O. S. T. IS RECOGNIZED BY WAR DEPARTMENT

Is Designated as Highway Essential to Plans
Now Being Formulated for National Defense Along Border.

From The Express.
Washington, July 8.—After seven years of effort to create a trunk line highway from St. Augustine, Florida, to San Diego, California, with connections to all important border points, National recognition of its importance was achieved when the War Department issued a statement that this highway is of first importance, and essential to plans being formulated by the department for the National defense.

This highway, known as the Old Spanish Trail, embraces all the border defenses from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The War Department urges prompt completion of the highway.

The highway links Jacksonville, Pensacola, Mobile, New Orleans, Lake Charles, Beaumont, Houston, San Antonio, Fort Stockton, El Paso, Douglas, Tucson, Yuma and San Diego. It must build through the sparsely settled range country of Texas. It has the greatest array of serious constructional problems of any National highway in the United States. It was conceived in Mobile in 1915, but so formidable have been the problems that for years building activities would only crop out in widely scattered sections and a unity of interest was lacking because of barriers that prevented inter-communication.

In 1919 San Antonio was asked to assume leadership in efforts to weld the project into a national and unbroken highway. Under the direction of Haral B. Ayres, of San Antonio, managing director, this work has at last reached a national status. Mr. Ayres has been in Washington for six weeks. Senators, congressmen, National organizations, government departments, cabinet officers and others have co-operated with him to effect National and State co-ordination for the project. Prior to reaching Washington, Mr. Ayres spent six months in the eastern territory after three years in the West, paving the way for this work at the National capital.

The Old Spanish Trail embraces 4,000 mile of trunk lines, for it not only reaches across the continent, but it includes the trail to the border points both for military and for tourist purposes. All this mileage Mr. Ayres said, today, is now rated as of primary importance on the maps being prepared for the Federal highway system.

The War Department statement is really a culmination of a general and unanimous agreement among National leaders of the necessity for invoking all forces to promptly carry on construction of the highway.

Representative Wurzbach has been assisting Mr. Ayres in the plans, and it is particularly urgent that the section running through the 14th Congressional district be given early consideration.

Visitor to Junction Pays
Our People Compliment.

Junction, July 12, 1922.—Editor Junction Eagle:—We had the kind privilege of being the members of an outing picnic party Tuesday evening that turned out to be the most enjoyable spent of any entertainment that I have attended since my childhood. We have had ample reasons to make us deeply love the good people of this town and community, and I must you that this happy party only added to our strong love and good wishes for your noble people.

After a few hours pleasantly spent hunting, fishing and wading, an ideal picnic lunch was served. Mr. Will Keene furnished an abundance of boiled roasting ears and fried chicken; Joe Ramsey and family iced tea and cake for the crowd and the balance of the party supplied all in the way of sweets, salads and pickles that it takes to complete such a splendid lunch. Members of the party were: Brother McIntire and family, Will Keene and family, Mr. Joe Ramsey and family, Mrs. Sutton and Mrs. M. E. Highsmith and family, including Mrs. Annie Highsmith and children, Mrs. Oxtol and J. T. Highsmith and family of Wichita Falls, Texas. A Member of the Party.

Marconi Arrives Without Message From Mars.
Sr. Guglielmo Marconi, Italian radio wizard arrived in New York recently, stated that his efforts to communicate with Mars were unsuccessful so far, but had great hopes. His yacht which is virtually a floating laboratory, carrying a wireless equipment of the most elaborate modern sort. On it Sr. Marconi has in the past done much research work, picking up signals of 150,000 meter wave length.

One of the main reasons that animals which act for themovies are always well behaved is because their trainers play with them as though they were babies. Here is A. C. CELEBRATION PASSED WITHOUT MISHAP

Considering the large Crowd, Results Were most Gratifying to Home People and Brought
Many Compliments From Visitors

Junction's great July Celebration that ended Wednesday of last week, was not only a big success in numbers, and was under the circumstances, satisfactory from a financial standpoint, and from the enjoyment of the visitors, but there was another feature that will make the occasion one long to be remembered by all who took part or attended, and this was the excellent order that was evident throughout.

Ordinarily at a celebration where such a large number of people come together, there are several accidents more or less serious, a few "bullies" who delight in showing off and disturbing the peace, and a few that think the celebration would not be complete if they didn't get drunk.

So far as we have been able to learn, there was not a single accident in which a person was hurt or a vehicle damaged. Traffic was directed and never became so congested, but that a person could drive through the grounds or along the road at all times without interference. Only two of these arrests were made, and with one exception, these were of out of town people. There was no disorder on the grounds at any time and both hotels report every one quiet and orderly around them. Sergeant J. B. Wheatley and M. W. Molesworth, both of the Headquarters Company of the State Rangers, were here during the three days, and worked in co-operation with the Sheriff's Department here to keep watch for any emergency that might require their services. When they left, Sergeant Wheatley stated that he had been attending gatherings like this in all parts of the State and that nowhere had he found such good order observed as was seen here. Visitors from other places expressed the same opinion and made the same complimentary comments.

This conduct is of course very gratifying to the people of the town, to the Sheriff and the deputies who assisted him during the time and most of all, to the committees having the celebration under hand. It had a wholesome effect on everybody and all who were here will look forward to the time when Junction will have another celebration such as this.

SPECIAL SESSION OF GRAND JURY IS CALLED

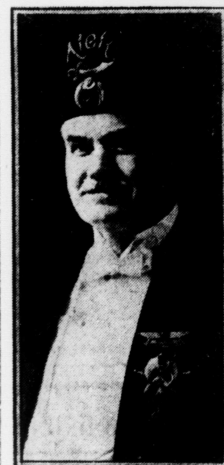

Judge McLean Convenes Special Grand Jury of Kimble County to Investigate Condition
Growing Out of Recent Tragedy

Junction, Texas, July 10, 1922.—Judge J. H. McLean and District Attorney George Christian arrived in Junction Sunday afternoon after closing a term of court in Burnett county at which several burglary and boot-legging cases were tried and six convictions secured, thus increasing the penitentiary population by six from that county.

