The Texas Department of Agriculture reports that the Rio Grande Valley's second sugar crop will be moving out of the fields soon. Last year was the first time growers had tried sugar cane in the Rio Grande Valley in a long time and it now appears that it was an opportune time to get into the business, since supplies are short and prices are sky high.

It reminds us that Texas, if standing alone as an independent nation as it existed prior to 1846 could provide enough of most commodities to sustain itself and in many cases it would have huge surpluses. There has been a sugar cane industry in the state for many years and more recently sugar beets have entered the picture in the Panhandle, and now sugar cane has drifted into the Rio Grande Valley.

Our state has long produced more cotton, cattle, swine, oil, gas, poultry, etc., than it required. Indeed, the state's own consumers use only a small fraction of the production of most of these items.

Back in earlier days, of course, there were family farms that were virtually self-sufficient. Down there in East Texas it was not unusual for farmers to produce not only their essential staple items, but also some of the luxuries of the day. It was not uncommon to see a small patch of tobacco next to the vegetable garden, and there nearly always were a few rows of popcorn somewhere around, along with pumpkins, various fruits, etc.

Today, in contrast to the situation back in the last century, Texas produces and processes iron and steel, and a vast range of petrochemical products.

But, back to the sugar cane story from the Rio Grande Valley, the only sugar mill in operation down there now employs about 250 people during its grinding season and its production is a mere drop in the demand bucket. But it could expand and add to the dwindling supplies, which would be plenty welcome.

President Gerald Ford's proposals for bolstering the nation's economy and energy supplies presented some unpleasant prospects, but he is right on target about one thing. Regardless of what the federal government does, or doesn't do, it will require some dedicated effort on the part of the nation's people to get the job done.

At this season of the year, the nation might well take a lesson from the playing fields. A young quarterback on the University of Alabama football team was asked by a television announcer recently what his team would have to do to overcome some injuries to key team members.

"We'll just have to suck up and get with it," he declared.

Americans have already learned that they can reduce their fuel consumption—that driving at 55 miles per hour on the highways not only cuts gasoline use but also saves lives. They have learned in brief snatches that waste of commodities can be reduced. Whenever the big majority wants to "suck up and get with it" a lot of our economic and energy problems will fade.—WACIL McNAIR.

AFTER RANSOM PAID

Banker, Family Freed Unharmed

YPSILANTI, Mich. (AP) — An Ypsilanti bank manager's wife and two children were freed unharmed today after the manager was forced to rob his own bank to ransom them, the FBI reported.

Mrs. Richard Green and her children, Erick 7, and Annette, 9, were released at a hotel about 15 miles west of Ypsilanti about 10:20 a.m. after being held hostage all night by four men.

Mrs. Green called her husband at the bank after being released and was picked up by police.

Police and FBI agents were secluded with the entire family at the bank, where they were being questioned.

A search was under way for the kidnapers.

The release came more than two hours after Green took what was described as "several thousand dollars" from the Ypsilanti Township branch of the Ypsilanti Savings Bank and left it at a secluded rural drop point.

The FBI said four men surprised the family Wednesday night in their Grass Lake home, about 40 miles from Ypsilanti. They were tied up all night, Green said. This morning Green was released and told to go the the bank and get all the money he could from the first teller that reported for work.

Bank officials said Green had the teller clean out the vault. He then took the money to the drop point, returned and called bank President Clarence Utley. Utley called police.

Utley said he received the telephone call from Green at 8 a.m.

Utley said the bank had lost several thousand dollars in the robbery, but did not elaborate.

Green, 33, has been with the bank since 1969, when he joined the firm as a trainee.

GOP Candidates Denounce Surtax

WASHINGTON (AP) — A number of Republican candidates in next month's elections have disassociated themselves from the anti-inflation surtax that President Ford contends would cost taxpayers only a few cents a day.

Criticism from GOP Senate and gubernatorial candidates came as the senior Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee, Rep. Herman T. Schneebeli, R-Pa., said he believes the fate of Ford's 5 per cent surtax proposal "rests on the American public and what they tell us when we go home."

Ford, who has conceded that many thought the tax proposal "politically unwise" just four weeks before the Nov. 5 elections, tried a new approach in defending it Wednesday at his outdoor news conference in the White House Rose Garden.

A family of four with $20,000 gross income would pay $42, or 12 cents a day, while a family with $16,000 income would pay only $3 — or less than one penny per day, Ford said.

And he said that only 28 per cent of the nation's taxpayers would pay any additional tax. He said enactment of the surtax and the rest of his anti-inflation package could produce "a meaningful reduction in the rate of inflation" by early 1975.

Ford went to Philadelphia to boost Republican candidates Wednesday night. He told a fund-raising dinner the surtax is fair and equitable.

The American people "want to step up and do what's right. Politicians ought to do the same thing," Ford said.

But just before the President arrived, the Republican gubernatorial candidate in Pennsylvania, Drew Lewis, told reporters he opposed the surtax and suggested closing tax loopholes instead.

And Republican Sen. Richard S. Schweiker of Pennsylvania, also up for re-election, denounced the surtax.

In Kansas, GOP Sen. Robert Dole declared that many people in the state who made $15,000 were suffering economically and "the last thing they need is an additional surtax to pay."

Ford also said at his news conference:

—He believes a one-year surtax will be sufficient, instead of a two-year tax suggested by Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., the acting head of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Wholesale Price Rise Slows In September

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices rose only one-tenth of a per cent last month as falling farm prices offset increases in the cost of industrial goods, the government reported today.

The modest September price rise followed near-record increases in July and August. The September increase was the smallest price advance since wholesale prices declined a tenth of a per cent last October.

Consumers still face sharp retail price hikes in the coming months, because of big wholesale price boosts during the summer.

Also, the drop in farm prices last month is likely to be only temporary, with adverse weather expected to drive prices higher once again.

Earlier this week, the White House predicted that food prices would continue to increase at an annual rate of 10 per cent or more over the next 18 months.

The September increase, adjusted to discount seasonal influences, works out to an annual rate of 1.2 per cent, a sharp contrast to the 46.8 per cent annual rate in August.

In absolute terms, without seasonal adjustment, wholesale prices actually declined a tenths of a per cent from August to September.

Wholesale prices remained 19.7 per cent higher than a year ago with the government's Wholesale Price Index at 167.2.

Translated into dollars, that means it cost $167.20 to buy the same volume of wholesale goods that $100 purchased in 1967.

The Labor Department reported that farm products, processed foods and feeds fell a seasonally adjusted 1.9 per cent in September, following increases of 6.4 and 7.6 per cent in July and August, respectively.

Kissinger Touring Cairo

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is spending the day sightseeing before he and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat sit down tonight to talk over peace negotiations for the Middle East.

Sadat is precluded from daytime meetings because this is the lunar month of Ramadan, during which Moslems must observe a strict fast until sundown.

Kissinger's tour itinerary includes a visit to a fortress built by Saladin, the 12th century Ayyubite sultan of Egypt whose conquests included the Latin kingdom of Jerusalem.

But after sundown Kissinger and Sadat turn their attention to more contemporary Mideast strife in a session expected to last at least until 2 a.m.

On his sixth Mideast tour since the 1973 October war, Kissinger arrived in Cairo on Wednesday night and immediately met with Sadat and Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy.

Schmidt To Visit US

WASHINGTON (AP) — West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt has accepted an invitation to make an official visit to the United States for talks with President Ford on Dec. 5-6, the two governments announced today.

The terse announcement, made simultaneously by the White House and in Bonn, said "the visit will provide an opportunity for the two leaders to discuss issues of mutual concern."

Economic issues will be high on the agenda, U.S. officials said, along with the European security conference and troop reduction talks.

On Wednesday, Ford said he would like to meet later this year with Soviet Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, but only if there is prior progress in major negotiating areas.

Market Surges

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market surged ahead today in heavy early trading after posting its sixth biggest gain on record Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials ran up a 20-point gain to 651.05 at 11 a.m. as trading ran ahead of the tape for the first hour.

Wednesday, the blue chip indicator rallied more than 28 points, the sixth largest gain on record at the New York Stock Exchange and the biggest advance since May 24, 1973, when it climbed 29.42 points.

Analysts said the market got a psychological boost from Wednesday's gains which they said caught many seasoned Wall Streeters by surprise.

The optimism was heightened Thursday by the government's report that the wholesale price index, one indicator of inflation, rose at a slow 1.2 per cent annual gain in September, the smallest rise in 11 months.

Trio Shares Medicine Prize

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Three scientists who did their major research in the United States were awarded the 1974 Nobel Prize for medicine or physiology today for being "largely responsible for the creation of modern cell biology."

The $124,000 prize was shared equally by British-born Christian de Duve, 57, who works at Rockefeller University in New York City; George E. Palade, 62, a naturalized American born in Romania who heads the cell biology section at Yale University's School of Medicine, and Albert Claude, 75, director of the Institut Jules Bordet at the Universite Libre in Brussels. Claude was born in Longlier, in the Luxembourg province of Belgium.

All three conducted their research at the Rockefeller Institute in New York, now known as Rockefeller University. Claude began the work by using the electron microscope and developing a procedure by which cell parts could be seen under it. Palade combined the two techniques to obtain more information, and De Duve carried this one step further by making predictions about structural components in the cell, the citation said.

In Brussels, Claude said it was "thanks to the United States and the Rockefeller Institute" that he was able to do the work that brought him distinction.

VISITS ARRANGED—Through its new and unique Hospital Shows program, the USO brings free, live entertainment on a continuing basis to patients who cannot leave the hospital. Here Maria Margarita Moran, Miss Universe, visits a bedridden veteran as she makes a USO-sponsored tour.

