Foes Map New Test Of Treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate leaders are confident the second Panama Canal treaty ratification fight will be won more easily than the first.

But opponents say the battle has just begun.

day — 67 votes were needed — saved President Carter from a major political defeat.

Carter had put his prestige as a world leader and the political strength of his presidency on the line. Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd said he believes those were the two biggest factors in assuring approval.

The treaty approved Thursday in the crowded and hushed Senate chamber guarantees the neutrality of the canal after the year 2000, when the United States will surrender control of the 64-year-old waterway, provided the second treaty wins Senate approval.

Asked if that pact would be ratified, Byrd said, "We have established good momentum."

The second agreement, to actually give the canal to Panama in steps over the next 22 years, will be taken up after the Senate returns from its 10-day Easter recess.

Assistant Democratic Leader Alan Cranston of California said of his fellow treaty supporters, "In the long run, we

Commandos Hit Guerrilla Bases

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli commandos swept into Lebanon in helicopters and boats today, blowing up a seacoast base of Palestinian guerrillas after hand-to-hand fighting with members of one of the most notorious Arab terrorist organizations.

Earlier, guerrilla leaders claimed that they found evidence that the Israelis rocketed two carloads of refugees.

Reports reaching the presidential palace here indicated that Israeli troops in inland southern Lebanon, backed by tanks and covered by lethal air strikes, were moving west toward the Mediterranean after capturing five more Palestinian villages.

The operations followed up the Israeli assault launched Wednesday into southern Lebanon to clear a guerrilla-free strip along the Israeli-Lebanese frontier. Casualties among Lebanese and Palestinians, including civilians, exceed 600 with 250 killed, the Red Cross said here in a report on the first two days of fighting.

The attack on the coastal guerrilla camp at Adloun, 22 miles north of the Israeli border and between Tyre and Sidon, was carried out during the afternoon under cover of a missile bombardment from four Israeli navy gunboats, one observer said.

The helicopter-borne paratroopers reportedly fought hand-to-hand with the guerrillas of George Habash's radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine before dynamiting the base.

Guerrillas in the same area said 10 hours earlier they found the tail of an Israeli rocket lying near two wrecked autos where the bodies of men, women and children were so mangled it could not be determined how many there were. One unconfirmed report spoke of 20 dead. The guerrillas claimed that raid was made by seaborne Israeli commandos.

A PFLP staoement in Beirut acknowledged the Israeli landing at its camp, but claimed guerrilla defenders beat back the assault, suffering one dead and two wounded.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv refused to comment on the reports of commando attacks today. The military said Israeli troops Thursday raided the coastal town of Ras al-Baida, five miles north of the border, and seized weapons and rockets. The Israelis said the town was the launching point for rockets that have struck Nahariya, seven miles inside Israel.

The Israeli thrust into Lebanon began after last Saturday's Palestinian attack north of Tel Aviv, in which 35 Israelis were killed and for which Yasser Arafat's Al Fatah guerrillas — separate from the PFLP — claimed responsibility.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin told reporters late Wednesday in Jerusalem that the operation was completed, but that Israeli troops would stay until Israel had guarantees the guerrillas would not return to their bases.

In addition to those killed and wounded, the Red Cross in Beirut said more than 100,000 civilians in Lebanon fled the border area to churches, mosques, schools and tent cities to the north and east.

Observers reported today that Israeli helicopters landed commandos at two other villages north and east of Tyre where radical guerrillas are believed to maintain rocket launching bases. The rightist "Voice of Lebanon" radio station reported an Israeli troop landing in Tyre itself after a barrage from missile boats that the station said wrecked large parts

Carter Gives Russia Stern New Warning

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI) — President Carter today warned the Soviet Union against using its military might for "political blackmail" and said America is prepared to spend more on its own arsenal if necessary.

In what was billed as a get-tough, major defense statement, the president also told the Soviet Union its stepped-up military activities may erode "popular support" in the United States for joint ventures by the two nations.

The president made his address at Wake Forest University before boarding a nuclear aircraft carrier for a demonstration cruise off the Georgia coast, where he will spend the weekend.

Carter pointed to the Russian arms buildup and an "ominous inclination on the part of the Soviet Union to use its military power" to intervene in Africa and other crisis spots.

To protect the nation and maintain peace, he said, "We shall have to continue to support strong and efficient military forces ... we will not allow any other nation to gain military superiority over us."

Besides greater strategic arms, he said the Russians also have built up "massive" non-nuclear forces which "could be used for political blackmail and could threaten our vital interests" unless the United States and its allies maintain their own conventional military strength.

North Carolina is a major tobacco growing state and Carter was greeted in Winston-Salem by cheers and signs chiding HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano. The placards, aimed at Califano's antismoking campaign, read "Legalize Tobacco" and "Peanuts to Califano."

Carter said if the Russians "failed to demonstrate restraint in missile programs and other force levels, and in the projection of Soviet or proxy forces into other lands," the relations with the United States would degenerate.

"Then, popular support in the United States for such cooperation will erode," the president told about 2,000 persons in his Wake Forest speech.

A top-level government official, who accompanied the president from Washington, said Carter was concerned with "growing pattern of Soviet intrusion" and its "growing ... capacity to intervene in local conflicts."

To underline his theme, Carter was to spend the afternoon off the Georgia coast aboard the nation's newest nuclear-powered aircraft carrier, the $1.1 billion USS Dwight D. Eisenhower, for an air power demonstration.

He was accompanied by Defense Secretary Harold Brown and other officials.

Debunking as a myth the view the present defense budget is too burdensome, the president said, "We can readily afford the necessary costs of our military forces, as well as an increased level if needed to prevent any adversary from destabilizing the peace of the world."

During his 1976 campaign, Carter said then-current defense spending could be reduced by $5 billion to $7 billion a year. He has now proposed a $126 billion military budget for the 12 months starting Oct.1, an all-time record that continues a trend of increasing defense programs after inflation is discounted.

The president mentioned concerns voiced from abroad that "this country somehow is pulling back from protecting its interests and his friends around the world," and said his aim was to explain "that is not the case."

Farm Group Airs Demand

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a face-to-face meeting with Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, striking farmers today angrily charged Bergland and President Carter with refusing to help them avoid bankruptcy.

"It's not right for you and the president to deny farmers what is rightfully theirs ... and that is parity (prices)," Craig Bryant of Elgin told Bergland.

"My friend, I'm on your side," Bergland replied when one angry farmer urged steps to increase prices on export wheat. He said the government is trying to negotiate an international agreement with price floors to protect farmers.

There was no repetition of a Thursday rush on the Agriculture Department by farm strike members. Twenty-five strikers spent the night in a department conference room, but abandoned the room this morning to meet with Bergland.

The 45-minute meeting was attended by some 22 chosen delegates of the American Agriculture farm strike movement.

Bergland defended current administration farm programs, saying they will raise crop prices if farmers participate in them.

Most farmer participants in today's meeting with Bergland said it accomplished nothing as far as they were concerned.

"The secretary isn't listening to the farmer. He's listening to the big boys, the associations," said Leonard Cox of Weskan, Kan. Cox and others said they would strike by cutting their production 50 percent this year.

A group of about 25 strikers who occupied an Agriculture Department conference room overnight left the room quietly late this morning before the Bergland meeting. About half a dozen of them attended Bergland's meeting with selected strike delegates and others were to attend two later meetings with Bergland today.

The group broke through a guarded glass door Thursday morning and 50 to 75 entered the department's headquarters building.

Two security guards were slightly injured in scuffles before police reinforce-

Hanna Plea Ducks Trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Rep. Richard T. Hanna, D-Calif., the only present or former congressman charged in the Korean influence-buying scandal, pleaded guilty today to one count of conspiracy to defraud the U.S. government.

Hanna thereby avoided trial on a 40-count indictment scheduled to begin next week.

He could be sentenced to a maximum of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine. No sentencing date was set pending a probation report on Hanna.

The white-haired Hanna, who served in Congress from 1963 to 1974, sat by as government lawyer Jeffrey S. White read the agreement reached in plea-bargaining with Hanna.

Sheats Renews Debate Offer

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Morris Sheats said today he is "very disappointed" his Democratic opponent, state Sen. Kent Hance, refused to debate him and urged Hance to "seriously reconsider debating me any time, any place."

"This debate is very important, and I am disappointed that my opponent has treated it so lightly," Sheats said.

In a conversation with Avalanche-Journal editors Thursday, Sheats said he would debate Hance "any time, any place he agrees to."

However, Hance turned down the suggestion and said a debate challenge is "an American tradition that the candidate who finds himself way behind in the race" uses.

The Lubbock attorney said the debate challenge told him Sheats "is truly worried about his progress in the campaign."

Sheats denied he issued the challenge because he felt he was trailing in the race, saying the "allegation doesn't hold water."

"There are some basic political differences between myself and my opponent," Sheats said. "I am the conservative candidate in the Democratic primary for the U.S. Congress, and all the people in West Texas deserve an opportunity to evaluate these differences."

Sheats refused to discuss those differences saying, "That's what a debate is for — to bring out the differences. That's why it is so important."

The Trinity Church pastor did say one of the differences is that he is a "persu-

Jury Finds Brasfield Guilty Of Murder

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

WICHITA FALLS — A jury shortly after noon today found Philip Carey Brasfield guilty of capital murder in connection with the abduction-slaying of a 6-year-old East Lubbock child Oct. 26.

Jurors were convinced by circumstantial evidence that the bearded Brasfield, 28, was the man who abducted Johnny Turner Jr., stabbed him numerous times, smothered him to death and left his body to decay in a desolate, brush-choked canyon.

It took the seven-woman, five-man panel an hour and 45 minutes to return the verdict.

The jury returned at 12:05 p.m. Brasfield, standing with his hands braced on the counsel table, registered little emotion when the verdict was read by presiding District Judge William R. Shaver.

Brasfield now faces either life imprisonment or death, the only punishment options available for a capital conviction.

The punishment phase of the trial was to get started later this afternoon.

In final arguments today, Lubbock Criminal Dist. Atty. Alton Griffin told jurors they would never know how the atrocity occurred or why.

"We'll never know because Johnny Turner Jr. is never going to be here to tell us. He is never going to tell anyone why he sat in that pickup truck or why he got into it in the first place."

Griffin argued the state nevertheless had forged an undeniable chain of circumstantial evidence which links the bearded, 28-year-old defendant to the child's death.

He said witnesses had accounted for Brasfield's every movement from approximately 3:30 p.m. the day the youngster disappeared until about 7 that night, except for what he termed a "terrible gap" from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m.

The victim, son of Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Turner Sr. of 1028 E. 29th St. in Lubbock, disappeared from his home shortly after 5 p.m. last Oct. 26.

The 55-pound, first-grader's body was found eight days later in the rugged and desolate Yellowhouse Canyon three miles north of Slaton.

Brasfield was arrested at his Slaton home Oct. 31. The capital murder indictment alleges he asphyxiated the Turner child during the course of a kidnapping.

The trial was moved here on a change of venue.

Jurors began deliberations about 10:20 a.m. As the minutes ticked by, Brasfield, who has been unflappable during the course of the trial, sat holding hands with his wife in a small consultation area across the hall from the 89th District courtroom here.

Court-appointed defense attorney Dennis McGill addressed each juror by name before asking them not to "guess" their way to a guilty verdict.

McGill argued such a verdict should not be returned "in the face of this type of police work, this type of investigation, in the face of facts that are clearly missing."

He scored what he termed gaps in the state's circumstantial evidence case, including the fact that chemists had been unable to find any evidence inside the pickup truck Brasfield is alleged to have used to abduct the victim.

"There is nothing in the pickup truck to

Brown's Popularity Declines

A California Poll survey of 1,217 Californians released Thursday showed that 29 percent of those polled say Brown is doing a "good job" as governor of California compared to 53 percent two years ago.

The most recent poll showed 20 percent of those surveyed giving Brown a "poor" rating compared to 7 percent two years ago.

Other recent polls have indicated President Carter's popularity also has slipped.

Brown is regarded as a potential challenger to Carter for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1980.

Searchers Losing Hope Of Canoeists' Survival

By JIM KLAHN

STEVENSON, Wash. (AP) — For a full year they planned their trip. They studied maps of every inch of the 5,000 miles of rivers and lakes that stretch from Astoria, Ore., to the mouth of Maine's Kennebec River.

Canoeists Peter Macridis, 25, and Tim Black, 23, wanted to forge a national cross-country waterway and hoped their trip would spur the necessary legislation. "Like an Appalachian Trail for hikers," said Macridis the night before the two headed up the Columbia River on March 1.

But the adventure ended about 150 miles from Astoria, on a treacherous stretch of the Columbia Gorge named Wind Mountain.

"I don't believe there is any hope whatsoever for the pair's survival," Macridis' father, Roy Macridis, said Thursday, five days after their equipment was found washed up on the river's bank.

A ground party supported by aircraft searched the river east of Stevenson the first days after the green, 16-foot canoe, and the equipment, including paddles and life jackets, were found.

But only an occasional Civil Air Patrol flight patrolled late in the week, "looking for anything that would be material," said a Skamania County deputy.

Macridis, of Belmont, Mass., and Black, of Contoocock, N.H., had years of canoeing experience. They had spent recent summers guiding teen-agers on canoe trips into the wilderness of Maine and Canada.

They had some of the best equipment available, much of it donated by sporting goods manufacturers and outfitters. The trip was sponsored by the Young Men's Christian Association.

Macridis had estimated they would reach the Atlantic Ocean by Dec. 1, and the trip would cost $15,000 to $20,000.

"They studied every inch of every river," said Macridis' father from his home in Belmont, Mass. "But sometimes that's what happens to experts. Experts die in trying to do something and something happens. Accidents happen all the time.

"Those kids had worked hard and they did what they believed in."

Peter's brother, Steve, 15, also a canoeist, said the family was hearing from the youngsters the two had taught in Maine.

"Kids called from all over. Peter and Tim taught them canoeing and they remembered. Peter always said safety was the most important. Fun comes second, safety first. He always said to wear a lifejacket," said Steve.

Wind Mountain, the spot where the canoeists disappeared, is well-named. "The gorge narrows appreciably right in that area," said the deputy. "You have a kind of wind funnel and if there is any increase in wind velocity the waves get whipped up pretty good."

Macridis and Black were last seen about noon last Saturday. Their equipment was found on the shore at 4 p.m. "We have four hours of dead time we don't know anything about," said the deputy.

Tug pilot Elvin Kasch passed upriver during those four hours but saw nothing unusual. He noted that the westerly wind was blowing at about 20 to 25 mph, with a three-to four-foot swell on the river.

"It was not too bad. We have much worse sometimes," Kasch said. "But for a canoe it might have been bad weather."

RIVER TRACED

The Yensiel River originates in the Tannu Ola Mountains of western Mongolia and runs approximately 2,800 miles until reaching its point of outflow into the Arctic Ocean.

House Approves Humphrey-Hawkins Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate inherits a much-amended Humphrey-Hawkins full employment bill today that sets goals not only for creating jobs but for lowering inflation, raising farm prices, balancing the budget and providing flexible working hours.

However, the bill requires no government action to achieve the goals.

The House passed the measure 257-152 on Thursday. Its basic goal of lowering unemployment to 4 percent by 1983 was left intact, but so many more goals and principles were added that critics said it was meaningless.

"It has grown into an absolutely unworkable monster," said Rep. Charles Wiggins, R-Calif., who was defeated 310-106 in an effort to kill the bill.

Rep. Augustus F. Hawkins, D-Calif., who pushed for the bill for four years with the late Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, said damage from the amendments was minimal.

"It was an opportunity for many individuals to register their opinion on all issues of the day," he said. "This being an election year had a lot to do with it, obviously."

Lacking the votes to kill the bill outright, Republicans tried to amend it to death — and then to argue as Wiggins did that it was so cluttered it should be defeated.

But Democrats co-opted the GOP proposals with modified versions of their own on such issues as inflation, and Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said this probably strengthened the bill's appeal in an election year.

Wright told GOP critics that he could take the Humphrey-Hawkins bill to any conservative bastion in the country and sell it as a solid proposal.

The bill for the first time would provide mechanisms for coordinating federal economic policies and for integrating them as fully as possible with private actions to stimulate the private job-creating market.

It requires Congress' Joint Economic Committee to monitor progress being made toward the goals and report its conclusions to budget committees.

Other goals set by the bill included providing 100 percent parity for farmers; achieving a balanced budget as soon as feasible; lowering inflation, but without a specific timetable or target; emphasizing job-creation in the private rather than the public sector; developing alternative modes of transportation and energy sources; encouraging flexible and part-time working hours for persons needing work but unable to hold fulltime jobs; and cutting government red tape.

Grounded Barge Freed

WATCH HILL, R.I. (AP) — Lightened of about half its cargo, the barge Ocean 250 has floated free from the rocks that cracked its hull and let thousands of gallons of gasoline spew into Fisher's Island Sound.

The 546-foot barge, loaded with 10.5 million gallons of gasoline, came free Thursday night and was pulled to an anchorage about two miles east of where it had run aground.

The amount of gasoline spilled was unknown, but the Coast Guard said the ruptured vessel was leaking at a rate of 500 to 2,000 gallons an hour most of the day. It was grounded 21 hours.

Lt. George Whiting, a Coast Guard spokesman, said an inquiry into the grounding would be convened "immediately" and efforts to clean up the spilled gasoline would begin after an aerial survey today.

Whiting said there is no danger of the craft breaking up and sinking and little chance of further significant spillage.

The tug Intrepid had been towing the barge from Marcus Hook, Pa., to New Haven, Conn., when it grounded. The barge is owned by the Interstate and Ocean Transport Co. of Philadelphia.

Hamilton Jordan Put In Charge Of Reorganizing Carter's Staff

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter is trying to shape up a White House operation that has been a target of criticism since he came into office.

The staff reshuffle is under the direction of top aide Hamilton Jordan and apparently does not apply to the senior advisers who are on the policymaking level, and apparently sacrosanct.

According to press secretary Jody Powell, forthcoming shifts will be related to lower echelon aides, which may cause some wonder on the question of responsibility. Complaints at the White House have centered on the lack of coordination by staffers with no central figure directing traffic.

The general criticism is that staff members are not operating in a cohesive way, but going off in different directions. No one is in charge, although Jordan comes closest to what could be called a chief of staff.

Jordan's authority and power in the White House has increased in recent months, and although he obviously does not relish shuffling paper, or riding herd on other members of the staff, he still has to keep the operation running smoothly.

One of the shifts will involve Midge Costanza, whose office deals with a wide range of special interest groups. Under the new setup, White House liaison with business and trade groups will be shifted from Miss Costanza to Jordan.

Dynamic and compassionate, Miss Costanza keeps Carter's best foot forward with Hispanics, women, labor and all the diverse groups the president wooed so diligently in the campaign. She also is the White House liaison with urban groups, a position for which she is well qualified as the former vice mayor of Rochester, N.Y.

Jordan lost one of his key deputies, Mark A. Siegel, who resigned in protest against Carter's Middle East policies. Siegel, who was the White House liaison with the American Jewish community, complained that he had to be out in front defending administration policy without being allowed to participate in shaping it.

Blacks have complained to Carter that they are not getting their message through at the White House, and the staff overhaul may involve some of the aides who are in charge of the liaison.

'Piropo' Custom Slowly Fading Away

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — It may be women's lib or it could just be a fading away of chivalry but whatever, the old Latin custom of the "piropo" is losing ground in Colombia.

The piropo is a usually corny but poetic compliment paid to a pretty girl by a gentleman as they pass on the street or other public place. The custom exists in most Latin American countries but was tuned to a near art form by practitioners in Bogota.

Until recently, the leading masters of the art in Bogota were elegantly attired gentlemen of advanced age who stood on street corners or sat on park benches in groups trying to outdo each other with the most appropriate piropo to fit their targets.

Wearing pinstriped, doublebreasted suits, felt hats and with black umbrellas slung around their elbows, the graying gentlemen would have frowned at being called "dirty old men."

To compose a good piropo takes a keen eye and a fast working brain. For example, an attractive girl wearing a green dress could be told: "If you're green now, how will you be when you're ripe." Or a girl with a swinging gait could be met with: "If you cook like you walk I'd even eat the leftovers."

A young woman walking with an older lady would be told: "What a beautiful mother-in-law I would have" as the poet's eyes danced from one female to the other.

Of course, most piropos rhyme in Spanish and their corniness is somewhat increased in the translation to English.

"It used to be that, if a good looking girl walked by, you'd say something like 'goodbye foam of the sea,' but now they'll usually comment on one of her intimate parts," said a male Bogota office worker.

"I remember one time I was on a bus and an old man said in a low voice to a pretty girl next to me 'hello, beautiful.' When she failed to smile he said louder 'hello, beautiful.' When she still refused to react, he then said even louder 'okay, hello, ugly' — then she burst out laughing," a Bogota secretary said.

"The great piropos used to come from the old men but they just aren't around anymore," she added.

Perhaps the poor state in which the piropo has fallen was symbolized by an incident not long ago in the town of Tulua in western Colombia. A 44-year-old man let loose with a piropo as he walked by an attractive young lady. In response the senorita whipped out a pistol and shot him in the shoulder.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Heating Up A Hot Issue

ISRAEL'S ATTACKS on guerrilla bases in Lebanon this week in an attempt to rout terrorists of the type who murdered about three dozen civilians in Tel Aviv last weekend plunged the volatile Mideast dangerously close to all-out war.

Thus, the madness of a few Palestinian Liberation Organization bandits proved two things:

(1) There is little likelihood of permanent peace in the Middle East if, as the PLO has demanded, an independent Palestinian state is established; and

(2) Cool heads are needed on all sides to keep the hostilities from escalating and to push Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's peace initiative to a successful conclusion.

THERE IS ALWAYS an almost irresistible temptation in such situations for each side to answer the other's show of force with a little more force of its own.

It is probable that the PLO fully realized this and, in fact, counted on it when it sent its terrorist band into Israel to maim and murder.

If it could provoke an Arab-Israeli war, the PLO might hope to forestall any possibility of a peace settlement which might not give it everything it wants.

So hostile is terrorist leader Yasser Arafat to any recognition of Israel's right to exist that he branded Sadat a traitor for going to Israel last fall to talk with Premier Menachem Begin.

ISRAEL, WHILE understandably exasperated over the continued presence of PLO terrorist nests near its borders, announced it had no intention of annexing any areas but did say it would continue to "keep order" in the region if the Lebanese government did not.

This could mean a continued presence of Israeli troops, a situation not likely to be acceptable to the Lebanese or their Mideast allies.

In this situation, the United States reacted cautiously at first but there can be no doubt that the longer the hostilities heat up the less likelihood there is for putting a cap on the tensions.

The best we can hope for is that the Arabs and Israelis will agree that there is no place in the region for terrorists and further agree not to fight each other because of them.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Kenneth May

A Down Hill Race

GOV. DOLPH BRISCOE didn't use "double-crossed" to describe what President Carter did to him, but he was quick to accept the word as an accurate definition.

"When a man tells you he will do one thing and does the exact opposite," Briscoe said, "there are a lot of words you could use to describe it."

Texas oil and gas men, the governor had said a few minutes earlier in the conversation, do feel that Carter double-crossed them by campaigning on a platform calling for deregulation of natural gas prices and then reneging after election.

Briscoe himself, after eliciting a letter from candidate Carter endorsing deregulation, campaigned for him and is widely credited with helping deliver the Texas vote into the Democratic nominee's column.

He does not believe Carter could carry Texas today, however.

"The President is very unpopular in Texas," Briscoe said, making it clear he shares that disenchantment.

BRISCOE WAS in Lubbock this week, though, not to bury Carter but to praise Briscoe.

He's reminding voters of what he considers to be a record fully meriting their re-election of him to a new four-year term.

Although Briscoe disputes what other politicos who have been traveling across Texas tell me —that Atty. Gen. John Hill is likely to beat him in the May 6 Democratic primary—the governor is clearly taking no vote for granted.

"No, the voters by and large do not perceive Hill as the extreme liberal that he is," Briscoe said, "(but) I intend to tell them."

Spending proposals by his leading opponent, he added, would lead inevitably to a state income tax or some other added tax burden.

(The governor did not mention his other Democratic opponent, former Gov. Preston Smith of Lubbock, during the half-hour conversation in his suite at the Hilton Inn).

"IN EACH OF THE three sessions of the Legislature since I have been governor," Briscoe recalled, "delegations of legislators came to me to say 'it just won't fit'.

"They insisted that the amount of money needed to be appropriated just wouldn't fit into the available revenue. Each time, I told them to go back and try again."

As a result, Briscoe declared, Texas has improved its governmental services, increased spending in all the important areas and maintained a healthy economic climate—and all with "no new taxes."

"That's one power that the governor has," he said. "There's no way that both the House and the Senate could muster a two-thirds vote to override a veto of a tax bill."

AS HE TRAVELS about the state, Briscoe observed, he finds the mood of Texans to be upbeat about the economy.

They are generally optimistic, despite their concern over whether the President can run the country, and still have faith in the free market if the politicians will allow it to work, he added.

The governor said an energy program which will encourage domestic self-sufficiency, reducing the drain of dollars abroad, is sorely needed. For the long-range, he thinks more emphasis should be put on nuclear power.

Dolph Briscoe thinks Texas, with its comparatively low taxes, right-to-work law and other attractions will be a bright spot in the nation's economy for years to come—if, of course, the voters keep Briscoe the fiscal conservative as governor instead of "Hill, the liberal."

TEXAS COMMISSIONER of Agriculture Reagan Brown, also here in search of votes this week, believes the farm strike is about to play out as farm price futures improve and as spring planting begins.

"From the air, the tractors in the field don't give the appearance that they're striking," he said.

Brown, a believer in 100 per cent of parity at the market place, says silly governmental regulations need to be set aside to help the farmer.

For example, he says soybeans grown in this area have to be trucked to the Gulf Coast—at big expense—before being put on a train and "sent right back through Lubbock" to the West Coast for export.

Changes That Bode Us No Good

WASHINGTON—Amid tearful men hugging for joy more suitable to the French and Italians, the U.S. House of Representatives voted the other day to submit to the states a Constitutional amendment which would give full national representation to the District of Columbia.

By symbolic coincidence in Salisbury, Rhodesia, a four-man executive delegation agreed to constitutional provisions that would surrender the government of this former British colony and break-away Republic to majority rule by African blacks.

These events in Washington and Salisbury are full of dire meaning for the civilized world which is already in an alarming deterioriation. The useful word "linkage" dolefully applies in southern Africa.

THE WHITE POWER structure is in double trouble. It must live in humiliation under a people with much reason to be vengeful. It must expect the coming judgment of Russian-armed invaders from the Horn of Africa at the Red Sea.

Whoever has studied and written in what was once enlightened white rule knows that an hour approaches for the band to play "The World Turned Upside Down," and for Europeanized capitalism, culture and general way of life to bid adieu.

What happened that same day in Washington (although the Senate and two-thirds of the states still must ratify the House action) takes the same direction.

Black persons make a majority of the District of Columbia, but not of the whole country, as with Rhodesia and South Africa.

IF THE CONSTITUTION is amended, as seems inevitable, no good or harm is apt to prevail.

The District in all probability will send two blacks to the Senate and one or more representatives to the House, increasing the upper chamber to 102 members, leaving the lower body at its constant membership of 435, but probably not altering the Congressional population of mediocrity and rascality.

We are already heavily represented in Congress by sapheads and crooks. Their color is entirely unrelated to their character.

But virtual statehood for the District is another ripple of the disastrous tidal wave that darkens the horizon and rolls onward with every indication of washing away a whole civilization.

There is not the reassuring hulk of a Noah's Ark against the sky.

Too familiar for retelling is the famous trade in which Jefferson withdrew his opposition to the national bank bill in order to place the planned city of Washington on the Potomac River instead of the Hudson or the Delaware.

Then in pre-Constitution 1783, the unpaid Continental soldiers marched on the Confederation Congress at Philadelphia to demand money that wasn't in existence.

Pennsylvania's governor refused to call out the troops to protect Congress which fled to New Jersey and holed up at Nassau Hall in Princeton.

It was this near-mutiny, the makings of a military takeover, that persuaded the Founders at the Constitution Convention of 1787 to establish a Federal City.

President Lincoln many times thanked God for his authority when the Confederates were winning. He could save the capital by calling troops.

Before we make Washington the Federal City into something else, we had better ponder in depth.

Is Your Life Insurance Up To Date With You?

Q. IF YOU BOUGHT your life insurance policies to protect your young family as recently as 1967, are you aware of the sickening degree to which the upsurge in the cost of living in the U.S. has shrunk your coverage just in this short span?

A. By a horrendous 70 1/2 per cent! Just since 1967! And living costs are continuing to spiral relentlessly upward—at an "underlying" rate placed even by the federal government's official optimists at 6 to 6 1/2 per cent a year.

Q. How long is it since you have put aside a quiet evening to discuss seriously with a trusted life insurance agent the adequacy of your life insurance in view of your pay hikes since 1967, your increasing obligations (children, a new home and mortgage, a job or business change of major importance, etc.) and the overall differences in your living style?

A. IF YOU'RE TYPICAL of most Americans, it has been year since you've calculated your total life insurance protection—in the form of your own private policies, veterans' life insurance, protection given you by fraternal or other organizations to which you belong, credit life insurance on outstanding loans, the like.

In brief, is your life insurance up to date with you, your family, your assets and liabilities?

An astounding nine out of 10 U.S. families now have some life insurance coverage. At the start of this year, the total was at an all-time record of $2.6 trillion, double the total of the late 1960s.

The average insured family has $37,900 of life insurance, also a new peak, up a full $2,500 from 1976 and comparing with $23,200 at this comparable date in the late 1960s.

YET, LARGE AS this total of coverage may appear on the surface, it is equivalent to only 24 months of the average family's disposable income —or about two years' of pay.

To put this in perspective, the accepted rule of thumb is that an average family should have the equivalent of four to five years' pay in life insurance, savings and other investments.

And you may need more of a cushion if you have several young children, if your non-insurance financial protection is limited, if you have only a modest amount in savings, and if you (typically) are carrying a heavy load of debts (in installment loans, other types of personal loans, a mortgage).

Q. HOW MUCH HAS the actual buying power of your life insurance policies been slashed since you bought them in 1967?

A. The dollar which bought you 100 cents of goods and services in the marketplace in 1967 buys you only 59 cents worth of the same goods and services in the marketplace today.

If you consider the 1978 dollar as worth 100 cents today, and if you accept the "conservative" (but to me, intolerable forecast of an inflation rate held to "only" 6 per cent a year, today's 100-cent dollar will be worth only 12 1/2 cents in 36 years.

If you are a young adult, that is when your insurance might be turning into an "instant estate" for your family.

Q. How much income would all of your present life insurance coverage from all sources provide when you retire or when your family must get along without your contribution in earnings?

How much does every asset on which your family can count for support add up to when you put together this life insurance income, figured on a monthly basis, plus what you can anticipate from Social Security benefits, from any company pension that seems safe, from income on your savings and other investments

IF YOU OWN your own business, is your life insurance protection adequate to keep the business going should you die before you have given a successor sufficient training?

Have you included all your dependents (or eliminated inappropriate ones) among your beneficiaries? Are your beneficiaries truly the ones you want to protect in 1978 as against 1968?

If you can answer satisfactorily all the questions in this report, your life insurance is up to date. If you cannot, get the answers now and put your instant estate in top-notch order.

Mary McGrory:

Whistle Loudly, More Or Less

WASHINGTON—The axiom of the Nixon administration, as propounded by Atty. Gen. John Mitchell, was, "Don't watch what we say, but what we do."

For Jimmy Carter, it seems to be reversed. That is, we are supposed to heed what he says, but pay less attention to what he does.

You take the civil service reform program he ceremoniously unveiled at the National Press Club. One of its provisions calls for creation of a special unit to protect "whistle blowers," those civil servants who occasionally break ranks and tell us taxpayers what is really going on.

Yet, minutes later, the President greeted with obvious irritation a question about a conspicuous whistle blower, Frank Snepp, the ex-CIA agent who wrote a book about the agency's catastrophic failure at the time of the fall of Saigon and is being sued by the Justice Department.

SNEPP OBVIOUSLY doesn't correspond to Carter's idea of a whistle blower, because in the President's view he did not "reveal anything that would lead to an improvement in our security apparatus or the protection of Americans' civil rights."

The President also engaged in what might be considered "prejudicial pre-trial publicity," since he implied that Snepp had revealed "our nation's utmost secrets"—which not even the government has charged in its complaint.

What Snepp is being sued for is breach of contract. Like all other CIA employes, he signed an oath that he would not "publish or participate in the publication of any information or material related to the agency or its activities...without specific prior approval by the agency...or disclose classified material without authorization."

But in "Decent Interval," Snepp was meticulous about not giving sources or methods or names of people whose lives would be endangered. And he recounts his dogged efforts to go through agency channels to produce an "after-action" report which would tell the agency what went wrong.

AS A MATTER of fact, opinion within the Justice Department was sharply divided over the question of bringing suit against him.

Some attorneys argued that to take him to court would open old sores, force the country to relive one of the most humiliating episodes in our national history and embarrass high officials who are still walking around Washington.

But CIA Director Stansfield Turner, who summarily rid the agency of 800 employes who were, in his felicitous phrase, "clogging the system" and fears a tidal wave of rancorous reminiscences, insisted that an example be made.

The government is seeking to take Snepp's royalties away from him—70,000 copies of the book are in circulation—force him to pay damages to the CIA and prohibit him from speaking or writing about the agency.

"I WOULD STILL be in the agency if that after-action report had been written," he said in a telephone interview from his Alexandria home.

He is not disaffected. He is so committed to the CIA that he went before the Senate Intelligence Oversight Committee in December and testified in behalf of a "dissent channel" at Langley so employes could relate misadventures to their superiors.

While he was still in good standing at the CIA, he tried to tell the inspector-general about the avoidable horrors of the U.S. evacuation of Saigon—and the abandonment of thousands of Vietnamese agents and collaborators—and he was told, he says, "We can't deal with anything so controversial."

The Office of Political Research wouldn't touch it either—"We deal with futuristics," they said.

HIS ATTORNEY, Mark Lynch of the ACLU, notes that Snepp is a rather lonely fellow. A former CIA interrogator cannot expect the sympathy and support that the peace movement is lavishing on Ronald Humphrey and David Truong, whom the FBI caught allegedly passing state papers to the Vietnamese.

Civil libertarians also are tripped by the fact that the President signed the authorization for electronic surveillance, although he favors, on the record, the use of warrants in all surveillance, even when national security is involved.

Snepp believes the two cases are related—"an effort to tighten up in the security community."

His basic defense is that his oath was invalidated by the actions of such luminaries as Henry Kissinger, former CIA Director William E. Colby, former U.S. Ambassador to Vietnam Graham Martin and former CIA Station Chief Thomas Polgar, who "selectively" leaked to the press classified documents in their efforts to put a better face on the blindness and bungling which led to the catastrophe of April 1975.

Snepp, in court, will be showing the agency its warts once again. That's what whistle blowers do, and Carter says he wants to encourage them. It's hard to prove by his actions in the Snepp case.

Market For 'Worthless' Bonds Picks Up Steam

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

If that trunk that belonged to grandma or grandpa is still up in the attic and it contains some "worthless" bond certificates in a foreign language, take another look. Those bonds may be worth a lot more than you thought.

The plunge of the dollar, together with some intricate maneuvers involving foreign relations and international financing, have produced increased interest in the issues of foreign countries that many Americans own without knowing their present value.

Some of these bonds — one expert says there may be $1 billion worth lying around in the closets, attics, basements and safe-deposit boxes of America — may have been carried here by immigrants seeking a new start in the United States. When a government of the "old country" was overthrown, the securities may have been considered worthless — as indeed they may have been at the time.

But as governments come and go and as policies change to reflect the realities of international relationships, once-renounced financial obligations may be honored and partial payments may be offered by countries anxious to return to the international capital markets.

For these reasons and others, experts in the field tell us, the market for foreign bonds denominated in dollars (and sometimes in other currencies at the same time) is beginning to pick up steam. Are you willing to bet that U.S. — Cuban relations are going to improve to the point where that Communist nation will begin to pay off some of its pre-Castro debt? Then buying some old Cuban railroad bonds might be worth a roll of the dice. They're selling for anywhere between a nickel and 15 cents on the dollar. That means that holders of such issues can realize at least part of their value if they want to unload them on the market right now. Cuban government bonds are selling even higher.

Similarly, there's been renewed speculation in some pre-Hitler German issues, on the theory that East Germany, in its eagerness to borrow funds in the West, might pay off at least part of the debt of some of the areas it now encompasses — for example, bonds issued by the city of Dresden.

Just because a country has a Communist government doesn't mean that it won't honor debt obligations from prior capitalist days, observes Jack Goldin, a trader specializing in foreign bonds at the brokerage house of Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis. Yugoslavia is a perfect example, he says, noting that it is paying off Kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes 7 percent ad 8 percent bonds due in 1998 — albeit at a reduced rate (3 and one-half percent) and with a stretched out maturity.

"Everybody said Polish bonds were worthless," he adds, "but they reached settlement plans for outstanding Polish government and municipality debt and they have completed the repurchase of those bonds presented under these plans. It's very likely that Poles who have come to this county since World War II, or their children, still possess such bonds, which may be eligible fo repurchase at a percentage of their face value. That's a lot more than their souvenir value."

Goldin, a 33-year-old former Army intelligence man, works out of Paine, Webber's New York headquarters, but considers the world his territory as he tracks down the value of obscure foreign issues. He's been trading — meaning he buys as well as sells — foreign bonds for the last eight years, specializing in bonds denominated in dollars and issued before 1970, when Eurodollar bonds (issued outside the U.S.) and Yankee dollar bonds (issued by foregin entities inside the U.S.) began to proliferate.

Some of the old foreign dollar bonds carried coupons redeemable in a choice of currencies. Demand for one such issue, a bond issued in Greece, has grown as the value of the dollar has declined. A supply was recently found in a West Coast community of Greek abalone fishermen.

"Lately," Goldin observed, "we've been getting calls from people who want to know if we have any bonds that pay off in Deutschemarks."

He points out that many holders of foreign dollar bonds are completely unaware of their current value. He likes to tell of the customer who held some Brazilian state bonds maturing in the year 2008 and paying two and one-half percent interest. Considering the long maturity and the low rate, the owner figured the bonds were worth about 25 percent of their face value and he expressed interest in selling them for that amount.

But some research discovered that the bonds had already been called for redemption — at par — meaning that the owner receive full value, plus some back interest.

Goldin doesn't hold out similar hopes for holders of Czarist Russia bonds, but he notes that they are still traded — usually for their souvenir value. On the other hand, he says, some bonds of the Confederate States of America — if they're authentic — are worth a lot more than their original face value to collectors.

Indian Crafts Vary In Cost, Workmanship

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — More than half a century ago, four Indian women worked four years to weave the largest Navajo rug ever made, using yarn spun by 10 other residents of the Navajo reservation.

The colorful, intricately designed rug measuring 36-by-24 feet was purchased for $1,900 in 1920. Forty-two years later it was valued at $25,000. Today it is a priceless classic.

The rug's price history is similar to that of other beautiful Native American arts and crafts produced by Indian masters in the Southwest.

A prize-winning rug or champion piece of pottery or jewelry will bring $10,000-$12,000 as collectors items.

On the other end of the spectrum — but still in the area of authentic products of Indian workmanship containing no artificial materials — tourists can purchase a souvenir ring for about $3.

An Indian style, but nonauthentic centrifugal cast ring will cost about the same.

"There is authenticity even in lower priced items," according to Bill Auble, marketing director at the Indian Pueblo Cultural Center.

"A lot of pottery that's traditionally done — hand coiled and hand painted and traditionally fired — can be bought for about $3.50 on up," said Auble. "They are small pieces but authentic."

While prices range from "the inexpensive to the highly expensive," Auble says, "the average person across the United States is looking for something authentic, handcrafted and in the medium price range, something representative of the art.

"The average ring we sell is around $30. The average person will spend $200-$300 for a handwoven traditional rug with a wool warp. A price range of $50-$75 is popular in pottery."

Much depends on the artist and his reputation, Auble said. He cited Joseph Lone Wolf of Santa Clara Pueblo and Maria Martinez of neighboring San Ildefonso Pueblo.

Policymakers Attack Hard Core Unemployment

By DONALD H. MAY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government policymakers are giving new attention to an old economic problem: how to find jobs for the hard core unemployed.

The Carter administration, both Republicans and Democrats in Congress, economists, businessmen and civil rights leaders all are calling for new measures to help Americans suffering from the most severe unemployment.

Included are the unskilled, under-educated and inexperienced, people whose age hurts their job chances, part-time workers, residents of economically depressed areas and victims of discrimination.

Economists call all of these the "structurally unemployed," a term rapidly entering political as well as economic jargon. It means people who would have trouble finding work even during prosperity and are completely out of luck in hard times.

The new emphasis is evident from hearings held during the past month by a half-dozen congressional committees. It also got attention at the recent White House Conference on Balanced Growth and Economic Development, which drew delegates from across the country.

There appear to be two main reasons for this new attention.

The first is that many fear that three groups of Americans with unusually high unemployment rates — blacks, women and youth — will be left behind as the nation moves closer to full employment.

In January, when the overall unemployment rate reached 6.3 percent, the rate was 4.7 percent for adult men and 6.1 percent for adult women. But it was 16 percent for teen-agers, 12.7 percent for nonwhites and 38.7 percent for black teenagers.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall recently told Congress that if unemployment were reduced to 4.75 percent in 1983 by economic means, with no changes in the "structure" of the labor force, nonwhites still would have an unemployment rate of 9.2 percent, teen-agers 11 percent, black adult women 9.4 percent and black teenagers 22.1 percent.

He called such differentials "unacceptable."

Vernon Jordan, president of the National Urban League, told the White House conference blacks are concerned about what will happen when total unemployment gets down to "politically-acceptable" levels, perhaps 5 to 5.5 percent.

"There is a strong suspicion it would signal the end of our society's concern with structural unemployment and with the special problems faced by minorities," he said.

In addition, black leaders say official figures underestimate minority unemployment.

"With true black youth unemployment above 60 percent," Jordan said, "we face the loss of a generation of young people afflicted with permanent economic disabilities."

Coretta King, widow of the slain civil rights leader, told a congressional hearing "genuine" full employment "is now the major goal of the civil and human rights movement in this country."

Reginald Jones, chairman of General Electric, told the White House conference the differences in unemployment rates among segments of society are "social dynamite."

The second reason policymakers are focusing more on hard core unemployment is that many believe that dealing with it is the only way to achieve, without serious inflation, the Humphrey-Hawkins target of 4 percent unemployment by 1983.

Marshall told Congress' Joint Economic Committee that general economic policies such as tax cuts and government spending can bring the unemployment rate down only to 4.75 percent by 1983 without accelerating inflation.

Beyond that, he said, skilled labor could become scarce, causing faster inflation — unless many of the hard-to-employ are trained and given experience in skilled jobs.

"Reducing these differentials," Marshall testified, "can reduce the overall unemployment rate without adding to inflationary pressures."

The Committee for Economic Development — 200 business executives and educators — said in a recent report that training and providing job opportunities for the hard-to-employ is essential to reducing unemployment without increasing inflation.

Rep. Richard Bolling, D-Mo., has said that if structural problems are not solved full employment cannot be achieved, economic recovery could be disrupted and a new recession could result.

Many Republicans also favor concentrating programs on the hard-to-employ. Some see this as an alternative to broader Democratic-sponsored programs. Rep. Albert Quie, R-Minn., is pushing a Humphrey-Hawkins "substitute" aimed solely at youth unemployment.

The Humphrey-Hawkins bill contains a general policy goal to reduce unemployment disparities, and its broad list of discretionary measures include training programs and hiring incentives.

The hearings have produced many ideas. It is too early to say what will emerge.

Proposals made by the administration, private groups and members of Congress include more job training programs, especially in private industry, tax incentives or wage subsidies for business to hire the disadvantaged, public service jobs targeted more at the disadvantaged, programs for youth and the elderly, development of urban and rural depressed areas, better job information, anti-discrimination enforcement and crackdowns on illegal aliens who absorb jobs.

The hearings have raised questions about the value of the public service job program, now being raised to 725,000 positions. Critics say it primarily trains for government whitecollar, service-type jobs rather than permanent employment in private enterprise.

Material gathered by the Senate Budget Committee and the Congressional Budget Office shows that higher than average unemployment is related to geography, education, poverty and race:

— About 60 percent of the nation's unemployed blacks live in central cities. White unemployment is more widely dispersed. In 1976, 20 percent of unemployed blacks lived in nine cities — Baltimore, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Milwaukee, New York, Philadelphia, St. Louis and Washington, D.C.

— Nationally, the unemployment rate for youngsters 16-24 is 12.2 percent. Among high school dropouts between those ages it is 20.4 percent.

— In poverty sections of central cities the unemployment rate among youth 16-24 is is 43.5 percent for blacks, 24 percent for whites.

Lawyers Urge Ford Recall

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. has been urged by an attorneys' organization to recall immediately all of its Pintos and other models with what the attorneys say are "defective designed gas tanks."

The request was made by the Association of Trial Lawyers of America in a letter to Chairman Henry Ford II. The organization claims some 34,000 members.

Tom H. Davis, association president, said in a statement the auto firm "owes it to the public to correct these defects which already have claimed lives and maimed passengers."

Davis recalled a recent $128 million award by a California jury to a youth seriously burned in a rear-end crash involving a Pinto.

In the words of the jury foreman, he said, "we wanted Ford to take notice."

Solon Cites Interference With Indians' Religion

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
United Press International Writer

One of this nation's most prized rights is freedom of religion — the right to believe whatever religious ideas and practice whatever religious rites the individual thinks are correct.

It also includes the right not to believe or practice any religion.

Although religious toleration has had a long and not always trouble free history in the United States, most Americans believe the constitutional principle allowing free exercise of religion is firmly enshrined. But one group of Americans — native Americans — continues to have difficulties in practicing traditional religions.

