Thousands recall King's 'dream' speech

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tens of thousands of civil rights marchers tried to recapture the spirit of Martin Luther King on the 25th anniversary of his "I Have a Dream" speech Saturday with warnings that the struggle to fulfill King's dream of equality is far from over.

Singing "We Shall Overcome," demonstrators led by Jesse Jackson, Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis and Coretta Scott King, widow of the slain civil rights leader, marched from the Washington Monument to the Lincoln Memorial waving signs and banners in the hot midday sun.

U.S. Park Police estimated the crowd at 55,000 people, far fewer than the 250,000 who thronged the National Mall for King's famous oration climaxing the March on Washington on Aug. 28, 1963, a crowd that was equalled five years ago at a 20th anniversary march.

Dukakis' appeal to banish all forms of racism and discrimination was greeted warmly, but it was Jackson — his former rival for the Democratic nomination — who got the biggest cheers of the day with a scathing attack on Republican nominee George Bush.

"George Bush is not in Washington today," Jackson said to a roar of approval. "He must not be here for the Inauguration next January."

The civil rights activist said that a quarter-century ago, "we looked forward to new frontiers" under President Kennedy.

"Today, Reagan and Bush attempt to return us to an old fortress," he said. "They are trying to rebuild old walls. They have fought to crush the dream."

Jackson made no mention of the Dukakis or the Democratic ticket, but he appealed for his predominantly black audience to vote in the Nov. 8 elections.

"Hands that once picked cotton can now pick mayors, legislators, governors and presidents," he declared.

Others at the rally echoed Jackson's message.

"Twenty-five years later, we are here stronger and more determined than ever," said Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich.

Conyers told the demonstrators they were not marching so Jackson could be the next president, "but so that your son or daughter can be a future president of the United States."

Ethel D. Smith of Washington, who had marched in 1963, brought her grandson to the demonstration Saturday. Looking back, she said, "A whole lot of doors have been opened, but we've got a long way still to go."

Dukakis and Jackson met on the front ranks of the march for the first time since the Massachusetts governor defeated the civil rights activist for the Democratic nomination at last month's party convention in Atlanta.

Nursing home care in Texas

'Be wealthy or be dirt poor'

BILLY HENDRIX

By STEVE GEISSEN
Staff Writer

If you want nursing home care in Texas, you'd better be wealthy or dirt poor, says an official with the Texas Health Care Association.

Many elderly Texans — who are in need of nursing home care and have fixed incomes slightly above the Medicaid income cap set by the state — are falling through a gaping crack in the state's Medicaid system, said Sara Speights, a spokeswoman for THCA, which represents about 750 nursing homes in the state.

"In Texas, you have to be rich or real poor in order to get (nursing home) care and that shouldn't be the case," she said.

To qualify for assistance from Texas' Medicaid program, a person can have an income of no more than $707.15 a month, according to Anne Bradford, area administrator for the Department of Human Services in Midland.

The state-mandated income cap is actually $687.15 per month, but DHS adds a "$20 disregard" that brings the total to $707.15, Bradford said.

The Medicaid program serves people in need of nursing home care if they qualify based on both medical and financial needs, Bradford said. A person who qualifies for Medicaid assistance can receive long-term nursing home care at no cost.

Medicare — the federal health insurance program for people 65 and over — provides assistance for people who need temporary nursing home care, such as those just coming out of the hospital. Medicare will pay for a maximum of 100 days of nursing home care per year.

Bradford acknowledges the state's Medicaid income cap creates "Catch-22" situations — circumstances that preclude resolution — because nursing home care in Texas costs substantially more than $707.15 per month.

In Texas, a person is fortunate to find basic nursing home for about $1,500 to $1,900 per month, said Speights. Nursing home care in densely populated areas can cost as much as $4,500 per month, she said.

Thus, a person who earns $800 per month in retirement benefits, for example, can neither afford nursing home care nor qualify for Medicaid assistance.

If it desired, the state legislature could set the medicaid cap as high as $1,062 per month, the amount allowed by the federal government.

In early July, the Texas Board of Human Services considered raising the income cap to $1,062, making about 4,900 more elderly people eligible for Medicaid assistance, according to a report in the Dallas Morning News. But pressure from state officials led the board to delay the change indefinitely.

Only one state — Delaware — is tighter with its federal Medicaid dollars than Texas, Speights said.

States determine Medicaid eligibility and which services are covered, and the federal government reimburses a percentage of the states' expenditures.

Texas' Medicaid reimbursement fees to nursing homes are also among the nation's lowest.

Texas pays $34.64 per day for what is called intermediate nursing care. The state pays $47.17 per day for "skilled nursing care," a higher level of care for sicker patients.

Texas ranks among the bottom four states in Medicaid reimursement rates paid to nursing homes, Speights said.

She said the state's Legislative Budget board, made up of the lieutenant governor, House Speaker and chairman of finance-related committees, recently

Three more arrested in area drug raid; total brought to 11

Three more Big Spring residents were arrested Friday and a Forsan woman was arrested Saturday as authorities continued to serve warrants in connection with a six-month undercover drug investigation, Detective Sgt. Dennis King said.

Those persons arrested Friday as a result of the Permian Basin Drug Task Force investigation, were:

- James Walker, 24, 707 W. 7th St.; two counts of delivery of marijuana.
- Leigh Anna McKendree, 22, delivery of a controlled substance and delivery of marijuana.
- Scott Murl Castleman, 28, 1016 E. 21st St.; delivery of a controlled substance.
- Shawntina Marie Thorpe, 21, Forsan; delivery of a controlled substance.

Friday's arrests are a continuation of a drug raid that began Thursday night when 36 police, Howard County sheriff's deputies and Department of Public Safety officers began serving warrants throughout Big Spring — culminating in 11 arrests.

Authorities also seized four automobiles, a Harley-Davidson motorcycle and $4,300 in cash while executing warrants Thursday night.

Those arrested were charged with delivery of marijuana or cocaine.

On Wednesday, the Howard County Grand Jury issued 32 sealed indictments charging 18 people with a variety of drug charges.

The arrests in Big Spring were part of a coordinated effort by the Permian Basin Task Force following a six-month undercover probe into drug activities across a 17-county area.

Police Chief Joe Cook said the investigation was targeted at low-level dealers.

Of the 17 counties targeted, Howard County ranked third in the number of indictments returned.

In the Big Spring area, approximately $6,000 in undercover funds were used during the investigation and Cook said he hopes the arrests will help curtail the flow of illicit drugs into Howard County.

It was the second series of drug arrests in Big Spring during a 5-day period.

Last Sunday, police arrested eight people and seized a clandestine, fully-operational laboratory capable of producing an estimated $180,000 worth of methamphetamine in a 3-day period.

Sally Ann Fica, 23, P.O. Box 1493, is free on $25,000 bond after being charged with conspiracy to manufacture a controlled substance.

The laboratory was seized at a house located approximately 74 miles west of State Highway 176 in the northwest section of Howard County.

Also recovered were shell casings fired from two different automatic weapons and a shotgun.

Nine of those arrested in connection with the Permian Basin Task Force drug investigation have been released on bonds ranging from $5,000 to $75,000, according to sheriff's department records.

Going, gone

Construction workers remove the concrete barrier from the center of the Gregg Street bridge Friday. The bridge has been the site of a pilot project to reduce bridge corrision, according to an earlier report. The bridge's surface was to have been removed and metal joined to make an electrical circuit before resurfacing.

Northside shooting leaves one wounded

By MICHAEL DUFFY
Staff Writer

The third shooting incident in the past six weeks occurred early Saturday at the Northcrest Apartments — leaving a 19-year-old Big Spring man hospitalized, Detective Sgt. Bill King said.

Jose Trevino was wounded in the head and back by shotgun pellets fired by an unknown suspect shortly before 4 a.m., King said.

Trevino is listed in stable condition at Scenic Mountain Medical Center, although he did not undergo surgery, a nursing supervisor said.

King said the shooting is still under investigation and there are no suspects.

Asked what prompted the shooting, King said, "I have no idea."

The shotgun used in the shooting has not been recovered, King said.

During the early morning hours of July 15, Lydia Yanez, 39, and her daughter, Lizzie Franco, 20, suffered gunshot wounds at the apartment complex located at 1002 N. Main St.

Both women were hospitalized and Yanez required surgery.

Pedro Mendez Cantu, 40 — who was also wounded — is charged with two counts of aggravated assault and remains in the Howard County jail in lieu of $90,000 bond for his alleged participation in the shooting incident.

Cantu was convicted of aggravated assault in 1987 and received a 10-year probated sentence for a shooting incident at the city park a year earlier that left one man blind.

George Armendariz, 23, Odessa, also has been charged with two counts of aggravated assault in connection with the shootings.

Armandariz surrendered to the Ector County sheriff's department on July 25 and is currently serving a two-year prison sentence for a separate aggravated assault conviction.

He also faces charges in Ector County of delivery of cocaine and unlawfully carrying a weapon.

Filomeno T. Franco III, 18, 1606 State St., charged with aggravated assault with a deadly weapon in connection with the July 23 wounding of Billy Yanez, 25, at the apartment complex, is free on $40,500 bond.

Franco was stopped by police for a traffic violation about 45 minutes after the shooting and a handgun was recovered from the vehicle after a search warrant was executed.

Yanez — who was shot beneath the right arm — is related to Franco and Lydia Yanez.

New limits made on check holds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Starting this week, a new federal law will put limits on the number of days that banks and other financial institutions can place holds on checks which customers deposit in their accounts.

The law has been hailed by consumer groups, who charged that Americans were losing millions of dollars annually because banks were freezing funds for undue amounts of time.

Banks, however, complain that the new guidelines are confusing, proving costly to implement and will subject them to greater risks of fraud.

The controversy is being stirred up by the Expedited Funds Availability Act, which goes into effect Sept. 1.

Under the law, banks, savings and loans and credit unions must give customers access to deposited funds within one, three or seven days, depending on the type of check.

While many banks have been operating voluntarily under such deadlines, consumer groups argued that a law was needed because too many banks were freezing funds for periods as long as two weeks even though 99 percent of the time they were getting credit for the money within two days.

The U.S. Public Interest Research Group, which led the lobbying effort for the new law, charged that banks were making $290 million annually in interest on the money they were withholding from customers during the so-called "float period."

Additionally, the consumer research group said that banks were collecting another $145 million a year in bounced-check fees because funds were not released faster for depositors' use.

In broad terms, the new law requires that all local checks must be cleared by the bank within three business days. A local check is one written on an institution in the same metropolitan area or within the same Federal Reserve check processing region. There are 48 such regions in the country.

Non-local checks must be cleared within seven business days.

Funds deposited in the form of cashiers' checks, certified checks and government checks must be available to depositors the next business day.

By Sept. 1, 1990, the maximum hold period will drop to two days for local checks and five days for non-local checks.

Many bankers grumble that the new law will open the door to con artists. They complain that they will not have enough time to make sure deposited checks don't bounce or were not forged, especially in the case of the one-day deadline for government and cashiers' checks.

The regulations implementing the new law have proven to be complex, requiring a 600-page guide from the Federal Reserve, dealing not only with the deadlines but such matters as how checks should be endorsed and what information banks must supply to depositors.

By Oct. 31, all banks are required to have placed notices explaining the new rules in customers' monthly statements.

One area of confusion concerns new guidelines for check endorsements. They state that only the first 1.5 inches on the back of the check should be used by depositors to endorse their checks.

This is proving to be a major headache for many retail stores who routinely stamp the backs of checks with a lengthy list of identification items store clerks must obtain from customers.

As a consequence, many stores are rushing to buy new rubber stamps or reprogram cash registers to print within the smaller endorsement area.

Fed officials say the new requirements are needed to help speed the check-clearing process so that bounced checks can be quickly returned to the institution where they were cashed. The goal is to get the check back before the institution releases the funds.

While the Fed says there are no civil penalties for failing to comply with the endorsement procedures, some banks are warning depositors that they may be held liable for lost money if an improper endorsement delays the quick return of a bounced check.

The Fed is planning to spend $30 million over three years in new equipment and procedures to speed check processing and officials estimate that banks will spend 2.3 million work hours each year to comply with the new regulations.

How much of these costs will be translated into higher customer fees is not known, but consumer advocates say that a 1986 survey found that 20 percent of banks were already meeting the new guidelines, suggesting that they could do so without increased fees.

Leslie Gainer, a lobbyist for U.S. Public Interest Research Group, said even though the regulations may increase some banking costs, the trade-offs are worth it.

Check change points

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here at a glance are key provisions of the Expedited Funds Availability Act going into effect on Sept. 1:

- Local checks written on a financial institution in the same metropolitan area or within the same Federal Reserve check-processing region must be available within three business days.
- Funds on non-local checks can be held for as long as seven business days after deposit.
- Funds from cashier's checks, certified checks and government checks must be made available for withdrawal by 9 a.m. on the next business day after deposit.
- Checks deposited through automatic-teller machines after 2 p.m. will not be considered received until the next business day.
- By Sept. 1, 1990, the hold periods will shrink to two days for local checks and five days for non-local checks.

Nursing homes

directed the Texas Department of Human services to study its nursing home reimbursement rates to determine whether they were high enough to allow the homes to provide quality care.

Speights said the Medicaid system established by the legislature is not indicative of the way Texans feel toward the state's elderly population.

"I don't think people realize what's happening," she said. "I have trouble believing Texans think so little of their parents and grandparents."

The administrators of the two nursing homes in Big Spring — Billy Hendrix with Mountain View Lodge and Vicki Griffin with Golden Plains — are well aware of "what's happening" because of the Medicaid system in Texas.

Hendrix said the state Medicaid income cap constitutes "a gross example of discrimination."

The Medicaid system, he said, will provide full nursing home care for a disabled person with no income. But a similarly disabled person who has a fixed income slightly above the income cap is left out in the cold, he said.

"It's really a sad thing that someone who has worked hard all their life for retirement and contributed their taxes for the care of other people can't qualify for care," he said.

Griffin said the state's Medicaid system is such that some elderly Texans — who are unable to afford the cost of nursing home care — have tried to refuse retirement benefits so they could qualify for Medicaid assistance.

But income sources such as social security, veterans benefits, and most retirement plans cannot simply be discontinued, she said.

"Nobody, to my knowledge, has been able to get a revocation of their retirement benefits," she said.

There is a cruel form of irony at work under the present Medicaid system, according to Griffin.

"A lot of people work hard all their lives for retirement, and then once it comes, they find out their retirement check hurts them," she said. "It's sad, it really is."

Both Mountain View and Golden Plains are among the lowest priced nursing homes in the state, according to their administrators.

At each facility, residents requiring intermediate level care pay $40 per day for a semi-private room and $55 for a private room.

Nonetheless, the cost of care at the local nursing homes is more than some elderly persons can afford without assistance.

One elderly widow at Mountain View — whose monthly income is $800 a month, $92.15 more than the Medicaid income cap — owes the nursing home about $5,000, Hendrix said.

The woman has no family, and there are no alternative agencies that can step in and provide low-cost care for her, Hendricks said.

"We don't know where to go with (this) lady," he said. "Right now, I'm keeping her, but there comes a point when I can't absorb the loss.

"At this point there is no solution."

Griffin said that despite the public perception, "nursing homes just aren't money-making businesses."

She said Golden Plains offers room and board, licensed nursing care and a host of complimentary services for $1.44 to $1.66 per hour.

Most nursing homes cannot afford to continue to provide long-term care for residents who accumulate large debts, she said.

"We want to be humane, but you can't afford to have too many who can't pay," she said.

Griffin said she has not been faced with having to terminate the care of a resident of Golden Plains.

But she said there are five or six residents at the nursing home whose retirement checks coupled with their social security checks put their income level slightly above the Medicaid income cap.

Nursing home residents who narrowly miss qualifying for Medicaid will inevitably fall into debt unless their families take on the burden of paying for their care, she said.

Currently, care for the elderly is not high on the state lawmaker's list of priorities, Hendrix said.

"I think you can judge a nation, or a state, or a community, or an individual on the basis of how they feel about their elderly," he said. "And I think the attitude of our legislature on this issue leaves a lot to be desired."

The Medicaid crisis could be resolved if the state legislature was pressured by citizens to reform the medicaid system, he said.

"This is one area we have to do something about," he said. "It's just so danged unfair to leave people out in the cold like that."

Record amount of roadwork underway in Texas

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — The dirt is flying on Texas roads this summer during a record period of roadwork.

There are $4.4 billion worth of projects under contract statewide on more than 15,600 miles of roadway, according to the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation. That means more than one-fifth of the 73,112 miles of state-maintained roads will be worked on this year.

