while Martin will face Andress at 1 p.m. in the championship semifinals. Lee will play Monterey at 11:30 a.m. in the other consolation semifinal while Brownwood and Irvin plat at 9:30 a.m. in the other consolation semifinal.

In other games today, the seventh place game will be played at 3 p.m. and will be followed by the consolation finals at 4:30 p.m., third place at 6:30 p.m. and the championship game at 8 p.m.

LEE: Rebels overcome rally for fifth straight win

From 1D

A drive by Meriah Clabourn capped the Snyder run which was fueled by baskets from Ragland, Rachel Shipp and Jodi White as the Lady Tigers pulled to within 40-25 with 3:53 left in the third. By the end of the third, Snyder had outscored the Rebels 17-8 in the third and pulled to within 44-31.

But the Lady Rebels are playing good basketball right now after starting the season with a 1-5 record and Kail was pleased Lee was able to find the way to hold on for the win in the fourth quarter.

"(The last few games) we've usually had only one bad quarter and we've been able to keep the intensity," Kail said. "The kids are practicing really hard right now and we're starting to get where we need to be before district starts. But we still have a ways to go."

In the fourth, the Lady Rebels maintained their margin of victory with strong follow shots from Phyllis Turner, Deborah York and Michelle Benson and Susan Seay's second 3-point shot of the night sealed the Lee win.

The Lady Rebels also survived on balanced scoring with Woodard and point guard Dee Kendricks each scoring 12 and Seay finishing with 11. York and Benson finished with eight and seven points respectively.

AIKMAN: Contract would make QB highest paid

From 1D

Jones said.

"Well," Aikman said jokingly, "there will have to be at least one more face-to-face meeting — so I can sign on the dotted line."

Both sides responded to Wednesday's announcement of a new salary-cap deadline by focusing on a long-term pact.

Aikman is willing to extend his commitment to the Cowboys, in what might be the final contract of his career. In exchange, he wants the team to tear up the final two years of his existing deal (worth $1.17 million and $1.287 million).

In 1989, Aikman, who came from the University of California at Los Angeles, signed a six-year contract worth about $11 million. Last season he led the Cowboys to a 52-17 Super Bowl victory against Buffalo.

He said that the new deadline, made public this week by the NFL, can only help the talks.

"It won't be a detriment," he said. "I don't see it being a big change, because I see us being able to get it done by around that time regardless of any deadline."

Under the new deadline, if a contract is not reached by Dec. 15, additional money paid to Aikman in 1993 is "bonus money" and counts against the salary cap, the amount of money each NFL team is allotted for all its players.

If Dallas beats the deadline, any money paid in 1993 is "base salary," and it would not count against the 1994 limit.

as to the amount of money they may reduce a player's contract from one year to the next, meaning the amount of money paid this year is not part of the limit. One way or another, it is clear that Aikman will, as Jones has long maintained, "get what is coming to him" — meaning pay that could exceed that of San Francisco's Young.

Aikman said he is glad the process has been handled with some subtlety.

"It hasn't been a distraction and it won't be," he said. "(Agent) Leigh Steinberg and Jerry Jones have both done a great job of handling things so it wouldn't affect me or the ballclub"

NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue said yesterday that the deadline was moved up this week from Jan. 2 to prevent teams from "circumventing the rules to gain unfair competitive advantages." He also said that the possibility of granting extensions on a case-by-case basis beyond the Dec. 15 deadline is being discussed.

ROCKETS: Houston, Sonics meet tonight

From 1D

"It's going to be a tough game," Houston guard Vernon Maxwell said. "There's going to be a lot of physical play and a lot of fouls and there will be a lot of talking going on."

Last season, Seattle and Houston tied for the second-best conference record at 55-27. Because the Sonics won the head-to-head series 3-1, they got the home court.

Houston fans, however, like to point out the mitigating circumstances that cost them that advantage, such as the first two Sonics victories coming in the first two games of the season in Japan.

There also were tough losses in the final weeks of the season, including one to San Antonio, which forced overtime on a David Robinson dunk that appeared to be after the buzzer, and one to the lowly Dallas Mavericks.