As Sen. James Abourezk of South Dakota has pointed out, in recent years there have been increasing numbers of incidents in which the rights of Indians to practice their traditional religion have been interfered with.

According to Abourezk, it generally has been less a matter of deliberate interference as a "lack of knowledge, unawareness, insensitivity and neglect ... "

"This state of affairs is enhanced by the perception of many non-Indian officials that because Indian religious practices are different than their own that they somehow do not have the same status as a 'real' religion," according to Abourezk.

Problem areas which inhibit Indian practice of their traditional religion include such things as lack of access to sacred sites, restriction on the use of sacred objects such as peyote or eagle feathers, and actual interference with religious rites and ceremonies.

Commenting on the latter, Abourezk said that "even today, certain symbolic portions of the Sun Dance which deal with fertility and the cycle of life are banned."

"The prejudice involved officials' belief that it was 'sinful' in Christian terms," Abourezk said. "Such misunderstanding is analogous to attributing the taking of Communion to cannibalism."

Its effect, he said, is the imposition of one set of religious values —- Christian —- upon another and becomes "a direct threat to the foundation of religious freedom in America. It comes far too close to an informal state religion."

Some states have already moved in the direction of protecting traditional Indian practices.

Montana, for example, responding to the eagle feather crisis of 19 in which Indians were arrested for possing and exchanging the feathers of e federally protected eagle, passed a ate congressional resolution setting for the policy of free exercise and protectn for Indian religions and urging appoinment of traditional Indians to serve committees whose actions might affec traditionalist practice.

Abourezk would like to see similar action on the federal level and has introduced legislation that would establish a clear federal policy to protect the practice of traditional religion.

President Carter has promised that should the legislation be approved by Congress it will be "given thorough, sensitive and prompt attention and consideration."

Abourezk, in introducing the proposed legislation, said the foundation for a comprehensive and coordinated implementation of the policy could be quickly established and the goals of protection achieved with little difficulty.

"The Indian traditional and religious leaders rightfully regard a clear federal policy as a crucial matter which must be resolved if the Indian culture and religion is to survive," Abourezk said.

NEW BRIGHTON, Minn. (AP) — A physician told the congregation of Cross of Glory Lutheran Church that people who have faith in God live better, do better during illness and die better.

Dr. John Brown, president of the Minnesota chapter of the American Cancer Society, said years of caring for the terminally ill have taught him that "people who have faith just do it better.

"They know they're not alone...The absence of fear of dying is really a positive force." He added that those without faith suffer more. "They become bitter because they think they're about to lose all they have. To them, this life is the whole ball game."

11-Year-Old Regarded As Goddess In Nepal

By BERRY SHLACHTER

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — The 11-year-old daughter of Prim Sakya can't go out and play like other children in Katmandu. She's too busy being worshipped.

The girl, whose real name her family refused to disclose, is regarded as a living goddess to the Nepalese — from ragged peasant to the Himalayan nation's king.

Young Miss Sakya is the object of what is called virgin worship, a Hindu and Buddhist practice in Nepal which dates back to the sixth century B.C.

There are at least 11 girls revered as deities around Nepal, and who become the center of attention during religious festivals. But only Prim Sakya's child is recognized as the "Raj Kumari" or "Royal Virgin Goddess," a title she has carried for seven years.

The sick — particularly those with tuberculosis or hemorrhaging problems — worship her in the hope she will cure them. Politicians make offerings at her feet, believing it will help her careers.

Her most important patron, however, is Nepal's 32-year-old King Birendra who holds near absolute power in the tiny land-locked country. Traditional belief has it that the monarch draws this power from the royal kumar.

The king worships the every September, touching her crimson-painted toes with his forehead and presenting her with a gold coin. His own blessing comes in the form of a red dot he applies to his forehead and a garland of flowers she places around his neck.

The present royal kumari is the daughter of the superintendent of the royal Nepal army arsenal, leads a life of ease and opulence in a rugged and resource-poor country where the average income is about 110 U.S. dollars a year.

Everyone, including her family, calls her "deo meiju" or "goddess lady." Her aunt explained: "We don't use her real name because she has become a goddess." And she lives as one.

Her home is a three-story mansion containing a throne room, 200-year-old frescoes, a special gold-plated window and topped with three gold spires. Two stone lions, both eight feet high, guard the entrance.

The few times a year she is permitted to go outside, the goddess is placed aboard an ornate palanquin and carried because her feet must not touch ground.

Without lifting a finger, she is bathed and dressed every morning. Makeup is applied and a third "eye" attached to her forehead. From a treasure of gold jewelry, a fine piece or two is selected to be worn that day.

Although she lives in luxury and her parents are considered celebrities in their neighborhood for producing a goddess, the Nepalese know that the life of an ex-royal kumari most likely will turn out unhappy — or even tragic.

Her reign ends abruptly when she betrays a human frailty — by crying, falling ill, becoming petulant and refusing to receive devotees, or by bleeding when scratched or at the start of menstruation.

Back at home and approaching the age to marry, many cannot find a man who will consent to be their husband. The reason is an old but still prevailing superstition that the man who first makes love to an ex-kumari dies soon after.

At the very least, a former goddess retains enough supernatural power to make her husband unbearably henpecked, said Ganga Ram Ratna Mathema, a 56-year-old shopkeeper in the present kumari's neighborhood. "She'd be too much for an average man to handle," he added.

"Indeed, there can be little doubt that a girl who has spent some years as the focus of male veneration and fear, and who has come to expect every whim satisfied, must experience considerable difficulty in accepting the role of a humble wife," wrote Dr. Michael Allen, an Australian anthropologist who has studied the kumari cult.

Allen and others say that some kumaris, unable to marry, are believed to end up as prostitutes in neighboring India.

After a royal kumari is disqualified, the search begins for a replacement who is chosen from the high "Sakya" caste of Nepalese Hindus and supposedly must possess 32 characteristics of divinity.

Secretary Survives Jump From Bridge

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A 25-year-old secretary has survived a 230-foot jump from the south end of the Golden Gate Bridge — the 11th person in the 41-year history of the span to leap and live.

Linda Susan Hamilton of San Francisco was rescued by two men who swam to her aid and kept her afloat until a Coast Guard vessel arrived to take the three aboard Wednesday afternoon, the Coast Guard said.

Mrs. Hamilton was reported in stable condition at San Francisco General Hospital Thursday with no apparent serious injuries.

National Church Leader Claims Ecumenical Movement Growing

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
United Press International Writer

The death of the ecumenical movement, says Dr. Claire Randall, "is a theory that is around."

And as she speaks those words she dismisses such a theory as forcefully as one brushes away a mosquito.

Instead, the general secretary of the National Council of Churches said in an interview, the ecumenical movement is entering a new phase, is at the beginning of a new chapter in its history.

"The part of the church that was determining the dynamics earlier is changing," she said, "especially the western churches."

She invokes Dr. Philip Potter of the World Council of Churches who notes the advent of the African, Asian and Latin American churches on the world scene with the comment, "At last we're becoming a 'world' council of churches."

"The ecumenical movement is becoming diverse, pluralistic," she said, "and nobody understands what that means — to be truly pluralistic.

"You have all these different lifestyles, agendas, expectations and histories."

Citing a second factor in the new phase, she said, "I think we are having to face the complexity of the issues, especially technological complexity, in ways we didn't before. We're going over borders we've never been over before."

"In the 1960s, a whole bunch of things came to a point where everything was simple," she added. "But once you got the laws passed, you were faced with the complex question of asking what does this mean."

"So now we are dealing with a new ecumenical dynamic — how do you put all these things together," she said.

Dr. Randall has been working on putting it together since 1974 when she became the first woman to be elected general secretary of the NCC — an interfaith agency of 31 Protestant, Anglican and Orthodox communions in the United States with a combined membership of some 40 million people.

In its 27-year history, the NCC has been in the forefront of efforts to creatively link the church with progressive social change and to stand as a biblical prophet over against church and society.

Dr. Randall made it clear that the National Council would attempt to continue to play that role although it may involve different methods.

"I think there is a realization that when we did what we did in the 1960s — and they were necessary things to do — some things got left behind," she said.

"We have to get the wholeness of the gospel — the social and the personal. That is part of the task of the ecumenical movement," she said. "The rather moderate restructuring we did in 1972-73 was responsive to some of this."

That also means, again, seeking to come to grips with the diversity and pluralism in the church.

"There is a strong emphasis now to see an issue from many sides and deal with it in different ways."

Because the NCC as an insitution was opened up in the 1960s to women and minorities, for example, it now sustains an interest on social action issues which might not have happened where they not on the inside pushing.

"The impetus of the 1960s," she said, "has not been maintained in the government."

At the same time, the NCC is not going off half-cocked on the issues and Randall's style, which frustrates some, is to work on "the fine tuning."

"Fundamental changes are happening in the world and there are no easy or simple answers," she said. "We're a minority — and that has ecumenical implications.

"But the ecumenical movement isn't going away."

Bob Hope Fan Seeks Names

WAMPUM, Pa. (AP) — DeVon Smith thinks Bob Hope is great and he's looking for 99,999 people who agree with him.

Smith, a small scale scrap dealer in his 60s and self-proclaimed chairman of the Bob Hope Birthday Salute, is trying for 100,000 signatures on a giant birthday card for Hope's 75th birthday in May.

"Bob Hope encompasses everyone," said Smith. "There are so many facets to Bob — comedian, actor, patriot, fund-raiser, goodwill ambassador — it's not hard to find one you can like."

Smith has gotten only about 9,000 names despite a 55-day trip last spring and summer when he covered 44 states and 32,000 miles in the seat of a commercial bus.

"I'm issuing an invitation to any club, school, church or college to send me their names and messages," said Smith.

Hope is not the first to benefit from Smith's unusual hobby. Johnny Carson got his first big card — a 168 footer — about 10 years ago. And Smith presented a 667-foot birthday card at the White House during the Bicentennial celebration.

Bulletin Gives Reasons For Worship In Church

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Why go to church? You can believe without getting up on Sunday morning. You can have faith, pray, be thankful for life without ever joining others in doing so. It's possible, in part. But is it likely?

That question was posed recently in the parish bulletin of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in suburban Port Washington, N.Y., and it offered this answer:

"We're variable creatures, not flawless paragons. We don't hold steady by ourselves. We're influenced, helped, sustained by others, listening to them, responding, learning. It's the way we are. We're relational beings.

"It's possible to think, speak, eat, laugh and play all alone, even to love in an abstract way. But it's not likely that any of these functions will thrive in isolation. Nor would they be very satisfying. We just don't work that way.

"It's a simple truism. We need each other in nearly every aspect of living. In the same way, if we want a lively, healthy faith, it's natural for it to be with others who share it.

"The church is where we stay in touch with the spiritual level of reality. To skip church is, in part, to cut ourselves off from that reality, to detach ourselves from mutual nurturing in that dimension of our lives.

"We need solitude, yes. We can pray, listen for God in private. And that's important, individually. Christian meditation has been a vital adjunct to faith long before Eastern varieties of it became a fashion in this country.

"But it's only a supplement, an enhancement to the work of the Christian movement which lives and serves through our association not only with the great 'Other' but with others like us, our neighbors. That — and something else — helps keep it all together.

"'For where two or three are gathered in my name,' Jesus said, 'there I am in the midst of them.' It's a plural operation, a joint process.

"The church, that stumbling, fallible, easily criticized, yet heroic old institution, has kept faith alive for 2,000 years. It wouldn't have happened automatically. It required a movement, a tangible, organized effort — of people. That's the church.

"It's survival has depended on them, on us, on people of countless generations, on congregations yesterday and today, here and elsewhere, on the pastors and participants, including the old codger nodding on the back row.

"He at least showed up. By his very doing so, he buttressed and reinforced the church. By getting up that Sunday morning and heading to church, he proclaimed a public message to all around — that the church is worth attention.

"And that's the word that has kept the movement going. Enough of us showing by our action that it's worth the effort.

"By merely getting up and being present, we show forth that word and help maintain Christianity. Even the fellow dozing on a back row. He got there. He does his bit for a good cause.

"And that's something amid the ambiguities of so many of our activities. It's permanent accomplishment."

Oberammergau Play Praised For Reform

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
United Press International Writer

In 1633, a plague hit the German village of Oberammergau and villagers, seeking divine aid to escape death, vowed that if spared they would perform a dramatic presentation of the passion story of Jesus Christ.

The next year the villagers fulfilled their vow and the Oberammergau Passion Play has since become one of the world's most significant religious and artistic events, drawing an audience of more than half a million people from 113 countries for the 1970 presentation.

It has also been one of the most controversial.

At the center of the controversy are allegations that the text of the play that has been used for more than a century is a highly anti-Semitic one.

The controversy has been simmering for more than two decades, following the American Jewish Committee's line-by-line analysis of the script written in 1860 by a priest named Joseph Alois Daisenberger.

Now, however, a group of U.S. religious leaders, including representatives of the AJC, the national Council of Churches and the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, have announced that the citizens of Oberammergau have decided the 1980 presentation of their play will be based on an earlier, less anti-Semitic text.

The new text was written in 1750 by a Benedictine monk named Ferdinand Rosner, which, "while not perfect," according Dr. Eugene Fisher of the NCCB, centers the key question of guilt in a more acceptable way.

The Daisenberger version, according to the interfaith team, is filled with statements and implications holding the Jewish people solely responsible for the death of Jesus.

Fisher, executive director of the Office of Catholic-Jewish Relations, said the Daisenberger script was a "purveyor of prejudice and injustice."

The Rosner script, however, maintains that all mankind was responsible for Jesus' death and that his crucifixion stemmed from a plot hatched by Lucifer and his evil spirits.

"It should emphasized," said Miles Jaffe, chairman of the AJC's Interreligious Affairs Commission, "that this decision was made by the townspeople of Oberammergau out of their conviction that their Passion Play, which is a religious and artistic event of internationul significance, should reflect not only their deeply held religious tradition, but also the theme of love and good will which the central teaching of Christianity."

Fisher said the Rosner script correctly centers the question of guilt "in its proper position as a part of the theological mystery of human sin."

"In this way," he said, "it goes far to correct the errors of the past and will provide a sound basis for future revision."

"The play can then once again serve the purpose for which it was intended: to incite in its viewers contrition for their own sins and the love of all humanity that Jesus displayed in his life and death."

Lubbockite Attending Seminar

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (Special) — Lucille Ford of Lubbock is part of a 25-member group that is making a three-week study travel seminar in China, in cooperation with the Education and Cultivation and World Divisions of the United Methodist Board of Global Ministries.

The seminar is sponsored by the Center of Continuing Education at Scarritt College. Arrangements for the trip were made under auspices of the U.S. China Friendship Association. The association is a nationwide educational organization dedicated to building active and lasting friendship between the peoples of the U.S. and China based on mutual understandings.

Camille Funk, an Atlanta churchwoman and former missionary, who has had experience living and working in China, will serve as the association's representative and will be co-leader of the seminar.

"The trip has been planned in conjunction with the United Methodist Church's mission study on the new China. During 1978 mission schools all over the country will be dealing with China," said Dr. Robert Reber, Scarritt College's acting vice president for academic affairs, and the other seminar leader.

The seminar participants have engaged in very extensive study in advance of the trip. They committed themselves to serve as resource persons for workshops, seminars, civic or local church programs for at least one week during the first six months after return to the United States.

"Because the participants have made this commitment, they will each be valuable resourse resources for the entire church when they return," Dr. Reber commented.

During the tour, the multi-racial group who reside in 17 states, will visit Peking, Nanking, Shanghai, Kwangchow and Hong Kong.

BELL RINGERS FOR CHRIST — A 25-member High School and College Career Choir, along with its Bell Choir Group, and a trio of singers, "Reflection," from Lubbock's Oakwood Baptist Church, will be heard in concert Saturday night at the Air Force Academy, Colorado Springs, Colo. Also, the group from Lubbock is scheduled for appearances Sunday at University Hills Baptist Church of Denver, Colo. There, the contingent will present a new musical "Bright New Wings." Out front of a section of the bell ringers is Joe Jones, minister of music at Oakwood. Left to right by the row of bells are: Beth White, Laura Lackey, Kelly Riebe, Jeaneen Wingo, Gina Barrier, Jenny Coke, Dalena Johnson and Janet McCaleb. Oakwood's Bell Ringers were one of the Bicentennial parade float winners in Lubbock, July 4, 1976. (Staff Photo by Gary Davis)

A breakdown of the 25 young persons of the "mini" tour concerts is: 25 singers, 12 Bell Jubilee members, and a trio of "Reflection" musicians and singers.

At University Hills Baptist Church, the Lubbock group will be presenting the musical "Bright New Wings." The concert in the Air Force Academy chapel will be a 20-minute presentation as part of a revival program.

Hub City Youth Director Goes To Conference

Mark McBrayer of Lubbock Youth for Christ recently attended the Youth for Christ staff meeting and board conference in San Francisco.

Each year, staff and board members from the 156 local Youth for Christ chapters gather for business, inspirationals and education meetings.

In order to sharpen skills in their ministry among hundreds of thousands of students, each year conference participants take advantage of seminars on varied subjects. This year there were 24 subjects including such topics as these: "How Can I Teach the Bible in a Wilderness Setting?"; "Developing Ministry Leadership in Students"; "Working With Kids From Divorced Families"; "Psychology and Christianity — Some Current Trends"; "Finding Jobs for Our Own Youth Guidance Kids."

McBrayer said from the opening address by Dr. Francis Schaeffer through the closing message by YFC president Jay Kesler, the emphasis was on evangelism, which in turn emphasized communication with the total person.

The Lubbock YFC director reported that the opening message established man as being created by God and in need of God and God's standards in order to survive. According to the speaker, the responsibility of the Body of Christ is to present a gospel of hope for the whole man and be grounded in objective truth of God's revelation.

The closing address by Kesler, according to McBrayer, challenged delegates with six Biblical principles of evangelism which YFC has followed in its ministry among high school age students.

Lubbock Youth for Christ sponsors Campus Life Clubs and Campus Life Magazine for high school age students in the Lubbock area. Locally governed and directed, it is a non-denominational Christian organization affiliated with 155 other local chapters and Youth for Christ International headquarters in Wheaton, Ill. Youth For Christ International has indigenous activities in 52 other countries of the world.

Local offices are at 1619 University Ave., Suite 225, McBrayer said.

YFC is active in three Lubbock high schools and McBrayer said, it intends to branch out to all of the other high schools next year. Presently, there are Youth for Christ activities in Coronado, Monterey and Lubbock highs.

Church Features Special Events

A "Procession of Psalms" will be a feature at Lubbockview Christian Church Sunday.

At the morning worship service (10:30 a.m.), children of the church will march into the sanctuary carrying psalm branches. This will be done to illustrate the crowds and what they did many years ago on what is now Psalm Sunday.

The church also is opening a Lenten Fair in Jennings Hall Sunday. Children, youths and adults are expected to enjoy the Psalm Sunday at the church.

KIM WICKES

New Services Scheduled At Trinity Baptist

Effective June 4, Trinity Baptist Church, located at 2707 34th St., will add a third Sunday morning worship service and a second Sunday School session.

Church leaders said: "We have been richly blessed of God and are simply of out of room in our auditorium during the 10:45 a.m. worship period."

Several alternative methods for alleviating the space problem were studied, the leaders said, and added that the third worship service seemed to be the most feasible approach.

The new Sunday morning schedule will be: 8:30-9:15 a.m., Worship Service I; 9:30-10:30 a.m. a.m., Worship II and Sunday School I; 11 a.m.-noon, Worship III and Sunday School II.

Rev. Bob Utley will be in the pulpit for Worship Services II and III. Minieterial students and others will be in charge of the earlier service.

In order to avoid duplications and lack of balance in the services, particularly the Sunday School session, a family survey to ascertain attendance is being made by at the present time.

Kim Wickes To Give Concert At Trinity Church On Easter

So said Vienna's Frau Ludwig, famous voice teacher and critic, about the talent of Kim Wickes, who will be heard in concert at Lubbock's Trinity Church at 5 p.m. Easter (March 26)

Born in Korea in 1947, Kim was a victim of the Communist invasion of that war-town country. When the North Koreans invaded her village on June 25, 1950, a bomb exploded near the little three-year-old girl, permanently blinding her.

Her life nearly was snuffed out later, when in frustration over his inability to feed his children, Kim's Buddhist father threw the little blind girl and her younger sister into the river. Kim's mother's screams caused the father to change his mind. He rescued Kim from the quick-closing waters, but her sister was already drowned.

When Kim's mother failed to return home from a search for food, her desperate father took Kim to Harry Hill Orphanage for the blind at Taigu. There she was nutured back to health and got her first introduction to singing. Soon, she was soloing regularly at church services.

At 10, Kim was encouraged to come to the United States. She was placed by the Harry Holt Adoption Agency (Eugene, Ore.) with a dedicated Christian family from Dayton, Ind., with Mr. and Mrs. George Wickes and their four children.

After overcoming the drastic adjustments of a new culture, new language, and new parents, Kim became an outstanding student at school. She graduated in 1965 from Wheaton Academy, a Christian high school, then operated by Wheaton College, at Wheaton, Ill. She attended Wheaton College and then went on to earn her bachelor's and master's degrees in music from the school of music at Indiana University.

After doing the course work for her doctorate degree at Indiana, she was awarded a Fullbright Scholarship to Vienna Institute of Music and Dramatic Arts in Austria. It was during that year (1973-74) that she studied under Frau Ludwig, one of Europe's most talented teachers of German Lieder (song) and oratorio, and mother and teacher of the well-known Christa Ludwig.

After her Fullbright work, Kim was asked to sing at a series of prestigious events, starting with the International Congress on World Evangelization in Lausanne, Switzerland, where she quickly became acquainted with many of the International Christian leaders.

Also, that summer, she appeared at EXPLO'74. She made appearances in Malaysia and Hong Kong. And her 29 days in Korea could only be considered a triumphant welcome home by the people of her native land. Kim was followed from place to place by the press, who told the story of how she had survived the bitter experiences of her life and also chronicled her search for her long-lost father, with whom she was reunited on that trip.

In the fall of 1974, she was a special soloist at Billy Graham's 25th Anniversary Celebration at the Hollywood Bowl. That appearance had special meaning to Kim, for it was at a Billy Graham Crusade in Indianapolis in 1959 that that she accepted Christ as her Savior.

Kim has quickly become a legend in her own time. She has performed in front of millions on all continents via personal appearances, television and radio. Her records, 8-track and cassette tapes titled "The Love of God" and her book "Kim." are available at her concerts.

'Joy Fellowship' Fete Slated For Saturday

A luncheon for women of the "Joy Fellowship," sponsored by Lubbock's First Assembly of God Church, will be held at noon Saturday at Villa Inn Restaurant.

Dr. Speaker will be Dr. Terry Peters, a Roman Catholic from Amarillo, who had a strong and dynamic testimony, according to fellowship leaders.

Mrs. Charline Jones, chairman, describes the "Joy Fellowship" as "a response to the need of women for Christian fellowship and outreach through social activities." She added that this is characterized by informal group participation in sharing personal testimonies of encounters with God, and that this is a place where denominational boundaries can be minimized.

Through "Joy Fellowship," she explained, women are encouraged to work for Christ in the churches they attend, and no particular church affiliation is stressed.

Interested women of the city and area are invited to attend the luncheon. Information may be obtained by calling numbers 792-1153, or 744-0762.

Church Sets Celebration

A St. Patrick's Day Celebration, a covered dish supper, is scheduled at 6:30 p.m. today at Lubbock's St. Christopher's Episcopal Church, located at 42nd Street and Elgin Avenue.

"This is a BWGOYWGB event," church leaders explained. "That means Better Wear Green Or You Will Get Bussed."

Following the supper, which will have green decorations, naturally, there will be a presentation by Abbot David from the Benedictine Monastery at Pecos, N.M.

The St. Patrick's Day supper and presentation are part of a two-day visit here by Abbot David and Sister Donna from the monastery.

Sessions with the two are slated from 2 to 4 p.m. Saturday at St. Christopher's.

"RALLY DAY"

Sunday wil be "Rally Day" at Lubbock's First Assembly of God Church, located at 34th Street and Avenue S.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM

The Newspaper Bible®

Matthew 13:9-28, The Living Bible

9 If you have ears, listen!"
10 His disciples came and asked Him, "Why do you always use these hard-to-understand illustrations?"
11 Then He explained to them that only they were permitted to understand about the Kingdom of Heaven, and others were not.
12,13 "For to him who has will more be given," He told them, "and he will have great plenty; but from him who has not, even the little he has will be taken away. That is why I use these illustrations, so people will hear and see but not understand.
14 This fulfills the prophecy of Isaiah, 'They hear, but don't understand; they look, but don't see!
15 For their hearts are fat and heavy, and their ears are dull, and they have closed their eyes in sleep,
16 So they won't see and hear and understand and turn to God again, and let Me heal them.' But blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear.
17 Many a prophet and godly man has longed to see what you have seen, and hear what you have heard, but couldn't.
18 Now here is the explanation of the story I told about the farmer planting grain:
19 The hard path where some of the seeds fell represents the heart of a person who hears the Good News about the Kingdom and doesn't understand it; then Satan comes and snatches away the seeds from his heart.
20 The shallow, rocky soil represents the heart of a man who hears the message and receives it with real joy,
21 But he doesn't have much depth in his life, and the seeds don't root very deeply, and after a while when trouble comes, or persecution begins because of his beliefs, his enthusiasm fades, and he drops out.
22 The ground covered with thistles represents a man who hears the message, but the cares of this life and his longing for money choke out God's Word, and he does less and less for God.
23 The good ground represents the heart of a man who listens to the message and understands it and goes out and brings 30, 60, or even 100 others into the Kingdom."
25 But one night as he slept, his enemy came and sowed thistles among the wheat.
26 When the crop began to grow, the thistles grew too.
27 The farmer's men came and told him, 'Sir, the field where you planted that choice seed is full of thistles!'
28 'An enemy has done it,' he explained, 'Shall we pull out the thistles?' they asked.

Amid joyous hosannas and waving of palm branches, He rode into the city of Jerusalem, past these same walls which are standing today.

Long ago in ancient Palestine, the prophet had heralded the coming of a king. But now few thought it more than the usual procession of some new earthly ruler. Yet no king ever came as He came. No king ever built such a kingdom.

This was the King of Heaven who rode into the hearts of men and built there a Kingdom of Love!

They crucified Him, but death could not stop His coming. He comes in every age to all who will believe. He comes to you.

Go to church this Palm Sunday, for "thy king cometh." Let the King of Heaven ride into your heart.

Michigan Bans Canadian Beans

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Michigan's Department of Agriculture, irritated over Canada's embargo on Michigan beef, has invoked what it calls an "emergency quarantine" on Canadian dry edible beans.

The bean boycott will prevent shipment of Canadian beans into the state for the 1978 planting season, official said. The beans are often used by Michigan farmers for seed.

Agriculture Director B. Dale Ball said the Commission of Agriculture has been advised that Canadian beans have been infected by a disease that could threaten Michigan's own bean industry, the nation's largest.

The disease, a "delta" strain of antracnose, "is harmless to humans (but) poses a serious threat to the multi-million Michigan navy bean industry," Ball said.

The director said the commission learned of the disease Wednesday and "acted within minutes after learning of the threat."

Canada placed the embargo on beef shipments 15 months ago after Michigan dairy livestock was found to be contaminated with the chemical PBB. Michigan farmers had been shipping about $30 million worth of beef a year to Canada.

The state now has tougher standards on PBB levels in meat, and contaminated animals were destroyed. But a January letter from Gov. William G. Milliken asking Canadian officials for an end to the embargo has gone unanswered.

Ball made no reference to the beef embargo in a news release announcing the boycott.

Dry Weather, Wind Spread 70 Fires

LUFKIN (AP) — Dry weather conditions and 30-mile-an-hour winds Wednesday combined to spread more than 70 fires across 1,800 acres of East Texas rangeland.

The Texas Forest Service has warned residents to refrain from outdoor burning until extremely dry conditions improve. Forest service spokesman Pat Ebarb said the area stretches from the Oklahoma border to the Gulf of Mexico and includes the East Texas Piney Woods.

Citizens' Alliance Seeks Expert Opinion On Plan

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Citizens' Alliance for Successful Schools today planned to file a brief urging federal Judge Halbert O. Woodward to solicit testimony from independent experts before he rules on the Lubbock Independent School District's proposed integration plan.

Several members of the alliance hope such testimony will discredit the plan presented Monday to Woodward by the district's board of trustees.

Alliance members fear that unless criticism of the plan is put into the official record of the case, there will be little hope of changing the board's integration proposal even if the U.S. Justice Department appeals the case to a higher court.

At a meeting of about 30 members Thursday night, the alliance voted to ask Woodward's permission to become a "friend of the court" in the desegregation case.

That idea was presented to the group by Dr. Robert Davidow, a Texas Tech law professor. Members authorized Davidow to file such an application — and, if it is approved by the judge, an accompanying brief.

Davidow said he intends to file those documents today.

A draft of the application prepared by Davidow states, "Members of CASS are citizens of Lubbock, taxpayers and, with very few exceptions, parents of students in the Lubbock Independent School District who will be directly affected by any plan of school desegregation."

If Woodward grants "friend of the court" status, the alliance then will file a brief questioning parts of the school board's integration plan and urging Woodward to seek outside opinions about the board's proposal.

A draft of that brief, as written by Davidow and approved by alliance members Thursday, says:

"CASS believes that several aspects of the school board's plan are of doubtful feasibility. These include the 'magnet' concept as applied to Dunbar High School, the requirement that majority (white) elementary school children be transported to minority schools for only one-half of a school year, and the exemption of grades kindergarten through second from the transportation requirement."

On Monday, in presenting its plan to Woodward, the school board had Superintendent Ed Irons, Tech education dean Dr. Robert Anderson and Tech education professor Dr. Barbara Simmons testify about the integration proposal.

But CASS says the issues it has questioned "have been dealt with insufficiently or not at all" by those witnesses.

"An expert or experts should be called on by the court to testify regarding these matters," the draft of the proposed brief said.

"Since the court has ordered the school board to 'use any tool, device or plan that will reasonably accomplish the desired integration,' it is imperative that the court be provided with expert testimony regarding the question whether major portions of the school board's proposed plan are likely to work."

Davidow said he will list in the brief about a dozen possible expert witnesses, mostly sociology and political science professors from Texas Tech and other universities.

Woodward ordered the school district Jan. 27 to come up with a plan to integrate Dunbar High, Struggs Junior High and Iles, Wheatley, Sanders, Guadalupe, Posey, Martin and Mahon elementary schools.

The district's plan calls for:

—Closing Struggs as a junior high and using that facility as part of Dunbar for a magnet high school, offering courses the board hopes will voluntarily draw white students from throughout the city.

—Closing Sanders and zoning that area into Guadalupe.

—Turning Iles into a magnet elementary school with special programs and an extended school day to voluntarily attract white students.

—Assigning each student from the cited minority elementaries to a predominantly white school for half of his intermediate-grade years. Every student in predominantly white elementaries would be assigned one semester at a minority school.

The proposal would require busing 1,313 students a semester — 875 whites and 438 minorities.

The citizens' alliance, like the Justice Department, advocates systemwide integration for the district. In contrast, the board's plan would leave several schools, including 11 elementaries, predominantly minority.

The Justice Department may appeal Woodward's Jan. 27 finding that only nine schools are "constitutional violations" here. But the department has not indicated if it will protest the district's plan for those schools or if expert witnesses will be presented to criticize the plan.

That's why the alliance wants to step in.

"All we're asking for here is for the court to fully develop the facts," Davidow said. "If you don't get it in the record now, you're never going to get it in the record ... Nothing in the record right now says this program (the board's plan) won't work."

Irishmen Celebrate St. Patrick's Day

By DONAL O'HIGGINS

DUBLIN, Ireland (UPI) — Shamrock-wearing Irishmen put aside their troubles today and gathered in flag-bedecked cities and towns to celebrate the great national feast day of St. Patrick.

For most Irishmen, the holiday began at early mass with sermons on the National Apostle and special prayers before shrines to St. Patrick, the 5th century bishop who converted Ireland to Christianity.

Afterward, a host of outdoor activities was planned to mark the anniversary of St. Patrick's death, including hurley and football games, races and village sports.

Despite an airline strike and a virtual communications blackout caused by striking telecommunications workers, travel agencies said thousands of Irishmen living abroad had returned to join in the festivities. Hotels, guest houses and even private homes said they were fully booked for the holiday.

The national airline Aer Lingus, hit by a strike of 2,000 clerical workers, said it was operating about 70 percent of its flights.

"Despite the strike, we have been able to accommodate the 2,500 visitors from the United States," a company spokesman said.

Ireland's tourist agency, Bord Failte, said some groups from the United States had been unable to travel because of lack of funds. These included five high school bands forced to cancel after winter blizzards made open-air fund raising impossible.

Tourist officials estimated the influx from the United States was down about 20 percent from other years.

But, following the pattern of recent years, the U.S. was heavily represented by the various Irish-American societies and the American flag flew side-by-side with the Irish tricolor from buildings along the parade route.

Nearly every town and village in the Irish Republic scheduled its own parade with brass bands, pipes and local pageants.

But the continuing violence across the border in Northern Ireland left its mark on the festivities. Police planned strict security measures for the big industrial parade in the capital, the official highlight of the celebrations.

Extra troops and police were on duty at cross-border roads to check visitors from Northern Ireland to prevent any disruption of the celebrations.

"There is always the danger of violence when the nation is celebrating," a security source said. "That is the time when the public lets down its guard — and when we must be more vigilant."

The pageant, tracing Ireland's economic growth since it won independence more than half a century ago, is this year pegged to the theme of "Buy Irish."

Health Systems Group Approves Review Plan

By JIM BUSBY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

South Plains Health Systems (SPHS) governing body members Thursday night approved the agency's "revised procedures and criteria for project review" — a process that essentially could recommend or kill future plans to expand or change some health facilities in a 15-county area including Lubbock.

The SPHS decision to conduct the review process in those 15 counties — beginning May 1 — allows SPHS to screen certain area health project proposals and then pass its recommendations to the Texas Medical Facilities Commission and/or to the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

Current federal law details circumstances under which health-related facilities must seek review, but generally covers all federally-funded, health-related projects and new institutional health services.

The SPHS procedures and criteria specifically cite review methods, including the omission of votes — but not the opinions — of health systems volunteers who might be influenced by conflicts of interests.

Any of the 21 members of the project review committee may express his opinion of a health proposed health project, but he will not be allowed to vote once his conflict of interest has been recognized.

According to the newly adopted review guidelines, committee or governing body members must notify SPHS of possible conflicts, thereby relinquishing their votes on the projects involved.

The review committee recommendations go to the full governing body for a vote and then — following public hearings — to HEW and the TMFC.

The governing body Thursday also formally adopted its "Health Systems Plan" and "Annual Implementation Plan", documents that list area health needs — as determined by SPHS — and steps that should be taken to satisfy those needs.

The lengthy documents were formulated following the compilation of area health data, SPHS study and public hearings.

HEW must approve the health system's proposed HSP and AIP which would guide SPHS function for the next five years.

The plans would serve as partial fulfillment of requirements for "full designation" as the area's health systems agency.

SPHS staffers hope the full designation status can be applied to their agency with the beginning of the upcoming federal grant period. SPHS is expected to seek an estimated $195,000 for that time — June 17.

New Air Force Jet Finishes Long Test

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — A new highly maneuverable Air Force jet, the F-16 fighter, has completed its 1,000th flying hour in a lengthy test that proved successful, its pilot says.

"It's a major milestone and we did it on another very productive flight test mission," Air Force Col. James G. Rider said after a two-hour and 45-minute flight Thursday, which included basic fighter maneuvers and in-flight refueling from a Strategic Air Command tanker plane. The lightweight single-engine F-16 is designed for combat and as a launching vehicle for small missiles.

Woman Suffers Russian Flu

ATLANTA (UPI) — Federal health officials said today they have identified Russian flu in an 81-year-old Portland, Ore., resident, the first laboratory confirmed case of the strain in a person over 25 in the United States this year.

The national Center for Disease Control said the Oregon resident lived in a retirement community of about 250 people, and there were only sporadic cases of influenza-like activity reported among other elderly residents.

The fast-sweeping Russian flu strain was first reported in this country in the second week of January. Virus isolates had previously been confined to younger people, usually in close contact with each other at schools and military installations.

"This is the first isolate found in a person over 25," CDC spokesman Betty Hooper said of the Portland case.

The Russian strain, generally a mild flu, was reported in 32 states, the District of Columbia and New York City for the week ending March 11, the CDC said.

The health agency also said 10 states were reporting widespread flu, consisting of the Russian strain and A-Victoria and A-Texas for the same period.

Those states were Connecticut, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Florida, Georgia, Arizona, California, Hawaii, Alaska and Washington.

But, for the first time in nine weeks, pneumonia and influenza-related deaths were below the epidemic threshold, the CDC said.

Mrs. Hooper said only 15 more that the predicted 520 deaths occurred for the week — a statistically insignificant number.

Local Man Stays In Lea Jail

By PAT CARLSON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A 27-year-old Lubbock man was in a New Mexico jail on a voluntary manslaughter charge today, almost a year after the decomposed body of his wife was found in a shallow grave.

Clarence Ronnie McCoy was arraigned in Lovington, N.M., Thursday and remained in Lea County Jail there today in lieu of $50,000 bond set my Judge Drayton Wasson. The suspect was arrested last week in Imperial County, Calif., on a fugitive warrant from Colorado.

McCoy was jailed in Lubbock 18 months ago on two 1974 felony warrants on charges of theft and hindering secured creditors.

The woman reportedly had been missing since the McCoy's 16-month-old daughter was abandoned in an Odessa supermarket in November, 1976. However, it was not until more than a week later that authorities received information on the toddler's identity.

By chance, a Hobbs woman on her way to Lubbock saw a picture of the girl in a newspaper, and recognized her as a child she had cared for two months earlier.

When McCoy was arrested on the warrants shortly after the child was found, he told lawmen that he had taken his wife to Odessa to catch a commercial airliner or bus because they had been having trouble with their marriage and she wanted to go away for a while.

McCoy reportedly left his wife and daughter at a bus station, which is three miles from the supermarket where the child was found. Police at the time said a witness reportedly saw the mother momentarily at the store.

Mrs. McCoy's body was found about 300 yards from a rural road which traveled through sand hills and low brush. A party of arrowhead hunters made the grisly find as they combed the area near an abandoned oil well site.

The woman's head was partially covered and one leg was completely covered with sand in the shallow grave. Both arms were missing and numerous areas of severe decay were visible on the body.

Lawmen, both in Hobbs and Lubbock began speculating on the victim's identity shortly after the gruesome discovery. However, it was more than a week before positive identification was made.

Initial reports indicated her arms possibly had been severed by someone to hinder the identification. However, investigators later apparently discounted that theory because of evidence indicating animals had eaten away the exposed limbs.

Lawmen today still would not comment on the cause of death as revealed by an autopsy and several tests.

McCoy was arrested last week after New Mexico lawmen received information of his whereabouts and contacted California authorities.

He was returned to Lovington March 10.

Arson Cases Reach Epidemic Levels

AUSTIN (AP) — Arson has reached epidemic proportions in Texas and will run unchecked unless it becomes unprofitable, President Jerry Johns of Southwestern Insurance Information Service said today.

He said it has been estimated that 50 percent of all fires of undetermined origin are the result of arson.

"Many insurance companies across the country are increasingly resisting payment of claims where there is mounting evidence that fraud was committed or strong facts pointing to arson for profit," Johns said in a statement. "This is one method of taking the profit motive out of arson."

Jurors Hear Of Hawkins' Convictions

By PAT PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Samuel Christopher Hawkins III today was characterized as a killer who will strike again if not put to death — "a leopard who will not change his spots."

Hutchinson County Asst. Dist. Atty. Linda Walden urged jurors in the punishment phase of Hawkin's capital murder trial to consider the man's past criminal record when they decide how he must pay for stabbing a six-months pregnant Borger hosuewife to death.

The prosecution had entered eveidence of four prior felony convictions. They include:

Burglary in 1968, for which he was sentenced to five to seven years in the Colorado penitentiary; assault to rape in 1968, for which he received a two-to five-year Colorado prison term; rape, also in 1968, for which he was sentenced to to 20 to 40 years in the Colorado penitentiary; and attempted burglary in 1972, for which he received a five-year Oklahoma prison term.

"Violence, violence, violence, violence!" Miss Walden rang out.

A four-woman, eight-man jury Wednesday convicted Hawkins of the May 3, 1977, stabbing murder of Abbe Rogers Hamilton.

A pathologist testified one of the 10 stab wounds was so severe, it appeared there may have been an attempt to decapitate her.

Prosecutors alleged the slaying took place during an attempted aggravated rape, thus elevating the crime to its capital, or death penalty, status.

Hawkins faces only two possible sentences — either life in prison or death.

In deciding the razor-thin defendent's fate, the jury had two question to answer.

Basically, they boil down to: did Hawkins act deliberately, and with a reasonable expectation that death would result, when he stabbed Mrs. Hamilton? Is he likely to commit future acts of violence.

Miss Walden reminded jurors of a statement Hawkins gave police and said it proved the deliberateness of his attack on the victim. She read some portions of it:

"I started looking around Borger for someone to rape." It said he started "checking doors" and came to a house that had one open.

According to the statement Hawkins walked straight into the bedroom and put a knife to Mrs. Hamilton's throat.

"He knew what he was going to do. It was not an accident, it was deliberate," Miss Walden said.

Defense attorney Russell Busby urged the jury to deal only with facts, not with speculation, when considering the punishment question.

He commented that quotes Miss Walden read from Hawkins' confession were concerned more with the alleged deliberateness of the attemped aggravated rape, not with her actual death.

What jurors must decide, the Amarillo lawyer said, is whether Hawkins intended to kill the woman.

The case was expected to go to the jury early in the afternoon.

Bergland Assailed At Meet

ments and pleas from several movement leaders ended the confrontation and helped police clear the building.

The group decided to sit in the room overnight when Bergland, who previously scheduled three separate meetings with strikers today, did not show up in response to a demand for an immediate Thursday meeting with a rump group.

The American Farm Bureau Federation, meanwhile, sent Bergland a telegram saying the nation's biggest farm organization was "deeply disturbed" by the disruption.

The disturbances "reflect unfavorably" on all farmers, a bureau official said, adding that bureau members are planting their crops and are "not sympathetic to emotional antics."

The Agriculture Department sit-in developed after a brief, violent confrontation between farm strike members and police early Thursday.

Some 2,000 striking farmers, in the second day of a scheduled three-day series of demonstrations, marched from the White House to the Capitol and then made an unscheduled detour to the Agriculture Department to demand an immediate meeting with Bergland.

Security officers, alerted to the approach of the group, whisked Bergland quickly out of the building.

Rep. John Jenrette, D-S.C., who spent several hours with the sit-in group Thursday night, told them that farm bloc lawmakers were pressing for quick action — next week, if possible — on emergency farm legislation.

Brasfield Found Guilty In Slaying Of City Boy

tie Johnny Turner Jr. to it — not a hair off his head, not a drop of blood, not a fingerprint," McGill said.

"How can the chain be welded when there is nothing to tie him to the pickup truck he was supposed to be in?"

Witnesses had stated the white man seen with a small black child at an East Lubbock service station had made casual conversation with the station owner about tires and had walked inside the station while the child sat alone in a pickup truck.

McGill said the testimony indicated the child had not been restrained.

He also alluded to the reported conversation.

"Is that the mental state of an individual who has it in mind to kidnap and murder someone — getting gas, asking about tires? It doesn't make sense," McGill argued.

The court's charge to jurors instructs them that consent given by a child of 14 years old or younger is no defense to a kidnapping allegation.

A positive identification of Brasfield was made by each of two witnesses who indicated they also recognized the Turner child.

Griffin in final argument particularly stressed the testimony of Cecille Joyce Hunter, who said she observed Brasfield closely for several minutes at the service station around 5:30 p.m. Oct. 26.

She said she remembered the amount of gasoline Brasfield allegedly purchased and even remembered that he paid with a $20 bill.

The witness said she recognized the victim as "the Turner boy," although she did not know his first name.

The other witness to make a positive identification was 13-year-old Teddy Robinson, who said he saw Brasfield with the victim about two blocks from the Coronado Apartments, where the Turner family lived.

The youth said his family also lived at the apartments and that he knew the victim.

Attorney Warren Goss said he knew Brasfield and saw him in Lubbock between 4 and 5 p.m. on the date in question.

Two friends of the defendant, Armando Rameriz and Jerry Wayne Robinson, said that, while working at a job site near Posey, about halfway between Slaton and Lubbock, they saw Brasfield at about 3:30 p.m. travelling toward Lubbock.

Ironically, the same two individuals said they saw Brasfield later that day as they sat drinking beer in a car parked next to Horeshoe Bend Road which winds from the Yellowhouse Canyon area toward Slaton.

The two witnesses said Brasfield was alone in his pickup truck when they saw him on the road between 6:30 p.m. and 7 p.m.

Rameriz and Robinson added they talked to Brasfield after seeing him on the road and later went over to his home to drink beer.

Dr. Jose A. Diaz-Esquivel testified that about 10 stab wounds were found on the victim's body, clustered in the stomach area and on the right side of the chest.

He said the chest punctures were not deep enough to have caused death.

Diaz, who performed the autopsy, indicated that the deeper stomach wounds might have been made after the boy was already dead.

"The stomach wounds were deep, but there was no bleeding inside," Diaz testified.

The pathologist said that in his opinion the victim had been asphyxiated. He said he thought the child had been smothered.

Sheats 'Disappointed' Hance Refused Challenge To Debate

asive communicator" and that would come across in a televised debate. But Sheats conceded "the issue" in the race now is the debate.

Sheats said he could name the differences between him and Hance, but preferred the differences to "be brought out in a powerful way such as in a debate."