"Anywhere you go there is going to be dirt flying," said Gina McAskill, a public information officer with the highway department.

Those who make their livelihood on the road are finding the drive takes a little longer, but they aren't complaining.

"It may be sort of an inconvenience, but we're thrilled to see road improvements," said Tom Burke, communications manager for Central Freight Lines in Waco.

"We have to be proud of our highways. The drivers in general accept the fact that this time of year there is going to be road construction," said Kirby Pugh of Merchants Fast Motor Lines in Abilene.

Highway projects break out during the long, hot Texas summer when weather delays are infrequent, said Ms. McAskill.

As of mid-August, there were 1,173 contracts awarded for roadwork including seal coating, reconstruction, extending, widening, landscaping and bridge repair.

Up to the same period last year there were 1,041 contracts worth about $4 billion, which was the previous record.

The buildup comes at a time that Texas drivers have seen the state gasoline tax triple in the last four years. State lawmakers increased the tax from 5 cents per gallon to 10 cents in 1984 and bumped it another nickel last year to 15 cents per gallon last year.

Some of the high profile projects under way include upgrading of North Central Expressway in Dallas; widening a number of freeways running through downtown San Antonio; widening Interstate 10 near El Paso; construction of a bridge between Baytown and La Porte; and construction of Interstate 27 through Lubbock.

Texas Department of Public Safety officials say drivers should observe warning signals when approaching construction areas.

In 1987, there were 125 fatal accidents when road conditions were noted as under construction, according to Mike Cox, a DPS spokesman.

March

Jackson led the monument rally in chants of "Keep Hope Alive!" and Dukakis claimed that only a Democratic president could help meet the demonstrators' demands for full social and economic equality.

President Reagan, spending the day campaigning for Republican candidates in California, issued a statement asserting that since King led the landmark March on Washington in 1963, "America has made vast progress toward fully achieving Dr. King's dream of a color-blind society."

As a result, Reagan said, "America today is a freer land for Americans of all backgrounds."

He added: "On this anniversary, it is fitting that all Americans should give thanks for that progress and for the work of those who sacrificed so much to bring it about. And let us remember, as well, that freedom is our unending challenge and our continuing vocation as Americans."

But Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., said the marchers are still "looking for jobs, looking for peace and looking for freedom."

Referring to a campaign dispute between Dukakis and GOP nominee George Bush, Rangel said freedom is not about reciting the Pledge of Allegiance. Rather, he said, "freedom means our children can get an education as easily as they can get cocaine in our schools."

From the Washington Monument the demonstrators retraced King's steps to the Lincoln Memorial, where Dukakis invoked King's "I Have a Dream" speech a quarter-century ago.

"Let us, in the words of Dr. King, 'transform the jangling discords of our nation into a beautiful symphony of brotherhood,'" Dukakis said to polite and friendly applause.

"We have to march not just so that some of us can reach the top of the hill," Dukakis said. "We must march until every American has reached the bright sunshine of opportunity, until we can stand, and stand together, in the golden glow of our shared dream."

"We must march until racism and anti-Semitism and discrimination of all kinds are banished from this land, until we have a Justice Department that understands the meaning of the word 'justice,' until we have a civil rights commission that believes in civil rights, and until we have a president who understands and respects the Constitution of the United States."

Bush and his running mate, Dan Quayle, did not respond to invitations to attend the rally, march organizers said. Bush was campaigning Saturday in Texas.

Jackson, in a speech on the eve of the rally, pledged to help get out the vote this fall for the Democratic ticket of Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen. "We do have a choice and a chance in November," Jackson said. "Dukakis and Bentsen represent an alternative, a chance to change."

At the time, the 1963 demonstration was the biggest ever held in Washington. The peaceful, orderly march — and King's galvanizing speech — are credited with spurring Congress to pass the landmark Civil Rights Act of 1964 under pressure from President Johnson.

Mrs. King said the 1963 march "helped break the spine of racial segregation" in the United States, and that today "we still have a dream of a nation free of the cancer of racism."

The Rev. Joseph E. Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, recalled that King had said, "America has given the Negro people a bad check, a check which has come back marked 'insufficient funds'."

Lowery said the marchers had returned to cash that check.

"It's not that there are no funds," he said. "It's that your ways of accounting are faulty. We know the money is there. If you don't cash it now, we will be back again and again and again."

'Second wave' of school reform teacher-oriented

By EVAN RAMSTAD
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — A new wave of education reform — with fundamentally different origins than the one Texas educators have lived with for the past four years — has begun to swell.

Though effects of the so-called "second wave" may not be common in Texas schools for years, examples of its teacher-centered orientation can already be found in parts of the state. And education officials say it is a natural next step to earlier reforms, embodied most notably in Texas by House Bills 246 and 72.

Those measures mandated the teaching of 12 specific subjects, higher teacher salaries, smaller classes, six-week grading periods and a no-pass, no-play restriction. But they also increased the amount of paperwork and red tape teachers and school administrators must endure.

Part of the new reform effort "recognizes what's been done in the past as important, but insufficient," said Dr. Ernest Boyer, chairman of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching. "Part of it corrects mistakes made earlier."

A mistake made in Texas and other states, Boyer and other experts say, is that reforms made teachers feel like part of the problem, rather than part of the solution.

Like reforms in other states, Texas' efforts operated from the top down, presuming teaching and learning would improve if committees and legislators regimented standards and review processes.

"Standardized remedies don't work very well," said Theodore Sizer, chairman of the education department at Brown University and leader of a unique coalition of innovative high schools.

The Carnegie foundation reported this summer that a survey of 13,000 teachers nationwide this spring found morale plummeted after the first wave of school reform.

In Texas, 68 percent of the teachers who answered the foundation's survey said morale was worse since reform efforts began in 1984.

The two components of the next reform wave focus on restructuring the role of teaching and attracting more and higher quality recruits for the profession.

"Most of the (second-wave) efforts have been at the local level, pushed by informal groups" of teachers and administrators, said second-wave proponent Arthur Wise, director of the Center for the Study of the Teaching Profession in the Washington, D.C., office of the Rand Corp.

Excerpts from King speech ...

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are excerpts from the speech delivered by Martin Luther King Jr. on Aug. 28, 1963, in Washington, D.C.:

I say to you today, my friends, so even though we face the difficulties of today and tomorrow, I still have a dream. It is a dream deeply rooted in the American dream.

I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: "We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal."

I have a dream that one day on the red hills of Georgia the sons of former slaves and the sons of former slave owners will be able to sit down together at the table of brotherhood. I have a dream that one day even the state of Mississippi, a state sweltering with the heat of injustice, sweltering with the heat of oppression, will be transformed into an oasis of freedom and justice.

I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character.

I have a dream today!

I have a dream that one day, down in Alabama, with its vicious racists, with its governor having his lips dripping with the words of interposition and nullification, one day right there in Alabama, little black boys and little black girls will be able to join hands with little white boys and little white girls as sisters and brothers. ...

So let freedom ring from the prodigious hilltops of New Hampshire; let freedom ring from the mighty mountains of New York; let freedom ring from the heights of the Alleghenies of Pennsylvania; let freedom ring from the snow-capped Rockies of Colorado; let freedom ring from the curvaceous slopes of California. But not only that, let freedom ring from Lookout Mountain of Tennessee; let freedom ring from every hill and molehill in Mississippi — from every mountainside, let freedom ring.

And when this happens, when we allow freedom to ring, when we let it ring from every village and every hamlet, from every state and every city, we will be able to speed up that day when all of God's children, black men and white men, Jews and Gentiles, Protestants and Catholics, will be able to join hands and sing in the words of the old Negro spiritual:

"Free at last. Free at last. Thank God Almighty, we are free at last."

Deaf teacher hospitalized after accident

HERALD STAFF REPORT

An instructor at SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf is hospitalized in critical, but stable condition following a motorcycle accident that occurred early Saturday morning.

Richard Covell, 45, 2505 March Circle, was thrown from the back of a motorcycle driven by Terry Weston, 36, Gentry, Ark., after the motorcycle struck the side of a curb in the 2800 block of Avenue A at approximately 2:10 a.m. Saturday.

Both Covell and Weston were transported to Scenic Mountain Medical Center. Weston, a student at SWCID, was treated and released after suffering minor injuries.

The motorcycle was traveling westbound on Avenue A when it struck the curb, overturned and skidded for approximately 20 feet, according to Big Spring Police Department reports.

Weston was cited for failure to control speed. No witnesses were present at the accident, according to Sgt. Drew Bavin.

Neither Covell nor Weston was wearing a helmet, said Officer Stan Parker. According to the report neither was tested for alcohol content.

School reforms of 1984 appear to be working

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — As 3.2 million students return to Texas public schools this week, state education officials say there are indications 1984 education reforms are beginning to work, though it's too early to see improvement in SAT scores or graduation rates.

"We've got some early evidence that the reforms are working, but it is going to take time. You don't turn around a system that was ranked at the bottom of the barrel to start with in four years," said Terri Moore, Texas Education Agency spokeswoman.

The agency is working on studies to gauge the statewide effect of some of the major reforms included in House Bill 72, the 1984 measure that mandated sweeping changes to Texas public schools.

A survey of several school districts last year showed declines in failure rates from 1985 to 1986, indicating that HB 72 reforms such as the no-pass, no-play rule were "having the intended effect," Ms. Moore said.

Some of the state's 1,090 school districts have done their own studies, said Marvin Veselka, assistant commissioner for assessment and evaluation. For example, a recent Austin district report said since the no-pass, no-play rule was implemented, the percentage of failing grades in high school has dropped.

The no-pass, no-play rule requires students to pass their courses before they can participate in extracurricular activities.

Marked improvement also has been noted in grades 3, 5 and 7 on the student reading, writing and mathematics test, although the Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills is not uniformly accepted as a complete picture of academic achievement.

"It's just a test on minimum skills. Big deal. Everybody ought to be able to do minimum skills," said Sandy Kibby, state legislative head for the PTA.

Some education advocates have expressed concern that teachers are concentrating on the material covered in TEAMS, possibly neglecting other information, or that there is too much emphasis on the test as a measure of school performance.

Ms. Moore emphasized the importance of the skills tested by TEAMS. "If kids don't have basic skills, how do they have other skills?" she asked.

Some crucial reforms — including smaller class sizes and prekindergarten for disadvantaged 4-year-olds — were concentrated in the lower grades. Others include testing teachers as well as students, increasing teacher salaries, instituting a teacher career ladder, boosting state funding and giving more state aid to poor districts.

Officials said the reforms have had a positive effect overall, although further changes have been called for.

Teachers have cited a need for further salary increases and full state funding of the career ladder, and officials have said the state should address schools' construction costs.

Man arrested after standoff

HERALD STAFF REPORT

A 23-year-old Big Spring man was arrested on several charges after barricading himself in a convenience store and threatening police. Officers succeeded in overpowering him following a 1½-hour standoff, Patrol Sgt. Drew Bavin said.

Gabriel Armando Barraza-Herrera, 622 Caylor St., was transported to Big Spring State Hospital for emergency commitment.

The incident began about 10:40 p.m. when the man entered the 7-Eleven store at 300 S. Owens St., with a gun and threatened a woman clerk, Bavin said.

She managed to escape unharmed.

The man allegedly broke glass, smoked cigarettes, drank beer and threatened police before officers were able to subdue him, Bavin said.

Barraza-Herrera was arrested on charges of making terroristic threats, criminal mischief and theft under $20, and was later transported to the state hospital, Bavin said.

Wright probe compromised

In appointing Chicago attorney Richard Phelan to investigate charges of misconduct against Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, the House Ethics Committee has taken a crucial first step toward assuring a credible probe. But the panel has also compromiised credibility by placing strict limits on Phelan's investigating authority.

Those restrictions impair Phelan's ability to ask all the necessary questions about Wright.

The speaker's chief Republican critic, Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia, complains that Phelan's experience as a Democratic fund-raiser should disqualify him from the job. But the Ethics Committee's bipartisan and unanimous vote should dispel uncertainty about Phelan's impartiality.

Harder to dismiss are doubts about the panel's willingness to see all that Phelan might expose. Its instructions forbid Phelan to reach beyond the six areas of inquiry defined by its June resolution.

But those six areas do not address all the questions that have been asked about Wright. Much of the resolution involves straightforward allegations that Wright abused his influence to win favors for constituents or special treatment for himself. The knottier part focuses on Wright's lucrative deal with a longtime supporter to publish his 1985 paperback book, "Reflections of a Public Man."

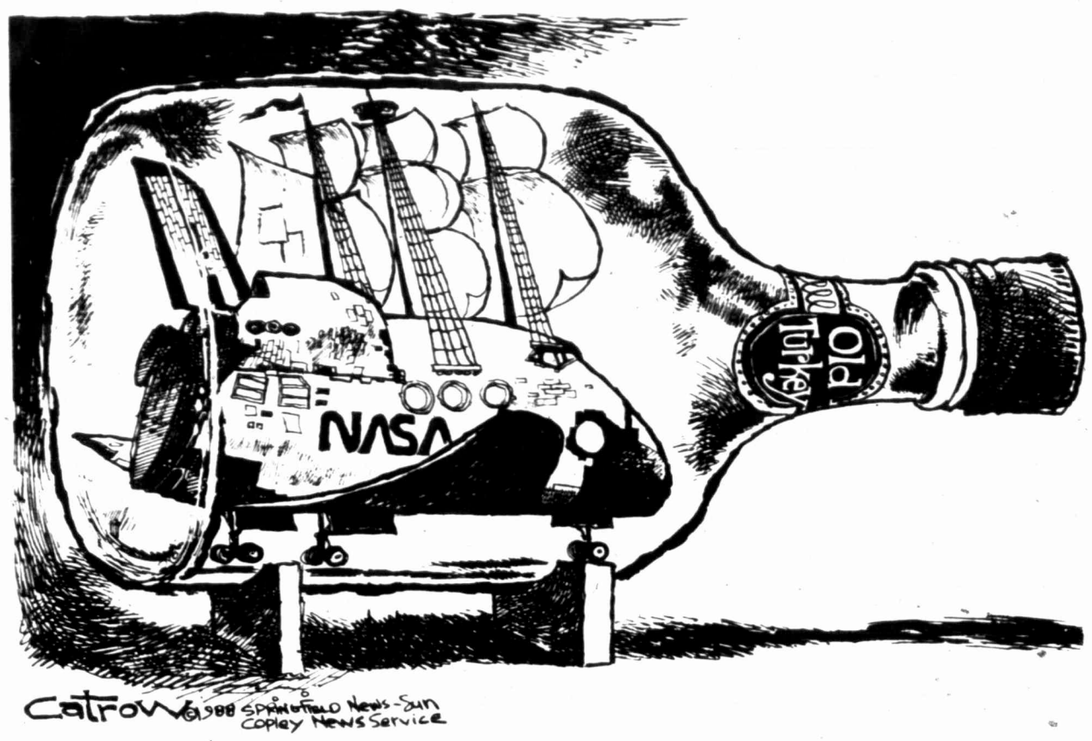

The committee says it wants to know whether the book was improperly prepared at public expense and whether the publishing deal was a way to convert campaign funds to Wright's personal use.

But just as intriguing is another question, which the Ethics Committee resolution omits — and which Phelan therefore cannot pursue: Whether sales of large batches of books by political groups skirted House limits on outside income and gifts.

Only the clairvoyant can know what other questions may arise as Phelan conducts his probe. That's why the committee should broaden the charge to its new appointee.

To conduct a believable inquiry, Phelan must at least have a long enough tether to track what is right in front of his nose. "It seems to me for this investigation to have any legitimacy it has to be able to follow the leads wherever they lead," Gingrich said. "The independent counsel has to be truly independent."

California lawsuit begins new quest for civil rights

By JESSE TREVINO

A new era in the quest for civil rights began last week.

A groundbreaking lawsuit has attacked new targets with new tactics. If successful, its repercussions could reshape the composition of government in cities, counties and school districts throughout the country.

The lawsuit, filed in Los Angeles federal court, seeks to expand the number of Los Angeles County Supervisors from five to as many as nine. The Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund argues that the current size of the board (the California equivalent of Texas' county commissioner's courts) is discriminatory.

Jesse Trevino

First, the basic facts of the case. The population of Los Angeles County stands near 8 million people, so each supervisor represents roughly 1.6 million constituents. The county's 2.4 million Hispanics number more than enough for one district, especially since many live in high geographic concentrations in the eastern part of the county. Yet, no Hispanic has ever been elected to the board. A similar situation exists for blacks. All the incumbents are white males. One black was appointed, but she was defeated when she stood for election.