A UNITED WAY AGENCY

USO A Familiar Name To Servicemen Since WWII

(People helping people. That is what the United Way is all about. During this time when many people have become disenchanted with the complex and sometimes impersonal ways of society, the United Way stands out as a direct and effective means for supporting worthwhile close-to-home activities. Young and oil alike benefit through the Scurry County United Way. This series of articles is planned to help explain the services given by the organizations and agencies which share in the United Way fund.)

USO has been a familiar name to U.S. Servicemen since World War II.

There are still over two million in uniform, M.H. Hobson, USO Director of Development, points out, and USO makes help available to members of the armed forces and their dependents at 40 points in 19 foreign countries.

The services provided by the USO are varied. USO's recreational services offer a natural place for servicemen to gather, and these services are intended to have specific social benefits. A serviceman shooting pool in a USO center isn't shooting drugs or becoming involved in a barroom brawl.

Service families are faced with many special problems. Inflation has virtually wiped out the pay increases received by military personnel, Hobson said, and financial trouble brings many families to the USO. Through the USO, service wives may be assisted in finding work or enrolled in special programs on family budgeting and money management. If the family qualifies for and need welfare assistance, the USO may refer the family to the proper agencies.

The divorce rate for servicemen and oriental wives far exceeds the national average, so the USO conducts special schools in Korea, Taiwan and some locations in the U.S. to help introduce the new wives to American culture and customs.

Helping military families find suitable off-post housing is another of USO's continuing services.

"The military is a transient society in which a majority of its members seldom have strong personal roots in the civilian communities off-post," Hobson said. "USO is the civilian community now. It is the community which is with them wherever they go."

USO is supported through the United Way and voluntary contributions. There are now some 600,000 servicemen and women overseas, and this is expected to remain true for the forseeable future, according to Hobson. All United Fund allocations to the National USO are used entirely overseas to make help available when and where it is needed, he said.

"We want to take this opportunity to express our appreciation for the past support of Scurry County on behalf of the men and women and their dependents whom we serve," Hobson concluded.

PROTECTING STREETS—An asphalt distributor truck is shown at Thirty-fifth and Avenue B applying emulsified asphalt to pavement. The city is in the process of treating some 1,000 blocks with 40,000 gallons of the emulsion to help prevent damage to the streets during cold and wet winter months. Citizens are being asked to park their cars off streets between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. so that the work may proceed smoothly for the next few days. If some emlusion gets on your car, kerosene can be used to remove it.

Freed Diplomat In Good Spirits

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — American diplomat Barbara Hutchison was in good spirits and joking after seven leftist terrorists released her and six other hostages in return for safe conduct out of the country.

"Suddenly I became a tremendous bargain. I went from a million to nothing," the 47-year-old American quipped to newsmen Wednesday night after the 13-day episode ended.

The gunmen originally demanded $1 million ransom and the release of 37 leftist prisoners. They got nothing except a safe getaway.

The terrorists, who had held the hostages since Sept. 27 in a second-floor room of the Venezuelan consulate, were flown aboard a special Dominican jet to Panama, where they proclaimed victory and said they were exhausted.

As they left the Boeing 727 at Tocumen International Airport near Panama City, the gunmen, led by leftist Radhames Mendez Vargas, were met by Lt. Col. Manuel Antonio Noriega, chief intelligence officer of the Panamanian National Guard.

Miss Hutchison, director of the U.S. Information Service in the Dominican Republic, said she and the other hostages were treated well during the siege and even developed "something of a friendship" with their captors.

But she said there were many tense moments, the most difficult being "the waiting and then the various crises as they occur. There was a package of dynamite, and we were living with that."

She said that gunmen and hostages alike often were short of water. The government intermittently allowed food and drink to be taken to those inside the consulate.

Miss Hutchison told newsmen that despite her ordeal she intends to continue her tour in the Dominican Republic that began in 1972 after a long USIS career in other parts of Latin America.

"Mendez bet me $5 that I would have to leave the Dominican Republic because (he said) all diplomatic kidnap victims have to leave the country once they are freed," she said. "But I was informed that I would have the option to go or stay, and I told Mendez I was staying."

The hostages — who also included two secretaries, a messenger boy, a Spanish priest and the Venezuelan consul and vice consul — were greeted by joyous friends and relatives when they emerged from the consulate.

At the same time, the terrorists were driven to the airport to board the special jetliner.

The gunmen took over the consulate after they kidnaped Miss Hutchison from outside her office about eight blocks away. In the early days of the siege the gunmen claimed that 23 terrorists were involved.

Government officials until Wednesday morning thought there were six of them. But a USIS photographer sent inside the building to photograph them for travel documents said there were seven.

Joan Is Charged With DWI

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Joan Kennedy, the wife of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., has been charged with driving under the influence of alcohol after her convertible crashed into the back of an auto stopped for a traffic light.

Fairfax County police said the charge on conviction carries maximum penalties of a year in jail and a $1,000 fine, and suspension of driver's license for six months. Police said, however, that such penalties are reserved for very grave cases that usually involve injuries or fleeing the scene of the accident, circumstances that don't exist in Mrs. Kennedy's case.

Police said Mrs. Kennedy was administered a breathalyzer test, but they would not disclose the results. The charge of driving under the influence is the only charge in the state of Virginia if alcohol or drugs are found above a certain level.

Mrs. Kennedy was alone in her car driving southbound on Route 123 at about 1:45 p.m. EDT Wednesday when her auto struck another southbound vehicle at an intersection. The other vehicle, driven by Edward F. McGrath, 49, of nearby Vienna, Va., was pushed into the car ahead driven by Mrs. Carol A. Pinder, 25, also of Vienna.

All three cars sustained damages that police said totaled around $1,400.

McGrath said Mrs. Kennedy was very apologetic after the chain-reaction collision and that she said she was "pleased there were no children in the cars at the time."

McGrath, a civilian employe in the Pentagon's telecommunications center, said he detected no sign that Mrs. Kennedy had been drinking.

"If she had been drinking, it didn't appear to be in any great degree," McGrath said.

Mrs. Kennedy recently has spent time in rest homes in Connecticut and California.

NAACP Officers Are Installed Here

New officers were installed Wednesday night at a meeting of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) at the Child Day Care Center here.

The Rev. Frank K. Williams, Pastor of Mt. Rose Baptist Church in Sweetwater and vice moderator of the Lovely Sunset District Association, installed the officers.

He traced the history of the NAACP, noting that it had its beginning through William Edward Burghardt, an American Negro Sociologist and author who edited the studies of Negro problems in Atlanta University from 1897 to 1911. He taught history and economics and in 1943 became the first Negro to be elected to the National Institute of Arts and Letters.

The organization was formed in 1909 by a group of people of many races in New York City. They called their organization The National Associated for the Advancement of Colored People-a people who desired to be given an opportunity to rise up and stand on their own, not in rioting or pulverizing, but in the spirit of love and law. Rev. Williams also noted the contribution to NAACP of such personalities as Roy Wilkins and Justice Thurgood Marshall.

Officers installed at the meeting include R.J. Nelson, president; Albert Lewis, first vice president; Herbert Urdy, second vice president; Ricardo Corrales, third vice president; Mrs. Enid Turner, political chairman; Mrs. Elizabeth Jenkins, treasurer; Mrs. Hulen Malone, secretary, and Mrs. Willie T. Thompson, assistant secretary.

The outgoing president, Mrs. Clee Tippins, said she had enjoyed working with members the past year. She said there were good and bad moments, but the bad moments could become worth the effort if the chapters strives to accomplish the goals it sets for this year.

In taking over the office of president, Nelson said his hat was off to those who had worked the past year and pledge that the chapter would work even harder the coming year. Other new officers praised the past year's slate and Corrales, the third vice president, told the group that they must get involved in community work and in city and county politics. "Without getting involved in politics, we are nowhere," he said.

Mrs. Turner reported on her trip to the State Democratic Convention in Austin. Refreshments were served following the meeting.

Ford Happy With Press Conference

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford is described as well pleased with a new press conference format that allows follow-up questioning. And he has further experiments in mind.

"We're considering a variety of forums and formats," Press Secretary Ron Nessen said after Ford's Wednesday news conference in the sun-drenched White House Rose Garden.

Under active consideration is a proposal that reporters seek Ford's recognition by silently raising their hands rather than jumping up and shouting, "Mr. President."

Nessen is seeking the views of newsmen on this idea. Some like it and others complain they'd feel like school children vying for the teacher's attention.

For the first time, Ford encouraged the press corps to ask follow-up questions if his initial responses were deemed incomplete or otherwise unsatisfactory. Eight reporters asked second, related questions and 10 did not.

One reporter, Allan S. Emory of the Watertown, N.Y., Times, said he wasn't allowed to ask a follow-up question.

As soon as the session was over, Ford headed for the first rank of reporters, who had been sitting on folding chairs in front of him, and asked, "What did you think of it?"

Everyone he questioned expressed satisfaction with the new arrangement.

Bank Failures Prove Protection

By G. DAVID WALLACE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bankers and government regulators say two record-setting bank failures illustrate the soundness of the system for assuring savers they won't be left empty-handed if their banks collapse.

The successive failures of the U.S. National Bank of San Diego and Franklin National Bank of New York have presented the deposit insurance system with its heaviest financial challenge yet, but the bankers and regulators say those are isolated instances of poor banking practice.

In both cases, all depositors were fully protected, even though government insurance guarantees full protection only to accounts of $20,000 or less.

The keystone of the insurance system is a $5.8-billion fund controlled by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the agency behind the FDIC embossed on the doors of 98.5 per cent of the nation's commercial banks. A similar agency, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., covers a like share of the nation's savings and loan associations.

The keystone is buttressed by the government's readiness to borrow $3 billion more to support savings accounts, by the efforts of bank regulators to pinpoint trouble before it mushrooms into disaster and by the readiness of the Federal Reserve System to unleash its massive money resources.