So, with that in mind, not even the comfort of an NBA record-tying start can let the Rockets shake the Sonics. Seattle even made the cover of Sports Illustrated while Houston had a better record.

"I wasn't here last year, but the other guys have told me about the great series between these two," said Houston's Mario Elie, who played last season with Portland. "I think that will continue."

Seattle comes into Saturday's game off a 125-93 victory over Dallas Thursday night. The Sonics hit 15 of 20 second-quarter shots and forced nine turnovers in the period to pull away from the Mavericks.

"They blitzed us," Dallas coach Quinn Buckner said. "They're a championship-quality team."

The road to the showdown was more treacherous for Houston, which needed Maxwell's 30-foot jumper as regulation expired to force overtime and an eventual 115-109 victory over the Miami Heat Thursday.

"The Seattle game can't be any tougher than the Miami game," Olajuwon said.

All 12 Midland players saw action and 11 of them scored. Lisa Yanez had nine points off the bench for the Lady Bulldogs.

"We came out with a lot more intensity than we had the last few of ball games," Midland coach Jim Raughton said. "I think we've been a little soft, a little tentative and not getting after it in the backcourt like we can."

The Lady Bulldogs had nine fouls in the first half, but Raughton said that's part of using a pressing defense.

"We knew coming into the season we were going to have to press the basketball and we had come away from what we thought one of our strengths might be," Raughton said.

But not Friday. Midland forced several turnovers early in the game. Alcala in particular got her game going in the second period with 13 points.

The Midland junior varsity beat Seminole Friday in the Seminole tournament semi-final 40-24. They were led by Agonna Merritt's 18 points and play in the tournament final today on 1 p.m.

Stagg's win total clouded with conflicts in records

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The quest for gridiron victories for Amos Alonzo Stagg Sr. has been rekindled by Susquehanna University, 28 years after the football pioneer's death.

Stagg Sr. recently was dropped to fourth place on the all-time win list after the NCAA credited Glenn "Pop" Warner with six more victories.

But the way some see it, the NCAA has shorted Stagg Sr. for 21 victories at the central Pennsylvania school where he shared coaching duties with his son from 1947-52.

If the wins were counted, Stagg would move to second on the all-time win list ahead of Warner and Alabama's Bear Bryant. He would still trail Grambling State University's Eddie Robinson.

The NCAA has credited Stagg Sr. with 314 wins from a 57-year head coaching career with stints at Springfield College, the University of Chicago and the College of the Pacific.

But the victory tally stops when Stagg, then 84, joined his son Amos Alonzo Stagg Jr. at Susquehanna in 1947. The younger Stagg was listed as the head coach on all school records submitted to the NCAA during the six years his father was there.

In 1981, when Bryant was closing in on Stagg's record, the younger Stagg and others asked the NCAA to credit the elder Stagg with the wins.

The university produced letters and testimony from former players who said at the least, the two shared coaching duties, with the elder Stagg running the offense.

But Steve Boda, the NCAA's statistics services manager, ruled that letters and testimony which came after the fact weren't enough to rewrite the record book.

Now, a month after an NCAA ruling raised Glenn "Pop" Warner's total to 319, with credit for wins at Carlisle and Pittsburgh, Susquehanna is ready to try again.

Orioles, Palmeiro near deal

BALTIMORE (AP) — First baseman Rafael Palmeiro and the Baltimore Orioles apparently has neared agreement on a contract worth about $27.5 million over five years, but neither side was talking Friday.

"There's nothing I can say," Palmeiro's agent, Jim Bronner, said in Chicago early Friday evening.

Orioles officials couldn't be contacted later in the night. WMAR-TV reported the deal had been agreed to Palmeiro hit .295 with 37 homers and 105 RBIs for the Texas Rangers last season. He originally had hoped to re-sign with the Rangers, but Texas opted to sign free agent first baseman Will Clark after Palmeiro turned down a five-year contract worth about $26.5 million.

Baltimore also tried to pursue Clark, but turned their attention toward Palmeiro after Clark signed with Texas.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Scottie Pippen scored 28 points, including a key three-point play late in the game, and Chicago held off a late charge by New Jersey for a 109-105 victory Friday night.