He emphasized Congressional hearings would soon be televised and residents of the Congressional district had a right to see how candidates for the office appear on television.

Voters in the district have been polled, Sheats said, but he refused to release any figures to indicate if they showed him leading or trailing Hance.

He said the race is close in some of the counties, but in some "we would be way ahead."

"We feel the campaign has not been won by anybody," he said.

"I've always been part of a winning team and my 2,600 workers do not intend to lose in May," Sheats said, adding he "feels good about where our campaign is today."

In responding to the challenge Thursday, Hance said he had appeared at numerous forums with Sheats and would continue to do so as his schedule permits.

However, he said he had attended every forum to which he'd been invited while Sheats had missed some of those.

Sheats labeled that "incorrect information" and said Hance missed an Odessa forum several weeks ago which Sheats attended.

Sheats said he had missed none of the forums, but his wife represented him at one event.

But Sheats said the forums excluded those in small towns, whereas "through the magic of television, this debate would include the people in small communities as well as in the large communities."

Asked if he felt Hance was wise to refuse the invitation to debate, Sheats said he thought it was "very unwise politically for Hance to refuse."

Sheats had proposed a televised debate between the two Democratic opponents sponsored by a non-partisan organization such as the League of Women Voters.

However, league president Carolyn Lanier said the organization would not sponsor a debate, but was contemplating a televised forum involving both Republican and Democratic Congressional candidates.

If that forum is held, candidates would have the opportunity to speak and then would be questioned by league members.

In the same session with Avalanche-Journal editorial staff members which produced the debate challenge, Sheats promised he would "conduct a sample survey of 400 registered voters (in the district) to get their feedback on issues" every four months.

He also repeated his primary campaign promise of returning to "every county seat twice a year on a pre-announced basis to listen to the people one-on-one."

On the subject of agriculture Sheats said, "I am not for guaranteeing everything by law to the farmer. But they ultimately must have a place to sell their products," he said.

"The U.S. Department of Agriculture must start moving commodities around the world and create markets for (the farmers)," Sheats said.

"Saying 'keep the government out of farming' is fine for a political speech, but it just doesn't work that way.

"The farmer cannot pass on cost increases," he noted.

Sheats said he felt the U.S. should use food as a diplomatic tool and as leverage against other nations instead of arms.

The minister said he had been recruiting workers in the 17 counties of the Congressional district and emphasized his organization had a "widespread, broad-based group of people" working for it.

Israeli Commandos Hit Guerrilla Bases of the city.

Observers said other Israelis set up checkpoints on the coastal highway and seized six cars loaded with fleeing refugees from Tyre, a guerrilla-held Mediterranean port 12 miles north of Israel.

In the tank attacks, observers said, Israelis captured the central villages of Hadatha, Eita, Braachit, Safad el Battikh and Tibnine. Tibnine's fall brought Israeli forces pushing west from the slopes of Mount Hermon close to a linkup with units advancing inland, the observers said.

Israeli jets during the night bombed guerrilla positions shelling the Christian strongholds of Kleia and Marjayoun, at the eastern end of the 6-by-62-mile security belt established by the invaders along the Israeli-Lebanese frontier.

Israel's air force also bombed two Palestinian camps on the outskirts of Tyre and hillside hamlets 25 east of Tyre, sending flames and smoke spiraling into the sky.

The Palestine Liberation Organization said Israeli jets made repeated attacks on the guerrilla-held town of Nabatieh, three miles above the security belt, and on Palestinian supply routes in the South.

The Israeli newspaper Maariv said Israel was using the American F-15 fighter for the first time in Mideast combat. The Israeli command refused to confirm the report. The plane is believed by the United States to be the best combat plane in the world, and Israel is reported to have a dozen of them.

Lebanese Foreign Minister Fuad Butros issued a statement welcoming the U.S. call for Israel to pull out, but both he and Israeli officials were cool to American talk of replacing the invaders with a U.N. force.

Butros said Lebanon's authority must be re-established in the south, an area where it has not functioned since the height of the Lebanese civil war.

The United States called on Israel to pull its troops back and said it would support Security Council consideration of a proposal to put a U.N. peacekeeping force in the zone. An Arab request for a council meeting was expected to be made in New York today.

But one Israeli official said he "never thought there was much of a blessing in having U.N. forces" on Israel's borders and predicted the government might oppose the proposal.

Government sources said Begin hoped instead to negotiate a pact with the Lebanese government and the Syrian peacekeeping forces in Lebanon to keep the guerrillas from returning to the zone.

PLO chief Arafat told Moslem leaders in Beirut: "We shall never allow such agreements and never submit to them." He accused the United States of plotting with Israel to create a separate state in southern Lebanon to be ruled by the Christians.

"This plot is a link in the chain of an even wider American-Israeli conspiracy aimed at liquidating the Palestinians to impose a Middle East peace settlement in Israel's favor," he said.

Canal Treaty Foes To Continue Fight

will have the votes we will need."

But a major opponent of the pacts, Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., said, "The proponents have fired their best shot."

Laxalt, the foes' principal strategist, said he is convinced that in the three or four weeks before the second treaty vote, public opposition will have forced enough senators who voted "yes" Thursday to switch and block ratification.

But Byrd said three or four senators who voted against ratification Thursday would have voted "yes" if their votes had been needed.

"We had votes to spare," said a smiling Byrd, clearly elated at having steered to passage the most important piece of legislation since he became majority leader in January 1977.

There had been intense maneuvering for votes over the last several days, including lobbying by all the principal members of the Carter administration, including first lady Rosalyn Carter.

Reflecting opinion polls showing broad public opposition to turning over the canal to Panama, Byrd said that for himself, "This was the most difficult vote I have cast in the Senate in my 20 years here.

"The pressure was intense. This was not popular vote back home."

All 100 senators were on the floor for the vote. Among those looking on were the two principal U.S. negotiators of the treaty, Sol Linowitz and Ellsworth Bunker. Standing at the rear of the chamber were about two dozen House members who will get their own chance to vote on the Panama issue later.

The House must approve legislation providing funds for the canal transfer, and there are some congressional leaders who believe Carter may face a bigger fight there than in the Senate.

The 67th vote providing the needed two-thirds for ratification was cast almost accidentally by Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis.

Nelson, a longtime treaty supporter, was passed the first time the Senate clerk read the list of names because he was talking to another senator and failed to hear his name.

When the clerk began the second time through, Nelson voted "aye."

Before the vote, the Senate adopted a provision giving the United States the right to use military force to keep the canal open.

In a letter to Carter, Torrijos said he would study the treaty as approved by the Senate to determine if it signaled an "interference in our internal affairs."

Irish Jew Ready To Celebrate

By JULES LOH

NEW YORK (AP) — Ah, to be Irish on St. Patrick's Day ...

And also Jewish?

"I was brought up on kosher potatoes," Dennis Victor said, wiping the bar. "My father's parents came from County Cork. My mother's came from the Ukraine. Here I am, an Irish Jew."

With a touch of the poet as his father's legacy, a bit of the philosopher as his mother's, Dennis Victor thus becomes the ideal bartender.

He is as pleasant in demeanor as in looks: a compact 5-foot-11, 175 pounds, with thick black hair and black eyebrows over smiling Irish eyes, and a sharp, delta-shaped nose. He is 40.

He presides over 45 feet of well-worn mahogany at O'Neal Bros. saloon, which, later tonight, will become O'Neal Bros. madhouse.

The luck of his father's side placed Dennis' domain, O'Neal's, close to the end of the parade route. In New York, St. Patrick's Day paraders are known for a mighty thirst.

"You will see a lot of cops and firemen in here," Dennis said. "It will be so crowded you can't move."

O'Neal's, on less frantic days, is one of those easy neighborhood joints that enrich life, that provide the pause in the day's occupation that is known as the grown-ups' hour. Many of the same patrons gather at the same tables. Study groups. In back, the more athletic customers throw darts.

Dennis Victor is the captain of O'Neal's intrepid dart team but that is not what has brought him fame at O'Neal's. It is his skill as a bartender that is, at times, uncanny.

A skilled bartender, of course, must be equally adept at mixing drinks and keeping peace.

"The trick is to stop trouble before it starts," Dennis said. "When people are drinking, things can get out of hand in a hurry. You have to do the right thing, say the right thing, so your meaning is clear and nobody is insulted."

One night recently a man came into O'Neal's somewhat unsteadily, slid onto a stool and proceeded to get comfortable.

Dennis leveled jet black eyes at him. "Don't light that cigarette," he said evenly. Bull's-eye. The man got up and teetered off without a word.

"If I had told him he couldn't have a drink he would have gotten loud. I don't know how I knew, I could just tell.

"Don't worry," Dennis said. "There will be no trouble on St. Patrick's Day. There never has been, not here. It's a noisy crowd and a thirsty crowd but a friendly crowd."

In his eight years at O'Neal's serving all kinds of crowds, Dennis can count on one hand, well, maybe two, the times he has had to toss anyone out. "It's unpleasant for everybody if it comes to that."

If it should come to that, though, Dennis's timing seems to be perfect.

During a recent snowstorm he tossed out two rowdies simultaneously, by the collars. At the very moment they landed in a snowbank out front the snowplow came along and buried them.

Attendance Mark Set By Solon

WASHINGTON (AP) — House members saluted Rep. William H. Natcher on Wednesday for being cited in the new Guinness Book of World Records for not missing a single roll call vote or a day's work in Congress since he took office 24 years ago.

Natcher, D-Ky., was applauded on the House floor after his record-setting performance was described in a speech by Frederick W. Richmond, D-N.Y.

Richmond said there have been 6,210 roll call votes since Natcher was first sworn in Jan. 6, 1954, and that the Kentucky congressman voted each time. In addition, he said, Natcher has answered 3,658 quorum calls, for a total of 9,868 votes.

Richmond said no other member of Congress has ever served in the House or Senate for 17 consecutive years or more without missing one or more votes.

He said Natcher's record has been certified by the House clerk each year.

Riley Named City Manager

FORT SMITH, Ark. (UPI) — City administrator Ray Riley has announced his resignation, saying he will take a job as city manager in Beaumont.

Riley, who has been administrator in Fort Smith since late 1972, called the decision "simply a matter of professional opportunity."

"Beaumont is about twice as large as Fort Smith, with about twice the number of city employees and about three times the budget," he said. "It simply offers a lot more opportunity for me to advance myself professionally, plus it's a very fine community."

Riley's resignation will be effective April 8. The job in Beaumont starts April 10.

Riley will replace Beaumont city manager Howard McDaniel, who resigned recently. Before McDaniel left town, he presented each member of the Beaumont city council with a recording of the song, "Take This Job and Shove It."

Most State Legislators Have Other Occupations

By LEE MITGANG
Associated Press Writer

Who makes the laws in your state?

If you live in Maine, one of the men drafting and voting on laws in the state Legislature is a rug shampooer.

If you live in Nebraska, home of prairie farmers and big insurance companies, your legislators are mostly in those occupations.

And in Nevada, a state of fast dollars and even faster marriages and divorces, occupations among state legislators range from casino operator to minister.

The idea of a "citizen legislature" composed of men and women from every walk of life may be dying in the U.S. Congress and other branches of government, where lawyers or career politicians hold many of the jobs.

But it is far from dead in state legislatures, an Associated Press survey of all 50 states shows.

Especially in states which don't yet have to deal with the highly technical problems of large, declining cities, service in state legislatures remains open to farmers, retirees, housewives — almost anyone who is willing to tackle the problems of their states for a few months each year.

One result is that, compared with the U.S. Congress which is roughly two-thirds lawyers, "the number of lawyers in state legislatures is clearly on the decline," says William Pound, director of state services for the National Conference of State Legislatures in Denver.

No accurate tally exists, but Pound estimates the average state legislature is made up of only about 20 percent lawyers.

Fifteen states, including New York, California, Michigan and Wisconsin, where legislators get salaries of over $10,000, still list as many as half their members as lawyers. But in the 35 other states where pay is low for legislators, most lawyers find it too time-consuming and unprofitable to serve in statehouses. And the trend toward fewer lawyers has accelerated as the length of legislative sessions has increased in recent years.

Delaware, for instance, now has no lawyers in its Legislature — but it does have eight workers for the state's biggest employer, Du Pont Co.

Another state, Arizona, has only four lawyers in its Statehouse.

Texas Solons Split Canal Treaty Vote

By MILLER BONNER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Depending on the senator you choose to agree with, passage of the Panama canal treaties either assures continued stability in the canal zone or invites disastrous disruption.

Texans of either persuasion have their man in Washington: Democrat Lloyd Bentsen agrees with the amended version of the controversial treaties while Republican John Tower vociferously opposes them.

The Bentsens scored a narrow victory Thursday with the ratification of one of the treaties. The Towers said they had lost a battle but not the war.

As a standing-room-only crowd watched, the Senate dramatically ratified the controversial treaty by a 68-32 margin, one vote more than needed.

The treaty spells out the rights of the United States to defend and use the canal once it is turned over to Panama. The second treaty — which makes the canal Panamanian property — will be considered later.

Bentsen noted that the attatchment of two amendments to the treaties had assured his "yea" vote.

Bentsen said the two amendments make it possible for the U.S. "to intervene unilaterally, militarily forever, to protect the neutrality of the canal and that our ships will be allowed to go to the head of the line in case of an emergency. Those two amendments have been attached to the treaties and without them, I would not have voted for it. With them, I'll vote for it."

"It's an ambiguous and weak document," countered Tower. "It'll be extremely difficult, if not impossible, for the United States to act should the neutrality pact be violated in the future. This agreement fails to recognize that the most serious threat to the canal's security could well be instability within the country of Panama itself.

"Far stronger assurances of U.S. intervention rights are necessarry. There is no guarantee that the U.S. will be able to maintain any military presence in Panama after the year 2000," Tower continued.

"I think the majority of my collegues have overlooked the fact that with the absence of continued U.S. military presence in the canal zone there will be an insufficient deterrent to instability in Panama which could easily disrupt the future opertion of the canal."

Bentsen called the vote a "win for the President, but not a major win...it would have been a major loss. He was expected to win it."

Tower said that while the Presdent has won round one , the fight is far from finished.

"I do not believe the vote today will be necessarily be repeated when the roll is called on the second round," Tower said. "So while I'm disappointed in the action of the senate here today, I'm not totally convinced the same vote will occur when we conclude our deliberations on the Panama Canal treaty itself."

When asked if the White House lobbying had been lacking on the canal issue, Bentsen replied: "I don't think so. They've done everything they could. It's a tough, controversial, emotional issue and I think senators are going to make up their own minds...it would be a rare situation where the White House will be able to seriously influence a vote."

Bentsen added that despite "all the rumors I've heard, I don't know of any deals being offered and I assure you no deal has been offered me and I requested no deal. I can't imagine anything they

Hospital Successful During First Month

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Health Sciences Center Hospital's first month in business was clearly a success — drawing more patients, especially paying patients, than the Lubbock County Hospital District had ever imagined.

And Gerald Bosworth, executive director of the district and its $23 million medical facility, says initial statistics for March suggest that trend will continue.

"It is gratifying to me that many people must view the Health Sciences Center Hospital as their hospital — a community hospital — rather than the stereotyped 'county hospital,'" Bosworth said Thursday.

As evidence, he cited the "remarkable achievements" since the 245-bed facility, primary teaching hospital for the adjoining Texas Tech University School of Medicine, opened Feb. 1.

Since opening day, the hospital has had available only 105 beds (including infant beds in the facility's exclusive neonatal intensive care unit) and 28 bassinets, Bosworth said.

But average daily occupancy has been running about 25 on the bassinets and 80 to 85 on the other accommodations, he said. Thus, on a typical day, 80-85 percent of the hospital's available beds and bassinets are occupied.

Bosworth called the occupancy levels "very encouraging." He said the occupancy percentage is "most reasonable" from a financial standpoint and "as good or better as many hospitals I know of."

Still, on busy days, the Health Sciences Center Hospital has had as many as 129 of its beds and bassinets filled. On Wednesday, for instance, patient census hit 126.

At times, Bosworth said, the number of patients in one department has overflowed into another. "We're pressing the limit" in certain areas, he said.

So Bosworth said he hopes to open in June a 36-bed wing on the west side of the facility's third floor for surgical patients. Presently such patients are accommodated in a combined medical-surgical wing, he said.

Opening another wing, he said, will give the hospital one 36-bed unit just for medical patients and another for surgical patients.

Bosworth also said he is "shooting for May to open about four beds in the pediatric intensive care unit" of the new facility.

Bosworth said the hospital has adequate staffing, including 155 registered nurses and licensed vocational nurses, for the currently available beds. Opening another 36-bed wing will require about 20 more nurses, and activating the pediatric intensive care unit will necessitate about four nurses, he said.

He hopes to be able to recruit such personnel as the nation's nursing schools' graduate students in June.

"It's really gratifying to see the use made of the beds that are opened," Bosworth said. Hospital officials had not expected to achieve such a high patient census until the end of the first year's operation.

Bosworth attributed the surprising build-up in census to the "very significant support from community physicians." More than 50 local doctors have applied for and received staff privileges to practice at the hospital, he said.

During the month of February, Bosworth said, 634 patients were admitted and 127 surgical procedures performed. He said 172 babies were born in the hospital last month — an average of six per day. So far in March, births have been running at an average of about eight per day, Bosworth said.

The hospital's emergency room handled about 20 visits a day in February. That daily average of visits has climbed to about 23 for March, Bosworth said.

Most of the hospital's patients are the kind that will pay their own way. Hospital district officials had feared earlier they might get a preponderance of indigents.

Of the patients admitted during February, Bosworth said, only one percent qualified for taxpayer-financed care under the district's medical indigency program. Five percent were covered by Medicare, one percent by Medicaid, six percent by Blue Cross-Blue Shield, 56 percent by other private insurance, and 31 percent were "private pay" patients — without insurance but deemed able to pay from their own pockets.

"Ten to 11 percent may well shift from the categories of private pay and private insurance into the medical indigency category," Bosworth said. Even so, the percentage of indigent cases would "still be reasonable."

Group Pickets 'Oh, Calcutta'

FORT WORTH (UPI) — A performance of "Oh! Calcutta!" Thursday night was picketed by about 100 persons carrying anti-pornography signs.

The protesters, ranging in age from 4 to 80, paraded silently while ticketholders arrived at Tarrant County Convention Center. Police reported no arrests.

At a news conference at a Catholic church parking lot earlier in the day, a spokesman for the local chapter of the Citizens Committee for a Decent Texas said because of "serious loopholes in our state laws, it is impossible to stop 'Oh! Calcutta!' from performing."

Richard L. Collett, state coordinator for CCDT, said he has seen the play which ran on Broadway for several years.

"If 'Oh! Culcutta!' is obscenity, it is not protected by the First Amendment," he said. "We have to get it deemed obscene first."

A spokesman for the convention center said 1,000 persons attended Thursday night's performance. He also said ticket sales for tonight's and Saturday night's performances were going well.

Tax Rebate Received By City

The City of Lubbock's March rebate of the one percent municipal sales tax totaled $1.26 million, about $143,000 more than was received for the same period last year.

This month's check brings 1978's total rebates to $1.9 million, which is an 11 percent increase over 1977 payments to date.

The city sales tax is collected by retail merchants along with the state sales tax and is rebated to the municipalities monthly by the state comptroller's office.

March's total rebates are 17.4 percent more than those for the same period last year. They raise the year-to-date total to $101.5 million, up from $89.4 million for the first quarter of 1977.

The City of Houston received the heftiest check this month—$13.5 million. Dallas claims second place with $7.9 million. Other top rebates include San Antonio, $4.1 million, Fort Worth, $3 million and Austin, $2.4 million.

South Plains municipalities that will receive rebates include Abernathy, $6,987; Andrews, $50,831; Aspermont, $3,866; Big Spring, $156,979; Bovina, $3,002; Brown field, $52,752; Childress, $27,436; Coahoma, $4,019; Colorado City, $24,396; Crosbyton, $7,292, and Dickens, $1,934.

Also, Dimmitt, $17,351; Earth, $4,081; Floydada, $12,695; Friona, $10,839; Hale Center, $4,375; Hart, $2,540; Hereford, $59,281; Idalou, $4,652; Lamesa, $61,658; Levelland, $64,420; Littlefield, $29,459; Lockney, $5,487, and Lorenzo, $2,928.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

With all due respect to the long-range weather forecasters, I'm always interested in what the naturalists predict in regard to the weather.

This year, they all hit it right on the button. They knew back in early December that this winter was going to be wet and rotten because: The elk and deer came down early from the high country.

Mud-dauber wasps were building their nests higher.

Woolly bear caterpillars had heavy coats.

Bears were fat.

Squirrels had ravenous appetites in the fall.

They should have asked housewives. They also have an inside track on how the winter is going to compare with previous ones. I knew it was going to be a bruiser because:

This is the year eight pairs of boots in our house didn't match one pair of feet. This phenomenon occurs only once in every 72 years and can only mean that blizzard conditions are on the way.

This is the year we cleaned out the freezer — leaving only three snowballs from 1971, five packages of squash which everyone hates, and 12 packages of chicken innards to be thrown away on garbage day...someday.

This is the year we got the puppy, rationalizing that we could watch him when he started to twirl around in a circle, grab him and put him outside.

This is the year we didn't buy firewood, because we figured it was too expensive and besides, we rarely used the fireplace as it smoked up the bricks.

This is the year we put the sleds up in the attic — on the far side where there is no floor and you have to crawl through the insulation and put the rope in your teeth and slide it carefully along the beam before you fall through the floor.

Yep, no doubt about it. When our 72-year-old milkman got new teeth and began to look more like Robert Redford every day, we knew it was going to be a cold winter.

The Slim Gourmet

By Barbara Gibbons

Picture layers of chocolate and ripe banana slices separated by a creamy liqueur-spiked filling . . . that's our Italian Chocolate-Banana Strata, a cross between a mousse and an old-fashioned "icebox cake."

There's nothing old-fashioned about the calories, though. Despite its caloric pretensions, this devilishly delicious dessert is under 180 calories a serving, with relatively little fat and sugar. (In fact, it can even be made in a sugarless, liqueur-free dietetic version.)

The filling is easy to do in a blender or food processor. Follow these directions:

ITALIAN CHOCOLATE BANANA STRATA

1 envelope plain gelatin
¼ cup white creme de cocoa liqueur
3 cups ice-cold skim milk
¾ cup part-skim ricotta cheese
⅛ tsp. salt (or butter-flavored salt)
4-serving box vanilla instant pudding mix
12 chocolate icebox cookies
1 large ripe banana, sliced

Sprinkle gelatin on liqueur and set aside to soften.

Combine milk, ricotta and salt in covered blender and blend completely smooth.

Gently heat gelatin in liqueur until it melts. Add to blender and blend smooth. Add ice cubes and blend until ice is dissolved. Add pudding mix and blend smooth. (Mixture should be thick. If not, chill in refrigerator a few minutes and it will thicken.)

Arrange six cookies in the bottom of a loaf pan. Add a layer of the pudding mixture, a layer of bananas, more pudding mixture, a layer of the remaining cookies and the remaining pudding mixture. Chill 12 hours, until the flavors are blended and the mixture is set. Ten servings, 145 calories each.

DIETETIC VERSION FOR SUGAR-FREE DIETERS — Use a 4-serving envelope of dietetic, sugar-free vanilla pudding mix and dietetic chocolate cookies. Substitute 2 teaspoons brandy or rum flavoring mixed in a quarter-cup cold water, lace of chocolate liqueur. Because dietetic pudding mix is not "instant" and needs cooking, follow this procedure:

Soften gelatin in cold water mixed with brandy flavoring; set aside.

Prepare pudding mix with 2 cups skim milk according to package directions. Remove from heat and combine hot pudding, ricotta cheese and soft gelatin mixture in covered blender and blend smooth.

Chill in refrigerator until slightly thick. Layer with bananas and cookies in a loaf pan. Chill until set. Ten servings, 100 calories each.

GRASSHOPPER STRATA

3 tbsp. white creme de menthe
2 tbsp. white creme de cocoa
1 envelope plain gelatin
3 cups ice-cold skim milk
1 cup low-fat cottage cheese
⅛ tsp. salt
3 or 4 ice cubes
4-serving box vanilla instant pudding mix
12 chocolate wafers or icebox cookies

Combine liqueurs and sprinkle gelatin over them to soften.

In blender: Blend milk, cottage cheese and salt until ompletely smooth. Heat gelatin mixture to melt, then blend into milk mixture. Add ice cubes and blend until dissolved. Add pudding mix and blend smooth.

Layer half the cookies in the cakepan. Add half the pudding mixture. Layer remaining cookies. Add remaining uoding mixture. Chill 12 hours. Serves eight, 175 calories each.

Creation and management of entries are among the finer points of declarer play. Watch South's technique on this hand.

The bidding was hardly exemplary. North had no reason to compete with two spades on four to the nine and only 6 HCP, and South's jump to four diamonds, even though he had a spade fit, was rather aggressive. Three diamonds would have described his hand quite adequately. Fortunately, South's skill in the play made up for his bidding.

West led the king of hearts and continued with the queen and another. Declarer took care to ruff with the ten. The defenders had taken their book, and declarer still was looking at the possibility of a club and two spade losers. However, prospects were not as bleak as they appeared on the surface.

West had already shown up with the king-queen of hearts, so East was marked with almost every other card for his opening bid. If the hand was to be made, East had to have both the king and jack of spades, no more than once guarded. But declarer had to be careful with his entries to the table.

After ruffing the third heart, declarer cashed the ace of diamonds and then overtook the queen with the king to draw the opponents' trumps. A spade to the ten won, and declarer continued to husband his entries by leading the five of diamonds to dummy's six.

Life continued to improve when a spade from dummy fetched the jack and the queen won. When the ace of spades felled the king, dummy's thirteenth spade was established.

Now the two of diamonds to the four provided the key entry to dummy. Declarer discarded his club loser on the good spade, and the contract rolled home. Declarer lost no more than the two heart tricks the defenders cashed at the outset.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" Curling Patents In Museum

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — A haircurling collection of publication has been donated to a library and museum here by the trade organization representing American hairdressers and beauty experts.

The collection of more than 3,500 patents deals with almost every cosmetology tool and technique in the industry developed since the late 1800s.

They include the patents granted A.F. Godefroy in 1891 for the first electric curling iron and to Marcel Grateau of France 19 years earlier for his wave technique that was the first for duplicating the natural wave pattern of human hair with a curling iron.

Study Reveals Women Not Careful Shoppers

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Women questioned in grocery shopping studies tend to describe themselves as careful shoppers.

They say they plan menus in advance, make shopping lists and stick to them, buy advertised specials, compare prices and nutritional content and read labels to avoid products containing additives and preservatives.

They're in the minority, according to first results from a new federal government study of shopping behavior.

Only 18 percent of the 1,174 persons questioned in that spring 1976 survey fit the image of careful shoppers. They made up the smallest group.

The largest group, 39 percent, were pleasure-motivated. They buy favorite brands, even if they cost a little more. They enjoy food shopping and experimenting with new and different products and recipes for their sensory appeal.

Efficient use of time and money was the major consideration for the second largest group, or 32 percent. Price generally has the strongest influence on their buying decisions, says Effie H. Hacklander in a recent issue of National Food Review, a USDA quarterly.

The other two groups also care about price, she wrote, but not to the extent that the efficient shoppers do. Quality, uniqueness, newness and sensory appeal are more important to those who buy food for satisfaction.

The participants in the study were asked to react to attitude statements by choosing from a six-point scale: always, almost always, sometimes, seldom, never and not sure.

Miss Hacklander said fewer than one percent used the "not sure" category. Eleven percent did not fit clearly into any of the three groups established by the polltakers.

But the food outlook for 1978, as outlined in the USDA quarterly, could persuade some pleasure-seeking shoppers to become more careful with their grocery money.

Big food supplies are expected as are increases in wages for food processing and marketing employees. Some will come from prior wage settlements, cost-of-living adjustments, renegotiated wage agreements and increases in minimum wages, said the USDA publication.

The quarterly predicts a seven-to-eight-percent increase in food industry wages alone.

Higher food prices are also expected to reflect increased costs for energy, packaging materials and transportation.

The publication forecasts an inflation rate about the same as last year and a nine percent increase in disposable personal income.

Most of the latter apparently won't go for food, but for automobiles, housing and services, the report said.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I am 64 and Norman is 68. We have two married sons. Everything was fine until about five months ago when I noticed that Norman was spending a lot of time in the carport, even when it was pouring rain!

I started to watch him from the window, and I saw him making hand signals and waving to the lady across the street. I noticed, too, that when Norman walked the dog, he would stand in front of this lady's house and stare into her window. Then she'd come to the window and the hand signals and waving would start.

The woman is older than I am. I notice that this monkey business between her and Norman goes on only when her husband is at work -never on weekends or in the evening.

I finally couldn't take it anymore, so I called our two sons over and asked them to talk to their father about this outrageous flirting. They told him to stay out of the carport and to walk the dog in the other direction, which he did for two days. Then he went back to his old tricks, claiming there was nothing to it.

Abby, I'm sick about this and am losing weight. What can I do? I can no longer trust my husband of 44 years.

UPSET AND JEALOUS

DEAR JEALOUS: I think you're making something out of nothing. What harm is there in a little waving and a few hand signals? It's certainly not important enough to worry about. Please try to see the humor of it, dear. It IS comical! If two aging flirts get a "thrill" out of waving at each other, let them have their fun. Laugh about it. And when Norman realizes that you think it's funny, he'll probably quit.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: My mother, who is 70, has struck up an unusual friendship with a young woman in her rearly 20s. The two of them make the bars on weekends, strike up friendships with the musicians, and sometimes bring them home for a jam session until the wee hours. It seems strange this young lady has no friends her own age.

My mother tries to look younger by wearing her hair shoulder length. She even wears false eyelashes and clothes that are definitely not for a woman her age.

She looks ridiculous. Please put this in your column. It might do her good to see it.

CONCERNED DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: If your mother looks "ridiculous," she's the one who will pay the price. For my part, if she's happy, I fail to see whom she's hurting.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I am only 14, but I learned a lesson I will never forget.

When my parents used to tell me they "worried" when I didn't come home when I said I would, I thought they were silly. Well, now that I got a taste of my own medicine, I don't think they're so silly anymore.

Last Saturday night my folks went out and said they'd be home around midnight. Well, it got to be one o'clock in the morning, then two, then three, and they still weren't home, and I nearly went out of my mind imagining they were both dead in a ditch somewhere with the car on top of them.

Finally, at 4 a.m., they came home. They said they ran into some old friends and were just sitting around their apartment talking over old times. They didn't bother to call me because they didn't think I'd worry.

Believe me, I will NEVER give them the kind of night they gave me.

Child Safety Featured As Theme Of Stamps

By SYD KRONISH
Associated Press Writer

"Child Safety" is the theme of four new stamps with surcharge issued by the Netherlands as its annual Child Welfare series. Each of the four stamps depicts a potentially dangerous situation for a youngster.

The 40-cent plus 20 shows a child playing at the waterfront. The illustration emphasizes the risk of drowning at the beach, pool or even in a bathtub. The 45-cent plus 20 shows a child with access to a cabinet with dangerous contents, thus alerting all to the risk of poisoning.

The 55-cent plus 20 features the danger of traffic as a child runs after a ball in the street. The 75-cent plus 25 depicts a child playing with matches, thus reflecting the risk of fire.

The additional values on each stamp go directly to child welfare agencies in the Netherlands, according to the World Wide Philatelic Agency.

These new stamps — as well as all stamps mentioned in this column — are available at your local dealer or stamp department.

The most unusual of all Christmas stamps issued this past Yule season come from Great Britain, with the theme being the Christmas carol, "The Twelve Days of Christmas." There are six stamps in the set with each adhesive featuring two gifts. At the bottom is the inscription "The Twelve Days of Christmas." The Queen Elizabeth vignette appears at the top right.

Shown on the stamps are: 12 lords a-leaping, 11 ladies dancing, 10 pipers piping, 9 drummers drumming, 8 maids a-milking, 7 swans a-swimming, 6 geese a-laying, 5 gold rings, 4 colly birds, 3 French hens, 2 turtle doves and a partridge in a pear tree.

Austria's 1978 stamp schedule includes items commemorating the following occasions: to mark the opening of the first section of Vienna's "U-Bahn" (subways system), hailing the 1978 Biathlon World Championship, to honor Vienna Ethnological Museum, to pay tribute to the Congress of International Federation of Building and Woodworkers, to highlight 25 years of tourism and 700 years of the city of Gmunden plus another for the 700th anniversary of the battle of Marchfeld. Also on the list is a stamp to honor the 850th anniversary of the city of Graz, one for the 150th anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and the usual Christmas special.

Singapore has issued three new stamps to commemorate the 10th anniversary of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations. The stamps depict various aspects of cooperation among the nations in the group.

The 10-cent shows the flags of the five nations of the association — Singapore, Malaysia, Indonesia, Philippines and Thailand. The 35-cent illustrates agricultural cooperation in the form of wheat, rubber and cattle. The 75-cent depicts industrial development highlighted by steel production, chemical and medical industries.

DID YOU KNOW THAT ... Benjamin Franklin, whose portrait appears on the first U.S. postage stamp, was praised by the French statesman, Turgot, who said: "He snatched the lightning from the skies and the scepter from tyrants" ... when a U.S. stamp is referred to as a "freak" it means a stamp which shows conspicuous deviations from the normal caused by shifted perforations, heavy inking, color shifts or similar accidents in printing. But they are not considered to be errors ... The United States has never issued a semi-postal stamp ... the most widely seen first-day ceremony in the history of philately occurred when astronaut David Scott stood on the surface of the moon and canceled the twin stamps issued to mark a decade of space achievements.

Antique Know-How Can Aid Shoppers

By VIVIAN BROWN
Associated Press Writer

You can be giant steps ahead of those mobs at spring tag sales if you bone up on antiques and near-antiques that are likely to show up at such events.

Knowing how to go about acquiring such knowledge is important so you don't waste your time. And a good beginning is to decide what fascinates you about antiques and other collectibles. Do you want to collect? Are you a browser looking for bargains? Are you trying to furnish a home with inexpensive quality objects, old or not?

If you can narrow your interests to glass, Victorian furniture, or a collection of turtles, you have a better chance to become knowledgeable in a short time. Trying to know too much, too soon, about everything can be a frustrating experience. With hundreds of different kinds of objects at tag sales that might vary from French porcelain stoves to whale oil lamps, it might be confusing.

Let's say you decide to collect hobnail "vaseline glass." With your newly acquired knowledge, you just glance over the items exhibited and if there is "vaseline glass," you inspect it. If it looks like the real thing — and your trained eye should set you straight on that — you can decide whether the price is right, whether it is a piece you will enjoy and so on. There is confusion about "vaseline glass" — much of it is not old and years ago these reproductions were sold in variety stores for a few cents. The real thing is made with uranium, so it is scarce.

A class on the subject at your local museum, the town historical society, or adult education center can be your start to becoming an expert.

Some people collect glass patterns, some collect a particular color — such as cranberry or amethyst. Ruby glass was made with gold and there are the expensive glass items, some signed.

When you decide to study the thing you decide to collect, first investigate whether there is a class on the subject in your town.

Furniture is a large category, so if you want to collect something for your own use, it is best to limit your study to your main area of interest. Spreading out the period, designer or wood might broaden the study so that it would be too time-consuming.

Books are great aids in learning about the category of your choice but you should begin by trying to see some pieces that have a relationship that puts the entire study into perspective. The color of the wood, the prints, the measurements should be observed. Old pieces may shrink or show signs of wear that look favorable to the piece; good old wood develops a patina that can be far more beautiful than a refinished piece.

To see the furniture in which you are interested you can visit antique stores, thrift shops, previews of antique and museum shows — this provides the opportunity to inspect the piece closely. Catalogs from the shows and museums can be informative and they are a great help. Some people subscribe to gallery catalogs of forthcoming sales and they can decide whether they want to go to that particular exhibit.

For example, if you want to study 18th-century furniture it might be a waste of time right now to go to sales of Islamic jewelry.

Some lectures and courses given by town societies are very worthwhile. The lecturers are usually expert on a subject — Federal mirrors, Georgian silver or some other specialty — and the fees are a good investment.

Once you have learned all you want to know about one collectible, you can go on to something else that interests you.

Floor Color May Affect One's Mood

By ANDY LANG
Associted Press Writer

Q. — You recently wrote about the effect of roof colors on the apparent size and shape of a house. Can you do the same thing for me on resilient floor tiles, which I expect to install on two floors of our house in the near future? I haven't quite made up my mind which type of tiles to get, but what I am interested in is getting the right colors. One of the rooms to be tiled is a kitchen, one a bedroom.

A. — No matter what you read here or anywhere else, your own individual taste should play a part in the selection of colors. It is true that tests have shown that the colors of floor materials can have a bearing on the moods of people, but even in these tests, there have been exceptions to the general findings. Having given you that preliminary information, here is what is generally believed about floor colors: Dark colors absorb light, making things look smaller and heavier, but they can be depressing when used extensively. Light colors reflect more light and so make things seem larger than they are. They also make things appear farther away. The so-called warm colors are reds, pinks, oranges, corals, golds, yellows and yellow-greens. The cold colors are blues, blue-greens, blue-grays and violets. When making a choice, remember that the color you select will seem stronger when applied to a large surface. In a kitchen, try to use a tile that will make the room cheerful. In a bedroom, choose something that will enhance and blend with the decor of the room. Avoid garishness, but don't avoid it so much that you wind up with drabness.

Q. — We are moving into a new house shortly. It has wide overhangs, but no gutters and downspouts. I notice that many of the other custom-built houses in the same neighborhood have gutters and downspouts. Our builder said they aren't necessary when the overhangs are wide. Is this true?

A. — Wide overhangs help to drop the water from the roof a bit away from the foundation, but there is more to good drainage than that. Some of the factors controlling the flow of water away from the house and the prevention of water inside the house are land that slopes away from the foundation, the water table in your area, the installation of drainage tiles at the bottom of the foundation where required and the type of foundation.

Salado Slates Art Fair For Aug. 5-6

SALADO (Special) — The annual Salado Art Fair has been scheduled for the first weekend in August for the 1978 fair, according to Mrs. Ruth Ann Larsen, general chairman. Aug. 5-6 is the date for the 12th annual fair in the historically famous village of Salado on IH-35 about half way between Waco and Austin.

Mrs. Larsen, a well known artist specializing in decoupage, said "as usual the Salado Chamber of Commerce will stage the art fair along Salado Creek in Pace Park. We will have some exhibitors who have participated in every one of our fairs, some who are first-timers and some who come off and on."

Artists in every media and style may enter the judged fair. Reservations will be limited to about 175. Those interest may write Mrs. Ruth Ann Larsen, care of the Salado Chamber of Commerce, Salado, 76571.

The fair, held last year in late September, has always been sponsored by the chamber of commerce of the unincorporated village. Staging the art fair involves most of the residents of the community in more than a dozen committees ranging from setting up exhibits booths to policing the area and staffing foods concession stands.

Needlework Bouquet Displays Special Thought For Mother

Actually, meshing different sorts of needlework is an exciting way to broaden your decorating horizons. This is a lovely technique for picking up some of the floral highlights in your design. Simply embroider over the neatly aligned points of your canvas, keeping to the repetition of one small flower shape throughout.

For best results, you should give some thought as to how the crewel will be worked into your canvas. And give special attention to where you will place your stitches.

Colonial American seamstresses more than likely learned their colors from the Indians. The earliest crewel was sewn onto bleached white linen in indigo shadings of blue. Saffron yellows, walnut husk browns, and pokeweed berry violets soon after joined a garden palette of favorite yarn dyes.

Sharing in the colors used by our earliest American women is yet another way in which you can make this project as full-blooming as springtime, and a bright thought for mother, to count for an even happier looking home.

A Good Mother is available in a kit containing a 14-mesh printed canvas, cotton floss, and Persian wool yarns. The finished size is 9" x 12", and the solid oak frame shown here is also available.

Order A Good Mother No. 14574 for $9.99 plus $1.35 postage and handling. Order Kt and Frame No 14575 got $16.98 plus $1.75 postage and handling.

Album Contains Many Pictures From Holmes' World Journeys

By IRVING DESFOR
Associated Press Writer

Today, in a space-age world of automatic photography and jet plane travel, it's hard to comprehend the enormous difficulties endured and overcome by pioneers in travel photography at the turn of the century.

Do you remember the American legend in travel photography who brought pictures of peoples and sights from around the globe to the nation's hamlets and cities for more than 50 years?

In the past two decades since his death in 1958, the name and fame of Burton Holmes has become gradually obscure but now, at last, a magnificent album of his photographs and experiences has been published.

"The Man Who Photographed The World — Burton Holmes: Travelogues 1892-1938," selected and edited by Genoa Caldwell, is an impressive art book by Harry N. Abrams, New York ($25). It includes a perceptive introduction by Irving Wallace and is illustrated by 340 photographs of which 40 are full-page color plates.

In 1883, at age 13, Holmes bought his first camera. He became a full-fledged amateur fan, which meant doing his own darkroom work. Photography became his lifelong involvement for 75 years until his death at age 88.

Another early passion was the desire to travel — it didn't much matter where. He wanted to see and photograph the fascinating sights and interesting people in the next county, a neighboring state, another country or a different continent.

At 16, Holmes quit school to accompany his grandmother on his first trip to Europe, camera in hand. In 1890, another trip abroad became the basis for his first travel-slide talk presentation. It was impressive enough to be done as a public show and earned $350 for his Chicago Camera Club. Two years later, he made a five-month photo tour of Japan during which some of his slides were exquisitely hand-colored by Japanese artists.

The depression of 1893 made him face the necessity of earning money. Rather than "go to work," he put together a slide show on Japan, hired a hall, and sold tickets for two public shows. They were his first "professional" appearances. They were sellouts, and his career as "The Travelogue Man" was successfully launched.

What followed is best summed up by Irving Wallace in the introduction, reprinted from an article he wrote in 1947 and which remains the definitive summation:

"Burton Holmes, a brisk, immaculate, chunky man with gray Vandyke beard, erect bearing, and precise speech, is one of the seven wonders of the entertainment world. As Everyman's tourist, Holmes has crossed the Atlantic Ocean 30 times, the Pacific Ocean 20 times, and has gone completely around the world six times. He has spent 55 summers abroad and recorded a half-million feet of film of those summers. He was the first person to take motion picture cameras into Russia and Japan. He witnessed the regular decennial performance of the Passion Play at Oberammergau im 1890, attended the first modern Olympics at Athens in 1896. He rode the first Trans-Siberian train across Russia and photographed the world's first airplane meet at Rheims.

"As the fruit of these travels," Wallace said, "Burton Holmes has delivered approximately 8,000 illustrated lectures that have grossed, according to Variety magazine, $5 million in 53 winters.

"His travelogues have won him such popularity that he holds the record for playing in the longest one-man run in American show business. In five-and-a-half decades past, Burton Holmes has successively met the hectic competition of big-time vaudeville, stage, silent pictures, radio and talking pictures, and has survived them all."

Burton insisted he was a performer, not a lecturer, with his travelogues. It's a word he coined and defined: "Travelogue — the gist of a journey, ground fine by discrimination, leavened with information, seasoned with humor, fashioned in literary form and embellished with pictures that delight the eye, while the spoken story charms the ear."

In a typical season, Holmes made 187 appearances, starting in San Francisco in September 1945 and winding up in New York in April 1946. People paid up to $1.50 each to attend his shows at a time when the best Hollywood movies could be seen for a dime. He averaged six travelogues a week, spoke for two hours at each. In his entire career, Holmes missed only two college dates due to severe laryngitis. Even when an auto accident in Finland left him with broken bones, he appeared in a wheelchair to fulfill his 1939 schedule of 129 engagements.

When motion pictures and Hollywood's rising popularity loomed as a competitive threat, he didn't fight — he joined forces. Holmes contracted to make 52 travel shorts per year from 1915 and 1921. Later, his travelogues were released in four languages. In 1933 he made his radio debut and in 1944 made his first appearance on television.

Korea Issue May Return To U.N.

By ROBERT CRABBE

TOKYO (UPI) — North Korean President Kim Il Sung has put his best diplomats on the road in Africa and Asia in quest of supporters for another fight over the Korea question in the United Nations.

If their canvass is successful, next autumn may bring a renewal of U.N. debate on the issue of withdrawal of American troops from South Korea.

Dithering over the Korean question in 1975, the U.N. general assembly actually passed two conflicting resolutions. One called on the United States to bring its 40,000 servicemen home from South Korea. The other urged them to stay.

The "Yankee Go Home" resolution won by 10 votes with the backing of

Analysis

North Korea's friends in the Communist bloc, Arab countries and the third world. The North Koreans have been anxious to get the measure passed again, by an increased majority if possible.

However, the question did not come up at the U.N. in 1976 and 1977. In 1976, North Korean troops attacked American soldiers at Korea's Panmunjom truce area, and killed two of them in a dispute over trimming a tree. Later that year most of the staff members of North Korean embassies in Denmark, Sweden and Norway were expelled in a smuggling scandal. North Korea was warned by its allies that timing for another U.N. debate was not good.

Even if the resolution gets through the general assembly again, it is sure to be disregarded by the U.S. government. Despite its plan to bring most American troops home from Korea, the Carter administration remains committed to defense of it's South Korean ally.

The North Koreans know that. What they want are the diplomatic advantages that would come from a U.N. rejection of the American presence in Korea.

No country in the world is too small to escape North Korea's attention — or South Korea's for that matter — if it has a vote in the United Nations.

Kim, 65, who has ruled North Korea since its birth in 1945, continues to make unification of Korea under Communist leadership his life goal. The foreign policy aim of the United States is division of Korea for the present, as has been agreed to by East and West Germany. Kim has always rejected this idea.

In the 25 years since the 1950-53 Korean War, the expensive diplomatic battle between the two Koreas has spread to every region of the world. South Korea now has diplomatic representatives in 70 countries and North Korea in 66.