Monday morning the Court appointed H. F. Grobe, W. A. Quisenberry and J. F. Ragsdale, jury commissioners, to select sixteen men from whom twelve would be selected as members of a special Grand Jury to convene Tuesday morning at nine o'clock. This special Grand Jury will investigate conditions growing out of the recent tragedy at Telegraph in which O. L. Freeman was killed. Troy Fleming was arrested last Saturday and placed under $3,000 bond to await the action of the Grand Jury.

The sixteen men from whose number the special grand jury will be selected, are: B. B. Reese, Clay Holland, G. R. Ragsdale, E. H. Kothmann, E. J. Cokert, H. W. Bierschwald, Roy Williams, W. C. Jones, L. A. Warren, E. E. Bolt, Ben Neal, Stanton Bundy, G. T. May, Allen Gibson, A. F. Hodges and Frank Rembold. District Attorney Christian and County Attorney Fred Knetsch will render the necessary legal assistance to the jury when it convenes.

Junction, Texas, July 10, 1922.—The sixteen men summoned as Grand Jurymen for the special July session were present Tuesday morning, except G. T. May, whose place was taken by A. W. Loeffler. The Court imposed a fine against Mr. May for being absent, but the fine was remitted when Mr. May offered a satisfactory excuse to the Court. The following 12 men were selected by the court as Grand Jurymen: E. B. Reese, Hal Holland, E. H. Kothmann, G. R. Ragland, E. J. Cowsert, H. W. Bierschwald, A. W. Loeffler, Alfred Hodges, S. S. Bundy, Ben Neal, W. C. Jones and Roy Williams. The jury was sworn in at 9:30 a. m. H. W. Bierschwald was appointed foreman and the charge delivered by the Court, and retired to the Grand Jury room about 10 o'clock to begin their work.

Mrs. Mudge and Daughter
Honor Miss Molesworth.

An attractive afternoon party was given Miss Charlotte by Mrs. A. L. Mudge and daughter, Miss Dorothy, at their ranch home. The parlor, dining room and long screened porch, were all thrown open for the comfort of the guests.

Five tables of players enjoyed the popular game of "500." The pretty score cards carried out the butterfly scheme and pale blue color, while this same idea was also observed in the refreshments, which was served in two courses. The plate holding a delicious chicken salad, topped with mayonnaise and small red beads shaped in hearts, spades, clubs and diamonds, together with olives, sandwiches, wafers, potato chips and cake with iced tea. Small nut cups with large butterflies were filled with salted nuts as favors.

Miss Molesworth, the honoree was presented with a pale blue pottery vase and Miss Cecil Martin was honored with high score prize which was a hand made dressing table cover, and the same butterfly idea was used in this as well as the butterfly linen handkerchiefs that were awarded high score guests at each table.

Those present for the happy occasion were: Mesdames H. W. Ricek, S. S. Bundy, Nannie Summers, W. H. Baker, U. D. Kendrick, J. C. Beddingfield, Carl M. Wolf, Henry Denman, Briant of San Antonio, L. L. Skaggs, Misses Ruth Baker, Cecil and Tottie Martin, Mary and Flora Mae Spiller, Bill Wright, Gladys VanCliff, Ida Shiner, Molesworth the honoree, and the hostesses.

Williams-Taylor.

Dr. S. N. Williams and Miss Alexa Taylor were united in marriage in San Antonio, June 28, 1922.

The groom is a prominent dentist of Del Rio, and is to be congratulated for having won this accomplished young bride.

The bride is the daughter of Sheriff and Mrs. W. W. Taylor of Junction, and is one of Kimble County's most accomplished young women. She was born and raised to womanhood in Junction, and for the past three years has resided with her Grandmother, Mrs. W. B. Davis, at Del Rio, and during that time has held a position with the Del Rio National Bank.

Miss Taylor has a host of personal friends here who join in wishing for her a happy married life.

Dr. and Mrs. Williams spent several days in Junction last week visiting friends and relatives, guests at the home of Mrs. Williams' parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Taylor.

Dr. and Mrs. Williams will make their home in Del Rio.

Cedar Hill Community to Have Two Days Picnic.

The citizens of the Cedar Hill community met Monday of this week to select a supervising committee to arrange for a big two days picnic on the North Llano, at the same place where their celebrations have been held heretofore.

Tom Wilson, S. L. Shroyer and Chas. Bishop, were chosen as a committee that will have charge. It is planned to have a general get-together affair on the 19th, and a big free barbecue on the 20th.

The people up that way are known for their ability to put on a sure enough picnic and barbecue, and everybody for miles around will be there.

GOD SEND US MEN!

God send us men whose aim 'twill be
Not to defend some ancient creed,
But to live out the laws of Right
In every thought and word and deed.

God send us men alert and quick
His lofty precepts to translate
Until the laws of Right become
The laws and habits of the State.

God send us men of steadfast will,
Patient, courageous, strong and true;
With visions clear and minds equipped,
His will to learn, His word to do.

God send us men with hearts ablaze,
All truth to love, all wrong to hate;
These are the patriots nations need,
These are the thebualds of the State.

H. G. PERRY of JUNCTION FOR REPRESENTATIVE

A Few Letters of Recommendation Selected From Many that Have Been Received.

Below are presented a few letters selected for consideration of the voters of this district, who are interested in electing a representative from this 36th District. These letters from farmers, bankers, heads of Chambers of Commerce, members of the Legislature, and former army associates, are presented merely to show the standing of H. G. Perry with persons in all kinds of business and in all sections of the State.

If anyone cares to investigate further, they are respectfully referred to such men as Judge Wm. Pierson, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court; Lon A. Smith, Comptroller; George B. Terrell, Commissioner of Agriculture; or any State official at Austin, or member of the House or Senate.

The standing a man has with such men as the above has a direct bearing on the work he is able to accomplish at Austin.