Until this year, the FDIC, which grew out of the wreckage of the 4,000 financial institutions that failed in 1933, had to dip into its insurance fund for only $100 million to make good deposits in the 502 banks that had failed. No saver covered by FDIC insurance lost a penny. FDIC's record of full repayment to 99 per cent of depositors at insolvent banks even includes deposits exceeding the legal maximum.

But the FDIC still is paying to salvage the remains of the U.S. National Bank of San Diego, which was responsible for $934 million in deposits when it went under and was sold to Crocker National Bank of San Francisco. The latest estimate pegged the cost to the FDIC at $48.3 million.

And now the insuring agency faces the prospect of picking up after the Franklin National Bank, which held deposits of $1.7 billion when it was sold to European-American Bank and Trust Co. Tuesday. The FDIC hasn't estimated its costs for Franklin.

Snyder Tigers Have Never Beaten Estacado

The fighting Snyder Tigers will attempt to do something Friday night that no other Tiger team has been able to do: Beat the Lubbock Estacado Matadors. The two teams tangle in Tiger Stadium at 7:30 p.m. Friday in a crucial District 3-AAA contest. In five previous meetings, Estacado has won four and had one tie against the Tigers.

Last week, the Tigers knocked off defending champion Lamesa 20-0, but the Matadors also won their first League test, blasting Brownfield 24-7. Snyder is 4-1 for the season and the Matadors are 3-2. There has only been one common opponent between the two teams. Snyder beat Monahans 21-6 and Estacado bested the Loboes 6-0. Snyder's only loss was to Midland Lee, 19-12, while Estacado has been defeated by Plainview (16-7) and by Lubbock Coronado (7-6). In their other game, the Matadors beat Lubbock Monterey 21-19. Snyder's other victories are over Big Spring (25-6), and Andrews (27-14).

Coach Maurice (Mo) Hodges said he is expecting a tough battle from the Matadors. Both teams feature strong running attacks. The Matadors have been weakened by injuries with several key players out. Snyder also could be hurt by injuries with first string quarterback Win Bunch, a 160-pound senior, a doubtful starter. He sustained a "hip-pointer" in the Lamesa game.

If Bunch is unable to start, Coach Hodges will give the vital quarterback assignment to Steve Green, a 160-pound junior, who is the third string signal caller. Backup quarterback Greg Gafford is out with an ankle injury.

"We think Steve can do the job if he has to," Hodges pointed out. He said he was pleased with the way Green responded when called on last week for spot duty.

Other starters in the Tigers' Winged-T attack will be Welton Cobb, 195-pound senior, at tailback; Ricky Howell, 160-pound senior, at fullback, and David Mayes, 180-pound senior, at halfback. Also slated for action are halfbacks Bernie Weems and Danny Brumley. Both are 160-pound seniors.

JV Hosts Estacado Tonight

Two local football games are on tap tonight in Tiger Stadium. Lamar 8th grade will host Big Spring Runnels at 6 p.m., followed by a 7:30 p.m. contest between the junior varsity and Lubbock Estacado's JV.

The big game this week is Friday night when the varsity Tigers host the Estacado Matadors at 7:30 p.m.

Other contests today find Travis 8th meeting Big Spring Goliad at 5:30 p.m. in Big Spring, and Travis 9th grade meeting Lamesa there at 6 p.m.

Saturday, Lamar 9th grade will be at Sweetwater at 10 a.m.

Elsewhere in District 3-AAA, Sweetwater will be at Dunbar tonight while Lamesa visits Lake View Friday night.

On the area scene, Ira hosts Hermleigh, Gail is at home against Dawson and Hobbs entertains Highland in Friday night affrays.

Coach Albert Lewis listed probable starters on offense for the JV, as follows: Billy Allbritton at strong end, Richard Balderama at strong tackle, James Smylie at strong guard, George Miller at center, Dusty Land and Kyle Sykes at quick guard, Paul Tovar at quick tackle, Scott Clark at swing man, David Rice at quarterback, Bobby Thompson and Ricky Beard at fullback, Pat Dryden and Kelly Burton at halfback, and Rudy Rodriguez and Danny McCormick at tailback.

Defensively, the JV will have Allbritton and Smylie at end, Dale Lester and Land at tackle, Burton and Mitchell Smith at nose guard, Thompson, Mike Quiros, Doug Morrell and Bryan Walton at linebacker, Sykes at rover, Dryden at cornerback, Rodriguez at safety, and Jaime Ortegon at halfback. Several sophomores will be playing with the junior varsity tonight.

Both Snyder and Estacado are undefeated.

Bolton missed a couple of earlier contests due to injury, but he should be back in top form for the Tigers.

Clifford Burrow, 223-pound senior center, anchors the Matador offensive line. Defensively, the Matadors employ a basic "27" defense. However, they sometimes shift into other alignments. Snyder uses an Oklahoma "5" defense.

Tackle Bobbie Wall, 170-pound senior, guard Tim Sonnier, 210-pound senior, and end Roy Lee Carter, 175-pound senior, anchor the Tiger offensive line while Sonnier, Carter, Welton Cobb and Dennis Young, 160-pound senior, lead the defense.

Several of the Tigers who moved up to the varsity after competing on the junior varsity have made great improvement this season. Some of the best of these are Roger Williams, David Malar and Jackie Simpson. Mike Freeman, up from the sophomore team of last year, also has looked good this year.

Coach Hodges feels the Tigers have been playing well together as a team this year, and he was especially proud of the way the defense jelled against Lamesa, shutting out the Tors in the first half with no first downs and only five yards total offense. The line did a good job opening holes for the running backs.

The winner of Friday night's contest will have a good chance to win district.

Los Angeles Wins National Playoff

By MIKE RUBIN
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the end the Pittsburgh Pirates went quietly.

They came into the National League playoffs with the league's best batting average at .274 but Dodger pitching held them to .194 in the four games.

Don Sutton, who shut out the Pirates in the series opener, allowed only Willie Stargell's home run Wednesday as the Dodgers beat the Pirates 12-1 and won the NL pennant three games to one.

The Pirates, who thrived on their power during the season, mustered only three hits off Sutton and relief mainstay Mike Marshall, who pitched the final inning and ended the game striking out Richie Hebner.

Sutton had seven strikeouts, getting Stargell swinging twice and Hebner two times.

Al Oliver, the No. 2 batter in the league with a .321 regular season average, was 0-for-3 Wednesday and managed only four hits during the series.

The somber mood of the Pirate locker room contrasted to the rowdy champagne celebration of the Dodgers.

The Pirates finally clinched the NL East championship the final night of the season, coming from behind, and hoped to do the same in the playoffs after getting behind the Dodgers two games to one. Instead, Los Angeles made certain of its first league title in eight years with a 12-hit attack that included two homers by Steve Garvey.

A few reporters gathered around Stargell's locker at the end of the clubhouse and could barely hear him say, "You can't say what you really think and feel" at a time like this.

"It's been a long year."

Oakland Sacks Up AL Crown

By GORDON BEARD
AP Sports Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Manager Earl Weaver of Baltimore, always disconsolate in defeat, somehow managed a surprise joke after the Orioles lost the American League Championship to the Oakland A's.

After blaming umpire Dave Phillips for contributing to Baltimore's 2-1 defeat on Wednesday, Weaver dropped what sounded like a true bomb.

"We play 162 games to get here," Weaver said, "and then we get a bad report from our scouts." Newsmen gasped, while reaching for pencils and microphones.

But it was only a mammoth curve ball, even bigger than those thrown in vain by losing pitcher Mike Cuellar, who was lifted in the fifth inning while still hurling a no-hitter — after walking four batters to force in Oakland's first run.

"I was only kidding," said Weaver, who was suddenly very much out of character in such a situation. Standing just behind the circle of newsmen was Bill Werle, who had scouted the A's.

Actually, not much scouting was necessary for the two foes, who have played each other for the league championship in three of the past four seasons — Oakland winning the last two years.

Except for his brief attempt at humor, Weaver was very much in form while complaining that the failure by Phillips to call a third strike on three Oakland batters had ruined the day.

"With the stuff Cuellar had," Weaver said, "I think he would have pitched a no-hitter if it hadn't been for Phillips. The guy wouldn't raise his right hand on close ones."

One near-miss, Weaver contended, was on a 3-2 pitch to Sal Bando with two outs and none on in the fifth. Three more walks followed, and the A's had their first run.

The Orioles, who won their first World Series in 1966 when their pitchers blanked the Los Angeles Dodgers over the final 33 innings, almost matched that futility against the A's.

Baltimore had failed to score for 30 consecutive innings before Boog Powell singled home a run in the ninth inning Wednesday. During one stretch, they went 15 innings without advacing a runner beyond first base.

Following Powell's run-producing single, Don Baylor came to the plate with runners on first and third. After moving into position for a possible two-out squeeze bunt on the first pitch from reliever Rollie Fingers, Baylor fanned to end the game.

Scribe Picks St. Louis Over Pokes

By BEN THOMAS
AP Sports Writer

Is it in the Cards for St. Louis to be a contender in the National Football League this season?

The Cardinals, one of the surprises so far in 1974, seek their fifth straight victory Sunday when they collide with the Dallas Cowboys. St. Louis is also after victory No. 3 over a rival from the National Conference East.

The Cowboys, on the other hand, have lost three straight, something that hasn't happened to a Tom Landry-coached team in a long time.

The oddsmakers don't believe St. Louis can make it 5-0.

This Pro Pigskin Picker doesn't agree, but first let's report that last weekend produced 11 correct calls and two incorrect. That leaves the season's effort at 34-17-1 for .667.