The time-honored tradition of gerrymandering has effectively prevented minority representation on the board. The greatest concentration of Hispanics in one district is currently 40†, not enough to elect their own supervisor. Given the demographics of Los Angeles County, a district that is 64† Hispanic can be drawn. The county had an opportunity to do this after the 1980 census, when political districts from Congress to the courthouse were redrawn. But the board chose to retain the current inadequate system.

Attacks on gerrymandering and at-large election systems have traditionally been the basis of legal battles for minority representation. But now a new question has emerged: Can one person adequately administer a district that is three times the size of a congressional district? This question could be applied to other units of government in cases that have nothing to do with civil rights.

Ten state governors have smaller constituencies than a single Los Angeles County Supervisor. But these governors utilize adequate administrative machinery to administer their budgets — budgets that can pale when compared to the $9 billion that five supervisors and a handfull of confidants dole out every year in Los Angeles.

The MALDEF lawsuit, if successful, would seem to benefit all citizens of Los Angeles County by giving them greater access to the board of supervisors. But the majority of the board evidently does not want greater access for its citizens.

Faced with rumors of a lawsuit, one county supervisor tried to put the question of expanding the board from five to seven members on the ballot so the voters could decide. The supervisors voted 3-2 against.

Could a MALDEF victory provide impetus for similar changes in other parts of the country? Chances are it will.

In communities without sufficient ethnic representation, governing boards could be expanded in size to give minorities a voice. The smaller towns of East and West Texas, where many city and county governments consist of smaller boards, could see some changes.

Yet the new era's shift in tactics and targets could also foreshadow challenges to other long-accepted, but often discriminatory procedures. A successful MAFLDEF suit may encourage local governments to replace the current runoff election system with a system by which winners in electoral contests could win with a plurality. That may assure minority representation is some localities.

As is often the case, the MALDEF-LA lawsuit is one more brick that can be thrown to force movement toward equitable representation. Changes in the mechanics of governmental election and operation are usually wrought by force rather than by voluntary reform.

In 1980, county after county redistricted voluntarily after a long line of MALDEF victories during the 1970s. Communities once took their chances as judges arbitrarily reconstructed local governments. Now, in most cases, timely and reasonable action can both prevent judicial intervention and maintain control within the community.

The lawsuit continues in that tradition.

Looking at Quayle with a magnifier

By ROBERT WERNSMAN

I feared trouble was brewing when the first thing I heard about Danny Quayle was that he brought good looks to the Republican ticket.

"Too bad the looking at this guy didn't stop there," must be among the thoughts of some of his early supporters. The more looking that's done these days, the less good looking this fellow seems to be.

Much of what we've gotten to know about Sen. Quayle has been unfortunate — what we've heard and read is unfortunate, and the fact that we have to hear and read it is unfortunate. But like it or not, it's part of the system we live with — part of the process of getting to know who will be president in the case of George Bush and Michael Dukakis, and those who would be a heartbeat away from that office in the case of Dan Quayle.

Sen. Quayle's exploits have been hash, re-hashed and mish-mashed during the past several days, and if he survives the media onslaught of examining his life, he will no doubt have proven his mettle.

It's apparent that proving his mettle is exactly what the youthful politician needs to do.

I'm here today not to praise the work of the media in examining his life's escapades, nor to condemn it. It's a job that needs to be done in one way or another, although one has to believe that George Bush's men might have served their candidate by better researching Quayle's background before tapping the Indiana senator as the GOP heir apparent.

Do we hold these men in such offices to a higher standard than we expect of ourselves and neighbors? Perhaps. And is that wrong? Only to a limited degree, I'd argue.

If you have intentions of leading, you'd darn well better have qualities above and beyond those in the back of the pack, or you have no right to expect anyone to take up your banner and follow your lead.

It doesn't appear that Danny Quayle has any smoking gun the media could use as an example of his fatal flaws, and to this point I'd say he has no fatal flaws — although this is written more than 24 hours before it's published and there's no telling what revelations may be announced on the front pages of the Sunday newspapers.

The facts, as we've come to know them however, are continuing to mount and the beliefs are beginning to solidify that we may have a man who never quite learned the benefits of being honest and forthright. That can happen, presumably, when you lead a pampered life and your family has more money than just about anybody else.

Democrats who once believed in Teddy Kennedy may see similarities in all of this.

Quayle's handling of the most recent stumbling block, his resume and official biography, is a good example.

When questions were raised on the accuracy of his resume, the immediate response from his press secretary was that it was a cheap shot — exactly what his supporters wanted to hear and what they would no doubt like me to believe.

So, why was I so much more willing to believe it when I read that Mr. Quayle conceded an error? I don't have a personal vendetta against this man, but I'm beginning to have a great deal of trouble in believing his core personality stands for truth, justice and fair play.

And, maybe, George Bush wants a man like that.

While I realize that U.S. senators are busy men, it's unfortunate that Dan Quayle was so busy he had to have his staff handle the details of his resume and — apparently — he never had time to double-check its accuracy.

That the error in portraying his credentials favored his strengths, as opposed to shortchanging him, is somewhat telling as well. As Danny Quayle knows, along with every other professional, a resume is a most personal report of accomplishments.

If you're gonna fudge there, you're gonna fudge in real life. And we don't need anybody who's going to do any fudging on us.

'Get rid of unwanted animals'

To the editor:

I would like to respond to an article printed in last Sunday's Herald. It was about a man accused of throwing a stray cat in with his dogs, which promptly killed it, according to witnesses. His neighbors were horrified at the inhumane treatment of the animal.

Why aren't they horrified with the disease and filth these unwanted animals spread? They are over-running our city.

My neighbor's and I have been battling this problem for months. There are at least 10 strays around here now. They come through any opening and get in my trash and meat left to thaw for meals.

They mess up the yard that my husband and I work hard to maintain. We tried to rent the city's live trap. What a joke! My name reached the top of the reserve list after three months, just to have the city trash the list.

The city employee I spoke with said it was too difficult to keep a list because the demand for the traps was too great. Talk about frustrating!

These animals are too wild to catch by hand and, even if they weren't, I refuse to pay the Humane Society to take them. After all, they are the ones worried about the welfare of the worthless creatures. Let them take responsibility for them.

Please don't get me wrong — I am not an animal hater, but if an animal isn't a pet, it is of no use to anyone.

While I disagree with such methods as Mr. Sundy allegedly used, it is the right idea — get rid of them!

Coronado Hills Apartments— a home you can be proud of

When you take an apartment at Coronado Hills, you'll feel proud to move into a new home that has been totally renovated.

Paint is fresh and professionally done. And kitchens and baths are spotlessly clean, with any needed repairs attended to.

In addition, say managers Don and Sharon Minyard, you can depend on your apartment home being watched over by two full-time maintenance men. Their services are available day or night or weekend. What a comfort to busy residents.

The Minyards, who have been at their posts at Coronado Hills for almost a year, place a good deal of emphasis on providing an atmosphere of quiet and security. "Security is a high priority," says Sharon, and they are currently adding special locks and peep holes in the doors of each unit.

"We were impressed with the quality of the construction, the size of the rooms and the excellent maintenance. Coronado Hills has been synonomous with quality living in Big Spring for many years," says Sharon.

Residents at Coronado Hills, 801 Marcy, have access to a beautifully landscaped courtyard, swimming pool and party room. Apartment kitchens are furnished with frost-free refrigerator/freezers, disposal, dishwasher and range with eye-level oven. Gas and water are paid.

Two-bedroom studio apartments have one and one-half baths with a total of 1300 square feet of living space. They feature attached two-car covered parking and a large patio and outside storage. Connections for washer and dryer are available.

One-bedroom apartments, with 700 square feet of living space, have large walk-in closets, outside storage and large patios. Tenants have front-door parking.

Don and Sharon Minyard, managers

A small number of three-bedroom apartments are available, and there is usually a waiting list.

Choice, fully-furnished condominiums are priced to include all utilities, telephone service, maid service, swimming pool and laundry rooms on the premises. One- and two-bedroom units may be rented by the day, week or month.

Coronado Hills is owned by Charles and Joan Beil, longtime Big Spring residents and civic leaders.

The Senior Girl Scout Troop 36 includes Shawna Adams, Christy Alexander, Kathryn Burrow, Renae Reinert, Tasha Rock, Tonya Rock and Kim White. Guy and Debbie Burrow and Wayne and Joan Rock are Troop Advisors.

GIRL SCOUTS

There are approximately 200 girls involved in Girl Scouting in Howard County. The purpose of the organization is to serve the needs of the girls; and as any girl will tell you it would not be possible without the effective leadership of the adult volunteers. An estimated 60 adults are Girl Scout volunteers in Big Spring.

In 1980 the Fourth Grade Junior Girl Scout Troop 36 decided to work toward two long-range goals: Goal #1 — to earn the highest award in Girl Scouting, The Gold Award and Goal #2 — to go to the Girl Scout World Centers, Our Chalet, in Adelboden, Switzerland and Olave House in London, England.

Goal #1 was reached in February 1988 when they received their "Gold Award". Goal #2 was reached on July 2, 1988 when they departed for a 24-day trip to Adelboden Switzerland; London, England; Paris, France; and Dortmund, West Germany.

Senior Girl Scout Troop 36 reached both of their goals with hard work and dedication. They also showed a great amount of ingenuity in fundraising, such as designing, selling and marketing The Millionaire of Howard County Board Game. The girls were required to earn all of the funds needed for their trip.

Communist party opposes labor strikes

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Communist Party officials attacked the government of Prime Minister Zbigniew Messner on Saturday as Poland's leaders struggled to solve the economic problems that have caused widespread labor unrest.

The complaints came during the first day of a meeting of the party's 230-member Central Committee.

Messner, prime minister since 1985, acknowledged the criticism in a speech in which he reviewed his government's performance and stressed its plans to improve the economy, the state news agency PAP said.

In opening remarks to the party meeting earlier, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski said that the communist government would undertake a "self-critical analysis" of the problems behind the latest wave of strikes in Poland.

Messner, as head of the government, oversees the various ministries and is theoretically responsible for government performance. But ultimate power rests with the Communist Party led by Jaruzelski.

PAP said the party plenum would continue on Sunday.

On Saturday, the government was attacked by a series of committee members as ineffectual. Some of the sharpest criticism came from Politburo member Alfred Miodowicz, leader of the official trade union alliance OPZZ, which was set up after authorities crushed the Solidarity union in 1981.

"Nothing can explain the sluggishness in solving various problems, the failure to make progress," Miodowicz said, according to PAP. "Hence, the so-determined voices demanding personal accountability."

Aleksandra Koszada, a party member from a radio plant in Kutno, said, "It is tragic that the conviction is becoming widespread that only strikes can prod our government into resolute action.

"The government's ineptitude is responsible for many economic problems and wasted years," added Bogdan Borys, a metalworker from Czestochowa.

The attacks added strength to speculation that the plenum would lead to government changes, perhaps replacing Messner himself.

The meeting was held less than a day after the government offered to begin talking with workers, possibly including Solidarity leader Lech Walesa.

But speakers also railed against the strikes. "They have an anarchy-generating, destructive character," said Politburo member Jozef Czyrek. "They cannot be accepted."

Northwestern fires spread

By the Associated Press

Firefighters in Yellowstone National Park focused their attention once again on an area near Old Faithful geyser on Saturday, and a fast-moving forest fire in Idaho killed a flock of sheep and their accompanying sheep dogs.

Oregon activated 100 National Guardsmen and borrowed firefighters from Canada to help battle out-of-control blazes.

"We're hanging on by our fingernails," said Lee Oman, incident commander at a firefighters' base camp in Valley of the Rogue State Park near Grants Pass, Ore., where crews battled two blazes that threatened homes in rural areas.

Forest also burned in parts of northern California and Washington state.

Officials in Yellowstone appealed Saturday for private helicopters and crews to help fight the blazes that have charred more than 400,000 acres of the park. About 35 helicopters have been working on the Yellowstone Complex of fires in Yellowstone and Grand Teton parks and the adjoining Bridger-Teton, Shoshone and Targhee national forests.

Dave Poncin, a firefighting commander in Wyoming, said he would like to have another 15 to 20 helicopters. Most military copters are too big for firefighting.

"Military pilots are good, but they're not bush pilots. What we need are oilfield pilots, people who fly in the mountains a lot and are familiar with this kind of terrain," he said at a news briefing. "We're looking of course for the best in the business, and they're probably not available. So that's where we're at."

A shift in wind direction in Yellowstone created a 250-acre spot fire about five miles from Old Faithful, the park's most popular attraction, where nearby structures earlier were threatened by flames.

Linda Miller, a fire information officer, said the spot fire was created when wind fanned flames on the southern end of the 114,000-acre North Fork fire.

Crews worked to build a containment line around the blaze by hand and were aided by an air tanker, and the buildings around the geyser were not threatened Saturday, morning, Miller said.

In eastern Idaho, wind pushed a forest fire over an extra 1,200 acres to a total 3,500 acres.

Soldier in spy ring gave information

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — The second former U.S. soldier implicated in a growing international spy scandal provided information that led investigators to crack the 10-year operation, a West German newspaper said Saturday.

West German prosecutors, meanwhile, said U.S. officials first informed the West Germans about the spy case a little more than two weeks ago.

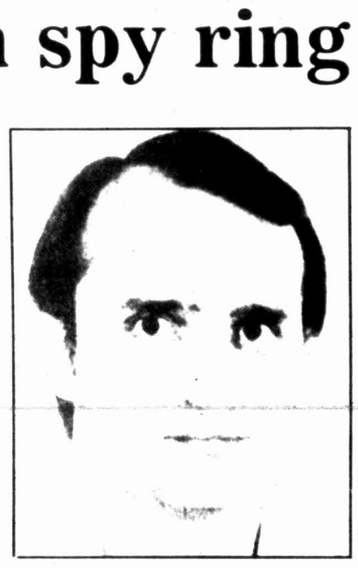

The West Germany-based ring reportedly sold the Soviets secret information about NATO nuclear missiles, pipeline systems and troop strength. Prosecutors are predicting a lengthy inquiry to assess the damage to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Former U.S. Army Sgt. Clyde Lee Conrad, who allegedly led the spy ring, remained in prison Saturday, facing espionage charges carrying a maximum 10-year sentence.

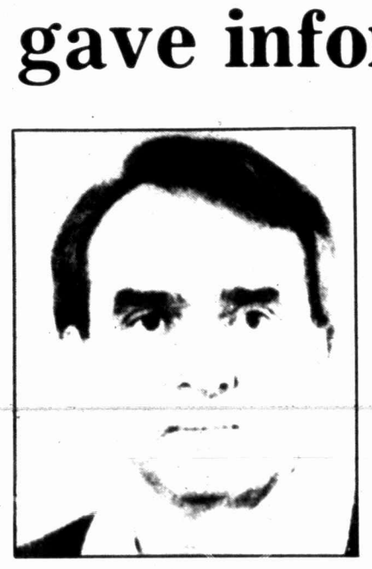

Conrad paid another U.S. soldier "a five-figure sum" for obtaining secret NATO information, said chief West German prosecutor Kurt Rebmann.

The Bonn-based Die Welt newspaper said the second soldier, whose name has not been released, provided "the information that led to the arrest."

"Die Welt has found out that no charges have been filed against the (second) American citizen, although he is still in the Federal Republic (West Germany)," the conservative newspaper added. It did not elaborate.

IMRE KERCSIK

SANDOR KERCSIK

Alexander Prechtel, spokesman for Rebmann, said he could not confirm or deny the report.

"The Americans first informed us about the suspicions against Conrad on Friday, Aug. 12," Prechtel told The Associated Press in a telephone interview.

He said U.S. investigators had been trailing Conrad long before then, but he said he did not know the source of the information that led investigators to suspect Conrad. West German officials arrested Conrad on Tuesday.

Although officials here say the second American was a soldier when he was recruited, The Washington Post quoted administration sources in Washington as saying he has since left the service.

Reports continued to emerge Saturday about Conrad's lavish lifestyle.

Conrad's neighbor, Johanna Horst, told the U.S. military's unofficial newspaper Stars and Stripes that "maybe there were a few people that were jealous because they had so much money and his son had everything."

Mrs. Horst said that Conrad's West German wife, Antje, "had lots of gold jewelry and he just gave her a new car with her initials in gold."

Stars and Stripes said its calculations showed Conrad's monthly pension was $900.