Next week a statement of different public questions will be made and numerous references to the House Journal will be made in order to show how votes were cast during the 37th Legislature.

Vega, Texas, June 15, 1922.
To Whom it May Concern:

This is to certify that I am well and personally acquainted with Captain H. G. Perry, having been closely associated with him while in the army service.

Captain Perry is a man of ability and character. He is a man of energy, ambition and resource.

Endowed by nature with a faculty for understanding men and things, he seeks ever to cultivate and enlarge that faculty, and is content only with the reward that comes through individual effort. With clear vision and judicious understanding he strives to follow that course of procedure that reflects the greatest good to the greatest number, and having the courage of his convictions, leaves his impress upon those with whom he comes in contact.

In my association with Captain Perry, I found him to be a man with high moral principles, of sterling character, and of true worth. Frank and open in his dealings, he preaches the gospel of clean living and practices what he preaches. With unquestioned integrity, he faces the issues of the day as they present themselves, and with fixed purpose, strives in behalf of equality and justice to all. As an army officer he commanded the highest respect of those with whom he was associated and worked, and always obedient and commanding obedience, he rightly merited the rank he held in his service for our government.

Captain Perry knows his abilities and his limitations, and I am frank to say that he is well fitted and qualified for any place for which he would ask.

Respectfully,

C. L. Morris,
Former Lieutenant Field Artillery, U. S. A.

Lingleville, Texas, June 16, 1922

To Whom it May Concern:

The undersigned has known H. G. Perry from childhood, and have watched his progress with no little interest, knowing that he was deserving of all confidences that have been placed in him by his friends from time to time.

He grew up on a farm and has won his way upward by his own efforts and ability. He made a splendid record as a teacher in the public schools and later in the army. He served on the County Board of Examiners in this county and later served this county with credit in the State Legislature, having been elected here by a good majority over two opponents, both of whom were former members of the Legislature. He is a member of the Bunyan Baptist church of which I am Pastor.

I commend him most highly to those who do not know him and assure them that whatever confidence placed in him will be greatly appreciated by his many friends here, and no mistake will be made in entrusting important public affairs in his hands.

Yours very truly,

J. A. Bays.

Dublin, Texas, July 6, 1922.
Mr. H. G. Perry,
Junction, Texas.
Dear Grady:

It is with much pleasure to learn of your adventure for Representative of your district. The anxiety for your success shown by the people here prompts me to extend to you the good wishes gathered up.

It is surprising how well posted in governmental affairs our farmers are in this part of the country, and I do not believe I have heard a complaint of any

Spur, Texas, July 5, 1922.
M. Wilkinson, Esq.,
Junction, Texas.

Dear Sir:

In response to yours of the 26th ult. relative to Mr. H. G. Perry, I am glad to advise you of the very favorable impression which he created during his residence in Spur. He was very attentive to his business interests, and generally exceedingly well liked. It would be a matter of gratification to his many friends here to learn of his success in election to the office which he seeks.

Yours truly,

Clifford B. Jones,
Manager Spur Farm Lands and
Ex-President West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

To Whom it May Concern:

I have known H. Grady Perry from the time he arrived in this world to the present, and in all his life I have never known any thing that would be reproachful in any manner. He has always been frugal, industrious, and painstaking. Every day of his life has been for the upbuilding of himself, and those associated with him. As an old neighbor and friend, I am glad to see him reach the high political position that he has attained.

My wishes for him is nothing but success, which I believe he deserves.

M. O. Cumbie,
President Erath County Farm Bureau Federation.

Church of Christ Notes.

Last Lord's Day quite a number of the brethren and sisters motored down to London to be with the church there in the closing day of their good meeting. The services were hugely enjoyed in the hearing of two excellent discourses by Brother Clem Hoover, and in the partaking of a splendid dinner prepared by the many friends who were present. Those people surely know how to make the people feel at home who visit them. The meeting was to close after the night service.

Several had obeyed the gospel and others reclaimed.

On next Lord's Day we will be with the people of South Llano at the 12-mile crossing in an all-day service under the shade of the trees, in primitive style, if nothing prevents. Everybody come with well filled baskets, and let's enjoy this religious gathering both spiritually and socially. After these two halts in our home work, we will resume our usual work, and let's do so with renewed zeal.

STATE CAPITAL NEWS

Important News Items From the Capitol are Reported Here Every Week.

From The Austin Statesman:

Department Heads Slow in Submitting Budget Estimates

Several of the heads of the State Departments and elementary institutions have not as yet filed their budgets of appropriations for the next two fiscal years with the state board of control, although these reports should have been filed by July 1. Another request has been made by the board to these delinquents urging them to file their budgets in order that the board may begin the preparation of its budget of appropriations to be submitted to members of the Thirty-eighth Legislature before the meeting of the Legislature next January.

The board expects to begin holding hearings during the latter part of this month, at which the heads of the departments and institutions will be given an opportunity to explain their needs as outlined in their budgets. The building program of the elementary and educational institutions for the next two fiscal years is expected to be much larger than two years ago.

Gen. Barton in Houston To Consult Gen. Huie.

Adjutant General Thomas D. Barton has gone to Houston, where he will confer with General John A. Huie, commander of the Texas National Guard on matters pertaining to the coming encampment of the guard at Camp Mabry which commences on July 28.

General Barton said before leaving that plans for the encampment were rapidly being completed and by the time the maneuvers begin a large attendance will be assured. It is confidently expected there will be about 5,000 officers and men in attendance at this school of instruction.

Boyd to Advocate State Game Refuges and Hunting Ground

The establishment of game refuges and public hunting grounds in Texas will be urged at the next session of the Legislature by W. W. Boyd, state game, fish and oyster commissioner, and unless action is taken, he warns the sportsmen of the state that it will be only the rich who will be able to enjoy this sport.

"The system of combined game refuges and public hunting grounds is undoubtedly the ideal and correct way of perpetuating field sports and our game supply," said the Commissioner. "Many of the leading conservationists are beginning to see the light and, in time to come, all the states must adopt this plan or our game is doomed to extinction."