Now, lets get down to business:

Dallas (1-3) at St. Louis (4-0): The Cardinals have the stingiest scoring defense in the entire league but Dallas may give Coach Don Coryell's club its biggest test so far. It's hard to imagine the Cowboys losing four straight but ... CARDINALS 21, COWBOYS 20.

New England (4-0) at New York Jets (1-3): The Patriots have put more points on the scoreboard to date than any other NFL team ... PATRIOTS 24, JETS 17.

Houston (1-3) at Minnesota (4-0): The Vikings should join the Cards and Pats in the pack as the only 5-0 clubs after this one... VIKINGS 21, OILERS 7.

New York Giants (1-3) at Philadelphia: The Eagles, favored by five, have given up the second fewest points in the league and it might be first after Sunday's game ... EAGLES 31, GIANTS 10.

Cincinati (3-1) at Cleveland (1-3): Cincinnati is a nine-point favorite and only the Baltimore Colts have yeilded more points (122) than the Browns (109) ... BENGALS 35, BROWNS 14.

Chicago (2-2) at Atlanta (13): The Falcons favored by four? It must be a misprint. But then maybe the oddsmaker was thinking about last season's Bears ... BEARS 24, FALCONS 17.

Pittsburgh (2-1-1) at Kansas City (2-2): The oddsmakers think the Steelers will win by eight points ... STEELERS 23, CHIEFS 14.

Buffalo (3-1) at Baltimore (0-4): The spread says Buffalo by 15. It could be ... BILLS 35, COLTS 10.

Los Angeles (3-1) vs Green Bay (2-2) at Milwaukee: The betting slips say Los Angeles minus 12. The scoreboard should say ... RAMS 24, PACKERS 13.

San Diego (1-3) at Oakland (3-1): On any given day, etc., but IT won't be today for San Diego, 14-point underdogs ... RAIDERS 37, CHARGERS 17.

New Orleans (1-3) at Denver (1-2-1): As 14-point favorites the Brocos will find out what it's like to win two in a row this week ... BRONCOS 30, SAINTS 17.

Miami (3-1) at Washington (2-2): The odds favor the Dolphins by five which could be right on the button ... DOLPHINS 24, REDSKINS 19.

San Francisco (2-2) at Detroit (0-4): The Lions, 9½-point betting choices, have just been waiting for a Monday night game so Alex Karras can see them score their initial 1974 victory ... LIONS 24, 49ERS 17.

Americans, Southmen Roll

By HOWARD SMITH
AP Sports Writer

The Memphis Southmen and the Birmingham Americans continue to roll while the World Football League continues to rock.

Memphis and Birmingham, the struggling league's two best teams, ignored the latest round of WFL woes and posted victories Wednesday night, the Southmen edging the Charlotte Hornets 27-23 and the Americans thumping the Portland Storm 30-6.

The Hawaiians beat the Philadelphia Bell 25-22 and the Florida Blazers downed the Chicago Fire 45-17 in other games.

Meanwhile, WFL officials continued the struggle to keep the league afloat despite Commissioner Gary Davidson's declaration that, "I think the factor for success today is better than it was two months ago."

East Carolina's first five football games this fall will be played under lights.

An overflow crowd of 51,000 fans will jam Kyle Field which seats 48,000. More than 19,000 student tickets were sold. It's the first Aggie home sellout—other than for an A&M-Texas game—since the 1956 TCU contest.

Los Angeles will host the opening game of the World Series Saturday and it will be on television after the A&M-Tech game.

NEWSPAPERS: FREEDOM'S GUARANTEE

Market Is Very Soft For Old Newspapers

By JACK LEFLER
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The bottom has dropped out of the market for old newspapers.

"The market is very soft," said Harold Cowan, owner of AAA Industrial Paper Supply of Los Angeles, a firm that buys old newspapers for recycling into newsprint and industrial products.

The price has slumped from $32 a ton six months ago to $10 for domestic use and $5 for export.

Early this year there was a scramble for old newspapers, with Japanese and Korean interests grabbing a big percentage of the market and driving the price up. Now there is a surplus.

Japanese sources, commenting on the slowdown in paper imports, noted that their country's economy, which has been growing at a rate of 10 per cent a year for the last two decades, has slowed down and this has affected imports of all types.

In 1972, Japan and Korea shipped about 2,200 tons of old newspapers a month from Southern California ports.

As the demand rose, a monthly shipment of 12,000 tons was projected for 1974, but it should fall far short.

Cowan said he has a surplus of newspapers on hand, hasn't bought any in eight weeks and probably won't for another two weeks. This has put a crimp in collection drives by schools and churches, but their efforts are still going on to a limited extent.

Probably the biggest user of old newspaper for recycling into newsprint is Garden State Paper Co. with plants in Pomona, Calif., Garfield, N.J., and Alsip, Ill.

Sixty-five newspapers in California and about 200 throughout the country are using recycled newsprint.

"Although prices for waste newspapers have dropped in recent weeks, the general paper industry, particularly on the West Coast, is stronger today than at any time since World War II," said Richard B. Scudder, chairman of Garden State.

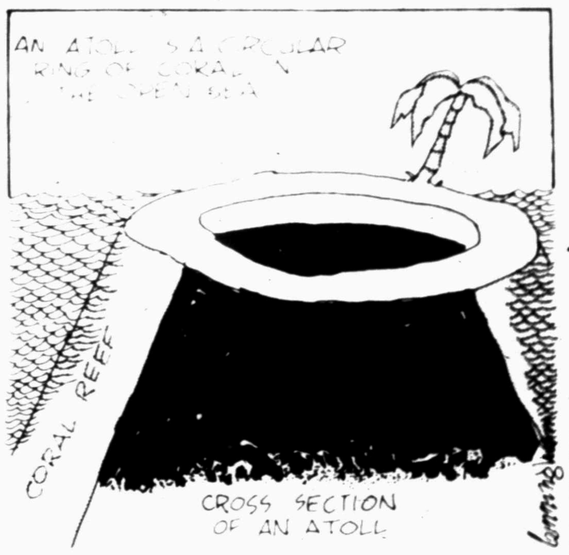

"Today's waste newspaper prices are higher than any paid since January 1973, when an unexpected export demand resulted in unprecedented high prices.

"The so-called current drop in prices occurred as the export market closed off its purchases and the domestic market adjusted to the situation."

Scudder said Garden State has played an important role in attempting to bring some degree of stability into the traditionally cyclical waste paper market.

"For example," he said, "Garden State is the only company in the industry to establish a guaranteed floor price, providing our dealers with an assurance of profitability regardless of market fluctuations."

Junior Editors Quiz on ATOLLS

QUESTION: What is an atoll?

* * *

ANSWER: Atoll is the Polynesian name for a ringed type coral island or reef, with a shallow pool or lagoon in its center. Coral reefs form only in tropical and subtropical waters in a belt lying no more than 30 degrees north and 30 degrees south of the Equator. They occur chiefly in the Pacific and occasionally are large in size.

Coral is a small marine invertebrate related to sea anemones. The skeletons of these organisms are broken up by the waves of the sea, by animals and other agents. When a mass of this material is piled up, vegetation may appear, such as palm and breadfruit trees and islands and reefs are formed. Many time an atoll is built up on the craters of a sunken volcano. The circle of many atolls is broken on one side so the lagoon has an opening into the sea. There is considerable disagreement among scientists on the origin of atolls. Research has not presented evidence to support fully any theory.

Xenia Tale Bumps "Sierra"

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC-TV is bumping its low-rated "Sierra" series tonight for an excellent documentary about Xenia, Ohio, the small town devastated by a killer tornado last April and still rebuilding today.

The program isn't one of those quickies in which a network team checks right in after the event, returns six months later for progress footage, then pastes it all together and calls it a documentary.

It instead covers the Xenia story in stages, from the actual tragedy, to the town's effort to assess its losses and dig itself out, and finally to the long summer of still-continuing reconstruction.

Entitled "Tornado! 4:40 p.m., Xenia, Ohio," the opening segment includes not only close-up footage of the twister, filmed with a home movie camera by a Xenia resident, but also the actual sound of the tornado, recorded by another local resident.

It's chilling, spectacular material, to be sure, but the real meat of NBC's show lies in the quiet, low-key way it goes about reporting the reactions of the townsfolk to what had happened and what they hope will happen.

It makes particularly good use of photographs of the city's "old north end," taken the summer before the tornado by Xenia's former mayor, to illustrate what the storm had done to streets of stately old wood homes once surrounded by rows of elderly maple trees.

The verbal contrasts are equally good. A 14-year-old boy, recalling the moments after the twister passed on, said he heard no birds singing, and saw no neighborhood pets, "just people and trash."

His father, whose home and camera shop were destroyed, says he and his family aren't leaving, that "this tornado, dammit, is not going to have the last word."

The show primarily is about spirit and the spirit it conveys, is a good, hopeful one that should be seen by those of us who are convinced the nation has long since departed for hell in a handbasket.

Producer George Murray obviously put in a lot of time, care and thought on this show.

"Before you came along, I didn't have to set a good example for ANYBODY!"

He needs his father for a friend

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by The Chicago Tribune

DEAR ABBY: I needed some Scotch tape so I looked in my son's desk for some, and noticed the beginning of a letter my son had written to his girl friend. It read, "I am only interested in being stoned, spending money and sex."

I read no further.

My first impulse was to confront him with this, but then he would say I had no right to go snooping through his desk.

I don't think I should go on ignoring this. I would appreciate some advice. He is 18½.

BEWILDERED FATHER

DEAR FATHER: You could be about 17 years too late. It won't help you now to be reminded that you failed to build the kind of father-son relationship that inspires trust, confidence and total honesty. It's possible that what you read did not reflect your son's thoughts accurately, however.