The Bild newspaper of Hamburg said Conrad's current apartment near the base was "luxuriously furnished" and that he received about $1 million for his espionage work.

CBS-TV quoted West German investigators Friday as saying Conrad may have kept the money in numbered Swiss bank accounts.

CBS said investigators found a picture of a European-wide operation, centered in Conrad's home in West Germany, with other agents operating out of three neutral countries. It said they included an agent in Switzerland who handled money, two in Sweden who acted as couriers, and a Hungarian intelligence officer in Vienna, Austria, said to be Conrad's controller.

Swiss prosecutors said Friday they launched an investigation into a possible Swiss connection.

In Molndal, Sweden, a district court on Friday arraigned two Hungarian-born Swedish brothers, Imre and Sandor Kercsik, as suspected members of the spy ring.

West German officials said Friday that Conrad was in charge of storing and guarding classified documents in a safe at a U.S. Army base near his home in Bad Kreuznach.

U.S. Army officials said Conrad, of Sebring, Ohio, obtained a top secret security clearance 1978 and still had it when he left the service in 1985.

But an army spokesman acknowledged Conrad was not subjected to a follow-up background check usually given after five years.

History comes with von Bulow mansion

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — A judge has accepted an antique dealer's $4.2 million offer for the 21-room mansion where Claus von Bulow once lived with heiress Martha "Sunny" von Bulow.

The oceanfront estate, Clarendon Court, is home to a prince and princess and includes the three-story main house, an 18-room carriage house, three fountains and a swimming pool.

A New York judge overseeing the sale on Thursday accepted the offer submitted by Glenn C. Randall of Washington, D.C.

The mansion, which was built for the owner of the Pullman Car Co., is owned by Mrs. von Bulow, 57, who has been in what doctors describe as an irreversible coma since suffering a seizure at the mansion eight years ago.

Von Bulow, 62, was convicted of charges he tried to kill his wife with injections of insulin and other drugs, but was acquitted at a second trial in June 1985. He stood to inherit about $14 million of Mrs. von Bulow's Pittsburg utilities fortune, valued then at $75 million.

A committee handles Mrs. von Bulow's financial affairs because of her condition. The judge's approval was needed for the sale.

Last December, von Bulow agreed to divorce his wife and to renounce all claims to her money in an out-of-court settlement to a lawsuit filed by his stepchildren, Prince Alexander von Auersperg and Princess Annie-Laurie "Ala" Auersperg Kneissl. They charged that the Danish-born socialite had tried to kill and defraud their mother.

In exchange, the von Bulows' daughter, Cosima, was restored as full heiress to one-third of her maternal grandmother's $100 million estate. The 20-year-old had been cut out of Annie-Laurie Aitken's will for siding with her father in the family feud.

Clarendon Court is not without its lesser-known tragedies as well. In August 1982, Paul E. Molitor Jr., the late executive director of the Newport Preservation Society, was living as von Bulow's guest in the carriage house when he committed suicide.

Major parts shortages plague B-1s

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Major shortages of reliable spare parts are plaguing efforts to sustain operations of the B-1 bomber fleet, causing the Air Force to cannibalize grounded planes to continue flight training, the General Accounting Office said Saturday.

"The Air Force, even with its extraordinary efforts, has not been able to meet training and readiness objectives," the GAO said. "Reliability shortfalls — parts failing faster than expected — continue to be a major cause of spare parts shortages."

The Air Force took exception to the report, saying that while "challenges do remain," the service is "making steady progress in assuring adequate spare parts are available for the B-1B."

"The most important point is that the B-1B is performing its deterrent mission right now," said Capt. Jay DeFrank, an Air Force spokesman. "Today B-1B aircraft have trained crews and fly the necessary sorties to meet wartime requirements.

"The Air Force has steadily improved the planned rate of B-1B training flights and expects that trend to continue as the system matures and spare parts are delivered," he said.

The new GAO report comes just days after the Congressional Budget Office released estimates that making significant improvements in the B-1 program could cost up to $3.4 billion.

The budget office said those improvements, once made, would allow the bomber to fly to targets inside the Soviet Union, its original mission.

The reports mark the latest rounds in a long-running fight between the Air Force, which has defended the plane, and congressional critics who contend it may cost too much in trouble and money to improve it.

"It's very difficult to get a straight story out of the Pentagon about the plane's problems," said Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, who released the latest report on the aircraft from the GAO.

He noted that the Air Force disputed a GAO finding that the Strategic Air Command reduced the number of mission-ready crews available for the B-1 fleet because parts difficulties reduced the number of planes available for training.

"The Defense Department said the reason wasn't spare parts but the extensive modification of the B-1, Aspin said and added: "In fact, the GAO had training reports that cited spare parts shortages as the primary cause of the training limitation."

"Once again, the facts seem to contradict Pentagon assertions about the B-1," Aspin said.

Shortages of B-1 bombers ready to fly affect not only training but plans for placing bombers on alert to respond to a nuclear attack on the United States.

"Alert status is the bomber's reason for being," Aspin said. "If that's adversely affected — and it is here — then you've got problems."

The B-1 program was killed by President Carter in 1977, but resurrected by President Reagan four years later because Reagan said the plane was needed as a successor to the aging B-52.

The Air Force has bought 100 B-1s and will use the plane in conjunction with the so-called "stealth" B-2 bomber as the B-52 replacement in the nation's arsenal of strategic weapons. The B-2, nicknamed for its capability to evade enemy air defenses, will have its first public flight in November.

The last B-1 was delivered on April 30. The Air Force said the total cost of the program was $27.3 billion, but that figure doesn't include any improvements.

Judge to rule in FBI discrimination trial

By HOLDEN LEWIS
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO — It's up to a federal judge to decide whether the FBI discriminates against Hispanics or if the 311 Hispanic agents suing the bureau are complaining about perceived injustices that happen in all large organizations.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton, who heard the nine-day trial without a jury, said he will try to issue a decision by Oct. 1. Federal employees are not entitled to juries when suing the government in discrimination cases.

During the first week of the trial, some Hispanic agents recounted horror stories. A Cuban-born agent with a doctorate in law said he was told he couldn't be a legal adviser in Washington because of his dark skin and accent. A woman testified that at the FBI academy she was urged to read Vogue because she looked and dressed too ethnic.

But during the second week, FBI attorneys brought forward witnesses who rebutted some of the testimony, and a statistical analyst presented results of a $200,000 survey designed to show that the FBI treats Hispanics the same as Anglos.

During several cross-examinations, the FBI's statistical evidence was thrown into doubt, but the FBI was able to produce plausible explanations for some acts of apparent bias.

"They hit us hard, but we didn't go down," said Antonio Silva, co-counsel for the plaintiffs.

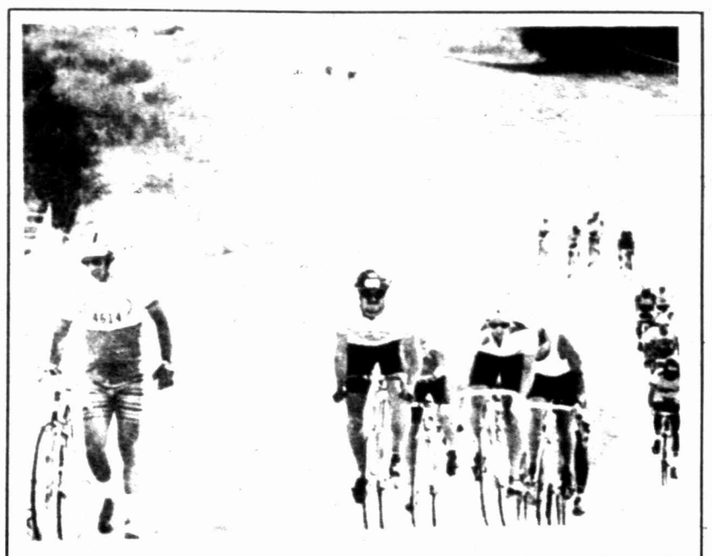

The 311 Hispanic agents joined in the class-action suit contended the FBI discriminates against Hispanics in promoting, disciplining and making assignments. They sought unspecified damages and changes in FBI policies.

About 400, or 4.3 percent, of the FBI's 9,400 agents are Hispanic.

Several Hispanic activists have said other class-action discrimination suits could follow if the agents are successful in suing the FBI. Rodriguez has compared the suit to the those brought by blacks in the '60s and by women in the '70s.

The plaintiffs charged that Hispanics are more likely to be transferred to undesirable locations such as Puerto Rico and Deming, N.M., are given the dullest and the most dangerous assignments, are disciplined more harshly and receive less recognition for their successes.

The suit was filed in January 1987 by Bernardo "Matt" Perez, now the No. 2 agent in El Paso. He was the agent in charge of the Puerto Rico office in the early '80s but was demoted to Los Angeles, where he was Bretzing's senior assistant before Bretzing demoted him again.

Medical license revoked

BEAUMONT (AP) — The State Board of Medical Examiners has revoked the medical license of a Beaumont neurologist who pleaded no contest to charges of sexually assaulting a 15-year-old boy in his care, officials said.

Eleven of the 13 board members present voted Friday to revoke the license of Dr. Baltazar Ramos Jr., barring him from practicing medicine in Texas, a board spokeswoman said.

Ramos also told board members Friday that he had tested positive for the AIDS virus, the spokeswoman said.

Criminal District Judge Larry Gist sentenced Ramos, 44, to 10 years in prison March 18 after he pleaded no contest to charges he sexually assaulted the boy, who was under his psychiatric care.

The board's decision permanently revokes Ramos' license to practice medicine, but he can re-apply for a license within a year.

Stabbing death blamed on growing drug problem

HOUSTON (AP) — A city health department worker who walked at the same time each day to catch a bus near her home was found stabbed to death, and police suspect she was the victim of a growing area drug problem.

The death Friday of Willie Faye Kinney, 46, who had walked the same route for years, renewed northeast Houston neighborhood concerns about increasing drugs and prostitution.

"It's getting kind of bad out there," said the Rev. S.V. Brown of the Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church, across the street from where Ms. Kinney's body was found.

"They (police) need to get somebody out here and clean up these dope houses. I'm sure they killed her to get the money to buy dope," he said.

Houston Police Sgt. M.S. Doyle said a nearby hotel is frequented by drug users and prostitutes, and said a glass pipe of the type commonly used to smoke crack cocaine was found under the dead woman's body.

Doyle said Ms. Kinney's gold jewelry, watch and purse were missing.

Family and friends said Ms. Kinney left her home each day at exactly 5:10 a.m. to catch a 5:30 bus to work. She was found Friday morning by a woman who usually met her along the walk of about five blocks.

Steers a two-sided coin during scrimmage

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

It was as if two versions of the Big Spring Steers appeared for their scrimmage against Frenship Friday night in Memorial Stadium.

The first version appeared almost helpless to either stop the Frenship attack or mount an offensive of their own. With each team running a set amount of offensive plays, Frenship rolled past the Steers, four scores to one.

When the scoreboard clock came on and the two teams played 23 minutes under game conditions, however, another version of the Steers seemingly took the field.

Suddenly, all phases of the Big Spring effort improved. Running backs who had been stymied earlier suddenly had room to run; passes that had been overthrown began finding their mark; and Tiger running backs who had gobbled up chunks of yardage before now had defenders blocking their paths.

In the end, however, Frenship's consistency was the telling factor in the last portion of scrimmage, also, and the Tigers edged Big Spring, 10-8.

The Steers' Jekyll-and-Hyde performance left head coach David Thompson searching for an explanation Saturday morning.

"I don't have any idea (about the turnaround)," he said. "I wish I knew. At the start there, we looked like we've never seen a football before . . . Maybe the coaches' being out there made them nervous or something."

Whatever the reason, Frenship had little trouble with the Big Spring troops early in the scrimmage.

The teams alternated running 20 offensive and 20 defensive plays involving the first string, then ran 15 plays each with the second-stringers. Frenship was first on offense, and promptly marched 70 yards for a touchdown.

During their first 20 plays, the Tigers amassed 10 first downs and two scores — one on a four-yard pass; the other on a 20-yard run.

The Big Spring first-string offense, meanwhile, had trouble getting untracked. During their 20 plays, the Steers managed only five first downs and a lone TD — A Tony Lewis catch-and-run of a screen pass from quarterback Rance Thompson.

The Steers' second-stringers fared no better, gaining three first downs and no scores, compared to Frenships six first downs and one score.

As noted earlier, however, when the clock began running, so did the Steers.

Beginning on its own 30, Big Spring executed a 12-play drive that took the Steers deep into Frenship territory. The highlight of the drive was a 18-yard Thompson-to-Juan Hagin pass. The drive stalled on the Frenship seven, however, and the ball went over on downs.

When the Tigers started, it appeared a replay of earlier happenings was in the books. They promptly marched the length of the field in six plays to score on a quarterback keeper. The successful point after made the score 7-0.

The two teams then traded punts before the Steers mounted their most impressive march of the evening. Two Thompson passes —

Moon, Houston rises over Cowboys

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Houston's Warren Moon decimated Dallas with a precision passing show Saturday night, leading the Oilers to a record-smashing 54-10 victory over the Cowboys and an unbeaten NFL preseason.

Houston finished the exhibition season with a 4-0 record. It was only the third time in franchise history the Oilers have been perfect in the preseason. It also happened in 1965 and 1986.

It was the worst preseason loss by the Cowboys since Minnesota beat them 57-17 in 1965. The Oilers had never scored this many points in a preseason game. It was only two points short of their all-time high for any game.

Dallas' loss evened its preseason mark at 2-2.

Moon's passing carried Houston on touchdown drives of 90, 52, 72 and 66 yards on the 96-degree evening before 48,400 fans in Texas Stadium.

Moon passed 14 yards to Curtis Duncan for one touchdown and scored another TD himself on a 1-yard bootleg run, fooling all 11 members of the Dallas defense.

Moon completed 14 of 19 passes for 194 yards in the first half as the Oilers rolled up 294 yards to 103 for the Cowboys, who had a minus four yards rushing at intermission.

Houston held Dallas running back Herschel Walker to a minus four yards on five carries for the night, although Walker did catch three passes for 83 yards.

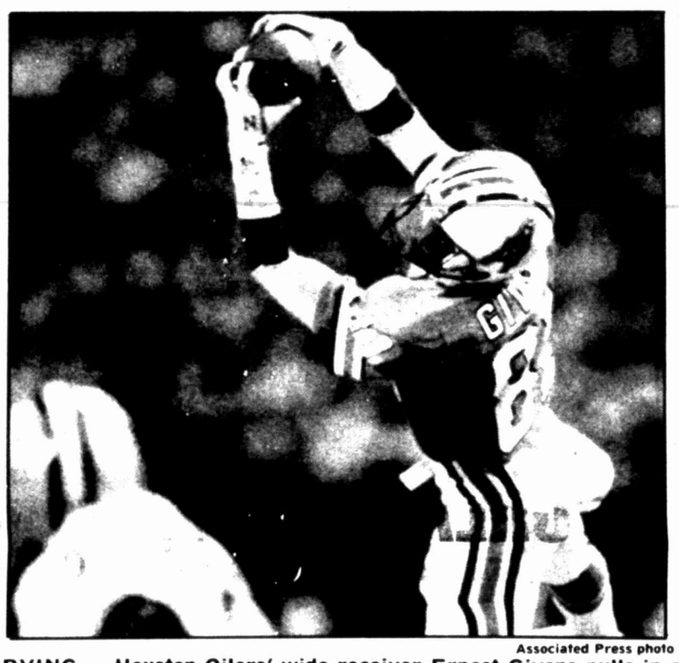

Mike Rozier scored twice on 1-yard touchdown runs as the Oilers built a 31-3 halftime lead in the annual joust for the "Governor's Cup."

It was Houston's third consecutive victory in the series, which Dallas leads 15-7.

Starting Dallas quarterback Steve Pelluer hit 7 of 10 passes for 113 yards in the first half. Dallas' only first-half points came on Luis Zendejas' 24-yard field goal.

The Oilers' Tony Zendejas, who is Luis' cousin, kicked field goals of 22 and 28 yards.

The Cowboys finally crossed the Houston goal in the third period on Darryl Clack's 1-yard run.

Cyclist dies as temperatures hit 106

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — A 51-year-old man died after crossing the finish line in the Hotter 'N Hell Hundred bicycle ride as temperatures soared over 100 degrees.

George O'Malley, of Wichita, Kan., was pronounced dead around 3:30 p.m. at Wichita General Hospital after suffering a heart attack, officials said.