It is a severe financial drain for both countries. Many of the embassies are in capitals that would be of little concern to either Korea were it not for the struggle between them.

To the North Koreans' dismay, there has been a slow tendency in recent years for countries to recognize both Koreas, which is what the U.S. State Department wants. In fact, the two hostile Korean governments now confront each other in India, Singapore, Zaire and 31 other countries where they keep embassies or consulates.

North Korean vice premier Chong Jun Ki launched the current vote offensive Feb. 1 with a five-week tour that took him to Mali, Cape Verde Islands, Guinea-Bissau, the People's Republic of the Congo, Sao Tome and Principe, and finally Angola.

Chong was followed by North Korea's top foreign policy expert, vice president Pak Sung Chul, 65. Pak, who has been both foreign minister and premier in his time, swept through South Yemen, Zambia, Mozambique, Madagascar, Tanzania and Pakistan, picking up assurances of support. Kang Ryang Uk, 73, was packed off to canvass Nepal and Bangladesh. Several other North Koreans of lesser prominence were on the wing in Africa and Asia at the same time.

From February to mid-March, they covered 13 African countries and seven in Asia.

DR. LAMB

Changes Come With Age

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband has a severe problem. He is 80 and has always been a very hard worker and still is on his feet, taking care of the garden, mowing the yard and we have a big yard. He is not fat at all and only weighs 155 pounds. He eats well.

His problem is he's so forgetful. He forgets where he puts his tools and gets furious when I don't agree with him that people come and steal them.

What should I do to help him get over this? I'm at my wits end some times. He wants me to agree with him, and I just can't when I know it's not true.

DEAR READER — I wish there were a good answer to that problem. He is having personality changes that come with age and changes have undoubtedly occurred in the circulation to his brain. We see that all the time when wonderful people suddenly develop entirely different behavior.

You are doing the right thing. It doesn't help when a person is already having trouble separating fact from fantasy to reinforce the fantasy. One of the recommended approaches to elderly people is to always bring them back to reality. When they think Aunt Minnie is visiting and she has been dead for 50 years you must tell them firmly no it is not Aunt Minnie. By constantly helping them to know reality they are able to relate better to things as they really are.

And there are no good medicines that really do much good either, I'm sorry to say. I hope that as we learn more about aging and the chemical reactions involved in memory and personality patterns that a great deal more can be done one day than we are now able to do. It is also good that your husband keeps active. That will help him too, even if he does forget where he put his tools.

I am sending you The Health Letter 1-7, Perpetual Youth, Aging. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 17-year-old boy. My hair is receiding at the temples. Baldness does not run in our family. Is this because I am lacking something in my diet?

DEAR READER — If every case of baldness were caused by a dietary deficiency there would be a lot of dietary problems around. Diet — particularly lack of protein — can cause baldness. Hair will fall out in people who are on an overly restricted calorie intake and crash diets to lose weight.

Baldness is a symptom. Think about that for a minute. It is not a diagnosis. If it occurs with no logical reason — such as age or hereditary patterns — you should see a dermatologist. He can examine your scalp and be sure you don't have a medical problem that may be a factor in losing hair. I might add that hair can fall out from a recent illness, after childbirth — you don't need to worry about that — surgery and sometimes in patches from the scalp as an indication of emotional stress.

Many young men do start having male pattern baldness early in life. It is thought to be related to hormone balances and how the hormones affect the hair follicles in the scalp.

FDA May Ease Rules On Marijuana

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is looking again at easing rules for use of marijuana in medical research and treatment.

The government says LSD and heroin have no medical value, but marijuana has been used to ease eye pressure in glaucoma patients and help cancer victims avoid nausea during chemotherapy.

The National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws and some researchers contend that government restrictions discourage research on medical uses of marijuana.

Several members of the FDA's Controlled Substances Advisory Committee told the panel in November that they personally had trouble getting federal permission for marijuana experiments.

An official of the National Institute on Drug Abuse admitted that even his agency has had trouble arranging clinical studies.

Doctors currently need approval from the institute, the FDA and the Drug Enforcement Administration for any marijuana research.

The institite supplies the drug from its own five-acre field at the University of Mississippi in Oxford, and the cigarettes are rolled under strict security at the Research Triangle Institute in North Carolina.

The marijuana reform group's proposal would permit some government controls and bookkeeping but allow pharmacies to dispense the drug with a prescription.

Meanwhile, a government research chemist said this week the average, occasional smoker of marijuana is unlikely to run any risk from smoking pot contaminated by the herbicide paraquat.

Richard Hawks of the institute said that for heavy users, the possibility of lung damage is "small but real."

The Mexican government sprays the toxic herbicide on marijuana plants to destroy them. An estimated 60 percent of the marijuana sold illegally in the United States comes from Mexico, and federal officials fear that some is contaminated by paraquat.

Carter Proclaims April Cancer-Control Month

WASHINGTON (AP) -President Carter proclaimed the month of April as cancer-control month, calling cancer probably the most feared disease.

In a proclamation, the president said statistics indicate that 700,000 cases of cancer will be diagnosed in the United States this year and that 390,000 Americans will die of the disease in the same period.

He encouraged medical groups to educate people on cancer and "help them to take advantage of available resources to prevent needless suffering and death."

Sled Dog Race Nears Finish

By PEGGY ANDERSEN

UNALAKLEET, Alaska (AP) — The ushers look like specters out of the st, slicing through blowing snow, their nd-burned faces framed by hoods of , wolverine, bear and seal.

Behind teams of yowling dogs, they are uggling along the last leg of the 1,049-le-long Iditarod Trail Sled Dog race m Anchorage to Nome. The winner is pected to reach the finish line on me's Front Street this weekend.

On Thursday, the racers welcomed a Si-rian cold wave that had moved in as ey crossed the Yukon River toward the ering Sea. At this tiny coastal town 803 les north of the starting point, temper-ures plummeted from the uncomforta-y warm 20s and 30s to 80 below zero in ing winds.

Most relieved by the cold break were e sled dogs, plagued in the first 10 days the race by dehydration and feet swol-n by soft snow collecting between their e pads.

"They'll streak if it'll keep cold ough," said Emmitt Peters of Ruby. They just aren't warm weather dogs."

Before the front hit, the dogs panted in eir harnesses at check points and many simply refused to drink. A few mushers forced water into the stomachs of their dogs with hoses attached to bottles.

"What else can you do if they don't drink?" asked Joe Redington Sr. of Knik, the founder of the grueling race.

"If that's what it takes to keep a dog going, I'd sooner send him home," retorted Sonny Lindner of Johnson River.

As the leaders of the 38-team field moved through the blowing snow and low hills on the outskirts of Unalakleet, they were greeted by the cheers of a small crowd. Picking up the smell of town, the dogs quickened their pace, knowing rest and food lay ahead.

But the mushers, concerned with their dogs, have themselves slept and eaten little over the last several days.

"My friends fixed me a goat and sheep stew, but I threw it into the dog pot," said Lindner. "I'm too tired to cook it up for myself. I'm getting by on cookies like always."

Rest stops on the home stretch may last four or five hours but the tension gets to the racers.

The leaders spent 12 hours at Kaltag waiting for someone else to break the trail across freshly fallen snow, a chore which can tire dogs quickly.

Dick Mackey of Wasilla, making his sixth trek to Nome, broke the restlessness at mid-afternoon. "It's time to go," he said suddenly and was gone within the hour.

Mackey and the others won their gamble with the fresh snow. Twelve miles out of town they met two snow machines coming south from Unalakleet — a packed trail lay ahead. They covered the 98 miles to Unalakleet in less than 20 hours.

Rick Swenson of Eureka, the 1977 champion; Mackey; and Peters, the 1975 champ, pulled out of Unalakleet late Thursday night, bound for Shaktoolik, a slim row of houses on the edge of the ice-bound coast 32 miles to the north.

They are expected to push on another 58 miles to Koyuk, nestled against bluffs that edge the coast only 256 miles from Nome.

TWO LEADERS IN RACE — Brothers Eep and Babe Anderson of Takotna and McGrath, Alaska, have been two of the strongest leaders in this year's Iditarod Trail sled dog race. The Andersons have traded the lead a number of times, to each other as well as other mushers in the 1,049 marathon. The race is expected to end this weekend with the arrival of the winning musher in Nome. (AP Laserphoto)

Gen. Brown Accused Of Dereliction

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Army sergeant is formally accusing Gen. George S. Brown of dereliction of duty by allowing military help for the Veterans of Foreign Wars despite the VFW's ban against membership by women.

Sgt. 1st Class Richard W. Klucsarits, stationed at Ft. Huachuca, Ariz., filed a "charge sheet" last month against the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Army confirmed.

Brown is on convalescent leave after prostate surgery that disclosed cancer.

The issue raised by Klucsarits involves the Pentagon-approved practice of supplying speakers, military bands, drill teams and displays at meetings of the VFW and other veterans' organizations.

The charge sheet signed by Klucsarits Feb. 23 alleges that Brown "was derelict in the performance of his duties in that he negligently failed to enforce or require the enforcement" of a Defense Department equal opportunity directive and a related Army regulation.

A separate statement that the Army said was provided by Klucsarits cited directives that he said "prohibit the extension of (the use of) military facilities and resources to ... the Veterans of Foreign Wars, an organization which arbitrarily discriminates on the basis of sex."

The VFW's information office acknowledged that women are not admitted to membership in that organization, which is limited to men who have served overseas in the nation's conflicts.

Asked about its policy, the Pentagon said that "the VFW receives the same support as any veterans or military-related organization."

The Pentagon also said such help is authorized when the support is for "programs oriented to the veteran rather than membership aspects or objectives held by the organization."

However, the Pentagon statement skirted the question of whether this policy conflicts with its anti-discrimination regulations.

Klucasarits' charge was filed under a military law code provision that authorizes any member of the military to accuse any other member of an infraction. The code requires that such a complaint be considered by proper authorities, in this case apparently the secretary of the Air Force.

Singer's Heirs Due Suit Settlement

DALLAS (AP) — The heirs of singer Jim Croce will receive $675,000 in damages in an out-of-court settlement with Roberts Airways and Mustang Aviation of Dallas, according to Tom Davis, lawyer for the Croce heirs.

The heirs of Kenneth Cortese, also killed in the crash, should receive $300,000, a Dallas jury found.

'Potluck Bill' Wins Support In Michigan

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — It was mom, apple pie and the potluck supper against the mighty state of Michigan.

Guess who won.

The Michigan Public Health Department tried and failed Thursday to defend its policies against the state's 1977 Mother of the Year in testimony before a House committee considering legislation that has come to be known as "the potluck bill."

The bill, approved by the House Public Health Committee on a 12-0 vote, would exempt fund-raising potlucks and bake sales from the Michigan Food Service Sanitation Act.

The measure now goes to the full House, where 99 of 100 representatives have signed as co-sponsors.

In addition to that advantage, the bill has:

—The chief sponsorship of Rep. Stanley Powell of Ionia, a well-liked 79-year-old Republican retiring this fall after a lifetime in politics.

—No-compromise advocacy from Powell's 74-year-old wife, Eleanor, who says women who bake pies for bazaars know just as much about clean kitchens as health department inspectors.

—Co-sponsor and Public Health Committee member Rep. Connie Binsfield, R-Maple City, a vocal supporter who was 1977 Michigan Mother of the Year.

"Every bill has to originate somewhere," Powell told the committee. "In this case it came from my wife."

Mrs. Powell said the Food Service and Sanitation Act of 1968 is being increasingly used to harass church groups and other non-profit organizations.

David Hodgson, head of food service and sanitation for the health department, tried vainly to keep fundraisers regulated by the sanitation act.

"If they are offering that potluck ... to the public in competition with, say, an organization that has to meet those (health) standards, we feel they should meet them, too," he said.

Chlorine Gas Leak Injures Two

CARDIFF, N.J. (AP) — More than 100 persons have returned to their homes following injuries to two persons when chlorine gas, apparently used for a swimming pool, leaked from a cylinder, police said.

The evacuation of about 60 mobile homes in a three-block area of Pleasantville Mobile Estates was ordered shortly after noon Thursday when a faulty valve allowed the gas to leak, police said.

"It just released itself, as far as I know," said Brian Dunlevy, civil defense director in Egg Harbor Township. "Potentially we could have had a serious problem. We did have a potential kill situation."

William Reese, 27, of Mays Landing, and John Hayes, 23, of Somers Point, were treated and released at Shore Memorial Hospital, Somers Point, after becoming ill, authorities said.

Ex-Sailor Seeking Veteran's Benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — When an enemy shell burst through the decks of the USS South Dakota during the Battle of Guadalcanal, one of its victims was a 13-year-old boy sailor masquerading as an adult.

The boy, Calvin Graham, lost his front teeth when he was sent tumbling through "three stories of superstructure."

A few months later, Graham's real age was discovered and he was stripped of his veteran's benefits and the medals he had earned and sent home.

Today, 36 years later, two senators and the House majority leader have introduced private bills aimed at restoring those benefits so Graham can get his teeth repaired.

Graham, now 48 and living in Fort Worth, says Veteran's Administration officials "just laugh at me" when he tells them about his dental problems and when his injury took place.

Calvin recalls that when he landed on the deck after the shelling, his two front teeth didn't. But "I didn't go complaining because half the ship was dead. It was a while before they worked on my mouth."

Graham had only recently turned 13. He was 12 when he enlisted on Aug. 16, 1942, after presenting parental consent papers saying he was 17.

Eight months later, his true age revealed, his enlistment was "cancelled." With that went not only veteran's benefits, but the Navy Unit Commendation, the Asiatic-Pacific Campaign Medal with two battle stars and the World War II Victory Medal.

Graham has written President Carter — "because he's a Navy man" — asking for help.

Last fall, W.L. Gulley, director of the White House Military Office, wrote a Fort Worth newspaper explaining that Graham's enlistment under false pretenses prevents him from receiving his discharge through normal channels. Gulley's letter added that Graham's "youthful services were appreciated."

Calvin's plight caused Sens. John Tower, R-Texas, and Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, to introduce a private bill on his behalf. Rep. Jim Wright, the House majority leader from Fort Worth, sponsored a similar bill.

But both bills are stalled in committee. And last week, the Navy wrote the Senate Armed Forces Committee that it opposes the bill.

Wright sees a long battle.

"Characteristically, private legislation takes quite a long time," he said. "The difficulty essentially is that there is such an enormous number of them at any given time pending before the judiciary committee.

"The committee doesn't meet each week to discuss private bills. They wait until they have the departmental reports and set hearings on them."

Wright noted that it took "about three years" to get a private bill passed to restore benefits to an elderly woman whose husband's military records had been misplaced.

That three year delay isn't encouraging to Graham. "The same people behind me now might not be in office then," he said. "I might be dead by then."

Lignite Resources Seen As Huge Energy Source

TYLER (AP) — Railroad commissioner John Poerner predicted Thursday night that plentiful lignite resources will make East Texas preeminent as an "energy supply and economic province" in the final years of the 20th Century.

"East Texas is due to repeat as a mammoth new energy source in the final decades of this century," Poerner said in a speech prepared for the East Texas chapter of the Texas Society of Professional Engineers.

New X-Ray Machine Studied

By ELLEN L. SLOTT

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Thomas Jefferson University is testing a new electron radiography machine that minimizes the primary concern behind breast X-rays — the radiation dosage.

Dr. Gary S. Shaber, director of the university's Breast Diagnostic Center, said the new machine, manufactured by Xonics, Inc., of Los Angeles, can detect tumors with radiation doses 10 times less than the average machine now in use.

"Most hospitals today are probably using about one and a half rads," he said, referring to a unit of radiation dosage. "This machine can probably image breasts at about 150 millirads, which is 10 times less dose."

The National Cancer Institute awarded Shaber, 43, a $400,000 three-year research grant to evaluate the Xonics machine.

So far, Shaber said, 100 women have received breast X-rays with the Xonics and out of those examinations, one tumor was found. He expects to test 2,000 to 3,000 women in the next year before releasing his findings on the machine.

"People are definitely not getting this examination that should be," he lamented while flipping through cards of patients who dropped out of the breast diagnostic program fearing the radiation would cause cancer.

"It's no good to discover a disease that you can't do anything about," he said in frustration. "You must discover a disease in its curable state."

It's nearly twice the cost; $85,000 as compared to $45,000 to $50,000 for conventional machines, and it utilizes a developing process similar to that in copying machines instead of using X-ray film.

A mylar plastic sheet receives the image in static electricity. After various processes, a picture is produced. While the picture is being taken, xenon gas under high pressure is used as an amplifier to lower the dose of X-rays necessary to produce the image.

Although already in use at some medical facilities around the country, Xonics is not yet considered by the NCI to be an acceptable technique.

"We had to confirm the (lower) dose," Shaber said, explaining the first step of the experiment. "Yes, they can give you pictures at a lower dose, but so can film. So more importantly, we have to evaluate how good these pictures are."

If the Xonics' pictures are found to be less clear than those produced by conventional mammography machines, then the fact it has lower radiation doses is immaterial.

Shaber also said Xonics can detect the same size tumor as a conventional machine but is still being tested to determine if it can discover the smallest, earliest signs of a tumor.

"That's what we're trying to find now," he said. "The ability to find these spots is what we're testing. Conventional mammography can detect that now.

"Until I'm convinced that the machine is 100 percent effective in diagnosing cancer," he cautioned, "I would not use it routinely."

Shaber said he is well aware of the risks of radiation, but feels they do not transcend the benefits of the breast examination.

"The best hope for curing breast cancer is discovery when it is small," he said. "There's no question that the X-ray is the best for that. As least half of the tumors that we have seen can only be seen with X-rays."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Unfortunately you cannot take everyone you meet tomorrow at face value. Be wary of a person whom you barely know who offers something for nothing.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Do not permit those who aren't members of your family to poke their noses into your domestic affairs tomorrow. They could really muddy the waters.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) An unwise choice of assistants or coworkers tomorrow could shut down your entire production line. Select those who can help, not hinder.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your earning potential will be good tomorrow, provided you're willing to roll up your sleeves and go to work. There are no easy alternatives.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Persons who are unimportant to your needs tomorrow you'll treat in a winning manner. Unfortunately, those you should cozy up to will be handled abrasively.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Normally when you are told something in confidence you keep what's said to yourself. Tomorrow, however, you may talk too freely to the wrong people.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A little budget-trimming is in order, on projects that have proven unprofitable. Your check stubs will identify the culprits.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In most instances tomorrow you are apt to be a bit lackadaisical. The exceptions: Situations where you'll see you can feather your own nest.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Undue deliberation could work against your best interests tomorrow. Mulling your bright ideas over and over lessens your initial appreciation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Someone anxious to be helpful to you tomorrow may rescind the offer if you appear ungrateful. A "thank you" is all that's required.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone may try to stymie you tomorrow where your ambitions are concerned. Handle him diplomatically, not angrily.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Work you view disdainfully to begin with will be performed in a slipshod fashion tomorrow. A little imagination could make it much easier.

Depression Affects Many Older Persons

HOUSTON (UPI) — A Seattle psychiatrist has reported that depression in the elderly is often misdiagnosed because too many physicians just don't look for it.

Dr. Carl Eisdorfer said most doctors who have elderly patients expect all sorts of organic and functional diseases or creeping senile dementia, but usually ignore depression as a cause for both mental and physical ailments.

Eisdorfer, speaking at a research forum at the Texas Research Institute of Mental Sciences, said specialists now know there are six different types of depression.

With that type of increase, he said, "it is absolutely essential that we consider the problems of older people as problems of our entire society."

"We also have found out people don't have to be crying and sad to be depressed," he said.

He said it was important to keep the elderly active and productive in society.

"The worst problem for today's aged, and something for us to consider as we look ahead to caring for the elderly, is money," he said. "We need to take long looks at improving the pension systems and guaranteeing that the aged in the years ahead can live on more than meager fixed incomes."

Depression is basically dejection or melancholia, but these symptons may be masked due to older people's exaggeration of physical conditions, Eisdorfer said.

Another hurdle in pinpointing depression problems lies in the feelings among the elderly that mental illnesses are evil or somehow represent moral breakdowns.

"Most of our elderly were raised in a time when mental illnesses were extremely embarrassing and they don't want to admit they have anything wrong mentally, so they embellish the physical symptons," he said.

Eisdorfer is chairman of psychiatry and behavioral sciences at the University of Washington School of Medicine and acting director of the university's Institute of Aging.

Hill Criticizes Tax Increases

By United Press International

In the Democratic race for governor, Attorney General John Hill said Thursday property taxes have increased by more than 100 percent in almost half of the state's 1,050 school districts during Gov. Dolph Briscoe's administration.

Hill, who opposes Briscoe in the May 6 Democratic primary, told the Texas State Teachers Association convention in Dallas that Texas school district property taxes have increased at twice the national average.

"In his typical do-nothing style, our governor has let our school district property taxes get out of hand while he was spending long weekends in Uvalde," Hill said.

Hill also discussed federal laws on surface mining in the state. He has filed suit in federal court challenging part of a regulation which he said could be harmful to Texas.

The provision Hill has attacked is a definition of areas to be designated prime farmlands, and techniques by which prime farmland must be reclaimed after surface mining operations are completed.

Hill said experts have told him 90 to 100 percent of Texas' lignite land could be classified as prime farmlands under the federal law. He said the experts say those lands are among the poorest soils in Texas for agricultural purposes.

"A special mining and reclamation technique would be required which our experts say results in worse reclaimed land," Hill said.

"Therefore, it is environmentally unsound."

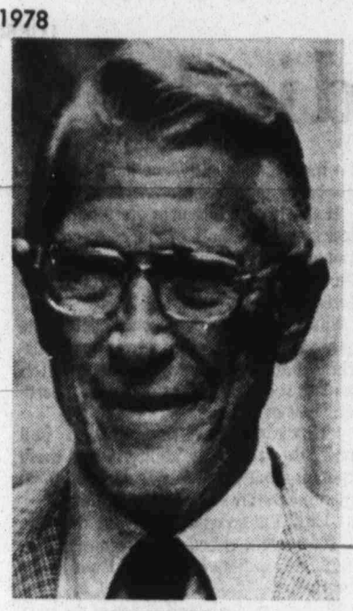
In GOP campaigning Thursday, Bill Clements, a candidate for governor, said he has the support of more than 35 percent of the 1976 GOP voters contacted in a telephone sampling in Dallas — both his and his rival's hometown.

Clements, a Dallas oil drilling company executive, said the telephone poll coupled with a similar sampling taken in downtown Dallas showed 35 percent of the voters contacted supported him, 11 percent opposed him and the rest were undecided. Clements' opponent in the May 6 Republican primary is Dallas attorney Ray Hutchison, a former GOP state chairman and House member.

Meanwhile, in senatorial campaigning, Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Texas, outlined legislation he said let's each farmer write his own farm program. Krueger made the presentation at an Amarillo news conference.

The bill, under the sponsorship of Krueger and Rep. Jack Hightower, D-Texas, would increase target prices for farmers without saturating the market with overproduction of commodities. It provides emergency financial relief for producers of wheat, feed grains and cotton without increasing already existing surpluses.

"The legislation allows for a graduated increase in the target prices tied to an increased percentage of acres set-aside for production," Krueger said.



CULVER KIDD

Indictment Names Senator

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) — State Sen. Culver Kidd has been accused in a federal indictment of trying unsuccessfully to persuade Jimmy Carter, then governor of Georgia, to inform Kidd of gambling raids in his district in exchange for Kidd's support of Carter's state reorganization plan.

The plan passed the state Senate by a one-vote margin with Kidd voting against it.

The three-count indictment issued Thursday charges that Kidd and former Baldwin County Sheriff Buford Lingold conspired to obstruct enforcement of state gambling laws between 1964 and 1974.

It says Kidd, a Milledgeville Democrat, asked then-state Senate Majority Leader Eugene Holley in 1972 to obtain prior information about gambling raids in Baldwin County from Carter.

The indictment says after Kidd was told by Holley that Carter had "angrily rejected" the proposal, Kidd telephoned Ray Pope, director of public safety, and told him that a deal had been worked out with Carter in which Pope was to provide advance notice of any Georgia Bureau of Investigation raids.

Kidd said President Carter could clear him of the charges and asked that Carter be questioned. Lingold could not be reached for comment.

The White House had no comment Thursday night on the indictment. But federal law bars subpoena of a sitting president.

Neither Holley nor Pope would comment on the indictment although Pope, now police chief at Jackson, Miss., said he had testified before the grand jury.

John Young To Make Fifth Flight

By JAMES L. OVERTON

HOUSTON (UPI) — Astronaut John Young, a veteran of four manned space flights who has spent 20 hours on the moon itself, is scheduled to become the first man to fly in space five times.

His opportunity will come aboard the first orbital flight of the Space Shuttle in the late spring of 1979.

Young, chief of the astronaut office at the Johnson Space Center, was named Thursday along with civilian astronaut Robert L. Crippen, who has never flown in space.

Joe H. Engel, 45, a former X-15 pilot who flew the first shuttle test flights last year, and Richard H. Truly, 40, also a shuttle pilot who previously served as support crew for Skylab and Apollo were named backup crew for the first flight.

Young was unavailable for comment. But in an interview with UPI last spring, he said the shuttle program would revolutionize airplane and space flight.

"Flying this vehicle in and out of orbit is going to revolutionize aviation. And it's going to revolutionize spaceflight too," Young told UPI. "But it's going to do even more for aviation, I think, in ways people don't even think about now.

"I think it's going to be a fascinating flying machine. You fly something that's 122 feet long with a 78-foot wingspan out of orbit, that's really going to do things for aviation. I mean that's really going to be different."

The space agency named two other two man crews in unspecified assignments for early orbital flights of the shuttle. They were veterans Fred W. Haise, 45, command module pilot on Apollo 13, and Jack R. Lousma, 42, who flew a Skylab mission. Vance D. Brand, 46, a veteran of the Apollo-Soyuz mission in 1975, and Gordon Fullerton, 41, a shuttle test pilot.

NASA plans six shuttle orbital flight tests. Officials said each will be of increasing complexity to check the nation's first reusable spacecraft.

Young, who was in the second group of astronauts selected by NASA in September 1962, piloted the first manned Gemini mission in 1965, and was command pilot of the Gemini 10 in July 1966.

In a lunar-orbit test mission of the Apollo lunar module in May 1969, he served as command module pilot. Most recently, he was commander of the Apollo 16 lunar landing mission at the Descartes landing site.

Job Lawsuits Consolidated Against Bank

DALLAS (AP) — A plaintiff's attorney estimates that a combined job discrimination suit against Republic National Bank of Dallas, the South's largest, could include 20,000 plaintiffs — a figure bank attorneys call "pure speculation."

U.S. District Judge Patrick Higginbotham combined two suits Wednesday and charged the bank's employment practices have a history of discrimination and appear "infested to the core by racial and sex" bias.

The action consolidated suits lodged by two black female employees of the bank in 1973 and certified them as a joint class action.

Higginbotham's order resulted from a class certification hearing in his court last month on behalf of Joan Rance Vuyanich and Ellen Johnson, who alleged the bank discriminated against them because of their sex and race.

The judge ruled the two women are representative of a class that includes all blacks and all women employed at Republic since Feb. 16, 1969. He also included blacks and women who applied for, but did not receive, jobs at the bank during the same time period.

Attorney Joann Peters, who represents Mrs. Vuyanich, estimated the order would include 20,000 persons, making it one of the largest job discrimination suits to be heard in Texas.

Republic attorney Carlisle DeHay declined comment on the order but called estimates of a possible 20,000 plaintiffs "pure speculation."

Judge Halts Manpower Inquiry

EDINBURG (AP) — Charges against eight persons, including three anti-poverty officials and the mayors of two South Texas towns, will likely "die a natural death," according to a state judge who says he is calling off his court of inquiry.

State District Judge Joe Cisneros said Thursday that he's ending his investigation into alleged misuse of federal Manpower program funds because District Attorney Oscar McInnis would not present evidence from the court to a state grand jury.

Cisneros had convened the court of inquiry to investigate the actititives of the Associated City-County Economic Development Corp., an anti-poverty agency, and the Hidalgo County Manpower Program.

He issued arrest warrants against eight persons, including the three anti-poverty agency officials who had already been indicted on theft charges resulting from a similar court of inquiry in neighboring Cameron County.

"If there is no prosecution before July 1 this year, under the speedy trial act those so-called arrest warrants will die a natural death," Cisneros told reporters. "There is no need for a state grand jury to consider those matters if the district attorney is not going to be interested to take them before the grand jury and seek indictments."

McInnis, who had counseled against the court of inquiry from the beginning, said he felt the investigation fell under federal jurisdiction and that the government had better resources to conduct an investigation.

The district attorney said he felt the state investigation would duplicate federal efforts.

A federal grand jury in Brownsville is already looking into the two Hidalgo County agencies and the Greater South Texas Economic Programs (STEP) of Hebbronville.

Cisneros' court was prompted by a State District Judge Darrell Hester's court of inquiry into the Manpower program in Cameron County.

Cisneros' arrest warrants had been issued against:

— Eliseo Sandoval, former executive director of the ACCEDC, 10 counts of misapplication of funds.

— Nick Ramirez, director of the Hidalgo County Manpower Program, six counts of felony theft and one of official misconduct.

— Greater STEP employee Leonel Fernandez, one count of misapplication of funds.

UT Sorority Suspended For Hazing

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Texas has suspended Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority until Dec. 20, following an investigation prompted by published reports that pledges had been beaten.

David McClintock, assistant dean of students, did not mention beatings in his statement about the investigation.

He said, however, that school policies against hazing had been violated.

McClintock said pledge meetings had been conducted off-campus on Feb. 19 and 26 and March 5.

"Activities at the meetings have included requiring pledges to ingest unpleasant food, to recite sorority history and other information excessively and under duress and to do physical exercises for failure to perform expected tasks. During the pledge period, the pledges have also been required to perform personal errands and tasks for members. These activities are violations of hazing policies," he said.

"Officers and members of the organization have cooperated fully in the investigation and have expressed a determination to revise their pledge program," McClintock said.

Local Prankster Severs Telephone Pole Wires

An apparent case of criminal mischief-sabotage had police baffled after someone reportedly cut guy wires on a utility pole, causing it to fall across a section of Quaker Avenue late Thursday.

Luckily, no one was injured when the pole, which held telephone and railroad lines, fell in the 1900-block of Quaker Avenue about 7:45 p.m.

According to reports, a pair of 36-inch bolt cutters was found at the scene, and police said two guy wires had been severed.

An attendant at a nearby service station told officers he noticed the pole falling, but saw no one in the immediate vicinity at the time.

The damage and repair estimate was set at $3,500.

Alton Travis Leach of 6801 19th St., No. 40, told police he lost $1,000 worth of clothing to whoever broke a window on his vehicle parked in the 1700-block of 4th Street Thursday.

According to Ernest Amaya of 2613 E. 19th St., someone kicked open a door at his home Thursday and got away with his television and wallet, together valued at $128.

And police, for some reason, did not believe the story of a 49-year-old Lubbock man Thursday afternoon when he said the city was paying him to hold up a stop sign in the 200-block of Temple Avenue.

A 20-year-old Lubbock optician told police she had left her apartment Thursday, gone to the parking lot to get in her car and was unlocking the doors when a man walked from behind another car.

The stunned woman said the man walked around to the passenger side of her car as she jumped in her vehicle and locked the doors.

Later, the woman told police the man had short hair and bushy eyebrows.

Meanwhile, a 51-year-old hairdresser told police a booth mate at a local bar Wednesday began going through her purse as though searching for a cigarette lighter, but later the woman said she realized the man may have stolen $2,800 from her clutch.

Officer Jim Bob Griffin of the police juvenile division said he was called as a back-up for two officers who were attempting to make a routine arrest at a city residence Thursday morning.

In his report, Griffin said he and a burglary detective had been given permission to search the residence for a youngster suspected of burglary.

Detective Roland Ralston reportedly found the 16-year-old hiding beneath a bed moments later, and the youth was told he'd need to come to police headquarters for questioning.

The youngster, Griffin said, backed against a wall in a defensive position and indicated he would not accompany the officers. As the men approached him to make the arrest, Griffin said the teenager threw his fists up as if he would strike.

He did—Griffin said. The youngster was arrested on suspicion of having struck Griffin two times and having used abusive language towards the officers.

Ironically, the young man's older brother had been arrested hours earlier on suspicion of stealing hubcaps.

An off-duty Lubbock policeman said he was working at the John Knox Village early Thursday when he saw a suspicious vehicle, occupied by a young, Mexican-American driver and a black passenger.

The car reportedly approached the area through a non-public driveway, arousing the officer's suspicion.

The officer noted that the car's occupants were much too young to be in the area, since the complex is occupied primarily by retirees.

The youngsters reportedly were in possession of a stack of allegedly stolen hubcaps. Both youths were arrested.

The story didn't turn out so well for three other Lubbockites, however, as Laura Pearcy of 4305 17th St., Lydia Valdez of 2605 E. Colgate St. and M. G. Kelly of 6218 36th St., all reported stolen hubcaps Thursday.

Someone apparently broke a lock on a rear garage door at Bill Winner's 2220 22nd St. address Tuesday or Wednesday, then rolled his $4,000 Harley-Davidson motorcycle away.

George E. Cire of 2324 9th St. also lost a cycle this week. His $130 bike was taken sometime Wednesday or Thursday.

Charles Burke of Midland said someone stole his tool box and its contents, valued at $300, from his pickup truck while it was parked in a motel lot at 6011 Ave. H Thursday.

An 18-year-old Texas Tech University co-ed said someone broke into her car recently while it was parked in a lot in the 2400-block of 16th Street. Taken was a CB radio and a .38-caliber pistol, she said, property worth about $300.

'Mild' Rock Festival Planned In California

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A decade ago, portions of the population put flowers in their hair and spent weekends at places like Woodstock, Altamont and Watkins Glen.

Little today compares with the spontaneous craziness of the rock festivals of the 1960s when young people threw Frisbees, played in the mud and, weather permitting, shed their blue jeans and work shirts to commune with nature.

Two rock promoters are trying to recapture some of the feeling Saturday with a carefully planned show called "California Jam II."

It is a true late '70s event — pre-packaged, planned to the last detail — including projections as to how many hot dogs the celebrators will eat, how much water they will drink and how many Port-O-Lets they will need after the hot dogs and water.

Most of all it is supposed to be safe.

A thousand collegiate jock-types, not the Hell's Angels that roughed crowds at Altamont, will provide security at Ontario 40 miles from here when 200,000 or so people gather for California Jam II.

For a $12 fee they get a day of rock by above-average bands, though not rock's giants, who will be wheeled on stage on railroad tracks to avoid lulls that might entice spectators to become participants.

ABC television will be there to catch it all on tape, for a special to air sometime in May.

The first "California Jam," in 1974, grossed $2 million and suggested to co-producers Lenny Stogel and Sandy Feldman that a market existed for another go-around.

When it was suggested to Stogel that some found Jam I boring, he said: "If you mean it was organized, that's correct, and that's the way we do our business. We never want what happened at other places, like Altamont (where over-zealous bikers, acting as bouncers, killed a spectator) to happen at a California Jam."

The change in rock festivals is seen in the willingness of Ontario, a city of about 66,000, to play host. Years ago when a rock concert came to town, city fathers in such places often went for restraining orders.

Now, notes Ontario City Manager Roger Eubanks, "the city license ordinance calls for $5,000-a-day fee plus 25 cents a head ... about $37,000."

The main concern with rock festivals these days, he said, is with the traffic jams they create.

Building Permit Increase Noted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the homebuilding industry continued to struggle through February, an increase in building permits indicates there may be a jump in construction in the near future, industry sources say.

The Commerce Department said Thursday that housing starts during February were at an annual rate of 1,580,000, up 2 percent from January, but 10 percent below the pace a year ago.

Adverse weather conditions were blamed for much of the slowdown in the first two months of 1978.

Michael Sumichrast, chief economist for the National Association of Homebuilders, said two-thirds of the slowdown in building can be blamed on the weather. He noted that much of the slowdown in housing starts have been in the Northeast where weather has been severe.

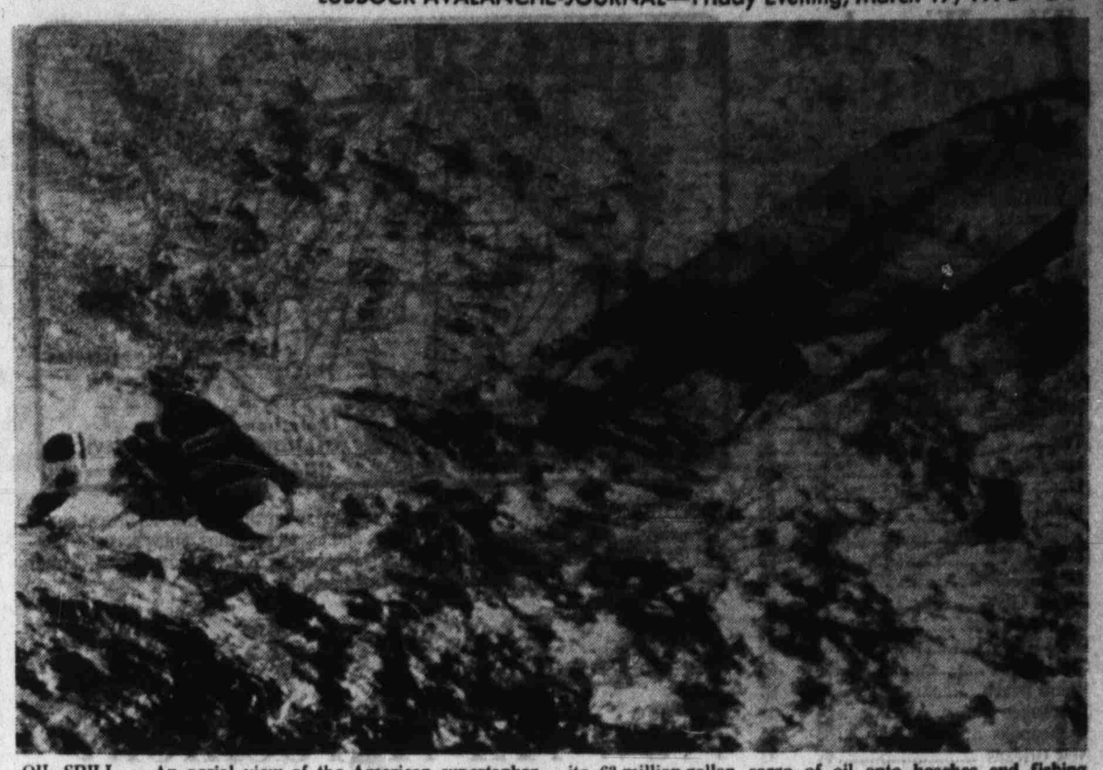
But Sumichrast said increased interest rates and a slowdown in investment capital were also at fault.

He said as spring approaches housing starts will increase and he expects about 1,155,000 new homes being built during the year. There were just under two million housing starts in 1977, a good year for the industry.

State Leaders Urge Nationalized Tracks

WASHINGTON (AP) — A number of state leaders are urging Congress to nationalize railroad tracks and roadbeds to prevent further derailments of the kind that have taken 15 lives in recent weeks.

Tennessee Gov. Ray Blanton and Massachusetts Lt. Gov. Thomas P. O'Neill III both admitted on Thursday that nationalization would cost billions of taxpayers dollars, but said it is needed to maintain safety and protect lives.



OIL SPILL — An aerial view of the American supertanker Amoco Cadiz, which broke in two today on rocks off France's Brittany coast is shown. The 233,690-ton tanker began leaking its 63-million-gallon cargo of oil onto beaches and fishing grounds almost immediately. The wreck has the potential to be the worst tanker spill on record. Oil Pours Onto French Coast From Wrecked Supertanker

BREST, France (AP) — The American supertanker Amoco Cadiz, carrying 63 million gallons of oil, broke in two this morning on rocks off France's Brittany coast and was pouring oil onto beaches and fishing grounds.

The wreck has the potential to be the worst tanker spill on record — if all tanks are ruptured and it discharges its full load. But officials could not yet forecast the size of the spill.

Even before the 233,690-ton ship broke up three miles offshore, leaking oil had reached more than a mile of coastline.

Authorities at this French Atlantic port ordered a full pollution alert in a bid to save the lobster-rich coastline, but navy ships loaded with chalk and detergent were unable to move in between the supertanker and the shore because of rocky obstructions in the water.

It was the fourth time the Brittany coast has been polluted by a tanker spill since 1967, when the Torrey Canyon broke up 100 miles to the northwest, off England's southwest coast.

The Torrey Canyon, the worst shipwreck spill on record, poured 29 million gallons into the sea. The oil washed ashore in both England and France.

Helicopters took 41 persons, including a woman, off the 1,067-foot Amoco Cadiz during the night, leaving only the captain and first officer on board the unlit vessel.

It was not known immediately whether they were in serious danger.

Maritime authorities reported that the front section of the ship, listing heavily, was drifting toward rocks in the direction of the summer resort of Portsall. Officials who flew over the wreckage said it was surrounded by oil extending out for about two miles.

The ship ran aground on the Portsall Rocks, 25 miles north of Brest, after the steering mechanism failed during a bad storm late Thursday, maritime authorities said. An attempt by the West German tug Pacific, based in Brest, to keep the ship off the rocks failed when the tow line snapped.

Police and firemen were besieged with hundreds of complaining telephone calls overnight as fumes from the leaking oil drifted ashore.

A maritime administration spokesman said the tanker was listing 30 degrees.

He said the ship, which was built five years ago in Spain, was carrying 216,000 tons — 63 million gallons — of Middle East crude oil and 1.2 million gallons of engine fuel.

The tanker drifted on the rocks a few miles from where the supertanker Olympic Bravery went ashore and broke up two years ago. The 275,000-ton Olympic Bravery, the biggest ship ever wrecked, was in ballast at the time, but its engine oil caused major damage to the picturesque coastline.

Last year the lobster beds and tourist beaches of Sein Island, 30 miles south of Portsall Rocks, were saved after a six-month battle to destroy oil trapped in an East German tanker, the Bohlen, which sank offshore killing 26 crewmen.

Hot water was pumped into the wreckage, forcing the residue of its 10,000-ton cargo to the surface, where it was burned. Two divers and a soldier died in the $30 million operation.

Flynt Remains On Critical List

ATLANTA (AP) — Hustler magazine owner Larry Flynt, gunned down March 6 during a break in his obscenity trial, remained on the critical list, but doctors said his condition improved slightly.

"Mr. Flynt has remained stable through the day with a very slight improvement in his general condition. He is alert and comfortable, but is still on the critical list," according to a statement released Thursday by Emory University Hospital.

Flynt and his local attorney Gene Reeves, 47, were shot as they were leaving a Lawrenceville cafe, during a recess in the trial. He is accused of distributing obscene materials.

Suffering from pneumonia and an infection resulting from bullet wounds, Flynt has been breathing with the aid of a respirator for the past several days. His legs are paralyzed as a result of the gunshot wounds.

Reeves, who also has been having breathing difficulties, remained in guarded condition at Button Gwinnett Hospital in Lawrenceville. Doctors said he showed slight improvement Thursday.

NAVAL MUSEUM

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — A former city poorhouse, which became the first building of the Naval War College, will soon be opened to the public as the college's museum. Among the manuscripts on display will be an 1869 diary kept by Alfred Thayer Mahan, the school's second president and one of America's greatest naval strategists.

Bank Loans Found Not In Violation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A survey of preferential loans to bank insiders reveals no prevalent abuse and requires no corrective legislation, Federal bank regulators say. Some members of the Senate Banking Committee are complaining that the $4 million survey was a waste of time and taxpayers money.

Committee chairman Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., originally ordered the study by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., because the three federal agencies that regulate banks had no statisitcs on such abuse.

Danger Increasing For U.S. Reporters

NEW YORK (AP) — There is increasing danger for U.S. reporters overseas, according to a correspondent arrested and expelled by the Soviet Union, but "the foreign correspondent will not become an extinct species."

Los Angeles Times reporter Robert C. Toth this week cited his own case and that of The Associated Press correspondent Michael Goldsmith as examples of what can happen to U.S. reporters overseas.

Soviet secret police questioned Toth for five days before he was expelled. Goldsmith was beaten and shackled during his month-long imprisonment in the Central African Empire on charges of espionage, security breaches and insulting the emperor. Goldsmith denied the charges.

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain was forecast today for the Pacific Northwest coast. Snow was forecast for the northern Rockies and adjacent Plains. Snow was also forecast for New England. Most of the country was expected to have sunny skies with mild weather but most of the East will be cold. (AP Laserphoto Map)

U.S., Britain Reach New Air Agreement

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — President Carter announced today that the United States and Britain have reached new air agreements which will lead to lower fares and liberalized charter service between the two countries.

"These two agreements constitute a major step forward in implementing our key objective in international aviation — to provide the traveling public with a wide choice of low fares on scheduled flights," Carter said in a statement.

The low-fare agreement was a victory for the United States in the negotiations which began last Monday in Washington. The British had insisted on confining cheap fares to the New York-London market, and last week blocked Braniff Airways from inaugurating its Dallas-Fort Worth to London service because it offered cut-rate tickets.

Braniff now will be free to start this service.

The Civil Aeronautics Board had recommended that Carter suspend British Caledonian Airways' London-Houston service if Britain continued to bar Braniff's flights. Carter held off action on this pending the outcome of the negotiations.

British Airways, anticipating successful conclusion of the negotiations, this week filed for low-fare flights between Britain and seven U.S. cities outside New York.

Carter said the agreement will make it possible for airlines to offer budget, standby and advance purchase fares between Britain and these 14 U.S. gateway cities: Anchorage, Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas-Fort Worth, Detroit, Houston, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Seattle and Washington-Baltimore.

Details of the charter agreement were not released immediately, but they are intended to greatly simplify service between the two countries. Negotiators principally ironed out differences that arose during last year's dicussions that led to signing of the Bermuda 2 air transport agreement.