Don't tell him what you saw, but try to get a dialogue going so you can get inside his head. Encourage honesty, and no matter what he says, be cool, and don't put him down or make him feel guilty. If you can develop candid two-way communication, you'll be able to influence and eventually help your son. He doesn't need punishment, Father, he needs a mature understanding friend.

DEAR ABBY: About a week before our daughter and her steady graduated from high school, they told us that she was pregnant and they wanted to get married.

There was a long silence, then my husband said: "We've all made mistakes in our lives, but some of us never got caught. Now you two kids will have to excuse us for five minutes while we plan our daughter's wedding."

Then Dad led me into the bedroom, handed me $25 and said: "Let's see if you're as smart about money now as you were 25 years ago."

Needless to say, time was short, so I went downtown the next morning and bought six yards of yellow cotton, two simple formal patterns, two yards of pink lace, two yards of ivory lace, and some pink and ivory ribbon—all for less than $10. (I had $15 left over for the flowers and reception. Boy, I had money to burn!)

My younger daughter (age 15) and I made the dresses. I baked the wedding cake and made punch. Only the very immediate families were invited to the wedding.

Our minister performed the ceremony in front of our fireplace, which was decorated with greenery from our garden and two white candles. The girls were beautiful in their simple dresses with their long black hair tied back with ribbons to match their dresses. The bride carried a single ivory carnation, and her sister, a pink carnation.

We made sure the fridge was well stocked, and Dad, Sister and I spent the weekend in a neighboring town with Dad's brother.

Dad says I'm still as smart about money as I was 25 years ago.

NO NAMES PLEASE

DEAR NO: You're not only smart about money, you are wise about other things, too. And so is your husband.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "BLISSFUL IN EVANSVILLE, INDIANA": You are mistaken. No one said "ignorance is bliss."

The quote is, "Where ignorance is bliss, tis folly to be wise."

Taxpayers Ask IRS

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters in provided by the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

★★★

Q. Iwork full time, but this fall during the congressional race I will be taking off some time from my job to serve as an election official helping to register new voters and assisting at election booths. I will receive a fee for these services. Is this kind of income taxable?

a. Yes, and you must include in your gross income all fees paid you as an election official.

Q. I am a registered nurse and I plan to return to work this fall after a three-year break to be home with my young daughter. In order to go back to work, I plan to enroll her in a day care center where she will take meals and play supervised learning games as well as receive care. Can I deduct the entire cost of the day care or must I exclude the expenses for food and education?

A. Expenses for nursery school or day care for preschool dependent children may be deducted, subject to certain limitations, if paid to enable you to be gainfully employed. Benefits incident to the care, such as food and education, are not child care expenses. But, if the manner of providing care is such that your payment covers other benefits that are inseparably a part of the care, then the entire cost is deductible as a child care expense. For example, if a nursery school charges a flat fee that includes lunch, recreational activities, and other benefits, the full amount paid would be deductible. However, benefits will not be considered an inseparable part of the care if the expense includes education in the first or higher grade level. Such expenses must be apportioned between the cost of care for the child and the cost of education. For further information on this subject including limitations on the amount of deductions for child care, consult IRS Publication 503, "Child Care and Disabled Dependent Care." It's available free at many IRS offices.

Q. I am a college student majoring in education. My school has deferred my tuition payments until I graduate and begin teaching in the state. How does this affect my income tax?

A. Deferral of a student's tuition obligation to a college or university until the student's later working years is not income to the student and no tax is involved. However, if the debt is eventually forgiven, there is a tax on the loan in the year the loan is forgiven.

Q. I rent out a house that I own. Recently, the tenants requested me to patch some cracks in the cement patio and build a fence across the back of the property. Can I deduct the cost of these projects as rental expenses?

A. To be deductible, a repair to rental property you own must not appreciably add to the value, utility or useful life of the property. Incidental repairs which keep the property in efficient operating condition, such as mending leaks, or in your case, fixing the patio, are deductible. Building the fence would add to the value of the house and such an improvement would not be deductible. The cost of the fence, however, may be depreciated over its useful life. For more information on depreciation, see IRS Publication 534, "Tax Information on Depreciation," available free from most IRS offices.

SHOULD DEPLETION ALLOWANCE END?

Tax Revision Bill Is Riding On One Issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Billions of dollars and the future of the entire tax revision bill are riding on the answer to one question in Congress: Should the oil depletion allowance be ended?

Oil state forces in Congress don't want it to end at all. The House Ways and Means Committee is torn but generally wants it to end slowly. Anti-oil congressmen would like to see it end quickly, retroactive to Jan. 1 of this year.

The issue is an important one in the running tax disputes in Congress. The entire energy tax bill was blocked earlier this year in a dispute between conservatives and liberals on the Ways and Means Committee over whether, when and how to end the controversial allowance that provides a multi-billion-dollar annual tax break for oilmen.

That bill in slightly modified form is part of the comprehensive general tax revision package. With the oil tax bill aboard, the tax legislation was so close to death this year that its critics were making plans for next year's clash.

However, the President's endorsement of the chief features of the general tax revision bill, as part of his new campaign for inflation-fighting taxes, gave the legislation a push away from the grave. Now, however, even the fate of the new economic tax package depends on the outcome of the congressional clash over the oil depletion allowance.

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., acting chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, wants to put everything into the one bill in a giant push for enactment this year.

In his economic message to Congress Tuesday, Ford endorsed the general tax revision bill's features that would ease capital gains taxation, would give tax relief to low and middle-income Americans, would levy a new so-called windfall profits tax on oil producers, and would take steps, as the President put it, "closing the loopholes."

Asked at his news conference Wednesday, "Is it your own view that the oil depletion allowance should be phased out?" he replied, "The answer is yes."

The depletion allowance currently permits 22 per cent of gross income from petroleum property to be deducted from taxable income up to a top of 50 per cent of taxable net income. This allowance is estimated to save oilmen between $2 billion and $3 billion a year in federal taxes.

The Ways and Means Committee's allowance phaseout would work this way:

—Generally, the 22 per cent would drop to 15 per cent for oil produced this year, 8 per cent in 1975, and zero thereafter.

—However, the rate would remain at 15 per cent until Jan. 1, 1979 — when it, too, would plunge to zero — for oil coming under any one of these three categories: The first 3,000 barrels per day of production, the so-called stripper wells or those producing up to 10 barrels of oil a day, and production from Alaska's north slope.

The committee has rejected efforts by Rep. Charles A. Vanik, D-Ohio, to eliminate foreign tax credits on petroleum produced abroad and treat foreign taxes as a business deduction instead of a direct offset against U.S. taxes: and by Rep. William G. Green, D-Pa., to generally end the petroleum depletion allowance effective retroactively to Jan. 1, 1974.

Last May, Vanik and Green won approval of House Democrats for a bid to gain a House vote on similar amendments to the separate energy tax bill — legislation that since has been kept off the House floor in a major congressional power struggle.

The other chief petroleum items in the general tax bill include:

—A temporary new excise tax on the "windfall profits" of the oil industry, a levy that would be linked with a so-called plowback credit plan. The plowback arrangement is vital because it would give oilmen who seek more energy sources a way of escaping paying much of this new levy.

—A new limit on foreign tax credits; and some changes in a fee system for imported petroleum.

Lifer May Be Paroled

FOLSOM, Calif. (AP) — "I sure would like to go home. I haven't seen the moon or the stars in 44 years."

Ernest Dias has lived in a prison cell since 1930, when at the age of 24 he was convicted of killing a young couple in an attempted holdup.

Now, thanks to a recent court decision, he faces the prospect of parole next month.

"It's just one of those things. You've got to take the bitter with the sweet," Dias said in an interview with a fellow inmate at Folsom State Prison, where Dias has spent the last 33 years. The interview appeared in the September issue of the Folsom Observer.

Dias, who grew up in the Oakland area, originally received the death sentence, but it was commuted to life imprisonment with no chance of parole. He spent the first 11 years in San Quentin Prison before being transferred to Folsom.

After capital punishment was abolished, the courts held the no-parole sentence unconstitutional. Last month an Alameda County Superior Court judge reviewed Dias' case and ordered he be given a hearing before the Adult Authority, now set for November.

"I have hope now after all these years," Dias said. "I've had enough of this place. I've seen the light. I want to keep working, possibly on a farm, when I'm paroled. The outside world will be strange, but I'll get used to it. I'll have to adjust."

Dias' prison counselor, William French, isn't so sure.

"It's as if he's been in a time capsule. He hasn't really thought about parole plans in the past, because of the sentence," French said. "Unless he has somewhere to go, it's cruel and unusual punishment to take someone after 44 years and say, 'Here's the street, goodby.'"

Prison records show Dias has a brother in San Jose and a sister-in-law somewhere in California.

Stock Analysts Gloomy At Semi-Annual Meet

By MARTIN HIRSCHMAN
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — A mood of pessimism and uncertainty has dominated a semi-annual meeting of stock analysts.

Reflecting the gloom on Wall Street, one analyst said his colleagues were searching for the catalyst "that will turn this herd of bears heading for the cliff."

Chief among the topics of discussion at the meeting of the 14,000-member Financial Analysts Federation that ended on Wednesday was the future of their trade.

"The people I've met here are puzzled," said Ted Lilley, president of the 14,000-member federation. "They're gritting their teeth and talking about buying bars of gold to put under their beds."

The analysts are market advisers, and an unusually large number of top executives from major companies attended the conference, partly to boost confidence in their industries and firms.

But by and large, they ran into strong resistance.

"At last night's cocktail party, it became clear that anyone here with over $100 million to invest is sitting on the sidelines, waiting for something to happen," said Frank Cappiello Jr., president of Monumental Capital Management Inc.

"The question is, what will be the catalyst?" he said. "Somewhere along the line, something will turn this herd of bears heading for the cliff."