"To provide funds for enforcement of our game laws and for propagation and distribution of game, we should have a law requiring every hunter to procure a license, and the entire proceeds from such source to be available for such purposes. Our present law requiring only the men who hunt outside of the county of his residence, to first procure a license, is class legislation, pure and simple, and should be changed at the next session of the Legislature. A man's place of residence should not enter into the proposition in any way, as the game belongs not to the people who happen to reside in the county where he hunts, but to all of us alike. The passage of a universal hunting license law with a fee that will net the department $1 for each hunter, will give us $250,000 per year income. One-half of the fund should be expended in the enforcement of our laws and the other half for acquiring rough non-tillable lands for hunting grounds and game refuges and for game with which to stock the refuges.

"The wealthy sportsmen will be able to secure his sport just as long as there is any game in existence," Commissioner Boyd continued, "but unless early action is taken the sportsmen of moderate means will have no place to hunt. We do not care to exert ourselves to protect and save our remaining supply of game for the favored few. The game is the property of all the people, and so far as possible, all the people should have their share of the surplus above that needed for maintaining the supply."

Texas sportsmen are urged by Commissioner Boyd to give their earnest co-operation in bringing about the desired results, as without united effort little can be accomplished.

Advocates of New Constitution Plan to Reopen Fight.

Despite the fact that the proposition of holding a constitutional convention was defeated by a decisive vote at the election held in May, 1919, another effort is to be made to present the question to the people by the Thirty-eighth Legislature when it convenes next January. This is clearly indicated by the views expressed by several candidates for the Legislature, who are virtually assured of election, and who have been here during the past two weeks. The concurrent resolution adopted by the Thirty-sixth Legislature submitting the question to the people was defeated at the election held on May 24, 1919, by a vote of 23,549 to 71,376. This was at a time, however, when the prohibition issue had not been definitely settled over the country and the prohibitionists of Texas feared to have a new organic law for Texas written at that time.

Political observers at the present time do not entertain the view that this fear would be tenable in 1923 as the entire nation is now dry. Those who are supporting the question of a constitutional convention believe a new constitution is needed to successfully deal with the educational problem and also with the highway question. It is pointed out that the schools should be taken out of politics by providing a special tax for their support and maintenance, and it is only through a new constitution that this end may be attained and the same may be said of the construction and maintenance of a first-class highway system of Texas.

Adherents of a constitutional convention also believe that it is only through a convention that it will be possible to increase the salaries of various state officials. The people of Texas have on more than one occasion rejected proposed constitutional amendments to increase the salaries of the governor, the attorney general, the state comptroller, state treasurer and commissioner of agriculture. Although the people generally believe that the salary of the Governor of Texas should be $8,000 to $10,000 a year instead of $4,000, the electors declined to increase it by their vote. It was also sought to make the salaries of the comptroller and state treasurer $5,000 a year instead of $2,500, but the proposition went down in defeat, so it is pointed out that it is only by writing a new constitution that these ends may be accomplished.

Governor will Pitch First in Maskat-Ben Hur Game.

At 3:30 o'clock this afternoon Governor Pat M. Neff will pitch the first ball over the plate, if he can locate it as the opening feature of the baseball game between Muskett Temple of Wichita Falls and Ben Hur Temple of Austin. John H. Tobin, formerly of the ball weevils in the Cotton Belt league, will catch the ball if he can get his mitt in the way of it. Manager Horace Barnhart announces. Incidentally it is the Ben Hur crew's hope to get revenge upon Muskett for a 5 to 4 defeat on Monday evening.

After the baseball game, the Muskett players are to be taken on an automobile ride over the Bull Creek scenic loop. They will leave at 10:30 p. m. via the L. & G. N. for Wichita Falls.

The State Must Pay Taxes on Convict Farms

In an opinion to the Board of Prison Commissioners the Attorney General's department answered inquiries relative to the assessment and payment of taxes on property belonging to the prison system. The department held that only such lands as have heretofore been or may hereafter be acquired by the State for the purpose of establishing State farms and employing convict labor on State account, and no other property belonging to the prison system, are subject to taxation.

It is also held that taxes on these lands can be assessed and collected for county purposes only and should be assessed and collected in the manner required by law for collection of taxes on privately owned lands. Such county taxes so assessed against each separate farm, respectively, must be paid annually out of revenue derived from that particular farm and charged to the expense account of operating such farm and not from revenue derived from any other farm or from the operation of the prison system generally. School maintenance taxes assessed such lands are illegal and void, it is held.

GATES TIRES

The Tire with the Wider and Thicker Tread

ABOUT TIRE PRICES—

A big increase in sales and production—47 per cent in June alone—has made lower prices possible.

You can now put on a Gates Super-Tread Cord Tire, at very nearly the price you have been paying for an ordinary fabric tire.

To the wider and thicker tread is due the larger share of tire business we are receiving every month—and you get the advantage in price as well as in extra mileage.

Baptist Church Notes

In 1901 Rev. W. H. Price resigned a successful pastorate at this place and entered upon work with the Calvary church of San Antonio, where he remained several years. Brother Price is now preaching for us in a meeting at Gentry. His friends of former years, as well as many new acquaintances are delighted with his preaching.

Some forty women gathered at the church Monday afternoon to meet Mrs. F. E. Garrett, of Kerrville, president of the Women's Auxiliary of the Association and Mrs. Anglin, corresponding secretary. Mrs. Garrett gave an earnest address that was instructive and encouraging. Mrs. Anglin also spoke. Refreshments were served at the close of the service.

As many have inquired about the speakers at the Alto Frio Encampment, it may be stated that besides many other speakers and teacher who will be present, Dr. Geo. W. Truett of Dallas, will speak the night of Tuesday, August 1, and twice a day after that through Sunday, August 6; Dr. Hamlett of Austin, will speak twice on each of the remaining five days.

There will be no preaching at the church in Junction next Sunday, but a large attendance at Sunday School is urged. There will then be time to drive out to Gentry. Bring your envelopes.