The president said the agreements "demonstrate once again that we can work out differences with our most important aviation partner."

The agreements will be in effect for a year. They will be reviewed next fall.

As an example of what fares might be available, here are some of the one-way standby prices to London proposed this week by British Airways: $162 from Washington, $143 from Boston, $151 from Philadelphia, $169 from Detroit, $171 from Chicago, and $227 from Los Angeles or San Francisco. Fares back to the U.S. would be slightly lower because of the monetary exchange rate.

The Braniff cut-rate fares from Dallas-Fort Worth to London run from $349 roundtrip on standby to $479 roundtrip with a 21-day advance purchase.

Agency Plans Shutdown Of Mars Spacecraft

SPACE CENTER (AP) — Space agency officials plan to shut down the still-producing spacecraft on Mars next February and at the same time put out of business the two spacecraft in orbit around the planet.

R. Thomas Young, director of planetary programs at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Washington, reported the plans here Thursday.

Limited funds and money that can be better spent in other areas were cited as the reasons. These were the same ones given last year when working instruments on the moon were cut off.

"There comes a point, when it becomes a matter of priorities," Young said. "It becomes a a matter of whether we can more effectively use these funds for other science."

Young, attending the Ninth Lunar and Planetary Science Conference at the Johnson Space Center, also discussed the planetary program for which the agency has money to study.

The two orbiters will be nearly out of the gas that is used to control them at the time picked to turn them off, he said.

The landers, powered by small nuclear generators, have been at work on Mars since the summer of 1976.

They are still operating meteorological stations which take the temperature, pressure and wind velocity.

One of two seismometers is still working, photographs are still being taken and the soil sampler still works.

He said programs which have top priority include one to send spacecraft to Venus to make radar pictures of the surface. He said consideration also is begin given to sending spacecraft to Saturn. The project would include one spacecraft to orbit the ringed planet and another to probe its central body.

He said another project under consideration is continued exploration of Mars. He said three plans are being studied, an orbiter to completely map the planet, the sending of a roving spacecraft to its surface and a spacecraft that would pick up a sample of Martian soil and return it to earth.

Young, discussing the Viking landers on Mars, says there is a little mystery going on concerning "rocks" that the lander picks up.

"The arm reaches out and grabs them up," he said. "Then it comes back, turns over and empties the scoop. . .but we don't get any rocks."

Ground controllers can see what appears to be small rocks in the Viking photos that are well within reach of the spacecraft's retractable arm, he said. The command is given and the arm grabs the "rocks" and dumps the into the analyzer--but what ends up in the analyzer is Martian dirt.

He speculates the rock-looking things in the photos probably are lightly compacted balls of Martian soil which breaks up when they are dumped.

Ex-Editor Selected To Campaign Staff

AUSTIN (AP) — Jim Lindsey, former newspaperman and retired information director at Texas A&M University, has been named as chairman of the statewide steering committee for Price Daniel Jr.'s campaign for attorney general.

Lindsey was managing editor of the Midland Reporter-Telegram for 10 years. He also had been assistant managing editor of the San Antonio Express and and managing editor of the San Angelo Standard Times.

He is now working in Austin as a publications consultant.

Area Judge Named To New Court Post

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe today appointed Midland County Judge Barbara Culver as judge of the 318th Judicial District. She is replacing Joseph Mims of Midland, who resigned.

Briscoe also appointed Robert Caldwell Sr. of Carrollton and Clarence Emms Jr. of Fort Worth to the Texas State Board of Landscape Architects.

Late Snowstorm Hurts Northeast Celebration

A-J News Services

Not even the Irish could bluff the Winter of '78, which today covered budding green with large accumulations of white in the blizzard-battered Northeast for the third time.

A late winter storm bearing gale-force winds along the New England coast dumped 6 to 12 inches of snow over southern New England and dusted the dirty crusts left by past storms in New York and Boston with 2 inches.

"We've already had enough snow," said Sara Browning, a legislative secretary in Concord, N.H. "Just when I thought it was going to warm up, see what happens — snow."

Gale warnings were posted along the coast from Eastport, Maine, to Watch Hill, R.I. The Coast Guard and private officials worked to empty a barge, loaded with 10.5 million gallons of gasoline, that grounded on a rock early Thursday.

Heavy snow warnings were in effect in southern New England, New Hampshire and western Maine. By late Thursday, 7 inches had fallen on Providence, R.I., with another heavy dose expected today.

Ready to celebrate St. Patrick's Day and eager for spring's official debut next week, some Northeasterners fell into a blue funk because of the storm.

"I hate snow. It's extremely depressing," said Mary Pilkington, another state worker in Concord, N.H.

Snow emergencies were imposed in a number of communities and some evening social and civic activities were either postponed or cancelled. Connecticut's 30,000 state workers were sent home early and most major businesses allowed employees to leave at staggered times.

The result was the less than ususal frenzy of traffic clogged highways, although some minor accidents were reported. Major airports and highways were kept open with little problem.

There were no reports of deaths or serious injuries due to the storm, which was tame in comparison to the blizzards that paralyzed the nation's most populous region and broke century-old records in January and February.

The snow failed to intimidate the New York Irish, who planned their annual St. Patrick's Day parade today. Boston's parade was postponed, not by the latest storm but because of the snow banks still left from the blizzards.

Elsewhere, rain or snow showers peppered the Midwest and Great Lakes region, but dry weather and warming temperatures prevailed over most of the country. A 93 degree reading in Los Angeles sent thousands of Angelenos flocking to the beaches.

Rivers and streams in central and eastern Nebraska, swollen with melted snow and clogged with ice jams, overflowed onto low-lying farm land Thursday, but spared populated areas.

"We're just kind of watching it every few hours," said Dwight Johnson, administrative assistant to the Grand Island city manager. "We're kind of checking water gauges and trying to get a lead time for any water coming through."

In Indiana, the Ohio River was out of its banks Tell City, Newburgh and Mount Vernon and was expected to pass flood stage at Evansville on Monday. Several rivers and streams were at or near flood stage and the Wabash River at New Harmony and Vincennes was approaching flood stage. But no populated areas were threatened immediately.

This weekend's weather will be a blueprint of perfect conditions for picnicking, lolling in the sun and other outdoor activities.

Today's fair skies and expected high temperature in the low 70s will be repeated Saturday, when the mercury will warm to near 80.

No rain clouds are expected to mar the azure skies, and westerly winds will play across the South Plains at 10 to 20 miles per hour Saturday.

The extended outlook for Sunday through Tuesday calls for a carbon copy of today's weather. Precipitation will continue to skirt the South Plains area, and afternoon highs will be in the mid to upper 70s.

Low temperatures for the next several days will hover in the low 40s.

Atheist Files Bingo Suit

AUSTIN (UPI) — Atheist leader Madalyn Murray O'Hair has filed a $1 million federal suit trying to block church-sponsored bingo games.

Her suit accuses state and Travis County authorities of "selective enforcement" of a state law prohibiting bingo games.

Mrs. O'Hair's federal suit names as defendants Gov. Dolph Briscoe, Attorney General John Hill, Travis County District Attorney Ronald Earle, Travis County Judge Jim McMurtry, and Frank Dyson, chief of police.

"Defendants' selective enforcement of this law denies all other citizens, except those participating in church-sponsored bingo, the right to engage in bingo as a game of chance for profit," the suit said.

Mrs. O'Hair's federal suit contends a section of the Texas Penal Code bans bingo games as a fund-raising activity. She charged the authorities with using their positions to help churches violate the law.

She said the authorities preferred certain religious groups to others by permitting the operation of bingo games, in effect, "creating a program of financial aid to certain religious groups."

Saudi Physicist Tours U.S. Solar Energy Centers

Saudi Arabian physicist Hashim Yamani is touring solar research centers in the United States to further his country's policy of hedging its economic bets with solar energy research.

One reason is "because we have a brighter sun and better solar days than elsewhere," says Yamani, dean of the graduate school of the University of Petroleum and Minerals in Dharhan, and holder of a doctorate in physics from Harvard University.

Yamani attended a new solar heating and maintenance course at the New England Fuel Institute this week as the first stop on his U.S. tour.

Why would the nation with the largest oil reserves in the free world be trying to develop solar energy?

"They've got 364 days a year of sunshine. They've got more solar energy than they have oil," said Lewis Bowden of the U.S. Treasury Department's office of international affairs in Washington.

In developing alternatives to petroleum, the Saudis are looking ahead to the time when their reserves dwindle, said Bowden, although he noted that "it's pretty hard to decide when that will be because the oil reserves are so immense."

But another, more pressing reason, he said, arises from Saudi Arabia's location in the world's sun belt, where most of the poor nation's are located.

The Saudis, he said, are trying to develop solar techniques for converting sun power to electricity that would be applicable to small, isolated villages far from conventional electrical generating plants.

FCC Member Ribs Rhetoric

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission says its rules for CBers will be written in plain English as of Aug. 1. But Commissioner Joseph R. Fogarty decided one last fling of bureaucratese was in order.

As the commissioners prepared to approve the plain-English rule Wednesday, Fogarty brought down the house by explaining:

"This endeavor has proven to be a salutary and laudatory exercise in efficacious re-regulation designed to bring government into a more symbiotic and empathetic interrelationship with its mass democratic constituency.

"In a word, this item marks the ascendancy of semantic simplicity over obfuscatory verbiage inimical to the common weal. I am gratified that this collegial body today gives approbation to the felicitous regulatory enterprise concluded herein.

Canal Vote

could offer me that would influence a vote of such magnitude."

Responding to reports that the speaker of the Texas House, Bill Clayton, had said ratification of the treaties will cost Texans jobs, Bentsen said: "I talked to people in Panama and had them develop for me figures as to how much trade went to Texas ports (via the canal) but the key to it is seeing that the canal is accessable. That's what we all want. I believe if the treaties are defeated, we'll have problems insofar as passage. I think you'll see riots and you'll see problems with passage through the canal. I think one of the surest ways to have access to that canal for Texas industry and Texas agriculture is to have the Panamanians have an interest in it.

"Then who's hurt the most if the traffic is stopped? It'll be the Panamanians because they'll be losing revenue that is critical to them. I think passage of the treaties helps insure access to the canal... then we have a 22-year transition period to train the Panamanians before we pass the authority on to them."

SORROW—Two members of a group of San Jose, Calif., high school students on an outing at the beach at Santa Cruz comforted each other while an Army rescue helicopter searched for Gregory Correa, who disappeared under water after jumping off a nearby cliff Wednesday. Workman Suggests Altering Youth Plan

Drawing on his experience on the Texas Youth Council, state senate candidate Don Workman Thursday advocated "reworking" the entire youth system in the state.

Speaking during an open house at his campaign headquarters, Workman noted "over 50 percent of crimes are committed by those 18 and under."

The Democratic candidate said he supported regional detention centers for truants and children in need of supervision.

However, Workman said, serious and repeat offenders should continue to be sent to state training schools.

The Texas Tech University regent also said regional treatment in the area of preventing delinquency needed to be developed.

Also on the subject of law and order, Workman advocated a "much tougher parole system, especially for the habitual offender."

If a person is convicted of a serious crime and picked up again for a like crime, he should be denied bond, Workman said.

"The benefit of the doubt should go to society, not the offender," he said.

Workman predicted the toughest task awaiting the new state senator would be the problem of school finance.

"I think it's time to look at it early in the session and find some kind of a permanent solution," Workman said, noting in the past education has received whatever money and time which remained at the end of a legislative session.

"I'd like to see earmarked funds go to education before they go through the legislative process" so there would be no state strings attached, he said.

He labeled more and more state funds to education a "bad trend leading to more and more governmental control."

Workman said his number one short-term goal as state senator would be revising and updating teachers salaries and benefits to compensate for inflation.

His primary long range goal, he said, would be to speed up the feasibility study of water importation from other states and then to form a committee to promote the acceptance of a plan in Texas and in other states affected by the importation.

Population Shifts Alter Districts

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you really want your vote to carry some weight, move to New York City's 21st congressional district.

That district, located in the South Bronx, has only 188,000 residents of voting age, according to new Census Bureau figures.

By contrast your ballot would be most diluted in the Gold Coast, where Florida's 11th district includes 520,000 voting-age residents.

The new figures list district populations aged 18 and over and not total populations of district. The apportionment of members of Congress is based on total population.

According to the statistics, the average congressional district contains about 348,000 voters, while the total population of the average district should be about 500,000.

Population changes have apparently thrown some districts out of balance, however, with six across the nation including more potential voters than the average district has people.

For several years the Census Bureau has been reporting steady growth in the so-called "Sun Belt" states at the expense of northeastern and north central areas.

Among factors cited for the movement are desires for warm weather, right-to-work laws and lower energy costs, while older metropolitan areas have high crime rates and may lack adequate housing.

District lines are normally redrawn every 10 years, following the regular census reports. The next census is in 1980.

New York's 21st district, populated by low-income blacks and Puerto Ricans, is in the South Bronx.

It is characterized as a relatively new slum, and, according to the 1970 census, 43 percent of the population was under age 18, many in large fatherless families. Median family income is $5,613.

Rep. Robert Garcia, a Democrat, was elected Feb. 14 to represent the district, succeeding Rep. Herman Badillo.

A spokeswoman for Garcia said there has been a "tremendous outflux" from the district. Federal funds were used to demolish many old buildings, but the money ran out and there now are large empty spaces in the district.

The area has demonstrated steady growth with voters moving in from well-to-do suburbs in the Northeast and Midwest. Median family income is $8,995.

There is one similarity to New York's 21st district, though; the congressman is a Democrat. In this case Paul G. Rogers of West Palm Beach, who has served since 1955.

The new census figures, updated to last July 1, sketch a mixed picture of the voting-age populations of the 435 congressional districts across the nation.

Only six districts have more than a half-million potential voters, while 32 number fewer than 300,000 persons aged 18 or over.

Of the six with the most voters, five are in California or Florida. The sixth is the District of Columbia, which elects one non-voting delegate to Congress.

Joining the 11th of Florida in the more than 500,000 voter category is California's 40th district in Orange County with 515,000, one of the nation's fastest growing areas.

Returning to the Sunshine State, the 10th district in South Florida includes 508,000 and that state's 5th district, in central Florida, adds 503,000 possible voters.

Finally, the District of Columbia, which elects a non-voting delegate to Congress, lists 505,000 persons of voting age.

Districts with fewer than 300,000 persons of voting age include:

Alaska, 258,000; California 29th 293,000, 31st 289,000; Georgia 5th 295,000; Hawaii 1st 291,000; Idaho 1st 297,000, 2nd 277,000;

Illinois 1st 265,000, 2nd 298,000, 5th 290,000, 6th 274,000, 7th 255,000; Michigan 1st 284,000, 13th 243,000; Mississippi 2nd 291,000; Missouri 1st 259,000, 5th 293,000; Montana 1st 268,000, 2nd 255,000;

New Hampshire 2nd 294,000; New Jersey 10th 287,000; New York 12th 239,000, 14th 280,000, 19th 292,000, 21st 188,000, 37th 283,000; Ohio 20th 298,000; 21st 251,000;

Social Security Cut Sought By O'Neil

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas O'Neill wants the White House to devise a plan for rolling back future Social Security taxes. But he promises if the Carter administration won't do it, the House will.

O'Neill said many congressmen fear political repercussions from the tax increase they approved last year to take effect in January. The increase is designed to keep the retirement fund solvent.

"I would hope something would come from the White House," O'Neill told reporters. "They are working on this."

MINI-PYRAMID COMPLETED — Japanese and Egyptian workmen eased the capstone onto the top of a 33-foot-high mini-pyramid at Giza Wednesday at the end of a six-week, more-than-$1-million job. Nicknamed "Son of Pyramid" by its makers, the pyramid building was undertaken by Nippon Television Network. The firm said the construction was undertaken in an effort to test various theories as to how the giant pyramids nearby were built. (AP Laserphoto)

NY Fiscal Officer Predicts Problems

By JOHN MOODY

NEW YORK (UPI) — If New York City is allowed to sink, the city's chief fiscal officer warns, it won't go down alone.

In fact Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin said in a letter to governors, senators and congressmen that companies in 40 states stand to lose $418 million owed them if the city goes under.

In a warning issued in a report Thursday, Goldin told elected officials it is "in the best interests of your constituency, as well as of the nation as a whole, to join in this effort to forestall a local and national tragedy."

Goldin said those states would find themselves holding the bag for lost revenues from active contracts totaling $1.26 billion if the city defaults.

Federal seasonal loans to New York expire June 30. The Senate and House banking committees are now considering continued aid, including a Carter administration proposal for $2 billion in federal loan guarantees for New York.

"Without federal guarantees to insure that there will be sufficient revenues in the coming fiscal year and beyond to compensate for the city's inability to borrow in the public credit market, there will be immediate shortfalls that could imperil the city's abilities to pay its vendors," Goldin said.

The report was sent to to six senators, five representatives and seven governors.

New Jersey, New York's neighbor across the Hudson River, stands to lose $172 million now due in obligations.

The loss to New Jersey, Goldin said, would be "roughly equivalent to the sales income that would be lost if every machinery manufacturer of every primary metal producer in the state closed down for a full month."

Pennsylvania, second on the list in amounts owed, would lose $52.7 million due on outstanding contracts. That figure, Goldin noted, means lost income "equal to 200 percent of the losses in coal sales occasioned by the miners' strike."

The 123-page report, similar to one issued in 1975 prior to congressional approval of the original seasonal loan program, lists industries and firms with city contracts which would lose money in the event of a default.

TVA Electric Bills To Be Increased

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Blaming the United Mine Workers strike, the Tennessee Valley Authority has announced its electric bills will jump $1.05 per 1,000 kilowatt-hours next month and reach an all-time high.

"This reflects the added costs of increased power purchases last month from other systems to help stretch our declining coal stockpiles and avoid power shortages during the strike," TVA spokesman Jim Beckham said.

The April hike is in the fuel adjustment charge, which is added to the basic rate schedules of TVA distributors. It is based on the price and amount of outside power and fuel used in February.

Beckham said the TVA had to purchase $29 million worth of power from neighboring utilities in February to prevent its coal stockpiles from dwindling to a critical level. TVA purchased $9 million in outside power in January.

Under the most widely used residential rate schedules, the April increase will raise consumers' bills for the first 1,000 kwh to $27.23, compared with $26.70 in March. April bills in 1977 averaged $22.85 for the first 1,000 kwh.

Film Strengthens Friendship Between Alan Alda, Ellen Burstyn

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Alan Alda and Ellen Burstyn presently find themselves in the most intimate professional situation of their motion picture careers as the costars in "Same Time Next Year."

Actor and actress play lovers in the film adaptation of the hit Broadway play. They are the only two characters in the movie, all of which takes place in a small hotel suite.

It is the story of a satisfying love affair consummated once a year in the same Northern California hotel room over a period of 26 years. They are happily married to other people and each is the parent of three children.

The movie, like the play, is comprised of six of their rendezvous with plenty of comedy, nostalgia, some pathos and insight into love and adultery.

Alda and Miss Burstyn are consummate actors with compelling professional drives. They were virtual strangers when they were signed for the parts by the Mirish Corp.

Because they are forced to spend all day, every day, together on the set — often in love scenes, frequently in bed together as the characters George and Doris — they decided to be friendly off the set.

Director Robert Mulligan rehearsed the stars for two weeks in New York — where both actors make their home — before beginning production in Hollywood.

According to Alda, he and Miss Burstyn met only once before in their lives, casually, at a social event a decade ago.

Now they lunch together every day at Universal Studios. They even insist on holding their interviews in tandem.

"The story, of course, is the relationship between two people," Ellen said. "Very often a central two-character relationship exists in plays or pictures with large casts. Like the mother-son relationship in 'Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore.'

"There is no problem except focusing on the other person. My performance often is in Alan's face. I react to it."

Ellen starred in "Same Time Next Year" for nine months, having opened the stage version on Broadway in 1975. Alda never saw her in the role. But, curiously, he did see his "M-A-S-H" costar, Loretta Swit, in the part. She replaced Ellen in the show.

Ellen's experience on stage in the two-character play is matched by Alda's appearance in "The Owl and The Pussycat," also a two-actor play.

"There are no special problems in a two-character performance except that it takes more energy," he said. "I lost 15 pounds during rehearsals for 'The Owl and the Pussycat.'"

"There are some changes in the film version of this play," Ellen said. "My lover is different, so it is a different experience for me as an actress and an individual. It's like two different personal love affairs.

"Alan plays the role differently than it was played on stage. The translation from stage to film is new to me. I've never done the same role on stage and in a movie.

"The easy part is already knowing the lines. But if you've already done something 500 times, you have to make it feel like it's happening for the first time."

"We have lunch and do interviews together so we can become as good and close friends as we can," Alda said.

"We conscientiously got to know one another as well as possible because if we are going to play two people in love we should be dear friends offstage, too," Ellen said.

"I can only do good work if I'm real with someone. If I can trust them. I have to like someone to let them in. You can't tell a stranger you love him and have any reality. But that doesn't mean if you play 'Medea' you have to kill your children."

"I'm convinced whatever relationship actors have offstage shows up on film," Alda agreed. "If the relationship is warm, it shows. Being able to trade information and feelings is vital without putting up defenses as you do with a stranger. You really have to level with each other. Inevitably signs show up on your face.

"You have to be friends to play friends. In close, you have to know one another well."

Alda has directed a dozen episodes of his "M-A-S-H" series and was delighted to hear that Ellen is becoming a director, too. She will make her debut as a director next September on Broadway with "Loose Ends."

"Bob Mulligan, our director, kids us about three directors working together on this film," Alda said. "But Ellen and I are very obedient."

New Private Eye May Capture Some Of Shaun Cassidy's Fans

By JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Once upon a time one sure sign of incipient middle age, along with declining eyesight and increasing waistline, was when the cops and ballplayers began to look too young.

They never mentioned private eyes, but NBC proposes one that should set the Shaun Cassidy fan clubs aflame. He's "Richie Brockelman, Private Eye," whose five-week series premieres tonight at 8 p.m., CST.

Since these are the unbelievable adventures of a nice Jewish boy in Los Angeles (they say he's 23 but he doesn't look old enough to vote), why introduce the show on St. Patrick's night?

Maybe because the title role is played by Dennis Dugan. Why cast anyone named Dennis Dugan as a nice Jewish boy? Revenge, maybe, for when CBS cast Judd Hirsch as an Italian cop named Delvecchio.

Anyhow, in its first episode, the show proposes that Richie's accomplished older brother, Sydney (David Spielberg), has just moved with his family from New York City to Los Angeles, where he was named controller of a construction firm.

When the police come to the Brockelman home, everybody naturally thinks it's for Richie. As the show opens Richie is picked up for grand theft-auto after he mistakenly repossesses a paid-up automobile that belongs to the wife of a Los Angeles police detective.

But this time the warrant calls for the arrest of Sydney, honor student, champion fencer and general Brockelman hero. The charge is embezzlement, and that's for starters.

Richie sets out to clear his brother, much to the dismay of their father. He succeeds in the kind of complicated plot that would be right at home in an old Perry Mason script.

Along the way, there's a dandy satire on film-style gangsters, and Dugan is an attractive performer who shouldn't be held accountable for the sins of his writers.

In this show, at least three characters in times of stress talk about getting pains in the chest. That isn't where the show is likely to hurt.

NBC Sportscaster Under Fire

An assistant executive director of the NCAA joined Kansas basketball fans this week in lambasting Gowdy for the way he mispronounced names of Kansas players in last Saturday's NCAA Tournament game against UCLA, which Kansas lost, 83-76.

"It was not the caliber of work that we expect in the NCAA tournament," said Tom Jernstedt at NCAA headquarters. "There were a lot of troubles with the whole telecast. I was upset about the mispronounciations. I don't think there was any excuse for it."

Throughout Gowdy's handling of the NBC telecast, Darnell Valentine was called Darrell, Clint Johnson was Clint Jones, Donnie Von Moore was Van Moore, Wilmore Folwer was Wilmer and Scott Anderson became Skip Anderson.

By the second half, the name Ken Koenigs was also being mispronounced.

Newspapers and NBC affiliates in Kansas and Kansas City were deluged with callers complaining about Gowdy, who apologized in an interview with a Lawrence, Kan., radio station Wednesday.

"I'd like to apologize to the basketball fans of the University of Kansas," he said. "We had a lot of problems. We did a doubleheader...we had technical problems. I mispronounced a couple of names on the Kansas team."

Gowdy said it "wasn't that I wasn't prepared because I was. In fact, (KU Coach) Ted Owens introduced me to members of his squad the day before. I feel very badly about it."

Don Baker, Kansas sports information director, said he spent 30 minutes with Gowdy to acquaint the sportscaster with the team names.

"While we were talking on Friday, he was messing up some of the names," Baker said. "Like he kept saying, 'Moneski' instead of 'Mokeski.'" I kept correcting him. Finally he told me, 'Don't worry about that. I'll have it all straightened out by tomorrow."

Scotty Connal, NBC's executive producer of sports in New York, said, "We've had a lot of calls. And Curt did incorrectly pronounce the names. That's a fact. No one is happy about it and we're very much aware of it.

"I know he realized what he had done after it was over, and he was very unhappy about it," Connal added. "You've got to be right in this business."

Jernstedt said the NCAA had received "a great deal of criticism regarding the game and we passed that along to NBC."

CAPITAL EXPERIENCE

BEREA, OHIO (AP) — Some 3,000 personnel and industrial relations professionals from across the country will meet in Washington June 26-30 for the 30th annual Conference of the American Society for Personnel Administration, officials at headquarters here have announced.

Bill Moyers Leaving Network

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Moyers has made it official. He will leave CBS News in August.

In making the announcement this week, Moyers hinted strongly that he would return to the Public Broadcasting Service.

Moyers said he was moving on "because I don't get either the satisfaction or the impact I want from television through irregularly scheduled broadcasts, no matter how good each one may be."

Moyers, former publisher of the Long Island newspaper Newsday and one-time press secretary for President Lyndon Johnson, said in a statement:

"I enjoy television journalism most for the versatility that characterized my public television 'Journal' for five years.

"I miss its variety of subject, flexibility of format and regularity of schedule. When I leave CBS I intend to try to revive that kind of series — in particular the interviews and conversations with thoughtful people of our time — and perhaps to produce some documentaries independently." PBS officials have made no secret of their desire to have Moyers return.

Describing himself as "heartbroken" over the loss of Moyers, CBS News chief Richard Salant said he "wanted very badly to keep him — he's a helluva guy.

"I am deeply sorry, both personally and professionally, that he has resigned," Salant said. "He is a superlative reporter and a fine human being."

'Duck' Singer Files Lawsuit

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The duck on the hit novelty recording "Disco Duck" claims he made only $100 for his work and has filed a Chancery Court suit for a share of the record's profits.

Kenneth Pruitt of Memphis, who provided the duck's voice on the recording, said he even helped promote Rick Dees' popular song by wearing a yellow duck suit in public.

Pruitt wants half the profits from the record and punitive damages of $50,000 as well as an injunction against disposal of "Disco Duck's" assets until the case is decided.

His suit names as defendants Dees, Fretone Records president Estelle Axton the Stafree Publishing Co., and Broadcast Music, Inc.

Pruitt said he was asked in June 1976 to provide his duck voice on the record and sat at two recordng sessions where he "suggested word changes and rephrasing of the duck vocals."

Angie Dickinson Says Changes Made To Save 'Police Woman'

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Some stars cry bloody murder when their series is repeatedly bounced about a network schedule. Not Angie Dickinson, even though her "Police Woman" series faces shift No. 5.

It was a hit when NBC began it on Fridays in 1974. Then it moved to Thursdays, started this season on Tuesdays, then moved to Wednesdays. Next week, it's back in a Thursday night slot.

The show has marginal ratings. The shift is to see if the series can gain viewers and survive. But all this moving around confuses viewers and causes a further ratings drop, does it not?

"I don't know," says Miss Dickinson, calm in the face of now battling "Barnaby Jones" and "Baretta" instead of CBS movies and ABC's "Starsky and Hutch," the old Wednesday foes.

"I'm a good arbitrator. I try to look at both sides. I do think the first move (from Fridays) was a mistake."

But then, she noted, ABC's "Six Million Dollar Man" and CBS' "M-A-S-H" once seemed goners until shifted to new nights.

"So, no, NBC isn't wrong for trying with us," she said. "They can't say, 'Well, rather than confuse the audience we'll leave it alone and just die there.'

"I don't know what will happen" — she emitted a low, throaty laugh — "but it does seem like a crazy jigsaw puzzle at times."

She spoke by phone from her Beverly Hills home, which she'll leave Saturday for Tahiti to make an NBC movie, "Overboard." Despite the title, she says it's a romantic adventure yarn.

Should her show's ratings perk up and NBC desire a fifth season, there still is a slight matter of a new contract between her and Columbia Pictures Television, the producer of "Police Woman."

There is no contract now, she says.

Miss D. told visiting TV critics here last January she may not renew her contract unless the producers of her series give her more control of it and reduce her on-screen bath and shower scenes.

"Ah, that was exaggerated a little, as all these things are," the tall, shapely actress said. "But basically, I won't go back if it's the same old thing. I can't do that to an audience or myself."

She was asked what constitutes the same old thing.

"It's where you're not finding anything interesting or new each week, if they (viewers) don't say, 'Oh, "Police Woman" is on tonight, let's watch it,'" she said.

"I don't want to be just on the air. I want to be watched on the air."

Today's minor question: Has ABC reporter Geraldo Rivera of New York gone Hollywood? Or has Hollywood's Jon Peters, boyfriend of Barbra Streisand, producer of her "Star is Born," gone New York?

A handout from Peters' press agent says Jon's company here has signed Geraldo to what is vaguely described as "an exclusive management agreement in all fields." Of course.

School Library Bans Book

WYOMING, Mich. (UPI) — The book version of the popular movie "Saturday Night Fever" apparently is a bit too hot for officials at a high school in the Grand Rapids suburb of Wyoming, Mich.

The book was banned from Rogers High School library shelves this week as "inappropriate reading" for the teen-age students because of its four-letter words and explicit sex.

But that was not quick enough. School officials said 10 students managed to check out the book before it was removed from the shelves.

Principal John Pylman even said he thought the book should be burned, although there are no actual plans for such a move. Pylman did say, however, that the school will dispose of its three copies.

Historic New Jersey Cape Retains Aura Of Past

By PETER MATTIACE

CAPE MAY, N.J. (AP) — In the late 1800s, Jackson's Club House on Columbia Avenue offered Victorian elegance and seaside charm — and a little roulette and poker — to eager city gentlemen from Philadelphia and Baltimore.

Today, the gambling tables are gone, but the gingerbread graciousness of Col. Charles Jackson's Italianate-style mansion remains.

From Jackson's pilaster cupola three stories above the street, those with wanderlust in their hearts can still see steamers heading for Delaware Bay and Philadelphia or the fishing boats coming home to this southern tip of New Jersey.

The townsfolk call it simply "the mansion," but it's the "Mainstay Inn" now, a retreat to the graceful Victorian era. Owners Tom and Sue Carroll have changed the name but not the charm that the wealthy New York businessman built into his 28-room mansion in 1872.

There are no closets, no telephones, no television and no air conditioning. China chamber pots still wait under the beds. A sunlit bathroom with a copper bathtub is down the hall. Modern clothes go in carved walnut wardrobes. Breakfast is at 9 a.m. sharp.

"It's old fashioned and we want to keep it that way," says Carroll, a former Coast Guard officer who "just fell in love" with Cape May eight years ago.

Cape May — the whole city of four square miles — was dedicated as a National Historic Landmark last October. The National Park Service has counted more than 600 buildings of historical significance in this city.

"We don't see ourselves as living in a museum " says Fred Coldren, public relations man and city councilman. "We're caretakers of a very important national asset. We're proud of that, but we're also a living town."

The quaint gas lights that line 16 city streets are turned off now — not because of age, but by a stern state decree during a modern energy shortage. However, state officials have hinted they will grant an exemption.

Tucked away 150 miles from New York and 85 miles from Philadelphia, proud Cape May residents enjoy their serene lifestyle of quiet, almost desolate winters and busy but relaxed summers.

The Coast Guard Recruit Training Center supports 300 families and many Coast Guardsmen have retired here. But 95 percent of Cape May's economy depends on tourism. The city's population of 4,800 swells to more than 50,000 in the summertime.

Boosters don't talk about the gambling and prostitution that once flourished in an uneasy peace with vacationing clergymen and religious groups in seaside retreat houses.

But natives still talk about "The Fire" that levelled 20 square blocks of wood-frame buildings in 1878. It sent Cape May into a decline just as a new island resort called Atlantic City prospered 40 miles up the coast.

The new, subdued, seaside town rebuilt after "The Fire" gave Cape May its concentrated Victorian charm of today.

"What remains is one of the largest collections of late 19th-century seashore buildings in the United States," said Carolyn Pitts, a National Park Service architectural historian.

With the economy so dependent on tourism, it was necessity rather than historical idealism that forced Cape May to turn to its past.

"It's a seashore resort with one exception — we don't have a beach," Coldren said.

Ocean currents have been eroding Cape May's beaches since the federal government built two long stone breakwaters near the Coast Guard base about 70 years ago. About half the city's beach is gone.

It wasn't until the mid-1960s that some residents realized that the old houses could be the city's salvation. Although officials and businesssmen were wary, preservation-minded residents pushed the central business district for the National Register of Historic Places seven years ago.

Support of the historic strategy grew as business recovered. Last year, the Interior Department named Cape May to the cream of historical designations, joining 4,000 National Historic Landmarks such as Williamsburg, Va., and Newport, R.I.

Professor Not Bugged By Beetles

The Brigham Young University zoology professor has been "hooked" on bark beetles since he was 14, when he dug his pocketknife into a pinhole in a tree and eased out a tiny beetle on his knife blade.

"They were so interesting," he recalls. "They made such fascinating tunnels in the bark, and caught my imagination. I decided there and then that I wanted to study those beetles."

Now Wood has what is believed to be the largest collection of bark beetles in the world.

The tiny beetle, an insect less than 3/8-inch long, destroys more forest each year in the United States than do fires.

The beetle expert works with about 3,000 forest entomologists around the world who call on him for advice. His desk at BYU is stacked high with mail containing samples of beetles from such faraway places as Sri Lanka (Ceylon), Venezuela, Japan and Guatemala, with requests for advice on what kind the beetles are and whether or not they are dangerous to forests.

"When I receive the beetle, I compare it with others in my collection to determine whether or not it can be dangerous," says Wood. "For example, when immigration officers found beetles in a shipment of oranges from Japan to British Columbia, naturally they got a little upset.

"However, after I identified the beetle, I assured them they could unload the oranges. The hitchhiker was a subtropical beetle and there was absolutely no way it could survive in Canada.

"I received another call from Guatemala when a bark beetle was found devouring the inside of coffee beans. Since coffee is a multimillion-dollar money crop in that Central American country, near panic set in," says Wood. "After I analyzed the beetle and confirmed the fears, an eradication process was started."

Wood's work has saved millions of dollars of timber and other crops from the devastation of the bark beetle, because workable controls can be developed after the beetle is identified.

"Collecting expeditions have taken me all over the world," says Wood, who recently spent two weeks in India and six weeks in Sri Lanka collecting bark and ambrosia beetles for the Smithsonian Institution.

"I've collected 15,000 specimens in Venezuela, 25,000 in Central America, and have collected in Finland, Russia, Mexico, New Guinea and Australia, as well as 48 states. The jungle is an exciting place, although at times it's been too close for comfort to the cannibals, leeches, jaguars, wild elephants and other creatures," Wood says.

"It's fascinating work. I've discovered more than 800 new species of beetles, which hasn't been easy considering that some are so small (ranging from half a millimeter to 14 millimeters) that I had to use a magnifying glass to see them.

"Altogether, there are about 8,000 named bark beetles in the world, and less than 100 of these are destructive," adds Wood.

Jacques Brel's New Song Raises Flemish Furor

By Rute E. Gruber

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — Several years ago the tunes of Belgian singer-songwriter Jacques Brel formed the basis of a hit musical, "Jacques Brel is Alive and Well and Living in Paris."

These days Brel, said to be suffering from terminal cancer, lives in the Marquesas Islands in the South Pacific. But there is no doubt that he is still alive and kicking.

His latest album contains a track that has raised a furor in his native country.

The song, "Les Flamingants" (the Militant Flemings), is a virulent attack on fanatical Flemings in their defense of Flemish language, rights and culture against what they see as French encroachment in this bilingual nation.

At best, most agree it's a broad and rather vulgar satire against the radical Flemish nationalists. But many see an attack on all Flemings in the nasty, if ambiguous, lyrics.

The Federation of Catholic Students in Antwerp has filed a legal complaint against Brel, citing the song as "an insult to the Flemish people and to the Dutch-speaking cultural community in the country and the world."

Flemish newspapers — and several French newspapers ranging from the staid Paris L'Aurore to the popular Brussels La Derniere Heure — have condemned it. There have been discussions by the cabinet and parliament and Flemish Culture Minister Rika De Backer has suggested a boycott.

Mrs. De Backer, interviewed on Radio Luxembourg, said the song "revives the chain of misunderstandings about Flanders and the Flemings, which unfortunately, still exists in foreign countries. It angers me a bit because so many people are doing all they can to give a real idea of Flanders and the Flemings ... in an attempt to bring about peace between the Flemings and the Walloons (French speakers)."

"The Brel song," said Mrs. De Backer, "gives the impression that a Flamingant is a pariah, a person who is not respectable. But most Flemings consider them as people ... who have done their best to develop Flemish culture and assure a Flemish presence in the politics and economy."

It is easy to understand the sharp reaction to the song.

"Mister Flamingants" says in part:

"Nazis during the war and Catholics between,

"You oscillate between the gun and the prayerbook.

"Your gaze is absent,

"Your humor bloodless."

It continues, in rhymes liberally sprinkled with fourletter words and scatalogical references, to heap invectives upon Flemish nationalism, language, attitudes and culture.

The French-language daily Le Soir pointed out that with the lines "You soil Flanders — but Flanders judges you," Brel made it clear that he was only addressing the fanatic nationalists, and not the entire Flemish people.

Several papers recalled that in his song "Le plat pays qui est le mien" (the flat land which is mine) Brel, born in Flanders, gave a gripping description of the land that was a virtual statement of love for the country of his ancestors — regardless of the fact he himself had a French education and writes and sings mostly in French.

Whatever Brel — one of the relatively few Belgian artists to make it big internationally — actually meant in his song, the lyrics and the always volatile Flemish-French relations here are enough to let it be interpreted either way.

"I am angry and sadly surprised by the contempt Mr. Brel manifested with regard to the Flemish people," Mrs. De Backer told the Flemish Cultural Council. "A contempt which the record company has dispersed throughout the world."

BBC Series Focuses On U.S. Archetypes

By GREGORY JENSEN

LONDON (UPI) — The British Broadcasting Corp. is taking a look at Americans these days — and liking what it sees.

"Americans" is a major BBC television series focused on 13 American "archetypes" like the private eye, the movie star or district attorney. And on First Lady Rosalynn Carter.

"We've deliberately called it 'Americans' instead of 'The Americans'," said writer-narrator Desmond Wilcox at a preview showing.

"I wouldn't for a moment presume to present 'The' Americans. That would call for a scope and judgment we would not claim.

"This series is in fact some Americans, people who appealed to us as figures in an American landscape."

British views of the United States often can be unfairly critical or simply uncomprehending. This series, by contrast, comes across as an honest, unsensational and approving view of its chosen Americans and their world.

"It was born of a desire to record archetype or even stereotype figures, those who have become familiar to us through fiction," Wilcox said.

"Fictionalizing these characters has often blurred the truth. But, in truth, they do exist. They always have."

The BBC invested three years of work and $700,000 on the 13 50-minute documentaries. They will be shown shortly on at least 60 U.S. stations, BBC executives said.

Included is "the first documentary film ever to be made about Rosalynn Carter," according to a BBC statement.

"The First Lady" segment gives the first look at the Carter family's private White House quarters, shows Jimmy Carter chatting about his relationship with Rosalynn and followed her on public engagements.

Other famous names stud the series.

Woody Hayes of Ohio State is "The Football Coach." Jodie Foster is "The Film Star." Elliott "Pete" Estes of General Motors is "The Company President" and Rex Humbard is "The Preacher."

But the series looks as carefully and sympathetically at obscure Americans as at well-known names.

To portray "The District Attorney" it bypassed New York, Chicago or Los Angeles to focus on Fred Cox, county attorney of Carroll County, N.H.

Gerri Feemster is its pretty black schoolteacher fighting a Harlem problem class. Earl Hardeman is chosen as "The Rancher," trying to preserve a threatened way of life in Jackson Hole, Wyo.

Wilcox and executive producer Adam Clapham picked New York union leader Leon Stein to represent "The Immigrant" and Gen. Thomas H. Tackaberry of the 82nd Airborne division as "The General."

In each case — as with plantation owner Andrew Gay of Plaquemine, La., private eye John O'Grady of Hollywood and Joe de la Cruz, chief of the Quinault Indian tribe in Tahola, Wash., — the documentaries have three unspoken aims.

They probe the personality of the chosen American, examine his job and life style, and use these to illustrate aspects of American life.

Graphic Art Popular In Mexico

By KEVIN KELLEGHAN

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A small, black-and-white Rembrandt and a huge, colorful Picasso are only two of more than 300 original works on exhibit and for sale at a tiny, modish art gallery presenting one of the most ambitious graphic art shows ever attempted in Latin America.

The exhibition is worth more than $155,000 and has attracted television coverage and hundreds of people who come mostly to gape — but occasionally to buy.

"Graphic art is a rebirth of interest in an ancient medium, which dates back to pre-Columbian times in Mexico alone but is enriched today with new forms and materials," said Armando Colina, 42, owner of Arvil gallery, which is holding the show.

"Graphic art is undergoing a strong evolution today because the public can participate and the artist can sell," said Berta Taracena, president of the Mexican Association of Art Critics.

"Graphics have their origin in the Middle Ages and appear in the first attempts at reproduction as a substitute for original drawings," she said.

The Arvil collection is "rare," she said, because it is a "veritable rainbow of techniques, temperaments and tendencies that provide an ideal demonstration of today's graphic art."

Colina said Mexico's lower middle class is unable to buy an original Toledo, Tamayo, Picasso or work by Rayo, Moore, Tobey, Braque, Hokusai or Bellmer.

But graphics by all these artists in the show are a solution to owning an original work of art at a moderate price — a work that will increase in value as well.

Graphics are works of art reproduced in series, usually from 50 to 150. Each is numbered and signed by the artist. When the series is completed, the plates are destroyed.

The graphics are reproduced with silk, woodcuts, lithograph, stone and other means on special materials. Paper, plastic, metal and cloth — there is virtually no limit to the type of material that can be used to reproduce.

Some 150 artists are represented in the show which is being exhibited in Arvil's gallery in Mexico City's Zona Rosa — "pink zone" — a 35-block area dotted with elegant shops and restaurants, frequented by tourists.

Colina said the works, which are priced at figures similar to those in the United States, are a bit cheaper to buy in Mexico because there is no sales tax. There is no problem in taking the purchase back home either, he said, "because it is an original work of art."

CBS Says Resignation, Probe Unrelated

Gene Jankowski, president of the CBS Broadcast Group, said Wednesday in a prepared statement that Wussler wants to form his own television production company.

Wussler's resignation, effective April 15, comes as the Federal Communications Commission is pondering what action, if any, to take against the network in the wake of its "winner-take-all" tennis challenge matches. The network had billed the matches, all of which involved Jimmy Connors, as "winner-take-all" but, in fact, both players in each match were guaranteed money prior to the matches, win or lose.

The FCC is studying a staff report on the matches and is expected to take some action soon.

Wussler, denied that the FCC matter had any bearing on his resignation.

"That's a 10-month-old story. I gave all the pertinent facts to the FCC," he said. "I anticipated their findings would have been made public months ago."

Jankowski also claimed that Wussler's resignation was of his own accord.

Wussler, who stepped down as president of the network in a reorganization last October, said he has signed an agreement with CBS whereby the network will help finance his new company and the development of new shows. The idea is that Wussler's company would prepare pilot shows for CBS. If the network doesn't like the shows, Wussler said he is free to peddle them elsewhere.

"We have been talking about this since December," he said. "We shook hands on the deal at the Ali-Spinks fight. They're (CBS) putting up most of the financial underpinnings."

One source said CBS had agreed to finance Wussler's company with approximately $2 million over a five-year period.

"This is a very positive step forward for me," said Wussler. "I have a very goood financial and career arrangement with CBS. This will provide me with the opportunity to get into areas I have said publicly I want to get into."

Internal Revenue Service Says Most Americans Will Get Refunds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are making fewer mistakes on their income tax returns this year than last, and most are getting refunds, the Internal Revenue Service says.

The IRS said it found mistakes on 11 percent of the 1040A short-form returns last year but is finding errors on only 4 percent so far this year.

By mid-March, the IRS was paying an average refund of $489, an increase from the $454 average at the same time last year. About 75 to 80 percent of taxpayers will get money back.

The IRS said the accuracy rate has improved because more taxpayers can use the tax tables provided with their forms.

Last year, taxpayers who made more than $20,000 or had a lot of deductions had to calculate percentages to figure the amount of tax they owed.

This year, after figuring their taxable income, taxpayers can simply look at a table giving the amount of tax due on that income, provided they made less than $40,000 and are married and filing jointly.

A new problem is that some taxpayers are using the wrong table. This year there are three tables instead of one, and many people use the first one they come to, said Ellen Murphy, an IRS public affairs officer.

But the IRS says mathematical errors are still its biggest problem in handling returns.

The errors turned up so far are running 2-to-1 in favor of the government, but the IRS returns excess money taxpayers have sent in.

In its last count March 3, the IRS found that it had received 36.8 million returns out of the 84.3 million it is expecting this year. That is about the same rate as in 1977.

People filing for refunds between now and the deadline, April 17, should get them back within four to six weeks, the IRS says.