The analysts agreed generally that by rights there should be as much — or perhaps more — work for the analysts in bad times as good. In fact, many smaller investors simply pull out of the market in bad times.

"Incomes in our area are down," said Lilley, of New York.

And attendence at the conference was down proportionately. Only about 325 analysts paid the $265 registration for the four-day fall conference, down from 800 a year ago.

"If we are not near the bottom, this will be the worst depression the industrialized western world has ever seen, and the capitalistic system is done for," said Cappiello.

Despite gloom and uncertainty on Wall Street, leaders of the conference said this could be a good time for smaller investors to get back into the market.

Robert D. Hedberg of New York, chairman of the federation, said that many stocks and bonds are sharply undervalued at their current market price, making an upsurge seem inevitable.

Gierek Coming To Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Inspections of an oil refinery and the Johnson Space Center are on Saturday's schedule for a Texas visit by Edward Gierek, Poland's Communist party leader.

Gierek's party of about 20 persons is to arrive Friday night.

Saturday morning the group will go to the Space Center where astronauts and space agency officials are preparing for the 1975 joint mission in which American and Russian spacecraft will rendezvous and dock in space.

The afternoon schedule includes an inspection of the Exxon Co. USA refinery at Baytown on the Houston Ship Channel.

The group is to depart at mid-morning Sunday.

Quints Are Doing Well

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — Charles and Karen Rohrer's 2-day-old quintuplets are doing well and may be going home in a month or so, doctors say.

Two of the five babies had minor respiratory problems, but their conditions are improving, Dr. Ronald Gutberlet, director of nurseries at the University of Maryland Hospital, said Wednesday night.

Gutberlet said the babies' 28-year-old mother may be able to leave the hospital in about a week.

Rohrer said he hasn't had much time to think yet about the problems of taking care of a houseful of infants. "I was just concerned about my wife and the babies," he said Wednesday.

Rohrer said he was still stunned by the births, but said he thinks five is enough. He said he and his wife have no plans for more children. Rohrer has one child by a previous marriage.

The babies' names are Michelle Lynn, Sandra Elizabeth, Belinda Ann, Jennifer Louise and Russell Charles.

Only Ford Meeting Will Stop Proposed Slaughter

NACOGDOCHES, Tex. (AP) — Only a personal conference with President Ford will stop a proposed cattle slaughter in protest of the high cost of raising beef, a group of East Texas ranchers say.

At the same time, an Agriculture Department spokesman told some Texas ranchers in Washington Wednesday there might be a little profit for stockmen by next spring, but not before.

Steve Burgess, who raises Santa Gertrudis beef cattle just east of here, said Wednesday night about 500 head of dairy and beef calves have been pledged for slaughter and he expects that number to reach to 1,000 by Wednesday, the date for the slaughter.

Wednesday is also the end of a two-week deadline which Stephenville area ranchers and dairy farmers gave President Ford after they postponed a protest slaughter of 1,000 dairy calves. They also seek a personal meeting.

Burgess said the Nacogdoches County Dairy and Beef Association voted Tuesday night to kill the calves and bury the carcasses in a mass grave.

"I already have the pit dug," Burgess said.

"We met in Washington two weeks ago and got an awful bad report," he said. "(Secretary of Agriculture) Earl Butz only saw two of us. He said they couldn't do anything until April.

The county dairy and beef association president, Felix Parmley said he was strictly against the cow killing but thought it was the only thing left to push the government into meeting with the cattlemen.

Parmley added, however, he did not think the kill in Nacogdoches would come about because of too much public pressure, but the Stephenville slaughter would occur.

Parmley said the slaughter would rest completely on Ford's shoulders.

Assistant Agriculture Secretary Clayton K. Yeutter told the Texas ranchers that prices paid to the nation's cattle producers may increase by next spring but until they improve the government can do little to relieve the rancher's economic problems.

"I see the light at the end of the tunnel for the cattle feeders as early as next spring," Yeutter said. "Not a big profit, but some profit.

Burgess, who used to be a dairy farmer, said many of his friends may be out of business by then because they can't afford the high price of feed.

Yeutter said he saw "a little light for cow-calf men next fall."

"I think the prices will be a little stronger," he said.

The ranchers complained that the prices paid for the calves they sell to feeders had dropped within the pest 18 months from 70 cents a pound to 20 cents a pound. Increased grain prices forced them to reduce the amount they could spend on each calf.

"You've got to just hope to ride it out because there isn't much the government can do," Yeutter said. "We can't have all ups in the cattle undustry. We've got to have some downs."

Burgess noted all beef imported from Canada goes to the military services and 80 per cent of the school lunch program beef comes from Australia and New Zealand.

"We only get 20 per cent of that market," he noted. "The beef out of those countries is not even inspected by the USDA as our beef is."

"Butz said they couldn't do anything until April." Burgess feels American cattlemen should have more of this market.

Yeutter pointed out that if the United States embargoes meat imports, the nation's receiving U.S. farm products would use the freeze as an excuse to embargo exports.

"The United States can't be a dumping round for surplus beef, but we can't be hypocritical," he said. "We can't shut off beef imports and ask the other countries to open up" to exports.

John Haid, a cattleman from Winnsboro who met with Yeutter said if profits don't improve in 1975, "most of the cattlemen in the business won't be in the business in 1976."

Haid conceded an import freeze might cause prices in supermarkets to rise "a little but not much."

Burgess said he hoped Ford and Congress would lower the grain prices in view of Ford's order to halt a grain shipment to Russia.

Elvis' Scarf Causes Fight

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — It perhaps was a case of biting the hand that is fighting you.

Patrolman Billy Hook reported Wednesday a woman, 27, was given a tetanus shot at a local hospital following Tuesday night's Elvis Presley concert before a packed coliseum.

The woman told Hooks she was bitten by another woman in a scuffle in front of the stage after Elvis threw out one of his neck scarves, a customary part of his act.

"Elvis threw a scarf to her, Hooks wrote in his report, "and the fight was started with many screaming women attempting to obtain the scarf."

The woman "stated she had the scarf but another woman bit her hand, forcing her to release the precious item, Hook wrote.

The woman told Hook her attacker could be identified "by a bald spot on her head" which the bitten woman inflicted on her.

Operation Swallow Is Launched

SEMPACH, Switzerland (AP) — The Swiss ornithological station at Sempach is trying to organize a southward migration by rail for tens of thousands of swallows stranded by freezing weather in the Alps.

Unless they get help, the station said Monday, they may soon die of hunger and cold. The birds began their southward migration from northern Europe and then were halted by early cold weather and snow in Switzerland.

Pennsylvania is the only state in the union named for its founder, William Penn, who wanted to call it "sylvania" because of the extensive forest areas.

Nixon Pardon Sticking Point In Jury Selection

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It appears now that massive publicity is not the only matter stretching out the jury selection process for the Watergate cover-up trial. The Nixon pardon also seems to be a sticking point.

The sifting process was in its eighth day today, and U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica has sent word that he doesn't expect it to be the last. But an aide said at the close of Wednesday's session that Sirica was "still hopeful about Friday — it looks good."

A prosecutor's memorandum indicated some prospective jurors are bothered that five subordinates of Richard M. Nixon are being prosecuted while the former president goes free. The five, including former White House aides H.R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman, are charged with trying to thwart the investigation of the Watergate break-in.

The memorandum, filed with the judge, suggested changes in the last step of seating a jury "to avoid giving "the defense an unwarranted advantage in the selection of the panel."

In the current stage, judge and lawyers are questioning jury prospects one-by-one to discern any biases that would stand in the way of a verdict based on trial evidence alone.

The memorandum by Special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski spoke of a "pattern of responses to questions about the Nixon pardon" in the private questioning and said if usual procedures are followed there would be "a possibility of unfairness to the government."

Once the judge and lawyers have settled on a minimum of 45 prospective jurors — plus an undetermined number extra — the "peremptory challenge" stage will begin.

A clerk will seat 12 jury prospects in the order on which they appear on a list made up at random before the trial started Oct. 1. The defense then will be allowed to remove up to 15 people and the prosecution 6 — all without stating a cause. As each juror-candidate is struck, another takes his place, still in the order on the list.

Jaworski said in the memorandum he was worried that the defense might pass on its early challenges and then at the end have enough remaining to exercise 12 or more strikes.

"If at that time defendants know the 9 or 12 individuals who are next in line, they will have complete control in selecting a final panel of 12," the memorandum said.

He suggested a complex mathematical arrangement to avoid "the possibility that any party will have a "final say in the selection of the final panel."

It would require the defense to exercise two or three challenges in each of the first few rounds to the government's one.

A second procedure advocated by the government would be to reshuffle the names of prospective jurors — and not let the order be known in advance — so that the defense could not be able to pick the "known individuals."

More Patients Are Suing

DALLAS (AP) — There probably is not a higher incidence of medical malpractice today, a insurance executive says, it's just that more patients choose to sue today.

Waverly Smith, president of the St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co., told the American Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology today a joint medical-insurance effort was necessary to solve the malpractice claims crisis. Time is running out for keeping a free market for medical malpractice insurance, he said.

Some of the reasons for increased claims, cited by Smith, included less personal doctor-patient relationship, consumerism, greater patient expectations, and the changes in court interpretations of negligence law.

"All of this has sharply increased your malpractice insurance premiums, almost destroyed the availability of the coverage, and increased health care costs for consumers," said Smith, whose company insures 48,000 doctors.

The conditions under which the insurance industry markets malpractice insurance have deteriorated so much, Smith said, that in 1975 some doctors in some states may be unable to purchase standard malpractice coverage at any price.

"If the malpractice crisis cannot be solved," Smith warned the medical group, "it may develop that the only source of financial protection for you will be a government system."