Dr. Jerry Alexander, medical director of the 100-mile event, said the medical staff had considered ending the ride because of the heat. However, he said, officials manning rest areas reported no major problems, so the idea was rejected.

A total of 12,529 riders, the largest number for what is billed as the nation's biggest 100-mile ride, sweltered under temperatures that soared to 106 degrees.

The medical area had its busiest day in the event's history, and staff members said blistering heat was the culprit. Riders flocked to the medical tent all afternoon with bumps, bruises and heat-related ailments.

"It's been crazy," Bill Horton said as he attempted to direct traffic outside the tent on the east side of Memorial Stadium. "We've had just about every bed filled since about 2 o'clock," Corinne Martin, a registered nurse, said.

Grady Smith, a medical investigator, said O'Malley died from cardiac resperatory arrest. It was the first fatality in the seven-year history of the event, officials said.

"It's kind of like thinking about your own death. You're never ready for it when it does occur," said Roby Christie, ride director.

Nebraska gigs Aggies, 24-13

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Steve Taylor got Nebraska's offense untracked in the third period with his scrambling and passing and the second-ranked Cornhuskers scored on their first three second-half possessions and defeated No. 10 Texas A&M 23-14 Saturday night in the sixth annual Kickoff Classic.

The Cornhuskers, who failed to capitalize on two Texas A&M turnovers in the first half, turned Tom Jackson's interception into the go-ahead touchdown, a 1-yard run by tailback Ken Clark at 10:28 of the third period that gave Nebraska a 12-7 lead.

Taylor, who was shaken up one play before Gregg Barrios kicked a 38-yard field goal that brought Nebraska within 7-6 on the Cornhuskers' first second-half possession, returned to become the top rushing quarterback in Nebraska history. He also teamed up with tight end Todd Millikan for the decisive touchdown, a 24-yard pass at 1:37 of the fourth quarter.

Millikan broke a tackle by defensive back William Thomas at the 9 and carried two more defenders the final two yards to cap a seven-play, 80-yard drive and give the Cornhuskers a 20-7 lead.

After being limited to 100 yards in the first half by Texas A&M's super-quick defense, Nebraska rolled up 108 yards in the third period alone in handing the Aggies their sixth opening-game setback in Jackie Sherrill's seven years as head coach.

Barrios, a left-footed sophomore filling in for the injured Chris Drennan, missed his first collegiate field goal try from 35 yards out early in the game but then tied a Kickoff Classic record by connecting from 44, 38 and 48 yards, the last one the longest in the brief history of this game.

Nebraska spotted the Aggies a 7-0 lead on Matt Gurley's 1-yard plunge at 12:38 of the first period. After that, A&M's only score was a 2-yard run by freshman Randy Simmons with 10:15 left in the game, six plays after Nebraska's Dana Brinson fumbled a punt at his 44.

Barrios' final field goal with 7:10 remaining accounted for the final margin.

A crowd of 58,172 attended the game at 76,000-seat Giants Stadium in 77-degree weather.

HOUSTON (AP) — Dave Meads pitched 5⅓ scoreless innings in relief of injured starter Mike Scott as the Houston Astros beat the slumping Pittsburgh Pirates 3-1 Saturday night.

The second-place Pirates have lost seven of their last 11 games and have dropped 7½ games behind the New York Mets in the National League East.

Meads, 3-0, allowed three hits and struck out a career-high five. He retired 11 straight batters before pinch-hitter John Cangelosi singled with one out in the seventh and Juan Agosto relieved for his fourth save.

Pittsburgh took a 1-0 lead in the first when Barry Bonds led off with a single, stole second, moved to third on a fly ball and scored on a Sid Bream's single.

Houston made it 2-1 in the third inning off starter Bob Walk, 11-10. Meads led off with a single and moved to second on Bobby Bonilla's throwing error on Gerald Young's grounder. Both runners advanced on a grounder, before Meads scored on Billy Hatcher's groundout with Young going to third. Young then scored on a wild pitch.

Walk has lost six straight decisions.

Rangers 5, Blue Jays 3

ARLINGTON (AP) — Ruben Sierra hit two home runs to lead the Texas Rangers to a 5-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays Saturday night.

The Rangers broke a 2-2 tie in the fourth inning on Jeff Kunkel's leadoff homer and went on to their seventh victory in nine games.

Charlie Hough, 11-14, pitched into the ninth before giving up a home run to Jesse Barfield, his 15th. Reliever Mitch Williams recorded the final two outs for his 18th save.

Hough gave up six hits in 8 1-3 innings, struck out six and walked three as Texas downed Toronto for the sixth time in seven games this season.

Texas took a 4-2 lead in the fourth off Toronto starter Jimmy Key, 8-4.

Kunkel's homer to left-center to lead off the fourth was his first since June 20 and only his second of the season. Pete Incavaglia drove in another run in the inning with an infield single.

Spreading the word on soccer

Martin Jones and Andy Gray don't care whether you call their favorite sport soccer or football — they just want you to play.

The two Brits — Jones is from Gloucheshire; Gray hails from London — were in Big Spring this past week attempting to spread their affection for the game to a group of about 25 children at the Britannia Community Soccer Camp at the Airpark.

The camps — there are currently about 290 operating across the United States — are designed to teach the fun as well as technical aspects of the world's most popular game, Jones said.

There are two levels of instruction during the camp; one for beginners and the other for more advanced players. Jones said he and Gray concentrate less on technique when working with the less-skilled children.

"When you're working with the younger children, you try to create ability and understanding," he said. "With the older ones, the teaching is much more technical.

"You can drill children when they're 16 or 17," Jones said. "By then, they're in love with the game, but that's not so with the younger ones."

As an example, Gray noted that the Three vs One possession drill — a standard soccer regimen — is called "Piggy in the Middle" at the beginners' camp.

The reason for the nickname is a hope the children will find the game more fun, and therefore play it long after the instructors are gone.

"After we've left, we hope the children get together and say, 'Let's play Piggy in the Middle'," Gray said.

There are other attractive points to the game besides being fun, Jones said.

"The game is ever-changing," he said. "You don't stop, come off the field and try to work things out. There's all different sorts of problems you have to work out (while action is still in progress).

"Soccer is a problem-solving game, not a mechanical game like American football," Jones said. "It's attractive to children, because they have to think constantly."

Both men hope that camp attendees will continue playing soccer long after its completion. To help toward that end, Jones and Gray hosted a free clinic for parents Wednesday evening.

"At the (parents') clinic, we try to teach the parents how to teach the children after we're gone," Jones said. "A benefit from that will be that if you keep it in the family, there will be more personal instruction."

Turning their attention from the camp, the two men discussed the state of soccer in this country and the World Cup — the quadrennial international tournament the United States will host in 1994.

"Soccer (in the United States) is obviously struggling to compete with American football," Jones said. "The best thing for soccer here would be a big build up for the World Cup."

"It's the world's game," Gray added, "and everybody plays it except America."

The reason for soccer's inability to take hold, Gray said, is its absence at the grass-roots level.

"You haven't developed it among the younger children," he said. "You have it at the professional level, but no one understands (the finer points of the game)."

It is common in England to see chalk marks — in the outline of a soccer goal — etched on walls, he said in explaining soccer's popularity with British children.

If the game approaches that sort of popularity here, Gray said, the demand for organized league activity among adults will increase.

Hosting the World Cup also ought to increase the sport's popularity here, both agreed.

"I think 1994 will open a lot of people's eyes," Jones said. "Every eye will be on the Cup; everbody in the world will be watching."

"People across the world will be going crazy," Gray said of the Cup's attraction.

"We hope (Americans) watch the Cup games and wonder, 'Why don't we have players like Maradona (of Argentina) or Lineker (of Great Britain)," Jones said.

Tiawan wins LL series

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Chen-Lung Yu pitched a one-hitter and Wei-Chih Chen was 4-for-4 with a three-run homer as Tai Chung, Taiwan, defeated Pearl City, Hawaii, 10-0 in the 42nd Little League World Series, the fifth consecutive time the Far East has won the tournament.

Yu, a 5-foot-4½, 134-pound right-hander went the distance, striking out 10 while walking one with a 75 mph fastball. He retired the last 17 batters.

Chris Yoshimoto had the only hit for Pearl City, a community of 40,000 people near Pearl Harbor. He reached safely in the first inning on a slow roller in front of the plate.

Chen singled in the first and third innings, belted a three-run homer in the fourth and singled in the fifth.

Tai Chung, a city of 700,000 people in central Taiwan, scored in every inning but the first and sixth, amassing 14 hits against four Pearl City pitchers.

Pearl City starter Ryan Morioka was the losing pitcher. The 4-foot-11, 91-pound righty allowed two runs on two hits in 1⅔ innings, using mostly a curveball.

Right fielder Jason Adaro made the defensive play of the game before the crowd of 33,000 and a ABC-TV audience estimated at 20 million.

In the second inning, Adaro made a diving, over-the-shoulder catch on the warning track off Chen-Lung Yu that turned into a double play when Adaro and second baseman Reid Numata combined to throw out Hsin-Cheng Chen trying to tag up and score from second.

Teams from Taiwan have won the series the last three years, outscoring their American opponents 41-3.

Marietta, Ga., was the last American team to win the title for 11-and 12-year-olds, in 1983.

Korean teams won the championship in 1984 and '85. Far East teams have won 18 of the last 22 years.

Hawaiian teams have made the Little League World Series six times but never won it.

Pearl City and Tai Chung were the last two survivors in the worldwide tournament that began in mid-July.

I would like to THANK everyone that participated & helped with the 2nd annual Medina Children's Home Benefit Softball Tournament held Aug. 5th & 6th at Coahoma. A big thank you to the following businesses for contributing: Trimway, TX Coca-Cola, Little Sooper, Bowlin Tractor, Hughes Rental & Sales, Coahoma Auto Sales, KWKI, and the Big Spring Herald.

A special thank you for all the people that helped during the weekend goes out to: Bill & Darlene Gressett, Ben & MaxAnn Bowlin, Bobby & Maleah Fryar, Bubba & Cheryl Parrish, Roger Evans, Bob & Linda Corley, Dena Bomar, Darrel Hunt, Rachelle Phillips and to any we may have forgotten. Thanks to the teams and fans that participated and made it all worthwhile.

An extra thank you to whomever damaged the camper trailer after the tournament was over, this only proves that we need to work harder for the Medina children so they don't turn out the same as the vandals responsible. The $300.00 used to repair the loaned camp trailer, could have been better spent at Medina. It's a shame there is that much less money for the children now.

Graf advances to Bank final

MAHWAH, N.J. (AP) — Steffi Graf won her 27th straight match Saturday and a place in the final of the $200,000 United Jersey Bank Classic with a 6-1, 6-1 victory over Helena Sukova.

Graf, the No. 1 world-ranked women's player, overpowered Sukova, of Czechoslovakia, with blistering ground strokes and accurate passing shots. Graf, of West Germany, swept the first five games and the last six in the 50-minute semifinal.

On Sunday, she will face the winner of Saturday night's semifinal between Katerina Maleeva of Bulgaria and Nathalie Tauziat of France.

Graf is seeking to win the upcoming U.S. Open — the final leg to her Grand Slam bid. After this tournament, the 19-year-old's earnings could top the $1 million mark for the season. So far she has earned $969,273, and $40,000 is at stake this time.

"If I play this well, I don't think anybody can beat me," Graf said.

Frosh win scrimmage

The Big Spring High School freshman football team won its scrimmage with Frenship, 4-1, at Lubbock Thursday night.

"It was a total team effort," coach Mike Ritchey said in describing the win. "I can't single out just one single individual."

Running back Kevin Rodgers scored twice for the Steers — on runs of seven and eight yards, respectively. Other Big Spring scores came on an 18-yard run by Travis Sinclair and a 20-yard pass from Gerald Cobos to Abel Hilario.

During the scrimmage, the first-string teams alternated 15 plays on offense and defense before giving way to the second-stringers for the same amount of plays. The scrimmage then concluded with the first teams again alternating 15 offensive and defensive plays.

Offensively, the Steers gained 15 first downs and scored four touchdowns. Defensively, they limited the Frenship squad to five first downs and one score.

College inks two more

Howard College baseball coach Frank Anderson recently announced the signing of two players to letters of intent for the 1989 season.

TIM BOGE

Tim Boge, a Dyersville, Iowa native, will compete for a catcher's spot on the Hawk roster. Boge threw out 14 of 17 baserunners from that position this past season.

In addition, he played in the Iowa schoolboy all-star game, was captain of the baseball and basketball teams, lettered three seasons in football, was in the band and made honor roll all four years in high school.

Boge opted for college despite being drafted by the Cincinnati Reds in the June draft. He is the a high school teammate of Dennis Jaeger, another Hawk signee.

Kokora, a shortstop-second basemen who switch-hits, was chosen by the New York Mets during the June draft. He was brought to HC's attention after playing in a regional Connie Mack tournament in McKinney recently, Anderson said.

He maintained a .397 batting average last season, and was named all-state in Colorado.

"He's a pretty good player," Anderson said. "Being picked by the Mets pretty well speaks for itself."

Booster club to meet

The Big Spring High School Sports Boosters will conduct a brief meeting at 7 p.m. Monday in the high school cafeteria, according to booster Sarah Bavin.

The football coaching staff will be introduced during the meeting, and head coach David Thompson will show film from the Frenship scrimmage.

Bavin said the boosters also are urging everyone to wear black at all Steers' home games this season.

For more information on the meeting, contact Bavin at 267-7163.

Bowlin named alternate

The Bowlin Implement softball team may go to the American Softball Association national tournament in Las Vegas, Nev. next month — then again, it may not.

The team placed seventh in the recent state ASA tournament. The top five teams from state automatically qualify for the national tournament, team member Johnnie Palmer said Thursday.

One of the qualifiers notified tournament officials it will not be able to compete in the Las Vegas tournament, scheduled for Sept. 22-23. This moved Bowlin up to the position of alternate, and if any other teams withdraw, the locals will earn a spot at nationals, Palmer said.

He added that he should receive word from officials within the next few weeks.

Yates, Meeks to play for amateur title

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — Danny Yates, who is playing in his ninth U.S. Amateur, and Eric Meeks, who failed to make the match-play field in his previous four tries, both won a pair of matches Saturday to advance to Sunday's 36-hole final of the 88th annual national championship.

"It's obviously a very special thing for me," said Yates, 38, an insurance agent from Atlanta.

Yates was a 5-and-4 winner over fellow Atlanta resident Jack Larkin in a quarterfinal match Saturday morning.

Yates never trailed in his afternoon match against Doug Martin, but admitted he tired toward the end of his 1-up victory, which represented the first time any of his five matches had gone the full 18 holes of the Cascades course at The Homestead.

Steers

of 12 and 27 yards — moved the ball to the Frenship 37. On the next play, Dennis Hartsfield took the handoff and scooted 37 yards for the Steer TD.

Thompson then connected with Toney Lewis for the two-point conversion, giving the Steers the lead at 8-7.

The score stood until, with 14 seconds remaining in the scrimmage, the Tiger place-kicker booted a 35-yard field goal to provide Frenship with the winning 10-8 margin.

Looking back at the scrimmage, coach Thompson expressed disappointment with the results, but saw a silver lining in the Steers' offensive effort.

"We're definitely disappointed," he said. "We didn't play consistent defense; we just missed too many tackles. I thought the defense played hard, but they just made too many errors.

"(Speaking of the offense) I'm a lot more pleased this week than I was last week," Thompson said. "It seemed the longer (the scrimmage) went, the better we got . . . I feel that if it had been a regular game, we would've had a good opportunity to win."

For evidence of the Steers' improvement as the scrimmage wore on, Thompson pointed to statistics. Frenship gained 108 yards during the timed scrimmage, but 58 of those yards came on the first two plays.

Conversely, after being dominated in the fixed-play scrimmage, the Steers gained 225 yards on five possessions during the game situation.

"We moved the ball extremely well (at the end)," Thompson said. "We had consistency, and were able to overcome the penalties."

Thompson lauded the efforts of Hartsfield, Rodney Brown — who had a nifty 32-yard scamper during the timed scrimmage — QB Thompson and Lewis, as well as the offensive unit as a whole.

Ghosts of football past and present

By TIM APPEL
Staff Writer

Around the rim

Like many other photographers around the country, this is the time of year I dread the most.

If you haven't already noticed, today's edition features our annual high school football section. Much like the gridders on the practice field, much blood, sweat and tears goes into producing this every year; hence, the dread.

The product you see, from the photographer's standpoint, involves the shooting of 245 individual players, 22 head and assistant coaches, some 600 miles on my car, and approximately 25 hours involved in the shooting, processing and printing of the pictures.