S. F. Marsh.

Mr. and Mrs. Conrad T. Hokekamp spent the day in Rock Springs Sunday. They went over to take Mrs. Butland to meet Mr. Butland. They were accompanied over by Miss Dorothy Hodges and Vann Martin.

WHO WANTS IT?
8,200 Acres

All under wolf-proof fence, extra good ranch house, barn and pens. This is rolling hill country, no rough nor waste land on it. All good grass land, covered with live oak brush, lying on the head draws of the South Llano river, watered by wells, concrete tanks. Price, $7.00 per acre; a good cash payment, balance at 3 and 6 per cent interest, long time; Take a look, it's a dandy.

A Mayor Sees Advantages
Of Advertising His Activities.

Last winter when he delivered his annual message, Mayor Edwin W. Fiske of Mount Vernon, N. Y., promised to publish a municipal bulletin from time to time, chronicling the work of his administration. The first bulletin appeared March 1, and second was published June 29. It was in the form of a newspaper advertisement, occupying an entire page. A line at the bottom stated "This is published as an advertisement by Mayor Fiske without expense to the city."

As would be expected, the mayor's statement dealt principally with municipal finances. There is, for instance, a table showing a "comparative statement of budgets" for 1921 and 1922, which indicates a decrease this year of more than $50,000. "But this is not all the story," says the mayor, in bold-face type appearing in a box: "The present administration will live within its appropriations. No department will be permitted to spend, or to incur obligations, in excess of the amount of the appropriations made for it."

Mayor Fiske is apparently resolved to keep his constituents acquainted with the undertakings of his administration and believes that the time to do it is while these activities are taking place, rather than to revive them in the heat of the next political campaign.—Printer's Ink.

Heinz Fruit and Vegetables

ARE GROWN IN THE GARDEN
SPOTS OF THE WORLD

XXX

Where the sun and soil combine to produce the best, choice fruits and vegetables are grown under Heinz care and supervision for use in the Heinz spotless kitchens. Heinz kitchens, too, are located at many of these places, where quick handling is combined with skillful preparation to preserve the delicious freshness so readily detected in Heinz 57 Varieties.

But Heinz care and supervision begin still further back than this. Even the seeds that grow many of these products are raised on Heinz seed farms—and tender young plants are grown in Heinz own hot-houses.

It is literally true that Heinz foods are "controlled from soil to consumer"—from the seed to your dining room table.

This is just another care actuated by our feeling of responsibility to serve you with only the best in foods.

The County Board, composed of Judge Lee Wallace and Commissioners Reel, Wiedenfeld, Gibbons and Peril, met Wednesday, and in conference with special Road Commissioner Remschel, Schreiner and Duderstadt agreed upon a plan by which $30,000 worth of county warrants were sold to J. E. Jarratt & Company of San Antonio. Par and accrued interest was received, less fiscal agent's fee. Warrants bear 6 per cent interest.

This additional sum of money to be realized from the sale of county warrants will be used to complete the road work that had been proposed and promised in the general plan of road building.

These warrants are to be issued against the road and bridge fund and will not cost the taxpayers one cent in the way of increased taxation, because the interest on the Scriber Fund will take care of the maintenance of the roads and the regular road and bridge fund will pay the warrants as they mature.

These warrants are to expire as follows: First three years, there will be paid off $2,000.00 each year; for four years following, $3,000.00; for next three years, $4,000.00 each year. The warrants are to be issued in denominations of $1,000.00.

The County Board and Special Road Commissioners are to be congratulated upon formulating and carrying out this plan to complete the road work that has been proposed and promised while the crews of road workers machinery and material are concentrated.—Kerrville Mountain Sun.

Brady School District Votes For Tax and Building Bonds

Brady citizens stepped out Monday and showed their belief in progress and better educational facilities by carrying a bond issue of $40,000 for the erection of a new school building and the voting of a tax not to exceed $1 on the $100 valuation for taking care of the bond issue and maintenance of the schools. While nothing like the full strength of the district was recorded in the vote, it is believed that the vote registered is the true sentiment of the big majority of voters residing in the Brady independent school district. Out of 366 votes cast, 202 were for both propositions, there being a little variance in the vote against the bonds and the maintenance tax.

Following is the figures on both propositions:

For maintenance tax.	302
Against maintenance tax.	56
For the bonds.	302
Against the bonds.	53

Antoni Goat Meat.

The San Angelo Standard says the new name for goat meat, spelled "Chevon," should be pronounced "shavon" with the accent on the "a" and the "n" almost silent. This would make it sound almost like "shaving."

The selection of the name has brought fame to the lady who selected it and has added to the fame of Mr. B. M. Hallbert, who originated the idea of giving goat meat a name.

And now the goat men are planning to make goat meat popular with meat eaters. To do this is going to be several times harder than to find a name for goat meat.

We had just as well face the fact that people are not going to eat chevon cooked as meat usually is cooked—it will never be popular stewed or fried. It will be popular barbecued when people become accustomed to eating barbecued chevon. In fact, we believe chevon to be a little better barbecued than any meat we know of. Most meat markets are equipped for barbecuing meat, and the thing to do, we think, is to try to induce them to handle barbecued chevon to a larger extent. Once it is started the meat eaters will be calling for chevon regularly.—Edwards County Leader.

Menard County Received Rain.

A rain Monday morning of an inch visited Menard county. It came none too soon for the dry land corn which was beginning to suffer in places. This rain will be a great benefit and will be sufficient to mature the corn crops. Cotton is said to be growing and fruiting and was not needing rain. Maize and other forage crops were beginning to suffer but with the present season we are reasonably assured of a good summer crop.—Menard Messenger.

Martial Law Usurpation, Jurist Tells Bar Association

Fort Worth, July 4.—The rule of martial law placed upon the citizens of Galveston at the time of the longshoremen's strike and the citizens of Mexico and Freestone county during the recent alleged lawlessness there was a "distinct usurpation of power by the military forces of the state," President Richard Mays of Corsicana told delegates to the convention of the Texas Bar Association here today.