Changes by the courts in negligence procedural law are steadily eroding many standard and traditional legal defenses, Smith asserted. He asked his audience to consider what remedial legislation is necessary to prevent "the complete collapse of legal defenses."

"You, the public and legislators must recognize that doctors cannot be expected to be infallible," Smith stated, adding that "there must be some protection under the law."

He listed four major areas of law where remedial legislation is needed: strengthening of the locality rule, restrictions on the statute of limitations, confidentiality of peer review group actions, and establishment of standards for informed consent.

Connally Finds Peace At Ranch

By JOHN LUMPKIN
Associated Press Writer

FLORESVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Far away were grand juries and court appearances. At hand were his friends, his ranch on wide open Texas land and purebred animals for sale.

Those friends aren't occupied by Washington milk fund charges which Connally, a former Treasury secretary, denies. The friends believe Connally rather than the federal indictment which alleges he accepted a bribe.

"I don't think its changed my life any," said Connally of the charges, as he strolled along a pasture fence line Wednesday.

"I, of course, think about it, and at times I think it's almost a nightmare, almost as if it hasn't happened.

"It's one of those things like the time I was shot with President Kennedy. You know, you can't believe it ever happened," said Connaly as he recalled the day in Dallas.

One of the tribulations of life"

"Sure," said the tall, silver-haired Connally. "It's one of those things you encounter in life and it is not a pleasant experience.

"But if you can't overcome adversity, if you can't meet problems head-on without letting them completely overcome you, why then you are in trouble. I hadn't let it do that. I'm not going to."

Connally's aim on Wednesday was not to fight such charges but to buy a bull for his family ranching interests "with some stretch ... some length to him."

He did.

Sitting in the shade of an amphitheater for the auction he was hosting, he and his family bid $20,000 on a Santa Gertrudis which will go to his Children's Four-C Ranch. It was the top price paid for a bull at the auction where he and nine other breeders offered cattle.

Connally, who a year ago was considered for the vice presidential nomination and then practiced law in Houston, said not too many people are aware he is a rancher.

In the past year, he has spent more time than before at the Picosa Ranch—his own ranch—near the Four-C. He built an elaborate auction ring on the 3,600 acre Picosa that attracted buyers from as far away as South Africa for Wednesday's sale.

Why does he come out here?

"I've done it all my life and my father did it before me. He was a tenant farmer and owned the first piece of land in the heart of the Depression in 1932," said Connally.

"It has all the elements of creativity to it that I like. It appeals to me," said Connally.

He said the ranch has been a help to him in the past nine months, as his name emerged in the milk fund controversy.

It is a pleasant place.

He talked about soap operas on television with a retired cattle truck driver. The cattle-buying crowd, some more affluent than he and some less, ate barbecue as they sat on hay bales under shade trees.

The grass is green

He introduced coastal bermuda grass to this region of Texas, a sandy scrub-brush type land, and "everybody thought I was crazy for buying it"—meaning the grass.

Now, land that once supported a cow to every 20 acres can maintain an animal on every three, he said.

With his financial success, he can keep a ranch such as this, but he said it is not a hobby. A friend also said of Connally, "He's not a drug store cowboy.

Having the ranch "is one of the great blessings of my life ... it gives me more peace, it gives me more satisfaction, gives me more contentment," Connally said.

"It fills a part of my life because here you see—I don't want to get philosophical about it—but as a very practical matter, you see the seasons come and go. You buy cows. You buy bulls. You breed them. You can't wait to see the offsprings.

"You improve the bread."

Superport Bill By Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has passed in a near-unanimous vote a bill allowing construction of deepwater superports which tankers could use to pump oil ashore into areas which could not accomodate the large vessels.

Approved Wednesday by a vote of 78 to 2, the bill empowers the Transportation Department to license the ports and the Coast Guard to regulate them.

The Senate bill was sent to the House, which already has passed its own superport bill. A conference committee probably will be needed to draft a compromise acceptable to both houses.

An amendment to the bill that would have banned oil company ownership of the superport terminals failed by a vote of 48 to 34. Backers of the amendment contended that ownership of the superports would increase major oil company control of the nation's petroleum supply system.

Supertankers that are too large for most U.S. ports would tie up with the superports, buoy-like platforms anchored up to 30 miles offshore in deep water.

Pipelines buried in the ocean floor would carry oil from the tankers ashore from the superport terminal.

Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina said that if the Senate were to reject the bill, it would deprive U.S. consumers of a 50 per cent savings in transporting oil to this country from the Middle East.

Sen. Edmund Muskie, D—Maine, said the legislation followed his recommendations in three areas—protection of states' rights, veto authority for the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and strong oil spill liability provisions.

The bill provides that states adjacent to a proposed superport could veto the project. The same power is given to the EPA if it feels a port could cause environmental damage.

Ford Dances At Fund Raising

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. (AP) — President Ford took to the dance floor night at a crowded Republican fund-raising dinner.

His partners Wednesday night were Mary Scranton, wife of former Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton, and Marilyn Lewis, wife of GOP gubernatorial candidate Drew Lewis.

The President danced the polka with Mrs. Scranton, then shifted to the jitterbug for his dance with Mrs. Lewis as the band played "Sentimental Journey."

Texas Death Penalty Law Challenged In Court

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Attorneys for a man who was sentenced to die for the abduction-slaying of a Dallas lawyer have filed the first court challenge to the new Texas death penalty law.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals will hear arguments on the constitutionality of the measure Nov. 13.

Directly at stake in the first case is the life of William David Hovila, convicted of capital murder in the 1973 shooting death of Dallas lawyer Henry J. McCluskey.

A second death penalty appeal also will be heard that day on behalf of Jerry Lane Jurek, convicted of killing 10-year-old Wendy Adams of Cuero.

The legislature wrote the new death penalty statute in 1973 after the U.S. Supreme Court struck down the old one.

It makes death mandatory for certain kinds of murder if the jury finds the killing was unprovoked and deliberate and believes there is a probability the defendant "would commit criminal acts of violence that would constitute a continuing threat to society."

The NAACP Legal Defense Fund and the National Office for the Rights of the Indigent filed a "friend of the court" brief in the Jurek case that also was used by Hovila's lawyer, Howard Wilson of Dallas.

The briefs said the new law preserves the constitutional defect of the old one by giving juries too much discretion over who lives and who dies.

They said the additional required jury findings after determining guilt are "nothing more than a guise under which capital jurors will inevitably respond to sentiment at best and prejudice at worst to determine—not the dangerousness of the defendant or the deliberateness or reasonableness of his crime—but whether they wish to see him die."

A jury's prediction of future criminal behavior should not be the thread on which a man's life hangs, the briefs said.

"There is no evidence that this kind of prediction can be accurately made by specialists trained in the field of psychiatry ... Surely it cannot be accurately or intelligently made by a lay jury," they declared.

Both briefs—trying to make the point that the death penalty is unevenly applied—said that only about 10 of the 1,400 Texas murder cases a year result in death verdicts.

Dallas Dist. Atty. Henry Wade and State's Attorney Jim Vollers responded that the law is designed to impose the death penalty equitably.

"The Texas Capital Murder Act has removed completely all discretion with regard to punishment from the jury and the judge. The jury determines only questions of fact and is sworn to do so ... The judge's imposition of sentence is then curely ministerial, based on the jury's finding of fact," their brief said.

They said all eight capital murder trials in Dallas—one for killing a policeman and seven for murder during a robbery—have resulted in death verdicts.

"This shows two things: first, that this act is not being administered in an arbitrary or capricious manner and, second, that the penalty has not been rejected by the citizens of Dallas County as excessive or unnecessary," the prosecution brief said.

Texans Seek To Move Grave Of 'Leadbelly'

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Some Texans are conspiring to spirit away one of Louisiana's most famous folk singers, Huddie "Leadbelly" Ledbetter.

Ledbetter, who wrote "Good Night, Irene," died in 1949 after a turbulent life, much of it spent in Louisiana and Texas prisons.

He was buried in the Shiloh Baptist Church cemetery north of Shreveport. Now the Harrison County Historical Suvey Committee of Marshall, Tex., says it wants to have Ledbetter's remains moved to Texas.

Max S. Lale of Marshall, chairman of the committee, reluctantly disclosed the organization's plans Wednesday.

"I'm really sorry you got wind of this before we got this all put together," he told newsmen. "I don't know if anyone might object."

The Texas residents contend Ledbetter was a native of their state.

Ledbetter's niece, Irene Campbell of Marshall, says, however, that her uncle told her he was born on the Jeter Plantation not far from the Shiloh cemetery.

Born in 1888, Ledbetter was raised and worked around Louisiana and Texas until 1918, when he was jailed for murder in Texas.He was pardoned in 1925, but was imprisoned at the Louisiana Penitentiary in Angola from 1930 to 1934 for attempted homicide.

Legend has it that the governor of Louisiana heard his singing during a routine tour of the prison and pardoned him.

"Leadbelly" also served a year in a New York prison for assault.

His distinctive prison-style singing and his gravelly voice made him a famous performer in the 1940s.

Mrs. Campbell, 66, said she wasn't the subject of Ledbetter's "Good Night, Irene," but said Ledbetter himself gave her the name over the objections of her mother.

Lale said his committee hasn't decided where Ledbetter's body would be reburied in Texas but the site probably would be in the Karnack Community just west of the Louisiana-Texas line where "Leadbelly" spent many of his younger years.

He said some legal steps will have to be taken before disterring the body but preparations have been made to acquire necessary permits.

The Caddo Parish coronor, Dr. Willis P. Butler, said the move would require three permits, one of which could be issued only by himself or the parish health unit.

And the 86-year old coronor said he doesn't plan to issue the permit unless he is shown "good reason."