Yes, football season is upon us again.

Yet, through it all, there is a certain pleasure in this annual photographic ritual. It doesn't come from the long miles driven or the tedious darkroom work, but from shooting each player.

Maybe the scenerio does not sound fun to you, but picture this (no pun intended): Having a player stand before the camera, attempting to look as serious and mean as possible, while 20 or so of his peers stand behind me, hooting and hollering in an effort to crack that grimmace into a laugh.

The situation can be quite hilarious, and I often laugh along with the players. Thus the joy of my job.

This is the fifth year I have worked on our football issue, and wanted to give recognition to those teams that do the most joking and laughing during the photo sessions, making my job much more enjoyable.

Therefore, the first annual Insane Team award goes to the Stanton Buffalos. These guys — many possibly committable — made it the most difficult for any subject to be photographed. If they can focus that much energy on their football performance, they should go far in the playoffs.

Second place goes to another Buffaloes team; the Forsan variety. They will play in Stanton on Sept. 30, and this could be an awesome game to watch.

Honorable mention is given to head coach Tom Ham of Klondike High School. Though the players were on the quiet side, the coach filled in the void — and then some. If he teaches that same attitude on the field, then the Klondike players — and football in general — will benefit.

As the season is just around the corner, one must be prepared for all contingencies.

If you plan on attending any football games this year, the best purchase you can make for yourself is a can of mosquito repellant. Mosquitoes have been fierce in the past, but with the heavy rains this year and the standing water in fields and vacant lots, look for these pesky bloodsuckers to be swarming en masse.

The football stadiums that seem to attract the most mosquitoes are Garden City, Stanton, Coahoma and that swamp known as Memorial Stadium in Big Spring.

Stadiums I have been to where I never remember mosquitoes are Colorado City, Forsan and Borden County.

Bon appitit.

Is it just me, or are you also sick of professional football by now?

For the past four weeks, the television audience has be inundiated with a constant barrage of football coverage, beginning on Thursdays and continuing through Monday. And for Pete's sake — it's only the preseason!

Football has easily taken over the title of "America's Pastime" from baseball, as millions of viewers vegetate in front of the tube; with a cold one in their left hand and the TV remote control in the other — flipping channels to simultaneously watch two games.

The television media has made too big a deal over preseason games, with announcers having you believe each game is a must-win situation.

Maybe the massive coverage this year is because of the writer's strike in Hollywood; maybe not. But I believe the television audience deserves to be given a football break before they are burned out by midseason. Please.

How good are the Olympians?

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Bock's score

For three weeks now, America's Olympic basketball team has been on a barnstorming tour with NBA All-Star teams. And while the pros think Team USA is in good shape to challenge for the gold at Seoul next month, they did not offer an open-ended endorsement.

"I was very impressed," said Jimmy Rodgers, coach of the Boston Celtics, who ran the NBA bench in an opening game 90-82 loss to the Olympians at Providence.

"Their defensive pressure stood out. They emphasized that coming into camp. They put constant defensive pressure on their opponents. They create their offense off their defense. I think that can be very effective. They are relentless."

That pressing, stifling style is a trademark of Olympic coach John Thompson, who preaches the same defensive sermon to his teams at Georgetown University. Rodgers understands why Thompson used it as the starting point for the Olympic team.

"John has a most difficult job," he said. "He has to take different people from different programs and mold them into a single, cohesive unit that blends together. The common denominator is defense. You don't have to have played together before to play defense. The offense will develop. The defense comes first."

But ex-coach Al McGuire, who will broadcast the Olympic tournament for NBC, questioned that philosophy. "John's the ideal coach," he said, "but I'm a little leery of the defense being the offense. It was my system, but it's not an automatic."

McGuire thinks non-English speaking referees, the plodding European style of play, and the time schedule that will require the United States to play at odd hours, all could contribute to trouble for the Americans.

"You get some referee from Tibet who'd just as soon forfeit the game and it can be a little tricky," he said. "They're playing at 8 o'clock in the morning, having a pre-game meal at 5 a.m. That's not their usual rhythm.

"We're a solid club. Look at the coach. We're a ton the best. Look at the players' natural ability. We're a ton the best. Look at the full court. We're a ton the best. But there are other factors. It's not like we'll just show up and they'll pin the gold on John's towel."

Never was Thompson's team defense better than against an NBA squad coached by Cleveland's Lenny Wilkins midway through the tour. The U.S. team won that game 100-67.

"I think if they play as aggressively as they did against us and if they execute as well, their speed and quickness will be a definite factor for them," he said.

That victory in Cleveland came after two games in Charlotte, N.C., both wins for the U.S. team, 81-80 and 95-84. But those contests raised some questions with at least one NBA observer.

"I thought they were not as cohesive as other teams I've seen," said Gene Littles, assistant coach and director of player personnel for the expansion Charlotte Hornets. "They didn't seem to flow as well. But they're very talented. They've got the most talent I've seen in a long time."

That talent includes David Robinson and Danny Manning, college basketball's players of the year for the last two seasons and the last two No. 1 NBA draft choices. The roster also includes less glamorous names like Stacey Augmon of Nevada-Las Vegas and Vernell Coles of Virginia Tech.

Like Rodgers, Littles saw the job of bringing these diverse talents together and molding them into a team as Thompson's most difficult task. "The chemistry must fit," he said . "You have to know who you can substitute and when you can substitute without losing efficiency. I don't think they're at that point quite yet."

Rodgers disagreed. "They have versatility on their roster," he said. "They can do things differently from one night to the next. They can put a small team together. They can put a bigger team together. They can put a mix together. I've watched them on TV since we played them and they seem to have improved from game to game."

But the chemistry factor troubled Wilkins, too. "Psychologically, it should give them a lift to have played against the world's best players in the NBA," he said. "But if they played a regular NBA team that had been playing together, I think the results would have been much different. Two nights after they played us, they played a team that had five Detroit players together and that team defeated them."

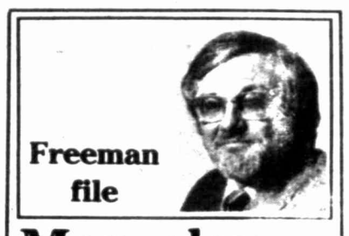

Littles did not want to sound like an alarmist, though. "They'll be there," he said. "They're so talented that a kid like Manning seems like just another player. It's more than Manning and Robinson. This team is as talented as the one in 1984 (which included Michael Jordan and Patrick Ewing) and is quicker. John is molding a different kind of team. His strength will be defense up and down the floor, pressuring the ball all the time. The '84 team was more physical."

That is an element that concerns McGuire. "I don't see the physical play I'd like to see," he said. "You need Sumo wrestlers. Some of these countries bring guys who look like weightlifters into the tournament.

"The key will be the European teams working to break John's pressure defense. We're depending on that holding them. If they solve that riddle, we'll be in trouble.

"We're not any worse, it's just that the rest of the world is better," McGuire said. "There are four or five contenders and one heavyweight contender — the Russians. I watched them three times in Rotterdam and they're for real."

The Soviets, remember, are the only team to ever beat the United States in Olympic basketball. That came in the gold medal game in 1972 in a finish that was so controversial, the Americans refused the silver medal. The countries have not met in the Olympics since.

Marvelous Mojo makes a comeback

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Predicting the survivor of a Texas high school football 16-game elimination process is fun business, if you don't bet on it.

There are too many teams, too many injuries, and too many F's in English 101 to make it anywhere close to an exact science.

There are over 1,000 teams and 30,000 players in Texas high school football.

Here are some crystal-ball calculations:

CLASS 5A — The most courageous pick is that the defending champion Plano Wildcats WON'T win the state title. If there's a good way to get egg on your face it's picking against John Kimbrough's perennial power.

However, the hunch here is that the Wildcats need a rebuilding year before contending for the title.

We'll go for a darkhorse in the strongest of Texas' divisions.

Although Aldine, Sugar Land Willowridge, Hurst Bell, San Antonio Clark, and Houston Yates are gaining big support, I guess here that there will be a big surprise from out west.

Remember Odessa Permian? The Panthers and their legendary "Mojo Magic" always contend for the title.

Last year they got to the state semifinals and finished with an 11-2-1 season. They lost 23 lettermen but get 24 back.

Coach Gary Gaines could have a fine, quick-striking offense with running back James Miles and quarterback Mike Winchell.

★ ★ ★

CLASS 4A — The chalk horse here can be none other than West Orange-Stark. They've won back-to-back titles, a herculean feat in this age of balance across the state.

They return 20 lettermen and a tradition of knowing how to win the close playoff games.

Coach Dan Hooks has won 23 games in a row.

How do you pick against him? You don't.

★ ★ ★

CLASS 3A — It comes down to whether you think a team can win the title without an established quarterback.

Cuero, the defending champion, has perhaps the finest running back in the state in Robert Strait, who rushed for 3,515 yards and 52 touchdowns last year.

However, Coach Pat Blessing isn't blessed with an experienced quarterback.

Daingerfield, which returns 15 lettermen from a 9-2-1 team, has a top quarterback in Greg Evans. If the Tigers get out of the tough No. 15 district, they could win the title.

The pick here is Daingerfield.

★ ★ ★

CLASS 2A — All the coaches and all the experts say Corrigan-Camden is the team to beat if it can survive a gauntlet of talented East Texas teams.

The Bulldogs drop in class from 3A and they return nine offensive starters and six on defense from a team that had an 11-3 ledger.

McGregor, the state finalist in 3A, also drops in class but only five starters return from a 14-1-1 team.

The pick is Corrigan-Camden.

★ ★ ★

CLASS A — Wheeler is the defending state champion from a 13-2 team and returns 14 lettermen.

You can't go against the Mustangs although they will have a tough district opponent in White Deer, which dropped from 2A.

Wheeler has six starters back on both offense and defense.

'The Fridge' is back

CHICAGO (AP) — William "The Refrigerator" Perry was back, smiling again.

"A couple of more steps," he laughed when asked about almost catching up to running back Marcus Allen of the Los Angeles Raiders.

Perry's return led to one of the lighter moments for Chicago fans in the Bears' Friday night's 37-22 preseason loss to the Raiders.

The lumbering but quick-footed Perry gave chase after Allen caught a screen pass and was weaving away from other tacklers.

It was Perry's 1988 debut. The huge, defensive lineman had gone through a month in treatment for eating disorders.

"It was good to come back and get in a game before the season opened," said Perry. "Now that I've got a game under my belt, I'm looking forward to better things."

Despite his long layoff which included missing the entire summer training camp, Perry played three quarters of the game. He had one tackle and assisted on another. He also put pressure on quarterback Steve Beuerlein several times.

"It didn't feel like no other game," said Perry.

Art Rooney was a bridge to NFL's not-so-good ol' days

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

Art Rooney spanned two eras in the NFL — or three, or four or even five.

Rooney, who died Thursday at age 87, was the last of the NFL's original owners, those men who bought teams when the players wore leather helmets, the fields were often more dirt than grass and gate receipts were closer to $500 than $5 million.

"When I came into the league, there was no question who the NFL was," said Tex Schramm, who joined the Los Angeles Rams as publicity director in 1947 before building the expansion Dallas Cowboys of the 1960s and 1970s into "America's Team."

"The league was George Halas in Chicago, Tim Mara in New York, George Preston Marshall in Washington, Curly Lambeau in Green Bay ... and Art Rooney in Pittsburgh."

Rooney bought the Steelers in 1932 with $2,500 in gambling winnings, a bargain even in those days for a franchise whose value today is probably something over $60 million.

For the next 30 years, he operated on that kind of shoestring in a league that before the days of billion-dollar television contracts was always on the verge of losing teams to bankruptcy.

As Rooney himself said before his death: "The thrill was not only winning or losing, but making the payroll."

To put it in perspective, Rooney became an NFL owner 34 years before there was something called a Super Bowl, 28 years before there was a Dallas Cowboys, not to mention Oakland Raiders, New England Patriots, Kansas City Chiefs and Miami Dolphins.

He bought his team some two decades before the birth of the mainstays of his teams that won four Super Bowls — Terry Bradshaw, Joe Greene, Lynn Swann, Franco Harris, Jack Lambert.

When Art Rooney bought the Steelers, they were a public curiosity. In Pittsburgh, they were dwarfed by Jock Sutherland's University of Pittsburgh Panthers, just as pro football was dwarfed by college football everywhere in the United States.

Football was Notre Dame, Army, Stanford — even Columbia and Yale. Vince Lombardi was famous as one of Fordham's "Seven Blocks of Granite" long before he became an NFL coach.

ART ROONEY

The Pittsburgh Steelers? The Chicago Bears? The New York Giants? They were around then, but they became national attractions only after the television explosion in the late 1950s.

For every Red Grange, the first big college star to turn pro, there was a Jay Berwanger, a Heisman Trophy winner who was the first pick in the first NFL draft in 1936 by the Philadelphia Eagles.

Berwanger's reaction? He turned up his nose and said, in effect: "Me? Play pro football?"

With all that, Rooney and Halas and the others kept things going toward a success that was beyond their wildest dreams, a success only Halas and Rooney lived to see.

"With all the big television contracts and all the exposure, we forget how it was," Art Modell, owner of the Cleveland Browns, said. "These were activist owners who loved the game for its own sake. Sometimes they had to pass the hat to break even. They'd make exhibition games into road shows, taking them into places like Omaha and Davenport to show the product."

Nor was the game itself the impersonal, precision-run instrument it now seems to be. There were no computers, few scouts, no "director of pro personnel" or "director of player personnel."

Instead, with little money to hire extra help, the businessman owners handled those jobs themselves.

They called old players for recommendations on college stars or consulted magazines for lists of top players. In 1956, using a magazine list, the Steelers used the first pick in the draft on defensive back Gary Glick.

"The older teams like the Steelers and Bears were a little bit behind teams like the Rams and the Browns, who came into being after World War II," Schramm recalled.

"They were still working out of their hip pockets to get ready for the draft, where we had scouts out looking for players.

"Back in the '50s, when the Rams were loaded and Pittsburgh was pretty pathetic, I used to talk to Art and he would send one of his assistants out and spend a week at our training camp so he would know what players on our team were available and he would want to trade for.

"Once we traded him five players — I forget for what — but we had to play a preseason game and we couldn't trade until the game was over. One of the players we were sending him broke his hand, but we sent him along anyway. The next day, Art called and asked 'What are you doing? The guy's got a broken hand.' But he took him."

It wouldn't happen today.

But that was Art Rooney's time.

Innovations brought fame for pioneer service station

Tumbleweed Smith

Grimes Garage in Hillsboro was referred to as the Neiman-Marcus of service stations. In its prime fourteen gas pumps and twenty attendants were kept busy at the Waco street location. It was open all the time. The doors had no locks on them.

Fred O. Grimes was the pioneer of full service gas stations in the southwest. He had the first garage in the county as well as the first wrecker. Mr. Grimes was the first mechanic and he installed the first electric gas pump in town. But those firsts pale in comparison to this one: his was the first station in the US to provide public restrooms.

As other stations added such facilities, Grimes Garage installed the finest restrooms in the US, with glass brick walls enclosing two tile powder rooms called the Blue Room and the Dubonnet Room. These adjoined a spacious lounge area with contemporary furnishings, terrazzo flooring, air conditioning and always fresh flowers on the dressing table.

A guest book was nearby for customers to sign. Many famous names appeared through the years. A maid in a white starched uniform served ice water to customers both inside and out. She also cared for small children while parents freshened up as their cars were being serviced.

Any customer who waited more than thirty seconds for service was awarded a free cold soft drink.

Grimes, an outstanding innovator, was also a pioneer in advertising. In 1914, while visiting the Garden of the Gods in Colorado, Grimes carved these words on a large stone: "Grimes Garage, Hillsboro, Texas." Within a few days he received a postcard from a tourist saying he had read the sign. Grimes then started one of the most extensive advertising campaigns in the country which made Grimes Garage the most famous service station in the world.

He made signs from heavy iron and placed them at frequent intervals on the highways from Hillsboro to Dallas, Fort Worth and Austin. The signs were white, edged with an orange border and lettered in black. They all mentioned Grimes Garage.

Since there was no state highway department then, Grimes provided a service to motorists by painting mileages and directions on his markers. As the idea began to catch on, friends and customers began to pick up signs at the garage and post them wherever they were going. During World War II and the Korean War, servicemen posted the signs all over the world. At one time it was estimated that 2,000 of the signs had been placed.

In August of 1935, eighty-five per cent of advertising men from around the world attending an international advertising meeting in Houston said Grimes Garage had the most outstanding advertising in Texas.