The IRS also found that about 56 percent of taxpayers were filing the 1040A short form this year, an increase from the 50 percent this time last year.

The agency has asked for comment on the new tax forms, which it tried to simplify this year. Officials said they got some compliments, but that others reported difficulty in changing to a new format.

The IRS cautions people still preparing taxes:

— They can get their refunds back faster if they use the self-addressed envelope in the booklet for mailing their returns.

— Those filing for an earned income credit should make sure they have computed the credit correctly and have entered the name of the dependent that makes them eligible. Many people are applying who are not eligible. Taxpayers should not bother with it unless than earned less than $8,000 last year.

— The location on the form has been changed for dividends and interest, so taxpayers should make sure they are filling in the right blank.

CONTEMPORARY 2 Story
If your tastes dictate a home that is not like every other home on the block — our opinion is that you will LOVE this 2 story contemporary home with a blush of conservatism. Master BR on the ground floor, separate powder room, superb dining area, lovely den-living that is complimented by a handsome firepalce and beautiful staircase. Upstairs there are two bedrooms (terrific view) and a semi-pullman bath. Summer fun is yours on a 22x12 covered and protected patio. Price 46,950 WE REPEAT 46,950.

A LEFF-RIGHT HOUSE
Curved streets make it slow moving to get to. But WOW for pleasant living and safety for the kids. Extremely nice 3 BR with a living room that has an attractive wrought iron separative for pleasant dining. Refrigerated air, 2 car garage and a very pretty color format. AND BEST OF ALL this home is only 28,500 with payments of $251.00. The loan is established & the equity is $6848.00. We believe this is one-if not the most reasonable-equity in our city. SIBERIAN SHEPHERD — Semyon Brykhanov, a wiry Buryat who oversees a herd of more than 600 sheep, and his wife Anna, are pictured outside the two-room log hut they share with two others. They live about a 20-minute truck ride away from the main settlement of the Lenin collective farm, in the Buryat region around Lake Baikal, where once the Buryat nomads roamed freely. Soviet Union Faces Stiff Challenge In Developing Siberia

(EDITOR'S NOTE — This is another in a series of dispatches from Associated Press correspondents traveling to remote areas of the Soviet Union.)

By BARTON REPPERT

GUSINOOZERSK, U.S.S.R. (AP) — For centuries before the Russians came, Mongolian-descended Buryat nomads roamed this sparsely peopled region of eastern Siberia. They lived in animal-hide tents and raised cattle, horses, sheep and camels.

Few roam any more.

Under the Soviet system, virtually all the rural population is organized into large state and collective farms. The circular tents called yurts are gone and people live in small but sturdy log cabins.

Others, like Semyon Bryukhanov, are more isolated in areas outside the settlements where they tend sheep.

The new lifestyle of the once-nomadic Buryats, contending with punishing conditions for agriculture, reflects the challenge facing the Soviet Union and its leaders in Moscow, 2,850 miles to the west, as they strive to develop the vast reaches of Siberia, estimated to contain 80 percent of the nation's energy reserves and 70 percent of its minerals.

In Buryatia, a territory about the size of Montana and shaped like an inverted ram's horn around the eastern shore of Lake Baikal, agriculture means a struggle against harsh winters, drought, floods and soil-eroding winds.

"Most of the beautiful things in nature are capricious — and our natural environment here is extremely capricious," said one regional official, Bato S. Semyonov.

Because of inadequate soils and the vagaries of the climate, officials have concentrated heavily on efforts to expand livestock raising, which accounts for about two-thirds of the republic's agricultural output.

At one collective farm, the Lenin Kolkhoz in the Selenga Valley near Gusinoozersk, a newly built city southwest of Ulan-Ude, director Anatoly N. Tsedenov said the kolkhoz's holdings included 24,000 sheep, 2,700 cattle, 2,000 pigs and 750 dairy cows.

About 1,600 people live on the kolkhoz, which covers 166 square miles of nearly treeless terrain.

Most of the kolkhozniks are grouped together in the farm's main settlement, where their modest homes are set along unpaved streets, and there are small stores and other community services.

But there is still a bit of the old Buryat life for such shepherds as Semyon Bryukhanov, who lives with his wife, Anna, one of her cousins and a young woman farm worker in a two-room log hut about a 20-minute truck ride away from the settlement.

Bryukhanov, a wiry Buryat in his 50s who tends a flock of more than 600 sheep, said he and his wife together are paid 270 rubles ($391) a month by the kolkhoz. But about half their earnings are spent on food which is brought to them every other day by truck, he told visitors.

His hut has electric lighting and a four-burner electric stove for cooking, but water is hauled by horse sledge from a spring 200 yards away.

For personal transportation, Bryukhanov has a motorcycle and is on the kolkhoz waiting list to buy a Zaporozhets automobile.

The shepherd said he works outdoors year-round whatever the weather and doesn't put on his gloves until the temperature falls below five degrees.

In one corner of his hut stood a new-looking refrigerator. One of the visitors opened the door and an assortment of books and old newspapers in it.

"It's wintertime now, so who needs to use a refrigerator?" said Bryukhanov.

CSA Accuses Hospital Of Illegal Financing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Community Services Administration says Philadelphia's Hahnemann Hospital received illegal interest payments on a federal grant for construction of an addition to the project.

In a statement issued Thursday by the anti-poverty agency, Director Graciela Olivarez said the U.S. Comptroller General had been asked to study "the question of repayment by Hahnemann Hospital" of the interest.

A federal grand jury in Philadelphia has been looking into the construction project as a result of allegations that Reps. Daniel J. Flood and Joshua Eilberg, both Pennsylvania Democrats, may have used improper influence to arrange the financing.

Three years ago, Flood got through Congress a special $14.5 million grant to the hospital from the Community Services Administration budget. Eilberg's Philadelphia law firm was hired by Hahnemann to help complete financing for the $64 million construction job.

In 1975, CSA officials told the hospital it could put the $14.5 million in a bank and keep the interest, which published reports have put at more than $1.5 million as of early this year. Longstanding rules prohibit grant recipients from getting interest on federal aid.

Miss Olivarez said "the grant provision permitting the grantee to retain interest earned on the grant funds was ruled illegal by CSA's current general counsel." The counsel, Frank N. Jones, began an inquiry into the project last month.

Despite the finding of illegality, Miss Olivarez said "no personal wrongdoing has been uncovered of the part of any CSA employee and that the agency did make an effort to avoid this grant."

She said the grant was apparently legal under the authority granted by Congress to CSA.

But she characterized it as "highly improper for the federal government's anti-poverty agency to be involved in funding construction of this type, particularly when the apparent purpose for using CSA was to avoid HEW (Department of Health, Education and Welfare) standards for the selection of appropriate hospital grantees."

"The type of political pressure involved in this funding," she said, "was unfortunate at best and should have been vigorously and openly resisted, particularly by an agency whose scarce dollars are to be committed only to the most efficient means of alleviating poverty."

She added, "I regret that the previous administration eventually acquiesced in an improper evasion of the usual practices with regard to federally financed hospital construction and with regard to appropriate anti-poverty grants."

Steelmakers Blame Hard Winter

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Major steelmakers have trimmed projections of first-quarter shipments by at least 2.5 million tons and say the severe winter — not the coal strike — is mainly to blame.

But despite the prediction, spokesmen say shipments during the rest of 1978 will offset the disappointing shipments for January through March.

United States Steel Corp. Chairman Edgar B. Speer and other industry leaders had originally projected shipments would at least reach 25.5 million tons. But now the most optimistic prediction in general — that of U.S. Steel, Inland Steel Corp. and Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. — is 23 million tons.

The reduced shipments resulted "not so much from the United Mine Workers strike as the weather," a U.S. Steel spokesman said.

Shipments in the first quarter of 1977 were a disastrous 21.9 million tons — largely because of the severe winter — and fourth-quarter shipments were 21.56 million tons.

"Weather restricted our shipments — not our orders — from our two biggest plants in Middletown, Ohio, and Ashland, Ky.," an Armco spokesman said of the first-quarter shipments.

Bethlehem Steel Corp. Chairman Lewis W. Foy agreed: "January and February were seriously affected by the weather with respect to our ability to ship steel and our customer's ability to take (shipments)."

While industry spokesmen said the coal strike may not have affected shipments, it is having a financial impact.

Most companies stockpiled coal — both foreign and domestic — in anticipation of a long strike.

Reduced operations because of strike-related power curtailments in western Pennsylvania, West Virgina and the Midwest also have increased unit production costs.

Many companies have been forced to reduce work hours, and National Steel Corp. laid off 892 employees at its Weirton, W.Va., facilities, and Bethlehem let go 700 workers at Sparrows Point, Md.

By the end of this week, U.S. Steel will have laid off 1,200 workers at its nearby Clairton Coke Works, and 300 to 400 workers will probably be laid off at Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. plants in Pittsburgh.

Most major steelmakers are anticipating a strong second quarter and say 1978 shipments still could reach a minimum of 95 million tons, compared with 91.15 million tons shipped in 1977.

Armco analysts said industry shipments in 1978 may total 99.3 million tons, while Inland and Youngstown Sheet & Tube predicted 97 million tons.

Most companies expected the strong demand in flat-rolled products (which go to the automotive, appliance and beverage industries) to continue throughout the year.

Officials Say City Needs Air Service

AUSTIN (AP) — Flight schedules for Laredo are changed so frequently and service is so inconsistent that "air mail is trucked to San Antonio," says the president of the Laredo Chamber of Commerce.

Dennis Longoria portrayed Laredo as a booming border city that needs numerous commuter flights as well as service from larger jetliners.

He told a Texas Aeronautics Commission hearing examiner this week that Laredo is the No. 1 port of entry between the United States and Mexico, that more than 157 oil and gas companies have located there in the past 3½ years and it ranks 13th among Texas' 254 counties in tourism.

Longoria supported a proposal by Tejas Airlines, Inc., to provide passenger and cargo service between McAllen and Brownsville, Laredo-Corpus Christi and San Antonio and Austin.

Texas International Airlines, Inc., is opposing the application, and its laywer, James Wilson of Austin, told Longoria if Tejas gets a Laredo route, Texas International may halt its service.

"The Laredo market at the present time is at best marginal," said Wilson, and the entry of Tejas might "force Texas International to take the path it has taken in Longview, in Tyler, in Temple, Waco and other communities — and that is the suspension of service."

"This is not a fairyland," he said. "This is the real world of business economics."

"This is an obvious threat that Laredo can't have both (Tejas and Texas International)," said Tejas lawyer Charles Pope of San Antonio.

Robert Gannett of the North San Antonio Chamber of Commerce also supported Tejas' application.

Gannett said Tejas, a San Antonio commuter airline, had been so successful in its first five months of operation that it had increased its daily flights to Corpus Christi from four to eight.

Gannett said he knew of instances where corporations had decided not to include McAllen and Laredo "in their marketing plans simply because of their lack of adequate one-day, turn-around service."

"Frequency (of flights) is the major concern we have," said Gannett.

Wilson asked Longoria if he had to choose between Texas International and Tejas, which one would he choose.

"We want both of them," Longoria replied.

"Sure," said Wilson, "and you want Continental, Braniff, American ..."

Longoria said if Texas International withdrew from Laredo "in the future, we (the chamber) will meet that problem when it happens."

Hidalgo County Split Over Proposed Prison

EDINBURG (AP) — An influx of 2,000 new residents to the Rio Grande Valley would help the local economy — even if the new neighbors spend their time behind bars, according to local officials.

But not all Hidalgo County residents are happy about the proposed construction of a state prison near here.

While the 200 jobs and $2 million payroll the prison would bring are needed, one police chief said he'd be happier if the state found another location for its new penitentiary.

"I don't like it," Edinburg Police Chief A.C. Gonzalez said. "There could be a number of things that could come up and we're not equipped for that kind of need."

Earlier this week, the Texas Board of prisons picked a 6,741-acre site eight miles from here for the new facility. Approval of the $8 million purchase has been delayed by a three-member panel that must okay the transaction.

Gonzalez said his department would be called on if there were problems at the prison.

"We've been called to the county jail. We've had shootings at the county jail, disturbances at the county jail and farmers at the county jail," he said.

But other local officials think the advantages of the proposed facility outnumber the potential pitfalls.

Russell Willis, executive vice president of the Valley Chamber of Commerce, said the new jobs might dent the 10 percent local unemployment rate.

"Our industrial efforts have always resulted in jobs for females. This would create jobs for males," Willis said.

Hidalgo County Judge Ramiro Guerra also said the region would welcome the new jobs.

"I understand the questions and reservations which some people might have. I think the good outweighs the bad," the judge said at a Monday press conference.

Critics of the proposed prison have said the proximity to the Mexican border — about 22 miles away — might cause problems.

A lobbyist from the Citizens United for Rehabilitation of Errants said in the past, prisoners have planned to escape and "vanish" into Mexico from other state prisons.

But Texas Department of Corrections officials said few prisoners have managed to stray as far as 20 miles from any TDC facility.

Burma-Shave Ditties May Return To Television

By MARC CHARNEY

NEW YORK (AP) — A giant firm ... In changing times ... Gave up ... That name ... On roadside rhymes ... Burma-Shave.

But a smaller firm ... Fond of ... Doggerel ... May be planning ... A new inaugural ... For Burma-Shave.

From the 1920s through the early 1960s, along America's roads, the monotony of a 40 mph drive could be broken by a series of six red signs, up to 50 yards apart, with a line of doggerel on each.

They made up ditties, often with outrageous puns. They amused or promoted safe driving or war bonds — and always sold shaving cream.

The last sign always read: "Burma-Shave." For example:

Ben ... Met Anna ... Made a hit ... Neglected beard ... Ben-Anna split ... Burma-Shave.

Some 35,000 individual signs eventually peppered roads in every state except Arizona, Nevada, New Mexico and Massachusetts. Millions remember them, even though the signs came down 14 years ago and the shaving cream has not been on the general market for years.

But now — if only on television — the ditties may be coming back.

Philip Morris Co. last month gave up rights to the name, and the American Safety Razor Co., a former Philip Morris subsidiary that once marketed Burma-Shave, is applying for the trademark.

But the story of Burma-Shave itself is less the story of a shaving cream than of the genius of those who sold it.

In the mid-1920s, Clinton Odell of Minneapolis turned from a failing liniment venture to brushless shaving cream, then a new idea. He had a hard time with that, too, until his son Allan thought up the signs.

They captured attention — and people's imaginations. And the company grew. Radio stars Bob Hope and Fibber McGee used them as a source of humor. Critic Alexander Woollcott remarked that reading one Burma-Shave sign was about as easy as eating one salted peanut.

Then times changed: superhighways brought faster travel and limits on billboards. Television was the new advertising medium.

American business changed, too. Philip Morris Inc., the tobacco firm, diversified and in 1963 bought the Burma-Vita Co., merging it into the American Safety Razor Co., which it acquired in 1960.

The signs came down in 1964, and American Safety Razor closed the plant in 1967. From then on, Burma-Shave was sold only when made for special orders by an outside supplier.

In the 1970s, Philip Morris also took a second look at American Safety Razor, a small-change firm for the giant, fast-growing parent.

Philip Morris tried to sell the subsidiary to a rival razor company, but was blocked on antitrust grounds, company spokesman Robert Ryan says. In 1976, nine American Safety Razor executives bought it.

The deal left the firms friends, Ryan says. Though Ryan would not discuss it, a business gets tax advantages when it drops a trademark no longer in use. In this case, the razor company could get the name.

Any new ads are more likely on television or store displays than roadsides, says Peter Malone of American Safety Razor. The idea, he says, "lends itself to the whole gamut" if it is just updated.

Whatever happens, lovers of Americana can always take comfort in the cosmic view in the Odell sons' favorite roadside rhyme, included in a set of signs they gave to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington:

Within this vale ... Of toil ... And sin ... Your head grows bald ... But not your chin — use ... Burma-Shave.

Prison Fight Sends Five To Hospital

REIDSVILLE, Ga. (AP) — A fracas among 19 knife-wielding inmates at Georgia State Prison sent five persons to an Augusta hospital with injuries ranging from a skull fracture to stab wounds.

The commissioner of the Department of Offender Rehabilitation, David Evans, said brawling inmates fought Wednesday with knives normally used for leather craftwork.

Evans said there were no fatalities in the fight.

Number Of U.S. Vegetable Gardens Stabilizes

By EARL ARONSON
Associated Press Writer

In round figures, 32 million American homes had vegetable gardens in 1977. That was 43 percent, the same as in 1976 and the average for the last seven years.

Gardens for All, a national association for gardening (Box 371, Shelburne, Vt., 05482) noted a two-year stabilization following the record 1975, when 49 percent of American families produced some food. There had been a steady growth from 1971 to 1975. The figures were based on a Gallup Poll commissioned by Gardens for All.

John O. Davies III, of the garden association, said it did not appear likely that there would be much of an increase in the vegetable gardening percentage in the next 10 years. This estimate was based on expansion room and new gardener expectations.

Basically, those who have become more serious about vegetable gardening in the last year have been persons with higher income, better education and business or professional people living in the suburbs.

The median average size of the home or community garden in 1977 was 770 square feet, compared with 560 square feet the previous year. The increase in garden size is the dramatic equivalent of about 12 million more gardens this year than last computed at the 1976 garden size level.

The larger garden size is likely to continue. One out of every four gardeners this year (24 percent) said that next year's garden would be larger (mostly Eastern and Far Western suburbanites). Only 4 percent planned smaller gardens in 1978.

In 1975, when the economy was poor, the number of gardening households reached a record level. When economy and energy problems improved in 1976, gardens declined. And in 1977, only one in 10 gardener was a first-timer, and the main reason for working the soil was more for personal fun and enjoyment than dollar return.

People, the report said, appear to be taking up vegetable gardening more for mental and physical benefits than for economic rewards. And there is considerable interest by parents of school-age children to have their youngsters learn about gardening in school.

Millions of families without land expressed interest in community gardening if land and similar-minded folk can be gathered.

For the fun and joy, 37 percent; helps budget, 23 percent; better-tasting, more healthful food, 13 percent; first time land was available, 8 percent; more time, 6 percent; other reasons or didn't know, 13 percent.

A full report is available from the association for $25.

El Toro, Red Freckles, Night Owl and Little Sweetheart.

And to top off the honors, all four were originated by Carl Fischer of St. Charles, Minn.

Red Freckles (455), red with white striping on most petals, some thin, some half a petal wide. It has 18 bud spikes.

Night Owl (467), purple with triangular-shaped florets, fluted, ruffled and needle-pointed; 10 to 12 florets open at once on five-foot plants.

Suicide Prevention Booklet Distributed

TOKYO (AP) — A booklet on suicide prevention will be distributed to schools and parent-teacher groups here to try to curb the increase in teen-age sucides, police say.

The book was written by psychologists who analyzed the motives and background of young suicide victims. Last year in Tokyo 96 children aged from 10 to 16 committed suicide, police said, usually because of fear of school exams or inability to find work. The book advises parents to be "good listeners."

New Pot Plant May Replace Lily As Favorite On Easter

By The Associated Press

While it isn't likely to replace the lily as the favorite Easter plant right away, we suggest that you take a look at a promising pot plant named Exacum Affine "Midget."

This plant is a member of the herb family, from the Old World tropics. It was tested at Texas A&M University for several years. The report is that its growth and flowering habits have shown great public appeal, both as a pot plant and as an ornamental bedding plant.

The midget variety has a compact habit of growth with glossy green foliage and many pale blue and lavender, fragrant flowers averaging about one inch in diameter. Height and spread are both 8 to 10 inches.

At Texas A&M the plants are in continuous bloom from April until July. Planted outside as a bedding plant, it will tolerate full sun until mid-July but when grown in partial shade will continue to grow and flower until frost.

Exacum is reported to have few insect and disease problems. The seed catalogue also lists Exacum Blythe Spirit, which has white flowers.

We are told also that Exacum is best treated as a warm greenhouse plant in potting mixture; as a greenhouse perennial, or plunged outdoors in the summer, preferably in the shade.

Because of its popularity as a symbol of the holiday, the lily has long been referred to as the Easter Lily. Recommended are plants that have buds in the early stages of opening. Plants with buds at several stages of development will flower for a longer time.

You can prevent the pollen from discoloring the pure white trumpets by removing the anthers, which contain the pollen, with a tweezer. This will also make the blossoms last longer.

The lily wants some special care, starting with proper watering. Permit the plant soil to dry, then water. Don't let the plant wilt.

If your gift pot is covered with foil, poke several holes through the foil, to allow excess water to drain — if it is a clay pot. Plastic or pottery containers without drainage require more care in watering.

The plant should be kept in a moderately cool temperature. Avoid drafty locations. Remove faded blossoms to keep the plant fresh-looking.

You don't have to throw away your Easter Lily after the flower is gone. Store it in a cool place until danger of frost ends. Don't cut off the leaves or stems until after they are dead because they provide food for the bulb to use in making flowers next season.

When planting the lily outside, remove the plant from the pot and place the entire root ball in the ground in a well-drained, shaded area on a slight slope, if possible. If the soil is clay, mix in some sand.

Most lilies won't flower again the summer you plant them, but should bloom the following year (of course not in time for Easter in the North.)

Also, you can continue to grow your potted lily in a pot for years. When the foliage is dry, take the bulbs from the soil and store them for the winter.

"Plant Fun," by Anita Holmes Soucie (Four Winds Press, N.Y., N.Y.) offers complete and simple instructions for growing 10 "no fail" house plants. It is written especially for the beginning indoor gardener and is helpfully augmented by the fine illustrations of Grambs Miller.

Emotional Stress Linked With Juvenile Arthritis

By AL ROSSITER JR.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Rochester, N. Y., research team says emotional stress from such personal disruptions as broken homes may help cause juvenile arthritis, a disabling disease afflicting a quarter of a million American children.

The cause of juvenile rheumatoid arthritis is unknown but Dr. John Baum, professor of pediatrics at the University of Rochester School of Medicine, said it is likely several different factors have to be present to initiate the disease process.

The idea that stress may be a factor has been suggested by several researchers.

Baum and two co-workers, Monica Jean Henoch of the Monroe Community Hospital and Jean Batson of Strong Memorial Hospital, studied the cases of 88 children who attended Strong's arthritis clinic between 1960 and 1977.

The results were reported this week in the medical journal Arthritis and Rheumatism, a publication of the Arthritis Foundation.

The youngsters' histories were compared with information obtained from a 1971 survey of 2,952 children in the same area and the report said the "most striking" findings concerned psychosocial factors.

Twenty-eight percent of the children with arthritis had undergone a psychologically upsetting event caused by divorce, separation or death of a parent. In comparison, only 11 percent of children from the normal group came from broken homes.

In addition, the survey found that 48 percent of the family stress events took place within two years of the beginning of arthritis.

Also noted was the fact that adopted children were found three times more often in the arthritic group than in the normal group.

Baum said the study "offers what seems to be strong supporting evidence" to proposals by other scientists that stress has a role in the development of juvenile arthritis. But he said the findings do not point toward a specific cause.

"They do suggest, however, that psychological variables and stressful psychodynamic life events may play potent roles in relation to the onset and course of juvenile rheumatoid arthritis and are worthy of future investigation," the report said.

Author Says Life's Humor Causes One To Go On

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Eugene Ionesco, author of such plays as the broadway hit "Rhinoceros," says he often has been tempted to "renunciate, give up" his life.

"Why do anything rather than nothing?" the 65-year-old master of the theater of the absurd, told a University of Oregon audience.

Still, Ionesco spoke of the humor in life "that causes one to go on" and of his own dream of translating all of his plays into the pure imagery of film.

Ionesco spoke in French while a university professor translated at a recent question and answer session attended by about 450 persons. The session followed a showing of Ionesco's first and only cinematic effort, a 1973 film called "La Vase" (The Slime). The 18-minute color film has not been released commercially in the United States.

Ionesco and his wife, Rodika, are on a three-week tour of the United States.

INDIANA FISH

The Indiana fish species known as Anabas scandens is commonly called the "climbing fish" because it can leave pools that are drying up and travel on land, due to its ability to retain water in its gills. When there is dew on the ground at night, this fresh-water fish often leaves the water for the land.

Anti-Credit Card Tests Successful In Missouri

By DALE SINGER

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — A small but growing number of merchants are betting their customers will use an anti-credit card to save money by paying cash.

The card, known as Savings Plus, has been tested successfully in southeast Missouri for a few months and soon will appear in St. Louis, Memphis and several other cities.

Organizer David Behnen says the plan is based on the fact that credit costs money.

"I'm not going to run down credit card companies," he said in an interview. "Being in business, I know how important my American Express card is. I would not be able to work without it, and they know it too, so their rate structure reflects that."

Behnen and John Wilson, who started the plan in his hometown of Sikeston, Mo., said simplicity is the keynote.

Merchants agree to honor the Savings Plus card and give cash customers a certain percentage discount. On the 10th of the next month, the rebates are deposited into a savings account in the customer's name, and he is free to withdraw the money or let it earn interest.

The idea: the customer saves money, the merchant draws extra business, the organizers get a cut from the merchants. Behnen and Wilson said their cut does not reduce the discount paid to the customers.

Customers use a yellow plastic card like a credit card, but there's no worry about losing it.

"It's foolproof," Behnen said. "I could take this card and throw it out in the middle of the street. The worst that could happen is that someone will use it and have money deposited to my savings account."

Security is one reason the discounts are deposited into a savings account rather than rebated in cash on the spot. Another reason, Wilson said, is that 50 cents here and 75 cents there may not mean much, but lumped together once a month, they add up.

"A consumer's normal response would be that if he budgets $100 to spend on an item, and he buys it for $90, he'll go right out and spend that extra $10," Behnen said. "Now, he can spend the whole $100, but on the 10th of the next month he'd get the $10 back as a bonus in his savings account."

Wilson compared the plan to trading stamps and said that was how the idea for the plan came to him.

"I'd go to the grocery store and put the stamps in my pocket or in the shopping bag, but they'd all stick together or something like that. By the time I got around to putting them into a book, I didn't get much for them anyway. I figured I'd be better off with the cash."

Wilson said about half of the available merchant base in the Missouri bootheel test area signed up for Savings Plus. He said he made sure the discounts, ranging from 15 percent to 1¼ percent, did not come from prices that were inflated in the first place.

His early experience allowed him to work the bugs out of the plan, Wilson said, and now he is ready to expand with hopes of concentrating on items bought regularly, such as gasoline and groceries, to get people into the Savings Plus habit.

Author Of Book On Cloning Cites Resentment By Critics

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A letter purportedly from the author of a controversial book alleging human cloning says some of its critics are venting their personal resentments against him.

The San Francisco Examiner reported Wednesday that one of its reporters received a two-page letter on David Rorvik's personal stationary describing critics as "pikers in the sour grape sweepstakes." The letter was postmarked in San Diego.

Rorvik has turned down requests for interviews since the pending publication of his book was revealed and there was no proof the letter was from him.

In the book, Rorvik says he was paid by a Marin County, Calif., millionaire to set up the cloning of a son — a laboratory process in which a genetically identical twin is produced from a single cell. The text alleges the boy is now 14 months old, but no names were revealed. Several scientists have said that human cloning is virtually impossible today.

The letter quoted by the Examiner said the book was never offered to Simon & Shuster Publishing Co. although the firm has said it rejected the manuscript because Rorvik refused to document his work.

Michael Korda, Simon & Shuster's editor-in-chief, was quoted in the letter as saying Rorvik's book could have attracted "millions of crazies" as buyers if he had claimed "ten or 100" people had been cloned instead of just one.

Korda said in a telephone interview that "nothing sounds less likely" than the quotes attributed to him.

The letter also responded to comments about the author by a Nobel Prize-winning biologist and a former boss at Time magazine.

Biologist James Watson has been quoted saying the odds against human cloning were probably a trillion to one and that Rorvik had once misquoted him "in a vicious fashion."

But the letter said Watson was just bitter about Rorvik's stories on cancer research which critized his role. A Watson article in a 1971 edition of Atlantic Monthly that noted "unexpectedly rapid progress" being made in cloning research was also cited in the letter.

Time magazine senior editor Leon Jaroff has been quoted saying Rorvik "seemed to be getting a little strange" when he worked in a minor job at Time and became interested in UFOs.

In answer, the letter said since Rorvik had quit as Jaroff's assistant, "Leon has deeply resented my success and independence."

The letter said Rorvik's interest in UFOs stemmed from belief the Air Force had not properly investigated the phenomena. "I did not state I believed in little green men; nor do I believe in them today," the writer of the letter said.

Gardens In Hong Kong Sell For $5 Million

HONG KONG (AP) — Tiger Balm Gardens, a popular tourist attraction here, has been sold for about $5 million and will be the site of an apartment complex, the buyer, Cheung Kong Holdings Co., said Wednesday.

The gardens were built in 1935 by philanthropist Aw Boon-haw who made a fortune selling a medicinal salve known as Tiger Balm. The buyer said some statues and miniature buildings that made the gardens popular may be preserved in redevelopment plans.

GROWING OLDER

Activity Can Keep Elderly Young

By HAROLD BLUMENFELD

It's been said a person's life is divided into three stages: youth, middle age and, "Gee but you're looking good."

If that's the case, more than 22 million Americans — about 12 percent of the population — are looking better than ever. And about 4,000 more Americans join this group each day by turning 65.

Even if you're not in the "looking good" contingent yet, you're getting there. As aging comedians are fond of quipping on their birthdays, getting older is far preferable to the alternative.

Senior citizenship is not all laughs, of course. The worker forced out of his job, who sees nothing but a purposeless future ahead of him, can go from mental vigor to senility overnight.

Unfortunately, placing seniors in a class by themselves helped to persuade young and old alike that with one's 65th birthday comes the onset of uselessness.

But that doesn't have to be so.

True, advancing age takes a toll on our bodies. Medical research holds that maturity is reached about age 20. From that point on, everything is downhill: Fat begins to replace muscle, the amount of calcium in bones decreases, hearing may become less acute, eyesight may be dimmed and the index of cardiac function is reduced.

Years may go by, of course, before these manifestations of advancing age become apparent. The rate of a body's decline depends on a variety of factors, including heredity, culture and lifestyle. Also contributing to the rapidity of aging are obesity, osteoarthritis, anxiety, gastrointestinal complaints, diabetes and anemia.

We have no control over some of these factors. But we can minimize the ill effects of others of them by taking good care of ourselves.

A recent study by the National Institute of Mental Health showed that healthy elderly persons "differed very little, if at all, from healthy young subjects."

And contrary to popular belief, the study revealed that an individual's IQ does not decline as he or she gets older. If fact, judgment actually improves with age.

"It is apparent that if individuals retain their health with advancing years, they are remarkably young," the institute concluded.

Equally reassuring findings resulted from a survey taken at St. Francis Hospital in Miami Beach.

The St. Francis report points out that physical disabilities don't automatically befall us once we reach age 60, 65 or 70.

Life after middle age, the survey declares, can be fruitful for those who feel good and keep active.

Don't let society's misconceptions about aging — or your own — turn you out to pasture before your time. Take care of yourself. Develop new interests. Maybe even begin a new career.

The St. Francis Hospial report closed with the happy statistics that 750,000 American men and women between the ages of 72 and 90 are happily and productively employed.

(Newspaper Enterprise Association)

Steel Plants Proposed

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — Republic Steel Corp. says it is considering building new and cleaner steelmaking equipment in its Mahoning Valley plants.

The nation's fourth largest steel maker said recently it is studying the plan as an alternative to a proposal announced last summer for installing pollution control devices and renovating some equipment at the plants, which last year produced about two million tons of raw steel.

Republic has not placed a price tag on the contemplated improvements, but there were reports that the investment could reach at least $150 million over the next three or four years.

William J. De Lancey, Republic president and chief executive, said the new improvements would mean "adding significantly and substantially to the long-range competitive ability of Republic Steel as a whole."

The new plan, if approved by company directors as well as state and federal regulatory agencies, would include construction of two electric steelmaking furnaces in Warren.

The company said the new furnaces would reduce reliance on older, dirtier furnaces.

Officials Study Chances Of Reactivating Skylab

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Johnson Space Center officials say studies will be made on the possibilities of reactivating and re-using Skylab, the space laboratory that was abandoned four years ago.

Steve McLendon, a JSC flight controller, said Wednesday space officals who made contact with Skylab recently found the space station "has everything a crew would need to live there and spend some time there."

"We found it almost as if we had just left it yesterday," said McLendon, one of three JSC flight controllers who just returned from a Bermuda tracking station where they aroused the 118-foot-long, 84-ton spacecraft.

Meanwhile, the Marshall Space Flight Center, Huntsville, Ala., has contracted with two aerospace companies to study the possibilities of reactiving and reusing the space station.

Space center officials said the possibilities for re-use range from docking the space shuttle to it so that astronauts could occupy it again, to its use as a base to assemble and support large space structures for communications, solar energy or other public service operations.

Flight controllers found the space station still has "a lot of oxygen, nitrogen and water," McLendon said.

He also said it was found that Skylab still holds a lot of gas which is needed to maneuver.

He said one battery was left to take a full charge from the solar panels on the spacecraft. Three others were left in a position to take a "trickle charge", he said.

He said flight controllers also were able to turn on the space station computer and dump data from it and turn on the Apollo Telescope Mount, which supplied astronomers with more data from about the sun, he said.

Skylab is expected to be maneuvered from a JSC control room April 19. A second plan to keep Skylab in orbit is for the crew of the third space shuttle mission in in October 1979 to place to place a small propulsion device on the spacecraft to boost its orbit 70 miles. It is estimated the boost will increase Skylab's orbital life by two years.

McLendon said that before consideration is given to revisit Skylab, oxygen and nitrogen would have to be turned on so that it could be determined whether the space station still will maintain the necessary interior pressure, he said.

Skylab was launched May 14, 1973. It was home and workshop for three astronaut crews. The longest stay was 84 days which ended in February 1974. That mark was broken recently by a Russian crew in the Soyuz-A Salyut combination.

Time Official Named Star Chairman

WASHINGTON (AP) — James R. Shepley, president of Time Inc., will become chairman of the Washington Star, the afternoon newspaper acquired by Time.

The sale of the Star to Time Inc., first announced Feb. 3, has now been formally completed, according to a statement Wednesday by Time Inc., the communications company whose holdings include Time magazine, Sports Illustrated and several suburban Chicago newspapers.

A Time spokesman said Shepley will succeed Joe L. Allbritton as chairman of the Star.

Allbritton, a Texas financier who had purchased the Star four years ago when its survival was in doubt, will continue as the newspaper's publisher and chief executive officer.

In a statement last month, Allbritton said that the newspaper's losses now "have been reduced from $1 million a month to something near the break-even point."

Under terms of the acquisition, Time Inc. was to pay Allbritton $20 million for his equity holdings. In addition, Time Inc. will assume financial indebtedness of the newspaper estimated at $8 million.

In addition to Shepley, three other Time Inc. executives will join the Star's board. They are: Charles B. Bear, group vice president and secretary; Hedley Donovan, Time Inc.'s editor-in-chief, and Richard B. McKeough, chairman of Time Inc.'s finance committee and vice president-finance.

Jeopardized Urban Policies Hide Behind Aliases

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN

So when President Carter unveils his urban policy on March 27, it probably will sound like a not-so-urban policy.

After a year's work, key officials now view the word "urban" with nearly the same horror that they viewed "welfare" in their welfare reform package.

That policy was dubbed a "Program for Better Jobs and Income," a name which White House press secretary Jody Powell proudly noted had the advantages of not using the word "welfare" and not being terribly memorable.

Now, the "urban" problem has spawned new bureaucratic euphemisms and raised more serious questions about the policy itself.

A development bank, described as the "centerpiece" of the urban policy, has undergone a remarkable renaming.

Designed to reduce capital costs for businesses to locate in distressed areas, the bank was once known to all as an "urban development bank."

No more.

The Commerce Department renamed its proposed bank a "national development bank," reflecting the president's desire that the new policy deal with all cities and rural areas in distress.

Last month, the Treasury Department decided to back Commerce's version of the bank and duly sent the White House a document referring to the bank on the cover sheet as a "national development bank."

Analysis

But it was a late conversion apparently, because page three of the Treasury paper still used the unstylish term "urban development bank."

The Department of Housing and Urban Development offered a milder concession. HUD's bank is now called a "community development bank," retaining at least the hint of a city.

In January at the White House, where word apparently gets around quicker, Cabinet secretary Jack Watson's office produced proposals on the state role in urban policy. They were labeled "A National Communities Conservation Policy."

The name game began with a warning from Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. in a Jan. 11 memo.

He noted the urban policy concentrated on — surprise — an urban strategy but "ignores the complex interdependence of urban, suburban, exurban and rural areas, and small cities and towns.

"This concentration also flies in the face of political reality," Califano warned. "The votes in the Congress necessary to enact and fund programs that will help urban Americans can be guaranteed only if those programs help other needy Americans as well."

Califano's view was seconded by Management and Budget Director James McIntyre, once legal counsel to 450 mostly small towns in the Georgia Municipal Association.

Carter's endorsement of these views has resulted in some decidedly convoluted logic in the subsequent wrangling over specific programs.

The bank, for instance, is designed to help areas which lost jobs and taxes as business fled to the cheaper and roomier suburbs. All the agencies agreed this problem is concentrated in Northeastern and North Central cities.

Treasury argued that if bank activities "are applied generally throughout the country, they will simply assist growing areas and accelerate the decline of depressed areas" but then proposed including distressed small towns and rural areas.

Another bank goal is to reduce structural unemployment — primarily the joblessness of black teen-agers and other low-income minorities whose skills fit no available job.

But Treasury opposed putting the bank in HUD because its existing programs emphasize "economic revitalization, neighborhood conservation and the special problems of low-and moderate-income persons and minorities (and) may deflect attention from purely economic development matters."

The bank's structure remains unsettled. But then so does the alias for the urban policy. As one White House aide said this week, "We don't have a name yet, but that's not a major worry. We'll get one."

Home Builder's Wife Helps Run Business

By MARY TOBIN

NEW YORK (UPI) — They called her "peanut" and did what she told them because she was the boss's wife — sometimes.

But the big burly construction workers soon learned that the tiny blonde in the hard hat meant business and more importantly — knew her business.

Ruth Richmond, who with her husband Lawrence runs Richmond Homes-Construction Co., based in Sarasota, Fla., combines skills as a home designer, builder, realtor and interior decorator to direct every phase of the business from "the moment the prospective homeowners walk in the door to the day they walk into their completed Richmond home."

"The men were very condescending when I first went out into the field," Mrs. Richmond said in an interview here. "They were always polite, but they gave me a mental pat on the head — then went ahead and did things the way they knew they 'should' be done."

"But I made them do it over until it was done my way."

One of Mrs. Richmond's "wrong" ways was making the bathroom door open out instead of the traditional inward opening door.

"If people get sick its often in the bathroom. If they pass out they fall against the door, making it impossible to open to get to them," she said.

"To me the outward opening door just made sense — but you have no idea how the men resisted — until they saw that it worked."

"I was so new I wasn't inhibited by the traditional taboos in the industry."

Mrs. Richmond and husband Larry, who sat beaming and obviously proud of his wife during the interview, are both natives of Brooklyn.

"I studied dress design and was working in Manhattan, while Larry worked at his exterminating business in Brooklyn," she said.

"We were married on our lunch hour at City Hall, then both went back to our jobs. I was fired the next week when the firm found out I was married."

The Richmonds moved to Long Island, had two children and settled into the suburban life until the big snow of 1950.

"I got stuck on the Long Island Rail Road for four hours and had to end up walking three miles through a blizzard," Richmond said. "I got home and said 'that's it.' That was a Wednesday, and on the following Saturday I turned my business over to a relative, closed the house, and we drove to Florida."

Richmond borrowed money, and he and Ruth worked over the kitchen table at night on plans to construct their first home. "We had lots of guts and lots of love and no money," Richmond said, "so we figured how to cut costs without cutting quality."

Although she "has always been involved in the business, from that first house we designed," she didn't become really active until her children were grown. In the meantime, she studied engineering and got her real estate broker's license — "the toughest test I ever took."

Mrs. Richmond, who looks as if she'd be more at home in Saks Fifth Avenue than at a construction site and speaks with a soft combination New York-Southern accent, said she "never compromised standards. I've never tried to act or talk tough. I dress like this always — wear high heels on the construction site. But I'm stubborn when I know I'm right."

"And the men have learned to both like and respect Ruth," husband Larry added.

Richmond homes cost between $18,000 and $29,390 (the higher price for a three bedroom with family room and dining room), a price that is possible largely because of Mrs. Richmond's determination.

"In 1974, the price of homes was going through the ceiling and that, combined with soaring interest rates wae eliminating a lot of people from the market," Mrs. Richmond said. "I was determined to find a way to build a quality home that average people could afford."

Mrs. Richmond drew on her dress-design training, her real estate knowledge and "my own ideas about what I wanted in a home."

"A good example of our personal approach," Mrs. Richmond said, "was one couple who wanted a two-bedroom home. I asked if anyone would be living with them and the woman said 'his mother.' From the way she said that, I told Larry 'she hates her mother-in-law and we've got to build them a home with the bedrooms at opposite ends of the house.'"

The Richmonds have built almost 13,000 homes between Naples and Bradenton and Port St. Lucy, Fla. The firm has contracts to build Richmond homes for General Development Corp., Deltona Corp., and Lehigh Acres.

EPA Tracking Nuclear Cloud

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wind and weather conditions will determine the path of a radiation cloud moving across the Pacific Ocean following a Chinese nuclear test in the atmosphere.

Martha Casey, a spokeswoman for the Environmental Protection Agency, said the path should be determined today or Friday.

The Energy Department said the first Chinese blast in nearly six months occurred at midnight EST Tuesday at the Lop Nor test site in northwestern China.

Irish Not Easy To Understand

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Some thoughts of Ireland as the big Irish cop blows his whistle and the big parade begins to move up Fifth Avenue this St. Patrick's Day:

Mulligan's Stew

It's no secret around 10 Downing Street and the Houses of Parliament that the British have given up on solving the Irish Troubles, always pronounced with the accent on the "u." They'd love to get out if they could.

The solution to this murderous misery, if it ever comes, will have to some from the Irish themselves, both North and South, Catholic and Protestant.

The British must have begun to realize this as early as 1556 when Mary Tudor, the Catholic daughter of Henry VIII who came to be called "Bloody Mary," started it all by driving the O'Moores and the O'Connors from their lands in Counties Leix and Offaly and importing English farmers to Ireland.

The plantations, as they were called, didn't work. The Irish fought back, as they have ever since, when they weren't fighting among themselves. The Irish never really won, but then neither did the British, who wasted many a monarch's fortune trying to understand their unruly conquests.

The Irish are not an easy subject to understand.

To understand the Irish you have to understand their wild humor and deep piety, the natural poetry of their speech, their unreconciled romanticism for the Ireland of their dreams, the hold that the pas commitment to the future, a belief in a life after death that mixes dogma with superstition and makes the present bearable, even a joy, despite everything.

To understand the Irish you have to understand the old crone, wrapped in her shawl, who was coming out of Mass one weekday morning at the cathedral in Galway and took a mighty hop, almost a leap, to avoid stepping on a crack and offending the fairies, the wee people.

A young priest, just out of the seminary at Maynooth and crammed with ideas from Vatican II, was shocked at her superstitions.

"Now don't tell me, Mrs. O'Leary," he upbraided her there and then, "that you believe in banshees and leprechauns and pookahs and all that nonsense?"

"Of course not, Father," she assured him, 'But they're there."

To understand the Irish you have to understand the worldwide outlook of the Irish farmer I stopped for directions one day as he was leading his donkey and cart to a creamy in County Sligo.

"What's the weather like out there in America?" he asked, noticing the luggage on the back seat of my hired car.

"About like here," I told him. "A few local showers."

"Let me tell you," he admonished, "there was nothing local about the showers we had here yesterday in Mullaghmore."

His directions were pure Irish. "Now keep dead ahead on this road a fair distance until you come to Keegan's pub at the crossroads by the railway bridge. Well, about two miles before that, take the first wee road on your left and you'll be sound for Bundoran."

Honor Tracy, the English-born writer living on Achill Island off the coast of Mayo, is convinced the British can never begin to understand the fervent romanticism that fuels the Irish passion for all things Irish. sThe Irish, she wrote, "have a tremendously keen sense of racial identity, of the importance of simply being Irish: the very name of Ireland sets their heart strings throbbing. I knew a woman once, singing a ballad at a party, who broke down altogether at the words, 'Oh some day, may be, I'll go back to Ireland...' We tried to comfort her with the assurance that this was where she actually was, out Cabinteely way' a few minutes walk from the 7A bus stop, but it took some little while before she was herself again."

Recently there was a piece in the Limerick paper about a local magistrate who fined a man 15 pounds (about $28) for unrinating off the back steps of a doubledecker bus about pub closing time. "Fifteen pounds!" cried out the man in the dock, caught up in the Irish sense of romance and melodrama. "Is this the Ireland I fought and died for?"

It's the native combination "of daring and piety," an old priest once told me, "that motivates an Irishman to down a dozen oysters as an aphrodisiac and then gulp six pints of Guinness to defuse them."

Or as Brendan Behan once explained the geography of the place: "All Ireland is washed by the Gulf Stream except my wife's family."

There's a glorious lilt still to the language that the strangers never knew. "I'm heart-scalded with the killings and shootings," an old widow told me last St. Patrick's Day in County Down, "but maybe someday soon, please God, there'll be an end to it." Amen.

Panel Studies Alien Problem

AUSTIN (AP) — A bilingual consultant for the Texas Education Agency said this week the TEA was aware of an alien problem in Brownsville public schools but has not yet tried to solve it.

Victor Cruz-Aedo responded to comments by executive director Eddie Aurispa of the Good Neighbor Commission, who said he had visited Brownsville recently and learned of the "terrific problem" of illegal aliens flooding into the schools.

Cruz-Aedo said State Education Commissioner M.L. Brockette was aware of the situation, but "to my knowledge, the TEA is not doing much to cope with the problem."