The Bulls, who have won five of six games, led by as many as 15 points in the third period. But New Jersey rallied, closing to 95-93 on Kevin Edwards' jumper with 4:48 left in the game.

Pippen and Pete Myers responded with consecutive three-point plays. Pippen's came at the 4:03 mark and Myers' 24 seconds later, giving the Bulls a 101-93 advantage.

The Nets, who have dropped nine of 11 decisions by six points or less, got no closer than the final margin.

Kenny Anderson led the Nets with 31 points and 11 assists, while Derrick Coleman scored 26 points.

B.J. Armstrong scored 20 points for the Bulls, while Horace Grant had 18 points and 16 rebounds.

Kings 109, 76ers 103

PHILADELPHIA — Sacramento won its first road game of the season and snapped an eight-game losing streak when Spud Webb's 10 fourth-quarter points rallied the Kings to a victory over Philadelphia.

The Kings, who lost their first nine road games of the season, beat the 76ers for the first time since 1985.

Mitch Richmond scored 26 points and Lionel Simmons had 23 points and 16 rebounds for the Kings, the last NBA team without a road win.

Rookie Shawn Bradley led the 76ers with 17 points, while Clarence Weatherspoon and Jeff Hornacek each had 15.

Magic 117, Celtics 102

ORLANDO, Fla. — Shaquille O'Neal, the NBA's leading scorer, had 30 points, 12 rebounds and eight blocks, leading Orlando to a victory over Boston.

Scott Skiles scored 24 points for the Magic, who built a 15-point lead early in the fourth quarter that wasn't challenged.

The Celtics were led by rookie Dino Radja with 22 points, but only six of those came in the second half. Sherman Douglas had 19 points and 13 assists.

The teams swapped small leads in the first half, which ended in a 50-50 tie. O'Neal and Radja both had 16 points at halftime.

Bucks 90, Pistons 88

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Ken Norman hit two 3-pointers in the final 1:46, and Milwaukee overcame a 13-point fourth-quarter deficit to hand Detroit its eighth consecutive loss.

The Bucks, who won for just the fourth time in 18 games season, tied the game with 3:30 left, but baskets by Isiah Thomas and Olden Polynice, who led the Pistons with 25 points and 15 rebounds, put them ahead 86-82 with less than two minutes left.

Norman, who already has 15 3-pointers this season after managing no more than 10 in any of his six previous NBA seasons, hit his second 3-pointer of the game to pull the Bucks within one.

After Thomas made one of two free throws to put Detroit ahead 87-85, Norman, who scored 16 points, gave the Bucks their first lead of the second half with another 3-pointer, with 33 seconds to go.

Timberwolves 109, Clippers 108

MINNEAPOLIS — Rookie Isaiah Rider scored nine of his 27 points in the fourth quarter as Minnesota snapped a three-game home losing streak with a victory over the Los Angeles Clippers.

Rider, starting for the second straight game in place of injured guard Doug West, hit a pair of 3-pointers during a 17-7 run in the middle of the fourth quarter, but the game wasn't decided until the final seconds.

Danny Manning scored 23 points and Mark Aguirre 22 for the Clippers, who made just 14 of 30 free throws and have lost four of five games.

No. 11 Purdue rips Cougars

Associated Press

■ SWC Roundup

INDIANAPOLIS — Glenn Robinson sparked a 15-0 run late in the first half with eight of his 33 points as 11th-ranked Purdue defeated Houston 114-90 Friday night in a non-conference game.

Cuonzo Martin added 21 points, while Justin Jennings and Herb Dove added career highs of 18 and 11 off the bench. Purdue (6-0) had its highest scoring output of the season and came within three points of tying the school record for second-half points (69).

The 6-foot-8 Robinson contributed two 3-pointers as Purdue ran off 15 straight points to take command 48-28 late in the first half. The Boilermakers held Houston (2-4) to one field goal over the final four minutes of the half.

Brandon Brantley started the run with a pair of free throws at 3:55, then dunked the follow of a miss by Robinson on the fast break. The Boilermakers went to a full court press, forcing two quick turnovers that Robinson and Martin converted into 3-pointers.

Robinson scored the final five points, capping the run with another 3 before Angel Sanz ended Houston's scoreless string with a 3-pointer of his own with 21 seconds left for a 48-31 lead at halftime.