Will Rogers once said the two things he remembered about Texas were the Alamo and Grimes Garage. Uncle Walt and Skeezix spoke of Grimes Garage in their comic strip Gasoline Alley.

Mr. Grimes opened his first garage in 1906 in a building vacated by a snake show. Hill County had only half a dozen cars then. The speed limit was six miles an hour. In 1914 he purchased an old livery stable and put in the garage that became famous.

A sign instructed the customer to pull a rope which blew a whistle in the repair shop. Grimes would then go up front and pump the customer some gas. At that time, cars arrived in pieces and had to be assembled locally. Mr. Grimes did that for five dollars a car.

Any vehicle from another town that made it to Hillsboro needed servicing because the roads were so bad. And when it rained, cars would get stuck. Mr. Grimes pulled them out for a dollar a car.

After 51 years in the same location the garage closed in 1965. The building still stands with the name FRED O. GRIMES in raised letters above the entryway.

BUSINESS & INDUSTRY REVIEW

Need taxi, wrecker, van, limo? Leave the driving to Mitchem!

Ever dream of riding in a stretch limousine — complete with wet bar, television and of course, a chauffeur?

This is but one of the services offered by Mitchem & Sons Wrecker and Transport Company.

The company got its start as Mitchem Auto Sales in 1976 when David Mitchem retired from Webb Air Base after a 20-year military career. Gradually over the years Mitchem branched out to include many areas of transporting and serving the public.

He is dedicated to providing the public with alternative transportation, he says. To this end Mitchem operates Big Spring Taxi, the area's only taxi company; and offers van service to the Midland-Odessa Air Terminal. Contract transportation is also available from Mitchem; for example, his firm has an agreement with Union-Pacific Railroad to transport crews to and from Toyah on the west and Ft. Worth on the east.

The luxurious limo is his latest addition, and it has proven popular for weddings as well as special events such as anniversaries and birthdays.

Mitchem emphasizes that his firm is registered and insured as a public carrier. His drivers are dependable and experienced.

The Transport Division also specializes in package delivery in the area. Mitchem cites as an example the case of a businessman who was attending a meeting in Midland, only to find that papers he needed had been left in Big Spring. Mitchem collected the papers and whisked them to Midland while the meeting was still underway. Local package delivery might include medicine, laundry, groceries or anything else a resident or business cannot conveniently pick up for themselves.

The Mitchem Wrecker Company is listed with all automobile clubs, including AARP, AAA, Allstate, Montgomery Ward, Amoco, Volvo On Call, and ERS (Emergency Road Service for mobile homes.)

The firm's wreckers feature the most up-to-date equipment, says Mitchem. They can field the only roll-back bed wrecker in this area — ideal for front wheel drive and sports cars. Mitchem is on a rotation schedule to provide wreckers for state, county and city requests.

Mitchem is proud of his wrecker division, headed by son, Ricky Mitchem. "We put safety first," says Mitchem. "We are the professionals in towing service, offering well-equipped vehicles and trained professional drivers. Ricky has attended special schooling for wrecker operators."

The company has recently established the Colorado City Taxi Company, the first taxi to operate in that city in 34 years. "Every small town needs some form of public transportation," Mitchem believes.

Mitchem Wrecker and Transport is located at 700 West 4th Street. David's wife, Peggy, is also on the staff.

Residents should put this phone number — 267-3747 — on their list of important numbers. For a taxi across town, a van to the airport, package delivery, trucking service, towing service or a limo for a night on the town — or maybe just a transportation problem that needs a creative solution.

Employees of Mitchem Wrecker and Transport show off the firm's stretch Lincoln limousine. Limo rental is but one of the many transport services offered by the firm, which stresses safety and professionalism in its equipment and drivers.

Two Swiss Girl Guides lower the flag at "Our Chalet.

Tonya Rock and Christy Alexander stand in front of the sign that points the way to "Our Chalet" in Adelboden, Switzerland.

Dream becomes reality

By LYNN HAYES
Staff Writer

It took only eight years of raising $24,511.79 and 12 hours and 20 minutes on a jet for the members of Girl Scout Troop 36 to transform a dream to a reality.

Six fourth grade girls and their advisors dedicated themselves in 1980 to visit "Our Chalet," an international Girl Scout World Center in Adelboden, Switzerland, where they would attend sessions at the center — exploring and visiting with Girl Scouts and Girl Guides from all the world.

The girls, Kathyrn Burrow, daughter of Guy and Debbie Burrow; Shawna Adams, daughter of Tom and Karen Adams; Christy Alexander, daughter of Ray and Norma Alexander; Renea Reinert, daughter of Ralph and Janet Reinert; Tonya Rock, daughter of Wayne and Joan Rock; and Kim White, daughter of Wimley and Alma White, began raising money for their trip in 1980.

Guy, who is a member of the troop, and Debbie, who serves as an advisor, and Wayne and Joan, also an advisor, helped the girls realize their long-awaited dream.

Although the Rock's youngest daughter, Tasha, is not a member of the senior troop, she joined the group on their trip.

After leaving Midland International Airport July 2 at 11 a.m., and stopping in Dallas and Chicago, the group arrived in Zurich at 8:35 a.m. July 3 (1:35 a.m. central time), losing a night's sleep thanks to the seven-hour time difference.

"It was strange — it got dark, then all of a sudden it was light again," said Kathryn.

From Zurich, the group rode another 6½ hours on a train, and spent 25 minutes on a bus before reaching the village of Adelboden. Upon arrival they were met by a Norwegian Girl Guide (only in the United States are the girls known as Girl Scouts) who escorted them along a steep, winding mountain road to "Our Chalet."

The view from the Chalet was breathtaking.

"We could look down into a beautiful valley to see the village of Adelboden — or we could look another direction to see snow on the slopes of the mountains," said Wayne.

Once settled, the group enjoyed hiking and visiting the village woodcarver, the cheesemaker, and cascading waterfalls.

Their favorite activity was bus trips to Interlaken Thun, Lucern, Montreau and Kandersted.

Each evening, girls from around the world presented programs that depicted their country's culture.

On the 212th anniversary of the birth of the United States, Girl Scout Troop 36 presented their program to girls from around the world.

Through song and dance — while dressed in red, white and blue — they entertained the group with stories about Texas, Big Spring, their family, friends, troop, Girl Scout Council, and their favorite music.

Their program ended with a standing ovation as the girls tearfully sang Lee Greenwood's "God Bless the USA."

"You could almost see the fireworks back home — everyone was teary-eyed — especially the girls from the states. It was an unbelievable feeling. Even the girls from England cried," Debbie said.

"We did a great job," Kathryn added.

While in Switzerland, the group experienced new cultures.

"We experienced many new things, new foods, the hikes in the beautiful Alps, our 14 roommates from Norway, and who could forget the "Guider in Charge," from Beirut," Tonya said.

The group left Switzerland by train on the second leg of their journey — a visit to Paris, France.

They roomed at a youth hostel, which was somewhat like an American hotel.

"Paris was my absolute favorite — but the co-ed bathrooms at the hostel blew my mind," Christy said.

Adventures while in Paris included sightseeing and shopping — but nothing can compare with the night spent beneath the Paris stars.

The group had taken a boat down the Seine River; upon returning, they found the subways closed and the hotels too expensive — so, they spent a night beside the Eiffel Tower.

"It was nice — you can't ask for anything more than to spend the night under the Eiffel Tower," Shawna remembered.

As they left France on their journey by Hovercraft to England, they left behind many new friends and a lot of wonderful memories.

"We had been told that Paris was dirty and that the Parisians were unfriendly, and that they didn't like Americans — but we found Paris to be a beautiful old city with some of the nicest people in the world. Everyone was very supportive of America," Guy commented.

The French wanted to know about America. "They'd say 'Dallas, J.R. and Lloyd Bentsen'," Debbie said.

"I wondered why they would ask about Lloyd Bentsen," she recalled with a laugh.

It wasn't until Debbie read a French newspaper that she became aware that the U.S. senator from Texas had been selected as the Democratic vice presidential candidate.

In London, the troop stayed at another Girl Scout World Center, "Olave House," a quaint, old English home with each room decorated by representatives of the World Association of Girl Scouts and Girl Guides.

"The Olave House was a charming place to stay," Shawna noted. "I liked the way it was set up. We stayed in different rooms with girls from Oregon," Renae added.

Their London adventures included a tour of the city, witnessing the changing of the guard at Buckingham Palace, a tour of Oxford University, Stratford-Upon-the-Avon and shopping.

They also went to the Apollo Theatre and saw "Starlite Express," a show that Shawna compares to Broadway.

The group dined at the Hard Rock Cafe. "The food was so good there — maybe it was because I finally had a cheeseburger and French fries," Katherine said. Christy noted that the traditional fish and chips were "definitely interesting."

The last stop on their trip was Dortmund, West Germany, where they stayed with individual host families, arranged by Stephanie Marx, who was Big Spring Rotary Club's foreign exchange student. She is a 1988 graduate of Big Spring High School.

Katherine especially enjoyed the German discos. "They're better than here," noting that there is no age limit to enter the establishments.

The youth are allowed to drink beer in Germany, Katherine said. "But they don't drink to get drunk."

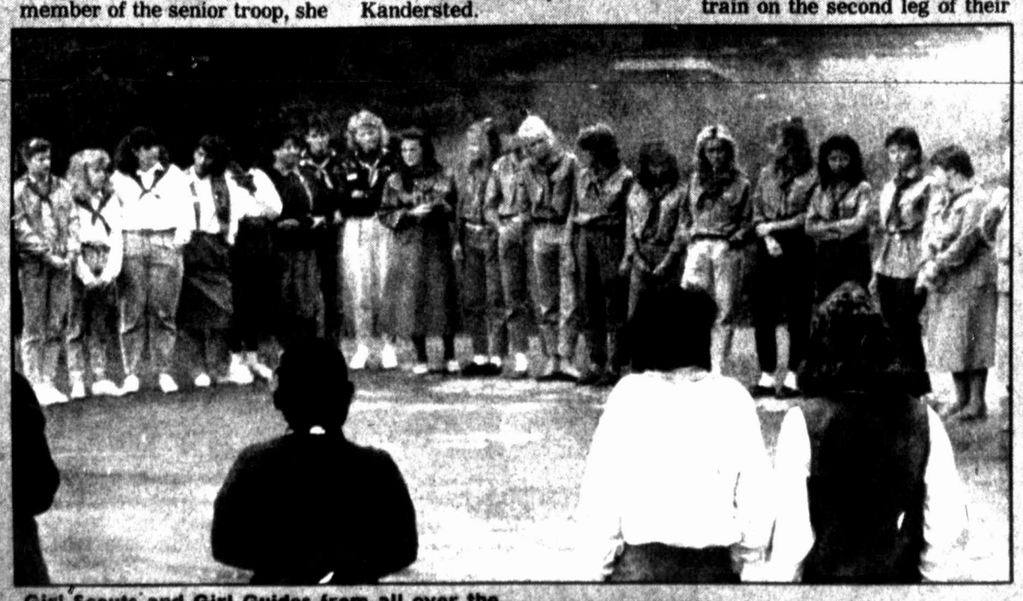

The Germans were impressed with the group because of their accents and their Americanism. "They knew a lot about Texas, the TV show Dallas, and J.R. Ewing," Shawna noted. "They think all Texans are rich because of the oil."

After 22 days it was time to return home. The girls admitted the trip was tiring but said they all have wonderful memories of their tour of Europe and each one said she'd love to go back.

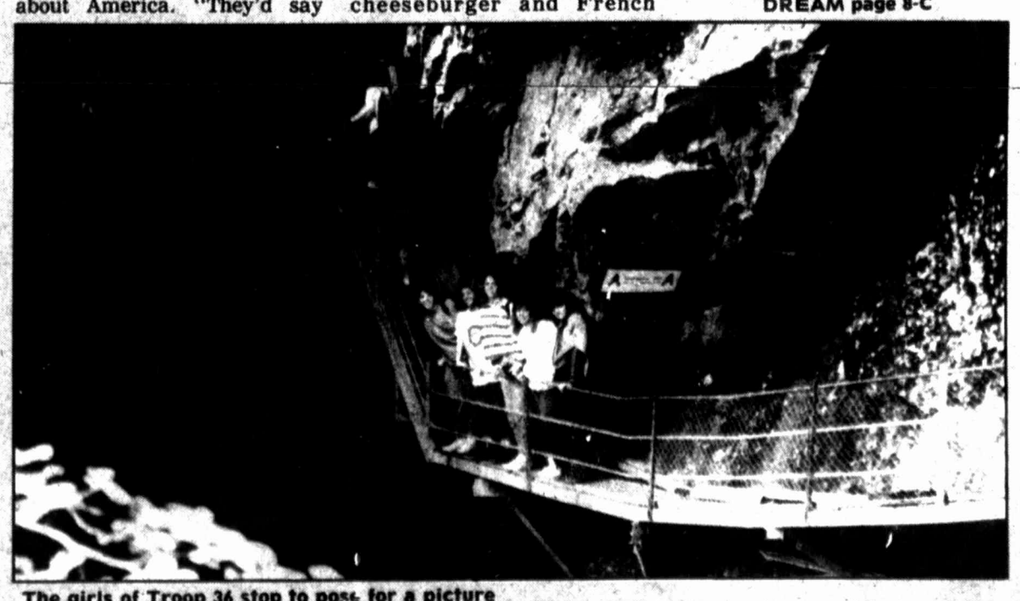

"Now that we're rested — we're ready to go back."

Through their hard work,

Weddings

Strickland-Helferich

MRS. MARK HELFERICH
Formerly Beverly Strickland

Beverly Ann Strickland and Mark Allen Helferich, both of Odessa, exchanged wedding vows Aug. 27, 1988 at a 7 p.m. ceremony at First Church of God, Odessa, with Rev. George B. Golden, pastor, officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Elbert Strickland, Nacogdoches; and Verna Gray, Midland.

Organist was Hylance Golden.

Vocalists were Lee Tomlinson and Carl Marino.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a white gown of silk organza and alencon lace. The fitted bodice, with a lace overlay, created a deep V yoke of English silk netting and contoured ring neckline. The Juliet sleeves tapered to a point at the wrist. Soft gathers formed the A-line silhouette. Lace appliques and lace border enhanced the cascades of fluted ruffles at the front of the hemline and continued on around the cathedral-length train. The ruffles also fashioned the center back of the train. Bridal pearls and iridescents embellished the lace. She wore a wreath of waterfall pearls and Lily of the Valley. A large puff sprinkled with pearls held the double-tiered waltz-length veil of silk French illusion.

Matron of honor was Marcia Goza, Gatesville.

Bridesmaid was Meri Reynolds, Lyndale.

Flower girl was Deanna Crumrine, Odessa.

Groomsmen were Chester Bruton, Houston; David Jeffers, Atlanta, Ga.; and Mark Glasscock, Odessa.

Ushers were Ernie Strickland, bride's brother, Big Spring; Bruce Strickland, bride's brother, Big Spring; Kris Gregg, Odessa; and Paul Jones, Austin.

After the wedding, a reception was hosted at the church. The bride's table, draped with a pink cloth and a white lace overlay, featured a three-tiered wedding cake with a fountain between the bottom and middle tiers, and was decorated with wedding bells between the columns. The bridgroom's table, draped with a gray cloth with a white lace diamond-shaped cloth in the middle, featured a chocolate cake decorated with chocolate roses.

The bride is a graduate of Forsan High School, and a graduate of Texas Tech University with a bachelor of business administration in accounting. She is employed by Unrun, Williams and Co. CPAs.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Permian High School, and a graduate of Texas Tech University with a master of science degree in mechanical engineering.

After a wedding trip to Durango, and Colorado Springs, Colo., the couple will make their home in Odessa.

Gilstrap-Lincoln

MRS. BRIAN LINCOLN
Formerly Tonya Gilstrap

Tonya Gilstrap, Lubbock, and Brian Richard Lincoln, United States Coast Guard, New Orleans, La., were united in marriage Aug. 20, 1988 at a 6:30 p.m. ceremony at First Baptist Church, with Dr. Kenneth G. Patrick, pastor, and Rev. Stephen White, pastor of Immaculate Heart of Mary Church, officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Gilstrap, FM 700 North.

Bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Billy M. Lincoln, Aransas Pass.

The couple stood before an altar decorated with an arched candelabra, and a unity candle entwined with greenery and accented with burgundy and mauve flowers and white bows.

Pianist was Julie Shirey.