Mays quoted at length from English and American authorities on constitutional rights and privileges, attempting to show that, first, the exercise of Martial rule is justified only in case of rebellion or insurrection against constituted authority, and second, that when martial rule invoked the military forces are "to aid the civil authorities to suppress or prevent such violations and in executing the law."

know," he said, slowly: "I don't know if they ought to do that exactly."

"Why oughtn't they?" Fred demanded, sharply.

"Well, it looks to me as if she was only fighting for her principles. She believes in 'em. The more it costs a person to stick to their principles, why, the more I believe the person must have something pretty fine about 'em likely."

"Yes," said the hot-headed Fred. "That's not in ordinary times, but not when a person's principles are liable to betray their country? I won't stand that kind of principles. I tell you, and we oughtn't to, Dora Youcum's finding that out, all right. She had the biggest position of any girl in this place, or my boy either, up to the last few weeks, and there wasn't any student or hardly even a member of the faculty that had the influence or was more admired and looked up to. She had the whole show! But now, since she's just the same as called any student a murderer if he enlisted to fight for his country and flag—well, now she hasn't got anything at all, and if she keeps on she'll have even less!"

He paused in his walking to and fro, and came to a halt behind his friend's chair, looking down compassionately upon the back of Ramsey's motionless head. His tone changed. "I guess it isn't just the ticket—me to be talking this way to you, is it?" he said, with a trace of huskiness.

"Oh—it's all right," Ramsey murmured, not altering his position.

"I can't help blowing up," Fred went on. "I want to see things. I know I'm not very considerate to blow up about her to you this way. I've been playing horse with you about her ever since freshman year, but—well, you must have understood, Ram, I never meant anything that would really bother you much, and I thought, well, I really thought it was a good thing, you—your—well, I mean about her, you know, I'm on, all right. I know it's pretty serious with you," he paused.

"It's—kind of tough luck," his friend contrived to say; and he began to pace the floor again.

"Oh—well—" he said. "See here, ole stick-in-the-mud," Fred broke out abruptly. "After her saying what she did—Well, it's none of my business, but—but—"

"Well, what?" Ramsey murmured. "I don't care what you say, if you want to say anything."

"Well, I got to say it," Fred half growled and half blurted. "After she said that—and she meant it—why, if I were in your place I'd be darned if I'd be seen out walking with her again."

"I'm not going to be," Ramsey said, quietly.

"By George!" and now Fred halted in front of him, both being huskily solemn. "I think I understand a little of what that means to you, old Ramsey; I think I do. I think I know something of what it costs you to make that resolution for your country's sake." Impulsively he extended his hand. "It's a pretty big thing for you to do. Will you shake hands?"

But Ramsey shook his head. "I didn't do it. I wouldn't ever have done anything just on account of her talk, in that way. She shut the door on me—it was a good while ago."

"She did? What for?"

"Well, I'm not much of a talker, you know, Fred," said Ramsey, staring at the pen he played with. "I'm not much of anything, for that matter, probably, but I—well—I—"

"You what?"

"Well, I had to tell her I didn't feel about things the way she did. She'd thought I had, all along, I guess. Anyway, it made her hate me or something, I guess; and she called it all off. I expect there wasn't much to call off, so far as she was concerned, anyhow. He laughed feebly. "She told me I better go and enlist."

"Pleasant of her!" Fred muttered. "Especially as we know what she thinks enlisting means?" He raised his voice cheerfully. "Well, that's settled; and, thank God, old Mr. Bernstorff's on his way to his sweet little vine-clad cottage home! They're getting guns on the ships, and the big show's liable to commence any day. We can hold up our heads now, and we're going to see some great things old Ramsey hot. It's hard on the home folks—Gosh! I don't like to think of that! And I guess it's going to be hard on a lot of boys that haven't understood what it's all about, and hard on some that their family affairs, and so on, have got 'em tied up so it's hard to go—and of course there's plenty that just can't, and some that aren't husky enough—but the rest of us are going to have the big time in our lives. We got an awful lot to learn; it scares me to think of what I don't know about being any sort of a rear-rank private. Why, it's a regular profession, like practicing law, or selling for a drug house on the road."

"Golly! Do you remember how we talked about that, 'way back in freshman year, what we were going to do when we got out of college? You were going to be practicing law, for instance, and I—well, for instance, remember Colburn; he was going to be a doctor, and he did go to some medical school for one year. Now he's in the Red Cross, somewhere in Persia, Golly!"

He paused, then chattered briskly on. "Well, there's one good old boy was with our class for a while, back in freshman year; I bet we won't see him in any good old army! Old rough-neck Linski that you put the knob on his nose for. Tommie Hopper says he saw him last summer in Chicago soap-boiler, yellin' his head off 'cussin' every government under the sun, but mostly ours and the allies, you bet, and going to run the earth by revolution and representatives of unskilled labor luminaries, nobody that can read or write allowed to vote, except Linski. Tommie Hopper says he knows all about Linski; he never did a day's work in his life—too busy trying to get the workmen stirred up against the people that exploit 'em! Tommie says he had a big crowd to hear him, though, and took up quite a little money for a 'cause or something. Well, let him holler! I guess we can attend to him when we get back from over yonder. By George, old Ram, I'm gettin' kind of sleepy in the gills!" He administered a resounding slap to his comrade's shoulder. "It certainly looks as if our big days were walking toward us!"

He was right. The portentous days came on apace, and each one brought a new and greater portent. The faces of men lost a driven look besetting them in the days of badgered waiting, and instead of that heavy apprehension, the look men's faces must have worn in 1776 and 1812, and the history of the old days grew clearer in the new. The President went to the congress, and the true indictment he made there reached scolding Potsdam with an unspoken prophecy somewhat chilling even to the Potsdam guesses—and then through an April night went almost quietly the steady word: we were at war with Germany.