The exchange occurred at the first meeting of a task force of representatives of a dozen or so state agencies.

Eastern Moves Jet Fleet

MIAMI (AP) — Because of South Florida's tourism doldrums and a prospect of future traffic growth outside the area, Eastern Airlines has moved 20 percent of its fleet from its Miami headquarters to Atlanta, the company president says.

Speaking to the Civil Aeronautics Board in Washington this week, Frank Borman said the airline's best market gains have come from Florida's "green belt" — including such places as Orlando and Fort Myers.

Borman said the total Miami-Fort Lauderdale market has fallen off by 7.1 percent in the past two years.

"Miami has lost its attractiveness as a vacation spot quite frankly. This is not only of concern to Eastern, National and Delta, but it ought to be of concern to Miami," he said.

While Borman did not give specifics on how many aircraft or personnel have been moved to Atlanta, he said the shift was made over the last two years.

He also explained at the informal CAB session that Atlanta was a convenient location for the line's service to the southern part of the United States.

Eastern's financial status has improved over the last three years, said Borman who became the air carrier's president in 1975, but he pointed out that the situation would be better if it had a new and more efficient fleet of jets.

As an example, he said Eastern is obligated by contract to take delivery this year of five new Lockheed L-1011s which it neither wants or needs.

Earlier this week, Bormann announced Eastern is prepared to purchase 23 European-made Airbus jets to replace many of its old Boeing 727s.

Eastern also has asked the CAB for permission to drop its $55 "no frills" service between New York-Newark and Miami and Fort Lauderdale because of insufficient traffic to South Florida.

Newspaper Says Terrorist Raid Discredited PLO

United Press International

Following is a sample of what the nation's newspapers have been saying this week:

St. Louis Post-Dispatch

By accepting responsibility for the terrorist raid near Tel Aviv Saturday that left at least 36 persons dead and 85 wounded, the Palestine Liberation Organization has removed itself, both practically and morally, from further consideration as a party to any settlement in the Middle East. Americans will join President Carter in denouncing the attack as "an outrageous act of lawlessness and senseless brutality" and in offering their sympathies to Israel and the families of the victims, many of whom were tourists on a Sabbath outing...

Nothing should be allowed to obscure the fact that the PLO has discredited itself. A leadership that authorized Saturday's atrocity has no place at a bargaining table; and it most certainly has no place at the head of a government ...

In one of its communiques after the raid, the PLO described the attack as a message not only to Israel but also to "those regimes which try to impose conspiratorial solutions on us." That can only be directed at Egypt, whose response so far has been to express hope that the peace efforts it began last year will not be stopped. Given the incident, however, and the recent murder by Palestinians of a prominent Egyptian editor, the notion of a separate peace agreement with Israel may well be being given some consideration in Cairo. For if the other Arab governments continue to give the PLO their support, President Sadat may find himself having to weight accepting the achievable, which is to say a separate accord with Israel covering the Sinai, against continuing the pursuit of the remote, that is, an agreement that all concerned nations can accept."

The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette:

For 10 years, United Nations resolution 242 has been a calming denominator in the usually stormy search for a comprehensive Middle East Peace Settlement. Accepted by both Israel and Arabs, 242 is not without its purposeful ambiguities, but its core meaning has been well understood: in exchange for security and stable relations with her neighbors, Israel would withdraw from each of the territories it occupied in 1967.

The ambiguity in 242's formulation involves the extent of the contemplated Israeli withdrawal from the three captured areas, the West Bank of the Jordan River, the Gaza Strip and the Sinai. Optimistic American assumptions have been that Israel will move back substantially from all three areas, even if not to the original pre-1967 borders.

That scenario is now in danger because of a new and ominous Israeli interpretation of 242. That interpretation reflects Prime Minister Menachem Begin's conviction that the occupied West Bank is part of a biblically mandated larger Israel.

This week's public wrangling between Mr. Begin and his defense minister, Ezer Weizman, demonstrates that at least some Israeli officials recognize that expanding Israeli settlements in occupied territory — and a reinterpretation of 242 designed to accommodate that expansion — can be fatal to hopes for peace.

Israel's virtual abandonment of Resolution 242 is more than a symbolic blow to peace hopes, though it is that. It is also a refusal to recognize that security should not be equated with territory. In private conversations, Israeli officials are fond of saying that, public pronouncements aside, everything is negotiable, and that Israel at some future time will be willing to trade territory for security. That future time may never come if the Begin government continues its flight from Resolution 242. President Carter realizes as much and he should say so forcefully when Mr. Begin visits Washington.

Westerly (R.I.) Sun:

Official reaction to tales of Hamilton Jordan's supposed misconduct in a singles bar was preposterously overblown. The public relations apparatus was geared up to issue a sheaf of statements which in effect said President Carter's top political aide didn't conspicuously insult a young woman.

There was a 24-page statement from the bartender and a statement from Jordan's companion. The documents even included Jordan's version, in which he admitted "an unpleasant encounter" with a woman but maintained he was blameless.

Too much...too much.

We do not argue that the episode should have been hushed up — or even that it lacked importance. Low-grade behavior by a member of the official family demeans the presidency.

There are other ways of dealing with such a thing, however, than issuing a barrage of denials. We believe the president should quietly find out how much substance there is to such stories, and act accordingly.

Investigation might show Jordan to be the target of mere idle rumor mongering — or of a more sinister attempt to discredit an important White House figure.

Investigation might also show that the stories about Jordan's cutting up when he has been drinking are essentially accurate. In that case, the president should put it to his aide: either modify your public behavior so that it will not be an embarrassment to the administration and the country, or quit.

Middletown (Conn.) Press:

In many ways the tales that are told about Hamilton Jordan, the President's unofficial chief of staff, rather do relieve things.

Whatever else the Carter administration appears to be, its emphasis has been on being earnest, and sober, and let's face it, a little boring.

Henry Kissinger is no longer cutting a fine figure in Washington with all those movie starlets, the President is by no means as colorful as former President Kennedy or Lyndon Johnson, and he certainly is not as awful as former President Nixon. And he doesn't chew gum like you-know-who.

So there just has to be someone for the Washington gossip columnists to get their teeth into, and if Hamilton Jordan didn't exist, he would have to be invented. After all, the only fun that President Carter has really provided is when he hired that inept Polish interpreter.

Finally, the stories they tell about Jordan are the best kind: they are not quite solid enough to be wholly believable, but they are titilating enough to keep people clucking. The White House has always been white, but it hasn't always been 100 percent pure. That's asking too much.

St. Johnsbury (Vt.) Caledonian & Record:

Whatever else can be said about the Carter administration these days, the President was one hundred percent right when he told the National Press Club this week that "It is easier to promote or transfer incompetent employees (in government) than it is to get rid of them. You can't run a business that way. You can't run a factory that way. You can't run a government that way."

We trust northern New England senators and congressmen will heed President Carter's words and support legislation to shorten the appeal process involved in the dismissal of incompetent government employees — and also provide protection from retaliation for conscientious employees who dare to expose waste or corruption in the federal bureaucracy.

Montgomery (Ala.) Journal:

It was noted here last January that we'd all be better off if the government left our tobacco vices alone. HEW Secretary Joseph Califano, an ex-smoker, launched a $23 million plan to make ex-smokers out of everyone else.

But the annual government subsidy to tobacco growers is nearly twice that much and also has administration (and Califano's) support. That's paying $1 to discourage something we already pay $2 to support.

A letter today from the Tobacco Institute explains how wrong this simplistic notion can be. In the wonderful world of the Washington lobbyist, reducing the subsidy would be "counter-productive."

He means the grower would get less for his tobacco, so cigarettes would be cheaper, so people would smoke more.

Now that this popular misunderstanding is clarified, it throws a whole new light on countless social problems. No wonder, for instance, we've had a stubborn drug menace that lingers despite repressive efforts.

If the poor grower of poppies only had a stable market, he, too, could charge more for his crop and price impecunious users straight into rehabilitation centers.

Consider the shaky finances of the backroom manufacturer of Saturday night specials. If he only had a government guarantee of a fair price for any unsold guns, he could agree to limit his production, too.

The resulting higher prices would keep guns out of the hands of the more impoverished lower classes and might even allow convenience stores to be less brightly lit with safety thus contributing to the conservation of energy.

Clearly we've been spending our tax money in all the wrong places.

Operation Reunites Brothers

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Liu Yueng-wai traveled 8,500 miles to get to San Francisco, but he shows little interest in the city's cable cars, street musicians or topless dancers.

For him, the trip is more important. He's here to save his brother's life — to donate one of his kidneys to Liu Yuet-man.

So Liu, a balding, 40-year-old electrician and father of two young sons from Canton, China, sleeps on the floor in an unfurnished apartment. And he waits.

"It is the wish of the family that I come here to help restore him to health," Liu said.

Liu spent the latter half of last year waiting for a passport and permit to leave China. His ailing, 31-year-old brother had traveled to Hong Kong and appealed to Chinese authorities through the local news media.

The brothers were reunited for the first time in 15 years last Dec. 11 in Hong Kong. Five weeks later, they reached San Francisco.

The Lius said they know their case is not unique. The younger Liu said he had read about Andrew Chan, a Yakima, Wash., restaurant owner, who was also going to receive a kidney from his long-separated brother, Chan Chung-hon, also a citizen of China, who arrived in Seattle two days before the Lius came to San Francisco.

He said he would like to get in touch with the Chans out of a sense of kinship. "That is what is called 'tung bang shurn lin,'" the younger man said, quoting a Chinese proverb that means people suffering from the same illness sympathize with one another.

The two men recently moved from the YMCA in San Francisco's Chinatown to a barren, one-bedroom apartment near the run-down downtown Tenderloin area. The $74-a-month apartment is unfurnished and the brothers have been sleeping on the floor.

The Lius worry about what lies ahead. Yeung-wai has been granted permission by U.S. authorities to stay until mid-April, but the brothers said they were not sure when the kidney transplant operation would take place.

"The doctor said I am anemic," said Liu Yuet-man. "I have no appetite and he (Yeung-wai) has some nasal problems. We don't want to rush it, because it concerns both of our lives."

The brothers said they hoped Yeung-wai could get an extension of stay for the operation.

Money is another problem. Yuet-man said the transplant operation costs about $25,000. Additionally, he now undergoes dialysis three times a week at $200 per treatment. A Chinatown social service agency wus helping secure medical aid puyments for him, Liu Yuet-man said.

They said they were not trying to raise money from donations. "I don't want to beg for it. We feel ashamed of it," Liu Yuet-man said.

He said he only wants to live a normal life and "be a taxpayer again."

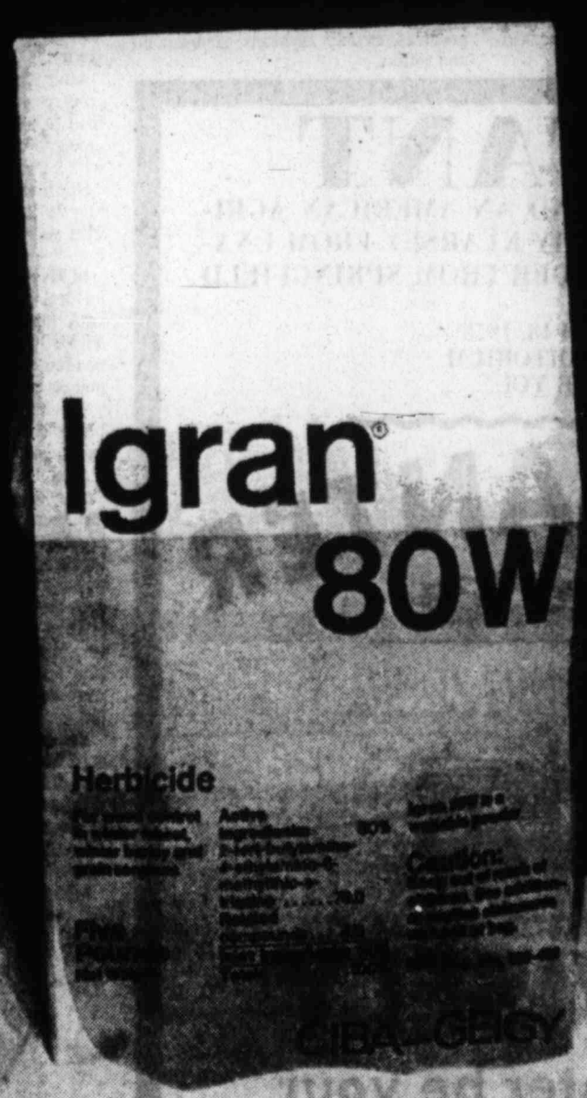
If you grow sorghum on sandy soils, it's time you tried Igran.



Because Igran® is the sorghum herbicide that really fits the sandy soil conditions in the South High Plains and South Rolling Plains.

And because it fits, Igran is easier to use. There's no guesswork or experimenting with rates. Just follow the label directions.

Then watch your sorghum come through clean and healthy. Because Igran controls those tough broadleaf weeds like carelessweed and annual morningglory. Controls them early, before they have a chance to rob your crop of vital soil moisture and nutrients.

Igran. Once you try it, you'll keep on using it. Because now you've got a sorghum herbicide that really fits your sandy soil conditions.

Non-Tillage Lauded As Conservation Aid

Reduced tillage is the "greatest breakthrough in soil and moisture conservation since the sweep plow," says Dr. A. F. Wiese.

"Limited tillage not only conserves soil but cuts production costs and increases yields," the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station scientist at Bushland said.

Chemical fallow studies were started on dryland at Bushland in 1958. Atrazine and 2,4-D did a "good job" of controlling weeds in the fallow between wheat harvest and sorghum planting. Soil moisture storage and sorghum yields were not increased over sweep tillage.

"The system was not practical because herbicides cost more than sweep tillage," Wiese said.

Limited tillage research proved fruitful in 1968 when Dr. Paul Unger, USDA soil scientist, controlled weeds in irrigated wheat stubble with Atrazine and 2,4-D during a 10-month fallow. He compared this with disk tillage, sweep tillage and a combination of sweep tillage and chemical weed control.

There were about 10,000 pounds per acre of wheat stubble on the soil surface. Previous dryland experiments had less than 4,000 pounds per acre of crop residue.

After the 10-month fallow, no-till plots still had 4,100 pounds per acre of straw. Disk areas had little or no stubble left.

Soil moisture storage on the disked area was 2.8 inches or 20 percent of the precipitation. No-tillage stored 5.6 inches or 39 percent of the rainfall.

"This experiment proved to be the magical Pandora's Box of conservation research in the Southern Great Plains," Wiese said.

Unger had unlocked the secret of improving soil moisture storage in the Oklahoma and Texas Panhandles. It took more mulch than could be produced on dryland, he added.

Unger continued his research in 1970 by planting wheat after irrigated corn. He planted some wheat without tillage, some with rototilling and some on clean ground.

After wheat harvest, he again adjusted crop residue level from nothing to more than 10,000 pounds per acre with various amounts of tillage or controlling weeds with herbicides.

Soil moisture storage from July 1971 to May 1972 varied from two to 8.2 inches. This was 11 to 45 percent of precipitation.

In May 1972, grain sorghum was planted dryland without tillage and weeded with herbicides to save crop residue. Yields improved with increased surface residue and varied from 1,750 to 5,360 pounds per acre.

"Yields were almost doubled and herbicide cost during fallow was the same as tillage," Wiese pointed out.

After these initial successes, Jack Musick and Ron Allen, USDA agricultural engineers, conducted irrigation experiments with limited tillage. Limited tillage was compared with disk tillage in a wheat-sorghum-fallow cropping sequence on furrow irrigated land.

Weed control from wheat harvest to sorghum planting was done with Atrazine and 2,4-D. With disk tillage, beds were destroyed and rebuilt before planting.

Yields were 4,550 and 3,640 pounds per acre with two irrigations after no-tillage and disk tillage. With 4 seasonal irrigations, yields were 5,760 and 5,320 pounds of sorghum grain per acre.

No-tillage was the winner again, said Wiese.

After sorghum harvest, limited tillage consisted of disk bedding to rebuild beds, one sweep plowing to loosen beds and rodweeding to control weeds as necessary. Limited tillage increased wheat yield 3 bushels per acre, compared with disk tillage when two summer irrigations were applied.

Other cropping systems with fallow periods have proven practical. Irrigated wheat planted immediately after sorghum harvest increased soil mulch level so that a following dryland crop of no-tillage sorghum yielded 1,000 pounds per acre more than where stubble was destroyed by disking.

No-tillage, limited tillage and disk tillage were evaluated in continuous irrigated wheat. Paraquat or Roundup was used to control volunteer and weeds between crops for no-tillage.

Limited tillage was one 2,4-D application, disk bedding and rodweeding. Yields were increased four bushels per acre with no-tillage.

Herbicide cost destroyed the advantage. Limited tillage yielded the same as disking and was most profitable because of reduced cost.

No-tillage of continuous irrigated sorghum was not practical because herbicides could not control volunteers that emerged after planting. Yields of forage were increased with no-tillage, but grain yield was less than with disking.

Volunteer sorghum competed with the planted crop.

Double cropping sorghum after irrigated wheat proved practical and yields were increased 500 pounds per acre with no-tillage in a five-year experiment. Sorghum was dry planted in wheat stubble and watered up.

Weeds and volunteer wheat were controlled with Atrazine. Planting hybrid sudan after grazed out wheat was equally successful according to the weed researcher.

Wiese pointed out that similar research in Kansas and Nebraska had proved the value of no-tillage under irrigation in Western parts of the states. Limited tillage also has proven profitable in central Kansas where dryland wheat produced enough straw to increase soil moisture storage.

'Phenomenal' Growth In Ag Exports Cited

WASHINGTON (AP) — Exports of grain and other commodities to Communist countries have shown a phenomenal growth since 1970 and are likely to continue, an Agriculture Department trade analyst says.

"The thrust of this trade is directed toward satisfying a growing consumer demand, and to fill this void the Communist nations have turned their focus westward on suppliers and markets such as the United States," Roger Neetz of the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said in a report.

From 1970 to 1976, U.S. farm exports to the Soviet Union, China and the Communist nations of Eastern Europe rose from $210 million to $3 billion, an "unusually high yearly growth rate" of 55 percent, he said.

Exports dropped to $2.2 billion in the 1977 calendar year but Neetz said the upward trend is expected to resume this year in view of the large purchases of grain by the Soviet Union and soybeans and cotton by China.

"Indeed, at the recent rate of growth, the Communist countries together could become a $5 billion market for U.S. farm products by 1980 and eventually approach the $6 billion level held by the European Community in 1976," Neetz said.

The report was included in a weekly issue of "Foreign Agriculture" published by Neetz's agency.

Although optimistic, Neetz said that future export growth faces a number of obstacles related to U.S. trade with Communist nations:

— Balance of payments deficits that have recently plagued Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union, including large deficits in trade with the United States.

— Lack of most-favored-nation treatment and government credits by the United Staes for all Communist nations except Poland, Yugoslavia and Romania.

Neetz said that so far the main farm exports to the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe have been wheat, feed grains and soybeans and soybean meal.

"In the future, U.S. exports of soybeans and soybean meal could become even more important, since most Communist countries have little hope of achieving self-sufficiency in oilseed production but will need increasing amounts of high-protein feeds (for livestock)," he said.

Neetz said that China is a "tremendous potential" market for American farmers but has had "an erratic import record so far."

China bought about $625 million worth of U.S. farm commodities a year in 1973 and 1974 but then "ceased to be a significant U.S. market" in the following two years, he said.

However, in 1977 following reduced crops of its own, China again turned to the United States for some of its needs and bought about $66 million worth of products, mainly soybeans, soybean oil and cotton.

Reagan Brown Hits U.S. Policies On Meat Importation

AUSTIN (UPI) — Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown said Thursday the present U.S. meat import policy is unrealistic and chaotic to the cattle industry, and urged approval of legislation he said would create more dependable market conditions.

Brown said bills sponsored by Sen. Henry Bellmon, D-Okla., and Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, are sensible alternatives to present meat regulations. Those bills would base imports on domestic price rations rather than on volume production, Brown said.

He said the U.S. Department of Agriculture has predicted meat imports this year will reach 737,000 metric tons, compared with 685,000 metric tons in 1977.

"If these increases are permitted, they could depress our cattle prices just when they are beginning to show some strength," Brown said.

"Cattlemen in America have reduced their herds in response to market conditions. But these domestic cutbacks open the gate to higher imports under the present yo-yo effect of current meat import policies. World meat production is expected to rise in 1978, and it is our cattlemen who are going to take it on the chin."

Brown said legislation also is needed to provide that live cattle imported into the United States be included in the meat import figures. He said in the past, only frozen carcasses have been considered meat imports.

"Last year, imports of slaughter cattle and processed meats from Mexico totaled over $108 million, $71 million for slaughter cattle and $37 million for processed meat. Weights of these items were not included in the total calculations which determine whether quotas would be imposed or not," the commissioner said.

"The present method really doesn't account for all meat imported. If they are going to count any, let's count it all."

PCG Director Voting Slated In Lynn County

TAHOKA (Special) — Lynn County farmers and agribusinessmen will elect a businessman director to the Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. (PCG) here Monday at 6 p.m. at the Lyntagar Electric Cooperative.

A member fo the PCG staff will conduct the election and present a review of the 25-county cotton organization's objectives and activities.

Joe D. Unfred of New Home is producer director and Dwain Lusk of Tahoka is businessman director. Each of the counties in the PCG territory is has two directors — a cotton producer and a businessman.

They are elected on alternate years to serve two-year terms. Each is eligible for re-election every second year.

All interested persons, say Unfred and Lusk. Farmers and businessmen are eligible to vote.

American villages and cities had an estimated 77 million elm trees in 1930, says the Forest Service. By 1977, widespread Dutch elm disease had destroyed all but 34 million of them.

Texas Scientists Look To Crops In Energy Crisis

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Methane gas-producing livestock manure and energy plant crops — called petroculture crops — could be partial solutions to the United States' energy crisis, agriculture scientists said this week.

Dr. E.L. Fulton of Tarleton State University told a Texas House subcommittee looking into alternate sources of energy for agriculture that he is constructing an electrical generating unit designed to use chicken droppings as its power source.

The droppings are converted into the raw source for methane gas generation, he said.

Taking a normal-sized 50,000 bird operation, Fulton explained, about 4.2 million cubic feet of methane gas could be produced in a year. At five cents per kilowatt, more than $15,000 worth of energy could be produced annually.

"There is no question that producing energy is possible," said Fulton. "We just have to work out a few technical difficulties. I feel this operation is feasible in Texas within a very short time. We will be producing our own energy at the test facility in Tarleton by the end of May."

The same type of methane process can be used for most animal wastes, he said. Pipeline quality gas is produced, as well as a by-product of high-protein liquid fertilizer that can be stored and pumped to crops.

Petroculture crops, which can be grown on semi-arid lands with little or no irrigation, can produce oil, rubber or lubricant substitutes, Texas A&M researcher Dr. Dan Bragg told the subcomittee.

"It is becoming apparent that innovative approaches in using renewable resources are essential if we are to insure the continued economic vitality of Texas' food and fibers industry," Bragg said.

Bragg said agriculture scientists are studying guayule, Jojoba and euphorbia as possible energy-producing crops. All are drought resistant and can grow in the desert regions of most southwestern states, including Texas, he added.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

COUNTY AGRICULTURAL STABILIZATION and Conservation Service offices are following a new formula in figuring "established" yields to be used on individual farms in the 1978 federal cotton program.

The results will affect potential producer benefits under the program. Officials of the Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., say this in turn may have some effect on producer planting decisions.

Price support deficiency payments, if any, and disaster program payments will be based on each farm's established yield.

Disaster payments will be made to program cooperators at the rate of 17.3 cents per pound times the established yield when crops are destroyed or production is severely reduced by drought, hail or other factors beyond producer control.

PRICE DEFICIENCY PAYMENTS, which will be due only if the national average price paid to farmers in 1978 falls below the 52-cent target price, will equal the amount of the short-fall times the established yield.

In essence, as reported earlier, the new ASCS instructions call for basing established yields on the average actual yields for the past three years. However, the average yield for the top four of the last five years will be taken, and if this average is above the lowest of the yields of the last three years, the four-year average will be substituted for that low year.

The three-year average calculated in this manner will be a farm's established yield, except that no farm's 1978 established yield will be lowered more than 10 percent from the established yield of 1977.

IN FORMING AN EXAMPLE OF THE new yield-computing formula, the PCG used 1973 through 1977 average actual yields for the 25-county area. The area's actual averages were 498.1 pounds per acre in 1973, 263.5 pounds in 1974, 278.8 in 1975, 365.5 in 1976, and an estimated 445 in 1977.

Thus the average of the best four of these five, leaving out 1974, is 396.8 pounds per acre. This figure substitutes for the low 278.8-pound yield of 1975, giving an adjusted 1975 through 1977 three-year average of 402.4 pounds per acre.

This would be the 25-county average established yield, if the 10 percent reduction limit didn't come into play.

Colorado Scabies Outbreak Severe

DENVER (UPI) — The outbreak of cattle scabies in eastern Colorado is the worst in 20 years and already has cost the livestock industry $4 million, state Agriculture Commissioner Evan Goulding said this week.

The state has quarantined all cattle shipped into Colorado, requiring that they be treated with pesticides to kill the mite that causes scabies. All cattle sold in the state also must be treated before they can be shipped.

"The timing couldn't be worse," Goulding said, "since cattlemen are only now beginning to recover from a four-year depression."

Scabies is caused by a mite which burrows into the skin of cattle, causing scabs to form. Goulding said meat quality is not affected, but the infections torment the animal.

He said 72 cases of scabies have been reported since October in feedlots and on ranches in 19 eastern Colorado counties.

The regulations adopted by the state Agriculture Commission to stop the spread of scabies were approved on an emergency basis and took effect March 1 for 90 days. The commission is expected to adopt permanent controls.

Several cattlemen fear the dipping requirements may have side effects.

Duane Flack, general manager of the Monfort of Colorado feedlot operation, said cows may reject calves which have been treated with pesticides. He said the cow "bonds" with its offspring through the sense of smell, which would be changed by the scent of the pesticide.

"Unless they're awfully good handlers, ranchers are going to have some orphan cattle on their hands," Flack said.

Flack said feedlots don't have to worry about the problem among calves, because they only receive older cattle. He said Monfort feedlots have had a policy for some time of treating all cattle brought into their lots and there has been no scabies at the lots since the 1950s.

The Denver Stockman's Market recently installed a new vat, at a cost of $17,000, to dip cattle. The market owners, Charles Alexander and Howard Brown, said they would charge buyers and sellers $1.25 to dip animals.

Crop Planting Status Near Year-Ago Mark

AUSTIN (AP) — Planting of three major cash crops — sorghum, cotton and corn — is running about even with last year, the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said Thursday.

But planting of the three crops is well behind the average for the past three years, the service also said.

The federal-state reporting service did not mention the American Agriculture Movement, some of whose participants threaten not to plant their crops this year.

The sorghum crop is nine percent planted, compared with eight percent last year and a three-year average pace of 18 percent; the cotton crop is one percent planted, equal to last year but behind the three-year average of two percent; and the corn crop is running even with 1977 at four percent, but less than the 14 percent three-year average.

"Rain delayed land preparation from the Cross Timbers eastward. Land preparations and fertilizer application were active in the Panhandle," the service said.

Live Cattle Futures In Sharp Dip

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Live cattle futures closed 45 to 150 points lower Thursday led by the two nearby months with limit declines on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Volume rose to an estimated 26,625 contracts.

Profit-taking and other selling followed Wednesday's advance to highest levels since 1974 after an early upturn of 20 points lacked follow-through.

The premium of futures to cash and escalating beef prices made for the sharp technical correction, analysts said.

Wholesale beef was unchanged to up one-half cent at 75 1/2 to 76 1/2 cents per pound, highest since December 1975. Cash cattle were steady to up 50 cents with the top at $51 per hundredweight.

The six markets expect 4,400 head to arrive today. Slaughter was estimated at 145,000 head.

Hog futures skidded 137 to 150 points on sales of 7,936 cars to close with most contracts down the limit after early gains of as many as seven points lacked follow-through.

Selling carried over from Wednesday and also spilled over from other meat futures. Traders cited sizeable kills and weakness in cash hams and loins at noon for the soft tone.

Prices were forced to their lowest points in more than a week, off 260 points recently.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to off three-fourths of a cent at 73 to 79 cents per pound asked, f.o.b. river points. Cash hogs were up 50 cents to off 25 with the top at $49.75 per hundredweight.

Pork belly (bacon) futures plummeted the daily limit of 200 points across the board with selling over at the final bell. Sales were held to 3,897 turnovers with many unsold offers at the limit.

Prices fell to their lowest points in a week, off 4.7 cents per pound from recent highs on profit-taking and other selling.

Limit losses in hog and cattle futures were factors in the bellies, along with technical considerations. Some higher cash bellies were ignored.

Wholesale bacon was up one cent to off three-fourths at 73 to 77 1/2 cents per pound f.o.b. river.

Snails, spiders, frogs and fish have been known to survive after being enclosed for weeks in ice crystals and near-solid masses of frozen ice or soil.

Smoke Detector Lack Blamed In Fire Casualties

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A report commissioned by the city attributes the 20 deaths and destruction in the Coates House fire Jan. 28 to a lack of smoke detectors in the hotel and apathy on the part of the guests.

The evaluation, given Thursday at a special meeting of the city council, counters in effect a conclusion reached by state Fire Marshal James Helbig, who blamed the city's new fire protection program.

Helbig said he found inadequate manpower on pumper and ladder trucks, unfamiliarity of firemen with their fire districts, their equipment and their fellow firemen, and poor maintenance.

Stocks In Gambling Firms Show Profit

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — If you had invested $1,000 in stocks of major gambling firms in December 1974, when the Dow Jones industrial average was at a modern low, your investment would be worth nearly $3,000 today.

The tripling in value among eight major publicly traded gaming stocks compares with a leisure industry growth of about 92 percent, and a Dow Jones industrial average increase of 33 percent.

"Most investors figure they're doing good if they double their investment in five to seven years," says Jake Noel, chief of the Economic Research and Securities Division of the Nevada Gaming Control Board. "The gaming stocks have almost tripled in value in just over three years."

Though no figures are compiled, Noel estimates that investments in casino-related stocks is in excess of $1 billion.

The increase in value for gaming stock has not gone unnoticed. When stock offerings are made by major gaming-related firms, the securities are snapped up quickly.

As an example of the popularity of such stocks. Noel notes that a $25 million public offering by Caesars World last December was sold within two days.

The growth is good news for the casino industry, which had to look for new revenue sources after passage of a 1975 federal law restricting loans from the Teamsters Union's Central States, Southeast Southwest Areas Pension Fund.

The pension fund, which was considered the industry's main financial backer, had more than $210 million in loans and loan commitments to casinos when the law passed.

Main gaming stocks include Bally Manufacturing Corp., Caesars World, Harrah's, Hilton Hotels, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and Del Webb Corp., all traded on the New York Stock Exchange; Showboat stock traded on the American Stock Exchange; and Golden Nugget stock traded on the Pacific Stock Exchange.

Noel's growth chart compared the casino-related stocks to about 20 leisure industry stocks ranging from Disney Productions to sporting goods and bathing suit companies and even fast-food chains. The chart also included all stocks used in the Dow Jones 65-stock average.

Argus Research Corp. of New York, in an analysis of gaming stocks, recently cited several reasons for public approval of gambling.

Theodore Anderson of Argus said most Americans believe that the tax benefits from legalization of gambling would be very substantial. That's certainly the case in Nevada, where gaming-related revenues pay half the cost of running state government.

In past years, traditional money sources like banks had been leery of gaming investments because of allegations of organized crime ties at some clubs. Anderson said there seems to be an attitude now that competition from private enterprise is the best way of forcing the criminal element out of gambling.

He also said studies show about 60 percent of Americans participate in gambling and about 80 percent favor its legalization in some form.

Anderson points out that trading in gaming stock can get erratic because of news about legalization, gaming licenses issued or revoked, or "politically motivated investigations."

But he adds that gaming operations seem to be "largely independent" of normal business cycles and tend to outperform earnings of other industries during recessionary or lackluster economic periods.

And legalization of casino gambling in states other than Nevada should benefit some existing gaming firms, if for no other reason than providing an opportunity for expansion, he said.

Strawberry Crop Late In Florida

PLANT CITY, Fla. (UPI) — A small number of farmers using only about 1,500 acres of land are harvesting a multimillion dollar crop of strawberries.

East of Tampa, around Plant City, Dover and Riverview, there are about 30 farmers producing the juicy red berries on farms ranging from about 10 acres to 250 acres. Last year, growers produced more than $10 million worth of strawberries and prices opened well this year.

But Dr. Charles Howard of the University of Florida Agriculture Extension Center's strawberry laboratory, said the crop is about three weeks behind schedule this year. This could cut down on the amount of berries the fields produce and on the amount shipped.

All of the Florida strawberry crop is shipped to the fresh fruit markets, primarily New York, Washington, Boston and Baltimore. Shipments already have been curtailed because of weather problems in the Northeast.

The cold, rainy weather in Florida this winter has delayed maturity of the fruit and harvesting in what is traditionally an exclusive Florida marketing time.

As strawberry crops from other areas begin coming into the market picture later in the spring, the price for Florida berries will start dropping.

It is then that the familiar "U-Pick" signs sprout in the strawberry fields.

Howard said it costs the grower about $3.75 to produce a flat of berries, which is about 16 pints. This includes the total cost from the time he begins to prepare the fields in October until the berries are picked and ready to be shipped.

So, when the price dips down to $4 a flat on the market, the farmers throw open the fields to anyone who wants to come pick their own berries for a price.

"The average field can produce about 2,000 flats of berries an acre," Howard said, "and in a good year, even the families with a 10-acre farm can make a good living."

While cold delays maturity and rain delays harvesting, strawberries are saved from freezes by being iced down. When temperatures dip below freezing and nearby citrus growers fire their groves or use wind machines to keep the cold from settling on the fruit, strawberry farmers spray their fields with water giving them the effect of vast ice skating rinks in the Florida sun.

Howard said the spray forms ice on the berries and plants, keeping the temperature at a constant 32 degree level "and they can survive that."

The strawberry season has been celebrated for the past 43 years in Plant City by the Strawberry Festival, a weeklong bash that also has taken on political hues over the years.

The festival probably hit its peak politically during the 1972 presidential campaign when Democratic candidates Henry Jackson and John Lindsay rode in the parade, along with Muriel Humphrey, who was standing in for her husband, the late Hubert Humphrey.

But all is not politics.

The fairgrounds come alive with entertainment and the midway and stalls are jammed with typical county fair exhibits and a host of booths where one can sample strawberries in various fashions — shortcake, pies, ice cream.

ROUGH AND TUMBLE—Ron Brewer of Arkansas takes a dive over UCLA's Roy Hamilton when they collided when going for the basketball in the first half of Thursday night's Western Regional semifinal game at Albuquerque. Hogs Topple UCLA; Dons Also Upset

By The Associated Press

"You've got to remember," says the Arkansas forward, "that from the time I was 7 until I was 17, they were national champs every year except one."

It explains why Counce was a bit "in awe" of the Bruins before Thursday night's Far West Regional game in the NCAA playoffs. But he didn't let it bother him too long.

Counce scored only two points, but it was his splendid defensive work on UCLA's David Greenwood that helped the Razorbacks upset the glamorous Bruins 74-70 in the semifinals of the Far West Regionals.

That glittering triumph moved Arkansas into Saturday's Far West championship game in Albuquerque, N.M., against Cal State-Fullerton, which advanced with a shocking 75-72 victory over No. 11 San Francisco Thursday night.

Kentucky and Michigan State both won big Thursday night to move into the finals of the Mideast Regionals in Dayton, Ohio, also on Saturday. The top-ranked Wildcats trounced Miami of Ohio 91-69 and the fourth-ranked Spartans routed Western Kentucky 90-69 in Thursday night games.

The NCAA tournament continues tonight with semifinal regional games in the East and Midwest. In the East Regional at Providence, R.I., it's Duke against Penn and Indiana vs. Villanova. The Midwest Regional pairs Notre Dame against Utah and DePaul with Louisville.

Marvin Delph and Sidney Moncrief sparked Arkansas to a 13-point lead at the half and the Razorbacks held off a furious second-half charge by UCLA.

Led by Roy Hamilton, the Bruins put on an exasperating press to cause a cache of turnovers after intermission, and finally pulled ahead of the Razorbacks 60-58 late in the game. But Arkansas rallied for six straight points on a pair of free throws by Ron Brewer and baskets by Delph and Steve Schall. The Razorbacks never trailed again.

"I thought the first half we played as well as we have all season," said Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton.

But Sutton said the UCLA press in the second half "certainly hurt us. It wasn't what we expected them to run."

He said that after UCLA had taken the 60-58 lead on Kiki Vandeweghe's basket, he told his players during a timeout, "Play smart, play hard and we'll be okay."

And Sutton added, "Our kids showed a lot of poise. A lot of teams would have folded when UCLA came back and took the lead, but we didn't."

Greenwood, an All-America forward, was held in check for the most part by Counce, scoring 17 points and collecting merely four rebounds.

Kevin Heenan sealed the victory with one second left when he connected on a free throw that was the result of a technical against the Dons for calling a timeout even though they had none left.

San Francisco, behind 7-footer Bill Cartwright, looked ready to blow the contest open in the first half, taking as much as a 15-point advantage. But the Titans, playing in their first NCAA tournament, came back in the second half behind the scoring punch of Anderson, Heenan, Greg Bunch and Mike Niles.

Cal State-Fullerton Coach Bob Dye wanted Anderson to take the last shot, even if it was a long-range job.

"In fact, I yelled, 'Shoot it,'" he said.

Dye added, "If he takes the last shot, I

Bits And Pieces

DAN IRONS, WHO started at offensive tackle for three seasons for Texas Tech, has undergone a third operation on his left knee. The left knee is the one that gave him much trouble during the 1977 campaign and forced him to miss four full games and most of a fifth. He first was operated on last spring for removal of a cyst. Later that spring, doctors went back in, finding and removing some torn cartilage. After a slow start in 1977 because of the injury, he did well for three or four games before the knee trouble flared again just before the TCU contest, and it continually failed to respond to rest and treatment.

Thus, the third operation was deemed necessary. Irons said doctors "tightened a ligament that was stretched, smoothed down some bones and generally cleaned the knee out." The operation clouds Irons' football future. He would undoubtedly be a high-round pro draft choice if he was healthy. "I'll be out a while, for sure," he said. "I'll be on crutches for six to eight weeks, but the doctor told me he thought this was necessary if I am going to play pro ball. He said I needed to sit out a year. I don't know, they may draft me this year anyway and just hold me out until next year." . . .

WALTER BRAGG, RECENTLY named an assistant football coach at Texas Tech, played four years at West Virginia University and was recruited by ex-Mountaineer and ex-Tech coach Jim Carlen. Carlen left WVU soon after that, however, so Bragg played his entire college career under Bobby Bowden. Bowden, of course, is now coaching at Florida State, which dealt Tech a stunning 40-17 loss in the most recent Tangerine Bowl . . .

Echoing most newcomers' sentiments about Lubbock, Bragg said, "The weather here is a big change. Back home (in Tennessee), the high school kids have missed a lot of school because of snow." . . . Quarterback Randy Page, a Tech football signee, is from Oklahoma City Southeast High School, the school that produced Don Trull . . .

Arkansas, the nation's 17th-ranked men's tennis team, has lost seven dual matches this season, all to teams ranked in the Top 12. The Hogs play Tennessee, a Top 10 team, this Saturday in Little Rock. Two other SWC teams—Texas and TCU—are rated in the Top 10 . . .

The Razorbacks' 30 wins in basketball this season is an SWC record for most in a single year. Houston finished 29-8 a year ago. Arkansas is 30-3 after defeating UCLA Thursday night in the West Regional semifinals . . .

RICE HASN'T HAD much athletic success in recent years, but its track team—usually decent, if not better—appears to be strong this season. It ripped Texas and Houston in a triangular meet last Saturday. The Owls scored 103 points to 44 apiece for UT and UH . . .

GCC Wins Marathon NAIA Tilt

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Grand Canyon College gave Coach Ben Lindsey his 250th career win early this morning, but it took three hours and five overtimes.

"That's the hard way to do it," said Lindsey after the longest NAIA tournament game in history. Only two games in the 41-year history of the tournament made the second overtime.

"It was a classic," Lindsey said. "I've never had a ballgame even resembling this."

Reserve guard Richard Bacon scored eight points in the fifth overtime for the 88-82 victory that advances second-seeded Grand Canyon to the semifinals tonight against East Texas State, which downed No. 1 ranked Drury 79-77 in quarter-final action Thursday.

Fifth-seeded Quincy defeated Missouri Southern 73-66 and Kansas State downed No. 1-seeded Winston-Salem 89-76 to advance to the other semifinal game. The finals are Saturday night.

"Richard Bacon did a tremendous job in the overtimes for us, and so did George Slade, although it seemed like he missed a million chances to win it," Lindsey said. Slade missed two baseline jumpers at the close of the second overtime, but tipped in Grand Canyon's go-ahead basket in the fifth overtime.

"Unbelievable," said Lindsey. "The finest individual performance I've ever seen. We had him surrounded by four guys and we still couldn't stop him."

Nicklaus, Six Others Share TPC's Top Spot

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — For many years, Jack Nicklaus geared his game around the Masters, carefully nursing his talents to a peak for the annual spring classic in Augusta, Ga.

But, with the advent of the Tournament Players Golf Championship, he's made a slight alternation.

"It's the most significant event we have on the regular tour," Nicklaus said.

"Since it has come into being, I like to get better a little quicker."

Nicklaus, who has finished second, first and second in his last three appearances, chipped close on the final hole for a birdie that put him in a massive jam of seven men tied for the first-round lead in the $342,000 event.

It is an event billed as the annual championship of the touring players and ambitiously hopes for a ranking equal to that enjoyed by the game's Big Four tournaments.

"It wasn't that easy out there," Nicklaus said of his trek through wind and rain over the 7,174-yard Sawgrass course that yielded only 11 subpar scores to the strongest field of the year and left some of the game's great players muttering in frustration.

"Under those conditions, a 70 is a pretty darn good score," Nicklaus said. "Actually, I'm surprised there are so many good scores."

Tom Weiskopf, who held off Nicklaus' charge and won the Doral Open last week, and defending title-holder Mark Hayes had 73s in the gusty winds and occasional drizzling rain. Arnold Palmer and Gary Player shot 74s. Lee Trevino and Hale Irwin were at 75. Tom Watson matched his worst score of the year, 76, and was tied with Jerry Pate and U.S. Open champ Hubert Green. Ray Floyd and Johnny Miller had 77s.

"For me," Nicklaus said, "this is one of the two worst kind of days to play. The wind makes it very tough. The other kind that's tough is an absolute bluebird day, when the weather's perfect and you know everybody is going to be shooting 65 and if you don't do the same you're going to be in 35th place."

He didn't face that sort of problem. But he did have to birdie the last hole to get a piece of the lead in the tournament he's won two of the four previous times it's been held.

Using the wedge that has worked such wonders in his last two starts, Nicklaus played a deft little pitch to about 3½ feet on the 18th hole and rolled in the birdie putt. He didn't hole any from off the green this time, but he was close.

Dallas Police Charge Dorsett

DALLAS (UPI) — Police today charged Dallas Cowboys running back Tony Dorsett with disorderly conduct for interfering with the arrest of a woman friend on drug charges.

Sgt. William Hix said Dorsett, 23, cursed a police officer who arrested Dorsett's companion on misdemeanor charges of possession of narcotics. The couple was initially stopped for speeding, he said.

Daqn Waatti, 27, was driving the auto in which Dorsett was a passenger, Hix said. Dorsett "just generally wouldn't stay out of the way while the arrest was being made," the sergeant said.

Messersmith Hurt, May Miss All Year

By The Associated Press

It's hard to label an athlete "hard-luck" when he is making $333,333 a year, but Andy Messersmith surely falls into that category.

The 32-year-old Messersmith was coming along fine in his comeback bid with the New York Yankees after recovering from surgery to his pitching elbow. But it all ended in one fleeting moment Thursday.

Messersmith tripped while covering first base in the third inning of the Yankees exhibition game with the Chicago White Sox and suffered a separation of his right shoulder. Preliminary reports don't indicate whether surgery is necessary, but it's feared the right-hander — obtained over the winter for $100,000 from the Atlanta Braves — is out for the year.

"He was really depressed," said Al Rosen, the Yankees executive-vice president. "I don't think he said more than two words to me on the way to the hospital."

Messersmith was the early surprise of the Yankee camp. Doctors had predicted he wouldn't be able to endure the rigors of pitching until June, but he was defying the odds.

"He was looking super, and nobody worked any harder," said Yankee skipper Billy Martin. "It would be different if the guy came to camp acting like a big man. He was like an eager young kid. No manager could ask for more. He fit right in over here. I looked at him and I looked at a starter."

Messersmith was scheduled to be in New York today to meet with team doctor Maurice Cowen, but Rosen wasn't overly optimistic that Messersmith would avoid surgery.

"You see," said Martin, "you can never have enough pitching."

No sooner had the outfielder learned of his shift from the San Francisco Giants to the Oakland A's in the Vida Blue trade, than he went out and hit two home runs — in the same inning — to lead his new team to a 19-0 whitewashing of the San Diego Padres.

Thomasson stepped to the plate with the bases loaded in the eighth inning and slammed a long home run, then came up with one man on later in the inning and drilled another shot over the fence. The A's scored 11 times in the eighth.

Dave Revering had two doubles and three runs batted in for the A's, while Jim Tyrone was 3-for-4 with two RBI.

Matt Keough, Joe Coleman and Alan Wirth combined on a three-hit shutout for Oakland. Wirth also was one of the seven players the Giants gave up to get Blue.