Charles and Della Cooper were joined by their children and grandchildren for a vacation in the Hill Country.

Sharing a rented cottage on Granite Shoals with the Coopers were their daughter and son-in-law, Cecilia and Collins Rice, and their children, Clint and Chelsea, Odessa; their son, Terry Cooper, Houston, and his daughter, Kristi, Odessa.

After trying out their water skiis (it was the first time for Kristi, 13) the group took side trips to Fredricksburg, New Braunfels, and Sea World in San Antonio. Della reports that there's a new mall in New Braunfels — Peppermill Mall — which consists entirely of outlet stores for such national brands as Arrow Shirts, Bass Shoes and Oneida Silver.

Polly Mays and Joyce Ellis were separated from their luggage for the first part of their trip to Africa.

"When we got to Nairobi, we just bought safari outfits and wore them for a week!" Polly says.

Aside from that, their vacation was everything they had hoped for — and more. "We got to see every animal we wanted to see. We even got to see mass migrations." The safaris are conducted in vans driven by government employees much like game wardens, Polly says.

One of the highlights was their visit to Ngorongoro Crater, a collapsed volcano in Tanzania. They stayed at a lodge 7,500 feet up the volcano, then descended 2,000 feet into the 10-mile-wide crater. "Fifteen miles of road wind around the crater in the descent to the floor. Many species of animals live in the crater," Polly says.

Mary Louise Barnes and Delores Lillard recently attended a day-long piano clinic held at the Garden & Arts Center in Lubbock.

The clinic, conducted by Amanda Lethco Vick, professor of piano pedagogy at the University of Texas at Austin, demonstrated a new method of teaching piano. Vick is the author of several books on the method.

Wanda Yarbrough and Patti Hunt report that on a recent trip to Odessa they stopped by Ziggy's, a popular eatery, and were delighted to find hometown folks on the band stand.

Mother is a compulsive gambler

DEAR ABBY: My mother is hooked on bingo. She has always been a very honest person, but when it comes to bingo, she lies. For example, she'll say she's working late, but when I call her at work, she's not there.

We are a close family, but we've had it with Mom. She owes me $1,100, she owes my brother $500, and she owes other family members lesser amounts. She's two months behind in her house payments, a month behind on her car payments, and she's also behind on her electric, telephone and cable bills. The interest on what she owes is putting her deeper and deeper in debt. The bank already closed her checking account.

The cost of bingo is $40 a night, and Mom plays nearly every night and twice on Sundays. She has a good job, but she blows it all on bingo. She says it's just a hobby, but it's like a sickness.

What can we do, Abby? She gets hostile when we confront her.

BINGO BABY

DEAR BINGO BABY: Your mother is a compulsive gambler, and there is help for her. There is a chapter of Gamblers Anonymous listed in the white pages of the telephone book in every major city. There is also a Gam-Anon to assist family members who need help living with a compulsive gambler. G.A. operates very much like Alcoholics Anonymous. It's free, and the success rate is remarkable.

If Gamblers Anonymous is not listed in your telephone book, send a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope to: Gamblers Anonymous, P.O. Box 17173, Los Angeles, Calif. 90017, for the address of the chapter nearest you.

★ ★ ★

DEAR ABBY: Would you please tell men to quit giving women these backhanded, obnoxious compliments: "Boy, you must have been something when you were in high school!" Or, "Gee, I'd sure like to have seen you 10 years ago!" Is that supposed to make a woman in her 40s feel good?

Not this one! I work out in a gym four evenings a week, and, frankly, I like my body better now than when I was a bookworm in high school.

Why can't these oafish men see their stupidity? If you can't say something in the here and now that rings my bell, don't bother to climb up the belfry!

SUZANNE IN LONG BEACH

DEAR SUZANNE: You said it very well. Such obnoxious compliments offered by oafish men are meant in the spirit of generosity. Your comment may cause others to think twice before offering such deflating compliments.

★ ★ ★

CONFIDENTIAL TO 'ONE DAY AT A TIME': You are to be commended for taking your Alcoholics Anonymous pledge seriously, but you are in error to say that as a group, alcoholics are thought to be "inferior." Please read what one great man had to say in an address to a temperance meeting:

"I believe if we take habitual drunkards as a class, their heads and their hearts will bear advantageous comparison with those of any other class. There seems ever to have been a proneness in the brilliant, and the warm-blooded, to fall into this vice. The demon of intemperance ever seems to have delighted in sucking the blood of genius and generosity." — ABRAHAM LINCOLN (1842)

DEAR ABBY: I need your advice about something — sales clerks. I can't stand them! They aggravate me beyond belief. Sometimes I even leave the store if they realy get to me. I try not to ask for their help because when I do, they stick to me like glue until I leave the store. If I go to try something on, they will be waiting for me to tell me how good I look.

Abby, when I try something on, I like to look at it alone and think about buying it, not feel like I'm pressured for time to get out of the change room. If sales clerks want to sell something, they have to give the customer space and privacy.

In the meantime, do you know of a way to tell these salespeople that their help is appreciated, but you would like to be left alone? Sign me...

TOO MUCH ATTENTION

DEAR TOO MUCH: You have answered your own question. What's wrong with saying, "I appreciate your assistance. Now I'd like to be left alone so I can make a decision"?

And while we're on the subject, a first-rate salesperson will approach a prospective customer with: "Please take your time, look as long as you wish, and if you need any assistance, please let me know. My name is 'Maggie'."

Area Residents Reap Many Benefits From H&R Block's Tax Course

Many successful Big Spring tax preparers have begun their careers by enrolling in the H&R Block Income Tax Course. Others have taken the course to increase their ability to accurately prepare their own returns.

H&R Block, the nation's largest tax preparation firm, has been teaching income tax preparation for 22 years. This year the basic income tax course starts on September 7; morning, and evening classes are available.

Students look at the course as a way to save money and make money by picking up or polishing up tax return preparation skills. The 13-week course progresses from simple to complex tax problems. Students learn through a combination of classroom discussion, hands-on problem solving and homework. This year's classes will introduce participants to the latest tax laws.

Qualified course graduates may be offered job interviews for positions with Block. Many Block employees find the flexible scheduling a real benefit. However, Block is under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H&R Block.

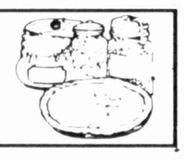

One low fee includes all materials, supplies and textbooks. Successful graduates receive a Certificate of Achievement and 7.5 units of continuing education credit.

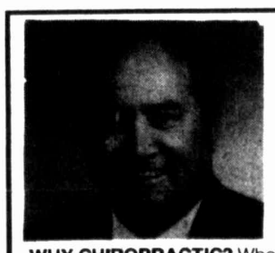

Additional information and registration forms are available from the H&R Block office at 512 Gregg St. The telephone number is 263-1931.

John and Zaid moved to Big Spring in 1920. John, or "Pop," as was called, was named first city policeman in 1925.

After retirement "Pop" farmed at the home place at the corner of Goliad and FM 700.

The couple have 11 children, 20 grandchildren, 47 great-grandchildren and 22 great-great-grandchildren. Merle (Choate) Haygood is the surviving child. Ten of the children graduated from Big Spring High School.

On Friday, the group gathered at La Posada for a Mexican buffet to celebrate 50th wedding anniversary of Merle Grce and Herman Haygood, Annandale, Va.

Military

Cadet Danielle Clere, daughter of Daniel and Betty Clere, Big Spring, has completed a U.S. Air Force ROTC field training encampment at Lackland Air Force Base.

Field training, attended by cadets normally between their second and third year of college, gives an opportunity to evaluate each student's potential as an officer, according to an Air Force spokesman.

The summer's curriculum consists of orientations on jet aircraft, career opportunities, human relations education and equal opportunity training. Physical fitness and survival training is also emphasized.

The field training is four weeks, but cadets in the two year ROTC program receive an additional two weeks of instruction in the development of air power and the contemporary Air Force.

Clere is a student at Texas Tech University, Lubbock.

ON YOUR FEET
Dr. CARLOS DIMIDJIAN — Podiatrist

FOOT SWELLING DURING PREGNANCY

Because your feet will probably swell occasionally while you are pregnant, special care should be taken in selecting comfortable shoes that allow for this. They should fit snugly at the heel for stability in walking, but the leather across the top of the shoe should be loose enough to ripple as you roll your finger across it. Make sure the shoe is not too small, and avoid plastic, patent leather, or reptile shoes. They lack flexibility and are not porous enough to allow for sweating and "breathing." Your best choice is a soft lightweight leather, suede or fabric in an oxford style shoe with rubber heels. For dress-up occasions you might want to select a low-heeled step-in shoe, but the important thing to keep in mind is stability. You want to avoid any chance of falling.

You also want to avoid any foot problems that may cause discomfort and other health problems during pregnancy. Maintaining good foot function not only increases your comfort but helps maintain proper circulation in your feet, legs, and throughout your body.

PHILADELPHIA — Joe Fusco and Carole Scaldeferri, both of Philadelphia, rehearse recently for a Labor Day weekend reunion appearance of 27 dancers from the original "American Bandstand" television show in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — They twisted, coffee-grinded and jitterbugged their way into the nation's living rooms on the original "American Bandstand" in the 1950s. Now, older and a little less svelte, they're back in the city where it all began to recapture their glory days.

On Thursday, for the first time in a quarter century, 27 of the original Bandstand dancers, including Joe, Kenny, Arlene, Carole, Flossie and Jim, reunited to rehearse their steps for a rock 'n' roll celebration over Labor Day weekend in Philadelphia.

"Any place there's dancing, I'll still go," said Joe Fusco, who was 15 when he joined the show.

Fusco, now 46, of south Philadelphia and Lis Braun of the Hot Foot Agency, a talent agency for dancers, cooked up the idea of bringing the gang together to dance, gossip and reminisce at the rock 'n' roll event, called Rock 'A' Rama.

Fusco developed the two-hour show with Braun, contacted the dancers and helped with the choreography.

"American Bandstand" started life as a Philadelphia TV show in 1952, with Bob Horn as master of ceremonies. Dick Clark took over as host in 1956, and the show made its network debut on ABC-TV on Aug. 5, 1957.

"I'll jump and, hey, I may even show 'em my handstand, because I'm on the American Bandstand." —David Frees

Clark moved the show to California in 1964, but many fans remember it as a Philadelphia phenomenon.

The Bandstanders invented steps that are still given a whirl: the bunny hop, the chalypso and the stroll.

"You were like a big star. Girls chased ya; the guys hated ya," said Fusco.

So in a dance studio Thursday night, remembering the glory days, they practiced their jitterbugs and coffee-grinding and listened to Bobby Darin, Frankie Avalon and Neil Sedaka.

The dancers have aged, some have gained weight or grown mustaches, but they continue to follow what's hip in fashion and dance steps. Several wore miniskirts, others donned sneakers and pedal pushers.

During breaks, they grabbed cameras and cigarettes and tried to catch up with each others' lives before Joe called them back for another try at "Rock Around the Clock" or "Oh, Carole."

The reunion gossip even included a love story.

Philadelphia's Carole Scaldeferri, a regular on the show from 1957 to 1961, met Richard Spada in 1957, when he was a fan who traveled to Philadelphia to see the show in person.

In 1977, Carole appeared on a Dick Clark television special, where Richard spotted her. With the help of Clark and his wife, Richard contacted Carole and the two were married six months later.

Are latchkey children at risk?

Focus on family

By NAOMI HUNT
County Extension Agent

Youngsters who care for themselves after school — so-called "latchkey" children — are at the center of a controversy about child care in this country.

Some parents and professionals maintain that latchkey children learn independence and important self-care skills. Others claim self-care puts children at physical risk and psychological risk for having to take on adult responsibilities too soon.

Research shows both of these positions are probably true, depending upon a number of factors. Including the location, the child's age and the degree of indirect supervision.

For example, one study indicated that 30 percent of self-care children in urban areas had recurring fears, especially that "someone bad" would get into their house. But other studies found this was not the case in suburban and rural areas.

There is a clear concensus that children under age six should not be in self-care. Just as there is general agreement that teen-agers can be left alone. However, the point at which it is appropriate for a school age child to be left alone isn't clear, and probably depends to a great extent on the individual child and the circumstances.

Indirect supervision is another factor that researchers have considered. Not all self-care children are at home alone after school. Some go to a friend's house where there is no adult supervision, a mall or other area where youngsters "hang out."

Researchers have found that fifth through ninth grade children who were hanging out after school were more susceptible to peer pressure than those who went to a friend's house unsupervised by an adult.

Both these groups were, in turn, more susceptible to peer pressure than the children who went to their own homes after school. There were no differences in susceptibility to peer pressure between children at home alone and those supervised at home by a parent or older sibling.

Researchers are concerned about susceptibility to peer pressure because it has been shown to be associated with anti-social activity and behavior difficulties.

The key factor here is parents' indirect supervision — knowing the whereabouts of the child and expecting him or her to obey certain rules, complete chores or accomplish tasks such as doing homework.

Obviously, the decision to let a child be in self-care is an important one for parents.

Dream

they've made their dream a reality and have gained knowledge from a once-in-a-lifetime adventure.

"I hope that all the younger Girl Scouts continue in Scouting and someday will have the same positive experience that we were able to have," Tonya said.

"Getting to intermingle with people from all over the world has given me a much wider perspective about things," Shawna noted.

Katherine noted that "The thing that will stay with me is the memories of friends, and the fulfillment of my dream — visiting the Girl Scout World in Switzerland."

"I love my host family in Germany. They were some of the best people I have ever met," Christy commented.

"I really enjoyed meeting and talking to people from other countries," Renae added.

When asked if their hard work was worth it, the group enthusiastically admitted "absolutely."

"Girl Scout Troop 36 would like to thank all the people of Big Spring, the West Texas Girl Scout Council, and the girls' parents for support and encouragement for the past eight years."

"The learning experience of this trip is priceless. The girls learned a great lesson for life: If you work hard enough and keep sight of your goals — dreams really do come true," Debbie concluded.

Livestock to be featured at Howard County Fair

By DON RICHARDSON
County Extension Agent

We have had many calls lately relating to livestock events to be included in our forthcoming Howard County Fair. First of all, the dates of this event will be Sept. 19-24 at the fairgrounds here in Big Spring.

The first activity relating to livestock will be the open Santa Gertrudis breeding cattle show. The judging of this event, which is expected to attract exhibitors from throughout the Southwest will be Tuesday at 6 p.m.

Cattle judge will be Dr. Stephen Hammack, extension livestock specialist from Stephenville. A TCCA and TCLA approved open junior prospect steer and lamb show will be featured on Sept. 23-24 during the fair.

Ask the agent

Several local 4-H and FFA Club members will exhibit their livestock. Entry fees will be $25 per head for steers and $10 per head for lambs. Deadline to enter the show will be Sept. 16, and entry cards are available at the local county extension office. There will be a $5 per head late charge on entries received after that date.

Belt buckles will be awarded to grand and reserve champion prospect lamb and steer exhibitors as well as to the champions in the senior and junior showmanship winners. All breed champions in both the steer and lamb shows will receive large plaques. Schedules for the steer and lamb shows are as follows:

All animals are to arrive at the Howard County Fairgrounds before 5 p.m., Sept. 23, with weighing and classifying from 5-8 p.m. Judging will be at 8:00 a.m. Sept. 24 for lambs, followed by the junior steer show at 1 p.m. Weight limits for steers will be 1,000 pounds. Steers over that weight must be shown in the market show classes. There will be no weight limits for lambs. Judging the lamb show will be Duery Menzies, county extension agent, Fredericksburg, and the judge for the steer show will be Charles Schroeder of the S&S Cattle Company, Taylor.

Other agricultural features of the fair will be the popular Agricultural Products Division. Leon Langley, a member of the Howard County Extension Field Crops committee, is serving as superintendent of this year's show and it promises to be a good one due to the expected good crops experienced in the county. Special trophies will be presented to exhibitors of outstanding cotton perinstalks, largest watermelons and other farm products. Entries are to be brought to the fairgrounds before noon Sept. 19. Judging will be done by Victor Lucero, extension entomologist for Howard, Martin and Midland Counties, and Greg Jones, county extension agent, Martin County.

Local producers of garden produce are encouraged to enter their products in this show and if they have extra produce to sell they have the opportunity to do so at the Country Store.

The local garden clubs and members of the local Extension Horticultural Committee, including Mrs. Edna Womack, Mrs. Doris Mason and Mrs. Suncha Christensen, have an excellent show planned this year.

For more information, call the local office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at 267-6671 or come by its offices located on the first floor of the Howard County Courthouse's east entrance.