Robinson had 20 of his points in the first half, when he was a perfect 4-for-4 from 3-point range. He ended up hitting 13 of 18 shots, 6 of 7 on 3-pointers, before sitting down with 6:20 to play.

As a team, Purdue shot 59 percent, 12 of 24 on 3-pointers. Martin was 4-for-5 from long range.

Jennings highlighted the second-half with his play off the bench, when he scored 14 of his points. He excited the crowd with a pair of dunks, an alley oop and a high-rising drive through traffic.

Anthony Goldwire scored 23 of his game-high 35 points in the second half for Houston. Rafael Carrasco added 15 for the Cougars, with Willie Byrd getting 12 and Jermaine Johnson 10.

Suspended Knight's son ejected for brawling

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Patrick Knight joined his suspended coach-father on the sidelines Friday night when he was ejected for brawling with a Tennessee Tech player in No. 12 Indiana's 117-73 victory in the first round of the Hoosier Classic.

Knight, a key figure in the suspension of his father, Bob, showed a bit of the family temper in the second half when he and Greg Bibb dragged each other to the floor before teammates and referees could separate them. Both were ejected.

Knight was suspended for one game earlier Friday for an incident during Tuesday's game against Notre Dame. The controversial coach pushed his son into a chair after an errant pass and appeared to kick him.

In suspending the coach, Athletic Director Clarence Doninger cited Big 10 regulations stating that "unsportsmanlike conduct shall subject the individual to disciplinary action."

Assistant coach Norm Ellenberger took Knight's place Friday.

Indiana buried the Eagles (1-3) early, opening an 18-5 lead 5:15 into the game. Alan Henderson powered the Hoosier offense with 21 points while Damon Bailey added 20.

Panther Creek looks for title with new QB

By Chris Gove
Associated Press writer

VOSS — Perhaps never in his life had Chad Bolton wanted to practice — or needed to practice — as desperately as he did Tuesday afternoon.

As it was, Bolton trotted out late to the yellow grass of Panther Stadium for Tuesday's Panther Creek High School football practice. He had been with classmates attending a series of plays in Abilene for school, and got back several minutes after practice began.

When he finally did get back to school, the only thing on his mind must have been joining his Panther teammates in preparation for Saturday's six-man state championship game against Dell City.

But as Bolton got to the field, it was evident he wouldn't be practicing for a few minutes. He had to answer some questions first.

A week ago, that wouldn't have been a problem. A week ago, Bolton wasn't the starting quarterback for the best six-man football team in the state.

A week ago, senior Chad Humphries was that person. But when he broke his collarbone on a running play during the second quarter of the Panthers' 44-27 semifinal victory against Guthrie, Bolton's world turned upside down.

No longer would he be the Panthers' leading receiver. He would be their quarterback — the most important position in the Panthers' spread offense.

Gone was Humphries, the person that had accounted for 2,969 yards of total offense and 51 touchdowns this season, and 4,947 yards of total offense over the past two seasons.

In was Bolton, a junior who had rushed for 46 yards and thrown for 258 yards before taking over last week's game. And everyone wanted to know exactly what he was thinking.

As soon as the Panthers had finished off Guthrie, Bolton went through four different post-game interviews — which were probably four more than he had gone through in his whole life.

At practice Tuesday, a camera from an Abilene television station awaited. The questions were pretty similar to the ones he had faced the previous Friday and the ones that he will hear until gametime: How will the team be affected? Are you nervous? Can the team still win state?

Those are good questions. How will the Panthers — winners of 28 consecutive games — fare at 3 p.m. today in Big Spring when they take on Dell City in search of a second straight state title?

"Chad (Bolton) is going to be the main project," Panther Creek coach Alan Luker said. "Getting him ready to play is going to be our main focus. But it's not like everyone's going to be relying just on him. His position is very important to our offense, but we've got lots of other kids that can help out."

Getting the rest of the offense might be the main challenge for the Panther Creek coaching staff.

Including two forfeit victories, the Panthers have steamrolled to their 14-0 record. In a lot of those games, Humphries simply ran around or passed over opponents — including 11 TD passes and 622 yards of passing to Bolton.