The bugles sounded across the continent; drums and fife played up and down the city streets and in town and village squares and through the country-tries. Faintly in all ears there was a multitudinous noise like distant, hoarse cheering . . . and a sound like that was what Dora Youcum heard, one night, as she sat lonely in her room. The bugles and fife and drums had been heard about the streets of the college town, that day, and she thought she must die of them, they hurt her so, and now to be haunted by this imaginary cheering—

She started. Was it imaginary?

She went downstairs and stood upon the steps of the dormitory in the open air. No; the cheering was real and loud. It came from the direction of the railway station, and the night air surged and beat with it.

Below her stood the aged janitor of the building, listening. "What's the cheering for?" she asked, remembering that the janitor was one of her acquaintances who had not yet stopped "speaking" to her. "What's the matter?"

"It's a good matter," the old man answered. "I guess there must be a big crowd of 'em down there. One of our students enlisted today, and they're givin' him a send-off. Listen to 'em, how they're cheering. He's the first one to go."

She went back to her room, shivering, and spent the next day in bed with an aching head. She rose in the evening, however—a handbill had been slid under her door at five o'clock, calling a "mass meeting" of the university at eight, and she felt it her duty to go; but when she got to the great hall she found a seat in the dimmest corner, farthest from the rostrum.

The president of the university addressed the tumultuous many hundreds before him, for tumultuous they were until he quieted them. He talked to them soberly of patriotism, and called upon them for "deliberation and a little patience." There was danger of a stampede he said, and he and the rest of the faculty were in a measure responsible to their fathers and mothers for them.

"You must keep your heads," he said. "God knows, I do not seek to judge your duty in this gravest moment of your lives, nor assume to tell you what you must or must not do. But by hurrying into service now, without careful thought or consideration, you may impair the extent of your possible usefulness to the very cause you are so anxious to serve. Hundreds of you are taking technical courses which should be completed—at least to the end of the term in June. Instructors from the United States army are already on the way here, and military training will be begun at once for all who are physically eligible and of acceptable age. A special course will be given in preparation for flying, and those who wish to become aviators may enroll themselves for the course at once."

"I speak to you in a crisis of the university's life, as well as that of the nation, and the warning I utter has been made necessary by what took place yesterday and today. Yesterday morning, a student in the junior class enlisted as a private in the United States regular army. I am not from me to deplore his course in so doing; he spoke to me about it, and in such a way that I felt I had no right to dissuade him. I told him that it would be preferable for college men to wait until they could go as officers, and, aside from the fact of a greater prestige, I urged that men of education could perhaps be more useful in that capacity. He replied that if he were useful enough as a private a commission might in time come his way, and, as I say, I did not feel at liberty to attempt dissuasion. He left to join a regiment to which he had been assigned, and many of you were at the station to bid him farewell."

"But enthusiasm may be too contagious; even a great and inspiring motive may work for harm, and the university may not become a desert. In the twenty-four hours since that young man went to join the army last night, one hundred and eleven of our young men students have left our walls; eighty-four of them went off together at three o'clock to catch an east-bound train at the junction, and enlist for the navy at Newport. We are, I say, in danger of a stampede."

He spoke on, but Dora was not listening; she had become obsessed by an idea which seemed to be carrying her to the border of tragedy. When the crowd poured forth from the building she went with it mechanically, and paused in the dark outside. She spoke to a girl whom she did not know.

"I beg your pardon—"

"Yes?"

"I wanted to ask: Do you know who was the student Doctor Crovis spoke of? I mean the one that was the first to enlist, and that they were cheering last night when he went away to be a private in the United States army. Did you happen to hear his name?"

"Yes, he was a junior."

"Who was it?"

"Ramsey Milholland."

CHAPTER XV.

Fred Mitchell, crossing the campus one morning, ten days later, saw Dora standing near the entrance of her dormitory, where he would pass her unless he altered his course; and as he drew nearer her and the details of her face grew into distinctness, he was indignant with himself for feeling less and less indignation toward her in proportion to the closeness of his approach. The time that came over him was mingled with an unruly admiration, causing him to wonder what unpatriotic stuff she could be made of. She was marked, but not whipped; she still held herself straight under all the hammering and cutting which to his knowledge she had been getting.

She stopped him. "For only a moment," she said, adding with a wan proudness: "That is, if you're not one of those who feel that I shouldn't be spoken to?"

"No," said Fred, stiffly. "I may share their point of view, perhaps, but I don't feel called upon to obtrude it on you in that manner."

"I see," she said, nodding. "I've wanted to speak with you about Ramsey."

"All right."

She bit her lip, then asked, abruptly: "What made him do it?"

"Enlist as a private with the regulars?"

"No. What made him enlist at all?"

"Only because he's that sort," Fred returned briskly. "He may be inexcusable to people who believe that his going out to fight for his country is the same thing as going out to commit a murder."

"She lifted her hand. 'Couldn't you—'"

"I beg your pardon," Fred said at once. "I'm sorry, but I don't know just how to explain him to you."

"Why?"

He laughed, apologetically. "Well, you see, as I understand it, you don't think it's possible for a person to have something within him that makes him care so much about his country that he—"

"Wait!" she cried. "Don't you think I'm willing to suffer a little rather than to see my country in the wrong? Don't you think I'm doing it?"

"Well, I don't want to be rude; but, of course, it seems to me that you're suffering because you think you know more about what's right and wrong than anybody else does."

"We wouldn't get anywhere, probably, by arguing it," Fred said. "You asked me."

"I asked you to tell me why he enlisted."

"The trouble is, I don't think I can tell that to anybody who needs an answer. He just went, of course. There isn't any question about it. I always thought he'd be the first to go."

"Oh, no! But I—"

"Yes, I always thought so."

"I think you were mistaken," she said, decidedly. "It was a special reason—to make him act so cruelly."

"Cruelly?" Fred cried.

"It was!"

"Cruel to whom?"