Larry Bowa and Garry Maddox drove in two runs apiece as the Phillies exploded for seven runs in the fourth inning and defeated the Cincinnati Reds 14-4 in a game called after seven innings because of rain.

Rookie shortstop Gary Soderholm cracked a three-run homer in the eighth inning to give the Minnesota Twins a 6-3 decision over the Montreal Expos. Gary Carter homered for the Expos.

A run-scoring triple by Vic Harris highlighted a six-run eighth inning that powered the San Francisco Giants to an 8-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers. Bob Knepper allowed just one hit in a four-inning stint. The Giants have won six in a row.

Willie Wilson and U.L. Washington drove in two runs each to lead the Kansas City Royals to a 8-6 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates. Pittsburgh has yet to win in seven games.

Mick Kelleher and Mike Sember each knocked in two runs in a six-run eighth inning that carried the Chicago Cubs to an 8-7 win over the Cleveland Indians. Cleveland had jumped to a 5-0 lead, but Joe Wallis started the Cubs' comeback with a two-run homer off Pat Dobson in the sixth inning.

John Stearns and Ed Kranepool hammered home runs and three New York pitchers limited Toronto to five hits, leading the Mets to a 6-2 victory over the Blue Jays. The triumph was the fifth straight for the Mets. Phil Niekro, Craig Skok and Tommy Boggs limited Baltimore to four singles and the Atlanta Braves downed the Orioles 4-2.

Jim Dwyer singled in a run and stole home as the St. Louis Cardinals came from behind with a four-run eighth inning to beat the Detroit Tigers 6-3.

Vida Blue Happy Ties Severed With Finley

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Vida Blue was told in the early hours of the morning that the Oakland A's had traded him to the San Francisco Giants. Almost before the sun had risen, he was talking money.

"I want to find out how much gold Mr. Lurie really has," Blue said Thursday, shortly after the trade was announced. "He's not going to get a player worth gold for some tinfoil."

The lefthander, who was both the American League's Cy Young Award winner and Most Valuable Player in 1971, said he intended to take some time off to "get his head together," and then was going to talk with Giants cochairman of the board Bob Lurie about renegotiating his contract.

Blue was swapped to the Giants in exchange for seven players, including outfielder Gary Thomasson, and cash estimated at $390,000. The deal was finalized minutes before the midnight inter-league trading deadline Wednesday.

Although he intends to try to renegotiate his contract — worth an estimated $180,000 annually and in effect for two more years — Blue said he was happy finally to have severed his ties with A's owner Charles Finley.

"It's like a weight off my shoulders," said Blue, who had a rocky relationship with Finley during his eight years with the A's.

Finley twice attempted to sell him, first to the Yankees in 1976, and to the Cincinnati Reds last winter. Both times, however, baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn stopped the sale.

Blue still has a lawsuit pending against Finley over his latest contract, asking that he be declared a free agent and awarded $1.5 million.

"I'm still suing Charlie and the possibility exists that I could become a free agent," Blue said. "If I do, then the Giants would be left holding the bag. I want to talk with them to make sure they know what they're getting into."

San Francisco General Manager Spec Richardson said the club would be willing to talk with Blue about renegotiating his contract.

Blue, 28, had a poor 1977 season, going 14-19 and posting a 3.83 earned run average. But his career record is 124-86 with a 2.94 ERA, and he's won 20 games or more three times.

Giants Manager Joe Altobelli said he hated to give up all the players, but it was worth it to get a pitcher the caliber of Blue.

"The Yankees were willing to pay $1.5 million for him in 1976, then the Reds were willing to pay $1.75 million for him recently," said Altobelli. "That indicates his worth."

Thomasson was the key player from the A's standpoint, and Oakland Manager Bobby Winkles said, "I think he'll hit 25 home runs and drive in 80 runs if he plays every day, which I expect he'll do."

"We hate to lose Vida," Winkles said. "He's a helluva player, but that's a helluva lot of players, too."

The 26-year-old Thomasson, who hit .254 with 17 homers in 145 games in 1977, said he was kind of flattered by the trade and hoped to play every day with the A's.

The other players dealt to the Giants were catcher Gary Alexander, 24, a .251 hitter in 77 games last year; Dave Heaverlo, 27, a righthanded pitcher who appeared in 56 games and was 5-1 last season; Alan Wirth, a 21-year-old righthander who was 15-5 for Waterbury in the Eastern League in 1977; John Johnson, a lefty who had a 24-7 record the past two years in the minors; another minor league pitcher, Phil Huffman, and a player to be named later.

"We gave away some good prospects," said Altobelli. "But you don't get something for nothing. The deal should help both clubs."

Winkles agreed, saying, "I think the trade moves the Giants closer to Cincinnati and Los Angeles in their division, and puts us closer to where we want to be."

AMERICAN LEADS

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Bruce Robert Douglass of Brockton, Mass., shot a 5-under-par 67 to take a 1-stroke lead on the first day of the $50,000 Malaysian Ringgit Open golf championship at Royal Selangor Golf Club Thursday. Douglass, a newcomer to the Asian circuit, collected six birdies and one bogey on the new 6,377-yard course. Simon Owen of New Zealand was a stroke behind Douglass with a 4-under-par 68.

'Normal' Baseball Big Aid To Jeff Burroughs

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — If you want to know about a baseball, ask the man who hits one. That makes Jeff Burroughs of the Atlanta Braves an expert on the subject.

In seven major league seasons, Burroughs has clubbed 149 home runs, 41 of them last season after the Braves surrender five players to pry him away from Texas. That was quite a jump from the 18 he managed in his final season with the Rangers. The difference, according to Burroughs, was simple.

"First of all, Rawlings got the ball back to normal," he said. "And second of all, Atlanta has a good hitting ballpark, a lot better than Texas."

The manufacturer of major league baseballs was turned over to the Rawlings company in 1977 after Spalding surrendered the contract.

"You can feel the difference," said Burroughs. "The stitching is different. In 1976, you could move the cover around on a brand new baseball. You hit it once or twice and it was shot."

The baseballs Burroughs hit in Atlanta often appear to be shot — right out of a cannon. That's just what the Braves figured would happen when they dealt for Burroughs. Only two of the five players Atlanta gave up in that swap are still with the Rangers, and one of the five, pitcher Adrian Devine, is back with the Braves.

"The ballpark is one of the best in baseball for home runs," said Burroughs. "There are a lot of good home run parks in the National League — Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Los Angeles, Chicago with that wind, and San Diego."

Burroughs homered in his first National League swing against J.R. Richard of Houston and also homered in his first swing at Atlanta Stadium against another Astro, Mark Lemongello. Of his 41 home runs, 27 were hit in Atlanta.

"I hit the ball better last year than I ever have," said Burroughs. "I hit it consistently hard all year. I didn't really have a slump."

Burroughs was one of the few bright spots in a disastrous 61-101 Atlanta season. Now he is the nucleus around which the Braves' rebuilding plans are constructed. That's happened before to Burroughs, who once was hailed as baseball's next great right-handed hitter by no less an authority than Ted Williams.

Williams was manager of the Rangers' ancestral forefathers, the Washington Senators, when Burroughs was drafted out of high school in Long Beach, Calif., in 1969. A look-see was arranged at Anaheim Stadium with Prof. Williams studying the young man's style. It was love at first sight.

"Well, you know Williams," Burroughs said with a laugh. "He gets real excited. He liked the way I swung. He loves hitters."

Burroughs was a hitter then, and he's still one now. If you don't believe it, ask Ted Williams, or, better still, any National League pitcher.

The Titans had called timeout with 13 seconds to go, and Anderson said the play they decided to use Anderson or Heenan to take the final shot.

"But the clock was running out and the coach was yelling to shoot," said Anderson, "so I did."

Mike Phillips scored 24 points to pace Kentucky over Miami, the team that upset defending national champion Marquette last weekend. Phillips scored five of Kentucky's first seven baskets to get the Southeastern Conference champions started in the one-sided game.

"Our shooting in the first half and our size were the big factors," said Kentucky Coach Joe Hall. "We never let them even think about catching up to us."

"They're awesome," said Hedric. "I can see why they're No. 1. They have a lot of smart personnel and their power is unlimited."

Greg Kelser and Robert Chapman each scored 23 points as Michigan State buried Western Kentucky. It was the second straight NCAA tournament game that the Spartans had moved out to an early lead and the second straight game that Kelser had scored 23 points. They had opened a 24-8 lead early in their victory over Providence.

"Maybe I should just stop coaching and let them play," quipped Michigan State Coach Jud Heathcote. "I'm not pleased that we played well only in spurts. It's hard to dominate especially in the tournament."

For Western Kentucky Coach Jim Richards it was a particularly sad farewell since he announced at midseason that he would not be back next year.

"I've been with these kids a long time," Richards concluded, "and just like many of them, I am also a senior tonight."

Murray Tabs Coach

MURRAY, Ky. (AP) — Murray State University reached into the ranks of the Southeastern Conference Thursday to pick Ron Greene of Mississippi State as its new basketball coach.

"I'm glad to be home," said Greene, a graduate of and former assistant coach at Murray. "This is a big day for me."

Hours earlier, Greene had been named SEC Coach of the Year by The Associated Press in recognition of his performance at Mississippi State. Greene, in his first year at State, guided the Bulldogs to an 18-9 season and the runnerup spot behind Kentucky.

Odessa Stuns LHS 2-1

MONAHANS (Special) — Odessa High scored the winning run on a controversial play in the bottom of the seventh inning to defeat Lubbock High 2-1 Thursday in the Monahans Invitational tournament.

Odessa, now 4-3-1, faces Pecos, 4-3, in a winner's bracket semifinal today at 5 p.m. Lubbock, 7-2, meets Seminole (4-3) in the loser's bracket today at 12:30 p.m. Seminole fell to Pecos 6-4 in a first-round game.

With the bases loaded and no outs, Odessa's Barney Marquez scored the winning run from third when designated hitter Daryle Greene flew to center field. LHS center fielder Ernest Day made the catch and threw to shortstop Andy Vasquez for double play. Vasquez covered second base and tossed to third base as LHS appealed that Marquez had left the third-base bag before the catch. Umpires rejected the appeal, however.

Each team had scored once in the fourth inning. Lubbock scored first as Terry Brady singled and pinch-runner Larry Walker swiped second base and advanced to third on Roy Morin's single. Walker stole home for the run.

"It's the best we've played all year with the exception of our hitting," said LHS coach Vince Buffamonte. "We didn't compete very well with the bat, though."

Davis Cup Warped By Policital Bickerings

BY WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Special Correspondent

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Now that so many people are striving to preserve old landmarks like Grand Central Station and Radio City Music Hall, we wonder if anybody has a kind word for tennis' Davis Cup.

It's a decaying artifice.

Less than 10 year ago, the Davis Cup was the glittering grail of international tennis. It was kept in bank vaults guarded as zealousy as the queen's jewels. Nations trained for months and crossed oceans in pursuit of it.

It's history was intertwined with all of the great names of the years like big Bill Tilden in the 1920s, France's four Musketeers — LaCoste, Cochet, Brugnon and Borotra — Britain great Fred Perry, Don Budge, Jack Kramer and the awesome age capitalized by the Aussies.

Tennis teams of America and Australia battled like two heavyweights for three decades. Once they played in 16 straight finals. In one period, Australia won 15 of 18 matches.

In 1954, more than 26,000 people jammed into Sydney's White City Stadium to watch Tony Trabert and Vic Seixas wrest the trophy from Australia's Fuzz Kids, Lew Hoad and Ken Rosewall.

This week a more mature Tony Trabert emerges as the captain of a U.S. team seeking to beat South Africa in a North American Zone match. No extra bleachers this time. Perhaps as many as 6,000 empty seats in the 9,500 seat Vanderbilt University gymnasium — many fans discouraged by sign-carrying, chanting pickets protesting South Africa's apartheid, or legal segregation.

The Davis Cup isn't what is used to be. It is warped by national jealousies and political bickerings, the same sort of ideological warfare that is jeopardizing the Olympic Games. It's wash of gold has been jaded by the advent of open competition, staggering purses and personal priorities.

How are you going to get a man to play for his country for a patriotic pitance when a promoter down the road is offering him a weekend payday of $25,000-$50,000?

The United States is the strongest tennis nation in the world. Australia used to be. Now Uncle Sam is. No other country in the world can field a team of the Yanks' depth. Not the Aussies, not Sweden with Bjorn Borg, not Argentina with Guillermo Vilas and not Mexico with Raul Ramirez.

Yet the United States hasn't won the Cup since 1972. In the last five years it has lost to Australia, Columbia, Argentina and twice to Mexico. In three of these cases it didn't have its top gun, Jimmy Connors.

Connors, having recovered form an old Davis Cup pout, says he is willing to play. But outside pressures prevent the United States from being able to call on its top talent in every series just as Australians have defaulted their Davis Cup superiorty because of outside interests.

"I think the Davis Cup is very important," said Trabert. "With all the money these guys make, you would think they wouldn't miss the opportunity to do something for their country."

H.E. "Slew" Hester, the U.S. Tennis Association president, is more concerned over political wranglings than player apathy.

"The Davis Cup should be the biggest and most important part of our program," he said. "I would like to see the Davis Cup built into something equivilent to football's Super Bowl or baseball's World Series by bringing the eight strongest nations into one place for a giant playoff on national television. But the Davis family, who control the Cup, prefers that it remain on a people to people, country to country basis just as Dwight Davis had intended it when he put up the Cup 78 years ago."

Pistons Down Rockets

By The Associated Press

Bob Kauffman is finding out how the other half lives . . . and he's not sure he likes it.

"It's hard to keep everybody happy and utilize everybody when you're in this position," says the Detroit Piston coach.

Kauffman, of course, was general manager of the National Basketball Association team until switching to his new job earlier this season.

And not only has he found it harder balancing the personnel than the budget, he doesn't enjoy sweating out close games — like Thursday night's 106-98 triumph over the Houston Rockets.

Bob Lanier, Eric Money and John Shumate combined for 67 points and the Pistons scored the last eight points of the game to beat the Rockets and keep their hopes alive for the NBA playoffs.

"It's tough when you're going well in a game like we were tonight and get beat at the end," said Houston's Ed Ratleff. "Detroit played well. I don't want to take anything away from them. They're fighting for the playoffs and losing to us would have been rough for them."

Lanier hit two free throws for Detroit with 1:56 remaining to break a 98-98 tie. The Pistons followed with baskets by Shumate and M.L. Carr and a pair of free throws by Chris Ford. Lanier finished with 25 points. Money and Shumate added 22 and 20, respectively for the Pistons.

Warriors 104, Hawks 98

Sonny Parker and Phil Smith combined for six free throws in the final 76 seconds to pace Golden State over Atlanta — the Warriors' fifth triumph in their last six games.

The victory boosted Golden State to within 1½ games of idle Milwaukee in the race for the sixth playoff spot in the National Basketball Association's Western Conference.

The loss, sixth straight on the road for Atlanta, dropped the Hawks a half game behind Cleveland into a sixth-place tie with New Orleans in the playoff scramble in the Eastern Conferepce.

Cavaliers 112, Celtics 102

Campy Russell and Austin Carr scored 21 points each to pace Cleveland over Boston. The pair sparked the Cavaliers to a 31-24 lead after the first quarter, then helped them blow open the game in the fourth quarter.

Russell and Carr helped the Cavaliers move from a seven-point lead at the end of three quarters to 13 points midway through the last period. Their biggest lead was 14 points on a basket by Terry Furlow that made it 112-98 with 28 seconds left.

"We couldn't get the press going tonight," said Boston Coach Tom Sanders. "When we pressed, they got the easy bucket. It was a gamble that didn't pay off. Also, we were not aggressive enough going to the basket in the first half."

Bulls 111, Bullets 107

John Mengelt came off the bench to score a season-high 27 points and Mickey Johnson added 23 as Chicago snapped a four-game losing streak by defeating Washington. The Bulls had trailed until early in the third quarter.

Rookie Mark Landsberger picked up six assists and grabbed a game-high 21 rebounds to help the Chicago cause. Bob Dandridge led the Bullets with 23 points. Kevin Grevey added 20 points, before leaving with a twisted ankle early in the fourth quarter.

SuperSonics 123, Jazz 98

Dennis Johnson and John Johnson combined for 23 points in a decisive third period to lead Seattle past New Orleans. The Sonics led 54-47 at the half and pulled away steadily in the game-breaking third quarter, improving their lead to as much as 20 points in that stretch.

Dennis Johnson had 12 points in the third period and 14 for the game and John Johnson added 11 points in the quarter and hit 15 for the game.

The Giants' To Play 40 Outings In Oakland

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — It will be Vida Blue and "the Giants," perhaps in a unique second-home opening game, at the Oakland Coliseum this season if the Oakland A's quickly create a vacancy.

The San Francisco Giants received the city's permission Thursday to play 40 of their 81 home games in Oakland each season and co-owner Bob Lurie said of the arrangement, even though it could cost the team an extra $250,000 a year, "It's fair."

The next step toward solving the Bay Area's baseball problem, however, is moving the A's to Denver, and team owner Charles O. Finley says Oakland officials are being anything but fair. Before Denver oilman Marvin Davis puts down $12.5 million for the American League franchise, Finley must get out of a stadium lease which has 10 years to run.

"The Coliseum's terms are so grossly unfair to me that I might be prevented from leaving," Finley said Thursday night. "Hopefully, they can be negotiated. There's no need to put a gun to my head.

"I've guarenteed them they will not lose a penny, that they can take the average of what they've made on parking, concessions and rental — their total average income for 10 years — and I'll guarantee they get that much over the next 10 years."

Finley was in Chicago Thursday but hoped to talk soon by telephone with Robert Nahas, president of the Oakland Coliseum.

The Coliseum was asking for parity with Candlestick Park and got virtually that when San Francisco's Park and Recreation Commission, after getting a recommendation from Mayor George Moscone, voted to allow the Giants to play in Oakland and to call themselves simply "the Giants" for those 40 games. Oakland had asked for a name change.

The Giants are scheduled to open the National League season April 7 at Candlestick against the San Diego Padres.

Lurie said Thursday, "I think there's a good chance now that we'll be playing in Oakland. It's possible we could play our first game there as early as April 8."

And it would be a natural choice to go with Blue, the A's pitching star acquired in Wednesday night's big trade, as the pitcher in the Oakland opener.

The Giants and A's, both second-division finishers, drew 700,000 and 495,000, respectively last season, with both totals league lows, so the approval of other owners to the Giants' two-town setup and the A's proposed move is considered automatic.

"If everything works out, I think it will be sometime next week," Lurie said, anticipating a National League meeting then.

The American League has scheduled a meeting in Tampa, Fla., March 27 to discuss the A's matter.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and both league presidents, Chub Feeney of the National and Lee MacPhail of the American, met here Thursday morning with Lurie and Mayor Moscone. Kuhn has made two trips to San Francisco in the past month, hoping to end the two-team situation which has caused so much red ink.

Finley moved the A's from Kansas City to Oakland in 1968 and made money until recently, but even while the team was winning three consecutive world championships it did not draw well at the gate, topping 1 million attendance just twice.

At the A's training camp in Mesa, Ariz., almost all the players were openly rooting for the move to Denver to become a reality.

"If we stay, it will be tough all the way around," said third baseman Wayne Gross. "I don't want to make any predictions, but if we drew 400,000 we'd be lucky."

NFL Seeking Solution To Stockpiling

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Some teams, mainly the winners, like the term "developmental squads." The losers generally call it "stockpiling." It is one of the thornier issues confronting the National Football League.

And in today's final sessions of the winter meetings, 28 club owners tried to thrash out a solution to a problem which has, in the past few seasons, been dealt with in an under-the-table manner.

The developmental squad, in theory, is players on the teams' injured reserve lists, out for the season and not on the 45-man (43 active plus two inactive) rosters, but nevertheless able to work out and develop their talents for future seasons.

It is, as a matter of fact, just a bit more than theory. More than a couple of clubs have put it into practice, stockpiling players.

Here's how it works: Let's say a team has a couple of good rookie linemen, good enough to make the team but not good enough to start. The team doesn't want to lose them so, if it is so inclined, the team "invents" injuries, places the two rookies on the injured reserve list and replaces them on the roster with a couple of free agents. For the rest of the year these two rookies practice with the team and on their own and come back next year as better players. This, of course, is all conjecture.

But in the past few years an inordinate number of players have been placed on the injured reserve lists, some with questionable injuries.

To put it even more simply, it is obvious that the 45th player on the Dallas Cowboys' roster is a heck of a lot better than the 45th on Tampa Bay's roster. And if, with an additional dozen injured reserve players, it'd be a good bet the 57th Cowboy would be better than the 57th Buccaneer. With developmental squads, the winners get to develop the talent. Without the developmental squads, the injured reserve players can't work out — so maybe fewer of them wind up as injured reserve players to begin with.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, assessing the benefits and drawbacks of the idea, says: "The pluses would be, one, you have extra players to utilize in practice when sometimes a squad is short and, two, you're on injured reserve for a year and the thinking is you might as well be trained as long as you're being paid rather than losing that practice time until the following year."

"The basic negative to permitting the practice is that it seems to have encouraged in the last year or two clubs putting players on injured reserve who were not very seriously injured. And when they do that prior to the final cutdown, they in effect have a higher cutdown than other clubs, because they have reduced their total squad to perhaps their 50 best players rather than dipping down to the 43 best as you're supposed to do at the final cutdown."

This year, with the preseason reduced from six exhibition games to four (and an increased regular season from 14 to 16 games), the number of cutdown dates also has been cut, from four to three.

The training camps will swing into high gear the third weekend in July, when veterans show up. At that point, the teams can have an unlimited number of players on the roster.

Teams must reduce the rosters to 60 players by Aug. 15, after two exhibitions; to 50 players by Aug. 22 and to 43 players by Aug. 28. Between that date and Sept. 3, the opening of the regular season, each team may add its two inactive players to the roster. The dates and numbers were approved unanimously Thursday.

A year ago, with six exhibitions, the cutdown steps were 60, 52, 48 and 43 players. Last season the final five were "no recall, no withdrawal" players, meaning a team which cut one of them couldn't pull him back, and a team which bid for him couldn't withdraw the bid. This year the number of no recall, no withdrawal players is seven.

Also today, the owners figure to study and perhaps approve different ways of breaking final-standings ties (last year's point differentials and other such terms had fans, players, coaches and owners alike scratching their heads in consternation), and to at least discuss television blackouts and instant replays.

Davis Cup Officials Nervous

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — South African and U.S. tennis players seemed unrattled as they prepared for their Davis Cup meeting tonight. But tournament officials were nervous as protest groups promised massive demonstrations against the South African presence and that country's apartheid policy.

In the opening matches tonight, American Vitas Gerulaitis meets South African Bernie Mitton, and Harold Solomon will play Byron Bertram.

Ticket sales as of Friday night had reached a total of 2,772 for the three days of the event, which has drawn campus and city police to guard the Vanderbilt University Gym, where players have been practicing all week. Tournament officials have said they must sell 4,000 tickets for each day to break even.

Joe Davis, a former coal mine operator who is putting up much of the financing for the tournament, said he was certain the heavy security and press reports about anticipated demonstrations had frightened away many who would have bought tickets.

"Oh, yes," he said, "this community has never been through anything like this before." In fact, the last time police went on this type of alert was 10 years ago after Martin Luther King was killed in Memphis.

The players, however, were cool, saying the demonstrations would not bother them as long as there were no disruptions during the matches.

Last year at the South Africa-United States meeting in Newport Beach, Calif., two men, never linked by police to any organization, spilled oil on the court during play.

"We've been able to concentrate very well . . . they (the players) are going to come out on the court and play just the way you come out to watch us," Claude Lister, the South African from Great Britain, said of his players.

But he added, "I think it's a sad day for sports."

"Obviously, we prefer they not demonstrate," said South African doubles player Frew McMillan. "But I also recognize they have a right to do so." McMillan said there was no purpose to be served by refusing to play, as his countryman Ray Moore did three weeks ago. Moore said then he did not condone apartheid but objected that the Davis Cup was being turned into a political forum for those who oppose his country's racial policies.

"That seems a bit of a contradiction. If you don't believe it should be a political forum, you should stay and play and make sure that it doesn't become one," said McMillan.

The Flying Queens (31-3) will battle 16th-ranked Ohio State (23-6) in tonight's semifinals. The other semifinal game will match third-ranked North Carolina State (28-4) and 13th-rated Missouri (25-5).

The winners will play in a 7:30 p.m. contest Saturday for the title and the right to advance to the final round of four on the campus of UCLA March 23.

The Flying Queens have a 14-game winning streak going.

They will go with their usual starting lineup Jill Rankin (14.7), Marie Kocurek (13.7), Kathy Harston (13.4), Breena Caldwell (11.8) and Valerie Goodwin (10.2).

City Net Tourney Under Way

Tennis racquets will be the weapons of the day, and more than 550 high schoolers started swinging away at each other this morning at 8:30. It's the annual Lubbock Invitational Tennis Tournament and completion will continue through Saturday.

Players from 44 schools will be in attendance here today, in four divisions (A, B, C, and junior high), but the dominant school is expected to be Midland High, the defending champion. The school's tennis team is considered the best in the state, and its players have been seeded No. 1 in three of the four Division A brackets and two of the four Division B categories.

The city meet has drawn teams from as far east as Wichita Falls, as far north as Borger, as far south as Midland and as far west as Kermit.

Play will be held on 60 courts throughout the city in the early rounds. The A division action, however, will be held at the Lubbock Tennis Center, at 66th and Indiana.

Team championships will be awarded in each divisions.

Hereford Nabs JV Golf Title

HEREFORD (Special)— Host Hereford's junior varsity went out on the first day of the Deaf Smith County Golf Tourment and won a division. And the varsity is one of the favorites for the upper-division championship.

Whereas the JVs played only 18 holes in picking a champion, the varsity units will play 18-hole rounds today and Saturday.

The Herd is the favorite, along with Monterey, for the varsity team title. Familiarity with the course will be one of the factors in the Whitefaces' favor.x However, Monterey outshot Hereford in last weekend's District 4-AAAA match after the situation had been reversed in Lubbock ten days ago in the opening district match.

Today's field will include Amarillo, Coronado, Lubbock High, Plainview, Pampa, Tascosa, and Palo Duro.

Teams began teeing off at 9 a.m. today.

Hereford JV shot a 327 in winning its division Thursday. Plainview was a stroke back, and Monterey JV was fifth at 357. Coronado followed at 358, and Lubbock High JV was tenth at 392. Thirteen schools had teams in the JV division.

Alex Gurula led Coronado with an 87, Barry Robinson shot 81 for Monterey, and Tim King had a 91 for pace the LHS junior varsity.

Tech Coach Hopes For Sweep Of TCU

FORT WORTH (Special)—Riding a four-game winning streak and possessors of a surprising 9-9 season mark, Texas Tech will open a three-game Southwest Conference baseball series today with a single game against TCU, beginning at 3 p.m.

The Raiders, who surprised Baylor with a doubleheader sweep last Saturday and then upped their winning streak with a pair of victories over Hardin-Simmons Tuesday, will battle TCU in a twin bill Saturday, starting at 1 p.m.

Tech coach Kal Segrist is aware that this series is a very important one for his team, which is 3-3 in conference action.

"We need badly to win big the next two weekends," he said. "We need definitely to win both series (the second is versus SMU in Dallas) and, hopefully, sweep them. If we can be 8-4 or 9-3 in conference play going into the final stretch, it would be a big help and would really improve our chances of getting into the (post-season) tournament."

Following the SMU series March 24-25, the Raiders will play four nonconference games before beginning the toughest part of their schedule, a four-week span in which they will play three-game SWC sets with Arkansas, Houston, Texas A&M and Texas. Those are four of the league's top five title contenders.

"Those last four weeks will be tough," Segrist admitted.

Segrist's very young team has gotten by thus far on what has usually been a reasonably good defense and a surprisingly adequate pitching staff. Recently, the Raiders have gotten some clutch hits, also.

These were absent throughout most of the early season.

Freshmen Larry Womble, Rick Hall and Gary Moyer have earned-run averages of 2.20, 2.31 and 2.33, respectively, and David Bolton's is 2.73. Last season, no Tech pitcher—save for Mike Bewley, who hurled just one inning—had an ERA below 3.00.

Hall shut out strong-hitting Baylor on four hits last Saturday, and Womble threw a five-hitter at Hardin-Simmons last Tuesday in a 5-4 win.

"That was Womble's first opportunity to pitch much," Segrist said, "but he'll get more. How well he does the rest of the way could make a lot of difference for us. He could really give us some depth, either as a starter or long reliever."

TCU is 6-7 for the season and 2-1 in SWC play after taking two of three games from SMU last weekend. Like several SWC teams, the Horned Frogs have been hampered in the early going by poor weather, which has limited their workout time.

Outfielder Steve Houk is the Frogs' leading hitter with a .421 average, followed by centerfielder Terry Bellows' .387 mark. First baseman Biff LeFevre is batting .364, while leftfielder John Shelley is hitting .359.

Senior Reuben Tomlin (2-1) will pitch today's game for TCU. Hall (2-2) is expected to be Tech's starter.

Saturday, lefthander Robert Bryant (1-3) will pitch the first game for Tech, and the Raiders' second-game hurler has not yet been selected. TCU will counter Saturday with Dale Arnold (1-1) and either Glen Pierce (1-1) or Cameron Young (1-2).

Who Caused Cards Woes?

By MICKEY HERSKOWITZ And STEVE PERKINS

Q. Will you tell me if any of the other NFL teams can make any sense out of what has happened to the St. Louis Cardinals? Is it simply a refusal by management to pay standard salaries?

— Carol Wolfert, Mission, Ks.

A. One general manager told us, "Somebody ought to change the locks on Billy Bidwill's door," in reference to the St. Louis owner's lockout of Don Coryell. Insiders believe that the parsimonious No. 2 man, Joe Sullivan, is management. As it turns out, a $125,000 contract would have kept Terry Metcalf on the team, but now the Cards' offense will be much easier to defense.

The matter goes beyond salaries, however. When the Cardinals dethroned the Cowboys in 1975 to win the NFC East, the team was flying home after clincing the title and a party was set up to celebrate on arrival in St. Louis. Two months later, Sullivan had the club's player-rep, tackle Dan Dierdorf, informed that the players would have to pick up the $3,000 tab for the dinner. A compromise was reached, but the players never forgot the incident. Also, they have never won the division title since.

Q. Does anyone know what happened to Derek Sanderson? At one point he was the highest paid player in hockey, and next moment he was out of the game.

— Cary Hewlitt, Philadelphia

A. Sanderson hasn't yet given up entirely, and has just been given another chance by the Detroit Red Wings. What happened to him is probably best capsuled by his own advice to young hockey players: "A woman will put you in the minors within a year. Stay away from liquor. You're your own worst enemy."

Q. My wife gave me a Wilson football for my birthday. Do you know what kind of treatment or preservative I could use to keep it in shape? That is, what do the colleges and the NFL do to treat footballs?

— Eddie L'Estrange, Baltimore

A. The only preparation allowed on an NFL football is Cramer Tape Remover, a solution used during the game to remove "stickum" used by receivers and defensive backs. Two hints: Keep air pressure between 12½ and 13½ pounds. If the ball gets wet, let the air out and dry it out at room temperature before reinflating. A wet football tends to stretch and lose its shape.

Q. Can you tell me what's happened to Pete Rademacher? (Ellis Hairston, Indianapolis) Rex Kern? (Ray Swiderski, Traberse City, Michigan), Ollie Matson? (Dora Johnson, Jackson, Mississippi).

A. Rademacher lives in Medina, Ohio, and is president of Kiefer-McNeil, a company which produces swimming pool chemicals. Kern is back in Columbus, Ohio, and a very successful businessman (insurance, real estate). Matson is assistant general manager of the Los Angeles Coliseum, where he once scored so many touchdowns.

Trio Cards 71s; Winds Steal Crosby Thunder

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Penny Pulz, Amy Alcott and Silvia Bertolaccini were the first-round leaders, but a Santa Ana wind was the big news at the $165,000 Kathryn Crosby Golf Classic.

Misses Pulz, Alcott and Bertoluccini all carded 1-under-par 71s Thursday to tie for the first-day lead in the 72-hole Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament at the 6,212-yard Rancho Bernardo golf course as the wind played havoc with the 121 entries.

"Lord, when I went to the course this morning I thought the way the wind was blowing par would be at least 75," said Betty Burfeindt, who was tied for second place with Pat Bradley at 72 entering today's second round.

"The wind affected my judgment," said the 22-year-old Miss Alcott. "Playing well in the wind comes only with experience."

Miss Bertolaccini, a 28-year-old native of Argentina, had the wildest round of the leaders with six birdies and five bogeys.

"Anything can happen in the wind," she said. "Fortunately, I made all the short putts."

Miss Pulz, 25, is from Melbourne, Australia. She's never won an LPGA tournament nor has she ever been a first-round leader.

"I didn't do anything stupid. I just hit my shots solidly," said the four-year veteran of the American tour.

Nine players, including defending champion Sandra Palmer, were still on the course Thursday when play was sussended because of darkness. They were to conclude their rounds this morning prior to the second round.

Rounds for the threesomes were slowed to more than five hours by the steady wind of 30 miles per hour most of the day.

Five players were deadlocked at 73 including Nancy Lopez, the winner of the last two LPGA tournaments. Also at 73 were JoAnne Carner, Jan Stephenson, Donna Caponi Young and Susie McAllister.

Debbie Austin, who won the LPGA's initial tournament this year and led most of the way in the $100,000 Sunstar Classic in Los Angeles last week, had her worst round of the year with an 80 Thursday.

The tour's other winner this year, Jane Blalock, had a 75, joining Bonnie Lauer and Judy Kimball. There were two players at 74 — Kathy Cornelius and Sandra Post.

BURIAL BENEFITS!

NO PHYSICAL EXAM NEEDED!

Social Security provides $255.00 for burial—far short of the amount needed to pay today's funeral expenses. According to a survey conducted by the Wall Street Journal, the average funeral in the United States costs $1600.00. By the time last illness expenses (hospital and doctor) are added, these costs may approach $2,000.00 to $3,000.00.

Combined Underwriters has designed Policy Form 74-LW which is a whole life nonparticipating policy which will assist you in meeting these final obligations. Rates can never be increased on this funeral service policy.

This plan is available on an individual or family basis. Other plans are available, including coverages for those persons with health problems. To obtain complete information for yourself and your family, without obligation, return the coupon and this information will be furnished.

HIGHLIGHTS
GENERAL
NEW YORK — James P. Roach, former sports editor of the New York Times and a noted boxing and horse racing writer, died in New York at the age of 70

INDIANAPOLIS — A federal judge declined to issue a temporary restraining order requested by the National Collegiate Athletic Association against the Amateur Athletic Union. The NCAA filed an anti-trust suit in U.S. District Court on Thursday, charging the AAU with "abuse of monopoly power."

WASHINGTON — The Federal Communications Commission told CBS Thursday it would penalize the network for misleading the public by saying four broadcast tennis matches were "winner-take-all" when the prizes were actually split. But the commission voted 7-0 to delay for 30 days a decision on a penalty to give CBS time to submit any data showing mitigating grounds.

TENNIS
WASHINGTON — Top-seeded Brian Gottfried and three other ranked players won easily to move into the quarter-finals of the $125,000 Washington stop on the men's professional tennis tour. Gottfried defeated Phil Dent 6-2, 6-1 while No. 4 seed Raul Ramirez defeated Gene Mayer 6-3, 7-5. No. 7 seed Stan Smith ousted Mike Cahill 7-6, 6-1, winning the first set tiebreaker 7-4 and No. 8 seed Tim Gullikson defeated Tony Roche 6-4, 6-4.

BOSTON — Chris Evert survived a scare from veteran Rosemary Casals to win a three-set match and move into the semifinals against Billie Jean King in a $100,000 women's tennis tournament. Miss Evert, in her first tournament after an extended vacation, lost the first set to Miss Casals 7-5 after leading 3-0. But she came back to win the next two sets 6-1, 6-3. Defending Wimbledon champion Virginia Wade fell in the quarter-finals to 19-year-old Marise Kruger 3-6, 7-5, 7-6. Mrs. King got by Marita Redondo 6-1, 7-6. Also advancing to the quarter-finals was top-seeded Martina Navratilova, who swept to a 6-0, 6-1 victory over Florenza Mihai of Rumania, and eighth-seeded Kerry Reid, who defeated Australian Leslie Hunt 7-5, 6-3.

AUTO RACING
HAMPTON, Ga. — Cale Yarborough earned the pole position for the 19th annual Atlanta 500 on Sunday with a speed of 162.006 mph. Yarborough, driving an Oldsmobile, earned $1,000 for the fastest qualifying speed on an unseasonably cool afternoon in gusty winds.

HORSE RACING
CHELTENHAM, England — The Cheltenham Gold Cup — the most important British horse steeplechase of the year after the Grand National — was postponed Thursday because of snow. Three inches of snow covered the Cheltenham course, where the race has been run since 1924.

113 Squads Enter 'Heart' Net Tourney

A number of prominent local teams are included among the 113 teams entered in this weekend's second annual Heart Open Doubles tournament at the Lubbock Racquet Club.

Racquet club pro Bob Conaway is teamed with Coronado tennis coach Jim Carter while Monterey coach Steve Thomas is paired with Dunbar coach Charlie Morris. Coronado players Philip Catuogno and Steve Wyett are paired along with the Davis brothers, Doug and Greg. Other top local teams are Alton Setliff-Dale Glaze, Jim Rich-Jim Taylor and Terry Wood-Chip Massey.

Matches begin today in the Racquet Club at 4 p.m. A few first-round matches also may be held at Lubbock Country Club. The tournament will be divided into men's and women's Open, A, B and C Divisions. Final matches tonight are scheduled to begin at 8:30 but the tourney runs through Sunday night.

Director of the tournament, Burns Hamilton, said a reception Saturday night would be held for Gay and Ralna from Lawrence Welk's television program. The singing sweethearts will also participate in the tournament.

The tourney is co-sponsored by the Lubbock area association of Life Underwriters and proceeds will go to the American Heart Association.

MHS Hosts Cooper; Mustangs On Road

Two Hub City prep baseball teams, Monterey and Coronado, will try to find the winning touch again after recent setbacks.

Monterey (3-3) hosts Abilene Cooper (5-1) today in Lowrey Field while Coronado (2-6) plays at Big Spring (7-2). Each of the single games begin at 4 p.m. Then Monterey and Big Spring collide in a Saturday doubleheader in Big Spring at 1 p.m.

MHS coach Bobby Moegle plans to start senior righthander Ron Reeves (2-0) against the Cougars who have won four straight games. Gene Segrest (0-2) draws the CHS mound nod today from Mustang coach John Dudley. In Saturday's twin bill, Moegle figures to start Derek Hatfield (1-1) in one game but remains uncertain about the other starter.

Neither of Moegle's third and fourth starters could pitch well enough for victories last weekend in the Midland tournament of champions. After Reeves and Hatfield pitched the team to 5-0 victories over Midland Lee and El Paso Burges, MHS dropped an 8-5 verdict to Midland High and a 9-6 setback to Duncanville. One might think Moegle would search for pitching depth.

"We played real well down there," he said. "We ran out of pitching after the first day but our defense made only two errors in four games and we hit the ball real well.

Dudley also was pleased with his team's hitting. The Mustangs led Midland High 6-3 until the Bulldogs erupted with 7 runs in the bottom of the sixth to win the game.

"We've just got to be able to hold somebody down with our pitching. We swing the bat pretty well and then we can't hold our lead," the CHS coach said.

Coaches Dropped At Borden County

GAIL (Special) — Borden County's school board voted earlier this week against renewal of contracts for three coaches at Borden County High School.

Chaps Zap Wildcats

ABILENE (Special)—Lubbock Christian broke a 4-4 tie with a six-run 12th inning to defeat Abilene Christian 10-4 in the first game of a doubleheader Thursday, and the Chaps came back to win the second game 13-3. The second game was called at the end of four innings because of darkness, and it was declared an unofficial game.

Charles Casiano scored what proved to be the winning run when he led off the 12th with a single, moved to third when the Wildcats muffed two sacrifice-bunt attempts and scored when Tommy Inman drilled a singled through ACU's drawn-in infield.

Darius Copley also scored on Inman's single. Karl Mahan also slapped a two-run double in the frame.

In the first game, ACU grabbed a 1-0 lead in the first inning, but the winners tied it in the sixth on an RBI-single by Tim Leslie. Richard Bowles then gave the Chaps the lead with a seventh-inning, two-run homer.

However, ACU tied it in the bottom of the seventh on a two-run single by Mark Cowan.

In the second game, LCC jumped ACU starter Joe Delgado for four first-inning runs, three in the second and six in the third.

The Dow has risen more than 20 points so far in March in a modest rally from its 89-point slide over the first two months of the year.

Brokers said stock prices drew some support today from recent signs that upward pressure on interest rates had eased.

The latest Federal Reserve figures issued at the close on Thursday showed monetary growth continuing at a relatively slow pace, leading analysts to conclude that any further tightening of credit by the Fed was unlikely for the present.

Hercules Inc., the most active NYSE issue, rose ⅜ to 13½. A 745,100-share block of the stock changed hands at 13.

National Semiconductor, which reported sharply higher quarterly earnings, climbed ¾ to 16⅞ in active trading.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks rose .07 to 49.95. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .13 at 126.92.

Trading was very active. Volume on the Big Board reached 12.13 million shares by noontime, against 9.90 million at the same point on Thursday.

Board Notes Capacity Use

WASHINGTON (AP)— The Federal Reserve Board said today that the nation's manufacturers used slightly more of their productive capacity in February than in January, although it was still below most of last year.

The board said capacity utilization in February was 82 percent, up from 81.8 percent in January, but that it was well below the 1977 high of 83.1 percent in July.

The figure had dropped sharply in January, mostly because of winter storms. The board said the coal strike and continuing bad weather were still a problem in February.

"Scattered secondary effects of the coal strike and continuing bad weather in some regions were factors holding down manufacturing operating rates last month," the board said.

It said utilization in primary processing industries was 83.3 percent and in advanced processing industries it was 81.2 percent.

Five Track Meets Set

After looking at the weekend slate of high school track meets across the South Plains, there can be little doubt in anyone's mind that spring has arrived.

A full agenda of cinder action gets under way today as no less than five are on tap.

Meets are set for Spur, Floydada, Midland, Gail and Sundown.

The Bulldog Relays at Spur kicked off at 9 a.m. with the field events, 8:30 a.m. with running prelims and 1:30 with the finals. There is a division for both girls and boys, with 18 teams comprising each category.

The Floydada event, the Whirlwind Relays, is also divided into two categories. However, the girls won't be in this one. There is one division for the Class AA teams, another for Class A squads and JV teams.

Ten Class AAAA teams will compete for the team honors at the Tall City Relays in Midland. The meet will wrap up with the finals starting at 7 p.m. in Memorial Stadium.

One of larger meets is at Gail were only Class B teams will vie for the Borden County Relays crown. Both boys and girls teams are set to compete.

Although not quite the magnitude of the Borden County event, Sundown will also host a meet for the smaller schools.

Bruins' Star Applauds Counce's Performance

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Jim Counce only took one shot and he missed that. His only two points came off free throws and he grabbed only three rebounds. But his coach said he was a key in the Arkansas upset of UCLA.

The 6-foot-7 Counce drew the awesome task of guarding the Bruins' All-America forward David Greenwood and did what Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton called "a great defensive job."

Greenwood had 17 points, which is a good day's work for most, but the Hogs were worried the 6-9 UCLA great might do even more damage. And Counce did such a good job of keeping Greenwood off the boards that the big Bruin managed only four rebounds.

"I wasn't as strong as Greenwood," said Counce, "and he scored a bunch of points on me. I felt like I screened him off the boards well. I was very satsified with the job I did on him. I'm pleased I stopped him enough for us to win."

Greenwood, himself, applauded Counce's effort.

"That guy stayed real close to me," said Greenwood. "He didn't do anything dirty. He just came out and played tough defense."

Counce said said it didn't bother him that he only shot once in the entire game.

"I've been in a lot of situations where I hadn't shot for a whole day, so I was ready for that," said the Memphis, Tenn., senior, who is the Hogs' defensive ace.

Counce and Marvin Delph, who scored a game-high 23 points against UCLA, were two of the first players Sutton went after when he took the Arkansas job four years ago.

"They came here on faith," said Sutton. "They were the trailblazers. People are going to look back years from now and say they hold a special place in their hearts for the commitment they made."

Astros

COCOA, Fla. (AP) — The Boston Red Sox, paced by the hitting of leftfielder Jim Rice, defeated the Houston Astros 6-4 Thursday in a major league exhibition game.

Rice drove in three runs with a 430-foot, two-run homer, and a run scoring single.

George Scott also hit a home run for Boston to snap a 4-4 tie.

Houston scored runs in the first on singles by Cesar Cedeno and Jesus Alou and tied it a 4-4 in the second on a single by Bob Sperring and a double by Enos Cabell.

After Scott's homer in the fifth broke the tie, Ramon Airles' single in the eighth produced the final Red Sox run.

Rice Tennis

HOUSTON (AP) — Top seeded Nduka Odizor of the University of Houston met Mel Purcell of Memphis State today in a key third round match in the annual Rice Intercollegiate Invitational Tennis Tournament.

Odizor, from Nigeria, and other seeded players who saw action came through as expected in first round matches Thursday.

Second seeded Jai DiLouie of Southern Methodist was to meet Dan Valentioncic of Houston and third seeded Erick Ikersky of Trinity was to play Tom Cain of SMU in other top seeded third round matches.

SMU, ranked No. 4 nationally, led in team play after the first day with 11 points. Trinity and Houston each had nine. Five SMU players advanced to the round of 16. Trinity sent four and UH three.

Odizor easily defeated Pan American's Alfonso Gonzalez, 6-4, 6-2 in opening day action. DiLouie, a semifinalist in last year's Southwest Conference tournament drew a first round bye and then defeated Oklahoma City's John Futzgerald, 6-0-6-1.