The rest of the Panther offense has gone somewhat unnoticed, particularly the running game. Senior Clayton Hinds and junior Monty Bouldin combined for over 1,600 yards and 18 touchdowns rushing last season, but have been held to a combined 524 rushing yards this season.

"Any time you're in a big game, you want the ball in your hands," said Hinds, who has rushed for 350 yards and nine touchdowns this season after rushing for 926 yards a year ago. "I guess maybe we'll be a little more involved now."

Bouldin, who has 174 yards and eight touchdowns this season after amassing 738 yards and all-state honors last year, said he wouldn't expect a mass change of team strategy.

"It won't be that much different than usual," he said. "We may run a little bit more, bit things will basically be the same. Chad can do it. He'll calm down after this week and be ready to go Saturday."

Bolton did adjust well to his new position, mainly because it isn't a new position. He saw some playing time as backup quarterback during the season, but was as shocked as anyone when Humphries went down against Guthrie.

He scored on a 6-yard sweep on his first play and added a nifty 34-yard TD run on the third play of the Panthers' next possession to give them a 22-15 lead.

Bolton finished the game with 108 yards rushing and three touchdowns, but this week's game poses a different problem. He's had more time to think about it.

"I'll be pretty nervous before the game," Bolton said. "Practice is going pretty good so far, but I'll probably be a little more nervous as the game's getting started."

With that in mind, Bolton will get help from someone who knows what it feels like to be a junior who's the starting quarterback in a state championship game — Humphries.

Last season, Humphries roiled through the year but hit significant bumps in the state title game against Fort Hancock. He turned the ball over on the Panthers' first two series — a fumble and an interception — before settling down to dominate the game with 468 yards of total offense.

Humphries was settled down by Panther Creek Superintendent Charles Bryant, via a wireless radio. No he knows the duties of settling Bolton down will be up to him.

"I'll just tell him to keep calm and keep his nerves down," said Humphries, who's helping Bolton out in practice with the technical aspect of being a spread quarterback. "If he does that, he'll do just fine. A lot of it is how you deal with the pressure. There's a lot of pressure and a lot of decisions to make back there."

De La Hoya wants to get rid of managers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Oscar De La Hoya, who always seems in command inside the ropes, said today he's taking control of his career outside the ring as well.

De La Hoya said that he has terminated his agreement with the two men who signed him after his gold medal performance in the 1992 Olympics.

"I'm making a business decision, for my future," De La Hoya said in a news conference.

He accused Steve Nelson and Bob Mittleman of failing to deliver on their promises in a $1 million, five-year contract. The fighter said he will honor a three-year deal with promoter Bob Arum but also plans to sign a five-fight deal with HBO.

"They (his managers) didn't keep their promises. Now I'm in full control. That's what I wanted. I'm the head guy here," De La Hoya said.

He displayed a red, white and green cast on his left hand and wrist, for a ligament injury that he said caused him to pull out of a fight scheduled in New York on Thursday.

His attorney, Michael Norris, also issued a statement from a doctor who had examined De La Hoya's hand, determined that he could not fight and placed the hand in a cast.

De La Hoya earlier had said that he expects to buy out his contract with Mittleman and Nelson. At the press conference, however, Norris would not allow De La Hoya to speak in specifics about his falling out with the two managers.

De La Hoya, 105-pound gold medal winner at the 1992 Olympics in Barcelona, has won all 11 of his pro fights. When his fight in New York was cancelled this week, "personal reasons" initially were cited as his reason for pulling out.

Mittleman, however, told the Los Angeles Times the real reason for De La Hoya's decision was monetary.

"What's he going to say? I took $1 million from Nelson and Mittleman, used them up until I got the HBO deal and then left them when someone gave me more money?" Mittleman said.

"Yeah, how did we mismanage him? By getting him to 11-0 and getting him a multi-million dollar HBO contract? He's making those things up now."

De La Hoya said Robert Alcazar will continue to be his trainer, and Los Angeles businessman Raynaldo T. Garza will serve as business agent.

"We're back to our old team, the team that we had in the beginning. We won't have anything to worry about except training, fighting and having fun."

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
- ★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
- ★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
- ★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- ★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?
Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?
Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?