"Oh, to his mother—to his family. To have him go off that way, without a word—"

"Oh, no; he'd been home," Fred corrected her. "He went home the Saturday before he enlisted, and settled it with them. They're all broken up, of course; but when they saw he'd made up his mind, they quit opposing him, and I think they're proud of him about it, maybe, in spite of feeling anxious. You see, his father was an artilleryman in the war with Spain, and his

To the Voters of Kimble Co.

It has been my aim as a candidate for the office of District and County Clerk, to see every voter personally, and solicit his or her vote and influence; but there are a few that I have failed to see, and I take this method of reaching you to tell you that I will appreciate your vote and any consideration due me. And if elected to do my best to make an officer that will be an honor both to myself and to the County; and I say without hesitation, that I am qualified and capable of filling that office that I aspire to.

And if the good people of this county see fit to choose me as their elector in this race, I will do my very best to serve you in the interest of the county. I want to thank each of my opponents for the nice way they have conducted this race. From the good fellowship they have shown, a state of friendly feeling exists between us, and will continue to exist, no matter who is defeated.

In your hands I place my political aspiration, and calmly await without fear, your verdict.

Thanking you for anything you may do or say for me that would assist me in any way, I am,

Very truly yours,

Indigestion

Many persons, otherwise vigorous and healthy, are bothered occasionally with indigestion. The effects of a disordered stomach on the system are dangerous, and prompt treatment of indigestion is important. The only medicine I have needed has been something to aid digestion and clean the liver.

Writes Mr. Fred Ashby, a McKinney, Texas, farmer. "My medicine is for indigestion and stomach trouble of any kind. I have never found anything that touches the spot, like Black-Draught. I take it in broken doses after meals. For a long time I tried pills, which gripped and didn't give the good results. Black-Draught liver medicine is easy to take, easy to keep, inexpensive."

Thedford's

BLACK-DRAUGHT

Firestone

GUM-DIPPED CORDS

-and Their High Mileage Records

The high mileage records of Firestone Cords continue to emphasize the fact that Firestone methods are different and better. These records, steadily increasing in number and in mileage totals, justify the Firestone contention that there is one best way to build tires.

Among the primary sources of Firestone extra mileage is double gum-dipping—the saturation of the cord plies in a vat of liquid gum—thus coating each cord and virtually eliminating internal heat and friction.

Another is Firestone air bag curing, with its 200 pound pressure, which places every cord accurately and equalizes the tension.

By blending the rubbers of different plantations and types, and by tempering it before mixing, Firestone men add still more mileage.

Many cord tires are good—a few are better—Firestone users say one is best.

Those who have already experienced Firestone mileage, have stopped shopping and experimenting—they have made these cords standard equipment. Investigate your friends' success with Firestone Cords—and buy your next tire accordingly. Come in and get your share of extra mileage.

San Antonio to Have $1,000,000 Fair and Racing Association.

Articles of incorporation of the San Antonio International Fair and Racing Association of San Antonio, with a capital stock of $1,000,000 were filed late Friday in the secretary of state's department, after the chart had received the approval of the attorney general's department. The capital stock is divided into 100,000 shares of the value of $10 each, all subscribed and paid in.

A. J. Oliver, one of the incorporators and directors, who was here, in connection with the filing of the charter, owns $999,980 of the capital stock. The incorporators are: A. J. Oliver, W. H. Davidson, San Antonio, and W. F. Lidle, New York. Davidson owns $10 of the stock and Lidle owns $10. Mr. Oliver said the fair grounds are to be located on several tracts a few miles south of San Antonio. The acreage includes 11 acres of the Terrell Wells or San Jose property, on which is situated a large artesian well and a bathing beach; 700 acres surrounding the above described property, 225 acres of the San Antonio Speedway Association property, and 104 acres adjoining the speedway property. The total value of the property is placed at $1,200,000.

Thousands are Seeking Licenses for Teaching.

Over 5,000 would-be teachers are taking examinations for county and state teacher's certificates at the county seats of the various counties, according to information received by the state department of education. These examinations are being held before the county boards of examiners and where the applicant desires only a county certificate the papers are graded by the county board, but if the applicant is seeking a state certificate, then the papers are sent to the state board of examiners now holding forth in the department of education.

Despite the fact that there is no immediate prospects for increasing the salaries of teachers in the Texas schools, especially those in the rural communities, the number now taking the examination is considered way above the average. Those who are successful in these examinations will be eligible to teach at the fall term of the schools.

THE ONE-TON TRUCK.

The Ford One-Ton Truck first made its appeal to the farmer and the merchant because of the merits of Ford Cars. And it made its wonderful reputation and great sales record because it lived up to every claim made for it.

The reliable Ford Motor, the Special Ford Steel chassis the aluminum bronze worm-drive, all combine to produce a truck of unusual power, capacity and strength—a truck that lasts in service; a truck that solves the haulage problem at a very small operating and upkeep expense. Hence the demand for the Ford One-Ton Truck is constantly on the increase.

For the good of your business, whether it be farming, merchandising or manufacturing, you should come in and look over the Ford One-Ton Truck—NOW!

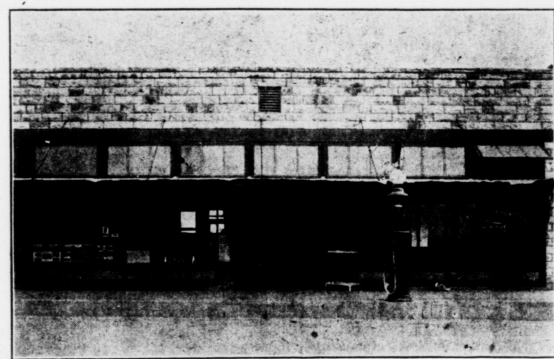

IMPORTANT!

We are prepared to furnish the Ford Truck equipped either with Standard or Special Gearing. The Standard Gearing gives the truck a maximum of power. The Special Gearing increases the speed of the truck from five to seven miles an hour, converting it into a Fast Delivery Car.

When in need of a new tire, no matter what size, remember the Goodyear. Our stock is complete and we can serve you promptly. Also remember the Goodyear Tubes.