Youths Charged With Larceny

EL PASO, Tex. (AP) — Authorities lodged charges Wednesday against 11 boys and young men accused of taking $41,000 from six banks in the past 30 months—apparently by simply strolling away unnoticed with the cash.

Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation said the case involved disappearances of money from banks in El Paso, Fabens and Van Horn, Tex., and Anthony, N.M.

They filed complaints accusing the 11 El Paso residents—including a 10-year-old boy, two 13-year-olds and four other teen-agers—of larceny.

An FBI spokesman refused to disclose any details of how the money was taken, saying that would jeopardize prosecution of the case.

A vice president of the Border City Bank in El Paso, Howard Hudgeons, said the manner in which his bank lost $6,000 presumably was typical of the operations.

Bank employes found a young boy in a back room at the vault of temporary quarters for the institution on May 31, 1972, Hudgeons related, and ordered him to leave. Later the employes discovered the money was missing.

No one knew whether only one boy or more were involved, the banker said, adding, "We never could tell. One was seen back there and was asked to leave. We classified it as a mysterious disappearance. We didn't know what had happened."

Tom Westfall, assistant agent in charge of the FBI office here, described it as "one of the most unusual cases I've ever seen in my 24 years in the FBI." He declined to say whether the procedure was identical at each bank but said all 11 suspects were linked to a common neighborhood and in frequent brushes with the law.

Slump In Home Building Has Cut Lumber Prices

By RICK SCOTT
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Lumber prices are sinking like granite because of a slump in home construction and there is no relief in sight, according to industry officials in Texas.

"The bottom has fallen out of the market," says Pat McCaslin, spokesman for Kirby Lumber Corp. in Houston.

Alan Miller of Temple Industries at Diboll in the Piney Woods of East Texas says, "We're not making any money."

And, Charles Magee of a Wickes building supply in Richardson north of Dallas says he's cut lumber prices more than 30 per cent so far this year and is "thinking about going lower than that."

A survey of several manufacturers and distributers by The Associated Press found agreement that lumber prices are at their lowest level since 1969.

An example, at the distributor level, from Magee: 1,000 board feet of lumber that sold in January for $195 now is selling for $135.

These are the prices a contractor would pay for his lumber, said Magee. On a larger scale, $5,000 worth of lumber for a house six months ago now would cost about $3,500.

But contractors aren't buying the lumber, said Magee, because they aren't building any houses. And they aren't building houses, he said, because they can't find money to finance their projects.

"The demand is gone, but the supply is still here," Magee said. The slump "has affected our business at least 20 to 25 per cent."

For a person that has some money, now is the time to build an addition to a home, while prices are down, he advised.

"Things have gone completely bad," said McCaslin at Kirby Lumber Corp. which owns or manages more than half a million acres of forest in East Texas.

The drop in prices at the manufacturing level, said McCaslin, has been drastic. "Lumber, random length boards and studs, that sold for $150 per thousand board feet a year ago is selling for around $50 now.

"We're losing money," said McCaslin. Kirby has cut back its sawmill operation and shifted workers to jobs in plywood production. Plywood prices have not dropped as sharply, he said. Still, 25 workers have been laid off.

Temple Industries, said Miller, "is inventoried right up to the rafters. We can sell at a loss or cut back on production and we're doing a little of both. About 70 pf the lumber division's 1,800 workers have been laid off."

Miller said the slump is nationwide. The South held on longer than the rest of the country, with the help of booming housing markets in Dallas and Houston, he said.

"But that is cratering now," he said, "and there are not perimeters out ahead that look any better. "We're not looking for any big turnaround."

Miller and McCaslin both said about 2 million housing starts per year are needed to meet demand, but high interest rates and tight money conditions have dropped new starts to about a million this year.

McCaslin said President Ford's economic plan, which would provide money for about 100,000 new homes, won't help much. "That's only about five per cent of what's needed.

"I don't look for anything much brighter until this time next year," McCaslin said.

"The demand for housing is still there. People want homes. Builders want to build them and sell them. But I don't know where the money is going to come from to finance these homes."

A spokesman for Louisiana-Pacific at Conroe, which operates a number of sawmills and wood products plants in East Texas, said "Our sales prices have dropped substantially, even below manufacturing costs."

T.A. Reynolds, vice president and general manager of the southern division of Louisiana-Pacific, said: "We do not foresee improvements in market conditions until interest rates are lowered and money is made available to the nationwide, depressed housing industry.

"When interest rates are lowered substantially and money is made available, it would be four to six months before market conditions would improve," Reynolds said.

Magee, at Wickes in Richardson, said the decline in lumber prices has been offset in the housing industry by increases in the cost of such items as copper plumbing tubing, electrical fixtures and other items.

TARC Session Here Saturday

A leadership training and orientation conference, sponsored by the Texas Association for Retarded Citizens (TARC), will be held Saturday at the Scurry County Coliseum.

Purposes of the conference are to assist in the expanded development of local units of TARC and local programs through a trained leadership; to give ideas on expansion of membership, operational finances, public awareness and program improvement for a better informed public, and to learn where to find the help if needed.

The second in a series of five leadership conferences, the workshop will deal with the practical organization and operation of the "ARC-TARS units" and their service programs for the mentally retarded citizen. A variety of topics will include "Role and Function of the Local Volunteer," "Effective and Cooperative Planning for the Units," "Materials and Resources and Where Each Can be Found," "Roles and Responsibilities of the Officers of the Units," "Where the State and National Organizational Fit into the Overall Picture," "Membership and Public Education and Information," "Texas Special Olympics," "Teens Aid the Retarded (TARC) Programs," and "Finances and Fund Raising."

The TARC staff, David Sloan, executive director; John Pezzoli, assistant executive director for program services; Joe Street, director of physical education programs; Mike Bright, director of field services; Scott Cochran, director of resource services, and Texas TARS President, Paul Sueltenfuss, TARC leaders and major committee representatives will direct the various segments of the conference.

Registration will begin at 8:30 a.m. with the workshop to begin at 9. It will continue to 3:30 p.m.

A registration fee of $2 per person will be charged. Lunch is not included. Participants will attend from Regions 2, 3, 4, 5 and 13 of TARC. All local ARC and TARS presidents, board members and other involved in any of the programs are being urged to attend, and the entire conference is open to the public.

Wells Are Logged In Texas

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Twelve wildcat oil wells and 15 gas wildcats—including 10 in the San Antonio No. 2 district—were drilled in Texas from Sept. 15 through Oct. 1, the Railroad Commission reported Wednesday.

The oil wildcats included three each in the Houston and San Angelo districts, two each in the Corpus Christi and Abilene districts and one each in the Kilgore No. 6 and Wichita Falls districts.

The other gas wildcats included one each in the Houston, Corpus Christi, Abilene, Midland and Pampa districts.

A total of 211 wildcat oil wells have been drilled this year, 43 more than at this date last year. A total of 243 gas wildcats have been drilled, 28, fewer than at this time a year ago.

The commission said 204 oil wells were completed in the last two weeks of September for a yearly total of 3,793, or 584 more than the January-September period of 1973. A total of 108 gas wells were completed for a yearly total of 1,881, or 68 more than the first nine months of last year.

The commission said 562 wells were plugged from Sept. 15 through Oct. 1, including 159 dry holes.

Energy Refinery Is Opened

HOBBS, N.M. (AP) — Visitors made tours today of the $30 million, 37,000 barrel-a-day Famariss Energy Refinery and Southern Union Oil products terminal to be formally dedicated Friday.

A luncheon and news conference also were scheduled.

Walter Famariss Jr. of Hobbs, president of Famariss Oil Corp., said the facility is the first truly grass roots refinery constructed in the United States in the past five years.

He said it was privately financed.

Famariss refers to the facility as an energy refinery."

An energy refinery, he said, produces fuels which are either alternates or substitutes for natural gas.

Famariss estimates the industrial complex will employ more than 200 persons in the refinery as well as in supporting and servicing companies to be established.

Ground was broken for the facility April 12, 1973, and it began start-up operations June 11, 1974. Product shipments have been in progress since July 15.

Coach Is Kiwanis Speaker

Maurice (Mo) Hodges, head football coach and athletic director at Snyder High School, was guest speaker at the regular meeting of the Noon Kiwanis Club, held Wednesday at the American Restaurant.

Hodges told the Kiwanians that the Snyder High School football team makes a little improvement each week.

"It takes practice to improve," Hodges reminded the Kiwanians.

The head coach said he was pleased with the Tigers' defensive effort against Lamesa's Wishbone attack last week, and he said Lubbock Estacado will be the foe Friday night. The Matadors line up in the Wishbone, but they do not execute the triple option, he said. He said they also use a power I and a Winged T attack.

The coach said he was pleased with the efforts "of these young men," and said they are doing a tremendous job. He said there is good school spirit at Snyder High School.

Hodges said the school has a good football program. The junior varsity is undefeated this year, and the other teams are doing well. Hodges pointed out local younsters first become acquainted with the basic Tiger formations in the 7th grade.

He also discussed new rules in football this year, observing that it is illegal to block the waist on kickoffs and kickoff returns. This rule should cut down on the number of ankle and knee injuries, Hodges said.

The coach also introduced his staff, which includes backfield coach Jim Bartlett, end coach Don Witherspoon, and line coach Wesley Duncan.

Other guests of the Kiwanians included Charles Blalack, Terry Helms, Bill Baldwin, Glenn Polk and Mike Mitchell.

Dr. Jim Tully, president of the Club, urged members to continue with their sale of Halloween candy.

In spite of the high standard of living in the United States, some people find life drab, discouraging, materialistic and devoid of job satisfaction. To overcome these feelings, we must create our own inner world where we can truly live during our leisure hours, Nelson Barksdale, recreation specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, advises.
